GREAT YARMOUTH.—Friendship Chapter (No. 100).—The annual convocation of this prosperous chapter was held at the Chapter Rooms, Crown and Anchor Hotel, on Monday, the 9th inst. There were present Comps. E. J. Bonfellow, M.E.Z.; R. Martins, H.; R. W. Hubbard, J.; James Bond, I.P.Z.; John Franklin, P.Z.; A. Hanlon, P.Z.; Major W. Dods, E. P. Youell, G. F. Crane, W. J. B. Johnson, J. Wetheridge, J. T. Maybank, E. B. Wright, W. B. Page, J. C. Welham, J. A. Fisk, J. W. Rolfe, O. Moore, C. Fenton, R. Stanier, J. Woolton, E. Sturge, D. R. Fowler, G. S. Gibbs. The visitors were Comps. James Dunsford, I.P.Z. Perseverance Chapter, 213; Edwin Baldwin, M.E.Z. 213; C. H. Capon, H. 213. After the minutes of the last confirmation had been read and confirmed, the companions retired, and the Principals for the ensuing year were installed in their several chairs—Comp. R. Martins, as M.E.Z., by Comp. Dunsford, P.Z.; Comp. R. W. Hubbard, as H., by Comp. Baldwin, M.E.Z. 213; and Major W. Dods, as J., by Comp. C. H. Capon, H. 213. The companions were then readmitted, and Bro. Alexander Mitchell, M.D., whom the companions had unanimously elected, was exalted to the Sublime Degree of Holy Royal Arch by the newly-installed Principals in a very impressive manner. The M.E.Z. invested his officers with their collar and jewel of office as follows:—Comps. Edmund J. Bonfellow, I.P.Z.; A. Hanlon, P.Z., S.E.; E. P. Youell, P.S.; G. F. Crane and W. B. Johnson, Asst. Sojourners; J. Wetheridge, S.N.; F. W. Rolfe, Org.; and J. Holt, Janitor. The business of the evening concluded, the chapter was closed in ancient and solemn form. The companions then adjourned to the banquet room, the tables of which were very artistically decorated by Comp. John Franklin, P.Z. After a capital banquet, served in Comp. Franklin's usual unique style, and which, it is needless to say, gave general satisfaction, the usual loyal and Royal Arch toasts were given. "The Health of the M.E.Z." was given by Comp. E. J. Bonfellow, I.P.Z., and which was received with enthusiastic cheering. The M.E.Z., in thanking the companions for the hearty manner in which they had received the toast, congratulated them on the continued prosperity of the chapter, and assured them that he would do everything in his power to still further promote the interests and prosperity of the chapter; that he considered it a very great honour to preside over so large and flourishing a chapter, and he hoped that when his year of office expired the companions would have no cause to regret the exalted position in which they had that day placed him. "The Healths of Comps. R. W. Hubbard, H., and Major Wm. Dods, J.," were given and received in a very hearty manner, and both those companions replied in very appropriate speeches. The next toast was that of the companions who had visited the chapter that day and kindly undertaken the duties of installing the Principals, Comps. James Dunsford, P.Z. 213; Edwin Baldwin, P.Z. and M.E.Z. 213; C. H. Capon, H. 213. To these companions the M.E.Z. tendered the best thanks of the chapter for their kindness and consideration. Each of the Installing Companions replied, thanking the chapter for the reception given them. "The Health of the I.P.Z." was very heartily received, and responded to in a very earnest speech by Comp. Bonfellow. "The Principal Sojourner's Health" was received with tremendous cheering. The chapter was very fortunate in having a Principal Sojourner so thoroughly efficient as Comp. E. P. Youell; the arduous duties of his office would be discharged in a manner calculated to give the highest satisfaction to the companions of this chapter. Comp. Youell replied, thanking the companions for the very encouraging manner in which his name had been received. He assured the chapter that he would endeavour to the best of his ability to discharge the duties of his office to their entire satisfaction. "The Healths of Comp. Hanlon, P.Z. and S.E., and the rest of the Officers," and "The Newly-Exalted Comp. Alex. Mitchell," were given and responded to. "The Health of Comp. Franklin, P.Z., and Mrs. Franklin, the Host and Hostess," was enthusiastically received, as it well deserved to be, it being a recognised fact throughout the province that the very name of Franklin was a sufficient guarantee that everything would be done, every arrangement made to ensure their comfort and happiness. Comp. Franklin replied, thanking the companions for their expressions of satisfaction.

WIGHTON.—St. John's Chapter (No. 327).—The quarterly convocation of this old chapter was held at the Lion and Lamb Inn, on Wednesday, the 11th inst. There were present Comps. Jas. Gardiner, M.E.Z.; J. Pearson, H.; W. H. Hoodless, J.; H. Bewes, P.Z., Treas.; J. Lazenby, S.E.; A. Walter, 1st A.S.; J. Harris, 2nd A.S.; T. Richardson, Janitor, and others. The minutes of the previous convocation were read and confirmed. There being no work on the summons, the S.E. read over the bye-laws, when sundry alterations and improvements therein were made, and ordered to be submitted to next convocation for confirmation, prior to final authorisation by Grand Chapter and the Provincial Grand Superintendent. "Hearty good wishes" were tendered from Nicholson Chapter, No. 371, Maryport, and the Principals of St. John's Chapter expressed their willingness to lend a helping hand to their young sister whenever opportunity offered. The chapter was then closed in solemn form.

TYWARDREATH.—Unity Chapter (No. 1151).—The usual quarterly communication of this chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, the 17th inst. Present: Comps. W. Tonkin, M.E.Z.; the Rev. Dr. Treffry, as H.; J. Polkinghorne, J.; Col. Peard, P.G.H.; Emra Holmes, P.Z., P.G. Std. Bearer; J. C. Stephens, P.Z.; H. De Lugh, P.Z.; Col. Bake Rowe, Treas.; and others. The chapter having been opened in ancient form, the minutes of last chapter were read and confirmed. Bros. Dr. Newman and J. T. Baker, of St. Andrew's Lodge, St. Blazey, having been balloted for and accepted, they were duly obligated and exalted to the Degree of Holy Royal Arch, the ceremony being performed by the M.E.Z. with his customary ability. This being the annual meeting for the installation and investiture of officers, Comp. C. Tonkin duly installed the three Principals into their respective chairs in a very impressive manner—Comps. Emra Holmes, as Z.; J. Polkinghorne, as H.; and W. P. Smith, C.E., as J. The newly-installed M.E.Z. then invested his officers—Comps. N. H. Lamb, Scribe N.; Sylvanus Trevail, Treasurer; Wellington, Scribe E.; Walton, Prim. Soj.; Dr. Newman and J. T. Baker, Asst. Sojs.; Elliott, Janitor. The other business having been concluded the chapter was closed, a vote of thanks having been given to the Treasurer for his valuable services during the past year.

Mark Masonry.

PLUMSTEAD.—Excelsior Lodge (No. 226).—The installation meeting of the above influential lodge took place on Tuesday, the 10th inst., at the Masonic Hall attached to the Sir Robert Peel, Bro. Garbett's house, on Anglesea Hill. Upwards of fifty brethren assembled to meet the W.M., Bro. Capt. Ritchie, R.A., one of the Grand Officers of England, G.J.M.W. Kent, P.P.G.M.W. Middx. and Surrey, and W.M. of the "Ulrique" Lodge in the Craft. Among them were Bros. C. Coupland, S.W. and W.M. elect, G.M.S.O. Kent, P.P.G.J.W. Kent (Craft); J. Smythe, G.M.J.O. Kent; W. Weston, G.M.J.D. Kent; H. Shaw, G.M.D.C. Kent; H. Pryce, G.M.R.M. Kent; G. Kennedy, G.D.M. Sec. Kent; the Rev. C. A. Solbe, G.M. Chaplain Kent; Eugene Sweny; G.D.A.D.C. Kent; W. Holleyman, G.M. Steward; D. C. Capern, G.M. Steward Kent; H. De Grey, W. Watkins, W. Moulds, G. R. Nicholls, Dr. C. W. Moot-Keys, T. Hnsgood, J. B. Gibson, T. Owen-son, E. Turner, C. Buckland, T. W. Kirkbride, J. Anderson, T. Stevens, J. Percival, E. Wilson, J. Sculley, J. Donolly, and C. Jolly (Freemason). The lodge was opened at about 3 p.m., and after the minutes of the last meeting had been read and passed, the W.M., Bro. Ritchie, in his inimitable and eloquent style, advanced Bro. John Parnell and Bro. Thomas Stevens, of Craft Lodge, No. 1536. He then, with the usual Mark formalities, installed the W.M. elect, Bro. Coupland, into the chair of the lodge, and this most heartfelt and impressive ceremony was splendidly worked by Bro. Ritchie, and created a marked impression upon all present. Bro. Coupland then invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Smythe, S.W.; W. Weston, J.W.; Abel Penfold, M.O.; H. Shaw, S.O.; Rev. C. Solbe, Chaplain and J.O.; E. Palmer, R.M.; D. Dreeves, S.D.; Captain Sweny, J.D.; W. Holleyman, I.G.; D. Capon, D.C.; W. Watkins, W.S.; and B. Norman, Tyler. A handsome P.M.M. jewel, of the value of five guineas, was then presented to Bro. Ritchie, as a mark of the esteem and respect in which he is held by the lodge, and as well of the excellent manner in which he had conducted the business of it during the past year. Bro. Ritchie returned thanks in a feeling and suitable speech, and the lodge was then closed in due form. A drive into the country, round Welling, Bexley, and Shooter's Hill, whiled away the time till half-past six, when the brethren sat down to a most enjoyable banquet, prepared by Bro. Garbett. We do not as a rule say much about the Fourth Degree, but, conscientiously, we must give our meed of praise to Bro. Garbett for his perfect service of a most enjoyable repast. The cloth being cleared, the usual loyal and Mark Masonic toasts were proposed by the W.M., and drunk with enthusiasm. That of "Lord Skelmersdale, the G.M.M.," was especially noticeable for its heartiness. In giving the toast of "The R.W. the D.G.M.M., and the rest of Grand Officers, Present and Past," the W.M. drew attention to the honour that had been conferred upon their I.P.M., Bro. Captain Ritchie, who, at the recent Grand Lodge meeting, had received the distinction of being appointed a Grand Officer; he coupled that brother's name with the toast. Bro. Ritchie, who is deservedly popular with the brethren of the Excelsior Lodge, was, on rising to return thanks, met with a round of cheers. He said he thanked them for the cordial manner in which they had received the toast of the R.W.D.G.M.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers. Considering the fact that he had only been invested some three or four days since, he trusted they would excuse him saying too much in response to the toast.

He felt very proud of being a member of Grand Lodge, more especially as Mark Masonry was making rapid strides, and becoming a power in the land. At the Grand Mark Lodge, a little while ago, a motion was introduced for the recognition of what he termed outside degrees, but it was not carried, because it was felt that if they once admitted these degrees, Mark Masonry would become so strong and powerful that it would swamp Craft Masonry. It was so progressing that it would take before long a high position, and certainly only second to Craft Masonry in its power and affluence. Therefore he had great pride in occupying the position of a Grand Officer of the Grand Mark Lodge. He attributed the fact of his occupying that position to the office he held in the Excelsior Lodge, and to the influence that lodge had in the Order, for the Grand Master was so satisfied with it, and its position in the Order, that he said he could not pass by such a lodge in the selection of his officers. The next toast was that of "The P.G.M., the Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, M.A.," and in giving it the W.M. said they had had the Grand Master present that day last year at the consecration of the lodge, and his presence added a lustre to the proceedings that to those who had the honour and the pleasure of being present would not soon be forgotten. Bro. Ritchie, in response to the toast, said that they of the Excelsior Lodge occupied this position, that the Grand Lodge dues paid by the Excelsior Lodge nearly equalled the whole of the dues paid by the rest of the [Mark] lodges in the district, and it was upon this that they had par excellence a claim upon the province for its Grand Officerships, and he expected to see at the next meeting more of the Excelsior Lodge gain honours at the hands of their esteemed Grand Master, Bro. Sicklemore. He did not believe in expecting nothing. From his knowledge of Bro. Sicklemore he could assure them, that while he desired above all things the success of Mark Masonry in the province of Kent, yet he wished to do and carry out the onerous duties attached to his exalted office to the satisfaction of every one. The W.M. then gave the toast of "The D.P.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past," which was received and responded to with enthusiasm. Bro. Ritchie then rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and in so doing, said he must confess that he found himself in the position of I.P.M. with some degree of regret. But since he was in that position he knew of no greater pleasure than could befall him than in proposing "The Health of their Newly-installed W.M." No panegyric that he could pass on him would, he felt sure, be equal to his merits, because the most of those present knew the Masonic career of Bro. Coupland as well as he did. He could only speak of him as his S.W., and during the time that he had the pleasure of his service as his S.W., he had found that his characteristics were of so high an order, that he felt to a certain degree that there was a better officer to follow him in the chair than he had been himself. He could however safely say that in placing the power of the Worshipful Mastership in his hands, he was not only securing the position of the Excelsior, but placing in position one who would be an honour to it, and to Mark Masonry at large. Bro. Coupland, in reply, said, he was fully sensible of the praise bestowed upon him by the W.M. so eloquently, and so generously; but he felt that he had no claim to their praises except by their brotherly suffrages. He was very much obliged to the W.M. for the kind and able manner in which he had spoken of him, but he was more than all obliged to Bro. Weston for his kindness in giving way to him in office at the formation of the lodge, when he might have, and fairly, taken the position he, the W.M., now held. That kindness he now acknowledged with gratitude. He had not only received that kindness from Bro. Weston, but many a one that he could not now especially name. So long as he was W.M. of the lodge, and so long as he was able to work in the cause of Mark Masonry, so long would he do all that laid in his power to prove that the suffrages of the brethren had not been misplaced, in seating him in the proud position he occupied that day. The next toast was that of "The Installing Officer." Bro. Ritchie, in the course of a lengthy, pointed, and eloquent speech, reviewed the course of the lodge during the past twelve months, regretted that his many duties had not allowed of his being with them oftener than he had, and in allusion to the handsome jewel they had that day presented him, declared that he should prize it while he lived, and at his death hand it to his children as an heirloom in the family for ever. The newly-advanced brethren were then toasted and suitably replied. "The Health of Bro. De Gray," as one of the oldest Mark Masons, was coupled with that of "The Visitors," and Bro. De Grey responded, saying, that he and the W.M. and Bro. Smythe, were advanced in the Florence Nightingale Mark Lodge twenty years ago. The lodge was held in Woolwich, but since that time he had not known much about Mark Masonry, but was glad of the opportunity of once more making an acquaintance with it, through the Excelsior Lodge. The toast of "The Officers of the Lodge" was coupled with the name of Bro. Smythe, S.W., who returned thanks in an eloquent and at the same time spirited manner; and then, after a cordial vote of thanks to the Freemason for its efforts in the cause of Freemasonry generally, and the assistance it had been to the Excelsior in its reports of their meetings, which reports, the W.M. said, went all over the world, and were read by their military brethren in Afghanistan, at Natal, and in fact wherever the English language was spoken, had been given, and our representative had replied, the Tyler's toast concluded the business and pleasures of the meeting. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. C. Buckland, who was assisted by Bros. G. Smyth and Taylor, and Messrs. Horton and Smith. The party sang a series of glees and part songs excellently, and Mr. Horton's pianoforte recitals were much admired and applauded.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CORNWALL.

We have received the following additional particulars from an esteemed correspondent:

A small Committee, consisting of the W.M., Bro. Percy Davis, and Bros. F. B. Williams, P.M.; H. W. Durant, I.P.M.; and Emma Holmes, D.C.; undertook the reception of Prov. Grand Lodge, and worked with a will to make it worthy the occasion. In this they were ably seconded by the inhabitants generally, and were greatly indebted to the Divisional Officer of Coastguard, Lieut. Shuckburgh, R.N., for the loan of the whole of the flags in the division; to Miss Cornish, and the young ladies of Osborne Villa School, who prepared the mottoes and devices which decorated the three or four triumphal arches, under which the Masonic procession had to pass in its circuit of the town, and which were very much admired by the brethren and visitors; to the vicar, the Rev. H. M. Purcell, who lent the church for the interesting and most impressive service, and, though not a Mason, kindly co-operated in every way to make the meeting a success; and to the Rev. Dr. Treffry, of Place House. The arrangements generally gave great satisfaction, the reception of Prov. Grand Lodge was considered a very great success, and it would have been very satisfactory to the brethren of Fowey Lodge if the Prov. Grand Master had seen fit to confer office upon the W.M., as we believe is the usual custom in other provinces.

Passing out of the great western door of the church the procession re-formed, and the brethren entering the old doorway into the grounds surrounding Place, a grand battlemented castle of the end of the 14th or 15th centuries, the exterior of which is covered with beautiful carving, armorial bearings, the badge of the King-maker, Warwick, and curious old heads covering the stonework, the towers' and turrets, heavy mullioned windows, and other interesting features of this most interesting palace (place is only another word for palace), and passing slowly through the lovely grounds and castle, which dominates the town, the brethren were afforded an excellent opportunity of admiring the scenery, which is here very pretty, affording many picturesque glimpses of the winding river, the noble harbour, and the quaint little town nestling under the shelter of Place at the foot of the hill. The day being glorious and sunny added much to the picturesqueness of the scene, and the long procession, headed by its two bands, with the banners of the lodges, the pale blue collars and aprons of the Craftsmen, the garter blue and gold of the Provincial Officers, the crimson of the Stewards, looked very well as it wound its way through the green lanes leading from Place grounds and passed under the triumphal arch at the entrance of the town, decorated with greenery in abundance, and having a large panel of scarlet surmounting it with the word welcome in white letters upon it. Another triumphal arch had the Arms of Cornwall and Fowey on white shields on a red ground on one side, and the square and compasses and double triangle on the other in white and red. Another arch had the words "Audi vidi tace," the motto of the Order, in large letters of white on a scarlet ground, which looked very effective half hidden amongst the green boughs and laburnum, which covered the wooden framework of the arch. The streets were decorated profusely with bunting, trees were planted in the streets, which are exceedingly narrow and tortuous, ancient, and somewhat picturesque; and the crowds of people thronging them all day to see the procession testified to the popularity of the meeting, and, it must be owned, to the liberality of the Great Western Railway authorities, whose arrangements as to tickets and trains were eminently satisfactory, and might be imitated with advantage on like occasions by other companies which shall be nameless.

Bro. Emma Holmes rose, and said that, pursuant to notice given last year, he proposed—"That in view of the erection of a Cathedral at Truro, for the diocese of Cornwall, a Committee be appointed to solicit subscriptions, and that the province of Devon be invited to assist, so that a lasting memorial of the Freemasons of Devon and Cornwall may be erected in the new edifice." He said that, bearing in mind his lordship's hint as to the amount of business that had to be gone through, he should not trouble the brethren with a long speech on the subject, but he proposed to treat them to a few facts, which would be more to the point. He had been told that, as there were a large number of Dissenters amongst the Cornish Freemasons, his motion would meet with a good deal of opposition, but he failed to see why they should oppose it, since the end and aim of his motion was simply to collect subscriptions from those who were willing to give, so that a memorial of the Freemasons might appear in the new Cathedral. No one need subscribe who did not wish to do so. As to precedents, there were many, of which, no doubt, they were fully aware. The west front of Bath Abbey was restored by the Freemasons at a cost of £3000. They restored the Lady Chapel of St. Mary, Redcliffe Church, Bristol. They put a beautiful window into Worcester Cathedral, and another into Durham Cathedral. At the present moment a movement was on foot to restore the west front of St. Alban's Cathedral by the Freemasons, and the Prince of Wales, Grand Master, Prince Leopold, the Duke of Connaught, Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and many other leading Freemasons were on the Committee. He (the speaker) thought it would be a noble thing for the Freemasons of Cornwall and Devon to put in, say a magnificent east window, with such a subject as the building of the Temple of King Solomon, or in any other way to identify their Order with the building of the first Cathedral in England since the Reformation.

Bro. Tonkin, P.G. Supt. of Works, warmly seconded the resolution.

Bro. John Thomas, of Redruth, rose to oppose it, speaking, as he said, on behalf of a large number of the brethren, and was proceeding to expound his views when the Prov. Grand Master rose, and said that he had previously talked the matter over with Bro. Holmes, who, at his suggestion, had agreed, if there was any likelihood of a stormy opposition, to withdraw his motion for the present until a more suitable opportunity occurred of bringing it forward. His Lordship said he must observe, however, with reference to Bro. Thomas's remarks, that Bro. Holmes was amply justified in bringing the matter forward, and that he had plenty of precedents for the course he adopted.

Bro. Thomas remarked that, as the Prov. Grand Master had said the motion was to be withdrawn, he was very glad of it, and he had no more to say on the subject.

Bro. Emma Holmes then asked leave to withdraw the motion for a Committee for this meeting, which, on being put to the lodge, was allowed, nem. con., when Bro. Holmes gave notice that he should bring forward the same motion next meeting, and at every future meeting, if necessary, until it was carried. He hoped, for the credit of the Masons of Cornwall, that they would not refuse to assist in so noble an undertaking as the building of the new Cathedral at Truro.

The subject then dropped.

The banquet, which was a cold collation, was excellent, but the paucity of waiters was very much felt, and the dinner was more or less of a scramble, or, as a friend of ours called it, an amiable pandemonium.

The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe was supported on his right by Bro. Sir Charles Sawle, Bart., P.P.G.S.W.; Bro. the Rev. Dr. Treffry, P.P.G. Chap.; on his left by Bro. the Hon. and Rev. J. T. Boscawen, P.G. Chap.; Colonel Peard, D.P.G.M.; E. T. Carlyon, P.G. Sec., and others. About 120 brethren sat down, the rest of the large numbers who attended lodge finding accommodation at the various hotels and eating houses in the town.

On the removal of the cloth, the P.G.M. proposed "The Queen and the Craft," which was duly honoured.

In proposing "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master," the noble Chairman took occasion to dilate upon the genial kindness and urbanity the Prince displayed on every occasion, a charm of manner which not only made him beloved in this country, but which, he felt assured, was not without happy results in our dealings with foreign countries.

Bro. Sir Charles Sawle, in a few well-chosen words, proposed "The Health of their noble Chairman," and the applause was so great and long continued at the mention of the most popular Provincial Grand Master Cornwall (and, probably, any other province in England) ever had, that it was some little time before Lord Mount Edgcumbe could reply.

His Lordship, in the course of his remarks, briefly noticed the fact of his appointment to the office of Lord Chamberlain, to which allusion had been made by Sir Charles, and said that he felt that Her Majesty had done him great honour in appointing him to that office. He had that day made Col. Peard his Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and he hoped the brethren would understand that his own engagements were so many that, although he should always do his utmost to be present when it was absolutely necessary, he hoped they would excuse him sometimes if he instructed his Deputy to represent him, especially when he was so excellent a substitute as Bro. Col. Peard, whose health he would ask them to drink.

The gallant Colonel, who was received with a furore of applause, modestly disclaimed any wish to take his lordship's place.

Bro. Emma Holmes, by desire of the Prov. Grand Master, proposed "The Masonic Charities," and, in doing so, urged the brethren to remember that there was great danger of their forgetting in these days that Masonry was not a benefit society. The Odd Fellows, Druids, Foresters, and other kindred bodies were very excellent institutions in their way, but Masonry was something higher than a benefit club, such as they were, but he was afraid many people joined for what they could get out of it. At the same time, there was no doubt that the Masonic Charities were excellent institutions, and well deserving of their support. He supposed that no other Charities in the world could show such magnificent results as the Masonic Charities. Certainly, at no public dinners in London were such large sums collected, amounting, as they did, to £10,000, £12,000, and even £15,000, as at the Masonic festivals.

Other toasts followed, and the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

It has not yet been decided where the next Prov. Grand Lodge will be held, but it is thought Hayle will be selected.

There is a great desire, we believe, on the part of the Looe brethren, to have the Prov. Grand Lodge there, and as they have a beautiful and commodious New Town Hall, in which the lodge might be held, and Looe itself is a lovely place and well worth visiting, no doubt the selection would be very popular.

The building in which the Freemasons of Lostwithiel have located themselves is of some historic interest, and concerning which a member has supplied the following notes:

An interesting set of engravings was published by Samuel and Nathaniel Buck in 1734, of views of Lostwithiel and neighbourhood, and dedicated to the Hon. Richard Edgcumbe. One of the plates shows the Bridge and River Fowey in the foreground, with the Duchy Palace standing in a small park extending from the building to the water's edge; in the back ground stands the grand old Church spire, and Church, and several houses. Messrs. Buck also ingeniously introduced Restormel Castle in the distance. How they could conscientiously bring it in I do not know, but perhaps men had greater powers for looking round corners in those days than at present. In describing the plate they said, "This was the principal Palace and Exchequer of the Earls and Dukes of Cornwall after removal from Restormel Castle, on ye adjacent hill, were it first was. Mayoralty, markets, fairs, and nominations of burghesses for ye Parliament, it bath in common with ye most covnage of tin only with three others, but ye gave for ye whole Stannary and keeping of ye County Courts alone." Another plate of the set showing Restormel Castle, describes it thus, "Lestormel or Restormel, or as others write, Lestmel Castle, was one of ye most ancient and principal seats of ye British Dukes of Cornwall and others, long before ye conquest. The town of Lestwithiel was anciently on this hill till ye people and their Prince, for convenience of ye River Foy, moved lower down. The Dukes had a park here till it was disparted by King Henry VIII." All records of the Duchy Palace appear to have been destroyed in Cromwell's time.

The portion converted into a Masonic Hall appears by the engraving to have been used as the residence of—shall we say the Earls and Dukes? whilst the adjoining building on the south side was the residence of a less fortunate set of mortals, viz., those who had broken the law, and had to pay the penalty; and there is a story told that it was the custom of the prisoners to solicit alms from passers by, which were conveyed to them by a piece of string and a shoe. There are in addition to the above-named, several large blocks of buildings, in one of which was the Stannaries Court Room.

The part we have purchased had been used for many years past as Duchy Offices, and about sixty years ago the greatest alterations were made to the building. I should think they were as follows:—The first and second, or top storey, were thrown into one by removing the upper floor. The dormers which had lighted the upper storey were removed, all the small granite-dressed square windows were blocked up, and two pointed granite-dressed windows pierced in the east wall. The entrances had originally been by a flight of stone steps under a semi-circular archway on the eastern side, and by a pointed doorway of Pentewan stone on the south side, communicating with the prison. The eastern entrance was blocked up, and the steps removed, two flights of stone steps being formed at the south end of the building, the landing being just outside the south door.

A few years ago, the whole block of buildings was sold by the Prince of Wales to Mr. Mark Thomas, and we have purchased our building of him. We found it in a very dilapidated condition, but the walls being so thick and strengthened by buttresses we saw that it would be possible to restore the building at moderate cost. The roof also was really better than it looked, as the principals were of oak, and were sound everywhere, where free from sap. It was a great pity to see such a very interesting old building, which probably was erected in the thirteenth century, falling so rapidly to ruin, and we are very pleased that we have been enabled, whilst securing such a suitable building for Masonic purposes, to rescue it from ruin.

The interior of the walls has been refaced with good stone in blue lias lime. This was necessary on account of their irregularity, and also to prevent damp coming through to spoil the decorations which we hope in time to be rich enough to do. The walls have been replastered, the roof principals have been strengthened by additional principals, and new purlins put in where necessary. Some of the buttresses had been cut back to allow space for a tram-road, which was laid along the east side of the building, quite spoiling the east elevation. We have rebuilt them to original design, and the whole of the exterior has been carefully repaired and pointed in Aberthaw lime. As there was not sufficient light to the lodge, we opened out and enlarged one of the small windows on the east side, and altered the head to match the larger windows. All these windows have been re-glazed with Cathedral tinted glass, and ventilators inserted in them. The Pentewan stone doorway has been removed from the south end, and now forms the entrance to a porch which has been built on the east side. The porch is coped with granite in Masonic design. A staircase has been formed where the old stone steps originally were, leading from the porch to a room adjoining the lodge-room, and now used as a Tyler's room. The immense thickness of the south wall allowed of a lavatory being formed in it, where the south door stood, whilst the reduced width of the present staircase to the old allowed of a candidate's room being formed by the north side of the staircase. A partition has been erected dividing the large Duchy Office into two rooms, one being used as a lodge and the other as a Committee room. The lodge-room is thirty feet by twenty feet by fourteen feet high, the Committee-room twenty by twelve, and fourteen high. The Tyler's room is twelve feet square and fourteen feet high, and the lavatory is conveniently large. The lodge has been handsomely furnished by the gifts of members of the lodge, assisted by their friends.

The building is freehold, the ultimate trust being vested in the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall. The total cost has been between £500 and £600. The architect (Bro. Walter P. Smith, P.M.) found a fine old piece of oak in the west wall, out of which he has made a massive frame for the "warrant," and a frame for an address which was presented by the brethren, together with a handsome set of Provincial Grand clothing and a Past Master's jewel in miniature, to Past Master Jonathan Hugill, the energetic and much respected Secretary of the lodge, on Wednesday, the 4th inst. The necessary funds for purchasing, restoring, and furnishing the building, were obtained as follows:—£300 by the issue of 60 £5 mortgage debentures, bearing 3 per cent. interest per annum, all of which were taken by brethren of the lodge; and the remainder by gifts of money and furniture by the brethren and their friends, amongst whom were the esteemed Prov. Grand Master, the Hon. T. C. Agar-Robartes, and Bro.

Samuel Roach, P.M., of Plymouth. There is a sitting accommodation in the lodge for thirty. The seats are of oak, with spring-cushions and backs, and covered with American leather. The Master's, Wardens', and Deacons' chairs are carved oak, the former being covered with crimson velvet. The windows are curtained with old English tapestry, the floor is covered with a Masonically-designed linoleum, and the fire-grate is in character with the building, the hearth being laid in Minton tiles, with a handsome white marble fender. The canopy and Tracing Boards are draped in tapestry to match the windows, and surmounted with cornices in gilt.

The work has been carried out by W. Bro. Smith, P.M., the honorary architect, assisted by the following Committee:—Bros. J. Hugill, P.M.; Henry de Legh, P.M. and Treasurer; Frank Parkyn, P.M.; W. Maclean, and H. M. Kidd, W.M. and Secretary. The lodge was opened in May, 1878, the work having been commenced in the February previous. Bro. Joseph Basset, S.W., was the contractor for the masonry; Bro. John Burt, P.M., for the carpentry; and Bro. Richard Whittle, J.W., for the plastering, &c. The windows were supplied by Mr. John Bartlett. All have carried out their contracts in a very satisfactory manner.

DEVON MASONIC EDUCATIONAL FUND.

A general meeting of the subscribers to this fund was held recently at the Huyshe Masonic Temple, Plymouth, for the purpose of electing four candidates, appointing a patron and patroness, and deciding what proportion of the funds should be invested. The donors and subscribers consist of one vice-patron, six vice-presidents, thirty-three life governors, and 234 subscribers of 5s.—which confers a vote—and upwards. Bro. J. P. Metham, D.P.G.M., was absent owing to severe illness. The meeting was presided over by Bro. R. Los, 159, one of the vice-presidents, and among those present were Bros. the Hon. Walter Hylton-Jolliffe, 1205 and 349; the Rev. T. W. Lemon, vicar of Bucknell, Honiton, 189; the Rev. Wm. Whitley, 156 and 1550; William Brodie, 1254 and 1753; William Derry, 156; Leonard D. Westcott, 70; S. Jew, 105; J. Treeby, 233; Henry Horton, 189; R. E. Holmes, 189; John R. Lord, 1247; Vincent Bird, Hon. Treas., J. B. Gover, 70, Hon. Sec.; Francis Littleton, 159; J. R. H. Harris, 230; Thomas Perry, 1402 and 328; Charles D. Stentford, 159; R. Smith, 1205; Henry Winsor, 797; Samuel Snell, 1205; F. B. Westlake, 70; W. K. Mitchell, 156; John Morris, 53; W. Cann, 223; R. C. Uglow, 1247; R. Caws y, 340; W. J. Stanbury, 1099; Thomas S. May, 1099; W. H. Lister, 1205; and T. E. Peek, 1205.

It was unanimously resolved that, subject to their consent, the Rev. John Huyshe, the late Provincial Grand Master of Devonshire, and Mrs. Huyshe should be the patron and patroness of the fund.

Bro. V. Bird, the Treasurer, reported the receipt of the sum of £339 13s., of which £78 3s. was for annual subscriptions. As the donations amounted to about £250, he moved that that sum should be invested, pointing out that the donors would have the right to vote in respect of their contributions either for life or for twenty years, and suggesting that at the death of a Life Governor the amount of his donation should fall into the general fund.

Bro. Hylton-Jolliffe seconded the motion.

Bro. Jew deprecated the investment of the whole amount of the donations.

Bro. Gover proposed that only 25 per cent. of the donations should be invested. He urged that they ought to have faith in the liberality of the brethren, and said he did not see why they should set aside money for children yet unborn.

Bro. Derry opposed the immediate expenditure of a large amount, and, referring to a remark of the previous speaker, said he considered that they ought to do plenty for posterity. In every other relation of life they thought it well to be prepared for a rainy day, and if this rule were more generally observed there would be less suffering, less sorrow, less anxiety than at present. The permanency of the great charities of England was due to the fact that they had invested large portions of their funds, and he held, with regard to this particular charity, that it would be well, whilst spending on the one hand liberally, that on the other hand they should do so with discretion. Bro. Derry asked what sum it was proposed to give each child, and was told about £15 a year.

The Rev. W. Whitley was in favour of investment. He thought that several of the subscribers were doubtful as to what was to be done, and he did not think that any one of them was quite clear on the point. Instead, therefore, of rushing madly into expenditure, it would be well to remain as they were for six months, until they saw what the education of the children cost, and how the subscriptions and donations came in. They would then be in a better position to judge what proportion of the sum should be invested. He thought they should be very cautious as to the extent to which they let their faith go. He proposed that the subject of the investment of funds should be postponed for six months.

Bro. Gover then withdrew his proposition, and seconded the amendment.

Bro. Bird, in answer to an observation, stated that the money he had received was deposited in the Devon and Cornwall Bank.

Bro. Westlake suggested the basis for an accumulating fund.

Bro. Bird, with the consent of his seconder, withdrew his motion, and the amendment for postponement was carried unanimously.

Bro. Gover proposed that there should be another election of four candidates six months hence.

Bro. Brodie seconded, and undertook, if the proposal were carried, to double the subscription of the two lodges, at Exeter and Okehampton, with which he was connected. Bro. Bird supported the motion, which was carried.

The Rev. W. Whitley, Bro. Treeby, and Bro. Derry were appointed Scrutineers of the voting papers, which were examined in another room. At the conclusion they announced that the following had been elected: Herbert Kempe Hambly, aged 12 years, son of the late Bro. J. J. Hambly, of Lodge 70, 121 votes; Minnie Kerswell, 7 years, daughter of the late Bro. Robert Kerswell, Lodge 1247, 94 votes; Ernest Hawke, 9 years, son of the late Bro. E. Hawke, Lodge 159, 59 votes; and Mildred Evens, 9 years, daughter of the late Bro. J. H. Evens, Lodge 189, 58 votes. The unsuccessful candidates were: No. 3 on the voting paper (Foot), 47 votes; No. 4 (Drake), 47; No. 5 (Purse), 23; and No. 8 (Pike), 36. The votes given on behalf of these children will be credited to them at the next election should they be candidates thereat.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The usual monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joshua Nunn, Senior Vice-President; Bro. James Brett, Junior Vice-President; and Bro. J. M. P. Montagu, P.G.D., occupied the chairs of President and Senior and Junior Vice-Presidents.

Among other brethren present were Bros. John Hervey, G.S.; H. G. Buss, Asst. G.S.; S. Rawson, C. A. Cottebrune, J. M. Case, W. H. Perryman, Charles Atkins, W. T. Christian, C. F. Hogard, Griffiths Smith, Harry Garrod, W. Hammond, Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, G. L. Moore, A. Withers, T. Deane, G. T. Britten, H. C. Burt, W. Hamilton, W. A. Dawson, J. R. Matthews, E. M. Haigh, W. Grant, C. Stahn, J. Tanner, T. Edmonds-ton, J. W. Watts, M. S. Larham, John Holden, H. Potter, J. Freeman, F. W. Koch, W. Hilton, M. W. Hobson, E. Squirrell, R. Harman, C. Dairy, T. F. Smith, F. Walters, S. H. Parkhouse, and C. Fountain.

The brethren first confirmed twelve grants amounting to £280, recommended at last meeting of the lodge. They then considered the new list, which comprised thirty cases. Of these six were deferred. The remainder were relieved as follows:—Two for £100 each (£200); two for £50 each (£100); two for £40 each (£80); one for £25 (£25); four for £20 each (£80); six for £15 each (£90); five for £10 each (£50); and two for £5 each (£10); £635.

The Lodge of Benevolence was then closed till July 23rd.

FUNERAL OF BRO. J. WADE BENNETT.

On Monday, the 16th inst., at mid-day, the remains of Bro. Bennett were placed in their last earthly resting-place, at the Redcar Cemetery, in the same grave where Mrs. Bennett, mother of the deceased, was interred in January last. A goodly number of friends assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of the departed, including a considerable body of Freemasons, Bro. Bennett being a Past Master of the Order. The mourners were Dr. Bennett, Mr. Percy, and the Misses Bennett, Dr. and Mrs. Bennett (of Dewsbury), and J. K. Wade, Esq. (of Hull). The Rev. William Milburne (vicar), and the Rev. W. Buswell (curate of Redcar, and Chaplain of the Marwood Lodge of Freemasons), both met the procession at the entrance of the Cemetery, the former reading the opening sentences and the service inside the Chapel, and the latter the concluding portion by the grave side. No pall was used, but a profusion of choice flowers adorned the coffin, which was of oak. The scene at the grave side was most impressive, the stillness of the air, the singing of the birds overhead, the flowers, and, above all, the solemn and hope-inspiring words of the service, lifted the thoughts onward to what shall be hereafter "when the dead shall be raised incorruptible and mortality shall be swallowed up of life." The deceased was beloved and esteemed by a large circle of friends, and his amiable and gentle disposition and his truly Christian character will long be a pleasant memory to all who knew him, and though mourning remember that their loss is his gain, who from a life of severe and protracted suffering has been taken to the rest that remaineth to the people of God. Great sympathy is felt for Dr. Bennett and his family. During the last five years he has had three successive bereavements; his second son lost his life on the ice at Hull in 1874, which was the first inroad death made into this hitherto united family; the later bereavements are within memory of all, and we are irresistibly drawn to the words of the poet Longfellow, as expressive of their sorrow:

"He, the young and strong, who cherished
Noble longings for the strife,
By the roadside fell and perished,
Weary with the march of life!
They, the holy ones and weakly,
Who the cross of suffering bore,
Folded their pale hands so meekly,
Spoke with us on earth no more!"

THE FREEMASON.

SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1879.

THE EMPEROR'S GOLDEN WEDDING.

A most distinguished brother of our Order, the great Head and Ruler of the Germanic Empire, whose fidelity to Freemasonry many long and eventful years have proved, and whom, therefore, all true Freemasons honour and revere, has lately celebrated his "golden wedding" amid the enthusiastic loyalty of all classes in Berlin, and Prussia, and Germany. It is a very remarkable sight which the columns of our daily papers and the eloquent words of special correspondents have set before the English public a week or so ago. After the lapse of fifty years of married life, a very protracted period, the stately old Kaiser and his amiable Empress come, as it were, again upon the scene, surrounded with all the memories and associations which hallow common life and render the world in which we live a scene of present happiness, an anticipation of future rest for us all, its passing and dying denizens of today. It is indeed a pleasure for us English people to note how that the German Heimath, from which comes our word Home, is as much endeared to the Teutonic as it is to the Anglo-Saxon mind, as much bound up with their personal and domestic happiness, as much identified with all that constitutes the true grace and strength and glory of nations and of men. We shall all rejoice in England to see the august and chivalrous ruler of a great free people, surrounded by the princes of Germany and his family circle, amid rejoicing subjects, and loyal demonstrations of grateful memory and living interest, proclaim as before the world, that in the home life after all, humble and commonplace as it may seem to be, in the discharge of its duties and the unsensational tenour of its quiet and straightforward path, are to be found the truest hope and prospect of happiness for us all here below, be we who we may, rulers or ruled, princes or people. It is a good old-fashioned, wholesome truth for us all well to digest, in these garish, and unsettled, and excitable days, when we are sometimes tempted to overlook or undervalue it. And thus the English mind, simply practical, turns with great pride and approval to that memorable scene which Berlin has lately witnessed, amid such brilliant representations of heartfelt national rejoicing, and contemplates the good old soldier, Mason, Emperor, erect and stately as ever, in a green and serene old age, surrounded by a loving family, greeted by an admiring people—a representation of old-fashioned virtues, which, amid much that is new and pretentious and grotesque in the highest degree—we may all of us do well to remember, to cherish, and to admire.

GOOD WORKS.

The Consecration of the "Sir Thomas White Lodge, No. 1820," on the 6th inst., while it was most striking, and most interesting to Freemasons from various points of view, suggests to us the theme for a few remarks we are wishful to make to our readers. In the first place let us congratulate all concerned in the Consecration of the Sir Thomas White Lodge on the complete and most gratifying success which has so fitly marked the foundation of this young but important lodge. We are glad to learn in the next place that it is a "special lodge," as, though some object to this view of lodge-life, we have long felt that is the only practical answer to a growing evil amongst us, hasty and indiscriminate admission of members. But, in the third place, we are much pleased to note what a valuable commentary the proceedings offer on the invaluable, and we will add unequalled, labours of our esteemed Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey. Those of us who remember olden days and other Secretaries, and with all the respect due to good old Bro. White, and Bro. Gray Clarke, will, we think, feel how wondrous is the change which has "come o'er" the "spirit of our" Masonic "dream," in these last few years especially. Official work of every kind has increased very nearly a hundredfold within the last decade especially, but for a few years the labour of consecrations has become markedly very great, and fallen heavily on our worthy Grand Secretary. No doubt there is a reason for this. In the first place he is personally most valued and liked, and looked up to, and we will add, loved in the Craft. In the next case he is himself a consummate Ritualist, a ready speaker, and a most sound teacher; and his words, replete with common sense and dignity, always convey information and carry weight for all who have the pleasure to hear them. His speeches on the last occasion were full of interest as well as animation, and were marked by his own pleasing characteristics of friendship and fraternal feeling, good sense and wise caution, which, as we have already remarked, may always be traced in his official or general utterances. And we feel strongly that the thanks of our Fraternity are justly due to one who so zealously and satisfactorily discharges his high duties in the "spirit" as in the "letter," whose words may be read by all alike in attention and reverence, with the deepest benefit to themselves, and who lends to his important functions as Consecrating Officer, a perfect knowledge of the Ritual, as well as that great urbanity and tact, and "savoir faire," which are so important in a Grand Secretary. Many of our readers have known Bro. Hervey long and well, and need not be reminded by us, how that the qualities of his "head" are equalled by those of his "heart," and feel for him, as all do feel who are acquainted with him, the warmth of friends, and the sympathy of Masons. It has struck us, on reading over the proceedings of the Consecration of the Sir Thomas White Lodge, that some of us perhaps hardly realize, though we see it clearly before our eyes, all that we owe to the zeal and labours of Bro. Hervey, in the present wonderful advance of Masonry, and we have, therefore, thought it well to record in this humble weekly paper of ours our honest sense of ceaseless "good work" right admirably performed for Masonry and for Masons.

PERSONALITY IN MASONIC WRITING.

It has often occurred to us, and perhaps to many others of our readers, to ask this question, but for which we have as yet obtained no answer, "why is it that when Freemasons get into print they inevitably become bitter and personal, most un-Masonic, and often not a little vulgar?" In the "press," as a general rule, it has been held, that the "moment a man rushes into print he makes an ass of himself," and hardly a day passes over our heads but we see in our numerous un-Masonic journals egregious proofs of the reality and far extending truth of this proposition. Indeed, it is perhaps not too much to say that as a general rule it is safer not to write than to write to the "papers." "Heat" whispers "write," "caution" suggests "think it over coolly for twenty-four hours," and then the benevolent and healing "morrow," benevolent and healing how often to us all, in the petty and greater affairs of life, closes the discussion with, "better not write at all." That "burning," or "clever," or "scathing" letter as the case may be, does not appear, and yet what has the world or society lost? Nothing! Nay, have they not gained rather a great deal? We think, very respectfully, yes! And yet, some good brother may say, "but some controversies are needful, some correspondence is useful, for discussion is beneficial, we have, thank God, in England liberty of 'prophecy,' and liberty of 'conscience,' and why not use it?" Yes, and it is just because we are not insensible to those great and hard-won blessings, because we feel that if we are to have a Masonic paper, there must be full, free, and fair discussion, within, of course, certain limits of safety, and moderation, and loyalty for us all alike, that the Freemason has from the first given week by week so much space to "correspondence." Perhaps, as we look back to day, we might think that some letters had better have been omitted, some ought never to have been written, but then, remembering the infirmity of men and Masons, as we do not profess to be infallible or impeccable, we are glad to note how few have been our "backslidings," we are proud in realizing how much that is valuable and worth reading is preserved for us and our posterity in the frank and free pages of the Freemason. Still we cannot be "insensible if we would, and we ought not if we could," to a certain hasty acrimony and petulant personality of tone, which render the weight of Masonic correspondence the most difficult portion of a Masonic Editor's duty to manage and to accomplish. The discussion may be on some trivial subject, a question of ritual, archæology, grammar, in fact anything at all, it matters not, and, certainly, far too often, the unfortunate wight who commences a discussion is at once overwhelmed with an accusation of personal intentions, and personal objurgations, or his intellectual abilities are doubted, even, sometimes, his moral character is hinted at. It is the old bitter style of controversy, though without excuse in a Masonic paper, because the subject is not worth it, and as Freemasons we profess always to be fair, courteous, considerate to each other. We do not say that in all such foolish correspondence and puerile logomachies there are not faults on both sides, because there undoubtedly are, but what can be the Masonic character or sympathies of that brother who, because he disagrees with another brother, straightway connects a literary question with a purely personal contest, or forgets the "Divisions of Purley," and hints that his adversary—it is lucky if he does not say it right out—is an ass. It is somewhat difficult, no doubt, to limit the fair right of repartee and replication, or to declare what is too acrid and what is too scathing in the "retort courtois," "more Masonic" above all, and hence many expressions are to be found in Masonic correspondence which a sterner critic would have perhaps expunged, a more decided "censor" would have obliterated. But let us rejoice to think that we can speak and write in this good old land of ours as we like, within, as we said before, of course, proper limits, and let us console ourselves with this reflection, most suitable to much passing correspondence of the hour, that after all it matters little whether it is read or unread, that it pleases some and does not injure others; above all, that if "fine words butter no parsnips," equally as surely "hard words break no bones."

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even approving of, the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.]

MASONIC GRAMMAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is quite refreshing to have to reciprocate Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie's fraternal tenour and spirit of correspondence, and Bro. Fenn's clear and courteous note, and to turn away from that ineptitude, and I fear I must add vulgar personality, which my humble communication has evoked. I am very sorry now that I wrote at all, in that the "tone and temper" which mark two of the replies to my letter are as bad as bad can be, in my humble opinion, and quite disheartening, alike Masonically and æsthetically. But let these few words suffice on a very disagreeable and unworthy subject: 1. In reply to my Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie, I beg to say that, following his good advice, I have looked into Peter Roget's Thesaurus, &c., 19th edition, and find, as Bro. Mackenzie has stated, that he recognizes "exceptional." I have not, however, been so fortunate as to find the word in the "Divisions of Purley," though my examination has been, necessarily, cursory, and I may have misunderstood the "drift" of Bro. Mackenzie's remark. As Bro. Mackenzie sees, my only object in writing was a wish to uphold the purity of our English language, according to the standard authorities, but I was quite prepared to admit, as I did all through, the use of "exceptional" as a translation of "exceptionnel," if such use could be validated by authority. I was quite aware, as I said at the outset, that it is used—I have, no doubt, often used it myself—in "common conversation and slipshod writing," but I was dealing with an official document, and not the free and easy utterances written as parole of each passing hour. Bro. Dron has all along been, apparently, incapable of realizing what it was I was "driving at," and as I am not compelled to give other people brains, as well as to furnish grammar for them, in the abnormal case evidently of Bro. Dron, I respectfully beg to decline the herculean labour. Perhaps some of my readers may recall Dryden's lines in "Absalom and Achitophel,"

"The midwife laid her hands on his thick skull
With this prophetic blessing, 'be thou dull.'"

2. Bro. Dron quotes the "Imperial Dictionary" as a "standard authority," to which I most respectfully demur, and I fancy all "bibliophiles" and booksellers will concur with me. It is a modern dictionary, "voilà tout," but is not to be compared, I speak to experts, with Todd's edition of Johnson, or even Bailey or Webster, as a correct authority. So far, however, he is compelled to admit he only knows of one authority for his use of the word, though, thanks to Bro. Mackenzie, and now to Bro. Fenn, he can also claim the aid of Roget's Thesaurus, &c., Latham, and Webster of 1859, and probably more authorities may be found.

I may mention that since I last wrote I have looked into the fine dictionary of the "Académie Française," and find "exceptionnel" is, undoubtedly, both in its use and meaning, the origin of our word "exceptional," and as such I quite accept it, as a word imported into our language. Neither do I deny that by force of habit, or use, words once alien become naturalized, so to say.

No one who has studied, who realizes the richness of the English language, can wish to object to any such proposition. And nothing was further from my intention, but then, as I said before, as the old proverb runs, "you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear," you cannot induce a person to understand your words or your meaning if he pertinaciously and perversely will not do so. Perhaps the "harjest lines" connected with all humble little controversies, even like this, are to be found in this fact, that some good folks rejoice in such "bad form," or are so "very thick headed," that, as Bertram puts it in The Antiquary, "Deuce take the formal old dunderhead, and his more sly associate, who speaks always under his breath; they cannot understand a plain man's story when it is told them."

With regard to "stickler," I have since found the word in "Crabb's Technological Dictionary," 1802, where it bears the meaning as quoted from the Parliamentary Roll of Henry VI., of an "inferior officer who cuts wood in the king's parks at Clarendon." Blackie puts it in the "Priory of Ederose." As to the real meaning of the word, Bro. Dron was distinctly wrong. Mine may be very bad taste, I may be most ignorant, I may be an uneducated "sutor," as Bro. Dron so elegantly and so Masonically puts it, but I prefer Todd's Johnson to all the "Imperial Dictionaries" in the world, and if Bro. Dron will refer to it he will, I think, be greatly improved, and, perhaps, realize that sentence of the old Latin grammar, which I offer him respectfully and fraternally in return for his "elegant extract," "emollit mores, nec sinit esse ferus." I see that Skinner in his "Etymologicon Linguae Anglicanae," gives "stickle" and "stick" a common origin in "steck" or "stock." But I may remark that Bro. Dron upsets his own magnificent "dictum" on this subject, in that he utterly ignores the common use of "stickler," which, if his theory be correct, I had also a perfect right to employ.

The only mistake I am conscious of is in saying too dogmatically that Johnson held exceptional and exceptional to be "synonymous." I, perhaps, said more than I ought to have said, or wished to say, for all that was in my mind was that as Johnson only recognized exceptional he would hold naturally that any other adjective formed from "exception" must have the same strict meaning.

So "cedit quæstio," as far as I am concerned, unless indeed, I am induced by the fraternal politeness and polished style of Bro. Dron to continue so useless a discussion.

With regard to W. S. M., I think that his Masonic acumen and charity might have led him to see that the "reader" had made a "hash" of the whole two paragraphs properly. As I penned them and corrected them there was no mistake in grammar and no bad English whatever. If Bro. W. S. M. knows anything about "printing" and "chapels," he must know what vagaries printers will fall into, and in his abundant Masonic charity he might have assumed for the nonce that the writer, who is as educated a man as himself, could not have fallen knowingly into such palpable errors. But, alas, for Masonic charity and still more alas for Masonic courtesy!

I note Bro. Fenn's remarks, and can only say that the edition of Webster I saw had the word not, and Latham I do not possess. I have never denied its use, the only question in my mind was its authority as an English word. Surely that was a very fair question of literary discussion, giving offence to none, and by no means justifying Bro. Dron's violent and un-Masonic reply to my first letter.

But I hope you will be troubled no more by

Yours fraternally,

LINDLEY MURRAY.

COUNT CAGLIOSTRO AND SWEDENBORGIAN MASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The connection of the unfortunate Count Cagliostro with various forms of Freemasonry has been reported in the most diverse ways, and very rarely with that spirit of charity which is supposed to animate the Fraternity. In the "Royal Masonic Cyclopædia" some years ago sub voce Cagliostro I tried to put a new light on that career which terminated in the Castle of St. Angelo at Rome. It is impossible to deny that the pretensions of Calsanio or Cagliostro were extravagant, but they were in no way ill founded. Through a youth of misery and squalor, not without stain, he passed into a better period. It is likely that the Grand Master of the Knights of Malta and the Cardinal de Rohan could both have been such absolute idiots as not to detect the base metal in his composition?

Even Monsieur de Surville's attendants of the police could not find him guilty of actual complicity in the affair of the diamond necklace. The great accuser of Cagliostro was the Romish Church, supplemented, I grieve to say, by Mr. Thomas Carlyle. The other side has never been entertained by any section of thinkers, and I believe that there are very few who regard Cagliostro otherwise than as a swindler.

"Those who know" about him, wish his memory done fair justice, and so far as Masonry is concerned that there should be something better than the caricature in which Bro. Mash appears at the Lodge of Antiquity.

The connection of Cagliostro with Swedenborgian Masonry, to which my brother "Masonic Student" refers, was brief, so far as this country was concerned. There suddenly appeared in London a certain Count Grabiancka, or Prince Sutowski. This person attempted to open negotiations with the existing literary society known in 1786 as the Theosophical Society, established by Mr. Hindmarsh in some chambers in the Temple, Fleet-street, and he spent several evenings with them and disappeared. It is by no means certain that this was Cagliostro. It might have been the Abbé Permetty in disguise, and as Cagliostro was for a short time associated with Permetty, they may have come to this country together. Whoever Grabiancka was, he did not seek to victimise the members of the Theosophical Society, but only mentioned that he was an associate of a society with head-quarters at Avignon. He returned to that place and wrote a letter of thanks to the London society in acknowledgment of their kindly attentions to him.

Is it likely that Grabiancka, or Sutowski, would at the same time publicly advertise for a meeting at O'Reilly's Tavern, when he would be immediately detected? I presume very few people now living knew which was O'Reilly's Tavern. I can enlighten Masonic antiquaries on the subject, as the place exists, and is a licensed house, right opposite Freemasons' Hall, known as the "Hercules Pillars."

I am aware that Tafel in his most valuable "Documents concerning Swedenborg," takes great pains to disavow the connection of Swedenborg with Freemasonry, and I am also aware that Bro. Samuel Beswick as strenuously affirms it. The truth lies between these extremes. Permetty, Chastannier, Nordenskjöld, and others formed a Rite of Freemasonry, based on olden documents, as might be proved, which now exists in England as the Primitive and Original Rite of three Degrees, and no more—offering a truly philosophical explanation of the Accepted English Rite. This is accessible to brethren having received the Degree of Master Mason.

It has nothing in common with illuminism, supports rather than opposes the established creeds of our time, and bears marks of having been known to those "scrupulous brethren" who in 1720 destroyed "valuable manuscripts." True that there are elements introduced of a Swedenborgian kind, but I would recommend brethren to study the works of that great man before they decide upon their opinions regarding him.

In conclusion I refer "Masonic Student" to "Thory's Acta Latomorum" for further particulars about the distinctive characteristics of Egyptian Masonry, of which Cagliostro was the chief advocate.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours sincerely and fraternally,

KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, IX,
Supreme Grand Secretary Swedenborgian Rite.
Hounslow, June 14th, 1879.

HOSPITAL LIBRARIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Sir,—

I think every one who has ever been in a hospital ward will agree with me that hardly a greater boon could be conferred on the suffering inmates than the establishment of a lending library for their use. The gift of a little book to some suffering one has often induced a look of gratitude that has lived in our memory for days afterwards, and it appears to me that the establishment of a series of permanent libraries in our London hospitals should be an easy and a pleasant duty. I will give, as a first donation, a hundred volumes of my own publications, and I have no doubt the London publishers will respond most liberally from their wealth of literature; but my object in writing is to ask those of your readers who have readable books, for which they have no further use, to send them to me, and so form the nucleus of a system that will, I trust, become prodigious in its proportions. Those who cannot send books will, perhaps, help us in pecuniary donations towards the same object, and I shall be happy to receive and acknowledge all such. I shall be glad if donors will kindly send all parcels to my address, carriage paid, advising me by post-card of their despatch. Cheques and P.O.O. should be crossed London and County Bank.

Your kind insertion of this appeal would be greatly esteemed by

Yours very truly,

F. E. LONGLEY.

National Anthem, "God Save the Queen," the Choir. Lord Henniker, after having distributed the prizes, said he was so pleased with what he had witnessed, and so gratified with the success of the boys at the Cambridge Local Examinations, that he would offer a £5 prize annually to the boy that passed best at the Cambridge Examination. Everything that he had witnessed at the Institution had given him infinite pleasure, and, although he was only a young Mason, he saw every reason for being proud of belonging to the Order. In Masonry there were many privileges, and among those privileges was the intercourse they had one with another. With reference to the Masonic Institutions, he could say that the ancient Craft of Masonry was raised more in the minds of the outside public by these great Institutions than by anything else. These Institutions brought Masons into connection with the outside world with regard to Masonic privileges, and it was the efforts of Masons to support these Institutions that met with the approbation of the outside world and of ladies, many of which sex he was glad to see present. With the approbation of the ladies any matters must go on well; and he was glad to find that the Masonic Institutions were so strongly approved of by the ladies. For the reasons he had mentioned the Masonic Institutions were highly satisfactory. But there was one other reason which, perhaps more than all, satisfied the desire of Masons, and that was to take a high place in a great work, to be able to help the powerless, and give a good education to those who were qualified to profit by a good education, but who but for Masons could not obtain it. After they had educated the boys and the girls, these boys and girls would turn out good men and good women, and take their part in the great world around them. He would not talk to the company of the great advantages of the Institutions more than he had, for there were many present who knew as well as he did what the advantages of the Masonic Institutions were. All the brethren were working for these Institutions, and they knew how successful they were; but he would make a most urgent appeal to the brethren, and through them to the public outside, to give all the support they could to the Institution at the coming festival on Wednesday next. He was President of the Board of Stewards for that festival, and he wanted the brethren to give him every encouragement. He had already a good list, but he wished to double it, and so promote the success of the Institution. He had been very much gratified by what he had seen that day. All the company had been gratified. But, after having seen many schools throughout the country, he had never seen any in his life which gave him more pleasure than the Masonic Boys' School. What had pleased him very much was the practical education which was given to the boys. No doubt he would have shocked his old schoolmaster if he had suggested such a thing, but while not at all underrating the value of a knowledge of Greek and Latin, what he very much approved of was the acquirement of a practical education, and an acquaintance with modern foreign languages. He was also pleased to see that the study of music was not neglected. Music tended to soften all the sorrows of life and drive away its cares. He did not wish to read any of his young friends a lesson, but he wished to tell them something which might be of use to them in their future life. Let them by all means take advantage of the opportunities offered them by the Institution, to appreciate those advantages, and while young to acquire the education that was offered them. It was in youth that education was most easily acquired, and he hoped his young friends would exert themselves while yet young and obtain all the knowledge they could. In after life it was a very exhausting work to learn what should have been learned in youth, and it was then that it was seen what advantages had been lost. He would leave it to his young friends to work out the proposition, and he only suggested to them that it was one of vast importance, that required working out directly and particularly. He was very glad that prizes were given for those boys held in highest estimation by their schoolfellows; and he was sure all those who had received prizes would not forget this day. For himself, he did not intend to forget it. But he might point out to the boys that there was a great deal in obtaining the applause of their comrades. He quite believed in boys being very just and appreciative of the good qualities of their schoolfellows, and boys would always take the applause of their schoolfellows as a thing very dear to them. This practice should not be discouraged; it was of very great importance. There was one other thing he would point out to the boys. The best and the wisest did not always come to the front at first, but he advised them to persevere. The more they persevered the more good they were likely to do in after life, and the more good they would likely to leave behind them. The practical application of many of the great discoveries perhaps would never have been experienced by the world if the discoverers had merely been contented with their researches and had not attempted to reap the fruits of them. They might depend upon it that if they persevered they would benefit in the long run; they would obtain the comforts of life, which were considered by men most desirable.

A vote of thanks was afterwards passed to the Rev. Dr. Morris, whom Lord Henniker congratulated on the position to which he had brought the School as an educational establishment.

Dr. Morris having returned thanks, Lord Henniker awarded the prize for elocution to Hazeland.

The company then adjourned to a cold collation, and the remainder of the day was occupied with the sports of the boys, music by the band of the Institution, and dancing.

CHARITY.

(From the Liberal Freemason.)

A distinguished Masonic writer has very aptly said "We must not fall into the too common error that Charity is only that sentiment of commiseration which leads us to assist the poor with pecuniary donations"—and to this he has justly added, "its Masonic as well as its Christian application is more noble and more extensive."

It seems to be now quite generally acquiesced in, which the better and more correct reading of the Apostle's words would be, Faith, Hope, and Love, and this would give increased emphasis to, and a true conception of, the Masonic declaration—that "Charity (Love) extends beyond the grave to the boundless realms of eternity."

In order that we may understand the proper force of this word in Masonry, it is well to enquire how it has been regarded by authorities outside of it.

Webster defines it: 1. "That disposition of heart that inclines men to think favourably of their fellow-men, and to do them good, love; benevolence; good-will;" and he refers to chapter xiii. of I. Corinthians, where a most important lesson on Charity is laid down, and one which is, theoretically at least, thoroughly familiar to Masons; to whom we suggest that it be read for instruction, by substituting Love for Charity, and see if it will not give added interest and impressiveness to the familiar lesson—"and have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love."

The highest conception of Charity, as expressed by the Apostle, and as accepted by the best teachers of the present, therefore, shows that it is love which "suffereth long and is kind," and that it is the inferior quality of that virtue, which bestows alms only—hence, Webster gives his second definition—2. "Liberality to the poor, or to benevolent institutions; generosity."

A man may not always be sure of the motives which induce him to give alms; possibly display, or some element of selfishness may enter into them, but the duty as such should not be avoided, no matter what the motive, and we cannot do better than to cite the words of Stillingfleet, who declares that "a man must have great impudence to profess himself a Christian, and yet to think himself not obliged to do acts of charity."

If the reader will substitute Mason for Christian, he will readily perceive how apt and forcible is the quotation when applied to the Fraternity.

But Charity does not stop at almsgiving; it takes to itself that higher quality of love which finds true delight in what is recognised as "liberality in judging of men and their actions; a disposition which inclines men to put the best construction on words and actions of their fellow men;" or, as is declared by Buckminster, "the highest exercise of charity is charity toward the uncharitable."

It is so common, that our ears are altogether familiar with inuendo, and we may sometimes find ourselves shivering at an ill concealed uncharitableness on the part of Masons who have no better reason for it than prejudice.

Charity is made up of little things as well as of great ones, and "any act of kindness or benevolence" is consistent with its character, which is always to be preferred to that narrowness peculiar to its opposite, or to the lack of it.

Pecuniary gifts may frequently carry sensations of joy with them, and none can know this better than aged or decayed Masons who have outlived their powers of self-support—aged widows similarly situated, and orphan children may also be gladdened by donations from seen or unseen hands, but the gentle word of cheer, the smile of sympathy, and the expression of love which manifests itself in the face carries confidence to the weak, and a feeling of strength to the helpless.

The "tongue of man and of angels" will fail beyond a doubt if we have not charity; faith that could remove mountains becomes as nothing without charity—for "charity (love) envieth not"—"thinketh no evil, but rejoiceth in the truth"—it belongs to Masons, therefore, to so model their own lives by the principles of charity in its entirety, that they may justly be the true exponents of that virtue, for

"The charities that soothe, and heal and bless,
Are scattered at the feet of men like flowers."

ANTIQUITY.

One would think that Masonry, reaching back into the dim past, as it does through its descent from the old guild, might be considered sufficiently venerable without borrowing anything from fancy, but there seems to be an ever freshly-recurring desire to cover its poor old bald pate with antique laurels, and notwithstanding the rude blows which tumbled the venerable and gentle Doctor Oliver off his hobby horse into the ditch as he came gently ambling over the Lincoln-roads, gossiping in his soft hearted way about the lodge which Adam opened in Eden, and the two Masonic pillars which Grand Master Seth built to preserve its secrets through the flood, we find distinguished Masons indulging in equally preposterous talk at the present day. Think of gravely assuming that our Aborigines are the true descendants of the ten lost tribes, and proving it by showing that they possessed several Masonic secrets especially pertaining to the Scottish Rite.

Charles W. Moore once gravely related a visit which he made to a lodge of Indians in Central America, and declared their Masonry to be identical with ours; and, although we know that every lodge now existing in the world is a lineal descendant from the Grand Lodge of England, we occasionally hear of lodges which are said to have existed from time immemorial in Asia. Then we have Pyramid Masonry, which, rather curiously, instead of being the practical rules which governed the Craftsmen who built the Pyramids, is the traditional history of initiation into the ancient religious mysteries. Even Dr. Mackey gravely argues that the Essenes must have been Freemasons for twelve good and cogent reasons, which he enumerates; and some of our Grand Commanders tell what our ancient brethren, the Templars, did in the middle ages. Are we not in danger of having the world's people speak of us as Charles Dudley Warner does of the camel?

"No human royal family fare be uglier than the camel. He is a mass of bones, faded tufts, humps, lumps, and splay joints and callosities. His tail is a ridiculous wisp, and a failure as an ornament or flybrush. His feet are simply big sponges. For skin covering he has patches of old buffalo robes, faded, and with the hair worn off. His voice is more disagreeable than his appearance. With a reputation for patience, he is snappish and vindictive. His endurance is overrated; that is to say, he dies like a sheep if he is not well fed. His gait racks muscles like the ague."

"And yet this ungainly creature curls his head in the air, and regards the world out of his great brown eyes with disdain. The very poise of his head says, 'I have come out of the dim past; the Deluge did not touch me; I helped Shotoo build the Great Pyramid; I knew Egypt when it hadn't an obelisk nor a temple. There are three of us; the date-palm, the Pyramid, and myself. Everything else is modern. Go to! go to!'"—Taken.

New Zealand.

NAPIER.—Victoria Lodge (No. 1577).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Munroe-street, Napier, on Tuesday, the 8th April. There were present Bros. De Lisle, W.M., in the chair; Coombs, S.W.; Dagleby, J.W.; Platford, Secretary; Raven, Treasurer; Apchurch, S.D.; Ree, J.D.; Duncan, I.G. Bro. Wundram, a P.M. of the S.C., was on the dais, and later in the evening Bro. Bactram, the I.P.M., took his seat to the left of the W.M. About thirty members as well as several visiting brethren were present. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous regular and two emergency meetings were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Bro. Chas. Evans, of Maldon Lodge, Victoria, 1047, E.C., and Bro. Henry Charles Pirani, of 364, E.C., as joining brethren, and both were declared elected. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Addison Newbold, who, at the previous regular meeting, had been regularly proposed and seconded as a fit and proper person to be made a Mason. Mr. Newbold was declared accepted. Bro. Williams was then examined as to his proficiency, entrusted, and passed out. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Hollis was examined, entrusted, and passed. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Hollis, who had been regularly prepared, was admitted, and raised to the high and Sublime Degree of a M.M. The lodge was then lowered to the Second Degree, and Bro. Williams admitted, and passed to the Second Degree. The lodge was then lowered to the First Degree, and Mr. Newbold was initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. The W.M. then informed the brethren that, in accordance with a resolution passed at the last regular meeting, and of which they had been informed by circulars, he would send the benevolent box round in aid of the Kailangata sufferers. Twenty-three pounds was collected from the brethren, and ten guineas was voted from the funds of the lodge in addition. Nothing further offering for the good of Masonry, the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony at 11 p.m.

Bro. David James will take the chair at the thirty-fourth annual dinner of the Royal General Theatrical Fund.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

CAGLIOSTRO.

Bro. S. Beswick, in his Swedenborg Rite, and the great Masonic leaders of the eighteenth century (advertised in Bro. Kenning's catalogue), illustrates the connection of Cagliostro with the Masonic "Phileas" of the continent, and informs us that he received the hospitality of the Swedenborgian Society when in London. Cagliostro was very far from being a perfect man, but he had great capacity, and in some respects he was maligned and much misunderstood. Those who know sufficient to have kept them out of the cul-de-sac of the Materialistic Scientist may peruse the account of him which has been left behind by Prince Talleyrand in his recently published "Memoirs." As "Masonic Student" does not belong to the so-called high-grades, I may say that the cypher which he gives is a variation of that of the Kadosh Degree.

JOHN YARKER.

Jews, Exclusion of.—The exclusion of Jews from Freemasonry has always been, in our opinion, a mistake, a folly, and an injustice. It has happily never existed in England, though in some parts of Germany—owing mainly, we believe, to the high grade teaching, and the theories of a mystical Christian school—that exclusivism was maintained in former years, and has not yet altogether ceased. We trust, however, that the true principles of Masonic toleration will yet prevail everywhere, and that this meaningless and unjustifiable exclusion of those who are excellent Masons will soon be a thing of the past. It is impossible, in our opinion, to justify the exclusion of Jews on any ground whatever from Craft Masonry.—Kenning's Masonic Cyclopaedia.

FREDERICK II., THE GREAT.—King of Prussia, born in 1712, died in 1786. Was made a Freemason at Brunswick, secretly, at midnight, on the 14th-15th August, 1738, at the Hotel de Korn. There were assembled three well-known brethren from Hamburg, belonging to the lodge called afterwards "Absalom,"—Baron von Oburg, Master of the lodge; Von Bielfeld, the Secretary; Baron von Löwen; and some brethren from Hanover—Graf von Kilmansegg and F. C. Albedyll. Graf Albert Wolfgang von der Lippe Bucksburg,—who, it is said, had been initiated in England, first defended the Order before the King, then Crown Prince, at the Chateau de Lou, in Holland in the presence of the King of Holland,—was also present as well as Graf von Wartersleben, seeking initiation. Bielfeld is quoted by the "Handbuch" as saying amusingly, in one of his published letters: "Nous ne comptons pas de faire encore un long séjour à Brunswick, parce qu'il y a ici une tête couronnée de trop, qui pourrait découvrir que nous avons reçu le Prince son fils dans l'ordre, et manquer dans sa mauvaise humeur de respect aux Très Vénérables." In consequence of the disapproval of Freemasonry by the Prince's father, King William Frederick I., the reception had to be secret; and Graf von Wartersleben, a Prussian officer and friend of the Crown Prince, was received into Freemasonry at the same time. Baron von Oburg is said to have been Master, Von Bielfeld Orator, and the Tyler was a servant of Von Oburg, of the name of Ration. The work ceased at four in the morning of the 15th, the Prince receiving the Three Degrees. Bielfeld also says distinctly, "Enfin nous le reçûmes dans toutes les formes dues et requises." Frederick the Great took Freemasonry openly under his protection the moment he became King, in 1740, and remained its friend until his death. He opened a lodge at Charlottenburg, over which he presided in person, and in which Bielfeld and Jordan were officers, and his two brothers, Prince William and the Margrave Charles, and the Duke Holstem, Von Beck, were members. His Master's hammer still remains in the Grand Lodge of the Drei Weltkugeln, at Berlin. He was also the founder and the Protector of the Prussian Grand Lodge of the Three Globes, just mentioned. On more than one occasion he spoke warmly of the Order. In 1774 he said: "Elle se fera toujours un plaisir bien sensible de co-opérer pour la puissante protection au but principal de toute vraie Franc-maçonnerie celle de rendre les hommes plus sociables, plus vertueux, et plus bienfaisants." In 1777 he thus expressed himself in a letter to D. Lygaonère, W.M. of the Lodge De la Royale York de l'Amitié, at Berlin, in reply to a congratulatory letter on his birthday: "Une société qui ne travaille qu'à faire germer et fructifier toutes sortes des vertus dans mes États peut toujours compter sur ma protection." In 1777 he also, when his nephew, Prince Frederick of Brunswick, was elected G.M. of the National Mutter Loge at Berlin, thus addressed the G.M. and members: "Je ne puis qu'applaudir infiniment à l'esprit qui anime tous les membres à former de bons patriotes et de fidèles sujets." And in a Cabinet order of February 7th, 1778, we find these words: "Sa Majesté est bien aise de l'assurer à son tour, qu'elle s'intéressera toujours avec plaisir au bonheur et à la prospérité d'une assemblée qui, comme elle, met sa première gloire dans une propagation infatigable et non interrompue de toutes les vertus de l'honnête homme et du vrai patriote." Of Frederick the Great's friendly feeling and protection towards Freemasonry, which lasted until his death, there can be no possible doubt. But a great and serious question has arisen—Did Frederick the Great also protect and reorganise the A. and A. S. Rite, whether in 1762 or in 1786? We fear that, despite the views and statements of some able brethren, we must come to the critical and historical conclusion that the documents relating to this alleged revision are neither authentic nor genuine. The following opening sentence of May, 1786, always has struck us as, so to say, made up, not natural in itself: "Nos Fredericus, Dei Gratia Rex etc., supremus, magnus Protector, magnus Commendator, magnus Magister universalis et Conservator anti-quissimæ et venerabilis societatis, veterum, liberorum, aggregatorum Structorum et Latomorum Aggregatorum fecerunt," etc. "Structorum" is, no doubt, a clerical error for "structurum," but "structurum," though of a classic use, is not of mediæval use of Masons. The French reading clearly takes us back to Ramsay's theory of knightly and military Freemasonry. Indeed, we are inclined to think that the document dates from the Council of Paris, 1787, and the French high grades. One question occurs—Who has ever seen the original? So far as we are aware, no contemporary witness of it is known to exist, nor is the original producible. The names of the signatories are absolutely unknown, except Stark and Wöllner, and there is every reason to doubt their signatures. And though, as we have said elsewhere, we do not accept the Charleston arrangement theory, as there is evidence of the Thirty-third Degree at Geneva before that time, we yet feel it to be our duty to say, on calm consideration, and in the interests of Masonic truth, that the document professing to be signed by Frederick the Great cannot be upheld as a real and historical document. The documents are French in origin and in manipulation, in our humble opinion, and though not fully developed in 1762, when Stephen Morin received his patent, were known in Europe before the so-called addition of the eight grades in America. That we hold to be an utterly untenable view, and one entirely contradicted by recent evidence that might be adduced, of the existence of the Thirty-third Grade in the last years of the last century.—Kenning's Cyclopaedia.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The eighty-first anniversary festival of this Institution was held on Wednesday, at the Alexandra Palace. The Earl of Roslyn, Past Grand Master of Scotland, presided, and was supported on his right by Lord Ribblesdale, and on his left by Sir Molyneux Nepean. About 900 ladies and gentlemen sat down to dinner. Among those present were Bro. James Lewis Thomas, P.A.G.D.C.; A. J. Altman, W.M. 1615; Edgar Bowyer, Wm. Ramsey, H. A. After dinner, grace having been sung by the boys, the toasts of the evening were proposed.

In giving the toast of "The Queen,"

The Chairman said: Ladies and gentlemen, In every assembly of loyal Englishmen the first toast, and that which is most heartily drunk, is that of her Majesty the Queen. A long, happy, and glorious reign has been hers, and during it she has endeared herself to all classes, particularly to the Society of Freemasons, who look upon charity and kindness of heart as the truest test of loyalty. We have seen within the last few days an evidence of that deep sympathy which is shown by her Majesty for grief and suffering—a sympathy which is shared by every one of you here present this evening.

The Chairman: Ladies and gentlemen, The next toast which I have the honour to call on you to drink is that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Grand Master of Freemasons in England, and the President of this Institution. The warm interest which he ever takes in Freemasonry is well known to all of you. During the many years that I have had the honour of enjoying the Masonic friendship of his Royal Highness, I have ever known him willing to take an active interest in Freemasonry; and that that is an incalculable privilege to Freemasonry no one can deny. (Hear, hear.) I may go further, and I may say that the kindness which H.R.H. has shown has been shown in the most courteous and friendly manner. (Renewed cheering.) In works of charity His Royal Highness's purse and good wishes are always to command, and no one will be more happy than H.R.H. to learn of the complete success of this meeting. I give you "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master of Masons of England, and the President of this Institution."

Sir Molyneux Nepean, in proposing "The Health of the Chairman," said: Ladies, gentlemen, and brethren, I am unworthily deputed to propose what I consider after Her Majesty's health and that of the Royal Family is the toast of the evening. I am desired to propose "The Health of Lord Roslyn, the Chairman of this Festival." Ladies, gentlemen, and brethren, I need not say that, as both an English and a Scotch Mason myself, I am exceedingly proud to see him sitting here as Chairman of an English charity of the first water. I think that in the position that he holds there is no man could have brought together a better assemblage, and a better class of brethren, and a more respectable one for the Institution; and that is a great point to be attained. I look upon it as a glorious thing that we should get a man here who, by position, by birth, and name, is equal to all and inferior to none, whose family has a noble reputation. We welcome him here both as an English and as a Scotch Mason, and I trust you will all drink his health most heartily.

The Chairman: Ladies and gentlemen, I can assure you that this very flattering reception has almost deprived me of my powers of speech. I can assure you that I can attribute it to nothing else but to your Masonic kindness, for personally, I believe, I am unknown to almost every person in this room. (No, no.) I have heard that good wine needs no bush. A little bush hung up this evening has given me the great honour that has been done me this evening. It is a great honour to preside here; it is a great honour to succeed, as Chairman, to that illustrious personage who has presided here on a former occasion. But, if you will allow me, I claim to be quite as much an English Mason as a Scotch Mason. I am an English Mason of five and twenty years' standing, for I was affiliated to an English lodge at Malta previous to the Crimean war, and during the two months I was there I had the honour to make almost every member of the Brigade Guard Masons. Some of those went forth to death and glory, but many of them returned, and are still among us. I have also another claim to urge. I had the honour to affiliate the late Lord Zetland to a lodge of Scotch Freemasons, and it was a proud moment for me when I performed that office for the late earl. It is not for me, however, to talk of English and Scotch Masons, because we are all one, we are united by the same ties, and we have all one common object, the good and happiness of all mankind. I can assure you that I shall always regard this evening as one of the proudest in my life on account of the honour which has been conferred upon me (hear, hear), and that honour has been, if possible, increased by the honour and kindness with which you have received the toast of my health. The honour altogether is one which I shall never forget to thank my brother Masons for. (Applause.)

The Chairman: The next toast I have to ask you to drink is "The Health of the Earl of Carnarvon, W.M., Pro Grand Master." (Cheers.) It is impossible to mistake the significance of your applause, and I know that his lordship has earned it well, for he has often done duty for H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and he has continually acted on the throne in Grand Lodge. Personally I have had his acquaintance for many years. We were boys together at Eton, afterwards we were together at Oxford, and I have known him in later years, and I know that no man has acted a more honourable public part than the Earl of Carnarvon. (Applause.) I have also the honour to propose "The Health of Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Dep. Grand Master, and the Grand Officers, the Vice-Presidents, and the Provincial Grand Masters, and Present and Past Grand Officers of this Institution." In giving this toast in this form I am sure that Lord Skelmersdale's health and the health of the Grand Officers will be well received by you. They have one and all done their duty and earned your gratitude. (Hear, hear.) Lord Skelmersdale, as we all know, is a most indefatigable Mason. He told me in his place in the House of Lords to express his regret that he was unable to be present this evening. (Applause.) I call upon Sir Edward Lechmere, P.G.M. of Worcestershire, to respond to this toast. (Cheers.)

Sir E. Lechmere, in reply, said: My lords, ladies, and gentlemen, I have been called upon very unexpectedly to have the honour of responding for this very important toast. I must say I thoroughly appreciate the consideration of Bro. Binckes in sparing us those disagreeable anticipations which we sometimes have to encounter when we find a slip of paper upon our plates—(no, no)—and we feel at once that all the enjoyment of our dinner is entirely spoiled. I may also say that by this admirable arrangement brevity of speech is assured, and I can say that I shall not detain you long. The toast I have been called upon to respond to is one of importance, inasmuch as you have heard, in terms so well expressed by the Chairman, the great meed of gratitude which we owe to those distinguished nobleman who assist our Royal Grand Master in the administration of Masonry in this kingdom, and also to those other gentlemen of various positions, whether as Vice-Presidents of this Institution or Grand Officers, present and past, who have so many years taken a great interest in this and the kindred Institution, the Girls' School, and who are so ready in their attendance in order to support this noble Charity. I assure you I feel great pride and pleasure in being present here to-night, the first occasion I have been able to attend these Charities since my installation as Grand Master of the province of Worcester. I can look back with pleasure to the day, long distant, for although I am recently appointed a Grand Master, I am a Mason of long standing. I was a Steward of the Girls' School, and I looked with admiration and impatience to the gallery where the ladies were placed—I rejoice now the ladies are placed by our side—an arrangement which, I need scarcely say, conduces very much to our enjoyment on these occasions, but, I believe, directly and indirectly it conduces very much to the support of our noble Charities. I am happy to say on this occasion the province of Worcester is represented, and I am further happy to say there are two Stewards on this occasion who have not come empty handed, but have brought up 522 guineas, to show that we country Masons, although we have our shortcomings, still are quite ready to aid our metropolitan brethren as far as we can. (Cheers.)

The Chairman: Ladies and gentlemen, in proposing what I justly called the toast of the evening—"Prosperity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys," with the health of Bro. Plucknett, the Treasurer, I am almost overpowered by the difficulty and magnitude of the task which has been set me. I came here, as I have said before, representing Scotch Masonry at the Grand Lodge of England, and I look to Scotland and find no charity of the kind. I come to England, and I see the most splendid, munificent, and magnificent charities that the world can produce. I confess to you that for 20 years I took the model of your Charities as an example to be followed by the Freemasons of Scotland. I toiled in vain, but still hoping against hope. My successor first followed in the same path which I had marked out myself, and, with your Charities for our guide we hope in Scotland some day, if not to rival you, at least to imitate you. In proposing prosperity to this magnificent Charity, so far as I am myself concerned, I can tell you I have visited it in every department to-day, and I have found it not only perfect in all appliances and admirably suited for its purposes, but reflecting such credit on those engaged in its management and administration, that I should defy the most captious critic to find fault with it. The good that it must do is incalculable, training up the young, fitting them hereafter to serve their country, and training them up in the way they should go, bending the young twig in the way it is certain to form stately timber which may be the pride of Old England. And, ladies and gentlemen, I have in my hand a report, from which I might tell you of the antiquity of the Institution, but you know that as well as I do. I might tell you of its usefulness, but you know that as well as I do. Still, when we come to read of such figures as £15,000 a year devoted to this Charity we must all think how liberal and how charitable are the Freemasons of England. Taking into consideration that this great Charity that I am now asking your aid for—although I think it almost unnecessary to ask in such an assemblage as this, for I see the desire of giving depicted on every countenance; and if the brethren did not intend to give those ladies by their side would certainly enforce them—taking into consideration, I say, that this Institution has not been without its troubles, which it has suffered from circumstances over which it has had no control—the result of such a sum as this is perfectly marvellous and wonderful. I hope we shall hear it announced presently that the money collected to-night is at least as much as has been previously collected. And now, before I sit down, I should like, if it would not trouble you, to give you two or three statements as to the result of the education in this Institution. The result is simply wonderful. I can vouch for its accuracy. Fourteen boys were presented at the last Cambridge Local Examination, and thirteen of them passed out in honours. (Great cheering.) What institution, or college, or school can rival that? And I will tell you something more, that there were only fifteen first-class honours given away at all, and out of those fifteen nine fell to your Institution. One of your pupils passed first class in the London Matriculation, who had no other teaching whatever than what he had received from your own Institution. And one other lad, who received some very slight assistance, gained an open exhibition at Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, where some of the most able of his contemporaries competed, but he distanced them all. If these are not good results of good teaching, I would ask you what you could expect. These are tangible results, and show you what your Institution can do. But before I sit down it is customary, I believe, to find some little fault, particularly from those who come from the north of the Tweed, and they are apt to be a little captious. I should like to find a little fault. I think I have given you all so much praise that it is not wholesome. It is not good for you to be too much praised. (Laughter.) I will tell you a little fault, and I am sure I need only mention it to find it immediately corrected; and the fault that I am going to find is this—that it is not impossible that at the end of their schooling career some of these boys may leave the School homeless and in need. It may be that the good seed sown may bear fruit during their scholastic career, but it may also be that the fruit will perish for want of cultivation at a later period. It may be that having derived all the advantage that they could from their study, and from their religious training in your Institution, they may leave it to fall into evil courses and evil ways, or even to suffer penury and poverty. I would appeal to you once more, as that is the only blot I can find in your excellent Institution, to try and amend it, that the pupils may derive the full benefit of your bounty and your charity. I hope I have not said too much. I feel, as a comparative stranger, I ought hardly to have made the suggestion, but if the suggestion has fallen on willing ears, I hope it will bear fruit. I have only now to say before sitting down I received a telegram yesterday from the Secretary of the Supreme Council in Scotland. I may mention here between ourselves that when I tell you these things I do not want them to be repeated, that there has been a little misunderstanding between the Supreme Councils of England and Scotland; they were not Masonically good friends. I regret it; nobody regrets it more than I do, but I think I see a little break in the cloud, which will lead to bringing about that amity and affectionate regard which we all desire. In order to pave the way the Supreme Council of Scotland begs me to offer a contribution of 50 guineas to this Institution. (Loud applause.)

Bro. Geo. Plucknett, V. Pres. and Treas., in reply, said: My lords, ladies, and gentlemen, there can be no doubt that the greatest possible confidence may be felt that the objects of this great Institution are most fully carried out. The boys are well taught and well cared for, and every comfort is afforded them, by means of the munificent contributions which you, ladies and gentlemen, have provided, and by the able management of Bro. Binckes and the other brethren who have the immediate conduct of the Schools in their hands. I thank you for the very liberal contributions which you have made to enable us to carry on the Institution.

The Chairman: We must not forget those who serve us, and must drink "The Health of the Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, Treasurer, and Members of Committees," and I have the honour to couple their names with the name—a name well known to you—of Bro. Wm. Winn.

Bro. W. Winn: I have great pleasure in rising to respond to the toast to the health of the Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, Treasurer, and members of the Committees. On their behalf I thank you for the cordiality with which the toast has been received, and I add my personal acknowledgments for the honour of having my name coupled with it.

The Chairman: The toast which I now bring to your notice is placed somewhat too low on the list; it is "Success to the other Masonic Institutions." They are both charities of the grandest description, and they have this advantage over the Institution for Boys, that they have great funded property; they have about three times the amount of funded property which this Institution possesses. With this toast I couple the name of Bro. Terry, the Secretary for the Boys' Benevolent Institution.

Bro. Terry, in response, said: My lord, ladies, and gentlemen, permit me to thank your lordship very heartily for the kind manner in which you have proposed the toast which you have kindly coupled with my name; to thank you on behalf of the sister Institutions for the reception with which the toast has been met. My lord, on reading through a few of your figures, you stated that you had been struck with surprise that a sum of £15,000 had been brought into the "Boys'" account for the last year. May I be allowed to say that the sister Institutions have accumulated the sum of about £37,000. We can all remember the time when £5000 was considered a magnificent result of a Festival, and I have not the slightest doubt that when the end of the year comes we shall be able to announce a sum of about £44,000 as the result of Masonic benevolence during the year. I congratulate Bro. Binckes upon having succeeded in obtaining your lordship's presidency, and I hope that it will not be long before the sister Institutions are similarly honoured. I venture to hope that this may be an incentive to the Brethren north of the Tweed, and that English Masons may have an opportunity of reciprocating your kindness, and may support Masonic Benevolent Institutions when these are inaugurated in Scotland.

The Chairman: I now rise to propose "The Health of Lord Henniker, P.G. W., and also the Health of the Board of Stewards." Lord Henniker is prevented from being present this evening, and I shall, therefore, couple with the toast the name of Bro. R. H. Giddy, District G.M. of Griqualand.

