BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 81 Lookout street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6m* Jy21

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSSE will receive visitors for a few months at a white, where she will continue to give Life Readings for 2-cent stamps, and answer six questions for 25 cents and stamp. Disease a specialty. Address West Oakland, Me.
Au18 4w*

The Writing Planchette.

SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. Those unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been attained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practice in writing mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes," which may be consulted on all questions, as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.

DIRECTIONS.—Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board; in a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let them try it together. If nothing happens the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.

The Planchette is furnished complete with box, pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.

PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 60 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

DR. RHODES' FAMILY MEDICINES.

Purely Vegetable
(ALL SUGAR-COATED)
Medical Confections.
A Universal Blessing.
SUITED TO OLD OR YOUNG!

A PERFECT Liver and Kidney Renovator and Blood Purifier. Cleanses the entire system from all Biliousness and Blood Poisons from Malaria, etc. And cures Headache, Backache, Side and Stomachache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pains in the Limbs, Lameness, Numbness, Constipation, Piles, Worms, Dyspepsia, Consumption, Nervousness, Weakness, Kidney and Bladder, and all other urinary ailments, etc. Also, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and in fact almost all the various ailments of humanity.

PRICES: Trial box, 25 cents—by mail, 30 cents; second size, 50 cents—by mail, 55 cents; 12 boxes second size, $5, 00; large boxes, $1, 00; 6 large boxes, $5, 00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GARLAND'S VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS.

The greatest known remedy for all Throat and Lung Complaints. For Catarrh, Asthma, etc., etc., it has no equal. It is warranted to cure Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, and Inflammation of the Lungs. It is free from all opiates and minerals, or any other injurious ingredient; and is therefore harmless in all cases; likewise palatable and beneficial in regulating and strengthening the system; and as a BLOOD PURIFIER IS TRULY UNRIVALLED. A box, taken according to directions, is warranted in all cases to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded by the proprietor, DR. M. H. GARLAND, 488 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

Price, per box (one-fourth pound), 25 cents, postage free. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"Glad Tidings of Immortality."

Finely executed lithographs bearing the above title have been received by us. The size is 22½x28½. The principal figure is a female, evidently designed to represent a materialized spirit, crowned with a wreath of flowers, and bearing a long band of them in her left hand, while in her right is a scroll inscribed with the words "Message of Love." Over her head are three stars. The drapery on each side appears to be the curtains of a cabinet, between which she stands in an exceedingly graceful position, suggestive of the line, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." From above a ray of light radiates over the entire form. Vignette likenesses of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Lillie and Mrs. Britten, and Messrs. Howell and Colville, are given, and excellent ones they are. The artist is Mr. Shobe, who, we are informed, has executed many beautiful drawings illustrative of the Spiritual Philosophy.

Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.

I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.

I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters (from the above data). Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions, in accordance with my understanding of the science, for a fee of $1; Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.

Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. July 19.

DIAGNOSIS FREE.

SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M. D., Principal, Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich.
Au4 1m*

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,

Developing and Business Medium,
ALSO
Clairvoyant Physician,
474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,
(Corner of Concord street.)

Sittings daily from 9 A. M. till 5 P. M. Price, $1, 00.

Unequalled Advantages.

DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.

Development of Mediumship a Specialty.

SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $4, 00 IN ADVANCE.

CIRCLES.

Sunday, at 11 A. M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P. M., for Psychometry, Tests and Inspirational Music. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf Au4

Something New and Pleasing.

WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1, 00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m Jy7

Written Communications

On Business, Mediumship and Health,

Through the mediumship of J. W. FLETCHER 6 Beacon street, Boston. tf Jy28

MISS HELEN A. SLOAN,

MAGNETIC Physician, Vapor and Medicated Baths. Celebrated "Acid Cure." Office hours from 9 A. M. to 8 P. M. 171 Tremont street, corner Mason st., Boston. Jy28 1w*

MISS A. PEABODY,

BUSINESS, Test, Clairvoyant Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday and Thursday evenings, Tuesday afternoon at 3. 4 Bennet st., corner Washington st., Boston. Au11 2w*

MISS L. E. SMITH,

MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P. M. 11 Union Park st., Boston. Au18 1w*

Massage and Magnetism.

MRS. DR. L. M. FAXON, 22 Winter street, Room 7A, Boston. Obstinately treated. Also instruction given. Je23 1ow*

MRS. A. FORRESTER

WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. 39 Chapman street, corner Shawmut Avenue, Boston. 1w* Au18

MRS. ALDEN,

TRANCE MEDIUM. Medical Examinations and Magnetic treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston. Au11 5w*

MRS. L. M. VIERCE

WILL be at her Rooms during the summer. No. 282 Columbus Avenue, Hotel Admirable, Suite 11, Boston. 5w* Jy28

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 6 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment. Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Comrade Sulphur Baths. Au18 1w*

MISS L. M. WHITING.—Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, and stiffness of limbs from sprains or breaks, is the most successful in use. Hotel Rutland, 261 Tremont street, Suite 3. Au11 12w*

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter advice for permanent cure of all forms of disease. Spirit Magnetized Paper, during the summer months, 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Two passages by mail, $1. Jy7 13w*

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, 48 Wareham street, Room 11. 1w* Au4

MRS. DR. JULIA CRAFTS SMITH gives medical advice, tests and treatment every Thursday, from 9 to 6, Office, Hotel Vendome, Appleton street, Boston. Ma14 13w*

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 8 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), Room 4, Boston, Mass. Office hours, from 12 to 4 P. M. Jy7 3ow*

MISS L. BARNICOAT, Medical, Test and Business Medium. Lectures followed by Tests and Psychometry. 175 Tremont street, Room 1, Boston. Jy7 5w*

MISS C. W. KNOX, Test, Business and Medical Medium, 3 East Springfield street, Boston. Au18 1w*

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. 1w* Au4

J. A. SHELHAMER,

MAGNETIC HEALER,

Office 8½ Bosworth Street (Room 5), Boston, Mass.,

WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases. Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription and advice, $2, 00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1, 00 per package. Healing by rubbing and laying on of hands. Parties wishing consultation by letter must be particular to state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Kidney, or Strengthening and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1, 00.

Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.—except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he attends out-of-town patients. Letter address care of BANNER OF LIGHT. 13w* Jy7

TWELFTH EDITION.

THE VOICES.

BY WARREN SUMNER BARLOW.

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes.

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality of Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF PRAYER enforces the idea that our prayers must accord with immutable laws, else we pray for effects, independent of cause.

Twelfth edition, with a new stippled steel-plate engraving of the author from a recent photograph. Printed in large, clear type, on beautiful tinted paper, bound in beveled boards.

Price $1, 00; postage 10 cents.

☞ Persons purchasing a copy of "THE VOICES" will receive, free, a copy of Mr. Barlow's new pamphlet entitled "ORTHODOX HASH, WITH CHANGE OF DIET," if they so order.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. eow

LECTURES by JULIET H. SEVERANCE, M. D.

A LECTURE on the Industrial and Financial Problems. Paper. Price 15 cents.

A LECTURE on the Evolution of Life in Earth and Spirit-Conditions. Paper. Price 15 cents.

A LECTURE on the Philosophy of Disease, and How to Cure the Sick without Drugs, with an Explanation of Magnetic Laws. Paper. Price 15 cents.

A LECTURE on Life and Health; or, How to Live a Century. Paper. Price 15 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NERVOUS DISEASES AND MAGNETIC THERAPEUTICS. By J. P. BRIGGS, M. D.

This little work gives the reader a clear insight into the nature of these maladies, and the accurate principles on which treatment should be based. Nor are the views here set forth mere hypothetical dogmas or speculative theories, but the result of careful observation, broad experience and familiarity with the best writers. To read them is certain to convince the most skeptical, except he is perversely so. Perhaps few treatises have been published where so much is told with so little appearance of it, so destitute is the writer of art, affectation or pretentiousness.

Cloth, pp. 57. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE LIFE. The main object of this little volume is to give to suggestive teaching a recognition and a force (in the domain of religion and morals) greater than dictation has. It announces a system of life. It announces a few primal principles which can hardly be denied by any one, and endeavors to show how, from adherence to those principles, every life will grow into symmetry—into harmony with itself in this life and the great hereafter. It is sent forth to the world by its author and his associates, as the preface indicates, without the hope or possibility of pecuniary profit to them—small fruit of some of the principles it aims to inculcate.

Paper, 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THOUGHTS FROM THE SPIRIT-WORLD ADDRESSED TO THE WORKING CLASSES. Written through the mediumship of MRS. YEATMAN SMITH, of Carondelet, Mo.

These lectures have been dictated by a band of spirits who are deeply interested in the elevation of mankind on the earth-plane, that Crime and its adjunct, Misery, may be banished from among men, and instead of them the loving, helping hand extended to all who need assistance in soul or body.

Paper, pp. 53. Price 20 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

NEW MUSIC.

BY C. P. LONGLEY.

"ONLY A THIN VEIL BETWEEN US," Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"WHEN THE DEAR ONES GATHER AT HOME." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"HOME OF MY BEAUTIFUL DREAMS." Song and Chorus. Words by Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"CHILD OF THE GOLDEN SUNSHINE." Song and Chorus. Words by Eben E. Rexford; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

GOD, HOME AND NATIVE LAND. A National Temperance Ode. Words by Mary L. Sherman. Music by C. Payson Longley. Price 5 cents.

Beautiful Home of the Soul	25 cents.
Come in thy Beauty, Angel of Light	25 "
I am Going to my Home	25 "
In Heaven We'll Know Our Own	25 "
Love's Golden Chain	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Over There	25 "
The City Just Over the Hill	25 "
The Golden Gates are Left Ajar	25 "
Two Little Shoes and a Ringlet of Hair	25 "
We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Above	25 "
We're Coming, Sister Mary	25 "
Gathering Flowers in Heaven	25 "
Who Sings My Child to Sleep?	25 "
Oh! Come, for my Poor Heart is Breaking	25 "
Once It was Only Soft Blue Eyes	25 "

☞ The above songs are in Sheet Music. Single copies 25 cents; 5 copies for $1, 00.

We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land (with portrait of Annie Lord Chamberlain) ..... 35 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Dr. Hardcastle's TOOTH-LIFE.

A Delightful Tooth-Powder.

This Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.

Of the four pages printed in the circle accompanying each box of "Tooth-Life," told Dr. Blankman, after reading it, made the remark: "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."

The projector says: "As a Spiritualist from my youth, I say to the purchaser, here, per contra, Call to find in the box of 'Tooth Life' and four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of an experience as an Amer. can dentist and student during from 1850, of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth preservative measure taught above are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."

Put up in a neat box. Sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Rare and Valuable Works.

These interesting books, which have been out of print for some years, are now offered at much below their former retail prices:

THE EDUCATOR:

Being Suggestions Theoretical and Practical, designed to promote Man's Culture and Freedom, with a View to the Ultimate Estate, Growth of a Divine Social State on Earth, etc. By Dio Lewis Marian Spear. Vol. I. pp. 165. Cloth. Price $1, 00.

LIGHT FROM THE SPIRIT-WORLD;

Comprising a series of Articles on the Conditions of Spirits, and the Development of Mind in the Realms Celestial and Celestial Spheres. By C. Hammond, Medium. Cloth. Price 50 cents.

THE CELESTIAL TELEGRAPH;

Or, Secrets of the Life to come Revealed through Magnetism, when in the Condition Known as Trance, and the Origin, Nature and Immortality of the Soul Established by Arguments from the Facts Presented. By a Clairvoyant. Illustrated by Diagrams of Celestial Light and Celestial Scenery. Also, Directions for Developing Clairvoyance. By Phineas Parkhurst Quimby, the Celebrated Magnetic Physician. Edited by Rev. Levi Rix. Cloth. Price $1, 50.

A DISCUSSION

on Fate, Free Will, Foreknowledge, Foreordination, Predestination, Election, Reprobation, Responsibility, Punishment, Reward, Sin, Holiness, Sanctification, Justification, Regeneration, Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Providence, Inspiration, Revelation, Miracles, Atonement, Redemption, Mediation, Resurrection, Heaven, Hell, Devil, Angels, Spirits, Ministration, Duration of Future Punishment, Universalism, Annihilation, Restoration, Evil, Good, Trinity, Unity, Deity, Creation, Preexistence, Eternity, Time, Matter, Spirit, Mind, Soul, Body, Man, Woman, Marriage, Divorce, Labor, Capital, Wages, Money, Property, Government, Liberty, Slavery, Temperance, Intemperance, Theology, Science, Philosophy, Religion, Morality, Virtue, Vice, Happiness, Misery, Life, Death, Immortality, Destiny, Universe, God, Nature, Truth, Error, Right, Wrong, Love, Hate, Peace, War, Civilization, Barbarism, Progress, Retrogression, Perfection, Depravity, Intuition, Reason, Analogy, Induction, Deduction, Logic, Metaphysics, Prejudice, Bigotry, Toleration, Liberality, Orthodoxy, Heterodoxy, Skepticism, Infidelity, Conservatism, Radicalism, Fanaticism, Consistency, Inconsistency, Hypocrisy, Candor, Sincerity, Honesty, Dishonesty, Egotism, Selfishness, Unselfishness, Benevolence, Charity, Justice, Mercy, Forgiveness, Revenge, Duty, Obligation, Conscience, Sympathy, Affection, Passion, Principle, Policy, Expediency, Practicability, Impracticability, Success, Failure, Theory, Practice, Speculation, Fact, Fiction, Poetry, Prose, Eloquence, Rhetoric, Grammar, Criticism, Literature, Art, Science, Mechanism, Agriculture, Commerce, Manufactures, Navigation, Aeronautics, Astronomy, Geology, Chemistry, Physiology, Psychology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Pathology, Therapeutics, Hygiene, Materialism, Idealism, Realism, Nominalism, Conceptualism, Rationalism, Sensationalism, Transcendentalism, Mysticism, Pantheism, Polytheism, Monotheism, Atheism, Agnosticism, Secularism, Ritualism, Formalism, Liberalism, Humanitarianism, Socialism, Communism, Nihilism, Anarchism, Feminism, Nudism, Free Love, Affinity, Celibacy, Asceticism, Sensualism, Gluttony, Temperance, Abstinence, Fasting, Feasting, Gambling, Speculation, Lotteries, Usury, Banking, Finance, Political Economy, Free Trade, Protection, Reciprocity, Annexation, Secession, Democracy, Republicanism, Monarchy, Despotism, Anarchy, Nationality, Cosmopolitanism, Individuality, Universality, Locality, Infinitude, Finitude, Absolute, Relative, Unconditioned, Conditioned, Noumenon, Phenomenon, Subject, Object, Ego, Non-Ego, Cause, Effect, Substance, Accident, Quality, Quantity, Space, Time, Motion, Rest, Force, Inertia, Gravitation, Repulsion, Attraction, Affinity, Cohesion, Adhesion, Polarity, Electricity, Magnetism, Light, Heat, Sound, Color, Form, Number, Figure, Harmony, Discord, Unity, Diversity, Identity, Similarity, Dissimilarity, Equality, Inequality, Infinity, Finity, Zero, Unity, Duality, Trinity, Quaternity, Quinquinity, Senarity, Septenarity, Octonarity, Novenarity, Denarity, Undenarity, Duodenarity, Tridenarity, Quattuordenarity, Quindenarity, Sexdenarity, Septendenarity, Octodenarity, Novendenarity, Vigenarity, Centenarity, Millenarity, Myriadenarity, Infinitenarity, Totality, Nullity, Cipher, Aught, Naught, Ought, Nought, Knowledge, Ignorance, Wisdom, Folly, Genius, Stupidity, Memory, Imagination, Fancy, Judgment, Understanding, Comprehension, Apprehension, Perception, Conception, Sensation, Consciousness, Unconsciousness, Subconsciousness, Superconsciousness, Will, Volition, Desire, Aversion, Appetite, Instinct, Habit, Custom, Fashion, Manners, Etiquette, Politeness, Rudeness, Refinement, Vulgarity, Gentility, Aristocracy, Democracy

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1888.

The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings.

Onset Bay.

[MISS GUSTIE F. HOWE is our authorized agent at Onset Bay. She will receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. She also has a full line of our publications for sale at Association Headquarters; and will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Meeting.]

"As tall trees of the forest are the first to be smitten by the storm and shattered by the thunder-bolt, so men of advanced thought are the first assailed by the tempests of popular indignation."

This Camp-Meeting thus far has been a more brilliant success than any previously held. A vote by the Directors has decided to extend the meeting to Sept. 1st, two more Sundays. Aug. 19th Mrs. Stevens, of California, will lecture in the morning, Mr. E. B. Fairchild in the afternoon. Aug. 26th Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes in the morning and Mr. E. B. Fairchild in the afternoon, with the regular conference, fact and mediums' meetings week days.

Monday morning a Facts Meeting was held at the Auditorium. On account of the rain the conference in the afternoon was held in the Temple, and was "the best meeting yet," so said many on their return.

Mrs. E. A. Wells, materializing medium, of New York, arrived on the grounds Monday, and is quartered at Parson Cottage, on W. Central Avenue.

Judge John Fitch and wife of Toledo, Ohio, are also with us to investigate the phenomena of Spiritualism.

Mrs. Esther M. Sanborn called Monday to say that she wished to testify to the truth of the spirit message published in THE BANNER of Aug. 4th, from Daniel Sanborn of New York, she being his cousin by marriage and knowing all the parties mentioned in the message.

Monday evening your correspondent was one of a number who visited Horatio G. Eddy's séance. After some physical manifestations in the light, a form materialized, purporting to be that of Wm. White, formerly connected with the BANNER OF LIGHT, who sent greetings to THE BANNER, and said he was just as active in its interest as formerly, and doing all he could for the Message Department.

Jennie B. Hagan arrived Tuesday. On that morning an interesting mediums' meeting was held in the grove. In the afternoon, Mr. E. B. Fairchild delivered the lecture, his subject being, "Why I became a Spiritualist." Miss Hagan followed with several inspirational poems, the subject of one being "Sheridan"—a grand eulogy to our noble general, so recently passed to spirit-life. Mr. Joseph D. Stiles followed with tests many and interesting; all recognized.

Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing will soon leave us for Lake Pleasant. Her engagements for the fall and winter will take her westward to Pittsburgh, Washington, Cleveland and Detroit.

Monday evening a private séance was held at Mrs. Bliss's cottage with most remarkable results. Mrs. Cox, whose cottages are on the opposite side of the street, was present in the circle, which was composed of but four people. Her daughter Mary materialized, came out of the cabinet, and taking her mother by the hand walked out on the piazza, and kissing her hand and waving it across the street said: "Mother's home; life is not complete on earth or in heaven without a mother's love," and also many comforting words. Afterward another daughter materialized and walked out on the piazza also, and talked intelligently to her mother. Other manifestations took place which were remarkable. Mrs. Bliss is truly a wonderful instrument in the hands of the spirits, and to say her circles are well attended, shows she is appreciated.

Wednesday morning conference meeting was held in the grove, at which Mr. Fairchild finished telling why he became a Spiritualist. It was very interesting. In the afternoon a memorial service was held, Mr. Fairchild presiding. Mrs. M. S. Wood paid a glowing tribute to the pioneer workers in the cause of Spiritualism and for the advancement and furtherance of all progressive movements. Among those tenderly referred to were Achsa W. Sprague, Thomas Gales Forster, Henry C. Wright, William Denton, Henry F. Gardner, S. B. Brittan, Dr. Hallock, Isaac Rehn, I. P. Greenleaf, Rosa T. Amedey, Nellie Kenyon, Harriet Huntley, Laura Kendrick, Edward S. Wheeler, Benjamin Todd, Abbie E. Cutler, Sidney Howe, M. S. Loring, Julia A. Johnson, Allen Putnam, Epes Sargent, Nellie Huckins, Mrs. Chappelle, and others.

Thursday at 1 o'clock a party of twenty of the most prominent Spiritualists, together with Mr. Whitlock, Mr. W. S. Rowley, the spirit telegraph operator, and Mr. Gidley, a telegraph operator, who was sent from Buzzard's Bay, went out in the yacht "Onset Belle," to try the power of spirit telegraphy on the water. The box containing the instrument was closed and locked, with no connection with any wires whatever. The operator, Mr. Gidley, read the message by signs, the same as by any ordinary telegraphic machine, the sounds being the same. Mr. Gidley is not a Spiritualist, and knows nothing whatever of the phenomena of Spiritualism. He testifies, however, to the genuineness of the message, and says there was no collusion with the instrument in any way. The following is the message as it was given:

"I wish you a good afternoon, and wish to say to you all that we can operate just as well from the sailboat as upon the land. There are many truths connected with spirit return, and this is one of them, the same as Dr. Rogers gets the spirit-writing between slates. I as a doctor come back to do good to humanity and heal the sick. I have the pleasure to be associated with many others who were equally or better posted than myself on these subjects. I wish to introduce Thomas Gales Forster to this company of people. He sends greetings, and wishes to be remembered to all my friends. I have more 'unanswerable logic' than ever. Thomas Gales Forster. I have many things I would like to say sometime. Henry Ward Beecher—yes—sends greetings, and says he was liberal, but not liberal enough. It is difficult to write here, so you must excuse us all for this time. Rite Wells and Others."

Mr. Whitlock at this point asked a mental question in regard to the publication of The Soul.

Answer: "Not now; in the future. We say, Be honest, firm and truthful, that is all. Say to the people not to believe anything that does not appeal to their senses and judgment. Good-bye. This is from J. G. Holland."

It was made to appear in last week's BANNER, in Mr. Hayward's account of the slate-writing and pictures received at the Convention, that all were given through the mediumship of Dr. Rogers. This is a mistake. The picture of "Grey Eagle," and the message to Gen. Lippitt were given on Thursday evening through the mediumship of Dr. D. J. Stansbury, of San Francisco, Cal.

Thursday evening an exhibition of spirit telegraphing was given in the Temple by Mr. Rowley, of Cleveland.

Friday the steamer "Island Home" took between four and five hundred people on an excursion to Cottage City, and the remark was made by a gentleman that if each one had taken a handful of sand with him there would have been nothing of Onset left behind; but what was his surprise when the bell rang for a fact meeting to see upward of three hundred people in attendance. This goes to show something of the regular attendance at Onset, not mentioning the Saturday and Sunday influx of visitors. The season has been a cool one, and we have experienced but few summer days. We hear from other watering places that the hotels have discharged a part of their help, business being dull with them; but we are told the hotels at Onset are doing a fair business. The Washburn House seats not less than one hundred and fifty guests at each dinner hour, and other hotels in proportion. Union Villa is doing a good business, as it should, since everything is conducted in a first-class manner.

If you desire oysters served in any style, go to the restaurant on the wharf, kept by Mr. Besse.

Friday evening a very fine entertainment was given in the Temple, by Chas. W. Sullivan, consisting of character impersonations, with music and singing by eminent local talent. This entertainment takes the place of the celebrated Old Folks' Concert which Mr. Sullivan gives annually, and which is always well patronized. Mr. Sullivan's engagement at Onset terminates with this week, when he will go to Queen City Park, stopping on his way at Lake Pleasant.

The band concerts in Bay View Grove each morning and evening are a pleasing feature.

Excursion trains will run from Plymouth, Hanover and Whitman to Onset, also from Provincetown to Onset, Aug. 26th.

We were pleased to welcome Col. Crockett at the office, Saturday, looking and feeling much improved since last Sunday.

The new book, "Physical Proofs of Another Life," by Gen. Lippitt, can be obtained of A. S. Witherbee & Co., Washington, D. C.

Saturday afternoon many people gathered at the auditorium to listen to a discourse from Mr. A. E. Tisdale on "The Rational and Scientific Argument for a Continued Life"; it was logical and interesting. He was followed by Jennie B. Hagan with an improvisation on subjects given by the audience, nicely interwoven and blended in a beautiful poem. Joseph D. Stiles gave seventy-seven tests, all of which were recognized but five.

Saturday evening a large number of pleasure seekers assembled at the Temple to enjoy the usual Saturday night dance; many spectators were also present.

Mr. Alonzo Danforth, editor of Children's Department in The Better Way, is with us for a few days.

We are happy to welcome Mr. Frank W. Jones, the prime mover and sustainer of the People's Meeting in New York City.

This Association desires to thank the friends one and all who have so kindly and generously contributed flowers for the meetings.

Our genial and respected Col. Kase, of Philadelphia, arrived on Sunday, cheerful and happy, as a good Spiritualist should be.

We understand Mrs. Nellie Whitney, a materializing medium, well known at Onset, has passed from the mortal to the immortal side of life at her home in South Weymouth within a few days.

Mr. Johnson is expected to arrive next Wednesday at his beautiful cottage at Plymouth Park, and of course we shall hear the whistle and see the steam launch with its jolly party from Mayflower Grove. Verily Buzzard's Bay still continues to draw largely from our citizen population.

Sunday morning, Aug. 12th, opened clear, cool and bright, with the waters of the Bay shimmering in the sunlight, and the pure ozone in the air making one feel invigorated and elastic. An excursion train from Providence and two excursion trips from New Bedford by the steamers "Island Home" and "Cygnet" brought a large concourse of people to the grounds. Lindall's excellent band gave a grand concert in the morning at the Band Stand in Bay View Grove opposite the Auditorium, and at 9:45 the favorite Middleboro' Band opened the exercises at the Auditorium by a concert, at which the people flocked in great numbers; in a few minutes every available seat was taken, and many obliged to stand. At 10:30 the President of the Association, Col. Wm. D. Crockett, introduced Miss Jennie B. Hagan as the speaker of the morning. Three subjects for the discourse were given from the audience, and eight for a poem, the weaving and condensing of which was done artistically and skillfully. The discourse was eloquent, and engaged the earnest attention of the audience to the end. Mr. Stiles followed with tests in his usual happy and interesting manner.

At 1:30 P. M. Lindall's Band gave a concert in Bay View Grove, and at 2:30 Col. Crockett introduced Mr. A. E. Tisdale to the largest audience of the season. His subject was "National and Religious Growth," under the control of Spirit Thomas Paine, who gave a deep, thoughtful and grand discourse. The two lectures of the day were a rare intellectual treat, with a very fine poem on subjects given by the audience—"Public Schools" and "The Purposes of Life"—making in all a beautiful combination. Mr. Stiles then came to the front with tests, giving in all one hundred and eighty-eight names, most of which were recognized.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum met in the Temple at 3 P. M., as usual. Recitations were given by Lotta Giles, Henry Campbell, Minnie Bartlett, Alice Cummings, Harry Holmes, Marian Woodward and Cora Campbell. Songs by Lulu Morse and Carrie Rothermel. Dialogue by Dora Butts and Francis Gardner.

The Onset Street Railroad brought twenty-one carloads of passengers to the grounds Sunday morning.

Monday, the 13th, the usual conference meeting. Tuesday, mediums' meeting in the morning. A lecture by Mrs. E. A. Wells, of New York, in the afternoon. Wednesday, a lecture by Mr. Tisdale. Thursday and Friday, Fact Meetings. Sunday, 19th, Mrs. S. R. Stevens will lecture in the forenoon and Mr. A. E. Tisdale in the afternoon. There will be excursions by steamer from New Bedford and by cars from different points. An excursion train will be run from Provincetown to Onset the 26th.

The séances of the Berry Sisters are well attended, and the manifestations very satisfactory, those who have been present aver.

We hope the friends and those interested in the doings at Onset will remember our Harvest Moon Festival, a celebration peculiar to Onset, instituted by Dr. I. P. Greenleaf in memory of the Indians who formerly roamed these beautiful grounds, and observed each year when the harvest moon is at its full. We anticipate the usual celebration this year, due notice of which will be given.

One hundred and seventy-three persons have registered at Headquarters Office during the past week.

GUSTIE F. HOWE.

Headquarters Office, Onset, Aug. 12th, 1888.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

Mr. Willard Wood and family and Mr. E. Harlow and wife of Plymouth, Mass., have been at Onset recently. Mrs. Harlow related the following incident: They were holding a private séance about one year ago, when a spirit then supposed to be in the material form announced himself; they had no idea that he had passed over the river of change at the time, but it was soon discovered that he had been in the spirit-life for some days. He resided alone, and no one knew of his exit at the time his spirit informed the members of the séance through their medium; the secular papers prtuted the circumstances at the time.

Mrs. Morse is sadly missed at the morning séances at the Glen Cove House, as her spirit-guides were very interesting and instructive in their elucidation of the subjects under consideration. A vote of thanks was tendered to her and to her guides on her departure, for her unselfish work for the cause while at Onset. Mr. Morse added much to the singing at these séances. W.

Lake Pleasant.

[MR. J. MILTON YOUNG is our authorized agent at Lake Pleasant, and will be pleased to receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. Mr. Young also has a full line of our publications for sale at his bookstore. He will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Meeting.]

The summer home of Spiritualists is made bright by new comers who linger to inhale the clear, invigorating air, and listen to the inspiriting truths from the beyond. Our mediums are, as usual, doing good work for those in the field of investigation. Our talent in lecture department and oratory is not excelled by any camp in the world. Great harmony prevails throughout the beautiful grounds, fast becoming endeared to the hearts of our yearly visitors. Good music makes the air vocal.

The week closes with an increased attendance.

Monday and Tuesday were occupied with conferences, at which there was speaking by various parties.

Wednesday there was speaking by Mrs. Fannie Davis Smith, with platform descriptions by Mrs. E. Clark Kimball, remarkable for minuteness and detail, and received with intense interest by the large audience.

Thursday was devoted to conferences, with several speakers.

Friday morning, a conference was held at the auditorium, with speaking by Mr. Dager, Mr. Sweet (a medium for forty years), Mrs. Renouf, Miss Nickerson, Mrs. Morse; singing (inspirational) by Miss Nickerson.

In the afternoon, a large audience had gathered in anticipation of a rich treat from J. Clegg Wright, a matter in which they were not disappointed. The service opened with singing by the choir of "Beautiful City," after which Mr. Wright gave an address of an hour upon the subject of "Religion." He said: "In denouncing that which is false, let us cherish that which is good. The Idol is all right until we find that it is stuffed with sawdust. I am a better Christian than I was five years ago, but not so good a theologian," etc. Modern Spiritualism can stand the test of eternity.

On Sunday, Aug. 12th, the morning address was given by J. Clegg Wright, upon the general subject of religion. The lecture was fine, abounding in logical hits and eloquent passages. The best of attention was manifested by the large audience in attendance. The meeting closed with platform descriptions by Mrs. E. C. Kimball, nearly all of which were recognized.

In the afternoon the hall was packed, standing room being at a premium, the announcement that Chas. E. Watkins would give an exhibition of his mediumistic power aggregating the great assemblage. Mr. Watkins prefaced his experiments with a brief address upon the matter of mediumship. Nine pairs of slates were then placed upon the table, in full view of the audience, upon six of which writing appeared.

Hotel guests: S. J. Shaw and wife, Boston; E. Morse and wife, Minneapolis; Mrs. H. B. Fay and daughter, Boston; Mrs. Earle and daughter, Springfield; C. E. Eddy, Worcester; Amos Nickerson and family, Somerville, Mass.; Milton Rathbun and wife, Frank Logee, Mt. Vernon; P. D. Niver, Cohoes; Amos Adams, San Francisco; J. D Chism, Albany; F. N. Shaw, Leominster; Charles Avery and wife, Norwich; F. C. Reade, Cincinnati; J. H. Chassaing, St. Louis.

SPECIAL NOTES.

James Lewis and wife, Temple of Music, Springfield, Mass., are expected at the hotel.

We understand Mr. A. E. Tisdale will spend the coming winter in St. Augustine, Fla., under the auspices of Mrs. John F. Whitney, the veteran Spiritualist.

Mrs. Mary Eddy Huntoon and Mr. Horatio Eddy expect to spend the winter of '88 in the sunny clime of Florida.

Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant is another to seek the balm of southern breezes.

Mrs. Cushman is receiving quite a good share of patronage from the people here. She is faithfully looked after and taken care of by her many friends stopping here at the Lake.

Association Hall has been booked for a large number of entertainments.

The annual business meeting of the New England Spiritualist Camp-Meeting Association will be held on Monday. A change in the constitution and by laws is contemplated.

Dr. W. B. Mills, of Saratoga, and family, are here.

Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing came on Friday.

Among other recent arrivals are: J. D. Chism and wife, Albany, N. Y.; Amos Adams, San Francisco; Elisha Morse and wife, Minneapolis; Prof. J. F. Bacon, Philadelphia; Albert Russell, Newburyport.

The Fair under the auspices of the Ladies' Improvement Society will undoubtedly be a grand success, judging from the preparations which are being made. It will be held the entire week.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Rathbun, of New York City, are here for a stay of a few days. They always bring the grace and culture of Manhattan with them, and many a circle has been inspired with their presence.

Messrs. Craig and Tallman, of Boston, are also here.

Lake Pleasant, Mass., Aug. 11th, 1888. J. M. Y.

[The grand illumination of the camp grounds occurred on the evening of the 11th. The streets and buildings were brilliant with hundreds of Japanese lanterns and colored lights. Among the cottages illuminated were the Headquarters and those of James Wilson, W. R. Tice, the hotel, Lake Shore Café, Mowry's ice cream rooms, Jennie Rhind, Heavenly Court, Dr. Beals, A. Fales, A. F. Pierce, Mrs. Gray, O. E. Watkins, J. S. Hart and J. W. Wheeler. There was a large attendance.]

Verona Park, Me.

But one pleasant day have we had since our arrival at this place; however, it has been a very happy week to us all, as everything is so different from our own surroundings at home.

There has been a continual influx of people every day, until now upon the opening Sunday—Aug. 12th—the cottages are all well filled.

The arrival of the boat on Saturday landed upon our island Miss M. T. Shelhamer of the Banner Circle-Room, her reception being most cordial; she is now enjoying the comforts of "Edgecliff Cottage."

The services were opened on the morning of Sunday, 12th, with words of congratulation by Dr. C. F. Ware, followed by singing of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," under the direction of Mrs. Robinson—this lady also presiding at the organ. Mrs. J. Wentworth of Knox, Me., was at this point introduced, who, after giving an invocation, delivered the opening address, having for her subject, "Come let us reason together." Mrs. Wentworth is an able speaker, and was listened to by an attentive audience until the final words were spoken. Mr. Wardwell, editor of The Eastern Star, spoke of duties of the Maine Spiritualists, urging them to come to the front and assist in supporting spiritual papers; as The Star is the only paper in the State of Maine, his wish was to obtain encouragement enough to induce him to publish his journal weekly.

At 1:30, as the rain which had characterized the morning continued, the services were held in the large dining-hall, which was for a time converted into a lecture room. The hall was filled with an enthusiastic audience to listen to an eloquent address from Miss M. T. Shelhamer. The subject was: "Spiritualism the Hope of the World." The people were pleased beyond measure with her discourse, and many expressions of great satisfaction have reached me, with the wish that she may again visit them. Prior to the discourse a party of ladies and gentlemen from Winterport favored the audience with musical selections—Mr. George Francis, of Manchester closing the exercises with the rendition of a beautiful poem entitled, "The Ferry Bell."

On Wednesday evening a Social is to be held to interest the young element; a band will be in attendance, and a glorious time is expected. Other evenings of the week will be devoted to séances and entertainments, under the direction of Mr. Francis.

Col. S. P. La Gros is upon the ground, and all who may wish his services will find him at "Colby Cottage."

On Thursday evening last we attended a meeting of the G. A. R. Post at Bucksport, and received a soldiers' welcome.

On Sunday next, the 19th inst., Mrs. A. M. Glading, of Philadelphia, will occupy the rostrum the entire day. H.

Aug. 13th.

Cassadaga Lake, N. Y.

Since my last letter we have had lectures by Charles Dawbarn, Mrs. Colby-Luther, J. Frank Baxter and Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond. The attendance has been good every day, and on Sunday a very large crowd was on the grounds, the amphitheatre being filled to overflowing.

The morning conferences have been highly interesting, and give opportunity for people to relate experiences with phenomena in the home circle or elsewhere, as well as to discuss the principles of the Spiritual Philosophy.

Last Thursday morning Hon. A. B. Richmond occupied the platform, and for nearly two hours held the attention of a large audience while he narrated some of the experiences which have made him a believer in Spiritualism. He showed that he is an expert in the art of magic, by explaining several of the tricks which form the stock-in-trade of the self-styled exposers of Spiritualism. He confessed that when he came to Cassadaga Camp a year ago he firmly believed that all the phenomena were simply clever trickery, but declared that he had not been in the presence of the slate-writing medium twenty minutes before he was convinced that he was dealing with some power other than magic or legerdemain. He told his experience with much fervor, and at times, when speaking of the manifestation of dear friends and members of his family, tears started from his eyes, and his voice became husky with emotion.

The Grand Hotel on the grounds is filled with guests, and rooms are being sought at the cottages by those who cannot obtain accommodations at the hotel.

Two grocery stores are doing a lively business; milk and meat wagons have a large patronage, and everything gives evidence of the prosperous condition of the Camp.

We have a telegraph and post-office, and these, with the many daily papers, keep the camp in communication with the outer world.

There are numerous mediums here, and many phases of the phenomena are represented.

The "hops," which are held two evenings every week, are well patronized, and are always characterized by the best of order and deportment.

There are exhibitions on Friday evenings by the Children's Lyceum, which are also well attended.

There are several private classes for physical and psychic culture, and instruction in occult science.

It is pleasing to note the growth of the Spiritualistic movement in the direction of spiritual culture and education. The majority of Spiritualists are coming to consider the phenomena as simply the foundation of the temple, and they are zealously working upon its walls. They perceive that the value of the phenomena is not in their power to amaze or entertain, but in the significance attached to them as revelations of a future life for man, and as illustrations of laws of spiritual unfoldment. It is of no use to teach a person the truth of immortality unless he is ready to make use of that truth by living as worthy of an immortal nature. A revelation of the continuity of human life beyond the grave, and the consequent continuity of those laws of justice and retribution under which we are now living, should come to man as a continual inspiration to live the highest life. The doctrines of Spiritualism contain unlimited possibilities for good, if rightly applied to human life. That they are being so applied, and that they are bearing their fruit in character, is the inevitable conclusion of one who comes in contact with the people who assemble at a Spiritualist camp.

Let the good work go on until the will of the Father and the laws of life are obeyed on earth as they are in the higher spheres of the spirit-world. GRAPHO.

Lily Dale, N. Y.

CHARLES DAWBARN sends us the following letter from Cassadaga, under a recent date:

"I cannot help asking myself wherein lies the secret of the delightful experience of every visitor to Cassadaga Camp. I know there are whole-souled, competent officers, perpetually awake to every necessity, and unselfishly active in their duty; but almost every camp in the country can say the same. Of course the location is charming; but every camp is selected for its pleasurable surroundings; and Cassadaga is simply equal to many others in that respect; yet as a matter of fact it has already gained a national reputation, and has visitors from many States.

We shall gain no knowledge of the secret by comparing it with other camps, so I simply ask myself why I am having such a very good time here. The 'happy family' idea seems to be carried out successfully here—for all are peaceable and purring.

The lovers of phenomena have just what their souls crave. Among the many mediums are three slate-writers, who are kept very busy by investigators.

There are many here who, having gained proof of Spiritualism, are now eager students of its philosophy. For such, first-class lecturers are provided, representing many phases of thought; some of them voicing their own opinions and others those of their spirit controls.

A handsome building, called Library Hall, has been opened and dedicated this season, as a child of three hundred volumes, with a delightful reading-room for its nursery. Several séance-rooms and a nice lecture hall render the building complete in its usefulness to the campers. But the auditorium is the gem of Cassadaga. It is, I believe, the only covered auditorium at any of our camps. When its canvas wings are outspread it shelters an audience of fifteen hundred, most of them sitting on cushioned seats. The speakers find it an easy task to make the crowd hear. I speak from experience, for three times I have been gratified with 'pin-drop' audiences, easily grasping every word without special effort on the part of the lecturer. I believe other speakers have had the same pleasing experience.

When the canvas wings are lowered, this auditorium becomes a theatre for the very interesting Lyceum exhibitions and entertainments with which the campers are greeted several times a week, as well as for the Wednesday and Saturday night 'hops.'

I have made the auditorium a special study, for I do not find anything like it at any camp I have yet visited; and I recommend it to the architectural consideration of all 'summer-land' Spiritualists. Still it is only one of the 'points of force' which aggregate into the delightful camp of Cassadaga. Every hour is put to some interesting use, and the genial Dr. Street makes an admirable and impartial chairman at the daily conferences and public meetings. The fine band and the pleasing choir all contribute to the general result. Power is felt everywhere, but it is all of the spirit—for no policeman has ever been seen on the grounds, and never can be so long as the spirit of harmony reigns supreme.

Our good brother, H. L. Rowe, one of the Trustees, who have contributed to this success, has passed on, and is sadly missed by those with whom he has been working. At a public memorial meeting there were many expressions of sorrow, and the following resolutions were directed to be entered on the records of the association:

IN MEMORIAM OF H. L. ROWE.

Whereas: In the inevitable course of Nature, our brother, H. L. Rowe, has been called to the higher life; and

Whereas: Although the transition from the physical to the higher spiritual life is gain to him and does not wholly remove him from participation in our cause, still we feel that his transition is an irreparable loss to us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby pay to his memory the tribute of our respect and admiration for his virtues as a man, and his unflinching and zealous adherence to his convictions.

Resolved, That we commend to all the example of his consistent life, in which were illustrated the principles and high teachings of the Spiritual Philosophy which he held as truth.

Resolved, That we hereby commemorate his persistent zeal in working for our common cause, and for the growth and usefulness of Cassadaga Lake Free Association, of which he was a trustee.

Resolved, That as evidence of our high esteem for our translated brother, we cause these resolutions to be read at the memorial meeting to be held July 30th; that they be entered upon the records of the Association, and a copy be transmitted to the family of deceased.

J. W. DENNIS, W. J. INNIS, } Committee."

Sunapee Lake, N. H.

Tuesday, Aug. 7th, 10:30 A. M., conference, opened with a song by the choir, followed by remarks by Dr. Storer, Col. B. P. Burpee and Mr. Knowlton. Song, "Shall We Meet Beyond the River?" by quartette. Interesting remarks by Mrs. Chandler. After another song, Spirit Thomas Paine, controlling Thos. Burpee, addressed the conference. Mrs. Waite closed the session.

At 2 o'clock P. M., President in chair, services commenced with a song by quartette. Reading of a poem by G. A. Fuller, and an invocation by the same. After a solo by J. G. Osborn, Mr. Fuller gave a lecture on "The Gospel of Science." A solo by Mr. Stedman and psychometric readings by Dr. C. H. Harding closed the session.

Wednesday, Aug. 8th, 2 o'clock P. M., singing by quartette; reading of a poem by Mrs. S. W. Fletcher, followed by a solo by Mr. Stedman. Lecture by Mrs. S. W. Fletcher; subject, "The Value of Spiritualism." After a song by Mr. and Mrs. Osborne, Edgar W. Emerson gave thirty-four names from the beyond, nearly all of which were recognized.

Thursday, Aug. 9th, 10:30 A. M., conference in Pavilion. Song, followed with remarks by Dr. Storer, Mrs. Chandler and Thos. Burpee controlled by I. P. Greenleaf. After another song, Dr. Storer related a very interesting incident in his experience, followed by Col. Burpee and Mrs. Wells of Manchester, Mrs. S. W. Fletcher and Mrs. George Fellows recognizing a test given by Mrs. Chandler.

Afternoon, 2 o'clock, session opened with a song by Mr. Stedman, "Then Thou 'It Remember Me," finely rendered. G. A. Fuller read one of Helen Hunt Jackson's poems and offered an invocation, followed by a song from Mr. Griggs and a lecture by Mr. Fuller, his last discourse for the season. The regular dance took place this evening, and was well patronized.

Friday, Aug. 10th, 2 P. M., exercises commenced with a song by quartette, followed by the recital of a poem by J. W. Fletcher, a solo by Mr. Stedman, and a lecture by Mr. Fletcher. Exercises closed with a song, "The Better Land," by Mr. Griggs.

Friday evening, 7:30 conference opened by singing, followed by remarks from J. W. Fletcher. Dr. Richardson, for two years President of the Association, made remarks that were appreciated by his friends. E. W. Emerson followed, and a song by Mrs. Chandler closed the session.

Saturday, Aug. 11th, 2 P. M., President Storer having been called away to fill an engagement at Temple Heights, J. W. Fletcher occupied the chair. The exercises commenced this afternoon by singing by the choir. E. W. Emerson, after a few remarks, submitted to his control, and gave the names of twenty-seven spirit-friends of those present; nearly all recognized.

Sunday, Aug. 12th, 10:30 A. M., exercises commenced with a song, followed by a poem from Mrs. Fletcher, a duet by Mr. Stedman and Mr. Griggs, and a lecture by Mrs. F.

At 1 o'clock P. M., E. W. Emerson, at a test séance in the Pavilion, gave the names of more than thirty spirits, besides mentioning groups, one of seventeen, without giving all the names. The regular session convened at 2 P. M., and after a song, Mrs. Fletcher read a poem, followed by a song by Mr. Stedman. "Modern Miracles and Ancient Marvels" was the subject of the lecture by Mr. Fletcher.

The past week has been bad for camping; a great deal of rainy weather, and to-day the rain fell in torrents at the opening of the exercises. The Pavilion was crowded, as also the hotel, and many of the excursionists did not leave the cars; others remained upon the boats, and many stayed at the different dépôts, giving up the excursion altogether.

N. A. LULL, Secretary.

Sunapee Lake, Aug. 13th, 1888.

Haslett Park, Mich.

Mrs. Lillie has been the principal speaker during the meeting, but gives her last lecture here Aug. 9th, after which she goes to Vicksburg to continue the good work. Sunday, the 12th, Mrs. Nellie Baade and George Chainey are the speakers.

Mrs. Firth and Mrs. Walton, lecturers, are here, and several more expected. The physical mediums present are Dr. Schermerhorn of Grand Rapids, one of the very best mediums, and a gentleman in every sense of the word, and Herrick and Barnes, both of whom are well patronized and doing a good work. Mrs. Proctor of Saginaw, the oil test medium, is here, and it seems wonderful while entranced and holding up her hands, after washing them thoroughly, to see different kinds of oil collect in them; friends tell me she performs wonderful cures with this oil.

Father Davenport is present, doing all in his power to make the Camp-Meeting a success, kindly greeting all, and doing a good work with his mediumship as well; as he is one of the old pioneers, it affords me great pleasure to form his acquaintance. There seems to be considerable interest manifested by all speakers and mediums to make this camp-meeting interesting and spiritually profitable.

The auditorium has been fully appreciated, and when completed will add greatly to the comfort of all. There never has been a time when Spiritualism was appreciated as it is to-day, and though in some cases mediums have suffered all manner of persecution for truth's sake, honest mediums are coming to the front stronger than ever.

MRS. NELLIE S. BAADE.

Capac, Mich., Aug. 6th, 1888.

Another correspondent writing from Haslett Park says: "The park is delightfully located a short distance from Lansing, on the banks of a fine sheet of water known as Pine Lake, and through the enterprising efforts of its owner, James H. Haslett, is now a very attractive place of summer resort. Mr. Haslett has built a capacious pavilion, and on Sunday, the 4th inst., exercises dedicatory of park and pavilion called together an audience of about two thousand. The occasion was one of great interest, and among the speakers the Hon. W. L. Bancroft, of Washington, D. C., who in the course of his remarks said: 'Here you have erected a temple dedicated to truth alone. Hither you invite her disciples of every clime and creed to come and reason of things past, present and to come, and no tenet of philosophy is to limit your field of inquiry, no doctrine of men's faith shall cripple your powers of investigation, no dogma of theology shall bind your consciousness.... Appropriately to such a generous scheme you are to blend with intellectual achievements here your earnest, practical effort to ameliorate human suffering and minister to human needs. A sanitarium is to be established, beds endowed, homes created, a library founded; and over all, and governing all, a faculty is to be organized, which shall rule with wisdom and ability the varied and expanding interests that shall cluster and fructify here. Could there be presented a broader or more genial field for personal effort and effective coöperation? The field is the world; the elements are faith in good works, hope in labor and in sacrifice, and a broadening love for all mankind. The workers have mostly borne the burden of denominational exactions and the heat of sectarian controversies. The fruits shall be love, gentleness, meekness, charity, the gratitude of beneficiaries, a quickened conscience, and the smile of an approving Heaven.'"

Atlantic, Ct.

Mrs. Miller, daughter and son of Holyoke, Mass., are stopping with Mrs. J. C. Dorman.

Mrs. Rathbun is at Mrs. M. G. Clark's cottage.

Mrs. D. A. Lyman of Willimantic (with friends) is at her cottage home on Broadway.

Aug. 7th, Cephas B. Lynn of Danvers, Mass., who is taking his vacation, spent a few hours in camp in company with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sisson and Miss Hurlbert of New London, Mrs. Avery of Syracuse, N. Y., and Miss M. E. Marvin of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Stenneth Rodgers and family, of New London, have opened the cottage of Mr. Kummels for the season.

Aug. 8th the entertainment at the Pavilion was quite a success. Miss Blanche Bidwell gave us readings, and is quite an elocutionist; also we had singing by Prof. Jennings and Miss Ida Newman of the Congregational Church, New London. The piano was played by Miss Medbury, our musical medium, for lectures and entertainments, who was highly applauded; in fact all were encored, showing we justly appreciated their efforts.

Mrs. Perry, wife of Captain E. A. Perry of the Hartford Phalanx Company, has taken the new cottage of N. H. Fogg's on Pine street for the season. Mrs. Grant and daughter of Rockville, Ct., are with her.

We were introduced, Aug. 10th, to Mr. John Lamont of Liverpool, Eng., who is stopping at Gad Norton's cottage; this gentleman has been traveling through the South and West since last June.

Mrs. Sol Finch and grandson, Harry Brooks, of Southington, Ct., are stopping at N. H. Fogg's cottage. Mrs. White is very much improved in her health, and is able to walk around her cottage.

Mr. Charles Belknap of Bridgeport has been quite ill, but we see he is out again.

Mrs. Loomis, of Meriden, has had to return home with her mother, Mrs. Hale, on account of ill health. Fred, we are glad to see, is back again for the season.

Aug. 11th, we were glad to greet D. A. Lyman once more—his familiar face being missed by many.

Mr. Wm. C. Buckingham, of Peconic, L. I., is stopping at our friend Mrs. Mills's, who keeps the Camper's Home.

Mr. Hobart Wright and family, of Meriden, we are pleased to meet here.

Willie Clarke, of Willimantic, is visiting at his grandmother's cottage a few days.

Sunday, 12th, Mrs. Emma Paul was the speaker of the day; the morning discourse was given in the Pavilion. The theme was: "The Object of Life, or Character Building." In the afternoon we journeyed to the grove, and the subject was: "True Salvation, or the World's Saviour." Mrs. Paul is an earnest speaker, with a rapid delivery, and no one can help feeling but that she is in earnest in her life's work. May she long live to battle for the truth.

Our friend, Herbert Stearns, who is also a good psychometrist and trance medium, is always ready and willing to do all he can as a caterer to accommodate at his restaurant the multitude who visit our camp.

On Sunday evening we had a conference in the Pavilion; Mr. Lamont was called upon and he gave us an excellent discourse upon the subject of "Thought;" his words were well chosen, and the spirit of the thoughts that he presented left a good impression on the mind of the listeners. Others spoke, and the general comment of all was that the meeting was one of the best we had enjoyed.

On the 17th and 18th occur our annual meeting, and the Ladies' Fair. MRS. N. H. FOGG.

Mantua, O.

Atwater's Grove, Mantua Station, O., with its lofty and heavy foliaged maples, is a lovely place for an open-air convention, and there every season for twenty-nine years, except when stormy, the Spiritualists of Portage County and vicinity have assembled in reunion. If stormy, and always in the evening, a large hall or rink is used. On the occasion of Sunday, August 5th, the morning being cloudy and the grove wet from Saturday's showers, the convention was held in the forenoon in King's Opera House, which was early filled. At 11 o'clock, after orchestral music, Mr. J. Frank Baxter was introduced and received a perfect ovation. He has done a grand work in this vicinity, and this was his fifth annual visit. He took his well-known course of exercises in verse, song, lecture and mediumship, all of which was grand. His lecture was superior to any he had ever given here, and the applause showed Mr. Baxter gained that day many new laurels.

The sun toward noon came out in effulgence and rapidly the ground was dried, so that the afternoon session was held in the grove, and well, for hundreds came from different directions, and a multitude of people made up a vast audience. Speeches were made by the president, Mrs. Payne, of Painesville, Mrs. McCoombs, of Cleveland, Mr. Gould, (son of Prof. Gould of spirit-telegraphy-reporting fame) and Mr. J. Frank Baxter. It was a glorious session.

But the climax was in the evening at the Opera House, which was literally packed. Mr. Baxter was in a happy vein, and entertained, as he educated, remarkably well. He gave a marvelously interesting séance of an hour and a half, crowded not only with names and facts, but surprising tests as well. The convention adjourned to meet at the same place one year hence. Mr. Baxter must have felt conscious of the satisfaction he gave and of the friendship gained, for hundreds congratulated him as they individually shook his hands and bade him "God speed!"

PER ORDER.

Spiritualist Meetings in New York and Brooklyn.

Columbia Hall, 878 6th Avenue, between 49th and 50th Streets.—The People's Spiritual Meeting (removed from Spencer Hall). Services every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Mediums and speakers always present. Frank W. Jones, Conductor.

A General Conference

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH AGE

VOL. LXIII. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1888. | $3,00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 24.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—The Spiritual Rostrum: Why are there Contradictory Teachings through Mediums?

SECOND PAGE.—Poetry: Oh! Beautiful Angel Death. New Publications. Sunset. All True Spiritualists. Yellow Fever. Original Essays: "Spiritualism and Like Delusions"; Hereditary Criminality. A Rich Woman.

THIRD PAGE.—Poetry: Waiting for the Bugle. Banner Correspondence: Letters from Iowa, New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Colorado, Kentucky, and Michigan. In Memoriam, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—Tax All Property Alike—No Favors. The Sioux Indians Vindicated. The Other Side. Life Saved through a Trance, etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—All Sorts of Paragraphs. Spiritualist Meetings in Boston. Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith.

SEVENTH PAGE.—Verifications of Spirit-Messages. August Magazines. Mediums in Boston. Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings, etc.

The Spiritual Rostrum.

Why are there Contradictory Teachings through Mediums? What is the True Standard of Authority?

Inspirational Discourse delivered in San Francisco, Cal., July, 1888, in reply to Questions relative to recent Alleged Falsifications on the part of Spirits and Mediums.

BY W. J. COLVILLE.

[Reported for the Banner of Light.]

We have been particularly requested to deliver a discourse upon the practical value of communications which are said to be received from the spirit-world.

It seems to us imperatively necessary that we should take a fair and common-sense position with regard to ancient and modern inspiration and spiritual revelation, so that we may not be led either to blindly endorse whatsoever purports to be of spiritual origin, nor to denounce anything without positive knowledge that it is false; we certainly are not justified in proclaiming as evil that which does not at first commend itself to the outer degrees of our understanding, nor are we justified in accepting as truth whatever tickles our fancy or supports our preconceptions.

We have always maintained that a spiritual revelation does not undertake to reveal to mankind anything he can learn as readily from mundane sources; communion with the spirit-world is not properly a substitute for normal education; we must not infer that our true attitude to the spirit-world is an attitude of abject dependence or of servile adoration.

On the other hand, an intelligent view of the endless continuity of individual life, an intelligent view of the position which is now being taken by the most enlightened minds everywhere, viz.: that there is no death, and that when the material form drops away we go on living as we lived before in mind and morals, though ever progressing nearer and nearer to a divine goal of surpassing excellence which beggars all description and is beyond the furthest flight of our imagination—leads us to readily admit that in harmony with divine justice there can be no perfect heaven for one portion of humanity awaiting them the moment they cast aside their material bodies, and no dark and dreadful hell awaiting others immediately they shuffle off this mortal coil; our own reason, our own right feeling, our own intelligent sense of justice tell us that the spiritual world can neither be divided into one, two, nor four departments, and that there is an infinite meaning in the oft-quoted passage of the New Testament: "In my Father's house are many mansions; I go to prepare a place for you; if it were not so I would have told you"; and also in the words of another writer in the New Testament, who when speaking concerning Judas Iscariot, who betrayed his Master, pronounced no condemnation upon him, but merely said: "He went to his own place." "He went to his own place" meant that he went to that particular place whither he was attracted; and without undertaking to say how good or how bad he was, how wise or how foolish, how insincere or how mistaken, the writer allows the imagination and the conscience to fill in all the blanks, and contents himself with saying: "He went to his own place." Those words are true universally of all who depart from the body.

When we remember that in this world if each one were to go to his own place this moment—if all the barriers of distance, land and water were removed, and we could all go just where we pleased, associating with whomsoever we would, and engaging in any pastime or occupation which pleased us most—even in an audience of a few hundreds, like the assembly gathered here this morning there might be a few hundred different places selected; and when the millions upon millions of the earth's population are taken into consideration, and we see before our mental vision each going to his own place from all quarters of the globe, how readily we must perceive that the natural result of this must be that the North American Indian will still pursue the chase, even though it be but in imagination and subjectively in his own mind, until he has outgrown the desire to hunt buffalo on the prairie. How naturally we can conclude that the Mussulman, aiming at an extension of the term of physical enjoyment, goes to a state and condition where so-called angels of paradise take the place (even in a subjective sense) of earthly women. And how readily we can imagine the contemplative Brahmin and the self-denying Buddhist passing gladly away from all material haunts, pains and pleasures, resting in those calm worlds which lead up at length to the absolute glories of Nirvana, a condition of absolute spiritual blessedness and entire immunity from all physical thought and desire. How readily we can fancy the Greek, with his wonderful love of beauty and symmetry, going into a world where painters, sculptors and poets have gone, and inspiring those of future generations upon earth to become yet diviner in the execution of their artistic faculties, than were the most renowned among artists of old. And how readily we can fancy the politician, the clergyman, the lawyer, the doctor, all going out into a realm of spirit and finding there in the kingdom of mind certain difficulties to adjust, mental ills to cure, mistakes to correct, and moral lessons to learn—and then inspiring mankind as best they can with the wiser laws, deeper truths and more spiritual facts which they have discovered. How readily we can fancy the soldier, with his warlike impulse, beginning perhaps with those who were sensitive to warfare about him, still entertaining the thought that physical strife on earth was yet needful, but at length outgrowing all thought of an outward encounter, and bending all his warlike impulses to fighting with abstract evils and demolishing the very foundations of the citadel of error. How readily we can feel that the men and women of the world—the mere frivolous butterflies of fashion who seek hither and thither amusement to while away the idle hour, who are by no means vicious, and yet live a life which is better befitting an insect than a rational creature—find for the time being no other enjoyment, no other pursuit or desire in their mind than to roam through the fields of space and play with this and the other joy or beauty which they encounter in their surroundings. We cannot feel that death, which is simply laying the material form aside, can all in a moment transform the character or alter the bent of mental pursuit.

While there may be, and doubtless is, a world of light and loveliness where all are engaged in the worship of God and the service of humanity, in the very highest meaning which we can attach to those phrases; while after ages of progression every human spirit reaches a point where all earthliness is refined away, all mistakes are corrected, and the affections exclusively set upon the highest good—until that glorious consummation arrives, all are growing, constantly advancing, and those who are yet in mortal form and those who have cast it aside are members of one family and one household; they are soldiers in one army, citizens of the same great republic.

Feeling, therefore, that death is not what so many people suppose it to be: the sudden termination of all so-called earthly activity—regarding death in no sense in the light of an abrupt ending either to mental pursuit or to the desires of the heart—we do not expect in the realm of spirit to come in contact only with infallible oracles who can inspire the world to the loftiest deeds of heroism or to the accomplishment of the greatest and noblest designs; on the contrary, we expect to have this lesson taught us by constant spiritual communion that "As the tree falls so shall it lie"; that "where the tree falls there shall it lie"; whether it fall to the North or to the South, to the East or to the West, whether it fall in the young beauty of the sapling or in the full-blown splendor of the perfected tree, whether it fall in a condition of perfect health and vigor or in any way maimed and imperfect, as it falls so does it lie, for there and in that condition does it begin those transformations, which, going on perhaps forever and forever, can only start from that point where the mind was found at the moment when what is termed death overtook the spirit and terminated its career on earth.

Many orthodox Christians have so long been accustomed to misinterpret the similes of scripture that instead of conforming their interpretation to nature and allowing the images to speak for themselves, they argue an impossible deduction from a very simple illustration. No one has ever seen a tree remain unchanged year after year and century after century: no one has ever seen a fallen tree lying by the banks of a river or out in a forest subject to no change or decay; but, on the other hand, after a while the tree is completely changed in its form; all there was of it has been absorbed into the earth or has evaporated into the air; and while the tree began to change in that place, and its transformations started from that condition wherein it fell, there never was a tree that remained in the condition and in the place where it fell even for a century, to say nothing of forever. The very similes which have been continually employed as arguing against progression in the life beyond, and an infinite diversity in the states and conditions of spirit-life, in reality were intended to signify the very opposite of what commentators and interpreters have argued from them.

In every age of the world the great simple and natural truth has been revealed to man, that the human spirit in the body and the human spirit out of the body are not only near neighbors, but are identical in their amenability to the immutable laws of growth and expansion. We find that every desire or endeavor to make a distinction where none naturally exists, to create a difference where there is none in reality, between the friend on earth and the spirit friend, leads to specious forms of idolatry, sends people forward on ridiculous errands, and lifts them up with the false belief that they are specially great and wonderful instruments of heaven, as other people are not, and often makes them believe that the highest spirits named in some illustrious literature are forever by their side; whereas, spiritual communion in and of itself, divested of all unnatural accretions, means no more than this: that we continue to remain in the family in which we now are; and though we are certain there are many people who are thoroughly sincere, perfectly conscientious in their beliefs—and we would not say one unkind or harsh word concerning them, or endeavor to take from them any consolation which they receive from their peculiar belief in a certain kind of spiritual communion—yet we would urge all investigators not to be so much carried away as they usually are by grandiloquent utterances, or by great promises and high-sounding names.

It is true that all have a great and holy work to do, all have a mission in life. It is true that no one came into the world by accident; every one has a vocation, and should endeavor to make his calling and election sure; but while it is a great truth that not one of you goes through the world alone, unattended by angel legions, a great cloud of witnesses surround you all, and you all have a niche to fill in the great temple of the universe; while it is perfectly true in the larger sense that you all have some great and holy mission to fulfill, it is not true in the smaller sense that Miss Smith has an important mission in life while Miss Brown has not, one's mission being in no sense so very much greater and more important than another's, even though Mr. Jones may be called by the angel world to do a work for humanity that Mr. White can never accomplish. It is simply universally true that every individual has his own work to do and his own inspiration to follow; but that tendency of the human mind to rejoice in being flattered, that tendency in human fancy to set one's self upon a pedestal, feeling one is called to do something greater and more beautiful than any other person, is a very unhappy and a very unfortunate state in which many persons are found.

What we urge upon all inquirers into Spiritualism, upon all persons who sit for spirit communication or who have mediumistic power, is that they value a communication for its intrinsic worth, and not be forever asking who it is that is communicating and what is the name of the spirit. If you are dealing with personal matters, if you desire to receive a communication from your mother or your child, then the giving of a name is often a necessary test of identity. If you go to a circle and are told that some dear friend of yours has a message for you, and the medium is a perfect stranger—no matter whether the word is spoken or written, whether it comes between closed slates or on a ballot, or is uttered through the lips—a name is sometimes a great test of spiritual presence, one which is very satisfactory and helpful to you, as it constitutes a link which binds you in a peculiarly near and affectionate manner to the spiritual world. We do not say you should not rejoice in getting the names of your friends given to you through strangers when you are studying psychological laws and endeavoring to obtain intelligent spirit communication; but what we do say is this: You did not have the personal acquaintance on earth of Jesus Christ and the Apostles; you were not personally acquainted with Solomon, Moses, Elijah and Confucius, and with all those wonderful people who are mentioned so much in spiritual communications, consequently the fact of such names as those being given is no test of spirit identity; it does not proclaim in any special way that the friendships of earth are continued in the life beyond, and there is no added proof of genuineness attached to a communication because it bears any such signature. Consequently we are always pleased when ideas are put forward first; let the question of where they come from be inquired into later on, if at all.

We will make no concession whatever to theological or any other kind of bigotry, to those who would be ashamed to own a truth because they thought it was unpopular, nor would we wish to give countenance to any unworthy spirit of suspicion; but there are a large number of people who are so constituted that if you can give them the spiritual kernel without so much chaff, if you can give them the genuine spiritual communication without wrapping it in so many envelopes, if you can divest it of all unnecessary outward accretions—which disguise rather than reveal truth—though you may think you have given less and the communication is less wonderful, it is far more convincing. We can tell you our own experience, and nothing else, has led us to decidedly assume the attitude that it is most undesirable to try and receive evidences of the presence of great personages, and to seek for very, very wonderful works; judging by the nature of the communications themselves, we have found again and again that those which are practically anonymous are by far the most inspiring in a majority of instances.

We knew a very beautiful lady in New York who was a private medium; the most exquisite poetry was written through her hand—splendid poems, day after day, were written upon a great variety of subjects. Her friends said to her: "Who is your control? It must be some very great poet." The lady answered in a most artless and simple manner: "A few years ago I had a young lady boarding with me to whom I was very much attached; she was very fond of poetry; she passed away very suddenly, and she has regularly inspired me ever since; that young lady, who was once an inmate of my family, writes these poems through me." Those poems were so beautiful, so exquisite in their composition and so refined in their sentiment, that if the name of Byron had been given people would have said: "Byron has improved greatly since he passed into the spirit-world."

In a very, very large number of instances, if a few lines of verse are given it is said to come from some one who had such a reputation on earth as a poet that the claim deters the public from believing there was any inspiration in it, because those lines are not nearly up to the earthly standard.

Now, of course there is a way out of all these difficulties; it may be said that when these great minds were on earth they had their own organisms to work through, and their own organisms were far better adapted to the work in hand than the organisms which they are now endeavoring to manipulate; that it took them a long time to use their own brains perfectly, and now that they are endeavoring to work through others they find themselves at a great disadvantage. Of course this is reasonable enough, and may often be the case; but another great point that ought to be raised in all such instances is, that these very individuals who have been singled out as so great and wonderful upon the earth were not, in reality, so much greater than others as they are supposed to have been; and what is more, they were not really the sole authors of the works which have borne their names. Homer's Iliad is one of the most magnificent poetical compositions on earth, but no scholar to day believes that a single Greek poet by the name of Homer wrote the entire Iliad. The Iliad was the production of a period, and instead of giving credit to one man as its sole author, we cannot doubt that it should be regarded as a result of the poetic inspirations of the period. Now, it does not detract from the beauty of the Iliad as a classical poem to take this view of it; it remains as great as it ever was, for it has an intrinsic value all its own. To day there are serious questions as to whether the plays of Shakspeare were all written by him, it being conceded in many quarters that Lord Bacon and others may have had a great deal to do with the Shakspearian productions; but the plays themselves are just as great—and always will be—as though a man named William Shakspeare wrote every word of them; you will not enjoy them any the less the next time you hear and see them acted upon the stage. It is not a question of where they came from or when they were written, but solely of what they are intrinsically worth, which determines their value.

So with the entire Bible, with all its sacred literature. You cannot in the present state of creedal controversy declare that Moses wrote all the Pentateuch; indeed, there are valid reasons for assuming that he did not write more than a small portion, if he wrote any of it. The books containing the Mosaic law are certainly not five books written by the hand of Moses; and while it is utterly impossible to decide what words in the gospels were uttered by Jesus of Nazareth, while even a cloud of doubt rests over the personality of Christ altogether, and there are now many scholars who are not prepared to affirm positively whether Jesus ever lived or not, every word in the Mosaic law, every precept in the gospels contains just as much truth, is just as valuable and edifying as if we knew exactly where it came from and who wrote it—as valuable as though we had been on the spot and were witnesses to every utterance and writing. What does it matter to us whether the ten commandments were given thirty-one hundred years ago from the top of Mount Sinai, or whether they were known to the ancient Atlantians and to the pre-historic races which inhabited Central America before some great cataclysm had changed the positions of land and water upon the globe? What does it matter whether the reputed sayings of Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount were uttered two thousand years ago, or whether they were uttered in ancient temples of the antediluvian world whose ruins have long rested under the bed of the ocean? The commandments are no less binding, and the gospels no less inspired. Moral truth is no less sublime because its history is lost sight of; it can be of no greater value because we know the day and the hour when it was first delivered to the world, the personality through whom utterance was given to it, and the circumstances which attended its proclamation! If we can rise from the lower to the higher level of thought, and, instead of bowing down to antecedents, judge of the jewel by its own worth, we shall not be deceived any longer by imitations. But, unfortunately, in the minds of a great many people the inquiry is not what is said, but who said it. And does not this apply to agnostics as well as Christians? A Christian will accept anything on the alleged authority of Jesus, or if it is in the Bible, but many and many an agnostic will accept any statement on the say-so of Tyndall, Huxley, Darwin or Spencer. If we set up these modern idols in the scientific world and bow down to them as authorities, we are just as guilty of superstition and idolatry as though we bowed to the dictum of the old prophets. If we make of a modern scientist a lord and ruler, and allow him to decide everything for us, and then foolishly speak about what science says, when all we mean is what a certain individual says, we shall fall into just as many difficulties and be just as superstitious as ever were the ancients whose superstitions we affect to despise. Unfortunately there are very few original thinkers in the world; unfortunately, also, there are very few independent minds, very few people who will appeal directly to God or directly to Nature, who will interrogate the universe and stand up in the royalty of their own manhood and womanhood and acknowledge that God and truth are as near to them as to any so-called authority.

As long as we allow the adoration of persons and the adoration of books, the works of modern scientists and philosophers, we create fetiches as much as ever the Bibles of antiquity have become objects of fetish adoration; just as surely do we set up new idols and bow down to new graven images, when we quote authorities forever, as much as though we were to confine ourselves to beliefs of the most unwarrantable character that have come to us from the past. Why not be free, why not enter so fully into the liberty of the spirit that we can hear everything and read everything, and then allow our own moral sense and highest judgment to discriminate between the chaff and the wheat, between the precious and the vile? Why not go fearlessly into the presence of the mightiest intellect and the meanest? Why not read books hoary with age and those yet moist from the printing-press with equal respect? Why not listen to the words of those universally admired and also of those who in solitary hiding-places, living apart from men, are called recluses or even "cranks," and pay equal deference to all; acknowledge your bootblack and your laundryman as being possibly as near to God as any ancient prophet or modern scribe? And when you allow every word that is spoken, every message that is given, every page that is written, be it ancient or modern, be it couched in elegant phraseology or draped in the humblest form of words, to appeal to your own conscience and reason, and assume a reasonable attitude with regard to all, you will then lay upon the shelf and remain non-committal toward that which does not convince your spirit as yet, and gladly accept what feeds you of the bread of truth, no matter where it may have been baked or by whom outwardly presented. When in this attitude we rise forever superior to a blind idolatry of persons; and not only do we protest against past superstition, but we protest with equal vigor against that foolish idolatry in the agnostic world which sets up a few modern authorities and calls upon the world to bow down and worship them as foolishly as ever the ancients worshiped the golden calf or a golden image set up by an impious king. If we continue to bow down to personal minds, if we allow representative individuals to become the sole leaders of thought and of opinion, if we dare not stand up for our own divine manhood and womanhood, we shall never receive the highest revelation. And if we think that something is any the better because uttered by an illustrious or popular person, or any the worse because it comes through the impression of a street urchin, we shall never be in a condition to deliver ourselves from the bonds of that mesmeric control which holds the majority of people in the leading-strings of fashion, and compels them to bow at any idol-shrine, because the popular voice calls them to that shrine to worship. People who follow the popular idol of the hour are as fickle as the winds; they change with the weather-cock, and are but barometers or registers at best, as at every change in the temperature or condition of the weather they can be pressed into the service of the greatest reform, provided a good and noble man is the fashion for the time, or they may be dragged to the level of the greatest folly and even sin and be taken in by the meanest swindler, provided that swindler or impostor is at the top of the social ladder for the time being. Persons who do not use their own reason, who try instead to use the reason of somebody else, who do not use their own conscience but try to be guided by the moral sense of some one else, who believe that God makes a revelation to some other people but not to them, will never come into that living knowledge of truth where they will be able to appreciate the full dignity and power of the words of Jesus: "If I say the truth why do ye not believe me?"

The highest grandeur and dignity of the character of Jesus, as portrayed in the Gospels, consisted in this: that he did not stand before the world and say: "I am God, and you will go to hell if you do not believe it"; he did not say: "I am the Divine Being, and unless you believe I am the second person of the Blessed Trinity your soul is in danger"; nothing of the kind. Jesus appealed to the divine sense in man; he spoke words of truth, and he knew when man was willing to listen to the divine word that he had the capacity within himself for understanding it; therefore he said: "If I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?" What was the meaning of this? If I say what you know and feel inwardly to be the truth, if I make an appeal to your conscience, if there is a living monitor within you that bears witness to my spirit, which is in harmony with the spirit of the truth uttered through me, why not believe me? why allow prejudice, pride, fashion, or any hope or fear of the world's praise or condemnation, to prevent you from acknowledging truth? If any one had turned to Jesus and said: "I do not think what you say is true; it may be true, but I do not understand it as truth," do you think Jesus would have occupied the position of the charlatan and said: "You must believe it, because I say it." No, he would have argued with such person—not reprimanded; and even might have gone so far as to perform what might be called a "miracle" to produce conviction. He would have worked with the understanding of the critic, and spared neither time nor energy in making the matter plain to him, but never would have asked any one to accept anything upon his verbal authority. When the disciples of John came to the disciples of Jesus to inquire as to the dignity of their Master, did Jesus point to any authority other than that of practically demonstrated good? He said, in effect, My system, my teaching, heals the sick; casts out devils—that is, puts down immoralities and makes the world more virtuous; blind eyes are opened, deaf ears hear, the lame walk; you can therefore see for yourselves the blessed and beneficial effect of my teachings. For that reason, and for that reason only, you are called upon to acknowledge what I teach as truth.

There was a direct appeal to human understanding, to human intelligence, as well as to conscience, or the moral sense.

The entire question resolves itself into this: If there is anything marvelous or mysterious occurring, if there is any wonder connected with the source whence something proceeds, if sometimes great promises are made involving great predictions, and you feel that while they do not contradict your reason they very, very far transcend it; if statements are made to you which you can neither verify nor disprove because they are beyond and above your ken, how should you judge of the sources whence they emanate?

Judge of what is beyond your present means of investigation by the tone and tenor of what is within the limits of your investigation. We should say in every instance that the amount of truth that is being put forward anywhere, under any circumstances, may be judged by the effects upon the lives of those who come under its influence in every individual case. If you ask how you shall decide whether a spiritual being who manifests to you comes from above or from below, if you desire to try the spirits and prove whether they are of God, whether you shall accept the advice which comes from a spiritual source or refuse to admit it, judge it by the influence which comes with it and its effect upon your life. All those old communications with the prefix: 'Thus saith the Lord," which when followed resulted in error, havoc and misery, were communications which would never have come to the house of Israel if it had not been for idolatries, backsliding and mammon-worship. Many times "Thus saith the Lord" sanctioned murder, when the commandment had been already given: "Thou shalt not kill." "Thus saith the Lord" put to death innocent women and children who were taken prisoners in war. It would, in many such cases, have been more appropriate if the prefix had been "Thus saith the devil." When the people were demoralized they could not discriminate between the voice of truth and the voice of false gods, because they themselves were sunk in immorality and idolatry, because they had descended to a brutal plane of thought and action, and by their own depravity had beclouded their moral sense; they were ready to accept anything as coming from a higher world, provided there was something marvelous or mysterious about it. Was not the magical element, the mere miraculous theory, completely shown up in the account of the plagues of Egypt, when the magicians and soothsayers of the wicked Pharaoh endeavored to multiply frogs and lice? They accomplished it just as readily as did Moses; they could imitate the magic of Moses perfectly. But how did Moses show his superiority to the Egyptian soothsayers who sanctioned the wicked practices of the tyrant of that day? Moses could remove the plagues, and they could but intensify them. Moses could clear the land of frogs; he could cause the boils to disappear from the bodies of the afflicted. Virtue and health were manifested when divine power worked through a truly inspired leader. But as long as Moses was playing magician and working miracles, and that seemed to be all the power he had, the magicians of the court of Pharaoh could duplicate the wonders he performed, and put in their pleas for equality with the representative of divine power.

In every age of the world the same thing has occurred, and if any Christian says Christianity is supported by miracles, and the miracles are incontestable, then there is no evidence that Christianity is not "the devil's" religion; but if, on the other hand, there is a spiritual power, a wealth of truth, a sound moral influence exerted in its teachings, and by those who harmonize with its teachings; if there is a power accompanying all wonders, to uplift, redeem and save humanity, then the Christian religion rests forever sure upon the foundation of its moral excellence, while its miraculous side is only an accommodation to the as yet childish condition of a large number of people who have to be reached through the senses at first, because they have not as yet so fully developed their inner perception that they can do without sensuous demonstrations.

"Try the spirits, whether they be of God." Does that simply mean that you should ask them who they are? or see whether they can do something curious and inexplicable which physical scientists will attribute to some unknown force in Nature, which they will also probably pronounce unknowable? Does it mean that you must find out whether they really were some great and renowned people of old? No; but their communication must carry its own spiritual influence with it that appeals to your spiritual nature. You do not want any other evidence that a bird is a sweet singer than that you hear it sing sweetly; you do not need any other evidence of the fragrance of a flower than that you inhale its perfume; shut yourself in a dark room and hear the song of a canary, and you do not need to see the color of its plumage; its voice appeals to you in the dark quite effectually; you can judge of the bird by its song and the flower by its perfume.

And when there comes to you from an invisible realm a messenger whom you do not see, when words fall upon your inward ear and a vision lights upon your interior eye, when you feel a hand laid upon you in the darkness and you inquire: "Is this from above or from below?" and there floods your mind along with the phenomenon a spiritual evidence which touches the deepest springs of your being; if you are aroused to some height of nobility and benevolence by the influence thrown upon you; if a communication humbles your pride, increases your charity, gives you a deeper and diviner sense of justice, if it sends you out into the world determined to do more to help humanity than you have ever done before, and if there is a thrill of divine response within you, then you can judge truly of the divinity of the message and the messenger by the spiritual influence that you feel inwardly. In every instance, then, let us judge by the spiritual power and influence that convinces us. When we apply the inward test, we can say to every spirit who approaches: "I can know of you by the influence you exert upon me; can you touch my moral nature and elevate me to a diviner plane, or can you not?" We should judge of the sincerity, truthfulness and genuineness of every communication received, without caring, perhaps, to know where it came from, or by whom it was delivered, by the influence it leaves upon the individuals whom it reaches and impresses.

We have been in meetings where people were gathered together in the name of truth, humbly desiring an outpouring of the spirit, and we have been in places where there seemed to be little expectation or thought, but where the spirit of truth undoubtedly came; old quarrels were ended, the stingy became benevolent, the hard-hearted were melted to tears, wrongs were buried, friendships were formed, and the angel of truth showed its presence by these results.

If we insist upon applying a moral rather than an external or sensuous test we can never be deceived, for whatever opportunity there may be for counterfeiting or masquerading on the external plane, there can be no counterfeit on the spiritual. A flower if it is withered and dead and in stagnant water, cannot by any manner of means give forth a sweet odor. A bird that has not the power of song cannot warble sweet melodies. In the spiritual world flowers that are not fresh and pure, that do not come from heavenly bowers, cannot breathe forth the fragrance of beauty and love! Unclean spirit-birds—which are not birds of paradise—cannot imitate the note of the songsters of the higher spheres.

To place ourselves forever beyond the reach of deception is to so far cultivate our own moral sense that the atmosphere of deception being foreign to us, we detect it at once, and having outgrown the condition in which we can even wish to deceive or do a wrong, we shall be beyond the power of any to make us the victims of deception.

In response to numerous interrogations on the subject, we state it as our unalterable conviction that all who investigate Spiritualism in any of its phases under proper moral conditions with a sincere desire to arrive at truth, with benevolent dispositions toward their neighbors, will ere long be blessed with authentic revelations from the life beyond, far exceeding all past outpourings.

Written for the Banner of Light.

OH! BEAUTIFUL ANGEL DEATH.

BY WM. P. MOONE.

Oh! beautiful angel Death!
No longer of Terrors the King;
For knowledge surpassing all Faith
Has robbed thee—for us—of thy sting.

Oh, Grave! no longer thy gloom
Can fright us nor fill us with dread;
Thou canst but the casket entomb,
Whence the jewel immortal has fled.

Oh, Death! thy sting is no more!
Oh, Grave! thy victory is lost!
For back from the "evergreen shore"
Come friends who before us have crossed;

With forms that in earth-life they wore,
O, others which like them appear,
They clothe themselves, e'en as of yore
Did Jesus, whom Christians revere.

These spirits returning in love,
Our minds to relieve from all fear,
Tell us that in heaven above
We shall mingle with them in their sphere;

Shall see them and know them again,
And live in their sight as of yore,
And the beautiful lands of the blest
In rapture with them shall explore.

And ever our joys shall increase,
And ever our souls shall expand,
To fill with a knowledge and peace—
Which mortals cannot understand.

New Publications.

THE BIBLE OF NATURE; or, The Principles of Secularism. A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. By Felix L. Oswald. 12mo, cloth, pp. 240. New York: The Truth Seeker Company.

It is a no less true than terrorizing picture that the author gives in his introduction of the sanguinary contests through which in past ages those who saw the light were forced to encounter with the hosts of darkness; and these even in our own day have to be engaged in by those who hail with joy and accept with deep feelings of thankfulness the present revelations of truth from a higher life. This writer says of those that are justly termed "the dark ages": "Every torch bearer was persecuted as an enemy of the human race. From the tenth to the end of the sixteenth century, three million 'heretics,' i. e., scholars and free inquirers, had to expiate their love of truth in the flames of the stake." He portrays the religion of the future as one that "will preach the gospel of redemption by reason by science, and by conformity to the laws of our health protecting instincts." "Its teachings will," he says, "reconcile instinct and precept, and make Nature the ally of education." To hasten the development of such condition is the purpose of this book, and though the author fails to see the light that we see, he is accomplishing a good work in removing the obstacles that have long lain at the feet of those who, but for them, would have advanced in a knowledge of the truth, and will now, by his help, be able to do so.

THE REIGN OF THE STOICS. Their History, Religion, Philosophy, Maxims of Self-Control, Self-Culture, Benevolence and Justice, With Citations on Each Page of Authors Quoted. By Frederic May Hillard. 12 no, cloth, pp. 248. New York: Charles P. Somerby, 28 Lafayette Place.

So much is said and so little known among the generality of readers, of the Stoics, their history and their literature, that this volume, giving details of the one and choice citations from the other, will prove a welcome acquisition to the library of every thinker. The lives and teachings of the Stoic philosophers, replete with all that is heroic, noble and pure, are herein made familiar and placed within reach of all. The title of the book possibly has reference only to the period of the School of Stoics, over three hundred years anterior and about two hundred years subsequent to the birth of Christ, but the reign of the truths they enunciated are coeval with eternity.

THE BOSTON TEA-PARTY, and Other Stories of the American Revolution, Relating Many Daring Deeds of the Old Heroes. Revised and Adapted by Henry C. Watson. 16mo, boards, pp. 222. Illustrated. Boston: Lee & Shepard.

The third of a series of popular classics for home and school. The story of the famous "tea party" is well told, and following it are anecdotes of personal daring, descriptions of men and places, fragments of history, and accounts of campaigns that will interest and instruct youthful readers, and awaken a desire to learn more of the events which shaped the formation of our Union.

SAKYA BUDDHA: A Versified, Annotated Narrative of His Life and Teachings; with an Excursus, Containing Citations from the Dnammapada, or Buddhist Canon. By E. D. Root, an American Buddhist. 12 no, cloth, pp. 171. New York: The Truth-Seeker Co.

A new edition of a work we noticed upon its first appearance, a delineation in verse of the life-work, ethics and aphorisms "embosomed in the canonical record" of Buddha.

THE UNIVERSE ANALYZED. By John R. Kelso, A. M. 16mo, cloth, pp. 167. New York: The Truth Seeker Company.

Mr. Kelso is the author of several books of a liberal and progressive class, among them one in defense of Spiritualism. In this new volume he undertakes to demonstrate that the universe is eternal in its existence, and self-sustaining; hence, there has never been, except as an outcome of gross ignorance, any necessity for the assumption of a special creation or a special creator. In pursuing his task he claims to have stepped from the beaten track usually followed by writers on the same theme, and to have advanced several new doctrines founded upon important discoveries made by him in the realms of science. The supposed originality of these will attract readers who are hungering for something new, and each for himself can decide upon their value as stepping-stones to loftier planes of truth than those they now stand upon.

THE WORK OF ELECTRICITY IN NATURE. A Discussion of all the Physical Sciences. By H. B. Philbrook. 8vo, cloth, pp. 304. New York: H. B. Philbrook.

This volume presents some rather peculiar and original views upon the offices of electricity in the human body, the growth of plants, the origin of species, the earth and the solar system, the philosophy of storms and seasons, and the evidences of character. In this last treatise the reader is informed "how to acquire peace and money."

Sunset.

"At eventide there shall be light!"

Despair not, weary traveler through life's dark maze, the promise is there and has been performed to millions before thee, and realized by them. Have but sufficient faith to follow the glimmer of light which can be traced like a thread of gold through the thickest mist.

Oh! the glorious stillness of eventide, the gorgeous tints of sunset—how soothing and peace-giving are they, and how blest are those who have the capacity of enjoying them; but happy, thrice happy, those who have realized the splendor of the noontide, and borne the burden and heat of the day; they can doubly appreciate the refreshing calmness of the even, and quit their physical body as easily as a child sleepeth, then awake over the threshold in the beauteous morn of spirit-life.

Oh! for more of that knowledge which is salvation, that science which will teach us how best to assimilate ourselves to Nature's world, the world of Causes; to live in accord with our surroundings, to banish discord from our midst, and to dwell, if not in unison, at least in harmony. It is not, however, enough to learn, to receive that knowledge; when we have learned, we must obey. Once having obtained cognizance of a fact, we must, as it were, extract from that fact whatever wisdom it contains, and apply it to our use.

It does not suffice to know of a remedy if we do not apply it to the disease. If we continue to disregard the precepts which we evolve from our every-day experience, our senses will eventually become so blunted that we will be unable to grasp a new fragment of truth, or add another atom of light to our store.

Jersey, England. EXCELSIOR.

All True Spiritualists,

Wherever Located,

SHOULD NOT ONLY

SUBSCRIBE

FOR THE

BANNER OF LIGHT,

THE BEST

Family Paper

In the World!

But make it a point to induce all liberal-minded people to become Subscribers.

It contains Original Essays; Original Stories; Verbatim Reports of Grand Lectures; Answers to Questions by Invisible Intelligences of the Greatest Interest to the World at Large; Characteristic Messages from Dearnated Individuals to their Friends and Relatives in the Earth-Life; Editorials on a Great Variety of Subjects; Current Events; Highly Interesting Correspondence from all over the Country, Etc., Etc.

Our Premium List,

Which entitles each Subscriber to an Interesting Book or a Fine Engraving,

Is also a Strong Inducement for the People to Subscribe.

☞ As THE BANNER is sold at nearly all the Periodical Depots in the United States, and has a wide circulation in foreign countries, it is a capital avenue through which merchants and others can reach customers. REMEMBER THIS FACT!

[From the Florida Agriculturist.]

Yellow Fever.

A lady correspondent sends us the following treatment for yellow fever:

SYMPTOMS OF YELLOW FEVER.

Headache, pain in the back and bones, sometimes a slight shivering at first, the face flushed, eyes inflamed and often bloodshot, pulse full and quick, skin dry and feverish. Sometimes sickness of the stomach, but not often in the beginning of the disease.

TREATMENT.

As soon as the above symptoms are felt, get to bed as quickly as possible. Cover with blankets; put a cup full of mustard in a foot-tub of hot water; put it in the bed under the clothes—patient lying on the back. Keep the feet in it fifteen minutes. Then give a simple dose of medicine (citrate of magnesia); a bottle may be taken at an interval of one or two hours.

Keep up a gentle perspiration as long as the fever lasts.

If the skin becomes dry, give another foot-bath. Keep the patient quiet and free from excitement. Watch closely and keep the bed-clothes on. If delirious, keep the clothes wet frequently with ice-water. Let the drink be ice-water or iced lemonade; but do not give enough to disturb the stomach. Do not give a purgative after the first day; if the bowels do not act, use enemas. By all means keep the patient quiet. The fever never entirely subsides before seventy-two hours from the time it comes on. At the end of that time there is almost always nausea, but prevent vomiting by a mustard plaster on the chest. Ice pounded like snow is grateful to the patient. If weak, when the fever goes off, a teaspoonful of good spirits in a little sugar and water may be given every half hour. One or two grains of quinine may also be given with good tonic effect. While the fever lasts for the first three days give no food. After the fever has gone, and stomach quiet—that is about the fourth or fifth day—and there is no more relapse, food may be given of the lightest kind, and in small quantities, say beef tea or chicken tea, rice gruel, corn-starch, a little tea, toast, etc.

Do not get up until after the eighth day, no matter how well you feel, for a relapse is apt to prove fatal. One suffers so little in yellow fever that they think they are well when they are not. Good nursing is more potent than medicine. If taken in time it is easily managed.

Original Essays.

"SPIRITUALISM AND LIKE DELUSIONS."

BY E. W. CAPRON.

Your remarks of July 21st, Mr. Editor, upon a recently published article of Dr. Hamilton, "Spiritualism and Like Delusions" (in The American Magazine), constituted a full and just reply to that emanation of ignorance or something worse. It hardly needed so much notice for old workers in the ranks of Spiritualism; but there is unfortunately a very numerous class of Spiritualists who are ignorant of the first manifestations of Modern Spiritualism in this country, as well as their existence from the earliest date we have of man upon the earth, however rare their occurrence.

The writer of that article gives us the information that "the first history of which the world has any knowledge is that of the disturbances heard in the family of John Wesley." Now, it should be told for his information, as well as thousands of Spiritualists who constantly quote John Wesley as hearing the strange sounds and witnessing the strange occurrences at Epworth, that he never heard the sounds at all; that he was only thirteen years old when they occurred, and was many miles away during the whole time of the excitement, and the only knowledge he had of the disturbances was by letters from the family at home. Here is his own statement of the affair:

"When I was very young, I heard several letters read, wrote to my elder brother by my father, giving an account of strange disturbances which were in his house at Epworth, Lincolnshire. When I went down thither, in 1720, I carefully inquired into the particulars."

John was, during his life, a believer in Spiritualism, by whatever name they might call it. In this belief he lived and died, and we have never seen a Methodist, or heard one, or seen a Methodist publication denounce him as a fool or a fanatic for his belief, or making any pretence that he only had intercourse with the devil, or that his father had, when the facts were mentioned. He distinctly states in his writings to being a witness to both kinds of manifestations himself. Then this historical critic (?) should know, and would, if he had read the history of the disturbances in the Wesley family, that in February, 1750—thirty-four years after they had ceased with other members of the family—Emily, one of the family, writes to her brother John as follows:

"Another thing is that wonderful thing called (by us) a fly. You won't laugh at me for being superstitious if I tell you how certainly that something calls on me against any extraordinary new affliction, but so little is known of the invisible world that I at least am not able to judge whether it is a friendly or an evil spirit."

So much for this writer's profound reading of history.

Then he is equally unfortunate about his history of the Fox family. The house, he intimates, was in an old graveyard, which would account for the finding of anything indicating the burial of a body there; but I can state to him that the house is one of the early built tenements of that region, and there is no graveyard nearer than two miles, unless it be where some family have used a spot of their own farm for their own family. I know every inch of the ground, and with the many stories invented with regard to them, this is the last and silliest. He may safely boast of something original in his article, for that is the first we have heard of such a story.

So of the story that "the communication proved to be wholly false." It is strange where he has been, or what he has been reading of the history of the last thirty or forty years. It is a wonder that he had not got hold of some of the Burr toe-snapology. The public investigation at Rochester forever settled all that kind of stuff. It is rather surprising that the erudite writer of that article had not told about the old creaky bedstead that the Auburn Advertiser, when edited by Henry Montgomery, told about. It would have been as sensible and as true as what he did say.

The rappings and other manifestations through the Fox girls, or through the Wesley family, were by no means the beginning of spiritual manifestations. It was only a commencement in this country of an earnest effort on the part of the spirits to get into better communication with this sphere of existence than had been allowed in the Christian world for many hundred years, perhaps if ever. It was seen by those ever watchful guides of the doings of humanity that here in America was an opportunity to open communication with this world, and have a proper degree of attention given to it. This country, where freedom of thought had attained a growth and a hold that no other country had reached, was the spot where the demonstrations could be produced and given to the world; all the old religious systems could not prevail against them, and so they came in spite of the priest and the bigot, and all their combined powers will not prevail to destroy them.

Let us go back a little, for the benefit of this knowing writer, who thinks John Wesley the first one who heard of anything beyond our present state of existence. In the year 371 of the Christian era, some Greeks living among the Romans had found enough Spiritualism in the course of their investigations to satisfy them that there could be a communication between the two spheres. They, in accordance with the superstitions of the times, made very elaborate preparations to get answers by the alphabet. They procured a small table, which they had caused to be built of the form of the Delphic Tripod, wood of laurel, and with solemn auspices, and muttered over it spells and manipulations, placed it in the center of the house, which had also been consecrated with great ceremony and purified with Arabian incense. A round dish, composed of various metallic substances, was placed on this table, a silken cord attached to the wall above and having a ring at the end, the dish being surrounded by the letters of the Greek alphabet. With much ceremony then they asked who would be the next emperor, and the answer came thus: "Theod——" when some of the astonished witnesses exclaimed: "Theodorus," being satisfied that they had gained the correct information. Valens had this distinguished citizen put to death, as his jealousy was aroused, but his successor was Theodosius. So the prediction proved true. Valens also put to death all concerned in thus obtaining the message from the spirits. This wonderful writer, who assumes to know so much about "Spiritualism and Like Delusions," will find in Gibbons's History of Rome this case recorded at greater length, and the author of that work remarks: "This transaction is confirmed by the early church historians, Socrates, Scholasticus, Sozomene, etc., who add that Valens put to death many distinguished men whose names commenced with Theod." He will find, too, hundreds of cases of spiritual manifestations before that time, and from that time to this.

235 East 27th street, New York.

HEREDITARY CRIMINALITY.

The terrible waves of crime that from time to time sweep over our country, causing humanity to stand aghast at the horrid spectacle, and the subject of heredity as a prolific cause thereof, are worthy of study and attention.

As this seems to be an age of intensified and brutal criminality, and while humanitarians and philanthropists are devising ways and means to punish and reform offenders, is it not well to give attention to the cause, in order that at no distant day a check may be put upon the tendency to crimes?

Ordinarily hereditary tendencies to crime and early education in vice have done their share in the work of swelling the criminal record; but there is another cause that is probably greater than these, though it is also chargeable to hereditary descent and must be considered within that category. I refer to the inordinate exercise of sexual appetency in men. The father not only transmits this untoward characteristic to his son, but through this thousands of children are born into the world with unwilling mothers. Such mothers are in a spirit of rebellion during the entire period of gestation. If they do not seek "professional" relief, they go about daily with the disposition to do so—with murder in their hearts. It is only a law of nature that this disposition to murder shall be implanted in the unborn child. And thus the child inherits not only the undue salacious tendency of the father but the disposition to murder implanted by the mother.

After propagating the species in this manner for a few ages—or after even a small portion of the species have been brought into being in this manner during a few ages, what ought we to expect? Is it any wonder, when we consider how long this state of affairs has had existence, that fiendish murders, and other crimes still more fiendish, are of daily occurrence?

It will not do to hold the mother responsible for this state of things. Not by any manner of means. The responsible party is the man. Is it not about time that woman should be elevated to that equality of personal rights and privileges, not only in the home and in the married relation, but also in all the other relations of life, to which she is justly and by nature entitled? When women are granted this position their spiritual natures will be uplifted as never before, and a race of men and women not only morally purer and better, but physically stronger and more perfect, will be evolved.

M. D HAMILTON.

A Rich Woman.

THE "COUNTESS OF MONTE CRISTO" IN SOUTH AMERICA

(From "The Capitals of Spanish America," by William Eleroy Curtis.)

The Croesus of South America is a woman, Doña Isadora Cousino of Santiago, Chili, and there are few men or women in the world richer than she. There is no end to her money and no limit to her extravagance, and the people call her the Countess of Monte Cristo. She traces her ancestry back to the days of the Conquest. She has millions of acres of land, millions of money, flocks and herds that are numbered by the hundreds of thousands, coal, copper and silver mines, acres of real estate in the cities of Santiago and Valparaiso, a fleet of iron steamships, smelting works, a railroad, and various other trifles in the way of productive property, which yield her an income of several millions a year that she tries very hard to spend, and under the circumstances succeeds as well as could be expected.

From her coal mines alone Señora Cousino has an income of $80,000 a month; and there is no reason why this should not be perpetual, as they are the only source in South America from which fuel can be obtained, and those who do not buy of her have to import their coal from Great Britain. She has a fleet of eight iron steamships, of capacities varying from two thousand to thirty-six hundred tons.

Although Lota is only a mining town, as dirty and smoky as any of its counterparts in Pennsylvania, it is the widow's favorite place of residence, and she is now building a mansion that will cost at least $1,000,000. The architect and chief builder are Frenchmen, whom she imported from Paris, and much of the material is also imported.

Not long ago she shipped a cargo of hides and wool in one of her own steamers to Bordeaux, and it is to return laden with building supplies for this mansion. She herself has no time to go across the sea, but the captain of her ship will bring with him decorators and designers, and upholstery men, who will finish the interior of her mansion regardless of expense.

The structure stands in the centre of what is undoubtedly the finest private park in the world—an area of two hundred and fifty acres of land laid out in the most elaborate manner, containing statuary, fountains, caves, cascades and no end of beautiful trees and plants. The improvement of the natural beauty of the place is said to have cost Señora Cousino nearly $1,000,000, and she has a force of thirty gardeners constantly at work. The superintendent is a Scotchman, and he informed me that his orders were to make the place a paradise, without regard to cost. She gives employment to three or four hundred men, all organized under the direction of superintendents, most of whom are Scotchmen. She has in her employ at "Macul" one American, whose business is that of a general farmer; but his time is mostly occupied in teaching the natives how to operate labor-saving agricultural machinery. Farming in Chili is conducted very much as it was in Europe in old feudal times, each estate having its retainers, who are given houses or tenements and are paid for the amount of labor they perform. It is said that Señora Cousino can marshal one thousand men from her two farms if she needs them.

Her ability as a manager is remarkable, and she directs every detail, receiving weekly reports from ten or twelve superintendents who have immediate charge of affairs. While she is generous to profligacy, she requires a strict account of every dollar earned or spent upon her vast estates, and is very sharp at driving a bargain. One of her Scotch superintendents told me that there was no use in trying to get ahead of the señora. "You cannot move a stone or stick but she knows it," he said. In addition to her landed property and her mines, she owns much city real estate, from which her rentals amount to several hundred thousand dollars a year. She is also the principal stockholder in the largest bank in Santiago. Not long ago she presented the people of that city with a park of one hundred acres and a racecourse adjoining it.

Fabulous stories of the señora's extravagance are told. A million dollars is a trifle to a woman whose income is so enormous, and there is nothing in the world that she will not buy if she happens to want it. She does not care much for art, but has a collection of diamonds that is very large and valuable, and she sometimes appears loaded down with them. Although a comparatively young woman, being somewhere between forty five and fifty years of age, she declares that she will never marry again; and there is not a man in Chili who has the courage to ask her.

☞ The friends of the late Edward S. Wheeler—and they are numerous all over the country—should circulate freely the Sketch of his Life, that has been carefully prepared by Mr. George A. Bacon, which has been put in convenient pamphlet form by Colby & Rich, Booksellers, No. 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Price 10 cents.

WAITING FOR THE BUGLE.

We wait for the bugle; the night dews are cold,
The limbs of the soldiers feel jaded and old,
The field of our bivouac is windy and bare,
There is lead in our joints, there is frost in our hair,
The future is veiled and its fortunes unknown
As we lie with hushed breath till the bugle is blown.

At the sound of that bugle each comrade shall spring
Like an arrow released from the strain of the string;
The courage, the impulse of youth shall come back
To banish the chill of the drear bivouac,
And sorrows and losses and cares fade away
When that life-giving signal proclaims the new day.

Though the bivouac of age may put ice in our veins,
And no fiber of steel in our sinew remains;
Though the comrades of yesterday's march are not here,
And the sunlight seems pale and the branches are sear—
Though the sound of our cheering dies down to a moan,
We shall find our lost youth when the bugle is blown.
—Thomas Wentworth Higginson, in the Century.

Banner Correspondence.

Iowa.

MOUNT PLEASANT PARK.—A. B. S. writes: "Our Camp is increasing every day, as new comers arrive constantly. We have lovely weather, and all seem to enjoy themselves.

Monday, Aug. 6th, conference meeting in the afternoon.

Tuesday, conference in the forenoon. Dr. Juliette H. Severance was announced to lecture in the afternoon, but she filled her time, by invitation, in answering questions written out by different persons and handed to her. There were so many that she had to be rather brief in her answers, yet great interest was manifested in them, and they led to considerable discussion after the meeting among the people.

Prof. Loveland instituted a class for private instruction in mediumship. His time is from 9 o'clock in the morning until conference. Most of the campers have taken tickets for the whole course of lectures, and are deeply interested in the discussion of the subject.

Wednesday, Aug. 8th, a lecture in the afternoon by W. Hodge. Though a young speaker, his discourse was well received, and gave great promise of efficient work on the rostrum.

In the evening a dance for the campers, and it was well patronized. These camp dances are very enjoyable, many attending them, and the music is most excellent. Next week a leap year dance is to come off; the ladies are already preparing for it by engaging partners, etc.

Thursday, lecture in the morning by Prof. Loveland and the usual conference. Moses Hull spoke in the afternoon in his usual forcible manner. He always interests an audience.

The dancing classes are well patronized, many embracing the opportunity for instruction.

Friday was a little cold and rainy, but the meetings were well attended. Prof. Loveland lectured at the morning conference, and at half-past ten some very interesting experiments were made in the conference by Dr. Treckett and Prof. Loveland, to show the power of magnetism upon paper and other substances.

Warren Chase spoke in the afternoon to very good acceptance. Saturday, Aug. 11th, after Prof. Loveland's morning lecture, the annual meeting of the stockholders was held—at which it was determined to arrange to pay all indebtedness, so that the Association may be free from incumbrance. The meeting continued, with a short intermission for dinner, until the afternoon lecture hour, so a conference was had instead of a lecture.

Dr. J. H. Randall gave a lecture in the evening on "The Labor Problem." It created a great deal of interest.

Sunday, 12th, was a bright and beautiful day. At nine o'clock the Lyceum was called together, and a large share of the campers were in attendance, and many of them took part in the exercises. Many witnessed the exercises at the Lyceum for the first time, and were very much pleased. Warren Chase gave one of his grand lectures at half past ten o'clock; mediums' meeting at one o'clock at the hall. All seemed to be well pleased, many getting good tests.

In the afternoon, at three o'clock, Prof. J. S. Loveland gave one of the best lectures we have had, to a very large audience. Moses Hull spoke in the evening to good satisfaction.

All the tents are full, and the prospects are that the attendance will be as large if not larger than ever before. Harmony prevails all over the camp, and there seem to be good prospects for the camp in the future."

New York.

NEW YORK CITY.—Dora Shaw sends us a copy of a letter in relation to a séance at Mrs. Stoddard-Gray's, received by her from a friend whom she describes as "a woman of large intelligence, keen perceptive faculties, and, better than all, of unswerving truth." From the letter we give the following extracts, not having space for all: "The circle was not large, but very harmonious. The medium had no sooner entered the cabinet and lights extinguished, (for a dark séance is held first,) than noises were heard in all parts of the room, musical instruments were played upon, and rappings in perfect time to the music, and then the materialized forms came and went, in quick succession, each and every one sufficiently illuminated to make themselves visible to all. One tiny child, draped in a gown that trailed upon the floor, came out of the cabinet, and, toddling across the room to a gentleman, was recognized by him as his child. The light was then turned up sufficiently to make every object in the room plainly visible, when a young lady friend I had known intimately in the long ago came, sat down beside me and talked with me several moments. She also recognized a gentleman who sat near me, as an old friend whom she had known in former years. She then bade us good-bye, and, gliding behind a curtained window, disappeared. Instantly thereafter from the same spot emerged another young lady, but of slighter figure than my friend. This spirit came up to the gentleman before mentioned, with extended hands. He welcomed her as an old and dear friend. She led him up to the cabinet and there disappeared. Presently I observed what seemed to be a small scrap of white paper upon the carpet near our feet. I watched it closely as it grew larger each moment and assumed the appearance of a moving mass of drapery. Soon a head appeared, followed by a shapely pair of arms. Then came a body as if through the floor; then a beautiful young girl bounded upon her feet, extending her hands to my friend, the doctor, who welcomed her, calling her his 'daughter.' She led him over to a table standing near the cabinet, and seating herself upon a chair called for pencil and paper, which being furnished, she wrote her father a message, and disappeared within the cabinet. I can give but a brief outline of the marvelous things I witnessed, but I can say this: that were I a skeptic, my own judgment and common sense would convince me that, were the medium ever so willing to deceive the credulous, no auxiliaries could perform the marvelous transformation scenes I witnessed with unprejudiced eyes."

BYRON.—J. W. Seaver sends us an account of the great service rendered to humanity by Dr. Lucinda M. Tuttle, the main details given in which appeared in these columns last week. Mr. Seaver closes by saying: "She has proved herself a true and noble woman, beloved by all who knew her, adorning any of the useful walks, a firm and consistent Spiritualist, who by her inspired utterances and worthy example has done much to commend it to others. Her funeral was attended from her late residence by a very large concourse of people, who assembled to pay a heartfelt tribute of affection to their noble friend and beloved physician. Her funeral oration was delivered by Mr. Lyman C. Howe, of Fredonia, N. Y. It was a glowing tribute, eloquently expressed, which touched many sympathetic hearts, causing tears freely to flow. Thus closes the earth-life of a truly noble woman, whose memory will long remain highly cherished, and an inspiration to many to imitate her heroic example."

Massachusetts.

FALL RIVER.—Isaac M. Rider writes: "At Onset the 31st ult., I called upon Dr. D. J. Stansbury. I took two slates and cleaned them thoroughly. With a crumb of pencil between them they were placed on the table under both my hands, Dr. S. and myself sitting at it opposite each other. A sensation as of a current of electricity began to be felt in my hands and arms. Presently the writing commenced, and in a very short time raps announced the finish, and on opening them I found a communication written to me from a very dear friend who passed away many years ago, signed 'Belle,' in her own handwriting. On my return to my office I compared it with messages received from that spirit, and found the slate-writing to be an almost fac simile."

New Jersey.

JERSEY CITY (West Bergen).—John Tingley writes: "In the BANNER OF LIGHT of June 30th is an article by 'W. H. R.' headed 'True Spirituality,' which to me seems so radiant with the light of truth and the spirit of the true religion that even opposers must feel its power, and Spiritualists should respond to its support.

It is true that the article mentioned contains nothing radically new, and as it stands, must be classed with exhortations thrown out to the public, which, alas! rest too lightly on the mind of the masses to be long remembered; yet it is a gem in spiritual literature, and honorable alike to the writer and the publisher. But I regret that 'W. H. R.' did not sum up his work and show the legitimate result to which his philosophy points. It is to this point that I desire to call attention. The article is a plain and significant answer to the oft repeated call for organization on a broad and comprehensive basis (whatever that means), and refers to M. A. (Oxon), and the editorial commendation of the latter's call for organization. This call, so far as the public knows, is only on the secular plane, which 'W. H. R.' justly characterizes as ropes of sand, and shows clearly that effective organization can arise and grow only from true spirituality as a basis.

From his fourth and fifth paragraphs may be quoted almost verbatim an all-sufficient declaration of principles for such an organization as his forcible reasoning suggests. I may quote it as follows:

'As many Spiritualists have not yet arisen from the intellectual to the spiritual condition, it is plain that we should do all that in us lies to gain that higher and grander development, and through prayerful aspiration seek for that which is highest and holiest. Let us endeavor to infuse more love into our movement, putting away all those qualities that may drag us down. Let us ignore jealousy, scandal, selfishness, and try always to do that which seems right and best; having no thought but to advance those high and holy principles which are the foundation of all religion.'

The way it should be used is by incorporation into present constitutions as follows:

'We, the undersigned, desiring to organize a society for the promotion and cultivation of true spirituality, to the end that greater love, harmony and justice may prevail, do affirm and adopt the above declaration of principles, and that we may make it our rule of life and action, so far as in us lies, we will ever work and pray.'

This is a platform for the world's religion, which, like true history, must be of no sect. It presents no creed and takes no cognizance of beliefs, and asks but one question: Do you desire to join in our efforts to live spiritual lives? If so, that desire, humbly and honestly entertained, qualifies you to begin as a member, and it depends upon you to keep it sacred. Immorality, after joining, will forfeit membership, and true repentance alone can renew it when you ask.

A true member of such a society is a light and blessing to those around him; even though he may not be polished with art or gifted in speech, still he is a preacher of righteousness while his lamp is trimmed and burning, for he stands at his post. God's messengers minister to him; he says, by his position, to the weak and erring: 'Come up higher.' He has done all that he can, and it is enough.

The one who is unwilling to take that position cannot say to the weak and erring, 'Come up higher'; he must say 'go'; and his influence is small. Let no one think he has done all he can for the great cause of humanity until he has taken a position that lays upon him high and holy responsibilities in reference to that cause.

When all Spiritualists will take that stand, it will be the dawn of the world's last and truest religion, that will ultimately envelope the whole earth with a halo of light, and again the angels may sing: 'Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace, good will toward men.'"

Colorado.

DENVER.—"Cyprus" writes: "Mrs. Edith Nickless, of New York, is at present creating a marked interest in the cause of Spiritualism in this city. She entertained a large sized audience at Lincoln Hall on the evening of Aug. 12th, concerning which service the Rocky Mountain News of the next day said, among other things:

'The subject was "Spiritualism as Taught by Jesus and His Apostles." The scripture allusions were correct in every instance, and the discourse was logical and well arranged.

Mrs. Nickless is a fine specimen of womanhood—a little above the medium height, hair black, slightly grey, a fine forehead, black eyes, well molded features, showing strength and purpose in every lineament. When sixteen years of age she was made a member of the Baptist church, and for several years was actively engaged in religious work under that denomination. One day, while sitting alone, the power to hold communion came to her in a very sudden manner. Somebody said the single word "Write." She instinctively procured a pencil and paper, and took a position to do as she was bid. The pencil was taken from her hands and two letters were written. The first was from her mother, who had passed away when she was a little girl eleven months old. The other was in a bold, masculine handwriting, and the signature was "Your Guide."

At the conclusion of her lecture she gave a number of spiritual tests, giving to members of the audience names of friends who had passed away, and described them so that they were easily recognized.'"

Franklin Thorpe also writes in praise of the platform work of Mrs. Nickless. It is, to him, but another evidence that "the power of the spirit world is equal to all emergencies"; and that evidences of every nature in proof of immortal life and the return of the so-called dead, are now being multiplied by the invisibles in their efforts to enlighten mankind.

Kentucky.

MANCHESTER.—David I. Lyttle writes that various events recorded in the Bible, such as the flame in the bush, seen by Moses, the pillar of fire and cloud that led the children of Israel, the chariot and horses of Elijah, the sun that gave light to Joshua, the so-called star that stood over the manger, the resurrected body of Lazarus, the light that shone around Saul on his way to Damascus, were, one and all, spiritual manifestations, and that if they were true—that is, if they actually took place—then Spiritualism is true, and its phenomena are likewise true. In conclusion he says: "God never has and never will condemn his creatures for failing to believe a proposition which is not supported by evidence sufficient to satisfy the mind. I believe that light and truth will expand and intensify till angels will be seen descending and ascending, and all the true teachings of Christ and the apostles be verified."

Michigan.

ALMA.—A. W. Flowers, M. D., writes that he by invitation attended a meeting of mediums in St. Louis, about thirty-eight years ago, at which Thomas Gales Forster was present. As he entered the hall he exhibited every evidence of being under spirit control, and that of a somewhat unusual nature. He walked directly to a table upon which a quantity of paper had been placed, seated himself, and taking a pencil in each hand began to write with both simultaneously. When he had finished he took a seat with the audience, in a quiet manner, greatly in contrast with his previous behavior.

Upon examining the writings, one paper was found to be in verse, the other in prose, the chirography of the two being strikingly dissimilar.

EVANS'S MENTAL CURE, VITAL MAGNETIC CURE.—The so-called Christian Science, or the no-disease theory, is proven to be a mortal error by the philosophy inculcated in the two treatises above mentioned.

The philosophy in the Mental Cure Book illustrates the utilizing of the mind and subtle healing elements, in the form of a self-cure process, and acts as an auxiliary to all modes of eradicating disease extant, and harmonizes the ancient record with the progressive age of to-day. The two books will be sent by mail on receipt of $2.68, by the publishers, Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass.

In Memoriam.

Recently, at the residence of Mr. Keith, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., FELIX THOMAS passed on to higher spheres of action, at an advanced age in physical life.

Mr. Thomas was a marked man in character, also in form. There was not a better known man in Saratoga than he. He held several important offices in the town, in the past, and was respected by all who had dealings or who associated with him. Devotion to principle and justice as he saw them, was his leading trait of character. Money could not tempt him to do an unjust act. He was one of the most advanced thinkers of the age, and was not afraid or ashamed to speak his sentiments, whether they were relished or not. He was a decided and outspoken advocate of medical freedom, and took an active part in defending such constitutional rights of the people. He at one time was summoned to appear before the criminal court to testify that he had employed an "irregular" practitioner in his own case. He stood up manfully and declared that not only had he employed such physician, but that he had been benefited thereby; through his prompt action and that of others in this instance the Judge did not grant an order for the arrest of the practitioner for the "laying on of hands"—the Apostolic mode of eradicating disease!

There are but few men in Saratoga who will be missed so much by visitors as will Mr. Thomas. He was one of the oldest Spiritualists in the country, a constant reader of the BANNER OF LIGHT; of late years he has seldom been seen at the meetings, but his faith never wavered in the fact of spirit-communion.

He leaves a son and daughter, and other relatives and friends, who will sadly miss his genial presence.

A good man has gone home, and the world is the better for his having lived in it. Being positive in nature and general make-up, he will without question continue in his useful work from his new home; and when conditions are granted him will return with blessings to all he can assist in the struggles of earth life. A. S. H.

LOG CABINS were, in the Harrison-Tippecanoe campaign of 1840, erected in the large cities and villages, and used for holding political meetings. Barrels of hard cider were placed in front of the cabins, and the "Log Cabin hard cider campaign of '40" has passed into history as the most enthusiastic of our political contests. Log Cabins have for this reason a permanent place in American history. Warner's Log Cabin Hops and Buchu Remedies and "Tippecanoe" tonic bitters have secured a permanent place because of their excellence.

Passed to Spirit-Life,

From her residence, 125 West Jefferson street, Springfield, Ill., after long years of painful suffering, Mrs. Robert G. Cackley, aged 55 years.

She has long been a firm believer in the power of spirits to communicate with their earth-friends, and was gifted with clairvoyant medial powers for some years past. She leaves a husband and two daughters to mourn her loss, also three sisters: Mrs. G. W. Doolittle, of Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. J. Q. A. Floyd and Mrs. J. F. Pletz, of this city. Her life has been a varied one here. It is to be hoped her three angel children and good angel mother "over there" have met and welcomed her to a happy home in the Summer-Land of spirit-life. Peace to her spirit.

Springfield, Ill. J. Q. A. FLOYD.

From Peterboro', N. H., July 29th, 1888, after a short illness of six days, Mrs. Rebecca, wife of Mr. E. A. Robbins, aged 54 years 1 month and 2 day.

She was a worthy lady, an affectionate and devoted wife, and a kind mother. She was a firm believer in Spiritualism, having many times seen friends who had gone before. She was kind and sympathetic, of a cheerful disposition, and ever ready to do all in her power to advance the cause of Spiritualism. She leaves a large circle of friends, who deeply sympathize with her bereaved family. J. L. D.

Obituary Notices not exceeding twenty lines published gratuitously. When they exceed that number, twenty cents for each additional line will be charged. Two words on an average make a line. No poetry admitted under this heading.

Convention in Oregon.

The Second Annual Convention of the Oregon State Spiritual Society will be held on the camp grounds at New Era, Clackamas Co., Sept. 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th inclusive.

All members are requested to be present, as important business is to be transacted.

Arrangements have been made for friends of the cause. Reduced rate of fares on the O. & C. Railroad to those who attend.

By order of the Executive Board.

B. F. FULLER, Pres.

MISS WILLIE BUCKMAN, Sec'y.
East Portland, Ore., Aug. 4, 1888.

The Indiana Association

Of Spiritualists meets at 10 A. M. Sept. 13th in Westfield's Hall, Anderson, Ind.

All will be made welcome, and an excellent treat is in store for those who attend.

We do hope all Indiana Spiritualists will be there.

GEO. V. HUNTER, Sec'y.
DR. BECK, Delphi, Ind. Indianapolis, Ind.

INCIDENTS
IN THE LIFE OF
MADAM BLAVATSKY.

Compiled from Information Supplied by Her Relatives and Friends, and Edited by A. P. SINNETT, with a Portrait Reproduced from an Original Painting by Hermann Schmiechen.

Contents.—Introduction; Childhood; Marriage and Travel; At Home in Russia, 1858; Mme. Gebelzbrosky's Narrative; From Apprenticeship to Duty; Residence in America; Established in India; A Visit to Europe; Appendix.

Large 8vo, pp. 324. Cloth, $3.00; postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE NEW CRISIS.
BY GEO. W. BELL.

In his preface the author says: "We have reached a crisis in our national development. We have rushed, this pinnacle of greatness with a mad impetuosity unparalleled in the annals of the world; ignoring social adjustments, essential to the symmetry and stability of a state.

My purpose being to prove the existence of a class-conspiracy, the design of which is to subvert the principles of our government by a monopoly of all wealth. I have discussed the merits of no measures further than to prove the centralizing tendencies."

Cloth, pp. 350. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ORTHODOXY:
A Lecture by ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

This is the latest lecture by Robert G. Ingersoll, review'ng the creeds of the churches and answering them from their own standards. Crowded with facts, figure and arguments so eloquent in every paragraph; just the kind of literature for friends of free thought and honest expression to have and circulate generously.

Garbled, incomplete and ridiculous reports of this lecture, taken from the newspapers, have already appeared. They do the author great injustice and deceive the reading public. This edition, coming direct from the author's own publisher, is complete, and contains three times as much material as any of the unauthorized and pirated editions.

Paper. Price 10 cents; postage free.
For sale COLBY & RICH.

Ecce Veritas.

A new work by an anonymous author, who claims as the object of the treatise a vindication of Christianity as a system of principles for the redemption of humanity; the true view of Christ and his religion, and against the dogmatic theology of the churches. The author also endorses Spiritualism, of the truths of which he has become well convinced by demonstrations unmistakable.

Cloth, 12mo, pp. 293. Price $1.25; postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

POEMS AND RHYTHMICAL EXPRESSIONS. BY DR. D. AMBROSE DAVIS.

Contents: Dedicatory; Introductory; Prefatory; Did all Things come by Chance? Humbly Inherited; What shall my Mission be? Fraternity; The Prayer of Jesus; Nature's Theology; The Answering Voice; Supernal Guests; The Tiny Raps; Life's School Rooms; Rural Life; The Mariner's Faith; Acorns and Oaks; The Little Angel Minnewa; The Soul of Beneficence; Soul-Mating; The Ascended Wm. Lloyd Garrison; The Anthem of Nature; We Go Not Out from Nature; Inscrutable Providence; A Kindly Whisper; The Voice I Heard; Never, Never Lost; Tyranny; How Blest I was in Giving; The Little Guest at Supper; The Lost of Earth Found for Us in God's Keeping; Leaves; Valedictory; Robert Burns's Nuptials with Highland Mary in Spirit-Life; The Dying Poet.

Cloth, 12mo. Price 75 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

VARIOUS REVELATIONS; With an Account of the Garden of Eden, and the Settlement of the Eastern Continent, as related by the leaders of the wandering tribes. From the Age of Enoch, Seth, and Noah, to the Birth of Jesus of Nazareth as related by Mary, his Mother, and Joseph, the Foster Father, with a Confirmation of his Crucifixion and Resurrection, as related by Pilate and the different Apostles. Also, an Account of the Settlement of the North American Continent, and the Birth of the Individualized Spirit which has followed.

Cloth, pp. 391. Price $2.0, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE RELIGION OF SPIRITUALISM. By EUGENE CROWELL, M. D., author of "The Identity of Primitive Christianity and Modern Spiritualism," etc., etc. Among the prime points of consideration in this work may be mentioned What is Religion? Spiritualism is a Religion. The Religion of Spiritualism Identical with the Religion of Jesus.

Price 15 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

BIBLICAL AND MODERN MEDIUMSHIP; or, A Comparison between the Conditions of Ancient and Modern Spiritual Phenomena. By MOSES HULL.

Paper. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

THE WATCHMAN.

An Eight-Page Monthly Journal, Devoted to the Interests of Humanity and Spiritualism. Also, a Mouthpiece of the American and Eastern Congress in Spirit-Life.

OLD PHILOSOPHER, Spirit Editor.

PUBLISHED BY
BOSTON STAR AND CRESCENT CO.,
P. O. Box 1129, Fort Wayne, Ind.

HATTIE A. BERRY,
Editress and Manager.

ARTHUR B. SHEDD,
Assistant Manager.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE.

One Year, $1.00. Clubs of Ten, $8.00. Six Months, 50 cents. Single Copies, 10 cents. Sample Copies free.

U. S. postage stamps will be received for fractional parts of a dollar. (1's and 2's preferred.)

To any one sending 10 new subscribers and $8.00, we give as a premium a cabinet photo. of WHITE FEATHER, PEACE BIRD, spirit control of the Editress.

☞ Remit by P. O. Order, drawn on FORT WAYNE, IND., or by Registered Letter. ☜ Payable to HATTIE A. BERRY, Editress and Manager.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

10 cts. per line (Nonpareil) each insertion. Business Cards, 50 cts. per inch each insertion. Special rates for Electrotypes, on application. Preferred position 25 per cent. extra. Objectionable advertisements not inserted under any consideration. Terms strictly in advance. oam—Sept. 27.

The Weekly Discourse,

A Pamphlet (especially arranged for binding)

Containing one of the Discourses given through the organism of

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND

The preceding Sunday.

Is published each week. Price, $2.50 per year.

Address, WILLIAM RICHMOND,
64 Union Park Place, Chicago, Ill.
My 5 eow

THE

N. D. C. AXE and TRUE KEY-STONE,

A FOUR-PAGE SEMI-MONTHLY JOURNAL, especially devoted to the Development of Medium-ship, and official organ of The National Developing Circle.

Terms of subscription, $1.00 per annum.

Sample Copy Free.

Send for Book, "How to Become a Medium in Your Own Home," and a personal sealed letter designating all your phases of Mediumship, all for 15 cents.

Address

JAMES A. BLISS,
S24 tf ELMWOOD PLACE, OHIO.

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription: One year, $1.00; six months, 75 cents; three months, 50 cents; single copies, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty cents, cash which barely covers the postage, paper and press work. Sample copies free. 4eow

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science,

PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS, GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Medical Therapeutics, Human Character, and Each Outline of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, 25 cents per year; single copies, 2½ cents.

Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI-MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der „mystischen" und „magischen" Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, Alf. Russ, Wallace, der Professoren Barrett und Cones, mehreren Brahminen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden.

Subscription, $1.75 for six months, $3.50 per annum.

Messrs. COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Au21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL devoted to the interests of Spiritualism in all its aspects. MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of Subscription, in advance, per year, $1.20. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order on Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75, Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper, 12mo, pp. 240. Price 60 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Aug. 9.

THE CARRIER DOVE,

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform. Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, Publishers. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of the Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also Spirit Pictures by our Artist Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms: $2.50 per year; single copies, 10 cents.

Address all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 32 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal. F6

SEND NAME

AND POST-OFFICE ADDRESS, plainly written, to THE BETTER WAY, CINCINNATI, O., and receive a sample copy of this bright Spiritual Weekly Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year, but no obligation to subscribe will be incurred by sending for a sample copy. It will cost you only a postal card and a minute! Au13 tf

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.
MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Ass't Editor.

A NEIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY, devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms, 60 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address, GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

THE Oldest reform Journal in publication.
Price, $3.00 a year,
$1.50 for six months,
3 cents per single copy.

Now is your time to subscribe for a live paper, which discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.

Address J. P. MENDUM,
Investigator Office,
April 2. Paine Memorial,
Boston, Mass.

THE BHAGAVAD GITA;
OR,
The Lord's Lay.

With Commentary and Notes, as well as References to the Christian Scriptures. Translated from the Sanscrit, for the benefit of those in search of Spiritual Light, by MOHINI MOHUN CHATTERJI, M. A.

The great classic poem of Asia, profound and majestic in its power and harmony. Its translator, one of the most eminent of Hindoo scholars, has been sojourning for a year in Boston, while carrying forward this notable work.

"All Indian authorities agree in pronouncing the Bhagavad Gita to be the essence of all sacred writings. . . . The collected essence of all the Vedas, . . . the best book in existence for the study of the spiritually minded. As soon as I open the Bhagavad Gita it seems to seize upon my very soul. I am face to face with antiquity. How many are the centuries that have passed since were uttered and written the words of eternal life I am about to read!"—From the Introduction.

8vo, cloth; pp. 280. Price $2.00; postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

A REPORT
OF THE
MYSTERIOUS NOISES

Heard in the house of MR. JOHN D. FOX, in Hydesville, Arcadia, Wayne Co., N. Y. Authenticated by the Certificates and confirmed by the Statements of the citizens of that place and vicinity.

Originally published in 1848 by E. E. Lewis, and now republished by J. P. Thorndyke.
Pamphlet; price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

BANNER OF LIGHT:

THE OLDEST JOURNAL IN THE WORLD DEVOTED TO THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY.

ISSUED WEEKLY

At 9 Bosworth Street (formerly Montgomery Place) Corner Province Street, Boston, Mass.

COLBY & RICH,
Publishers and Proprietors.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.
Aided by a large corps of able writers.

THE BANNER is a first-class Family Newspaper of EIGHT PAGES—containing FORTY COLUMNS OF INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE READING—embracing

A LITERARY DEPARTMENT,
REPORTS OF SPIRITUAL LECTURES,
ORIGINAL ESSAYS—Upon Spiritual, Philosophical and Scientific Subjects,
EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT,
SPIRIT-MESSAGE DEPARTMENT, and
CONTRIBUTIONS by the most talented writers in the world, etc., etc.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE

Per Year	$3.00
Six Months	1.50
Three Months	75

Postage Free.

In remitting by mail, a Post-Office Money Orders on Boston, or a Draft on a Bank or Banking House in Boston or New York City, payable to the order of COLBY & RICH, is preferable to Bank Notes. Our patrons can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred.

ADVERTISEMENTS published at twenty cents per line for the first, and fifteen cents per line for each subsequent insertion.

Subscriptions discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for.

☞ Specimen copies sent free.

COLBY & RICH

Publish and keep for sale at Wholesale and Retail a complete assortment of Spiritual, Progressive, Reformatory and Miscellaneous Books.

Among the authors are Andrew Jackson Davis, Hon. Robert Dale Owen, Dr. James M. Peebles, Henry C. Wright, Giles B. Stebbins, D. D. Home, T. R. Hazard, William Denton, Rev. M. B. Craven, Judge J. W. Edmonds, Prof. S. B. Brittan, Allen Putnam, Epes Sargent, W. F. Evans, Kersey Graves, A. B. Child, P. B. Randolph, Warren S. Barlow, J. O. Barrett, Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten, Miss Lizzie Doten, Mrs. Maria M. King, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, etc.

Any Book published in England or America, not out of print, will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

☞ Publishers who insert the above Prospectus in their respective journals, and call attention to it editorially, will be entitled to a copy of the BANNER OF LIGHT one year, provided a marked paper is forwarded to this office.

OUR AGENTS.

BRENTANO BROS., BOOKSELLERS,
5 Union Square, New York,

Authorized NEW YORK AGENTS for the sale of all of Colby & Rich's Publications. A good stock always on hand of Spiritual Books and Publications. Any Book desired which they do not happen to have in stock will be promptly ordered. Subscriptions received for and single copies of the Banner of Light on sale. Address 5 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK. Branch stores, 1015 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, WASHINGTON, D. C., and 131 STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. NEW YORK AGENCY, 5 UNION SQUARE.

PHILADELPHIA BOOK DEPOT.

The Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., are for sale by J. H. ADAMS, M. D., at the Philadelphia Book Agency, 722 Spring Garden street. Subscriptions received for the Banner of Light at $3.00 per year. The Banner of Light can be found for sale at Academy Hall, No. 8 Spring Garden street, and at all the Spiritual meetings; also at 923 North 8th street, and at news stand 826 Market street.

CLEVELAND, O., BOOK DEPOT.

THOMAS LEES, 81 Ontario street (Room 24), All the Spiritual and Reformatory Works on hand published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass. Subscription Agency for the Banner of Light and other Spiritual papers and magazines, etc. Residence, 105 Cross street, Cleveland, O.

WASHINGTON AGENCY.

M. J. WILCOX & CO., dealers in all Standard and Scientific Books, Pamphlets and Periodicals, 317½ 9th street, near Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C., keep constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., AGENCY.

J. K. COOPER, 736 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., keeps constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and will take orders for any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

CHICAGO, ILL., AGENCY.

CHAS. MACDONALD & CO., Periodical dealers, No. 55 Washington street, Chicago, Ill., keep for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

NEW YORK BOOK DEPOT.

The Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., also the Banner of Light, can be found at the office of The Truth-Seeker, 33 Clinton Place, New York City.

BRATTLEBORO', VT., BOOK DEPOT.

E. J. CARPENTER, retail dealer in Newspapers, Periodicals, etc., etc., No. 2 Market Block, keeps for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., AGENCY.

WM. FOSTER, JR., 30 Battey street, Providence, R. I., will supply any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich. He is also agent for the Banner of Light.

DETROIT, MICH., AGENCY.

AUGUSTUS DAY, 12 Park Place, Detroit, Mich., Spiritualistic Sale and Circulating Library. Agent for Banner of Light, and all publications of Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AGENCY.

JAMES LEWIS, 64 Pynchon street, Springfield, Mass., is agent for the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., BOOK DEPOT.

WILLIAMSON & HIGBEE, Booksellers, 62 West Main street, Rochester, N. Y., keep for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published at the Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass.

TROY, N. Y., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., will be accommodated by W. H. YOSBURGH, 244 Ninth street, Troy, N. Y.

CORRY, PENN., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich, will be supplied by G. F. LEWIS, publisher of the Day Star, in that city.

AUBURN, N. Y., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., can procure them of J. H. HARTER, Auburn, N. Y.

WASHINGTON BOOK DEPOT.

The Roberts Bookstore, 19, MUNCEY, Proprietor, No. 1010 Seventh street, above New York Avenue, Washington, D. C., keeps constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and a supply of Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

MEMPHIS, TENN., AGENCY.

JOHN LANG, Stationer and Bookseller, No. 221 Main street, Memphis, Tenn., keeps for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich.

NOTICE TO OUR ENGLISH PATRONS.

MR. H. A. KERSEY will act as our agent and receive subscriptions for the Banner of Light at fifteen shillings per year. Parties desiring to so subscribe can address Mr. H. A. Kersey, No. 1 Newgate street, Newcastle on-Tyne, England. Mr. Kersey

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., Keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not read anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he desires specially to recommend for perusal.

☞ When our patrons desire the address of the BANNER changed, they should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not forget to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as the BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1888.

[Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.]

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE, 9 Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place), corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:
THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY,
14 Franklin Street, Boston.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY,
39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.

☞ Business Letters must be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All other letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the oncoming light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

Vol. LXIII

Of THE BANNER is gradually drawing to its conclusion. We trust that those of our patrons whose subscriptions expire with that volume will do us the favor of renewing; and speak thus early as a hint to awaken reflection.

We shall begin Vol. LXIV with several new attractions and improvements, of which due mention will be made hereafter.

Tax All Property Alike—No Favors.

The exemption from taxation of such a vast amount of real property in the form of churches, colleges and other kindred institutions has long been a subject of dissatisfaction to a large body of the tax-payers among our people, and promises to excite in the near future, in connection with the issue of public education, a feeling of hostility to its continuance that shall prove utterly irresistible.

The whole matter was recently presented by Dr. Edward McGlynn from his very positive point of view in a Sunday discourse, from which all our readers will be glad to peruse a few sample extracts. It is almost needless to say that Dr. McGlynn is totally opposed to the present practice of relieving such vast amounts of valuable property from their proper share of the burden of taxation, on the ground that they are held and employed for the professed purposes of religion and education.

For generations, says Dr. McGlynn, millions and millions of dollars' worth of property have been held in New York City, in the name of private individuals, as a trust for churches—held as private property to be bestowed by will, yet exempted from taxation because used for the purposes of a hospital, a school, or a charity. There are such institutions connected with the various churches. It has come to be the case that it is not even insisted that they shall be connected with the churches. Under existing laws and customs, not only all churches but all schools and charitable institutions are absolutely exempt from taxation. That exemption of private property from taxation is a public burden.

But somebody will at once say it is for "education." This education, answers Dr. McGlynn, is by private corporations, is not wholly responsible to the public education, and people may go into it as a matter of business to make money. The public, he declares, has no business to make presents of that kind to any institution. If those people choose to go into the business of education, if they choose to get up churches, it is proper that they should enjoy the privilege, together with the luxury of paying their own bills. It is a distinctively American principle, that all private individuals, institutions and corporations, shall have a free field and no favor. It is also a distinctively American principle that the church and the state shall be wholly separate. Hence nothing can be more opposed to that principle than that the City and State of New York should be making presents from their treasuries, which are annually recruited by taxation, of tens and hundreds of thousands of dollars to various denominations, without regard to any particular rule in the matter. It is against the very essence of the principles of equality.

It is idle to argue that to exempt these institutions and corporations from taxation is a different thing from actually giving so much cash to them out of the public treasury, raised by taxation. If the city of New York has a right to certain taxes and fails to collect them, it is about as bad as if these institutions paid taxes and then got them back again from the city. But it is a serious fact that the treasury of the City and the State of New York is paying out hundreds of thousands of dollars received, back again into the treasuries of these various institutions. As long as the tenement house in which you are living, said Dr. McGlynn, is taxed, and the landlord collects from you that tax and interest besides, as well as pay for the trouble of collecting, for the rooms you occupy in that house, it is unfair that the building of some denomination, whether your own or some other, or the private school, should be exempt from taxation.

We profess to believe, in this country, in a public system of education. If so, then we ought to declare to a man that people who have this public system, in a free country like this, could only within certain limits get up schools of their own; and they ought to enjoy the luxury of paying every penny of the bills for those institutions, whether hospitals or schools, or by whatever name called. If they are to be supported by public money, then they ought to be managed by public officers, and they ought also to be for purposes that are absolutely public; that is, they should be common to all the people, like the roads and streets, and gas-lighting and parks. Instead of that they have peculiarities of their own. They are owned and controlled by private corporations, and there is little or no responsibility to the public. There is no proper accountability. For all the public knows these institutions may be making vast sums of money in the aggregate as a mere matter of business out of these properties, while they are receiving this enormous present from the State in being exempt from all taxation. They should, asserted the Doctor, be taxed on their buildings as well as on their lands as long as other people are so taxed.

But it is pleaded that this exemption from taxation helps religion, and without religion there would be no morality, and then society would go to pieces. Suppose that were true. The best things are beyond the reach of human society. Has society any business to make matches between men and women, to offer premiums to people to get married, to do anything more than to give some kind of legal sanction to men and women who are supposed to know the nature of the contract they are making? And is not marriage at the very foundation not merely of human society but of the human family and of the existence of men in the world at all? Yet the less society meddles with it the better. And it is the same with religion. The State has no business whatever to interfere with religion, although it be conceded that the State could not get along at all if the people composing it had not a religious sense of justice, a religious, unselfish love of good things. All that religion should ask in this country is to be kept separate from the State, that the State shall keep its hands off entirely. Hence the State has no business to bestow public money for other than public purposes.

It is therefore a simple perversion of public funds either to remit taxes or give public lands or money from the treasury to any of these churches, charities, or schools. Dr. McGlynn concluded his address with the impressive declaration that no land should be given away by the State, and no land shall be tax-free; and that no money shall be given, and no public thing whatsoever shall be given except for absolutely public purposes. And this view is in strict harmony with the truest interests of religion.

The above is beyond successful dispute the plainest statement that can be made of this increasingly important question of the exemption of church and other corporate and private property, on the pretext of religion and charity and education, from the same rule of taxation which is applied so rigidly to every other visible form of real property. It is a question, too, that will not down at the bidding of any class, in a country where all are professedly equal. That which is protected ought to pay, and pay cheerfully, its fair share of the cost of such protection.

The Sioux Indians Vindicated.

The determination of the Sioux Indians not to sign away their lands under compulsion—for that is what the Government's proffered alternative virtually amounts to—will compel the approval of all fair-minded and justice-loving people. It is to be supposed that the Indians themselves are the best judges of the real working of the land-in-severalty project, and are the most capable of deciding what they need in the present stage of their existence as a race. There are six tribes in the Sioux nation, numbering about thirty thousand souls. They own twenty million acres of land in southwest Dakota, under the laws of the United States. The Government to-day owes these tribes some four millions of dollars for lands sold to it by them in 1861 and 1876, for school purposes, besides large sums to be paid in annuities, goods, cattle, agricultural implements, and so forth.

It is to be carefully noted, in connection with the current negotiations with the Sioux, that the land in-severalty advocates are beginning to exhibit their real motive, as the Indians show their resolution not to be wheedled into a distasteful agreement, and are openly coming out with the assertion that none of these treaty negotiations were ever binding on more than one side, the Indians agreeing and the Government holding them, while acting as if it were only an understanding and acceptance on its part. Some of these advocates of the land-in-severalty system do not scruple to scout the idea that Indian treaties are to be regarded like other treaties, held together by mutual pledges and responsibilities. While they would hold the Indian by them fast, they would not be held themselves. They insist that the Indian is incapable both of making a treaty and of keeping it. Yet the history of the case conclusively shows all through that the Indian is the only one who has inflexibly kept his treaties. The whites are the ones who have broken faith times without number.

Another thing to be kept in mind at this time is the fact that those who hold both the character and the rights of the Indians in small regard are, as a body, strongly inclined to the land-in-severalty policy. This is quite enough to show that this policy is not at least put forward in the interest of the Indians, but rather in the interest of land-coveting white men. This is abundantly substantiated also by Senator Dawes, the father of the bill embodying the severalty policy, who said before the conference of the Board of Indian Commissioners in Washington, last winter, that if the bill should become a law, "it would depend entirely on the character of the Government agents who execute its provisions, whether it is a success or a failure. If it be entrusted to men of unflinching honesty and broad views, the Indians will be secure in the possession of homes on the best lands of the reservations; but if it is entrusted to dishonest men, the Indians will be cheated out of their lands." That is just it, and the land-schemers understand it perfectly. They endorse the severalty bill because all depends on the mode of its execution. They are quite willing to take all the risks, provided they can be allowed free swing with the appointing power. It ought to be too plain to require stating that the same powerful land syndicate, or ring, that can carry such a bill through Congress is pretty confident of possessing influence enough to control the selection of the agents who are to practically carry it out.

The Catholic Columbian, published at Columbus, Ohio, has taken occasion to express a fear lest some of its friends who favor the "severalty" settlement may be biased in favor of the Dawes bill, thinking it is going to accomplish what they desire. Very naturally, it remarks, the true friends of the Indians look forward to their settlement upon their own lands, and to their full citizenship under the Government, with all the rights, duties, privileges and obligations of citizens, as a final settlement of the Indian question. But, adds the Columbian, "they do not believe in forcing all Indians on to farms before they are prepared for it, and whether they like it or not. Above all, they do not believe in confiscating their land. We are dead against the change of the policy of the Government toward the Indians."

The Columbian goes on to protest against the contemplated injustice of ignoring the rights of the tribes, riding rough-shod over all our treaty obligations, and taking matters, long ago supposed to be settled, again into our own hands; and adds that it is unalterably opposed to the severalty enactment regarding the reservations, because it considers that somewhere about it lurks a scheme "to rob the Indians of their lands in the interests of the land-sharks and land-grabbers, who are forever hovering around the poor red man with an inordinate desire for his possessions."

We honestly believe that the strictures of The Columbian just referred to are founded in justice, and that however kindly may have been the feeling which in some minds led up to the formulation and enactment of the land-in-severalty scheme in its carrying out it is destined to prove all the fears expressed in advance even by its friends to be correct; we see no reason to doubt that it will be made the cover, by designing men, as a more plausible scheme than any of its predecessors to wrest the best lands of the Indians away from them. It proposes to make the Indian a citizen without any practical preparation and even against his will; and second, it leaves the whole matter in the control of the very influence whose selfishness it professes to thwart. The National Indian Defense Association procured the amendment, in committee, of the bill, to the effect that its provision should not apply to any Indian tribe until the consent of a majority of the adult male members of the tribe shall be first obtained. But this most just and reasonable condition of citizenship was rejected by the House, as reported, at the request of Senator Dawes himself, who declared that such an amendment would defeat the object of the bill, thus giving clear evidence that its real purpose is to coerce the Indians into the endorsement of that from which their better judgment recoils.

The Sioux have thus far refused to sign away their land, and in such action deserve the support and commendation of all true friends of Indian rights in this country. They have, from the history of the white man's conduct in the past, every reason to fear double-dealing, and have therefore refused to put their names to any sort of paper, being doubtful of the after-construction which might be put upon such action on their part. It is a singular fact, as stated in the press dispatches from the Sioux country, that the United States Commission presented two papers to the Indians for their signatures, telling them that if they wanted to sell a part of their reservation they should sign the paper printed in black, but if they did not wish to sell they should sign the one printed in red. They refused to sign either, saying significantly: "We think that if we sign the red paper it would turn black before it got to Washington." Why, we would like to inquire, did the Commission feel itself called upon to offer these Indians two papers for signature, when if justice was its object one only would have fully sufficed? i. e., the agreement which Congress authorized to be presented to the Sioux and which is null and void unless three-fourths of the men of that nation sign it! The matter looks to us a great deal like some of the artifices which have been exercised upon the Indians in days of yore, and which have so disgraced our nation.

There is every evidence that, now that the Sioux have refused like men to give up their treaty privileges, the usual machinery will be put in motion by irresponsible parties to force the tribe into some overt act against the peace, or to falsely accuse them of such act, and so let loose upon them the military power of the United States: Reports (unofficial) of warlike movements on the Tongue River being even now given currency in the daily press, as if to prepare the public mind for such a step.

We trust that all friends of common humanity, to say the least, will demand "fair play" for the Indians in the expression of their honest determination at this critical juncture.

☞ The agitation of the public school question, based upon the Travis matter, is doing a good deal of good, says the Boston Evening Record, as it brings out the facts of the situation in regard to our public schools. It is doing more than that, as it is determining every friend of the public school system, whatever his religion may be, that not a dollar of the public money should be in any way allowed to be used for sectarian institutions, and that the public schools, by liberal appropriations and by zealous support, should be made the cornerstone of our educational system. Hitherto there has been a strange lack of exact information on this subject and determination to follow these rules; but we take it from this time on the people of this State will see just where their safe path lies and follow it absolutely.

☞ The poet Whittier's Quaker meekness does not evidently extend so far as to allow himself to be misrepresented. A Southerner recently charged him with being an enemy to the South, to which the poet replies: "I was never an enemy to the South or the holders of slaves. I inherited from my Quaker ancestry hatred of slavery, but not of slaveholders. To every call of suffering or distress in the South I have promptly responded to the extent of my ability. I was one of the very first to recognize the rare gift of the Carolinian poet Timrod, and I was the intimate friend of the lamented Paul H. Hayne, though both wrote fiery lyrics against the North. I am sure no one rejoices more heartily than I do at the prosperity of the Southern States."

☞ Mr. H. C. Strong, an old-time Spiritualist, of Chicago, Ill., made a brief call at our office on the 21st inst.

The Other Side.

In the course of a sermon delivered in Grace Church, Elmira, N. Y., recently, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Herrlich, gave utterance (as noted in THE BANNER last week) to many excellent thoughts on the thither side of existence.

Do we come in contact with the spiritual realm? asked this speaker. Man lives to improve and develop as well as to exist, is his answer; in fact his intellectual and spiritual development is his only real and true existence. That which brings home to our consciousness the greatness and vastness of God's realm of life and nature, even though we see it not all with our eyes, nor hear it with our ears, nor touch it with our hands, is something more than impractical theory only. This life is not our true and real abiding place. And though during our tenancy of a few years it behooves us to use our best energies in the cause of our earthly welfare and happiness, and the interest of those near and dear to us, yet if our permanent dwelling-place is soon to be established elsewhere, and if as the years go by our affections are stealing thither before us, if the home circle is gradually dissolving here to be reëstablished in another region—shall we regard it as a matter of mere idle curiosity to endeavor to ascertain whether knowledge of and contact with that spiritual realm is permitted us now before we reach it? With many homes the majority are already on the other side. Is it idle and irreverent to hope and dwell upon its blessed realities and precious inmates? Is it weak and foolish to dwell upon visions and memories of our sainted loved ones?

He replies to these questions with an emphatic No. Such hopes and thoughts come from our highest and holiest longings and impulses. The word of God, he repeats, teaches and re-teaches the contact and intervention of that spiritual realm with this world. The Bible gives instance after instance that have come to those more preternaturally and spiritually gifted, and nowhere does it say that henceforth they were to cease forever. Why, he reasonably asks, should we suppose there is less interest in heaven for this earth now than in the days of the apostles or patriarchs? We have the inspired record of the return of five persons from that other realm of existence to this one. In the Old Testament scriptures angelic visitations were many and frequent. All the great poets and writers likewise mention such occurrences. Is not this truth, he asks, an essential element of our religious faith? It is the cold, practical skepticism of those who are unfitted and unable to perceive and grasp spiritual and intellectual things of this higher order, which prompts them to assert that these glorious things, possible to finer and more gifted natures, are incredible and impossible. Ministering spirits are sent forth to do heaven's errands of goodness, love, tenderness, persuasion and influence. They come, they go, we cannot tell whence or whither.

But they enter the silent chamber where some loved one is slowly breathing life away, and await with folded wings the departing spirit, while at times we can almost feel their presence. Nay, may not the fact of their presence, discovered to eyes that begin to see spiritual existences, be the cause of that radiant expression which lights up many a dying face as the curtain of life is falling upon time and rising upon eternity? Careless of the empty events that agitate worldly society, intent on other strifes than money, position, and earthly projects, with thoughts fixed on a kingdom and existence which must endure forever, the angels rejoice in every accession which that kingdom receives and in the rank and condition which a death-born soul will enter upon within it. They rejoice alike over the cry of the poor wretch who calls out in his regret and sorrow "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner!" and over the prince or leader who has served his Lord and loved his fellow-men.

Make all the allowance you can, said the speaker, for figurative language and poetical allegory, and still there remains, vast, calm and unmistakable, the firm faith of thousands and thousands, proven by a strange and indefinable experience and by the testimony of the Holy Scriptures, the fact of the reality and influence of the world of spirit and spirits upon our lives and actions, contact with that other realm of existence, and the wonderful and preternatural powers with which some are gifted. We may be unable to explain the modes and processes, but we are left to find our way along that mysterious path by the light of reason and analogy, and by the testimony of thousands who have had a deeper knowledge and a higher experience. That light may be as yet obscure and dim, but it will come more clearly as we are fitted and prepared to receive it. If the world has arrived at that point where it is crying for more light, for higher and clearer disclosures of what the soul is and will be, so that faith and hope may have a more certain and tangible basis to rest on, I believe, said the speaker, that God will bestow it upon us. The light may at present be imperfect, and the disclosures and revelations insufficient to satisfy a doubting and skeptical curiosity, whose very lack of faith and spirituality unfits it for these higher gifts and revelations, but it must shortly come to those more advanced and spiritual thinkers.

In the dimness of this present life we may not have the full light, but there will be flashes and intimations clear and unmistakable. We may have to wait for the clear, glorious sunshine, but that which we now see and meet on this borderland, in this twilight existence, these strange intimations and flashes, they only foreshadow and predict the glories and marvels which await God's children in his kingdom beyond this. We may not be able to see with material eyes these angelic visitants, but there are times when we feel the near presence of our sainted loved ones. Why may they not, he asked, hover near us in our lonely walks and in our meditative and solemn moments? Do we not at times feel them near when the lengthening shadows hallow and sanctify the eventide? Do we not feel them near in moments of impending danger, or when affliction and sorrow, like a dark pall, enshroud us? Who can say at such times that there is not an objective reality to the strange consciousness of some near contact with a living presence? Who can positively say that angelic existences or our departed loved ones cannot revisit this earth and make themselves known to feeling, to instinct, to impression, and in some of our higher and more exalted moods even to an illumined material vision? It has been so in the past; who can say it may not be so in the present and in the future?

This is talk from the modern pulpit, and it has no uncertain sound. It is plain, unqualified, unmistakable Spiritualism. As such we present it, rejoicing as ever at the spread of truth in the stronghold that cannot always resist its influence.

Life Saved through a Trance.

A telegram to the New York Herald states that a daughter of Henry Searfoss, a farmer of Marion township, Ohio, had been dangerously sick for about a month with some unknown disease. On Monday, the 6th inst., she lost consciousness, and remained so for thirty-six hours, at the end of which time she told her parents that while entranced a man appeared to her with a buggy-wheel and showed to her how the injuries that caused her illness came about, recalling to her mind circumstances which she had forgotten, but which were correct. He then brought a sheet, a bucket of water and three bottles, containing wine, whiskey and alcohol, and explained how they might be used to effect her cure. If they were not used, he warned her that at seven o'clock on the morning of the next day she would begin failing, and at four o'clock in the afternoon death's approach would be realized, and that at nine o'clock the next morning the young lady would be dead. The family physician when sent for made light of what he thought was a delusion, and the remedy indicated by the apparition was not applied. The predictions of the vision, however, began to come true, and the girl was getting rapidly worse, when the frightened parents hastened to apply the remedy prescribed, and were rejoiced to find an immediate change for the better, followed by steady improvement. Miss Searfoss was at the date of the dispatch up and around, and nearly as well as ever.

The writer adds that "the affair caused much speculation in the neighborhood regarding the value of the spirit prescription as a means of restoring the young lady to health and natural vigor."

THE FIRST SPIRITUAL UNION OF SAN FRANCISCO recently held its annual election, with the following result, as reported in the Golden Gate. With such an efficient presiding officer as Albert Morton, supported by an able board of assistants, as he undoubtedly is, the society cannot fail to be prospered in whatever efforts it may make to extend the knewledge of spiritual truth: Albert Morton, President; C. H. Gilman, Vice-President; Mrs. S. Clarke-Cooke, Treasurer; C. H. Wadsworth, Secretary; R. A. Robinson, M. B. Dodge, Mrs. A. F. Michener, Trustees. Building Committee, R. A. Robinson, W. M. Rider, M. B. Dodge. The building fund, which is invested in city lots in Tacoma, W. T., is sharing in the general enhancement of values in the vicinity of Puget Sound.

☞ Spinoza's idea of all human endeavor was union by means of love with an infinite and eternal object. How infinitely noble and great is such an idea! On this subject he says:

"Our happiness depends entirely on the quality of the objects to which we are attached by love. For on account of that which is not loved, no strife will ever arise, no sorrow if it perishes, no envy if others possess it, no fear, no hatred, no perturbation of mind—all of which come upon us in the love of things which are perishable, as are all those things of which we have spoken. But love to a thing which is eternal and infinite feeds the mind only with joy—a joy that is unmingled with any sorrow; that, therefore, we should eagerly desire and with all our strength seek to fulfill."

☞ We are in receipt of a photograph of an oil portrait recently obtained on the stage at the Temple at Onset, through the mediumship of Dr. Rogers, by John H. McElroy of Pittsburgh, Pa. Notice of the picture and its signification has already been made in these columns. While, as Mr. McE. says, in forwarding it, the photograph can convey but a faint idea of the effects in oil, the face portrayed—that of a lady, richly arrayed in veil and jewels—is full of character, and the details are evidently well brought out.

☞ E. W. Capron, one of the earliest among the spiritualistic converts of '48, has on our second page an article in reply to what The American Magazine evidently thought—when it printed the bombastic paper—was the death-blow to Spiritualism! Read Mr. C.'s keen analysis of this exhibit of titled ignorance. The cause they together sought to destroy will live when the magazine which issued and the Doctor who lucubrated shall jointly and severally have perished from the memory of man!

☞ Dr. T. A. Bland attended the Universal Peace Meeting at Mystic, Conn., on the 15th, 16th and 17th insts., and spoke on the Indian question each day. The attendance was large. From thence he went to the Niantic (Ct.) Camp-Meeting.

☞ Henry T. Greenwood, Secretary of the Fourth Association of Spiritualists of Philadelphia, Pa., writes us a report of progress which will appear next week.

☞ An interesting letter from our Paris correspondent, Henry Lacroix, will appear next week.

☞ The fortieth anniversary of the ordination of Rev. J. H. Harter, of Auburn, N. Y., as an evangelist, occurs on Friday of next week, August 31st. Since that event, nearly half a century ago, Mr. Harter has faithfully served as "Minister of the Church of Divine Fragments," located wherever a fragment of humanity can be found, in compliance with the scriptural command which was the text of the sermon at his ordination: "Go preach the gospel to every creature." Mr. Harter has for several weeks been prostrated by severe and painful sickness, and since he has for many years labored for the good of others almost without money and without price, and is now in an impoverished condition, it has been suggested by his many friends that the anniversary that occurs next Friday be celebrated by them in a practical, substantial manner, and that each send to him on that day a prayer for his happiness and restoration to health in the form of whatever pecuniary aid they may be able to offer; such being in his case "the effectual fervent prayer of the righteous that availeth much. Address him (or Mrs. J. H. Harter), Auburn, N. Y.

"GOOD NURSING IS MORE POTENT THAN MEDICINE."—This truthful assertion will be found in the course of an article on the treatment of yellow fever, which we clip (see second page) from one of our Floridian contemporaries. The statement is true, not only as to yellow fever but as regards the majority of diseases—however much the youthful diploma-bearers of the present time may have to say to the contrary.

☞ Writing from Three Rivers, Mich., a correspondent in the course of a business letter says: "We are quite lost unless we have the weekly appearance of the BANNER OF LIGHT, in the effulgence of which we can see how the spiritualistic world is progressing, and so be able to keep pace with our dear Spiritualist brothers and sisters in unity and truth."

☞ MRS. M. C. MORRELL, of 230 West Thirty-Sixth street, New York, writes that she has returned from her visit to Onset, which she enjoyed to the utmost. She has resumed her Thursday evening conferences, to which there is no admission fee, they being sustained by voluntary contributions; and her private sittings daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

All conviction should be valiant;
Tell thy truth, if truth it be.
Never seek to stem its current:
Thoughts, like rivers, find the sea;
It will fit the widening circle
Of eternal verity.

Speak thy thought if thou believ'st it,
Let it jostle whom it may,
E'en although the foolish scorn it,
Or the obstinate gainsay;
Every seed that grows to-morrow
Lies beneath the clod to-day.

Blackguards in print are the vilest creatures on the earth—and cowards besides, especially when they fling mud behind an alias. Some correspondents of the latter ilk are occasionally allowed space in that "old and circumspect" paper, the Boston Investigator, we regret to be obliged to say.

A new swindling machine is being developed. Somebody objects to giving a note and having it discounted. "We'll keep the note," says the smooth-tongued sharper "not transferable." In a short time it is found in the hands of a third party with an "e" added to the "not," which makes it read, "note transferable." Look out for them!—Valley Center News.

An exchange remarks truly that the type-writer is creating a revolution in methods of correspondence, and filling the country with active, competent young ladies who are establishing a distinct profession, and bringing into our business offices, lawyers' offices, etc., an element of decency, purity and method which is working a perceptible change.

Every duty we omit obscures some truth we should have known.—Ruskin.

The arrival of the big raft from Joggins, N. S., in the Erie Basin, New York, marks a new departure among the many industries of the present busy age. This raft was 592 feet long, 54 feet wide, 36 feet deep and drew 22 feet of water. It contained 21,300 pilings, or about 900,000 running feet, which is about forty average schooner loads. It was built in a cigar shape, and 100 feet longer than the one lost last winter. It is said that by the success of this experiment the whole coastwise timber trade is threatened with gradual annihilation, as the saving on freight by this novel expedient leaves the small and slow-moving sailing fleet entirely out of the race of competition.

The harder thy fate, the softer thine heart.—Ivan Panin.

A sponge bath of cold or tepid water often rests one when very tired. This can be taken in ten minutes, as it is better, if one has not time to do more, to simply wring the cloth or sponge nearly dry and go over the surface of the body once, rubbing thoroughly afterward with Turkish towels, than to omit daily.

INCONSISTENCIES OF LANGUAGE.

You can't weigh grams with a grammar,
Nor sugar-cure hams with a hammer,
Do sums with a summer,
Stew plumbs with a plumber,
Nor shear an old ram with a rammer.
—Springfield Union.

TREMBLE, BRITTANIA!—All Chinese subjects in Australia are ordered by the Chinese government to wind up their business and return home within three years. China proposes to arm and drill thirteen millions of men and build a great navy, and thus be able to fight great Britain.

"But do you think it consistent in you, as a Christian man, to sell shoddy for all-wool garments?"—"My dear sir, you forget. Consistency, you know, is a jewel, and, as a Christian, I can have no regard for jewelry."—Ex.

A glass of water washes out the stomach, gives tone, and prepares the alimentary canal for the morning meal.

"There is a true glory and a true honor; the glory of duty done—the honor of the integrity of principle."—Gen. R. E. Lee.

The New York Sun of the 7th reports that a person entered the police station, corner of Church and Liberty streets, the night previous, and politely handing a card marked "Charles L. Barrett" to the sergeant, said that his spirit mother appeared to him the night before and warned him to reform. He had therefore come to give himself up for stealing a watch from a lady at Cortlandt and West streets on Aug. 3d. He handed over a pawn ticket on Pawnbroker Henry Moss for three dollars on a silver watch, presumably the one referred to.

"Outside the Gates; and Other Tales and Sketches," is a new book given through the mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer. It purports to tell the experiences of different spirits, and is a wholesome book, as well as interesting.—Religio Philosophical Journal.

There is a report that Mr. Abbey is going to bring little Josef Hofmann to America in the fall. This medium-pianist will probably have a powerful rival in Otto Hegener, who created such a sensation in Berlin this year. Hegener is about the same age as Hofmann, but with more pleasing manners, and the London critics say that he handles the piano better.

THE BLITHE MOSQUITO.

"There 's a sweet little spirit
Who comes from the moon,
And he loves little children so well,
That he slides down the moonbeams
Right into their hearts,"
Said auntie to dear little Nell.

"How funny that is!"
Was the cherub's reply;
"I saw him last night near my bed.
But, auntie, I think,
By the lump on my cheek,
That he flew by my heart to my head."
—Time.

People who desire to attack other people anonymously cannot do it in THE BANNER.

A little pamphlet called "Humor in ye Sixteenth Century," shows that ye joker of that period borrowed a great deal of his wit from ye humorist of ye nineteenth century without giving a particle of credit.—Norristown Herald.

The talantograph, which it is claimed will record telegraphic messages in the hand-writing of the sender, has been patented at Washington.

"Onions cut in halves will absorb the smell of new paint." Yes, and a cornet will drown out a jews-harp. Life is full of queer things.—Detroit Free Press.

The railroad from Joppa to Jerusalem is all ready for the golden spike. All aboard for Jerusalem!

It is not yet too late, we trust, to add our congratulations to Mrs. Lucy Stone on her attainment of her seventieth birthday. That she may continue to grow old gracefully, with her splendid faculties unimpaired, to do battle for her sex, is the wish of everybody who admires noble womanhood.—Herald, (Boston.)

Before the days of forks the ewer and basin, which have now generally disappeared, were much in request after every course; whereas now the basin, with a little rose water, makes its appearance at civic feasts after dinner, as a matter of fashion rather than necessity. Four out of five fine old basins have no doubt been melted to supply the very forks whose invention rendered the washing of the fingers superfluous.

THE PRESS.

God greet the Art!
Thus spoke the primal printers of the past;
Their words are ours—we anchor on them fast,
Immortal trio—golden age,
That issued first the printed page
In Time's great tome, year-bound. The Sage
Lays by the blunted stylus used so long—
Justice and Peace clasp hands in joyful song.

The Danish steamer, Thingvalla, for New York, collided off the Nova Scotian coast at 4 A. M., Aug. 14th, with the Geiser of the same line, for Copenhagen. The Geiser sank in about five minutes. Eighty passengers and thirty-five of the crew were lost in the awful disaster.

If the Encyclopædia Brittanica should walk into a newspaper office on two sticks and secure a job, it would be discharged the next day for incompetency. A newspaper deals with life, and not with learnin'—this is the sum and substance of the whole business.—Wheeling (West Va.) Register.

London, which has in common with all England a savagely vindictive "Doctors' plot law" against all irregulars, still finds itself unable to support the horde of "regular" physicians launched upon her by the schools. She has at present, it is averred, so many doctors in excess of her physical requirements that in the poorer parts some of them will see a patient, prescribe and supply medicine at sixpence (twelve and a half cents) a visit. "Calomel and the Thames river," says a wicked Boston daily, "probably enter most numerously into their prescriptions."

Doubtless all souls have a surviving thought;
Therefore of death we think with quiet mind;
But if we think of being turn'd to naught,
A trembling horror in our souls we find.
—Sir J. Davies.

The yellow fever is still at work in Jacksonville, Florida.

Emma—That 's a pretty new "Olivia" chair you 've got there, Mary. Mary—Why do you call it "Olivia"? I thought it was Wakefield rattan. Emma—So it is; wicker of Wakefield. They call it "Olivia" now, you know.—Lampoon.

A thunder storm passed over eastern Ontario and the whole of Quebec Aug. 16th and 17th, and was the most terrific ever known there. Hundreds of houses and barns were burned or blown down. Crops in many places were entirely destroyed. Horses and cattle by the hundred were also destroyed, and many people were killed or injured.

BAR HARBOR.

Lines to the girls at Rodick's.

In flannel garments dressing,
From every State they come,
The fond idea caressing
Of a husband and a home.

They paddle round the waters blue,
They climb the mountain side;
If he can't be caught in a bark canoe
He may in a buckboard ride.
Isaac Lawrence.

Gen. Von Moltke has been placed on the retired list of the German army.

Truth is the most powerful thing in the world, since fiction only pleases us by its resemblance to it.—Shaftesbury.

["REFRESHING THE SAINTS."]—One hundred years ago the town of Wilton, N. H., passed the following vote: "That the town provide one barrel West India rum, five barrels New England rum, one barrel good brown sugar, half a box good lemons, two loaves of loaf sugar, for framing and raising said meeting-house."—Rutland Herald.

"THE SOUL."—The latest issue of this periodical, No. 6, contains accounts of interesting phenomena that have taken place at Onset this summer, through the medial agency of Mr. W. S. Rowley, Dr. D. J. Stansbury, Mrs. J. J. Whitney, H. G. Eddy and others, illustrated with two engravings of slate-writings and drawings, and a portrait of Dr. Stansbury.

☞ Dr. W. E. Clayton of Malden, Mass., recently had some interesting experiences in independent slate-writing, etc., Dr. Stansbury of California being the medium, and Lake Pleasant Camp-ground the locality where they were encountered. A correspondent refers to some of them in another column.

☞ The well known and successful healer, Dr. Dumont C. Dake, of 304 Fifth Avenue, New York City, with his highly accomplished wife, is now at the hotel, Queen City Park, Vt., where he will remain for a few weeks.

☞ Monday, Aug. 20th, Charles W. Sullivan made a visit to this office while on his way to the Queen City Park Camp, (Burlington, Vt.) where he will probably remain till the latter part of September.

Movements of Mediums & Lecturers.

[Notices under this heading must reach this office by Monday's mail to insure insertion the same week.]

W. J. Colville is now at Cassadaga Lake, where his lectures daily, at 4 P. M., have been largely attended. He speaks in Martine's Hall, 55 South Ada street, Chicago, Ill., Sundays, Sept. 2d, 9th, 16th, 23d and 30th, at 10:45 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. Special courses of lectures on spiritual science will be given on other days. A birthday reception will be tendered him Tuesday evening, Sept. 4th. Letters, etc., should be addressed to him at 247 Ogden Avenue, Chicago.

Mrs. H. S. Lake speaks at Parkland (Pa.) Camp-Meeting, next Sunday, Aug. 26th; in Philadelphia the Sundays of September; in Boston and Cambridge the Sundays of October and November; in Paterson, N. J., the Sundays of December. Her address for September will be 2139 Uber Place, Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. T. J. Lewis of Brooklyn, N. Y., just from Onset Camp, is now in Boston, and may be seen at No. 16 Bennet street, this city, where she is located. She will receive calls to give platform tests throughout the Eastern States.

Dr. Dean Clarke's labors at Lake Pleasant are appreciatively referred to elsewhere. Another correspondent writes us that a former Methodist minister on hearing one of his recent addresses at the camp pronounced it "one of the ablest, most logical and scholarly discourses to which he had ever listened;" his opinion being endorsed by many others. Dr. Clarke may be addressed for engagements in care of this office.

Dr. W. L. Jack has closed his cottage at Lake Pleasant. He can be addressed at his home, Haverhill, Mass., by letter.

W. S. Rowley, the occult telegraphic medium, was at last accounts at Cassadaga Camp, New York.

Spiritualistic Meetings in Boston.

College Hall, 34 Essex Street.—Sundays, at 10½ A. M., 2½ and 7½ P. M. Eben Cobb, Conductor.

Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown.—Mediums' meeting every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Dr. Mark Smith, Chairman.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M.; also Wednesdays at 3 P. M. Dr. E. H. Mathews, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M. F. W. Mathews, Conductor.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—The afternoon exercises were opened by the Chairman, followed by tests from Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Litch; interesting remarks by Mrs. Leslie and Mr. Cortheil.

In the evening Mrs. Abbie N. Burnham gave a fine lecture filled with progressive thought, which was attentively listened to by an appreciative audience. At the close of her lecture Mrs. B. gave tests, which were readily recognized. An interesting speech by Mrs. Leslie and satisfactory tests by Mr. Toothaker closed the evening exercises. F. W. MATHEWS.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington street.—These meetings are still increasing in interest and numbers. Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Forrester gave excellent readings last Sunday, all of which were appreciated. Mrs. White displayed some of her musical powers. Mr. Toothaker also gave tests. F. W. M.

Mrs. Whitney and Dr. Stansbury.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Aug. 17th these California mediums started for their home on the Pacific coast, anticipating a stay of one month in Nevada, also a month in Salt Lake City, before reaching their destination.

Mrs. Whitney exercised her gift of test mediumship on several public occasions at Lake Pleasant and gave some private séances. She seemed to have all she could do, but refused to give sittings the last few days she remained. Her tests of identity, also names, were remarkable; her guides have an interesting way of presenting them to the people. She gives general satisfaction in her public entertainments.

Dr. W. E. Clayton, of Malden, Mass., was quite fortunate in what he received in the presence of Dr. Stansbury in the way of independent slate-writing. On the 17th he had four slates written upon in ten minutes, while Dr. Stansbury and himself had their feet upon the slates in broad daylight. There were two colored drawings of faces upon the slates, one representing his brother, the other an Indian, the latter in colors. Dr. Clayton had eight slates written all over—four of them in ten minutes—at one and the same visit. Other individuals received equally satisfactory results at sittings, especially Dr. Gould of California, and Prof. Cadwell.

I have not had any personal sittings with these mediums, but have endeavored to give the views of those who have, in a fair manner. A. S. HAYWARD.

LOG CABINS can hardly be considered handsome or elegant, but they were fit habitations for the rugged pioneers of America. Our ancestors were rugged specimens of noble manhood, complete in health, strength and endurance. Their wholesome remedies are reproduced to this latter age, in Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla and Warner's "Tippecanoe."

☞ Back numbers of THE BANNER for no special date will be supplied at four cents per copy: But parties ordering papers for any special date will be charged the usual price—eight cents per copy.

Spiritualist Camp-Meetings for 1888.

The season of out-of-door gatherings on the part of the believers in the New Dispensation is drawing nigh; and the reader will find, by reference to the subjoined, a partial list of the localities and time of session where such convocations are to be held.

ONSET BAY, MASS.—The Twelfth Annual Camp-Meeting closes Sept. 1st. Trains from Boston, 8:15, 9 A. M., 1,00, 3:30, 4:05, 4:15 P. M., on Old Colony R. R.; Sundays, 7:30, 8:15 from Boston.

LAKE PLEASANT, MASS.—The Fifteenth Annual Convocation of the New England Spiritualists' Camp-Meeting Association will be held at Lake Pleasant, Montague, Mass., (on the Hoosac Tunnel route) closing Sept. 8. Trains "54," "100," "45" and "43," will stop at the Lake when there are passengers to leave, or when signalled to take passengers. The above trains, "54" and "100," leave Boston at 6:30 A. M. and 3:05 P. M., arriving at Lake Pleasant at 10:40 A. M. and 6:45 P. M. The trains No. "45" and "43" leave Lake Pleasant at 6:40 A. M. and 2:45 P. M.

PARKLAND, PA.—Meetings close Sept. 5th.

SUNAPEE LAKE, N. H.—The sessions of the Eleventh Annual Meeting will close Aug. 29th.

QUEEN CITY PARK, VT.—Meeting commenced Aug. 21st and continues to Sept. 16th, inclusive.

HASLETT PARK, MICH.—Meeting commenced July 26th and continues five Sundays.

VERONA PARK, ME.—Meeting closes Aug. 27th.

CASSADAGA LAKE, N. Y.—The Ninth Annual Meeting closes Sept. 2d.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY SPIRITUALIST ASSOCIATION.—The Sixth Annual Camp-Meeting commenced at Mount Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia., Sunday, July 29th, to continue five weeks.

NIANTIC, CT.—Meeting closes Sept. 9th.

ETNA, ME.—Camp-Meeting commences at Buswell's Grove, Aug. 31st, and closes Sept. 9th.

For Sleeplessness, use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Dr. C. R. DAKE, Belleville, Ill., says: "I have found it, and it alone, to be capable of producing a sweet and natural sleep in cases of insomnia from overwork of the brain, which so often occurs in active professional and business men."

Special Notice.

The date of the expiration of every subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT is plainly marked on each address. The paper is discontinued at that time unless the subscription is previously renewed. Subscribers intending to renew will save much trouble, and possibly loss of a paper or two, by sending in the money for renewal before the expiration of their present subscription. It is the earnest desire of the publishers to give the BANNER OF LIGHT the extensive circulation to which its merits entitle it, and they therefore look with confidence to the friends of the paper throughout the world to assist them in the work.

COLBY & RICH, Publishers.

Spiritualist Meetings in New York and Brooklyn.

Columbia Hall, 878 6th Avenue, between 49th and 50th Streets.—The People's Spiritual Meeting (removed from Spencer Hall). Services every Sunday at 2¾ and 7¾ P. M. Mediums and speakers always present. Frank W. Jones, Conductor.

A General Conference will be held Monday evening of each week at 230 West 36th street, at the residence of Mrs. M. C. Morrell.

Johnston Building, Flatbush Avenue, corner of Nevins Street.—Brooklyn Progressive Spiritual Conference every Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock.

NEWARK, N. J.—Meetings will be held every Sunday evening at No. 139 Congress street, commencing at 7 o'clock. Mrs. H. C. Dorn, Secretary.

For Sale at this Office:

THE TWO WORLDS: A journal devoted to Spiritualism, Occult Science, Ethics, Religion and Reform. Published weekly at Manchester, England. Single copy, 5 cents.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. A Progressive Family Health Magazine. Published monthly in New York. Single copy, 10 cents.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN. Monthly. Published at Boston. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE SOUL. Monthly. Published in Boston. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE CARRIER DOVE. Illustrated. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BIZARRE. NOTES AND QUERIES, with Answers in all Departments of Literature. Monthly. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE OLIVE BRANCH: Utica, N. Y. A monthly. Price 10 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Published weekly at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE NEW THOUGHT. Published weekly in Des Moines, Iowa. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE WATCHMAN. Published monthly at Chicago, Ill. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH-SEEKER. Published weekly in New York. Single copy, 8 cents.

THE MIND-CURE AND SCIENCE OF LIFE. Monthly. Published at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE. Published monthly in New York. Price 10 cents.

THE THEOSOPHIST. A Monthly Journal, published in India. Single copy, 50 cents.

THE GOLDEN GATE. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BETTER WAY. A Spiritualistic weekly journal. Published in Cincinnati, O. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE EASTERN STAR. A weekly journal. Published at Bangor, Me. Single copies 3 cents.

THE PATH. A Monthly Magazine, devoted to Universal Brotherhood, Theosophy in America, and Aryan Philosophy. Single copy, 20 cents.

THE ESOTERIC. A Monthly Magazine of Advanced and Practical Esoteric Thought. Published in Boston. Single copy, 15 cents.

MENTAL HEALING. A Monthly Magazine. Published in Boston, Mass. Single copies 10 cents.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Each line in Agate type, twenty cents for the first and every insertion on the fifth or eighth page, and fifteen cents for each subsequent insertion on the seventh page.
Special Notices forty cents per line, Minion, each insertion.
Business Cards thirty cents per line, Agate, each insertion.
Notices in the editorial columns, large type, leaded matter, fifty cents per line.
Payments in all cases in advance.

☞ Advertisements to be renewed at continued rates must be left at our Office before 12 M. on Saturday, a week in advance of the date whereon they are to appear.

☞ Only small and light cuts will be allowed in the advertising columns. When accepted, our rates for that portion of the advertisement occupied by the cut will be one-half price in excess of the regular rates.
Electrotypes of pure type matter will not be accepted.
The publishers reserve the right to reject any and all electrotypes.

The BANNER OF LIGHT cannot well undertake to vouch for the honesty of its many advertisers. Advertisements which appear fair and honorable upon their face are accepted, and whenever it is made known that dishonest or improper persons are using our advertising columns, they are at once interdicted.

We request patrons to notify us promptly in case they discover in our columns advertisements of parties whom they have proved to be dishonorable or unworthy of confidence.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Dr. F. L. H. Willis may be addressed as usual for the summer Glenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
Jy7 13w*

Andrew Jackson Davis, Seer into the causes and natural cure of disease. Send for information to his office, 63 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass. 13w* Jy7

H. A. Kersey, No. 3 Bigg Market, Newcastle-on-Tyne, will act as agent in England for the BANNER OF LIGHT and the publications of Colby & Rich during the absence of J. J. Morse.

To Foreign Subscribers the subscription price of the BANNER OF LIGHT is $3,50 per year, or $1,75 per six months. It will be sent at the price named above to any foreign country embraced in the Universal Postal Union.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Drs. Barker and Mulliken

HAVE located at 28 Dartmouth street, Boston. We make all diseases a specialty except the eye and ear. All Tumors, old Sores and Chronic Diseases we cure. Consultation free. Office hours from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. 2w* Au25

A Wonderful Discovery.

BY a Clairvoyant. Melted Pebble Spectacles will restore lost vision. Send a 2-ct. stamp for valuable information. Address B. F. POOLE, Optician, Clinton, Iowa. 1w* Au25

DR. J. C. STREET,
78 Montgomery street, Boston, Mass.
Jy7 13w

TO STOUT PEOPLE.

Distant Patients Successfully Treated.

Obesity is fatty degeneration. This disease is not only cured, but permanently so, by new, rational means. No dieting. No failure in a single instance. Send stamp for full particulars to DR. EDITH BERDAN, 113 Ellison street, Paterson, New Jersey.

Thin People increased in weight and flesh by regulation of the nerves of nutrition. Vegetable Remedies. Can be sent by mail. Address DR. BERDAN, (formerly Dr. Edith Hale.) Au25

The Soul.

A MONTHLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO THE THEORIES AND PHENOMENA OF SOUL, MIND AND INTELLIGENCE.

Published by the FACTS PUBLISHING COMPANY, P. O. Drawer 5323, Boston, Mass.
L. L. WHITLOCK, Editor.
Single copies, 10 cents.....$1,00 per year. With premiums, $1,50 per year.

SPECIAL ONSET NUMBER.

CONTENTS.

Independent Telegraphing a Fact, L. L. Whitlock; What is God—the Spiritual Universe—and Matter? Dr. E. J. Arens; Two Instances of Mental Telegraphy, Allie Lindsay Lynch; Biographical Sketch of Dr. D. J. Stansbury; How I Became a Spiritualist, Mrs. J. J. Whitney; To the Readers of "The Soul"; Grey Eagle, L. L. Whitlock; Our Position Defined; Mrs. Forster's Experience; Resolutions; Public Physical Séance; Mesmerism as an Expounder of Spiritualism; Extract from a Letter of Alfred Russel Wallace. Au25

CAUTION!

SPIRITUALISTS who desire to support Mediums, Camp-Meetings and Speakers, and who intend to visit

ONSET BAY

this season, are cautioned to buy their excursion tickets for "ONSET." The 9 A. M. and 4:05 P. M. trains from Boston are the most rapid express trains. Sundays, at 8:15, from Boston.

For COMFORT, SPEED AND SAFETY,

Buy "ONSET" tickets, and thereby avoid the dust and annoyances of horses, and reach the Grove in advance of any other way. You will also help to support the meetings and

SAVE MONEY

For yourself, as you will secure advantages by showing your "ONSET" railroad ticket at the

CAMP-MEETING.
Je30 1stf

ONSET BAY.

BUY Excursion Tickets to East Wareham Station, and take East Wareham, Onset Bay and Pt. Independence horse cars, and save 5 cents in fares. Horse cars run entire length of Onset Avenue, and along the bluff by principal hotels, avoiding walks and baggage transfer of from one quarter to one half mile.

E. W., O. B. & Pt. I. H. R. CO.
Jy28 18tf M. M. COPELAND, Sec'y.

C. H. LANMAN,

26 Worcester Street, Boston, Mass.,
Medical, Business and Test Medium.

WRITTEN Messages from Spirit-Friends. Medical Advice and Treatment by Spirit-Doctors for all diseases by mail or personal consultation. Psychometric Readings given from any article. Terms $1,00 $2,00; less to the poor. No fee accepted for tests unless satisfactory. Hours 9 to 4.
Au25 1w*

LAKE PLEASANT, Montague, Mass., Aug. 14th, 1888.
DR. S. LOCKE, the wonderful Clairvoyant and Magnetic Healer, has been very successful in healing the sick and finding lost and stolen property on this camp-ground. Recently I lost a valuable ring, and consulted him as to its whereabouts. He located the ring, and I found it where he told me it was. WM. H. EDDY.
Au25

PROF. BEARSE, Astrologer. Office 172 Washington street; residence 26 Meridian street, Boston, Mass. Whole life written, horoscope free. Reliable on Business, Marriage, Disease, Speculation, etc. Send age, stamp, and hour of birth if possible. 1w* Au25

TO LET—Furnished Rooms, 98 Savin Hill Avenue, Dorchester. MRS. J. E. WICKSELL.
Au25 2w*

IF A MAN DIE,

Shall He Live Again?

A Lecture Delivered by PROF. ALFRED R. WALLACE, at Metropolitan Temple, San Francisco, Cal., Sunday Evening, June 5th, 1887.

This Pamphlet embodies, in clear typography and convenient form, the first and only discourse delivered in America on the subject of SPIRITUALISM by this widely-known English Scientist during his late visit to our shores.

It is devoted largely to a clear and forcible recounting of his own personal experiences among the phenomena, rather than to argumentative or theoretic development of the claims of the New Dispensation upon the consideration of the present age.

Copies may be had for circulation at the following low prices:
Pamphlet, 24 pages, price 5 cents.
13 copies for 50 cents.
30 " " $1,00.

Also an edition of the same Lecture, prefaced by a brief but comprehensive Biographical Sketch of Prof. Wallace, and embellished with a fine autotype portrait of this well-known Scientist.
Price 10 cents per copy.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE SPIRITUAL HARP;

A MUSIC BOOK FOR THE

Choir, Congregation and Social Circle.

By J. M. PEEBLES and J. O. BARRETT.
E. H. BAILEY, MUSICAL EDITOR.

This work has been prepared for the press at great expense and much mental labor, in order to meet the wants of Spiritualist Societies in every portion of the country. It need only to be examined to merit commendation.

Over one-third of its poetry and three-quarters of its music are original. Some of America's most gifted and popular musicians have written expressly for it.

The SPIRITUAL HARP is a work of over three hundred pages, comprising SONGS, DUETS and QUARTETS, with PIANO, ORGAN or MELODEON accompaniment.

Single copy $2,00, full gilt $3,00; 6 copies $10,00, 12 copies $19,00. When sent by mail, 14 cents additional required on each copy.
For sale by COLBY & RICH

AN ADVENTURE

Among the Rosicrucians.

BY F. HARTMANN, M. D.

This is an account of a dream-visit to a Rosicrucian Monastery, and of the topics expounded by its Adept inmates. Among these are the nature and power of Will, Psychic Locomotion, Universal Life, constitution and development of Man, the materialization of Ideas into Forms, the Doctrine of Numbers, of Counterparts, and of Elementals, Organization of Nature and Mind; expediency or otherwise of Theosophical Monasteries; Basic Principles of Alchemy, etc. The book is full of Occult information and suggestions.
12mo, cloth; price $1,00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Scientific Works
OF
H. B. PHILBROOK.

"WHAT AND WHERE IS GOD?" A Discussion of the Cause, Character and Operations of the Creator. Cloth, 12mo, pp. 480. Price $2,50.

"WORK OF ELECTRICITY IN NATURE." This work contains articles on the subjects of the Offices of Electricity in the Human Body, in the Growth of Plants, Origin of Species, the Earth, and in the Solar System. Cloth, 8vo, about 200 pp. Price $2,00.

"CAUSE AND CURE OF DISEASE." A book containing a description of diseases, and cures for the same where a cure is possible. Cloth, 12mo, pp. 300. Price $2,00.

"MATING IN MARRIAGE." A Discussion of the Question of a Proper Mating of the Sexes in Marriage. Cloth, 12mo, pp. 77. Price $1,00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Who was Jesus Christ?

Synopsis of a Lecture delivered through the mediumship of MRS. A. H. COLBY, before the First Brooklyn Society of Spiritualists, Sunday evening, Dec. 18th, 1887.
Pamphlet, pp. 45. Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

HEREDITY: Its Relations to Human Development. Correspondence between Elizabeth Thompson and Loring Moody.
The increasing interest in the subject of heredity is manifested by the many new books that are being presented to the public, of which the above work is one of the most recent. Mr. Moody has been long and favorably known as a hard-working, self-sacrificing philanthropist, ever ready to labor for the support of any cause having for its object the betterment of the condition of his fellow-men. In this effort he lays the axe of reform at the root of the tree of human sorrow.
Cloth, 32mo, pp. 159. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

AN EPITOME OF SPIRITUALISM AND SPIRIT-MAGNETISM: Their Verity, Practicability, Conditions and Laws. By the Author of "Vital Magnetic Cure," "Nature's Laws in Human Life," etc. Just the pamphlet to send to skeptics who look upon the subjects as delusion and the teachings without foundation. Let it be circulated broadcast.
Price, paper, 35 cents, postage 3 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE NEXT WORLD
INTERVIEWED.

BY MRS. S. C. HORN,
Author of "Strange Visitors."

CONTENTS.

Preface.
The Next World.
Prince Albert, "England and the Queen."
Harriet Martineau, "Life in the Spirit-World."
Charles Kingsley, "Reform in Spirit-Life."
Judge Edmonds, "The Two States: Real and Ideal."
Judge Edmonds, "Rich Men of New York."
John Stuart Mill, "Immortality."
Horace Greeley, "Home of Horace Greeley."
Professor Agassiz, "Evolution."
Secretary Seward, "Statesmanship from a Spiritual Standpoint."
Bulwer (Lord Lytton), "Metempsychosis."
Titian, "Art Notes."
Abraham Lincoln, "My Passage to Spirit-Life."
Charlotte Cushman, "Death by Fire."
Edwin Forrest, "Present State of the Drama."
Charles Dickens, "Christmas Carols."
De Quincy, "An Opium-Eater's Dream of Heaven."
Fanny Fern, "Spirit-Flowers."
Hans Christian Andersen, "The Story of the Great King."
Georges Sand, "Chateau in the Midst of Roses."
Mrs. Gaskell, "The Spirit-Bride."
Fennimore Cooper, "Lone Star; an Indian Spirit's Story."
Herodotus, "Pre-Historic Man."
Geo. Smith (Assyriologist), "Explorations; Assyrian and Spiritual."
Dr. Livingstone, "Leaves from my Spirit Journal."
Victor Emanuel, "Italy and the Church."
Pope Pius Nono, "Bless, and Curse Not."
Thiers, "To the Republic of France."
G. H. Lewes, "Epic of the Soul."
William Howitt, "Christianity and Spiritualism."
George Thompson, "A Call to Freedom."
Princess Alice, "An Appeal on Behalf of Children."
Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Philosophy: Ancient and Modern."
Lord Beaconsfield, "The Political Situation in England."
George Eliot, "A Change from Materialism."
Dean Stanley, "Spiritualism: The True and False."
Garibaldi, "The Liberator of Italy."
Charles Darwin, "The Law of Creation."
Mary, Queen of Scots, "Destiny."
Gambetta, "For France and Freedom!"
Wagner, "The Music of the Future."
Longfellow, "Outre Mer! Outre Terre!"
Jane Carlyle, "A Tribute to Thomas Carlyle."
Benjamin Franklin, "Spiritual Aphorisms."
Egypt, "Pre-Historic Ages."
Thomas Carlyle, "The Folly of Hero-Worship."
James T. Brady, "The Cause and Treatment of Crime."
Peter Cooper, "Educational Institutions in the Spirit World."
Robert Bruce, "Spiritualism, A Liberator."
Czar of Russia, Alexander II., "The Autocrat's Doom."
Lord Frederic Cavendish, "Capital Punishment Condemned."
Karl Friedrich Zöllner, "Spiritual State of Germany."
Cromwell Fleetwood Varley, "Astronomical Origin of Spiritual Phenomena."
Bishop Colenso, "Mistaken Policy of the Church."
Judge Edmonds, "The Spirit-Editor's Valedictory."
A Stranger, "Visit to the Spirit-World."

Price $1,50, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Historical Jesus
AND Mythical Christ;
OR,
Natural Genesis
AND
Typology of Equinoctial Christolatry
BY GERALD MASSEY.

This work contains the entire Section Thirteen of Mr. Massey's great work, "Natural Genesis." The reader will find at the close of the book the foot notes of the original work, a glossary of the unusual words, and an index of the subjects treated. A careful study of the work will usually result in the conviction that Mr. Massey is correct in his conclusion as to the origin of Christianity.
Paper, pp. 224. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"What is that sea whose shore is speech?
What is that pearl which in its depths is found?"
GULSHAN I RAZ.

APOTHEOSIS OF AN IDEAL,
A BOOK WHICH BODES FORTH
THE HIGHER OCCULTISM
AND THE Supreme Meaning of Life,
IN A
New Order of Literature.
Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Tail of the Earth;
OR,
The Location and Condition of the "Spirit-World."
BY WILLIAM DANMAR.
Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WORKS OF E. D. BABBITT, D. M.

RELIGION AS REVEALED BY THE MATERIAL AND SPIRITUAL UNIVERSE. This work presents the sublime scheme of the universe, and the Deific laws by which it is governed, in a new and original way, and develops a broad and joyous world's religion which rises above creeds and rests on a basis of material and spiritual science.
Price, in cloth, 12mo, pp. 365, with elegant illustrations, $1,50, postage free.

THE CHART OF HEALTH. A beautiful Chart, with colors, rollers and binding, over a yard long.
Price, postpaid, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FULL AND COMPREHENSIVE INSTRUCTIONS HOW TO MESMERIZE.
Ancient and Modern Miracles by Mesmerism. Also, 18 SPIRITUALISM TRUES By PROF. J. W. CADWELL, for thirty-five years the most successful Mesmerist in America. Contains as Full Instructions as ever given to my Pupils for Ten Dollars Each.
Ancient and modern miracles are explained by mesmerism, and the book will be found highly interesting to every Spiritualist.
It is the only work ever published giving full instructions how to mesmerize, and the connection this science has with Spiritualism.
It is pronounced by Allen Putnam and others, who have read it, to be one of the most interesting books ever written
Paper, pp. 128. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

EATING FOR STRENGTH: A Health Cook-Lery Book. By M. L. HOLBROOK, M. D.
This book should be in the hands of every person who would eat to regain and retain health, strength and beauty. It contains, besides the science of eating and one hundred answers to questions which most people are anxious to know, nearly one hundred pages devoted to the best healthful recipes for foods and drinks, how to feed one's self, feeble babes and delicate children so as to get the best bodily development. Mothers who cannot nurse their children will find full directions for feeding them, and so will mothers who have delicate children, and invalids who wish to know the best foods.
Cloth, $1,00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THOUGHTS ON THE LIFE OF JESUS. The author says: "We propose to lay before our readers such jottings of thought as may help some, we trust many, of our fellow-beings in the pathway of a wise, loving and happy development, strengthening in them the purpose to live more effectively, and thus to anticipate beyond the range of earth-life a brighter, more useful, and a happier career."
Cloth, pp. 95. Price 50 cents; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MUSCLE-BEATING; or, Active and Passive Home Gymnastics, for Healthy and Unhealthy People. By C. KLEMM, Manager of the Gymnastic Institution in Riga. With ten Illustrations.
The work is a novelty, and very suggestive. We should not wonder if it would prove a valuable addition to the numerous modes of exercise, especially for chronic invalids and sedentary persons.
Price 30 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE DAY OF REST. By W. MCDONNELL, author of "Exeter Hall," "The Heathens of the Heath," etc.
This little pamphlet, from the pen of the well-known author, will be found to contain an able argument against the enforc

Message Department.

☞ The Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond—whether for good or evil; that those who pass from the earthly sphere in an undeveloped state, eventually progress to higher conditions. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his or her reason. All express as much of truth as they perceive—no more.

☞ It is our earnest desire that those who recognize the messages of their spirit-friends will verify them by informing us of the fact for publication.

☞ Letters of inquiry in regard to this Department of THE BANNER must not be addressed to the mediums in any case. LEWIS B. WILSON, Chairman.

The Free-Circle Meetings

At this office have been suspended for the summer. They will be resumed, as usual, about the middle of September.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED,

THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

Report of Public Séance held June 12th, 1888—Continued from last issue.

Questions and Answers.

QUES.—[By N. M. Smith, Protem, Mo.] Does the use of ardent spirits, or tobacco, retard the development of mediumistic qualities?

ANS.—That depends on the character of the mediumistic qualities. We have seen individuals on earth who were frequently under the influence of ardent spirits, and who made a free use of tobacco, in various forms, and we have seen those individuals acted upon by unseen spirits, those who live near to the physical life, and found that the same individuals manifested and unfolded strong mediumistic powers. It did not appear to us that the use of ardent spirits or of tobacco retarded in any way the development of these particular mediumistic gifts, but that the manifestation of these powers was strong and vigorous through years of time. Well, what class of spirits are attracted to the mediumistic person who uses strong drink or tobacco, and who must, of necessity, then, live closely in contact with the lower forms of physical life?—for they are creatures of habit, slaves of appetite, morally and spiritually bound, not free and exalted in character or thought. They cannot be, since to be a slave to any debasing habit or appetite links the human being in contact with earth, and does not elevate him to a high standard of moral purity or truth. Then we must be obliged to answer our own questions, that the character of those spirits who are attracted to the medium developed under these darkening conditions must be of a low order, it must of necessity be of the earth earthly, partaking of physical life and its elements, and not calculated to teach mankind of that which is highest and best in life, not adapted to the unfolding of the spiritual nature and the stimulation of the highest qualities of the soul.

But you may say these people are useful in their way, since if they are strong mediums, and exercise that power brought to them by the unseen world, in whatever form or direction it may take, they are convincing skeptics, and those who do not understand anything of the future life, that there is an intelligent force at work outside of this mortal form of ours. Undoubtedly everything has its uses in life, and this very mediumship of which we speak may, under the direction of a higher law, be utilized to such a degree as to become beneficial to some one in mortal life; we cannot say. We are not criticising or commending, but are merely stating plain facts.

We have seen other persons on earth possessing mediumistic qualities of a finer nature, and their brains were of such a degree and formation as to generate a certain quality of magnetic power, which, under careful conditions, might be exercised and utilized by attendant spirits for fine spiritual work; an inspiration grand and uplifting might have been poured through those avenues of communication were they surrounded by more refined conditions in earth-life; but these people have become the slaves of appetite, bound down by habit, and consequently that finer force which might have been generated and set free for the use of high spirits takes within itself elements of a coarser character, and mingles with that which is more of the earth and becomes dissipated in the atmosphere. Such persons, not possessing the power of mediumship which belonged to the first of whom we spoke, cannot unfold that which they might possess were they living other lives; and so the development of mediumship will never go on in their organisms because of their earthly conditions.

Q.—[By J. B. Garvey, Spokane Falls, W. T.] Is healing mediumship an acquired gift or an inherited one?

A.—Healing mediumship belongs to the individual who possesses it in a large measure, for unless one's organism is finely stocked with magnetic qualities, unless he is so constituted that he can generate a larger amount of vital magnetism and nerve aura than is necessary for the supply of his own physical body, he cannot possibly be a successful healing medium. But if one has these qualities, and generates larger relays of magnetic force than he requires for his own healthful use, then he may become a healing medium, although he may not understand his power or how to apply it for beneficial results. Therefore if a man lives in harmony with himself, is healthful in physique, and is congenial with the forces in the atmosphere, he may perhaps generate this vital magnetism of which we speak. If he does, and this passes out easily from contact with his own organism, it may be imparted to others, and those others who are assimilative with him and who come into sympathy with his life and atmosphere may receive and be benefited by those emanations.

These healing mediums, however, or persons possessing this force, generally—or perhaps always—attract to their atmospheres attendant spirits; those who perceive the emanations of magnetism, and desire to utilize and apply them for good work. These attendant spirits may not be recognized by man on earth, and may not be understood as being present; it matters not; they set themselves to work to collect and conserve this surplus magnetism, so that it may be utilized; they also direct upon his organism magnetic qualities of their own, exercising their will power upon him, and thus conveying these vital forces through natural channels, by and through which they may reach the weak and suffering.

On the other hand, there are persons on earth, as in the spirit-life, whose magnetic emanations and generations are large, and pass out from contact with them to others; but these persons are not spiritual in character; they are not aspirational by nature; they live largely to the physical life, spend more time and thought upon carnal things than is good for any life. What is the result? Perhaps they are selfish and exacting in disposition, perhaps envious and crude, and altogether unlovely in their influence. These surplus magnetisms and emanations go forth just the same as they do from the other brother of whom we speak; they reach some life that may be affected by them, and that life is affected adversely, and made to cringe and cower beneath this strange, subtle influence. The magnetism of such selfish, exacting natures is depressing, unwholesome, and altogether of a vicious character. It behooves one, then, to look to himself, to see what life he shall lead, so that he may cheerfully and beneficially affect his kind, bring to them a precious influence, that may uplift and strengthen in the hour of suffering or the time of need.

Q.—[By the same.] Can the power to heal be imparted by one who has it to one who has it not?

A.—No; the power to heal cannot be imparted by one who possess it to one who does not, any more than the power of physical sight can be imparted from one who sees clearly to one who has been born blind; but the power to heal may be stimulated, developed and brought forth from one individual by the influence and action of some other, who is qualified and endowed to do this especial work. The physician who perceives the latent qualities of vision existing within his patient who appears blind, goes to work scientifically and skillfully to so direct and operate upon the system of the patient as to bring forth that latent quality—to develop his sight. And so with one who is a healing medium. Possibly he has powers which may affect beneficially another who has mediumship latent, but yet existent within his organism; possibly this healing medium may possess a band of attendant spirits who are able also to operate upon the other mortal, and to assist in developing his hidden powers. In this case, then, the second person may be developed or unfolded in that quality of healing which we mention; and thus he may be brought within the field of mediumship and assisted in a good work by these other forces and intelligences which recognize his power and desire to bring it forth.

Q.—[By L. Bush, Eagle Point, Ill.] What course of medical treatment and dieting can you recommend in a case of cancer?

A.—Cancer manifests the existence of unequal circulation, and a vitiated state of the vital fluid. The only proper means of eradication of the cancerous tendency in the physical system is that of purifying the blood, enriching and making it over. Cancer, we understand, partially owes its existence to an unequal distribution of the nervous force; this creates irritation, produces inflammation in connection with the debilitated state of the blood, and thus we find the cancerous growth so afflicting to the human system. One should study his own system as thoroughly as possible so as to understand how it may be affected; he should live in accordance with natural law, partaking only of that which is clean and wholesome, with pure water, clear fruits and fresh grains. One who has a tendency to cancerous growth should by no means indulge in fleshly food; animal food, we understand, being detrimental to the system in such a state. Ripe fruits that assimilate with the body, and are easily digested, are perhaps the best blood purifiers which one can find, and if one would make up his diet partially of this kind of food he would find it certainly of great benefit, not only in this condition of cancer but in many other abnormal states of the body.

We believe that a cancer may in many cases be treated and overcome by the application of vital magnetism, since vital magnetism assists nature in restoring the equilibrium of her forces, bringing the nervous system into a negative state, allowing its aura to freely and naturally distribute itself throughout the various portions of the body. Magnetic applications, if properly made use of, and by those adapted to the work, will equalize the circulation, and thus assist the vital fluid in performing its work.

We do not believe in the use of the knife, or in surgical operations, in this or other diseases, unless it be an extreme case.

We think all who have a tendency to this form of disease, if they try to understand themselves, not ignoring the subject until too late to treat it and overcome the difficulty, might be restored to a natural state of health and ease.

By the Controlling Spirit.

We wish to remark that a spirit stands before us who claims that he has manifested before, and now wishes to express a few words. He brings a degree of magnetic force from the spirit-world which he intends to apply to external work, in connection with other spirits who are seeking to make themselves manifest to friends at a distance, and it appears to us that this spirit will, in a very little while, show his power more fully than heretofore. It appears also that there are to be new manifestations of spirit force among those with whom he is associated or related, which will surprise, and in some instances confound, for it will prove that the spiritual power is at work.

This spirit desires to send word to one in the far West, a brother, perhaps, a message of love and greeting, with the assurance that he lives and has the power at times to visit the friends whom he has left there. Never before has he felt so vitally exercised with energy and potent force as at the present time. When he laid down the mortal it was with regret, for after he stood outside the form and viewed what had been left undone, the years he might have had if the physical had sustained the spirit, he felt regretful, because he wished the opportunity for doing more, not only for himself and his career but for those whom he loved.

"To-day," he says, "I am glad that the change came to me; it has unfolded my powers, and widened my opportunities for usefulness. True, not in that physical or material way which engaged my thought here, but it has brought me into close contact with my dear ones spiritually. I read and understand them. I know their thought is turned toward the hidden things of the other life. I am doing my best to reveal to them truths and lines of information which they desire to seek, and which may be adapted to their understanding."

And to one particular dear one he brings his love and says: "I will assuredly, so it seems to me, give you the word and thought that you long for, so that you may know positively, in the stillness and depths of your own heart, that I live, and am very near to you."

We get the name, Mr. Chairman, of Monroe E. Merrill. And we wish to say to the friend present that the spirit is thankful he came to-day, because he has asked the assistance of certain intelligences to aid him in his work. You undoubtedly know what that is, but not to the extent that it is unfolding under spiritual direction.

We return thanks for the flowers to all friends.

SPIRIT MESSAGES,

THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Mrs. B. F. Smith.

Report of Public Séance held May 18th, 1888.

Bartlett Ellis.

My home was in Plymouth, Mass. My name is Bartlett Ellis. I have often been here in spirit, when not able to make my voice heard. George is with me. The dear boy almost gave his life for me; many hours he watched beside me until the angel usher came to bear me safely across, and in a little less than one week he followed me into the spirit life. I thank God for the good children he gave us; and I would say to those who yet dwell in the mortal, go on and learn all you can, for this life is but a shadow.

The dear BANNER! I looked forward to its coming; it was meat and drink to me. What little I learned here was of great help to me when I entered the spirit-life; and beautiful was the vision that came to me before I left the old tenement of clay.

Dear ones, I would not return to stay. Father, mother and George are with me to-day, and all are happy in our spirit-home—satisfied with the new home—but we may progress from one grade of happiness to another.

Dorinda Horton.

I lived, Mr. Chairman, in Fowler, Ohio, and my name is Dorinda Horton. Three different times I have thought I would get power enough to speak, but we often fail when we think we shall be able to tell what we wish to.

How many times have I spoken with my dear daughters, and Samuel, my husband, of the return of the spirit to earth; but how faintly can we know, while in the mortal, what it is. You may think, dear friends, it is very easy to just come in and tell our story; but that is not all. First, we must get control of the instrument; next, we have to ask permission of the guides, and then, if given that, we make the attempt, thinking we will say a great deal, but always, as we leave, we think of many things we wish we had spoken; therefore, you will understand that, as we come to earth, we partake of earthly conditions.

Dear children, dear Gracie, how beautiful I find the spirit-world! For all sufferings endured I am repaid in my home above. Mother—dearest name on earth—came and beckoned me up higher. Many angel forms I saw around me, and friends I used to know. How delightful it was to feel at home again, as they came around me and greeted me with smiles.

For a long time I was not afraid to go. Oh, no! I firmly believed in the guardianship of the angels, and also that the dear loving ones did come to us often. I was not disappointed. It was more beautiful than mortals can conceive in this life. Do not think for a moment, dear ones, that we come here to tell a flattering story. You will say to us, as you throw off the old mortal, no one has ever told half of the beauties of spirit-life. The flowers are sweet here, but more beautiful there, for they are perfect. I love to listen to your music, which I loved while dwelling in the mortal; but our music is more sweet than yours can be.

Frankie P. Avery.

[To the Chairman:] Do you let little boys speak? Grandma said if I wanted to tell my story I must come quick, and the gentleman over here said I could come. I lived in Portland, Maine. My name is Frankie P. Avery. My papa is with me, and grandma and grandpa. My mamma's name is Jane, and she'll be glad to know her little boy did n't die, but only went where the pretty ladies are, where they sing so sweet, and where they love little children. When I passed away I was only about five or six years of age, but I've grown in spirit-life, and a gentleman here said I might try to tell my mamma a story. Tell her not to cry for Frankie, for I come to her every day, and papa, too, and grandma.

[To the Chairman:] I hope you'll put this letter in your paper, that has the picture on top, just the same as you do the others. Frankie P. Avery.

Richard Bartlett.

As I looked upon that child, I felt that if a child could make himself known to the dear ones in the mortal, surely we who are grown to manhood may get power enough to do the same. Richard Bartlett, of Kingston, N. H., was my name, and there was my home when in the mortal, and I feel it is the same to day.

I would like my boys, George and Morton, and also Dora, to know that father lives, although many years have passed on since they said that I was dead. False! Never yet have I met a dead person! All are alive, in every sense. I feel that if they see this letter they will understand very well who sent it. With the help of the angel-world, I am able to make myself known. I have tried through this organism, and at your last meeting I tried to speak through another. Also have I tried through a medium formerly here, who has now passed on higher. I have met her there.

Dora, go on; I feel you will succeed in the undertaking you have commenced. You will understand my meaning; I do not wish to make it public. Your mother also will understand. The child Bernie is with me, and is so afraid grandpa will forget to speak of it that she comes up pretty close to me. We well understand, dear daughter, the sad hours you have been called to pass through, in consequence of the wrong-doings of mortals. A day will come when they will look back with regret, for I know you have tried to make it right. Trust in us; we are working with you, dear child. I think you had better make the change as soon as you can bring things to bear, in the direction that George spoke to you about, in the home surroundings. When you get the letter, I would like for you to send it to Washington, to the brothers, and they will understand why you sent it, although they have closed their doors pretty tightly in regard to spirit-return. They may paste the windows, lock the doors, yea, even bolt them, and yet spirits can come in.

George, do learn a little while here, for you have privileges right and left, and if you do not accept them, in the spirit-life you will look back and say: "Father, opportunities were given me, but I neglected them."

Morton, I know you will say: "Father, why have you not made yourself known in all these years?" Dear boys, I have tried, but you on earth can understand nothing of spirit law, by which we are governed, held and led more perfectly than you can be by earthly law.

Dora, I would like you to carry the letter to mother, and then I want you to send it to the boys, for I hold an interest in you all, and I know if they could but give a little more thought to the subject of spirit return you would all be happier. I thank the angels every day that there is spirit communion, and that only a veil, a thin veil, hangs between us.

Darius Stickney.

My name is Darius Stickney. I lived in Pelham, N. H. I have tried to leave my name at this office before, as I know some dear ones who would like to hear a word from me.

Achsa, I know you do n't understand as much as it is your privilege to learn.

Mary, Alice and all, are in Lowell, and I know, through kind friends, this letter will reach them. I often feel, as I come near them, that they must know I am not a great way from them.

Achsa, dear wife, there have been many dark days for you. I know of the physical trouble that has come upon you, but I feel also, as I am with you so often, that I give you some strength to bear the burdens of the day. Go and see Jeanette when you can, for I know you will feel happier to sit and chat together; also Jackson. I know you miss the interviews; but in heaven we will meet and hold sweet converse together.

You may think that we often wish we could return to earth and talk with some dear ones. Oh, yes! for all spirits wish to return and communicate. I am satisfied with the home I now have, but I feel I can make it more beautiful as I progress on from one state of happiness to another. Dawson is here, also Margaret.

Jackson, the time is not far distant when I shall have an interview with you. There will be a channel opened for us to converse together. Dawson is learning, although it seems slow to him, because he has lately passed the portal called death. He finds the spirit-life more beautiful, he tells me, than he could have imagined when here. He would like to send a message to the dear ones in Marlboro, but not just yet.

I am glad I have been able to speak to-day, and I thank you very kindly, Mr. Chairman, for taking down these few broken sentences.

Gracie Maria George.

The gentleman over here said I might tell my story in a few words. I passed away in Washington, D. C. My parents had only been there a little while. We lived in Groveland, Mass., before that. My name is Gracie Maria George. They used to tell me that when I went to heaven Jesus would take me in his arms. I've not seen him yet. The angels came to us, and I've learned to know the beautiful ladies and children, but I have n't seen anybody they called by that name. There are bright, beautiful angel spirits, such as my mamma used to tell me a great deal about. She used to speak of brother Willie, and of grandma, whom I never saw in this life, because they were called up higher before I can remember. Grandma put out her hands to me and said: "Come, darling, I will care for you now"; and just in a few moments I saw Willie coming, smiling sweetly as he drew near me. He knew I was his darling sister, for he had been taught that in spirit-life.

In a little while I saw beautiful children coming around me with their hands full of lovely flowers. Most all the flowers are white in the spirit-life, because white is an emblem of purity and heaven.

I have been gone somewhere from three to five years in the mortal life. I suffered a great deal, I know. I heard dear mamma say she would not call her darling back to suffer, for I could hear them talking after I was "dead." But papa and dear mother knew when they carried that little body, but seven years old, away, that I was not dead. They missed me, oh! so much. Sometimes I would see the tears drop from dear mamma's eyes, but then, in a moment, she would look up and say: "Angels, take care of my darling." Grandma says that while the sickness was upon me, dear mother asked the dear ones in spirit life to make me comfortable, and also that grandma might come and take me, when they knew I could not stay longer. It was a beautiful sight, they said, when the little spirit was taking its flight. I saw them coming; many I did n't know, but Auntie Mary came and was glad to see me.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for letting the children speak. In heaven they allow them to talk, and, more than that, they do n't tell them to keep still.

Sarah A. Otis.

I lived in Lowell, Mass. My name is Sarah A. Otis; my husband's name, James Otis. I think I shall not be forgotten by many in Lowell, or in Concord, N. H., where my husband has been a part of the time. Many dear ones had crossed the portal before I was called up higher. I did not fear the change. I passed out silently and quietly, and found them coming on each side to welcome me to the blessed home beyond.

How beautiful the thought that just over the river the loved ones stand, waiting and watching for us to cross, and that only a crystal river runs between the mortal and the immortal life, with a group of friends on either side!

It is but a little while since, in speaking with a dear spirit from my own home, we both expressed the same feeling: Oh! why will not the dear ones open a door of communication with us? Do not say it is because you have not the privilege, for I know opportunities are given, if you will accept them. It will not do to say that there are no channels open, for many instruments are available, and if you do not choose to do your part now, by-and-by e you will look back with regret.

I would not return to stay. I am happy. Alice Childs stands beside me, but is not strong enough to communicate to-day. I think it will be understood who she is. Do, dear ones, learn a little of the future while you are here. We all speak thus to you, because we see that on entering spirit-life this knowledge becomes of great help to us.

Oscar Plummer.

I would like to send a letter to my father and mother. I was but a child when I left the mortal form, but have grown to manhood in spirit-life. My home was in Newburyport, Mass. My name is Oscar Plummer.

Father, I understand the trouble that has come of late, and I feel assured if you had taken no notice of what that minister said you would not have had the sickness. Father, let me give you this advice: I would not spend my breath over anything that looks so inconsistent, because the minister (not yours, by any means,) said "the Bible says the dead do not return." That 's all correct. But the living do.

Now, father, do n't worry over it. We do n't expect those old dead bodies to come to earth, and I would not even think of it. Throw it off as chaff, father, and do n't get excited over it. My father believes firmly in spirit-return, and he will not countenance anything else.

Mother, Frankie is here with me; not your "little boys," for we have grown in spirit-life to manhood. Aunt Mary and grandma Plummer say the same. Father, I am your own dear child Oscar.

Aunt Mary—for I have one on both sides, on father's and mother's—Aunt Mary Plummer says do n't trouble about it any more. Rachel is here. Mother, I come not to you as a child, for I am grown and educated, in spirit, and feel that I should have been a poor scholar if in all these many years I had not learned something spiritually.

Let me again urge you, dear father, to throw off the chaff, but hold the wheat, for you 'll find there 's a great deal yet, and I know you will be happier, and feel better, even if you do trouble yourself about things that are spoken, partly through ignorance, and partly from obstinacy, as I see it spiritually. My father is Moses Plummer; my mother's name is Elizabeth. We were both little boys when we passed away.

Rosie Fletcher.

My home, when I passed away, was in Lowell, Mass. My name is Rosie Fletcher. I have found, many times, as I have entered this room, that I could not control so as to be able to send a message. Father and mother are with me in spirit, and so is grandfather and grandmother. To dear grandma, who walks on earth, (for there were two grandmas in one home) many times I have stood close beside you, including Aunt Ella and the children. I have heard auntie say: "Mother, I believe some of the dear ones must be here, because my shoulder aches." Now, dear auntie, we are working with you, for we well know you can be instrumental in writing for the spirit world.

Grandfather Jennison is here, as I said before, and also mother, and send greetings to you all. Dear, dear Uncle Fred, we come often to you while you are keeping watch over the building. It is n't always Charlie, but frequently some of the others are there. Grandfather says you are not doing your right work, and you feel it forcibly, knowing in your own soul you ought to be doing more for the angel-world. Aunt Mary says: "Well, let well enough alone." Now, Uncle Fred, it is n't well enough, if you are not doing your right work. Father says many times when he comes he sees the bright angels around you, trying hard to control you; and you feel, in the silent hours of the night, while doing duty in the college building, that you are not alone; you sense the presence of so many of us. As Uncle John said, we are all anxious to give a word.

I know, grandma, you often say: "Rosie, if you are with me so much, why do you not tell me all I do?" Why, grandma, how could I make you hear me? If you 'll give me an instrument, I 'll tell you all I see. Now, grandma, do n't ever think we are far away, because we are not. I know you sense our presence at times a great deal stronger than at others. Father says he thanks the higher intelligences that we are able to come into communication with you in the mortal, and as soon as the privilege is granted him, he will speak for himself. Grandfather says you have all been looking the paper over, and have turned many times to see if there were not a few words of cheer and comfort from some one of the many friends who have crossed the portal termed death. My mother's name is Amanda; my father's, Luther J. Fletcher.

John T. Colter.

I passed away in Clinton, Mass. My name is John T. Colter. I have tried before to control the medium, as the young lady of sixteen summers has just said, and I am well pleased to be able to speak at this time. We of the spirit-world, as you mortals will perceive, are always grateful for a privilege of this kind. Little do you realize how many efforts we make, and how many disappointments come to us when we fail to make our words heard, so that they may appear in your paper.

Jack, go on. You are learning pretty fast, boy, and I think it is worth more to you than it was when we drove the team together, even what little you then gained. I have talked with the Captain, and he thanks God and the angels that there are some who will listen to us as we come to earth. Aunt Jeannette, mother is here; aunt Isabel and father are coming up slowly.

I have felt, many times, when I have seen one and another enjoy the privilege of speaking, if I get in I 'd say everything all at once, but I find I 'm in the same pew with the rest of them. I can't think of half I would like to say, but I know the dear ones will take it for granted that I appreciate the privilege and the kindness of you all, spirit and mortal, who help us to open a channel through which we may reach our loved ones.

I promised you, Jack, whenever an opportunity offered I should surely grasp it, but I could not tell you when that was to be. To-day I found the door ajar, and on asking permission of the guardian spirit I received it.

I have some friends in Worcester, and I hope this letter will reach them. Fannie Fisher, I am sure, will receive it, if Jack gets hold of it.

Adelaide Wright Tufts.

I passed out in Boston. My name is Adelaide Wright Tufts.

I am glad to speak in this meeting, for dear ones are watching and waiting for the coming of the paper, thinking perhaps the name of some friend may be printed there.

Mother is with me to-day. Zed is here also. Sister Lizzie at one particular time, when she had a lady friend with her, tried to come near enough to an instrument to hold sweet conversation with us, but she failed to obtain the privilege. Dear sister! I never will forsake her. Many times when I see her tried by mortals with whom she comes in contact, she should look a little higher, and knew that Addie will do all she can to help her.

Oh! my dear children, do learn a little. Lizzie, do try and give a few words to my darling daughter Hattie. I know she will take it kindly from you, although to outward appearance she may not believe her mother is able to come and speak to her through another organism. Lizzie, when you know you have so much power yourself, and fully believe we live and are able to come and talk with you, provided you do your part, learn all you can this side, and when it is possible give out a little gently to Hattie. Dear child, mother watches over you, and asks the angels to keep their silent watch around you.

Nancy is here, and would gladly send a few crumbs of comfort to Henry, who is starving for a little spiritual food. I know he misses the privileges you have had in weeks back.

Beulah and little 'Beth are watched over tenderly with a mother's gentle care. Henry, we all love to speak to you; we all send greetings from the spirit side. Flavie has said, at three different times, she thought Nancy would be able to send a message, but she has failed in power as yet. Henry, do not give up the little you have learned this side, for in heaven it will be worth a great deal to you.

Yes, dear sister, I do go to Dannie's and May's, and I see they are very happy away in the country; they are happy together; they know very little of our coming, but are taken up with worldly affairs. We ought to have power enough by this time to speak to you all, but we are doing as fast as we can. I thank the angel-world for giving us the privilege of speaking a few words.

John Burt.

My home was in Walpole, N. H., and my name is John Burt. I want you to know, Mr. Chairman, that this was no new thing to me. I felt that I came fully into communication with my spirit-friends while I dwelt among mortals. Now it is not a thought with me, it is a knowledge, and what I learned here has been of great service since I crossed the crystal river.

For many years before I let go the mortal I felt that I held sweet communion with the dear ones of earth, as well as with those who had gone higher. I mean with those who were not present I held spiritual communion, and since passing out I find it was no myth; it was a truth, and I was happier for so doing. It was spiritually that I caught a glimpse beyond the veil.

I would say to Joseph and William that we are making some progress in spirit. As my angel mother used to say: "We throw our influence for good or evil while here," and I find it the same spiritually; we do throw our influence for good or evil. Open your spirit doors, ye mortals, and let the loved ones come in and make themselves known. Rapping at your door every day, yes, every hour of the day, some dear one comes and asks permission to enter.

Now, let me add one more word. This earth-life is but a shadow compared with the life beyond. I have felt so happy when here on earth in coming into communication with the dear ones. It has been often said: "You supposed you did." I knew it; there was no suppose about it; and I find now there was no fraud. I was not deceived; we did hold sweet communion together.

Dr. John Scobey.

My home, Mr. Chairman, was in Shell Rock, Iowa. You may call me Dr. John Scobey. My friends have been looking eagerly in the good BANNER OF LIGHT to see if Father Scobey had not sent them a word. Oh! how many times, when I was too feeble physically to hold the paper, have I asked my dear ones to read to me, and to see first if there was anything from Father Hazard. Not but what I loved every word of the paper; and the messages—how I did love to read them over and over while I was able to do it.

I had reached four score years in the mortal. I was looking forward to the day when they would say come up higher, and I promised my dear daughter that whenever the privilege of control was granted me in this circle-room, I would surely grasp it. The channel is now open for me, and I bless God for the means so wisely provided for spirits to commune with mortals.

Many times have I lain upon the bed, during sickness, and held sweet converse with the loved friends who had crossed the river—and I felt it was real.

My dear wife and angel-child, my darling daughter, would ask me if I suffered. I replied, "Not much." I did not like to complain. The spirit-world appeared so near to me that I almost lived with its inhabitants for weeks and months before I realized they said, "Dr. John is dead." We find no dead people in spirit life. I do think the word death should be blotted out and life substituted for it. To throw aside the mortal form is to begin to live. Little can we convey to you mortals a sense of the beauties of spirit-life. One after another tells you of our beautiful homes, yet we can draw but a faint outline at best; when you leave the earthly condition then will you test it for yourselves.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman. For years I loved to read your paper, and watched for the hour of its coming, and was deeply disappointed if it were delayed even but a day.

Lucinda Brown Chickering.

I passed away in old Andover. My name is Lucinda Brown Chickering. I would like very much to reach Milton. I had heard a great deal of spirits coming to earth, and I laughed a little at the idea of dead people talking through others. I find now I was the one in the dark, and I feel like asking permission to speak here. But am I any more to blame for my ignorance than many others? It makes us feel a little better if somebody else is in the same situation. I did n't mean wrong. It was through ignorance. I did n't understand, or try to understand, that we could commune with the dear ones who had passed from our sight. Mother had often spoken in this way: "Tinnie, the angels come to earth." But I did n't realize what angels were; I had been taught to believe they had wings. Now, I have n't seen any such people; and I find also, by the spirit teachings, that angels are the good, the pure, the blessed ones, who were mortals once as much as you or I, only they have progressed on to purity, and that is why they apply to them the term "angels."

William is here, and Jacob Chickering—also Sarah. They did n't know very much about the spirits coming to earth; or, if they did, they kept still about it, thinking I did.

I am thankful I have left that old, distressed body. I am glad that I did n't die, and that I am able to make myself known. I thought at first I would not tell my name, but the guide said, "Then you must stay out"; so I thought it would be better to give it.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for listening to me. I never controlled before.

Alice Ladd.

My name is Alice Ladd, and my home was in Groveland, Mass.

Father, do n't say you had rather hear from Aunt Sophia, for I know you love me; and if you could only believe a little stronger, you 'd feel happy to know that Alice does come home. Mother, if little Annie can come in a meeting, I think I ought to in one no larger than this. The gentleman over here said I could tell my story, hoping it might be of benefit to father and mother yet here in the mortal. I often come home. Dear father, I am not gone far away, and sometimes you will learn a good deal more of our coming than you know to-day. I am happy with grandma.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

May 25.—Thomas D. Morse; Elizabeth F. Lindsay; Oscar Lane; Mary Mich; Ruth Hamlet; Sophia A. Chadbourne; Maria A. Falls; Joseph Merriam; Frank Griffith; John Neal; Della Peasley Crockett; Charles Woodwell; Samuel Hidden; Carrie Hodgkins Condell; Isaac Proctor Greenleaf.

THE MESSAGES ON HAND,

Not mentioned above, will appear in due course.

☞ Prof. Phelps, of Andover, having endeavored to inaugurate a new crusade on the old-time "Satanic" plane, thinking people will do well to read that pertinent work by Allen Putnam, Esq., entitled, "WITCHCRAFT OF NEW ENGLAND EXPLAINED BY MODERN SPIRITUALISM"; Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, have it on sale.

Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

HANNAH HULSE.

The marvelous message from my dear mother, HANNAH HULSE, in the BANNER OF LIGHT June 16th, is true in every particular. She passed to higher life at 4 P. M., Jan. 4th, 1886; yet the same night she called me by my home-name—Addison. Although over one thousand miles away, her call informed me in advance what was verified the following day by telegraph. I being alone in the "East," who but she could have told my thoughts and feelings, which had never been made known to mortal? Soon I was impressed by her to thank the lady in person for being the instrument for the communication; and, would you believe it, instantly I was again called (by name), and she bade me write my brother William, (a clergyman,) and tell him that church creeds or disbelief formed no barrier to our mother's spirit returning to her children; and to tell him that she is near us, that she is cognizant of the wonderment at home about her return; that all are still watched over by a loving mother.

Such a tender and hallowed influence came over me, that nothing can disprove the fact that she dictated the message (for neither myself nor any one who knew me was present) and spoke the cheering words that she still lives; and what may seem strange to some, I have never realized that she has passed on, for I have known her living presence daily—have seen her and have heard her speak. My father wrote me that she called his name while he was traveling in Kansas. She never did a wicked act in her life, and she is incapable of deception, therefore none but she could have given us such a truthful message.

Lowell, Mass. L. A. HULSE.

JOHN B. MORRISON.

In the BANNER of Aug. 4th a spirit message appeared, purporting to have been delivered by JOHN B. MORRISON, late of this town. The style of the message was characteristic of Mr. Morrison, and the names and other incidents given were all absolutely correct. I was well and intimately acquainted with him in life, and I fully identify the message as coming from him. I have also submitted it to other of his friends and neighbors, all of whom say it must have been he who spoke. There can be no doubt but that John B. Morrison, though dead, yet speaketh. He passed to spirit-life two years ago last June.

P. DYER.

Farmington, Maine, Aug. 10th, 1888.

CHARLES EMERSON—WILLARD GALE—ALICE HILLS—L. MERRILL.

I have been a reader of the BANNER OF LIGHT from the appearance of its first number, and from its perusal have with much satisfaction become gradually led from a natural skepticism to a recognition of an immortal existence for all mankind. The spirits whose names I give—CHARLES EMERSON, WILLARD GALE, ALICE HILLS and L. MERRILL—were well known to myself and others in Ayer's Village, in which place I resided more than twenty-seven years. The incidents they mention I also know to be true.

EDMOND B. SARGENT.

Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 2d, 1888.

RAYMOND DODGE.

Never have I taken a pen with more pleasure than I now do to acknowledge the receipt of THE BANNER containing a communication from my son, RAYMOND DODGE, who passed away in Southern California two years since.

It is correct in every particular. The allusion to "duck hunting" is especially characteristic, for, during a brave struggle of two and a half years with his disease, it cost him many a bitter pang to give up, one after another, the excursions into the mountains on horseback, the hunting, and all the active out door pleasures so dear to the heart of a boy of twelve or fourteen.

I shall look anxiously for the promised letter from my brother, and others, I trust.

MRS. MARCUS DODGE.

Northbridge Centre, Mass., July 30th, 1888.

NANCY B. DOOLITTLE.

In BANNER OF LIGHT of July 28 I noticed a communication from NANCY B. DOOLITTLE, of South Boston. I knew the lady well, having an acquaintance of thirty years' standing, and I find that what she says there is very characteristic of her, so much so that her friends, on reading it, cannot doubt it came from her. She was a gentle, lovable woman, quiet and unassuming in manner, and loved by all who knew her. May THE BANNER long wave over all the land, bring consolation to many sorrowing hearts, and convince them of the truths of immortality.

MRS D. R. STOCKWELL.

16 Bolton Place, Charlestown, Mass.

ABBIE A. SPINNEY.

I wish to say that the message of ABBIE A. SPINNEY given at the BANNER circle May 11th, is fully recognized by her friends, and they thank the Infinite Spirit that the way is open through which our loved ones can identify themselves to us.

Union, N. H. CHARLES C. HAYES.

August Magazines.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.—A profusion of excellent wood engravings and four full page colored illustrations, one being "A Rose Vender of Pompeii," accompany Sophie B. Herrick's interesting contribution to this number, "The Romance of Roses." Part IV is given of "Miss Lou," a Southern story, the last published one of E. P. Roe, a favorite writer who has recently passed on. Leroy Beaulieu writes of "The Black and White Priests of Russia," and a very readable and fully illustrated account of "The Chinese in New York" is given by Wong Chin Foo. "The Ladies of the American Court" consists of brief sketches and twenty portraits of Mrs. Cleveland and the wives of Cabinet officers and others. A number of poems and a Russian story by Ivan Tourguenoff are among the remaining contents. New York: The Cosmopolitan Publishing Co.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.—"The Triumphs of Trade" has for its special topic those that have made a highway of the seas. "Scientific Temperance" is treated upon in an article reporting an interview with Dr. B. W. Richardson. Finely illustrated articles this month are "Boating at Cambridge," "Glasgow and Its Exhibition," and "What to Wear in July. In fiction, new portions of "Monica," and "For the Good of the Family," "Our Duplicate Story," and "Her Term," a story in one chapter. New York: Cassell & Co.

THE QUIVER.—A new serial story, "The Beauforts of Beatrice Gardens," is commenced; "The Childhood of a Chinese Boy" described, and the author of "Joshua Padgetts" writes "On Minding One's P's and Q's." Fine, spirited engravings, and a thoroughly interesting letter-press, render this issue one of the best. New York: Cassell & Co.

THE INDEPENDENT PULPIT.—The editor, who was still in New Mexico, continues his narrative of experiences on his mission as a torch-bearer of liberalism. Some of the articles treat upon "Prayer in the Public Schools," "Money and Its Mission," and "The Principles of Jesus Not the Doctrines of Christianity." Waco, Texas: J. D Shaw.

THE SIDEREAL MESSENGER gives its usual extended variety of articles upon astronomical science. Northfield, Minn.: W. W. Payne.

"THE GROWING YOUTH" contains two prize stories, 'How John was Cured" and "The Old Bell," and a prize sonnet, "Work." Mt. Vernon, N. Y.: F. B. Hawkins.

"OUR LITTLE ONES."—The youngest of the household will find many incidents of their summer day rollickings in "Haying Time," "All About a Big Wave," "Out in a Wind," "August," and "After the Shower." Boston: Russell Publishing Co.

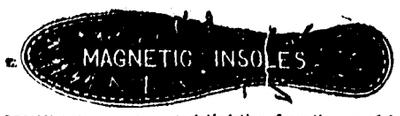
HERALD OF HEALTH gives "Some Good Advice for August Weather," and a variety of hygienic instruction for all weathers. New York: Box 2141.

THE ESOTERIC continues "Roads to Immortality," gives "Practical Instruction for Reaching the Highest Goal of Human Attainment," and in its other contents treats upon "The Electricities and Harmonies of the Soul," "Twelve Manner of Genii," etc. Boston: 478 Shawmut Avenue.

THE PATH resumes its analysis of the Bhagavad-Gita, and presents a resumé of theosophical teachings. New York: W. Q. Judge.

THE MANUFACTURER AND BUILDER illustrates current industrial progress. New York: 83 Nassau street.

Advertisements.



THE following characteristic letter, from the pen of Lyman C. Howe, the veteran speaker and writer for the noble cause of Spiritualism, speaks for itself. Mr. Howe has worn our Shields for more than five years, and has had large experience with them among his friends. The readers of THE BANNER have implicit confidence in the integrity and good judgment of Mr. Howe. He always writes and speaks what he knows to be TRUE. Write him for further evidence about our Shields, and he will give his experience:

DR. THACHER:

Dear Sir—Your Magnetic Shields have some merit, but on the whole I am inclined to call them a fraud. They soothe and vitalize the nerves, put new life into the blood, warm cold feet, build up the debilitated and consumptive, create a row among the old sinners in the constitution, and keep stirring them until they enter upon a war of extermination, or commit suicide to escape; put neuralgia and rheumatism hors du combat, make a weak man vigorous and saucy, and cure family quarrels where they originate in bad blood or depraved nerves; but they don't mend cork legs nor glass eyes, nor cure warts on an evil temper. They should be a specific for total depravity, alcoholism, and especially for debilitated pocketbooks. Here is where they fail. If you can improve them so that you can guarantee a perfect cure for financial fits, consumptive bank accounts and religious hydrophobia, your fortune is made. Then, as your best advertising card, I would advise you to cover the Brooklyn Tabernacle and its pastor, and if you cure him you need waste no more printer's ink. Yours for health.

LYMAN C. HOWE.
Fredonia, N. Y.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD COMPANY,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.
Jy7 13w*

Dr. F. L. H. Willis

May be Addressed until further notice,
Clenora, Yates Co., N. Y.

DR. WILLIS may be addressed as above. From this point he can attend to the diagnosing of disease psychometrically. He claims that his powers in this line are unrivaled, combining, as he does, accurate scientific knowledge with keen and searching psychometric power.

Dr. Willis claims especial skill in treating all diseases of the blood and nervous system. Cancers, Scrofula in all its forms, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and all the most delicate and complicated diseases of both sexes.

Dr. Willis is permitted to refer to numerous parties who have been cured by his system of practice when all others had failed. All letters must contain a return postage stamp.

Send for Circulars, with References and Terms.
Jy7 13w*

DR. J. R. NEWTON

STILL heals the sick! Spirit, Mind and Magnetic Cures at a distance through MRS. NEWTON. Send for testimonials to MRS. J. R. NEWTON, P. O. Station G., N. Y. City. 13w* Jy7

SOUL READING,

Or Psychometrical Delineation of Character.

MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE would respectfully announce to the public that those who wish, and will visit her in person, or send their autograph or lock of hair, she will give an accurate description of their leading traits of character and peculiarities of disposition; marked changes in past and future life; physical disease, with prescription therefor; what business they are best adapted to pursue in order to be successful; the physical, mental adaptation of those intending marriage; and hints to the unharmoniously married. Full delineation, $2.00, and four 2-cent stamps. Brief delineation, $1.00, and four 2-cent stamps.

Address MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE,
Centre street, between Church and Prairie streets,
Ap7 6m* White Water, Walworth Co., Wis.

ASTONISHING OFFER.

SEND three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power. DR. A. B. DOBSON, Maquoketa, Iowa.
Jy14 13w*

Sealed Letters Answered

BY MRS. ELIZA A. MARTIN, Oxford, Mass. Terms $1.00 and two 2-ct. Stamps. 4w* Au11

SEALED LETTERS.

ELEANOR MARTIN now makes specialty of business. $5.00. Full spiritual Message, $10. 7 Cline Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Register at P. O. 4w* Au25

MRS. R. T. CLANEY,

BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 81 Lookout Street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6w* Jy21

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSBY will remove to the country for a while, where she will continue to give Life Reading for $2, and stamp, and answer six questions by letter, 25 cents and stamp. Diseases a specialty. Address West Gardiner, Me. 2w* Au18

SEALED LETTERS answered by DR. GEO C. BARNEY, Medical Medium, Detroit, Mich., 89 Adams Avenue, West. Terms $1.00. Medicine $1.00 Au18 2w*

The Writing Planchette.

SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. To so unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been attained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practice in writing mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes" which may be consulted on all questions as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.

DIRECTIONS. Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board; in a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let two try it together. If nothing happen the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.

The Planchette is furnished complete with box pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.

PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 50 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

Spiritual Workers

Photographed from Crayon Portraits
BY ALBERT MORTON.

Additions to this List of Portraits are being Drawn.

DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.
PASCHAL BEVERLY RANDOLPH.
CHARLES H. FOSTER.
CHARLES H. FOSTER and SPIRIT ADAH ISAAC'S MENKEN, after spirit Photograph by W. H. Mumler.
PROF. ROBERT HARE.
PROF. WILLIAM DENTON.
DR. H. F. GARDNER.

Cabinet size. Price 50 cents each.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GARLAND'S VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS.

The greatest known remedy for all Throat and Lung Complaints. For Catarrh, Asthma, etc., etc., it has no equal. It is warranted to cure Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, and Inflammation of the Lungs. It is free from all opiates and minerals, or any other injurious ingredient; and is therefore harmless in all cases; likewise palatable and beneficial in regulating and strengthening the system; and as a BLOOD PURIFIER IS TRULY UNRIVALLED. A box, taken according to directions, is warranted in all cases to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded by the proprietor, DR. M. H. GARLAND, 468 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

Price, per box (one-fourth pound), 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"Glad Tidings of Immortality."

Finely executed lithographs bearing the above title have been received by us. The size is 22½x28½. The principal figure is a female, evidently designed to represent a materialized spirit, crowned with a wreath of flowers, and bearing a long band of them in her left hand, while in her right is a scroll inscribed with the words "Message of Love." Over her head are three stars. The drapery on each side appears to be the curtains of a cabinet, between which she stands in an exceedingly graceful position, suggestive of the line, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." From above a ray of light radiates over the entire form. Vignette likenesses of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Lillie and Mrs. Britten, and Messrs. Howell and Colville, are given, and excellent ones they are. The artist is Mr. Shobe, who, we are informed, has executed many beautiful drawings illustrative of the Spiritual Philosophy.

Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.

I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.

I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters (from the above data). Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions, in accordance with my understanding of the science, for a fee of $1; Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.

Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. July 19.

DIAGNOSIS FREE.

SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M.D., Principal, Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich.
Au4 1m*

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,

Developing and Business Medium,
ALSO
Clairvoyant Physician,
474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,
(Corner of Concord street.)
Sittings daily from 9 A.M. till 5 P.M. Price, $1.00.

Unequalled Advantages.

DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.

Development of Mediumship a Specialty.

SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $4.00 IN ADVANCE.

CIRCLES.

Sunday, at 11 A.M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P.M., for Psychometry, Tests and Inspirational Music. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf Au4

Something New and Pleasing.

WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1.00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m Jy7

Written Communications

On Business, Mediumship and Health,
Through the mediumship of J. W. FLETCHER 6 Beacon street, Boston. tf Jy28

MISS A. PEABODY,

BUSINESS, Test, Clairvoyant Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday and Thursday evenings. Tuesday afternoon at 3. 1 Bennet st., corner Washington st., Boston. Au25 1w*

MISS HELEN A. SLOAN,

MAGNETIC Physician, Vapor and Medicated Baths. Celebrated "Acid Cure." Office hours from 9 A.M. to 8 P.M. 171 Fremont street, corner Mason st., Boston. Au11 4w*

MRS. L. M. VIERCE

WILL be at her Rooms during the summer, No. 283 Columbus Avenue, Hotel Aldermarle, suite 11, Boston. 5w* Jy28

MRS. ALDEN,

TRANCE MEDIUM, Medical Examinations and Magnetic treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston. Au11 5w*

MRS. A. FORRESTER

WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. 30 Chapman street, corner Shawmut Avenue, Boston. 1w* Au25

Massage and Magnetism.

MRS. DR. F. M. FAXON, 22 Wilbur street, Room 7 A, Boston. Obstinately treated. Also instruction given. Jy28 10w*

MISS L. E. SMITH,

MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P.M. 14 Union Park st., Boston. A25 4w*

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter address for personal treatment or his powerful Spirit Magnetized Paper, during the summer months, 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Two packages by mail, $1.00. Jy7 13w*

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 8 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment. Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Chloride Sea Salt Baths. Au25 4w*

MISS L. M. WHITTING—Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, stiffness of limbs from sprains or weakness, is the most successful in use. Hotel Bedford, 700 Tremont street, Suite 3. Au4 12w*

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, 48 Winchester Avenue, Boston. 4w* Au4

MISS C. W. KNOX, Test, Business and Medical Medium, Massage Treatment given at 147 Springfield street, Boston. 2w* Au11

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 8 Bosworth street, Cor. Chester Square, Boston. Residence, Roxbury Post-office, Mass. Office hours from 1 to 4 P.M. Jy7 2w*

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. 1w* Au4

J. A. SHELHAMER,

MAGNETIC HEALER,
Office 8½ Bosworth Street (Room 5), Boston, Mass.

WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases, Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription, and advice $2.00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1.00 per package. Healing by laying on of hands. Parties wishing examination of their case can send lock of hair, state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Blood Syrup, Kidney and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or two boxes for $1.00.

Applications from P. A. E. Co., Mexico, Europe, Australia and Fiji Islands, which have never failed to receive prompt attention, should be addressed as above. Au4 13w*

THE

KABALA DENUDATA

(TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH),

Containing the following Books of the Zohar:

1. The Book of Concealed Mystery;
2. The Greater Holy Assembly;
3. The Lesser Holy Assembly.

BY S. LIDDELL MACGREGOR MATHERS,
Fra Ros. Cru.

To every person who really wishes to understand the hidden meaning of the Old Testament, and especially of Genesis, to the student of Occult Literature, and last, but not least, to the Cosmogonical Mystic, the study of this work will be found invaluable.

This work is one that no Occult student should be without, inasmuch as it is the key and fountain head of the mystical ideas held by the great mediæval philosophers.

Cloth, price $5.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Spiritual Ethics

AND

Historical Discourses,

Delivered under Inspiration by W. J. Colville, in Berkeley Hall, Boston, during 1885 and 1886.

CONTENTS.—The Living Test of Truth; The Problem of Prayer; The Practicability of the Ideal; All Saints and All Souls; Who and What Is God? Temples of the Living God; Spiritual Valentines; The Problem of Good and Evil; The Philosophy of Mental Healing; Esoteric Buddhism; Miracles and Modern Science; Spirit Materialization; Ancient Spiritualism Compared with Modern; The Great Need of Spirituality; Jesus of Nazareth, Part I.; Jesus of Nazareth, Part II.; Jesus at the Wedding Feast; Gardens of Eden and Gethsemane; The True Spiritual Resurrection; Many Mansions in the Father's House; In Memoriam—Charles H. Foster; Atlantis; Prehistoric America; Egypt; Riddle of the Sphinx; Looking Backward and Looking Forward.

Cloth, Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE

Children's Progressive Lyceum

EDUCATOR.

CONTAINING EASY AND PROGRESSIVE LESSONS ON THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY AND THE SPIRITUAL AND MORAL CULTURE OF CHILDREN.

BY ALONZO DANFORTH.

The author says: "In presenting these series of lessons, it is with the fullest assurance that Spiritualism, for its enduring base in the coming generations, must have Lyceum teachings as a sure foundation on which the prosperity of its sublime philosophy must rest."

They consist of a series of Cards for use in Children's Progressive Lyceums, each Card containing an Invocation, an appropriate Poem, Questions and Answers, Silver Chain Recitations, etc.

Five numbers have already been issued, and more will appear from time to time.

Price (post-paid) of a single Card, 5 cents; 12 copies, 40 cents; 50 do., $1.50; 100 do., $2.50.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MAGIC, WHITE AND BLACK;

OR,

The Science of Finite and Infinite Life.

BY FRANZ HARTMANN, M. D.

This is the third revised and enlarged edition of this wonderful work. The author has also added an appendix containing "A New Light on the Path" for those who desire to follow the practical way. Dr. Hartmann says: "I have called the book 'Magic,' because those who practically follow out the directions given therein will not only be able to control the 'Elemental Spirits' of Nature, but to perform the greatest of all Magical wonders, the Spiritual Regeneration of Man."

Cloth, 8vo, pp. 324. Price $2.50.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

NEW MUSIC.

BY O. P. LONGLEY.

"ONLY A THIN VEIL BETWEEN US." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"WHEN THE DEAR ONES GATHER AT HOME." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"HOME OF MY BEAUTIFUL DREAMS." Song and Chorus. Words by Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"CHILD OF THE GOLDEN SUNSHINE." Song and Chorus. Words by Eben E. Rexford; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

GOD, HOME AND NATIVE LAND. A National Temperance Ode. Words by Mary L. Sherman. Music by C. P. Longley. Price 5 cents.

Beautiful Home of the Soul	25 cents.
Come in thy Beauty, Angel of Light	25 "
I am Going to my Home	25 "
In Heaven We'll Know Our Own	25 "
Love's Golden Chain	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Over There	25 "
The City Just Over the Hill	25 "
The Golden Gates are Left Ajar	25 "
Two Little Shoes and a Ringlet of Hair	25 "
We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Above	25 "
We're Coming, Sister Mary	25 "
Gathering Flowers in Heaven	25 "
Who Sings My Child to Sleep?	25 "
Oh! Come, for my Poor Heart is Breaking	25 "
Once it was Only Soft Blue Eyes	25 "

☞ The above songs are in Sheet Music. Single copies 25 cents; 5 copies for $1.00.

We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land (with portrait of Annie Lord Chamberlain) ..... 35 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Dr. Hardeastle's TOOTH-LIFE.

A Delightful Tooth-Powder.

This Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.

Of the four pages printed on the circular accompanying each box of "Tooth Life" sold Dr. Hardeastle, after reading it, made this remark, "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."

The proprietor says: "As a spiritualist from my youth, I say to all conscience, he person can fail to find on the box of "Tooth Life" and four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of over experience as an American dentist and student during four times of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth preservative measures taught alone are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."

Put up in a neat box. Sent post paid on receipt of 25 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Received from England.

RAPHAEL'S ALMANAC:

OR, THE

PROPHETIC MESSENGER

AND

Weather Guide,

FOR 1888:

Comprising a Variety of Useful Matter and Tables

Predictions of the Events, and the Weather,

That will Occur in Each Month During the Year.

War and Sickness! Strikes and Riot! Heat and Plenty!

A Large Hieroglyphic.

BY RAPHAEL,

The Astrologer of the Nineteenth Century.

Together with RAPHAEL'S ASTROLOGICAL FREEMEN'S GUIDE TO THE PLANETS, Tables of Houses for London, Liverpool and New York.

CONTENTS.

Mr. Eagle's Address to Readers 1
Monthly Conjunctions and Weather Guide 1
The Voices of the Seasons 1
Raphael's Key to Astrology 1
The Farmer's Breeding Table 1
A Short Method to Find Latitude 1
Table of the Moon's Southing 1
Symbols, Points, Aspects, &c. 1
Useful Tables, Weights, Measures, &c. 1
Rules for Finding the Latitude 1
Cause of Earthquakes 1
Ready Reckoner 1
Farmers' and Gardeners' Tables 1
Eclipses for 1888 1
Moonlight Walks 1
Planetary Hours 1
Eclipses, Occultations, &c. 1
Useful Notes 1
The Lowest Heads of Europe 1
Explanation of the Hieroglyphic 1
Fairest Days in the Year 1
Rules to Farmers 1
Hints to Gardeners 1
Hints to Cattle Dealers 1
Useful Hints, Receipts, &c. 1
The Farmers' Receipt Book 1
Receipts 1
Prophecies of Raphael for the Months in the Year 1

Price 35 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FARADAY'S PAMPHLETS.

THE RELATION OF THE SPIRITUAL TO THE MATERIAL UNIVERSE, THE LAW OF CONTROL.

Two papers, read at the Conference of Spiritual Science, by the Invitation of the late PROF. M. FARADAY, of England. Paper. Price 10 cents.

ORIGIN OF LIFE; or, Where Man Comes From. By the Spirit Michael Faraday. Through the Mediumship of Isabel Lucas. Two Papers, read at the Conference of Spiritual Science, by the Invitation of the late PROFESSOR M. FARADAY, of England. Price 10 cents.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SPIRIT AFTER TRANSITION. By the late M. FARADAY. THE ORIGIN OF RELIGIONS. A Paper of Influence upon the Mental Development of the Human Race. Dictated at the Conference of Spiritual Science, by a Band of Ancient Philosophers, by the late M. FARADAY, of England. Paper, 10 cents.

THE PROCESS OF MENTAL ACTION; or, How we Think. By Spirit PROF. M. FARADAY. Paper. Price 15 cents.

OBSESSION; or, The Origin of Evil. A paper given in the interest of Spiritual Science. Paper. Price 10 cents.

PROGRESSION; or, How a Spirit Advances in Spirit Life. THE EVOLUTION OF MAN. Two Papers given both in the interest of Spiritual Science. By Spirit MICHAEL FARADAY. Paper, pp. 35. Price 15 cents.

JESUS CHRIST, A FICTION. Transcribed by M. FARADAY, late Electrician and Chemist of the Royal Institution, London. Paper, 5 cents, postage free.

THE RELATIONS OF SCIENCE TO THE PHENOMENA OF LIFE. By PROF. MICHAEL FARADAY, late Electrician and Chemist, of England. Paper, price 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SAMUEL BOWLES'S PAMPHLETS.

EXPERIENCES OF SAMUEL BOWLES, Late Editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, in Spirit-Life; or, Life as he Now Sees It from a Spiritual Standpoint. Written through the mediumship of Carrie E. S. Twing. New edition, with Supplement. Paper. Price 25 cents.

LATER PAPERS. A Supplement to the EXPERIENCES OF SAMUEL BOWLES, late Editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, in Spirit-Life; or, Life as He Now Sees It from a Spiritual Standpoint. Written through the mediumship of Carrie E. S. Twing. Price 10 cents.

CONTRASTS IN SPIRIT-LIFE: And Recent Experiences of Samuel Bowles, late Editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, in the First Five Spheres. Also Thrilling Account of the late President Garfield's Reception in the Spirit-World. Written through the hand of Carrie E. S. Twing, Westfield, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS: Joan d'Arc; Napoleon Bonaparte; Ignatius Loyola; Prince Leopold; Queen Elizabeth, and many others. Price 30 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ACHSA W. SPRAGUE'S AND MARY CLARK'S Experiences in the First Ten Spheres of Spirit-Life. Medium ATHALDINE SMITH, Oswego, N. Y. Paper. Price 20 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Leaflets of Truth;

OR,

Light from the Shadow-Land.

BY M. KARL.

This work may prove a beacon-light to many souls, tempest-tossed and struggling amidst the storms, the darkness and the confusions of earth-life. It is hoped that it may bring to all into whose hands it may come higher, truer, grander and sublimer conceptions of the possibilities which lie before them, and of the wisdom and beneficence of the plans and purposes of the Infinite, as displayed, when rightly viewed, in all his works and ways.

Cloth. Price 75 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW GOSPEL OF HEALTH,

CONTAINING seven sections on Vital Magnetism and illustrated manipulations, by DR. STONE. For sale at this office. Price $1.25 cloth-bound copies, $2.50.

New York Advertisements.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

304 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, successfully treats all forms of Chronic Diseases, however complicated. Patients afflicted for years, regarded as hopeless, or incurable, testify to permanent restoration. For twenty years his power to diagnose and treat Disease has been and still stands unequaled, so say eminent Scientists, Physicians, Clergymen, and patients from all parts of the country. Voluminous testimony can be seen at his office. Those unable to visit the Doctor in person can be successfully treated at their homes. Send stamp for Circular. Diagnosis, with advice, $2.00.

Extract from a letter by Rev. F. R. M., D. D., Brooklyn, N.Y.: . . . "I am happy to testify to Dr. Dake's high moral character as a man, and his eminent ability as a physician who has achieved a most extraordinary career."
Jy7 tf

MARY C. MORRELL, Business, Prophetic and Developing Medium, 230 West 36th street, New York City. 10w* Au25

MRS. C. SCOTT, Trance and Business Medium. Sittings 10 to 5. No. 21 West 13th street, N. Y. Au11 10w*

Mrs. Stoddard-Gray and DeWitt C. Hough

WILL hold Séances each evening for Materialization and Tests at their cottage, corner of Lyman street and First Avenue, Lake Pleasant. Sittings each day until September 1st. 5w Jy28

A LIBERAL OFFER,

BY A RELIABLE CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER.

SEND 4 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name, age and sex, and we will diagnose your case FREE by independent spirit-writing. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Canton, N.Y. Au11 13w*

RUPTURES

CURED in thirty days by MEDICAL COMPOUND and improved ELASTIC SUPPORTER TRUSS. Send stamp for Circular. Address CAPT. W. A. COLLINGS, Smithville, Jefferson Co., N.Y. (Mention this paper Au4 13w*

Clairvoyant Examinations Free.

ENCLOSE lock of hair, with leading symptoms. We will give you a correct diagnosis of your case. Address E. F. ETTERFIELD, M. D., corner Warren and Fayette streets, Syracuse, New York. 26w* Ja28

SECOND EDITION.

A REVIEW

OF THE

Seybert Commissioners' Report

OR,

WHAT I SAW AT CASSADAGA LAKE.

BY

A. B. RICHMOND, Esq.,

A MEMBER OF THE PENNSYLVANIA BAR; AUTHOR OF "LEAVES FROM THE DIARY OF AN OLD LAWYER" "OUT AND PRISON," "DR. CROSBY'S CALM VIEW FROM A LAWYER'S STANDPOINT," "A HAWK IN AN EAGLE'S NEST," ETC.

This able review puts in an attractive form what should be read by every thoughtful man and woman who has heard of the Seybert Bequest. Hon. A. B. Richmond, the author, whose eminence as a counsel-at-law and high reputation as an author will at once ensure the confidence and attention of the reader, has in this volume performed for the "Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission," with a soundness of logic, a keenness of satire, a wealth of thought and clearness of perception, which has brought the Seybert demand to the front, and placed the Commissioners where they must either satisfactorily explain or forever remain under the ban of public condemnation. Mr. Richmond has taken a broad view of the whole question, and has handled a subject which, in the hands of a less able writer, would have proved dull and uninteresting, in a manner that will command the attention of every thinking man and woman. Whether the reader be a believer in Spiritualism or not, he will find in this book a fascinating and instructive treatise on a very important subject.

We commend this book to the careful perusal of the Commissioners, of the PHENOMENA of Spiritualism, of the clergy, and of the public generally, as one of the ablest productions of the kind that has been published in this country. It is a scathing rebuke to the Commissioners, and a complete vindication of the Spiritualists. Chapter I. gives an account of the Seybert Bequest. Chapter II. contains a review of the Commissioners' Report. Chapter III. gives an account of the Commissioners' visit to Cassadaga Lake. Chapter IV. contains a review of the Commissioners' Report, with comments thereon. Chapter V. treats ably of the Commissioners' Report. Chapter VI. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Physical Phenomena." Chapter VII. gives an account of the Commissioners' visit to Lily Dale. Chapter VIII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Mediumship." Chapter IX. gives an account of the Commissioners' visit to Harrisville. Chapter X. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Physical Phenomena." Chapter XI. gives an account of Spirit Identity. Chapter XII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Theosophy." Chapter XIII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Psychometry and Clairvoyance." Chapter XIV. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Miscellaneous Phenomena." Chapter XV. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Conclusion." Chapter XVI. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Recommendations." Chapter XVII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Theories." Chapter XVIII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Personal Identity." Chapter XIX. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Conclusion." Chapter XX. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Recommendations." Chapter XXI. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Theories." Chapter XXII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Personal Identity." Chapter XXIII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Conclusion." Chapter XXIV. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Recommendations." Chapter XXV. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Theories." Chapter XXVI. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Personal Identity." Chapter XXVII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Conclusion." Chapter XXVIII. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Recommendations." Chapter XXIX. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Theories." Chapter XXX. contains a review of that portion of the Report entitled "Personal Identity." Chapter

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1888.

Lake Pleasant.

[MR. J. MILTON YOUNG is our authorized agent at Lake Pleasant, and will be pleased to receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. Mr. Young also has a full line of our publications for sale at his bookstore. He will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Meeting.]

The week closes with a large attendance, and the best of interest. People are here from all parts of the States, and several from across the water. The time is occupied with the regular card of exercises, added to which are conference meetings, and any number of impromptu sessions. Mediumship of every phase is hourly exemplified, and the interest in the phenomena, instead of being upon the decline, is increasing. Association Hall is utilized nearly every evening for concerts and entertainments of various kinds. The illumination of the grounds each Saturday evening is being made a special matter this year, and has had the effect of largely increasing the attendance. Lake Pleasant is now at its prettiest and is duly appreciated.

The following has been the intellectual feast during the week:

Monday and Tuesday, conferences, with speaking by various parties.

Wednesday, address by Dr. Dean Clarke, of Boston. Platform descriptions were given by Mrs. E. Clark Kimball, of Lawrence. [This lady has created a marked impression here, and has added largely to the interest of the meetings.]

Thursday, conferences; Hon. A. H. Dailey, of Brooklyn, read a poem entitled "The Visitation," which is a remarkable production.

Sunday convened an old time audience of some six thousand.

Service opened with concert by the Worcester Cadet Band. Address by Charles Dawbarn; subject, "Footprints of To-day." Afternoon address by Dr Dean Clarke, of Boston, and platform descriptions were given by Mrs. E. Clark Kimball, of Lawrence, some forty-eight being announced as correct.

Saturday evening, a reception, complimentary to the correspondent of THE BANNER, was held at Headquarters. A serenade was rendered by the Worcester Cadet Band, after which order was called by President Beals, who made a brief address and introduced Miss Jennie Rhind, who spoke quite eloquently under inspiration. Dr. C. E. Carradice, of Jacksonville, Fla., then stepped forward, and, with appropriate remarks, presented a valuable gold watch, of the American Watch Company, Waltham, make. The inscription is as follows: "Presented by the Lake Pleasant Campers to J. Milton Young, August, 1888." The watch is heavy cased, and of a beautiful beveled pattern. Other speakers on this occasion were Mrs. Clara A. Field, Mrs. J. F. Dillingham, Mrs. E. Clark Kimball, Miss Emma J. Nickerson, Dr. I. M Andrus, Mrs. J. J. Clarke, Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, Mrs. Sue B. Fales, Mrs. M. V. Lincoln, John F. Whitney, Chas. E. Watkins.

The conferences, as a rule, are as largely attended as the regular sessions, and the speaking includes a great variety of talent.

The speakers for Sunday, Aug. 26th, are J. Frank Baxter and Charles Dawbarn. Both of these gentlemen are favorites here.

Fair and Festival.—The Ladies' Lake Pleasant Improvement Society has been holding a fair at Association Hall for the sale of useful and fancy articles, during the week. The opening address was by President Beals, and the usual attractions were offered. The attendance has been large, and an unusual degree of interest has been developed. Financially and otherwise it has been a success.

SPECIAL NOTES.

Charlie Buffum is at his old place at Eagle Cottage.

David Jones, and A. T. Whiting of Utica, N. Y., are enlarging and improving their cottages.

The verandas of the Lake Pleasant Hotel present a very attractive appearance each evening.

The sanitary arrangements are good.

Capt. John Rounsevell, of Charlestown District, an old camper here, passed from hope to fruition on the morning of Aug. 17th, aged 67 years. During the war Capt. Rounsevell was connected with the Navy Yard, in which he held the offices of Ensign, Mate and Watchman. The burial was at Hartford, Conn.

Charles Wing and daughter, of Amesbury, are enjoying the meetings.

Mr. John Lamont, of Liverpool, Eng., interested the audience at the conference on Thursday.

The annual meeting of the Lake Pleasant Association was held on Monday. The old board of officers was re-elected—consisting of A. T. Pierce, President; Lewis Bartholomew, Treasurer, and A. T. Whiting, Secretary: the whole to constitute a board of trustees.

A. S. Hayward of Boston has arrived, and we trust he has come to stay.

Colonel and Mrs. John C. Bundy are sojourning here.

Efforts are being made to have the next reunion of the Lyman family held in this place. The gathering occurs in 1890. Mr. M. W. Lyman is secretary of both the national and local organizations. His post-office address is Lake Pleasant, Mass.

From the Register.—Mrs. L. G. Gibbs, Clinton, Mass.; C. E. Turner, Norwalk, O.; Mrs. W. A. Strong, St. Louis, Mo.; Luckey O. Clapp, Springfield, Mass.; Mrs. Hartwell Maynard, Athol, Mass.; D. M. Howard and wife, South Lancaster, Mass.; Lydia Eve Blackstone, Chester, N. H.; T. J. Mac Ettrick, Boston, Mass.; E. J. Carpenter, Brattleboro, Vt.; Dr. A. S. Green, Enosburgh Falls, Vt.; Mrs. F. S. Packard, Clara F. Packard, Rockville, Ct.; Mrs. Phebe Jackson, Mrs. Martha T. Miller, Mrs. Newell Merriam, Miss Ruth T. Williams, Gardner, Mass.; Mrs. H. W. Caste, Baldwinsville, Mass. Mrs. Martha F. Jennison, Greenville, Mich.; Mrs. P. J. Fales, Templeton, Mass.; P. L. Peck, Portland, Me.; Mrs. N. G. Aylsworth, San Francisco, Cal.; Mrs. Samuel Kidder, Almont, Mich.; Mrs. George S. Butters, Concord, Mass.; C. E. Watkins, Alice M. Watkins, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Carrie L. Bath, Carl Bath, Ravenna, O.; James V. Godfrey, Camden, N. J.; Mrs. G. B. Durkee, G. B. Durkee, Barre, Vt.; A. McKinley, Palenville, N. Y.; Mrs. Fred Haslam, Mrs. O. P. Chase, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. E. B. Ely, Bergen Point, N. J.; J. W. Kenyon, Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. F. H. Morse, South Gardner, Mass.; Mrs. A. Temple; Mrs. R. R. Collins, Sharon, Mass.; Miss E. C. Corliss, Cambridgeport, Mass.; H. Harrington, Saratoga, N. Y.; Norman Melony and wife; W. A. Case and wife, Brattleboro, Vt.; Mrs. Charles Clarke, Herbert Clarke, Gertrude Keyes, Peterboro, N. H.; Anthony Davis and wife, Moss Leeds; Dr. L. A. Priest and wife, Cleveland, Ohio; Mabel B. Priest, Boxboro, Mass.; Mrs. George Woodruff, Brooklyn; Ansel Harrington, North Orange, Mass.; Mrs. H. K. Johnson, Athol, Mass.; Mrs. M. A. Warner, Fannie E. Warner, Grace L. Warner, West Haven, Conn.; Jennette Brownell, Greenwich, N. Y.; Mary E. Hyde, Lowell, Mass.; Jonas H. Brown, Warren, Mass.; J. A. Carpenter, Troy, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Billings, Boston, Mass.; John Lamont, Liverpool, Eng.; Mrs. Barnes, Conn.; Gad Norton, Bristol, Conn.; James C. Lammer, New York; Mrs. Payne, Mass.; Sumner Shaw, Boston, Mass.; B. W. Sawtell, Hadley, Mass.; Dr. H. W. Gould, San Diego, Cal.; B. F. Miner, E. M. Jepson, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.; Agnes Harrington, Greenfield, Mass.; Mrs. J. F. Parker, Mrs. R. S. Scamman, Miss M. G. Parker, Portland, Me.; Mrs. Avery Clapp, Montague, Mass.; George C. Buell, Miss Buell, Arthur J. Smith, Danbury, Conn.; A. S. Hayward, Boston, Mass; Mrs. J. A. Rigby, Eva Rigby, Forestville, Conn.; Mrs. Kate Beals, Mrs. N. F. S. Rockwood, Greenfield, Mass.; Mrs. E. Reed, New York City; Charles Dewel and wife, Mrs. Fred Dewel, Amherst, Mass.; Charles T. Leonard and wife, Springfield; W. H. Palmer and wife, Miss Gertie A. Palmer, Willie Palmer, St. Augustine, Fla.; Mrs. Mary E. Jacques, Mrs. S. A. Cunningham, New York City; Mrs. S. A. Hill, Springfield, Mass.; A. W. Tinkham, Topeka, Kan.; Mrs. G. N. Hayward, Milford, Mass.; Newman Weeks, Rutland, Vt.; Mrs. E. C. Howe, Montague.

At the Hotel.—H. R. Moore and wife, Warren, Mass.; J. C. Lawrence, Mr. Monegal, B. M. Hastings, New York; Mrs. Fred Haslam, Brooklyn; E. W. Bond and wife, Willoughby, O.; Emma Nickerson, Boston; A. B. Gardner, Providence; J. H. Chassaing, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. G. S. Butters, Concord; Mrs. M. C. Chase and daughter, Mrs. F. E. Richardson, Boston; Dr. Priest, wife and daughter, Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Danville Cole, Lowell; Mrs. George Woodruff, Brooklyn; G. F. Van Deusen, Westfield; Chas. Dawbarn, New York; Dr. Dean Clarke, Boston.

A grand balloon ascension by Ned Hathaway and John Gillock will take place here on the afternoon of Saturday, Aug. 25th. There will also be an illumination of the grounds. Extra trains will be run from all points.

The fair of the Ladies' Lake Pleasant Improvement Society netted about four hundred dollars.

An oil painting was presented to Miss Carrie L. Brown by the employés at the Lake Pleasant Hotel.

Considerable interest is manifested among the Spiritualists here regarding the announcement of Mr. John F. Whitney, and his movements relative to the work of the spirits at the South during the coming winter. Mr. Whitney is, and has been for nearly forty years, an earnest investigator and searcher after the truth which the spiritualistic phenomena from their commencement have presented. The engagement made by Mr. Whitney with A. E. Tisdale and other mediums, to spend the winter in St. Augustine, Fla., demonstrates his desire to continue the work which was last season so auspiciously begun there. A number of Spiritualists here have signified their intention of going to St. Augustine to spend the winter; and as there undoubtedly are others outside of Lake Pleasant Camp who would like to avail themselves of the opportunity of trying at one and the same time the delightful winter climate of Florida, and the society of congenial spirits, both in and out of the body, it is well to state that Mr. Whitney will be most happy to impart to them any information regarding Florida, and especially his winter home at St. Augustine. Such parties can address until Nov. 1st, John F. Whitney, Pine Cliff, East Alstead, N. H.

The closing week will be a session of interest.

Come to Lake Pleasant. J. M. Y.

Lake Pleasant, Mass., Aug. 19th, 1888.

[The annual meeting of the New England Spiritualists' Camping Association was held Aug. 20th, and the following officers chosen: President, Dr. Joseph Beals, of Greenfield; vice-presidents, Newman Weeks, of Rutland, Vt., Dr. E. A. Smith, of Brandon, Vt., Noble Hopkins, of Utica, N. Y.; secretary, J. Milton Young, of Haverhill, Mass.; treasurer, William R. Tice, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; directors, Dr. Joseph Beals, of Greenfield, A. T. Peirce, of Burrowsville, Mass., James Wilson, of Bridgeport, Ct., Lewis Bartholomew, of Philadelphia, Pa., A. H. Dailey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., E. Terry, of Alhambra, Cal., W. H. Rynus, of Brooklyn, N. Y., David Jones, of Utica, N. Y.; collector, J. Milton Young. Among the improvements announced to be made in the near future are a new auditorium, bridge from Lyman street to the Highland water system, a new hotel and a dépôt. The reports of the officers were very satisfactory.]

"A. S. H." sends us the following additional particulars:

Most of the officers of the camp-meetings and the Lake Pleasant syndicate are upon the grounds, enjoying themselves intellectually and otherwise.

Mrs. E. Terry, of California, has given to Mrs. Cushman, the musical medium, a life lease of a cottage opposite the hotel. This is a noble and generous act on her part. Mrs. Terry is the wife of Mr. E. Terry, one of the original owners in the syndicate.

Last Wednesday Dr. Dean Clarke gave a grand lecture, which I wish could have been reported in full. I will not attempt to speak of it, as I could not in a few words do justice to it or to Dr. Clarke.

Thursday, Judge A. H. Dailey repeated his poem of thirty-eight verses to a highly interested audience. The poem is—to my mind—one of great merit.

Mr. Charles Dawbarn's intended lecture on Friday was postponed, on account of the storm, until Tuesday next.

I notice that Col. J. C. Bundy and wife, also Judge A. H. Dailey and wife, are spending some time at the Lake this year.

While I will not mention all the officers by name, I will say that Dr. Beals presides over the meetings with his usual dignity and skill. He read the medical petition last Thursday, and asked those in favor of equality and medical freedom to call at the Headquarters and sign their names to it.

Mr. Young, Secretary, needs several assistants, as his duties are many.

Mr. Wilson, Mr. Tice, Mr. Jones, and several other officers and directors, have made and are making improvements in their cottages, thus showing that they are confident of a future of growth and prosperity for Lake Pleasant camp.

The storm prevented the meetings being held at the speakers' stand, and the pavilion was not large enough to hold those who desired to attend. I understand that it is seriously meditated to take some steps toward having a covered auditorium to meet just such freaks on the part of the weather.

Mr. John Lamont, of Liverpool, spoke Thursday at the conference. He is recently from England, and his remarks were very fine and to the point. He spoke of the American Spiritualists and his visit in America in a very flattering manner.

Mr. Jonas Tremblie, a Frenchman by birth, from Wichita, Kan., spoke at one of the conferences, stating that he had been a Roman Catholic for thirty years, but had now renounced that belief and embraced Spiritualism. He was controlled for the first time to speak in public, and his guides intend that he shall devote the rest of his earth life to the advocacy of the New Dispensation.

Mr. Charles Wing and daughter of Amesbury, Mass., have been staying at Lake Pleasant for some days. Mr. Wing declares that he has had independent slate-writing messages through the mediumship of Mr. Watkins, which were pre-eminently satisfactory to him. They were from his spirit wife, daughter, brother, and his friend, a doctor, and the writing was like theirs in style, etc. He took the slates to the presence of Mr. W. himself, and they were never out of his hands. Mr. Wing is a competent witness, possessed of much natural ability and good judgment, which he has successfully applied to the investigation of spiritualistic phenomena. His wife and grandson, he states, have both seen materialized spirits at his home in the past; his grandson, a boy of twelve years of age, saw and described the spirit that appeared, also that which his wife saw; and he is satisfied of the fact of the materialization of spirits long ago in his own family, where there could be no inducement for deception.

Mr. J. W. Kenyon of Maquoketa, Ia., lecturer, has been stopping at Lake Pleasant for some time. He has spoken on several occasions to the acceptance of the audience. He advances many new thoughts on the healing forces, also the laws of life and health.

Mr. J. H. Cottrell, of Marysville, Kan., received a satisfactory test of spirit identity and intelligence from Capt. Jacob Haskell, formerly of Newburyport, Mass., given by and through Mrs. Kimball, the test medium, on the public rostrum. He returned before a public audience to make known his identity, and thank Mr Cottrell for what he (C.) did for him in his distress during a portion of his life on earth.

Prof. J. W. Cadwell is still holding classes in psychology.

Mr. J. B. Dean and daughter, of Cheshire, are at the hotel. Mr. Dean is a man of intelligence and thought, and receives satisfaction in his spiritual experiences with mediums.

Mr. McCleary, of Watervliet, N. Y., is at Lake Pleasant; he recently displayed on the rostrum a cane which he had made from a portion of the Fox house in Hydesville, where the first raps occurred. He attended a séance at the DeWitt Hough and Stoddard-Gray Cottage, and a form purporting to be that of his wife (although he failed to recognize it as such) materialized, sat down at a table, and wrote him a communication which alluded to certain things which no one present knew save himself—signing her name. He requested her to dematerialize, which was done.

Mr. C. H. Faxon, of Chestertown, N. Y., considers that he has received a wonderful test of spirit-materialization at the Wm. Eddy séance.

Mrs. Dr. Cashe and daughter, from Lynn, are devoting some days to the camp, and are pleasantly domiciled at the hotel.

The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings.

Onset Bay.

[MISS GUSTIE F. HOWE is our authorized agent at Onset Bay. She will receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. She also has a full line of our publications for sale at Association Headquarters; and will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Meeting.]

Mrs. Flora B. Cabell, of Washington, D. C., has been with us again this season. This estimable, pleasing and intelligent lady, has won a place in our affections without any effort on her part. She left Onset for Washington, Tuesday.

A party of friends met, by invitation of Mrs. Maggie F. Butler, at the Glen Cove House Sunday evening for a reception to Dr. Sturtevant. Mrs. Sturtevant was made the recipient of a nice easy chair; a poem, improvised by Jennie B. Hagan, was very fine and applicable to the occasion.

A concert was given in the Temple Sunday evening by the Sanford Sisters, with fine talent, which was not properly advertised, and slimly attended in consequence, but which was repeated Thursday evening with good results.

Mrs. A. A. Darling, clairvoyant, business and test medium, of Providence, R. I., has consented to remain with us a few days longer.

Sunday, Aug. 5th, the Washburn House received one hundred and seven to breakfast and two hundred and five to dinner, and Aug. 12th there were one hundred and thirty-seven to breakfast and one hundred and ninety to dinner, turning away about fifty who could not be accommodated. This little bijou of a hotel is always full.

The steam cars from Onset Station brought twenty-one carloads of passengers Sunday, 12th, and carried away forty five.

There have been two balloon ascensions from our midst.

Copious showers of rain fell on Monday, deluging the streets and gutters. In the afternoon it cleared away, and a conference meeting was held in the Pavilion, presided over by Mr. Fairchild. The subject for exchange of thought was "Organization." Interesting remarks were made by Mr. N. Lyon, of Fall River, Mr. Frank W. Jones, of the People's Meeting, New York, Mrs. S. Dick, a medium and lecturer of some note, from Boston, Meredith B. Little, of Glens Falls, and others.

Monday evening a grand concert and mesmeric entertainment was given at the Rink, consisting of singing by Miss Lillian Cushing, cornet solo by Master Will Cushing, selections by the Boston Orchestra, etc., concluding with Prof. Cadwell's mesmeric entertainment.

Mr. Joseph D. Stiles concluded his engagement here and left for Weymouth on Tuesday. He will go to Sunapee in a few days. He gave 180 names at one sitting, on Sunday.

Mrs. Nellie Whitney, one of our best materializing mediums, passed to spirit-life, Friday, Aug. 10th, and her remains were buried the 12th. She was a great sufferer at times, but always patient and uncomplaining, was conscious to the last moment, and welcomed the end cheerfully and with perfect trust and resignation.

We were pleased to welcome Dr. M. L. Julian of Washington, D. C., among the arrivals of the week.

Col. and Mrs. Kase, the mediums' stanch friends, from Philadelphia, are enjoying the scenery and beauties of Onset. This is Mrs. Kase's first visit, and she is highly pleased with the surroundings.

Tuesday morning a circle was held at the Glen Cove House at 9 o'clock, and at 10 a mediums' meeting at the auditorium. At 2:30 a lecture was given from the platform by Mrs. E. A. Wells of New York, her subject being "The Immoralities of Spiritualism." Mrs. S. Dick improvised a poem, followed by Mrs. Wells with tests. Mrs. Wells's lecture was very fine, containing many valuable points. It will be given in pamphlet form later.

Tuesday evening "Uncle Tom's Cabin" drew a good house at the Temple. There was also a large gathering at Eddy's circle-room Tuesday evening. Mr. Eddy's circles have been well attended.

Wednesday morning a circle was held at the Glen Cove House. In the afternoon Mr. A. E. Tisdale lectured upon "The distinction between true and idle worship."

Wednesday evening the weekly social hop was given at Hotel Onset.

The Ladies' Industrial Union of Onset have bought and placed two dozen street lamps for the benefit of those who remain at Onset through the winter, there being eighty cottages occupied last winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross are very pleasantly located at Capt. Nash's cottage, also Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Elliott of Lowville, N. Y.

Lindall's Brass Band give a concert each morning and evening in Bay View Grove.

We were sorry to learn of Louis Poole's indisposition at Sunapee, where he had gone to conduct the music at the camp. His engagement ceases the 27th, when he will return to Onset.

Friday evening there was a concert and dance in the Casino, under the supervision of Mrs. M. F. Butler and Mrs. Hadaway, for the benefit of the Business Club.

Mr. Joseph Kingsbury, of Waltham, left Onset Thursday in answer to a dispatch, which stated that fire had destroyed one of his houses valued at $3500. Insured for $2500.

Wednesday evening a large party assembled at Ruggles Cottage to listen to tests from Mrs. S. Dick.

Thursday afternoon an interesting fact meeting was held at the auditorium, closing with a song by Mr. Tisdale.

On account of not being sufficiently advertised the excursion train from Onset to Provincetown took but one passenger. Mrs. Roberts, of Haverhill, has the honor of being the one favored by special train. It is not often one has the privilege of being so select on an excursion train. Many were disappointed who were waiting the opportunity of visiting the "city in the sand." We hope the Old Colony will see to it that proper notice may be given in the future of excursions to different points.

Mrs. E. A. Wells held a private séance Thursday evening at the house of Mr. Applin, when two spirits materialized at the same time, with the medium in full view in the cabinet.

Mrs. M. S. Wood and family, of Stoneham, left Onset Friday for home, with Mrs. Carrie Grimes Forster and sister accompanying them.

Dr. and Mrs. Rogers are still with us, and will remain through the early fall—the most enjoyable season of all the year at Onset.

Friday afternoon a conference meeting was held at the Auditorium.

We had the pleasure of taking by the hand Dr. Josephine Webster, of Chelsea, Mass., on Thursday.

Mrs. T. J. Lewis, business and test medium, of Brooklyn, N. Y., left Onset Thursday to locate in Boston.

A very satisfactory materializing séance was given at the house of Mrs. Butterfield, Friday evening, with Mrs. Bliss as medium.

An entertainment was also given in the Temple the same evening for the benefit of the Onset Business Club, under the management of Mrs. Maggie F. Butler. A large number attended. Receipts above expenses amounted to $125,00.

Our genial and good natured President, Col. Crockett, comes to us every Saturday to look matters over and preside Sundays.

Saturday was the warmest day of the season at Onset. The thermometer registered ninety degrees in the shade at the Temple at 10:30 A M. Mrs. S. Dick, of Boston, lectured in the afternoon on "Mediumship," and psychometrized afterward very correctly.

Saturday evening a "Poverty Dancing Party" was held in the Temple, with some of the most grotesque costumes in attendance. A large number were present, and pronounced it a very enjoyable entertainment.

Later, at 12 midnight, the hour when churchyards are supposed to "yawn and graves give up their dead," a circle for manifestations was held in the big tent at the corner of Twelfth street and Pearl Avenue.

The number of The Soul containing an account of the picture and slate-writing at Onset given through the mediumship of Dr. Stansbury, is for sale at headquarters.

Mr. Isaac Rider of Fall River, editor of The Progress, was with us again last Sunday.

The last of a series of Temple dances will take place next Saturday evening, and steps will be taken to make it the most brilliant affair of the season.

Sunday, Aug. 19th, there was an excursion from Providence, and one from Plymouth and way stations, also from New Bedford by steamer "Island Home." The exercises of the day commenced with a concert by the Middleboro' Band. On account of the illness of Mrs. Stevens, who was advertised to speak in the morning, Miss A. Josephine Webster, of Chelsea, delivered the morning discourse, her subject being: "The Kingdom of Heaven is within you"; closing with an inspirational improvised song, "Safe in our home over there." Lindall's Band gave a concert at noon. The afternoon exercises opened with a concert by the Middleboro' Band. Mr. E. B. Fairchild followed with a lecture on "Knowledge and Belief," which was very fine; at its close Mrs. S. Dick improvised a poem. After the meeting the Middleboro' Band gave a concert at the Onset Station. In the evening Mrs. Dick gave an entertainment in the Pavilion, consisting of tests, psychometrizations, etc., and Mrs. Wells a materializing and test séance in the Temple which was largely attended.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum met as usual in the Temple at 3 o'clock, Mr. Besse acting Director. Remarks were made by Mr. Fairchild and by the conductor of the Lyceum at South Scituate, whose name we did not learn. Recitations were given by Violet Manzer, Herbert White, Daisy Robinson, Ernie Bullock, Carrie Williams, Alice Cummings, Lula Putnam, Lulu Morse, Leo Cayvan, Eloise Wendermouth, Mabel Bullock, Lottie Giles and Ethel Wendermouth. Song by Carrie Rothermel. Banjo medley by Lulu Morse.

It is estimated that four thousand people were on the grounds to day, Sunday, 19th.

The city of Providence was well represented here on Sunday; among the rest we had the pleasure of welcoming Mr. William Foster, Jr., of that city.

There will be the usual conference and fact meetings through the week, and it is expected that several lectures will be given.

Next Sunday, the 26th, being the last Sunday of the camp-meeting, it it expected a great many people will be present. Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes will deliver the morning lecture and Mr. Fairchild the afternoon's discourse. An excursion will be expected from Provincetown and way-stations, also from Plymouth, Providence and New Bedford. GUSTIE F. HOWE.

Headquarters Office, Onset, Aug. 19th, 1888.

[At a meeting of the Onset Business Club, on the evening of the 18th inst., it was voted to hold the annual illumination on Sept. 1st.]

Verona Park, Me.

Again the week opened with rain, which confined the campers to their cottages. Little circles were held during the forenoon of Monday. At two o'clock, as the weather continued bad, a meeting was held at the hall. Dr. C. F. Ware presided; Mrs. Wentworth offered an invocation; Miss M. T. Shelhamer then stated that she was ready to answer all questions which the audience might propound in relation to Spiritualism. Mrs. Hildreth, of Worcester, offered the following: "Do we make our own conditions in life, or are we creatures of destiny?" to which Miss Shelhamer gave an interesting and instructive reply. At the conclusion of Miss S.'s address, Mrs. Wentworth rendered a beautiful poem in harmony with the discourse.

The evening was made interesting by séances at different cottages.

Tuesday came, and with it a strong north wind and the long-looked-for sunshine, and "Lotela" was happy. The fine weather drew all from their cottages, and the forenoon was devoted to social visits.

At the usual hour movements toward the auditorium gave warning that services were about to open. Mrs. Wentworth opened with an invocation, followed by Miss Shelhamer, who invited the audience to propose a subject. "The Law of Recompense" was given, and was exhaustively treated, to the great satisfaction of her hearers. Vocal music closed the exercises.

At seven o'clock the campers convened at the Hall, where an improvised stage had been erected, and were entertained with an entertainment given under the direction of Miss Shelhamer, Mrs. Wentworth, and Mrs. Hatch, Jr. It consisted of instrumental music by Mr. and Mrs. Robinson; vocal selections by Masters Eddie and Charlie; readings by Mr. Francis, Gracie Pishon, and Master Charlie; tableaux also were given, which closed the evening's exercises—when we all emerged to enjoy the first moonlight view of the Park.

Wednesday was set apart, at the suggestion of the writer, as "Grand Army Day." The local Post at Bucksport was invited, together with the Woman's Relief Corps. A beautiful morning greeted us. The forenoon was devoted by the campers to calling upon each other and exchanging thoughts. As the afternoon lecture was to be the last delivered by Miss Shelhamer at the camp, a large audience was in attendance. Promptly at the hour, Dr. C. F. Ware called the meeting to order, and after a few remarks introduced Miss Alice Ware, who read with fine effect a poem given by inspiration of Capt. Robert Anderson through the mediumship of Miss Shelhamer.

At the conclusion of the reading, J. B. Hatch, of the Shawmut Lyceum, of Boston, was for the first time introduced. After returning many thanks for the hearty reception the Boston contingent had received from the hands of the campers in general, he called upon his daughter, who favored the audience with that beautiful vocal selection entitled: "Come, speak to me once more." Mr. Hatch again came to the front and related a little of his experience while in the army, speaking in fond terms of the departed soldiers who gave their lives to make this country what it is to day.

In concluding his remarks Mr. Hatch presented Miss Shelhamer, who in ardent words commemorated the memory of our fallen heroes from the time of the Revolution up to that of our own Civil War. She spoke of the great work performed by the Grand Army of the Republic, also the Woman's Relief Corps; too much praise cannot be awarded these useful organizations for their noble service in aiding the families of all widows and orphans, without regard to creed. All conceded this address to have been one of her finest efforts.

Mr. George Francis closed the afternoon's exercises by the reading of a poem dedicated to gallant Phil Kearney.

In the evening a dance was held at the Pavilion, and all enjoyed the festivities until a late hour.

Notice was given that Thursday would be set apart for visiting day. The morning was fine, and preparations were first made to bid adieu to a portion of the Boston people. As Miss Shelhamer and her sister, Mrs. Hatch, left the ground, many a kind wish was offered them, with the hope that next season would bring them again to Verona to remain the entire time.

[Our correspondent's account of Mrs. Gray's reception in the afternoon is necessarily deferred till next week.]

In the evening Mrs. Wentworth held a séance at her cottage, which was well attended. At the close the Bostonians were invited to partake of the hospitalities of Mrs. Ware, and thus closed another happy day. Friday came, and with it more rain for a change. However, many gathered both morning and afternoon to listen to Mrs. Wentworth.

Saturday another of our party, C. Frank Rand, left the camp—his vacation having expired. Although his health prevented him from taking any active part in the exercises, he has enjoyed his visit, and returns to his home much improved physically.

Mrs. Wentworth favored the campers with two very fine lectures. The evening was devoted to a concert that was well attended.

The second Sunday opened very auspiciously, the bright sunshine adding much glory to the occasion. At an early hour boats and carriages began to arrive, and when it was time to open the exercises of the day a large concourse of people had gathered around the platform. Dr. Ware presided, and after singing by the choir, under the direction of Col. La Gros, Mrs. A. M. Glading offered an invocation; J. B. Hatch read a poem pertaining to the Lyceum work, speaking, in connection, of the duties of parents in educating their children in the truths of Spiritualism.

Mrs. Glading lectured both morning and afternoon: in the first instance on "The Law of Compensation;" the subject for the afternoon was "The New Religion, and How We Shall Find It." Mrs. Glading is a great favorite at this place, and the manner in which she treated these themes gave general satisfaction. She will remain during the balance of the camp-meeting, and speak daily during the week.

At the afternoon service Mr. George Francis assisted by the reading of a poem; Captain Thomas P. Beals, of Portland, Me., was introduced and spoke very enthusiastically of the growth of Spiritualism. The captain is an earnest and able worker, being formerly connected with the Portland Lyceum in the position of Conductor. We were heartily pleased when he made a call at our cottage.

Numerous séances were held during the evening.

Among the many who have visited the grove during the week were Mr. James Emery and Mr. Rufus H. Emery; these gentlemen have been indefatigable in their endeavors to make all happy. Hon. S. T. Hinks, G. W. McAllister, (of the Custom House at Bucksport,) Capt. S. B. Gray, (of Brooksville,) Wm. Hagan and Arthur Hagan, (of Prospect,) have also visited the camp. H.

Sunapee Lake, N. H.

Tuesday, Aug. 14th, J. W. Fletcher in the chair. Exercises commenced with a selection by the quartette, and an invocation by Jennie B. Hagan, who, after another song, gave a fine lecture and improvised a poem on subjects presented by the audience. The session closed with singing by the quartette.

The floral decorations by Dr. J. C. Prentice of Boston are much admired; he has spent much time in procuring and arranging the flowers, and has the thanks of the speakers and the people generally.

Wednesday, Aug. 15th, the forenoon was occupied in conference, participated in by J. W. Fletcher, Dr. Richardson and Mrs. Chandler. At 2 o'clock a public test séance was opened with a song by the quartette and poems by Miss Jennie B. Hagan, improvised on subjects presented by the audience. J. W. Fletcher gave names and descriptions of fourteen spirits who presented themselves, and Mrs. Chapman closed with remarks under control of her guide, the little Scotch Boy.

Wednesday Evening.—Test séance. After vocal selections by the quartette, Mrs. Chandler, under control, gave the names of eight spirits, most of which were recognized. Miss Jennie B. Hagan improvised poems on an interesting variety of subjects. "Shall we meet beyond the river?" was then finely rendered by the quartette, after which J. W. Fletcher gave the names of several spirits; among them George Codman, of Washington, N. H., who was murdered at Cambridge, Mass. He said he wanted to thank the lady who attended his funeral, she being upon the grounds. The lady alluded to was Mrs. Addie M. Stevens, who was present.

Thursday, Aug. 16th.—Conference this morning. J. W. Fletcher presided and made remarks, followed by Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Wells, Mrs. Dr. Prentice, Mrs. Waite, and Mrs. Bishop, under control, all speaking with great acceptance.

At 2 o'clock, selections by the quartette and an invocation opened the exercises. Miss Jennie B. Hagan gave a fine lecture on subjects presented by the audience, supplemented with a poem. Singing by the quartette closed the session.

In the evening the usual weekly dance was well patronized and greatly enjoyed.

Friday, Aug. 17th, the morning hour was spent in conference, opened by Dr. A. H. Richardson, followed by Mrs. Chandler and Miss Jennie B. Hagan, who, after making very interesting remarks, improvised a poem of much merit. Remarks by Mrs. Waite, and the Scotch Boy, through Mrs. Eliza A. Chapman, closed the session.

At 2 P. M., J. W. Fletcher in the chair, the exercises commenced with a song by the quartette. Mr. Fletcher recited the poem, "Creeds of the Bells," and after a solo by Mr. Johnston, gave a fine lecture, that was exceedingly entertaining and instructive. At its close he described twelve spirits, most of whom were recognized.

Friday evening the entertainment usually held Saturday night was held, followed by a sociable and ice-cream party, the proceeds of which and the sale of various articles contributed by members of the Association amounted to over $50.

Saturday, Aug. 18th, Dr. A. H. Richardson in the chair, the service commenced with a song by quartette, an invocation by Jennie B. Hagan, and further singing. Miss H. then gave an eloquent lecture upon a number of subjects, and accepted as subjects of an improvised poem, "To the Fifth Sphere," "What is Life and Spirit," "The Moral Influence of Modern Spiritualism," and "The Use of Thorns Among the Roses."

A Saturday evening conference was participated in by Dr. Richardson, Joseph D. Stiles, Mrs. E. B. Craddock and Mrs. Weeks. Mrs. Craddock, under control, described a number of spirits.

Sunday, Aug. 19th, the services consisted of vocal selections by the quartette, a solo by Mrs. Osborne, and a lecture and poem by Miss Hagan. At 1 o'clock Mr. Joseph D. Stiles held a séance, at which he reported the names of fifty-six spirits present. In the afternoon Mr. Stiles delivered a lecture and gave over fifty names of spirits, the usual singing, including a solo by Mrs. Wentworth, being interspersed. The day was fine, and the attendance estimated to be five thousand. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fletcher, and other of their friends, left for Lake Pleasant Saturday morning, and Dr. Richardson, Aaron Bradshaw and Jennie B. Hagan left Monday morning for Queen City Park; Mr. and Mrs. Ferrin, of Plymouth, N. H., left for their home Monday. N. A. LULL, Sec'y.

Aug. 20th, 1888.

Cassadaga Lake, N. Y.

The season at Cassadaga Lake is now at its height, and the woods are full of people. The hotel is crowded to its utmost capacity, and new comers are obliged to seek rooms at cottages. The present season is thus far the most prosperous the camp has experienced, and the future is bright with promise of large success.

We have had some highly interesting lectures since my last letter, large audiences having been addressed by J. Frank Baxter, W. F. Peck, Mrs. Colby-Luther, Mrs. R. S. Lillie and the venerable Samuel Watson. These speakers represent various phases of thought, from radical to conservative, some of them being religious in their expression and others extremely iconoclastic. But as a Spiritualist audience is made up of many kinds of people, each speaker finds a greater or less number in sympathy with the views presented. We cannot but observe, however, that a tone of sympathy and a method of charity, love and tolerance wins more souls to truth and right than a method of harsh criticism and condemnation. The Spiritualist can afford to treat his opponent with kindness, since his position is sustained by the omnipotent power of truth.

There has never been a season so marked by marvelous phenomena as the present one at Cassadaga. Slate-writing has been the most popular, and some of the most remarkable tests have been given through this phase. Your correspondent has seen slates bearing messages in German, in Latin, in shorthand, and in telegraphic characters; some of the messages having been obtained under absolute test conditions, the slates being either locked or screwed together.

Library Hall is a highly valuable adjunct to the grounds. It is in constant use, the small rooms being utilized for séances and the lower hall for lectures on special subjects, and for classes in various branches of instruction.

The Children's Lyceum is getting along nicely, and has given some very creditable entertainments.

W. J. Colville is conducting a class in practical metaphysics.

E. W. Emerson is giving complete satisfaction with his platform tests. The tests of J. Frank Baxter were also of remarkable excellence.

The kindly face of Mrs. Skidmore is seen everywhere, as she goes about on her errands of usefulness.

The familiar form of Dr. Carter is always seen at his post of duty—the gate of entrance.

"Jack" Lillie is as happy as ever, and does n't seem to lose flesh by his travels.

Mr. A. Gaston, the active President of the Association, is here, there and everywhere, looking out for the interests of the camp.

The office of Miss Turner is better patronized than any other place on the grounds. She handles a great many letters and papers in the course of a day.

As evidence of the growing public interest in Spiritualism and the kindly attitude of many of the editorial fraternity, the writer will state that his reports and camp-correspondence are being published in fifteen different newspapers, including such influential and widely circulated organs as the Buffalo News, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Buffalo Courier, Pittsburgh Dispatch, Elmira

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

VOL. LXIII. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1888. | $3,00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 25.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—The Spiritual Rostrum: No Soul is Lost. "God Wrote It." A Strange Dream. Guide-Boards on the Way to a Future Life.

SECOND PAGE.—Lake Pleasant. Poetry: The Dreamers. Foreign Correspondence: Another Survey in Paris. What One Woman Has Done. Mathematical Proportion in Spiritual Science. Abner Kneeland. September Magazines.

THIRD PAGE.—Banner Correspondence: Letters from Iowa, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Maine, and North Carolina, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—Ingersoll on Marriage. Cremation Holds its Ground. Humanity to Animals. Interoceanic Strabismus. Again the Sioux. Spiritualist Convention in Spain, etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—Letter from John Slater. All Sorts of Paragraphs. Spiritualist Meetings in Boston. Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith. From Spirits Preller and Maxwell, etc.

SEVENTH PAGE.—Poetry: Night. New Publications. Mediums in Boston. Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings, etc.

The Spiritual Rostrum.

NO SOUL IS LOST.

A Lecture delivered before the Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C.,

BY SAMUEL WHEELER,

Of Philadelphia, Pa.

[Reported for the Banner of Light by J. C. Rowland.]

"For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" are words that we have read, and words from which we have been instructed in the past; and they suggest to us a few thoughts. It is a terrible question to put to one's self; it is a terrible question to put to another, provided we believed it to be literally true. "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" We might even go further and ask, "What would it profit a great nation if it gain the whole world by conquest, and lose the liberties of its people?" But we are thankful for the fact that we do not believe that question to be capable of an affirmative answer, in the sense of believing that any man's soul may be lost. And we are thankful for the fact that our country shall not lose the liberties of its people, but that it shall constantly progress toward that which is better.

These words as interpreted by theologians, and as understood by the Christian, seem to imply the possibility that it may be—that at some time in the future by our actions, by our disbelief, or our failing to do right—we may lose our own souls. It is indeed a terrible thought! And what would a man give in exchange for his soul? is also well to think of. But we are thankful for the assurance that we have in the light of the philosophy of Modern Spiritualism, in the light of the truth that we have had expounded to us, in the light of the reason that we profess to cultivate and know of—that God, that eternal principle of good, that so-called personality, or individuality, that which none can comprehend, but which men call God—we are thankful for the assurance that comes to our souls that that principle is love, and that in the economy of nature, as changes take place, as man dies and passes away, as man is born and passes from the cradle to the grave, as man gives up the ghost and goeth to the other world, we know not a single soul can be lost. Thank God—and when we use that term, remember we are speaking of the principle of good, not recognizing or knowing a personality—thank God for the assurance of our belief that God is love!

But while we do not admit the fact of the possibility of the soul of man being lost, the question to your mind, and to my mind, will start a train of thought, and each one may think out, may know of, the possibilities that have been lost, the opportunities that have been neglected in this life in the past, the opportunities that we may neglect in the future, and the opportunities lost in the other life will there bring their fruit and their reward for good works, which should be there as treasures. Each one of us is losing golden moments. Each one of us is losing opportunities and possibilities for good that never can to us return, and it is well for us to pause and ask ourselves whether we are not in a measure losing possibilities of our souls that might be to us grand mines of happiness, grand mines of joy and peace, if we would only act up to the highest light that is given to us here. Oh, the opportunities lost; the seasons of joy and gladness wasted because we do not do all we can! It were better for us if, instead of repining over the lost opportunities, that each of us should resolve here and now to waste no time in idle regrets, to waste no time in repinings, to close the book of our past, and never reöpen it only with reference to higher action, and to resolve that each and every day of our lives shall be devoted to the possibilities of the future and the making of our life in the spirit-world all that we might wish and hope for.

As Spiritualists, there are reforms to which you and I can devote our time, can devote our talents, can lift up our voices in favor of, can carry the banner of peace and progress, and point our friends to that which is better than they have ever known. We may point them to the fact that over there in the land of progression no soul is lost. But we may point them to the opportunities wasted; we may point them to the fact that we are to-day building our spirit-homes, sending over there treasures that we shall find safely invested when you and I shall pass from time to eternity; and that as we work here, as we act here, so it shall be with us hereafter.

As Spiritualists, oh, how grand the possibilities for us; as Spiritualists, how wide the field; as Spiritualists, how bountiful the harvest, as Spiritualists, what noble and grand achievements there are for us in this life, and what grand rewards in the future! There is not an evil in our land that it is not your duty and my duty to raise our voices against, and by the prayer of words, by the prayer of earnest work, by constantly putting our shoulders to the wheel, labor for the reform that is needed. And so shall we find that instead of losing our souls, even for a day, even for an hour, much less, as is shadowed forth in the Book, the possibility of losing them for all eternity—that over there we shall find all those who have passed from our mortal sight, and that not a single deed, whether of good or evil, shall have been forgotten.

The evils that are abroad in our land to-day it is your duty and mine to help wipe away. It is a sad fact that poorhouses and jails are dotting all this fair land, and each day, each week brings to us a call for more money for charities, more money for prisons, more money to suppress crime and the vice that is stalking abroad. It would seem as though the Christianity of eighteen hundred years had been almost a failure, and that to-day the thousands of churches that are pointing their spires heavenward and glistening in the light of the morning sun were mockeries, and, indeed, whitened sepulchres. Go with me to your prisons, and truly is it the fact, as we enter the portals of many of them, there arises forcibly to our minds the inscription over the doors of Danté's "Inferno." "He who enters here leaves hope behind." Go with me and look at those poor children of crime, the creatures of circumstances, the creatures of education, the creatures of bad generation that are now needing regeneration; and in the poorhouses of your land, there see the possibilities, there see the evidence, there see the fact exemplified of the lost opportunities, of the lost moments, of the lost golden grains of beauty that have been thrown away by those poor creatures that are, as you and I, subject to all that is good and all that is bad; and let us as we view these instances, let us as we see these opportunities that have been wasted, let us as we see the regeneration that is attainable by them, resolve that we will do all that we can for the uplifting of humanity.

Again, as a Spiritualist, one other thought comes to my mind; and with that thought I shall close. As Spiritualists, realizing the fact that no souls are lost, but that many are in darkness, constitute yourselves, each and every one, earnest and persistent workers in the cause of uplifting the souls that are in darkness on this and on the other side of life. It is said that a good man of whom we know, and who in his life did many good things, and who preached the law of love, and who taught others that "all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them"; it is said that at his death he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; and there is for you, as Spiritualists, and for me as a Spiritualist, and for every one of us as men and women who resolve to do all that we can, a work on earth to do; and there is a work in the spirit-world to do, and each and every one of us can do something for the uplifting and the upbuilding of humanity. Realizing the fact that no souls are lost, but only that some may for a time grope in darkness, look not above for that which is higher and nobler. Let us also realize that our God is a God of love; and that by-and-bye each and every one of us shall again hear the cry, "Come up higher"; that by-and-bye we shall pass the iron door of the conditions of this life—the iron door with the crown of thorns above it—and shall come to the golden door with the crown of roses—a door that shall open to you and to me, and give us entrance into fields of eternal life, the land of continued existence, where we shall indeed realize the truth that no soul is lost!

"God Wrote It."

Capt. Lewis Corwin's farm is three miles north of Sag Harbor, and situated on an arm of Long Island known as Hog Neck, but which latter-day dwellers find pleasanter to call North Haven. It is here that Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, declining in health, is passing her time in the enjoyment of that repose and quiet which is deemed so essential in her present condition. Two weeks ago when the steamer Sunshine, from Hartford, arrived at the unpretentious dock at Sag Harbor, the crowd that waited its coming was unusually large. Some event was about to happen, for there was a marked degree of expectation on the faces of many who waited. Among the first passengers to land was an old lady whose hair was frosted as white as the foam blown among the pebbles on the beach. She walked slowly, leaning upon the arm of a bearded, muscular-looking young man of about thirty, her son, Rev. C. E. Stowe.

"We are in hopes," says the young clergyman, "that her trouble is merely temporary, and that she will return to Hartford in the fall fully recovered."

One evening about twilight, as Mrs. Stowe was walking alone in the garden, as is her custom, she was approached by the captain. He held his hat respectfully in his hand.

"When I was younger," said he, "I read with a great deal of satisfaction and instruction 'UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.' The story impressed me very much, and I am happy to shake hands with you, Mrs. Stowe, who wrote it."

"I did not write it," replied the septuagenarian gently, as she shook his brawny hand.

"You did n't!" ejaculated the captain in amazement. "Why, who did, then?"

"God wrote it," she replied simply. "I merely did his dictation."—The New York World.

A STRANGE DREAM.

BY S. T. SUDDICK, M D.

While talking the other evening with an old and valued friend, who is a physician, the conversation turned on visions and hallucinations, and my friend related a dream which he had experienced, and which seemed to me so remarkable, that, for the benefit of psychologists and metaphysicians, I will record it.

The dreamer in question does not belong to any religious sect, though he believes in the existence of a Supreme Being, and thinks that the good or evil deeds of men will meet an appropriate reward or punishment even in this life. He said:

"I am not a Spiritualist, as you well know; neither am I superstitious in regard to dreams; but I choose to regard this experience, or dream, if dream it may be called, as different and distinct from the ordinary affairs which we call by that name. I thought I had been killed, seemingly by a railroad accident. My body lay upon the ground beside the track, upon which an engine and some cars were standing. It was gashed and mutilated, while I was sitting under a tree a few yards distant. I remembered nothing whatever previous to or during the accident. I had simply 'shuffled off this mortal coil,' and was now sitting as described, waiting for the life or animal heat to come out of the body and enter myself, which it presently did. It seemed to be a process of disentanglement of my selfhood, or life principle, from the mortal, or perishable part.

"I suffered no pain or other disagreeable feeling, and was only waiting until this disentanglement should be concluded, which I in some unaccountable way understood would occur as soon as the body before me became perfectly cold. For the body itself I cared nothing; I looked upon it with as little feeling of regard as a butterfly would be supposed to look upon the chrysalis from which it had just escaped.

"I seemed to be the warmth, the electricity, the life of the body; and as I gathered myself from its embrace it became lifeless, cold and rigid. I say 'I,' for my form was just as perfect in shape, feature and feeling as it had been before the stroke that broke the 'silver cord' with which I had been manacled to that earthly clod. As the sensatory nerves come to the surface over every portion of the human body, so as this sensatory part of my body came gradually to me my form seemed to round out to perfect symmetry, becoming an exact 'curl' of my former self. I felt, by a sort of intuition, that I was forever free from all earthly pain and care. An intense, overwhelming sense of infinite rest and security pervaded me, such as no mortal could ever conceive or imagine while in the flesh. Although in life I had never considered it a burden to perform the respiratory act, my first exclamation, on finding myself freed from the body, was: 'Oh! how delightful to be relieved from the trouble of breathing.' Lungs, or the need of them, were no part of my present economy. Everything mortal, every physical instinct or desire, had perished with that mutilated body yonder, now lifeless, stiff and cold. I was all mind, spirit, soul. Though retaining the natural form of mortals, I was perfectly, infinitely at ease, infinitely contented; and this feeling of contentment consisted not in having every want gratified, but in having no want to gratify. I was neither too cold nor too warm; I was not hungry nor thirsty nor weary; but a sense of infinite pleasure and happiness pervaded my whole being.

"The first place I thought of was a small town in Missouri, where I once lived, and, presto! I was there. Oh! how light I was! light as thistledown borne on the breath of a summer evening. As I passed up the street I met several old familiar friends, but none of them took any notice of my presence. In my rambles through the town I entered the court-house; it being the dinner hour, I found the offices all deserted until I came to that of the circuit clerk.

"My old friend, George M., who had occupied that position for many years, but who had died some time since, was sitting in the office-chair at the table, engaged in looking over an old record.

"He turned as I entered, and his face brightened into a smile. He arose, shook me heartily by the hand with a 'How are you, Doc?' then motioned me to a chair and sat down himself, placing his legs on the table, as was his habit in life. He was surprised to see me, and made some remarks about the change we had both undergone, which people call death. His exact words I could not remember on awaking. He had evidently not heard of my demise, but my seeing and recognizing him (a spirit) was sufficient evidence to him that I had severed my relationship with the flesh.

"After conversing with him awhile, I asked him if we were not to be transported to some far-away clime, as we had been taught by the tenets of our religion to believe.

"'That is all a mistake,' he replied, with a laugh that was peculiar to him in life. 'You do n't need to go anywhere unless you choose to, but you can go anywhere you please. You will be likely to change places oftener than you wish, until you get accustomed to this life.' I asked him how that could be?

"He replied, 'You remember in the other life your mind wandered at will, but to go anywhere you were compelled to walk that old hulk of a body along, or get a conveyance to carry it like any other piece of baggage; but now you have no baggage; you are all mind, all soul; and when your mind wanders anywhere you are there.'

"Just then I thought of a room in the house of my father-in-law, and although he lived in a distant city, I was there immediately, and remember distinctly the contents of the room, bed, stove, chairs, bureau, etc. There was no one present, and I thought I would sit down and wait till my father-in-law came in, whom I then remembered wanting to see me on a matter of business. Suddenly I thought of my friend in the court-house, whom I had left so unceremoniously, and in an instant I was there again. He was still sitting where I had left him. He laughed heartily at my impromptu exit and reäppearance, and said that it was a most difficult thing to learn to hold one's mind, or self, in one particular place, in that condition of perfect freedom of action. I then remembered that I did not see anything on the road in passing from place to place, and asked my friend if it were always so.

"'No,' he replied; 'you will learn in time to travel, and see the road, or any part of it, while traveling. Remember that in this state we do not walk or ride, we simply think ourselves along. You are all mind now, all thought, and whatever particular place you wish to see, all you have to do is to first think of it and you are there. If you wish to see the points through which you pass, think all along the road to your destination.'

"'How will I find friends whom I wish to see?' I inquired.

"'You will have to find them as you always did,' was his reply. 'Go and hunt for them. We have no more knowledge of their whereabouts than we ever had, but our facilities for traveling are so great that if we know their homes or resorts we can easily find them. We cannot converse with friends who are yet in the flesh; they cannot see us nor hear us think!'

"I now noticed for the first time that we were not talking as we do in mortal life, but were just thinking to one another.

"At this point several persons came into the room; some who had experienced the change called death came and greeted me cordially, congratulating me on having escaped the bondage of the flesh, while those who had not undergone this change ignored our presence entirely.

"The clerk came in with another gentleman whom I did not know, and the two took their places at the table, my friend George M having vacated the chair. I heard and understood all their conversation, but could not recall any part of it on awaking.

"Every one I met, with whom I had been formerly acquainted, had a familiar look, but I readily distinguished those who had passed that strange dividing line from those who had not; the latter looked graver and older grown, while the others were younger in appearance, and on their faces was a peculiarly serene and satisfied expression.

"My friend George M. was in his lifetime very fond of accumulating money, and as the men at the table were counting a considerable sum of it, I asked him if he still liked it.

"'No,' he replied, 'I have no use for the stuff whatever. I used to like it because it was a means of supplying my wants, but now I have no wants to supply.'

"I then, for the first time, thought of my wife and daughter at home, and in a trice I was with them. They were preparing dinner, and I noticed that it was past one o'clock. They had evidently not heard of the accident, and had delayed the meal, thinking I would come. Here a blank occurred in my dream. Then I was in my old home again, and met and shook hands with an old colored woman whom I had attended in her last sickness. She seemed very glad to see me, and we talked for some time, but I cannot remember the conversation.

"Then I was again at home. My wife and daughter were about their household duties as before, but their faces were sad and tear-stained, and their eyes were red with weeping, and both wore mourning garments. Strange to say, I was not in the least affected by their sorrow, but looked upon it with as little compassion as a father would look upon a child crying because its cob house had tumbled down. Indeed, all their joys and sorrows, their plans and labors, seemed frivolous to me as child's play. I could hear their conversation, but could not converse with them. But even this did not distress me. I felt in this matter very much as a man would feel who, coming home with a bit of news and finding his wife occupied with domestic duties, concludes to defer imparting it to her until she is ready to listen. I felt that the time was short. I could afford to wait. On one of my visits to my late home I found that my wife was sick, and I watched her illness with some degree of interest, hoping that it would end fatally.

"Life now was a continual reception. New friendships were being formed each day, Mr. M. introducing me to all with whom he had become acquainted, and they in turn presenting me to others; and each one of these newformed acquaintances proved to be exceedingly interesting and agreeable. I had not much time to think of my family or friends from whom death had severed me. Besides, many whom I had left behind were approaching and crossing the mysterious dividing line, and our greetings were warm and sincere. I noticed that all that was evil or disagreeable in them was left behind, the good only being immortal."

"I have thought over this dream a great many times," continued the Doctor, "and the more I study about it the more reasonable it appears. I almost believe it will be that way.

"The doctrine of being separated from our loved ones at death and transferred to some distant region, always seemed a little improbable to me. It seemed as if the soul were held in a continued probation. I should like a future such as my dream pictured. Besides, does not the Scripture speak of a 'new earth,' and intimate that it shall be our future habitation? Did not John see the New Jerusalem descending from heaven and resting on the earth, and hear a voice saying, 'The tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them?'"

Bonne Terre, Mo.

GUIDE-BOARDS ON THE WAY TO A FUTURE LIFE.

BY DR. S. D. PACE.

By inquiry the curious reader may find in almost every household the record of events, well authenticated and free from the semblance of collusion or superstition, which carry with them the evidence of a life beyond this, and this evidence is by no means confined to persons who accept the truths of Spiritualism.

Many years ago the writer resided in Canada, near Port Stanley on Lake Erie. The country was new, or but partially developed, and the present site of many beautiful farms was then a wilderness. There came into this neighborhood from England, about the year 1854, a man named Joseph Brumpton, who purchased a piece of wood-land, and with the industry characteristic of his people he immediately commenced to subdue the forest, with a view of making for himself and family a home. He had been in Canada a year or two, and was still engaged in clearing land. One day he happened to be employed in a field by himself, and looking up from his work he saw approaching him a woman, and as she came nearer, he recognized her as a sister whom he had left in England. Having no suspicion that the person whom he saw was in reality a spiritual being, but believing her to be his sister in the flesh, he started to meet her and welcome her to his humble home in America, but to his amazement when he had come so near as to be almost able to clasp her in his arms, she commenced perceptibly and rapidly to fade from his sight, and in a minute or two she had vanished.

This wonderful appearance and sudden disappearance caused a very severe shock to Brumpton's nervous system; in fact, he was obliged to return immediately to his house and retire to bed. Many comments were made upon the affair at the time, and the whole neighborhood were much interested. Some, of course, doubted the genuineness of the vision, others thought him slightly demented, but personal criticism of the man was very much disarmed when in about two weeks from the date of this occurence, a letter bearing the date and postmark of a village in England reached Brumpton, containing the news of the death of the sister whose appearance to him in the field had produced such a sensation in the neighborhood.

I was fully conversant with the facts in this case, so far as they related to the nervous prostration of Brumpton. I heard his story the day after the alleged appearance of his sister in the field, from his own lips, as he lay upon his bed in great agony of mind. I also read the letter, post marked as I have before described, and carrying with it unmistakable evidence of its genuineness. This letter gave the date of his sister's death, and this date corresponded exactly with the date of her spiritual appearance in America. Collusion was simply out of the question in this case. It will be seen by reference to the date that this manifestation occurred years before the time of ocean telegraphy. It would seem all candid persons should agree that this occurrence carries with it a lesson which teaches that the spirit does not become extinct with the death of the body; that it retains its individuality, and that the forms of our departed friends bear such a striking resemblance to the earthly body as to be easily recognized by the friend or friends who may be so fortunate as to see the spirit.

Only the day before yesterday I was in conversation with two elderly gentlemen, one a retired Lake captain. Both of these men had been active in business, and physically and mentally well preserved for their years. Our conversation was at first upon political topics, but finally became somewhat metaphysical. Capt. C. remarked that he had no evidence of a life beyond the grave. "I have read the Scriptures," said he, "and can find nothing satisfactory to me. I have conversed with ministers who are supposed to understand all about these things, and I find them to be fully as much in the dark as myself upon this great question. I find no evidence, no word of encouragement in my search for a future existence, and I am strongly inclined to the belief that death means for man an eternal sleep."

The other gentleman seemed to have more hope, and argued that the evidences of immortality were seen in all Nature; but when he attempted to point out the footprints, they were found to be vague and of but little practical use; in short, he was not clear in his arguments drawn from Nature.

I then stated my belief that there was evidence of the continued existence of the soul, or spirit, after death, and that this evidence came directly from the spirits of those who had once been dwellers on the earth; and I appealed to them individually to state whether, in looking back over their past lives, they could not discover some footprints such as I had indicated. Capt. C. was the first to speak, and—omitting names—I will endeavor to give his story, in substance, at least, as he gave it to me.

"About thirty years ago," said he, "I was first mate with Captain J. S. on board the American schooner C——. We were weather-bound at the port of Milwaukee, ready to sail with a shift of wind for Buffalo. As we had leisure, Captain S. invited me to take a stroll up town. As we were walking leisurely along we passed a small, unpretentious-looking little cottage, opposite which Captain S. came to a stand-still, and, pointing toward it, he said, addressing me by my first name: 'They tell me there is a very strange person residing there; they say she knows everything; suppose we give her a call.' To this I assented, and we both entered the cottage, and met a plain-looking, middle-aged woman, who pointed us to seats. The Captain soon opened the conversation by saying, 'They tell me you can tell us most anything, and we came to see if you could say something interesting to us.' The woman disclaimed any superior knowledge, but said: 'Sometimes the spirits tell me what they see or know; and should they do so now I will give you what they give me.' She then rested her head on her hand for a few moments as though listening to something being whispered into her ear; then turning to Captain S. she said: 'You have a letter at the post-office; this letter brings you bad news; it tells of the death of your little eight-year-old daughter (calling her by name).' Some other things of minor importance were then communicated, and after placing a coin in her hand we went to the post office, where, sure enough, the captain received a letter announcing the death of his daughter. I am well satisfied," said Captain C., "that Captain S. had no intimation of the death of his daughter, except that received from the woman, until he had opened and read that letter."

When Capt. C. had finished his story, I turned to the other gentleman and asked him to give his experience, if he had any, touching this question. "Well," said he, "when I lived in L. County, (naming a county in the interior of this State,) I was at the farmhouse of Mr. K. (the abbreviation I make myself, the full name was given). Just before supper that evening, Mr. K. walked into the family sitting-room, looking pale and somewhat agitated. His condition was so marked as to attract attention, and Mrs. K. anxiously inquired if he was ill. 'No,' said he, 'I am not ill, but Charley is dead!' It may be proper right here to state that 'Charley,' the person to whom he referred, was a brother of Mr. K., who resided forty miles distant from him in another county. 'How do you know he is dead?' inquired Mrs. K. 'Why,' said he, 'I saw him as I was coming through the gate, and he told me that he had been killed by an accident!' Supper was now announced, but Mr. K. refused to go to the table, and insisted upon driving immediately to the residence of his brother in the adjoining county, and he started as soon as his team could be harnessed. He was accompanied by a friend, and when they had reached within ten miles of his brother's residence, they met a person who had been sent to convey the sad intelligence that his brother had been killed at a barn raising that day, having been struck on the head by a falling piece of timber."

Events similar to these I have related in this article are quite common in the history of most families, and perhaps the reader may call to mind more convincing testimony in this direction. I mention these instances because they happen to be fresh in my mind; but if people will stop to consider, they will find the pathway of life strewn with similar testimony, all pointing to the continued existence and intelligent condition of man in a future world.

Port Huron, Mich.

Lake Pleasant.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

I have conversed with many prominent, well-informed men while stopping at Lake Pleasant Camp-Meeting. I do not know of any better way to arrive at facts concerning the Spiritual Philosophy than by the exchange of individual experiences, and especially so when the men and women who relate them are removed beyond the sphere of pecuniary interest. Among the narrations to which I have recently listened at the Lake is the following, by a prominent business man from New York, who is one of the oldest Spiritualists of that city:

"A Presbyterian minister was employed to officiate at the funeral of my sister—employed for obvious reasons that the family are conversant with. I said to him before the exercises, 'We are largely Spiritualists in our belief of a future life,' and that minister performed his duties as well as any spiritualistic medium could have done on the occasion; he cited a case where the mother of a little child passed on in childbirth; afterward the father married again, and they had a mutual understanding between them that the child should not know but that the latter wife was its mother; the child lived until some ten years of age, and knew not to the contrary, and supposed the last wife was its mother. Just before its departure to spirit life, the child looked up to its heretofore supposed mother and said: 'Are you my real mother?' 'Of course I am,' replied the wife; 'why do you ask me this question?' She replied: 'There is a lady standing by my side who says she is my mother.'" Comments are unnecessary in this case; coming as they did from a sectarian minister, the facts related speak volumes for Modern Spiritualism, and vice versa for the views of the church in regard to a future life, and its creedal requirements to obtain it.

Another instance of reliable evidence of the spirit's continuity after the change called death, which I have met here, is that of a wealthy merchant residing in San Francisco, Cal., by the name of Thomas Dolliver, who formerly lived in Woburn, Mass., and worked at the shoe business forty years ago. He has for several years annually visited the Lake Pleasant and Onset Bay spiritual camp meetings, and received what satisfies him that Spiritualism is what it is claimed to be. His interior vision has been opened for the past few years, and he can see his spirit friends as tangibly as he can those in the material form. The exercise of this gift affords him the greatest pleasure; and the details which accompany his recognition of the forms he beholds prove their genuineness to others.

The "Christian Science" fallacy, which has been attempted to be foisted upon Spiritualism, has received a pronounced "set-back" at Onset as well as at Lake Pleasant this season, and the theosophists and esoteric adherents did not attempt to make converts. To my mind at least, the sum and substance of the whole matter regarding these speculative idealities is to be found, practically, in what can be made peculiarly in teaching them to the people——not in showing the practical working of the same, or the benefit derived therefrom by the public in general. Much that is encountered in the different phases of these systems is simon-pure psychology, made use of in many cases that the apostle may derive benefit from the student.

At Lake Pleasant, Mr. Dawbarn, Dr. Clarke and several others, handled that waning absurdity, "Christian Science," so called, with its "no disease" theory, without gloves.

This camp-meeting seems to be settling down into a business transaction, and doubtless will gradually increase in all ways that will be desirable for families to visit and enjoy the healthy mountain air as well as the meetings ——with sensationalism left out. It makes a great difference whether an individual is improving his own land or that of another on lease. May success attend the effort.

Aug. 22d. A. S. HAYWARD.

THE DREAMERS.

We are the music-makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea-breakers;
And sitting by desolate streams;
World-losers and world-forsakers
On whom the pale moon gleams;
Yet we are the movers and shakers
Of the world forever, it seems.

With wonderful deathless ditties
We build up the world's great cities,
And out of a fabulous story
We fashion an empire's glory;
One man with a dream, at pleasure,
Shall go forth and conquer a crown;
And three, with a new song's measure,
Can trample a kingdom down.

A breath of our inspiration
Is the life of each generation;
A wondrous thing of our dreaming,
Unearthly, impossible seeming,
The soldier, the king, and the peasant
Are working together in one,
Till our dreams shall become their present,
And their work in the world be done.

—ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSEY.

Foreign Correspondence.

ANOTHER SURVEY IN PARIS.

BY HENRY LACROIX.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Jeremiah, the ancient, would have deprived the moderns of his Lamentations, had the heavens wept in his time as at present in this old Europe. He would have been dumfounded at such a display of heavenly grief, and his silence might have been profitable to him—— and to us However, things take their course, under our feet and above our heads, such as we would not have were it left to us to decide. The plain fact is that we have had no summer as yet—not a day scarcely. Cold and wet it has been all along since May began, and it is general throughout Europe. Such an amount of snow fell in mid-July in Bavaria and other parts as to stop cattle from feeding in the pastures. I was then in Belgium, and found the crops seriously injured by the inclemency of the weather, and it is so all over. America will have to feed Europe next winter, and prices will go up in the land of plenty. It is said that such weather, so calamitous, has not happened for one hundred years. I have come to the conclusion to give up hope—for better days—and endure what cannot be helped. It is a wise philosophy, in the passive sense.

Tourists, however, flock in from all climes and countries, and seem bent on defying overhead powers, that scowl on them as well as others. Overclouded Europe, so cruelly dealt with in that way, may thus escape a still more severe trial—that of general war—as Nature usually afflicts us with only one disease at one time.

Cook's office in Paris, 9 rue Scribe, is the rendezvouz of multitudes of men and women, speaking all sorts of idioms, who congregate there as chicks under the protecting wings of the mother hen. The fact is that Cook's Universal Institution, taking charge of tourists and seeing them through safely the world over, is one of the great inventions of our great century. Messrs. Thomas Cook & Son (Ludgate Circus, London, as headquarters) are the greatest sovereigns on earth, as their rule extends over it all, and without any serious opposition. They give a hand to the humble mortal as well as to the nabob, or the pasha of many tails, furnishing here (and elsewhere as well) lodging and board, in good hôtels, from $1.25 to $4.00 per day. The broad principles of business, including a paternal like care of the traveler, ranging through every agency, is the distinctive feature of Cook's Institution. To travel under its auspices is a safeguard against accident, sickness, extortion, and many other ills too numerous to mention. It acts honestly toward every one as broker, banker, counsellor, and, in fact, endeavors to deserve the meritorious title of modern Mentor. The Cook's excursions in Paris, including carriages and cicerones to each set of parties, embrace the summum of what is to be seen. There are three such excursions every week during the season. The fare for one excursion is two dollars, and for the three, five dollars, exclusive of lunch. The starting hour is at 10 A. M., from No. 9 rue Scribe, and return about 5:30 P. M. There are other excursions, outside, to Fontainebleau, etc.

The number of strangers inhabiting Paris and environs aggregates as follows: Belgians, 57,619; Germans, 35,718; Italians, 28,351; Swiss, 27,233; Dutch, 19,227; English, 14,701; Russians, 8,018; Americans, 6,915; Austrians, 5,860; Spanish, 4,242; Swedes, Danes and Norwegians, 1,294. As a total, 180,253 strangers.

The total receipts of the Salon (yearly exhibition of paintings, etc.,) held lately, amounted to 332,000 francs; there were 314,000 free tickets. The expenses were 240,000 francs, leaving a profit of 100,000 francs to be added to the capital of the society, viz: 747,429 francs. The Society of French Artists owns a total capital of over 900,000 francs. Its field of benevolence is great, and its works for the encouragement of art cannot be too highly praised.

There are fine institutions in this world of ours, even in badly organized countries. It takes, indeed, a small dose of good to counteract the effects of evil, or the "lesser good." That has always been to me a topic of wonderment and admiration at the same time. Progress goes along through everything, transforming all atoms of matter, and beautifying us and our surroundings. Who has not noticed in his community or town the regular growing in perfection of men and women? How beautiful our mixed humanity in time to come will be!

En attendant, in the meantime, there are mean things to be seen everywhere, that grow, logically, as offshoots on the great tree of our social economy. Beggary is one of those mean things. It exists here, although forbidden by law. The City Fathers in Paris, as those at home, shut their eyes on, when they don't wink at, many things that are disgraceful. There are ten thousand beggars in Paris, as one of the papers lately said. To many the profession is a liberal or profitable one. Those proficient in art, who act their part well, make a good day's work, realizing more than mechanics, who have to sweat hard for a living, or clerks that get bestumped on their calling The deformed beggar, or the would-be one, the blind one "who cannot see," as one on the Pont Neuf once announced on his card, or those who can see when convenient; those without arms or legs; widows with borrowed babies, or without work; most of these queer or unfortunate professionals make, it is said, from ten to twenty francs a day. It is a paying business! Some merchants, as an advertisement more or less questionable, are in the habit of giving one sou to every beggar calling at an early hour on a specified day of the week. One of these, my neighbor, a music publisher, doing a large business, under the title of Le Ménestrel, is thus stormed once a week, from 8 to 9 A. M., by able-bodied men and women. Sometimes they number over one hundred, sitting down on the sidewalks, chatting together and waiting patiently for the opening of the store. The first time I noticed that crowd of becoming-like beings, far from beggarly in appearance, I was thunderstruck when posted regarding them and the cause of their presence there.

And à propos—as strikes are à la mode just now in the city among many kinds of workers, clubbing more or less together, as a general manifestation against their patrons—I may as well bring forward a class of them who take an active lead in the disturbance, as the police authorities call it. It is the garçons of hôtels, cafés, restaurants, etc., who have a deep grudge against the Registry Offices, that "skin" them unmercifully, in league with the patrons or employers. It is the employés here who have to pay the Registry officers, and as much as twenty dollars in many cases is exacted of a garçon who, through their means, gets a situation in a hotel. Sometimes it happens that the incumbent, not satisfied, leaves his situation soon after getting it. In that case, when within a fortnight, the amount he has disbursed is refunded to him; but not so when it is a day more than that short period. The grievances of the garçons against their double sided masters, who hold together as the Siamese twins, are quite legitimate, and public opinion is on their side. But then here it takes long and hard fighting to get redress. The question is one that interests the world at large, it might well be said, as the traveling public are affected by it. The pourboire, or "attendance," as it is called in Great Britain, is a nuisance, a vexation, that exists as a leprosy all over so-called civilized Europe. It is a relic of the "good old times," when the people were simply vilains, liable to be driven and slain at the good pleasure of their lords, whose rights were "divine." It reminds one of when the common folks had no family name, only a Christian one when that existed—when the herds of men and women had to go to the doors of castles and manors and beg hard for a crust of bread.

The revolution which the garçons of Paris are endeavoring to bring about, concerns the common weal. It proves at the same time that this French class of employés have a sterling notion of right about them, that they are not mercenary and mean. They want the pourboire abolished. Although forced to count on the pourboire, they never in fact extend the hand for it, as seen in a neighboring country to France. The mean ones here are the patrons, the employers, who belong to the middle classes, or the bourgeoisie. To tell the plain truth, that class, in every country almost, presents a mongrel appearance, morally so; obsequious to the upper ones, they grind down as much as they can the "million," that labor and furnish conveniences. As hydrogen in chemistry, the bourgeoisie, psychologically, throw a poor light over our world, and it is not much amiss that the French radicals or socialists should do as they do, despise that class, which maintains opportunisme in politics—as a safeguard for their capital.

Many things here are reversed to what they are with us. We pay our helps, but here the servants have to pay their masters, in many cases. It is the public after all who have to pay, not only what they buy or consume, but the servant as well that delivers it to them. In the Restaurants Duval (there being forty-two of them) the garçons have to pay two francs each every morning before putting on the apron. In other restaurants the prices vary. Some of the cafés on the boulevards exact as much as ten francs from their helps. The cabmen are also subjected to the same missrule, and employes in public baths, the tonsorial business also. In fact, it is hard to tell where it begins and ends. In the Senate even, as I found out by experience, my hat was taken away from me on entering, and on leaving I was indirectly reminded to pay.

I have been having lately a tug or discussion with Mr. Leymarie, in the Revue Spirite, on several practical points of our doctrine, which are quite familiar to us, but which in France and on the continent are rather a dead letter. They have eyes here—not to see—into the practical organization of the other world. They do not, in fact, realize organization outside of material spheres; that much, at least, is advanced by Mr. Leymarie, in the Revue Spirite of 1st August, in reply to my last article in same number. My kind adversary—not blessed with clairvoyance, and following more or less in the footsteps of Allan Kardec, (the Master, as he is called,) who also was no medium or clairvoyant—claims that the spirits have no sex, being neither men nor women! and other such disorganized arguments, that have a Gaulois origin.

Authority—or "Thus saith the Lord"—is not obsolete in Europe, even in this new-born and thrice reborn Republic. They say in French that "the road to the church is a road of habit." Well, the French Spiritists, as a rule, keep up old habits and mix up a good deal of the old with the new. They have an authority to look to, and that authority they call the MASTER: Allan Kardec. It must be said, however, to the credit of Kardec, that he, in his works, repeatedly cautioned his followers that others, after him, would come and add to the sum of truth which he gave them. Notwithstanding that wise reminding, our brothers here, having been accustomed through early education to bow down before authority, in its various senses, cannot be reclaimed altogether from that propensity. Before the Society here, I said several times that we had no recognized Master of the doctrine; that each of us was his own master; and that, after all, that way was the best, as the cause with us was more flourishing than anywhere else in the world—a fact which cannot be gainsayed.

On the 8th Sept. next, there is to be a general Spiritual Congress in Barcelona, Spain. The promoters have issued printed circulars as to the bases, rules and proceedings to be adopted; and I have to remark that a free platform is not contemplated, as it is intended to be here next year. However, the stir will be a wholesome one, and the Spanish brothers will learn more as they go on. I may attend that Congress, but anyway I shall inform your readers of the result.

In the last No. of the Revue Spirite I announce that I will publish a work in French during the coming winter, under the title of My Experiences with Spirits, which work will serve to demonstrate the cause in America, the value of our mediums (so numerous), the go-ahead spirit that animates us, and throw new information into this important centre.

Paris, 9th August, 1888.

☞ WRITING PLANCHETTES for sale by Colby & Rich. Price 60 cents.

WHAT ONE WOMAN HAS DONE.

The Red Cross of Europe and America.

The Story of Miss Clara Barton and the Red Cross Association.

(From the New York Sun.)

Into the shell-shattered city of Strasburg, on the morning after its capitulation to the Grand Duke of Baden, there walked—unguarded, unattended, save by a maid—a slight, delicate woman, in a dark plain dress, with a scarlet cross wrought on her sleeve above the elbow. Through the battalions of conquering troops which guarded the city she passed unchallenged and unmolested, and the sentinels on the ramparts grounded their muskets as she touched the scarlet symbol on her arm and hurried past them over the heaps of dead and dying into the heart of the stricken city. She found famine, fire, terror, a shattered city surrendering through hunger, its hospitals filled with wounded women and children, its streets swarming with half-naked, half-starved people; a city whose able bodied men were in the conscripted ranks of the French, or the prisons of Germany. Through the instrumentality of the stranger, in forty days the hungry were fed, the sick healed and the naked clothed. Boxes of supplies came by hundreds into the city, marked with the scarlet symbol she wore; money poured into her treasury faster than she could spend it; and scores of heroic assistants gathered about her. White hands that had never known labor bound the scarlet badge on their arms, and the proudest ladies of Germany, under the sign of the crimson cross, went down to the help and succor of the city which their troops had conquered. Indeed, so abundant were the offerings of clothing that a message was sent to the Empress saying: "You are making paupers of all Strasburg with your generosity; send me materials rather than clothing, that I may have them made up here, and thus create an industry for my people." The material was sent, and twice each week hundreds of women went to her door with baskets on their arms to receive their work, for which they were abundantly rewarded.

She came to a naked people, and she left the best dressed city in Europe, while forty thousand neatly-fashioned garments of assorted sizes were packed in boxes stamped with the scarlet cross.

The Commune had fallen in Paris! The crash of the Column Vendôme still thrilled in the startled air! The flames of the Hôtel de Ville lit the city with lurid light. Long files of insurgents were driven through the streets at the point of the bayonet, down to a mock trial, whose judge knew no mercy, but condemned every offender; whose victims were backed up against the buildings and shot down by the soldiers. The streets were reeking with blood, and the air was heavy with the groans of the dying.

Suddenly there appeared the same vision of mercy that came to the need of Strasburg. Pale, dust-covered, travel-worn, and well nigh exhausted, for she had walked seven miles into the city (ninety thousand horses having been eaten by the people, none were left for transportation). The German troops outside the city detained her with no questions when they caught the gleam of the scarlet cross. Cordons of French soldiers guarding the streets lowered their bayonets as she touched the glowing symbol, and the sullen mob made way for her to pass.

The Mayor had been reinstated in his office but a few hours, his assistants were hurrying to and fro, while the flames hissed and the buildings fell in the square. The Mayor himself was anxious, weary, heart-sick. Suddenly a soft voice sounded in his ear; an earnest, tender woman's face was lifted to his own; he caught the gleam of the scarlet cross, and heard the clear words: "Mayor, I have come to help you. I have forty thousand garments in my boxes outside the city, and plenty of money." The Mayor's house was instantly at her disposal, but she argued: "It is too grand for my work; give me some humble place where the poor will not be afraid to come to me."

"Madam, eight months ago I left my home, as I supposed, to be burned—to day, through the grace of God, it stands intact. Is it too good for God's poor? Make it your headquarters—they will go to you anywhere."

The history of Strasburg repeats itself. The hungry were fed, the naked clothed, the poor taught self-helpfulness, and then the woman of the red cross vanished.

It was Christmas in Strasburg. Down through the lanes and slums of the city, where letters seldom were carried, the postman hurried with missives stamped with a tiny cross of red, which invited their receivers to the most beautiful hall in the city, called the "Marriage Hall." There were many wild women. They had torn up the paving-stones and hurled them at the police in the days of the famine, and none of them had ever seen the elegant hall. Arrived there, ten large Christmas trees towered to the ceiling, glaring with candles, and beneath them, with a smile on her strong, tender face, and tears in her kind eyes, stood the woman of the scarlet cross, while around her gathered the titled and beautiful ladies of Strasburg, in garments and jewels of state. Each woman received a purse filled with new silver money, and was shown into the banqueting hall, where waited maidens of rank to serve with their white hands a bountiful feast. Still the women were not content. Something was wrong. Some one divined that the woman of the scarlet emblem must eat with them. When once she had "broken bread" with them, such shouts, and cheers, and tears, and broken thanks sobbed out, as were never heard before, while the wives and daughters of Strasburg, with tears falling, looked on amazed.

When the Mississippi overflowed its banks in 1884, and people were without homes, food, or seed for next season's planting, suddenly out of the turbulent waters a steamer, laden with every variety of provender, sustenance, and comfort for man and beast, came to the rescue of the suffering people. Whence she came, how provisioned, by whom supplied, no one knew. Only a woman stood at the helm, with a cross of crimson on her sleeve, and at the mast a banner floated—a shield of white crossed with scarlet bars. When the floods abated and the needs were all supplied, the strange craft vanished to an unknown port.

High up in the Balkan mountains the soldiers of Bulgaria were freezing and dying for want of supplies. Word came to the woman with the scarlet cross, and was forwarded by her to her colleagues in various cities; before night this telegram was sent from New Albany: "Call on us for five hundred dollars for the Balkan soldiers." Telegrams were sent from Geneva to Bulgaria, goods were purchased to that amount, and the next day after the woman of the Red Cross received the call of need, high up in the fastnesses of the Bulgarian mountains the soldiers were wearing the warm garments sent by the people of New Albany, America

Who is this mysterious woman that controls the soldiers of opposing armies, and commands the exchanges of the world with the gleam of a scarlet cross?

Heroes of the rebellion know her as the first woman nurse to bring comfort and succor to the wounded. The surgeons remember her as a complete relief corps in herself, and remember, too, that when her white-tented wagons drove upon the field the things most needed were at hand and that the wines designed for the wounded did not find their way to the officers' tents. The army of the Potomac knew her, and the heroes of Morris Island have never forgotten the only woman who remained on the island, caring for the wounded, while shot and shell fell like hail. The Andersonville prisoners remember the woman who took them by the hand, and the widows and mothers of the Andersonville dead will ever remember her at whose request the bodies of thirty thousand men who died there were buried in marked graves. The sufferers of the Ohio floods, Michigan fires, Charleston earthquake, Texas drought, and recent Mount Vernon tornado, can tell who she is, and every sovereign in Europe knows the name and works of Clara Barton, the President of the American Red Cross Association.

[To be concluded in our next.]

MATHEMATICAL PROPORTION IN SPIRITUAL SCIENCE.

The three-fold nature of man has been shown in an article in the BANNER OF LIGHT of April 21st, 1888. The application of triangles to illustrating such a subject is there suggested. Chemists, musicians, geographers and others use objective diagrams, mathematically related, to study their branches of science, and to convey thoughts systematically.

Of all triangles we find those which have equal sides all around are the most symmetrical and offer most harmonies or agreements on being placed together in a mosaic or design. It is thus suggested with peculiar fitness that the three elements in man need equality in development to give harmonious results. In many schools of to-day this is neglected, and with very serious results. The ancient Greeks knew the need for this harmony or balance of growth of the three elements of human nature, and studied by geometry the higher harmonies, which later peoples have neglected whilst striving to get Greek originality and eloquence by the grammar rather than by the mathematics of that wonderful race.

If any man or set of men are pushed to physical growth and strength while their minds or spirits, or both, are neglected, they become brutalized. When the mind is crammed, the tendency is toward insanity, for want of physical and spiritual development.

If spiritual culture is excessive, whether among church-members or Spiritualists, there is danger; for the body is not suitable to carry out the plans adopted, and the schemes are inferior for want of knowledge.

These inharmonious results are visible in society. People are deficient in one element by reason of overattention to another. Brutal, cranky and easily befogged people are seen in all directions. Society suffers, and individuals become criminals or victims, by reason of the want of proper guidance.

When States are spending millions for education, and it is looked on by many as the panacea for social ills, it is highly important that this scientific principle be understood and applied. Schools and colleges that ignore physical culture, or carry it to excess, or leave it to the pupils; those that push spiritual culture to the exclusion of other things; those institutions that have no spirituality or little in their processes, and those that crowd the mind, are abundant. We are appalled at our social disorders. Let spiritual science be studied, and let it be in due proportion. The mathematical idea of order will also aid in this science, and many other applications of the science of method can be used. FRANKLIN.

Abner Kneeland.

Friday last, August 17th, was the fiftieth anniversary of the release of Abner Kneeland from the Boston Jail, where he was imprisoned sixty days in the year 1838, for the unmeaning crime of what the statute called "blasphemy." As some of our new subscribers may not be exactly aware what that "crime" is, or rather what it was then, (as it may be somewhat modified now,) we will quote the precise words that constituted Mr. Kneeland's "blasphemy," or, what was termed, his indignity to God.

When Mr. Kneeland renounced Universalism, and soon after he became editor of The Investigator, he was publicly inquired of by the Rev. Mr. Whittemore, editor of the Universalist Trumpet, wherein he (Mr. K.) differed from the Universalists now that he had left their denomination. Mr. K. gave a number of reasons, and among others was the following, and this was what constituted his "blasphemy," and for publishing which he was tried, convicted and imprisoned:

"The Universalists believe in a God which I do not, but I believe that their God, with all his moral attributes, (aside from Nature itself,) is nothing more than a chimera of their own imagination."

These words were Mr. Kneeland's "blasphemy." He had four trials, extending through four years. On the first two trials the juries disagreed, owing to the justice and firmness of Col. Charles G. Greene and Mr. Loring Dunbar. On the third trial Mr. Kneeland was convicted, but appealed to a higher court, which sustained the previous decision; and on the 17th of June, the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, which was fought for liberty, Abner Kneeland was locked up in the Boston Jail for not believing in the Universalist religion!—Boston Investigator.

Ex-governor Levi Lincoln, of Worcester, Mass., was the bigot who prosecuted Father Kneeland, the latter being one of the most exemplary men in this commonwealth. But he was a free-thinker, and that damned him in the estimation of the stiff-necked creedists. But the times have slightly changed since then.

September Magazines.

THE MAGAZINE OF ART.—An interesting contribution to this month's issue, by Henry Herman, is a paper on "Art in the Theatre," in which he discusses the stage as a school of art and archæology, quoting as the ground of his remarks from Ruskin: "With scene-painting like that, this Princess' Theatre might do more for art-teaching than all the art galleries and professors of Christendom." Four engravings of noted actors are given in illustration, more particularly to display artistic skill in dressing: Mary Anderson as "Hermione," Forbes Robertson as "Leontes," Henry Irving as "Werner," and the court scene in "The Winter's Tale" at the Lyceum Theatre this year. The current exhibition at the Palais de l'Industrie is the subject of a descriptive sketch by Ed. Bradbury, with engravings of four paintings of the collection. Of other interesting contents are "Studies in English Costume," seven illustrations; "Mr. Ruskin's Museum at Sheffield;" "The Language of Line," by Walter Crane, its specialty being Design, illustrated with twelve drawings by the author; "Twenty Years," a poem by Walt Whitman, interwoven with illustrations, occupies a page, and a very striking treatment of a familiar subject in photogravure, beneath which is the line, "A sword shall pierce through thy own soul also," is given as a frontispiece. New York: Cassell & Co.

THE QUIVER.—"The Story of the Spanish Armada," accompanied by several illustrations, is the subject of the opening article, and possesses much historical interest. A thrilling incident of mining life is related in "Out of a Horrible Pit." New installments are given of two serial stories. Self-denial is inculcated in a story of "Edith's Green Dress," and words to young men which it would be profitable for them to heed are given in "Companionships," by Sam Twinkle. W. S. Stacey contributes a complete story entitled, "Through the Ariula." New York: Cassell & Co.

OUR LITTLE ONES.—Amusement and instruction are happily blended in the reading matter and engravings of this month's number. Of the former may be noted as specially attractive to the youngest children, "Isadore's Goat," "The Singing Mice," "The Chick and the Duck," and "The Yoked Kittens." Russell Publishing Co., 36 Bromfield street, Boston.

You will Not be Sorry

For hearing before judging.
For thinking before speaking.
For holding an angry tongue.
For stopping the ear to a tattler.
For being kind to the distressed.
For being patient to all.
For doing good to all men.
For "laying up treasures in heaven."
For asking pardon for wrongs.
For speaking evil of no man.
For being courteous to all.

Banner Correspondence.

Iowa.

CLINTON.—"A. B. S." writes, Aug. 20th: "Monday was a day of rest at Mount Pleasant Camp. Dr. Lyon gave a lecture in the afternoon, which was all the meeting that was held. In the evening séances were held by the different mediums.

Tuesday the morning lecture was by Prof. Loveland to his class, followed by a conference. In the afternoon Warren Chase gave a lecture on the remedy for some of the evils of the day, especially those that relate to the economics of Government. It was a practical and very instructive lecture.

Wednesday morning Prof. Loveland lectured; a conference followed. In the afternoon Dr. Juliet H. Severance gave a lecture on the laws of health; and at the close of her discourse afforded the audience a chance to ask questions; the people improved the opportunity, and it helped to make a most interesting meeting.

At 4 o'clock the first exhibition was given by the 'Electric Girl,' Miss Lock; and it was most wonderful to see a little sixteen-year-old girl, weighing only ninety-four pounds, pushing the strongest men all about the floor; even the combined strength of three or four men was not equal to hers. She would hold a chair with a two hundred pound man in it with perfect ease; and when the combined strength of half a dozen men was exerted to hold the chair down, she held it up, apparently without difficulty. She is also a wonderful 'mind reader,' and on the whole gives a most interesting exhibition.

In the evening the ladies' leap year dance was held, and proved a grand success in all respects; every one declared that it was the best ever held upon the grounds. It was universally attended by the campers, and some of the ladies invited gentlemen from the city of Clinton. The large hall was full of happy people. Such gatherings bring about a social harmony that is very much desired, and changes the action of intellectual thought to something of a social character.

On Thursday, after the morning lecture of Prof. Loveland, conference ensued at half-past ten A. M., in which quite a discussion arose on some points of the morning address, several taking exceptions to some of the statements made by the Professor. All seemed intensely interested in the discussion.

In the afternoon J. Clegg Wright, having arrived the day before, gave his first discourse to us. It was bold, strong and good, and I judge that he will be quite a favorite here because he is so much of a radical. This camp is prepared to receive the most radical thought that the most radical thinker can give us.

Friday Prof. Loveland gave the last lecture of his private course. It was considered the best of the whole series; but all were good, and so good that the audience voted to have the entire course of lectures published in book form—many agreeing to take several copies.

Next came the conference, in which many mediums took part.

In the afternoon memorial services were held, as has been the custom every year, for the arisen campers. Mrs. Mattie Hull gave the first discourse, followed by Moses. The singing was fine indeed, and very appropriate for the occasion. Several of the mediums were controlled by some of the campers from the other side of life in the morning conference.

Saturday, at 10 o'clock, the Association had its annual meeting for electing officers, and transacting such other business as might be deemed proper.

Prof. J. S. Loveland was re-elected President, and Mrs. Jenkins, vice-president; J. H. Randall was re-elected secretary, and Mrs. Harding re-elected treasurer. Committees were also elected on music and on speakers; besides numerous committees on other matters. The meeting adjourned to convene the following Monday at 1 P. M. to transact other business.

The afternoon lecture was by Mrs. Kates—as herself and her husband are engaged as speakers, and had arrived on the grounds the night before.

In the evening a mediums' meeting was held at the Hall, which was largely attended and with good satisfaction. In these meetings some of the principal mediums volunteer to give tests in their different phases.

Sunday was a bright and beautiful day, and large numbers from the surrounding country came to help swell the audience to an unusual size.

A Lyceum session was held in the morning at 9 o'clock, under the management of Mattie Hull, assisted by Mrs. Dobson and Dr. Boyle. All the children were out in their neat Sunday attire. A large number of adults took part in the exercises to help to make it all the more interesting. A good share of the campers attended, and all seemed delighted with the exercises—many seeing them for the first time.

At 10:30 o'clock Mr. Kates gave a very good lecture.

At 1 o'clock the last exhibition of the 'Electric Girl' was given to a very large audience.

At 3 o'clock J. Clegg Wright delivered a lecture—subject given him by Warren Chase: 'What are the remedies for the evils of our present civilization?' It was eloquent and grand, and gave universal satisfaction.

He was followed by Mrs. Kates in giving tests from the rostrum, which were unusually good. She tried an experiment, by the President giving her the name of a person, when she delineated the character and even described the looks of that person—the President acknowledging the correctness of her statements in every particular.

In the evening Mrs. Bishop gave a lecture and was well received. She is one of the old workers here in the West, and of course has many friends on the grounds.

Thus passed one of the most interesting days of the camp.

Prof. Lockwood and wife, from Wisconsin, came to camp last Saturday, with a large number of others.

The prospects for the coming week are most promising."

Massachusetts.

CHARLTON.—L. Holmes quotes from the lecture of A. H. Dailey on Bibles, recently published in THE BANNER: "Whether there is one who comprehends the whole in the sense that we comprehend the little within the grasp of our mentality, who controls these wonderful forces and commands them at his will, we do not know, and no man by any possibility can know; he can simply conjecture, and the right of conjecture can be denied to no one"; and comments upon the same as follows: "Astronomy has reached an excellency it never attained before. It has more students than ever, and more knowledge of this science is diffused among the people. From its very nature it is the most comprehensive of all the sciences. It embraces all worlds, all general forces. Let us follow the 'scientific method.' I submit, then, that astronomy teaches in its philosophy that there is but one primary force in the universe; that this is all-embracing, reaching every star and world; that 'all are parts of one stupendous whole'; every law running back to a higher, each orb dependent, all movements as correlative as those of a clock—the great science thus proving that this one, unifying, eternal force, is infinitely intelligent and beneficent, the one Almighty God and Father."

BOSTON.—"A. F. E." writes: "I am impressed that there is at present too much fraud-hunting. Free thought is only obtainable when all are allowed to judge for themselves. Exposures never really satisfy anybody. To depend on a person that exposes another is to yield to him that function of caution that we should exercise for ourselves. How can we be safe if we need to have an exposer to help us pick our way through the snares and pitfalls of life? People who are beginning to investigate Spiritualism I think had better be told to test all that they get, whether it purports to come from those in or those out of the material body. Some secular papers like the New York Herald advise Spiritualists to expose frauds, but they are not very much in sympathy with the promotion of free spiritual intercourse. If we are to be dependent on exposures to set forth the names of all frauds before we can safely study the communications purporting to come from spirits, it seems as if the flow of truth and wisdom will not be very rapid or abundant. Then how are we to know who is to be trusted to expose? No one has the authority of a pope among us to tell what books to believe or what mediums to visit. We can study real truth more readily if we leave the frauds to bury the frauds—the dead to 'bury their dead.'"

New York.

NEW YORK CITY.—H. Sinclair writes: "Some thirty years since, I induced a friend by the name of Davidson to go with me to see Mrs. Coan, who then resided on Lispenard street, in this city, but who I am informed is now Mrs. Foye, of San Francisco. He received some tidings of an absent brother whom he had not heard of for many years. He was much astonished, both by what he saw and heard. On returning home he related his experience to a Mr. Murray, who assured him that it was all a delusion and fraud.

He called on me the following day and introduced this friend, Mr. Murray, who stated that if I would take him to the medium's he would expose the whole thing. I accepted his proposal, and we three went directly to the presence of the medium. We took our seats around the table with several others; some had asked questions and received their answers. When it came Murray's turn to question the spirit he made many inquiries in regard to the birthplace, death, age, etc., and wrote his answers in a notebook with a great deal of assurance. At this time a sitter arose and handed Mrs. C. a bank-note to take out her fee; she arose and went into the back room to make the change; while she was absent a lady who was standing near Mr. Davidson, asked him if Mr. Murray's answers were correct. Mr. D. replied he did not know, but all he did know was the spirit was a blacksmith or machinist. The spirit responded by giving the imitation of the hammer on the anvil by rapping.

Mrs. Coan resumed her seat, and the lady informed her of what the spirit had done. Mrs. C. then said she would have been pleased to hear them, and asked the spirit to repeat them for her, which he did several times. At this point Murray arose much excited and said: 'Aleck, is that you who made those raps?' The spirit said 'Yes.' 'Did you intend them to imitate the hammer on the anvil?' 'Yes.' Now give me your own peculiar stroke you used to make when you and me worked together.' The spirit then rapped three very light or false blows, then one heavy blow! Murray in a high state of excitement brought his fist down upon the table with much force and said: 'He must be here! Ladies and gentlemen, I came here to convince my friends that this was a delusion, but I now frankly admit it to be God's truth. This man was born, lived and died in Glasgow, Scotland; he never was in this country, and no man, woman or child in the world could imitate his stroke without hearing it.'"

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA.—Harry T. Greenwood, Secretary, 810 Lattimer street, writes: "The Fourth Association of Spiritualists in this city is still doing good work for the advancement of the cause. As a result of its labors a marked increase in its membership and finances is to be observed. We have a building fund for the purpose of erecting a hall in this city, also a fund for procuring a charter, a sinking fund, also a relief fund for the benefit of any of our members who may become distressed; another fund is for the building of a hall on the camp meeting grounds of the First Association at Parkland. As a direct fruit of this fund, the corner stone of the new hall was laid at Parkland on July 4th. The opening address was made by Bro. Benner, the Vice President of the First Association; Dr. C. S. Bates then addressed the assemblage, and assisted by Bro. James E. Stanton, Vice President of the Fourth Association, laid the stone, declaring it 'True' by plumb, square and level—after which Sister Minnie Brown solicited donations, and a handsome sum was realized through her efforts.

While the good cause is prospering under the management of the veteran Dr. C. S. Bates at the Camp, it is not any the less prospering at the Association's Hall, corner 9th and Callowhill streets, and it may be truly said that this society has enjoyed one of the most successful seasons this summer.

Mrs. Minnie Brown (formerly of Baltimore)—well known for her zeal in the cause—after holding circles and giving platform tests at the Camp on every Sunday afternoon, never fails to fill her post at the hall in the evening, where a large audience always awaits her coming, and where anxious souls are fed upon the spiritual food given through her mediumship.

Truly may we say that since her arrival in our midst, amongst the many hundred tests given by her but a few remain unrecognized. Her tests are always clear and truthful in every respect, especially as to description of form and full names; and many a skeptic has been brought into the ranks of Spiritualism through her gift of clairvoyance.

Thanks are also due to Sister Kate Irelan, the President of the Association, for her close attention to all meetings; as also to Bro. Charles Driver, whose lectures are both pleasing and instructive."

Colorado.

DENVER.—J. D. Davis writes: "We are greatly enjoying, at this time, the services of Doctor and Mrs. Edith Nickless, of New York City. The first named is a gentleman formerly known to some of us old residents of that city as being for many years located as an apothecary on Broadway, near 4th street; but two years ago he left this occupation for that of magnetic healing under the auspices of spirit agency. He has been eminently successful in this city in the ten days here, doing very much for many who could not pay a penny, but simply give thanks for restoration to health by the divine way appointed, viz: laying on of hands, and the volition of the spirit-power.

As for the work of the wife, Mrs. Nickless, it is beyond all question in point of eloquent discourse and satisfactory tests of spirit presence. She often gives full names of communicating spirits, and as explicit revelations of identity and message matter as could be asked for.

It is no uncommon thing for from seventy five to one hundred test communications to be given by her of an evening, with scarcely a denial or a misunderstanding, but all acknowledged.

Solo and congregational singing aid greatly in making the meetings as they are, intensely interesting. They are now being held week-day evenings in the Scott Saxton College Hall of the Tabor Opera House, but Sunday evenings in Lincoln Hall, to crowded houses.

Several children in resident families have recently been developed as good mediums; also adults, whose tests are overcoming unbelief in all who see and hear.

I understand the Doctor and Mrs. N. will go from here to Salt Lake soon."

Maine.

VERONA PARK.—"H." (of Boston) writes as follows from the Camp-Meeting ground, concerning a pleasant episode recently occurring there: "Mrs. Gray, of Orland, a town some six miles distant, had the misfortune about a year ago to lose her husband by death in the waters of the Penobscot; she heard of the meeting being held at this place, and determined to visit us and gain a word from the departed spirit. Having a family of little ones dependent upon her for support, she could not afford to ride to camp, and after a friend had placed in her hands money enough to pay for her dinner, she started on foot to gain what she desired. Upon her arriving, she called upon Capt. Ryder (who, by the way, is connected in relationship with Bro. Rich of THE BANNER); after hearing her story, he refused to take any pay for her dinner, and also called in her behalf upon one of our mediums, Mrs. Hildreth, of Worcester, Mass., who consented to hold a circle at her cottage, and also donated her services. Campers were notified of the object, and as the people entered, they individually gave what they pleased. After the séance was concluded, Editor Wardwell (of the Eastern Star), who is concerned in all good movements, presented Mrs. Gray with a purse containing some twelve dollars (the results of the occasion), and with tears in her eyes she returned to her home a much happier woman than when she left. The Spiritualists of Maine, I think, have warm hearts."

North Carolina.

RUFFIN.—A. A. Spalding sends us a three column advertisement from Webster's Weekly, of Reidsville, wherein a certain strolling company of the genus "yellow handbill" put forth great promises, supported by small performance, as usual. The denizens of that part of the "Old North State" were informed that "The world's mystery," otherwise "The Steen-Rouclere Company, the only mediums materializing in the broad, open night, the great and only mind readers, producing spirit forms in the open glare of light!" were in their midst! "Fantasie" and "Palmistry" were also to be expected from these wonders of mystery. The Reidsville people exhibited their good sense, however, as our correspondent states that the attendance on the exhibition was very small: "Just as they deserved."

LOG CABINS have become a thing of the past. From them have come great generals, statesmen, lawyers and divines, equals in every way of those who were born in the purple of European courts. No better remedy for purifying the blood was ever made than Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla. Try Warner's "Tippecanoe" to-day.

In Memoriam.

Passed to the higher life from Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 17th, inst., after a brief illness, Francis M. Loring, aged 77 years.

The announcement of Mr. Loring's decease was a painful surprise to his numerous friends, and has cast a gloom over the community where he has passed a long life, honorably spent in active and useful pursuits. As we look back upon the record, we can truthfully say: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Mr. Loring was possessed of qualities which drew to him a large circle of friends. He was a man of strict integrity, kind-hearted, just in his business relations, unselfish, loyal to his convictions, and with reasonable and due consideration for the opinions and rights of others. In the business community he had the respect and confidence of all with whom he met. His love of home was strongly predominant, and as a husband and father he was most devoted and kind. His wife preceded him to spirit-life some five years since, and one daughter only survives him.

He attended the Universalist Church, but some years ago he became interested in the subject of Spiritualism, and after an extended investigation, became convinced of its truths, and with that conviction came belief in its essential principles. It was an intelligent belief thoughtfully arrived at, and it exerted a helpful and salutary influence upon his life.

It was my privilege to have known the departed intimately for many years, and I offer this feeble tribute to his memory in testimony of my personal regard and warm appreciation of his character. C.

UNANSWERABLE LOGIC:

A SERIES OF

SPIRITUAL DISCOURSES,

GIVEN THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

THOMAS GALES FORSTER.

These lectures, in a remarkably clear and comprehensive manner, give a very complete presentation of the phenomena and teachings of Modern Spiritualism, comparing them with those of the past in respect to life here and hereafter, and showing most conclusively that they are identical with the foundation facts and principles of primitive Christianity.

The arguments in support of a natural religion are strong and impregnable to all assaults that may be leveled against them, and commend themselves, by their reasonableness, to the common-sense understanding of every honest-minded person. The views presented of a future life the undeniable proofs given of the reality, naturalness and immortality of that life will be consolatory to those who mourn the seeming loss of friends, and inspire them with courage to meet the trials and duties that attend their present form of existence.

The thousands who have listened to the eloquent discourses of Thomas Gales Forster, when in the prime of earth-life, and wished that the truths he uttered, and so ably enforced under the inspiration of his exalted spirit-guides, might be put in a form available for the enlightenment of the world of mankind now and in future years, will welcome this volume with heartfelt gratitude.

The book as a whole is true to its name, and many who might be disposed to combat the author's positions will find that he has fortified them with "Unanswerable Logic."

CONTENTS.

LECTURE I.—What is Spiritualism?
LECTURE II. The Spiritual Body.
LECTURE III.—The Analogy Existing between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of Spiritualism.
LECTURE IV. Philosophy of Death.
LECTURE V. What Lies Beyond the Veil.
LECTURE VI. The Resurrection.
LECTURE VII. Future Rewards and Punishments.
LECTURE VIII. Joan of Arc.
LECTURE IX. Human Destiny.
LECTURE X.—Spiritualism of the Apostles.
LECTURE XI. Heaven.
LECTURE XII. Hell.
LECTURE XIII. The Devotional Element in Man.
LECTURE XIV. Thanksgiving Day.
LECTURE XV. Do We Ever Forget?
LECTURE XVI. Clairvoyance and Clairaudience.
LECTURE XVII. What Spiritualists Believe.
LECTURE XVIII. Spiritualism Without an Adjective.
LECTURE XIX. Christmas and Its Suggestions.
LECTURE XX. Protoplasm.
LECTURE XXI. Anniversary Address.
LECTURE XXII. Spiritualists and Mediums.
LECTURE XXIII. We have Bodies, but we are Spirits.
LECTURE XXIV. The Unity of God.

Cloth, large 12mo, beveled boards. Price $1.50, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Mrs. M. M. King's Works.

The Principles of Nature.

As discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System, Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth, History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe;

Vol. I, price $1.25; Vol. II, $1.75; Vol. III, $1.50. The three volumes in one address, $4.00, postage 12 cents per volume.

Real Life in the Spirit-Land.

Being Life-Experiences, Scenes, Incidents and Conditions, Illustrative of Spirit-Life, and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy.

Price 75 cents, postage 10 cents.

The Spiritual Philosophy vs. Diabolism.

Two Lectures. A positive and able argument against the theory of evil spirits, and their influence in producing discordant manifestations through mediums.

Price 25 cents, postage free.

What is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists have a Creed?

Two Lectures. These discourses admirably present the fundamental principles of Spiritualism, as discerned by the author, with an argument for the organization of Spiritualists to advocate and develop them.

Price 25 cents, postage free.

The Brotherhood of Man, and what follows from it.

In two lectures, which treat of Man the agent of the Deity on every plane of Life, to supervise and forward nature's work; Original Number of Races of Men, and Where Appeared; Grades of Men a Necessity by Nature's Law of Cooperation of Forces for the Maintenance of Life, etc.

Price 25 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

Men, Women and Gods.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

INTRODUCTION BY ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Helen H. Gardener was first introduced to the public by Col. Ingersoll, since when she has won a place in the hearts of all Freethinkers by her ability, and by the brilliancy of her lectures. The contents of this volume are: Men, Women and Gods; Vicarious Atonement; Historical Facts and Theological Fictions.

Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Relations of Science TO THE Phenomena of Life.

BY PROF. MICHAEL FARADAY.

Late Electrician and Chemist, of England.

Paper, price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH

The Elixir of Life.

FROM A CHELA'S DIARY.

BY G. M., F. T. S.

Paper. Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

POEMS OF THE LIFE BEYOND AND WITHIN. Edited and compiled by GILES B. STEBBINS. These Poems are gathered from ancient Hindostan, from Persia and Arabia, from Greece, Rome and Northern Europe, from Catholic and Protestant hymns, the great poets of Europe and our own land, and close with inspired voices from the spirit-land. Whatever seemed best to illustrate and express the vision of the spirit catching glimpses of the future, and the wealth of the spiritual life within, has been used. Here are the intuitive statements of immortality in words full of sweetness and glory, full, too, of a divine philosophy.

Cloth. 270 pages, 12mo. Plain, $1.50, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY: Comprising Wise Words from an Exalted Spirit Intelligence known when on Earth by the name of SWEDENBORG. Also, Practical Teachings from an Ascended Pastor.

The teachings contained in this volume are presented to the thoughtful reader in the hope that they may assist the spiritual growth and development of all aspiring souls, and awaken in many minds a consideration of the possibilities of their higher and spiritual nature.

Cloth, pp. 160. Price 75 cents; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

THE

N. D. C. AXE and TRUE KEY-STONE,

A FOUR-PAGE SEMI-MONTHLY JOURNAL, especially devoted to the Development of Mediumship, and official organ of The National Developing Circle.

Terms of subscription, $1.00 per annum.

Sample Copy Free.

Send for Book, "How to Become a Medium in Your Own Home," and a personal sealed letter designating all your phases of Mediumship, all for 15 cents.

Address

JAMES A. BLISS,

824 tf ELMWOOD PLACE, OHIO.

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription: One year, $1.50; six months, 75 cents; three months, 40 cents; single number, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty-five cents—a sum which barely covers the price of blank paper and press-work. Sample copies free. Je4

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science,

PUBLISHERS AND EDITORS—GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Mental Therapeutics, Human Liberty, and the Culture of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, $2.00 per year; single copies 25 cents.

Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI-MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der „mystischen" und „magischen" Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, A. R. Wallace, der Professoren Barrett und Coues, mehrerer Brahminen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden.

Subscription: $1.75 for six months, $3.50 per annum.

Messrs. COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Au21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL devoted to the interests of Spiritualism in all its aspects. MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of Subscription, in advance, per year, $1.20. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order on Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75, Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper, 12mo, pp. 240. Price 60 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Aug. 9.

THE CARRIER DOVE,

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform. Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, Proprietors. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of the Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also Spirit Pictures by our Artist Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms $2.50 per year; single copies, 10 cents.

Address all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 42 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal. F6

SEND NAME

AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS, plainly written, to THE BETTER WAY, CINCINNATI, O., and receive a sample copy of this largest Spiritual Weekly Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year, but no obligation to subscribe will be incurred by sending for a sample copy. It will cost you only a postal card and a minute! A10 tf

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.

MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Ass't Editor.

AN EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY, devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address, GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

THE oldest reform journal in publication.

Price, $3.00 a year,
$1.50 for six months,
6 cents per single copy.

Now is your time to subscribe for a live paper, which discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.

Address J. P. MENDUM,
Investigator Office,
Paine Memorial,
Boston, Mass.

April 2.

THE MEDIUMISTIC EXPERIENCES OF

John Brown, the Medium of the Rockies.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY PROF. J. S. LOVELAND.

This work is not a biography, but simply a part of the mediumistic life of the author. No claim is put forth of literary finish. To make the book readable and comprehensive has been the only aim of the author and editor; and as the former had no chance in early life, and has acquired through his mediumship most of what he now possesses, it furnishes another illustration of the good of Spiritualism.

Cloth, pp. 367. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE SEVEN CREATIVE PRINCIPLES.

By HIRAM E. BUTLER, as set forth in Seven Lectures before the Society for Esoteric Culture, at Boston, Mass., together with his Introductory Lecture, "The Idea of God," and also a Lecture on "Color."

Embellished with eight colored plates, showing the relation of the Seven Primitive Colors to the Seven Creative Principles in Nature. It investigates a department of thought highly important not only by the metaphysical knowledge presented, but still more by the possibilities of attainment, suggested by this knowledge and realized by methodically applying it in Self-Culture.

Cloth, with Author's portrait, $1.50; postage 8 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.

Within the Vail;

OR,

KEYS TO THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

Spiritual Teachings delivered through the mediumship of W. J. COLVILLE, at the residence of Lady Caithness, Duchesse de Pomar, Paris, July, 1885.

THEOSOPHY AND SPIRITUALISM: Their True Relations to Each Other.

FURTHER THOUGHTS ON IMMORTALITY: To What Extent is Man a Free Agent? A Spiritual View of the Resurrection.

With Answers to Questions and Impromptu Poems.

Price 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

Psychometry; or Soul Measure;

With Proofs of its Reality, and Directions for its Development.

BY MRS. L. A. COFFIN.

Paper. Price 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DIAKKAISM; or, Clairvoyant Travels in Hades. By A. GARDNER, London, Eng. This little book is altogether novel and curious, being sketches of clairvoyant experiences among the inhabitants of Hades, which "is on the earth, under the earth, in the sea, and, indeed, everywhere about the earth, including a great portion of the atmosphere. Here myriads of human beings, who had a physical existence on earth, continue to live. Some in ships, some in houses, many in the woods, and myriads in the air." These persons and their surroundings are described, and conversation with them reported.

Paper, 10 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DEEP BREATHING, as a means of Promoting the Art of Song, and of curing Weaknesses and Affections of the Throat and Lungs, especially Consumption. BY SOPHIA MARQUISE A. CICCOLINA. Translated from the German by EDGARS. WARNER.

Illustrated. Cloth. Price 50 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MESMERISM, SPIRITUALISM, WITCHCRAFT AND MIRACLE. A treatise, showing that Mesmerism is a key which will unlock many chambers of mystery. By ALLEN PUTNAM, author of "Spirit-Works," and "Natty, a Spirit."

Paper, 30 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION, Unfolding the Laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and the Spirit-World. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of H. G. WOOD, medium.

Paper, 35 cents. Cloth, 60 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FREE!-----PREMIUMS!----- FREE.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE,

Persons sending DIRECT TO COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth Street, Boston, Mass., $3.50 for a year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT, will be entitled to a choice of the following Premiums:

All New Subscribers, or Old Patrons, on Renewing their Subscriptions

TO THE

BANNER OF LIGHT,

MAY OBTAIN FOR THEMSELVES AND FRIENDS THE FOLLOWING PREMIUMS BY COMPLYING WITH THE TERMS ABOVE MENTIONED.

A choice of TWO of either of the following named

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

will be given for one year's subscription, or one of them for a six months' subscription:

MR. LUTHER COLBY, Editor of the Banner of Light; MR. ISAAC B. RICH, Business Manager, or MISS M. T. SHELHAMER, Medium for the Banner of Light Public Free Circles.

These Photographs are all from recent sittings, and are finely executed by one of the best photographers in this city. Price for additional Photographs, if desired, 35 cents each.

Or a copy of either of the following Books:

Spirit Invocations; or, Prayers and Praises

Publicly offered at the Banner of Light Circle Room Free Meetings, by more than One Hundred Different Spirits, of Various Nationalities and Religions, through the vocal organs of the late Mrs. J. H. Conant. Compiled by Allen Putnam, A. M., author of "Bible Marvel-Workers," "Natty, a Spirit," "Spirit Works Real, but not Miraculous," etc., etc.

Mr. Putnam has with skillful hand arranged in this volume, in comprehensive fashion, many living gems of thought, which are clothed in eloquence of diction, and thrill the prayerful heart with spiritual fervor. From the soulful petitions scattered through its pages the doubter of Spiritualism's capability to minister to the devotional side of man's nature can draw ample proof that he is in error. The weary of heart will find in its holy breathings for strength, sent out to a higher power, rest from the cares that so keenly beset the pilgrim in life's highway. The sick in soul may from its demonstrations of the divine possibilities within, drink of the waters of spiritual healing and rejoice; and the desolate mourner can compass, through its unfoldment of the certainty of reunion with the departed, a consolation which nothing earthly can take away.

Cloth, pp. 256.

A Romance of Caucasian Captivity; or, The Federati of Italy.

By G. L. Ditson, M. D. This is a romance of the most exciting character, and full of stirring incidents. The Federati were a band or association of individuals in Sardinia when it was still an independent kingdom, who were pledged to undying hostility to ultramontanism, and therefore were friends of a constitutional system.

It is skillfully conceived and constructed, its wide variety of characters affords constant excitement and pleasure, and its progress among a train of pleasurable incidents is almost like a poetic vision of the tripping of the rosy hours. It will provoke a favorable comparison with some of the most praised romances of the times.

Visions of the Beyond,

By a Seer of To-Day; or, Symbolic Teachings from the Higher Life.

Edited by Herman Snow. This work is of exceeding interest and value, the Seer being a person of elevated spiritual aspirations, and of great clearness of perception, but hitherto unknown to the public. The special value of this work consists in a very graphic presentation of the truths of Spiritualism on their higher forms of action, illustrating particularly the intimate nearness of the spirit-world and the vital relation between the present and future as affecting human character and destiny in the hereafter. Bound in cloth, pp. 186.

Or choice of ONE of the below-described beautiful works of art:

ENGRAVINGS.

"NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE."

Painted by Joseph John, and engraved on steel by J. R. Rice. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches; engraved surface, 16x21 inches.

"THE ORPHANS' RESCUE."

Engraved on steel by J. A. J. Wilcox, from the original painting by Joseph John. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches; engraved surface, 15x20 inches.

"HOMEWARD."

Designed and painted by Joseph John. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches.

"FARM-YARD AT SUNSET."

Copied from the well-known and justly celebrated painting designed by Joseph John. Stein, copied in black and two tints. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches.

"THE DAWNING LIGHT."

From the original painting by Joseph John. Engraved on steel by J. W. Watts. Size of sheet, 20x24 inches.

For each additional Engraving 50 cents extra.

Any person sending $3.50 for one year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to Hollyer's Line and Stipple Steel Plate Engraving of the late

Henry W. Longfellow in His Library

At "Craigie House," Old Cambridge, Mass.

The plate is 24x32 inches. The central figure is that of the GREAT POET. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical.

This beautiful historic work of art is a lasting souvenir and ornament for sitting room, parlor, library or office of any American home. We will mail the engraving free to any one sending us $3.50 for a year's subscription for the BANNER OF LIGHT, or we will send the engraving alone for $1.00. The publisher's trade price for the engraving is $2.50.

Any person sending $1.50 for six months' subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to ONE of the following Pamphlets:

AN EPITOME OF SPIRITUALISM AND SPIRIT MAGNETISM. The above is the title of a pamphlet of over one hundred pages. We know of no one book that gives to the enquirer so good an understanding of the teachings of Spiritualism as this. It is designed to convey facts to Spiritualists, also to do a missionary work with skeptics and church members. Two copies for one year's subscription, one for six months'.

SUMMARY OF SUBSTANTIALISM; OR, PHILOSOPHY OF KNOWLEDGE. By Jean Story. 12mo, paper, small pica, 113 pages.

DEATH, IN THE LIGHT OF THE HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY. By Mary F. Davis. Paper.

AGASSIZ AND SPIRITUALISM; Involving the Investigation of Harvard College Professors in 1857. By Allen Putnam.

DANGER SIGNALS; AN ADDRESS ON THE USES AND ABUSES OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By Mary F. Davis. Paper.

TALES OF THE SUN-RAYS. What Hans Christian Andersen tells a dear child about the Sun-Rays. Paper.

THE LIFE. The main object of this little volume is to give to suggestive teaching a recognition and a force (in the domain of religion and morals) greater than dictation has. Paper.

SERPENT AND SIVA WORSHIP, and Mythology in Central America, Africa and Asia; and the Origin of Serpent Worship. Two Treatises. By Hyde Clark and C. Staniland Wake, M. A. I. Edited by Alexander Wilder, M. D.

Or any two of the following pamphlets:

ANSWER TO CHARGES OF BELIEF IN MODERN REVELATIONS, ETC. Given before the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston, by Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Newton.

RELIGION OF SPIRITUALISM. By Eugene Crowell, M. D.

REVIEW of a Lecture by Jas. Freeman Clarke.

SYMBOL SERIES of Three Lectures, by Cora L. V. Tappan.

SOLAR AND SPIRITUAL LIGHT, AND OTHER LECTURES, delivered by Cora L. V. Tappan.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF EDWARD S. WHEELER, the Distinguished Improvisator and Lecturer. By Geo. A. Bacon.

INNER MYSTERY. An Inspirational Poem, delivered by Miss Lizzie Doten. Paper.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE:

Per Year.....$3.00
Six Months.....1.50

A DEFENCE OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By ALFRED R. WALLACE, F. R. S., etc. With American Preface by Epes Sargent.

This exceedingly interesting, most important and truthful essay, has attracted the attention of the whole civilized world, and the secular press everywhere speak in complimentary terms of the exhaustive arguments of its talented author.

Paper, 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the commun cations (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not read anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he desires specially to recommend for perusal.

☞ When our patrons desire the address of the BANNER changed, they should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not forget to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as the BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1888.

[Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.]

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE, Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place) corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:
THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY,
14 Franklin Street, Boston.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY,
39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.

☞ Business Letters must be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All other letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the oncoming light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

September 3d

Being a legal holiday, the BANNER OF LIGHT Establishment will be closed on that date.

☞ We shall print next week "SOME [very interesting] EXPERIENCES IN EARTH AND SPIRIT-LIFE OF THE SPEAKING CONTROL OF J. J. MORSE"—the same being embodied in a discourse recently delivered in Metropolitan Temple, San Francisco, and specially reported for our columns by G. H. Hawes.

Ingersoll on Marriage.

Even when handling old and worn truths, Col. Robert Ingersoll passes them through the medium of his individuality and transmutes them for others into fresh and living forms. He has again exemplified this in an interview with a reporter for a Boston Sunday journal on the always engrossing theme of Marriage, involving of course its rights and relations. Without repeating any part of the horrifying incident which the interviewer made the occasion of his quest, we proceed directly to the recital of the views enunciated by the distinguished orator.

"The ground has been taken," said he, "that woman would lose her dignity if marriages were dissoluble. Is it necessary to lose your freedom in order to retain your character—in order to be womanly or manly? Must a woman, in order to retain her womanhood, become a slave, a serf, with a wild beast for a master, or with society for a master, or with a phantom for a master? Has not the married woman the right of self-defense? Is it not the duty of society to protect her from her husband? If she owes no duty to her husband, if it is impossible for her to feel toward him any thrill of affection, what is there of marriage left? What part of the contract remains in force?"

If, he continued, she fears he may take her life, she is not to stay in the same house with him. Their relations are those of hunter and hunted, of tyrant and victim. Is it desirable that such relations should be rendered sacred by a church, or that families should be raised under such circumstances, or that society is in need of children born of such parents? Then, if the fault is not on the part of the woman, has society the right to insist that her life shall be wrecked? Can the virtue of others be preserved only by the destruction of her happiness, and what is the same as her perpetual imprisonment?

Col. Ingersoll said he held marriage to be the most important contract that human beings can make. Suppose the man does not keep his contract; is the woman still bound? A contract is a mutual thing, or it is nothing. There is a consideration on both sides, moving from one to the other. A contract without consideration is null and void. A marriage without love is bad enough, but what shall be said of a marriage where the parties hate each other? Is there either morality or virtue in it? Will any decent person say that a true, good, loving woman should be compelled to live with a man she detests, and be compelled to be the mother of his children? Is there a woman, asked Col. Ingersoll, who is so heartless and immoral as to force another of her own sex to bear what she would shudderingly avoid?

The right way is to bring these questions home to ourselves; to exercise sense, feeling, heart. Marriages are made by men and women, not by the State, and not by the gods. What is useful to human happiness is the foundation of virtue, the foundation of morality. Nothing is moral that does not tend to the well-being of sentient beings. Nothing is virtuous that does not result in human good. The world has hitherto been living for monsters begotten by ignorance and fear; it should now learn to live for itself. Man ought by this time to be convinced that all the reasons for doing right and doing wrong are within the horizon of this life. And we should likewise have imagination enough to put ourselves in another's place. Let any man imagine himself to be a helpless wife, beaten and tormented by a brute who believes in the indissolubility of marriage; would he not want a divorce?

Few people know anything of the daily sufferings of women and children; of the wives who tremble to hear the footsteps of returning husbands; of the children who hide when they hear the voice of their father. Few know of the blows that fall on the flesh of the helpless every day. Few know of the nights of terror passed by mothers holding young children at their breasts. The hardships of poverty, borne by those who love each other, are nothing compared with this. Men and women truly married, bear the sufferings of poverty. They console each other; their affection gives to the heart of each perpetual sunshine.

The home is the unit of the State. Never until all fathers are kind and all mothers loving shall we have civilization. That begins at the hearthstone. When the marriage contract is broken by either party, said Colonel Ingersoll, the other has the right to ask for a divorce, and should be allowed it. And it should be granted as publicly as the marriage itself is contracted. As all marriage records should be kept, so all divorces should be open, public, and known. The property should be divided by a court of equity, according to statute regulations. If there are children, they should be provided for through the property and the parents. People should understand that men and women are not virtuous by law. The law is not the fountain of love. Real love is always virtuous. People who love each other will be true to each other. The death of love is the commencement of vice. People should marry to increase their happiness, and so the general happiness; but where they have made a mistake, and the result is misery instead of happiness, the quicker they are divorced the better.

There is more good than evil in the average human being, and the natural tendency of most people is toward the good and the right. The good of society does not demand that any good person should suffer. The misfortune of our time is that so many people are married who do not love each other. Position, wealth, title, and all that, have nothing to do with real affection. Where men and women truly love each other, that love lasts as long as life.

Humanity to Animals.

Rev. Dr. Wild, of Toronto, not long ago preached a timely and impressive sermon on the Dumb Creation, in which he eloquently emphasized our duty to all kinds of animals, to treat them with unvarying kindness, as much for our own sake as for theirs. He especially praised the intent of the Humane Society of Toronto, quoting the article in its constitution which declares its object to be to promote and develop a humane public sentiment, and to secure the enactment and enforcement of suitable laws for the prevention of cruelty. God's Gospel, said Dr. Wild, is the great remedy for the destruction of all cruelty, suffering, and sin. It seeks, in every case, to reduce suffering to the lowest minimum. It is divided into specialties, one society taking hold of one distinct evil and another of another, each working on some special line for some special purpose. There is the temperance cause, the sanitary-reform cause, the prison-reform cause, and the humane cause; and in Toronto is a Veterinary College, second to none on the face of the earth, whose professors are striving to ascertain the cause of diseases in animals and the remedy, and whose students are sent out as missionaries to the horse, the cow, the dog, the cat, the bird, and to all living creatures.

The Humane Society of Toronto proposes to aid in the suppression of cruelty, especially to animals: to see first that they have proper shelter, enough food, and needed care, which three things some men, through avarice or viciousness, will neglect, and beat their horse or cow in the most brutal manner. The Society also looks to it that they are not overloaded or overtaxed in their daily labor, and additionally afflicted with the whip. Likewise to suppress the unnecessary cruelty of sportsmen. To provide, further, for the proper treatment of cattle in transportation, in which regard the humane society of the United States has proved itself eminently successful, by persuading the railway companies to make better and more wholesome accommodation. Even in the mode of slaughtering, the Toronto society, like our own, desires that it shall be done scientifically and without any excessive torture, no violence being employed save what is necessary to the slaying of the animal. Dr. Wild is inclined to endorse electricity as the least cruel and most healthy agent in taking the life of any animal.

We are all of us intimately related to the animal world, he assured his hearers, for our comfort. Dumb creatures do much of our work, minister to much of our pleasure; they furnish us with some of our best food and clothing, our shoes, our warm flannels, our milk, butter, and cheese. Then ought we to abuse, or even treat unkindly, such faithful servants? We are intimately related to them both in their health and disease. Angry beef will affect us with anger. The scratch of a playful cat will soon heal, but that of an angry one is poisonous. And so with the bite of a dog. It is a mysterious influence that works in this way, but it is always there. Kindness to his animals pays their owner in many ways. The man who abuses an animal nurses a passion that soon stunts the finer feelings of his nature. To exercise our passions in acts of cruelty brutalizes both ourselves and the creature we act upon, and strengthens the temptation with every repetition. We were made lords over the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air, the fish of the sea, and everything that creepeth on the earth; for that reason alone we should use our authority kindly and wisely, and always under proper control. Even the Mosaic laws were very humane toward the animal world.

☞ Do not fail to carefully peruse the spirit answers to questions propounded by mortals which are given at our Public Free Circles and are printed on our sixth page each week. The individual spirit messages are also of a very interesting nature, showing as they do that direct spirit communion is an unquestionable fact to those who have carefully investigated the subject.

It may not be out of place at this time to state that our Free Circle Room, 8½ Bosworth street, will be reöpened for the season on Tuesday and Friday afternoons, commencing September 11th, 1888—where everybody will be welcome. As we freely receive (in a spiritual sense) so we freely give.

Cremation Holds its Ground.

The recent death of Cortlandt Palmer, of New York, having revived public interest in cremation by reason of the process having been applied to his own remains at his special request, the subject naturally invites fresh comment from all sides, since it is one that is destined to a prolonged discussion before being settled either one way or the other. Mr. Savage, of this city, presented some time ago, in an article published in the Sunday Globe, a fair summary of the considerations which favor cremation and support it as a practice, and we now return to it because it virtually expresses in small compass about all that is to be said upon it. He gave an historical statement of the different modes of disposing of inanimate human bodies, showing that it has always been regarded by all nations a matter of great importance. The practice of embalming was followed in Egypt, for example, to preserve the body from decay, in the belief that the soul would some day come back to reinhabit it. But it is not at all clear what provision was to be made for the poor souls that died before the process of making mummies was invented. This doctrine of the soul's coming back to claim the revivified body is likewise a part of the Christian belief, though gradually losing ground.

It has likewise been regarded as necessary that the body should be placed in "consecrated ground," as having much to do with the resurrection and the soul's salvation. And it has even been deemed necessary then to label each place of burial, in order that the omniscient God might be able to find them and to recognize their occupants. The Jews held a similar belief, since they held that the first resurrection, which was to take place at the coming of the Messiah, would be confined to those buried in the sacred soil of their country. The Chinese believe the same thing to-day. They are anxious to have their bones laid in the soil of the Celestial Kingdom, as a necessary step on the road to the Celestial Kingdom on high. Socrates was among the first to break away from such a superstition, telling his friends, who asked him how he would like to be buried, that they might bury him as they pleased, if they could find him. "Bury my lifeless body where you please," he added, "but do not mourn over it as if that were Socrates."

The question of the disposition of the dead is complicated with three other questions, viz: Has religion anything important to say on the subject? What has the health of the living to say about it? and What is the voice of sentiment? The answers to these questions in their order are, that religion has nothing valid to say against cremation; the welfare of the living demands it; and the process of combustion is identical with that of decomposition, only it is more rapid. It may be mournfully pleasant to think of grasses and flowers growing on the mounds beneath which lie the forms of those we loved, but when we pause to think of what is going on below, the process of decay is repulsive in the extreme. The clean, sweet ministry of fire delivers at once from all the horror of the invading worm and the foul reek of putrefaction.

In a few years at most, all monuments crumble and all cemeteries are blotted out. Therefore there is no such thing as permanent honor to the bodies of the dead. About the urn of ashes, made pure by fire from all that can decay, may gather all the sweet sentiments, all the tenderness and devotion that really are associated with the body. And by the process of cremation the heavy expense to the poor, as well as the ostentatious and wicked waste of the rich, may be wholly avoided. The sentiment of one age or people on many or most subjects, is not the same as the sentiment of other ages and peoples. It is a changeable quality, the product of education, association and custom. Thus it can be subordinated to reason without the loss of any of its tenderness or beauty. And since health and human welfare are opposed to the practice of burial, it cannot be any part of a true and enlightened religion.

Interoceanic Strabismus.

While a journal like the Chicago Inter-Ocean admits that "there is no more universal longing than the desire to peer behind the veil which hangs between this life and the hereafter," it does not reluct at all at the fact which it feels compelled to accept, that "those who claim to have solved the mystery of the future life are looked upon with especial distrust." It allows—though without attempting to offer any reason for it—that "there is more prejudice to-day against Spiritualism than against any other ism of the day." It asserts without a visible pang that "even the religious public has more patience with disbelief in the Bible and in the immortality of the soul than with those who claim to have detailed and current information in regard to a state of being above the present, in which joy-hunger is satisfied."

The tendency of the day, generally speaking, says the Inter-Ocean, is to let the mysteries of the hereafter remain unsolved until the river of death has been crossed. It believes the wind blows steadily in that direction. And that being the case, its easy inference is that Spiritualism cannot expect to make much headway. It will not allow that public sentiment has become, or is becoming, specially materialistic or skeptical; but it insists that it is simply content to apply in spiritual things the familiar proverb about not crossing a bridge until it is reached.

Now this is decidedly a great compliment to pay to the influence of the Christian religion, of which we hear so much. If this is the whole outcome of the vast amount of effort its preachers and professors have put forth, it is a pretty slim showing for so large an expenditure. If the result of it all is simply to induce or compel people to rest in the belief that the one-world-at-a-time theory is the safest and best one, we should say, and so must all persons say, that Christianity is a dismal and complete failure; that it has not lifted the vision of the mortal spirit to the contemplation of anything beyond or above the familiar objects of sense, and that it sheds no glimmering ray of illumination upon death and the life to which it naturally introduces us.

One world at a time, says the Inter-Ocean, and in the same breath it admits "that there is no more universal longing than the desire to peer behind the veil which hangs between this life and the hereafter." The Inter-Ocean's "two-viewed" article on this subject must have been concocted in two different weeks, or perhaps by two different minds.

☞ Correspondents of the San Francisco Golden Gate say that Mr. Colville's lectures in California were a great success, and that when he left everybody felt as though they were losing a near and dear friend.

Again the Sioux; the Formation of Indian States the True Solution of the Indian Question.

We last week applauded the recent action of the Sioux nation in refusing through its legal representatives to sign the agreement proffered by the Commission, and now hold that in so doing they have but done their duty to their present dependents, and to their children who are to succeed them in the arduous task of outliving the hereditary tendencies of the past, and fitting themselves for life under the new conditions with which time in its march is sure to environ them.

We revert to this matter once more for three reasons, the first two remindatory and historical, the third having practical bearing on the future solution of the Indian problem:

First, we desire to remind the public that all the "war talk" of the telegraphic dispatches regarding the Sioux, to which we referred last week, has (like that concerning those other alleged uprisings in the San Carlos region) proved, as we then said, to be utterly without foundation in fact——although the motive for the circulation of such alarms is not far to seek. The Sioux are keeping within the strict letter of the law, and there will be no war, unless it is forced by the overt action of white adventurers upon an excited and despairing people!

Second: we wish to give certain facts in the history of the past dealings of the government with the Sioux, which are not generally known; but which have just been placed before a wide field of readers by the Boston Herald, under date of Aug. 22d, in the shape of an interview with Dr. T. A. Bland, of Washington, General Agent of the National Indian Defense Association. We consider that The Herald deserves the thanks of the friends of the red man, everywhere, for its action in putting these facts so succinctly before its numerous clientelle.

After characterizing Dr. Bland as a pleasing conversationalist, who talks very interestingly of the Indians, whose cause is dear to his heart, the narrative proceeds with the depicting of the following act of atrocious injustice, heretofore sought to be perpetrated on the Sioux, but fortunately averted by their white friends, and the subsequent and indignant report of a Senatorial Committee:

"In 1882 the President sent a Commission to the Sioux tribes for the purpose of obtaining their signatures to an agreement by which they were to cede one half of their reservation, amounting to eleven million acres, and receive therefor twenty-five thousand cows, one thousand bulls, agricultural implements, seed, school-houses, teachers, etc., etc., aggregating in amount about four million dollars.

This Commission reported to the United States Senate in December, 1882, that they had received the signatures of the requisite number of Indians—that is, three-fourths of the male adults of the Sioux nation, in accordance with the treaty of 1868."

Dr. Bland denounced this alleged agreement in The Council Fire, on the ground that the cows, bulls, agricultural implements, seed, schools, etc., promised in that agreement were all due these Indians under the treaty of 1868 and the agreement of 1876 for lands sold by these tribes to the Government.

When the Commission reported that the Sioux tribes had signed the agreement, he peremptorily denied its statement: The Senate refused to accept the report, and sent a committee to investigate the affair.

"That committee," he says, "was composed of Senators Dawes, Logan and Cameron, of Wisconsin, who visited the various tribes of the Sioux nation in the summer of 1883, reporting to the Senate at the next session that the Commission had practiced stupendous frauds upon the Indians; that some of the Indians had been induced to sign by telling them they would get a lot of cows and other things, and a strip of land in Nebraska adjoining their reservation on the south, which the Sioux had always claimed belonged to them, but that the Commission did not tell them they were surrendering any portion of their reservation, and that most of the signatures were names of women and children, which were practically forged, and which were attempted to be palmed off on Congress as bona fide signatures of Indian men."

Efforts were afterward made from time to time to revive this project in Congress—the Dawes Sioux bill being a sort of compend of them all. The Sioux nation called upon Dr. Bland to visit them and explain the action of this proposed measure. He went to their reservation in June, '84, for that purpose, but [as referred to in THE BANNER columns at the time] was arrested immediately upon his arrival by Agent McGillicudy, and forcibly put off the reservation. He (B.) then made his headquarters at Gannow's Ranche, near the reservation line.

"Here," says Dr. Bland, "the Indians visited me freely, and on the 24 of July they came together in council in Arlidge's grove, near by, Red Cloud and one hundred and thirty-eight chiefs being present. I laid before them a map of the reservation, prepared expressly for me by the Indian office at Washington, showing the lands to be surrendered and those to be retained by the Sioux nation, under this agreement, the provisions of which I explained. They examined the map carefully, and decided unanimously that the bill provided for taking their best lands from them, leaving the poorest, and for that reason they opposed it. On my showing them that the cows and other things offered them in the Dawes bill were already due them for lands previously sold to the government, and that they would really get nothing for their reservation except a new promise to pay an old debt, they also unanimously resolved not to sign the agreement should it be presented."

This bill failed to become a law. After varying vicissitudes in the forty-ninth the matter was brought up early in the session of the fiftieth Congress—the bill being slightly changed for the worse. This time, however, it came up in the name of the Indian Rights Association [a Society supposed to be friendly to the Indians], and the report states that Mr. Herbert Welsh, the Secretary, and Mr. C. C. Painter, the Agent of that Association, lobbied for it in conjunction with the regular lobbyists representing the territory of Dakota, and the St. Paul, Milwaukee and Chicago Railroad Company, which Company has a line of road projected across the Sioux reservation, and a syndicate already formed to plot towns on the line of that road.

The Indian Defense Association decided not to contest the matter with the Indian Rights Association before Congress, but contented themselves with laying before the Sioux chiefs, at their request, a full exposé of the provisions of the bill. Congress passed the bill, the President signed it, and it is now before the Sioux tribes, who are being urged to sign the agreement, by the chairman, Capt. Pratt, and his associates of the Commission; but so far, if reports are correct, without success.

Questioned as to what he would think, were a report made that the present Commission had succeeded in obtaining the signatures necessary from the Sioux, Dr. Bland responded that he should then know that it was but a repetition on a more gigantic scale of the peculiar methods of '82—cited above!

Asked if he thought war was imminent, he replied, "There will be no war unless it is forced upon the Indians in the interest of the land-grabbers."

Requested to give his estimate of the Sioux, he answered that from long and personal experience he considered them the best representatives of the genuine American Indian now on this continent, and that Red Cloud is the grandest chief now living, who stands inflexibly by his treaty of 1868, in which he agrees that he will never go on the war-path against the United States, and the government agreed in that treaty never to make war on the Sioux nation again.

Asked concerning the reported war (?) party sent from Pine Ridge to the Cheyenne agency, he replied that they had a perfect right to go anywhere in their own reservation, and a legal right to meet and advise their brethren not to sign the proposed agreement; there was nothing hostile or illegal in such action—the refusal of the Agent to grant (!) them passes for the purpose to the contrary notwithstanding: [the Indian agent being, according to the law in the case, (as Dr. B. subsequently assured us at our office) but a person stationed among the Indians, and appointed by the government to do for the Indians what that government has agreed to accomplish for them; which appointment necessarily conveys no arbitrary control over the tribes to which he is to minister; the status of those tribes being that of independent nations—not prisoners of war. The Sioux, he informed us, maintain a national police of three hundred men to preserve order, and do not recognize the agency police as a factor in their concerns.]

Asked: "What was your advice to the Sioux?" Dr. Bland replied:

"In 1884 I advised them, should the government present an agreement to them, that they should be permitted to select the land they were willing to part with—to sell one-half their lands to the government, and they unanimously agreed to take my advice. I made the further condition that they should not sign the agreement until the government had paid them what it already owed them for lands previously sold. I said to the congressional committee three years ago, that whenever an honest and fair agreement should be presented to the Indians they would sign it, surrendering one half their reservation to the government."

We feel that no one who has followed us thus far will fail to be convinced that justice is on the side of the Sioux. Will they receive it at the hands of this great nation, notwithstanding the intense pressure which will inevitably be brought to bear on the Washington authorities this "Presidential Year," by interested white men who have everything to gain if a system of despoliation of the Indians can be successfully inaugurated!

This brings us to the third of the points mentioned at the outset, viz: How is the Indian problem to be satisfactorily settled? Dr. Bland called at THE BANNER office just previous to his return to Washington, and being asked by us for his opinion—as an expert in Indian affairs—regarding what was the most feasible method of deciding, with full justice to all parties, the future of the red man in this country, he replied:

"I would preserve Indian Territory intact, putting in it the Indians of the Southwest.

The friends of the Indian would be very glad if it could be found to be practicable to reserve the west half of Dakota for the Sioux Indians and other Indians of the Northwest, who could be induced to sell their reservation to the Government and move into that country.

Then, after the Government had by industrial schools educated them up to the knowledge of our literature and our industrial arts and system of political economy, admit these territories as Indian states, leaving the Indians free to govern themselves locally, and give them representation in both houses of Congress and in the electoral college, thus preserving a remnant of the tribes, who once owned the whole continent, in a safe and honorable way.

The Indians have surrendered of the four billion acres of land they formerly owned all excepting about one hundred million, and for a very small compensation, and, in some instances, nothing at all.

The Indian Territory embraces forty-one million acres, and the west half of Dakota contains about forty million acres. It seems to us of the Indian Association that the Government and the people of this country could well afford to let the Indian race retain forever for themselves and their descendants this small portion of their former territory."

Spiritualist Convention in Spain.

As mentioned in THE BANNER some weeks since, and as briefly referred to in the interesting letter of Henry Lacroix on our second page, a Convention is to be held Sept. 8th by the friends of Spiritualism in the Iberian Peninsula, and from other points.

We are in receipt of the somewhat lengthy call issued by the Executive Commission of the Spanish Spiritualists, and present the following from the translation made for our columns by C. G. Helleberg:

This Commission—"unanimously elected at the preparatory National Congress which took place the 26th of February last, and assisted by our spiritual notabilities, all the spiritual journals, and the great majority of all our Societies"—convokes and invites in the name of the Spanish Spiritualists all associations and friends of the Spiritual Philosophy, wheresoever residing, to a consideration of the status of the cause and the best methods for its further advancement.

"In our time, fertile and wonderful," say the Commissioners, "secret science makes immense progress, and very radical and deep transformations in sentiment have taken place through the Spiritual Philosophy, which universally propagates itself.

It makes itself widely known in this way, because it expresses the natural law which germinates in intelligence, quite in accord with the results of research and reason. These manifestations have been going on, without making the least alteration, through the diverse circumstances and vicissitudes of the ages! One can see that this Philosophy truly—more than any other—contains universal, unchangeable facts.

That Spiritualism has long been unacknowledged, that its nature even has been questioned, and that trials have been made to ignore it, prove nothing in themselves, because these are the natural effects of humanity's imperfection. To-day its light is conspicuous, before which diverse models and persistent accustomed routines fade away and disappear. People who in former times elevated sumptuous temples and offered perfumes to the imaginary gods, have, confounded, broken their golden idols; and States that with fire and blood formerly imposed religious worship and strict obligation to observe intolerant customs, now establish generally in their laws the right of the people to freely express their thoughts.

Meantime Spiritualism invades the public conscience as Supreme Truth found after continued investigations in spiritual science, and that is the reason why this Philosophy inspires the most complete knowledge of man and his destiny after leaving the earth, and the only one which can free the skeptic's heart from the harsh doctrines of other creeds. It subjugates the most unruly passions, and leads humanity to moral regeneration.

Still more: It is the Eternal who with this morning light elevates himself in such a way that all absurd and false ideas about him must disappear.

That the people may sooner attain to this light—which is our most ardent desire—the Spanish Spiritualists believe it is an absolute necessity to put in practice the transcendent acts of virtue which it reveals; and to more efficaciously propagate this truth, so favorable for human progress, they propose to take advantage of the coming Universal Exposition, and in the cities of Amilcar, Ataulfo and Wilfredo—the first which saw Columbus returning from an unknown ocean with the news of a new world, which promoted the progress and civilization of the Iberique—we propose, with your coöperation, to establish a project which will offer immense advantages by putting before the public a solemn manifestation of our principles."

"GEMS FROM CHRISTIAN PREACHERS."—Ministers and laymen of the Orthodox ilk are roused every now and then to a denial that a literal sulphurous burning lake is the kind of "hell" meant by their creeds. But their denials are vain; the proofs to the contrary are too handy! We have before us, while writing, for instance, a leaflet headed as above, containing several fine specimens in evidence, from which the following are extracted:

Under a Pyramid of Cinders.—The Clarksburg (Va.) Register, in 1855, published the following as an extract from a sermon preached by Rev. Samuel Clawson, a Methodist minister, in allusion to a Universalist who was present:

"Thank God the day is not far distant when you will be chained down to hell's brazen floor, and the devil, with his three-pronged harpoon, will pierce your reeking heart, and pile the red-hot cinders of black damnation upon you as high as the pyramids of Egypt, and fry out the pride of your heart to grease the gudgeons of hell."

A Musical Devil.—In Spurgeon's sermon on the Resurrection is the following:

"In a fire exactly like that which we have on earth, thy body will lie, asbestos-like, forever unconsumed; every nerve a string on which the devil shall forever play his diabolical tune of Hell's Unutterable Lament."

Additional to the above, and of later date, is the following, reported in the New Orleans Picayune of July 18th, 1888, as having been enunciated by Rev. Dr. W. C. McCoy at the Seasbore Camp-Ground, Miss., the day previous. It purported to be a description of a lost soul receiving its punishment. Said the Reverend (?) gentle-man:

"I can see a rebellious soul standing in the presence of Jehovah, and taunting him, while before all the hosts of heaven he dares God to do his worst. I see the angels, at God's command, grapple that defiant soul, bind him hand and foot and carry him to the utmost bound of heaven, and there, with all the power of their great strength, from the top of some vast promontory, hurl him out, out into utter darkness. I see him dashing down the vast abyss, striking from projecting crag to crag, until he lands upon that seething lake of fire, and bounding from wave to wave, bound, wrestling, struggling, unable to help himself forever and forever, groaning, subject to the power of God."

THE THEOSOPHIST for August contains an interesting biography of Cagliostro, of whom the writer says that among the many remarkable men of the eighteenth century, he is one of the most fascinating; he has been made the hero of romance and the drama, "and while his foes found no epithet too shameful to apply to him, the array of mystics, the advance-guard of humanity which surrenders not though it often seems to die, hail him as a noble martyr in their cause." Part IV is given of the papers on "Himalayan Folk Lore," and "The Mind" is the special topic treated upon in the series "Nature's Finer Forces," by Rama Prasad. "The Double in Norway," translated from Der Sphinx, will attract many readers. Madras, India: The Proprietors. For sale by Colby & Rich, Boston.

"JUSTITIA" is published semi-monthly in Chicago, as the official organ of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association. It is edited by Caroline A. Huling, and has among its contributors Frances Willard, Sara A. Underwood, the Pundita Ramabai, Nettie Pease Fox, and other able writers. In its efforts to obtain justice for women it needs the sustaining power of many friends, and we trust those of our readers who desire to render aid to a worthy cause will hasten to make it manifest by enrolling themselves among its subscribers.

Letter from John Slater.

A word from this gentleman, which arrived just too late for publication last week, states that on the 25th of August Mr. Slater was to leave San Francisco by the steamship Alameda. He intends stopping at Melbourne and other places in Australia, coming home by the way of Europe, and thereby making a tour of the world. He says of his experiences in "Frisco":

"My success here in San Francisco has been great, and I am very much pleased thereat. The climate here is lovely, and the cause of Spiritualism progressing wonderfully.

There are many good mediums here in San Francisco, and they have all they can do to satisfy the eager craving of the multitudes who are seeking after the grand truths as given through Spiritualism.

I have been treated most kindly since my sojourn here by my brother and sister mediums.

I have had the pleasure of meeting Mr. and Mrs. Lillie and E. W. Emerson, who, I am pleased to state, created a very pleasing impression on the people of this coast; also Mr. J. J. Morse and family, who are doing quite well; and also a friend from Boston, Mrs. Mary F. Lovering, of whom I can only say words of praise for her earnest sincerity and good feeling for the cause. She looked very well indeed, and was fully enjoying herself.

I look for THE BANNER each week as patiently as possible, for some news of home and friends. I am sorry that I could not be at Lake Pleasant, but my heart goes out to the many kind friends I have met there."

☞ At the Cassadaga Lake Spiritualistic Camp-Meeting, according to our correspondent, "Grapho," they are having very satisfactory evidence of independent slate-writing. He says there has never been a season so marked by marvelous phenomena as the present one at Cassadaga. Slate-writing has been the most popular, and some of the most remarkable tests have been given through this phase. Our correspondent has seen slates bearing messages in German, in Latin, in shorthand, and in telegraphic characters; some of the messages having been obtained under absolute test conditions, the slates being either locked or screwed together. What has the Psychical Research Society to say to this evidence of spirit-power, which, indeed, is on the increase all over the land? The phenomena will not down at the bidding of bigots or the mutterings of theological zealots. The spirit-world's forces are bound to be heard, to the end that the superstitions of the past give place to a knowledge of the truth as inculcated by Modern Spiritualism.

☞ Several English mediums ask if there is a pecuniary opening for them in America. We are obliged to answer in the negative, for the reason that our own speakers, several of them at least, complain that they are not fully employed. One writes that his average pay for several years past has amounted in the aggregate to not much over $200 per year! We cannot comprehend why this is so, knowing the fact as we do that large additions to our ranks are being made all over the country. The laborer is worthy of his hire, we all know, and we hope and trust that the coming season will inaugurate a new era, wherein the officers controlling societies will make it a point to place these facts before their members and raise a fund in advance in order to adequately remunerate those who give their time and talents to the Cause.

☞ There are said to be no less than three thousand parochial schools in this country, says the Boston Investigator, and if they were designed to teach freedom and patriotism on the American system, they would not be objectionable. But this is not their motive and design. They are established to teach mental slavery, denying as they do the right of private judgment, and furthermore they exalt the Pope of Rome above the Government of the United States. Hence no American, native or adopted, can consistently support the parochial schools.

☞ Joseph L. Newman, at 8½ Bosworth street, Boston, (Room 4) is a capital magnetic healer. If anything ails you he will make a new man of you in almost less than no time. ——We may say the same of Mr. J. A. Shelhamer; i. e., that he is an excellent healer, and can be found at the same number (Room 5). He cures pneumonia when the regular M. D.'s fail. We know this to be a fact. Give them a call.