Bro. R. H. Giddy: I regret very much that it should fall to my lot to have to reply to this toast. I regret the absence of Lord Henniker, who, if present, would have been able to reply much more ably than I can. I thank you very heartily for the manner in which you have responded to the toast proposed by the noble Chairman, but I beg to take exception to the statement made by Bro. Binckes that you have contributed to a gigantic failure. Under all the circumstances mentioned by him I think it is a very good result indeed. In the name of the Stewards I beg to thank you for the hearty manner in which you have responded to this toast.

The Chairman: I am very much afraid that you must be tired of hearing my voice, but I am sure you will assist me to drink a bumper to those ladies who have honoured us with their presence. There are two Masonic festivals at which we have the pleasure of seeing ladies, and I am you will agree with me that the pleasure of these meetings is enhanced by their presence. I believe that ladies attend these festivals in order to see how admirably (though not at this moment) large bodies of Masons can conduct themselves. Before I sit down I must apologise to every lady present that this toast should come so late on the list of toasts, and I hope that on future occasions it will be proposed at an earlier period of the evening. With this toast I couple the name of Lord Ribblesdale.

Lord Ribblesdale: My lord and gentlemen, I rise to return thanks for the ladies, and I appreciate the honour of the position I have been called upon to take. I echo the sentiments our noble Chairman has expressed, and I feel much more inclined to thank the ladies for honouring us with their presence than to thank you for drinking their health. However, on their behalf it is my duty to thank you. I think, perhaps, that they are pleased to be here, feeling it as in some degree making up to them for those secrets from which they are debarred by cruel tradition.

The company then adjourned to the gardens, and concert, and coffee rooms, and afterwards returned to town. The music during the evening was performed chiefly by the pupils of the Institution in a highly creditable manner.

REPORTS, etc., intended for insertion in current number, should reach the Office, (198, Fleet-street), by Six o'clock p.m., on Wednesdays.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF ANTIQUITY (No. 2).—This famous and ancient lodge assembled in unnumbered numbers on Wednesday last, at its monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, for the purpose of initiating a candidate for Freemasonry in the first place, and then of installing H.R.H. Prince Leopold as W.M. The lodge opened at four, and Mr. Frederick Lassiter being in attendance, was balloted for, accepted, and was initiated into Masonry by Bro. W. Hope, W.D.M. With that great and customary virtue of punctuality (not a Masonic virtue, by the way) for which our Royal Family are so distinguished, H.R.H. Prince Leopold, attended by Bro. the Hon. Alexander Yorke, was announced soon after five. At this moment the lodge room presented a very striking and pleasant "coup d'œil," the numerous "red collars" contrasting agreeably and effectively with the dark blue of Grand Lodge, and the light blue of the Craft. H.R.H. having been presented by Bro. Col. Creaton, and Sampson Pierce, Past Masters, Bro. Colonel Stuart the oldest Past Master of the lodge, proceeded to install H.R.H. in the chair of King Solomon! The ceremony, which followed the old ritual of the Lodge of Antiquity, and which slightly differs from the form in customary use, was most ably rendered by Bro. Colonel Stuart. After Prince Leopold had been installed and received the due "Honours," the Past Masters of the lodge first of all, and then the members of the lodge, were presented to His Royal Highness. The W.M. then proceeded to close the lodge in a very workmanlike style. The brethren subsequently adjourned to a banquet, which was served in the Ladies' Drawing Room, Freemasons' Tavern, under the distinguished presidency of their Royal Master. He gave, after grace was said by the Chaplain, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts with commendable clearness and forcible brevity, and responded to the toast of "The W.M.," most ably proposed by the Installing Master, Bro. Col. Stuart, in most feeling and eloquent words. He also proposed "The Health of the Past Masters of the Lodge," alluding, both warmly and humorously, to the services of the past Grand Officers, members of the lodge, Bro. Col. Stuart, Col. Creaton, the Grand Treas., the I.P.M., and Erasmus Wilson, who had so patriotically brought Cleopatra's Needle to this country, and the members of the medical and legal profession present. Bro. Woodford returned thanks for the Past Masters, and remarked that H.R.H. that evening was installed W.M. of one of the oldest lodges in the world, and which, in one sense, might not unfairly be termed the mother lodge of Masonry, as far as England, and all lodges hailing from England, were concerned. After the retirement of His Royal Highness, the other toasts were proposed, concluding with the Tyler's toast. The brethren separated at an early hour, having spent a most enjoyable and unforgettable evening, to be carefully noted as an "alba dies" by the excellent Secretary, Bro. Barron, in the imperishable records of "Old Antiquity." We may observe that the arrangement of the tables was most artistic, reflecting the highest credit on Bro. Best, and the banquet was one which called for all praise as regards all concerned, whether as to the careful skill which planned it, or the "cuisine" which produced it. Among those present we observed Bro. P.M.'s Col. Stuart, Creaton, Swinburn, Bar, Sampson Pierce, Master of Ceremonies; Erasmus Wilson, Holmes, Philbrick, Barron, Wharton, Hood, Woodford; the D.M., Bro. Hope; P. Deacon and Greetham, Senior and Junior Wardens; Pontifex and Twynam, Senior and Junior Deacons; Stephen Pearce, Letchworth, Moore, Hilary, Skinner, Taggar, Jolliffe, Organist; Lassiter, and Splight, Tyler, P.G. Tyler for Surrey. Several of the brethren were abroad, and were unavoidably absent. There were no visitors except Bro. the Hon. A. Yorke.

EVENING STAR LODGE (No. 1719).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening at Freemasons' Hall, when there were present Bro. Thomas N. Kirkham, W.M.; A. J. Duff Filer, P.M.; John Aird, S.W.; Wm. Sugg, J.W.; J. Glaisher, P.G.D., Treas.; Magnus Ohren, Sec.; Thomas A. Greene, Wm. Winn, Arthur Mead, Samuel Cutler, F. W. Hartley, D. W. Sugg, M. Mildred, J. W. Sugg, W. Liddall, James Lawrie, G. C. Trewby, E. Hyde, Alfred Lass, T. H. Martin, B. P. Ellis, J. F. Porter, F. Davies; and visitors Bro. S. Peirce, P.M. Britannic, 33; J. W. Baldwin, P.M. 1223; J. Methven, J.D. Fredk. of Amity, 452; W. R. Jones, Maryhill, Soxland, 510; J. Aird, Britannic, 33; R. Harris, Robt. Burns, 25; Garman, Canonbury, 657; E. Wharton, Orpheus, 1906; Morgan, Sec. St. Michael's, 211; O. Vincent, P.M. Abercorn, 549; C. Ohren, Fredk. of Amity,

452; Phelps, St. John Baptist Lodge; Phillips, P.M. 475; Wilkins, St. George's, 140; E. Moss, Orpheus, 1706; F. Mead, Euphrates, 212; Henri de Solla, Montefiore, 1017; W. H. Bale, Vituvian, 87; and H. Massey, P.M. Beadon, 619 (Freemason). After the lodge had been opened, Bro. Ohren, Secretary, announced the resignation of two of its members, and the balance sheet and report were read and adopted. Bro. J. W. Sugg, D.C., then installed Bro. John Aird as Worshipful Master, and the following brethren were appointed to office and invested:—Bro. Wm. Sugg, S.W.; T. A. Greene, J.W.; James Glaisher, Treasurer; Magnus Ohren, Secretary; James Glaisher, S.D.; Magnus Ohren, J.D.; J. W. Sugg, I.G. and D.C.; G. C. Trewby, 1st Steward; Edward Hyde, 2nd Steward; and Charles T. Speight, Tyler. On the motion of Bro. J. W. Sugg, D.C., seconded by Bro. Aird, W.M., a P.M.'s jewel, of the value of £10, was voted to Bro. Kirkham, P.M., on his leaving the chair, as a mark of respect from the members. The W.M. presented the jewel in a complimentary speech, to which Bro. Kirkham made a feeling reply. Three new members were proposed, Mr. Walter King for initiation, and Bro. A. Valon and McMillan. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, to a choice banquet. At the conclusion of the banquet the customary toasts were honoured. Bro. Filer, P.G.S.E., responding to the toast of "The Grand Officers," said the W.M. had only done justice to the exertions of the Grand Officers, Present and Past, in giving them credit for looking with anxious solicitude after the interests of the Craft. The adherents to Masonry of late years had been very numerous, and the fear of the Grand Officers was that this great accession might bring many persons into the Order who ought not to belong to it. In the Evening Star Lodge, however, there was no fear that this would ever be the case. It was a class lodge of which it might be predicted that under the auspices of its members brethren of the proper Masonic stamp would be secured. He looked upon Masonry as a great pleasure and luxury, and, therefore, a person ought not to enter into it unless he could afford it. In the course of affairs some people rose while others went down, from circumstances which they could not control, and it was in such circumstances of misfortune that Masonry might be looked to for assistance. They must not come into Masonry if in bad circumstances, and if known to be in bad circumstances they should not be admitted. He knew that all the brethren of the Evening Star Lodge were imbued with these principles, and with the true spirit of Masonry, and the more these principles were impressed upon Masons in general the more benefited would Masonry be by it. Bro. Kirkham, I.P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," said he had known him many years as a good man and a good friend. He had also known him in Masonry, but not to the extent that he had as a personal friend; but still what he had known of him in Masonry had proved that both in Masonry and out of Masonry he was a thorough good man and good Mason. He was sure the W.M. would do his best to make his year of office a pleasurable and happy one for the brethren; it was always his wish to make everybody and everything happy around him. He had always done so, and he would not fail to continue to do so. The W.M., in reply, said that Bro. Kirkham had anticipated, and he should have withheld these observations until he had seen something more of him as a W.M. Nevertheless, he accepted the kind expressions with gratitude, and was extremely obliged to Bro. Kirkham for what he had said, and to the brethren for endorsing it. He would now pass to a topic more agreeable to him and to the members of the Evening Star Lodge, and propose "The Health of the Visitors," to whom he felt very much indebted for attending on the occasion of his installation. He took it as a very great compliment to himself, and he hoped the visit had been as agreeable to the visitors as the brethren of the lodge had endeavoured to make it. Bro. S. Peirce, P.M. 33, in reply, said it was very seldom that he had to return thanks for such a distinguished body of visitors, although he frequently had to reply for visitors. He hailed it with a great deal of pleasure, because the lodge had for him a great attraction. Whatever lodge had an attraction most have something inherent in it. The Evening Star Lodge was a young lodge, but it was evidently a successful one. It had afforded him, and when he looked around the table he was sure the visitors would not deny him the privilege of saying for them, that it had afforded them a great deal of pleasure to be present, first in the lodge, because the work done there was so admirable. The Installing Officer had done his work so well that, although he (Bro. Peirce) had been in Masonry a quarter of a century, he had never seen the work better done. His style commended itself as a great Masonic example, and he was sure it must have impressed the junior members of the lodge with a great deal of respect for Masonry, and taught them what they were to anticipate from it. He sincerely hoped that among the younger members of the Evening Star Lodge a great part of the ceremony struck deep into their minds, and taught them that they must always pay that implicit respect to their W.M., which was the great essence and grand standpoint of Masonry. There might be among the visitors, and doubtless there were, those who knew the W.M., who had had the honour conferred on him that day of being installed in the chair of the Evening Star Lodge. It had been his (Bro. Peirce's) happy fortune to know the W.M. for a considerable time, and he cordially re-echoed the sentiment which fell from Bro. Kirkham, that whether in his social position, in the outer world, or as a Mason, they would find a great man in the W.M. He did not occupy in the outer world merely the position of a cypher; he was a man in command of a great many men; he was respected by a great many men, by a great many acquaintances, by a numerous body of friends; and where a man in the outer world could command that respect from friends and acquaintances, he must inevitably have the lasting regard of his brother Masons. It had been the greatest possible pleasure to him to see the W.M. placed in the chair of what they would now begin to call this distinguished lodge, and he hoped Almighty God had not been invoked in vain that the W.M. might have plenty of health and strength to carry out all those principles that were inculcated in the Grand and Glorious Craft, and that the W.M.'s year of office might go on, not only with comfort to himself, but, as he (Bro. Peirce) felt assured it must, with great pride to the Evening Star Lodge. The W.M. proposed "The I.P.M., Bro. Kirkham," to whom all the brethren owed their sincere thanks. There had been an earnest desire on the part of all the founders to set a good example, and he trusted they would succeed. The two Past Masters had done their duty well, and they had won the greatest possible esteem. Their merits were known to very many lodges outside. The brethren had already heard this. Their merits were valued wherever they went, and particularly so in the other lodges to which they belonged. The feeling throughout the Craft in their favour was universal, and their efforts on behalf of everything associated with Freemasonry were highly appreciated. Bro. Kirkham replied, and, after thanking the W.M. and brethren very sincerely, expressed the hope that the lodge would prosper. Of course, in the beginning of a lodge there were difficulties, but in the Evening Star Lodge there had been none that they had not been able to overcome. He thought the brethren were happy in the choice of their first W.M. Of their second he would not say much. The W.M. next gave "The Health of the Installing Master," and, in the high encomiums he passed on Bro. J. W. Sugg's working, reiterated what had been said by Bro. Peirce. He was sure that all the brethren must have been deeply impressed with the delivery of the ceremony, and, for himself, said he felt deeply grateful to Bro. Sugg for the impressiveness and fluency which had characterised his performance. Bro. J. W. Sugg replied in verse, in which he assumed the character of "Sairey Gamp," and took an obituary view of the ceremony he had performed, to the great amusement of the brethren, who cheered him heartily when he resumed his seat. The W.M. then proposed "The Charities," coupling the toast with the name of Bro. W. Winn, who had done so much for the Masonic and all charitable institutions. Bro. Wm. Winn replied. He had hoped as a new member it would not have been his painful duty to remind the W.M. not to inflict upon him the necessity of returning thanks for the Charities, when it was not only the duty, but the privilege of other members to do so. He was afraid the Charities would suffer by the response being placed in his hands; but still the brethren must not think he was ungrateful for what had been done for the Charities. It was some ninety or more years since the first of those Charities was started, and the eminence they had attained was most encouraging to the contributors to them. They were very successful. Many of the girls educated in the Girls' School had attained to excellent positions in society. Some of them were driving in their carriages, having been married to merchants, and had become patrons of the Institution. Many of them were now Life Governors, and were grateful for the benefits they had received in the Institution. The Boys' School was also satisfactory, and Lord Henniker, who presided at the distribution of prizes on the 18th inst., was so pleased with the progress which had been made under Dr. Morris that he volunteered to give a £5 prize annually for the encouragement of the boys. The children educated at these schools were the children of Masons like ourselves, but who from some unforeseen circumstances had been reduced in life. The education given was a good sound education, to fit the children for any position in life, and deserved every encouragement and support. As long as God blessed us with means we should support those Institutions, and give to them out of the superfluities the Almighty had bestowed upon us. Something might happen to alter our circumstances in life, and then we might be grateful to those who would bestow their bounty upon ourselves. Bro. James Glaisher, responded to the toast of "The Treasurer and Secretary," and Bro. Wm. Sugg to that of "The Officers." The Tyler's toast was then given, and the brethren separated. A musical entertainment was given in the course of the evening by Bro. Wharton, Moss, Charles Ohren, and Coventry, and Miss Belville and Miss Coventry.

SALISBURY.—Elias de Derham Lodge (No. 586).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 17th inst., at 8 o'clock. Present: Bro. A. Tucker, W.M., in the chair; H. C. Card, S.W.; T. S. Futcher, P.M., as J.W.; J. Rumbold, Sec.; Thos. Norwood, I.P.M.; J. Folliott, as S.D.; E. E. Bartlett, J.D.; Buttant, I.G.; Silverthorn, Tyler. Members: Bro. J. H. Dear, R. Dear, T. Harwood, and others. The lodge having been opened in ancient and solemn form, and the minutes of the last regular lodge read and confirmed, the ballot was successfully taken for Bro. Slader as a joining member. The S.W., Bro. Card, then delivered the Entered Apprentice Charge to Bro. Larkam and Main, who were afterwards examined as to the progress they had made in Masonry, which proving satisfactory, they were entrusted and dismissed for preparation. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Larkam and Main were re-admitted, and duly passed to the Fellow Craft Degree by the W.M. The charge of this degree was given by the S.W., and the lecture on the Tracing Board by the W.M. The lodge was closed in the Second Degree. The name of a candidate for initiation having been proposed and seconded, the lodge was closed in ancient and solemn form, and adjourned.

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No. 700).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, Bro. Woodley, W.M., in the chair, supported by the following Past Masters and officers:—Past Masters G. Crawford, F. J. Dawson, E. Bowles, S. Goddard, and C. Hobson; Bros. J. Warren, S.W.; J. Wilkins, J.W.; T. Butt, P.M. and Treas.; C. Norman, P.M. and Sec.; E. B. Hobson, S.D.; W. McCoy, J.D.; G. Beaver, I.G.; J. H. Roberts, D.C.; and B. Norman, Tyler. The visitors comprised Bros. A. Penfold, P.M. 913; T. Hutton, S.W. and W.M. elect 13; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The only business before the lodge was the election of W.M., Treas. and Tyler for the ensuing year, and Bro. Warren, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M.; Bro. Butt, Treas.; and Bro. Norman, Tyler. Each of the chosen returned thanks suitably. A Past Master's jewel, of the value of ten guineas, was then voted to Bro. Woodley for the care he had taken of the interests of the lodge during the past year, and as well to mark the esteem in which he is held by the brethren. Bro. Hobson, P.M., then spoke of the gratifying success that had attended his application to the Lodge of Benevolence on behalf of the widow of their deceased brother, C. Morton, late Sergeant-Major, A.S.C., a sum of twenty guineas having been voted her that day, and he received the thanks of the lodge for his efforts on her behalf. The W.M. notified that a very handsome sum had been gathered among the members of the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, for the same purpose, and handed to him by Bro. Hayes, the W.M. of that lodge. The Nelson Lodge had voted ten guineas to her, and altogether, he trusted, she would be enabled to enter in some little business for herself. The lodge was then closed in due form, and after partaking of a cold collation, prepared in an adjoining room by Bro. R. Beaver, the brethren assembled round the social board, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drunk with the heartiness that at all times characterises the brethren of the Nelson Lodge. It was mentioned to the W.M. that a P.M. belonging to the lodge was on a bed of sickness, and in distress, and the broken column, which the W.M. devoted to the immediate needs of the brother, produced £2 15s. 6d., which was handed to him the next day. In giving the toast of "The Officers of the Lodge," the W.M. drew attention to the fact of Bro. McCoy, who had just received the warrant of a "conductor" in the army under the new regulations, being about to leave them and proceed to Malta on service, and, after passing a high eulogium upon his energy and attention in and to the offices he had filled in the lodge, regretted with the brethren that the exigencies of the service called their Bro. McCoy away. He wished him success, and still further advancement, and a safe journey to his destination. Bro. McCoy's health was received with a Nelson "fire," and, in returning thanks, he said he regretted only one thing, and that was his severance with the lodge. So far as office was concerned, he had hoped to go on till he reached the chair, but that hope was now over, and he gave it up with regret. He should, however, remain a member of the lodge as long as he lived, and hoped to return to it some day. The proceedings were supplemented by some excellent harmony, and after the Tyler's toast had been honoured, the brethren separated.

WORKINGTON.—Sun and Sector Lodge (No. 962).—The installation festival of this lodge was held on Wednesday afternoon, the 18th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Portland-square. The W.M., Bro. J. A. Salkeld, opened the lodge, assisted by his officers, there being also a good muster of the members present, including Bros. W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119, and senior Past Master of 962, P.G. Sec.; G. Brooker, P.M. and Treas., P.P.G. Pur.; Jos. Wood, P.M.; G. T. Archibald, P.M.; T. Dixon, P.M. 1400; Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., P.M. 1002, Chaplain; H. Irving, W.M. elect; and others. Amongst the visitors were Bro. G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, P.G. Treas.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M., and Org. 1002, P.P.G. Org.; J. Haswell, W.M. 1532; J. T. Ray, W.M. 872; W. Carlyle, W.M. 1400; T. Bird, S.W. 1002; J. Rothery, J.W. 119; J. W. Miles, Sec. 119; R. W. Robinson, J.D. 1002; J. Quay, I.G. 371; W. Rice, Lodge 79, Annan, N.B.; W. F. Lamony, P.M. 1002, P.P.G. Reg. (Freemason); and others. Bro. Gibson, the senior P.M., occupied his old post, and installed Bro. H. Irving into the chair. The following were the new officers: Bros. J. O. Salkeld, I.P.M.; J. J. Coverdale, S.W.; D. Reece, J.W.; Rev. E. M. Rice, P.M. 1002, Chaplain; G. Brooker, P.M., Treas. (fourth time); J. Winstone, Sec.; J. Jackson, S.D.; W. Whitehead, J.D.; S. W. Bradbury, I.G.; J. J. Little, Org.; I. Evening, D.C.; A. Osbaldestone and J. Burnett, Stewards; J. Trougher, Tyler. The addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren of Sun and Sector Lodge were delivered by Bro. Kenworthy, P.M. 119. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the Assembly Rooms for dinner. Bro. Irving, W.M., presided, supported right and left by the Past Masters of his own and other lodges, whilst Bros. Coverdale, S.W., and Reece, J.W., were Vice-Chairmen. After dinner the customary loyal, patriotic, and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. In the course of the proceedings, also, Bro. W. B. Gibson, P.M., was presented with his portrait, on canvas, which he handed over to the keeping of the lodge. Bro. Salkeld, the I.P.M., was likewise presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel, in accordance with annual custom. Altogether those present passed a pleasant time, and the musical efforts of several brethren were much appreciated. Bro. Lewthwaite, P.M. 1002, P.P.G. Org., presiding at the pianoforte. We should not omit to add that Sun and Sector Lodge has, during the past year, added the sum of thirty-five guineas to its voting strength for the Charities, which has been accomplished by means of the excellent system adopted some years back, and which is not confined to the members alone, but participated in by their wives, sisters, daughters, and the lewises. Were this simple plan of creating votes more generally adopted, our noble Charities would be immensely benefited.

SALFORD.—Richmond Lodge (No. 1011).—The annual festival of St. John was celebrated on Thursday, the 19th inst., at the Crown Hotel, Blackfriars-street. The lodge was opened at 2.30 by the W.M. (Bro. Hudson Lister), who was supported by a large gathering of officers, members, and visitors. Amongst the latter were Bros. B. Taylor, Prov. G. Treas.; T. J. Hooper, P.P.G. Treas.; Edwin Brookes, P.G.S.D.; J. H. Sillitoe, P.P.G. D. of C.; John Salmon, P.P.G.D. of C.; A. Middleton, S.W. 645; J. Brandon, W.M. 1219; N. Dumville, P.M. 152; H. Miller, Sec. 1357, and others. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bro. Heber Chase Miller, the W.M. elect, was presented to the W.M., who proceeded to install him as his successor. The ceremony was most ably and impressively rendered by Bro. Lister, who received from all present hearty congratulations. The following officers for the ensuing year were invested by Bros. Robert Caldwell, P.M., P.G. Sword Bearer; Sillitoe, and Taylor:—Bros. G. Ormerod, S.W.; J. Nettleton, J.W.; T. Sykes, Treas.; T. Mottershead, Sec.; R. Vickers, S.D.; A. Prestwich, J.D.; R. Caldwell, P.G. Swd. Br. D. of C.; B. Howarth, I.G.; W. Dumville, P.M., Org.; Schofield, Swire, Brooke, and Conlan, Stewards. The address to the W.M. was delivered by Bro. W. Dumville, P.M.; to the Wardens by Bro. Caldwell, P.M.; and to the brethren by Bro. Lister, I.P.M. At the close of the lodge the brethren adjourned to a banquet, presided over by the newly-installed W.M. (Bro. Miller), and this being justly termed "the musical lodge," a most enjoyable evening was spent. The following toasts were given:—"The Queen," proposed by the W.M.; "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of Masons, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," proposed by the W.M.; "The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Lister with a handsome gold Past Master's jewel; "The Newly-Invested Officers of the Lodge;" "The Visiting Brethren;" and "To all Poor and Distressed Masons."

FREEMASONRY IN ESSEX.

On Wednesday next, the 2nd July, Lord Tenderden will be installed Grand Master of the province of Essex, in succession to the late R.W. Bro. Rob. John Byslaw, who had filled that important office with great credit to himself and considerable advantage to the Craft generally for a period not far short of a quarter of a century. The occasion is one which may justly be taken advantage of, in order to place before our readers a review of the career of Freemasonry in this home county, not merely during the reign of its late respected Prov. Grand Master, but from the day when first a lodge of Freemasons was established within its boundaries; and we have reason to hope that the particulars we have collected from various sources, dry as they must be to a certain extent, will prove interesting, not only to our worthy brethren of Essex, but also to the general body of our readers. Including two which have been warranted this year, the Arnold Lodge, No. 1799, Walton-on-Naze, and the St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1817, Shoeburyness, there are no less than nineteen lodges on the roll of this Prov. Grand Lodge, so that whether we have regard to mere numerical strength or to the early association of the county with our beloved Craft this sketch of Freemasonry in Essex will hardly fail to be appreciated.

We have said there are nineteen lodges on the roll in this province. Four only of them date their existence to periods anterior to the Union, though, at the time that auspicious event took place, there were several others in good working order, which have since passed away, and there have been yet again others which were struck off the roll or ceased to be after a brief or precarious existence. Of this, however, we shall have occasion to speak anon. Of the four ante-Union lodges the Angel Lodge, No. 51, Colchester, is the oldest, its warrant of Constitution having been granted in the year 1735, during the Grand Mastership of Thomas Thyane, Viscount Weymouth. Though many years later a still older lodge, dating from 1730, migrated into Essex from the metropolis, and during the rest of its existence of necessity ranked as the premier lodge of the province. The present Angel Lodge, No. 57, of Colchester, must always be looked upon as the oldest Essex lodge. Its warrant, as we have stated, was granted in 1735. In the 1736 list of lodges—see appendix to Bro. Gould's recently published "Four Old Lodges"—it ranks as No. 141, and was held at the Three Cups, Colchester. As regards date of Constitution, it is placed between two 1736 lodges, dated 1st March and 8th March of that year respectively. At the closing up of lodges in 1740 it became No. 126, remaining at the same quarters, but figuring among the 1735 lodges. In the list for 1756 it is given as No. 76, at the Angel, Colchester, and as a 1735 lodge. In 1770 it became No. 64; in 1781 No. 57; and in 1792 No. 47, being held throughout at the Angel, and being designated as a 1735 lodge. On the re-ordering of numbers after the Union it became, in 1814, No. 67; in 1832 No. 59; and in 1863 No. 51. It is now held at the Three Cups Inn, the very identical hostelry at which the earliest meetings took place. The second lodge in order of seniority is the Lodge of True Friendship, No. 160, held at the Old Ship, Rochford. This is not a purely Essex lodge in the same sense as the Angel. It first appears in the list for 1769 as having been constituted on 4th December, 1766. It was then held at the Crown and Thistle, near Tower Hill. In 1770 it became No. 315. In the 1781 list it is No. 250, and is described as the Lodge of True Fellowship, Seven Stars, Bromley. In 1792, though retaining the same designation, it had become by the closing up of numbers, No. 210. Some time between this date and the Union in 1813 it migrated into Essex and changed its title for True Friendship from True Fellowship. At last, in Bro. Hughan's "List of Lodges, on the roll of the United Grand Lodge of England, A.D. 1814," it is described as Lodge of True Friendship, Rochford, No. 210, on the list of "Moderns," in 1813; No. 264 in 1814, after the Union; No. 186 in 1832; and No. 160 since 1863.

Both the above lodges were on the roll of what was known as the Grand Lodge of the "Moderns," No. 214, now designated the "Hope and Unity," and held at the White Hart Hotel, Brentwood, was on the roll of the so-called "Ancients," and according to the dates affixed to these lodges in Bro. Kenning's "Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar," was warranted in the year 1796. At the time of the Union it was, so Bro. Hughan tells us, No. 294, and was held at the Windmill and Bell Tavern, Romford. In 1814 it became No. 375, in 1832 No. 259, and in 1863 No. 214. It was still at Romford when the Grand Lodge Calendar for 1877 was issued, but in the course of that year it appears to have migrated to its present quarters at Brentwood.

The last of the four Ante-Union lodges is the lodge of Good Fellowship, No. 270, held at the White Hart, Chelmsford. It dates from the year 1789, when the then Grand Master, H.R.H. the Duke of Cumberland, granted a dispensation under which it continued working till the 16th August, 1793, when it was formally consecrated at the Saracen's Head, Chelmsford, by the late R.W. Brother Thomas Dunckerley, the then Grand Master of the Province of Essex. The day chosen was the anniversary of the birthday of H.R.H. George, Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., according to the account furnished in Vol. II of the "Freemason's Magazine" for the year in question; the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened immediately on the arrival of Bro. Dunckerley, when the Prov. G. Officers, including Deputy Prov. G. Master Cork, who was W. Master of the new lodge, were appointed. The brethren then went in procession to church, a "band of martial music" leading the way, followed by two Tylers and members of visiting lodges, and then two more Tylers; after them came the Masters, officers, and brethren of the Essex lodges, namely:—Good Fellowship, No. 463 (prior to 1792 No. 533); Goodwill, Braintree, No. 401 (deceased between 1814 and 1832); Friendship, Ilford, No. 217

(deceased between 1814 and 1832); Colchester, No. 47 (now Angel, No. 51); Well Disposed, Waltham Abbey, No. 21 (deceased between 1814 and 1832). Following these came, first, the Royal Arch Masons, then the Knights Templars, and then the Grand Officers of the Province, Bro. Dunckerley, Prov. G.M., preceded by the Prov. G. Swordbearer, and supported on his right by the Dep. Prov. G. Master, and on his left by Capt. Sir W. Hannam, "Acting Grand Master of England, of K.T.," bringing up the rear. On returning from church the brethren dined, after which the Lodge of Good Fellowship was constituted in due form. Bro. Dunckerley, we are then told, delivered a most excellent address, in which he impressed on those present the duties of cultivating those moral and social virtues which so pre-eminently distinguish the principles and groundwork of Masonry. He then recommended to their consideration that most excellent charity, the Royal Cumberland and Freemasons' School, for clothing and educating the daughters of poor Freemasons, in order that that precept might be enforced by example, and that the Grand Lodge of Essex might be distinguished as well-wishers to the Institution. He began a subscription by twenty guineas from his own purse; this was followed by every member contributing what suited his convenience, to which was added a benefaction from the newly-constituted lodge, the whole amounting to a very considerable sum. This lodge which, as we have already mentioned, was No. 553 before 1732, and became No. 462 in that year; was altered to No. 518 after the Union; to No. 343 in 1832, and in 1863 became, and is now, No. 276.

The fifteen post Union Lodges are as follows, namely:—The Hope, No. 433, Brightingsea, founded in 1736, and the Chigwell, No. 453, in 1838. Both these came into being in the Grand Mastership of the late Duke of Sussex. Then in order of seniority we have Star in the East, No. 650, founded in 1855; United, No. 697, Colchester in 1858; Priory, No. 1000, Southend; and St. Peter, No. 1024, Maldon, both in 1864; and the Walden, No. 1281, Saffron Walden, in 1869. These date from the Grand Mastership of the late Earl of Zetland. Lodges St. Mary, No. 1312, Bocking, and St. John, No. 1312, of Grays, both constituted in 1873; and Liberty of Havering, No. 1437, of Romford, with Bagshaw, No. 1457, of Buckhurst hill, both warranted in 1877, belonged to the Grand Mastership of the Marquis of Ripon. The remaining four lodges have been warranted since H.R.H. the Prince of Wales ascended the Masonic throne, namely, Roslyn, No. 1543, of Dunmow (1875); Trinity, No. 1734, Rayburgh (1877); Arnold, No. 1799, Walton-on-Naze (1879); and St. Andrews, No. 1817, Shoeburyness (1879). These lodges, it is well-known, are generally speaking, in a prosperous condition, and there is strong reason to hope that under the auspices of their new Grand Master, the Prince, will show themselves still more worthy of their old associations and the high reputation they have so long and so deservedly enjoyed. On one point we may take upon ourselves to speak with something approaching to certainty. We feel that Essex will be as liberal and as constant in its support of our Institutions as we have shown that it was on the day the Lodge of Good Fellowship was constituted, and Bro. Dunckerley commended to the brethren present, and especially to the members of the new lodge, the importance of upholding the Royal Cumberland Freemasons' School, or as it is now known, the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. In fact its contributions at the anniversary festivals of our several institutions during the past five years have fallen little short of £1000. We are justified, therefore, in our anticipations that Essex will be as liberal in the future as she has been in the past in her support of our charities.

A sketch of Freemasonry in this county would, however, be very incomplete which did not include at least a brief enumeration and description of those lodges which from various causes have passed away. Foremost among those lodges is what, according to Bro. Gould, was known at the Union as the Well Disposed Lodge, No. 28, of Waltham Abbey, which would seem to have died out between 1814 and 1832. This was originally a Metropolitan, not an Essex lodge. Taking the series of lists appended to the same brother's History of "The Emerald Lodges," we find that in 1732 it was No. 76, and was held at the "White Bear, King Street, Covent Garden." It retained the same number in 1736, but is described as having its quarters at the "Queen's Head, Old Bailey," and as being a "Masters' Lodge." In 1740 it became No. 673; in 1756 No. 41, its locality having in the interim been changed to "Castle-street, Southwark;" in 1770 it became No. 24, and was held at the Old Magpie, Bishopgate-street. Some time between this year, and the year 1781, it migrated into Essex, for in the 1781 list it is described as No. 30, the Well-Disposed Lodge, at the Cock, Waltham Abbey. It retained this designation in 1792-1813, but by the closing up of numbers it became No. 28 in the former year. It died, as we have said, between 1814-1832—a circumstance to be regretted, seeing that it was founded in 1730, and must, therefore, have enjoyed an existence not far short of a century.*

* There is a discrepancy in Bro. Gould and Hughan's description of this lodge, which we shall leave it to those worthy brothers to settle between themselves. We have used the former's account in tracing the Well-Disposed through the several lists from 1732 to 1792-1813. According to Bro. Hughan's "List of Lodges on the roll of the United Grand Lodge of England, A.D. 1814," No. 28 of Moderns, in 1813 is given as "Alpha Lodge, Kensington Palace," and constituted in 1730, while Lodge No. 29, of date 1730, is an Essex lodge, but is described as "the Lodge of Fortitude, Burnham, Essex," which became No. 45 in 1814, and died between that date and 1732. Bro. Gould has no "Alpha Lodge, Kensington Palace," while his No. 29, "Lodge of Fortitude" is set down as being held at the Hamburg Arms, East Smithfield. Moreover, he traces this regularly back through all his lists to No. 79 of 1732.

The next in order of these defunct lodges appears No. 156 in the list for 1739, and was held at the Hova, Braintree, Essex. Its date of constitution is given as 17th March, 1736. In 1740 it became No. 141, but the date of constitution is stated as May 3rd, 1738. Bro. Gould, however, has himself pointed out that the 1740 list is full of errors, and as this lodge figures above a number of 1736 lodges, we should incline to regard the former date as the correct one. However, the point is immaterial as the lodge was erased on 29th November, 1754.

Next in order is Lodge No. 182 in the 1739 list, its description being "K. C. and Figure, Rumford in Essex" and its date of constitution "March 13, 1738." In 1740 it ranks as No. 169, in 1756, when it was held at the Red Lion, Hornechurch in Essex, as No. 103. It must have died between this year and the year 1770, as it is not included in the list for the latter.

No. 308 of 1769, founded January 18th, 1764, and held at the Saracen's Head, Chelmsford, became No. 250 in 1770, and No. 200 in 1781. It was erased in 1782.

No. 317 of 1769 founded August 9th, 1764, and held at the Half Moon, Harwich, became No. 257 in 1770, and No. 205 in 1781. When it was designated the St. Nicholas Lodge, and had its quarters at The Swan, Harwich. It became No. 174 in 1792, and so remained till the Union.* It died before 1832.

 According to Bro. Hughan's "List of Lodges, A.D. 1814, there was no Lodge No. 174 at the Union. There is, however, a Lodge No. 186, warranted 1745, and described as the Gothic Lodge, Harwich, Essex, which became No. 227 in 1814, and died between 1814 and 1832. Bro. Gould's No. 186 is "Gothic Lodge, Foot Guards, Suttling House, Whitehall," which was No. 218 in 1781; "Gothic Lodge, Crown, Tufton Street, Westminster;" No. 274 in 1770, held at the Black Horse, in Shug Lane; and No. 336 in 1769, when it was held at the same place. Its date of constitution is given in the last named list as "March 22, 1765."

No. 411 of 1769 list was constituted December 15, 1797 and held in "Long Alley, Moorfields." In 1770 it became No. 346, and is described as "the Lodge of Liberty, River Lee Tavern, Limehouse Bridge." In 1781 it is described as "the Lodge of Friendship, No. 270, held at the Angel, Ilford, Essex." In 1792 it became No. 227, and, as we have already seen, was present, with other Essex lodges, on 16th August, 1793, when the Lodge of Good Fellowship, No. 462, of Chelmsford, was constituted. According to Bro. Hughan, its designation at the time of the Union was "Lodge of Friendship, Barking, Essex." It became No. 285 in 1814, and was defunct some time before 1832.

No. 430 of 1775 list was constituted June 4th, 1772, and is described as "Lodge of Freedom, King's Head, Malden, Essex." In 1781 it became No. 339, and was held at the Bull Inn or Tavern. It was struck off the roll in 1785.

No. 496 of 1778 list "Lodge of Unity, King's Head, Colchester," was constituted June 11th, 1766. In 1781 it became No. 402, and was held at the Red Lion. It ceased to be before 1792, as it does not figure in the list for that year.

No. 505 of the 1778 list is included in the 1777 lodges, and is described as the "Social Lodge, Horn Braintree." In 1781 it became No. 411, and was held at the "White Hart, Bocking, Essex." In 1792 it became No. 332. According to Bro. Hughan it was held at Malden at the time of the Union, and became No. 425 in 1814, and died between that year and 1832.

No. 491, anterior to the change of number in 1792, was founded in the year 1786 as the "Lodge of Goodwill," and was held in a private room in Braintree. It became No. 401 in 1792, and No. 485 in 1814. Its death occurred between that year and 1832.

No. 560 in 1813, the "Prestonian Lodge of Perfect Friendship, Grey's Thurnock, Essex," was founded in the year 1797. It became No. 582 in 1814, and died before 1832.

All the above lodges were on the roll of the Grand Lodges "Moderns." There were also at the period of the Union two lodges holding under the "Ancients," namely, No. 41 of 1813, held at the Windmill Inn, Chelmsford, which became No. 60 in 1814, and died before 1832; and No. 156, "Royal Horse Artillery, Colchester," which became No. 189 in 1814, and passed away between that year and 1832.

Thus there are no less than thirteen lodges which have been constituted in, or migrated to, the Province of Essex, and though, perhaps, on official documents they may have left no trace behind, we are not stretching our imagination too far when we suggest that they have probably left their mark in connection with other lodges. It is our firm belief that once the seed of Masonry has been sown, it is sure to bring forth fruit. Though misadventure may befal the place when it is first cast by the sower, some of it will in all probability be carried elsewhere and prosper. At all events Masonry continues to flourish in the places where the different defunct lodges enumerated above were established, and who knows but many of the members of these old lodges may have played their part in raising Freemasonry in Essex to its present condition of Freemasonry.

Next week we propose giving, in brief the career of Lord Tenterden, the Grand Master nominate of the province.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

CAGLIOSTRO.

I did not propose to raise a question as to Cagliostro's character, about which I have a very strong opinion, but simply as to what he had to do with "Swendenborgianism," so called. Bro. Mackenzie has not answered my query. Can any other brother?

MASONIC STUDENT.

Reviews.

LA CHAINE D'UNION. Hubert, Paris.

This useful French Masonic monthly pursues its onward course, under Bro. Hubert's able pilotage, and we trust successfully to himself. Like every one else, he has, however, we fear, to suffer from oblivious subscribers and apathetic readers.

LA MONDE MACONNIQUE. Caubet, Paris.

Well edited, and full of French Masonic information, which, however, interesting, as no doubt it is, to Bro. Caubet's readers, is simply too Frenchly-Masonic just now for our Anglican Masons.

THE CONQUEROR'S DREAM, AND OTHER POEMS

By Wm. Sharp, M.D. Hardwicke and Bogue, 192, Piccadilly.

This poem, which has reached a second edition, has undubtedly a considerable claim on our attention, as despite the monotony often of blank verse, its thoughts and its language are alike intelligent and interesting. We have found in it considerable poetic power, and the promise of future achievements in the same peaceful arena. Some of the other poems are not without merit, as "The Soldier's Cemetery;" "The Palm Groves;" and "The Heights of Khandulla." We can quite understand why it is that the author has found readers, and we are glad to note and mention approvingly the little book.

THE COACH HORN. By an Old Guard. Köhler and Son, 35, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden.

It seems that this gay little pamphlet owes its appearance in the world to the calm suggestion of a subaltern in the iGuards, and, therefore, the Old Guard set to work to initiate the world into the mysteries of a Coach Horn, "What to blow," and "How to blow it." And in order to be fully up to the scientific views and fashion of the hour generally, and of our young men in particular, the writer gives us, "Secundum artem," the various important sounds, such as a "start, clear the road, off side, slacken pace, pull up, change horses, the post horse call (not gallop), higher up (whatever that may mean), a rustic call (on a good looking young woman), steady, home," in musical notation, with a clearness and precision which would even edify our worthy and distinguished P.G.C., Sir W. G. Ouseley. Well, we have been, we confess, sensibly affected by this little brochure, and we will tell our readers why. In the first place, it recalls old days and old friends, long journeys and pleasant visits, it takes us back to those early hours of life which to-day loom upon us from a long, long distance, and we have forgotten for the nonce the cold, dull present, the "ansers" and the "bores" with whom we daily have to converse, and find ourselves once again amid a gay circle of the pleasant and the pleasing, the witty and the gay, the kind, the gentle, and, above all, the true. Yes, time takes many things away from us all here, gifts and graces, hope and trust, joy and strength, health and happiness; but it cannot, no, it cannot, rob us of memories which are imperishable, and associations which will go with us to the grave. This little book puts us in mind of old coaching days, of goodly teams, and a steady old friend of ours, the typical coachman of the time, who knew all about us, and was as much interested in us as if he had been a familiar friend. We can see his merry face, hear his laugh and his joke, and even listen to his cheery "Woh-hoh!" And then, in the next place we are struck, deeply struck, with the fact that in 1879 our young men, burning to acquire knowledge, are going back to such old world habits, and are even ready to master the mysteries of the coach horn notes. Where will this all lead to, my masters? It is not too much to say that if they go on in this way much further there will be no holding them in, and this important advance in important branches of knowledge, such scientific study, will greatly affect, we have reason to believe, the whole system of competitive examination, and may, perhaps beneficently re-act on the noble process of "cram." Never let it be said that our young men are above learning. But we must not say more. We hail this gay and little "Bantling," cheerfully and gratefully, and we trust that unlike "Baron Munchausen," such notes as the Old Guard's pupils will blow will be both harmonious and musical, clear and correct.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this institution met on Thursday at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. A. Rucker, P.G.D., presided. There were also present Bro. H. A. Dubois, E. Letchworth, Griffiths Smith, R.B. Webster, Col. James Peters, Edward Cox, H. Potter, J. J. Cany, F. R. W. Hedges, Secretary, and H. Massey (Freemason).

Five petitions were placed on the list for the October election. The list for that election was then settled, when there appeared forty-eight candidates and eleven vacancies.

The Chairman, on behalf of Col. Creton, gave the following notice of motion:—"That seven additional girls be elected at the quarterly Court in October next, thereby raising the number of elected girls in the Institution to 200, making a total of 207 in all, seven of those now in the school having been admitted by purchase."

The Committee then adjourned.

Bro. Peter Dickinson, P.M. Royal Standard Lodge, No. 1298, and M.E.Z. elect Joppa Chapter, No. 188, will instal Bro. James Ellershaw as W.M. of the Duke of Lancaster Lodge, No. 1353, on Wednesday next, the 2nd prox., at the Athenæum, Leonard Gate, Lancaster. A report of the proceedings will appear in due course.

H.R.H. PRINCE LEOPOLD.

Prince Leopold was, on Wednesday last, installed W.M. of the Lodge of Antiquity, amid a goodly gathering of its members, and the manifest rejoicing of all present. That most ancient and distinguished lodge has a history, alike unique and remarkable, and it is very fitting that it should be presided over by one so qualified to adorn the Master's chair as H.R.H. Prince Leopold. He is well known to Englishmen and to Masons by his artistic taste and aesthetic culture, and his zealous desire to extend the great blessings of scientific study and sound education. He is a student, and a successful student, moreover, of more than one branch of general and special knowledge, and his public utterances have been warmly hailed and heartily appreciated by all who have had the pleasure of listening to them. There is also a special interest in the fact to "Old Antiquity," as its members like to term it, that Prince Leopold succeeded H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, thirty-four years Master of the lodge. It is this historic connection of the Lodge of Antiquity with the annals of our Order, and above all with the Royal Family, which renders it so desirable that so distinguished a lodge should claim as its head a member of that Royal House, ever ready to take its share of the burdens of benevolent labour and of social amenities which devolve upon them, as citizens of the greatest monarchy the world has ever seen. The history of the Lodge of Antiquity has yet to be written, and its many documents are still to be collated. It cherishes the tradition that King William III. was initiated among its members at Hampton Court Palace, and certain it seems to be that it was in existence in 1691, and, probably, very much earlier as a purely operative lodge. Indeed, it stands without a rival, the head of English Freemasonry, and though now No. 2 by the fraternal arrangements of the Union of 1812, under the great-uncle and grandfather of Prince Leopold, it is, strictly speaking, the real and original No. 1 of English Freemasonry. Let us hope that the union begun on Wednesday last between the Lodge of Antiquity and Prince Leopold may long be cemented and preserved, and that under his distinguished presidency it may long retain its high character and its distinctive system, its prestige at home and its popularity abroad.

THE ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The Anniversary Festival of the Boys' School took place on Wednesday, though in unfavourable weather, at the Alexandra Palace, under the presidency of the Earl of Rosslyn, K.T., 900 ladies and gentlemen being present. Bro. Binckes announced £10,500. We shall recur to the subject in our next.

THE SCOTCH RITE IN FRANCE.

We regret that a fresh conflict has arisen in France, namely in this influential body, and sincerely sympathizing as we do with those many excellent French Freemasons who deplore the present deplorable condition of French Freemasonry, we trust that means may be adopted to "still the tempest," and to "guide the storm." So far, it appears to us, from our more serene and philosophical attitude, as the French have it, a "tempest in a glass of water," or, as we less elegantly say, a "storm in a tea-pot." But then we are not on the spot, and we forbear alike to criticize, much more to condemn. All we can wish for the much tried and ill used Freemasons of France is that they may have peace and rest, that they may be let alone by intriguers, and emancipated from "intrigues," and that those brethren who seem like "stormy petrels" to foster differences, and revel in agitation, may alike be disappointed in their handiwork and follies, nay crimes. What French Freemasonry wants is repose—immunity from the turbulence, the silliness, the violence, the wildness, the anarchy which has disgraced and marked its latest episodes, as there is, perhaps, a hope, faint though it be, that "Philip drunk" may yet yield to "Philip sober," and that the good sense of the majority of French Freemasons will lead them, despite a busy and bitter faction, to retrace their steps and to restore peace, and goodwill, and unity, and fraternal relations in the Masonic family. Otherwise, we confess, all these little episodes are to us but evidences of that restless and uneasy condition of French Freemasonry, which, dating from the mischievous manoeuvres of Massol, has not yet, apparently, culminated in its most destructive and revolutionary projects. We trust that the Ancient and Accepted Rite in France may be preserved from intestine strife and unseemly complications, and we feel sure that, if need be, some of the distinguished English members of the Rite will be rejoiced to act in the interests of peace and reconciliation. So far, we think it right to say, as far as we can profess to understand the merits of the case, both the law and common sense of the matter are with the authorities; as we all of us know that the principle of obedience must be upheld if organizations are to be kept together, and resistance to lawful authority and violation of distinct statutes can never properly be overlooked or sanctioned by Freemasons.

IN MEMORIAM.

Since last we met our readers a sad incident connected with the Zulu War has given intense grief to all in England. We allude to the melancholy intelligence of the death of the Prince Imperial. He fell, as our readers know, in a little skirmish or surprize of a reconnoitring party, of which he was seemingly in command, and his body, happily recovered by our cavalry patrols, and bearing seventeen assegai wounds, is now on its way to England. Sad ending, indeed, in the good Providence of T.G.A.O.T.U., to the undoubted promise of a gallant career, premature close, according to our mortal calculations, of a bright intelligence and noble aspirations for the welfare of humanity. We can all enter into the feelings of the widowed mother, now left alone in the world, though in truth it is really not in the power of language or the sympathy of the best intentioned to measure the full depth of this irreparable blow to a fond, proud mother's heart. But as Freemasons we should be little deserving the name if we hesitated, on any petty considerations whatever, to express our heartfelt sorrow at these most unexpected and most mournful tidings. Though Freemasons we are always patriots, and we may well always remember that the lamented Prince was educated at Woolwich, was pleased always to consider himself a "gunner," and died most chivalrously identifying himself with his English comrades in the hard services of a most serious campaign. Gifted with no ordinary capacities, and placed in a most difficult situation, he had won for himself the esteem, and respect, and affection of all his comrades, and the mourning in the entire English army for his regrettable death is deep, and true, and universal. He has, however, in this, as in other matters, set an example to young men which it is worthy to note and, above all, to admire. "Taught to command by learning to obey," he "volunteered" most nobly to share in the dangers and difficulties of a very deadly war, and "setting at nought self-interest and ease," he sought manfully to learn in that rough, good school of military service, the commendable qualities of endurance, hardness, and self-development. And though, humanly speaking, his end seems to us to-day a sad close to bright hopes and glowing anticipations, there is, after all, no better death for any one, be he who he may, to die here below, than that of the "poor soldier," in the "path of honour," in the "field of duty." As Englishmen and Freemasons, we shall all long remember with regretful pride, that he died "with harness on his back," a true soldier, sharing the "rations," wearing the "uniform" of the English army, and that he cheerfully bore with courage and animation the hardships and experience which are the lot of our gallant soldiers in South Africa. In the words of our exalted Bro. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, we shall never forget one who was a "kind friend, a true gentleman, and a brave soldier." We may indeed deplore that this ill-fated Zulu War shall have claimed such a victim, one who has fallen from a sense of duty and love of a soldier's career, but we shall say with simple faith, "L'homme propose, Dieu dispose." We were among those who lamented deeply the death of his remarkable father, and did not hesitate to avow our loyal sympathy with his altered fortunes and our own sincere regret for his premature death. To day, when the last hope of that widowed and gracious lady is buried in the grave, under circumstances even more sudden and affecting, we are glad to be permitted in these humble pages to avow our unchanged respect for her, our unchanged admiration of the courage and dignity with which she has borne overwhelming trials, and to offer our respectful, but most sincere, condolence with her in this supreme sad hour of her affliction and bereavement.

A WARNING.

Dear Brother Kenning,—
As I was going to the Lodge of Antiquity on Wednesday last, I was accosted on the stairs of Freemasons' Masonic Hall by a foreigner (not over cleanly), who said in broken English, whether actual or put on, "You are a Mason; I am a Mason; I am going to your lodge; I want charity." I said, "No, you cannot come to-night, as we have a private and special meeting." Without a word the alleged brother wheeled round and "skedaddled," and as it is just possible he may have paid some other lodge a visit, I put in this note of warning and enquiry.
I object to this system altogether, and think it well just to mention the fact.
Yours fraternally,
A. F. A. W.

CAGLIOSTRO.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—
In your Cyclopaedia, of which I was the Editor, your readers will find, under the heading "Cagliostro," a full account of that great charlatan. After studying all available sources of information respecting him, I came to the conclusion there carefully indicated, that he was a "supreme impostor," and deserving neither of the admiration or remembrance of Freemasons in any way whatever. Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie takes quite the opposite view of Cagliostro, and "constat" he has as much right to his opinion as I have to mine, and ingeniously seeks by an amusing and clever paradox, in my humble opinion, to invest him with the "gracious attributes" of a true Mason. I think well to record my fraternal protest against any attempt to represent Cagliostro either as a Masonic hero, or a man of enlarged mind or liberal sympathies, because I venture to think such an attempt most mistaken sentiment in the first place, and utterly unwarranted by the facts of history in the next.
With regard to "Egyptian Masonry" itself, with the exception of some confused notices respecting it, nothing that I can anywhere find, is known about it, except that it was "Androgyne," and said to have had 90 degrees. No known authentic ritual of it exists, unless in the Vatican library, though some writers have said that the "Rite of Misraim" is a continuation or adaptation of it. We may thus dismiss contemptuously any alleged expositions either of its "mystic ceremonial" or "sublime teaching" as belonging to the pure realm of "Muthos."
If Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie knows of any alleged ritual of Cagliostro's Masonry which will bear investigation, I shall be most happy to consider it rationally and amicably with him. I have never yet, as I said before, been able to find one. Thory's authority is only hearsay.
Bro. Mackenzie mentions the Cardinal Prince of Rohan as a friend of Cagliostro, as if that friendship was a "feather in Cagliostro's cap." To my mind, that he was the "protégé" of such a person is fatal to any theory of his honourable motives, his candour, or his reliability.
The Cardinal Prince Louis de Rohan was confessedly, as all contemporary French writers agree, the vainest and weakest of mortals. He was given up to the absurdities of alchemists and a prey to every impostor. His degraded life, his hopeless profligacy, his wasteful expenditure plunged him into disreputable coteries of all kinds, and, as all know, he was mixed up with Boehmer, Madame De la Motte, and Cagliostro in that shameful conspiracy of the diamond necklace, and he died after an ill-pent life, amid universal neglect, contempt, and in utter ignominy. If the pretension of Cardinal Rohan is the only argument in favour of Cagliostro it is as weak and as fatal a one as well can be. But history, which rejects paradoxes and exalts "in truth and honest criticism," has long since condemned Cagliostro.
His whole cause is a career of imposture and fraud from first to last, and I, for one, venture to think that if we will only learn to leave him in his happy obscurity and forbear to "rake up the ashes of his sinful dust" we shall do a good work for Freemasonry and morality. I should not speak so strongly did I not feel so, and as nothing is so bad in my opinion when we are affecting to write history as to relapse into untenable and paradoxical traditions, I enter my " caveat " as to Bro. Mackenzie's estimate of Cagliostro's real character in the Freemason, with all possible respect to Bro. Mackenzie's talents and opinions.

I am, dear Bro. Kenning,
THE EDITOR OF YOUR "MASONIC CYCLOPÆDIA."
P.S.—Has Bro. Mackenzie read the article Cagliostro in the "Allgemeines Handbuch?"

STEWARDS' UNPAID FEES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."
Dear Sir and Brother,—
No true Mason could read your leader in June 14th Freemason without a feeling of humiliation, that such a state of chronic indebtedness could exist amongst those whose actions are said to be "regulated by Divine precepts," one of which plainly says, "Owe no man anything."

As no suggestion or remedy appeared in this week's paper with reference to this "disagreeable subject," I would suggest that certificate of Stewardship for charity jewel, illuminated testimonial, and clasps for two Stewardships be withheld from brethren who have not paid all the requisite fees.

The two first are at present attainable by the Secretary's signature, testifying that the applicant has so served, but with no reference to paid up fees—let this condition in future be included; then, as to the third, that coveted array of clasps is to be had by merely applying and paying for it at a jeweller's.

Payment of fees should also be a condition without which no clasp could be obtainable.

I remain, yours fraternally,
VICE-PRES. & STEWARD TO BOYS' FESTIVAL, 1879.

OLD MASONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."
Dear Sir and Brother,—

Referring to Bro. Coombe's letter in your paper of May 17th, I think he will admit that Bro. Norris, born in 1788 and initiated in 1812, is not the oldest Mason. James Racleff, of Portland, Maine, was born in Bristol, Maine, November 9, 1779, and will, therefore, be a century old next November. He was initiated in Ancient Landmark Lodge, in this city, in 1808, four years before Bro. Norris. He was a master mason until he retired with a competence, is now in excellent health and spirits, and reads Masonic papers with interest. But there are five older Masons than he in this country, unless some of them have died since I have heard from them, viz., Bro. Capt. John Knight, Manchester, Mass., initiated 1801.
" Marcus Richardson, Bangor, Me., initiated 1802.
" Col. A. Stone Harmer, Marietta, Ohio, initiated 1803.
" Col. Nathan Huntson, Unity, N.H., initiated 1803.
" James Franklin, Chase, Nantucket, initiated 1807.
The list given by Bro. Coombe of American Masons would none of them be classed among the "Fathers," as we could make up a list of hundreds ranging from 1812 to 1817.

Our really old Mason was Bro. Peter Hammond, of Geneseo, Illinois, who died April 9th, 1878, on his 102nd birthday. He was born in 1776 and initiated in 1799.
Fraternally yours,
STEPHEN BERRY.

Portland, Maine, U.S.A.,
June 6th, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."
Dear Sir and Brother,—

You will be glad to hear the enclosed motions of mine were proposed by me at the Prov. Grand Lodge yesterday, and carried unanimously.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
R. THORPE, I.P.M. 588, P.G. Pursuivant.
30th June, 1879.

BENEVOLENT FUND RULES.

1. That in order to extend the operations of the Prov. Benevolent Fund in a more specific manner than at present particularised, the following be inserted in Rule 1 of the Benevolent Fund Rules after the word "children:"

Rule 1. This fund shall be called "The Masonic Benevolent Fund of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lincolnshire, established for granting temporary relief to aged, distressed or necessitous brethren of this province or their indigent widows and children, as well as for making grants to assist in the education of their children if considered requisite, and shall be restricted to purposes of Masonic benevolence either of a 'local' character or in connection with the general Charities of the Order."

PROVINCIAL GRAND BYE LAWS.

Rule XV. Every lodge in the province shall pay to the Provincial Grand Lodge the sum of one shilling per annum for each contributing member, and a further sum of three-pence per quarter to the Benevolent Fund.

QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."
Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to solicit opinions on the following subject, viz., what should be the correct costume of the P.G.C. when preaching before the Provincial Grand Lodge?

It seems to me that (apart from his Masonic clothing) he ought to preach in his full dress academical robes, i.e., cassock (bands if an M.A.) and the gown and hood of his degree. I think this the most dignified and correct costume.

Let us remember that he is preaching, not as a mere rector, or vicar in his parish church, but as a Mason to Masons, and this at the Provincial Grand Lodge, which, opened in due form prior to adjourning to church, is not yet closed.

The sermon then may be considered a part of the lodge business, and the P.G.C. should consider himself as still in lodge, in which he and all of us can be admitted only when "properly clothed." Now the P.G.C. cannot be said to be properly clothed if he conceals his apron under a surplice.

Yours fraternally,

TASTE AND DISCIPLINE.

[We agree with our correspondent in general, but where the rule of the Church is to preach in a surplice, as in a cathedral, he must do so.—Ed.]

CONSECRATION OF THE CLAPHAM LODGE, NO. 1818.

The Clapham Lodge, No. 1818, was consecrated on Tuesday last, at the Alexandra Hotel, Clapham Common, by Bro. James Terry, P.P.J.G.W. Herts, who was assisted by Bros. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., as Chaplain; William Clarke, Prov. G.D.C. Suffolk, as D.C.; H. G. Buss, Assistant G. Sec., as S.W.; J. Morrell, P.P.G. Sup. of Works Durham, as J.W.; A. R. Cranch, 1216, as I.G.; W. Worrell, P.M. 766, as Secretary. The complete list of brethren present on the occasion comprised the following names: Bros. Louis Hirsch, Dr. C. T. Pearce, A. Fairlie, R. A. Fairlie, W. Worrell, A. Pocock, Wm. Carlton Hale, R. Clay Sudlow, J. Morrell, P.M. 111, P.P.G.S. of Works Durham; A. R. Cranch, 1216; F. H. Cozens, 1216; A. Hubbard, 813; G. J. Wright, 1236; W. Clarke, 114, P.G.D.C. Suffolk; H. Ashton, 1185; R. J. Simpson, 10, P.G. Chaplain; H. Sadler, G. Tyler; H. G. Buss, Asst. G. Sec.; J. Terry, P.G.J.W. Herts; F. Mead, P.M. Ionic; J. H. Watts, P.M. 1201; John Dixon, P.M. 87; G. E. Gooding, 171; A. G. Taylor, P.M. 1201; L. D. Berry, P.M. 179; W. W. Morgan, jun., 1285; E. J. Hart, P.M. 1201; G. Gordon Johnston, P.M. 1402; and H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason).

After the lodge had been opened in the Three Degrees, Bro. Terry announced the granting of the warrant for the lodge by the Prince of Wales, and the appointment of himself (Bro. Terry) as the Consecrating Officer, and directed Bro. Worrell to read the petition and warrant. This having been done, and the other preliminaries having been observed, Bro. Terry called upon Bro. Simpson to deliver the oration.

Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.D., in delivering the oration, said: Worshipful acting Master and Brethren, I have accepted the very high and honourable position which Bro. Worrell and the Worshipful Master designate of this lodge invited me to take, but I have felt conscious of having very little time or thought at my disposal to lay before you anything worthy of such an occasion as this. At the same time, such remarks as may occur to me I am sure you will receive with that indulgence common among Masons. On several occasions when it has been my good fortune to stand in a similar position the name of a lodge has usually formed a very happy suggestive idea of the line of thought which I have ventured to lay before the brethren. On the present occasion, however, we have but the name of a very old and well known suburb of London and I was a little at a loss at first to know on what subject I should base my few remarks to the brethren. I remember about this place are associated many of those of old time who valued that volume of the Sacred Law which we look upon as the foundation stone of our great building, and I considered whether we could not find in that great repertory of truth some few lines of thought which might indicate good lessons for you and for myself, and I reviewed this morning as I was coming along to those ideas that are put forward by one of the minor prophets which seem to me to indicate very remarkably the three great lines on which Masonry rests—"to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly in our God." Brethren, I need scarcely say to you that in ancient times among the pagan nations of Greece and Rome the virtue of justice was held up in high esteem, as, perhaps, the highest quality and characteristic of reasonable men; and it has lost none of its lustre under late dispensations and in more modern times. There cannot be a doubt, whether in our homes, in Masonry, or in the world in general, that cultivation of certain habits of thought, which shall enable us to adjust rightly and equally all matters, great or trivial, that may be brought before us, is not only a virtue of high regard, but also tends most materially to bring about that peace and goodwill among men which we Masons profess to admire and observe. In the present day, among especially those from whom probably a large number of my brethren present are to be found, I mean the great commercial land of England, that virtue holds a very high place; and it is a sad reflection that, amidst all the education of the present day, amidst the great amount of culture in the higher lines of thought which have been introduced in modern times, we should find an absence of that good old principle of justice and truth which distinguished men in former days with much less light than we possess, and which, unhappily, has brought about in the present day not only much misery upon homes, but has brought much shame upon many men whose reputation stood high among their fellows. As Masons, therefore, as well as men, as those who preside over homes or are members of homes, I would say that there is scarcely any quality, perhaps, except those that shall presently allude to, which is so valuable in commerce in family, and in Masonic life as a sense of justice, or, other words, of practising that good old rule, which we can never hear too often or practise too much—I mean “to do to others as we should wish to be done by.” But though the heathen philosophers of ancient times knew much about justice, and practised it too, they knew comparatively little of that heavenly, that Divine virtue, which the prophet alludes to in the next passage—“to love mercy.” It was reserved for another era and a brighter time to have that sweet angel from heaven revealed to men; from the cold and stern precepts of a dry philosophy, man was enabled to proceed to that most glorious attribute of Divinity—I mean mercy or charity; and I need scarcely here dilate, to use the words of our ritual, upon that virtue. Brethren, we are quite assured of this, that there is nothing that can more tend to cement men, whether differing in political or religious life, together in the bonds of common brotherhood than that charity, or mercy, or brotherly love, which is, as you know, foremost upon all the pages of our history as Masons, and I hope written upon our hearts as men. Our noble and glorious Charities stand out in broad relief as showing that we Masons wish to practise the virtue we profess to admire, and though there be, as I hold there are, many opportunities still of making those Charities still grander as Masonic landmarks than they are, and practising justice, and still adding mercy, still I can never reflect upon those Charities or speak of them in the outer world without a flow of conscious satisfaction and thankfulness, and I will not add pride, that the Freemasons of England have Charities which can bear comparison with any in this great country, so celebrated for similar institutions, and that the amount of money raised by those indefatigable men who are especially interested in those Charities, so well backed up as their efforts are by the liberality of true hearts among our brethren—that those Charities, I say, are at once an ornament to our Order and a blessing to many a poor distressed Mason. But, brethren, if justice and mercy alone were to be looked upon as the landmarks of a Mason, we should be but “poor indeed,” nay, we should seem to lack that motive power, that great centre from which these blessings proceed; for I hold it that, as we must gather our ideas of a Supreme Being from His glorious works, and from our own inner consciousness, we must conclude because we admire and love what is just, admire and love what is charitable, therefore the Great Being from whom we proceeded must himself be the fountain of all justice, the fount of all benevolence; so we make a way for ourselves up the ladder till we reach God himself; and God is love, and God is justice; and it is clear that with such a God, so just, so good, so holy, so powerful, it is at once our duty, and I may say our very instinct, to “walk humbly with Him.” The pride of man too often raises up barriers against his better feelings finding their way to God. The world that we are engaged in, so full of complex matters of various kinds, in business and in pleasure, too often intercepts our clear vision in looking upon our God, and often men are tempted, by reason of their intellect and the education with which God has been pleased to bless them, to throw out doubts even as to His existence, to say nothing of those Divine attributes which He has planted even in their own hearts; and, therefore, it grieves us, as Masons, when we find that, whether in other nations or even among ourselves, there may be found perverse men who will raise puny hands against the Great Architect of their own being. Let us cultivate, brethren, especially in the present day, a pious spirit, one deeply submissive to the true God who made all, and thus, brethren, shall we be led more and more along the pathway of safety till we reach the Grand Lodge above. Certain I am that Freemasonry does give us between our home and the world a very happy resting place to consider these blessed truths, for when we come from our homes into the world we know that there are many things which lead us away from such thoughts. If, therefore, we made a good use of our Masonry—if we make a good use of our glorious ritual, if we make a good use of the noblest sentiments that man can feel, either to his fellows or to his God—then I say Masonry may be instrumental in doing us a great deal of good, in making us happier men, and of imprinting upon our hearts those three great truths—that we should do justly, that we should love mercy, and that we should walk humbly with our God. I humbly pray that these three great truths may be implanted upon your hearts and mine, and may help the Clapham Lodge to be illustrious among its fellows, of leading now the Masons of this district to that high eminence in our Order to which many of our recent lodges have attained; and, above all, that it may lead us to be ready for our departure from these tents of time until we shall land on the shores of an eternal future.

The lodge was then formally consecrated, Bros. F. H. Cozens, H. Ashton, A. Hubbard, and G. T. Carter performing the musical portion of the ceremony. When the lodge had been dedicated Bro. Terry installed Bro. Louis Hirsch as W.M., and the following brethren were invested as Officers:—Bros. Dr. Charles T. Pearce, S.W.; Archibald Fairlie, J.W.; Robert F. Fairlie, Treasurer; William Worrell, Secretary; Alfred Pocock, S.D.; Wm. Carlton Hale, J.D.; R. Clay Sudlow, I.G.; and Reinhardt, Tyler.

Bro. Terry delivered the address to the Master; Bro. Clarke addressed the Wardens; and Dr. Dixon, the brethren of the lodge. In a very complimentary speech Bro. Louis Hirsch proposed the thanks of the lodge to the Consecrating Officers, and the honour of membership. The S.W. seconded the proposition, which was unanimously carried, and Bro. Terry acknowledged the compliment. A long list of intending initiates and joining members was read by Bro. Worrell, after which lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet.

The first toast given by the W.M. was that of “The Queen and the Craft.” No body of Englishmen welcomed this toast with more loyalty and greater warmth than our ancient and honourable fraternity, and he, therefore, called upon the brethren to drink to the long life and happiness of Her Majesty in a bumper. This was followed by the National Anthem. In giving “The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales,” Bro. Hirsch alluded to the excellences of that brother, and pointed out the benefits derived by Masons in having him at the head of affairs. The period during which His Royal Highness had ruled over the Craft had been one of continued progress, and he trusted that such might long continue. With the toast the W.M. coupled that of “The Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family.” The toast of “The Pro G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon,” was always received in Masonic assemblies with great favour. The earl is well known as one of the most energetic Freemasons in England. That of “Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past,” followed. The W.M. said the Freemasons of this country have every reason to be thankful to the Grand Officers for the great interest they take in promoting the welfare of the Craft. With this toast were coupled the names of Bros. Simpson and Buss. Bro. Simpson tendered the thanks of the Grand Officers for the honour that had been paid them. For himself he was extremely gratified at the way in which he had been received. Masonic lodges owed, as did most other things in this life, much of their prosperity to a good start. He could compliment the brethren on the beginning they had made in choosing Bro. Louis Hirsch as their first Master, and felt sure it could have but one result. He then proceeded to dilate on what he was pleased to term his hobby—the Charities. Our reverend brother’s peculiar ideas on this subject are well known, and it is equally well known that they are antagonistic to the views of the Craft at large; it will not, therefore, be surprising to know that the brethren did not express concurrence therewith. In fact, some disapprobation was expressed in consequence of our brother advocating the attendance of members at the u-Masonic meeting of the Charity Organisation Society at the very hour that a really Masonic gathering was to take place at the Alexandra Palace in aid of the funds of our Boys’ School.

Bro. Buss followed, and paid a compliment to the brethren now at the head of Masonic affairs. He expressed the pleasure he felt at having been able to take a part in the consecration of the lodge, which he hoped would have a prosperous career.

Bro. James Terry, in the absence of any Past Master, proposed “The Health of the W.M.,” detailing his varied labours on behalf of the Craft and its members, but particularly in the cause of Charity. He had for some time past given a prize to the Girls’ School for the best knowledge of the German language, and in other ways supported our Institutions. His position as first W.M. of the lodge was far from easy. It was necessary for him to consolidate the interests of all the brethren who had united with him in the foundation of the lodge and generally lay down plans of operation for the future. He felt assured that every duty would be discharged in the most satisfactory manner, and that the heads of our Order would never have occasion to regret having granted a warrant to Bro. Hirsch and his colleagues.

The W.M. having thanked those present for their hearty reception, assured them that no effort on his part should be spared to ensure the proper discharge of the duties entrusted to him. It would ever be his endeavour to promote the happiness and interests of the members, and he trusted that, at the expiration of his year of office, he might hand the warrant of the lodge to his successor pure and unsullied. He next called upon the brethren to honour the toast of “The Consecrating Officers.” The members of the Clapham Lodge had, he considered, every reason to be deeply grateful to Bro. Terry, and those who had assisted him in the ceremony of the day. He felt personally greatly indebted to them for their kind advice, generous expressions, and hearty co-operation.

Bro. Terry replied. He was pleased to learn that in the discharge of their duties the Consecrating Officers had given satisfaction. They were amply repaid for the little trouble they had gone to by receiving such hearty thanks as had been accorded both in lodge and at the banquet table. If at any future time there was anything they could do to further the interests of the lodge, they would be only too pleased to do it.

The toast of “The Visitors” followed.

The Master was pleased to see so many distinguished brethren present, but most sincerely regretted that no member of the Royal Leopold Lodge, which had so kindly recommended the warrant for their own, were among them. He felt he need hardly assure the guests that they were most heartily welcome, nor that it would give the members great pleasure to see them again at one or the other of their meetings, when they might have an opportunity of judging how the members were able to perform the work of a lodge.

Bro. J. Morrell replied.

The W.M. now proposed “Prosperity to the Masonic Charities,” advising those who had never visited our institutions to go and see for themselves what good was being done. He trusted the Masonic Charitable Institutions would long be considered worthy of the support of the Order, and was sure that the brethren of the Clapham Lodge would make every effort to promote their interests. As a substantial proof of this he was pleased to announce that it was the wish of the lodge that he should represent them as a Steward at the next festival of the Benevolent Institution, on which occasion he hoped to take up a substantial amount.

Bro. J. Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, replied. In the course of his speech he referred to the remarks made by Rev. Bro. Simpson. He assured the brethren that very much was required of the Craft, more, in fact, than they had done in the past. He hoped that the exertions of the W.M. would be the means of adding considerably to the fund next year, and that on many occasions the brethren of the Clapham Lodge would show the true Masonic spirit of Charity.

With great pleasure the W.M. rose to propose “The Health of the Officers.” Not the least part of the satisfaction he felt at the day’s proceedings was the knowledge that he was supported by earnest and zealous officers, brethren who had undertaken, with himself, the arduous duties and great responsibilities of bringing the lodge into life. He felt assured the officers would do all in their power to cement the ties of brotherhood by their good working and understanding of our beautiful rites and ceremonies, and thereby promulgate the great truths of Freemasonry, to the glory of God and benefit of our fellow creatures. For the assistance he had received from each of the founders he desired to tender his best thanks. He specially referred to the way in which Bro. Worrell had fulfilled the duties of Secretary, and hoped the lodge would have his assistance for many years.

Bro. S.W. replied, tendering the thanks of his fellows for the reception that had been accorded them. He was a young Mason, but hoped that he should prove himself efficient in the duties required of him.

Bro. J.W. followed. He felt that he could not have done better than join the brethren who had laid the foundation of this lodge, and hoped he might be spared to prove that he was worthy of the position that had been accorded him.

Bro. Worrell assured the brethren that he should endeavour to carry out the business of his office in such a way as would ensure their approval. He complimented the Master and his assistants on the way in which the duties had been performed. One would have thought that all the officers were Past Masters, or, at least, brethren who had served their respective offices before, but when they came to know that they were all new to the work he considered that especial praise was due. He referred to the many previous applications which had been made for a lodge for the district, all of which, he said, had been refused, so that he considered Grand Lodge must have a good opinion of the petitioners to whom they had granted the warrant under which the meeting of the day had been held.

Bro. Sudlow also replied.

The W.M. was about to rise and pay the honours of a special toast to the originator of the Clapham Lodge (Bro. Alfred Pocock), who is highly esteemed by the founders, and greatly valued by the W.M., but the exigencies of the train service precluded the possibility of the visitors remaining, consequently Bro. Reinhardt, the Tyler, was summoned, and gave the usual closing toast.

CONSECRATION OF THE MARQUIS OF DALHOUSIE CHAPTER, No. 1159.

The new chapter attached to the Marquis of Dalhousie Lodge, No. 1159, was consecrated on the 19th inst. at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden-square. The Consecrating Officer was Comp. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, Past Grand Principal Sojourner, who was assisted by Comp. H. D. Sandeman, Past Grand Superintendent Bengal, as H.; Comp. the Rev. John Studholme Brownrigg, Past Grand Assistant Sojourner, as J.; Comp. R. W. H. Giddy, Grand Superintendent Griqualand, as Director of Ceremonies; and Comp. John Read, as Organist.

The other companions present on the occasion were Comps. Capt. N. G. Philips, P.G.S.N.; S. Rawson, P.G. Supt. China; Hyde Clarke, Hyde Pullen, Thomas Fenn, J. M. P. Montagu, G. Simmonds, Lord Alfred Churchill, S. Leith Tomkins, P.G.S.S.; Randolph Glover, W. M. Venn, and Octavius Hansard.

After the chapter had been opened, and the petition and charter had been read by Comp. Giddy, Col. Shadwell Clerke called upon the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg to deliver the oration, whereupon

The Rev. J. S. Brownrigg said: Companions, Masonry is a progressive science. Is this, companions, a truth to which we hold fast? Do we understand and accept it in its only true meaning? We must advance in Masonic knowledge—and Masonry itself, our Craft, must not stand still, but must be always advancing into truer and fuller light. As the operative Mason of old was not content with the flint axe, but accepted and used the square, the level, and the plumb rule, when those implements of labour came to his hand; and as also the operative Mason of the present day uses with advantage to his work every means that the inventions of a high civilisation put within his reach—so must we as speculative Masons be ready to use means, and to do work, suitable and useful to the times in which we live. But do not mistake me here. I am in no way advocating any abandonment of our ancient landmarks, or any disturbance of our old foundations, but I am urging a constant progression in the science of which those landmarks are the safeguard. I am urging the erection of a fair structure upon those old foundations. It is our duty not merely to keep our Craft as it was but also to make it useful for the present time. If Masonry is not practically useful for the present time it is a mere relic of a bygone age—an archaeological curiosity—interesting and harmless, but useless. Companions, I claim for Masonry a higher position. I hold that the Craft is and ought to be a practical living influence for good, and not a mere lifeless memory of the past. Our chapters and our lodges ought to be something more than meetings for the careful and accurate rendering of impressive ceremonies. We must in the time present leave our mark on the outside world, as our ancient brethren left theirs in the time past. They lived and worked not merely for themselves and their own Craft, but for all whom they could influence for good. Within the limits of the time allowed me I cannot treat fully this important aspect of our duties. I can only offer one or two practical ways in which we may try humbly to do some useful work. We profess "brotherly love." Might we not, as a body, do something towards teaching forbearance? We live in times when men feel strongly and deeply, and these strong and deep feelings lead them to speak and act strongly. Any man who is worth anything is sure to have strong and deep feelings, which will bring him into antagonism with his fellow men. Does "brotherly love" mean the sacrifice of these feelings, the purchase of peace at the cost of principle? Surely not! Within the lodge or chapter even the discussion of heating subjects is forbidden, but when we pass the Janitor's sword and return to the outside world, we return to the heat and clamour of conflicting opinions on many vital subjects. May we not then remember that within our Masonic walls we have learnt to know and honour some who, on most vital and important subjects, are entirely at variance with us? and may we not so learn to give our adversaries credit for the same honesty of purpose which we so hotly claim for ourselves? If Masonry will do something to soothe the unwholesome heat of our daily differences of opinion it will, indeed, leave its mark for good on time present. We profess to practise "relief." Are our Charities to be merely selfish? I would not say one word to hinder any Masonic body from giving the most liberal support to our Masonic Charities. Give a liberal and give an intelligent support to every Masonic charity; give your means, and you who can spare it, your time also. Do what you can towards making them practically useful. Take an interest in the management of your Charities, and do not delegate to the few what is the duty of all. But, further, remember that true charity, if it begins, does not stop at home: be ready and forward to advance any good work. I rejoice to think of those two life boats, which so long as the waves beat against the English shore will be monuments of the unselfishness of the thanksgiving of the English Grand Lodge. I rejoice to think that in the restoration of one of our finest old English churches, St. Alban's Abbey, many Masonic bodies are now taking their proper part. It would, I think, be an excellent plan for every lodge and chapter to make for itself a rule to support yearly at least one good work, which was not distinctly a Masonic work. We profess "truth." Truth is the opposite of all evil and vice. Are there no vices and evils of the present day against which as Masons we may set our faces? Let me give you one as an instance of what we might do. Might not every lodge and chapter make it clearly understood that not merely during labour, but also at refreshment, the conversation of a Mason should be pure and holy? I confess that I do think it a scandal that after the most solemn ceremony, impressively delivered, and listened to with appreciation in lodge or chapter, the same lips, at the banquet table half an hour later, should be ready to tell, and the same ears so ready to listen, to either an impure story or song. I hope you will not think (though I am never ashamed of my profession) that I am speaking merely as a clergyman. I am speaking as a Mason who desires a greater consistency between the words at labour and the conversation and songs which sometimes take place at refreshment. Pardon me if I have spoken strongly on a delicate question. Companions, I have embarked upon an aspect of our Craft which I cannot treat properly in a short oration. I could multiply indefinitely examples of means whereby Masonry might be ever finding new opportunities of usefulness in the time present. I shall have answered my purpose if I have confirmed any companion in the conviction that Masonry may be a living and not a dead power. When those secrets which we sometimes seek for darkly, which we sometimes reverence as we gaze on them surrounded by mystic symbols, which at the best we adore from afar—when those secrets shall have their end in the unveiled presence of our God—then it will be a very high honour if our Craft is known to be one, not the only one, not even the principal one, but one of the scaffoldings, whereby some useful work has been done for the Great Architect of the Universe.

The ritual for the consecration of a chapter was then most impressively observed, and the chapter was formally dedicated to the purposes of Royal Arch Masonry. Comp. H. Trueman Wood was installed by Col. Shadwell Clerke in the chairs of J., H., and Z.; Comp. Cheston was installed as J. and H.; and Comp. Peter Lund Simmonds, being already an installed Third Principal, was placed in the chair of J. The office of S.E. was conferred on Comp. Read; the office of S.N. on Comp. Moxon; and the office of P.S. on Comp. Venn.

The M.E.Z., before the chapter was closed, proposed that the chapter should record on its minutes the feeling of gratification at the way in which the chapter had been started, on what they hoped would prove a prosperous career. He was sure it would be impossible for any chapter to have begun its career under more favourable circumstances than had the Marquis of Dalhousie Chapter, owing to the kindly help of those three companions, Col. Shadwell Clerke, H. D. Sandeman, and Rev. J. S. Brownrigg. Speaking for himself and Comps. Cheston and Simmonds, H. and J., he could assure the Consecrating Officers that the companions who were present had been deeply impressed, as they had rarely been before during the whole of their Masonic career, with the beautiful way in which the ceremony had been rendered. It was due to those companions that he should mention that other companions would have been present who were petitioners for the charter, but one was compelled to be absent on account of illness, another by a family affliction, and another through a very pressing emergency. Those, however, who were present would record their feelings of obligation to the Consecrating Officers for the treat which had been given that evening.

Comp. Cheston, H., seconded the motion, which was then put and carried.

Comp. Col. Shadwell Clerke, in acknowledging the vote, said, on behalf of himself and the other Consecrating Officers, that it had given them all great pleasure to have had the opportunity of assisting in the establishment of the new chapter, to which they all wished every possible success.

After a long list of brethren intending to be exalted in the chapter, and of companions who were candidates for joining, had been read, the three Principals and two Scribes were appointed a Committee to frame the bye-laws, and the chapter was then closed. The companions then had an opportunity of inspecting the valuable library and collection of curiosities in the possession of the Supreme Council. Afterwards they proceeded to the Café Royal, where a choice banquet was provided. The usual Royal Arch toasts followed.

The toast of "The Queen and Royal Arch Masonry" having been proposed and honoured, the M.E.Z. gave that of "The G.Z. of the Order, the Pro. Z., G.H., G.J., and the rest of the Grand Officers." In doing so he said all the companions knew how well the Prince of Wales devoted himself to the duties of his office, and how well he was supported by the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, and Lord De Tabley. He could not commend this toast better to the attention of the companions than by coupling with it the name of one who was not only the senior member of Grand Chapter present, but also a great friend of his own, Comp. S. Rawson, Past District Grand Superintendent of China. There were other distinguished members of Grand Chapter present; indeed, the chapter had been singularly fortunate in having the assistance of so many members of Grand Chapter in its consecration. Besides Comps. Col. Shadwell Clerke, Sandeman, Brownrigg, and Giddy, there were Comp. Tomkins, and another personal friend, Comp. Hyde Clarke, and Comp. Thomas Fenn, who was the first to place him (the M.E.Z.) in the chair of a lodge. Then there was Comp. Hyde Pullen, who was well-known to all Masons who belonged to what were called "the higher degrees."

Comp. S. Rawson replied by saying that it was not often he rose with pleasure to return thanks, because he always felt that he failed in eloquence, and therefore he wished to shirk the responsibility as much as he could. Still on the present occasion it was a great pleasure to return thanks. He cordially thanked the companions for the compliment paid to the Grand Principals, and the Grand Officers, Present and Past, and, perhaps, he ought to sit down having said this; but he could not do so without expressing the wish, which he was sure was heartily participated in by those who surrounded him, for the success of the Dalhousie Chapter and its Principals. He cordially wished them a long career of happiness as the founders of this chapter, to which he wished the greatest prosperity.

The M.E.Z. next proposed "The Health of the Consecrating Officers." He did not like to assume to himself any great Masonic experience, but he must say that among the ceremonies which it had been his pleasure or his duty to attend during his Masonic career, he did not think there were any he was so impressed with as he had been with that he had witnessed that day. He was afraid that too great a task had been imposed on the Consecrating Officers of a chapter, because every one of the three Principals had to be installed. Referring to the installation of the First Principal he said that all the companions who were privileged to witness that ceremony would agree that it was difficult for any one to have performed it better than Col. Clerke had performed it. He was ably assisted to by Comps. Sandeman and Brownrigg. Many of the companions had had experience of the way in which Comp. Sandeman did his work. It had never been his (the M.E.Z.'s) good fortune to see Comp. Brownrigg perform Masonic work before, but he had been much delighted with it, and it had never been his lot to hear so perfect a piece of Masonic eloquence as the oration he delivered. He could not impose on all these companions the task of responding to the toast, and so he thought it would be best to call on their old friend Col. Clerke to answer on the part of all. It would be improper if he were to omit to mention the name of Comp. Giddy as a Consecrating Officer, for he hardly knew how they would have got on if they had not had him to perform the duties of D.C. It seemed to him, watching the ceremony as well as he could, that he was largely indebted to Comp. Giddy for the kind way in which he put each one of the Three Principals through their work, and prompted them through the parts, which till then they knew nothing of, in the impressive and elaborate ceremony they had to go through. The chapter would not forget the very beautiful way in which it had that day started on its career.

Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, in reply, said he thanked the companions, both in his own name and in the names of his colleagues, for the kind and complimentary way in which the toast had been proposed and received. He was sorry the lot had fallen on him to respond for his companions, because he was surrounded by many more eloquent companions, and the gift of oratory was not his, which was the misfortune of those who had drunk the toast. For the kind expressions used he could but thank the M.E.Z. He (Col. Shadwell Clerke) and Comps. Sandeman, Brownrigg, and Giddy were both pleased and gratified at being permitted to take part in the consecration and installation ceremonies that day in the Marquis of Dalhousie Chapter. He could truly say that he could have done very little indeed without the help of the distinguished companions who had assisted him, and more especially that of the Rev. the Third Principal, Comp. Brownrigg. The companions would all agree that his address was of the most charming nature; it impressed them very deeply, and they were greatly indebted to him for having contributed so materially to the ceremony over which he (Comp. Shadwell Clerke) was presiding for the time being. He and Comps. Sandeman, Brownrigg, and Giddy were very proud of having been the surgeons-acoucheur at the birth of the new chapter. They hoped that the baby would be a thriving one, and would grow up a good child, and when it had passed the days of wet-nursing they would be happy to look on at the fountain, and to celebrate its coming of age. Having said this much, he would ask the companions to direct their attention to another subject, and drink the First Principal's health. Comp. Wood was a companion who stood on his intrinsic merits. All the companions knew his Masonic career, and knew that the chapter could not have been entrusted to the keeping of better or abler hands. He believed the chapter would go on and prosper. Of course, some time must elapse before a chapter could attain to any position in the Order; but he was sure that in due time the Marquis of Dalhousie Chapter would get into that position which it would fully deserve. As for the Second and Third Principals, he had not met them before, but the tongue of good report had been spoken in their favour, and if they had not been good men and good Masons they would not have been selected to fill the high offices they now occupied. Col. Clerke concluded by proposing "The Three Principals, and Success to the Marquis of Dalhousie Chapter, No. 1159."

The M.E.Z., responding, said he ought not to be without some feelings of pride that he had ventured on the task of establishing a new chapter. They had been fortunate in the lodge with which this chapter was connected. It had worked up from a somewhat feeble and weak position into such a state that it could now run alone, and it would before long take a respectable position in the Craft. After some thought and consideration, many of the brethren, who were young and eager Masons, anxious to take part in the higher degrees of the Order, expressed their wish that a chapter should be founded, and after some careful deliberation it was determined that they might venture on this experiment. They had ventured on it, and he thought as far as it had gone they had reason to anticipate a bright and prosperous future. It, unfortunately, had happened that some companions had not been able to be present, one of them from a misfortune, which they all deeply deplored. It was but due at the present moment that they should express their thanks for the kindly way in which they had been received, not only by those members of the Supreme Council who had been so good as to assist in consecrating the chapter and start it on its career, but also to the Supreme Council themselves, for the ready way in which they accepted the proposal that the chapter should meet at Golden-square. Knowing what little he did of the way in which those higher degrees were worked, and the influence they had on Masonry generally, he thought it was a very fortunate thing for such a chapter as the Marquis of Dalhousie to be permitted to start in some degree under the wing of this, almost the greatest of all Masonic associations; and he thought it augured most favourably for this chapter that it had been supported by these distinguished Masons, and that so many of them should have come down to assist at the beginning. He sincerely trusted that wishes so kindly expressed by Col. Clerke should be fulfilled, and for himself and his companions he could say that nothing should be wanting on their part to make the chapter worthy of the distinguished way in which it had been consecrated.