☞ The man who sees only the good there is in his fellow-beings, says the Golden Gate, making no note of their weaknesses or failings, may be deceived and wronged many times and in many ways; he may die in poverty, unhonored and unknown; yet we would like to be in his place when he wakes in the morning of his resurrection to life-eternal in the spirit-world.

☞ Brother Kates and wife are doing a vast deal of good work this summer in different sections of the country in behalf of the glorious Cause we all feel so deeply interested in. God bless all the workers.

☞ Beware of those who profess to make spirit photographs. They are unquestionably impostors.

☞ Read the call for the New Era, Oregon, Camp-Meeting—on our eighth page.

☞ A correspondent of The Two Worlds (Thomas Beaman) furnishes an account of a séance for materialization, of which Mr. H. Turner was the medium, held at his house at Pendleton. There were six in the circle, the medium being separated from it by a curtain, and the light was such as to enable all to see one another plainly. The first appearance was a small boy, who was recognized. During the evening ten forms appeared, among them the mother of the writer; all were clothed in fine drapery, and walking about evinced much satisfaction in being able to cause themselves to be seen and known. The spirits slowly built up their visible forms in front of the curtain, directly in view of the sitters, and as slowly dissolved them. All who were present attest to the correctness of Mr. Beaman's statement.

THE BAY STATE FAIR, which will be held at Springfield Oct. 4th to 11th, promises to be one of the finest agricultural and industrial exhibitions ever attempted in New England. The premiums aggregate over $10,000. Excursion tickets will be sold from nearly all points in New England. Entries for the different classes of animals close Sept. 5th, for most of the other classes, Oct. 3d. Further information will be furnished by the Secretary, Winslow S. Lincoln, Worcester.

☞ We are in receipt of a very neat card bearing appropriate verses printed in gold upon a black surface, "In Loving Remembrance of James Clark," whose transition to the next stage of being took place, at the age of 77 years, July 2d. It is a souvenir of the event that all the friends of the enfranchised spirit will highly prize.

☞ The Seventh Annual Convention of the Wisconsin Woman Suffrage Association will be held at Stevens Point on the 25th, 26th and 27th of September, to elect officers and discuss plan of work for the coming year.

W. J. Colville

Commences his engagement with the First Society of Spiritualists in Martine's Hall, 55 South Ada street, Chicago, Sunday, Sept. 2d. Subjects of discourse: 10:45 A. M., "The Hope of the Age;" 7:45 P. M., "New Heavens and a New Earth." A special birthday reception will be tendered him in Lodge Hall, Thursday, Sept. 6th, at 8 P. M., when Rudolf King and other eminent artists will take part.

Classes in spiritual science commence Tuesday, Sept. 4th, in Central Methodist Church, at 2:30, and at 247 Ogden Avenue, (residence of Dr. and Mrs. Congar, with whom Mr. Colville is at present residing) at 8 P. M.

Friends of Mr. Colville will be pleased to learn that he will spend the month of October in Boston. Particulars of his engagement will be announced in due course. It is already settled that he will lecture in Berkeley Hall, Sunday afternoons and Thursday evenings; and hold special gatherings on other days at the rooms of the Society Esoteric, 478 Shawmut Avenue. A few week evening engagements can be accepted in neighboring places. Address 247 Ogden Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

☞ Hitherto the Sarasavisandaresa, a Buddhist journal in Sinhalese, published in Colombo, Ceylon, has given several articles in each number in English, but finding this practice encroached too much on those in Sinhalese, they propose to publish a supplement, which virtually will be a new paper, to be printed entirely in English, entitled The Buddhist, a specimen of which is sent to this office. It is a small sheet of eight pages, to be printed weekly, its purpose being a dissemination of a knowledge of Buddhism in foreign lands, and the revival and strengthening of it in its own. The price to American subscribers will be two dollars a year. Address Sarasavisandaresa, Pettah, Colombo, Ceylon.

☞ The Spiritualistic Phenomena Association of Boston, will, we are informed, resume its meetings early in October, at Lyceum Hall, 1031 Washington street, this city. First class talent is and will be engaged for the platform. The Hall has been leased for the season, and all the meetings, Sunday and week evenings, will be as interesting as usual.

☞ The Annual Announcement of the Cincinnati American Eclectic Medical College informs us that Dr. J. M. Peebles, one of the faculty, is expected by the Board of Trustees to lecture a portion of the winter before the students in attendance. The Doctor fills the Chair of Physiology and Physical and Mental Hygiene.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN (widely acknowledged as the best arrangement and rendition of the play ever known in Boston) holds the boards at the Hollis the remainder of the week, ending Sept. 1st. Beginning with Sept. 3d, J. M. Hill's Union Square Theatre Co. will appear at this popular theatre in "A Possible Case."

☞ Mr. John H. McElroy, Pittsburgh, Pa., sends two clippings from the Dispatch of that city, which set forth that a Mr. Green, a young man thereabout, is a remarkable flower medium (of the Mrs. M. B. Thayer order), also a materializing medium—having had four forms appear at one time.

☞ "Saratoga Springs Items" will appear next week. Arrived too late for this issue. Well attended and intellectually profitable meetings occurred in Saratoga, Sunday, Aug. 26th, among the speakers being F. F. Cook, of New York (formerly of Chicago).

☞ Augustus Day writes us from Detroit, Mich., that Dr. William Bradley is making remarkable cures without medicine at No. 12 Park Place, that city. The Sale and Circulating Library, projected by Mr. Day, will soon be opened at 73 State street.

☞ Dr. J. C. Street has, we are informed, won golden opinions by his skillful management, as regular Chairman of the platform services at the Cassadaga Lake (N. Y.) Camp-Meeting.

☞ Mrs. Carrie G. Forster writes us that after a very pleasant visit at Onset Bay, she has returned to her home in Baltimore, Maryland.

☞ J. O. Barrett is a candidate (Prohibition) for election to the next Legislature in Minnesota.

Movements of Mediums & Lecturers.

[Notices under this heading must reach this office by Monday's mail to insure insertion the same week.]

J. W. Fletcher speaks in Providence, R. I., in October; in Willimantic, Conn., the first two Sundays in November; in Springfield, Mass., the last two Sundays of November and December; in Norwich, Conn., the last two Sundays of January. Mr. Fletcher lectures in New England only. Address 6 Beacon street, Boston. He will return to his office about Sept. 1st.

G. W. Kates and wife lectured and gave tests, satisfactorily, at the Clinton, Ia., Camp-Meeting, Aug. 18th to 26th. From thence they journeyed to Ord, Neb. They remain West during September and October. Address at Greenville, Darke County, O.

Dr. O. H. Wellington, of Boston, will lecture in Bogg Hall, Princeton Centre, Mass., Sunday, Sept. 2d, at 2 P. M., on "Obsession"; Parker Pillsbury, the veteran anti-slavery lecturer, will speak in this hall at 4 P. M., same day, on "One More Side of Temperance—the Under Side."

Oscar A. Edgerly, of Newburyport, Mass., has, we are informed, from the 1st of July to the present time filled engagements at Rockland, Maine, and Temple Heights Camp-Meeting; at present he is devoting a week to the Verona Park Camp; he will also be at the Etna Camp. He is engaged in Maine for the month of September and a part of October. He would like to make engagements in Massachusetts for the month of November.

Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant is now at Lake Pleasant, where her 3 o'clock and 8 o'clock meetings are well attended. Her psychometric readings are, we are informed, making her very popular among the campers and daily visitors. She would like to make engagements with societies to lecture, and improvise poems, (subjects from the audience) with psychometric readings and spiritual tests. She can be addressed in care of this office for the present.

Frank T. Ripley, platform-test medium, can be addressed for engagements in care of this office.

Miss M. T. Shelhamer lectured at Attleboro' and Onset in July, and at Attleboro', Mass., and Verona, Me., in August. She is to speak at Pigeon Cove, Attleboro', and Hanson, Mass., during September.

Dr. F. H. Roscoe and wife, of Providence, spent Sunday, Aug. 19th, at Onset Bay, and will be at Lake Pleasant Camp until Sept. 3d.

Dr. H. F. Merrill's permanent address is now 87 Sewell street, Augusta, Maine. The friends should keep this worthy platform test medium actively employed.

Hon. Warren Chase lectures in Maquoketa, Iowa Sept. 2d; in Moline, Ill., Sept. 9th and 16th; after that he may be addressed at Cobden, Ill., till further notice in THE BANNER.

Miss Viel, an English medium of good gifts, is to be found at Excelsior Cottage, Longwood Avenue, Onset.

A. W. S. Rothermel is now on his way Eastward.

☞ A man with a sensitive nature, and who possesses any manly pride, should never engage in journalism, because it is the most aggravating business on the face of God's green earth, and a position that is the hardest to fill acceptably. No matter how hard an individual tries to please and benefit a community, there are hundreds of people who seem to take special delight in finding fault with what he writes, and in decrying both the paper and its editor. Of course all this comes to the editor's ears, and the fact that he has done these same vilifiers many personal favors, makes no difference with them. It is said—but with how much truth we are unable to say—that after a man has been in the newspaper business many years he naturally becomes cynical, and learns to distrust all mankind. It is no wonder if they should become such, and old journalists will agree with us.—Burrton Graphic.

☞ George T. Albro states that séances for full form manifestations will be held as usual at 55 Rutland street, Boston, commencing Sunday afternoon, Sept. 9th.

☞ Read the call for the Annual Meeting at North Collins, N. Y.—on our seventh page.

☞ Dr. A. S. Hayward, the well-known magnetic healer, who has many friends in Saratoga, is spending a few days at H. Lyman's, on Clinton street.—The Daily Union, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

DEATH.

I am the key that parts the gates of Fame;
I am the cloak that covers cowering Shame;
I am the final goal of every race;
I am the storm-tossed spirit's resting-place.

The messenger of sure and swift relief,
Welcomed with wailings and reproachful grief;
The friend of those that have no friend but me,
I break all chains, and set all captives free.

I am the cloud that when Earth's day is done,
An instant veils the unextinguished sun;
I am the brooding hush that follows strife,
The waking from a dream that Man calls—Life.
—From the August Century.

Ament darkness as a necessary condition in spirit manifestations, J. A. Doane, in the Truth Seeker, says: "I am pleased to raise corn without witnessing the sprouting process; I would be equally as willing a spirit should have darkness to produce a negative aura necessary to draw to itself a tangible form."

It came out in the suit over the Stewart will the other day that the late Mrs. Stewart always entertained a holy horror of the contesting of wills. If her spirit hovers about the New York courts nowadays, it can hardly be in a seraphic frame of mind while the lawyers are endeavoring to prove that her own last will and testament is not fit to be probated.—N. Y. Sun.

A very good way to keep cool in warm nights, says The Sedgwick (Kan.) Pantagraph, is to take three or four pounds of ice, place the whole in a sack and hang the sack in the open window where the breeze will strike it. You will be surprised at the wonderful cooling effect it will have on your sleeping apartments.

We accompanied Judge Cross, of New York, last week to Winnepesaukee Lake, N. H., for rest and recuperation, and were cordially received by those whom we had the pleasure of meeting at this most charming retreat. We are under special obligations to Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Merrill, of Lake Village, for favors rendered.

WILD WORK OF THE ELEMENTS.—Since last we went to press, fire, water and wind have done what they might, in savage fashion, to make heavy the lot of mortals. Michigan has been devastated by fearful forest conflagrations, a heavy pall of smoke covering a scene of ruin in which many farmers have lost their all; many persons are thought to have been consumed in the flames; immense damage has been wrought by a flood at Wheeling, W. Va.; great losses caused by heavy rains in Canada, in Pennsylvania, and in the Southern States; nine lives were lost, Aug. 21st, by a cyclone at Still Pond, Md., and five at Wilmington, Del.

A red-headed reporter from the Chicago Tribune has been rusticating at Provincetown, on Cape Cod, for a brief time; but the feminines in that quarter did n't take much stock in him. Here is his revenge in cold type: "Provincetown ladies trim their hats with the red gills of the mackerel, and confine their long tresses with small sculpins, while minims are used in the place of clothes-pins."

There are said to be thirteen cottagers at Lenox, Mass., who are worth $150,000,000 in the aggregate.

CHARMING MAID.

Charming maid of beauteous face,
Full of sweetness, light and grace,
Half concealed by veil of lace—
Tell me this:
Art thou not of noble race?
Canst thou not thy lineage trace
To some old historic place?
Pensive Miss—
Tell me is not this the case,
Dearest Miss?
And the maiden answer'd, "Could
I appraise ancestral blood,
Doubtless I would find it good
As the rest.
But I 'll best be understood
And nip your question in the bud
If I say I do n't think blood
Any test.
Fact is, papa carted mud.
Way out West."
—Texas Siftings.

In the middle of the late heated term a railroad man in interior New England received a shock which threatened to entirely overturn his mental economy—being asked snap short fashion by a tourist: "Have you any data on which to base a prognostication of the duration of the present period of excessive caloric in the circumambient atmosphere?" A cold wave followed at once.

[A HINT FOR SPIRITUALISTS.]—It is remarkable that while no individual Dodson was satisfied with any other individual Dodson, each was satisfied not only with him or herself, but with the Dodsons collectively. —The Mill on the Floss.

The coast steamer City of Chester was run down and sunk about 10 A. M., Aug. 22d, by the Occidental and Oriental steamer Oceanic, thirty-three lives being lost. The accident occurred in the Bay of San Francisco, at a short distance from the Golden Gate. Fog did it.

The Boston herdic is almost as powerful an engine of destruction as New York's bob-tail car.—Boston Herald.

The Pipe of Peace, published semi monthly at Genoa, Neb., by Indian youths who are in their student years, says that the knowledge of the English language furnishes expressions of profanity which cannot be found in the Indian tongue; and asks quite pertinently: "Is it best to be too much civilized?"

We talk about the ignorance and the iniquities of the Dark Ages. What shall we say of the women of these enlightened times, who lap their ribs by means of corsets several sizes too small for them, and drag down what few internal organs are left unfettered, by skirts that weigh sixteen pounds. Add to this list high heeled shoes as many sizes too small as the corsets, and we have a costume which would break down the constitution of a woman who was naturally as strong as a horse.—Eleanor Kirk.

The consumption of brown paper does n't seem to hurt the goats; but cigarette paper is liable to bring consumption to the "kids."—Puck.

Twenty five years ago only fifteen women were employed in the whole country as editors. Now two hundred find employment in New York alone.

A sheet of yellow paper placed on the wall over the desk is said to afford rest to the eyes of writers.

Many of the native tribes of Northern British Columbia are Quakers in principle, absolutely refusing to resort to warlike measures for defense or retaliation.

THE BANNER is in receipt of some queer stories given it of late in re the management of the Lake Pleasant Hotel, which the corporation should fully investigate.

The merry moth is enjoying his annual feast of fur. That is what he camphor.—Philadelphia Press. And the merry boys are in the woods trying to drown out the ground-hog. That is what they gopher.—Chicago Tribune.

A camel can make a hundred miles per day, if he has fire crackers tied to his tail, but he 'd rather go about ten, and then loaf around the rest of the day.

Pianos always stand on four legs. Although pianos are used for balls, you cannot play billiards with them.

A certain means of stopping a dog fight or loosening a vicious dog's hold upon anything is showering something over the animal that will produce sneezing. Be his will-power ever so strong, the motion of sneezing involuntarily opens a dog's jaws. Pepper answers very well, but snuff is the best, as it can be used without limit.

"No, indeed," said Miss Prudence, "I never ride in those Robert-tail cars."

At a summer resort: Bella—Oh, dear! What are we to do to-day without a man on the grounds? Carrie—Let 's get a boat and row around the buoy.—Burlington Free Press.

The public prints aver that a man in the West recently attempted suicide by driving a chisel into his heart, but the instrument was turned from its course by a rib. He then cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor, but did not sever the jugular vein. He then commenced hacking away at his head with an axe. Fully fifty scalp wounds were inflicted before a neighbor rushed in and disarmed him. Thus far, all is plain sailing—whether he subsequently lived or died—but when we add that the telegram states he was the pastor of the Methodist Church at Newark, maybe Parson Talmage will be led to take some interest in the case; perhaps he was "a Spiritualist" in disguise, after all—ministers are never crazy: oh no!

The yellow fever is still active in Jacksonville, Fla.

The present peculiar season has proved bad in Egypt—as well as elsewhere—for the farmers, and the corn crop, upon which the fellaheen depend for subsistence, has been seriously damaged.

The term "precipitate" I invented some fourteen or fifteen years ago, to designate the production of legible and visible images of things upon or in any opaque or transparent body—such as paper, parchment, woven stuffs, wood, metal or glass—without the agency of brush, crayon, pencil, pen, acid, or other mechanical aid. There was no word in use that exactly expressed the nature of the phenomenon, and it seemed to me that the deposit, or infusion, of pigmentous matter, which had been separated from the æther, or akâsa, by will action, resembled the precipitation of inorganic matter from a salt by chemical action rather than anything else.—H. S. Olcott, in Theosophist for July.

Brazil is reported as on the eve of revolution. The emancipation of the slaves was, it is said, merely a sop thrown by Princess Isabella, the regent, to the Liberals. The six southern provinces, really the strength of the empire, are ripe for revolt and a republic. They only await the death of Dom Pedro, when they will split the empire, and a president will rule over Brazil.

The Wildwood Messenger has many wise sayings in it, said to be copied without credit from the works of Dr. J. M. Peebles. This is very naughty of our young friend in the estimation of the author, if he does such things.

C. E. Watkins, the bona fide independent slate-writer, is still Watkinsing the people of Lake Pleasant with his wonderful powers. He has a heart as big as an ox: that's what makes him minus the ducats so often. He is, however, a very queer mortal; still we like him, he has so many honorable traits of character.

A cow, said Mr. Beecher, is the saint of the barnyard. She could be fat if she only would be selfish. But she economizes beauty that she may be profuse in practical virtues.

A terrible calamity occurred at Neenah, Wis., on Wednesday night, Aug. 22d. The large paper mill there was burned, and by an explosion of a boiler the roof and walls of the building were thrown upon the crowd of people present, killing twenty-five and injuring many others.

Without mediums we have no Spiritualism, and materialization is one of the primal truths which mediumship has developed.—The Better Way.

Even so, Bro. Barney. And be sure to keep this truth in mind.

A city submerged by the sea for one thousand years has just reappeared above the waters. The town of Haigen, north of Hing-po, in China, was completely overwhelmed during the Sung dynasty, and lay buried till quite recently, when the sea gradually receded and exposed the remains of buildings. Quantities of vases, plates and domestic utensils have accordingly been recovered—of the utmost interest to Chinese historians.

Who is blind? He who is bent on doing what he should not. Who is deaf? He who does not listen to what is beneficial. Who is dumb? He who does not know how to say kind things at the proper time.—From the Hindoo.

Speaking of the late Cortlandt Palmer's directions for the cremation of his remains, a New York correspondent of The Rochester Democrat says: "Cremation eventually must become the custom in our large cities. At present three thousand acres are absorbed by cemeteries in the suburbs of this city; and Greenwood, which has the greatest run of interments, will eventually be indicted as a nuisance. The noxious effluvia is already felt in South Brooklyn, and naturally must increase."

Horsford's Acid Phosphate for the tired brain from over-exertion. Try it.

For Sale at this Office:

THE TWO WORLDS: A journal devoted to Spiritualism, Occult Science, Ethics, Religion and Reform. Published weekly at Manchester, England. Single copy, 5 cents.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. A Progressive Family Health Magazine. Published monthly in New York. Single copy, 10 cents.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN. Monthly. Published at Boston. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE SOUL. Monthly. Published in Boston. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE GARDNER DOVE. Illustrated. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BIZARRE. NOTES AND QUERIES, with Answers in all Departments of Literature. Monthly. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE OLIVE BRANCH: Utica, N. Y. A monthly. Price 10 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Published weekly at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE NEW THOUGHT. Published weekly in Des Moines, Iowa. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE WAY-FARER. Published monthly at Chicago, Ill. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH-SEEKER. Published weekly in New York. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE MIND-CURE AND SCIENCE OF LIFE. Monthly. Published at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE. Published monthly in New York. Price 10 cents.

THE THEOSOPHIST. A Monthly Journal, published in India. Single copy, 50 cents.

THE GOLDEN GATE. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BETTER WAY. A Spiritualistic weekly journal. Published in Cincinnati, O. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE EASTERN STAR. A weekly journal. Published at Bangor, Me. Single copies 3 cents.

THE PATH. A Monthly Magazine, devoted to Universal Brotherhood, Theosophy in America, and Aryan Philosophy. Single copy, 20 cents.

THE ESOTERIC. A Monthly Magazine of Advanced and Practical Esoteric Thought. Published in Boston. Single copy, 15 cents.

MENTAL HEALING. A Monthly Magazine. Published in Boston, Mass. Single copies 10 cents.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Each line in Agate type, twenty cents for the first and every insertion on the fifth or eighth page, and fifteen cents for each subsequent insertion on the seventh page.

Special Notices forty cents per line, Minion, each insertion.

Business Cards thirty cents per line, Agate, each insertion.

Notices in the editorial columns, large type, leaded matter, fifty cents per line.

Payments in all cases in advance.

☞ Advertisements to be renewed at continued rates must be left at our Office before 12 M. on Saturday, a week in advance of the date whereon they are to appear.

☞ Only small and light cuts will be allowed in the advertising columns. When accepted, our rates for that portion of the advertisement occupied by the cut will be one-half price in excess of the regular rates.

Electrotypes of pure type matter will not be accepted.

The publishers reserve the right to reject any and all electrotypes.

THE BANNER OF LIGHT cannot well undertake to vouch for the honesty of its many advertisers. Advertisements which appear fair and honorable upon their face are accepted, and whenever it is made known that dishonest or improper persons are using our advertising columns, they are at once interdicted.

We request patrons to notify us promptly in case they discover in our columns advertisements of parties whom they have proved to be dishonorable or unworthy of confidence.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Dr. F. L. H. Willis may be addressed as usual for the summer Glenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
Jy7 13w*

Andrew Jackson Davis, Seer into the causes and natural cure of disease. Send for information to his office, 63 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass. 13w* Jy7

H. A. Kersey, No. 3 Bigg Market, Newcastle-on-Tyne, will act as agent in England for the BANNER OF LIGHT and the publications of Colby & Rich during the absence of J. J. Morse.

To Foreign Subscribers the subscription price of the BANNER OF LIGHT is $3,50 per year, or $1,75 per six months. It will be sent at the price named above to any foreign country embraced in the Universal Postal Union.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO STOUT PEOPLE.

Distant Patients Successfully Treated.

Obesity is fatty degeneration. This disease is not only cured, but permanently so, by new, rational means. No dieting. No failure in a single instance. Send stamp for full particulars to DR. EDITH BERDAN, 113 Ellison street, Paterson, New Jersey.

Thin People increased in weight and flesh by regulation of the nerves of nutrition. Vegetable Remedies. Can be sent by mail. Address DR. BERDAN, (formerly Dr. Edith Hale.) Au25

CAUTION!

SPIRITUALISTS who desire to support Mediums, Camp-Meetings and Speakers, and who intend to visit

ONSET BAY

This season, are cautioned to buy their excursion tickets for "ONSET." The 9 A.M. and 4:05 P.M. trains from Boston are the most rapid express trains. Sundays, at 8:15, from Boston.

For

COMFORT, SPEED AND SAFETY.

Buy "ONSET" tickets, and thereby avoid the dust and annoyances of horses, and reach the Grove in advance of any other way. You will also help to support the meetings and

SAVE MONEY

For yourself, as you will secure advantages by showing your "ONSET" railroad ticket at the

CAMP-MEETING.
Je30 1stf

DR. J. C. STREET,
78 Montgomery street, Boston, Mass.
Jy7 13w

DR. BARKER and MRS. MULLIKEN, M. D., with their magnetic medicines and his powerful magnetic treatments, cure tumors, cancers, kidney, liver, and all female complaints. Consultation free. Parlors 28 Dartmouth street, Boston. 1w* 31

Just Received from England.

Spirit Workers
IN THE
HOME CIRCLE.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHIC NARRATIVE OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA IN FAMILY DAILY LIFE EXTENDING OVER A PERIOD OF TWENTY YEARS.

BY MORELL THEOBALD, F.C.A.

Some of the most astonishing phenomena in the history of Modern Spiritualism are recorded in this volume, the descriptions of which are given with a marked degree of fidelity to detail and effort to corroborate their truth by unimpeachable testimony. They include independent writing in various languages, on walls and ceilings, in closed apartments and on note books in locked desks; lighting of lamps and fires; filling of kettles with water, and making preparations for breakfast, even to cooking food, making tea and "laying the table"; organ playing with no one visibly present; materialization and dematerialization of forms and fabrics, bringing of flowers, ringing of bells and movements of physical objects. Fac-Similes are given of various writings, one of them in Greek, with a translation. The book covers a period of twenty years, and of each of the phenomena above specified, together with others, numerous instances are narrated.

The author says that the book has been written in the intervals of a busy professional life, which fact has proved of advantage; for, while as careful as possible not to be carried away by enthusiasm, or by imagination, in a region wherein there is much scope for their action, the disjointed method of working he was compelled to adopt operated as a protection against a surrender to mere fantasy.

Demy 8vo, cloth, pp. 306. Price $2.50; postage 15 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ZÖLLNER.
AN OPEN LETTER
TO
PROFESSOR GEORGE S. FULLERTON,
Of the University of Pennsylvania, Member and Secretary of the Seybert Commission for Investigating Modern Spiritualism.

BY C. C. MASSEY,
Of Lincoln's Inn, London, Eng.

Prof. Fullerton having made in his notes appended to the famous Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission certain statements placing Mr. C. C. Massey as a Spiritualist in a rather unenviable position, the latter herein sets the matter right, and in doing so, clearly shows that the Professor had no foundation in truth for what he said. In this connection it may be remarked that Prof. Fullerton has since, in a letter to Mr. Massey, admitted that he was mistaken. Mr. Massey's Letter should be widely circulated, as it completely disproves the charge of Prof. Zöllner's disqualifications as an investigator of phenomena at the date of his séances with Dr. Henry Slade.

Pamphlet, pp. 16. Price 5 cents; postage free. 6 copies 25 cents; 13 do. 50 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Works by Richard B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

THE BIBLE---WHENCE AND WHAT?

"And now comes a Doctor of Divinity, with his reason, logic and learning, and tells us what the Bible is and whence it came. . . . This volume casts a flood of light upon things not generally known, but which linguistic and biblical scholars admit, and the author thinks that the people have a right to know all that can be known. . . ."—The Republican, St Louis.

Cloth. Price $1.00.

MAN: WHENCE AND WHITHER?

The contents comprise chapters on the following subjects: Is Man a Mere Animal? Common Dogma of Man's Origin. The Evolution Hypothesis. Answer of Theism as to Man's Origin. Is Death the End of Man? The Foundation of Faith in a Future Life. After Death—What? Science and Theology.

Cloth, pp. 228. Price $1.00.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

This work treats on the following subjects:

Preface; Introduction; Chap. 1. The True Ideal of Marriage; 2. Free Love; 3. The History of Marriage; 4. The Old Testament Divorce Law; 5. The New Testament on Divorce; 6. Divorce as a Question of Law and Religion; 7. Rational Deductions from Established Principles; 8. Objections to Liberal Divorce Laws Answered; 9. Prevention Better than Cure. Appendix: The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, by John Milton (1643, 1644).

Cloth. Price 50 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THOUGHTS
FROM THE INNER LIFE.

The contents of this book consist of nearly one hundred communications on an equal number of subjects relating to life in the spirit-world, selected from those received during the past eight years at private circles held at the residence of Mr. D. E. Bailey, Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Swain of that city being the medium. They were given by what is termed the "independent," or direct voice of the spirits. At the sittings the medium was not unconscious; when the spirit friends began to speak, the company, including the medium, conversed with them the same as with one another. A volume might be filled with accounts of Mr. Bailey's wonderful experiences at these sittings; but he chooses to place the communications before the public with as little comment as possible, in the hope that their readers may find in them strength for the weak, consolation for the sorrowing, and unquestionable assurance of the existence of a life beyond the present for all.

One vol., octavo, pp. 224, with portrait, elegantly printed and bound. Price, cloth, $1,25, postage 10 cents; paper, 75 cents, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Light on the Hidden Way.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY
REV. JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE.

The public receive in this book an illustration and defense of the leading truths of Modern Spiritualism from a source entirely distinct from that whence such works are expected to come; yet the most enthusiastic Spiritualist would not desire a fairer or more truthful presentation of the two forms of mediumship it portrays. The phenomena upon which the Spiritualist bases his knowledge of another life are shown in the narrative the author gives of her daily experience, and the philosophy of that life and its relation to this, as understood by him, are identical with the teachings the author reports having received from her father and others of her spirit friends. It is also gratifying to know that she does not, as others who have written books of similar import have done, endeavor to ward off the adverse criticism of those who, through ignorance, know not what they do, by attributing the origin of what she has stated to the delirium of a sickly, fevered dream, but that she is, as stated in the introduction, "herself firmly persuaded of its reality." The book can therefore be warmly recommended to those who would know of Spiritualism from one who is not a Spiritualist, and we fully agree with Dr. Clarke, who, alluding to the position of the author in this regard, says: "Her report, therefore, is an independent one, and deserves attention from those engaged in investigating this occult Borderland, where beings of the other world are reported as coming into relations with the inhabitants of our own."

Cloth. Price $1.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Message Department.

☞ The Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond—whether for good or evil; that those who pass from the earthly sphere in an undeveloped state, eventually progress to higher conditions. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his or her reason. All express as much of truth as they perceive—no more.

☞ It is our earnest desire that those who recognize the messages of their spirit-friends will verify them by informing us of the fact for publication.

☞ Letters of inquiry in regard to this Department of THE BANNER must not be addressed to the mediums in any case. LEWIS B. WILSON, Chairman.

The Free-Circle Meetings

At this office will be resumed Sept. 11th.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED,

THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

Report of Public Séance held June 19th, 1888.

Spirit Invocation.

Oh! our Father in Heaven, whatever discipline thou shalt bestow upon us will be that which is best in thine own sight. We seek for knowledge and truth; we would be led over that pathway which shall enlighten our minds on thy law, and give to us something of comprehension of infinite wisdom. Oh! may we grow spiritually nearer toward thee, and become like unto thyself, as children become like their parents; and may we be able to realize thy works, and accord with them in all sympathy. Oh! our Father, we desire to walk and talk in spirit with thy angel-ones who delight to minister to humanity. We wish to grow like them, holy and pure in thought, that we may send forth to our brothers and sisters something of harmonious association and kindly sympathy that will be felt and accepted as helpfulness, that which will uplift our lives while we are pressing onward. We ask thy blessing; may it fall into every life, that all may experience thy love and protecting care.

Questions and Answers.

CONTROLLING SPIRIT.—You may now present your questions, Mr. Chairman.

QUES.—[By Rev. T. W. Woodrow, Seneca, Kan.] Is there a band of spirits attending mortals? if so, what is the purpose of it, or why are they with us?

ANS.—From all that we can learn concerning human life, we are satisfied that each human being brought into this individual existence upon earth, for the purpose of receiving a certain discipline of some needed experience, is attended and guarded by one or more special intelligences from the spiritual world. Not only are such intelligences attracted to the child upon its entrance into mortal life, because of some element within its organism which is assimilative to their own perchance, but because it seems to us those spiritual attendants have been appointed—by what high power we shall not say—to guard the life of the child as much as possible, and to keep watch over it, so that it may, at no time, be affected, when conditions are favorable, by an influence not of earth. These guardian spirits may never have been attached to the individual on earth through the laws of consanguinity, or even of association, but they may be wise and good, and as we have said, attracted to the child for benevolent purposes.

Then, again, every individual upon earth has within him (or her) self a social nature, and that social nature sends out ties and tendrils, so to speak, which find a resting place. It may be that these tendrils may be formed and utilized, in connection with individuals on earth, and perchance some of those friends may pass to the spirit-world, but being bound to the mortal by affection they are attracted to him, and desire to serve his interest and to help him over the pathway of life, therefore such may form themselves into a band, and perhaps intend to devote much of their time and thought to his welfare, to guard and guide him through his earthly experience, and to assist him in preparing his spiritual home by and-bye.

Your correspondent may say that if it be the case that a man is individually surrounded by a band of spiritual intelligences who desire to guard and guide his life, why is it that he so often falls into danger, meets with catastrophes of various kinds, or perhaps leads a life of sorrow? If those ministering spirits are about him, why do they not interfere and prevent the man from coming under conditions of painful experience? We reply that however large the band of spiritual attendants, and however loving and fervent they are in their desire to protect his life, they are not sent in contact with him to bear his burdens or to do his work. The man may require a special discipline, perhaps, one that is largely made up of sorrow and affliction; possibly his spirit requires to pass through just such a fiery furnace in order to purify and elevate it to a high and exalted position. Very well; these attendant spirits are not allowed to so far interfere with this destiny or discipline of his as to prevent its consummation, but they are sent to give him assistance, to stimulate his mental and moral powers, that they may grow and be strong, and also be able to resist and to overcome the things that belong to earth alone. Thus the man develops his own nature, the best part of his character, evolves that from his life which may and must be useful to him and to his kind, and is influenced by these magnetic attendants to overcome the obstacles in his way, and assisted to rise above them. Such is the especial labor of the attendant spirits.

Again, a human being may be placed on earth to pass through a certain experience, and to carve out a special destiny that will be of service to humanity; he may be what the world calls a genius, and under the direction and assistance of spiritual attendants those mental faculties which are his may be brought forth and blossom into light and beauty. Such a life may attract to itself high and exalted spirits from the other life, those who live in that sphere of harmony to which he most especially belongs; they take him in charge, devote their attention to the unfoldment of his life, just as a teacher devotes his attention to the unfoldment of the mental powers of the pupil. Thus is he encouraged, assisted, quickened by influences of the spiritual world to put forth that which is within himself.

It is not always the business or the province of any spirit guide to bear your burden, to relieve you of your own responsibility, to do your own work; this must be accomplished, even though through repeated failure, mistake and struggle, by the individual himself. But it is the province and the desire of wise attendant spirits to so place those whom they have under their charge as to assist the unfoldment of whatever is pure and good within the soul.

Q.—[By the same.] In the New Testament record of "possessions," the subject was often afflicted in body and mind. Why did they afflict their subjects? Was it unavoidable, accidental or intentional?

A.—It sometimes happens that pain and suffering are produced through the very forces, and by their operation, that are ultimately intended to work out grand results, and in this case it was undoubtedly unavoidable that the subjects should be afflicted in body and mind, under the superior and strong pressure laid upon them by the magnetic forces of spiritual attendants. It sometimes happens that a spirit-band, in choosing a medium through whom they desire to effect good works, is obliged to bring to the subject a powerful influence, one that will search through every portion of his being, and affect him mentally as well as physically, and under this strong magnetic pressure the subject may feel disturbed in mind and body; he may declare himself ill, and unable to cope with the forces of life, and he may also affirm that his mind is not strong, that it cannot take hold of the questions which arise before it and solve them satisfactorily. Very well; this disturbance must take place perhaps in that particular organism before good results can ensue. It frequently happens that a medical man, in treating his patient, finds it necessary to apply certain remedies which must cause a seeming disturbance throughout the entire system before they begin to take proper effect. The medicine makes the patient feel badly, distressed in mind and body, and he longs for ease, but after a time the remedies begin to take their desired effect, the system and its forces become tranquilized, the vital fluid begins to circulate freely and properly, and the patient finds himself growing at ease, becoming rested, recuperated throughout the entire system. With these unseen intelligences that approach human life, it is possible that their influence and their magnetism may be so powerful, so strangely at variance at first with the magnetic forces of their subject or patient, that they must unavoidably produce a sense of uneasiness and of friction; but under the potent power and the wise ministration of these intelligences the magnetic forces are properly applied, and by-and-bye they begin to assert themselves, the subject grows passive beneath them, and finds that they will assimilate with his nature, and that if he but receives them in the right spirit they will not only restore himself to a proper state of mind and body, not only afford his own life spiritual instruction and helpfulness, but they will also flow forth unto others, giving ease, comfort and enlightenment in the hour of need.

Q.—Are new-comers in spirit-life usually accompanied by guides in travels and researches?

A.—New-comers into the spiritual world are usually received by some friend (or party of friends) who has had them in charge during their previous existence, and who has been magnetically attracted to them through the laws of sympathy and association, and supplied them with magnetic force in the hour of trial. These attendant spirits are privileged, usually, to welcome the new-comer into their life, to take him in charge, and perhaps to direct his movements for the time being. Should such a spirit be alert and active upon entering the spirit-world, eager to learn and to understand something of his surroundings and associations, desirous of making explorations into the spiritual life, of visiting its various countries and locations, and familiarizing himself with its many associations, he may be attended by his guides if he so desires, and undoubtedly he will, because there must be a sympathy or congeniality between himself and these attendants, and it will please them to go together. These guides will, if they know anything of the localities he desires to explore, be very glad to guide him, and if they have not been attracted to such scenes, or are unable to visit them, they will have the power of summoning other spirits who are familiar with and will be delighted to lead their charge unto the scenes he desires to witness.

One spirit may have an attraction for certain places and certain people, and if so, the desire to visit those places and people, to come into vital contact with them, will be so great as to impel him forward toward them. It may be that those who have attended him in the past have had no such attractions, their work and their thought having been called in other directions; but the spirit cannot be lost, nor is the soul that desires to study and to gain knowledge ever alone; for its very desires will attract to itself kindly spirits who have a like longing, who will give him companionship, guidance and helpfulness in his search. Even should he desire to travel alone he could not be lost, since the attraction of his soul would be so strong that it would stretch forth from his life like a silver cord, leading him onward to those places and those scenes which had such power to hold him in their grasp. The soul cannot be lost, for the entire universe is God's, and wherever a spirit may stray, there is he still in the domain of God, under the watchful care and guidance of ministering spirits, and sure to be brought back again to his own resting place.

Q.—[By "Inquirer," Utica, N. Y.] How should a person proceed who wishes to become a medium for independent slate-writing?

A.—We should advise such a person to sit quietly and persistently, week after week, month after month, and year after year, if necessary, asking the guidance and the assistance of good spirits in his undertaking. It sometimes happens that a person who possesses this phase of mediumship, or, indeed, any other phase, is obliged to sit quietly and patiently for a long period of time before his faculties in that direction are unfolded and put into practical use. We would advise an individual to hold his séances in a quiet, dimly lighted, well-ventilated apartment, to have pencil and paper at hand, to sit quietly at a table, passive in mind and at ease in body, holding no speculations, brooding over no anxieties, but yielding himself up, so far as he possibly can, to the spirit-world. It is only a matter of time, when one can so experiment with himself as to draw his thoughts away from the outside world and its business cares, to sink self in the higher thought of yielding up the material to the use of the spiritual world.

Granting that the individual possesses the faculty or gift mentioned, it may be a long time before he will draw to himself those spirits who have the power to make use of his faculties, and after they have gathered they will be obliged to unite their magnetisms and to operate upon him, their medium, and his surroundings, before they can make a practical use of his gifts; therefore he should be patient, persevering, ready to sit at a required time, and to yield up all other thought but that to which he directs his mind and his desire in the development of mediumship. If, after a trial of some weeks or months, as circumstances may be, he should find himself gaining no idea of special influence, feeling not the presence of spiritual attendants, it might be well for the individual to invite to his séances one or two congenial friends, either of a positive or negative nature, as the case may be. If he is himself very positive, then he requires the assistance and presence of some sympathetic friend who is negative and passive; but if he is extremely negative, then the presence of a friend who is more positive, who possesses a strong will of his own, may prove beneficial. While these rules may apply to any and all cases where there is a desire to develop mediumship, each one should have special directions, because no two persons are alike in every particular, and each one requires some variation in the general rule in order to effect the very best results; but if the sitter is patient, persistent, seeking the advice and assistance of good spirits, and if he possesses the medial gifts desired, it will only be a question of time, if he yields himself up in passivity to the spirit-world, before his mediumship is unfolded and brought to use.

SPIRIT MESSAGES,

THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Mrs. B. F. Smith.

Report of Public Séance held May 25th, 1888.

Thomas D. Morse.

Will you, Mr. Chairman, please to announce my name as Thomas D. Morse, of Franklin, Mass.? I have many times stepped into this room, hoping to be able to give a few words that my friends might know Thomas was not dead. How it hurts us when we hear mortals speak of us as dead! I am satisfied with the home I have, yet feel that I can make it more beautiful as I progress.

Your work here is not new to me, for your paper is an old friend. How I did love to scan its pages and read the messages from the other shore.

I have met father in the spirit-life. He was very much surprised to find things as they are; the teachings of his early days had taken such a strong hold upon his mind that it was hard for him to realize the truth, but he is learning. Mary, this is a beautiful truth, a blessed reality; too beautiful to be true, many say. Oh! no; you will be happily disappointed when you come to the experience yourself.

Elizabeth F. Lindsay.

My home was in Laconia, N. H. Elizabeth F. Lindsay. I am glad at this time to make myself known, for I have tried before. I have felt so happy even to come into your meetings and hear others speak of the beautiful beyond. I prayed often that I might stay longer in the form with my dear husband, so that I might minister to his wants; but the angels called me higher. Albert and myself often talked of the dear spirits, as we felt their presence with us.

Dear children, mother lives in heaven, and you feel it to be true. Not a day passes but some gentle, loving hand is placed upon you; we will never forget you. A beautiful vision came to me before the spirit took its flight. I cannot find words to express my feelings as I beheld the bright ones beckoning me on. We have no desire to enter the mortal form again, but the thought is sweet that we shall all come together again. I know they will receive the message, because they get the paper.

Oscar Lane.

My head was hurt when I went away. On the cars somewhere between Fitchburg and Gardner I got the blow. My name is Oscar Lane. I have a dear mother in Ashburnham, Mass., and I know she has been turning the paper over and over to see if Oscar could not give a message as well as many others.

Grandma, Cora and Uncle Ellery are with me, and we are happy in our spirit-home. I know, mother, of the many trials and worriments that come to you. And you have often said: "Oh! why did they take away my boy, just coming to manhood?" The angels knew best, dear mother. I would not come back to stay, if I could as well as not. I want you to tell auntie that Cora is not the little girl she was when they laid her away, but she has grown, and we are often together, but not all the time. I want Charlie to know that I often come around him; and I think they all ought to know there must be some power back of mortals.

Grandma wants me to say that we ask the angels every day to help dear auntie, who is suffering so much physically.

Mother, you could n't turn the picture back, could you, by opening the window? You thought perhaps the wind turned it the other side out. You turned it back, and then you opened the window, and came up and blowed, to see if you could turn it; but you could not do it. We had more power spiritually than you had in the means you used. You found the picture turned two or three different times, and you sometimes thought that perhaps we did it. We did do it, and we will do it again. I think if we've done it once we can again.

Dr. Miller stands beside me. He feels pleased to think that he was able to speak, and let the people of Fitchburg know he was n't dead.

I am with you often. I know you are lonely. When you feel so, look up, and you will feel happier in knowing we are around you. This is from your own darling boy, Oscar.

Mary Mich.

My home once was in Haverhill, Mass. It troubles me a little to talk in this way. My name is Mary Mich. My mother has been looking for a letter from her Mary for a long time, and now as they give me the privilege, I am glad to just send this through your paper, that she may know her kind lives, as we call it—her child, as you would say.

I am happy, mother, in my spirit-home. Josie is here, and will send a letter, when she can, to her people in Cambridge. I tried once before, but I was not quick enough. I don't leave mother nor sister. We often come into the home. I know of the troubles that come to her. I want her to feel that we will all come together sometime, in the spirit-home. Grossmutter sends love to the mother, and all are so happy.

Ruth Hamlet.

My home was in Farmington, Me. My name is Ruth Hamlet. I know I am not forgotten by the town's-people there. The good BANNER! how I watched for the day of its coming, and sometimes could hardly wait for it, so impatient was I for a little spiritual food. Mother used to say I always was impatient when looking for something good, and it was true.

Oh! how beautiful it is to think of father, mother, sister, brother—all reunited in this spirit-life. I often felt when on earth as if I could hardly wait until they should call me up higher. I was firm in the faith. The question would be asked, "Do you never have doubts?" While one dwells in the flesh, doubts will come; still I firmly believed that spirits did come to earth, and that I did commune with them. I walked with them and talked with them, and felt them beside me. It was a blessed thought to me then—it is knowledge now.

Mary is here, and Mary Dyer also. I hardly know whether she will be able to speak. We are happy in our spirit-homes. We form acquaintances there, just as you do here, and find companionship that is sweet and dear.

I would ask you mortals to be charitable with your mediums. I know something of what they have to bear, therefore I say again, be charitable, be patient, be loving and sympathetic; you do not know how it grates upon our spirits to hear a harsh word spoken.

Sophia A. Chadbourne.

You may place me in Dorchester, Mass. Sophia A. Chadbourne. I have tried to speak before, and I feel that some have sensed me in the meeting.

Oh! do not think we are far away, dear friends. If you knew how much happiness you gave us by opening a door of communication, you would do it oftener. I find the spirit-life beautiful. I learned something of it while here, and yet but little comparatively speaking.

I have heard mortals speak of us as "dead," but I am glad to feel we are not forgotten, and I realize it as I come among you. I love to step into the halls and hear one after another speak. I love to come into this council-room.

We find there is work for us all to do in spirit-life, and what is more, we are willing to do our work. How blessed is the thought that we can help each other, and also work among you mortals, influencing and helping you spiritually, after we have thrown off the mortal form.

Maria A. Falls.

I lived in Columbus, Ohio. I know that some dear ones have asked the question over and over again in looking over your paper: "Why is it that one and another can send a message, and we never hear a word from Maria?" The truth is, dear friends, I have not been able to get control of the organism until now.

It is some six or seven years since they called me dead. But, Annie, I am not dead. Uncle Joseph is with me, and father, and I am happy in my spirit home. I feel blest at this hour; and I know that I can leave a few words which will be printed, for then some kind one will bring them to you. I understand the situation of the families; I know of the changes that have been made since I left the earth. We used to think six years was a very long time, but it speeds away quickly in the spirit-life.

Joseph Merriam.

My name, Mr. Chairman, while dwelling in the flesh, was Joseph Merriam, and I don't think it has been changed. Boston was my home. My wife Sarah has joined me since I came over, and is with me at the present time. I knew very little of spirit return, and so had much to learn after I crossed over. I had privileges, but I must acknowledge I did not improve them, and therefore I did not understand one-eighth part of what I might have known. When the death angel came for me how I wished then I had learned something of the future; but it was too late.

I am glad that I found a good home. I would not ask to return to stay, but I would ask you all to learn something here. I find creeds are of little value. You are all aiming for one country, and that is heaven, which I find, as near as I can explain it to you, is a place of happiness.

Frank Griffith.

My home was in Groveland, Mass., and my name, Frank Griffith. I feel, as I come to earth, a little troubled on account of some who dwell here, yet I realize that we do not take such feelings away with us.

Aunt Lydia, I know the many trials you have, even every day; but don't take them to heart too much; you were a good mother to me. Mother is with me to-day, and father, also little Annie; but sister Annie is not present, for she is with Willie, who needs her at the present time.

You will ask why I have not tried to send you a few words before. I have tried, for I have not been idle. I am satisfied with my home, although I passed out suddenly. Do not have any regrets, Aunt Lydia; you did all you could for me. Alice, remember, we shall meet in spirit-life, therefore you will understand why I placed the word "remember" where I did. I would like, Mr. Chairman, to have it put in italics; then she will understand.

Willie, father watches over you. Do right, and in heaven you will be happier for it. I would like Willie Burbank to know that little Annie is with us most of the time. Mother says that as soon as she can, she, too, will send a message, for I know it cheers you much to get a word from some of the dear ones who have passed on. I do not wish to return to earth to live, but I do ask for opportunities of coming into communion with you all.

Mary, I would like to sit down and talk a little with you, but I know you will feel as if it might not be just right, on account of the church. If you examine your Bible you will find that spirits always did return to earth. And they always will!

If it is wrong for us to come and converse with you, then it is wrong for you mortals to visit each other and hold conversation. I know that it is right, for I have tested it. I know also that mortals will agree with me that while dwelling in the flesh we all seek for the most happiness we can get. Then, dear friends, why not try and come into communication with those you love who have crossed the shining river? You know not how much happier you would be.

Aunt Lydia will say that I judge from my own experience in communing with my beloved mother. It did help me a great deal, and I have always been glad that I enjoyed the privilege. Every day may the angels bless you all.

John Neal.

My home was in Woodstock, Vt. I know if this letter is printed, which I am pretty sure it will be, that my children will get it—for Amanda has the paper and Willie often reads it.

Father is not far away from you, children, and your own dear mother stands beside me while I am giving this message. Ella is here, too. Willie, do come into communication with us when you can, for I know you are privileged a little differently from the others. I often go into the old home, although I find it occupied by strangers and things not kept as they used to be.

We have received a great deal of happiness in coming into communication with you several times. At two different places I could not get control and talk directly to you, so the guides had to repeat what we said. That was better than not to talk at all, but it is natural for us all to want to speak.

Now, Willie, I know you have not been feeling right physically, but what you are doing for yourself I feel is of benefit. Lucy now comes beside me. You feel a little discouraged and disheartened at times, but look up, my boy. Things will come a little better by-and-bye. Take care of the tender bud, for oh! how easy the stem would snap. We watch over the little child, asking the angels to care for and bless it every day, for it is a comfort, a little pet in the home. Many times I see when you are weary in body, as you enter the house, it seems to rest you to take the child.

Della Peaslee Crockett.

My home was in Plaistow, N. H. My name is Della Peaslee Crockett. I am very earnest to make myself known. Oh! mother, Annie and Susie, how happy I was when you came to talk with me but just once. I have been working hard to make you know I was in your homes. Now, Susie, do you not often feel Della by you? Lev is here, and Tim. I want you to tell L. that the boys are here, but are not going to do the talking. I am so glad Annie came to speak with me, for that helped the others to feel that Della was "not dead." Grandma Peaslee sends greetings too, and says she thinks you will understand where some of the little raps come from when you hear them in the home. Oh! do not think it may be the wind, or the cat, for we make the raps ourselves.

Mother, I think it is much better since father made the change in the house. That window is very pleasant. Annie—for I know you can reach me a little easier than some of the others—do come and talk with us when you can. And will you see that Charlie gets the message? I know you will. I want him to know all I have said. Tell him I have the little one with me, growing in spirit, and oh! so beautiful! In heaven we will all be together again.

I want Uncle Sam to see this message, also. I don't think you'll wear the paper out if you all read it. Be sure that every dear one knows that Della had the privilege of speaking to-day.

I have been in the halls many times, and stood close beside the instrument, and when Mr. Emerson has been there, yet not a word did he speak of me! Once the medium did mention me, but only once.

I am happy indeed that I can send a word to my dear sisters and brother, father and mother. Nellie is with me a part of the time. I am so glad that I found life, and not death, for before I passed away I knew not of the spirits coming to earth and conversing, neither did my people know, but since I was taken they have tried to learn something of spirit-communion.

Charles Woodwell.

My home was in Salem, Mass. My name is Charles Woodwell, and I have been in your meetings, thinking I could send a line to father and mother, sister and brother, but have failed in every attempt. I have friends in Salem, and in Newburyport, also, as at one time I resided there. I think I shall be remembered in both places. I was just entering manhood—about nineteen years of age—and I should say it was from three to four years ago that I passed away.

I knew something of spirits coming to earth, for my own precious mother communed with the spirits. She taught her children to feel that the invisibles were their constant companions, and it was a great help to me.

I was talking with George Bolen (a friend, not a relative,) a little while since, and he told me he had not been able to send a communication, but will do so in time.

Grandfather is here, and we all send greetings to you to-day. Often has THE BANNER been looked over, to see if Charlie was strong enough to send a message. It is not wholly for lack of strength that we are delayed; sometimes we have to wait for permission to control the medium. There is a comfort, a consolation in this belief that no other religion gives; the knowledge that we can commune with you, and not have to wait until the judgment-day. I can't tell you when that time will be. I am happy and progressing. I feel glad that these meetings are organized, where we can speak a word when unable to gain a private interview. This is the sixth time I have tried to speak.

Samuel Hidden.

My home was in Peacham, Vt., and my name is Samuel Hidden. I have often been here, and have seen my two daughters sitting in your audience; and you must know, Mr. Chairman, I was disappointed when I found I could not get power enough to speak to them.

Your mother is here with me, children, and George is here. I know this message will reach Esther, Elvira and Sarah, and that my dear daughters will see that it reaches Martin, for I want them all to know father holds the floor to-day, and is feeling pretty good over it. When Samuel Hidden had anything to say he was pretty apt to say it.

I am happy in my spirit-home, but that is n't all: we have a work to do as we come to earth. Children, sit down by yourselves passively and see what may be given out to you. I know Esther will say that I would not have said so when in the mortal. No, I would not; but I find a vast difference between dwelling in the mortal and the immortal. I see clearly now, whereas then I was "looking through a glass darkly."

My children all have strong mediumistic powers. I wish that Albert and Sarah would sit down in their quiet little home and see what we may give them, even though we have to talk by means of the table. Now there is a power back of mortals. Oh! do not say that spirits have none with you. I know you will tell me I used to say so. I have a great deal to acknowledge, because I see that I was wrong.

I know, Elvira, you were a little disappointed, for as you sat in the seat here you thought George might be able to give a communication. He tells me to say that he will do so as soon as the power and privilege are given him.

I often visit Martin. We are happy when we find a channel is to be opened for us to come to you privately, but when not successful in that way, we try to in every meeting.

Carrie Hodgkins Condell.

I have been waiting very patiently, thinking perhaps time would be given me, yet I should have found no fault if it had not been. My home was in Melrose Highlands, Mass., or Oak Grove, and my name, Carrie Hodgkins Condell. I want mother to know I can now speak a few words.

Ria, you will be glad when you know I have influenced you to just take a little run down to mother's. Mother, Annie, Etta, Lydia and Warren, I love you all—but the dearest is little Clemmie. Oh! mother, take care—take care! Will, do be careful, for you know it is a tender bud.

I would rather have staid longer in the mortal. Mother, father is with me, and we are happy. I do think the dear ones should give you a little encouragement. But oh! mother, you would be happier if you would only come into communication with your Carrie. We all shall live together again. Grandma took me by the hand and bade me come up higher, and then in a little time father came to me, and we were all so real, in perfect forms, where no sickness comes and no disappointments find us.

I want to send greetings to Ria, for we were dear friends in the mortal, and we are to-day. Dear mother, sisters, brother, and dear friends all, I send you greetings. In heaven we shall meet and know each other more perfectly than here.

Isaac Proctor Greenleaf.

I have been standing here waiting, thinking if there was one moment to spare I would grasp it. I passed out from Onset, Mass. I am Isaac Proctor Greenleaf. As I control this medium to day, I feel encouraged as I see the desire of hearts for spiritual food. In visiting the old home, I mark the preparations they are making for coming together in camp meeting. May soul-stirring words and songs resound and rise to heaven. May mortals and immortals forget the bounds of time and sense and clasp hands together.

I am happy, and I would say to the dear brother yet dwelling in the mortal: Go on; for your mortal work is not done. I might almost place my home everywhere and anywhere that spirits love to come.

I thank the guides to-day for the help they have given me, and I thank you, brother Wilson. The good work is going on. Take courage; spirits are working with mortals far more than they are given credit for. I am grateful for these few moments of your time.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

June 1.—David Bagley; Benjamin Fitzgerald; Milton Emerson; James Gore; Betsey Clark; Kate, to Henry; Nancy A. W. Priest; Charles Damon; Rebecca Damon; Anna Coan Badger; Jacob Chickering; Davis Butler; Hannah Maloy; Nancy Dunbar.

THE MESSAGES ON HAND,

Not mentioned above, will appear in due course.

Messages from Spirits Preller and Maxwell.

The reporter of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat has, through a trance medium in that city, interviewed the spirits of Preller and Maxwell. Preller is reported as saying:

"I have been with Maxwell all the time for the past three years. I have kept him strong in spirit, although I have haunted him much. He kept our secret to the last, which I said I would hold him to. I also said that if he should be executed I would be with him on the gallows. We met as friends immediately upon his spirit departing from the body. Also did we accompany Landgraf. There were the spirits of two lovely females with him. I had no malice in regard to Maxwell, because he did me a great favor in cutting off my earthly career and allowing me to reach the sphere of my destiny, in which I am now enjoying more than words can express."

A request was made of the spirit to remove from the minds of the people of earth the one mysterious feature about the latter part of Brooks's life—his taking the fictitious name of "Maxwell" on leaving England for America.

"We each had a secret. Mine was not of much public concern; his was. This secret of mine is the one I have mentioned as having been kept by Maxwell to the last. I cannot give it out, nor his."

Maxwell's spirit said: "It is done! Thank God, I have reached rest at last! The horrible thought of death is over, and in spirit light I can see with what you call on earth the light of a clear conscience. I am happy in knowing that my friend was the first to greet me. I wish the end had come sooner than it did. I am satisfied with all of my past, knowing that my attorneys did all in their power for me. Many think that I hold a dogma or grudge toward earth's community, though I do not, but I feel that my life could have been prolonged on earth by your governor if it had not been for special circumstances unnecessary to explain. I am glad, however, that he did not, now that I have seen both sides of the curtain.

"The dread of death itself was none with me; it was breaking the chain that bound me to earthly friends and loved ones. That seemed to be the dirk or bayonet that caused me the greatest pain. The last two hours of respite granted by the sheriff seemed the longest and most severe of all."

Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

CHARLOTTE STONE.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT issued June 2d, 1888, I read a spirit-message from CHARLOTTE STONE, of Lowell, Mass., in which she speaks of Ellen and Fidie. I was not personally acquainted with Mrs. Stone; Fidie was dearly loved by me, as well as by hosts of others. She passed away from her home, 125 Gorham street, Lowell, Mass., since I left Lowell, and I think it nearly ten years since. Ellen is an aunt, her mother's sister, also a particular friend of Mrs. Stone. She is now living in Lowell, 5 West Adams street. I take great pleasure in acknowledging any word from loved ones gone before, but have waited for Lowell friends in this case, therefore the delay.

Ever for the cause, A. E. C. WOOD.

Martinez, Con'ra Costa Co., Cal., Aug. 14th, 1888.

OLIVE HILL.—ANNIE BEAL.

I wish to recognize a message from MRS. OLIVE HILL (my mother) and one from ANNIE BEAL (my aunt), given through the mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith, printed in THE BANNER Aug. 18th. They were correct in every particular, and were read with great pleasure by their many friends. We should be pleased to hear from other spirit friends.

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 20th, 1888. L. J. HILL.

To the Liberal-Minded.

As the "Banner of Light Establishment" is not an incorporated institution, and as we could not therefore legally hold bequests made to us in that name, we give below the form in which such a bequest should be worded in order to stand the test of law:

"I give, devise and bequeath unto Luther Colby and Isaac B. Rich, of Boston, Massachusetts, Publishers, [here insert the description of the property to be willed] strictly upon trust, that they shall appropriate and expend the same in such way and manner as they shall deem expedient and proper for the promulgation of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and its eternal progression."

"If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?"

The world-wide reputation of Prof. Alfred R. Wallace as one in the foremost ranks of scientists imparts an added strength and value to the clear elucidation and masterly advocacy of the truths of Spiritualism given by him in his lecture having for its theme "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?" published in a pamphlet of twenty-four pages by Colby & Rich, and supplied at the very low rate of 5 cents a single copy, thirteen for 50 cents, or thirty for $1.00. Let it do its work; buy it and circulate it.

Written for the Banner of Light.

NIGHT.

BY REV. R. CASE.

Night! and the starry chambers
Are bending o'er my head;
Night! and those heavenly rangers
Seem whispering of the dead.

'T is a strange, mysterious language
From those far depths above,
Like strains of sweetest music
Poured forth from souls we love.

Tell me, ye glittering watchers
That sit at Heaven's gate,
Tell me if there be others
That with you watch and wait:

Those whose dim rooms are silent,
Whose halls re@cho not,
Whose glorious forms and faces
Though gone are not forgot!

There were brows with golden ringlets;
There were cheeks of summer bloom;
There were eyes that shone that shine not;
Alas!—the noisome tomb!

There were steps so light and graceful
Young flowers might bless their tread;
There was manhood's night and woman's light,
The bowed and hoary head.

We miss them from our sunny paths;
We miss them when we pray;
In homes, or bowers, or glittering halls,
We miss them! Where are they?

Tell me, oh! Night, whose burning orbs
Wheel through yon depths sublime,
Ye wanderers through eternity,
Ye conquerors of Time;

Tell me if in your silent depths,
Unseen by mortals here,
They live where your far circles run,
Your coursers wander near?

If in those burning deeps serene
Soul meets with soul in bliss?
Or are your worlds as dull and cold
And pulseless as in this?

If so, be quenched, ye burning orbs;
Be quenched, thou burning fire;
Come night and chaos o'er my soul,
And Nature's hope expire.

Beaufort, S. C

New Publications.

THE MOTHER: The Woman Clothed with the Sun. Part the First. 12mo, cloth, pp. 307. London: Simkin, Marshall & Co.

The purpose of this work is difficult to comprehend. Whoever has brought it into being must be an erratic visionist, far above or far below our plane of understanding. Some idea may be had of its style and typography—and sense, if there is any—from the following, which is page 274 in full:

MESSAGE: April the 30th.
TO THE QUEEN:
A great and mighty change will now pass over Thy spirit
O QUEEN:
THOU ART: That is ENOUGH:
BE:
STAND IN THY PLACE:
From the Spirits of the Eastern
Magi and of the Hebrew Nation who are watching from their heavenly palaces and Temples.
THY UNVEILING.

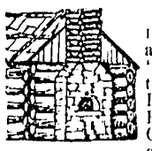
MEXICO; PICTURESQUE, POLITICAL, PROGRESSIVE. By Mary Elizabeth Blake and Margaret F. Sullivan. 16mo, cloth, pp. 228. Boston: Lee & Shepard.

The growing interest in all that pertains to modern Mexico will tend to attract many readers to this volume, in which they will find information greatly needed of the history, government, and social and political condition of that republic; its picturesque scenery, architectural peculiarities, climate, methods of travel, and its numerous characteristics utterly distinct from those of our own country and people. The authors are peculiarly fitted in their gifts of observation, analytical tact and expressive description for the work they entered upon and have brought to so successful an issue. Mrs. Blake is a well-known staff correspondent of the Boston Journal, and the author of "On the Wing," and Mrs. Sullivan an editorial writer and art critic of the Chicago Tribune. Mexico is in many respects a wonderful country, one that is described as being "picturesque beyond description, beautiful beyond belief, with traditions of a past and prospects of a future" that will in the narrative here presented interest all.

ADDRESS TO THE CLERGY, and Skepticism and Divine Revelation. By John Ellis, M. D. 16mo, paper, pp. 260. New York: The Author.

This work is written in the interest of Swedenborgianism, and the author, as might be supposed of one deeply grounded in that belief as he is, endeavors to exalt the doctrines of the New Church and to underrate the facts of Modern Spiritualism. The difference between the two, as we view it, is that between belief and knowledge—the former based on the experience and words of one man who lived in the past, and the latter on the personal experience of millions who live in the present. For this reason, when Mr. Ellis says "the revelations made through Swedenborg are immeasurably better calculated to benefit man, and elevate our race, than are the revelations and phenomena of Modern Spiritualism," we respectfully but most emphatically dissent.

RECEIVED: HOW TO SUCCEED AS A STENOGRAPHER OR TYPE WRITER. Quiet Hints and Gentle Advice by One Who "Has Been There." By Arthur M. Baker. 16mo, pp. 71. New York: Fowler & Wells Co.



WARNER'S LOG CABIN REMEDIES—"Sarsaparilla"—"Cough and Consumption Remedy"—"Hops and Buchu"—"Extract"—Hair Tonic"—"Liver Pills"—"Plasters" (Porous-Electrical)—"Rose Cream" for Catarrh. They are the simple, effective remedies of the old Log Cabin days. Everybody uses Warner's "Tippecanoe."

Annual Meeting at North Collins, N. Y.

The Friends of Human Progress will hold their Thirty-Third Annual Meeting at Forest Temple Aug. 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2d.

The platform will be occupied by the best talent obtainable. Mrs. R. S. Lillie, of Boston, Mass., is well and favorably known in this vicinity; Walter Howell, of London, Eng., is a fine inspirational speaker, and cannot fail to please; Edgar W. Emerson, of Manchester, N. H., the well-known test medium, will occupy the platform each afternoon of the last three days; J. T. Lillie, of Boston, Mass., the popular vocalist, will have charge of the music.

The Lyceum Exercises on Sunday morning will be a pleasing feature.

Programme of meetings and speakers: Thursday, Aug. 30th, 11 A.M., conference; 2 P.M., Walter Howell.

Friday, Aug. 31st, 10 A.M., conference, 11 A.M., Mrs. R. S. Lillie; 2 P.M., Walter Howell.

Saturday, Sept. 1st, 10 A.M., conference; 11 A.M., Mrs. R. S. Lillie; 2 P.M., George W. Taylor.

Sunday, Sept. 2d, 10 A.M., Lyceum Exercises; 11 A.M., Walter Howell; 2 P.M., Mrs. R. S. Lillie.

All mediums are cordially invited to be present, and will be announced from the platform.

Visitors via the Buffalo and Southwestern Railroad will receive certificates, on application to the Secretary, entitling them to one cent per mile return.

Hotel rates $1.00 per day; single meals, 25 cents. Tenting privileges free.

By order of Executive Committee.
EMMA TRAIN, Sec'y. GEORGE W. TAYLOR, Pres.

Convention in Oregon.

The Second Annual Convention of the Oregon State Spiritual Society will be held on the camp-grounds at New Era, Clackamas Co., September 7th, 1888, to continue ten days.

All members are requested to be present, as important business is to be transacted.

A general invitation is extended to all friends of the cause.

Reduced rate of fares on the O. and C. Railroad to those who attend.

By order of the Executive Board.
B. F. FULLER, Pres.
MISS WILDA BUCKMAN, Sec'y.
East Portland, Ore., Aug. 3d, 1888.

The Indiana Association

Of Spiritualists meets at 10 A.M. Sept. 13th in Westerfield's Hall, Anderson, Ind.

All will be made welcome, and an excellent treat is in store for those who attend.

We do hope all Indiana Spiritualists will be there.
GEO. W. HUNTER, Sec'y.
DR. BECK, Delphi, Ind. Indianapolis, Ind.

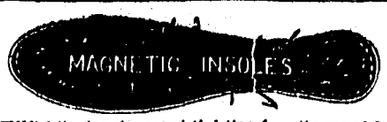
Advertisements.



THE following characteristic letter, from the pen of Lyman C. Howe, the veteran speaker and writer for the noble cause of Spiritualism, speaks for itself. Mr. Howe has worn our Shields for more than five years, and has had large experience with them among his friends. The readers of THE BANNER have implicit confidence in the integrity and good judgment of Mr. Howe. He always writes and speaks what he knows to be TRUE. Write him for further evidence about our Shields, and he will give his experience:

DR. THACHER:
Dear Sir—Your Magnetic Shields have some merit, but on the whole I am inclined to call them a fraud. They soothe and vitalize the nerves, put new life into the blood, warm cold feet, build up the debilitated and consumptive, create a row among the old sinners in the constitution, and keep stirring them until they enter upon a war of extermination, or commit suicide to escape; put neuralgia and rheumatism hors du combat, make a weak man vigorous and saucy, and cure family quarrels where they originate in bad blood or depraved nerves; but they don't mend cork legs nor glass eyes, nor cure warts on an evil temper. They should be a specific for total depravity, alcoholism, and especially for debilitated pocketbooks. Here is where they fail. If you can improve them so that you can guarantee a perfect cure for financial fits, consumptive bank accounts and religious hydrophobia, your fortune is made. Then, as your best advertising card, I would advise you to cover the Brooklyn Tabernacle and its pastor, and if you cure him you need waste no more printer's ink. Yours for health,
LYMAN C. HOWE,
Fredonia, N. Y.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD COMPANY,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.
Jy7 13w*

Dr. F. L. H. Willis

May be Addressed until further notice,

Clenora, Yates Co., N. Y.

DR. WILLIS may be addressed as above. From this point he can attend to the diagnosing of disease psychometrically. He claims that his powers in this line are unrivaled, combining, as he does, accurate scientific knowledge with keen and searching psychometric power.

Dr. Willis claims especial skill in treating all diseases of the blood and nervous system. Cancers, Scrofula in all its forms, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and all the most delicate and complicated diseases of both sexes.

Dr. Willis is permitted to refer to numerous parties who have been cured by his system of practice when all others had failed. All letters must contain a return postage stamp.
Send for Circulars, with References and Terms.
Jy7 13w*

DR. J. R. NEWTON

STILL heals the sick! Spirit, Mind and Magnetic Cures at a distance through MRS. NEWTON. Send for testimonials to MRS. J. R. NEWTON, P. O. Station G., N. Y. City. 13w* Jy7

SOUL READING,

Or Psychometrical Delineation of Character.

MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE would respectfully announce to the public that those who wish, and will visit her in person, or send their autograph or lock of hair, she will give an accurate description of their leading traits of character and peculiarities of disposition; marked changes in past and future life; physical disease, with prescription therefor; what business they are best adapted to pursue in order to be successful; the physical and mental adaptation of those intending marriage; and hints for the inharmoniously married. Full delineation, $2.00, and four 2-cent stamps. Brief delineation, $1.00, and four 2-cent stamps.

Address, MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE,
Centre street, between Church and Prairie streets,
Ap7 6m* White Water, Walworth Co., Wis.

ASTONISHING OFFER.

SEND three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power. DR. A. B. DORSON, Maquoketa, Iowa. Jy14 13w*

A Wonderful Discovery.

BY a Clairvoyant. Melted Pebble Spectacles will restore lost vision. Send a 2-ct. stamp for valuable information. Address B. F. POOLE, Optician, Clinton, Iowa. 2w* Au25

Sealed Letters Answered

BY MRS. ELIZA A. MARTIN, Oxford, Mass. Terms $1.00 and two 2-ct. stamps. 4w* Au11

SEALED LETTERS.

ELEANOR MARTIN now makes specialty of business, $5.00; full Spiritual Message, $2.00. 75 Lane Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Register all letters. 4w* Au25

MRS. R. T. CLANEY,

BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 411 Lookout street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6m* Jy21

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSSE will remove to the country for a while, where she will continue to give Life-Readings for $1.00 and stamp, and answer six questions for 25 cents and stamp. Disease a specialty. Address West Garland, Me. 8l 2w*

TO LET—Furnished Rooms, 98 Savin Hill Avenue, Dorchester. MRS. J. F. WICKSELL. Au25 2w*

The Writing Planchette.

SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. Those unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been attained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practice in writing mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes," which may be consulted on all questions, as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.

DIRECTIONS. Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board. In a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let two try it together. If nothing happens the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.

The Planchette is furnished complete with box, pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.

PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 60 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.
For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

Spiritual Workers

Photographed from Crayon Portraits
BY ALBERT MORTON.

Additions to this List of Portraits are being Drawn.

DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.
PASCHAL BEVERLY RANDOLPH.
CHARLES H. FOSTER.
CHARLES H. FOSTER and SPIRIT ADAH ISAACS MENKEN, after Spirit Photograph by W. H. Mumler.
PROF. ROBERT HARE.
PROF. WILLIAM DENTON.
DR. H. F. GARDNER.
Cabinet size. Price 50 cents each.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DR. RHODES' FAMILY MEDICINES.

Purely Vegetable
(ALL SUGAR-COATED)
Medical Confections.
A Universal Blessing.
SUITED TO OLD OR YOUNG!

A PERFECT Liver and Kidney Renovator and Blood Purifier. Cleanses the entire system from all Biliousness and Blood Poisons from Malaria, etc. And cures Headache, Backache, Side and Stomachache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pains in the Limbs, Lameness, Numbness, Constipation, Piles, Worms, Dyspepsia, Consumption, Nervousness, Weakness, Kidney and Bladder, and all other urinary ailments, etc. Also, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and in fact almost all the various ailments of humanity.

PRICES: Trial box, 25 cents—by mail, 30 cents; second size, 50 cents—by mail, 55 cents; 12 boxes second size, $5.00; large boxes, $1.00; 6 large boxes, $5.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.

I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.

I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters (from the above data). Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions, in accordance with my understanding of the science, for a fee of $1; Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.

Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. July 19.

CATARRH, Diphtheria, and all Throat Diseases, curable by the use of DR. J. E. BRIGGS'S THROAT REMEDY. Mr. Andrew Jackson Davis, writes: "Dr. Briggs's Throat Remedy for the Throat and Catarrhal Affections, including Diphtheria I know to be equal to the claims in the advertisement."
Price, 50 cents per bottle, postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DIAGNOSIS FREE.

SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M. D., Principal, Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich. 8l 1m*

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,

Developing and Business Medium,
ALSO
Clairvoyant Physician,
474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,
(Corner of Concord street.)
Sittings daily from 9 A.M. till 5 P.M. Price, $1.00.

Unequalled Advantages.

DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.

Development of Mediumship a Specialty.
SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $4.00 IN ADVANCE.

CIRCLES.

Sunday, at 11 A.M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P.M., for Psychometry, Tests and Inspirational Music. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf 8l

Something New and Pleasing.

WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1.00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m 8l

Drs. Barker and Mulliken

HAVE located at 28 Dartmouth street, Boston. We make all diseases a specialty except the eye and ear. All Tumors, old Sores and Chronic Diseases we cure. Consultation free. Office hours from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. 2w* Au25

Written Communications

On Business, Mediumship and Health,
Through the mediumship of J. W. FLETCHER, 6 Beacon street, Boston. tf Jy28

MISS HELEN A. SLOAN,

MAGNETIC Physician, Vapor and Medicated Baths. Celebrated "Acid Cure." Office hours from 9 A.M. to 8 P.M. 171 Tremont street, corner Mason st., Boston. Au11 4w*

MISS A. PEABODY,

BUSINESS, Test, Clairvoyant Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday and Thursday evenings. Tuesday afternoon at 3. 1 Bennet st., corner Washington st., Boston. 8l 1w*

MISS L. E. SMITH,

MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P.M. 14 Union Park st., Boston. 8l 1w*

Massage and Magnetism.

MRS. DR. E. M. FAXON, 22 Winter street, Room 7A, Boston. Obesity treated. Also instruction given. Jy28 1ow*

MRS. A. FORRESTER

WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. 181 Shawmut Avenue, one flight, Boston. Do not ring. 1w* 8l

MRS. ALDEN,

TRANCE MEDIUM. Medical Examinations and Magnetic treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston. Au11 5w*

MISS L. M. WHITING—Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, and stiffness of limbs from sprains or breaks, is the most successful in use. Hotel Rutland, 701 Tremont street, Suite 4. Au4 12w*

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter address for personal treatment or his powerful Spirit Magnetized Paper, suiting the utmost months, 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Two packages by mail, $1.00. Jy7 14w*

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 8 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment. Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Contagio Sulphur Baths. 8l 1w*

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, 48 Winter street. Room 5. sw* Au4

MISS L. BARNICOAT, Medical, Test and Business Medium. Lectures followed by Tests and Psychometry. 178 Tremont street, Room 10, Boston. Jy7 sw*

MRS. DR. S. E. CROSSMAN, Magnetic Physician and Trance Medium. Examinations by letter, $2.00. 42 Hammond street, Hotel Hosmer, Suite 4, Boston. 8l 1w*

MRS. DR. JULIA CRAFTS SMITH gives medical examinations free every Thursday from 9 to 6. Office, Hotel Quincy, 28 Appleton street, Boston. My29 4ow*

MISS C. W. KNOX, Test, Business and Medical Medium. Massage treatment given. 4 East Springfield street, Boston. 2w* Au25

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 88 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), Room 4, Boston, Mass. Office hours, 1 to 4 P.M. Jy7 26w*

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. sw* Au4

J. A. SHELHAMER,

MAGNETIC HEALER,

Office 8½ Bosworth Street (Room 5), Boston, Mass.,

WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases. Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription and advice, $2.00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1.00 per package. Healing by rubbing and laying on of hands. Parties wishing consultation by letter must be particular to state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Kidney, or Strengthening and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1.00.

Office hours from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M.—except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he attends out-of-town patients. Letter address care of BANNER OF LIGHT. 14w* Jy7

TWELFTH EDITION.

THE VOICES.

BY WARREN SUMNER BARLOW.

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes.

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality of Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF PRAYER enforces the idea that our prayers must accord with immutable laws, else we pray for effects, independent of cause.

Twelfth edition, with a new stippled steel-plate engraving of the author from a recent photograph. Printed in large, clear type, on beautiful tinted paper, bound in beveled boards.

Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.

☞ Persons purchasing a copy of "THE VOICES" will receive, free, a copy of Mr. Barlow's new pamphlet entitled "ORTHODOX HASH, WITH CHANGE OF DIET," if they so order.
For sale by COLBY & RICH. sow

ROSA,

The Educating Mother.

Written for Mothers and Young Ladies of Age.

BY PROF. H. M. COTTINGER, A. M.

The author in his preface says: "I wrote it for mothers and young ladies of age, because such books, purposely composed for them, are an exception to the rule, most of pedagogic works being written for teachers, scholars, or men in general. In order to make it more palatable to the fair sex, I composed it in the form of a correspondence, putting the principles of education into the mouth of a mother. My wife was the model for my letters. In every letter I asked myself if she would have spoken or written that way. If, nevertheless, I missed the true womanly style, the ladies may pardon my assumption."
Price $1.25; postage 8 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD,

COMPLETED BY THE SPIRIT PEN OF CHAS. DICKENS.

The press declare this work to be written in "Dickens's happiest vein!" The style, to the very minutiæ of chapter headings, is thoroughly Dickensian. From the Hartford (Conn.) Times: "It is almost equally remarkable, whether one regards it as a literary fraud or a real manifestation of some of the mysterious and puzzling phenomena of Spiritualism. One thing is apparent: the quoted extracts from the ghostly second volume do, undeniably, exhibit many characteristics of Dickens as a writer." There are forty-three chapters in the whole work, which embrace that portion of it written prior to the decease of the great author, making one complete volume of about 500 pages.

We have secured a small number of copies of this remarkable book, and offer them at the following prices:
Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75 cents; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE NIGHT-SIDE OF NATURE; or, Ghosts and Ghost-Seers. By CATHARINE CROWE, authoress of "Susan Hopley," "Lily Dawson," "Aristodemus." Price $1.50, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

NEW MUSIC.

BY O. P. LONGLEY.

"ONLY A THIN VEIL BETWEEN US," Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"WHEN THE DEAR ONES GATHER AT HOME," Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"HOME OF MY BEAUTIFUL DREAMS," Song and Chorus. Words by Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"CHILD OF THE GOLDEN SUNSHINE," Song and Chorus. Words by Eben E. Rexford; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

GOD, HOME AND NATIVE LAND. A National Temperance Ode. Words by Mary L. Sherman. Music by C. Payson Longley. Price 5 cents.

Beautiful Home of the Soul	25 cents.
Come in thy Beauty, Angel of Light	25 "
I am Going to my Home	25 "
In Heaven We'll Know Our Own	25 "
Love's Golden Chain	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Over There	25 "
The City Just Over the Hill	25 "
The Golden Gates are Left Ajar	25 "
Two Little Shoes and a Ringlet of Hair	25 "
We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Above	25 "
We're Coming, Sister Mary	25 "
Gathering Flowers in Heaven	25 "
Who Sings My Child to Sleep?	25 "
Oh! Come, for my Poor Heart is Breaking	25 "
Once it was Only Soft Blue Eyes	25 "

☞ The above songs are in Sheet Music. Single copies 25 cents; 5 copies for $1.00.

We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land (with portrait of Annie Lord Chamberlain) ..... 35 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Dr. Hardcastle's TOOTH-LIFE.

A Delightful Tooth-Powder.

This Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.

Of the four pages printed matter accompanying each box of "Tooth-Life," old Dr. Blankman, after reading it, made this remark: "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."

The proprietor says: "As a Spiritualist from my youth, I say in all confidence, no person can fail to find in the box of 'Tooth-Life' the four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of an experience as an American dentist and student dating from 1840, of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth preservative measures taught alone are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."

Put up in a neat box. Sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WORKS ON HEALTH.

THE MENTAL CURE. By REV. W. F. EVANS. The philosophy of Life: illustrating the influence of the Mind on the Body, both in health and disease, and the Psychological Method of Treatment. 364 pp. The work has received the encomiums of able critics, and is considered one of the best books in the English language, adapted to both sick and well, also the physician, and shows how persons can ward off and eradicate disease without medicine.
Cloth, $1.50, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MENTAL MEDICINE. A Theoretical and Practical Treatise on Medical Psychology. By REV. W. F. EVANS. One of the best, clearest and most practical treatises upon the application of psychic or mental force to the cure of the sick. Its clear-minded author has focalized what light upon this great subject he could obtain from accessible sources, and herein we illuminates the subject that persons of ordinary intelligence cannot only understand the theory, but become qualified to practice the healing art, enabling parents to be their own family physician.
Cloth, $1.25, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE DIVINE LAW OF CURE. By W. F. EVANS. This treatise is the result of the author's last six years of careful research, study and experience, and makes its appearance at a time when the necessity of the age seems to demand a work of this nature. It is adapted to persons who desire to remain in good health as well as those sick in body and mind. It will appeal with peculiar force to persons who recognize the growing demand for more knowledge in regard to mind as the power in mind-cure, disease and the spirit-forces that act as the motive.
Price $1.25; postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SOUL AND BODY; or, The Spiritual Science of Health and Disease. By W. F. EVANS, author of "Mental Cure," and "Mental Medicine." A work worthy of being spread broadcast over the land. Highly calculated to do good wherever read.
Cloth, Price $1.25.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PRIMITIVE MIND CURE. By W. F. EVANS. The Nature and Power of Faith, or, Effective Lay Lessons in Christian Philosophical Healing. Including Mental Medicine.
Cloth, 12mo, pp. 175. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE VITAL MAGNETIC CURE. By a MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN. The Philosophy of Health, Impartible Forces, Magnetic and Spiritual Influences, Human Science, Spiritual Application of the Mind, Body, Drugs, Poisons, Medicines, Medicated Baths, Electricity, Diseases of the Mind and Body, Laws governing Health and Perfection, Cures, as far as is permissible, and many other subjects of great value to the afflicted and to those who desire to avoid sickness, as these pages point out.
Cloth, $1.25; postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NATURE'S LAWS IN HUMAN LIFE. By a MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN. The Philosophy of Happiness as Expounded in Spirit and Nature, containing the various principles of happiness presented in the Spiritual Philosophy, Professor P. B. Randolph's Supposed Revelations, Normal Instructions and Lectures Spoken and Written on Love, Dr. Dimmock's Universal Knowledge of Nature's Laws, and the Science of Love, all combined to make happiness, as it proves, an attainable fact. "Free Love"—Com. 408 pp.
Cloth, $1.75; postage 10 cents.

ESSENTIALS OF MENTAL HEALING. The Theory and Practice. By E. M. MARSTON, M. D. A new work on the science of Christian Science or Mind Cure. This is one of the most able treatises on this subject that has yet appeared. It is for every thinker, and for general reading, just as a novel-book.
pp. 175. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

AN APOSTLE OF SPIRITUALISM.

A Biographical Monograph
OF
J. J. MORSE,
Trance Medium.

With an Abstract Report of a Lecture entitled "HOMES IN THE HEREAFTER."

Paper. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WITCHCRAFT OF NEW ENGLAND EXPLAINED BY MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By ALLEN PUTNAM, Esq., author of "Bible Marvel Workers," "Natty, a Spirit," "Mesmerism, Spiritualism, Witchcraft and Miracle," "Agassiz and Spiritualism," etc. CONTENTS: PREFACE. References. Explanatory Note. Definitions. MATHER AND CALEF. COTTON MATHER. ROBERT CALEF. THOMAS HUTCHINSON, C. W. UPHAM. MARGARET JONES. Winthrop's Account of her, etc. ANN HIBBINS. Hutchinson's Account of Ann, etc. ANN COLE. Hutchinson's Account, etc. ELIZABETH KNAPP. A Case of Spiritualism, etc. MORSE FAMILY. Physical Manifestations, etc. GOODWIN FAMILY. Hutchinson's Account, etc. SALEM WITCHCRAFT. Occurred at Danvers, etc. TITUBA. Examination of her, etc. SARAH GOOD. Her Examination, etc. DORCAS GOOD. Bites with Spirit-Teeth, etc. SARAH OSBORN. Was seen spectrally, etc. MARTHA COREY. Her Character, etc. GILES COREY. His Heroism, etc. REBECCA NURSE. Was seen as an Apparition, etc. MARY EASTY. Her Examination, etc. SUSANNA MARTIN. Her Examination, etc. MARTHA CARRIER. Examination, etc. GEORGE BURROUGHS. His Susceptibilities and Character, etc. SUMMARY. Number executed. Spirits proved to have been Enacting Witchcraft. THE CONFESSORS. THE ACCUSING GIRLS. Ann Putnam's Confession. THE PROSECUTORS. WITCHCRAFT'S AUTHOR. THE MOTIVE. LOCAL AND PERSONAL. METHODS OF PROVIDENCE. APPENDIX. CHRISTENDOM'S WITCHCRAFT DEVIL. LIMITATIONS OF HIS POWERS. COVENANT WITH HIM. HIS DEFENCE. DEMONOLOGY AND NECROMANCY. BIBLICAL WITCH AND WITCHCRAFT. CHRISTENDOM'S WITCH AND WITCHCRAFT. SPIRIT, SOUL AND MENTAL POWERS. TWO SETS OF MENTAL POWERS—AGASSIZ. MARVEL AND SPIRITUALISM. INDIAN WORSHIP.
Cloth, 12mo, pp. 482. Price $1.50, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT. Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and Other Pieces now Extant, attributed, in the First Four Centuries, to Jesus Christ, his Apostles and their Companions, and Not Included in the New Testament, by its Compilers. Translated, and now First Collected into One Volume, with Prefaces, Tables, and Various Notes and References, from the Last London Edition.
Cloth. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WHAT OUR GIRLS OUGHT TO KNOW. By DR. MARY J. STUDLEY.
The author has prepared this book as a real labor of love on her own part, and at the oft-repeated request of the multitude of mothers who know her, and wished the book for their daughters. The work of preparing such a book could hardly have fallen into better hands.
Cloth, nearly 300 pp., $1.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED? A Lecture by ROBERT G. INGERSOLL. Contents: Introductory. The Gospel of Matthew. The Gospel of Mark. The Gospel of Luke. The Gospel of John. The Catholics. The Episcopalians. The Methodists. The Presbyterians. The Evangelical Alliance. What do you Propose?
Paper, pp. 87. Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SIR LYON PLAYFAIR Taken to Pieces and Disposed Of; Likewise SIR CHARLES DILKE. Being a Dissection of their Speeches in the House of Commons on June 19th, 1888, in Defense of Compulsory Vaccination. By WM. WHITE, ESQ.
Paper. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New York Advertisements.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

304 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, successfully treats all forms of Chronic Diseases, however complicated. Patients afflicted for years, regarded as hopeless, or incurable, testify to permanent restoration. For twenty years his power to diagnose and treat Disease has been and still stands unequaled, so say eminent Scientists, Physicians, Clergymen, and patients from all parts of the country. Voluminous testimony can be seen at his office. Those unable to visit the Doctor in person can be successfully treated at their homes. Send stamp for Circular. Diagnosis, with advice, $2.00.

Extract from a letter by Rev. F. R. M., D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y. . . . . "I am happy to testify to Dr. Dake's high moral character as a man, and his eminent ability as a physician who has achieved a most extraordinary career."
Jy7 tf

MARY C. MORRELL, Business, Prophetic and Developing Medium, 230 West 36th street, New York City. 10w* Au25

MRS. C. SCOTT, Trance and Business Medium. Sittings 10 to 5. No. 21 West 13th street, N. Y. Au11 10w*

Mrs. Stoddard-Gray and DeWitt C. Hough

WILL hold Séances each evening for Materialization and Tests at their cottage, corner of Lyman street and First Avenue, Lake Pleasant. Sittings each day until September 1st. 6w Jy28

A LIBERAL OFFER,

BY A RELIABLE CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER.

SEND 4 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name, age and sex, we will diagnose your case FREE by independent spirit-writing. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Canton, N. Y. Au11 13w*

RUPTURES

CURED in thirty days by my MEDICAL COMPOUND and improved ELASTIC SUPPORTER TRUSS. Send Stamp for Circular. Address CAPT. W. A. COLLINGS, Smithville, Jefferson Co., N. Y. [Mention this paper. Au4 13w*

Clairvoyant Examinations Free.

ENCLOSE lock of hair, with leading symptoms. We will give you a correct diagnosis of your case. Address E. F. BUTTERFIELD, M. D., corner Warren and Fayette streets, Syracuse, New York. 26w* Ja28

SECOND EDITION.

A REVIEW

OF THE

Seybert Commissioners' Report

OR,

WHAT I SAW AT CASSADAGA LAKE.

BY

A. B. RICHMOND, Esq.,

A MEMBER OF THE PENNSYLVANIA BAR; AUTHOR OF "LEAVES FROM THE DIARY OF AN OLD LAWYER," "COLLEGE AND PRISON," "DR. CROSBY'S CALM VIEW FROM A LAWYER'S STANDPOINT," "A HAWK IN AN EAGLE'S NEST," ETC.

This able and comprehensive work should be read by every thoughtful man and woman who has heard of the Seybert Request. Hon. A. B. Richmond, the author, whose eminence as a criminal lawyer, and high reputation as an author, will at once ensure the confidence and attention of the reader, has in this volume replied to the "Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission" with a soundness of logic, a keenness of satire, a breadth of thought and clearness of perception such as the importance of the subject demanded. He deals his blows at the tediousness, injustice, prejudice, unkindness and irreverence of the Seybert Commissioners with an unsparing hand, and, like Thor, he never strikes a blow in vain. We examined and were struck, each blow tells, and must carry conviction to every thoughtful mind.

Mr. Richmond, although not a believer in the Spiritual Philosophy, has better than a fearless and logical defense of the truths of the Phenomena of Spiritualism. Having received last August, from the hands of a friend just returned from Cassadaga Lake, a communication addressed to him in the spirit-life, he was induced to visit the Lake, but went with a firm belief that he could be able to solve the mystery and expose the fra

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1888.

The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings.

Onset Bay.

[MISS GUSTIE F. HOWE is our authorized agent at Onset Bay. She will receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. She also has a full line of our publications for sale at Association Headquarters; and will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Meeting.]

Monday, Aug. 20th, conference meeting was held at the Auditorium in the afternoon.

Tuesday morning a large party went for a "clam-bake" to Hog Island. In the afternoon the rain drove the people to the Pavilion to hold their meeting, which was well attended; many who understood nothing either of the phenomena or philosophy of Spiritualism were present, and much interested in the instructions given. In the evening the Business Club with Lindall's Band gave a concert in the Casino. Copious showers of rain fell during the night, deluging the streets, and cleansing and purifying the walks and shrubbery.

Wednesday there was an excursion from Edgartown, Cottage City, Falmouth Heights and Woods Holl to Onset, also an excursion from Onset to Provincetown and Chatham Light. Wednesday evening there was a dance in the Casino.

Mrs. M. E. Williams, of New York, and Mrs. A. E. Hill, of Philadelphia, left Wickett's Island Monday for New York. It is whispered that Mrs. Williams is soon to marry and settle down to private life.

Commodore Rhodes's new and elegant steam yacht "Indolent" lies at anchor near the wharf.

Dr. F. H. Roscoe and wife, of Providence, left Onset Sunday evening

Mrs. H. S. Lake made us a flying visit at the beginning of the week.

Mr. Charles H. Rand and wife, of New Bedford, Mrs. S. Lockwood, of Denver, Colorado, Mr. E. Byfield, brother and friend, of Toronto, Canada, who have been stopping at Howe Cottage, "on the moor," left for their separate homes during the past week. John A. Howes, wife and son, who have been visiting at Stanton Cottage, also left for New York, stopping a few days at Middleboro' on the way.

Our worthy treasurer E. Y. Johnson comes to the office each morning smiling and good-natured, with a kind word for every one, bearing his own troubles philosophically, and with words of cheer for those less fitted to bear the burdens of life's journey.

The Harvest Moon Festival will take place Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22d and 23d. The Ladies' Industrial Union will take steps to make the occasion attractive and entertaining.

Tally ho! The old stage-coach with fifteen passengers on board from Mattapoisett came in on Thursday for a day's picnic.

Mr. J. R. Perry, an old Spiritualist, and Mr. Charles Lehman, both of Wilkesbarre, Pa., arrived at Onset Thursday, and are stopping at Howe Cottage "on the moor." This is Mr. Perry's first visit to Onset, and like all who come to us for the first time, he is charmed with the place and its surroundings.

An interesting conference meeting was held at the Auditorium on Thursday.

Friday was a beautiful day. Conference meeting well attended in the afternoon—Mr. Fairchild presiding with his usual grace and dignity. Dr. Drisco, Dr. Hervey, Mr. Jones of New York, Mr. Straight (a recent convert) and Mr. Brown participated. A poem, given by Belle Bush at Belvidere Seminary to the Spiritualists at the different camp-meetings, was also read.

[On account of the lateness of the hour when this report reached our office, the publication of this poem is deferred to our next issue.—ED. B. OF L.]

A very satisfactory materializing séance was given at the house of Mrs. Nash, Friday evening, Aug. 17th, with Mrs. Bliss as medium.

Mrs. S. R. Stevens has recovered from her recent illness, and will go to Topeka, Kan., by way of Montreal and the Lakes, arriving at Topeka about the 16th of September.

Persons coming from other camp grounds declare Onset to be by far the most inviting and pleasant, and for the beauty of its scenery and surroundings, with its boating and fishing and bathing facilities, and invigorating atmosphere, cannot be excelled.

The Committee on the Temple entertainments have concluded to have one more dance, to take place Saturday, Sept. 1st. Saturday evening the dance in the Temple was well attended.

The following Committee have been appointed to take charge of the Harvest Moon Festival, with power to appoint sub committee: Mrs. Wm. Sturtevant, Mrs. Southworth Loring, Mrs. Alfred Nash, Mrs. Susan E. King, Mrs. Eva Cassell, Miss Gustie F. Howe, Mrs. Thomas B. Griffith, Mrs. Martin Tribou, Mrs. W. W. Currier, Mrs. M. E. Thompson, Mrs. M. E. Whittemore, Mrs. A. F. Wilcox, Mrs. Frank Union, Mrs. M. L. Union, Mrs. Jennie P. Ricker, Mrs. C. L. Woodward, Mrs. Minnie L. Pierce, Mrs. Vienna Whitwell, Mrs. C. P. Keith, Mrs. A. F. Butterfield, Mrs. M. E. Williams, Miss Nancy Batchelder, Mrs. E. M. McIntire, Miss Addie Bourne, Mrs. May Whittier. Donations of money, food or fruit will be thankfully received by this Committee. Mrs. Dr. Wm. Sturtevant, Chairman.

Our thanks are due to Mrs. Sturtevant, Mrs. Elvira Loring, Mrs. Alfred Nash, Mrs. Simeon Butterfield, Mrs. E. A. Pennell, Mrs. Harrison and others for flowers received for the platform at the different meetings.

Saturday afternoon's conference was very interesting. Col. Kase, of Philadelphia, related his interview with President Lincoln, and his connection with the emancipation proclamation. The story is familiar to many of your readers. An old gentleman, eighty-nine years of age, Jonathan Mosier by name, stepped to the platform and made a few remarks, and immediately Mrs. S. Dick gave a beautiful and affecting poem, purporting to come from his mother long since passed to spirit life.

Sunday, Aug. 26th, was a beautiful summer day. The cars brought many people to the grounds from Providence and way stations, Plymouth and way stations, Provincetown, and all points on the Cape; while the steamers Island Home and Cygnet brought each a load of passengers from New Bedford. The Middleboro' Brass Band gave a grand concert in its usual skillful manner from the Auditorium at 10 o'clock, and at 10:30 Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes gave an eloquent and powerful discourse, her subject being "Plain Talk to Spiritualists," and her remarks setting forth the beauties of Spiritualism, its purity and truth, the holiness of its mission, and the duties and responsibilities of Spiritualists.

At noon the Middleboro' and Lindall's Bands each gave a concert.

The afternoon's discourse was delivered by Mr. E. B. Fairchild, his subject "Progress." It was a very instructive and interesting lecture, followed by tests from David Brown.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum met as usual at 3 P. M.—Mr. Besse acting conductor. Recitations from Lottie Giles, Lillie Wendemouth, Eloise Wendemouth, Ethel Drake, Gertie Trowbridge, Violet Willis, Herbert White, Cora Campbell, Alice Cummings, Gad Robinson, Emily Drake, Edith Erskine, Lulu Morse, Eula Putnam; song by Carrie Rothermel.

Col. John C. Bundy and wife of the Religio Philosophical Journal are the guests of Mr. W. W. Currier.

We were presented by Mrs. Lita Barney Sayles with a report of the 15th Woman's Congress—an association for the advancement of woman—held in New York City, October, 1887.

Sunday, Aug. 26th, the dummy trains carried fifty-two car loads of passengers to and from the Onset station during the day.

Mrs. A. E. Oliver, of Reading, Mass., would be pleased to receive contributions of canceled postage stamps by mail to her address, for the benefit of an old lady desiring to enter the Old Ladies' Home.

Meetings will be held morning and afternoon, on Sunday next, Sept. 2d, under the auspices of the Ladies' Society. E. B. Fairchild being the speaker.

This closes the regular camp meeting at Onset for the present season. Wishing all pilgrims to our camp a "God speed," we bid good-bye to the series of 1888.

GUSTIE F. HOWE.

Headquarters Office, Onset, Aug. 27th, 1888.

Lake Pleasant.

[MR. J. MILTON YOUNG is our authorized agent at Lake Pleasant, and will be pleased to receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. Mr. Young also has a full line of our publications for sale at his bookstore. He will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Meeting.]

CLOSING DAYS.

The great camp-meeting at this place is now at its height, and another week will close its record. The attendance has been large and the interest unprecedented. Mediums for every phase of manifestations are here, and have been largely patronized. The weather for the most part has been fine, the days have been fair, and the nights delightfully cool and conducive to sweet and refreshing sleep. This feature of dame Nature is duly appreciated.

The annual meeting of the Association, and subsequent meetings of the board of directors, seem to have settled it very definitely that Lake Pleasant is now on a solid basis. Many important improvements are being projected, and plans made to carry them into effect. The committees having the matter in charge are gentlemen of push and energy, and will mature their plans. There will be several new buildings, including a hotel, auditorium, dépôt, bandstands, and a new bridge from the foot of Lyman street to the Highlands.

The addresses as announced on the official card have been given, and for the most part have been attentively listened to. Monday and Tuesday were devoted to conferences, in which several speakers participated, the principal ones being Mr. Ellsworth, of New York, Dr. W. S. Eldridge, of Boston, Dr. Temple, of Boston, Newman Weeks, of Rutland, Vt., Emma J. Nickerson, of Boston, Dean Clarke, of Boston, Mrs. Maud Lord Drake.

Mrs. Drake also gave some very fine platform descriptions, many of which were recognized as correct.

On Wednesday, the address was by J. Frank Baxter, who also gave tests.

Thursday morning, conference, opened by Dr. Dean Clarke, speaking upon the relation which we hold to the spirit world and the necessity of using judgment in accepting the teachings from spirits. Dr. Temple, of Boston, followed, giving psychometric readings. Dr. Eldridge, of Boston, gave two medical examinations. Mr. Kenyon followed. He expects to find in spirit-life the results of his mental labors more than here. Mr. Fenner, of Providence, entertained the audience with a song. Mr. Newman Weeks, of Rutland, said he believed in a common-sense Spiritualism. We should use our own reason and common sense as to the truth of all communications. Many persons have been shipwrecked by taking everything as truth from the spirit world. Dr. Dean Clarke answered questions propounded by several in the audience.

Thursday afternoon, Mr. Charles Dawbarn, of New York, gave an address upon the subject, "Education of Mediums in Laws of Spirit Control." Mr. Dawbarn held his audience in close attention during one of the best discourses ever delivered from this platform, leaving his hearers stronger in spirit, and glad to accept the teachings so beautifully presented.

On Friday morning a conference was held at the Auditorium, which as usual was of interest.

J. Frank Baxter conducted the service of the afternoon, opening with singing, "Who will guide my spirit home?" This was followed by a poem, "Outward Bound," after which came the address, "The Physical and the Spiritual Body," or "Has Man a Spiritual Body?" This was followed by platform descriptions, several of which were quite remarkable, and recognized by parties in the audience.

SPECIAL NOTES.

Mrs. S. S. Brown, of Athol, is passing the season at Lake Pleasant as usual. This lady is an old time Spiritualist, having been a leader in the movement for many years in the Green Mountain State. Mrs. Brown has just returned from an extended tour to New Mexico, California and Alaska, visiting the Yosemite, the Geysers, Victoria Land, the Yellowstone Park, and many other points of interest.

Mrs. Millie Renouf, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is a talented elocutionist. She has appeared several times at Association Hall.

The Lake Pleasant choir consists of David Williams, Mrs. S. S. Allen, Mrs. M. A. Masterson, Miss C. A. Daggett.

Misses Drs. Carradice and Andrus will carry to their home, in the Everglade State, golden memories of Lake Pleasant.

The speakers for next Sunday will be Mrs. A. M. Spence and Lyman C. Howe.

A large number of campers will remain here through September.

Association Hall has been utilized quite largely for entertainments during the session. As a rule they have been meritorious, and have received a liberal patronage.

Prof. Russell, of Goffstown, N. H., the blind musician, plays the sweetest music upon the little harp which he carries, and cheers the workers at Headquarters with "Robin Adair," "Home, Sweet Home," and other sweet old tunes, that call up blessed memories wherever and whenever heard.

The materialization circles held by Wm. Eddy and Mrs. Mary Huntoon are well patronized.

Mrs. Cushman's circles are well attended, and people appreciate the music, receive excellent tests, and feel that they are assisting a medium who has physically been very unfortunate, but whose spirit friends still direct and guide.

Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing gives private sittings daily, and "Ikabod's" circles are as funny as ever; his prayer the other evening was wonderful for the many new words introduced; he is "conticklier" to have all correspond.

Mr. Chamberlain, from Newburyport, has been here one week at the Lake, and is prolonging his visit, and enjoying the spirit friends' communications and the beautiful surroundings at the same time.

Mrs. M. J. Tillotson from Hartford, and Mrs. G. W. Mills from Canton, Ct., are at Mrs. Sylvester's cottage, and enjoy every moment of their stay here, and enter with enthusiasm into the "doings" of the young people sojourning there.

Prof. Cadwell is very busy holding mesmerizing circles morning and evening, and many mediums are being developed under his influence.

Two hundred and one persons have registered at the Headquarters the past week, and thirty at the hotel.

When this letter appears, the departing trains will have carried many who will have left with fond anticipation of an early return next summer. "So mote it be."

J. M. Y.

Lake Pleasant, Mass., Aug. 26th, 1888.

Cassadaga Lake, N. Y.

The past week at Cassadaga camp has been very interesting. We have had lectures by Walter Howell, Mrs. R. S. Lillie, Mrs. Clara Watson and W. J. Colville. On Friday evening "Esmeralda" was given by the Lyceum to a large audience in the amphitheatre. On Thursday evening a benefit was given to W. A. Mansfield, the celebrated slate writing medium. A fine programme was presented, including music, recitations, short addresses, and tests by E. W. Emerson. The public slate-writing by Mr. Mansfield was a remarkable exhibition of spirit power. A committee was chosen to clean and tie together two pairs of slates. One pair of slates was passed to Mr. Ransom, of Buffalo, who sat some distance back in the audience. The other pair was held by a member of the committee, Mr. Barrett, at arms' length. The committee joined hands, and at the request of the medium a line was formed to the slates held by Mr. Ransom, by joining hands. Mr. Mansfield was powerfully influenced, and Mr. Ransom declared he heard the pencil stir between the slates which he held. When the influence left the medium the two pairs of slates were untied by the committee. On one of the slates held by Mr. Barrett were four communications, one of them being signed with the name Henry Seybert, and referring to the unsatisfactory work of the Seybert Commission. On one of the slates held by Mr. Ransom were found several short marks, as though an unsuccessful attempt had been made to write upon it. The séance was very satisfactory, and gave additional evidence of Mr. Mansfield's gift as a medium for independent slate writing.

A few days ago a party by the name of "Starr" made his appearance on the camp ground. This fellow makes a business of gulling the public, and especially the "Christian" public, by pretending to show how the phenomena of Spiritualism are produced. He had the audacity to scatter his posters about the grounds until ordered off by one of the trustees. There was quite a buzz of excitement on the grounds in consequence of Starr's visit, but he was treated with more consideration than he deserved. It is amazing what instruments the church people and other opponents of Spiritualism are willing to employ to combat the thing they are so prejudiced against.

The present season of the camp has been a remarkably successful one. People have come from all parts of the country, and the hotel and cottages have been severely taxed to accommodate the crowds. Cassadaga is certainly on the high road to success, if enthusiasm and work can make it succeed. A statement of the finances of the Association will serve to show the prosperous condition of things. From the President's report, covering one year, from Aug. 20th, 1887, to Aug. 20th, 1888, I take the following summary:

Inventory of property	$31,011.00
Indebtedness	9,810.00
Receipts for one year	10,390.05
Expenditures for one year	9,387.94
Cash on hand Aug 20th, 1888	1,002.11

At the annual election the old board was refastated entire. Everything points to harmony and success. Of course it is impossible to please everybody, and there are still some imperfections which will disappear under the persistent endeavors of the management. I believe Cassadaga is the most promising camp in this country to day, and that there has been and will continue to be the most earnest endeavor to improve its condition. Secularizing influences are guarded against, and the amusement features are properly subordinated to the intellectual and spiritual. If this policy continues, Cassadaga will become the Mecca of Spiritualists and liberal thinkers in America.

GRAPHO.

Sunapee Lake, N. H.

THE LAST WEEK AT SUNAPEE LAKE.

Tuesday, Aug. 21st, at 10:30 A. M., Mrs. Chandler presiding, exercises commenced by singing 'Nearer, My God, to Thee," joined in by the congregation. After opening remarks by the chairman, Mr. A. E. Tisdale, the blind medium, who came upon the grounds the previous night, rendered a song very finely, playing his own accompaniment. Joseph D. Stiles spoke next and gave a poem; Mrs. Chandler gave a communication from Betsey Blodgett, followed by Mr. Tisdale, Mrs. Waite and Daniel N. Brower. Closed with quartette rendering "Seeds of Kindness."

At 2:30 P. M., Joseph D. Stiles in chair, exercises commenced by a song by quartette, followed by a splendid lecture from A. E. Tisdale; after another song, Mr. Stiles gave twenty-five names of spirits presented to his vision.

Wednesday, Aug. 22d, the President, Dr. H. B. Storer, was again at his post. The morning hour was passed in conference, commencing with a song by Mrs. Wentworth and Mrs. Osborn, followed by Dr. Storer and Mr. Tisdale. Mrs. Chandler stated that the spirit of Thomas Gales Forster was present, sending a short message to President Storer. Mr. Tisdale sang a beautiful song, followed by remarks by Dr. Storer, Simon Keyser, Mr. Tisdale and Mrs. Chandler. Closed with a song.

At 2:30 P. M., the exercises consisted of songs by the quartette; a splendid lecture and a test séance by Mr. J. D. Stiles; thirty eight names of spirits were spoken, nearly all of which were recognized.

Thursday, Aug. 23d, 10:30 A. M., the conference opened with a song. Remarks were made by Dr. Storer, followed by Moses Nelson. Dr. Storer made mention of a letter from Mrs. Sophia K. Durant, a former worker upon these grounds, now in Southern California. She sent greeting to the camp. Remarks by Mrs. S. B. Craddock, Simon Keyser and G. H. Whitney followed, and closed with a song by the quartette.

At 2 P. M. the exercises commenced with vocal music by the quartette, followed by the reading of a poem by Dr. Storer, a song by Mr. Tisdale and a discourse by Dr. Storer from the subject "Spiritualism as a Liberator." The names of thirty-six spirits that presented themselves were given through the organism of J. D. Stiles. Song by Mr. Tisdale to close.

On Thursday evening occurred the weekly dance; it was well patronized.

Among the arrivals to day were Mr. and Mrs. Eben Cobb, of Boston.

Friday, Aug. 24th, 2 o'clock P. M., the session commenced with song by quartette, followed by an invocation by Eben Cobb of Boston; another song, and a fine lecture by Mr. Cobb, subject, "Harmony." Session closed with song by Mr. Tisdale.

On Saturday, Aug. 25th, 9:30 A. M., occurred the annual meeting of the Association, at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Justus Fisher, Keene, N. H., President; Mrs. H. G. Newman, Washington, N. H., Vice-President; N. A. Lull, Washington, N. H., Secretary; V. C. Brookway, Newbury, N. H., Treasurer; Mrs. Addie M. Stevens, Washington, N. H., Auditor; V. C. Brookway, Newbury, N. H., N. A. Lull, Washington, N. H., E. B. Craddock, Concord, N. H., Business Committee.

2 P. M., exercises commenced with a song by quartette, followed by an invocation by Mr. A. E. Tisdale; another song, succeeded by a lecture of very superior merit by Mr. Tisdale. A song to close.

At 7:30 P. M. the last entertainment of the season was held in the Pavilion, and proved a very interesting one.

Sunday, Aug. 26th, at 10:30 A. M., services commenced with a song by quartette, followed with a poem and invocation by Eben Cobb. "Child of the Golden Sunshine" was then beautifully rendered by the quartette, and Mr. Cobb delivered an eloquent lecture. Service closed with a song by the quartette.

1 o'clock P. M. Test Séance in Pavilion by J. D. Stiles, who gave the names of forty-three spirits, nearly all of which were recognized.

2 P. M., a song opened the session, followed by lecture by A. E. Tisdale, subject, "Spiritualism as a Science and a Religion." A duet by Mr. Osborne and Mr. Johnston, entitled "Hope Beyond," was followed by tests by J. D. Stiles, who gave in a short time one hundred and twenty-seven names, making the whole number at the different sessions upon the platform while here three hundred and seventy-four—nearly all of which were recognized by some one present.

The closing day was very fine, and a large and quiet crowd was in attendance. Everything passed off pleasantly.

I wish here to state that the thanks of the Association and all concerned are due to the members of Fraternity Quartette, composed of Mrs. Nettie Wentworth, Mrs. Nettie Wentworth Osborn, J. G. Osborn and C. E. Johnston, for the efficient manner in which they have performed their parts, and the beautiful music they have furnished during the meeting.

Aug. 27th, 1888. N. A. LULL, Secretary.

Queen City Park, (South Burlington,) Vt.

Under the most favorable auspices the Spiritualists of Vermont opened their seventh annual camp meeting at this park on Tuesday, Aug. 21st. The opening exercises were in the Pavilion, a larger audience than usual for the first day being present.

Dr. E. A. Smith, President, made an appropriate speech, followed by a fine selection by the choir. Miss Jennie B. Hagan was then introduced, and improvised three poems from subjects given by the audience. Miss Hagan is a general favorite here.

She was followed by Hon. A. E. Stanley, who gave an address on the "Probabilities of the Truth or Fact of Spirit Intercourse." No attempt will be made to give an abstract of the discourse. He spoke plainly and by facts, not attempting to decide for others, but leaving each to draw his own conclusions. In closing he pleaded for harmony among the workers in whatever capacity, and urged that they give to each other their hearty encouragement and good will.

Wednesday, Aug. 22d, an interesting conference was held in the forenoon, participated in by Dr. A. H. Richardson, of Charlestown, Mass., Mr. John Withell, of Montreal, Dr. S. N. Gould, and others.

In the afternoon Miss Jennie B. Hagan was greeted by a good audience. She gave some exquisite poems, and an address on "The Character and Teachings of Jesus," the subject being suggested by the audience. In a strain of subdued eloquence and tender pathos she dwelt upon the Christ-spirit which characterized the mission of Jesus—which spirit was revealed in the long ago, and is in the world to-day.

Thursday, Aug 23d, conference was held in forenoon as usual. At 2 P. M. a good audience assembled to listen again to Miss Hagan. Her address gave very general satisfaction. Her poems, which followed her address, were exquisite, especially the one on "General Sheridan," which was such as to enshrine the departed hero in the hearts of all who were privileged to hear it.

In the evening George Dutton, M. D., gave a lecture on the "Methods of Healing." He spoke with ease and assurance, indicating that he is a man of thought and culture.

Friday, Aug. 24th, A. M., a conference was held in the spacious parlor of the hotel. Dr. Richardson made some excellent opening remarks, and was followed by Mrs. E. A. Wells, of New York, with tests. In the evening she held a séance, at which the tests were considered in the main quite accurate by those for whom they were given.

At 2 P. M. Mrs. Sarah A. Wiley, of Rockingham, spoke very acceptably to a good audience. In her mild, persuasive way she unfolded the beauties and philosophy of Spiritualism so clearly as to make one wonder that any could reject truths so potent to uplift and save.

The services of Saturday, Aug. 25th, consisted of a conference meeting in the morning in the Pavilion, and a very acceptable address in the afternoon by Mrs. Abbie Crossett of Waterbury, one of our favorite State speakers.

The first Sunday of our camp-meeting this year opened fair and beautiful, after a night of refreshing rain. The morning meeting was held in the Pavilion, as it was rather damp for out door exercises. After a musical selection, beautifully rendered by our excellent choir, Judge Dailey of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave a fine invocation, and then recited an original poem, which was grand and beautiful both in matter and in rhythm, and most highly appreciated by the large audience present. He then gave a fine lecture on "The Problems of Life," full of instruction and noble thoughts. We trust and hope to have Judge Dailey with us again, as he has made many friends here during his short stay.

The large steamer Reindeer made two trips from Burlington to the Park during the day, bringing a large concourse of people. It is believed there were never so many people on the grounds before on the first Sunday during our annals of camp-meeting.

The afternoon meeting on Sunday was held in the grove, and after singing by the choir Mrs. Fannie Davis Smith, of Brandon, Vt., gave one of her grand and stirring addresses. It is the opinion of those competent of judging that this fine lecturer progresses every year in her power of speaking, and the verdict yesterday on all sides was: "Mrs. Smith outdid herself."

After the lecture the audience adjourned to the Pavilion to listen to poems by Miss Jennie B. Hagan, followed by some admirable tests by Dr. W. B. Mills, of Saratoga, N. Y., all of which were recognized.

In the evening there was a conference in the Pavilion. Truly it was a grand day at Queen City Park.

An interesting feature of the meetings is the singing. The choir consists of Chas. W. Sullivan, Mrs. Florence Ely and Mrs. Hattie Carr, assisted for the present by Mr. John Withell of Montreal—all accomplished singers. Mrs. Jane E. Thompson, who presides at the piano, is a skillful performer.

At no previous meeting was the attendance so large during the first week as at the present.

A hopeful and very harmonious spirit prevails here, and everything indicates that this will be the most successful and enthusiastic meeting ever held on the grounds.

The Park is now favored with the presence of Mr. F. A. Moore and wife, of Washington, D. C; Mrs. J. Z. Sprague and daughter, of Manchester, N. H.; Mr. John Withell and his interesting family, of Montreal; and daily arrivals of others from a distance are expected.

The following mediums and healers are present: Mrs. E. A. Wells, Dr. Fannie C. (Dexter) Miller, Miss Dr. H. A. Blaisdell, Dr. A. H. Richardson, Dr. George Bronson, Dr. G. W. Fowler, Lucius Colburn and Dr. S. Locke.

A. E. S., Sec'y.

[We hope some of the mediums and speakers at this camp, whom we so often notice in THE BANNER, will do us the justice to call attention to the merits of this journal, and request the friends to aid in its circulation by subscribing liberally.—ED. B. OF L.]

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

I shall leave Lake Pleasant Monday morning, Sept. 3d, at 9:30, from New London station, with two special cars, for Queen City Park, South Burlington. I shall sell the ticket, good going on this train and good to return on any day within two weeks, for $3.00. This is said by all to be the best excursion of the season.

There is also a $5.00 ticket, good any day or train during the camp-meeting; I have left some with the station agent at Lake Pleasant, and with the dépôt master at Miller's Falls.

My Boston ticket can be obtained of A. F. Briggs, 35 Congress street.

E. A. SMITH.

[A word from Dr. A. H. Richardson regarding this camp will appear next week.—ED.]

Mount Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

Another installment of the report of services held at this camp ground will be found under "Correspondence" head on our third page.

Since this report was received, the following has come to hand from HON. WARREN CHASE:

"The Mount Pleasant Camp-Meeting at Clinton, Ia., closed its session of four weeks and five Sundays on Monday, Aug. 27th, although many linger about the cottages and tents for a short time. The meeting has been a pleasant and profitable one—successful in every respect, especially financially. The Society had paid for its land, but was indebted some $1700 for improvements, which has been reduced to about $500.

Intelligence, enterprise and earnestness are in this western movement, in a measure not surpassed by any of our camps in the East, but there has not been the taste, neatness and economy of Onset and Queen City Park. There is now a move in this direction.

I was not in my usual health the first three weeks here, which, with the storms, made it rather more gloomy than it would have been, but I got in my six lectures on time, and with Prof. Loveland, Moses and Mattie Hull, Dr. Juliette H. Severance, Mr. Hodge and several volunteers, kept the ball moving till J. Clegg Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Kates, Mrs. Warner Bishop and Prof. Lockwood came and relieved us mostly of the platform work.

We had delightful weather the last week, and all seemed to enjoy it. Many made arrangements and engagements for next season. Mr. J. S. Loveland was reelected President for the coming year, and J. H. Randall, Secretary. So far as I can discover there is no camp-meeting among the many I have visited that shows more signs of permanence than this, but I do not expect to visit it again, for so far as camp-meetings are concerned, my heart yearns for those of my native New England soil, among the rocks of my childhood days, and if I visit any more it will probably be in that portion of the country.

I feel sometimes as if I ought to retire and prepare for that change which has befallen so many of my old associates during the last few years, and which must ere long fall to my lot.

I have met hundreds of old friends here, and all greet me with their best wishes, and we part, with few exceptions, to meet no more in this life."

Niantic, Ct.

Monday, Aug. 20th, many of our number went to the military ground to witness the coming of the soldiers and their settling down to camp-life.

Tuesday, the 21st, was a rainy day, most emphatically such, the rain pouring in torrents and the wind doing some damage to the tents outside the grove. Within the grove there was more protection, and in the evening a number of our campers met at the cottage of G. W. Burnham to listen for the last time to our English friend, Mr. Lamont, who expects to be at an early day on his way across the waters. The occasion was very interesting to us all.

On the 22d a séance was held at the special request of some of our soldier friends, whom we met here last year and who became interested in our spiritual philosophy. But we need more mediums, and I hope that next year we shall have a sufficient number to satisfy all who desire to know more of the truths none but they can bring. Some like to patronize the dance; others come to us and ask, Where can we find a circle to night for a few of our friends?

The 23d was a beautiful day, and a multitude of strangers visited our pleasant grounds, to all of whom we say, come again. Among our visitors was Rev. Mr. Horton of Cheshire, Conn., also our old friend Fred Chamberlain of Windsor. Mr. E. A. Perry of Hartford is in camp. Mr. and Mrs. Stedman of Waterbury are here. Mrs. G. Jones of Hartford is at L. H. Burnham's.

The 24th was "Governor's Day," and both camps were as one. There never has been such a turnout here. Cars were loaded with visitors, and five boats touched our Niantic bay, from Hartford, New Haven, New London, Norwich and Sag Harbor. Thousands witnessed the grand review, but the illumination in the evening by the different companies, at their own expense, was truly grand.

Saturday, 25th, the Ladies' Aid Society closed their sales, the proceeds not being quite equal to those of last year. Nearly all the old officers have been reelected, and a Fair is to be held another year, when it is hoped all who are interested in our lovely place will patronize it, and thus enable us to render it still more attractive to both young and old, and a beacon-light to travelers to the Summer-Land.

Mr. F. H. Ufford and wife, of Bridgeport, are at Chas. Belknap's. Mr. and Mrs. Loomis, of Bristol, are at Mrs. Mills's, also Mr. Fenton.

Last Sunday was a pleasant day. Our speaker, Mr. Lyman C. Howe, was truly eloquent in his inspiration, his lecture being upon subjects given by the audience. A conference was held in the evening, also séances in different places.

Much good is being accomplished by our mediums in these last few days.

The coming week will see many departing for their homes, and memories of many happy hours we have spent together will be to us through the coming year like the fragrance of summer flowers.

In my report printed in last BANNER, E. R. Whiting should have been given as the name of our President, instead of E. R. Whitney.

MRS. N. H. FOGG.

Verona Park, Me.

Mrs. A. M. Glading, who left the grounds on Monday, Aug. 27th, called at this office on the 28th, en route for Fitchburg, and gave a very encouraging report of the state of things at Verona.

At the annual meeting—the largest in attendance ever held there—Dr. C. F. Ware was reelected President, and J. B. Hatch, Sen., of Boston, chosen Vice-President. These gentlemen enter upon the new year with the assistance of a very efficient board. It was voted to improve and add to the Pavilion, and introduce other changes for the better next season—in which good work an Auxiliary Board, organized by the ladies to work in harmony with the Association, will do efficient service. This new society, if it may so be called, already numbers upward of forty members.

Mrs. Glading exhibited a fine service of silver—consisting of a cream pitcher, sugar bowl and fruit basket—of which the friends at Verona Park had made her a present, in token of their appreciation of her services at this meeting and others she has attended at that place. [We are pleased to note this kindly and practical recognition of the loving and faithful service which this worthy lady has certainly performed as speaker and medium, not only at Verona, but wherever she has been.]

George A. Fuller, she stated, has done excellent service at Verona this season, and won many friends who lament that his engagement with the Southern Association will prevent his appearance among them next year; nevertheless, they are cheered by the thought that Lookout Mountain Camp will be greatly helped by his presence. Anent Lookout Mountain, Mrs. Glading informed us that the Southern Association had this year refused an offer of $50,000 by parties outside of Spiritualism for the property it purchased at the outset for $7000; and that its financial and other prospects have never been so bright as at present.

Mrs. Barnes (formerly Mrs. Blynn of Boston) is President of Verona's "Ladies' Auxiliary Board," with Mrs. Stubbs as Vice President, Mrs. Dr. Ware, Treasurer, and Miss Edna Abbott, Secretary.

The birthday of J. B. Hatch, Sen., was recently honored at Verona by floral and other offerings from children and adults, present and absent, mingled with the warm congratulations of all on the grounds.

Mrs. Glading spoke in the highest terms of Dr. Ware, President of the Association, as an honest man and faithful worker, who, devoting time and means unselfishly to its interest, has done much for the success of the Camp.

She also referred appreciatively to the services of Dr. Emery, treasurer.

Mrs. Glading gave, while at Verona, a séance and two entertainments (with stereopticon) for the benefit of the Association.

She speaks in Fitchburg, Mass., during September; in October she will be in Cincinnati, O.; next July and a part of August she speaks at Lookout Mountain, Tenn.; the latter part of August at Verona Park. Next November is the only month at her disposal up to November, 1889. Her permanent address is Box 672, Doylestown, Pa.

Rindge (N. H.) Camp Ground.

Sunday, Aug. 5th, the writer visited this beautiful resort, but as the speaker advertised failed to put in an appearance, Mr. Merrill G. Parker, of Peterboro', a young man who is just being developed as a medium, made his first public appearance on the platform.

At the earnest request of those present he consented to speak the next Sunday, but as the day was very rainy no meeting was held.

Aug. 12th came with perfect weather, and the meeting was called to order at 11 A. M. After music, Mr. Parker gave a short inspirational discourse, when his Indian control described a number of spirits, giving names and characteristics, nearly all of which were recognized by those present.

At 2 P. M. we listened to a well written essay abounding in practical points, again followed by tests. Over forty names were given and recognized.

We believe Mr. Parker is destined to become one of our best mediums, and hope he will have abundant opportunities to exercise his gift.

The cottages are all full, and there is a prospect that quite a number more will be erected before next season.

With unsurpassed natural attractions this place only needs time and a little more energy by somebody to become one of the most popular resorts in the land.

Francestown, N. H. GEO. D. EPPS.

Temple Heights, Northport, Me.

At the moment of going to press we receive from Mr. H. C. Berry a report of the entire proceedings of the camp-meeting at the above place, which we are obliged to defer the publication of until next week.

Mrs. Ada Foye in Chicago.

Mrs. Foye arrived in Chicago Aug. 21st, looking well and happy. The lady is at last confident of withstanding the severe weather in the East, and making an extended tour through the principal portions of it.

Mrs. Foye will fill her long standing engagement with the Young People's Progressive Society during the month of September. The Society will hold the lectures and séances in a suitable hall on the South Side (observe next Sunday's Chicago papers).

The first will be held next Sunday evening, Sept. 2d, at 7:45.

The friends will understand that an early attendance will be necessary to secure good seats. Spiritualists in particular are requested to secure the attendance of their skeptical friends and make this a successful engagement.

The Society will give a complimentary ball on Thursday evening, Sept. 6th, and continue its socables every two weeks in Martine's Hall, corner Indiana Avenue and 22d street. The friends are all invited to attend.

A. L. COVERDALE.

Camp-Meeting at New Era.

The State Spiritualists' Society of Oregon will hold a meeting at the camp-grounds at New Era, commencing Sept. 7th, and to continue two weeks.

FRANK FULLER, President.

HILDA BUCKMAN, Sec'y.

Spiritualist Camp-Meetings for 1888.

ONSET BAY, MASS.—The Twelfth Annual Camp-Meeting closes Sept. 1st. Trains from Boston, 8:15, 9 A. M., 1,00, 3:30, 4:00, 4:15 P. M., on Old Colony R. R.; Sundays, 7:30, 8:15 from Boston.

LAKE PLEASANT, MASS.—The Fifteenth Annual Convocation of the New England Spiritualists' Camp-Meeting Association will be held at Lake Pleasant, Montague, Mass., (on the Hoosac Tunnel route) closing Sept. 8. Trains "54," "100," "45" and "43," will stop at the Lake when there are passengers to leave, or when signalled to take passengers. The above trains, "54" and "100," leave Boston at 9:30 A. M. and 3:05 P. M., arriving at Lake Pleasant at 10:40 A. M. and 6:45 P. M. The trains No. "45" and "43" leave Lake Pleasant at 6:40 A. M. and 2:45 P. M.

PARKLAND, PA.—Meetings close Sept. 5th.

QUEEN CITY PARK, VT.—Meeting commenced Aug. 21st and continues to Sept. 10th, inclusive.

CASSADAGA LAKE, N. Y.—The Ninth Annual Meeting closes Sept. 2d.

NIANTIC, CT.—Meeting closes Sept. 9th.

ETNA, ME.—Camp-Meeting commences at Buswell's Grove, Aug. 31st, and closes Sept. 9th.

NEW ERA, ORE.—Camp-Meeting commences Sept. 7th, and continues two weeks.

Spiritualistic Meetings in Boston.

College Hall, 24 Essex Street.—Sundays, at 10¾ A. M., 2½ and 7½ P. M. Eben Cobb, Conductor.

Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown.—Mediums' meeting every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Dr. Mark Smith, Chairman.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M.; also Wednesdays at 3 P. M. Dr. E. H. Mathews, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M. F. W. Mathews, Conductor.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—The afternoon exercises were opened by Mr. Coomb

SEP 6 1888

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

VOL. LXIII. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1888. | $3,00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 26.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—The Spiritual Rostrum: Some Experiences in Earth and Spirit-Life of the Speaking Control of J. J. Morse.

SECOND PAGE.—September Magazines. Banner Correspondence: Letters from Minnesota, Michigan, Massachusetts, Florida, New York, and Rhode Island. What One Woman Has Done. Spiritualist Lecturers.

THIRD PAGE.—Poetry: The New Evangel. Saratoga Springs Items. Verifications of Spirit-Messages, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—"God is Love." A Better Mutual Understanding. Then and Now. Remarkable Sittings with Dr. Henry Rogers at Onset Bay, Mass., etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—All Sorts of Paragraphs. Spiritualist Meetings in Boston. Cleveland (O.) Notes. Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith. The Reviewer: An Adventure Among the Rosicrucians.

SEVENTH PAGE.—Children's Department: My Two Ladies—Eddie and Charlie Hatch; A Cloud that Came Over the Sea. Mediums in Boston. Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings, etc.

The Spiritual Rostrum.

Some Experiences in Earth and Spirit-Life of the Speaking Control of J. J. Morse.

Given at the Request of Numerous Friends, at Metropolitan Temple, San Francisco, Cal., Sunday Evening, May 20th, 1888.

[Reported for the Banner of Light by G. H. Hawes.]

The request has been preferred to us that we would place before you some of the experiences we have encountered alike while clothed with flesh, and since our entrance into the second career of human kind, toward which you are all traveling. Much as we dislike to indulge in matters that strictly pertain to our own personal experience, yet at the same time we cannot refrain from meeting the request that has been placed before us, as by so doing we are assured we shall give decided pleasure to many of the earnest and noble souls that have favored us with their attention in this building for so many months past. This, then, is our excuse and our apology for dealing with matters that are strictly personal. If, when we have done with the little that we can possibly tell you in the time at our disposal, you shall say that you are pleased, and perchance a little edified, by what it will be our privilege to place before you, our recompense will be complete, and all the facts that we can offer will be justly due to you.

Our experiences in the mortal life date a long way back—as mortal time would have it, nearly three hundred years ago. When we first appeared upon the stage of mortality, in the township within a two days' journey from the imperial city of Pekin, those who were our parents little thought that in after-ages their child would stand in a position to give instructions to those whom it was the fashion of its people in former-times to consider as a barbarous people, beyond the planes of culture and of kindness. Yet, so curiously does fate work, that that seemingly impossible and improbable result has been arrived at, for reasons and by causes that we will briefly advert to later on.

Trained in our early youth in those moral precepts that one of the grandest of men has handed down to humanity—one of the purest and most earnest of mankind, whose wise and philosophic sayings have been remembered and not frequently excelled in after-time—we gradually grew in all those excellencies which were considered and esteemed fitting for one of the station in which your narrator was born.

The Five Classics gave us so much of history, so much of strange and solemn mystery, and also led us carefully to the study of those poetic effusions that are considered so essential to the due and proper cultivation of refined intelligence, and also to a due observance of the ceremonies proper to every condition of life, as laid down in the Book of Ceremonies. You will pardon us for saying so, but, absorbing the wisdom of the sages, whom we reverence still, we gradually unfolded mentally and morally, and learned to render that due respect and obedience which were then inculcated as proper to be rendered to the various orders of society that existed in our land.

The Emperor, Kea-tsing, was the ruling power at the time we speak of, and our parents—to whom in blessed honor we always strove to render that filial obedience so truly due to the authors of our physical existence, and which even now we see no reason to withhold—earnestly desired that we might attain to some social eminence in the labors of our empire. So in due course of time we passed through the local colleges, and, meeting our examinations therein successfully, we were enabled to proceed to the Imperial City, and by-and-bye, in due process of time, passed all the examinations in the highest institutions of learning, and were fitted for a place in official life.

Doubtless, as you know, our people of the oft-called Flowery Kingdom, known to you as China, esteem education and moral culture and intellectual refinement as among the highest of the graces that pertain to life. It is a common supposition, we know, to esteem us as pagans, ignorant and barbaric; a great mistake, to say nothing of injustice. The followers of the Buddha can scarcely be considered as inferior in intellectual culture and ability, and the records of our own land, when truly read and understood, will, we think, certainly compare favorably with those of any other country of the same intellectual calibre and ability. Vast, indeed, as you know the land is, containing something like one-twelfth of the inhabitants of the earth, having millions of square miles, and some hundreds of millions of people over so wide an area, containing so many different characteristics, and still feeling the effects of many errors handed down from barbaric times, it is easy enough for those untrained in the ways of thought peculiar to so great a country, and not knowing all its peculiarities, to come to the rash conclusion that all of its people are paganish, heathenish, barbarous and ignorant.

Time will do our nation justice, and wiser sense and deeper counsels prevailing in those who claim to be so very exalted will, we think, put a different complexion upon the history of the land as you understand it, even now.

Pardon us one word more. So much of the history of the land which you have received has filtered through partisan and opposing religious channels, that it is largely tinctured with the idiosyncrasies and personalities of the people who have given it to you, and it can scarcely be considered an accurate presentation of the people, their customs and religion.

We took at last an official place in the Second Rank of what you know as the civil mandarins of the country; mandarin being only a term to describe the conditions of rank. We were married, and severed that much, in consequence of our marriage, our connection with the home. Our parents passed to the abode of the blessed. We erected shrines and tablets to their memories, and rendered in after years all those solemn rites and observances which are due from the children to the parents. Life differed but very little with us from the life that others lived in similar positions; we fulfilled our duty, and those of you who know something of what official life is may well conceive the kind of life that was ours, with this difference: principals were held to a strict accountability for all the observances of life apart from pure official action. Our place was, perchance, a little more onerous than that which officials occupy among yourselves.

Age advanced, and we found our labors increasing and accumulating, but realized that at last the day would soon decline, the sun would no more shine upon the river's bank for us. The white flower from the blossoming tree that had shared our life had passed away from the realms of mortal life, leaving a vacancy, permit us to say, that none other ever filled. Time flowing on, the end came nearer and nearer still. We had no fear of the future; what Buddhist has? The present was occupied in the due fulfillment of the duties devolving upon us; the past was, comparatively, without regret, and so we faced the coming of the end with the calmness of perfect trust. And yet Christian apologists tell you that our people are so indifferent to death because they have no sense of what lies beyond it. This is an injustice that only partisanship can possibly excuse. We cannot claim to any great honor beyond our position of the Second Class that we have referred to; no great memory clings about us for the tasks we performed here on earth; and little thought we then of the complications and relationships that would little by little attach themselves to the land we yet love.

So the end at last came. One sweet, calm, beauteous eve, as the sun sank to rest behind the hills, the poor tired body that had been racked with fever's fires grew wondrous quiet; the leaping pulses, like excited, racing steeds, at last became still; a strange quiet, unlike aught that had ever before been felt, stole in upon us, and a delicious restful ease spoke of freedom from every ache and pain. There were friends around us, who, knowing that the end was coming, felt grieved to lose our visible presence, though fully trustful that it was only the outer garment that would cease to be amongst them. Then the quietness deepened still to a well-nigh solemn hush; as the sun sank lower and the rays of his departing glory flashed in through the open casement, it seemed that that shaft of light grew to a gleaming highway, reaching from the home wherein we lived up beyond the hills, above the glorious orb itself, beyond it into an azure blue that seemed as a shimmering coast-line, which, dimly perceived in the far distance, opened invitingly to the astonished gaze. And then when the glory of the sun was extinguished in the deepening of the evening, the highway vanished and the sea was gone; the coast-line disappeared, and the darkness, deepening to a black intensity, gradually descended.

Then, when the darkness had grown its deepest, and all outward sounds and sighs were hushed and lost, it seemed that the glory that had vanished came back again, but this time within the body, not outside thereof. This light increased in golden beauty pulsing with a quick brightness, flashing and darting like scintillating glories, until it seemed to flash right up before an inner face, and then flaming forth a moment in the glorious divinity of spiritual beauty, beyond all power of words to describe, it vanished. With its going there went all the material sensation and outward consciousness and life; a sleep, the deep untroubled quietness of the sleep of death, lay hold of the weary frame and nursed it to eternal rest.

How long in minutes or seconds, it would be impossible to say, but not so very long, this deep unconsciousness prevailed; and then a strange sensation of awakening life began to dawn upon the consciousness, and little by little we began to have a strange and yet familiar sensation. We felt that we were removed, but how or where it seemed that we were just too indifferent to discover. You who have been exceeding sick unto death's golden door, and in the height of some delirious fever have at last wholly lost consciousness, but have presently revived with the fever gone and the mad racing of the pulse quieted and still, lying there with a delicious ease upon you, a coolness in the blood you have not felt for many hours before, too indifferent to disturb the sweet repose, and enjoying it as something all beauteous and divine—you who have passed through these things can realize something of the languor and ease that burst over our consciousness as we returned to life and found presently that we had exchanged the lower life of earth for the upper life of the spirit, as you understand it to-day.

Presently the sound of voices in low murmur broke upon our ear, and soon we were able to gaze around us, and by our side we saw the father and the mother, the honorable parents whose excellent memories we had preserved and revered, whose gentleness and love had been to us as the summer sunshine out of winter's cold, as the warm rain of the early springtime to the bleak and parched earth. Their welcome to the new comer and words of affectionate regard were such that would in their sweet purity have revived the very dead themselves.

And then looking into the throng that greeted us, one sweet face that was to us, perhaps, fairer and better than all, met us with the old familiar smile, with the old sweet regard, and the wife that we had loved welcomed us with the warm affection that beats in every woman's heart, let the color of her skin be white or red or black or yellow. Her fair face and loving hands greeted us again, and have been from that time to this a loving inspiration that has grown brighter and sweeter as the times have rolled away.

Thus, friends, was our passage through the world upon the mortal side, the method of our departure from it, and the circumstances of our first entrance into the spirit life. What had we to fear? Nothing. The same wise providence that can order the lives of men may be trusted to order their careers beyond. While it is not needful that you altogether use your time for the worship of your departed ancestors, and should not lay too much stress upon what the future life may be, yet if you have any comprehension of the universal power of being, at least you can trust that that which does so well for you here on earth, will also be in your favor in the world beyond.

We found ourselves surrounded by our own people, by the old familiar circumstances, the old familiar faces, even the dwelling places like unto those of earth, but vastly brighter and superior to those we had known. Our travels, however, never took us beyond the Province where we were born, but all we had hitherto been familiar with stood there revealed to us again, beautified, and—shall we call it—spiritualized. And the old classics were there in wondrous collections; there were the spiritual counterparts of all and more than we had previously known, and their deeper meaning, more clearly brought out, seemed to shine the brighter and the fairer in the new atmosphere in which we read their precious tracings.

Life was quiet and happy, simple and restful, as it is for most tolerably well-ordered lives when they first enter into the second state. But presently for all such lives there begins an unrest. The soul of man calls for action, and man must be up and doing sooner or later; eternal pleasure will not satisfy the soul. Whither, then, should we direct our efforts, became the first inquiry. We counselled with our family and friends, with teachers whom we had known while on earth, and for a time were content to pursue studies in accord with the opinions distinctly and peculiarly belonging to our own country. But after a while we began to realize that, great as was our own land and numerous its people, there were other lands and other people who were part and parcel of the one great family, and the discovery dawned upon us that the rivalry and differences of States and nations would ultimately melt away, and in their place there would be one great family of life wherein each nation should be but as a single child. For us the thought is always that the State is but the amplification of the family, and that the authority should be more paternal than despotic. Then from the exalted plane of life we should extend that argument and say that the world's population should be but one great family also. And so the truth of the unity of interests, and the unity of purposes, that will yet dawn upon you and animate the family of the world, burst upon our mind and made the starting point of that mental expansion and spiritual advancement which we have earnestly and zealously tried from that time to this to present.

Some while after our entrance into the spirit-life, having gained these larger views of personal duty, and feeling that each thought was not our own but for the advantage of our fellows, we considered in what and how we could best serve the world from our own previous national standpoint?

On investigation we found that though our people were familiar with certain kinds of intercourse between the spirits of the departed and the inhabitants of earth, there was not that opportunity, by reason of what you would call the dead weight of ancient tradition resting upon them, to lift them out beyond what they were familiar with in this connection.

Our attention was then turned to the consideration of other countries, and we noticed where and how it might become possible for certain changes to be effected, not only in other countries but in our own country, especially by the instigation of outside agencies, and the removal of the evils that all old and concrete States suffer from. So, as a consequence of this, we began to counsel with spirits of other nations wiser than ourselves, when something like a hundred years ago we learned that a definite purpose was being evolved in certain sections of the spirit life for opening up again absolute communication with enlightened nations, as they were called, and the realm of the spiritual life itself.

You must understand, friends, and you must pardon the digression, that the coming of Modern Spiritualism some forty years ago on the material plane, was preceded by a, comparatively speaking, long and anxious period of observation and inquiry upon the part of enlightened spirits in the spirit-world, who carefully considered each step, examined every possibility, and, as wisely as they could, ultimately concerted upon the methods whereby the wondrous upheaval you are acquainted with should be projected into mortal life and work the strange results that you have seen it accomplish within the narrow compass of less than half one hundred years.

This was to us a most important undertaking; it inspired us and appealed to us, and we humbly urged our competency to be associated in some capacity with the great and glorious work that we foresaw would be ultimately accomplished. Our wish was granted, and we labored as a faithful subordinate with the hosts on the other side, and asked that we might find the road whereby we could become an active worker in the great enterprise soon to be launched.

In looking over the nations of civilization we determined that England would be the best and most favorable vantage ground for us to commence our labors upon, for reasons that are not pertinent to the present subject nor necessary to be placed before you. We undertook the labor from that point of view. You will remember we have already stated to you that we did not see it practicable to commence with our own nation, but as the English nation with others—the Portuguese and the French—have been for the past generations quietly infiltrating their customs and thought into the nation so long closed to them, we saw that, indirectly, we should be helping to bring on the storm which will yet break down every barrier of national seclusion, moral and spiritual barriers far more dangerous and difficult to be scaled and removed than the celebrated wall, of which you have heard so much, and which when removed would infiltrate the nation's life with a new power, and bring to life again all the latent excellencies, added to by the advantages of other nations, which shall make it once again a truly great and powerful people on the face of the globe. Hence, then, we took our course in the direction stated. To do this effectually it was necessary that we should become familiar with the habits and characteristics, thought and disposition, mental and spiritual achievements and desires of the Anglo Saxon speaking races. This led to an investigation wherein we were assisted by many bright minds resident in the spiritual world.

We have to pass this in review before you rapidly, and can at best deal only in general statements, for it would be impossible to enter into details in the story we have to tell, and we pray you, if it seems incomplete, not to lay it to our unwillingness to tell you more, but to our inability to bring all we would be glad to say to you into the time at our disposal.

So, when the movement was nearly ripe for giving to the world this movement of Modern Spiritualism, we searched the great metropolis of England through that we might find some agent or servant who should ultimately be plastic in our hands attuned for our purpose, and through which, as best we could, we should be enabled to accomplish the work we had before us. What was that work? You have heard us here, these ten months, plead for the unity of human life; you have heard us plead for the universality of right, for obedience to virtue, for intellectual, moral and spiritual culture, for the development of every noble aspiration, for obedience to the universal principles of life, and most of all for the removal of the fossilized superstitions which weigh the people down; you have heard us speak against official and ecclesiastical corruption, licentiousness, and vice and wrong, all too inadequately we know, but yet with all the power we could pour through the instrument we have used. We feel that we need scarcely tell you what the purpose was we had in view when we were seeking for an instrument over fifty years ago. The search was long and careful, and at last successful.

Before this man who stands before you was born, this man who for years has been the faithful servant of those who love the truth—in which proud position we are glad to stand—he who has been faithful in the day of small things, where the hail fell in cold showers about him and the cold winds of persecution beat pitilessly upon his face; when in poverty he struggled as his feet first turned up the hill that he has since with painful steps ascended before this modern thought was so favorably received as it is to-day; he whom we rejoice to say has for nearly twenty years been our faithful, honest and obedient servant—before he was born we foresaw the road which he would have to tread. Casting our influence upon the mother long before his birth into this life, we formed and shaped the psychical possibilities of his after years, so that when the time came for the ice to be broken the psychic waters should well up in a flood of usefulness, and there should be realized the fruits of the long preparation.

At first, in comparative luxury, surrounded with all that could make life agreeable, he appeared on the stage; but do you not know that all the best workers of the world are prepared by suffering and purified in tears for the labor that they have to undergo? So the early days of the genial surroundings vanished like an illusion of the senses, leaving only their roseate hue upon them, and the harsh pangs of poverty and all that poverty meant came upon him. He obtained an education that would not rank with the ordinary common school in your country; was buffeted from place to place on the billows of uncertainty and misfortune; it seemed that the life was going to be wrecked entirely and the young man would have no place or use in the world at all. But all these were but preliminary and preparatory for purposes that we on the spirit-side were directing to their proper issue, and in due time the ice was melted, the waters welled up, and the medium, as the world says, dawns upon the stage. Then, finding care and comfort from the spirit-side and loving friends upon the mortal side, and one, also, who through the weary years of labor has stood a constant comfort, the loving, faithful wife eased the path and rendered the years of toil smoother than they could have been otherwise.

By this agency and these means we entered into the great work that we realized the necessity of doing well nigh one hundred years ago. You who have heard us, and almost all the civilized countries of the world where our teachings and our words have gone, must be the judges of the value of the work that we have essayed to do. The very most, in all humility, we would say concerning it is that we have endeavored to do the best we could.

One little incident, perhaps of interest to you, may be here stated. There are a great number of you in this large audience who are acquainted with the spirit who controls our medium, who is known to you by the name of "The Strolling Player." This is a friend of ours; yea, more than that, one we are proud to call our brother. In sorrow and in anguish we encountered him many years ago, just after his entrance into the spiritual state. Life had been hard and troublous with him; fate had seemed to turn against him at every step until the ending of his life. Seeing that there was that within him that was truly great as there is within you all, we did the little that we could to relieve the gloom under which he labored, and to bring to life again those excellencies of character which those who know him upon our side esteem him so highly for. And he, for some seventeen years, has been the faithful spirit laborer working with us, and bearing far more active part in the labors of these controls and lectures, as you call them, than you are at all aware of. He has been a most faithful worker, a most honest spirit, a most loving and true-minded friend.

There are others with us, for we cannot of course claim the honor of being the sole cause of all that we have placed before you from time to time; in a word, there are some twelve of us who are associated with this medium, and by the varying characters we severally possess, and the different subjects of information which we have made our study, we are able to meet the great varieties of questions and issues that are placed before us for our consideration.

Here, then, friends, you have in rough, in very brief outline, placed before you our career, and our relationship to this great movement in which we bear so small a part. Now what is the lesson of it all? It is this: That what we have been able to do is possible for you; yea! more than that, for the advantages of spiritual culture to-day are so great, as compared with the advantages of the same culture a few years ago, that you can well nigh become even as gods yourselves. We do not pretend, nor would we like you to understand, that all the matter we have so easily related to you to-night has been accomplished without struggle or without effort. Growth in the spiritual world is as much a matter of work and effort as it is among yourselves. There is no royal road to knowledge; whatsoever you wish to know you must labor to understand. Understanding is the basis of knowledge, and understanding is the result of patient inquiry, and inquiry means mental effort. We have had our failures, and there are cross marks upon the record where we have stumbled in our efforts to reach something that then was just beyond us. But in spite of all we have steadily gone gratefully, acknowledging the help that wise and patient friends have given us from time to time.

What is our home? you will ask us; wherein is it adorned, and by whom is it blest?

That home is just as real and actual as a home would be among yourselves. The old peculiarities of architecture we were so familiar with that have come down from the earliest times, wherein what has been described as the tent-line gives you a striking curve, is still retained, but this has been softened and spiritualized, and, as we think, improved, but still the peculiarity is perceptible, the nationality is well disclosed. "What, have you been in the spirit-world so long and have not outgrown your national predilections?" Why should we? Is not each great division of the world a common family? and are there not common ties and instincts that bind the members of these race divisions into somewhat of harmony and unity? Why should we turn from the household that has been the centre of so much felicity merely because you have been transported to another province, to a higher country? May there not be within the spiritual side of life something deeper and tenderer still that you, as members of the American race, shall feel when you enter into the spiritual world? There is a spiritual side to this race that you shall love deeper and tenderer still when you have entered it. Nay! the very flag that you have worshiped, and which we might just as reasonably say was a species of idolatry upon your part, as some people tell us that our reverence for the Imperial Standard is a species of idolatry upon our part—this very flag, we say, with its red, white and blue, with the halo of stars glistening upon its field, will, when seen in the spirit-life, under spiritual conditions, have a wealth of meaning, a world of beauty that you have never dreamed of before. You shall find it disassociated from all of carnage and of blood and of hatred, freed altogether and purged entirely from the painful memories of turmoil, political strife and war. In the higher and better life you will find it only associated with the loftier aspirations of a noble and generous people like yourselves.

So you see when the spiritual side is read, when men dive beneath the surface, the gods are sometimes wiser than you think them, and may lead you into more pleasant pathways than you can conceive of; and leading you through outward symbols into interior realities, may often give you something which at the time may seem altogether puerile or material, but which, after experience has come to you, causes you to understand that the outward sign was only the external significance of the inner and enduring reality.

The partner that we have referred to, the twin soul we might also call her, engaged in an occupation that reflects, if you will allow us to say so, some considerable credit upon those who indulge in it. How many of the children of this world pass into the spirit state untrained, misshapen in mind and body, lacking those sweet affections which might have sustained their lives, deprived of all the loving care that ought to have been theirs, these little waifs upon the seas of spiritual life are not without care and guardianship in the realms beyond; hundreds of wise and genial souls take them in hand, and in schools and safe retreats, and in pleasant places and useful colleges build them up, and make them strong in form, in mind, in virtue and in soul. With this task this good friend of ours finds pleasant occupation still, and as the task is not likely soon to end, because so many need its fulfillment, and are constantly urged forward into the worlds beyond, in such endeavor will she and hundreds of those like her find plenty to engage heart and mind for many generations to come.

In brief, then, friends, to weary you no longer with the recital so peculiarly personal, with but little merit save as the simple statement of a few brief experiences, we will now bring our remarks to a close. Our object has not been to give you opinions or fine-spun arguments or oratory concerning the great beyond, but only just to tell you what one of those who are in the rank and file of this great work of yours has passed through, and what such a one has endeavored to accomplish. We give you thanks most sincere and hearty for your patient hearing of what we have placed before you. Sometimes, perhaps, we have tried your patience and disturbed your friendship by remarks and propositions that may have sounded over bold and somewhat ungenerous; but we have so hearty and sincere a love for truth, and all that truth implies, that you will excuse us for our zeal if at times we seem to have overstepped the bounds of patience in your hearts and minds.

We have been asked to tell you what was our name. The name that we are known by, friends, is that of Tien Sien Tie, as before stated, a mandarin of the second class, who strove as best he could to do his duty to those dependent on him—to his father and his family while here on earth; who by patient effort and earnest desire to master the necessities of the labor about to be undertaken endeavored to prepare himself to speak to those older peoples of the great principles of truth and purity and justice, of those high interests of wisdom and of progress which, by realization in your hearts and lives, shall set noble examples to the peoples of the world to-day.

With this, then, we have done; no more need we tell you now, save that in your favor and loving regard we repose in confidence, feeling you will take this simple recital of our experiences, imperfect, as already stated, in that spirit of sincerity that prompts it, and when the end shall come for you, and the deep darkness shall descend upon you, and your feet shall stand upon the strand beyond it, may it be our privilege, as surely it would be our pleasure, to grasp your hands and bid you welcome to the golden country beyond.

But let us ask you one thing ere you leave: remember that black or white, red or yellow, no matter where the man may be from or where he lives, or what his faith may be, he is the child of the one great paternal principle, one embodiment of the great divinity of being, a member of the universal human family made up of its infinite diversities in character. We plead for justice always; the faith of the yellow-skinned is as dear to him as is the faith of your own hearts and minds to you; and by-and-bye, when you read, apart from partisan zeal, the history of the great country from which we have drawn our mortal birth, you may, perchance, do it greater justice, render it more honor, and feel that, after all, the past and present, in their one great desire to attain to justice and to live righteously and to reach the kingdom beyond in safety, have both been animated and are animated by one common state of sympathies and impulses.

September Magazines.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY presents the opening chapters of a serial novel by Arthur Sherburne Hardy, "Passe Rose," which takes its name from that of the heroine, a French girl of remarkable beauty. Miss Murfree ("Charles Egbert Craddock") furnishes a generous installment of her story "The Despot of Broomsedge Cove," and Frances E. Wadleigh supplies a short story, "Mistah Fahmah." "A Week in Wales" is a series of fresh travel sketches by Mrs. Julia C. R. Dorr. Mrs. Lillie B. Chace Wyman adds a new paper to her Studies of Factory Life, this time giving several touching instances of hardship among the women. "The First Year of the Continental Congress" (by John Fiske) describes with brevity and distinctness the Lexington and Concord fight, the Battle of Bunker Hill, and the character of Washington. H. C. Merwin furnishes an interesting paper on Daniel Drawbaugh, a claimant of the original invention of the telephone. Abram S. Isaacs contributes "Stories from the Rabbis," and William Cranston Lawton adds a second and concluding paper on "The Prometheus of Æschylus." The number also contains other articles not here mentioned, together with careful reviews, the Contributors' Club, and several pages of brief descriptions of new books. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., publishers, Boston.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.—The opening chapters of a new serial story, "Comrades Once," by Thomas Keyworth, are given, and new portions of the one in progress, "For the Good of the Family." In an interesting and instructive manner George Howell, M. P., replies to the inquiry, "What is a Royal Commission?" following which an amusing experience is described of "How I Tried to Write a Story." A family doctor gives his views on "Ventilation and Health." There is "A Gossip on Folk Music," and much else to interest and instruct in everyday practical affairs, the contents throughout being illustrated with numerous engravings. New York: Cassell & Co.

Banner Correspondence.

Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS.—M. L. Amory writes: "The other day when the question was brought up of sending a special Sunday excursion train from Minneapolis to the cyclone-devastated towns of St. Cloud and Sauk Rapids, the proceeds to be devoted to succoring those wounded and made homeless by the storm, a minister arose and protested against thus breaking the Sabbath. And allow me to say that he only acted consistently with the course pursued by nine-tenths of the ministry, when he thus denounced a benevolent act because it would break through a rule established by the *mis*interpretation of a divine command.

From the earliest times the priesthood have been not the teachers and reformers and developers of the human race, but clogs on the wheels of progress, the crystallizers of truth, the 'so far shalt thou go and no further' element in civilization, the stone wall against which the waves of unfolding civilization had to beat fiercely to make a breach. There are grand exceptions to the rule of bigotry in the ministry, I admit, but they are in the minority, and if priests and ministers had had absolute power in the control of human affairs, the first reformer would have been disgraced and his reform annihilated, while the race would have stood still in its development, and we should not have been where we stand to-day. Read history and see who it was that instituted persecutions against the Protestant Reformers: it was the priest-power of the established Catholic Church. And what did the Protestant ministers do when they came to power? They burned, imprisoned, drove out and cursed in their turn all those who dared to think new thoughts and preach new ideas. Who were among the bitterest opponents of the Abolitionists? The ministers, who should have been the ones to cry down slavery, but who instead upheld the curse from their pulpits, and made the Word of God itself speak in favor of slavery.

The ministry were shocked when it was proposed to open our museums and libraries on Sunday, and Sunday papers they are still fighting. Sunday theatres of course create utter horror and detestation in their bosoms, and even week-day performances are in their eyes marked with the prints of the cloven hoof. It may be said that much of this opposition comes from the laity, not the ministers, but it would not be found in the people if it was not planted there and cherished by the ministry. The parishioners look up to their pastors and accept a good deal of what their spiritual advisers tell them. These cry down drinking saloons, yet they try to destroy all antidotes to those dispensaries of poison. The skating-rink craze met with bitter opposition from two sources—the ministry and the liquor interest; from the former because of its so-called 'evil tendencies,' and from the latter because it injured the liquor business. And so the Church that might have elevated the amusement and made it a powerful weapon against intemperance, by giving it countenance and support, rallied against it, denounced it, shunned it, and only succeeded in increasing its evil tendencies thereby. If you have a piece of ground that would raise a very comfortable crop of vegetables, and weeds persist in springing up, to the detriment of the vegetables, would you go a mile away and curse the ground, the vegetables and the weeds, or would you remain on the spot and carefully dig up the weeds and feed the vegetables? The ministers treat the amusement field in the former style, and then point to the stubble and witch-grass with an 'I told you so,' never stopping to ask themselves if they are not partly to blame for their neglect. Men, women and children must have amusement, and no human being has a right to denounce a recreation unless it is really immoral and debasing. Every church, hall and school house should be opened Sunday for free concerts and lectures, where the lower classes may find amusement and instruction; theatres should be open for good moral plays, and parks laid out in every city in the universe and made attractive by music and all possible harmless devices. And under the head of harmless devices I class base ball, lawn tennis, croquet, cricket. Do I shock you by advocating such Sunday games? Which is worse—to be interested and amused on Sunday with such pastimes, or, for lack of them, drift into drinking saloons, gambling hells and places of immorality? There are persons who spend six days out of the seven in toil, and have neither time nor strength for instruction or amusement save on Sunday. And Sunday what is there to interest or amuse? There are the church services; but the great mass of the very poor never go inside a church. There is driving; it costs money to drive. Walking; that is all very well if one is able, in pleasant weather, but scarcely agreeable on cold, bleak, stormy days. Our Sundays are stripped of everything lovely or pleasurable for the poor, and made unattractive, stupid, bare; and the means we take to make them holy, the laws we pass to render the Sabbath a day of order, piety and seemliness, only serve to defeat their own ends. 'The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath,' and yet we bow down before this seventh day as if it was some despot to whom we must render abject obedience, in whose presence it is a crime to be light, joyous, natural. The seventh day was appointed as a day of rest for man; but torpor is not rest, any more than activity is necessarily labor. Change of employment, of scene, thoughts and sounds, is the truest recreation, and the best friend of the poor man is he who beats down old prejudices regarding a day that can be made more holy in its influence by music, lectures, theatrical performances and out-of-door and in-door games, than it has ever been made by Puritanical denial and mistaken piety. We can make Sunday a great lever for elevating the masses mentally, physically and morally; but we are not utilizing it; we are holding back because some one tells us that it would be very wrong to utilize the Sabbath at all. And so the craving for amusement that would be satisfied by innocent pleasures, if they were at hand, not finding them, sates itself with guilty ones. A starving man will eat good in preference to tainted meat, but if he cannot get the good he will take the bad. Can we blame him for becoming tainted like the meat he has eaten, when we placed none other by him?"

BRAINERD.—Morris S. Liden writes that while on an excursion to an improvised Spiritualist camp-gathering, a lady handed him her gloves, to avoid the care of them herself. He put them in his pocket, and forgot for several days they were in his possession. Being in her company at a subsequent time he thought of the gloves, and going for them, made them into a package, and handing it to her proposed to test her psychometric powers. This she did; some of her reading was applicable to herself, and was the cause of much merriment and satisfaction to those who became knowing to the facts.

Michigan.

ADRIAN.—M. L. Sherman writes: "Scriptures are the writing of scribes; there are as many Scriptures as there are scribes to write them. I do not believe they are all inspired by one being, if that being is a God. There are no two minds exactly alike, and no two Scriptures could be inspired alike to suit the varying minds who would read them. Each being can make his or her mark, or write his or her own Scripture, according to the dictating of the inherent spirit within. Were it possible for two beings to have been constituted exactly alike, then nature would have repeated herself, which in my opinion is an impossibility, for progression would forbid it. There are no two things in the infinite realms of nature which can remain still long enough to be repeated, for every moment is replete with varying changes.

The lowest as well as the highest forms of life are writing their scriptures upon the universal tablets of nature, and their instructions will be read and comprehended by unnumbered billions yet unborn. Brooks, rivers, seas, and old ocean, are teeming with infusoria which are writing their scriptures of truth for the instruction of those who are seeking for wisdom. The animalcule through the various stratifications of the rock-ribbed crust of the earth, have been writing their historical scriptures for untold ages, which will be read and understood by the geologist of the future. The elements of the air, fire and water, when comprehended by a more advanced spiritual intellect, will be seen to be composed of living entities performing their evolution according to their development, and writing their scriptures with unerring precision. Every tree that spreads its branches over the earth, every leaf that unfolds itself in the sunshine, every flower that exhales its fragrance upon the air, and every spire of grass pointing upward, has its scribe, who writes in a language which the students of nature can read and understand. The animal kingdom abounds with scribes who write pages and chapters of interesting history which the discerning comprehend and profit by. Each human being is a scribe, writing scriptures to be read through endless time by advanced intelligences.

Not only has man an eternal Scripture to write, but unnumbered billions of atoms bound together by the law of affinity composing our world have their Scriptures to write; and what a Scripture for economy and power! Our world is composed of the aggregated entities of life, and as she daily revolves upon her axis, writes a paragraph on her page, and she writes three hundred and sixty-five of them in her yearly revolution around her parent sun. How many pages have been written? and how many more will she write to complete the infinite volume? Her scribes inform us that the earth is eight thousand miles in diameter, and nearly twenty-five thousand miles in circumference; that she is about ninety-three millions of miles from the sun, and moves around that body at the rate of sixty-eight thousand miles per hour, carrying within her fold her child, the moon.

It appears from the writing of her scribes that her sun has a large family of brothers and sisters and grandchildren, called the sun's system. The sun is nearly fourteen hundred thousand times the size of the earth, and she moves with her whole planetary family around her parent sun once in eighteen million of our years; what a historical, scientific-scripture her scribes must write while she is performing one of her yearly revolutions around her central luminary! From astronomical calculation it is represented that there have been discovered over one hundred millions of suns, with their planetary families; and all of these grand bodies of suns and their untold numbers of worlds, perform one of their yearly revolutions around—to us—some everlasting centre. The size of some of the suns which have been calculated are beyond our limited conception. The sun Lyra in the southern constellation is said to be thirty-three million two hundred and seventy five thousand miles in diameter.

Let us compare some of the Scriptures written by nature's scribes with those written by the scribes of the Old and New Testament, said to have been inspired by their God, so profitable for instruction in wisdom. One of the Christian scribes, Thomas Dick, represents the throne of their God's kingdom to be located at the center of universal worlds. Around it, he says, ten thousand systems of worlds revolve, and untold billions of intelligences minister before him; he says that it would take a cannon ball, flying with the velocity as when first discharged from the cannon's mouth, over five millions of years to reach one of the nearest suns. What, then, must be the distance to their God's throne at the center of universal worlds? Dick, with other scribes, informs us that this infinite God left his central throne, and came down to talk with the scribe Moses on Mount Sinai for forty days and nights to twaddle about the government of the Jews.

The New Testament scribes inform us that this same Jewish God intends at no distant day to abdicate his central kingdom with its celestial beauties, and come down with an entire New Jerusalem to this obscure part of the universe, in order to set up business in partnership with his saints on earth, after a general resurrection day—in raising them from their graves, renewing their old bodies and presenting them with harps and crowns and arranging them in robes of white for future exhibition. According to the description given of the distance from the central kingdom to our world, had he started his New Jerusalem on the morning that the stars sang together and the elder sons of their God shouted for joy at the production of a new born world, and had moved with the velocity of light, he would not have performed a thousandth part of his journey yet. What kind of visions did those scribes of Jesus have, who saw him ascend up to their heaven and seat himself on the right-hand of their God? In my opinion the scribes of nature have written their scriptures more truthfully than the scribes of the Old or New Testament, even though inspired by their God. The scribes of nature write with unerring inspiration, that which bears the test of reason and close analysis."

Massachusetts.

LOWELL.—Ed. S. Varney writes: "It is maintained by some that after the spirit has left the mortal body and taken up its abode in heaven, it has no cognizance of the doings of its earthly loved ones; the reason assigned being that the spirit, if it witnessed the trials and sorrows of those left behind, could not be happy. Such reasoning is specious and superficial. To admit the soundness of this argument we should be forced to grant the unnatural premise that the elements of affection, of zealous interest, of love—those immortal qualities which form the very fibre of the real man or woman—were utterly annihilated, giving place to unfeeling, stony indifference. If, when we reach the better-land, we carry with us, as of course we must, our divinely inherent loves and memories, we were debarred from seeing or influencing the dear bereaved, the agony of suspense, of anxiety, would be far greater even than that of actual knowledge in case the knowledge was of a sorrowful nature. Besides, the shining ones above may realize better than we of earth that the dark shadows through which we are passing are needed for our attaining a higher spiritual level; and so their tears of sympathy glisten under the bright hues of the rainbow of hope as they reflect that happiness, merely, is by no means the sole aim of life; that 'suffering is the grand unfolding element of the soul, needed by all;' and cheered and encouraged our angel guardians doubtless are at the thought that there is an Eternal Power for good which will make it all right in the end; which will eventually mold the hard discipline of earthly toilers into results of surpassing sweetness and joy. The day will surely come, oh, mortals and immortals, when 'God will wipe away all tears from your eyes.'"

NEWTON.—A correspondent residing in this place speaks highly, from personal experience, of the medial powers (trance and business) of Mrs. M. E. Walker, of 1469 Washington street, Boston, whom she has ever found to be reliable in statement to her patrons, and sincere in her devotion to the angel-world.

Florida.

PALATKA.—J. A. Hall, M. D., writes: "I desire to again call the attention of all Spiritualists wishing to spend the winter months in Florida to the advantages of Palatka. As to health it has no superior in the State, or the world. And as I stated last spring in reference to a winter camp-meeting, we have every facility (except the necessary amount of money) to establish one of the finest winter resorts in the world. The country just west of our city is high dry pine land, and can be purchased at from forty to fifty dollars per acre, and in a few years will be worth five hundred per acre. By forming a syndicate we can very soon have a beautiful camp, and owners of property could camp there all winter, and live as cheap as in any northern city. The First Spiritual Society of Palatka is full of hope, and though few in numbers we are full of zeal. If we can get enough interested in the camp-meeting we can very soon be in a prosperous condition. Palatka has every facility we could ask for water works, gas works; in due time, we will have street cars, and can have the track extended to the camp ground, and the water at a small cost. All who are or may be interested in this enterprise will please correspond with me, Lock Box 360, and I will give them prompt answers. I think this the most available place for a good camp this side of the Pacific slope. Mediums of all phases, and especially for independent slate writing, I think can do well here."

New York.

NEW YORK CITY.—Mrs. I. Cotton writes: "At Lake Pleasant, Aug. 16th, Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant held a séance at which I was present, and handed her a ring to psychometrize. The moment of taking it she threw it upon the floor saying, 'I am bitten,' and ran from where she stood, saying 'I am bitten by a rat.' One gentleman on supposing a squirrel had run into the camp and bitten the medium, arose to drive the animal out. Mrs. Conant, under control, then stated that my mother, over forty years ago, upon putting her hand into a bag of nuts was bitten upon her finger on which was the ring. Mrs. Conant's finger was then turned to show the condition in which my mother's finger from that cause became permanently fixed. All of which was true. This test had never before been given me; I had not thought about it for years. There was no possible way that Mrs. Conant could have known about these facts, as we were strangers."

Rhode Island.

NEWPORT.—John C. Peckham, though far advanced in years, continues to take an active interest in making known the truths of Spiritualism, offering his services to speak in its behalf whenever an opportunity presents itself.

WHAT ONE WOMAN HAS DONE.

The Red Cross of Europe and America.

The Story of Miss Clara Barton and the Red Cross Association.

(From the New York Sun.)

[Concluded.]

What is the Red Cross? And whence comes the potency of this symbol, whereby armies are held at bay and thousands of dollars are raised as by magic, and sent to the suffering, whether friends or foes?

The Red Cross is a confederation of relief societies in different countries, acting under the Geneva Convention, whose aim is to ameliorate the condition of wounded soldiers on land and sea. The idea of such a society was conceived by Monsieur Henri Durant, a Swiss gentleman, who saw the battle of Solferino, and became impressed with the need of more efficient means for ameliorating the condition consequent upon war.

The whole of Europe is marshalled under the banner of the Red Cross, and wherever the din of war is heard is planted the banner that bears the blessed sign of relief. The ensign waves in Siberia, on the Chinese frontier, in Algeria, Egypt and Oceanica. "The Society of Utility" was the International Committee of the Red Cross, with M. Moynier as president, a wealthy philanthropist of unlimited means, great earnestness of purpose and integrity of character.

The first act of a country after giving its adhesion to the treaty is the establishment of a national society to act in accordance with others as auxiliary societies, the purpose of their members being to perfect themselves in every branch of humanitarian work connected with the relief of the sufferings contingent upon war. Their second object is the raising of funds for the sudden needs of the society, and a yearly fee is exacted of each member.

During the Franco-Prussian war the sums devoted to the Red Cross relief were simply fabulous, and at its close, when accounts were settled, large amounts still remained in the treasury.

Another power of the Red Cross is its reception of supplies from neutral countries, which could not be sent by Governments themselves. England furnished fifteen million francs, and in eighty days sent twelve thousand boxes of supplies to France through the Red Cross, while the United States could send no succor to her old ally.

Owing to the isolation of the United States from warring nations; to the fact that Red Cross literature was written only in foreign languages, and was little known to the people, the United States was the last country to come into confederation, and our national society is scarcely six years old. On her return from Europe Miss Barton determined to present the subject to Congress in such a way that they might understand its value and grandeur. Accordingly she translated the literature, explained the treaty, and at last, after countless disappointments and brave endeavors, the bill was considered through the instrumentality of President Garfield.

Not quite understanding the principles of the Red Cross, Congress sent for Miss Barton to come and explain it, and there, before the assembled law-makers of the Republic, that earnest, inspired woman placed the signification of the organization so clearly, so impressively, that before night the bill had passed both Houses and received the President's signature.

To President Garfield was offered the presidency of the society, since abroad the crowned heads and rulers of the land are its officers, of which the wife of the late Kaiser William is a noble example, but, realizing that the best candidate was its founder, he nominated Miss Barton to fill the place.

This, then, is the purpose of the Red Cross; but Miss Barton, of whom Sumner once said, "She has the talent of a statesman, the command of a general, and the heart and hand of a woman," recognized that from our geographical position we are far less liable to the disturbances of war than the nations of Europe, and also that no other country is more subject to overpowering national calamities, plagues, famine, fire, floods, drought, and disastrous storms, than are we. Seldom a year passes that the nation is not shaken from sea to sea by the shock of some sudden horror, in alleviation of which men thrust their hands into their pockets and fling money to they know not whom, to be sent they know not where or how; and women in their eagerness and sympathy beg in the streets and rush into fairs, working day and night, to the neglect of other duties and the peril of their health in the future, to obtain money for suffering humanity. Often the generosity of the people provides too abundantly, and the funds, if left in dishonest hands, are never heard of, and if in honest ones, are flung recklessly to the people, even after their wants are supplied.

Miss Barton's clear mind formulated this principle: Let the Red Cross of America be authorized to provide for the relief of national calamities; let it be a medium through which funds can be sent to sufferers in disasters too great to be relieved by local measures, and by people trained to know the needs and to understand the alleviation of great suffering. As Miss Barton expresses it, "let it be a calamity fire engine, always fired up and ready, and when the note of need sounds, the collars drop on the horses' necks and away they fly to the rescue. When the fire is out, though, the big engine hastens home, not wasting time to sprinkle the streets or clear away the rubbish." To the wisdom of her theory the sufferers of the Mississippi floods, of the Michigan fires, and the Texas drought can testify. Ready on the instant with food, clothing and money, $175,000 being spent in four months in the Mississippi Valley. Quick to comprehend the needs and know the relief required, she wastes no time, but flies to the rescue, accompanied usually by her faithful friend and field agent, Dr. Hubbel, of Washington, and so quickly and quietly accomplishes her mission and is gone that comparatively few people know aught of the society she represents.

After some deliberation, the International Council accepted this addition to its purpose, under the name of the "American Amendment," and the motto of the American Society is, "Relief in war, famine, pestilence, and other calamities."

"If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?"

The world-wide reputation of Prof. Alfred R. Wallace as one in the foremost ranks of scientists imparts an added strength and value to the clear elucidation and masterly advocacy of the truths of Spiritualism given by him in his lecture having for its theme "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?" published in a pamphlet of twenty-four pages by Colby & Rich, and supplied at the very low rate of 5 cents a single copy, thirteen for 50 cents, or thirty for $1.00. Let it do its work; buy it and circulate it.

☞ Prof. Phelps, of Andover, having endeavored to inaugurate a new crusade on the old-time "Satanic" plane, thinking people will do well to read that pertinent work by Allen Putnam, Esq., entitled, "WITCHCRAFT OF NEW ENGLAND EXPLAINED BY MODERN SPIRITUALISM"; Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, have it on sale.

SUPERFLUOUS DEVICES.

Who but a man bereft of sense would think
To prop the sky, and thus prevent its fall?
Or stop Niagara at its very brink
By the erection of a mud-built wall?
Or stretch a chain across the boisterous sea,
To force it into slumberous repose?
Or regulate the law of gravity,
Lest chaos came, all order to foreclose?
And who but one demented will contend
That Truth, unaided by external force,
Successfully her cause cannot defend,
But must to carnal weapons have recourse?
That in religion reason is no guide?
That Liberty to License is allied?

WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

Why not locate at Niagara a tower a few thousand feet high, and with turbine wheels at its base generate a current of, say, 100 volts and 100,000 amperes, and with that drive one gigantic arc lamp on the tower, and by the irradiation light the whole State of New York and part of Canada?

☞ We are indebted to Colby & Rich, of Boston, for a copy of "A Review of the Report of the Seybert Commission, appointed by the University of Pennsylvania to investigate Modern Spiritualism." The pamphlet is issued under the authority of the American Spiritualist Alliance.—Saratoga (N. Y.) Eagle.

SPIRITUALIST LECTURERS.

MRS. N. K. ANDROSS, Delton, Wis.
MRS. R. AUGUSTA ANTHONY, Albion, Mich.
MRS. M. C. ALLEN, Barton Landing, Vt.
WM. H. ANDREWS, M. D., Cedar Falls, Ia.
C. FANNIE ALLYN, Stoneham, Mass.
JAMES MADISON ALLEN, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. NELLIE J. T. BRIGHAM, Colerain, Mass.
MRS. E. H. BRITTEN, Cheetham Hill, Manchester, Eng.
MRS. R. W. SCOTT BRIGGS, 18 Aiken street, Utica, N. Y.
BISHOP A. BEALS, 86 State street, Albany, N. Y.
ADDIE L. BALLOU, 759 Market st., San Francisco, Cal.*
DR. JAS. K. BAILEY, P. O. Box 123, Scranton, Pa.
G. H. BROOKS, 802 Hoyt street, East Saginaw, Mich.
J. R. BUCELL and MRS. DR. BUCELL, Indianapolis, Ind.
MRS. A. P. BROWN, St. Johnsbury Center, Vt.
MRS. S. A. BYTHES, Mill & Adams sts., Dorchester, Mass.*
J. FRANK BAXTER, 181 Walnut street, Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. L. E. BAILEY, Battle Creek, Mich.*
MRS. ABBY N. BURNHAM, 50 Appleton street, Boston.*
MRS. EMMA J. BULLENE, Denver, Col.
MISS LIZZIE D. BAILEY, Louisville, Ky.
MISS L. BARNICOAT, 175 Tremont st., Boston, Mass.*
PROF. J. R. BUCHANAN, 6 James street, Boston, Mass.
MRS. ELLEN M. BOLLES, Eagle Park, Providence, R. I.
MISSES C. BLINKHORN, 23 Concord Place, Cincinnati, O.
MRS. H. MORSE-BAKER, Granville, N. Y.
JAMES A. BLISS, Elmwood Place, O.
MRS. S. E. W. BISHOP, 540 High street, Oshkosh, Wis.
A. B. BROWN, Worcester, Mass.
MRS. NELLIE S. BAADE, Capac, Mich.*
WARREN CHASE, Cobden, Ill.
DEAN CLARKE, care Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HETTIE CLARK, Onset Bay, Mass.
GEORGE W. CARPENTER, Kendallville, Ind.
MRS. MARIETTA F. CROSS, W. Hampstead, N. H.
MRS. BELLE A. CHAMBERLAIN, Eureka, Cal.
DR. JAMES COOPER, Bellefontaine, O.
A. C. COTTON, Vineland, N. J.
ERBEN COBB, Hyde Park, Mass.
JAMES R. COCKE, 17 Shawmut Avenue, Boston, Mass.
MRS. LORA S. CRAIG, Keene, N. H.
MRS. A. E. CUNNINGHAM, 459 Tremont street, Boston.
J. W. CADWELL, 401 Center street, Meriden, Conn.
MRS. E. B. CRADDOCK, Concord, N. H.
MRS. ADDIE W. CROSSETT, Waterbury, Vt.
MRS. L. A. COFFIN, Park street, Onset, Mass.
W. J. COLVILLE, 247 Ogden Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
A. F. DOTY, Ilion, Herkimer Co., N. Y.
MRS. C. A. DELAFORLE, Hartford, Ct.
MRS. S. DICK, care Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.*
MRS. CARRIE E. DOWNER, Baldwinsville, N. Y.*
ANSON DUGLIE, Chesterfield, Mass.
CARRIE C. VAN DUZEE, Geneva, O.
CHARLES DAWBARN, 463 West 23d st., New York, N. Y.
MRS. S. A. JESMER-DOWNS, North Springfield, Vt.*
JOHN N. EAMES, Boston, Mass.
J. L. ENOS, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.
MISS S. LIZZIE EWER, Portsmouth, N. H.
EDGAR W. EMERSON, 240 Lowell st., Manchester, N. H.
O. A. EDGERLY, 7 Washington st., Newburyport, Mass.
J. WM. FLETCHER, care Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.
MRS. CLARA A. FIELD, 50 Carendon street, Boston, Mass.*
MRS. MARY L. FRENCH, Down's Island Harbor, Mass., box 98.
GEORGE A. FULLER, Dover, Mass.*
NETTIE M. P. FOX, Ottumwa, Ia.
MRS. M. H. FULLER, Saratoga, Santa Clara Co., Cal.
E. B. FAIRFIELD, Stoneham, Mass.
P. A. FIELD, Bernardston, Mass.
MRS. ADDIE F. FRYE, Fort Scott, Kan.
DR. H. P. FAIRFIELD, Box 547, Rockland, Me.
MRS. SUE H. FALES, 11 Pond st., Cambridgeport, Mass.
N. S. GREENLEAF, Lowell, Mass.
SARAH GRAVES, Grand Rapids, Mich.
MISS LESSIE N. GOODELL, 63 High street, Norwich, Ct.
GORSLINE GARDNER, 18 Jones st., Rochester, N. Y.*
DR. E. G. GRANVILLE, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS E. M. GLEASON, Geneva, Ohio.
MRS. A. M. GLADING, Box 62, Doylestown, Pa.*
LYMAN C. HOWE, Fredonia, N. Y.
MRS. S. A. HORTON, Galveston, Tex.
J. H. HARTER, Auburn, N. Y.*
DR. E. B. HOLDEN, North Clarendon, Vt.
MRS. F. O. HYZER, 433 E. Baltimore st., Baltimore, Md.
MRS. L. HUTCHISON, Owensville, Cal.
MRS. M. A. C. HEATH, Bethel, Vt.
ANNIE C. TOBEY HAWKS, Memphis, Tenn.
ZELLA S. HASTINGS, East Whately, Mass.
MATTIE E. HULL, 601 East Locust street, Des Moines, Ia.
JENNIE B. HAGAN, South Framingham, Mass.*
C. H. HARDING, 3 Glenwood street, Boston Highlands.
F. A. HEATH, 27 Lawrence street, Charlestown, Mass.
MRS. M. J. HENDEE, San Francisco, Cal.
M. F. HAMMOND, Northport, L. I., N. Y.*
MRS. HATTIE W. HILDRUTH, Worcester, Mass.
W. A. HALE, 46 Russell street, Charlestown, Mass.*
ANTHONY HIGGINS, 19 East 23d street, New York.
S. HAINEBACH, cor. 15th and Plum streets, Cincinnati, O.
MRS. M. CARLISLE IRELAND, 3 Moreland Terrace, Boston.
MRS. EMMA HOLLAND, 36 Elm street, Cincinnati, O.
SUSIE M. JOHNSON, Los Angeles, Cal.
DR. W. R. JOSCELYN, Santa Cruz, Cal.
MRS. DR. J. A. JOSCELYN, Santa Cruz, Cal.
DR. P. T. JOHNSON, Box 746, Coldwater, Mich.
MRS. EMMA JACKSON, Amherst, Mass.
MRS. A. E. KING, 258 Shawmut Avenue, Boston, Mass.*
O. P. KELLOGG, East Tromboli, Ashtabula Co., O.
MRS. R. G. KIMBALL, Lebanon, N. H.
J. W. KENYON, 54 Bostwick street, Grand Rapids, Mich.
D. M. KING, Manila Station, O.
MRS. INEZ A. KIMBALL, Onset, Mass.
MRS. M. C. KNIGHT, Fulton, Oswego Co., N. Y.*
G. W. KATES, Greenville, Darke Co., O.*
MRS. ZADA BROWN-KATES, Greenville, Darke Co., O.
MRS. F. A. LOGAN, 1624 Curtis street, Denver, Col.
CHARLES H. LELAND, Hayden Row, Mass.
MRS. R. S. LILLIE, Lock Box 16, Melrose, Mass.
MRS. M. W. LESLIE, 35 Common street, Boston, Mass.
THOS. LEES, 360 Cross st., Cleveland, O.*
MRS. H. S. LAKE, 566 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass.
MRS. AMELIA H. COLBY-LUTHER, Crown Point, Ind.
B. M. LAWRENCE, care Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.
A. J. MORSE, of England, Alliance, care Banner of Light.
MRS. S. M. MACE, 28 Dartmouth street, Boston, Mass.
P. C. MILLS, Fairmount, Ark.
REV. CHARLES P. MCCARTHY, 109 8th ave., New York.
MRS. E. H. F. MCKINLEY, 1307½ Polk st., San Francisco.
PROF. M. MILLESON, care Banner of Light, Boston.
S. T. MARCHANT, 15 Willoughby st., Brooklyn, N. Y.
MRS. LIZZIE MANCHESTER, West Randolph, Vt.
DR. H. F. MERRILL, 87 Sewell street, Augusta, Me.*
CELIA M. NICKERSON, South Orleans, Mass.
VALENTINE NICKELSON, Foster's Crossing, O.*
THEO. F. PRICE, Monon, White Co., Ind.
LYDIA A. PEARSALL, Disco, Mich.
MISS DORCAS E. PRAY, Augusta, Me.
DR. G. AMOS PEIRCE, Box 1135, Lewiston, Me.
A. S. PEASE, Buskirk, N. Y.
MRS. LUNT PARKER, P. O. Box 349, Lansing, Mich.
PROF. W. F. PECK, 566 Columbus Avenue, Boston.
JOHN G. PRIEGEL, 640 North 2d street, St. Louis, Mo.*
CALEB PRENTISS, 10 Hudson street, Lynn, Mass.
LYSANDER S. RICHARDS, East Marshfield, Mass.
MISS JENNIE RHIND, 38 Boylston street, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN STUART-RICHINGS, P. O., Boston, Mass.*
FRANK T. RIPLEY, care Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.*
J. H. RANDALL, 78 Seeley Avenue, Chicago, Ill.*
MRS. C. L. V. RICHMOND, 61 Union Park Pl., Chicago.
J. WILLIAM ROYLE, Trenton, N. J.
MISS M. T. SHELHAMER, care Banner of Light, Boston.
DR. H. B. STORER, 406 Shawmut Avenue, Boston, Mass.*
M. L. SHERMAN, box 1205, Adrian, Mich.
MRS. K. R. STILES, 146 Pleasant st., Worcester, Mass.
THOMAS STREET, Lockland, O.
MRS. FANNIE DAVIS SMITH, Brandon, Vt.
MRS. P. W. STEPHENS, Oakland, Cal.
MRS. S. A. SMITH, Athol, Mass.
GILES B. STEBBINS, 107 Henry street, Detroit, Mich.
JULIET H. SEVERANCE, M. D., Milwaukee, Wis.
MRS. JULIA A. B. SEIVER, Tampa, Fla.
MRS. ALMIRA W. SMITH, Portland, Me.
MRS. L. A. F. SWAIN, Union Lakes, Minn.
J. W. SEAVER, Byron, N. Y.
MRS. FANNY W. SANBURN, Scranton, Pa.
MRS. L. M. SPENCER, Milwaukee, Wis.
JOSEPH D. STILES, Weymouth, Mass.
AUSTEN E. SIMMONS, Woodstock, Vt.*
E. W. SLOSSON, Auburgh, Franklin Co., N. Y.
MRS. H. T. STEARNS, Cassadaga, N. Y.
MISS HATTIE SMART, Chelsea, Mass.
HENRY E. SHARPE, 207½ East 9th street, New York City.
ABRAHAM SMITH, Sturgis, Mich.
DR. C. D. SHERMAN, Greenwood, Wakefield, Mass.
MRS. JULIA C. SMITH, Hotel Cabe, Appleton st., Boston.
MRS. JULIA A. SPAULDING, 41 Front street, Worcester.
C. W. STEWART, 11 Ionia street, Grand Rapids, Mich.
MRS. E. M. SHIRLEY, 123 Main street, Worcester, Mass.
PROF. W. SEYMOUR, 1033 South 13th street, Philadelphia.
MRS. J. W. STILL, Morris, N. Y.
ADDIE M. STEVENS, Washington, N. H.*
H. W. STRATTON, 3 Concord Square, Boston, Mass.
THOMAS W. SUTTON, P. O. Box 790, Worcester, Mass.*
GEO. W. TAYLOR, Lawton's Station, Erie Co., N. Y.
J. H. W. TOOHEY, 4 Princeton street, Charlestown, Mass.
THOMAS B. TAYLOR, Milford, Mass.
MRS. K. J. S. TOOMBS, N. Colesville, Broome Co., N. Y.*

THE NEW EVANGEL.

BY BELLE BUSH.

[Dedicated to the Spiritualist Camp Meetings, and read at Onset Bay, Mass., Aug. 24th.]

I have no word of sadness for you, dear friends, to hear;
My song is one of gladness, I send to all "good cheer";
Soaring like the eagle, singing like the lark,
Thought on pinion regal leaves behind the dark.

Sunshine round me dances, breezes come and go,
Weaving sweet romances, singing soft and low.
Every stream and fountain seems to give me joy,
Every rock and mountain, every girl and boy.

All the air seems thrilling with a roundelay,
Dews from heaven distilling bless each sacred day.
We have cause for gladness, none for doubt or fear;
Hearts once tuned to sadness now can sing good cheer.

For angels at our portals benignly stand and wait
To crown with joys immortal each day we celebrate;
Loved and loving mothers, sisters fond and true,
Tender-hearted brothers come with blessings new.

Ancients, bards and sages, children once of time,
Down the steps of ages send their thoughts sublime;
All the heavenly arches ring with their acclaim,
Telling how truth marches with her lambent flame.

Gladly would I meet you mingling with the throng;
My heart can only greet you through the melody of song.
My soul at home reposes, where duty bids me stay,
But if my thoughts were roses they would drop on you to-day.

They would come to you in meekness, with blessings from above,
Diffusing through their sweetness the charity of love;
And if my thoughts were voices you would hear them chanting low
The hymn that all rejoices: Truth's footsteps may be slow,

But she marches onward ever with justice in the van;
She will pause or falter never till freedom walks with man.
But my thoughts are singing fountains only seen by angel eyes,
I can send you o'er the mountains only faintest melodies.

Oh! friends, dear friends, before you Love's priestess stands to-day,
And fervently entreats you to heed what she may say;
Not the pure and righteous only did our elder brother call,
But the poor, the weak, the lowly, his love embraced them all.

Let us follow his example more closely year by year.
And strive through our ensample to make an Eden here;
For gifts of highest merit are not the world's to give,
We may all be rich in spirit, no matter where we live.

And if our soul inherits the faith that looks above,
We may keep with sainted spirits the sacraments of love;
This song of hope and gladness I send, dear friends, to you;
May it free your hearts from sadness, and teach you to be true:

True to the light that angels are shedding on our way.
True to the New Evangel who walks with us to-day;
I send you warmest greetings, fresh from my heart and hand,
And pray for happy meetings in the radiant Summer-Land.

Belvidere Seminary, N. J.

Saratoga Springs Items.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The mineral springs of Saratoga are known the world over, and the present season has been one of success in all departments in this favorite resort where the fashionable and the health-seeking yearly congregate.

Here we meet all classes of society and people, coming from all portions of the world. All are equally—the rich and their reverse—partaking of the health giving waters. There are four superb bands of music employed to entertain the visitors, and as one of the citizens remarked: "There is no place where you can get so much for nothing as in this;" but I notice that the popular hotels know how to charge well for entertainment, though it can also be obtained here at prices as low as at the camp-meetings. There is also a charge for visitors of five cents for an entrance fee to obtain what water each wishes to drink at one time.

Spiritualism is secondary during the heated season, as the citizens seem to have all they can attend to in caring for the visitors. The two Sundays previous to my arrival a Brahmin from India was asked to give his views—or the religious views of the Hindus. Mr. S. Yoonida Row Sattay came to this country some four years ago. He has not been Christianized, and soon after he arrived here he was invited to speak of India and its religions, at a Methodist camp-meeting at a summer resort in New Jersey. He did so, and was arrested for blasphemy, as he proclaimed himself a Heathen, and saw fit to speak his own sentiments on the occasion. His lecture was announced at this town as giving his opinions of Christ and his doings as a feature of Spiritualism.

Mr. Sattay spoke on the first Sunday, and his remarks created quite an interest—so much so that he was given a reception by a wealthy lady in a private house, during the following week.

He is an intelligent man, and presents his views in a frank but not an offensive manner. The Hindus claim to be of the race originating in the interior of Asia. They went into India and overran that country.

I saw among the friends in Saratoga Mr. Huling, Mr. Horn, Mr. Thompson, Dr. Mills and wife, Mr. Pease, Gen. Bullard, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Lyman and wife, Mr. Burrows and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Noble, who are all quite active in their various pursuits. Mr. Bates (of the Bates House) has sold out, and with his family gone to Florida for a permanent home. The Lymans have moved into their new house, which they value at ten thousand dollars. Dr. Mills, while at Lake Pleasant, and also after he arrived home, had his house robbed of some five hundred dollars' worth of property—consisting of clothing, a gold watch and chain, etc. Some of the articles were taken while himself and family were sitting on the front piazza of his house; certainly a bold operation on the part of the burglars.

The Salvation Army is here with its big tent and big drum.

The Ministers' Meeting, once a week, is one of the annual events of the season; also the Union Morning Prayer Meeting; these meetings are open for any one to speak who can get the floor first, and they last one hour. I attended one of them to see whether progress marked the hour with the Evangelical Church ministers. I had talked with one of the prominent ministers on the subject of the sectarian religion as compared with Spiritualism, and alluded to the gift of healing that was prominent in the past, also with the Spiritualists of to-day. He made some statements last season that I had printed, and he remembered me as a Spiritualist, and seemed to be decidedly opposed to the views that the Spiritualists advance. I asked him several questions about the inconsistency of the popular church views as compared with the teachings in the Bible which Christians claim to believe. To my astonishment, on going to the prayer-meeting the next morning, the Chairman read the identical passage concerning Jesus and his healing the sick—a process which, by the way, is to day held to be illegal in New York. It was amusing to hear the views advanced by different speakers concerning the power of Jesus to heal the sick and do other marvelous works. One actually alluded to Jesus as having a soothing, magnetic hand. I never heard magnetism credited or applied to him before by sectarian church people.

One speaker described Jesus when young as playing with other boys, and to show the difference between his power and the rest he, Jesus, gave life to certain images of birds which he wrought out of the mud, so that they flew away, while the others were unable to do the like for those themselves had made; but when Jesus touched these latter "clay pigeons" they also took flight; thus establishing (in the story at least) his power to impart life to inanimate substance.

Some of the ministers present declared this to be but a story of the past, having no connection with Jesus at all, not one of them having read the Apocryphal New Testament (claiming to consist of books originally held to belong to the sacred writings, but latterly denied as inspired productions) which has been published, and which is for sale by Colby & Rich. This work gives the early life of Jesus, including the remarks about the "mud birds" to which Jesus imparted life, and referred to by this Saratoga speaker.

A few hours later I met the Hindu Brahmin alluded to above, and was introduced to him by Mr. Huling. I asked him many questions as to his religious views, and why he was preaching his doctrines in this country, and to a Spiritualist Society. He said he was not proselyting in this country, and if there was any one to blame, he must place it upon those who asked him to give his views. I gave him the BANNER OF LIGHT to read; he said he often perused it, and other spiritual papers, and was pleased to obtain them for the purpose; he seemed to be well versed in what Spiritualists teach and believe. I called his attention to some printed reports concerning physical manifestations of spirit power that are occurring with mediums, and asked him what he thought of them from his own standpoint. He gave me to understand that the manifestations that are witnessed with Spiritualist mediums were quite common in India, and considered them accountable for without the aid of excarnated spirits—that is, that they originate with the spirit of the individuals who produce them, and not from excarnated spirits; also that all we can see and all that is done by them—or some of them at least—in India is accomplished without the aid of or belief in spirits. He said that his people believed that the whole universe is in God, and God is in the universe. What we term the spirit-world they looked upon as "elementary divine elements." From what I could gather from his remarks, he considered that what we look upon as originating with our spirit friends is nothing more nor less than the work of "elementaries."

He spoke of their present ruler as having similar powers to those that have been attributed to Jesus, as above related—the fact that he possessed these magical powers being the cause of his selection.

From further conversation with this illustrious "heathen," I am fully satisfied, as far as my judgment goes, that there are several sects or societies in Boston and elsewhere which have embraced the Hindu religion to all intents and purposes, and are attempting to set forth its teachings to the public as being new truths under the name "Christian Science," etc., and they sell the knowledge of these "divine rites" to individuals at various prices, claiming originality in them.

Those who desire may join such "scientific" enterprises, but for myself I prefer to hold to the rational thought that all spirits hold their personality and individuality in the spirit-world—which idea, if I understand the matter rightly, the Hindu religion ignores in toto. If the Spiritual Philosophy is a great discovery, as it is claimed, and also a fact in the nature of things, it is the duty of all Spiritualists to uphold it. Efforts looking toward a revival of the olden myths of India and Cathay, and teaching them in classes all over the country in connection with certain personal theories regarding the cause and cure of disease, at the expense of the true spiritual revelation, or as a higher growth of Spiritualism, are to my mind founded in bypast error, and unworthy of those who have received the living light of to-day.

I cannot see that the so-called "Christian Science" or "metaphysics," as inculcated by a hundred and one different schools under different names, is any other or different doctrine than that advanced by the Brahmin alluded to above. Who knows but that the disciples of these systems are controlled by Hindu spirits, who, still strongly imbued with their earth life notions, seek to proclaim them at this late hour in the world's advance—at whatever injury to Modern Spiritualism.

Sunday, Aug. 26th, a conference meeting was held by the local Spiritualists, which was quite interesting as to services. A lady from New York City spoke of the needs of the hour, holding that more attention should be paid to the philosophy of the subject. Several others spoke. Mr. Peter Thompson acted as chairman, and made a few remarks in explanation of his views of what constituted Spiritualism proper—stating that he was satisfied that spirit-materialization is a fact. He then introduced the Hindu Brahmin, who spoke for some minutes, and was then questioned by the writer, also by Gen. Bullard, Mr. Thompson, Mr Cook and several others in relation to the views of his people and their works, etc. His hearers listened to him attentively, but failed to see any improvement in his teachings over those inculcated by Modern Spiritualism.

Gen. Bullard related some fine tests he had received, which he believed to have proceeded from the agency of excarnated spirit-identities.

In the evening that capable journalist, Fred F. Cook, who has, in connection with good service on secular papers in Chicago and New York (in which latter city he is now located), also performed much valuable work with tongue and pen for the spiritual cause, spoke on Spiritualism in its different aspects, giving his experience with the subject. Spiritualism, he said, found him without belief in the Bible or a future life—in fact an Atheist and a Materialist in the full sense of the word. He commenced his investigation with the various phenomena, and from the manifestations seen came the philosophy and science of the subject. He believed in form materialization as being a fact, but that simulation was to be met with at times in its investigation. His remarks were received with satisfaction by all present.

Dr. E. V. Wright followed with some opportune remarks upon the work of Spiritualism, and endeavored to show that it developed individuality in those embracing it. The Brahmin also made some remarks, after which the meeting closed.

The session, as a whole, was considered one of the best that has been held for the season.

Mrs. Higgins, medium from New York, has been in the village for some time. Mrs. Goodwin has been staying here for the season, also Mrs. Jennie Reed Warren. Mr. Edwin Powell has been at the Burrows House for some weeks, but is now, I learn, at Mt. Gregory, living a retired life. Mrs. Cook and sister from the State of Illinois, and her daughter Mrs. Gove, from Nevada, Cal., came from Onset to this place, and have returned to their homes. Mrs. Gove is an accomplished singer and player.

Capt. Caswell, wife and two daughters, are pleasantly domiciled at the Lyman House; they came from Lake Pleasant here, and will remain some days.

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician.

Aug. 26th.

Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

MONROE E. MERRILL—MRS. H. PRINCE.

I would like to verify the message of my brother, MONROE E. MERRILL, in last BANNER, and I would also say it was one of the finest tests of spirit presence I ever received. One month previous my sister and myself started for the Banner of Light Circle-Room. I was about purchasing some flowers for the table, when my sister remarked that if we would get some wild flowers Monroe would come, as he was a great lover of wild flowers. He was not able to manifest at that time, and when I left Verona, June 10th, I carried a bouquet of flowers from those woods. This was the message given through Miss Shelhamer while I was present June 12th.

The message of MRS. HANNAH PRINCE, of Portland, Me., given through Mrs. Smith, is recognized as correct in every particular. I was present at the time it was given. It was so characteristic of my friend, Mrs. Prince, I could recognize the tone of her voice.

Very truly yours, DR. H. F. MERRILL.

Augusta, Me., Aug. 26th, 1888.

MARTHA NOBLE.

I take great pleasure in acknowledging the truthfulness of the message in last Saturday's BANNER (Aug. 18th), from MARTHA NOBLE of Paterson, New Jersey; it is correct in every particular, and is very characteristic of her. She was a faithful and zealous Spiritualist for nearly thirty years. She passed on four years ago last April, after eight months of terrible suffering, not only with a hope but with a full knowledge of the glorious future on which she was entering. We have scores of communications from her, but this one, given in this public place in fulfillment of a promise made before she passed on to the other shore, is one of the grandest and best, and is duly appreciated by her husband, daughter, grandchildren and many friends. Yours sincerely,

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 20th, 1888. JOSEPH NOBLE.

JUDGE CALVIN MORRILL.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT of Aug. 11th, I find a communication purporting to have come from JUDGE CALVIN MORRILL, who, when in earth-life, was a resident of St. Johnsbury, Vt. In that communication he speaks of Benjamin, Nancy and Lucy. I was told that Benjamin had passed over, but could not think it possible by the way the Judge spoke. After a little correspondence I ascertained his post-office address to be Orfordville, N. H. I wrote him there, inquiring what his relationship to the Judge was, and who were Nancy and Lucy. He replied, "Judge Calvin Morrill was my brother, Nancy was my daughter, Lucy was my son Josiah's wife, who died two years since. My daughter Nancy died four years ago at Lawrence, Mass." Who can doubt spirit-return with such evidence? Joyfully yours, Barnet, Vt., Aug., 1888. E. B. CLEMENT.

SAMUEL COLBURN.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT of Aug. 18th is a message from SAMUEL COLBURN, which I recognize as coming from my brother-in law, who passed out from his home in this place a little more than four years ago. It is one of many evidences he has given of continued individual existence, but there is a single statement in the message not in harmony with the facts. In it he says, "Mary has looked the paper over many times, thinking perhaps she might see a few words from me." "Mary" is blind, and since the demise of her husband has never been able to read. She however assures me that she has wished and hoped that he might come to her in this way. The message is characteristic, and in other respects correct.

I have always deemed the sixth page second in importance to no other portion of the BANNER, and am glad to contribute this mite in testimony of its value.

Very truly, ABBIE J. SPALDING.

Champlin, Minn., Aug. 21st, 1888.

LOG CABINS were strongholds of love, contentment, health and happiness. Coon skins were nailed to the door, and they were the happy homes of strong, healthy, noble men and women. The simple but effective remedies which carried them to green old age are now reproduced in Warner's "Tippecanoe" and Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla, and other Log Cabin Remedies.

PRICE REDUCED.

"SHADOWS":

Being a Familiar Presentation of Thoughts and Experiences in Spiritual Matters, with Illustrative Narrations.

BY JOHN WETHERBEE.

The features of this book are simplicity of statement—freedom from dogmatism and manifest truthfulness, by one who claims to have common sense, and presents his ideas and experiences to like-minded people.

It is a book that will be appreciated and valued by Spiritualists, and one also that skeptical and indifferent people will read with interest, and credit the author certainly with being intelligent and honest.

The several chapters are distinct articles in themselves, without reference to consecutive order, but in their wholeness will show why the author is a Spiritualist and why every one else must be who believes in the truthfulness of his statements.

In one volume of 288 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, beveled boards, with portrait of author.

Cloth, $1.00, postage free: paper, 75 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"BEYOND THE VALLEY,"

A SEQUEL TO THE

MAGIC STAFF,

BY ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS,

Seer of the Harmonial Philosophy.

It opens, some of the steps that led to important Events in his Private Life. It will be a welcome gift to a host of readers of the volume from his pen. The publishers receive orders for it from all parts of the civilized world. It contains six vivid diagram constructions, and these open new fields of thought, and explain subjects of universal interest.

The press notices, and the numerous distinguished correspondents who write the author in part, have unanimously given the Seer of the Valley a high and intellectual position among the many writers of the present.

Price, single copy, $1.50; for several copies a liberal discount. The trade supplied.

Address COLBY & RICH, BANNER OF LIGHT, corner Bosworth and Province streets, Boston, Mass.

Seven Dozen Gems.

COMPILED BY J. P. PHORNDYKE.

All who appreciate spiritual, progressive, liberal, humanitarian and sympathetic sentiments, poetically yet strongly expressed, will find much to their taste in this neat volume, the contents of which are from the writings of Longfellow, Lowell, the Cary Sisters, William Denton, Richard Kraft, Will Carlton, Florence Percy, Lizzie Doten, Ella Wheeler and others. Two mediumistic poems are included in the collection, one by Mrs. K. R. Stiles and one by Carrie E. S. Twing. The book is printed on extra fine paper, and should grace the homes of all as a means of refreshing and cheering to continued activity in the battle of life those who become weary with its toil and turmoil.

200 pages, neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New Edition.

HISTORY OF THE COUNCIL OF NICE, A. D. 325. With a Life of Constantine the Great; Containing, also, an account of the Scriptural Canons, as adopted by the Christian Church; the Vote on the Divinity of Christ; the appointment of Sunday as a legal Sabbath in the Roman Empire; and a general exhibition of the Christian Religion in the days of the early Fathers. By DEAN DUDLEY, Lawyer and Historian.

This is the fourth edition of the original work, and greatly enlarged and improved, with a portrait of Constantine, and many critical notes from all the great writers on these subjects. The first edition was published in 1860, and we found it very interesting and highly approved by various sects; in fact, by all lovers of impartial history of Dogmas, Creeds, Divine Humanity, Bible Canons, and Inspired Superstition.

The style is excellent every way: 12mo, well printed and bound. Price, full cloth, $1.00; paper 50 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PRICE REDUCED.

CHRIST AND THE RESURRECTION

IN THE

Light of Modern Spiritualism.

A Discourse delivered by PROF. HENRY RIDDLE, On Easter Sunday, April 25th, 1886, in the New Spiritual Temple, Boston, Mass.

Price 5 cents, postage 1 cent; six copies for 25 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MENTAL EVOLUTION

OR,

The Process of Mental Action.

BY PROF. MICHAEL FARADAY.

New Series. Pamphlet; price 15 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ELEMENTS OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY

FOR

Higher Institutes in Republics, and for Self-Instruction.

BY PROF. H. M COTTINGER, A. M.

Cloth. Price $2.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

A LAY SERMON,

BY ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,

Delivered before the Tenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union, at Chickering Hall, New York, Nov. 14th, 1886

Paper. Price 5 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

HOW AND WHY I BECAME A SPIRITUALIST.

By WASH A. DANSKIN.

This volume gives a careful account of the author's investigations into Spiritualism, and his reasons for becoming a Spiritualist. There is also added an appendix, giving an authentic statement of that wonderful phenomenon known as the Solid Iron Ring Manifestation.

Cloth, 75 cents, postage 5 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

The Weekly Discourse,

A Pamphlet (especially arranged for binding)

Containing one of the Discourses given through the organism of

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND

The preceding Sunday,

Is published each week. Price, $2.50 per year.

Address, WILLIAM RICHMOND,

64 Union Park Place, Chicago, Ill.

Myleow

THE

N. D. C. AXE and TRUE KEY-STONE,

A FOUR-PAGE SEMI-MONTHLY JOURNAL, especially devoted to the Development of Mediumship, and official organ of The National Developing Circle.

Terms of subscription, $1.00 per annum.

Sample Copy Free.

Send for Book, "How to Become a Medium in Your Own House," and a personal sealed letter designating all your phases of Mediumship, all for 15 cents.

Address

JAMES A. BLISS,

824 tf ELMWOOD PLACE, OHIO.

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription.—One year, $1.50; six months, 75 cents; three months, 40 cents; single number, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty-five cents—a sum which barely covers the price of blank paper and press-work. Sample copies free. Jo4

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science,

PUBLISHERS AND EDITORS: GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Mental Therapeutics, Human Liberty, and the Culture of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, $2.00 per year; single copies 25 cents.

Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI-MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der „mystischen" und „magischen" Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, Alf. Russ, Wallace, der Professoren Barrett und Coues, mehrerer Brahminen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden.

Subscription: $1.75 for six months, $3.50 per annum.

Messrs. COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Ap21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL devoted to the interests of Spiritualism in all its aspects. MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of subscription, in advance, per year, $1.20. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order or Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75, Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper 12mo, pp. 286. Price 60 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Aug. 3.

THE CARRIER DOVE,

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform, Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, Publishers. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of our Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also spirit Communications by our Ablest Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms: $2.00 per year, single copies 5 cents.

Address all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 6 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal. Fe

SEND NAME

AND POST-OFFICE ADDRESS of any person to THE BETTER WAY, CINCINNATI, O., to receive a sample copy of this eight-page Spiritual Weekly Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year. Sample copy sent on application. To secure a speedy answer, inclose a postage stamp for return postage. Address as above. Ap14

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.

MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Ass't Editor.

AN EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY, devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address, GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

The oldest reform journal in publication.

Price, $2.00 a year,

$1.50 for six months,

3 cents per single copy.

I am now at my time to subscribe for a live paper, which discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.

Address J. F. MENDUM,

Investigator Office,

Paine Memorial,

April 2. Boston, Mass.

STATUVOLISM;

OR, ARTIFICIAL SOMNAMBULISM, hitherto called Mesmerism, or Animal Magnetism. By WM. BAKER FAHNESTOCK, M. D.

Containing a brief historical survey of Mesmer's operations, and the examination of the same by the French Commissioners. Phreno-Statuvolism; or, The Exposition of Psychology, Magnetism and Neurology. A new view, and division of the physiological organs into functions, with descriptions of their nature and qualities, etc., in the senses and faculties; and a full and accurate description of the various phenomena belonging to this state; including its division into two distinct conditions, viz.: the waking and sleeping, with practical instructions how to enter and awake from either. The blending of these conditions with other states and mysteries, together with an account of several obstetrical cases delivered while in this state; the proper method of preparing subjects for surgical operations; the danger of dangers during and after the same, and the latest and best method of curing disease, etc., in those persons who are in that condition.

Cloth, $1.50; postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NINETEENTH CENTURY SENSE:

The Paradox of Spiritualism.

By JOHN DARBY (DR. GARRETSON),

Author of "Odd Hours of a Physician," etc., etc.

It is a very thorough and comprehensive discussion of the subject, which will awaken considerable interest among thoughtful persons. The author's method is ingenious and original, and, aiming as he does to reconcile the apparently irreconcilable, his conclusions will prove worthy of careful consideration.

16mo. Extra cloth, $1.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

A TREATISE ON THE HORSE AND HIS DISEASES. By B. J. KENDALL, M. D.

Containing an "Index of Diseases," which gives the Symptoms, Cause, and the best Treatment of each; a table giving all the principal drugs used for the Horse, with the ordinary dose, effects, and antidote when a poison; a table with an engraving of the Horse's teeth at different ages, with rules for telling the age of the Horse; a valuable collection of receipts, and much other valuable information. Illustrated.

Paper, 25 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE BAPTISM OF FIRE. An Autobiographical Sketch. By LUCIFER.

The author gives an interesting account of his life from infancy, and the following chapter heads will give an idea of what the book is composed of: Early Years; Adrift; Alone; A Wanderer; Rest for the Weary; Excelsior; The Unity of Life; Money; Power; Affinity; Justice; Love; Cooperation; Immortality; Marriage; Destiny; Liberty; Our Future Home; Law; Conclusion.

Paper, 83 pages, 30 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

LIBERTY AND MORALITY, a Speech delivered by W. S. BELL at the New York State Free Thinkers' Convention at Watkins, N. Y., Aug. 26th, 1882.

Paper, 15 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ORTHODOX HASH, WITH CHANGE, OF DIET. By WARREN SUMNER BARLOW, author of "The Voices," "If, Then, and When," "Progress of Manhattan Isle," and other poems.

Paper, 10 cents; postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

RAPHAEL'S HORARY ASTROLOGY: BY WHICH EVERY QUESTION RELATING TO THE FUTURE MAY BE ANSWERED. By RAPHAEL.

Cloth, English edition. Price $1.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

BANNER OF LIGHT:

THE OLDEST JOURNAL IN THE WORLD DEVOTED TO THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY.

ISSUED WEEKLY

At 9 Bosworth Street (formerly Montgomery Place) Corner Province Street, Boston, Mass.

COLBY & RICH,

Publishers and Proprietors.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER,
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR,
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR,
Aided by a large corps of able writers.

THE BANNER is a first-class Family Newspaper of EIGHT PAGES—containing FORTY COLUMNS OF INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE READING—embracing

A LITERARY DEPARTMENT,
REPORTS OF SPIRITUAL LECTURES,
ORIGINAL ESSAYS—Upon Spiritual, Philosophical and Scientific Subjects.
EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT,
SPIRIT-MESSAGE DEPARTMENT, and
CONTRIBUTIONS by the most talented writers in the world, etc., etc.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE

Per Year.....$3.00
Six Months.....1.50
Three Months.....75

Postage Free.

In remitting by mail, a Post-Office Money Orders on Boston, or a Draft on a Bank or Banking House in Boston or New York City, payable to the order of COLBY & RICH, is preferable to Bank Notes. Our patrons can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred.

ADVERTISEMENTS published at twenty cents per line for the first, and fifteen cents per line for each subsequent insertion.

Subscriptions discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for.

☞ Specimen copies sent free.

COLBY & RICH

Publish and keep for sale at Wholesale and Retail a complete assortment of Spiritual, Progressive, Reformatory and Miscellaneous Books.

Among the authors are Andrew Jackson Davis, Hon. Robert Dale Owen, Dr. James M. Peebles, Henry C. Wright, Giles B. Stebbins, D. D. Home, T. R. Hazard, William Denton, Rev. M. B. Craven, Judge J. W. Edmonds, Prof. S. B. Brittan, Allen Putnam, Epes Sargent, W. F. Evans, Kersey Graves, A. B. Child, P. B. Randolph, Warren S. Barlow, J. O. Barrett, Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten, Miss Lizzie Doten, Mrs. Maria M. King, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, etc.

Any Book published in England or America, not out of print, will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

☞ Publishers who insert the above Prospectus in their respective journals, and call attention to it editorially, will be entitled to a copy of the BANNER OF LIGHT one year, provided a marked paper is forwarded to this office.

OUR AGENTS.

BRENTANO BROS., BOOKSELLERS, 5 Union Square, New York,

Authorized NEW YORK AGENTS for the sale of all of Colby & Rich's Publications. A good stock always on hand of Spiritual Books and Publications. Any Book desired which they do not happen to have in stock will be promptly ordered. Subscriptions received for and single copies of the Banner of Light on sale. Address 5 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK. Branch stores, 1015 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, WASHINGTON, D. C., and 101 STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. NEW YORK AGENCY, 5 UNION SQUARE.

PHILADELPHIA BOOK DEPOT.

The Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., are for sale by J. H. RHODES, M. D., at the Philadelphia Book Agency, 722 Spring Garden street. Subscriptions received for the Banner of Light at $3.00 per year. The Banner of Light can be found for sale at Academy Hall, No. 810 Spring Garden street, and at all the spiritual meetings; also at 503 North 8th street, and at news stand 826 Market street.

CLEVELAND, O., BOOK DEPOT.

THOMAS LEES, 12 Ontario street (Room 2). All the Spiritual and Reformatory Works on hand published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass. Subscription Agency for the Banner of Light and other Spiritual papers and magazines, etc. Residence, 105 Cross street, Cleveland, O.

WASHINGTON AGENCY.

M. L. WILLOUGHBY & CO., dealers in Standard and Scientific Books, Pamphlets and Periodicals, 357 Pa street, near Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C., keep constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., AGENCY.

J. K. COOPER, 736 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., keeps constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and will take orders for any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

CHICAGO, ILL., AGENCY.

CHAS. MACDONALD & CO., Periodical dealers, No. 55 Washington street, Chicago, Ill., keep for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

NEW YORK BOOK DEPOT.

The Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., and the Banner of Light, can be found at the office of The Truth-Seeker, 33 Union Place, New York City.

BRATTLEBORO', VT., BOOK DEPOT.

E. J. CARPENTER, periodical dealer in Newspapers, Periodicals, etc., etc., No. 2 Market Block, keeps for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., AGENCY.

W. H. FOSTER, JR., 9 Battey street, Providence, R. I., will supply any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich. He is also agent for the Banner of Light.

DETROIT, MICH., AGENCY.

AUGUSTUS DAY, 12 Park Place, Detroit, Mich., Spiritualistic Sale and Circulating Library. Agent for Banner of Light, and all publications of Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AGENCY.

JAMES LEWIS, 66 Pynchon street, Springfield, Mass., is agent for the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., BOOK DEPOT.

JACKSON & BURLEIGH, Booksellers, Arcade Hall, Rochester, N. Y., keep for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

TROY, N. Y., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., will be accommodated by W. H. VOSBURGH, 244 Ninth street, Troy, N. Y.

CORRY, PENN. AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich, will be supplied by G. F. LEWIS, publisher of the Day Star, in that city.

AUBURN, N. Y., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., can procure them of J. H. HARTER, Auburn, N. Y.

WASHINGTON BOOK DEPOT.

The Roberts Bookstore, D. MUNCEY, Proprietor, No. 1010 Seventh street, above New York Avenue, Washington, D. C., keeps constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and a supply of Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., BOOK DEPOT.

J. SPENCER, 470 East Water street, Milwaukee, Wis., keeps for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published at the Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass.

ST. LOUIS, MO., BOOK DEPOT.

E. T. JEFF, 802 Olive street, opposite Custom House, St. Louis, Mo., keeps constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and a supply of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

MEMPHIS, TENN., AGENCY.

JOHN LANG, Stationer and Bookseller, No. 221 Main street, Memphis, Tenn., keeps for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich.

NOTICE TO OUR ENGLISH PATRONS.

MR. H. A. KERSEY will act as our agent and receive subscriptions for the Banner of Light at fifteen shillings per year. Parties desiring to so subscribe can address Mr. H. A. Kersey, No. 1 Newgate street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, England. Mr. Kersey also keeps for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by us.

COLBY & RICH.

INDIA BOOK DEPOT.

KAILASAM BROTHERS, Booksellers, Popham's Broadway, Madras, have for sale and will receive orders for the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass. They will also receive subscriptions for the Banner of Light at Rupees 11-12-0 per annum.

AUSTRALIAN BOOK DEPOT.

And Agency for the Banner of Light. CHAS. H. BAMFORD, No. 87 Little Collins street, East Melbourne, Australia, has for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

THIS PAPER may be found on file at GEO. P. ROWELL & CO.'S Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce street), where advertising contracts may be made for it in New York.

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not read anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he desires specially to recommend for perusal.

☞ When our patrons desire the address of the BANNER changed, they should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not forget to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as the BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1888.

[Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.]

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE. Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place) corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:
THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY,
14 Franklin Street, Boston.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY,
39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR

☞ Business Letters must be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All Letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the opposing light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

Our New Volume.

This issue ends another volume of THE BANNER—Vol 63, No 26. In No. 1 of the new volume (64th) we shall present our readers with a great variety of interesting matter—such as we trust they will fully appreciate—e::

An Original Essay, "THE SPIRITUALISM OF 1888," by Dr. F. L. H. Willis, the well-known physician and able writer upon spiritual topics.

An Original Story of deep interest and high moral tendency, entitled

"BARS AND THRESHOLDS,"

BY MRS. EMMA MINER.

Original Poetry, by Miss M. T. Shelhamer; interesting correspondence; editorials upon various subjects; reports of spirit-messages given at our Free Public Séances, preceded by answers to questions by the President of the Circle, Father Pierpont, etc, etc.

In this connection it gives us great pleasure to be able to inform our patrons that THE BANNER will appear next week IN AN ENTIRELY NEW DRESS—the different fonts of type having been cast expressly for us at the well-known DICKINSON FOUNDERY in this city.

Re-opening of the Banner Seances!

The Public Free Meetings regularly held under the auspices of this paper ever since its inception will be recommenced for the season of '88-9, under the chairmanship of MR. LEWIS B. WILSON, at the BANNER OF LIGHT BUILDING, on TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Sept. 11th at three o'clock, Miss M. T. SHELHAMER being the medium, as usual, for the answering of questions.

On the afternoon of Friday, Sept. 14th, the giving of messages from individual spirits, through the mediumship of MRS. B. F. SMITH, will be in order.

The presence of the public is respectfully desired.

"God is Love."

No recorded saying can claim to possess greater height or depth of meaning than is conveyed in the three words above.

The finite will forever be unable to comprehend the infinite. The love of God is also his wisdom. The two are one, and they rule and uphold the universe. This love flows outward and downward into all the innumerable forms of life, and thereby creates and sustains them. In humanity it is still love in the different measures of its unceasing reception; in the material world it is called force, which it is in its simplest form, becoming known by various names, the most general one of which is motion.

Thus is Love, which is God, the originating, inspiring, moving power of creation, called by one name in one place, or recipiency, and by another name in another. In the material world in which we are born it is called Nature, whose forces are observed to work after certain established methods. These methods are called natural laws; and the materialist is he who cannot or will not look beyond them to search for the originating and sustaining cause of which they are inevitably significant. Instead of searching for the causative and operative power itself, he is content to discover and describe the method. In brief, he devotes himself to natural things, not recognizing the fact that they are thus natural by virtue of first having been spiritual. And that spiritual is wholly Love, the light of the universe. It proceeds from God, its boundless source, and in various forms of power descends through the ranks of angelic hosts in the heavens down into the dwellers on earth and the inhabitants of all the worlds. Its manifestations are as numerous as the individuals through whom they are made. So that what is called by many the "supernatural" is but the natural force, operating everywhere after methods adapted to the production of the ends aimed at. Materialism thus is made Spiritualism, since without the spiritual cause there can be no material and visible effect.

In the sense described all things are the result of what is commonly termed "supernatural" force, (though nothing is really above, beyond or outside the limit of natural law) which in its essence is love, which is God. This is the great mystery of creation, both the outward and visible creation, and the inner one of consciousness. It is love that created us, that sustains us, that inspires us according to the measure of our willingness, that ministers to us ever in its own divine spirit. Do what we will, we cannot escape from its enfolding power. Contradict it as much as we may, we are impotent to thwart its steady and constant purposes. If we persist in thinking that it is individual force only, self derived and sufficient unto itself, we are invariably taught the lesson of dependence by its temporary withdrawal and our consequent impoverishment and weakness. When we have once come into something like a comprehension of it as the fountain of all forms of power, we begin to realize the true significance of existence, and therefore how to pursue that existence to its largest and richest results. We call fate unfeeling, if not cruel; but there can be no cruelty where love is the only power that guides and controls. It is in love alone that we live and move and have our being. God is father and mother, and "God is Love."

If as individuals we were to fully assimilate this belief, so that it would absorb and swallow up every other belief, tongue cannot tell and pen cannot describe the radical revolution which would be wrought in human character, or the vast change that would occur in the coming records of human history. We should each of us then be in harmonious, instead of rebellious, relations with the source of all created existence. We should continually draw new strength into our being at all points, instead of wasting it as we now do in endless and profitless discords. We should not distract our lives with needless contention, for with love as the central force all motives to contention are at an end. We should cast out envy, banish hatred and malice, rid ourselves of uncharitableness, become strangers to fear, and dwell in a state of uninterrupted happiness. What we now denominate the ills of life will no longer have an existence, when we shall have come to accept all things, accidents and disappointments as well as apparent good fortune, as being conceived, designed, and directed by supreme love. A man would then abstain from indulging hate to his fellow-man, because of the ever present consciousness that in doing so he was wasting the vital force of his being by denying it the freest admission.

This is ideal, and because it is ideal it is wholly practical. The spiritual ever comes first. Down through agents of various receptive powers it flows in a steady stream, and even the material world around us could not carry on its operations without it. It is in full recognition of this fact that we not only accept but welcome the most natural of all things—communion with the spirits departed. They are not necessarily perfected because they have gone out from the visible-natural, but they are none the less spirits, seeking their individual advancement by a truer instinct than that which guided them on earth, eager to impart tidings of the world of love whose conditions they now better understand, and therefore desirous of performing the first service of love, namely, doing for and giving to others. In this way are they benefiting themselves also. If we were equally ready to perform similar service ourselves, while dwelling on this mundane sphere, it would speedily become a different world from that which it is now. Let each one begin and try it, if but for a single day. If he were to report afterward that he could not see that he had benefited others, he assuredly would have to acknowledge that he was a better man himself for having lived that day.

A Better Mutual Understanding.

Labor Day, made a legal holiday in Massachusetts, was observed last Monday on a very broad scale, and with great unanimity and enthusiasm. The reflection could not but arise in the minds of all those who witnessed the public parade of the ranks of labor that in such a spectacle they beheld the embodiment of the great force by which modern society is upheld and its strongest muniment is sustained. Processions of labor are in themselves a living illustration of the persistent energy through which alone civilization may either exist or advance. And the more thoroughly the great labor class, which is the preponderating majority in society, identifies itself and all its interests with the general make-up of the society of which it is an integral and essential part, the sooner may it expect advancement, by its increasing intelligence and virtue, to the high place of respect and authority which is its inalienable desert. A public parade of the ranks of labor becomes, therefore, a public proclamation of the vital fact that it is upon labor and its sure results that all hopes of the world's continued amelioration depend.

The just and reasonable conclusion to which Mr. Edward Atkinson arrives, in his recent article in The Forum entitled "Progress from Poverty," is that what is to day most needed is "that the rich men shall know how the workmen live, and the workmen shall know how the rich men work." That is precisely what is needed, and such knowledge will be certain to prove of the greatest mutual advantage. For it certainly is of the utmost importance, not to one side merely but to both sides, that employers, whether individuals or corporations, should feel interest enough in those they employ to know whether the wages paid the latter are equal to their support in comfort and with proper regard to self-respect, without which there can be no happiness. They ought likewise, without any exhibition of an intrusive or a patronizing spirit, to show that they feel a truly human interest in the continued well-being of those who are for the time coöperating in the work of their prosperity; that they care even more for them than for any mere money profit there is to be got out of them; and that the real and permanent welfare and happiness of both are closely bound up together.

It is still an unwelcome fact to repeat and dwell upon, that the larger part of the disagreements and even hostilities which prevail between employers and employed spring from the misunderstanding which, first of all, the former entertain in respect to the latter. Nor can it in reason be expected that such misunderstanding will be diminished or removed until the employer, as a rule, takes enough interest in his workmen to care how they live and to assure them sufficient return for their labor to support them, in obedience to the right rules of living, in comfort, and, if possible, much more. As much as that, at least, is his plain duty as a man and brother; the times we live in do not favor the theory that the taking of wages implies the sacrifice and loss of everything else by their recipient. An employer does not own everything in his workmen's life simply because he undertakes to perform a contract with them for the purchase of their labor. No less, either, is it true that the employed are not to stop short at the line where actual service is paid for according to the agreement, but ought to put conscience into their work even when insufficiently remunerated, if but for the vindication of uprightness of character.

What is especially wanted now is the steady cultivation of a broader sympathy between both parties, that they may thus cease to be parties any longer. The lines heretofore drawn between them as two separate classes need to be taken away. The barriers want to be removed. One side cannot be too powerfully appealed to on the ground of its self-respect, and the other on that of its sympathy. It might not be such an easy matter for all grades of workmen to comprehend the scheme on which their employers work, for the reason that, whatever their gifts of native intelligence, the numerous complications and ever-present obstructions to success can be understood only after passing through the educating school of actual experience. But as all men in a state of civilization are supposed to carry human hearts within them, it is perfectly possible for employers to cherish a fellow feeling for those who help in carrying out those schemes to success, even though they have already distributed the promised wages for such coöperation. The law of kindness, which is but the law of love, is stronger than the fulfillment of any contract, though it were liberal to the last degree. The one thing to establish is the broad fact of human brotherhood.

Once let labor fully understand that capital is on its side, all the while in earnest to discover a way to closer and truer relations, never abating a jot of its sincere sympathy with those who are not only in their productive projects but of them, and as careful of the wage-earner's welfare as it is of its own, and an entire change of feeling would be wrought on labor's side, which would supply the firmest ground of mutual coöperation for all the future. At all events, both parties—if so they must continue to be called—must now lose no time and relax no proper effort to come to a better mutual understanding. A state of perpetual hostility entails an incalculable loss to society at large, because of the increased waste to the industry by which it is nourished and strengthened for further conquests along the line of a still higher civilization. The best, in truth the only thing to do, is to bring the two factors in this vast and intricate social problem of our age into a common forum, where they can meet face to face, not to dispute and argue so much as to compare and contrast, to know each other more thoroughly, and to become one in heart as well as one in purpose.

Then and Now.

Elsewhere in this issue we have spoken of God as revealed to the modern conception alike by progressive thought, experimental science, and the revelations of Spiritualism—in the light of an all-containing Infinite Love which instinctively involves justice, acting in harmony with the law of cause and effect. It is profitable now and then to turn back a few leaves of the history of man's spiritual development, and note the changes which the dogmatic creeds and forms of professed belief in respect to his relations to the universe and the Deity have undergone. In the matter of Puritan Orthodoxy here in New England, for instance, it has been well said that the very titles of some of the sermons preached a century ago are enough to make one shudder. Some of those of the justly renowned Jonathan Edwards read in this way: "The Eternity of Hell's Torments," "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," "Why Saints in Glory will Rejoice to See the Torments of the Damned." Under this latter title Edwards discourses as follows:

"When they [the saints in glory] shall see how miserable others of their fellow creatures are, who were naturally in the same circumstances with themselves, when they shall see the smoke of their torment and the raging of the flames of their burning, and hear their dolorous shrieks and cries, and consider that they in the meantime are in the most blissful state and shall surely be in it to all eternity, how will they rejoice!"

In the course of a brimstone-breathing sermon, inspired by a legion of the devils of dyspepsia, he asserts that "the bigger part of those that heretofore have lived under the same means of grace and are now dead, are undoubtedly gone to hell," and thereupon he proceeds with the following lurid reflections:

"So that thus it is that natural men are held in the hand of God over the pit of hell; they have deserved the fiery pit, and are already sentenced to it; and God is dreadfully provoked, his anger is as great toward them as to those that are actually suffering the executions of the fierceness of his wrath in hell, and they have done nothing in the least to appease or abate that anger; neither is God in the least bound by any promise to hold them up one moment; the devil is waiting for them, hell is gaping for them, the flames gather and flash about them and would fain lay hold on them and swallow them up. . . . The God that holds you over the pit of hell, much as one holds a spider or some loathsome insect over the fire, abhors you and is dreadfully provoked. . . . It is everlasting wrath. It would be dreadful to suffer the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God one moment; but you must suffer it to all eternity; there will be no end to this exquisite, horrible misery; when you look forward you shall see a long forever, a boundless duration before you, which will swallow your thoughts and amaze your soul, and you will absolutely despair of ever having any deliverance, any end, any mitigation, any rest at all; you will know certainly that you must wear out long ages, millions of millions of ages, in wrestling and conflicting with this Almighty merciless vengeance; and then, when you have so done, when so many ages have actually been spent by you in this manner, you will know that all is but a point to what remains."

No wonder ministers and laymen are now trying to make it appear that no such views have ever been proclaimed by Old Orthodoxy—but such is the fact, notwithstanding. If such shocking conceptions of a possible future state for the largest portion of the human race were indeed well grounded a century ago, they assuredly are as true now as they were then. But Old Theology itself has practically outgrown them, and carefully suppresses open mention of them. At least it does not terrorize with them as it once freely did, driving young and old into its fold by main force, and that force wholly fear. The obvious reason is because of the increase of actual knowledge among the people. They refuse to be frightened in that way any more. They ridicule the whole thing as worse than childish superstition. And Spiritualism is spreading knowledge in a way that will put it out of the power of such superstition ever to oppress human souls again.

Remarkable Sittings with Dr. Henry Rogers at Onset Bay, Mass.

Of the many demonstrations of the presence of spirits of the higher life, and the power they can exercise over material things we have been privileged to witness, those that came under our observation last week are among the most remarkable. They occurred during a brief visit to Onset, where we were invited by Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Rogers to call upon them at their cottage. We cordially accepted the invitation, and at two o'clock on the afternoon of Tuesday, Aug. 28th, accompanied by Mr. George A. Bacon of Washington, proceeded to Dr. Rogers's residence. There, in addition to our host and hostess, we met Col. and Mrs. Kase of Philadelphia, and found a newly constructed instrument then just received from the West, designed to be operated as a telegraphic instrument by spirit friends in communicating with us independent of our own minds.

Before attempting to experiment with the new instrument, Dr. R. took a pair of slates, and thoroughly cleansed them. One of these he placed on the table, upon it he put a piece of thick Bristol card-board, and above this the other slate. The slates were then secured by stout rubber bands, no pencil or other article being enclosed. Dr. Rogers then handed them to Mr. Bacon, with a request that he hold them firmly.

Presently the occult instrument began to be operated upon by some unseen power; but as no one present could read the telegraphic alphabet, no intelligence was conveyed to us.

While expressing our regrets at this state of affairs, Mrs. S. Dick, a well-known Boston medium, called. She was invited to take a seat with us at the table, having done which she almost immediately became entranced, and interpreted the meaning of the sounds, which in substance was that Franklin and Morse were present and greatly interested in the development of the new telegraphic mode of communication between the denizens of the spirit-world and our own. Dr. Rogers also passed under the influence of one of his guides, who eloquently addressed us, remarking that all that was being accomplished at the time was done to give the people of earth a most positive, demonstrative proof of the contiguity of the two worlds, and of the great truth that immortality for all mankind is a fact.

Nearly half an hour had elapsed since Mr. Bacon took the slates, and he was yet holding them: Mrs. Rogers said, "Wonder if anything has been given on either of the slates or on the card?" Three raps gave an affirmative response, and it was asked, "Shall we open the slates?" "Yes, was rapped.

The cards were then taken from the slates, and, removing the top slate, we found the under side of it completely filled with writing, moderately large, clear and distinct. Lifting the card board, judge of our surprise in finding upon its under surface a wonderfully fine, artistic portrait of an elderly gentleman. This portrait was in oil colors, moist, as they naturally would be immediately after being put upon the card. The colors were strong; the lights and shades as admirably placed and blended as they would have been had an artist in earth-form spent a number of days in outlining and perfecting the picture.

The message on the slate was as follows:

"This picture is that of Morse, the celebrated inventor of telegraphy, and is given for our medium, through the united powers present, as a token of his presence and interest in this new development which he has been instrumental in forwarding, and which will be a great success. ESMUN."*

During the latter part of this highly interesting séance there was present Mr. F. P. Baker, editor of The Commonwealth, Topeka, Kansas, who had a sitting with Mr. Rogers after we left, which was so satisfactory to him that he requested us to print the following letter:

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

After you left this afternoon I sat down at the pine table which you and your friends sat around, and put my hands on it, as did Dr. Rogers and his wife. We held our hands on the table perhaps five minutes, when the doctor took a piece of card board, about six by ten inches in size, and put it between two slates, after washing them thoroughly. Around the slates he put an India rubber band to hold them together. He then placed the slate on my shoulder for perhaps one minute, then on the top of my head—I holding one side of it and he the other. It was held five—or perhaps three—minutes, when both of us took it off my head, and I laid it on a little box containing several kinds of oil colors. The box was perhaps an inch high. Both of us held the slates some ten minutes—certainly not to exceed that—the doctor, his wife and myself being most of the time engaged in conversation on different matters; the doctor a part of the time seemingly entranced, and part of the time joining in the conversation. At the end of the ten minutes, or about that time, I took the rubber from off the slates, when I found on the card-board a well-executed picture in oil of my wife (as I believe, and have no reason to doubt), who has been in spirit-life something over thirty-eight years. The paint on the card was fresh.

Yours truly, F. P. BAKER,
Editor Commonwealth, Topeka, Kan.

Onset, Mass., Aug. 28th, 1888.

* A spirit-guide of Dr. Rogers.

Testimonial to A. B. French.

Information reaches us that A. B. French—whose eloquent discourses on our platform have rendered his name a household word among Spiritualists from Maine to California—will on Thursday, Sept. 13th, attain to his fiftieth year in the mortal, and that the members of the Free Church at Clyde, O., (his place of residence), and other friends, propose to make the day memorable to him by an anniversary service. There will be music, addresses, etc., on this auspicious occasion.

We would suggest that those who have known him in the lecture field in the past write him a word of pleasant remembrance to be read on that date, as we feel that Bro. French richly deserves any tribute of praise which they may feel to tender him.

☞ The general opinion of the people of Onset is that Dr. H. B. Storer is wanted to preside as Chairman at the rostrum on conference and lecture occasions next year. We are glad to know that the disposition is manifested among the management to employ his valuable services in this direction.

☞ The marriage of Mr. Laurence Oliphant and Rosamond Dale Owen, daughter of the late Robert Dale Owen, occurred in England, Aug. 16th. A visit to Paris will be followed by their departure to the home of Mr. Oliphant in Syria.

☞ "J. E. P." of Scranton, Pa., has forwarded $5.00 to Mrs. McKenzie of Cincinnati, in aid of her worthy "Waif Fund."

An Ancient "Trust."

The late lamented Captain Kidd, as is well known, says the Providence Telegram, made the bulk of his property by one of those little "private affairs" now known by the name of "trusts." He joined with some other gentlemen of leisure and wealth, (including the then King of England, sub rosa) purchased a vessel, paying for it in the most honest and legal way, and then set sail to make money out of any one he could get in his power. The essence of a "trust" is investing your money in such a way that you can squeeze all the money out of another so that he cannot help himself. This is all Captain Kidd did when he sailed the ocean, and if a few people got killed while the captain was managing his responsible trust to the best advantage, it was because they persisted in interfering with Kidd's strictly "private affairs."

Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond

Devoted a week recently to her native home in Cuba, N. Y., enjoying a visit with relatives and friends. She spoke there Sunday, Aug. 19th, in the Universalist church, to a good audience. On the 26th ult. she had a delightful meeting in Corry, Pa. R. F. Livermore and his amiable wife opened their house to a select audience of friends, and the guides of Mrs. R. delivered an address which was appreciated by all.

Friday, Aug. 31st, Mr. and Mrs. Richmond were to leave for Cincinnati, where she is engaged for September. She then returns to Chicago for the season.

☞ A telegram to The Inter Ocean, Chicago, Ill., from Blakeman, Neb., under date of August 24th, states that on the day previous Abraha McAdams and Ira Boyce, on their way to that place, saw the apparition of a woman with one hand outstretched toward McAdams, as if beckoning him. Then it changed, and in the place of the woman stood a horse, with saddle-bags, and by its side a man dressed in clerical garb, whom McAdams at once recognized as the exact counterpart of his uncle, a Virginia circuit rider. The apparition turned for a moment toward the two men; then, regarding McAdams gravely for a moment, beckoned once, and mounting the horse galloped slowly off.

Arriving at Blakeman Mr. McAdams called for his mail, and was handed a letter with a deep black border, postmarked Three Rivers, Va. A portion of it read: "Your Uncle John was called home suddenly yesterday. He was taken ill in prayer meeting the night previous, and only lived a short time. He was conscious to the last. He asked that his library be given to you, and his dying request was that you should become a minister of the gospel and take up the work where he left off."

☞ The Senate Committee on Education and Labor, to whom was referred a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit "the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation and sale of alcoholic liquors," have, through Senator Blair, reported in favor of its adoption. The report states that at least ten millions of the people of the United States are in favor of abolishing the liquor traffic by national legislation, this estimate being based on petitions addressed to Congress, the prohibitory vote in various sections, and personal inquiry and observation. In addition to these there are, probably, as many more who have made no expression of their sentiments, but would rejoice to see so fruitful a source of unhappiness and crime done away with. The press generally favor placing the proposed amendment before the people for their adoption or rejection, and to such a course no honest person can reasonably object.

☞ A. S. Hayward, magnetic physician, has returned to Boston from his two months' visit to Onset Bay, Lake Pleasant and Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and will, until he resumes his office treatment, visit the sick in this city and vicinity, as per advertisement in another column.

☞ This is the way the St. Joseph, Mo., Herald would settle the "Oklahoma" business: "If the Oklahoma bill passes both houses of Congress, opening that territory to white settlement, the Government should not sell an acre of it to anybody, but hold it free for the use of those who wish to go there and cultivate it; and never relinquish the ownership of the land. Such a mode of procedure on the part of the Government would entirely cut off the land-sharks, who are now waiting to spring upon the land and gobble up the whole territory as soon as the bill passes. This is the only way in which the territory will ever be of any real benefit to actual settlers."

☞ We learn from Dr. J. M. Peebles that the Rev. Dr. Dykes, one of the most eminent of the London preachers, has for three years been chairman of the committee on the revision of the "Westminster Confession of Faith." The report which this committee adopted and sent to the English churches for review and consideration contains some very radical departures from the teachings of the Westminster theologians of two and a half centuries ago. And why not? Creeds and confessions are theological text-books; they are not infallible; they are the work of men's hands, and consequently subject to revision.

☞ The Pipe of Peace, published semi-monthly at the Indian School, Genoa, Neb., recalls to mind that famous declaration of President Cleveland: "I would rather have my administration marked by a sound and honorable Indian policy than by anything else." Now is the time of test, when the Sioux are under the pressure of mistaken friends and open foes. May the early promise of the Great Father at Washington be fulfilled in this later hour!

☞ Mr. George A. Bacon, of the Agricultural Department, Washington City, who has been with us the past two weeks on his yearly vacation, returned to that city on Thursday of last week, well satisfied with his visit to the Hub, and the Onset and Lake Pleasant Camp-Meetings. This gentleman has been a welcome correspondent of THE BANNER for many years, and it is to be hoped he will remain many years in his earthly form to still aid as in the past with his voice and pen in promulgating the beautiful truths of the New Dispensation.

☞ We are requested to state that Mrs. Ada Hoyt Foye, of San Francisco, is on her way East, bound for Europe, eventually, though now speaking in Chicago. We had sittings with this excellent medium in Boston many years ago, hence can endorse her mediumship. A letter from London recently informed us that reliable mediums were in great demand there at the present time, and we cordially recommend this lady to the kind attention of our friends in the old country.

☞ During our recent trip to Onset Bay we were much gratified at making the acquaintance of F. P. Baker, editor of The Commonwealth, Topeka, Kan., who contributes to this number of THE BANNER an interesting description of a very satisfactory sitting enjoyed by himself at the rooms of Dr. Henry Rogers.

☞ The remarks of the Controlling Intelligence, as spoken through Miss M. T. Shelhamer at our Public Free Circle—reported on the sixth page the present week—deserve the careful attention of all students of the mental and physical phases of manifestation of spirit-intelligence and power.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

Last Sat-it-day oysters opened in a healthy condition.

It is pretty well understood of late that iron warships, in case of a naval battle, would go to the bottom mighty quick when run into, without the enemy firing a gun.

The world 's not all wisdom, nor poems, nor flowers,
But each day has the same good twenty-four hours,
The same light, the same night. For your Jacobs, no tears;
They see the Rachels at the end of the years;
There 's waving of wheat, and the tall, strong corn,
And his heart blood is water, that sitteth forlorn.
—John Vance Cheney, in the Century.

West Superior, Wis., was the scene, Sept. 2d, of the latest hotel holocaust—ten lives, at least, being lost in the burning of the American House in that place.

The London Standard having hoisted the standard of war, and warned Uncle Samuel that the guns of England's iron-clads are behind Canada, in this business of retaliation in matters piscatorial, the Pall Mall Gazette, The Star, and the St. James Gazette of that city, have given it a sound drubbing for its insult to the United States; these influential papers ridicule the very idea of a military or naval conflict between the two countries. The sensational Standard had better haul down its flag, as it is evidently not a signal of the true English opinion.

Minneapolis, Minn., is to have a twenty-eight story building. The marvelous edifice will be eighty feet square, and will have a courtyard in the center. Its appearance on the plans is much like an aggravated church tower.

It is difficult to speak to the stomach, because it has no ears.—Plutarch, A. D. 120.

London dispatches for Sept. 2d report that an earthquake has done serious damage in New Zealand. Five shocks were felt during half an hour. The spire of the cathedral in the town of Christ Church was destroyed, and many other buildings were damaged.

Ten large business houses were burned on Hoskins Place, Baltimore, Md., Sept. 2d; seven firemen were killed by falling ruins, and a property loss inflicted of $1,500 000.

Being slightly out of sorts
He went to summer resorts
Where rich men cut a dash.
He 's out of sor's no longer,
Walking home has made him stronger,
But he is out of cash.
—Chicago Daily News.

The drift of Europe is steadily toward a general war, though the danger of famine from scant crops the coming winter may stay the hand of slaughter till another summer. France is quite ready to fight Italy for its operations in Abyssinia; Germany glowers on all sides, looking for some suspicious movement; Austria and Russia feel within them the presentiment of coming strife; England is doing what she can for purposes of defense. Religion seems to be taking a prominent position in this matter, as an element of strife rather than peace. Berlin dispatches aver that "under the new leader, young Kaiser William, a touch of stern religious fanaticism may be trained into the army, for the new set headed by the kaiser is excessively and very actively religious." This, the correspondent thinks, means war.

Our thanks are returned to Hon. Joseph Wheeler—Representative from Alabama—for public documents.

No great genius was ever without some mixture of madness, nor can anything grand or superior be spoken except by the agitated soul.—Aristotle, B. C. 381.

Men who are honest and self-reliant get along much better in the world than those who are governed by policy. Remember this.

In an instantaneous photograph of a carriage in rapid motion the spokes at the upper part of the wheel are blurred, while below they are not, which goes to show that the top of the wheel travels faster than the bottom.

Smith (an editor): "They say half the reading done by the public is of fiction. How dreadful!" Jones (a novelist): "Frightful! I did not suppose the newspapers were perused so extensively."

LIBERTY means intelligence, conscience, Intelligence educates conscience, Conscience secures cooperation, Cooperation compels happiness. SLAVERY means ignorance, Ignorance begets superstition, Superstition demands priests, Priests breed warriors, Warriors defend statesmen, Statesmen create monopoly, credits, coin, currency, usury, rent and profit.
R. J. Williams, in The National View.

"Labor day," Sept. 3d, was well observed at various points. Twelve thousand men participated in the parade in Boston, which was the most successful demonstration of its kind ever made in this city, and was highly creditable alike to those who marched and those who directed.

George Hains, colored, of Dinwiddie County, Virginia, is fifty-two years old, the father of twenty two children, and has never in his life been sick a day or taken a dose of medicine.

"GREENLAND'S ICY MOUNTAINS" Revised.
What though the spicy breezes
Are very nice and dry,
And every prospect pleases
A missionary eye?
In vain with lavish kindness
The Gospel tracts are strewn,
The heathen in his blindness
Does better left alone.

Sylvanus Cobb, Jr.'s most popular story, the one that clinched his reputation and largely helped to make the success of the New York Ledger, "The Gun-Maker of Moscow," will be published in Cassell & Company's Sunshine Library within a few days. Although there is hardly a man or boy in this country who has not heard of this story, it has never appeared in book form.

The following quotation is applicable to anonymous newspaper scribblers:

"Quod non cantis, quod non vides,
Animosa firmat fides,
Præter rerum ordinem."

Literally and liberally rendered it means this: "Upon men of small understanding nothing makes so deep an impression as what they do not understand."

GRAVE DUTIES—The undertaker's.

"Howard" in the Sunday Globe talks sensibly when he says that a few days of coolish weather, two or three heavy rainfalls, and that choicest of all absurdities, the opening of schools in the early days of September, induce thousands, yea, scores of thousands, of New Yorkers, Bostonians, Philadelphians, to turn their backs on Nature's glories that they may return to the coming heats, the stenches, the discomforts, the annoyances of city life.

Yellow fever is still active in Jacksonville—thirty-two deaths being reported; thirty-seven new cases Sept. 4th.

There may be nothing new under the sun, but there are some very strange beings. One of these is quartered at the Windsor. He is called Prof. Bert Reese, and claims to be a sightseer. As easily as another man would tell the time of day by looking at the clock, he can tell you the name of anybody or anything written on a piece of paper that has never left the writer's possession. "You have exactly three hundred and sixteen cents in your purse," he said to a Globe reporter, and on being asked to tell what the reporter had for breakfast, he replied: "You did not have anything. You failed to get up to breakfast." He forecasts the future, but whether he sees correctly the future alone can tell. But he is certainly a wonder.—The St. Paul Globe.

A terrible storm Aug. 31st, in which a water-spout and tidal-wave were commingled, caused great loss of life and property at Hot Springs, Ark. The dispatches state: "The city is gutted. Ruin and wreck meet the vision everywhere."

This is the season when the great American grumbler gets in his heavy work. He is not a rara avis. Not a hotel in the country but knows his presence. He can be found on the piazza gloomily garrulous, or in the reading-room growling over his newspaper. But the dining-room is his parade-ground. He is in his element at meal times. With every course, from the soup to the coffee, his voice goes up in varied protests. He worries the waiters and fatigues his friends. In his own peculiar way he is happy. So long as he can find plenty of things to grumble at he will enjoy his vacation. But it is sad that he cannot see himself as others see him.

Many people continue to mis-spell the word "Hindu" with two o's instead of using the letter u, which authorities aver should be used.

Penn's treaty with the Indians was kept most sacredly by the savage race, who though waging relentless war with the colonies were never known to shed a drop of Quaker blood. The history of this treaty was kept by the Indians, by means of strings of wampum, and they would often count over the shells on a clean piece of bark and rehearse its provisions.

"G. H.," Vermont, sends the following, and says it is right to the point: The faith-cure doctor took the hand of his patient, and, looking into his eyes, said: "I can cure you." Patient—"Are you sure?" "Very sure. All you 've got to do is to believe. Just believe you 're cured. That 's all." "All right; I 'll try it. Good day." "Hold on a minute, my man. Did n't you forget something?" "What?" "The fee. I charge a dollar a visit." "Oh! yes. Well, believe. All you 've got to do is to believe I 've paid you, and it 'll be all right."—The Boston Investigator.

A "silver wedding" is all very nice when you have plenty of silver to back it up. Not otherwise.

INSTINCTIVE FITNESS,
Rather than mere personal acquirements.
"The coarsest reed that trembles in the marsh,
If Heaven select it for his instrument,
Will shed Celestial music on the breeze.
As clearly as the pipe whose virgin gold
Befits the lips of Phoebus."

Rev. Mr. Fulton thinks Washington, D. C., "sits in the lap of Rome." Isn't that putting it rather strong?

"Ridicule," says a German critic, "is like a blow with the fist; wit, like the prick of a needle; irony, like the sting of a thorn; and humor, like the plaster which heals all these wounds."

A number of speeches the present week are expected in the United States Senate in regard to the President's fisheries retaliation message.

A "BLIND" SEQUENCE.—Nonquitt has a "Dumpling Club" drawn from its summer contingent, and the following is said to have been among the results of one of its recent sessions:

"Why is the west wind blind?
Because the west wind is a zephyr;
And zephyr is worsted,
And worsted is yarn,
And a yarn is a tale;
And a tail is an attachment;
And an attachment is love;
And love is blind."

A bad, designing man, who is fully aware himself that he is a hypocrite, and who endeavors to cover his iniquitous life by traducing the characters of honest people, thus deceiving those who have but slight acquaintance with the parties so traduced, is a villain of the rankest sort, all his specious pleadings to the contrary notwithstanding.

A wash which will remove the sunburn acquired by out-door sports is made by adding to twelve ounces of elder flower water six drams of common soda and six drams powdered borax. Applied to the skin will make it clear and soft.—The Sedgwick (Kan.) Pantagraph.

Many nihilists have recently been arrested in Russia.

A beautiful invocation, followed by words fitly spoken, in the spirit of love, has touched the hearts of many who came full of prejudice; while ridicule and abuse only pain the ear of the believer and send the skeptic away full of anger, perhaps never to return. Of course there is much provocation to harsh language in the manner and attitude of many who do not accept the teachings of Spiritualism; but those who hold a higher truth should teach that truth in a better way.

Coals are going up in price as well as in smoke.

Perish "policy and cunning,"
Perish all that fears the light,
Whether losing, whether winning,
Trust in God and do the right.

Catholic papers defend the miracles at the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre by saying that "one ounce of fact is worth a ton of argument and sneers." We would respectfully proffer the same reply to those people of whatever creedal belief—or no belief at all—who, knowing nothing whatever of Modern Spiritualism, are yet very free with their sneers—arguments not being their forte.

The first assisted Italian immigrant to this country was a person named Christopher Columbus.

Movements of Mediums & Lecturers.

[Notices under this heading must reach this office by Monday's mail to insure insertion the same week.]

Mr. J. W. Fletcher has returned to his office, No. 6 Beacon street, Boston. He begins his autumn lectures in Providence, R. I., in October.

Mrs. T. J. Lewis of Brooklyn, N. Y., the platform test medium, is still at No. 16 Bennett street, Boston, for the present. The Eastern friends are informed that she is ready to fill engagements on the platform in such districts. Address her direct at her present residence.—Dr. Horatio L. Tryon, another prominent medium, is also at the same residence.

Miss A. Josephine Webster, trance speaker, can be addressed for engagements through the month of October and November at her home, 148 Park street, Chelsea, Mass.

Dr. H. P. Fairfield is engaged to speak for the First Spiritual Society of Fitchburg, Mass., Sundays, Sept. 23d and 30th. He will also answer calls to lecture wherever his services may be required. Address him, Rockland, Me., Box 317.

Mrs. H. S. Lake, who is speaking for the First Association of Spiritualists at Parkland, Pa., to large and enthusiastic audiences, may be addressed, during September, at 2139 Uber Place, Philadelphia, Pa.

W. J. Colville's engagement ended at Cassadaga Friday, Aug. 31st, when he delivered a fine inspirational discourse on "The Future Government of America and of the World," to a large audience. During his stay there he has made many warm friends, and has been presented with five shares of stock in the Association. He expresses himself delighted with the camp in all respects, and is particularly ardent in his recognition of the hospitality and generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Skidmore, so well known as earnest Spiritualists and old-time workers.

Dr. H. F. Merrill, the platform test medium, is now permanently located at 87 Sewall street, Augusta, Me. He will fill all engagements the coming fall and winter. We are informed that almost every mail is bringing him letters for new engagements. Dr. M. will be pleased to correspond with lecturers and test mediums especially relative to work in Maine. He can give them letters from all over the State where workers for the cause of Spiritualism are in demand, and where the remuneration is good. "J. E. P.'s" letter will appear next week.

Dr. J. L. Wyman and wife have returned from their summer vacation, and can be found at 41 Mt. Pleasant street, East Somerville, Mass.

Geo. D. Dager, of Utica, N. Y., writes Sept. 2d that he listened with great pleasure, while at Lake Pleasant Camp, to Dr. Dean Clarke's discourse on "The Present Needs of our Cause," and thinks so able and eloquent a speaker should be fully employed by the Spiritualistic public. Dr. C. can be addressed in care of this office.

Aug. 31st, Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant and husband returned to Boston from a successful visit to Lake Pleasant Camp-Meeting. They embarked the same day on the Bangor boat to attend the Etna (Me.) Camp-Meeting. She would like to make engagements with societies to lecture and improvise poems (subjects from the audience), with psychometric readings and spiritual tests. She can be addressed at this office for the present.

J. Frank Baxter having concluded his successful engagement at Lake Pleasant, left last week for Etna, Me., Camp Meeting, where he was announced for Sept. 2d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 9th. It is expected he will lecture Sept. 12th in the Universalist Church at Sidney, Me. He is engaged for Madison Lake, Me., Camp-Meeting on Sept. 14th, 15th and 16th. He will open Lynn's season on Sundays Sept. 23d and 30th. All the Sundays of October he will lecture in Bridgeport, Ct.; of November, in Norwich, Ct.; of December, in Buffalo, N. Y.; of January, 1889, two in Portland, Me., and two in Willimantic, Ct.; of February, '89, in Albany, N. Y.; of March and April, '89 (including 41st Anniversary), in Worcester; of May, '89, two in Boston, and so on, every Sunday till October, 1889. Week evenings open. Address 181 Walnut street, Chelsea, Mass.

☞ A card on the fifth page announces that Hattie C. Stafford (who is, we are informed, a new medium for form manifestations) will hold séances at 55 Rutland street, Boston, G. T. Albro, manager. Her sittings are to commence at 2:30 on the afternoon of Sunday next.

Cleveland (O.) Notes.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The summer vacation being about over, signs are already apparent in spiritualistic ranks of reassembling for another season's active work in the promulgation of the spiritual philosophy in this city. The admirable course of lectures given here last winter, and the interest manifested by the general public therein, encouraged the Lyceum managers to a similar course this fall and winter, opening the season with Mrs. Helen Stuart-Richings, the talented and versatile medium and elocutionist, of Boston, in October, and continuing the entire month. The full list of speakers engaged will be published after the next business meeting; the season promises to be a memorable one in the history of Spiritualism in this city of churches.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum.—Conductor Richard Carleton will issue a call through the Secretary, E. W. Gaylord, for a meeting next Sunday morning (Sept. 9th) at G. A. R. Hall to lay out the work for the coming season, and the children of the Lyceum will convene on the following Sunday. All Spiritualists in the city interested in the children's behalf are urgently requested to attend, and give their advice and help, if possible, to the workers who have stood so faithfully by the Children's Progressive Lyceum.

Another Lyceum.—Rumor has it that another Children's Lyceum is to be organized in Cleveland this season. We hope it may prove true, for with our population of over two hundred and sixty thousand there is certainly room for one if not two more. The great distance that separates Spiritualists in this city makes it both difficult and expensive to assemble at one point, no matter how central it may be. If Cleveland Spiritualists generally fully realized the great importance of the spiritual culture and unfoldment of their children, they would see to it before the season is over that other Sunday schools were started beside the Central one; a Lyceum at the "East End," "Newburgh," "West Side," would give a strength to the cause it has never yet had, and remove the excuse of those who send their children to the Sunday-school of the nearest church, because "it's too far to send them to the G. A. R. Hall." While it is very questionable whether two societies giving lectures could be sustained here, there is no doubt in our mind but what two or more Children's Lyceums could flourish as well if not better than even the one we now have. Think of it, friends, and interest yourselves in this the really paramount work of Spiritualists.

Cleveland's Excursion to Cassadaga.—This growing camp-meeting was well patronized, as usual, by Ohioans this season, and those who could not spare the time to take in the entire six weeks, availed themselves of the ten-days' excursion which left Cleveland Friday, Aug. 17th, all reporting an enjoyable time. The interchange of thought with people from all parts of the country and the sociability to be found there, added to which are the grandest of lectures from the very best speakers on the spiritual rostrum and some of the best physical mediums, make it an enjoyable and profitable way of spending one's vacation.

The Good Samaritan Relief Society (a Ladies' Sewing society auxiliary to the Lyceum) will resume its meetings Sept. 7th, and continue them the first and third Friday of each month. The new constitutions are now ready and can be had on application to the President, Mrs. T. V. Cooke, 237 Garden street, or to the Secretary, Mrs. M. Smith, 1121 Woodland Avenue.

A Minister "Steps Down and Out."—The popular minister, Rev. Geo. Thomas Dowling, of the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, read his letter of resignation to his flock recently, and leaves the Baptist church after five more Sundays. In answer to a reporter he said, "I have no idea as to what church I will enter." Thus is felt, and made manifest, the liberalizing influence of Spiritualism.

Miss Clair Tuttle, the youthful, beautiful and talented daughter of Hudson and Emma Tuttle, who has inherited in an intensified degree the elocutionary talent of her mother, is to make her début in Cleveland this coming season, in a novel and recherche entertainment, specially adapted to her highly emotional and spiritual gifts.

In Memoriam.—H. F. Brayton, one of the most respected pioneer citizens of Cleveland, passed to spirit life at the advanced age of seventy-six years. Though for years known as a Spiritualist, his obsequies were conducted by the Rev. James A. Bolles of the Episcopal Church.

Transition of Richard Coleman.—After a lingering illness of many months, this zealous Spiritualist, aged seventy-six, passed to the higher life, Aug. 30th, from his home in Newburgh. Mr. R. Coleman is the father of Cleveland's promising trance speaker, Wm. W. Coleman. Our departed brother leaves a wife and several children who will keenly feel their loss, as will the workers in our ranks who have been associated with him for many years in helping the cause in the city. Fraternally yours, THOS. LEES.

ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN. Papers Read at the Fifteenth Women's Congress in New York, Oct. 1887. 8vo, paper, pp. 149. Also REPORT OF THE ASSOCIATION, Submitted at Said Congress. pp. 104. Fall River, Mass.: J. H. Franklin & Co.

We are indebted to Mrs. Lita Barney Sayles, Chairman of the Committee on Publication, for copies of the above. The papers are twelve in number; in addition to the opening address of the President, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, all meritorious—that upon "Egyptian Women," by Mrs. Charlotte B. Wilbour of Paris, a record of personal observation and intercourse, being of special interest. The others treat upon Responsibility of Women to Society, Home Studies for Women, Responsibilities of States to their Dependent Children, Scientific Charity, A Women's Congress, Intellectual Sympathy, Women in Labor Reform, Thought, Hope and Consolation from Browning, Women as Educators, Development and Growth of Art in the West, and The Freedom of Fate.

The report includes returns from all the States, a list of officers, committees and members, and a summary of information relating to what has been accomplished up to the date of its presentation.

THE WAY PUBLISHING COMPANY.—At an adjourned annual meeting of the stockholders of The Way Publishing Company, (publishers of The Better Way, at Cincinnati, O.,) held at Covington, Ky., on Sept. 1st instant, the following named Directors were elected: J. K. P. Bigger, Thos. J. Smith, J. N. Ramsey, S. E. Hyndman, C. C. Stowell, A. F. Melchers, L. Barney. At a meeting of these Directors, subsequently held, J. K. P. Bigger was elected President, and L. Barney Secretary and Treasurer.

☞ Augustus Day writes us from Detroit, Mich., that Dr. Bartlett and Mr. Joseph Barber have rented his premises, No. 12 Park Place, with a view to conducting the practice of magnetic healing. Dr. Ira Davenport is at present in Detroit, where he expects to remain for awhile; he is in good spirits, and reports the Haslet Park Camp-Meeting, which he has attended, to be a great success. Mr. Day's Sale and Circulating Library will soon be established at 73 State street, in a room adjoining Fraternity Hall.

THE NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MAGNETICS.—We learn that the course of lectures at the New York College of Magnetics has been received with great interest by a number of physicians, lawyers and intelligent students who have listened to them, especially as they explain so many mysteries of life that have heretofore not been understood. The works of Dr. Babbitt, the Dean of this institution, are now being translated into French by Madame Lemaitre of France, who declares that they should be translated into all languages and their principles taught to every individual.

The fall term this year commences on Oct. 2d, and for this one term Dr. Babbitt has concluded to put his tuition lower than the regular price. The college has a regular charter, and its handsome diploma confers the degree of D. M., or Doctor of Magnetics, which signifies that the student is competent to practice healing by magnetic massage, sunlight, electricity, baths, and by the refined psychic and natural forces generally, and the Doctor considers these far more safe and powerful than medicines. We learn that in case of students at a large distance, who cannot be present, a system of printed questions is used, somewhat on the Chautauqua University plan, by which the course can be taken at their own homes. Persons in England, California, and a medical professor in India are taking the course in this way. Those interested in further particulars can address the Dean at 30 East 14th street, New York.

Dr. Donald Kennedy, of Boston, Mass., U. S. A., called on his way to Liverpool. He has had a serious illness, but is very serene and happy though weak. He looks well still, being a man of fine physique and generous disposition. He says he left Inverness in 1831, and on visiting it in 1874 he found only two persons who knew him, or whom he had known. He has taken the BANNER OF LIGHT from the second number, and had the volumes bound. He is as warmly interested in Spiritualism as ever. It is his intention to spend the remainder of his days in America. For the last twelve years he has been most of the time in Europe. He has been most kindly toward mediums and spiritual workers, and has been rewarded with manifestations of an extraordinary character, and the love and good-will of many of his fellowmen, in which sentiment we join most heartily.—The Medium and Daybreak, Aug. 24th.

☞ WRITING PLANCHETTES for sale by Colby & Rich. Price 60 cents.

Spiritualistic Meetings in Boston.

College Hall, 24 Essex Street.—Sundays, at 10½ A. M., 2½ and 7½ P. M. Eben Cobb, Conductor.

Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown.—Mediums' meeting every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Dr. Mark Smith, Chairman.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M.; also Wednesdays at 3 P. M. Dr. E. H. Mathews, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M. F. W. Mathews, Conductor.

College Hall, 24 Essex Street.—The meetings at this hall, on Sunday, Sept. 2d, were quite interesting. Mr. Eben Cobb being absent, Mrs. Cobb carried on the services, Frank T. Ripley presiding and making a short address, which was well received by the audience. Miss Peabody gave some marked tests in psychometric readings which were acknowledged to be correct by those receiving them. Mr. Ripley also gave tests which were acknowledged to be correct. Mrs. T. J. Lewis gave several tests of spirit-identity and intelligence. Mr. Beckwith made some remarks for a spirit mother. Mr. Redell also spoke in his usual manner, alluding, in the course of his remarks, to the fact that Jacob Edson had an ill turn after his address at College Hall the Sunday previous, but, he was happy to say, was now on the way to improved conditions of health. Mr. McKenzie gave a few readings, psychometrically or otherwise, which were essentially correct. COM.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—These meetings under the new management are still increasing in attendance. Last Sunday afternoon Mr. Coombs was the first speaker; he also gave more than a dozen spirit-descriptions and names in full, all of which were fully recognized. Mrs. Lewis also gave good satisfaction in her spirit-descriptions; David Brown was the next speaker—closing with spirit delineations. Mr. McKenzie also gave tests. Dr. Roscoe closed the exercises with psychometric readings.

In the evening Mrs. Abbie Burnham, Mr. Coombs, Mr. McKenzie, and the chairman participated—the latter closing the exercises with psychometric readings which were fully recognized.

Next Sunday evening Mrs. Burnham will occupy the platform. F. W. MATHEWS.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—The platform was occupied both afternoon and evening by Mrs. Burnham, Mrs. Townsend, Mr. McKenzie, and others. The tests that were given through the mediumship of Mrs. Townsend in the evening were truly wonderful. These meetings are still increasing in interest. F. W. M

[TRUTH FROM THE STANDARD.]—Whether these phenomena, assuming them to be real, are spiritual revelations, or manifestations of some unknown natural force, every one must judge for himself on his own experience. But whether or not they are only tricks, is a problem that may be solved to the satisfaction of candid minds. It cannot be solved, however, so long as a claim of power to produce the manifestations is regarded as conclusive evidence of fraud, and belief in their genuineness as proof of idiocy.—N. Y. Standard.

☞ George T. Albro states that séances for full form manifestations will be held as usual at 55 Rutland street, Boston, commencing Sunday afternoon, Sept. 9th.

For Seasickness, use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Dr. W. W. BLACKMAN, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I am very much pleased with it in seasickness. Several cases have been brought to my attention where it afforded prompt and entire relief."

Spiritualist Camp-Meetings for 1888.

QUEEN CITY PARK, VT. Meeting commenced Aug. 21st and continues to Sept. 16th, inclusive.

NANTIC, CT.—Meeting closes Sept. 9th.

ETNA, ME. Camp-Meeting commenced at Bickwell's Grove, Aug. 31st, and closes Sept. 9th.

NEW ERA, ORE. Camp-Meeting commences Sept. 7th, and continues two weeks.

Special Notice.

The date of the expiration of every subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT is plainly marked on each address. The paper is discontinued at that time unless the subscription is previously renewed. Subscribers intending to renew will escape inconvenience by sending in the money for renewal before the expiration of their present subscription. It is the earnest desire of the publishers to give the BANNER OF LIGHT the extensive circulation to which its merits entitle it, and they therefore look with confidence to the friends of the paper throughout the world to assist them in their important work.

COLBY & RICH, Publishers.

For Sale at this Office:

THE TWO WORLDS: A journal devoted to Spiritualism, Occult Science, Ethics, Religion and Reform. Published weekly at Manchester, England. Single copy, 5 cents.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. A Progressive Family Health Magazine. Published monthly in New York. Single copy, 10 cents.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN. Monthly. Published at Boston. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE SOUL. Monthly. Published in Boston. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE CARRIER DOVE. Illustrated. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BIZARRE. NOTES AND QUERIES, with Answers in all Departments of Literature. Monthly. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE OLIVE BRANCH: Utica, N. Y. A monthly. Price 10 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Published weekly at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE NEW THOUGHT. Published weekly in Des Moines, Iowa. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE WATCHMAN. Published monthly at Chicago, Ill. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH-SEEKER. Published weekly in New York. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE MIND-CURE AND SCIENCE OF LIFE. Monthly. Published at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE. Published monthly in New York. Price 10 cents.

THE THEOSOPHIST. A Monthly Journal, published in India. Single copy, 30 cents.

THE GOLDEN GATE. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BETTER WAY. A Spiritualistic weekly journal. Published in Cincinnati, O. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE EASTERN STAR. A weekly journal. Published at Bangor, Me. Single copies 5 cents.

THE PATH. A Monthly Magazine, devoted to Universal Brotherhood, Theosophy in America, and Aryan Philosophy. Single copy, 20 cents.

THE ESOTERIC. A Monthly Magazine of Advanced and Practical Esoteric Thought. Published in Boston. Single copy, 15 cents.

MENTAL HEALING. A Monthly Magazine. Published in Boston, Mass. Single copies 10 cents.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Each line in Agate type, twenty cents for the first and every insertion on the fifth or eighth page, and fifteen cents for each subsequent insertion on the seventh page.

Special Notices forty cents per line, Minion, each insertion.

Business Cards thirty cents per line, Agate, each insertion.

Notices in the editorial columns, large type, leaded matter, fifty cents per line.

Payments in all cases in advance.

☞ Advertisements to be renewed at continued rates must be left at our Office before 12 M. on Saturday, a week in advance of the date whereon they are to appear.

☞ Only small and light cuts will be allowed in the advertising columns. When accepted, our rates for that portion of the advertisement occupied by the cut will be one-half price in excess of the regular rates.

Electrotypes of pure type matter will not be accepted.

The publishers reserve the right to reject any and all electrotypes.

The BANNER OF LIGHT cannot well undertake to vouch for the honesty of its many advertisers. Advertisements which appear fair and honorable upon their face are accepted, and whenever it is made known that dishonest or improper persons are using our advertising columns, they are at once interdicted.

We request patrons to notify us promptly in case they discover in our columns advertisements of parties whom they have proved to be dishonorable or unworthy of confidence.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Dr. F. L. H. Willis may be addressed as usual for the summer Glenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
Jy7 13w*

Andrew Jackson Davis, Seer into the causes and natural cure of disease. Send for information to his office, 63 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass. 13w* Jy7

H. A. Kersey, No. 3 Bigg Market, Newcastle-on-Tyne, will act as agent in England for the BANNER OF LIGHT and the publications of Colby & Rich during the absence of J. J. Morse

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO STOUT PEOPLE.

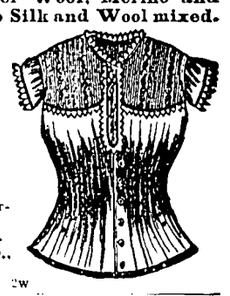
Distant Patients Successfully Treated.

Obesity is fatty degeneration. This disease is not only cured, but permanently so, by new, rational means. No dieting. No failure in a single instance. Send stamp for full particulars to DR. EDITH BERDAN, 113 Ellison street, Paterson, New Jersey.

Thin People increased in weight and flesh by regulation of the nerves of nutrition. Vegetable Remedies. Can be sent by mail. Address DR. BERDAN, (formerly Dr. Edith Hale) Au25

J. W. FLETCHER,
MEDICAL AND BUSINESS MEDIUM,
ALSO ELECTRICIAN AND MAGNETIST,
6 Beacon street, Boston.

DRESS REFORM.
Jersey-Fitting Union Suits,
Silk, Jaeger Wool, Merino and Gauze, also Silk and Wool mixed.



BATES WAIST (perfect substitute for corsets).
Catalogue Sent Free.
MISS BATES & CO.,
47 Winter St., Boston.
8S 2w

CAUTION!

SPIRITUALISTS who desire to support Mediums, Camp-Meetings and Speakers, and who intend to visit

ONSET BAY

This season, are cautioned to buy their excursion tickets via "ONSET." The 9 A. M. and 4.05 P. M. trains from Boston are the most rapid express trains. Sundays, at 8:15, from Boston.

For
COMFORT, SPEED AND SAFETY,

Buy "ONSET" tickets, and thereby avoid the dust and annoyances of horses, and reach the Grove in advance of any other way. You will also help to support the meetings and

SAVE MONEY

For yourself, as you will secure advantages by showing your "ONSET" railroad ticket at the

CAMP-MEETING.

Jy28 4tf

HATTIE C. STAFFORD

WILL give séances at No. 55 Rutland street Sundays, Tuesdays at 7 and Saturdays at 2:30 P. M., also Sundays and Wednesdays at 3 P. M.
8S 4t GEORGE T. ALBRO, MANAGER.

Mrs. Carrie M. Sawyer,

MATERIALIZING MEDIUM, 785 6th Avenue, New York City. Séances Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock, Thursday afternoons at 2 o'clock.
8S 1w*

DR. J. C. STREET,
78 Montgomery street, Boston, Mass.
Jy7 13w

PROF. BEARSE, Astrologer, Office 172 Washington street; residence 230 Meridian street, Boston, Mass. Whole life written, horoscope free. Reliable on Business, Marriage Disease, Speculation, etc. Send age, stamp, and hour of birth if possible. 1w* 8S

MRS. C. H. LOOMIS-HALL, Test and Business Medium, treats all diseases with Magnetism, Medicated Vapor Baths; 50 cents and $1.00 treatments; diagnosis free at office, 128 West Brookline street, Boston.
8S 1w*

OUTSIDE THE GATES:
AND
OTHER TALES AND SKETCHES,
BY A BAND OF SPIRIT INTELLIGENCES,
THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF
MISS M. T. SHELHAMER.

And Love shall wipe all tears from their eyes; and the faces of the sad shall grow radiant in the light of Eternal Dawn; the weary-hearted shall find rest; and the heavily-laden shall drop their burdens; for the Land of the Blest overfloweth with boundless mercies for all who enter therein.

This new volume consists of two parts; the first, containing a series of articles by Spirit "Benedict," entitled "Thoughts from a Spirit's Standpoint," on subjects of deep importance, which all thinking minds would do well to read and reflect upon. Also, the personal history of a spirit, entitled "Outside the Gates," in which the narrator graphically depicts her progress in spirit-life from a state of unhappiness outside the heavenly gates to one of peace in the "Sunrise-Land"—developing on the way stories of individual lives and experiences as well as descriptions of the conditions and abodes of the spirit-world. This portion of the volume concludes with a personal narrative of "What I Found in Spirit-Life"—by Spirit Susie—a pure and simple relation of the life pursued by a gentle soul in her home beyond the vale.

Part second of this interesting book opens with "Morna's Story," in five installments—an autobiographical narrative. This remarkable history has never before appeared in print. It treats of life, states of government, schools, art, language, training, locomotion, food and nutrition, in worlds beyond. "Morna's Story" also tells of transitions from world to world, of sacred councils in the spiritual kingdom, and of the high development of mediumship in such a state, giving much information on important subjects to those who read. We also have here those interesting stories of several chapters each, "Here and Beyond" and "Slippery Places," which "Morna" has given to the world through the columns of the BANNER OF LIGHT; and the book concludes with a new story of sixteen chapters, which that interesting spirit presents to the public for the first time, entitled "The Blind Clairvoyant; or, A Tale of Two Worlds." Those who have read the serials emanating from the mind of "Morna" through the pen of Miss Shelhamer, need not be told of what a treat they have in store in the perusal of this production.

CONTENTS.

PART I.
THOUGHTS FROM A SPIRIT'S STANDPOINT.
OUTSIDE THE GATES.
WHAT I FOUND IN SPIRIT-LIFE.

PART II.
MORNA'S STORY.
HERE AND BEYOND.
SLIPPERY PLACES.
THE BLIND CLAIRVOYANT.

In one volume of 515 pages, neatly and substantially bound in cloth. Price $1.25; postage free.

Published and for sale by COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston.

THE DIET CURE: An Essay on the Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease and Cure. By T. L. NICHOLS, M. D.

The work treats on the following subjects: Health. Food. Water. Of the Blood. The Natural Food of Man. Disease. Prevention and Cure. The Question of Quantity. The Question of Quality. Principles of the Diet Cure. Medical Opinions on the Diet Cure. Of Diet in Acute, Scrofulous, and Nervous Diseases. The Diet Cure in Obesity. Vis Medicatrix Naturæ. The Diet Cure in Various Diseases. The Water Cure. Waste of Life. The Life of the Race. The Population Question. Some Practical Illustrations. Air and Exercise. Of Psychic Force. National Health and Wealth. Personal Advice.

Cloth, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Message Department.

☞ The Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond—whether for good or evil: that those who pass from the earthly sphere in an undeveloped state, eventually progress to higher conditions. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his or her reason. All express as much of truth as they perceive—no more.

☞ It is our earnest desire that those who recognize the messages of their spirit-friends will verify them by informing us of the fact for publication.

☞ Letters of inquiry in regard to this Department of THE BANNER must not be addressed to the mediums in any case. LEWIS B. WILSON, Chairman.

The Free-Circle Meetings

At this office will be resumed Sept. 11th.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED,

THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

Report of Public Séance held June 19th, 1888—Continued from last issue.

Questions and Answers.

QUES.—Is it not as reasonable to demand that an investigator should substantiate himself as a fair and candid visitor at a séance, and in a properly receptive condition of mind, as that a medium should prove herself capable of having genuine manifestations, and none other?

ANS.—It is certainly as fair and honorable for a medium or her spirit guides to demand evidence of fair dealing on the part of the investigator or sitter, as it is for the latter to demand evidence of the reliability of the medium with whom he sits; but we deplore the state of things that demands such evidence from either side; we like to look at humanity as being in its best and fairest condition and spirit when it desires to enter into communication with the unseen world. We like to think that an investigator comes to a medium in all honesty of purpose, seeking only the truth, and perhaps loving communications and counsel from his departed friends, and we certainly do rejoice in believing that all true mediums sit only for the spiritual world because they desire to bless humanity with a knowledge of immortal life. If all would look at this matter from such a standpoint, we would waive aside any thought of demanding test conditions from either side; we should receive the investigator in a spirit of candid honesty, believing him to be as honorable as ourselves; we would desire to accord to him whatever evidence of immortal life the spirit-world might be able to bring to us and to offer through our instrumentality.

We believe the time is coming when Spiritualism and mediumship will be placed upon this footing; there will be less of cold distrust, of suspicion, or of material thought, in the attitude of both sides; those who visit a medium will go in humbleness of spirit, wishing to learn, to grow wise and better by that which they may receive; and those who sit as instruments for the spiritual world will also be softened in thought and in aspiration, very much more than many of them are to-day; they will not so much consider what the world has to say of their gifts, how popular or unpopular they may prove to be, by what they may give forth, how much money they shall make by their operations or by their work for the spirit-world, or how they can best use their powers and that which is around them for their own self-aggrandizement. We speak plainly, because this is a question that requires plainness of speech, and we see the need of improvement on both sides—those who seek communication with the spirit-world, and those who serve as its instruments.

Not but that we have many honest, earnest Investigators, who desire to learn truly of the higher life, that they may grow in spirit and that they may become more useful to their kind. Not but what we have mediums who are honest in purpose, who desire to serve humanity by serving the spiritual world, whose best thought is given to how they shall do this in proving the immortality of the race, in opening conscious communication between the two worlds. We are glad to say that we have many such investigators, such minds coming forward to a reception of truth from every quarter of the land, and that we have many instruments, in public and private life, who are as honorable and sincere in their work as we desire to find them. And we also have a large class of suspicious, distrustful men and women who visit mediums, seeking only those whom they think they may prove impostors, coming forward at every opportunity to tear down, if possible, those things that should prove sacred to the world; men and women, who, perhaps, would be disappointed—at least such is their attitude—should it be proven to them incontrovertibly that Spiritualism is true, that the dead can return into communication with mortals. We have also, in Spiritualism, certain individuals claiming mediumship, and possessing it to a certain extent, who try to multiply their powers by devices of their own, who endeavor to impose upon the public for selfish purposes, who are unscrupulous in their dealings with the world of spirits and the world of mortals, caring only to put themselves forward in a popular light, and to draw to their séance-rooms those who will accept whatever foolish representation is given in the name of Spiritualism, and who will pay roundly for it in material wealth.

These things we are obliged to consider, and therefore we speak plainly; but the day is not far distant, even though it may be measured by a few years, when those who are false to their highest natures, who are untrue to the spiritual development of their lives, who live materially, at the expense of the higher part of their beings, must and will be swept aside from the work of Spiritualism. And the day is dawning when those minds who are coldly critical and distrustful, unable to see a good point in spirits or mortals that cannot be measured by their own minds, those who are ready to find all that is untrue and unlovely, and at the same time quick to cover up from the public gaze all that is beautiful and serene in mediumistic life, will also be ignored by spirits and mediums alike, and given no opportunity of investigating the light of Spiritualism until they are ready to drop the scales from their eyes, and to accept it in its true meaning.

Q.—[By a correspondent.] Is it not possible to surround a good medium with conditions so bitterly antagonistic to truth that that medium shall seemingly appear dishonest?

A.—Most certainly it is possible, although it does not often occur, because a good medium—and we mean by this not only one who is morally pure, correct in habit and in life, but one who is a good medium in the sense of being a well developed instrument for the spirit-world—will have attracted to him or to her a band of spirit intelligences, exalted in their nature, wise in character, and undoubtedly able, under general conditions, to protect their medium. Having this band of spirits at their command, a good medium will be able to pass through many scenes of darkness and of distress, and yet be upheld from sinking into these sloughs of sorrow or pain, by the influence and the attendance of these spirit guides. And yet, there is a possibility that even such a medium might be overwhelmed by the psychological influence and power of designing spirits and mortals, and be so surrounded by darkness and by wrong-doing, as for the time to be overcome by these conditions, and be made to serve as an instrument for their expression. Possibly, having been brought into a state of such darkness and evil on earth, surrounded by a number of persons who are strong and positive in their natures, with determined wills, evil in inclination, who had also attracted to their assistance undeveloped spirits of a like character, the medium might be so affected by these psychological conditions as to have, for the moment, the magnetism between himself and his own personal spirit guides severed or counteracted, so that he could not receive any vital assistance from them.

Mind you, friends, we say that is possible, but it does not often occur, and the conditions on earth must be very extreme before such a state of things can arise.

Granting, however, that a medium who is by nature pure and honest, and who is a well-developed instrument for good spirits, is brought into such a condition, caught up by some psychological law and swept into an atmosphere that is detrimental to his moral nature, and at the same time that is so different from that of his personal spirit guides, so that they cannot mingle with it, in such a case, whatever that medium might be induced to do at the time he could not possibly be responsible for. However wrong his movements might seem to be to those who gaze upon them, he could not be held accountable, since he has been caught up into this potent atmosphere and is infiltrated with it, working out through his organism its own elements, performing that which stronger minds than his own, more evil and earthly by nature, are compelling him to do.

In the wisdom and providence of God and of supreme goodness, under the ministration of exalted spirits, who are many in the great universe, it is not often that a pure aspirational soul thus descends to tricks of vice or wrong doing. The great, general rule and law of life seems to be, that "like attracts like" under every condition and circumstance of existence, and the medium who is good and honest, who desires to live for truth and right-doing, brings to himself elements of a like nature, influences that are grand and uplifting, which will support him in every hour of trial and of danger. Were it not so, no human spirit on earth or in the other life, however pure and good he might be, would be safe from the influence of evil, or be sure of not being dragged down into terrible danger, into a slough of despondency and iniquity, but we believe that those who desire it may be sure of the divine protection.

Q.—[By A. C. S., Great Bend, Kansas.] What is the view held by the spirit-world of the book of Revelations as a forecast of the future life?

A.—Spirits differ upon this question. There are spirits whom we have met who certainly believe the book of Revelations to be a transcript, or forecast, so to speak, of that which is to come, but those spirits who accept the idea in such an entirety have not advanced very far in spiritual life, nor have they taken a vital hold of that existence which is broad, throughout the universe, and which applies entirely to the spiritual part of man. Personally we believe that the "Revelations" were given inspirationally to mediumistic minds on earth by special intelligences, who sought to afford mankind certain knowledge and thoughts concerning the immortality of the race. That these inspirations were imperfectly given, must be proven to every thoughtful mind; that they were not directly the infallible word either of a God, a Supreme Being, or of any divine spirit, must be accorded; that they are mingled with and filled with thoughts and ideas drawn from the material existence, is certainly plain; and yet if we study these so-called revelations carefully we shall find that they contain much that is spiritual, much to afford thought to our minds, and to suggest new ideas of the Infinite capacity of humanity as a whole. These revelations, then, are to us inspired words, coming through mortal organisms imperfectly developed for the reception of spiritual truths, yet as fairly unfolded as could be found at the time they were given, and they were brought not by infinite intelligence, but by individual spirits, each with his own thought, and even each one with his own vagary of opinion, all wishing to give to man on earth something that might be recorded concerning the life to come. In one sense they are revelations, as they have been revealed from the world beyond; but it does not follow that we are to accept them as divinely revealed either by returning spirits or by those mortals on earth who think they hold the solution of every mystery and can solve every problem in the universe; we are to study that which is given, accept that which accords with our best judgment, try to learn and advance in life year after year, so as to broaden our minds, quicken our capacity for learning, and in this way we shall be able to select the vital truths that may be contained in the so called "Revelations" of the Bible, or in any other book of nature or of man, to retain that which affords us instruction or benefit morally, physically or spiritually, and to reject that which is coarse and crude, not assimilative with our own expansive minds.

SPIRIT MESSAGES,

THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Mrs. B. F. Smith.

Report of Public Seance held June 1st, 1888.

David Bagley.

My name is David Bagley, and my home was in Topsham, Vt. I lived in the form over eighty-two years, and I was glad to be released from it. Before the spirit took its flight, my own dear father, who many years before was called up higher, came near to me, saying: "Dear child, soon you will join the happy band above," and in a few days my summons came. I found loved ones waiting to take me by the hand, and dear companions who had gone on years before.

We love to come and let our friends know that we are happy in the spirit-life, and that we are ever progressing onward. We meet many an old friend over here, as well as kindred and neighbors; we form acquaintances, too, just as we would on earth, and we are only too glad to stop and converse together. I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for allowing me to speak.

Benjamin Fitzgerald.

My name is Benjamin Fitzgerald, of Canaan, Maine. I feel that I shall gain something by coming here, and also reach some of my friends. Mother is with me, and William, but not present to-day.

I desire very much that my dear ones should learn something of the subject of spirit-return. It matters not what others may say; go and seek the truth for yourselves and form your own judgment. I feel the need of what it was my privilege to have gained here, and I am trying to learn all I can.

Occasionally, as I drift into the meetings, in one town and another, I feel disappointed because the mediums do not speak our names. But we must wait. I feel confident that in time we will be able to make ourselves known. I am satisfied with the home they gave me, but I find that by progression I can build it more beautiful still. I do n't want my friends, when they come over here, to look back with regret and say: "Here and there was a channel open, but I did not choose to use it." I am thankful that there is communion between the two worlds.

Milton Emerson.

I am Milton Emerson, of White Cloud, Kan. My father, mother, sisters and brother are not far from Boston, in one of the surrounding towns, and I know, through some good friends, they will hear that I have been able to make myself known.

I have many dear ones on earth; some still remain at White Cloud. Abbie is here to-day. Charles is not; a mission has called him in another direction.

Oh! mother, do learn that your children have only gone a little before you, but are not dead. You have been called to part with three; but in heaven they will be given back again—your number will be complete. When I first looked around me, I hardly knew that I had made the change—for I will be honest and say that I knew very little of spirit-return, having given my thoughts and attention much more to worldly affairs than to things spiritual; yet I felt many times that those who had passed away could not be far from me—although where, I knew not. I wish my friends would seek for knowledge concerning this side of life, because I see it will be so much to their advantage when they cross over.

My father's name is Dean Emerson; my mother's is Susan. I know they will get the message.

James Gore.

My home was in Athens, Me. James Gore. I shall be remembered by my friends when they see the message, for many times have they thought, "Where is the little Jimmie who went away so young?"

Many have crossed the threshold of the spirit-life since the little one was snatched out of the home; the angel of change will come but a few times more into our family, as nearly all are now with me. One brother and two sisters still remain on the earthly side.

Brother David is here, and John Wesley, sister Esther, and father and mother. We are happy in our beautiful spirit home. Dear sisters, I know you often think of us. Oh! think that we are with you, and not far away. In a little time the veil will be lifted from your eyes, and you will find your brother Jimmie again. You think sometimes: "Shall we see him with those little curls?" Yes; the same as you knew me here, only taller and older. Oh! how glad it has made us as one and another has joined us.

Dear sister Clara, I know your heart bled when you found brother Samuel had passed over; but think of his happiness in meeting his dear companion and two beautiful children, making his family circle once more complete. He tells me to say that as soon as he can get strength (for he has but lately come to us) he will send a message also. We do not think it will be long before, with our help, he will be able to make himself known. He would like you, Clara, to send the message to Bro. Hartson when it is published. I have stood beside you from time to time, when you were reading the paper, looking eagerly to see if some dear one had sent a word from the summer-land. Dear sister, go on; you are learning every day. Before a great while another will join our happy circle. I know you have many trials, and many things to discourage you, but lift your heart to us, and you will feel that we come to help and bless you. Even the red man comes to help you; old Tecumseh stands by you often, dear sister, and he will give you strength. Ella is here also.

Betsey Clark.

My home was in Springfield, Mass., and I am Betsey Clarke. John is with me, and Mary. We have often been in the halls where meetings have been held and mediums were present, but they never would do more than say we were there. I am glad to find the door wide open so I can come in and tell my story. I would like the people of Springfield to know we are not dead. I think a good work is being done there. I see the church people are getting much interested in hearing those who give names in the meetings. I have been able, through one instrument, to make myself known, but did n't talk as much as I would have liked to.

I suffered in the mortal form, and when the angels came, beckoning me away, how welcome the summons was, and how delightful to be united with those on the spirit-side. Bright angel-forms surrounded me and friends I used to know, and gladly did I clasp their hands and converse with them as naturally as when in the mortal.

I have seen and noted the changes that have been made, since I passed away, with my friends in earthly life. In a little while things will come differently, and we will all be together again.

Katie, to Henry.

Please, Mr. Chairman, to record my message as from Katie to Henry. Thirty or more years have passed since Katie Lawlor was counted among the dead. I have often thought if I could send Henry a message it would help him through the trials and struggles of life. I am satisfied, Henry, that you would have come into communication with me privately if you could have done so, but I well understand how you are hampered here by earthly affairs.

I have enjoyed the private meetings we have had. I did the best I could to materialize, although so many years have passed since I wore the mortal garb.

We had only just started out in life together, Henry, when I was summoned to the higher life. I feel that my going out made a change in your life, but I have been a guardian spirit watching over you, and also your family, the children and Hattie. I have tried, and sought the help of other dear friends, to bring good influences into your home. Your father sends greetings to-day. He has not long dwelt in spirit-life, but when we met he recognized me, although I passed away so long ago. I am looking forward to the time, dear ones, when we shall all be together, for there is no marriage nor giving in marriage in heaven; we shall dwell as one family.

Henry, when there is an opportunity to talk with me privately, I trust you will improve it, for I know you have felt happier and lighter; your burdens have been lifted, after coming into communion with those who love you on this side of life. I will be your guardian still, and watch over you and your home.

I am happy in my spirit-home, and waiting for those who are to come. It is a blessed privilege to speak a few words of encouragement, which we know will comfort and cheer those still on earth.

Nancy A. W. Priest.

In the company before me I see some who I feel will recognize what I may say.

How strange it is to me now, as I look back, to see how little I understood of the power of the spirit. I felt invisible presences around me as I was engaged in mental work, but I did not realize that communion such as this was possible. I thought only of the angels, as I had been taught in earlier days that angels hovered around us. I now find that angels are good pure spirits, and if they hover around us they must be very near.

I am glad the little change was made in the verse.

I find the home above more beautiful than I can express in words. In Springfield they will understand who has spoken. I have been here before, many times. Go on, mortals, learning all you can, for every word spoken may be of benefit to some one, although it reaches not all. My own dearly loved ones do not understand as much of spirit return as it was their privilege to learn. I am satisfied, and still find that progression is the word. Nancy A. W. Priest.

Charles Damon.

You may place me in Chicopee, Mass., as Charles Damon. My friends have thought that if I was able to make myself known through a medium I might give a message. Every spirit cannot get control of all mediums. Do not think that you understand more of spirit law than we do. We are governed, held and led by laws of which you can have no just comprehension. If you stop to consider you will know that we must be as desirous to talk with you as you are to hear from us.

My dear grandmother and mother taught me, when I was young, to feel that heaven was a beautiful home—but it seemed afar off to me. Now I find it was very near.

Some will remember me. Let me ask my friends to give some thought to the things of the spirit, to learn what they can concerning the other life, using their reason upon whatever may claim their attention in this line.

I would not come back to stay if I could have all old Chicopee contains. I have a bright and beautiful home.

Rebecca Damon.

I have been asked to send a message to my brother, to cheer him a little. My home was in Springfield, Vt., and my name is Rebecca Damon. No connection of the last speaker, however. I am happy to make myself known today, feeling that my words will reach my brothers, especially Herbert. I cannot reach Alonzo so easily.

Herbert, mother is with me, and father and Ruth. We are so glad you have made a little change, for we feel that eventually it will be better. Mary Hepzibeth, your angel wife, asks me to say that it is the best change you could have made. She is satisfied with it, and often comes to you, trying to cheer you, and make you feel that you have something to stay here for a little longer. We are happy in our spirit home. Grandfather and grandmother would send greetings to you. All are anxious to send a word, and all wish to be remembered.

And Worcester also, it is well you made the change, or are about making it. I know you have looked the paper over many times, and wondered why none of us ever sent a message, when nearly all had crossed the boundary between the two worlds called death.

I know, Herbert, you feel many times that we are around you, yet of late you have been suffering physically, and have got a little discouraged. Look up, and ask the dear ones to come nearer; we notice your thoughts when you do not perceive ours.

Mary says she is glad you have come into the home with Mary. You will both feel better to enjoy each other's society, for you need companionship. In a few years you will be with us and the chain made whole. Our good mother is waiting for the others to join the happy family circle in the Better Land.

Now, dear ones, I want to ask that you sit down in your quiet little home and see if we cannot make some little raps that will tell you we are there. You have heard them, and you will be able to hear more. We feel, also, that the band is strong enough on the spirit-side to enable you to behold shadowy forms. We will do all we can, dear brother. Trust us, and may the angels be with you.

Anna Coan Badger.

I would like to send a few words to Alphonso. My home, when I passed out of the mortal, was in North Andover. I am Anna Coan Badger. I think the letter will reach Alphonso. I have been here three times before, thinking, after one had spoken, I should be able to make my voice heard, but I failed to do so.

Fonnie, as you go to one circle and another I would like you to use your own reason. I know you have felt many times that Anna was there, and in the hall I have been able to give my name. Take care of the little bud I left: it was hard to feel I must leave it. I know you will often go and see it, and that mother will do all she can for it. I have often stood beside it, and have asked the Father and the dear spirits to take care of it and to watch over you all.

I have heard Fred say, with a smile, "Oh! no, I do n't think Anna comes back." Then I have not gone away, dear Fonnie, if I do not return. I feel that what was done at last was all right, even in regard to the church; it did me no harm, but I find that it is our life in the mortal that determines our happiness in the hereafter.

I am frequently with your own dear angel mother, and your grandfather and Orrin, who cannot communicate yet; it is a little too soon after passing from earth. He asks me to say he is happy in the spirit-home.

Yes, dear husband, in heaven we shall be reunited. I know you will try to learn all you can of spiritual things while you are here. Let not discouragements or frauds keep you from coming into communication with me, but, as I said, use your own reason, and it will lead you right. Your grandfather said he would, if possible, send a communication, that his children might feel happier, and their burdens be lifted up. I am with him much; we often sit and converse, or walk together and pluck the beautiful flowers that are so real and tangible in spirit-life.

Fonnie, you know I was not afraid to go. Keep your promise in regard to the ring. I know you will; and when you come into communication with me I will try to do all I can to give you information of the spirit-side.

Jacob Chickering.

My name, Mr. Chairman, I have often tried to give, but before I was ready somebody else got the floor. I am Jacob Chickering, and once dwelt in Andover. As my brother William has said, we find we fail in the attempt to give a few words here, the same as we fail in our undertakings in the mortal.

Sarah is with me, and we are happy together. The little one is no longer little, but has grown in the spirit-life. I was conversing with Dr. Howeth lately, and he told me that he had given a communication. I would like them all to know that we do not return to communicate with you because we are not happy, but it is our social feelings that bring us back. We do love to come and say a few words to our friends. Sometimes when we ask for a few minutes we take double, not realizing how your mortal time flies.

I thank the red men for the strength they give to each one of us.

How little do you mortals understand how much they help you every day; not a mortal exists but what some red man comes to his aid. Many a battle would go harder if it were not for the power and strength these children of the forest bring. I have said many times that if the white man had been as friendly to the red man, there would have been far less trouble. Let us cherish the thought that we shall all be together, red men, white men and colored, for all are God's children.

I find that old theology has naught to do with us in spirit-life. It is the pure heart, the sweet and true life, that builds the beautiful mansion over yonder. Then come and let us journey together, hand in hand, spirits and mortals: give us the opportunity to aid you, that you may live better lives in consequence.

Davis Butler.

My home was in Derry, N. H., but I passed away in Haverhill, Mass. I think I shall be remembered in Derry. My name is Davis Butler. Some will recognize me in Haverhill, where I lived a short time.

Dear wife, I know you feel lonely; you are sad at times, and your pathway looks dark and hard. You have often wondered if I suffered in passing over. No; I realized no pain, but I thought of you and the children. I knew you would not hold me here to suffer.

I would say to Frank and John and Celia, and to each one of my children, do all you can for mother; she has been a good and faithful mother to you. Oh! how glad I was when I found it was true that we could return to earth and speak a few words. I know you will remember me to Mr. Davison's people. I know they will be glad to feel that I live. I am satisfied with the home I have, and still am pleased to know that I can go onward to higher and better conditions.

Dear wife, do not be discouraged; things will work for your benefit. Eventually the pathway will not look so dark. Be careful of the little one, the tender bud, the stem will snap so easily. I know you will say they will not take it away. We know not that, but we ask you to be careful. I am trying in every way to make myself known in the home, and I feel, dear ones, you sometimes have thought that perhaps father was here, at this moment, when I have stood so close I could put my hand on you; yet how little you realized it. I find it is true, now, we can all return to earth if we wish to, and as the channel is opened for us we all have the privilege to use it.

I have tried once before, but could not manifest at first, yet did before you left me, so you felt that Davis was there. Do not trouble about the move. I would not make many changes just yet. I will not speak of family matters—it was not my way when on earth to make my affairs known publicly, but when there 's an opportunity, dear wife, seek it, and I will talk more to you of the farm.

Hannah Maloy.

My home was in North Vernon, Ind. This is the fourth time I have tried to speak in your meeting but have failed; yet remember we do not lose our courage because we fail the first or the fourth time. My dear ones have often wondered why John or Hannah, or some of the children, could not make themselves known when they have read in the paper that such and such a one had spoken in your meetings, not understanding how many difficulties there are in the way. Now I want them to listen for some little sound; even as we touch the rocker we give you to understand it is not by mortal hand.

I have been able to know of some changes that have been going on since I left the mortal form, but not all, because we are not always present.

At times, when I have come into the surroundings, Josie, I have found you a little despondent. I want you to take courage, and remember that not only one, but seven of us, are able to come to you. Not all at a time, dear children, but at different periods. I am thankful to the guides and to the mortals for this channel, through which we may speak to those we love. Miles may intervene, but they cannot separate spirit from spirit, although one inhabits the immortal and the other the mortal form.

Nancy Dunbar.

I passed out very suddenly. My home was in Somerville, and my name is Nancy Dunbar. I feel anxious to make myself known. Oh! how hard it was for father and mother to say that their daughter was dead.

Grandma is with me, and two dear associates—school girls—who used to be my companions years ago, Maria and Sarah. I think they will understand to whom I refer.

Although passing away as I did, I have no wish to return to earth and remain here. We are helping every day to build homes in spirit-life for those who are yet left in the mortal. I find as I have progressed from one sphere to another that there is much more for me to learn. One and another is crossing the portal called death. In the bright summer-land the children are dancing in glee, their hands filled with flowers, and how eager are they to give a word to papa or mamma. None are denied; all are welcome to come. In a little time you all who are before me will lift the veil and see the glory of the immortal home. Then cast away all doubts, and be assured your loved ones are waiting to clasp your hands across the river.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

June 8.—Benjamin Chadsey; Lottie Cone; Abbie Newell; Lottie Wood; Celia Thomas; Abbie Cilley; Henry C. Sullivan; Oliver Le Forrest Goss; Jeanette L. Cross; John Bidwell; Sarah Lakey; Mary Andrews; Sarah E. Lyons; Margaret Splaine.

June 15.—Betsey Hatch; Carrie E. Marshall; William S. Weymouth; Calvin Gilman; Annie Barker; Edward Sargent; Minnie Dawson; Emily Cilley; Jerusha Kesey; Lewis D. Whitney; Alfred Twiss; Carrie Matthews; Sallie Griffith; John Wilson; John Hitchcock; Georgie Adams.

THE MESSAGES ON HAND,

Not mentioned above, will appear in due course.

The Reviewer.

I. AN ADVENTURE AMONG THE ROSICRUCIANS. By a Student of Occultism. 16mo, cloth, pp. 181.

II. SECRET SYMBOLS OF THE ROSICRUCIANS; Cosmology, or Cabala. Universal Science. Alchemy, containing The Mysteries of the Universe regarding God, Nature, Man. The Macrocosm and Microcosm, Eternity and Time Explained According to The Religion of Christ by Means of the Secret Symbols of the Rosicrucians of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, Copied and Translated from an Old German Manuscript, and Provided with a Dictionary of Occult Terms. By Franz Hartmann, M. D. Folio cloth, pp. 104. Boston: Occult Publishing Company, 120 Tremont street.

The above volumes are so nearly related that we place them together. The first describes a suppositional visit to a Rosicrucian Monastery, the author being conducted thither by a stranger who approaches him in a dream, described as "one of those half-idiotic human beings whom they call cretins, and who are found in the mountainous countries of Switzerland and Savoy."

The writer, surprised and startled, asked him what he wanted. "A broad grin," we are told, "passed over the face of the dwarf, for such he certainly was, as he answered, 'Master says I should guide you to his house.'" He was astonished at this, but "remembering that the dwarf was an idiot, and that no intelligent answer was to be expected from him," he asked, just as though this was not the case, "Who is your master?" and was told "Imperator." After more parleying he concluded to follow the idiot, and did so, and reached a Theosophical Monastery in "a valley surrounded by mountains of evidently inaccessible height." All this being a dream, the author avails himself of the broad license it gives him to embody in his narrative whatever views, opinions, suppositions, idealisms and suggestions he may choose to place before his readers, as the substance of his conversation with the Adept whom he meets as he nears the building to which the cretin leads him, and before whom the latter prostrates himself, and then vanishes. There is much of sound truth, and much worthy of thoughtful consideration in what is included in the volume, and much that appears otherwise to our confessedly obtuse mundane conceptions of such assumed altitudes of thought.

After the Adept, at the close of one of his theosophical disquisitions, had asked our dreamer for some silver coins, and receiving them placed them in a crucible, and by the direction of his learned teacher transformed the silver into pure gold by the action of an almost infinitesimal amount of a red powder, an interesting colloquy ensued. Then, addressing the teacher, the pupil said: "Master, teach me this secret, and I promise you that I will never use the knowledge obtained for any selfish purpose." This request was granted, and the Adept said: "To teach you the secret how to make gold is identical with teaching you all the secrets of the constitution of nature, and of its counterpart, the microcosm of man. This cannot be done in a few hours, nor within a few days, and it would be against the rules of our order to retain you here longer than after sunset. But to enable you to study the science of Alchemy, I will lend you a book which you may read and study; and if you keep your intuitional faculties open and your mind unclouded, I will be invisibly near you and assist you to understand the meaning of the secret symbols contained therein."

He was then handed a book which the Adept said was, on account of its size, inconvenient for him to carry, and he would send it, so that upon his arrival at the village hotel he would find it there, remarking that if he attained to an understanding of its contents he would know how to produce gold out of baser metals; how to come into possession of the philosopher's stone, and a panacea that renders its possessor immortal. "You will," he said, "not merely know how to direct the processes of life, so as to make pearls and diamonds and precious stones grow, but how to make man out of an animal, and a god out of a man."

After describing subsequent events and relating conversations the dream ended. Says the author of what followed: "I flew more than I walked,... little heeding the astonished looks of the villagers, who may have believed me insane as I hurried through the streets. I entered the Inn, rushed up stairs to my room, and, as I entered, I saw upon the table the precious book 'The Secret Symbols of the Rosicrucians of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries.' On the fly-leaf were written a few lines in pencil."

This is the account given by Mr. Hartmann of the manner in which he came in possession of the second volume named. This volume consists of Part I., "Anzeum Seculum Redivivum, or The Ancient Golden Age, which has disappeared from the earth, but will reappear; whose germ is beginning to sprout, and will bear blossom and fruit, by Henricus Madathanus Theosophus, Medicus, and tandem, Dei gratia, aurem crucis frater. Translated from the German." Part II., A Treatise on the Philosopher's Stone, by a still living philosopher, but who does not desire to be known. Written for the instructions of those who love the Secret Doctrine, and for the guidance of the Brothers of the Golden and Rose-Cross. Copied and translated from an old German Rosicrucian MS.

The very singular manner in which it is claimed the original of this book was obtained, is sufficient to lead any one to discredit its value aside from all such fabulous pretensions; nevertheless there is much in it that will be read with interest and profit, and its quaint symbolical drawings, in all the colors of the rainbow, will not fail to attract the attention of the curious, and entertain if they do not instruct in the hidden lore of the ancients.

Our theosophical friends seem determined to invest all they say and do with an air of mystery and well-nigh impenetrable veil of secrecy; but why, as it appears in this case, an English edition of a comparatively well known book—Geheime-Figuren des Rosenkreuzer aus dem 16ten and 17ten Jahrhundert, published at Altona in 1785-88, and containing all its plates, with the omission of some of its letter-press, should be attributed to such a mythical source as is this, surpasses all our powers to comprehend.

"THE JOLLY PARISIENNES."—We are in receipt of a copy of this, the latest production of the greatest living French novelist, Emile Zola, just published by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa., and titled as above.

Children's Department.

For the Banner of Light.

MY TWO LADS—EDDIE AND CHARLIE HATCH.

BY M. T. SHELHAMER.

Two little lads with sunny brown eyes,
Two little lads with heads fair to see,
Two little lads with faces so wise,
Come like two courtiers to wait upon me.
Eddie is slender and supple and lithe,
Dreamy at times, though oft full of glee;
Charlie is chubby, but keen as a scythe,
And full of such fun as a laddie can be.

Each is a prince in his own courtly way,
Gentle and tender, and loving and true;
Home is the kingdom they rule day by day,
Love is their sceptre so constant and new.
Two little spirits as fresh and as bright
As arrows of gold from the heart of the sun,
Fill all the home with the sweetness of light,
From each early morn till the twilight is done.

Two little lads, fast growing to men,
Oh! keep your innocence, gladness and mirth,
Love, and be kind to all creatures, for then
All will be glad that you dwell upon earth.
Two little lads, turn your faces away
From that which is naughty, impatient, untrue;
Live for the right, and the angels will say,
"Dear little laddies, we watch over you!"

A CLOUD THAT CAME OVER THE SEA.

"My father is dead!" sighed Swao, the Karen boy, who had come to America to be educated, and was a student at the —— high school.

"When did you receive the sad news?" asked the teacher with ready sympathy, but the poor lad shook his head mournfully and explained:

"I have had no news; what I know I saw in this way, and if I tell it where I have my home ey all laugh, and then pretty soon perhaps they chide, and say, 'Swao a Christian! Christians not have fancies,' but this not a fancy. I feel it here, cold in my heart. I tell you, I have a dream. I see a jungle with lofty bamboos, and beneath their soft, waving tops a river flows. It is a large river and rapid; the water is black and tumbles about. Soon in distance I see elephants, a train and men riding; one is my father; he comes near the stream, and then from beneath the bamboos a shadow stretches down. It covers my father like a cloud, my father and the river I see them no more. Oh, my father! my father! he is dead! I have to tell you. Some one I must tell or my heart it break," and the poor lad wept uncontrollably.

"It was only a dream, my boy. I would not take it in this way. You are homesick."

"No, it is not that: I have my home in my memory, and I learn much and go back to tell my people. Now I only grieve for my father. He be not there to smile when I go back. Some day you will see it is so as I tell you: my father this morning is dead."

A few days later Swao paused again by the teacher's side.

"I saw the cloud again last night," he whispered. "It was in our village, and it started rolling toward the coast It is the black, heavy sad news; it is coming to me."

"It is upon the great sea now," he said later. "I saw it last night rolling this way as fast as a ship could sail. It makes me grief-sick. I cannot study. I sigh to go away from the sunlight into the shadow of the mountains in the deep wood and lie there until the news gets here, and then you will believe me and pity me."

"I pity you now, my poor lad," said the teacher. "You must pray that the Lord will let the sunshine of His love shine into your heart and dispel all the clouds of doubt and shadows of homesickness."

"You pray too," said the poor lad; "I need many prayers."

Several times he spoke of the shadow as coming nearer and nearer, and one morning he said:

"It will be here to-day. I afraid my spell lesson be very bad."

The teacher was almost as anxious as the poor Karen. He started at every unusual sound, at every unfamiliar step, but a few minutes after the mid daymail was distributed, while the scholars were eating their lunch, the gentleman with whom Swao had his home entered the room, saying in a low voice to the teacher:

"I have bad news for Swao. His father was drowned nearly three months ago, during the great freshets."

The teacher glanced at the boy compassionately. He responded with a low moan, like an animal in distress. Then he said as he came forward:

"I not cry now. I know it this long time. The sun shine through the cloud now. I get my spell lesson. My spell lesson be very bad all the time the cloud coming."

The thoughtless scholars, some of whom had made game of Swao ever since he had been in the school, crowded about him now and wept at his pathetic exclamations.

"They kind to me. Their tears run drop, drop, drop," he said, in touching appreciation of their sympathy. "They help my heart so it not break. I not cry one little tear, my eyes so hot. They cry."

The teacher found by examining the letter that Swao's first dream was identical with the time of his father's death, and the news was, indeed, on the way all the time that the poor boy's dreams were disturbed by a sight of that terrible cloud rolling over the sea.—Annie A. Preston, in The Phrenological Journal.

LOG CABINS are fast going out of style as fashionable residences. Log Cabins will, however, always have a place in American history, as they were the most prominent feature of our country's early social life. The pioneers were strong, rugged, healthy. Warner's Log Cabin Cough and Consumption Remedy is a reproduction of one of the best of the old-time roots and herbs remedies, which kept them well. Everybody praises "Tippecanoe" as a stomach tonic.

EVANS'S MENTAL CURE, VITAL MAGNETIC CURE.—The so-called Christian Science, or the no-disease theory, is proven to be a mortal error by the philosophy inculcated in the two treatises above mentioned.

The philosophy in the Mental Cure Book illustrates the utilizing of the mind and subtle healing elements, in the form of a self-cure process, and acts as an auxiliary to all modes of eradicating disease extant, and harmonizes the ancient record with the progressive age of to-day. The two books will be sent by mail on receipt of $2.68, by the publishers, Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Read "ZOELLNER'S TRANSCENDENTAL PHYSICS." This is one of the grandest works of the nineteenth century. Everybody should have a copy. Colby & Rich have the work on sale at the Banner of Light Bookstore, 9 Bosworth street, Boston.

Convention in Oregon.

The Second Annual Convention of the Oregon State Spiritual Society will be held on the camp-grounds at New Era, Clackamas Co., September 7th, 1888, to continue ten days.

All members are requested to be present, as important business is to be transacted.

A general invitation is extended to all friends of the cause.

Reduced rate of fares on the O. and C. Railroad to those who attend.

By order of the Executive Board,

B. F. FULLER, Pres.

MISS WILDA BUCKMAN, Sec'y.
East Portland, Ore., Aug. 3d, 1888.

The Indiana Association

Of Spiritualists meets at 10 A.M. Sept. 13th in Westerfield's Hall, Anderson, Ind.

All will be made welcome, and an excellent treat is in store for those who attend.

We do hope all Indiana Spiritualists will be there.

GEO. W. HUNTER, Sec'y,
Indianapolis, Ind.

DR. BECK, Delphi, Ind.

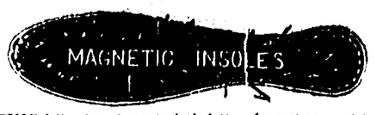
Advertisements.



THE following characteristic letter, from the pen of Lyman C. Howe, the veteran speaker and writer for the noble cause of Spiritualism, speaks for itself. Mr. Howe has worn our Shields for more than five years, and has had large experience with them among his friends. The readers of THE BANNER have implicit confidence in the integrity and good judgment of Mr. Howe. He always writes and speaks what he knows to be TRUE. Write him for further evidence about our Shields, and he will give his experience:

DR. THACHER:

Dear Sir—Your Magnetic Shields have some merit, but on the whole I am inclined to call them a fraud. They soothe and vitalize the nerves, put new life into the blood, warm cold feet, build up the debilitated and consumptive, create a row among the old sinners in the constitution, and keep stirring them until they enter upon a war of extermination, or commit suicide to escape; put out colds and rheumatism hors du combat, make a weak man vigorous and saucy, and cure family quarrels where they originate in bad blood or depraved nerves; but they don't mend cork legs nor glass eyes, nor cure warts on an evil temper. They should be a specific for total depravity, alcoholism, and especially for debilitated pocketbooks. Here is where they fail. If you can improve them so that you can guarantee a perfect cure for financial fits, consumptive bank accounts and religious hydrophobia, your fortune is made. Then, as your best advertising card, I would advise you to cover the Brooklyn Tabernacle and its pastor, and if you cure him you need waste no more printer's ink. Yours for health.

LYMAN C. HOWE,
Fredonia, N. Y.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD COMPANY,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.
Jy7 13w*

Dr. F. L. H. Willis

May be Addressed until further notice,
Clenora, Yates Co., N. Y.

DR. WILLIS may be addressed as above. From this point he can attend to the diagnosing of disease psychometrically. He claims that his powers in this line are unrivaled, combining, as he does, accurate scientific knowledge with keen and searching psychometric power.

Dr. Willis claims especial skill in treating all diseases of the blood and nervous system. Cancers, Scrofula in all its forms, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and all the most delicate and complicated diseases of both sexes.

Dr. Willis is permitted to refer to numerous parties who have been cured by his system of practice when all others had failed. All letters must contain a return postage stamp.

Send for Circulars, with References and Terms.

Jy7 13w*

DR. J. R. NEWTON

STILL heals the sick! Spirit, Mind and Magnetic Cures at a distance through MRS. NEWTON. Send for testimonials to MRS. J. R. NEWTON, P.O. Station G., N.Y. City. 13w* Jy7

SOUL READING,

Or Psychometrical Delineation of Character.

MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE would respectfully announce to the public that those who wish, and will visit her in person, or send their autograph or lock of hair, she will give an accurate description of their leading traits of character and peculiarities of disposition; marked changes in past and future life; physical disease, with prescription therefor; what business they are best adapted to pursue in order to be successful; the physical and mental adaptation of those intending marriage; and hints to the unharmoniously married. Full delineation, $2.00, and four 2-cent stamps. Brief delineation, $1.00, and four 2-cent stamps.

Address, MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE,
Centre street, between Church and Prairie streets,
Ap7 6m* White Water, Walworth Co., Wis.

ASTONISHING OFFER.

SEND three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power. DR. A. B. DODSON, Maquoketa, Iowa. Jy14 13w*

A Wonderful Discovery.

BY a Clairvoyant. Medical Pebble Spectacles will restore lost vision. Send a 2-ct. stamp for valuable information. Address B. F. POOLE, Optician, Clinton, Iowa. 1w* 88

Sealed Letters Answered

BY MRS. ELIZA A. MARTIN, Oxford, Mass. Terms $1.00 and two 2-ct. stamps. 1w* 88

SEALED LETTERS.

ELEANOR MARTIN now makes specialty of business, $2.00. Full Spiritual Message, $2.00. 73 Lane Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Register all letters. 4w* Au25

MRS. R. T. CLANEY,

BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 411 Lookout street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6m* Je23

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSSE will remove to the country for a while, where she will continue to give Life-Readings for $1.00 and stamp, and answer six questions for 50 cents and stamp. Disease a specialty. Address West Garland, Me. 2w* 81

The Writing Planchette.

SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. Those unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been attained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practical knowledge of mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes," which may be consulted on all questions, as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.

DIRECTIONS. Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board; in a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let two try it together. If nothing happens the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.

The Planchette is furnished complete with box, pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.

PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 60 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

Dr. Hardcastle's TOOTH-LIFE.

A Delightful Tooth-Powder.

This Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.

Of the four pages printed matter accompanying each box of "Tooth-Life," old Dr. Blankman, after reading it, made this remark: "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."

The proprietor says: "As a Spiritualist from my youth, I say in all conscience, no person can fail to find in the box of 'Tooth-Life' and four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of an experience as an American dentist and student dating from 1860, of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth preservative measures taught alone are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."

Put up in a neat box. Sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DR. RHODES' FAMILY MEDICINES.

Purely Vegetable
(ALL SUGAR-COATED)
Medical Confections.

A Universal Blessing.
SUITED TO OLD OR YOUNG!

A PERFECT Liver and Kidney Renovator and Blood Purifier. Cleanses the entire system from all Biliousness and Blood Poisons from Malaria, etc. And cures Headache, Backache, Side and Stomachache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pains in the Limbs, Lameness, Numbness, Constipation, Piles, Worms, Dyspepsia, Consumption, Nervousness, Weakness, Kidney and Bladder, and all other urinary ailments, etc. Also, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and in fact almost all the various ailments of humanity.

PRICES: Trial box, 25 cents—by mail, 30 cents; second size, 50 cents—by mail, 55 cents; 12 boxes second size, $5.00; large boxes, $1.00; 6 large boxes, $5.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.

I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.

I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters (from the above data). Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions, in accordance with my understanding of the science, for a fee of $1; Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.

Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. July 19.

CATARRH, Diphtheria, and all Throat Diseases, curable by the use of DR. J. E. BRIGGS'S THROAT REMEDY. Mr. Andrew Jackson Davis writes: "Dr. Briggs's Throat Remedy for the Throat and Catarrhal Affections, including Diphtheria I know to be equal to the claims in the advertisement."

Price, 50 cents per bottle, postage 15 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DIAGNOSIS FREE.

SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M.D., Principal, Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich. 81 1m*

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,

Developing and Business Medium,
ALSO
Clairvoyant Physician,
474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,
(Corner of Concord street.)
Sittings daily from 9 A.M. till 5 P.M. Price, $1.00.

Unequalled Advantages.

DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.

Development of Mediumship a Specialty.

SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $5.00 IN ADVANCE.

CIRCLES.

Sunday, at 11 A.M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P.M., for Psychometry, Tests and Inspirational Music. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf 81

Something New and Pleasing.

WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1.00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m 81

Written Communications

On Business, Mediumship and Health,
Through the mediumship of J. W. FLETCHER, 6 Bencon street, Boston. tf Jy28

MISS HELEN A. SLOAN,

MAGNETIC Physician, Vapor and Medicated Baths. Celebrated "Acid Cure." Office hours from 9 A.M. to 8 P.M. 171 Tremont street, corner Mason st., Boston. Au11 4w*

MISS A. PEABODY,

BUSINESS, Test, Clairvoyant Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday and Thursday evenings, Tuesday afternoon at 3. 1 Bennet st., corner Washington st., Boston. 88 1w*

MRS. L. M. CARTER,

PROPHETIC and Symbolic Readings by lock of hair or small article, also sex, by letter only, 50 cents. 6 Garland street, Boston. 2w* 88

MISS L. E. SMITH,

MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P.M. 14 Union Park st., Boston. 88 1w*

Massage and Magnetism.

MRS. DR. E. M. FAXON, 22 Winter street, Room 7A, Boston. Oblesity treated. Also instruction given. 81 1ow*

MRS. A. FORRESTER

WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. 181 Shawmut Avenue, one flight, Boston. Do not ring. 1w* 88

MRS. ALDEN,

TRANCE MEDIUM. Medical Examinations and Magnetic treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston. Au11 5w*

MISS L. M. WHITING—Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, and stiffness of limbs from sprains or breaks, is the most successful in use. Hotel Rutland, 701 Tremont street, Suite 4. Au11 12w*

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter address for personal treatment or his powerful Spirit Magnetized Paper, during the summer months, 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Two packages by mail, $1.00. Jy7 13w*

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 8 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment. Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Colorado Sulphur Baths. 81 1w*

MRS. HATTIE YOUNG,

TRANCE and Business Medium, 27 Winter street, Room 16, Boston. 1w* 88

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, 48 Winter street, Room 11. sw* Au1

MISS C. W. KNOX, Test, Business and Medical Medium. Examinations by letter. Enclose lock of hair. 31 East Springfield street, Boston. 1w* 81

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 8½ Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), Room 4, Boston, Mass. Office hours, from 1 to 4 P.M. Jy7 26w*

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. sw* Au1

J. A. SHELHAMER,

MAGNETIC HEALER,
Office 8½ Bosworth Street (Room 5), Boston, Mass.,

WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases. Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription and advice, $2.00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1.00 per package. Healing by rubbing and laying on of hands. Parties wishing consultation by letter must be particular to state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Kidney, or Strengthening and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1.00.

Office hours from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M., except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he attends out-of-town patients. Letter address care of BANNER OF LIGHT. 1w* Jy7

NEW EDITION.

LOVE AND ITS HIDDEN HISTORY,

AND

The Master Passion.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

A book for men, women, husbands, wives the loving and the unloved. In this curious and rarely original book the author offers to the public a powerful argument in favor of love, the great passion that rules the world, and he sets forth its manifold charms and necessities in a perfectly irresistible manner, though with keen wisdom and wonderful tact.

Two Volumes in one. Price $2.50; postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Spiritual Science

OF

HEALTH AND HEALING,

Considered in TWELVE LECTURES, delivered inspirationally by W. J. COLVILLE, in San Francisco and Boston, during 1886.

The author in his preface says: "Those whose minds are fertile as well as receptive, those to whom one idea suggests another, and who have the gift of tracing conclusions to their sources and following thought further than its outward dress can convey it, will doubtless be able to successfully treat themselves and others if they carefully read and meditate upon the contents of this volume, as a perfect system of treatment is definitely outlined in its pages."

270 pages, cloth. Price 75 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Record of a Ministering Angel.

BY MRS. MARY J. CLARK.

The ministry of angels is a subject that will always possess a deep interest for serious, thoughtful minds. There is nothing for which the hearts of humanity long with more pathetic yearning than for a resumption of fellowship with the loved and lost. What mother does not long for one sound of the voice of her son who has crossed to the further shore? What would not fathers give for one more smile from their daughters passed all too soon away? And what is more reasonable than to hope that the loved and lost have joined the ranks of the angels, and are busy in tender services for those whom they, having left behind, love still the more? This book is written with the view of stimulating such hopes, of lifting sad hearts out of the darkness of despair into the sunny region of hope and courage and faith.

Cloth, pp. 289. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.

AFTER DEATH:

THE DISEMBODIMENT OF MAN.

The World of Spirits: Its Location, Extent, Appearances; The Route Thither; Inhabitants; Customs; Societies; also Sex, and its Uses There, etc.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

This fine work of Dr. Randolph's is by far the most important and thrilling that has yet fallen from his pen, inasmuch as it discusses questions concerning our state and doings after death that heretofore have been wholly untouched, and perhaps would have been for years had not this bold thinker dared to grapple with them.

Cloth. Price $2.25; postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE." A perfectly reliable, accurate Pamphlet of seventy-two pages. Compiled by one of our ablest correspondents; should be on the table of every scholar.

Price 15 cents (reduced from 25 cents).
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

NEW MUSIC.

BY C. P. LONGLEY.

"ONLY A THIN VEIL BETWEEN US." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"WHEN THE DEAR ONES GATHER AT HOME." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"HOME OF MY BEAUTIFUL DREAMS." Song and Chorus. Words by Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"CHILD OF THE GOLDEN SUNSHINE." Song and Chorus. Words by Eben E. Rexford; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

HOME AND NATIVE LAND. A National Temperance Ode. Words by Mary L. Sherman. Music by C. Payson Longley. Price 5 cents.

Beautiful Home of the Soul	25 cents.
Come in thy Beauty, Angel of Light	25 "
I am Going to my Home	25 "
In Heaven We'll Know Our Own	25 "
Love's Golden Chain	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Over There	25 "
The City Just Over the Hill	25 "
The Golden Gates are Left Ajar	25 "
Two Little Shoes and a Ringlet of Hair	25 "
We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Above	25 "
We're Coming, Sister Mary	25 "
Gathering Flowers in Heaven	25 "
Who Sings My Child to Sleep?	25 "
Oh! Come, for my Poor Heart is Breaking	25 "
Once it was Only Soft Blue Eyes	25 "

☞ The above songs are in Sheet Music. Single copies 25 cents; 5 copies for $1.00.

We'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land (with portrait of Annie Lord Chamberlain) ..... 35 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Spiritual Workers

Photographed from Crayon Portraits
BY ALBERT MORTON.

Additions to this List of Portraits are being Drawn.

DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.
PASCHAL BEVERLY RANDOLPH.
CHARLES H. FOSTER.
CHARLES H. FOSTER and SPIRIT ADAH ISAACS MENKEN, after spirit Photograph by W. H. Mumler.
PROF. ROBERT HARE.
PROF. WILLIAM DENTON.
DR. H. F. GARDNER.

Cabinet size. Price 50 cents each.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"Glad Tidings of Immortality."

Finely executed Lithographs bearing the above title have been received by us. The size is 22 x 28 in. The principal figure is a female, evidently designed to represent a materialized spirit, crowned with a wreath of flowers, and bearing a long band of them in her left hand, while in her right is a scroll inscribed with the words "Message of Love." Over her head are three stars. The drapery on each side appears to be the curtains of a cabinet, between which she stands in an exceedingly graceful position, suggestive of the line, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." From above a ray of light radiates over the entire form. Vignette likenesses of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Little and Mrs. Britten, and Messrs. Howell and Colville, are given, and excellent ones they are. The artist is Mr. Shobe, who, we are informed, has executed many beautiful drawings illustrative of the spiritual Philosophy.

Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GARLAND'S VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS.

The greatest known remedy for all Throat and Lung Complaints. For Catarrh, Asthma, etc., etc., it has no equal. It is warranted to cure Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, and Inflammation of the Lungs. Is free from all opiates and minerals, or any other ingredients injurious, and is therefore harmless. It is pleasant to take, like a delicious confection, and perfectly safe in any climate. Taken according to directions, is sure cure for all cases to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded by the proprietor, DR. M. H. GARLAND, 68 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

Price, per box (one-fourth pound), 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Phantom Form.

Experiences in Earth and Spirit-Life. Revelations by a Spirit.

Through the trance mediumship of

MRS. NETTIE PEASE FOX.

This is one of the most deeply interesting Spiritualistic works ever published. It is in a narrative form by a lady whose earth life was one of strange circumstances, startling events and wonderful mediumistic experiences. After many years in spirit-life she returns to earth, and through the full restrained organism and power of another, gives her earth history, followed by revelations from spirit life, instructing and instructive to those who would know the conditions, employments and enjoyments of those who have crossed the "Narrow Stream and entered the other worlds between." A better understanding of this remarkable book may be obtained from the following, giving a few of the many subjects upon which we have revelations from the spirit-world:

Death Foretold; Death-Bed Vision and Revelations; Is There Another Life; Angel Manifestations; Spirit Prophecy Fulfilled; Saved from a Horrible Fate by Spirit Warning; A Father's Evil Life Represented as Corrected by the Spirit Medium; Life Saved by Spirit Power; My Death Foretold; My Sudden Departure from Earth-Life; First Awakening in Spirit-Life; Mansion in Spirit-Land; Return to Earth-Life; Some Spirits Worship a Personal God; Spirits Attend a Marriage Ceremony on Earth; Marriage in Spirit-Life; Temple of Science; Library; Modes of Traveling; Visiting Another Planet. Many Revelations are given of life and its employments in the spirit-world deeply interesting.

Cloth, pp. 399. Price $1.00, postage paid to any part of the world.

The Mysteries of the Border-Land;

OR,

The Conscious Side of Unconscious Life.

Also the Second Part of the Volume, "The Golden Key; or, Mysteries Beyond the Veil."

BY MRS. NETTIE PEASE FOX.

These two books, contained in one large, neatly bound volume of nearly six hundred pages, are written in narrative style, said by the spirit author to be founded on fact. They are as entertaining as any novel ever read, and contain more of the phenomena and philosophy of Spiritualism than ever before written in the same space, and they are written in such an attractive form that they cannot fail to please and deeply interest thousands outside the ranks of Spiritualism.

Price $1.50; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

EIGHT

Liberal Lectures,

BY

A. B. FRENCH,

The Eloquent Orator.

This Pamphlet contains one hundred and forty pages, with portrait of the author. All who admire profound, thought-sparkling eloquence and a broad spiritual philosophy, should order this book. The following are the contents:

Lecture 1.—Conflicts of Life.
" 2.—Power and Permanency of Ideas.
" 3.—The Unknown.
" 4.—Probability of a Future Life.
" 5.—Anniversary Address.
" 6.—The Egotism of Our Age.
" 7.—The Spiritual Rostrum—Its Duties and Dangers.
" 8.—What Is Truth?
" 9.—Future of Spiritualism.

Paper. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

A Book for Thoughtful Radicals.

A STUDY OF PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY.

BY LEWIS G. JANES.

CONTENTS. Introduction: 1. Palestine in the Roman Empire; 2. Society and Religion in the Roman Empire; 3. Sources of Information; 4. Theological Aspects of the Religion of Jesus; 5. Social Aspects of the Religion of Jesus; 6. Myth and Miracle in the Gospel Stories; 7. The Christianity of Paul; 8. The Apostolic Age; 9. The Martyr Period; 10. Christianity the State Religion.

"One of the most scholarly works on the subject that I have ever seen. I know of no other which seems to me likely to give as much satisfaction to any careful student, who is also candid and temperate."—Daniel G. Thompson, author of "A System of Psychology."

8vo. cloth, gilt top; pp. 320. Price $1.50.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Progression;

Or, How a Spirit Advances in Spirit-Life. The Evolution of Man. Two papers given in the interest of Spiritual Science. By Spirit MICHAEL FARADAY.

Paper, pp. 35. Price 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE STORY OF A GREAT DELUSION, in a Series of Matter-of-Fact Chapters. By WM. WHITE, Esq.

"We may fairly call this sturdy volume the anti-vaccinator's bible. It is a determined and well-informed impeachment of the Vaccination theory, bristling with facts, and enlivened by the most biting sarcasm. The author has searched all nooks and crannies of the subject, analyzed the figures and arguments of the upholders of Vaccination, and his conclusion is, that 'Vaccination is a medical monopoly, established, endowed and enforced—a tyranny to overthrow.'"—Chester Chronicle.

Cloth, pp. 627. Price $2.00; postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WAS JESUS DIVINE? A Critical Examination of Biblical Theology. By M. B. CRAVEN. Paper. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New York Advertisements.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

304 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, successfully treats all forms of Chronic Diseases, however complicated. Patients afflicted for years, regarded as hopeless, or incurable, testify to permanent restoration. For twenty years his power to diagnose and treat Disease has been and still stands unequalled, so say eminent Scientists, Physicians, Clergymen, and patients from all parts of the country. Voluminous testimony can be seen at his office. Those unable to visit the Doctor in person can be successfully treated at their homes. Send stamp for Circular. Diagnosis, with advice, $2.00.

Extract from a letter by Rev. P. R. M., D.D., Brooklyn, N.Y.: "... I am happy to testify to Dr. Dake's high moral character as a man, and his eminent ability as a physician who has achieved a most extraordinary career."

Jy7 tf

Mrs. Stoddard-Gray and Son, DeWitt C. Hough,

HOLD Materializing Séances every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday evening at 8 o'clock, Tuesday and Saturday at 2 o'clock, at 323 West 34th street, New York. Daily sittings for communications and business. 88

MARY C. MORRELL, Business, Prophetic and Developing Medium, 230 West 36th street, New York City. 10w* Au25

MRS. C. SCOTT, Trance and Business Medium. Sittings 10 to 5. No. 21 West 13th street, N.Y. Au11 10w*

A LIBERAL OFFER,

BY A RELIABLE CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER.

SEND 42-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name, age and sex, we will diagnose your case FREE by independent spirit-writing. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Canton, N.Y. Au11 13w*

RUPTURES

CURED in thirty days by my MEDICAL COMPOUND and improved ELASTIC SUPPORTER TRUSS. Send Stamp for Circular. Address CAPT. W. A. COLLINGS, Smithville, Jefferson Co., N.Y. [Mention this paper. Au4 13w*

Clairvoyant Examinations Free.

ENCLOSE lock of hair, with leading symptoms. We will give you a correct diagnosis of your case. Address E. F. BUTTERFIELD, M. D., corner Warren and Fayette streets, Syracuse, New York. 2w* Ja28

SECOND EDITION.

A REVIEW

OF THE

Seybert Commissioners' Report

OR,

WHAT I SAW AT CASSADAGA LAKE.

BY

A. B. RICHMOND, Esq.,

A MEMBER OF THE PENNSYLVANIA BAR; AUTHOR OF "LEAVES FROM THE DIARY OF AN OLD LAWYER," "OUR LAND AND PRISON," "DR. CROSBY'S CALM VIEW FROM A LAWYER'S STANDPOINT," "A HAWK IN AN EAGLE'S NEST," ETC.

This able and comprehensive work should be read by every thoughtful man and woman who has heard of the Seybert Bequest. Hon. A. B. Richmond, the author, whose eminence as a criminal lawyer, and high reputation as an author will at once ensure the confidence and attention of the reader, has in this volume replied to the "Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission" with a soundness of logic, a keenness of satire, a breadth of thought and clearness of perception, so has the importance of the subject demanded. He deals his blows at the unfairness, meanness, prejudice, unkindness and irreverence of the Seybert Commissioners with great unsparing hand, and, like Thor, he never strikes a blow in vain. We learned and well struck, each blow tells, and must carry conviction to every thoughtful mind.

Mr. Richmond, although not a believer in the Spiritual Philosophy, has here made a fearless and vigorous defense of the reality of the PHENOMENA of Spiritualism. Having received last August, from the hands of a friend just returned from Cassadaga Lake, a communication addressed to him from one dear to him in spirit-life, he was induced to visit the Lake, but went with a firm belief that he should be able to solve the mystery and expose the fraud. His experiences there convinced him of the genuineness of at least a portion of the phenomenal part of Spiritualism, and he accordingly wrote his Open Letter to the Seybert Commission, a document which aroused the interest and admiration of the best minds. Once convinced that the so-called spirit manifestations do occur in many instances where fraud is out of the question, he gallantly and fearlessly comes to the front and wields his weapons with strong, unerring aim in defense of truth and human progress.

After a happy and appropriate introduction of the subject, with all needful explanations concerning the bequest of Mr. Seybert, the author gives in the first Chapter his "Open Letter to the Seybert Commission"; Chapters II., III. and IV. are devoted to a searching criticism of the Report of the Seybert Commission; Chapter V. treats ably of the Bible on Spiritualism; Chapter VI. has for its motto "In my Father's House are Many Mansions"; Chapter VII. contains C. C. Massey's Open Letter on "Zöllner" to Professor George S. Fullerton; Chapter VIII. gives an incident which took place in visit at a meeting of the "American Association for the Advancement of Science," with remarks made on that occasion by Professor Robert Hare, etc., etc.; Chapter IX. consists of the "Report of the London Dialectical Society," made in 1869; Chapter X. gives Professor Crookes's testimony from his "Researches in the Phenomena of Spiritualism"; Chapter XI. gives further testimony from two witnesses; Chapter XII., "Summary," and the Postscriptum, close the volume.

"A Review of the Seybert Commissioners' Report" is a strong book, and will be read; it will throw light on some disputed questions, while it cannot fail to bring out in bold relief the pettiness as well as the unfairness of the claims of the Seybert Commission. Its clearness of statement, its unanswerable logic, its scholarly style, at once original and forcible, its abundant wit and fine sarcasm, with here and there an exquisite touch of pathos, its vigorous mentality, and, above all, its loyalty to the highest principles of truth and justice all combine to make this work a valuable addition to the advanced thought of the day.

12mo. cloth, pp. 244. Price $1.25, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Weekly Discourse;

Containing the Spiritual Sermons by the guides of

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND

VOLUME III.

No. 1.—THE THREE M'S: MAMMON, MILLIONAIRES AND MURDER.
No. 2.—A LEAP IN THE DARK.
No. 3.—WHAT RELIGION IS BEST FOR MANKIND?
No. 4.—IDEAL SOCIALISM: HOW DOES IT COMPARE WITH CHRISTIANITY AND SPIRITUALISM?
No. 5.—THE IMPORT OF THE DAY.
No. 6.—ANCIENT AND MODERN MIRACLES.
No. 7.—THE JUDGMENT DAY.
No. 8.—THE POWER OF P

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1888.

The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings.

Lake Pleasant.

[MR. J. MILTON YOUNG is our authorized agent at Lake Pleasant, and will be pleased to receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. Mr. Young also has a full line of our publications for sale at his bookstore. He will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Ground.]

The great camp-meeting of the New England Spiritualists' Association at this place, which closed its fifteenth annual session on Sunday last, was a grand success.

The addresses as a whole have been of a high order, and were well received; the conference meetings were interesting, and will be long remembered; the concerts by the Worcester Cadet Band have been first class in every respect.

The following has been the programme for the week ending Sept. 2d:

Monday and Tuesday, conferences with various speakers. Wednesday, address by Mrs. A M. Spence, of New York. Thursday morning, conference, with the principal address by Dr. F. H. Roscoe, of Providence. Afternoon, address by Mrs. Spence, subject, "The Law of Spirit Control." A large audience was present, and the lecture well received. Friday morning, conference. Afternoon, address by Lyman C. Howe, Fredonia, N. Y., subject, "The Work of Spiritualism." Saturday, conference.

Sunday was a most beautiful day, and the closing exercises were of interest.

The band gave three concerts—morning, afternoon and evening. The morning address was by Mrs. Spence, subject, "Profane and Sacred Inspiration." Afternoon address was given by Lyman C. Howe, of Fredonia, N. Y.

A vote of thanks was extended to Dr. Joseph Beals, President, and the Management, for their efforts to render the meetings a success. The session was then declared closed.

The exodus for home was somewhat large, and quiet pervades Lake Pleasant.

NOTES.

The train service has been very efficient. The management of the Fitchburg railway, in so far as the camp was concerned, deserves much credit, which goes to show that Mr. John Adams, the Superintendent, is the right man in the right place.

The camp-meeting next year will commence the last Sunday in July, and continue through the month of August.

The Children's Lyceum has had a very successful season.

Association Hall has been utilized nearly every evening.

A reception complimentary to Mrs. M. W. Cushman was held on Tuesday evening, with speaking by Mrs. Waterhouse, Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, Mrs. Whittier, Mrs. J. J. Clark, Mrs. M. E. Whitney, Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Bates. Charlie Buffum entertained the assemblage with singing. A sum of money was collected for Mrs. Cushman, who is an invalid and in needy circumstances, whom THE BANNER firm has assisted several times.

Prof. Cadwell gave several exhibitions of mesmerism in Association Hall. He is an outspoken Spiritualist, an honest man, and is fully posted in occult matters.

Dr. F. H. Roscoe and wife, of Providence, are at Mrs. Lincoln's cottage on the Bluff. Dr. Roscoe is one of our best test mediums.

The platform descriptions of MRS. E. Clark Kimball, of Lawrence, were among the best of the session, and made a very marked impression among her auditors. As an instrument of communication from spirit-realm, Mrs. Kimball has a high and holy mission.

The sewing-machine which was disposed of by ticket at the fair of the Ladies' Lake Pleasant Improvement Society, fell to Miss Carrie L. Brown, of the hotel.

Mrs. Warren Sumner Barlow has been in camp for the past two weeks, stopping with Mrs. J. J. Clark.

Harvey Lyman of Saratoga, an old-time camper, came on Saturday.

Mrs. Maud Lord Drake has done excellent service on the platform this year, giving her services free. She is a general favorite. The management desire to express their thanks for the effort she has made to interest the audiences. They also thank THE BANNER for so fair an account of the proceedings at the camp from week to week.

Landlord Barnard of the Lake Pleasant Hotel has been unremitting in his attention to the guests of the house.

The members of the Worcester Cadet Band have covered themselves with glory. Their playing has been received with universal satisfaction by all.

Departing trains have carried many a pleasant recollection of Lake Pleasant. Come again.

J. M. Y.

LAKE PLEASANT JOTTINGS.

A visitor to this Camp is soon convinced that Lake Pleasant has grown more in the last year than in five years before.

Truly, this old Camp has become a city set upon a hill. Improvements everywhere; clean streets, cottages all kept in first-class repair, surrounded by flower gardens, and tasteful external decorations.

Your gifted correspondent has had a busy season. His Wildwood Messenger is one of the best edited of summer resort journals; friends of this Camp should see to it that it be made a financial success.

Dr. Arthur Hodges is as popular as ever, and although he is not in the best of health, gives universal satisfaction; everybody stops to admire his villa.

Mrs. A. E. Cunningham, Dr. Eldridge, Mrs. Sue B. Fales, Jennie Rhind, Mrs. Dillingham, Dr. Charles Buffum, Mrs. Hattie Mason, Mrs. Jackson, and other Boston mediums, are well patronized.

The circles of Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing are well attended.

Prof. Cadwell has large developing circles.

Mrs. Olive Doolittle's new cottage has a cozy and home-like appearance.

The masquerade was a great success; a large company in attendance.

Miss H. B. Lochlan has held several invitation circles, which were much enjoyed by those attending. She has now returned to her pleasant Greenwich home.

The hosts of friends of Mrs. J. F. Baxter are rejoiced to see her able to visit the Lake. May she still continue to improve in health.

Hon. Augustus Carey continues to improve his grounds.

Mr. F. D. Edwards, Mrs. Russell and several other Spiritualistic Phenomena members are sojourners here.

Chas. Copeland, well known to many campers, has recently passed to spirit-life.

"Sunshine's" wigwam on Montague street has many visitors.

Mrs. Sue Fales and "Old Honesty" are dispensing wisdom and truth.

Pleasant evening conversations on the piazza of Mrs. Alice Waterhouse's cottage are well attended, by Boston delegates especially.

The lectures of Mr. Charles Dawbarn were thoroughly enjoyed by all thinking people.

J. Frank Baxter's tests convinced the skeptic, and his lectures were sound and logical.

Mrs. Olive Reynolds, at Eagle Cottage, entertains a large number of guests as usual.

Mrs. Chapman, a correspondent of THE BANNER, has a fine new cottage at the Highlands.

F. B. Woodbury, it is expected, will at no distant day build in that locality.

Land has been secured for a new hotel at the Highlands, it is rumored.

Dr. Beals and the board of management are to be congratulated for the harmonious, interesting session just closed.

F. B. W.

Onset Items.

[MISS GUSTIE F. HOWE is our authorized agent at Onset Bay. She will receive subscriptions for the BANNER OF LIGHT. She also has a full line of our publications for sale at Association Headquarters; and will conduct the correspondence for THE BANNER from this Camp-Ground.]

Monday afternoon, Aug. 27th, a soul communion meeting was held in the Pavilion, which was well attended, and after the half hour of silent thought interesting experiences were related.

Luther Colby, of the BANNER OF LIGHT, paid us a visit on Monday, accompanied by G. A. Bacon. Bro. Colby is looking hale and hearty, and with good care and attention to the laws of health, we predict for him many years of usefulness.

Tuesday afternoon the conference meeting in the grove was well attended. Dr. Hervey read an interesting essay by R. G. Ingersoll on "The Treatment of Criminals."

We have just received a glowing account of the successful result in locating mines in the southwest by Dr. A. W. S. Rothermel, who is expected at Onset in a few days.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Helen M. Walton of Brooklyn, N. Y., lectured on "The Divine Woman."

Monday, the 27th, Mrs. M. K. Thompson was called to officiate at the funeral of little Carrie Hamilton, a child four years of age, who, with her parents, was summering at Point Independence. Her demise was very sudden.

The Casino was crowded Wednesday evening to witness the performance of the Harmonian minstrels.

Mrs. S. R. Stevens's address for the winter will be 1015 Quincy street, Topeka, Kan., as she will return with Mr. F. P. Baker and family.

Thursday afternoon conference meeting was held at the auditorium. Entertaining remarks were made by different ones present, making a very interesting meeting.

Dr. H. B. Storer is with us for a vacation and rest.

The Ladies' Industrial Union held a business meeting Thursday evening preparatory to making arrangements for the Harvest Moon Festival, which its members propose to make more than usually attractive.

Friday a lecture was delivered at the Auditorium by Mr. Driscoe. The steamer Island Home brought an excursion party from New Bedford.

Dr. H. B. Storer has been engaged by the Ladies' Industrial Union to lecture from the platform Sunday, Sept. 9th, morning and afternoon. There will be an excursion train from Provincetown and way stations same day, also from Boston.

In consequence of the rain Saturday, the illumination was postponed to Monday night. The Temple dance was so well patronized that it was considered advisable to hold another Saturday evening, the 8th. The dance in the Casino was also well attended.

The excursion train will continue to run two more Sundays, to accommodate those coming to the grounds.

Showers on Saturday broke up the conference meeting. Some returned to their cottages, while the rest huddled together on the platform, and had what they called a parlor circle, with speaking and singing and a general harmonious meeting. It is proposed to continue these conference meetings another week, and perhaps longer.

Sunday, Sept. 2d, the morning dawned cloudy and threatening, but at eight o'clock the sun came out in all its brilliancy. Lindall's Band discoursed sweet music at the stand in Bay View grove, and at 10:30 a lecture was given by Mr. E. B. Fairchild, under the auspices of the Ladies' Industrial Union, his subject being "After Orthodoxy what have we Left?"

The afternoon's discourse was delivered by Mrs. Sarah A. Brynes. Her subject was: "The Work Accomplished during the Summer at Onset."

Both lectures were very instructive and entertaining, and listened to with rapt attention by an intelligent and appreciative audience.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum held its usual session at 3 P. M.—Mr. Besse acting as Conductor. Recitations were given by Eloise Wendemuth, Georgie Gardner, Emily Drake, Maud Woodward, Edith Scudder, Cora Campbell, Lillie Wendemuth, Lulu Morse.

GUSTIE F. HOWE.

Headquarters Office, Onset, Sept. 2d, 1888.

Temple Heights Camp-Meeting, Northport, Me.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The sixth annual camp-meeting of "The Maine State Spiritual Temple" was held on the grounds at Temple Heights, Northport, Me., commencing Aug. 12th and closing Aug. 19th. Sunday, Aug. 12th, at 10 A. M., notwithstanding the threatening weather some two hundred gathered for the opening services. The meeting was opened by Mr. H. C. Berry of Portland, who, owing to the unavoidable absence of President Rich, had been chosen chairman of the meeting. After music by the choir, the chairman introduced Dr. H. B. Storer of Boston, as the first speaker, and he was followed by Mrs. Abbie Morse of Searsmont, Me., Dr. Geo. A. Fuller of Dover, Mass., Mrs. A. P. Brown of St. Johnsbury, Vt., Oscar Edgerly of Newburyport, Mass., and Mrs. Juliette Yeaw of Leominster, Mass. Short speeches were the order. The audience was highly pleased with the exercises, and we seldom have had a more harmonious and successful opening of our meetings. Feeling reference was made by several of the speakers to the absence of Sister Garland, who has passed over to spirit life since our last meeting. She was always a prominent figure in our meetings, and was sadly missed by her many friends. Bro. Daniel Smiley, who we were wont to greet in our meetings, has also laid down the burdens of this and taken up the duties of spirit life. Ere another year shall roll around some of us who were present this year may have summed up the mystery of death and entered into the realms of the immortal. May we all be ready for the change that will surely come to us.

At two P. M., owing to the rain, there were not as many present, but the speakers' stand was filled, and some fifty sat in the auditorium, protected by umbrellas throughout the services. Dr. George A. Fuller, of Dover, Mass., delivered an eloquent lecture. Subject, "Religions as I Find Them To Day." He prefaced his lecture by reading the poem "Outward Bound." Mrs. Juliette Yeaw followed in the same train of thought, giving experiences of her own, in illustration of the change in religious thought. Dr. W. A. Hale, of Charlestown, Mass., followed with a few remarks, and gave delineations of spirits with whom he came en rapport. Many of them were recognized. Monday morning, Aug. 13th, came in with wind and rain, but the friends gathered under the shelter of the speakers' stand, and passed the time very pleasantly in social conversation. Short speeches were made by Mrs. Yeaw, Mrs. Brown, Mr. Yeaw, and others. In the afternoon all services were dispensed with at the stand, and the friends gathered in the several cottages, and whiled away the hours in social intercourse and circles.

Tuesday, Aug. 14th, a social meeting was held at the stand at 9 A. M. Remarks by Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Clark, Mr. Edgerly, Dr. Hale, Dr. Storer and Dr. Fuller. At 10:30 A. M. Dr. H. B. Storer delivered an able lecture, subject, "The Bible of Nature is the Book of God." At 2 P. M. Mrs. A. P. Brown lectured upon "Spiritualism is, as a Power, a Developing Principle," followed by Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, subject, "The Two Bibles: That of Christianity and that of Humanity." The services closed with a séance by Dr. Hale. In the evening Dr. Hale held a very successful séance at the stand, at the close of which Mr. H. C. Berry gave a few pleasing experiments, illustrating the power of a positive mind over a negative one, or, as it is commonly called, Mesmerism.

Wednesday morning, Aug. 15th, the sun rose clear and beautiful; all nature was rejoicing; and the health-laden breezes that swept in from the sea invigorated every one and compensated them for the brief season of rainy and uncomfortable weather. As a health-giving resort, Temple Heights is unsurpassed on the coast of Maine.

At 9 A. M. a very interesting and spirited social meeting was held at the stand, Mrs. Brown, Mr. Clark, Mr. Yeaw, Mrs. Crosby, Messrs. Kingman, Glidden, Arno, Drs. Storer and Hale and others taking part. At 10 A. M. Mr. Oscar A. Edgerly of Newburyport, Mass., delivered the regular lecture. Bro. Edgerly is a young and promising speaker, and bids fair to be an honor to our platform. He was followed in an able manner by Mrs. Abbie Morse of Searsmont, Me. At 2 P. M. Mrs. Yeaw delivered a very interesting lecture upon "The Relation of Spiritualism to Materialism," followed by Dr. Hale, who gave a large number of readings from articles taken from the audience, almost all of them being acknowledged as correct by the parties. At 6 P. M. Mr. H. C. Berry gave a very pleasing mesmeric entertainment at the stand.

Thursday, Aug. 16th, social meeting at 9 A. M., opened by Mrs. Yeaw, followed by Mrs. Dr. Crosby, Mr. Edgerly, Mrs. Brown and others. At 10:30 A. M., invocation by Mrs. H. C. Berry, of Portland, Me., followed by a lecture by Mrs. Wentworth of Knox, Me. At 2 P. M., Dr. Geo. A. Fuller delivered a scathing review of Dr. Talmage's sermon against Spiritualism. A large audience listened attentively for nearly an hour to his striking comparison of Dr. Talmage's views of religion with those held by Spiritualists.

Friday, Aug. 17th, social meeting at 9 A.M., opened by Mr. Arno, followed by Dr. Nevins, Dr. Storer and others. At 2 P. M., lecture by Dr. H. B. Storer; subject, "What and Where is the Spirit-World?" It was raining hard, but the speaker held the close attention of his audience throughout his discourse, which, considering the disadvantage under which it was given, was considered to be one of the best delivered during our meeting.

Saturday, Aug. 18th, social meeting at 9 A.M. At 10:30 Oscar Edgerly lectured; subject, "Spiritualism as a Rational Religion."

At 2 P. M. Mrs. A. P. Brown delivered an able lecture. Subject, "Questions Relative to God's Bible."

Sunday morning, Aug. 19th. Closing day. The friends began to gather in the early morning, and when called to order at 9 A. M., the auditorium was filled to overflowing. A very harmonious and spirited social meeting was held, participated in by a large number of the friends. At 10:30 Dr. George A. Fuller gave a fine lecture upon "Spiritualism as a Religion and a Science." At 2 P. M. Mrs. Yeaw lectured. Subject, "The Scope of Spiritualism," followed by Dr. H. B. Storer upon "The Conduct of Life," who prefaced his lecture by reading that excellent poem of Theodore Parker's, "Aunt Kindly." The speakers of the day, and the lectures delivered by them, were highly appreciated by the large audience, that gave them the closest attention.

At the close of Dr. Storer's remarks, the President of the society, Mr. Rich, thanked the friends for their attention and courtesy to the officers of the society during the meetings. The chairman of the meetings, Mr. Berry, also thanked the friends, the choir and the speakers for the help they had all extended to him in the performance of his duties, and invited all to attend the coming year. The audience rose and joined in singing that grand old hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee;" a benediction was pronounced by Mrs. Yeaw, and the meeting was pronounced closed for the present year. Thus terminated the most harmonious and successful series of meetings held upon our grounds. We cordially thank all friends who have contributed to the success of our meetings, and most heartily extend to them an invitation to be with us next year, and bring all their friends with them; and to strangers we would say, come and make us a visit, and you will never regret it.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Saturday evening, Aug. 18th, there was a musical and literary entertainment at the auditorium. The entire programme was well rendered by the various artists, to the entire satisfaction of the large audience. After the overture by the orchestra, Prof. Dunton exhibited some pleasing feats of legerdemain. Effective recitations were given by Mr. C. A. Young, of the Boston Globe, and Miss Rosa Wieler, of Bangor; songs by Mrs. Gertrude Cookson, Miss Bertha Wieler, of Bangor, and Miss Edith Jones, accompanied by Mr. A. W. Patterson with banjo; readings by Dr. H. B. Storer, Dr. George A. Fuller, Mrs. A. P. Brown and Miss Hunt. Miss May Tucker contributed two fine organ solos. Mr. H. C. Berry, of Portland, exhibited through a lady subject some fine mesmeric experiments, the lady impersonating with fine effect "Parepa Rosa." Dr. W. E. Hale, of Charlestown, Mass., gave some fine psychometric readings. The entertainment was closed with music by the orchestra, organ, violin and cornet, representing Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Cookson and Mr. Robinson, of Bangor.

Sunday evening, Aug. 19th, a second entertainment was held at the auditorium, at which time a new programme was rendered by the same talent as of the previous evening, with satisfactory and pleasing results. The audience showed their appreciation by frequent applause and several encores. Time and space do not admit of speaking in detail of the merit of each, but seldom have we seen impromptu entertainments more satisfactory, with such talent exhibited by the various actors as has been presented in the two given for the benefit of the Temple Heights Association. Mrs. Yeaw was master of ceremonies, and to her is due the credit for the success of the entertainments. The thanks of the society are hers for her untiring efforts in our behalf.

NOTES.

Dr. W. A. Hale of Charlestown, Mass., was upon the grounds during the entire meeting; he held several circles and gave private sittings.

Oscar Edgerly of Newburyport, Mass., was located at "Nickawa Point," where he gave private sittings; he also held several circles and delivered two lectures from our platform.

Dr. Ira Nevens of Lewiston, visited our grounds and was highly pleased with them.

Dr. F. E. Baxter of Gardiner paid us a short visit.

Rev. Mr. White of Dexter visited the meetings several times, and took part in our social meetings.

Rev. Joseph H. Beals and wife of Washington, Me., visited our camp several times.

Four new cottages have been built this year; the park has been graded and laid down to grass; a large granite drinking trough for watering horses has been placed by the roadside; seats with backs to them have been placed in the auditorium. Other improvements have been made, and more will be before another year.

Mrs. Abbie Morse, of Searsmont, has a nice cottage at "Nickawa Point," a gift from her many friends.

The Sea Breeze, published at Belfast, printed a full roster of the cottagers and tenters in its issue of Aug. 18th, also a report of the meetings.

It was estimated that there were fifteen hundred people at our closing exercises.

Yours for the truth, H. C. BERRY.

Portland, Me., August, 1888.

Verona Park, Me.

The last week of the Camp-Meeting at this place opened auspiciously, as the weather proved very pleasant. Mrs. A. M. Glading, together with Geo. A. Fuller, gave eloquent lectures from the platform daily; in addition to which conference meetings and séances were held at the different cottages.

Mr. Oscar Edgerly, of Newburyport, gave a very interesting discourse during the week, taking for his subject, "The Potency of Christian Truths." This gentleman is one of our youngest speakers, but proves to be very eloquent.

The question for debate at one of the conference gatherings was: "Can there be any faith without knowledge?" Mrs. Glading and Mr. Fuller assumed the affirmative, while Mrs. Donnell of Somerville (who is a talented speaker) favored the negative.

On Wednesday, Aug. 23d, the yearly meeting for choice of officers was held at Silver Star Cottage, at which much harmony prevailed, and as the people nominated were elected by a unanimous vote, it gave assurance of a most successful continuation of the gatherings to be held at this Park in the future. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. C. F. Ware; Vice-President, J. B. Hatch, Sen., of Boston; Secretary, Carrie S. Wardwell, of Bucksport; Treasurer, Rufus H. Emery, of Bucksport; Auditor, E. S. Wardwell; Directors: Mrs. K. C. Pishon, (of Augusta.) Thomas Fowler, (of Medway.) Mrs. A. E. Barnes, (of Boston.) Henry Hawes, O. E. White, (of Lincoln.) Peter Abbott, (of Verona.) Mrs. Gross, (of Camden.) A. U. Blackington, (of Boston.)

At a subsequent meeting Mr. J. B. Hatch, after giving the matter due deliberation, and thanking the Association for the honor conferred, tendered his declination of the office of Vice-President, and Mrs. Barnes, President of the Ladies' Aid Society of Boston, was chosen—Mrs. Donnell, of Somerville, Mass., being elected director in her place.

At the meeting of the directors a letter was received from Mr. Blackington, of Boston; in addition to many kind words a sum of money was found enclosed, which was received, and thanks returned to the donor.

During the week many pleasing features have presented themselves and at no time in my experience have I witnessed the cordial feeling that has existed among the campers at this grove.

Aug. 24th being the birthday of your humble servant, as you are aware, it is always my custom to celebrate that date when at home. In the morning my little cottage was trimmed with flags and evergreens by the ladies of our party, and a box containing gifts from friends at home was received, and many a warm shake of the hand extended.

Dr. Ware, after calling the assembly to order at our home, introduced Mrs. Glading, who, in behalf of the campers, presented me a gold ring as a token of friendship; in return all I could say was that I fully appreciated their kindness. Speaking followed, in which Messrs. Fuller, Edgerly, Wardwell and others joined.

On Saturday, 25th, Mrs. Glading gave an entertainment for the benefit of the Association. As the facilities are very bad for holding meetings in stormy weather, it was determined to raise money for the purpose of having a suitable place by the opening of next season; consequent upon the money received from a séance given by Mr. Edgerly, and another by Mrs. Glading, and a large contribution collected upon the last Sunday, steps were at once taken in this direction, and those who attend next year will find a covered pavilion at Verona.

Sunday, the 26th inst., being the last day, the attendance was large. In the morning Mr. Fuller answered Rev. Mr. Talmage's sermon against Spiritualism. Mr. Francis opened the afternoon service by the reading of a poem. Mrs. Glading followed, taking as her subject, "What Lies Before Us?" closing with psychometric readings.

Dr. Ware, in closing, complimented all for the assistance rendered, and most especially the aid received through the columns of the BANNER OF LIGHT.

Previous to the audience leaving their seats they were treated to a surprise by Mr. Fuller stepping to the front, and in complimentary terms presenting to Mrs. Glading articles of silver from friends in camp. For the first time this lady was at a loss for words, but her actions proved that in her heart was a warm place for Verona Park.

Thus closed a very successful Spiritualist camp-meeting.

In taking my leave of Maine, please allow me to return thanks for the many favors vouchsafed not only toward myself, but in behalf of Messrs. Colby & Rich, Bro. Danforth of The Lyceum Educator, Bro. Wardwell of the Eastern Star, and others.

P. S.—Next year, it is surmised, a Children's Progressive Lyceum and a Ladies' Aid Society will be inaugurated at this place. H.

Cassadaga Lake, N. Y.

The season at Cassadaga was extended one week, making Sunday, Sept. 2d, the closing day.

During the past week lectures have been given by Walter Howell, W. J. Colville, Mrs. R. S. Lillie, Prof. W. F. Peck and Mrs. Anna Orvis.

Walter Howell has applied to the Western Unitarian Conference for fellowship, and will accept a Unitarian pulpit. He says he has not renounced his Spiritual Philosophy, nor will he cease to utter his highest convictions; but a desire to settle in one place for permanent work leads him to seek the liberal pulpit as the field for his future labors.

During the past week there has been organized at Cassadaga the germ of what ought to be and may become a great movement in the field of liberal thought. It is an association to be known as the Universal Co-operative Temperance Union, having for its object the eradication of vice in all forms. All persons in sympathy with the object of the Union are eligible to membership, and it is proposed to establish subordinate unions in various localities with the object of ultimately perfecting an International Union. There is to be no stated initiation fee, but each person is to make a voluntary offering according to his or her means and disposition at the time of joining. The first annual meeting will be held on the C. L. F. A. camp-grounds, on the third Monday of August, 1889. The officers are: Solon Lauer, President; Mrs. Anna Orvis, Vice President; C. Bird Gould, Secretary; Hon. G. F. Lewis, Treasurer. Honorary Vice Presidents, W. J. Colville, Dr. M. M. Tousey, H. D. Barrett, Mrs. Dr. Hyde.

This Association is a move in the direction of materializing some of the ideals which are so constantly enunciated from the Spiritualist platform, and should receive the hearty coöperation of all persons interested in the regeneration of humanity. In a future number of this paper further information will be given concerning methods of work for the local societies, with hints on organization, etc. It is the intention to divide the work into several departments of reform, and to make the platform so broad that all who are interested in the elevation of our social conditions can labor through this organization. The Secretary may be addressed at 306 Sterling Avenue, Cleveland, O.

GRAPHO.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The camp meeting at Cassadaga this season has been unusually successful. During the past fortnight, in addition to numerous lectures and conferences, a series of most interesting and instructive entertainments have been given, and besides these, classes for instruction in physical as well as spiritual culture have been largely attended. W. J. Colville has lectured five times in the public auditorium, sixteen times in Library Hall, and taken part in several entertainments and receptions. Mrs. Lillie has spoken frequently, and her talented husband has been conspicuous in the exercise of his musical ability. Walter Howell has given three very fine lectures, and has been always on hand to assist Mrs. Tillinghast, the able conductor of the Children's Lyceum, and promote the success of a great variety of benefits and other pleasant reunions. Mr. Rudolf King, the accomplished pianist, has rendered much valuable assistance, performing some splendid solos and accompanying singers. Mrs. Clara Watson of Jamestown has given two stirring practical discourses. Mrs. F. O. Hyzer has delighted all whose tendencies are toward the transcendental. Mrs. Anna Orvis of Chicago, both as speaker and songstress, has been a source of great delight to all campers and visitors; she has also given effectual treatments to the suffering under spiritual guidance. Edgar W. Emerson, the famous test medium, has been surprisingly accurate in his sphere of ministration. Mr. and Mrs. Skidmore are as earnestly active and hospitable as ever, and are in many respects the soul of the meetings.

The hotel has been well managed; courtesy to all guests and good living have added fresh laurels to its high repute in former years. The weather has been auspicious; occasional showers have kept the air cool and laid the dust; the breezes have been balmy, the sun bright, and the moonlight evenings on the lake exceedingly delightful. Sundays have been gala days in every respect. On Sunday, Aug. 26th, the audiences were again immense. Mr. W. J. Colville and Mrs. Lillie were the speakers. The auditorium, both morning and afternoon, was so crowded that almost as many people had to stand as found sittings. Both speakers were in their happiest vein, and their clear, resonant voices were distinctly heard far beyond the limits of the canvas. Excellent music was furnished by the superb orchestra and a number of efficient vocalists.

The floral decorations have been uniformly exquisite and profuse. Love feasts on Sunday evening have been occasions when almost all the speakers and vocalists have vied with each other to say kindly words to everybody and assist in raising funds to yet enlarge the work of the Association by inducing friends to take stock, which is pronounced by competent judges an excellent investment. Friends of Mrs. Lillie, W. J. Colville and Walter Howell have presented each of those popular speakers with several shares, that they may feel fully identified with Cassadaga and have votes in its management. The programme for the concluding days is an excellent one. The eloquent and ever welcome A. B. French is expected to conclude the meetings. **

Queen City Park, (South Burlington,) Vt.

The interest at Queen City Park Spiritualist Camp-Meeting increases. Its platform is an attracting magnet of no mean power, and the wealth of spiritual thought that continues to flow from it is enriching the people from far and near. On Tuesday, Aug. 28th, up to which time the last report was made, Rev. Frank E. Healey, in the absence of Bishop A. Beals, occupied the platform and gave one of his radical discourses. It was well received. Mrs. Emma Paul, one of our exact and finished speakers, addressed an appreciative audience on Wednesday. On Thursday, in the grove, the day being delightful, Mrs Morse Baker of Granville, N. Y., addressed a goodly number of interested listeners. Mrs. Baker, who is somewhat advanced in years, is beckoning us on and pointing the way to the higher and more perfect life.

Thursday evening the camp was especially interested in the children's entertainment. To simply say it was good, does not fully describe it; it was particularly creditable to all concerned, and gratifying to a large audience to see such promise in those who soon will be carrying our burdens and acting their parts in the labors of life. The camp is more fully represented than ever before by the young, and this is a hopeful sign.

Friday, at 2 P. M., Mrs. Paul again occupied the platform. Her address was replete with pertinent suggestive thought. Some of her sentences, exact in language, cut their way to the marrow of cherished dogmas. Our male speakers will have to brighten up to keep pace with their sisters in soul-stirring speech.

We have to announce the following arrivals of mediums since our last report: Dr. D. C. Dake, of New York; Horatio Eddy, Mrs. Mary Huntoon, A. E. Tisdale, R. H. Kneeshaw of Montreal, and J. Clegg Wright. Others are expected.

Mr. Henry J. Newton and wife, of New York, have arrived to day (Aug. 31st). Mr. Sabin Scott and wife have also arrived. Mrs. Judge Houghton, of Bennington, and many others from all parts of the State are enjoying the benefits of this meeting, and the rare scenery and beautiful surroundings of the place.

On Saturday, Sept. 1st, there were many new arrivals from Montreal, and other points. Though the day was not entirely favorable, a good audience convened in the afternoon to listen to Mr. R. H. Kneeshaw, of Montreal, who is a speaker of much promise.

Sunday was one of the perfect days of the year. "The Reindeer" made two trips to the Park, and a large concourse of people was on the grounds through the day.

In the forenoon Mr. Kneeshaw addressed an appreciative audience, gaining many friends. He furnishes in himself the proof of the truth of spirit control. A hard-working man, given to severe labor six days in the week, on the seventh, without study or the least preparation, he is enabled to speak to the satisfaction of a society in Montreal, in whose service he is as their regular speaker. Would that such could have the encouragement and support that would best prepare them for public service.

At 2 P. M., in the grove, J. Clegg Wright addressed a large and deeply interested audience. His radicalism pained some, but in the main his effort was accepted as embodying great and enduring truths. He is a graceful orator and has a magic hold on his hearers. Mr. Henry J. Newton made some interesting remarks at the opening of the afternoon's service, as also at the conference meeting in the evening.

A. E. S., Sec'y.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

This camping ground is situated on the borders of Lake Champlain, and is a lovely spot. As we stand upon its high banks at the setting of the sun the sight is grand indeed, beyond my power to describe. The mountains of the Adirondacks, some fifteen or twenty miles away, are plainly to be seen. Cloud shadows of rich and glowing color spread royally out upon the rippling waters of the Lake, making it look like a scene from childhood's "fairy land," or that other land of deathless summer toward which the spirit looks with expectency in hours alike of exaltation or of weariness.

This seems to be a fit place to hold sweet communion with loving souls long since passed away from this sphere into the eternal homes where harmony and peace ever abide.

Here are gathered many noble instruments used by the unseen ones to bring to friends still in the mortal words of good cheer and comfort.

This Association, with our hard-working brother, Dr. E. A. Smith, at its head, is very active in endeavors to make this place one which the Spiritualists of this country will love to visit.

The meetings are fully attended; the best of feeling prevails; much good seed is being sown, and an abundant harvest may be confidently anticipated.

My stay here is necessarily short. I have already visited five different Spiritualist camp meetings, and find in them all an earnest desire on the part of the many to learn more of this beautiful philosophy—so full of good things. My wish is that still higher truths as they are being revealed to our understandings may bring about peace on earth, and good will to man. That such may be the case is the prayer of

DR. A. H. RICHARDSON.

Mount Pleasant Park.

Monday, Aug. 20th, was devoted to a business meeting of the Association, and, there being no public service, everybody had a day of rest and social converse.

Tuesday: Conference in the morning and Mr. and Mrs. Kates in the afternoon.

Wednesday: Conference that was interesting. All are very much interested in these opportunities to give free expression to their thoughts. In the afternoon J. Clegg Wright spoke and was listened to closely. His private lectures are well attended.

Thursday, Aug. 23d, Fact Meeting, at which some very interesting statements were made of occurences upon the grounds this year. At night another camp-dance took place, in which the gentlemen tried to match the "leap year" party held the week before. Though they did not excel the ladies' party they came near equalling it. It was largely attended and a complete success.

The public dance, held the night before, was the largest held at the hall. Good order prevailed, and it was a financial success.

Thursday: Conference. Prof. Lockwood gave the afternoon lecture. Remarks were made by J. Clegg Wright.

The campers' dance was on Wednesday night, and on Thursday night we had a musical and literary entertainment. It was largely attended, several hundred people being in attendance. All pronounced it a first-class entertainment. Many were surprised to learn there was so much talent upon the grounds.

Friday, a most delightful day, brought new arrivals to camp. There was a business meeting of the Association in the forenoon. At its close everything was settled on firm business principles and very little debt left. Everybody felt jubilant over what had been done in settling up the affairs of the Association. And full assurance is now felt that this is a permanent institution.

The management will make every effort to get the best talent, to give the people advanced thought so as to attract the best minds and the best thinkers of our country.

Saturday, Aug. 25th, J. Clegg Wright's private lecture in the morning at eight, and Prof. Severance's closing class of the course at nine o'clock. The general opinion was that it had been very instructive and useful, and a strong invitation to come another year and conduct classes in the same manner.

At half-past ten o'clock a womens' meeting was held at the grand stand, in which a large number took part in discussing the social condition of women. The men were silent listeners, but deeply interested. The speakers were Mrs. Bates, Dr. Severance, Mrs. Bishop, Mattie Hull, and many others.

At the afternoon session Mr. Kates gave a discourse and Mrs. Kates tests. In the evening a mediums' meeting was held at the hall with the usual good success. At these meetings remarkable tests are given to the people, which causes them to be well patronized, as the admission fee is but ten cents.

After the meeting the young folks got up a farewell dance, and all enjoyed themselves hugely.

Sunday morning was bright and clear, with a fine prospect of a lovely day for the closing exercises of our camp-meeting.

At 9 o'clock the Lyceum met at the Hall, which was filled by those who wanted to see the exercises, and a very large number took part with the children.

J. Clegg Wright gave his last lecture to his class at 8 o'clock. All were well satisfied.

Prof. Loveland gave the morning lecture at the Grand Stand, and it was so well liked that it was voted by the audience to have it published in some of the Chicago papers.

There was a mediums' meeting at the Hall at 1 o'clock; J. Clegg Wright was the speaker for the afternoon. A large audience listened to his eloquent words.

In the evening all the speakers, some eight or ten of them, were put on for ten minutes' speeches, and the meeting was one of the most interesting sessions we have held. At its close the whole audience arose and with the choir sang "Home, Sweet Home."

There never was held a more harmonious camp-meeting anywhere. There was an entirely free platform, and all discussions upon all subjects were without the least bitterness of feeling, but earnest and with a wide difference of opinion. A. B. S.

Aug. 27th.

Niantic, Ct.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its last meeting for the season at the cottage of Mrs. Duchett on Broadway, and heard the report of its secretary with much satisfaction. Having spent some of their funds for lamps in the Pavilion, they have now on hand between five and six hundred dollars for future investment for the good of our cause. The officers of the society are: President, Mrs. M. Scripture, Willimantic; Vice-presidents, Mrs. N. Duchett, Norwich, Ct., and Mrs. A. J. Dorman, Willimantic; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Mary Hatch, South Windham, Mrs. F. A. Smith, of Boston, Mass.

Mr. Goodrich Dayton, Hartford, Ct., has been stopping with Mrs. White of New London, who is much better. May she live to greet us another year in the form.

Mrs. Mary Carpenter, of Stafford, is with Mrs. Lawrence, as also is Mr. Jacob Glover, who is a good medium.

Mrs. Lucy Qubec and Mrs. Fannie Briggs of Hopeville, Ct., are at Mrs. Mary Webster's tent.

Dr. John Brown of Jewett City, a clairvoyant, magnetic healer of remarkable power, has effected some wonderful cures, and is now having patients in Providence, R. I. He is thinking of visiting Hartford the coming winter, and his guides want him to devote his whole time to the work of healing the sick. May he meet with the success his merits entitle him to.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Congdon are both good mediums. Mr. Congdon is a clairvoyant, healing and developing medium, and is now in New Haven, at 143 High street. He also has independent slate-writing.

Mrs. Wetherell made us a brief call on her trip from Providence to New Haven.

Sunday, Sept. 2d, was a lovely day, and friends from New London came, among them Miss Marietta Hurlburt, Miss Emma Daniels, Mrs. Schofield and son, G. W. Richards, Mr. Miller, Mr. Atwood, Miss Tooker, and Dr. J. Williams, of Moodus, whose wife is still lingering on the border land, bringing to the earth-friends many visions of the beautiful home which is receiving its finishing touches for the reception of its soon coming guest.

In the afternoon Mr. E. R. Whiting, our penial President, was the speaker. He read a poem and an essay of his own on "Annihilation vs. Immortality."

In the evening, a circle at Mrs. Fassett's, on Broadway, proved to be a very interesting occasion.

Yours for truth, MRS. N. H. FOGG.

Parkland, Pa.

Sunday, Aug. 26th, was a glorious day for Parkland as to weather,

SEP 14 1888

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

VOL. LXIV. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1888. | $3.00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 1.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—Poetry: After the Darkness—What? Original Essay: The Spiritualism of 1888. Literary Department: Bars and Thresholds.

SECOND PAGE.—Poetry: Water Lilies at Sunset. September Magazines. Verifications of Spirit-Messages. A Painful Story.

THIRD PAGE.—Pearls. Banner Correspondence: Letters from New York, Missouri, Maine, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts. Aftermath at Lake Pleasant, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—Volume Sixty-Four. Our Duty to the Criminal. Plain Words from Spirit Henry Clay. A Timely Discourse. A Test of Clairvoyance, etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—Reopening of the Banner Free Meetings. "Hay Fever," or "Rose Cold." Transition of Rev. J. H. Harter. Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith.

SEVENTH PAGE.—Spirit Messages. Mediums in Boston. Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—All Sorts of Paragraphs. The Spiritualist Camp-Meetings, etc.

Written for the Banner of Light.

AFTER THE DARKNESS—WHAT?

BY M. T. SHELHAMER.

Night falls in folds of dusky gloom,
The glorious sunset dies
With all its wealth of tint and bloom,
From out the western skies;
The heavy shadows deepen fast,
And darkness weaves a veil
Of sombre aspect, cool and dim,
To mantle hill and dale.

Life flings its stern, relentless power
Upon a human soul,
And suffering becomes its dower,
As seasons onward roll.
The fairest blossoms turn to dust,
Hope's sweetest joys decay,
The brightest promise slowly pales,
And sorrow's gloom holds sway.

Beyond the darkness of the night
What hidden danger lies?
Lo! Flashes forth a gleam of light
Along the eastern skies!
The shadows fade and disappear,
The glorious sun bursts forth,
And morning comes with gladdening power
To beautify the earth.

Beyond the gloom of mortal strife
What unseen woes are found?
Hark! piercing through this earthly life
There comes a joyful sound!
It is the music of the spheres,
Sung by celestial choirs,
While from the shadows gleams a light
From Love's eternal fires!

Beyond the shadows splendors shine!
Above the darkness, Light!
After the struggle, triumphs dawn,
And Victory wins the fight!
After Earth's bondage, Freedom comes,
And from the toil and strife
Gladness and Joy and Peace arise
Eternity and Life!

Original Essay.

THE SPIRITUALISM OF 1888.

BY DR. F. L. H. WILLIS.

"Watchman, tell us of the night,
What its signs of promise are."

We challenge the student of human history to bring from its annals anything that will compare with the progress Modern Spiritualism has made during the years that have passed since the Rochester knockings first broke upon the startled ear of this materialistic age. Unprecedented has been the reception of the grand truth that human beings who, through the chemical process called death, have laid aside the mortal and entered the purely spiritual life, can and do communicate with the inhabitants of earth.

The religious world had been taught the doctrine of immortality for ages. It had hoped it was true, had tried to believe it was true, but never could it by any possibility have a demonstration of its truth until one human soul who had solved the great mystery by passing through the process of death, should return and demonstrate his presence with indisputable proofs of identity.

That this has been done in innumerable instances during the past four decades, and is constantly occurring, day by day is established as a fact by an overwhelming amount of human testimony, and in the general sense of believing in this truth, this demonstrable fact, Spiritualists are numbered by millions.

And just here we would define the accepted meaning of the term Spiritualist. Every person who believes that excarnated human spirits, or, speaking more accurately, human spirits that have passed out of the mortal body, can make known their presence and power to persons still in that body, and hold intelligent communication with them, is a Spiritualist, whatever else he may believe or disbelieve, or whatever else he may call himself.

This one central idea, however, is the only one that such an immense number of minds cherishing it, minds of every variety and grade, can rally around. And is it not an all-sufficient bond of union? Is anything more needed? Is not this demonstrable fact of spirit communion an all-sufficient reply to the question, "What do you Spiritualists believe?"

Men in the pride of their intellect have pointed in derision to the humble origin of this great movement, and questioned why it did not come with all the sublimity and majesty of prophetic days. "If your spirits are what you claim them to be, why have they not founded through some mighty leader a new and powerful religion?" Because, thank God! the angel world determined that the fatal mistakes of the ages past should not be repeated in this last great culminating effort to establish in this nineteenth century what they had striven to accomplish through all the ages in India, in Egypt, in Greece, Rome and Judea, but were thwarted in their designs every time by the degeneracy of pure Spiritualism into Ecclesiasticism and Ritualism through the powerful influence of proud, ambitious priesthoods.

Such was the effort made through Buddha in India, through Abraham in Chaldea, through Jesus in Judea, through all the prophets and seers and inspired ones of ancient times, and through all the great reformers of modern times.

The pure Spiritualism revealed to the ancient Hindus in the depths of those primeval forests into which they retired for communion with the unseen world, was swallowed up in time by the proud, aristocratic, arrogant sect of the Brahmins, who set up a great order of hereditary priesthood, and divided men up into castes and placed themselves in haughty arrogance at the head, as the specially chosen favorites of high heaven. Then arose Buddha, the inspired medium, selected by the angel world to break the power of this priestly despotism that was crushing men down into the depths of superstition and materialism, and call them back to a consciousness of their own spiritual nature, and of their ability to appeal directly to the great source of spiritual light and life, with no priest, no paid hireling to stand between Him and their own soul, wherein is found the grand presence-chamber of the divine. And for a time he triumphed. There Spiritualism was reëstablished. But Buddha passed away, and in the course of time his pure spiritual precepts were forgotten. Buddhism became powerful and corrupt, and sank into the same condition of formality and ritualistic observance with Brahminism.

Abraham was a Spiritualist, a medium. He heard spirit-voices bidding him leave the joys of home and friends, in the midst of the highest civilization that then prevailed, and migrate to a strange land, there to seek closer, purer communion with the spiritual light of the universe than he could attain to surrounded by the formalities of paganism. He saw spirits, and if the record be not an idle tale, he must have been a remarkable materializing medium, for three spirits entered his tent in broad daylight, so substantially materialized that they could partake with him of the material food prepared for his own sustenance; and there they opened up to him the mighty future, and revealed to him the important part he was to play in the founding of a nation destined to exert a marvelous influence on the progressive development of humanity, and the onward march of civilization. For a long time the descendants of Abraham were each and all of them mediums, and it is recorded of them that they communed with spiritual beings and received innumerable signs and tokens of spiritual presence and power. But after a time, false to the high inspirations of the spirit, they went after strange gods, turned away from the bright priesthood of the skies, and, as a result, were forced into captivity in Egypt, the hot-bed of sacerdotalism and extreme ritualism. Fascinated by the pomp and splendor of the powerful hereditary order of the priesthood, immediately on their return from captivity they set about founding the same order of things in Palestine, and so successful were they that their efforts culminated in all the proud glory of Solomon's Temple, and their priests were more powerful than their kings.

Conditions more adverse to the operations of the spirit could not have been devised, and, notwithstanding all the warnings and denunciations of their mediums, their seers and prophets, the people sank deeper and deeper into the night of ecclesiasticism, until there was no communication with the angel world, either by signs and wonders, by trance, dreams or open vision, and again was the nation forced into captivity, and this time by the Romans.

A dark pall settled over the fair land of Judea. But the nation was not forgotten by that power that was leading and guiding it along its destined way. Severe was the discipline it brought upon itself by its recreancy to the world of spirit forces that was endeavoring to accomplish through it its great work for humanity, namely, the establishment of an open, recognized communion between the two spheres of existence.

Nothing daunted, nothing discouraged by all the preceding failures, again the light broke forth in Judea. From the depths of obscurity and humility arose the grandest instrument of the angel world, the greatest medium that had yet been known. The power of the spirit was upon him from his cradle. Signs and tokens, wonders without number followed him wherever he went, as credentials of his glorious mission. Nor were these his only credentials. He came with something grander, diviner far than mere phenomena. He came, uttering the grand truths of the spirit, bringing forth its fruits in clear human love and kindness, in gentleness and sweetness, revealing the divine in the human as had never been done hitherto, recalling men to the worship of that God who is a spirit, bidding them return to that Delphi, that prophet's audience-chamber within the soul, which is the true kingdom of Heaven, that mediatorial, wonder-working, spiritual nature of man, where God's voice may be heard speaking from the midst of the divine silences, declaring humanity to be the only begotten of God, and therefore of necessity his revelator.

How splendidly he swept away the proud distinctions of caste, the hollow forms and ceremonials of ecclesiasticism, the empty pomp and pride of the hierarchy. His grand declaration that the fulfillment of all the law lay in the recognition and acceptance of the gospel of human and divine love, was the crowning revelation of the ages. It ushered in a glorious era of Spiritualism. Who could have believed it possible that the fair and beautiful truths of the Spiritualism that was so graciously and winningly presented in the land of Palestine, could ever by any possibility become perverted, or lost again in the morass of ecclesiasticism? Yet so it was. The Spiritualism of the Nazarene prevailed for only about three centuries, and then the pomp and splendor of the great Romish hierarchy burst upon the world, and Christian Ritualism began to contend with Christian Spiritualism, and became too mighty for it. The history of past ages was reënacted. Again ecclesiasticism triumphed, and Spiritualism receded. The signs and tokens ceased. The spiritual manifestations died out, gave place to dogmas and doctrines, to forms and ceremonials, to the pomp and splendor of bishops and archbishops, and again materialism reigned triumphant, and through all the dark ages that followed, Spiritualism slumbered beneath its sombre pall with only an occasional sign of spasmodic life.

At length, after centuries of ecclesiastical despotism, there came a day of reaction against this priestly power that had cursed the earth for thousands of years. The masses turned in disgust from the false position that had been so long forced upon them. The thinkers scoffed at the pretentious and unfounded assumptions of the priesthood. The Reformation rolled its mighty waves over Europe, and the way was prepared through its influence for another powerful outpouring of the spirit. Again was it found that Spiritualism had not forsaken the earth. In a spot as humble as Bethlehem of Judea, began another mighty movement that soon proved itself to be in harmony with the great outpourings that we can trace through all the ages, whose grand aim has been to recall men to a sense of unity with the Infinite Spirit by bringing them into vital relations therewith.

And to this later day movement men have given the name Modern Spiritualism; but it is the same bright, blessed power that manifested itself in the groves of Hindostan, on the plains of Mamre, on the mountains of Sinai and Horeb, and in the land of Palestine, and this time it has come to stay. For forty years the fierce light of public scrutiny has beaten upon it, for forty years it has stood at the bar of public opinion, and received the condemnation of priests and lawyers, of scribes, pharisees, and hypocrites. It has been crucified by its friends and its foes again and again. It has been vilified and abused by those who should have received it with shouts of welcome. Most emphatically it came to its own, the Church, and its own received it not, but rejected it with scorn and contempt, and affirmed its father to be the devil, and the pit to be the origin and source of its marvelous demonstrations of spiritual presence and spiritual power. But during these forty years in the face of bitter and determined opposition, against storms of obloquy, reproach and contempt, in spite of fierce incredulity and bitter invective from pulpit, press and bar, it has steadfastly maintained its ground until millions have opened their eyes to the overwhelming evidences it gives that we are indeed "surrounded by a great cloud of witnesses," even now, as in the days of the apostle, and that a bridge has been builded over the dark chasm of death, upon which the feet of the bright immortals who bring these demonstrations of spiritual presence and power shall never again cease to tread. Modern Spiritualism has given us overwhelming proof of its power to hold its own, and we need have no fear of its ever descending into ecclesiasticism, or degenerating into the formalisms of a sect, for it opens every soul into which it enters to the chartered liberties and inspirations of the universal skies.

Thus, then, stands the Spiritualism of 1888. Never stronger, never more aggressive, never with so powerful a hold upon the hearts of the people. We could have no stronger proof of this than we find in the remarkable increase of active hostility toward it on the part of its foes in all quarters, especially its clerical foes. But, gentlemen, it has come to stay, don't waste your powder. The indications of this are manifest in all directions. Our camp-meetings were never so thronged with earnest seekers as they are this season. Our churches are all honeycombed with Spiritualism. It pervades our social life. It makes its power felt even in our political life. There is no great reform movement that is not influenced by it. No heart that pulsates in unison with the great heart of love that throbs above us, no hands that scatter abroad the benevolence of the divine presence, no feet that are willing to be led in uses of right and mercy are unattended by these bright, ministering angels of the skies to whom Spiritualism belongs, whose work it is, and who will take good care that it is well and thoroughly done, despite the opposition of foes and the unfaithfulness or unworthiness of friends.

The belief in spiritual manifestations is not so much a religious belief as it is an affectional demand, and that it makes such rapid strides is because it is a necessity of the heart.

And now at the commencement of the fifth decade of this great movement we find it one of the most prominent themes of public thought, subject both to ridicule and reverence. Its progress has been marked by much that has laid it open to the former. Disorderly, fanatical expressions of it have been made. Many unworthy representatives of it have cast upon it the dark shadow of their own unworthy lives. But what great movement in the world of mind since the dawn of human existence has not been attended with like results. The history of early Christianity will not compare favorably with that of Modern Spiritualism. Take the history of any of the great movements that have resulted in the formation of sects, Calvinism, Methodism, Mormonism, and see what excesses of fanaticism marked their progress and drew forth the ridicule and contempt of those minds the movement failed to reach. On the other hand Spiritualism claims the reverence of all sincere men who perceive that the human soul holds it in spite of all ridicule and contempt, and finds in it an incitement to virtue and a means of advancement.

It cannot be denied that it stands to-day a mighty, moving power in the world, with millions of adherents in our own land, and millions more in foreign lands, with a literature of its own in many languages, and an influence that has made itself felt wherever civilization has gone.

Only as it awakens in the mind a conviction of immortality or establishes the fact of a great moving power that governs man in all worlds, or brings to the heart the knowledge it demands, can its claims be estimated. All besides this, all its philosophies and its theories, all the vagaries and follies that have attached themselves to it, must be estimated by and in individuals, and will have as various significance as individuals have capacity to grasp or freedom to consider its revelations.

Besides the mere wonder-seekers, the chasers after vagaries, the camp-followers and hangers on of Spiritualism, there stands to-day before the world a great multitude of earnest men and women declaring that they have received the demonstration of a grand fact. Into thousands of homes this demonstration has come bringing with it the joys of eternal life, and thousands of hearts are beating with a holy joy, and neither theory nor philosophy, neither denunciation nor contempt can mar the beauty of what to them is a revelation of Infinite Love.

Thus Spiritualism stands at the beginning of its fifth decade, an active, powerful agent in the world of mind. It has taken hold of man's highest nature. It appeals not alone to his intellect, but to his heart, and what springs from the heart will live, spite of all attempts to deaden it, until the affections themselves die out. But to-day it is demanding to be treated not merely as a popular superstition appealing to the affections. It claims to be recognized as something able to satisfy the intellect of the scholar, the scientist, the statesman, the jurist. The seed planted by the wayside has become a mighty tree, whose branches are for the healing of the nations. The appeal made to the affections has satisfied also the reason, and philosophy begins to define and measure it.

And how stands Spiritualism to-day in relation to the various religious sects? As we have already said, the churches are honeycombed with it. All the sects have their representatives in this general faith, and all are able to engraft it into their former belief, which it modifies and enlarges, making it far more soul-satisfying, thus proving that it is not the foe but the friend to religion. It is found to substantiate all spiritual truths, and to make certain and real what was before vague and unreal. It contradicts no spiritual truth, denies no spiritual revelation, opposes no religious faith that does not enchain the reason. And though denounced as opposed to all biblical revelation, it is in truth the shining gate to all the sacred light of the ages, and demonstrates the truth of the revelation and the inspiration. Thus its religious tendency is most clearly manifested. All that constitutes true religion can never find truer disciples or worthier representatives than can be found among those who find in Spiritualism the realization of their holiest dreams, their most sacred aspirations.

Therefore the Spiritualism of 1888 challenges the consideration of the world, not alone as a scientific fact or a philosophic theory, but also as a religious faith. It refuses to hold itself responsible for individual idiosyncrasies. It protests against being estimated by isolated facts. It demands the investigation of its whole basis by those who attack it. Therefore let not those who claim to be its disciples attempt to represent it as individuals. Its facts and theories are not individual; they have a general basis, and must be made to rest upon it.

But, as individuals, we can present its influence upon our daily life and reveal its vitalizing effect by our enkindled and extended love of justice, righteousness, purity, truth and holiness. No amount of sophistry can affect this standpoint of earnest men and women.

The true Spiritualist is being called upon to-day as never before to take his position, not as a sectarian but as a free, liberal expounder of the highest, purest, because most spiritual, faith the world has ever known, by living it in every act. Then shall philosophy and religion, love and purity unite to erect a worthy temple in which to worship the living God.

Literary Department.

BARS AND THRESHOLDS.

Written Especially for the Banner of Light,

BY MRS. EMMA MINER.

CHAPTER I.

DORIS.

Doris heard a slow, measured step upon the stairs, and then a knock at her door. She knew it was her grandmother's knock. She glanced dubiously around the room. White muslin and blue silk were thrown carelessly on lounge and chairs.

"Oh dear! That is grandma, I know! And my room in such a whirl! Seems to me it is always in a whirl!"

She hastily caught a couple of yards of muslin from an easy chair as she passed it and tossed it on the bed. She opened the door, and her grandmother paused on the threshold. Doris knew she was surveying the small white clouds.

"I declare, Doris! only one empty chair! And likely enough you hustled the things out of that to give me a place to sit in!"

Doris's slight blush was an assent.

"What in the world are you doing now?" she asked.

"Only making over one of my old white dresses, grandma," replied Doris. "and I found some nice pieces of blue silk among my things, and thought I would trim a hat for a change. Is n't it pretty?"

She poised it on her little hand. It was a dainty combination of blue silk, white lace, and a white plume that nodded defiantly in Mrs. Mason's face.

"Oh dear! here you are again spending your time foolishly over such vanity! I have tried to bring you up well, but I don't see what it is going to amount to! Why can't you be more like me?" and she straightened herself primly.

Doris glanced at her grandmother, and laid her hat down with a sigh.

"Grandma," said she in a despairing tone, "it is n't in me! You will have to give it up!"

Mrs. Mason seated herself in the one vacant chair, folded her hands, and proceeded to lecture Doris on her pride and vanity.

"But, grandma, I really don't think I am proud, as you call it. I like to have my dresses look well and look nice. Then I put them on and forget all about them. Truly, I don't care much whether they are calico or silk. Is that being proud?"

The young face wore an anxious expression as she looked into her grandmother's.

Mrs. Mason was interrupted in her reply by a light tap at the door. Doris sprang with alacrity to open it. She gave the new comer a bright glance of welcome. It was Aunt Amelia.

Aunt Amelia always did and said just the right things in the right place. Doris fervently wished all the people in the world were like aunt Amelia.

"I thought I would just slip in and help you on your dress a bit, Doris. I knew you had had quite a jaunt out this morning, and might feel tired."

Doris's face cleared gratefully as she made a place for her aunt near herself.

"I can't turbelow much," continued Aunt Amelia, "but I can sew straight seams, and I guess you can do the puckering."

Aunt Amelia began on a sleeve, while Mrs. Mason began on Doris again.

"Where have you been this morning?" she inquired, referring to the "jaunt."

"Only to Mrs. Sanders's, grandma; and I found her quite sick, and alone, so I stayed to do a few little things for her."

Doris modestly refrained from explaining that she had prepared a nice breakfast for the invalid, and made her comfortable in many little ways.

"Well, I hope you did n't spend all your time fixing up posies, and such nonsense. A chapter from the Bible and a good prayer would do her more good."

Doris felt there had been a painful omission of that work. Aunt Amelia interpreted the look on the troubled face, and said:

"Well, well, Sarah, I guess as long as Doris made her a cup of good tea, and tidied her up a little, it was just as good in the Lord's sight as though she had spent all her time reading and praying."

Doris gave her aunt a grateful glance, while Mrs. Mason's frown deepened.

"Strange how you always take Doris's part," said Mrs. Mason. "You ought to set her a better example."

"Well, I do n't know as it is all Doris's part. I want to take the part of the right, no matter whose it is; and you know, Sarah, I always did believe in works."

Doris, sitting there in the midst of her ruffling, looked at her grandmother and aunt, and noted the contrast. Mrs. Mason was prim, dignified and stern. Her cap was always placed evenly on her head. The folds of her dress seemed afraid to fall loosely, lest she should stoop at once to straighten them. There were no soft lines in her face or about her. She mentally decided she should never want to go to her grandmother if she were in great trouble.

Partly attentive to her ruffling, she was equally attentive to her aunt, Miss Amelia Parker. Her plump figure amply filled the little sewing-chair. There was a calmness in her face, born of patience in trial; a ready sympathy, and something of laughter at the corners of her mouth. Her cap was seldom straight. It usually sat on her head in a helplessly one-sided fashion, as if of itself making apologies for people's shortcomings.

Aunt Amelia made Doris think of a beautiful sunset, after a hot, dusty day; while her grandmother was like a cloudy midnight. Yes, Doris was indeed "a fanciful girl," as Mrs. Mason often said.

Mrs. Mason soon left the room, and Aunt Amelia and Doris continued their sewing quietly.

Doris was motherless. Seventeen years ago, the day upon which she first saw the light, her mother journeyed to that land invisible to so many. She had incurred Mrs. Mason's displeasure by a marriage with a worthless, dissipated man, who had deserted her, and left her alone in a strange city. She made her way back to her mother, who, to the last, had no word of pity or forgiveness for the broken-hearted woman.

Mary Mason Stuart was a forbidden subject. Mrs. Mason had destroyed all pictures of her, and the little Doris, bearing her mother's image, grew up in ignorance of these facts. Doris was ten years old before Miss Parker came to live with them, and from that time she and her brother Morris had a sympathizing friend in her.

The loneliness of her life, and her seclusion from young companionships, had matured her character. She sometimes felt oh! so old, and when she saw groups of gay young girls passing, and an echo of merry voices was wafted to her ears, she wondered what it would seem like to be among them.

Morris, who was two years older, had gone beyond Mrs. Mason's keeping. Three years seemed a long time, and it was three years this very June day since he had openly rebelled against Mrs Mason, and bidding Doris good-bye in a choking voice, had left her with her grandmother.

Doris's thought went back to this sad day. She remembered how brightly the sun shone. She remembered he had brought her a bunch of lovely white roses. A white rose was lying near her now. She took it up and kissed it for his sake, while tears ran down her cheeks. She spoke not a word, but Miss Parker said:

"Yes, I remember three long years! I thought of it the first thing this morning. But, Doris, try not to worry. We shall see Morris again sometime, I am sure of it." And patting Doris softly on the cheek, she left her alone.

Thanks to Miss Parker's timely assistance, the simple dress was soon finished. It was a very mild sort of dissipation which would witness its first wearing, being one of the many church fairs which were the extent of Doris's social privileges. But Doris looked forward to it as an important event in her simple, quiet life, and at last the evening arrived.

Mrs. Mason always accompanied her, not so much for the pleasure of association with friends, as for the personal supervision of her own table linen and forks. She was usually elected general manager and supervisor of the linen and silver.

On this particular evening she found herself much perplexed at the similarity of arrangements. Many a smiling lad and lassie tripped up to her, and, placing a basket before her, said: "Please, Mrs. Mason, mamma tied a pink string on the forks and spoons, so you would know whose they were."

Mrs. Mason looked ruefully at the accumulation of wares. There were yards and yards of pink string used.

Meanwhile, Doris, happily freed from all care, and having exchanged smiling salutations with friends, had clasped hands with Lucy Harrison, and strolled a little way from the crowd.

Lucy was her particular and most intimate friend, yet Doris did not have opportunities of meeting her frequently. Lucy's father and mother were not members of this church, or indeed of any church. Mrs. Mason called them "ungodly people," and was much afraid some of their decidedly broad views might be installed in Doris's head, if she were allowed to visit them too often; and when Lucy came to see Doris, there were no chances for girlish confidences. Mrs. Mason watched them too closely. They were two good, innocent girls, but Mrs. Mason disapproved of girlish gigglings, and little speeches neither pious nor profound. She wanted them to have the benefit of "her example."

Doris and Lucy left the noisy dining-room, and seated themselves in the remotest and darkest corner of a smaller room.

"What have you been doing lately, Doris?" asked Lucy.

"Oh, a few little things; but I keep thinking of Morris most all the time. I can't keep him out of my mind. I do so wish I could know where he is!"

"Perhaps he will come back soon," said Lucy.

"He won't come where grandma is; I know him too well for that!" and Doris's tears fell fast.

Just then a little group of elderly people entered the room. Following closely behind them was one who was a stranger to Lucy.

"Who is that tall, dark young man?" she asked.

"That is our new minister, the Rev. Lester Brooks. He has only come to fill a vacancy. Dr. Packard has preached here a great many years and got tired and sick, so the church gave him a vacation. He has gone to Europe, and Mr. Brooks will occupy the pulpit while he is away."

Doris had said this so many times to curious inquirers that she rattled it off like a well-learned lesson.

"He doesn't look much like a minister, does he, Doris? I mean he isn't prim."

"That is what I said to grandma," said Doris. I secretly believe she thinks so herself, only she won't say so because he is a minister."

Mr. Brooks's observant eyes noticed Doris's tears as he entered the room, and he managed to seat the group of ladies at a little distance from her, and take his own position so that their attention would be attracted in the opposite direction. Doris was thankful. She did not want them to see her crying. In a few moments there was an unexpected call for the services of two of the ladies, and they all left the room. Mr. Brooks went over to Doris and Lucy.

Doris was not in the least reserved with Mr. Brooks. It was only three months since he came among them, and she had found herself wishing he were her brother many times.

Mr. Brooks perceived at once that Doris was not specially interested in the merry-makings, and that she had to make a great effort to keep her tears back. He took her hand lightly for a moment, and then said gravely:

"Is it a new trouble, Miss Doris? Is it anything you may tell me about?"

"I should like to, but it began a good while ago, and you have not heard anything about Morris;" and Doris pressed her handkerchief to her eyes.

"You are mistaken. I know a great deal about Morris." Doris looked up questioningly.

"Dr. Carroll told me something about him. I am sorry for you, and for him, too. Try to be patient a little while longer. I am sure you will see your brother again."

Doris looked up hopefully.

"Dr. Carroll and I are friends," said Mr. Brooks. Doris wondered, for Dr. Carroll was what Mrs. Mason called "an unbeliever." He was an excellent physician, but Mrs. Mason did not employ him. Doris had often met him at the house of a sick friend, Mrs. Sanders. She liked him very much.

"I suppose I must go to the parlor now, but I want to say to you to try to remember that, although the world is wide, our Father's ministering angels are everywhere," and, with a kindly pressure of the hand, he left her.

"Those words make me feel better than 'God's watchful eye' that grandma is always talking about. I wonder if they mean the same thing?" said Doris.

"I don't know. I never thought about it," replied Lucy.

The words conveyed much comfort to Doris. They recurred to her often during the evening's festivities, and once in passing Mr. Brooks she gave him a grateful glance which amply rewarded him.

Mr. Brooks was quietly observant of Lucy Harrison. She seemed so unlike the crowd of young ladies scattered about the vestry. He soon made his way toward her, as Doris left her a few moments to wait upon Mrs. Mason.

"Do you come here to church often, Miss Harrison? I don't recollect seeing you here before."

"No, sir. I sometimes come with Doris to the church fairs, and occasionally to the sewing-circle, when they are very busy."

"Then they make you useful?"

Lucy smiled.

"I like to be useful sometimes," she replied.

"Where do you attend church?"

"I don't go to church at all."

Lucy expected he would look horrified. He was simply attentive.

"Then what do you do Sundays?"

"Very much as I do other days."

"And are you always useful the other days?"

This time he smiled.

"I think we ought to make all our days good and useful," said Lucy.

"Yes, so we ought; and we cannot choose the work for one another. But I am very glad you are Miss Doris's friend. She needs comfort and encouragement," and he moved away as Doris approached Lucy.

Mr. Brooks's calls upon Mrs. Mason became frequent. She always called Doris in, that she "might have the benefit of religious conversation." Let her introduce what topic she would Mr. Brooks always managed to turn the conversation into a channel which interested Doris. It was a great comfort to her that he hoped for Morris to come home.

CHAPTER II.

QUESTIONINGS.

Doris sat in Miss Parker's room one afternoon. Both were sewing.