The M.E.Z. next proposed "The Visitors." He had named so many in previous toasts that he had almost taken all those who were present, but he thought he should do right in coupling with this toast the name of Lord Alfred Churchill, whom he had had the honour of being associated with outside the Craft; but it was only recently he had found that his merits were added to by his being not only a Mason, but a Royal Arch Mason. There were also two other old friends present whom he was very happy to see, Comps. Glover and Octavius Hansard.

Lord Alfred Churchill, in reply, said he felt very deeply the kind expressions which had fallen from the M.E.Z. Although he could claim some years' standing in the Craft and Arch, it had been his misfortune, not his fault, to have neglected following up the noble Craft as he ought. He must admit he was rather rusty in the mysteries. It was now some thirty-one years since he took the Royal Arch Degree in Ireland. He was quartered at that time with his regiment in Kilkenny, and from that time to this, with one exception in Washington, four years ago, he had not entered a lodge. He had, however, much enjoyed and been deeply interested in the ceremonies that day. The admirable manner in which everything had been conducted had been a lesson to him which he should never forget. He felt very much edified indeed by what he had seen and what he had participated in. The companions were singularly fortunate in having for the First Principal of their chapter Excellent Comp. Wood. It was his (Lord Churchill's) peculiar good fortune to have been associated with him for some years in another sphere, and everything he had seen of his conduct had shown that he managed affairs with great ability and propriety. In what had been said by other companions in wishing success and prosperity to the Marquis of Dalhousie Chapter he heartily concurred.

This was the last speech of the evening, and the companions thereupon separated.

The annual summer entertainment of the annuitants of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution will take place at Croydon on Tuesday next. The South Eastern Railway will attach a special second-class carriage to the ordinary 3.28 (Charing Cross), 3.38 (Cannon-street) train, for the convenience of the brethren and ladies who will visit the Institution.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—During piercing winds and excessive variations of temperature every one is more or less liable to internal and external disease. Throat, chest, liver, bowels, kidneys, and skin all suffer in some degree, and may be relieved by rubbing in this Ointment, aided by proper doses of the Pills, for administering which full directions accompany each box; in truth, anyone who thoroughly masters Holloway's "instructions" will, in remedying disease, exchange the labour of an hour for the profit of a lifetime. All bronchial, pulmonary, and throat disorders require that the Ointment should be thoroughly well rubbed upon the skin twice a day with great regularity, considerable briskness, and much persistence.—[ADVT.]

Every lodge in the province save one, Isle of Axholme Lodge, No. 1482, Epworth, was represented, 197 brethren having signed the attendance sheets.

The proceedings of the day commenced as early as 9.30 a.m., when the P.G. Charity Committee met for the purpose of selecting the most eligible candidate out of four boys to receive the support of the province during the ensuing year. A very large majority of the Committee were in favour of William Black, of Grimsby, who was vigorously supported by Bros. Sutcliffe and Robinson, his proposers, who was consequently declared elected to receive the full benefit of the voting power of the province, and a strong desire was shown to obtain the admission of two other boys by purchase.

Some fear having been expressed by the supporters of little Black that in the event of the other boys obtaining their admission by purchase their candidate would be in a worse position than he would have been without the voting power of the province, Bro. Robinson, 792, P.P.G.J.D., asked what would be the result if Black were not elected next October.

The reply of Bro. Radley, 838, the esteemed Secretary of the P.G. Charity Committee, was characteristic of his determination and devotion to Freemasonry, and was acknowledged by the brethren with the warmest applause. He said, "If I say Black goes in next October, he will go in."

The report of the last year showed that the Province of Lincolnshire had a fair share of the benefits arising out of the three central Charities, the reports from both Boys' and Girls' Schools being very satisfactory, one boy, Wellington, having taken honours last December at the Cambridge Middle Class Examination, while the Committee were glad to say that at the last election of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, Henry Wardale, 792, Tyler, had been successful in gaining admission.

The report was adopted, and ordered to be presented to Provincial Grand Lodge for confirmation.

At 10.30 the Committee of the P.G.L. Fund of Benevolence were called together, Bro. W. H. Smyth, R.W.P.G.M., in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting held at Grimsby, the 11th July, 1878, were then read and confirmed. The Treasurer's accounts showed a sum of £600 now invested on freehold security, and a balance in hand of £166 18s.

On the proposition of Bro. E. Locock, W.D.P.G.M., seconded by Bro. H. Watson, 297, P.G. Reg., the accounts were adopted. A petition was presented by the Lindsey Lodge, 712, on behalf of Bro. Wm. Somerton, who for many years had been in a very weak state of health, and often incapacitated for business. On the proposition of Bro. Radley, 838, P.G. Charity Sec., seconded by Bro. C. M. Nesbitt, P.G. Treas., the sum of £20 was unanimously awarded.

Proposed from the chair at the instigation of Bro. R. Thorpe, I.P.M. 588, "That in order to extend the operations of Prov. Grand Lodge Fund of Benevolence in a more specific manner than at present particularised, the following words be inserted in Rule 1, after children, 'as well as for making grants to assist in the education of their children, if considered requisite.'"

The proposition was seconded by Bro. W. H. Radley, 838, P.G. Charity Sec., and supported by Bro. C. M. Nesbitt, 712, P.G. Treas., and carried unanimously.

A proposition that the quarterly fees of the brethren to this fund be increased from threepence to sixpence met with no seconder, and was withdrawn.

Bro. H. Watson, 297, P.G. Reg., proposed, and Bro. Locock, 712, D.P.G.M., seconded, "That a special meeting of this Committee be summoned for the purpose of making the necessary alterations of or additions to the present bye-laws of the P.G.L. Benevolent Fund for the due regulation and distribution of the 'Oliver Memorial Fund.'" Carried unanimously.

Bro. C. M. Nesbitt, P.G. Treas., read the accounts of the "Oliver Memorial Fund," showing a sum of £1050 invested on freehold security, and a balance in hand of £220s. 5d., with half a year's interest falling due almost immediately.

It was proposed by Bro. Jack Sutcliffe that the sum of £100 from the P.G.L. Fund of Benevolence, and the accumulated interest of the "Oliver Memorial Fund," be devoted towards the purchase of a vacancy for one or more of the candidates now on the list for admission into the R.M.I.B., but owing to the want of time, after an animated discussion, the matter was referred to the special meeting of this Committee before mentioned.

At 11.30 the brethren in full Masonic costume, each lodge being distinguished by its banner, went in procession to the parish church, which had been kindly lent by the Rev. Canon Moore for the occasion. Prayers were read by Bros. the Rev. B. Matthews, 683, and the Rev. A. W. G. Moore, 114 and 469, P.P.G. Chap. Suffolk, and an excellent sermon preached by Bro. the Rev. G. M. Lowe, 272 and 469, P.G. Chap., from Luke, ch. ii, ver. 14. On the return of the procession to the Corn Exchange, Prov. Grand Lodge was opened in due form by the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, Bro. W. H. Smyth, assisted by his officers.

The roll of lodges and P.G. Officers having been called, W. Bro. E. Locock, D.P.G.M., proposed, and W. Bro. Rev. Dr. Ace, P.P.G.C., seconded—"That the minutes of the P.G. Lodge, held at Grimsby, July, 11th, 1878, be taken as read." Carried unanimously.

Bro. H. Watson, P.G. Reg., proposed, and Bro. D. Hansen, P.G.S.W., seconded—"That the minutes be confirmed." Carried unanimously.

W. Bro. C. M. Nesbitt, 712, P.G. Treas., presented his financial statement, showing a balance in hand of £221 11s. 5d.

On the proposition of W. Bro. H. Watson, P.G. Reg., seconded by Bro. D. Hansen, P.G.S.W., the statement was adopted.

W. Bro. Watson, 297, P.G. Reg., presented the returns of the various lodges in the province, showing a total of 879 subscribing members, or an increase of five in the year.

The Prov. Grand Secretary read the report of the Committee of the Prov. Grand Lodge Fund of Benevolence, with abstract of accounts, showing a balance in hand of £166 18s. 1d., also the accounts of the "Oliver Memorial Fund," which, on the proposition of Bro. C. F. Bonner, W.M. 469, seconded by Bro. W. H. Sissons, 1447, were accepted, and ordered to be printed.

W. Bro. W. H. Radley, 838, P.P.G.J.W., read the report of the P.G. Charity Committee, shewing a balance in hand of £222 2s. 5d., with £5 dues.

W. Bro. R. Thorpe, I.P.M. 588, rose to urge the advisability of extending the operations of the P.G.L. Fund of Benevolence, by assisting in the education of the children of Freemasons in the province, by making grants of money for that purpose, in which he was supported by W. Bro. the Rev. Dr. Ace, P.P.G. Chap.

The question met with the hearty approval of the brethren, whom the R.W.G.M. informed that it had already been discussed in committee, where it had received unanimous support; the minutes of which Committee having since been confirmed by this P.G. Lodge. On the proposition of W. Bro. E. Locock, D.P.G.M., seconded by W. Bro. T. Fowler, P.P.G.S.W., it was resolved that Bros. Jas. Hodgins, W.M. 985, and Bro. Jack Sutcliffe, P.M. 1294, be appointed joint Stewards, for the purpose of raising a sufficient sum of money (supplemented by grants from the P.G. Lodge Fund of Benevolence, and the "Ohren Member Fund") to obtain the admission by purchase of one or more of the candidates now on the list of the province, into the R.M.I.B.

Proposed by Bro. J. Robinson, 792, P.P.G.J.D., and seconded by W. Bro. the Rev. Dr. Ace, 1232, P.P.G. Chap., "That a grant of £50 be made from the P.G. Lodge Fund of Benevolence towards such object." Carried unanimously.

Proposed by Bro. H. Watson, P.G. Reg., and seconded by Bro. A. Bates, P.P.G.D. of C., "That Bro. C. M. Nesbitt, 712, be re-elected as Provincial Grand Treasurer." Carried unanimously.

Proposed by W. Bro. Locock, D.P.G.M., and seconded by Bro. the Rev. G. W. Lowe, P.G. Chap., "That Bro. J. Fowler, 712, P.P.G.S.W., and Bro. W. Griffin, 712, P.P.G.D. of C., be elected Auditors of the P.G. Lodge accounts for the ensuing year." Carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to the Rev. Canon Moore for the use of the parish church, and also to Bro. the Rev. G. W. Lowe, P.G. Chap., for his excellent sermon, with a request that he would have it printed.

The following brethren were then appointed and invested as P.G. Officers for the ensuing year:—

Bro. C. F. Bonner, W.M. ...	Prov. G.S.W.
" W. H. Sissons, P.M. ...	Prov. G.J.W.

" J. C. Lazenby, W.M. ...	Prov. G. Std. Br.
" A. W. Lambert ...	Prov. G. Org.
" Robt. Thorpe, I.P.M. ...	Prov. G. Purs.
Bros. James Eley, Sec.; J. M. Wilkinson, S.W.; * J. Woodward, P.M.; J. W. Richardson, Treas.; E. Wilson, S.W.; and A. L. Peacock, W.M. ...	Prov. G. Stewards.
Bro. Benj. Box* ...	Prov. G. Tyler.

* These six brethren were re-appointed.

"Hearty good wishes" having been expressed, Prov. Grand Lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. Harper, of the White Hart Hotel, Spalding, in a marquee erected in the spacious grounds of Ayscoughgate Hall, which had been kindly thrown open to the brethren on this occasion by W. Bro. C. F. Bonner, W.M. 469, the generous proprietor.

The chair was taken by the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, supported by Bro. Kingston, R.W. District G.M. of Malta; W. Bro. E. Locock, D.P.G.M.; Bros. W. H. Radley, J. Fowler, W. Clegg, C. Pocklington, A. Bates, D. Coates, T. A. Thomas, Rev. G. W. Lowe, Rev. Cecil Sumner, Rev. A. W. G. Moore, Rev. B. Matthews, C. M. Nesbitt, H. Watson, J. Sutcliffe, and others.

The vice-chair was occupied by Bro. C. F. Bonner, W.M. 469, who throughout the day was most earnest in his endeavours to promote the comfort and happiness of the brethren.

The musical arrangements at the banquet were in the hands of Bros. Montem Smith, T. G. Carter, and Seymour Smith, and gave unlimited satisfaction.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the visiting brethren departed for their homes by special train, most kindly arranged for their benefit, as this enabled the majority to enjoy the most pleasurable day almost three hours longer than would otherwise have been the case.

Indeed, too much praise cannot be given to the Committee of Management (under the able leadership of Bro. E. T. Barrell, P.M. and Sec. 469, P.G.A.D. of C.) for their excellent arrangements throughout, which were simply perfect, and well deserving of imitation elsewhere.

Vouchers were given to each brother who signed the attendance sheet, and no one was allowed in lodge or could obtain a ticket for the banquet without producing it.

The member's card was a curiosity of the Chauceria in age, and we trust that "ye maniple," who catered so well for the enjoyment of his guests, was well rewarded for his trouble.

ST. MATTHEW'S LODGE, No. 856, LOSTWITHIEL.—The part of the old Duchy Palace purchased of Mr. Mark Thomas was conveyed to Henry de Lugh, Henry Hann Kidd, and George Buckthought, members of St. Matthew's Lodge, No. 856, in trust, and by a resolution of the lodge they are elected trustees for life, with ample powers to sell should the debtors holders demand payment of their bonds within ten years, and the lodge unable to pay them off from annual income. The ultimate trust of the building, should St. Matthew's Lodge cease to exist, is vested to the P.G.M. of the province of Cornwall for the time being. The members are much indebted to Bro. Whitefield, Solicitor, of St. Columb, who did all the legal business free of cost.

The brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Berks and Bucks held their P.G.L. at Abingdon, on Thursday, the 26th inst., the R.W. the P.G.M., Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., presiding. The agenda included the presentation of the testimonial to Bro. W. Biggs, P.M., subscribed for by the lodges and the brethren in recognition of his valuable services as Provincial Grand Secretary, which office he relinquished some time since on account of advancing years. A full report will appear in our next.

A combined summer festival of the Metropolitan Lodge, No. 1507, and the Royal Savoy Lodge, No. 1744, will be held under the joint presidency of the Worshipful Masters, Bros. J. Douglass and J. Willing, on Thursday, July 24th, at the Rye House. The large grounds facing the house will be entirely reserved for the festival by Bro. R. Teale, the proprietor. There will be a good band for dancing, &c., after the banquet, which will take place at 3.30. The indefatigable exertions of Bro. W. M. Stiles, who is the Secretary to both lodges, and W.M. of the King's Cross Lodge, together with the popularity of the Worshipful Masters, will render this meeting a very enjoyable one. Special arrangements will be made with the Great Eastern Railway.

We are informed that on Monday, the 23rd inst., on the arrival of the train at Bath, by which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and suite were journeying, en route to London, at 3.17 p.m., a goodly assemblage of citizens attended to greet them, and a hearty round of cheers was given, to which H.R.H. graciously bowed his acknowledgements. We suppose there are few towns in the kingdom where the Prince and all the Royal Family are more loyally respected, and where more thoughtful consideration is bestowed upon him and them than in the fair "Star of the West," as the ancient city of Bath has been justly called. Our correspondent noticed amongst those assembled many distinguished brethren of the Craft, who heartily wished H.R.H. God speed.

HIGH CROSS LODGE (No. 754).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Seven Sisters, Tottenham, on Wednesday, the 25th ult. Bro. Stephens, the W.M., presided, and, after the usual routine business, proceeded (after the ballot had been taken) to initiate Mr. H. Cooper into the mysteries of Freemasonry. The bye-laws of the lodge were read, and the name of a gentleman for initiation having been given, the W.M. closed the lodge, and the brethren adjourned to supper, which having been partaken of the usual toasts were given. In introducing that of "The Queen," the W.M. referred to the kind sympathy that Her Majesty had shown the ex-Empress of France in her recent bereavement. The toast was heartily received, and was followed by that of "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master." With this the W.M. coupled "The Healths of the Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past," paying a great compliment to their exertions on behalf of Freemasonry. Bro. J. Wells, P.M., assumed the gavel, and had great pleasure in proposing the toast of "The W.M.," whom he complimented for his kind and affable manner and his general ability in conducting the affairs of the lodge. He was, Bro. Wells observed, very near the end of his term of office, and he hoped that whoever might be appointed as his successor would, if possible, be a better man, but he was afraid few could give greater satisfaction than their present Master. After a song the W.M. rose to reply. He tendered his heartiest thanks for the kindness at all times extended towards him, and hoped to merit a continuance of the favours of the brethren. He had done his best in the past, and was only too pleased to find that it had met the approval of the members. His next duty was a most pleasing one, and one that he felt would meet the heartiest reception from all assembled. It was "The Health of the Initiator, Bro. Cooper." It was a great episode in the career of a lodge to receive a new member among them, and he trusted that the brother who had been initiated this evening would show that he had been impressed with the ceremony performed on his behalf. He could assure him that the more he looked into Freemasonry the more he would find that the brethren were anxious for the welfare of their fellows. Bro. Cooper, in his reply, thanked the brethren for the reception that had been accorded him. At present he was not in a position to say much for Freemasonry, but he trusted that the more he saw of it the better he should like it, and finally prove himself worthy of the position that had been accorded him. The next toast the W.M. had proposed was that of "The Visitors." He considered this a most pleasing part of his duty, as he felt assured that each member was gratified at seeing the guests who had honoured them with their presence. They were not so numerous supported by visitors as they were at their last meeting, but they somewhat made up for quantity in quality. He referred to the exertions the press were making to advance the cause of Freemasonry by reporting the various meetings, that took place, and thereby giving brethren who were unable to be present an idea of what was taking place. Bros. G. C. Young, 820, J. B. Reid, 946, and W. W. Morgan, jun., 1385, responded to the toast. The W.M. next called upon the brethren to drink "The Health of the Past Masters." He thanked them for the assistance they at all times rendered the W.M. in carrying out the duties of the lodge, and hoped they would be among those present at many future meetings. Bro. Wells returned thanks. He considered it the duty of every Past Master to support the Master, and regretted that the present Master had not been better supported than he had. "The Health of the Officers" was next drunk. Without them the W.M. felt he should have been unable to carry on the affairs of the lodge; he hoped he should always have them to assist him. Bro. S.W. replied, after which the Tyler was called, and gave the concluding toast of the evening. Among those present were Bros. H. Stephens, W.M.; J. W. Wells, W. Dance, J. Linzell, C. F. Barham, J. Maller, Past Masters; G. Burford, S.W.; J. Farrer, J.W.; T. Cunningham, Sec.; J. H. Thompson, J.D.; J. Garrod, D.C.; J. V. S. Tyler, A. G. Fidler, A. Bridgman, W. T. Turner, W. S. Cooper, W. F. Stevenson, A. W. Hackett, H. Cooper, and others.

GATESHEAD.—Lodge of Industry (No. 48).—The regular meeting of the premier lodge in the Province of Durham was held on Monday, the 23rd ult., at 34, Denmark-street. The lodge was opened shortly after 7 o'clock in the evening by the W.M., Bro. Robert Whitfield, assisted by the following officers, viz.: Bros. M. Corbitt, I.P.M.; John Wood, S.W.; J. G. Smith, J.W.; W. Brewis Eledon, Treas.; E. Liddell, Sec.; E. W. Middlemist, S.D.; W. Whitfield, acting J.D.; Jas. Boyatt, I.G.; R. Ferry, Org.; J. C. S. Liddell, S.S.; Jas. Macintyre, J.S.; J. W. A. Boyatt, A.S.; and Joshua Curry, Tyler. The other members present were: Bros. David Sinclair, P.M.; B. P. Ord, I.P.M. 1427; Michael J. Wheatley, T. E. Brigham, T. P. Reay, A. Bbagg, G. G. Davidson, and John Wallace. Amongst the visitors were Bros. F. P. Jann, P.M. 424; Jesse Marchant, W.M. 424; Jos. Probert, P.M. 424; T. Tyrrell, 424; John Page, W.M. 406; Henry Usher, J.D. 541; G. S. Sims, 1342; J. Duckitt, jun., S.D. 481; H. Kamp, 240. The first business was the confirmation of the minutes of last regular meeting, after which Bro. M. Corbitt, I.P.M., was unanimously elected for the second time to represent the lodge on the Charities Committee for the Province of Durham. At the urgent request of the W.M. of the Borough Lodge, No. 424, the W.M. was asked to give Bro. T. Tyrrell (who had been regularly initiated in that lodge) his Second Degree. Bros. T. P. Reay, M. J. Wheatley, and T. Tyrrell having shown their proficiency in the First Degree retired for preparation. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, when the candidates just named were admitted as Fellow Craftsmen by the W.M., the working tools being explained by the S.W. Bro. Jacob Matthews received the test of merit and retired, after which the lodge was opened in the Third Degree by the W.M., when Bro. Matthews was re-admitted and passed to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. by Bro. M. Corbitt, I.P.M., who also explained the Tracing Board. The working tools were given by the S.W. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree, when Bro. M. Corbitt, I.P.M., in the names of himself and the officers, presented Bro. D. Sinclair, P.M., and W.M. of the lodge from March 1877, to March 1878, with a handsome Past Master's jewel, as a mark of their high esteem and for his services to the lodge. P.M. Sinclair thanked the I.P.M. and the officers for the token of regard, which was quite unexpected, and in a short but unique speech expressed the pleasure he would have in wearing the jewel as a memento of his year of office, and trusted that the day would be far distant when his connection with the old lodge would cease. The following gentlemen were proposed for initiation, Mr. Matthew Swinburne and Mr. Jas. John Thompson, after which the "Hearty good wishes" of the visiting brethren were tendered to the W.M., and then the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren adjourned to the refreshment room, when the usual Masonic toasts were responded to and several brethren enlivened the proceedings with their harmony. In connection with this lodge there is a untine or benevolent fund for the Masonic Charities, and it is very pleasing to find that the twelfth ballot took place on the meeting night.

LIVERPOOL.—Merchants Lodge (No. 241).—Amongst the numerous Midsummer installations in Liverpool none possess any greater interest than that which attaches to the annual gathering of the Merchants Lodge, No. 241, with which many illustrious Masonic names have been associated during its century's existence. There was consequently a large gathering of visitors and brethren at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, at noon on Tuesday, the 24th ult., and even a larger array of Masonic notables at the Prince of Wales Hotel, Southport, where the brethren dined in the afternoon. The lodge was opened by Bro. Jas. Winsor, W.M., P.M. 203, assisted by Bros. Councillor Geo. Peet, P.M.; Ralph Robinson, P.M.; Richard Brown, P.M.; Geo. Broadbridge, P.M., D.C.; J. W. Turley, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; Thos. Salter, J.W.; Jas. Pendleton, I.G.; Solomon Jacob, acting Secretary; and others. The W.M. elect was presented by Bro. R. Robinson, P.M., and Bro. G. Peet, P.M., and installed in a very impressive manner by Bro. J. Winsor, the retiring W.M., who also delivered the lectures at the close of the ceremony in a faultless manner. The W.M. was saluted with all the honours, and he then proceeded to invest the following officers: Bros. Thos. H. Sheen (by proxy), S.W.; John Latta, J.W.; Jas. Winsor, I.P.M.; Dr. S. J. McGeorge, Treasurer (re-elected); Geo. Broadbridge, P.M., D.C. (re-appointed); Jas. Pendleton, S.D.; J. R. Duggas, J.D.; Thos. Whitehead, Secretary (by proxy); John Brotherton, I.G.; A. B. Ewart, Organist. Peter Ball was re-elected Tyler. At the conclusion of the lodge business, the brethren proceeded to Southport, where a recherche dinner was served up at the Prince of Wales Hotel, when about ninety sat down. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts being duly honoured, in proposing "The Provincial Grand Master," the W.M. spoke of the respect and esteem in which he was held, and expressed a hope that his health might soon be restored, when he would again be able to render that assistance he had always so cheerfully afforded. The S.W. proposed "The Deputy Grand Master and other Provincial Grand Officers," and stated that the Right Hon. F. A. Stanley, their Deputy Grand Master, was second only to the P.G.M. in his devotion to the Craft, and spoke highly of the assiduity of the other P.G.O.'s, especially Bro. Alpass, P.G. Secretary. Bro. Alpass responded, and said he was sure all who took an interest in the affairs of the country—ust sympathise with Bro. the Right Hon. F. A. Stanley in his onerous duties connected with the army of this country. For himself he had the greatest pleasure in seeing the day installed such a worthy and efficient Mason as the W.M. He also called attention to their Masonic Charities, and bore testimony to the efforts of 241, headed by its W.M., to promote the metropolitan funds, and especially that of the Girls' School. He could congratulate the lodge on all grounds on its continuing in the fore-front of Freemasonry in this province, and more especially on the fact that, without spending money at haphazard or without due investigation, they gave such a large sum to laudable objects. Bro. Latta, S.W., proposed "The Masonic Charities," warmly advocating their claims, more especially that of the West Lancashire Educational Institution, with which Bro. R. Brown was so honourably associated.—Bro. Brown and Broadbridge responded, and the latter proposed the toast of the evening, viz., "The W.M."—which was most cordially received—stating that they respected him not only as a hard-working Mason but as a man who set an example to all of them. The W.M. replied in feeling terms, and referred to the fact that the lodge was now 100 years old and still prospering. A most interesting portion of the proceedings was the presentation to Bro. James Winsor, I.P.M., of a handsome gold watch and chain, and a tea and coffee service for Mrs. Winsor, on behalf of the lodge by Bro. R. Robinson, P.M., and after a most enjoyable evening the brethren separated. The musical arrangements were efficiently carried out by the hon. Organist, Bro. Ewart.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—There was a large muster of the brethren at the Pump Room on Wednesday, the 18th ult., that being the closing meeting of the present season, the attendance, which included eight Past Masters, being testimony alike to the harmony and cordiality with which the lodge is always conducted, and of the high esteem in which the W.M., Bro. H. D. M. Williams, is held by the brethren. Among the visitors we noticed Bros. P. Salk, P.M. 1536; Fielden, P.M. 1032; J. P. Knox, 32, Madrid; Caldwell, 1619; T. Griffiths, 1619; Abrey, 1678; and G. Glasville, 1549. The other officers present besides the W.M. were Bros. W. B. Bacon, I.P.M.; J. Burton, J.W.; J. Duncley, S.D.; J. F. Bates, Sec.; W. F. Elers, Treas.; R. W. Delves, D.C.; C. Graham, A.D.C.; J. Boorman, Org.; Chesle, I.G.; G. Strange, Tyler; and P.M.'s Beckley, Roper, and Reed; Bros. A. D. Beecting, B. Buss, W. C. Cripps, E. Durrant, D. R. Everest, G. Farrer, W. Langridge, K. Pain, Rankin, Ramsbotham, Rule, Satchell, Simpson, W. T. Wrighton, M. Williams, and others. The lodge having been regularly opened, the Secretary read the minutes of the last lodge, which were unanimously confirmed. The Rev. Lewen S. Tugwell and Mr. D. R. Everest, having been regularly balloted for, and approved as candidates, were separately admitted and initiated into Freemasonry according to ancient custom. Ballot was also taken for Bro. W. T. Wrighton, Globe Lodge, No. 23, and Bro. H. S. Goodall, Lodge No. 65, which was unanimous in their favour. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Lansdel questioned as to the progress he had made in the science, and the answers being satisfactory, he withdrew, and the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when he was impressively raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. by the W.M. in a manner that fully keeps up the prestige of the lodge for the excellence of its working. On the notice of motion being brought forward that Bro. P.M. C. Marsh be elected an honorary member of the lodge, the notice was withdrawn agreeably to Bro. Marsh's wish. Several small matters having been discussed, the lodge was closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the Royal Kentish Hotel to banquet, which reflected the highest credit upon Bro. Rule. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly honoured. Bro. W. B. Bacon responded on behalf of "The Past Masters," and proposed "The Health of the W.M." The W.M., Bro. Williams, thanked the brethren for the compliment, and rejoiced to see such a pleasant gathering of the brethren. The Tyler's toast at eleven o'clock terminated the proceedings. Some pleasant ballads were given during the evening by Bros. Wrighton, Boorman, and Bates.

BATTLE.—Abbey Lodge (No. 1184).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 19th ult., a more than usually large number of brethren being present, including Bros. the R.W. Prov. G.M. of Sussex, Sir W. W. Burrell; John Henderson Scott, D.P.G.M.; V. P. Freeman, P.G. Sec.; C. Tomkinson, P.G.S. of W.; J. M. Kidd, P.G.D. of C.; J. Farncombe, P.G.S.B.; A. King, P.G.O.; W. T. Neel, P.G.P.; A. J. Hawkes, J. Rubie, and S. B. McWhinnie, P.G. Stewards; W. Glenister, W.M. of the Derwent Lodge, No. 40; G. Weller, P.M., and a strong contingent of the brethren from Hastings; T. Milson, W.M. of 341; W. Dawes, P.M., and a number of brethren from Kye, as well as a strong contingent of Past Masters and brethren from Brighton, and other parts of the province. The lodge having been opened in the usual manner by Bro. C. D. Jones, W.M., the minutes confirmed, and other business transacted, the Prov. G.M. was reported as seeking admission. On the order being given, Sir W. W. Burrell was received in due form, and saluted with the usual honours. The W.M. then announced that the period had arrived for the installation of his successor, and he vacated the chair in favour of the Dep. P.G.M. (Bro. J. H. Scott), who, in a very able and impressive manner installed Bro. W. Lamborn, P.M. and P.P.G.P., as W.M. of the Abbey Lodge for the next twelve months, in the presence of a Board of Installed Masters, numbering nearly thirty. The brethren having been re-admitted, and the new W.M. regularly proclaimed and saluted, the following were appointed the officers of the lodge for the year:—Bros. C. D. Jones, I.P.M.; E. R. Clarke, S.W.; J. B. Sargent, J.W.; J. H. Wells, P.M., Treas.; C. W. Duke, P.M., Sec.; C. R. Chandler, P.M., M. of C.; J. Fielding, Org.; A. D. Womersley, S.D.; R. H. Kedy, J.D.; J. Fisher, I.G.; F. Jesson, Tyler. The lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and an adjournment was made to the George Hotel, where the banquet was held, the W.M. (Bro. Lamborn) in the chair, supported by Bros. Sir W. W. Burrell, Prov. G.M., John Henderson, D.P.G.M., a number of Provincial Grand Officers, and others. The vice-chair was filled by Bro. B. H. Thorpe, P.M., acting J.W.; and full justice having been done to the good things provided, the W.M. opened the business by giving the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," speaking of her Majesty as the daughter and the mother of a Freemason. In proposing "The Health of the M.W. the Grand Master of English Freemasons, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," Bro. Lamborn remarked that it was not necessary in a gathering like the present to occupy time by making a long speech in support of it. The virtues of the Grand Master were well known to all Freemasons, and the Prince of Wales's name was a household word among the brethren. Full honour having been paid to the toast of "The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, the Very Worshipful D.G.M., and the Officers of the Grand Lodge of England," the Worshipful Master, in a short but happy speech, proposed "The Health of Sir Walter W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., the R.W. Provincial Grand Master of Sussex," welcoming him to the Abbey Lodge with the greatest cordiality, and speaking in high terms of him as a Mason. Sir W. W. Burrell thanked the brethren for the very hearty reception they had given him on the occasion of his first visit to the Abbey Lodge. They met that day on what might be termed sacred ground—on ground where a crown had been lost and a kingdom had been won. On this historical ground the Abbey Lodge was consecrated, and held its peaceable meetings, and he hoped and trusted that they would never again in England witness a struggle for a kingdom and a crown. The great feature of Masonry, however, was not a struggle for a kingdom here, but for the kingdom to be hereafter established. Masonic lodges should be the embodiment of all that was good in charity and morality. He believed that Masonry was one of the most widely spread institutions in the globe. Even in such little known countries as Arabia and Abyssinia Masonry existed, and had existed for centuries. A brother-in-law of his had seen Arabs meeting on horseback in the desert and exchanging signs, while any Mason who had paid a visit to the South Kensington Museum could not fail to have been struck with the emblems and signs on the ornaments which the King of Abyssinia wore. Masonry was introduced into this country early in the present era, it having been introduced, according to the most reliable authorities, by St. Alban, who was murdered by Diocletian on account of his being a Mason. Freemasons were now raising a subscription for the purpose of putting the cathedral at the town named after him into repair. The Provincial Grand Master next referred to the increase of Masonry in the Province of Sussex, remarking that, in a month or two, he had to consecrate a new lodge at Brighton, and a warrant had also been granted for another new lodge (No. 1889), and when the brethren remembered that the number of the Ockenden Lodge was 1465, they would see how Masonic principles had spread since the desertion of the Marquis of Ripon, and since the accession of the Prince of Wales to the Grand Mastership. The W.M. next proposed "The Health of Bro. John Henderson Scott, the Deputy P.G.M.," remarking that he remembered that distinguished brother being present as P.S.G.W. when the lodge was consecrated in the Great Hall of Battle Abbey. Bro. Lamborn also spoke very highly of the D.G. Master's attention to Masonry, and of his skill as a worker. Bro. Scott thanked the brethren for their hearty reception of the toast, and expressed the great pleasure it gave him to accompany so worthy a brother as the Provincial Grand Master in his visits, and to find him so well received. Sir Walter Burrell was well and deservedly respected. That worshipful brother intended to visit every lodge in the province. He had already visited most of the older ones, but brethren must not expect these visits to be often repeated. He (the D.P.G.M.) had visited the Abbey Lodge in 1873, and was pleased to note the improved and improving position of Masonry in Battle, and he looked upon their present W.M. (Bro. Lamborn) as the backbone of Masonry in the Abbey Lodge. Bro. Jones, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and spoke of the assistance Bro. Lamborn had been to the Abbey Lodge. He and two or three others had been the mainstay of the lodge. If Bro. Lamborn loved one thing more than another it was Masonry. He was a good and true brother, and devoted his spare time to Masonic objects, more particularly to instructing his younger brethren in the science. The Worshipful Master, in reply, thanked the brethren for the honour they had for a second time conferred upon him; and if the brethren thought he had done his duty, he was well repaid. He asked the officers to give him all the assistance and all the attention they could, and he was ready at all times to give them all the instruction in his power, and would endeavour to drill them all well. The W.M. next proposed "The Health of the Visitors," making special reference to the pleasure it gave him to welcome the Worshipful Master of the Derwent, No. 40—Bro. W. Glenister—and the brethren from Hastings. He could assure the visitors that the members of the Abbey Lodge fully appreciated the courtesy shown them. Bro. Glenister complimented his worshipful brother on the position he had again attained, and was glad to show the respect in which he held Bro. Lamborn as a man and as a Mason. He trusted that in years to come the same good feeling would continue to exist, and that the Masonic courtesies would continue to be exchanged between the Abbey and the Derwent Lodges. "The Health of the Past Masters" was next duly honoured, the remark being made that if the W.M. was the backbone of the lodge, the Past Masters might be considered the ribs. The different Past Masters responded, and made felicitous speeches. The toast of "The Masonic Charities" was proposed by Bro. B. H. Thorpe, P.M., in an eloquent speech, and full honour having also been done to the toasts of "The Treasurer," "The Officers," and "The Stewards," the Tyler was called up and his toast given. Several brethren contributed their quota to the enjoyment, and many good songs were sung. It is, in fact, some time since a more pleasant Masonic reunion took place in this part of Sussex.

INSTALLATION OF THE PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER OF ESSEX.

The installation of the Right Hon. Lord Tenterden as Provincial Grand Master of Essex took place on Wednesday last, at the Shire Hall, Chelmsford. There was a numerous attendance of the members of the various lodges in the county, as well as several visitors. The newly-appointed Grand Master was admitted to the mysteries of Freemasonry on the 22nd of January, 1856, in the Lodge of Harmony, meeting at Richmond, Surrey. He was twice elected to preside over this lodge in the capacity of Worshipful Master, in the years 1859 and 1864, and in that capacity gave proof of the Masonic ability he has since shown. He was appointed Senior Grand Warden of England in 1872, by the Marquis of Ripon, then Grand Master, and has, since that time, been a frequent attendant at Grand Lodge, on several occasions having filled the chair of Senior Warden, as well as taking other positions whenever called upon. He succeeds in his present position of Provincial Grand Master the R.W. Bro. Robert J. Bagshaw, who presided over the province from 5th December, 1854, until the time of his death, 14th August, 1878. The present Provincial Grand Master, strange to say, was installed into his position in the same town as was the late Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Bagshaw having been installed on the 17th of May, 1855, by the Earl of Yarborough, then Deputy Grand Master of England. On Wednesday the ceremony was performed by the Earl of Carnarvon, the present Pro Grand Master of England, and in every detail was carried out most efficiently.

Among those who signed the attendance book were:—Bros. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro G.M. of England; Lord Tenterden, Prov. G.M. Essex; Lord Ebrington, Prov. G.M. designate of Devon; Albert W. Woods, P.G.W. and G.D.C.; Charles J. Martyn, P.G.C., D. Prov. G.M. Suffolk; R. W. H. Giddy, D.G.M. Griqualand, S. Africa; Ernest Emil Wendt, G.S. (G. Cor.); Shadwell H. Clerke, P.G.D.; T. Fenn, P.G.D.; C. W. Arnold, P.G.C. and D. Prov. G.M. Surrey; J. Nunn, P.G.S.B., Senior Vice-President Board of Benevolence; Matthew Clark, J.G.D.; Gordon W. Clark, P.M. 255; Thomas Cochrane, Provincial S.G.W.; George Corble, P.J.G.W.; J. H. Bridge, P.G. Chap.; T. J. Ralling, P.G. Sec.; D. Reed, P.J.G.D.; A. Lucking, P.G.D. of C.; J. A. After the Grand Lodge had been formally opened, the Earl of Carnarvon was saluted according to ancient custom. The minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed, and the roll of the lodges of the province were called over. The announcement of the contributions of the lodges of the province was made, and the Auditor's report was read.

The Earl of Carnarvon then said: I now will inform the Provincial Grand Lodge of the occasion which has called the brethren together. Brethren, you are aware that since the lamented death of your late Provincial Grand Master this province has been without its head, and it has pleased His Royal Highness the Grand Master to appoint our Bro. Lord Tenterden to fill this high office. (Applause.) I am quite satisfied from the way in which his name is received how popular that appointment will be with you. (Applause.) In some respects it is easier to pronounce praise upon a man in his absence than in his presence, but I think the few remarks which I need make in this Grand Lodge it will be better that Lord Tenterden himself should be here and should bear what I have to say, after the obligation has been administered to him, and, therefore, I shall now desire that the deputation formed in the usual fashion should proceed to introduce our Bro. Lord Tenterden to this Grand Lodge.

Lord Tenterden was then introduced to the Prov. Grand Lodge, and formally installed as Prov. Grand Master.

The Earl of Carnarvon, after having installed Lord Tenterden, said: Right Worshipful Sir, my noble brother, it has been my duty, and a most grateful duty it is to me, to place you in this chair. Very little, indeed, is needed now for me to add to the ceremony in which we have both taken this part. At the same time, it has always been held, I believe, customary that the Installing Master should at least tender his congratulations and good wishes, first of all to the Provincial Grand Master who henceforth is to rule the province, and next to the province that will be under his sway. I can, with a most sincere conscience, offer alike my congratulations and my good wishes to you and to the province on this fortunate occasion, and I trust that this bright ray of physical sunshine which is, after the long wet and storms of the last few days, coming in at these windows is an augury, after the depression which this province has undergone since the death of your late lamented Prov. Grand Master—is a fitting augury of that which is in store for the province. But, Worshipful Sir, you are no novice in the duties of the Craft, and it would be utterly unnecessary for me to remind you of the duties and obligations which you have to-day undertaken. You know them well, and I am satisfied that you will fulfil them with all the conscientiousness and zeal and energy of character which have distinguished the other actions of your public life (applause); and I rejoice to think that under your sway this province will take as it were a new start in its Masonic life and career, and I hope thrive and grow in the exercise of all those Masonic virtues and duties without which our internal procedure, our form, our ceremonies, and our symbols are all but naught. Brethren, some of you may have noticed only a few days ago a very remarkable article in one of our leading newspapers upon the present position of the Craft in England. It was a high encomium pronounced upon the Craft, though apparently written by one who had little real knowledge of our internal life and actions, but it was true in this, that it pointed out that, under the veil of symbolism, and under the external forms of rites and ceremonies, which had descended to us through successive generations, and from a very remote antiquity, there was a real active life and vigour enshrined, and that the Craft lived—lived, indeed, in the goodwill of the outside world; lived in the respect of men; lived in the honour and the regard which the people of this country pay it, because of the belief that it lived for active good, and in the exercise of active virtues. Brethren, that was a tribute offered to the Craft by one who was not familiar with its inner meaning and its inner life; but we may well lay that tribute to heart, and each and all of us, whether we be acting collectively in our several lodges, or whether we be acting separately and singly as individual Masons, endeavour to make the light of Masonry so shine forth in our whole lives collectively and individually that we may reflect honour and credit upon that body to which we all belong. Brethren, I have now only as I began so to end, by wish ing your new Provincial Grand Master every good fortune in the chair which he fills. I need not wish him ability, I need not wish him tact, and conciliation, and firmness all combined, because I know he possesses those qualities, and I know that he will exercise them for the good of you all. Nor need I, I think, in conclusion, remind you that you have also duties to him, and that it is by obedience to rule, by loyalty to the commands of your Provincial Grand Master, by rendering him every assistance, both in your lodges and individually as Masons, that you can not only lighten the burden which, from time to time, will rest upon his shoulders, but also promote the cause of Masonry in this Masonic Province of Essex.

Lord Tenterden then rose and said, after the cheering with which he was greeted had ceased: Brethren, before we proceed with the business of the day, I cannot refrain from saying a few words of very earnest thanks to our Pro Grand Master for the kind manner in which he has spoken of me to you, and I also thank you, brethren of the Province of Essex, for the welcome you have been good enough to accord to me.

The Rev. S. R. Wigram, P.G.C., was then appointed by his lordship D.P.G.M., and the following brethren were appointed to the other offices in the province:—

Lord Tenterden afterwards said he thought it would not be fitting or becoming of him if he allowed Grand Lodge to depart without saying a few words to the memory of their departed Bro. Bagshaw. He had had the pleasure of the acquaintance of Bro. Bagshaw, and he knew how zealous he was on behalf of Freemasonry, and when he was racked with the disease of which he died he attended Grand Lodge regularly, rather than the province of Essex should not be represented. He, therefore, moved a vote of the deep regret of the province at the loss of their late Grand Master.

The vote having been seconded, was put to Grand Lodge, and carried unanimously, and Bro. Matthew Clarke, Past Deputy Grand Master of the province, was entrusted to convey it to the family of the late Bro. Bagshaw.

Lord Tenterden then proposed a vote of thanks to the Earl of Carnarvon for performing the ceremony of installation.

Bro. the Rev. S. R. Wigram, Deputy Prov. Grand Master, seconded the motion, which was then put and carried.

The Earl of Carnarvon, in reply, said it would be very wrong if, after having already engaged so much of the time of the Provincial Grand Lodge, he were to make anything of a reply to the words which had fallen from the chair, and from the excellent brother who had seconded them. He simply said that it had been a double pleasure to be there, from his personal friendship for him and from his knowledge of him as a Mason.

A vote of thanks was also passed to Bro. Matthew Clarke, Past Deputy Prov. Grand Master, for the way in which he conducted the business of the province during the absence of the late Bro. Bagshaw.

Bro. Ernest Emil Wender, representative of the three Grand Lodges of Berlin, presented the congratulations of those lodges to Lord Tenterden on his installation as Prov. Grand Master for Essex.

On the motion of the Rev. S. R. Wigram, a vote of thanks was passed to the magistrates of the district for allowing the use of the Shire Hall for the purposes of the Prov. Grand Lodge on this installation of Lord Tenterden.

Ten guineas was voted to the local dispensary, and Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed.

The brethren then adjourned to the Corn Exchange to banquet, under the presidency of the Prov. Grand Master. The usual toasts were afterwards proposed.

In giving the toast of "The Queen and the Craft," Lord Tenterden said: Brethren, there is an old saying that short reckonings make long friends. I think that expression may be supplemented by a further adage, that short speeches make pleasant meetings. The first toast on our list needs no comment, the mere mention of it ensures a hearty welcome in this loyal Province of Essex. Brethren, I give you "The Queen and the Craft."

After the National Anthem, the Provincial G. Master again rose and said: Brethren, when this Provincial G. Lodge was last commenced, it was for the purpose of placing on the shore of Essex one of those life boats that had been launched by the Craft, as a thankoffering for the safe return of their Grand Master from his Indian tour. A more fitting memorial could not have been selected than that which was decided on by the Grand Lodge, when we remember that during the time our Craft was left without a head the Prince of Wales was found ready and willing to take the helm of the boat and labour for our rescue. I say the helm of the life boat, for I am able to say, having been amongst the Masonic advisers of H.R.H. for some years past, that H.R.H. does personally administer and govern the Craft to our great advantage. We have in the Prince of Wales no mere gilded figurehead at the top of the Craft, but we have instead the good head of an excellent man of business. The fact of the Prince of Wales being an admirable man of business has been testified on several occasions to the world at large, but more especially at the Exhibition last year at Paris, when he acted as President of the British section. The success of the English portion of the Exhibition was almost entirely owing to his exertions and his desire that there should be an adequate representation of the arts, products, and manufactures of the United Kingdom. I feel that I utter an expression gratifying to all of those present when I offer you an opportunity of shewing in Essex your appreciation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Brethren, I give you the toast of "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of England."

The Provincial Grand Master then proposed "The Health of the Installing Master." It was only those, he said, who knew how many and how various were the engagements of a man in Lord Carnarvon's position who could really appreciate how truly fraternal an act this was on his part. When he (Lord Tenterden) first went to the University of Oxford, the name which was the pride of the college, as the first classman of his year, was that of the Earl of Carnarvon. (Applause.) Since then, when maturer years had verified the promise of the schools, they still found the noble Earl in the first-class in life, first-class as a statesman, as a classical scholar, and as an orator, and as a Freemason (cheers), and he had recently added to his other honours that of poetry. (Applause.) There was one measure which, as it met with universal assent, he might here mention without hesitation, which showed how the Earl of Carnarvon had made his mark on the world—an achievement indeed which deserved to be even emblazoned on the time-honoured escutcheon of the Herberts. He referred to the great work of the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada. The Earl of Carnarvon found the British North-American Provinces scattered, weak, and disunited across the great breadth of the American Continent; he left them a consolidated dominion, the very jewel of our Colonial Empire. (Cheers.) Many of them were aware how genially, with what courtesy and ability, their most distinguished brother presided in Grand Lodge (hear, hear); they had all of them seen that day how he could preside in a Provincial Grand Lodge, and he was sure that he need say no more to commend the toast of his health to their most hearty welcome. (Cheers.)

The Earl of Carnarvon, in reply, said he was afraid the Provincial Grand Master had very greatly exaggerated his poor merits in every single case to which he had been pleased to allude. He could not accept the flattering compliments his lordship had been pleased to pay him in that difficult sphere of politics where men much oftener reaped censure and abuse than they did praise, and he doubted how far he could venture to appropriate to himself even those compliments which had been paid him in the quieter, the serene, the more domestic sphere of other matters. But one thing he could say—that it was with infinite satisfaction and pleasure that he was asked to take the part of Installing Master there that day. He came with the greatest satisfaction to himself to discharge a duty in which his sympathies were so strongly, so personally enlisted, and independently of the satisfaction he felt at having placed Lord Tenterden in the chair, and having offered to him the sincere homage of his good wishes in the task which he was henceforth undertaking in this province, he also had received with infinite pleasure and satisfaction the kindly, and the more than kindly, welcome which the Province of Essex had been good enough to give him. (Cheers.) It had been his fortune to attend many provincial meetings in many parts of England, but this, at least, he would say, he had never attended any where he had been received more kindly and cordially than he had there that day, and when he left them he should carry away the recollection of the heartiness with which an Essex body of Freemasons could make their brother Mason welcome. (Loud cheers.)

The Provincial Grand Master then proposed "Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers." He said that it was not a mere idle compliment that they paid this mark of respect, for Lord Skelmersdale was an earnest Mason, and was actually suffering his present illness through having come down to Walton-on-the-Naze to inaugurate a new lodge. Lord Skelmersdale regretted very much that he was not present this day, but he was compelled to be absent through having Her Majesty's commands to attend upon her on her visit to the Agricultural Show. Lord Kensington and others had also expressed their regret at their absence. The Grand Officers well manned the Craft, and he did not know how the Freemasons would get on without such brethren as Sir Albert Woods, Thomas Fenn, and Bro. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain. He would particularly mention with regard to this toast, Bro. Alston, Past Grand Warden, whose father before him was, as he was, a worthy President over the Craft. Bro. Alston was one of the oldest Grand Officers, and the oldest living Grand Officer in the Province of Essex, and it was his name he would couple with this toast.

Bro. Alston, in reply, said: the Grand Officers present have felt it a pleasure as well as a duty to support the chair on this auspicious occasion. To myself, personally, I may say that it has been a matter of intense interest to see placed in the chair of this province a brother whom I have known so long, whose friendship I so value, and whose career I have so much admired, and we one and all of us feel most grateful to you for the hearty welcome which you have accorded us, and for the excellent cheer with which you have provided us. Your Provincial Grand Master has referred in terms which demand my warmest acknowledgments to one inexpressibly dear to me who once occupied his chair. I will only say that if he could be present to-day he would fully ratify and confirm and approve the choice which His Royal Highness had made. For myself I will say that though I stand before you now as one, I believe, of the oldest members of the Grand Lodge of England and for some years before that I was a member, and a working member, of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Essex. In coming before you to-day I have ventured to put on some of the clothing which belong to me in Grand Lodge, and I trust you will accept it as a compliment from me that I should have done so. I can truly say that to my Masonic connection with this province, and it is not my only connection with this county, I owe some of the happiest recollections and experiences of my life; and time, which tries and proves all things, has only added to the halo with which those recollections are surrounded. I know the province of Essex of old. It is a glorious Masonic province; Masonic virtues shone always bright here, and they will continue to do so, and for the comfort of your excellent Prov. Grand Master I will say that in no respect were the Masonic virtues more conspicuous than in the loyalty and the devotion which you were always ready to show to your Prov. Grand Master. In coming among you again to-day I miss many old accustomed faces, but others have taken their place, and are now engaged in spreading the tenets of Masonry throughout the province; but I rejoice to find many of the old lodges which I knew of old. I have been glad to see that grand old lodge, the Angel Lodge, at Colchester, so well represented. I rejoice to find that the lodge at Chelmsford has been deemed worthy of being associated with the interesting ceremony of this day, and many other lodges which I could name are still working with great advantage to themselves and to the Craft throughout the province. When I first knew the province there were but seven lodges; I believe there are now seventeen. I need not refer to anything as better proving the success of the efforts made by your late most excellent Prov. Grand Master to spread Masonry throughout the province. You have now had placed in your chair a brother who is destined to inaugurate an era of new prosperity; his untiring energy, his zeal for Masonry, and his excellent social qualities will be sure to attract to Masonry many others who have not yet joined you, and I feel certain that under his fostering care a great future is in store for Masonry throughout the province. Brethren, I will detain you no longer, but assure you that I wish and pray that there may be a bright future for your Prov. Grand Master, and that Masonry under his beneficent presidency may prosper yet more than it ever has done in the province of Essex.

The Earl of Carnarvon then proposed "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master." He said: Brethren, I have had a toast placed in my hands, for which I thank those who have arranged the procedure of to-day. No toast could be more grateful to me to propose; no toast I am satisfied could meet with a greater enthusiasm on your part. Brethren, we can none of us forget the cause which has called us together to-day; we can none of us forget who now occupies the chair of this province. I have already had occasion more than once within the last few hours to offer the expression of my own hearty good wishes for the success of my noble friend in the new duty that he has undertaken. I am very sanguine as to the mode in which he will discharge those duties. He has the guarantee, so to speak, of his whole past in his favour. My noble friend succeeded to a title and an already distinguished name. He was not a man to rest idle upon hereditary honours. His life has been, emphatically I should say, a life of hard, unsparring, laborious work. The frivolities, even the lighter pleasures in life, which form so large a portion of the existence of other men, have passed comparatively by him; he has scorned a life of inglorious ease, and he has devoted time and thought and the energy both of mind and body to the service of the State. This has not been all. Step by step, patiently and by solid work, my noble friend has risen in the profession that he adorns, till at last he has arrived at the highest point of all—the highest post which I conceive any one in that profession can hold in England—the position of permanent Under Secretary at the Foreign Office. Brethren, none but those who have had some experience as Ministers in a large department can tell how deeply indebted the country is to the permanent civil officers who practically manage and administer those departments. But if there be one officer in a great department upon whom hinges, so to speak, the whole administration of that department, and all abroad that that administration involves and carries with it, it is the permanent Under Secretary. All day, every day, day and night I may say, the State has calls upon him. He is the adviser of his political and parliamentary chief; he is the hinge upon which all of that great office, and with the office that great service, in a great measure turns; and this I may truly say from experience, that among all that band of highly-educated, able, laborious men to carry on the work of our public offices, whose merits receive far less recognition when sometimes contrasted by the showy and the tawdry qualities of those who are so deeply indebted to them—I speak it in all humility, because I have had the benefit of similar advice as my noble friend has given to a succession of Foreign Secretaries. I say nothing about those who have served in a great department, as a parliamentary head can be aware how deeply indebted the Crown and the country are to those who fill such a situation as my noble friend now fills. And therefore, brethren, I say that a great Masonic province like this may gratefully and well appreciate when it can command the services of such a Provincial Grand Master. I know how heavy the claims of public business are upon any one in my noble friend's position, but I have always found this in life, that those who are really the busiest find the greatest amount of time to give to other persons. I remember hearing a story of Count

Cavour when he was at the head of the Foreign Department in Italy, which was a very stormy time. A friend visited him one morning early, and after talking five minutes, proposed to hurry away, apologising for having detained him so long from public business. Count Cavour said "Why, I have plenty of time; there are twenty-four hours in the day, and they surely are enough for all purposes." And I believe my noble friend here is of the same opinion, when he could take himself away from the dispatches of the Foreign Office to devote himself body and mind to such an occasion as the present. I hardly know, when I see such a meeting as this, on what Masonic text to preach. It has been my duty so often to inculcate Masonic principles or duties, that I feel almost afraid of repeating what I have said. There are no doubt particular duties which are specially applicable to particular times and seasons. The duty of our Masonic Charity is one; the world-wide brotherhood which unites us in so many climates and countries is another great feature; the code of morals, so to speak, which lies enshrined in the old charges of the Order which is concealed, veiled in the ritual and symbolism, such as that to which I alluded in the Grand Lodge of to-day—these are all distinctive features of the Craft; they may all be dwelt upon with advantage at different times and under different circumstances; but the one word that I would take the liberty of saying to-day is perhaps of a somewhat different subject: it is to ask you to bear in mind, as it suggests itself to me to-day, that our Masonic organisation and the duties of loyal provincial obedience to those who are placed high in authority lie at the very root of all our Masonic system in England. Brethren, the administration of a great Masonic province like this depends first of all upon the tact, the management, and the administrative ability of the Provincial Grand Master. It depends in the next place upon the zeal and the intelligence of those Grand Officers whom he appoints; and lastly it depends upon the hearty zeal and the loyal obedience of the whole body of Masons scattered throughout the province, and by that I mean the loyal obedience, not merely of individual Masons, but of lodges acting collectively together as a part of the Masonic organisation; and let me say that just as this is true of the Provincial Grand Lodge, so also is it true of the organisation of each individual lodge. The Master there is elected to his high office; he is bound to exercise the functions and duties of that office with the same qualities as the Provincial Grand Master brings to bear; he looks to his officers to give him their hearty support in the work of the lodge, and he looks again to the individual members of the lodge to support him in a way that no written rules and no precise laws can possibly give. But, brethren, this is not, perhaps, all. It might seem to some that the great powers which are lodged in the hands of the Prov. Grand Master, as they are lodged in the hands of the Grand Master of the Craft, would make our ancient and venerable body despotic and absolute in its character and working. That is not at all the case. Our body seems to me to be happily blended together of the two great principles of rule, of obedience, of loyalty, and yet also of great freedom. Freedom of election lies at the very root of the whole matter, and confidence the offspring of that freedom of choice on the one hand, and of that considerate and temperate rule on the other. In this it has often occurred to me that there is a strong resemblance between Freemasonry—English Freemasonry—and the English Constitution. You have large powers, great authority, great responsibility, great freedom, and if the whole machine is to work together harmoniously and satisfactorily, great confidence on the part of those who are governed in those who govern. (Cheers.) That is, in fact, what, I believe, the English Constitution gives you, roughly speaking; that is what we look for, and what we have found, I believe, in our Masonic system. And, perhaps, this is, among other causes, one of the reasons, and one of the principal reasons, why Freemasonry in England has united itself in such harmonious bonds with all the great institutions of the country. I know, indeed, nothing more remarkable than the contrast which exists now, and which still more existed a few years ago, between English Freemasonry and foreign. Here in England the great institutions of the country are more or less connected with Freemasonry. There has never been any jealousy of Freemasonry here. Parliament, even in its most jealous moods, always made exceptions in favour of English lodges. There was no suspicion, no jealousy, no ill-will, and, as my noble friend, I think, also pointed out in one of his speeches to-day, it has been our special characteristic and pleasure, that in this country we have had a succession of Royal Princes at the head of our Masonic system. (Loud cheers.) Formerly, indeed, abroad Freemasonry was bound up with many of those secret bodies which could certainly not be said to be allied to the State—which were at enmity with the State—and it brought on foreign Freemasonry often much doubt, sometimes discredit. We, I am thankful to say, have ever been spared from this, and I trust that through the long course of English Freemasonry which is yet in store, we shall always maintain the same even, temperate way which we have maintained in times past—that we shall still feel that with the laws, the institutions, the authorities of this country we are closely allied; that whilst we are Masons we are equally Englishmen—Englishmen in all the spirit of the laws, in all the spirit of the constitution—and then we shall carry on, I doubt not, Freemasonry, if possible, even one step lighter, and one step further than it has already achieved; we shall be able to hand down to those who come after us quite as great and fine a heritage as we have received from our forefathers. (Cheers.) Brethren, in every province it is necessary to have a high standard before us. In this province you have had good traditions, and you now have at your head one who is fully competent to give those traditions practical life and effect. Let me congratulate him upon being placed in this chair; let me congratulate you upon having so good a Provincial Grand Master ruling over you. I beg to propose his health. Let me wish to him long life and success in the devotion of the same qualities to this province that he has already given to his country, and let me wish for you all the happiness and all the good fortune, and all the success that can flow from the wise, and temperate, and kindly, and conciliatory rule of your present Provincial Grand Master.

The Provincial Grand Master, in reply, said: Brethren, I have to thank our Pro Grand Master for the too flattering and complimentary terms in which he has been good enough to propose my health to your notice, and I have to thank you, brethren of the Province of Essex, for the welcome you have been good enough to accord to me on this occasion. Our Pro-Grand Master has spoken of the organisation of Freemasonry. I am pretty confident that I am not wrong in supposing that in this town of Chelmsford, at this very moment, there are numbers of people who are asking the question—"What is it that all these gentlemen, wearing white ties and evening coats in the day-time, have invaded our quiet neighbourhood for, with their little black bags and their tin boxes?" (Laughter.) And, brethren, I do not doubt that to many the question has been put which has on this and on other occasions, been very frequently addressed to myself—"What is it that all you people are about? If you want to subscribe to schools and to asylums, why don't you send your Post Office orders and your cheques without all this fuss and paraphernalia?" (Laughter.) Now, a lady told me the other day that she had discovered the secret. (Loud laughter.) She said, "The fact is, you men are so vain. You love to dress yourselves up; that is why the soldiers all wear red coats, and now the Volunteers are going to wear red coats; and as for you people with the blue aprons, why, you are no better." (Laughter.) Other people say we are mere knife-and-fork philanthropists. (Loud laughter.) Others, again, say, "The real fact is, there is nothing in it at all." Now, that reminds me of the story with regard to the Druses on Mount Lebanon. His lordship then proceeded to relate the story of one of a number of peeping busybodies who went into the Temple of the Druses, and finding it empty returned and reported that there was "nothing in it," whereupon he was told that his story was disbelieved, and was ignominiously kicked out of the village. (Laughter.) His lordship proceeded: Now, brethren, it cannot be said that there is nothing in our lodges, for there is something in our lodges, something which constitutes the very basis of our Masonic structure, and that is the volume of the Sacred Law. Although with universal toleration we admit men of all creeds to the Craft, provided they are good men—I have myself initiated Persians, Parsees, Musselmans, and Hindoos—yet all our work is begun, continued, and completed in the name of him whom we address in the spirit of that universal prayer written by our great poet Pope, a Roman Catholic—

"Father of all in every age,
In every clime adored,
By saint, by savage, and by sage,
Jehovah, Jove, and Lord.
To him whose temple is all space,
Whose altar—earth, sea, skies,
One chorus let all beings raise,
All nature's incense rise."

(Applause.) It is, brethren, this spirit of toleration, this feeling of universal brotherhood under one great heavenly Father, which constitutes, as I deem it, the true object, the true principle of Freemasonry. (Cheers.) It was for this object that Freemasonry was founded, and it is for this that it now claims to be maintained. Without going too far into the uncertainties of tradition, we are, at all events, sure of this—that the original object of Freemasonry was to provide a home amongst their fellow brethren and Masons, where those skilled Craftsmen who wandered in the pursuit of their craft might find in their travels a ready welcome. It was thus, brethren, that Freemasonry in former ages was the first to break down that barrier of distrust and exclusiveness which severed countries and provinces, and even towns. (Hear, hear.) It is now of equal use, for Freemasonry, excluding as it does subjects of political and religious controversy, forms a neutral ground on which men of all classes, countries, and creeds may meet on the level and part upon the square. (Cheers.) Brethren, that exclusiveness of which I have spoken has to some extent penetrated even to the present day. Most of you, I dare say, recollect the drawing of poor John Leech's, of two navvies, one of whom says to the other, "Who be that, Bill?" and upon the other replying, "A stranger," he says, "Eave 'alf a brick at him." (Laughter.) Well, brethren, that spirit was at one time very common amongst us. The other day I was reading the biography of one of our great naval heroes at the commencement of the present century. His creed was, "Fear God, honour the King, and hate the French." (Laughter.) No brethren, we do, I hope, the two former, but the days for hatred of the French are happily passed away, and I trust may never come again. (Cheers.) How little we now hate the French is shown in the chord of sympathy which has been touched in every English heart, in every English home, for that unhappy lady who is now mourning for her gallant son, slain in the English cause in South Africa. (Cheers.) This spirit of universal brotherhood may, perhaps, by some be considered no longer of any moment in this country, but this is not so. Although political and religious rancour is happily no longer rife amongst us, there are many subjects upon which all men must differ, and by excluding those questions, upon which men too frequently do differ, we are doing that which, I am sure, is of great good to this country, and I have seen myself a very remarkable instance of that in the United States of America, where civil war had done its worst to scathe the land. Yet, the brethren from the North could meet the brethren from the South after the war, and clasp the hands of Freemasonry in brotherhood, which had so recently been raised to shed each other's blood. (Cheers.) I feel with our Pro Grand Master that Freemasonry has a great future before it—a great future, I venture to say, in this feeling of universal toleration and brotherhood—a great future, not only in this country but in all countries in pacifying hostilities, in creating friendship, in linking together men of all countries, of all classes, of all religions, all races, and all creeds. (Cheers.) And, brethren, we cannot do better than take the advice of our Pro Grand Master as to how we should best extend and promote this, which I venture to say is a noble object, of which Freemasons in this province and all over the world may be justly proud. The way to promote it, brethren, is to use an expression familiar to all of us, that we should show ourselves to be good Masons and good men, not only in our words and in our emblems, but in our acts—that we should, in truth, show ourselves to be men to whom the afflicted may pour forth their sorrows, and find consolation; to whom the distressed may pour forth their suit and find relief; whose hands are guided by justice, and whose hearts are expanded by benevolence. (Cheers.) I once more thank you most cordially for the kind welcome which has been given to me in this province. I always felt that although I was not known to many amongst you, it would be so that one whose heart was in Freemasonry would never fail a warm welcome at the hands of Freemasons. (Loud cheers.)

The Provincial Grand Master then said: The Pro Grand Master has desired me to express his extreme regret that he has been obliged to leave before the end of our festivities. I have now devolving on me the very agreeable task of proposing "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master, Rev. S. R. Wigram, P.G.C., and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Present and Past." I have for a long time had the pleasure of knowing our Bro. Wigram as distinguished in the Craft, distinguished as one of the Grand Chaplains, and distinguished, as I also know he has been, by his working at the Priory Lodge, Southend; and it is with extreme gratification to me that he has accepted the position to which he has this day been appointed. You must all know that very much of the success of a province depends upon the Deputy of the Province. As the Prov. G. Master has told you in the most flattering terms, I am engaged the bulk of my time, and must therefore leave the great part of my duties to the brother who has this day been appointed as my Deputy. We have among us in our lodge the Past D. Prov. G.M., Bro. Matthew Clark, and I am especially pleased to see him. I feel sure that you also appreciate his services from the satisfaction with which you all agreed to the vote of thanks which has been passed on him in lodge. He is with me a P.M. of the Lodge of Harmony, at Richmond, and has for many years past shared with me the duties of Secretary of that lodge. I know from my personal experience that he is a good man, and you all know that he is a good Mason. We have to-day also invested several others who are worthy of the position to which they have been appointed. It was at the Lodge of Hope and Unity, at Romford, that I first received my early Masonic instruction. A friend of mine used to belong to that lodge, and I was frequently present there as a visitor, and have on several occasions acted as one of its officers; it is, therefore, with extreme pleasure that I have this day placed the W.M. of that lodge in the chair of Senior Warden of the province. The other Prov. Grand Officers are, I believe, equally well known to the Craft of Essex. I have done my best that the honours should be distributed to every point of our provincial compass, and I hope that the various appointments will give satisfaction. I have pleasure in coupling with the toast the names of Bro. S. R. Wigram, D.P.G.M., and Matthew Clark, P.P.D.G.M.

Bro. Wigram, in reply, said: I have to thank you both on my own behalf and on behalf of the other Provincial Grand Officers. The honour I have received this day has come to me most acceptably. I am an Essex man, son of an Essex man, received the Masonic light in an Essex lodge, and am a Past Master of two Essex lodges. If we are spared to meet again at the end of twelve months, I hope you will receive this toast with as great cordiality as it has met to-night. We ask you to be to our virtues very kind, and to our follies ever blind. I feel that every Grand Officer of the province will do his duty, and feel assured that I shall be obliged to do so myself in consequence of the splendid example set by my predecessor. I trust that when our terms of office may expire, we shall be greeted with the sentence of your approval as heartily as we have to-day received that of your congratulation.

Bro. Clarke followed. He desired to add to the remarks of the last speaker but a few words. Bro. Wigram has, he said, succeeded to an organisation that is in every way perfect, and that he will do all that is required of him in the firm conviction of all present. I thank you for the kind way in which I was always received while in occupation of the my office.

The Deputy Prov. G.M. stated that the Prov. Grand Master had entrusted to him the proposal of the next toast. He said: I could at this moment express two wishes, one that the toast had fallen into better hands, and another that it had been placed earlier on the list, so that it might have been given before those numerous visitors who have honoured us with their presence had been obliged to leave us. We have to-day been honoured with Masons conversant with the Craft, I may say in every part of the world. We are always proud to see our brethren among us, and tend them a hearty welcome. All we can do is to honour those brethren who have to-day visited us by drinking heartily to the toast.

Bro. Rev. C. J. Martyn, in his reply, tendered his thanks for the hearty reception accorded the toast. He hoped that he should have the pleasure of seeing several of the Essex brethren at the meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Suffolk on Monday next. He expressed the regret of the Master of his province that he was unable to attend the meeting of that day.

The Provincial Grand Master gave "The Health of the Officers of the Province," which was acknowledged by Bro. Rev. F. Shepherd, P.M. 276.

Bro. Verey proposed "The Masonic Charities," which was replied to by Bro. J. Terry, Sec. Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution.

A just compliment was paid by the Prov. Grand Master to the Committee of the Chelmsford Lodge who had been entrusted with the arrangements of the day, and on the W.M. of the lodge being called upon to respond, he expressed the thanks of his lodge to those Prov. Grand Officers who had assisted him. More especially he wished to thank Bro. Ralling, the Prov. G. Sec., who, he said, had been present at every meeting of the Committee.

Bro. Speight acted as toastmaster. During the evening a selection of music was performed, under the direction of Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, by Bros. John Hodges, Faulkner Leigh, C. Beckett, and Thurley Beale.

GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS.

The eleventh annual festival in aid of the Mark Benevolent Fund, was held on Wednesday last, the 2nd inst., at the Alexandra Palace, on which occasion W. Bro. Lord Arthur Hill, P.M. 164, P.G.S.W. Sussex, presided, supported by Baron de Ferrieres, Captain Hunter, and a numerous company, among whom were Bros. F. Davison, H. C. Levander, D. M. Dewar, J. H. Wynne, T. J. Pulley, J. H. Hale, W. Williams, E. W. Ansell, E. C. Milligan, T. Cubitt, G. W. Verry, Dr. Ace, E. Margrett, W. B. Date, H. Hopkinson, R. Berridge, W. Stephens, H. H. Swallow, Dr. Passawer, L.L.D., Rice, R. W. Philpott, J. L. C. Hunter Little, F. Binckes, and Massey (Freemason).

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Professor E. M. Lott, Grand Mark Organist, assisted by Bros. Hodges, Stedman, Egbert Roberts, and Bro. Stedman's choir boys.

Fifty-seven brethren and ladies sat down to dinner, which was admirably served by Bros. Bertram and Roberts, the lessees of the Palace.

At the conclusion of the banquet the Chairman rose and said,

Ladies and gentlemen, the first toast on the list is one which I know will be received in the most hearty and most cordial manner. The health to which I refer is that of "The Queen and Mark Masonry." Ever since Her Most Gracious Majesty has reigned over this country she has ruled it with a kind, a liberal, and a just hand; she has been more kind, more amiable, to her subjects than I can possibly find words to express, and she has especially extended that kindness to Mark Masonry. I give you with very great pleasure "The Health of the Queen and Mark Masonry."

The Chairman: Ladies and gentlemen, you must excuse my hurrying on from one toast to another, and not making many remarks upon each, as our time is short, and we have many toasts to consider. The next toast is "The Health of the M.W. Grand Mark Master, the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale." I feel convinced that, to those who have the pleasure of Lord Skelmersdale's acquaintance, it is needless to say anything about the very able way in which he carries out the duties of his very high position in Mark Masonry. Of those who have not the pleasure of knowing him there must be few among the present company who have not had the opportunity at some time or other of seeing him when he has been called upon to preside, and they must be well aware of the courtesy he exercises towards every one, and the perfect manner in which he carries on the duties of Grand Mark Master of England. I give you "The Health of the M.W. Grand Mark Master Mason, Lord Skelmersdale."

The Chairman: The next toast is that of "The M.W. Past Grand Mark Master Mason, the Right Hon. Lord Leigh; the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon; the Viscount Holmesdale, M.P.; W. W. B. Beach, Esq., M.P.; the Rev. George Raymond Portal, M.A.; the Right Hon. the Earl Percy; and the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick," and with that I shall couple the toast of "The Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Mark Master Mason, the Right Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore, and the Grand Officers, Past and Present." Really I don't think that any words are necessary from me to recommend this toast to your notice. I think that all of us here have had the pleasure of meeting one or the other of these brethren, and therefore I don't think it is necessary to say anything, but to ask you to drink with great cordiality the health of the brethren whose names I have just mentioned.

Bro. F. Davison: Brethren and sisters, on behalf of the Grand Officers Past and Present, I beg to thank you for the manner in which you have drunk their health. About the Past Masters I shall say little, because it is well known how well they have done their work; but about the present I beg to say that they all carry on the duties of their respective offices with ability and zeal to the best of their powers; and on behalf of the Grand Officers, both Past and Present, I beg to thank you. Our time is necessarily short, and I feel sure that the music is so far better than anything I can say, that I shall say no more on the subject.

The Chairman: The next toast on the list I think I may call the toast of the evening. It is "Prosperity to the Mark Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund and the Masonic Institutions." I think I may say a few words about the way in which the Mark Benevolent Fund has prospered and increased, and it has certainly increased very considerably. The first anniversary took place eleven years ago, and the amount of contributions that year was

£97 2s. 8d.; that was in 1869. That amount I am happy to be able to tell you has increased year by year, until last year it amounted to £370 4s. I am more pleased than I can express to be able to tell you that this year the subscriptions amount altogether to £526. Since the commencement of this Fund, thirty-six cases have been relieved in grants varying from £1 to £50 each. The amount of that was £433. Then £1000 is invested in Colonial Securities, £1000 is transferred to the Education Fund, and the expenses since 1869 have only amounted to £39—about £3 10s. a year; that left a credit at the bank of £106. In December, 1878, a vote was passed at Grand Lodge to this effect, that a portion of all sums paid to the Benevolent Fund shall go to the Education Fund, of which the bye-laws are on the table now. This year one boy has been elected and sent to the Manchester Grammar School, at an annual expense of twelve guineas. This is a very important thing. The boy is sent to Manchester to school, and this Institution is kept advised as to how he is going on. A quarterly report is sent to us from the Head Master of the Grammar School, giving the Court a report of the progress which the boy has made, as to his general behaviour, and as to the state of his health; and this report is forwarded by the Court to the boy's parents, should he have any. I do not think that any thing else particularly calls for attention except the list of Stewards and the sums collected by them on this occasion, which Bro. Dewar will read to you. I now have much pleasure in asking you to drink to "The prosperity to the Mark Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund and the Masonic Institutions."

The subscription list was then read by Bro. Dewar, and was as follows:—

The toast was responded to by Bro. Binckes, the Grand Mark Secretary, who remarked that the Fund had received a very large amount of support, which was increasing every year of its existence; and as regards the Masonic Institutions generally this had been the case, the three great Masonic Charities having this year secured the large sum of £38,000 amongst them—the largest sum that had ever been collected in any one year. He said that he looked with confidence to see a steady and large increase in the Mark Benevolent Fund, and reminded the company that it was not many years ago that the Boys' School Festival realised only a similar sum to that which had been announced to them this evening.

Bro. Binckes then proceeded to propose the next toast, viz., "The Health of the Chairman, the W. Bro. Lord Arthur Hill," a nobleman young in the Order perhaps, but entirely imbued with an admiration for Freemasonry, and an ardent lover of Mark Masonry, and who would, no doubt, shortly be placed in a high position in the chief council of the Order. He trusted that whatever distinguished honours might await his Lordship in years to come he would look back to this evening, not only without regret but with a large amount of gratification, as the evening of the most successful festival of the Mark Benevolent Fund.

The Chairman: Ladies and brethren, I am sure I do not know how to respond to Bro. Binckes's most liberal and most kind remarks. I am afraid that Bro. Binckes rather exaggerated. ("No, no.") Really it is very kind of you to say "no, no." I assure you that it is no trouble for me to come here, and I give way to none in the interest in Mark Masonry, and it, therefore, gives me pleasure to come here. And I can only say that as I have presided over you on the occasion of your having had—up to the present time—your most satisfactory festival, as far as the amounts are concerned, so do I hope that my successor, next year, will be presiding at a still more successful festival than this has been. I thank you all very much for the manner in which the toast, proposed by Bro. Binckes, was responded to.

Bro. Davison: In assuming the President's chair, I am sure I am expressing the sentiments of all present in saying that we regret that Lord Arthur Hill has been obliged to leave us. Ladies and brethren, the toast that I have to offer to your notice now is "The Health of the Board of Stewards." I am sure, from the account we have heard of their Stewardship, we owe them a great deal of gratitude for their exertions. You have heard that from very small beginnings we have arrived at a considerable amount, and, as our Grand Secretary has told us some facts about the early stages of a similarly constituted institution, there is no knowing what may happen in the future. But I am sure that a debt of gratitude and our best thanks are due to that Board of Stewards, and, if you will allow me, I will couple with that toast the name of Bro. Baron de Ferrieres.

Baron de Ferrieres: Mr. Chairman, ladies, and brethren, I feel bound to respond to the call of our esteemed Chairman, although I feel that there are many brethren who have served as Stewards many times and ought to have been called upon in preference to myself. It must be most gratifying to us all as members of the large body of Craft Masonry to hear of the large sum of £38,000 collected in a single year by the three great Masonic Charities, and I think as members of the small body of Mark Masons, it is equally gratifying to have heard of the collection of such an amount as has been announced this evening. I think that the educational feature of this Institution—that plan of sending boys to grammar schools near their own homes—is one deserving of the attention of the larger institutions with a view to its adoption by themselves. There is no doubt that, beyond a certain point, it is not desirable to associate children together in one body, and it might be considered with advantage, whether what is done by this Institution might not be adopted by the other Charities. It must be gratifying to us to feel that our labours have not been thrown away, but I think it is hardly fair to appraise a Steward's services by the amount he brings up. I feel that in many instances a brother who brings up a small sum has worked harder than some who have laboured in more favourable districts. I beg to thank you for the manner in which you have received this toast.

Bro. Binckes explained that when the fund, which resulted in the establishment of the Boys' School, was first instituted, and before they possessed a building, the boys were put out to school; and the results were unsatisfactory, and besides the Mark Masons' Educational Scheme was not exactly similar to the Boys' School. It was not an institution for boys who were orphans, or whose surviving parent was unable to educate him at all; it was rather intended as a sort of "grant in aid" to brethren who from the largeness of their family, or from other circumstances required some assistance in educating their children.

Bro. Capt. Hunter: Mr. Chairman and brethren, I am about to ask you to drink to "The Health of the Ladies," who have graced this social gathering with their presence. It is the duty, as I am sure it is the pleasure, of Freemasons throughout the country, nay throughout the world, to look in the first place to their wives and families. The brethren meet in social gatherings, and they probably, as we certainly do, have very festive evenings, but on every occasion I am sure the feeling is of the homes of the brethren, for Freemasonry is a great charity. It is useless for me to do more than ask you to drink the health of the ladies who have graced our table this evening. I am sure you will do so sincerely. I trust they have not passed an unpleasant evening, though it is to be regretted that the ungenial weather has prevented their visiting the beautiful grounds of the palace as they might desire. I can only thank the ladies very much for their presence, and assure them that the opportunity of meeting the brethren's gentler belongings tends to make brethren think better of each other. I will couple this toast with the name of Bro. Rushworth, that he may return thanks on their behalf.

Bro. Rushworth having briefly responded, The Chairman said, Brethren and Ladies, I am sure that the music we have had this evening has been eminently satisfactory, and I feel personally very much obliged to Bro. Lott, the Grand Organist, for giving us such music, and I think I cannot do better than propose his health, together with the health of those gentlemen who assisted him, and the members of the choir.

Bro. Lott having said a few words in acknowledgment, the company separated.

THE FREEMASON.

SATURDAY, JULY 5, 1879.

THE PAST OF FREEMASONRY.

In a very able leader, mainly with respect to the Lodge of Antiquity, the Times, on Thursday week, gave us a very remarkable and readable "leader" on Freemasonry. Not that the article professed to be very antiquarian, or very profound, or even, perhaps, very critical, but it skimmed over the ground easily and pleasantly, and laid before a very large circle of readers a well-written and philosophically conceived essay on certain features, salient and significant, which Freemasonry presented to the mind of the writer, and which deserves, therefore, respectful attention, and, above all, fraternal criticism. In a great deal which the writer there affirms we agree most heartily, in some points, however, we are compelled honestly to dissent from his views, most conscientious, no doubt, as they are, and certainly lucidly and eloquently expressed. We quite agree with the writer that in dealing with the antiquity of Freemasonry we must always carefully distinguish between the "legends of guilds," and the "facts of history." But then our good friend and probably brother, who is so clear a writer and so keen a critic himself, falls amusingly enough into the same very error he has just so characteristically reproved. Whatever may be the real antiquity of Masonry it is probably coeval with the Masonic guilds or sodalities, and hence no doubt much of the doubt and obscurity, and the incorrect assertions and exaggerated claims which have arisen and which marked most undoubtedly the lucubrations of many Masonic writers, ancient and modern. But, as we said, if the writer of this interesting article complains of undue acceptance of "legends," why has he fallen into the same mistake by treating the so-called Locke MS., and the alleged endorsement or transcript of Henry VI. as a reality, when that so-called MS. has long been abandoned by experts as a "pious fraud"? And why above all does he suggest the absorption of the speculative element into the operative guilds as "possible" in the 15th century, when it is clear from countless evidences which might be adduced, that such transformation could not and did not take place until about the middle of the 17th century? We are not quite sure either whether we can accept, as indisputable facts, one or two statements in respect of the Lodge of Antiquity itself, with all due submission to the writer. There is in existence no evidence that King Charles II. laid the foundation stone of St. Paul's; all existing available evidence declares that Sir Christopher Wren laid it himself. But it is just possible that the tradition may allude to some special ceremony at St. Paul's with which King Charles II. was connected, and we do not know, except for historical truth's sake, that it matters much one way or the other. The gavel was undoubtedly given to the lodge by Bro. Sir Christopher Wren. The statement of the initiation of King William III. is also only a "tradition," and we are not aware of any document in the possession of the Lodge of Antiquity which mentions the fact as a fact. We venture to say all this in order to point out that even in 1879 how difficult it is to separate "tradition" from "history," and how that, as it has been said, how true it still is—

"Tradition, oh, tradition, thou of the seraph tongue,
The ark which binds two ages, the ancient and the young."
We thence learn a lesson of caution as to blaming older writers. We do not agree with the writer when he seems to contend that there is some truth after all in the favourite Ultramontane complaint, that the "French lodges were instrumental in fostering the French Revolution." We do not think that any evidence of such a tendency really exists, but much, very much, to the contrary may be adduced. That in some of the lodges extreme views of politics may have prevailed is not unreasonable or impossible to suppose, but all the lodges, both under the old "Grande Loge de la France" and the "Grand Orient," were plunged into "sommeil" or inactivity by the Revolution, and only emerged from torpor and silence after the "reign of terror" was over. That one or two bodies, quasi-Masonic, like those of the "Philosophic Scottish Rite" and the "Philaletes," and, above all, the "Illumines," may have encouraged the revolutionary movement, is, we think, proveable, but the pure Masonic Craft lodges in Paris and the departments, to their honour, be it said, did not sympathize either with the principles or proceedings of the French Revolution. The writer unconsciously and unintentionally exaggerates on imperfect data, the number of Masons in the world, which instead of six millions may be reduced to the more modest tottle of 1,500,000, and he hardly, in our opinion, does justice to the 600,000 Craft Masons in the United States, inasmuch as the Templar body, popular and numerous as it is, is only after all about one twenty-fourth part of Craft Masonry and of Master Masons. But having said all this, which we feel it our duty, as the Freemason, to say, we beg to remark that we are greatly pleased and flattered to think that, in such marked contrast with much we have to wade through about Freemasonry, the Times has favoured us with an article, alike so able and so interesting, so favourable, and so fair to our Order. It is, we venture to think, a sign of the times in which we live, alike suggestive and satisfactory, and we can only commend the article to the notice of all our readers in both hemispheres, as, despite a few, perhaps, unavoidable errors, slight after all, in theory and assertion, it will alike repay careful perusal by the Masonic student and archæologist, by all who love Freemasonry, by all who are proud to claim the name of Freemasons.

THE LAST ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The Stewards' returns, which our readers have perused, are both interesting and suggestive in the highest degree, inasmuch as they prove we think, beyond possibility of cavil, that the charity of Freemasonry is still a living truth, and that the warm hands and hearts of Masons are neither cold nor slack, neither "weary in well-doing" nor retrograde in the best of all causes—Masonic benevolence. Under the peculiar circumstances of the times, under the present condition of commerce and agriculture, under that tendency to panic, apprehension, and hopeless despondency which sometimes seems to afflict some of us, the return is a good one, though, of course, it might have been much better. This is an obvious truism which it is needless to dilate upon and useless to ignore. At the same time it is, in our opinion, most unwise to preach or to blame, to complain or find fault. Another year Bro. Binckes will, let us all hope, announce a fuller return, and let us note this great fact per se, to which Bro. Terry has properly called attention, that the English Freemasons have sent up already £37,000 to the three festivals, and that probably before the end of the year £44,000 will be realized, an amount unprecedentedly large, and, in our opinion, most creditable to our zealous and large-hearted Fraternity. Indeed, under such circumstances, to talk of a "magnificent failure" is a monomania, to blame brethren or lodges unfair. The Boys' School has done very well considering all things, and we see no reason to grumble or complain. On the present occasion the Metropolitan lodges have returned £5345 1s. 6d., the Provincial £5189 1s. 6d.; there are eight London lists to come in and four Provincial, in all twelve. We fear we cannot put the possible addition to the list at above £200, though we should be greatly pleased if we could hope that before 1879 is over the returns may be yet largely increased. Of the London lodges, the first and foremost is No. 1642, Steward Bro. George Penn, who brings up the noble amount of £525. We congratulate Bro. Penn and Lodge 1642. The next is Grand Stewards Lodge, Bro. Binckes, with £249 18s.; and the third is 1383, Bro. R. W. H. Giddy, £207 2s.; No. 1537, Bro. Ralph Clutton, with £143 10s., fourth; No. 174, Bro. C. Lacey, is fifth in order, with £135; and No. 25, Bro. G. R. Sherrill, is sixth with £128 2s.; No. 1608, Bro. Charles Brewer, is seventh, with £118

12s. 6d.; and No. 820, Bro. Charles Hubbard, is eighth, with £115 10s.; No. 1777, Bro. H. B. Marshall, is ninth, with £105; No. 96, Bro. V. V. Morgan, is tenth, with £103 19s.; and No. 65, Bro. G. T. Brown, is eleventh, with £100. The remaining lodges vary from £91 17s. 6d., the highest, to £10 10s., the lowest. We regret to notice so few lodges from 1600 to 1800, and that only nineteen lodges are represented in the Metropolis and eight in the Provinces, in all twenty-seven. This is all wrong, and is a point to which we ought to pay attention at once, because it is indicative of coming evil to the Craft. In the provinces Kent heads the list with £604 13s. 6d., and is followed by Worcestershire, with £580 10s.; W. Yorkshire succeeds, with £400; and Gloucestershire is not far off, with £378. Berks and Bucks next draw near with £295 4s., of which Bro. Dick Radclyffe brings up £131 16s., and is succeeded by Dorsetshire, very close at hand indeed, with £295 2s., while Derbyshire comes next, with £277 2s.; Sussex is not far off with £275 11s., and Staffordshire succeeds, with £216 6s. The Grand Lodge of Scotland remits £204 15s. After an interval, Hampshire and the Isle of Wight appear, with £173 5s.; Somersetshire forwards £134 8s.; Durham brings £130 4s.; Middlesex is next, with £122 7s.; Suffolk has collected £112 7s.; and Essex is credited with £103 7s. 6d. The remaining amounts vary from £97 2s. 6d., in the highest, to £25, the lowest. We do not deny that we could have wished the returns larger, but under the circumstances we have, we think, no right to complain, but rather much to be thankful for. We are aware that a large margin still remains of general lodge and chapter support of the Charities, and of more earnest efforts for charity by some lodges, where a good deal is spent on "creature comforts," more than perhaps ought to be spent. But, on the whole, we do not believe in lachrymose tones or a deprecatory spirit, and "content with honest efforts" we think it well always to take a hopeful and manly view of things in this world in general, and in Masonic affairs in particular. One fact is indeed indisputable, that we may all be proud of our Charities, and we are bound, above all, to thank those worthy brethren of ours, who, year after year, "in season and out of season," give most liberal and valuable support to our great Charities. If any of our readers are cold or apathetic, doubting or languid in this good cause, we simply say "remember what others have done, go and do thou likewise."

DUTCH FREEMASONRY.