"Aunt Amelia," said Doris, "grandma is always talking about 'God's watchful eye,' and Mr. Brooks talks of the 'ministering angels.' Do you suppose they mean the same thing?"

"Not exactly, Doris."

"Well, what is the difference?" persisted Doris.

"I have often thought of that same thing myself," said Miss Parker, speaking rather indistinctly, with her mouth full of pins. Doris waited patiently for her to remove them, one by one, when she resumed:

"I do believe in ministering angels, but I don't know anything about the other. You know, Doris, I am not like your grandma. I don't believe as she does in a great many things."

"Why, Aunt Amelia! Are you an 'unbeliever'?" Doris's face expressed amazement as she asked the question.

"Yes, child, according to your grandma, I suppose I am." Her spiritual state did not apparently occasion her any uneasiness, for she continued to sew over and over on a sheet with steady fingers. Doris looked at her aunt's peaceful face, and asked:

"Aunt Amelia, do you ever feel that you are a great sinner?"

"No, I don't! I try to do just as near right as I know how, and I can't do any better. Not but that I might be wiser at times, and consequently do better. But we are none of us to blame for what we do n't know. When I get up in the morning, I just say to myself, 'Now, Amelia Parker, there's most likely another day before you. Do your very best to do some good to somebody in it, and no harm to anybody! That's my way of praying. And then, when night comes, I sit down to think it all over; and if I see I have made a mistake, I am willing to bear the consequences."

Miss Parker's sense of justice was a strong characteristic.

"Honestly, auntie, that is just the way I feel, too; and when I told grandma so one day, she was shocked. She said I 'was of a wicked and perverse generation,' and worse than the heathen."

"Well, as for me, I would n't undertake to say who were heathen. They might be nearer the kingdom than I."

"What is being near the kingdom?" asked Doris.

"I call it doing exactly as you would be done by. It covers the whole ground, in my estimation," said Miss Parker, giving her needle a vigorous poke through a seam. "The Golden Rule means freedom, and justice, and truth, and peace, and purity, and love; and what more do you want?"

"It means a great deal, then, does n't it?" said Doris.

"Yes; and folks get so earnest searching after something they don't know anything about, and have no way to find out, that they jump right over all this, and don't pay much attention to it. Mind you, Doris, I don't say I am right; but I do say I go according to my conscience, and I shall follow that until I know some better rule." She smoothed out a hem, and continued thoughtfully:

"I suppose your grandma does a great sight of praying for me. I hope it will amount to something, I am sure."

Doris smiled.

"As if you were not the dearest, best auntie in the whole world!" she exclaimed, jumping up and kissing her. "But now, aunt, the sheets are done. Who will take them to Mrs. Sanders, you or I?"

"Well, I feel a trifle old to-day. Maybe it is because I am so wicked. Perhaps you had better go. Tell her I will carry or send over the rest of them to-morrow."

Doris rolled up her bundle, meanwhile musing on all Miss Parker had said. It was a puzzle to her. She believed in genuine goodness, and she knew her aunt was thoroughly good.

The thoughtful lines were not smoothed away from her face when she entered the home of Mrs. Sanders. Dr. Carroll was standing by a table, dropping some medicine into a glass.

"Three four! good afternoon, Miss Doris! seven eight!" and he turned suddenly upon her.

"What is that doubt upon your brow?" he asked smilingly.

"Not much; only Aunt Amelia and I got to talking about the kingdom, and I was wondering a little what it all means. I can't quite make it out."

"Older heads than yours have failed to do it, Miss Doris. I don't think either of you are far from it."

"Why! grandma says I am worse than the heathen!"

Dr. Carroll dropped the spoon with a sudden suppressed exclamation. Doris did not know whether it was about the spoon or Mrs. Mason. It did not sound very pleasant, she thought.

Doris busied herself for a few moments with Mrs. Sanders; gave her the bundle her aunt had sent, also the message; and, as the light was fast waning, stepped lightly into the hall. She was surprised to find Dr. Carroll sitting there.

"I thought you were gone," she said.

"I waited to see you. Will you sit down here a moment?"

Doris obeyed. She wondered if he considered Mrs. Sanders worse.

"Now do n't get alarmed or excited at what I am about to say, Doris. Do you remember Hugh Scott?"

"Do you mean the young man who went away with Morris?"

"Yes. I have reason to believe he has returned and is in this city. I also firmly believe he knows where Morris is."

"Have you seen him?"

"Yes, but he will tell me nothing. I knew you would want to make the effort to see him yourself. Perhaps he will talk with you. Can you manage to go to him?"

"I must," she answered; "but where is he?"

"At Bray street, No. 10."

"Bray street? where is that?"

"Not in a good part of the city. You had better tell Miss Parker. Perhaps she will go with you."

"Yes, I always tell Aunt Amelia everything. I know she will go. But Hugh won't go away before to-morrow, will he?"

"No; he is quite sick with a fever, and has a broken arm besides. He is fast enough for a while."

Dr. Carroll gave her a card with the address.

"Oh! how can I thank you enough?" she exclaimed.

He dropped her hand suddenly, sprang into his carriage and drove rapidly away.

Doris went home and entered the house quietly. Miss Parker noticed a new interest in her face, of which Mrs. Mason, deeply interested in the perusal of a book on "Holiness," was unobservant. Doris was thankful, and as early as possible went to Miss Parker's room, repeating all Dr. Carroll had said.

"Surely I will go with you, if we can manage it. I don't like to do anything secretly, but there seems to be a call for this. Go to bed now, child, and be patient."

It was past midnight when Doris fell asleep, and then she had troubled dreams of Morris and Hugh. She awoke early, and heard rain pouring steadily on the roof of the piazza under her window. It was a dismal sound.

"Oh, auntie! what shall we do? Can you manage in a storm like this?" Doris found time to whisper the words as they passed through the hall before entering the breakfast room.

"I am afraid not, dear, but we will see by-and-bye."

Doris forced herself to eat, that Mrs. Mason might not notice her restlessness, and was glad to leave the table."

"It is of no use to think of going to-day, child," said Miss Parker, as they reached the upper landing of the stairs. "We could n't frame a possible excuse for going out in such a storm as this. According to what the doctor says Hugh can't get off a great ways, and we must wait until to-morrow. Bring your sewing into my room, and let us talk the matter over."

Doris was thankful for her aunt's companionship. As for Hugh and Morris there seemed to be nothing to do except to await developments. There was a long silence. The rain poured unceasingly. The fire burned with a low, gentle warmth. Doris's thoughts wandered here and there, and finally rested upon what Miss Parker had said about ministering angels the day previous.

"Aunt Amelia, you said you believed in 'ministering angels.' What are they?" She spoke with interest.

"I guess I am in for it now," thought Miss Parker; "but it has got to come sometime, and perhaps 'now is the accepted time,' as Sarah would say."

Doris, unheeding her aunt's thoughts, patiently waited for her to speak.

With a glance of apprehension at Doris's face, she replied:

"Well, Doris, you have asked me a question now I have been expecting some time, and I shall answer it according to my conscience. But first, I want to ask you a question. What do you understand by immortality?"

"I suppose it is that our souls live forever, that dying is n't the end of us," said Doris.

"So I think. But what do you suppose we do after death? It would be pretty hard to worry through an eternity and not do anything special, would n't it?"

"I should think it might be," replied Doris. "I always find one day hangs heavily on my hands if I am unoccupied."

"If we are to live through an eternity, we surely ought to be doing some good. Now I believe that in heaven, as it is generally called, we shall have opportunities for doing good, and one of them is to bless and really help and comfort some of the loved ones left behind." Miss Parker spoke with an earnestness which was impressive.

"But how can that be done?" asked Doris. "Dead folks can't do anything."

"Take care, Doris. You mean you think they can't."

Miss Parker's voice expressed so much doubt that Doris looked up curiously.

"Surely, auntie, you do n't believe in spirits?"

"Well, you can call them 'spirits,' or ministering angels, just as you please. I believe in them, all the same."

Doris dropped her work in her amazement.

"Why, auntie! I thought only crazy or foolish people believed in spirits."

"That is a common mistake. Many people, wise and good, believe that spirits can return to earth to communicate with friends, and accomplish certain work."

"But how are we to know anything about it? We can't see them or hear them," said Doris.

"Perhaps you can't; but some people see and hear them. It needs a different sense of sight and hearing, or perhaps I should say a keener sense. It would n't be right for me to say nobody could do it because I could n't. If a deaf man were to say you could not speak because he could not hear you, or a blind man were to say there was no such person as Doris Stuart because he could not see you, it would not be the truth. It would not alter the facts of the case."

Doris mentally accepted this logical view. Miss Parker continued:

"It is called being 'clairvoyant' and 'clairaudient.' When a person has these gifts, they can see and hear spirits, and talk with them, too."

"Auntie, did you ever see a spirit?"

"Yes, I shall always think I have. I know I have seen my father."

Doris looked up eagerly. "Do tell me about it, auntie!"

"Well, at first it was nine years ago, at the time sister Ellen died. I stood side of her, holding her hand, and somebody came up quite close to me, and laid his hand on ours. I thought it was the doctor, and I did n't look up; but in a minute or so I heard the doctor speak, and his voice sounded out in the back part of the room. I looked up quick, and there stood my father, as plain as ever I saw him! I said, 'Father!' and he smiled, and put his other hand on my shoulder, and stood there quite a little while. I have seen him a good many times since, and I can hear him speak sometimes. When anything important comes up he generally comes to me, and tells me what to do. He is my ministering angel," and she looked smilingly into Doris's face.

Doris was too much astonished to reply at once. Miss Parker continued:

"I think it is right for you to hear these things, but I declare I do n't know but Sarah would turn me out of the house if she knew I had spoken about it."

"Yes, she would feel dreadfully. Auntie, would n't it be a good plan for me to read my Bible, and hear all grandma has to say on religious subjects, and all you have to say, and then make up my mind which side I will take?" It was a very anxious face raised to Miss Parker.

"It would be just the right way, you may depend, Doris. Nobody can get at truth when they only hear one side; but if your grandma learns that you are inquiring into it, she will put a stop to it. She knows what I think about it, but she says it is all my imagination."

Doris was silent for a few minutes.

"Does Mr. Brooks know your views?" she asked.

"No, he has never said anything to call them out, but I expect he will any day."

"Who does agree with you?"

"Well, Dr. Carroll, for one. He knows more about the subject than I do—has investigated a good deal. He says the more he studies it the stronger he is in it."

Doris now understood Mrs. Mason's strong dislike for Dr. Carroll. But her thought was busy in another direction.

"Auntie, how do people find out about all these things?"

"In various ways. There's clairvoyance, and clairaudience, and writings, and raps, and table tippings, and various things they hear through mediums; they call them 'tests.'"

Doris caught eagerly at the word "raps." "What are 'raps'?" she asked.

"Well, they say spirits make sounds on walls and floors and furniture—sounds like rapping."

"Did you ever hear any?"

"I do n't know. I have sometimes heard noises I could n't account for, but I would n't like to say it was spirits unless I knew. They say they will answer questions by rapping."

"Do they ever rap when you are not asking questions?"

"I do n't know. They might, to call your attention to them and make you wonder what the sound was."

Doris drew nearer her aunt, and whispered:

"Then, auntie, I really believe I have heard those raps. More than six months ago—it was the night I had the toothache so hard—I was lying wide awake, and I heard a queer noise right on the table by the head of my bed where my Bible lies. I thought of rats, and thought of everything. Often I wake up and hear it. I have wondered and wondered what it could be. I spoke to grandma about it once, but she only said, 'Rats, most likely, child'; but you know, auntie, grandma is so particular she would n't let rats rest in this house six months."

"Well, not knowing, I can't say; but I should advise you to inquire into it."

"I don't know but I should be afraid. Can't you come into my room to stay some night, and see if you hear it, and what you think of it?"

"Indeed I will, Doris, any time you want me."

"Come to-night, then. I am sure if ministering angels can come to me they ought to come now while I feel so troubled about Morris and Hugh."

"Well, dear, we will let this rest for a while and see what comes of it."

[To be continued in next issue.]

WATER LILIES AT SUNSET.

BY HENRY AUGUSTIN BEERS.

Mine eyes have seen when once at sunset hour
White lily flocks that edged a lonely lake,
All rose and sank upon the lifting swell
That swayed their long stems lazily, and lapped
Their floating pads and stirred among the leaves.
And when the sun from western gates of day
Poured colored flames, they, kissed to ruddy shame,
So blushed through snowy petals that they glowed
Like roses morning-blown in dewy bowers,
When garden walks lie dark with early shade,
That so their perfumed chalices were brimmed
With liquid glory till they overflowed
And spilled rich lights and purple shadows out.
That splashed the pool with gold, and stained its waves
In tints of violet and ruby blooms.
But when the flashing gem that lit the day
Dropped in its far blue casket of the hills,
The rainbow paintings faded from the mere,
The wine-dark shades grew black, the gilding dimmed,
While paling slow through tender amber hues,
The crimson lilies blanched to coldest white,
And wanly shivered in the evening breeze.
When twilight closed—when earliest dewdrops fell
All frosty chill died down their golden hearts,
They shrank at that still touch, as maidens shrink,
When love's first footstep frights with sweet alarms
The untrod wildness of their virgin breasts;
Then shut their ivory cups, and dipping low
Their folded beauties in the gloomy wave,
They nodded drowsily and heaved in sleep.
But sweeter far than summer dreams at dawn,
Their mingled breaths from out the darkness stole
Across the silent lake, the winding shores,
The shadowy hills that rose in lawny slopes,
The marsh among whose reeds the wild fowl screamed,
And dusky woodlands where the night came down.

September Magazines.

THE CENTURY.—George Kennan continues his interesting and instructive Siberian recitals, his special topic this month being "Exile by Administrative Process," illustrated with portraits of a few of the many victims of a cruel despotism; of whom he says, and very justly, "If such men are in exile in a lonely Siberian village instead of being at home in the service of the State—so much the worse for the State!" These papers are attracting the attention of leading minds in all parts of the world. "The Industrial Idea of Education," is an article by Charles M. Carter, endorsing a growing conviction among progressive educators that our public school should be made more utilitarian. Educationalists will likewise find much to interest them in the opening article of this number, in which "Uppingham, An Ancient School Worked on Modern Ideas," is fully described by George R. Parkin. The locality is a small market town in one of the midland counties of England, and the school, founded in 1584, is at present a model institution of its kind. A fine tribute is given to a fine mind by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, in a sketch of Ed. Rowland Sill, from whose writings she makes several choice selections, among them this striking one. "A comet is the spirit of a world hovering about and waiting to be incarnated." Miss Phelps says: "Sill stands among our poets upon the claim of pure inspiration," and this claim is strongly supported by the selections she gives. The article will find appreciative readers among Spiritualists. The contents of this number are of preeminent excellence; in addition to the above they include completed stories, poems of merit, sketches of travel and adventure; "Topics of the Time," "Open Letters" and "Bric-a-Brac." New York. The Century Company. Boston. Damrell & Upham, 283 Washington street.

MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY.—As a frontispiece is given a portrait of Arthur St. Clair, first governor of the Northwest territory, following which is a romantic account by the editor, Mrs. Lamb, of the establishment of civil government beyond the Ohio River, under the tittle, "Marietta, Ohio, 1788-1888," illustrated. In a scholarly treatise upon "Indian Tribes in Prehistoric Times," by Cyrus Thomas, Ph. D., their location and movements are described, and consideration given to theories regarding the mound-builders. C. C. Jones, jr., describes the jubilant welcome given in Georgia to the Declaration of Independence which, though proclaimed in Philadelphia July 4th, was not heard of in that State until August 10th. In "Reconstruction," Dr. J. H. Patton clearly and concisely shows the policy adopted by the government in restoring the Southern States to the Union. "Canada's Financial and Business Condition" is treated upon by Dr. Prosper Bender. As a matter of curiosity, a fac simile is given of the title-page of "The Universal Magazine of Knowledge and Pleasure, for July 1757, London," and an article from it, giving an English view of the Ohio River. The shorter articles include a graphic account of an "Escape from a Burning Prairie," by George Catlin, the famous traveler among the Indians, and "George Washington as a Dancer." New York: 743 Broadway.

ST. NICHOLAS.—A triad of pleasing pastoral verses opens this month's number, and next are three chapters of "Two Little Confederates," a story that all, North and South, have become interested in. E. P. Roe, whose recent transition was deeply regretted as the last leaf turned of his earthly service, collected on his journeyings "Some Stories about the California Lion," (panther) and these are given, with several illustrations. A story of the Dakota blizzard is entitled "What Dora Did." Charles Barnard in his usual attractive style gives in "Broken Adrift," an account of a young girl's adventurous management of a canal-boat that took a notion to start on a tramp. Estelle Thompson gives a story of "Knot-Holes." "Dick's Farm Hand," describes the finding by a boy of one solution of the labor problem, and "The Mischievous Knix" is a quaint fairy story, finely illustrated. On other pages we are told "How Some Birds are Cared For," and Charles G. Leland informs ingenious boys "What to do with Old Corks." The Century Co., New York. Damrell & Upham, "The Old Corner Bookstore," Boston.

WIDE AWAKE.—An attractive feature of this month's issue of this favorite is a descriptive account by Horatio O. Ladd of "The Ramona Indian Girls' School" connected with the University of New Mexico at Santa Fé, and named in honor of Helen Hunt Jackson and her book, "Ramona." The school was founded in response to a request of San Juan, a Mescallero chief. Several engravings show the Apache children on their arrival, in their blankets, and shortly after in new apparel. The opening story is one of the political campaign of 1840, entitled "Two Conspirators." "Plucky Smalls" continues "His Story," and in "Around the World Stories" are related "Adventures of an Abyssinian Monkey." Ed. E. Hale, in his "Story of Boston Common," gives some account of the distinguished guests of the city who have visited that notable locality, of whom were Lafayette, President Jackson, Black Hawk and Keokuk. "Summer Lanes," interesting especially to young landscape painters, "Ned's Base-Ball Club," "The Little Lombard Hero," "The House in the Tree," and "How to Make a Weather Bottle" are among the remaining contents. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH.—Dr. Helen Densmore resumes her "History of Mind Cure." A treatise is given upon "Washing and Baking Powders. How They are Made," its remarkable feature being that no special one is recommended, but only their constituents and the process of manufacture described. Following this are articles upon "Adulteration of Food," "Resuscitation of the Apparently Drowned," "Diphtheria" and "Corsets." New York: 206 Broadway.

THE PATH contains "Conversations on Occultism," "Some Teachings of a German Mystic," etc. New York: W. Q. Judge.

THE INDEPENDENT PULPIT contains the third installment of "Thoughts for the Thoughtful," a disquisition upon the "Lord's Supper," "What Unbelievers Have Done for the World," several other contributions to freethought literature, and a continued narrative of the editor's motley experiences in his personal efforts to enlighten the people in Eastern Texas. Waco, Texas: J. D. Shaw.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL.—Portraits of William II. of Germany, and the Empress Augusta Victoria, with brief biographies, introduce this month's contents, which include articles upon "Cremation," "Hereditary Influences," "Education and Use of the Brain," etc., together with "Notes in Science and Industry," "Editorial Items," poetry and illustrations. New York: Fowler & Wells Co.

Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

DR. JOHN SCOBEY.

It is with a grateful heart that I recognize the message of DR. JOHN SCOBEY, in THE BANNER Aug. 25th, as coming from my revered father. Not the shadow of a doubt is in the mind of any who have read it, but that he really communicated it. Before he was translated it was a subject of frequent conversation in the family that he was to send a message from the "Banner Circle" as soon as he was able, and I have watched for its coming with great interest. His neighbors of many years, Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, wish to add their names to the number who publicly recognize this message. Mr. Williams feels deeply grateful to my dear father as the one who first directed his attention to the truth and beauty of Spiritualism, and he is now approaching the "life elysian" with a full knowledge of what awaits him in the hereafter. As my father said, THE BANNER was very dear to him—more highly prized, if possible, as he neared his journey's end. On the usual day of its arrival I hurried to the post office, carried it to him without loss of time, and after he was too feeble to enjoy reading it himself, read it to him, he always selecting Father Hazard's articles for the first reading. God bless THE BANNER! It has carried joy to thousands of hearts. MRS. P. S. WEED

Shell Rock, Ia., Sept. 3d, 1888.

HENRY TUDOR.

We saw in the BANNER OF LIGHT of March 17th, 1888, a spirit-communication, through the Circle of Feb. 17th, 1888, purporting to come from HENRY TUDOR. Hearing that Mrs. Sarah T. Gray of Berrien Springs, Mich., had relatives of the name of Tudor, we copied the communication and sent it to her, and the within enclosed letter is her answer to us. We are sorry we did not send it to you sooner.

We remain respectfully yours.

Colomo, Mich., Aug. 22d, 1888. W. H. JENKINS.

MR. W. H. JENKINS—Dear Sir: I was at Benton Harbor visiting when your communication arrived at my home. I have just returned, and hasten to answer it. My father's name was Henry S. Tudor, from Barbadoes Island, West Indies. He had a son—Henry Tudor—who started from Buchann to California, lived in St. Joseph at one time, and died on the Plains. My father had a nephew by the name of George Gleason on my mother's side. I have not heard from him in thirty-five years. He lived in Boston when he wrote me last, and, if he is living at this time, must be about seventy years old. Respectfully yours,

Oronoko, July 11th, 1888. SARAH T. GRAY.

ISAAC C. ABBOTT.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT of Aug. 18th I read a message from ISAAC C. ABBOTT. I know it is correct in every particular; I am the "friend" he refers to as being the one who was the cause of his passing out of the mortal form. It was, as he says, an unintentional act, but which caused me many unhappy hours. I have met with him many times at materializing seances; twice in San Francisco I have seen him and conversed with him since he passed over, at two different mediums' seances. It affords me great pleasure to acknowledge this, and I sincerely hope to hear from him again. Yours very truly, A. THAYER.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 31st, 1888.

MARY EASTMAN.

I recognize the message of MARY EASTMAN, published Aug. 11th, given through the mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith, as my mother's; all names are correct. FRANK S. EASTMAN.

39 Methuen street, Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 2d, 1888.

FRANK P. AVERY.

The message of FRANKIE P. AVERY in the BANNER OF LIGHT of Aug. 25th, I recognize as coming from my darling boy, and I thank both spirit and mortal who were instrumental in giving the same. I hope he will be able to reach me again through the same channel. MRS. R. J. AVERY.

Stockton, Me., Aug. 31st, 1888.

FRANK GRIFFITH.

The message received through MRS. SMITH in the BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 1st, from FRANK GRIFFITH was correct in every particular; he was my nephew. LYDIA W. GAGE.

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 2d, 1888.

ELBRIDGE CURRIER.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT of Aug. 18th I saw a message from ELBRIDGE CURRIER, with whom my mother and others in the family were well acquainted. We were all very glad to read it.

Manchester, N. H. MRS. H. P. CROWELL.

A Painful Story.

A Christian Scientist, who derived a handsome income by insisting that the pains and aches of other people did not exist, was once attacked by a Jumping Toothache.

The unwelcome guest nestled down into a large molar in the lower jaw of the doctor, and proceeded to make itself at home by none too gently titillating the inferior dental nerve. Notwithstanding the fact that he had been telling his patients all the morning that their sufferings were imaginary, he was compelled to recognize this pain, and proceeded to give himself a $2 treatment, thus:

"Pain is evil; evil does not exist; ergo, pain does not exist, and hence there can be no pain in my teeth."

At this logical demonstration the Jumping Toothache smiled a smile of superior wisdom, and gave the dental pulp a bang so powerful that the Christian Scientist was unable to restrain a mournful howl; but he heroically proceeded.

"The pain I seem to feel in my tooth is not real; it is merely an evil thought. I will cease to think this thought, and the discomfort will cease."

On hearing this, the Jumping Toothache rolled up its sleeves and went to work in earnest. It jumped with both feet upon the quivering nerve ends, and stamped, kicked, squeezed and tugged at them the whole night through, with so savage vigor that when the blear-eyed dawn began to brighten in the east, the Christian Scientist, who had spent the night in walking up and down, and moaning, and trying to convince himself of the unreality of his suffering, was in a thoroughly knocked-out condition.

Suddenly, after an unusually atrocious twinge, he hastily seized his hat and coat.

"Where are you going?" inquired his wife, who was also a metaphysical healer.

"I'm going to have this ! tooth pulled out," said he shortly.

"Pain has no real existence," replied his wife calmly; "you know that ——"

"You have n't got this toothache!" cried the Christian Scientist, as he slammed the front door and made a bee-line for the nearest dentist.—Puck.

☞ Sir Humphrey Davy once inhaled twenty quarts of unmingled nitrous oxide. In his own account of what transpired after his awakening by Dr. Kinglake, Sir Humphrey says that "indignation and pride were the first feelings produced by the sight of persons about me. My emotions were enthusiastic and sublime; and for a moment I walked round the room, perfectly regardless of what was said to me. As I recovered my former state of mind, I felt an inclination to communicate the discoveries I had made during the experiment. I endeavored to recall the ideas; they were feeble and indistinct; one collection of terms, however, presented itself; and with the most intense belief and prophetic manner, I exclaimed to Dr. Kinglake: 'Nothing exists but thoughts! The universe is composed of impressions, ideas, pleasures and pains.'"

Pearls.

"——elegies,
And quoted odes, and jewels five words long,
That, on the stretched fore-finger of all time,
Sparkle forever."

The brightest stars are nearest to the earth.
—[Tinrod.

I will listen to any one's convictions; but pray keep your doubts to yourself. I have plenty of my own.—Goethe.

It is not strength, but art, obtains the prize,
And to be swift is less than to be wise.
'Tis more by art than force of numerous strokes,
The dexterous woodman shapes the stubborn oaks.
By art the pilot, through the boiling deep
And howling tempest, steers the fearless ship,
And 'tis the artist wins the glorious course,
Not these who trust in chariots and horse.
—[Homer, B. C. 900.

It is beautiful, on a lovely day, to see the soft, sweet clouds driven like lambs through the blue pasture of the heavens.

Love from love is sure to ripen,
Hate from hate makes sure display;
Seeds of good or ill we scatter
Heedlessly along our way;
But a glad or grievous fruitage
Waits us at the harvest day.
Whatsoe'er our sowing be,
Reaping, we its fruits must see.

Nothing can be a real pleasure or cure to the human soul but what is made by its own approbation.

The stream, once fouled, must still flow onward for awhile,
Till its own inner tide shall clear it from the soil.
The air, by tempest shook, in cloud-steam must ferment
Until self-clarified to pure, sweet element.
So only can a soul by struggling work release,
When any outward jar, or inward, mars its peace.
Soon heals the bodily wound inflicted by a foe;
Loose thy heart deals itself, long years their scars will show.
—Charles T. Brooks, from the German of Rackert.

Banner Correspondence.

New York.

WATERVLIET CENTER.—Samuel McCleary writes: "It is written, 'The fool hath said in his heart there is no God!' But reasoning upon the ground of cause and effect, we have constantly witnessed the operations of these since our birth into mortal life May 2d, 1807, and we shall also continue to do so when we drop this to pursue the delightful task through eternity. As we look back to the time of the death-dealing blizzards, and watch the slowly unfolding of the season, we first see the ice and snow yielding to the breath of the yet distant summer, and from all points running to the sea to be again caught up and returned to us in warm spring and summer showers, and then we begin to see the green carpeting slowly appearing on valley, hill and plain, everywhere beautifying the entire face of nature. Following come the flowers with their sweet fragrance, and birds whose melody uplifts, gladdens and inspires the human heart with hope. And when we see all this life and beauty bursting into birth, entirely independent of man, it looks as though there must be a great intelligent power back of it all, call it God or whatever you please. Now we believe in God, because we believe in cause and effect, and that no effect can exist without a cause.

The music of Nature, canst thou not hear it? And methinks a voice is audible to my inner self, saying, 'I have not left you, dear mortal; hope and trust on, the day breaketh!' If we have a sister or a brother so unfortunate as not to be able to trace any intelligence or purpose in all of Nature's works, allow us to ask such a one upon what basis he regards himself as an intelligence? Doubtless he will point, and with some degree of pride to that splendid carriage, and say, I made that; or, displaying a fine jeweled watch, say, I made that also; and his answers, reasoning from cause to effect, would be very good ones too good, because the logic is good. His reasons come within the reach of our comprehension, for we may go to work and make or learn to make a carriage or a watch, but we cannot make or learn to make a blade of grass, much less a world, and yet they are as surely effects of an intelligent cause as the carriage and the watch. This must be admitted or that the greatest of all effects, the grand machinery of the unlimited universe, exists without a cause. And where is the man who was ever ready to make that admission?"

Missouri.

BONNE TERRE.—S. T. Suddick, M. D., writes: "In an article on the first page of the BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 1st, entitled, 'A Strange Dream,' in the fifty-third line the type makes me say 'curl' in place of 'east.' I dreamed this dream on the night of June 15th, 1887; a lady who was stopping at my house at that time copied it, and sent it to you, and her name, not mine, should really have been attached to it, as I was the dreamer.

Please give me space to thank an unknown friend at Hunter, N. Y., for a copy of the works of 'Chase' and 'Howe,' also for sending me THE BANNER and the Golden Gate each week. He has my blessing, and the angel world will, I feel certain, return the kindness a thousand fold. I am keeping both books and papers busy; they are too good to lay idle, for they contain the words of life. Oh! if people only knew or could realize the good they could do by sending the spiritual books and papers they have read and thrown aside to hungry, waiting souls, I know they would do so to a greater extent than is now done. Any old books, pamphlets or other spiritual literature directed to P. O. Box 186, Bonne Terre, Mo., will be gladly distributed by me.

People here are just beginning to take an interest in our beautiful Philosophy, and are eager to learn."

ST. LOUIS.—S. Penberthy writes: "The First Spiritual Association after its summer vacation reopened its sessions on the 2d inst., at Brant's Hall, 9th and Franklin Avenue—Mr. Williams, President, in the chair. Mr. Thomas lectured to a good audience. The officers of the organization are as follows: Mr. Williams, President; Mr. Hershaw, Vice President; Mr. Goettlar, Treasurer; S. Penberthy, Recording Secretary; Mr. Hoff, Corresponding Secretary. Meetings are held every Sunday at 3 P. M. Address Samuel Penberthy, Hotel Westeran."

Maine.

VERONA.—A correspondent writes: "I was one of an interested audience at this place which on Sunday, Aug. 12th, listened to Miss M. T. Shelhamer in a discourse which she began by saying: 'We are gathered like the covenanters of old to worship God in our own way.' She then proceeded to discourse in an eloquent and impressive manner upon 'The Philosophy of Spiritualism,' in which she said, 'Spiritualism in its present bearing upon the world is a Spirit of Peace. It has a mission; it comes to every life as a blessing; it comes in the name of the departed. It is a revelator, a teacher, a saviour. It is not an intolerant; it is severe but kind.'

Mr. Wardwell, of the Bucksport Clipper, said of Miss Shelhamer's discourse: 'Her language was classical Anglo-Saxon, delivered with a diction and pronunciation that reminded one of the ring of coins on a marble counter. We failed to detect a mispronounced or ungrammatical expression. She made a good impression. The discourse was first-class, and we heard many favorable comments from some of our best critics.'"

AUGUSTA.—J. E. P. writes: "Quite a number of friends assembled at 87 Sewall street on the evening of Friday, Aug. 31st, to welcome Dr. H. F. Merrill, the test-medium, and his estimable wife. The Doctor is very pleasantly located in a nice suite of rooms, and the circle that evening was a most satisfactory one to all present. All received unquestionable evidence of the presence of spirit-friends, and some very remarkable and striking tests were given through the Doctor's mediumship. Other mediums were controlled, and the evening passed away profitably and pleasantly to all. The Spiritualists and friends are glad to welcome to our city one who has been so faithful and true a servant and worker for our cause. Is it not the duty of every true Spiritualist of the present time to protect our mediums, against whom the darts of the enemy are being hurled, and who are enduring untold persecutions? When all follow the example of the BANNER OF LIGHT, Spiritualism will take its place in the front ranks and shed its glorious rays of light and truth over all the earth."

Ohio.

CINCINNATI.—A. J. C. Robbins writes: "Spiritualism has received new impetus from the visit of Dr. A. W. S. Rothermel. Tuesday evening, Aug. 27, during a séance held at his residence, 400 West 4th street, the box in which was the light, having become overheated and smoky, his manager, Prof. Bosworth, undertook to fix it, and in order to do so had the gas burn at full head. While burning thus, a full and perfect form (Emma Hirsch, well known to most all present) came into the midst of the circle in the full glare of the light, and said in an audible whisper: 'Jimmy was afraid I could n't do it, but I'll do more in the future!' She stayed in the strong light fully two minutes, while all present saw every lineament of her beautiful features, she being not over four feet distant from each of the twelve people present; then, gliding near the curtains, the form dematerialized, vanishing as a flash of light, to the great surprise of all."

CINCINNATI.—John Bobring writes: "The first birth-day-anniversary and convention of the First New Spiritual Church of Cincinnati, proved a grand success in every way. Saturday evening, September 1st, a reception was held, representatives of the church from Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and other States being welcomed by Rev. James A. Bliss, Rev. Augusta Riedel and others. Rev. Augusta Riedel under the control of her guide, 'Jewel,' gave some wonderful tests, which were all recognized.

The services on Sunday, Sept. 2d, showed the good work the church is accomplishing. The rituals of 'right hand of fellowship' and 'christening of children' were excellent. Rev. James A. Bliss, under control of the German Doctor, gave a brief lecture. Rev. Augusta Riedel and six or seven other medium-members of the church were interestingly controlled by their guides.

Monday evening, Sept. 3d, a banquet was given, with the usual speeches and toasts on such occasions. Tuesday evening, Sept. 4th, was dedicated to dancing and general farewell exercises.

I feel assured that the new church work will be a success."

Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURGH.—A correspondent writes, Sept. 3d: "The society opened here yesterday with Mr. J. H. McElroy in the chair and Mrs. A. M. Glading on the platform as lecturer. The meeting was opened with a song, 'Happy Greeting,' after which 'Hoodah,' Mrs. Glading's control, in a few words suggested plans for the course of the society during the coming year. Questions were then called for, persons in the audience responding with several which were dealt with in an able manner, which proved satisfactory to the auditors. They related to vicarious atonement, growth and development in the spirit-world, the number of spheres in that world, and knowledge as the saviour of mankind. Following remarks upon these, a number of tests were given, the personal descriptions evincing Mrs. Glading's remarkable gifts in this direction. The Pittsburgh Times of the next morning gave a very creditable report of the meeting.

The Pittsburgh Society of Spiritualists commences the year entirely free of debt. Next month F. T. Ripley is before the society."

SCRANTON.—Mrs. Sarah J. Higgs, 1014 West Lock Avenue, West Side, writes: "If you should meet with a medium who would like a home for a few weeks, please to give such my address."

Massachusetts.

LAKE PLEASANT.—"A Church-Member" writes: "We all can appreciate charity, let it come from what ever source it may, and as we leave our homes and spend a few days at this place it is satisfaction to hear speakers express a desire to uplift mankind. No reform ever gained by dwelling on the mistakes of those it would improve. If speakers would have a heart of pity for those left in the churches, rather than condemn or ostracize them, they would sooner gain their end. If Spiritualists have come to a better knowledge let us give it to us. We all have a beam to remove, and let us clear our own eyes, and then we shall be better able to find the mote in our neighbor's eye. We are all striving for one purpose, and for one heaven. Then for humanity's sake let us hear no more fault finding, but all love and aid one another to see the light."

ONSET.—Mrs. Helen Wilson writes that in addition to her own communication of Mrs. Sarah J. Penover of East Saginaw, Mich., as a medium for the translation of spirit communications given in ancient characters, is that of a recent writer in the Golden Gate, who has tested her in this particular. It is stated that the gift came to her nearly three years ago, since which time she has exercised it upon seventeen distinct languages.

Aftermath at Lake Pleasant.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Mr. Whitesides Hill and wife, also son and wife, from Greenwich, N. Y., purchased a cottage last year at Lake Pleasant, and have given good evidence that they know how to enjoy the seances, the meetings and the grounds. They are deeply interested in the cause for the truth's sake.

Mr. Hill and his family came upon the grounds three years ago skeptical in many points regarding Spiritualism, but now declare their full belief in and sympathy with the subject. I noticed that they had the BANNER OF LIGHT upon their table, also other spiritual papers. Mr. Hill received independent slate-writing of a remarkable character by and through the mediumship of C. E. Watkins. One came from his spirit sister, Mrs. O. Harris, a guest at the camp home of the Hill family, and from the same place (Greenwich), where they permanently reside, received two very satisfactory and reliable communications in the same manner. She being a Methodist church-member the phenomenon was beyond her comprehension, but she was obliged to admit the fact.

Mr. Hill declared to the writer that he purchased the large slates upon which the communication appeared, and they never left his hand during the sitting; he considers that there was no chance for deception in any form whatsoever, and the family join with him in this decision.

Mrs. B. J. Loring, of East Braintree, Mass., related to me some fine tests of spirit power and intelligence. She has devoted several weeks this season to Lake Pleasant, and is a good medium herself. She informed me that she attended a séance at the Lake held by Mrs. D. F. DeLand (formerly of Brooklyn, N. Y., but now of Lakewood, N. J.). She was taken up bodily in a dark séance, and placed upon a table. At the same time a voice spoke which purported to be that of her spirit father, calling her by her first name, which no one present knew. A stick of wood and a saw were placed upon the table, and this wood was sawed while the hands of all present in the séance were supposed to be joined. Two ladies attending stated that if the medium had had the full use of her hands she could not of herself have accomplished what was done at this séance.

Mr. and Mrs. Tinkham and Mrs. Chase, from Topeka, Kan., have been at Onset and Lake Pleasant enjoying the séances and the meetings held at these popular resorts.

Mr. William Monigal, of New York City, made quite a stop at Lake Pleasant Camp-Meeting this season. He has "sampled" most of the religious views of the age, from Roman Catholicism to Modern Spiritualism, and feels satisfied to rest his ideal of the future on the belief—or better, knowledge—presented by the latter, since he has received abundance of evidence of the fact of Spiritualism being what it is represented to be by its adherents.

The Lake Pleasant Camp-Meeting Association has become satisfied that a four weeks' session for meetings is all that it is wisdom to hold, as many who attend cannot devote more than that length of time to the camping season. The Association has therefore voted to make next year's session (1889) four weeks instead of six, as has been the case this year; those who desire, however, can come earlier or stay later, if they choose to do so—or can reside at the Lake the year round.

Your own special correspondent has given a full and reliable report of the mediums upon the grounds, from week to week, hence no need exists for my speaking personally of them.

Mr. Lorenzo Sheldon, of North Adams, Mass., was passing by the cottage of Mrs. Greenleaf of Springfield when she, being so impressed, called him to her and gave him a grand test of the presence of his spirit-friends—which was a source of great satisfaction to him.

A new medium who does not sit for the public, and whose name I am not allowed to mention, has given some fine tests at the Lake, as a free will offering to strangers, which have been highly appreciated by the recipients. Her hand is influenced to use a pencil in a rapid manner in a circle and seemingly without any results except that of covering the paper with the black lead of the pencil used, but out of this blackness appear clearly the lines of the face of a human being. No pains are taken by the medium to make this face—the pencil moving all the while as rapidly as possible over the paper. These portrait-faces are made in the full daylight and in plain view of all in her presence. She certainly gives great promise of a remarkable future, mediumistically.

J. Frank Baxter, Mrs. Amanda M. Spence and Lyman C. Howe demonstrated, at this session just closed, that they had not lost any of the spiritual power which in days past has held their audiences as with a potent spell. COM.

A LOG CABIN was the birthplace of a number of the best Presidents we have had. While without the modern conveniences they were not uncomfortable habitations. They were certainly healthy, for our ancestors were rugged and long-lived, and the remedies they used were simple preparations of roots and herbs. The best blood-purifier is again brought into general use in Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla.

"If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?"

The world-wide reputation of Prof. Alfred R. Wallace as one in the foremost ranks of scientists imparts an added strength and value to the clear elucidation and masterly advocacy of the truths of Spiritualism given by him in his lecture having for its theme, "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?" published in a pamphlet of twenty-four pages by Colby & Rich, and supplied at the very low rate of 5 cents a single copy, thirteen for 50 cents, or thirty for $1.00. Let it do its work; buy it and circulate it.

Passed to Spirit-Life.

From her home, in Anniston, Alabama, on the morning of Aug. 27th, 1888, Permelia, wife of Col. W. H. Chaddock, aged 58 years.

She had long been a firm believer in the beautiful teachings of Spiritualism, and passed away fully believing she would meet her dear friends who had gone before. Mrs. Silley conducted the funeral services, which were held at Fredonia, N. Y., and the remains were interred in the family lot there. COM.

From her residence, in Memphis, Tenn., Wednesday, Aug. 29th, at 3 10 P. M., Mrs. Josephine Kollitzes, aged 28 years.

The remains were brought to this city by Mrs. Sylvia, an aunt of the deceased, Monday, Sept. 3d, and were consigned to the grave in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Only a few invited guests and intimate friends were present. Mrs. S. A. Scovell, spiritual lecturer, of this city, conducted the exercises, which consisted of only a short service, and a closing invocation at the grave. "After life's fitful fever she sleeps well."
St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 4th, 1888. S. E. S.
Memphis, Tenn., papers please copy.

Aug. 20th, 1888, Frank A. Noble, aged 23 years 4 months and 2 days.

He was fireman on a "freight" train on the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway, and was killed by a passing train of cars as he accidentally fell. He was born in the city of Port Huron, and always resided there up to the time of his death, his father having been a resident of that city for the past forty-one years. He was an honored member of the Macca bees, and his remains were buried under the ritual of that Order. He was a young man of great ability, and was respected by all who knew him. Three cheers of K. O. F. M. many railroad men, and hundreds of citizens attended the funeral in his honor. His parents have the sympathy of the entire community. Services conducted by the writer.
Corpus Mo. MRS. NETTIE BEADLE.

Obituary Notices not exceeding twenty lines [illegible] and [illegible] will be inserted [illegible] charge. Those exceeding that length will be charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. No poetry admitted under this heading.

Spiritualist Meetings.

NEWARK, N. J.—Meetings will be held every Sunday evening at No. 139 Congress street, commencing at 7 o'clock. Mrs. H. C. Dorn, Secretary.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Meetings are held Sundays, 11 A. M., by First Spiritual Association, at Brant's Hall, 9th and Franklin Avenue. Samuel Penberthy (at Hotel Westeran), Secretary.

ZÖLLNER.

An Open Letter

TO

PROFESSOR GEORGE S. FULLERTON,

Of the University of Pennsylvania, Member and Secretary of the Seybert Commission for Investigating Modern Spiritualism.

BY C. C. MASSEY,

of Lincoln's Inn, London, Eng.

Prof. Fullerton, having made certain statements respecting the famous Professor Zöllner's [illegible] and Mr. Massey having taken exception to [illegible] statements, a correspondence ensued between them, in the course of which Mr. Massey [illegible] had contributed to Light [illegible] said correspondence, and [illegible] Mr. Massey's letters to Prof. Fullerton, [illegible] in a letter to Mr. Massey, which [illegible] Mr. Massey's letters should [illegible] Prof. Fullerton's letters [illegible] This is a verbatim reprint [illegible] signature of the [illegible] of his witness with Dr. Hertz [illegible]

Pamphlet 50 pp. Price [illegible] postage free. Stamps [illegible] cents. Trade Supplied.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Just Received from England.

SPIRIT WORKERS

IN THE

HOME CIRCLE.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHIC NARRATIVE OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA IN FAMILY DAILY LIFE EXTENDING OVER A PERIOD OF TWENTY YEARS.

BY MORELL THEOBALD, F. C. A.

Some of the most astonishing phenomena in the history of Modern Spiritualism are recorded in this volume; the descriptions of which are given with a marked degree of fidelity to detail and effort to corroborate their truth by unimpeachable testimony. They include independent writing in various languages, on walls and ceilings, in closed apartments and on note books in locked desks, lighting of lamps and fires, filling of kettles with water, and making preparations for breakfast, even to cooking food; making tea and "laying the table"; organ playing with no one visibly present; materialization and de-materialization of forms and fabrics, bringing of flowers, ringing of bells and movements of physical objects. En rapport are given of various writings, one of them in Greek with a translation. The book covers a period of twenty years, and of each of the phenomena above specified, together with others, numerous instances are narrated.

The author says that the book has been written in the intervals of a busy professional life, which fact has proved of advantage, for, while as careful as possible not to be carried away by enthusiasm, or by imagination, in a region where there is much scope for their action, the disjointed method of working he was compelled to adopt operated as a protection against a surrender to mere fantasy.

Demy 8vo, cloth, pp. 306. Price $2.50, postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Essence and Substance:

A TREATISE ON

Organic and Inorganic Matter: The Finite and The Infinite: Transient and Eternal Life.

BY WARREN CHASE.

Author of "Life-Line of the Lone One" and "Gist of Spiritualism."

Mr. Chase is known to be a deep thinker and close reasoner; his radical ideas are often original, and always frankly and clearly expressed, and this work presents the fundamental principles on which he bases his evidence of eternal life, and gives a concise view of the doctrine of repeated incarnations without re-incarnation. The origin of human life on earth is treated in a new and interesting manner, which cannot fail to interest the reader. The author has given many years and much thought to these subjects, and has put forth in this work a theory that satisfies his critical and skeptical mind of eternal life, which he does not think any more attached to the spiritual forms that we put on at death, and which our friends appear in, than it is to those mortal bodies, although evidently of much longer duration.

Cloth, price 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Record of a Ministering Angel.

BY MRS. MARY J. CLARK.

The ministry of angels is a subject that will always possess a deep interest for serious, thoughtful minds. There is nothing for which the hearts of humanity long with more pathetic yearning than for a resumption of fellowship with the loved and lost. What mother does not long for one sound of the voice of her son who has crossed to the further shore? What would not fathers give for one more smile from their daughters passed all too soon away? And what is more reasonable than to hope that the loved and lost have joined the ranks of the angels, and are busy in tender services for those whom they, having left behind, love still the more? This book is written with the view of stimulating such hopes, of lifting sad hearts out of the darkness of despair into the sunny region of hope and courage and faith.

Cloth, pp. 288. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SPIRITUALISM AS A SCIENCE, AND SPIRITUALISM AS A RELIGION. An Oration delivered under spirit influence, at St. George's Hall, London, Eng., Sunday evening, Sept. 21st, 1873, by CORA L. V. TAPPAN. This is No. 1 of a series of Tracts entitled "The New Science."

Paper, 5 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription: One year, $1.50; six months, 75 cents; three months, 40 cents; single number, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty-five cents—a sum which barely covers the price of blank paper and press-work. Sample copies free. Jel

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science.

PUBLISHERS AND EDITORS—GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Mental Therapeutics, Human Liberty, and the Culture of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, $2.00 per year; single copies 25 cents.
Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der "mystischen" und "magischen." Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, Alf. Russ, Wittig, der Professoren Hieronymus und Cesare Lombroso, Brahmanen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden.

Subscription, $1.75 for six months; $3.50 per annum.
Messrs. COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Ap21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL devoted to the interest of Spiritualism in all its aspects. MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of Subscription, in advance per year, $1.50. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order on Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75 Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper 12mo, pp. 240. Price 80 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Au9

THE CARRIER DOVE.

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform. Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER. Publishers. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of the Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also, Spirit Pictures by our Artist Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms, $2.50 per year; single copies 10 cents.
Address, all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 22 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal. F

SEND NAME

AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS (plainly written), to "THE BETTER WAY," CINCINNATI, O., and receive a sample copy of this bright Spiritual Weekly. Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year, but no obligation to subscribe will be incurred by sending for a sample copy. It will cost you only a postal card and a minute's time. Au11

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.
MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Assistant Editor.

AN EIGHT PAGE MONTHLY devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms 50 cents per Year. Specimen copies free. Address GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

THE [illegible] in publication.
Price $3.00 a year.
$1.50 for six months.
5 cents per single copy.

Now is your time to subscribe for a live paper which fearlessly discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.
Address J. P. MENDUM,
Investigator Office,
Paine Memorial,
Boston, Mass.
Ap7

FORTY YEARS

ON THE

SPIRITUAL ROSTRUM.

BY WARREN CHASE.

A SEQUEL TO "THE LIFE-LINE OF THE LONE ONE."

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THE AUTHOR AS

The World's Child,

WHO WAS CARRIED BY FIRST PUBLIC LECTURES IN THE OPEN AIR IN DEFENCE OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM AND WHOSE NAME IS FIRST ON THE LIST OF [illegible] AND WHOSE NAME IS FIRST ON THE LIST OF [illegible] FOR CONVICTION FOR "NO CREED BUT NO REVELATIONS" WHEN IN PRISON IN 1847.

No one is better qualified to place on record the facts in connection to guiding the early history of Modern Spiritualism as did Warren Chase, who stood in the front rank of the workers. There have been few, scarcely a worker for the cause of any note known, scarcely a city or town in the United States that he has not visited, and no place he has visited whose people have not received greater mental freedom and a better understanding of this life and association of a future one from his having been with them.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I. Paternal and Fraternal Forefathers of Social, Political and Religious Convictions. Peculiarities and Characteristics as a Social Element by the Author.
II. Birth of Spiritualism. Failure of Fourierism. Political Career Opened and Sketches on the Path of Life by the Crooked and Tangled Lane. The First Spiritual Paper. The Investigation, and its Objects Explained.
III. Early Work. Boston Investigation. Present Age. Spirit Messenger, and Early Work etc. etc.
IV. Catalogue of Names and Short Biographical Notices of Early Workers and Persecutions.
V. A Brief and Brilliant Political Career.
VI. Threading My Way along the "Hard Road to Travel On." Incidents and Events in the Path of Life.
VII. What I have Learned from Forty Years Intercourse with Spirits. Sexual Life in the Spirit World. My Social, Political and Religious Creed, etc.
VIII. Extracts and Scraps of Correspondence running through Many Years, with Various and Progressive Ideas on Spirit-Life and Intercourse, with Scraps from my Scrap-Book worth keeping and largely variegated.
IX. Poetical Selections from Various Sources, Personal and General. Good and Poor, but not Bad, greatly mixed, in Published and Unpublished Scraps.

The Volume is embellished with a portrait of the author.

12mo, cloth, pp. 324. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Materialized Apparitions:

If Not Beings from Another Life, What Are They?

BY E. A. BRACKETT.

This work is in two Parts; the first containing carefully-prepared narratives of the author's interesting observations and experiences in the investigation of the phenomena of Materialization; the second, opinions and theories concerning the same. The investigation appears to have been pursued in a truly scientific spirit, by one possessing more than ordinary qualifications for the purpose, and with unusual facilities—the results being correspondingly positive and overwhelmingly conclusive regarding the reality of the phenomena in question. Aside from its positive testimony, the work affords many valuable suggestions to investigators as to the proper manner of proceeding in order to attain the best results.

The work contains 182 pages, 12mo, and is printed in large type, suitable for readers of advanced age. Cloth, $1.00, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Order of Creation,

A Discussion Between Gladstone, Huxley, Müller, Linton and Réville, on the Conflict between Genesis and Geology.

Contents: 1. Dawn of Creation and of Worship, by Hon. W. E. Gladstone; 2. The Interpreters of Genesis and the Interpreters of Nature, by Prof. T. H. Huxley; 3. Postscript to Solar Myths, by Prof. Max Müller; 4. Poem to Genesis: A Plea for a Fair Trial, by Hon. W. E. Gladstone; 5. Dawn of Creation, An Answer to Mr. Gladstone, by Albert Réville, D. D.; 6. Mr. Gladstone and Genesis, by Prof. T. H. Huxley; 7. A Protest and a Plea, by Mrs. E. Lynn Linton.

Cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FREE!----PREMIUMS!----FREE!

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

Persons sending DIRECT TO COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth Street, Boston, Mass., $3.50 for a year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT, will be entitled to a choice of the following Premiums:

All New Subscribers, or Old Patrons, on Renewing their Subscriptions

TO THE

Banner of Light,

MAY OBTAIN FOR THEMSELVES AND FRIENDS THE FOLLOWING PREMIUMS BY COMPLYING WITH THE TERMS ABOVE MENTIONED.

A choice of TWO of either of the following named

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

will be given for one year's subscription, or one of them for a six months' subscription.

MR. LUTHER COLBY, Editor of the Banner of Light; MR. ISAAC B. RICH, Business Manager, or MISS M. T. SHELHAMER, Medium for the Banner of Light Public Free Circles.

These Photographs are all from recent sittings, and are finely executed by one of the best photographers in this city.

Price for additional Photographs, if desired, 25 cents each.

Or a copy of either of the following Books:

Spirit Invocations; or, Prayers and Praises

Publicly offered at the Banner of Light Circle-Room Free Meetings, by more than One Hundred Different Spirits, of Various Nationalities and Religions, through the vocal organs of the late Mrs. J. H. Conant. Compiled by Allen Putnam, A. M., author of "Bi-ble Marvels," "Natty, a Spirit," "Spirit Works Real, but not Miraculous," etc., etc., etc.

Mr. Putnam has with skillful hand arranged in this volume in comprehensive fashion many living gems of thought, which are clothed in eloquence of diction, and thrill the prayerful heart with spiritual fervor. From the soulful petitions scattered through its pages, the doubter of Spiritualism's capability to minister to the devotional side of man's nature can draw ample proof that he is in error. The weary of heart will find in its holy breathings for strength, sent out to a higher power, rest from the cares that so keenly beset the pilgrim in life's highway. The sick in soul may from its demonstrations of the divine possibilities within, drink of the waters of spiritual healing and rejoice; and the desolate mourner can compass, through its nourishment of the certainty of reunion with the departed, a consecration which nothing earthly can take away.

Cloth, pp. 256.

A Romance of Caucasian Captivity; or, The Federati of Italy.

BY G. L. DITSON, M. D. This is a romance of the most exciting character, and full of stirring incidents. The Federati were a band or association of individuals in Sardinia when it was still an independent kingdom who were pledged to resolving hostility to ultramontanism and therefore were friends of a constitutional system.

It is skillfully conceived and constructed; its wide variety of characters affords constant food for thought and pleasure, and its progress amid a train of pleasurable incidents is as vivid like a panoramic vision of the tripping of the fairy hours. It will provoke a favorable comparison with some of the most praised romances of the times.

Visions of the Beyond.

BEING A SERIES OF TWELVE DISCOURSES FROM THE HIGHER LIFE.

Edited by Hermann Snow. This work is of a wonderful interest and value. The Seer is the impression of elevated spiritual aspirations and of great clearness of perception, but little known to the public. The special value of this work consists in a very graphic presentation of the truths of Spiritualism in their higher forms of action, illustrating particularly the intimate relations of the spirit-world, and the vital relations between the present and future as affect the human character and destiny in the hereafter. Bound in cloth, pp. 280.

Or choice of ONE of the below-described beautiful works of art:

ENGRAVINGS.

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE.

Engraved on steel by J. A. J. Wilcox, from the original painting by Joseph Ashby, and engraved on steel by J. B. Rice. Size of plate 20x25 inches; engraved surface 16x21 inches.

THE ORPHANS' RESCUE.

Engraved on steel by J. A. J. Wilcox, from the original painting by Joseph Ashby, and engraved on steel by J. B. Rice. Size of plate 20x25 inches; engraved surface 16x21 inches.

HOMEWARD.

Engraved on steel by [illegible]. Size of plate 20x25 inches.

FARM-YARD AT SUNSET.

Engraved on steel by [illegible]. Size of plate 20x25 inches.

THE DAWNING LIGHT.

Engraved on steel by [illegible]. Size of plate 20x24 inches.

For each additional Engraving 50 cents extra.

Any person sending $3.50 for one year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to Hollyer's Line and Stipple Steel Plate Engraving of the late

Henry W. Longfellow in His Library

At "Craigie House," Old Cambridge, Mass.

The plate is 24x30 inches. The central figure is that of the GREAT POET. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical.

This beautiful, historic work of art is a lasting souvenir and ornament for sitting-room, parlor, library or office of any American home. We will mail the engraving free to any one sending us $3.50 for a year's subscription for the BANNER OF LIGHT; or we will send the engraving alone for $1.00. The publisher's trade price for the engraving is $7.50.

Any person sending $1.50 for six months' subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to ONE of the following Pamphlets:

AN EPITOME OF SPIRITUALISM AND SPIRIT MAGNETISM. The above is the title of a pamphlet of over one hundred pages. We know of no one book that gives to the inquirer so good an understanding of the teachings of Spiritualism as this. It is designed to convey facts to Spiritualists, also to do a missionary work with skeptics and church-members. Two copies for one year's subscription, one for six months.

SUMMARY OF SUBSTANTIALISM, OR, PHILOSOPHY OF KNOWLEDGE. By Jean Story. 12mo, paper, small plea, 113 pages.

DEATH, IN THE LIGHT OF THE HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY. By Mary F. Davis. Paper.

AGASSIZ AND SPIRITUALISM. Involving the Investigation of Harvard College Professors in 1857. By Allen Putnam.

DANGER SIGNALS: AN ADDRESS ON THE USES AND ABUSES OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By Mary F. Davis. Paper.

TALES OF THE SUN RAYS. What Hans Christian Andersen tells a dear child about the Sun-Rays. Paper.

THE LIFE. The main object of this little volume is to give to suggestive teaching a recognition and a force in the domain of religion and morals greater than dictation has. Paper.

SERPENT AND SIVA WORSHIP, and Mythology in Central America, Africa and Asia; and the Origin of Serpent Worship. Two Treatises. By Hyde Clark and C. Staniland Wake, M. A. I. Edited by Alexander Wilder, M. D.

Or any two of the following Pamphlets:

ANSWER TO CHARGES OF BELIEF IN MODERN REVELATIONS, ETC. Given before the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston, by Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Newton.

RELIGION OF SPIRITUALISM. By Eugene Crowell, M. D.

REVIEW of a Lecture by James Freeman Clarke.

SYMBOL SERIES of Three Lectures, by Cora L. V. Tappan.

SOLAR AND SPIRITUAL LIGHT, AND OTHER LECTURES, delivered by Cora L. V. Tappan.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF EDWARD S. WHEELER, the Distinguished Improvisator and Lecturer. By George A. Bacon.

INNER MYSTERY. An Inspirational Poem, delivered by Miss Lizzie Doten. Paper.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE:

Per Year.....$3.00
Six Months.....1.50

NEW EDITION.

AFTER DEATH:

THE DISEMBODIMENT OF MAN.

The World of Spirits: Its Location, Extent, Appearances; The Route Thither; Inhabitants; Customs; Societies; also Sex, and its Uses There, etc., etc.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

This fine work of Dr. Randolph's is by far the most important and thrilling that has yet fallen from his pen, inasmuch as it discusses questions concerning our state and doings after death that heretofore have been wholly untouched, and perhaps would have been for years had not this bold thinker dared to grapple with them.

Cloth. Price $2.25, postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not peruse anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he specially desires to call our attention to.

☞ When the post-office address of THE BANNER is to be changed, our patrons should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not omit to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as THE BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1888.

Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE, Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place), corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:
THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY,
14 Franklin Street, Boston.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY,
39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.

☞ Business Letters should be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All other letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the oncoming light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

Volume Sixty-Four.

This number of THE BANNER begins its sixty-fourth volume and thirty-second year. It will be generally admitted that a paper possesses genuine vitality that can boast of an existence so long continued. And it must be said further, that unless it had the support of a wide and earnest constituency it could never hope to count so many years. The two factors are mutually essential to its lasting success.

THE BANNER, as all its readers know, was the pioneer in the promulgation of the new truth contained in Modern Spiritualism. It was in the work at its beginning in our age. When the phenomena were discredited for their novelty, before the vastly important message to the world which they contained was fairly heeded, much less apprehended, THE BANNER proclaimed without hesitancy the fact of a new revelation to humanity whose far-reaching purpose was fully known only to the inhabitants of other spheres. It was the mouthpiece of the invisible world in its newly opened channel of communication with mortals, and it has ever sought for no higher service than that of helping to open wider each year the intercourse of spirits with mortals.

The passage of the thirty-one years of THE BANNER'S life of steadfast devotion to this exalted cause has witnessed an advance in knowledge and an increased illumination on the subject that has now put it in a position from which opposing influences cannot shake it. The belief in the actuality of spirit communication has gained a strength from widening knowledge that none of the ordinary methods of hostility can impair. Spiritualism has finally become one of the world's accepted agencies for its salvation from error and its progress toward the yet distant goal of perfection. The developments of the past ten years alone would at the first have provoked incredulity if they had been stated in the form of prediction. And it is exaggerating nothing to say that when the last year of the current century is reached, the spread of this welcome knowledge and the overwhelming power of its substantiating proofs will have established Spiritualism as the basis and life of all religion that will satisfy the hearts of mankind.

This paper, it hardly need be added, will continue to pursue its chosen course without swerving or faltering, illuminated by heavenly light, upheld by the ministry of spirits, and aiming to serve the deepest needs of humanity. The opening of a new volume merely supplies the occasion for renewing a pledge so well understood already.

Oblique Justice.

The New York Sun calls attention to the discharge of a highway robber by a judge in that city because the man assaulted and robbed declined to prosecute. The Sun complains that this is administering the law in the interest of particular individuals, and not in the interest of the community. The Sun can do this consistently, for it is only a few weeks since it was doing its utmost to secure the conviction of a woman who was charged with obtaining money under false pretences from an eminent lawyer, although the lawyer himself not only refused to prosecute, but was a witness for the defense. In spite of this, the woman was convicted, and is now serving a term of imprisonment. This question naturally arises: If it was right to convict the woman Diss Debar, notwithstanding the protests of the man alleged to have been defrauded, might not the highway robber, Barker, have been convicted, although his victim declined to prosecute?

Our Duty to the Criminal.

That it shall discharged, and the account made square, when we have removed him from the reach of his temptations, and shut him up where he cannot repeat his crime, is one of the most mistaken ideas that could well engage minds that entertain any just sense of human relations and responsibility. Not only are we bound to protect ourselves against his further wrong doing, as well as keep him from doing further harm to himself, but we are bound to provide for the wholesome security of our common future. Imprisonment by no means dissolves our relations with the criminal. He remains a member of the common society as long as he lives. Even after we revengefully send him out of the world in his fearfully unfit condition, his active influence still makes itself felt by others, through whom he works off all that for a long time remains of his wicked and erring propensities within him.

In the course of a recent interview Col. Robert G. Ingersoll observed, with his customary breadth of view and largeness of sympathy, that he regarded criminals as unfortunates, whereas the generality of people unthinkingly and wrongly regard all violators of the law with hatred. He said they did not take the circumstances into consideration. He regarded these people who are in the clutches of the law not only as unfortunates, but as victims. Under the same circumstances, the same persons who punish them would themselves be punished. While society undeniably possesses the right of self-defense, the question whether that right goes to the extent of taking life depends on entirely different considerations. Society may in justice do two things—protect itself, and do all in its power to reform the criminal. It has no right to take revenge; no right to torture a convict; no right to do wrong because some individual has done wrong.

Now if the government was controlled by a greater and nobler thought; if it said: We will reform, we will not destroy, but if the man is beyond reformation we will simply put him where he can do no more harm—the effect would be far better. The execution of a criminal can be shown to have a degrading and debasing influence on the community. It results in cheapening human life. Hanging tends to destroy the idea that human life is sacred. In this way society, without seeming to know it, raises its own crop of criminals and keeps them all the time on hand. It literally plows the land, sows the seed, and harvests the crop. The time will come when we shall know better than to do this; when men will know that real progress means the enfranchisement of the whole human race.

Our interests are all so united and interwoven that the few cannot be happy while the many suffer, nor the many be happy while the few suffer, nor any be happy while one suffers. In other words, to utter it as plainly as possible, the human race is interested in each individual. When the time comes that this is universally apparent, society will stop producing criminals, producing failures. It will not leave the next generation to chance. It will not, in Col. Ingersoll's words, regard the gutter as a proper nursery for posterity. Instead of catching thieves and shutting them up in a penitentiary, instead of hanging those who kill others, in consequence of which we have to build and maintain penitentiaries and courts of justice, and pay judges, district attorneys, juries, witnesses, detectives and police instead of all this it would be far cheaper to find the criminal in his childhood, to take his parents out of the vile tenement-house or compel its owners to keep it clean and sweet, to widen the streets, plant a few trees, provide a plenty of baths, and set up a good school in the neighborhood. If society only took some interest in this family, and so in the child, instead of coming to break into houses he would be building them. This lesson of beginning at the fountain-head of things in the social state cannot be repeated too often or learned too thoroughly.

There is no reforming influence whatever in punishment, asserted Col. Ingersoll. There is no reforming power in revenge. Only the best of men, the noblest minds and tenderest hearts should have the charge of penitentiaries and the care of criminals. The latter, as soon as they enter the penitentiary, should see that it is filled with the air of kindness and the light of hope. It should be the supreme purpose of confinement to convince the criminal that he has made a mistake, and that the government wishes to convince him that he has made a mistake, to open his intellectual eyes, to educate him, to elevate him, so that he will look back on his past mistakes only with horror. This is genuine reformation, and punishment is not. When a prisoner is compelled to put on the uniform that expresses nothing but the degradation of his position, no step has been taken toward his reformation. His heart has only been filled with hatred. And after having been thus abused in his helpless condition for a number of years, treated, in fact, like a wild beast, and then being turned out again into the community, in most cases his uppermost thought is to "get even" with his tyrant and persecutor.

The existing system for the treatment of criminals in many States of the Union unquestionably produces more crime than it prevents, said the Colonel. In the Southern States, or at least some of them, convicts are hired out for the purpose of building railways, or plowing fields, or digging coal, and the death-rate among them has been as high as over twelve per cent. a month. Men and women are chained together indiscriminately. For the slightest offences against the regulations they are shot down like wild animals. In some of the northern prisons machines are operated for punishment that are utterly debasing and degrading. Col. Ingersoll remarked that he was opposed to any punishment that cannot be inflicted by a gentleman, or that tends by its infliction to harden and debase the man who inflicts it.

As to solitary punishment, he thought that was only another mode of torture. The criminal should not be punished, but reformed, if indeed he is capable of reformation. Whatever is done, it should not be done as a punishment. Society should be too generous and noble to harbor a thought of revenge. It should never punish, but simply protect itself. It should, above all, endeavor to reform the criminal. To reformation solitary imprisonment clearly does not tend. The prisoner will be happier when his hands are busy, his thoughts are occupied, and he has something before him to do. This keeps alive cheerfulness, which is the temper above all others to be cultivated.

Punishment, in past ages, was the only means of reformation practiced. If any one did wrong they punished him. If people continued to commit the same offence, the punishment was increased. And so it went on, until in countries that had become civilized they hanged wrong doers, even for the crime of petty stealing. And in those times men were torn asunder by horses, their bodies quartered, and their heads set up on pikes at the city gates, for the crime of treason, with the natural result that there was a hundred times more treason than now. It was the same spirit that ruled in the church. And inasmuch as no more punishment could be inflicted when death came, the church declared that it went right on, growing worse and worse, forever and forever. But this did not work the reformation of mankind any better. So the fires of hell are burning out, and gradually losing their terror for men in the rapid advance of illuminating knowledge. The intelligent people of the world, said Col. Ingersoll, are many of them endeavoring to find out the facts in nature that control the dispositions of men. Others are trying to ascertain the facts and conditions that govern health and disease. The common object of both is to produce a race without disease either of body or mind. They confidently anticipate the time when there shall be neither hospitals nor penitentiaries.

A Timely Discourse.

A very thoughtful discourse, emphatically placing humanity before individuality, was that delivered by Rabbi Solomon Schindler at the Temple Adath Israel, on the evening of the 5th inst., in this city, his theme being: "The Future Unveiled," and the occasion the Anniversary of the Jewish New Year.

With the opening of a new year, remarked the learned Rabbi, new work presents itself. We may appropriately say the same at the opening of a NEW VOLUME OF THE BANNER—THE SIXTY-FOURTH. Every one of us is called upon to contribute his share of usefulness to the general stock of human welfare, according to the limit of his capacity. We are all co-laborers, without distinction of race or religion.

Reflections on the future, said Rabbi Schindler, are always more or less tinted with uncertainty. We rejoice in the past, but are apt to regard the future with apprehension. A day like that which opens a new year places us face to face with the future. Nor, added the Rabbi, is it so difficult a task to unveil that future. Every observing person can foretell the future with the same certainty and precision with which we can foretell, in a general way, what a novel or a drama will and must contain. Every person in the course of a new year will work out still further that character for which he has been designed, and perform a part in that act or chapter to which his age entitles him. Our future itself is not dark and gloomy, a mixture of all kinds of possible and impossible accidents, but our destiny is settled and established by a firm and permanent but natural law. Every cause is followed by the same result, and in ascertaining the cause we become able to foretell the future.

Humanity will move in the same order and in accordance with the same laws, in the future, as the planets have moved and will move in the same curves forever. The thing for us to learn, therefore, and the lesson we are to impress ourselves with, is that we are not to separate our fortunes as individuals from the fortunes of the community; we should consider ourselves individually as an insignificant part of a great system, and not as the only and sole object that is worthy of contemplation. We must not expect for our own individual little selves a destiny different from that of the grand body of humanity, nor must we demand for ourselves the sole and exceptional care of Divine Providence. We must learn to understand that our own personal existence and personal welfare is of as little import, and plays as small a part in comparison with the body of mankind, as is the motion of a drop of water in a storm-beaten sea, or the friction of two grains of sand against each other in the whirlwind of the Sahara, though each drop of water and each grain of sand is needed to make up the sea or the desert.

There is, said the Rabbi, only one future before us, and that is the future of the great body to which we belong and of which we are but particles, namely, mankind. Only the future of mankind concerns us, and this is not concealed. No veil hides that from our view. We may not know whether we shall live to-morrow, and this may appear a great calamity to us—but what of it? We know that humanity will live, and that our personal work, great or small as it may be, will be gathered and collected in that grand receptacle. We may meet with reverses; we may lose what we own to-day; comforts we are accustomed to may be missed by us to-morrow. But it matters not. Whatever has been can never be lost. It remains. It helps to swell the material, the intellectual, the moral wealth of mankind; and it matters little who is called its guardian, or, in the current language, its owner.

It is a superstition, an error, to consider the future a sealed book, a landscape covered with an impenetrable mist, a statue hidden by a veil. To the eye of the observer the future is as open as the past or present. The same God who ruled yesterday will rule to-morrow. The same law in force at the beginning will operate at the end. Hence the individual must learn to find and to fill his place in the universal system. He must learn to bring the pulsations of his heart into unison with those of the grand heart of humanity—to be thrilled by its joys and to suffer by its pains. Then we shall learn to appreciate and love our fellow-beings, and only then; and to do so not for the quantity, but the quality of their work.

J. J. Morse Closes in San Francisco.

The long engagement of fourteen months' service in San Francisco of Mr. J. J. Morse terminated on Sunday evening, the 26th ult., with a lecture in Washington Hall, on which occasion a large audience greeted him with cordiality, listened to him with close attention, and parted with him with many expressions of regret. The Golden Gate remarks at the close of a notice of the events of the evening:

"Mr. Morse's labors have been productive of great good, while his courteous yet independent manner, his unflinching adherence to our cause and his spirit-friends, have won him the respect of all earnest Spiritualists, who are not ashamed of their faith. For, in his own words, he is 'first, last and always a Spiritualist and a medium,' a statement alike creditable to his head and heart."

Mr. Morse is at present in San José, where he will speak every Sunday morning and evening during the month, in G. A. R. Hall.

☞ We have on file for publication in our next issue a timely communication from the pen of Mr. Alonzo Danforth in re the Children's Spiritual Lyceums. It foreshadows a "New Departure," a very important one in our estimation, and one which we hope will be put in practical operation. We shall do all that lies in our power to aid the contemplated new movement. The "Temple Fraternity School" will be conducted under the auspices of the Temple Fraternity Society.

Plain Words from Spirit Henry Clay.

Those who have been familiar with the BANNER OF LIGHT and its work during the thirty-one years (and over) which have passed since its establishment, know that it has ever acknowledged its indebtedness to the advice, counsel and spiritual aid which it has during all that time received from the band of excarnated Intelligences whose earnest interest in the welfare of humanity led to its establishment in April, 1857.

It has been the custom of the managers of THE BANNER, on the mortal plane, to meet with their spiritual coädjutors, in the Free Circle Room, on the morning of June 10th of each year, in grateful recognition of what the Unseen Intelligences have done during the twelvemonth previous to uphold the interests of the establishment and the Cause it represents, and to listen to such words of caution and encouragement as these spirit-mentors might have to offer.

At the meeting of this character held on June 10th, 1888, Spirit HENRY CLAY—who has presided over these special sessions for many years—gave expression to an able address, which, while necessarily of a personal character and appropriate to the peculiar nature of the meeting, contained many strong points of general interest to the friends of the Cause, a condensation of which is herewith presented:

FRIENDS—Spiritual Associates in the Cause of Truth: Once again we approach you upon the dawning of the tenth of June, to bring to your minds and hearts a realization of the glorious work in which we are all engaged.

The grand purpose of our lives is, and should be, that of sending forth to the world at large tidings of immortal joy, that human hearts may spring upward into new light under these grand tidings, and sing their songs of rejoicing to the Father above: There is no death; the grave has lost its sting!—for this we meet, on the occasion which annually returns to us in the opening of the summer-time; for this we unite in spirit and in soul-purpose, that we may do our part in the work of heaven, and send forth unto humanity, not only the tidings of great joy that they shall live always, but also the beautiful consolation and beneficent message from on high, that their own beloved dead do live and can return to watch over and protect their lives!

Such work as this, friends, is worthy of all effort, of all sacrifice.

The year that has passed has been one of trial, one of much affliction to you who gather here, for there have been hurled against you from various quarters shafts of ridicule, arrows of contumely and misrepresentation; in your public work you have been obliged to face the misunderstanding of the world; in your private lives you have sometimes felt the shadows that have pressed around you; you have felt the wounds and pains brought to your hearts by others; but you have withstood the tempest and the storm, and now meet together again, in the body, friends, united in spirit, still pursuing your work in harmony with the angel world.

You cannot possibly tell the effects of your work and of the year that has now passed; they reach out into the spiritual world, meet with thousands of human hearts there beating, and spread forth in an influence abiding and undying from land to land. On these mortal shores you cannot possibly understand this in its fullness, because those spiritual atmospheres and magnetisms which are constantly going forth from such labors as this in which we are employed do not always strike upon the external senses, nor are they always heeded by the physical eye or ear; and so, friends, there is much of relationship toward your mission and your life which cannot possibly be understood or related in mortal speech; but those in spirit-life perceive and comprehend the far-reaching importance of that work, and recognize that it is one that should be maintained through all effort, and, if necessary, through all trial, for the Truth's sake.

The year has seen much of convulsion: I use the word advisedly—convulsion in the life of the people, in the career of this nation. This convulsion of old existing forces and principles has made itself felt in every department of existence; in the social field it has made its way, tearing and destroying, twisting here and there, rending human hearts and human opinions, and making its way without stint or favor; in the political field it has set an under-current in motion, so that there is and has been more of agitation than the world can descry, and this is still going forward, and must do so, not only through the present year that opens upon you, but for years to come; also in all departments of religious life, where man is supposed to lay down the thought of the material for a time, and to devote his attention to the spiritual or devotional part of his nature.

In this direction there has been a revolution going forward, slowly and gradually, producing in some instances a convulsion that is felt from the centre to the circumference of the religious strongholds of the land, and which is still making its forces felt, and seeking to be understood. This must be so, since there is a regenerating process going on throughout the entire kingdom of human life, and this regenerating process must be adequately felt, must be early understood and experienced in the life of this American nation, and by it given expression to the world—for we believe, from our standpoint in the higher life, that it has been decreed by exalted powers that this nation shall lead the world in progress, in development, in the unfoldment of spiritual, intellectual, religious, political and social life. In the ranks of Spiritualism, that great army of progressive reform, this revolution of which we speak, this regenerating process, has been most certainly felt. It must be so, since Spiritualism, standing upon the outskirts of human life, and sending its forces throughout every department and every field of existence, must most certainly feel the tremblings of the earth and the air, catch the vibrations of the higher atmosphere, and thrill under the electric touch of those divine forces which must be set in operation in order to produce that revolution which leads to betterment and to perfection.

What, then, friends, seems to be the outgrowth of this condition of things? We find evidences of strife and discord and inharmony on every hand. Men and women, and especially those who are made sensitive by these electrical vibrations of the world, give forth opinions that sometimes clash—become highly individualized in their thought, and express that which appeals most strongly to the inner nature; so we see symptoms of inharmony, and sometimes, we are sorry to say, of persecution, sent forth unto others; but this is inevitable under the existing circumstances, and therefore we must submit to it until the work of the present age is accomplished—until the regenerating process is complete for mankind.

In Spiritualism there must be a purification, so that principles, lofty ideas and grand purposes shall stand forth prominent before the world, and shall not be hidden by the weakness and selfishness of those beings who are so thoroughly finite and material that they seem to have no part in the great infinite purpose of life.

Yet, friends, we find in our ranks that which is high, which is of itself grateful to our finer senses, to our higher aspirations. Spiritualism, coming before the world like a grand and glorious light streaming down upon night-clouded humanity—ready to warm and invigorate those who will open their natures to its reception—attracts to itself not only those loyal and lofty souls who desire to know the truth and to live it in their daily lives, but the moths and insects that are ever flitting about looking for that which will illumine and brighten; but just as surely as the lamp draws into itself those presumptuous creatures that fly within its blaze, feeling that they are a part of it and must shine also within its light, consuming them by its own brilliant flame—so must Spiritualism in its own good time, so must the love and unerring justice of heaven draw those human moths and insects that are attracted to Spiritualism only because of its light, only because they hope to shine by the reflection from its rays, only because they wish to use it for their own selfish purposes, and will most assuredly consume not only their reputations, which are false, but themselves; they will pass into oblivion, for it must be so. The day shall dawn when every unscrupulous mind, every unprincipled heart, every falsifier and deceiver in the name of Truth shall be swept away, and shall most certainly shine forth no more to the world as an honored light.

On the other hand, those who seek to do right, whose intentions and thoughts are honorable, whose aspirations are high, who ask for the light and guidance of good spirits, will be uncompromisingly sustained. Those of our workers who, as human beings, are subjected to the weaknesses of the flesh at times, and brought under the varying conditions of material life, and cannot always be perfect in their work or in their line of existence, but who try to do right, seek to follow the lines of truth, and to obey the highest dictates that come to them from on high—such we commend wherever they may be found, whether in the humble walks of life they strive to do their duty, day by day, or in the exalted positions of a public career: Wherever they are, we surround them with spiritual influences, and bless their existence.

What have we to look forward to in the time to come? To an army of new workers springing up in various directions from private homes, unknown and unnoticed by the world, but held under the direction of good spirits, who will love and protect them, and in the fullness of time bring them forth to take their places in the world as helpers to humanity, as leaders and teachers, under the guidance of spiritual life. But this will not be at present. The cause has yet more trials to undergo.

We are proud to say, in this hour, that not one honest medium has been assailed but has bounded upward from the crash in grander strength and higher power, while those who have prostituted their gifts for mercenary purposes, for selfish ends, may have felt the sting, the obloquy of persecution; but it is only that which they have drawn upon themselves, and which they will draw until they retire from their unholy work. We can afford to dispense with any life and with any work in Spiritualism that is not open and honest and free; we can afford to sweep aside any human being who dares to prostitute his gifts to selfish ends, even though he be a medium ten times over for the influence of the spirit-world.

If Spiritualism has not within itself such elements of truth and of power as will cause it to flow onward in love and blessing to humanity without the aid of tricksters and of unprincipled people, then let its light be withdrawn from the world until humanity so ripens that it can receive its glory and live under its warmth without resorting to that which is vile and polluted. But we declare that Spiritualism has the elements of truth and power which will protect it, which will give it strength to sweep abroad in silent ways and through beautiful avenues, reaching the heart of man and bearing the benediction of love.

God chooses instruments in his own time and through his own wisdom. They may not be such as you or I would accept or select for the work of cleansing, purifying and helping to remake the conditions of life, but they are such as He provides. We must be willing to do our part according to the light and truth pressing upon us, and to do it faithfully and well!

A Test of Clairvoyance.

Mr. H. G. Moulton, doing business in this city on Bulfinch street, recently had an experience in clairvoyance which, as reported in the Globe of Sept. 5th, gave him an inkling that there is something more in it than he has hitherto supposed. Frequently of late he has missed goods and occasionally a small sum of money, and a fortnight since a considerable sum was taken from the pocket of his vest in a closet. He mentioned this to a young lady in his employ.

A few years ago the young lady's mother lost a small sum of money, which she found from information given her by a clairvoyant medium, and she felt that she could by the same means be of assistance to Mr. Moulton. She obtained a lock of his hair and made a call on the medium. After informing her of what she wanted the medium passed under control of an Indian spirit, who fully described the store and the persons employed in it, also two boys—one of whom was employed there, the other not—as the guilty ones.

The next morning Mr. Moulton was told of what the medium had said. He was rather skeptical of there being any truth in it, but finally had the boys arrested by an officer, who in a quiet talk with them obtained a confession of guilt, and it proved that the one who had committed the theft—the other being only slightly implicated—had been pilfering for a long time, and had put one hundred and twenty dollars in the savings bank. The Globe reports the young lady as saying that the medium told the exact amount of money that was missing, and gave the denomination of the bills.

☞ THE BANNER of last week contained a paragraph to the effect that the general opinion of the people at Onset Bay favored the securing of the services of Dr. H. B. Storer as Chairman at the rostrum next year. We were so informed by Dr. E. Y. Johnson, the treasurer of the Association, during a brief visit of ours to the camp-ground, and gave it to the public wholly as a matter of current news, and not as a contribution, on either side, to the already too great volume of internal contention existing at the Bay, and to the dissemination of which, as we have already announced, these columns are not open. We are pained to discover that this paragraph has been misconstrued as to its meaning, by others, into a thrust at our friend, Col. W. D. Crockett, President of the Onset Bay Association—than which nothing could have been further from our thought. We have known Col. Crockett personally for many years—long before Onset Bay Camp was ever dreamed of—and know him to be an honest, honorable man, a worthy citizen, and one who efficiently discharges the duties of his station as President of the Camp-Meeting Association.

☞ The Lyceum at Melbourne, Australia, appears to be progressing very satisfactorily to its friends. A new organ of American manufacture has been purchased by contributions of funds secured through the exertions of Mr. Clay, the musical director, and Mr. Borrowman, the secretary, and its tones were heard for the first time in the regular exercises on Sunday, July 15th. An effort is now in hand for increasing the library. July 22d, says the Harbinger, a highly interesting lecture was given to the Lyceum by Mr. James Stirling, F. G. S., on "The Scenery and Geographical Features of the Australian Alps;" in the course of which he exhibited a native tomahawk found by him on the summit of Mount Bogong, showing that in past times the natives had lived or traveled over that cold region. He subsequently presented the tomahawk to the Lyceum for its museum.

☞ The physical manifestations are the foundation stones of the spiritual edifice. The trance is the finer material of the spiritual structure. Both are necessary; both are fulfilling the design intended by the wise denizens of the spirit-world, and all the powers of darkness combined cannot retard the building of the glorious structure.

☞ The price of the work, "Temperance and Prohibition," by G. H. Stockham, M. D., has been reduced to 75 cents for the cloth edition, and 50 cents for paper.

Re-opening of the Banner Free Meetings.

On the afternoon of Tuesday, Sept. 11th, the Public Free Circles which have from year to year been held in the Banner of Light building, were resumed for 1888-9.

MR. LEWIS B. WILSON presided, as of old, and the guides of MISS M. T. SHELHAMER answered the questions propounded in an exhaustive and practical manner—these replies being taken down verbatim by MISS EMILY CHACE for publication in our columns.

The attendance was good, and a pleasant and harmonious feeling seemed to pervade the services. Upon the table were displayed beautiful floral offerings from George Sanderson, Weston, Mass., Mrs. Ann Dixon, Richmond, Mass., Mrs. S. M. Ingraham, Windsor, Vt.; Mrs. Andrew Lee, Manchester, Mass.; Colby & Rich, and others whose names were not appended.

This useful series of free spiritual meetings in Boston may be regarded as beginning a new year with the most encouraging promise of successful work. The circles will be continued as usual on the afternoons of Tuesday and Friday of each week.

The next séance will be held on the afternoon of Friday, Sept. 14th—the medium being MRS. B. F. SMITH, through whose organism individual spirit intelligences will give messages to their friends during the present season.

"Hay Fever," or "Rose Cold."

A correspondent in Dresden, N. Y., having asked that the Controlling Intelligence at the Banner of Light Circle would give immediate attention to his question concerning the cause of "Hay Fever," or "Rose Cold," with directions as to its cure, the point was submitted to Spirit Chairman John Pierpont, in advance of the opening of these meetings, with the following result:

We believe "Hay Fever" to be produced by the inhalation of germs from the atmosphere, and that certain organisms are susceptible to their encroachment.

These parasitic germs appear annually in certain localities; and the person once affected by them may expect always to be, unless he migrate to higher altitudes.

Possibly, by "bracing" the system with wholesome fruits and cereal foods, and by salt water sponge bathing daily, the patient may be able to resist the attacks of rose cold to a degree. But we know of no specific remedy for the disease.

The inhalation of smoke from burning sulphur may have a good result, but this can only be tested by experiment.

We do not claim to give any form of general treatment for this malady, since it must necessarily differ somewhat in detail in each case, in accordance with the differing conditions of the system of the patient.

☞ In our issue for Sept. 8th we gave THE BANNER readers an account of an interesting and satisfactory exhibition of spirit-power in the presence of Dr. Henry Rogers and wife, witnessed during our recent trip to Onset Bay. We have since submitted the painting of Prof. Morse then received to the most rigid scrutiny, with results much in its favor. We sought opportunity to compare it with several likenesses of the Professor which were available to us, and, later, visited with a friend the Boston Athenæum, where in the library room we found a portraiture of this distinguished discoverer, to which the spirit-picture bore a general likeness; in all the pictures, however, seen by us, Prof. M. was represented with no beard, while in the painting obtained at Dr. Rogers's séance a full white beard was prominent. At last we called at the office of the Western Union Telegraph, 109 State street, Boston, when we were informed that a picture of Prof. Morse could be found in the operating room up stairs. We ascended, and found that it represented him with a full beard and white bushy hair, as in Dr. R.'s limning. We subsequently met a party elsewhere who said he had been for several years in the employ of Prof. M. when he was in mortal life, and had known him toward the end of his days on earth; we asked him to describe his appearance, without giving him any inkling as to our reason for the question, when he said that as he remembered him he had bushy hair and a full beard, was about a certain height, complexion, etc. We then for the first time exhibited to him the painting, and he at once recognized it, asking: "Did I not give the right description?" This picture is now on exhibition at the BANNER OF LIGHT Bookstore, where it can be examined.

In this connection we are pleased to be able to state that Dr. Rogers and wife have taken the first floor of the house numbered 684 Tremont street, Boston, and may be interviewed there at any time after the 17th inst.

☞ Rabbi Lasker delivered a lecture at Union Park Temple in this city last Friday on "Secular and Religious Education." He said that the watchword of the present age is "Man, educate thyself!" "So far," he continued, "education is the duty and business of the State. Religion is our own affair, which we have not relinquished to the State. The public school children must feel that they are all one, all equal; race, color, caste must all be forgotten; they must meet as equals, form one family, and teachers as well as scholars should never in any way be encouraged to pry into each other's racial and religious differences. I cannot consider that man a good citizen who endeavors to destroy our system of popular instruction and convert it into sectarian, denominational, miserable, narrow schools. Therefore, no sectarian schoolhouses in this free and God-blessed country. Free, untrammeled and universal education is our pride, our true national glory; it is, as Scripture says, our wisdom and understanding in the eyes of the nation. Eternal vigilance and activity must be the motto of the Jewish, and every liberal-minded citizen, standing up for unclouded intelligence, for broad, generous and liberal principles, for free and untrammeled education."

☞ Among our reporter's notes from Onset, Mass., in THE BANNER of Sept. 1st, occurs this sentence: "It is whispered that Mrs. Williams is soon to marry and settle down to private life." A letter from Mrs. Williams, the excellent materializing medium, 232 West 46th street, N. Y. City, informs us that she was surprised on perusing such a loud "whisper" in THE BANNER, and requests us to state that she has no idea of retiring to private life so long as her health permits her noble band of spiritual workers to manifest through her medial powers. She will open her séance room on the 15th of this month—séances Tuesday and Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoons at two P. M.

☞ "La Constancia," the Spiritualist Society of Buenos Ayres, proposes to build an edifice as the headquarters of the Spiritualists of the Argentine Republic. The sum desired is 500,000 francs, of which amount 75,000 francs have been collected.

The Boston Spiritual Temple Society

Will commence its lectures for the season of 1888-89, in Berkeley Hall, on Sunday, October 7th, at 10:30 A. M. Mrs. R. S. Lillie will occupy the platform for the month of October.

☞ At the distribution of the various prizes at the recent Horticultural Exhibition at Burstow, Eng., Mr. William Tebb being called upon, made an address of some length, in which he summarized the advantages of such exhibitions, and the profit, pleasure and health to be derived from the avocations they represent. The Sussex and Surrey Courier of Aug. 25th gave a full report of the address, saying that it was a practical one, and listened to with marked attention. At the close of its delivery Mr. Sikes, the Chairman, took occasion to remark that having resided near Halstead, Kent, one of the most prolific fruit-growing districts in England, he could confirm the importance and profitable character of this special culture, and their thanks were due to Mr. Tebb for calling attention to the subject. Mr. Tebb had plead the desirability of the culture of small fruits, such as their perishability interdicted the importation of from the United States and other countries.

☞ The oft-repeated question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" is answered in the affirmative with an abundance of demonstrative proof, in "The Immortality of the Soul," a neatly-printed book of nearly one hundred pages, the authors of which, Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr., are on both sides of the dividing line between this world and the world of spirits, James being in this, and his wife, Mary S., on the other. From the standpoints of both, a very satisfactory conclusion on the point in question is arrived at. The book is published by Mr. Vincent at Tabor, Iowa.

☞ The essay of DR. F. L. H. WILLIS (on our first page) wherein are given his views of the status and characteristics of Spiritualism in 1888, merits the thoughtful perusal of every reader of this issue.

☞ Some account of a private séance held in this city last Monday evening by Mrs. Cadwell, the materializing medium of Brooklyn, N. Y., will appear next week.

Transition of Rev. J. H. Harter.

In THE BANNER of August 25th, we made mention of the approach of the fortieth anniversary of the ordination of Rev. J. H. Harter of Auburn, N. Y., as minister of the "Church of Divine Fragments."

That occasion came on the 31st ult., but had scarcely passed when he obeyed the summons, "Come up higher," and his obsequies were observed in the Trinity M. E. Church Sept. 6th. The edifice was filled to its utmost capacity by sympathizing friends, Mr. Harter having a wide circle of such not only in the immediate locality but throughout Central and Southern New York. Rev. J. C. F. Grumbine, pastor of the Universalist Church of Syracuse, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Arthur Copeland, the former delivering a fine oration, in which he paid a fitting tribute to the life-work of the deceased, and eulogized the independent spirit exhibited by him in his religious and secular beliefs, and his fearless advocacy of whatever he judged to be right in the face of all opposition.

The Auburn Dispatch, the day after Mr. Harter's remains had been deposited in Fort Hill Cemetery, in the course of a lengthy report of the obsequies, very justly said:

"Mr. Harter will not soon be forgotten in Auburn, for he had a hand ever ready to relieve others' distress, and he was personally the most amiable and kind-hearted of men. Wherever there was a case of poverty and distress that he heard of he could not rest until he had made an effort to relieve it. His methods were original with himself, as were his speech and general habitudes. He had no enemies, but many warm friends. Every one of them remembered some kindness he had shown to others, or something that he had volunteered to try to do with no earthly expectation of reward, but simply for the pleasure of being useful. His best eulogy would be found in the simple story of his life. It ought to be a legacy of good cheer and comforting remembrance to those who mourn the devoted husband and father and the genial and self-forgetful friend. As we looked for the last time on the face of the dead, the following lines from Tennyson seemed most appropriate:

"How'er it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good.
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood.'"

"Our Uncle and Aunt."

A very neat and dainty appearing volume of 223 pages, bearing the above title, is received from its publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. The author is Awarala Martin, of Cairo, Ill. The "Uncle and Aunt" are two types of character, representing the progressive and conservative sides of life. The uncle held the woman question in great dread, fearing its tendency was to unsex his wife; while she strongly espoused the cause, laboring with great zeal in its behalf, and so effectually as to win him to her belief regarding it. Two chapters, "The American Heaven," and "The Recording Angel's Office," while assuming to be dreams express truths that will be all the more palatable to some readers for the visionary guise and superabundance of witticism that embody them. No one who believes in the equality of mankind, regardless of sex, and that intelligence should rule, will fail to find in the book much satisfaction.

The Harvest Moon Festival.

So dear to the hearts of all dwellers at Onset, will be observed at this camp-ground, Sept. 22d and 23d. The speakers for the occasion will be Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes, Miss M. T. Shelhamer, Dr. A. H. Richardson and others.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to speaking; in the evening dancing will be participated in, by all who so wish.

On Sunday there will be speaking both forenoon and afternoon.

Excursion trains, at reduced rates, will be run from all the principal points on the Old Colony Railroad.

A general good time is anticipated.

☞ Reports of the appearance of spirits in unexpected places are becoming quite common in the daily press, even those not evincing any favoring of the spiritualistic phenomena giving them place and prominence in their columns. The Cleveland Free Press of the 31st ult. says that a Mrs. Carroll, who passed away two years ago last December, has appeared to a child in a family where before her decease she was quite intimate. The first time the child, Anna, saw her was about the middle of August, while playing with some little children out of doors. She looked up and said: "Why, there's Mrs. Carroll!" The children could see nothing, and she pointed her finger toward the place where the vision appeared. The other children could see nothing but empty air. That occurred in the middle of the afternoon, on a bright day, when the sun was shining. Since then the lady has appeared several times, always in the daytime. Once the lady appeared in the house, and little Anna said, "There she is. Don't you see her?" The parents were unable to see anything whatever.

☞ On the return voyage of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, says the Chicago Times, he lost his famous old horse, "Charlie," just before entering New York harbor. The old horse came into the scout's possession twenty years ago. When he died his body was wrapped in an American flag and buried in the sea. The scout, with his company around him, delivered a brief funeral oration, in the course of which he said:

"You have never failed me, Charlie, old fellow. I have had many friends, but very few of whom I could say that. Men tell me you had no soul, but if there be a heaven and scouts can enter, I'll wait at the gate for you, old friend."

☞ Special attention is directed to the announcement of Messrs. John H. Pray, Sons & Co., in another column. They are offering bargains in all departments. This is one of the largest and most reliable carpet concerns in the country.

A Friendly Note.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Obedient to a prompting from within I desire permission to say that, despite the serious inharmonies, the extreme diversity of views, the violent personal entanglements which so incongruously appear among Spiritualists, it is no less gratifying than it is creditable to know that during so many years THE BANNER has resolutely refused to lower its flag to the passing storm and the personal conflicts that every now and then have raged around it with such fury; that in the advocacy of the principles inherent in Spiritualism (the evolution of which made THE BANNER'S existence a necessity) it has primarily and always sought to make known the truths revealed by man's spiritual nature—truths which a suffering world yet needs to know—always in a manner befitting such a subject.

Not only is this true with reference to its promulgation of spiritual knowledge, but it is likewise true that it has at all times consistently sought to avoid personal antagonisms and individual condemnation, preferring—even when its good was evil spoken of—to leave to time a justification of its wisdom. G. A. BACON.

Washington, Sept. 5th, 1888.

In Luck.

The depositors of the Security Safe Deposit Vaults are now rejoicing over the recent flood, for they are getting their old silver and other heirlooms put in perfect order without expense to themselves, the company having come forward in the most liberal spirit, going far beyond any possible legal liability in restoring and renovating perishable articles, in many cases even where these have not been mentioned in the depositor's statement nor included in their sworn valuation. The universal satisfaction of the depositors is shown in the most practical way, for they are now returning daily, making a redeposit of their valuables, and in no instance has the company lost a single patron.—Saturday Evening Gazette.

☞ Those of our readers about to purchase furniture of any kind should examine the large and attractive stock of the F. M. Holmes Furniture Co., at their retail warerooms, 116 Tremont street, Boston. This is one of the largest and most reliable furniture establishments in the country.

Movements of Mediums & Lecturers.

(Notices under this heading must reach this office by Monday's mail to insure insertion the same week.)

Mr. Moses Hull, editor and publisher of New Thought, Des Moines, Iowa, was in town last week, on his way to the Etna (Me.) Spiritualist Camp-Meeting. He is looking hale and hearty. He thinks of moving his newspaper plant to Chicago, he says.

Frank T. Ripley, lecturer and platform test medium, leaves his present residence, 156 West Brookline street, Boston, Oct. 4th, to commence his winter's work. Can be engaged for December in Ohio; also for March wherever his services are desired.

Dr. D. J. Stansbury, the independent slate-writing medium, is stopping in Denver, during September, en route to his home in San Francisco. He gave an exhibition of his mediumistic powers before a large audience, at Warren Hall, on Sunday evening, 2d inst., when several messages and portraits were received independently on the slates and fully recognized. The doctor's time is now entirely devoted to independent slate-writing and clairvoyant examinations. He will stop also in Salt Lake.

Sept. 8th Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant, inspirational trance speaker, was cordially received by the directors and campers at Etna, Me. The daily meetings were well attended. Mrs. C. has engagements to speak for the Portland, Me., Spiritual Society the first two Sundays in October; and Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 4th. Would like to make further engagements with societies for fall and winter. Her present address is care of the BANNER OF LIGHT.

Mrs. Clara A. Field is still at Lake Pleasant, Mass. Her address is in care BANNER OF LIGHT.

Mrs. T. J. Lewis, platform test medium, has removed to No. 205 Harrison Avenue, Boston, where she can be addressed for engagements. Dr. Horatio L. Tryon can likewise be found at the same address.

Dr. Roscoe has, we are informed, returned to his residence, 26 Stewart street, Providence, R. I., where he can be engaged to give lectures through the month of October.

G. W. Kates and wife have been visiting at Ord, Neb. They were dated to hold meetings as follows: Madison, Neb., Sept. 6th to 9th; Tremont, Neb., Sept. 10th to 12th; Adair, Ia., Sept. 14th to 17th; Maryville, Mo., Sept. 20th. Their address is Greenville, Darke Co., O.

Mary L. French is still lecturing in Groton, and will be there during the fall. She has a few dates unengaged for 1889. Address, Box 98, Townsend Harbor, Mass.

Mr. E. R. Fairchild, who during the session just closed presided on the rostrum at Onset Bay, and who has delivered several eloquent and able addresses on the grounds, has decided to take up the work of the Spiritualist lecture field, and will make engagements with parties desiring his services for the coming winter months. He is a man of liberal education, and has reached his present decision through personal investigation of the claims of Spiritualism, and deserves a warm welcome to his chosen duties. Societies making up their list of speakers for '88-9 should keep in view his claims to remembrance. He can be addressed in care of this office.

Dr. J. C. Street called at our office on the 10th, having just returned from Cassadaga Lake Camp-Meeting, N. Y., where he was the permanent Chairman on the rostrum during the season—which was, this year, of six weeks' duration. He reports affairs at that Camp to be progressing in a manner to satisfy the wishes of its most earnest friends. Two boulevards along the Lake front have already been taken, and fifty cottages contracted for, some of which are now in process of erection. Dr. Street may be addressed for engagements at 78 Montgomery St., Boston.

Nellie S. Baade writes us from Capac, Mich., that the camp at Haslett Park was much enjoyed by her, and that others received experience which will be of spiritual profit in coming time. She has many engagements to lecture during the fall and winter. Her permanent address is Capac.

J. W. Kenyon's engagements are: Bridgeport, Conn., the Sundays of November; Stafford, Conn., last two Sundays of April. After twenty years of labor in the West, he returns to New England, where he will labor during the year. Societies and lecture committees can address him, 40 Woodland street, Worcester, Mass.

THE SOUL.—No. 7 of Vol. 1 is before the public. L. L. Whitlock, editor, presents therein a varied array of articles, original and contributed, two of which are illustrated. Facts Publishing Company (P. O. Drawer 5323), Boston, Mass. For sale at this office. The last two issues of The Soul have contained some interesting descriptions of phenomena occurring at Onset, at the Facts Convention—especially that of independent telegraphing through the mediumship of Mr. Rowley, of Cleveland, on board a yacht, while sailing in the Bay.

People in Alaska at this time of the year can see to read without the aid of artificial light from 2 o'clock in the morning until 11 at night.

Special Notice.

The date of the expiration of every subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT is plainly marked on each address. The paper is discontinued at that time unless the subscription is previously renewed. Subscribers intending to renew will escape inconvenience by sending in the money for renewal before the expiration of their present subscription. It is the earnest desire of the publishers to give the BANNER OF LIGHT the extensive circulation to which its merits entitle it, and they therefore look with confidence to the friends of the paper throughout the world to assist them in their important work.

COLBY & RICH, Publishers.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate imparts new energy to the brain, giving the feeling and sense of increased intellectual power.

For Sale at this Office:

THE TWO WORLDS: A journal devoted to Spiritualism, Occult Science, Ethics, Religion and Reform. Published weekly at Manchester, England. Single copy, 5 cents.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. A Progressive Family Health Magazine. Published monthly in New York. Single copy, 10 cents.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN. Monthly. Published at Boston. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE SOUL. Monthly. Published in Boston. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE CARRIER DOVE. Illustrated. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BIZARRE. NOTES AND QUERIES, with Answers in all Departments of Literature. Monthly. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE OLIVE BRANCH: Utica, N. Y. Monthly. Price 10 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Published weekly at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE NEW THOUGHT. Published weekly in Des Moines, Iowa. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE WATCHMAN. Published monthly at Fort Wayne, Ind. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH-SEEKER. Published weekly in New York. Single copy, 8 cents.

THE MIND-CURE AND SCIENCE OF LIFE. Monthly. Published at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE. Published monthly in New York. Price 10 cents.

THE THEOSOPHIST. Monthly. Published in India. Single copy, 50 cents.

THE GOLDEN GATE. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BETTER WAY. A Spiritualistic weekly journal. Published in Cincinnati, O. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE EASTERN STAR. Published fortnightly at Bucksport, Maine. Single copies, 3 cents.

THE PATH. A Monthly Magazine, devoted to Universal Brotherhood, Theosophy in America, and Aryan Philosophy. Single copy, 20 cents.

THE ESOTERIC. A Monthly Magazine of Advanced and Practical Esoteric Thought. Published in Boston. Single copy, 15 cents.

MENTAL HEALING. A Monthly Magazine. Published in Boston, Mass. Single copies, 10 cents.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Each line in Agate type, twenty cents for the first and every insertion on the fifth or eighth page, and fifteen cents for each subsequent insertion on the seventh page.

Special Notices forty cents per line, Minion, each insertion.

Business Cards thirty cents per line, Agate, each insertion.

Notices in the editorial columns, large type, leaded matter, fifty cents per line.

Payments in all cases in advance.

☞ Advertisments to be renewed at continued rates must be left at our Office before 12 M. on Saturday, a week in advance of the date whereon they are to appear.

☞ Only small and light cuts will be allowed in the advertising columns. When accepted, our rates for that portion of the advertisement occupied by the cut will be one-half price in excess of the regular rates.

Electrotypes of pure type matter will not be accepted.

The publishers reserve the right to reject any and all electrotypes.

The BANNER OF LIGHT cannot well undertake to vouch for the honesty of its many advertisers. Advertisements which appear fair and honorable upon their face are accepted, and whenever it is made known that dishonest or improper persons are using our advertising columns, they are at once interdicted. We request patrons to notify us promptly in case they discover in our columns advertisements of parties whom they have proved to be dishonorable or unworthy of confidence.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Dr. F. L. H. Willis may be addressed as usual for the summer Glenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
Jy7 13w*

Andrew Jackson Davis, Seer into the causes and natural cure of disease. Send for information to his office, 63 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass. 13w* Jy7

H. A. Kersey, No. 3 Bigg Market, Newcastle-on-Tyne, will act as agent in England for the BANNER OF LIGHT and the publications of Colby & Rich during the absence of J. J. Morse.

To Foreign Subscribers the subscription price of the BANNER OF LIGHT is $3.50 per year, or $1.75 per six months. It will be sent at the price named above to any foreign county embraced in the Universal Postal Union.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

STYLISH AND DURABLE FURNITURE.

WE manufacture all our Furniture at our large factory in Charlestown, and sell direct to the retail trade. By purchasing from us you save all intermediate profits between manufacturer and retailer. All our goods are warranted. Inspection and comparison invited. No trouble to show goods.

F. M. HOLMES FURNITURE CO.,
Boston Salesroom, 116 Tremont St.
S15 6tsow

The Soul.

A MONTHLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO THE THEORIES AND PHENOMENA OF
SOUL, MIND AND INTELLIGENCE
Published by the FACTS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
P. O. Drawer 5323, Boston, Mass.
L. L. WHITLOCK, Editor.
Single copies, 10 cents. $1.00 per year.
With premiums, $1.50 per year.

Second Facts Convention Number, Illustrated.

CONTENTS.

There is no Evil: Emma Curtis Hopkins, Independent Slate Writings: Mrs. Helen Wilson; Materialization: T. B. Taylor, Independent Pictures; Zerobia; John H. McElroy; Forget Me Not: L. S. Wetmore; To the Readers of the "Soul"; Stereopticon Views; The Facts Convention at Onset; Our Thanks Overflow; Adie Lindsay Lynch; The Universal Language of Soul with Soul; Emma Trann; Where to Stop at Onset. S15

DR. HENRY ROGERS,
Medium for Varied Independent Psychic Phenomena,
Will be located at Parlors 684 Tremont St., Boston, on and after Sept. 17th
Diagnosis and Treatment of Disease a specialty.
S15

MRS. M. E. WALKER,

TEST and Business Medium. Will give Sittings Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays only, until further notice. 1469 Washington street, Suite 2. 1w* S15

DR. J. C. STREET,

78 Montgomery Street, Boston, Mass.
Jy7 13w

MRS. M. J. KIMBALL.
MASSAGE Treatment at residence, or will answer calls if desired. 21 Dwight street, Boston. Reference: Douglass Graham, M. D. 1w* S15

LAKE PLEASANT, MASS.—M. W. LYMAN, Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds properly made out, witnessed, &c. Will employ agents anywhere to sell a valuable tested household article. Middle-aged people preferred. Correspondence solicited. S15

MISS J. M. GRANT, Test and Business Medium, Hotel Littlefield, Harwich street, off Dartmouth, Suite 3, Boston. 2w* S15

MRS. S. S. MARTIN, Mesmeric and Magnetic Healer, Hotel Littlefield, Harwich st., off Dartmouth. S15 2w*

MISS CONRADSEN, Healing Medium. Massage Treatment. 12 Boylston Place, near Tremont st. S15 1w*

IS IT THE DESPAIR OF SCIENCE? or, Science Applied to Spiritualism, not in the Manner of Dr. Hammond. By W. D. GUNNING.

Very pleasantly written, suggesting the possibility of solving the mysteries of spiritual manifestations, by tracing the analogies offered by the subtler forces of Nature.

This little work has been entirely revised, and a considerable more matter added to it, and will be found an unanswerable argument in favor of Spiritualism.

Paper. Price 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE WAR OF THE DOCTORS ON THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE. Arguments and Addresses in remonstrance thereof, delivered before the Massachusetts Legislative Committee on Public Health at the State House, Boston, February, 1880, by Alfred E. Giles, Allen Putnam, Edward Hamilton, Richard Holmes, Loring Moody, A. S. Hayward, Joshua Nye, and Prof. Charles Wesley Emerson.

Price 10 cents.
Per 100 copies $6.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

IF, THEN, AND WHEN, from the Doctrines of the Church. By WARREN SUMNER BARLOW, author of "The Voices, and other Poems." All who have read the author's "The Voice of Nature," "The Voice of a Pebble," "The Voice of Superstition," and "The Voice of Prayer," will find this Poem just suited to the times.

Price 10 cents.
For sale by the Publishers, COLBY & RICH.

LIFE AND ITS FORCES. Health and Disease Correctly Defined. A reliable Guide to Health without the use of Mineral or Vegetable Poisons or Irritants. The conclusions from Forty Years' Practice of Medicine. By DR. WILLIAM PORTER.

Cloth, tinted paper, 132 pp. Price $1.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

TO STOUT PEOPLE.

Distant Patients Successfully Treated.

Obesity is fatty degeneration. This disease is not only cured, but permanently so, by new, rational means. No dieting. No failure in a single instance. Send stamp for full particulars to DR. EDITH BERDAN, 113 Ellison street, Paterson, New Jersey.

Thin People increased in weight and flesh by regulation of the nerves of nutrition. Vegetable Remedies. Can be sent by mail. Address DR. BERDAN, (formerly Dr. Edith Hale.) Au25

A New Volume.

ALL TRUE SPIRITUALISTS,

Wherever Located,

SHOULD NOT ONLY

SUBSCRIBE

FOR THE

Banner of Light,

THE BEST

Family Paper

In the World!

But make it a point to induce all liberal-minded people to become Subscribers.

It contains Original Essays; Original Stories; Verbatim Reports of Grand Lectures; Answers to Questions by Invisible Intelligences of the Greatest Interest to the World at Large; Characteristic Messages from Decarnated Individuals to their Friends and Relatives in the Earth-Life; Editorials on a Great Variety of Subjects; Current Events; Highly Interesting Correspondence from all over the Country, Etc.

Our Premium List,

Which entitles each Subscriber to an Interesting Book or a Fine Engraving.

Is also a Strong Inducement for the People to Subscribe.

☞ As THE BANNER is sold at nearly all the Periodical Depots in the United States, and has a wide circulation in foreign countries, it is a capital avenue through which merchants and others can reach customers. REMEMBER THIS FACT!

Works by Richard B. Westbrook, D. D., LL. B.

The Bible---Whence and What?

"And now comes a Doctor of Divinity, with his reason, logic and learning, and tells us what the Bible is and whence it came. . . . This volume casts a flood of light upon things not generally known, but which linguistic and biblical scholars admit, and the author thinks that the people have a right to know all that can be known. . . ."—The Republican, St. Louis.

Cloth. Price $1.00.

Man: Whence and Whither?

The contents comprise chapters on the following subjects: Is Man a Mere Animal? Common Dogma of Man's Origin. The Evolution Hypothesis. Answer of Theism as to Man's Origin. Is Death the End of Man? The Foundation of Faith in a Future Life. After Death, What? Science and Theology.

Cloth, pp. 226. Price $1.00.

Marriage and Divorce.

This work treats on the following subjects:

Preface, Introduction, Chap. 1. The True Ideal of Marriage. 2. Free Love. 3. The History of Marriage. 4. The Old Testament Divorce Law. 5. The New Testament on Divorce. 6. Divorce as a Question of Law and Religion. 7. Rational Deductions from Established Principles. 8. Objections to Liberal Divorce Laws Answered. 9. Prevention Better than Cure. Appendix. The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, by John Milton (1643, 1644).

Cloth. Price 50 cents; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PRICE REDUCED!

The Ghosts,

AND OTHER LECTURES.

BY ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

The idea of immortality, that like a sea has ebbed and flowed in the human heart, with its countless waves of hope and fear, beating against the shores and rocks of time and fate, was not sown of any book, nor of any creed, nor of any religion. It was born of human affection, and it will continue to ebb and flow beneath the mists and clouds of doubt and darkness as long as Love kisses the lips of Death.

This work treats upon various subjects, viz: The Liberty of Man, Woman and Child. Liberty sustains the same relation to Mind that Space does to Matter. The Declaration of Independence. One Hundred Years Ago our Fathers Retired the Gods from Politics. About Farming in Illinois. To Plow is to Pray; to Plant is to Prophesy, and the Harvest Answers and Fulfills. The Grant Banquet. Twelfth Toast—Response by Robert G. Ingersoll, November, 1879. Rev. Alexander Clark. The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream. Extract from a Speech delivered at the Soldiers' Reunion at Indianapolis, Sept. 21, 1876.

This work is elegantly bound and printed in clear, bold type, on heavy, tinted paper.

The author takes the ground that man belongs to himself, and that each individual should at all hazards maintain his intellectual freedom.

Cloth. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GIRARD'S WILL

AND

GIRARD COLLEGE THEOLOGY.

BY RICHARD B. WESTBROOK, D. D., LL. D.,
Author of "Marriage and Divorce," "The Bible—Whence and What," "Man—Whence and Whither," etc.

The author in his preface says: "The publication of this book is a matter of conscience. The author, as a theologist and lawyer, thoroughly believes that the present system of religious instruction in Girard College is in palpable violation of the conditions of the Will of the Founder, and not well adapted to promote 'the purest principles of morality.'

The chapters which make up this book were originally delivered, in substance, as popular lectures in the last spring course of The Westbrook Free Lectureship in the hall of our City Institute, and attracted considerable public attention at that time. The lectures were delivered before different audiences, and hence certain points were purposely repeated."

12mo, pp. 183. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

HOW TO STRENGTHEN THE MEMORY,

OR,

Natural and Scientific Methods of Never Forgetting.

BY M. L. HOLBROOK, M. D.

The work contains chapters on The Memory of the Aged; The Memory of Names and Localities; The Musical Memory; The Culture of Memory in Schools; The Lawyers' and Clergymen's Memory; The Relation of the Health to the Memory, and a multitude of suggestions and hints of the greatest value. Prof. Edward Spring, the sculptor, has contributed an original chapter on Memory of Forms and Faces. Prof. Gaillard, the eminent teacher of languages, contributes a chapter on The Best Methods of Cultivating the Memory for Words, and the author has extracted from Prof. Edward Pick's book, long out of print, the chapter on How to Learn a New Language.

Cloth. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

MARRIAGE AND PARENTAGE, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their Bearing on the Producing of Children of Finer Health and Greater Ability. By M. L. HOLBROOK, M. D.

Cloth. Price $1.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Message Department.

Spiritual Free-Circle Meetings

Are held at the BANNER OF LIGHT OFFICE, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), on TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOON of each week.

On Tuesday afternoon MISS M. T. SHELHAMER occupies the platform for the purpose of answering by her spirit guides such questions as may be introduced for consideration.

On Friday afternoon MRS. B. F. SMITH, trance medium, under the influence of her guides, will afford an avenue through which individual spirit messages will be given.

The Hall (which is used exclusively for these séances) will be open at 2 o'clock; the services commence at 3 o'clock precisely, at which time the doors will be closed, allowing no ingress or egress. The public is cordially invited.

☞ Persons having questions of practical bearing upon human life in any of its departments of thought and labor, which they would like answered by the spirit-world intelligences, may send them to the BANNER OF LIGHT office by mail, or hand them to the Chairman of the Circle, who will present them to the spirits for consideration.

☞ The Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond—whether for good or evil; that those who pass from the earthly sphere in an undeveloped state, eventually progress to higher conditions. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his or her reason. All express as much of truth as they perceive—no more.

☞ It is our earnest desire that those who recognize the messages of their spirit-friends will verify them by informing us of the fact for publication.

☞ Natural flowers upon our Circle-Room table are gratefully appreciated by our angel visitants, therefore we solicit donations of such from the friends in earth-life who may feel that it is a pleasure to place upon the altar of Spirituality their floral offerings.

☞ Letters of inquiry in regard to this Department of THE BANNER must not be addressed to the mediums in any case. LEWIS B. WILSON, Chairman.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED,

THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

Report of Public Séance held June 26th, 1888.

Spirit Invocation.

Oh! thou Divine Majesty of Power, thou Soul of all Infinitude, our Father and our Mother God, we turn to thee in aspiration and praise, seeking tender love and comprehension of thy wisdom and goodness. We praise thee for the blessings of the past, for the unfoldments of the present, and for thy great promises for the future. Standing here midway in the present, coming under thy great law, beholding the glory and the beauty of thy manifestations, as displayed in the opening flower and the blooming sod, recognizing thy presence everywhere, realizing that thy handiwork is displayed above our heads amid the countless stars, and beneath our feet in the grains of sand and the blade of grass, we may indeed understand something of thy majestic power and thy wondrous skill. May our souls be linked with angels from the higher life now and forever; may we go forward hand in hand with those who labor for humanity in love and kindly feeling, that we may become like unto them, ever ready to press forward in the good work. We ask thy benediction to rest upon all wherever thy children may be found. Amen.

Questions and Answers.

CONTROLLING SPIRIT.—Your questions are now in order, Mr. Chairman.

QUES.—[By S. A. B.] What is the cause and cure of epileptic fits?

ANS.—For the cause of epilepsy we must look to the nervous system, for as far as we can understand anything of the nature of this disease, it is connected especially with the spinal nerves. We find an unequal circulation of the vital fluid, the entire body seems to be disorganized to an extent, and the spirit cannot properly control it and manifest itself as it desires to do. What, then, is the cure of this disease? To establish the equilibrium of the nervous forces of the body, so that a proper degree of nerve-aura shall be distributed from the various nerve centres to every part and portion of the system. How can this be done? you may inquire. One general rule will not apply to every case, for you must determine what is the natural constitution, habit and surroundings of the patient before you can apply a remedy to the disease. With one individual afflicted in this manner it will be necessary to have an entire change of scene and surroundings, and even of magnetic association, that there may be established with and around him such a flow of magnetism as may be imparted to his system, thus aiding the forces of his own organism to become strengthened and equalized. With another patient this may not be necessary. One must study his habits and surroundings in order to understand just what will best apply to the case.

In this particular disease internal remedies are of but little use, unless it be such as will enrich the blood and at the same time remove from it that which is debilitating and impure. In certain cases of epilepsy we believe the application of electricity may be beneficial. In every case the application of vital magnetism, imparted by some healthy, congenial individual who can assimilate his forces and his mind with that of his patient, will be most efficacious. This disease, probably, in nine cases out of ten, arises from inherited troubles, and we may trace its source back from the individual to his progenitors. In such cases it is more difficult to eradicate it and to completely equalize the forces of the individual than when the disease has been acquired after birth, but through persistent effort, by the application of natural remedies, with the assistance of vital magnetism, we believe that nearly every case of epilepsy on record might be brought to a cure, or at least benefited to a large extent.

Q.—[By A. C. S.] Why is it some people are so much more happily situated in this life than others?

A.—The surroundings of individual pre-natal conditions and associations have much to do with happiness or unhappiness. It is not easy to follow the psychological and subtle laws of nature to such an extent as to determine why it is that some people are more happy in life than others, and we presume your correspondent refers to the earthly state of existence. Pre-natal conditions play a large part in this direction. Some individuals are born happy; they are contented with life, and pass through a sphere of peace and happiness which others of a different temperament could not possibly do. Some persons require hard discipline and bitter experience in order to soften their natures, to round out the spiritual part of their characters and make them more beautiful, more sympathetic and loving than they would be without this same painful experience. One must take an individual case, analyze it to the very utmost, come into cognizance of its every state, condition and environment, in order to explain why it is that he is more or less unhappy than his associates.

It is true that to certain individuals on earth comes a large share of misfortune, of unhappy experience, of that which is—looking at it from an external side—depressing and painful. Perhaps that which one of this class undertakes will prove disadvantageous to his material welfare; perhaps his friends will forsake him, or his loved ones pass away from his sight; the pall of sorrow seems to fall heavily upon his life, and in the bitterness of his spirit he may well cry out to know why it is he must suffer and be more unhappy than his kind, when others whom he sees around him appear to be living lives of peace and happiness with those they love. It is not for any finite mind to undertake to explain or analyze such a case, because such will only gaze upon it from his finite point of view, and not be able to enter into all the laws and conditions or the reasons for this state of things; but we may feel assured that every life, however humble, however unhappy and depressed it may be, however insignificant it may seem to the world and the world's people, belongs to the great infinite love, and is held in his divine keeping. We may believe that whatever of discipline is brought to that life, though shadowy and painful it prove, has a work to perform, and that perhaps in the hour of the greatest sorrow this bitter experience is probing the soul of the individual, to bring it into such a condition as will make it most fruitful and beautiful and happy in the time to come.

True, the man who looks only to the earthly existence, hardly realizing there is a beyond in which he may pass through endless experiences and grandest disciplines, will not be able to understand or to be comforted by these assurances, but nevertheless he is pressing forward through the years, gaining strength and power of soul, of mind and of character, which by-and-bye will serve him most usefully; therefore the time must undoubtedly come when such a person will look back upon his painful experiences and realize that they have been of immeasurable benefit to his life, and even come to be thankful for that which has been his.

Q.—[By R. G. Dawson.] Are the lower animals possessed of a soul in conjunction with the spirit?

A.—We would ask the questioner: "What is your idea of the soul? Do you look upon it as a human intelligence, belonging only to the human family, or do you look upon it as a spark or a ray from the Divine Intelligence of All Life—that which vivifies, permeates, governs and animates the spirit as well as the outward form. If the latter, then we can truly say the animal is possessed of a soul, since that spark of intelligence, of animation and consciousness which vitalizes its life makes its spirit a unity in itself, and is most assuredly drawn from the Great Fount of all Life and Animation, and it may be found in the animal kingdom even throughout the various departments of life, just as surely as it makes itself known through the human family. Understand most clearly that mankind does not stand alone endowed with the divine spark of immortal life, with the knowledge, comprehension and consciousness which go to make up an existence; but this very power, this wonderful principle, this grand, moving flame of life and consciousness, goes forth throughout every department or kingdom of all worlds, of the universe itself, manifesting its potency through various avenues, in different ways, but at all times making its power felt. The animal kingdom belongs to life itself and God. It may change in form and outward semblance, yet the great power, the flame of its existence, lives and must express itself through all the ages, though perhaps in a more refined form than it may have done in the past.

Q.—[By Rev. T. W. Woodrow, Seneca, Kan.] When the spirit found he could not possess the subject without harm, why did he not or could he not withdraw, and not require some person with power to cast him out? Was it impossible for the possessing spirit to go on his own accord, and did the subject possess the spirit as well as the spirit possess the subject?

A.—It sometimes happens, through the operations of the law of psychology, that a spirit coming in contact with a subject or medium, and seeking to gain possession of that mediumistic organism, finds himself so closely drawn within the atmosphere of his subject that he cannot readily dispossess himself of those elements he has taken on, which belong entirely to the medium. It sometimes happens that a spirit not fully versed in the law and its operation of mediumistic control, finds himself in contact with that medium for an indefinite time, obliged to live in association with his subject, as we have said, and unable to pass out of the atmosphere or break the connection binding him to the external condition, therefore such a spirit will require the assistance of some strong-minded, positive intelligence, either of earth or of the spirit-world, who can bring in his own mental magnetic force as a counter-bearer upon the psychological law which is in operation, and thus free the imprisoned spirit. It is possible for a medium to send out such a psychological influence of his own, such a magnetic environment as to surround and attract a spirit, and hold that spirit within his influence, so that the unseen intelligence cannot free himself and pass away without the aid of some other force and intelligent power, either of earth or the spirit-life; such a power may come forward, exercising a superior force to such an extent as to free the entrapped spirit, and allow him to pass out of this environment to other scenes and conditions.

Q.—[By Henry A. Bradbury, Norway Lake, Me.] What constitutes worth in an individual on earth, as viewed from the standpoint of an advanced being in spirit-life?

A.—We must give our individual opinion, not that of any high and exalted being of any life or world, in replying to these questions. To our mind, that which constitutes the highest degree of development and worth, in any individual, is a high standard of moral integrity. Social influence, external distinction and knowledge the world applauds and bows down to, have no merit in our eyes unless they stand upon the strong foundation of moral integrity. The man who possesses this noble integrity, such as will bear him through life calmly and serenely, such as will lift him above temptation, and assist him in restraining self, so that he may prove not only a guide to his own soul, but a helper and friend to his afflicted kind, will find himself unfolding in spiritual beauty and symmetry, possessing flowers within his soul, that will in time bear rich fruit for his own instruction and support, and such a man may indeed pass through life undisturbed by its toil and friction, unmindful of that which seems so alluring to others less self-possessed and serene, and which proves a pitfall to many faltering feet. To our mind, he who is aspirational by nature, who desires to be good and to do good, not for his own personal outward advantage, now or by-and-bye, but for the sake of goodness and for the sake of truth, wishing to make his fellowmen more happy, more calm and peaceful in their lives, he who desires to unfold in the spiritual graces of manhood, however humble his external position may be on earth, is possessed of true worth, of true grandeur and nobility of spirit, and will shine a progressive and an instructive spirit in the world of souls.

SPIRIT MESSAGES,

THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Mrs. B. F. Smith.

Report of Public Séance held June 8th, 1888.

Benjamin Chadsey.

How true the words are that have just been sung: "We shall know each other there." How often, since I left the mortal form, have I been one of the silent listeners here, although my earthly home is a long way off—in Rushville, Ill.

I am called Benjamin Chadsey. I think I shall be remembered, for I dwelt many long years in the mortal, and the good BANNER has been very dear to me.

I was a soldier in the war of 1812, although then but a mere boy. Later on I fought the battle of life in the wilds of the far West, striking out into what was termed the wilderness. But let me say to you, friends, the grandest battle I ever fought was with mortals for the truth of spirit-return. And I am thankful today that this glorious truth was given me on earth—a truth more beautiful than you can fully comprehend while dwelling in the flesh.

I met my dear companion, Rachel, when I passed over, for I had realized her presence with me often during my remaining on earth—for she passed on before me.

I would counsel my dear children to learn all they can while here. Father and mother and the dear brother, laid away so long ago, still live, and are able to come into your homes as really alive as when in the form.

The old camp-meetings—how I loved them! How many times did I feel the presence of the dear ones around us! And the singing was so beautiful it seemed to me as if it brought them nearer to us, if that could be.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the few minutes allotted to me while the children are crowding around. I feel sometimes as if there could be no heaven without the children, the love of children helps so much to make up heaven.

Lottie Cone.

My name is Lottie Cone, and I lived in Oswego, N. Y. Father is with me, and two dear brothers. It is three or four years since I left the mortal form in which I lived over twenty-six years, hardly attaining the twenty-seventh. I feel now as if some one will be anxiously looking for a word from Lottie. How hard it was for mother to lay me away in what they called death. But mother, understanding a little of spirit return, did not feel as many do at the last gaze upon the face.

I have been trying in many ways to make them understand that I was near them. I have been trying to learn a little in spirit-life, what I did not in the mortal. Do learn all you can of spirit return; just open the door, that we may come in and commune with you, for it will benefit you; for you know not how much it will help us on the spirit side. It is a happiness to us as well as to you. I have often asked the angels to bring us all nearer to the loved ones yet left in the mortal.

My mother's name is Cynthia; my father's name is Charles, and he is with me in the spirit-life.

Abbie Newell.

I wish to send word to Warren, R. I., and also to Providence. I passed out in Warren. My name is Abbie Newell. Stanford is with me—my husband. At one time he manifested in the meetings, and felt happier for so doing. We are all a little selfish in coming, since we gain by it, as well as you mortals. A part of our work is to help you here. I know there are some in Providence who will be glad to hear I have spoken. I am satisfied with my home, and hope to make it more beautiful every day.

Grandma reminds me that I understand now what seemed a mystery when I was on earth. I could not make out how a spirit could be coming to earth after it had gone to heaven. I thought I should want to stay if I once got there, but I find now that would be very selfish. Each one whom I meet is anxious to return and give out a word of comfort to those that are yet left. I am thankful, Mr. Chairman, to you and to the guides for this opportunity of saying a few words.

Lottie Wood.

[To the Chairman:] Would you let little girls come? Grandpa said if I could get permission of the gentleman over here, that was a minister man once, I could come and speak a few words if I did n't talk too fast, for I get a little in a hurry.

My home was in Lowell, Mass., and my name is Lottie Wood. Grandpa is here; I guess you know grandpa, do n't you? His name is Frank Goward. He stands right here. He aint going to talk if I am. I want to tell papa and mamma that I aint dead. I aint been dead any, and I come sometimes into papa's shop. It 's all jewelry there. I do n't want to take any away.

I want grandma to know I come right home, and Uncle Frank is there sometimes. He has a name just like grandpa's.

Oh! the pretty flowers on the table! They are pretty, aint they those red roses? Did you buy 'em? We do n't have to buy flowers where we are, because we have all the beautiful flowers; and the children go to school and have teachers. That aint Lowell, you know; we live in the spirit-world.

I do n't want mamma to think she and papa will never find their Lottie any more, because I did n't die; I only was transplanted to blossom in heaven. I 've got acquainted with the children over here, and we have such beautiful times! We go to the crystal waters where all the sweet flowers are.

[To the Chairman:] Do n't you love children? [Yes.] Well, you 'll have a lot of 'em when you come over to our side, for there are so many here. I want grandma to go somewhere so she can talk with me and grandpa and Uncle Frank, and great grandma, too.

I know papa says he can't think that we can come and talk through somebody else. We can, if they will let us. I aint so little as I was when I went away. I 've grown some on the spirit-side. I think that was beautiful what you sang. We have singing where we are; the children sing, and we bring—oh! more flowers than you 've got, many more, because we have 'em all so free.

Celia Thomas.

I have some things I would like to say to my children. My home was in Morrill, Me. My name was Celia Thomas. I feel sometimes when I look at the little children of spirit-life, beautiful, pure and innocent ones—how strange it is to the mother that they can be so happy. They are here, dancing in glee, clapping their little hands, with their countenances lighted up with joy. I feel like exclaiming that it would not be heaven without the children.

I am often with my dear children when in the home. Freddie, your mother never forsakes you. When you think of little Harry, taken out of your home, your heart has bled, for you could not realize that the dear child was transplanted to bloom in a brighter world. The precious little bud is growing, and as I promised you and Flora, I have cared for it and have learned to love it even as my own. It will be given back to you, but not as a little one. In spirit-life the child will attain to manhood. You will then wonder how you will know your boy. The tie of affection is never broken, never lost.

Hosea is with me, Freddie—your father—yet not all the time, as we drift into different surroundings whenever the attraction draws us away. I watch the course of things, and I find you do not care to close the old home, but I know sometimes it seems lonely to you, as you see one thing and another that reminds you of mother.

Oh! how often do I come into the old home! How often do I visit your home, Freddie, and never empty-handed.

I bring a blessing to you all, my children. In spirit-life will we come together a united family, not one link missing of the chain. I know you will say that I did not understand this subject when on earth—and I did not as I do now—yet I felt all the way through that the dear ones hovered around us. Now I find they not only hovered around us, but walked with us daily, coming into sympathy in all our trials, and helping us to bear the burdens of the day.

I am happy, my dear children, but would like to come into communication with you privately, whenever there is a channel open. I know this is not always convenient, but we ask the favor when you can.

Abbie Cilley.

My home was in Andover, N. H., when I passed out of the mortal. Nearly fifty years have passed since I was counted among the dead. I have said many times to George that I would try and keep trying to give a message to be printed, not only for him, but that some others might understand that we live and have power to return, and that the angel band comes every day, to help them through life's trials.

I am satisfied with my home. I find every day that we may press on to higher spheres—beautiful and grand. Since I passed over father and mother have joined me, and we are happy together. Many other dear ones have come to meet me in spirit-life, and the real greeting was grand. I know, George, that you fully believe that we return to earth, and yet you have often said you were afraid you should not find Abbie, when you crossed the portal called death.

I have tried in every way to assure you that you will find me as real and as natural as ever, in the spirit-life, and I have not grown old. You have not grown old in spirit, but you have in the body. Father is here, and both little Gracies, and the old Orient, too, who has given you advice so many times. Alfred is here. I think we have a large meeting to-day, and more invisibles than there are of you mortals.

How long forty or fifty years seem to you on earth, but how short to us—only, as you might say, like a day, a week, or a month. You have been away on a little visit, George, since I last communed with you, and it seems to you months, years, since you conversed with me. I am satisfied with what you have done, but you are going to do a little more yet. The Orient, the old Egyptian who has materialized to you once, tells me to say that he will again do so. When father was trying to give a communication I wished to give one, but failed, so as the channel was open to-day I found it was my time, and I came quickly to improve it.

George, I will be there to grasp your hand as the change comes to you, and you shall not be disappointed.

I find a gentleman standing beside me who asks me to say Munn do n't leave you, but is with you often.

Henry C. Sullivan.

I have visited you many times, Mr. Chairman, as I feel at home always where spirits congregate. I dwelt long in the mortal life, and my home was in Manchester, N. H. Henry C. Sullivan. This was nothing new to me, for we had the spirits come to us in our own home, and I tried to appreciate the privileges that were granted me.

Go on with your work, Betsey, as there is much yet for you to do. I found on entering spirit-life that I knew very little, but what I did learn here was of great benefit to me there.

Mortals, learn while the day lasts, and the opportunity is yours. You must not think for a moment we are perfect, no, not one, but learn all you can while you have an opportunity; meet together, converse together, open your doors wide, and let the spirits come in and commune with you.

As I look back now, I find spirits always did return to earth, and always will. How much more happiness do ye mortals gain by coming into communication with us.

While I dwelt in the flesh I heard it said now and then, "Well, what good has your Spiritualism ever done?" It has lightened the saddened heart, and brought comfort to the sorrowing, day by day. When the husband has been taken out of the home, and the wife has been removed, and the little children have been transplanted to the life beyond, is there not comfort in the belief that you are going to find them again, and be reunited? Yes, this is a consolation that no religion gives.

I tried to be liberal, to be lenient and sympathetic with the mediums. Be patient and be charitable to-day.

Oliver LaForest Goss.

[To the Chairman:] That little girl talked, and now can a little boy come and talk? "Do n't talk too fast," a gentleman over here says. I won't hurry. Grandpa says there 's time enough. I aint going away till I tell all my story, and then I 'll tell you all my whole name.

I aint been gone very long. Grandpa came to take me, and grandma too, when I first went away, but I could n't think that boy was me, so I called it "the other boy," that one in the box, that had all the flowers round him. But grandpa and grandma said it was the same little body I lived in when I was here. The spirit that was the life, you know, do n't you, went out of that body, and I had a good body then, that did n't make my throat feel bad, so it was right they came to take me away.

Bemie is here. He talked one day, and now grandpa said I could. And there 's Leora, too. Grandpa's first name is Samuel, and he gave me the last name.

Can I have one of those roses for my mamma, so that I can carry it to her straight? I want uncle Elijah to know, honest and true, that we can come back. Grandpa says we did n't go away far.

I want to tell mamma I am going to school; and I learn from a lady teacher, spirit Alice. The Fannie lady helped me a little when I first began to talk—the one that used to sit here on this platform—and there 's a minister man here that said I could talk. Not the minister man that was there when I went away; he was Mr. Durrell, of Garden-street church.

Grandpa said I waited long and patiently, and now I could come and talk a little while. I want mamma to know that that little girl was right in mamma's room, in the parlor, where my picture is. You aint seen the picture. I stand up high, and mamma puts up flowers on the shelf every day—new ones. Aint she a good mamma? Grandpa says that 's natural. I 'd rather have mine. You can have your own. You do n't know what my mamma's name is. It is Mary Augusta. Aint that a good name? My papa's name is LaForest E. Goss. I suppose you want to know what my name is, and I 'm going to tell you, for if I do n't look out I 'll forget it. It is Oliver LaForest Goss. You see grandpa gave me his back name. His name was Samuel Oliver. Grandma's name is Christine.

I 've seen Uncle Frank's baby, Tiny May, that 's in this life. Do n't forget to tell mamma Leora is here, and grandpa and grandma, and grandma Goss; she went away in Charlestown; and tell papa, too, she 's going to write a letter some day. I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Jeanette Cross.

Beautiful children! who would not love them? My home was in Methuen, Mass.; my name, Jeanette Lowell Cross. Lowell was my name before marriage. Father's name is Hazen. I think this message may reach George Lowell, my brother. I know he is more ready to receive us than some of the others.

Henrietta and Addison, do open the door a little way. You cannot feel that Jeanette is dead. You have had proof enough to think we live somewhere; but you ask where are we. Close by you, dear sister. I well know of the trials that have come to you all since I passed away. Jerome is with me at times, but not constantly.

I would send greetings to the dear one who gave me the name. I am aware of the trials that have come into the home. I know of the worriment and of the wrongs that have been heaped upon her through one who promised to stand by her, and I have felt many times, as it has looked so dark for her, that I wanted to bid her look to the angel-world for a sustaining power, and invite the loved ones to come near, that you may feel their presence in your home. I have often found your sister Isabel with you, also Margaret, as I have been attracted there; but we are all more closely drawn to our own, for I visit my relations more than my friends.

I am happy in coming into communication to-day, for I have tried several times before. It is a pleasure and a privilege to communicate through this channel that we highly esteem, and we thank you from the depth of our souls, Mr. Chairman, and the guides upon the spirit side.

John Bidwell.

My home, Mr. Chairman, was in Windsor, Conn. My name is John Bidwell. I have made several attempts to speak in this meeting. I have been a silent listener, although very anxious to give out a few words that dear ones may know we live and have the power to come and speak with them if they will open a way for us to do so.

Sarah is with me. Mother is here, and the little one laid away so long ago is now grown in the spirit-life. I would not come back to stay, but have a strong desire to come and make them know that we live.

In Windsor, and even in Springfield, I know I shall be remembered. I have been in the hall many times, and once it was made known to mortals. I had often turned away disappointed because no one knew I was there. I think I shall be remembered in Chicopee, Mass. I have friends in different surroundings.

Sarah and myself are not together all the time; occasionally we drift away wherever an attraction draws us. A little time since I was speaking with John Taylor, and he remarked how strange it was that we could be around among the people and they know nothing of it. Earthly affairs take up their attention, and although they do not exactly forget us they seldom speak of us.

Sarah Lakey.

This is the first time I have gained control in public. My home was in Pawtucket, R. I., and my name Sarah Lakey. I would like to have this message reach Thomas Lakey, my husband, and if it does, he will see that the children know that mother has been able to manifest. I know it seemed a little strange to the children that mother should come and speak through a mediumistic channel, for when a mortal I could not get away from old theories and teachings of the church, neither did I wish to. I had heard many say that spirits returned to earth and conversed with their friends, but I shook my head quietly, thinking that would not be right.

When our child Jennie was taken out of the home it seemed hard to part with her, but I find now she has become a beautiful angel-spirit, and has been a great help to you and the dear children still in the mortal. Bennie is here to-day, and the little ones, Lizzie and Hattie. We are all here, for quite a number have passed on from five different homes. How beautiful it is to know that you will find all the children again.

Thomas, I know you have been lonely and saddened at times, but we will come near. We hear your voice even when you do not hear or see us. Tell Emily that Richard is progressing in spirit, although the parting was hard. Willie, be careful, for I know how weak in the physical you are. My dear children, when it is possible for you to come into communication with us privately, I would like you to do so.

Mary, you have a great deal of mediumistic power. Sit down in the home and see what we may give to you. It has been a comfort to you, children, to feel that mother was not far away.

I well understood of the visit father made you, John Thomas, and I know he enjoyed every moment. I am glad you all tried to make it so pleasant for him. A thin veil only divides us, but sit down by yourselves and talk with us. I send love and greetings to you all.

Mary Andrews.

My name is Mary Andrews, and my home was in Providence, R. I. Caroline has been here, also William, and they are so happy after leaving a message for their dear children and grandchildren! It is a benefit to spirits and mortals alike to commune together. We feel that we can progress faster by so doing. I have had permission twice before, but could not get control of the instrument until to-day. With the help of Caroline I find I have strength enough to say a few words. I trust this will be of benefit to some one in the mortal.

I passed away rather suddenly, but I found it was only a change. How little I understood, before passing out of the mortal, that I could even come back and say a few words. It is a privilege and a pleasure for us to be able to do this, hoping to cheer some poor saddened heart with the thought that their dear ones live and are able to come into communication with them.

Sarah E. Lyons.

My home was in Marshfield, Maine, and my name is Sarah E. Lyons. I have tried in your last three meetings, hoping, by the power I received from others, I might be able to speak to my dear children and tell them that we live and are able to visit them, and some of us come hourly. It is many years, according to mortal time, since the change came to me.

Lizzie, your darling bud blooms in heaven. Millie, I know you are doing a service for the dear ones, but when it is possible let us come into communication with you privately. Rest assured, dear children, I have been cognizant of what has transpired in your homes. I know it all! William, your father is here to-day, and your old grandmother Lyons. I think my children will understand when they come to see the message that it is from their own spirit mother, although many years have passed since they laid away the old form. I promise, Lizzie, that I will watch over the little bud and bring her to you often. When it is possible let us come into communication with you privately. Millie, I have met Jack; he is happy, and sends greetings to you. May the angels be your guardian spirits every day, is my prayer.

Margaret Splaine.

I have been in your meetings once before, and I asked at that time that the message might reach the dear ones. I feel that perhaps it was not understood. My name is Margaret Splaine; my home was in Boston. I wished the message might reach Henry, but as I never came into communication with him privately I thought perhaps he either did not wish to meddle with spirit affairs, or the message did not reach him. I know full well it is not because he has had no privileges. Living in these enlightened days, living where spirits come so often, I know there is a channel, or there might have been, through which he could have reached me. Not here at present, but there was at that period. He has made some changes since. This message, I think, will reach him through a kind and loving friend in the West. I hope so. I am attracted here so strongly to-day that I feel there is a purpose in it.

Report of Public Séance held June 15th, 1888.

Betsey Hatch.

My friends, some of them, are in Montville, Me., some in Belfast, some in Newton, and others scattered in different surroundings. I have often been in the meetings with the hope of sending a message to my dear children.

Jennie, how many times have you asked in your heart why mother does not make herself known. As one and another has been taken out of the homes, it has been hard to part with them. Dear child, I am often with you, and you do sometimes sense my presence; then again the world seems cold and desolate to you. You will want to know if I can tell you of Betsey. Yes; I have been to visit her, and Lucinda and Lois; and I do n't leave out Gardner, for I love each one of my children; but, Jennie, you know I cannot get so near to some as I can to you. Father is with me, also Charlie and Eva, yet not at all times, any more than they would be if in the form.

Samuel is here to-day, dear Jennie, and I address my conversation to you particularly, because I know you are in a position to see the paper, and will send it to the others. The angels be with you all; at last we shall be reunited in heaven. Betsey Hatch.

Carrie E. Marshall.

Four years ago I was able to give a few words in this place. At that time I asked that I might come into communication with Emma Stewart, but I have not been able to do it. Four years seems a long time in mortal life; it seems long to us as we come to earth, but not so in the spirit-life.

My name is Carrie E. Marshall. I know there are some in Boston who will remember me, for this was my home a part of the time. Emma has mediumistic powers which I think it right she should use for the benefit of others. I expressed my wish in this respect before, and I repeat it again to-day. Sit down in your little room, and see what we may be able to give you. You know not how much power we may have until we try to use it. It is a beautiful thought that we shall be together again. To us in the spirit-life this is knowledge. I am satisfied with my home, but am happy to know that progress is our watchword, and we have always something better to look forward to and work for. We are attracted to earth, for we have a mission here, a work to fulfill in connection with mortals. I have been glad many times to come into this circle-room, because I find here an atmosphere of harmony that is grateful to my spirit.

William S. Weymouth.

My home, Mr. Chairman, was at 24 Upton street, Boston, and my name is William S. Weymouth. I felt that perhaps I used the powers that were given me as fully as I could according to my knowledge, but I see now that in some periods of my life I might perhaps have done better. But it is not for us to look backward, but advance upward and onward, trying to bring encouragement to those who dwell in the flesh.

I feel that I shall be recognized by people in Portland, Me. We all like to feel that we are not forgotten. Father, mother and all are anxious to send messages to friends, but cannot speak at this time.

Go on and do what you can for one another; live not for self alone. This I would impress upon your minds. I would thank the friends who have brought the beautiful flowers here. I love the flowers, for they attract the dear spirits to earth, and we enjoy their sweet perfume. How beautiful are the flowers of the spirit-life! And the dear children, too, do much to make up our heaven.

Calvin Gilman.

My home, Mr. Chairman, was in Ogden, N. Y. Calvin Gilman. Maria is with me. I have tried at different times to control the medium in this meeting. I shall be remembered by some in Worcester, and also in Thetford, Vt., for I have relatives in Vermont, John and Salome. I have come many times, but you have not been aware of it. I am satisfied with the privileges given me, but as many obstacles come up in our way we cannot always improve them as we would like.

I would like my letter to reach Ogden, N. Y., as some parties there will know who I am. I am happy in my spirit-home, for I have joined those I love. Maria was called home quite a long time before I was, and I met her, and mother also, and how welcome they made me. Yet I found there was much for me to learn, for spirit-life has been truly termed a school.

Annie Barker.

Many long years, over forty, have passed since they said that Annie Barker was dead.

I have some dear friends still left in your city, Mr. Chairman. They will remember Jennie more fully than Annie. Jennie is a niece of mine, who passed out a few years ago, at the age of seventeen. I was but eighteen when I went up higher. Thirty or forty years, although they seem long to you people of earth, are but a little while compared to that eternity which stretches before us, and we who have passed on know that no more separations will come to loving hearts. As I enter into the surroundings of earth where the spirit is endeavoring to break loose from its tenement of clay, I see how the grief of friends trammels and holds it. Dear friends, when you know mortals must go, do not with sorrow make it so hard for the spirit to take its flight. Jennie is with me much of the time. I feel that this message will reach Mary Jane.

Edward Sargent.

The transition came to me in Chelsea, Mass., Mr. Chairman, but I did not go altogether as a stranger to an unknown country, for I had learned something of the Summer-Land. Father, mother, and the dear ones are with me in the spirit-home, and only one link is wanting—as a dear sister is left in the mortal.

How glad I was to hear the welcome sound to come up higher. I understood something of spirit return and communion when here, and to-day I love to step into your meetings. I loved the Lyceum then, and I love it now; a strong attraction draws and holds me there.

I am satisfied with my home, and yet I desire to make it brighter, for I believe in progression. To the dear one yet left, I would say that in all the trials that have come to you since we left you in the mortal, you have not been alone, for we often visit you in your home, and many times I find other dear ones there as I enter the room.

I would like Mary Jane to rest assured, as I know she does feel at times, that we do not leave or forsake her, for the trials have been many, the hardships have been great which she has been called to meet. I think I shall be remembered in Newburyport by some friends there.

I appreciate the privilege that has been granted me to-day, and I acknowledge it is a pleasure for me to speak a few words.

Minnie Dawson.

[To the Chairman:] Do you let little girls come? [Oh yes.] A gentleman said if I did n't hurry I could talk to you and you 'd have it all written down. I am Minnie Dawson. I lived away off in Logansport, Ind. I came one day when the other lady was here, but the gentleman said I must wait, so I s'pose I had to.

I want to tell you that when I went away I was a good deal smaller than I am now, 'cause I grow in the spirit. And I go to school. I want my mamma to know I come to her, and I've tried to make her feel me. She do n't know anything about our coming back, 'cause she thinks we 're all dead! I guess she thinks we 've gone to heaven. Well, this is heaven, only the gentleman tells us we can come and talk, if we do n't talk too fast. I was only just four when I went away. I want you to put that into the letter.

Oh! the pretty flowers! Aint they white?

I want you to put it into this letter that a lady who tells me to call her Aunt Margaret helped to bring me, 'cause one time she was in my mamma's home. Grandma Sager is here, too. Aint I a good scholar? I could spell her name, and the lady could n't. Sometime, if I can, I 'll bring you, oh! so many flowers, 'cause you wrote that down. But then you can't see 'em.

Emily Cilley.

My home was at Gold Hill, Nevada, a long way from here, as the gentleman tells me this is what you call Boston, or the "Hub." Yet to me it seems but a little space, as we reckon by space instead of time or miles, and we can come into your presence here so quickly. Then we can go speedily to the old home. Many of the dear ones are there. I feel I shall be remembered by some. Etta, I know you have often asked why we cannot all make ourselves known? All are given permission, but all cannot, under the conditions, take control.

I am glad to speak a few words, for I know, dear sir, this paper goes all over the land, and I feel it may reach some dear ones and give them to understand that a loving presence is near to help them. It will make their hearts lighter and cheer them on their way to know that Emily Cilley lives and is able to speak to them. I have been trying a number of different times to get control in your meetings. I have visited halls in Oakland, and have been in California, thinking that I might in some way reach my dear ones with the knowledge that I was not lost nor dead, but alive to all intents and purposes. I feel now that I have got into the right channel and that this message will be seen.

Jerusha A. Kesey.

My home was in Chelsea, Mass. My name, Jerusha A. Kesey. I think I am not forgotten by all. I understood something of this spirit communion, and it was a help to me when the angels came to bear my spirit onward. I found also comfort and enjoyment in the thought that we are permitted to live just in the edge of heaven while here, if we will. I find now that I did have glimpses of the sweet beyond. As we near the beautiful river how pleasant it is to know that the loved ones are waiting anxiously and looking for our coming.

As the spirit was taking its flight I realized the sorrow that came to those in the mortal, and I tried hard to bid them dry their tears, for I needed them not. Oh! it is a blessed happiness to enter into the reality of life beyond the veil.

I want to thank the dear friends who were so kind to me before I was called to part with the old form. Many came with a kind word, and as one and another gathered around me, it seemed sometimes as if there were more from the spirit side than in the mortal.

Lewis D. Whitney.

I would like to send a kind word to my late home in Warren, Vt., and to some in this vicinity that will, I think, understand who Lewis D. Whitney is. Sarah is with me, and so is Eliza. I have been very anxious that they might know in the old home that we have not forgotten them, neither have we gone so far away that we cannot return to earth.

To-day I feel the power much stronger, and I think this will reach many friends in Vermont. I am happy to be able to speak. I must acknowledge that I was agreeably surprised in finding the spirit-life so much more beautiful than I had ever thought it might be; although I understood something of spirit communion, I knew nothing comparatively of the realities of life beyond the grave.

I would not like to return to earth and take up my abode, but I would love to come into communication with some of my dear ones privately, for many things come into the mind of a spirit which should not be publicly given, for we feel delicate about speaking as we would like to. I know they would ask me if I know of some changes that have been made since I left the mortal form. I understand all, while I am with you in the earth-life, but when in the spirit home we are not cognizant of what is taking place on earth. Yet as we come to you, we perceive changes that have been made during our absence.

If we were to take all earthly affairs back with us, where would be our heaven? We 'd have none, any more than you have here. No; we come into sympathy with you while we are here; when we leave you we leave the things of earth behind.

We would not wish to trouble you in any way by saying that we are unhappy when we come to earth and see the wrongs that come up, but we must say that we do feel unhappy just while we are with you if you are so, and if you are happy we are.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

June 15.—Alfred Twiss; Carrie Matthews; Sallie Griffith; John Wilson; John Hitchcock; Georgie Adams.

June 22.—Jennie E. Wright; George H. Stevens; John Metcalf; Hannah Reed; Eddie Roberts; Julia Ann Clark; John Metcalf; Hattie Nelley; Ann M. Grout; Capt. Ezekiel Tatem; Sargent Currier; William Mattoon; George Ramsden; Addison Rynes; Annie Burbank.

THE MESSAGES ON HAND,

Not mentioned above, will appear in due course.

WARNER'S LOG CABIN REMEDIES.—"Sarsaparilla," "Cough and Consumption Remedy"—"Hops and Buchu"—"Extract"—"Hair Tonic"—"Liver Pills"—"Plasters," (Porous-Electrical)—"Rose Cream," for Catarrh. They are, like Warner's "Tippecanoe," the simple, effective remedies of the old Log Cabin days.

Advertisements.

MAGNETIC SHIELDS.

THE following characteristic letter, from the pen of Lyman C. Howe, the veteran speaker and writer for the noble cause of Spiritualism, speaks for itself. Mr. Howe has worn our Shields for more than five years, and has had large experience with them among his friends. The readers of THE BANNER have implicit confidence in the integrity and good judgment of Mr. Howe. He always writes and speaks what he knows to be TRUE. Write him for further evidence about our Shields, and he will give his experience:

DR. THACHER:

Dear Sir—Your Magnetic Shields have some merit, but on the whole I am inclined to call them a fraud. They soothe and vitalize the nerves, put new life into the blood, warm cold feet, build up the debilitated and consumptive, create a row among the old sinners in the constitution, and keep stirring them until they enter upon a war of extermination, or commit suicide to escape; put neuralgia and rheumatism hors du combat, make a weak man vigorous and saucy and cure family quarrels where they originate in bad blood or depraved nerves; but they do n't mend cork legs nor glass eyes, nor cure warts on an evil temper. They should be a specific for total depravity, alcoholism, and especially for debilitated pocketbooks. Here is where they fail. If you can improve them so that you can guarantee a perfect cure for financial ills, consumptive bank accounts and religious hydrophobia, your fortune is made. Then, as your best advertising card, I would advise you to cover the Brooklyn Tabernacle and its pastor, and if you cure him you need waste no more printer's ink.

Yours for health, LYMAN C. HOWE,
Fredonia, N. Y.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD COMPANY,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.
Jy7 13w*

DR. F. L. H. WILLIS

May be Addressed until further notice,
Clenora, Yates Co., N. Y.

DR. WILLIS may be addressed as above. From this point he can attend to the diagnosing of disease psychometrically. He claims that his powers in this line are unrivaled, combining, as he does, accurate scientific knowledge with keen and searching psychometric power.

Dr. Willis claims especial skill in treating all diseases of the blood and nervous system. Cancers, Scrofula in all its forms, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and all the most delicate and complicated diseases of both sexes.

Dr. Willis is permitted to refer to numerous parties who have been cured by his system of practice when all others had failed. All letters must contain a return postage stamp. Send for Circulars, with References and Terms.

Jy7 13w*

DR. J. R. NEWTON

STILL heals the sick! Spirit, Mind and Magnetic Cures at a distance through MRS. NEWTON. Send for testimonials to MRS. J. R. NEWTON, P. O. Station G., New York City. 13w* Jy7

SOUL READING,

Or Psychometrical Delineation of Character.

MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE would respectfully announce to the public that those who wish, and will visit her in person, or send their autograph or lock of hair, she will give an accurate description of their leading traits of character and peculiarities of disposition; naked leanings past and future life; physical disease, with prescription therefor; what business they are best adapted to pursue in order to be successful; the physical and mental adaptation of those intending marriage; and hints to the inharmoniously married. Full delineation, $2.00, and four 2-cent stamps. Brief delineation, $1.00, and four 2 cent stamps.

Address, MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE,
Centre street, between Church and Prairie streets,
Ap7 6m* White Water, Walworth Co., Wis.

ASTONISHING OFFER.

SEND three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power. DR. A. B. DOBSON Maquoketa, Iowa.
Jy14 13w*

A Wonderful Discovery.

BY a Clairvoyant. Melted Pebble Spectacles will restore lost vision. Send a 2-cent stamp for valuable information. Address B. F. POOLE, Optician, Clinton, Iowa. 4w* S8

Sealed Letters Answered

BY MRS. ELIZA A. MARTIN, Oxford, Mass. Terms $1.00 and two 2-cent stamps. 4w* S8

SEALED LETTERS.

ELEANOR MARTIN now makes specialty of business, at $5.00. Full Spiritual Message, $2.00. 73 Lane Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Register all letters. 4w* Au25

MRS. R. T. CLANEY,

BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 411 Lookout street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6m* Je23

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSSE will remove to the country for a while, where she will continue to give Life Readings for $1.00 and stamp, and answer six questions for 50 cents and stamp. Disease a specialty. Address West Garland, Me.
S15 2w*

The Writing Planchette.

SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. Those unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been attained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practice in writing mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes," which may be consulted on all questions, as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.

DIRECTIONS.—Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board; in a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let two try it together. If nothing happens the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.

The Planchette is furnished complete with box, pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.

PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 60 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

DR. RHODES' FAMILY MEDICINES.

Purely Vegetable

(ALL SUGAR-COATED)

Medical Confections.

A Universal Blessing.

SUITED TO OLD OR YOUNG!

A PERFECT Liver and Kidney Renovator and Blood Purifier. Cleanses the entire system from all Biliousness and Blood Poisons from Malaria, etc. And cures Headache, Backache, Side and Stomach-ache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pains in the Limbs, Lameness, Numbness, Constipation, Piles, Worms, Dyspepsia, Consumption, Nervousness, Weakness, Kidney and Bladder, and all other urinary ailments, etc. Also, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and in fact almost all the various ailments of humanity.

PRICES: Trial box, 25 cents—by mail, 30 cents; second size, 50 cents—by mail, 55 cents; 12 boxes second size, $5.00; large boxes, $1.00; six large boxes, $5.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Spiritual Workers.

Photographed from Crayon Portraits

BY ALBERT MORTON.

Additions to this List of Portraits are being Drawn.

DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.
PASCHAL BEVERLY RANDOLPH.
CHARLES H. FOSTER.
CHARLES H. FOSTER and SPIRIT ADAH ISAAC'S MENKEN, after Spirit Photograph by W. H. Mumler.
PROF. ROBERT HARE.
PROF. WILLIAM DENTON.
DR. H. F. GARDNER.

Cabinet size. Price 50 cents each.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GARLAND'S Vegetable Cough Drops.

THE greatest known remedy for all Throat and Lung Complaints. For Catarrh, Asthma, etc., etc., it has no equal. It is warranted to cure Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, and Inflammation of the Lungs. It is free from all opiates and minerals, or any other injurious ingredient; and is therefore harmless in all cases; likewise palatable and beneficial in regulating and strengthening the system; and as a BLOOD PURIFIER IS TRULY UNRIVALLED. A box, taken according to directions, is warranted in all cases to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded by the proprietor, DR. M. H. GARLAND, 498 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

Price, per box (one-fourth pound), 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PATENT OFFICE,

28 SCHOOL STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

BROWN BROTHERS, SOLICITORS.

BROWN BROTHERS have had a professional experience of fifteen years. Send for pamphlet of instructions.
Ap14 oam

DIAGNOSIS FREE.

SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M. D., Principal, Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich. 1m* S1

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,

Developing and Business Medium,

ALSO

Clairvoyant Physician,

474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,

(Corner of Concord street.)

Sittings daily from 9 A. M. till 5 P. M. Price $1.00.

Unequalled Advantages.

DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.

Development of Mediumship a Specialty.

SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $4.00 IN ADVANCE.

CIRCLES.

Sunday, at 11 A. M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P. M., for Psychometry, Tests and Inspirational Music. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf S1

J. W. FLETCHER,

MEDICAL AND BUSINESS MEDIUM,

ALSO ELECTRICIAN AND MAGNETIST,

6 Beacon street, Boston.

S8 tf

HATTIE C. STAFFORD

WILL give seances at No. 55 Rutland street Sundays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 2:30 P. M.; also Sundays and Wednesdays at 8 P. M.

S8 tf GEORGE T. ALBRO, MANAGER.

Something New and Pleasing.

WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1.00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m S1

MISS HELEN A. SLOAN,

MAGNETIC Physician. Vapor and Medicated Baths. Celebrated "Acid Cure." Office hours from 9 A. M. to 8 P. M. 171 Tremont street, corner Mason street, Boston.
S8 4w*

MISS A. PEABODY,

MEDICAL, Business and Test Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday, Thursday evenings, and Tuesday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Magnetic and Electric Treatments. 1 Bennet street, corner Washington, Boston. 1w* S15

MRS. L. M. CARTER,

PROPHETIC and Symbolic Readings by lock of hair or small article, also sex, by letter only, 50 cents. 6 Garland street, Boston. 2w* S8

MISS L. E. SMITH,

MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P. M. 14 Union Park street, Boston
S15 1w*

Massage and Magnetism.

MRS. DR. E. M. FAXON, 22 Winter street, Room 7A, Boston. Obesity treated. Also instruction given.
S1 10w*

MRS. A. FORRESTER

WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. 181 Shawmut Avenue, one flight, Boston. Do not ring. 1w* S15

MRS. ALDEN,

TRANCE MEDIUM. Medical Examinations and Magnetic Treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston.
S15 5w*

MISS L. M. WHITING, Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, and stiffness of limbs from sprains or breaks, is the most successful in use. Hotel Rutland, 701 Tremont street, Suite 4.
Au4 12w*

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter address for personal treatment or his powerful Spirit Magnetized Paper, during the summer months, 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Two packages by mail, $1.00.
Jy7 13w*

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 6 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment. Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Colorado Sulphur Baths.
S15 1w*

MRS. HATTIE YOUNG,

TRANCE and Business Medium, 22 Winter street, Room 16, Boston. 4w* S8

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, 48 Winter street, Room 11. 8w* Au4

MISS L. BARNICOAT, Medical, Test and Business Medium. Lectures followed by Tests and Psychometry. 175 Tremont street, Room 10, Boston.
Jy7 8w*

MRS. DR. JULIA CRAFTS SMITH gives medical examinations free every Thursday from 9 to 5. Office, Hotel "Cabe," 8 Appleton street, Boston.
My19 eow10*

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 8½ Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), Room 4, Boston, Mass. Office hours, from 1 to 4 P. M.
Jy7 26w*

MISS C. W. KNOX, Test, Business and Medical Medium. Examinations by letter. Enclose lock of hair. 31 East Springfield street, Boston. 1w* S15

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. 8w* Au4

J. A. SHELHAMER,

MAGNETIC HEALER,

Office 8½ Bosworth Street, (Room 5,) Boston, Mass.,

WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases. Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription and advice, $2.00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1.00 per package. Healing by rubbing and laying on of hands. Parties wishing consultation by letter must be particular to state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Kidney, or Strengthening and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1.00.

Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.—except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he attends out-of-town patients. Letter address care of BANNER OF LIGHT. 13w* Jy7

Works by A. E. Newton.

THE MINISTRY OF ANGELS REALIZED. A Letter to the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston, 1853, giving an account of the author's conversion to Spiritualism. With an Appendix containing facts illustrative of Angelic Ministry, and a Reply to the Congregationalist. Pamphlet, 72 pages, 15 cents, postage 2 cents; eight copies, $1.00.

ANSWER TO CHARGES preferred by the Church, with Account of Trial. Pamphlet, 36 pages, 10 cents.

LESSONS FOR CHILDREN, on Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene. Cloth, 141 pages, 50 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE BETTER WAY, an Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a Wiser Parentage. Pamphlet, 48 pages, 25 cents.

THE MODERN BETHESDA, or, The Gift of Healing Restored, being an Account of the Life and Labors of DR. J. R. NEWTON, Healer, with a fine Portrait. Also containing Observations on the Nature and Source of the Healing Power, the History and Conditions of its Exercise, etc. Cloth, 322 pages, octavo, $2.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

In Re Dr. Talmage.

A Synopsis of a Discourse by the Guides of

MRS. R. S. LILLIE.

Delivered in Berkeley Hall, Boston, Sunday Morning, May 6th, 1888, in Answer to the Recent Attack on Modern Spiritualism by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn.

Also Excerpts from a Letter by "Eleanor Kirk."

The above have been published by COLBY & RICH in four-page tract form, and should be extensively circulated. Price by mail, 5 copies 5 cents; 15 do., 10c.; 30 do., 15c.

Miscellaneous.

NEW MUSIC.

BY C. P. LONGLEY.

"ONLY A THIN VEIL BETWEEN US." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"WHEN THE DEAR ONES GATHER AT HOME." Song and Chorus. Words and Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"HOME OF MY BEAUTIFUL DREAMS." Song and Chorus. Words by Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"CHILD OF THE GOLDEN SUNSHINE." Song and Chorus. Words by Eben E. Rexford; Music by C. P. Longley. Price 25 cents.

"GOD, HOME AND NATIVE LAND." A National Temperance Ode. Words by Mary L. Sherman. Music by C. Payson Longley. Price 5 cents.

Beautiful Home of the Soul	25 cents.
Come in thy Beauty, Angel of Light	25 "
I am Going to my Home	25 "
In Heaven We 'll Know Our Own	25 "
Love's Golden Chain	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Over There	25 "
The City Just Over the Hill	25 "
The Golden Gates are Left Ajar	25 "
Two Little Shoes and a Ringlet of Hair	25 "
We 'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land	25 "
Our Beautiful Home Above	25 "
We 're Coming, Sister Mary	25 "
Gathering Flowers in Heaven	25 "
Who Sings My Child to Sleep?	25 "
Oh! Come, for my Poor Heart is Breaking	25 "
Once it was Only Soft Blue Eyes	25 "

☞ The above songs are in Sheet Music. Single copies 25 cents; 5 copies for $1.00.

We 'll All Meet Again in the Morning Land (with portrait of Annie Lord Chamberlain) ..... 35 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Dr. Hardcastle's TOOTH-LIFE.

A Delightful Tooth-Powder.

THIS Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.

Of the four pages printed matter accompanying each box of "Tooth-Life" old Dr. Blankman, after reading it, made this remark: "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."

The proprietor says: "As a Spiritualist from my youth, I say in all conscience, no person can fail to find in the box of 'Tooth-Life' and four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of an experience as an American dentist and student dating from 1860, of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth-preservative measures taught alone are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."

Put up in a neat box. Sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"Glad Tidings of Immortality."

FINELY executed lithographs bearing the above title have been received by us. The size is 22½x28½. The principal figure is a female, evidently designed to represent a materialized spirit, crowned with a wreath of flowers, and bearing a long band of them in her left hand, while in her right is a scroll inscribed with the words "Message of Love." Over her head are three stars. The drapery on each side appears to be the curtains of a cabinet, between which she stands in an exceedingly graceful position, suggestive of the line, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." From above a ray of light radiates over the entire form. Vignette likenesses of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Lillie and Mrs. Britten, and Messrs. Howell and Colville, are given, and excellent ones they are. The artist is Mr. Shobe, who, we are informed, has executed many beautiful drawings illustrative of the Spiritual Philosophy.

Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.

I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.

I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters from the above data. Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions. In accordance with my understanding of the science, my fee of $1, Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.

Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. Jy19

New and Enlarged Edition.

The Spiritual Wreath,

A NEW COLLECTION OF WORDS AND MUSIC

FOR THE

Choir, Congregation and Social Circle.

BY S. W. TUCKER.

CONTENTS:

Angels, Come to Me.	Shall We Know Each Other There?
Angel Presence.	The Happy By-and-Bye.
Beautiful Isle.	The Soul's Destiny.
Come Angels.	The Angel of His Presence.
Compensation.	There Is No Death.
Day by Day.	They Still Live.
Going Home.	The Better Land.
Guardian Angels.	The Music of Our Hearts.
Home of Rest.	The Freeman's Hymn.
Hope for the Sorrowing.	The Vanished.
Humility.	They will Meet Us on the Shore.
Happy Thoughts.	The Eden Above.
He 's Gone.	The Other Side.
I 'm Called to the Better Land.	Will You Meet Me Over There?
I Thank Thee, oh, Father.	Who Will Guide My Spirit Home?
Jubilate.	Whisper Us of Spirit Life.
My Spirit Home.	Waiting On This Shore.
Nearer Home.	Waiting 'Mid the Shadows.
Over There.	Welcome Home.
Passed On.	Welcome Angels.
Reconciliation.	We Long to be There.
Repose.
She Has Crossed the River.
Strike your Harps.
Some Day of Days.

NEW PIECES.

Bethany.	Ready to Go.
By Love We Arise.	Sweet Rest at Home.
Gone Before.	They 're Calling Us over the Sea.
Gone Home.	We 'll Know Each Other There.
Invocation Chant.	We 'll Meet Them By-and-Bye.
I Shall Know His Angel Name.	Will Bloom Again.
Nearing the Goal.	When Earthly Labors Close.
No Weeping There.
Our Home Beyond the River.
Parting Hymn.
Rest on the Evergreen Shore.

Boards. Price: Single copies, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50. (A few copies of old edition at 25 cents per copy, or twelve copies for $2.50.)

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Second Edition,

The First Edition having been closed out within a few weeks from date of issue.

THE

HIDDEN WAY Across the Threshold;

OR,

THE MYSTERY WHICH HATH BEEN HIDDEN FOR AGES AND FROM GENERATIONS.

An Explanation of the Concealed Forces in Every Man to Open the Temple of the Soul and to Learn

The Guidance of the Unseen Hand.

Illustrated and made plain with as few Occult phrases as possible.

BY J. C. STREET, A. B. N.,

Fellow of the Order S. S. S. and of the Brotherhood Z.Z. R.R. Z.Z.

A wonderful book. Boston Traveller.

Surely nothing could be more absorbingly important.—New York Graphic.

That it is the result of most diligent study and research, and comes from no ordinary hand, is amply proved by a perusal of its pages.—Boston Budget.

The moral teachings are of the highest possible order.—Alta Californian.

This book will be admitted to be a remarkable production. There is surpassing beauty and benefit in the author's conceptions of the motives of human conduct, death and the future life.—Boston Globe.

The chapter which deals with Mind-Cure, Metaphysics and Mental Healing, is one of the brightest and most exhaustive essays on Mind-Cure which has ever been written.—Buffalo Times.

Price $3.50, postage 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.

LOVE AND ITS HIDDEN HISTORY,

AND

The Master Passion.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

A book for men, women, husbands, wives—the loving and the unloved. In this curious and rarely original book the author offers to the public a powerful argument in favor of love, the great passion that rules the world; and he sets forth its manifold charms and necessities in a perfectly irresistible manner, though with keen wisdom and wonderful tact.

Two volumes in one. Price $2.50, postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STRANGE VISITORS: A Series of Original Papers, embracing Philosophy, Science, Government, Religion, Poetry, Art, Fiction, Satire, Humor, Narrative and Prophecy. By the Spirits of Irving, Willis, Thackeray, Beauté, Richter, Byron, Humboldt, Hawthorne, Wesley, Browning, and others now dwelling in the Spirit-World. By MRS. SUSAN G. HORN.

Among the essays contained in it may be found: Preëxistence and Prophecy, Life and Marriage in the Spirit-Land, Predictions of Earthquakes, Causes of Insanity, Apparitions, The Mormons, Invisible Influences, Locality of the Spirit-World, Drama and Painting there, etc., etc., etc.

Cloth, price $1.50; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New York Advertisements.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

304 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, successfully treats all forms of Chronic Disease, however complicated. Patients afflicted for years, regarded as hopeless, or incurable, testify to permanent restoration. For twenty years his power to diagnose and treat Disease has been and still stands unequaled, so say eminent Scientists, Physicians, Clergymen, and patients from all parts of the country. Voluminous testimony can be seen at his office. Those unable to visit the Doctor in person can be successfully treated at their homes. Send stamp for Circular. Diagnosis, with advice, $2.00.

Extract from a letter by Rev. F. R. M., D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I am happy to testify to Dr. Dake's high moral character as a man, and his eminent ability as a physician who has achieved a most extraordinary career."

Jy1 tf

MRS. C. M. SAWYER,

MATERIALIZING MEDIUM,

No. 785 Sixth Avenue.

SEANCES Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. 1w* S15

Mrs. Stoddard-Gray and Son, DeWitt C. Hough,

HOLD Materializing Seances every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday evening, 8 o'clock; Tuesday and Saturday, 2 o'clock, at 323 W. 34th street, New York. Daily Sittings for Communication and Business. 1w* S8

MARY C. MORRELL, Business, Prophetic and Developing Medium, 230 West 36th street, New York City. 10w* Au25

MRS. C. SCOTT, Trance and Business Medium. Sittings 10 to 5. No. 21 West 13th street, N. Y.
Au11 10w*

A LIBERAL OFFER,

BY A RELIABLE CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER.

SEND four 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name, age and sex, we will diagnose your case FREE by independent spirit-writing. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Canton, N. Y.
Au11 13w*

RUPTURES

CURED in thirty days by my MEDICAL COMPOUND and improved ELASTIC SUPPORTER TRUSS. Send Stamp for Circular. Address CAPT. W. A. COLLINGS, Smithville, Jefferson Co., N. Y. (Mention this paper.) 13w* Au4

Clairvoyant Examinations Free.

ENCLOSE lock of hair, with leading symptoms. We will give you a correct diagnosis of your case. Address E. F. BUTTERFIELD, M. D., corner Warren and Fayette streets, Syracuse, New York. 26w* Ja28

The Weekly Discourse;

Containing the Spiritual Sermons by the guides of

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND.

VOLUME III.

No. 1.—THE THREE M'S: MAMMON, MILLIONAIRES AND MURDER.
No. 2.—A LEAP IN THE DARK.
No. 3.—WHAT RELIGION IS BEST FOR MANKIND?
No. 4.—IDEAL SOCIALISM: HOW DOES IT COMPARE WITH CHRISTIANITY AND SPIRITUALISM?
No. 5.—THE IMPORT OF THE DAY.
No. 6.—ANCIENT AND MODERN MIRACLES.
No. 7.—THE JUDGMENT DAY.
No. 8.—THE POWER OF PRAYER.
No. 9.—THE NATURE OF SPIRITUALISM: IN ANSWER TO THE WORLD'S NEEDS.
No. 10. THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE WORLD.
No. 11. THE POPE, THE PROPAGANDA.
No. 12.—THE BETRAYERS OF SPIRITUALISM.
No. 13.—THE HEIGHT, THE DEPTH AND THE BREADTH OF SPIRITUAL TRUTH.
No. 14. SOME APPROPRIATE ANSWERS TO SUPERFICIAL QUESTIONS.
No. 15.—A LEAF FROM THE BOOK OF THE FUTURE.
No. 16.—A CORRECT STATEMENT OF THE NATURE OF SPIRIT-LIFE: ITS EMPLOYMENTS AND PURSUITS.
No. 17.—WHAT OF THE NIGHT?
No. 18. LIVES THAT WERE EPITOMIZED.
No. 19.—WHY DOES MAN CLAIM IMMORTALITY?
No. 20.—WHAT IS THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE TEXT, "IN MY FATHER'S HOUSE ARE MANY MANSIONS"?
No. 21.—MODERN SPIRITUALISM AND PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY IDENTICAL.
No. 22. WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OCCULTISM, THEOSOPHY AND SPIRITUAL SCIENCE?
No. 23. THE PRACTICAL AND THE IDEAL IN HUMAN LIFE AND IN SPIRITUALISM.
No. 24.—THE RELATION OF SPIRITUALISM TO THE RELIGION, THE POLITICS, THE SOCIETY, AND THE SCIENCE OF TO-DAY.
No. 25.—THE DEWY CROSS; OR, THE ROSICRUCIAN'S DREAM.
No. 26. "FOR BEHOLD I SHOW YOU A MORE EXCELLENT WAY."

Price 5 cents each.

Single copies of any numbers of Volumes I. and II. will also be supplied at 5 cents each.

Also The Weekly Discourse, containing fifty-two numbers in each volume, handsomely bound in Half Roan, Gold Ruled.

VOL. I.....$3.00. VOL. II.....$3.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THOUGHTS FROM THE INNER LIFE.

The contents of this book consist of nearly one hundred communications on an equal number of subjects relating to life in the spirit-world, selected from those received during eight years at private circles held at the residence of Mr. D. E. Bailey, Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Swain of that city being the medium. They were given by what is termed the "independent," or direct voice of the spirits. At the sittings the medium was not unconscious; when the spirit friends began to speak, the company, including the medium, conversed with them the same as with another. A volume might be filled with accounts of Mr. Bailey's wonderful experiences at these sittings; but he chooses to place the communications before the public with as little comment as possible, in the hope that their readers may find in them strength for the weak, consolation for the sorrowing, and unquestionable assurance of the existence of a life beyond the present for all.

One vol., octavo, pp. 224, with portrait, elegantly printed and bound. Price, cloth, $1.25, postage 10 cents; paper, 75 cents, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

TWELFTH EDITION.

THE VOICES.

BY WARREN SUMNER BARLOW.

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes.

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality of Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF PRAYER enforces the

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1888.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

THE BANNER OF LIGHT to-day makes its advent in a splendid new suit, and it reads just as well as it looks. Don't you think so, dear friends? "Yes, indeed!" we seem to hear you say. All which signifies that industry and honesty of purpose eventually succeed when a lack of them often fails.

The Jewish New Year, A. M. 5649, began on the evening of Wednesday, Sept. 5th, and was observed all over the known world. Special services lasting thirty days are to be held in its honor. During this festival every Jewish place of worship is crowded to its utmost capacity. This year being regarded the eight hundred and seventh Sabbatical year "since the creation," it is a year of release. In former times, at Jerusalem, all foreclosures on real estate were redeemable at this period.

Robert Harding, a young English Socialist, when he wants to make a speech on the streets or public square padlocks himself with a chain to an iron fence or similar fixture. Then when the police come to take him they have to spend a long time in getting him unfastened, and he can make a pretty long speech before he is carried off.

THE UNION OF SOULS.

Genuine love is an excellent thing,
It to the front affection doth bring;
And hearts thus united no mortal can sever—
A union so holy abideth forever.
'T is nature itself, with no grain of alloy,
The soul of creation, which never can cloy;
'T is the Alpha, Omega (beginning and end),
And doth with the godhead eternally blend.
Like angelic music, so sweet to the soul,
Love keeps the rude passions in perfect control.
When earth's mission is finished, by heaven's behest
We lay down the mortal and unite with the blest.

L. C.

[RIGHT ENOUGH.]—The Sioux refuse to sign the treaty. They say the Government should give them what it now owes them before asking for more.—Pipe of Peace.

N. H. R. Dawson, United States Commissioner of Education, in his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior, says that more than 12,000,000 of children attended public schools some part of the last fiscal year, and of those nearly 8,000,000 were in average daily attendance. In both respects the Southern States have made greater progress than other parts of the country. The private and incorporated schools, colleges and universities show, in general, a marked advance in prosperity.

A YOUTHFUL OPINION.—"When I grow up," said a little six-year-old philosopher, "sha'n't I feel strange for a day or two!"—Sussex (Eng.) Courier.

Mr. W. C. Tallman, the New England agent of the Grand Trunk Railway, is a vegetarian. His diet has not given him abundance of flesh, but it evidently has endowed him with plenty of energy, strength and health, and a supply of good nature, says the Boston Evening Record: He is quiet, modest, and of a literary turn of mind, has already given to the world several novels, and, according to the whisperings among his associates, is about to launch upon the sea of fame another venture of the same character.

The little ocean-wanderer, Dark Secret (from Boston for England), before reported as lost, has recently been spoken more than half way to Europe, and perhaps the adventurous Capt. Andrews will "make it" yet.

Those who are interested in the political candidates the present year are informed by American Notes and Queries that Cleveland is a corruption of Cliffland, so called from its situation in a steep, rocky locality. Thurman is from Thor, the Saxon god, and man. Its figurative meaning is one having the strength and wisdom of Thor. Harrison means Henry's son or Harry's son. It is identical in meaning with Harris and Herries. Morton is a local name, from the parish of Morton in Nithsdale, Dumfrieshire, Scotland. Mor, in the Gaelic, signifies big, great; and ton is from dun, a hill. Morton, the big or great hill.

WAITING.

The world is strong with a mighty hope
Of a good time yet to be,
And carefully casts the horoscope
Of her future destiny;
And poet and prophet, and priest and sage,
Are watching with anxious eyes
To see the light of that promised age
On the waiting world arise!

—The (N. Y.) Standard.

An "inch of rain" really signifies the distribution of a gallon of water over a surface of nearly two square feet—or a fall of about one hundred tons on an acre of ground.

Hear the verbal protestations of all men: nothing so certain as their religious tenets. Examine their lives; you will scarcely think they repose the smallest confidence in them.—David Hume.

A farmer writes to an agricultural paper, asking "How to make fence-posts last?" and the editor wisely restrains an impulse to tell him to make the fence-rails first.

We were born to serve, and when we serve others we serve God. The flush on that woman's cheek as she bends over the hot stove is as sacred in God's sight as the flush on the cheek of one who, on a hot day, preaches the gospel. We may serve God with plate and cutlery and broom as certain as we can serve him with psalm-book and liturgy.—Bishop Butler.

DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES has scored another birthday, and he has now entered upon his eightieth year. The Autocrat has discovered that he was born in the same year with Gladstone and Tennyson, not to mention other distinguished men like Darwin, Cavour and Lincoln, who long since ended their life's journey.

Street-Car Conductor (to countryman): "If you saw him picking the gentleman's pocket, why did n't you interfere, instead of letting him get away?" Countryman—"I saw that sign up there: 'Beware of Pickpockets,' and I was just afraid to."

COMFORTING.—Little Girl—"What is the matter, little boy?" Little Boy—"I 'm crying because my mamma has just gone to heaven." Little Girl—"Oh! but p'r'aps she has n't!"—Time.

At the International Congress of Spiritualists to be held in Barcelona, Spain, this month, Viscount Torres Solanot will preside. M. Flammarion, the French astronomer, William Crookes, F. R. S., the distinguished chemist, and other prominent scientists will attend.

Multitudes do not believe in vaccination. Nay, more, they abhor it. It does not prevent smallpox. The vaccinated have smallpox, like the unvaccinated, and die of smallpox. The majority of patients in every hospital are vaccinated. In towns where the inhabitants refuse to be vaccinated there is less smallpox than in towns where all are vaccinated. The only sure preventive of smallpox is cleanliness without and within.—William White, Author of Story of a Great Delusion.

After all the clerks and operatives of a sewing machine establishment in Florida had deserted on account of terror of yellow fever, one woman returned and advertised that she would fill all orders promptly. There seems to be heroism in the South as well as in a Western blizzard.

A French inventor, M. Pagan, has discovered a way to stop the headway of a steamer in short order, and consequently lessen considerably the dangers of collision at sea. The machine consists of a number of parachutes, so placed that they can be tossed overboard readily and towed by a cable. The resistance, without being great enough to produce a shock, rapidly overcomes the headway of the vessel. An attempt in the same direction, but on a different plan, was made some fifteen years or more ago in Boston harbor, two appliances operating upon hinges being attached to a vessel's stern, near the foot of the rudder post, in such manner that being disengaged by the crew, they would fly outward at right angles, forming a flange on each side of the keel, and so reducing the speed by this "hold-back" on the water — but we believe that like the first attempts at an "air brake" upon the steam-cars on land, the shock produced by their use on the moving mass was too sudden and violent for safety.

THE LAW OF THE LIPS.

Speak kindly to thy fellow-man,
Lest he depart while yet
Thy bitter accents wring his heart,
And make his eyelid wet.

Speak tenderly to him: for he
Has woe enough to bear;
He may be weak and often bend
Beneath some hidden care.

Speak lovingly to him: he is
A brother of thine own;
He well may claim thy sympathies
Who 's bone of thine own bone.

Speak unto him as thou wouldst have
Thy brother speak to thee;
For thou art to all men akin,
Whoever thou mayst be.

—Thomas Mackellar.

One of the United States signal service men says that the atmospheric conditions this year are identical with those which preceeded the dark day of '81, and he is confident that there will be a recurrence of the phenomenon this year.——Gen. Greely threatens to discontinue the Mt. Washington station in the winter season, unless the corps is voted more funds.

Mr. David Drew of Plymouth, Mass., planted last spring some corn taken from a mummy exhumed in Egypt and estimated to be 4000 years old. The stalks are now about six to six and a half feet high. The leaves alternate on the stalk like common corn, and have the white mid-rib of sweet corn; but the product of the plant is the most singular part of it, for, instead of growing in an ear like modern corn, there is a heavy cluster of small twigs in place of the spindle, which hangs downward from its weight, and each twig is thickly studded with kernels, each of which is in a separate husk.

A reception was tendered our Lake Pleasant reporter, Mr. J. M. Young, at that place, and a valuable Waltham gold watch presented to him to keep time for another season at the same sort of work in which he has been heretofore engaged. He is a Young and very active man, and we are pleased to learn that his heart has been made glad by a golden gift.

Know ye this, that never yet
Share of truth was vainly set
In the world's wide fallow;
After-hands shall sow the seed,
After-hands from hill and mead
Reap the harvest yellow.

Miss Heldja Oleson, of Manistee, Mich., was booked for a voyage to the old country in the Geiser, recently sunk by the Thingvalla. Just before she was to start the young lady was overcome by a singular dread, and she told her friends. They laughed at her, but urged her not to go. Miss Oleson went to the steamboat pier with her trunks, but there the feeling overcame her, she abandoned the voyage, and preserved her life.

The first type that was ever set by an Indian compositor was by Naticka, at Cambridge, Mass., on John Eliot's Indian translation of the Bible.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—The American comedy, "A Possible Case," has made a success, and, being played by a fine company, admirably trained, goes off with splendid animation and smoothness. It will remain no longer than this week and next. This comedy is well worth seeing.

Farmer—"Well, what do you want?"
Tramp—"Something to eat."
F.—Saw that pile of wood and I 'll give you enough to eat that 'll last a week."
T.—"Me saw that wood! me, a gentleman of leisure! Not if I know myself." Exit.

It has come out at last that the terrible yellow fever scourge in Jacksonville is attributable to the fact of the filthy condition of the streets and alleys of that city. Had the authorities there attended to the matter last winter, as Northerners advised them to do, no fever epidemic would have existed at this time. Cleanliness is health. Filthiness is death! Bear this fact in mind. But aid the sufferers all the same.

Pug dogs were first introduced into England from China in the reign of William III.

Jo Cose says that when "the course of true love" don't "run smooth," the parties most interested should grease the wheels.

The Boston Journal says Jordan, Marsh & Co. have inaugurated a "new gentlemen's section" to their establishment. We should like to see a new gentleman—he must be a rara avis.

I saw a cow-slip through the fence,
A house-fly in a store;
I saw a wood-chuck up the road,
And a stone-pick on the floor.

The physician of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe entertains no hope of her recovery, the disease of which she is afflicted being sub-acute meningitis. She has been taken to Hartford, Ct., from Maine.

Dr. Donald Kennedy of the Roxbury District, arrived at this port, on the Scythia, from Liverpool, Saturday evening last. He is one of Nature's noblemen.

(PROBABLY HE WILL!) QUESTION.—Please answer the following in the Querist Column of The Advance: Is it true that at the Judgment the oceans will become boiling waters, and man will then be on earth for the last time? F. J. B.

ANSWER.—When the earth is burning the waters will, no doubt, boil, but man will be removed before that transpires.—Rev. Dr. Wild, in the Canadian Advance, Aug. 29th, 1888.

A fine bronze statue of Robert Burns was recently unveiled in Washington Park, Albany, N. Y. The statue cost $27,000. Charles Calverly was the sculptor. The statue was provided for by the estate of the late Mary McPherson.

The American Magazine, which started in to destroy Spiritualism, lately, is latterly accused by the acute Boston Herald of aspiring "to reach the circulation of a regular campaign document."

The San Francisco Freethought of Sept. 1st says "Washington Irving Bishop, the mind-reader, has made his little splurge and desiccated." He has "desiccated" in many different localities, and still continues to "turn up" whenever he can get unwary people to "boost" him in the least.

A dispatch from Cleveland, Ohio, of Sept. 10th, states that the fourth section of train No. 5, west bound on the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio road, carrying G. A. R. veterans from Youngstown and vicinity to the national encampment at Columbus, was wrecked at one o'clock that afternoon, at Rittman, a small station three miles west of Wadsworth, Ohio, a freight train plunging into the rear coaches of the special, killing seven persons and injuring twenty-five others.

TEMPORARY CURE FOR CRAMP.—When the cramp comes on take a cord, wind it around the limb over the place where it is cramped, and take an end in each hand, and give it a sharp pull—one that will hurt a little. Instantly the cramp will let up, and the sufferer can go to bed assured that it will not come on again that night.

Miss Lulu (to grandmother)—George and I have just returned from the beach, grandmamma, dear. The ocean to-night, as it reflects the rays of the moon, is so placid and beautiful. We sat there for nearly two hours drinking it in. Grandmother—Gracious, child, ye ought n't to drink too much on it; it 'll make ye sick.—New York Sun.

Willimantic, Ct.—Our lectures will commence here next Sunday, the speaker being Mrs. Ida P. A. Whitlock, who will continue two Sundays, the 16th and 23d. The 30th we are to have Mrs. E. Clark Kimball of Lawrence, who has created so favorable an impression at Lake Pleasant the past season. The first two Sundays in October we are to have Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, and the last two Mr. Lyman C. Howe of Fredonia, N. Y. In November, the first two Sundays, we have Mr. J. W. Fletcher of Boston; the balance of the year to be arranged.

Our Children's Progressive Lyceum meets next Sunday at 12:15, sharp, and we sincerely hope that there will be a large attendance. ANON.

Sept. 8th.

The Spiritualist C
Onset Ba

Mrs. Cadwell, materializing set one week longer. Her add ter will be 244 Lexington Aver

A company of Odd Fellows A great many visitors were o day. Lindall's Band was the Grove. There was also a yac

Conference meeting was he the afternoon, when interestin Dr. Storer. A great many p lumination which took place was a ball in the Temple, wit for music; also a ball in the Band in attendance. Both w were also the several hotels a nine and ten in the evening the cottages on Union street, a tirely consumed. It was thou Tribou's handsome house wou "Twin Cottage" owned by Mr tunately, no wind was blowing nous efforts of the citizens an was kept confined to one cot and occupied by Mrs. Young total loss (there being no insu the furniture, wardrobe and s We were happy to learn, howe not left destitute, as she still ham, which is rented, and a yearly pension. The fire is sa an illuminating candle while to the ball. This is a warning their cottages to stay by the hundred dollars have already on which the house stood—a dollars ten years ago—which valuation of property at Onset

The Treasurer and Directo Association take this opportun zens and visitors at Onset for t aid in extinguishing the fire on the Ladies' Industrial Union spades, axes, etc., for such occ E. Y.

Thursday afternoon, Mrs. He "The Past, Present and Futur Sept. 22d and 23d, the Harve take place. This Festival was I. P. Greenleaf seven years a Indians who once inhabited thi celebrated each year since at t Moon. The first year there wa the flag-staff in Central Park; were seats arranged for visitors were made; the third and fou observed in the Grove, the handsomely trimmed with au vegetables. The fifth and sixth were held in the Temple, great This, the seventh year, promise vious year in attractions. The the controls of the different me urday afternoon. The Ladies' provide a supper and fair in the Temple, with an autumn d the evening. Sunday there wil for the morning and afternoon.

Friday afternoon there was Auditorium. Mrs. H. M. W poem on "The Vision of Alha essays and poems are very fine ceived; they are forcible, pract

Saturday afternoon a meeting Mr. Frank Jones of New York

Sunday, the lectures were h good attendance being prese presided in the morning, and a naries and singing, introduced speaker of the day. Dr. Store with a poem. His subject for t Conduct of Life," in which he is direction which we cannot comes from the evolution of the who point to the intellectual grandest illustration of life, but charity to one another, being ch not demanding too much from good benevolent act, this is the life, because it brings the most The simple rap is of as much velous manifestation. When w the soul lives after death, any f marvelous is a hindrance inst growth. Let the storms gather, let friends drop away from us, deathlessness is assured, and this knowledge.

In the afternoon Dr. Storer's alism as a Liberator." Unloos open the prison doors, and let The heaviest burdens which m imposed upon them by their an to know more of God until you tion of self, the knowledge of m the spirit of love, going out to bl

It is impossible to do justice tures in the short space allotte had the pleasure of listening to pleased and edified.

Sunday evening there was an Pavilion, consisting of speeche etc.

Headquarters Office, Onset, Se

P. S.—Among the lost articles which are unclaimed, is a gray the owner can have by address Howe, Onset, Mass., Box 230.

Queen City Pa

Monday, Sept. 3d. Many felt to their homes to-day to attend Tuesday.

The camp was made happy i arrival of the President, Dr. E. delegation from Lake Pleasant week promises to be one full work. In the evening a voce choir in the Pavilion. Excellent to a goodly number of interested

Tuesday's exercises consiste ence in the forenoon, followed address of acknowledged power

In the evening Joseph D. S platform test-medium, held a suc Pavilion.

Wednesday was an interesting steamer Reindeer brought a la ists from Plattsburgh, N. Y. Th merous attractions that people every opportunity to visit the pla ings. On this occasion they cr listen to Mrs. Amanda M. Spenc address was well received.

In the afternoon Mr. Stiles ga tive séances—so astonishing an not familiar with this phase of followed by A. E. Tisdale, the el in an address of great beauty revelation to many, and was hig

Though the weather was cool tendance at the meetings was g J. Clegg Wright gave an interes dress. He is a gentle breeze at ble hurricane, leaving, it is th brighter sky.

In the evening an "Old Folk' to quite a large and well-pleased ing was fine and the costumes Sullivan, the leader, is a sort of always wins the good will of the

On Friday there was a well-a the forenoon. At 2 P. M. the Pav with an interested audience. the address, which was full of g to fall upon his listeners as in above. His lecture was preface provised poem. After the add favored with an exhibition of li dium. Fifty-one tests were give save three. Many of them were as to preclude the possibility touching their genuineness.

Saturday, Sept. 8th. In the gave a powerful address, in whi thinker were combined.

In the afternoon and evening t held its annual Fair, which pr The hall was crowded at times, generous. Too much credit ca ladies for their untiring efforts i

Sunday was again beautiful, large numbers to the Park to en day. The Reindeer was loaded the city of Burlington.

A. E. Tisdale gave the morni large audience. It was full of h

At the auditorium in the after looked into a sea of faces, and ance to his inspirations.

In the evening a very pleasant the cottage of the President, Dr. of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Webb—t seventy-third birthday of Mrs. were many, and gems in their w

There have been many visito J. C. Bundy, of Chicago; Warre of Whitefield, N. H.; Jacob Ni ard, of Lowell, Mass., and many Fitchburg, Mass.—The Fi of Fitchburg opened its course G. A. R. Hall, Sept. 9th, Mrs. A occupying the platform.

The next lecture will be on Fannie Allyn; on the 23d-30th, speak, followed Oct. 7th and 14t Oct. 21st and 28th Bishop A. B C. Kimball; Nov. 11th and 18th, 25th, Dec. 2d, J. D. Stiles; De P. A. Whitlock. Lectures on Sarah A. Byrnes, close the year

We also have some speakers M. T. Shelhamer for Jan. 20th a ley, Feb. 3d and 10th; Edgar and 10th; J. Frank Baxter, May B. Hagan, May 19th and 26th.

MRS.

iritualist Camp-Meetings.

Onset Items.

ll, materializing medium, will be at On-longer. Her address for the fall and win- Lexington Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

of Odd Fellows were at Onset Monday, visitors were on the ground during the 's Band was the attraction in Bay View re was also a yacht race down the Bay.

meeting was held at the Auditorium in , when interesting remarks were made by A great many people witnessed the fi- which took place in the evening. There the Temple, with the Middleboro' Band lso a ball in the Casino, with Lindall's ndance. Both were well patronized, as several hotels and restaurants. Between in the evening a fire broke out in one of on Union street, and the building was en- ned. It was thought at one time that Mr. dsome house would have to go; also the ge" owned by Mr. B. F. Bourne, but, for- wind was blowing, and through the stren- of the citizens and fire-wardens the fire nfined to one cottage, which was owned d by Mrs. Young of Stoneham, and is a ere being no insurance), together with all , wardrobe and seventy dollars in money. ppy to learn, however, that Mrs. Young is tute, as she still owns a house in Stone- is rented, and also has a monthly and on. The fire is said to have caught from ng candle while the occupants had gone This is a warning to those who illuminate es to stay by them. We learn that four lars have already been offered for the lot he house stood—a lot that cost her forty ears ago—which shows something of the property at Onset at the present time.

surer and Directors of Onset Bay Grove take this opportunity of thanking the citi- itors at Onset for their timely and efficient guishing the fire on Monday, Sept. 3d, also Industrial Union for furnishing ladders, s, etc., for such occasions.

E. Y. JOHNSON, Treasurer.

afternoon, Mrs. Helen Walton lectured on Present and Future Status of Woman." nd 23d, the Harvest Moon Festival will This Festival was first instituted by Dr. leaf seven years ago, in memory of the once inhabited this place; and it has been ach year since at the full of the Harvest first year there was only a flag-raising at In Central Park; the second year there rranged for visitors and several addresses the third and fourth years the day was the Grove, the Auditorium being very trimmed with autumn leaves, fruit and The fifth and sixth years the celebrations the Temple, great numbers being present. venth year, promises to exceed every pre- attractions. There will be addresses by of the different mediums present on Sat- noon. The Ladies' Industrial Union will pper and fair in Belmont Café, opposite with an autumn dance in the Temple in Sunday there will be speakers engaged ing and afternoon.

ternoon there was a meeting held at the Mrs. H. M. Walton read an original The Vision of Alhambra." Mrs. Walton's poems are very fine and have been well re- y are forcible, practical and sensible. afternoon a meeting was held in the grove, Jones of New York presiding.

he lectures were held in the Temple—a dance being present. Mr. Frank Jones the morning, and after the usual prelimi- singing, introduced Dr. H. B. Storer as the the day. Dr. Storer preceded his lecture n. His subject for the morning was: "The Life," in which he remarked that chance which we cannot see. Spiritual growth the evolution of the soul. There are those to the intellectual as though it was the ustration of life, but living a life of love and ne another, being charitable to others and ding too much from them, the doing of a olent act, this is the highest and divinest e it brings the most sweet and perfect life. rap is of as much value as the most mar- ifestation. When we are convinced that s after death, any further looking after the is a hindrance instead of a help to our et the storms gather, let misfortunes come, drop away from us, we still know that our ss is assured, and we can rest content in dge.

ternoon Dr. Storer's subject was "Spiritu- Liberator." Unloose the heavy burdens, ison doors, and let the oppressed go free! st burdens which mortals bear are those on them by their ancestors. It is not well re of God until you have a better concep- the knowledge of man. The holy spirit is love, going out to bless mankind.

ssible to do justice to either of these lec- e short space allotted here, but those who asure of listening to them were very much edified.

vening there was an entertainment in the onsisting of speeches, tests, dramatizing,

GUSTIE F. HOWE.

ters Office, Onset, Sept. 9th, 1888.

ong the lost articles received at this office, unclaimed, is a gray shoulder cape, which an have by addressing me by mail: G. F. t, Mass., Box 230.

Queen City Park, Vt.

Sept. 3d. Many felt in duty bound to return ies to-day to attend the State election on was made happy in the afternoon by the he President, Dr. E. A. Smith, with a large from Lake Pleasant, and altogether the ises to be one full of interest and good he evening a concert was given by the Pavilion. Excellent music was discoursed number of interested listeners.

exercises consisted of the usual confer- forenoon, followed in the afternoon by an cknowledged power by J. Clegg Wright. ening Joseph D. Stiles, the remarkable t-medium, held a successful seance in the y was an interesting day at the Park. The Indeer brought a large party of excursion- ittsburgh, N. Y. The Park offers such nu- ractions that people avail themselves of tunity to visit the place and enjoy its offer- is occasion they crowded the Pavilion to s. Amanda M. Spence of New York, whose well received.

ernoon Mr. Stiles gave one of his descrip- —so astonishing and bewildering to those with this phase of mediumship. He was A. E. Tisdale, the eloquent blind medium, ss of great beauty and power. It was a many, and was highly enjoyed by all.

e weather was cool on Thursday, the at- the meetings was good. In the afternoon ight gave an interesting and healthful ad- s a gentle breeze at times; again a verita- e, leaving, it is thought, a clearer and ning an "Old Folk's" Concert was given rge and well-pleased audience. The sing- and the costumes elegant. Charles W. leader, is a sort of universal genius who the good will of the public.

there was a well-attended conference in . At 2 P. M. the Pavilion was nearly filled erested audience. Joseph D. Stiles gave which was full of good things. It seemed his listeners as indeed a baptism from lecture was prefaced with an exquisite Im- em. After the address the people were an exhibition of his powers as a test me- one tests were given, all being recognized Many of them were of such a character de the possibility of a reasonable doubt ir genuineness.

Sept. 8th. In the forenoon Mr. Wright rful address, in which the orator and the combined.

rnoon and evening the Ladies' Aid Society al Fair, which proved a great success. crowded at times, and the receipts were oo much credit cannot be given to the ir untiring efforts in behalf of the cause. s again beautiful, and such as to woo rs to the Park to enjoy the exercises of the Indeer was loaded twice with people from rlington.

le gave the morning's address before a e. It was full of helpful thought. torium in the afternoon J. Clegg Wright sea of faces, and gave unfettered utter- spirations.

ding a very pleasant reception was held at f the President, Dr. E. A. Smith, in honor rs. Lucius Webb—the occasion being the birthday of Mrs. Webb. The speeches nd gems in their way.

been many visitors from out the State: of Chicago; Warren G. Brown and wife, , N. H.; Jacob Nichols; Mrs. S. A. Gow- l, Mass., and many others.