According to our old antagonist and able Bro. Adrien Grimaux, that, of course, being only his "nom de plume," in the Monde Maconique, our good brethren in Holland are about to commit the same great "betise," and the moral wrong which the French Grand Orient has committed, and are now plunged into the midst of a dubious contest for the revision of rituals. According to Bro. Grimaux's intelligent correspondent from Amsterdam, in this revision no mention is henceforth to be made of T.G.A.O.T.U., but then, the correspondent goes on to add, this dubious and remarkable qualification of the proceeding, "Mais d'autre cote, ou ne consentera jamais a donner entree aux athees," but on the other side, they will never consent to grant admission to atheists. Why not? when the formula of avowal of belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. is suppressed. We do not profess to understand this statement, or is it only, as the French say, "encore du jesuitisme?" more Jesuitry. It seems that the Grand Orient of Holland wishes to retain the ascription to the glory of T.G.A.O.T.U., and has sent a circular to its lodges asking them to join in a declaration calling on the Grand Orient of France not to persist in this step of erasure, as threatened by the movement party, and the ritual revision on hand in the French Grand Orient. Bro. Grimaux's correspondent thinks that many of the Dutch lodges will not sign this declaration. We are very sorry for the Dutch Freemasons, and lament much to think of them playing "second fiddle" to an assembly like the Grand Orient of France, which has now lost its "prestige" and its authority Masonically, and which it is doubtful if it has any Maconic "status." Such a fact is more than saddening—it is humiliating. Like the Grand Lodges of America and Canada, we cannot recognize that to be a legal Maconic authority, or those to be lawfully received Masons, by which and by whom the great foundation truth of cosmopolitan Masonry is openly disavowed, or rigidly excluded from ritual and from teaching. Neither can we admit Masons into our lodges initiated under such a Régime. Such a body is simply an unbelieving secret society, prejudicial to morals and good government, to the interests of society, and the welfare of Freemasonry.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even approving of, the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish in the spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.]

THE REPORT OF THE CONSECRATION OF THE CLAPHAM LODGE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—
I must respectfully but earnestly demur to the running commentary introduced by your reporter into the few remarks I made at the consecration of the Clapham Lodge in returning thanks for the Officers of Grand Lodge.

In the first place I hold that it is scarcely becoming in a reporter to take such a self-sufficient line, on whatever side of a question his sympathies may lie.

In the second place I dispute the accuracy of almost every statement he has been pleased to make.

It is in my humble opinion the province of a reporter to report what has been said, or if he thinks it worthless to omit it altogether, but it is not his function to suppress what has been said, and give instead thereof his own personal commentary, thus taking the place of judge, jury, and witness.

Now, as to his statements:—

1. With all due deference to him I contend my views on charity voting are not "peculiar," but held by three men out of every four who have no "vested interests" to serve, and have not been involved in the haphazard jobbery which the present system so manifestly fosters.

2. I deny that these views are even "antagonistic to the Craft at large;" on the contrary, I assert that if Masons were polled to-morrow, three-fourths would be found on the side of enquiry, justice, and mercy, and, therefore, opposed to the abuses of the present system. To one thing I can speak without hesitation that I know of dozens of influential Masons, holding high rank in the Craft, who have denounced these abuses in no measured terms, and who will before long speak out (as I have dared to) their minds upon this subject.

3. Though the brethren present did not express any "concurrence" in the views put forth, I have yet to learn that such silence meant dissent, and as to "disapprobation," I certainly did not catch the faintest sound of it. I may add that in far the larger proportion of Masonic meetings at which I have named the subject, the views I have ventured to express have been received with loud concurrence and approval.

4. I never even named the "Charity Organisation Society," but simply stated that if any of the brethren happened to have opportunity to attend the annual meeting of the "Charity Voting Reform Association" next day they would hear from Lord Derby some instructive statements on a subject, so deeply interesting to Masons.

The "Alexandra Palace meeting" was not in my mind when I named this, nor shall I stop to show which of the two meetings was likely to confer more dignity and real profit on Masonry. But I think I could do this, and easily too.

And now, Dear sir and Brother, permit me to say that I shall always feel myself perfectly at liberty to express my opinions in every assembly of Masons on any subject that is "good for Masonry in general," or for the "lodge in particular" of which I may be a member, and no amount of sneer or perverse comment, either on the part of Secretaries or reporters, shall deter me from having the honesty of my convictions, and expressing them too. Plain truth must be evil spoken of, at least for a time, and reform must ever encounter much opposition and obloquy, but both will, and must, eventually triumph, as in the case of the Royal Medical Benevolent College it has recently done, wherein 2770 as against 364 Governors endorsed our views, which were carried by resolution at the annual meeting by five to one in the face of the Council, the majority of whom were hostile to reform; and so, please God, we shall have it in Masonry soon, and, while our votes remain, they will be stripped of those unjust, undignified, wasteful, and cruel accompaniments—polling days, exchanges, trafficking, and wholesale canvassing, which are "spots on our feasts of charity," and on our charity itself.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
R. J. SIMPSON.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—
Permit me to call attention to a matter which I think will prove of great importance to the Craft generally, viz., the suggestion of the M.W. Bro. the Earl of Rosslyn, as to the advisability of establishing a fund for the assistance of boys and girls after leaving our Institutions.

This is not a new topic, as it has often been discussed by me, and, no doubt, many brethren. It has at last happily been brought prominently and gracefully before the brethren by the M.W.P.G.M. of Scotland, the Earl of Rosslyn, in his speech at the Boys' Festival. As Chairman of the festival he remarked, "I will tell you a little fault, and am sure I have only to mention it to find it immediately corrected. It is not impossible that at the end of their schooling career some of these boys may leave the school homeless and in need. It may be said that the good seed sown may bear fruit during their scholastic career, but it may also be said the fruit will perish for want of cultivation at a later period. It may be that they leave the Institution to fall into evil courses and evil ways, and even to suffer penury and poverty. This is the only blot I can find in your excellent Institution." I think another blot his lordship has overlooked is the desirability of providing a sinking fund for the Institution, that they might be more independent of individual exertions, and not suffer from the vicissitudes of trade, hard times, &c. However, this is digressing. To return to the subject of his lordship's remarks. I think he has struck a happy chord. There can be no doubt the children receive splendid educations, and are thoroughly cared for whilst in the Institutions, but is it not proved that the comfort and ease the children experience in their early years make it doubly hard to bear privations when they have to face the stern fight of life? How often is it found that they are discouraged and give up, where others who from children have been nursed in the rough school of life are not so sensitive, plod on, and succeed? A little assistance in such critical moments might be the means of laying the foundation of a life's success.

I feel I am not able to plead the children's cause as ably as I would like, and can only hope these remarks may strike the heart of some able writer who will take up the cause. I shall, therefore, content myself by stating a remedy. The M.W. and noble Chairman expressed his willingness to subscribe to such a fund started for the purpose of assisting the children. I would propose, therefore, that on the next Stewards' papers a column is left for subscriptions and donations to the "Assistance Fund." This would save expense of collecting, and, as an inducement to the brethren and Stewards to collect for the fund, to allow, say, one vote for every twenty pounds collected for this purpose. There need be no special banquet or festival, simply let it be recognised as a special fund, and Stewards for the Boys' and Girls' Festival invited to solicit subscriptions. As such a fund only wants a start to be a reality I would propose that 200 brethren volunteer to raise subscriptions, and guarantee, say within two years, to collect at least £100 each, and if our M.W. Chairman heads the list as he has promised, I have no doubt a good round sum would be soon forthcoming—this, invested in the names of Trustees in Consols or other good security, would form the nucleus of a great Charity Fund.

As deeds are better than words, I shall have much pleasure in offering my services as one Steward, and guarantee no less than £100 within two years.

Having called attention to what I think is a want, may I hope you will give publicity to it, in the hope that the brethren will freely discuss the pros and cons with a view to find out if the suggestion made by our illustrious Chairman will prove as acceptable to the brethren at large as it does to

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
DICK RADCLYFFE.

129, High Holborn, June 28.

P.S.—There are, say, 1800 lodges; if each M.W. for the year 1880 instead of a jewel were to propose the cost be placed to the fund, no less than, say, £6000 would be raised. I mention this to show how easy it would be in small matters to raise a large sum. To forego one banquet in each lodge would treble this sum. Should we ever regret such privations?

MASONIC GRAMMAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—
In writing what I hope may be my last letter on this subject I desire to resent the charge which "Lindley Murray" has brought against me—that of having descended to "vulgar personality." The adjective is a very offensive one, and, on reflection, your correspondent will, I doubt not, be willing to admit that he had no sufficient ground for its use. Should he be unwilling to make this admission, it will be only just on his part, since I do not screen myself under an assumed name, to show from anything I have written that his charge was not unwarranted. He speaks, too, of ineptitude, from which, he says, it is quite refreshing to turn away, but to which, as your readers observe, he immediately, and apparently not without some pleasure, returns. Indeed, he harps on this point all through his letter; and that without any show of reason whatever. I not only did not fail to understand what he meant in the first instance, but I have said nothing from which he could justly infer that I was, to use an expression which he himself has culled, "pettiniously thick-headed." The appositeness of the lines from Dryden is not, therefore, very apparent. Indeed, I consider "Lindley Murray" singularly (or plurally) unhappy in his quotations; for neither is the sentence from Scott appropriate to the case of which he was writing. Surely "Lindley Murray," a brother who can "speak to experts," might have chosen from the wide field of English literature—if he had the desire to quote—passages which would have been far more applicable. But now with regard to the more serious charge of "vulgar personality."

I own that my last letter contained personalities. It is difficult to avoid them in answering a brother who is himself very personal. But I have asserted nothing which I could not substantiate. I said "Lindley Murray" was disputatious. Why did he begin this controversy? From time to time we see in the pages of the Freemason that it has readers far more competent than "Lindley Murray" to deal with a question of this kind, who must have seen the word which offended his hypercritical eye, and who yet allowed it to pass. Your crotchety correspondent could not.

I said he was inconsistent, and I feel sure you have not one reader (except himself—he likes people to be particular) who will deny that, while "Lindley Murray" has charged me with being personal, he has been far more personal in his own remarks. Is it not personal to say a brother is deficient in capacity, and to apply to him the lines which were written by Dryden of Shadwell? More virulent (I do not say vulgar) personality cannot be conceived, and could not be exemplified even by "Lindley Murray." There is a predisposition in some people to be personal. "Lindley Murray" himself esteems it a blemish in human character; let me assure him it is one which is likely to be much aggravated in those who admire the style in which "Absalom and Achitophel" is written.

I said that "Lindley Murray" was inaccurate in his statements, and this controversy, whatever else it does, clearly shows the truth of my remark. He has had to own that he was wrong in saying (1) that exceptional was in Johnson; (2) that exceptional and exceptional were synonymous; and (3) that the use of the word exceptional was not warranted by any authority but mine. He cannot be accurate even in smaller matters. He imputes to me ignorance of the common use of the word stickler without the least ground for so doing; and I notice, as all readers of Scott will have noticed, that he speaks of a Bertram in the "Antiquary," whereas in that novel there is no such character. Of course "Lindley Murray" may reply that it was very pardonable to forget that Bertram is found in "Guy Mannering." I do not say it matters much; and, since the words of the quotation are given as in the original, I mention the circumstance, in addition to these other four instances, only to show with what caution the statements of "Lindley Murray" must be received. Strange that those who are inaccurate themselves should be so ready to see the fault in others! "Lindley Murray" seems to know Dryden. Can he not admire this passage:—

"The soul, shut up in her dark room,
Viewing so clear abroad, at home sees nothing;
But, like a mole in earth, busy and blind,
Works all her folly up, and casts it outward
To the world's open view."

Lastly, I said that, to judge from "Lindley Murray's" letters, there was little to show that he had any qualification which decidedly entitled him to assume the office of a censor in a matter of this kind. It was the remark of a great critic, speaking of literary work:—

"Sunt delicta tamen quibus ignovisse velimus;" but will you allow me to say—I do not say it harshly—that, after making every allowance for your correspondent, the more I have seen of his productions, the more confirmed has my opinion become? He has already disputed my capacity; and, therefore, I could not possibly hope to persuade him that his style is not good, or that, in the case of every letter which he has written on this subject, it is marked by many inelegancies. This is a question on which many of your readers who have seen these letters will have already formed their opinion, and it is one to do justice to which would require too much of your space, and too much of my time, even if "Lindley Murray" were likely to be influenced by what I might write.

"Lindley Murray" has advised me to refer to Todd's Johnson's Dictionary, for he says "Emollit rores, nec sinit esse feros." The circumstances of the case do not allow this to appeal to me as a powerful argument, but I shall get the book. Let me also advise your correspondent, not in the words of the midwife in the passage (from which he quoted), to "Do anything but write;" for I say what is said a few lines further on—

"I see, I see, 'tis counsel given in vain;"
but let me advise him, in the words which Polonius addressed to Laertes—

Beware

Of entrance into quarrel but, being in,
Bear it that the opposer may beware of thee."
I hope there is nothing in this letter which will wound the feelings of "Lindley Murray," or confirm in him the idea that I am "vulgarily personal." I have read the article on "Personality in Masonic writing," suggested, no doubt, by this controversy. Its impartiality, its tolerant spirit, its gentle rebuke, and, above all, its strong common sense invest it with a power by which it is impossible that our minds should not be affected. In a discussion of this kind one is so easily led from the "retort courteous" (as Touchstone has shown) to the "quip modest," "the reply churlish," "the reproof valiant," and so on even, except in the case of Masons, to the "lie direct." I cannot conscientiously plead guilty to the charges made against me by "Lindley Murray;" but we are brethren, and ought to part, since we are about to part, on fraternal terms. Let me therefore retract anything I may have written which seemed to him a "vulgar personality," and let me assure your correspondent that I never supposed any remark of mine could have been so characterised.

Yours fraternally,
T. M. DRON, J.W. 417.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."
Dear Sir and Brother,—
I have been much surprised at the rather hair-splitting—if not head-splitting—controversy lately going on in your columns on English grammar, as I think, with one of old, how delightful it is for brethren to dwell together in unity, and that they, especially, ought to do so; in fact, to use a very common, but very ungrammatical—or rather absurd—phrase, that, of all others, they ought to be the last to fall out, especially about trifles.

I was equally pleased with your very sensible and well-written article upon the subject. May those whom it concerns profit by it. I, too, might have written to say that I was no aware that Masonic grammar differed from that of other people, as I really thought; but I cannot help saying that in reading the letter of one of your correspondents (I think Bro. Mackenzie's) one would be led to infer that such was the case, as he begins with this astonishing sentence: "I was not previously aware that Freemasons in any way differed in the construction of the English language to others." Now for a person to rush, uncalled, into a controversy on rather a nice point in the English language, and to commence his letter with such a sentence as that, does certainly seem extraordinary, and shows the truth of what you say, that people ought to consider before they do anything of the kind.

Yours, &c.,
OBSTUPUI.
MASONIC LITERATURE.
To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—
Referring to your journal of the 19th of April, and your remarks under the above heading, I note your remark that the "Masonic public wants educating" as to the high importance and value and light "imparted by 'Masonic literature.' And as a rule you fear the less profound artistic and aesthetic level of Masonic literature is preferred, which deals with the 'menu' and the 'songs,' which sets up elaborate 'summonses' and deftly decorated invitations as the 'summum bonum' of Masonic literary taste and power, and that you fear the majority of our Order remain perpetually indifferent to the lucubrations of the Masonic antiquarian, or the pages of the Masonic historian." Now Sir, while agreeing with you as to the importance, and value, and light imparted by "Masonic literature," and while not differing with you to some extent in your latter remarks—that is as to the existence of those practices—I yet must, in all due deference, submit that the sense in which you have connected them, as "their being preferred, &c.," is unjust and uncharitable. I claim for myself every desire to study Masonic literature, but while the "price" of such stands at the exorbitant rate as at present, you must not be surprised at that apparent want of interest in Masonic literature which, as your remarks would seem to point out, exists. If you can be the means of causing "Masonic literature" to be put within the reach of the brethren, the same as other valuable literature, I think you would find no cause to draw any future comparisons, which as some one remarked are "odorous," but would deserve the thanks of the Craft.

Yours fraternally,
CHEAP LITERATURE.

Bro. Middleton assisted Bro. Gilbert, the Prov. Grand Tyler.

The Grand Lodge having been opened, the minutes read, and the report of the Audit Committee adopted, on the motion of Bro. Davison, seconded by Bro. Sabine, Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Prov. Grand Treas.; for which mark of confidence and esteem Bro. Buss returned his sincere thanks.

It was then arranged that the meetings of Prov. Grand Lodge should take place annually on the fourth Saturday in June.

The Prov. G. Master in proposing that £10 10s. be granted from the Benevolent Fund to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, £10 10s. to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and £10 10s. to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, said it required very few words from him to induce the brethren to assist the Charities in the way they had done in former years, and were very happy to do. The province had had rather an uphill work in its younger days, but it had reduced its difficulties now to an infinitesimal measure, and he hoped that by next year, even after assisting the Charities, there would be a balance altogether in favour of the Prov. G. Lodge. The Masonic Institutions told their own tale, and there was hardly any necessity to say anything in their favour. By the exertions made on behalf of those Institutions very large sums had been raised, £10,000 to one, £11,000 to another, and £12,000 to another in one year, but there were very heavy calls on them, and it was the duty of Masons to place those Institutions in a proud position, not only before Masons but before the world. Other Charities thought themselves very fortunate if they collected £5000, but the Masonic Institutions had no difficulty in doubling that amount. He hoped it always would be so, and that by the benefits the Institutions afforded they would prove themselves worthy of such generous support.

Sir Charles Bright, D.P.G.M., seconded the motion, which was then put and carried by acclamation.

The sum of £10 was granted to a provincial brother in distress, and ordered to be paid immediately.

Bro. H. C. Levander, P.G. Secretary, read the letter he had been directed, by the vote of last Grand Lodge, to write to the widow of the late Bro. R. W. Little, and Grand Lodge was thereupon closed. The brethren afterwards attended the parish church, which had been kindly placed at the disposal of the Grand Lodge by the rector, the Rev. L. J. Bernays, where a sermon was preached by the Rev. John Robbins, Prov. G. Chaplain. After church the rector invited the brethren to the rectory house and grounds, after inspecting which a banquet, admirably supplied by Bro. Veal, of the Abercorn Arms, was partaken of. The customary toasts were afterwards honoured.

The Prov. G.M., in proposing "The Pro Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers," said that Lord Carnarvon was always ready to perform his duties, and when he was at the Colonial Office put himself to considerable inconvenience in order to preside at Grand Lodge. So much was this the case that it frequently kept him up till one o'clock in the morning discharging his secretarial duties. Lord Skelmersdale was also very energetic as Deputy Grand Master, as were also other Grand Officers. Some of these were present, and, while not forgetting Bro. Col. Shadwell Clerke, he wished to mention Bro. Richard Giddy, District Grand Master of Griqualand, where, under his rule, Masonry was now in a very flourishing condition, although the country, unhappily, was at present in a disturbed state.

Bro. R. H. Giddy, Dist. G.M. of Griqualand, replied. He felt a difficulty, he said, on such an occasion as that in replying to a toast so wide in its application, because, coming as he did a comparative stranger to England, he could not be supposed just yet to know the merits of the Grand Officers. He could, however, testify to the merits of Lord Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale. As far as he had seen, all the Grand Officers were worthy of the position they occupied, and he was very glad to find they were so highly appreciated by the brethren in general.

Bro. Giddy, in proposing "The Health of the Prov. Grand Master," said it had given him great pleasure to see the Grand Master conduct the business of Grand Lodge so admirably. Although liberalism of ideas was growing very extensively, Masons confessed that there must be a head to everything. It was necessary there should be a head of Grand Lodge, of Provincial Grand Lodges, and of private lodges. It was also necessary that there should be a head in business life. While Masons had such a head as the Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex, who ruled with courtesy and gentleness, as the brethren must confess he had ruled that evening, such a Provincial Grand Lodge as that of Middlesex must prosper.

The Prov. Grand Master, in response, said he felt considerable pride in having ruled over this province now within a few days of ten years. It gratified him very much, and he believed it would gratify every brother present, to hear the progress the province had made. If it had not been for the assistance of the officers of the province he should not have stood in the proud position he now did. He had had great kindness shown to him by all the brethren. He had not only the assistance of the brethren of Grand Lodge and the officers, but also the exertions of all the officers who presided over private lodges, and it was to them they had to look for assistance in Grand Lodge. They presided so well over private lodges that they brought those lodges up to a high condition. When this was the case they might be certain that the lodges would be creditable to the Craft in general. He was now getting an old Provincial Grand Master, and though some brethren might consider that he had ruled with a rod of iron, his heart had been in his work, and he was happy to say he had had no occasion to be severe. He had done his best to carry on his work in a gentle manner. He had found the duties of all the officers had been performed satisfactorily to everybody. He could not sit down without mentioning his pleasure at the kind reception given to Grand Lodge by the vicar of Great Stanmore, and he would read a letter he had just received from that gentleman, who was not a Mason. "My dear sir, I am much flattered by your invitation to join your banquet, especially as I understand it is not your rule to admit others than Masons. It is unfortunately not in my power to leave home this evening at all, as I am very specially engaged, otherwise I need not say how gladly I should express to you all the pleasure with which I welcome so excellent a Craft to my church and parish. I have to thank you for the contribution of £3 17s. to the use of our parish schools. We are sadly in want of additional funds for two additional desks, with one of which your liberality will provide me, and which shall be known as the Freemasons' desk. Will you be so good as to say for me that I hope it will not be the last time that you will visit the place, when you will as long as I am here always find a hearty welcome. Forgive me if I am unable to give you your due title. Yours, very truly, L. J. Bernays." That was a very kind and flattering letter indeed from a gentleman who was not a Mason. Every brother must have been gratified with what he had seen on visiting the parish church of Stanmore, and the vicar's house and grounds. He thought after they had been so liberally treated by having the church and the Memorial Hall placed at their disposal that Grand Treasurer might be authorised to add two guineas to the amount collected in the church, which two guineas would go towards buying the other desk.

To this there was a general exclamation of "Buy both desks," and the Provincial Grand Master concurring in the expression, it was resolved that both desks should be bought.

Bro. H. A. Dubois, Prov. G.J.W., in replying to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Officers," said those brethren had the interests of the province at heart, and it was their special interest to serve the Prov. Grand Master. He believed they did good service to Masonry in general. He had done his little to serve Freemasonry, more particularly in that province, and he should stick to the ship as long as he lived, which he hoped would be for many years to come. The endurance of the province he trusted would be for long after he was gone; but while he was alive he should give his adherence to the province of Middlesex. He believed the other Grand Officers would do the same. Under the able rule of the present Prov. Grand Master he was sure the province would flourish.

The Prov. G. Master, in giving the toast of "The Visitors," coupled with the name of Col. Shadwell Clarke, said that that brother was an old friend of his, and had greatly assisted him ever since he had been in Masonry. There was no more able supporter of the principles of Masonry than Col. Shadwell Clarke, or one better qualified to conduct all the rituals. From the Entered Apprentice's Degree to the Thirty-Third, Col. Shadwell Clarke could give them all with the greatest fluency and impressiveness.

Col. Shadwell H. Clarke, P.G.D., in reply, said, Col. Burdet had in the kindness of his heart spoken of him in connection with this toast in such very flattering terms, altogether undeserved by him, that he should feel quite unequal to returning thanks, did he not remember there were many other distinguished Masons present, whom he was deputed to represent. They all thanked the Prov. Grand Master very much for what he had said, and they also thanked the Grand Lodge for the hearty reception they had had. They agreed with all that had been said with regard to the merits of the province, especially with what Bro. Ciddy had said of the charming manner in which Col. Burdett had presided over the Prov. G. Lodge. The Prov. G.M. had pictured a very gloomy representation of his rule when he likened it to ruling with a rod of iron; but the brethren must acknowledge he had covered the rod with a glove of silk. He must congratulate him, not only upon the success of that day, when the visitors had been privileged to witness the continued success of the province since it had been established ten years ago. He had watched its progress with the greatest admiration, and must congratulate the Prov. G.M. on the position which the Prov. G. Lodge had taken. The success of the lodges in the province he attributed very much to the Prov. G. Master's ruling. It seemed to him that the Prov. G. Master went into every detail, and he was not sure that he had not found out that the clerk of the weather was a Mason, and had squared him, for after all the bad weather we have had lately he had secured a fine day for the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge.

Bro. Binckes replied to the toast of "The Charities," shortly after which the brethren returned to town.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF BERKS AND BUCKS.

The annual Provincial Grand Lodge for the Province of Berks and Bucks, presided over by Bro. Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., was held at Abingdon, on Thursday, the 26th ult., as briefly reported in our journal of last week, when the attendance was larger than might have been expected, the weather being unfavourable, and Abingdon being situated at one extremity of the province. As on the occasion of the last meeting of the Craft in this town, seven years since, Bro. E. J. Trendell, Past Master of the Abbey Lodge, kindly invited the brethren to his residence, Abbey House, where luncheon was provided in elegant style, and the brethren afterwards enjoyed a stroll through the grounds of their worthy host, which are laid out with excellent taste. After spending an hour or so most agreeably as Bro. Trendell's guests, the brethren proceeded to the County Hall, and, at about two o'clock, Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in due form by the R.W., the Provincial Grand Master, who was supported by many of the Provincial Grand Officers, present and past.

The attendance numbered upwards of 100, and included Bros. Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M.; James W. McCubbin, P.G.J.W.; C. R. Honey, P.G.C.; C. Stephens, P.G.T.; R. Bradley, P.G. Sec.; W. The minutes of the previous P.G. Lodge having been confirmed, the P.G. Secretary (Bro. Robert Bradley, of Reading) read the various reports, and mentioned the constitution of a new lodge (the Vale of White Horse Lodge), held at the Savings' Bank, Faringdon.

The general account showed a balance in hand of £158 11s. 2d., which was in excess of that of last year. The Charity Fund account was also read.

The P.G. Master referred to the reports read as showing Masonry to have made satisfactory progress in this province during the past year. The only matter for regret was that there were still some lodges that did not support the Charity Fund. He hoped the lodges alluded to would consider the question, and join the other lodges in exhibiting a hearty zeal in the cause of the several Charities of the Order. In all other respects matters were satisfactory, and he hoped that each succeeding year would find Masonry in Berks and Bucks flourishing more than in the previous one. (Applause.) Their next annual meeting would be held at about this time of the year at Maidenhead, which was a central place, and would, he thought, be found convenient for all the brethren. They had a strong muster that day considering that Abingdon was at the extreme end of the province, and he hoped that at Maidenhead they would have a still larger gathering.

The brethren then proceeded to the election of the Prov. Grand Treas., when, on the motion of the P.G. Master, seconded by Bro. E. J. Trendell, P.M., Bro. Chas. Stephens, banker, of Reading, was unanimously re-appointed to fill that office.

The P.G. Master then invested the following brethren with the Prov. Charity jewel:—Bros. Robert Roberts, W.M. 209; Robert Bradley, P.M. 414, Prov. Grand Secretary; and W. J. Goddard, 771.

The following brethren having been appointed Provincial Grand Officers for the ensuing year, were severally invested by Sir Daniel with the regalia of their respective offices:—

- " W. Hemmings... ... Prov. G. Tyler.

The Provincial Grand Master said the next duty he had to perform was one of a very pleasing nature, namely, to present on behalf of the brethren of this province a testimonial to their late Secretary, Bro. Biggs, in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered. (Applause.) He wished, however, that the task had devolved upon some one more capable than himself of expressing the deep debt of gratitude they owed to Bro. Biggs. When he (Sir Daniel) had the honour of first being appointed to preside over the province, which had not had a Provincial Grand Master for some time previously, he found the province in a state of disorganisation and confusion. Bro. Biggs, however, took office as Provincial Grand Secretary at the commencement, and he (Sir Daniel) need not point out the excellent organisation and position of Masonry in this province at the present time. To Bro. Biggs' energy and tact he mainly attributed the success that had been achieved. He (Sir Daniel) did not claim any credit himself, as the labour fell upon Bro. Biggs, he (Sir Daniel) being the nominal instrument for carrying out the work which Bro. Biggs laid out for him to do, and for which they were really indebted to him. He could never forget the debt of gratitude he owed to Bro. Biggs, and he hoped God would be pleased to spare him for many years to give them his assistance, and also to enjoy the use of what they had now the pleasure of presenting to him as a slight recognition of his services. (Applause.)

The testimonial, which had been subscribed for by the Provincial Grand Lodge, the different lodges in the province, and also by individual members, consisted of a purse containing a cheque for one hundred guineas, the purse itself being lettered as follows:—

"To Bro. W. Biggs, P.M., P.Z., &c., &c., containing 100 guineas, by the brethren of Berks and Bucks, on his retirement from the office of Grand Secretary, with their fraternal regards, June 26th, 1879."

A handsome timepiece, with plate affixed, bearing the following inscription:—

"Presented to Bro. William Biggs, P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. S.G.W., Wilts, &c., by the brethren of the Province of Berks and Bucks, together with a purse of 100 guineas, in recognition of his valuable services as Provincial Grand Secretary from 1869 to 1877. This presentation was made by Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., Provincial Grand Master, 26th June, 1879."

Also a silver snuff-box, beautifully engraved with the emblems of the principal offices Bro. Biggs had held in the provinces of Wilts and Berks and Bucks, the following being inscribed in the centre:—"Presented to Bro. W. Biggs, P.M., P.Z., &c., by the brethren of the province of Berks and Bucks, together with a purse of 100 guineas, on his retirement from the office of Prov. Grand Sec., 26th June, 1879."

Bro. Biggs, in reply, said that no words he could utter could sufficiently express his gratitude to the brethren for their handsome presentation, or his sense of the kindness and courtesy he had always received from Sir Daniel, and the ready access to him which it had been his privilege to enjoy at all times during the period he held the important office of Provincial Grand Secretary. That it was an important office he did not for one moment deny, and he felt much gratified in having received this testimonial from the hands of Sir Daniel, and in knowing that during the time he held the office he had discharged its duties in a manner that had met with his approval. He desired to fulfil the duties satisfactorily from the first moment he took office until his resignation, and this testimonial gave proof that he had succeeded in doing so to the satisfaction of the brethren at large. (Hear, hear.) He thanked them all most sincerely for this very great mark of their esteem. He never, in the slightest degree, anticipated any such result as this. He took the office, having known Sir Daniel for so many years previously in the adjoining province of Wilts, and being desirous of helping him as much as he possibly could. He thanked the brethren of the province generally for the able assistance they had invariably given him in carrying out his duties. They could all appreciate the high position which this province now occupied. From the date it was first formed, in 1791—eighty-five years ago—it had only had six Prov. Grand Masters to preside over it, but never during the whole of that period had Masonry flourished or been in such favour as at the present time. (Applause.) It was certainly a most fortunate selection when Sir Daniel was placed at the head of affairs in this province, and he was sure they all entertained an earnest hope that their worthy Grand Master might be spared many years to preside over them. (Hear, and applause.) When he came into office the number of Masons in the province was not over 400, but that day they had heard that the number was 751, or nearly double, while the number of lodges at the present time was seventeen, as against ten when he took office. (Applause.) Those facts showed that what Sir Daniel had done had been thoroughly appreciated, and met with the approval of the brethren, and that many had been induced to join the Order. Sir Daniel had always been careful to make an equal distribution of appointments in Berks and Bucks, so that one part of the province could not complain of any preference being shown to the other, and he was confident that no appointment made had given greater satisfaction to the brethren generally than that of his successor, Bro. Robert Bradley. (Applause.) He was glad the collar which he wore for some years had fallen upon the shoulders of one well able to sustain the work, one who was always to the fore in any good work connected with Masonry. (Applause.) Bro. Bradley's time was very valuable, holding as he did several important offices, but still he gladly gave up a large portion of it to the duties of his office, and he felt sure Bro. Bradley's appointment would prove to the advantage, not only of Masonry in general but to this Provincial Grand Lodge in particular. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Biggs again expressed his warmest thanks to Sir Daniel and the brethren, and concluded with the hope that the Great Architect of the Universe would continue to prosper all the lodges, and every member composing them.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was closed shortly afterwards, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet, served in the Council Chamber.

The tables were adorned with beautiful flowers, arranged in the form of Masonic devices, liberally supplied by Bro. Dick Radclyffe, Provincial Grand Steward, and the banquet was admirably provided by Mr. Pilgrim, of the Queen's Hotel.

The Provincial Grand Master presided, and letters of apology for non-attendance were read from the Deputy Provincial Grand Master (the Ven. Archdeacon Cust), Lord Harry Thynne, M.P., and others.

The usual Masonic toasts were given from the chair, and Bro. Tombs, G.D., P.G.S. for Wilts, responded on behalf of the Grand Officers of England.

Bro. Trendall, P.M., proposed "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master," and the toast having been drunk with great enthusiasm, Sir Daniel responded, and proposed "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master, the Past D.P.G. Masters, and the Past Grand Officers," for whom Bro. Hodges, P.P.G.S.W., returned thanks.

Bro. Stephens, P.G. Treasurer, gave "The Health of the Visiting Brethren," for whom Bro. Bruton replied.

Bro. the Rev. C. R. Honey proposed "The Masonic Charities," referring with pleasure to the fact of the different lodges in the province having last year contributed £700 to the Masonic Charities. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Terry, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, who, in the course of an able speech, said that last night witnessed the completion of what might be called the Masonic year as regards the Charitable Institutions of the Order. At the festival held the following sums have been raised, viz., £14,300 for the Benevolent Institution, £12,200 for the Girls' School, and £10,500 for the Boys' School, or in round numbers nearly £37,000, which was in excess of any amount contributed in any one year. Still he hoped that before the year had expired there would have been contributed for the three Institutions a total sum of something like £44,000. (Cheers.) He referred to the marked success achieved by the pupils at both the Girls' and the Boys' Schools, in the Oxford and Cambridge local examinations, and alluding to the Benevolent Institution, said that the annuities granted this year to aged Freemasons and widows of Freemasons—the amount of each voted to the former being £40, and to the latter £30—represented a total of £10,700, which was a great work for one Institution to accomplish. (Cheers.) He concluded with an earnest appeal on behalf of the Charitable Institutions of the Order.

The P.G. Master proposed "The Health of Bro. Trendall," thanking him on behalf of the brethren for the very handsome reception he had given them that day. (Cheers.)

Bro. Trendall assured the brethren that if they felt half the pleasure in visiting him that he had experienced in entertaining them, he was more than repaid for anything that he had done. (Cheers.)

"The Health of the Prov. Grand Officers appointed that day" was then drunk, and Bro. Blandy Jenkins, P.G. S.W., returned thanks.

The P.G. Master then proposed "The Health of the W.M., Officers, and Brethren of the Abbey Lodge," thanking them for the manner in which they had received the Prov. Grand Officers that day.

Bro. Shepherd responded.

The P.G. Master then gave "The Health of the P.G. Treasurer, Bro. Stephens, and the P.G. Secretary, Bro. R. Bradley," who severally returned thanks.

The P.G. Master then proposed "The Health of the P.G. Stewards," coupling with it the name of Bro. Dick Radclyffe, and thanking him for his floral contribution and also for his spirited efforts on behalf of the Masonic Charities.

Bro. Radclyffe replied, after which the Tyler's toast was given, and the company rose.

During the evening an excellent selection of songs and glees were rendered by Bros. Rowley, Shepherd, Plumridge, and Clarke.

FESTIVAL OF THE DOMATIC LODGE. NO. 177.

This famous old lodge held its summer festival on Friday, the 27th ult., and, fortunately for the members and their friends, there was on that day a great improvement in the weather. The scene fixed upon for the festivities was beautiful Richmond, and the hostelry where the banquet was provided was the renowned Star and Garter, where, it is needless to add, this portion of the entertainment, under the management of Bro. Hunt, was all that could be desired. One good result of the backward season is that the foliage in the park has now all the fresh beauty of springtime, and many of the visitors who came early employed their time in taking pleasant walks or drives about the park and neighbourhood.

There was a larger gathering than had been anticipated, one hundred and twenty-one sitting down to the banquet, at which Bro. Edward White, W.M. of the lodge, presided. Among those present were Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. George Everett, Mr. G. L. Everett and Miss Fisher, Mr. W. K. Everett and Miss Della Everett, Miss Alice Tidd, Capt. Jaques and Mrs. Jaques, Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Hugall, Mr. and Mrs. John Kent, Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Foulger, Mr. and Mrs. J. Jones, Mrs. S. Jones, Mr. W. Rose, Mr. R. Rose and Miss Brinlaw, Mr. T. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hill and Miss Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Spink and Miss Young, Mr. Buscall, Mr. Herbage, Mr. T. W. Armstrong, Mr. J. Abrams, Mr. A. R. Abrams, Mr. W. M. Foxcroft, Mr. D. J. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. R. Bennett, Mr. W. Miller and friend, Mr. R. W. Crane, Mr. H. Ralph, Mrs. Ralph and Mr. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Turner, Mr. C. A. Smith, Mr. Fergusson, Mr. F. C. Moutlet, and Mr. J. H. Owen.

The Stewards on the occasion were Bros. Buscall, I.P.M.; Spink, S.W.; Harris, J.W.; G. Everett, P.M., Treas.; T. Morris, Sec.; McLean, S.D.; Herbage, J.D.; Kent, I.G.; Foxcroft, D.C.; Pierpoint, W.S.; A. Scard, Ralph, J. Jones, G. J. Potter, and E. Sano.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the Chairman said that he had one or two toasts to propose, but he should make his remarks as brief as possible, in order that those present might the sooner proceed to other amusements. The first toast was that which was always welcomed by the loyal body of Freemasons, viz., "The Queen and the Craft." This toast having been duly honoured, the Chairman proposed "The Health of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," the Prince of Wales being, as they were aware, the M.W.G.M. of Freemasons, and two of his brothers also occupying high positions in the Craft. It is needless to say that this toast was heartily responded to.

Bro. Buscall: Ladies and gentlemen, I have a very important toast to propose; it refers to no less than "The W.M." When the brethren of the Domatic Lodge decided to have a summer festival many of them exerted themselves to make it a success, but none more so than the W.M. I am sure that you will agree with me that we have had a very pleasant day, and for that we are indebted to our W.M. I, therefore, ask you to be upstanding, and join with me in drinking his health.

The Chairman: Ladies and gentlemen, I feel highly flattered. We have had so little sunshine during the last few days that we have had many doubts whether we should be able to make this meeting a success. Fortunately it has turned out to be a fine day, and we are honoured by a much larger company than we expected. I have felt some difficulty in regard to this festival, and was anxious it should succeed. As Master of an old lodge of high position, which I felt was somewhat on its trial to-day, I have been anxious, as upon our success on this occasion may depend whether we shall continue summer banquets or not. I am now truly pleased that it has turned out a success. I am glad to see so many happy faces round me, and I thank you for the honour which you have done me in drinking my health.

The Chairman next proposed "The Health of the Visitors," which was responded to by Mr. C. A. Smith.

This was followed by "The Health of the Stewards and Officers of the Lodge," which was acknowledged by Bro. Spink, S.W., and Bro. Kent, I.G., the latter of whom tried to persuade the ladies that when their husbands were out later than usual at Masonic meetings the time had been occupied in debating what they could do to please their wives, and that festivals of this kind were some of the things decided upon for the purpose.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, the last toast that I have the pleasure to propose is one that will meet with unanimous approval. It is "The Health of the Ladies." I feel some difficulty in dealing with it, especially after my friend's speech. I am glad to see that so many of my friends have brought more than one, and have thus added the greater lustre to our festival. I shall couple with this toast the name of my esteemed Bro. George Everett, P.M. and Treasurer of the Domatic Lodge.

Bro. Everett: Worshipful Master and gentlemen, I feel very much flattered and honoured at having the privilege of responding to this very important toast, which I consider the toast of the evening. You know the song says that when a lady's in the case all other things give place, and I, therefore, think this the most important toast. But to thank you on behalf of the ladies I must speak as a lady. "Worshipful Master, we thank the gentlemen for the very kind things they have said of us, but with our characteristic modesty, we desire them to understand that they have said no more than we deserve. We know that they could not have got on without us, as we know what lost, forlorn creatures they are if they have not us to guide them on their way, and, therefore, I say that the way they have spoken is handsome, it is not less than we deserve." Some ladies that I am acquainted with have been trying to enlighten themselves as to the secrets of Freemasonry—I believe they tried to form a lodge for themselves; but when they heard that "We meet like spirits in the land of dreams,

And speak not but by signs," their natural communicativeness by word of mouth upset all their calculations, and the scheme for feminine Freemasonry fell to the ground. My friend has told the ladies that when their husbands are out at their lodges late at night they are consulting what they can do to please their wives. Well, in a sense, he is right, because we know that what we do in lodge ought to please our wives, and would please them if they knew what it is. But that is the secret, and they must not know it. But they may know, and do know, that Freemasonry does a great deal of good, and that three of the grandest Charities in the country, the Boys' School, the Girls' School, and the Benevolent Institution, have been founded by Freemasons, who continue to support them in a manner that is an enduring honour to Freemasonry.

After an interval spent in the pretty grounds of the hotel, the company returned to the banquet-room, which had, in the meantime, been cleared, when dancing was commenced, and was kept up with great spirit for some time.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The summer entertainment to the old people at the Benevolent Institution at Croydon took place on Tuesday evening. The company who attended included the names of the following brethren and ladies:—Charles G. Hill, P.M., 1366; John Constable, Vice-Patron; Charles John Perceval, jun.; James E. Terry; George Knill; Mrs. Terry; Miss Terry; W. Hick, P.M., 483, 77; C. J. Hicks; C. M. Finch; Annie Collins; E. H. Bowyer; Mrs. Bowyer; Edwin G. Legge, I.P.M. 1196, Treasurer 1607; Mrs. Legge; Francis Breuer; Mrs. Breuer; Miss Breuer; Miss A. M. Terry; John Newton; Robert H. Halford; Mrs. Halford; Thomas Cubitt; Raynham W. Stewart; Lena Hill; Anne Stephens; James Terry; Miss Constable; E. E. Gold; William Stephens; Mrs. Newton; J. J. Berry; G. S. Becknell; Mrs. Hill; Charles John Perceval, jun.; G. Ward Verry; Mrs. G. Ford; Mrs. Constable; Dr. H. J. Strong; Mrs. Strong; W. W. Morgan; Augustus Trewinnard; and Mrs. Trewinnard, and H. Massey (Freemason).

Before partaking of tea the visitors went round the buildings and called in on the old ladies and brethren, and spent a considerable time with them in cheerful conversation. When tea was over the visits were renewed, and the gardens, which were in beautiful order, notwithstanding the long succession of bad weather, were inspected. At seven o'clock the annuitants were summoned to the hall, where the Royal Criterion Hand Bell Ringers gave their admirable entertainment on 120 silver-toned bells. It is almost needless to say that these performances were highly appreciated, and gave general satisfaction. Miss Terry and Miss Constable also added some vocal and instrumental selections, and in their performances merited the greatest praise. The proceedings were interspersed with the serving of an abundance of refreshments, in serving which the visitors exhibited the most earnest desire to conduce to the comforts of the old people. Before separating votes of thanks were passed to the Royal Criterion Hand Bell Ringers, to Mrs. Terry, to the Supreme Council, who annually contribute largely to this entertainment, to Bros. J. G. Stevens, T. J. Barnes, and J. J. Berry for the magnificent flag, which floats on a flagstaff at the Institution, on which flag is inscribed the name of the Institution. Bro. Berry returned thanks for this last vote. Bro. Terry expressed the great pleasure he felt at being able to contribute to the enjoyment of the annuitants, and also added that he was much indebted for what he had done to the great assistance he derived from the Supreme Council. Capt. Phillips and other brethren, who earnestly desired to promote the cause of Masonic charity. The party having bid all the inmates of the Institution, a hearty good night, returned to town in special saloon carriages provided by the South Eastern Railway.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A cricket match was played on the College House Ground, on Wednesday the 14th May, in wretched weather—play being stopped several times—between the M.C.C. and College House, which resulted in an easy win for the Masonic boys by 137 to 29; Mr. Gardner and Donovan playing the highest scores for the M.C.C. of 47 and 38 runs respectively.

A match was played on the 17th May, on the School ground, between the M.C.C. and the Grocers' Company, when victory visited the M.C.C. by 21 runs, the scores being—M.C.C. 59, Grocers' Company 38; Hanson and Sergeant making the highest figures of 24 and 19.

In the return match, M.C.C. v Grocer's Company, played at the Alexandra Palace, the Grocer's Company were defeated a second time, the match resulting as follows: M.C.C. 74; Grocer's Company, 32.

The return match M.C.C. v College House, took place on the 23rd ult., at the College House Ground, when the Masonic team succeeded in beating their opponents by an innings and 23 runs. Scores: M.C.C. 53; College House 15-15, total 30.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Prince of Wales has appointed the 17th inst., as the day on which His Royal Highness will lay the foundation stone of the new building now being erected as an extension of the Hospital for Consumption, at Brompton.

Lord Roseberry, President of the Greek Committee, has accepted an invitation to attend a meeting at Manchester on the 22nd inst.

Bro. T. Brassey, M.P., has placed books to the value of £4000, in the Claremont Institute Free Library at Hastings, of which building he is the owner.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post-free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—Advt.

per sum had been paid by them to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. He did not know what they had done for the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, or for the Hamer Benevolent Fund, but he would tell them what they had given for other charities—the paltry sum of £20, and his belief was that during the six years he had referred to they had bestowed about £123 in private charity and relief, while from the initiation fees they must have spent something like £700 or £800 during those six years for their own entertainment. He would ask, was that creditable to them or to any other lodge? Bro. Alpass then referred at some length to the leading article on Masonic Charity in that day's Times in connection with the installation of Prince Leopold, and said that unless a lodge could show some good work in the direction of charity it had better not have an existence. The members of the Downshire met there once a month and enjoyed each other's society, and, no doubt, the working of the ritual was very satisfactory and correct; but if they did nothing more for the Order than this it would just have been as well if the warrant of constitution had never been granted. Bro. Alpass then went on to say that their small annual subscription could never prove sufficient to carry out the system of picnics, one of which they were again going to have the following week. These picnics were never contemplated when the amount of subscription was fixed, and the result was that their initiation fees had to be entrenched upon—a thing which they had no right to do, and a system which he could not too strongly condemn. If picnics were to be held, let them be paid for out of the members' pockets. Looking at what had been done by the lodge, he would ask what there was in connection which could possibly induce him to recommend any one in connection with it to the P.G.M. for any honour which he had to bestow? He trusted the lodge would take these remarks to heart, as they were made out of sincere kindness, and strive in the future to do more in the cause of charity than it had done in the past. These remarks were made by him with an earnest zeal for Masonry, and with an anxious wish that the lodge should take its proper position in regard to Freemasonry, so that from time to time the members, by their liberal donations, might secure a life governorship for the W.M. in one of the charities. Bro. R. P. France, P.M., said that while he agreed to some extent with Bro. Alpass in what he had said with reference to the charities, he certainly felt that he had been unduly hard on their lodge with regard to its funds. Retrenchment had been seriously resolved upon, and it had also been resolved by the committee that £25 should be voted towards the decoration of that hall. As they were at present constituted, they did not see their way to grant more at present, but probably they would do so at some future time; and, with regard to the pic-nic, he might state that they meant to charge each member for his ticket, voting only a small sum from the funds of the lodge for a portion of the expenses. As the lodge had resolved to retrench, he thought that the P. Grand Secretary should have passed over the matter and not have uttered the severe censure which he had thought fit to pass upon them. He thought the Downshire Lodge would compare most favourably with many of the lodges in the province, and he did not think he was saying too much when he stated that he thought they had done quite as much as many of them. (Hear, hear.) He felt as if Bro. Alpass had picked the Downshire Lodge out for particular censure, and he did not think this should have been done. Bro. Houghton, I.P.M., also referred to the course of economy which had been resolved upon, and the P.G. Sec. would not have required to make the rather hard remarks which he had done if he had stayed away for another year. After a few remarks from Bro. Dilcock, P.M., to the same effect, Bro. S. E. Ibbs, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., strongly protested against Bro. Alpass coming there and criticising their balance, which, as an outside member, he had no right to do. They were very glad to see him as the P.G. Sec., and ready to listen to him on points upon which he had a right to address them, but he (Bro. Ibbs) did not think the private accounts of a lodge came within his province. He quite agreed with Bro. France that the Downshire Lodge would compare favourably with many others in the province, and during the past year they had given a large amount away in private relief. He was sorry to hear the remarks which Bro. Alpass had thought fit to make, and must again protest against his right to make them with regard to their balance sheet. After a few remarks from Bro. Larsen, P.M., Bro. Alpass said he did not intend to offend any one in the remarks he had made, and assured the brethren that it would give him infinitely greater pleasure to come and bestow praise than to find fault. The subject then dropped, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. In the course of the evening, a handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. J. H. Houghton, I.P.M., in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered to the lodge. The picnic in connection with this lodge took place on Thursday, the 3rd inst., when the members left the landing station, or Chester, via Birkenhead. They dined at the Grosvenor Hotel at noon, after which they proceeded to Eaton Hall, returning to tea at the Grosvenor Hotel at seven m., and left Chester about 8.40 p.m.

WOOLWICH.—Florence Nightingale Lodge (No. 706).—The installation meeting of the above lodge took place on Tuesday, the 24th ult. (St. John's Day), at the Masonic Hall, William-street. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. J. Scott Mutch, at about 5 p.m., and after the minutes of the preceding meeting had been read and confirmed, Bro. P.M. Gamble, in a few appropriate words, presented Bro. J. J. Donolly, W.M. elect, to Bro. Mutch, to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. The ceremony then proceeded, and after a Board of Installed Masters had been formed, Bro. Donolly was, with the usual formalities, placed in the chair of K.S. and saluted in the various degrees. He then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. Eugene Sweny, S.W.; J. Black, J.W.; Sydney Clarke, P.M., Treas.; E. Denton, P.M., Sec.; Rev. H. Hirsch, Chap.; Major Gordon, R.A., S.D.; G. C. Mathams, J.D.; Qr.-Master Scully, R.H.A., I.G.; and Everett, Tyler. The charges were then splendidly recited by Bro. Mutch, and the ceremony was concluded. A handsome Past Master's jewel was then presented to Bro. Mutch, for his services to the lodge during the past year as W.M., and it was unanimously resolved, that a vote of thanks should be tendered him and entered upon the minutes of the lodge, for the excellent manner in which he had carried out the duties of Installing Master that day. The lodge was then closed and the brethren adjourned to Bro. De Gray's hotel, the Freemasons' Arms, where an elegantly served and appointed banquet awaited them, Bro. De Gray bringing into play all his taste and large experience for the occasion. Among the company present were—besides those officers and brethren above enumerated—Bros. C. Coupland, P.M. 913, P.P.J.W. Kent; T. D. Hayes, W.M. 913; W. Butter, P.M. 913; R. W. Jones, W.M. 146; W. St. Aubyn, P.M. 281; W. B. Lloyd, W.M. elect 913; T. Hutton, W.M. elect 13; J. Chapman, J.W. 913; W. Watts, 913; S. Fry, J.D. 969; G. Hunter, 20 (I.C.); R. S. Garrett, 209; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). After the banquet the W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts in excellent style, and they were cordially responded to. Bro. Mutch then rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and in so doing said the W.M. had entrusted him with the gavel for a purpose they all knew the tenour of. It was to propose that brother's health, and it was a matter that gave him unfeigned pleasure to have the honour and the opportunity of so doing. They all knew that he was initiated in the lodge, and had fairly and honourably worked his way through the various minor offices to the distinguished position he occupied that moment. He would not take up their time by dilating upon his many excellent qualities, but felt sure they, with him, looked forward to a pleasant, harmonious, and successful year under his rule. The toast was enthusiastically responded to, and Bro. Donolly in reply thanked them for their good wishes to him personally, and as well for placing him in his present position with the unanimous vote of the lodge. He had not sufficient command of words to thank them so eloquently as he should wish, but would endeavour to follow in the footsteps of those who in the chair had so well and worthily upheld the honour of the Florence Nightingale Lodge. The next toast was that of "The Installing Officer, Bro. Mutch," and the W.M., in giving it, said they had heard and seen that brother perform the beautiful and impressive ceremony so well and so eloquently that he was fully entitled to their heartiest gratitude. He was quite sure that few of them had ever heard it better done. It was not only without a single hitch, but as if it was from the heart. For himself he was deeply impressed, and asked them to show their appreciation of their brother by a good hearty fire. Bro. Mutch, who was received most warmly, in reply, said he could assure them he had always endeavoured to do his best for the prosperity of the lodge. In it there were a great many military men, and having had an experience of the first 22 years of his life in a marching regiment, he knew something of discipline, and to the excellent discipline of its members he attributed its and his success during the last year, and, indeed, from the first day he became acquainted with it, for in it he was initiated. He thanked the officers under him for their great and valuable assistance, and invariable courtesy to him while in the chair, and for the manner in which they had carried out their duties, and was sure that they would as they came to the head of it sustain and uphold the dignity of the lodge as he and his predecessors had endeavoured to do. The next toast was that of "The Past Masters of and belonging to the Lodge," which was coupled with the name of Bro. Sydney Clarke, who, as the W.M. said, was perhaps the most important of them all, for he held their money and brought them up short when they were going ahead too fast. Bro. Clarke, in reply, said the office of the Past Master during the past year had been an easy one, in fact there had been little or nothing for them to do; the W.M. was so efficient in his work, and so punctual in his attendance, that the office had been a perfect sinecure. He felt sure it would be the same under the present Master. If there had been, or at any time should be, anything for them to do, the P.M.'s of the Florence Nightingale would at all times do it with pleasure, because it would not only be a duty but a labour of love. He thanked them from the heart. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," coupled with the name of Bro. Coupland, of the Pattison Lodge, and Bro. St. Aubyn, of 281. These brethren responded briefly, as did also Bros. Hayes, Lloyd, Hutton, and Watts. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and was responded to by Bros. Sweny, Hirsch, and others. The last toast was that of "The Masonic Press," coupled with the name of Bro. Jolly, who responded, and then the brethren separated after a most enjoyable evening.

LIVERPOOL.—Derby Lodge (No. 724).—The annual installation of this well-known lodge was celebrated on Wednesday, the 25th ult. As the work of the evening was rather heavy, the W.M. called the lodge for five o'clock. The officers present were Bros. Asher Hart, W.M.; R. Crispe, S.W. (W.M. elect); H. Trevitt, J.W.; J. W. Ballard, P.M., D.C.; Maurice Hart, P.M., D.C. 1592, Hon. Sec.; G. Gorton, I.G.; Cousins and Pendleton, Stewards. Members: Bros. Cain, P.M.; Vaughan, P.M.; Davison, P.M.; Beeken, I.P.M.; J. Jacobs, Humphries, J. D. Griffith, K. Griffith, E. Gadd, R. Hoblyn, Erskine, Sharples, Grieve, Hawksworth, E. Ellis, and others. The visitors included Bros. Shepherd, P.M. 1035; H. Ellis, 1021; Hartwell, 1264; Brassey, I.G. 823; and others.

After the minutes were read and confirmed, the W.M. proceeded to pass to the Second Degree a brother who was initiated nine years ago, he being away in foreign climes ever since, after which Bro. Ballard, P.M., took the chair, and raised Bro. Jardine to the Sublime Degree; after closing to the Second Degree, Bro. Asher Hart, W.M., resumed the place of Installing Master, and regularly placed Bro. Crispe in the chair in the East, according to ancient custom, Bro. Hart working the whole of the ceremony with very great taste and effect. The officers appointed were Bros. Asher Hart, I.P.M.; Ballard, P.M., D.C.; Trevitt, S.W.; Maurice Hart, P.M. 1502, J.W.; Chersworth, P.M., Treas. (tenth time), invested by proxy on account of absence through illness; Gordon, Sec.; Pendleton, S.D.; J. Jacobs, J.D.; Cousins, I.G.; J. D. Griffith, S.S.; Humphries, J.S.; Erskine, A.S.; and M. Williamson, Tyler. After a gentleman had been proposed for initiation, the W.M. then, on behalf of the lodge, presented to Bro. Asher Hart, I.P.M., a very handsome Past Master's jewel, for his ability in conducting the lodge for eighteen months. Bro. Hart suitably responded. The lodge was then closed. There was no banquet in consequence of it having been decided to hold a pic-nic instead. On Thursday morning the members assembled at Lime-street Station for the purpose of proceeding to Overton Hills. They were accompanied by a goodly sprinkling of the gentler sex, although the rain gave very slight hopes of a pleasant day, but still in this variable climate it does sometimes become fine after a soaker. When the pic-nickers arrived at Frodsham umbrellas were not the order of the day, as the weather had somewhat cleared, which turned to very fine during the latter part of the day. A variety of games were extemporised by the indefatigable Committee and a genial body of Stewards, headed by the Hon. Sec., Bro. Gordon; and the beauty of the scene, the excellency of the catering of Mr. Rigby, of the Bellemont Hotel, Overton, all altogether made the day pass in an extremely pleasant manner.

DEVONPORT.—St. Aubyn Lodge (No. 954).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on the 23rd ult. at the Masonic Rooms, Morice Town. The W.M. elect, W. Bro. James R. Dugdale, was installed by W. Bro. C. Watson, 954, assisted by W. Bros. T. Goddall, 954; W. Foxwell, P.M. 1071, P.P.G. St. Cornwall; and supported by the following Board of I.M.'s:—W. Bros. A. Stephens, John Baxter, John Normans, P.M.'s 954; T. Hatherly, P.M. 1071; Jno. W. Collins, 1136. At the close of the installation the following brethren were invested as the officers for the ensuing year:—W. Bro. J. R. W. Quinn, I.P.M.; Bros. Jas. Osborne, S.W.; Jno. Thos. Crossley, J.W.; W. Bros. C. Watson, Treas.; Jno. Baxter, Sec.; Bros. J. Sturgeon, S.D.; Jno. Weary, J.D.; D. R. Waigh, D.C.; Jno. Watts, A.D.C.; George Hickey, I.G. Jno. Smith, George Pomeroy, Thomas D. Pengelley, F. R. B. Rockett were appointed the Stewards. A resolution was adopted to move the lodge from its present rooms at Christmas next. In the evening the brethren dined together at the rooms.

EASTBOURNE.—Tyrian Lodge (No. 1110).—The annual installation meeting of the above lodge took place at the Gildridge Hotel, on Monday, the 30th ult. Bro. W. Kirkland, a Past Master of the lodge, was again elected and installed in that position, the ceremony being performed in a very admirable manner by Bro. Adamson, P.M. Additional interest was centred in the proceedings by the presence of the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master of Sussex (Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart.) and the Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Bro. John Henderson Scott), as well as several other present and past Prov. Officers. The following brethren were invested as the officers of the Tyrian Lodge for the ensuing year:—Bros. A. Taylor, I.P.M.; B. Perry, S.W.; C. W. Tomes, J.W.; T. S. Gowland, Sec.; C. Tomes, Treas.; A. Lye, S.D.; A. Newman, J.D.; C. H. Haines, I.G.; H. Sutton and T. W. Dean, Stewards; E. Goldring, Tyler. A Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. A. Taylor, the retiring Master, as a token of respect from the brethren of the lodge for the efficient manner in which he had discharged the duties of his office during the past twelve months. The lodge being closed in due form, the brethren partook of an elegant banquet, provided in Bro. Sutton's best style. The pleasure of the evening was greatly enhanced by the vocalisation of Bro. Plant, P.M., and Bros. Moulding and Higgins, of the Cathedral Choir, Canterbury. The company present included Bros. Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., Prov. Grand Master of Sussex; John Henderson Scott, Deputy Prov. G.M.; A. King, Prov. G. Org.; Jos. Farncombe, Prov. G. Sword Bearer; C. Tomkinson, Prov. G.S. of W.; F. G. Parnell, P.P.G.S.W. of Kent; T. S. Woolmong, 1382; J. Plant, P.M. 31; S. Tanner, W.M. 311; A. Moulding, 972; E. C. Weeden, 916; F. Miskin, W.M. 972; G. Down, 972; J. H. Higgins, 972; R. Pierpoint, 177; C. W. Hudson, W.M. 315; F. Milrom, W.M. 341; and the following members:—Bros. E. Adamson, P.M.; J. Head, P.M.; W. Kirkland, P.M.; T. Morris, P.M.; R. Pidcock, P.M.; G. Perry, C. W. Tomes, A. Lye, A. G. Newman, H. Sutton, T. S. Gowland, C. H. Haine, Rev. R. C. Wilson, J. Ellis, C. Young, S. Holder, J. Newman, J. Hood, T. W. Dean, Wiunder, T. Brown, C. Crisp, S. D. Sanby, and others. The toasts of "Her Majesty" and "The Rulers of the Craft" having been proposed and duly honoured, the W.M. gave "The Health of Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., P.G.M. of Sussex." Throughout the province he was not only greatly esteemed, but his name was revered as one well worthy to be a ruler in the Craft. His visit to the Tyrian Lodge on that occasion was an event of considerable interest to the brethren, it being the first time the lodge had been visited by its Provincial Chief Officer. On behalf of the Tyrian Lodge he accorded to Sir Walter a hearty welcome, and expressed a hope that he might long be spared in health to fill the position which he was so well fitted to occupy. The Prov. Grand Master said he had that day fulfilled a pledge which he made on taking office, viz., that he would visit, as early as he could every lodge in Sussex. It had afforded him much pleasure to be present on that occasion, and he might say that throughout the province his visits had been equally gratifying. He thanked the brethren most cordially for the hearty reception which they had accorded him. There had been a large accession to Masonry during the last few years, the popularity of the Prince of Wales as Grand Master having given an extraordinary impetus thereto. A considerable increase had occurred in Sussex, as elsewhere, and very shortly he should be called upon to consecrate two more lodges, for which warrants had been granted. While their numbers continued to multiply he sincerely trusted they would continue to conduct their proceedings in the spirit of true Masonry. It was manifest that he could not attend each lodge very often, but he certainly should do so as time and opportunity offered. The W.M. next gave "The Health of the Deputy Prov. G.M. and the Officers of Provincial Grand Lodge, Present and Past." In doing so he paid a high tribute to the great ability and knowledge of Masonic ritual possessed by Bro. J. H. Scott. Through his untiring exertions, to a great extent, Masonry had become what it now was in Sussex, and the brethren throughout the province looked upon Bro. Scott as one of the pillars of the Craft. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master said it was somewhat singular that their round of visits to the various lodges in the province had been commenced by the Prov. Grand Master at Eastbourne and at the same town they completed their task. These visits had not been made according to the age of a lodge or other fixed principles, but as opportunity offered; therefore, the brethren of the Tyrian Lodge must not think that because they were last they were the least. In fact, rather the opposite was the case. There would soon be twenty-three lodges in Sussex, and although all had been visited recently, it could not be expected that the Prov. Grand Master would be constantly going through the same process. His tour, if he might so term it, had been one round of triumph, and this augured well for success in the future. He complimented the W.M. of the Tyrian Lodge and his officers on the excellent working which he had witnessed that day. Of all the lodges visited certainly in none was the work was the work done better. The next toast was that of "The Visitors." Bros. Parnell and Rev. R. C. Wilson responded, the latter remarking that he looked upon Masonic lodges as helping in the good work in which he was daily engaged. If the true spirit of Masonry were more widely diffused his task would be lightened, and brotherly love and charity would take the place of much that was now to be regretted. Bro. Taylor proposed "The Health of the Newly-Installed Master." He was an excellent Mason and very highly esteemed by the brethren. Bro. Kirkland had previously discharged the duties of Master with considerable ability, and there was little doubt but that he would do so again. He had good officers, and he heartily wished him a pleasant and successful year of office. The W.M. said he had always taken a great interest in the Tyrian Lodge. He was one of its founders, its second Master, and the oldest member. He had every reason to hope that it would go on and prosper, and to this end the brethren might rely on his most strenuous exertions. He concluded by proposing "The Health of the Past Masters of the Lodge," coupled with the name of Bro. Taylor, who replied. "The Healths of the Officers and the Assistant Officers" were then drunk, and the Tyler's toast concluded a most pleasurable gathering.

Organist, who not only accompanied the songs with excellent taste, but again delighted every one by his masterly performance of his own fantasia, "Sabbath Evening Chimes," which has attained a popularity worthy of its worth. It should be stated that the catering of Bro. Chaplin, House Steward, gave general satisfaction.

Boley was unable temporarily to take his position as H. through severe indisposition, but we are happy to say he is much better, and we trust the Craft will soon welcome back again one who is so genuine and estimable a Mason. After this ceremony Bro. Robert Senton, 225, was duly exalted into the chapter by Comp. J. B. Fraser, P.Z.; and the grand ceremony was gone through in a manner, never to be effaced from the memory, which few could excel. After closing the chapter a sumptuous banquet was held in the dining room. We are happy to state, now the new Freemasons' Hall is opened, and such conveniences offered to all, that this chapter, and indeed every other branch of Masonry, is flourishing in Ipswich, as the cloud hanging over it is entirely removed.

Walls having given notice of motion that the bye-law as to the amount to be paid by joining members should be reduced, the lodge was formally closed, and the members partook of a collation. The after proceedings in consequence of the lateness of the hour were purely formal in character.

MANCHESTER.—St. Andrew's Lodge (No. 34).—A meeting of the above lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, on Thursday, June 26th, 1879. Bro. Arthur Middleton presided, and was supported by the following officers:—Bros. E. C. Milligan, I.P.M.; J. W. Roine, P.M.M., P.G.D. England; W. H. Hopkins, P.M.M.R. of M., P.P.G. D. of C.; H. T. BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (T.I.).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 26th ult., in which the following officers took part:—Bros. Jas. Dutton, P.M., as W.M.; John Dutton, I.P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, Past G.J.W., Chap.; C. Wilkinson, S.W.; Braham, J.W.; Radway, M.O.; Dingle, S.O.; Murlis, Sec.; as J.O.; Sparrow, Organist; Mercer, S.D.; Hayward, as J.D.; Peach, I.G.; Bigwood, Tyler. The lodge having been opened, letters of apology for the absence of the W.M. and J.O. were received. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. W. G. Smith was introduced, and advanced to the degree of M.M.M. by the acting W.M., the ceremony being accompanied by the musical ritual published several years ago by the Chaplain. On the proposition of Bro. Dr. Hopkins, seconded by the J.W., it was resolved that a Tracing Board be purchased. A discussion arose on the question whether it is permissible to wear Craft aprons in a Mark lodge, owing to a recent refusal to admit one of the members to a meeting of another Mark lodge. The W.M. claimed the right, as being one of the terms on which the Royal Cumberland, a very old, time immemorial lodge, submitted to the Grand Mark Lodge of England in 1857. The S.W. contended that all ought to wear the clothing appointed for the degree. The Chaplain stated that he took the degree in a Craft lodge opened in the Second Degree in 1851, in Hull, years before the formation of the Grand Mark Lodge, he, nevertheless, agreed with the S.W., but was willing to allow the Craft apron to be worn by those who took the degree before there was a Grand Mark Lodge, with the understanding that all subsequently advanced should conform to the Book of Constitutions in regard to clothing. On referring to the minutes of September, 1857, the only document found, there was an order that the Secretary should demand this privilege in his correspondence with the Grand Secretary. The J.W., the

M.O., and others took part in the discussion, urging that the point should be settled. Though not formally appointed by the lodge, the Chaplain undertook to communicate with the Grand Secretary, requesting him to examine the correspondence which took place on the recognition of the Royal Cumberland Lodge by Grand Mark Lodge. The Chaplain reported that, as Past G.W., he had attended a meeting of the Grand Mark Lodge, in London, on the 4th ult., and gave a favourable account of the proceedings. The discussion of matters of only private interest occupied much time, and the lodge was not closed till 10.15.

CONSECRATION OF THE PENGE LODGE, No. 1815.

The above lodge was consecrated, in accordance with the ceremonies of the Order, by Bro. H. E. Frances, P.P. G.D. (Surrey), on the 5th inst., at the Thicket Hotel, Anerley.

The ceremony of consecration was impressively rendered by Bro. Frances, in the course of which an oration by him, on the antiquity of the Order, and the privileges, responsibilities, and duties of modern Freemasonry, was listened to with much attention by the brethren.

The musical arrangements were good, and the antems ably rendered by Bro. Dr. Besley, assisted by Bros. Marsh, Stock, and West.

At the conclusion of this ceremony, Bro. Frances installed Bro. R. Jackson as W.M., who invested Bros. Cook, S.W.; West, J.W.; Denbigh, S.D.; Bird, J.D.; Cox, I.G.; G. Wright, Treas.

A number of gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and several brethren for joining members, and the lodge bids fair to be a large and prosperous one.

After the close of the lodge, the brethren adjourned to a banquet, prepared by Bro. Lassam, which, for delicacy and taste, was faultless, and amply done justice to.

The usual Masonic toasts were given and cordially responded to.

The musical abilities of Bros. Besley, Marsh, Stock, and West contributed greatly to the pleasure of the evening.

The brethren then formed a procession and proceeded to church, where the sermon was preached by the R.W. Prov. Grand Chaplain, the Rev. J. W. Collins, from the following texts: Hebrews, chap. 13, ver. 1—"Let brotherly love continue;" Acts, chap. 20, ver. 35—"It is more blessed to give than to receive;" Proverbs, chap. 12, ver. 19—"The lips of truth shall be established for ever."

The preacher, in the course of an eloquent address, said: The grand principles on which Freemasonry is founded have so many branches, and so widely affect, either directly or indirectly, every stage and condition of daily life, that it is almost impossible for the preacher to speak on any moral or religious subject without teaching truths connected with our Order. Not only does the volume of the Sacred Law show us an everlasting love existing in the Godhead, not only does it show us God's love to man, the crowning act of which was witnessed on Mount Calvary, but it inculcates as the most solemn duty of man to man the test of our serving God acceptably. Brotherly love, our love to one another, may be weak at best, yet it enables us to apprehend, after our feeble measure, the love there is in heaven. It is our bounden duty here on earth; it is promised an abundant reward hereafter. Man at the strongest is but a dependent creature, and from this arises one of the great advantages of Divine love; and, thank God, in this our land of England we acknowledge both our dependency upon God and upon one another. In all our institutions we are accustomed, as Englishmen, to give to religion its lawful pre-eminence. Brotherly love and union are necessary for man's welfare and happiness in every stage of life. It is a law of our nature, a law under which we live, and our loving deeds are more effectual and lasting when accomplished by brotherly efforts. We are every one members of one another, and our loving deeds are more effectual and more lasting when accomplished by united brotherly efforts. What are high professions of love worth unless they are shown forth in active operations? If any one examines the Sacred Volume for himself he will find that the duty of giving from right motives, with a view to the glory of God, and the relief and welfare of our brethren, is oftener insisted upon than even purity, honesty, uprightness, and truth. The reverend gentleman went on to say that he could find no records of the world more marked by liberal giving than the present, and he could find no nation more marked for its munificence than England. Long, long might it be so. May our liberality and a readiness to succour the distressed be lasting as the world, and widespread as that Order famed as foremost among the charitable, and claiming justly relief of those in want as one of its grand foundations—I mean Freemasonry. If, as regards liberality, we feel it an honour to be an Englishman, much higher should we esteem our privilege to be liberal among the liberal—to be not only Englishmen, but Masons. Nothing so much attracts the attention and admiration of the outside world as the extent and management of our Masonic Charities. They are, I believe, splendidly managed, and we can all contribute to them, knowing that what we give will be well employed, and turned to the best account.

The beautiful singing of the boys of the Albert Memorial College, who specially attended by permission of the last Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. W. W. Bird, materially added to the attractiveness of the choral arrangements. The collection amounted to £9 10s. 5d. There was a large congregation.

The brethren having returned from church, lodge was re-formed, and

The R.W. Prov. G.M., Lord Waveney, announced the amount of the collection, and suggested that, in consideration of the manner in which the Prov. Grand Lodge had been received, the sum should, in the spirit of a wise and liberal charity, be distributed between the Church schools and the Nonconformist schools in the town. (Applause.)

The motion was agreed to, and it was also resolved to augment the amount to ten guineas.

Bro. Martyn, R.W.D.P.G.M., proposed a vote of thanks to the rector of the parish, for having so kindly placed his church at their disposal.

Bro. Youell, P.G.S.W., seconded the motion, which was agreed to.

Bro. Phillips proposed that the thanks of Prov. Grand Lodge be given to the choir from Framlingham Schools, for the beautiful way in which they performed the choral service.

Bro. Clark seconded.

This was agreed to, and a suggestion from Bro. Martyn that it be an instruction to the P.G. Sec. to express from this Prov. Grand Lodge a desire that the boys should have a holiday met with unanimous approval.

The Rev. W. Bird, in acknowledging the compliment, said the boys were delighted to come over, and he had no doubt they would be equally delighted with the holiday. (Applause.)

The R.W. Grand Master then delivered his annual address, in which he reviewed the proceedings of the past year. There were, he said, many successes to be thankful for, but there had been occasions which they must undoubtedly regret. They had to regret the removal of Bro. Head, one of the oldest, best known, and most efficient brethren they had ever possessed, and one who was valuable to the Craft in many respects. (Hear, hear.) Those who had known him for the past fifty years would agree in saying that he had left a place amongst them which none could hope to fill. He also regretted the loss of the Prov. Grand Master of Essex, who was always ready to give effect to the friendly and neighbourly spirit of that province. He trusted that the friendly disposition shown by Norfolk and Essex would long be continued. (Applause.) With regard to the construction of a Masonic hall at Ipswich, he said that although at first their efforts were not successful, still the lodges of Ipswich, undaunted by the failure, had, he was glad to say, constructed a hall, which for usefulness and cheapness was unparalleled by any in the province, or even in the neighbouring provinces. (Applause.) It was unfortunate, however, that geographical considerations separated by lines of approach and road one portion of the county from the other. It was difficult to get from east to west, from south to north, and from north to south. This, very much interfered with the administration of justice and social gatherings of this character; therefore it was that one central lodge could never be established in that province. (Hear, hear.) They were obliged in the meantime to the public spirit of the lodges at Ipswich for giving facilities for holding assemblages in the capital town of the county. (Hear, hear.) Without infringing upon the older and well recognised merits of Bury—because it might be supposed that where the criminals went there was the greatest amount of care (laughter)—he must suggest, as some compensation for not giving them a Masonic Hall, that they should erect a memorial to Saint Edmund of Bury. (Applause.) Wherever the name was known it was honoured as martyr, confessor, and king. (Applause.) After referring to other matters connected with the Order, his lordship proceeded to make some remarks upon the depression of trade and agriculture. They knew that until the present genial sunshine, which at that moment filled our fields, the prospects of our staple industry were of a nature which might well alarm men of a less steady character than the agriculturists of this and other districts of England. A succession of no less than five years of inadequate produce had placed our agricultural industries and others in a state of constraint—he would not say of decay, but of constraint (hear, hear)—highly detrimental to the efforts of those who were striving to derive the full benefit of their industry, and who, he might say, had not shown any lack of energy whatever. (Hear, hear.) He was surprised, and being surprised he felt proud, to be a fellow worker with those who had displayed such energy and persistent endurance. (Hear, hear.) He had seen among those connected with land, the farmer and labourer, no symptoms of doubt or despair, and he believed they all placed the firmest reliance upon the purposes of the Great Architect of the Universe, confident that although there was much now that was depressing there was a smiling face behind. (Cheers.) With regard to the progress made by the Craft, his lordship said it showed a steady and continual rise. Like the sea that bathed our shores, the ebb had turned for some time, and Freemasonry was now on the steady full flood of improvement and increase, and was working its way into the interior of the county, in the neighbourhood of the town of Clare. (Applause.) They would soon have to welcome amongst them, in his formal and accredited position as Worshipful Master of a lodge at Clare, the Worshipful Prov. Grand Chaplain of the present day, Bro. Collins. (Applause.) With regard to brethren removed by death, it had been suggested to him that there was not a sufficiently good record of the fact. To meet this an endorsement should be made, in the nature of a death certificate, which should be transferred to the widow or other relative left by the brother. This would remove any doubt on this subject that might exist. (Hear, hear.) He confessed he had not had the opportunity of looking into the subject, but if there was any process by which the Provincial Grand Lodge, acting by its officers, could in any way testify its sense of the services of a member of the Craft, by lessening the blow which falls upon the families and other survivors, they should do well, he thought, to adopt it. (Applause.) In conclusion, he said, with reference to the prevailing depression, that he was sure the Craft would give a hearty support to, and set an example if need be of endurance and courage, having confidence in the success of honest endeavours rightly directed. (Applause.) It was one of the most consoling passages of the many passages of Scripture embodied in the words of human wisdom—acted by a wisdom far above the human—"I was young, I am old, but I have never seen the righteous forsaken, or his seed begging for bread." (Applause.) He felt sure that whatever fortune happened between now and their next meeting their time would be passed in a strong endeavour to submit to the will of the Great Architect, and they would find that what now appeared evil was done for the progress of the universe that good might come. (Applause.)

During the proceedings a suggestion was made by Bro. Phillips, P.P.S.G.W., that the brethren should assemble in trousers of any other colour than black. (Cries of "No, no.") Several other provinces had abandoned black, and he hoped Suffolk would follow suit. (Strong marks of disapproval.)

The banquet was held in the Corn Exchange under the presidency of Lord Waveney. Upwards of 200 brethren sat down to a repast elegantly served by Mrs. Read, of the Swan Hotel. The usual toasts were most heartily honoured, and a very pleasant evening was passed.

ANNUAL EXCURSION OF THE FALCON LODGE, No. 1416.

The annual excursion of this lodge took place on the 19th ult, the party consisting of Bros. T. J. Wilkinson, W.M.; Rev. E. C. Camidge, M.A., P.P.G. Chaplain; G. Ayre, P.M.; W. Colman, S.W.; W. Hall, J.W., and others, and a considerable number of ladies. The arrangements were most successfully carried out by the Secretary, Bro. J. Johnson. Carriages were in readiness at Masham Station to convey the visitors to Swinton Park, where they were received by Mr. Featherstone, and conducted round the beautiful grounds of Mrs. Danby Harcourt. After luncheon they proceeded to Jervaulx, and the interesting ruins of the Abbey were explained by Mr. Maughan (Lord Ailesbury's agent) and Mr. Rennie.

On their return to Masham, a substantial and abundant repast was served by Mr. Stickland, at the King's Head Hotel, and the party afterwards inspected the fine old church, the vicar, the Rev. G. M. Gorham, M.A., and Mr. Bowes, of the Swaledale Bank, contributing much to the enjoyment of the day by their most obliging and courteous attention.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGES.

Our readers will have observed that our last issue was mainly taken up with the reports of Provincial Grand Lodge meetings, which are always interesting, we venture to think, to Freemasons, as showing both the local permanency and the general spread of Freemasonry. The Provincial Grand Lodges make up much of the strength and the vitality of our Order, and their prosperity is always a sure sign of the true growth of Freemasonry in a particular province or district. Some of the Provincial Grand Lodges are now very powerful bodies, with large funds and careful bye-laws of their own, and in their proper administration much interest is often excited amongst the good brethren of the locality, and the true principles of Freemasonry are carefully proclaimed and maintained. If ever there be weakness in any province, if slovenliness creeps over the private lodges, if the meetings are sparsely attended, if the zeal of the brethren for the Charities of the Order or the work of Masonry is slack, depend upon it, the fault is with the provincial head quarters, and not with the lodges or the brethren. The whole tone and temper of the province as a body depend on the example and work of the provincial authorities, and just as far as they are in earnest and literally care for Masonry, so the light of the province burns clearly and brightly before its own brethren, or neighbouring Provincial Grand Lodges. Lord Tenterden's installation last week by Lord Carnarvon, our distinguished Pro G.M., was a great success, and we augur well for his rule and the progress and prosperity of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Essex under his judicious sway. His speech was thoroughly Masonic, both in what it said and what it left unsaid. Few English Masons there are but must admire its effective language, its animated statements, and its Masonic spirit. Lord Tenterden clearly sees where the "shoe pinches," and how the "leaven works" in Freemasonry just now, and we commend his careful and tolerant enunciation of Masonic principles to the notice of all who sometimes affect to believe that Freemasons have "very little to say," have no principles to avow, and no teaching to set forth. We think, on the contrary, that, as Lord Tenterden conclusively shewed, Freemasonry has certain distinct and definite "landmarks" which it is our duty no less than our privilege to uphold in our own generation, and hand on to others unchanged and unaltered, and that such as they are, and such as they profess to be, they are indeed for the welfare of society, and for the happiness and peace of mankind.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The Grand Treasurer has given notice of a motion at the next Quarterly Court, on Saturday, the 12th inst., to increase the number of girls elected at the October Election by seven. We think that this is a very judicious and reasonable suggestion, and one which we hope will be carried on Saturday "nem. con." There is plenty of money, plenty of room at Wandsworth, and as seven of the 200 are purchased cases, it seems only reasonable that the elected children should, in the prosperous condition of the School, be 200, and all above that number should be purchased cases. We think that, after the brilliant success of the Festival this year, and the gratifying result of the quiet but energetic labours of Bro. Hedges, such a proposal is only a proper return for the zeal and sacrifices of the brethren, and while it gives pleasure to the subscribers, will add materially to the prestige and usefulness in the eyes of the Craft at large of that most admirably conducted Institution, the Girls' School.

CHARITY REFORM.

This is rather a sensational subject just now, and we confess we hope that it will be a long, long time before any such discussion interferes with the peaceful progress of our great Masonic Institutions. Bro. Simpson, in his letter last week, seems to assume, as a matter of fact, that crying abuses exist in the management and practical working of our Charities. He uses, we see, the following very strong words: "unjust, undignified, wasteful, and cruel accompaniments—polling days, exchanges, trafficking, and wholesale canvassing," &c. Now, we think that we know our Charities well; we take great interest in all their details; they have been before us minutely for more years than we like to count, and we confess we do not know to what "abuses" Bro. Simpson alludes in such very harsh words. We say this distinctly and thoughtfully, without any fear of contradiction, and without any hesitation whatever. That in all earthly institutions weaknesses may be found and abuses "exist" who could take upon himself to deny? But, on the whole, with complete knowledge of the subject in every department, as we flatter ourselves, we cannot put our finger on any known, or proved, or proveable abuse, as we understand the word "abuse." Bro. Simpson has, no doubt, a very strong opinion on the voting system of our Charities, and the habit of exchanging votes, which he terms, as others do, Mr. Gladstone among them, "trafficking in votes." But that, in our opinion, is a very hard and harsh expression. The principle of selection by Provincial Charity Committees may be good or bad as we view it, but it practically, in our experience, picks out the strongest cases, and it is not likely that provinces which have given large sums to the Charities will ever consent to ignore local cases, or to send their votes direct to the Secretary, or give up the right to do the best they can for such candidates as they believe "distressing cases" in their own province. If Bro. Simpson's principles of reform are good for anything, (and we do not go into them further than in respect of our Masonic Charities), a Committee ought to select the most absolutely distressing cases, and all subscribers should give their votes blindfold through the Committee. This we can understand on his principle. But to suppose that out of sixty cases, for instance, all sad on the face of them, any one brother or brethren can select for himself or themselves the most absolutely distressing case, is the most hopeless chimera that ever was started by the ingenuity, or rather the perversity of man. All that can be done is, as is done in the provinces and now in London, to seek to select good cases, but in London especially, where the brethren are peculiarly independent, and many connections with the provinces exist, any such attempt is met at once by the complaint that we interfere with the liberty of choice of the individual voter, who is just as competent as a Committee to select a proper case. But the truth is that, as we have taken occasion to say before, Bro. Simpson, with all his ability and his intentions to do good, has not hit the only "little blot," as far as our careful observation goes, in our really noble Charities. We mean the original selection of candidates. Curiously enough, that weak point runs quite counter to Bro. Simpson's theory, that the remedy for these alleged abuses is to be found in a strong and impartial Central Committee, inasmuch as the original selection is made by the meeting of the General Committee of Life Governors, which ought to represent well the impartiality of the subscribers. But we have long been of opinion that here is to be found the one true reform, and the only one we need trouble ourselves about. All the cases should be submitted, we venture to think, to a special sub-committee, which should have power to enquire into the condition of the parent or parents, and so prevent those whom their friends might fairly educate being thrown on our excellent Charity, passing out many poorer and more helpless candidates. But this is simply a mistake of our own rules, which may easily be remedied. We know, as we said before, of no other "abuses." We disagree "toto cælo," as we honestly do, from our esteemed P.G.C., in respect of his complaints of the voting system now in operation, and which does not deserve such hard words and such serious imputations as he has thought well, in the last Freemason, to use respecting it, as we shall be quite willing to point out in "extenso" if he thinks well to continue the discussion.

NEW GRAND LODGES.

We have received and read carefully the Freemason of April 15th this year, "published under the patronage" of the freshly-constituted so-called Grand Lodge of New South Wales. We are sorry to say that we cannot sympathize in any sense with this rash movement, and disapproving in toto, on the old true principles of Freemasonry, of the unnecessary multiplication of Masonic jurisdictions apparently so popular with some minds just now, we feel bound honestly and in all Masonic friendship and courtesy to give our reason why. Our contemporary quotes fully from us, and we have no wish in anything that we say to seem to dogmatize harshly, or speak censoriously, but we feel bound to point out one or two considerations, which vitiate, in our opinion, the constitution of this so-called Grand Lodge, and fully justify the prudent action of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, and other American Grand Lodges, as well as our own and the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland, in the matter. 1. In the first place, let us remember and realize the position of Freemasons in New South Wales. There are three jurisdictions in existence, the English, the Scottish, and the Irish Grand Lodges, and thus in the colony of New South Wales the triple jurisdiction of England, Scotland, and Ireland is naturally reproduced. It is a great mistake to see, as some do, in a great and successful colony like New South Wales, with its popular self-government, any analogy with the States of America. Each State of America is equal, sovereign, and self-governed, and, except for the general purposes of the constitution, supreme in its own territory, a position entirely different from that of the colony of New South Wales. And hence as new States are formed in America, as each new State is equally a sovereign State with the others, it is not un-Masonic for a meeting of lodges, be they more or less, if lawfully warranted, to form a new Grand Lodge. But in New South Wales, with three existing jurisdictions, before these jurisdictions can be absorbed in a new Grand Lodge, a majority of the lodges in all the three jurisdictions must have agreed to surrender their warrants to their mother Grand Lodges, and take out fresh warrants from the new central authority. The body which calls itself the Grand Lodge of New South Wales is composed, as it states, of a majority of the Irish lodges, a number of the Scottish lodges, and one English lodge. Its apologists assert, indeed, that other English lodges would join but are hindered by the district authority. Still the "damning fact" remains that of one of the jurisdictions, only one lodge so far has joined the movement, and that it has a minority in two out of the three. In our opinion, therefore, the whole movement has failed Masonically, and the so-called Grand Lodge of New South Wales has no legal or constitutional existence, and cannot be recognized either by the Grand Lodge of England, Scotland, or Ireland. We are quite aware that much doubt exists as to the Masonic law on the subject. Some Masonic writers have contended that given no existing jurisdiction at all, except a private lodge, it is competent for Master Masons thereat convened, with proper certificates, to constitute a Grand Lodge "ad hoc," and in the history of Masonry, private lodges have before now proclaimed themselves Grand Lodges without any reference whatever to the principle of delegation or aggregation of lodges. Perhaps it is still true of this as of many other matters in the world "feri non debet, factum valet." Our English practice seems to have been one of common sense, namely, to recognize the wish of a majority of lodges, in meeting properly convened, to create a Grand Lodge, and separate from the mother Grand Lodge in our colonies and dependencies and districts which originally hailed from us, but we are aware of no precedent where a minority in three jurisdictions has been permitted in our colonies and dependencies to set up a Grand Lodge, or where that body has been recognized in England. The new movement claims to have enrolled 800 Master Masons, but this fact is also denied. We feel bound to say that the members of the Irish Prov. Grand Lodge seemed to have egregiously failed in their duty to their Grand Lodge. See Bro. Oldham's letter elsewhere. 11. We note, in the second place, that in this very paper, not content with this hasty, and, in our opinion, in all deference, unconstitutional movement, it is suggested that a Grand Lodge should be formed in New Zealand as well. Where is all this to end? It cannot be for the good of Masonry to create a Grand Lodge wherever a colony of England exists; neither, we venture to think, will it serve to enhance the true and tolerant principles of Freemasonry. We trust that in New South Wales as elsewhere our English brethren will remember the links which bind them to the mother country and the mother Grand Lodge, and will gladly continue distinct and real offshoots of that great body, the Grand Lodge of England, which has done so much for true Freemasonry everywhere. One argument does surprise us and amuse us; it is this—"Because we have done so well for our Charities in England, therefore, (note the sequitur), the brethren in New South Wales should form a new Grand Lodge, and do something for their poor brethren in New South Wales." But surely the District Grand Lodge has a Fund of Benevolence, and if that is the only reason, why should not the Masons in New South Wales erect Masonic Orphanages, and establish Masonic Annuities of their own, without a new Grand Lodge? We have said all this fraternally and dispassionately, but firmly and clearly we hope, and we trust our contemporary, the New South Wales Freemason, will believe us when we add that, though we differ from him conscientiously, we differ with the good feeling which should always characterize Freemasons. We regret the step which has taken place, and we fear we can hold out no hope of Masonic recognition at home. We doubt very much, moreover, whether the American Grand Lodges will recognize this new body. Indeed, we feel sure they will not.