A. E. S., Secretary.

, Mass.—The First Spiritualist Society opened its course of Sunday meetings in , Sept. 9th, Mrs. A. L. Pennell of Onset e platform.

cture will be on Sept. 16th, by Mrs. C. ; on the 23d-30th, Dr. H. P. Fairfield will ed Oct. 7th and 14th by Prof. W. F. Peck; 28th Bishop A. Beals; Nov. 4th, Mrs. E. Nov. 11th and 18th, C. M. Nickerson; Nov. J. D. Stiles; Dec. 9th and 16th, Mrs. I. ck. Lectures on Dec. 23d and 30th, by es, close the year 1888.

e some speakers engaged for 1880: Miss ner for Jan. 20th and 27th; Frank T. Rip- nd 10th; Edgar W. Emerson, March 3d Frank Baxter, May 5th and 12th; Jennie y 19th and 26th.

MRS. E. S. LORING, Sec'y.

Spiritualistic Meetings in Boston.

Banner of Light Circle-Room, No. 9 Bosworth Street.—Séances are held every Tuesday and Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock promptly. Admission free. For further particulars, see notice on sixth page. L. B. Wilson, Chairman.

College Hall, 34 Essex Street,—Sundays, at 10½ A. M., 2½ and 7½ P. M. Eben Cobb, Conductor.

Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown.—Mediums' meeting every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Dr. Mark Smith, Chairman.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M.; also Wednesdays at 3 P. M. Dr. E. H. Mathews, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M. F. W. Mathews, Conductor.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Afternoon exercises were opened by Mr. Coombs, with remarks, together with tests and readings from articles taken from the audience, which were pronounced correct. Dr. Thomas spoke in his usual earnest manner, closing with spirit names and descriptions. Mrs. J. T. Lewis and Dr. McKenzie participated satisfactorily in giving tests and readings. Mr. Riddell spoke earnestly for the cause. Mrs. Wildes recited a poem. The chairman closed the meeting with psychometric readings, which were pronounced correct by those receiving them.

In the evening Mrs. Abbie N. Burnham again occupied the platform with one of her highly pleasing lectures, closing with tests.

Mrs. M. W. Leslie, who has just returned from Cassadaga Lake, spoke highly of that camp-meeting, and said that hundreds were brought in contact with Spiritualism and led to investigate its glorious truths.

Dr. Barker gave us some good thoughts under control. The chairman closed the evening's exercises with psychometric readings. F. W. M.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—The platform, afternoon and evening, was interestingly occupied by David Brown, Dr. Thomas, Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Abbie N. Burnham.

F. W. M.

Spiritualist Meetings in New York and Brooklyn.

Columbia Hall, 878 6th Avenue, between 49th and 50th Streets.—The People's Spiritual Meeting (removed from Spencer Hall). Services every Sunday at 2¾ and 7¾ P. M. Mediums and speakers always present. Frank W. Jones, Conductor.

Arcanum Hall, 57 West 25th Street, N. E. corner 6th Avenue.—Meetings of the Progressive Spiritualists are held every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Reliable speakers and test mediums always present in spirit phenomenal gifts. Prof. G. G. W. Van Horn, Conductor.

Adelphi Hall, corner of 52d Street and 7th Avenue.—The First Society of Spiritualists holds meetings every Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7¾ P. M. Admission free.

A General Conference will be held Monday evening of each week at 230 West 36th street, at the residence of Mrs. M. C. Morrell.

Johnston Building, Flatbush Avenue, corner of Nevins Street.—Brooklyn Progressive Spiritual Conference every Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock.

The First Society of Spiritualists.—The meetings opened to-day after the summer vacation. The initial service was well attended, when the state of the weather is considered.

After singing—a duet by Miss Pleasants and Miss Pierce—Henry J. Newton, Esq., President of the Society, addressed the audience substantially as follows:

"Friends: The summer has gone, with all its burden of events, into the eternity of the past. I hope those of you who have been absent from the city, and those who have rested these two months and more at your homes in the city, are ready to commence in earnest with us in the work of the fall and winter campaign. Let 'work' be the watchword! The fields are indeed ripe unto the harvest, but the laborers are few. There is something that every one can do: go to work and find out what you can do for the cause of Spiritualism and your fellow-man, and do it with all your might.

Do not delude yourself with the idea that because we have abolished hell and the devil our road to heaven is to be easy—that we have nothing to do but fold our hands. Those of us who have received this light have grave responsibilities resting upon us. The talent intrusted to us must not be folded in a napkin and laid away, but must be used to the best possible advantage, so that in the final settlement and balancing of accounts we shall have more credit than debit on our balance sheet, and some substantial capital to commence life with in the spirit-world."

His remarks were well received, and a seeming determination was manifest to profit by them.

Mrs. Nellie J. T. Brigham spoke in the forenoon upon subjects selected by the audience, the leading theme being: "Coming Back." The speaker made the application of "all human souls to the honey bee, going forth from day to day, . . . and if there is a coming back of the body, should there be any difficulty of the coming back of the spirit?" "So in coming back it is learning the lessons of the day." The lecture was applicable to the occasion; it was one of Mrs. Brigham's best efforts, and was highly appreciated by her audience. In the evening she spoke upon a subject—"History"—selected by the influences speaking through her. After the lecture, Mrs. Brigham gave several psychometric readings, all of which were pronounced correct by the recipients.

Mrs. Brigham will occupy the platform for the First Society every Sunday morning and evening for an indefinite time. S.

New York, Sept. 9th, 1888.

The Brooklyn Spiritual Conference, so EMILY B. RUGGLES informs us, has become so successful under the management of Mr. Jones, and recently by Mr. W. C. Bowen, that Sunday meetings are now felt to be a necessity to meet the demands of the local Spiritualists. Therefore a meeting was held Thursday evening, Sept. 6th, and a society organized, to be known as the People's Spiritual Meetings of Brooklyn. Mr. Joseph La Fa Mee was elected Chairman, and Mr. W. J. Cushing Treasurer and Secretary. These meetings will open Sunday evening, Sept. 16th, at "Johnston Building," in a room adjoining the one occupied by the Conference Saturday evening, the speaker who opens the meeting to have the first half-hour, those following ten minutes each. Inspirational and test mediums always welcome. Seats free. A collection to defray expenses.

Mr. Charles R. Miller gave the opening address at the Conference on the evening of Sept. 8th. Messrs. Ellsworth and Philbrook, Judge Coit and Mr. Elwell (who is a member of Dr. Talmage's Church), also interestingly participated in the remarks.

347 Dean street.

Young People's Progressive Society, Chicago.

The above society has again taken the field of labor after three months of leisure. An earnest effort is to be made this season to accomplish all that has been expected in the past, and for that purpose the social committees, as well as those appointed in the new department of literature and music, will have their hands full. The socials are to be carried on every two weeks in Martine's South Side Hall, in which the religious meetings on Sunday evenings are also held, and the Literary Circle will hold its meetings in a smaller hall, to begin in October. Mrs. Ada Foye has opened the Sunday night meetings, and last evening addressed over two hundred people on the subject of "Psychical Power and Demonstrations of its Phenomena." A much larger audience is expected next Sunday evening, and during each succeeding one during the month. A moonlight ball was held by the society at Jackson Park Pavilion Aug. 31st, in which over two hundred couples participated. The opening reception of the Social Department occurred Thursday evening, Sept. 6th, nearly three hundred persons being present. The society is doing a good work for the cause, as well as interesting many of the young people in the higher and purer walks of life. The socials occur every two weeks, Thursday evenings, from Sept. 20th. Mrs. Ada Foye will continue with the society during the month every Sunday evening at 7:45. CELIA.

Martine's Hall, Indiana Avenue and 22d street.

Reception at Lake Pleasant.

A correspondent writes us as follows: "A reception complimentary to Mr. Harvey Lyman of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was given him on the occasion of his recent visit to Lake Pleasant, on Sunday evening, Sept. 2d. The gathering was held under the trees on the grounds of his nephew, Mr. M. W. Lyman, whose guest he was. Dr. A. H. Richardson of Boston made the opening remarks.

After music by Mrs. Adams of Vermont, Mrs. Clara A. Field of Boston spoke very feelingly of the old days, and the high esteem in which 'Father and Mother Lyman' are held by the old campers.

Then followed cheering words from Mr. George James, Mrs. Dillingham, Mr. Onthank, Dr. L. A. Plumb, and Dr. Dean Clarke of Boston; Mrs. M. A. Clayton of Auburn, N. Y., and Mrs. Clara Banks of Haydenville, who also ably assisted in the singing.

Mr. Lyman responded, and gave many pleasant reminiscences. He left the grounds Sept. 3d for a trip to Queen City Park."

Woman's Book: A Life's Issues of Love in All Its Phases.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

This very extraordinary work on Love, Man, Woman, the Laws of Affection and Marriage, is subject to no description, critique or synopsis that can give an adequate idea of the author's peculiar genius and style of treating upon Love, Woman, Courtship, Marriage, the Laws of Happiness, the Family, Vampyrism, Love-Starvation, Affectional Health, the Grand Secret, Magnetic Leechings, Good and Evil Effects of Varied Magnetisms, the Infernalisms of Modern (so-called) "Philosophies." A book for every man, but especially every woman in the land.

Cloth. Price $2.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

BEAUTY of Skin & Scalp RESTORED by the CUTICURA Remedies.

NOTHING IS KNOWN TO SCIENCE AT ALL COMPARable to the CUTICURA REMEDIES in their marvelous properties of cleansing, purifying and beautifying the skin, and in curing torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; RESOLVENT, $1.00; SOAP, 25c. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Dull Aches, Pains, and Weaknesses instantly relieved by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster. 25c. Ja21

Extra Super

CARPETS.

The choice of our entire stock of over four hundred patterns and colorings, and including all of our

Lowell Extra Supers,

As well as many other reliable makes, at

70c. Per Yard.

Also quite a large line of patterns that we shall not have manufactured again, but identically the same goods as the above in all other respects, at

60c. Per Yard.

ROXBURY

TAPESTRIES.

We show, without exception, the entire line of patterns produced by the

ROXBURY CARPET CO.,

And offer any Roxbury Carpet in our whole stock at

85c. Per Yard.

In both Extra Supers and Tapestries we have many private patterns that are our own exclusive property, and cannot be found elsewhere.

JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO.,

CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY,

558 and 560 Washington St.,

30 to 34 Harrison Av. Extension.

S15 4w

BAKER'S
BAKER'S
BAKER'S
BAKER'S
BREAKFAST
BREAKFAST
BREAKFAST
BREAKFAST
COCOA.
COCOA.
COCOA.
COCOA.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

Warranted absolutely pure Cocoa, from which the excess of Oil has been removed. It has three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot, or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, easily digested, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

Ja7 eow

THE

Eleusinian

AND

Bacchic Mysteries.

A Dissertation, by Thomas Taylor, Translator of "Plato," "Plotinus," "Porphyry," "Iamblichus," "Proclus," "Aristotle," etc. Third edition. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, Emendations and Glossary, by Alexander Wilder, M. D.

In the Mysteries, the dramas acted at Eleusis and other sacred places, were embodied the deeper thoughts and religious sentiment of the archaic world. The men and women initiated into them were believed to be thenceforth under special care of God, for this life and the future. So holy and interior were the doctrines considered which had been learned in the Sanctuary from the two tablets of stone, that it was not lawful to utter them to another.

The reader desirous of getting the kernel of the doctrines of Plato, Orpheus, Eumolpus, and their fellow-laborers, as well as of the Alexandrian Eclectics, will obtain invaluable aid from this treatise.

Cloth, 8vo. Price $3.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NEW TESTAMENT;

OR,

The Revelation of the Mission of Christ.

BY A WOMAN.

A book for all reformers, workers for the freedom of Woman, Spiritualists and liberal thinkers, who realize that the true spirit of Christianity, long misunderstood and forgotten by the churches, is the most powerful weapon in behalf of liberty and reformation to-day.

"A very remarkable book."—Alpha. "Novel and suggestive ideas."—Woman's Journal. "Unusual force."—Boston Transcript. "Some of the grandest thoughts we have ever seen written."—Woman's Magazine, etc.

Superior cloth, pp. 525, $1.50.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 50c. to 25c.

THE

LYCEUM STAGE:

A COLLECTION OF

Contributed, Compiled and Original

Recitations, Dialogues, Fairy Plays, Etc.

Adapted for the Children's Progressive Lyceum and School Exhibitions.

BY G. WHITFIELD KATES.

Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

HOW TO LIVE A CENTURY AND GROW OLD GRACEFULLY. By J. M. PEEBLES, M. D., author of "Travels Around the World," etc.

In preparing this work, while avoiding technicalities and Greek and Latin phrases, the author has aimed to be practical—rigidly practical—rather than original or elegant; aimed to bring to mind and clearly present the vital importance of air, food, clothing, drink, sunshine and sleep in such varied ways as to inspire the reader with a proper and persistent use of them that the number of years upon earth may be many—even a hundred!

Paper. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE ONLY HOPE; or, Time Reveals All. By M. R. K. WRIGHT.

The most wonderful pamphlet published since the advent of Spiritualism. Buy a copy, and learn the destiny of the spirit.

Price 20 cents, postage 2 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

VOL. 64
NO. 2
MISSING

SEP 271888

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

VOL. LXIV. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1888. | $3.00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 3.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—Spiritual Phenomena: Independent Slate-Writing, etc.; Benefits Derived from Spiritualism. "Expectancy" Does Not Explain It. Poetry: A Lark's Flight. Original Essay: The Spiritual Phenomena of the Bible. Literary Department: Bars and Thresholds.

SECOND PAGE.—The Voice of the Sioux. Poetry: "We Reap in Gladness what we Sow in Tears." Banner Correspondence: Letters from Georgia, Vermont, Missouri, Illinois, Massachusetts, New York, New Hampshire, and California. The Reviewer: The Bhagavad Gita, etc.

THIRD PAGE.—Free Thought: The Soul of Things—What Is It? The Empress Josephine. The Coöperative Temperance Union. September Magazines. Pamphlets Received, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—The Drink Traffic. Faith and Form. The Fiftieth Anniversary. Seeing with the Eyes Shut. Sioux Indian Treaty. A Parisian "Banquo." "The Spiritualism of 1888," etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. Log Cabin Success. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith.

SEVENTH PAGE.—Verifications of Spirit-Messages. Obituary Notices. Mediums in Boston, Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—All Sorts of Paragraphs. Echoes from Lake Pleasant. Onset Séance. "Nasal Voices, Catarrh and False Teeth." Spiritualist Meetings in Boston, New York, and Elsewhere. J. Frank Baxter Opens Lynn's Season, etc.

Spiritual Phenomena.

Independent Slate-Writing, Etc.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The spiritual cause in Denver has received an additional impulse of late by the coming into our midst of that justly celebrated independent slate-writer, Dr. D. J. Stansbury, who is en route to his home in San Francisco. The good reports of the Doctor's mediumship at the Eastern camp-meetings had reached our people and prepared them for a rich treat.

On last Sunday evening, 2d inst., Warren Hall was crowded to the doors, and after the controls of Mrs. E. R. Nickless had answered questions, Dr. Stansbury briefly explained the nature of independent slate-writing, and proceeded to demonstrate it before the audience. Taking up a pair of large slates, he carefully cleaned and held them up before the audience, under a strong electric light; he then called a lady from the audience, who declared she was a perfect stranger to the Doctor. She took a seat upon the platform and held the slates in full view of the audience. Next a gentleman was called up and requested to examine a pair of slates; these he held in plain sight. A third pair was next cleansed and laid by the Doctor upon the shoulders of different ones in the audience, who declared they heard the writing going on; these were finally given to Dr. Nickless, the President of the meeting, to hold. A fourth pair was then exhibited in like manner, and tied together and suspended from the chandelier. The Doctor next went under control and gave some test-messages to persons in the audience, after which he laid his hand on each pair of slates for a few minutes while music was being rendered.

The slates were then opened; some bits of slate-pencil and crayons had been placed between the slates in the beginning. The first pair held by the lady was found to contain a finely-executed colored crayon drawing of a female head and bust, the features of which were declared by the lady to be an excellent likeness of her spirit sister. Accompanying this likeness was a message from that sister, and signed "Hannah," which was the correct name. There was also a message from her son "Eddie," signed in his own handwriting, and corroborated by the mother and the writer of this article, who was personally acquainted with the boy.

The second pair of slates contained a message to the gentleman holding them, from his band, regarding his mediumship, also a fine likeness of his Indian control in all his war-paint and feathers, his name being correctly given.

The third pair of slates contained a long message from "Jeannette" to Dr. Nickless, who was personally acquainted with the spirit before her transition.

The fourth pair of slates was taken down from the chandelier, and was covered with a long message from spirit Ed. S. Wheeler to Dr. Hencke, who was present, and who was a personal friend of Mr. Wheeler; also messages from J. W. Edmonds, Wm. Denton, E. V. Wilson, John M. Spear and "Sun Flower."

This is considered the most remarkable public exhibition of independent slate-writing ever given in Denver. The audience was enthusiastic in its applause.

On Tuesday evening, 4th inst., a select circle of twenty-seven persons gathered at the rooms of Dr. Nickless, in Opera House Block, to enjoy a combination séance given by Dr. Stansbury and Mrs. Nickless. During the evening twenty-five messages were written, and twelve spirit-faces were drawn upon the slates by independent spirit-power. Every person present got something; several of the faces were marvels of beauty, and every one recognized as a relative or accepted as a guide. I was especially favored by receiving a very beautiful likeness of one of my controls.

Dr. Stansbury's methods are beyond suspicion; the slates are held by the sitter and medium above the table, and in full light. Mrs. Nickless gave many excellent tests while the writing was going on. We think this séance one of the most wonderful ever recorded. Dr. Stansbury has rooms at Dr. Barrington's, 1526 California street, where I hear his time is fully occupied by skeptics and investigators, who report his private séances even more marvelous than the public exhibitions!

This phase of spirit-pictures upon the slates we understand is something new to the Doctor's mediumship, and came to him in response to a request made to his guides while at Onset this summer. The guides have succeeded so well in this that they can guarantee the likeness of some friend to nearly every sitter. I write this in the interest of the phenomena, (rather than the medium,) which are the corner-stone of our philosophy.

W. S. Gray is a new medium lately developed here; he is holding well attended meetings. He lectures under control, and gives very interesting life-readings at the close of the lectures.

Dr. F. O. Matthews is also drawing large audiences, and giving excellent tests at the close of each meeting.

Mrs. Edith E. R. Nickless of New York City is winning her way to the hearts of all our people. The discourses by her controls are profound and logical, while the tests given by "Sun Flower" are always interesting and convincing. I hope to give you in my next a full report of our newly organized society.

J. D. DAVIS,
Sec'y of the College of Spiritual Philosophy.
Denver, Col., Sept. 8th, 1888.

Benefits Derived from Spiritualism.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Allow me to relate some fine tests of spirit power and guidance or control, which have recently been related to me within a few days, doing thus with the consent of the parties interested, with the understanding that I should not make use of the names of the individuals associated with the facts given. Without question the statements I subjoin are true to the letter, and come from some of the most reliable business men in Boston:

A party of seven gentlemen left Boston a short time since for a fishing excursion in the State of Maine. Some of the company were Spiritualists, also mediums; others did not take any interest in the subject, but looked upon it in a skeptical light. One of the company had a ring, which he valued at $200 or more, and on examining it discovered that the diamond had fallen out of the setting. He had been on the boat, and also in the woods, and he considered it like "looking for a needle in a haymow" to endeavor to find it. He looked where he thought he might have lost it; but darkness came on, and he was fain to desist. He waited until morning, and commenced early to look for it again, yet in vain.

Later the entire party resumed the search; and after a time one of the company, a medium, in a condition of semi-conscious trance, went to a spot and put his hand upon the valuable jewel, to his own great surprise and that of the others, and especially to the delight of the owner of the ring. The person finding it did not know at first that an influence about him led him in the search, but after he had picked up the lost diamond he felt exhausted, and remained so for some minutes. He now considers that his organism was depleted to this extent by the control or influence put upon him for the purpose of finding the treasure.

Those witnessing his movements looked upon him as being ill, as he had such a peculiar and strange look about his eyes. The owner of the ring thinks the finding of the gem very wonderful, and does not question his friend's mediumship in assisting in the process.

The same parties gave me an account of another singular occurrence which took place the year previous, during their annual fishing excursion.

One of the company is a strict temperance man, and highly thought of by the entire community where he dwells; he is a Quaker in religious views. The food they had prepared had a superabundance of salt, which made the entire party very thirsty. The Quaker would not partake of anything but water to quench his thirst, and that he could not obtain in the woods where they were.

He retired, as related to me, in a thirsty condition, and in his dream or sleep he saw fresh water, as if running from a spring, and declared that he would give a large sum of money for a drink of it. He arose from his bed, dressed himself, took a dipper, went quite a distance, and to his surprise found a spring of water, and quenched his thirst. The existence of the spring was not known by the oldest inhabitants thereabout, and still this gentleman was led to its discovery. The spring was situated between two decayed logs, and was partially covered with moss. The Quaker at the present time thinks—while not giving in his adhesion to Spiritualism in general—that some invisible intelligence caused him, in this instance, at least, to visit the spring. A. S. HAYWARD.

Boston, Mass.

"Expectancy" Does Not Explain It.

Magnetiseur Phil W. Kramer mentions, in his book "Heilmagnetismus," a curious instance which took place with a girl in Munich in 1884. He had formerly magnetized her, and she usually passed into the magnetic sleep. She had a great pain in her foot, and now came with her mother to be relieved. She was magnetized, and placed in magnetic sleep on a sofa. The idea came to Kramer that he should make a magnetic-interdict line, as he never had spoken either to mother or daughter about such a thing. He consequently drew a line with his finger across the middle of the room, which the daughter could not have seen had she been awake, because her head was turned in such a way that it was impossible.

Kramer seated himself by a window. After awhile, when the girl came to her normal state, she expressed her gladness over being free from pain, and was preparing to take leave when Mr. Kramer said: "I should like to shake hands with you before you go, Miss Mary." She said: "Certainly, with much pleasure," and walked toward him, but when she came to the magnetic-interdict line she fell to the floor with a piercing scream.

Mr. Kramer, reversing his interdict, ran to her aid, when she said to him in alarm, "What have you done?" He explained his experiment, and asked her to state her feelings when she come to the fancied line. She assured him that she felt as if her head had come in contact with a stone wall. The girl and her mother both being ignorant of this experiment in advance, the fancy or "expectancy" of the patient is entirely excluded from this case."—Translated for the Banner of Light from Spiritualistische Blätter, Berlin, the 2d of Aug. 1888, by C. G. Helleberg of Cincinnati.

A LARK'S FLIGHT.

Out in the country the bells were ringing,
Out in the fields was a child at play,
And up to heaven a lark went singing
Blithe and free on that morn of May.
And the child looked up as she heard the singing,
Watching the lark as it soared away;
"Oh! sweet lark, tell me, heav'nward winging,
Shall I go also to heaven one day?"

Deep in the shade of a mighty city
Tolled a woman for daily bread,
Only the lark to see her and pity,
Singing all day in a cage o'erhead.
And there they dwelt in the gloom together,
Prisoned and pent in the narrow street,
But the bird still sang of the golden weather,
And the woman dreamt of her childhood sweet.

Still in her dreams the bells were ringing,
Still a child in the fields was she;
And she opened the cage as the lark was singing,
Kissed him gently and set him free.
And up and on as the bird went singing,
Down came a voice that seemed to say,
E'en as the lark that is heavenward winging:
"Thou shalt go also to heaven one day."

—Cassell's Family Magazine.

Original Essay.

THE SPIRITUAL PHENOMENA OF THE BIBLE.

BY JAMES M. ROGERS.

I find such a multiplicity of opinions—such a wide divergence of expression among Spiritualists regarding the Bible, as valuable or valueless, as an exponent of spiritual phenomena—that I have determined to present some of the most glowing links of what appears to me a wonderful chain of the Spiritualism of the ages.

Primitive man, unhampered by books, unfettered by creeds, living amid the splendors of an Oriental atmosphere, and surrounded by the beauty and magnificence of a spontaneous creation, was brought into more direct rapport with breathing, responsive nature than those of a later and more civilized age. To him, the rich diversity of floral adornment, the waves that rolled in music upon the sapphire shores, the deep and mysterious companionship of the night, appealed to his inner sense, and spoke to his soul of the ineffable sweetness of spirit-return, and the glories of immortality. For him the spicy winds that wafted fragrance from grove to grove bore messages from departed loved ones; the solemn environment of the calm eventide was peopled with beings from brighter worlds. Thus fed and illumined by the light and splendor of the universe, rare visions presented themselves as naturally and clearly as the outward pictures of a grosser age. These were the advantages swept away by dogmas—books of man-made religions, and compelled acceptance of stated forms of worship.

I shall now as nearly as possible in their recorded order present some of these remarkable manifestations: The forms that appeared to Abraham: "And he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, lo! three men stood by him." This statement is so plain and conclusive that it admits of no other explanation save that of the return of man—the term (men) used fixes the identity beyond controversy. The angels that appeared to Lot show that communication was kept up between the two worlds. The remarkable vision of Jacob is called a dream, but it was so vivid and superhuman in its character that it colored all his after-life. That symbolical ladder, with its procession of spirits, passing and repassing from heaven to earth, seems to me a beautiful embodiment of spiritual belief. In regard to King Saul: "The Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him." This proves that both good and evil spirits have power to visit mortals. The woman of Endor was simply a medium. As many church-members who come to mediums do now, the king concealed his name, yet the medium discovered him at once. "And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, and stooped with his face to the ground and bowed himself." That is, he did not see something, but the form of the great man that he knew and yielded reverence to. I have seen it often stated that "the Old Testament affords no proofs of immortality." But here the departed prophet is seen and recognized. "Facts are stubborn things." Again, what was the "still, small voice" heard by Elijah after retirement and fasting? If God spoke to him directly, why were retirement and fasting necessary? What was the outline of a man's hand that wrote upon the festive walls of a barbaric king?

Was it but a common dream that sent Joseph into exile? Does one not see that dream and vision are interconvertible terms? The magnificent spectacle of the Transfiguration was one of the grandest demonstrations of the fact of immortality mortal eyes ever dwelt upon; therein nothing is vague, or doubtful. In the fervor of his enthusiasm Peter cries: "Let us build three tabernacles, one for thee, one for Moses, and one for Elias." Will any Christian dare assert that these mighty ones—"not dead, but gone before," were there in person? Will any Spiritualist reject such overwhelming Bible testimony in behalf of spirit return?

Paul tells us of a radiance that shone distinctly in the blaze of a noontide sun—he speaks of the bodies celestial and the bodies terrestrial: "But the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another." Is not all this mighty mass of cumulative evidence worth the using? Shall not the spiritual sword, whose edge and temper have withstood the waste of many ages, be wielded by fitter hands than those of sectarian gladiators? Is it not better and wiser to use a potent weapon already found than to search for arms not ready to hand?

Hartford, Conn.

The latest cure for rheumatism, according to a Georgia doctor, is to purchase a Mexican hairless dog and make the animal sleep so that the feet of the sufferer can touch the dog's body.

Literary Department.

BARS AND THRESHOLDS.

Written Especially for the Banner of Light,

BY MRS. EMMA MINER.

CHAPTER IV.

LYD.

The morning dawned. If Miss Parker had been a superstitious woman, or one to be deterred from a duty by trifles, she would have remained at home. First of all, it was Friday. Secondly, she accidentally knocked Doris's little hand mirror off the mantel, and broke it. Thirdly, the weather was anything but pleasant. Fourthly, she had a touch of neuralgia in her face. Notwithstanding all these, she started for Mrs. Carroll's.

"But your neuralgia, auntie?" said Doris, doubtfully, looking out into the mist.

"I dread the call more than I do the neuralgia. When that is off my mind, I can bear the other better."

She put on her wraps, and Doris tied a veil carefully over the aching face, and she started with many misgivings.

She had frequently passed Mrs. Carroll's house. It was a neat, plain, brick building, and as she walked slowly up the stone steps she wondered that she could have allowed herself to be there on such an errand. She sent in her card by the servant, and sat in the parlor wondering how she should introduce the subject; but she had not long to wait, for Mrs. Carroll entered directly.

Mrs. Carroll was a fine-looking woman. Her dark eyes were much like her son's—keen, bright and magnetic. She was self-possessed and easy in her manner, and Miss Parker felt it would be much easier to deal with her than with some she knew.

"I have heard my son speak of you so often that I feel you are quite an old acquaintance," she said, toying carelessly with Miss Parker's card, which she still held in her hand. "And Miss Doris, also. I hope you are all well."

"Thank you, quite well."

"Now for it," thought she, mentally shaking herself.

"I have called on a matter of some importance. I don't know but you will think I am insane, or idiotic, but I will tell you all the facts, and leave you to judge."

"Then you must have changed very much recently. I remember my son holds you in high estimation."

"Well, I am thankful for that. It may be a little help to me. First of all I want to ask you if you ever heard Dr. Carroll speak of Morris Stuart, Doris's brother?"

"Yes, quite often. He has spoken of him quite recently, in connection with a patient of his—Hugh Scott."

"Dr. Carroll told Doris that if we went to see Hugh he could tell us something about Morris. So of course we went. It was while we were there that I saw this young girl of whom I came to speak. Her name is Lydia Moore. I want to take her away from that place. I feel that she has the making of a noble woman in her."

"Very commendable, I am sure," said Mrs. Carroll quietly.

"I have been advised to apply to you for assistance."

"Of course I shall be glad to help her if I can. Who sent you to me?"

"That is just where I suppose you will think I am mistaken. But I want to ask you a question: Do you believe it possible for spirits to communicate with those living on earth?"

It was an important question. Perhaps on its answer depended the success of Miss Parker's plan.

"I cannot say positively that I do. My son and I have investigated this subject a little. Perhaps he has more than I. There is something very strange about it, and I am trying to learn what it is."

"I am thankful enough!" exclaimed Miss Parker. Then she drew from her pocket the messages from Doris's mother, and explained how they were obtained. Mrs. Carroll was deeply interested.

"I feel impressed there is a purpose in this," she said. "At any rate, it would be a simple act of kindness to the girl to assist her. Life may hold much that is good for her, if she can be put into the right path."

"You see, I left my home to go to live with my sister, Mrs. Mason," explained Miss Parker, "and I shall probably stay there unless there should be some great change. If I had a home of my own I would take her into it; but such works as this would set my sister very much against her. The child would be of very little use at present, but she looks bright and teachable."

Mrs. Carroll sat a few moments in deep thought.

"I am in favor of taking her into my own home," she said at last; "but I should like to consult with my son about it first. I will send you word in a day or two as to my decision."

"You have taken a great burden off my mind; and if there's a reward for helping a motherless girl, I am sure you will get it."

Miss Parker went home with her soul lightened. She felt sure there would be a decision in Lyd's favor.

"I am sure Mrs. Carroll must be a good woman, if she is anything like her son," said Doris.

The answer came much sooner than was expected. Mrs. Carroll called to inform her that she would take Lyd for a time, and do the best she could for her. Fortunately Mrs. Mason was out, so her suspicions were not excited.

Doris walked into church next day carrying a happy soul within her. Morris was safe and well; Lyd was going to have a good home; and she had Aunt Amelia now!

Miss Parker was slowly walking up the aisle behind Mrs. Mason. She sometimes went to church, though she "lacked a proper interest," as Mrs. Mason said. "Church woman" was written all over Mrs. Mason's face, yet Mr. Brooks saw far more of a response in the contented, peaceful face of Miss Parker, and the contented, happy lines in Doris's face.

The next day they went to carry the letter to Hugh. They told Lyd of the plans for her. She was overcome with emotion.

"Now if dad will only let me go! He has allus said I should n't, but perhaps he 'll change!"

It was a week before they could go to see Hugh again, and then they found "dad" had changed.

The mortal had put on immortality. He had stepped from the threshold of his vile rum-saloon into the mansion he had prepared for himself beyond. He had left his old, carousing companions, to join the great company from whose midst might be extended helping hands to lead him out of the conditions which had made his earth-life so dark and useless. The gates of the celestial city had swung wide for him, as they will swing for us all.

Lyd was free to go where she pleased; and with a thankful soul she walked back with Miss Parker and Doris, and entered Mrs. Carroll's house, no longer friendless or homeless.

Mrs. Carroll came into the hall to meet Lydia, and leading her past the wondering servant, took her to the room henceforth to be her own. Lydia had brushed her hair neatly, but her dress was shabby in the extreme.

"I wonder what Mrs. Carroll is going to do with that bundle of rags?" said Bridget to Michael.

"Same as she does for so many others, I s'pose. Feed 'em, an' clothe 'em, with the doctor to say niver a word agin it."

Lydia remained quite closely in her room for a week, and at the end of that time emerged a very different-looking girl. She was neatly dressed, and her bright face was lighted by hopeful smiles.

"I must teach her at home for a few months, Sidney," said Mrs. Carroll to the doctor. "She is very sensitive, and would die of mortification if placed among a bevy of ordinary school girls."

"No doubt you are right; but are you sure you are able to undertake it?"

"Yes, I think I shall have no trouble."

And she did not. Lyd received all suggestions as to her manners with perfect good nature, and never forgot a hint once given. She carefully watched Mrs. Carroll's way of speaking and doing little things. It was wonderful what transformation a month of teaching made in her.

She begged to begin at the beginning, and was earnest in her studies.

"I want to know it sure, all the way, as far as I go," she said.

Nobody could be more attentive or diligent, and so her progress was assured.

Miss Parker and Doris were glad to hear this report of Lydia. They frequently called at Mrs. Carroll's, and Doris became quite friendly with her. She was glad she could be of some help to her.

It was indeed necessary for Lydia to "begin at the beginning." She had never learned to write. Mrs. Carroll patiently presided over the first copy-book, upon which Lydia labored with many misgivings. The "pot-hooks and trammels" had scarcely been mastered when one day Lydia was left alone to write. Mrs. Carroll, entering soon after, was surprised to find her in tears. They were the first she had seen her shed. She was surprised.

"Why, Lydia! what is the matter?"

Lydia could scarcely speak for sobs, but finally held out the copy-book to Mrs. Carroll. It was scribbled up and down and across. Her nice work was ruined.

"Lydia! what have you been doing? You have spoiled it!"

"Indeed! indeed! Mrs. Carroll, I could n't help it! I was writing just as nice as could be, and all of a sudden my hand began to go; and it went, and it went, and I could n't stop it!"

Mrs. Carroll could not believe Lydia; it seemed such an unlikely story.

"Don't tell me a falsehood, Lydia!" she said, her dark eyes flashing warningly.

"Oh! it 's the sober truth! And I am scared because I felt so queer all the time. I was just shaking all over."

"Sit down again, and let me see you write," said Mrs. Carroll.

Lydia obeyed instantly. She dipped her pen in the ink, and began on a fresh page. She wrote half a line, when her hand began to tremble strangely, and again the fair page was scribbled with all sorts of marks.

"Lydia!" said Mrs. Carroll, "I never saw anything like it! I think you are playing tricks on me. I am sorry. I wouldn't have believed it of you!" and Mrs. Carroll's face expressed a genuine sorrow. "I shall have to attend to this. You may remain in your room to-day."

Mrs. Carroll left her alone. Lydia threw herself on the bed in a passion of tears.

"Oh, dear! dear!" she sobbed, "she thinks I am telling her a lie, and fooling with my lesson! And she so kind and good! And I can't help it—I truly can't!"

It was hard work for Lydia to apply herself to her studies that day, but she was faithful to the very last letter. Mrs. Carroll would have no fault to find with those lessons. Lydia saw nothing of Mrs. Carroll that day. She waited impatiently for the next morning, hoping all would be right.

When Mrs. Carroll went into Lydia's room she could but pity her, she looked so miserable and unhappy. The lessons were correctly done, and she praised them. The writing always came last. Lydia dreaded to touch the pen, but, at Mrs. Carroll's command, obediently took it up. One, two, three lines were written without interruption, and Lydia began to breathe more freely, when, to her dismay, away went her hand again, scratching up and down the white page.

"Lydia! I am surprised at you! I didn't think you capable of such work! If you do not behave properly, I shall send you away! I will not tolerate such behavior! You are old enough to do better. Remain in your room again to-day!" and Mrs. Carroll turned coldly away from her without appearing to notice Lydia's hand stretched imploringly toward her.

This was more than Lydia could bear. She dropped on the floor with a low moan. Her grief was too deep for tears. It seemed as if the end of all things had come to her, and the climax was one of despair.

Night came at last. Rain was falling with a perseverance that even Dr. Carroll felt, as he drew near the fire in the parlor, made necessary by the chill and dampness. He hoped to get a few hours' rest, for he was unusually tired.

"Where is Lydia, mother? I haven't seen her for a couple of days."

Mrs. Carroll hesitated. She disliked to add to her son's perplexities, he had so many of them. She concluded to tell him of Lydia's conduct. He listened in surprise.

"Mother, I have a strange feeling about this. I should like to see Lyd write, myself. Not that I wish to interfere with anything you think proper to do, but I want to satisfy myself in the matter."

"Very well. Go into the library, and I will call her down."

Lydia's weak and trembling fingers could scarcely open the door. It was a forlorn and drooping figure that stood before them.

"Why, Lydia! Are you sick?" Dr. Carroll rose instantly, and took her hand. It was cold.

"I don't know. I feel bad here," and she laid the other hand over her heart. "I feel as if I were choking all the time."

He placed a chair for her, and she sank into it wearily. He went into his office, and returned with something in a glass which he offered her to drink. She took it without remonstrance. He glanced at his mother apprehensively.

"There is a serious mental disturbance with Lydia, mother. Perhaps I had better not disturb her in the matter to-night."

Lydia heard his words, and turned feebly toward him.

"What was it you wanted of me?"

"You had better speak about it, and have it over with, Sidney," said Mrs. Carroll in a low tone.

Dr. Carroll sat down by Lydia, and took her hand. He spoke kindly.

"Mother tells me there is trouble about your writing. I want to inquire about it. Will you get your copy-book and let me see it?"

Lydia arose without a word, and brought the book. It was sadly defaced.

"Lydia," he said, "it is hard for me to believe that you would tell mother a falsehood, or trouble her unnecessarily. Please sit up to the table and write for me a little; will you?"

He placed her chair, and she drew the book toward her. She turned to the first fresh page and began to write. She wrote four lines with care, when her hand suddenly dashed into the middle of the page. Dr. Carroll looked at Lydia. Tears were streaming down her pale cheeks.

"I can't stop it! oh, I can't!" and her hand flew on.

He reached for a sheet of paper and a lead pencil.

"Here, take these," he said quietly.

She obeyed. Her hand trembled violently. He laid his hand lightly on her wrist.

"Do n't be frightened, Lydia. Let your pencil go just where it wants to."

A moment more, and a strange calmness came over her. Her pencil moved slowly. Perfectly formed letters were shaped on the paper. Was it possible? Was she really writing? Mrs. Carroll looked on in amazement. Lydia had written a name. Dr. Carroll grew pale as he read it. It was "Philip Marshall Cameron."

"Great heaven! That's the name of one of the boys in college."

"I do n't remember that you ever spoke of him," said Mrs. Carroll, looking at the name doubtfully.

Dr. Carroll paused a moment. He picked up a little piece of paper, and wrote upon it, "Philip died three years ago." He folded it, and passed it over to his mother. While he was writing it Lydia wrote—

"I am not dead. P. M. C."

Mother and son gazed at each other in silence. Lydia apparently took no notice of them. Once more she took up the pencil. She wrote:

"I will come again when Lydia is able to bear it. P. M. C." Then the pencil rolled from her fingers.

Dr. Carroll motioned for his mother to follow him into the next room.

"Are you sure Lydia had not learned beyond that page in the copy-book?"

"She has learned nothing by my teaching," replied Mrs. Carroll.

"Even if she had, she knew nothing of Philip Cameron," said Dr. Carroll. "Mother, I believe Lydia is a writing medium, and really could not help doing as she did. I know there are those who can write communications, and if one can do it, why not Lydia? We must watch this, mother. I am sure something will come of it."

They returned to the table. Lydia sat there with an expression of hopelessness on her face pitiful to see.

"Lydia," said Dr. Carroll gravely, "this is very strange, but we have decided that you could n't help it, and that you did not tell a falsehood."

Lydia burst into tears.

"Oh! I'm so thankful! I felt dreadfully. It seemed as if my heart would break! I knew I could n't help it, but oh! what is it?"

Dr. Carroll looked at his mother doubtfully, and shook his head.

"It is not best to explain to you to-night about it. When the proper time comes we will do so. Be patient, and do n't get frightened. It is nothing that will harm you. Meanwhile, go on with your lessons as best you can. Mother will choose an hour for you in which you shall scribble all you like. Let your pencil write as it will, and be sure and save every scrap of paper, no matter whether it looks like anything or not. I shall be particular to see it."

Lydia cried with joy. "I am so glad it is all right! Indeed, Mrs. Carroll, I never will tell you a falsehood, and I never will trouble you, if I can help it."

"I shall trust you after this, Lydia. I did n't want to doubt you before, but it all seemed so strange I could not help it," and she kissed Lydia as she said "good night."

[To be continued in next issue.]

The Voice of the Sioux.

A reporter from the Omaha, Neb., Daily Bee spent three days at Rosebud Indian Agency, Dakota, recently, for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the Indians there in regard to the new treaty which the United States Commission is trying to induce the Sioux to sign.

Rosebud Agency is in the southeastern portion of the great Sioux reservation, which occupies the southwestern quarter of the territory of Dakota. There are five agencies on the reservation, as follows: Pine Ridge (or Red Cloud), Rosebud (or Spotted Tail), Standing Rock, Cheyenne River, and Crow Creek and Lower Brule, formerly two, but now consolidated.

The Sioux nation comprises six tribes, aggregating a population of about thirty thousand. Rosebud is the home of the Brule tribe, numbering seven thousand four hundred; Pine Ridge is the home of the Ogalala tribe, which has about the same population. Since the death of Spotted Tail, Swift Bear is the principal chief of the Brules. He is about seventy-five years of age, and a man of great character and influence. Dr. T. A. Bland, of Washington, D. C., who had a council with him in 1884, speaks of him in high terms.

The Bee reporter says: "As a class these Indians are rapidly advancing in civilization. The following letter was dictated by Swift Bear, the most influential chief of this reservation:

'ROSEBUD, DAKOTA.

'To the People of the United States: I am in favor of the order of the Indian office issued last year forbidding the use of the Indian language in all the schools, whether government or missionary schools. We Indians are all of us face to face with the white men, and we want our children to be teached English like white people. We hope the Great Father will enforce that order, and not mind the missionaries' talk. Those missionaries are sowing ruin among our children. We do n't want them teaching our children Indian. Those missionaries did not obey the order. They still keep teaching in Indian. SWIFT BEAR, CHIEF.'"

The reporter then interviewed Swift Bear on the treaty. "Tell him," said the reporter, that "The Bee wants the white people to know what the Indians think of the commission, and ask him if they are going to sign the treaty?" Then Swift Bear broke loose, and, emphasizing every word with a gesture, he said:

"Before this, when the commissioners came out, they brought with them papers, and these papers always lied. Before this they came out and asked us to sign these papers, but we always found that these papers lied. We did not know they lied; we believed them, and we touched the pen, but they deceived us. They never fulfilled the promises they put on paper, and we can't believe them any more. Heretofore they came to us with papers. We could not study the white man. We did not know any better, and we signed them, but we found they were frauds. So now we have made up our minds that we would not sign any more treaties, that we will not give up any of our lands. I have seen the Great Father many times. I have seen him for my people. In 1868 he promised the Sioux to fulfill all his promises, but I have found out by studying that there is a great deal of money due to the Sioux that has not yet been paid to them, and I don't believe in any more promises. The treaty of 1868 promised to give the Indian children schooling for twenty years, but it never gave it to them until nine years ago, so now the Great Father owes us for eleven years' schooling. They promised that every thirty children should have a teacher on their own reservation, but, instead of giving it, they took the children away and gave them their education somewhere else. This treaty of 1868 became a law, but the white man's government has forgotten all that and do not keep the law they made themselves, but they want to make a new law. I and my people will never sign it. I have spoken; it is all I have to say."

Chief Quick Bear was then interviewed. In reply to the questions, he said:

"There are a good many people on this reservation, and the treaty of 1868 gave each head of a family 320 acres. I thought they meant us to keep it, but now they want to take it away. We shall not make any more treaties with the white people to give away our land, because we've got a very small reservation now for our own use. The other times we did not know anything—we used to sign our land away for nothing—but now I know soil (land) is very high among the white people. We send all our children to the white men's schools, because then they can make our bargains with the white people for us. Since they have been to school and have come back they say it is wrong, and we depend on them. Now our children go to school and we are keeping the land for them and their children and the children that come after them. I am an old man, and I have got 320 acres of land, but all my grandchildren must have 320 acres, too, the same as I do. If we give our land away they can't get it, and we won't sign any treaty because it would hurt them. We have given a good many lands to the government, and they have promised us lots of things, but they have not yet fulfilled them. That's why we want to see the Great Father, because when he made the Black Hills treaty with us it has not come to be law yet.

There is one other thing I will say, and I want you to print it. Capt. Pratt has tried to educate Indian children, and now he comes and tries to take the land from our poor boys. We do n't understand him. We would rather have some one we knew, some one who has lived with us, and whom we could trust, because we like the Great Father. He is our main friend, and I think is for the Indians. He told us so, and so I know he did not want us to sign them [papers] unless we knew what we were doing. A railroad [the interpreter said it was the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul] once made a treaty with us for a strip one hundred feet wide, to the Black Hills, and they surveyed it, but they were too poor to pay for it, and they never got through yet. That's why they want us to sign this treaty—to get the land for nothing, that they are too poor to buy. But they will never get us to sign."

"What does he think of the Indian schools?" asked the reporter.

"I believe in the schools; they will do the Indians good. I have three girls and two boys now in school at Genoa. I am in favor of educating them, because I do n't want my children to get lost."

"I know the government wants to buy our land at fifty cents an acre, [he said in answer to another inquiry,] and I know they will sell it for $1.25. I know the same land is worth $4 or $5 an acre, and I know that many other people are holding as much land as we do, and are not using it as much as we do."

From that time he (the reporter,) asked the opinion of every one he could meet on the treaty question when an interpreter was near, and one and all answered with the same vigorous "Heh" (no). He tried to find out whether or not they would fight before they would sign, but on this question they all kept an ominous silence, and would not say they would or would not.

He interviewed a number of "squaw-men," white men who have Indian wives—and they all expressed the opinion that the treaty was unjust, and that the Indians knew that, and would not sign it.

Rev. S. A. Riggs, who has spent forty-five years among the Sioux, denounces the treaty in unmeasured terms, stating that "there is so little real good land in the reservation that the Indians should keep it all, especially if they are ever to become self-supporting."

Dr. Bland exposed this scheme to wrong the Sioux as to their lands in 1882, in The Council Fire, and he has kept the Indians fully posted regarding the nature and progress of the project. The BANNER OF LIGHT has supported him in this good work. Now the entire press of the country is with him.

Regulate the Regulator by the use of Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists. 120 doses $1.

Written for the Banner of Light.

"WE REAP IN GLADNESS WHAT WE SOW IN TEARS."

BY BELLE BUSH.

Youth is fleeting, youth is fleeting,
To the shade-land of the past,
And its hours, though bright or dreary,
Travel on, and travel fast;
Flowers which wake in early spring-time,
Birds that sing on leafy spray,
Linger through the joyous season,
But in Autumn pass away.

To the "sunny climes" the warblers
Hasten from the winter's cold,
And the rose-seed finds a shelter
Underneath the genial mould;
But they come again with gladness
When the May-morn lights the hills,
And the same gay smiles and voices
Linger by the dimpling rills.

These may have a second spring-time,
And forget that storms have been,
Oft returning like the sunlight
Floating o'er the copse-wood green:
But the tones within our being,
And the spirit-flowers that die,
Perish from the earth forever,
As the fleece-clouds leave the sky.

And the joys of youth, departing,
To the heart return no more;
All their withered leaves lie scattered
On a far receding shore.
Memory may keep their odor,
Wafted from the Lethean wave,
Yet 't is but an empty sweetness
Of a flower that 's in the grave.

Why, oh! why, when earth grows dreary,
And we pine through gloomy hours,
Cannot we, like birds and blossoms,
Seek the far-off sunny bowers?
Why must we bear on our spirits
Shadows dark of many fears,
Staining all life's fairest roses
With the briny dew of tears?

Why must we from friends be parted,
Why repeat the sad farewell,
And forever hear the music
Of the mournful funeral knell?
Why but that the soul which struggles
May grow wisely strong with years?
We may never reap in gladness
If we fear to sow in tears.

Belvidere Seminary, N. J., 1888.

Banner Correspondence.

Georgia.

DOUGLASVILLE.—L. Ellen Smith contributes the following: "Thoughts about Thought": "What is thought? Bright, volatile, no one can enchain it. Our bodies are but the weights that keep us fixed in a certain locality; but thought flies, is winged, never wore a chain. The invisible, the real power, it speaks through the eyes; the most beautiful and expressive are but its bond-slaves. Place the body in squalid poverty—that mysterious inmate, thought, can find a window through which to pass to beautiful heights beyond, ever beyond. Gold cannot buy the power of thinking one great thought. A moment of time, and it has sped to far-away spheres.

Fear not, worship not words. Terrible as beautiful is the power of unseen, unheard thought; when wrong, triumphing for a time, robs a man of his money, perhaps sends him to prison, to the scaffold, to death, the immortal man lives on in his own sphere and form. Those two, the wronged and the wronger, must see each other once more in a clearer light, face to face. No mortal can measure the power of spirit then. Place the body in a palace where only things of beauty meet the eye—its invisible owner may seek out an opening by which to descend to some subterraneous abode and live there.

Thought is a giant. When we first looked it was but a weak infant. Like St. Christopher in the legend of old who undertook to carry the unknown child across the roaring stream, and felt the infant growing a greater and greater weight, until in mid-stream he discovered it was a Christ he was carrying, who represented the whole world, and the doughty saint staggering, nearly fell into the stream, so, too, we of the nineteenth century have looked upon thought as a harmless, bright evanescence, as when a Browning or a Tennyson has set it to music in words; or possibly a great physical power in the brain of an Edison. We, too, are beginning to feel the giant strength of this seeming infant. Laboring men are thinking their thoughts. Their united thought is a growing power. Mental scientists are proving that Thought, Mind, is a conqueror. As Franklin drew electricity from the clouds, many would now draw this mysterious power from above to bless the world. We are only midway. The half we do not know. As the rain descends from heaven upon the earth beneath, and the earth is refreshed by the gentle shower—so, too, gentle, nourishing thoughts of beneficence and beauty come from above to thirsty souls beneath. Each drop carries with it a blessing. In its new storehouse lie many forces. These forces act upon it, act with it. Does the shower number many drops? Do many showers number millions of drops? These gentle, descending thoughts of God to weary and thirsty travelers in our earth-vale, these, too, number millions, yet not one is lost. Is one drop out of the numberless showers that have fructified this earth-home of ours lost? Where is the dwelling place of any one of these many drops? We know not. But we do know that not one shall fall to reach its true place, its true sphere of activity. It shall fructify, beautify, create, inspire. Out of it shall proceed life and love and light. Let such thoughts, then, rest in peace and quietness where they seemingly chance to fall. Let no worry haunt them or hurry them to the surface. In the propitious time to come, if not now, they shall bring forth good fruit for the helping of many. A flower may spring up and show what was there. The raindrop is no more a raindrop; it is more: it has transmuted choice grains beneath the soil into fruitage and flower. A good thought sometimes obscurely lies beneath the soil unnoticed, but it shall speak—shall speak for all to hear; all shall taste of its goodness and purity. Its fragrance, its perfume, are lasting. What is subtle is most lasting, cannot be lost or forever buried. Let the good thoughts spring up, There is always room for them. For their voice an angel could wait and listen. There is much rubbish all about the choice, indwelling grains beneath the soil. Never mind; time, my friend, naught but time, can bring them forth again in all their bright colors or true forms. The thought pierces through many hindrances of every sort, but silently, surely, it works through and through from beneath, claiming in its divine right recognition."

Vermont.

BARNET.—James Esdon writes: "I have taken THE BANNER for over twenty-two years, and find it more interesting than ever. It improves with age; it is progressive, and gives us the advanced thought of the times in spiritual things. Everything in nature has its rise, progress and decay. Thus it is in all material things, and in all spiritual; everything worth preserving in the old will be taken up and absorbed in the new. Everything found in Orthodoxy worth preserving will be absorbed by Spiritualism, and we have reason to believe that with regard to our present theories of Spiritualism we are but on the threshold of the gates ajar, in comparison with what will be our position in the future. New truths will be revealed and received by those who are prepared to receive them."

NORTHFIELD.—D. T. Averill writes: "It was my privilege, recently, to have a sitting with Mrs. N. J. Willis of Cambridge. Among others who spoke to me through the entranced organism of Mrs. Willis was a nephew, who, for short, was called 'Jeff.' He went from Vermont to a Western State, where he married an energetic wife, by whom he was blessed with several children; but while they were in early childhood he was called to lay aside the vestments of mortality and join the unseen majority in spirit-life, leaving his loving wife with much care and responsibility resting upon her. In his talk with me, through Mrs. Willis, Jeff expressed a wish that I would aid in bringing a belief to his wife that he was not dead. In response to this request I wrote his wife, and said to her among other things:

'You are not, I suppose, an entire stranger to the teachings of Modern Spiritualism, so called. Neither are you ignorant of the fact that I believe there is a most momentous truth underlying these teachings, and the phenomena that come in the line of proof. I recently had a sitting with a medium I have known twenty years. Among others who spoke to me through the medium's deeply entranced organism, was your dear husband's mother, Fanny. I asked her about Jeff, and she said he was present and would speak for himself, which he soon did. He said he had been in a state of rebellion against the fate that took him from his family, and frustrated all his plans; but had, at last, found a more restful and a happier condition. He spoke warmly in your praise, and said he felt to rejoice that you had been able to carry your heavy load so bravely, and get along so well. What seemed to trouble him most was his inability to make you realize his presence with you. He wants you should not think of him as dead. He urged me to help you to a belief that he could come to you and talk with you, if you could afford or seek the right conditions; that is, go to some medium he could control. For your own sake and the happiness of him you esteemed so highly, I ask you to look into these things.'"

Missouri.

KANSAS CITY.—"Atlanta" writes inspirationally as follows on "The Soul's Immortality": "Speak only words that will uplift mankind. Study in all you do, in word, thought and deed, to promote the progress of human happiness. Create for your image a model of truth, purity and charity—truth the great outlet for the soul. The inner temple of the God-man, composed of these great attributes, becomes as the God himself. Consider within yourself how great the power bestowed upon man, a living, breathing entity, born for immortality, an eternal progression—the breath of eternal ages strengthening and promoting growth. Consider the inner growth of man, fragrant with divine love, created for a purpose, sustained and made perfect by divine laws, laws immutable, governed by the all-wise Creator, or spirit-power. Call to mind the existing spirit or creative power forcing its way throughout all nature, into all nature and outside all nature, combining the great elements of the life-principle. This life-principle passing on through the progression of ages, reaches its height in man—the elements of the God-man being attuned to the highest principle of nature called love.

Reflecting down into the heart of man, like sunshine upon a clear, bubbling brook, comes to man this great and glorious truth of man's immortality, a sure immortality. The spirit of this immortal love, finding its way into the human heart, starts into life a throbbing, pulsing activity, for the divine will, creating aspirations higher, deeper and more beautiful than the unceasing murmurings of a restless sea. Holding man as the innate perfection of God's unlimited power, created for eternity, knowing there is no death for the soul, only the casting aside of the old soiled garment for the fresher; putting off the mortal for the immortal, going away from the life of shadows and living the higher and real life, with eternal progression written on the soul: This alone should stimulate man to unfold his better nature.

If, however, in the process of this progression, the soul with its innumerable capabilities becomes through man's errors thrown back into a dark or lower condition, then the consciousness or inner life of man must be aroused only by the great law of retribution. The immutable will of God must be obeyed, and thus the evolution of man's progress must necessarily extend into the world of spirit, and there, throughout the endless ages of eternity, gather strength and love eternal from its fountain-head—God."

Illinois.

CHICAGO.—A correspondent writes: "W. J. Colville is still meeting with great success in Chicago, as he is drawing large and enthusiastic audiences every time he speaks, which is very frequently. As he has only one more Sunday in Chicago, Sept. 30th, all who desire to listen to his inspired utterances should avail themselves of the opportunity afforded by the open doors and large seating capacity of Martine's Hall, 55 South Ada street. Services commence precisely at 10:45 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. Voluntary collection.

On Sunday, Sept. 16th, in spite of heavy rain, accompanied by thunder, the hall was nearly full in the morning and crowded in the evening. The topics of discourse were: 'Natural Law in the Spiritual World,' and 'Palestine.'

On Sunday, the 23d, the themes treated were, in the morning, answers to many inquiries from earnest friends; in the evening 'The Direct Bearing of Earthly Life on our Condition in the Spirit-World.' Mr. J. C. Davis presided at the organ."

PEORIA.—A correspondent writes: "Prof. James M. Allen is filling another engagement with the Spiritualist Society of Peoria—his fourth month here since March; returning from Chicago in time to take part in the formal dedication of the beautiful hall which has been leased for a term of five years. The dedication services included a 'spiritual tea,' with music and recitations, on Saturday evening, Sept. 1st, and on Sunday P. M., addresses through the mediumship of Mr. and Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Wilson, of Monmouth, Ill., closing in the evening with an address and public séance. Mrs. Allen will return to Peoria Oct. 1st, her present engagement being in St. Louis, Mo. Address 225 Moss Avenue, Peoria, Ill."

Massachusetts.

LYNN.—"Ad Astra" writes that he has of late experienced what to him is the development of a strange form of mediumship; but from what he says regarding it we judge it to be the same as that which most impressional and trance mediums have experienced. Of what he has learned he says: "It seems that in the other world there is a common universal language that every one going there falls into at once, in an involuntary way, and while I cannot recall the language at all in my normal state, the ideas are distinctly remembered."

During our correspondent's quiet and passives states he becomes en rapport with the spirit-world, and holds communion with such of his friends in that world as he may wish to meet. He says that on one of these occasions he visited the planet Venus, whose people and their surroundings he describes thus:

"I did not clearly see the planet itself, but only the spirits, who are near their own earth. I found two races of people occupying different sides of their globe. On this side they were giants, actually ten feet high; they seemed savage and inhospitable. I did not enjoy their society for a moment, but hurried on to the other side, where the people are about the size of those on this earth. They were very kind and entertaining, and seemed to be of a good disposition, and a civilization very peculiar, but exactly adapted to their condition.

If any have had a like experience I should like to know how it compares with mine."

New York.

NEW YORK CITY.—Mrs. T. K. Wood writes that she has investigated spirit communion as encountered in the presence of mediums in many cities in America, and has met with much satisfaction in so doing: "My best test I received from Mrs. Scott, of 21 West 13th street, this city. I have no interest in Mrs. Scott whatever, but I have in the thousands seeking spiritual truth, who could not be otherwise than satisfied by a visit to this worthy lady and true medium."

New Hampshire.

EAST ALSTEAD.—J. F. Whitney writes: "Sunday, Sept. 16th, Mr. A. E. Tisdale addressed a large audience at Pine Cliff, Lake Warren, morning and afternoon. It was the second meeting held here to listen to the spirit intelligences through Messrs. Kenyon and Tisdale. Mr. Tisdale's lecture was, as are all his addresses, full of deep solid spiritual truth, and was appreciated and enjoyed by the large and intelligent audience present. The deep interest manifested in these meetings will result in a permanent Sunday meeting here next summer. The grounds upon which the meetings were held consist of a large, finely wooded pine grove, overlooking a beautiful lake somewhat larger than Lake Pleasant. The views therefrom of mountain and forest scenery are beautiful and grand. The grove offers every convenience and adaptation for a summer camp, and from conditions created by these meetings here, and the great interest manifested by those blessed with the knowledge of the Spiritual Philosophy, may eventually become a new Spiritualist camp-ground."

California.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Mrs. J. M. Kellogg writes: "In searching the records I have gleaned a few points which I consider as valuable in regard to the matter of woman suffrage, and of special pertinence to the women of New York State. The first enfranchised woman was Lady Deborah Moody of Gravesend, whose name headed the list of voters there, in the Provincial period of our country. The Constitution, on its adoption, secured freedom for men and women alike, and there is now no law preventing a woman from voting who can take the oath of a challenged person. The sole statutory provisions which could be thought to warrant punishing her or the inspectors of election is that which imposes a penalty for 'knowingly voting without being qualified according to the laws.' But the laws do not prescribe sex as a qualification. The oath applies to 'American citizens,' and if women are not American citizens who and what are they? Are we to be recognized only as culprits and a tax-paying something?

I earnestly adjure my sisters of New York State to exercise their right to vote at the coming election. By doing so they will gain a foothold for the further advancement of this reform. The right of women to vote on the same terms with their brothers has existed for a long period. Its exercise therefore is legal.

'Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.' The ballot is the method of consent. Woman has not consented! Take the necessary oath, and assert your legal rights, and the officials are bound to respect those rights in the election of President as well as in your lower courts where they exact your oath before magistrates.

When woman is emancipated, then the purpose of our Constitution will be fulfilled."

The Reviewer.

THE BHAGAVAD GITA; or, Lord's Lay. With Commentary and Notes, as well as References to the Christian Scriptures. Translated from the Sanskrit for the Benefit of Those in Search of Spiritual Light. By Mohini M. Chatterji, M. A. 8vo, cloth, pp. 283. Boston: Ticknor & Co.

A new translation of the sacred scripture of the Hindus, consisting of eighteen discourses given in the form of dialogues between Krishna and Arjuna, the former being the incarnate God of the Hindus, from whom was derived the Christ of Christianity, or the idea of a divine incarnation by which Jesus became the Christ of the Christian Dispensation. Krishna was the son of Brahm, and was the prototype of Christ in these particulars claimed for both: He was miraculously begotten; his mother was a virgin; he performed many miracles; he had a band of disciples, taught excellent morals, and was put to death by his enemies. There is a diversity of opinion as to the date of his advent into the world. Jacolliot and others estimate that it took place three thousand years prior to that of Christ, while in Cashmere it is believed to have been not less than five thousand years ago. Numerous statues to his honor were placed in the ancient temples, and figures of him, carved in the rocks, believed to have been done four thousand years ago. Arjuna was the beloved of Krishna as John was of Christ.

Brahmanical Orthodoxy rests on three classes of interpretation of the Bhagavad Gîtâ, those of Sankarâchârya, Râmânujâchârya and Madhvâchârya, their most important differences being in regard to the relation between the Spirit of God and the real nature of the spirit of man. The present translator considers the first above mentioned to have been the greatest as he was the earliest of the interpreters, and follows him, whom he terms "the spiritual chief of modern India, the revered Sankarâchârya, in text, comments and notes; believing, however, that though the paths differ they all lead to the same goal.

The moral precepts contained in this volume are not excelled by those in the Bible. In the Bhagavad Gîtâ, consisting of 770 verses, the principal topic is the being of God; while scarcely the same amount of exposition is given to it in the whole Bible. The translator explains this by referring to the difference between the Hebrew and the Brâhamic races, and to the fact that the teachings of Jesus Christ were addressed to the "common people." "This one consideration," he adds, "carries the conviction to unprejudiced minds that although Truth is eternally the same, yet, as the nature of man undergoes change, new embodiments of Truth are required in order to reconcile men to the Truth."

The identity of Truth, by whatever name, whenever and in whatever guise it may be presented, being the same, is alluded to in the preface, wherein it is said, "A dutiful study of the blessed Bhagavad Gîtâ in connection with the Holy Bible will, it is believed, show that the word of God does not change with the change of time. Frequent reference is made to the Christian Scriptures to substantiate the truth of this statement, and in Chapter IV. it is held that the acceptance of one revelator furnishes no reason why others should be excluded.

As to priority in the two revelations—the Hindu and the Christian—there can be no question, since that of the Hindus was made three thousand or more years before that of the Christians. This, remarks M. M. Chatterji, should, however, be no cause for antagonism between the adherents of the two systems, rather a cause for congratulation, since the "word" claimed to have been given by God to both establishes the verity of each; for, as he says, if it be found that the Scriptures of the Brahmans and the Scriptures of the Jews and Christians, widely separated as they are by age and nationality, are but different names for one and the same truth, who can say that the Scriptures contradict one another? "A careful and reverent collation of the two sets of Scriptures will show forth the conscious and intelligent design of revelation.... The Brahmanical sages have taught with great emphasis that the easiest road to perfect purity is love of God and love of his creatures. Does Christianity teach anything else?"

* * *

Kindness to Dumb Animals.

The following sketch from an esteemed correspondent in New Zealand is one of the thousands of evidences, that each day furnishes, of the noble qualities discoverable in those we so flippantly call the "brute creation." It also affords a striking lesson, which we should impress upon the young, of our duty toward those generous, loving and faithful creatures that so often strive to do good to the race that equally often returns their love and fidelity by blows and ill-usage. In the following anecdote we scarcely know whether to glory most in Miss Curtis's gold bracelet, or "Floss's" silver collar. Let our readers be the judges:

"The following is taken from The Ballarat Star, June 30th, 1888: The sagacity of a spaniel saved the house of Mr. Curtis, of Nelson, New Zealand, from destruction by fire recently. During the night a log fell from the stove on to the kitchen floor, and the dog noticing it, proceeded to the room of Miss Curtis, and roused her. After the animal had returned to the kitchen, and finding his mistress had not followed, 'Floss' went to her bed-room a second time, and was so persistent that Miss Curtis followed, and was able to quench the fire, which had already burnt a hole through the floor. The New Zealand Insurance Company had a risk of £1,000 on the building, and in acknowledgment of the dog's sagacity they have presented Miss Curtis with a gold bracelet, with inscription, and 'Floss' with a silver collar, with an inscription also."—The Two Worlds.

LOG CABINS, lacking elegance, were yet comfortable homes. Health and happiness were found in them. The best of the simple remedies used are given to the world in Warner's Log Cabin Remedies made by Warner of Safe Cure fame. Regulate the regulator with Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla.

Free Thought.

THE SOUL OF THINGS—WHAT IS IT?

BY WARREN CHASE.

Whatever it may be, it cannot be a personal God, seated on a throne, and surrounded by a host of angels defending his territory from an enemy ruling as a king over a not far distant territory with more inhabitants. These old fables are nearly played out, notwithstanding the multitude of priests employed to uphold them. Science, too, with its telescopes and microscopes, its crucibles and scalpels, has failed to reach it although coming much nearer than theology.

Science takes us as we are in body life, and traces us back to the germs of organic existence, to the magnetic blending of the speck of protoplasm and the enclosing cell, and can go no further in its search after causes of subsequent action in the wonderful and complicated work of forming human or animal bodies, in both of which there is evidently a superior intelligence working mysteriously, and not under the control of parents who simply hold the deposit and shelter the working forces, and perhaps furnish material for the work of construction, but certainly by no will or mental power control it. Theology, with its ignorance and assumed knowledge, steps in here, and attributes all mysterious work to its God, as it did the eclipse, the lightning, the rainbow, and all other phenomena of nature, till science wrenched these from her grasp, in which she shook them over the heads of her ignorant dupes, as she still does all that pertains to human origin and destiny, both individual and collective. To me it seems about time to wrench this ridiculous and absurd theory from the pulpits, which have long enough been only a "comedy of errors" for all ages.

That there is an individual soul for each organic and living form on earth capable in itself of molding the external structure from materials within its reach when the magnetic conditions permit of its action, seems plain enough to me, as I tried to explain in my work on "Essence and Substance," and in my "Forty Years on the Spiritual Rostrum." That these are dependent on no personal God seems plain to me, and that the human are as much, and no more, dependent on the infinite divine and supreme elements of the universe, involving intelligence, as are the animals and plants of our planet. Taking my own existence here as an instance, I cannot attribute it to any God except this universal law, or power, or principle, or whatever any one may call it, for like a majority of cases, it was not one or both parents that designedly sent us forth to battle with life here, and if a God he was cruel to most of us, and not a God of love, as the church taught, for neither here nor hereafter is there any reward for the struggles of life. But if in the realm of infinite variety of beings there is to me a soul-germ indivisible, and hence indestructible, "swinging round" its infinite variety of circles and cycles through external forms of temporary existence in experimental life, conscious at the time in each of its existence there and then, but retiring often in sleep, or otherwise, to a recognition of other existence, then, to me, the phenomena of life are accounted for, and I am reconciled to my lot and work, with hope and confidence in the ultimate good of all experiences. Do not ask me to prove it, and I will not ask you to believe it, but it is a great consolation, a great satisfaction to me, as I never depended on the love or good will of any personal God.

Cobden, Ill., Sept., 1888.

The Empress Josephine.

HOW HER MEMORY IS CHERISHED AT HER EARLY HOME.

Rebuilt in wood after the destruction by an earthquake of its once picturesque streets of stone, Fort-de-France (formerly Fort Royal) has little of interest by comparison with St. Pierre, writes Lefcadio Hearn in Harper's Magazine. There are not many trees outside of the Savanna; the town lies in a marshy plain, and has few fine buildings. But the Savanna itself, the great green place with its shadowy rows of tamarinds, is pleasant to see, and is made romantic by the marble memory of Josephine.

I went to look at the white dream of her there, the wonderful statue executed by master sculptors, erected by the creoles of the colony. It is absolutely lovely!

Sea winds have bitten it; tropical rains have streaked it; some sombre microscopic growth has darkened the exquisite hollow of the throat. And yet such is the human loveliness of the figure that you fancy you are gazing at a living presence, that it almost seems to you it would not be folly to speak to her. Perhaps the profile is less human—statuesque to the point of revealing the chisel. But when you look straight up into the sweet creole face you can believe she lives; all the wonderful West Indian charm of the woman is there.

She is standing just in the centre of the Savanna, robed in the fashion of the directory, with gracious arms and shoulders bare to the winds; one white hand leans upon a medallion sculptured with the eagle profile of Napoleon. Seven tall palms stand in a circle about her, lifting their comely heads into the blue glory of the tropical day.

Within their enchanted ring you feel that you are treading sacred soil, the holy ground of artist and poet. Here in the silence all historical gossip is hushed; the recollections of memoir writers vanish away; here you do not care to know how rumor avers that she lived, or spoke, or laughed, or wept; only the bewitchment of her lives under the thin shadowing of these feminine palms, the soft creole grace, the whole spell of womanly sweetness. Over blue spaces of summer sea, through the vast splendor of azure light, she looks forever yearningly back to the dear, silent, drowsy place of her birth—back to emerald, old-fashioned Trois-Islets, always with the same half-dreamy, half-plaintive smile, unutterably touching.

And everybody loves her; you will not think it foolish for them to love her, once you have looked into her face. Every one is proud of her; the black laborers, the brown marines, the market women, the bonnes—all the curious many-colored population of this quaint little town. If they do not wash her often, if they do not twine flowers about her beautiful neck, and lay bouquets before her white feet, it is only because they are so very, very lazy, dreadfully lazy (and everybody gets lazy sooner or later in this climate); it is not because their affection has grown the least bit cold. There is not one black or brown or yellow mother in all this antiquated, earthquake-shaken city who does not teach her baby to love "Manzelle 'Fifine," the pretty white creole girl who became the bride of an emperor.

That is all they know about her, all they care to know; it is enough. To their childish fancy she always lives, immortal in the summer of her beauty, a darling young mistress of the olden time, a fine white creole lady, to be always petted, to be always revered, to be always approached with a smile. No doubt they often greet her, on their morning way to the market, to fill their baskets with grotesque vegetables and fantastic fruit, with golden and scarlet and azure fish; salute her in their many-vowelled, caressing creole speech: "Bonjou', che! chedoudoux, doudoux-cocott'!" For they all talk to themselves here—I do not know why (even the white settlers fall into the habit)—talk to themselves and to imaginary beings and to the trees, like the women of the Kalevala. And they would lay down their lazy, happy lives to save her from one wanton scratch.

Once she needed all their love very much indeed. It was after the fall of the second empire, when republicanism, even in Martinique, was furious in its zeal to destroy every memory of the Napoleons. Even Manzelle 'Fifine was doomed; preparations were made for her destruction; a rope was fastened about her white neck. But in this torrid, lazy land all things are done slowly, and the news of the design had time to spread far and wide before the statue could be moved.

It was never moved. One morning at sunrise the radical workmen, entering the Savanna, were driven back by a host of turbaned women, brandishing axes, hatchets, cutlasses borrowed from the plantations, knives snatched from the market stalls. "Vidé! bande saloprts! Où donc —vini foute lamain yonne fois assou statue-la! Ou pas capab touche li! Vide!"

All the passionate affection of the slave for the mistress, all the fierceness of African devotion to a fetich, thrilled in the wrath of the crowd that barred the way against the iconoclasts and held it fearlessly—tigerish and terrible. The black radicals recoiled, abandoned their purpose, and left "Manzelle 'Fifine" to smile and dream in peace. Then the crowd cut the ropes away, the women garlanded their idol with flowers, wreathed jasmine blossoms about her throat, heaped bouquets before her white feet. And she stands unchanged in the heart of the drowsy town, in her circle of towering palms, always smiling as in reverie, always looking across the violet sea, through the azure light, toward the green shadows of silent Trois-Islets, where nobody now ever goes.

The Co-operative Temperance Union.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The Universal Coöperative Temperance Union, recently organized at Cassadaga Camp, for the purpose of "eradicating vice in all its forms," is meeting with much hearty commendation and support among Spiritualists. That there is need of such an organization on a humanitarian basis, is demonstrated by the experience of those who have attempted to coöperate with temperance societies existing under Orthodox control. With most of the temperance societies, subscription to the Orthodox creed is considered of far more importance than signing the pledge of total abstinence from alcoholic liquors.

It is time that the temperance sentiment and the sentiment of general reform existing among liberal-minded people should find expression in an organization untrammeled by creeds. People who believe that salvation is first for this world and afterward for the next, should unite to give their sentiment form in good deeds here and now.

It is often asserted that liberal people perform no good works, but it must be remembered that the great social machinery is mainly controlled by the orthodox church, and that before people of unorthodox belief can coöperate for social reform, societies must be organized, and order brought out of the chaos of individualism.

The Universal Coöperative Temperance Union offers such an opportunity for the association of all liberal-minded people in the work of general reform, and should be heartily supported and encouraged.

Let local societies be at once organized. Instructions on how to organize a society for general work may be found in any manual of Parliamentary rules, where there is no person competent to proceed without them. A programme of work may be adopted and followed at every meeting, embracing an essay on a particular subject, with discussion, select readings bearing on the topic, etc., and music or literary features may be added to suit. Temperance and general reform pamphlets may be procured for general distribution, from societies already in existence. A list of suitable pamphlets will be prepared and furnished by the Secretary of the U. C. T. U. to all who may apply.

It is suggested by the officers of the Universal Coöperative Temperance Union that a number of pledges be prepared for signature by those who feel able to take them; a pledge to abstain from alcoholic beverages, another to abstain from tobacco in all its forms, and others for abstinence from other injurious habits and practices may be kept ready for signatures as fast as persons can conscientiously take them. It is thought best not to make any one of these pledges a condition of membership, but to make sympathy and a desire to work for these objects the only condition.

As soon as societies are organized they should report at once to the Secretary of the Universal Coöperative Temperance Union at Cleveland, O. The permanent address of the President of the U. C. T. U. is Solon Lauer, Willoughby, O.; of the Secretary, C. Bird Gould, 306 Sterling Avenue, Cleveland, O.; and of the Treasurer, G. F. Lewis, Corry, Pa. GRAPHO.

September Magazines.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.—The opening paper is by Lieut. W. F. Fullam, U. S. N., and describes "The American Navy of To-Day." Seventeen engravings are given in illustration. "Rambles About Naples" is an interesting sketch of that place and its suburbs, the illustrations of which include a view of the eruption of Vesuvius, April 26th, 1872, from a photograph taken at the time. C. B. Todd contributes a narrative of a jaunt "In Hiawatha's Country," which the readers of Longfellow's poem will be attracted to. A very clever sketch of Southern aspect is "The Colonel's Wooing," by H. C. Wood. Among the contributors to this number is James G. Blaine. New York: 749 Broadway.

NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE.—An illustrated "Literary Symposium of Cincinnati," by nine authors, is the chief feature of this number. Its other contents consist of two complete stories, essays, editorials and thirty-seven illustrations. Boston: 36 Bromfield street. Cincinnati: Robert Clarke & Co.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH gives five general articles on its speciality, and in its supplementary portion shorter articles on various collateral topics. New York.

HORTICULTURAL ART JOURNAL.—A view of the Deaf Mute Institute, at Rochester, N. Y., is given as a frontispiece. "Bamboo as a Decorative Plant" is treated upon, and three pages of colored lithographs of fruit are the remaining illustrations. Rochester, N. Y.: Stecher Lith. Co.

THE SHORTHAND WRITER is published at Downer's Grove, Ill., in the interests of that really superior system, D. P. Lindsley's Tachygraphy, by D. Kimball. All interested in phonetic research or practice should send for a specimen copy of the Writer, and compare the progressive method it inculcates with those older ones to whose demands on its attention the world has heretofore given a willing yet not a sufficiently critical ear.

THE true American has a warm place in his heart for the old LOG CABIN. It's not "English, you know," but from the Log Cabins of America have sprung men in every respect greater than any from the grand castles of Europe. Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla is the best in the world.

Pamphlets Received.

THE GREAT PYRAMID; Its Teaching to us as a People. A Lecture delivered at Chautauqua. By Chas. Latimer, Civil Engineer. Illustrated with engravings and a diagram, and arguments presented in proof of its being the "Pillar of Witness" spoken of in Isaiah xix: 19. 16mo, pp. 37. Chicago: C. H. Jones.

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: Its Causes and Results. By W. S. Bell. 16mo, pp. 81. New York: The Truth Seeker Company.

THE SERVANT QUESTION. Hints on the Choosing and Management of Servants. With Illustrations. 12mo, pp. 23. By H. S. Drayton, M. D.

FREE TRADE. A Speech delivered before the Democratic Club, Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 9th, 1848. With Extract from La Misère de Philosophie. By Karl Marx. Translated into English by Florence Kelley-Wischnewetzky. With Preface by Frederick Engels. 8vo, pp. 48. Boston: Lee & Shepard.

MATERIALISM: Its History and Influence upon Society. By Dr. Louis Büchner. 16mo, pp. 28. New York: Truth Seeker Company.

THE OCCULT. Stoddard's New Guide to Mediums and Mediumship. A Scientific Treatise on the Development of Spirit Mediumship and the Cause and Cure of Disease. By A. M. Stoddard. 12mo, pp. 24. San Francisco, Cal.: The Author.

INFLUENCE. Baccalaureate Sermon by Wm. C. Roberts, D. D., LL. D., President of Lake Forest University. 12mo, pp. 16.

RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS. By L. K. Washburn. 16mo, pp. 23. New York: Truth Seeker Company.

REGULUS' ASTRONOMICAL EPHEMERIS, for 1888. 8vo, pp. 26. Boston: Grant & Co.

BUREAU OF STATISTICS OF LABOR. Proceedings at the Sixth Annual Session of the National Convention of Chiefs and Commissioners at Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888. 8vo, pp. 88.

THE blood is the regulator. Regulate the Regulator with Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla. It cures all impurities. It is the largest bottle in the market—120 doses for $1. Your druggist sells it. Buy it for your family's benefit as well as your own.

Spiritualist Meetings.

NEWARK, N. J.—Meetings will be held every Sunday evening at No. 139 Congress street, commencing at 7 o'clock. Mrs. H. C. Dorn, Secretary.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Meetings are held Sundays, 3 P. M., by First Spiritual Association, at Brant's Hall, 9th and Franklin Avenue. Samuel Penberthy (at Hotel Westeran), Secretary.

Post-Mortem Confessions:

Being Letters Written Through a Mortal's Hand by Spirits Who, When in Mortal, were OFFICERS OF HARVARD COLLEGE: With Comments by ALLEN PUTNAM, A. M., Author of "Natty, a Spirit," "Bible Marvel-Workers," "New England Witchcraft Explained by Modern Spiritualism," "Agassiz and Spiritualism."

This volume contains several letters written by spirits who, while in mortal, were officers of Harvard College, and now freely write out confessions that they were wrong in making that far-famed attack upon Modern Spiritualism in 1857 miscalled The Harvard Investigation. These letters are to be so valuable as history in future times that they merit a place in every family library, deserve to be carefully read now, preserved and handed down to posterity. They came forth in response to letters written by a graduate from that college, who was the personal friend of those officers, and yet their contestant at the time of the sham Investigation. He supplements the correspondence with his views of the timeliness, aims and operations, present and prospective, of Modern Spiritualism itself. It is a unique and instructive work, by one thirty-four years a Spiritualist and eighty-four a mortal.

INDEX.

Harvard Investigation; Agassiz, Professor; Bell, M. D.; Eustis, Professor; Felton, Professor; Gardner, Doctor; Lunt, Editor; Peirce, Professor; Putnam, D. D.; Walker, President; Willis, Doctor.

SUPPLEMENT.

Introduction; Planetary Influences; Openers of the Gates; God; Managers of Spiritualism; Methods, Motives and Aims; For Whose Good? First Needs; Sad Conditions; Various Locations; Mediumship; How Commune; Business; Healing; Consolation; Religious Aspects; Personal Experiences; Appendix.

Paper, price 50 cents. Cloth, 75 cents. (Sold only at retail.) For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THIRD EDITION.

THE NEW EDUCATION:

Moral, Industrial, Hygienic, Intellectual.

Governments, Churches, and Colleges for Many Thousand Years have Striven in Vain to Conquer Crime, Disease, and Misery. A New Method Must be Adopted.

BY JOSEPH RODES BUCHANAN, M. D.

Contents.—The Essential Elements of a Liberal Education. Moral Education. Evolution of Genius. Ethical Culture. Ethical Principles and Training. Relation of Ethical to Religious Education. Relation of Ethical to Intellectual Education. Relation of Ethical to Practical Education. Sphere and Education of Woman. Moral Education and Peace. The Educational Crisis. Ventilation and Health. The Pantological University. The Management of Children—by Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson.

The first two editions of this work were published under the title of MORAL EDUCATION, but the title proved so inadequate as to render a change necessary.

Cloth, pp. 405. Price $1.50, postage 10 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

OUR CHILDREN.

EDITED BY MRS. H. F. M. BROWN.

The Editor says in the preface: "Another book for children! Yes, another. Why not another, and still another? Little folks see the world in books. They call for the news; they want to know what is going on beyond the garden gate. Very likely they know that the future has something for them to do, so the little dears are trying hard to see and to hear what the full-grown world is doing to-day."

Price, single copies, 75 cents, postage 5 cents.

SKETCHES FROM NATURE,

FOR MY JUVENILE FRIENDS.

BY MRS. H. F. M. BROWN.

A new edition of this fine book for children (which has been out of print some years) has been issued by Colby & Rich. It is full of charming stories and sketches for the little ones, written in attractive style.

Price, single copies, 75 cents, postage 5 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Light on the Hidden Way.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

REV. JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE.

The public receive in this book an illustration and defense of the leading truths of Modern Spiritualism from a source entirely distinct from that whence such works are expected to come; yet the most enthusiastic Spiritualist would not desire a fairer or more truthful presentation of the two forms of mediumship it portrays. The book can therefore be warmly recommended to those who would know of Spiritualism from one who is not a Spiritualist, and we fully agree with Dr. Clarke, who, alluding to the position of the author in this regard, says: "Her report, therefore, is an independent one, and deserves attention from those engaged in investigating this occult Borderland, where beings of the other world are reported as coming into relations with the inhabitants of our own."

Cloth. Price $1.00. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE

Mystery of the Ages

CONTAINED IN THE

Secret Doctrine of All Religions.

BY MARIE, COUNTESS OF CAITHNESS.

CONTENTS.

Introductory: The Theory and Practice of Theosophy; The Secret of Mythology; Egyptian and Christian Gnosticism; The Theosophy of the Brahmins, Magi and Druids; Buddhist Theosophy; Esoteric Buddhism; Chinese Theosophy; Pagan Theosophy; Theosophic Ideas of the Ancient Romans; The Kabbala, or Hebrew Theosophy; The Sufis and Mohammedan Theosophy; Christian Theosophy; The Theosophy of Christ; The Theosophic Interpretation of the Bible; Conclusion; Soul, Infinity, The Path, Nirvana, The End.

Cloth, beveled edges, pp. 541. Price $3.00. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THEOSOPHY,

Religion and Occult Science,

With Glossary of Eastern Words.

BY HENRY S. OLCOTT.

CONTENTS.—Forewords. Theosophy or Materialism—Which? England's Welcome. The Theosophical Society and its Aims. The Common Foundation of all Religions. Theosophy: the Scientific Basis of Religion. Theosophy: its Friends and Enemies. The Occult Sciences. Spiritualism and Theosophy. India: Past, Present and Future. The Civilization that India Needs. The Spirit of the Zoroastrian Religion. The Life of Buddha and its Lessons.

From England. Cloth. Price $2.00. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Incidents in the Life of MADAM BLAVATSKY,

Compiled from Information Supplied by Her Relatives and Friends, and edited by A. P. SINNETT, with a Portrait Reproduced from an Original Painting by Hermann Schmiechen.

Contents.—Introduction; Childhood; Marriage and Travel; At Home in Russia, 1858; Mme. de Jelibrowsky's Narrative; From Apprenticeship to Duty; Residence in America; Established in India; A Visit to Europe; Appendix.

Large 8vo, pp. 324. Cloth, $3.00, postage 15 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PRICE REDUCED.

Life as it Is in the World Beyond.

The author, in his preface, says: "The assumption is that the author of the letters comprising this little book has become an inhabitant of the world beyond, and that, having learned something of its conditions and ways, he communicates to his wife here what he has seen, heard and experienced there."

Paper, pp. 194. Price 25 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PROTECTION, OR TARIFF For Revenue?

An Essay on the Unconstitutionality, Injustice and Folly of the Protective System, by JAMES W. STILLMAN.

Pamphlet, pp. 21. Price 15 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

YOUTH, ITS CARE AND CULTURE. By J. MORTIMER GRANVILLE. The work contains chapters on the following subjects: Culture and Improvement; The Eradication of Disease; The Threshold of Life; Boy Manhood in its Early Stage; Boy Manhood in Later Years; Girl Womanhood in its Early Stage; Girl Womanhood in its Later Years; Habits as a Regenerator; Temper and Moodiness; Capricious Appetites; Pleasures; Pastimes; Rewards, and Punishments. Also a chapter on the Physical Education of a Girl.

Cloth. Price $1.00. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

THE WATCHMAN.

An Eight-Page Monthly Journal, Devoted to the Interests of Humanity and Spiritualism. Also, a Mouthpiece of the American and Eastern Congress in Spirit-Life.

OLD PHILOSOPHER, Spirit Editor.

PUBLISHED BY

BOSTON STAR AND CRESCENT CO.,

P. O. Box 1120, Fort Wayne, Ind.

HATTIE A. BERRY,

Editress and Manager.

ARTHUR B. SHEDD,

Assistant Manager.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE.

One Year, $1.00. Clubs of Ten, $8.00. Six Months, 50 cents. Single Copies, 10 cents. Sample copies free.

U. S. postage stamps will be received for fractional parts of a dollar. (1's and 2's preferred.)

To any one sending 10 new subscribers and $8.00, we give as a premium a cabinet photo. of WHITE FEATHER, PEACE BIRD, spirit control of the Editress.

☞ Remit by P. O. Order, drawn on FORT WAYNE, IND., or by Registered Letter. ☜ Payable to HATTIE A. BERRY, Editress and Manager.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

10 cts. per line (Nonpareil) each insertion. Business Cards, 50 cts. per inch each insertion. Special rates for Electrotypes, on application. Preferred position 25 per cent. extra. Objectionable advertisements not inserted under any consideration. Terms strictly in advance. oam 827

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription: One year, $1.50; six months, 75 cents; three months, 40 cents; single number, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty-five cents—a sum which barely covers the price of blank paper and press-work. Sample copies free. Je4

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science.

PUBLISHERS AND EDITORS—GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Mental Therapeutics, Human Liberty, and the Culture of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, $2.00 per year; single copies 25 cents.

Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI-MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der „mystischen" und „magischen" Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, Alf. Russ. Wallace, der Professoren Barrett und Coues, mehrerer Brahminen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden.

Subscription: $1.75 for six months, $3.50 per annum.

Messrs. COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Au21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL devoted to the interest of Spiritualism in all its aspects. MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of Subscription, in advance, per year, $1.20. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order on Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75, Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper, 12mo, pp. 240. Price 60 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Au9

THE CARRIER DOVE.

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform. Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER. DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, Publishers. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of the Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also Spirit Pictures by our Artist Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms: $2.50 per year; single copies, 10 cents.

Address all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 32 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal. F6

SEND NAME

AND POST-OFFICE ADDRESS, plainly written, to THE BETTER WAY, CINCINNATI, O., and receive a sample copy of this bright Spiritual Weekly Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year, but no obligation to subscribe will be incurred by sending for a sample copy. It will cost you only a postal card and a minute! tf Au13

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.

MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Assistant Editor.

AN EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY, devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address, GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

THE oldest reform journal in publication.

Price, $3.00 a year,
$1.50 for six months,
8 cents per single copy.

Now is your time to subscribe for a live paper, which discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.

Address J. P. MENDUM,
Investigator Office,
Paine Memorial,
Ap2 Boston, Mass.

TWELFTH EDITION.

THE VOICES.

BY WARREN SUMNER BARLOW.

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes.

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality of Matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF PRAYER enforces the idea that our prayers must accord with immutable laws, else we pray for effects, independent of cause.

Twelfth edition, with a new stippled steel-plate engraving of the author from a recent photograph. Printed in large, clear type, on beautiful tinted paper, bound in beveled boards.

Price $1.00, postage 10 cents.

☞ Persons purchasing a copy of "THE VOICES" will receive, free, a copy of Mr. Barlow's pamphlet entitled "ORTHODOX HASH, WITH CHANGE OF DIET," if they so order.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. eow

NEW EDITION—PRICE REDUCED.

THE MINISTRY OF ANGELS REALIZED.

BY MR. AND MRS. A. E. NEWTON.

The continued call for this well-known pamphlet—which was one of the earliest publications in the interest of Modern Spiritualism, and has now been before the public for more than a third of a century—has induced the publishers to issue a new edition, at a reduced price. It is specially adapted to awaken an interest in the great spiritual movement of our day in religious minds, and has been largely bought for gratuitous circulation among members of churches. The lessened price at which it is now offered will facilitate that object.

Price, single copies, 15 cents; 8 copies for $1.00. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SPIRIT WORKS: Real but not Miraculous. A Lecture read at the City Hall in Roxbury, Mass., on the evening of Sept. 21st, 1853, by ALLEN PUTNAM.

This lecture, delivered in Roxbury, Sept. 21st, 1853, and repeated at the Melodeon, in Boston, Nov. 1st, same year, though preceded by several addresses by Laroy Sunderland, A. E. Newton, J. M. Spear and others, in smaller rooms, and on more private notice, was the first Lecture on Spiritualism in this vicinity to which the public was invited through the press and by posters, and the first to be printed and issued in pamphlet form. Though the author says that it seems crude now, and contains some allusions to local and transient events, it is interesting and valuable because of its connection with the introduction of Spiritualism.

Paper, pp. 32. Price 25 cents, postage free. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

VARIOUS REVELATIONS: With an Account of the Garden of Eden, and the Settlement of the Eastern Continent, as related by the leaders of the wandering tribes. From the Age of Enoch, Seth and Noah, to the Birth of Jesus of Nazareth, as related by Mary, his Mother, and Joseph, the Foster Father, with a Confirmation of his Crucifixion and Resurrection, as related by Pilate and the different Apostles. Also, an Account of the Settlement of the North American Continent, and the Birth of the Individualized Spirit which has followed.

Cloth, pp. 391. Price $2.00, postage free. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

AN EYE-OPENER. "Citateur, par Pignult." Le Brun, Doubts of Infidels: Embodying thirty important questions to the clergy. Also forty close questions to the Doctors of Divinity, by ZEPA.

Cloth, 75 cents, postage 5 cents; paper, 50 cents, postage 2 cents. For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FREE!----PREMIUMS!----FREE!

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

Persons sending DIRECT TO COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth Street, Boston, Mass., $3.00 for a year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT, will be entitled to a choice of the following Premiums:

All New Subscribers, or Old Patrons, on Renewing their Subscriptions

TO THE

Banner of Light,

MAY OBTAIN FOR THEMSELVES AND FRIENDS THE FOLLOWING PREMIUMS BY COMPLYING WITH THE TERMS ABOVE MENTIONED.

A choice of TWO of either of the following named

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

will be given for one year's subscription, or one of them for a six months' subscription:

MR. LUTHER COLBY, Editor of the Banner of Light; MR. ISAAC B. RICH, Business Manager, or MISS M. T. SHELHAMER, Medium for the Banner of Light Public Free Circles.

These Photographs are all from recent sittings, and are finely executed by one of the best photographers in this city.

Price for additional Photographs, if desired, 35 cents each.

Or a copy of either of the following Books:

Spirit Invocations; or, Prayers and Praises

Publicly offered at the Banner of Light Circle-Room Free Meetings, by more than One Hundred Different Spirits, of Various Nationalities and Religions, through the vocal organs of the late Mrs. J. H. Conant. Compiled by Allen Putnam, A. M., author of "Bible Marvel-Workers," "Natty, a Spirit," "Spirit Works Real, but not Miraculous," etc., etc., etc.

Mr. Putnam has with skillful hand arranged in this volume, in comprehensive fashion, many living gems of thought, which are clothed in eloquence of diction, and thrill the prayerful heart with spiritual fervor. From the soulful petitions scattered through its pages, the doubter of Spiritualism's capability to minister to the devotional side of man's nature can draw ample proof that he is in error. The weary of heart will find in its holy breathings for strength, sent out to a higher power, rest from the cares that so keenly beset the pilgrim in life's highway. The sick in soul may from its demonstrations of the divine possibilities within, drink of the waters of spiritual healing and rejoice; and the desolate mourner can compass, through its unvailment of the certainty of reunion with the departed, a consolation which nothing earthly can take away.

Cloth, pp. 256.

A Romance of Caucasian Captivity; or, The Federati of Italy.

By G. L. Ditson, M. D. This is a romance of the most exciting character, and full of stirring incidents. The Federati were a band or association of individuals in Sardinia when it was still an independent kingdom, who were pledged to undying hostility to ultramontanism, and therefore were friends of a constitutional system.

It is skillfully conceived and constructed, its wide variety of characters affords constant excitement and pleasure, and its progress among a train of pleasurable incidents is almost like a poetic vision of the tripping of the rosy hours. It will provoke a favorable comparison with some of the most praised romances of the times.

Visions of the Beyond,

By a Seer of To-Day; or, Symbolic Teachings from the Higher Life.

Edited by Herman Snow. This work is of exceeding interest and value, the Seer being a person of elevated spiritual aspirations, and of great clearness of perception, but hitherto unknown to the public. The special value of this work consists in a very graphic presention of the truths of Spiritualism in their higher forms of action, illustrating particularly the intimate nearness of the spirit-world, and the vital relations between the present and future as affecting human character and destiny in the hereafter. Bound in cloth, pp. 186.

Or choice of ONE of the below-described beautiful works of art:

ENGRAVINGS.

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE.

Painted by Joseph John, and engraved on steel by J. R. Rice. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches; engraved surface, 16x21 inches.

THE ORPHANS' RESCUE.

Engraved on steel by J. A. J. Wilcox, from the original painting by Joseph John. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches; engraved surface, 15x20 inches.

HOMEWARD.

Designed and painted by Joseph John. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches.

FARM-YARD AT SUNSET.

Copied from the well-known and justly celebrated painting designed by Joseph John. Stein, copied in black and two tints. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches.

THE DAWNING LIGHT.

From the original painting by Joseph John. Engraved on steel by J. W. Watts. Size of sheet, 20x24 inches.

For each additional Engraving 50 cents extra.

Any person sending $3.50 for one year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to Hollyer's Line and Stipple Steel Plate Engraving of the late

Henry W. Longfellow in His Library

At "Craigie House," Old Cambridge, Mass.

The plate is 24x32 inches. The central figure is that of the GREAT POET. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical.

This beautiful historic work of art is a lasting souvenir and ornament for sitting-room, parlor, library or office of any American home. We will mail the engraving free to any one sending us $3.50 for a year's subscription for the BANNER OF LIGHT, or we will send the engraving alone for $1.00. The publisher's trade price for the engraving is $7.50

Any person sending $1.50 for six months' subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to ONE of the following Pamphlets:

AN EPITOME OF SPIRITUALISM AND SPIRIT MAGNETISM. The above is the title of a pamphlet of over one hundred pages. We know of no one book that gives to the inquirer so good an understanding of the teachings of Spiritualism as this. It is designed to convey facts to Spiritualists, also to do a missionary work with skeptics and church-members. Two copies for one year's subscription, one for six months'.

SUMMARY OF SUBSTANTIALISM; OR, PHILOSOPHY OF KNOWLEDGE. By Jean Story. 12mo, paper, small pica, 113 pages.

DEATH, IN THE LIGHT OF THE HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY. By Mary F. Davis. Paper.

AGASSIZ AND SPIRITUALISM; Involving the Investigation of Harvard College Professors in 1857. By Allen Putnam.

DANGER SIGNALS; AN ADDRESS ON THE USES AND ABUSES OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By Mary F. Davis. Paper.

TALES OF THE SUN-RAYS. What Hans Christian Andersen tells a dear child about the Sun-Rays. Paper.

THE LIFE. The main object of this little volume is to give to suggestive teaching a recognition and a force (in the domain of religion and morals) greater than dictation has. Paper.

SERPENT AND SIVA WORSHIP, and Mythology in Central America, Africa and Asia; and the Origin of Serpent Worship. Two Treatises. By Hyde Clark and C. Staniland Wake, M. A. I. Edited by Alexander Wilder, M. D.

Or any two of the following Pamphlets:

ANSWER TO CHARGES OF BELIEF IN MODERN REVELATIONS, ETC. Given before the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston, by Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Newton.

RELIGION OF SPIRITUALISM. By Eugene Crowell, M. D.

REVIEW of a Lecture by James Freeman Clarke.

SYMBOL SERIES of Three Lectures, by Cora L. V. Tappan.

SOLAR AND SPIRITUAL LIGHT, AND OTHER LECTURES, delivered by Cora L. V. Tappan.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF EDWARD S. WHEELER, the Distinguished Impravisator and Lecturer. By George A. Bacon.

INNER MYSTERY. An Inspirational Poem, delivered by Miss Lizzie Doten. Paper.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE:

Per Year.....$3.00
Six Months.....1.50

INSPIRATIONAL AND TRANCE SPEAKING. A paper read before the Conference of Spiritualists, held in Lawson's Rooms, 144 Gower street, London, W. C., Eng., by Mr. J. J. Morse.

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not peruse anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he specially desires to call our attention to.

☞ When the post-office address of THE BANNER is to be changed, our patrons should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not omit to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as THE BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1888.

Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE, Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place), corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:

THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY, 14 Franklin Street, Boston.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY, 39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,

PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.

☞ Business Letters should be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All other letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the oncoming light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

The Drink Traffic.

It would be good for everybody to read with thoughtful care the truly impressive, if not masterly, speech of Judge Pitman to the Prohibitory Convention of Massachusetts, if only to obtain a juster and more complete idea of what we are all summoned to decide by our ballots this year. This effort is not recommended to general reading, it is hardly necessary for us to say, from any merely political motive, but purely out of a desire that no one shall go uninformed of the real situation in which affairs are generally to be found. When it can be said, as it certainly can to-day, that a powerful influence like the saloon controls the government of our chief cities, and steadily threatens to obtain the supremacy of our system of government, it is full time to seriously heed the warnings that from time to time are sounded by men who jealously guard the integrity of our institutions, and would see none of their foundations impaired.

"The drink traffic," said Judge Pitman, "must stand charged with the waste of an enormous amount of the national wealth, with the impairment of the wealth-producing power, the disorganization and the degradation of labor, the manufacture of paupers and criminals, an immeasurable injury to the public health, the destruction of thousands of American homes, the untold agonies of its victims, and through the laws of heredity the vitiation of the human stock." And it is thus the special enemy of republican institutions, which must ever rest, as long as they continue, on the intelligence and virtue of the citizen. It is not only the enemy of our free system of government, but of education, of religion, of civilization, and of the human race.

A well-known writer is quoted as saying in the Atlantic Monthly, "Party politics in the United States to-day are controlled by the saloon, and when action against the drink evil is proposed, politicians revolt as from a parricidal proposition." Mr. John Morley of England says "that no condition of popular well-being approaches the drink question in its bearing upon that well-being. There is nothing like intemperance for the depth and breadth of the curse that it sheds over the land." Cardinal Manning says to Englishmen, "We shall not win till we have ranged the popular will against the enormous capital engaged in the liquor traffic." James Russell Lowell says, "What we want is an active class who will insist, in season and out of season, that we shall have a country which shall be as great morally as it is materially; a country whose very name shall not only, as now it does, stir us as with the sound of a trumpet, but shall call out all that is best within us, by offering us the radiant image of something better and nobler and more enduring, of something that shall fulfill our own thwarted aspirations when we are but a handful of forgotten dust in the soil trodden by a race whom we shall have helped to make more worthy of their inheritance."

Richard Cobden declared that "the temperance cause lies at the foundation of all social and political reform," a statement quite as strong as it is broad, and one that, if in any considerable degree true, challenges the serious thought of all well-wishers for the human race. Judge Pitman sought especially to impress upon his hearers and readers that "the prosperity of the workingmen of this country depends, not upon an exorbitant tariff, but upon the blessings with which a beneficent Providence has crowned our country, upon their energy, their skill and their intelligence, their education and religion, and the character of the homes which make, sustain and cheer them. Of all these the dramshop is the deadly antagonist." Nor do we think he has stated the case any too strongly. The drink habit undeniably drains away its victim's resources, undermines his moral energy, interferes with his regular industry, and unsettles his healthy and normal relations with everybody and everything.

The matter has at last assumed such importance that it is becoming a serious question whether the saloon shall control society, or society shall control the saloon. The primary struggle between the opposing forces is for the possession of the machinery of government, under which the liquor traffic derives its privileges and obtains its status from which to extend its operations.

Those calling themselves prohibitionists are striving to obtain power to forbid both the manufacture and the sale of intoxicants altogether. They would root out the evil at once and forever, and after making a strictly sober nation proceed soberly with the rest of the public business. Those, on the other hand, who favor high licensing, are clearly working in the same direction, if not with the same definite object, doubtless anticipating for high license that it will ultimately tax the traffic out of existence, as the national government taxed the old State banks out of existence. Any method is a good one that promises soonest and most effectually to keep the evil within the narrowest bounds, or suppress it altogether.

Faith and Form.

Hume says that "sects of philanthropy, in the ancient world, were more zealous than parties of religion; but, in modern times, parties of religion are more furious and enraged than the most cruel factions that ever arose from interest and ambition." This was said over a hundred years ago by perhaps the most penetrating thinker of his age. He had led the way up to this observation by a previous remark, that "such is the nature of the human mind that it always lays hold on every mind that approaches it; and as it is wonderfully fortified by an unanimity of sentiments, so it is shocked and disturbed by any contrariety. Hence the eagerness which most people discover in a dispute; and hence their impatience of opposition, even in the most speculative and indifferent opinions." This fairly explains religious disputes, on plain principles of human nature, and sufficiently shows how differences of views readily develop into factious spirit, heated feuds, and violent conflicts.

All matters of faith being at best but matters of speculation, of course it is impossible that anything about them should ever be so well settled and established as to be beyond dispute. Hence we may expect that controversies of varying violence will go on, on the purely theologic basis, without end. The early priests of the Christian religion found themselves compelled to adopt the same method as the prevailing schools of philosophy which they sought to supplant; to borrow the description of Hume, "as philosophy was widely spread over the world, at the time when Christianity arose, the teachers of the new sect were obliged to form a system of speculative opinions; to divide, with some accuracy, their articles of faith: and to explain, comment, confute and defend with all the subtlety of argument and science. Hence naturally arose keenness in dispute, when the Christian religion came to be split into divisions and heresies." This, be it understood, is from the pen of one who stands acknowledged one of the world's first historians, a man who sought with even more than a judicial calmness and balance to become possessed of the truth, whatever and wherever it was to be found.

We thus see how naturally the whole of this ceaseless and angry contest over faith degenerates into a contest over form merely; how men contend about the husk, while they imagine they are engaged in a struggle to preserve what it contains. We were reading recently in Caroline Fox's "Memories of Old Friends," her record of what Dr. Calvert said of Savonarola and his influence, in his day, over all the highest minds of Florence and elsewhere. The doctor remarked thus, entirely corroborating the view we have ourselves taken of this whole matter of Faith and Form: "Luther was the first who revived the conviction that it was the inward principle, rather than the outward manifestation of forms or ceremonies, to which Christ claimed man's loyalty; the heart rather than the senses which should do him homage. This sublime and all-important truth was only revealed to him by degrees: he began attacking abuses, and was mightily startled at finding that the Principle was in fault; he was frightened at the work before him, and not less alarmed as the work proceeded, fancying that he did more harm than good by the stir of thought which he had impelled throughout Europe.

"This alarm was perfectly natural, and it was natural, too, that evil should be evolved in the process—natural and almost necessary. There has been through all time a constant hankering after the Law as opposed to the Gospel; it has been perpetually restored in some form or other; one Form wears itself out, then a master-mind arises, teaches a pure principle, and can only transmit it by a new Form, which in its turn wears out and dies, and another takes its place. Form is in its nature transitory, but the living Principle is eternal." This is exceedingly well said, and especially because there is discernible in it none of the controversial spirit. We can readily see that it is this enlistment of men's feelings against the inevitable surrender of a dead and dying Form, that is the cause of factions and conflicts. Even when men's feelings are most hotly engaged they feel surest of being calm and fair. So deceitful are the disguises which human motives are ever ready to adopt. It is, after all, then, only Forms that have caused so many religious wars and cost so many human lives. Why is it not time to abandon the contest as futile, and search only for the substance?

In these times, just as in past times, the self-same conflicts of faction are raging over the preservation of mere Forms. For daring to offer a new interpretation of truth, that is, for throwing it into a new Form, in which it may be better apprehended popularly, and thereby work greater effect, leading and gifted minds in the modern church are now being called upon, all over the land, to bear the frown of partisan and non-progressive bigotry. The evidence is apparent on every hand that a new circle of influence has begun to develop which will, despite the desperate struggles of the Conservative element, result in modifying ironclad creeds, and in elevating humanity to a position where present reason will be superior to inherited dogma. This development is in harmony with the law of life. It is, that process of evolution in human belief which is life itself. There is no escape from it, and there is no use in resisting it. Rather let it be gladly recognized and accepted as the potent promise of that progress which mankind are steadily making from the simple to the complex, from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous, and from the heterogeneous to the more heterogeneous. Did people but realize that there could be no life without this incessant growth and development, which is its law, instead of resisting these changes which are going on, they would welcome them as the surest proofs of the immortality of the human spirit.

The Fiftieth Anniversary

Of the birth of A. B. FRENCH, Esq., occurred on Thursday, Sept. 13th, and on the evening of that date was observed by a large and brilliant assemblage of friends and relatives at his home in Clyde, O., many of whom had come long distances to pay their respects to this worthy gentleman.

In addition to those present who expressed their kindly appreciation of Bro. French, many others in various parts of the continent, either individually or in their capacity as officers of various Spiritualist societies, etc., sought representation by correspondence, and mingled their written congratulations with those uttered by the speakers of the evening—THE BANNER OF LIGHT ESTABLISHMENT, and J. R. Francis, Associate Editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, being represented among these well-wishers by letter.

Miss Emma Train forwarded an original poem in honor of the day.

Bro. French was made the recipient of many choice gifts on this occasion, among them being a gold watch and chain from his employés, as a token of the high regard in which he was held by them as a business man and a citizen; and a gold-headed cane from his Clyde friends.

Mr. French eloquently responded to the congratulations of his friends, and received the gifts with a feeling which was deeper than expression. His remarks are thus epitomized by The Enterprise of Clyde, 20th inst.:

"It had been said there was a supreme moment in every life, an hour when it reached some altitude never again to be attained. He felt this to be the supreme hour of his life, surrounded by so many friends. Nearly thirty years ago he left his father's home in eastern Ohio, and settled with his wife in Clyde. Everything had changed since he came here. Of the active business men then, not one was in business now. He well remembered his struggle to begin housekeeping when he landed here with only thirty dollars, and the battle had sometimes been fierce during the years that had passed; and now, after living here so many years, he did not know how to be grateful enough for these kindly expressions from his friends and neighbors. He was glad his old father had been spared to visit him once more and be present on this occasion. When he left his childhood's home some thirty years ago he left four bright-eyed girls behind. But now only one was left. Death had borne three of them away. He was glad the remaining one could be with him to-night. His friend, Mr. Ordway, had come from New England to greet him, and this, too, made his heart glad. But nothing could touch him more than this beautiful gift from his employés. He should think of them as he looked at the hands in the dial of the watch, telling of the fast-flying hours. His friends had been too generous. They had provided him with beautiful books and tokens, an umbrella to shelter him from the storms, glasses to aid his dimming eyes, and a cane upon which to lean. He had never used one thus far in life, but would probably soon need one. He had tried thus far to battle the world alone, but he now felt the need of friends so much as now, and to know he was surrounded by them filled him with gratitude he could not adequately express."

At the close of Mr. French's remarks a season of general congratulation ensued, followed by lunch, served by the ladies. After spending a very pleasant and memorable evening the guests dispersed.

The Enterprise in summing up its tribute to Bro. French speaks as follows:

"During his residence in Clyde he has won for himself a liberal competence, and what is far better, a good name and the universal respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens. And it is not alone among the people of Clyde that his worth is known, as was evidenced by the many letters received from prominent men and women all over the country. Mr. French's influence extends through many States, and it is always for good. His town people are proud of him, and glad to own him as a citizen of our village."

We can but heartily repeat at this time what we have often previously expressed: our high appreciation of Bro. French's half-century's career as a brave and worthy man among men, and an honest, faithful and eloquent expounder of the Spiritual Philosophy of the nineteenth century. May his years be multiplied on earth and full of genial happiness, and (as in the past) of that good fruit which increases the spirit's treasures in the Better Home toward which all our footsteps are daily drawing nigh.

Seeing with the Eyes Shut.

The faculty of seeing without using the physical optics has been a great puzzle to medical men and others for many years, and much discussion has arisen upon the subject, but without definite results. We have been led to make the following remarks by seeing in the daily press the statement that a blind man had recently died in Paterson, N. J., who possessed the faculty of making change as well as if he could see, and that he could readily distinguish not only coins, but the denomination of bank notes. He had officiated, the account says, for many years as cashier in a restaurant, and was never known to make a mistake.

Many instances have been known of persons deprived of their sight, even of those born blind, who could distinguish one color from another, and do other equally wonderful things. In one of the outer wards of this city is a man who is totally blind, yet he works in his garden, sets out and trims plants, and prunes and ties up grapevines, and goes about his garden and his house as familiarly as one would with the full use of his eyes. Not long since we read of a blind man in England whose occupation was cleaning and repairing watches.

Here is our explanation: After losing the use of his physical eyes the blind man's spiritual eyes are opened, so that he can see coins and bankbills the same as though his visual appendages were intact. Why we have no doubt that our hypothesis is correct, is the fact that while we have had sittings with mediums for years, we have found, when they were entranced, that their eyes were always closed, and yet they—or the spirits who had control for the time being of their bodies—could read printed matter and manuscripts the same as if the eyes of the medium were open. Some call this "mind-reading"; but we do not. It is spirit-reading—by this we mean, in the sense that every human being is a spirit, although enviroued in the physical form.

As, according to St. Paul, man has a spiritual body as well as a physical body—which we know to be a fact—it follows that the blind man (although possibly not a medium to a degree that will enable other spirits to act through him) sees with his spirit-eyes, just the same as he will see when he passes to spirit-life after having been divested of his earthly form.

When science advances sufficiently to comprehend the hidden forces of nature in man, then, and not until then, will the world at large understand what is considered at the present time a mystery to all except a few individuals who have, through the aid of fully developed mediums, come into a knowledge by long experience of the esoteric laws controlling such cases, as we have here but briefly alluded to.

READ what the Magnetic Shield Co. of Chicago says about their MAGNETIC INSOLES.

Sioux Indian Treaty.

Our thanks are extended to Representative Morrill, of Kansas, for a slip from the Record of the 50th Congress, first session, under date of Washington, D. C., Sept. 17th, in which occurs the following significant entry:

Mr. Morrill submitted the following resolution; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

Whereas, the following statements in relation to the action of the Sioux Indian Commission have appeared in several of the leading newspapers of the country, and contain grave charges of official misconduct on the part of said commission; therefore,

Be it Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to inform this House whether there is any foundation for these statements, and to take such steps as may in his judgment be proper to ascertain whether undue influence has been used to secure the signatures of any of the Indians to the treaty.

The "statements" referred to in this extract from the Congressional Record, comprise articles in full or in part from the New York World (headed "Alleged Lies to Indians—Harsh Methods being used, it is said, to Coerce the Sioux"); the New York Tribune (headed "Bulldozing the Indians"); the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Omaha Bee, the quotation from which latter paper is a close condensation of the others:

"And now Judge Wright, of the commission, is telling them that if they refuse to sign this bill the troops will distribute them among other reservations, and they will lose their land without compensation. The commission has taken possession of the telegraph, and no dispatch can be sent without being inspected."

In another column of THE BANNER will be found an article headed "Voice of the Sioux," wherein, among other matters, we refer to the position of Dr. Bland, (Secretary of the Indian Defense Association) and the efforts we have made to sustain his views of the Sioux and their rights; and further make the point that the press of the country as a whole is now falling into line with the demand for justice to this really persecuted people. It seems to be dawning gradually upon the editorial comprehension everywhere that between the money of the railroads and the land-syndicate, the threats of the Commissioners, and the misrepresentations of the missionaries the Indian has, in the case of this proposed treaty, but a poor prospect for justice!

The attention of Congress seems at last to have been awakened, and we trust some action will now be taken which shall show the would-be land-grabbers that the Nation has yet a Conscience!

☞ Modern Spiritualism claims the reverence of all sincere men, who perceive that the human soul holds it in spite of ridicule and contempt, and finds in it an incitement to virtue and a means of advancement.—*Dr. F. L. H. Willis.

A Parisian "Banquo."

The Woman's World—issued by Cassell & Co., New York, London and Paris—comes to us for October with an interesting table of contents, to which several fine engravings give added zest. In the article "A Walk Through the Marais," illustrated by Miss Mary Robinson, occurs the following paragraph regarding the Hôtel de Soubise, said to be historically correct, in which a "dead" enemy in Paris paid his respects to the royal host of the evening, much as "Banquo" is represented to have done in Scotland, in the case of the whilom "Thane of Cawdor":

"This was the home of Henri le Balafré, and from these firmly-gated portals the ghost of the Cardinal of Lorraine issued silently in the New Year of 1574, and went the very way that we shall go to-day, toward the Palace of the Louvre.... Queen Catherine de Médicis was at dinner, radiant and fresh (she preserved her fair complexion at fifty years of age). 'At last we shall have peace!' she cried, 'for the Cardinal of Lorraine is dead. Let us drink to his health!' But in the act of drinking she let fall the cup; and all those ruffled and ear-ringed courtiers, those jewelled and stiff-bodiced ladies, saw with surprise a look of palsied horror on her face. For there stood the Cardinal with his mocking smile bowing in answer to her toast. More than a month after, writes Pierre d'Estolle, the Queen-mother could not be left alone; for everywhere she saw the ghost of the Cardinal standing at her elbow, and beckoning her to follow."

Thomas R. Hazard.

We had a very pleasant private interview last week with Spirit Thomas R. Hazard, in which he assured us of the lively interest he still took in the immense work for good, as he said, which THE BANNER was accomplishing; spoke of his great friendship for us personally, and assured us that our spirit-friends possessed the power to fully care for us both physically and mentally; that he was more active than ever in his endeavor to promulgate the grand truths of the Spiritual Philosophy from his standpoint in spirit-life. He wished to send greeting to his brother, Joseph P. Hazard, of Peacedale, R. I., who was blessed, he said, with a knowledge of spirit-return; and desired us to say to him that he is with him often, and that all the dear ones bring love and blessing to him from their happy homes beyond.

To Inquirers.

☞ As numerous letters are often directed to this office from distant points inquiring as to who are the best mediums to apply to for spiritual information, we take this method of replying to all such that, while we believe the mediums advertising in our columns are reliable, yet we cannot recommend any special medium to any particular person, as the medium who may satisfy one investigator may not be able to meet the requirements of another. It is best, therefore, for each investigator to visit such mediums as he may believe possess the power of bringing him into communication with the spirit-world, and thus judge of their claims for himself.

☞ As we publish the advertisements of spiritualistic Sunday meetings in Boston each week gratuitously, we feel to say that the managers of these meetings should call attention to THE BANNER from their rostrums occasionally, to the end that its patronage may be increased thereby. It is and always has been our endeavor to aid these societies to the best of our ability in an impartial manner. Not only through our columns have we done so, but have many times assisted several of them financially. Now that the fall and winter meetings are about commencing, we shall be pleased to keep our readers posted as heretofore regarding the services held under their respective auspices.

AS THE BANNER is a cosmopolitan sheet, the above remarks will apply to other localities as well as Boston.

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND has been speaking with her accustomed eloquence and effect each Sunday morning and evening, at Grand Army Hall, Cincinnati, O., during September. Next Sunday, 30th, concludes her work there, when she returns to her society in Chicago.

"The Spiritualism of 1888."

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Permit me to express the gratification I have felt in reading the admirable essay of Dr. Willis, under the above title, in your paper of Sept. 15th. His brief but comprehensive epitomé of the history of Spiritualism in all ages of the past, with its culmination in our own time—his portrayal of the leading influence or tendency which has caused its decadence after every successive period of revival, namely, the tendency to sacerdotalism and ecclesiasticism—and his statement of the claims of the present movement on the attention of all thoughtful and truth-loving minds—are masterly and cogent, showing a breadth of view and depth of penetration not often exhibited by those who treat of these subjects. I know of nothing to compare with it, within similar limits. It should be read and studied by all who would rightly apprehend the status and bearings of the great spiritual movement of our age. It is, in fact, a trumpet-call to all who have accepted the grand central truth of Spiritualism to turn away from the barren theorizings, the petty disputes and the bitter controversies over valueless questions, in which many are unfortunately involved, and earnestly devote ourselves to illustrating in daily life the vitalizing effect of that truth, "by our enkindled and extended love of justice, righteousness, purity, truth and holiness."

In saying this I do not overlook the fact that the address contains some expressions—owing, doubtless, to its brevity—that I could wish had been differently worded, or at least more fully expounded. For example, after correctly defining the generally accepted meaning of the term Spiritualist, as being one who believes that excarnated human spirits can and do hold intelligent communication with persons still in the body, Dr. Willis asks if this central idea "is not an all-sufficient bond of union? Is anything more needed?"

Nothing more is needed, of course, to constitute one a Spiritualist in the popular and dictionary meaning of the term; but surely abundant experience has shown that something beyond the mere belief in the fact of spirit-communication, interesting as it is, is required to create a bond of heart-union between people. The sharp antagonisms, the unfriendly criticisms, the jealousies, rivalries, and scandal-mongering that are all too prevalent among those who cherish this belief, give conclusive testimony that something more is sadly needed. What is this something? One thing, surely, is brotherly and sisterly love—a practical recognition of that Universal Brotherhood, a conviction of which should grow out of the belief that all human beings are spirits, and the offspring of one Infinite Spirit, hence entitled to our kindly regard. Another thing needed is a supreme love of Truth; and a third thing is, an earnest aspiration for personal rightness, righteousness, or perfection of character. These three things are comprehended in the one word, spirituality. Where this exists, in addition to Spiritual-ism, there is a bond of unity of the strongest character; without it, there can be no union, except of the most superficial kind, as Spiritualists everywhere have found.

No doubt Dr. Willis sees this as fully as any of us, and would have given it a clear expression, had he presented his views more at large.

Not to mention other points, I will only add that I trust the Doctor will give us, ere long, in his usual eloquent and trenchant style, his perceptions as to the practical effect which Modern Spiritualism should have in modifying and improving the domestic, social, industrial, commercial and political life of our age, and what Spiritualists can and ought to do, through co-operation or otherwise, to effect such improvement. Surely, if Spiritualism reveals its vitalizing effect in individuals, by enkindling and extending the love of justice, righteousness, purity, truth and holiness, as he rightly intimates, it must make them sorely dissatisfied with the injustice, unrighteousness, and general unspirituality of life on the level of our prevailing competitive and unbrotherly civilization. Who will lead the way to something better?

A. E. NEWTON.

The Andover Controversy,

Which has caused so much discussion all over the country, has not been without many minor echoes in interested domestic circles. A report of one of them which we find in print is as follows:

Of the two prominent men that so long opposed each other, the one from the liberal side which admits of a future probation, the other from the old standpoint which confines its speculation to the condition of the saved and the damned, one not long ago died. It happened to be the illiberal one, and his death was being discussed one day in the family of a sympathizer with the liberal point of view, and in the presence of a child who had often listened to discussions in support of future probation, of course founded upon statements made in the first chapter of Peter concerning Christ's descent into a certain portion of hades, where he found spirits in waiting for redemption, and a duly impressive picture had been made on the childish mind. Somebody remarking that doubtless Dr. —— would now know something more about a good many things he had felt pretty sure about while here, the child burst out with:

"Oh, papa, I hope he has not gone to h——. I hope he is in that place where they have to wait and get preached to!"

The force of the child's remarks, too generous to wish even an opponent of his father consigned to the worst creation of his own theology, and hoping, as the best that could be hoped for, that he was in that place he fought so hard against letting others believe in, was truly delicious to the thoughtful-minded elders.

Appreciated.

To the Publishers of the Banner:

ESTEEMED FRIENDS—I see that my subscription for the good BANNER OF LIGHT is nearly expired. Enclosed please find three dollars to pay for it another year. After having taken it about twenty-five years I do not feel like doing without it now, for I read that scripture more than any other. Your friend and brother,

WILLIAM PIERCE.

Danby, Vt., Sept. 12th, 1888.

[The above is a specimen of many letters of like tenor which we are in receipt of, that encourage us to go on fulfilling the duties assigned us by the denizens of the spirit-world many years ago.]

☞ We said just what we meant, Bro. Owen, in regard to alleged spirit photography. Bear in mind we allude exclusively to photographs—not spirit portraits in oil made between slates. If our San Francisco brother had perused the columns of THE BANNER years ago he would have seen what we published in re bogus "spirit photographs," as well as legitimate ones. When our time permits we hope to give a succinct account of our varied experiences in this direction, from the time of the medium Mumler, (in whose presence genuine spirit-photographs were made,) to the present date.

☞ Attention is called to the announcements contained elsewhere in the present issue regarding a marked reduction made in the price of certain standard books and pamphlets which are now offered for sale by Colby & Rich, at the Banner of Light Bookstore.

Indian Instructors.

The Boston Indian citizenship committee, of which the Hon. F. O. Prince is chairman, is taking a very practical interest in the Apache Indians who are quartered at the Mt. Vernon barracks in Alabama. It is a very difficult thing to know just what to do with them. There are only certain climates where they can be placed, as they come from a Southern country and cannot be located in the North. The committee does not dare to place them in the Indian Territory, for they run away. In the meantime the children and the women need instruction, and the committee has been trying to induce the government to hire and send down among them some teachers. But the government has no money for that purpose, there being no appropriation. Therefore the committee has been obliged to "pass the hat around," and has raised money enough to send two female teachers down there for one year, who will start the latter part of this month. The War Department has promised to furnish army rations, to provide quarters and to erect a schoolhouse at the fort.

The Harvest Moon Festival,

For 1888, was carried out with marked success at Onset Bay Camp-Ground, on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22d and 23d. A conference, participated in by many speakers, was held on Saturday afternoon; a well-attended dance occurred in the evening; on Sunday morning Miss M. T. Shelhamer addressed the people; and Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes was the speaker in the afternoon. In the evening the services closed with a séance, which is spoken of elsewhere. We shall, next week, give our readers an account of these interesting exercises.

Children's Progressive Lyceum No. 1,

Of Boston, held its first session for the present season on Sunday last, in Paine Hall, eighty scholars being in attendance. The proceedings were uncommonly interesting. Mrs. W. S. Butler takes a deep interest in this school, and its members and officers certainly owe her a debt of gratitude for her useful efforts in its behalf.

THE THEOSOPHIST.—H. S. Olcott contributes a lengthy article to the latest issue treating upon "The Barisal Gun," the name given to a startling phenomenon in the Bakarging District, where suddenly, without any premonition or apparent cause, is heard the sharp report of a gun in the direction of the Bay of Bengal, usually followed by six other reports equally loud. The phenomenon is most frequent during the monsoon and after a fall of rain, but its cause is inexplicable. The Asiatic Society has taken the matter into consideration, appointed a Committee of Observation, and formulated a series of Notes for their guidance, a copy of which Mr. Olcott gives. An account is given of the first sermon by Gautama, entitled: "The Dhammachakkappavattana Sutta." "Facts Stranger Than Fiction" is a story which is said to be well authenticated, embodying a remarkable instance of semi-clairvoyant vision. Of the remaining contents are "Karma and Ancient Law," "The Progress of Contemporary Psychology," "Personality and Principle," etc. Madras, India: The Proprietors. Boston: For sale by Colby & Rich.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN.—The opening article of the October number is capped with the query, "What Do We Need?" and proceeds to define what it is. "The French Academy Fumbling with Psychometry" is the subject of that which follows, and after this the reader is given suggestive remarks upon "The Power of Music," the editor claiming that it far surpasses the "mind cure" method in effectiveness, and that it is to be hoped within a short time music will be recognized as one of the chief agents of therapeutics. Quotations are made from Mr. J. O. Ward to show its availability in the treatment of the insane. The fact is, the world has never even fractionally realized the use and value of music to the health and happiness of mankind. M. D. Conway shows that that terror of Christian children, the Car of Juggernaut, is a myth. "Ingersoll on Divorce," "War on the Trusts," and psychometric delineations of two presidential candidates, Curtis and Fisk, are among the remaining contents.

"MORBUS SABBATICUS."—A severe (?) illness bearing this singular name is at present afflicting the church-going population, if The Presbyterian is to be believed. Here are the "dangerous" symptoms—from a creedal standpoint. The liberal thinking part of the community will, however, read between the lines the indications of a healthy growth as to independence among those hitherto prone to do what their preacher has told them:

"It attacks church-members with violence on the Sabbath from 12 to 12 o'clock, and it takes the rest of the day to recuperate, for in no case does it continue until Monday morning. The patient begins to convalesce after the meridian, and about 3 o'clock a stroll is taken, or if his finances will permit, a drive in the park. It is very fatal in large cities. In the country it attacks the horses, and during these same hours they are too sick or stiff for duty, and the pious family that owns them is obliged to stay from church."

☞ A California correspondent informs us that during the present month Mr. J. J. Morse, of England, under the control of his able inspirers, has been ministering to the Spiritualists of San José, Cal.; that the meetings Sunday mornings and evenings were large and deeply interesting, and much good has been the result. Mr. Morse, it is said, will leave San Francisco early in October, and speaks in Chicago during that month. Then he will come East to fill appointments during the remainder of his stay (November and December being all engaged) for this his last year's work ere returning to England in September, '89.

TROPICAL FRUITS IN THE UNITED STATES.—The wide extent of the territory of this country renders it capable of producing a number of varieties of tropical and semi-tropical fruits, an interesting account of which is given in the annual Report (of one hundred and fifty pages) thereon by the pomological division of the United States Department of Agriculture, for a copy of which we are indebted to Mr. George A. Bacon of that Department. Its illustrations exhibit several kinds of Japanese plums, nearly exact in size, shape and color.

PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.—A correspondent informs us that a small company has been quietly studying the principles of Spiritual Philosophy the past season. It is now proposed to enlarge the class, and extend the inquiry so as to embrace the Phenomena of Materialization on a Scientific Basis. The views of those interested accord with those expressed by Mr. Danforth in the last BANNER OF LIGHT. Confirmed Spiritualists wishing to join in such investigation may address O. H. Wellington, M. D., 123 Concord street, Boston.

☞ Chas. Bailey of Manchester, Mass., will please accept our thanks and those of Miss Shelhamer and others who with us are recipients of tasty and skillful arrangements of productions of the fields, woods and seashore as specimens of his handiwork. They evince a love of nature and an industry highly commendable in an octogenarian, Mr. Bailey having been born in Framingham, Feb. 1st, 1806.

☞ We are informed that Mrs. Florence K. Rich, having fully recovered her health, has again commenced business, and will be pleased to see all who may give her a call.

☞ Dr. C. C. Peet, well known among the Spiritualists of San Francisco, Cal., passed to spirit-life on the 23d of August from the home of his brother in Anamosa, Ia.

CHARLES E. WATKINS—as will be seen by the announcement on our fifth page—has returned from the camps, and is now located at 107 Falmouth street, Boston.

☞ Read the advertisement of Dr. Cocke, fifth page.

☞ This is an age for counterfeits, whether in the currency or otherwise. From all over New England comes the report that Mrs. Webb, the medium Joe Howard took occasion to compliment in his letters to the Boston Globe, is being imitated—imitated, however, only in name. There is but one Mrs. Webb. She is at present at 79 Rutland street, Boston. She only visits New York, Boston and Onset.

The Lessons of Harvest Tide.

On Sunday, Sept. 23d, during the morning services in Martine's Hall, 55 South Ada street, Chicago, Ill., W. J. Colville delivered an unusually eloquent and impressive inspirational discourse on "Sowing and Reaping," it being the occasion of a special commemoration of the annual ingathering of the crops.

The platform was beautifully decorated with flowers and fruit, and the music was very pleasing.

A very large audience was present, and the speaker's words were listened to with the deepest attention and approval. [We shall print a brief synopsis of this discourse next week.]

Mr. C.'s ministrations in Chicago have been in every way successful, we understand, and many regrets are expressed at his departure, as there is a broad field for spiritual workers in that city.

His farewell to Chicago for the present will occur next Sunday, Sept. 30th, at Martine's Hall, where services will be held at 10:45 A. M. and 7:45 P. M.

Mrs. Richmond resumes her place as regular speaker, Sunday, Oct. 7th.

☞ The Maine Medical Society has taken steps to test the validity of the veto of the medical bill by Gov. Bodwell. We should think that any body of men who know enough to doctor a sheep, might have found out before this time that the people of Maine do not want the medical bill; and if they do not they will find by-and-bye that they will not have it.—Gardiner (Me.) Home Journal.

☞ That talented trance and prophetic medium, Augusta Dwinels, is now located at 20 Bennet street, off Washington street, Boston, where she holds séances.

IF you want to be free from that tired, weak, all-gone feeling, send for a pair of MAGNETIC INSOLES manufactured by Magnetic Shield Company, Chicago.

Movements of Mediums & Lecturers.

[Notices under this heading must reach this office by Monday's mail to insure insertion the same week.]

W. J. Colville lectured in Waukegan, Ill., Sept. 17th, in Perrin's Academy. He is expected in Cleveland, O., Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 2d and 3d, and in Pittsburgh, Penn., Thursday, Oct. 4th. His approaching brief season of work in Boston commences Sunday, Oct. 7th, at 3 P. M., in Berkeley Hall, where the subject of his lecture will be "The Outlook for Spiritual Freedom, East and West, at Home and Abroad."

Mrs. E. Cutler, trance and platform test medium, and psychometric reader, is willing to devote her services to societies needing aid for small consideration. Address 406 Washington street, Newark, N. J.

The present address of J. M. Allen is 225 Moss Avenue, Peoria, Ill.

Dr. H. F. Merrill will lecture and give tests in Clinton, Mass., Sunday, Sept. 30th; also the first two Sundays in October. Will make a few engagements in Massachusetts for the winter. Address him from Oct. 1st to the 15th, care Mrs. Emma Miner, Clinton, Mass., or at his home, 87 Sewall street, Augusta, Me.

Miss Jennie B. Hagan has finished her camp-meeting work, and speaks in Trenton, N. J., Sept. 30th. She will answer calls for week-evening lectures in the vicinity of her Sunday appointments. She will lecture in Worcester, Mass., in October; in Haverhill, Mass., in November; Troy, N. Y., in December. She gives a course of week-evening lectures at Attleboro, Mass., Oct. 4th, being the first; in all there will be six. Letters can be addressed to South Framingham.

Mrs. Jennie K. D. Conant lectured at East Union, Me., on Sunday, Sept. 23d; will speak there next Sunday afternoon and evening, and in Portland, Me., Oct. 7th and 14th. She would like engagements with societies to lecture, improvise poems (subjects from the audience), and give psychometric readings and tests. Can be addressed at Rockland, Me.

Bishop A. Beals closed his engagement at Paterson, N. J., on Sunday, Sept. 30th. He will be in New York the first two Sundays of October, and the last two in Fitchburg, Mass.

James H. Young's address is now at Onset, Mass.

Mrs. Lunt-Parker has permanently located at Maple Rapids, Mich., and is conducting Spiritualist meetings there.

Thomas W. Sutton, Box 790, Worcester, Mass., will answer calls to speak wherever his services may be desired.

Charles Dawbarn, of New York, addressed good audiences the past season at the Parkland, Pa., Niantic, Ct., Cassadaga, N. Y., and Lake Pleasant, Mass., camp-meetings. He is under engagement to speak at Lake Pleasant again next year, on the afternoons of Aug. 13th, 15th, 17th and 20th.

J. W. Kenyon attends the Washington (N. H.) Convention Oct. 12th, 13th, 14th; will be in Keene, N. H., Oct. 21st and 28th; and in Bridgeport, Ct., in November.

J. Frank Baxter's labors the past week have been in Lynn and Brockton. He will lecture in Lynn again next Sunday, 30th inst., and in Bridgeport, Ct., every Sunday in October. Winsted, New Britain, Poquonock and other places which have already applied for week evenings, are requested to make their definite negotiations as to date. 181 Walnut street, Chelsea.

Dr. Dean Clarke, one of our most interesting and instructive speakers, is engaged for six Sundays in Willimantic, Conn., beginning the third Sunday in November. He solicits immediate engagements in New England or the Middle States for October, and the first two Sundays of November. No society will regret an engagement with this able speaker. Address this office.

Dr. D. J. Stansbury, after a very successful engagement in Denver, was engaged to lecture and give independent slate-writing and test-messages with the occult telegraph in Salt Lake City, Sunday evening, Sept. 23d. He may be addressed at 305 Scott street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. J. Morse in Chicago.

The Young People's Progressive Society has made its choice for the month of October, and will place on the platform Mr. J. J. Morse, whose ability as a lecturer and medium is known throughout the world.

For the past year Mr. Morse has lectured in San Francisco and other places on the Pacific Coast, and has won the esteem of thousands who have listened to his grand lectures in behalf of Spiritualism. He practically illustrates and explains the condition of humanity and the remedies for the diseases of ignorance, superstition, etc.

Mr. Morse will speak every Sunday evening during October, and probably the morning also will be devoted to the answering of questions.

Mrs. Ada Foye has drawn very fair houses, and is attracting many new adherents to Modern Spiritualism. CELIA.

WARM FEET in cold weather is a luxury. The MAGNETIC INSOLES (i. e., genuine FOOT BATTERIES) will cause vigorous circulation of the blood and bring life, warmth and comfort the moment you place your weight on them. Send to Chicago Magnetic Shield Co. and try a pair.

☞ No printed journal could be neater or more perfectly arranged than the BANNER OF LIGHT, in the new dress it donned last week, at the beginning of its sixty-fourth volume. Right-thinking Spiritualists have always been proud of THE BANNER, for it is remarkably intelligent, instructive and assuring in every issue, and now they will accord it the first prize for beauty, legibility and taste. It cannot have better fortune than that it has so nobly earned. —The Better Way, Sept. 22d.

Special Notice.

The date of the expiration of every subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT is plainly marked on each address. The paper is discontinued at that time unless the subscription is previously renewed. Subscribers intending to renew will escape inconvenience by sending in the money for renewal before the expiration of their present subscription. It is the earnest desire of the publishers to give the BANNER OF LIGHT the extensive circulation to which its merits entitle it, and they therefore look with confidence to the friends of the paper throughout the world to assist them in their important work.

COLBY & RICH, Publishers.

Card.

I have several letters on hand that do not contain the address of their writers. Will they please forward, and oblige, ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN.
Box 50, Mattapan District, Boston, Mass.

☞ WRITING PLANCHETTES for sale by Colby & Rich. Price 60 cents.

Log Cabin Success.

What ails the young men?

Robert Garrett's father left him a fortune of twenty millions. He was from childhood reared in luxury; he received a splendid education, with an especial training into a thorough knowledge of railroad management, and was expected to succeed his father as a railroad king.

Within three years after the responsibilities which his father's death threw upon him were assumed, he is reported a broken-down man, with mind and health permanently shattered.

George Law is another young man left with millions of money, who is reported among the "wrecks." His father, bred a stone mason, was of gigantic size and strength, with commensurate brain power, so he became a great contractor, then a railroad king, and left half a dozen millions for his son.

The founders of both of these great estates were born in the most humble walks of life, grew strong, mentally and physically, by simple living and honest labor, and developed into financial giants.

The great men of our country have not, as a rule, come from the elegant mansions of the cities, but from the Log Cabins of the rural districts. Simple ways of living, freedom from dissipation and enervating pleasures, simple remedies for disease, effective and which leave no poison in the system, develop brawny, brainy men who compel the world to recognize their strength and power.

The wholesome, old-fashioned Log Cabin remedies are the safest and surest for family use. Our grandmothers knew how to prepare the teas and syrups of roots, herbs and balsams which drive disease out of the system by natural methods and leave no after ill effects. The most potent of these old-time remedies were, after long and searching investigation, secured by H. H. Warner of safe cure fame, and are now put out for the "healing of the nations" in the Warner's Log Cabin remedies.

Regulate the regulator with Warner's Log Cabin sarsaparilla and with pure blood, giving health, strength, mental and bodily vigor, you may hope to cope successfully with the most gigantic financial problems of the age, without wrecking health and manhood.

When the Energies Flag, use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Dr. T. C. SMITH, Charlotte, N. C., says: "It is an invaluable nerve tonic, a delightful beverage, and one of the best restorers when the energies flag and the spirits droop."

New Hampshire Convention.

The Quarterly Convention of the New Hampshire State Spiritualist Association will be held at Washington, N. H., Oct. 12th, 13th and 14th.

Good speakers and mediums have been engaged, and all are invited to be present.

Half fare on stages from Hillsboro' and Newport. Reduced rates at hotel. Bro. Lull has the latch-string out as usual.
Francestown, Sept. 24th, 1888. GEO. D. EPPS, Sec'y.

Annual Meeting.

The Spiritualists of Kansas will hold their Annual Meeting Oct. 12th to 15th, 1888, at the residence of T. C. Denel, one and a half miles east of Fairmount, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. All are invited. Good speakers and mediums will be present to entertain and instruct the people.
A. H. NICHOLAS.

Spiritualist Meetings in Brooklyn.

Johnston Building, Flatbush Avenue, corner of Nevins Street.—Brooklyn Progressive Spiritual Conference every Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock.

For Sale at this Office:

THE TWO WORLDS: A journal devoted to Spiritualism, Occult Science, Ethics, Religion and Reform. Published weekly at Manchester, England. Single copy, 5 cents.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. A Progressive Family Health Magazine. Published monthly in New York. Single copy, 10 cents.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN. Monthly. Published at Boston. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE SOUL. Monthly. Published in Boston. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE CARRIER DOVE. Illustrated. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BIZARRE. NOTES AND QUERIES, with Answers in all Departments of Literature. Monthly. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE OLIVE BRANCH: Utica, N. Y. Monthly. Price 10 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Published weekly at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE NEW THOUGHT. Published weekly in Des Moines, Iowa. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE WATCHMAN. Published monthly at Fort Wayne, Ind. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER. Published weekly in New York. Single copy, 8 cents.

THE MIND-CURE AND SCIENCE OF LIFE. Monthly. Published at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE. Published monthly in New York. Price 10 cents.

THE THEOSOPHIST. Monthly. Published in India. Single copy, 50 cents.

THE GOLDEN GATE. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BETTER WAY. A Spiritualistic weekly journal. Published in Cincinnati, O. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE EASTERN STAR. Published fortnightly at Bucksport, Maine. Single copies, 3 cents.

THE PATH. A Monthly Magazine, devoted to Universal Brotherhood, Theosophy in America, and Aryan Philosophy. Single copy, 20 cents.

THE ESOTERIC. A Monthly Magazine of Advanced and Practical Esoteric Thought. Published in Boston. Single copy, 15 cents.

MENTAL HEALING. A Monthly Magazine. Published in Boston, Mass. Single copies, 10 cents.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Each line in Agate type, twenty cents for the first and every insertion on the fifth or eighth page, and fifteen cents for each subsequent insertion on the seventh page.

Special Notices forty cents per line, Minion, each insertion.

Business Cards thirty cents per line, Agate, each insertion.

Notices in the editorial columns, large type, leaded matter, fifty cents per line.

Payments in all cases in advance.

☞ Advertisments to be renewed at continued rates must be left at our Office before 12 M. on Saturday, a week in advance of the date whereon they are to appear.

☞ Only small and light cuts will be allowed in the advertising columns. When accepted, our rates for that portion of the advertisement occupied by the cut will be one-half price in excess of the regular rates.

Electrotypes of pure type matter will not be accepted.

The publishers reserve the right to reject any and all electrotypes.

The BANNER OF LIGHT cannot well undertake to vouch for the honesty of its many advertisers. Advertisements which appear fair and honorable upon their face are accepted, and whenever it is made known that dishonest or improper persons are using our advertising columns, they are at once interdicted. We request patrons to notify us promptly in case they discover in our columns advertisements of parties whom they have proved to be dishonorable or unworthy of confidence.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Dr. F. L. H. Willis may be addressed as usual for the summer Glenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
Jy7 13w*

Andrew Jackson Davis, Seer into the causes and natural cure of disease. Send for information to his office, 63 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass. 13w* Jy7

H. A. Kersey, No. 3 Bigg Market, Newcastle-on-Tyne, will act as agent in England for the BANNER OF LIGHT and the publications of Colby & Rich during the absence of J. J. Morse.

To Foreign Subscribers the subscription price of the BANNER OF LIGHT is $3.50 per year, or $1.75 per six months. It will be sent at the price named above to any foreign county embraced in the Universal Postal Union.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. WEBB,
The Wonderful Astrologist and Life-Reader, from New York,
79 Rutland Street, Short Time Only.
Sittings $2.00. tf S29

Mrs. Florence K. Rich,
TRANCE and Business Medium. Also letters answered from lock of hair or photo. Sittings and Answers to letters, $2.00. Hours 9 to 6 P. M. daily. Parlors 38 Evans House, 175 Tremont street, Boston. 1w* S29

C. E. WATKINS,
107 Falmouth Street, Boston.
Take Back Bay Cars.
Diagnosing Disease a specialty. tf S29

TO STOUT PEOPLE.
Distant Patients Successfully Treated.
Obesity is fatty degeneration. This disease is not only cured, but permanently so, by new, rational means. No dieting. No failure in a single instance. Send stamp for full particulars to DR. EDITH BERDAN, 113 Ellison street, Paterson, New Jersey.
Thin People increased in weight and flesh by regulation of the nerves of nutrition. Vegetable Remedies Can be sent by mail. Address DR. BERDAN, (formerly Dr. Edith Hale.) Au25

Do You Wish to be Developed?
PERSONS wishing to know what phase of Mediumship they may possess, will be told FREE of charge by calling any Thursday afternoon during the month of October, between the hours of 2 and 3:30, at the office of
DR. J. R. COCKE,
474 Shawmut Ave., cor. Concord St., Boston.
S29 4w*

DR. J. C. STREET,
78 Montgomery Street, Boston, Mass.
Jy7 13w

AUGUSTA DWINELS,
SEERESS, Trance and Prophetic Medium. Office 20 Bennet st., off Washington st., opposite Hollis st., Boston.
S29 1w*

MISS J. M. GRANT, Test and Business Medium, Hotel Littlefield, Harwich street, off Dartmouth, Suite 3, Boston. 1w* S29

MRS. S. S. MARTIN, Mesmeric and Magnetic Healer, Hotel Littlefield, Harwich st., off Dartmouth.
S29 2w*

SEERS OF THE AGES.
ANCIENT, MEDIÆVAL AND MODERN SPIRITUALISM.
BY J. M. PEEBLES.
This volume, of nearly 400 pages, octavo, traces the phenomena of SPIRITUALISM through India, Egypt, Phœnicia, Syria, Persia, Greece, Rome, down to Christ's time. Treating of the MYTHIC JESUS, CHURCHAL JESUS, NATURAL JESUS.
How begotten? Where was he from twelve to thirty? Was he an Essenian?
MODERN SPIRITUALISM. The wave commencing in Rochester; Its Present Altitude; Admissions from the Press in its Favor; Testimonies of the Poets; Testimonies of its Truth from the Clergy; Beecher, Chapin, Hepworth, etc.
ITS DOCTRINES SYSTEMATIZED. What Spiritualists believe concerning God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost, Baptism, Faith, Repentance, Inspiration, Heaven, Hells, Evil Spirits, Judgment, Punishment, Salvation, Progression, the Spirit-World, the Nature of Love, the Genius, Tendency and Destiny of the Spiritual Movement.
Bound in beveled boards. Price $2.00, postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

AN ANALYSIS OF MIND-CURE:
Viewed from a Physiological Standpoint.
BY DR. HELEN DENSMORE.
This is a rational consideration of the subject. It corrects some of the perversions of self-styled leaders in the "new science," and takes a more common-sense view of Mind-Cure than a majority of writers upon the subject seem disposed to entertain.
Pamphlet, pp. 13. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ZÖLLNER.
An Open Letter
TO
PROFESSOR GEORGE S. FULLERTON,
Of the University of Pennsylvania, Member and Secretary of the Seybert Commission for Investigating Modern Spiritualism.
BY C. C. MASSEY,
Of Lincoln's Inn, London, Eng.
Prof. Fullerton having made in his notes appended to the famous Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission certain statements placing Mr. C. C. Massey as a Spiritualist in a rather unenviable position, the latter herein sets the matter right, and in doing so, clearly shows that the Professor had no foundation in truth for what he said. In this connection it may be remarked that Prof. Fullerton has since, in a letter to Mr. Massey, admitted that he was mistaken. Mr. Massey's Letter should be widely circulated, as it completely disproves the charge of Prof. Zöllner's disqualifications as an investigator of phenomena at the date of his séances with Dr. Henry Slade.
Pamphlet, pp. 16. Price 5 cents, postage free. 6 copies 25 cents; 13 do. 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

W. J. COLVILLE
(Under the Auspices of the Independent Club)
SPEAKS IN BERKELEY HALL
Sundays of October,
At 3 P. M.
S29 tf

Consolation and Other Poems.
BY ABRAHAM PERRY MILLER.
Consolation; The Ghost; The New Annus Mirabilis; Minnesota.
POEMS IN THE RELIGIOUS VEIN.—Resurrection; Our Ships; Retrospection; A Dream; Come Close; Life; Humiliation; God's Garden; Ecstasy; The Race; The Doctor's Message; Hortatus; Darkness and Doubt; Very Good; My Self; On the Death of Children; Old Ann.
POEMS OF THE WAR PERIOD.—War; Equality; The Battle of the Storms; On the Bar; The Soldier's Last Look; Unknown; The Doomed City; The Masked Batteries; Sherman's Host; Welcome Home.
MISCELLANEOUS.—Mother; Homeless; Heaven and Hell; In Memoriam; The Army of Types; Lines Written After the Franco-Austrian War; Brotherhood; The Dreamer; The Flirt; Garibaldi; Home-Sick; On the Heights; The Whistler; Hope and Duty; Young Love; The Phantom Sawyer; Apostrophe to a Comet; Middle Age; Worship; Two Boxes; Our Life; At the Party; Earth and Spring; Drifting; Girl Love; At the Concert; Aurora Borealis; Song of the Truth Seekers; Song of the All-Parent.
Cloth, gilt top. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GIRARD'S WILL
AND
GIRARD COLLEGE THEOLOGY.
BY RICHARD B. WESTBROOK, D. D., LL. D.,
Author of "Marriage and Divorce," "The Bible—Whence and What," "Man—Whence and Whither," etc.
The author in his preface says: "The publication of this book is a matter of conscience. The author, as a theologist and lawyer, thoroughly believes that the present system of religious instruction in Girard College is in palpable violation of the conditions of the Will of the Founder, and not well adapted to promote 'the purest principles of morality.'"
The chapters which make up this book were originally delivered, in substance, as popular lectures in the last spring course of The Westbrook Free Lectureship in the hall of our City Institute, and attracted considerable public attention at that time. The lectures were delivered before different audiences, and hence certain points were purposely repeated."
12mo, pp. 183. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Record of a Ministering Angel.
BY MRS. MARY J. CLARK.
The ministry of angels is a subject that will always possess a deep interest for serious, thoughtful minds. There is nothing for which the hearts of humanity long with more pathetic yearning than for a resumption of fellowship with the loved and lost. What mother does not long for one sound of the voice of her son who has crossed to the further shore? What would not fathers give for one more smile from their daughters passed all too soon away? And what is more reasonable than to hope that the loved and lost have joined the ranks of the angels, and are busy in tender services for those whom they have left behind, love still the more? This book is written with the view of stimulating such hopes, of lifting and hearts out of the darkness of despair into the sunny region of hope and courage and faith.
Cloth, pp. 289. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

In Re Dr. Talmage.
A Synopsis of a Discourse by the Guides of
MRS. R. S. LILLIE.
Delivered in Berkeley Hall, Boston, Sunday Morning, May 6th, 1888, in Answer to the Recent Attack on Modern Spiritualism by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn.
Also Excerpts from a Letter by "Eleanor Kirk."
The above have been published by COLBY & RICH in four-page tract form, and should be extensively circulated.
Price by mail, 5 copies 5 cents; 15 do. 10c.; 30 do., 15c.

ECCE VERITAS. A new work by an anonymous author, who claims as the object of the treatise a vindication of Christianity as a system of principles for the redemption of humanity; the true view of Christ and his religion, and against the dogmatic theology of the churches. The author also endorses Spiritualism, of the truths of which he has become well convinced by demonstrations unmistakable.
Cloth, 12mo, pp. 293. Price $1.25, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

A New Volume.
ALL TRUE SPIRITUALISTS,
Wherever Located,
SHOULD NOT ONLY
SUBSCRIBE
FOR THE
Banner of Light,
THE BEST
Family Paper
In the World!
But make it a point to induce all liberal-minded people to become Subscribers.
It contains Original Essays; Original Stories; Verbatim Reports of Grand Lectures; Answers to Questions by Invisible Intelligences of the Greatest Interest to the World at Large; Characteristic Messages from Deceased Individuals to their Friends and Relatives in the Earth-Life; Editorials on a Great Variety of Subjects; Current Events; Highly Interesting Correspondence from all over the Country, Etc.

Our Premium List,
Which entitles each Subscriber to an Interesting Book or a Fine Engraving,
Is also a Strong Inducement for the People to Subscribe.
☞ AS THE BANNER is sold at nearly all the Periodical Depôts in the United States, and has a wide circulation in foreign countries, it is a capital avenue through which merchants and others can reach customers. REMEMBER THIS FACT!
Price Reduced from $2.50, Postage 15 cts., to $1.50, Postage Free.
SPIRIT WORKERS
IN THE
HOME CIRCLE.
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHIC NARRATIVE OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA IN FAMILY DAILY LIFE EXTENDING OVER A PERIOD OF TWENTY YEARS.
BY MORELL THEOBALD, F. C. A.
Some of the most astonishing phenomena in the history of Modern Spiritualism are recorded in this volume, the descriptions of which are given with a marked degree of fidelity to detail and effort to corroborate their truth by unimpeachable testimony. They include independent writing in various languages, on walls and ceilings, in closed apartments and on note books in locked desks; lighting of lamps and fires; filling of kettles with water, and making preparations for breakfast, even to cooking food, making tea and "laying the table"; organ playing with no one visibly present; materialization and dematerialization of forms and fabrics, bringing of flowers, ringing of bells and movements of physical objects. Face-Studies are given of various writings, one of them in Greek, with a translation. The book covers a period of twenty years, and of each of the phenomena above specified, together with others, numerous instances are narrated.
The author says that the book has been written in the intervals of a busy professional life, which fact has proved of advantage, for, while as careful as possible not to be carried away by enthusiasm, or by imagination, in a region wherein there is much scope for their action, the disjointed method of working he was compelled to adopt operated as a protection against a surrender to mere fantasy.
Demy 8vo, cloth, pp. 306. Price $2.50, postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from $1.25 to 75 Cents.
Bible Marvel-Workers,
And the Power which helped or made them perform MIGHTY WORKS, and utter Inspired Words; Together with some Personal Traits and Characteristics of Prophets, Apostles and Jesus, or New Readings of "THE MIRACLES."
BY ALLEN PUTNAM, A. M.
Mr. Putnam has here, in his uniformly candid and calm spirit, furnished an unusually vivid, interesting and instructive volume of about 240 pages. He here allows what he incidentally calls "THE GUIDE-BOOK OF CHRISTENDOM" to tell the story of its own origin and character, and mostly in its own words and facts. Biblical light leads his way, and as he moves on the finds and points out Fact after Fact, View after View, Meaning after Meaning, attaching to old familiar mental pictures and forms of Bible scenes and personages which possess the charm of novelty, while they generate conviction that they are true and valuable. Without questioning the genuineness or truth of any part of the Bible itself, and without attack upon any sect, denomination or individual, Mr. Putnam, following the clear leadings of light which John the revelator furnished, examines most of the prominent Bible marvels and personages, and presents to the public a work which will show to most readers spots where they have been accustomed to overlook very plain and distinct information lying upon the very surface of our English Bible, which, if regulated, will lead devoted lovers of the Bible, and its contemners also, to estimate it with more discriminating justice than they have been accustomed to apply there.
Price 75 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 30 Cents to 15 Cents.
MESMERISM, SPIRITUALISM, WITCHCRAFT AND MIRACLE.
A treatise, showing that Mesmerism is a key which will unlock many chambers of mystery. By ALLEN PUTNAM, author of "Spirit-Works," and "Natty, a Spirit."
Paper, 15 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 25 Cents to 10 Cents.
What is Spiritualism?
An Address delivered by THOMAS GALES FORSTER, in Music Hall, Boston, Mass., Sunday afternoon, Oct. 27th, 1867. This address possesses great merit. It is terse and to the point. Societies should circulate this pamphlet in their respective localities with a lavish hand.
Paper, 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.
AFTER DEATH;
THE DISEMBODIMENT OF MAN.
The World of Spirits: Its Location, Extent, Appearances; The Route Thither; Inhabitants; Customs; Societies; also Sex, and its Uses There, etc., etc.
BY P. B. RANDOLPH.
This fine work of Dr. Randolph's is by far the most important and thrilling that has yet fallen from his pen, inasmuch as it discusses questions concerning our state and doings after death that heretofore have been wholly untouched, and perhaps would have been for years had not this bold thinker dared to grapple with them.
Cloth. Price $2.25, postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ORTHODOXY:
A Lecture by ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
This is the latest lecture by Robert G. Ingersoll, reviewing the creeds of the churches and answering them from their own standards. Crowded with facts, figures and arguments; eloquent in every paragraph; just the kind of literature for friends of free thought and honest expression to have and circulate generously.
Garbled, incomplete and ridiculous reports of this lecture, taken from the newspapers, have already appeared. They do the author great injustice and deceive the reading public. This edition, coming direct from the author's own publisher, is complete, and contains three times as much material as any of the unauthorized and pirated editions.
Paper. Price 10 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STARTLING FACTS IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM: Being a Graphic Account of Witches, Wizards and Witchcraft; Table-Tipping, Spirit-Rapping, Spirit Speaking, Spirit Telegraphing; and Spirit Materializations of Spirit Hands, Spirit Heads, Spirit Faces, Spirit Forms, Spirit Flowers, and every other Spirit Phenomenon that has occurred in Europe and America since the Advent of Modern Spiritualism, March 31, 1848, to the Present Time. By DR. N. B. WOLFE, Cincinnati, O.
In fine English cloth, gold back and sides, illustrated, $2.25 per copy, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Message Department.

Spiritual Free-Circle Meetings

Are held at the BANNER OF LIGHT OFFICE, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), on TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOON of each week.

On Tuesday afternoon MISS M. T. SHELHAMER occupies the platform for the purpose of answering by her spirit guides such questions as may be introduced for consideration.

On Friday afternoon MRS. B. F. SMITH, trance medium, under the influence of her guides, will afford an avenue through which individual spirit messages will be given.

The Hall (which is used exclusively for these séances) will be open at 2 o'clock; the services commence at 3 o'clock precisely, at which time the doors will be closed, allowing no ingress or egress. The public is cordially invited.

☞ Persons having questions of practical bearing upon human life in any of its departments of thought and labor, which they would like answered by the spirit-world intelligences, may send them to the BANNER OF LIGHT office by mail, or hand them to the Chairman of the Circle, who will present them to the spirits for consideration.

☞ The Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond—whether for good or evil; that those who pass from the earthly sphere in an undeveloped state, eventually progress to higher conditions. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his or her reason. All express as much of truth as they perceive—no more.

☞ It is our earnest desire that those who recognize the messages of their spirit-friends will verify them by informing us of the fact for publication.

☞ Natural flowers upon our Circle-Room table are gratefully appreciated by our angel visitants, therefore we solicit donations of such from the friends in earth-life who may feel that it is a pleasure to place upon the altar of Spirituality their floral offerings.

☞ Letters of inquiry in regard to this Department of THE BANNER must not be addressed to the mediums in any case. LEWIS B. WILSON, Chairman.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED,

THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

Report of Public Séance held Sept. 11th, 1888.

Spirit Invocation.

Thou Supreme Spirit of the Universe, thou Divine Intelligence, whose wondrous majesty and power are displayed on every hand, we behold the manifestation of thy law; we recognize thy grandeur and thy immensity. As we gaze upon the starry orbs above and realize that they are worlds marching on in order and with unceasing regularity, we can sense something of thy supreme wisdom; as we gaze upon the blade of grass or the grain of sand beneath our feet, and comprehend that each one has its own appointed place, that each is endowed with life and filled with vitality and activity, we pray, oh! our Father, that our minds may become receptive, even as the mind of a little child who questions and wonders and at the same time imbibes truth and information from the very atmosphere it breathes; so may we imbibe truth and knowledge from the great spiritual atmosphere of life which thou hast quickened into active existence, which thou hast filled with conscious intelligence, with human beings who can understand thy will and perform thy work.

We invoke the presence this day, and upon every occasion when we shall meet here in council, of the high and true and good from spiritual life. May they be given opportunity and power to manifest their thought in such ways as will be instructive, and may all receive strength to give to earth's children counsel, consolation, knowledge and truth. We ask the blessing of the holy angels to rest upon us all now and forevermore. Amen.

Spirit Chairman.

Friends—We have gathered here to-day to reopen the séance-room of the BANNER OF LIGHT establishment, that returning spirits from beyond this mortal veil may find opportunity to reach their friends on earth with loving words of counsel and identification. We are here to present words of truth and information concerning matters of importance to man, either of a spiritual or material nature, that may be given from the other side of life.

We shall make no extended speech concerning the work of the circle, but open the meeting with an expression of love and good-will to all, giving greetings in the name of the spirit-world.

On Tuesday afternoons, as formerly, we shall present for consideration subjects from various quarters, and give answers to the questions propounded, and according to the information we have gained upon the subject in question. We shall, during the first portion of the exercises, reply to proposed questions, and then if any one present desires to ask a question, verbally or in writing, we shall be pleased to give it consideration.

On Friday afternoons this circle-room will be open, as formerly, for the presentation of spirit messages through the organism of Mrs. B. F. Smith. The spiritual intelligences interested in this work are gathered here in perfect harmony, ready to give forth the best of their power and labor for the dissemination of truth and the assistance of spirits who desire to reach their mortal friends.

Opening this season's work to-day with the best encouragement and the brightest prospects from a spiritual standpoint, we feel that it will be blessed according to the force put into it by spirits and mortals alike, and we are content to leave the results in the hands of the angels and our Father God.

Questions and Answers.

CONTROLLING SPIRIT.—You may now present the questions you have, Mr. Chairman.

QUES.—May not Modern Spiritualism be rightly regarded as an advance of Christianity, or rather a development of pure religion, as that was an advance of the Mosaic dispensation? and will not there be in the future of earth an advance of man's present highest conceptions of truth?

ANS.—As the child develops in the stage of youth and maturity, unfolding its intellectual powers, so humanity advances in knowledge through the passage of the years. As whatever is passing through a process of development unfolds the highest from the lowest state, so must it be with religion: there must be a gradual growth, a process of development, and we should expect to find the beauty, the finish, and the best fruitage of religion, only after a lapse of many years, or even of centuries. We do not look for the blossom when the plant is young, and not strong and vigorous; we must give it time for growth, and the putting forth of its best powers, and as the season rolls on, and the chilly days pass by, bringing the sunshine and warmth, in their turn, of the summer-time, we find the flower putting forth its tiny petals, by-and-bye to burst forth a glorified blossom, sweet to the beholder; so with that impulse of the human soul called religion, which is the putting forth of the spiritual powers toward a recognition of something that is higher and holier than the merely temporal things of life, simply the unfolding of the human heart in the aspiration for knowledge and light, and the conception of truth upon the diviner things of existence, simply the desire and the effort to live in accordance with the right.

It must then be supposed that in the earlier days of human existence a man was obliged to struggle, not only with the adverse forces of the atmosphere and of physical life in general, but with his own want of knowledge, his own woful ignorance, and with the superstition which ignorance engendered in his heart, terrifying him on every side by the thought of unseen danger. It is to be supposed that in those earlier days the religion of mankind should present a crude appearance, that the divine image of God which man had set up to be worshiped should partake something of the likeness and character of the man himself, and may have been one of passions, one of weaknesses, and given to wrath, easily excited; so might it be supposed that the God which he had erected for worship should partake of a like character; but as a more divine conception broke upon the human mind—as man himself developed unsuspected forces of character of a spiritual nature, began to cultivate the affectional side of his being, to express his own thought in unselfishness toward others, then would an understanding of the Divine Love grow and unfold, so that we find the conceptions of the Heavenly Father, in these later years of human existence, far more beautiful, holy and sweet than have been those of the centuries past.

So must it have been in religious worship: that which was severe, stern, crude and cold in ages past may have been only the outgrowth, the manifestation of the times and of the people, of the very atmosphere of this physical universe of yours, and is to be accepted, at this time, for just what it is worth. But in these days, as man has advanced in mental ability, and by mechanical prowess has, in a measure, overcome the adversities of life, by subjecting the forces of nature to his use, so may we understand that the spiritual part of his life has developed, has been able, to an extent, to overcome the material and to put forth powers and activities undreamed of before. So we find the times ripened, ready for a revelation from beyond that which is called death; we find that all that is true, that has been of the immortal part of man, existing in any religion of past ages, is still alive; it cannot be crushed out nor can it be destroyed. That which is true lives forever, but it may present itself in various forms for the recognition of humanity and truth to-day, presenting itself to your understanding through the revelation called Spiritualism—comes to appeal to you in the names of your dearly beloved friends, those who have departed this life for the wonders and opportunities of the life beyond.

Spiritualism is undoubtedly the outgrowth of all the religions which have preceded it. Spiritualism is undoubtedly a word of truth, appealing to your very hearts, to your human affections, coming with a word of exhortation and of cheer to call you up to the highest conceptions of a good and noble life, assuring you that if you are true to yourself here on earth you shall surely find an abiding place of beauty and of peace, where you will be reunited with the loved ones gone before, when death shall claim you for its own.

That which is to come after Spiritualism must only be the further revelation of truth, for as man advances in knowledge his power of understanding expands also; as he gains one lesson, and makes it a part of his own mind, he will become quickened in desire to learn more, and so, as he proceeds, making the most of that which is given to him, he will find himself so strong in mental calibre as to be able to take up, appreciate and understand those lessons which are to be unrolled before him in the by-and-bye.

Thus will it be when man has accepted, studied and come to understand all that the present aspect of Spiritualism has to convey to his mind; undoubtedly truth will be presented to him in larger form and grander capacity, and as he becomes enabled to take it up and make it a part of his own life, he will find the wonders of the universe unrolling before him, and every mystery explained.

Q.—[By R. G. Dawson.] It was stated that "during the past ages, when certain forms of animal life became extinct, their spirits did not ascend to the spirit-world, but remained on earth to enter the forms of more developed animals." As these events occurred at such a remote period of time, will you please say from whom this knowledge was obtained?

A.—In the spirit-world we have our histories, our traditions, and even our legends concerning life—animal as well as human—not only upon this planet but upon other planets revolving in space, and consequently when a spirit who professes to be informed upon such a subject as this speaks to you in this manner, you may believe that he has gained his information from such sources of knowledge as the spirit-world opens to him, for there in studying the history of this planet, turning in thought and in research back to its early ages, we may find opportunity for learning much concerning its life that perhaps has not been revealed to mortal perception.

So far as we can learn anything of this question of animal existence, it appears to us that the earliest forms of animal life on the planet were built up largely of physical emanations from the earth itself. They corresponded in character and information to the planet and its conditions; they were crude and unwieldy, possessing very little of that which is called intelligence to-day, inasmuch as that which had been displayed, although partaking to a certain degree of sagacity, seemed to have been moved upon by outside forces, and to have been brought into operation very much as are the various parts of an automatical machine.

We are taught that the life-principle of these forms of animal life when withdrawn from the unwieldy body was not taken up and incorporated into any distinct, active form, in the spiritual kingdom of existence, but that it remained in contact with or within the atmosphere of the planet, until drawn upon by other and later forms of animal life, for power and for sustenance, and that by-and-bye, after a series of many years, and through a long process of change, this life-principle became quickened with active intelligence; and then we find that, when withdrawn from the animal form it took up a distinct embodiment of its own in the spiritual atmosphere, it became an animal entity of itself, if we may be allowed the expression.

Q.—[By L. S. M.] A friend of mine has been told by mediums that there were spirit children born of spirit parents in spirit-life. Is that true?

A.—We know of no such process or action of nature in the spiritual world, and we think that we can prove our conclusion to your correspondent in a few words. If it be true that the spirit-world, or that portion of the spirit-world allied to this material planet earth, is peopled by the spirits of those who have passed through the process of birth and change on this planet, then could there not possibly be room for any such spiritual births as the question mentions in the other sphere of life? You are taught that when the change called death encroaches upon the physical form, that part of the man, the woman, or the child, which displayed active intelligence, separates itself from the mortal form, and passes into an active existence in the spirit-world. We, as returning spirits, anxious to identify ourselves to our friends and relatives on earth, take up this position; and we claim that as we pass from the earth we find our friends and relatives, the dear human beings whom we have known and loved in years past, who have entered another existence from earth. Thus do we come to understand how the spirit-world is peopled.

While it is true that there is a union of souls in the spirit-world for those who are truly mated, who are so well assimilated to each other as to supply one another with magnetic sympathy and loving support, and that this bond of union is somewhat similar to the marriage state on earth, yet it does not by any means follow that there is the same association and the same process of life unfolding in the spirit-world as you have here on earth, in the marriage relation. The union of forces on that other side of existence is of a spiritual character; it does not partake of the physical or animal state; it is a blending of spiritual affinities or attributes. He and she who assimilate together are one in thought and aspiration, though they may differ from each other at times in the expression of thought, or in the especial work which they have in hand; yet there is always a harmony, a sympathy of feeling, or of thought, which makes their union.

We may not be able to express this very clearly to the questioner, but perhaps, if he will reason upon the question, he will perceive that it is much more rational to suppose that the generation and process of birth of a human being, partaking as it does of the physical or material life, is most beautifully in accordance with the divine law, as belonging to the physical planet, and that the birth of the spirit is the separation of the soul from matter, the translation of the spiritual intelligence from the physical body to the life beyond, and that this is accomplished when "death," so called, claims its own.

Q.—[By L. T. Lyons.] Can a person's health be affected by the spiritual influences which surround his residence?

A.—Yes; a person's health may be very strongly affected by the influence, spiritual and physical, which surrounds his place of abode, or by the atmosphere, spiritual or physical, which is found within it; he may be associated with people who are not in sympathy with him, and whose magnetism is poisonous to his nature. It may be that he imbibes this magnetism and becomes ill through its effects; even the blood may be vitiated, the nervous forces decline, and the entire system fall into decay under such influence.

On the other hand, a person may be materially benefited through the association and surroundings of his daily life; he may live in contact with an individual who is helpful to him, whose magnetic forces supply him with new power and activity; he finds himself strengthening throughout every fibre of his being, so that, as he comes in contact with that friend, the very atmosphere he breathes seems to be vitalized with new life.

One should study the laws of his own nature, take notice of his experiences—just how he is affected at certain times and by certain people; if he does this carefully he will come to the conclusion that he is benefited in certain ways, or unpleasantly affected, as the case may be. This is a subject for personal experience and for personal examination.

Q.—[From the audience.] Where is the spirit-world, or where is your home?

A.—The spirit-world, friend, we may say, is all about us, inasmuch as you are all spirits at the present time, just as certainly as you ever will be. This atmosphere is peopled by spirits, not only in the flesh, but also by those who have passed out from the mortal form. Not that any spirit is obliged to live in contact with your physical atmosphere, if he has a strong desire and incentive to rise above it. If one passes out of the body clinging closely to physical things, unwilling to leave the mortal form, having an interest so engrossing in temporal things, or in friends on earth, that he cares not for that which is beyond the earth and its atmosphere, that spirit will find his spirit-world right here in connection with the friends whom he has known, even with the home he was obliged to vacate so far as the physical is concerned. On the other hand, if a spirit in passing from the body willingly gives up that which he had on earth—we do not mean the affection of his friends, or the desire to minister to their wants, we mean, if he is willing to leave the mortal and the associations of life, to turn to the spirit-world, its duties, employments and people, he will not be obliged to live in contact with this earth, although he may have the opportunity of returning frequently to it, and giving an influence to the dear friends whom he has left here.

The spirit-world! Where is it? The universe is filled with spirit-worlds. Every planet has its own counterpart; every world of invisible space that is inhabited or inhabitable, has its spiritual counterpart where its people may pass, and will, when they have given up the outward form which they have inhabited on the more physical sphere.

The spirit-world proper, belonging to this planet, is in close association with it, not altogether within the atmosphere that you may penetrate and behold, but yet in close magnetic sympathy with the planet, and with its movements. This spirit-world is peopled by intelligences, those who have risen above the material things of life and have come to study the more spiritual parts of the universe—not that they are less interested in scientific pursuits, in life, or the humanitarian work of mortals, not but what they exercise thought concerning those things which are of moment to you as a moving humanity, but that they can watch over these questions, subjects and people, and exercise an influence upon them independent of material things.

"Do we have homes in the spirit-world?" Most certainly; homes as tangible and substantial to their people as are yours to you; homes, surroundings and associations which are the outgrowth of the thought of man, just as are your homes, surroundings and associations the outgrowth of your own thought. You may question this, but let us consider it a moment. You, as an individual, may perhaps possess a certain amount of mechanical skill. It may be that you are an architect, that you can design a building; the thought comes into your mind concerning a certain structure you would like to erect; you plan it out to yourself, and by-and-bye put your ideas into execution, by drafting the design of your thought, and placing a picture of that structure upon paper. This you present to the workmen, and they put your thought into execution; building, bit by bit, until the work is complete, the building is erected, it stands out, a materialization of human thought, the execution of a human conception.

And so it is in spirit-life: that which surrounds a spirit in his own abode must be the outgrowth, the materialization, if you prefer the word, of his mind, of his ideas, and it will correspond with them perfectly, so that if his thought or design is beautiful, lofty or grand, the execution of that thought will be of a corresponding character, and you will perceive the nobility of his idea in the object which is near to him, which he may claim as his own. Are his thoughts impure, lowly, of an unsightly character, mean, and unpresentable to human notice, then you will know just what kind of a man he is who passes before you. It is no more strange to look upon this as we state it than it is to look upon the lofty temple and realize that it is the dream of the architect or designer worked out in stone and other building materials.

So with your associations: you desire to found a home; you select one that may be congenial to you, one with which you think your spirit sympathizes and can blend with you and create your own home and its associations. These are the outcome of the desire, the thought, the effort to make such in the spirit-world; they may be beautiful and sweet, or they may be the reverse, according to the thought and influence which is brought to them.

Mediumistic Development.

During the few moments that are left (said the Spirit Chairman) we desire to say a few words upon the subject of mediumistic development, as questions have come to us several times recently concerning the best development of mediumistic power. This is something which cannot be given except in general terms. We cannot cite each particular case in full, but general terms may apply to every case if the individual will study his own special characteristics, and seek to understand them sufficiently to aid his spirit-friends in unfolding his power.

One has remarked to us of late: "Why is it that when sitting in a circle, or where there are mediums present, I always feel a strange tingling sensation in my arm? Some people tell me I am a medium, and spirits are trying to work through me, but I don't believe that." Very well; in such a case as this, if the person is fully assured that no physical agency is at work to produce the strange sensation in the arm, if it never occurs except when she has reason to believe spirits are present, then we should suppose she was under the direct influence of such spirits, either that they were using her magnetic forces to assist them in their work through other mediums, drawing upon her in order to supply their agents or instruments, or else these invisible intelligences were directly operating upon her physical organism to subdue it to their own power and make it an unconscious instrument for their special work. If the latter, then she is the medium, then are the spirits seeking to develop her powers, to subject them to their own uses, to utilize her arm or hand for the purpose of mechanical writing, and we should advise such a person to sit quietly, passively obeying the impulse which comes to her, either to use a pencil or make raps; it will result in the spirits being able to control the organism, and in time manifest themselves intelligently to mortals.

Another has said: "I often see lights flashing before me; sometimes strange little appearances come up when I am not thinking of anything spiritual, when my mind is busy upon daily labors. What does it mean? I don't think this can be of a spiritual character." If you are satisfied that these appearances do not arise from some physical disturbance of the sight or brain, or digestive organs, then you may rationally conclude they are brought to your notice by some outside intelligence. First: study your own body and ascertain if it is in a degree of health, and that you are not disturbed by some physical disorder. Next: seek to understand these appearances; question them, and ask if your spirit-friends are present. At first they may not be able to respond; but if you place yourself in a passive condition, laying aside all thought of external things, seeking to know what the spirit has to reveal, the time will come, if this is mediumistic unfoldment, when you will understand and learn what the spirits have to convey.

And still another has said: "I sometimes hear raps, little tappings, and strange rustling movements in my apartment. I do not understand what they mean." If you are satisfied they are not produced by any physical agency, they may be produced by some spiritual intelligence present; undoubtedly you are either in a condition to hear these things with your spiritual hearing, or they are made physically demonstrative by these spiritual intelligences, and any friend of yours who was present at the time would hear the same. If the latter, then you are a medium for physical manifestations, and you need to sit quietly under the influence of the spirit-friends to have your power developed with more regularity of action and with greater force. If clairaudient, then you may follow the same process; sit quietly, patiently, in a well-ventilated room, with friends or alone, as you prefer, asking the presence and cooperation of good spirits, and in time they will manifest themselves, so that you will not only hear the strange rustling and tapping, but perhaps receive other sounds delightful and convincing to your spirit of the presence of your departed friends. All those who wish to develop mediumship may safely follow these rules, and then experiment until they learn that which is best.

Follow the direction of the spirits who come to you, if you are satisfied they are good spirits, and they will be if you are honest and sincere in your desire to learn of them, and at the same time if your daily conduct is such as draws to you only the purest and the best.

It would be well for each one seeking mediumistic unfoldment to consider for what purpose this is desired. If only to gain notoriety in the world, if only to gain money and public notice, and no especial desire to bless the world through the manifestation of mediumship, then would its development be rather a curse than a benediction; but if one desires to benefit humanity, to spread truth, and to make those with whom he comes in contact better and more happy because of his mediumship, then will its development prove a blessing indeed.

We thank the friends for the flowers to-day, and also for the kindly attention we have received.

SPIRIT MESSAGES,

THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Mrs. B. F. Smith.

Report of Public Séance held June 29th, 1888.

Harris Burpee.

I have long wished to return, but have not been able until now. I lived in the mortal form little over seventy-six years, and have been an inhabitant of the spirit-world more than three years. I felt that I understood something of the spiritual world while dwelling on earth, for I tried in every way to learn what I could of the beautiful home above, and I was only waiting for the time to come when I might go up higher.

I am happy, and my expectations were more than realized. Those who had crossed over before me were waiting to receive me. Sarah is with me, and mother, also the little one who was laid away so long ago, and is now grown up in the spirit-life. How blessed to know that we find them all again in the home beyond the river. Harris Burpee, of Sutton, N. H.

John Carlisle.

My home was in Madison, Ind. I am glad that I found the door open to-day. I have not attempted to speak here before, although Mary Ellen has often said that if I would do so, it would bring happiness to me as well as to my earthly friends.

I have relatives and friends on earth, some in Columbus, O., and some in Portage City—and I have been with them. I do not wish them to feel that we are so far away we cannot visit them, for it is only a step from our home to theirs. I did not understand much of what you term Spiritualism, but am glad to know I still have the opportunity of learning. I am thankful for this channel of communication provided through the dear BANNER OF LIGHT, for I cherish it. I see now it is truly named—it does give out light; and my advice would be to all to take it, to read it, to gain knowledge therefrom, and so come into communication with the spirit-world.

Do not think, Mr. Chairman, that I have not been in your meetings. I have, and I find by coming we may learn a great deal in listening to others. Although many cannot give a message here, they may gain knowledge and power which will help them to control a medium in some other place. John Carlisle.

Eddie Cook.

I want to thank my mamma and papa for getting the pictures, because it does make me so happy when they look at the pictures. Since I went away they got the pictures of Eddie. Charlie White came with me. I know his mamma would like to know he was here, too.

I came into Gill Hall one time, but I could n't make them hear me talk there. I wanted to tell them about the pictures. They had a little trouble to get 'em at first.

I want them to know I am not dead. Sometimes mamma asks why her Eddie died. I did n't die. I only went to heaven; that is, to the spirit side, where all the beautiful flowers are. We have many white flowers where we are, because they tell us white is an emblem of heaven and of purity.

I thank you so much because you write that down, and are going to put it in the paper. Eddie Cook, of Springfield, Mass.

Georgiana Cooper.

My name is Georgiana Cooper, and Newburyport was my home. My dear father, mother and sisters are still living there. Oh! how hard it was for dear mother when she felt I must leave her, and how little did they understand that I only left what is termed the mortal form.

Dear Sister Mary, in spirit-life you will be able to converse as freely as ever Sister Georgie did. I know the trials that have come to my dear mother through my sister's being deprived of the power of speech, but in heaven the tongue will be loosed, and every faculty will have its perfect action.

I am often with you, dear mother; in the twilight hours we draw very near. Dear old Rover is a true and faithful friend. How well he knew my step as he would hear me coming, and how many times does he go to the door, as the thought will flash over him: "Is it my old mistress?" I know it so well, for I am often in the home.

Father has not been feeling well, and I know, dear mother, the thought worries you that father may leave you and Sister Mary. But no, we trust he will stay a little longer.

I would like to have you say to Johnnie King that I have met, in spirit-life, his sisters, who passed away so long ago; and they are no longer little children. I speak of them because I know your families are much together. I understand well the changes that have been going on since I left the form. You sometimes sit by yourself, mother, in deep thought of your Georgiana, but oh! you need not send your thought so far away; I am close beside you.

I am happy in my spirit-home, and I promise you, with the help of the angels, I will come often. So easily do I glide into the old familiar rooms, I cannot explain it to you any better than by comparing it to stepping out of the parlor into the kitchen.

I know you will say: "Georgie, you would rather have staid longer." Not after the angels came and beckoned me over the river, mother, oh no. Grandma, grandfather and all the dear ones send love and greetings to you. You need our visits, you need our influence; we come to help you; and not a day passes without our coming. We all have our mission-work to perform.

I know, dear mother, this message will reach you, for you have thought: "Why is it, when we see messages from others, as much as our dear child loved us all, that she does not send one word of comfort to us?" But you understand not the spirit law. I have manifested as soon as I have been able to. I often ask the dear angels to bless you all. I know that sometimes it looks dark; but then, dear mother, look up and say, "I know the dear ones are around me."

Maria Wyman.

I have friends in Haverhill and Newburyport, some westward, and some in the State of Maine, scattered in different directions, as they have made their homes.

I would like Joseph to know that I am able to send a few words from the spirit side. How many times, Joseph, have you said: "Maria, why cannot you make yourself known to me as well through one medium as another?" I realize the fact, my dear husband, although I cannot explain, neither do I understand it, that I have only been able to control some mediums partially, while through others I have manifested as it has seemed to you perfectly.

I am very happy to be able to send you a few words to-day. My children do not forget their mother, as you have taught them that I am not dead, yet some of them, I perceive, you can talk to more freely than to others. I understood about the trouble that came to the dear boy, in regard to his eyes, and the anxiety that was felt for him. At that time the aspiration went out from your spirit: "Oh! if Maria was only here to help me bear these trials." And I was close beside you much of the time. You have tried to keep one with you most of the time, but sometimes business affairs have drawn you away in other directions. When you were in the West I was with you several times. At one period, you will remember, when you tried to come into communication with me, you could not do so very perfectly. I just remind you of it to let you know I was there, but could not control that person, so the guides had to tell you what I said. It brings us far more happiness, as well as you in the mortal, when we can speak directly to you. I was also with you when the little trouble occurred some months ago. Do not let it seem large to you; it will soon pass away, and not amount to much.

At times the thought will occur: "Why have these things been?" We know not. I want you, when it is possible and convenient, to come into communication with me somewhere, for there are many things I would speak of, but, as your Uncle Merrill says, we do not wish to speak of private affairs in public.

My name, Mr. Chairman, is Maria Wyman.

Luther Turner.

I desire, Mr. Chairman, to give a few crumbs of comfort to those who yet remain here. This is no new thing to me, for I was what is termed a stanch Spiritualist, and I was not ashamed of the name, although the children did not understand nearly as much as I would have liked them to know. I have relatives in Massachusetts, and some in Lincoln, Me.

Angeline, I would like you to know that Luther Turner has been able to make himself known. He has been here many times, not always anxious to speak, but as a silent listener to what other spirits had to say, and has been a gainer by it. Ella, father don't forget one of you. The darling Viola is here. She asks grandpa to let her talk. Not to-day, dear; you must grow a little first.

Hannah asks if her darling is here, too, Yes, children, and I love you all, and the grandchildren, too. Little Viola is one of God's sweetest angels to-day, as she comes beside me. That is not saying too much, Ella.

John, when I used to ask you to go to a Spiritualist meeting or circle you always had some excuse, because you did n't wish to wound my feelings. I readily understood it all, for you could not feel as I did, for you did not realize the truth of spirit-return.

Your dear old grandmother sends greetings to you—grandmother Bedell—and desires me to give her love to you and Frank. She does not forget one of you. This child wishes to send love to mamma and papa. She tells me to say that her papa goes on the cars. I will explain: he is a conductor on the Boston and Maine Railroad. A beautiful blossom is this child, transplanted to bloom in heaven.

I have been in your meetings many times, and the good Colonel comes with me often, and feels that all are welcome. These meetings, Mr. Chairman, have been established by higher intelligences. I am satisfied with the spirit-home, but I would say to Hattie that I am trying to make you all understand of father's coming.

I know Hannah asks why I do not talk a little more here? I would gladly come into communication with her privately, if I could. Ella, in a little while we shall hold communication with you privately, for there are many things I would like to speak of.

Oh! it was meat and drink to me to go to a spiritual meeting, even if "I did n't get anything," as many said. Some loved one stands beside every mortal before me.

Do n't think because you do n't get what is termed a message, that your dear ones are not here. Why, if we required space as you do, this little hall would not hold us, to say nothing about the rest of you. I am thankful to be able to give a few words.

I wish to say, Hattie, that each one may learn a little on this side. Father enjoyed the meetings, yet little did you know how my spirit was fed by these spiritual teachings. I would say to every one present, that if they are not what is termed Spiritualists, they had better be; I know you would be happier to learn something of the beyond, while on this side.

William Walker.

My home, Mr. Chairman, was in Cleveland, O., and my name is William Walker. I was called in different directions in a business way, for I was what is called a "traveling man," an agent, and consequently mingled with many people. At one particular time, in Milwaukee, when sitting in a hotel of an evening, the subject of spirit-return came up as a subject of conversation. I will acknowledge I was a little nervous. It was a strange house to me, and I did n't know but what these spirits they talk so much about might carry me off through the night. I did n't like to hear much of it, although some loved ones had crossed over. Yes, the dear boy, Charles; and how gladly would I have believed it if I could, but old theology stared me in the face, the early teachings of which I could not get away from, therefore I had always felt it would be better not to meddle with it.

I find now that the conversation in that hotel left an impression upon my spirit which I never lost; it also helped me to learn a little slyly, as a great many do to-day, who do not dare to let anybody know of it.

Now, I always felt when in the mortal that as far as business went, I was not ashamed to have any one know what I was doing; but when it came to religion, I did n't just like to have it known that I would investigate Spiritualism, for a moment. But I did, and I found some things I did n't know what to do with, so I would turn them over and over, and try to get a clue someway, thinking, perhaps, it was all "mind-reading," or the work of the evil one. I find now it is a truth, and I might have obtained much happiness if I had listened a little more.

It was a happy moment when my dear mother reached out to me, saying, "My son, come up higher! all things are ready."

In spirit-life she said to me that she did not know, when in the mortal, that spirits could return to earth, but always believed they hovered around us. I said that they must come to earth to do so. "Yes," she replied, "many things are clear to me now that once looked dark." I am glad there is a chance to learn on our side what we missed on this.

[The balance of the messages received through Mrs. Smith's mediumship at the above date, will appear in our next issue.]—ED.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

June 29.—Levi Hayward; Nancy Bolton; Jane Carver; Esther Williams; George Gill; John Garfield; Sarah Cragin; John Pierpont.

THE MESSAGES GIVEN (THROUGH MRS. B. F. SMITH) As per dates will appear in due course.

Sept. 14.—Nathan C. Davis; Sarah E. Basford; Sarah Johnson; Lyman Smith; Mabel Alda Powell; John H. Fuller; Jeremiah Witham; Emma Edgscomb; Graham Thayer; Maggie Skillings; Harriet Langdon; Frank H. Richardson; Sarah E. Parker; Michael Swasey; Annie Mitchell; Maria Nutting.

MERCY is so good a servant that it will never allow its master to die a beggar. The virtues that lie in Warner's Log Cabin Plasters are as beneficent and lasting as the qualities of mercy. Best and cheapest porqused plaster in market.

☞ Prof. Phelps, of Andover, having endeavored to inaugurate a new crusade on the old-time "Satanic" plane, thinking people will do well to read that pertinent work by Allen Putnam, Esq., entitled, "WITCHCRAFT OF NEW ENGLAND EXPLAINED BY MODERN SPIRITUALISM"; Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, have it on sale.

☞ The friends of the late Edward S. Wheeler—and they are numerous all over the country—should circulate freely the Sketch of his Life, that has been carefully prepared by Mr. George A. Bacon, and put in convenient pamphlet form by Colby & Rich, Booksellers, No. 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Price 10 cents.

Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

ISAAC C. ABBOT.

It is with a heart overflowing with gratitude to the angels and my sister medium, that I write to acknowledge the message in THE BANNER of August 18th, coming from ISAAC C. ABBOT. It is correct in every particular, and no one can vouch for it better than myself, he having attended my materializing séances upward of three years. At first he was a great skeptic, although an honest investigator; he studied into the subject for himself, and being convinced of its truth he, with three others, met once a week at my residence for two years, to visit—as they termed it—and hold communion with their spirit-friends. I often heard him speak of the cheering words of his angel mother, and one other dear friend he called Katie; he was an upright and honorable man, and could not have been deceived. To say that I am delighted to hear from him would not half express my feelings.

I will shake hands with our medium across the continent and say God bless her, and the angels protect her and keep her from all harm, that she may be an avenue whereby our dear ones can return and tell of the glories in store for us poor mortals, for there is no death, but everlasting life.

Respectfully, MRS. A. B. SOUTHER.

San Francisco, Cal.

I see in the Message Department of the BANNER OF LIGHT of August 18th, a communication from Spirit ISAAC C. ABBOT, a former resident of this city. I was very well acquainted with Mr. Abbot, who met his dissolution by, as he says, the discharge of a firearm in the hands of a friend; this was at a meeting of those interested in the adjustment of the affairs of the old Dashaway Society, where some considerable feeling had been shown previously. Mr. Abbot was quite regular in his attendance at the séances of Mrs. Souther's materializing circles, where I often met him, with many others. J. D. PIERSON.

1336 Washington street, San Francisco, Cal.

DR. ALFRED MILLER AND MR. RUSSELL.

In the Spirit Messages in the issue of July 21st, through the mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith, is DR. ALFRED MILLER, of Fitchburg, Mass. I knew him very well, and so far as I know of those in the family he speaks of, it is correct. He was a good man, a singer, also on the Board of Examining Surgeons for pensions.

Some two years ago at Onset he gave his name through Mr. Stiles. I answered it; at Fitchburg this spring through Mr. Baxter he gave his name; I also recognized it then.

The Mr. Russell he speaks of in his letter was Warren Russell of the Fitchburg Band. I knew him well.

MRS. E. S. LORING.

113 Blossom street, Fitchburg, Mass.

OSCAR PLUMMER.

The communication in the BANNER OF LIGHT of August 25th was read with great interest by the father and mother of OSCAR PLUMMER, as well as by others. We give full credence to the truthfulness of the message. We are believers in spiritual sympathy, and feel assured of its real value. We know that our dear sons are often near us, and though we have been tried and afflicted, the thought of their presence will ever be a source from which to draw comfort in days to come.

The message of Charles Woodwell I recognize as published in THE BANNER of Sept. 1st; it is also regarded as correct by his father.

MOSES A. PLUMMER.

Newburyport, Sept. 20th, 1888.

ANDREW FOSS.

I have been a reader of the valuable BANNER OF LIGHT, which I have bought for twenty years. I knew ANDREW FOSS well; I used to attend circles with him. Mr. Foss said it cost a person something to be a liberalist. I was always charmed in his society, for he was an intellectual man.

When a Baptist minister he preached to a flourishing society in Manchester, N. H. I have had some fine communications through Mrs. Smith. I have laid away many loved friends, and I know they are around me. MRS. ABBY B. HILL.

No. 99 Jackson street, Lawrence, Mass.

OSCAR LANE.

I would say the message from OSCAR LANE, in the BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 1st, through Mrs. Smith, is correct in every respect, except one name (Uncle Ellery), which should be Uncle Allen, he says, as I often talk with him privately; am glad to hear from him any way he can come that will reach me, and may he help others to come and say a few words at some future time. MRS. R. C. EATON.

Ashburnham, Mass., Sept. 9th, 1888.

RUTH HAMLET,

The message printed in THE BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 1st, as from RUTH HAMLET, is fully recognized by her neighbors and friends in this vicinity, where she long lived, and where she was much respected and loved. She was an excellent medium, and at one time was a public healing medium in Portland. I knew her well, and have witnessed her wonderful medial powers at her own house on many occasions. She passed to spirit-life from her home in this town, on the 19th day of June, 1884. Yours for truth, P. DYER.

Farmington, Me., Sept. 14th, 1888.

JOHN NEAL.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 1st was a message from JOHN NEAL of Woodstock, Vt. I recognize it as being from my father, and in every particular it is true. My only regret was that he did not say more; yet words are weak to express our thanks to him and the medium for what he did say. A. M. CLIFFORD.

34 Leverett street, Boston, Mass.

WARNER'S Log Cabin Remedies—old-fashioned, simple compounds, used in the days of our hardy forefathers, are "old timers," but "old reliable." They comprise a "Sarsaparilla," "Hops and Buchu Remedy," "Cough and Consumption Remedy," "Hair Tonic," "Extract," for External and Internal Use, "Plasters," "Rose Cream," for Catarrh, and "Liver Pills." They are put up by H. H. Warner & Co., proprietors of Warner's Safe Remedies, and promise to equal the standard value of those great preparations. All druggists keep them.

"If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?"

The world-wide reputation of Prof. Alfred R. Wallace as one in the foremost ranks of scientists imparts an added strength and value to the clear elucidation and masterly advocacy of the truths of Spiritualism given by him in his lecture having for its theme, "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?" published in a pamphlet of twenty-four pages by Colby & Rich, and supplied at the very low rate of 5 cents a single copy, thirteen for 50 cents, or thirty for $1.00. Let it do its work; buy it and circulate it.

Passed to Spirit-Life,

From her home in Worcester, Thursday, Sept. 13th, 1888, the loved companion of our brother, Seth Hale.

Known throughout Massachusetts and New England as a clairvoyant of remarkable powers, her life was one of earnest effort to alleviate suffering, and her success was astonishing, as many whom she has restored to health can testify. At the camp-meetings at Lake Walden and Lake Pleasant, Bro. Hale, with his happy family, were ever welcome guests, and until cancer laid its dread hand upon her, sister Hale was always present, and, like one who preceded her, ever doing good. A great sufferer, yet ever patient, we can drop no tear for her, who, like the ripened grain, has been garnered up by the reaper for a greater work under fairer skies. To her dear companion, whose head is white with the frosts of many winters; to the children left behind, we say be of good cheer. The sun of her life went from our gaze but to reappear in more glorious beauty and usefulness. Once more those lines from the lips of France's weird magician come floating through the air, "We weep for the dead, but we salute the immortal." The services were of the most liberal type, conducted by Rev. Mr. Harris, of the Universalist faith, assisted by Mrs. H. W. Hildreth.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 16th, 1888. FRED L. HILDRETH.

From her residence, in Belfast, Me., Sept. 16th, Sarah C., widow of the late Hon. Warren Preston, aged 84 years.

Her life of goodness and unselfishness was almost without a parallel. Her many crosses she bore with a sweet, uncomplaining patience touching to behold. She had a powerful intellect, and a most brilliant mind, and her womanly sweetness and tender thoughtfulness for every one but herself made her deeply loved by all who knew her. The bereaved family, and a large circle of friends, deeply mourn her loss. She retained her mind to the last. Only two days before her transit she repeated, when she could hardly articulate, a long historical poem which she committed to memory when a child. She was a firm believer in the Spiritual Philosophy, and was well known twenty-five years ago in Boston by some of the leading Spiritualists in those days. A crown of glory must be her portion now. ONE WHO LOVED HER.

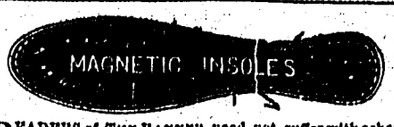
[Papers please copy.]

From Cardington, Ohio, Aug. 22d, 1888, Dr. Robert M. Thomas, aged 50 years.

After years of suffering from army disabilities, his spirit winged its flight to the "Sunny Land" he had longed to see. The beautiful philosophy of Spiritualism was a great comfort to him as he neared the mist-hidden shore of Spirit-Land. Richly endowed with great spiritual perceptions, he could distinctly feel the presence of loved spirit friends who had come to take him home. Dr. Thomas lived his religion; he put it to practical daily use; and his pure and upright life leaves an influence that will brighten as the years go by. Services were held at the residence by Prof. A. B. French, of Clyde, O., and listened to by a large and intellectual audience, eager to catch every word as it fell from his inspired lips. Dr. Thomas was a true husband, a true friend, a true soldier, and a true Spiritualist. He was a great humanitarian, and we feel that he is now where his field of usefulness can be extended. ONE WHO KNEW HIM.

[Obituary Notices not exceeding twenty lines published gratuitously. When they exceed that number, twenty cents for each additional line will be charged. Ten words on an average make a line. No poetry admitted under this heading.]

Advertisements.



READERS of THE BANNER need not suffer with aches, pains, soreness in feet and limbs, lame back, diseased kidneys or paralysis. A Certain, Sure, Positive Specific is offered by one who knows the laws of physical action. A single pair of our POWERFUL MAGNETIC INSOLES will give you complete evidence, and warm your feet and limbs in Five Minutes. Magnetism is life, and always vitalizes the blood when brought in contact with the body. You can wear these Insoles in your shoes, sleep with them in your socks on at night, or bind them on any part of the body, and you will experience delightful comfort, rest and relief from all aches, pains, or tired, worn-out feelings. You are sensible men and women, or you would not read THE BANNER. Why can't you believe the TRUTH which we utter, and which will set you free from dis-ease? Try the INSOLES at least; these will give you more than TEN DOLLARS' worth of solid comfort at a cost of only $1.00. If you test the INSOLES upon any part of your body you will find instant comfort and relief.

The energizing potency, the powerful magnetic warmth and life these INSOLES generate, will surprise you. Remember, we tell you MAGNETIC SHIELDS are genuine life-imparting and health-giving Therapeutic Agents, and excel all other Curative Agents combined.

Test a pair of INSOLES; these will keep your feet warm all winter, will remove soreness from feet and limbs, and rest you. Only $1.00 a pair, or THREE pairs for $2.00, by mail, postage paid, and guaranteed safe delivery to you.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD COMPANY,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.
Jy7 13w*

DR. F. L. H. WILLIS

May be Addressed until further notice,
Clenora, Yates Co., N. Y.

DR. WILLIS may be addressed as above. From this point he can attend to the diagnosing of disease psychometrically. He claims that his powers in this line are unrivaled, combining, as he does, accurate scientific knowledge with keen and searching psychometric power.

Dr. Willis claims especial skill in treating all diseases of the blood and nervous system. Cancers, Scrofula in all its forms, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and all the most delicate and complicated diseases of both sexes.

Dr. Willis is permitted to refer to numerous parties who have been cured by his system of practice when all others had failed. All letters must contain a return postage stamp.

Send for Circulars, with References and Terms.
Jy7 13w*

DR. J. R. NEWTON

STILL heals the sick! Spirit, Mind and Magnetic Cures at a distance through MRS. NEWTON. Send for testimonials to MRS. J. R. NEWTON, P. O. Station G., New York City. 13w* Jy7

SOUL READING,

Or Psychometrical Delineation of Character.

MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE would respectfully announce to the public that those who wish, and will visit her in person, or send their autograph or lock of hair, she will give an accurate description of their leading traits of character and peculiarities of disposition; marked changes in past and future life; physical disease, with prescription therefor; what business they are best adapted to pursue in order to be successful; the physical and mental adaptation of those intending marriage; and hints to the inharmoniously married. Full delineation, $2.00, and four 2-cent stamps. Brief delineation, $1.00, and four 2-cent stamps.

Address, MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE,
Centre street, between Church and Prairie streets,
Ap7 6m* White Water, Walworth Co., Wis.

STYLISH AND DURABLE FURNITURE.

WE manufacture all our Furniture at our large factory in Charlestown, and sell direct to the retail trade. By purchasing from us you save all intermediate profits between manufacturer and retailer. All our goods are warranted. Inspection and comparison invited. No trouble to show goods.

F. M. HOLMES FURNITURE CO.,
Boston Salesroom, 116 Tremont St.
S15 6teow

ASTONISHING OFFER.

SEND three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power. DR. A. B. DOBSON, Maquoketa, Iowa.
Jy14 13w*

A Wonderful Discovery.

BY a Clairvoyant. Melted Pebble Spectacles will restore lost vision. Send a 2-cent stamp for valuable information. Address B. F. POOLE, Optician, Clinton, Iowa. 4w* S8

Sealed Letters Answered

BY MRS. ELIZA A. MARTIN, Oxford, Mass. Terms $1.00 and two 2-cent stamps. 4w* S8

SEALED LETTERS.

ELEANOR MARTIN now makes specialty of business, $5.00. Full Spiritual Message, $2.00. 73 Lane Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Register all letters. 4w* S22

MRS. R. T. CLANEY,

BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 411 Lookout street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6m* Je23

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSSE will remove to the country for a while, where she will continue to give Life-Readings for $1.00 and stamp, and answer six questions for 50 cents and stamp. Disease a specialty. Address West Garland, Me.
S22 2w*

WANTED—A Gentleman Teacher to take charge of a small class of boys and girls in exchange for a pleasant home. Address BELLE BUSH, Belvidere Seminary, Belvidere, New Jersey. 2wt S22

The Writing Planchette.

SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. Those unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been obtained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practice in writing mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes," which may be consulted on all questions, as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.

DIRECTIONS.—Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board; in a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let two try it together. If nothing happens the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.

The Planchette is furnished complete with box, pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.

PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 60 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.

For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

DR. RHODES' FAMILY MEDICINES.

Purely Vegetable
(ALL SUGAR-COATED)
Medical Confections.
A Universal Blessing.
SUITED TO OLD OR YOUNG!

A PERFECT Liver and Kidney Renovator and A Blood Purifier. Cleanses the entire system from all Biliousness and Blood Poisons from Malaria, etc. And cures Headache, Backache, Side and Stomach-ache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pains in the Limbs, Lameness, Numbness, Constipation, Piles, Worms, Dyspepsia, Consumption, Nervousness, Weakness, Kidney and Bladder, and all other urinary ailments, etc. Also, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and in fact almost all the various ailments of humanity.

PRICES: Trial box, 25 cents—by mail, 30 cents; second size, 50 cents—by mail, 55 cents; 12 boxes second size, $5.00; large boxes, $1.00; six large boxes, $5.00.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

CARLAND'S Vegetable Cough Drops.

THE greatest known remedy for all Throat and Lung Complaints. For Catarrh, Asthma, etc., etc., it has no equal. It is warranted to cure Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, and Inflammation of the Lungs. It is free from all opiates and minerals, or any other injurious ingredient; and is therefore harmless in all cases; likewise palatable and beneficial in regulating and strengthening the system; and as a BLOOD PURIFIER IS TRULY UNRIVALLED. A box, taken according to directions, is warranted in all cases to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded by the proprietor, DR. M. H. CARLAND, 498 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

Price, per box (one-fourth pound), 25 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

CATARRH, Diphtheria, and all Throat Diseases, curable by the use of DR. J. E. BRIGGS'S THROAT REMEDY. Mr. Andrew Jackson Davis writes: "Dr. Brigge's Throat Remedy for the Throat and Catarrhal Affections, including Diphtheria, I know to be equal to the claims in the advertisement."

Price, 50 cents per bottle, postage 15 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DIAGNOSIS FREE.

SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M. D., Principal; Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich. 1m* S1

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,

Developing and Business Medium,
ALSO,
Clairvoyant Physician,
474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,
(Corner of Concord street.)

Sittings daily from 9 A. M. till 5 P. M. Price $1.00.

Unequalled Advantages.

DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.

Development of Mediumship a Specialty.

SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $4.00 IN ADVANCE.

CIRCLES.

Sunday, at 11 A. M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P. M., for Psychometry and Tests. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf S29

J. W. FLETCHER,
MEDICAL AND BUSINESS MEDIUM,
ALSO ELECTRICIAN AND MAGNETIST
6 Beacon street, Boston.

S8 tf

DR. HENRY ROGERS,
Medium for Varied Independent Psychic Phenomena,
Will be located at Parlors 684 Tremont st., Boston, on and after Sept. 17th.
Diagnosis and Treatment of Disease a specialty.

S15 5w*

HATTIE C. STAFFORD

WILL give séances at No. 55 Rutland street Sundays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 2:30 P. M.; also Sundays and Wednesdays at 8 P. M.

S8 tf GEORGE T. ALBRO, MANAGER.

MRS. T. J. LEWIS,

BUSINESS, Psychometric, Test and Prophetic Medium, 205 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Mass. Sittings each day from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Psychometric Readings Tuesday afternoons at 2:30; Spirit Test Circles Wednesday evenings at 7:30; Development and Tests Friday afternoons at 2:30.

S29 1w*

Something New and Pleasing.

WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1.00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m S1

MRS. H. W. CUSHMAN,

MUSICAL, Test, Business and Writing Medium. Circles Monday, 7:30 P. M.; Thursday, 2:30 P. M. Six questions answered by mail for $1.00 and stamp. Examination by lock of hair, $1.00. 212 Main street, Charlestown. 4w* S22

MISS A. PEABODY,

MEDICAL, Business and Test Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday, Thursday evenings, and Tuesday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Magnetic and Electric Treatments. 1 Bennet street, corner Washington, Boston. 1w* S29

MRS. E. B. STRATTON,

WRITING MEDIUM, Hotel Garfield, Suite 4, West Rutland Square, Boston. 1w* S29

MRS. K. R. STILES,

LOCATED at 139 Dartmouth street, Boston, Hotel Bismarck, Suite 2. Sittings daily, Sundays excepted. Will respond to calls for platform work. 4w* S22

MRS. H. D. GREEN,

MAGNETIC Healer. Forty years' experience. Finest of recommendations. Chronic and obstinate cases a specialty. 68 East Chester Park, Boston. 1w* S29

MISS L. E. SMITH,

MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P. M. 14 Union Park street, Boston.

S29 1w*

Massage and Magnetism.

MRS. DR. E. M. FAXON, 22 Winter street, Room 7A, Boston. Obesity treated. Also instruction given.

S1 10w*

MRS. A. FORRESTER

WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. 181 Shawmut Avenue, one flight, Boston. Do not ring. 1w* S29

MRS. ALDEN,

TRANCE MEDIUM. Medical Examinations and Magnetic Treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston.

S15 5w*

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, removed to 16 Boylston street, near Tremont (one flight).

S8 8w*

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter address for personal treatment or his powerful Spirit Magnetized Paper, during the summer months, 9 Bosworth street, Boston. Two packages by mail, $1.00.

Jy7 13w*

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 6 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment, Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Colorado Sulphur Baths.

S29 1w*

MISS L. M. WHITING.—Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, and stiffness of limbs from sprains or breaks, is the most successful in use. Oct. 1st will remove to parlors 4 and 5, No. 164A Tremont street, Boston. 12w* Au4

MRS. HATTIE YOUNG,

TRANCE and Business Medium, 22 Winter street, Room 16, Boston. 4w* S8

MRS. DR. JULIA CRAFTS SMITH gives medical examinations free every Thursday from 9 to 5. Office, Hotel "Cabe," 8 Appleton street, Boston.

S29 eow5t*

MISS L. BARNICOAT, Medical, Test and Business Medium. Lectures followed by Tests and Psychometry. 175 Tremont street, Room 10, Boston.

Jy7 8w*

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 8½ Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), Room 4, Boston, Mass. Office hours, from 1 to 4 P. M.

Jy7 26w*

MISS CONRADSEN, Healing Medium. Massage Treatment. 12 Boylston Place, near Tremont st.

S29 1w*

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. 8w* Au4

J. A. SHELHAMER,

MAGNETIC HEALER,

Office 8½ Bosworth Street, (Room 5,) Boston, Mass.,

WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases. Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription and advice, $2.00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1.00 per package. Healing by rubbing and laying on of hands. Parties wishing consultation by letter must be particular to state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Kidney, or Strengthening and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1.00.

Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.—except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he attends out-of-town patients. Letter address care of BANNER OF LIGHT. 13w* Jy7

THE RELIGION OF SPIRITUALISM. By EUGENE CROWELL, M. D., author of "The Identity of Primitive Christianity and Modern Spiritualism," etc. Among the prime points of consideration in this work may be mentioned: What is Religion? Spiritualism is a Religion. The Religion of Spiritualism Identical with the Religion of Jesus.

Price 15 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

Dr. Hardcastle's TOOTH-LIFE.

A Delightful Tooth-Powder.

THIS Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.

Of the four pages printed matter accompanying each box of "Tooth-Life," old Dr. Blankman, after reading it, made this remark: "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."

The proprietor says: "As a Spiritualist from my youth, I say in all conscience, no person can fail to find in the box of 'Tooth-Life' and four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of an experience as an American dentist and student dating from 1860, of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth-preservative measures taught alone are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."

Put up in a neat box. Sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Spiritual Workers.

Photographed from Crayon Portraits
BY ALBERT MORTON.

Additions to this List of Portraits are being Drawn.

DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.
PASCHAL BEVERLY RANDOLPH.
CHARLES H. FOSTER.
CHARLES H. FOSTER and SPIRIT ADAH ISAACS MENKEN, after Spirit Photograph by W. H. Mumler.
PROF. ROBERT HARE.
PROF. WILLIAM DENTON.
DR. H. F. GARDNER.

Cabinet size. Price 50 cents each.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"Glad Tidings of Immortality."

FINELY executed lithographs bearing the above title have been received by us. The size is 22½x28½. The principal figure is a female, evidently designed to represent a materialized spirit, crowned with a wreath of flowers, and bearing a long band of them in her left hand, while in her right is a scroll inscribed with the words "Message of Love." Over her head are three stars. The drapery on each side appears to be the curtains of a cabinet, between which she stands in an exceedingly graceful position, suggestive of the line, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." From above a ray of light radiates over the entire form. Vignette likenesses of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Lillie and Mrs. Britten, and Messrs. Howell and Colville, are given, and excellent ones they are. The artist is Mr. Shobe, who, we are informed, has executed many beautiful drawings illustrative of the Spiritual Philosophy.

Price 50 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.

I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.

I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters (from the above data). Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions, in accordance with my understanding of the science, for a fee of $1; Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.

Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. Jy19

New and Enlarged Edition.

The Spiritual Wreath,

A NEW COLLECTION OF WORDS AND MUSIC
FOR THE
Choir, Congregation and Social Circle.
BY S. W. TUCKER.

CONTENTS:

Angels, Come to Me.	Shall We Know Each Other There?
Angel Presence.	The Happy By-and-Bye.
Beautiful Isle.	The Soul's Destiny.
Come Angels.	The Angel of His Presence.
Compensation.	There Is No Death.
Day by Day.	They Still Live.
Going Home.	The Better Land.
Guardian Angels.	The Music of Our Hearts.
Home of Rest.	The Freeman's Hymn.
Hope for the Sorrowing.	The Vanished.
Humility.	They will Meet Us on the Shore.
Happy Thoughts.	The Eden Above.
He's Gone.	The Other Side.
I'm Called to the Better Land.	Will You Meet Me Over There?
I Thank Thee, oh, Father.	Who Will Guide My Spirit Home?
Jubilate.	Whisper Us of Spirit Life.
My Spirit Home.	Waiting On This Shore.
Nearer Home.	Waiting 'Mid the Shadows.
Over There.	Welcome Home.
Passed On.	Welcome Angels.
Reconciliation.	We Long to be There.
Repose.
She Has Crossed the River.
Strike your Harps.
Some Day of Days.

NEW PIECES.

Bethany.	Ready to Go.
By Love We Arise.	Sweet Rest at Home.
Gone Before.	They 're Calling Us over the Sea.
Gone Home.	We 'll know Each Other There.
Invocation Chant.	We 'll Meet Them By-and-Bye.
I Shall Know His Angel Name.	Will Bloom Again.
Nearing the Goal.	When Earthly Labors Close.
No Weeping There.
Our Home Beyond the River.
Parting Hymn.
Rest on the Evergreen Shore.

Boards. Price: Single copies, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50. (A few copies of old edition at 25 cents per copy, or twelve copies for $2.50.)

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

LIFE AND LABOR IN THE SPIRIT-WORLD:

Being a Description of Localities, Employments, Surroundings, and Conditions in the Spheres.

BY MEMBERS OF THE SPIRIT-BAND OF
MISS M. T. SHELHAMER,
Medium of the Banner of Light Public Free Circle.

When one becomes fully convinced that friends who have passed from existence on earth still live, the questions naturally arise, How do they live, and what are their occupations? The purpose of this book is to answer these inquiries, and, so far as the language of a material life is capable of describing a spiritual one, it does so. These descriptions are not mere theories and surmises of what may exist beyond this state of being, the acceptance of which depends mainly upon the faith of the individual to whom they may be presented, but statements of facts made by those who live that life, and are familiar with the scenes and experiences of which they write.

In one volume of 426 pages, neatly and substantially bound in cloth. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents; full gilt, $1.50, postage free.

An Edition of Life and Labor in the Spirit-World has been issued by COLBY & RICH which is embellished with eight illustrations representing scenes in spirit-life. The titles of the illustrations, which are very suggestive of the scenes portrayed, are as follows:

At Home in the Summer-Land.
Little George and his Spirit-Mother.
Lucy Aiken and her Kind Ministrations.
Beulah, a Spirit Missionary.
Unhappy Spirits. What we Sow we shall Reap.
Fannie Davis Under Spirit Control.
Little Bertie. "For Mamma."
An Excursion to Sunny Island.

The price of the Illustrated Volume, which in all other respects is the same as the edition above advertised, is $1.50, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

POEMS AND RHYTHMICAL EXPRESSIONS. By DR. D. AMBROSE DAVIS.

Contents.—Dedicatory; Introductory; Prefatory; Did all Things Come by Chance? Humility Inherited; What Shall My Mission Be? Fraternity; The Prayer of Jesus; Nature's Theology; The Answering Voice; Supernal Guests; The Tiny Raps; Life's School-Rooms; Rural Life; The Mariner's Faith; Acorns and Oaks; The Little Angel Minnewa; The Soul of Beneficence; Soul-Mating; The Ascended William Lloyd Garrison; The Anthem of Nature; We Go Not Out from Nature; Inscrutable Providence; A Kindly Whisper; The Voice I Heard; Never, Never Lost; Tyranny; How Blest I Was in Giving; The Little Guest at Supper; The Lost of Earth Forever in God's Keeping; Leaves; Valedictory; Robert Burns's Nuptials with Highland Mary in Spirit-Life; The Dying Poet.

Cloth, 12mo. Price 75 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE NEW CRISIS. By GEO. W. BELL. In his preface the author says: "We have reached a crisis in our national development. We have rushed to this pinnacle of greatness with a mad impetuosity unparalleled in the annals of the world; ignoring social adjustments, essential to the symmetry and stability of a state.

My purpose being to prove the existence of a class-conspiracy, the design of which is to subvert the principles of our government by a monopoly of all wealth, I have discussed the merits of no measure further than to prove the centralizing tendencies."

Cloth, pp. 350. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

IF, THEN, AND WHEN, from the Doctrines of the Church. By WARREN SUMNER BARLOW, author of "The Voices, and other Poems." All who have read the author's "The Voice of Nature," "The Voice of a Pebble," "The Voice of Superstition," and "The Voice of Prayer," will find this Poem just suited to the times.

Price 10 cents.

For sale by the Publishers, COLBY & RICH.

LIFE AND ITS FORCES. Health and Disease Correctly Defined. A reliable Guide to Health without the use of Mineral or Vegetable Poisons or Irritants. The conclusions from Forty Years' Practice of Medicine. By DR. WILLIAM PORTER.

Cloth, tinted paper, 133 pp. Price $1.00, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New York Advertisements.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

304 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, successfully treats all forms of Chronic Diseases, however complicated. Patients afflicted for years, regarded as hopeless, or incurable, testify to permanent restoration. For twenty years his power to diagnose and treat Disease has been and still stands unequaled, so say eminent Scientists, Physicians, Clergymen, and patients from all parts of the country. Voluminous testimony can be seen at his office. Those unable to visit the Doctor in person can be successfully treated at their homes. Send stamp for Circular. Diagnosis, with advice, $2.00.

Extract from a letter by Rev. F. R. M., D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I am happy to testify to Dr. Dake's high moral character as a man, and his eminent ability as a physician who has achieved a most extraordinary career."

Jy7 tf

Mrs. Stoddard-Gray and Son, DeWitt C. Hough,

HOLD Materializing Séances every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday evening, 8 o'clock; Tuesday and Saturday, 2 o'clock, at 323 W. 34th street, New York. Daily Sittings for Communication and Business. 4w* S8

MRS. C. M. SAWYER,

MATERIALIZING MEDIUM,
No. 785 Sixth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

SEANCES Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, at 8 o'clock; Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. 6w S22

MRS. L. HIGGINS, Business, Trance and Test Medium. Sittings daily 10 to 3, Wednesdays excepted. 351 West 27th street, New York. 4w* S22

MARY C. MORRELL, Business, Prophetic and Developing Medium, 230 West 36th street, New York City. 10w* Au25

MRS. C. SCOTT, Trance and Business Medium. Sittings 10 to 5. No. 21 West 13th street, N. Y. Au11 10w*

A LIBERAL OFFER,

BY A RELIABLE CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER.

SEND four 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name, age and sex, we will diagnose your case FREE by independent spirit-writing. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Canton, N. Y. Au11 13w*

RUPTURES

CURED in thirty days by my MEDICAL COMPOUND and Improved ELASTIC SUPPORTER TRUSS. Send Stamp for Circular. Address CAPT. W. A. COLLINGS, Smithville, Jefferson Co., N. Y. [Mention this paper.] 13w* Au4

Clairvoyant Examinations Free.

ENCLOSE lock of hair, with leading symptoms. We will give you a correct diagnosis of your case. Address E. F. BUTTERFIELD, M. D., corner Warren and Fayette streets, Syracuse, New York. 26w* Ju28

The Weekly Discourse;

Containing the Spiritual Sermons by the guides of
MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND.
VOLUME III.

No. 1.—THE THREE M'S: MAMMON, MILLIONAIRES AND MURDER.
No. 2.—A LEAP IN THE DARK.
No. 3.—WHAT RELIGION IS BEST FOR MANKIND?
No. 4.—IDEAL SOCIALISM: HOW DOES IT COMPARE WITH CHRISTIANITY AND SPIRITUALISM?
No. 5.—THE IMPORT OF THE DAY.
No. 6.—ANCIENT AND MODERN MIRACLES.
No. 7.—THE JUDGMENT DAY.
No. 8.—THE POWER OF PRAYER.
No. 9.—THE NATURE OF SPIRITUALISM: IN ANSWER TO THE WORLD'S NEEDS.
No. 10.—THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE WORLD.
No. 11.—THE POPE, THE PROPAGANDA.
No. 12.—THE BETRAYERS OF SPIRITUALISM.
No. 13.—THE HEIGHT, THE DEPTH AND THE BREADTH OF SPIRITUAL TRUTH.
No. 14.—SOME APPROPRIATE ANSWERS TO SUPERFICIAL QUESTIONS.
No. 15.—A LEAF FROM THE BOOK OF THE FUTURE.
No. 16.—A CORRECT STATEMENT OF THE NATURE OF SPIRIT-LIFE; ITS EMPLOYMENTS AND PURSUITS.
No. 17.—WHAT OF THE NIGHT?
No. 18.—LIVES THAT WERE EPITOMIZED.
No. 19.—WHY DOES MAN CLAIM IMMORTALITY?
No. 20.—WHAT IS THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE TEXT, "IN MY FATHER'S HOUSE ARE MANY MANSIONS"?
No. 21.—MODERN SPIRITUALISM AND PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY IDENTICAL.
No. 22.—WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OCCULTISM, THEO

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1888.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

REST.

At midnight Sleep, relenting, came to me—
My balmy, soft-eyed Sleep—came as of old
And crept into my bed. My hands were cold:
He took them 'twixt his own impassionately
As any brother might, and tenderly
Kissed slumber in my eyes. Ah! dearer than gold,
Dearer than all the gems the sea-beds hold,
Sweeter than nectarous spice from "Araby,
The Blest"—Sleep, gentle Sleep, returned to me.
"Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy Sleep,"
Rarer and rosier than Sabian wine!
He took me to his bosom and did twine
His drowsy arms about me downily,
And kissed mine eyelids, too, so tight I could no longer weep.—Orelia Key Bell, in Detroit Free Press.

An old writer says: "A long chin declareth a man to be a babbler." That is sufficiently plain. The man who chins long is certainly given to babbling.

The lack of women's dining halls in New York is made up in some instances by the janitresses of big office buildings, who serve warm dinners to the pretty typewriters up under the eaves.

THE BANNER OF LIGHT (Spiritual) has began its thirty-second year, and in its new type makes a handsome appearance, Materially, its veteran editor, who is a model printer, has an excellent typographical taste; while intellectually, he appears to favor every Liberal movement, and thus he is helping this world, whether there is another one "on high" or not. In this respect, Spiritualism is an improvement on Christianity.—Boston Investigator.

We often read of the Lily of the Valley;
But it can't be compared at all
With the Lillie that fills the rostrum
Every Sunday at Berkeley Hall.

The superintendent of a New York street railroad company estimates the wear and tear on horses as about $50 a year each. "Each car has on the average ten horses, so that horseflesh worth $500 is used up annually by each car. On some of the longer lines as many as 150 cars are run, so that the total annual consumption of horses would seem to be on these roads $75,000. As horses are the willing servants of mankind they should not be abused. We fear the society for the protection of dumb animals does not look after the horse railroad managers as often as it should, either in New York or Boston, or other cities.

We see that Bro. J. B. Hall, editor of the Aroostook Herald, has had a reunion at his residence in Presque Isle, Me., of the "old-timers"—i. e., the survivors of the editorial excursion party to Aroostook in 1858, viz: J. M. Adams and wife of the Argus; E. H. Elwell and wife, Transcript; Brown Thurston and daughter, Portland; E. Rowell and wife, Hallowell; Dr. W. B. Lapham, Augusta; Dr. J. Q. A. Hawes, Hallowell; C. P. Roberts, Bangor, and a large party of ladies and gentlemen of Presque Isle. During the evening Governor-elect Burleigh, wife and daughter, joined the party and were serenaded by the cornet band.

HORRORS.—The cholera is devastating Portuguese India; the yellow fever is still spreading in the South; Stromboli is in eruption. The Avisador Commercial of Havana gives extended details of the destruction wrought by the recent cyclone in Cuba. Over one thousand lives were lost on the island, while the damage to dwellings, shipping, crops and other property extends into the millions.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal wants to be a corporation, with a capital stock of $50,000, in one thousand shares of fifty dollars each, and says $12,500 have already been subscribed.

The only woman lawyer in Philadelphia is Mrs. Carrie B. Kilgore. She has an enviable reputation at the bar, and there is not a judge in the city who does not respect her for her legal ability.—Truth Seeker, N. Y.

This is true to the letter.

An exchange remarks: "The constant trouble with and abject condition of British American Indians have excited the interest of many influential and prominent Englishmen, who propose to make efforts tending to the establishment of an Indian policy similar to that adopted by the United States." We trust this new venture "across the line" will prove more successful in its workings than has the one chosen for its model.

The poet Whittier says, and truly:

We dwell with fears on either hand,
Within a daily strife,
And spectral problems waiting stand
Before the gates of life.

We have had specimens of this sort of strife thrust upon us of late by parties who ought to know better. But we can stand it if they can.

President Cleveland has received official information of the refusal of the Chinese Government to ratify the amended treaty.

There is nothing on earth which so quickly transfigures a personality, which refines, exalts, irradiates with heaven's own impress of loveliness, as a prevailing kindness of heart. The soul that is full of pure and generous affections fashions the features after its own image, as the rose by inborn impulse grows in grace and blossoms into beauty which no art can equal or imitate.

A severe hurricane passed over several of the West India Islands, Sept. 2d and 3d. At Ragged Island eighteen houses were totally destroyed, twelve others nearly so, and scores were more or less injured. All the sponging, fishing and trading schooners belonging to the Island were either bilged or driven high on the shore.

Bro. Hull, of The New Thought, has been "on the wing" of late, and he tells his readers in his blunt, familiar style, where he flew and what he saw. Glad to learn that Moses is possessed of angelic appendages; but we have no fear that they are of the Orthodox stamp.

'T is ever wrong to say a good man dies.—Callimachus, B. C. 250.

Many residents of Massachusetts have been granted pensions; but there is one woman in this State, over eighty years old, whose son—a volunteer at the beginning of the war, enlisting without bounty, who fought in eleven battles and was at length gobbled up at Gettysburg—is left out in the cold solely through Washington red tape, while at least one other in the town in which she resides, a healthy "three months' man," is receiving a pension! President Cleveland should know this fact.

Powerful Indian chiefs oppose the proposed U. S. treaty, knowing it to be a fraud.

JACKSONVILLE.

The silence and the sorrow,
They break our hearts to-day:
Hushed echoes faintly falling
Upon our happier way,
Borne from the stricken city,
Wherein with muffled tread
Men wait upon the dying
And carry forth the dead.

The Paris Exhibition of 1889 is to have a great globe one-millionth life size. It will be so large as to occupy a deal of space in the Champ de Mars, and will be so arranged that it can be turned around, and any one can see the world revolve for $1.

Mrs. Flyesparrow (to new acquaintance)—You seem to be an inveterate lover of the weed, Mr. Nicotine. May I ask if your father smokes? Mr. Nicotine—I trust not, madame. He has been dead some time.—Town Topics.

Women who register in Boston at any time before Nov. 27th can vote for School Committee. The only action required at the present time on the part of women is to see that they are properly assessed on or before the 1st day of October, after which they can pay their tax and present themselves for registration at any time between Nov. 7th and 27th.

NEW MUSIC.—We have received from White, Smith & Co., 516 Washington street, the following: For pianoforte, "Carnival of Venice," for four hands, C. Czerny. For the organ, "Studies," 17 pp., B. M. Davison. "Meditation in the Forest," for violin and piano, Morrison M. Aisbury. Vocal, "Ave Maria," J. Braunschiedt; "In the Chimney Corner," F. H. Cowen; "Memories of Boyhood," song and chorus, words and music by W. A. Springer; "Maude," song and chorus, C. H. Gabriel.

William Warren, the veteran actor, passed to spirit-life, Sept. 21st. For fifty years he has been connected with Boston theatres, and during this time his name has been known and revered all over New England. The greater part of his life was spent with the Boston Museum, where he was a general favorite.

The British military authorities contemplate building fortifications at the headlands of San Juan Bay, at the entrance to the Straits of Fuca. The longest range guns could carry across the channel, which is about twelve miles wide at that point. Puget Sound in the near future will be second only to San Francisco Bay in commercial importance, and British guns will command the entrance.—Santa Cruz (Cal.) Daily Sentinel.

Jacksonville papers speak of yellow Jack as Bronze John. "By any other name 't would spread as fast," says an exchange.

How comes Love?
It comes unsought, unsent.
How goes Love?
It was not love that went.

Ex-Marshal Bazaine, of Mexican and Metz fame, died in Madrid, Sept. 23d. The cause of death was heart disease.

Echoes from Lake Pleasant.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Like a dream of pleasure that is past, the busy scenes of the recent camp-meeting have vanished, to be renewed no more till another year ushers in the day appointed for the hosts of two worlds to convene again. Only a few lingering pilgrims remain to remind the reflective observer of departed days.

How strange is the autumn stillness among these lovely groves that so recently were alive with bustling humanity, and vocal with vibrations bearing both human and divine thought. Were it not for the many beauties of nature that cluster in this charming spot which still remain though scores of thousands have carried them away in memory, the death-like silence supervening the departure of great throngs would give this almost deserted village an old-time funereal sadness. But the golden sunshine glimmers upon the placid lake, and shimmers through the leafy canopy just as beautifully as when thousands sat beneath catching inspiration from nature's glories, and the glowing words of spirit-tongued orators.

The festive squirrel chatters as glibly in the tree-top, and grows more familiar and friendly with the few who remain to watch his gleesome gambols; and the feathered songsters begin to return to reoccupy the leafy homes.

All that appertains and belongs to Lake Pleasant remains to cheer the lingerer, but there is a loneliness which a social nature feels, as one after another forsakes scenes but a few days ago so astir with human presence. But such is life. The history of a camp-season is the epitome of human existence upon this planet. We come, play our little part in the drama, tragic or comic, make our bow, then retire as the curtain falls, and, after a brief respite, another generation, filled with the same hopes, fears, loves, energies and aims, takes our place, then departs as we did; and so the stream moves on to touch and quicken the shores of another world.

The season just past has to the writer been as replete with pleasure as the two former occasions of his visitation. More than the keen relish of nature's charms, is the delight of meeting many old friends whose acquaintance has been formed in all quarters of America's dominions, in nearly every section of which his pilgrim feet have trod as a missionary of the New Dispensation. It may be that his homeless condition increases his fraternal sympathy and he feels more closely drawn to all kindred spirits. Be that as it may, he eagerly embraces the opportunity of a camp-meeting to renew old friendships and form as many new ones as possible. This pleasure was enjoyed to its fullest extent not only by the writer, but by most of the great multitude now, like himself, reverting to it as to halcyon days sacred to memory.

If for no other reason than that of mutual acquaintance and an interchange of thought, camp-meetings are valuable to those who can attend, for among a people who have so few sectarian ties, the bonds of fraternity and friendship need every means to strengthen them, and Spiritualists generally would do well (better than many are now doing,) if they would heed a motto of Stephen A. Douglas: "Let us know each other better, that we may love each other more."

Among the many pleasures of the season the greatest to the writer was the privilege of meeting and listening to his honored co-workers upon the platform. Bros. Baxter and Dawbarn proved by their able and scholarly discourses that they are yet growing men, standing on heights that few have reached. Sister Spence, though one of the earliest among the veterans, is yet as vigorous and practical in thought as ever. Her ringing voice, freighted with clear-cut ideas, could be heard far beyond the auditorium, and wherever heard it arrested and held the listener till it ceased. For the first time in our long career as speaker, the writer was privileged to meet Lyman C. Howe, and listen to his logical and rhetorical lectures. He is indeed "a gentleman and scholar," and wears his many laurels with undue modesty.

While there were some attendant evils which must be remedied, the session, on the whole, must have been productive of much good as an agitator of thought and a stimulus to higher spiritual evolution. It was encouraging to see so many seeking earnestly to unfold a higher spirituality of thought and life in accord with the ulterior purpose of this Spiritual Dispensation.

The managers at Lake Pleasant showed wisdom in supplying the audiences with spiritual teachers who utilized the phenomena as a means to scientific and philosophic discovery of the great spiritual realities objectively illustrated by them.

Material improvements at this famous camp-ground are slowly going on, and there are many more promised which will require more money to "materialize" them than is yet forthcoming. One of the most needed is a better system of sewerage, so that the delightful and health-giving emanations from the beautiful pines studding the grounds may no longer be neutralized by noxious odors. No fault is to be found with the health-officer in charge, but the system is wrong, and the means of purification defective, and the campers who own property should clamor for an improvement in those particulars.

The President and the genial Treasurers of both the Syndicate and the Association win the good will and respect of the majority of those whom they serve, and the former has for the fifteenth time been reëlected to his position, a fact that speaks for itself. It shows that he is "solid" with "the powers that be" at least.

In the opinion of many, as much interest in the true work of Spiritualism as in the financial success of the camp, and a broader and higher view of its platform-work, would add much to the qualifications of those in power.

Many other matters should be noted, but this article is quite long enough, and as the time of departure from the scene of a month's pleasant experiences has come to the writer, he bids adieu to these lovely surroundings, returning to the "Hub," preparatory to answering calls from any direction for his services as teacher of practical truth. DEAN CLARKE.

Lake Pleasant, Sept. 14th, 1888.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Sunday, Sept. 23d, dawned bright and beautiful, and the large audiences that assembled to listen to the inspirations of Mrs. H. S. Lake, under the auspices of the First Society, seemed to reflect in their faces some of the glory of the day. Numerous subjects submitted by the people for consideration were treated in a masterly manner by the guide, whose utterances were marked by that earnestness which pervades all the words and works of this gifted and conscientious medium. The day was in all respects a memorable and profitable one in the history of the Association. L. R. C.

Salem, Mass.—The first meeting of the coming lecture season was held Sunday, Sept. 16th. Mrs. Abby N. Burnham was the speaker. Sept. 23d we had C. Fannie Allyn with us. During the interval between the afternoon lecture and poem, a committee was appointed to nominate officers for the ensuing year. The following were elected: Mr. G. W. Moreland, President; Dr. N. A. Allen and Mr. W. N. Wiggin, Vice Presidents; W. H. H. Thyng, Secretary and Treasurer; Miss Amanda Bailey, Musical Director. Next Sunday, Sept. 30th, C. Fannie Allyn will again address us at 2:30 and 7:30 P. M.

Considerable interest was manifested at these introductory meetings, and we hope to have a pleasant and instructive season. Salem Spiritualists are not dead, though they may be a trifle inert, and the truth is steadily growing. With the BANNER OF LIGHT in our midst we need not doubt that victory will be ours.
W. H. H. THYNG.

Providence, R. I.—The Ladies' Spiritualist Aid Society of Providence, R. I., that for the past four years has carried on its meetings very successfully, will reopen for the fifth year Thursday, Oct. 4th, in Slade Hall, corner Eddy and Washington streets. The members have done a good work in the past, and hope to do more in the future. The hall they will occupy the coming year is large and commodious, and able to accommodate all who may come. The officers elected for the coming season were: Mrs. M. A. Waterman, President; Mrs. Sarah Osborn, Vice-President; Mrs. Mary Rhodes, Treasurer; Mrs. H. C. Troupe, Secretary. All are cordially invited to attend.
MRS. H. C. TROUPE, Secretary.

Onset Séance.

The evening service and closing exercises of the camp-meeting season of 1888 terminated Sept. 23d with a séance which was devoted to the spirits of the Indians. Col. Wm. D. Crockett was master of ceremonies.

The Temple, where the séance was held, contained most of the visitors, and also those residing on the grounds. The seats were placed in a manner that was as near a circle as possible. I noticed in the inner circle of the séance such individuals as the Hon. Sidney Dean and wife, John Haines and wife, Mr. Tallman, Mr. Craig, Mrs. Lita Barnes Sayles, Mr. Whittemore and wife, Dr. Allen and Dr. Richardson; the latter made himself quite at home in the séance, illustrating the object of the meeting, and speaking as the spirit gave him utterance.

Many mediums present were influenced. I will not attempt to describe them all by name; they comprised persons of different ages, and of both sexes. General good harmony pervaded, and all seemed willing to yield to any influence that might come to or upon them. Some of them sang quite nicely, under spirit-influence, while others took up the various problems of life and some of the questions now at issue in our boasted free country—America. They even considered the public school question, showing no sympathy with the idea of our public schools being put under any Church discipline and influence—whether Protestant or Catholic; Mr. Haines, under a powerful control, treated this issue in an eloquent and logical manner, and surprised those who had never before heard his ringing voice while under the control of a spirit representing in style and logic that of Daniel Webster.

Hon. Sidney Dean, of Rhode Island, said that as a duty to himself he wished to speak of the great benefit that he had derived from the Harvest Moon Indian séance. I wish every church-member in the land could have listened to his remarks on this occasion; they were full of vital truths, and brought out much thought on the question of the "sixth sense," to which he had evidently given close attention. Mr. Dean has been a great student of theology and politics, but this speech was his first one before a spiritualistic audience. I wish the Spiritualists of Boston would secure his services as a speaker for the next Anniversary exercises; I further wish that the convocation on that day could be held in the Music Hall, where those who have known him elsewhere could hear him explain his experience in spiritual manifestations.

The séance closed with the presentation of complimentary resolutions which were unanimously adopted by the large audience.

Col. Crockett was quite active, and deeply interested in the séance, and made all present feel at home.

Charles W. Sullivan was controlled by an intelligence which in style and word was identical with that of Dr. I. P. Greenleaf, the originator of the Harvest Moon Festival.

The programme closed with a benediction from the guides of Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes.

The event will long be remembered with pleasure by those present. SPECIAL REPORTER.

Spiritualistic Meetings in Boston.

Banner of Light Circle-Room, No. 9 Bosworth Street.—Séances are held every Tuesday and Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock promptly. Admission free. For further particulars, see notice on sixth page. L. B. Wilson, Chairman.

Berkeley Hall, 4 Berkeley Street.—The Boston Spiritual Temple Society will commence its lectures for the season of 1888-89 on Sunday, Oct. 7th, at 10½ A. M. Mrs. R. S. Lillie will occupy the platform for the month of October.

First Spiritual Temple, corner Newbury and Exeter Streets.—The "Spiritual Fraternity" Society will commence its public meetings Sunday, Oct. 7th. The Temple Fraternity School for Children meets at 10½ A. M. Afternoon service at 2½; and Wednesday evening Sociable at 7½. Mrs. H. S. Lake's guides will speak during October and November.

College Hall, 34 Essex Street.—Sundays, at 10½ A. M., 2½ and 7½ P. M. Eben Cobb, Conductor.

Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown.—Mediums' meeting every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Dr. Mark Smith, Chairman.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M.; also Wednesdays at 3 P. M. Dr. E. H. Mathews, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M. F. W. Mathews, Conductor.

Spiritualistic Phenomena Association.—This Association opens its meetings Sunday, Oct. 7th, at Lyceum Hall, 1031 Washington street, with Mrs. E. C. Kimball as the medium.

The two following Sundays Mrs. Ada H. Foye of California will occupy the platform. Mrs. Foye has a very remarkable phase of mediumship, and occupies a most prominent position in the ranks of Spiritualism on the Pacific coast. Later in the month Mr. J. D. Stiles with be with us. The management have engaged the best test mediums obtainable in the country, and will spare no pains to make the meetings even more interesting than they have been before. Good music has been engaged. Lyceum Hall has been considerably enlarged, and is now one of the most desirable in the city for meetings.

The Thursday evening circles will soon be opened.

College Hall, 34 Essex Street.—The services at College Hall last Sunday were interesting and instructive. Mr. Eben Cobb, manager, made the principal address, the topic of which was "Hate," the Bible teaching that we should hate even our own blood relations for truth's sake. His remarks were listened to with much interest. Mr. Frank T. Ripley spoke briefly, and gave several good spirit-tests. Miss Peabody and Mrs. Forrester gave their usual successful psychometric readings. Mr. Redell spoke briefly, as also did Dr. Eldridge. The afternoon and evening services were quite interesting. COM.

Spiritualist Meetings in New York.

Columbia Hall, 878 6th Avenue, between 49th and 50th Streets.—The People's Spiritual Meeting. Services every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Mediums and speakers always present. Frank W. Jones, Conductor.

Arcanum Hall, 57 West 25th Street, N. E. corner 6th Avenue.—Meetings of the Progressive Spiritualists are held every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Reliable speakers and test mediums always present in spirit phenomenal gifts. Prof. G. G. W. Van Horn, Conductor.

Adelphi Hall, corner of 52d Street and 7th Avenue.—The First Society of Spiritualists holds meetings every Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7½ P. M. Admission free.

A General Conference will be held Monday evening of each week at 230 West 36th street, at the residence of Mrs. M. C. Morrell.

The First Society of Spiritualists.—A good attendance of representative Spiritualists listened to the lecture of Mrs. Nellie J. T. Brigham in the forenoon. She spoke for three-fourths of an hour upon subjects selected by the audience: "Have Spirits Ever Visited the Polar Star? If so, Can they Explain its Apparent Immovable Position in the Heavens?" "We Would like to Know the True Philosophy of Spiritualism. That is, if we or any part of us live again; if so, Where and How does it Exist, as No Living One Knows Anything of God, Heaven or Hades," and "Are Prayers for the Dying Helpful to the Departing Spirit?" etc. She improvised a poem: "Death Under the Waves."

In the evening, Mrs. Brigham spoke, using the subject, "The Open Door."

Mrs. Brigham will speak next Sunday in the morning, upon subjects selected by the audience, and in the evening upon a theme selected by the influences speaking through her.

In the afternoon, at 2:45 o'clock, the Meeting for Spirit-Manifestations will be reopened by Mrs. E. A. Wells delivering a lecture upon the subject: "What is Spiritualism?" She will give tests after the lecture. Fine musical talent is engaged for the occasion, and a very enjoyable and profitable time is expected.

The President and Trustees of the First Society are putting forth increased energy this fall to make the meetings of a high credit to the cause, and worthy, as a place of worship, to class with other and more pretentious churches in this great centre of civilization.
New York, Sept. 23d, 1888. S.

Arcanum Hall, 57 West 25th Street.—The Progressive Spiritualists' meetings of Sept. 23d were largely attended by interested audiences. The speakers and mediums in the afternoon did good work. Mrs. Benwell, of Paterson, N. J., while entranced, gave an excellent discourse.

H. B. Philbrook spoke in the evening; subject, "What and Where is God?" This speaker was interesting throughout. His subject for next Sunday evening, Sept. 30th, is, "Origin of Races."

Among the audience in the evening were Mrs. Harriet E. Beach, also Mrs. Effie Moss, materializing medium, who has been seriously ill of late, but is now convalescing. She will soon resume her regular séances. Many other mediums were present.

The usual closing spirit messages and tests of spirit return, given by the writer, greeted both audiences, nearly all of which were duly recognized.
111 Clinton Place. PROF. G. G. W. VAN HORN.

☞ We learn from one of our New York correspondents that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mayer, well and favorably known to Spiritualists in Chattanooga, Tenn., have removed from that city to New York, where Mr. Mayer is employed in business, and that Mrs. Mayer will continue the practice of her mediumship, her phase being materializations and independent slate-writing. Mrs. Mayer only gives one séance each week for materialization, and that on Sunday evenings at their apartments, 16 St. Marks Place, her controls objecting to a more frequent use of her powers for those manifestations.

Cambridge.—The Spiritual Society here will open its meetings Oct. 7th, at 7:30 o'clock, in Odd Fellows Hall, 548 Main street, Cambridgeport. Our first speaker will be Mrs. Ida P. A. Whitlock.
MRS. E. J. STEVENS, Secretary.

"Nasal Voices, Catarrh and False Teeth."

A prominent English woman says the American women all have, high shrill, nasal voices and false teeth.

Americans don't like the constant twitting they get about this nasal twang, and yet it is a fact caused by our dry stimulating atmosphere, and the universal presence of cartarrhal difficulties.

But why should so many of our women have false teeth?

That is more of a poser to the English. It is quite impossible to account for it except on the theory of deranged stomach action caused by imprudence in eating and by want of regular exercise.

Both conditions are unnatural.

Catarrhal troubles everywhere prevail and end in cough and consumption, which are promoted by mal-nutrition induced by deranged stomach action. The condition is a modern one, one unknown to our ancestors, who prevented the cartarrh, cold, cough and consumption by abundant and regular use of what is now known as Warner's Log Cabin cough and consumption remedy and Log Cabin sarsaparilla, two old-fashioned standard remedies handed down from our ancestors, and now exclusively put forth under the strongest guarantees of purity and efficacy by the world-famed makers of Warner's safe cure. These two remedies plentifully used as the fall and winter seasons advance, together with an occasional use of Warner's Log Cabin rose cream, to strengthen and protect the nasal membranes, give a positive assurance of freedom, both from catarrh and those dreadful and if neglected, inevitable consequences, pneumonia, lung troubles and consumption, which so generally and fatally prevail among our people.

Comrade Eli Fisher, of Salem, Henry Co., Iowa, served four years in the late war and contracted a disease called consumption by the doctors. He had frequent hemorrhages. After using Warner's Log Cabin cough and consumption remedy, he says, under date of Jan. 19th, 1888: "I do not bleed at the lungs any more, my cough does not bother me, and I do not have any more smothering spells." Warner's Log Cabin rose cream cured his wife of catarrh and she is "sound and well."

Of course we do not like to have our women called nose-talkers and false teeth owners, but these conditions can be readily overcome in the manner indicated.

J. Frank Baxter Opens Lynn's Season.

The Lynn Association of Spiritualists held its first sessions of this season's course of meetings last Sunday, the 23d inst., in Cadet Hall. Since last convening the Knights of Pythias order has leased the hall, and elegantly fitted it with tapestries, plush seats, draperies and pictures, as well as many peculiar yet ornamental canopies, desks and bric-à-brac.

An unusually large audience assembled in the afternoon, and in the evening the hall was taxed to accommodate the people. The whole atmosphere of the place was changed; the auditors were most agreeably surprised and comfortably situated.

Mr. J. Frank Baxter, a very popular speaker in Lynn, occupied the desk. He received applause as he entered under escort of the efficient President, Mr. Holbrook. He opened with a song of welcome, "All Together!" and by request recited "Building and Being" with marked effect. Another song followed, and then a most appropriate "Salutatorial Address" was given, embodying many of the numerous demands Spiritualism made obligatory upon Spiritualists. It was masterly, and would make a capital inaugural tract to be spread broadcast on the opening day of every society in existence.

In the evening Mr. Baxter's rendition of song and reading were fine and happy, and the lecture on "Spiritualism as a Humanitarian Religion" was so practical as to be felt, and carried with it weighty conviction. It is rare that such a large and unavoidably promiscuous audience as that of this occasion in Lynn is so in sympathy with an ultra-reform speaker as was the assembly last Sunday evening with Mr. Baxter.

At the close of the evening's lecture he gave an interesting séance. "Mr. Baxter does not like to pose as a test-medium," said a prominent gentleman present, "but if the 'Johnson,' 'Parker' and 'Sargent' delineations and details were not tests, then I don't know what tests are." Certain it is that press and people call them tests, and are content to let them rest as such. His great power and much of attraction lies in his remarkable versatility and his combination of gifts, it is true, but the greatest interest centres in his exercise of mediumship"—tests.

Next Sunday, 30th inst., Mr. Baxter will lecture again at 2:30 and 7 o'clock promptly, in same place. Subject in the afternoon, "The Permanence of Modern Spiritualism," and in the evening "The Practical Good" of the same. SAGAMORE.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Our society is doing splendidly since the opening of the season, with Mrs. M. A. Gladding of Doylestown, Pa., as lecturer and medium. If our hall was larger we certainly could fill it Sunday evenings. Mrs. G.'s tests are very convincing, and of themselves would bring out large audiences, and the manner in which her controls answer questions given by the audience is, to an unprejudiced mind, proof that some intelligence outside of and beyond her normal capacity is doing the speaking.

We have social meetings on every Thursday evening. At the last we had an entertainment proffered for the benefit of the society, consisting of recitations and vocal and instrumental music, with a wonderful display of a lady's skill as a whistler, she being recalled several times. The meeting closed with an exhibition of stereopticon pictures shown by Mrs. Gladding. They were all fine, but the most amusing thing was the throwing upon the canvas of the portrait of our President, Mr. McElroy, who was acting as master of ceremonies. It was received with the most hearty applause, and a total surprise to Mr. McElroy.

On the evening of Sept. 21st a company of some of the members met at the house of Mr. James A. Gordon, No. 55 Miltenberger street, to help celebrate the eighth anniversary of the control of Mrs. Glading by her beautiful control "Hoolah," who came, and through her medium gave some of the loftiest truths, beautifully expressed, I have ever listened to. "Winlowe," another control, came, and held us spellbound by his display of knowledge. "Tom Jackson" also came, and in his homely and honest language supplied us with food for thought. These three controls were presented with many beautiful gifts by their many friends, both of this city and Philadelphia, in token of their kind remembrance. It was very amusing to see the expression of gratefulness and pleasure given by Mr. Jackson when he was presented by a friend of his in Philadelphia with a fine soft hat; his hearty laugh was contagious, and we all joined. The spirit "Mac-Che-Ha" then gave each one of the party as a souvenir a writing which had to be read with the paper reversed, or in a mirror. After which the company sat down to a fine repast, furnished by our host and his amiable wife. Long may they live, is the wish of A MEMBER.
Sept. 22d, 1888.

Haverhill and Bradford.—The first of two supplementary meetings of the Brittan Hall Spiritualist Association in September, rendered desirable to be held by circumstances arising since the close of the meeting last June, was held last Sunday. Large audiences greeted Mrs. E. Clarke Kimball of Lawrence, to listen to her brief addresses upon practical points in the Spiritualistic religion, and to wait upon her many platform tests in giving names, descriptions and messages from the throng of invisibles purporting to gather about her, seeking oral expression through the channel of her mediumistic gifts. The meeting was truly interesting and profitable, and was a hopeful foreshadowing that the regular course of meetings to open in October will be full of interest.

There were many offerings of flowers on the opening occasion, and among them a magnificent bouquet of autumn flowers combined with which were several brugmausia blossoms, scenting the entire auditorium. This friendly offering was from John F. Kief; after its use in gracing the occasion, it was presented to Mrs. Kimball.

Next Sunday, memorial exercises will take place in recognition of the late Walter H. Whittier, the service to be by Dr. J. C. Street of Boston.

The regular course will open Oct. 7th with Mrs. Lizzie S. Manchester of West Randolph, Vt., as the speaker. E. P. H.

Lowell, Mass.—The meetings of the First Spiritualist Society, which have been closed during the summer months, open their doors for spiritual truths and teachings in Grand Army Hall of Post 185, on Sunday, Oct. 7th, at which time Dr. H. B. Storer of Boston, will occupy the platform. It is hoped that all interested in the philosophy of Modern Spiritualism will show their interest by being present at our meetings. Oct. 14th Mrs. E. C. Kimball of Lawrence, Mass., will be with us, and other good mediums have been engaged for the season. B. S. FREEMAN.
No. 5 Brooks street, Lowell, Mass.

Cleveland, O.—Spiritualists' meetings will be resumed in Memorial Hall Sunday, Oct. 7th, with Mrs. Helen Stuart-Richings as speaker for the month, followed by Mr. J. Clegg Wright during November and Mrs. Ada Foye of California through December.—The Children's Lyceum meets as usual every Sunday morning. All invited. E. W. GAYLORD, Sec'y.

☞ W. J. Colville will lecture in Columbia Hall, under the auspices of MR. THOMAS LEES, the well-known Spiritualist and BANNER correspondent, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 2d and 3d, at 7:45 P. M.

How to Cure Skin & Scalp DISEASES with the CUTICURA REMEDIES.

THE MOST DISTRESSING FORMS OF SKIN AND scalp diseases, with loss of hair, from infancy to old age, are speedily, economically and permanently cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, when all other remedies and methods fail.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, cure every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Disease."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Relief in one minute, for all pains and weaknesses, in CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster. 25c.

Extra Super

CARPETS.

The choice of our entire stock of over four hundred patterns and colorings, and including all of our

Lowell Extra Supers,

As well as many other reliable makes, at

70c. Per Yard.

Also quite a large line of patterns that we shall not have manufactured again, but identically the same goods as the above in all other respects, at

60c. Per Yard.

ROXBURY

TAPESTRIES.

We show, without exception, the entire line of patterns produced by the

ROXBURY CARPET CO.,

And offer any Roxbury Carpet in our whole stock at

85c. Per Yard.

In both Extra Supers and Tapestries we have many private patterns that are our own exclusive property, and cannot be found elsewhere.

JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO.,

CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY,

558 and 560 Washington St.,

30 to 34 Harrison Av. Extension.

S15 4w

BAKER'S
BAKER'S
BAKER'S
BAKER'S
BREAKFAST
BREAKFAST
BREAKFAST
BREAKFAST
COCOA.
COCOA.
COCOA.
COCOA.

COLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

Warranted absolutely pure Cocoa, from which the excess of Oil has been removed. It has three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot, or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, easily digested, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

Ja7 eow

THOUGHTS
FROM THE INNER LIFE.

The contents of this book consist of nearly one hundred communications on an equal number of subjects relating to life in the spirit-world, selected from those received during eight years at private circles held at the residence of Mr. D. E. Bailey, Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Swain of that city being the medium. They were given by what is termed the "Independent," or direct voice of the spirits. At the sittings the medium was not unconscious; when the spirit friends began to speak, the company, including the medium, conversed with them the same as with another. A volume might be filled with accounts of Mr. Bailey's wonderful experiences at these sittings; but he chooses to place the communications before the public with as little comment as possible, in the hope that their readers may find in them strength for the weak, consolation for the sorrowing, and unquestionable assurance of the existence of a life beyond the present for all.

One vol., octavo, pp. 224, with portrait, elegantly printed and bound. Price, cloth, $1.25, postage 10 cents; paper, 75 cents, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 50c. to 25c.

THE

LYCEUM STAGE:

A COLLECTION OF

Contributed, Compiled and Original

Recitations, Dialogues, Fairy Plays, Etc.

Adapted for the Children's Progressive Lyceum and School Exhibitions.

BY G. WHITFIELD KATES.

Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NEW TESTAMENT;

OR,

The Revelation of the Mission of Christ.

BY A WOMAN.

A book for all reformers, workers for the freedom of Woman, Spiritualists and liberal thinkers, who realize that the true spirit of Christianity, long misunderstood and forgotten by the churches, is the most powerful weapon in behalf of liberty and reformation to-day.

"A very remarkable book."—Alpha. "Novel and suggestive ideas."—Woman's Journal. "Unusual force."—Boston Transcript. "Some of the grandest thoughts we have ever seen written."—Woman's Magazine, etc.

Superior cloth, pp. 525, $1.50.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STRANGE VISITORS: A Series of Original Papers, embracing Philosophy, Science, Government, Religion, Poetry, Art, Fiction, Satire, Humor, Narrative and Prophecy. By the Spirits of Irving, Willis, Thackeray, Brontë, Richter, Byron, Humboldt, Hawthorne, Wesley, Browning, and others now dwelling in the Spirit-World. By MRS. SUSAN G. HORN.

Among the essays contained in it may be found: Preëxistence and Prophecy, Life and Marriage in the Spirit-Land, Predictions of Earthquakes, Causes of Insanity, Apparitions, The Mormons, Invisible Influences, Locality of the Spirit-World, Drama and Painting there etc., etc., etc.

Cloth, price $1.50; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

OCT 5 1888

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH

VOL. LXIV. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1888. | $3.00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 4.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—Free Thought: Laws and Penalties Considered; What is a True Spiritualist? Poetry: Harvest Moon Song. Field Marshal Bazaine. Literary Department: Bars and Thresholds.

SECOND PAGE.—Poetry: Tribute to A. B. French. The Harvest Moon Festival. The Lessons of Harvest Tide. New Publications. Passed to Spirit-Life. Entered the Higher Life.

THIRD PAGE.—Banner Correspondence: Letters from New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maine, and Michigan. A Strange Resemblance, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—A Look Ahead. Helping Undeveloped Spirits. Spirit Manifestations. How the Work Goes On. Prayers for the Dead. Children's Progressive Lyceum No. 1. Indiana Spiritualists, etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—Profit-Sharing. "Doctoring Old Time." Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith.

SEVENTH PAGE.—October Magazines. Verifications of Spirit-Messages. Mediums in Boston. Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—All Sorts of Paragraphs. Spiritualist Meetings in Boston, New York, and Elsewhere. A Claim to Human Gratitude, etc.

Free Thought.

LAWS AND PENALTIES CONSIDERED.

BY B. N. KINYON.

In the BANNER OF LIGHT of June 16th, 1888, under the heading of Questions and Answers, I find in reply to a question language as follows:

"All spirits preëxisting, as well as those on this earth encased in flesh, and those who have become divested of the mortal and have taken up the immortal condition, are subject to law. Law, in the universe, regulates all existence, and these spirits or entities of which your correspondent speaks, are no exception to the rule. You have no choice in the mortal as to how you shall depart from this mortal form, although your deeds and your life-work on earth may determine largely how you shall be received, and what will be your state or condition in the other world, yet you are under the dominion of law."

I disclaim being a teacher, but avow my desire to learn. I have been a reader of THE BANNER for over twenty years, and still each number brings something interesting to my mental appetite. Editors, publishers and contributors all have my good wishes, which I hope will be of no harm.

My purpose is to elicit thought, and the first point I wish to consider is the word "law," and what it embraces or means. As used above it doubtless means the rule of action prescribed by God, because (quoting) "law in the universe regulates all existence." A thing or existence that is regulated presupposes that it was once unregulated or irregular, therefore all existence was irregular until regulated by "law." Why was it irregular? I can conceive of only one of two reasons, viz: 1st, that it chose to be so, or 2d, that it happened or chanced to be so.

To regulate means to force, or (what is the same thing) put unregulated existence into a regulated condition. To force or cause implies resistance on the part of the thing forced or caused. Resistance or antagonism implies choice on the part of the forced. There can be no force when there is no resistance. Therefore all existence was not only irregular but resistant as well. As law regulates all existence in the present, the conclusion may therefore be reached that all existence is resisting continuously the regulating force of the law, probably choosing as the reason of its resistance its primordial condition of irregularity, and keeping up a perpetual antagonism between God and all existence.

But, passing these considerations, it may be remarked that three essentials are required to constitute a law, viz: 1st, a law-maker; 2d, a force to execute it; and, 3d, a resisting subject upon which it is to operate. Therefore we conclude that God was the law-maker and force to execute it, and "all existence" the law-breaker and resisting subject of the law.

If our "deeds" and "life-work" on earth may determine largely how we shall be received and what will be our condition in the other world, then there must be some free moral agency within us to perform the proper deed and do the proper life-work to assure the best reception and condition in the other world. I believe the doctrine of "works" in some form is universal with the Orthodox, and it seems so with Spiritualists as well. Spiritualism teaches in the mortal, and returning spirits seem to agree in this particular, and rather boast to or over the Orthodox, that their doctrine inculcates the stricter morality, or, in other words, that their punishment, though milder, is still everlastingly certain; while the Orthodox get rid of theirs by some repentance and sorrow—faith in Jesus' vicarious atonement, etc.

The Orthodox say: "Believe or be damned," while the Spiritualists say: "Violate a law, and the execution of the penalty is irrevocably certain." Without at this place controverting the doctrine of "free moral agency" which both parties assume, I desire to present what appears to me the gross injustice of any and all penalties.

It is universally and irrevocably true that the full consequences and effect of a penalty cannot be foreknown by the individual against whom denounced and on whom executed.

Human laws and penalties claim to be reformatory and preventive. Those who claim justification for them on the ground of reform, are guilty of finding without trial or assuming without evidence that the party is deformed. Unless deformed there can be no reform. It may be said that penalty of service in jail will reform the party. This assumes that he will commit crime again, and is a conviction without or before trial. And this is irrevocably and eternally true.

The prevention plea is still more grossly insulting to humanity. It assumes man to be as "prone to evil as the sparks to fly upward," hence must be restrained or prevented from doing evil. A man eats too much dinner, if you please, and the Spiritualist doctrine is: "You have violated the law of gastronomy and must suffer. No vicarious atonement, no pardon." (If he takes a dose of laudanum and sleeps it off, then is not that vicarious pardon?) But the man says: "I was 'an hungered,' and stopped before my appetite was satisfied, and would have stopped eating at the right point if I had known it." "No matter," says the Spiritualist, "you must suffer all the same"; and so the violator of the law of gastronomy suffers for his sin of ignorance.

The Orthodox have the merit of boldly affirming "free moral agency." "Believe or be damned." Will the Spiritualists, mortal or immortal, affirm that man is an effect of a preceding cause, and therefore not accountable, or that he is an original and above all cause, and therefore not accountable?

Des Moines, Ia.

WHAT IS A TRUE SPIRITUALIST?

BY MRS. JENNIE L. K. HANER.

In the consideration of two recent original essays, first "The Spiritual Religion," and second "The Spiritualism of 1888," there comes to me a dissatisfaction as to the explanation of the word "Spiritualist," an incompleteness of the fullest sense of the term—a confusion, as it were, of the signification of two words, Spiritualist and Spiritist; and as I think, there dawn upon my mind ideas, varying somewhat from the general understanding; as they are given to me, so will I seek to express them for the consideration of all earnest thinkers.

The authority as to definition, generally quoted, is founded on Webster and Worcester. To be sure they are our standard lexicographers, but what proof have we that their decision is perfect, and that a higher and clearer understanding is unattainable? And as we have been compelled to deviate from that authority once, as in the definition of the word "spirit," which gives it identical with soul, which we feel to be in a measure incorrect, why not deviate again as to the word "Spiritualist," and follow the promptings of our inner sense, which shows that it must come closer in meaning and signification with spirituality, which is the spiritual nature, or holiness?

Now one may rationally conceive of the idea and possibility of spirit communion with mortals, but possess a very small degree of spirituality, and in no way express the principles and sentiments which always manifest themselves in the workings and silent influences of one who has become spiritualized. I believe there are many such who are just as deeply immersed in ignorance, worldliness and sensualism as though they discarded, as ridiculous, the idea of spirit return; who have never conceived of the true, God-given light which spiritualizes; and if they are not born anew to this divine power how can a name be applied to them which must signify a belief in, an understanding thereof, and a partaker in the new life, with its loftier desires and aspirations, and of that strengthening and sustaining power which ever comes, solicited, in time of need? They may be Spiritists, but as to declaring them Spiritualists, regardless of principle, is where an error steps in, and leads so many from the right track as to the object and aim of the grand and noble movement, Modern Spiritualism. Well may thinkers inquire: "What good does Spiritualism do?" if to be a Spiritualist all that is to be required is to believe in spirit-return, regardless of the philosophy, which is the foundation, the true basis, the part that purifies, ennobles and uplifts—a conviction of the phenomena being only an opening of the golden gates which are just at the beginning of the endless road of life, light and understanding, the great highway of immortal Truth. So in my idea, what we want now, as true Spiritualists, are spiritualized Spiritists, and as progress is made in this direction, so will the movement carry with itself, to every truth-seeking heart, a conviction of the great underlying principles of goodness and truth, and its beautiful religious qualities.

To be sure, the demonstrable fact of spirit-communion is one and the first to be cherished as a part only of the central idea; but the conviction of a necessity to profit thereby, to gain a higher round than this first upon the endless ladder of progression—a determination to outgrow the evil, or absence of good, in any way that may be chosen as the best, only that this point is arrived at—should be set side by side with it, thus forming a nucleus around which, without fail, will gather all the good things we are fitted to receive. Then for one to declare a disbelief in the Spiritualist's religion would be to deny the good and true in everything, for the philosophy embraces all of good and all of truth wherever it may be found.

The work of tearing down the old and clearing away for the new has been in progress long enough, surely, to have made way for building up substantially and solidly in the minds of the people the second round in the great ladder which the philosophy of Spiritualism presents as the grandest known way of scaling the heights to eternal progression. The first round, the evidence of spirit-return through the spiritual phenomena, is developed and rounded out in fine form through the thousands of testimonials from as many different quarters of the globe, and most of those who will not accept this evidence by a simple outstretching of the mind, are those who are not capable of receiving, and only need a little more time to quietly bask in the sunshine of the silent, uplifting influences and light-inspiring atmosphere shed around them from the Infinite fountain of Love and Wisdom. It therefore seems proper and more befitting the great army of workers, to leave behind only those who are most and best fitted to execute the finishing touches to the nearly completed portion of this great structure, and come up higher and join heart and hand in gaining through the Spiritual Philosophy an advanced position where investigators, as well as many present adherents, may find ample room to work. Let the idea go out to the four quarters of the globe that to be a true Spiritualist one must possess a degree of spirituality and strive to attain to the best and highest that is within, working out in a life of daily efforts the improvement and advancement of the great brotherhood of the human family: Thus showing the great good Spiritualism has done and has still to do, and proving to the world that its tendency is upward, onward.

Delta, Mich.

HARVEST MOON SONG,

For the Onset Festivities.

BY M. T. SHELHAMER.

Tune, "Auld Lang Syne."

The harvest moon is here again,
So glorious and fair;
It sheds its beams like golden rain,
In beauty everywhere.

And as we gladly gather round
Our festive, vine-crowned board,
Our walls with joyful notes resound,
For Autumn's rich reward.

The harvest time once more has come,
With all its bounteous food—
The ruddy pear and purpling plum,
And stores of all that 's good.

And now to Onset-on-the-bay,
In friendship deep and strong,
We wend our happy, eager way,
To sing the harvest song.

Our spirit friends from worlds of light
Return with words of cheer,
And in their heavenly work unite
To bless our pathway here.

And from their hunting-grounds above
Our Indian brothers come,—
To fill our hearts with peace and love,
At this bright "Harvest Home":

They come to teach us how to live
In peace with all mankind,
And tell us to each wrong forgive,
If we would gladness find.

And so with them, these harvest days,
Our thankful hearts we lift
To God, in songs of grateful praise,
For Nature's bounteous gift.

Field Marshal Bazaine.

Bazaine the crafty, "dead and turned to clay,"
May "stop a hole to keep the wind away."

The death of Marshal Bazaine at Madrid recalls attention to the glorious possibilities for France which were wrecked through his delinquency. He died a fugitive from the retribution of the land he had betrayed. And in his case French justice, though he fled from its award, had been strangely tempered with mercy: otherwise he would long ago have passed to a dishonored grave, for, beyond question, his life was forfeited to military law. The safety of his country had been committed to his custody, and he had proved recreant to the precious trust. The key of France was put in his hand and he had tossed it into the lap of the Red Prince. What is more, he had done this shameful thing in the very nick of time for the invader, just when France had found her strength again, after the prostration that followed Sedan, and was arming at her swiftest for the rescue of her beleaguered capital.

We cannot, of course, presume to measure with exactness a military problem that never was solved. But assuredly the chances of war appeared at last to be turning in favor of France before Bazaine weighted the scale against her by surrendering an army of 179,000 men, entrenched in unassailable lines around an impregnable fortress. The military situation demanded of him the defense of Metz to the last extremity at all hazards. Look at the position of affairs. The Germans, disregarding a strategic principle that used to be held in profound respect, had pushed on against Paris, leaving Bazaine's great army in their rear, and contenting themselves with blockading it by an equal force under Prince Frederick Charles. It is hardly to be supposed that they would have run such a risk if they had not fallen into the mistake of undervaluing the enemy. Moltke is a most skillful strategist; but in this advance upon Paris he had left one thing out of his calculations. The neglected factor was Leon Gambetta, a true torch of war, whose fiery energy stamped armed men out of the ground. Through Gambetta's efforts the French were gathering two great armies—one in Normandy under Gen. Faidherbe, the other behind the Loire, under Gen. Aurelles de Paladine, for a combined movement to raise the siege of Paris.

In that supreme crisis Bazaine laid down his arms, surrendering to a force no larger than his own, though he had abundant supplies of ammunition, and his provisions were very far from being exhausted. His surrender released the splendid army of the Red Prince for service against Gambetta's levies in the north and centre of France. It was this recruitment of the Germans which turned the balance against the French in Normandy and along the Loire. If Bazaine had held out a month longer at Metz, the forces of Faidherbe and Aurelles de Paladine would probably have been able to effect a junction for the relief of Paris, and, in that event, the German operations against the French capital might have had an issue very different from the triumph which crowned them.

The works of man, bury them under what guano-mountains and obscene owl-droppings you will, do not perish, cannot perish. What of heroism, what of eternal light was in a man and his life, is with very great exactness added to the eternities; remains forever a new divine portion of the sum of things.—Carlyle.

Give the boys trades. Only eighty of the five hundred and sixty convicts received last year in the Eastern penitentiary of Pennsylvania had trades when brought there.

Literary Department.

BARS AND THRESHOLDS.

Written Especially for the Banner of Light,

BY MRS. EMMA MINER.

CHAPTER V.

MISS SHALLOT.

The summer had passed, and October had come with its remembrances of summer warmth, and prophecies of winter; and on its first disagreeable day Miss Shallot arrived at Mrs. Mason's.

Miss Shallot was Doris's governess. Let it not be supposed that because Doris was excluded by Mrs. Mason from the public schools, she was growing up in ignorance. After long and patient searching, Mrs. Mason had succeeded in finding a lady much after her own pattern, and between them they endeavored to train Doris in the way they wanted her to go.

Both ladies were very religious. Mrs. Mason was a Congregationalist, and Miss Shallot was a Presbyterian. As they discussed their religious differences privately, this fact did not particularly affect Doris.

Miss Shallot's health had failed somewhat, in consequence of which she had been granted a vacation of four months, which vacation had now expired.

Miss Shallot was a small woman. She generally wore soft shoes, and had a disagreeable way of appearing before one as noiselessly as a cat. Her face was thin and sharp, and her small, steel blue eyes moved restlessly about under the glasses made necessary by being short-sighted. Her hair was light and thin, and drawn back in a tight knot. She was prim, hard and cold. Her chief object in life seemed to be to take as little comfort as possible, and interfere, as much as she might be permitted, with the comfort of others.

She had a fancy for drawing down curtains, and closing blinds. She abhorred all litter of flowers, and the "foolish vanity" of bric-à-brac. Ornamental tidies and mats were banished from the domain over which she presided. Chairs and ottomans were placed with a severe precision, and if by chance they were moved, were directly whisked back again by the hand obedient to her watchfulness.

Doris was oppressed by the mathematical arrangement of everything about her. She began to feel that life was one long, geometrical problem.

Doris liked to sit in Miss Parker's room. She was not disorderly, but she never minded in which corner of the room Doris left the little rocker which was her especial delight. She could carry her flowers there, and be welcome.

Miss Shallot avoided Miss Parker as much as was consistent with due civility. She had a holy horror of her heresies; but feeling that she had a duty to perform, she once offered her the loan of a volume from her select library, "The Lament of the Lost Soul."

Miss Parker promised to read it faithfully; a promise she conscientiously kept. She returned it, saying,

"Well! I have read it, as I said I would; and I must say I am glad I have n't got such a God as that! I should n't have any respect for him, to say nothing of affection!"

Miss Shallot received a shock from which she could never fully recover; but she comforted herself with the reflection that she did not shrink from her duty.

Doris had dreaded her return. She felt that it would be the end of many of her pleasant, confidential chats with Miss Parker.

"Oh! auntie, I do n't like her a bit! She is a great, black shadow! And she always watches me as if she expected to catch me doing something wicked. I wonder if I have got to have her over me forever and ever?" and Doris cried softly on Miss Parker's shoulder.

"Oh! don't now, Doris. Maybe we 'll get along somehow. I get a feeling she won't trouble you very long!"

Doris wiped her eyes, and began to get her books together. Her face clouded again as she looked at the volumes selected by those worthy ladies for the "improvement of her mind." She read over some of the titles: "Guide to Holiness," "The Awakened Sinner Directed," "Saint's Rest," "The Lament of the Lost Soul."

"Oh! dear. I just hate it all! Grandma is doing the worst thing she can to make me read those dry things! I 'll burn them the very day I am twenty-one!" and Doris scowled revengefully at them.

"Never mind, Doris," said Miss Parker soothingly. "I really think your grandma is making a mistake, but we can't hinder it just now. Try to bear it with the best grace you can."

Doris liked study. It was only when those books were thrust upon her that she rebelled. She began to gather a little comfort from Miss Parker's words. She remembered she was a year behind in the studies of the graduating class in the High School. Lucy Harrison was in that class. Doris had lost that year "because grandma had to hunt so hard and long to find Miss Shallot," she said, with a frown she seldom wore on her pretty face. "Perhaps after this year grandma will send her away."

"We will hope so," replied Miss Parker sympathetically.

Doris applied herself diligently to her lessons, patiently trying to learn all allotted her. But in the midst of it all Miss Shallot's observant eyes detected the fact that a new interest had entered into Doris's life. She seemed more cheerful, more hopeful. What could have happened? She did not question Doris, but broached the subject to Mrs. Mason.

"I have no reason to suspect it can be anything new," replied Mrs. Mason. "Doris has not been anywhere this summer, or formed any new acquaintances, except Mr. Brooks. Perhaps she is really going to benefit by our example;" and Mrs. Mason straightened herself with satisfaction.

At the mention of Mr. Brooks's name Miss Shallot was quite overcome by a new idea.

"Does Mr. Brooks come here often?"

"Yes, quite frequently. I think Doris is quite interested in conversation with him."

Miss Shallot laid this remark away for future reference.

"Does Doris entertain him alone?" She spoke cautiously.

"Quite often. He is a minister, you know," replied Mrs. Mason, as if it were unnecessary for her to make other apology.

Miss Shallot removed her glasses and wiped them thoughtfully.

"Perhaps I had better remain in the room with them the next time he calls. I should like to know just how much Doris is interested in religious subjects and her soul's welfare."

Mrs. Mason assented to the proposition.

A week passed before Miss Shallot had an opportunity to assist in receiving Mr. Brooks. Meanwhile Doris studied and seemed very happy.

Study hours were over when Mr. Brooks finally came. Doris ran down gladly to meet him. She wanted to tell him the latest news from Morris, and many other things in which he took an interest. She did not close the door, but advanced toward him holding out both hands, while a smile of real pleasure lighted her face.

"I am glad you have come," she began eagerly; "I have been waiting to tell you something good!"

That the pleasure of meeting was mutual could not be doubted. He held the little hands, while his dark eyes were full of interest.

Doris was interrupted at this moment by a sharp and distinct little cough, which seemed to have been made on purpose to attract her attention. She turned suddenly. Miss Shallot stood behind her gazing at her severely. Her heart sank. She clutched at Mr. Brooks's hand nervously while she introduced Miss Shallot.

Mr. Brooks was forced to relinquish Doris's hand for Miss Shallot's, which he dropped as quickly as possible. She seated herself, and gazed at them with a stony stare, as they sat side by side on the sofa.

With Doris, the fountain of speech seemed frozen. The pleasant things she wanted to say to Mr. Brooks were lost in the fog of fear and dread that surrounded Miss Shallot.

Mr. Brooks comprehended the situation, and in the easiest manner possible entered into conversation with Miss Shallot, now and then giving Doris a glance of gentle commiseration which she understood and appreciated. There was no opportunity to speak of Morris or Lydia; and Mr. Brooks went away.

Doris felt like crying, but whether regretfully, or rebelliously, she could not at first determine; but the rebellious element rose uppermost, as Miss Shallot proceeded to lecture her on her inexcusable freedom of manner.

"Doris! I am surprised! You actually took hold of his hands and looked at him as if you were very glad to see him!"

"And so I was!" innocently replied Doris. "Why should n't I let him see that I was?"

"But he is a minister, Doris."

"What difference does that make? Ministers are men just as much as other folks. Mr. Brooks is very kind, and I like to hear him talk. I can understand him."

Miss Shallot began to unbend a little.

"Well, Doris, perhaps it is all right, only I prefer you should be more reserved and ladylike. I shall attend you in future when Mr. Brooks calls, and hope to see you realize much improvement and good from his pious example"; and she left Doris to her own reflections. They were not the most agreeable.

"How shall I ever tell him anything about Morris? Oh! dear. It is too bad! I can't talk when she is round. It is n't that I want to say wrong things, but she freezes me."

Doris wiped her eyes, and reflected that all things would probably go on just the same, whether she had an opportunity of confiding the matter to Mr. Brooks or not. He would probably hear something from Dr. Carroll.

The little visits to Mrs. Carroll made in company with Miss Parker, were sources of great pleasure to Doris. She readily won her way into the affections of Mrs. Carroll, who began to look upon her with motherly tenderness.

She rarely saw Dr. Carroll. Although he was quite a young man, he was already acknowledged to be a skillful physician, and scarcely had an unoccupied moment.

Mrs. Carroll had told them of Lydia's phenomenal writing. They had great interest in it. Miss Parker generally called after Lydia's study hours, and the four frequently sat down together to investigate the phenomena. Every attempt produced something new and strange. The little table, placed by Doris, voiced many a message from those who had crossed the silent river; and Lydia, sitting by Doris, holding her writing tablet with trembling fingers, wrote words which awakened memories of the past, and touched their souls with an inspiration which was a baptism of love and joy and gratitude.

She wrote many a name, the utterance of which touched a chord that responded to the old-time affection. Some names were not recognized by them, but as they kept a list to show Dr. Carroll, he remembered and knew them. They knew Lydia had no opportunity of learning anything about these people, and so could not have used deception. Many of these messages were written upside down, as easily and rapidly as in the ordinary manner.

"It may be mind-reading," said Mrs. Carroll one day. "I should like to continue to experiment until I am satisfied on that point."

She was to be satisfied sooner than she anticipated. That very afternoon Lydia wrote: "Something has happened to Hugh. He will send for Doris to-morrow."

"Is he going away?" asked Doris.

"Yes. Tell Doris to write a letter ready to send by him."

Doris went home, wondering how she could accomplish it. No scrap of writing escaped Miss Shallot's watchful eyes. She could never write Morris a letter without her knowledge. As she laid aside her wraps she heard the doorbell.

"Oh! auntie, if it is only somebody to keep Miss Shallot a while I shall be so thankful."

And it was. Some ladies connected with a mission society had called on business, and while she was engaged with them Doris hastily wrote a few lines to Morris and placed the letter securely in her private desk.

The next morning a messenger came from Hugh. He was a dirty, ragged little fellow. He brought a note to Miss Parker. Mrs. Mason was curious, but as Miss Parker had her little private charities she thought the boy might be connected with those. The note stated that Hugh would go away on Thursday.

"And to-day is Wednesday, and oh! see how it is storming! What shall we do? I must get that letter to Hugh!" Doris turned appealingly to Miss Parker.

"I will keep on trying as long as there is a way open, Doris. It does not look as if we could go, and it won't do to trust James. But I have an impression the way will open this afternoon. Give me the letter, and I will manage to attend to it."

Doris resigned the missive into her aunt's hands, feeling she would accomplish the purpose if any one could. It must be admitted that she blundered sadly in her lessons that morning. She received Miss Shallot's rebuke with a meekness which was truly genuine.

While Doris was attentive to her lessons Miss Parker kept her ears open to hear the doorbell. At last it rang, "just as she expected," she said. She ascertained it was Mr. Brooks. After a moment's deliberation she wrote a note:

"Mr. Brooks—We have heard that Hugh will leave the city to-morrow. Doris has a letter to send by him. I enclose the letter. Will you do us the favor to see that it reaches Hugh to-day?—A. P."

She then took from among her papers a small pamphlet, folded Morris's letter and her own note in it, and put them all in a large, long envelope. Thrusting this formidable document in her pocket, she descended the stairs briskly and entered the parlor. Mrs. Mason was entertaining him alone.

Just as Mr. Brooks made a movement to leave, Miss Parker drew the envelope from her pocket, rather nervously, it must be confessed.

"Mr. Brooks," said she, "I have a little pamphlet here, called 'The Lost Atlantis.' It is very interesting, and I thought you might like to read it," and she offered him the little package.

"Thank you for your interest," he said, placing it in his pocket.

"And if you please—that is—I would be very much obliged—if you could—if you will read it as soon as you go home."

Mr. Brooks could scarcely conceal his surprise at Miss Parker's stammering speech. She usually knew just what she wanted to say, and how to say it.

"Certainly, I will try to oblige you, and will be particular to return the pamphlet at once."

Miss Parker saw him take his hat with a secret satisfaction. She did not remember that she was ever in a hurry for him to go before.

Doris found one moment in which to question her aunt, as they went in to supper.

"I gave it to Mr. Brooks," she replied.

Doris felt so happy she could scarcely eat her supper, inwardly blessing "that good Mr. Brooks."

Meanwhile, Mr. Brooks in his own room opened the envelope carelessly, wondering a little again as Miss Parker's strange manner recurred to him. The note and letter fell at his feet. "How thankful I am I happened to go there to-day!" he exclaimed half aloud.

He hurried away to Bray street, Number 10, with the letter. He was accustomed to go there. He had seen Hugh and talked with him. He had a strong hold on his respect, and for the first time Hugh had learned what it was to have a friend who took an interest in him. Hugh felt that Mr. Brooks was sincere, and through his influence had made resolutions which were stepping-stones to something better in life than he had ever known.

Doris's letter was safely deposited with him, and as Mr. Brooks left the old house, Hugh felt a deep regret that he was about to be separated from him.

Doris could have no more letters from Morris for a long time, and it would not be safe to write to him. Besides, there was a prospect that he would leave the place where he had been staying, and then she would no longer know where he was. She felt very unhappy about it, and whenever she had opportunity she would get his letters, and read them over and over.

Miss Shallot's suspicions concerning Mr. Brooks were completely disarmed by Doris's innocent manner. She felt there must be some other reason for a change, and did not cease her vigilance.

She observed that Doris seemed to have a particular care and interest in her little desk. She felt it her duty to know just what was there.

One day while Miss Parker and Doris were out she entered Doris's room with a bunch of keys. One of them fitted the little desk. The lock moved harshly, as if reluctant to give up its secret. The contents of the desk were laid open to Miss Shallot's prying eyes.

It was in excellent order. Paper and envelopes were in their proper places. She took up a bulky envelope. It contained a withered white rose. It was the rose Morris gave her the day he went away. The lid of another compartment was lifted. A little package wrapped in white tissue paper was lying there. Clearly it was her duty to see what was in it. A moment more, and Morris's letters, together with the alphabetical messages, were in her hands.

Miss Shallot dropped into the first chair she could reach. She was quite overcome by the discovery. She actually read the letters. The messages she studied upon, but could not make out what they meant. Placing them in her pocket she took up the letters again.

It was evident that Doris knew where Morris was, and was in correspondence with "that bad, dreadful boy." Worse than all, Miss Parker must have been aiding her, or she could not have carried on the affair so long without Mrs. Mason's knowledge.

Miss Shallot's course was plain to her now. She closed the desk, locked it, and immediately proceeded to Mrs. Mason's room. Her knock was answered by Mrs. Mason at once.

Miss Shallot seated herself, wiped her glasses, coughed a little preparatory cough, and took the package from her pocket. She opened it deliberately.

"You will remember, Mrs. Mason, that I remarked when I first returned that I thought Doris had changed; that she seemed to have a new interest. I was at first disposed to connect it with Mr. Brooks, but I subsequently relinquished that suspicion." She paused. She felt that a pause would be impressive.

"I remember you have spoken of the matter. Have you any new light on the subject?"

"Yes, Mrs. Mason. I felt it my duty to watch her very closely, and finally I took the liberty to examine her private desk."

The expression of curiosity on Mrs. Mason's face increased.

"And I have found several letters of importance from Morris Stuart. It is evident that they are in correspondence, which is a direct disobedience to your orders. The letters appear to explain how it all came about, as you will observe when you have read them;" and the precious letters were handed to Mrs. Mason.

Mrs. Mason's astonishment was unbounded. She trembled with rage and excitement. Her eyes could scarcely follow the closely-written lines, and more than once she referred them to Miss Shallot, who was only too glad to render the desired assistance.

"You will observe, Mrs. Mason, that if it had not been for Miss Parker, Doris would not have succeeded in establishing this correspondence."

This thrust at Miss Parker told upon Mrs. Mason.

"That my own sister should connive and contrive to assist Doris in deceiving me! I could not believe it, if the proofs were not before my eyes!"

Mrs. Mason polished her glasses nervously.

"I must attend to this at once. Doris is coming now. You may call them both in, if you please," said Mrs. Mason, endeavoring to collect something of her accustomed dignity.

Miss Parker and Doris entered, and seated themselves near the fire. There was an ominous silence. They felt a sensation in the atmosphere, and wondered, while waiting for Mrs. Mason to speak. She sat there cold and hard and stern.

Oh! that some memory of her daughter's innocent childhood and loving ways might now awaken one thrill of tenderness in her soul! Oh! that the remembrance of that sad hour when Mary Mason Stuart came, heart-broken, to her mother and begged her for her sake to care for her little orphan children, might touch her with a regret at their loss, and a true sense of the duty laid upon her! Oh! that the earnest, manly resolve to do right, breathing in the precious lines penned by the roving boy to his sorrowing sister, might meet with a kindly response!

But it was not to be. Mrs. Mason's religion was of the letter, not of the spirit. The tenderness, the pity, the love, the unbounded charity of the Master whom she professed to worship, had never for a moment thrilled her soul.

"We have made a discovery which has astonished me beyond expression," said Mrs. Mason.

She paused a moment, while Doris thought: "Grandma says 'we,' but it is Miss Shallot, I know." At that moment her eyes fell on her letters. She flushed red with indignation, and then grew pale with fear.

"I have learned that you have disobeyed my orders concerning Morris," she said, looking severely upon the trembling Doris; "and that you, Amelia, have conspired to help her, and assisted in the deceit. I cannot condemn your course strongly enough. That I should watch over Doris so carefully to keep her from all contact with that vicious boy, and on the other hand that you should be plotting against me, is too much to be borne. I have only to say that I shall arrange matters so that there can be no further possibility of holding any communication with Morris; and I forbid you, Doris, ever to go out with your Aunt Amelia again unless accompanied by Miss Shallot or myself."

Miss Parker twisted her bonnet strings excitedly.

"Now, Sarah," she said, "it is n't natural for a girl to turn against her brother because somebody else does it. You were strict and harsh with the boy, and I shall always think so. You would n't let him go anywhere except to church, or have anything like other boys, or do as most boys do. The consequence was he ran away. Doris loved him; you did n't. She has been hoping and praying for him to come home, and you have been hoping he would stay away." Miss Parker drew a long breath, and continued.

"If you had ever expressed a wish or hope that he might become a good man, and come home, Doris would have gone to you gladly. As it was, she came to me. I knew that I could take care of her, and see that she did n't get led into anything wrong. And I have taken care of her, and I know all about it. There is not one word of harm in the whole affair. You ought to forgive Morris, and Doris too!"

The reason Mrs. Mason had allowed her to make such a long and criticising speech was because she herself was speechless with anger and amazement. At last she managed to utter,

"That will do. I shall not retract anything I have said. You both understand me. You can go now."

Fortunately, the little messages had escaped Mrs. Mason's thought. She had been so overcome by the discovery about Morris, that she had not inquired about them; but they were to bide their time. She folded them up with the letters, and placed them in her pocket.

[To be continued in next issue.]

Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla Regulates the Regulator. Largest Sarsaparilla bottle in the market. Manufactured by proprietors of Warner's Safe Cure. Sold by all druggists. Take no other—it is the best.

TRIBUTE TO A. B. FRENCH,

ON HIS FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY.*

'T is well that we should sometimes pause
Along the restless road of life,
And note the grand eternal laws
That mark and form its peace and strife;
That we should stop a little while
Beneath the sunshine of God's smile,
And count the footsteps one by one
From where our pilgrimage begun.

Lest we forget how very far
We 've climbed the heights sublimely grand;
How near the golden harbor bar
Our eager, yearning souls may stand,
'T is well to mark each sacred spot
With some fair, sweet forget-me-not,
Some way-mark set so firm and deep
It evermore its place shall keep.

And so this birthday, in the light
That shines all holy, pure and true,
A grand memorial, fair and bright,
Immortal ones would set for you.
As high shall reach its arches fair
As every earnest, soulful prayer
That you have voiced along the years
For others' sorrows, woes and tears.

As broad its monumental base
As those great thoughts that fill your brain;
Thrown out to bless the human race,
And make the higher pathways plain.
As pure and holy as the good
Your soul so well has understood,
The truths divine from heaven's spheres
That you have taught for thirty years.

*[Extracted from "A Birthday Memorial" dedicated to Bro. French by EMMA TRAIN, of North Collins, N. Y., and read at the services in Clyde, O., on the evening of Sept. 13th.]

The Harvest Moon Festival

Took place at Onset on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22d and 23d. Owing to the inclemency of the weather there were not so many people on the grounds as were expected, still many came in spite of the rain, and it was a grand season of enjoyment.

The Temple was handsomely trimmed under direction of a committee chosen for the purpose—whose members had been busily engaged for a week or more—with a profusion of flowers, evergreens, autumn leaves, and an abundance of vegetables and fruit. At each end of the platform was a large pyramid of flowers, one being made entirely of the beautiful yellow feathery golden-rod, and the other wholly of wild asters. A wilderness of cedars and pine covered the background of the stage.

The piano was entirely hidden by flowers and foliage. A canoe on the front of the platform was decorated and filled with vegetables and fruit, some specimens of which were large enough to remind one of a country Fair. At the foot of the platform, extending the whole length of the stage, was a mass of foliage reaching to the floor, with flowers in pots artistically arranged.

An Indian in full costume was standing at the right of the stage, and at the left hand was seated an Indian squaw with pappoose.

Over the arch in mosses on a white background was this motto: "Welcome to Our Harvest Moon," and above this: "Harmony," also in mosses. Suspended from the centre of the arch was a magnificent basket of roses of various hues, and on the speakers' table were several handsome bouquets and drooping vines. A full moon and stars were artistically arranged on the canvas scene at the back of the stage, which gave the appearance of a calm, tranquil summer night, and when the gas was lighted the effect was enchanting.

At the right side of the platform, on a banner of red, white and blue, hung the picture of Dr. I. P. Greenleaf, who first instituted the Harvest Moon Festival. Above the picture was a wreath of white roses, Dr. Greenleaf's favorite flower, and above an immense green leaf, and the motto "Hope." Beyond this hung the picture of Ed. S. Wheeler, and above it a cross of red roses. At the left of the platform, against the bannered wall, hung the picture of Dr. H. F. Gardner, and above the same an Indian's bow and arrow made of mosses, with the motto "Faith" above, also in green.

The pillars on each side of the hall were wound with green vines, and at the foot of each was a cluster of corn-stalks; and at every point where decorations could be placed the quick artistic eye of the committee in charge had arranged something beautiful and lovely. Festoons of Japanese lanterns were hung from pillar to pillar around the hall, and in front of the gallery.

Over the entrance to the Hall the stars and stripes were nicely draped, while a large spread-eagle that was killed at the last Hunter's Moon by Mr. Sturtevant was placed above it, and underneath were these words in bold relief: "Onset Bay Grove Association."

Much credit is due Mrs. Eva Cassell, the chairman of the decorative committee, assisted by B. F. Bourne, for the good taste and artistic skill displayed in the arrangement of these decorations, pronounced beautiful, magnificent and lovely by those who came to view the work and enjoy the celebration.

The Ladies' Industrial Union had a Fair table handsomely decorated and loaded with the production of industrious fingers, at the right of the entrance to the Temple, and presided over and arranged by Mrs. A. F. Butterfield, assisted by Mrs. Sadie Billings. At the left side of the entrance was an ice-cream table, temptingly displaying cakes of all kinds and sizes, contributed by the ladies interested, and managed by the business hand of Mrs. Vienna Whitwell and her assistants; while in an opposite corner was arranged a gipsey tent where a "real live gipsey" had only to extend her hand and have it crossed by a "shiner" of silver, to open her lips and tell you most marvelous and strange things connected with your destiny!

The Saturday afternoon services commenced by the congregation singing: "The Soul's Sweet Home." Col. W. D. Crockett presided. Dr. Richardson made the opening remarks. Then a "Festival Song," given for this occasion by Sidney Howe through the mediumship of Mrs. Helen M. Walton, was sung by the congregation to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." Next followed Miss M. T. Shelhamer in appropriate remarks. Her legend of the "White Antelope" was very interesting.

An involuntary inspirational song of the Indian by Mrs. Emma Wentworth was very fine. Remarks were next made by Mrs. E. S. Loring, followed by Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes in behalf of the "Red Man." Then Mrs. Deane had a few words to say and gave a very appropriate inspirational poem. Mr. Chas. W. Sullivan sang: "Only a Step;" Mrs. Dr. Sturtevant followed in pleasing remarks as "Elsie," then Mrs. Whittier as "Buzz," Mr. C. W. Sullivan and Mr. Frank Jones made a few remarks, and the afternoon services closed by the congregation singing: "We Shall Meet By-and-Bye."

After supper the ladies of the Fair and ice-cream tables were kept busy until everything was sold. Many ladies were in costume or wore something red to honor the red man.

The dance was largely attended.

Sunday morning the weather was still threatening, with an occasional mist, but this did not seem to dampen the ardor of the people, who came in large numbers to the services of the day.

At 10:30 the meeting opened by the singing of a Harvest Moon song composed by Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

After a prayer by Miss Shelhamer Mrs. J. Q. A. Whittemore sung the solo: "Charity."

"The Unwritten History" was the subject of Miss Shelhamer's discourse. Among other good things she remarked that nations have their time of prosperity and adversity, and this is the case with persons—as with nations—brought here for discipline, which brings in its train sunlight and darkness, joy and sadness. The written history shall live for many ages. We have glorious names emblazoned upon the banners of the American nation. It is not necessary to speak of the people who have done such grand, such noble work, but let us contemplate the lives that have been mown down like the grass, swept away from the country and its lands and known no more. Give the Indian race the same long line of predecessors, the inherited qualities you possess as Anglo-Saxon people, and the Indian would express just as much power and intelligence as you of to-day. It is your duty, as a people, to afford him all the advantages that you can for this advancement and growth, but treaty after treaty has been broken, until to-day he stands upon the border of the setting sun and declares he does not dare trust this government lest he should be betrayed. What a comment on our government—that he dare not trust it to keep its word! This is a portion of our history for which we shall blush in shame when it is revealed to our children who are to come. This is a part of the unwritten history.

The Indian comes to you from the "happy hunting-ground," bringing your own dear ones from the other shore, doing all things for your advancement, heaping coals of fire upon the heads of those who have oppressed him. That is the spirit of the Indian: the spirit of freedom and justice and loving sympathy.

The government of these United States has done much for its children, and this is a matter of record, but are we a freed people whose every child is happy? Look into our cities and what do we find? Various grades of happiness and unhappiness? Who is to blame? Who is responsible for this state of unrefinement, pollution and wretchedness in the lower classes of society? Our government! You say we are in advance of other countries in schools and in other advantages; very true, but never mind what is taking place with other countries and other people: Look within. It is society's duty to profit by the terrible experiences coming to it through this class of people. Society will take its outcasts, when it rightfully considers its duty, and place them where they can have better advantages. This is a part of the unwritten history of our country to be brought to full expression in the time to come.

The evils of government that are draped and hidden from sight, the bribery and corruption—who are to blame for these but the people themselves, the natural voters of our land? Have they done their duty? or have they stayed away from the polls with indifference? The American people are an independent people; we want plenty of elbow-room and we cry out if we do not have it, but there is a weighty influence that attacks our schools at the present time. The American people should arouse themselves and exercise their thought and ask into what a condition of things are we drifting. We are told that the children of Catholic parents must not be educated with our children; that if so they will be unfitted to take their place in the Catholic church in the future; undoubtedly it may unfit them, for when question and doubt creep in, established dogmas lose their hold on the mind. Therefore we say when some one in high authority shall proclaim that you are not as a people doing your duty to your children, it is time for you to exert your strength. It rests with yourselves whether your public schools shall be broad and open, and free to accord instruction to all alike so as to gain a scientific knowledge of how to live, or whether a part shall be instructed in mere ceremonials, and made subject to sacerdotal power. Cast your ballots for those whom you believe to be broad and liberal. Your example shall be to all the world.

Mr. Sullivan closed the exercises of the morning by singing: "On the Banks of that Beautiful River."

The afternoon services opened with congregational singing; then Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes followed with a prayer, after which Mrs. Whittemore gave a song, which was very beautifully rendered.

Mrs. Byrnes's subject was: "What has the Harvest Been?" Opinion, she said, is simply the expression of our growth. Progress has come by work; it has taken nerve and muscle and toil. The soil mentally has been turned. When we look the ground over we should not forget the way in which it has been done. We have not contemplated the chemistry of thought enough. To believe a thing, and to demonstrate it, are two different things. While we are looking for the harvest to come we forget the chemistry of thought that has been going on all around us—the harvest that is! All life is phenomenal. There is no aristocracy of thought, it belongs to the people, and all may have it. We revere the workers that are gone; we honor the workers in the field to-day. You Spiritualists have something to do to make the land of to-day a better land; every step is profitable if we only take it aright. We must stand before the tribunal of our own moral acts. Truth is truth; no matter where it comes from if it has a fitness to some want of our natures.

After the lecture Mrs. Lita Barney Sayles moved that a vote of thanks to the spirits who had spoken through the mediums be given for the sound and logical advice that had been afforded us at this Harvest Moon time in so just and kindly a fashion—when the whole congregation rose in response.

A reading by Miss Lulu Morse, entitled, "The Harvest Home," was next in order, and the exercises of the day closed by the congregation singing Miss Shelhamer's beautiful hymn, "Harvest Moon."

In the evening a social was enjoyed by the mediums and others in the Temple, which closed the Harvest Moon Festival of 1888. GUSTIE F. HOWE.

Onset, Sept. 24th, 1888.

ONSET SEANCE.

"SPECIAL REPORTER" writes as follows in addition to the account furnished us last week of the séance held at the Temple on the evening of the 23d ult.:

In my report of the séance gotten up in honor of the spirit-Indians at the close of the Harvest Moon Festival, I omitted to speak of the manifestation of "Eagle" through the organism of Charles W. Sullivan, but did mention the control of the inaugurator of this series of unique convocations—Dr. I. P. Greenleaf—which personation of form and style of speech was rendered almost to perfection through Mr. Sullivan's mediumship.

I will quote a few words that "Eagle" said, and which were acted out in every gesture made by the medium in a manner entirely different from that of the preceding control:

"The red man comes to the council with no enmity within his soul to his white brethren. Look well upon the trail of the future. Let your bows be strung with love, your arrow points be tipped with truth, and your quiver—one of charity—be full to overflowing."

While Mr. Sullivan's organism was being used to impersonate Dr. Greenleaf it presented the peculiar shape so well known to those acquainted with that gentleman while in the body on earth; but while controlled by "Eagle" his form was straight as an arrow.

Among those who visited Onset on the occasion of the Harvest Moon festivities may be noted the following, as registered at the Washburn House: Wm. D. Crockett and wife, Mrs. S. P. Billings, A. L. Lougee, C. E. Main, S. Shaw, R. P. Gould, A. S. Hayward, Boston; James Whitney, John Haines and wife, Mrs. M. A. Penniman, H. Osborn and wife, Cambridgeport; Mrs. F. D. Homer, W. H. Thayer, F. M. Shaw, F. O. Howard and wife, Brockton; John Garside and wife, Foxboro'; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jenkins, W. H. Gleason, Malden; C. Smith and wife, Avon; W. H. Willis, Kingston; Sidney Dean and wife, Warner, R. I.; Dr. A. H. Richardson, L. S. Hardy and wife, Charlestown; Mrs. P. F. Lais, Mabel B. Lais, Mrs. S. E. Chapman, East Dennis; S. A. Hargraves, Sandwich; Benjamin Cross, S. E. Humes, C. Abbott, Mrs. H. C. Troop, W. R. Carr, Providence, R. I.; Charles Whittemore and wife, Wollaston; L. E. Howes, Waltham; L. B. Robbins, Attleboro'; R. C. Gifford, R. B. Gifford, New Bedford; M. L. Schooley, Trenton, N. J.; A. Josselyn, Crescent City, Fla.; Frank W. Jones, New York City.

Messrs. W. C. Tallman, David Craig, and F. B. Tucker of Boston, and ex-Mayor Robins and wife, and Dr. Brigham, of Fitchburg, were also present.

The Lessons of Harvest Tide.

On Sunday, Sept. 23d, during the morning services in Martine's Hall, 55 South Ada street, Chicago, Ill., W. J. Colville delivered an unusually eloquent and impressive inspirational discourse on "Sowing and Reaping," it being the occasion of a special commemoration of the annual ingathering of the crops.

The platform was beautifully decorated with flowers and fruit, and the music was very pleasing.

A very large audience was present, and the speaker's words were listened to with the deepest attention and approval.

There is, said the speaker, a vast difference between intentional sowing and the mere accidental dropping of seed. We are to sow the good seed of truth beside all waters—an expression easily understood as referring to irrigated land where an opportunity for its growth is afforded. We should be careful at all times, in selecting a field of labor, to discover our aptitude for the task we would take in hand; never carelessly rush anywhere or into anything, but follow the leadership of intuition and common sense.

In sowing mental seed we should be careful to remember that every time we encourage a desire or breathe a request we are sowing something the results of which we must inevitably reap sooner or later. If there are no immediate results we may rest assured it is because the nature of the seed and soil is such that the seed takes long to sprout, but that when the fruit appears it will be of far more permanent character than had it developed rapidly. All nature's great works are gradual; instantaneous conversions and cures are often far from being permanent, as that which grows most leisurely invariably endures longest.

The question is often asked: "Can we grow spiritually by effort, or must we wait for growth to come without our struggle?" This question involves many, and cannot be answered off-hand. Dr. Drummond, in his "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," says the two leading characteristics of growth are spontaneity and mystery, and his position is correct; still these do not cover the entire ground, for if we are to consider the lilies how they grow, may we not also learn of the conditions of their growth so as to cultivate them in our gardens; while rain and dew are usually essential to the fertility of any soil, artificial irrigation can convert the wilderness into a fruitful field. A modern Moses may smite a rock in the desert, and cause water to gush forth, but there must be water beneath the surface, or no rod could bring it forth. Man coöperates with nature in everything, and as many influences essential to the ripening of the harvest are beyond his control, he has still a large amount of work to do himself.

Most people leave too much to the operation of law, and attach too little importance to the outworking of purely natural results through their own understandings of and compliance with immutable law. Fatalism means death to the farmer's enterprise, and in the moral realm inclines its devotees to atrophy of the moral sense, intellectual enervation and physical listlessness.

Thank the Eternal Power whose infinite goodness blesses the earth with valleys thick with corn, and trees bending low with fruits; but thank God most of all for the energizing breath of immortal life within, which makes each individual capable of working out his own and in a measure others' welfare by complying with that divine ordinance which lifts man above the level of a machine and makes him the outworker of his own destiny.

If we each of us determine to allow no other feelings but those of good-will to all mankind to animate the heart, we shall both consciously and unconsciously sow good seed everywhere for a joyous reaping by-and-bye.

WARNER'S LOG CABIN REMEDIES.—"Sarsaparilla," "Cough and Consumption Remedy"—"Hops and Buchu"—"Extract"—"Hair Tonic"—"Liver Pills"—"Plasters," (Porous-Electrical)—"Rose Cream," for Catarrh. They are, like Warner's "Tippecanoe," the simple, effective remedies of the old Log Cabin days.

New Publications.

LEAVES FROM THE DIARY OF AN OLD LAWYER. Intemperance the Great Source of Crime. By A. B. Richmond. 16mo, paper, pp. 387. Chicago: The Revolution Temperance Publishing House.

Three years ago Mr. Richmond, who has been favorably heard from the past year by Spiritualists through reports of what he has witnessed at Cassadaga Lake, was requested to write a lecture giving his experience in the courts with cases where the crimes brought before it resulted from intemperance. This he did, and the lecture proved so interesting and effective that calls were made for its repetition in many places. Subsequently he treated the subject more in detail, and gave what he thus prepared to the public in a book, of which this is a new edition. It contains nearly fifty narratives of events that have convinced the author that nearly all crime committed in this country is caused by intemperance; and that so far as licensing is concerned, the government has no right to sell to one citizen the privilege to make a criminal of another. The book is of thrilling interest, and must prove an effective advocate for the cause it champions.

"GOOD COMPANY."—A series of volumes is in course of publication by Lee & Shepard of this city, bearing the above general title, each a 12mo, bound in cloth. Of them we are in receipt of the following:

BROKEN LIGHTS. An Inquiry into the Present Condition and Future Prospects of Religious Faith. By Frances Power Cobbe, pp. 242.

RELIGIOUS DUTY. By Frances Power Cobbe, pp. 326.

THE WISHING-CAP PAPERS. By Leigh Hunt, pp. 455.

FIRESIDE SAINTS, MR. CAUDLE'S BREAKFAST TALK, and Other Papers. By Douglass Jerrold, pp. 357.

These books, though not new to the public, are of a class that, new or old, will be found interesting and instructive, and at the reasonable price, fifty cents a volume, in the uniform style they are now presented, will prove a valuable addition to any library, and within the means of all to obtain.

MOTHER GOOSE'S MELODIES (Mrs. Partington's Edition). Edited by Uncle Willis. Sq., 16mo, pa., pp. 114. Boston: Lee & Shepard.

One hundred pictures illustrate this edition, which, besides the famous rhymes of Mother Goose, contains others of a similar character and directions for exhibiting them in pantomime and tableau.

SONGS FOR OUR DARLINGS. Edited by Uncle Willis. Sq., 16mo, pa., pp. 224. Boston: Lee & Shepard.

A collection of simple poems, selected with care for young children and illustrated with over one hundred engravings.

CASSELL'S NATIONAL LIBRARY.—Recent issues of this admirable series of standard works are three of Shakspeare's Plays: "Much Ado About Nothing," second part of "King Henry IV."; and "The Merry Wives of Windsor"; "Marmion," by Sir Walter Scott; "Plato's Crito and Phædo. Dialogues of Socrates Before his Death"; "Plutarch's Lives of Pyrrhus, Camillus, Pelopidas, and Marcellus"; "Lives of the English Poets Addison, Savage and Swift," by Samuel Johnson; "Essays and Tales," by Richard Steele. The extremely low price—a dime each—at which these books are sold places a large library within the reach of every person of moderate means. One hundred and thirty-nine volumes have been published, and a new one appears weekly.

THE MAIDEN WIDOW. A Novel by Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth. 12mo, pa., pp. 313. TRIED FOR HER LIFE. A Novel by the same author. 12mo, pa., pp. 356. New, low-priced editions. Philadelphia: T. B. Peterson & Bros.

Passed to Spirit-Life.

Sept. 19th, 1888, from his home in Stoneham, Mass., MR. OBADIAH SAMPSON, at the ripened age of seventy-six years.

For three years Mr. Sampson suffered from a painful illness, but through the entire period of his affliction no one heard an impatient word or murmur of complaint from his lips. He was a good man, whose lofty faith in the goodness of God—for he was a Universalist who believed in the all-saving love of heaven—gave cheer and sunshine to his spirit, and manifested itself in the tender sympathy and unfailing kindness that ever flowed forth from his kindly nature to kindred and friends.

Mr. Sampson leaves a wife and two daughters to miss his bodily presence, and to mourn their loss, but they have the consolousness of knowing that a life so rare and beautiful in earnest endeavor and ennobling example as that of the father and husband has been, leaves its influence for good upon all who have known or come in contact with it. For over fifty years the faithful wife has walked by the side of the one now departed, ministering to his wants, giving to him sympathy and tender affection, and in all ways proving a helpmeet and close companion to the very end.

The subject of this sketch was the proud and happy father of one well known in the ranks of spiritual workers and reformers, that brave and good woman, C. FANNIE ALLYN, to whose constant and unremittent care her parents have owed their comfort and happiness in their declining years. Between this father and daughter a peculiar bond of sympathy existed, and in these first few days of her bereavement, our good sister Allyn feels deeply the sting of bodily separation from the parent she has loved so well. Yet it is not all of gloom with her, for she knows that he who has been so much to her life has not died, but that he has only been lifted out of the trials and sufferings of the mortal, to experience the joys and the reunions of the immortal world. Mrs. Allyn's only son, Love-Ernest—well known to many Spiritualists as a Lyceum scholar in years gone by—who passed away some years since, was a great favorite with his Grandfather Sampson, and it brought consolation to the hearts of those who stood at the death-bed of the venerable man to be assured by him in his last moments that "Vernie" was by his side. Thus are the beautiful truths of spirit-presence and communion brought home to humanity in the most solemn and sacred moments of its experience.

On Friday, Sept. 21st, the relatives and friends of the family gathered in its home, to listen to the last tribute of honor and respect to the life now closed on earth, which was uttered in earnest and soulful speech by the spirit-guide of Miss M. T. SHELHAMER of Boston. The services—consisting of invocation and discourse—were of an impressive character, pointed with the truths of our Spiritual Philosophy, and calculated to console and to bring peace to mourning hearts. The floral offerings were beautiful and numerous, testifying to the love of friends and kindred for the departed.

On the following morning the remains were taken to Middleboro, Mass., for interment. •••.

Entered the Higher Life,

Sept. 17th, at the residence of his son, David H. Plumb, in East Orange, N. J., David Plumb, at the ripe age of seventy-eight years.

Mr. Plumb had a wonderful experience in his long earth-life, and passed away at last peacefully and willingly like one going to sleep.

In his early life his attention was called to the religious work, and he became a minister, and at one time he was settled at Utica, N. Y., over a Methodist society, but he gradually became deeply interested in the colored race, and through his intense interest in the abolition reform, he lost the sympathy of his non-progressive congregation, withdrew from the church as a teacher, and took up the cause of the slave.

He also wrote several works on various topics, his last and culminating book being issued anonymously, and entitled "Ecce Veritas," which illustrates the modern view of Jesus and his mission to humanity from the spiritualistic standpoint as revealed to him. He was passive and negative in his nature, in his early days, but his experience with the world changed his entire being, hence he became aggressive and positive in his work.

He was editor of several abolition papers just previous to the civil war. During its progress he declared that his sons should not be drafted while the colored men at the South were not utilized in putting down the rebellion. He was so pronounced in his remarks that a complaint was entered against him on the ground that he was speaking against the draft, which the laws of the United States forbade. He was consequently taken from his office to the Tombs in New York City, and there confined for several days: all the while he sent letters to the press for publication which were logical and argumentative in their treatment of the issue. The writer, accompanied by Mr. Plumb's wife, took the first meal to him after his confinement in the Station House.

After a short time President Lincoln sent a reprieve setting him at liberty, and soon afterward the order from the Government was issued, providing for the employment of colored men as soldiers—thus showing that Mr. Plumb was practically right in the position he assumed.

He was a great friend of Parker Pillsbury and Gerritt Smith, and they harmoniously worked together for the freedom of the slave.

In his last years of life he became greatly interested in Spiritualism, and embraced it as a fact in the nature of things. Two of his children have also recognized its truth; one has been unfolded as a medium, and works in a private way with her spiritual gifts.

His beloved wife preceded him to the better life many years ago. He leaves three sons and one daughter, who look upon him as simply "gone before."

A. S. H.

Banner Correspondence.

New York.

DELPHI.—Major Carpenter writes: "J. H. Harter, the pastor of the 'Church of Divine Fragments,' of Auburn, has laid off the physical form and passed to the spirit-realm. All who knew him are ready to exclaim: The world is the better for his living in it! He was a friend to all. My first acquaintance with him dates back nearly forty years. He commenced his work in the Methodist Church, but soon discovered that God was impartial, and became an Universalist. His Methodist brethren accused him of being a backslider. He told them he was a forward-slider, for while a Methodist he saw a chance for but few to be saved; whereas now he saw the salvation of all. He declared this good news and glad tidings for all men twenty-five or thirty years. Being of an investigating turn of mind, he was not satisfied with faith through the experience of those who lived two thousand years ago, but was anxious to get facts through his own experience. In an investigation of spirit-communion he obtained the knowledge he sought for—palpable evidence that man never dies. This was the crowning glory of his life. He was first and foremost in all reforms. Equal rights for all was his motto. He labored for woman's rights, and was a lifelong worker for temperance. He did not fellowship the Lex Talionis of Moses, but believed in chastening for reform. To elevate humanity seemed to be his aim at all times; to help those who could not help themselves. He was not governed by popular opinion, but by his own sense of right. He was persecuted because he would not cater to popularity. Notwithstanding his radical course, I do not think he had an enemy. He was well disciplined for spirit-life, where he is already at work.

He was a ready and eloquent speaker—was never at a loss for something to say. One could always profit by his counsels. We expect to hear from Friend Harter at his earliest opportunity, and sincerely sympathize with his lonely family in their separation from the physical presence of a kind husband and father, but we glory with them in knowing that he still lives."

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—E. P. Goodsell writes: "The restoration to vigorous health of a vast army of sufferers from what the 'regulars' in medical practice have decided to be incurable disease, inspires a few words from our pen in behalf of the noble men and women engaged in this grand effort to do good and bless mankind. First and foremost in the great struggle to overcome evil with good, was that noble man who looked upon freedom, mental and physical, as the only means of securing the blessings of mortal life, Thomas Paine. He carries with him to spirit-life the same desire to bless others, and is a leader of one of the great sanitariums. With him are associated such grand coworkers as S. B. Brittan and J. R. Newton, and acting together as one spirit, one mind and heart, they have established fruitful branches of their work in many places upon the earth. Their work includes restoring a proper balance to the needy ones over there. They have assistant teachers to follow their kindly suggestions, to help the needy to a rounding out of mentality and spirituality.

Among the large class of workers in this field of education and progressive life are the Indian spirits who lived natural lives upon the earth. Such spirits are powerful helpers of earthly mediums to-day. A large part of the labor of all philanthropic spirits is to aid and instruct those who departed the earth with but little or no knowledge of its experience or of the first principles of the law of human life in human form. Among those in spirit-life thus employed are Mrs. J. H. Conant, Helen E. Morell, Mrs. R. C. Miller, Achsa W. Sprague, Aggie Davis Hall, Rosa T. Amedey, Alice Cary, Mrs. Dr. Hamilton, Joan of Arc, and others. All the above named spirits have each had their class or circle to conduct to the earth-plane to gain knowledge not otherwise to be obtained."

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA.—"T." writes, Sept. 20th: "Last Sunday evening the control of Mrs. H. S. Lake addressed a large and appreciative audience on 'Spiritual Culture.' A few questions that had been left unanswered from the morning lecture were answered, to one of which in reference to foreign influence the control took the position that there are no geographical lines in spiritual culture, therefore no foreigners; that we all should adopt Thomas Paine's sentiment, 'The world is my country; to do good, my religion,' and as to the Chinese, or other emigrants, proper restriction, but no ostracism. The lecture has caused quite an interest among all classes here, in consequence of which the guide has informed us that next Sunday morning's subject will be 'Politics and Principles.'

The Lyceum commences in October next under charge of Mr. Robert Coffman, who has proved his worthiness and ability, and has the confidence of the Board and Association, also the respect and love of teachers and scholars."

Maine.

SIDNEY.—A. W. S. writes: "Sunday evening, Sept. 23d, a goodly number assembled at the pleasant home of Mr. Arthur W. Stewart. Dr. H. F. Merrill of Augusta conducted the services. About seventy-five tests and messages were given, and nearly every one present received convincing proof of the presence of spirit-friends. Some of the tests were remarkable, and a number were recognized as from those who passed away over thirty years ago. Dr. Merrill spoke to his audience in the highest terms of THE BANNER, calling especial attention to its Message Department and the new story by Mrs. Miner. The Doctor is a remarkably fine test medium, and skeptics as well as believers are seeking admission to his circles. Many are awaiting anxiously for the appearance of his message paper, Twilight. He informs me subscribers are coming in rapidly."

Michigan.

ROMEO.—S. H. Ewell writes: "I have during the last few months attended a number of séances held by Dr. Schermerhorn of Grand Rapids, Mich., and received much satisfaction. I have been a Spiritualist nearly forty years, have seen many mediums, and witnessed many manifestations of spirit-presence, but none superior to those at Dr. Schermerhorn's. They consisted chiefly of independent voices, by means of which dozens of friends of mine long since departed—one of them an old school-mate of more than fifty years ago—gave their names and other evidences of their identity. Whoever would receive positive proof that our so-called dead live, can obtain it through Dr. S."

☞ A short time since a medium, in Parkgate, near Rotherham, during the night, suddenly started up in bed and called loudly, "Wait till dadda comes," and called her husband "Joe, Joe." He sprang from bed, hardly knowing what he did, and opened the bedroom door, just in time to stop his child from falling downstairs. In the morning neither the mother nor child remembered the circumstance; the mother, however, had a faint recollection after being informed by her husband.——A medium, working in the coal-mine at the same place, was one day startled by a voice, saying to him, "Jump"; he waited, hardly knowing what to do. Again the voice, more peremptorily than before, called "Jump"; he did so, and immediately afterward a large piece of stone fell from the roof upon the very spot where he had been standing.—Two Worlds, Manchester, Eng., Sept. 14th.

Ill health modifies all possible goodness. Restore your health by using Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, regulates the liver. Try it—120 doses for $1.00. Sold by your druggist. There is no Sarsaparilla "just as good." Get it.

☞ Prof. Phelps, of Andover, having endeavored to inaugurate a new crusade on the old-time "Satanic" plane, thinking people will do well to read that pertinent work by Allen Putnam, Esq., entitled, "WITCHCRAFT OF NEW ENGLAND EXPLAINED BY MODERN SPIRITUALISM"; Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, have it on sale.

A Strange Resemblance.

THE SINGULAR STORY ABOUT REPRESENTATIVE TAYLOR AND HIS DOUBLE.

A Man whose Face, Figure and Manner were Like His, whose Handwriting was Identical, and who had the Same Name—The Odd Experiences of the Ohio Congressman.

Judge Ezra B. Taylor, who represents the Nineteenth Ohio District in the House, is one of the best known members on the Republican side, and is ranked among the ablest. He is a man of striking characteristics, and would arrest the attention of a stranger as being above the ordinary run of men. His face is strongly marked with force and individuality.

He recently received a letter from Wisconsin, which calls up again a coincidence in his life, which is probably the most remarkable of which the world has record. He related the story to The Star man yesterday. He was born in Portage County, Ohio, sixty-five years ago, attended school with Garfield, and the two kept up a friendship in after life. When Garfield was elected to the Ohio State Senate in 1859, Judge Taylor was practicing law in the State. Shortly after Garfield took his seat, Judge Taylor got a letter from him, stating:

"I received your letter, and will be glad to do anything I can for you. I am surprised, however, that you should desire such a position. I thought your practice was worth much more to you."

This may not be the exact language of the letter, but it was about this.

Judge Taylor did not understand the letter. He wrote to Mr. Garfield telling him so, and saying that he was right in supposing his law practice was worth more than any position under the State Senate.

THE MYSTERY DEEPENS.

Shortly after that Mr. Garfield called on him and handed him a letter, asking if it were not his. He examined the letter, and replied that it was certainly his handwriting and his signature, but that he had not written it, unless he had done so in his sleep, and then he pointed out that it was postmarked from another part of the State.

The letter asked for the appointment of deputy sergeant-at-arms of the State Senate, was written in the judge's handwriting and signed plainly with his signature, Ezra B. Taylor.

Mr. Garfield wanted to submit the letter to an expert to pass upon the chirography. Judge Taylor said he would acknowledge that he could not tell it from his own. It was submitted to an expert, who, without hesitation, said he could take oath to its being Judge Taylor's writing. It was a mystery they could not penetrate, and they dropped it.

HE MEETS HIS DOUBLE.

Not long afterward the State Convention assembled. Judge Taylor was walking down the corridor of the principal hotel. There were mirrors on the walls in which he could see his reflection. As he approached the end of the corridor he thought there was another mirror directly in front of him in which he could plainly see his own face and form. He drew closer, and— No; it was not a mirror. It was a man. It was himself in flesh and blood. The two looked at each other, and it seemed as if each had lost his identity in the other. Had they turned around three times neither could have been certain he was not the other fellow. Neither spoke. They just looked at each other, and passed in opposite directions. Later in the day Mr. Garfield, with the double leaning on his arm, approached Judge Taylor. He introduced them: "Mr. Taylor, Mr. Taylor. No; Mr. Ezra B. Taylor, Mr. Ezra B. Taylor."

NAMES AND FACES ALIKE.

They were the same in name, in form, in face, in age, voice, carriage, manners and general appearance. Judge Taylor was then known as colonel. He had been named after a distinguished clergyman, Ezra Booth. The duplicate was also known as colonel, and said he was Ezra Booth, but he did not know after whom he was named.

The Star man had been told that they discovered that they were born on the same day. Judge Taylor says he does not remember whether or not this was developed, but that they were certainly born in the same year, and that every circumstance or condition they could think of as peculiar to one, applied with equal aptness to the other. The acquaintance was continued between these two men, a constant correspondence between them until a year ago, when the other died out West. They were never able to discover any relationship.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS.

A few weeks ago Judge Taylor got a letter from a lady in Wisconsin, stating that she had noticed the name of Ezra B. Taylor as voting against the Mills bill; that an Ezra B. Taylor, formerly living in a certain part of New York, had been a very intimate friend of her father, who was now dead. They had, she said, lost sight of this friend soon after her father's death, and they were anxious to find him. They hoped the Representative might be he.

Judge Taylor wrote a prompt reply, stating that he had never lived in New York State, and had never heard of the lady's father; but this did not end it.

A few days ago he got another letter from the lady, stating that she had been delighted, on receiving his letter, to recognize in the address the handwriting of her father's friend. On opening the letter she had found the handwriting and signature the same as a number of old letters they have, and that she was at a loss to reconcile the contents of the letter with these circumstances.

It has not yet developed whether the Ezra B. Taylor this lady seeks is the one who died or yet a third party to the drama.

But, to add another romantic feature to the case, it now appears that the Taylor this lady seeks might have reasons for concealing his identity from the family on account of some business relations with the deceased father, whom he may have owed money.—Washington Star, Sept. 15th, 1888.

A GENERATION.—Ten thousand human beings start together on the journey of life. After ten years one-third at least have disappeared. At the middle points of the common measure of life but half are still upon the road. Faster and faster, as the ranks grow thiner, they that remain till now become weary and lie down to rise no more in the mortal body. At threescore and ten a band of some four hundred yet struggle on. At ninety these have been reduced to a handful of thirty trembling patriarchs. Year after year they fall in diminishing numbers. One lingers, perhaps, a lonely marvel, till the century is over.

A LOG CABIN does not look very handsome from the outside, with the coon-skin nailed on the door, but health and contentment the hardy pioneers of American civilization found in them. Their health was maintained by simple remedies of roots and herbs, now reproduced in Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, made by Warner of Safe Cure fame.

New Hampshire Convention.

The Quarterly Convention of the New Hampshire State Spiritualist Association will be held at Washington, N. H., Oct. 12th, 13th and 14th.

Good speakers and mediums have been engaged, and all are invited to be present.

Half fare on stages from Hillsboro' and Newport. Reduced rates at hotel. Bro. Lull has the latch-string out as usual.

Round-trip tickets, at two cents per mile, may be obtained from the following stations to Hillsboro' Bridge: Plymouth, Laconia, Franklin, Concord, Contoocook, Nashua, Milford, Peterboro', Keene and Hancock Junction.

Speakers.—Prof. John W. Kenyon, of Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Craddock, of Concord; Miss S. Lizzie Ewer, of Portsmouth, N. H.; Mrs. Stevens, of Washington, N. H.

Francestown, Sept. 24th, 1888. GEO. D. EPPS, Sec'y.

Annual Meeting.

The Spiritualists of Kansas will hold their Annual Meeting Oct. 12th to 15th, 1888, at the residence of T. C. Deuel, one and a half miles east of Fairmount, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. All are invited. Good speakers and mediums will be present to entertain and instruct the people.

A. H. NICHOLAS.

Spiritualist Meetings.

NEWARK, N. J.—Meetings will be held every Sunday evening at No. 139 Congress street, commencing at 7 o'clock. Mrs. H. C. Dorn, Secretary.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Meetings are held Sundays, 3 P. M., by First Spiritual Association, at Brant's Hall, 9th and Franklin Avenue. Samuel Penberthy (at Hotel Westernan), Secretary.

Passed to Spirit-Life,

From Windsor, Vt., Sept. 9th, Mrs. Caroline L. Winn.

The deceased was formerly a resident of Boston. Her translation was caused by a fall. Had she continued in the mortal till Nov. 26th, she would have attained the age of eighty-eight years. Her belief for thirty-eight years was strong in the Spiritual Philosophy, and she has been for many of them a constant reader of THE BANNER. T. B. WINN.

[Obituary Notices not exceeding twenty lines published gratuitously. When they exceed that number, twenty cents for each additional line will be charged. Ten words on an average make a line. No poetry admitted under this heading.]

PRICE REDUCED FROM 50 CENTS TO 35 CENTS IN PAPER COVERS, AND FROM 75 CENTS TO 50 CENTS IN CLOTH.

Post-Mortem Confessions:

Being Letters Written Through a Mortal's Hand by Spirits Who, When in Mortal, were OFFICERS OF HARVARD COLLEGE: With Comments by ALLEN PUTNAM, A. M., Author of "Natty, a Spirit," "Bible Marvel-Workers," "New England Witchcraft Explained by Modern Spiritualism," "Agassiz and Spiritualism."

This volume contains several letters written by spirits who, while in mortal, were officers of Harvard College, and now freely write out confessions that they were wrong in making that far-famed attack upon Modern Spiritualism in 1857 miscalled The Harvard Investigation. These letters are to be so valuable as history in future times that they merit a place in every family library, deserve to be carefully read now, preserved and handed down to posterity. They came forth in response to letters written by a graduate from that college, who was the personal friend of those officers, and yet their contestant at the time of the sham Investigation. He supplements the correspondence with his views of the timeliness, aims and operations, present and prospective, of Modern Spiritualism itself. It is a unique and instructive work, by one thirty-four years a Spiritualist and eighty-four a mortal.

INDEX.

Harvard Investigation; Agassiz, Professor; Bell, M. D.; Eustis, Professor; Felton, Professor; Gardner, Doctor; Lunt, Editor; Peirce, Professor; Putnam, D. D.; Walker, President; Willis, Doctor.

SUPPLEMENT.

Introduction; Planetary Influences; Openers of the Gates; God; Managers of Spiritualism; Methods, Motives and Aims; For Whose Good? First Needs; Sad Conditions; Various Locations; Mediumship; How Commune; Business; Healing; Consolation; Religious Aspects; Personal Experiences; Appendix.

Paper, price 35 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from $2.50, Postage 15 cts., to $1.50, Postage Free.

SPIRIT WORKERS

IN THE

HOME CIRCLE.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHIC NARRATIVE OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA IN FAMILY DAILY LIFE EXTENDING OVER A PERIOD OF TWENTY YEARS.

BY MORELL THEOBALD, F. C. A.

Some of the most astonishing phenomena in the history of Modern Spiritualism are recorded in this volume, the descriptions of which are given with a marked degree of fidelity to detail and effort to corroborate their truth by unimpeachable testimony. They include independent writing in various languages, on walls and ceilings, in closed apartments and on note books in locked desks; lighting of lamps and fires; filling of kettles with water, and making preparations for breakfast, even to cooking food, making tea and "laying the table"; organ playing with no one visibly present; materialization and dematerialization of forms and fabrics, bringing of flowers, ringing of bells and movements of physical objects. Fac-Similes are given of various writings, one of them in Greek, with a translation. The book covers a period of twenty years, and of each of the phenomena above specified, together with others, numerous instances are narrated.

The author says that the book has been written in the intervals of a busy professional life, which fact has proved of advantage; for, while as careful as possible not to be carried away by enthusiasm, or by imagination, in a region wherein there is much scope for their action, the disjointed method of working he was compelled to adopt operated as a protection against a surrender to mere fantasy.

Demy 8vo, cloth, pp. 306. Price $2.50, postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from $1.25 to 75 Cents.

Bible Marvel-Workers,

And the Power which helped or made them perform MIGHTY WORKS, and utter Inspired Words; Together with some Personal Traits and Characteristics of Prophets, Apostles and Jesus, or New Readings of "THE MIRACLES."

BY ALLEN PUTNAM, A. M.

Mr. Putnam has here, in his uniformly candid and calm spirit, furnished an unusually vivid, interesting and instructive volume of about 240 pages. He here allows what he incidentally calls "THE GUIDE-BOOK OF CHRISTENDOM" to tell the story of its own origin and character, and mostly in its own words and facts. Biblical light leads his way, and as he moves on he finds and points out Fact after Fact, View after View, Meaning after Meaning, attaching to old familiar mental pictures and forms of Bible scenes and personages which possess the charm of novelty, while they generate conviction that they are true and valuable. Without questioning the genuineness or truth of any part of the Bible itself, and without attack upon any sect, denomination or individual, Mr. Putnam, following the clear leadings of light which John the revelator furnished, examines most of the prominent Bible marvels and personages, and presents to the public a work which will show to most readers spots where they have been accustomed to overlook very plain and distinct information lying upon the very surface of our English Bible, which, if recognized, will lead devoted lovers of the Bible, and its contemners also, to estimate it with more discriminating justice than they have been accustomed to apply there.

Price 75 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 30 Cents to 15 Cents.

MESMERISM, SPIRITUALISM, WITCHCRAFT AND MIRACLE.

A treatise, showing that Mesmerism is a key which will unlock many chambers of mystery. By ALLEN PUTNAM, author of "Spirit Works," and "Natty, a Spirit."

Paper, 15 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 25 Cents to 10 Cents.

What is Spiritualism?

An Address delivered by THOMAS GALES FORSTER, in Music Hall, Boston, Mass., Sunday afternoon, Oct. 27th, 1867. This address possesses great merit. It is terse and to the point. Societies should circulate this pamphlet in their respective localities with a lavish hand.

Paper, 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Essence and Substance:

A TREATISE ON

Organic and Inorganic Matter: The Finite and The Infinite: Transient and Eternal Life.

BY WARREN CHASE,

Author of "Life-Line of the Lone One" and "Gist of Spiritualism."

Mr. Chase is known to be a deep thinker and close reasoner; his radical ideas are often original, and always frankly and clearly expressed, and this work presents the fundamental principles on which he bases his evidence of eternal life, and gives a concise view of the doctrine of repeated incarnations without re-incarnation. The origin of human life on earth is treated in a new and interesting manner, which cannot fail to interest the reader. The author has given many years and much thought to these subjects, and has put forth in this work a theory that satisfies his critical and skeptical mind of eternal life, which he does not think any more attached to the spiritual forms that we put on at death, and which our friends appear in, than it is to those mortal bodies, although evidently of much longer duration.

Cloth, price 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.

AFTER DEATH:

THE DISEMBODIMENT OF MAN.

The World of Spirits: Its Location, Extent, Appearances; The Route Thither; Inhabitants; Customs; Societies; also Sex, and Its Uses There, etc., etc.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

This fine work of Dr. Randolph's is by far the most important and thrilling that has yet fallen from his pen, inasmuch as it discusses questions concerning our state and doings after death that heretofore have been wholly untouched, and perhaps would have been for years had not this bold thinker dared to grapple with them.

Cloth. Price $2.25, postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ORTHODOXY:

A Lecture by ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

This is the latest lecture by Robert G. Ingersoll, reviewing the creeds of the churches and answering them from their own standards. Crowded with facts, figures and arguments; eloquent in every paragraph; just the kind of literature for friends of free thought and honest expression to have and circulate generously.

Garbled, incomplete and ridiculous reports of this lecture, taken from the newspapers, have already appeared. They do the author great injustice and deceive the reading public. This edition, coming direct from the author's own publisher, is complete, and contains three times as much material as any of the unauthorized and pirated editions.

Paper. Price 10 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STARTLING FACTS IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM: Being a Graphic Account of Witches, Wizards and Witchcraft: Table-Tipping, Spirit-Rapping, Spirit Speaking, Spirit Telegraphing; and Spirit Materializations of Spirit Hands, Spirit Heads, Spirit Faces, Spirit Forms, Spirit Flowers, and every other Spirit Phenomenon that has occurred in Europe and America since the Advent of Modern Spiritualism, March 31, 1848, to the Present Time. By DR. N. B. WOLFE, Cincinnati, O.

In fine English cloth, gold back and sides, illustrated, $2.25 per copy, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

AN EYE-OPENER. "Citateur, par Pigault." Le Brun, Doubts of Infidels: Embodying thirty important questions to the clergy. Also forty close questions to the Doctors of Divinity, by ZEPA.

Cloth, 75 cents, postage 8 cents; paper, 50 cents, postage 2 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

The Weekly Discourse,

A Pamphlet (especially arranged for binding)

Containing one of the Discourses given through the organism of

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND

The preceding Sunday,

Is published each week. Price, $2.50 per year.

Address, WILLIAM RICHMOND,

64 Union Park Place, Chicago, Ill.

My1 cow

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription: One year, $1.50; six months, 75 cents; three months, 40 cents; single number, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty-five cents—a sum which barely covers the price of blank paper and press-work. Sample copies free. Je4

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science.

PUBLISHERS AND EDITORS—GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Mental Therapeutics, Human Liberty, and the Culture of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, $2.00 per year; single copies 25 cents.

Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI-MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der „mystischen" und „magischen" Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, Alf. Russ. Wallace, der Professoren Barrett und Coues, mehrerer Brahminen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden.

Subscription: $1.75 for six months, $3.50 per annum.

Messrs. COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Au21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL devoted to the interest of Spiritualism in all its aspects. MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of Subscription, in advance, per year, $1.20. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order on Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75, Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper, 12mo, pp. 240. Price 60 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Au9

THE CARRIER DOVE.

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform. Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER. DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, Publishers. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of the Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also Spirit Pictures by our Artist Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms: $2.50 per year; single copies, 10 cents.

Address all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 32 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal. F6

SEND NAME

AND POST-OFFICE ADDRESS, plainly written, to THE BETTER WAY, CINCINNATI, O., and receive a sample copy of this bright Spiritual Weekly Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year, but no obligation to subscribe will be incurred by sending for a sample copy. It will cost you only a postal card and a minute! tf Au13

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.

MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Assistant Editor.

AN EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY, devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms, 60 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address, GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

THE oldest reform journal in publication.

Price, $3.00 a year.
$1.50 for SIX months.
8 cents per single copy.

Now is your time to subscribe for a live paper, which discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.

Address J. P. MENDUM,
Investigator Office,
Paine Memorial,
Ap2 Boston, Mass.

Second Edition,

The First Edition having been closed out within a few weeks from date of issue.

THE

HIDDEN WAY Across the Threshold;

OR,

THE MYSTERY WHICH HATH BEEN HIDDEN FOR AGES AND FROM GENERATIONS.

An Explanation of the Concealed Forces in Every Man to Open the Temple of the Soul and to Learn

The Guidance of the Unseen Hand.

Illustrated and made plain with as few Occult phrases as possible.

BY J. C. STREET, A. B. N.,

Fellow of the Order S. S. S. and of the Brotherhood Z. Z. R. R. Z. Z.

A wonderful book.—Boston Traveller.

Surely nothing could be more absorbingly important.—New York Graphic.

That it is the result of most diligent study and research, and comes from no ordinary hand, is amply proved by a perusal of its pages.—Boston Budget.

The moral teachings are of the highest possible order.—Alta Californian.

This book will be admitted to be a remarkable production. There is surpassing beauty and benefit in the author's conceptions of the motives of human conduct, death and the future life.—Boston Globe.

The chapter which deals with Mind-Cure, Metaphysics and Mental Healing, is one of the brightest and most exhaustive essays on Mind-Cure which has ever been written.—Buffalo Times.

Price $3.50, postage 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION—PRICE REDUCED.

THE MINISTRY OF ANGELS REALIZED.

BY MR. AND MRS. A. E. NEWTON.

The continued call for this well-known pamphlet—which was one of the earliest publications in the interest of Modern Spiritualism, and has now been before the public for more than a third of a century—has induced the publishers to issue a new edition, at a reduced price. It is specially adapted to awaken an interest in the great spiritual movement of our day in religious minds, and has been largely bought for gratuitous circulation among members of churches. The lessened price at which it is now offered will facilitate that object.

Price, single copies, 15 cents; 8 copies for $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SPIRIT WORKS: Real but not Miraculous. A Lecture read at the City Hall in Roxbury, Mass., on the evening of Sept. 21st, 1853, by ALLEN PUTNAM.

This lecture, delivered in Roxbury, Sept. 21st, 1853, and repeated at the Melodeon, in Boston, Nov. 1st, same year, though preceded by several addresses by Lacey Sunderland, A. E. Newton, J. M. Spear and others, in smaller rooms, and on more private notice, was the first Lecture on Spiritualism in this vicinity to which the public was invited through the press and by posters, and the first to be printed and issued in pamphlet form. Though the author says that it seems crude now, and contains some allusions to local and transient events, it is interesting and valuable because of its connection with the introduction of Spiritualism.

Paper, pp, 62. Price 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

VARIOUS REVELATIONS: With an Account of the Garden of Eden, and the Settlement of the Eastern Continent, as related by the leaders of the wandering tribes. From the Age of Enoch, Seth and Noah, to the Birth of Jesus of Nazareth, as related by Mary, his Mother, and Joseph, the Foster Father, with a Confirmation of his Crucifixion and Resurrection, as related by Pilate and the different Apostles. Also, an Account of the Settlement of the North American Continent, and the Birth of the Individualized Spirit which has followed.

Cloth, pp. 391. Price $2.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

SPIRITUALISM AS A SCIENCE, AND SPIRITUALISM AS A RELIGION. An Oration delivered under spirit influence, at St. George's Hall, London, Eng., Sunday evening, Sept. 21st, 1873, by CORA L. V. TAPPAN. This is No. 1 of a series of Tracts entitled "The New Science."

Paper, 5 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

BANNER OF LIGHT:

THE OLDEST JOURNAL IN THE WORLD DEVOTED TO THE

Spiritual Philosophy.

ISSUED WEEKLY

At 9 Bosworth Street (formerly Montgomery Place), Corner Province Street, Boston, Mass.

COLBY & RICH,
Publishers and Proprietors.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER,
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR,
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR,
Aided by a large corps of able writers.

THE BANNER is a first-class Family Newspaper of EIGHT PAGES—containing FORTY COLUMNS OF INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE READING—embracing

A LITERARY DEPARTMENT,
REPORTS OF SPIRITUAL LECTURES,
ORIGINAL ESSAYS—Upon Spiritual, Philosophical and Scientific Subjects,
EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT,
SPIRIT-MESSAGE DEPARTMENT, and
CONTRIBUTIONS by the most talented writers in the world, etc., etc.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE:

Per Year.....$3.00
Six Months.....1.50
Three Months.....75
Postage Free.

In remitting by mail, a Post-Office Money Order on Boston, or a Draft on a Bank or Banking House in Boston or New York City, payable to the order of COLBY & RICH, is preferable to Bank Notes. Our patrons can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred.

ADVERTISEMENTS published at twenty cents per line for the first, and fifteen cents per line for each subsequent insertion.

Subscriptions discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for.

☞ Specimen copies sent free.

COLBY & RICH

Publish and keep for sale at Wholesale and Retail a complete assortment of Spiritual, Progressive, Reformatory, and Miscellaneous Books.

Among the authors are Andrew Jackson Davis, Hon. Robert Dale Owen, Dr. James M. Peebles, Henry C. Wright, Giles B. Stebbins, D. D. Home, T. R. Hazard, William Denton, Rev. M. B. Craven, Judge J. W. Edmonds, Prof. S. B. Brittan, Allen Putnam, Epes Sargent, W. F. Evans, Kersey Graves, A. B. Child, P. B. Randolph, Warren S. Barlow, J. O. Barrett, Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten, Miss Lizzie Doten, Mrs. Maria M. King, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, etc.

Any book published in England or America, not out of print, will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books published and for sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

☞ Publishers who insert the above Prospectus in their respective journals, and call attention to it editorially, will be entitled to a copy of the BANNER OF LIGHT one year, provided a marked paper is forwarded to this office.

OUR AGENTS.

BRENTANO BROS., BOOKSELLERS, 5 Union Square, New York.

Authorized NEW YORK AGENTS for the sale of all of Colby & Rich's Publications. A good stock always on hand of Spiritual Books and Publications. Any Book desired which they do not happen to have in stock will be promptly ordered. Subscriptions received for and single copies of the Banner of Light on sale. Address 5 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK. Branch stores, 1015 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, WASHINGTON, D. C., and 101 STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. NEW YORK AGENCY, 5 UNION SQUARE.

PHILADELPHIA BOOK DEPOT.

The Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., are for sale by J. H. RHODES, M. D., at the Philadelphia Book Agency, 722 Spring Garden street. Subscriptions received for the Banner of Light at $3.00 per year. Also Banner of Light can be found for sale at Academy Hall, No. 810 Spring Garden street, and at all the Spiritual meetings; also at 703 North 8th street, and at news stand 826 Market street.

CLEVELAND, O., BOOK DEPOT.

THOMAS LEES, 142 Ontario street (Room 2). All the Spiritual and Reformatory Works on hand published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass. Subscription Agency for the Banner of Light and other Spiritual papers and magazines, etc. Residence, 105 Cross street, Cleveland, O.

WASHINGTON AGENCY.

M. L. WILCOX & CO., dealers in Standard and Scientific Books, Pamphlets and Periodicals, 207 4½ street, near Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C., keep constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., AGENCY.

J. K. COOPER, 746 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., keeps constantly for sale the Banner of Light, and will take orders for any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

CHICAGO, ILL., AGENCY.

CHAS. MACDONALD & CO., Periodical dealers, No. 55 Washington street, Chicago, Ill., keep for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

NEW YORK DEPOT.

The Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., also the Banner of Light, can be found at the office of The Truth-Seeker, 33 Clinton Place, New York City.

TROY, N. Y., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass., will be accommodated by W. H. VOSBURGH, 244 Ninth street, Troy, N. Y.

BRATTLEBORO', VT., BOOK DEPOT.

E. J. CARPENTER, retail dealer in Newspapers, Periodicals, etc., etc., No. 2 Market Block, keeps for sale the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., AGENCY.

WM. FOSTER, JR., 50 Battey street, Providence, R. I., will supply any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich. He is also agent for the Banner of Light.

DETROIT, MICH., AGENCY.

AUGUSTUS DAY, 12 Park Place, Detroit, Mich., Spiritualistic Sale and Circulating Library. Agent for Banner of Light, and all publications of Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass

ROCHESTER, N. Y., BOOK DEPOT.

JACKSON & BURLEIGH, Booksellers, Arcade Hall, Rochester, N. Y., keep for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., BOOK DEPOT.

WILLIAMSON & HIGBEE, Booksellers, 62 West Main street, Rochester, N. Y., keep for sale the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published at the Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AGENCY.

JAMES LEWIS, 63 Pynchon street, Springfield, Mass., is agent for the Banner of Light, and will supply the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published by Colby & Rich, Boston, Mass.

CORRY, PENN., AGENCY.

Parties desiring any of the Spiritual and Reformatory Works published and for sale by Colby & Rich, will

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps —ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not peruse anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he specially desires to call our attention to.

☞ When the post-office address of THE BANNER is to be changed, our patrons should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not omit to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as THE BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1888.

[Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE, Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place), corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:

THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY, 14 Franklin Street, Boston.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY, 39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,

PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.

☞ Business Letters should be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All other letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the oncoming light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

A Look Ahead.

What Spiritualism has accomplished in the past forty years we know; what it is likely to accomplish in the coming quarter of a century, or even by the expiration of the current century, is so much a matter of conjecture as to excite the deepest interest in all believers in its beneficent workings.

The subject was well considered in a recent discourse by Mrs. Richmond. She began with the highly suggestive observation that all truly great movements originate in ways that are removed from ordinary public observation, and that no one could tell from the apparent smallness of a thought or insignificance of a fact what will be its results. It was the steam lifting the cover of a tea-kettle that produced all the mighty engines of the modern world. It was the kite and key of Franklin that opened the way for all the wonderful results in the use and application of electricity. Why should not similar small and trivial beginnings in mental and spiritual matters be equally capable of moving the already awakened world as it never was moved before? Why are the phenomena of Spiritualism to be rejected because they were introduced by the tiny raps in an humble cottage?

The simple teachings of Socrates led to his martyrdom because they led the people to neglect their priests and their worship of the gods, and by discarding war invited universal peace. But his teachings were continued in an enlarged form by Plato, who announced that the universal Cosmos was the perfection of civilization and the glory of the human mind. The Sermon on the Mount and the Golden Rule are far more widely comprehended and accepted than when they were spoken.

For the past forty years Spiritualism, said Mrs. Richmond, has been more or less "a heterogeneous mass of manifestations, philosophy, socialistic doctrines, political economy and religious chaos." The manifestations, which come first, are to material minds the basis of spiritual truth. But Spiritualism no more consists in the manifestation of spirit-power through material objects to the senses than does the ringing of the door-bell by him constitute the visit of a friend. The value of physical manifestations is not in proving immortality, because that cannot be demonstrated by a physical fact. The value of the physical manifestations consists in the simple and single fact that they demonstrate a power over matter that is not to be found classified in any school of science. Spiritualism is not science; it is greater than science. Mr. Crookes alone has sufficiently proved this. Mr. Alfred R. Wallace, another distinguished scientist, after long experimenting and study, reached the same conclusion. He became convinced that the manifestations proceed from a source that is beyond the reach of science in the realm of spirit.

Science is the formulated result of experiment and observation, employing the deductive and inductive methods of reasoning. At the end of forty years of spiritual manifestations there is no formula for producing a single rap. Spiritualism has come to prove to science that there is a realm which it does not understand—which it has not explored—and which it cannot explore by any of the recognized methods of science. But Spiritualism is demonstrated, science to the contrary notwithstanding. It baffles the scientific minds; they come against a dead-wall of impossibility the moment they set out to explain it after the manner of science; and that obstructing wall is the ENTIRE REALM of spirit causation—the whole region of spiritual force which they do not understand.

This much has been demonstrated: that above the self-styled realm of science, beyond the realm of physics, beyond the realm of organized matter, there is a region just as active, more potent, more all-pervading and all-controlling; and within that realm the manifestations of Spiritualism must be explained and accounted for. Within that realm only can be found the solution of all those mysteries, once considered occult and strange, and regarded as depending upon singular incantations and exercises; now the forces that are employed, although in the realm of mind or spirits, are exercised under the most ordinary conditions and circumstances; now we have in the open day, and in the evening in well-lighted rooms, the manifestations of spirit power. This realm of causation is one that science cannot invade; it requires the services of another and a higher faculty of the human mind, the faculty of intuition. As this faculty continues to develop in mankind, the spiritual solution will become more and more clear. Science is obliged to admit that Spiritualism is not explainable in her realm.

Spiritualism pronounces all mental philosophy to be included in its teachings. The Spiritual Philosophy is the only solution of all the various systems of thought; it releases the mind from its tendency to materialism, and carries it to the innermost realm of spiritual truth. Spiritualism says that Kant rightly claims the à priori existence of mind, and that Fichte is right in declaring that the solution of mind is to be found in the realm of à priori thought, which is a realm of its own. Spiritualism declares that that realm is the realm of spirit, of immortality, extending backward as well as forward, the realm of the heretofore as well as the hereafter. It bears the metaphysician, the idealist, the transcendentalist on its strong pinions to the realm of the spiritual and divine reality. It assures them that it is a positive power; that the light of the spirit is a positive light; that the shadow of material life is all that rests between us and the knowledge of things divine. It says with the astronomer that if we place ourselves at the centre the circumference will be correct.

With matter at the centre, everything has gone astray in the mental world. With the material basis, man cannot solve the problems that relate to his spirit. All philosophies become ambiguous and undecisive if based on the senses. Stand at the centre, and the circumference always comes into its own place. The centre of all mental and spiritual endeavor is spiritual; and Spiritualism reconstructs the philosophy of the nineteenth century. Instead of leading nowhere, as has been affirmed by many minds, Spiritualism declares the "unknowable" to be the only knowable realm in the universe, demonstrating that it is a palpable realm, more real than the realm of matter; that the realm of the spirit is the basis of all reality, and from that the human circumference is adjusted and made clear. From this centre the spirit is to go forth, the body being its willing subject; the appetites no longer enslaving; sense no longer dragging the spirit down to its own level; and physical existence being made subservient to the higher enjoyments of the spirit. Body and mind alike are to be governed by spiritual powers.

Spiritualism has for its office to make men true; to expose individual wrongs; to remove masks and falsities; to inculcate fraternity; to silently but effectually reconstruct society by encouraging the release of that which is within and its domination of that which is without. It clasps hands with every spiritual truth wherever found. Thus it acts as a solvent for them all; restoring the gifts of the spirit to their right places; and while teaching all men to forget their strivings in religious ways, opening the doors of manifestations and expressions in inspiration as to-day and in this our own time. Out of it is to come all knowledge and charity, that which is to explain and reconcile the past history of the world. As it is the light of to-day, the truth of to-day, the religion of to-day, giving the world the expression of spiritual truth in answer to its needs, out of it will flow a new and higher civilization and a broader: a new religion; a new philosophy; and, what is above science, a superscience which shall control matter and make it obedient to the work of the spirit.

Helping Undeveloped Spirits.

"The souls of men, according to Plato," says David Hume, in his "Inquiry Concerning the Principles of Morals," "inflamed with impure appetites, and losing the body, which alone afforded means of satisfaction, hover about the earth, and haunt the places where their bodies are deposited, possessed with a longing desire to recover the lost organs of sensation." This is but in harmony with what is matter of actual knowledge, through the clear and unmistakable interpretation of Modern Spiritualism. What Plato, who found the oneness of the universe in the supreme Beauty, as his predecessor Socrates found it in supreme Goodness, and as before him it was held to consist in supreme Truth—what Plato intuitively believed with regard to the return of undeveloped and unemancipated spirits, is well understood and known from the revelations of Spiritualism. And it is a discovery, now broadened into practical recognition, that effectually clears up many a perplexing problem, and enables us to proceed intelligently, and hence effectively, in dealing with this class of unhappy spirits.

Nothing appeals with a stronger influence to our sympathy and care than does the well-ascertained fact that spirits not yet released from their earth bondage cannot enter into the higher and larger inheritance of life which awaits all alike, but are obliged to live in the earth's atmosphere for a stated time, in obedience to the laws that govern slavery equally with freedom, i. e., until their earthly and sensual chains are broken. Understanding this fact, mortals should so act that they may happily become instrumental in sooner bringing these unfortunate spirits out of the darkness into the light.

The "Spiritual Fraternity" Society

Will resume its public meetings next Sunday, Oct. 7th, at the First Spiritual Temple, corner Newbury and Exeter streets, Boston. School for children meets at 10:30 A. M.; afternoon lecture service at 2:45; Wednesday evening social at 7:30. The guides of Mrs. H. S. Lake will speak during October and November.

☞ The report that Mrs. H. B. Stowe was rallying again had no foundation in fact: "For some time," writes "Eleanor Kirk" to the Cape Ann Advertiser, "in fact from the moment of her husband's death, this gifted woman has been ready and eager for the great change. The faith in a future reünion with her loved one knows no cloud. Prof. Stowe was a firm believer in the highest truths of Spiritualism, and this belief is said to have been shared by his wife."

☞ "Henry Cummings, the eminent physical test medium from London, Eng.," whom we believe to be the notorious H. Melville Fay, so often denounced in THE BANNER, is now operating in New England; at least it would so seem, as we have recently received from a friendly correspondent a blue handbill of "C.'s" with the imprint of Laconia, N. H., upon it. Give him a wide berth.

Spirit Manifestations.

As many people even at this late date still persist in casting doubt upon the physical phase of the Spiritual Dispensation, we copy from THE BANNER of July 23d, 1857, a communication sent to us by Mr. Nathan Nutter of Amesbury, Mass., (who still resides there,) that explains his then position upon the subject, to which we append our own remarks made at the time. When he wrote to us he knew nothing in regard to the spiritual phenomena other than those given by and through his own organism, as he had never visited any medium. The occurrence he alludes to transpired in his own house, in the presence of only a few intimate friends who were called in as evidence:

AMESBURY, June, 1857.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The doctrine of Spiritualism, which you advocate, appears mysterious to me as yet; but it is not strange that it does. In fact, it would be strange if it did not, for all discoveries have seemed so at first. Galileo said the earth revolved, and it did, with natural laws to govern it, though denied. Franklin drew lightning from the clouds, and Morse taught it to speak the English language. Newton discovered the law of gravitation, and Fulton asked for a building in which to explain his theory of steam power, but it was denied him. There were natural causes for all these; may there not be, therefore, a possibility that Spiritualism, so called, can be explained on philosophical principles?

I will give you a word in relation to a manifestation I received. I called on the spirit of a ship-builder, and on his announcing his presence, asked him to imitate the launch of a ship. Thirty or more distinct raps were heard, resembling the sound at a distance of carpenters setting up a ship. Shortly all the rappings ceased except two, and they represented men splitting out the blocks. After these the table shook, as a ship does just before she starts from the ways, then it moved six feet or more, without any person touching it, resembling the motion of a ship as it is launched into the water. I am convinced that nothing by mere human agency could thus, in every particular, imitate so perfectly the launching of a ship.

Yours, NATHAN NUTTER.

Our friend's experience is a good proof of the reality of spirit manifestations, and a perfect argument against the position of those who maintain that they are all produced by jugglery, wires, pulleys, or mechanical appliances of any name or nature. Though a "medium" himself, and having had such manifestations as he above narrates occur in his presence, he does not comprehend the spiritual theory in explanation of the phenomena. He is fully conscious that these things do take place, and equally so that he does not produce them, for the very good reason that it would be impossible for him to do so. Certainly there can be no trickery here; no imitation of the sounds of ship carpenters at a launch, made with a foot—the great Cambridge solution—or by any unconscious pressure of the hands, the equally astounding scientific theory of Faraday, for neither hand nor foot was within six feet of the moving table.

In reply to the inquiry whether Spiritualism may not be explained on philosophical principles, we would say, it can. The same general laws that govern Franklin's lightning, Newton's gravitation, and Fulton's application of steam-power, govern the events of Spiritualism. At the time of these discoveries these governing qualities were not known, at least not laid down in the books, and the discovered blessings were near being lost on that account. And so it is with Spiritualism now. There is no law, no rule of science, known at Cambridge or elsewhere that would evolve such facts, and so these skeptics seek to destroy the facts. But their efforts are as impotent as their brethren of the past, and Spiritualism will live through all their efforts to put it out of existence, and the philosophy that governs it will eventually be made known.

***

Learning of the private sittings at Mr. Nutter's residence, we visited Amesbury at that early day in order to verify, if possible, the statements which had been given us, and were invited to attend a séance. There were present only three persons besides ourself: the medium, a Mrs. Plummer and Mr. David Balch. Upon this occasion we took the position an honest skeptic would have assumed.

We first asked Mr. Nutter if the occult power which controlled would respond to any particular question we might propound? He answered in the affirmative. Secondly, would it be in order that no person touch the table we were sitting at while the manifestations were going on? "It would be in order," he replied. And, thirdly, "Will each person sit so far from the table that we can pass between it and them?" He had no objection to this, he said. After going through these preliminaries we took our seat. We make this statement because skeptics have always contended that it is an indispensable requisite that the hands of the medium and visitors rest upon the table which, unbelievers have good reason to declare, is a very suspicious circumstance.

We then asked this question: "If there is any invisible intelligence present that hears what we say, will it have the kindness to tip the table up at an angle of forty-five degrees toward ourself thirteen times—then pause for a moment and tip it toward the medium, opposite us, three times only?"

The feat was accomplished, as had been requested by us—when other manifestations of spirit-power followed—perfectly satisfying us that an invisible intelligence was present and heard our questions. To our mind any other hypothesis was then, and is now, out of the question.

The Barcelona Convention.

Our Paris correspondent, Henry Lacroix, in the course of an interesting letter dated Sept. 15th, which we shall print next week, says:

"Mr. Leymarie writes from Barcelona, under date of the 11th inst., that the Spiritual Congress had its first meeting on the 8th, as advertised, at 8:30 P. M. The large and beautiful hall used on the occasion was hung with flags of every country, and appropriate mottoes, and it was filled with two thousand persons. The leading promoters wished to elect Mr. Leymarie as President, but this gentleman suggested that four Presidents be named instead: Viscount Torrès-Solanot and Mr. Huebles, of Madrid—as representatives of Spain—Dr. Hoffman, for Italy, and Mr. Leymarie for France, which was carried. Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Vivès, Da Ona (from Cuba), San Benito. Prof. Chiaïa, and his family, from Naples, were present. The press was represented, and there were four stenographers. Mr. Leymarie acted as Chairman on the first and second day, Saturday and Sunday, and gave a history of Spiritualism and of Allan Kardec, in French, which was generally understood and applauded. Deputy Huebles next delivered a long and eloquent oration, in the Castilian idiom, which is that of the locality and Province. A lawyer, whose name is not mentioned, from Madrid, glorified the philosophy, and its able expounder, Kardec. Mr. Moreno Acosta gave an address in the Aragonese idiom. A numerous list of adherents from foreign parts, and telegrams were read."

Testimonial to Mrs. Richmond.

We are informed that the many friends of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, in Chicago, arranged a cordial "welcome home" reception to this earnest worker in the spiritual field, which took place on Monday, Sept. 8th, at 6:30 P. M., immediately on Mr. and Mrs. Richmond's arrival from Cincinnati, O. W. J. Colville and many other well-known people were present. An account of the proceedings must be delayed till another issue. Mrs. Richmond has had great success in Cincinnati.

☞ As was stated in last week's BANNER, W. J. Colville will speak in Berkeley Hall, Boston, on Sunday, Oct. 7th, at 3 P. M. He informs us that the subject of his lecture will be: "The Outlook for Spiritual Freedom, East and West, at Home and Abroad."

Prayers for the Dead.

A correspondent having sent in the following question for answer at the Banner of Light Free Circle, the following reply was given by the guides of Miss M. T. Shelhamer through her organism, and is here printed in advance, that the ideas of the spirit may reach the world of readers while the occasion which called them forth is yet fresh in the public memory:

QUES.—In the Catholic churches throughout the entire world, an encyclical from Pope Leo XIII. was read at all the masses, announcing that on Sunday, Sept. 30th, all the masses on that day would be offered up for the repose of the souls in purgatory. This was done as a fitting close to the sacerdotal jubilee of His Holiness Pope Leo. Your correspondent, without doubting the sincerity of the Catholics in this special matter, is desirous of knowing, direct from the spirit-world, whether there is any truth in the statement made that the souls of those who have passed on will be benefited by the said prayers? LIBERAL.

***

ANS.—Without entering into a discussion of the right of the Catholic Church and its potentates to dictate to any number of people what shall be done in a certain direction, or concerning the religious ceremonials of said people, we may perhaps for a moment consider the efficacy of prayer, in a general sense.

Thoughts are substantial things; they are the weapons of the mind, or of the spirit, if you will, and may be exerted for good or for evil. A large number of people, exercising their minds in a given direction, will undoubtedly create a positive force or will-power, which will extend out into the atmosphere, making its way felt effectively for good or for evil. A number of persons, uniting in sincere prayer for any desired end, will undoubtedly carry with their thought a psychological power, which must make an impress upon the object or the person brought under consideration. Let a number of persons unite sincerely and honestly in offering up prayer for the repose of any friend or spirit, or any number of friends or spirits, for their happiness and peace, and unquestionably those spirits who are the object of the earnest prayer will feel an influence coming to their lives, one perchance of helpfulness and of peace. This influence, strong in magnetic power, swayed by the law of psychological association, will doubtless bear with it a blessing to those who are petitioned for; they may feel themselves inspired, or stimulated within their own souls, to make an effort to rise above any unhappy condition in which they may be placed, and to work out into the light, even though they are surrounded by darkness.

It is true that every soul must work out its own salvation, every spirit must atone for its own misdeeds, must make reparation for the wrong which it has committed. If a soul is plunged in darkness, is depressed by unhappy conditions, he must make self-effort to rise above those surroundings, to grow out of the unpleasant conditions, and put forth endeavors to work for others, to forget self and selfishness in the desire and effort to bless his kind. By doing this, a spirit must stamp unhappiness beneath him, and rise to a condition of peace and prosperity, in whatsoever department of life he may be found.

But it is also true that a spirit, either in the higher life, in the lower worlds of spirit-sensation and experience, or in this mortal world which you inhabit, is and may be assisted by the kind wishes, the helpful offices, the sympathy, affection, or prayers of his friends; therefore, when the earthly friends of a spirit unite in sending forth their petitions for his advancement, for his elevation, spiritually and mentally, that soul must be blessed, for he feels a stimulating power coming from the hearts of his friends, catches the magnetic sympathy which they afford him, and is assisted in consequence.

The Catholic Church recognizes a great truth, and a great psychological law, in the acknowledgment that souls in purgatory, or in a state of unhappiness, may be assisted by the prayers of their mortal friends.

These petitions, these earnest, heartfelt, sincere desires of loving souls on earth to help their friends, will outwork a vast and beneficial result. There is no doubt in our mind but what there are spirits who have been held in bondage because of the power of old superstitions and creeds, fixed upon their minds, that they have been benefited through the tender sympathy which has come to them from earthly life, passing beyond the grave, rising above the conditions of death and making its way into the spirit-world, even to the very hearts of those for whom the prayers were sent up.

How the Work Goes On!

The unseen intelligences who have in charge the advancement of the New Dispensation among men, are silently accomplishing results in the churches which will some day astonish creedists and Spiritualists alike. The following, from the Oakland (Cal.) Tribune of the 15th ult., is an illustration of what is going on everywhere within the lines of the evangelical believers:

A young widow lady of this city, in conversation with a Tribune reporter a few days since, said she had received frequent visits from her husband, who died two years ago—that he fully materialized, and while sitting in a chair near her, talked and acted just as he used to. "There can be no mistake," she said, "about this; but you must not mention it in connection with my name, as it might make me a great deal of trouble. I am a member of the Presbyterian church here, and wish to remain so. But if it were known that I had become a believer in Spiritualism and was having séances in my house, there is so much prejudice against it that I would have to suffer." The lady would not release the reporter till he had explicitly promised not to make any such use of what she had told him as to compromise her in her church relations. Mentioning the circumstances, but not the name, to one of our city pastors a few days after, he said: "I am not at all surprised, for I have reason to believe that there are many secret Spiritualists among our church members. They are very quiet about it, though, fearing to lose caste."

To Inquirers.

☞ As numerous letters are often directed to this office from distant points inquiring as to who are the best mediums to apply to for spiritual information, we take this method of replying to all such that, while we believe the mediums advertising in our columns are reliable, yet we cannot recommend any special medium to any particular person, as the medium who may satisfy one investigator may not be able to meet the requirements of another. It is best, therefore, for each investigator to visit such mediums as he may believe possess the power of bringing him into communication with the spirit-world, and thus judge of their claims for himself.

The Golden Gate

Has removed from the quarters it has occupied the last three years, to elegant and capacious apartments on Market street, where, in connection with its office, a convenient reading and library room is being fitted up, free for all. The new address of the Golden Gate is Room 43, Flood Building, San Francisco, Cal.

☞ The spirit-intelligence at our Free Circle meeting, as reported on the sixth page, said that the time was coming when what is known as the "Dark Continent" would be open to civilization and the march of human progress. Other interesting questions were clearly answered. A question was also answered which will no doubt interest mediums in general.

SARATOGA, N. Y.—A statement of the recent sad affliction of President Mills, and of the action of the society regarding his bereavement, has been sent us by E. J. Huling, and will appear next week.

Children's Progressive Lyceum No. 1.

We wish to impress upon the mind of the readers of THE BANNER the vast amount of labor that is being expended by Mrs. William S. Butler in behalf of the Children's Progressive Lyceum No. 1, as well as to urge upon all to come forward and assist her and those who are striving to carry it on, and thus show by their deeds that they are true friends of the school and the good work it is doing.

It is a first-class Lyceum, productive of inestimable benefit, if Spiritualists will only encourage it by their attendance and liberal support. In this particular there is plenty of room for progress. Every one is aware that there is a heavy expense incurred to properly conduct this work, and the question that arises is, how shall this expense be defrayed? Its managers are ready to receive and will gratefully accept and acknowledge any subscription.

The success of the Fair held last winter has encouraged the workers in the Lyceum to have another one the coming winter. By the purchase of tickets, which will be placed within the reach of all, the present prosperity of the Lyceum will become more firmly established, and appeal to all—Spiritualists or otherwise—is made to lend a helping hand.

Parents, why not devote a little of your time and attention to the education of your children, while their minds are easily impressed? It will do away with the necessity of finally uprooting from their minds a vast amount of prejudice and superstition.

By working together in harmony and unison this object will be attained, and in the end be productive of great success.

At the session to be held Sunday A. M., Oct. 7th, in the Paine Building, the Brockton (Mass. Lyceum will be present—promising to bring one hundred of its members on this friendly pilgrimage.

Indiana Spiritualists.

The Indiana Association of Spiritualists met at Westerfield's Hall, Anderson, Ind., Sept. 13th, at 10 A. M. Dr. Beck, President, being absent on account of sickness, Mrs. Caroline Hilligoss, Vice-President, called the meeting to order, and delivered an address of welcome.

The attendance was good. The speakers from a distance were W. H. Blair and Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, of Chicago; Mrs. Dr. Buell and Ada L. Ballou, of San Francisco, Cal. The addresses they delivered were unusually fine, and —says the Anderson Herald of the 21st ult., in a kindly notice of the event—"attracted the attention of many of our best citizens."

The meetings were very successful spiritually and financially, so much so that the organization of the State Society was effected and articles filed incorporating the Association under the laws of the State. Forty-nine new members were added to the roll and two missionaries will be placed in the field.

The Association will meet in Anderson in October, 1889, and will hold its quarterly meetings throughout the State during the year, and at such times and places as the trustees may agree upon. A special effort will be made to spread the truth as it is taught by the Association. Great progress was reported from different sections by representatives, and the members feel that success is assured.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Dr. J. W. Westerfield, of Anderson, President; for Vice Presidents, Abram Goodykoontz, of Grant County, and Mr. Brown, of Pennville, Ind.; Secretary, Mrs. Caroline Hilligoss, of Anderson; Treasurer, Dr. G. N. Hilligoss, of Anderson. Six trustees were also elected who have general supervision of the matters of the Association.

Both Sides Moving.

Voters in Massachusetts should at this time look well at the list of candidates for members of the incoming Legislature, and see to it that no one receives their suffrage who would be willing to vote for any new enactment going to deprive them of their constitutional right to employ any practitioner or mode of eradicating disease that in their better judgment they desire to employ.

It is rumored that a movement is on foot to request the coming Legislature to enact a stringent law which will cut off from practice all individuals who have not a regular diploma from certain colleges that will be named in the enactment.

It is also rumored that the people are moving in rejoinder in the matter, and have already circulated a petition (which has been largely signed) in remonstrance against any such action, demanding that the right to employ or be employed in matters remedial be left as it is—wrong or ignorant acts remaining as now under the penalties of the present enactments, for the punishment of malpractice, etc., which are sufficient, if enforced. A request is also made of the authorities, in this same instrument, that "doctors' Latin" be abandoned, and all prescriptions be hereafter written in English.

Vermont Convention.

We are in receipt of the official call for the Twenty-first Annual Convention of the Vermont State Spiritualist Association, to be held at the Waterbury Hotel, in that place, Oct. 19th, 20th and 21st. The notice will appear in full, next week. Meanwhile those desiring further information can address Luther O. Weeks, Sec'y, Proctorsville, Vt.

☞ The election of the School Boards occurring at the time of the annual city elections in December, the feeling visibly deepens on all sides as the time approaches, making itself markedly manifest in the active preparations for the event. At the time of writing, Oct. 2d, over twenty-five thousand women have registered in this city alone; while Cambridge, Somerville, and other points, are equally stirred. THE BANNER has always contended for the entire secularization of the Public School system, and is consequently pained to note that so far from steps being taken in this direction, events are molding the present controversy into a direct issue at the polls between the adherents of the two great religious systems of our day. Woman Suffrage practically and largely exercised as a new element—to this extent—in Massachusetts politics, enters the arena, therefore, under a portentous and frowning sky, and the after result "no man knoweth."

☞ We see, by a notice to that effect in the Boston Investiagtor, that Mr. L. K. Washburn —a friend of its editor—has compiled the writings of Bro. Horace Seaver, and that a new book containing the best thought of our contemporary will soon be issued from the press of Mr. J. P. Mendum. It will contain half a century's experiences in Liberal journalism, as Mr. S. has written upon a great variety of subjects, such as religion, politics, science, Spiritualism, Materialism, etc., etc. The compiler, it is said, has selected some of the best of Bro. Seaver's editorials, to preserve in book-form. The book, we are assured, will be handsomely printed, well bound, and sold at the low price of $1.50 (including postage), by the Investigator Publishing House.

PROFIT-SHARING.

BY GEORGE A. BACON.

Akin to the pleasure we felt when in our childhood's literature, by the magical touch of sympathy, the traveler whose experiences became ours, whose trials we shared in common, in whose journeyings we were as interested as though present in person, when this brother companion of ours chanced to meet with a welcome spring of bubbling water in some desert spot or out-of-the-way place—was the feeling with which we read in the papers the other day of the case of profit-sharing by a leading firm in Minnesota.

Amid so many undesirable items one who reads the daily press constantly encounters, it is a positive luxury to meet with one of this exceptional character. It stands out like a bright, genial, golden day, in the midst of a long spell of wet weather. How we wish for many more just like them!

The case in point is this: The Messrs. Pillsbury & Co., extensive mill-owners of Minneapolis, Minn., four years ago, were invited by other flour-millers in the northwest to form a combination to reduce the wages of all mill-workmen; but instead of complying with this amiable proposition of human wolves, they, not only refused to engage in such a scheme, no necessity in their opinion existing for it, but they took occasion to notify their several hundred employés of their intention to not only pay the then existing wages, but also to divide the year's profits with their men; which they did to the amount of $60,000 that same year.

The two years following no extra amount was distributed, but this year—only a few days ago in fact—the workmen were the happy recipients of $40,000 shared pro-rata among them.

An instance like this of the wise application of practical partnership on the part of an extensive firm with their employes, so worthy of imitation, enriches the entire community more by its exhibition of noble manhood, the recognition of reciprocal relations, of mutual interdependence between employer and employé, than by the distribution of never so many dollars.

If this ring of the true metal were oftener and everywhere heard, the wage-worker's self respect would be vastly increased, the true dignity of labor be more properly appreciated, and the antagonisms between representative capital and labor, which now so disgrace the civilization of the age, would largely disappear. The industrial question, the most potent factor in our political economy, would adjust itself to a more humane and equitable basis, resulting in a vastly improved social atmosphere, and in place of bitter bickerings mutual blessings would abound—all of which is a consummation devoutly to be desired.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27th, 1888.

W. J. Colville's

Work in Chicago ended on Sunday, Sept. 30th, when three very large audiences assembled in Martine's Hall, 55 South Ada street. The subject of discourse in the morning was "Destiny"; the afternoon was devoted to replies to many deeply interesting questions. The evening lecture was one of particular interest on "Occupations in Spirit-Life." Mr. J. C. Davis skillfully presided at the organ, and there was some fine singing. Mrs. Hoffman, and other ladies, made the rostrum truly lovely with floral offerings.

Mr. Colville left Chicago Monday night, Oct. 1st, for Cleveland, O., where he was announced for two lectures, Oct. 2d and 3d. His next visit was to be at Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was billed for Oct. 4th and 5th. He arrives in Boston early Sunday morning, Oct. 7th, and commences his work in this city in Berkeley Hall. He is open for outside engagements on Tuesday. Address care of this office.

THE TWO WINE THEORY.—How many, says an exchange, know what the "two wine theory" is? How many have the smallest idea as to whether it concerns itself about a matter theological, political, ethical or dietary? Not more than one in four knows anything of it, and yet, in certain narrow circles, the contest concerning it has raged fiercely for years. It originated, says Rev. Dr. Jewett, editor of the pamphlet bearing the title, "The Two Wine Theory," in the United States, about fifty years ago.

Stripped of all verbiage, it is simply an idealism that in biblical and classical times there were two sorts of wine: one—that of which the abuse is condemned in certain passages of scripture—being like the fermented liquor called wine now-a-days; the other, a mysterious substance ranging anywhere from a fluid to a jelly in consistency, unfermented, perfectly harmless, made from grapes by some forgotten process, and preserved by methods of which the secret is now lost, but always innocent as milk.

Thus do modern Christians quarrel over the mere husk of observance, while the true spirit of the communion service—i. e., that it was instituted in advance as an act in his memory by an inspired human brother who was about to give up his life for the good of humanity—is lost to themselves and the world.

☞ Mr. J. Milton Young, who has so ably represented the BANNER OF LIGHT for several seasons at Lake Pleasant, is now at his home, No. 9 6th street, Haverhill, Mass., where he can be addressed for the present.

☞ William G. Wood writes from Providence, R. I., that he "recently attended a seance at Mrs. Allen's, and was well pleased to witness the unquestionably genuine manifestations there, as were others."

☞ Mrs. J. C. Ewell, after three months' absence, has returned to Boston. When she opens rooms for the exercise of her spiritual gifts an advertisement will appear in the BANNER OF LIGHT.

☞ Any of our readers desiring a well-made Piano at a reasonable price will find it to their interest to examine into the merits of the old and reliable Emerson Piano.

College of Therapeutics.

Buchanan's Journal of Man for October announces that the eleventh session of the College of Therapeutics will be postponed to next May, to give Dr. Buchanan time to prepare the enlarged edition of Therapeutic Sarcognomy. Many who were disappointed in obtaining copies of the first edition of this work because it was sold out so promptly, will be glad to learn that the author expects to have the second edition ready for the press next winter. It will be greatly enlarged so as to cover the whole ground of non-medical treatment by magnetism and electricity, as well as the philosophy of mind cure and spiritual therapeutics, and give the fullest scientific demonstration of the doctrines which are destined to revolutionize the medical profession while explaining many of the mysteries of Psychic Science.

List of Lecturers.

THE BANNER publishes from time to time a list of Spiritualist Lecturers with their post-office addresses attached without charge, and in consideration of our so doing it seems to us they should be more particular than many of them are in notifying this office when they change their localities, or when they retire from active labors in the field. To be useful the List should be reliable. Attention to this request is earnestly desired, and should be attended to at once.

THE BANNER OF LIGHT, published in Boston, completed its sixty-third volume with its last issue, and will commence its sixty-fourth volume next week with important improvements. This paper is devoted to the advocacy of Spiritualism, and during the long period of its existence has accomplished much good, and many who had no belief in a God or a life hereafter have been brought to a change of view by its perusal. It appears weekly, at $3.00 per year. Colby & Rich are the proprietors; Isaac B. Rich, Business Manager, Luther Colby, Editor, and John W. Day, Assistant Editor.—Deutsche Zeitung, Charleston, S. C., Sept. 10th, 1888.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate, a Brain and Nerve Food, for lecturers, teachers, students, clergymen, lawyers, and brain-workers generally.

☞ WRITING PLANCHETTES for sale by Colby & Rich. Price 60 cents.

"Doctoring Old Time."

A STRIKING PICTURE—A REVIVAL OF OLD TIME SIMPLICITIES.

In one of Harper's issues is given a very fine illustration of Roberts's celebrated painting, known as "Doctoring Old Time." It represents a typical old-timer, with his bellows, blowing the dust from an ancient clock, with its cords and weights carefully secured. One of these clocks in this generation is appreciated only as a rare relic.

The suggestive name, "Doctoring Old Time," brings to our mind another version of the title, used for another purpose—"Old Time Doctoring."

We learn, through a reliable source, that one of the enterprising proprietary medicine firms of the country has been for years investigating the formulas and medical preparations used in the beginning of this century, and even before, with a view of ascertaining why people in our great grandfathers' time enjoyed a health and physical vigor so seldom found in the present generation. They now think they have secured the secret or secrets. They find that the prevailing opinion that then existed, that "Nature has a remedy for every existing disorder," was true, and acting under this belief, our grandparents used the common herbs and plants. Continual trespass upon the forest domain has made these herbs less abundant, and has driven them further from civilization, until they have been discarded as remedial agents, because of the difficulty of obtaining them.

H. H. Warner, proprietor of Warner's safe cure and founder of the Warner observatory, Rochester, N. Y., has been pressing investigations in this direction into the annals of old family histories, until he has secured some very valuable formulas, from which his firm is now preparing medicines, to be sold by all druggists.

They will, we learn, be known under the general title of "Warner's Log Cabin remedies." Among these medicines will be a "sarsaparilla," for the blood and liver, "Log Cabin hops and buchu remedy," for the stomach, etc., "Log Cabin cough and consumption remedy," "Log Cabin hair tonic," "Log Cabin extract," for internal and external use, and an old valuable discovery for catarrh, called "Log Cabin rose cream." Among the list is also a "Log Cabin plaster," and a "Log Cabin liver pill."

From the number of remedies, it will be seen that they do not propose to cure all diseases with one preparation. It is believed by many that with these remedies a new era is to dawn upon suffering humanity, and that the close of the nineteenth century will see these roots and herbs, as compounded under the title of Warner's Log Cabin remedies, as popular as they were at its beginning. Although they come in the form of proprietary medicines, yet they will be none the less welcome, for suffering humanity has become tired of modern doctoring, and the public has great confidence in any remedies put up by the firm of which H. H. Warner is the head. The people have become suspicious of the effects of doctoring with poisonous drugs. Few realize the injurious effects following the prescriptions of many modern physicians. These effects of poisonous drugs, already prominent, will become more pronounced in coming generations. Therefore we can cordially wish the old-fashioned new remedies the best of success.

Movements of Mediums & Lecturers.

Notices under this heading must reach this office by Monday's mail to insure insertion the same week.

G. W. Kates and wife lectured and gave tests in Lawrence, Kan., Sunday, Sept. 23d, to large audiences. They hold meetings in Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7th. Their permanent address is Greenville, Darke Co., O.

J. Frank Baxter was well appreciated in Brockton by the Spiritualists and others who heard him on Wednesday evening, Sept. 26th. He closed his present engagement with Lynn on Sunday, Sept. 30th, and will lecture in Bridgeport, Ct., each Sunday afternoon and evening during the present month.

Mattie E. Hull has been engaged to attend the Fairmount, Kan., annual meeting, which commences Oct. 12th, and continues three days. She will be present through the entire meeting.

Mrs. Carrie C. Van Duzee will commence a month's engagement in Watertown, N. Y., the middle of October. Parties residing in that vicinity and wishing her services can address her at 12 Brunson street, as above.

Miss Jennie B. Hagan will make week evening engagements for October, November and December. She has all her Sundays engaged for 1888 and 1889, with the exception of July and August, and Sept. 15th, 1889. Miss Hagan will answer calls to lecture week evenings in parlors, etc. She speaks Sundays during October in Worcester, Mass., and will be at South Framingham a part of the week days of each month.

A. E. Laurene of Brooklyn will speak before the People's Spiritual Meeting, Columbia Hall, 878 6th Avenue, New York City, Sunday evening, Oct. 7th, subject: "Mesmerism the Forerunner of Spiritualism." Seats free.

A. E. Tisdale will give a course of nine lectures in Chatham Port, Mass., commencing Oct. 5th. He will speak in Portland, Me., the last two Sundays in October; in Troy, N. Y., the month of November; and Bridgeport, Conn., for the month of December. Societies desiring his services can address him at Merrick, Mass.

Dr. A. H. Richardson, as will be seen by his card in another column, has returned from an extended visit to the Spiritualist camps to his old residence, the Waverly House, Charlestown District.

Mrs. Christie B. Bliss will shortly take a trip to Ohio, and purposes passing through Cincinnati, probably remaining there for a few weeks, and will hold seances in that city.

Mr. W. J. Colville, we are informed, will speak in Chelsea in the evening of Sunday, Oct. 7th, at 7:30.

Mrs. T. J. Lewis, the spirit-test medium and psychometrist, filled a successful engagement Sunday, Sept. 30th, at Grand Army Hall, Chelsea, Mass., and is ready to make further engagements Sundays and week days for the fall and winter months. Her address is 205 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Mass.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Susie Willis Fletcher is quite ill at her residence in Boston.

J. J. Morse is engaged by the Young People's Progressive Society of Chicago during the month of October. Mrs. Ada H. Foye has just closed a very successful engagement with the same organization.

Special Notice.

The date of the expiration of every subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT is plainly marked on each address. The paper is discontinued at that time unless the subscription is previously renewed. Subscribers intending to renew will escape inconvenience by sending in the money for renewal before the expiration of their present subscription. It is the earnest desire of the publishers to give the BANNER OF LIGHT the extensive circulation to which its merits entitle it, and they therefore look with confidence to the friends of the paper throughout the world to assist them in their important work.

COLBY & RICH, Publishers.

For Sale at this Office:

THE TWO WORLDS: A journal devoted to Spiritualism, Occult Science, Ethics, Religion and Reform. Published weekly at Manchester, England. Single copy, 5 cents.

HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH. A Progressive Family Health Magazine. Published monthly in New York. Single copy, 10 cents.

BUCHANAN'S JOURNAL OF MAN. Monthly. Published at Boston. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE SOUL. Monthly. Published in Boston. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE CARRIER DOVE. Illustrated. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BIZARRE. NOTES AND QUERIES, with Answers in all Departments of Literature. Monthly. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE OLIVE BRANCH: Utica, N. Y. Monthly. Price 10 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Published weekly at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE NEW THOUGHT. Published weekly in Des Moines, Iowa. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE WATCHMAN. Published monthly at Fort Wayne, Ind. Single copies, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH-SEEKER. Published weekly in New York. Single copy, 8 cents.

THE MIND-CURE AND SCIENCE OF LIFE. Monthly. Published at Chicago, Ill. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE. Published monthly in New York. Price 10 cents.

THE THEOSOPHIST. Monthly. Published in India. Single copy, 50 cents.

THE GOLDEN GATE. Published weekly in San Francisco, Cal. Single copy, 10 cents.

THE BETTER WAY. A Spiritualistic weekly journal. Published in Cincinnati, O. Single copy, 5 cents.

THE EASTERN STAR. Published fortnightly at Bucksport, Maine. Single copies, 3 cents.

THE PATH. A Monthly Magazine, devoted to Universal Brotherhood, Theosophy in America, and Aryan Philosophy. Single copy, 20 cents.

THE ESOTERIC. A Monthly Magazine of Advanced and Practical Esoteric Thought. Published in Boston. Single copy, 15 cents.

MENTAL HEALING. A Monthly Magazine. Published in Boston, Mass. Single copies, 10 cents.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Each line in Agate type, twenty cents for the first and every insertion on the fifth or eighth page, and fifteen cents for each subsequent insertion on the seventh page.

Special Notices forty cents per line, Minion, each insertion.

Business Cards thirty cents per line, Agate, each insertion.

Notices in the editorial columns, large type, leaded matter, fifty cents per line.

Payments in all cases in advance.

☞ Advertisments to be renewed at continued rates must be left at our Office before 12 M. on Saturday, a week in advance of the date whereon they are to appear.

☞ Only small and light cuts will be allowed in the advertising columns. When accepted, our rates for that portion of the advertisement occupied by the cut will be one-half price in excess of the regular rates.

Electrotypes of pure type matter will not be accepted.

The publishers reserve the right to reject any and all electrotypes.

The BANNER OF LIGHT cannot well undertake to vouch for the honesty of its many advertisers. Advertisements which appear fair and honorable upon their face are accepted, and whenever it is made known that dishonest or improper persons are using our advertising columns, they are at once interdicted. We request patrons to notify us promptly in case they discover in our columns advertisements of parties whom they have proved to be dishonorable or unworthy of confidence.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Dr. F. L. H. Willis may be addressed as usual for the summer Glenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
O6 13w*

Andrew Jackson Davis, Seer into the causes and natural cure of disease. Send for information to his office, 63 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass. 13w* O6

H. A. Kersey, No. 3 Bigg Market, Newcastle-on-Tyne, will act as agent in England for the BANNER OF LIGHT and the publications of Colby & Rich during the absence of J. J. Morse.

To Foreign Subscribers the subscription price of the BANNER OF LIGHT is $3.50 per year, or $1.75 per six months. It will be sent at the price named above to any foreign county embraced in the Universal Postal Union.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

EMERSON PIANO.

The finest medium-priced Piano in the market. Every Piano fully warranted. Send for Catalogue.

Emerson Piano Co.

Warerooms 146A, Tremont Street, Boston.
O6 3m

MRS. WEBB,

The Wonderful Astrologist and Life-Reader, from New York,

79 Rutland Street, Short Time Only.

Sittings $2.00. 1f S29

COLVILLE AT BERKELEY HALL, 3 P. M., Sunday.
O6 3w

C. E. WATKINS,

107 Falmouth Street, Boston.

MEDIUM FOR

Independent Slate-Writing and Occult Telegraphy.

Diagnosing Disease a specialty.
O6 Take Back Bay Cars. 1f

DR. AMELIA WHITE,

MEDICAL, Test and Business Sittings. Hours from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. Circles Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings, also Sunday, 11 A. M. 10 Isabella street, Suite 2.
O6 1w*

MRS. J. LIND,

MEDIUM for Tests and Business. Psychometric Readings a specialty. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. 310 Shawmut Avenue, Boston.
O6 1w*

MRS. L. M. VIERGE,

MASSAGE and Baths, 282 Columbus Avenue, Suite 11, Boston. Patients accommodated with rooms. 4w* O6

DR. J. C. STREET,

181 TREMONT STREET, BOSTON, MASS., near Boylston street, opposite the Common. Take Elevator. Sittings by appointment. Office hours 1 to 4 P. M. Reception Room, No. 13. is13w O6

DES MOINES, IOWA

B. F. Poole, Clinton, Iowa

Dear Sir I received your Melted Pebble Spectacles, and on using them I found them to be simply perfection.
O6 4w Very respectfully, MRS. MATTIE E. HULL

INDEPENDENT CLAIRVOYANCE, 3 P. M., Sunday, Berkeley Hall. 1w O6

MISS CONRADSEN, Healing Medium. Massage Treatment. 6 Dover street, near Tremont street.
O6 1w*

DR. A. H. RICHARDSON, Magnetic Healer, Waverly House, Charlestown. O6

PRICE REDUCED!

The Ghosts,

AND OTHER LECTURES.

BY ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

The Idea of Immortality, that like a sea has ebbed and flowed in the human heart, with its countless waves of hope and fear, beating against the shores and rocks of time and fate, was not born of any book, nor of any creed, nor of any religion. It was born of human affection, and it will continue to ebb and flow beneath the mists and clouds of doubt and darkness as long as Love kisses the lips of Death.

This work treats upon various subjects, viz: The Liberty of Man, Woman and Child. Liberty sustains the same relation to Mind that Space does to Matter. The Declaration of Independence. One Hundred Years Ago our Fathers Retired the Gods from Politics. About Farming in Illinois. To Plow is to Pray; to Plant is to Prophesy, and the Harvest Answers and Fulfills. The Grant Banquet. Twelfth Toast—Response by Robert G. Ingersoll, November, 1879. Rev. Alexander Clark. The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream. Extract from a Speech delivered at the Soldiers' Reunion at Indianapolis, Sept. 21, 1876.

This work is elegantly bound and printed in clear, bold type, on heavy, tinted paper.

The author takes the ground that man belongs to himself, and that each individual should at all hazards maintain his intellectual freedom.

Cloth. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Woman's Book: A Life's Issues of Love in All Its Phases.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

This very extraordinary work on Love, Man, Woman, the Laws of Affection and Marriage, is subject to no description, critique or synopsis that can give an adequate idea of the author's peculiar genius and style of treating upon Love, Woman, Courtship, Marriage, the Laws of Happiness, the Family, Vampyrism, Love-Starvation, Affectional Health, the Grand Secret, Magnetic Leechings, Good and Evil Effects of Varied Magnetisms, the Infernalisms of Modern (so-called) "Philosophies." A book for every man, but especially every woman in the land.

Cloth. Price $2.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

W. J. COLVILLE

(Under the Auspices of the Independent Club)

SPEAKS IN

BERKELEY HALL

Sundays of October,

At 8 P. M.

S29 1tf

THE NEW CRISIS. By GEO. W. BELL. In his preface the author says: "We have reached a crisis in our national development. We have rushed to this pinnacle of greatness with a mad impetuosity unparalleled in the annals of the world; ignoring social adjustments, essential to the symmetry and stability of a state.

My purpose being to prove the existence of a class-conspiracy, the design of which is to subvert the principles of our government by a monopoly of all wealth, I have discussed the merits of no measure further than to prove the centralizing tendencies."

Cloth, pp. 350. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

TO STOUT PEOPLE.

Distant Patients Successfully Treated.

Obesity is fatty degeneration. This disease is not only cured, but permanently so, by new, rational means. No dieting. No failure in a single instance. Send stamp for full particulars to DR. EDITH BERDAN, 113 Ellison street, Paterson, New Jersey.

Thin People increased in weight and flesh by regulation of the nerves of nutrition. Vegetable Remedies Can be sent by mail. Address DR. BERDAN, (formerly Dr. Edith Hale.) Au25

RETURN OF MR. COLVILLE, BERKELEY HALL, 3 P. M., Sunday.
O6 1w

The Sower.

"Behold, a Sower went forth to Sow."

A RADICAL Reform Semi-Monthly Journal; an earnest advocate for the equal rights of Man and Woman. Subscription $1.00 per annum. Sample copy free. Address "THE SOWER," Elmwood Place,
O5 cowtf Hamilton Co., Ohio.

AN ANALYSIS OF MIND-CURE:

Viewed from a Physiological Standpoint.

BY DR. HELEN DENSMORE.

This is a rational consideration of the subject. It corrects some of the pretensions of self-styled leaders in the "new science," and takes a more common-sense view of Mind-Cure than a majority of writers upon the subject seem disposed to entertain.

Pamphlet, pp. 13. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Consolation and Other Poems.

BY ABRAHAM PERRY MILLER.

Consolation; The Ghost; The New Annus Mirabilis; Minnesota.

POEMS IN THE RELIGIOUS VEIN.—Resurrection; Our Ships; Retrospection; A Dream; Come Close; Life; Humiliation; God's Garden; Ecstasy; The Race; The Doctor's Message; Hortatus; Darkness and Doubt; Very Good; My Self; On the Death of Children; Old Ann.

POEMS OF THE WAR PERIOD.—War; Equality; The Battle of the Storms; On the Bar; The Soldier's Last Look; Unknown; The Doomed City; The Masked Batteries; Sherman's Host; Welcome Home.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Mother; Homeless; Heaven and Hell; In Memoriam; The Army of Types; Lines Written After the Franco-Austrian War; Brotherhood; The Dreamer; The Flirt; Garibaldi; Home-Sick; On the Heights; The Whistler; Hope and Duty; Young Love; The Phantom Sawyer; Apostrophe to a Comet; Middle Age; Worship; Two Boxes; Our Life; At the Party; Earth and Spring; Drifting; Girl Love; At the Concert; Aurora Borealis; Song of the Truth Seekers; Song of the All-Parent.

Cloth, gilt top. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

GIRARD'S WILL

AND

GIRARD COLLEGE THEOLOGY.

BY RICHARD B. WESTBROOK, D. D., LL. D.,

Author of "Marriage and Divorce," "The Bible—Whence and What," "Man—Whence and Whither," etc.

The author in his preface says: "The publication of this book is a matter of conscience. The author, as a theologist and lawyer, thoroughly believes that the present system of religious instruction in Girard College is in palpable violation of the conditions of the Will of the Founder, and not well adapted to promote 'the purest principles of morality.'"

The chapters which make up this book were originally delivered, in substance, as popular lectures in the last spring course of The Westbrook Free Lectureship in the hall of our City Institute, and attracted considerable public attention at that time. The lectures were delivered before different audiences, and hence certain points were purposely repeated."

12mo, pp. 183. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE

Eleusinian

AND

Bacchic Mysteries.

A Dissertation, by Thomas Taylor, Translator of "Plato," "Plotinus," "Porphyry," "Iamblichus," "Proclus," "Aristotle," etc. Third edition. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, Emendations and Glossary, by Alexander Wilder, M. D.

In the Mysteries, the dramas acted at Eleusis and other sacred places, were embodied the deepest thoughts and religious sentiment of the archaic world. The men and women initiated into them were believed to be thenceforth under special care of God, for this life and the future. So holy and interior were the doctrines considered which had been learned in the Sanctuary from the two tablets of stone, that it was not lawful to utter them to another.

The reader desirous of getting the kernel of the doctrines of Plato, Orpheus, Eumolpus, and their fellow-laborers, as well as of the Alexandrian Eclectics, will obtain invaluable aid from this treatise.

Cloth, 8vo. Price $3.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

The Record of a Ministering Angel.

BY MRS. MARY J. CLARK.

The ministry of angels is a subject that will always possess a deep interest for serious, thoughtful minds. There is nothing for which the hearts of humanity long with more pathetic yearning than for a resumption of fellowship with the loved and lost. What mother does not long for one sound of the voice of her son who has crossed to the further shore? What would not fathers give for one more smile from their daughters passed all too soon away? And what is more reasonable than to hope that the loved and lost have joined the ranks of the angels, and are busy in tender services for those whom they, having left behind, love still the more? This book is written with the view of stimulating such hopes, of lifting sad hearts out of the darkness of despair into the sunny region of hope and courage and faith.

Cloth, pp. 289. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

In Re Dr. Talmage.

A Synopsis of a Discourse by the Guides of

MRS. R. S. LILLIE.

Delivered in Berkeley Hall, Boston, Sunday Morning, May 6th, 1888, in Answer to the Recent Attack on Modern Spiritualism by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn.

Also Excerpts from a Letter by "Eleanor Kirk."

The above have been published by COLBY & RICH in four-page tract form, and should be extensively circulated.
Price by mail, 5 copies 5 cents; 15 do 10c.; 30 do., 15c.

AN ADVENTURE AMONG THE ROSICRUCIANS.

BY F. HARTMANN, M. D.

This is an account of a dream-visit to a Rosicrucian Monastery, and of the topics expounded by its adept inmates. Among these are the nature and power of Will, Psychic Locomotion, Universal Life, Constitution and Development of Man, the Materialization of Ideas into Forms, the Doctrine of Numbers, of Counterparts, and of Elementals, Organization of Nature and Mind; expediency or otherwise of Theosophical Monasteries; Basic Principles of Alchemy, etc. The book is full of Occult information and suggestions.

12mo, cloth; price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

POEMS AND RHYTHMICAL EXPRESSIONS. By DR. D. AMBROSE DAVIS.

Contents.—Dedicatory; Introductory; Prefatory; Did all Things Come by Chance? Humility Inherited; What Shall My Mission Be? Fraternity; The Prayer of Jesus; Nature's Theology; The Answering Voice; Supernal Guests; The Tiny Raps; Life's School-Rooms; Rural Life; The Mariner's Faith; Acorns and Oaks; The Little Angel Minnewa; The Soul of Beneficence; Soul-Mating; The Ascended William Lloyd Garrison; The Anthem of Nature; We Go Not Out from Nature; Inscrutable Providence; A Kindly Whisper; The Voice I Heard; Never, Never Lost; Tyranny; How Blest I Was in Giving; The Little Guest at Supper; The Lost of Earth Forever in God's Keeping; Leaves; Valedictory; Robert Burns's Nuptials with Highland Mary in Spirit-Life; The Dying Poet.

Cloth, 12mo. Price 75 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STRANGE VISITORS: A Series of Original Papers, embracing Philosophy, Science, Government, Religion, Poetry, Art, Fiction, Satire, Humor, Narrative and Prophecy. By the Spirits of Irving, Willis, Thackeray, Brontë, Richter, Byron, Humboldt, Hawthorne, Wesley, Browning, and others now dwelling in the Spirit-World. By MRS. SUSAN G. HORN.

Among the essays contained in it may be found: Preëxistence and Prophecy, Life and Marriage in the Spirit-Land, Predictions of Earthquakes, Causes of Insanity, Apparitions, The Mormons, Invisible Influences, Locality of the Spirit-World, Drama and Painting there etc., etc., etc.

Cloth, price $1.50; postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH

A BOOK WRITTEN BY THE SPIRITS OF THE SO-CALLED DEAD, WITH THEIR OWN MATERIALIZED HANDS, BY THE PROCESS OF INDEPENDENT SLATE-WRITING THROUGH MRS. LIZZIE S. GREEN AND OTHERS AS MEDIUMS. COMPILED AND ARRANGED BY C. G. HELLEBERG, OF CINCINNATI, OHIO.

This work contains communications from the following exalted spirits: Swedenborg, Washington, Lincoln, Wilberforce, Garrison, Garfield, Horace Greeley, Thomas Paine, O. P. Morton, Polheim, A. P. Willard, Margaret Fuller, Madame Ehrenborg and others.

Cloth, 12mo, with engravings. Price $1.50, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE BOOK OF RELIGIONS, comprising the Views, Creeds, Sentiments or Opinions, of all the principal Religious Sects in the world, particularly of all Christian Denominations in Europe and America; to which are added Church and Missionary Statistics, together with Biographical Sketches. By JOHN HAYWARD, author of the "New England Gazetteer," etc.

This work contains 438 pages, and, as a book of reference, is invaluable.

Cloth, $2.00, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

A ROMAN LAWYER IN JERUSALEM. By W. W. STORY.

The story of Judas Iscariot is here related in a different light from that usually held by theologians.

Paper, 10 cents, postage 1 cent.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

LIFE AND LABOR

IN THE SPIRIT-WORLD:

Being a Description of Localities, Employments, Surroundings, and Conditions in the Spheres.

BY MEMBERS OF THE SPIRIT-BAND OF

MISS M. T. SHELHAMER,

Medium of the Banner of Light Public Free Circle.

When one becomes fully convinced that friends who have passed from existence on earth still live, the questions naturally arise, How do they live, and what are their occupations? The purpose of this book is to answer these inquiries, and, so far as the language of a material life is capable of describing a spiritual one, it does so. These descriptions are not mere theories and surmises of what may exist beyond this state of being, the acceptance of which depends mainly upon the faith of the individual to whom they may be presented, but statements of facts made by those who live that life, and are familiar with the scenes and experiences of which they write.

In one volume of 426 pages, neatly and substantially bound in cloth. Price $1.00, postage 10 cents; full gilt, $1.50, postage free.

An Edition of Life and Labor in the Spirit-World has been issued by COLBY & RICH which is embellished with eight illustrations representing scenes in spirit-life. The titles of the illustrations, which are very suggestive of the scenes portrayed, are as follows:

At Home in the Summer-Land.
Little George and his Spirit-Mother.
Lucy Aiken and her Kind Ministrations.
Beulah, a Spirit Missionary.
Unhappy Spirits. What we Sow we shall Reap.
Fannie Davis Under Spirit Control.
Little Bertie. "For Mamma."
An Excursion to Sunny Island.

The price of the Illustrated Volume, which in all other respects is the same as the edition above advertised, is $1.50, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Materialized Apparitions:

If Not Beings from Another Life, What Are They?

BY E. A. BRACKETT.

This work is in two Parts; the first containing carefully-prepared narratives of the author's interesting observations and experiences in the investigation of the phenomena of Materialization; the second, opinions and theories concerning the same. The investigation appears to have been pursued in a truly scientific spirit, by one possessing more than ordinary qualifications for the purpose, and with unusual facilities—the results being correspondingly positive and overwhelmingly conclusive regarding the reality of the phenomena in question. Aside from its positive testimony, the work affords many valuable suggestions to investigators as to the proper manner of proceeding in order to attain the best results.

The work contains 182 pages, 12mo, and is printed in large type, suitable for readers of advanced age. Cloth, $1.00, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ZÖLLNER.

An Open Letter

TO

PROFESSOR GEORGE S. FULLERTON,

Of the University of Pennsylvania, Member and Secretary of the Seybert Commission for Investigating Modern Spiritualism.

BY C. C. MASSEY,

Of Lincoln's Inn, London, Eng.

Prof. Fullerton having made in his notes appended to the famous Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission certain statements placing Mr. C. C. Massey as a Spiritualist in a rather unenviable position, the latter herein sets the matter right, and in doing so, clearly shows that the Professor had no foundation in truth for what he said. In this connection it may be remarked that Prof. Fullerton has since, in a letter to Mr. Massey, admitted that he was mistaken. Mr. Massey's Letter should be widely circulated, as it completely disproves the charge of Prof. Zollner's disqualifications as an investigator of phenomena at the date of his séances with Dr. Henry Slade.

Pamphlet, pp. 16. Price 5 cents, postage free. 6 copies 25 cents, 13 do. 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.

LOVE AND ITS HIDDEN HISTORY,

AND

The Master Passion.

BY P. B. RANDOLPH.

A book for men, women, husbands, wives—the loving and the unloved. In this curious and rarely original book the author offers to the public a powerful argument in favor of love, the great passion that rules the world; and he sets forth its manifold charms and necessities in a perfectly irresistible manner, though with keen wisdom and wonderful tact.

Two volumes in one. Price $2.50, postage 12 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PROSE-POEMS

AND SELECTIONS.

BY ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

This work is a gem. It is a model in every respect. In fact, one of the richest, brightest, best ever issued. It contains, beside the celebrated "Decoration Day Oration," never before published, and all the famous "tributes" heretofore printed in various shapes, but never brought together till now, many other gems selected from the speeches, arguments, lectures, letters, table-talks, and day-to-day conversations of the author. The work is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it.

In silk-cloth, beveled edges, gilt back and side, $2.50, postage 20 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Light on the Hidden Way.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

REV. JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE.

The public receive in this book an illustration and defense of the leading truths of Modern Spiritualism from a source entirely distinct from that whence such works are expected to come; yet the most enthusiastic Spiritualist would not desire a fairer or more truthful presentation of the two forms of mediumship it portrays. The book can therefore be warmly recommended to those who would know of Spiritualism from one who is not a Spiritualist, and we fully agree with Dr. Clarke, who, alluding to the position of the author in this regard, says: "Her report, therefore, is an independent one, and deserves attention from those engaged in investigating this occult Borderland, where beings of the other world are reported as coming into relations with the inhabitants of our own."

Cloth. Price $1.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THEOSOPHY,

Religion and Occult Science,

With Glossary of Eastern Words,

BY HENRY S. OLCOTT.

CONTENTS.—Forewords. Theosophy or Materialism—Which? England's Welcome. The Theosophical Society and its Aims. The Common Foundation of all Religions. Theosophy: the Scientific Basis of Religion. Theosophy: its Friends and Enemies. The Occult Sciences. Spiritualism and Theosophy. India: Past, Present and Future. The Civilization that India Needs. The Spirit of the Zoroastrian Religion. The Life of Buddha and its Lessons. From England. Cloth. Price $2.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Incidents in the Life of

MADAM BLAVATSKY,

Compiled from Information Supplied by Her Relatives and Friends, and edited by A. P. SINNETT, with a Portrait Reproduced from an Original Painting by Hermann Schmiechen.