BRO. SIMONSEN'S APPEAL.

We think it right to say, with reference to the letter of Bro. Wergeland, Prov. G. M. of Norway, and some information we have ourselves received on the subject, that any charge of persecution against the ecclesiastical authorities in Norway on account of Bro. Simonsen being a Freemason must at once be withdrawn. It seems that Bro. Simonsen, who has now, happily, returned to Norway, received Lutheran orders in America, and that the ecclesiastical authorities in Norway declined to admit him and others similarly situated as clergymen in the Norwegian parishes, but Freemasonry has nothing whatever to do with the question, and many of the Norwegian clergy are avowedly Freemasons, and hold Masonic rank. On this point Bro. Simonsen, owing to his inexperience in Masonry, was entirely incorrect, and has entirely misled us. We, therefore, regret to have given currency to the statement.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your issue of the 28th ult. I notice that you have placed the name of Bro. H. B. Marshall, C.C., with the London lodges in the list of Stewards of the Boys' School, and, again, in page 273 of your last issue, you have placed the province of Middlesex next in rank to Durham, whereas the amount should have been £227 7s., placing Middlesex next to Dorsetshire. Please excuse my troubling you, but as the Royal Hanover Lodge, No. 1777, has taken such a prominent place in the charity list this year I should be sorry for Middlesex to lose its rightful position through an excusable error in a report circulated through the medium of your journal.

An enquiry was made recently as to the proper dress for the Prov. Grand Chaplain, and I venture to suggest that the Rev. J. Robinson, D.D., was correct when preaching before the Prov. Grand Lodge at Great Stanmore. He wore a surplice, doctor's hood, and the collar of his Masonic office. For such a service the apron is not required, and I fail to see how it could be hidden more by the surplice than by the nearly obsolete black gown.

Yours truly and fraternally,

HENRY LOVEGROVE,
S.W. Royal Hanover Lodge.

[We agree with our brother that the apron is not required. The collar is quite sufficient, in our opinion, for the preacher, because ecclesiastically not illegal. The apron, we think, would be.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I address you as much individually as a journalist, knowing we are both interested in the Province of Middlesex. I beg to draw your attention to the fact that our province deserves a higher position in the order of those who brought up lists at the last festival. I find from your excellent leader that we stand as to amount fourteenth on the list, with an aggregate of £122 7s. only. As a fact, a brother of my own lodge, No. 1777, personally contributed £105, which is credited to London district; add this amount to that announced it will make £227 7s., and place the Province of Middlesex No. 9 on the list. Thus correcting the gross figures £5345 1s. 6d. credited to London, deduct £105, add this to £5189 1s. 6d. credited to the provinces, we shall find as follows: Metropolitan Lodges, £5240 1s. 6d., Provincial £5294 1s. 6d.; the provinces in result heading the home district, subject to any further lists that may come in.

Yours fraternally,

W. M.

Town Hall, Hounslow,

7th July, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Kilburn Lodge, 1608, sent through me, their Steward, £210 for the Boys' School, not £118 12s. 6d., as stated in your report, so that the lodge is third on the list, and not seventh. By kindly inserting this you will oblige.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES BREWER,

W.M. 1608.

MASONIC GRAMMAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Were I the most exacting of grammarians or the most ardent of controversialists, mercy and pity, two Masonic graces always, would lead me to spare your readers the infliction of another long letter from Bro. Dron, and the inoffensive nonsense my original and poor little letter has evoked from others. I congratulate Bro. Dron on the possession of so much spare time, that he can write such a succession of paragraphs all about nothing at all, and which remind me dreadfully of the old Joe Miller, of the "Sheep's Head." Verbum sat. Had I ever considered it possible that my little attempt to commence a friendly discussion should have led to such personality, I need hardly say I should not have troubled you. Because, though a man, like Dogberry, may "write himself down an ass," he does not want to be told so by Bro. Dron, simply because he and Bro. Dron do not agree about a question of philology. Neither is it usual among gentlemen or Masons for one writer to tell another writer, knowing nothing of him, and only because he happens to differ from him on a "moot point," that he is practically an ignoramus, an impostor, and a dunderhead, which, I contend, Bro. Dron, paraphrastically, indeed, but clearly and un-Masonically, did do in his original reply to "Lindley Murray." I naturally resented such narrow-mindedness and such impertinence, and wrote, as I always will write, my opinion on such folly, perfectly justly and openly, under the circumstances. I do not profess to be above the weaknesses of my fellow mortals, "nihil humanum a me alienum puto."

If any brother will kindly read over my first letter, which was purely critical, whether right or wrong, and compare it with Bro. Dron's reply, most uncritical and entirely personal, I think he will agree with me that I have good cause to complain, and complain seriously, of the tone and temper of Bro. Dron, which at once changed a simple critical discussion into a personal "tu quoque" and a hopeless logomachy. I had said nothing in my first letter surely to offend any one. My note was simply a "Grammatical exercise," and had Bro. Dron replied as I commenced the discussion, we might have shown to your readers the edifying spectacle of two brethren who could differ with courtesy and with Masonic feeling. But as I object both to "check" and vulgarity, especially in Masonic controversies, I felt I had a right to assert the right of free literary discussion. I therefore ventured to assert it, and always shall do so, in your impartial columns.

I am excessively amused with Bro. Dron's apparent difficulty as to the lines of Dryden which I quoted. All I can say is, if he does not understand their application I think I do, and that is quite enough for me; for as I before remarked, I am not, as far as I know, compelled by any rules of controversy to try to enable my antagonist to understand and appreciate my humble words. As they say, if such a task was imposed upon me, the "labour of Sisyphus would be nothing to it."

I am, myself, quite indifferent as to any remarks about my "pseudonym" or special "verbiage." I wrote to hold my own, as I hope I always shall write, with all due deference to the true principles of Freemasonry, but I have yet to learn that it is forbidden to a Freemason, when well meant efforts to commence a little friendly discussion are only met with a vile spirit of personality, to seek, if in his power to do so, to check and expose upstart ignorance or overweening arrogance.

I am, yours fraternally,

LINDLEY MURRAY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It was with a sense of relief I scanned your columns this morning to find the infliction we have endured the past few weeks in respect of Masonic grammar was apparently ended, but I find on referring to your "Answers to Correspondents" that we have not yet heard the last of it, and this must plead my excuse in addressing you; and, first of all, I will state that I am no grammarian, but what I am wanting in knowledge thereof I trust I can make up with common courtesy and Masonic charitableness, and thus preserve the tenets of my Order, which I, in common with my brethren, professed to adopt on Initiation. It is well that "Bro. Lindley Murray" should perceive that his brethren generally deprecate the catechism so unnecessarily and unwarrantably inflicted upon Bro. Dron for a possible lapsus lingue or expression which Bro. Lindley Murray admits he may have been prone to make himself in the confusion of a moment; therefore, however excellent a grammarian Bro. L.M. may be, it is very questionable how far he may claim the right of dictator or criticiser. Your readers are aware who commenced this puerile quibble, and no doubt noticed the personalities used through its introduction, and all must regret that such a personal subject should have appeared in print under cover of a non de plume. When one person—brother or otherwise—stoops from his own pedestal of knowledge and apparent self-importance to attack another for a lack of knowledge and scholastic attainments, on the plea of being a "stickler" for the purity of "Masonic Grammar," it is a pity to find such an absence of decorum. It would be interesting to have the cognomen of L.M., as also whether, having regard to his strong respect for "Masonic Grammar," he would have been equally felicitous in telling a person to his face that which he descends to state under cover of a non de plume, which, under the circumstances, appears to me ill chosen. It is gratifying to learn that we shall hear no more from this able expounder of our language in the present unpleasant and needless controversy, as it is evident he is not blessed with an over abundant amount of charity towards a brother, which is the first principle of our Order. One and all must admit that Bro. Dron has had to meet a very uncharitable and unwarrantable criticism, and, as a constant reader and subscriber to your valuable journal, the purity of which I feel in some degree jealous, I protest against such unseemly and un-Masonic correspondence, and appeal to you, Sir, whether it is not time to exercise your prerogative, and act the part of a "stickler" in this "exceptionable" correspondence, for the sake of the repute of your journal as well as the consideration of your readers.

Yours fraternally,

G. HERBERT.

THE SO CALLED GRAND LODGE OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

Grand Secretary's Office, Freemasons' Hall, Dublin,
18th day of February, 1879.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The communication from the W.M. of 278, under date 13th August, 1878, but not received until November, has been under the consideration of the Board of General Purposes, and also yours of the 20th November, returning the officers of the lodge for 1879, and reporting certain affiliations, all of which have been duly noted.

In compliance with your request I enclose a memo of how the lodge a/c. stands in Grand Lodge books.

For a considerable time past we have not been favoured with returns or remittances from the Prov. Grand Lodge, so that Grand Lodge has been in almost ignorance of what has been doing by the several lodges. As to the Prov. Grand Lodge it appears to have ceased to exist. The Prov. Grand Master sent in his resignation twelve months since, and as Provincial Grand Master his functions and authority have ceased since then, but it appears strange that there should not be some of the members sufficiently loyal to their parent Grand Lodge to work the P.G.L.

The Grand Lodge on the recommendation of the Board of General Purposes has directed that all lodges in the Province should have full power and permission to communicate direct with the office here, make all returns, pay all moneys, and apply for certificates direct. A Bro. Nichols, Welsh wrote some short time since, offering to pay a lump sum to clear off the arrears of all the subordinate lodges, and Grand Lodge consented to receive £300 (about 15s. in the pound). He also applied for recognition of the so-called Grand Lodge of New South Wales, but Grand Lodge, so far from recognising their body, declined to entertain the application, and should the matter be entertained, I have no doubt but that Grand Lodge will act as they have done in other cases, and require for all existing lodges full and free permission and authority to hold their warrants from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and to work independently while recognised by the new Grand Lodge.

The conduct of the late Prov. Grand Master, &c., at the meeting of 278 in July last, as reported by your W.M., was wholly unjustifiable, as for months previously he had ceased to hold such office, and Grand Lodge has directed that he be called on for an explanation of such conduct. Sympathising with the lodges in New South Wales, and hoping better times are in store for them,

I remain, yours fraternally,

SAML. B. OLDHAM, Dep. G. Sec.

THE CASE OF BRO. SIMONSEN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your number for the 12th April this year is reported "A Sad Case of Persecution," in which the Rev. Bro. Simonsen is represented as being denied employment as a clergyman in Norway because of his being a Freemason.

I shall not enter into the case of Bro. Simonsen, but simply state that truth makes it my duty to declare "that no clergyman in Norway ever has been persecuted, or denied employment or preferment, because of his being a Freemason."

A not quite small number of Norwegian clergymen have in times past been, and are at the present, Freemasons, and amongst them men who have been promoted to very high and responsible positions in the Norwegian Church.

I beg that you kindly will give this declaration a place in your paper.

I remain, dear Brother, with great respect, yours truly,
N. T. WERGELAND,
Lieut.-General and G.M. of the Norwegian Prov. Lodge.

CAGLIOSTRO.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have no wish to enter into any discussion of the subject of the above heading, but I may perhaps be allowed to say that to my mind the most just estimate of the character of Cagliostro (albeit an exaggerated one, and novelists always exaggerate) has been formed by Dumas, as pictured in his "Joseph Balsamo." He introduces his hero as attending a meeting of the illuminati at which Swedenborg also was present, the object being the French Revolution. The biography of Cagliostro by Carlisle, where authentic, simply plays into the hands of the Inquisition, and for the rest he did not understand what he was writing about. I myself believe that Swedenborg was an initiate, and I think his writings show it, although such passages as are applicable thereto may be explained by the doctrine of correspondence. The Swedenborgians themselves are anxious to disavow any connection with Freemasonry.

I have some extracts from Cagliostro's Rite from Ragon and the works of Jacques Et. Marconis, in which the principal part of the ceremony is the invocation of Moses, and the Planetary Angels, a young child acting as the interpreter of visions in Cagliostro's well known crystal vase filled with water. His method of invocation was that of the Copts, and his elixir of life is said to have been potable gold. But these discussions, although suited, say, for the Rosicrucian Order, are inapplicable to your pages.

Yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

P.S. Madame H. P. Blavatsky in her "It is Unveiled" assures us that the elixir of the Lamas is sulphur, and the aura of silver, and not vulgar quicksilver, as the Rosicrucians were understood to affirm.

THE BRITISH MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AT CORK.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The British Medical Association will hold its annual meeting this year at Cork, on August 5th and following days. In our ancient and honourable fraternity you must be aware there are a large number of medical men, and I am sure it would greatly enhance the anticipated pleasures of the visit if we, who happen to be Masons as well as medical men, could be assured that there was any probability of our Irish Masonic as well as medical brethren organising some little meeting and offering us the right hand of fellowship. As far as I can make out by the enclosed list the regular meetings of the various lodges at Cork do not seem to agree with the days on which the association meets, viz., August 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th. A hint in the Freemason, which I trust has as deservedly large a circulation in the sister island as in England, will doubtless be of service:—

GREENHOUSE PLANTS. Groombridge & Sons.

This is a very charming little work, very artistically illustrated, and, we think, not only deserving of notice in our columns, but worthy of perusal by our many readers. Rather, we would say, by those who take a praiseworthy interest in conservatories, as to them it is likely to prove very useful and very suggestive. We always encourage a taste for gardening and flowers, inasmuch as we have in this healthy pursuit a most interesting and elevating employment of our time, and one calculated to do us all great good in many ways. It is noteworthy how that the handiwork of T.G.A.O.T.U. is still pre-eminent and unapproachable, either by the developments of civilization, or the creations of art, and how that flowers especially, delightful and glorious in their formation and splendour, constitute alike the ornament of our homes, and the study of our lives—and even then we can neither equal, much less surpass, their grace, their beauty, and their wondrous reality.

ORATORY AND ORATORS. By Wm. Matthews, LL.D. Hamilton, Adams, & Co., London.

This, the 7th edition of an oft-quoted work, seems to deserve a passing notice in the Freemason. Some one has said that the world is governed by oratory, and, no doubt, orators have at times welded the fierce passions, or awayed the mighty impulses of multitudes and nations. It is also true, we think, that the world is governed more by the "individual" than the "many;" more by the great "unit" than the "undistinguishable thousands." If it be true that the history of the world is an history after all of "individualism," and not of "aggregation," we probably have in this truth the fact of the influence of the individual friend, well, and orator, over the "homo." But then, on the other hand, how much of what we call oratory in common parlance is mixed up with the base alloy of personal motives. If we separate from the "epea pteroenta" from the "thoughts which burn" and the "words which melt," all that is influenced by the petty or dirty considerations of earth, how small, alas is the "residuum in that testing crucible left behind, for the real welfare and lasting happiness of mankind." There are, indeed, some speakers whose words still linger with us long after we first heard them, in vivid emotion or constraining power, and believing them to be real words, true words, good words, we cling to them, and are influenced by them, and act by them; and if, on the one hand, wonderful is the gift, great the influence of the orator no less serious is his responsibility, inasmuch as he can affect a "people" either for good or for bad, for the highest ends of humanity, for the basest ends of evil. We fear that Jobson's objection to "much speaking" has some foundation for it, and that when he says these "talking fellows do more harm than good to any one," we cannot altogether demur to the truthfulness of his words. Unrestrained speech is a great curse; the "cacathos loquendi," the "bottled moonshine" of the "windbag," do us all much moral harm, and we think it well, therefore, when we are reviewing orators and oratory, to strike a humble, tiny note of warning and deprecation. Because, say what we will, the world is still governed to a great extent by "humbug;" the normal class of speeches and speakers is dreadfully infested by this parasitical disease. We have, indeed, sometimes listened with beating heart to the vivid words of Lord Beaconsfield, we have been held spellbound by the silvery address of Lord Cairns, nay, we have admired the Homeric flow of Mr. Gladstone, and the often angry logic of Mr. Lowe. We can remember old days when we have sat in the Speaker's Gallery and followed the glittering periods of Lord Stanley and Lord Macaulay, the lucidity of Sir Robert Peel and Sir James Graham, the eloquence of Buller and Shiel, the calmer, sensible words of Palmerston and Lord John Russell, and, therefore, we feel how much oratory has in it to command the attention, the sympathy, the admiration of mankind. Mr. Matthew's book gives us a good account of oratory, and many amusing anecdotes of political or parliamentary orators, forensic orators, that is lawyers, but he will use fine words; and pulpit orators, that is preachers. One of these we must quote—Taylor, the "Sailor's Preacher," at Boston was one day preaching to a large audience. He had vividly depicted an impenitent sinner under the figure of a storm-tossed vessel, bowing under the hurricane, every bit of canvas gone, and driving madly towards the rock-bound coast of Cape Ann. "How shall this poor sinner be saved?" was his touching query as his climax. An "old salt" in the gallery had listened spellbound, but now, at this question, he jumped up and said, "Let him put his helm hard down and bear away for Squam." We can commend the book to the notice of our readers.

FREEMASONRY IN ESSEX.

In the interesting account of the lodges in the Province of Essex (Freemason, No. 538) I see that frequent references are made to Bro. Gould's and my lists of lodges. I presume the writer had not access at the time to my latest work "Masonic Register," &c., as in that, at page 76, he will find that No. 214 is located at Brentwood, having been removed from Romford quite recently. The value of these lists of lodges from A.D. 1723 to the present time will doubtless be fully appreciated when brethren generally take an interest in the origin and progress of the old lodges, but just now I fear that many look upon such studies as rather dry, and not a few as useless researches, until they or their friends desire a centenary warrant, or want to prove the antiquity of their lodges; then of course the lists are found to be indispensable and invaluable. I believe that sketches like the one as to Essex will do a deal to make the study more popular, only especial care should be taken in the preparation of the figures, as else the errors will counterbalance much of the advantage. I remark this in a general sense only. I fail to see any discrepancy between Bro. Gould and myself. Our works are mutually supplemental, and together complete the numerical registers from 1723 to 1878. 28 "Moderns" in 1813 calendar was at "Waltham Abbey," and called "Well disposed," which agrees with the "Four Old Lodges," but in 1814 in the "Union" List, published in that year (but the calendar dated 1815), the name of the lodge was changed to the "Alpha," and its location was Kensington Palace, as No. 43. It did not appear in the 1833 list, and its date was A.D. 1730 (not 1732), as Bro. Gould and I have it. It is well to remember that the calendar of 1814 was issued in 1813, before the "Union" took place. No. 29, before the "Union," was at Burnham, Essex (list of 1813), but in 1793 was at East Smithfield, as Bro. Gould states (his list at page 75 of his excellent work being a copy of that year's calendar). I shall be happy to answer any question as to these matters.

At the election of Prov. Grand Treas., Bro. B. K. Thorpe was unanimously re-elected, amidst loud applause.

On the motion of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master the following recommendations of the Charity Committee were adopted:—£30 to the widow of a brother of No. 503; £10 to a brother of No. 429; £20 to a brother of No. 1208; and £10 to the widow of a brother of No. 829. On the motion of the Prov. G.M. £105 was voted to the Girls' School, in the name of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, to make him Vice-Patron of the Institution. On the motion of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master £21 was voted to Lodges 1436, Sandgate; 1449, Canterbury; 429, Ramsgate; 483, Milton; and 503, Maidstone, to make them Life Governors of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; £21 each to Lodges 1436, Sandgate, and 1449, Canterbury, for the Girls' School; and £21 each for 1436, Sandgate, and 1449, Canterbury, for the Boys' School. £10 10s. each was also voted to Lodges 1107, Belvedere; 1174, Chatham; 1206, Sandwich; 1208, Dover; 1209, Ramsgate; and 1223, Westerham, to make them Life Subscribers to the Boys' School. The Deputy Provincial G.M., in moving the last of these grants, said there was a mistake in the agenda paper with regard to them, as they really supplemented gifts of £21 each previously made. With regard to the endowments of the other lodges he said that it was a rule in Kent not to give the endowment to a lodge unless it had contributed to one of the Masonic Institutions for six years. Grand Lodge was then called off, and the brethren proceeded to All Saints' Church, where a sermon was preached by the Rev. W. A. Hill, Grand Chaplain. Lodge was afterwards resumed.

The Prov. G.M. moved, and the Deputy Grand Master seconded, a vote of thanks to the vicar of All Saints' for the use of his church, and to the Rev. W. A. Hill for his discourse.

The Rev. W. A. Hill, in replying, thanked the brethren for their attendance, and announced that the collection amounted to £16 6s. 6d., part of which would be devoted to Masonic, and part to local charities.

Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Corn Exchange, where, in the fine large hall, a banquet most plentifully supplied by Hubert de Carteret, the manager, was partaken of. The banner of the Douglas Lodge, No. 1725, was behind the Prov. G. Master's chair. The banquet was held under the joint Committee of this and the Belvidere Lodge, No. 503, both of them Maidstone lodges, the latter meeting at the Star Hotel, and the former at the Gateway, Ancient College, Maidstone. A very large number of brethren sat down to banquet, at which the tables were elegantly decorated with ferns and flowers, and supplied with a liberal provision of summer fruits.

The band of the 86th Regiment played during dinner the following selections:—1, Overture, "Tancredi." 2, Selection, "Bohemian Girl." 3, Valse, "Distant Shore." 4, Selection, "Lombardi." 5, Valse, "Sweethearts." 6, Galop, "Festival." 7, Valse, "Messenger of Love." 8, Selection, "Lucrezia Borgia." 9, Quadrille, "Les Cloches de Corneville." 10, Valse, "Les Cloches de Corneville."

At the conclusion of the banquet the usual toasts were proposed, but, as his lordship said there were not only Masons present, the customary Masonic fire was not given. The toast of "The Queen and the Craft" was therefore honoured with the ordinary outer world hip, hip, hurrah!

In giving the toast of "The Grand Master," Lord Holmesdale said that whatever his Royal Highness took up he threw his whole heart into. A great deal of his Royal Highness's time was taken up with other business, but he had greatly assisted Masonry, and it had very much advanced under his auspices.

In giving "The Health of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers," Lord Holmesdale conjoined with the toast the name of the Rev. W. Hill, Grand Chaplain, and said that it was a fitting tribute to the rev. brother's worth that he had been selected to preach the sermon that day at the meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge.

The Rev. W. A. Hill responded. He was happy to find that the Prov. G. Master mentioned that the Grand Officers did their duty. At the last Quarterly Communication he had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of the two new chief officers, the Senior and Junior Wardens, and he found that they were very good samples of Grand Officers. The first was Lord Kensington, and the second Major General Cathorpe, both of whom had served their country, the first in Parliament, the second in arms; and both were ready to serve Masonry. His name had been mentioned in connection with the promotions at Grand Lodge, but he took no credit to himself for such distinction, because he put it down entirely to the province of Kent. The Prince of Wales found the province had come to the front, and was improving its position more and more, and, therefore, he appointed him to Grand Officer. He was very much pleased at having been called upon that day to preach at the church in Maidstone, because it gave him an opportunity of meeting many old friends. For twenty years and upwards he had been in this place, and had formed the acquaintance of many in the neighbourhood, and he was happy to have seen many of them again this day. The province was making very great advance, and he was very glad of it. He had always been taught in Freemasonry to be happy and to communicate happiness. With reference to this subject, he might mention that the tables, which had been so elegantly decorated that day, had been decorated not by professional horticulturists but by a number of brethren who had supplied the plants from their own gardens. In that way the brethren had been communicating happiness. Whatever might happen, he should always hold the province of Kent in affectionate remembrance, and he hoped and trusted that he might be spared health and strength to carry out the wishes he had for the province.

Bro. Eastes, Deputy Prov. G.M., proposed "The Health of the Prov. G.M." In doing so he said that this toast was invested with the greatest interest to all the brethren, because it brought before them in the proper manner the name of Lord Holmesdale, and reminded them of the great and important services he had performed towards the province. It had been a very eventful period in the history of Freemasonry, as regarded the province, since his lordship had reigned over them. There had been a marked progressive prosperity in the province, on which the brethren might congratulate themselves. Referring to facts, he might mention that when the present Prov. Grand Master was installed, in 1860, there were only seventeen lodges in the province and less than 800 members. From the last return they found there were upwards of forty lodges and more than 2500 members. All the affairs of Freemasonry in the province were progressing favourably and going along smoothly, and the brethren might well congratulate themselves that they had a nobleman ruling over the province who was a man of energy. If the true principles of Freemasonry had not been followed in this province it would not have achieved that splendid result which it had achieved in this province.

The Prov. Grand Master, in responding, said he hoped always to receive the same hearty good wishes and greetings at the brethren's hands, and he hoped his conduct in the chair would merit them. As regarded the state of the province, it was greatly improving, but there was still the same story for it of peace and prosperity. It was in a very happy state, the same state as it had been in since he had had the honour to hold the chair. At one time it fell down to small numbers, but in those small numbers there were maintained the principles of the Craft. He was happy to see that the number of lodges had been raised, and there had been a steady increase, not only in numbers but in respectability. Without respectability they were not worthy to hold their position. The province was now quite strong enough to carry candidates at elections and to assist other provinces, and the brethren would take care that this state was not impaired by the admission of candidates to the Order who would not be a credit to it. He was happy to say that in this province they had no reason to find fault about the quality of the brethren, as it was very good, and he would be very sorry if in admitting a large number they had not regard to quality. The quality of the Craft was not deteriorating in the province, and that being so the same story was told—a story of prosperity and success. He could only hope that it would last, and that the history of the Craft in the province for the next sixty or seventy years would be as famous as it had been, and as it was to day. The day had begun inauspiciously: much rain had fallen, and the brethren thought they would get a wet jacket. However, it had turned out fine, and he hoped it would be so in the Craft. The brethren who struggled in former days in the Craft might have thought there was nothing for them but failure. That had not been the case. They struggled and they prospered, and they saw before they finished their work that success was in view. That had been realized that day. The dawn was not bright, but the day had finished well, and he hoped there was in store for Freemasonry in the province even a brighter day than it had yet had. They must not forget, however, in their prosperity what they owed to their predecessors, and he wished that they should show that they had succeeded to the fruits of their predecessors' labours, and were not ungrateful for them. For himself he might say all his services should be at the disposal of the province, and he hoped he should be able to render them for many years to come. He had always met with a kind reception at the hands of the brethren, and he doubted not that it would be continued hereafter.

The Prov. G.M. next gave "The Health of the Deputy Prov. G. Master," to which Bro. Eastes replied. He said it was very gratifying to him that the Prov. G.M. and the brethren were pleased with what he had done. The Province of Kent stood out as a great success, and the brethren had seen it stated on several occasions in the Masonic journals that the system of charity which Kent adopted was inaugurated in Lancashire about the year 1860. He was always in favour of paying honour where honour was due, and, therefore, knowing that that was not the case, he would state that the Province of Kent inaugurated the system. In 1850 there was a provincial meeting at Chatham, when Bro. Humphrey introduced the matter. He did it so admirably that, with his lordship's permission, he (Bro. Eastes) would like to send a copy of the minutes to the leading journals in Freemasonry, for he did not think it could be put in a more admirable manner. It was a most desirable thing to do. Thirty guineas was then raised, but now it had reached £250. They began with a good and solid foundation, and there were now thirty lodges in the province that were Vice-Presidents of the Institutions.

The S.W. responded to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Officers," and Bro. Alfred Spencer being loudly called for also added a few words, dwelling more particularly on the charitable feature of the province's proceedings.

The Provincial Grand Master gave "The Masonic Charities," and regretted that there was not a representative of one of those Institutions present to respond.

The other toasts were given before the brethren separated.

Dr. Longhurst presided at the organ in the church, and eight members of the choir of Canterbury Cathedral assisted in the musical portion of the service. At the dinner Bros. Plant, Moulding, and Rhodes sang.

LORD TENTERDEN, P.G.M. OF ESSEX.

Charles Stuart Aubrey Abbott, third Baron Tenterden, of Hendon, in the county of Middlesex, was duly installed Prov. Grand Master of Essex on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., and, in accordance with our recent promise, we proceed to give a brief sketch of his career. His lordship was born in the year 1834, and is, therefore, in the full vigour of mature manhood. In 1859 he married his cousin, Penelope, daughter of Major-General Sir J. R. Smyth, K.C.B., and by her has issue a son and three daughters. He succeeded his uncle, John Henry, second baron, in 1870, the barony having been conferred on Sir Charles Abbott, Knt., in 1827, in consideration of his distinguished services as Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench; and his grandson, the present peer, though devoting his talents and energies to an entirely different branch of the public service, has furnished evidence on more than one occasion that he is not unworthy to follow in the footsteps of so eminent a man. When only a few months turned nineteen years of age Mr. Charles S. A. Abbott, as he then was, was appointed to a supernumerary clerkship in the Foreign Office, and thenceforward has risen grade by grade to the highest permanent position in that department, namely, the permanent Under-Secretaryship of State, to which he was appointed in the year 1873. His lordship has also in the course of his long official career enjoyed many special opportunities of displaying his ability. Thus, he was précis writer to Lord Stanley (now Earl of Derby) from July, 1866, to December, 1868. He was in attendance on the Royal Commission of Inquiry into the Neutrality Laws from February, 1867, to May, 1868, and immediately afterwards was appointed Secretary to the Royal Commission on the Laws of Naturalisation and Allegiance. Early in 1871 he was appointed Secretary to the Joint High Commission, of which the Marquis of Ripon, Past Grand Master of England, was a member for considering various circumstances affecting the relations between Great Britain and the United States of North America. For his services in this capacity he was made a companion of the Civil Division of the most honourable Order of the Bath. In the autumn of the same year he attended as Her Majesty's agent the Tribunal of Arbitration on the Alabama claims at Geneva. In October, 1873, he became, as we have already stated, permanent Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Last year he was a member of the Royal Commission, of which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was President, at the Paris International Exhibition. The honour of a Knight Companionship of the Bath Civil Division, has likewise been conferred upon him by Her Majesty in recognition of his valuable services. Our readers will gather from the foregoing particulars that, in respect of his public career, the subject of this sketch has been, not only a loyal but also a most valuable servant of the Crown, and having regard to the fact that he is yet, comparatively speaking, a young man, there is every reason to hope that for many years to come his lordship's services will be at the command of his Sovereign.

Turn we now to his career in Masonry, which is proud to number among her sons so many public men of distinction. Mr. Charles S. A. Abbott was initiated into our mysteries in the year 1856, in the Lodge of Harmony, No. 255, held at Richmond, Surrey, and such was the progress he made in the Royal Art that, in 1859, and again in 1864, his fellow members conferred upon him the highest honour it is in the power of any lodge to bestow, by unanimously electing him to be their Worshipful Master. His services in this capacity were fully recognised by those whom he presided over. He was exalted into Royal Arch Masonry in the year 1857, in the Iris Chapter, No. 255, and early in 1864 was installed into the chair of First Principal. In the year 1858 he was advanced to the Mark Degree in the Hiram Lodge No. 13. On the occasion of his official visit to the United States, in 1871, Lord Tenterden found time to attend, even in the midst of his arduous duties, several of the lodges in the District of Columbia, and, according to one of the American Masonic organs of the day, more than once exemplified the working of Masonry according to our English ritual in a masterly manner. He was made an honorary member of Pentalfa Lodge, of Washington, and brought back home with him a beautiful and costly Past Master's jewel, which had been presented to him as a slight souvenir of his association with the brethren of that city. He was also a guest at the magnificent entertainment given on the 10th April of that year by the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, in honour of our then Grand Master, the Earl de Grey and Ripon, now Marquis of Ripon, the banquet being graced by several Grand Masters of Masons in the United States, as well as by Senators, Representatives, and other persons of distinction who were members of the fraternity. His lordship has been the recipient of Grand Lodge honours, and ranks as a Past Grand Warden. He enjoys the further honour of being the representative at our Grand Lodge of the three Grand Lodges—the Three Globes, Grand Countries, and Royal York of Friendship—of Berlin. He has likewise shown himself a practical exponent of the system on which Masons, not without reason, pride themselves, for he is a Life Governor of, and has served the office of Steward at one of its Anniversary Festivals for, the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and, doubtless, as occasion offers, we shall see him exercising his influence in behalf of our other Institutions. After a careful perusal of these sound and valuable services in connection with Freemasonry, it cannot for a single moment be doubted that our Grand Master has acted with his usual wisdom in appointing his lordship to the Grand Mastership of the Province of Essex.

DECORATION OF THE LIVERPOOL MASONIC HALL.

For some time the internal ensemble of the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, has been anything but satisfactory, as the building has remained without the slightest adornment since the completion of its erection several years ago. Now, however, the chiefs of the Craft in this part of the division of West Lancashire are taking active steps to have this defect remedied, and there is little doubt that when the proposed grand scheme is carried out the hall will, internally, be the most artistic and attractive of its kind in the United Kingdom. At a numerously attended meeting of the General Committee on Friday, the 20th ult., Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., Chairman of the Masonic Hall Committee, presiding, the matter was taken into consideration.

On the motion of Bro. W. Cottrell, P.M. 823, Chairman of the House Committee, seconded by Bro. J. W. Ballard, P.M. 724, it was resolved that the plans of Bro. Francis Smith, decorative artist, of London and Chester, P.P.G.S. of W. (Cheshire), P.M. 201 and 998, for the decoration of the various rooms and staircases should be adopted and carried out. The entire cost of the scheme will be about £2000, and it is proposed to proceed without delay with the decoration of the banqueting-hall, at an expenditure of about £650, as the first portion of the work.

Bro. F. Smith has already made his mark in Masonic decorative work, and the plans he has submitted show the perfection of taste and culture. Meanwhile the liberality of the lodges and individual brethren is being solicited in order that the Committee may carry out the work without delay, and already a substantial sum has been secured. The following general details of the banqueting-hall decorations will give an idea of Bro. Smith's general plans:—

The centre flower on ceiling shows a design of Masonic emblems, and perforated for ventilation. Around this centre flower runs the plaster guilloches border styles, etched in gold, and next this, on the ceiling, is a circlet of the "acacia sprig," with the five-pointed stars running round the same. The corners of the centre panel of ceiling is composed of ornamentation in which is placed a medallion on a pale chocolate ground, and representing an emblem in which is shown the Genius of Freemasonry spanning the globe with a pair of compasses, implying that Freemasonry is universal. At the sides of this medallion are seated figures bearing swags of husks in one hand, whilst in the other is shown the square. Between the four corners of above are medallions painted in their natural colours, the emblem being the "perfect ashlar," with the square, by which it was made perfect, also conveying a moral. The other medallion represents a "lily," an emblem of "purity," that all things prevail with truth. These medallions are supported by a cluster of ears of corn and another ornament denoting "plenty." The other medallions will be varied in Masonic emblems. At the side panels, in the centre, is a large allegorical panel relating to "science" and Masonic virtues, and it may also be said to illustrate the career of a Master in the chair—for in the centre is the Genius of Freemasonry holding the Master's collar in one hand, and in the other the "cornucopia," denoting, "may his year of office be one of 'prosperity';" may it be one of 'harmony,'" which is represented by a figure of "music;" "may it be one of 'peace,'" represented by a figure bearing the "palm;" "may he have 'wisdom' and 'philosophy,'" which is shown by a figure emblematical of the same; and finally, "may he earn fame through his career of office," which is shown by a figure bearing the "wreath of fame." At the sides of above large centre panel are shaped panels, the subjects being the globes, supported by two figures, the one spanning the same with a pair of compasses, and showing in one hand a trowel, whilst the other figure is pointing with a pencil. On the side of each figure is shown the "cornucopia" and other ornamentation; at the corners of this said panel are medallions, one bearing the "jewel of the Grand Steward" and the other that of the "Grand Deacon." Under the above panels is the "All-seeing Eye," throwing its rays on the pedestal, and above which is the circle and triangle. From this figure is carried along the panels ornamentation and circlets of acacia sprigs, in the centre of which are trophies, and between these are "pots of incense," an emblem of a pure heart. Supported on each side of above is shown a group of "ears of corn," with swags of husks on same suspended throughout the entire panels. On the fringe of cornice is a running ornamentation, with medallion at intervals, bearing Masonic devices.

Description of walls:—

The pilasters on sides of walls are shown in Sienna marble, with the capitals richly etched in gold. The panels are formed by enriched gold mouldings with enamelled styles, the panels being a pale blue ground, diapered with inlaid gold devices. The marbled dado and skirting has a crested band at top, formed of Masonic emblems, &c.

THE URBAN CLUB.

Saint John's Gate, made famous with its literary and Masonic associations, where the Urban Lodge and Chapter hold their meetings, was the scene of an unusual gathering on Friday last, when Bro. J. Dionysius Loverdo, F.R.S.L.A., occupied the chair at the monthly meeting of the Urban Club, from which institution the above Masonic associations have originated. On this occasion several well-known Masons were present, including Bros. Dr. Neodes Mussabini, Vice-Chairman; Dr. Barringer, Hon. Treasurer; Dr. Carpenter, late Honorary Secretary; George E. Fairchild, Librarian; Dr. Hunter, Smallpiece, Henry Rugg, Fountain, Frederick Keddlill, Bassett-Keeling, Henry Hallam, and others.

It has been announced that the illustrious proprietors of the Gate are going to use the great hall where Garrick made his first essay in London as an actor, and the club holds its meetings, as the encampment of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and the head-quarters of the Ambulance Hospital in connection with the Order.

The Chairman, in proposing "Prosperity to the Club," intimated that the proprietors were willing to extend the armoury, so as to give sufficient room to the members of the club to hold their meetings there, and remarked that the associations of the Old Gate are so blended together with their club that it would be a pity to look elsewhere for accommodation, when the armoury could easily accommodate when extended the members of their club, and left the matter entirely in the hands of the members to decide when the proper time arrives.

The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by Mr. Josiah J. Merriman, who in a genial speech congratulated the club on its prosperity, and the advantages derived from such literary gatherings.

The veteran John A. Heraud, in an eloquent speech, proposed "Bro. Loverdo's Health," dilating upon his merits as a poet and man of letters, thus showing, added the speaker, how the learning of the ancient Greeks has been inherited by their descendants, of whom our Chairman is a good specimen. This toast was received with the usual honours.

Bro. Loverdo replied in appropriate terms, and in return proposed "The Vice-Chairman's, Bro. Mussabini's, Health."

Mr. W. E. Church, the Honorary Secretary, obliged the company with some capital recitations, which elicited immense applause.

Messrs. Nicholson, Hallam, Clark, and Bonchette enlivened the proceedings with some capital music and singing.

The company separated at a late hour.

Bro. J. D. Allcroft, M.P., is one of the stewards of the forthcoming Hereford Musical Festival.

THE FREEMASONS' HALL, IPSWICH.

A short time ago we gave an interesting account of the opening ceremony of the above hall, under the presidency of Bro. the Rev. J. Martyn, P.G.C., and the D.P.G. Master of Suffolk, who has taken a lively interest in this work. We are happy to state that the active Managing Committee, consisting of Bros. N. Tracey, P.M.; H. Miller, P.M.; H. Cusley, W.M. 114; R. S. Cumess, S.W.; J. Talbot, S.D.; B. Grimsey, S.D.; and Thomas J. Wentworth, W.M. 225, and their active Hon. Secretary, Bro. Hammond, were, after great labour and untiring energy, enabled to lay before a general meeting of trustees a final report of their proceedings, which has resulted in clearing the hall of debt, with the exception of £700 on an easy mortgage. This is most gratifying to all interested, and we must congratulate Ipswich and the Suffolk province on the happy issue out of their troubles, which is due in a great measure to the determination to make it a success of the names mentioned, and left them in possession of a handsome and commodious building dedicated to Masonic purposes.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A meeting of the Wentworth Little Memorial Committee will be held on Friday, the 18th inst., before which date it is requested that all monies voted or promised to the fund may be sent to the Treasurer, Bro. H. G. Buss, Asst. G. Sec., Freemasons' Hall.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has conferred the degree of Doctor of Civil Law on Bro. Ernst Emil Wendt, a native of Dantzic, but now a naturalised British subject, on the ground of his knowledge and large practical experience of German and English commercial law.

M. I ttré, in a letter read on Wednesday night at the Clémentine Amicitie Lodge of Freemasons, which had met to celebrate the fourth anniversary of its initiation, speaks of himself as permanently confined to his room. He expresses great satisfaction at the prospect of the piercing of the Isthmus of Panama—a scheme first broached in the Clémentine Amicitie Lodge—and advocates the creation of a Positivist University to compete both with the orthodoxy of the Church and the eclecticism of the State. The meeting resolved to appeal to the Masonic body for subscriptions for this purpose.—Times.

MISS HOPEKIRK'S CONCERT.—A concert, given in the hall of the Royal Academy of Music on Friday, the 4th inst., though it attracted little attention and but a small audience, served to introduce a lady pianist who bids fair for high rank. Miss Helen Hopekirk has recently, we believe, finished a course of study at Leipsic Conservatory, which enjoys the reputation of skilful teaching; but no educational means, apart from great natural ability, could have given the young lady such qualifications as it is obvious she possesses. Her playing is distinguished by much intelligence and taste; she has great command of the key-board and a touch of exquisite sensitiveness. These essentials of a good pianist were abundantly manifested in Beethoven's pianoforte trio (E flat) and in a series of pieces of various epochs and in various styles, ranging from Bach to Scharwenka. Miss Hopekirk seemed quite at home with all the masters, and unequivocally established herself as an artist worthy of attention. No doubt she will continue to study and persevere, seeing that a good position is within her reach. The concert given was assisted by Miss Kate Ockleston, also a pianist of ability, by Mr. Otto Manns (violin) and Mr. Reed (violin), the vocalist being Mdle. Hohenschield.—Daily Telegraph.

Bro. A. Woolrich was, on Wednesday, installed W.M. of the De Grey and Ripon Lodge, No. 1356, at the Masonic Rooms, North Hill-street, Liverpool, and a report of the interesting proceedings will appear in due course.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. E. G. Webster, of Royal Jubilee Lodge, No. 72, at Tamorth, on the 24th ult. Bro. Webster was well known in Masonic circles, and many of our brethren will bear of his death with regret.

Bro. T. Brassey, M.P., has promised to distribute the prizes at the Nonconformist Grammar School, Bishop's Stortford, on the 22nd inst.

The ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the Blind Asylum, Glasgow, with Masonic honours, by Bro. Col. Walter Montgomerie Neilson, R.W. Prov. Grand Master, will take place on Tuesday, the 5th August next, at three o'clock p.m.

Bro. Sheriff Burt and Mr. Sheriff Bevan have issued invitations to the members of the Court of Aldermen, Mr. Sheriff-elect Woolton, J.P., Mr. Sheriff-elect Bayley, J.P., and the high officers of the Corporation, to a banquet at the Albion on Thursday, the 24th inst.

Bro. C. H. Roberts (Remembrancer) was amongst those who attended the sixth meeting of the Fox Club at the Ship, Greenwich, on Saturday.

Viscount and Viscountess Homesdale, of Linton Park, Maidstone, have caused it to be notified to their tenantry that a reduction of ten per cent. will be made in the rents payable by them for the next two years.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Health or Wealth.—No sane person would hesitate an instant in the choice between these two conditions. Now is the season to secure the former either by restoring or confirming it. These Pills expel all impurities from the system which fogs, foul vapours, and variable temperatures engender during winter; this medicine also acts most who'somely upon the skin by discharging the liver of its accumulated bile, and by exciting the kidneys to more energetic action; it increases the appetite for food and strengthens the digestive process. The stomach and liver, with which most disorders originate, are fully under the control of these regenerative Pills, which act very kindly yet most efficiently on the tenderest bowels.—[ADVT.]

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo Lodge (No. 13).—The above grand old lodge, the mother of all the lodges in the Woolwich district, whose warrant dates back to the 1st of December, 1826, held its installation festival on Wednesday, the 9th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, William-street, and we were pleased to see so many of the Past Masters present, a thing more honoured in the observance than the breach of, and more especially in this lodge, which has for some time past been under a cloud, and has not been progressing so favourably as its friends, and they are many, would have been pleased to see it. However, under the new rule just inaugurated, hopes are entertained that a brighter look out is dawning, and that ere long the old glories of the lodge may be revived in all their pristine vigour and brightness, and we feel sure its friends all over the world will be pleased to hear of it, and join with us in these, our most sanguine hopes and good wishes. The lodge was opened at three o'clock, Bro. G. W. Reed, I.P.M., in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting having been passed, Mr. John Clements was, after approval, initiated into the secrets and mysteries of the Craft, and Bro. Shorebridge was passed to the Second Degree. Bro. Reed was in excellent form, and the degrees were splendidly worked by our esteemed brother. The following Past Masters of the lodge were present:—Bros. W. P. Applebee, T. Carnelly, C. F. Hills, G. Davies, F. G. Pownall, and R. Hodgkinson. Among the visitors were Bros. A. Tattershall, P.M. 140; A. W. Woodley, W.M. 700; W. B. Lloyd, W.M. 913; W. Weston, P.M. 1536; C. M. Munyard, P.M. 79; J. Warren, S.W. and W.M. elect, 700; J. Black, J.W. 706; H. Pryce, I.G. 913; C. W. King, 77; G. Beaver, I.G. 700; J. H. Roberts, D.C. 700; J. Murray, 299; W. J. Heath, 766; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The whole of the preliminary business having been happily settled, Bro. T. Hutton, W.M. elect, was formally presented to the Installing Officer, Bro. F. G. Pownall, P.M. 13 and 1536, and P.G. Supt. of W. Kent, and the ceremony commenced. In due course Bro. Hutton was seated in the chair of the lodge, and saluted with the customary honours. He then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. N. Brown, S.W.; H. Syer (late Secretary to the lodge), J.W.; G. Davies, P.M., Treas.; O. Hutton, Sec.; T. Hosgood, S.D.; R. A. Smith, J.D.; Mattee, I.G.; and B. Norman, Tyler. The addresses to the Masters, Wardens, and brethren were then given with that feeling and eloquence so characteristic of Bro. Pownall, and the ceremony was concluded. It was then unanimously carried that a vote of thanks should be presented to Bro. Pownall, and inscribed on the minutes of the lodge, for his work done that day as Installing Officer, and Bro. Pownall briefly returned thanks. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Lord Raglan, Plumstead, where Bro. Tucker had provided a substantial banquet for them. This having been discussed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. Bro. Reed, P.M., then proposed the toast of the evening, that of "The W.M." He said, in the absence of the I.P.M., Bro. Moore, a very pleasant duty devolved upon him, and from the unanimous manner in which the brethren had, at their last meeting, elected Bro. Hutton to the chair, and the unanimity and concord that prevailed upon the present occasion, when, with the hearty good wishes of every member of the lodge, he was placed in the chair, he augured a very successful year of office both to the W.M. and to the lodge. During the last year, to put it figuratively, they had been under a "fog." The weather under which the good ship "Union Waterloo" had been sailing had been squally, to say the least of it, but now with a change in the weather, which certainly looked much more propitious, he trusted she would go on her course and make up the leeway she had lost. He asked them to drink the health cordially. Bro. Hutton, in response, said he could hardly realize that it was his health they were drinking, and he thanked them for the warm expressions of the feeling from his heart. He could not say that his family would be proud of him, because he stood alone in the world, but he felt that he was surrounded by those whom he might call his family—his brethren of the lodge—and the many visiting brethren who had come to do honour to him and the lodge upon that occasion. He thanked them one and all for their great kindness. He then, in glowing terms, proposed "The Health of Bro. P.M. Pownall, the Installing Officer." Bro. Pownall, in reply, said, why he should have been singled out from among the Past Masters of the lodge to perform the ceremony of installation that day he did not know; however, it appeared he had given the W.M. satisfaction in the duty placed in his hands, and he believed that the same feeling animated the brethren. He was happy in having given satisfaction to all of them. Considering the fact that he had been knocking about a great deal lately, and had only lately found a resting place, they must forgive him if he had not been among them so much lately as he should have desired, but now he trusted to be able to come among them more frequently. He was exceedingly pleased to see so many Past Masters, brethren, and visitors rally round Bro. Hutton on this important and eventful day in his Masonic life. He had heard, and with very great regret, that that unanimity of concord that was so essential to the welfare of a lodge had been absent during the past year from this. Their lodge was one of the oldest and most esteemed out of London; and as the mother—and he might say the grandmother—of all the surrounding lodges, it behoved them to set an example in those glorious attributes of the Order. He earnestly invited them to assist the W.M. to recover, this year, the prestige that had been so grievously clouded during the past, and make this grand old lodge of theirs one of the best, as it was one of the oldest, in the district. He called upon the officers to assist with all their heart in the work, for a great deal of the success and harmony of a lodge rested with its officers. Their W.M. was an initiate of the lodge, and he (Bro. Pownall) felt it as a good omen to see the W.M. who initiated him two years ago, present at his installation—he alluded to Bro. Applebee. He thanked them for the kind reception of his name, and concluded a lengthy address by again advocating a system of unanimity in work and brotherly love with one another for the ensuring of the progress and prosperity of the lodge. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," and in putting it the W.M. regretted the absence from their gathering of some of the members of the provincial lodges, more particularly the Patison, several of whom had gone to Maidstone, to the Grand Provincial meeting held there that day, and at which one of its Past Masters would receive a well merited reward for good work done at the hands of the P.G.M., Lord Holmesdale. They had with them, however, Bro. Woodley, W.M. of the Nelson Lodge; Bro. Tattershall, one of their own old Past Masters, whose name was in the Charities of the Order a household word; Past Master Weston of the Military Lodge, a good and worthy Mason; Bros. Munyard, Black, Pryce, King, and others, and he asked them to drink the toast with enthusiasm. Bro. Tattershall, after tendering his sincere thanks for the honour done him, said, that having gone through the chair of the lodge he felt a more than ordinary interest in its welfare and prosperity. He was pleased to see such a gathering as that now presented, and from it he trusted would spring a resolve to work together with that harmony and love that had been so eloquently advocated by Bro. Pownall. He had tried upon several occasions to make the lodge worthy of the position its age entitled it to in the Craft, and in his day was successful to a very great extent. His heart was with it now, and he hoped and trusted to see it yet take its rightful position among the lodges of the Craft. Bros. Woodley, Weston, Pryce, Black, Beaver, and Munyard, as well returned thanks for their respective lodges. "The Initiate" was then toasted and returned thanks. The toast of "The Past Masters" followed, and Bros. Reed and Applebee responded. The next toast was that of "The Officers," coupled with the names of Bros. Brown and Syer, who responded, and then "The Masonic Press" followed, and was responded to by our representative. A word of praise was bestowed upon Bro. Tucker for his efforts for their comfort, and then Bro. Norman gave the Tyler's toast, and the brethren separated.

SUNDERLAND.—Palatine Lodge (No. 97).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Forward-road, on Thursday evening, July 10th. The lodge was opened by Bro. T. M. Watson, W.M. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Mr. Singleton, a candidate for Masonry, who was declared elected. The ballot was also taken for Bro. Halverson, of St. John's Lodge, who was also elected. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree. Bro. Moore was then examined and found proficient; he then retired to be prepared. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, when Bro. Moore was admitted and made a Master Mason. The ceremony was gone through by the W.M. in a truly Masonic manner. There were several visitors, and of W.M.'s and P.M.'s, Bros. Newton, 80; Frampton, 94; Cockburn, 661; Beattie, 1389. The lodge was then closed to the Second and then to the First Degree. All business being done the lodge was closed according to ancient custom.

WHITEHAVEN.—Sun, Square, and Compasses Lodge (No. 119).—The hundred and eleventh anniversary of this old and flourishing lodge was celebrated in the Freemasons' Hall, College-street, Whitehaven, on Monday evening, the 7th inst. Of late years the custom has been to hold the installation festival early in the afternoon, but the old system of meeting to the evening, after the speeches of the members have ceased for the day, on this occasion was once more adopted. The gathering, therefore, was more of a private nature than otherwise, that is to say, almost entirely confined to members of the Craft resident in the northern seaport. The change is perhaps better, speaking in a social sense, as there is no reason for hurrying over the post-prandial proceedings, in order that visiting brethren may catch trains. Years ago, though, the members of this old lodge went to the other extreme in the hour of their assembly on the feasts of St. John, which were held in June and December. In the minutes, under date of June 24, 1805, it is recorded:—"Met precisely at eight o'clock in the morning, on lodge duty, and walked in procession to St. James's Church." The concluding minute is as follows:—"Having returned in excellent order, the day was spent in harmony and love. The thanks of this body were unanimously voted to Mr. Armistead for his excellent discourse." Before proceeding to the business of Monday week, we should add, that the seal of the Sun, Square, and Compasses Lodge, as used under the "ancient" regime, is in existence. It is intaglio, and bears the following inscription round the edge:—"Whitehaven Lodge, Ancient York, 157." In the centre are the square and compasses, with the letter G, sun, moon, and seven stars. The lodge was opened on the 7th inst., at 7 p.m., by Bro. Edward Tyson, W.M., assisted by his officers, the attendance being very numerous. After the usual formalities, the Worshipful Master proceeded to instal his successor, Bro. John Milligan, and in so finished a style as to call forth the warm commendations of the "old hands" present. In fact, this is the first time for many years past that a new W.M. of Lodge 119 has been installed by the retiring W.M., and we trust that, now the ice is broken, the much-desired regulation will be adhered to. The officers were appointed as follows: Bros. E. Tyson, I.P.M.; W. H. Atkinson, S.W.; J. W. Miles, J.W.; W. B. Gibson, P.M., Treas.; W. Bewlay, S. e.; W. Jackson, S.D.; J. Casson, J.D.; J. B. Mossop, D.C.; M. Golightly, I.G.; J. Cooper, Org.; J. Newnman and Dr. Henley, Stewards; and G. Fitzgerald, Tyler. The officers were invested by Bro. W. B. Gibson, P.M., P.G. Sec., and Bro. Tyson, I.P.M., gave the addresses to the W.M. and Wardens, whilst that to the brethren of Lodge 119 was delivered by Bro. John Barr, P.M., P.P.G. S.D. The lodge being closed, the party adjourned to the banqueting room, where, after the discussion of an excellent supper, a most enjoyable evening was spent by all present, under the presidency of the W.M. Amongst the visiting brethren was the captain of a Danish vessel, in port, a member of a lodge in Copenhagen, whose name has slipped us. This foreign brother was much gratified at the heartiness of his reception, and as highly pleased at what he witnessed during the evening.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Royal Gloucester Lodge (No. 130).—This lodge held its regular meeting on Thursday, the 10th inst., and was presided over by Bro. C. A. Jellicoe, W.M., who after having opened the lodge in the First and Second Degrees, and asked questions of Bro. Frenchman as to his proficiency, passed him to the rank of Fellow Craft in a most able and accurate manner. The lecture was, by the W.M.'s command, given by the S.W. Among the visitors, who were numerous, were noticed the W.M. of the Shirley Lodge, Bro. F. H. McCalmont, P. Prov. G. Reg. Oxon, as well as some of the Past Masters and members of that lodge. The business of the evening having been disposed of and the lodge closed, the brethren adjourned to the dining hall, where a most enjoyable evening was spent. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and well received, especially those of "The W.M. of the Lodge, Bro. C. A. Jellicoe," which was proposed by Bro. Past Master Payne in his usual able and eloquent style, and "The Sister Lodges," coupled with the name of Bro. F. H. McCalmont, Master of the Shirley Lodge. The proceedings were enlivened by several good songs, both in English and French, by Bros. P.M.'s Payne, Weston, Le Feuvre, Dyer, the W.M., Bro. Gricourt, and the Chaplain, Rev. Bro. Dupont. The W.M. gave the parting toast at eleven p.m., and the brethren shortly after separated.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 8th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Atheneum. Bro. E. Cardwell, the W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. J. Jowett, I.P.M.; W. Warbrick, S.W.; J. J. Crossell, J.W.; J. Atkinson, S.D.; E. Johnson (acting), J.D.; B. Greyson, I.G.; T. Bailey, S.; and R. Stanton, D. of C. There was not a large attendance. The lodge was opened with solemn prayer, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Burrows being a candidate for raising to the Sublime Degree of a M.M., advanced to the pedestal, and having shown proficiency in the former degree was entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Burrows, on being re-admitted, was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason by the W.M., who also presented the working tools, the ceremony throughout being gone through in a most efficient manner. The questions in the Third Degree were afterwards put round the lodge for the instruction of the brethren, and the lodge was closed down to the First Degree. The usual proclamations were made, which elicited "Hearty good wishes" from representatives of Lodges 105 (Plymouth), 1051, 1363, and 1561, and the lodge was subsequently closed with the peculiarities of the Craft.

MANCHESTER.—Lodge of Affability (No. 317).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, on Thursday, the 3rd inst., Bro. John Roger Lever, W.M., presiding. There were present Bros. Mark Vickers, S.W.; Wm. Nechall, J.W.; Tomlyn, S.D.; Ezra Cohen, I.G.; John Smethurst, P.M., Treas.; John Church, Sec.; Daniel Donbavand, I.P.M.; J. Wilson, Steward; W.

Cunliffe, Org.; J. Sly, Tyler; Higginbottom, J. Bladon, P.M.; J. Dawson, P.M.; S. Titmas, P.M., P.P.D. of C. E.L.; C. J. Rix, W. H. Hughes, J. G. Elderton, J. W. Edwards, J. Eckersley, Walmsley, D. Yough, Sumner, and R. R. Lissenden (Freemason). Visitors: Bros. C. O. Pike, 109 (Philippines); The Shires (Rising Sun, Saratoga Springs, N.Y., U.S.); S. H. Stephenson, 1319 and 1633; T. Sharrocks, P.M. 350; Thomas, W.M. 380; J. Broadbent, S.W. 992; and Matthew Owen, 163. The lodge was opened at 6.25 with solemn prayer, and the minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Bro. J. G. Elderton being eligible to take his Third Degree was interrogated by the W.M., and having answered the questions in a most satisfactory manner withdrew. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and afterwards in the Third, and on the re-appearance of Bro. Elderton, he was forthwith raised to the degree of a M.M. by the W.M. Bro. J. Dawson, P.M. and Reg., presented the working tools and gave the traditional history to the candidate. This being all the work, the lodge was lowered down to the First Degree. An announcement was made that Bro. Hilton, who was to have taken his Second Degree on that evening, was prevented by illness from attending, and Bro. Vetter, who was proposed at the last meeting as a joining member, would be unable to join on account of being engaged by Mr. Chas. Hallé for concerts on Thursdays throughout the season. All the members of the lodge who were present signed the petition in favour of the widow of a late brother, the particulars of which we have previously recorded. "Hearty good wishes" were expressed by the visiting brethren, and the lodge closed in peace and harmony at 8.20. The visitors and members of the lodge afterwards assembled at the social board, and a very pleasant evening's enjoyment, to which Bros. Lever, Shorrocks, Thomas, and others rendered valuable assistance with their singing, terminated at 11 o'clock.

We have very much regretted being absent from the June meeting of this lodge, which happened to fall on Whit-Thursdays, and consequently very few members were expected to put in an appearance, but as matters turned out the meeting proved a big success, the number of visitors alone being unusually large, amongst whom were Bros. E. Heywood, P.M., P.P.G.J.D. E.L.; J. Barker, P.M. 1134, P.P.G.R.; J. T. Hooper, P.M. 1633, P.P.G. Treas. E.L.; J. Duffield, P.M. 44, 64, 1170, P.P.G. Treas. E.L.; John Cavanah, P.M. 1375, P.P.G.D. of C. (Cheshire); D. Ormerod, P.M. 1609; P. Magee, W.M. 548 (London); W. Hollins, W.M. 152; E. J. Bradbury, W.M. 1357; H. D. Marks, S.W. 1798; G. Ormerod, J.W. 1011; the Sec. 1798; R. Dottie, S.D. 1161; T. Vetter, Org. 1798, 815; W. T. Chapman, P.M. 1609; P. Stanislaus, 780 and 1633; F. Emery, P.M. 1609; C. H. Stephenson, 1319 and 1633; J. Coxon, 152; E. Edmonds, 1213; L. Y. Lablach, 1609 and 1319; J. H. Ryley, 188; S. H. S. Austin, 1633; S. Hurtig, 1798; D. E. Davis, J. Meyer, 1798; A. Forrest, 1633; J. Storey, 1459; W. J. Edwards, 992; and H. Macdonald, 1633. The lodge was opened at 8.10, the W.M., Bro. John Roger Lever, occupying the chair of K.S. All the officers were present except S.W. and I.G., Bro. John Smethurst acting in the former instance, and Bro. J. Barker, P.M. 1134, in the second. Bro. Francis Hilton was balloted for and initiated into the mysteries of the Craft by the W.M., who also presented the working tools. Bro. J. G. Elderton was next passed to the Fellow Craft Degree, and lastly Bro. John Lawton was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., the Worshipful Master performing the ceremonies of initiation, passing, and raising in so creditable a manner as to draw forth congratulations from all present. The lodge was closed about five o'clock, and most of the brethren afterwards assembled at the social board and spent a pleasant couple of hours together, separating about 7 o'clock.

LIVERPOOL.—St. John's Lodge (No. 673).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday morning, the 1st inst. This lodge, probably the strongest in the province, has always been noted for its recognition of claims made in the cause of charity, or for the support of Masonry in general; the decorating and furnishing fund of the hall in Hope-street being the latest to benefit materially by a handsome subscription and the gift of a fine harmonium. A strong muster was the result of the summons on this occasion, the chair being taken by Bro. David Jackson, W.M., supported by Bros. W. Brackenbury, S.W. (W.M. elect); L. Herman, J.W.; J. T. Callow, P.M., P.G. Treas.; W. T. May (Sec.); H. Burrows, P.M., and others. The W.M. elect was presented by Bro. Jackson, W.M., and Bro. May, P.M., and the installation ceremony was performed by Bro. T. Roberts, P.M., in a very creditable manner. The usual honours were paid, and the following brethren invested as officers:—Bros. D. Jackson, I.P.M.; L. Herman, S.W.; J. Seddon, J.W.; T. Clarke, P.M., Treas. (re-elected for fourth time); W. T. May, P.M., Sec.; T. Smyth, S.D.; C. Marsh, J.D.; H. Marshall, I.G.; J. T. Callow, P.M., P.G. Treas., M.C.; J. Chittoon, Org.; G. Leitch, C. Godfrey, and S. W. H. Hulze, Stewards. Bro. W. Ball was re-elected Tyler. Before the lodge was closed, a handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to the I.P.M. by the W.M., on behalf of the members, as a token of their respect and esteem, with hearty good wishes. The brethren then proceeded to Lime-street Station, where they were joined by lady friends, and proceeded by special train to Frodsham. Over 200 started, and were rewarded by having good weather. The valley of the Weaver looked really charming after the rain, and, after visiting the ancient parish church, all ascended the Overton Hills by various means, and there sat down to dinner, substantially laid out by Bro. Rigby, Belmont. After dinner, the time was spent partly in walking round the hills, from which a magnificent view stretched in all directions, and partly in going through a well-chosen programme of dances, which were heartily entered into by old and young. The weather gradually improved as the day wore on, and after a most enjoyable trip all were quite willing to return at 9.20 p.m. Great credit is due to Bro. Jackson, I.P.M., and Bro. Brackenbury, W.M., who superintended the arrangements.

SIDCUP.—Sydney Lodge (No. 829).—The above flourishing lodge, whose locale is at the Black Horse, Sidcup, was, on Tuesday, the 8th inst., the scene of a brilliant gathering of the members of the Craft, the occasion being its installation meeting, and the W.M. to be installed one of the most popular and respected Masons of the province, Bro. Dr. F. Spurrell, P.M. 615, and P.P.G.J.W. Kent, and S.W. and W.M. elect of the lodge. The lodge was opened by Bro. Sydney Gore, W.M., at 12 a.m. sharp, the following Past Masters being present to assist him:—Bros. T. Smith, G. B. Gates, T. Hastings, and L. Etheridge. The minutes of the last meeting having been duly read and passed, Messrs. Gregory, the host of the Black Horse, J. Seaton, and J. W. Skinner were, after approval, initiated into Masonry. Bro. Greener was passed, and Bro. J. T. Spicer was raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M. Bro. Spurrell was then presented to the Installing Officer, Bro. T. Hastings, P.M., P.P.G.P. Kent, for the benefit of installation, and was by that brother most impressively placed in the chair of K.S., and saluted by the brethren in the degrees. Bro. Spurrell then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. W. Moulder, S.W.; R. Hanson, J.W.; W. T. Birt, Treas. (by proxy, that brother being unable to attend); T. Smith, P.M., and P.P.G.P. Kent, Sec.; W. Hawkins, S.D.; B. H. Ilton, J.D.; —Parsons, I.G.; Coombes, D.C.; and S. Norman, Tyler. Bro. Gates, P.M., is, and has been, W.S. for many years, and still retains that important office. The ceremony was concluded by the delivery of the three charges, and on all sides we heard the highest encomiums passed upon Bro. Hastings for his excellent and eloquent working. A valuable Past Master's jewel was then presented to Bro. Gore, the I.P.M., for his valuable services to the lodge during the past year, and that brother returned thanks. A vote of thanks was presented to Bro. Hastings, and ordered to be inscribed on the minutes of the lodge, for his fine working for the second time in succession of the installation ceremony, and this brother returned thanks. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was a most enjoyable and well served one, the wines being especially selected for the occasion. Among the company present were, beside the brethren above enumerated, Bros. T. W. Knight, P.M. 913, and P.P.G.J.D. Kent; J. G. Marsh, P.M. 28, and P.P.G.P. Middx.; R. Shilleter, W.M. 403; G. Churchley, W.M. 615; R. Stone, S.W. 615; R. W. Hawkes, 13; T. J. Kent, 1638; J. L. Judge, 1178; G. Roper, 69; G. W. F. Loftus, 93; W. H. Rowland, 1193; A. Roper, 69; J. Hutton, 615; W. Macrow, 879; H. Spurrell, 615; H. Wilson, 814; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured, as were the provincial ones, most heartily. That of "The D.P.G.M., Bro. Eastes," was coupled with the names of Bros. Smith and Hastings. Bro. Smith said the Prov. G. Officers were so well known to the majority of the brethren of the lodge, that it was quite unnecessary for him to say a word in their favour. They were always at work, striving to do good in Masonry, and were in every way deserving of the distinguished honour conferred upon them. He was sorry there were so few Grand Officers present, but he attributed it to the fact that the next day Prov. Grand Lodge assembled at Maidstone, and that, no doubt, prevented many of them being present that day. He thanked them for the toast. The next toast was that of "The W.M.," and in giving it the I.P.M., Bro. Gore, bore testimony to the excellence of their new Master, who, he said, was a good Mason, not only in the lodge but out of it, and was universally beloved and respected by every one. Bro. Dr. Spurrell, after returning thanks for the toast, said he must say that when he took office in the Sydney Lodge he felt it a very great honour, and now that he was placed in the proud position of their W.M., he should endeavour to merit, and show that he was deserving of it. He should, he felt, be compelled to draw largely on their patience and support, having to follow in the footsteps of such excellent workmen as had lately been W.M.'s in the lodge; yet if they would attend to the sound of the gavel he felt that he should at least not have their censure at the expiration of his term of office. He hoped to have a good and prosperous year, and that it would pass as harmonious as that of his predecessor. The toast of "The Visitors" followed, and was responded to. The toast of "The Initiates" was then given, and those brethren returned thanks. The next toast was that of "The Installing Officer, Bro. Hastings," who, the W.M. declared, had that day performed the important ceremony in a manner second to none he had ever seen. Bro. Hastings, in the course of his reply, thanked the W.M. for the encomiums passed upon him. He said he had never missed a meeting since he had been a member of the lodge, and as long as he lived he hoped to be with them, and do all he could for the welfare and prosperity of the lodge. He looked upon Masonry as one of the luxuries of his life, not so much for the pleasure it afforded him on such occasions as the present, but because it afforded him an opportunity to enjoy the greatest of all luxuries, that of true charity. He was a Life Governor of two of the Masonic Charities, and intended to be so of the third shortly, and strongly recommended all his brethren to qualify themselves for the same position. He was at the Crystal Palace on the previous Friday with a brother of his and a friend, and there they saw the children of the Girls' School enjoying themselves. His brother asked who the children were, and he told him they were the children of deceased Freemasons, and was proud to say that he was a Life Governor of that Charity. It made his heart bound when he saw how happy they were. He advocated the Masonic Institutions in vigorous language, and spoke earnestly of the efforts made, and assistance still needed, for the welfare of the widow, the fatherless children, and poor, distressed, and aged brethren. He concluded by thanking them for the reception they had given to the toast, and resumed his seat amid applause. The toast of "The Past Masters" followed. Past Masters Smith and Hastings responded. "The Health of the Officers" was then given and responded to; and then the Tyler's toast, given by Bro. Norman, concluded the proceedings. We were shown during the evening a handsome and valuable jewel, which was presented to Past Master Lewis Etheridge, on the 13th of June last, by the brethren initiated by him during his year of office. It is an exceedingly chaste and unique affair, and reflects credit both upon the givers and receiver, and is cherished by Bro. Etheridge as a souvenir of his happy and successful year of office.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Lodge (No. 913).—The installation meeting of the above influential lodge took place on Thursday, the 3rd inst., at the Lord Raglan, Burrage-road, and was well attended by both the members of the lodge and visiting brethren, no less than 113 signing the attendance book. Bro. T. D. Hayes, the W.M., presided, and opened the lodge. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed, as well as of an emergency meeting, held the night before, at which Mr. Ratz was initiated into the Craft, and Bros. Gould and Taylor were raised to the Third Degree. Everything being prepared, Bro. W. B. Lloyd, S.W., and W.M. elect, was presented by Bro. Hayes in a few appropriate words to Bro. H. Butter, the Installing Officer, who at once proceeded with the ceremony. The time having arrived when all M.M.'s were to leave, a Board of Installed Masters, to the number of twenty-seven, was formed, and Bro. Lloyd was, with the usual ceremonies, installed in the chair of K.S. He was then duly saluted, and proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. James Chapman, S.W.; R. J. Cook, J.W.; H. Pryce, as proxy for A. Jessop, Treas.; E. Denton, P.M. and P.P.G.P. Kent, Sec.; H. Mason, S.D.; R. Edmonds, J.D.; H. Pryce, I.G.; C. Cooke, Org.; A. Penfold, P.M., D.C. and W.S.; T. Reid, Asst. D.C.; W. Reece, Asst. W.S.; and R. Lester, Tyler. Bro. Butter then completed an exemplary and faultless work by reciting the charges splendidly, the applause of the brethren on the completion of his task being both warm and spontaneous. Bro. Lloyd then, in brief but appropriate terms, presented Bro. Hayes, the I.P.M., with a handsome Past Master's jewel, of the nominal value of ten guineas, in the name of the lodge, and, in pinning it on his breast, wished him many long years of usefulness, both to the lodge and Freemasonry in general. Bro. Hayes suitably replied. A Secretary's jewel, of the same value, was presented to Bro. P.M. Denton, for his long and faithful services to the lodge as its Secretary for a period extending over seventeen years. Bro. Denton returned thanks in suitable terms. It was then proposed and unanimously carried that a vote of thanks be presented to Bro. Butter, and inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge, for his able fulfilment of the office of Installing Officer that day. Bro. Butter returned thanks. Bro. P.M. Coupland was then unanimously re-elected to represent the lodge on the Provincial Charity Commission. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Bray's hotel, the Bull, at Dartford, where a superb banquet awaited them. Among the company present, beside the brethren above mentioned, were Bros. the Rev. — Hill, G. Chaplain of England and Kent; R. W. Sprague, P.M. 91, and Grand Steward, England; Past Masters C. Coupland, P.P.G.J.W. Kent; W. Tongue, P.P.G.J.W. Kent; T. Hastings, P.G.P. Kent; C. E. Fermor, J. McDougall, and W. T. Vincent, of and belonging to the lodge; R. Martin, P.M. 299, P.P.G.S.B. Kent; H. Picken, W.M. 1536; A. Woodley, W.M. 700; J. R. Froud, W.M. 503; G. Churchley, W.M. 615; F. Dawson, P.M. 700; T. Butt, P.M. 700; J. Scott-Match, P.M. 706; G. Tapp, P.M. 706; Sydney Clarke, P.M. 706; W. Weston, P.M. 1536; J. Parkes, P.M. 811; W. Perrin, P.M. 1056; Perrin, P.M. Victoria; T. Day, P.M. 1076; H. Shaw, S.W. and W.M. elect 1536; T. Hutton, S.W. and W.M. elect 13; J. Warren, S.W. and W.M. elect 600; J. Black, J.W. 706; D. Deeves, J.W. 1536; E. H. Williams, S.W. 1056; J. Wilkins, J.W. 700; H. Syer, Sec. 13; J. C. Smith, 1744; W. Hellwell, 215; A. Fenn, 700; W. Crane, 907; T. Stacey, 1437; T. Gray, 167 (S.C.); G. Beaver, I.G. 700; J. H. Roberts, W.S. 700; E. W. Crews, 13; J. I. Chapman, 943; T. Forrester, 1275; J. Epsom, 700; W. Harris, 700; T. Steward, 147; G. Risch, 706; W. Watkins, 1536; C. Hagen, 1107; C. Jolly (Freemason), and others. After grace had been said by the Rev. Grand Chaplain, the W.M. gave the toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W. G.M. of England, H.R.H. Prince of Wales," "The Pro G.M., the D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers," coupled with the names of Bros. Hill and Sprague. Bro. Hill, in response to the toast, spoke of the vast amount of work done by the Grand Master, and of the many excellent and telling speeches made by him lately at various places and on varied subjects; not only on matters connected with Freemasonry, but on the great and important questions of education, literature, agriculture, manufactures, &c., and of the great knowledge he evidently possessed of the bearings of all and every subject he handled. It ought, and did, indeed, make them proud of their Grand Master. His youngest brother, His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, was W.M. of the grand old Lodge of Antiquity, to which Bro. Sir Christopher Wren, the builder of St. Paul's Cathedral, belonged, and whose monument was his own magnificent structure. It had been said that all they had to do upon such occasions was to enjoy themselves, and when they had done their dinner they had done their duty, but if those who said that knew, as they knew, how those in power in the Craft worked to carry out some of the grandest principles and greatest works of the age, they would, as the brethren here assembled, and all other assemblies of Masons, did honour them for their noble work, and glory in having such officers to preside over them. He then spoke of Lord Carnarvon, who, amid the many and incessant claims upon his time, had yet translated some of the grand old Greek tragedies, and it might be fairly asked, "what time had he to do such work in?" Their distinguished brother told them that it was done in his spare moments; but those who knew the wonderful amount of work done by the Pro Grand Master and Deputy Grand Master for Masonry alone, would wonder at the industry displayed to get through it. He then spoke of the ability and courtesy of the D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and concluded by thanking them for the toast. The next toast was that of "The Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Holmesdale," and in putting it the W.M. eulogised the services of Lord Holmesdale in the cause of Freemasonry. The next toast was that of "The Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Eastes, and the rest of the Grand Officers," coupled with the name of Bro. Hill, Prov. Grand Chaplain, who in the course of a lengthy and eloquent reply thanked them for coupling his name with so important a toast, more especially as he had once before addressed them. He referred to the charitable spirit as evinced by the lodges in the province in glowing terms, and hoped soon, with the assistance of the Grand Officers, to see every lodge in the province a Life Governor of one or more of the Institutions. He spoke of the work done by Bro. Eastes with feelings of regard and wonder, and eulogised the manner in which he distributed year by year the eleven purples at his command. He remembered with pleasure that he was a member of the Pattison Lodge, and of the kindness with which they had at all times received him. He went among them as a brother, and was there that evening as a brother in spirit and in fact. He spoke with pride of the honour done him by the Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in placing him in the position of G. Chaplain of Grand Lodge, and attributed it to the influence the province held in Masonry under the rule of Lord Holmesdale, and concluded by wishing the W.M. of the Pattison Lodge a pleasant and successful year of office. Bro. Hayes, I.P.M., then rose to propose the toast of the W.M. He said they all knew for what purpose the W.M. had for a time entrusted him with the gavel. It was to propose "The Health of the W.M." They had seen how energetically and well the W.M. had worked his way through the minor offices of the lodge, and from that admirable working they might draw conclusions as to the manner in which he would carry out the high duties that day entrusted to him, and sedulously do all that he could further the real interests of the lodge. In his (Bro. Hayes') year of office he had the support of every officer and brother of the lodge, and if that support was given, and he felt sure they would give it, there was before the lodge, under the rule of Bro. Lloyd, a pleasant and successful year of office, that would not only be gratifying to the Worshipful Master but of success and prosperity to it in its endeavours to be a pattern lodge in the province. They had placed Bro. Lloyd as the head of the lodge, and they expected him to do his duty, and he, the speaker, was in a position to assure them that the confidence they had reposed in their esteemed W.M. would not be betrayed, or their expectations disappointed. He asked them to drink the toast as it deserved. The W.M., in response to the toast, thanked them very sincerely for the cordial manner in which the toast had been received at their hands. He would endeavour to serve them faithfully and honestly, and trusted his year of office would reflect no shadow upon the brightness that had hitherto lit up the chair while occupied by the excellent brethren who had preceded him. Nothing should be wanting on his part to prove himself worthy of their selection, but rather, supported by them as Bro. Hayes had so earnestly wished that he might be, he would, he hoped, leave it to his successor as pure and unadulterated as he found it. "The Health of the Past Masters" followed, and, in responding, Bro. Hayes spoke with pride of the success attained by the son of one of the deceased Past Masters—Bro. A. Allinson—who, at the last examination at the Boys' School, was awarded the gold medal, by the unanimous vote of his schoolfellows, for general efficiency and good conduct. It was something for the lodge to be proud of. The father was a good Mason, and the son was a good lad, and following in his father's footsteps. The gold medal was handed round, and very much admired. Bros. Ellis-Fermor, McDougall, and Coupland as well replied. The other toasts were "The Visitors" and the Tyler's, and then the proceedings terminated. Bro. Salleyer, who had charge of the musical arrangements, was universally complimented for the excellent manner in which he carried out the important duties placed in his hands. Mr. H. Roberts, a son of Bro. J. H. Roberts, presided at the pianoforte.

MONKWEARMOUTH.—Williamson Lodge (No. 949).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the St. Stephen's School, on Monday evening, the 14th inst., at 7 o'clock. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., and the minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Mr. J. S. Thompson, who was duly elected. Mr. Osborne, a candidate previously elected, was introduced, and made an E.A. Mason. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree. Bro. Wardell was examined, and having answered his questions satisfactorily, he retired to be prepared. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, when Bro. Wardell was admitted, and received the degree of a M.M. The ceremony was given by Bro. Gray, P.M., in a very impressive manner. The lodge was then closed, and remained open in the Second Degree, and allowed to remain open in the First Degree, when Mr. J. S. Thompson was admitted, and made an E.A. Mason. Bro. Gray, P.M., proposed, and Bro. Taylor, P.M., seconded, the re-election of Bro. Shadforth, P.M., on the Charitable Committee for the province. Bro. Shadforth, in a neat speech, thanked the brethren for the further mark of their confidence. All business being over, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. The brethren then retired to refreshment.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on the 7th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum-street, Leonard-gate, for the purpose of raising Bro. Newbold to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason. Bro. Helme, the W.M., presided, supported by his respective officers. The lodge having been opened in due form, was subsequently opened in the Second Degree, when Bro. Newbold gave proficiency as a F.C., and was entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Newbold being readmitted, he was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason by the W.M., the traditional portion of the ceremony being given by Bro. H. Longman, P.M. and Sec., who also gave the working tools; the working being gone through with great impressiveness. Two candidates were proposed for initiation, and after the usual proclamations had been made, the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony, and with solemn prayer.

SHIRLEY.—Shirley Lodge (No. 1112).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 7th inst., at the Masonic Hall, where there was a large muster of the members and visitors. Bro. F. H. McCalmont, P.P.G. Reg. Oxon, the W.M., presided. A special invitation had been sent to the Master, Past Masters, and officers of the Royal Gloucester Lodge, 130, to be present, in answer to which Bros. C. Jellicoe, W.M.; Cole, S.W.; Marshall, Steward; Robertson, J.D.; Weston and Miles, P.M.'s, attended; there were likewise present Bros. Adams, P.M.; Barford, P.M.; Waters, P.M.; Payne, P.M., representing the Peace and Harmony Lodge, 359; R. L. Loveland, P.M., representing the Ryde Lodge, 698, and other brethren representing the Clausentum Lodge, 1461, and the Southampton Lodge, 394. The W.M. having opened the lodge in the First and Second Degrees, questioned Bros. Sharpe and Alden as to the progress they had made in the science, and their answers proving satisfactory, they withdrew, and the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when they were most impressively raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M., in a manner that fully keeps up the prestige of the lodge for the excellent manner in which the various ceremonies are always worked therein. The W.M., after having thanked the W.M. and officers of the Royal Gloucester Lodge for responding so cordially to his invitation, closed the lodge, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall, where the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly honoured. Some excellent songs were sung between the toasts, and the brethren separated shortly after eleven, after having spent a most enjoyable evening.

ACCRINGTON.—Equality Lodge (No. 1145).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Red Lion Hotel on Thursday, the 10th inst. The brethren present included Bros. John Henry Bury, W.M.; D. Kelly (Freemason). There was very little business before the lodge, which may account for the very poor attendance of the brethren. The W.M. read the circular convening the meeting, after which the minutes of the last gathering were read and confirmed. The W.M. also read communications from the Grand Lodge of England and the Prov. Grand Lodge of East Lancashire. The following notice of motion was then put to the lodge and carried unanimously, "That a sum not exceeding £20 be lent to the Royal Arch chapter attached to the lodge at five per cent. interest." Bro. Past Master Ormerod proposed, and Bro. Past Master Tonks seconded, that the bye-laws be altered, which proposition was agreed to. The lodge was shortly afterwards closed in due and solemn form.

Wolfenden, I.P.M., "in the name of the members of the lodge," with a beautiful Past Master's jewel. The following inscription was engraved on the back:—"To Bro. R. Wolfenden, P.M., from the members of the Duke of Lancaster Lodge, 1353, as a token of esteem. July 2nd, 1879." Bro. Wolfenden thanked the brethren for their kindness on this and other occasions, and assured them he should ever remember them with pleasure, and hoped to hand down the jewel to his children as a heirloom. Letters were received from Bro. F. G. Dale, P.M., and a number of other brethren, who were not able to attend, "Bro. Dale through illness," all congratulating the W.M., wishing him and the lodge a prosperous year. After the usual proclamations from the chair, and a hearty response from the visitors, the lodge was closed by the W.M. with solemn prayer, the choir and brethren singing the closing hymn. The banquet was held at Mr. Thos. Rigg's, Grange Hotel, Grange-over-Sands, at 4 p.m., a distance of about sixteen miles by rail. Many of the brethren proceeded by train, others by wagonette. Grange was reached at about two o'clock p.m. During the interval between the arrival and the hour named for dinner a great number of the brethren visited the fine old church at Cartmel, about three miles from Grange, and inspected the many objects of interest contained within and without that venerable pile. Returning to Grange Hotel at the appointed hour, the visitors and members, numbering sixty-six, partook of a very excellent dinner, Bro. J. Ellershaw, the W.M., presiding, and was supported on his right by Bros. P. Dickinson, P.M., the Installing Officer; Y. Dodgson, P.M. 995; J. Case, P.M. 995; Robt. Casson, W.M. 995; W. The meeting broke up about half-past eight o'clock, and the party returned home well pleased with the whole day's proceedings.

After the transaction of some preliminary formal business, the chair was taken by Bro. Joseph Bell, P.M. P.G.S., who installed Bro. A. During the after proceedings the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and a Past Master's jewel and diamond ring were presented to Bro. Williams, I.P.M., in recognition of the services he had rendered to the lodge.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge (No. 1536).—The installation meeting of the above lodge took place on Friday, the 11th inst., at the Lord Raglan, Burrage-road, the old place of meeting, the Sir Robert Peel, on Anglesea Hill, not being upon this occasion available, through some mistake or misunderstanding on the part of the proprietor, Bro. Garbett. The lodge was opened soon after two o'clock by Bro. H. G. Picken, W.M., and the minutes of the last meeting and the balance sheet, which was very satisfactory, were passed. The W.M. elect, Bro. H. Shaw, was then presented to the Installing Officer, Bro. Picken, who, on this occasion, followed the invariable course laid down by his predecessors in the matter, and installed his successor in a most excellent and satisfactory manner; every one present bearing unqualified testimony to the care and precision with which the whole ceremony was carried out. Bro. Shaw then appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bro. D. Deeves, S.W.; W. Welding, J.W.; Rev. C. A. Solbé, M.A., Chap.; W. Murphy, Treas.; G. Kennedy, Sec.; T. Holleyman, S.D.; C. Buckland, J.D.; W. Watkins, I.G.; H. Harding, Org.; J. Anderson, D.C.; and P. A. Saunders, W.S. Bro. Picken was then presented with a valuable Past Master's jewel, in recognition of his services to the lodge during the past year, and it was unanimously resolved that a vote of thanks should be presented to him, and inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge, for the manner in which he had conducted and carried out that day the duties of Installing Officer. Bro. Picken having suitably replied, "Hearty good wishes" were wished by the representatives of the several lodges present, and then the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren sped away to the Pier Hotel, Erith, where Bro. Wain had a superb banquet awaiting them. The following visitors and brethren were among those present:—Bro. F. G. Pownall, P.M., P.P.D.G.S. of Works Kent; W. Weston, both P.M.'s of the lodge; of the P.M.'s belonging to the lodge were Bros. C. Coupland, P.M. 913, P.P. G. J. W. Kent; Dr. F. Spurrell, P.M. 615, and P.P.G. J. W. Kent; T. D. Hayes, P.M. 913; W. B. Lloyd, W.M. 913; A. Woodley, W.M. 700; J. J. Donolly, W.M. 706; T. Hutton, W.M. 13; J. Warren, S.W. and W.M. elect 700; T. Triptree, 1326; G. Nicholls, 1567; E. Palmer, 913; F. Lyons, 913; W. Lomax, 913; G. H. Gray, 158; T. Ludford, 215; C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason); and others. After dinner, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured; that of "The Queen and the Craft," and "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, G.M.," being drunk with enthusiasm by the brethren, who, as soldiers, are actuated by but one feeling in respect to the Queen, her heirs, and successors. To that of "The Provincial Grand Master, Lord Holmesdale," a warm and flattering reception was accorded, and in response to that of "The D.G.M., Bro. Eastes, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past," Bro. Coupland and Pownall replied in eloquent terms, and Bro. Picken then rose to propose "The Health of the W.M." He said he had very great pleasure in rising to propose the toast. Their Bro. Shaw, who had that day been placed in the chair of the lodge, was, as many of them knew, one of the founders of the lodge, and had been through all the minor offices, and he, (Bro. Picken) could conscientiously say that he did not believe that he had been absent from his duties once during the whole period of his connection with it. No one, he was sure, but must have seen the great and unceasing interest Bro. Shaw took in the lodge, and now that he had reaped the reward of those services, they wished him every prosperity, and had confidence that he would carry out the duties entrusted to him to the honour and reputation of the lodge. Bro. Shaw, who was enthusiastically received, in response, said he thanked them most sincerely for the kind and cordial manner in which they had drunk his health. He could assure them that that evening was one of the proudest of his life. He should always remember with pride and anxiety the day he was placed in that chair; pride because it was an object worthy of the highest ambition of his Masonic life, and anxiety because he felt the heavy responsibilities laid upon him. It was a difficult task to carry out the duties attached to it so as to please every one, and at the same time look to the efficiency of its officers and its general welfare, but he would promise to do his best in both cases, and asked them to give him every assistance in furthering the interests of the lodge in every way, and then he should look forward to a year of harmony and brotherly love. The next toast was that of "The Past Masters of and belonging to the Lodge," and, in putting it, the W.M. especially complimented Bro. P.M. Picken upon the splendid ceremony he had so well and ably performed that day. Bro. Picken said, he being the I.P.M., the duty of responding fell into his hands, but, being a very young Past Master, he hardly knew what to say. They had their esteemed Past Master, Bro. Pownall, the first Master of the lodge, present, and they all knew how eloquent he was; he should, therefore, leave the toast in his hands to respond to. For himself, he should stand by the W.M. as his predecessors had stood by him. Bro. Pownall then, in a lengthy and eloquent address, spoke of the rise and progress of the lodge since its consecration four years ago, when upwards of 150 brethren assembled to see the lodge launched upon its eventful career. It was a great source of pride to him to have been its first Master. It was intended to be a home for the military brethren in Woolwich, and had well fulfilled the intention of its founders, as it was continually receiving brethren from all parts of the world. He laid a great deal of the success that had attended it to Bros. W. Weston, Spinks, Picken, Shaw, Deeves, and others, and said their efforts had made it one of the first in the province. He concluded by trusting to be long spared to come among them, and to hold, as he trusted he still held, the same affectionate regard in their hearts that they had upon so many occasions evinced towards him. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," and Bros. Hutton, Woodley, and Lloyd responded. Bro. Picken then, by the permission of the W.M., rose to propose the toast of "Absent Brethren," and, in so doing, regretted the absence from among them that night of Bro. Past Master G. Spinks, who was now in Zululand, and fighting the battles of his country against a savage and merciless foe. None of them would ever forget the year that that brother was at the head of the lodge, or the magnificent manner in which he installed him (Bro. Picken) into the chair. He trusted he might be spared through the dangers of his position, which, after all, was what every British soldier loved to face for his Queen and country; and that he might be spared to return home to them, and again take his seat among the Past Masters of the lodge. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and then, after Bro. Ben Norman had given the Tyler's toast, and Bro. Jolly, had responded for "The Masonic Press," the brethren separated. During the evening a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music was rendered by Bros. C. Buckland, H. Harding, G. Smith, W. Taylor, and R. Anderson.