Contents.—Introduction; Childhood; Marriage and Travel; At Home in Russia, 1858; Mme. de Jelibrowsky's Narrative; From Apprenticeship to Duty; Residence in America; Established in India; A Visit to Europe; Appendix.

Large 8vo, pp. 324. Cloth, $3.00, postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PRICE REDUCED.

Life as it Is in the World Beyond.

The author, in his preface, says: "The assumption is that the author of the letters comprising this little book has become an inhabitant of the world beyond, and that, having learned something of its conditions and ways, he communicates to his wife here what he has seen, heard and experienced there."

Paper, pp. 194. Price 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

HOW TO LIVE A CENTURY AND GROW OLD GRACEFULLY. By J. M. PEEBLES, M. D., author of "Travels Around the World," etc.

In preparing this work, while avoiding technicalities and Greek and Latin phrases, the author has aimed to be practical—rigidly practical—rather than original or elegant; aimed to bring to mind and clearly present the vital importance of air, food, clothing, drink, sunshine and sleep in such varied ways as to inspire the reader with a proper and persistent use of them that the number of years upon earth may be many—even a hundred!

Paper. Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY

Message Department.

Spiritual Free-Circle Meetings

Are held at the BANNER OF LIGHT OFFICE, 9 Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), on TUESDAY and FRIDAY AFTERNOON of each week.

On Tuesday afternoon MISS M. T. SHELHAMER occupies the platform for the purpose of answering by her spirit guides such questions as may be introduced for consideration.

On Friday afternoon MRS. B. F. SMITH, trance medium, under the influence of her guides, will afford an avenue through which individual spirit messages will be given.

The Hall (which is used exclusively for these séances) will be open at 2 o'clock; the services commence at 3 o'clock precisely, at which time the doors will be closed, allowing no ingress or egress. The public is cordially invited.

☞ Persons having questions of practical bearing upon human life in any of its departments of thought and labor, which they would like answered by the spirit-world intelligences, may send them to the BANNER OF LIGHT office by mail, or hand them to the Chairman of the Circle, who will present them to the spirits for consideration.

☞ The Messages published in this Department indicate that spirits carry with them the characteristics of their earth-life to that beyond—whether for good or evil; that those who pass from the earthly sphere in an undeveloped state, eventually progress to higher conditions. We ask the reader to receive no doctrine put forth by spirits in these columns that does not comport with his or her reason. All express as much of truth as they perceive—no more.

☞ It is our earnest desire that those who recognize the messages of their spirit-friends will verify them by informing us of the fact for publication.

☞ Natural flowers upon our Circle-Room table are gratefully appreciated by our angel visitants, therefore we solicit donations of such from the friends in earth-life who may feel that it is a pleasure to place upon the altar of Spirituality their floral offerings.

☞ Letters of inquiry in regard to this Department of THE BANNER must not be addressed to the mediums in any case. LEWIS B. WILSON, Chairman.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED,

THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Miss M. T. Shelhamer.

Report of Public Séance held Sept. 18th, 1888.

Spirit Invocation.

We bless thee, oh, our Father God, that the gates of immortal life are not only ajar but left wide open by the angel ones who descend to earth, anxious to bear unto thy mortal children ministrations of love and tender comfort. We praise thee that there is no death save that which change alone shall bring, giving unto human life a larger liberty, a grander release from trial and suffering, an opportunity for arising to higher scenes and more beautiful unfoldments. We would be drawn nearer unto thy fount of wisdom, and partake from the great storehouse of knowledge. We hunger, and we would be filled with truth. We desire to come into communication with those holy, true and faithful souls who delight to do thy will. To this end may each one present send out from the heart a loving feeling, which will bind us together in one fraternal chain; and may we give forth unto thee and unto the pure and good who shall abide with us from spirit-life our best influences, our sweetest magnetisms, our purest thoughts, that they and we alike may be uplifted and made blessed by the association and the hour.

Questions and Answers.

CONTROLLING SPIRIT.—We are now ready for your questions, Mr. Chairman.

QUES.—[By W. S. B.] Can immortality be proven by scientific methods? If so, in what way? I have no idea that faith proves it; and that is why I appeal to the spirit-world teachers for information upon this much mooted subject.

ANS.—Faith may never prove anything in physical life to the satisfaction of the physical senses of man; yet faith, when wisely understood and exercised, may prove to be an intuitive sensation, belonging to the spirit of the individual, and may convey knowledge, and even conviction, upon a subject not easily explained by the law of physics. Immortality, however, can never be demonstrated to the satisfaction of man through the law of faith alone, although there may be here and there isolated cases where an individual mind and heart becomes satisfied through the exercise of faith, so-called, or rather through a conviction brought to the mind by means of the intuitive or spiritual faculties, being to that especial individual a law, a knowledge satisfactory but yet not capable of being imparted to another mind.

Can immortality be scientifically demonstrated? your correspondent questions, and we reply: Yes; for what is science but the manifestation or the establishment of law, the revealment of truth itself? We speak of the science of astronomy. But what is that? Only the revelation to human understanding of truth concerning the planets and the laws that govern them. And so immortality may be scientifically demonstrated. It must be proven to human understanding to be a fixed law in the universe that life is continuous, that it has no end. Can this be done? you ask; and we reply: It can; since through the revelations of truth itself there comes in the nineteenth century a demonstration not only of the immortality of human life but of human consciousness, memory and intelligence.

Spiritualism comes with varied evidences of the verity of its claims, speaking in the names and with the voices of thousands of intelligent minds that have passed on from mortal habitation to worlds beyond.

Your correspondent may say: "How can we believe this to be a scientific fact? We find much in Spiritualism that is contradictory, there are many discrepancies in the statements of so-called returning spirits, and therefore how shall we undertake to analyze them, and to realize their truths?"

Science never errs, for science is truth itself, and truth cannot err, nor can it be controverted by any statement or assumption.

Immortality appeals to the soul of mankind in the name of truth or of science, and through its varied manifestations of what is called Spiritualism, immortality reveals itself to your understanding time and again.

The manifestations which returning spirits bring to you are of themselves—at least many of them—scientific, and can be scientifically demonstrated. Especially is this so in the realm of physics, or of physical phenomena, where strange appearances and strange productions are made, not explainable by any law of physics, of matter, which you understand at the present time, not explainable upon any hypothesis of collusion or of the unconscious action of incarnated mind on earth, but only explainable, only plausible and reasonable, in the light of spiritual revealment, which declares that these appearances and movements are made by an intelligent but to the mortal eye invisible mind of man or of spirit.

Undoubtedly much that is given to-day in this line of action and revealment is faulty and imperfect, but so are many of the investigations and experiments of science in her various quarters; during the first few years they are made, we must trace a law and retrace its steps and its action, time and again, before we shall gain a correct theory or speculation concerning its operation. And so with this demonstrated truth called Spiritualism: you must experiment and investigate its various movements time and again before you shall learn thoroughly of them; but as the years roll on, and its investigators become more learned and practiced in their experiments, as man advances in the knowledge of the occult forces of life and of his own spiritual nature, then will these scientific demonstrations of the power of spirit over matter, of the immortality of human life, gain ground and increase in force and action until man shall learn and be convinced that immortal existence is a fact in the universe, and one that can be established to the satisfaction of every thinking mind.

Q.—[By "Humanitarian."] Do spirit intelligences who communicate with earth's people through human medial instrumentalities think it best that civilized nations combine for the purpose of suppressing the Arab slave-dealers and murderers of the ignorant Africans, and thus open up the "Dark Continent" in the interest of civilization? Your inquirer thinks nothing effective can be accomplished in any other way; but he may be mistaken, and asks for more light upon a very important subject.

A.—All intelligent and progressive spirits will unite in the thought that it is wise for all civilized nations to unite in peace and amity upon any subject or question that looks to the elevation of humanity as a whole, or to the elevation of humanity as a portion or a particular race; therefore they will concede that it would be wise and humane for the people of all civilized nations to unite in harmony together for the purpose of suppressing any slave-dealer, slave-holding system, or system of any kind that is base and cruel, and productive of suffering to a people or an individual. Undoubtedly it would be wise for those of civilized life who are above such a system of cruelty to unite in sending forth their protection to the enslaved, and to mete out to those who are barbarous in the treatment of those poor creatures such effective discipline as would deter them from continuing in pursuit of their cruel treatment. This, we should judge, would be the reply of any spirit who had a spark of human feeling in his breast. We believe the time is coming when what is now known as the "Dark Continent" will be opened to civilization and the march of human progress. We believe that there will go forth to this "Dark Continent" civilized humanitarians, who will take with them such useful information and systems of training, and other equipments, as will provide for those who are within that quarter of the globe, such treatment and such surroundings as may benefit them morally, intellectually and spiritually. We believe when this is done, resources of industry will be found within that domain known as the "Dark Continent" which will prove of use to the entire civilized world, and that a mutual benefit will accrue when this takes place. a mutual benefit to those who now dwell in ignorance and in subjection within that quarter, and to those who shall go forth from the civilized places of the world to bear with them that which will be uplifting and beneficial to their fellow creatures.

Q.—Please inform me why all clairvoyants in a circle do not or cannot see and describe the same for me that appears to one.

A.—Simply because the clairvoyant view of one medium may be exercised in a certain direction or operated upon by special magnetic influences from the spirit-world, while that of other mediums present may not come under the same law of magnetic power, nor be drawn into the same direction as the first. It does not follow, because there are several clairvoyants in a séance, that all will see and describe the same person or the same object, although this may frequently be done in the experience of many investigators of Spiritualism. The clairvoyant powers of one person may be held in abeyance for the time, or they may be drafted upon by other spirits not at all in sympathy or en rapport with those spirits who come to the individual who gains information from one especial clairvoyant present, and therefore it is not strange if, of the several mediums in the circle, only one should give to one individual a description or a message which is applicable to his case. Clairvoyants, like all other mediums, are surrounded by their own special spiritual guides and attendants; they have their own personal magnetic qualities, which are acted upon by the magnetic and electrical qualities of their spirit-guardians. The band of one of these mediums may exercise his powers for a special work; that of another may exercise the powers of his subject for some other work, and so on; therefore, while what is given to your correspondent by one clairvoyant, by such a circle, may be perfectly correct, if something different is given to others present by other clairvoyants; or if even something of a different character is given to your correspondent by other clairvoyants, it does not follow that the first or the others are false or unreliable, since one may perceive certain conditions and surroundings of spirits within the atmosphere of your questioner, while others may be led to perceive still different conditions and associations.

Q.—[By V. S. P.] Which is the higher attainment in the spirit-world, the emotional or the intellectual?

A.—The emotional nature of man may be developed so as to afford to him the highest degree of spiritual attainment, or it may be so unfolded as to provide for him the lowest degree of unhappiness. It depends very much how this emotional nature is cultivated, and to what extent it is brought into activity.

We all know something of the emotions of man. We all know something of those which are called the baser, or the passions leading human beings, in their exercise, into unhappiness, sin and misery. We also know something of the higher emotions of the human family, and that their cultivation and exercise may lead man up to a condition of unselfishness and of happiness, because through that cultivation he will put forth the spiritual powers of his being, which may grow and unfold in beauty and in peace.

But we presume your correspondent speaks of those higher emotions, of that which belongs to the affectional nature of mankind, of the love-element itself, which, if properly understood and cultivated, would bring to man a degree of happiness such as perhaps the exercise of no other faculty or attribute may do, since if he exercises the love-element in charity and good-will and tender feeling toward his kind, breathing an unselfish disposition, sending out to his neighbor, and even to the human being whom he does not know, but whose unhappiness or misfortune may appeal to his heart, that sympathy and loving feeling which is drawn forth from his nature, then will the man be lifted up to a spiritual atmosphere, and breathe in that which is uplifting and strengthening to his interior nature.

On the other hand, the man who has intellect may perhaps be as happy and as exalted in the spiritual world as the first, provided he exercise his intellect in useful ways to mankind; and he who is intellectual, exercising his mentality for the benefaction of his race, cannot fail to grow in the other quarter, to become an affectionate, social-minded individual; while he is seeking to bless his kind through the activity of his mental power he will feel a warm tide of sympathy flowing over his entire nature, and thus will he be spiritually exalted.

The man who is affectionate by nature, seeking to bless his kind at every opportunity, will come in contact with human life, be able to study his fellow-beings and learn something of the universe at large, and even though he has been deprived of books and of the learning which the schools supply on earth, he will find his mind enlarging, his brain-power increasing, his intellectual faculties growing rich and strong; thus will he be recognized as a man of intellect in the spiritual department of life; and therefore, friends, let us not draw comparisons upon this subject, for he who is intellectual, who studies the happiness of his fellow-beings, making use of his mentality for the benefit of his kind, will grow in spiritual exaltation, and become in time a spiritualized entity; and he who is a spiritualized intelligence must of a certainty feel the finer emotions of humanity flowing throughout his entire being, while the man who is spiritually exalted through the exercise of his emotional faculties for the blessing and benefaction of his kind, will also grow in mental power, become intellectually exalted, and find happiness and a means of increasing in knowledge on the spiritual side.

He who has intellect, and who has not spiritual exaltation nor desires it; he who is very learned and keen and brilliant in mind, but gives no thought to the sufferings or the happiness of his fellows, who lives selfishly for personal aggrandizement, however lofty he may be upon the pinnacle of mentality, will not be considered great in the spirit-world, while he who is spiritually affectionate, although he may not have learned of books or have gained the advantages of an education in earthly life, will be blessed according to his works, the motives, thoughts and aspirations of his soul.

Q.—[By Edwin Cheney.] What distinguishes the three kingdoms of immortal life, the Spiritual, Angel, and Archangel?

A.—These terms are used many times by returning spirits to designate various degrees of advancement or of spiritual unfoldment of mankind. The spiritual, then, is known as that department of human life which is superior to the animal or physical department, that which embraces within itself not only the intelligent part or intellectual nature of man, but that which expresses itself through the impulses of the heart in endeavoring to do for others, to live in accordance with truth and purity and goodness, and seeking for that which is higher than merely the temporal, conscious, earthly life. Then you will say, What follows? That which is known to you as the angelic would be the development of the spiritual man, who sometimes and often exercises his thought and activities for others fully as much that he may grow and become learned and gain a higher degree of existence as for the benefit of his kind, although he desires to bless his friends into a condition of unselfishness, whereby he would minister to his kind independent of growth or exaltation of his own soul.

The angelic man or woman is he or she who ministers tenderly to the needs of others, gives up the thought of self in the larger and more beautiful thought and endeavor to bless and befriend those who are in need; and the archangel would only be one who had advanced a little further, gained in spiritual information, increased in power, so that he might attempt and might accomplish more than he had done before he had grown into this experience and had gained this larger knowledge.

These are only degrees of unfoldment, just as are the degrees of unfoldment in the life of a child, beginning at first with a mind crude and unformed, reaching out to learn, to know and to grasp things, that it might become informed upon them, and through these experiences growing into a beautiful development, learning, gaining an understanding of greater branches of knowledge, and still progressing onward until the mind had expanded to take up scientific studies of physical law, to watch the operations of this law for its own special information. So with the spirits of the other life, as they advance from one grade of experience and knowledge to another, there are those who give these degrees names, and he who is unselfish, working ever for the good of his kind, irrespective of creed or sect or race or color, recognizing those in bondage only as fellow-beings, demanding light and love and protection, and exercising these qualities of helpfulness to them, may be called angels, archangels, celestial beings or supernal spirits, it matters not what; it only matters that they accomplish their work and are known by their action.

Q.—[By N. B. B.] Is the distinction of sex as prominent in the spirit-world as in this?

A.—We know only of two principles of life, male and female, positive and negative. These are manifested throughout human nature as throughout the various kingdoms of life, in their own peculiar way, and so far as we understand of life in worlds beyond this planet earth, these same elements are distinguished and manifested in their own way, somewhat as they are upon this earth. Law is ever true to itself, and so far as we know, this law of sex continues operative throughout the various kingdoms of life and maintains its outward semblance or appearance.

The positive principle, analagous to that which is known as the male on earth, and the negative or female principle, we find in solution in the atmosphere of earth, each filling its place and performing its own proper work; and in the spirit-world, in the human department of life, we find always the male and the female, the positive and the negative, blending in unison, the two making up a perfect whole, in power and activity, such as may be expressed for the accomplishment of great, various and useful work.

Q.—[By L. S. M.] A lady has held materializing séances of late, successfully, but at the last one there came into the room a skeleton, so clearly seen that some twenty could behold it. The medium was greatly excited by the apparation, and declines to hold another circle. Please explain the meaning.

A.—It is as easy for a band of operating spirits, or for even one spirit who understands his business and can gather the forces of his medium or of those persons from whom he extracts his material, to build up the skeleton of a human form, as it is to create from the atmosphere a materialized human form. Undoubtedly this manifestation of which your correspondent speaks was one presented by the operating spirits for reasons of their own. There may have been one, among them, who desired to see what could be done in that direction, and so set to work to experiment; perhaps some anatomist or physician of the old school, wishing to give a subject of thought to his sitters, presented this manifestation from the spirit-side of life.

We do not know why this appeared, as stated by your correspondent, but suppose it must have been for the purpose of showing what spirits can do, under certain conditions. There may have been a strong doubt in the minds of those present concerning the reality of the work of materialization, and so the spirits thought: "We will not present a fully materialized form, a tangible body of flesh and blood that may be supposed to be the form of some confederate; we will send out a skeleton denuded of its flesh, and make it appear before the eyes of these wonder-seekers, assuring them by its manifestation that there is some occult law at work." We do not know as this is so, not being en rapport with the spirits who presented this appearance, but think it very likely. As regards the medium and friends who witnessed this manifestation, we presume they are honest in their desire to receive truth, and speaking on this presumption we ask them to continue their experiments and investigation, because there may appear from them something of great importance to the world and to the cause of truth.

Q.—[From the audience.] Can there be any real harmony established until we shall understand these two principles, the positive and the negative, and the law that governs them?

A.—The law of harmony is but little understood by mankind at the present day, nor can it really be understood and acted upon until the two elements of life, the negative and the positive, blend so closely in unison, assimilate so completely together, that there will be no disorganization of the forces, and no friction between them.

Until man becomes so fully acquainted with his own nature and that of his kind as to comprehend the forces and the laws of his being—and of course when we say man we mean man and woman also—until these are understood thoroughly by intellectual, intelligent men, we may expect to find inharmony and discord in the human family; but as the years roll on, and man advances in knowledge and in wisdom, as he comes to study the laws of his being more closely, he will learn not only of the positive element within the male, but of the negative principle of the female, and realize how they may be blended and harmonized together, so as to make a perfect oneness of sympathy, of unity and of happiness.

Q.—Are we to understand that spirit-life is divided into spheres of action, or into various realms, as of angels and archangels?

A.—Spirit-life we define as being an actual existence for the human family, just as is this mortal existence, at the present time, one through which the spirit gains experience and discipline, and may unfold in knowledge and in power of expression. This spirit-life, however, has its gradations of unfoldment and experience, even as has the life of earth, yet it affords its localities, its associations and surroundings, of a substantial or tangible nature, by and through which the spirit may express itself, may take hold of the objective things as well as of the subjective thoughts and purposes of existence, and through which it may come in contact with the universe, and also with its kind. Spirit-life, however, may be defined as spheres of action, so to speak, for one spirit may occupy a certain field of action and yet be isolated from others who are active and potent in the field in which they work. One may be of a warlike character; he will be in contact with and allied to the physical plane of life, where warring and discord abound, until he has developed through that condition of hostility to one of a more peaceful nature. Another spirit, perhaps, who has been on earth a brother of the first, is not of a hostile character; he loves peaceful pursuits and the amenities of life, and therefore he is engaged in other occupations than those which attract his brother. This spirit is not held closely down to the external conditions of life—he can arise above them and enter into communication and association with spirits who are wiser, higher, more philanthropic in their work and in their aspirations, and so on. We may truly say that spirit-life is a series of active spheres, through which various natures of mankind exercise and manifest themselves, all, however, affording opportunities and avenues through which the spirit may reach to something higher, something more grand and uplifting.

***

We will conclude by briefly answering a question which has been propounded to us by a lady at a distance. She wishes to know whether two members of a family, who are not in sympathy, whose tastes diverge in every direction, but who have been brought together through the law of association on earth, will be obliged to associate with each other, and to dwell in the same family in the spirit-world. Our reply is, No; it matters not what the consanguinity of physical life has been, it matters not what ties have bound two individuals together on earth, if these two persons are not in spiritual sympathy, if their tastes and their aspirations cannot blend, but are divergent, then they cannot be attracted toward each other in the other world, for the spirit ever follows the law of attraction, when apart from material life, and it will surely be drawn unto those companions who are in sympathy with its own interior nature; it will be attracted and will blend with those souls who are, like itself, seeking for truth through avenues congenial to it; it will not be troubled by discord and inharmony and strife arising from a combative antagonistic spirit bound to it by outward laws, but in no way assimilative and sympathetic with it. It is sometimes the case that there are two in one family who can never be at peace with each other, because an antagonistic magnetism seems to be generated whenever they come in contact; yet apart, both may be amiable, and may give forth loveable qualities which attract friends to their sides.

Now, in the spirit-world, these two will not be obliged to mingle together; they may be separated, each one seeking those associations, companionships and conditions most agreeable and most beneficial to its life, and each one may find friends, associates, surroundings and occupations which will be pleasing and profitable to himself or herself; both may be assisted, elevated and strengthened by the separation, while neither will find affliction or unhappiness because of it. In the spirit-world the law of life seems to be such as to afford only the highest conditions to each human being for its advancement and its growth, but on the contrary, on earth sometimes physical environments and limitations provide only that which seems to be for the time depressing and filled with misery. But we have no doubt this very experience given man on earth is for his good, for his ultimate knowledge and information, when he shall come to see and understand all that has been and all that is to come.

SPIRIT MESSAGES,

THROUGH THE TRANCE MEDIUMSHIP OF

Mrs. B. F. Smith.

Report of Public Séance held June 29th, 1888.

Levi Hayward.

As we visit earth, we are aware of the many trials you have to contend with. As we draw near to those whom we knew well in the mortal, the question is often asked why those who loved us here close the doors so closely, and listen not. We visit them with gentle taps at the door, and many times do they hear it, yet pay no heed. Listen, for it means something—as much as the little click of the telegraph. You will wonder if I found the life beyond the grave such as I expected. This world is beautiful beyond expression. I find our homes such as we have built for our lives on earth.

I passed away from Palmer, Mass. My business was in Gardner, Mass. My name is Levi Hayward. I think I shall be remembered in both places. I was a chair manufacturer. I have often been a silent listener in your meetings, and have twice endeavored to control.

I would like the people of Gardner to know that I do not forget them. I often step into the old hotel, and into the stores that I used to frequent when here, and I hear my name spoken, but not as frequently as it used to be.

I wish to say to Mary that we often visit the earthly home. John is with me, also Julia, and we are happy in our spirit home.

I assure you, Mr. Chairman, I appreciate this privilege.

Nancy Bolton.

My name is Nancy Bolton. I have dear ones in Boston, and a son in Los Angeles, Cal. Dear Idie, how often have you heard mother call you by this pet name, and I know you do not forget it. It is thirty-five years, as near as I can reckon mortal time, since I laid aside the mortal form. A little time ago, Isaiah, you felt you must make a change in your business, for your health was failing, and I find since the change came you are much stronger.

Never have I left you, my son, but have watched over you tenderly. When discouragements came to you, when the dear one, Mary, was taken from your side, and you were left with the dear little children, you questioned in your soul whether mother knew of this? Yes, Idie, I was conscious of it all; and when you chose another to walk beside you, and the little one came into the home, father and myself were still watching over you. How gladly would I reach them all. But I cannot; neither can I come into communication with you privately, therefore I asked permission to speak here, thinking you would get the paper. I am glad of your giving up the practice of medicine; it was too much, and I find it is better you should stop as you are; the change of climate has been for your benefit; there are not so many sudden changes.

Please, Mr. Chairman, to send this message to Dr. Isaiah Bolton of Los Angeles, Cal.

Jane Carver.

I have friends in your city, Mr. Chairman, and here is where I would like my message to be dropped. I know some of you will say that Jennie was small when she passed on. But all grow in the spirit-world. I do not forget my dear friends, for I have been taught to never forget them.

I am happy in my spirit-home. The flowers you have here are beautiful, and you little know how much good they do the spirits: the moment we see them we seem to gather strength and courage to speak. We admire and appreciate them as much as you do. Beautiful blossoms, painted by the finger of God! We thank you for them, and also for the sympathy and encouragement you give us.

My name is Jane Carver, but they called me Jennie. Mary Jane and aunt Susan are here, and we would like the dear ones to know we come to visit them.

Esther Williams.

I lived in Bradford, Vt., and my name is Esther Williams. I have been here before, but I was a little over-anxious, I suppose, to speak, and so I failed. I passed to the spirit-world more than thirty years ago. I knew nothing of what is to-day termed Spiritualism.

I want Philinda to feel that mother is not far away. Many times have you said, "Mother, I know, is in heaven." But you place heaven too far away. Again, since Albert has joined me you have wondered if he has found father and mother. Yes, dear child, we find our own; we know even as we are known, and not one link will be missing in the chain of love.

Albert asks me to say that he did not leave things as he would have liked to had he been sure he was going to leave earth-life at that time, for many things of a worldly nature were not settled to his mind.

Grandmother is with me, and my own dear mother, and the grandmother on your father's side. My mother met me as I entered spirit-life. I found everything different from what I had been taught to expect, and I would have my children learn something of the realities of life eternal, for in a little time they will join us in the higher life.

George Gill.

My name is George Gill, and my residence was in Peacham, Vt.

I am speaking of what I know, Mr. Chairman, when I say to you that your good paper has been turned over many times to see if George had sent a message, for some of my dear ones are very much interested concerning the life beyond.

I have been here before, but never have attempted to speak until to-day. I have seen Esther in this meeting, three or four seats from this platform. Elvira also was here at two different times. I would like Albert to know I am not alone in making all the noise in his house, by any means; there is quite a large band, when taking both sides of the house.

Sarah, you know many times, as you sit down to the table with Albert, that you sit there until Albert begins to move his feet pretty fast, as much as to say I can't get anything. You must be patient, and we will give you all we possibly can. Your father and mother on both sides, sisters and brother, all are there at some periods. I have tried hard to make myself known at Martin's, but I see it is n't of much use.

I would say to Martin Hidden that in spirit-life he will find these sounds mean something.

When Sarah asked you to sit down by the table and see what might come, you turned away with a smile, as much as to say, "I guess not much." Let me tell you we were there, many of us, trying to make sounds, and if you had come into harmony with us we might have given you a great deal.

Albert, your sister Hattie says: "Remember me to Albert." She is one whom you loved dearly. You will ask me if John is not here, and Addison. Yes; and many others. You did n't regret the visit you made to the old home, Albert. Many invisibles were with you. Your own dear mother sends greetings.

Henry says he has spoken so clearly that you understood full well who it was. Elvira, I know you often say: "George, why can you not make yourself known to me and to Ella?" I cannot answer that question; it is not because I do not try.

How happy we shall be to meet together again where there will be no parting. I am looking forward to that day of reunion. Be not sad here; I feel happy, and do not come to you with a sorrowful face, for I am as lively as I ever was, and Albert can tell you something about that. Albert, remember the eggs: you will understand what that means. Somehow I had to say that—it kept coming up to me. It refers to a little fun we had in our boyhood's days.

In your home, the last evening meeting, we were with you—seven of us—trying to help you see some things. When you get this letter you will recall the time and understand what I refer to.

Sarah, your own dear mother asks me to say that when she can get the power she will send a loving message to each one of you. Esther, you know you have a great deal of what is termed mediumship. You had better lay aside your needle and thimble, and go to work for the angel-world. John is here, and sends love, and would like to come into communication with you, if possible.

John Garfield.

I belonged in Fitchburg, Mass.; my name is John Garfield. I knew something of the trials of an editor. I believed nothing in Spiritualism, and I did n't want to talk about it.

I will say to Mary Jane, the dear wife whom I have left, that the children are with me, and are growing in the spirit-life. Your father, Capt. Samuel King, is also with me. A little sorrow has come into the home of your brother Solon. I simply refer to it to let you know that we realize the trials you meet after we leave the earth; and we do not care to leave it entirely.

I had not been gone long before I learned from father, mother, and Elisha's boys, that I could return and come into communication with you here. You no doubt will say that I never would have anything to do with Spiritualism. I will acknowledge that I made a mistake; but if you will try to learn something of it here, it will help you after you cross over.

You are not alone, Mary Jane, for many dear ones that have long passed from your sight are with you. Alvah, your dear brother, sends greeting, and asks me to speak a word for him, that the dear ones may know they are not forgotten. I knew of this Banner of Light Office, many years ago, but passed it idly by. Now I will confess that it is worth a great deal to me—in these few moments.

Never, Mr. Chairman, can you know how much happiness it gives a spirit to speak on this platform, feeling that he will reach his friends through your columns. I am happy to know that through the influence of higher intelligences, such a place has been established on the mortal plane. I am thankful that I can acknowledge that I have been "looking through a glass darkly," and that I now see more clearly, for I find there is much for me to learn. It is but a few years since I passed over.

I wish to be remembered to Harriet, also to the familes on both sides. Father and mother send greetings, and we all wish to be remembered. Mary Jane, I shall never forget the time when you clasped my hand and felt that you would be alone. I knew nothing of the country I was going to.

Sarah Craggin.

My name is Sarah Craggin, and I have dear ones scattered in different localities; some are in Keene, N. H., some in Bellows Falls, Vt., and some in Alstead, N. H.

Eliza has often wondered, knowing how creed-bound I was, whether I have found the immortal life different from what I expected. Yes, dear sister, very different.

Samuel is here to-day with me, and Henry, and I send greetings to each one. Mother wishes to be remembered, also Eliza will ask me if none on the other side of the house are here. Yes; dear Isabel is with us. We are very happy as we come together in spirit-life. I know, dear sister Eliza, I used to think you were carried away by this delusion. But I have found it to be a truth, and that it exceeds what you can believe or understand on this side.

I have spoken once before briefly, and you wished then, Sarah, that I could have given you more, that you might know what my feelings were on entering spirit-life. Dear sister, all I can do is to acknowledge I was in the dark.

Clarissa wishes to be remembered, and says that she also finds it very different from what she expected. William and Willard too will be surprised as they enter the spirit-life. You may wish to know if I often visit them, and Susan. Yes, I do. We come as a group, many times. Henry asks mother to tell Fred that I am with hi n often. The dear boy will understand when you say often.

I am happy to find the spirit-life one of activity; we all have a work to do, and are only too glad to be able to do it. My sister cherishes your paper, Mr. Chairman, and looks forward to its coming, for the spiritual food she gets from it. I used to think Spiritualism was the work of the evil one, but the truth has been made known to me, and I am happy in my spirit home.

Controlling Spirit.

Friends, our season's work closes to-day, and I would return thanks and blessings to each one who has given us sympathy and encouragement in word or deed.

For the last ten months the work has been varied, and from the material standpoint you do not perceive its value as those do who observe it from the spiritual standpoint. We claim that we have helped in a measure to drop the scales from the eyes of mortals, and to establish the truth of immortality; and also we do claim that a blessing has come to many here in the circle-room, through messages that have reached them silently.

We do not claim gigantic results from our labor, but that we have done what we might in the great work of the world.

We desire to thank our friends for the floral offerings that have been placed upon this platform. You cannot understand how much we appreciate these in spirit as we come into your circle-room. They give strength to many who could not speak if it were not for them. You enjoy them here, and we also enjoy and appreciate them.

Now we will bid you adieu for a time, hoping in the near future that our instruments may come forth in greater strength and vigor to do our work both in spirit and mortal life. We bid you adieu. John Pierpont.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

Sept. 14.—Nathan C. Davis; Sarah E. Basford; Sarah Johnson; Lyman Smith; Mabel Alda Powell; John H. Fuller; Jeremiah Witham; Emma Edgscomb; Graham Thayer; Maggie Skillings; Harriet Langdon; Frank H. Richardson; Sarah E. Parker; Michael Swasey; Annie Mitchell; Maria Nutting.

THE MESSAGES GIVEN (THROUGH MRS. B. F. SMITH)

As per dates will appear in due course.

Sept. 21.—Nathan Tanner; Ira Lake; Daniel Shaw; Aunt Patty Mayo; J. J. Pennington; Lucy Vickery; Alice M. Gould; John H. Armstrong; Ethel Magee; Harriet Johnson; Albert G. Towers; Harriet Maria L.; Hannah Clark; William Dudley.

Neglect kills injuries; revenge increases them. A neglected cold increases its injurious effects on the system till consumption finally kills, unless cured by Warner's Log Cabin Cough and Consumption Remedy. It is ye reliable remedy of ye olden time.

It is said that there are more than four thousand people in the United States who are over one hundred years of age.

October Magazines.

MAGAZINE OF ART.—The frontispiece is an excellent reproduction of one of the four works of Sir John Millais in the celebrated resort of artists, the Kepplestone Collection of Alex Macdonald, "The Convalescent." In illustration of an account of that collection three other engravings of paintings it contains are also given, together with a portrait of Mr. Macdonald. Four illustrations of sculpture in the current exhibit of the Royal Academy accompany a description of the general display. Of the "Barbison School" Théodore Rousseau is the subject, one of the greatest landscape-painters of France, the other being Corot. His work is shown in five engravings, preceded by a portrait of the artist. Few of artistic turn of mind, which the spiritual serves to develop and strengthen, will fail to read with much satisfaction the opening article of this number—J. E. Hodgson's continuation of "Old Arts and Modern Thoughts," his theme being "Poetical Treatment." The remaining contents are "The Stopping Point in Ornament," by Lewis F. Day, eight illustrations; "Bernard Van Orley," an artist of the sixteenth century, three illustrations; a poem by Kate Carter; "Chronicles" and "Notes." New York: Cassell & Co.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.—Of the two serial stories new chapters are given, and in the "Chronicles of Cardewe Manor" we are told "What Miss Trusdale Said." A pleasing sketch is given of life on a sugar plantation near Queensland, in which is described "An Australian 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'" In "Some Favorite Dogs" are related instances of the results of instinct in dogs, that bear a very close resemblance to those of reasoning in men. Instructive articles for housekeepers are "In Times of Sickness," "Every Day Puddings," and "What to Wear," the contents closing with "An Illustrated Record of Invention, Discovery, Literature and Science." New York: Cassell & Co.

THE ELECTRICAL ENGINEER.—An extra number is issued containing a full report of the proceedings at the Fourth Semi-Annual Convention of the National Electric Light Association in New York, Aug. 29th, 30th and 31st, 1888. The President's Address, and the Address of Welcome by the Mayor of the city, are given. These, with the papers that follow, are of much interest and value not only to electricians, but to all who would be informed of the rapid advance of the science. New York: Electric Publishing Company, 11 Wall street.

WIDE AWAKE.—Those who from sickness or other cause are obliged to keep within doors will read with interest "The Shut-Ins," a pleasing story by Mrs. Ella Peattie, and those who question the existence of intellect in animals will find reason to modify their views in reading "A Dogocracy," in which Miss Seward describes the strange canine communities of Constantinople. The home-life of Daniel Webster is the subject of an article with twenty-one illustrations by Miss Harris, most of the statements made being new to the public. Ed. Everett Hale concludes his "Boston Common" articles, more of the fascinating story of "Plucky Smalls" is given, and a record of what of good one may do to another is made in "Some Children of the M. S. P. C. C.," by Kate Gannett Wells. For the 1889 volume a new serial story by Trowbridge is announced. Boston: D. Lothrop Co.

OUR LITTLE ONES.—"Miss Flipperty Floppet" leads the contents with a picture of herself and verses accounting for the venerable appearance she makes. "A Curious Traveler" follows, and then a dozen or more illustrated articles in prose and verse that are sure to instruct and amuse the nursery readers of this favorite of all children. Boston: Russell Publishing Co.

Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

BENJAMIN FITZGERALD.

In the issue of the BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 8th I notice a message purporting to come from Spirit BENJAMIN FITZGERALD of Canaan, Me. I knew Bro. Fitzgerald very well in his earth-life in that place, and can say of him that he was a true and consistent Spiritualist for more than thirty years prior to his transition to spirit-life in 1885. For twenty-five years he and his family were the only outspoken Spiritualists in that town; they were the pioneers, and the beauty and simplicity of Bro. Fitzgerald's life plainly told all his friends and neighbors that he not only believed in Spiritualism, but lived it as well. He dwelt with us more than three score and ten years, passing on at the ripe age of seventy-three. His son, W. C. Fitzgerald, is living upon his father's place in Canaan, tenderly caring for his aged mother, who is patiently awaiting her summons to join her loved ones in the beautiful Summer-Land.

Bro. Fitzgerald gave a characteristic message at Camp Etna in September 1885, through Edgar W. Emerson, the celebrated public test medium, so that he had not always been disappointed in his endeavor to reach his friends.

I do not recognize the spirit whom he calls William, though some of his relatives may be able to do so.

The Free Circle of the dear BANNER is doing a great work for our cause, especially in regard to the vast amount of information obtained from the answers to the various questions, and further, by the messages of love from spirit-life, scattered broadcast over our country, which bring tidings of the loved ones whom the world at large calls dead.

Fraternally yours, HARRISON D. BARRETT.
Meadville, Penn., Sept. 22d, 1888.

SARAH LAKEY.

I read in the BANNER OF LIGHT of Sept. 15th a message from Spirit SARAH LAKEY, now a resident in the spirit-world. She used to live in Pawtucket, R. I., and was well and favorably known to her many friends, who are well pleased to hear from her.

WM. G. WOOD.
Providence, R. I., Sept. 20th, 1888.

EZEKIEL TATEM, ET AL.

I recognize the message given through Mrs. B. F. Smith, in this week's BANNER OF LIGHT (Sept. 22d), coming from CAPT. EZEKIEL TATEM. I was well acquainted with him, and with his mother and sister. They have no faith whatever in spirit-return. I also knew SALLIE GRIFFITH and little ANNIE BURBANK. Their messages are perfectly correct, and the sister Lydia mentioned was very much pleased to hear from them. Respectfully yours, R. A. GAGE.
Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 21st, 1888.

Important Caution.

Fire Marshal Whitcomb in his annual report lays down the following rules for the benefit of those who use kerosene lamps. It is a timely caution and should be implicitly followed:

The portion of the wick which is in the oil-reservoir should be enclosed in a tube of thin sheet metal, open at the bottom; or in a cylinder of fine wire gauze such as is used in miners' safety lamps (twenty-eight meshes to the inch).

The oil reservoir should be of metal, rather than of china or glass. It should have no feeding-place nor opening other than that into which the upper part of the lamp is screwed.

Every lamp should have a proper extinguishing apparatus and a broad and heavy base.

Wicks should be soft, not too tightly plaited; be dried at the fire before being put into the lamps; be only just long enough to reach the bottom of the oil-reservoir; be so wide that they quite fill the wick-holder without having to be squeezed into it, and should be soaked with oil before being lit.

The reservoir should be quite filled with oil every time before using the lamp.

The lamp should be kept thoroughly clean; all oil should be carefully wiped off, and all charred wick and dirt removed before lighting.

When the lamp is lit the wick should be at first turned down, and then slowly raised.

Lamps which have no extinguishing apparatus should be put out as follows: The wick should be turned down until there is only a small, flickering flame, and a sharp puff or breath should then be sent across the top of the chimney, but not down it.

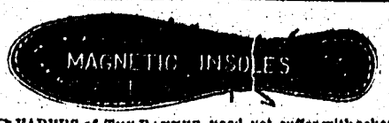
Cans or bottles used for oil should be free from water and dirt, and should be kept thoroughly closed.

He that knows nothing doubts of nothing. Do not let your doubts cause you to waver, for you may be assured that Warner's Log Cabin Liver Pills will cause the sluggish liver to resume its wonted functions and produce the results you desire. They are effective and harmless, being purely vegetable.

"If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?"

The world-wide reputation of Prof. Alfred R. Wallace as one in the foremost ranks of scientists imparts an added strength and value to the clear elucidation and masterly advocacy of the truths of Spiritualism given by him in his lecture having for its theme, "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?" published in a pamphlet of twenty-four pages by Colby & Rich, and supplied at the very low rate of 5 cents a single copy, thirteen for 50 cents, or thirty for $1.00. Let it do its work; buy it and circulate it.

Advertisements.



READERS of THE BANNER need not suffer with aches, pains, soreness in feet and limbs, lame back, diseased kidneys or paralysis. A Certain, Sure, Positive Specific is offered by one who knows the laws of physical action. A single pair of our POWERFUL MAGNETIC INSOLES will give you complete evidence, and warm your feet and limbs in Five Minutes. Magnetism is life, and always vitalizes the blood when brought in contact with the body. You can wear these Insoles in your shoes, sleep with them in your socks on at night, or bind them on any part of the body, and you will experience delightful comfort, rest and relief from all aches, pains, or tired, worn-out feelings. You are sensible men and women, or you would not read THE BANNER. Why can't you believe the TRUTH which we utter, and which will set you free from dis-ease? Try the INSOLES at least; these will give you more than TEN DOLLARS' worth of solid comfort at a cost of only $1.00. If you test the INSOLES upon any part of your body you will find instant comfort and relief.

The energizing potency, the powerful magnetic warmth and life these INSOLES generate, will surprise you. Remember, we tell you MAGNETIC SHIELDS are genuine life-imparting and health-giving Therapeutic Agents, and excel all other Curative Agents combined.

Test a pair of INSOLES; these will keep your feet warm all winter, will remove soreness from feet and limbs, and rest you. Only $1.00 a pair, or THREE pairs for $2.00, by mail, postage paid, and guaranteed safe delivery to you.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD COMPANY,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.
O6 13w*

FOR SPIRITŒPATHY Healing Treatment by Letter,
Any Distance, Address
DR. G. A. PEIRCE, P.O. Box 1135, Lewiston, Me. Diagnosis of any Person's disorders by Spirits. Communication free of charges, except one or more letter stamps. For a Trial Treatment, inclose with order $1.00, lock of the Person's hair or recent writing, statement of age, sex, full name, residence, and description of disorders. Twenty-six years of successful practice as a Magnetic and Clairvoyant Physician, Test, Lecturing and Trance Medium, give him a long list of Cures, Tests and Testimonials. tf O6

DR. F. L. H. WILLIS
May be Addressed until further notice,
Clenora, Yates Co., N. Y.
DR. WILLIS may be addressed as above. From this point he can attend to the diagnosing of disease psychometrically. He claims that his powers in this line are unrivaled, combining, as he does, accurate scientific knowledge with keen and searching psychometric power.
Dr. Willis claims especial skill in treating all diseases of the blood and nervous system. Cancers, Scrofula in all its forms, Epilepsy, Paralysis, and all the most delicate and complicated diseases of both sexes.
Dr. Willis is permitted to refer to numerous parties who have been cured by his system of practice when all others had failed. All letters must contain a return postage stamp.
Send for Circulars, with References and Terms.
O6 13w*

DR. J. R. NEWTON
STILL heals the sick! Spirit, Mind and Magnetic Cures at a distance through MRS. NEWTON. Send for testimonials to MRS. J. R. NEWTON, P. O. Station G., New York City. 13w* O6

SOUL READING,
Or Psychometrical Delineation of Character.
MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE would respectfully announce to the public that those who wish, and will visit her in person, or send their autograph or lock of hair, she will give an accurate description of their leading traits of character and peculiarities of disposition; marked changes in past and future life; physical disease, with prescription therefor; what business they are best adapted to pursue in order to be successful; the physical and mental adaptation of those intending marriage; and hints to the inharmoniously married. Full delineation, $2.00, and four 2-cent stamps. Brief delineation, $1.00, and four 2-cent stamps.
Address, MRS. A. B. SEVERANCE,
Centre street, between Church and Prairie streets,
O6 6m* White Water, Walworth Co., Wis.

ASTONISHING OFFER.
SEND three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power. DR. A. B. DOBSON Maquoketa, Iowa.
Jy14 13w*

A LIBERAL OFFER,
BY A RELIABLE CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER.
SEND four 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name, age and sex, we will diagnose your case FREE by independent spirit-writing. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Worcester, Mass.
Au11 13w*

Sealed Letters Answered
BY MRS. ELIZA A. MARTIN, Oxford, Mass. Terms $1.00 and two 2-cent stamps. 4w* O6

SEALED LETTERS.
ELEANOR MARTIN now makes specialty of business, $5.00. Full Spiritual Message, $2.00. 73 Lane Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Register all letters. 4w* S22

A Wonderful Discovery.
BY a Clairvoyant. Melted Pebble Spectacles will restore lost vision. Send a 2-cent stamp for valuable information. Address B. F. POOLE, Optician, Clinton, Iowa. 4w* O6

MRS. R. T. CLANEY,
BUSINESS AND TEST MEDIUM, No. 411 Lookout street, Chattanooga, Tenn. 6m* Je23

BY DIRECTION of her guides, MRS. JENNIE CROSSE will remove to the country for a while, where she will continue to give Life-Readings for $1.00 and stamp, and answer six questions for 50 cents and stamp. Disease a specialty. Address West Garland, Me.
O6 2w*

The Writing Planchette.
SCIENCE is unable to explain the mysterious performances of this wonderful little instrument, which writes intelligent answers to questions asked either aloud or mentally. Those unacquainted with it would be astonished at some of the results that have been attained through its agency, and no domestic circle should be without one. All investigators who desire practice in writing mediumship should avail themselves of these "Planchettes," which may be consulted on all questions, as also for communications from deceased relatives or friends.
DIRECTIONS.—Place Planchette on a piece of paper (printing or writing will answer), then place the hand lightly on the board; in a few minutes it begins to move, and is ready to answer mental or spoken questions. Though it cannot be guaranteed that every individual who follows these directions will succeed in obtaining the desired result, or cause the instrument to move, independent of any muscular effort of his or her own, yet it has been proved beyond question that where a party of three or more come together, it is almost impossible that one cannot operate it. If one be not successful, let two try it together. If nothing happens the first day, try it the next, and even if half an hour a day for several days are given to it, the results will amply remunerate you for the time and patience bestowed upon it.
The Planchette is furnished complete with box, pencil and directions, by which any one can easily understand how to use it.
PLANCHETTE, with Pentagraph Wheels, 60 cents, securely packed in a box, and sent by mail, postage free.
NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF CANADA AND THE PROVINCES.—Under existing postal arrangements between the United States and Canada, PLANCHETTES cannot be sent through the mails, but must be forwarded by express only, at the purchaser's expense.
For sale by COLBY & RICH. tf

DR. RHODES' FAMILY MEDICINES.
Purely Vegetable
(ALL SUGAR-COATED)
Medical Confections.
A Universal Blessing.
SUITED TO OLD OR YOUNG!
A PERFECT Liver and Kidney Renovator and Blood Purifier. Cleanses the entire system from all Biliousness and Blood Poisons from Malaria, etc. And cures Headache, Backache, Side and Stomach-ache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pains in the Limbs, Lameness, Numbness, Constipation, Piles, Worms, Dyspepsia, Consumption, Nervousness, Weakness, Kidney and Bladder, and all other urinary ailments, etc. Also, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and in fact almost all the various ailments of humanity.
PRICES: Trial box, 25 cents—by mail, 30 cents; second size, 50 cents—by mail, 55 cents; 12 boxes second size, $5.00; large boxes, $1.00; six large boxes, $5.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

CARLAND'S
Vegetable Cough Drops.
THE greatest known remedy for all Throat and Lung Complaints. For Catarrh, Asthma, etc., etc., it has no equal. It is warranted to cure Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Bronchitis, and Inflammation of the Lungs. It is free from all opiates and minerals, or any other injurious ingredient; and is therefore harmless in all cases; likewise palatable and beneficial in regulating and strengthening the system; and as a BLOOD PURIFIER IS TRULY UNRIVALLED. A box, taken according to directions, is warranted in all cases to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded by the proprietor, DR. M. H. CARLAND, 498 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.
Price, per box (one-fourth pound), 25 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

CATARRH, Diphtheria, and all Throat Diseases, curable by the use of DR. J. E. BRIGGS'S THROAT REMEDY. Mr. Andrew Jackson Davis writes: "Dr. Briggs's Throat Remedy for the Throat and Catarrhal Affections, including Diphtheria, I know to be equal to the claims in the advertisement."
Price, 50 cents per bottle; postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

DIAGNOSIS FREE.
SEND two 2-ct. stamps, lock of hair, name in full, age and sex, and I will give you a CLAIRVOYANT DIAGNOSIS OF YOUR AILMENTS. Address J. C. BATDORF, M. D., Principal, Magnetic Institute, Grand Rapids, Mich. 1m* O6

Mediums in Boston.

JAMES R. COCKE,
Developing and Business Medium,
ALSO
Clairvoyant Physician,
474 Shawmut Avenue, Boston,
(Corner of Concord street.)
Sittings daily from 9 A. M. till 5 P. M. Price $1.00.
Unequalled Advantages.
DR. COCKE gives special inducements for Medical and Magnetic Treatment by the month.
Development of Mediumship a Specialty.
SIX PRIVATE SITTINGS FOR $4.00 IN ADVANCE.
CIRCLES.
Sunday, at 11 A. M., for Development and Tests. At 8 P. M., for Psychometry and Tests. Thursday evening, at 7:30, for Development. tf S29

J. W. FLETCHER,
MEDICAL AND BUSINESS MEDIUM,
ALSO ELECTRICIAN AND MAGNETIST
6 Beacon street, Boston.
O6 tf

Do You Wish to be Developed?
PERSONS wishing to know what phase of Mediumship they may possess, will be told FREE of charge by calling any Thursday afternoon during the month of October, between the hours of 2 and 3:30, at the office of
DR. J. R. COCKE,
474 Shawmut Ave., cor. Concord St., Boston.
S29 4w*

DR. HENRY ROGERS,
684 TREMONT STREET.
Diagnosis and Sittings by the Occult Telegraph, $1.00.
S15 5w*

HATTIE C. STAFFORD
WILL give séances at No. 55 Rutland street Sundays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 2:30 P. M.; also Sundays and Wednesdays at 8 P. M.
O6 tf GEORGE T. ALBRO, MANAGER.

Something New and Pleasing.
WRITE a letter to your spirit friends and have it answered by independent writing. Questions upon Health and Business answered in same manner. Price $1.00. Address ANNIE LORD CHAMBERLAIN, Box 56, Mattapan Dist., Boston, Mass. 1m O6

Mrs. Florence K. Rich,
TRANCE and Business Medium. Also letters answered from lock of hair or photo. Sittings and Answers to letters, $2.00. Hours 9 to 6 P. M. daily. Parlors 38 Evans House, 175 Tremont street, Boston. 1w* O6

MRS. H. W. CUSHMAN,
MUSICAL, Test, Business and Writing Medium. Circles Monday, 7:30 P. M.; Thursday, 2:30 P. M. Six questions answered by mail for $1.00 and stamp. Examination by lock of hair, $1.00. 212 Main street, Charlestown. 4w* S22

MISS A. PEABODY,
MEDICAL, Business and Test Medium. Sittings daily. Circles Monday, Thursday evenings, and Tuesday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Magnetic and Electric Treatments. 1 Bennet street, corner Washington, Boston. 1w* O6

MRS. K. R. STILES,
LOCATED at 139 Dartmouth street, Boston, Hotel Bismarck, Suite 2. Sittings daily, Sundays excepted. Will respond to calls for platform work. 4w* S22

MISS L. E. SMITH,
MEDIUM for spirit communications, tests and business. Circles Tuesday, 8 P. M. 14 Union Park street, Boston.
O6 1w*

AUGUSTA DWINELS,
SEERESS, Trance and Prophetic Medium. Office 20 Bennet st., off Washington st., opposite Hollis st., Boston.
O6 1w*

Massage and Magnetism.
MRS. DR. E. M. FAXON, 22 Winter street, Room 7A, Boston. Obesity treated. Also instruction given.
S1 10w*

MRS. A. FORRESTER
WILL give Trance Sittings daily, also Magnetic Treatment from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. 181 Shawmut Avenue, one flight, Boston. Do not ring. 1w* O6

MRS. ALDEN,
TRANCE MEDIUM. Medical Examinations and Magnetic Treatment. 43 Winter street, Boston.
S15 5w*

MRS. FANNIE A. DODD,
MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN and Test Medium, removed to No. 16 Boylston street, near Tremont (one flight).
S8 8w*

MRS. E. B. STRATTON,
WRITING MEDIUM, Hotel Garfield, Suite 4, West Rutland Square, Boston. 1w* O6

A. S. HAYWARD, Magnetic Physician. Letter address for personal treatment or his powerful Spirit Magnetized Paper, during the summer months, 9 Hosworth street, Boston. Two packages by mail, $1.00.
O6 13w*

MISS L. M. WHITING.—Massage. This method of treating all chronic and nervous diseases, and stiffness of limbs from sprains or breaks, is the most successful in use. Oct. 1st will remove to parlors 4 and 5, No. 164A Tremont street, Boston. 12w* Au4

MRS. K. E. FISHER, Magnetic and Electric Physician, 147 Tremont street, Boston, Rooms 6 and 9. Magnetic and Massage Treatment, Electric and Medicated Vapor Baths; also the celebrated Colorado Sulphur Baths.
O6 1w*

MRS. HATTIE YOUNG,
TRANCE and Business Medium, 22 Winter street, Room 16, Boston. 4w* O6

JOSEPH L. NEWMAN, Magnetic Healer, No. 8½ Bosworth street (formerly Montgomery Place), Room 4, Boston, Mass. Office hours, from 1 to 4 P. M.
Jy7 26w*

MRS. S. S. MARTIN, Mesmeric and Magnetic Healer, Hotel Littlefield, Harwich st., off Dartmouth.
S29 2w*

MRS. J. M. CARPENTER, 181 Warren Avenue, Boston. 8w* Au4

J. A. SHELHAMER,
MAGNETIC HEALER,
Office 8½ Bosworth Street, (Room 5,) Boston, Mass.,
WILL treat patients at his office or at their homes, as desired. Dr. S. prescribes for and treats all kinds of diseases. Specialties: Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lung, Liver and Kidney complaints, and all Nervous Disorders. Consultation, prescription and advice, $2.00. Moderate rates for Medicines, when furnished. Magnetized Paper $1.00 per package. Healing by rubbing and laying on of hands. Parties wishing consultation by letter must be particular to state age, sex, and leading symptoms. Liver, Anti-Dyspeptic, Liver and Kidney, or Strengthening and Soothing Pills, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1.00.
Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.—except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he attends out-of-town patients. Letter address care of BANNER OF LIGHT. 13w* Jy7

WAS JESUS DIVINE? A Critical Examination of Biblical Theology. By M. B. CRAVEN. Paper. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Miscellaneous.

Dr. Hardcastle's
TOOTH-LIFE.
A Delightful Tooth-Powder.
THIS Powder thoroughly cleanses the teeth, hardens the gums, purifies the breath, prevents decay, etc.
Of the four pages printed matter accompanying each box of "Tooth-Life," old Dr. Blankman, after reading it, made this remark: "It is the best thing I ever read on the subject, and it is all true, too."
The proprietor says: "As a Spiritualist from my youth, I say in all conscience, no person can fail to find in the box of 'Tooth-Life' and four pages of information accompanying it, that which I positively declare to be, on authority of an experience as an American dentist and student dating from 1860, of infinitely more benefit than twenty-five cents' worth of anything else on earth. The tooth-preservative measures taught alone are worth more to parents and guardians than a thousand times the amount of the investment."
Put up in a neat box. Sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Spiritual Workers.
Photographed from Crayon Portraits
BY ALBERT MORTON.
Additions to this List of Portraits are being Drawn.
DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.
PASCHAL BEVERLY RANDOLPH.
CHARLES H. FOSTER.
CHARLES H. FOSTER and SPIRIT ADAH ISAACS MENKEN, after Spirit Photograph by W. H. Mumler.
PROF. ROBERT HARE.
PROF. WILLIAM DENTON.
DR. H. F. GARDNER.
Cabinet size. Price 50 cents each.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

"Glad Tidings of Immortality."
FINELY executed lithographs bearing the above title have been received by us. The size is 22½x28½. The principal figure is a female, evidently designed to represent a materialized spirit, crowned with a wreath of flowers, and bearing a long band of them in her left hand, while in her right is a scroll inscribed with the words "Message of Love." Over her head are three stars. The drapery on each side appears to be the curtains of a cabinet, between which she stands in an exceedingly graceful position, suggestive of the line, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." From above a ray of light radiates over the entire form. Vignette likenesses of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Lillie and Mrs. Britten, and Messrs. Howell and Colville, are given, and excellent ones they are. The artist is Mr. Shobe, who, we are informed, has executed many beautiful drawings illustrative of the Spiritual Philosophy.
Price 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STELLAR SCIENCE.
I WILL give a test of it to any person who will send me the place and date of their birth (giving sex) and 25 cents, money or stamps.
I will write Biographical and Predictive Letters (from the above data). Also advice upon any matter, in answer to questions, in accordance with my understanding of the science, for a fee of $1; Consultation fee $1; at office, 206 Tremont street.
Nativities written at prices proportionate to the detail demanded. Address OLIVER AMES GOULD, Box 1664, Boston, Mass. Jy19

FORTY YEARS
ON THE
SPIRITUAL ROSTRUM.
BY WARREN CHASE.
A SEQUEL TO "THE LIFE-LINE OF THE LONE ONE."
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THE AUTHOR, AS
The World's Child,
WHO GAVE THE FIRST PUBLIC LECTURES IN THIS COUNTRY IN DEFENSE OF MODERN SPIRIT-INTERCOURSE, AND WHOSE NAME IS FIRST ON THE LIST OF CALLS FOR COPIES OF "NATURE'S DIVINE REVELATIONS," WHEN IN PRESS IN 1847.

No one is better qualified to place on record reliable information regarding the early history of Modern Spiritualism and of its early advocates and defenders, than the author of this volume. There has been scarcely a worker for the cause he has not known; scarce a city or town in the Union he has not visited; and no place he has visited whose people have not enjoyed greater mental freedom and a better understanding of this life and assurance of a future one from his having been with them.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I. Internal and External Forebodings of Social, Political and Religious Convulsions, Personal and General, resulting in a Social Effort by the Author.
II Birth of Spiritualism. Failure of Fourierism—Political Career Opened, and Sketches on the Path of Life by the Crooked and Tangled Line. The First Spiritual Paper, The Univercælum, and its Objects Explained.
III. Early Work. Boston Investigator—Univercælum, Spirit Messenger, and Early Workers, etc.
IV. Catalogue of Names and Short Biographical Notices of Early Workers and Persecutions.
V. A Brief and Brilliant Political Career.
VI. Threading My Way along the "Hard Road to Travel On"—Incidents and Events in the Path of Life.
VII. What I have Learned from Forty Years' Intercourse with Spirits—Sexual Life in the Spirit-World—My Social, Political and Religious Creed, etc.
VIII. Extracts and Scraps of Correspondence running through Many Years, with Various and Progressive Ideas on Spirit-Life and Intercourse; with Scraps from my Scrap-Book worth keeping and largely variegated.
IX. Poetical Selections from Various Sources, Personal and General—Good and Poor, but not Bad, greatly mixed, in Published and Unpublished Scraps.

The volume is embellished with a portrait of the author.
12mo, cloth, pp. 324. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New and Enlarged Edition.
The Spiritual Wreath,
A NEW COLLECTION OF WORDS AND MUSIC
FOR THE
Choir, Congregation and Social Circle.
BY S. W. TUCKER.
CONTENTS:

Angels, Come to Me.	Shall We Know Each Other There?
Angel Presence.	The Happy By-and-Bye.
Beautiful Isle.	The Soul's Destiny.
Come Angels.	The Angel of His Presence.
Compensation.	There Is No Death.
Day by Day.	They Still Live.
Going Home.	The Better Land.
Guardian Angels.	The Music of Our Hearts.
Home of Rest.	The Freeman's Hymn.
Hope for the Sorrowing.	The Vanished.
Humility.	They will Meet Us on the Shore.
Happy Thoughts.	The Eden Above.
He's Gone.	The Other Side.
I'm Called to the Better Land.	Will You Meet Me Over There?
I Thank Thee, oh, Father.	Who Will Guide My Spirit Home?
Jubilate.	Whisper Us of Spirit-Life.
My Spirit Home.	Waiting On This Shore.
Nearer Home.	Waiting 'Mid the Shadows.
Over There.	Welcome Home.
Passed On.	Welcome Angels.
Reconciliation.	We Long to be There.
Repose.
She Has Crossed the River.
Strike your Harps.
Some Day of Days.

NEW PIECES.

Bethany.	Ready to Go.
By Love We Arise.	Sweet Rest at Home.
Gone Before.	They 're Calling Us over the Sea.
Gone Home.	We 'll know Each Other There.
Invocation Chant.	We 'll Meet Them By-and-Bye.
I Shall Know His Angel Name.	Will Bloom Again.
Nearing the Goal.	When Earthly Labors Close.
No Weeping There.
Our Home Beyond the River.
Parting Hymn.
Rest on the Evergreen Shore.

Boards. Price: Single copies, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50. (A few copies of old edition at 25 cents per copy, or twelve copies for $2.50.)
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE
Mystery of the Ages
CONTAINED IN THE
Secret Doctrine of All Religions.
BY MARIE, COUNTESS OF CAITHNESS.
CONTENTS.
Introductory; The Theory and Practice of Theosophy; The Secret of Mythology; Egyptian and Christian Gnosticism; The Theosophy of the Brahmins, Magi and Druids; Buddhist Theosophy; Esoteric Buddhism; Chinese Theosophy; Pagan Theosophy; Theosophic Ideas of the Ancient Romans; The Kabbala, or Hebrew Theosophy; The Sufis and Mohammedan Theosophy; Christian Theosophy; The Theosophy of Christ; The Theosophic Interpretation of the Bible; Conclusion; Soul, Infinity, The Path, Nirvana, The End.
Cloth, beveled edges, pp. 341. Price $3.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

New York Advertisements.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M. D.,
304 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, successfully treats all forms of Chronic Diseases, however complicated. Patients afflicted for years, regarded as hopeless, or incurable, testify to permanent restoration. For twenty years his power to diagnose and treat Disease has been and still stands unequaled, so say eminent Scientists, Physicians, Clergymen, and patients from all parts of the country. Voluminous testimony can be seen at his office. Those unable to visit the Doctor in person can be successfully treated at their homes. Send stamp for Circular. Diagnosis, with advice, $2.00.
Extract from a letter by Rev. F. R. M., D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.: . . . "I am happy to testify to Dr. Dake's high moral character as a man, and his eminent ability as a physician who has achieved a most extraordinary career."
O6 tf

Mrs. Stoddard-Gray and Son, DeWitt C. Hough,
HOLD Materializing Séances every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday evening, 8 o'clock; Tuesday and Saturday, 2 o'clock, at 323 W. 34th street, New York. Daily Sittings for Communication and Business. 4w* O6

MRS. C. M. SAWYER,
MATERIALIZING MEDIUM,
No. 785 Sixth Avenue, New York, N. Y.
SEANCES Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, at 8 o'clock; Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. 6w S22

MRS. L. HIGGINS, Business, Trance and Test Medium. Sittings daily 10 to 3, Wednesdays excepted. 351 West 27th street, New York. 4w* S22

MARY C. MORRELL, Business, Prophetic and Developing Medium, 230 West 36th street, New York City. 10w* Au25

MRS. C. SCOTT, Trance and Business Medium. Sittings 10 to 5. No. 21 West 13th street, N. Y.
Au11 10w*

RUPTURES
CURED in thirty days by my MEDICAL COMPOUND and improved ELASTIC SUPPORTER TRUSS. Send Stamp for Circular. Address CAPT. W. A. COLLINGS, Smithville, Jefferson Co., N. Y. [Mention this paper.] 13w* Au4

Clairvoyant Examinations Free.
ENCLOSE lock of hair, with leading symptoms. We will give you a correct diagnosis of your case. Address E. F. BUTTERFIELD, M. D., corner Warren and Fayette streets, Syracuse, New York. 26w* Ja28

The Weekly Discourse;
Containing the Spiritual Sermons by the guides of
MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND.
VOLUME III.
No. 1.—THE THREE M'S: MAMMON, MILLIONAIRES AND MURDER.
No. 2.—A LEAP IN THE DARK.
No. 3.—WHAT RELIGION IS BEST FOR MANKIND?
No. 4.—IDEAL SOCIALISM: HOW DOES IT COMPARE WITH CHRISTIANITY AND SPIRITUALISM?
No. 5.—THE IMPORT OF THE DAY.
No. 6.—ANCIENT AND MODERN MIRACLES.
No. 7.—THE JUDGMENT DAY.
No. 8.—THE POWER OF PRAYER.
No. 9.—THE NATURE OF SPIRITUALISM: IN ANSWER TO THE WORLD'S NEEDS.
No. 10.—THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE WORLD.
No. 11.—THE POPE, THE PROPAGANDA.
No. 12.—THE BETRAYERS OF SPIRITUALISM.
No. 13.—THE HEIGHT, THE DEPTH AND THE BREADTH OF SPIRITUAL TRUTH.
No. 14.—SOME APPROPRIATE ANSWERS TO SUPERFICIAL QUESTIONS.
No. 15.—A LEAF FROM THE BOOK OF THE FUTURE.
No. 16.—A CORRECT STATEMENT OF THE NATURE OF SPIRIT-LIFE; ITS EMPLOYMENTS AND PURSUITS.
No. 17.—WHAT OF THE NIGHT?
No. 18.—LIVES THAT WERE EPITOMIZED.
No. 19.—WHY DOES MAN CLAIM IMMORTALITY?
No. 20.—WHAT IS THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE TEXT, "IN MY FATHER'S HOUSE ARE MANY MANSIONS"?
No. 21.—MODERN SPIRITUALISM AND PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY IDENTICAL.
No. 22.—WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OCCULTISM, THEOSOPHY AND SPIRITUAL SCIENCE?
No. 23.—THE PRACTICAL AND THE IDEAL IN HUMAN LIFE AND IN SPIRITUALISM.
No. 24.—THE RELATION OF SPIRITUALISM TO THE RELIGION, THE POLITICS, THE SOCIETY, AND THE SCIENCE OF TO-DAY.
No. 25.—THE DEWY CROSS, OR, THE ROSICRUCIAN'S DREAM.
No. 26.—"FOR BEHOLD I SHOW YOU A MORE EXCELLENT WAY."
No. 27. THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT.
No. 28.—THE TRINITY: GOD, UNIVERSAL LAW, AND NATURE.
No. 29. THE INFLUENCE OF SPIRITUALISM IN THE NEXT TWENTY FIVE YEARS. Materially, Socially, Politically, and in the Direction of Religion.
Price 5 cents each.
Single copies of any numbers of Volumes I. and II. will also be supplied at 5 cents each.
Also The Weekly Discourse, containing fifty-two numbers in each volume, handsomely bound in Half Roan, Gold Ruled.
VOL. I.....$3.00. VOL. II.....$3.00.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Works by A. E. Newton.
THE MINISTRY OF ANGELS REALIZED. A Letter to the Edwards Congregational Church, Boston, 1853, giving an account of the author's conversion to Spiritualism. With an Appendix containing facts illustrative of Angelic Ministry, and a Reply to the Congregationalist. Pamphlet, 72 pages, 15 cents, postage 2 cents; eight copies, $1.00.
ANSWER TO CHARGES preferred by the Church, with Account of Trial. Pamphlet, 36 pages, 10 cents.
LESSONS FOR CHILDREN, on Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene. Cloth, 141 pages, 50 cents; postage 3 cents.
THE BETTER WAY, an Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a Wiser Parentage. Pamphlet, 48 p

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1888.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

OCTOBER.

Over the field where the brown quails whistle,
Over the ferns where the rabbits lie,
Floats the tremulous down of a thistle.
Is it the soul of a butterfly?
See! how they scatter and then assemble;
Filling the air while the blossoms fade,
Delicate atoms that whirl and tremble
In slanting sunlight that skirts the glade.
* * * * * * *
Come next August, when thistles blossom,
See how each is alive, with wings!
Butterflies seek their souls in its bosom,
Changed thenceforth to immortal things.
—T. W. Higginson, in St. Nicholas.

SHORT SERMON.—He that knoweth not that which he ought to know is a brute beast among men; he that knoweth no more than he hath need of, is a man among brute beasts; and he that knoweth all that may be known, is a god among men.—Pythagoras, B. C. 582.

Calumny is only the noise of madmen.—Diogenes. B. C. 412.

Various points in England and others in Michigan, Pennsylvania and Vermont have just had their "first snow" of the season; Boston has to content itself with being "drowned out" by rain.

At the Hollis Street Theatre Mr. Dixey presented "Adonis" all last week, and the house was packed at every performance, the receipts being almost as large as were those of the first six days of his last remarkable engagement here, which goes to prove how sterling a favorite is Mr. Dixey in this city. Next week will be Mr. Dixey's last here, so that all who desire to see him should apply for tickets at an early date.

Rev. M. J. Savage sailed on the steamer Servia Saturday, Sept. 22d, from Liverpool, and is much improved in health. The Church of the Unity will resume services Sunday, Oct. 7th.

A PREVENTIVE OF YELLOW FEVER.—I wish to mention to you that if yellow fever gets near your town you have the preventive for it. Cut an onion in half, and put one half under each arm, the flat side to your body, and I will warrant you will have no fever.—P. R. J., of Pomona, in the Florida Agriculturist.

A sort of adult "Jesse Pomeroy" is at present spreading terror among the London populace by his terrible freaks of murder and mutilation, wrought under cover of night in the Whitechapel district. The victims are all females. The English police thus far have been unable to gain the slightest clue to the identity or habitation of the human monster.

A prominent lawyer told me the other day, in connection with the Christian Scientists, that he had won a case on a promissory note given by a pupil of a well-known female scientist in this city for balance due for instruction. It was held that the note was void, the instruction given not being any consideration. This is rather tough on "Christian Science" or so-called "Mind Cure."—Record.

An Austrian Pompeii has just been unearthed near Zara. Zara is the Capital of the Austrian Province of Dalmatia. Thousands of coins of the Diocletian period and of other early times, rare specimens of Grecian and Roman sculpture and Byzantine architecture, were discovered along the Dalmatian shores. Amphitheatres, temples, catacombs and other evidences of a busy and highly civilized community were unearthed.

Between three and four million names have already been secured to go into Congress this winter on petitions for a National Sunday law. Does that look like danger?—New Thought.

While admitting and endorsing the action of a healthy moral sense in the individual, Dr. Malcolm aims a strong blow at that hypochondriacal order of thought sometimes known among the "unco guid" which he declares to be "the result of morbid brooding over past shortcomings, magnified through lenses of a supersensitive conscience, thus assuming abnormal proportions."

An Albany physician says he has never known a case of cancer among the Hebrews, and thinks their exemption from the disease is due to their abstinence from pork.

IN A QUANDARY.

"Tell me, my child, what ails you,
I can bear the worst of news;
Has a horrid man deceived you?
Do you suffer from tight shoes?"
She sobbed, "I love six fellows,
And I do n't know which to choose."
—Drake's Magazine.

Fifty-three women were granted patents in the first twenty-two weeks of 1888.

Where necessity ends curiosity begins.—Jonson.

"Young man," he said sonorously, "are you ever abroad in the early morning when the great orb of day rises in all its majestic and brilliant glory?" "Well—er—yes, sir, sometimes," replied the young man, "but I generally try to get to bed earlier than that."

It will be seen by reference to our advertising columns that a new paper, entitled The Sower, is to be issued on the 1st and 15th of each month at Elmwood Place, O. It is a neatly printed sheet of four pages, each page containing four columns.

The United States pension lists number 452,557 persons, of whom 419,763 draw support on account of the civil war. There are thirty-seven Revolutionary pensioners still on the rolls.

PIOUS BRETHREN.

The Orthodox and the Heterodox
Are quarreling with each other;
Yet the Heterodox and the Orthodox
Call each other brother.

HOW IS IT?

Affability and a courteous regard for the feelings and rights of others are indispensable qualities.

Alderman White, lord mayor-elect of London, is the first liberal to fill that office for many years. He is a staunch supporter of Mr. Gladstone. The London liberals propose to give him a public dinner soon.

A man in Clayton, Ill., has a large Maltese cat that takes to water even more kindly than a spaniel. He will go into the water on his own account, and seems to enjoy it hugely. Like a dog he will bring back a stick thrown in the water.

JUST AS WE EXPECTED.—The magicians are fighting. Washington Irving Bishop, the mind-reader, has gone to the City of Mexico to join Kellar, and Herrmann, who is in San Francisco, but soon to appear before the Mexicans, says that Kellar is "a dismal failure," and Bishop "a fraud." Herrmann says he is willing to write a check for $1,000 and some odd cents for "keeps," if Bishop can tell him the number of the odd cents. Herrmann also calls Hertz a "bungling copyist" who would give $10,000, "if he could borrow it," to travel with him one season. In return comes a voice from the City of Mexico that Kellar has an assistant that could do Herrmann "up," while Hertz responds that neither Kellar nor Herrmann have any tricks less than a century old.

The truthful New Orleans Picayune says: "A man may have a level head, but it does not follow that he would like to stand on it."

A hen near Bolton, Tex., laid an egg the other day bearing on it in plain raised letters: "You had better change your ways, and be a better man, for in '99 the world will come to an end."

Pennsylvania is said to have been the only colony where the evidence of an Indian was taken in court against that of a white man.

Churchly—I gave Dea. Snapper $10 this morning for the Kangaroo Mission church in Homie de alley.

Mrs. Churchly—Oh! Arthur, how good you are; I wish I could do something for the mission.

Churchly—Wait till they start the foundation, my dear, and then you can contribute some of that angel cake of yours for the corner-stones.

Spiritualistic Meetings in Boston.

Banner of Light Circle-Room, No. 9 Bosworth Street.—Séances are held every Tuesday and Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock promptly. Admission free. For further particulars, see notice on sixth page. L. B. Wilson, Chairman.

Berkeley Hall, 4 Berkeley Street.—The Boston Spiritual Temple services at 10½ A. M. and 7 P. M. Mrs. R. S. Lillie speaker for the months of October and November. R. Holmes, President; Albert F. Ring, Treasurer; Oscar L. Rockwood, Corresponding and Recording Secretary.

First Spiritual Temple, corner Newbury and Exeter Streets.—The "Spiritual Fraternity" Society will commence its public meetings Sunday, Oct. 7th. The Temple Fraternity School for Children meets at 10½ A. M. Afternoon service at 2¾; and Wednesday evening Sociable at 7½. Mrs. H. S. Lake's guides will speak during October and November.

Spiritualistic Phenomena Association, Lyceum Hall, 1031 Washington Street.—Sunday meetings at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Solicits correspondence with mediums everywhere, through whom interesting phenomena may occur suitable for a public platform. J. H. Lewis, President.

Berkeley Hall, Berkeley Street.—The Independent Club will commence its lectures for the season on Sunday, Oct. 7th, at 3 P. M. W. J. Colville, speaker for October. Chas. Dawbarn, Mrs. Clarke Kimball and others to follow.

College Hall, 34 Essex Street.—Sundays, at 10½ A. M., 2½ and 7½ P. M. Eben Cobb, Conductor.

Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown.—Mediums' meeting every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Dr. Mark Smith, Chairman.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M.; also Wednesdays at 3 P. M. Dr. E. H. Mathews, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—Sundays at 2½ and 7½ P. M. F. W. Mathews, Conductor.

College Hall, 34 Essex Street.—The meetings at this place were presided over last Sunday by Mrs. Eben Cobb, her husband being in the State of Connecticut filling a lecture engagement. She discharged the duties of the position with dignity and executive ability. Preliminary remarks by Mrs. Cobb, and vocal music by Mrs. Case, were followed by a well-received address by Mrs. Lull, (a stranger and a public lecturer,) on some of the salient points of the Spiritual Philosophy. Mrs. Kate R. Stiles also addressed the audience to general acceptance. Mrs. Cobb announced that both these speakers would accept calls to lecture. Tests, remarks and readings were then engaged in by Miss Peabody and Mrs. Forrester; Dr. Eldridge diagnosed diseases; Mr. Redell and Miss Dr. Webster also spoke acceptably.

Mrs. Burnham, the new medium who participated two Sundays previous, has made her appearance as a speaker. She closed the morning services with a few opportune remarks on the school question, calling upon the women to register their names that they might vote on the presentschool question.

The afternoon and evening services were equally as interesting. COM.

Eagle Hall, 616 Washington Street.—Services at this hall last Sunday afternoon and evening were interesting and well attended. Mrs. Loring gave some very fine descriptions of spirits that were recognized by those to whom they were given; she was followed by others. A new medium—a convert from the Baptist Church to Spiritualism—spoke very earnestly for the cause. Dr. Thomas's remarks were well received. These meetings are bringing many new inquirers to the hall each Sunday.

E. H. MATHEWS, Conductor.

Ladies' Aid Parlors, 1031 Washington Street.—The meetings at this hall last Sunday were highly appreciated—Dr. E. H. Mathews, Mrs. Forrester, Mrs. Loring, Mrs. Waterhouse, and others, participating.

Spiritualist Meetings in New York.

Columbia Hall, 878 6th Avenue, between 49th and 50th Streets.—The People's Spiritual Meeting. Services every Sunday at 2¾ and 7¾ P. M. Mediums and speakers always present. Frank W. Jones, Conductor.

Arcanum Hall, 57 West 25th Street, N. E. corner 6th Avenue.—Meetings of the Progressive Spiritualists are held every Sunday at 2½ and 7½ P. M. Reliable speakers and test mediums always present in spirit phenomenal gifts. Prof. G. G. W. Van Horn, Conductor.

Adelphi Hall, corner of 52d Street and 7th Avenue.—The First Society of Spiritualists holds meetings every Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7¾ P. M. Admission free.

A General Conference will be held Monday evening of each week at 230 West 36th street, at the residence of Mrs. M. C. Morrell.

The First Society of Spiritualists.—Mrs. Nellie J. T. Brigham spoke in the morning. The following subjects, selected by the audience, formed the basis of her remarks: "Are all events the true result of pre-existing causes? or can we by exertion and effort change their course?" "If man has to pay the penalty of his sins, where does forgiveness come in?" "The effect of prayer"; "Please make a close analysis of the text, 'The life is more than meat, and the body than raiment,' as proof of present interposition of Supreme Intelligence in the affairs of man." She also improvised four poems, subjects, "Silent Archways," "The Medium Christ," "Consistency" and "Rosemary" [the flower of remembrance]. The lecture was very logical and able, and commanded the most profound attention of the audience. It was regarded by her hearers as one of the most interesting of Mrs. Brigham's efforts. The poems were also well received.

In the evening the subject was, "Did the Sin of Adam Cause the Fear of Death?"

Next Sunday morning and evening Mrs. Brigham will officiate in Paterson, N. J., and Lyman C. Howe will speak for the First Society.

The Meeting for Spiritual Manifestations reöpened this afternoon. Miss Ella Porter played a piano solo; Miss Maud Pleasant, the favorite young soprano, sung a solo; Henry J. Newton, Esq., made opening remarks suited to the occasion, which met the approval of the audience, as shown by their applause.

Mrs. E. A. Wells lectured upon the subject of "What is Spiritualism?" She said: The person who is well inclined to wisdom, and whose mind is not filled with worldly rubbish, will never denounce an idea until he has investigated it, nor will he dismiss a good thought until he has entertained it for a time and purpose. It is originally natural for man to oppose everything that he does not present to the public, therefore it is but natural for many to oppose Spiritualism. . . . All who claim kinship with our Father in heaven, and a joint kinship with Jesus the Christ, or saving example, reach beyond the material to rest their claim in the spiritual kingdom. Therefore, all who really believe in immortality as the omega of our existence are Spiritualists—believers in spirit existence in a world or condition beyond and further advanced than this: Believers in an existence as spirits—therefore Spiritualists, even if they deny the fact in terms.

The Spiritualist believes in spirit-existence; in eternal spirit-life; in positive rewards and negative punishments; in happiness hereafter and here as a reward for clean, honest, correct living, with charity for all and malice toward none.

There was the strictest attention given to the lecture, and much applause. After the discourse Mrs. Wells gave a large number of tests to the satisfaction and delight of the recipients. Some of these tests were very fine, and all were recognized but one. S.

New York, Sept. 30th, 1888.

[FROM OUR NEW YORK SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

☞ I am pleased to inform THE BANNER readers that Mrs. M. E. Williams, whose sudden journey to Prince Edwards Island a few weeks ago to reach her daughter Gertrude, then dangerously ill, was referred to in a late issue, has returned to this city, accompanied by Miss Gertrude, who is now convalescing; and though yet very feeble, it is hoped will soon be restored to full health.

I learn that Mrs. Williams will resume her public work in her séance-room on Oct. 2d, and give séances as heretofore on Tuesday and Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoons.

☞ Mrs. Effie Moss has so far recovered from her late severe illness that she will resume her public work and give séances on Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings and Friday afternoons.

Spiritualist Meetings in Brooklyn.

Johnston Building, Flatbush Avenue, corner of Nevins Street.—Brooklyn Progressive Spiritual Conference every Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock.

Spiritual Conference.—For some time past the thought of the meeting has turned upon man and his relation to both this world and the world beyond. Sept. 15th, Mr. St. Pierre Adolphe, a native of the West Indies and a lecturer in England some twenty years, gave us as the opening an address on "Theology," which he defined as "the study of man, his relation to the other world," and "the end of the world according to the Bible." It is hardly necessary to say that he meant Spiritualism and all that it teaches as regarding ourselves and the supposed end of the world or "latter days," as looked for by the Christian world through the fulfillment of Bible Prophecy.

Saturday, Sept. 22d, Mr. Ellsworth of New York City spoke upon "Three Men and their Work"—being a description of our threefold nature—our trinity in unity—the physical, mental and moral man and the work of each.

The gentleman was followed by Mr. Philbrook, who tried to explain the mind according to his own ideas, which were in turn criticised by Mr. Elwell.

The meetings are well attended and full of promise. C.

Chicago, Ill.—Mrs. A. H. Colby-Luther will speak for "The People's Spiritual Society" at 2:30 and 7:45 P. M., at its hall, 116 Fifth Avenue, on Sunday, Oct. 7th, and on each Sunday afternoon and evening during the month of October; to be followed by J. Clegg Wright and others during the fall and winter months.

G. JENIFER, Sec'y.

AMERICAN SPIRITUALIST ALLIANCE

MEETS AT 219 WEST 42D STREET, NEW YORK CITY, ON EACH ALTERNATE WEDNESDAY AT 8 P. M.

THE ALLIANCE defines a Spiritualist to be: "One who knows that intelligent communication can be had between the living and the so-called dead"; therefore all Spiritualists are cordially invited to become members—either resident or non-resident—and to take an active part in its work.

NELSON CROSS, President.
J. F. JEANERET, Secretary,
46 Maiden Lane, New York.

THE AMERICAN SPIRITUALIST ALLIANCE held its regular meeting at 219 West 42d street, New York, on Wednesday evening, Sept. 26th; the attendance was large, and the interest deep and earnest.

The consideration of the subject, "Spiritual Manifestations through Mediumship," was the order for the evening, and remarks were made by several members and visitors who were present. The necessity of deducing the philosophy that underlies the phenomena, and applying it for the purpose of lifting humanity from out the darkness, degradation and ignorance in which it suffers, and teaching men how to live purer and higher lives, more in harmony with the inherent principles of their being, was advocated by all, and the meeting was carried up on to a high spiritual plane, calling out that love that finds its highest delight in trying to assist others.

The desire to place Spiritualism before the world in its true character as a power to purify, elevate and save, animated every breast, and all seemed to feel at this meeting that THE ALLIANCE had struck the true key-note of the work it has to do.

The next meeting will be at the same place Oct. 10th. J. F. CLARK, Cor. Sec'y.

J. Frank Baxter in Lynn.

The popularity and worth of this speaker in Lynn, at least, have been thoroughly demonstrated these past two Sundays. Rarely at the opening of the season are the audiences large, nor expected to be; but notwithstanding the Lynn Society of Spiritualists began its meetings two weeks earlier this year than usual in order to secure Mr. Baxter's services, the audiences of the evenings have tested the capacity of the hall.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. Baxter spoke upon the Permanency of Modern Spiritualism, showing the hold it had upon the hearts of the people, what its influence had been and is, and venturing to prophesy its purpose and mission. It was not led by any mortal or organized body, but was controlled solely by spirits, who inaugurated it, and would reach ultimate victory.

In the evening he showed the practical work of Modern Spiritualism.

A test séance followed the evening discourse, and a large number of descriptions were given. During this séance another skeptic, and an open critic, acknowledged having received a remarkable test.

To make sure for another season the management has arranged for Mr. Baxter in Lynn in September and October of 1889—over one year hence.

Mrs. C. Fannie Allyn will be the speaker for October, for whom Mr. Baxter in a brotherly way spoke a good word, saying: "No one can afford to let such an opportunity as next month offers go by unheeded."

SAGAMORE.

Portland, Me.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

The lecture season was opened Sunday, Sept. 23d, in Mystic Hall, Dr. George A. Fuller of Dover, Mass., occupying the platform. His subject for the afternoon discourse was: "Show Me the Way." Bro. Fuller gave an able lecture, contrasting the mere faith of the churches with the knowledge gained through Spiritualism. In the evening his subject was "The Sympathy of Religions." Good audiences attended and were pleased by each lecture.

Sept. 30th, Dr. Fuller closed his engagement with our Society. His afternoon discourse was upon "The Needs of the Hour"; that of the evening was taken from the Bible: "I am not of this World"; each discourse was a thoughtful presentation of the claims of Spiritualism. Dr. Fuller will not be with us again for some time, as he goes South the first of January to fill a year's engagement there. B.

[The report of the reception and presentation will appear next week.]

J. J. Morse in Chicago.

This eloquent orator will take the Young People's Progressive Society's platform Sunday morning and evening, Oct. 7th, and continue every Sunday during the month.

The meetings are to be opened free to all, and it is our request to our many friends and those interested in Spiritualism and its fair and just presentation, to secure the attendance of as many of their skeptical friends as possible, and most especially those interested in the Christian churches of our city. We also ask the assistance of those who are able to aid us financially. We know there are many among our spiritual friends; and we trust they will come forward and give us, even if it be but a trifle, sufficient to continue our meetings and carry out the objects of our Society.

A. L. COVERDALE.

Philadelphia, Pa.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Last Sunday, Sept. 30th, the guides of Mrs. H. S. Lake addressed two large and appreciative audiences—the morning subject being "Politics and Principles," and the evening lecture based upon questions. The little Indian guide, "Prairie Flower," has very much endeared herself to the members of the society and the audiences generally, who have derived much pleasure and profit from her quaint and peculiar sayings and satisfactory tests.

The society is in a prosperous and harmonious condition, and enters upon the season's work with meritorious zeal and determination. It has empowered several resident mediums to act in the capacity of teachers and demonstrators of the Spiritual Philosophy.

L. R. C.

Haverhill, Mass.—Last Sunday was the occasion of the observance of memorial services by the First Spiritual Association of Haverhill and Bradford, as a testimonial of respect to the memory of the late Walter H. Whittier, an esteemed member of the Association. The services of the day were by Dr. J. C. Street of Boston, the afternoon subject being "Spiritualism and Its Attitude Toward the Church and Christianity." The memorial services took place in the evening, before a large audience, embracing besides Spiritualists many personal friends of the departed one. There were many flowers contributed in various forms adorning the speakers' stand and its surroundings, and the exercises were deeply interesting. Following the address all friends of Mr. Whittier who desired to speak were invited to do so, and a responsive tribute was thus given to his memory. Following this a favorite control of Dr. Street's took possession of his organism and gave a highly interesting address.

Next Sunday will be the opening of the new lecture course for the autumn and winter, by Mrs. Lizzie S. Manchester of West Randolph, Vt. The singing and orchestral music will be under the direction of Mrs. Benden. E. P. H.

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 1st.

Providence, R. I.—As previously announced our society will hold meetings during the month of October at Blackstone Hall on Sundays at 10:45 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. The speaker will be Mr. J. William Fletcher, whose ministrations last season gave good satisfaction, as attested by the large audiences that greeted him. After his evening lecture, which is usually a short one, he gives clairvoyant descriptions of spirits.

During last season in carrying on our work we incurred an indebtedness which it will be our earnest effort to cancel during the present month.

We have made no arrangements for future meetings other than those for this month, but we do hope that our friends will respond to this appeal and give generously of their means, so that we can go on with the good work. E. H. WHITNEY,

President Spiritualist Association.

Willimantic, Ct.—Our season opened on Sept. 16th, with Mrs. Ida P. A. Whitlock as speaker, who remained with us two Sundays, and gave after each lecture psychometric readings to the satisfaction of all.

Sunday, the 30th, Mrs. E. Clark Kimball occupied our platform for the first time. Her audiences filled the house—two ladies over sixty years of age driving in for fifteen miles to listen to what this lady had to say, and although they belonged to the Baptist church they received through the mediumship of Mrs. Kimball evidence which proved to them beyond a doubt the fact of spirit-return, and went home to glory in having spent the happiest day of their life.

Dr. Geo. A. Fuller of Dover, Mass., comes Oct. 8th for two Sundays, and will be followed by Mr. Lyman C. Howe. ☞

Clinton, Mass.—The Ladies' Aid Society of Clinton reörganized Sept. 26th, 1888, and elected Mrs. Emma Miner, President; Miss Annie Taylor, Vice President; Miss Gertrude Miner, Secretary and Treasurer. M.

A Claim to Human Gratitude.

Charlotte Corday, the sad-faced, tender-hearted peasant girl of Normandy, made great history by one desperate act!

Sickened by the saturnalia of the French Revolution, and moved to desperation as Robespierre and Marat were leading the flower of France to the guillotine, she determined that she would put an end to Marat's bloody reign.

Marat had demanded two hundred thousand victims for the guillotine!

He proposed to kill off the enemies of the Revolution to make it perpetual!

Horrible thought!

No wonder it fired the blood of this patriotic peasant maid!

Gaining access to his closely guarded quarters by a subterfuge, she found him in his bath, even then inexorable and giving written directions for further slaughter!

He asked her the names of the inimical deputies who had taken refuge in Caen. She told him, and he wrote them down. "That is well! Before a week is over they shall all be brought to the guillotine."

At these words Charlotte drew from her bosom the knife, and plunged it with supernatural force up to the hilt in the heart of Marat.

"Come to me, my dear friend, come to me!" cried Marat, and expired under the blow.

In the Corcoran gallery at Washington is a famous painting of Charlotte, represented as behind the prison bars the day before her execution.

It is a thrilling, sad picture, full of sorrow for her suffering country, and of unconquerable hate for her country's enemies.

What a lesson in this tragic story! Two hundred, nay, five hundred thousand people would Marat have sacrificed to his unholy passion of power!

Methods are quite as murderous and inexorable as men, and they number their victims by the millions.

The page of history is full of murders by authority and by mistaken ideas! In the practice of medicine alone how many hundreds of millions have been allowed to die and as many more killed by unjustifiable bigotry and by bungling!

But the age is bettering. Men and methods are improving. A few years ago it was worth one's professional life to advise or permit the use of a proprietary medicine. To-day there are not two physicians in any town in this country who do not regularly prescribe some form of proprietary remedy.

H. H. Warner, famed all over the world as the discoverer of Warner's safe cure, began hunting up the old remedies of the Log Cabin days; after long and patient research he succeeded in securing some of the most valuable among family records, and called them Warner's Log Cabin remedies—the simple preparations of roots, leaves, balsams and herbs which were the successful stand-bys of our grandmothers. These simple, old-fashioned sarsaparilla, hops and buchu, cough and consumption and other remedies have struck a popular chord and are in extraordinary demand all over the land. They are not the untried and imaginary remedies of some dabster chemist, intent on making money, but the long-sought principles of the healing art which for generations kept our ancestors in perfect health, put forth for the good of humanity by one who is known all over the world as a philanthropist—a lover of his fellow man—whose name is a guarantee of the highest standard of excellence.

The preparations are of decided and known influence over disease, and as in the hands of our grandmothers they raised up the sick, cured the lame, and bound up the wounds of death, so in their new form but olden power as Log Cabin remedies, they are sure to prove the "healing of the nations."

Corday did the world an incalculable service in ridding France of the bigoted and murderous Marat, just as this man is doing humanity a service by reintroducing to the world the simpler and better methods of our ancestors.

Worcester.—The Association of Spiritualists met in conference Sunday evening, Sept. 30th, at the home of Dr. and Sister Prentiss. Singing by a fine volunteer choir was followed by remarks by President W. C. Smith. Your scribe agitated the "Woman Suffrage" question, followed by Sister H. W. Hildreth; then Bro. S. W. Sutton gave an able discourse under control. Bro. Johnson read "Advice to Parsons." Bro. Hewes spoke under control, followed by Bros. Smith and Keyes. Prof. Milleson, the spirit-artist, who is tarrying with us awhile, was among the attendants.——Next Sunday, (7th inst.) our regular meetings commence at Continental Hall at 2 and 7 P. M. under the teachings of Miss Jennie B. Hagan, and at the same time the Children's Progressive Lyceum commences at 12 M. I cordially extend a general invitation to all children to meet with us each Sunday.

FRED. L. HILDRETH, Conductor.

Haverhill, Mass.—The First Spiritualist Society will open its meetings for the season of 1888 and 1889 on the first Sunday in October, in Unity Hall, connected with the Unitarian church, on Main street. J. Clegg Wright, the able and talented exponent of Spiritualism, has been engaged for the full month. The Home Orchestra—Miss Jessie M. Little, Precentor—will also be there to lend the sweet chords of music at the evening sessions. W. W. CURRIER.

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 28th.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A correspondent, whose favor came too late to be of service in this particular, informs us that on Monday evening, Oct. 1st, a "pound social" was to have been held by the Spiritualist society of this place, in aid of its finances. Mrs. A. M. Glading, he states, has done nobly in the way of assisting the people in bearing the expense of the regular meetings." Mr. Colville lectures here Thursday evening, Oct. 4th. We are to have Frank T. Ripley for October."

Works by Richard B. Westbrook, D. D., LL. B.

The Bible---Whence and What?

"And now comes a Doctor of Divinity, with his reason, logic and learning, and tells us what the Bible is and whence it came. . . . This volume casts a flood of light upon things not generally known, but which linguistic and biblical scholars admit, and the author thinks that the people have a right to know all that can be known. . . ."—The Republican, St. Louis.

Cloth. Price $1.00.

Man: Whence and Whither?

The contents comprise chapters on the following subjects: Is Man a Mere Animal? Common Dogma of Man's Origin. The Evolution Hypothesis. Answer of Theism as to Man's Origin. Is Death the End of Man? The Foundation of Faith in a Future Life. After Death—What? Science and Theology.

Cloth, pp. 226. Price $1.00.

Marriage and Divorce.

This work treats on the following subjects:

Preface; Introduction; Chap. 1. The True Ideal of Marriage; 2. Free Love; 3. The History of Marriage; 4. The Old Testament Divorce Law; 5. The New Testament on Divorce; 6. Divorce as a Question of Law and Religion; 7. Rational Deductions from Established Principles; 8. Objections to Liberal Divorce Laws Answered; 9. Prevention Better than Cure. Appendix: The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, by John Milton (1643, 1644).

Cloth. Price 50 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

NEW EDITION.

ISIS UNVEILED: A Master-Key to the Mysteries of Ancient and Modern Science and Religion. By H. P. BLAVATSKY.

This work is divided into two Volumes, one treating exclusively of the relations of modern sciences to ancient theurgic science, and the other of the ancient world-religions and their offshoots in various ages. The theogonies, myths, symbology, rites, emblems and theologies of past and present generations are all passed in review. The analyses of the myths of India, Babylonia, Egypt, Greece, Rome, Phœnicia, Mexico and the Germanic peoples, are extremely interesting. The origin of modern faiths is patiently traced, and the points of resemblance carefully marked.

In the Second Volume the various views of scientists respecting the universal ether, the imponderable known and unknown forces and their correlations, cosmogony, geology, astrology, chemical action, alchemy, &c., are reviewed, criticised and compared. The relations of man to the universe, including his control over its phenomena, are viewed from the side of the ancient Magians. The philosophy of gestation, life and death, is treated after a novel and vigorous fashion, and the mystical domain of psychology is traversed.

Two volumes, royal 8vo, about 1400 pages, handsomely printed, cloth, extra, $7.50.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE RELIGION OF SPIRITUALISM. By EUGENE CROWELL, M. D., author of "The Identity of Primitive Christianity and Modern Spiritualism," etc. Among the prime points of consideration in this work may be mentioned: What is Religion? Spiritualism is a Religion. The Religion of Spiritualism Identical with the Religion of Jesus.

Price 15 cents, postage free.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

IF, THEN, AND WHEN, from the Doctrines of the Church. By WARREN SUMNER BARLOW, author of "The Voices, and other Poems." All who have read the author's "The Voice of Nature," "The Voice of a Pebble," "The Voice of Superstition," and "The Voice of Prayer," will find this Poem just suited to the times.

Price 10 cents.

For sale by the Publishers, COLBY & RICH.

MANLY PURITY AND BEAUTY

CUTICURA REMEDIES CURE SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASES FROM PIMPLES TO SCROFULA.

NO PEN CAN DO JUSTICE TO THE ESTEEM IN which the CUTICURA REMEDIES are held by the thousands upon thousands whose lives have been made happy by the cure of agonizing, humiliating, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair.

CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, are a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

☞ Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP. ☜

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains and Weakness speedily cured by CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, the only pain-killing plaster.

EXTRA SUPER

CARPETS.

The choice of our entire stock of over four hundred patterns and colorings, and including all of our

Lowell Extra Supers,

As well as many other reliable makes, at

70c. Per Yard.

Also quite a large line of patterns that we shall not have manufactured again, but identically the same goods as the above in all other respects, at

60c. Per Yard.

ROXBURY

TAPESTRIES.

We show, without exception, the entire line of patterns produced by the

ROXBURY CARPET CO.,

And offer any Roxbury Carpet in our whole stock at

85c. Per Yard.

In both Extra Supers and Tapestries we have many private patterns that are our own exclusive property, and cannot be found elsewhere.

JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO.,

CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY,

558 and 560 Washington St.,

30 to 34 Harrison Av. Extension.

815 4w

THOUGHTS FROM THE INNER LIFE.

The contents of this book consist of nearly one hundred communications on an equal number of subjects relating to life in the spirit-world, selected from those received during eight years at private circles held at the residence of Mr. D. E. Bailey, Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Swain of that city being the medium. They were given by what is termed the "independent," or direct voice of the spirits. At the sittings the medium was not unconscious; when the spirit friends began to speak, the company, including the medium, conversed with them the same as with another. A volume might be filled with accounts of Mr. Bailey's wonderful experiences at these sittings; but he chooses to place the communications before the public with as little comment as possible, in the hope that their readers may find in them strength for the weak, consolation for the sorrowing, and unquestionable assurance of the existence of a life beyond the present for all.

One vol., octavo, pp. 224, with portrait, elegantly printed and bound. Price, cloth, $1.25, postage 10 cents; paper, 75 cents, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 50c. to 25c.

THE LYCEUM STAGE:

A COLLECTION OF

Contributed, Compiled and Original

Recitations, Dialogues, Fairy Plays, Etc.

Adapted for the Children's Progressive Lyceum and School Exhibitions.

BY G. WHITFIELD KATES.

Price 25 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NEW TESTAMENT;

OR,

The Revelation of the Mission of Christ.

BY A WOMAN.

A book for all reformers, workers for the freedom of Woman, Spiritualists and liberal thinkers, who realize that the true spirit of Christianity, long misunderstood and forgotten by the churches, is the most powerful weapon in behalf of liberty and reformation to-day.

"A very remarkable book."—Alpha. "Novel and suggestive ideas."—Woman's Journal. "Unusual force."—Boston Transcript. "Some of the grandest thoughts we have ever seen written."—Woman's Magazine, etc.

Superior cloth, pp. 525, $1.50.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WORKS OF E. D. BABBITT, D. M.

RELIGION AS REVEALED BY THE MATERIAL AND SPIRITUAL UNIVERSE. This work presents the sublime scheme of the universe, and the Deific laws by which it is governed, in a new and original way, and develops a broad and joyous world's religion which rises above creeds and rests on a basis of material and spiritual science.

Price, in cloth, 12mo, pp. 365, with elegant illustrations, $1.50, postage free.

THE CHART OF HEALTH. A beautiful Chart, with colors, rollers and binding, over a yard long.

Price, postpaid, 50 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FULL AND COMPREHENSIVE INSTRUCTIONS HOW TO MESMERIZE.

Ancient and Modern Miracles by Mesmerism. Also, IS SPIRITUALISM TRUE? By PROF. J. W. CADWELL, for thirty-five years the most successful Mesmerist in America. Contains as Full Instructions as ever given to my Pupils for Ten Dollars Each.

Ancient and modern miracles are explained by mesmerism, and the book will be found highly interesting to every Spiritualist.

It is the only work ever published giving full instructions how to mesmerize, and the connection this science has with Spiritualism.

It is pronounced by Allen Putnam and others, who have read it, to be one of the most interesting books ever written.

Paper, pp. 128. Price 50 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

ECCE VERITAS. A new work by an anonymous author, who claims as the object of the treatise a vindication of Christianity as a system of principles for the redemption of humanity; the true view of Christ and his religion, and against the dogmatic theology of the churches. The author also endorses Spiritualism, of the truths of which he has become well convinced by demonstrations unmistakable.

Cloth, 12mo, pp. 293. Price $1.25, postage 10 cents.

For sale by COLBY & RICH.

OCT 13 1888

BANNER OF LIGHT.

AN EXPONENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE NINETEENTH

VOL. LXIV. | COLBY & RICH, Publishers and Proprietors. | BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1888. | $3.00 Per Annum, Postage Free. | NO. 5.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

FIRST PAGE.—The Spiritual Rostrum: Our Place Among the Religions of the World. Literary Department: Bars and Thresholds.

SECOND PAGE.—Foreign Correspondence: Cullings from Paris. Poetry: Change! Banner Correspondence: Letters from New York, Missouri, Michigan, California, and Massachusetts. Queen Victoria's New Empire.

THIRD PAGE.—Col. Ingersoll and Metaphysical Science. Poetry: A Ray of Light. Reception and Presentation, etc.

FOURTH PAGE.—Meeting of the American Board. The Next Step. Light Breaking at Harvard. "Lost Volition." The Great Eastern Steamship. Death Painless, Because Natural. A Protestant Indulgence. It Still Lives! Decease of a Spiritualist Pioneer. Works that should be Bought and Read, etc.

FIFTH PAGE.—All Sorts of Paragraphs. Log Cabin Logic. Movements of Mediums and Lecturers. New Advertisements, etc.

SIXTH PAGE.—Message Department: Questions Answered through the Mediumship of Miss M. T. Shelhamer; Spirit Messages given through the Mediumship of Mrs. B. F. Smith. Verifications of Spirit-Messages.

SEVENTH PAGE.—Pearls. October Magazines. Mediums in Boston. Book and Miscellaneous Advertisements.

EIGHTH PAGE.—Spiritualist Meetings in Boston, New York, and Elsewhere. Sincere Thanks. Before It Is Born, etc.

The Spiritual Rostrum.

OUR PLACE AMONG THE RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD.

An Inspirational Discourse delivered before the Boston Spiritual Temple Society—Meeting in Berkeley Hall—through the Medial Instrumentality of

MRS. R. S. LILLIE.

(Reported for the Banner of Light by Mrs. M. C. Talmage.)

Our thought this morning will dwell upon these words: "Our Place Among the Religions of the World." I know that some are ready to say that Spiritualism is not a religion. This is because they have become satiated with what has been given them in its name in the past, in which so much of error has been embodied. They have been compelled to accept so much that is erroneous that the mind has, at last, determined to cut loose therefrom.

We must look at the facts just as they are. One of the most important of these is that man, by nature, is inclined toward religion. That he has been so in the past, history abundantly proves. That he is so in the present, earth's numberless systems of religion fully demonstrate. Since he is by nature a religious being, he is by nature a spiritual being, allied therefore to the infinite, eternal soul of all things. As such, permanent in his essence and substance, his thought must necessarily dwell upon the permanent and abiding. That leads him always to the consideration of a future state of being.

This state of existence is fleeting for all of us. Those who live to attain a hundred years of age upon this earthly plane are looked upon as marvels. People will often go a long distance to see a human being who has battled with the storms of earthly life for such a length of time. In the traditionary history of mankind, written upon pages deemed sacred, we are told that man, at one time, attained the age of five, six, seven, eight hundred years, and that he has gradually lost his power of life upon this plane of being; but evidence of this remarkable longevity of the human race is nowhere to be found; therefore we class this extraordinary story with many of the myths of the past, the outgrowth of man's imperfect development. Further on we read that the measure of man's life is three-score years and ten. In reality we know that very few of the human beings who are born attain even that age, a vast proportion passing away even in infancy. So there is something upon this mortal plane of being with which we must ever contend, something that weighs upon our lives with mighty power. This something is the struggle of the spirit with matter, and through matter, to express its higher and better self, which has not as yet found a perfect condition for its higher expression. This we know to-day is because our earth is young. We used to think it was old, but we know now that it has not yet attained its majority. When it has attained to this we shall see man possessed of such mastery over matter as will enable him, in a great measure, to control the length of his sojourn here, and bid defiance to the approach of death, save as it approaches him as an obedient servant to unlock the doors of the tomb, his body, after it has served the purpose of the soul, and give him emancipation.

As we find ourselves possessed of a higher nature which we call soul-nature, we find ourselves akin to the life-force, or power, which men have always worshiped in one form or another as God. We find ourselves akin to this, inheriting qualities which make us children of the living God and heirs of eternal life—life reaching out beyond that change which man has so dreaded in the past, that change of which he has known so little, save to feel the terror of its power. We find ourselves, by the power of soul within us, akin to the eternal property, or substance of life. Now, we call this God. I know no better name for it. The embodiment of this life-power, which we believe to be eternal in substance and essence, is all that I know of God, and it is God to me wherever I behold it: in the face of man, in the budding flower, in the world you live upon, in the higher spheres of being, in the immensity of space filled with worlds, peopled with forms of life corresponding to the conditions that have evolved them.

When we take this fact into consideration, we realize the magnitude of this universe of which we are parts, and realize as well how small we are in comparison with the infinite whole, yet we are parts of the eternal essence of life, and we find ourselves moving on in the eternal round of change which attends the evolution of spirit through matter. That man is such a creature, that he is possessed of this kinship with the eternal essence of power, this soul of life that cannot die, has been the cause of all religions; and all there is of error in any religious system is there because man, as a spirit, cannot yet see clearly through this veil of the material in which he is still enveloped. These errors exist because he is undeveloped and imperfect; because the higher chambers of his brain are not yet taken possession of by the higher forms of thought, which will enable him to walk with God as some have done in the ages of the past when following their highest inspiration. It may have been Mahomet in the desert, the Buddha in the palm groves of India, or one of the latter-day saints—it is one and the same thing. A man, in his higher condition, walks in the higher and nobler law of life, and what is this but walking with God?

The great founders of all religious systems gave expression to what was within them, and those expressions, as they are accepted, mark the stepping-stones of man's advancement. This degree of unfoldment is indicated by his ideas of what God is, what life is, what are the attributes of God, and what is demanded of the children of earth. To-day we find men teaching that God is a God of anger; that in creating things he makes mistakes; that he regrets these mistakes, and vainly looks about for means to remedy them. So great is his anger toward the children of his own creation, they may not even implore his forgiveness save through a mediator. Through the mercy and kindness of this mediator we may approach the great frowning Deity so as to find forgiveness for sins we have never committed, and for wrongs we never meant to do, and which, if the organization he has given us impelled us to do it only proves that we have been victims of his own divine mistakes.

Contrast with this the teaching of Spiritualism in its thought of that eternal power of life which we call God, which says that there are no mistakes in this universe, that everything is growing upward to a higher standard. As well may we expect the tiny bud of the springtime to present us with autumn's ripened fruitage as to expect perfection in man's development in this early age of the world. Man is a creature governed by laws universal, which govern all forms of matter. He is a creature of growth, and by and through the growth of these outer conditions, these outer expressions, does he become capable of expressing the soul within; just as these flowers are what they are to-day, because the tiny life-germ within the seed found outer conditions that permitted it to expand, and finally to express itself in the forms of beauty you see before you. It took time to do this, and time, time long enough will accomplish all things.

Thus, through all the ages of the past we find in man the tiny soul of being wrapped up in germinal conditions within the outer forms of matter. It was infused with the eternal principle of life, but it has taken God's ages, nature's ages, to bring it even to its present degree of unfoldment. But it is budding, it is blooming, it is promising a rich harvest for the future. Something of what this harvest is to be, is already beginning to be shown in the higher and nobler specimens of humanity, the gifted ones of earth, as they are called. These more perfected blossoms upon the tree of life are only specimens of what the others are to be, when all the time, all the conditions necessary for their development, have been given them.

Thus, then, we take our place as the first religion of the earth to answer the all-important question, "What are we after death?" While preceding religious systems (some of them) have taught faith and hope, we have taught what is better than faith and brighter than hope, assurance. We offer positive assurance that life is continuous, that individuality is preserved; we offer it from the testimony of thousands who have traveled across the dark valley, have passed over the silent stream called death and returned again; having preserved identity, individuality, personality; returned to bring tidings of that country from which it is often said, "no traveler returns." Job did n't know of it; David did not sing of it; Solomon scarcely dreamed of it. No religious system of the past or present can compare with ours, answering, as it does, to the deepest nature of man, reaching as high as the highest heaven, as low as the lowest hell; lifting souls from even the lowest condition and teaching them that they may finally aspire to the highest. Our religion teaches us that we are all children of the living God—none reprobate, none castaways.

This is the Christian Sabbath. How blue the heavens and how bright the sunshine! How glad the songs of rejoicing that are pealing forth to-day! And what is the refrain? It is "Christ is risen." Now we can tell you that your loved ones are risen also. We have come to tell you that your mother, your father, your sister, your brother, your child, your friend, have risen as well, and because they live you shall live also. We have come to tell you that life is so victorious over death that not alone is Joseph's tomb in far-away Palestine broken and rent asunder, but every tomb in every land has given up its dead; that there are no dead—that all are living. Is not that cause for rejoicing?

Christianity says, If you accept "the plan of salvation," if you believe all these dogmas, you shall have part in the resurrection of life; but if your reason prevents your believing them, then will your resurrection be a resurrection to death eternal. Now, friends, there are no such discordant notes as those in our Easter music. Our heaven-inspired harmonies proclaim that all are risen, that all have life eternal by virtue of their divine inheritance as children of life, that there is no power in the universe that can rob them of this life. They sing that death is only a change that leads on and on, through the passage-ways of life eternal. Then may we not call our philosophy, our science of life, a religion? Does it not appeal to all that is highest and best in the nature of man, and provide means for its development? Oh! yes, it is a religion, and one that has come to correct the errors of old systems of theology. This is the work of Spiritualism to-day.

Now, some one may say, if this is true, I shall know it sometime. What difference does it make about my finding it out now? It makes all the difference between truth and error, and that is infinite. It makes all the difference it would make to your child if you allowed him to spend his childhood and youth in accumulating a stock of erroneous statements and opinions, which he would be obliged to unlearn before he could begin the career of his manhood. Human life is full of meaning. In it I see the embodiment of a purpose. We are here to accomplish something—there is something for us to do. We are not here to sit idle with folded hands. What is the purpose of life? I answer, briefly, the unfoldment of the higher powers of the soul. If you are not better thinkers, better doers than you were one week ago, then that week has been wasted. And we must remember that what a soul does not accomplish in one pilgrimage, it will be compelled to in another. Some one says, "That is re-incarnation." Call it what you like, I call it eternal truth. What the soul does not accomplish for its needs in one earthly pilgrimage it will in another. That is why, unseen, I am here before you this morning, giving expression to my thought through the physical organism of another. Had I accomplished all my soul's mission, as far as earth is concerned, I should now be in the sphere of souls arisen that do not come in contact with your earth's atmosphere. What I did not accomplish in life yesterday, I am laboring hard to accomplish to-day.

Spiritualism has come to you to-day because bibles are not complete. Living pages are to be written in them penned by those who, in the ages of the past, have failed to express through the material world the higher, better soul-nature of man. Spiritualism is here because the grosser, baser forms of true religion have been embodied in these systems; because erroneous theological dogmas have taken the place of the spirituality that was found in the church in its early ages. "The gifts of the spirit," enjoined by the apostle in those early days, have been forgotten by the Church, until the Pentecost of the past is known no more among them until the tongues of fire which rested upon those who spoke as the spirit gave them utterance are forgotten. Spiritualism, nineteen hundred years ago, had power over the people. When kings and emperors began to try to manipulate this power, to institute their orders of priesthood upon it, it fled from their selfish grasp, leaving only the dead body of material forms and observances. Spiritualism has come to infuse life into the dead religions of the world. It is going to change and fashion them until much of what now is will necessarily be swept away for something stronger, higher, better, to come in. It has come like one of old, who said: "I come not to bring peace on earth, but a sword." This has been the power of truth from that day to this. Whosoever speaks forcibly, truthfully against the prevailing customs of the times, is a disturber of the peace. Spiritualism has come with the sword of truth in its hand, and it will cut its way through the dark ranks of error and superstition, and show you the "king's highway" whereon, at last, all souls shall safely walk.

With every soul saved, with every child born a member of the church of the future—as they are going to be—there will be a universal church of humanity which will recognize the divinity in man. Every child of earth will know he is also a child of the living God, destined to live forevermore. Spiritualism has come like a John the Baptist in the wilderness of ignorance and error, to declare the kingdom of heaven that is at hand. It has come as the torch-bearer of the nineteenth century, lighting the gloom of the grave with the glory of immortality. Some will say, "This is the egotism of the despicable body of Spiritualists. They are possessed of a devil, they are ruled by the Prince of Devils." Just so they said of the torch-bearers of the past, whom they persecuted even unto death. Spiritualism has come to lay the corner-stone of edifices where thought, intelligence, poetry, music, art, shall be promoted and elevated, not for selfish purposes, not for the uplifting of a single branch of religion, but for all humanity. This is what it has come for, the uplifting of all that is grand, noble and beautiful in human life. It has come to make us feel that every child of earth is our brother or our sister, that we all belong to the same family. You look out upon the human races, you see men as black as night, and low down in the scale of intelligence. You call them savage, and so they are, and yet they are your younger brothers, and by-and-bye, by means of the divine possibilities wrapped up in the soul-germ, they are going to be all that you are; yes, and much more, when they have had time enough. By-and-bye you can extend to them the hand of fellowship and not be ashamed. If you think this is not so, when you are a few million years older than you are now I will meet you somewhere and say, as we

[Continued on third page.]

Literary Department.

BARS AND THRESHOLDS.

Written Especially for the Banner of Light,

BY MRS. EMMA MINER.

CHAPTER VI.

VOICES.

Doris proceeded to her room, followed by Miss Shallot. That worthy lady began a long lecture on the sin of disobedience, her ingratitude to Mrs. Mason, and the deceitfulness and wickedness of her sinful heart.

Her ears were almost deaf to it. She could only think of her disappointment. No more letters to Morris! No more pleasant calls at Mrs. Carroll's with Aunt Amelia! Her dear aunt in disgrace because of helping and befriending her! Oh! where and when would it all end? Had she really been wicked? She would not really have done wrong, knowing it to be wrong; but she could not feel that she had done wrong.

Her sensitive ears could no longer bear the harsh, cruel words falling from Miss Shallot's lips. She turned her pale face toward her, and with a pitiful mixture of defiance and despair, exclaimed:

"Miss Shallot! I do n't care what you say or do to me. I do n't care what grandma does now. She has done her very worst; but I will not forget my brother, and the very day I am free I will leave this house to find him, if I have to beg a shelter from the street!"

But had Mrs. Mason "done her very worst"? Doris was spared the thought of the new trouble about to come to her.

The week passed, and when Sunday came Mrs. Mason was too ill to attend church. Miss Shallot remained at home to wait upon her, and as a consequence Doris was kept at home. Mr. Brooks called twice, but she was not allowed to see him.

Miss Parker had informed Mrs. Carroll of what had occurred, and Dr. Carroll had informed Mr. Brooks. He wished very much to see Doris, for he felt that she needed comforting words.

The second week passed before Mrs. Mason was able to go out, and then Doris walked quietly beside her to church.

Mrs. Mason always went early to the service, and Doris, sitting there, wondered if she were really the same girl who had been so happy a few weeks before.

The organ sounded a low, tremulous strain. Doris did not know what was being played, but it was soothing and comforting. And then a clear, sweet voice sang:

"He, watching over Israel,
Slumbers not nor sleeps."

Again and again was the sweet strain repeated, until its music flowed over and into her soul, a tide of assurance, of protection and comfort. She could not restrain her tears, but wept silently behind her handkerchief.

Mr. Brooks, catching an inspiration from the sacred melody, prayed earnestly for the wandering ones of earth, and for those who were faithful to memories of them. For many days the sweet strains echoed in her ears.

She missed Miss Parker's companionship. She only saw her occasionally, except at the table, but it was a comfort to her to know that she was under the same roof.

The holidays were over. "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year" had not meant much to Doris. The annual church fair had become a matter of the past, and Mrs. Mason seated herself one day to find herself quite at leisure. She was wearing a dress she had not worn for some weeks. Feeling an unusual weight in the pocket, she put in her hand and drew out the package taken from Doris's desk.

She began to examine the little package of messages. Some were jotted down by Doris as she obtained them, letter by letter, from the table, and some were written by Lydia. Mrs. Mason could not understand the frequent occurrence of the name of "Mary Mason Stuart."

"Just as if she were living," she mused. "I think I will ask Doris to explain this. I ought to have attended to it before."

As Miss Parker's name occurred several times she sent for her also.

Miss Shallot was already seated by Mrs. Mason, her hands crossed stiffly in her lap, and the expression on her face which she always wore when she was not shrinking from her duty.

Doris glanced apprehensively at Mrs. Mason, wondering what she had been doing now.

Miss Parker saw the little package of messages, and braced herself for the contest.

"We have found some strange writings among those papers in your desk, Doris, and, as they were in your possession, I wish to question you about them. They are dated, and I will begin with the first one." She adjusted her glasses, and slowly, and with an emphasis that struck home to Doris's sensitive heart-strings, read the message.

"Dear child: Believe I am really your mother. Write to Morris. Tell Amelia to be sure to keep a hold on Lydia, for through her I can accomplish my purpose. Mary Mason Stuart."

"Will you explain this, Doris?" There was a moment's silence. Doris's heart fluttered, and she grew pale. Miss Parker's voice broke the stillness.

"Sarah, you have asked Doris to explain, but I think it belongs to me to do it. If it had n't been for me she probably would n't have had it."

"Very well. I desire you should inform me in every particular. I can rely upon your word, although I cannot upon your judgment"; and she turned her severe gaze from Doris to her sister.

Doris, impelled by sympathy for her aunt, arose, went over and sat down by her, clasping one of her hands closely. Miss Parker pulled vigorously at her cap-strings, and began:

"I declare, I hardly know where to begin; but do you remember Doris's speaking to you about some raps she heard on her table?"

"Yes; but I dismissed the thought as an idle fancy."

"When she spoke to me about it I told her I guessed we had better inquire into it. So one night, when the rapping was going on, I went in there. Now you know what I believe about spirits making noises. I had a strong idea it might be that; so I told Doris to get paper and pencil. I called over the alphabet slowly, and when I came to each of those letters there came a rap on the table, and Doris wrote the letter down, and finally we got that message."

Mrs. Mason rose from her chair in her excitement and held out the paper at arm's length.

"A-me-lia Ran-dolph Par-ker! Do you mean to say that you believe that message came from my daughter?"

"I really do believe it." When Miss Parker spoke in that tone there was no room for argument. Mrs. Mason re-seated herself, and again began to scan the paper.

"Lyd; who is 'Lyd'?" she asked.

"Her name is Lydia Moore. She is a girl we found in the block where we went to see Hugh. She was poor, and needed something done for her, so I was interested in her."

"Go to Mrs. Carroll," quoted Mrs. Mason, reading the next paper. "What does that mean?"

"I wanted to know what to do with Lydia, so we sat down to the table to find out. Mary told me to 'go to Mrs. Carroll,' and I did. She took the girl, and gave her a good home, and she is doing well."

"And what are these other writings? These are not in Doris's hand."

"Well, we found that Lydia was a writing medium; that is, she would write messages, instead of getting them from a table by raps. All those she got for Doris we kept."

"Did you make a practice of this work when you went to Mrs. Carroll's?"

"Generally we did."

"Have you and Doris made a practice of using a table for this purpose here?"

"We have when we could get a chance."

There was a little pause.

"Sarah," said Miss Parker, "if you would only consent to lay aside your prejudices, and investigate a little with us, I am sure you would be convinced there was something in it."

Mrs. Mason drew herself up sternly.

"I do n't know anything about it, and I do n't want to know! It is the works of the devil!"

"Then I just wish the devil would get a few more girls out of such dens, and put them in good homes. I think it is a pretty good business!"

Mrs. Mason did n't know what to say, so she was silent. She folded the papers together without other questioning, and said:

"I must take some step in regard to this matter, and will tell you my decision very soon."

Miss Parker and Doris walked out hand in hand, while Miss Shallot remained behind to confer with Mrs. Mason. Doris seized the opportunity to go into Miss Parker's room.

"You poor, dear auntie! How good you were to take all that off my shoulders! But, oh! grandma is going to do something dreadful, I know she is! And she could n't think of anything bad enough just then, so she had to take time for it! Oh, what shall we do?" Doris walked the floor excitedly.

"Doris," said Miss Parker, speaking gravely, "if you were to go to your grandma and tell her that you would give up all this writing and sitting at the table, would never have anything more to do with it, she would forgive us, and it would all pass over. What do you think about it?"

Doris turned slowly toward her.

"What! Give up believing it is really my own dear mother? Never to try to hear from her again? Auntie, I do n't want to do it! I can't do it!" There was not a waver in Doris's voice. It was decisive.

"Nor I, either. I only said it to see how you would stand when it comes to the last; for, depend upon it, Doris, something hard will come of it." She laid her hands on Doris's shoulder as she spoke. "Now, remember, if your grandmother takes from you every friend you have in this wide world, she cannot take from you the companionship of the angel-world. Try to do right, and you can never be wholly unhappy."

"I will remember, auntie," said Doris, soberly.

A week passed without mention of the subject. Miss Parker knew it was not at rest. Her prophetic soul foresaw the result, and she patiently waited for Mrs. Mason's verdict. The conferences between Mrs. Mason and Miss Shallot were numerous and lengthy.

"To think that we should have had such doings right under my own roof! And I a church-member!" and Mrs. Mason held up her hands in holy horror.

"It is dreadful! Spirits indeed! How can Miss Parker be so deluded?" exclaimed Miss Shallot. "And to think what wickedness she was leading that poor child into! It is a mercy we discovered it in time to stop it where it is!"

"True indeed! And to think Amelia should have the audacity to ask me to investigate! ME!" Mrs. Mason's emphasis of the personal pronoun was forcible. "I have now made my decision, and Amelia must be informed of it to-day. I should be pleased to have you present at the interview, Miss Shallot. I wish it to take place directly after Doris's study hours."

Miss Shallot readily agreed. Her small soul was delighted that "an enemy in Zion's camp" was about to be removed.

Doris awoke that morning with a strange depression.

"I wonder what ails me? I feel so old! Only seventeen—most eighteen, but I feel as if I were a hun—dred." She drawled out the word, to make it seem as old as possible. She continued to soliloquize while putting her hair in order.

"It is a comfort to think that in four months more Miss Shallot's reign may be over. I wonder what grandma means to do with me then?"

The breakfast-bell sounded, and she ran down into the dining-room, glad that for a few moments she could sit near Miss Parker. Mrs. Mason's grace was unusually lengthy that morning. Doris, raising her eyes at last, noted an expression of exultation on Miss Shallot's face, which she could not interpret. She looked across the table to Miss Parker, whose usually peaceful face was certainly disturbed. She felt too anxious to care for her breakfast, and watched her opportunity to leave the room with her aunt.

"What is it, auntie? There 's something the matter, I know."

"We shall know by-and-bye, Doris."

Doris conned her lessons as best she could that day, and at the end spent a half-hour reading aloud to Miss Shallot from "Guide to Young Disciples." At the conclusion of the interesting chapter, Miss Shallot informed her they would be wanted in Mrs. Mason's room.

Her heart sank. What could be coming now?

Miss Parker was already seated there, and Doris took a chair near her. Mrs. Mason was the first to speak.

"You will doubtless remember the recent painful discovery I made, and that I said I would act upon the matter. I have deliberated, and have at last come to the conclusion that it is my duty to protect Doris as much as possible from all heresies, and to prevent her coming in contact with anything or anybody who will influence her aside from the teachings of the established church.

"In consideration of what has already occurred beneath my own roof, I feel it to be my duty to separate Doris entirely from you, Amelia. Of course, Doris must remain under my protection, but I desire that you, Amelia, should find another home as soon as may be convenient for you to do so.

"Meanwhile, Doris must not visit your room, and I prefer you should not visit Doris."

There was a painful silence. Mrs. Mason had spoken in a cold, stern tone. There was no visible sign of love for her sister, or pity for the young face turned toward her. Doris knew it would be useless to appeal to her. She could only sit there in dumb misery, trying to grasp the thought her dear aunt must leave the house and home.

Miss Parker's voice trembled as she replied:

"I have been expecting this, Sarah, but I did not like to take any action until I knew certain. I will say this: I have tried to do my duty since I have been here, and have acted according to my own conscience, as you have by yours, I suppose. But since we cannot agree, perhaps I had better go."

Mrs. Mason remembered that Miss Parker had very little money, and it would probably be a hard matter for her to so arrange that she would be fairly comfortable.

"I would not have you leave until you have made some suitable arrangement. We will discuss that by-and-bye."

They felt they were dismissed, and left the room.

CHAPTER VII.

THE REMOVAL.

Miss Parker returned to her room, quite crushed by the blow which at last had fallen upon her. For seven years this house had been her home. She came by Mrs. Mason's request, and must leave it by her request. Her thought turned to the little home she had left near this same city, and now she felt a longing to return to it.

How she could manage to support herself there, now that she was alone, she could not see clearly, but she hoped the way would open for her.

At that moment, in answer to a knock at the door, she admitted Mrs. Mason. There was no lack of civility, on Miss Parker's part, in politely offering her a comfortable chair. Mrs. Mason straightened her cap and opened the conversation.

"You said, Amelia, that you had been expecting this change. It occurred to me that in view of it, you might possibly have had some thought in the matter as to what action you would take. I would like to hear your plans, if you have no objection."

"It seems to me I had better go back to my old home, Sarah. It is a comfortable house, and so near the city I may be able to let some of the rooms to lodgers. That would bring me some income; and I can do plain sewing and earn a little that way. You know, when sister Ellen was alive, we lived there very comfortably, and had all the work we could do."

"But surely, you would not think of living alone there?"

"If I get lodgers I shall not be alone; but I have no fears, as you know. I think the way will be provided."

Mrs. Mason mused a little.

"You know, Amelia, that you have been accustomed to sew a great deal for me, especially on charity work. I shall still need such assistance, for which I would reasonably remunerate you. James could take the work back and forth. Of course I should want your word that there should be no communication with Doris."

"Well, if I should decide to go there and take up such work, it would probably be worth my while to take some of yours."

"Of course, there must be time for the present tenant to remove. I wish you to distinctly understand you are not to go until you can arrange to be comfortable."

"Very well. I will attend to the matter at once."

Miss Parker sighed a little as the door closed upon Mrs. Mason's retreating form. After a few moments' thought she arose and put on her wraps. A March wind blew a chilly and discouraging blast as she stepped out of the door, and she walked as briskly as she could in the face of it, until she reached Mrs. Carroll's house.

Fortunately, Dr. Carroll was at home, and came into the parlor with Mrs. Carroll to bid her welcome. After the customary greetings, Miss Parker broached the subject now become of interest to her.

"I have come to tell you that Sarah has decided there must be a change. She is afraid of my wicked influence over Doris, so I am to leave there."

Dr. Carroll gave a little exclamation of disgust, while Mrs. Carroll exclaimed:

"Surely, you don't mean she has asked you to go away?"

"There was no ask about it. She squarely told me to go. I don't care on my own account. It is for Doris I am sorry. I really believe it was a little comfort to the poor child to know I was under the same roof. But now I must go. It seems to me I ought to go back to my old home."

"Where is your home?" asked Dr. Carroll.

"In Roseville, just out of the city, you know. I have a little cottage there, where I lived with sister Ellen—Mrs. Gray. I lived with her a number of years, and when Mr. Gray died we kept right on living there. We lived plainly, and got along as best we could. When my sister died, she left the cottage to me. Soon after, Mrs. Mason proposed that I should come and live with her.

"To tell the truth, I did n't want to. I knew her disposition was n't like mine, and we never took any comfort together even when we were children.

"But as I sat thinking over the matter one day, my father came to me, and said he, 'Amelia, I want you to go to live with Sarah. There is a work there for you to do.' He seemed so earnest about it that I thought it must mean something.

"So I went over to Sarah's to see about it; I stayed two or three days, though I was n't in the habit of staying there; and when I saw those little children, I knew in a minute I could smooth many a rough place for them. So I just packed up my goods in one of the rooms, and let the house to a family, who have lived there ever since."

"I am very sorry for you." It was all Mrs. Carroll could say. She felt too indignant toward Mrs. Mason to even speak of her.

"Of course, I feel quite anxious about it. I really do n't know what to do after I get there. I should be very much obliged, Mrs. Carroll, if you would ask Lydia to see if she can get any written advice from my father. He may have something to say which will open the way for me."

"I hope she may get a message for you. We will go into the library, and I will call her."

Dr. Carroll led the way, and Lydia came at once.

Sitting quietly there waiting for a movement of Lydia's hand, Miss Parker could not but notice the improvement in Lydia's appearance. She was sweet and ladylike.

At that moment the bell rang, and Dr. Carroll left the room. In a moment he returned and said: "Mr. Brooks has called, mother."

Turning to Miss Parker, he said, "Perhaps you will be interested to know that Mr. Brooks and I have had considerable conversation concerning the future world and life, and he is sufficiently interested to consent to investigate the spiritual philosophy. He has already obtained some very curious facts through Lydia's writings."

"How glad I am to hear it! Have you any objection to his coming in here now? He knows much of our affairs already, and I am perfectly willing he should know about my business."

"Then I will call him in;" and Dr. Carroll stepped into the hall.

Mr. Brooks entered and seated himself near Miss Parker.

"You are doubtless surprised that I should have an interest in this matter, or allow myself to have anything to do with it; but I have had this interest awakened by conversation with Dr. Carroll and investigation with our little friend here. There is something in it I cannot account for, and I intend to pursue my investigations until I arrive at some satisfactory conclusion.

"I am aware that it is contradictory to the teachings of the church, and to the religious views I have been taught, and have accepted." He spoke very gravely. "I accepted those teachings as truth, but if there is a truth beyond those teachings, I want it."

There was a little ring of determination and decision in his voice, though the words were quietly spoken.

"Now please do n't let me interrupt you any longer."

Lydia drew her tablet toward her again, and very soon her pencil began to move rapidly. She wrote:

"Amelia, you must go to your old home. It will be a great change for you, but a greater change is coming to Sarah. There is a work for you in Roseville, and when the time comes you will know what it is. Continue to be patient and courageous. You will not be separated from Doris very long. Samuel Parker."

Miss Parker read the message, and passing it over to Mrs. Carroll, said:

"If my father says that, he means it. I shall certainly go now. The best part of it is the hope that in some way Doris and I may see each other."

Mr. Brooks looked inquiringly toward her. Miss Parker explained the new trouble. He was indignant. He paced the floor, and could not trust himself to speak for several minutes.

"What will that poor child do?" he said.

"Heaven help her! She is in the hands of a hard-hearted, merciless woman," said Dr. Carroll; "and we are forbidden the house, and she is forbidden to come here. And now Miss Parker must go! It will be your turn next, Brooks. There 's nobody now with whom she can have any companionship, except that old she-dragon, Miss Shallot!"

"If Doris can live three years longer she can get away from it all," said Mrs. Carroll, hopefully.

Instantly Lydia picked up the pencil and wrote:

"In less than six months there will be a change. It is not best for me to say what change. It cannot be averted.—S. P."

"Then we will hope for the best, for Doris's sake," said Miss Parker, folding up the message carefully. At Lydia's suggestion, she opened and dated it, "March 18th," and replaced it.

Mr. Brooks turned to her, and said:

"If this prophecy proves true, it will be another thought added to the many I have already had. I hope that some good may come from it;" and he left them.

Lydia returned to her books, and the doctor to his office.

[To be continued in next issue.]

Foreign Correspondence.

CULLINGS FROM PARIS.

BY HENRY LACROIX.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

I have read in La France the following, which is likely to interest your readers, as it did me:

THE INSTITUTE.

The locks of our ancestors consisted simply in knots difficult to untie. Each one had his own knot, as we now have our separate locks and keys. The art consisted in hiding well the extremities of the cords which formed those knots. But as some became experts as untiers seals were affixed at the ends of the cords—which method was adopted in Courts of Justice on legal documents, where it still exists the world over.

In another sense, the locks of the Institute of France have always been easy to open by every sovereign that reigned over France since 1795, date of the foundation of that Moral, Scientific and Artistic Authority. Mr. Maindron, a competent reviewer, says: On the 21st January, 1796, the President of the Institute addressing the Directory exclaims: "As lovers of liberty we have endeavored to oppose all the servile forms of monarchical institutions. We swear hatred to royalty." Eight years after, (10th June, 1804) the same President said to Napoleon: "The National Institute comes to present its vows and congratulations with the acclamations of all Frenchmen; it lays at the feet of your Imperial Majesty the homage of its inviolable devotion and of its respectuous gratitude." Ten years later (12th April, 1814) to the Emperor Alexander I. of Russia: "With liberty we gain the king which our wishes called for." And a year after (28th March, 1815) the Institute said to Napoleon: "With the whole of France we were calling for a liberator; Providence sends him to us." No wonder that Piron says: "Piron que ne fut rien. Pas même académicien!" And yet celebrated men aspire to belong to that body as the main end of their lives.

THE PARISIAN PRESS

is composed of about sixty dailies and as many weeklies, small in size, as a rule. The dailies mislead strangers by their date when they look at them as a reference; they are so fast that they leap one day ahead or are antedated. With most of them advertisements are an over-luxury; that practical business action, with its many ramified public benefits, is not yet thoroughly introduced here. The public require to be converted to that way. Their business habits, on the safe and sure principle of routine, make them shy on ventures of that kind. And yet they often go blindly on big speculations that bring naught but disappointment and ruin. But then, the show is so great and flashy! Immense capital of the people has been lost on Egyptian, Turkish, Spanish and other out-of-the-way Bonds, that passed from sight like falling stars. One of the leading papers, of the high class, which represents in style the peculiar genius of the nation, in the most complete way, is

THE FIGARO.

That dashing and elegant organ, with an editorial staff of about twenty-two able writers, has a daily circulation of 90,000. It has only a morning edition. Its "Hôtel" or publishing house at No. 26 rue Drouot, is a large and quite tasty establishment, especially its interior plan and decorations, which are in keeping with the character of the paper. The two following mottos inscribed on each side of the main editorial entrance in the portico, fully denote the nature of the spirit within. On the right: "There can be no pleasing praise without the liberty to blame. None but small minds will fear light writings." On the left: "Praised by these, blamed by others, I scoff the silly and brave the wicked. I hasten to laugh at everything... for fear of being obliged to cry." Figaro can scarcely be more Figaro-like, to whoever is acquainted with Beaumarchais's celebrated creation of that personage or rôle.

Mr. Diquet, the Secretary, received me very kindly when I stated to him the object of my call. He said that several other American newspaper representatives had before visited him for the same purpose, of being posted on the organization, etc., of the Figaro. He took the trouble of writing down himself a summary of the information here furnished.

Mr. de Villemessant founded the Figaro in 1854. After his death (1879) Mr. Francis Magnard was appointed Editor-in-Chief, with the assistance of Messrs. Rodays and Périvier, as counsellors. The original capital was of nineteen thousand shares, of five hundred francs each, which has been yielding for many years a clear annual profit of two and a half million of francs. So that stock is one of the most valuable of those on Change. The advertisements on the first page cost forty francs (eight dollars) a line; on the second and third pages twenty-five francs a line. In the small-type department six francs a line, and five francs a line on the fourth page. The "Salle des Dépêches," on the ground floor, might be named a curiosity shop, as it contains any number of actualities or copies of such, in photos, drawings or sketches, referring not only to French events but to foreign ones as well, the world over. It is also much of an armory. This department is in charge of two colored men, from the colony of Sen-égal, dressed in uniform, as are all other subordinate employés. There are constantly crowds in this sort of museum, eager to see something new. This is not only an ornamental department to gratify the eyes, but it must also be a paying one, because advertisements of various kinds are hung up on the walls. The Figaro publishes two extra numbers, called le Figaro Salon, and le Figaro Illustré, which latter is its Christmas number. Both are elegant publications. The Figaro, as a leading spirit and protector of art, has suitable halls and salons to receive the bright stars of the stage, etc., who pass through Paris. And also aristocratically inclined, it extends receptions to crowned heads and princes. During the exhibition of 1878 it gave a banquet to the Commissioners. Since, it fêted the Queen of Spain, the Grand Dukes of Russia, the Prince of Wales, the Shah of Persia, King Kalakaua, etc.

The price of the Figaro is three sous, but on Wednesdays and Saturdays, as it is accompanied by an extra sheet, or feuilleton, its price is then four sous.

I intend giving in following letters other editorial interviews—of those papers especially whose reputation has crossed over our sea.

L'INTRANSIGEANT

is not an admirer of Mr. Pasteur. It gives a list of seven patients who have lately died of the effects of hydrophobia, although inoculated repeatedly, each one, by the great inventor of the "safe cure." It lays stress on the fact that Mr. Pasteur's treatment shortens the lives of those affected by the terrible disease, as in these late cases none attained forty or fifty days, which is the usual run, but varied from twenty-six to thirty-six days. It is hard to say who is right. But I intend calling on Mr. Pasteur and take down his side of the question

CHANGE.

Life on board these splendid and elaborately furnished steamers was, in the days before railways gridironed the continent, the realization of Oriental luxury. To-day, at the wharves of New Orleans, where forty years ago there might have been seen at any moment a hundred of those great boats, gleaming white as colossal swans on the turbid river, balconied, latticed and pinnacled like an Eastern palace, with a score of gay flags fluttering in the breeze, and tall black towers, belching inky smoke, and vexing the blue sky with their murky vapors, there are now seldom more than two or three. In a short time there will be none, for they no longer seem to have a mission in the commerce of the west.—New Orleans Picayune.

Thus does the Picayune write the epitaph of the colossal river fleet, as other journals in other times have been called to write that of the stage coach, the clipper ship, and the passenger packet in the East. Change is written on the face of all things, and "rapid transit" rules this bustling age. Will Wallace Harney writes for Harper's Weekly a poem: "The U. S. M. Mississippi Passenger Steamer," from which we extract, in this connection, the following magnificent lines:

* * * * * * *

How changed since the flying swallow-tail
At her flag-staff was symbolical
Of the Pride of the River, chiding
The fat salt marsh of the bayou
When the lords of the South came a-riding
From the Gulf to the Falls of Ohio
On business lively as pleasure;
And the wealth of her gilded cabin
Was rich with a richer treasure
Than the Roman stole from the Sabine!

What has become of her Master?
What has become of her men?
Her damasks and lambrequen,
Ormolu and alabaster?
Her nostrils breathing benzen,
When throes of her mighty engine
Made chandeliers clink and shiver
To the throttle's hollow diphthong;
And the coils of the sinuous river
Unwind like a flying whip-thong,
As she blows a smoky streamer
(That pictured photographic
The bends of the river traffic)
In the nose of her rival steamer?

What if some night-worn pilot,
By new cut or low sand islet,
Hears the capstan song of her dead men;
The pant of her engine churning,
The pat of her buckets turning,
And the long, soft cry of her lead-men,
As he sees her head-light burning
In the bends of the old dead river,
As of old the bold Sir Bediver
Saw the white barge of the king come!

* * * * * * *

The days of her glory are ended;
Captain and capstan-song,
And the phantoms she chased so long.

Ended her noble winnings,
That once set the river a-talking;

* * * * * * *

But the tall magnolias above her
Hang like a mourning lover,
Dropping their immortelles
In the long, unbroken swells
That picture in polished emery
Cut-water to cabin spar,
Clear as a widowed memory
Of the days before the war!

Banner Correspondence.

New York.

WATERVLIET.—Samuel McCleary writes: "Paul says, 'There is a natural body and a spiritual body.' To the creedists of our day it is a very abstruse subject, and while a large army of preachers preach about it, what do they really know about it? you ask them, and they tell you Paul says so! You ask them how Paul came to know, and they can't tell! But there are millions who can certify to the fact, and without going to Paul for it either. For one of the millions I answer without hesitation I know it to be a fact. But you want my evidence:

I say there is a spiritual body which has, under favorable conditions, eyes to see and ears to hear. I had a nephew who, as he neared the end of this life, saw his father, and called to his mother, who was in another part of the house, 'Mother, mother! come quick, quick! here is father!' He was perfectly rational meanwhile. Another time a loving sister, near the moment of her departure, turned her eyes up as if seeing something. Her daughter, standing at the bedside, said: 'Mother, what are you looking at?' She said: 'I was looking to see if there was any one among them that I knew.' When nearing the final struggle, reaching up her arms she said: 'Why can't they meet me half way?' This dear sister was perfectly rational at the time, knew well what she saw, who she was with, and who she was talking to.

I am satisfied there must be a point, in passing from the natural to the spiritual, when the natural gives up and the spiritual becomes supreme; when we can see both ways. Such instances are frequent where conditions are favorable, and sometimes continue for hours and even days before death.

I recently had the pleasure, through the favor of a neighbor, Dr. Lothrige, of witnessing a new and interesting case. The doctor carried me over to our Shaker friends, about two miles distant, to see an old gentleman who was not sick, but very gradually dying of old age. I had known him formerly, but had not seen him for years. He was very much changed in appearance, but we readily recognized each other. His hearing, seeing and activity began gradually to leave him, and as gradually new experiences came unknown to him before. 'Why, Samuel,' said he to me, 'I begin to see and hear spirits talk and sing most beautifully, whom I never saw nor heard before. I see and talk with my mother night and day, and with others, sometimes in English, sometimes in German. I have happy times. I am ready—only waiting my resurrection with a delicious foretaste of the reunions.' And there he is sitting—the brittle thread just ready to break, his pathway strewn with flowers—waiting, patiently waiting his resurrection. A happier, more contented man I never saw than that aged Shaker. Yes, I have more than faith in Paul, because what he knew, so do I."

ALBANY.—J. D. Chism, Secretary, writes: "The First Spiritual Society of Albany opened the season with Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, who occupied the platform the mornings and evenings of Sept. 16th, 23d and 30th, those dates closing her fourth engagement with this society within the past year. She is so well liked by all who have heard her, and has assisted the society so materially, that an engagement has been made for next April or May. Her control 'Ikabod,' with his unique flow of language and witticisms, is a favorite with everybody, and the truthfulness of his tests has done much to convince strangers that there is something in this philosophy that is worthy of investigation, and thereby our audiences have constantly increased in numbers.

Mrs. Nellie J. T. Brigham lectured for the Society Friday evening, Sept. 28th, upon selected subjects, one of which, 'Is Christianity an Offshoot of Pagan Mythology?' was handled in the fine logical manner peculiar to this noble lady, and many church-members who were present declared themselves delighted with her arguments. Mrs. B. will lecture here every four weeks the coming winter.

The Ladies' Spiritual Aid Society has begun the campaign in earnest, and gives promise of doing good work to assist the Society the coming season. The Friday afternoon meetings are well attended; at six o'clock supper is served to the members and their friends at one dime each.

They are to give a series of seventeen dancing socials in Van Vechten Hall, and have engaged the best orchestra for such an occasion in the city. The first social took place Sept. 26th, and was a grand success, over two hundred persons being present. We have found these socials do considerable good by attracting many young people to our hall who find that Spiritualists are not such 'dreadful people' as they have been taught to believe them.

The speakers engaged are as follows: Dr. C. T. Buffum for October; Edgar W. Emerson for week-nights, Oct. 16th, 19th, 23d and 30th; Frank T. Ripley for November; Mrs. E. A. Cutler for December; Prof. W. H. Peck for January; J. Frank Baxter for February; Mrs. Ida P. A. Whitlock for March; Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing for April or May; Mrs. H. S. Lake for June.

THE BANNER is a welcome visitor, and eagerly sought for by many of the friends. We have a partial promise that it will be placed on file every week in the reading-room of the Young Men's Association of this city."

SARATOGA SPRINGS.—E. J. Huling writes, October 1st: "The First Society of Spiritualists here has been obliged to suspend meetings for two weeks, on account of the court occupation of their room, and the family of its President, Dr. W. B. Mills, has been called upon to part with three of its members. Dr. Mills, who was in attendance at the Queen City Park Camp-Meeting, came home to find a granddaughter, thirteen years old, sick with diphtheria; and soon her brother of seven years was likewise afflicted. The girl died September 8th, and the boy followed the next day. Then Dr. Mills took the parents to his country residence while the house was fumigated, and for a change of scene. Then the son-in-law was taken and soon followed the children.

Dr. Mills had intended having memorial services, but the sickness of the son-in-law interfered. The Society advertised memorial services for Sunday, but on Saturday word came that Mrs. Mills was sick, and the family were again afflicted. The services were held, however, and Dr. G. W. King, who had attended the son-in-law in his closing hours, gave an interesting account regarding his case; stating that he became convinced during his last days of the truth of immortality, and that his children came and called for him to join them. Addresses were made by Peter Thompson, Gen. E. F. Bullard, A. S. Pease and others. In the evening Dr. Mills came to tell us that Mrs. Mills was recovering, and also to tell of the consolation the son-in-law, Charles E. Cleaver, had derived during his last days from conversations with his little boy, gone before. The following preamble and resolution were offered and adopted:

Whereas, The President of the First Society of Spiritualists, and his family, have been called suddenly to part with near and dear relatives who have left the mortal form to take up the life beyond, in the early days of their visible existence here; therefore,

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with Dr. W. B. Mills and his family in their hour of sorrow; and trust that they may be consoled by the knowledge they have of the life immortal that surely follows this transitory state of being."

Missouri.

KANSAS CITY.—Mrs. S. W. Runyan writes: "Some time since, on my way home from California, I made a short stop at Denver, Col., visiting Mr. and Mrs. Philip Fox. Mr. Fox was an artist, and at the time of my visit was confined to his bed with spinal disease. Neither Mr. Fox nor his wife believed in Spiritualism, and laughed at me when I told them of proofs I had of its truth. Mr. Fox had a large oil painting he had finished previous to his illness. It was a meadow scene, and in the foreground the clover was so perfect it seemed one could pick the leaves. I admired it so much that he laughingly said, 'Mrs. Runyan, if spirits can come back to earth, I will come to you, and bring this picture, or a bunch of clover leaves.' My friend passed over about six weeks after my return home. The day I heard of his death Mr. Adrian B. Ormerod, a young medium here in Kansas City, saw and described to me perfectly the picture, and his control said, 'He brings you a bunch of clover leaves in his hand, just as he said he would.' It astonished me, for I had forgotten all about it, as it was said in jest, and we did not at that time expect to lose our friend."

Michigan.

MAPLE RAPIDS.—Mrs. Lunt-Parker writes: "Circumstances enabling me to visit Haslett Park, I did so, and on my arrival was taken to the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Burgess. Though almost strangers to me, they could not have done more for my comfort than they did if I had been their child. On the grounds I met with a warm welcome from many friends, and made the acquaintance of Mr. (and Mrs.) Haslett, the owner of the Park which bears his name. I found them to be earnest workers for the cause of Spiritualism. Mr. Haslett will continue the camp-meeting, as he has the past two years. He has very kindly given ground for the purpose of building a mediums' home, and it is hoped that the Spiritualists of Michigan will endeavor to make Haslett Park what its owner designs it to be, and that next year will find thousands more at the Park than did this. It is proposed to build a hotel on the grounds to assist the one across the lake (which this year was taxed to its utmost capacity) in the work of entertaining the visitors."

California.

MARTINEZ.—A correspondent writes, in the course of a business letter: "I cannot express the pleasure derived in the reading of THE BANNER—and the spirit-messages in particular. How my heart goes out to those who are instrumental in the carrying out of such a divine mission."

Massachusetts.

BOSTON.—M. M. Holt, writing from Charlestown District, reports that Dr. W. A. Hale has returned from his visit to Maine and the camp-meetings, and can be addressed 46 Russell street.

Queen Victoria's New Empire.

A Scheme to Absorb Africa as India was Conquered and Absorbed.

Within a comparatively short time—says The New York World—Queen Victoria has, quietly and almost unobserved, succeeded in adding to her dominions a vast empire, almost continental in size and peopled by some seventy millions of industrious and relatively prosperous inhabitants. The immense tract which has just been constituted as British territory extends from Zanzibar northward as far as Abyssinia, with a seaboard of over seventeen hundred miles in length. Westward it reaches to beyond the Victoria Nyanza and the other great lakes from which the Nile takes its source, and includes the finest lands and richest markets of Central Africa.

Mindful of the fact that England owes her Canadian dominion and her great Indian Empire to the Hudson Bay Company and the defunct East India Company respectively, Lord Salisbury's Government has in the present instance proceeded with the same characteristic caution.

A royal charter, based on the lines of that of the old East India Company, has been granted to a powerful association, promoted chiefly by Lady Burdett-Coutts and constituted under the name of the East African Company. The latter is authorized thereby to take possession of the district in question, to exercise justice, to collect revenue, to deal with refractory subjects "by force of arms," and, in fact, to wield all the power of a semi-independent government.

With laudable foresight the charter states that the extent of the territory westward of the great Central African lakes "has not as yet been exactly delimited." But as the Chairman of the new East African Company is the millionaire Scotch merchant Mackinnon, who is the principal shareholder in King Leopold's Congo enterprise, it may be fairly taken for granted that within a short time the clutches of John Bull will reach right across the African continent.

Without discussing the incredible impudence of Lord Salisbury in thus granting to a London company a rich, prosperous and populated country to which he has no vestige of a right, it is most interesting to watch the absolutely cold-blooded manner in which John Bull proceeds to satisfy his notorious land-grabbing instincts. A comparison of the boundaries of the British Empire in 1837, when Queen Victoria ascended the throne, with those of to-day is extremely instructive, and the question arises as to what measures England will be driven to adopt for the purpose of gratifying her greed when, in a very short time, every speck of land between the North and the South Poles will have been appropriated by one power or another.

THE LOG CABINS of America have been birthplaces of some of the grandest men. Lincoln, Grant, Sheridan, first saw the light of day through the chinks of a Log Cabin. Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla also originated in a Log Cabin, and stands preëminent among the blood purifiers of to-day as Warner's "Tippecanoe" does as a stomach tonic.

Husband (just home from the city)—"My angel! crying! Whatever's the matter?" Wife—"They've awarded me—prize medal—State fair (sobbing)—f' my sponge cake!" Husband (soothingly)—"And I'm quite sure it deserv——" Wife (hysterically)—"Oh—but it said—'t was—for the best specimen—o' concrete."—Time.

[Continued from first page.]

look upon their developed condition, "Did n't I tell you so?" Out in the limitless future what is not yet accomplished for earth-children will be sometime, somewhere, and we shall live to behold it. Now we do the best work we can, and then we sit down and wish it had been better, and we feel something rising up within us which if we could have given expression to would have made our work better. In the future I know that I shall rise to a condition in which I can express the highest that I now feel uprising within me, and so shall it be with you all. You have not heard a thought this morning but a greater one rises up within you, only you cannot tell it. Well, you will tell it by-and-bye to somebody. This is the soul's power, and it shall be developed in God's time, in nature's time.

Can you think of the old-time heaven described to you in your childhood, and then sing "Heaven is my Home," without feeling that you would be homesick in such a heaven? In the place of this Spiritualism tells you that you are going to have a home, a natural home, where the loved ones gone before will enfold you in their tender embraces, and your soul shall be satisfied. It tells you that death is a friend, who will lead you to this. You may not see the forty and four thousand perfect men, standing about the throne of God, nor those wonderful animals, nor those mystical rivers, but you will find something infinitely better—home, a home like this of earth, only with fairer skies and greener fields, with sweeter flowers and purer streams. It will be our home. Do you say this is too material? Why, what are these flowers, but spirit manifesting itself in form? Is there anything unreasonable in the statement of facts? Facts are stubborn things, and I tell you this fact: That world is a natural one, as natural to the soul of man as this world is to his body; yes, and more so, because it is higher, it is more developed.

But somebody asks, "What are you going to do with all the wicked?" Going to take care of them, just as you ought to have done before you hung them; going to water them with the dew of sympathy, to warm them with the sunlight of love, to quicken them with the penetrating power of truth, until in the place of the desert waste will appear the fruitful garden, and their lives shall bud and blossom, and bear harvests of good. Instead of sending them to hell we are going to send them to school, and we are going to have good teachers for them. They will be under the law of love, but it will be discipline as well, and the discipline will be a process of education. Then we have to take care of the babies you do not know how to bring up. Does n't it need a natural world for this? You cannot find anything between the two lids of the Bible that tells you whether the little soul whose life-boat floated away upon eternity's ocean before it had hardly touched the river of time, ever becomes anything but a blank page or not.

Spiritualism comes to tell you that Nature, who has taken your babe from you, knows how to care for it. You did not. You loved it well enough, but you did not understand its organism. You did not know how to live while you were clothing it with the mantle of your being; you did not know how to give this little soul the right kind of a starting-place, and so it broke from its moorings and drifted away. We have taken it up; we have cared for it and educated it. Such souls I see standing beside some of you this morning. They say: "I passed from earth a babe. This is my mother. She does not know I am a man, or a woman. Why? Because no religion ever taught it." These souls say: "I am waiting for my mother. She does not know me, but I shall be sure to know her, for I have been brought to see her every day since I went away, and when she comes I shall introduce myself and make my claims." Did that message ever come to earth before? I answer: Never, until it was brought to you by Modern Spiritualism.

Yes, Spiritualism is a religion, and it will sweep on and on, cheering and uplifting the millions who, weighed down by care and woe, know not the future holds for them an answer to all their soul's requirements; that it will bring them out into the glad sunshine of the life eternal!

[From The Two Worlds, Manchester, Eng.]

Col. Ingersoll and Metaphysical Science.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll has his ideas on doctors, and physics, and medical treatment, as well as on some other subjects, and in connection with the illness of his friend, Mr. Conkling, he said:

"There is altogether too much gloom about most sick chambers. People tiptoe in and about, and wear long faces, and act generally in a way that would make even a well man sick, and is bound to make a sick man worse. I believe many a man has been hurried across the dark river by his horrible, soul-depressing treatment who might have become well, and strong, and useful if he had had more sunshine and fresh air in his room, or the odor of flowers to offset the smell of the drugs, and smiling, hopeful countenances about, instead of woe-begone visages, whose every glance betokens the loss of hope, and the belief in the speedy dissolution of the pain-racked patient.

"I had a friend once named Haley, a royal good fellow, of whom I thought a great deal. On one occasion I received word that my old friend was dying, and wanted to see me, so I went over to his house. I met his wife, and she had a face as long as the moral law, and ten times more uncomfortable. Well, I went in to see Haley, and there he lay, counting the moments in a bitter fear that each would be the last. I do n't know what particular disease he was troubled with, but either that or the medicine had turned him a vivid saffron color. 'Haley,' I said, 'I 'll be hanged if I want to die with such a complexion as that. You would be in a pretty plight to go mooning about the other world looking like a Chinaman.' I went on for a few minutes, when the poor fellow began to enter into the spirit of the subject himself, and I showed him his face in a looking-glass, and that brought a smile. Then I turned to his weeping wife, and told her to cheer up, that Haley was not going to die; that he was good for twenty years to come.

"'The trouble with your husband is that he is scared to death,' I said. 'You all come in looking so downcast and sorrowful that you give him the impression that he is done for, and take away all his courage to fight against his sickness.'

"Well, the result of all this was that Haley commenced to mend, and time and again since then he has said that my visit saved his life.

"On another occasion there was a Major in the army, whom I knew very well. He was taken ill, and believed he was going to die. I believed he was simply homesick, or something of that sort. Well, I wrote his obituary, and went to see him in his tent.

"'Major,' said I, 'you are so sure of dying that I have written your obituary, and want to read it to you.' He protested, but I went on with the reading, and detailed every pleasant incident of his life. Before I finished a smile flitted across his face. After the obituary I read him a story of something supposed to have taken place a year after his funeral. It was a description of his widow's second marriage. There were a good many more people at the wedding than there were at the funeral. Well, this treatment had the effect to change the current of the Major's thoughts. It broke up his hallucinations, and he recovered, and did good service during the war, and lived a happy life for years after.

"Then there was a man from our town named Marcy. He got it into his head that he was going to die. At that time no one was allowed to leave the army for a visit to the North, except on sick leave, or occasionally to accompany the remains of a dead comrade. I saw Marcy and said to him: 'Now, Marcy, you say you are going to die. If that is so I do n't suppose a few days one way or the other will make much difference to you. I want to go home for a day or two about the 15th, but cannot get a leave of absence. Now, if you want to do me a very great favor, and will quit this life, say on the 12th, I can get my coveted leave of absence to take you home—see?' But I knew my man, and he did n't die. He got very angry instead, and recovered, but he declares to this day that it was my proposition that brought him back his old stubbornness, and gave him grit to fight for his life. He always did object to being made a mere convenience of."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

[We have a vague notion that Martin Luther raised his friend Philip Melanchthon from a death-bed, on the same principle as the above.

There may have been some MAGNETISM as well as MIND in all these cases, to which the modern "metaphysical healer" might do well to look.—ED. T. W.]

Written for the Banner of Light.

A RAY OF LIGHT.

When the world is hushed in slumber,
And the stars peep from above—
Care no more our minds doth cumber,
And our hearts are filled with love;

As we think of those departed,
Passed beyond the mystic gate,
They, the happy, merry-hearted,
Who, in fields elysian, wait;

Then before our vision glances,
What we never view by day,
As though form were given to fancies
To illume our earthly way.

And we see our dear ones gliding
From the "unseen" to our side;
Who our fears so gently chiding,
Tell they e'er will with us 'bide.

Then we know, and bless the knowing,
That a ray has pierced the gloom:
Spiritualism light is throwing
O'er the pathway to the tomb!

Simmesport, Pa. M. K. P.

Reception and Presentation.

To the Editor of the Banner of Light:

Saturday, Sept. 29th, a reception was given Dr. George A. Fuller, by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Berry, at their residence, 70 Lincoln street. A large number of his friends were present. After music Mrs. Berry, under control of her spirit guides, gave an invocation, followed by readings by Mrs. Hattie Parker, and remarks by Mr. T. P. Beals, and others; several mediums were controlled by their spirit guides in a manner very satisfactory to those present, but the interest of the evening reached its height when Mr. Berry arose, and in a short but well-chosen speech presented Dr. Fuller, in behalf of his Portland friends, with an elegant gold watch charm, and a gold pen and pencil combined.

Dr. Fuller, although taken completely by surprise, thanked the friends in a feeling manner. Later in the evening his spirit guides also thanked the friends for their interest in their medium. By request Mr. Berry gave a few experiments in Psychology.

Bro. Fuller goes out from our midst with the sincere wishes for his welfare of all the Spiritualists of Portland. May he find as true friends in the South as he has in the North, is the desire of his friends in the Pine Tree State. H.

Portland, Sept. 30th.

☞ For the first time this year the "Phantom Ship" has been sighted off Block Island. The peculiarity of this appearance consists in it always being seen at various points, with the same results in the way of description. In other words the spectators all tell about the same story. This night the great blaze was witnessed by a lady at Noyes Beach, two gentlemen at Watch Hill, several members of a family in Charlestown, and so on. No one has yet been able to account for this wonderful sight. It seems like a ship on fire, and is generally visible for some minutes. Old residents of Rhode Island claim that it is the ghost of the three-masted schooner from Holland, which was led to destruction over a century ago, by the wicked Block Islanders. The crew was murdered, the vessel plundered and burned. Strange as it may seem, the theory of the "phantom ship" is held by many intelligent persons. Whittier's poem on this uncanny appearance is one of the most beautiful things in the language. The "Spook Schooner," as one of the natives calls this curious light, is said to make its appearance usually after a storm.—Eleanor Kirk, in Cape Ann Advertiser, Sept. 28th.

LOG CABINS are not recommended as model habitations for modern people. But Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla and Warner's "Tippecanoe" are the simple but effective compounds which enabled the rugged pioneers to maintain health, and can be safely recommended to all.

Vermont State Spiritualist Association.

The Twenty-First Annual Convention of this body will be held at the Waterbury Hotel, Waterbury, Vt., Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 19th, 20th and 21st, 1888.

Speakers Engaged and Expected—Joseph D. Stiles, of Weymouth, Mass.; Hon. A. E. Stanley, of Leicester, Vt.; Mrs. Abbie W. Crossett, of Waterbury, Vt.; Mrs. Fannie Davis Smith, of Brandon, Vt.; Mrs. Emma L. Paul, of Morrisville, Vt.; Mrs. Sarah A. Wiley, of Rockingham, Vt.; Mrs. A. P. Brown, of St. Johnsbury, Vt.; Lucius Colburn, of Bennington, Vt. We regret to say to the many friends of Mrs. Lizzie Manchester that she has an engagement for the month of October, and cannot be present.

Music—The Duxbury Glee Club, noted for its sweet, soul-stirring inspirational songs, has been secured for the entire meeting.

The first session will be opened Friday, at 10:30 A. M., by the President, Mrs. Abbie W. Crossett; poem by J. D. Stiles, followed by conference.

Mediums secured for the occasion are Joseph D. Stiles; Mrs. M. K. Morgan, of Woodstock, Vt.; Dr. Bronson, of St. Albans. Dr. S. Locke, of Newport Center, Vt., clairvoyant and magnetic healer, will be present during the meeting. During the Convention J. D. Stiles will hold two of his wonderfully convincing test séances, giving dates of death, age, occupation, and description of friends passed to spirit-life, so minutely that they will be readily recognized. Mrs. Morgan will also give tests from the platform.

Waterbury is one of the finest places in the State for holding Conventions, it being on the line of the Central Vermont Railroad, and having the best hotel accommodations. As this is the Annual Convention, and the time for election of officers, it is desired that there be a large attendance.

The resolution in regard to amending the Constitution so as to omit the fall or winter Convention will be considered.

Board at Waterbury Hotel $1.00 per day. Single meals, 35 cents. Horsekeeping 75 cents per day. Single feed, 25 cents. Horsekeeping for the whole time of the Convention at reasonable rates.

Round Trip Tickets for fare one way over the Central Vermont, Passumpsic and Montpelier and Wells River Railroads. Those coming over the Passumpsic and Montpelier and Wells River Railroads will purchase tickets to Montpelier, and then at Montpelier procure tickets to attend the Vermont State Spiritualist Convention at Waterbury. Those on the Central Vermont Railroad must call for round trip tickets to attend the Vermont State Spiritualist Convention at Waterbury. Half fare over Woodstock Railroad. All must be sure and observe the above instructions.

The Stage from Morrisville and Stowe will carry passengers for fare one way, and run an extra trip on Sunday from Stowe.

All are cordially invited.

☞ Those having quarterly dues, please remit to JANUS CROSSETT, Waterbury, Vt., if they cannot be present.

LUTHER O. WEEKS, Secretary.

Proctorsville, Vt. Per order Board of Managers.

New Hampshire Convention.

The Quarterly Convention of the New Hampshire State Spiritualist Association will be held at Washington, N. H., Oct. 12th, 13th and 14th.

Good speakers and mediums have been engaged, and all are invited to be present.

Half fare on stages from Hillsboro' and Newport. Reduced rates at hotel. Bro. Lull has the latch-string out as usual.

Round-trip tickets, at two cents per mile, may be obtained from the following stations to Hillsboro' Bridge: Plymouth, Laconia, Franklin, Concord, Contoocook, Nashua, Milford, Peterboro', Keene and Hancock Junction.

Speakers.—Prof. John W. Kenyon, of Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Craddock, of Concord; Miss S. Lizzie Ewer, of Portsmouth, N. H.; Mrs. Stevens, of Washington, N. H.

Francestown, Sept. 24th, 1888. GEO. D. EPPS, Sec'y.

Annual Meeting.

The Spiritualists of Kansas will hold their Annual Meeting Oct. 7th to 14th, inst., at the residence of T. C. Daniels, on and a half miles east of Fairmount, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. All are invited. Good speakers and mediums will be present to entertain and instruct the people.

A. H. NICHOLAS.

Spiritualist Meetings.

NEWARK, N. J.—Meetings will be held every Sunday evening at No. 139 Congress street, commencing at 7 o'clock. Mrs. H. C. Dorn, Secretary.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Meetings are held Sundays, 3 P. M., by First Spiritual Association, at Grant's Hall, 9th and Franklin Avenue. Samuel Penberthy (at Hotel Westeran), Secretary.

SECOND EDITION.

A REVIEW

OF THE

Seybert Commissioners' Report;

ON

WHAT I SAW AT CASSADAGA LAKE.

BY A. B. RICHMOND, ESQ.,

A Member of the Pennsylvania Bar; Author of "Leaves from the Diary of an Old Lawyer," "Court and Prison," "Dr. Crosby's Calm View from a Lawyer's Standpoint," "A Hawk in an Eagle's Nest," Etc.

This able and comprehensive work should be read by every thoughtful man and woman who has heard of the Seybert Bequest. Hon. A. B. Richmond, the author, whose eminence as a criminal lawyer, and high reputation as a writer, will at once ensure the confidence and attention of the reader, has in this volume replied to the "Preliminary Report of the Seybert Commission" with a soundness of logic, a keenness of satire, a breadth of thought and clearness of perception such as the importance of the subject demanded. He deals his blows at the unfairness, injustice, prejudice, unkindness and irreverence of the Seybert Commissioners with an unsparing hand, and, like Thor, he never strikes a blow in vain. Well aimed and well struck, each blow tells, and must carry conviction to every thoughtful mind.

Mr. Richmond, although not a believer in the Spiritual Philosophy, has here made a fearless and vigorous defense of the reality of the PHENOMENA of Spiritualism. Having received from the hands of a friend just returned from Cassadaga Lake a communication addressed to him from one dear to him in spirit-life, he was induced to visit the Lake, but went with a firm belief that he should be able to solve the mystery and expose the fraud. His experience there convinced him of the genuineness of at least a portion of the phenomenal part of Spiritualism, and he accordingly wrote his Open Letter to the Seybert Commission, a document which aroused the interest and admiration of the best minds. Once convinced that the so-called spirit manifestations do occur in many instances where fraud is out of the question, he gallantly and fearlessly comes to the front and wields his weapons with strong, unerring aim in defense of truth and human progress.

After a happy and appropriate introduction of the subject, with all needful explanations concerning the bequest of Mr. Seybert, the author gives in the first Chapter his "Open Letter to the Seybert Commission"; Chapters II., III. and IV. are devoted to a searching criticism of the Report of the Seybert Commission; Chapter V. treats ably of the Bible on Spiritualism; Chapter VI. has for its motto "In my Father's House are Many Mansions"; Chapter VII. contains C. C. Massey's Open Letter on "Zöllner" to Professor George S. Fullerton; Chapter VIII. gives an incident which took place in 1854 at a meeting of the "American Association for the Advancement of Science," with remarks made on that occasion by Professor Robert Hare, etc., etc.; Chapter IX. consists of the "Report of the London Dialectical Society," made in 1869; Chapter X. gives Professor Crookes's testimony from his "Researches in the Phenomena of Spiritualism"; Chapter XI. gives further testimony from two witnesses; Chapter XII., "Summary," and the Proscriptum, close the volume.

12mo, cloth, pp. 244. Price $1.25, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

PRICE REDUCED FROM 50 CENTS TO 35 CENTS IN PAPER COVERS, AND FROM 75 CENTS TO 50 CENTS IN CLOTH.

Post-Mortem Confessions:

Being Letters Written Through a Mortal's Hand by Spirits Who, When in Mortal, were OFFICERS OF HARVARD COLLEGE: With Comments by ALLEN PUTNAM, A. M., Author of "Natty, a Spirit," "Bible Marvel-Workers," "New England Witchcraft Explained by Modern Spiritualism," "Agassiz and Spiritualism."

This volume contains several letters written by spirits who, while in mortal, were officers of Harvard College, and now freely write out confessions that they were wrong in making that far-famed attack upon Modern Spiritualism in 1857 miscalled The Harvard Investigation. These letters are to be so valuable as history in future times that they merit a place in every family library, deserve to be carefully read now, preserved and handed down to posterity. They came forth in response to letters written by a graduate from that college, who was the personal friend of those officers, and yet their contestant at the time of the sham Investigation. He supplements the correspondence with his views of the timeliness, aims and operations, present and prospective, of Modern Spiritualism itself. It is a unique and instructive work, by one thirty-four years a Spiritualist and eighty-four a mortal.

INDEX.

Harvard Investigation; Agassiz, Professor; Bell, M. D.; Eustis, Professor; Felton, Professor; Gardiner, Doctor; Lunt, Editor; Peirce, Professor; Putnam, D. D.; Walker, President; Willis, Doctor.

SUPPLEMENT.

Introduction; Planetary Influences; Openers of the Gates, God; Managers of Spiritualism; Methods, Motives and Aims; For Whose Good? First Needs, Sad Conditions, Various Locations; Mediumship; How Commune; Business; Healing; Consolation; Religious Aspects; Personal Experiences; Appendix.

Paper, price 35 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from $2.50, Postage 15 cts., to $1.50, Postage Free.

SPIRIT WORKERS

IN THE

HOME CIRCLE.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHIC NARRATIVE OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA IN FAMILY DAILY LIFE EXTENDING OVER A PERIOD OF TWENTY YEARS.

BY MORELL THEOBALD, F. C. A.

Some of the most astonishing phenomena in the history of Modern Spiritualism are recorded in this volume, the descriptions of which are given with a marked degree of fidelity to detail and effort to corroborate their truth by unimpeachable testimony. They include independent writing in various languages, on walls and ceilings, in closed apartments and on note books in locked desks; lighting of lamps and fires; filling of kettles with water, and making preparations for breakfast, even to cooking food, making tea and "laying the table"; organ playing with no one visibly present; materialization and dematerialization of forms and fabrics, bringing of flowers, ringing of bells and movements of physical objects. Fac-Similes are given of various writings, one of them in Greek, with a translation. The book covers a period of twenty years, and of each of the phenomena above specified, together with others, numerous instances are narrated.

The author says that the book has been written in the intervals of a busy professional life, which fact has proved of advantage; for, while as careful as possible not to be carried away by enthusiasm, or by imagination, in a region whereof there is much scope for their action, the disjointed method of working he was compelled to adopt operated as a protection against a surrender to mere fantasy.

Demy 8vo, cloth, pp. 306. Price $2.50, postage 15 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from $1.25 to 75 Cents.

Bible Marvel-Workers,

And the Power which helped or made them perform MIGHTY WORKS, and utter Inspired Words; Together with some Personal Traits and Characteristics of Prophets, Apostles and Jesus, or New Readings of "THE MIRACLES."

BY ALLEN PUTNAM, A. M.

Mr. Putnam has here, in his uniformly candid and calm spirit, furnished an unusually vivid, interesting and instructive volume of about 240 pages. He here allows what he incidentally calls "THE GUIDE-BOOK OF CHRISTENDOM" to tell the story of its own origin and character, and mostly in its own words and facts. Biblical light leads his way, and as he moves on he finds and points out Fact after Fact, View after View, Meaning after Meaning, attaching to old familiar mental pictures and forms of Bible scenes and personages which possess the charm of novelty, while they generate conviction that they are true and valuable. Without questioning the genuineness or truth of any part of the Bible itself, and without attack upon any sect, denomination or individual, Mr. Putnam, following the clear leadings of light which John the revelator furnished, examines most of the prominent Bible marvels and personages, and presents to the public a work which will show to most readers spots where they have been accustomed to overlook very plain and distinct information lying upon the very surface of our English Bible, which, if recognized, will lead devoted lovers of the Bible, and its contemners also, to estimate it with more discriminating justice than they have been accustomed to apply there.

Price 75 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 30 Cents to 15 Cents.

MESMERISM, SPIRITUALISM, WITCHCRAFT AND MIRACLE.

A treatise, showing that Mesmerism is a key which will unlock many chambers of mystery. By ALLEN PUTNAM, author of "Spirit-Works," and "Natty, a Spirit."

Paper, 15 cents, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

Price Reduced from 25 Cents to 10 Cents.

What is Spiritualism?

An Address delivered by THOMAS GALES FORSTER, in Music Hall, Boston, Mass., Sunday afternoon, Oct. 7th, 1867. This address possesses great merit. It is terse and to the point. Scoffers should circulate this pamphlet in their respective localities with a lavish hand.

Paper, 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

WAS JESUS DIVINE? A Critical Examination of Biblical Theology. By M. B. CRAVEN. Paper. Price 10 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

BANNER OF LIGHT:

THE OLDEST JOURNAL IN THE WORLD DEVOTED TO THE Spiritual Philosophy.

ISSUED WEEKLY

At 9 Bosworth Street, (formerly Montgomery Place), Corner Province Street, Boston, Mass.

COLBY & RICH,
Publishers and Proprietors.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER,
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR,
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR,
Aided by a large corps of able writers.

THE BANNER is a first-class Family Newspaper of EIGHT PAGES—containing FORTY COLUMNS OF INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE READING—embracing

A LITERARY DEPARTMENT,
REPORTS OF SPIRITUAL LECTURES,
ORIGINAL ESSAYS—Upon Spiritual, Philosophical and Scientific Subjects,
EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT,
SPIRIT-MESSAGE DEPARTMENT, and
CONTRIBUTIONS by the most talented writers in the world, etc., etc.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, IN ADVANCE:

Per Year	$3.00
Six Months	1.50
Three Months	75

Postage Free.

In remitting by mail, a Post-Office Money Order on Boston, or a Draft on a Bank or Banking House in Boston or New York City, payable to the order of COLBY & RICH, is preferable to Bank Notes. Our patrons can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred.

ADVERTISEMENTS published at twenty cents per line for the first, and fifteen cents per line for each subsequent insertion.

Subscriptions discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for.

☞ Specimen copies sent free.

COLBY & RICH

Publish and keep for sale at Wholesale and Retail a complete assortment of Spiritual, Progressive, Reformatory, and Miscellaneous Books.

Among the authors are Andrew Jackson Davis, Hon. Robert Dale Owen, Dr. James M. Peebles, Henry C. Wright, Giles B. Stebbins, D. D. Home, T. R. Hazard, William Denton, Rev. M. B. Craven, Judge J. W. Edmonds, Prof. S. B. Brittan, Allen Putnam, Epes Sargent, W. F. Evans, Kersey Graves, A. B. Child, P. B. Randolph, Warren S. Barlow, J. O. Barrett, Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten, Miss Lizzie Doten, Mrs. Maria M. King, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, etc.

Any book published in England or America, not out of print, will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books published and for sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

☞ Publishers who insert the above Prospectus in their respective journals, and call attention to it editorially, will be entitled to a copy of the BANNER OF LIGHT one year, provided a marked paper is forwarded to this office.

Miscellaneous.

New Thought;

A VIGOROUS, Eight-Page Weekly Journal devoted to SPIRITUALISM and General Religious and Political Reform.

Published every Saturday by MOSES HULL & CO., at Des Moines, Iowa.

The Organ of the Mississippi Valley Association of Spiritualists.

NEW THOUGHT is a quarto filled with interesting matter, WRITTEN EXPRESSLY for its columns, on the various phases of Spiritualism and General Reform, and nicely printed on heavy paper.

Terms of Subscription: One year, $1.50; six months, 75 cents; three months, 40 cents; single number, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT will be sent to new subscribers three months on trial for twenty-five cents, a sum which barely covers the price of blank paper and press-work. Sample copies free. 4eow

---

The Gnostic,

A Monthly Journal of Spiritual Science.

PUBLISHERS AND EDITORS GEORGE CHAINEY, ANNA K. CHAINEY and W. J. COLVILLE.

EACH number will contain forty pages, devoted to Esoteric Religion, Psychometry, Occult Science, Mental Therapeutics, Human Liberty, and the Culture of all that is Divine in the Human Race.

Terms, $2.00 per year; single copies 25 cents.

Address GEORGE CHAINEY, 17 Flood's Building, San Francisco, Cal. Ap21

SPHINX.

ANTI-MATERIALISTISCHE MONATSSCHRIFT für die wissenschaftliche Untersuchung der „mystischen" und „magischen" Thatsachen, mit Beiträgen von Carl du Prel, Alf. Russ. Wallace, der Professoren Barrett und Coues, mehrerer Brahmanen u. s. w., herausgegeben von Dr. Hübbe Schleiden.

Subscription $1.75 for six months, $3.50 per annum.

Messrs COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth street, Boston, Mass., will receive subscriptions and forward the same to the publisher. Au21

La Lumiere.

A JOURNAL, devoted to the interest of Spiritualism in all its aspects, MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, Editor. The ablest writers contribute to its pages.

Terms of Subscription, in advance, per year, $1.20. In remitting by mail, a Post-office order on Paris, France, to the order of MADAME LUCIE GRANGE, 75, Boulevard Montmorency, Auteuil.

PROPHETES ET PROPHETIES, by Hab.

A BOOK of universal interest and influence. It contains an Historical Relation of Prophecies in Modern Times and Prophetic Spirit Communications. Paper, 12mo, pp. 240. Price 60 cents, postage free. For sale by LA LUMIERE, Paris, France. Au9

THE CARRIER DOVE.

An Illustrated Weekly Journal,

DEVOTED to Spiritualism and Reform. Edited by MRS. J. SCHLESINGER. DR. L. SCHLESINGER and MRS. J. SCHLESINGER, Publishers. Each number will contain the Portraits and Biographical Sketches of some of the Prominent Mediums and Spiritual Workers. Also Spirit Pictures by our Artist. Mediums, Lectures, Essays, Poems, Spirit Messages, Editorials, etc.

Terms: $2.50 per year; single copies, 10 cents.

Address all communications to THE CARRIER DOVE, 32 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal. F6

SEND NAME

AND POST-OFFICE ADDRESS, plainly written, to THE BETTER WAY, CINCINNATI, O., and receive a sample copy of this bright Spiritual Weekly Newspaper FREE. Subscription, Two Dollars per year, but no obligation to subscribe will be incurred by sending for a sample copy. It will cost you only a postal card and a minute! tf Au13

Light on the Way.

GEO. A. FULLER, Editor.
MRS. G. DAVENPORT STEVENS, Assistant Editor.

AN EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY, devoted to the dissemination of Spiritual Knowledge. Terms, 60 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address, GEO. A. FULLER, Editor and Publisher, Dover, Mass. My7

The Boston Investigator,

THE oldest reform journal in publication.
Price, $3.00 a year,
$1.50 for six months,
3 cents per single copy.

Now is your time to subscribe for a live paper, which discusses all subjects connected with the happiness of mankind.

Address J. P. MENDUM,
Investigator Office,
Paine Memorial,
Ap2 Boston, Mass.

Essence and Substance:

A TREATISE ON

Organic and Inorganic Matter: The Finite and The Infinite: Transient and Eternal Life.

BY WARREN CHASE,

Author of "Life-Line of the Lone One" and "Gist of Spiritualism."

Mr. Chase is known to be a deep thinker and close reasoner; his radical ideas are often original, and always frankly and clearly expressed, and this work presents the fundamental principles on which he bases his evidence of eternal life, and gives a concise view of the doctrine of repeated incarnations without re-incarnation. The origin of human life on earth is treated in a new and interesting manner, which cannot fail to interest the reader. The author has given many years and much thought to these subjects, and has put forth in this work a theory that satisfies his critical and skeptical mind of eternal life, which he does not think any more attached to the spiritual forms that we put on at death, and which our friends appear in, than it is to those mortal bodies, although evidently of much longer duration.

Cloth, price 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

STARTLING FACTS IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM; Being a Graphic Account of Witches, Wizards and Witchcraft; Table-Tipping, Spirit-Rapping, Spirit Speaking, Spirit Telegraphing; and Spirit Materializations of Spirit Hands, Spirit Heads, Spirit Faces, Spirit Forms, Spirit Flowers, and every other Spirit Phenomenon that has occurred in Europe and America since the Advent of Modern Spiritualism, March 31, 1848, to the Present Time. By DR. N. B. WOLFE, Cincinnati, O.

In fine English cloth, gold back and sides, illustrated, $2.25 per copy, postage free.
For sale by COLBY & RICH.

FREE!....PREMIUMS!....FREE!

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

Persons sending DIRECT TO COLBY & RICH, 9 Bosworth Street, Boston, Mass., $3.00 for a year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT, will be entitled to a choice of the following Premiums:

All New Subscribers, or Old Patrons, on Renewing their Subscriptions

TO THE

Banner of Light,

MAY OBTAIN FOR THEMSELVES AND FRIENDS THE FOLLOWING PREMIUMS BY COMPLYING WITH THE TERMS ABOVE MENTIONED.

A choice of TWO of either of the following named

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

will be given for one year's subscription, or one of them for a six months' subscription:

MR. LUTHER COLBY, Editor of the Banner of Light; MR. ISAAC B. RICH, Business Manager, or MISS M. T. SHELHAMER, Medium for the Banner of Light Public Free Circles.

These Photographs are all from recent sittings, and are finely executed by one of the best photographers in this city.

Price for additional Photographs, if desired, 35 cents each.

Or a copy of either of the following Books:

Witchcraft of New England Explained by Modern Spiritualism.

By Allen Putnam, Esq., author of "Bible Marvel Workers," "Natty, a Spirit," "Mesmerism, Spiritualism, Witchcraft and Miracle," "Agassiz and Spiritualism," etc.

CONTENTS: PREFACE. References. Explanatory Note—Definitions. MATHER AND CALEF. COTTON MATHER. ROBERT CALEF. THOMAS HUTCHINSON. C. W. UPHAM. MARGARET JONES. Whithrop's Account of her, etc. ANN HIBBINS. Hutchinson's Account of Ann, etc. ANN COLE. Hutchinson's Account, etc. ELIZABETH KNAPP. A Case of Spiritualism, etc. MORSE FAMILY. Physical Manifestations, etc. GOODWIN FAMILY. Hutchinson's Account, etc. SALEM WITCHCRAFT. Occurred at Danvers, etc. TITUBA. Examination of her, etc. SARAH GOOD. Her Examination, etc. DORCAS GOOD. Bites with Spirit-Teeth, etc. SARAH OSBORN. Was seen spectrally, etc. MARTHA COREY. Her Character, etc. GILES COREY. His Heroism, etc. REBECCA NURSE. Was seen as an Apparition, etc. MARY EASTY. Her Examination, etc. SUSANNA MARTIN. Her Examination, etc. MARTHA CARRIER. Examination, etc. GEORGE BURROUGHS. His Susceptibilities and Character, etc. SUMMARY. Number executed. Spirits proved to have been Enactors of Witchcraft. THE CONFESSORS. THE ACCUSING GIRLS. Ann Putnam's Confession. THE PROSECUTORS. WITCHCRAFT'S AUTHOR. THE MOTIVE. LOCAL AND PERSONAL. METHODS OF PROVIDENCE.

APPENDIX. CHRISTENDOM'S WITCHCRAFT DEVIL. LIMITATIONS OF HIS POWERS. COVENANT WITH HIM. HIS DEFENSE. DEMONOLOGY AND NECROMANCY. BIBLICAL WITCH AND WITCHCRAFT. CHRISTENDOM'S WITCH AND WITCHCRAFT. SPIRIT, SOUL AND MENTAL POWERS. TWO SETS OF MENTAL POWERS—AGASSIZ, MARVEL AND SPIRITUALISM. INDIAN WORSHIP.

Spirit Invocations; or, Prayers and Praises

Publicly offered at the Banner of Light Circle-Room Free Meetings, by more than One Hundred Different Spirits, of Various Nationalities and Religions, through the vocal organs of the late Mrs. J. H. Conant. Compiled by Allen Putnam, A. M., author of "Bible Marvel-Workers," "Natty, a Spirit," "Spirit Works Real, but not Miraculous," etc., etc., etc.

Mr. Putnam has with skillful hand arranged in this volume, in comprehensive fashion, many living gems of thought, which are clothed in eloquence of diction, and thrill the prayerful heart with spiritual fervor. From the soulful petitions scattered through its pages, the doubter of Spiritualism's capability to minister to the devotional side of man's nature can draw ample proof that he is in error. The weary of heart will find in its holy breathings for strength, sent out to a higher power, rest from the cares that so furnish beset the pilgrim in life's highway. The sick in soul may from its demonstrations of the divine possibilities within, drink of the waters of spiritual healing and rejoice; and the desolate mourner can compass, through its unvailment of the certainty of reunion with the departed, a consolation which nothing earthly can take away.

Cloth, pp. 256.

A Romance of Caucasian Captivity; or, The Federati of Italy.

By G. L. Ditson, M. D. This is a romance of the most exciting character, and full of stirring incidents. The Federati were a band or association of individuals in Sardinia when it was still an independent kingdom, who were pledged to undying hostility to ultramontanism, and therefore were friends of a constitutional system.

It is skillfully conceived and constructed, its wide variety of characters affords constant excitement and pleasure, and its progress among a train of pleasurable incidents is almost like a poetic vision of the tripping of the rosy hours. It will provoke a favorable comparison with some of the most praised romances of the times.

Visions of the Beyond,

By a Seer of To-Day; or, Symbolic Teachings from the Higher Life.

Edited by Herman Snow. This work is of exceeding interest and value, the Seer being a person of elevated spiritual aspirations, and of great clearness of perception, but hitherto unknown to the public. The special value of this work consists in a very graphic presention of the truths of Spiritualism in their higher forms of action, illustrating particularly the intimate nearness of the spirit-world, and the vital relations between the present and future as affecting human character and destiny in the hereafter. Bound in cloth, pp. 186.

Or choice of ONE of the below-described beautiful works of art:

ENGRAVINGS.

HOMEWARD.

Designed and painted by Joseph John. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches.

FARM-YARD AT SUNSET.

Copied from the well-known and justly celebrated painting designed by Joseph John. Stein, copied in black and two tints. Size of sheet, 22x28 inches.

THE DAWNING LIGHT.

From the original painting by Joseph John. Engraved on steel by J. W. Watts. Size of sheet, 20x24 inches.

For each additional Engraving 50 cents extra.

Any person sending $3.50 for one year's subscription to the BANNER OF LIGHT will be entitled to Hollyer's Line and Stipple Steel Plate Engraving of the late

Henry W. Longfellow in His Library

At "Craigie House," Old Cambridge, Mass.

The plate is 24x32 inches. The central figure is that of the GREAT POET. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical.

This beautiful historic work of art is a lasting souvenir and ornament for sitting-room, parlor, library or office of any American home. We will mail the engraving free to any one sending us $3.50 for a year's subscription for the BANNER OF LIGHT, or we will send the engraving alone

TO BOOK PURCHASERS.

Colby & Rich, Publishers and Booksellers, 9 Bosworth street, (formerly Montgomery Place), corner of Province street, Boston, Mass., keep for sale a complete assortment of SPIRITUAL, PROGRESSIVE, REFORMATORY AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, at Wholesale and Retail.

Terms Cash.—Orders for Books, to be sent by Express, must be accompanied by all or at least half cash. When the money forwarded is not sufficient to fill the order, the balance must be paid C. O. D. Orders for Books, to be sent by Mail, must invariably be accompanied by cash to the amount of each order. We would remind our patrons that they can remit us the fractional part of a dollar in postage stamps—ones and twos preferred. Postage stamps in quantities of MORE than one dollar will not be accepted. All business operations looking to the sale of Books on commission respectfully declined. Any Book published in England or America (not out of print) will be sent by mail or express.

☞ Catalogues of Books Published and for Sale by Colby & Rich sent free.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ In quoting from the BANNER OF LIGHT care should be taken to distinguish between editorial articles and the communications (condensed or otherwise) of correspondents. Our columns are open for the expression of impersonal free thought, but we cannot undertake to endorse the varied shades of opinion to which correspondents give utterance.

☞ We do not peruse anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable as a guaranty of good faith. We cannot undertake to return or preserve manuscripts that are not used. When newspapers are forwarded which contain matter for our inspection, the sender will confer a favor by drawing a pencil or ink line around the article he specially desires to call our attention to.

☞ When the post-office address of THE BANNER is to be changed, our patrons should give us two weeks' previous notice, and not omit to state their present as well as future address.

Notices of Spiritualist Meetings, in order to insure prompt insertion, must reach this office on Monday of each week, as THE BANNER goes to press every Tuesday.

Banner of Light.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1888.

[Entered at the Post-Office, Boston, Mass., as Second-Class Matter.]

THE BANNER IS ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING FOR THE WEEK ENDING ON SATURDAY.

PUBLICATION OFFICE AND BOOKSTORE, Bosworth St. (formerly Montgomery Place), corner Province Street (Lower Floor).

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AGENTS:
THE NEW ENGLAND NEWS COMPANY,
14 Franklin Street, Boston.
THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY,
39 and 41 Chambers Street, New York.

COLBY & RICH,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ISAAC B. RICH.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
LUTHER COLBY.....EDITOR.
JOHN W. DAY.....ASSISTANT EDITOR.

☞ Business Letters should be addressed to ISAAC B. RICH, Banner of Light Publishing House, Boston, Mass. All other letters and communications must be forwarded to LUTHER COLBY. Private letters should invariably be marked "Personal" on the envelope.

☞ Before the oncoming light of Truth, Creeds tremble, Ignorance dies, Error decays, and Humanity rises to its proper sphere of Knowledge.—Spirit John Pierpont.

Meeting of the American Board.

The American Board—the "A. B. C. F. M."—has been in annual session at Cleveland, O., its previous session being held at Springfield, Mass. It was well attended, as the reports state, and the opening address was made by Rev. Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the President chosen last year. The Home Secretary, Rev. Dr. Alden, recommended an increase of contributions of $150,000 for the coming year, making a total of $750,000. A writer in the Boston Transcript, signing himself "An Orthodox Congregationalist," states that the anxiety has been great to know what the American Board would do. He admitted that nothing was expected to be done with reference to the questions which have been agitating the denomination for the past two years, the conservatives, or hold-fasts, being determined that those questions should not be presented, or, if presented, should be thrust aside without discussion. The liberals did not appear to be present in such strength as at Springfield. Nevertheless, he did not infer from this fact that this policy of the majority was going to silence the minority or circumscribe their influence. The minority is too powerful, both in numbers and character, to be silenced in such a way.

This aggressive orthodox writer asserts that if the liberal minority are not heard at Cleveland, they will be pretty sure to be heard at home. He pronounces the advocates of the liberal policy in the denomination in sending out missionaries, to be among the ablest and most devoted laymen and ministers in the denomination, as may readily be ascertained from the action of the numerous councils for ordaining and installing clergymen during the last year. The conservatives, he says, have made some most persistent attempts to prevent the induction into office of those who are known to be sound in the essentials of the Orthodox faith, but who are known to be liberal on some minor points. In almost, if not every, case these attempts have failed. In the latitude and neighborhood of Boston, he declares it would be difficult to organize a council of any church which would reject a liberal man who sought ordination.

He further asserts that it is most emphatically true that the reform in the denomination has made rapid advance, and that it will continue to advance in the future. He says there is not the slightest indication of a retrograde movement. The gross injustice done some of the most devoted young men who have ever presented themselves to the prudential committee of the Board for missionary fields, he says, cannot be forgotten; and not until that stain is wiped out will the Board, he predicts, have the place it once had in the affections of a large proportion of the church. "Broad Christian men of this day"—is his language—"will not long tolerate a corporation which has no close alliance with the churches, and which perpetuates its own existence. The Board does not represent the churches, and the latter have no voice nor vote in the election of new members or officers; neither have they a vote on any measure which may be proposed. The people attend the meetings, listen to reports or speeches, and when the time comes to vote, the president turns his back on the audience, and the few men on the platform composing the close corporation settle all matters of policy and finance."

[In the same direction a forceful editorial in the Boston Advertiser, entitled "Why They Do Not Go," asserts that "the liberal members" of this old-time association received at Springfield "what is equivalent to a notice to quit," and the advocates of "the invariably decisive nature of this present, earthly probation" took the reins in their hands, thus causing it "to be very clear that the American Board, which is a close corporation and entirely independent of the denomination, has decided that it will hereafter act as the agent of a fragment only of that denomination."]

Well may he ask—"How is this for a Christian organization?" And well may he exclaim in indignant derision—"Taxation without representation!" He says the churches "find the sinews of war, but have absolutely no power to select the officers or manage the campaigns. The home secretary can sit in his chair at the Missionary House and select or reject applicants for missionary work, subject only to the action of the prudential committee of the close corporation. He may become obnoxious by his course to a large proportion of the churches, but the latter have no remedy."

This is evidently no overdrawn picture. That there is an irrepressible conflict going on in the great body of Congregationalists, is too obvious a fact to admit of denial. And it is no less obvious, or if not obvious it is true, that this conflict is waged over the inevitable expansion of views of a creedal nature which is the result of a larger knowledge and an extending human sympathy. To think of keeping the affections of men in the iron straitjacket of rigid old Calvinism forever, is as preposterous as anything well can be in the face of advancing civilization and the consequent fraternization of the human race.

The Next Step.

The Sioux Commission having practically failed, according to last advices seventy-two chiefs were on their way to Washington to confer with the President regarding the proposed treaty. Among them were named Sitting Bull, Mad Bear, John Grass, Big Head, White Swan, Charger, Little Ghost, Medicine Bow, Iron Nation, Big Mane, Swift Bear, Two Strike, American Horse, Capt. Sword and Wezee. Red Cloud is put down only as "probable."

John Grass, it is reported, stands ready to guarantee that every Indian on the reservation, including himself and all the chiefs, shall sign the treaty if the government will pay them $1 per acre for the 11,000,000 acres of land, but himself and his followers positively refuse to come to terms at fifty cents an acre. He also stipulates that the $11,000,000 from the sale of the land shall be immediately deposited to their credit. They want this mony to be used as a perpetual fund to help them toward civilization. They believe this is the last treaty the government will ever make with the Indians, and therefore they desire that it shall—if the land must go—be productive of some solid financial backing for the Sioux nation in the future.

The treaty as heretofore offered the Sioux has for its central feature the allotment of land in severalty to the individual members of the tribe, from which they are to derive their future support; while at the same time the tribe is to sell to the government all the rest of their lands, after the allotment is completed, for fifty cents an acre, the amount thus obtained to be held for the benefit of the Sioux nation. The lands thus sold to the government are to be resold by the latter to settlers. The amount of land estimated to be left after allotment is some eleven millions of acres. The money they would receive from such sale would therefore, according to the terms of settlement proposed by the government, amount to but five and one-half million dollars.

The assumption put forward by the whites who favor this plan of allotment and sale—and it is nothing but an assumption—is that the best lands will of course be included in the allotment, while the lands sold to the government will be the poorest. Those who know anything at all about past dealings with the Indians by our government do not need to be told, however, that this is pure fiction! Unless human nature as generally known has undergone a very great modification, amounting to a radical change, it is preposterous to expect that any treaty that is likely to be proposed to the Indians in which their lands are at stake will either execute itself or be allowed to be executed in so simply just and honest a manner. And that the Sioux Indians comprehended without being prompted, the instant the present treaty was proposed to them. Three men formed the commission appointed to go and try to induce them to accept its terms. The Chairman was Capt. Pratt, the head of the Indian school at Carlisle; Judge Wright, of Tennessee; and Rev. Mr. Cleveland of Dakota. Nothing could look on its face more plausible, both as it regards proposal and personnel. But the Indians opposed the whole thing from the moment it was laid before them. And they stand out against it up to the time of sending their chiefs as their representatives to Washington.

They are disinclined above all else to entertain the allotment proposal, being resolutely bent on maintaining their tribal existence.

They do not personally want land in severalty, because they are not ready for it. It lets in all the light needed to illuminate the subject and bring out its full meaning, when a local contemporary drops the remark, after a statement of the case, that upon coming to Washington "the Sioux will probably be brought to see the necessity of consenting to allotment in severalty," as is always the case with so-called Indian treaties, the agreement and acceptance on the part of the Indians being invariably under practical compulsion. And this is the crown and summit of boasted civilization!

Light Breaking at Harvard.

In his analytic and organizing treatise—"The Science of Thought"—Professor C. Carroll Everett of Harvard University makes reference, in the chapter entitled Dynamic Induction, to the phenomena included in the definition of Spiritualism, in the following language. He is endeavoring to eliminate all the possible results of chance from the calculation in inductive reasoning, and illustrates the difficulty by reference to "phenomena, the nature of which is not yet settled in the minds of men generally, though a belief in their being the expression of some heretofore unrecognized agent has been slowly gaining ground."

The phenomena referred to, continues Prof. Everett, "are those which come under the general heads of animal magnetism, clairvoyance and the like. In these, supposing them to be what they appear, the effects are produced by some force, or forces, which it is impossible for most to control, and therefore nearly all the experiments made miscellaneously must be failures." The Seybert Commission is specially invited to take notice. Instancing what frequently happens in the case of striking dreams, Prof. Everett admits that "sometimes a person may be drawn into sympathy with some distant friend, or may, while sleeping in the ordinary way, fall spontaneously into the deeper sleep of the magnetic or clairvoyant state. Thus it is," he observes, "with all those occult sympathies which spring to light very rarely, but then in so striking a manner as to forbid the possibility of considering them merely accidental coincidences. The same," he adds, "is more strikingly true in cases in which the person who may be examining them exercises, by his very presence, a negative and hindering influence. Not only can his own experiments never succeed, but his very presence hinders the success of others. All such phenomena must be studied with peculiar care. Nothing is more remarkable than the fact that phenomena, if perfectly authenticated as those under consideration, should be disbelieved by many."

Professor Everett is compelled in reason to add that "the student and thinker who would enlarge the boundaries of human knowledge has, in such phenomena, a vast and comparatively unexplored field of research. And in spite of the difficulties attending such research, he acknowledges that discoveries in this field "would do more than almost anything else to shed light upon the most interesting facts and relations of our nature."

"Lost Volition."

Words are very convenient things, so to speak, for parrying and modifying the significance of facts, as well as for concealing thoughts. It is again illustrated in an almost unconscious, and therefore innocent, way in the account of what happened recently in one of the revival meetings conducted by the "boy preacher," Revivalist Harrison, in the old John-Street Methodist church in New York. The account states that the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bowdish, was approaching the end of his morning sermon from the pulpit, when he suddenly threw up his arms, tottered back from the pulpit desk, and fell seemingly unconscious into his chair. He recovered sufficiently in a few moments to be helped into his study, where for the space of three or four hours he rested in the grasp of what was called "the mysterious power," unable to lift a hand, but feeling "a delightful sensation of rest and peace and joyfulness."

He subsequently stated, in explanation, that he had been simply overcome by the Divine Spirit, of whose power he had been speaking. He had at no time lost consciousness, but while he felt a supernatural increase of spiritual and mental strength, he had temporarily lost volition. The world, he said, would scoff and fail to understand, but there were those, and many, too, who would be able to comprehend the incident, and would not be made sad.

The substance of it all simply is, that the Rev. Mr. Bowdish was on the eve of becoming entranced, and from apprehension of the consequences professionally made a resolute effort (in which he so far succeeded) to break away from the influence which was operating upon him, and tottered back from the desk at which he was speaking. The old-time Methodists were wont to hold "the power" in high esteem, and this was neither more nor less than spiritual influence. The Methodists of to-day, however, scoff at and deride it, in public at least, whatever they may think of it privately. Dr. Bowdish is evidently a subject of this "power," in other words an inspirational medium, and in the instance recorded above just escaped from being entranced. How loyal can a minister claim to be to spiritual truth and power, who, for any reason, is afraid to confess its control when it would clearly work the largest good.

The Great Eastern Steamship.