After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the W.M., on behalf of the members of the lodge, presented a Past Master's jewel to Bro. J. H. Parker, as an acknowledgment of the services of the latter during his official connection with the lodge.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, and the reception of the Auditors' report postponed until next meeting, a candidate for passing, Bro. Pile, was entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Second and Third Degrees, and resumed to the Second, when the brother first named was passed to the Degree of F.C. Bro. John G. Horsey, was then presented for the benefit of installation by Bro. Noehmer, the acting D.C. After the conclusion of the first part of the ceremony, the lodge was resumed to the Third Degree. The offices of the lodge having been declared vacant, and Bros. Robinson and Noke placed respectively in the chairs of the S.W. and J.W., all below the rank of Installed Masters then retired, and a Board of Installed Masters was formed, when the W.M. elect was duly placed in the chair of K.S. Having been saluted, proclaimed, and greeted, Bro. John G. Horsey, as W.M., invested Bro. C. Sawyer, the Installing Master, as I.P.M., and then closed the Board. The brethren were then readmitted, and the W.M. saluted, proclaimed, and greeted in each of the Three Degrees. The following brethren were then invested by the W.M. as his officers for the ensuing year, and each addressed with regard to the teaching of their emblems of office, situations, and duty, viz.: Bro. The Installing Master then delivered the ancient charges to the W.M., the Wardens, and brethren, and explained at length the working tools. Bro. Sawyer rendered the installation ceremony with great care, and in a most able and impressive manner, which called forth much praise from many of the brethren at the close of the proceedings. The W.M. then rose and said that he now had a most pleasing duty to perform, viz., that of presenting to Bro. Sawyer, I.P.M., the very handsome jewel voted to him by the brethren of the lodge for the able and beneficial manner in which he, as W.M., had conducted its affairs during the past year, and he added also that the lodge had very much to thank Bro. Sawyer for since the formation of the lodge of which he was one of the founders, and expressed a fervent hope that he might live long to wear the jewel. Bro. Sawyer, on thanking the brethren of the lodge for this token of their esteem and recognition of his services, was greeted with much acclamation. Bro. Noehmer then announced to the brethren that the handsome gauntlets then worn by the W.M. and the Wardens had just been presented by the W.M., Bro. John G. Horsey, and in accordance with his motion a unanimous vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded upon the minutes of the lodge. Bro. Davison, S.W., then proposed three candidates for initiation, and, after some other business the lodge was duly closed. The brethren then adjourned to banquet, which was held in the spacious market room of the hotel. After grace had been sung at its conclusion, the W.M. proposed the usual loyal toasts, which were duly honoured. In giving that of "The R.W. the Grand Master of the Province, Sir Walter Burrell, Bart, M.P., the V.W. the Pro G.M. of the Province, Bro. Scott, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers," the W.M. expressed his regret that he had not the honour of their attendance on this occasion, having received from the Prov. Grand Secretary a letter, stating that they were prevented from attending through a prior engagement. The I.P.M. proposed "The Worshipful Master," in terms of great praise, and expressed his conviction, from his intimate knowledge of Bro. Horsey, that his would be a highly successful year, and that the brethren of the lodge would at its close find that nothing had been neglected that would tend to its advantage. The toast was received and responded to with much enthusiasm. The names of Bros. C. W. Hudson, W.M. 315, and W. C. Banks, W.M. 1223, having been coupled with "The Visitors" toast, they responded briefly, and expressed on behalf of the other visitors and themselves the pleasure they had enjoyed at the kindness extended to them that day by the brethren of the Sackville Lodge. The W.M., in giving the toast of "The P.M.'s," spoke highly of the manner in which Bro. C. Sawyer had rendered the ceremony of installation, and in that of "The Officers," to the energy one and all had displayed for the welfare of the lodge, but particularly to Bros. Davison, S.W., Head, J.W., and Rudge, S.O., who had rendered great service. During the evening many songs were sung in excellent style, among which may be particularly mentioned those of Bros. W. H. Hook, W. Hamlyn, and Chubb. Bro. A. Billeyard gave three recitations with great force and effect. The Tyler's toast closed the proceedings. The London brethren left for East Grinstead by the 10.15 a.m. train from London Bridge Station, to which was attached a saloon carriage for their sole use by the kindness of the L. B. and S. C. Railway Company.

RYDE.—East Medina Chapter (No. 175).—The regular convocation of this chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall, John-street, on Friday, the 4th inst. The Principals for the ensuing year were regularly and ably installed in their respective offices by Ex. Comp. E. S. Main, P.Z. 342, 901, &c. The Principals are Comps. Newman, Z.; Wilks, H.; and Palmer, J. The other officers were invested, and the charges peculiar to the ceremony of installation were well given by the Installing Principal, Ex. Comp. Newman, Z., in a feeling speech dwelt on the many good qualities of the I.P.Z., Comp. Richard Loveland Loveland, and presented him with a Past First Principal's jewel. The companions adjourned to the banquet room, where a first class dinner was served, and the loyal Masonic toasts were ably given and enthusiastically received. This chapter, which was lying dormant for many years, was re-suscitated by Ex. Comp. Henry Cawte, P.Z. of 342, who has worked most energetically to place it in its present position.

LIVERPOOL.—Walton Chapter (No. 1086).—The installation meeting of this prosperous chapter was held on Friday evening, the 27th ult., at the Skelmersdale Hall, Kirkdale, Liverpool. There were present Comps. J. Wells, M.E.Z., P.G.D.C., P.Z., &c.; J. Lunt, P.Z., P.P. D.C., and Treas.; J. C. Lunt, P.Z.; G. E. Hanmer, H.; J. Ellis, J.; G. J. Townsend, P.S.; J. Lece, A.S.; W. G. Hayes, P.G.S., H. 594; E. Paul, A.S. 1356; A. Woolwich, Treas. 1356; J. C. Burrough, H. 673; W. F. May, P.Z. 673, 580, 220; C. Birch, S.N. 203; J. C. Fish, 1094; R. Farrell, 1094; J. Davison, 823; W. E. Coxon, 292; J. Croxton, 249. The chapter was opened in ancient form, and the usual business having been gone through, a chapter of First Principals was formed, when Comp. John Lunt, P.Z., &c., duly installed, in a most able and impressive manner, the Principals for the ensuing year, viz.: Comps. G. E. Hanmer, M.E.Z.; J. Ellis, H.; and G. J. Townsend, J. The companions were then admitted, and duly elected Comps. C. Bargery, 660, and J. Croxton, 249, as joining members of the chapter, also Bro. Hugh Davidson, of Lodge No. 1393, for exaltation.

The M.E.Z. invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows: Comps. W. G. West, S.E.; J. Bramham, S.N.; Isaac Leece, P.S.; C. Bargerly, A.S.; J. D. Reader, A.S.; H. Williamson being again appointed Janitor. Bro. Hugh Davidson was regularly admitted, and exalted to the Supreme Degree of Holy Royal Arch in a most impressive manner. The remaining portion of the business being concluded, the chapter was closed in ancient and solemn form, when the companions adjourned to the spacious banquet-room, where ample justice was done to the good things provided by Bro. James Casey, whose catering gave general satisfaction. After the cloth was removed, the usual loyal and Royal Arch toasts were given, and received from the company a hearty and generous response. "The Health of the Principals" received quite an ovation, and was responded to by Comps. G. E. Hamner, J. Ellis, and G. J. Townsend in very appropriate terms. The M.E.Z., in rising to propose the next toast, said it afforded him a very great amount of pleasure to ask the companions to drink with him "The Health of their worthy Comp. Jno. Wells, I.P.Z." The prosperity of the chapter during his year of office was marked by more than ordinary success, and he believed it was in a great measure due to the zeal and ability with which he had always discharged the duties connected with the chapter and the Craft in general. In placing upon his breast the valuable jewel the companions had been pleased to present him with, he (the M.E.Z.) sincerely hoped that he might long be spared among them to enjoy the good opinion and wishes of the companions. The toast was enthusiastically received, and, in responding, Comp. Wells thanked the M.E.Z. for the manner in which he had proposed his health, and the companions for their very hearty response, as well as for the valuable jewel they had been pleased to present him with. It would be to him at any future times a pleasing duty to do all in his power to promote the welfare and harmony of the chapter, with which he had now been connected over eight years. Comp. Joseph Ellis was entrusted with the next toast, that of "Comp. Jno. Lunt, P.Z., 'Treas., the Installing Officer," which was duly honoured, and called forth a very feeling response from Comp. Lunt. Comp. H. W. Rowson, P.P.G.P.S., P.Z. 203, responded for "The Visitors." During the evening the companions had the pleasure of listening to some capital songs by Comp. J. D. Reader, and others. After a most pleasant and happy meeting, the Janitor's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1423).—The installation meeting of this provincial chapter was held on the 12th inst., at the Island Hotel. There were present amongst others Comp. E. Thiellay, P.P.G.D.C. Middx., &c., J. elect; Baldwin, P.Z., acting S.E.; Faulkner, acting S.N.; Ockenden, acting P.S.; and Haslett. The visitors were Comps. J. Stevens, P.Z. Macdonald, &c.; and Lamb, Prudent Brethren. The minutes of the election convocation having been read and confirmed, Comp. Thiellay vacated the chair in favour of Comp. J. Stevens, who most ably installed Comps. Walters, W. Hammond, and Walls as First, Second, and Third Principals. He then delivered the beautiful addresses appertaining to this degree, which are seldom given, but are most instructive in their character. Comp. Thiellay was then presented with a Past Principal's jewel, in recognition of his services, and he made a suitable response in acknowledgment of the honour. Previously to the chapter being closed, upon the motion of Comps. Walls and Hammond, Comp. James Stevens, for his services to the chapter, was unanimously elected an honorary member. The officers invested for the year were Comp. W. Hammond, H.; Walls, J.; Thiellay, I.P.Z. and Treas.; Baldwin, S.E.; Faulkner, S.N.; T. Ockenden, P.S.; Haslett, 1st Assistant. The chapter having been duly closed, the companions partook of refreshment, and shortly afterwards separated.

BRIXTON LODGE (No. 234).—The members of this lodge met at the Surrey Masonic Hall on Saturday, the 12th inst., the W.M., Bro. T. Moore, P.G.I.G., P.M. 139, in the chair, with Bros. C. P. McKay, S.W.; H. Lovegrove, J.W.; W. Ackland, acting M.O.; Wood, acting S.O.; Dr. Pearce, S.D.; Moss, J.D.; Baldwin, Sec.; and Rawles, acting Tyler. The lodge was opened in due form, and several apologies for non-attendance were read by the Secretary. A number of candidates were down for advancement, but only one, Bro. C. J. Axford (Royal Hanover), being in attendance, was duly advanced to the honourable degree of M.M.M. The ballot was then taken for the W.M., when Bro. McKay, S.W., was unanimously elected; for Treasurer, when Bro. H. Lovegrove was unanimously elected; and Bro. Potter was re-elected Tyler. Bros. G. Clark, M.O., and Moss, J.D., were elected to serve on the Audit Committee. The lodge was closed at 8 p.m., and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, when the usual toasts were duly honoured. It was decided to work the Royal Ark Mariner Degree in connection with the lodge, on the motion of Bro. H. Lovegrove, J.W. The visitors were Bros. Larham, P.M. 139, P. Prov. G.S.B.; and Brown, 198, Prov. G. Steward.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Though good health is preferable to high honour, how regardless people often are of the former—how covetous of the latter! Many suffer their strength to drain away ere maturity is reached, through ignorance of the facility afforded by these incomparable PILLS of checking the first untoward symptoms of derangement, and reinstating order without interfering in the least with their pleasures or pursuits. To the young especially it is important to maintain the highest digestive efficiency, without which the growth is stunted, the muscles become lax, the frame feeble, and the mind stunted. The removal of indigestion by these PILLS is so easy that none save the most thoughtless would permit it to sap the springs of life.—[NEXT.]

PORTSMOUTH.—Naval and Military Conclave (No. 35).—The meeting for installation of M.P.S. and consecration of Viceroy, &c., was held at the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, the 8th inst. The throne was occupied by the M.P.S., Sir Knt. G. A. Green, supported by the Viceroy, Sir Knt. C. G. Adames, M.P.S. elect, and a good attendance of members. The minutes of previous convocation having been read and confirmed, Bros. E. W. Kemp and J. Graham Niven were entrusted, admitted, installed, and proclaimed. The Recorder read a letter received from the Ill. Grand Sovereign for England and Scotland, Col. F. Burlett, regretting very much his inability to attend the installation on account of multiplicity of engagements. It was also announced that the Viceroy elect, Sir Knt. Wm. Tuck, was unable to attend on account of domestic bereavement. A resolution was unanimously carried that the Recorder write Sir Knt. Tuck a letter of condolence in the name of the officers and members. A vote of thanks was accorded Sir Knt. H. G. Richardson, upon receipt of a handsome and useful present to the conclave. P.S. J. Harrison presented Sir Knt. C. G. Adames to the Presiding Officer for the honour of entronement. A Senate of Sovereigns was opened in form, and Sir Knt. Adames was entrusted, and admitted to the Third Grade of the Order. The Senate was closed, the Sir Knrs. readmitted, and the M.P.S. invested the officers: P.S. J. Harrison, Viceroy, pro-tem.; R. Osborne, Sen. Gen.; E. J. Smith, Jun. Gen.; J. W. Stroud, H.P.; J. Clay, P.S., Treasurer; A. R. Robinson, G. Herald. Rec.; G. F. Brown, Assistant Rec.; J. F. Bicalupo, Prefect; H. G. Richardson, Sub-Prefect; G. Watson, Org.; A. J. Reed, S. Bearer; G. W. Smith, Sen. Aide; J. E. Buck, Jun. Aide; T. P. Hall, Herald; G. Reading and S. C. Heath, Stewards. The conclave was closed in solemn form at eight p.m. The Sir Knights adjourned to the George Hotel, where an elegant banquet awaited them, and to which they and several Craft brethren did ample justice. The usual Red Cross toasts were duly given and cordially responded to, and, after a most enjoyable evening, the company separated at twelve.

New Zealand.

DUNEDIN.—Sphinx Chapter, Rose Croix.—On Thursday, the 17th April, being the first Thursday after Easter (or Maundy Thursday), the election of officers for the ensuing year in the above chapter, hailing under the Supreme Council for New Zealand, took place at their Grand East, at six o'clock p.m., when E. and P. Bro. J. O. Eva was unanimously elected as M.W.S., and afterwards enthroned in an impressive manner by illustrious Bro. W. Caldwell, 33° S.G.C. of the said Supreme Council. Subsequently the following officers were elected and appointed to their respective duties in the chapter: Bros. Roberts and Calder having been perfected in the 18th Degree, and the chapter duly closed, the brethren adjourned at eight o'clock to the City Hotel, where a banquet was held, at which they most hospitably entertained the members of the Supreme Council of New Zealand. Several of the brethren contributed towards the success and harmony of the proceedings by singing some excellent songs, and altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent by those present, an evidence of the bond of union existing between the brethren of the Sphinx Rose Croix Chapter and the members of the Supreme Council of New Zealand.

MASONIC FAIR.

The kind assistance of Freemasonry in the United Kingdom is invited towards a fair, which is to be held in the city of Saint John, New Brunswick, Canada, on the 15th September next. In the fire which devastated that city two years ago, the lodges, chapters, &c., lost all of their property, a very small portion of which was insured. In addition to this, many Masons lost everything that they possessed. About £2000 was contributed to a Masonic Relief Fund, chiefly from other parts of Canada, the United States, and Ireland, the grant from the Grand Lodge of England going into the General Relief Fund, and not to the Masonic Fund. All of this money was expended in relieving individual distress, and none of it was used in restoring Masonic property. The Craft owned a lot of land, from which the erections were of course swept away, and they have now erected a new hall. But, the previous distress, added to the stringency of the times, has made their task a very difficult one, and to relieve them this fair is projected. Many of our brethren in the United Kingdom know something of St. John, and for the sake of old colonial associations and connections would, no doubt, be glad to assist the brethren in their enterprise; many, even, who have no personal knowledge of the place, would perhaps be willing to aid, under the special circumstances which we have recounted, our spirited colonial brethren.

For many years the Masons of New Brunswick were under the Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland, and although that connection no longer exists, the same Masonic spirit and feeling animates them, the same Masonic policy governs them, that animate and govern us, and so far as we can do so, we should help them.

The scheme of the fair embraces articles of industry of all kinds, of art, and of natural products.

Contributions of articles, or of money, can be sent to Bro. George Kenning, London; Bro. William T. Wilkinson, 58, Rathmines-road, Dublin, Ireland; Bro. Alexander Hay, 45, Princes-street, Edinburgh, Scotland; or to Bro. Charles Masters (one of the members of the Fair Committee, who is at present in England), care of Messrs. Clementson Brothers, Hanley, Staffordshire. The address of the Secretary of the Fair Committee is Bro. T. Nisbet Robertson, St. John, New Brunswick, Canada.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A Quarterly meeting of the General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Monday last. Present: Bro. Col. Craton, in the chair, the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, W. H. Perryman, Thos. Meggy, A. E. Gladwell, Richard Tyrrell, J. Rawson, and E. C. Massey (Freemason).

The Secretary (Bro. Binckes) read the advertisement convening the meeting, also the minutes of the last General Court and the minutes of the General Committee recommending a list of seventy-seven candidates from which to elect sixteen boys to enter the Institution on the 13th October next.

Bro. Rawson, before the minutes were confirmed, appealed to the Committee on behalf of a candidate for whom a petition had been forwarded from Hong Kong. The father belonged to the United Service Lodge. The first petition sent miscarried, and after some correspondence a second petition was forwarded to a brother at Plymouth, and through some misapprehension it was not forwarded immediately. After considerable delay it was sent to him (Bro. Rawson), but arrived too late to be submitted to the General Committee. Bro. Rawson, therefore, urged that under the circumstances the General Court should deal with the matter, accept the petition, and add the name to the list of candidates.

The Chairman said it was very unfortunate, because, though he was sure they would all like to do a kind action, it was very doubtful whether the General Court possessed the necessary power.

Bro. Woodford suggested that the real point was, that they had no report from the General Committee.

The Secretary read the rules bearing on the question; but the Chairman said that he must take higher ground, and rule that they could not deal with a motion from Bro. Rawson because they had received no notice of such motion. On this ground alone they could not deal with the question. The Chairman said that the next business before them was Bro. Meggy's notice of the following motion:—"That a Committee be appointed to regulate the manner in which the scrutiny of the votes shall be made, both for the election of candidates and for other purposes."

Bro. Meggy requested that, as this meeting was a very small one, he should be allowed to postpone his motion to the next meeting of the Quarterly General Court, as he thought that the matter was of such importance that it was desirable there should be every opportunity given for a full discussion of it. He also requested to be allowed to modify the proposed motion by substituting the word "consider" for "regulate," and adding at the end of the motion the words "and to report to the next General Court."

The request having been agreed to, the sitting terminated with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

THE FREEMASON.

SATURDAY, JULY 19, 1879.

THE HOUSE OF BRUNSWICK.

We have in this now old and cherished watchword for all loyal Englishmen both a gracious memory of the past, a happy trust for the present, a confiding hope for the future. As English patriots and English Freemasons, we may always gladly realize how much we owe, nationally and Masonically, to that Royal Family of ours, under whose tolerant and genial auspices we have beheld liberty consolidated, empire extended, and equal rights preserved faithfully, both in sacredness and certainty, for all classes of our loyal people. Nothing is so marvellous to the contemplative mind to-day, as we unveil the great map of the world or study the annals of nations, as to notice how, amid dissolved empires, and even collapsed republics, the great and goodly monarchy of England has stood, like our white and stately cliffs, erect amid those convulsions and disruptions under which other States and many peoples have gone down, or fallen from liberty, from greatness, and from empire. It is, indeed, alike affecting and yet gratifying to note and to feel how everything, both of national constitution and legal prescription, seems to minister to the happiness and contentment, and safety, and protection of us all alike, and how that in all its part and principles the great and goodly machine of our limited monarchy is more conducive, in our humble opinion, than any other form of known government, to the maintenance of law, order, property, as well as social contentment and general individual liberty. We flatter ourselves that this cohesion of all classes and all conditions in our great country, resulting partly from our admirable constitutions, partly from the genius of our people, has been cemented and intensified by the beneficent rule of that illustrious House under whose protecting ægis arts and commerce alike have flourished, and the peaceful progress of Great Britain, the rights of nations, and the liberties of the world have been alike upheld, extended, preserved, and developed in a wonderful measure. As Freemasons we can recall gratefully to-day the simple but speaking fact, that three Princes of Wales in succession have been connected with our Order, and two have been Grand Masters of English Freemasonry, and that in a past generation, as in the present, the loyalty of Freemasonry has been gratified and the prestige of Freemasonry has been enhanced by the kindly presence and un-failing countenance of successive members of our Royal Family. We who live in this generation can recall with pride the fact, full of meaning, reality, and importance as it is, that we have seen three Royal brothers claiming our name, wearing our insignia, and fulfilling effectively the duties of their appointed offices. But there is another feature of the constant, ceaseless discharge of their public duties by our Royal Family, to which as Freemasons and citizens of our loyal monarchy we can look with peculiar feelings of pleasure and pride. The late Prince Consort, in a remarkable speech at the Trinity House, which can still be read with profit by us all, told an appreciative and applauding audience that at the time he spoke the Royal Family were discharging the duties incumbent upon their high station, and that the Prince of Wales was in Canada, and Prince Alfred, now the Duke of Edinburgh, was at the Cape of Good Hope. Hardly a day passes over our heads but we hear and see how ready the Royal Family is to take part in all that tends to keep together the great institutions, whether social, medical, literary, artistic, or humanitarian, of our common country, and how their presence serves to give strength and encouragement to local efforts and praiseworthy undertakings. There are few benevolent undertakings for our hospitals or institutions for the relief of human suffering, the encouragement of thrift, the mitigation of the sorrows and trials of mortality, to which their ever ready patronage does not afford support and strengthen the hands of the governing bodies. The gracious words and the kindly sympathy of the Prince and Princess of Wales, whether at the Hospital for Incurables, only the other day, or the School for the Blind, are of incalculable good and importance, and in humble homes and by grateful hearts their genial utterances and pleasant smiles will long be proudly treasured and eagerly talked about. As our Grand Master said so well on Tuesday week, "We all of us do our best to relieve those who are in pain and to alleviate the misfortunes which attend the suffering." It is most gratifying to us all, as Freemasons and as patriots, to note these unceasing labours of our Royal Family to promote the happiness, comfort, amelioration of the sick, afflicted, and suffering, and to strengthen by such zealous sympathy that attachment and devotion to that Royal House, under whose kindly and sagacious Regimé our great country speeds on its way in strength and honour, alike for the happiness and stability of a contented people, as for the peace and progress, nay safety, of the world.

POSITIVISM AND FRENCH FREEMASONRY.

By a paragraph from the Times, which appeared in our last impression, it would seem as if that eminent Positivist, Professor Littré, was very anxious to make French Freemasonry "Positivist," too. Professor Littré is the well-known individual in deference to whose "Positivist" scruples the then existing ritual of French Freemasonry at his initiation was suppressed and altered, and it will be in the recollection of some of our readers that from the date of his admission, so un-Masonically, in our opinion, and with such an unworthy departure from Masonic precedent and law, that ill-omened agitation commenced in the lodges under the Grand Orient of France, fostered by a violent and unscrupulous party, which has practically reduced the Grand Orient of France to a non-Masonic body, whose jurisdiction is more than questionable, whose position is detrimental to Freemasonry, and mournful and humiliating, in our humble but honest opinion, in the highest degree. And here we have Frere Littré, as he is termed by French Freemasons, proposing to introduce into Freemasonry the most doubtful and debateable of the current philosophic-crazes of the hour. The French Freemasons are to subscribe funds, forsooth, to found and endow a Positivist University. What for? To please Frere Littré, and, to use the professor's own euphonious and antithetical expressions, "to compete both with the orthodoxy of the Church, and the eclecticism of the State." Well, we wish to ask to-day quietly and calmly in the peaceful columns of the Freemason, what has Freemasonry proper to do with such things at all? What has it to do with Positivism, or any other ism? How is it concerned in such abnormal schemes as these? This is just the very tendency of what Bros. Hubert, Lechaut, and others, more, perhaps, than some are aware of, complain of in France, namely, to render Freemasonry a section and a faction; this is just the unfortunate and un-Masonic position of affairs which the Grand Orient of France has taken up, and which we decline to recognize or sanction in England. You may give to "Positivism," if you like, the name of a "belief," or the appellation of a philosophy, but, after all is said and done, what can it be to English Freemasons, believing and accepting the Bible as God's Word, but positive infidelity? What is it but an attempt, (a mournful attempt according to us), to glorify humanity at the expense of all that is divine, of all that is sacred and cherished by us, of all that we are taught to accept or to receive? To make Freemasonry and Positivism convertible terms to claim for that "religion" to which from our entrance into Freemasonry we have been taught to believe that Freemasonry itself is a handmaid and a friend, the name of Positivism, is an insult to right, reason, and common honesty; an abject parody on all which as Masons and even mortals, we have been accustomed to accept as our hope and trust and consolation alike for time and for eternity. It may be that by some jesuitical non-naturalism, some specious and subtle reasoning, we may evade the true force of logic, and the right meaning of words, but, in plain speaking, such an attempt seems to point to an obliquity of the "moral vision," to an utter impossibility of discerning the difference between truth and falsehood, right and wrong, what even men are accustomed to consider honest and fair dealing. It is, in our view, but a "crowning," so to say, of those most intolerant proceedings, which have sought to change the old, reverent, and believing French Freemasonry, which drew its vital breath and happier impulses from the open and manly teaching of our English Grand Lodge, into a hopeless Nihilism on the one hand, or rampant Positivism on the other, and to give to our great and goodly religious cosmopolitan Order the name and the character of a childish philosophy, a political faction, of an unbelieving craze.

A PIOUS FRAUD.

We are indebted to our excellent contemporary for the following amusing tale of a "pious fraud" and some poor Masonic victims. Listen, kind friends, as Bro. J. P. McCalla so well puts it, as to how some of the Freemasons of Toledo were sold: On Wednesday, the 14th May, says the Toledo Bee, a gentleman of pleasing address, polished exterior, and captivating as a conversationalist, registered at the Boody House, under the name C. C. Burt, hailing from Jackson, Michigan. With him was associated a gentleman who passed by the name of Streight. This was, we venture to presume, on the modern principle of a "straight tip." But to our tale: Mr. Burt was assigned to room No. 137. It was not long until this gentleman of pleasing address ingratiated himself in the good graces of quite a number of the leading spirits of the Masonic fraternity, and to whom he produced what were deemed honest vouchers that he was empowered with due and lawful authority to confer the Egyptian Masonic Rite of Memphis, or Ninety Degrees in Masonry! His indorsement, as his papers pretended, came from no less a personage than V. L. Herbert (sic), Grand Master of the United States Knights Templar, and others. The Ninety Degrees were to be imparted for the insignificant stipend of ten dollars, and all to be conferred in thirty minutes by the watch. Such a rare opportunity of obtaining so high a grade in Masonry was not ignored, or to be passed lightly by—and then, too, for the small sum of 11-19 cents a degree! This was a big consideration in these times of monetary stringency. The thing was talked up, and twenty-three of the brethren of the mystic tie—some of whom have been honoured with the highest positions in the Craft in the State (says the Bee)—agreed to be initiated in the Sublime Ninety Degree Rite, and accordingly paid their ten dollars each, in solemn conclave in room 137 of the Boody, where the obligation of the degree was solemnly administered! In appending their signatures to the paper, they were required to acknowledge him, the said C. C. Burt, as Grand Master for life! The money—230 dollars—was all paid, and the obligations taken, and what yet remained, and still remains, was the conferring of the degrees. The suave gentleman, with the blandest smile, fixed Monday as the day for conferring the degrees and installing the officers, as he should be compelled to return to Jackson at once, on account of sickness in his family. He left the city last Saturday, and was to return on Monday without fail. His family is probably very sick, for he has not put in an appearance yet, and the "select twenty-three" are still watching and waiting, with their degrees unconferred and their officers uninstalled. And now let us listen to the sequel, not, we fancy, unexpected altogether by our readers. Since the amiable gentleman's departure, circumstances have developed some strong suspicions that the twenty-three have been the victims of a stupendous sell. The name of the Grand Master of the United States K.T. is not V. L. Herbert. This, we believe, was told Mr. Burt, but he passed the matter over by saying that he was known as Vincent Lombard, the name of his wife. Letters have been received also from several sources—among them from Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois—saying that he had played a similar game elsewhere, and warning friends against the swindle. A letter has also been received from G. S. N. V. Herbert (? Vincent Lombard Hurlburt, M.D., Grand Master of Templars of U.S.), in which he denies that he ever endorsed Mr. Burt, or that he has had anything to do with the gentleman, denouncing him as an impostor. "Two for five or nine for a dollar," will not soon be forgotten in the Masonic circles of "The Future Great." Is not this simple story a warning both against Masonic credulity, the readiness with which plausible impostors are received among us, and that craving for ineffable but worthless degrees, which are for the most part ineffable nonsense, which is leading so many worthy men and good Masons astray?

COMMUNIQUE.

The interment of Prince Louis Napoleon on Saturday last was a most touching scene, suggestive of many afflictive yet affecting memories. It was, indeed, both startling and yet subduing in the highest degree, to realize the almost astounding fact that English soldiers were carrying the Prince Imperial to his grave, and that a descendant of Napoleon I. was mourned so deeply and truly by the entire English people, among all classes and conditions, from the highest to the lowest in the land. The presence of our Queen and the Royal Family was significant and symbolical of the intense national grief for that gallant boy, who lost his life wearing our uniform and sharing the dangers and the hardships of the English army. It seems well to remind our readers that on the gold wreath deposited on the coffin, written in the Queen's own hand, are: "Souvenir de vive affection, d'estime, et de profonds regrets de la part de Victoria Reg." The Princess of Wales wrote, "A token of affection and regard for him who lived the most spotless of lives and died a soldier's death fighting for our cause in Zululand. From Albert Edward and Alexandra, July 12, 1879." No more sad and solemn scene has been witnessed in our land, amid its storied annals and stately episodes, than that which Saturday beheld at Chislehurst, when the late Prince Imperial, the head of the Napoleonic Family, was committed to his honoured grave, amid the tears of thousands, amid the open grief of the Queen and the Royal Family, the unrestrained sorrow of loyal, and gallant, and faithful friends, and, above all, the heartfelt affection, sympathy, respect, and regrets of the entire English army, of which the gallant portion on duty at Chislehurst was a true type and representative. In the pages of the Freemason it is almost impossible to dwell at length on events which, however striking or sad in themselves, belong more to the region of the political or the passing than to interests purely Masonic, and we can only note this most sublime and moving episode, and record it in our truthful and tolerant columns, filled as we are with deep admiration for that soldier-death of the inheritor of a great name, and penetrated as we are with heartfelt sympathy for that gracious lady who has borne adversity and sorrow with such a noble heart, and now has witnessed the greatest blow which can ever fall here below on a mother's pride, a mother's hope, and a mother's love. May T.G.A.O.T.U. sustain her in these sad hours with the benign strength of His Divine consolations.

CAGLIOSTRO.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—
Bro. Yarker's letter does not, in my humble opinion, throw any more light on the question, inasmuch as he only puts forward opinions, and leaves the facts of history to take care of themselves.
There is not the slightest evidence that Swedenborg, through a "mystic," was a Mason; and as for the "Illuminés," it is very doubtful when they were introduced into Paris. The original sect, pernicious as it was, only existed four years, and whatever form it took in Paris it was also short-lived there. That Swedenborg was an Illuminé there is no evidence either. The allusions to the ritual of Cagliostro are, after all, only suppositious, and the agreement of Marconis with any supposed ritual would be, to my mind, fatal to its reality.
No one professes ever to have seen a ritual, (Ragon does not), and if it existed, or exists, it is probably still in the Vatican Library.

As for Cagliostro's "invocations," and "crystal," and "potable gold," (query portable), let us dismiss all such nonsense, and, like reasonable men, seek after Masonic truth in history and criticism. Surely the time of "muthos" has passed away from freemasonry

MASONIC CHARITIES v. PICNICS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Your valuable paper of this day contains some severe strictures by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec. of West Lancashire, upon the custom, now very much in vogue, of lodges holding picnics on the occasion of the installation of the W.M., and I think it very desirable that the question should be well ventilated, as there is a great deal to be said on both sides, with a view to establish some general principle by which the brethren and the lodges should be guided, and that even Grand Lodge should lay down some rule in regard to these meetings. In my humble opinion I believe there is much good done by these generally happy and social gatherings of Freemasons, their wives, daughters, and friends, and by the company they keep and the way they conduct themselves before the general public so will Freemasonry be judged by the outward world. Of course I do not advocate extravagance in the matter, but surely such wholesale condemnation of them as Bro. Alpass has indulged in is hardly right. If Freemasons are not to meet together round the social board or indulge in picnics, how are they to effect the first grand object of Freemasonry, "Brotherly Love?" If it continue "Relief" must follow and "Truth" prevail. If this is done away with the sooner the lodges are shut up the better. For although Charity is good, you will not get men or Masons to form themselves into Relief Committees. I have always understood that Masonry was not a "benefit society," and those who joined its ranks were to be free men, and not dependent, or to look forward to a participation in its Charities, except for some unforeseen misfortune or calamity; therefore, whilst not omitting to provide liberally, and to support all worthy Charities, let us do all that is right and reasonable to promote good feeling and good fellowship, and be merry and wise.

Yours fraternally,

J.W.

CHARITY REFORM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am a great enemy to "sensation" merely as such, and when not justified by circumstances, but it is often preferable to "stagnation," especially when the latter covers a multitude of unhealthy organisms.

In your fair and temperate article on "Charity Reform" you speak of it being a "sensational subject," and you hope in the first paragraph "that it may be long before any such discussion interferes with the peaceful progress of our great Masonic Institutions;" while, in your last paragraph, you delicately but clearly intimate a "little blot," about which we may and have "need to trouble ourselves."

Curiously enough, though you say I have "not hit" this blot, I have been hitting at it for the last five years as hard as I could, and though the scope of my last letter did not admit of my specifying this blot, you will find in former communications I have particularly "hit" the "want of proper investigation of claims." But the points of reform I have named all relate immediately to the admission of candidates, and not to the Charities themselves or their management; nor have I advocated, much less proposed, the abolition of the vote or the appointment of any "strong Central Committee." I must not, therefore, have words and proposals put into my mouth that I have never uttered. This misrepresentation, though no doubt quite unintentional, is still an utter misrepresentation. One thing is quite clear, from the numerous letters and utterances in the Freemason and other Masonic organs, that there are serious complaints as to the mode of election to our Masonic Charities—some complain of one thing, some of another, and even you have detected a "little blot." All this dissatisfaction and unquiet point to there being "something rotten in the state of Denmark," and the sooner the disease is looked into fairly and fully the better. Be assured, dear sir and brother, you could not confer a greater boon on Masonry than to initiate this reform, and at least begin with "the little blot," which, in the eyes of Masonry, is very big—"big," not "with mercy," but with injustice and pauperism.

The recent combinations in the provinces, and now in London, indicate a condition of feeling in the Masonic mind anything but content with the present haphazard system of election.

This movement seems an effort of nature to throw off some of the morbid accretions which have lowered the Masonic constitution, but, I fear, they will prove rather symptoms of the presence of disease than remedies for its cure.

The "hard words" you assert I use are directed not against any man or body of men, but against a system which has grown up and which is eating out the vital power of true charity. I was for many years an involuntary and unconscious supporter of it myself, and many much better and far abler men than myself are now tolerating if not actively upholding it; but a "good time is coming," and I hope you will speed it on, when the "bobby," or "crochet," or "sensation" may become, like many other reforms, a public principle and an acknowledged fact.

Yours fraternally,

R. J. SIMPSON.

LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am very sorry to find that any lodge enrolled under the banner of our noble Order should so far forget the leading principles of its profession as to lay itself open to the charges which I am glad to find Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec. of Lancashire, had the courage to declare in such clear and forcible language as that which he addressed at the installation meeting of the Downshire Lodge, No. 594, Liverpool, as reported in the account of its meeting in your columns of Saturday last.

It is sad to true Masons to know of the existence of any lodge that requires to be brought to book by a Mason of such high authority as Bro. Alpass is. I speak from a personal knowledge of the worthy brother, and know him to be one whose chief aim is that Masonry should be all it professes to be. What is the use of a man being placed in high office if he does not endeavour to eradicate evils where he sees them exist? and if other Provincial Officers were to follow Bro. Alpass's example it would often be well for lodges under their supervision. Bro. Alpass's words should be circulated throughout the Masonic world, as, of course, they will through the medium of your valuable paper, and it is to be hoped may be the means of checking the extravagance of many lodges in the expenditure of what they consider their surplus funds, whereas a balance should not be looked upon as surplus, but be devoted to Masonic charity; then our noble Institutions would be enabled to accomplish their desired objects if every lodge throughout the length and breadth of the land lent a helping hand in the matter as they ought to do.

The past two-and-a-half years I have carefully read your paper on its receipt week by week, and have felt sorry to see the way in which bodies of men, boasting of the proud and honourable names of Masons, have lavished money away in self indulgence, in the way of sumptuous banquets; and in looking for the names of that same body of men among the donors to our Charities, they are conspicuous by their absence, or may possibly just put in an appearance for a paltry five or six guineas.

Is it not time to put our house in order? and as it is never too late to effect a change for the better, let us hope that the result of the receipts of our Institutions next year will be so far in excess of the even unparalleled success of the present year, that we may feel convinced that there is no longer need for leading articles in your columns or speeches at installation banquets to remind Masons of the duties solemnly undertaken at their beautiful initiation ceremony.

It was an institution in our lodge, No. 199, to give the banquet at installation of W.M. out of the funds, but a few who saw the evils of such a course strenuously set to work to make it a thing of the past, and in 1877 a brother, now in Germany, brought the subject forward, which was duly seconded and carried, and which I warmly supported, that no more banquets or audit suppers be paid for out of the lodge funds. That, I consider, betokens a more healthy state of things, and will conduce to the future prosperity of Lodge 199, and I sincerely trust others may be led to go and do likewise. Another thing, I think, is becoming too common now—that is, the bestowal of an expensive Past Master's jewel on every Master as he leaves the chair out of the lodge funds. The honour of being elected to the chair ought to be sufficient reward to any brother.

Hoping you will pardon my long letter, I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

A NATIVE OF LIVERPOOL.

ITALIAN BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the kindly remarks made by you on our Italian edition of the Book of Constitutions, you were good enough to commend it to the notice of Italian Masons. Your observations have apparently had a satisfactory result, for I perceive the official and recognised organ of Italian Masonry, La Rivista, has commenced in its number of the 15th June to reproduce, verbatim, the translation we have published, beginning with the "ancient charges," and promises to continue to place a portion of the English Constitutions before its readers every fortnight. Encouraged by the success of this little volume, we have resolved to print a translation in French, firmly believing that an insight into the principles of English Masonry, conveyed to our foreign brethren in their own language, will tend most materially to stay the under-current of ultra-democratic sentiment now pervading continental Masonry, which in the present day threatens to seriously interfere with the "universality" of our Royal art.

I remain, fraternally yours,

DEATH OF LORD OSSULSTON.—At the end of last week the Earl and Countess of Tankerville received intelligence of the death from cholera of their eldest son, Lord Ossulston, of the Rifle Brigade, who died on the 29th ult. His lordship was attacked on his return from Afghanistan to join the headquarters of his regiment at Umballa. The deceased nobleman, who was in his 29th ult., having been born 31st December, 1850, passed for a direct commission in the army in May, 1870, and joined the Coldstream Guards in November that year. He afterwards exchanged into the Rifle Brigade, and proceeded to India with the 4th battalion of the brigade.

Bro. Sheriff Burt and Mr. James Hughes were present at the dinner of the Thames Angling Society at Richmond on Wednesday last.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Quarterly General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Saturday last, Col. Creton, Treasurer and Trustee of the Institution, in the chair. There were also present Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, J. G. Stevens, Thos. Meggy, E. Letchworth, J. Terry, and J. J. Berry.

The Secretary, Bro. F. R. W. Hedges, having read the advertisement convening the meeting, as also the minutes of the Quarterly Court, held on 12th April last, which were duly confirmed, read also a summary of the proceedings of Committees for the information of the Court. Bro. Meggy then rose to move the resolution of which he had given notice, viz., "That a Committee be appointed to regulate the manner in which the scrutiny of the votes shall be made, both for the election of candidates and for other purposes," in doing which he said he thought it would be unnecessary for him to do more than mention the fact that it appeared desirable that some improvement should be made in the method of scrutinising the votes taken at Masonic elections. At an election to the Boys' School he had himself collected over a hundred votes, of which only 97 were given to him. He also stated that he knew a case of a parcel of over 40 votes being found on the floor of the Scrutineers' room after an election was over, which had never been allocated to any one. He thought that the parties interested did not give sufficient attention to this matter, but they should bear in mind that the more votes an unsuccessful candidate polled, the better would be his chance at future elections. Bro. Meggy said that it was not at all his wish to call in question the probity of the Scrutineers, but he thought that they ought to settle upon some regular system to be pursued on these occasions.

Bro. Meggy's motion not being seconded, it was suggested that it should stand over for a short time, in the hope that some additional brethren, interested in the subject, would put in an appearance.

The Chairman: I move now in terms of my notice of motion, "That seven additional girls be elected at the Quarterly Court in October next, thereby raising the number of elected girls in the Institution to 200 (making a total of 207 in all), seven of those now in the school having been admitted by purchase." I think the terms of that motion conveys to you all that I desire to say, unless you have any questions to ask. I have simply to say we have the room and we have the money.

The motion was seconded by Bro. J. G. Stevens, and carried unanimously.

The Chairman: There will, therefore, be eighteen girls elected in October next.

Bro. J. G. Stevens then rose, and said he had no objection to second Bro. Meggy's proposition, and he seconded it, after a little consideration, on these grounds: he had served in the scrutinies, not only of the elections to these Institutions but also when the present Secretary was elected; and he had found that the discrepancy between the votes given and the votes taken was frequently accounted for by the fact that the voting papers were often filled up incorrectly. He had found that the Scrutineers did their duties faithfully, but there were sometimes among them brethren who were new to the work, and in consequence made large mistakes. He had, himself, lifted up votes from the floor, which had actually been marked with the number of votes without the number of the candidate for whom they were given.

Bro. Woodford: I think it would be a very serious undertaking for six Governors to take upon themselves to rearrange the system of scrutinies now in vogue. It appears to me that we are not in sufficient numbers to-day to properly discuss the pros. and cons. of this matter. I know that there are a great number of brethren who have very great doubts on the subject, and many brethren interested in the matter are absent to-day. Therefore, without passing any opinion on the abstract merits of the question, I think we should have a fuller meeting to discuss Bro. Meggy's motion. I therefore propose that the matter should be adjourned for consideration at the next Quarterly Court.

This was agreed to, and it was decided that the motion should stand as follows: "That a Committee be appointed to consider the manner in which the scrutiny of the votes shall be made, both for the election of candidates and for other purposes, and to report to the next General Court."

A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

[We regret sincerely so scant an attendance.—K. F.M.]

CALEDONIAN LODGE, No. 204, MANCHESTER.

The annual picnic, organised by a Committee of the brethren of this lodge, came off on Saturday, the 12th inst., at Bucklow Hill, near Knutsford, and was "sans doute" a genuine success. A good sprinkling of the fair sex graced the proceedings, and added materially to the enjoyment of the brethren. The party numbered between sixty and seventy, and amongst them were Bro. J. Roberts, W.M., Mrs. Roberts, and Miss Burrell; Bro. G. E. Mullock, S.W., and Mrs. Mullock; Bro. W. Bagnall, J.W., and Mrs. Bagnall; Bro. R. L. Spencer, Sec., and Mrs. Spencer; Bro. T. Guest, S.D.; Bro. H. P. Robberds, P.G. Org. E. Lanc., Miss Robberds, and Mrs. Dupré; Bro. R. A. Eldershaw, I.P.M., Mrs. Eldershaw, and the Misses Watson; Bro. James Sutcliffe and Mrs. Sutcliffe; Bro. Dearden and Mrs. Dearden; Bro. Taylor and Mrs. Taylor; Bro. Akstoridi and Mrs. Akstoridi; Bro. Saltaferas; Bro. Harrop and Mrs. Harrop; Bro. Lawton and Mrs. Lawton; Bro. Duckworth, I.G., and Mrs. Duckworth; Bro. Cliffe and Mrs. Cliffe; Bro. Sawyer; Bro. Rev. — Cator; Bro. Stanley and Mrs. Stanley; Bro. Whitaker and Mrs. and Miss Whitaker; Bro. R. R. Lissenden (Freemason) and Mrs. Lissenden; Mr. and Mrs. Ivanindi, Mr. and Mrs. Malamas, Mr. and Mrs. T. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Roberts, and Mrs. F. Roberts.

The rendezvous was the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, and the time arranged for departure 1.15, at which time the ladies and gentlemen took their seats in a spacious and comfortably appointed omnibus and four. On reaching All Saints' another omnibus (in and outside of which were seated the remainder of the party) joined company, and the two proceeded to their destination. "Rostherne" was reached about 3.30, and the company alighted to look over the ancient church, the simplicity of which, added to the picturesque view that could be seen through the gates of the surrounding country, was thoroughly appreciated by the visitors.

On leaving the church it was found that "Pluvius" had decided to join the company, much to their annoyance, the consequence being that the ladies rode inside the omnibuses, whilst the gentlemen did the best they could outside, with the help of waterproofs and umbrellas, to protect themselves from the "god's" playfulness, which continued unfortunately for the remainder of the journey.

Tatton Park was reached at 4.30, and, through the courtesy of Lord Egerton, the company were permitted to walk through the lovely grounds, in which were some choice specimens of fruit, flowers, plants, and ferns, the beauty of which created an almost irresistible desire to linger and gaze upon them indefinitely, and to disregard the rain, which still came down, though somewhat slackened in force.

Once more journeying onward, the party reached Bucklow Hill at 5.30, and alighted at Bro. Cuff's hostelry, the Swan Hotel, where a well served tea, à la fourchette, was ready and waiting, to which ample justice was done by all those whose appetites had been sharpened by the fresh air.

When grace after meat had been said by Bro. Cator, Chaplain, the W.M., Bro. Roberts, rose and said that before the ladies and gentlemen left the table he should just like to express to them his gratitude for so heartily responding to the wishes of himself, and the rest of the Committee, by their presence. He was not going to detain them by a long speech, but would simply assure them all of the genuine pleasure it gave him to see so many assembled there, and his earnest hope was that they would all return home satisfied with the arrangements that had been made for their enjoyment.

As soon as the tables had been cleared and packed into a corner of the room, Miss Robberds presided at the piano-forte, and assisted at intervals by her gifted father, Bro. H. T. Robberds, P.G. Org., played a selection of dance music, to which the majority of the company danced on the light fantastic toe until "time" was called for departure.

Between the intervals of dancing Mrs. D—, who possesses a really beautiful voice, sang Gounod's "Serenade" and "Angels ever Bright and Fair," and evoked loud and prolonged applause from all present.

At 9.30 the company were en route for "Home." "All Saints" was reached at 11.45, by which time most of the party, whose homes were in the vicinity of Stretford, &c., had alighted and returned "chez eux." Some twenty or more, whose residences lay "Cheetham" way, where of course "far, far away from home," but the Cockshott Conveyance Company, who catered for the travelling accommodation, very generously had three fresh horses put to one of the omnibuses, and landed the remaining "picknickians" close to their homes.

The arrangements throughout were most satisfactory, and reflected great credit on the Committee, of whom Bros. Roberts, W.M.; Mullock, S.W.; and Spencer, Sec.; were untiring in their exertions to please one and all

THE GRANITE LODGE, No. 1328.

"The Gods give us joy," sayth Touchstone, and our brothers of this lodge might repeat the exclamation, for on Wednesday, the 9th inst., Bro. Robert Payne, W.M., accompanied by Bro. J. Lewis Thomas, Secretary, and about twenty-five faithful followers, enjoyed the pleasures of a summer outing without rain. It was Queen's weather; but had the clerk of the weather arranged otherwise, nothing daunted, the hardy members of the Granite Lodge would have "braved the deadly breach," and faced that perfect Zulu of tempests, Jupiter Pluvius. However, Taplow was the Paradise of the Peri for the day; and Skindle's Hotel was to be the place whereto "spend a happy day." Meeting at the Great Western Railway at Paddington at 10.45 a.m., a couple of saloon carriages awaited their arrival. Soon they were whizzing through boundless space, and reached the Taplow Station in good time. On arrival there, Mr. H. Hoare, the proprietor of Skindle's Hotel, had in readiness a newly-built steam launch (which cost £800) to convey the brethren up "the silvery Thames," as Pope calls it. Previously providing themselves with a well-filled nosebag and an overflowing trough, steam was got up, and away went the little craft, "ploughing the water; plains" until they reached Clevedon Woods, the grounds of which the Duke of Westminster graciously threw open for the recreation of the brethren. After visiting those magnificent regions, and witnessing some of the loveliest scenery in the world (certainly, nothing up the Rhine equals the views from Maidenhead to Marlow), the brethren returned to the launch (not lunch), and once more they found themselves upon the "bounding billows of the deep," passing through locks, and gazing upon the most exquisitely laid out lawns running down to the banks of the river—places that "gods might worship and infidels adore." One thing which marred the pleasure of the trip was the melancholy backwardness of the harvest and crops—not a bit of hay-making was going on, and everything presented the aspect of disappointment to the farmer. After touching at Marlow the brethren returned to Skindle's Hotel, where, under a spacious marquee, a sumptuous banquet was served up in a manner reflecting the highest credit on the stewardship of Mr. Hoare, the proprietor, and the Granite's pioneer of pleasure, Bro. J. Lewis Thomas. In an epicurean sense it was the sugar after the pill. The menu was excellent, and everything tout au fait.

After the banquet the W.M., Bro. Robert Payne, proposed "The Health of the Queen," which was responded to with much enthusiasm and loyal pleasure, while "The Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," was received with thorough Masonic delight.

In selecting "The Visitors" for the next toast, the W.M. referred to the fact that the Granite was justly distinguished for its hospitality to those brethren who desired to mingle in the charmed circle of its society. He wished them long life and happiness, and trusted they would continue to visit the lodge for many years to come.

Bro. Levander, in response, tendered the thanks of the visitors for the manner in which they had been entertained. They had, he said, enjoyed themselves immensely.

Bro. Holden endorsed the remarks of the last speaker, thanked the Granite for its kind reception, and assured the lodge that he had never spent a pleasanter or more charming day.

Bro. Reynald Mount, I.P.M., next proposed "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Payne," who, he declared, had cheerfully done all he could to make the proceedings of the day a great success, and his efforts had been unquestionably realised.

Bro. Payne replying, while acknowledging the manner in which they had drunk his health, said that the credit for the successfully carried-out programme was due in the main to Bro. J. Lewis Thomas. He took the opportunity of thanking the lodge for the kindness they had shown him during his year of office, which would never be effaced from his memory. The brethren then returned to town.

PORTSMOUTH FREEMASONS' HALL AND CLUB COMPANY, LIMITED.

This company, which was incorporated on the 17th of April, has now closed its share list, as all the 600 shares have quickly been disposed of among the brethren residing in the locality, with a few exceptions. The schools, now rented by the Roman Catholics, will be taken possession of on the 25th of next March, and will be thoroughly decorated and adapted for the convenience of the brethren, both in the lodge and banqueting-rooms; especial care will be taken that, in preparing the lodge-room for the use of several lodges, their individuality will be carefully preserved; this will, doubtless, popularise the buildings, as Masonic bodies jealously guard the prestige attaching to them after many years of careful and hard work.

The building in the Commercial-road was sold by public auction to the W.M. of the Royal Sussex Lodge, Bro. James Willmott, who, with commendable zeal, quickly had it pulled down, and removed the debris, so as to enable the contractor, Bro. William David Lewis, to proceed with the erection of the club building, in which accommodation will be provided for the Borough of Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce.

The foundation stone will be laid by his Worship the Mayor, Alderman William David King, J.P., about the first week in August, when a meeting of the shareholders will be held. The directorate and shareholders, with their friends, will, on the occasion of laying the foundation stone, adjourn to the Assembly Rooms for dinner, which will be provided by that veteran in Masonry, Bro. P.M. Cawte.

MASONIC PICNIC.

On Wednesday, the 25th ult., several of the members of the Wandsworth Lodge of Instruction, No. 1044, spent a very enjoyable day at Shepperton, whither they resorted for the purpose of enjoying a boating picnic. The morning was not a very bright one, and only Bros. George Howick and J. Frost had the courage to face the elements by a journey on the road, which was accomplished with less "wetness" than was anticipated. The other brethren travelled by rail, and amongst them were Bros. W. A. Morgan, (W.M. of 1044), H. R. Jones, J. G. Carter, C. Digby and Mrs. Digby, J. J. Holland, F. W. Wardroper, F. Reed and Mrs. Reed, and Denham. Two boats were chartered, and a pleasant row, amidst delightful sunshine (for the dark clouds and rain had disappeared), was taken as far as Weybridge Ferry, where some slight "refreshment after labour" was indulged in at a quaint boating hostelry. The return journey was then made—with the tide in favour of the "craft"—and the ladies and brethren sat down to a capital banquet, which was provided in a really first-class manner by Mr. R. Stone, of the Ship Hotel, whose savoury edibles were as much appreciated as his excellent wines. At the dinner the chair was taken by Bro. Morgan, while the vice-chair was ably filled by Bro. Digby.

The cloth having been removed, the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given from the chair.

The Chairman, in feeling terms, then said that the day was one which he trusted would ever be thought of as a memorable one in the annals of local Freemasonry, for they were about to do honour to Bro. J. G. Carter, the worthy Preceptor of the lodge of instruction. (Applause.) He was sure the brethren owed a debt of gratitude to their painstaking Preceptor for his untiring energy on their behalf. He (the Chairman) had much pleasure in presenting Bro. Carter with a massive gold ring—a memento from the lodge of instruction—to show the respect in which he is held. (Cheers.)

The Vice-Chairman warmly praised the Masonic tact of Bro. Carter, and felt that the brethren, in presenting the ring, were only bestowing honour where honour is due.

The other brethren also spoke as to Bro. Carter's kindness.

Bro. Frost was particularly humorous. In the course of his remarks, he said that some of them had, no doubt, heard of the parson and the irascible "whip," who used some rather hard adjectives to the four-in-hand he was driving. "Hush!" said the parson, who sat next him; "Job, in all his troubles, never complained so." "Perhaps not," replied the whip; "but then Job never drove three blind 'uns and a bolter." He (Bro. Carter) had not, perhaps, had "three blind 'uns and a bolter" to drive—(laughter)—but he had guided the coach very successfully. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Carter then suitably responded, and after some songs from Bros. Digby, J. J. Holland, and others, the brethren and ladies again took a row on the Thames, after which tea was served at the hotel. The picnic party returned to town in the evening, evidently happier and more contented by reason of the pleasant day which had been spent.—Mid-Surrey Standard.

THE NUTCRACKERS' CLUB.

(Query No. 1075, May 31.)

[1075.] The Nutcrackers' Club does not now exist. Its objects were social. It met in the "Cavern" under the Stock Exchange, in the room previously used as a private dining club by several J.P.'s and prominent leaders of the Conservative party in Manchester.

The City Lantern of December 31, 1874, contained a facetious article on the club, which was founded by our fellow-townsmen, Mr. E. O. Bleackley, who invented the rules, pass-words, and ceremonies. It originated through a few gentlemen dining together once a week until they assumed the proportions of a club, and wished to lend dignity and exclusiveness to their proceedings by the introduction of rules and ceremonials.

The crest of the club was the squirrel, as the most ancient of nutcrackers, the arms a pyramid of nuts, and the motto "crackers, not crushers," indicative that

To crush was to destroy,
But to crack to enjoy, equally illustrative of nuts or conversation. Shaksperian quotations relevant to the objects of the club were frequently used, such as: "Wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes." "There can be no kernel in this light nut." "A were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel." The president was designated "Marshal," the vice-president "General," and the secretary "Colonel," and the number of members was limited to twenty-one of the inner degree. The objects were mastication, imbibition, joke, nut-cracking, and all other practices belonging to this eccentric order. The use of even numbers was forbidden, and only odd figures were used.

The elections for "the outer degree" were by open proposal, and the candidate had to order a dish of nuts and a bottle of wine. Entire absence from the club for a month without permission of the marshal voided all the privileges of the club. When a candidate was inducted, all the Nutcrackers, on a sign from the general, simultaneously snapped their fingers and stood for the remainder of the ceremony with the palms of their left hands on the crowns of their own heads until another signal was given, when they simultaneously cracked a nut each, and the marshal exchanged and ate a nut with the candidate, as typical of the good-fellowship which binds all Nutcrackers. He then showed and explained several of the signs to the newly-made Nutcracker. The snapping of the fingers was typical that Nutcrackers were not easily overcome by trifles, but snapped their fingers at misfortune. The placing of the left hand on the crown of the head was intended to imply that a Nutcracker's brains were in the usual place, ready to conceive grand objects for the welfare of Nutcrackers in particular, and mankind in general. An exhortation was then pronounced, and something like the following was inculcated:—"In becoming one of us, I may inform you that there is nothing in our practices or principles that can shock the most delicate morality; in fact, they have rather a tendency to elevate and refine. We use ceremony, because it was invented by the founder of our ancient Order to keep fools at a distance. Our pleasures are innocent, and delight equally in participation or reflection; like the supper which Atticus gave to Cicero, pleasing in recollection. As a Nutcracker, the hands of Briareus will defend you, and the eyes of Argus watch over you; but it would require the energy of Demosthenes, the judgment of Quintillian, and the flowing periods of Cicero to explain in detail the aspirations of the Ancient Order of Nutcrackers. Our order is based on semi-military forms, because Nutcrackers from time immemorial have always been in the van whenever the honour of their country was assailed. The use of even numbers is especially forbidden and eschewed by all good Nutcrackers, which probably is one reason why the uninitiated world has often taken us for Oddfellows. In compliance with this uncontrollable regulation our watchwords are seven, and comprise the noblest words in this or any other language, viz., Honour, Honesty, Good-nature, Truth, Secrecy, Silence, and Patience." Then followed a nutcrackatory explanation of these noble mottoes, accompanied by a private revelation of the mystic words crack—slap—snap, in conjunction with a peculiar entanglement of the fingers, which no description can explain, and the passwords completed the ceremony.

Some of the happiest hours of my life were passed in the Nutcrackers' Club, and I am sorry that it came to an untimely end.

The W.M. proposed "The Health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen," "Dr. Rev. P. H. Ernest Brette," "Colonel Burdett," "The Visitors," and "The Ladies;" Bro. H. C. Levander responding for the visitors and Mr. Evans for the ladies.

The pleasures of the evening were enhanced by the skilful playing of the Misses Julliffe and Miss White on the piano.

IN MEMORIAM.

LOUIS NAPOLEON. CHISLEHURST, JULY 12, 1879.

Oh! ending sad of hopes all bright and fair,
Oh! close of many prayers and loving pride,
A widow'd mother's grieving sadly there
For one to stand no more in duty at her side.
We mourn him truly, deeply, one and all;
The high, the low; and English soldiers crave,
With whom he nobly shared what fate might fall,
Comrades in life and death, to guard his honour'd grave.
Strange paradox of years! While memory flings
Its solemn colouring over time and fame,
Amid her soldiers, sailors, statesmen, kings,
England will ne'er forget Napoleon's name.
We sigh for such a fate, in such young years;
We mourn glad powers quenched, great gifts no more;
But yet we trust, amid our falling tears,
That brave boy in his death has reached a deathless shore.

Obituary.

BRO. GEORGE PHYTHIAN.

Our much respected and regretted Bro. George Phythian, P.M. of the Neptune Lodge, No. 22, and Comp. J. of the Lion and Lamb Chapter, departed this life on the 30th ult. He was a hard-working member in the Craft, and also a liberal subscriber to our Charities. His kindness and geniality of manner will long be missed among his brethren and companions.

The Alliance Lodge, No. 1827, is to be consecrated at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, City, on Wednesday, the 30th inst. Bro. J. B. Monckton, P.M., P.G.D., President of the Board of General Purposes, is the W.M. designate, and Bro. L. F. Littell, P.M., will be S.W. and Bro. Frank Green, P.M., J.W.

Masonic and General Tidings.

It was noticed with much regret that the attendance at the Quarterly Court of the Girls' and Boys' School was so small; five Life Governors only being present of the former and six of the latter.

A special meeting of the Lodge Cosmopolitan was held on May 13th, at the Masonic Hall, Shanghai, for the purpose of installing Bro. Joseph Moses Emanuel, the W.M. elect of the newly erected Lodge of St. John's, No. 618, S.C., in Hong-Kong. Bro. Emanuel having produced the charter from Grand Lodge of Scotland, creating the above lodge, and appointing him its W.M., the interesting ceremony was proceeded with by Bro. W. Pemberton, W.M. of the Lodge Cosmopolitan, assisted by Bro. W. Birt, I.P.M., and by the Bros. Dewsbury and Jansen, Past Masters of the Ancient Landmark Lodge, Mass. Count. There was a large number of visiting brethren, members of lodges working under various Constitutions.

It is confidently anticipated that the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Lancashire will be held this year at Morecambe, under the banner of Lodges No. 281, 1051, 1353, and 1561. The R.W. P.G.M. is Lord Skelmersdale, and the date of the meeting will be on or about the first Wednesday in October.

In our account of the installation ceremony in connection with the Merchants Lodge, No. 241, Liverpool, we accidentally omitted the name of Bro. Thomas Salter as the W.M. placed in the chair for the ensuing year. The choice of the brethren has thus fallen on one whose active connection with Masonry has long been marked by true brotherly zeal, and it may be interesting to many to know that the celebration of the centenary of the Merchants Lodge will occur during his year's occupancy of the W.M.'s chair.

At the last meeting of the Holmesdale Lodge of Freemasons, No. 874, Tunbridge Wells, it was unanimously resolved that the portrait of Bro. Chas. Marsh, P.M., P.Z., P.P.S.D., of Somerset, in his 91st year, and sixty a Mason, be obtained at the cost of the lodge, and placed upon the wall in recognition of his services as one of the founders of the lodge, and its first acting Immediate P.M." On the day following the communication of this resolution to his son, Bro. Cromwell Marsh, of this town, the latter received a letter from the editor of the Masonic Record, published Allahabad, India, requesting him to send a photograph of his father in Masonic or plain costume, saying he should deem it an honour if Bro. C. Marsh would sanction it. The portrait was taken on Wednesday, the 9th inst., at D. R. Everett's studio, Tunbridge Wells. Bro. C. Marsh has been totally blind since June, 1856, soon after his return from Sydney, N.S.W., which has prevented him from following his profession as an artist and miniature painter.—Dover Express.

THE LATE SIR THOS. MYDDELTON BIDDULPH.—A massive brass tablet, to the memory of General and Bro. the Right Hon. Sir Thos. M. Biddulph, K.C.B., Keeper of Her Majesty's Privy Purse, has just been placed in Holy Trinity Church, Windsor. This well merited tribute has been subscribed for by the officers of the 1st Life Guards, in which regiment the late general served for twenty-six years. It is mounted on black Belgian marble, and measures 6ft. 10 in. by 3ft. 4 in. The design has had the approval of Her Majesty, and the entire work has been entrusted to Messrs. Matthews and Sons, of 377, Oxford-street, London. Thus, appropriately, is the illustrious officer's memory perpetuated as "a character of unimpeachable honour and sterling friendship never to be forgotten in the regiment which he loved, and which warmly responded to his affection."

THE ATLINGWORTH LODGE No. 1821.—A new lodge under the above name was consecrated at Brighton on Thursday, the 17th inst. Bro. Joseph Sabine, Prov. G. of W. Middlesex, was installed the first W.M. We shall give a full report of the proceedings next week.

We regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Basden, wife of Mr. W. H. Basden (secretary of the House Property and Investment Company), and daughter of Bro. W. S. Gover, C.C. The deceased lady was only 22 years of age.

The installation meeting of the Lebanon Lodge, No. 1326, takes place at the Lion Hotel, Hampton, this day (Saturday). Bro. J. B. Shackleton, P.G.P. Middx., is to be the W.M.

Bro. Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Q.C., will this evening read a paper before the United Law Students' Society on "The Authorship of the Plays attributed to Shakspere."

Bro. P. L. Simmonds, P.M., of Cheapside, has been honoured by the King of Italy with the decoration of the Order of the Crown of Italy, for his services at the Paris Exhibition last year. Bro. Simmonds had previously received the Order of the Legion of Honour of France, and a very handsome letter of thanks from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, as President of the British Commission, with a copy of his portrait.

The decoration committee of Great Grimsby have entrusted Messrs. Piggott Brothers, 59, Bishopsgate-street Without, with the decoration of that town upon the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales on the 22nd inst.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

SUNDERLAND.—St. John's Lodge (No. 80).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Towana-road, on the 8th inst. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M. Bro. Newton. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. Jackson, of St. Helen's Lodge, Hartlepool, who was unanimously elected. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bro. Smith was examined and rewarded with the test of merit; he then retired to prepare. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, when Bro. Smith was admitted and was made a M.M. The ceremony was gone through by the W.M. in a careful manner. The lodge was then closed, and then to the Second, and then to the First. No other business being before the lodge it was closed according to ancient custom.

GIBRALTAR.—Inhabitants Lodge (No. 153).—This lodge held their monthly meeting at Armstrong's Buildings on Monday, the 8th inst., which went off with that perfect éclat so proverbial of this lodge. After the lodge business was over (which consisted of raising Bro. Rumbo, and some other minor matters) the brethren adjourned to their commodious refreshment rooms, when, after supper, the usual loyal toasts having been eloquently proposed, and heartily responded to, Bro. Johnson, the W.M. of the Friendship Lodge, in responding to the toast of his health and lodge in a characteristic speech, spoke in terse language of the bright features of Masonry, and its influence for good, pithily remarking that the name of his lodge, Friendship, was no stereotyped phrase, meaning nothing, but the name they were known by was simply a reflection of their inward feelings towards all their Masonic brethren. "The Health of their newly-raised Brother" was proposed by the W.M., who, while complimenting Bro. Rumbo on the marked attention he had paid to the ceremony, trusted the impression made on his mind that night would tend in some measure to enhance his temporal and spiritual welfare. Bro. Rumbo, who was powerfully affected, feelingly responded, intimating that Masonry possessed for him so many charms that he felt sure his infatuation would increase, and he only hoped that he might be enabled in the long future to add his quota to the edification of the "Holy Temple." After some minor toasts Bro. Armstrong proposed "The Health of the W.M." in a speech redolent of interest, and amidst the rapt attention of the lodge, attributing its present success mainly to his efforts, shewing how by his urbanity of manner, and Masonic zeal and ability, he had during the last three years assisted most materially Bros. Cunningham, Armstrong, White, and others in bringing the lodge almost to a "climax" of perfection, as amply testified by the crowded state of the rooms on all occasions. Bro. Bacor, in responding with characteristic modesty, disclaimed meriting the encomiums which Bro. Armstrong had showered upon him, attributing his success in a great measure to the ability of his officers, and promised that while the G.A.O.T.U. gave him health, his efforts would be unabated for the good of Masonry. After some excellent songs from that good friend of Masonry, Bro. W. T. Cottrell, and Bros. Lane, Williams, and Dr. Gago, the evening was brought to a close by the Tyler's toast, an evening the solemnity of which we feel gave all an impression which will not easily be eradicated.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners Lodge (No. 249).—The annual installation gathering of the members of this popular, prosperous, and numerous lodge is invariably an attractive one, and that which took place in connection with the recent installation of Bro. William Corbett as the W.M. for the coming year was no exception to the general rule. The brethren were summoned to attend at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, at half-past two o'clock, and shortly after the appointed time the lodge was opened in due form by Bro. Frederick Barnett, the retiring W.M., supported officially by Bro. John C. Robinson, I.P.M.; John Hayes, P.M., M.C., P.G.S.; the Rev. Philip Pennington, P.M.; Peter Maddox, P.M.; W. Corbett, S.W.; J. Kellett Smith, P.M. and Treas., P.P.G. Reg.; Robert Collings, Sec.; John Whalley, S.D.; H. Wynne Parry, J.D.; Wm. H. Vernon, I.G.; Alfred D. Ewart, Org.; J. Jenaway, Steward; Morris Davies, Steward; and Wm. H. Ball, Tyler. The members present were Bros. J. Wilson, B. J. Parry, John Harries, John Smith, J. Messenger, J. P. Jones, H. Hyman, James Travis, Thos. Hawkins, R. Bradley, J. Whittall, A. Barnard, N. Cohen, M. Thornton, Jas. Chisnall, John Williams, Henry J. Pye, Joseph Wood, J. Crebbin, A. Draper, M. Howarth, G. C. Beecham, T. Grindall, D. Cangley, J. Nicholas, J. N. Pendleton, R. Thompson, Phillip Stern, J. Baines, Samuel Johnson, Wm. Hazell, Thomas Joseph, Rd. Fitzgerald, J. Sykes, John Molloy, Peter Ball, T. Poyzer, D. Oiphant, J. H. Walker, Wm. Pye, James Roberts, Alfred Samuel, W. Smith, M. Goldstone, W. Sambrook, Robt. Thomas, J. Hyams, Walter Lethian, and Thos. Haliburton. The visitors included Bros. Thos. Wigham, 1400; John Pemberton, P.G. Supt. of Wks., P.M. 1264; Edward Griffiths, 1473; J. Fredk. Keeley, P.M. 1054 and 1161; Archd. Gillilan, 1393; J. R. Bottomley, W.M. 1675; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec.; J. T. Callow, Prov. G. Treas., P.M. 673 and 1505; S. Schonstadt, W.M. 1502; J. Busfield, 1299 and 216; John Hill, 1609; J. Archdeacon, 667; and John G. Gough, 1609. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, Bro. Wm. Corbett was presented by Bro. Dr. J. Kellett Smith, P.M., Treasurer, P.P.G. Registrar, and Bro. John Hayes, P.M., P.G.S., the ceremony of installation being most impressively performed by Bro. F. Barnett. The Board of Installed Masters was then closed, and M.M.'s were re-admitted. The lodge was afterwards closed down to the Second and then to the First Degree, and Bro. Corbett was duly saluted and proclaimed in each. The Worshipful Master then proceeded to invest his officers for 1879-80 as follows:—Bros. F. Barnett, I.P.M.; J. C. Robinson, P.M., D.C.; J. Whalley, S.W.; H. W. Parry, J.W.; Dr. Kellett Smith, P.M. and Treasurer (re-elected); R. Collings, Secretary; W. H. Vernon, S.D.; J. Jenaway, J.D.; Morris Davies, I.G.; A. B. Ewart, Organist; T. Joseph, D. W. Caughey, and Mark Howarth, Stewards; W. H. Ball was re-elected Tyler. A beautiful P.M.'s jewel was presented to the I.P.M. by the W.M., who in a few hearty words expressed the good feeling of the lodge towards him. After several propositions for initiation had been made, and "Hearty good wishes" from the various representatives of sister lodges, the brethren dined in the banqueting-room, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, the music being efficiently rendered by Bros. Busfield (216), Hill (1609), and Gillilan, under the able direction of Bro. Ewart. The banquet was provided by Bro. Vines, P.P.G. D.C., in his well-known excellent manner. After the cloth was removed the first toast of the evening, "The Health of the Queen," was given by Bro. Corbett, W.M., who said that this was a toast always most loyally and enthusiastically received by Masons who met together at the festive board. This enthusiasm and loyalty were only right, for it was well known to all that the Queen was a lover of the Craft; she was also the daughter of a Mason, and her claim to their love was enhanced by the fact that she had three sons Masons. The toast was received with musical honours. The toasts of "The M.W.G.M.," and "The Prov. G.M. of West Lancashire and his Officers," were also cordially honoured. Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., in responding to the latter toast, said he was glad to see that the funds of the Mariners Lodge were of a satisfactory kind, as there was a very handsome balance remaining after the year's working in the hands of the Treasurer. He thought that the brethren had good ground for congratulating themselves on the continued prosperity of the lodge. The toast of "The Health of the W.M." was given by Bro. Barnett, I.P.M., who said that he had no doubt Bro. Corbett would make a good W.M. if he attended to his Masonic duties in the future as well as he had done in the past; and each brother knew that he (the W.M.) had filled every office he had held, from Steward upwards, with credit to the lodge and honour to himself. The toast was received most enthusiastically. Bro. Corbett, W.M., in responding, said: Bro. P.M. Barnett, Past Masters, and brethren, I beg to return you my most sincere and heartfelt thanks for the kind and cordial manner in which the toast of my health has been given and received. The majority of the brethren present know that I am a joining member of the Mariners Lodge, the lodge in which I was initiated being the Beaufort Lodge, 103, Bristol. I, therefore, esteem it a greater honour to be the Master of this lodge than I would have done had I been initiated under its banner. I came to Liverpool in October, 1873, and one of the first objects I had in view was to affiliate myself to a Masonic lodge here. But as I did not wish to become a member of a lodge which I might afterwards find to be uncongenial to my taste, I decided to visit a few lodges. Having done so, I made up my mind to cast in my lot with the Mariners if the brethren would accept me. Having become acquainted with Bro. Wood, of the Freemason, he suggested that I should see our worthy and esteemed Treasurer, Bro. Dr. Kellett Smith, P.M., and it was he who proposed my name as a joining member of this lodge. I was admitted in January, 1874, and from day to day, now upwards of five years, I must bear testimony to the fact that I have met with nothing but kindness and cordiality from all the brethren. The W.M. then went on to say that he had served the offices of Steward, Deacon, and last year S.W., and now that he had been elected to the chair of W.M. he felt the great responsibilities of the honour conferred upon him. There were Past Masters present who had deservedly been good and worthy Worshipful Masters, who had conferred honour on themselves, and given credit to the lodge—Bro. Dr. Kellett Smith, P.M., P.P.G. Registrar; Rev. P. Pennington, P.M.; John Hayes, P.M., P.G.S.; J. C. Robinson, P.M.; and Bro. Barnett, I.P.M. Bro. Dr. Kellett Smith's zeal for Freemasonry was so well known as to require no remarks from him, and he hoped that he, the W.M., would be able to follow in the footsteps of the other P.M.'s. He felt certain that although he might not be as able as his predecessors, the brethren would know that he would do his best for Masonry in general, and this lodge in particular. In conclusion he said that his best energies would be devoted as far as in him lay to make the brethren happy, so that his year of office might be harmonious and successful; and he requested the brethren to assist him in his efforts, as he felt confident they would. The toast of "The Health of the Installing Master" was given by Bro. Dr. Kellett Smith, P.M., P.P.G.R., who said that he was very much pleased to have to give this toast, as until recently he might have called himself the perpetual Installing Master of the Mariners Lodge. Bro. Hayes, P.M., four years ago was able to give it, and had assisted him, and given the ceremony himself. Now they had Bro. Barnett, who had just vacated the W.M.'s chair—he, in the best manner that he had seen for the first time of giving it, had given his successor the benefit of the installation ceremony. That was as it should be. He thought every W.M. ought to be qualified to give that ceremony to his successor, and he was therefore pleased to see Bro. Barnett, I.P.M., give it that day with such credit to himself. As the W.M. had justly said, if he should be as successful a W.M. as the Installing Master had been he might be thankful. Bro. Barnett responded in suitable terms, and after the proposition of several other toasts the pleasant proceedings came to a close.

SANDGATE.—Sandgate Lodge (No. 1436).—The annual festival of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall on Monday, the 14th inst. Present: Bros. A. Keeler, W.M.; T. J. Pulley, S.W.; J. Caudell, J.W.; R. B. Jenner, P.M., Treas.; C. Gosby, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Sec.; B. Simmonds, as S.D.; H. Brett, as J.W.; A. Petts, I.G.; G. Butcher, Tyler; and Bros. R. White, P.M., P.P.G.P.; J. Slack, P.M.; Pugh, Hitching, Duncan, Steward, Jordan, Shackleton, Bray, Woods, Kenneth, Crumplin, Patterson, and others. There were also present a large assemblage of visiting brethren, amongst whom we observed the following viz.: Bros. R. Woods, P.M. 51, P.P.G.S.W. Hants and Isle of Wight; R. Eve, P.M. 395, 650, 723, P.P.G.S.W. Hants and Isle of Wight; A. Cooley, P.M. 20, 972, 1449, P.P.G. J.W. Kent; H. Hacker, P.M. 723, 1714, P.P.G.D. Hants and Isle of Wight; T. Benham, P.M. 723, P.P.G.P. Hants and Isle of Wight; H. W. Homann, D.C. 59; T. J. Rubie, W.M. 145; Amos, 125; G. Rendall, 160; Elms, 199; J. Dolbear, 240; E. J. Sears, W.M. 299; W. G. Bayliss, 315; Klatt, W.M. 558; W. Hoad, 558; Evenden, 558; Jones, 558; J. M. Dormor, S.D. 340; J. Brothers, W.M. 709; H. Bolton, 179; J. C. R. Glasspool, 723; F. H. Cozens, 909 Org.; J. Abbott, 1331; J. Dennison, 1424; G. Noakes, P.M. 1532; E. Nichols, 1714, Treas.; and others. The ordinary business of the lodge had been transacted at a lodge of emergency convened for that purpose on the previous Monday. The lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of the previous regular lodge and the lodge of emergency were read and confirmed. The lodge was then advanced to the Second Degree, and the W.M. elect, Bro. T. J. Pulley, having been duly presented, was installed in the chair of K.S. by Bro. R. White, P.M. 1331, P.P.G.P. Hants and Isle of Wight, a large Board of Installed Masters being in attendance. The W.M. having been duly saluted, proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. A. Keeler, I.P.M.; J. Caudell, S.W.; B. Simmonds, J.W.; R. B. Jenner, P.M., Treas.; C. Gosby, P.M., Sec.; H. Brett, S.D.; A. Petts, J.D.; W. Steward, D. of C.; H. Clark, I.G.; J. Bray and H. Jordan, Stwds.; G. Butcher, Tyler. Other business being transacted, and "Hearty good wishes" expressed from the various lodges represented, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren, about sixty in number, adjourned to a splendid banquet, provided by Bro. Watts, at the Royal Kent Hotel. The table was laid in a spacious marquee on the lawn in the rear of the hotel and immediately facing the sea, and was beautifully decorated, the walls being lined with banners of all descriptions. The floral decorations were especially admired and displayed exquisite taste in their arrangement. The banquet was excellent in every respect, and was accompanied by the performance of a first class selection of music by the Folkestone String Band, which was stationed outside the marquee. The usual Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the proceedings enlivened by the excellent singing of Bro. F. H. Cozens and other brethren.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 2nd inst., and will long be remembered by the brethren as a sad reverse to their usual custom at this time of installing a new W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Joseph Ebbs, then S.W., was unanimously elected in May last to occupy that position, but the G.A.O.T.U. willed it otherwise, and the highly respected brother passed away to those blest mansions before such honour on earth could be paid to him, and with the sincere hope of a brighter throne elsewhere. The W.M., Bro. G. Tidcombe, feelingly alluded to their great loss, and unanimous was the vote of condolence to the widow and family. The lodge was opened at 3.50, and after confirming the minutes of the previous regular meeting and the audit meeting (excepting that portion of the election of W.M.), Bros. Bamford and Puckett were passed by P.M. Vincent to the Second Degree, after having shown themselves efficient for such ceremony. Mr. William Marshall was also accepted on the ballot to be initiated on a future occasion. Other business having been disposed of, the election of another W.M. was proclaimed, with the choice falling unanimously on Bro. William Shury Marshall, J.W., the installation to take place in August next. The unfortunate circumstance above will noted necessitate the bye-law being altered, and the installation meeting being held in August, which was agreed to be recommended to the Prov. G.M. for his approval. Bro. Secretary, in memory of their departed brother, having read a Masonic charge applicable to the occasion, the lodge closed in peace and harmony at 5-40, the usual musical banquet being dispensed with.

Copestick, as H., and Chapman, as J., duly exalted the following to Holy Royal Arch Masonry, viz., Bros. John Taylor and H. Carnell. Before finally closing the chapter, Comp. Chapman, M.E.Z., referred with great feeling to the death of Comp. G. Phythian, J. The subject was one that brought forth the heartfelt feelings of sympathy of several other companions to whom the deceased was greatly endeared. A vote of condolence was naturally proposed, and carried nem. con.

WHITEHAVEN.—Sun, Square, and Compasses Chapter (No. 119).—The quarterly convocation of this chapter was held in the Freemasons' Hall, College-street, Whitehaven, on Friday, the 18th inst. The members who signed their names in the Janitor's book were Comps. W. Sandwith, P.Z., as M.E.Z.; John Barr, P.Z.; E. Fearon, P.Z.; W. F. Lamony, H. (Freemason); E. Tyson, J.; J. Rothery, S.E.; T. Dixon, S.N.; T. Atkinson, P.S.; J. T. Ray, 1st A.S.; J. S. Glasse, J. S. Braithwaite, T. B. Roxby, G. Dalrymple, G. T. Archibald, Jos. Wood, C. H. Hodgson, J. J. Casson, W. Jackson, and others. The chapter having been opened at seven o'clock, the remainder of the companions were admitted, and the minutes of the former convocation were read and confirmed. For once there were no candidates for exaltation—a somewhat unusual thing for this chapter. The Treasurer's statement of accounts was read by the Scribe E., showing a balance of £17 odd in favour of the chapter, and the same was unanimously adopted. The next business was the election of Principals and other officers for the ensuing twelve months. Comps. Lamony and Tyson were respectively unanimously elected to the chairs of First and Second Principals, whilst, after a contest, Comp. Atkinson, P.S., was elected Third Principal. There were also stiff contests in the balloting for the other officers, which at length were decided as follow: Comps. J. Rothery, S.E. (re-elected); T. Dixon, S.N. (re-elected); and G. Dalrymple, P.S. Comp. J. McKelvie, who has been Treasurer of the chapter since 1869, was unanimously re-elected to the office, as was also the Janitor, Comp. G. Fitzgerald. On the motion of Comp. Lamony, H., seconded by Comp. Tyson, J., the sum of five guineas was voted from the funds of the chapter for the benefit of the orphan children of a deceased companion. The chapter was then closed in solemn form.

LIVERPOOL.—Hamer Chapter (No. 1393).—On Thursday evening, the 10th inst., the annual installation of chiefs and officers in connection with this chapter took place at the Masonic Hall, 22, Hope-street. Among the companions present were Comps. J. McCarthy, Past J.; H. Jackson, Z.; R. H. Evans, P.Z., Treasurer; John Houlding, H.; Thos. Sammons, J.; W. C. Erwin, Scribe E.; Matthew Callaghan, Scribe N.; J. Pilling, A.S.; F. J. Pentin, Rev. T. J. Leslie, W. J. Henderson, J. S. Russell, P.Z. 292; F. Lomerin, W. Wilson; and amongst the visitors were Comps. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Scribe E.; Robt. Wylie, P.P.G.D.C.; Jas. T. Callow, P.P.G.S.B.; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; Charles Tyrer, 823, &c. The ceremony was most ably performed by the retiring First Principal, Comp. Henry Jackson, and the following were placed in the chairs: Comps. J. Houlding, Z.; T. Sammons, H.; W. Wilson, J.; W. C. Erwin, E.; M. Callaghan, N.; J. F. Pentin, P.S.; Rev. T. J. Leslie, 1st A.S.; and James Pilling, and A.S. After the ceremony Bro. William King, 1620, was duly exalted into the chapter by Comp. Houlding, Z., and the ceremony was gone through in a manner that reflected the highest credit upon the chiefs and officers of the chapter. After business the companions adjourned to banquet, and a pleasant evening was spent with toast, song, and kindly companionship.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Common sense, ever the best of all learning, becomes invaluable when its practice will renovate broken health and restate soundness, strength and vigour. Summer is the season for removing coughs, shortness of breath, wheezing, asthma, and all pulmonary diseases inflicted on the delicate and careless by our rigorous winters, and Holloway's remedies are the means of effecting a happy transition from danger to safety. After the bare chest has been fomented with sea water, or weak brine, and dried, this Ointment should be well rubbed into the skin, both in front and behind, between the blades-bones. Holloway's Pills should be taken to correct any functional irregularity; they will make each organ conform to health's requirements.—[Adv.]

The Provincial Grand Master opened the lodge in the Three Degrees, the S.W. chair being occupied by Bro. Joseph Dixon, P.P.S.G.W., and that of the J.W. by Bro. J. St. Clair, P.M. 38, 1729, P.G.J.W.

After opening the lodge in the Three Degrees, the Prov. G. Master stated that he had received a telegram from London, which he was sorry to say would oblige him to leave shortly after 5 o'clock, and he regretted that on this account he should be unable to attend the banquet which was to follow these proceedings.

The Dep. P.G.M., Bro. Scott, having assumed the chair, said it was customary for the Presiding Officer and the Chaplain to address the brethren on their assembling together. That day, unfortunately, the P.G. Chaplain was not able to be present, but Bro. Adams had consented to fill his place, and would presently address the brethren on the nature of Freemasonry. He did not know whether Bro. Adams would tell them anything about the origin of Freemasonry; for his part he (Bro. Scott) did not know anything about that. He had practised it according to the rules of Grand Lodge for twenty-six years; but those who had studied Freemasonry had told him that it was impossible to speak of its origin with certainty. It was believed that in ancient times there was a free or travelling guild of Freemasons, who were bound together by secret signs, tokens, and words by which they were enabled to recognise just men and true, and detect cowans and intruders. They were told by the late Sir Gilbert Scott that most, if not all, the splendid structures to be found in Europe were built by Freemasons. Besides being wonderfully skilful in their art, they were men of the greatest purity of life and had a code of maxims and principles, which, if faithfully carried out, could not fail of producing a godly, righteous, and sober life. What were the duties they inculcated? They could be summed up in the words "Love to God and love to men;" for had not Christ told us "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbour as thyself." They were no longer working Masons, but had learned lessons from the ancient guild which they now applied to morals only, and so became Free and Accepted or Speculative Masons, separate and apart from the outside world who are not Freemasons. Those who are outside frequently said, what is the use of these foolish practices at the present time? and asserted that Freemasonry had had its day, and was dying out. Those who disliked the Craft did so on what they called religious grounds—they said that it is wicked. Freemasons lay under the ban of the Pope, and a colonial bishop also condemned them. He (the speaker) could only say that he felt sure that those who held bad opinions of Freemasonry would, if they had an opportunity of judging it fairly, find that they had formed a very erroneous opinion of the Order. But the assertion that Masonry had had its day, and was dying out, was very easily disposed of, for an institution that steadily increased year by year could not be said to have had its day. Bro. Scott stated that the Brunswick Lodge was the first lodge in Sussex that was consecrated after the revival of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex, and that the ceremony was performed by Bro. Hervey, who, he was sorry to learn, was prevented by the state of his health from being present on this occasion. The Brunswick Lodge had proved itself worthy of its noble emblem, for the Star of Brunswick had become a fixed star. The number of the Brunswick Lodge was 732, and the number of the lodge they were assembled to consecrate was 1821, making an increase of 1089 lodges in less than twenty-one years; they need, therefore, have no fear that the sun of Masonry is waning, but confidently look forward to go down to succeeding generations, not only undimmed but undiminished in usefulness. That it is childish to belong to Freemasonry he said was one of those specious arguments which could be applied to anything. If they were all perfect there would be no need for Freemasonry, but, unfortunately, they were but weak, erring human creatures, who required guidance, training, and discipline, and, therefore, according to their destinies, they must labour after better and truer lives, in doing which Freemasonry would enable them to become what they desired to be; for, notwithstanding the backsliding of its members, there was still that living spirit in Freemasonry which did awaken the higher aspirations of fallen creatures, and did bind the hearts of men together in a bond of fraternal union. They might, therefore, rejoice in the increase of their lodges, for every lodge was a fresh centre about which to cluster; where they might all feel called upon to erect a stately, a superb moral edifice, and by making their own lives beautiful, and doing with their might all that their hands found to do, might raise a fairer structure that had yet been seen by mortal eye, a temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. He could not conclude his remarks better than by expressing the hope that this might be the case with the Atlingworth Lodge. The members will be under the guidance of a brother who was an expert Mason, and who would right well know how to rule and guide his lodge. It must be a gratification to Bro. Sabine that he had at length established a lodge at Brighton, and that it happened to be his birthday on which it was consecrated. He was sure that all would join in wishing Bro. Sabine many happy returns of the day and prosperity to the Atlingworth Lodge.

The D.P.G.M. then called upon the Secretary to say what steps had been taken with regard to this lodge.

The Prov. G.D. of C. ranged the founders of the lodge in due order, and the Prov. G. Sec. read the petition, and the Prov. G. Reg. read the warrant granted by the Grand Lodge of England; whereupon the D.P.G.M. inquired whether the petitioners approved of the officers nominated in the warrant, and having been answered in the affirmative, called upon the Chaplain, Bro. Adams, to address the lodge.

Bro. Rev. Richards Adams said, that every man of sense must feel some diffidence in speaking upon a subject himself before those who know far more about it than he does. He had to speak not only to those who were older in Freemasonry than himself, but after one who had endeavoured to show the beginning of Freemasonry. Therefore he felt a certain amount of diffidence in speaking as to the nature of Freemasonry, because his hearers must know it far better than he knew it himself. He should not, however, occupy the time by many apologies, but would follow on the speech they had already heard, carrying on those remarks. Bro. Scott had defended Freemasonry in the most masterly way from the attacks made upon it; he (Bro. Adams) would endeavour to go a little further and if possible (for they could not do it altogether) carry the war into the enemy's country. He would confine himself to one fact: Freemasonry provided one of the great necessities of human nature. They had all experienced that the tendency of progress was to separate man from man. In earlier ages there was a strong feeling of claniship that bound man to his brother man, but as civilisation increased there was a tendency to sever each from the other; men passed away into different conditions of life, and different feelings; and all this parted them. There was a marked separation often existed between the different states of society, and they often saw men looking down upon others, who again looked down upon another class. They found that the duties of their common citizenship tended to divide them. Politics divided them and religion divided them. The duties, therefore, of common citizenship did not content them. He looked around him for something to unite them, and he found nothing anywhere but Freemasonry that would do it. There they found men of all positions meeting on a common ground—men who differed in religion, in politics, in position in life, in profession or occupation—they might differ in all these respects; but the grand power of Freemasonry was felt by each and all who were brought together under the ægis and banner of Freemasonry. There was one other point to which he would draw attention. They were not banded together simply to do nothing; they could not allow the world to think that they only held lodges; they could point to the effects of their union—to their glorious Masonic Charities. They were doing their duty, not only to themselves, but were providing for those who in the course of nature were unable to provide for themselves. They were not united simply in standing still but were united in marching onward in the grand path of benevolence.

At the close of the Chaplain's oration, the D.P.G.M., assisted by the other Prov. Grand Officers, performed the ceremony of consecrating the lodge, with choral accompaniments.

The ceremony of installing Bro. Sabine as first W.M. of the Atlingworth Lodge was also performed by the D.P.G.M., Bro. Scott; and it is only giving their simple due to all concerned in the ceremonies of consecration and installation to say that we never in any lodge have seen the work better done.

The following is the list of officers for the year designated in the warrant as appointed by the W.M.:—Bros. Henry Davey, P.M. 732, acting I.P.M.; Jas. Robertson, Britannia Lodge, 33, S.W.; H. G. Martin, P.M. 404, P.P. J.G.W. Herts, J.W.; Geo. Smith, P.M. 732, P.P.G.P. Sussex, Treas.; G. S. Godfree, Royal York Lodge, 315, Sec.; J. N. Stoner, P.M. 56, S.D.; W. Newsome, True Friendship Lodge, 160, J.D.; S. P. Weston, Royal York Lodge, 315, I.G.; J. M. Newnham, St. Cecilia Lodge, 1636, Chap.; S. Peters, South Saxon Lodge, 311, D. of C.; H. Ancombe, Domestic Lodge, 177, and R. Paige, Loyal of Industry Lodge, 421, Stewards; Thomas Hughes, Prov. G. Tyler Sussex, Tyler.

Before closing the lodge, Bro. Sabine proposed a vote of thanks to the Prov. G. Officers for the assistance they had given them, and that honorary membership be conferred on the R.W. Bro. Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., P.G.M.; W. Bro. J. H. Scott, D.P.G.M.; Bro. V. P. Freeman, Prov. G. Sec.; and Bro. Somers Clarke (lord of the manor of Atlingworth); and the motion being seconded by the J.W., was carried unanimously.

Ten gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and two brethren as joining members.

The foundation of a benevolent fund in connection with the lodge was laid by a collection made in the lodge-room.

The lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was served in the Banqueting or Dragon Room. Covers were laid for 112 guests, the vice-chairs being taken on the right hand table by the S.W., Bro. James Robertson, Britannia Lodge, 33; on the left hand table by the J.W., Bro. H. G. Martin (ex-Mayor of St. Albans), P.M. 404, P. Prov. J.G.W. Herts; at the centre table by the Treasurer, Bro. G. Smith, P.M. 732, P.P.G. Purst. Sussex. When the serious business of doing justice to the excellent viands set before the brethren was accomplished, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, and the intervals between the toasts and the replies were enlivened with some admirable vocal music by the professional brethren present. Bro. Kuhe, P.G. Org. England, also favoured the company with a brilliant recital on the pianoforte.

The Chairman: Brethren, it is customary in all English gatherings that the first toast should be one of respect to the Sovereign of the country, and I have, therefore, to commence the toasts of this evening with "The Queen and the Craft." This toast, which is always welcome, I now ask you to honour.

The Chairman: The next toast is that of "The Prince of Wales, the M.W.G.M.," and I can assure you, from my own personal knowledge of the Prince of Wales, that though he has so many claims upon his time, he insists in signing all the warrants; that is a matter of some importance. From a knowledge of his business qualifications, which are exhibited in other matters, I wonder sometimes how His Royal Highness gets through all the business he undertakes. Since he has been Grand Master of Freemasons his example has increased the Order to a large extent; and if it continues to be what it is at present, it will become one of the most influential as it is now one of the most interesting institutions of the country. I, therefore, give you "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales."

The Chairman: Brethren, I claim your attention to the third toast on the list, which is a very important one, and includes all the working staff of Grand Lodge. I propose "The R.W. the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the Officers of Grand Lodge, Present and Past." Those who are in the habit of attending Grand Lodge and the various Committees held at Grand Lodge offices know very well that the executive of English Freemasonry embraces a large number of men. The manner in which they perform their duties is admirable. We hear very little if anything of serious matters being brought before the Board of General Purposes, which is the most important Committee of Grand Lodge. And then, again, the finances of this grand and wealthy Order! The Fund of Benevolence is some £50,000, which is being added to week by week. And I may remind you that during the last two years Sussex has had reason to be glad that there is such a fund. In the case of the daughter of an old Brighton Mason they voted her £100; and their answer to another case was a vote of £75. There is then, you may be sure, a large amount of work to be transacted at Grand Lodge, but it is sure to be done well while we have such men as the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale assisting the Grand Master. I shall couple with this toast the name of Bro. Kuhe, Past Grand Organist, and also Bro. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary (and I regret that my revered friend Bro. John Hervey is not in sufficiently good health to make the journey so as to be here himself). I shall also couple with the toast the name of another Past Officer, Bro. Marriott, G.C., Past Grand Steward.

Bro. Kuhe said that it often devolved on him to return thanks for this toast, because he was the only Grand Officer present, but he was glad to observe that was not the case that day. He took great interest in this lodge as an old inhabitant of Brighton, where he had resided something like thirty years. When he came there were only two lodges, but now Brighton was not behind any other town. It had been a matter of great regret that he had been unable to attend the ceremony that day performed, but he had been prevented by his professional avocations. He wished the lodge all good wishes for its prosperity, and thanked the brethren for the manner in which the toast had been received.

Bros. Buss and Marriott also replied shortly to this toast.

The Chairman: Brethren, I am going to take the liberty of amalgamating the next two toasts, because I want to introduce a toast that is not printed. I now propose "The Health of the R.W. Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M. of Sussex, the W. Bro. John H. Scott, D.P.G.M. of Sussex, and the Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge, Present and Past." I think we have ample evidence that the Prov. Grand Master is a man fitted to occupy the position of king or head of Freemasonry in Sussex. I should like to ask this company whether they ever knew a Prov. Grand Master who, in the short time that he has held the reins in Sussex, has done so much to consolidate Masonry, who, in fact, has made the tour of the whole province, and who, I think I am correct in saying, has visited every lodge in the province, from Chichester on the one hand, to distant Rye on the other. Notwithstanding that he is a member of Parliament (which has deprived us to day of his presence at this festive board) he is most active in performing his Masonic duties; and we hope that he may be spared to occupy for many years the proud position which he graces in the Province of Sussex. I now come to one whose name is familiar in our mouths as household words, Bro. John Scott. I am not given to over flatter any one, so that if any strong expressions come from me I think it will be believed that I think the subject warrants them. The many good and genial qualities which Bro. John Scott possesses have been placed at the service of Freemasonry throughout the Province of Sussex; he is ready to go everywhere and do anything. I have no doubt that if he were a visitor at a lodge, and they were hard up for an Inner Guard—that he would perform that office with the same goodwill that he has shown to-day. We can say of John Scott, that in Masonry he is a good all-round man; he will consecrate a lodge to-day, and willingly, if necessary, take the position of Inner Guard to-morrow; he possesses the true Freemason's heart and the esteem of every one in Sussex; and I am sure that every one will rejoice to think that he has obtained the provincial position that he occupies. I now come to the names of Bros. Freeman and Kidd, who understand well the important provincial offices they have undertaken, and their work is most ably performed, to the satisfaction of the province. I am entitled to include in this toast our Bro. the Rev. R. Adams, who has acted to-day, for the first time, as Chaplain, and made on the occasion so admirable and impressive an address.

Bro. Scott: I will, in replying, endeavour to observe the words at the head of the list of toasts, that "brevity is the soul of wit," by making my reply a very short one. First, as to our Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Burrell; he is, as the song says, "the mighty conqueror of hearts." When he was installed Provincial Grand Master he said in this room that it was his intention to make himself acquainted with every lodge in the province, and, as has been already said, he has even now visited all but two of them. With regard to what you have been good enough to say of me, I am grateful for your kindness. I have worked diligently ever since I entered into Masonry. Bro. Freeman and I accompanied Sir Walter on all his visits except one each. I never dreamed that I should ever be deputed by the Grand Master of Sussex. Year after year rolled on, and at last it has come upon me. Let it be a lesson to young Masons to bide their time for the highest honours in the Craft. Let them not feel neglected, let them be diligent, and I will be bound that every one of them will at length realise his fondest hopes.

Bro. Freeman also acknowledged the compliment, and with regard to the work he had had in connection with the Atlingworth Lodge, said that Bro. Sabine had taken a great deal of the detail upon himself, and had thus reduced his work to a minimum.

Bro. Adams: I am sure you will all pity me, for I think it must be admitted that to feel flattered and yet too old to blush is a trial. Take my lot to-day also—to have to speak just after our D.P.G.M.—that has been my lot to-day. I have heard to-day that to do our best is something. I have tried to do my best, and the greatest compliment I could receive is to hear, as I did, that I have got out of a rut and have opened new ground. I hope I shall keep out of the rut. I was once resident in a place where I was afraid I was getting into a rut. I tried to break away from it, and at last I succeeded in getting out of the rut. I hope I shall be successful in helping Masonry in any way that I can.

Bro. Scott: It falls to my lot to propose the next toast. I am not sorry to learn that it is my duty; because I wish your W.M. good health and prosperity to the lodge. I think it a pleasure, and I do, accordingly, wish him and the lodge health and prosperity with all my heart. I cannot add to what I have said in the lodge. It is, I know, a source of gratification to Bro. Sabine that he has at length established a lodge at Brighton, and that its consecration has taken place on his birthday, and I am sure I wish him many happy returns of the day. With regard to the success of the Atlingworth Lodge, it is all very well to begin with a grand display, but success must depend upon those who are its members. "It's not in mortals to command success, but we'll do more—we'll deserve it." I take that as a very happy omen of what they intend to do, because, as I have said, success does very much depend upon those who have to carry on the affairs of the lodge. Therefore, I feel perfect confidence in calling upon you to drink success to the Atlingworth Lodge, and I also call upon you to drink "The Health of the Worshipful Master," wishing him many happy returns of the day.

The Chairman: Worshipful Deputy, Grand Master, and Brethren, I do not know that I can say much to you on this occasion in response to the toast that has been so kindly proposed by Bro. Scott, and responded to so heartily and unanimously by the brethren. I think, perhaps, that when in course of time I shall become the Past Master of this lodge I shall be able to speak to the point, but I think I should fail in doing it this year. But I am greatly indebted for the kindness I have received ever since the inception of this matter in January last from our friend and brother, Bro. Freeman, and others. From the first time that I laid the matter before them they seemed to take it to heart that those Masons living at Brighton who belonged to no other Brighton lodge should find a locus in quo in the Atlingworth Lodge; and I think you will agree with me that when you heard the petition for the new lodge was afloat and was to give strength to the lodges, and to bring under the Grand Lodge of Sussex men who were not directly under it, you felt that a good work was being attempted. None feel more than myself how arduous is the task I have undertaken, but it is not quite new to me, because Bro. Hervey four years ago consecrated a new lodge in Southwark, The Chaucer No. 1540, and installed me first Master of that lodge, and I have always striven to do my duty. I have invited my friend Bro. Walters, who initiated me into Freemasonry sixteen years ago, but unfortunately he had to leave at five o'clock. I am happy to say that I have seen myself to-day surrounded by an assembly of Masons of the provinces of a most influential and widely representative character. We had a serious business in choosing a name for the lodge, and went over a long list of proposed names. I think it was Bro. Scott who suggested the Manor of Atlingworth. I am not going to enter into a long story to give you an account of the Manor of Atlingworth; suffice it to say that it has the sanctity of antiquity about its foundation. I have no doubt it was formed when William the Norman came over to England. In returning you thanks for wishing me many happy returns of the day, and prosperity to this lodge, I may say you will give me credit for a good purpose, and that I shall endeavour in future as formerly to do my duty, and that at the end of my year of office you will say that the happiness of the brethren and the honour of Freemasonry was not committed to one who failed to do his duty.*

* Bro. Sabine was initiated in the Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73, in December, 1863 (this is a centenary lodge), and served the office of Master in 1868-9, and was presented with a gold jewel, and by the Brighton brethren of the lodge with a Past Master's collar and jewel. He was a founder of the Era Lodge, No. 1423, was first Treasurer and subsequently W.M., and at the end of his year of office he was presented with a Past Master's jewel and a very handsome three-bottle liqueur stand. He was a founder and first W.M. of the Chaucer Lodge, No. 1540, and at the end of his year of office he was presented by the lodge with a handsome epergne with four dishes

Bro. G. S. Godfree (Secretary of the lodge): Worshipful Master and Brethren, it is my privilege here this evening to introduce the toast of "The Visitors," which I shall do very briefly. I believe we have had this afternoon one of the largest congregations of visitors that a Brighton lodge has ever welcomed, come to do honour to the consecration of the Atlingworth Lodge; and I could not but think how overpowered with emotion our Worshipful Master must have felt when he heard the storm of "Hearty good wishes" that greeted him at the conclusion of to-day's ceremonies. I will not transgress the rule enjoining brevity, but will conclude by asking the brethren to drink "The Health of the Visitors," coupling with it the name of Bro. Dixon, P.M. 73, the Senior Past Master of Bro. Sabine's Mother Lodge.

This toast was replied to by Bro. Dixon, who, in the course of his remarks, alluded to the circumstance attending Bro. Sabine's (and three other gentlemen from Brighton) initiation sixteen years ago, and remarked how well his admirable conduct as a Mason had justified their acceptance of him.

Bro. Geo. Smith (Treasurer) proposed the toast "The Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institutions," which was responded to by Bro. Binckes, the worthy Secretary of the Boys' School.

The W.M. then introduced the toast, not on the list, to which he had referred earlier in the evening. It was "The Royal Brunswick Lodge," that being the lodge which had endorsed the Atlingworth petition, and with the toast he coupled "The Health of Bro. Benjamin Bennett, W.M. of the Brunswick Lodge."

Bro. Bennett having responded, the other toasts on the list, namely, "The W.M.'s of the Lodges of the Province," "The Officers of the Atlingworth Lodge," and the Tyler's toast, were severally proposed and duly honoured.

CONSECRATION OF ST. ANDREW'S LODGE, No. 1817.

Among the first Masonic duties that have fallen to the lot of the newly-appointed Grand Master of Essex (Lord Tenterden) is that of the consecration of the St. Andrew's Lodge, at Shoeburyness, which event took place on Tuesday, the 22nd inst., at the Cambridge Hotel, Shoeburyness. The ceremonies of the day commenced at two o'clock, at which time the R.W. Bro. Lord Tenterden opened the lodge, having previously appointed Bros. Wood and Shepherd as the Wardens, pro. tem.; with Bros. Pissey as I.G.; Wigram, D.P.G.M., as Chap.; Harris, Sec.

The Prov. G.M. first announced that he had received a telegram from Bro. Ralling, the Prov. G. Sec., announcing that, in consequence of the heavy rains, the train had been delayed, and made it impossible for him to attend the meeting.

The ceremony was then proceeded with, and in due course the Prov. G. Master called upon the Chaplain to deliver the oration.

Bro. Wigram, in the course of his remarks, said: I shall be brief in my remarks, but I trust they will be appropriate. You have, brethren, been already reminded that the event of to-day is one of great importance and solemnity. In my opinion there are two facts which lend themselves to making it so. The first, which points out the progress that Freemasonry is making in every part of the country, and especially in the Province of Essex, as evidenced from the fact that fourteen years ago, at the time of the consecration of the Priory Lodge, at Southend, there were but 1000 on the register of the Grand Lodge of England, while at the present time the number, as taken by this we are now constituting, is 1817, an increase of 817 lodges throughout the country. Of this number nine belong to our own district. Both these points to the rapid growth of Freemasonry, which was never more popular than at the present time. This great increase teaches us a most important lesson—that we should be careful how we act as Freemasons. It behoves us to be very careful in our behaviour, for a Mason should act as one in whom the world may repose confidence. We are to-day gathered together to consecrate a lodge where no lodge has ever and plateau; also by Bro. Walters with a Past Master's jewel. He has taken part in founding several other lodges. He was exalted in the Mount Lebanon Chapter, No. 73, and subsequently served the office of M.E.Z., and at the end of his year of office was presented with a P.Z.'s jewel set with diamonds. He was founder and first M.E.Z. of the Chaucer Chapter, No. 1540, and the Era Chapter, No. 1423, and was also founder, first S.E., and fourth M.E.Z. of the Yarborough Chapter, 811, Brighton, and has assisted to establish several other chapters. Bro. Sabine was advanced to the Mark Degree in the Southwark Lodge, No. 22, and served the office of Master, and on the completion of his year of office received a presentation jewel. He established the Royal Sussex Lodge, No. 75, Brighton, and served the office of Master, and at the end of his year of office the members presented Mrs. Sabine with a handsome locket, jewelled in diamonds and rubies. He was one of the founders of the Southdown Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 164, Hayward's Heath, was the principal agent in establishing the Mark Province of Sussex, and was the first Provincial Grand Mark Secretary. He has been appointed Grand Mark Steward, Grand Mark Asst. Dir. of Cir., Grand Mark Master Overseer, and was elected for several years on the General Board of Grand Mark Lodge. He was one of the original Stewards to establish the Mark Benevolent Annual Festival. Bro. Sabine has filled the office of Steward for the Girls' School, the Boys' School, and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution on many occasions, and is Vice-President of all. He is a Knight Templar, Knight of Malta, an 18°. He has been Prov. G.S.B. Middlesex, and the other day was appointed Prov. S.G.W. Middlesex.

been held before, and this fact alone will cause the inhabitants to watch attentively all whom they know are Freemasons, and, therefore, I hope you will do your best to keep up the credit of the Craft in the district, and remember the honour of Freemasonry in this part of Essex rests in your hands, and I hope it will remain as pure and un sullied as you will receive it this day from the hands of the Prov. Grand Master.

The remaining portion of the consecration ceremony was then completed, and the lodge resumed to the Second Degree, when Bro. Charles Eltham was presented as the W.M. elect for the benefit of installation.

The ceremony was performed by Bro. Lucking, who, on the re-admission of the brethren, called for the usual salutes.

The W.M. then appointed the following as officers for the year: Bro. George J. Glasscock, S.W.; James M. Farr, J.W.; Hall (after being duly proposed and unanimously elected by the lodge), Treas.; J. M. Harris (P.P. A.G.D. of C.), Sec.; F. Howell, S.D.; Rev. H. J. Hatch, J.D.; S. M. Walker, I.G. Bro. Whittingham was unanimously elected as Tyler, and duly installed as such. Bro. Lucking then delivered the addresses from the West and South, and the Prov. Grand Master that from the East. Four propositions for initiation were handed in, as were also the names of two brethren who wished to join the lodge.

Before closing the lodge the W.M. said: Brethren, I rise to thank our Provincial Grand Master for so kindly coming here this day, and I hope he will accept the position of honorary member of the lodge. I also hope that the brethren who have assisted him in the ceremonies of the day will accept a similar compliment from us.

Lord Tenterden, in reply, said: It is a very great pleasure for me to find that one of my first duties as Master of Freemasonry in Essex is to institute a new lodge, especially in this part of the country, with which I am so intimately connected. I accept with pleasure the position of honorary member you have so kindly offered me, and hope I may on some future occasion have the opportunity of visiting you as a regularly constituted and flourishing lodge.

Bro. Wigram then said: On behalf of the other officers of the province I thank you for the reception that has been accorded us. We join in wishing the lodge every prosperity, and feel especial pleasure in attending, especially as this is the first lodge which has been consecrated by our new Provincial Grand Master.

The W.M. then said: I wish to propose a vote of thanks to Bro. A. Lucking for having come and acted as Director of Ceremonies in the consecration of the lodge, and also for having installed me in my present position. It is the first opportunity I have had of witnessing the installation ceremony, and I am very much impressed with it.

Bro. Lucking, in acknowledgment, said: I did not require any thanks. I feel it a great honour to have to install the first Master of this the first lodge consecrated by our present Provincial Grand Master.

Nothing further offering, the W.M. proceeded to close the lodge.

The brethren afterwards adjourned to a spacious marquee, where dinner was served by the host in a creditable manner. The usual toasts followed. The first three were given very briefly, but none the less heartily. With the latter—"The Provincial Grand Master and the Officers of Grand Lodge"—was coupled the name of Bro. Matthew Clark, Grand Deacon, who, in reply, said: On behalf of the Grand Officers of England I tender my heartiest thanks. We all believe that they do their best for Masonry. My experience in the Grand Lodge convinces me that Freemasonry could not be under better management.

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Lord Tenterden, the Consecrating Officer of the day." He said: I now come to the fourth toast on the list, it is one which falls upon me as a most pleasing duty. I have most heartily to thank our Grand Master for coming down here to the consecration of our lodge. I think it a very great honour.

Lord Tenterden, on rising to respond, was received with the most hearty applause. He said: Brethren, I have to thank you, and I do so most sincerely, for the cordial reception you have given me. I look upon it, not only as a compliment to your Consecrating Officer, but also in my capacity as Master of your province. It is very reassuring to see so many present on this occasion, all of whom wish well for your lodge consecrated this day. Let us consider how that happy inauguration may best lead to the happy results which we hope will follow. If this lodge is to prosper, and I hope it will do so, and spread its influence all over the world, it will be necessary to have good work and good material. By good work I do not mean mere letter perfection—which, although very good in its way, is not all that is necessary—but heart perfection; that alone is the way by which you can impress the reality of our system on those who are initiated into our Order. We have to-day consecrated this lodge to the glory of God and the welfare of our fellow creatures, and thus do the officers of to-day and their successors undertake to further in every way in their power the interests of the Order. It is also necessary that you should have good material, or it will be labour thrown away. What we want is not that there should be a number of lodges or brethren in England, but that we should be able to boast of our solidity, and in order that we should be able to support in the future the lodges which may arise, we should be most careful in building them up. Therefore, in choosing your recruits you should choose stalwart men, men who will be able to support the dignity of the lodge. The lodge should always strive to be a model in its work, and in the selection of its members, so that when we hear of the lodge at Shoeburyness we shall hear of one that it is a credit to any one to belong to. In constituting a lodge we should look to the general welfare of mankind, and as we may perchance leave footprints on the sands of time, we should do good work in the present, so that those who come after may take it as a model.

The other toasts usual on such occasions followed in quick succession, interspersed by songs and glees, the brethren not leaving until a late hour.

Among those present were Bros. the Right Hon. Lord Tenterden, Prov. G. Master; S. R. Wigram, D.P.G.M.; A. F. Heaton, P.G. Chap.; A. Lucking, P.G. D. of C.; Thos. King, P.G.P.; Alfred Sturgeon, P.G.S.D.; E. E. Phillips, P.J.G.W. Somersetshire, P.G. Deacon Essex; F. B. Shepherd, P.P.S.G.W., P.P.G.C.; W. Pissey, P.P. J.G.W.; H. J. Sansom, P.G.J.D.; J. R. THE LONDON MASONIC CLUB.

Club life in London, from the palatial establishments of the West-end to the modest place of resort affected by the cultured but somewhat impecunious men about town, has been so often described, and its minutest details chronicled, that our readers will readily forgive our not introducing the subject of the London Masonic Club by a laboured and grandiloquent essay on clubs in general. The "London Correspondent" of small gossip, who dates his letters to provincial county papers from his "Club," has done enough, and more than enough, in that direction. Our business is somewhat more practical—that of calling attention to an institution which has been in existence only a comparatively short time it is true, but which bids fair to be a great boon to the brotherhood, both in London and the provinces. It would seem only a reasonable idea that the peculiar relations existing among the members of the Craft could be very properly utilised in the formation of a Masonic Club, after the model of the most successful establishments, and a year or two ago it was endeavoured to be put in practice.

Comparatively small but eligible premises in Queen Victoria-street were secured, and the scheme was launched. Owing to causes which need not be specified, but which might be termed errors of judgment, the too strictly limiting membership and admission to the club to Masons being among the gravest, it did not succeed so well as was expected, but in June of last year it was resuscitated and entirely re-organised, an excellent Committee was formed, Bro. Alderman Hadley being Chairman, with Bro. R. Dixon as Vice-Chairman, and under the judicious and painstaking management of the Hon. Secretary, Bro. F. Dobbin, the scheme was launched on what bids fair to be a prosperous future. As we have said, the building is not a large one, but if the club supplies a want in Masonry, there is no reason why the London Masonic Club should not rival the best and largest.

The interior arrangements include an excellent lodge room, which at present is used only by some half-dozen of the London lodges, but which we venture to think will be more generally sought after when it becomes better known by those lodges who prefer a meeting place of a private or semi-private character to the usual hotel accommodation. On the ground floor is a roomy luncheon or dining room, the appointments of which are tasteful and convenient, here luncheons and dinners are served throughout the day and evening, and under the management of Bro. Harrington, whose catering we can speak most highly of, this department is daily growing in favour. The first floor contains one or two private rooms where a brother visiting town may lunch or dine "en familie" with the greatest comfort, a reading and smoking room, and a capital billiard room containing two tables. Other rooms are ready to be devoted to the use of members as occasion may require.

We mentioned before that at first membership was confined entirely to Masons, and although it might be right theoretically, it was found not to work well in practice. Many members naturally thought that, although it was very pleasant and desirable to meet Masons only, it should not be considered a disqualification that a friend otherwise eligible was not a Mason. To retain the management in the hands of the Craft, and to preserve its Masonic character, the Committee of Management consists of Masons only, and all candidates for admission have to be proposed and seconded by members who are Masons, so that the control is practically in the hands of the Craft. At present the subscription is £5 5s. per annum for town members and £3 3s. for country, but after the present month it is proposed to charge an entrance fee of £2 2s., and after fifty more members have joined at this rate it will be raised to £5 5s. It should also be mentioned that the liability of members is limited to their subscription and entrance fee. Altogether we consider the Committee should be congratulated on the present position and future prospects of the club, and its extension is only a question of "management," which at present is deserving of the greatest praise.

The original autograph will of George Frederic Handel was sold by auction on Monday last by Messrs. Puttick and Simpson for £53, the purchaser being Mr. W. H. Cummings.

Bro. Iles, Prov. Grand Secretary, read the minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge, and the same were confirmed.

Bro. Iles then called over the roll of lodges in the province, when all were found to be well represented in the Provincial Grand Lodge.

The roll of the Provincial Grand Officers was then called over, when it was found that there were a few absentees whose absence was duly accounted for.

The Prov. Grand Secretary, read a letter from Bro. Alfred James Copland, resigning his office as Grand Treasurer for the Province of Herts.

Thanks to Bro. Copland were proposed by Bro. W. Wilson, G. Purs. England, which proposition was put by the Prov. G. Master, and carried unanimously, the Prov. Grand Master observing that he should not be doing his duty if he did not say that he concurred most heartily in the proposition, though there was no doubt that they had a most able substitute in Bro. Copland's successor.

Bro. T. S. Carter, P.P.G.S.D., P.M. 403, proposed Bro. Felix Sumner Knyvett, P.M. Felicity, P.G. Steward, as Prov. G. Treasurer, which, being seconded and put to the meeting, was carried with acclamation.

Bro. Knyvett thanked the Prov. Grand Lodge for the high honour they had just conferred upon him, and only hoped that he should deserve their approbation equally well with Bro. Copland.

Prov. G.M.: Brethren, in appointing the Grand Officers for the ensuing year I have to announce that I am about to appoint Bro. Iles as Deputy Provincial Grand Master. I must take the opportunity of thanking the outgoing Deputy Provincial Grand Master for his valuable services in the post he has occupied, in which he has been of great assistance to me.

The Director of Ceremonies, Bro. J. L. Mather, then read the patent under the hand of the Prov. G.M., constituting Bro. Iles Deputy Provincial Grand Master, who was then obligated in due form, and afterwards invested with the badges of office, amid the applause of Provincial Grand Lodge.

The following is the list of officers for the ensuing year:—

The Prov. Grand Sec. then read the report of the Board of Finance, which was received.

Bro. W. Wilson asked a question respecting the accounts, which was satisfactorily answered by the Prov. G. Sec.

Prov. G. Master: The next business is a notice of motion of Bro. Carter's.

Bro. Carter, Prov. J.G.W.: I rise, pursuant to a notice, to propose—"That the sum of twenty guineas be voted from the funds of Prov. Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls." No words of mine are required to recommend this motion; last year we took care of the boys, now, I think, we should take care of the girls.

The Prov. G. Sec. seconded the motion, with the addition of the words "and that the amount be placed on Bro. Carter's list," as I learn that it is his intention to go up as a Steward at the next festival. With that addition I second the motion. Carried unanimously.

Bro. J. Terry, P.P.J.G.W.: I rise to propose—"That the sum of ten pounds be voted to the Berkhamstead Lodge, towards defraying the expenses of entertaining Prov. Grand Lodge."

Seconded by Bro. Iles, and carried unanimously.

Bro. Carter, Prov. J.G.W.: I move "That the sum of ten guineas be voted from the funds of Prov. Grand Lodge to the West Herts Infirmary, at Hemel Hempstead." This is an excellent institution, and one the benefits of which are not confined to the inhabitants of Hempstead, and a great many poor people are benefited by it. I think, too, that Prov. Grand Lodge as it goes through the province should always leave these marks at some one of the local charities.

Seconded by Bro. W. Wilson, and carried unanimously.

Prov. Grand Master: As one of the Committee of the Infirmary, I beg to tender Provincial Grand Lodge my thanks for the donation.

Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Iles: I rise to move, "That, pursuant to the recommendation from the Board of Finance to Provincial Grand Lodge, the sum of twenty-five pounds be contributed to the fund being raised amongst the Masons of England for the restoration of the West Front of St. Alban's Abbey." This resolution was carefully considered by the Board of Finance at their meeting, and unanimously agreed to. I am, therefore, only the mouthpiece of the Committee when I propose this resolution. Most of you are aware of the steps that were taken at our last meeting. A great deal has been done since that time. A London Committee has been established; the Prince of Wales has become a patron of the Committee of the fund, and almost every one of the Provincial Grand Masters of England have allowed their names to appear. I think, therefore, that as a national object, which is being largely supported by Freemasons throughout England, it would ill become this Provincial Grand Lodge to withhold its support from this fund, but allow it to go about to other lodges in England that the Grand Lodge of the province in which the Abbey is situate was not supporting the fund. I will not detain you further, but commend the resolution to your consideration.

Prov. Grand Master: I rise to second this motion, and I do so with very great pleasure. I think it is our duty. We have made this appeal, which has been very well supported throughout the Craft at large, to restore the whole West Front, or, if that cannot be done, to restore one of the Western porches of the Abbey. A very interesting account has been prepared of the steps that have been taken to promote this object, which account you will no doubt have received through your lodges. I do not know whether Bro. Keyser, who has undertaken the post of Honorary Secretary to the fund, has any remarks to make, but I am sure that anything he may have to say will be listened to with interest.

Bro. C. E. Keyser, S.D. 404, said that he had hastily drawn up a few figures as to the amount of support received from the Province of Herts, which, up to the present time, was inconsiderable, and amounted only to £163. He believed that the delay on the part of some of the lodges was due to the fact that these lodges had their recess from March to September. He stated what expenses they had incurred for printing, &c., and said that the work of restoration could not be commenced until they had received a sum of £2000. He hoped that the Prov. Grand Lodge would vote the sum proposed in Bro. Iles' motion.

Bro. Copestick said he thought that very generally the brethren in the provincial lodges were in ignorance of the movement, and appealed to Bro. Keyser to send further particulars.

Bros. F. Young and Wilson said that the matter had been before their lodges, but had been deferred for further consideration, which they hoped would have a favourable result. It appeared that many members of provincial lodges were in ignorance of the movement, though the Secretaries had received full particulars; but it was explained that it was only possible for the Secretary to bring forward the matter in lodge, and such brethren as were absent would necessarily know nothing of the appeal.

The Prov. Grand Master put the motion, in doing which he reminded the brethren that this was not an appeal for large sums to be given by individuals, as the donation of any one brother was limited to £5. The Committee hoped to attain their object by small contributions from many, and not by large contributions from a few. Carried unanimously.

The Prov. G. Secretary moved the next resolution, "That the publication of the Provincial Calendar be continued." It required very few words, he said, to recommend this resolution to them. In the first year of its publication there was a large balance which Prov. G. Lodge had to make good; last year the balance against Prov. G. Lodge was only £2 7s., but this year there was a balance of 8s. 6d. on the profit side. He thought that this proved the Calendar was succeeding, and hoped Prov. G. Lodge would sanction its continuance.

The motion was seconded by Bro. Terry, and carried unanimously.

The Prov. G. Secretary announced that a new lodge, the Henry the Eighth Lodge, had been consecrated in the province during the past year.

The business being concluded, the Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed in ample form, and with solemn prayer.

The banquet was provided at the King's Arms Hotel, whither the brethren adjourned immediately after the closing of Grand Lodge, but by the time dinner was concluded there was not much space to get through the list of toasts, and the speeches were necessarily as brief as possible.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed from the chair, and warmly responded to—including "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M.," and "The M.W. the Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past." The latter was coupled with the name of Bro. Wilson, P.G. Purst., who briefly acknowledged the compliment.

Bro. J. Sedgwick, P.D.P.G.M.: I am in possession of the gavel at the present moment in order to bring to your notice the next toast on the list, and I feel it requires more power than I have to do justice to it. But I can say, also, that if I am wanting in language I am not wanting in intention, and it is with the greatest possible pleasure that I have to propose to you "The Health of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master." I am quite sure that the manner in which this toast is received will testify your appreciation of the good qualities of the Provincial Grand Master. For myself, I am greatly indebted to him for the honourable position in which he placed me for the last five years in this county, which has given me every opportunity I could desire. The talent and happy manner in which the Prov. Grand Master performs the duties of every office in which I have had the pleasure to see him are a bright example to everybody over whom he presides. I am sure we are all proud of our Provincial Grand Master, and trust that for many years he may continue to exercise over the province the same beneficent sway he has always held while he has held his present position.

The Chairman: Brethren, I feel really quite overcome with the very kind manner in which Bro. Sedgwick has proposed my health, and with the kind manner in which you have received it. If it gives you the same pleasure to belong to the Craft that it gives me to preside over it it is very gratifying. It gives me great pleasure to come among you, whether in Provincial Grand Lodge, or to one of the lodges to which I am a subscribing member, and in the neighbourhood where I have lived most of my life, and the lodge under whose banner this entertainment has been given; and I am sincerely glad to see that the province is increasing and flourishing. We have had an additional lodge formed in the province during the past year, and I think there is ample room for more, and I do not see that there is any reason why the only good lodges should be in big towns. I think a large lodge is a mistake; in a large lodge there is the danger of having coteries formed, and, therefore, I do not see why small lodges should not be persevered with. And, now, brethren, as it is getting near the time for our trains, and as trains wait for no man, I must ask to be allowed to pass on to the next toast on the list, which is "The Visitors," a toast which I might almost call the toast of the evening, with which I will couple the name of Bro. L'Estrange, P.M. 10.

Bro. L'Estrange returned thanks for the visitors, and the Chairman proceeded to propose "The Health of the Very Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers, Present and Past," which was responded to by Bros. Iles and Sedgwick.

Bro. Iles, Deputy P.G.M., then proposed "Success to the Masonic Charities," coupled with the name of Bro. Terry, the Secretary for the Masonic Benevolent Institution, who, in replying, pointed out that however successful the Masonic Institutions had been, though the three had collected £37,000 during the last year, yet it was pitiable to see the discrepancy between the number of candidates for admission and the number it was possible to elect.

The Chairman next proposed "The Lodges of the Province, coupled with the name of the W.M. of the Berkhamstead Lodge, Bro. Maddever," and Bro. Maddever having said a few words in reply, the Tyler's toast concluded the entertainment.

WENTWORTH LITTLE MEMORIAL.

A meeting of the Committee was held on Friday, the 18th inst. V.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creton, G. Treas., the Vice-President, presided, in the absence of Col. Burdett, the President, who was unable to attend.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read, the Treasurer, Bro. Buss, Asst. Grand Sec., read the list of subscriptions received since the last meeting. It was resolved to publish an amended list of subscriptions to the present date.

It was proposed, seconded, and carried that the monumental stone be placed over the grave—"the design to be selected by Mrs. Little and the executors, the cost not to exceed £35; the inscription to be submitted for the approval of the Chairman."

A discussion then ensued as to the disposal of the balance, it being the opinion of some of the members of the Committee that it should be handed to Mrs. Little direct.

It was agreed that the next meeting be held on the 10th of November, at the commencement of the London Masonic season, the President expressing a hope that all monies voted or promised be paid to the Treasurer before that date.

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

SATURDAY, JULY 26, 1879.

THE FRENCH ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE.

We are favoured by Bro. Clement with a long letter, from which we publish the following "extracts, which may interest our readers. Much of the letter relates to our wrongful appreciation of the Masonic position in France, which differs from that of Bro. Clement; but as we entirely dissent from Bro. Clement in this respect, we do not see that any good can ensue from reproducing merely controversial statements and personal understandings or misunderstandings, as the case may be. Bro. Clement seems to think that we mix up the two systems of the Grand Orient of France and the "Grand Lodge Centrale" of the Rite Eccossais; but that is not so. Having a strong view, and on good data, as to the real cause of most regrettable tendencies in French Freemasonry, the "fons et origo mali" of much deplorable agitation, we thought it well to sound a note of warning, lest our brethren of the "Rite Eccossais" should be inclined to follow suit in the most mistaken lead of the Grand Orient of France. Bro. Clement, however, denies that there is any tendency or wish to make organic changes. All he contends for is a reform of the system of administration and representations; we, therefore, are glad to set before our readers the salient points of his complaints and statements, though many of them will come we venture to think with great surprise as well upon the Craft readers of the Freemason, as upon many worthy members of the English Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. In the first place, Bro. Clement tells us that there are 4000 "active" members under the authority of the "Rite Eccossais Ancien et Accepté" in France. Of these, if we understand Bro. Clement's words correctly, (there seems to be no possible doubt on the subject), seventy-five members make up the Thirtieth, Thirty-first, Thirty-second, and Thirty-third Degrees; 370 members represent fifteen chapters from the Fourth to the Thirtieth Degrees; and 3655 members represent the seventy-five symbolical lodges. Now we confess that this is a statement of statistics very different from what we have been lead to understand represented the real facts of the case, and is, per se, in our opinion, a very startling and striking allegation. The French is so plain that we cannot have made a mistake, "75 lodges se composent de 3655 Macons." It seems, from Bro. Clement's statement, that the "Grande Loge Centrale" is thus composed. Each symbolical lodge (atelier) nominates a deputy to represent it, and these deputies form the "premiere section" called "symbolique." From the Fourth to the Eighteenth Degree each body, also called "atelier," we note, has also a deputy, and these deputies form the "seconde section," called "chapitrale." From the Nineteenth to the Thirty-third Degree each chapter names a deputy, and these deputies form a "troisieme section," called "des Hauts Grades." There appears to us to be some error here in the statistics of Bro. Clement, which we have reproduced carefully and literally from the French, for if such be the case, the symbolic lodges have clearly no cause of complaint, and are treated most considerately, inasmuch as though the "Rite Eccossais" is not a "Craft Body" in our sense of a "Craft Body," in the Centrale Grande Loge, the symbolic lodges have a decisive majority over the higher chapters. This says a good deal for the toleration and liberality of the High Grades in the French Rite Eccossais, and seems at once to take away from Bro. Clement any real cause of complaint or even dissatisfaction. But here comes in Bro. Clement's peculiar grievance, and which he considers urgently calls for reform. Side by side, as he says, with the central body, is the "Commission Administrative." This Administrative Commission is composed of fifteen members, of which number four are so "ex officio," the Eminent Grand Commander, the Lieutenant Grand Commander, the Grand Chancellor, and the Grand Treasurer, and eleven are elective. Four, for instance, are nominated by the members of the Thirtieth, Thirty-first, Thirty-second, and Thirty-third Degrees, two by the members of the Degrees from the Fourth to the Twenty-ninth, and two by the symbolical chapters. Bro. Clement complains that whereas the High Grades, according to him, consisting only of 445 members from the Fourth to the Thirty-third Degrees, nominate four members of the Commission, the members of the symbolical lodges, numbering 3655 members, only nominate two members of the Commission. This he considers a "crying injustice;" this is the burden which oppresses just now the members of the French Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and for which he invokes in moving words, though all too long and too highly seasoned for our pages, the justice and sympathy of English Masons, and finds fault with a recent leader of ours, which he states has been reprinted by authority, and dispersed with "prodigality." Now some questions occur to our mind, and some considerations, which we will deal with seriatim.

1. Is Bro. Clement quite correct in his figures? and if correct, must not such a disparity of representation exist from the very constitution of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite? According to his statement the symbolical lodges have already a decisive and controlling majority in the Grande Loge Centrale, but why are they to have it at all even there, much less in the administrative commission, we fail to see. Bro. Clement is clearly seeking, if his argument be sound, to make of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite in France a second Grand Orient, a pure system of Craft representation, whether officially or by delegation, and it is here, though not ourselves members of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, that we differ from him. The symbolical lodges are only at the best the abnormal characteristic of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, which is simply High Grade Masonry, from the Fourth to the Thirty-third Degree. And as by the very constitution of the Thirty-third Degree it is a supreme and sovereign body, it is impossible but that if its supreme and sovereign attributes are to be recognized and preserved, it must have a distinct preponderance in any "administrative commission." We venture to think that the present arrangement in the Grande Loge Centrale is very liberal, and in the administrative commission very fair, and it is certainly one of which the symbolical lodges have no right to complain, but rather every reason to be contented with. Nothing that Bro. Clement or those who agree with him can do can make of the Grande Loge Centrale a Craft Grand Lodge, and, above all, they cannot expect that as members of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, the symbolical lodges are to control the High Grade Chapters. In England, as properly, no symbolical lodges exist under the Ancient and Accepted Rite, nor could they be recognized as Craft lodges by the Grand Lodge, for the Ancient and Accepted Rite is alike in its organization, nomenclature, and teaching, simply and solely not a Craft body but a High Grade body. We repeat, therefore, that we do not see what real grievance our worthy Bro. Clement has to complain of, and we sincerely trust that this unwise agitation may cease, and that French Freemasonry, whether directed by the Grand Lodge Centrale or the Grand Orient, may now be left to itself, and enjoy a season of rest, and harmony, and peace. These constant agitations are very hard on the French Freemasons. We have no doubt that the majority of the Rite Eccossais in France will loyally support its "administrative authority," which seems to us to have every claim on the sympathies and approval of honest men and true Masons.

OUR ENGLISH CONSTITUTIONS.

By a communication which appeared in our last, from Bro. Broadley, from Tunis, the Lodge No. 1717, at Tunis, had determined to print in French, as well as in Italian, the bye-laws of the lodge, and certain extracts from our excellent "English Constitutions." We ventured to observe when we received a copy of the bye-laws and certain extracts from the "Constitutions," in Italian, that we highly approved of the work, as, in our opinion, it might do great good to Italian Freemasonry to know alike our wise regulations and truly tolerant system. We are pleased to learn that La Revista, the principal Italian Masonic organ, which, unfortunately, we do not see, though we know not why, is republishing the little work, which does such credit to Bro. Broadley and all concerned in its publication and production. If Bro. Broadley will add to his favours by sending the book to us in French, when ready, we will call attention to it in our columns. For of this one thing we are persuaded, that the more our English Constitutions are known, the more they will be appreciated by all true Masons, and we should like very much to think that, translated into other languages, they might yet become a rallying point for many foreign Grand Lodges, which, unfortunately, relying on crude notions and non-expert Masons, have codes of laws which are not calculated either to advance the prestige of Masonry or to diffuse true Masonic principles in the various quarters of the habitable world. So we heartily commend Bro. Broadley's work, and that of the Lodge 1717 at Tunis.

CHARITY REFORM.

We have read our worthy Bro. P.G.C. Simpson's letter with much attention, but, though we think it right to notice it out of respect to him and the cause it relates to, we find little to find fault with and less to answer. Our good brother rather—we say it in all friendliness—evades the point of dispute between us. He talks of "abuses," many and flagrant; we say we know of none, really and truly, worth calling "abuses," meeting him on his own ground and great point, "the exchange of votes." He says we have misrepresented his views, and as he has said this before we again ask him to restate them clearly, for they are now in a certain state of muddle and misconception. If we understand his various speeches and letters, Bro. Simpson finds fault almost entirely with the administration of the Charities on the ground of the "exchange of votes," which he has said, over and over again, leads to "canvassing," and to "cards," to "expense," and to "corruption," and to the "hardship of poor candidates," and the "selection of not the most deserving cases;" that "interest," and not "merit," becomes the characteristics of all such Charities where the present system of "exchange of votes" prevails. Now, we ask Bro. Simpson, distinctly, and once for all, without any "word splitting," to tell us how he proposes to deal with our Masonic votes. They represent now many, many thousands of voters at each election. They are held by the provinces and metropolis in round numbers, in almost equal proportion, highly to the credit of the metropolitan brethren, and are equivalent now to a very large sum of money paid on the faith of certain rules and regulations. If exchanges and Committees are to cease, how are all these votes to be sent to London? and through what channel or channels? Through "the Central Committee," as is proposed by some? or "direct to the Secretaries," as it is advocated by others? Or has Bro. Simpson a new method of his own? For remember, as Masons, we are practical and sensible men, and wish our Charities to be governed, not only on benevolent but business principles. One great good of the Provincial Charity Committees and the Metropolitan Association is, that the expenses and cards are reduced to a minimum for candidates, and that all cases are carefully scrutinized, and the strongest cases, as a rule, selected. But, as we pointed out last week, the only little weakness that we are aware of is in the "original selection of candidates," and how that is to be improved is certainly not affected by Bro. Simpson's views, because, by our rules, such selection is made by the General Committee. The selection might be made by a Sub-Committee, no doubt, but we are not sure the change would please the Subscribers, since the General Committee is an "open court" where objections can be made and are heard. No doubt a Sub-Committee would go deeper into the merits of each case, and weigh each case carefully, and though we are ourselves favourable to a Sub-Committee of selection, we believe that the general feeling of the subscribers leans to the present arrangement. Bro. Simpson's argument that the Provincial Charities Committees have arisen from dissatisfaction with the present state of things, he must excuse us for saying, is simply unhistorical, and not a little absurd, begging his pardon. The provincial system of Charity Committees began in 1860 and 1861, and was simply an effort to obtain the benefit of local meritorious efforts for the Charities for distressing and worthy local cases. The charity reform movement, such as it is, is the creation of not ten years. The provinces, on the contrary, are quite satisfied with the present system, and would be great losers by any other. We do ask our worthy brother, the P.G.C., and others to leave our excellent Masonic Charities alone, and to allow them to pursue the "even tenour of their way," diffusing blessings and help to many, and constituting the ornament and the pride of our warm-hearted and charitable brotherhood. There is, we believe, but one feeling amongst our kindly brotherhood, excepting one or two crotchety persons, and amongst all who really understand the question, to resist idle changes and worthless reforms, which will weaken and not strengthen, which will undermine and not prop up, which will deteriorate and not improve our admirable and excellent Charitable Institutions.

PROFESSED EXPOSURES OF FREEMASONRY.

Truth, with its euphonious and affecting name, is well known, probably, to many of our readers, and we need say no more about it than that it is a weekly paper, published every Thursday, whose editor is Mr. Labouchere—see recent trials "passim." In its issue of Thursday, July 17th, it professes to give a complete and succinct explanation of the "mysteries" of Freemasonry, which it elegantly terms "mummies," both in the Three Degrees and the Royal Arch. We were very much amused when scanning the columns of Truth to note that this modern "Mustagogos" did not disdain to have recourse to older and worthless impugnors of Freemasonry; nay, that he had even ventured to "crib" a "wrinkle" from the infallible Pichard, the honest-minded Carlisle, and the suffering and injured Morgan. Indeed, we only see in it an olden weapon, refurbished with the modern appliances and startling brilliancy of Truth. Those of our brethren who read Truth for July 17th will have probably laughed heartily at this obsolete and absurd attack, while the non-Masonic world will give no more credence to it than they did to similar notable productions in bygone years. For it is a curious "factor" in the history of Freemasonry, explain it as we will, that neither interesting "confessions" nor abusive "exposures" have done any harm to the Order. It has, on the contrary, gained strength from every assault, found vitality in every blow. One passage in Truth, and only one, requires notice by us; as for the rest of the attack it may be safely left to the good sense and loyal feeling of the community at large. The passage is this: "I am not myself a Freemason, but I have often amused myself by passing for one." Despite the great authority of Truth, whose motto always most properly is "Magna est veritas et prevalebit," we beg most respectfully to demur to such a statement, if its words are properly understood by us. It is just possible, indeed, that in that eclectic and august circle in which the writer of Truth always moves, as we know, he may have amused himself and his friends—like those of Mr. Magnus, easily amused—with passing himself off as a Freemason, but that he ever did so in a lodge or among Freemasons we utterly deny. If such be really the meaning of Truth, as we just said, we should like to know the lodge where, and the meeting when, this interesting episode took place, as, if it took place, it says a good deal, does it not, for the "assurance" of the writer in Truth, be he who he may, on the one side—it says not a little "per contra" for the weakness and carelessness of our brethren on the other? Yes, verily, my masters. So we await with much interest the "denouement" of this last ecstatic utterance of Truth. We note, as an amusing commentary on the above, that the same writer who professes that he often passed for a Freemason also assures his readers in the same number that he entered a harem, disguised as a homœopathic doctor, and cured an interesting patient with a "few globules" in a "silver spoon." Risum tenentis fratres et amici.

THE PERILS OF TABLE TALK.

A very curious case is reported in the Times, of Thursday fortnight, which, as it seriously affects the character, and privacy, and liberty, and comfort of every dinner table, deserves, as it seems to us, our very attentive consideration. We allude to the case of "Whitehead versus Westropp and wife," before the Lord Chief Justice, at Westminster. It seems that at a dinner two gentlemen found their fair neighbour, Mrs. Westropp, so "conformable" and so agreeable that they talked across her, until noticing her husband's frowns she "strained herself up," whatever that may mean. During this agreeable interlude several very jocular remarks were passed, and the conversation became of a very light and airy character. No doubt, the dinner was good, and the wines were "what they should be," and given an agreeable companion in "juxtaposition," we have all the needful ingredients for a very pleasant and enjoyable dinner. The "punctilious" husband, however, as the Lord Chief Justice appositely styled him, took it into his head that the conversation "across his wife" and "to his wife" was something very improper indeed, and having heard, no doubt, from his wife and slightly coloured account of the festive assertions of her two amiable adjuncts, he hastily and excitedly came to the conclusion that such jokes were not the "correct card," that his wife had been insulted, and that the conversation itself, especially of the plaintiff, was libellous to a third person. Why the husband should assume all this to be the case does not quite clearly appear, unless we suppose that his wife was in earnest when she said she disapproved of such a style of conversation. Unlike some we have known, the most cheery and the most guileless, and yet the most proper of women, they could smile at a quiet joke, and laugh out at a good story, as well as the most uproarious and least reticent of us all. Accordingly, like irate husbands in general, this aggrieved individual wrote to Mr. Whitehead, asking for an apology—and "instantly too." Outraged propriety required an immediate and effective "amende honorable." The reply to this, in our opinion, needlessly angry letter and unreasonable request, was a calm statement that the dinner conversation was really and truly only a dinner conversation, free, careless, and, perhaps, a little expansive, but not meant to be repeated, much less complained of or apologised for. But the still indignant husband once more "joined issue" with this jocose doctor, for it seems Mr. Whitehead is a medical man, who is equally ready to write a prescription or make a joke. Failing an apology, he added a threat, namely, that under "such circumstances" he should "be under the necessity of having recourse to such measures as will seriously affect your character as a gentleman and a doctor." These measures, which consisted of conversations to third persons in the neighbourhood of Ventnor, where the plaintiff practised, were the subject of the present action. We need hardly point out to our readers how detrimental to a medical man would be allegations and insinuations as to his free and easy manners and his relaxed conversation, as well as an amiable habit of repetition and scandal. So Mr. Whitehead brings an action against Westropp and wife and obtains a farthing damage. We read that the Lord Chief Justice said he should "mark his sense of what the verdict should have been by giving the plaintiff the costs of the action." This resolution of the Lord Chief Justice will mulct Mr. Westropp in a considerable sense, and, let us hope, be a warning to many others who forget that conversation at a dinner table is meant to be alike free and confidential; in that none of us would, probably, like the Town Crier, to announce at the street corner all the nonsense that we sometimes talk in the unrestrained confidence and gaiety of that "magna charta" of Britons, the hour of dinner. If we were all "called over the coals" for all the "light airy nothings" fair gay, reckless speeches we have made to some and dangerous daughter of Eve, sitting an "unclothed galaxy" by our side, we fear our reckoning would be heavy; we are inclined to think that, perhaps, even the wife of our bosom might resent that soft speech or that soft admission we made to that fascinating widow or that captivating young wife, or that most pleasant damsel. Clearly the Lord Chief Justice is right in seeking to uphold the British dinner table, free in all its surroundings, free in all its harmless and customary expansion of soul and sentiment. We trust that we have heard the last of similar mistaken proceedings of such punctilious husbands, or of such uncharitable imputations of motives which were never avowed and of words which were never spoken. Even if they were what could it signify? They were simply a "privileged communication," and so it will be found to be properly laid down in the "new code," otherwise good-bye to the charms of a pleasant companion, adieu to the agreeabilities of a good dinner, "farewell, a long farewell," to all that social liberty of speech and pleasant gossip, which rewards us after the trials, and troubles, and cares of the day, amidst clever women and companionable men, with the "attic salt" of gay banter and kindly wit, all, in fact, that constitutes the life and charm of English society.

PROFESSED EXPOSURES OF FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Editor of Truth assures his readers that he has often "amused" himself by passing for a Freemason.

No doubt this is easy enough. I knew a man who passed for a Church clergyman by opening a chapel in which he used the Church service, and for a Master of Arts of Cambridge by the simple expedient of wearing a Master's hood. If a man, whom you suppose to be a man of honour and a gentleman, passes for what he is not, you are likely to believe him until you find him out. Quite enough is known about Freemasonry to enable an unscrupulous man to impose upon the unwary. The names of the officers of the lodge are no secret, and it is very easy to talk about squares, levels, and perpendiculars.

But a word of caution may be addressed to Masons who, unless they really learn their system, may possibly betray their trust. Masons may well afford to laugh at the pretended revelations of the Editor of Truth. But I own that I have sometimes felt that there was a little risk in the free admission to our lodges of brethren "vouched for." I venture to suggest that no stranger should be admitted to a lodge unless previously examined and approved. I knew an adventurer and a man of good address and unbounded self-confidence, who, as I afterwards found out, was quite unscrupulous enough to give a coherent account of his becoming a Mason, and excuse defects on the score of being rusty. I know a Mason of good standing who has forgotten the entire system. Last year in travelling I met a man whom I afterwards found to be a Mason, who failed to recognize me as one, not from ignorance, but from caution. This is safer and better than allowing oneself to "amuse" those who pretend to be what they are not.

Yours fraternally,

S. D.

CAGLIOSTRO.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

Since I read Bro. Yarker's letter I have looked into "Joseph Balsamo," and find, of course, (as my recollection of a book, read years ago, seemed to tell me), that Dumas represents Cagliostro both as a charlatan and an Illuminé, in neither of which attributes can he have anything to do with Freemasonry.

When Bro. Yarker says that he thinks Dumas represents Cagliostro in his "true character," what does he mean? what can he mean (with all possible respect to him)? That Cagliostro, for his own purposes, may have been made an Illuminé is possible, but, as I have often said, "Illuminism" and Freemasonry are as "far as the Poles asunder." "Illuminism" is the product of a Roman Catholic Republican, taking the organization of Freemasonry as its basis, though Weishaupt was an Illuminé before he became a Freemason, and this, as I have often taken occasion to say, is a fact worth remembering. For thus it is that we actually owe to a Roman Catholic professor of Canon Law, who was also believed to be a Jesuit—the most dangerous, and destructive, and secret, and revolutionary association the world has ever seen, the precursor of all similar bodies in the world even now. But of such things Freemasonry knows nothing, and all such associations, be they what they may, Freemasonry openly repudiates.

I do hope we have heard the end of any attempts to bolster up the nonsense of Cagliostro's so-called Egyptian Rite, and that we may leave all such rubbish—"Positively rubbish, my dear sir"—to those who prefer legends to history and fiction to fact.

Yours fraternally, dear Bro. Kenning,

THE EDITOR OF YOUR CYCLOPEDIA.

LODGE FUNDS AND PAST MASTERS' JEWELS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think the brother signing himself J.W. in your issue of last week should know better than to uphold the expenditure of lodge funds for picnics, as "a custom very much in vogue;" therefore, to my mind, all the less astonishment, that a brother such as H. S. Alpess should see that the evil was growing to such an extent that it required rigorous treatment. All said in J.W.'s letter would be very commendable, if they did but obtain their enjoyment at their own individual expenses. For no one of a social disposition, which, I trust, most Masons are, would think of condemning such pleasant gatherings of Masons with their lady relatives and friends.

I should like to say a word more about the presentation of lodge jewels, as I might be understood to condemn them in toto—such is not the case. If any member of a lodge on passing the chair is to receive a Past Master's jewel, where is the distinguished honour of possessing it? I say, only bestow one when a W.M. has had an extra arduous year of office, or has done something especially to promote the welfare of his lodge, or has given long service to the lodge; and even then let it be paid for by the brethren subscribing among themselves, as other testimonials are usually obtained. Then it would be a mark of real appreciation. It is so easy to spend or vote away money which is not ours personally, and, therefore, I fail to see the honour attached to the possession of jewels obtained in this manner; consequently, am one who would like to see the annual presentation of a Past Master's jewel done away with.

Whenever lodge funds are used for a presentation, let it be to purchase a Life Governorship to one of our Institutions in the name of the party whom the lodge sees fit to honour, then there would be no misappropriation of funds.

I remain, very fraternally, yours,

A NATIVE OF LIVERPOOL.

"Tickets may be had at the following Places, viz. at the Braund's Head, New Bond-street; the Shakespeare's Head, Little Marlborough-street; the Turk's Head, Greek-Street, Soho; the Standard Tavern, Leicester-Fields; the Shakespeare's Head, Covent-Garden, Forrest's Coffee House, Charing-Cross; Mr. Moody's, Sword Cutler, near Temple-Bar; the King's Arms in the Strand; Mr. Atkins's, Stationer, at the Queen's Head in Cheapside; Mr. Cole, his Majesty's Whip-maker, in West-Smithfield; the Swan and Rummer, in Finch Lane; the Swan upon Fish-street Hill; the Fountain in the Borough; the Theatre Tavern, Goodman's Fields; the Fountain on Snow-Hill; the Mourning Bush, at Aldersgate; the Rummer in Queen-street, Cheapside; and at Mr. Stephenson's, Glover, opposite Exeter-Exchange in the Strand.

"N.B. Those Brethren who intend to go in the Grand Procession, are desired to meet at the Right Honourable the Earl of Daruley's, Grand Master elect, at his Lordship's House in Pall-Mall, at Twelve o'Clock at Noon precisely; thence to proceed in Coaches or Chariots to the Hall as above-mentioned.

"No Hackney Coaches to be admitted in the Cavalcade, nor any Brother into the Hall unclouted or arm'd."

I think it right to mention for the information of Bro. Hughan and others, that by a communication with my friend the Rev. J. E. A. Fenwick there exists in the library of the late Sir Thomas Phillips, at Thirlestane House, Cheltenham, a duplicate copy of Mr. Wilson's MS. Both copies, Mr. Fenwick tells me, seem written "about the same" time, and are "verbatim et literatim" the same in every other respect. So this gives us two copies of one MS. originally no doubt belonging to lodges, and I have myself no doubt that all lodges had originally a roll, or MS. copy of the legend, and that the "transcripts" still existing were made from the original "rolls."

HUGHAN'S MASONIC REGISTER OF MEDALS AND LODGES.

FREEMASONS' HALL MEDAL, A.D. 1780.

The medal of silver, and bearing the year 1780, to which I have alluded in the Masonic Register, has been the source of much correspondence, for it seems that some lodges having the privilege to wear it (in the person of their W.M. for the time being) have lost the medal, and so are unable to exercise the privilege. One lodge I know of, distinguished by the Grand Lodge thus to have the Freemasons' Hall medal of A.D. 1780 appended to the Master's jewel (between the arms of the square), though, unfortunately, without the medal, has the deficiency supplied by using one formerly belonging to a lodge which has become defunct. The members generally, however, consider it to be the veritable medal presented by the Grand Lodge, and as the only difference to be detected is in the number engraved thereon, I have decided to let the brethren be contented accordingly. Another lodge, however, has not been so fortunate, for it has been through my enquiries in preparing the "Register of Masonic Medals and Lodges" (Illustrated) that the members knew of their privilege as one of the contributors to the Freemasons' Hall loan, A.D. 1779—1790, and now, alas, after the most careful search, and every enquiry possible of the old members, not one can tell aught of the whereabouts of the medal, and, undoubtedly, it is lost. Should any brother have one of these medals, once the property either of one of the lodges or individual subscribers, I shall be exceedingly glad if they would kindly spare it—at a price to be agreed—for the lodge in question, and the members would be delighted beyond measure if able to see one of the medals again in use in their lodge, after an absence at least of half-a-century. The loss is not likely to occur again.

THE "BRITISH LODGE," No. 8, LONDON.

In the work already alluded to, I state that the jewels of the British Lodge, No. 8, are of gold or silver gilt, one other lodge only being so distinguished, but I am unable to say why the privilege was granted. One of the best informed members of the lodge, and, certainly, possessing most favourable opportunities to obtain such information, tells me that on a certain occasion the Grand Lodge jewels were missing, and the British Lodge, having sent theirs for the use of the Grand Lodge, they were gilded for the purpose, and, on being returned, the necessary authority was given for them to be so used for the future. I should like to know as to this.

WILLIAM J. HUGHAN.

FREEMASONRY IN ESSEX.

I thank Bro. Hughan for his complimentary remarks on my article descriptive of Freemasonry in Essex, and equally with him am I alive to the great importance of accuracy. Unfortunately, there were some typographical errors in this particular sketch, and, as they occurred mostly in the figures, they were of more moment than such errors generally are. The blame for these, I fear, I must take to myself in not having overlooked the proof, as no one but the writer of such an article would be able to verify the dates; or, at all events, in order to do so the reader and sub-editor, entrusted with the duty of looking over the proof, would require to have at hand the materials from which it was compiled, and the necessary comparisons would occupy a very long time. In any future sketches of a like character which may appear in the Freemason I will take care not to be guilty of the same oversight. However, my object in drawing attention to what appeared to me, and would probably have appeared to any one in my position, a discrepancy between Bros. Hughan and Gould has been in one case gained through the courteous explanation of the former. Some time between the publication of the last ante-Union and first post-Union Calendars—if I understand Bro. Hughan rightly—the Well-Disposed Lodge, No. 28, of Waltham Abbey, migrated to Kensington Palace, changed its title to the Alpha Lodge, and died some time between 1814 and 1832. This is the one additional link needed in order to complete the tracing of the lodge, No. 76, "White Bear, in King-street," Golden-square, from its foundation in 1730—1732, was obviously an error, as I mention 1730 as the year of its birth in another part of my article—to its disappearance from the roll some time between 1814 and 1832. As regards Lodge No. 214, I mentioned especially the fact of its migration from Romford to Brentwood. I said: "It was still at Romford when the Grand Lodge Calendar for 1877 was issued, but in the course of that year it appears to have migrated to its present quarters at Brentwood," that is, in the year that elapsed between the issue of the 1877 and 1878 Calendars. The fact of "its migration" from Essex to Middlesex having taken place so very recently, justified my including it in my sketch of Freemasonry in the former county. In the case of Lodge St. Nicholas, No. 174, of Harwich, in 1793 list, as it does not figure in Bro. Hughan's Register as having been in the 1813 list, "Moderns," I conclude that it died out between 1793 and 1813; while in the case of Bro. Gould's lodge, No. 186, "Gothic Lodge, Foot Guards, Suttling House, Whitehall," of 1793, no doubt, some time between that year and 1814, it had become the No. 186, Gothic Lodge, Harwich, of Bro. Hughan.

A Craft lodge having been opened in the Three Degrees by the W.M. of the Friendship Lodge, No. 44, assisted by his officers, the R.W.P.G.M. and the Provincial Grand Officers entered, when the Prov. Grand Lodge was opened in due form and with solemn prayer at twenty minutes past three o'clock.

The roll of Prov. Grand Officers was called, and letters read, which were considered satisfactory, from the W. Bro. Rev. H. Cottam, Prov. Grand Asst. Chaplain, who was in Switzerland, and W. Bro. J. F. Hoffgaard, Prov. G.S. Deacon, who was in Denmark.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master then stated the special business of the meeting, and called upon Bro. J. A. Birch, P.P.G.J.W., to move the first resolution.

In proposing the resolution entrusted to him by the R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Birch gave a clear and succinct history of the fund in question, arising, as it did, from subscriptions and donations given for the purpose of maintaining and educating indigent female children, daughters of reduced and of deceased Freemasons of the province, in the year 1842, amounting in the first instance to £93 15s. This sum was increased from time to time by other donations, proceeds of two balls in 1851 and 1852, by sermons in 1850, and by interest to a sum of £276 4s. 3d. in 1854, and at the time it was handed over to the late Bros. Blair and Tunnah, as trustees, in June, 1864, amounted to the sum of £356 3s. 3d. This had been profitably invested, and at the present time Bro. J. Newton, as the representative and executor, was prepared to hand over a gross sum of £695 19s. 2d. He (Bro. Birch), therefore, proposed that—

"The funds subscribed about thirty years ago (together with the accumulations of the income thereof) for the purpose of maintaining and educating indigent female children of reduced and of deceased Freemasons of this province, be, upon the receipt of the same from the executors of the late Bro. John Tunnah, Provincial Grand Secretary, transferred, with the full consent of the Provincial Grand Lodge, to the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution, upon condition that the principal sum, being the total amount so received, be accepted by the said Institution, and separately invested, and the future income arising therefrom be applied exclusively to the maintenance and education of girls, who are eligible for the benefits of the said Institution under its rules. The said principal sum and future income arising therefrom to be regularly brought into the annual or other accounts of the said Institution."

Bro. W. O. Walker, Past Prov. G.J. Warden, had great pleasure in seconding the resolution so ably placed before them by Bro. Birch, and considered it unnecessary, after the lucid explanations just given, to trespass longer upon their time than cordially to second the resolution.

After a few remarks from the R.W. Prov. G. Master, the resolution was unanimously carried.

Bro. James A. Birch next proposed that a Committee, consisting of the R.W. Prov. G. Master, the Wor. Dep. Prov. G. Master, the Wor. Prov. G. Registrar, and the Past Prov. G. Registrars, with the Prov. G. Secretary, be appointed a Committee to receive the aforesaid amount of £695 19s. 2d., and to make arrangements for its investment.

Bro. George Parker Brockbank, P.P.G.D., seconded the proposition, which was also carried, and

W. Bro. Dr. Royle, P.P.G.D., then proposed that Bro. Newton's name should be added to the Committee, and at the request of the R.W. Prov. G. Master, Bro. Newton consented to act.

Bro. J. Hargreaves next proposed:

"That in consideration of the services rendered to Provincial Grand Lodge, and to evince its satisfaction with the conduct and ability of Bro. James Newton on all occasions while acting as Provincial Grand Secretary, pro tem., from the time of Bro. John Tunnah's decease to the appointment of W. Bro. John Chadwick, the sum of seventy-five pounds be granted to him from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge."

This was seconded by Bro. Thos. Grime, P.P.G. Asst. D. of C., and unanimously carried.

Bro. Jas. Newton, who had retired during the time the above proposition was being put and carried, now re-entered the lodge, and was received with applause by all present, and on the R.W. Prov. Grand Master informing him, in a few well-chosen words, of the slight return Provincial Grand Lodge had made him for his valuable services, Bro. Newton, in a neat speech, thanked the R.W.P.G. Master and the Provincial Grand Officers for the kind words and feeling evinced by them all towards himself.

It was also resolved "That the best thanks of the Prov. Grand Lodge be given to Bro. Newton for his services."

This being all the business, Provincial Grand Lodge was closed with due ceremony and with solemn prayer, at five o'clock.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

The Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of the province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight was held at the Town Hall, Cowes, on Thursday, the 17th inst., when there were present the M.W.P.G.M.M., Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal; V.W. Bro. W. Hickman, D.P.G.M.; Bros. Gen. Hooper, P.P.J.G.W.; R. L. Loveland, P.P.J.G.W.; T. Giles, P.P.G.M.O.; T. W. Faulkner, P.G. St. B. (England and Wales); J. E. Le Feuvre, P.G. Sec.; H. Cawte, P.P.G.S.O.; G. F. Lancaster, P.P.G.I. of W.; R. Osborne, P.G.J.D.; T. G. Pulley, P.G. St. B.; J. H. Askham, P.G.I.G.; T. Bebbam, P.G.S.D.; J. Blount Thomas, W.M. 63; J. G. Wheeler, W.M. 140; H. J. Guy, W.M. 2; W. Sellwood, S.W. 54; W. D. Parkhouse, Sec. 62; O. Hathausen, P.M. 140; G. A. Mursell, S.O. 140; W. C. Ross, J.O. 140; W. J. Hurst, S.D. 140; J. G. Jones, I.G. 140; G. Westall, S.D. 54; J. C. Ains, 140; R. J. Turney, I.G. 2; R. Sullivan, 140; J. Winship, I.G. 63; J. Getcliffe, 140; G. W. Munt, 140; H. Stone, 54, and others.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the accounts of the P.G.M. Lodge were produced by the auditors, showing a small balance in hand.

The P.G.M. Master having completed a second period of three years' service, the D.P.G.M. Master, Bro. Hickman, proposed that his name should be again submitted to the Grand Mark Master for re-appointment to the office. This was seconded by Gen. Hooper, P.P.G.J.W., and received the unanimous assent of the P.G. Lodge, there being a general feeling of satisfaction that the lodge should be presided over by a Past Grand Master of England who took such an interest in the degree.

It being the turn of this Prov. Grand Mark Lodge to nominate a brother as Grand Steward, Bro. Le Feuvre, P.G.M. Sec., proposed that the name of Bro. R. L. Loveland, P.P.G.J.W., should be forwarded to the Grand Master for such an appointment.

This was seconded by Bro. Parkhouse, and resolved on unanimously.

Some alterations in the bye-laws relating to the receipt and payment of moneys belonging to P.G.M. Lodge having been made, it became the melancholy duty of the P.G. Lodge to elect a successor to the present P.G.M. Treasurer, Bro. J. Lillywhite, of Portsmouth, who since his election last year had been attacked with serious illness, which under existing circumstances gave no prospect of recovery.

The D.P.G. Master proposed that Bro. R. L. Loveland should be elected Treasurer, and took the opportunity of drawing attention to the interest always taken by Bro. Loveland in the Order, and that the appointment would be peculiarly appropriate considering the connection of that brother with London, Ry'e, and the mainland.

Bro. G. T. Lancaster, P.P.G.I. of W., seconded the proposition, which was very cordially and unanimously carried.

The P.G. Secretary read an abstract of the returns of the lodges of the province, showing that they were in a fairly satisfactory state.

A vote of £5 5s. having been made to the Mark Benevolent Fund, and a very sincere expression of sympathy having been ordered to be sent by the P.G. Secretary to Mrs. Lillywhite on her husband's illness, the P.G. Master appointed his officers as follows:—

- Bro. W. Hickman, 63 Prov. D.P.G.M.M.
- " T. W. Faulkner, 140 Prov. S.G.W.
- " J. Blount Thomas, 63 Prov. J.G.W.
- " G. F. Lancaster, 2 Prov. G.M.O.
- " W. B. Rogers, 125 Prov. G.S.O.

- " W. D. Parkhouse, 62 Prov. G.I. of Wks.
- " C. B. Whitcomb, 2 Prov. G.D.C.
- " W. Sellwood, 54 Prov. G.A.D.C.
- " J. Winship, 63 Prov. G.S.B.
- " K. G. Westley, 63 Prov. G.O.
- " G. A. Mursell, 140 Prov. G.I.G.
- " R. J. Turney, 2 and H. Stone, 54 Prov. G. Stewards.
- " Watson Prov. G. Tyler.

The minute books of the lodges were then examined, giving occasion to a few "admonitions" on the part of the P.G. Master, after which an adjournment was made to the Fountain Hotel, where a very excellent dinner had been provided, and the brethren satisfied the wants of the inner man, whilst indulging in mutual congratulations on the success of the meeting, which the sun had favoured with its presence, making its appearance, it was said, for the first time this year.

FREEMASONRY IN SUFFOLK.

It was a pleasant task that devolved on us recently when we recorded the doings of our worthy Suffolk brethren in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled. Their chief and his deputy, who were both present, are deservedly popular, nor is their popularity confined to the province itself, while the energy and interest of the former in behalf of Freemasonry are illustrated by the fact of the number of lodges having about doubled itself in the eighteen years and upwards of his reign. This week our attention has been again directed eastward, for Wednesday was the day appointed for the consecration of the Royal Clarence Lodge, No. 1823, of Clare. The present week, therefore, would appear to offer a favourable opportunity for noting, as we did recently in the case of the adjoining Province of Essex, the progress of the Royal Art in Suffolk.

We may remark, in passing and in general terms, that from the very earliest times Freemasonry has found a welcome home in our Eastern counties. This is most appropriate, having regard to the important part which the East has always been called upon to play in things Masonic as in things mundane. At all events, even a cursory glance at the early authorised lists of English lodges will show that very few years had elapsed from the constitution of our London Grand Lodge ere the Craft established itself in Norfolk, and a little later on in Suffolk and Essex. Almost the earliest list yet extant contains a Norwich lodge, and reference to that for 1736 gives the date of its constitution as 1724, which is the first year when lodges holding under the Grand Lodge in London were established in the provinces. Moreover, Preston in his "Illustrations" mentions that during Lord Lovel's Grand Mastership an occasional lodge was specially convened at Houghton Hall, Norfolk, the seat of the then Prime Minister, Sir Robert Walpole, for the purpose of raising to the Third Degree Francis, Duke of Lorraine, subsequently Emperor of Germany, and Pelham, Duke of Newcastle, ancestor of more than one Provincial Grand Master bearing the same title. This is evidence that Masonry had firmly established itself in East Anglia. However, our present purpose is to follow up our recent sketch of Essex Masonry with a similar one of the Craft in Suffolk.

To Bury-St.-Edmunds belongs the honour of having been the first town in Suffolk to welcome the Royal Art, the list for 1732 containing two lodges, Nos. 78 and 81, which, further inquiry shows, had been established the year previous; while a third lodge was constituted the same year at Ipswich. By the renumbering of the lodges in 1740, the elder of the Bury lodges had passed away, but the junior, No. 81, became No. 71, and was not erased from the list till towards the end of the year 1754; a third Bury lodge, founded as No. 108, 15th December, 1732, meeting with the same fate in the same year. The Ipswich lodge No. 96 became No. 85 in 1740, but it also must have died out before 1756, as there is no trace of it in the list for the latter year. However, the same year which saw the extinction of the aforesaid Bury lodges witnessed the birth of a lodge at Lowestoft, this being No. 251, founded 29th October, 1754, which became No. 191 in 1756 and No. 151 in 1770, between which latter year and 1781 it passed away. On the 21st January, 1762, was founded Lodge No. 270, held at the Green Man, Ipswich, and this is the oldest Suffolk lodge now in existence, that is, the oldest lodge which has been continuously from its origin held within the limits of the county. This lodge became No. 214 in 1770, No. 173 in 1781, between which year and 1792 it took the name of the British Union, and was held at the Golden Lion. In 1792 it became No. 147, after the Union No. 180, No. 131 in 1832 and No. 114 in 1863. It is now held at the Freemasons' Hall in Ipswich, and has the honour of being the only purely Suffolk lodge, "Moderns," which can point to an apparently unbroken existence of 117 years.

Of the two lodges which precede this on the roll of Grand Lodge, No. 81, the Doric, of Woodbridge, held under the Ancients, and according to the information now for the first time published in Bro. Kenning's "Cosmo" was warranted in the year 1762. At the time of the Union it was No. 96, and was known as the Commercial Lodge, being held at Aldborough. It became No. 120 in 1814, No. 96 in 1832, and in 1863, as it is still, No. 81. The still older lodge, No. 71, the Unity, of Lowestoft, held under the "Moderns," was founded in 1747. Originally, however, it was a Norfolk lodge, being held in the first instance at the Bear, in the city of Norwich. It was No. 198 at the time of its constitution on the 9th of May, 1747. In 1756 it became No. 132, and No. 103 in 1770. In 1781 it was No. 83, and was held at the Queen's Head, Acle, in the same county. In 1792 it was renumbered as No. 76, and some time between that year and the Union it migrated to its present habitation, Lowestoft, for on the renumbering which followed that auspicious event it became No. 99, and was described as the Lodge of Unity, Lowestoft. In 1832 it became No. 84, and in 1863 No. 71, and is the premier lodge on the roll of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk.

There would seem to have been four other lodges which, if they were all now in existence, could boast of being upwards of a century old. The eldest of them was No. 238, was first held at the Mitre, Union-street, Westminster, and was founded on the 2nd March, 1754. This became No. 178 in 1756, No. 140 in 1770, when it was held at the Rose and Crown, Crown-street, No. 114 in 1781, and No. 104 in 1792. Between this last year and 1813 it migrated to Stowmarket, in Suffolk, for on the renumbering in 1814 it became No. 129, and was described as the Phoenix Lodge of that town. In 1832 it resumed its old Præ-Union number of No. 104, but, unfortunately, between that year and 1863 it has become extinct. The second of the four has been more fortunate, and is still flourishing, though it now hails from the county of Norfolk. This, however, is not to be wondered at, seeing that it was Norfolk born. It was founded on the 18th February, 1758, as No. 231, its first abode being at the Cock, in the parish of St. Mary, Norwich. It was No. 188 at the Flower in Hand, in the same parish, in 1770; in 1781, No. 153, at Johnson's Coffee House, in the same city; in 1792, No. 136, at the King's Head, Cottishall, Norfolk. In 1814 it was held at Bungay in Suffolk, and bore the style and title of No. 164, Lodge of Unanimity. It became No. 119 in 1832, and No. 102 in 1863, and is now held at North Walsham, in Norfolk. The third of this small group was the R. Edwin Lodge, of Bury St. Edmunds. This was founded in 1765 as No. 358, held at the Red Lion, Fakenham, Norfolk. It became No. 283 in 1770, and No. 226 in 1781, by which time it had migrated to Thetford, in the same county. In 1792 it is described as No. 103, the Royal Edwin Lodge, held at the Angel, Bury St. Edmunds. After the Union it was renumbered 238, but its existence had determined when the lodges were closed up in 1832. The last of them was the Royal Edmund Lodge, also of Bury St. Edmunds, where it was constituted as No. 437, in 1772. It became No. 345 in 1781, No. 284 in 1792, No. 360 in 1814, and No. 253 in 1832, since when it has passed away.

Of the other Præ-Union lodges, two, as will be seen, still flourish, though five were at different times constituted. The Lodge of Perfect Friendship, held as No. 479, at a private room in Ipswich, was founded in 1785, and became No. 389 in 1792. After the Union it retrograded to No. 480, and died subsequently before 1832. No. 528, founded as the Philanthropic Lodge, at the Bull, Melford, in 1788, became No. 437 in 1792, No. 501 in 1814, and No. 331 in 1832. It no longer exists. The Lodge of Prudence, No. 500, the Three Tuns, Halesworth, was founded in 1792. Its existence was of the briefest, as it had ceased working in 1813. No. 544 before the Union, namely, the Apollo Lodge, of Beccles, was founded in 1794, became No. 569 in 1814, No. 383 in 1832, No. 305 in 1863, and is still in working order, while the Lodge of Virtue and Silence, now No. 332, of Hadleigh, was founded as No. 622 in 1811, became No. 629 in 1814, No. 417 in 1832, and received the number it now bears in 1863. Thus, of the fifteen lodges of the Moderns which were founded in or migrated to this county, four are still on its roll, and one other has remigrated to Norfolk, where it still holds its own comfortably. Of the four lodges holding under the Ancients at the date of the Union, one dating from 1762 still flourishes, as we have shown already, while the same remark applies to another which was founded in 1797, and prior to the Union was No. 309, St. Luke, Ipswich. It became No. 393 in 1814, No. 272 in 1832, and No. 225 in 1863. Two other "Ancient" lodges have ceased, namely, No. 73, Abiff's Lodge, of Saxmundham, which was renumbered No. 97 in 1814, and No. 249, Prince Edwin's Lodge, of Woolbridge, which became No. 315 in 1814, and No. 222 in 1832. Thus, putting "Ancients" and "Moderns" together, there are in all six lodges now on the roll of Suffolk which were in existence at 1813, namely, two of the former and four of the latter.

The following are the fourteen lodges which complete the tale:—No. 376, Perfect Friendship, Ipswich, founded 1824, and No. 388, Prudence, Halesworth, in 1827, both dating from the Grand Mastership of the Duke of Sussex. No. 516, Phoenix, Stowmarket, of 1845; No. 555, Fidelity, Framlingham, of 1848; No. 929, Waveney, of Bungay, and No. 936, the Adair, of Aldborough, both of 1862; No. 959, the Prince of Wales, Ipswich, of 1863; No. 1008, Royal St. Edmunds, Bury St. Edmunds, of 1864, and No. 1224, Stour Valley, Sudbury, of 1868, were constituted during the Grand Mastership of the late Earl of Zetland. No. 1452, St. Margaret's, Lowestoft, received its warrant of constitution in 1873, when the Marquis of Ripon presided over the destinies of the Craft. The remaining four, No. 1592, Abbey, Bury St. Edmunds, 1875; No. 1631, St. Andrew's, Gorleston, 1876; No. 1663, Hartismere, Eye, 1877; and No. 1823, the Royal Clarence, of Clare, 1879, which was formally constituted on the 23rd inst., belong to the reign of our present Grand Master. Of these twenty lodges exactly one-half have been constituted since Lord Waveney was appointed, in the year 1860, to the Grand Mastership of the province. May the career of Freemasonry in this portion of East Anglia be as prosperous in the future as it has been in the past!

FREEMASONRY IN PORT ELIZABETH.

Regarded from a Masonic standpoint, the meeting of the lodge in this town on Friday, the 13th June, was of an important character, for while at the reunion were representatives from most of the inland towns, the gathering was most noteworthy from the presence of the newly-elected officers of the District Grand Lodge. In former years the latter was held in Cape Town, which in matters Masonic, as it has politically, proved not to be the most fitting place for government, and separation was the measure adopted by the lodges. The meetings since have been held in the Eastern Province, the first taking place in Graham's Town. The regular meeting was held on Thursday, the 12th June, and the movement with the object of entertaining the officers at a banquet here was warmly taken up by the lodges of Port Elizabeth, who were also supported by the Southern Cross Lodge of Uitenhage. The matter was entered upon with enthusiasm, and, where no pains or trouble were spared, it is almost superfluous to add that the result was highly successful. The affair took the form of a cold collation, which was spread in the banqueting room of the lodge, and about ninety members of the Craft attended. The tables looked bright and gay with the bouquets of camellias and other choice flowers contributed by Uitenhage, and interspersed with bunches of wild flowers, that added to the effect of the whole. Bro. C. T. W. Mouat, W.M. Lodge of Good Will, presided with characteristic efficiency and at his right sat the District Grand Master, Bro. Egan, and on his left the Deputy District Grand Master, Bro. Bain. Among the distinguished visitors present, and exclusive of the officers of the District Grand Lodge, in whose honour the banquet was given, were Bros. Simpson, W.M. Middleton, W.M. elect; and Past Masters W. Wedderburn, O. Lester, and Van der Broek, from Graham's Town; Dr. Arnhold, W.M. Graaf-Reinet; Johnson and Sissing, from King William's Town; and Bro. Austin, P.M. Cradock.

Bro. Mouat proposed the usual loyal toasts, in which he adverted to the fact that the loyalty of colonists had been heightened by the aid and sympathy so generously given in the time of need. He then proposed "Bro. C. J. Egan, R.W.D.G.M. of the Eastern Districts," and took advantage thus offered to say that he was sure the lodge would find in him a brother fully entitled and qualified for the high post to which he had been elevated. He would rule evenly, firmly, and justly, and the more the brethren knew of him in the higher degree would he be esteemed.

Bro. Egan, in response, said that his appointment had been to him a matter of surprise; but now that he had been raised to the high office which he held, his only wish was for the welfare of the Order. It was the first time that the District Grand Lodge had met in this town, but he hoped they would assemble here again. The present system was a great improvement on the old style. He also alluded to the useful measure just carried, providing for the education of orphan children of Masons and of children of Masons in distressed circumstances.

The President then proposed "Bro. S. Bain, W. Deputy G.M.," in suitable terms. The toast was most cordially received, and in response its recipient said that in accepting office he doubted whether his humble efforts would prove of much service. Nevertheless, he was glad indeed to be associated with Bro. Egan, who had the interest of Masonry always at heart. The educational measure which had been adopted was of the highest importance, and would last as long as Masonry in Port Elizabeth.

Bro. F. D. Deare, P.M., in proposing "The Newly-appointed Officers of the D.G. Lodge," remarked that he was glad to notice among them one so well known and respected as Bro. J. C. Kemsley, who had been selected to fill office as the District Grand Senior Warden. It also afforded him pleasure to see Bro. Madge in office. He believed that the establishment of the Grand Lodge in the Eastern Province would tend to the advance of Masonry. The District Grand Master had a most intimate knowledge of the rules, and with the management in his hands he believed Masonry would progress and many of its abuses disappear.

Bro. J. C. Kemsley, D.G.S.W., replied on behalf of the newly-elected officers, and said that the duties would be light with two such experienced officers as the District Grand Master and his Deputy, Bro. Bain. Their Secretary, also, was an experienced member of the Craft. The Masons of Port Elizabeth had taken a warm interest in the formation of the District Grand Lodge, which, though but recently formed, had already commenced work; and the educational scheme, he believed, would prove the pride and glory of Masonry. The movement was proof that if the lodges united their influence would extend far and wide. The Grand Lodge was what might be termed a peripatetic institution. A meeting had been held in Graham's Town, and now the second took place in Port Elizabeth; and the effect of their visits to different towns would be to infuse more spirit into Masonry in the Eastern Districts; and already a higher purpose had been laid hold of. He felt deeply the kindly words which had fallen from Bro. P.M. Deare, whose name had long been identified with the Lodge of Good Will, for he was one of its founders, and his interest in its welfare had never ceased.

"The Retiring Officers of the District Grand Lodge" were then proposed by Bro. Egan, the D.G.M., to which a suitable reply was made by Bro. O. Lester, P.D.G.S.W., who thanked them heartily for the kind and cordial manner in which the toast had been received.

"The W. Masters respectively of the Good Will, Good Hope, and Southern Cross" devolved upon Bro. Perks, D.G. Secretary, who spoke in warm terms of the hospitable reception the visitors had met with. Bayonians, however, were proverbial for their hospitality. He felt certain that the officers of the District Grand Lodge would combine to make it a success here. Suitable replies were made to this toast by Bros. Mouat, Mackay, and Smyth. The latter remarked that on behalf of Uitenhage the officers of the Southern Cross were glad to assist at the reception of the visitors, and as the sister lodge was so near it was deemed advisable to co-operate with the two lodges of Port Elizabeth, but Uitenhage would not yield to them in the heartiness of their welcome.

Bro. Mouat then proposed "Bro. Perks, the D.G. Secretary," and spoke in cordial terms of his zeal and enthusiasm in the welfare and progress of Masonry. To this Bro. Perks replied, and remarked that while he had life and health he would not fail to perform his duties to the best of his ability. He had always impressed upon his colleagues not to accept an office unless they intended properly to carry out the duties which devolved upon them. He accepted office in that spirit, and as he had behaved in the past so would he pursue the same course in the future.

Bro. H. W. Pearson, P.M., followed with "Our Visiting W. Masters," a toast which, he remarked, wanted no preface from him to welcome the visiting W. Masters, who had done them the honour of being present. Through those officers messages might be sent to their lodges of what had only recently been developed in the form of a District Grand Lodge. There was no man in the colony whom he esteemed more highly than Bro. Southey, but a multiplicity of duties prevented him from giving attention to the regular performance of those which were connected with the lodge. All his intentions were good, but it was impossible, with his multifarious distractions, to ensure the execution of his duties as an officer of the lodge. Separation had been rendered imperative, and now they had an excellent D.G.M. and experienced officers. A healthy rivalry would spring up between the lodges, and each would be emulous to build up the most charities and the most temples. Masonry had now, perhaps, struck root in an institution which would commend itself to the heart of every good Mason.

Bro. Dr. Arnhold, from Graaf-Reinet, replied, and stated that it was the first time he had been at the lodge. He had endeavoured before to come, but the duties of his profession had interfered. The rail, however, was bringing towns into closer connection with one another, and in the future greater facilities would be offered for visiting other lodges. They had witnessed in what worthy hands the duties of the newly-organised lodge had been placed, and each lodge would become a worthy link in the chain. He was almost sorry to say that Masonry in Graaf-Reinet had flagged—as all human institutions at times will do. Many members had gone to the war. A strong effort had now been made, and he trusted their lodge would become powerful. Gatherings similar to the one held that evening had a stimulating effect, and country lodges would assist in making a powerful stride in the work in which they were engaged.

Bro. Bain, D.D.G.M., then proposed "Our Visiting Brethren," and remarked that he hoped their visit would tend to cement the friendly feeling and sympathy which should exist in the province. All present would unite with him and echo that sentiment, for they had never had so much rank and influence as were present on that occasion. In this respect it far surpassed all previous gatherings. The brethren must feel gratified at the presence of so many visitors, for those reunions tended to cement and bind together the various lodges in the colony. In the name of the two local lodges, and also in that of the Southern Cross, which had heartily co-operated, he gave them a hearty welcome, and hoped that the facilities for travelling now offered by rail would induce them to come down more frequently to Port Elizabeth.

Bro. Leigh, from Cradock, who replied on behalf of the visiting brethren, said that they could not possibly have been accorded a heartier reception. He had invited the officers of the District Grand Lodge to hold their next meeting in Cradock, and trusted to meet them there on a future occasion.

Bro. J. C. Kemsley, G.D.S.W., in proposing "Absent Brethren," said that it was with mingled feelings of pain and pleasure that he spoke to the toast, which was a comprehensive one, for it included both dead and living. Among recent departures from the town was Bro. Brister, whose absence was greatly felt. The regret was considerably enhanced by the thought that had he remained here he would have been placed in the chair.

"Sweethearts and Wives" was a subject that drew largely upon the eloquence and facile diction of Bro. Cowen, and met with a willing response from Bro. T. Bennetts, whose remarks took a humorous turn, to the intense amusement of the brethren.

The list closed with the customary toast, followed by "God Save the Queen." During the evening some musical selections—vocal and instrumental—were rendered, and two recitations were also given. In the former department the "Village Blacksmith" by Bro. Ryan is worthy of special mention, for it was capably sung and excited general admiration. Bro. Fox's name is so identified with success in the culinary line that it is almost superfluous to add that the spread was highly creditable even to him. In the minor adjuncts, too, there was nothing wanting, and both as a gathering and as a banquet the affair proved an entire and unqualified success.

The annual assembly of the Sir Knights of Dykes Conclave, No. 36, will be held at the Masonic Hall, Cockermonth, on Wednesday, the 30th inst., when the M.P.S. and V.E. for the ensuing year will be respectively enthroned and consecrated. There will also be candidates for installation. The brethren of Faithful Lodge, No. 229, Mark Masters, will meet at the same place, at five p.m., for election of W.M. and advancement of candidates.

The Earl of Mount-Edgumbe, Lord Chamberlain, has appointed Mr. J. W. Benson, of Ludgate-hill, jeweller and watchmaker in ordinary to Her Majesty.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

HENRY MUGGERIDGE LODGE (No. 1679).—The last regular meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 26th ult., at the Prince George, Parkholme-road, Dalston. There were present Bros. E. F. Storr, W.M.; Jas. Lorkin, S.W.; Henry John, J.W.; Alfred Sack, I.G.; H. Leah, Sec.; Henry Muggeridge, P.M.; Edward Hyde Hewett, and a number of other brethren, including two visitors, viz., Bros. T. White, P.M. Neptune Lodge, No. 22, and Chas. Lorkin, of the Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1524. Bro. Sandland was passed to the S. cond Degree, and Mr. Alfred John Street initiated into Freemasonry. The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren partook of a plain but most excellent supper, provided by the amiable hostess, Mrs. Crichton. During the evening the W.M., who has already served the Stewardship and is a Life Governor of each of the Masonic Charities, announced his intention of serving again the Stewardships to each during his year of office as Master of Lodge 1679. Bro. Edward Francis Storr is not only a liberal supporter of the Masonic Charities, but also of the great charitable institutions of the metropolis, &c. There is no mistake about one thing—that, however certain ill-tempered wisecracks outside the Craft may sneer at Masonry, it numbers amongst its ranks some of the most kind-hearted, generous, and charitable individuals in existence. Great anxiety was expressed by the brethren that the daughter of the late Bro. Francis Fellows, the W.M. of the lodge, who died during his year of office, leaving his widow with four children unprovided for, should be successful at the October election of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and several of the senior members promised to use their utmost endeavours to obtain that desirable result, it being her last chance on account of age.

GATESHEAD-ON-TYNE.—Lodge of Industry (No. 48).—The usual monthly meeting of this ancient working lodge was held at 34, Denmark-street, on Monday, the 28th ult. Mr. Swinburne, being in attendance, was regularly initiated into the mysteries of an E.A. by the W.M., and the S.W. explained the working tools. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. Thos. Campbell, Wm. Baker, T. P. Reay, and M. J. Wheatley were examined, and received the test of merit and retired, after which the lodge was raised to the Third Degree, when the candidates were readmitted, and raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M.'s, in two batches, by Bro. Robert Whitfield, W.M., assisted by I.P.M. Corbit, who explained the Tracing Board. The lodge was afterwards closed down to the First Degree, when Mr. Daniel McLeod was proposed for initiation. "Hearty good wishes" were tendered to the W.M. by several visiting brethren, and the lodge was closed in due form at 10 p.m.

GARSTON.—Lodge of Harmony (No. 220). The annual installation gatherings of this nearly century old suburban lodge (which was consecrated in 1797) in variably prove pleasant and interesting, and that which took place at the Wellington Hotel (the head-quarters of the lodge) on Wednesday afternoon, the 23rd ult., was perhaps even more so than any of its immediate or more remote predecessors. There was a large muster of members and visitors, and the vitality of the Old Harmony was once more displayed in the clearest light. The chair at the opening of the proceedings was taken by Bro. Geo. Vines, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., and Bro. G. Price, the retiring W.M., and the ceremony was most admirably and impressively performed by Bro. J. W. Baber, P.M. 220 and 241. After the usual salutations had been given to the newly chaired W.M., the following officers were invested for the coming year: Bro. Geo. Price, I.P.M.; H. Hatch, S.W.; E. Ratcliffe, J.W.; W. Vines, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Treasurer (re-elected); Jas. Carter, Secretary (re-appointed); E. Humphries, S.D.; J. M. Ivey, J.D.; T. Jones, I.G.; S. Tickle, P.M., D.C.; Joseph Williams, Organist; P. E. After the investiture the W.M. presented a handsome Past Master's jewel to the I.P.M. on behalf of the lodge, with a hearty expression of their good-will, and cordial recognition of his many valuable services. The brethren then adjourned to dinner, handsomely served up by Bro. James Wood, the host, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and duly honoured. "The Queen" was responded to with the enthusiasm which is customary amongst Masons, the National Anthem being splendidly rendered by Bro. Hatton, 203. After the toast of "The M.W.G.M." had been similarly given and honoured, the W.M. proposed that of "The P.G.M. and P.G. Officers," which was responded to by Bro. Callow for West Lancashire, Bro. Cheetham for East Lancashire, Bro. Humphries for Staffordshire, and Bro. John Bowes for Cumberland and Westmoreland. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by the I.P.M., Bro. Price, in felicitous terms, who dwelt upon the great pleasure he had in having such an able successor, and upon the gratification it gave the brethren to have at their head a W.M. who would nobly sustain the ancient prestige of the lodge. Bro. Hill, W.M., responded in an able and feeling speech, promising to employ his utmost powers to secure the success and well-being of the lodge. "The Installing Master" was received with much cordiality. "The Past Masters," similarly honoured, was acknowledged by Bro. P.M. Vines; "The Visitors," by Bros. Woolrich and Sandbrook; "The Charities," by Bro. H. Jackson, who strongly urged the necessity for cordially supporting our noble Masonic Institutions; "The Officers," by the S.W. and J.W.; and the Tyler's toast brought the pleasant after dinner proceedings to a close; all who were present concurring in the opinion that no meeting of the Harmony Lodge had been attended with so much éclat for many years. Songs of a first-class order were given by Bros. John Hill, 1609; G. Price, I.P.M. 220; A. Woolrich, W.M. 1356, and Treas. 1609; and "Tom" Hatton, 203. Bro. H. Eynon, P.M., seconded by Bro. Armstrong, P.M., it was confirmed and adopted. A gentleman was proposed for initiation, and the lodge was closed in love and harmony at 4.45 p.m. The following members were present: Bros. F. C. Nicholson, Macdonald, J. Mackie, W. T. Lowry, and E. H. Jolinstone. Visitors: Bros. F. Charlton, J.W. 1664; J. Alexander, P.M. 541; W. Burne, 162; E. D. Davis, P.M. 685, P.P.G.S.W.; G. S. Dean, I.P.M. 541, P.P.A.D.C.; W. M. Bell, W.M. 1557; S. Donkin, P.M. 406, P.P.G.S.B.; B. P. Ord, P.M. 1427, P.G. Org.; J. Wood, S.W. 48; H. A. Rayne, 431; F. Wright, 1342; H. E. Maynard, 1426; J. Milbourne, P.M. 919, P.P.G.J.W. Egypt; and S. M. Harris, Sec. 406. The brethren then adjourned to the Queen's Head Hotel, and partook of a first-class banquet, which was served up in good style. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Some capital songs were sung, and the brethren separated, after spending a very pleasant evening.

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No. 700).—The last of a series of gatherings of the brethren of the "Mystic Craft" in the Woolwich District came to an end on Wednesday, the 16th ult., with the installation meeting of the above lodge, which was celebrated at the Masonic Hall, William-street, with that éclat that has upon all occasions characterised the meetings of the "Nelsons." The lodge was opened by Bro. A. C. Woodley shortly after 1 o'clock p.m., in the presence of a large and distinguished circle of the members of the lodge and visiting brethren, among whom were, besides the W.M., the following Past Masters of the lodge: Bros. G. D. Crawford, F. Dawson, W. J. Graham, J. Rowland, E. Bowles, S. Goddard, C. Norman, J. C. Hobson, and T. Butt; W. B. Lloyd, W.M. 913; T. Hutton, W.M. 131; G. H. Rigglesworth, W.M. 977; T. D. Hayes, P.M. 913; W. Caule, P.M. 1441; T. Day, P.M. 1076; W. Vance, S.W. 1472; J. Black, J.W. 706; H. Pryce, I.G. 913; W. Rees, W.S. 913; F. France, A. Martin, 34 (S.C.); J. A. Söderberg, 727; G. Nicholls, 1567; J. F. Lough, 861; A. Alford, 913; H. De Gray, 706; T. E. Hassell, 13; P. H. Giles, 1158; and C. Jolly, 973 (Freemason). The lodge having been duly opened and the minutes of the last meeting confirmed, Bro. J. Warren, S.W. and W.M. elect, was presented to the Installing Officer, Bro. A. C. Woodley, W.M., to receive at his hands the benefit of installation, and the usual course being followed he was installed in the chair of K.S. The brethren were then admitted, and he was proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours. He then invested his officers as follows: Bros. J. Wilkins, S.W.; E. B. Hobson, J.W.; T. Butt, P.M., Treas.; C. Norman, P.M., Sec.; G. Beaver, S.D.; J. H. Roberts, J.D.; T. Howden, I.G.; C. Cook, Org.;—Ross, W.S.; and Ben. Norman, Tyler. Bro. Woodley then finished a most important ceremony by the delivery of the three charges, in a manner seldom equalled, but certainly not surpassed, by anything we have seen in the course of long and varied experience, and the applause of the brethren at its conclusion was both spontaneous and unreserved. We must at the same time express our pleasure at the masterly manner in which Bro. P.M. Dawson explained the working tools. He did it at the special request of the Installing Officer, and did it well. Bro. Woodley was then presented with a Past Master's jewel, value ten guineas, in the name of the lodge, for services rendered during the past year, and a vote of thanks was accorded him, and ordered to be inserted upon the minutes of the lodge, for his fine rendering of the installation ceremony. A like compliment was paid to Bro. Dawson, and then the lodge was closed in due form. The banquet took place at Bro. Hubbard's, the New Falcon Hotel, at Gravesend, and was a superb one. The service of it was excellent and the viands of the choicest, and Bro. Hubbard was thanked by the W.M. for his care and attention to the brethren. The toasts were of the usual loyal and Masonic character, and were drunk with enthusiasm. In giving that of "The W.M.," Bro. Woodley, I.P.M., said he now had the pleasure of doing that for their W.M. which he twelve months ago had had done for him by the then I.P.M., and he felt a pleasure in so doing, because he had a most excellent brother and good Mason to talk about. Their W.M. had been through every office in the lodge up to the chair, and how he had done the duties entrusted to him in those offices he would leave them to judge. Suffice it to say that he had won the esteem and confidence of every member of the lodge, and he felt sure that when he left it at the end of his year of office this time next year, they would give him all the honour he would be, and was, so worthy of. The W.M., in reply, after thanking the brethren for their reception of the toast, said he could assure them that that was the proudest moment of his life, and he should always look back upon it in days to come with pride and pleasure. His efforts, so generously spoken of by Bro. Woodley, had been very humble, but he trusted that in the high position they had placed him he should always maintain and uphold the dignity, honour, and reputation of the Nelson Lodge among the lodges of the Metropolis. The next toast was that of "The Past Masters." The W.M. said every member knew that very little could be done without them, and he was gratified to see so many around him that night. He should not couple the toast with the name of any particular one, but should leave it for them to respond to individually, or leave it in the hands of one of their own choice. Bro. Woodley, I.P.M., said as the "baby" among the Past Masters, he was allowed, like all babies, to have his say first, but as he was so young among so grand an array, they must not expect him to say much. In his experience he could faithfully and honestly say, that if the W.M. was not supported by the Past Masters he could not get on at all. He knew the value of them, inasmuch as he had been supported by the whole of them, in and under many circumstances, where their knowledge of the Craft and the rules of its working were of the greatest value to him, and he was sure the same support would be given to their present W.M. He would now like to say a few words about himself. On account of the pressure of time, the lodge had to be closed rather abruptly, and he had not time then to thank them for the handsome jewel they had so generously presented to him. He would now take the opportunity, and thanked them most sincerely. He trusted that he should live many years to wear it in the lodge. They had also passed a vote of thanks to him for installing his successor, and it would be inscribed on the minutes of the lodge, and shown as long as the lodge existed, which he trusted would be for many, many years. For that he thanked them; it was an honour that would live after him, and be an honour to his children when he had gone. Again and again he thanked them, and trusted to do his duty among the Past Masters as he had done in all and every of his offices in the lodge. Bro. P.M. Rowland returned thanks. Bro. P.M. F. Dawson said he must say that it would have been better if the I.P.M. had returned thanks for all of them, but, as he had not, he would say how pleased he was that day at witnessing the excellent manner in which the I.P.M., Bro. Woodley, had rendered the ceremony of installation. It was greatly to the credit of the lodge and to himself. While they had Masters rising in the lodge who could work like that they had nothing to fear. If the brethren of the lodge did, as had been done for years in the Nelson Lodge, remain united in brotherly love, and yet tried to surpass one another in their working and desire for its interest and for its prosperity, they would have nothing to fear for its future, and the Nelson Lodge would be second to none in the metropolis. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," which was responded to by Bros. Hutton, Lloyd, Vance, Black, and Rigglesworth. "The Officers" followed, and Bro. Wilkins, S.W., responded. The W.M. thanked Bro. Kenning for the excellent reports given of the Nelson Lodge during the past and several preceding years in the Freemason, and proposed "The Health of Bro. Jolly," who had been the medium of communication between them and that journal, and our representative returned thanks. A hearty encomium was then passed upon Bro. Hubbard for his efforts, and the Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings.

HAMPTON COURT.—Burdett Lodge (No. 1293).—The regular meeting of this lodge took place at the Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court, on the 26th ult. There were present Bros. Shaboe, W.M.; Sindall, S.W.; Buss, Treas.; Pearse, Sec.; Kentish, S.D.; Sanders, J.D.; Bindoff, I.G.; and several other members. Visitors: Bros. Chancellor, P.G.S., &c.; Ramsay, P.G.W. Middx.; Levander, P.G.S. Middx., and others. Bro. F. Stewart was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. Bro. Ward was passed to the Second Degree, and Messrs. Harvey and F. W. Smith initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. All the work was done in an able manner. The W.M. then presented Bro. Buss with the small testimonial voted him by the lodge—which took the form of a diamond ring—assuring him of the regard he was held in by the lodge, to which Bro. Buss replied in suitable terms. Bro. Kenning, P.G.D. Middlesex, and a former member of the lodge, was proposed as a re-joining member, and after other Masonic business the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an ample banquet, provided for them by Bro. Sadler.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—The eighth installation meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 19th ult., at the Lion Hotel. In the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. C. Woodrow, W.M., Bro. John Hammond, P.G.J.D. Middx., P.M. 201, &c., opened the lodge at one o'clock p.m. He commenced by raising Bros. H. J. Buckley, J. Cavell, W. R. Smith, and D. Brown, passing Bros. W. J. Smith and F. W. Dye. The W.M. Bro. J. C. Woodrow, having arrived, he initiated Mr. Abraham Purnhouse Driver and Charles Thomas Tatum into Freemasonry. The candidates were introduced separately. All the work ably done. The minutes of the last regular lodge were read and unanimously confirmed. The report of the Audit Committee showed that after meeting every liability and giving £26 5s. to the Masonic Charities, a good balance remained in the hands of the Treasurer. It was stated that the W.M. for the time being was Life Governor in perpetuity of all the Masonic Charities, also that the Secretary for the time being was Life Governor in perpetuity of the Girls' School, to which was added at this auspicious meeting a Life Governorship of the Female Annuity of the Royal Benevolent Institution, also in name of the Secretary of the lodge for the time being. Bro. James Stevens, P.M. 1426, installed Bro. J. B. Shackleton, P.G.P. Middx., P.M. 1526, as W.M.; and he appointed and invested as his officers Bros. John Hammond, P.G. J.D. Middx., P.M. 201, &c., S.W.; J. W. Baldwin, P.P. G.P. Middx., P.M., J.W.; S. Wickens, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.P.J.D. Middx., P.M. 73, &c., Sec. (eighth re-appointment); H. Gloster, W.M. 1531, &c., S.D.; T. W. Stone, J.D.; D. Steinhauer, I.G.; J. J. Marsh, Org.; H. Potter, P.M. 11, W.S.; F. Knight, D.C.; W. R. Vassila, C.S.; J. Gilbert, P.G. Tyler Middx., Tyler (eighth re-appointment). For his services in well rendering the installation a cordial vote of thanks and an honorary membership of the lodge were unanimously voted to Bro. James Stevens, P.M. On the motion of Bro. F. Walters, P.P.J.D. Middx., P.M. 73, Secretary, it was unanimously resolved a slight alteration be made in bye-law of Audit Committee. On the motion of Bro. W. F. Stanton, it was unanimously resolved "That ten guineas be taken from the lodge funds and be spent in purchasing a Life Governorship of the Female Annuity Fund, in the name of the Secretary of the lodge for the time being." The usual seven guinea Past

Master's jewel was presented to Bro. J. C. Woodrow, P.M., for his efficient services rendered to the lodge during his year of office. Bro. William Hammond, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M. 1326, &c., and Captain Reginald William Williams, P.P.G. Org. Middx., P.M. 1275, &c., on the motion of Bro. F. Walters, P.P.S.D. Middx., P.M. 73, Secretary, were unanimously elected honorary members of this lodge. He also proposed Bro. Charles Paulson, 1309, be elected a joining member, subject to usual ballot. Some candidates were proposed for initiation, and the lodge was closed in due form. Bro. C. W. Fox was elected Steward of the Benevolent Institution for the forthcoming festival, to be held in February, 1880. Present, besides those named, Bros. F. Binckes, P.G.S., P.M.; W. Hammond, P.M.; C. Graham, A. J. Rogers, C. W. Baker, T. W. Adams, P.M.; S. Page, C. Lucop, and others. Visitors: Bros. W. A. Barrett, P.G. Org. Oxon, P.M. 1706; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188; H. C. Murphy, 1512; J. J. CHORLTON - ON - MEDLOCK.—Avon Lodge (No. 1633).—The usual monthly meeting of this popular lodge was held at the Denmark Hotel, Lloyd-street, on Wednesday, the 23rd ult., at five o'clock. The W.M., Bro. J. D. Brinkles, presided, supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. A. Painter, S.W.; A. B. Whittaker, J.W.; W. H. Leigh, I.P.M.; G. Macfarlane, S.D.; S. D. McKellan, J.D.; W. Bostock, Treas.; W. Brown, I.G.; F. Stanislaus, Org.; G. Burrows, Tyler; T. J. Hooper, P.M.; T. Cavanah, P.M.; G. Yates, W. Byway, J. Cummins, W. Dunkerly, C. H. Stephenson, S. H. St. Austin, W. Craven, H. Macdonald, W. P. Hayhurst, W. Stevenson, W. Lyon, C. Fairbank, A. Clarke, A. T. Forrest, H. Bracewell. Visitors: Bros. J. Gow, 1618, 561; J. G. Elderton, 317; H. Paulden, 204; W. Hollins, 152; J. Aldred, 1140; John Church, 317; Matthew Owen, 163; S. Murtig, 1798; Murray Thomson, 163; J. Coxen, 152; and R. R. Lisenden, 317 (Freemason). The lodge was opened in ancient form, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed, after which Mr. M. Beddoes Peacock was balloted for, unanimously elected, and afterwards duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. The W.M. performed the ceremony of initiation, and presented the working tools to the candidates. At the conclusion of this ceremony, the brethren adjourned for tea, and after every brother had "had his due," re-assembled in the lodge-room. The lodge was then worked up to the Third Degree, and Bro. Samuel Horatio St. Austin being a candidate for raising, was duly made a Master Mason by the W.M., assisted by his officers. Although there is of necessity a great sameness in the proceedings of working the Three Degrees, and consequently our remarks may also of necessity appear stereotyped in connection with these proceedings, yet we cannot help expressing our gratification when "work" is properly and efficiently done. Hence the oft repeated phrases of "in a most able manner," in a "satisfactory manner," or in "creditable style," may appear to some minds stale and flat, and although our vocabulary of praiseworthy sentences is not limited, yet we deem it consistent to apply these home-made expressions only in cases where they are really deserved, and we, therefore, are very pleased to record how ably the W.M., Bro. Brinkles, and his officers performed the ceremony, and this fact is the more pleasing when we call to mind the unsatisfactory manner in which some lodges execute their "work." This being all the business, the lodge was worked down to the First Degree, and "Hearty good wishes" having been expressed by the visiting brethren, the lodge was formally closed, and afterwards the brethren assembled at the social board, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been given and responded to, the W.M. proposed "The Health of the newly raised Bro. St. Austin," which was cordially received. Bro. St. Austin, in returning thanks, said it was a great satisfaction to him to be now numbered amongst the large roll of Master Masons, and he had been greatly impressed with the ceremony that had been performed that evening. He trusted he might be pardoned for comparing the Three Degrees in Masonry to three acts of a good play, the first being good, the second better, and the third the best of all. He felt in his own mind convinced from what he had seen and heard that he liked Masonry, and always should like it, so much so that no individual effort on his part should be wanting to further its interests. "The Health of Bro. Beddoes Peacock" was next proposed, and drunk with enthusiasm, to which that brother suitably responded. The toast of "The Visitors" was proposed by Bro. T. J. Hooper, and responded to on their behalf by Bro. W. Hollins. Bro. W. Bostock, Treasurer, then rose, and said it was with feelings of mingled pain and pleasure that he wished to propose a toast that he was quite sure would be received by them all with delight—it was that of "The Worshipful Master, Bro. Brinkles." The pleasure he had in proposing this toast was in being able to say with truth that Bro. Brinkles was a most assiduous W.M., painstaking in his duties, cordial in his manner, and kind in his actions. They all felt proud of him, and what was more, satisfied with him, when they witnessed the manner he had performed both the ceremonies that evening. He (Bro. Bostock) had known the W.M. for very many years, and he was pleased to say the more he knew of him, the more he liked him. The pain that he had spoken of in proposing this toast was caused by the fact that this meeting would be the last that Bro. Brinkles would preside over for many a long day in that lodge, for the reason that ere long he would leave England with his wife and family for the West Indies, and remain there for an indefinite time. He was quite sure that a general feeling of deep regret would abound in all the hearts of the members of the Avon Lodge, and not only by them, but by all the brethren of other lodges who had known Bro. Brinkles, his sterling qualities and his uprightness, and, therefore, in asking the brethren to drink a bumper to this toast, he would conclude his remarks by wishing their W.M. God speed and long life, happiness and prosperity. The toast was heartily responded to by one and all with Masonic "honours." Bro. Brinkles, in reply, said that his feelings were those of pain only, in thanking them for so cordially responding to the toast which Bro. Bostock had proposed in such kind terms. It was quite true that he was going to leave them, and he assured them he was deeply grieved at the thought of separation, but the consolation he had was that if not with them in person he should be in spirit. Of course he did not wish to conceal the fact from them, that in leaving England for a foreign country he should better his position, but at the same time, if fortune had so willed it, he would very much rather have remained at home, and had the pleasure of meeting them every month as usual. As they were aware, a man cannot rule his own destiny, and no one could foresee what turns fortune would make in their favor, or what part of the world she might capriciously lead them to. Bro. Bostock had alluded to his (Bro. Brinkles') good qualities, and he was afraid he had been rather flattered; at the same time, in doing his best for the interests of the lodge while presiding over it he hoped he had given satisfaction to the members, and if so, he should feel a little comforted at the separation, but his earnest hope, when far away, would always be that he should see them again, and this, he thought, would not be so very long as Bro. Bostock had suggested, as he had made a stipulation that if he went abroad it would be with the understanding that he should return for three months to England during every year, and under these circumstances, they might all feel certain of seeing him again (God willing), as no distance in the United Kingdom would, he trusted, keep him from the lodge. Other toasts followed, which were enlivened during the intervals by some good singing from Bros. Stephenson, St. Austin, and Bostock, and a recitation by Bro. W. Brown. This enjoyable meeting was brought to a close about 11 o'clock. Bro. F. Stanislaus rendered most valuable aid to the singers as accompanist on the piano.

HOUNSLOW.—Royal Hanover Lodge (No. 1777).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Town Hall, Hounslow, on the 26th ult. The W.M. was unable to be present, and several of the officers were absent. The chair was taken by Bro. M. S. Larham, P.M., supported by Bros. H. Lovegrove, S.W.; G. Clark, J.W.; W. Ramsay, Hon. I.P.M.; H. B. Marshall, Treas.; H. Clark, S.D.; F. J. Peels, D.C.; Dunkerly, Org.; and J. Daly, Tyler. After the opening of the lodge, and the confirmation of the minutes, no candidates being in attendance, the business on the summons was proceeded with. The ballot was taken for the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, and was declared unanimous in favour of Bro. H. Lovegrove, S.W. Bro. H. B. Marshall (C.C., F.R.G.S.), who has been Steward for all the three Charities during the present year, was unanimously re-elected Treasurer. Bro. J. Daly was re-elected Tyler, and Bros. Wood, W. S. Dunkerly, and Heels were appointed as Audit Committee. Bro. White, a candidate for passing, now arrived, and having answered the usual questions, was passed to the Second Degree. The S.W. announced the appointment of the W.M. as Prov. J.G. Warden. Several names were handed in for joining, and after the completion of some routine business the lodge was closed. The only visitor was Bro. J. F. Hurst, P.M. 753. The brethren assembled at 6.30 p.m. at the Red Lion Hotel, the W.M. elect (Bro. H. Lovegrove) in the chair, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. In proposing the toast of "The Prov. G.M. (Col. F. Burdett)," the S.W. referred to the flourishing condition of the province under his rule, and remarked that the Royal Hanover Lodge had especial reasons for being grateful to the P.G.M., as for services in the province generally their W.M. (Bro. Dubois) had been appointed to the important position of Prov. J.G.W., and he himself (the S.W.) had received purple in the Mark Degree. The toast of "The W.M. Elect and the Officers" was proposed by Bro. Larham, hon. mem., and responded to by Bros. Lovegrove, G. Clark, H. Clark, Peels, and Dunkerly. The Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren left for town at nine o'clock.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston, on Wednesday the 23rd ult. Present: Bros. J. L. Payne, W.M.; A. R. Olley, S.W.; J. Lorkin, J.W.; F. Jacob, J.D.; W. Ferrar, I.G.; W. Fieldwick, Preceptor; J. Williams, Secretary; and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Williams being candidate. Bro. C. Lorkin, assisted by the brethren, worked the 3rd and 6th Lessons of the Lecture. The lodge was advanced to the Third Degree, and then closed down. Bro. W. Fieldwick proposed, and Bro. J. Lorkin seconded, that Bro. A. R. Olley be W.M. for the ensuing Wednesday evening. Carried unanimously. Bro. W. Fieldwick proposed, and Bro. C. Lorkin seconded, that a vote of thanks be recorded in the minutes to Bro. J. L. Payne, for the able manner in which he had for the first time conducted the business of the lodge. Carried unanimously. Nothing further offering, the lodge was closed in ancient form with solemn prayer.

Philpotts, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Chapter (No. 913).—A convocation of the above chapter was held on Thursday, the 17th ult., at the Lord Raglan, Burrage-road, for the purpose of installing the Principals and investing the officers for the ensuing twelve months. The chapter was opened at half-past five p.m., Ex. Comp. J. McDougall, M.E.Z.; Ex. Comp. A. Penfold, H.; and Ex. Comp. H. J. Butter, J. Among those present were Comps. C. Coupland, P.P.P.S. Kent; E. Denton, P.G.O. Kent; W. H. Myers, P.Z.; W. Musto, P.Z.; H. Bickerstaff, P.Z. 13; H. Pryce, S.E.; T. D. Hayes, S.N.; R. Croisdale, P.S.; W. B. Lloyd, 1st Asst. S.; Eugene Sweny, 2nd Asst. S.; and H. Mabbitt, Janitor; T. Cartland, G. Frost, H. Shaw, S. H. Letton, H. Mason, W. Rees, E. B. Burr, R. Munroe, W. Tucker, G. Richards, D. C. Capon, J. F. Randall, W. Busbridge, W. A. Weston, J. 13; D. Deeves, 13; and A. J. Lindsay, 730 (I.C.) The minutes of the last convocation having been confirmed, Ex. Comp. W. H. Myers, P.Z. Lily of Richmond Chapter, No. 820, was unanimously elected a joining companion. The ballot was then taken for Bros. C. Jolly, 913; Otto Weiss, 700; and G. Nichols, 1567, which proved unanimous, and they, with Bros. G. Beaver and J. H. Roberts, both of the Nelson Lodge, 700, were exalted to the Sublime Degree of Royal Arch Masonry. Ex. Comp. A. Penfold was then installed M.E.Z., with the usual ceremonies, by P.Z. Coupland, H. J. Butter, as H., and T. D. Hayes, J. The First Principal then invested his officers as follows: Comps. H. Pryce, S.E.; R. Croisdale, S.N.; W. B. Lloyd, P.S.; E. Sweny, 1st A.S.; A. Jessop, Treas.; and H. Mabbitt, Janitor. A handsome P.Z.'s jewel, studded with diamonds, was then presented to Comp. McDougall, P.Z., in recognition of his valuable services to the chapter as M.E.Z. during the past year, and as a mark of esteem on the part of the companions of the chapter. The chapter was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a cold collation, nicely served by Bro. Tucker. The usual banquet was adjourned to the 6th of August, when the Provincial Grand Chapter, presided over by Lord Holmesdale, G.S., will be held at the Skating Rink, Plumstead. The usual loyal and Arch Masonic toasts were honoured, and that of "The P.G.S., Lord Holmesdale," received an enthusiastic greeting at the hands of the companions. In reply to that of "Comp. Eastes, P.P.G.H. Kent, and the rest of the Grand Officers," Comp. E. Denton, P.G.O. Kent, thanked the companions for the toast. As a Grand Officer of Kent, he felt it a great honour to serve under Lord Holmesdale and Comp. Eastes. He had had the pleasure of seeing their G.S. in that room, and must congratulate the Pattison Chapter upon the prospect of soon having his lordship among them as its guest, an honour that would be recorded upon the minutes of Grand Chapter, and stand for ever as something for the chapter to be proud of. In the name of the G.O. of Kent he thanked them. Comp. McDougall then rose to propose the toast of the evening, one that he was sure they would all do honour to—it was that of "The Newly-Installed M.E.Z., Comp. Penfold." Many of them present had seen his work in Craft Masonry, and those who had seen him work through the offices of the chapter would feel that he was in every way qualified to do honour to the position he now occupied. He trusted he might be with them long, not only as a companion but as a friend. He was very glad that in their Comp. Penfold's year of office the Prov. Grand Chapter was coming to visit them, for they would all agree with him that no one was more calculated to do credit to the great responsibilities that would be thrown upon him than Comp. Penfold was. He asked all the companions to support their esteemed First Principal in his arduous duties, and make the visit something for them to be proud of, and the province satisfied with. Comp. Penfold, in reply, expressed the difficulty he had to adequately thank them for the toast so kindly proposed and accepted. All he was afraid of was that they might expect too much from him. There were two things, however, he possessed which would aid him, and they were a will to do, and a love for the work. He had a love for Masonry, and a will to work for its advancement, and combining the two things together, he trusted to do it to their satisfaction. The fact of the Grand Chapter coming to Plumstead on the 6th inst. was a responsible undertaking for the Pattison Chapter, and he, and he knew they, wished to make it a success. He did not want Lord Holmesdale to go away dissatisfied with his reception at Plumstead. There might not be much for the companions individually to do, but he was ted their moral support. It occupied his thoughts above all things, and he hoped that, as Comp. Denton had said it would be recorded upon the minutes of Grand Lodge, it would be recorded as an honour to the Pattison Chapter, and to Plumstead. For himself he hoped to carry out the duties of the high office entrusted to him to their satisfaction. "The Health of the newly-exalted Companions" was then proposed by the M.E.Z., who said they did not want quantity in Arch Masonry, they preferred quality. The companions exalted that night were of the latter class, and had all made their mark, either in the Craft, or in the busy world of outside life, and would be good and creditable Arch Masons and companions to the chapter. Comps. Beaver, Roberts, and Jolly suitably replied. "The Past Principals" of the chapter were then toasted, and Comp. P.Z. McDougall said the thanks of the Past Masters must be shown by their actions, not in words, at least so far as he was concerned. There was, however, the father of the lodge, Comp. P.Z. Coupland, present, and he felt sorry that his name had not been coupled with the toast alone. He then referred in feeling terms to the loss the chapter had sustained at its formation by the death of Comp. Graden, the first 1st Principal of it, and said if it had not been for the helping hands of Comps. Amos, Coupland, and Denton, the chapter could not have been carried on. He was extremely pleased with all that had taken place that evening, and was only sorry that Comp. Butter was not present to give them one of his eloquent addresses. He had not the slightest doubt that the new M.E.Z. would have their hearty support, as he had had during the past year. Comp. P. P. Coupland said he was very proud of having had office in the Grand Chapter, but was more proud of being a P.Z. of the Pattison Chapter. He deeply regretted the loss of Comp. P.Z. Graden, who, if it had pleased the Most High to have spared him, would have been proud to have seen how well they had prospered. He was pleased that Comp. Penfold was their 1st Principal this year, because he felt sure in his hands the honour and credit of the chapter would be sustained at the forthcoming Grand Principal's visit. He then, in feeling terms, regretted the departure from among them of Bro. and Comp. Pattison, after whom their lodge and chapter was named, and who, as Grand H. of the Grand Chapter, had worked so hard and so charitably for Masonry, and concluded by prophesying a bright future for the chapter. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," and, in giving it, the M.E.Z. passed a warm eulogium upon Comp. Weston, of 13, who, he said, was a pillar of Masonry in their district. There was some talk a little while ago about his going to Zululand, and his (Comp. Penfold's) first thought when he heard it was, "What will the United Military do without him?" He felt great pleasure in coupling his and Comp. Deeves' names with the toast. Comp. Weston, in the course of an interesting speech, spoke of Bros. and Comps. Spinks, Box, Brooks, and several others who were now with the army in Zululand, and of a letter received a day or two ago from Bro. and Comp. Commissary G. Spinks, in which he expressed how pleased and gratified they all were to see in the Freemason, which they received weekly, how prosperously the lodges were getting on in the Woolwich district. He said as soon as the Freemason came into camp they all gathered round, and read the news, and drank success to the old lodges, and on the 7th ult. there was a gathering of Masons there, who drank "The Health of the new W.M. of the United Military Lodge, Bro. Shaw," who was installed that day. It was very gratifying to hear that the love of Masonry, and the old lodges, was kept up in a far country, and amid the horrors of war, by their brethren, and he wished them a safe return. For himself, he thanked the M.E.Z. and the companions for their good wishes. Capt. Deeves also replied, and then Comp. Lloyd replied for "The Officers." The Janitor's toast concluded the proceedings.

TRURO.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 78).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 24th ult. Among those present were Bros. W. F. Newman, P.M. 94, Love and Honour, Falmouth, P. Prov. S. G. W.; M. Little, W.M. 94; and W. D. Rogers, Sec. 94. Three brethren were advanced, after which the W.M. elect, Bro. W. Mason, was installed as W.M. by Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.M., Past G. J. Trythall, J.O.; W. J. Johns, P.M., P.P.G.S.W., Treasurer; J. C. R. Crowes, P.M., P. Prov. Grand S.W., Sec.; W. Allen, Reg. Marks; W. B. Morris, S.D.; E. Roberts, J.D.; Luke, D.C.; E. Whitley, Org.; T. C. Mack, I.G.; W. Simmons and T. H. Lukes, Stewards; and J. Langdon, Tyler. The hearty congratulations of the brethren were given to Bro. Col. Peard on his appointment to the office of Prov. Grand Master of Mark Master Masons of Cornwall, vice Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., deceased.

COMMUNIQUE.

THE FREEMASONS AND TRURO CATHEDRAL.

Our readers will remember that at the last meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall, held at Fowey last month, Bro. Emra Holmes, P.P.G. Reg. and P.P.G. D.C. Suffolk, and P.M. of Fowey Lodge, proposed—"That in view of the erection of a cathedral at Truro for the diocese of Cornwall, a Committee be appointed to solicit subscriptions, and that the Province of Devon be invited to assist, so that a lasting memorial of the Freemasons of Devon and Cornwall may be erected in the new edifice." This was strongly opposed by a brother, who said that neither Bro. Holmes nor the noble lord (the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe) could have any idea of the strong feeling against the proposition. At the suggestion of the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Holmes consented to withdraw the motion for the present, but gave notice that at the next Provincial Grand Lodge he should bring the matter forward again, and he should continue to do so at every provincial meeting until it was carried.

Our enthusiastic brother has received the following letter, which shows that, at least in some quarters, his proposition is favourably received, and which, we may also say, fully warrants his persevering in the course he has undertaken:—

"Falmouth, July 17th, 1879.

"Dear Sir and Brother,—
"At the request of the members of Lodge Love and Honour, No. 75, I beg to inform you that at their meeting on Monday last they appointed a Committee, consisting of Bros. Past Masters Tilly and W. F. Newman, and R. Carter, Sec., and myself (ex-officio) to collect subscriptions from the members of their own lodge for the Truro Cathedral, following the motion you made at the last Provincial Grand Lodge. Your motion meets with their cordial approval, and it was thought that it would strengthen your hands to know that the premier lodge of the province had taken the matter up in a practical form and had already commenced to collect subscriptions.

"You are at liberty to make what use you can of this information, and I hope that it may be serviceable in inducing other lodges to do the same, and then, I think, the result will be that your motion will meet with the success which it merits.

"Yours fraternally,

"WILSON L. FOX, W.M. No. 75.

"To Bro. Emra Holmes,

"Fowey, Cornwall."

METROPOLITAN LODGE, No. 1507.

ROYAL SAVOY LODGE, No. 1744.

These lodges held a joint summer festival on the 24th ult., at Rye House, Hoddesdon, under the presidency of Bro. J. Douglass, W.M. of the Metropolitan Lodge, and S.W. 1744, and Bro. J. Willing, W.M. of the Royal Savoy, P.M., Treas. 1507, P.M. 177, P.Z. 1000, P.Z. 1507, &c., &c. Bro. Willing was accompanied by Mrs. and the Misses Willing. Among the company present were also Bro. W. M. Stiles, Sec. 1507, Sec. 1744, W. M. King's Cross Lodge; Bro. Hudson, W.M. Royal York, Brighton; Bro. Scales, W.M. elect 1507; Bro. Geo. Everett, P.M. and Treas. 177, Mrs. Everett, and Mrs. Huggall; Bro. Ferguson, J.W. 177, P.M. 1507; Bro. Ralph, 177; Bro. Scard, 177; Bros. H. Stiles, Morgan, R. Douglass, Dovey, Urch, Ben. George, Brumell, Side (J.W.), Hickman, Barnard, Howard, Greenfield, Weston, Willing, sen., Mrs. Teale, Bro. Massey (Freemason), and others.

The weather was all that it could be desired to be, so that boating and outdoor exercise were the order of the day till four o'clock, when the company assembled in the large hall, or concert room, in the grounds, where an excellent banquet was served; and those who know what an admirable chef holds rule in the kitchen of the Rye House will readily believe that the dishes were of a most appetising kind.

As usual at all Masonic gatherings, when the cloth was removed, there was a list of toasts to be disposed of. Bro. Willing proposed "The Queen and the Craft," and "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," in doing which he said that he should confine himself to the duty of proposing the toast without any comment on the well-known merits of the M.W.G.M., or the amiable qualities of his consort, who was the well-beloved of the English people, because when this programme had been disposed of there was a dance programme to be got through, which the company were probably longing to commence. He should, therefore, say no more than that he hoped they would give the toast a truly Masonic reception. The toast having been drunk, Bro. Willing proposed "The Health of the Pro G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M., the Earl of Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past," which was also enthusiastically received.

Bro. Willing: Ladies and gentlemen, you behold on the present occasion the Masters of the Metropolitan and Royal Savoy Lodges in a truly enviable position—brethren who have come here to enjoy themselves in the presence of their wives—who have come here to show their wives how simple and innocent is Masonic enjoyment, and to share that enjoyment with them. The presence of ladies on the present occasion is a source of the greatest pleasure to us, as I am sure it must be a satisfaction to them to see for themselves that the fact of our being Freemasons does not deprive us of our social qualities. I have great pleasure in proposing to you "The Health of the present Master of the Metropolitan Lodge." He is a man known all over England, and he is one of the most genial Masters we have had in the chair, and when he gets rid of the modesty which has characterised every Master of the Metropolitan Lodge all must admire his admirable qualities. I give you "The Metropolitan Lodge, coupled with the name of the W.M., Bro. J. Douglass.

Bro. Douglass: When Bro. Willing got up the first time this afternoon he proposed that the speeches should be short. I shall conform to the rule he then laid down, and confine myself to thanking you for your attendance here this day, and for the kind way in which you received the last toast. I do not wish to trespass on your time, and shall proceed to give you the next toast, which is "The Royal Savoy Lodge," coupled with the name of the W.M., Bro. J. Willing.

Bro. Willing: Ladies and gentlemen, I am very much obliged for the very kind way in which the W.M. of the Metropolitan Lodge has introduced my health. We have been very fortunate in having a fine day, and, I think, we have been a happy family together. We enjoy meeting in this friendly way much more than if we did not know our right hand from our left hand neighbour. The next toast is "The Past Masters and Secretary of the Metropolitan and Royal Savoy Lodges." I am a Past Master myself, and am, therefore, in the unfortunate position of appearing to ask you to drink my own health, but as you have already done that very heartily you will believe that I am proposing the health of the other Past Masters. There are, unhappily, no other Past Masters present, and I shall, therefore, couple with the toast the name of Bro. Stiles, W.M. 1731, the Secretary of both lodges, and an indefatigable Mason, to respond to the toast.

The remaining toasts were "The Visitors," "The Ladies," and "The Officers and Stewards," which were briefly proposed by Bro. Willing, and were responded to by Bros. Everett and Stiles.

The company then adjourned to the ball-room, where dancing brought this very successful meeting to a close.

CONSECRATION OF THE ALLIANCE LODGE, No. 1827.

On Wednesday evening this new lodge was consecrated at the Guildhall Tavern by Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, P.G.D. The new lodge has been established for the convenience of those brethren who hold office under the Corporation of London at Guildhall, for gentlemen holding such office, and desiring to become Freemasons, and for brethren whose business or profession connects them with the Guildhall. The idea of starting such a lodge originated with Bro. D. H. Ashford, and he, with the assistance of several other brethren, proceeded to carry it out, and they prevailed upon the Town Clerk of London, Bro. J. B. Monckton, to allow himself to be recommended to the Prince of Wales as first Worshipful Master of the lodge. The endeavours of the brethren to obtain a warrant for the lodge were successful, and it was arranged that before the vacation set in the lodge should be consecrated.

The event, as we have said, occurred on Wednesday evening, when Bro. Col. Clerke was assisted by Bros. Capt. N. G. Phillips, P.G.D., as S.W.; Peter de Lande Long, P.G.D., as J.W.; the Rev. C. W. Arnold, P.G.C., D.P. G.M. for Surrey, as Chaplain; R. W. H. Giddy, District G.M. of Griqualand, as D.C.; Capt. T. Davies Sewell, P.M. 21, as Sec.; and W. W. Brown, as Organist, Bro. Seymour Smith assisting in the musical portion of the ceremony. General Brownrigg, C.B., Prov. G.M. for Surrey, occupied a seat on the Consecrating Officer's right, and Bro. Kingston, District G.M. of Malta, a seat on the left.

The complete list of the brethren present comprised the following names: Bros. John B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes; L. F. Littell, Frank Green, Richard Pawley, D. H. Ashford, H. Wildey Wright, T. Davies Sewell, P.M. 21, &c.; Wm. Hundel Cannon, 858; Lieut.-Gen. J. Studholme Brownrigg, Prov. G.M. Surrey; Wm. Kingston, D.G.M. Malta; Rev. C. W. Arnold, P.G.C., and Dep. Prov. G.M. Surrey; E. T. Worsley, S.W. 860; James Muzlo, 1150; Frank Richardson, 14; F. Toller, Moira; Ambrose Haynes, 780; Captain N. G. Phillips, P.G.D.; R. W. H. Giddy, Dist. G.M. Griqualand; J. M. P. Montagu, P.G.D.; Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, P.G.D.; W. W. Dallwood, P.M. 860; W. S. Dockins, J.W. 860; T. W. Whitmarsh, P.M. 1150; E. G. Man, 8; John McKinnard, W.M. 181; Seymour Smith, 742; Alfred Green, P.M. 211; Henry Wright, 1656; Henry Godfrey, P.M. 1261; W. T. Howe, P.G.P.; Walter Jarvis, 14; Peter de Lande Long, P.G.P.; W. St. John; George A. Haynes, 1804; John Hervey, G.S.; H. G. Buss, Asst. G.S.; Morris Evans, P.M. 8; A. M. Tarleton, P.M. 468; Macrae Moir, P.M. 66; Samuel L. Green, S.W. 1445; H. Sadler, G. Tyler; J. A. Mallett, Royal Leopold; Peter Ashcroft; and H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason).

After the formal opening of the lodge Col. Shadwell Clerke shortly addressed the brethren on the motive of the meeting, and expressed the gratification he felt at being called upon to consecrate a lodge which had been originated by brethren well known in the Craft for desiring its true prosperity, and who had done much to advance it. After referring to the many services to Freemasonry performed by Bro. J. B. Monckton, and the admirable way he discharged his duties as President of the Board of General Purposes, he trusted that the lodge would succeed, and did not doubt that such would be the case whilst its interests were entrusted to the brethren who were its founders.

The Rev. C. W. Arnold, in delivering the oration, said: It is customary on this occasion to say a few words about the origin and principles of Freemasonry. Its origin is shrouded in the mists of antiquity, nor shall I attempt to trace it. What we know for certain is that certain guilds of Masons existed in the middle ages, who were bound together by certain rules of brotherhood, and by whom those beautiful and magnificent buildings over the continent of Europe were erected. How these ancient guilds passed into the speculative Masonry of the Free and Accepted Mason of to-day I shall not try to tell you, for it will be far more profitable to say a few words about the principles of that Craft which, in the present day, has a charm for so many and is increasing so rapidly. I say then, without the slightest hesitation, that the great basis on which Freemasonry rests is the belief in God. Masonry is not religion, but it is deeply rooted in religion, and demands of every candidate for its mysteries the belief in the existence of a personal Deity, the one living and true God. Further than this Craft Masonry does not go, and so it holds open the door to all nations, whatever may be their religious systems, who believe in God. Thus the Christian, the Jew, the Mahomedan, the Hindoo, the native of China and Japan, even the South Sea Islander and the North American Indian, can all unite in this common bond; but it rigidly excludes the Atheist. I need scarcely remind you that Masonry calls for the recognition of God in every step. Under the names of the G.A.O.T.U., the Grand Geometrician, and the Most High. His blessing is invoked in each degree and every ceremony. In the centre of the lodge is situated the sacred symbol, calling our attention to His omnipotence, His omniscience, and His omnipresence. Before the W.M. lie the open pages of the volume of the Sacred Law, the revelation of God's will to man. It is the standard of Masonic truth, the guide of our actions, the rule of our faith. Every obligation is sealed upon its sacred pages, and the Mason is taught to square his actions according to the dictates of that Sacred Volume, if he wishes to become a living stone fit to be built into the temple of God. Further than this, Masonry teaches the immortality of the soul. It invites us to contemplate death without terror, assuring us that even nature bears witness that in this perishable form resides a vital and an imperishable principle, which inspires us with a holy confidence that the Lord of Life will enable us to trample the king of terrors beneath our feet, and lift our eyes to that bright morning star whose rising brings peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human race. And the working tools of a Master Mason teach us to bear in mind and act according to the laws of our Divine Creator, that when we shall be summoned from this sublunary abode, we may ascend to the Grand Lodge above, where the world's Great Architect lives and reigns for evermore. Our second great landmark is charity or love, and this divides itself into two heads—brotherly love and relief. I call this our second landmark because it springs from the first. It is born out of the loving heart of God himself, bringing heaven, as it were, down to earth, and linking soul to soul throughout the world. Masonry has been well described as "seeking to bring together men of every political faith and every religious creed, winning them from their isolation, their selfishness, and their sin, and uniting them in work for the general good." What can be a grander exemplification of brotherly love than the five points of fellowship? But Masonry not only teaches us to have charitable feelings, to drop the tear of sympathy over the fallings of a brother, but to perform charitable acts—to feed the hungry, comfort the afflicted, succour the distressed or oppressed, to educate the orphan child, and to provide for the aged widow or the brother who is past work. Need I say more about those two great landmarks? Well are our principles stated to be brotherly love, relief, and truth, for truth rests upon belief in God, relief originates in brotherly love, and brotherly love springs from love to God. Thus the whole current of Freemasonry rises in and flows back again to God as its centre. There are three virtues which ought especially to distinguish every Mason, sincerity, truth, and love; without the two first the latter cannot exist. A Mason's love must be pure and unalloyed, his friendship sincere and generous, and his cordiality without hypocrisy. Indeed, he ought to live for the benefit of those around, despising selfishness. What a different aspect would the world wear if all mankind were but truly actuated by the principles of our Order. No longer would our hearts be pained at the recital of the horrors of war. Peace with her olive wand would descend from heaven; comfort would come to the afflicted, and succour to the distressed. Everywhere would be heard the voice of joy and gladness, and no complaining in our streets. What are the jewels which sparkle on your breasts but emblems of the virtues which ought to shine beneath? like the medals of the soldier which tell of noble and heroic deeds. Small may be their intrinsic value, yet great are the truths they symbolise. We must contradict by our lives the statements of those who assert that trifles are the object of our ambition, and that our solemn assemblies are but an excuse for conviviality. God teaches us, and we are reminded by Masonry, that we came into the world poor and penniless; under the fostering hand of the Great Architect of the Universe we have passed through the dangers of childhood, and arrived at man's estate; we pass on by regular steps across the chequered flooring of the world, leaving lessons as we go, looking up for return to nature's god. In the Third Degree still greater knowledge is given to us, as we see the emblems of mortality everywhere around us, and the bright star above, whose beams can pierce even through the darkness of the tomb. Thus in every step in Masonry great lessons are inculcated, and the best instruction given: how man must live, how die, how rest in heaven when he shall have ascended to those immortal mansions whence all goodness emanates. Just as King Solomon, in the glorious building he erected conveyed a lesson to the people by every ornament he used, so the Mason learns a lesson from everything he sees and handles. But let it be remembered those symbols are only of advantage when they inculcate and bear in mind some truth, some moral principle. Above all, Masonry leads us to the volume of the Sacred Law as the guide of our actions, and rule of our faith; thus is Masonry the handmaid of religion, echoing the apostle's advice that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, and, that though we now see through a glass darkly, yet the time is drawing near when Masonry and all other human institutions will have passed away, and we shall see the Most High as he is in his temple, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. When that great day comes may he in his mercy grant that our work may be done, and we may be ready.

The ceremony of consecration was then performed, all the details being most carefully and rigidly attended to, and Col. Shadwell Clerke, on the presentation of Bro. J. B. Monckton by Bro. R. H. Giddy, installed Bro. Monckton as W.M. of the Alliance Lodge.

The following brethren were then appointed to the other offices: Bros. L. F. Littell, S.W.; Frank Green, J.W.; Richard Pawley, Treas.; D. H. Ashford, S.D.; H. Wildey Wright, J.D.; Cooper Wild, I.G.; Bowley, Steward; W. W. Brown, Org.; and A. S. Church, Tyler.

Col. Shadwell H. Clerke delivered the addresses, and on resuming his seat was heartily applauded.

Capt. T. Davies Sewell, at the request of the W.M., read the following list of presentations which had been made to the lodge:—The Bible presented by the W.M.; the cushion for the Bible by Bro. Pawley, Treasurer, who also gave the Book of Constitutions, handsomely bound, and the case to hold the warrant of the lodge; the silver square and compasses for the Bible by Bro. Wildey Wright, J.D.; the two columns by Bro. Littell, S.W.; a set of gavel by Bro. Frank Green, J.W.; the rough ashlar by Bro. Ashford, S.D.; and the Deacons' wands by Bro. Cannon.

A record of these presentations was ordered to be made on the minutes of the lodge. Names of intending initiates and joining members were then given in, and on the motion of Bro. Frank Green, J.W., seconded by Bro. Pawley, Treas., Bros. Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, Capt. Phillips, Peter de Lande Long, the Rev. C. W. Arnold, and R. H. Giddy were elected honorary members of the lodge.

Col. Shadwell H. Clerke having acknowledged the compliment, letters of apology were read by Capt. Davies Sewell from Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter), G.D.C.; Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M. for Middx.; and Sheriff Burt, Asst. G.D.C.; apologising for inability to attend the consecration. Lodge was thereupon closed, and the brethren adjourned to an elegant banquet.

At the proposition of the toasts which followed, the W.M. prefaced the toast of "The Queen and the Craft" with the observations that the W.M. of a new lodge occupied a position which no other brother occupied. Every lodge must have a beginning, and the old lodges now in existence had each its period when the W.M. occupied the same position as he did. The W.M.'s of those days knew as little of the future of their lodges as the brethren now in the Alliance Lodge knew what its future was to be. The lodge certainly would be a great lodge judging from the hearty good wishes which were so numerous at the closing of the lodge, and from the admirable and Masonic way in which it had been consecrated. It might not be out of place on this occasion to say a very few words as to the origin of the lodge and how it came about. He was the more anxious to do so because he had been requested to be the first Master, and not having had anything to do with getting up the lodge he did not desire to have any credit which did not belong to him. Other brethren who were in the room, and who were well respected in the Craft, went to him one day, at his office, and told him for the first time that it was contemplated to petition for a warrant for a new lodge that should have for its purpose the bringing together in lodge the brethren who were employed in the Guildhall, and those having matters of business about the Guildhall. The founders, very kindly, were anxious that he should join them and take the chair. This was the origin and commencement of his knowing anything about the Alliance Lodge. He was afraid to say how many years he had been a Mason, but having been the Master of lodges before he was not anxious to seek the honours of that position again. Four years of office in the Master's chair was enough for most men, and he was not ambitious to serve again. That was putting the matter selfishly, but as one got old he got lazy. However, the request was put to him in such a way that he could not say nay, and it was, therefore, by the favour of the founders of the lodge that he was the Master. This was his explanation of the whole matter, and he put it before the brethren because he did not wish to claim the honour of founding the lodge when he was not entitled to it. The W.M. then proposed the toast of "The Queen and the Craft."

The W.M., in proposing "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M.," said that acceptable as the toast always was to Freemasons it was particularly so on the day when the warrant bearing his signature had been read, giving the lodge permission to exist.

The W.M., in proposing "The Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past," said that this toast was of very peculiar interest. He could not conceive anything more valuable, let alone interesting, to a young lodge than that there should be present, as what he might call without offence midwives, at its birth those who stood high and were respected at Grand Lodge of England, under which this lodge held its warrant. He would not for a moment speak of the admirable manner in which the work had been done that evening entirely by Grand Officers. All credit to the Grand Officers for not merely wearing honours, but doing the work in a way which showed they were worthy of those honours. He should couple with this toast the name of the Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, Gen. Brownrigg, than whom he thought no one was more worthy or more popular, because there was not a more Masonic or painstaking a Prov. Grand Master throughout the country. When they found a Provincial Grand Master not merely wearing the honour of being chief of the province, but devoting himself from the beginning to the end of the year to the business of his province, visiting each lodge carefully and undeviatingly—though he had before won the highest honour which could be conferred by Grand Lodge, that of being a Grand Warden—such a brother was entitled to the warmest commendations of all Freemasons. When also he came to visit a young lodge, although he was fully occupied, the brethren must thank him sincerely for the high honour he had conferred upon them.

General Brownrigg, in reply, said, that as a man's old age and services in Masonry increased he was naturally called more frequently to return thanks for this toast, which was certainly one of the most difficult toasts to reply to, because it really involved on the respondent an enormous responsibility. He must ask the brethren to commiserate him because he commiserated those who must have heard him before, and there was nothing new to be said on the subject. Those who had taken the honour of the imperial purple he believed had deserved it, and he was sure their having obtained the honour was an incentive, if an incentive were wanted, to keep up the interest they had always taken in Masonry. The older he grew the more delighted and pleased he was at the advance that Masonry was making, not only in its members, but in the quality of its members. There was a feeling spread throughout the country which had been impressed very forcibly on Masons by many Provincial Grand Masters, that they should take care whom they admitted into the Order. It was very easy to admit a man, but if he was found afterwards to be objectionable it was uncommonly difficult to get rid of him. Therefore, it was impossible to be too cautious whom they admitted. He was glad to have the opportunity of addressing the brethren that evening because he wished to express his deep sense of the delight he felt at being present on the occasion of the consecration of the lodge. It was not only because of the personal regard he had for Bro. Monckton, but it was pleasant to an old Mason to see a good lodge like this established. The brethren must all feel that the W.M. had spoken most modestly of himself with regard to the formation of the lodge, but, depend upon it, the petitioners for the warrant did perfectly right, and it only showed what crafty Craftsmen they were in associating such a name as his with the lodge as its first Master. There was nothing like a good beginning in these matters, as in every thing else in life; even in racing there was nothing like a good start; and he congratulated the Alliance Lodge on having made an admirable start.

Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, proposed "Success to the Alliance Lodge, and the Health of the W.M." He said, though he little deserved the honour of proposing this toast, he felt that the W.M. had placed a degree of confidence in him which he really did not think he entertained; but whether he did or not he was quite satisfied of one thing, that the W.M. would realise the trust which the brethren had placed in him, and that he would carry out the duties of the chair in a manner, if not unsurpassed at any rate unsurpassable. It had been his (Bro. Hervey's) happy fate for many years to be associated with Bro. Monckton, not only in Masonry as an enjoyment, but he might almost say in Masonry as a business. They had been associated together in carrying out the work of the Craft, and in seeing to the wants of their fellow Masons in Griqualand, of which the brother next to him (Bro. Giddy) was a worthy exponent, who well looked after it at all times. It was the duty of the President of the Board of General Purposes to attend to anything and everything which pertained to the well being and well working of the Craft. How Bro. Monckton had looked after those interests he would leave the brethren to judge; and if he had looked after the interests of the Craft as a body so well and so worthily, so also the brethren might look forward to his caring for the interests of the Alliance Lodge in a manner which would not only reflect honour on himself, but credit and success to the brethren. He (Bro. Hervey) was glad indeed to be present, and to have had the honour of receiving an invitation, and to see the work done in the lodge in the masterly way in which it had been performed by their good friend and brother Col. Shadwell Clarke. He was glad to see that fraternal spirit existing among the brethren of the Alliance Lodge, and he trusted it would endure for many years and enable the brethren to carry the lodge on to prosperity and success. He would not say anything more about the W.M., but with respect to the lodge, he wished what all the visitors as well as the members of the lodge wished, that the lodge might prosper, and that for many years they might come and see it from year to year, increasing in numbers, in respectability, and in what he, as an old worker in the Craft, did not think ought to be disregarded, the working of the ceremonies of the Order. The W.M. could instruct the brethren in those ceremonies. He did not mean to say that he would set up a rival lodge to the Emulation Lodge of Improvement: he did not expect that he would endeavour to cut that lodge in Great Queen-street out; but he knew one thing, that if he unfortunately wished to do so unfraternal an act, at any rate he would have the power of doing it, if he had not the disposition. (Laughter.) Bro. Hervey concluded by proposing "Health and Long Life to the W.M., and Prosperity to the Alliance Lodge, No. 1827."

The W.M. in reply, said the Grand Secretary had drawn a very heavy bill upon him, which he at once confessed his inability to meet, but if the Grand Secretary would bear with him till the end of the year he would be inclined to endorse and would endeavour to honour it. He had done little enough for the Alliance Lodge and the Alliance Lodge had little enough to thank him for. He must take care that the good wishes that had been expressed should not be disappointed, and he took it that they were not so much expressions of gratitude for the past as hopes for the future. He would now propose "The Health of the Consecrating Master, Col. Shadwell H. Clarke," who kindly and readily came to perform the most important act of consecrating a new lodge. He had done it in a manner that no Mason, whether old or young, could ever hope to see excelled. He had been in many lodges, but he had never heard it more ably performed. He had heard many consecrations and had dabbled a little in consecrations himself, but he never saw the work better done than it had been that night by Col. Clarke.

Bro. Col. Shadwell H. Clarke, P.G.D., in reply, said he was really so utterly overthrown by the complimentary manner in which the W.M. had introduced his name to the notice of the brethren that he positively did not know how to thank him for it, and, besides that, the brethren had had so many eloquent speeches that a great deal of what he would have said had been taken out of his mouth. However, he would only say this, that it was a very great matter of pleasure to him to be asked to perform the ceremony of consecration. He accepted the office of Consecrating Officer with mingled feelings of pride, of pleasure, and of terror—pride that he should have been chosen, as a very humble member of the Order, to have been put in the conspicuous position of the Grand Master on this occasion; pleasure that he should have been able to do any small service in his power to a dear friend of his and many other members who were personal friends of his; but terror that he should have the awful eye of the President of the Board of General Purposes on him. However, as this terrible functionary had not ordered him out to execution, he might take to himself heart, and believe that what he had done he had done to the satisfaction of the brethren. He had performed the ceremony with the greatest possible pleasure and satisfaction. It was a very great honour to hold the position he had held that evening, and he should never forget it. He should always watch the future of the Alliance Lodge with great interest; but he was sure with such members and such officers the lodge would in a short time hold a position in the Craft second to none, and be wished all the brethren health, happiness, and prosperity.

The W.M. then proposed "The Honorary Members of the Alliance Lodge." It was a toast which he wished to interpolate, as it was only that evening they could do it within the term of their natural lives. When they recollected that these brethren were five in number, the members of the lodge must all feel pleased to honour them. Every one of these brethren had performed his duties most admirably, whether it was the Consecrating Master, the Wardens, the Chaplain, or the Director of Ceremonies. These brethren had long been known in Grand Lodge by their devotion to the interests of Masonry. With reference to the Chaplain, they must all admit that his address was most valuable. Moreover, he had looked after Masonry in the province of which he was Deputy Grand Master, and had attended to the discipline which was necessary. The Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, General Brownrigg, had a most valuable officer in Bro. Arnold. Whether they looked at one or other of the Consecrating Officers, they must all feel thankful to them for having given the light of their countenance to the proceedings. He did not think he should be doing wrong in calling upon Bro. Arnold to respond, and in calling upon him he did it as a matter of curiosity, to see whether his voice after dinner was as mellifluous as it was before.

The Rev. W. C. Arnold, in reply, said that in the name to those who had been elected honorary members of the lodge he had to thank the W.M. and brethren most sincerely for the toast and the hearty reception which had been extended to them. The W.M. had, as it were, challenged him, but it was rather hard when big folks had preceded him, because, he had had the wind taken out of his sails. He might consider that the brethren had already heard quite enough of him. It was very hard that he as a Mason from the wilds of Woking should have to respond and acknowledge the great hospitality the honorary members had received; but still, the Woking brethren were equal to the occasion, and if the London brethren would go there they would see how Masonry was conducted. There was one thing he had omitted to say, which was especially applicable to the brethren round the festive table, and when they were met together in their lodges, that from all their lodges, and on occasions like that they banished religious and political discussions. He believed that this was one of the secrets of success of Masonry. It was said that when a traveller across the desert saw the trees rising in the distance he knew that there was an oasis where there would be fresh sparkling water, and he would be able to refresh himself. Just in the same when we saw a Masons' lodge we knew that after the hard work and toil of the day when we had been rubbed about by things certainly disagreeable by which our temper had been naturally tried, we should go to a haven where we should find rest, brotherly love, and sympathising hearts. It was for this reason especially he believed that so many persons were now pressing into the ranks of Masonry. At the same time we should always take a higher stand and hope that they came not only for that, but that they might be refreshed by those beautiful moral charges of Masonry which would elevate their minds and raise them higher and higher that they might at last ascend to those immortal mansions from whence all goodness emanated.

The W.M. next proposed "The Health of the Visitors." Bro. Kingston, District Grand Master of Malta, was the first to reply, and said he had the pleasure of being present in the Lodge of St. John and St. Paul, in Malta, when Col. Shadwell H. Clarke was installed. While Col. Clarke was Master of the lodge he carried out his duties with zeal and ability, as he promised to do when he was installed. It was not his (Bro. Kingston's) place, neither was he able to make a long speech or enlarge upon Masonry, but nevertheless he might say that Masonry was not better exemplified in any part of the world than in his district. He held a District Grand Lodge in a distant part of that district sometime ago, to which he had to take a sea voyage of 400 miles, and there were in that Grand Lodge four or five different nationalities, and certainly not less than four or five different creeds. Notwithstanding the difference of nationality and creed they were working together under the banner of Masonry, the Protestant and Roman Catholic, the Mahomedan, and the Hebrew, and very likely some offshoots from those creeds. However, he met there with the very same cordial reception from one and all, which he found was accorded to visitors in England. He felt very pleased on this his visit to England to receive so much kindness. He did not often come to the mother country; it was six years since he was here before; but he had been so warmly received among his brother Masons wherever he had gone, that really he felt that there was something in Masonry which bound men together in such a manner as was not found in any other society.

Bro. Frank Richardson, replying to the same toast, said on behalf of himself and the other visitors he felt it a very great honour to have attended the consecration of the Alliance Lodge. Many of the brethren, no doubt, had been at the consecration of various lodges within the last few months, but not one of those lodges had a better chance of taking a first place in Masonry than the Alliance. At the consecration of a lodge the brethren had not much opportunity of seeing the new W.M.'s work, but he could say that, having had the pleasure of a long acquaintance with Bro. Monckton, the work would be done in unexceptionable style. Although the visitors had not that day had the opportunity of congratulating the W.M. upon his work being well done, he hoped that at a future time the W.M. and brethren would give them an opportunity of seeing the work, on which occasion, no doubt, they would express themselves approvingly of it.

Bro. Fowler said that with reference to what Bro. Kingston had said an anecdote might not be out of place. A gentleman, of the name of Blackmore, married his mother's sister. He was one of the unfortunate people who was going out to be guillotined, during the French Revolution. On his way to the fatal drop he made a Masonic sign to the officers through whom he passed, and he was taken away by one of them and escaped to England.

Bro. L. F. Littell, S.W., replied to the toast of "The Officers," and, after expressing the pleasure he felt at being called upon to fill the office of S.W., said he had no doubt the other officers felt as he did. They would not forget the observations that were addressed to them by the Consecrating Officer with regard to their duties. It would be their pleasure as it was their duty to support the W.M. in every possible way, and they would endeavour to discharge their duties in an efficient manner. He hoped that at the end of the W.M.'s year of office he would not have any cause to regret the choice he had made.

The Tyler's toast was then given, and the brethren separated.

The proceedings of the evening were enlivened by some excellent singing and music by Bros. W. W. Brown, Seymour Smith, and other brethren.

FUNERAL OF BRO. W. A. BUTT.

On Monday afternoon, the 28th ult., the remains of the above lamented brother were borne to his resting-place at Littlehampton, amid all the marks of sympathy and respect which it was in the power of a bereaved township—for such it is—to bestow. Soon after three o'clock the melancholy assemblage began to gather near the residence of the deceased in Arundel-road, and about half-past three the coffin—of beautifully polished oak—was borne from the house to the hearse which awaited it, and the sad procession commenced its way to the churchyard, where the family of deceased have a vault. Nearly every shop in the town was shut during the mournful ceremony, flags were flying half-mast high, and a large concourse of people gathered to witness the sad sight. The Fire Brigade—of which deceased was the captain—led the way. They comprised not only the Littlehampton Brigade—whose excellent equipment and organisation are due in large measure to the deceased—but representatives from Worthing, Brighton, Midhurst, Cliftonville, Chichester, Horsham, and Bognor. The vicar and the Rev. A. S. Thompson, incumbent of St. John's, walked next, then Drs. Evans and Vines, and after them came the hearse containing the body, and preceded by Mr. Snewin, who had charge of the funeral arrangements. Immediately following the body were the two brothers of deceased, and his immediate male relatives, numbering about twenty. The Freemasons, of whom Bro. Butt was a Past Master, came after, all dressed in black with white gloves, each bearing a sprig of acacia (the emblem of friendship), and headed by their Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Dunlop. Then followed the numerous workmen in the employ of Messrs. John Eade Butt and Sons, and after them the tradesmen and townspeople, with many friends from Arundel, all in emblems of mourning. There was scarcely a tradesman absent—we think we may almost say not one, willingly. Slowly the cortege moved down Arundel-road and High-street, filling nearly the whole length of the latter, to the church, where the coffin was removed from the hearse, and the Past Masters and officers of the Howard Lodge stepped forward and bore the pall, the firemen having meantime formed a double line and kept a pathway to the door of the church. The clergy, the Revs. Rumball, Thompson, and Dunlop, took their places before the altar, and when the large assembly were seated the first part of the solemn service was read by the vicar. The coffin was here covered with wreaths of splendid flowers and immortelles, laid with touching reverence and many tears upon it; and the large building was crowded. This part of the service over, the Masons left the church and formed lines closed to the open grave, through which the body was brought, and the Revs. Messrs. Dunlop and Thompson read the remainder of the funeral service. The friends then took their last sad look of the coffin, the Freemasons cast their sprigs of acacia in the grave, the townspeople filed in long procession up to look their last upon one who has been almost beloved, and the ceremony was over. So sad a spectacle—and one in which not the mere show of outward respect but real sorrow was so largely manifested—has, perhaps, never been witnessed in Littlehampton; and if anything can give comfort to the relatives in their irreparable loss, it must be the fact of the spontaneous sympathy and sorrow which the community, almost as one man, displayed towards the memory of their deceased townsman. Bro. Butt was thirty-two years of age, and his body rests in the family vault, near the northern entrance to the churchyard.—Sussex Daily News.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Thursday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall. Col. Creaton, Grand Treasurer, presided. There were also present Bros. R. B. Webster, A. H. Tattershall, H. A. Dubois, E. Letchworth, Col. Peters, Henry Venn, James Moon, C. F. Matier, Thos. Cubitt, Herbert Dicketts, F. R. W. Hedges (Secretary), H. Massey (Freemason).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, one petition was received, and the candidate placed on the list for next election.

The Audit Committee having recommended that £2000 of the General Funds be invested, the Chairman said that as it would be necessary to build a boundary wall to the grounds of the Institution, in lieu of the wooden fence, which was now worn out, he thought it would be better not to invest the whole of the £2000 as money would be required for the building of the wall, and he proposed that £1500 should be invested.

The Committee adopted this view and ordered the investment of £1500.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

BRO. KENNING AND THE INTERNATIONAL BANQUET.

The following fraternal telegram has been received, which we think it right to communicate for the information and satisfaction of our many readers:—

"From Charles Eugene Meyer, 722, Arch-street, Philadelphia, U.S.A., to George Kenning, Esq., Little Britain, London.—On behalf of the American brethren I desire to tender their hearty good wishes to Bro. Kenning on this, the Anniversary of the International Banquet. Kindest regards to Bro. Woodford."

THE RITE ECOSSAIS IN FRANCE.

We have received a letter on this unseasonable controversy which is now apparently about to agitate the Rite Ecosais in France, from Bro. Paul Goumain-Cornille, a French barrister, which we print elsewhere, as well as some pamphlets, which we had previously seen. We also give a translation of the letter. We fear that nothing we can say will please our correspondent, as we have nothing to rectify or withdraw. We wrote quite clearly and calmly, with full knowledge of the subject, and the article was in no way suggested by others. We spoke, (as we trust we always shall speak), with a full sense of responsibility, and an entire conviction of the unwisdom of this present agitation, and of entire sympathy, we may remark, with the "Administrative Commission." For, as we pointed out last week, the fundamental error which pervades this hasty cry for reform, or rather revolution, is simply the development of the so-called rights of the "symbolic lodges," and practically their future government of the Rite Ecosais. And here it is that we join issue with the leaders of this wonderful movement, not being members of the "Rite Ecosais" ourselves, but speaking, "ab extra," as Craft Masons and Craft philosophers, and above all "amici curiæ." The "Rite Ecosais" is not a symbolical body, but a High Grade body, and in it the High Grades must be paramount and predominant. Indeed, we are struck with the great liberality of the Constitution of the "Grande Loge Centrale" as conceded and arranged by the High Grades. It is only an accident that the Rite Ecosais as in France grants charters for symbolical lodges. Neither in England nor America does the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite grant charters for Craft lodges. To contend, as Bros. Clement and Cornille do, that the symbolical lodges have a grievance because, though there is a majority in the Grand Lodge, they cannot also control the "Administrative Commission," is, in our opinion, alike unfair and unjust to the High Grades in every way. Indeed, according to our view, both, we venture to think, impartial and equitable, those who are thus seeking to make of the Rite Ecosais another symbolical Grand Lodge, in which the symbolical lodges are now to lay down the law to the Thirty-third Degree itself, forget the history of the Rite Ecosais, and are acting in defiance of all precedent, order, and common justice. We must confess, therefore, though we fear that our confession will not please our good Bros. Clement and Cornille, that our sympathies in this heated discussion are entirely with the "Administrative Commission," upholding, as that body evidently seeks to do, legally and loyally, the rightful position of the High Grades.

SCRUTINEERS.

Bro. Meggy's motion stands over until October, for the appointment of a Committee to consider the present system. We are among those who, despite the eloquent statements of Bros. Hirsch, and Cox, and Meggy, think that a "mountain has been made of a molehill." Given certain inaccuracies, they are rectified on appeal, and as "misfortunes will occur in the best regulated families," so errors will creep in amidst the calculations of the most skilful and energetic of Scrutineers. To say the truth, we think—perhaps it is rather audacious for us to say so after such high authorities have spoken—that we do not want a Committee at all. It seems to us a very simple question of Masonic detail and practice, if we may use such an expression on such a subject. The chairman of the meeting ought, in our opinion, to be empowered to appoint the Scrutineers ad hoc, and as it will be in his interest to appoint well known, and expert, and trusted brethren, the business of the scrutiny will be speedily, and safely, and accurately accomplished. Up to the present time, brethren with qualifications for the duty, or with no qualifications at all, have thrust themselves forward, and, as no one liked to "bell the cat," inefficient Scrutineers have, no doubt, often got on the board, and that too under the tutelary ægis of a general Quarterly Court, which we, therefore, from some experience, do not consider the best body to elect the Scrutineers. We repeat that we feel persuaded if the Scrutineers were appointed by the Chairman we should soon hear the end of complaints on this score. A very slight alteration will enable such a salutary change to be effected—in the Boys' and Girls' Schools, at any rate, and probably in the R.M.B. Institution. But we should not be doing our duty to our readers, or to our great Charities, if we did not further express our opinion honestly and openly, as we always shall do, that certain "commissariat arrangements," in respect of the Scrutineers, should be at once amended, as there is no doubt that there are evils, and that there are expenses connected with our Scrutineers, which ought at once to be reduced and remedied. No one, least of all a Freemason, who is never a fanatic on such subjects, and who believes in the moderate use of all the gifts to man of T.G.A.O.T.U., will grudge to brethren proper refreshment after a long sitting and tedious duty. The "labourer is worthy of his hire," and the Scrutineer deserves after work refreshment, but then it ought to be after work—not during work, and all such refreshment should be alike reasonable and moderate. The licence of the hour rather leads to little allowances in this respect, which might, we are inclined to think, be susceptible of much abuse by those inclined to abuse them, but we fancy we express the feelings of the majority of the subscribers when we urge on the Secretaries of our Institutions not to encourage such a use of what is lawful and proper as may in any way tend to be a tax on the Charities and to an interference with the careful work of the Scrutineers. And do not let any of our readers think us wishful to interfere with their reasonable comforts and lawful convenience when we finally say, that we feel sure that the work of the scrutiny itself would be better conducted if the undue and novel habit of smoking during work was at once prohibited and put a stop to. We trust that what we have said will commend itself to the good feeling and good sense of our readers, and as we always are zealous of the honour of Freemasonry and the prestige of our Charities, so we desiderate above all things, that we should maintain our character before all of being men of business habits, men of habitual thoughtfulness and reasonable self control.

KEEP YOUR TEMPER:

We are struck, as all must be, with the hopelessness of Masonic controversy. Be it about great things or small, important or trifling, matters of practice or matters of sentiment, straight-way one or both of the combatants seem, the moment they get into print, to lose their temper, and descend to personality. Lord Beaconsfield, in his well-known story of "Coningsby," gives us an amusing illustration of a similar state of things, arising from a once prevalent and peculiar view of political controversies. "If any one impeached," he tells us, "the management of a department, the public were told that the accuser had embezzled; if any one complained of a colonial governor, the complainant was denounced as a returned convict. An amelioration of the criminal code was discountenanced because on search in the parish register of an obscure village it was found that the proposer had not been born in wedlock." It is this amusing, if hurtful, tendency to substitute pure personality for logic, grammar, and common courtesy, which too often marks our Masonic gladiators. If time permitted, or if space was propitious, we might give numerous laughable proofs of this perversity of the Masonic mind, under certain conditions of print and publicity. The good-natured brother in common life becomes irritable and discourteous in our columns; while the brother whose whole antecedents point to a full knowledge of what constitutes the gentleman and the Mason, descends at once, when in print, (strange metamorphosis), to unhandsome insinuations, or bitter personalities. It has been said by some one that all "controversy evokes the worst passions and feelings of humanity, in that it touches the secret springs of self-conceit, and self-assurance, and self-complacency," but "for the life of us," we never can understand why, as Freemasons, we should invariably seek ostentatiously to demonstrate to all around, if only we once get into a correspondence on subjects, whether of the highest importance or even the veriest trifles in existence, our own utter oblivion of every principle we profess as a fraternity, of the whole moral teaching of our excellent and useful Order. If any persons should be careful and considerate in what they say of others; if any individuals should be self-restrained in tongue and self-controlled in temper; if any writers should carefully avoid personal imputations and even slanderous suggestions—surely we, as Freemasons, should claim and exercise these distinct and unfailing characteristics. If we do not and will not do so the world will assuredly say, and not without reason or justice, that our professions and practice do not "square," and that, like many other fellow mortals, we only prove how easy it is to "preach," how hard, how very hard indeed, it is to "practise." So we venture to give this friendly and fraternal advice to all Masonic controversialists, be they who they may "remember that you are Freemasons when you write, and in whatever you write about, and then, perhaps, you may, happily, learn both to amend your vocabulary, and to improve your style, and to keep your temper, so that the world will not be able to say scoffingly, as it often does to-day, "How very charming! See how these Freemasons, always talking of brotherly love, like to abuse each other."

TRUTH.

The more we think over the article in Truth to which we adverted in our last, the more we regret that habit of "sensationalism" which is so grievously injuring the position and prospects of the press. Papers foolish and obscure appear for a time, and seem to revel in grotesque slanders and personal incriminations. The history of an individual or a family is commented upon and dissected minutely for the gratification of whom?—a few brainless youths, who can barely spell, who write "bet," even, with two "t's," and whose life is made up of "maundering" from billiards to "S. and B.," and from races to smoking rooms. The consequence is they live in a vitiated atmosphere, and require, like their appetites, high-spiced nutriment. Habitually and morally their mind is diseased. But what a weak, and, we may add, what a low order of mind is that which exults in the garbage of anonymous slander, or the vulgar inuendoes of personal scandal, which is gratified in thinking that all are as bad as itself, that virtue is an idle word, honesty a non-existent quality. Anything more deteriorating to the public taste or to personal morals than some of the papers we hear about and see just now, we cannot well conceive. We regret to note that Truth has pandered to this injurious but prevalent "fashion," and we would beg to point out to our contemporary that thus coming forward with the old, old story of an "Exposure of Masonry," of which the world is sick, though he avoids the "Charibdis" of the self-confessing traits by the line he has taken, he yet falls into the "Scylla" of the silly, gossiping, credulous gobemouche.

Let us hope that we have heard the last of similar foolish attacks on our good old Order, and Freemasonry, which laughs at them, can afford to be alike forbearing and forgiving.

MISSING INDIVIDUALS.

It is impossible, we think, not to feel something like great anxiety when we read in the "agony column," properly so termed, of the Times those startling advertisements which tell us of male and female disappearances, like that of "Leopold Landmann," or the lady whose linen is marked "D" with a coronet. No doubt a good deal may be allowed just now for that insane love of "sensationalism" so prevalent, for foolish "escapades," and for "police considerations." Many of these disappearances are not truly disappearances, and though they are the "town talk" for an hour, and give the police a good deal of trouble often for many days, are simple experiments on the patience of friends, on the childishness of the public, or the forbearance even of justice. But yet there is another, and a darker side to the picture, a "nocturne," if you like, which, "pace" Mr. Ruskin, we must contemplate. Some of us may remember Bauer's case, which startled us all a few years ago, and which in truth, say what we will, or hush it up as we like, constituted a great scandal on our metropolis, and on our boasted civilization. That a young man and his luggage should disappear, bodily and entirely, leave his hotel or a railway station in the middle of the day in London, and that no traces can be found of him anywhere, is a fact most serious for us, and suggests many other considerations very painful and alarming, whether for the liberty of the subject, or the comfort and safety of the metropolis. Now putting on one side for the moment the possible personal or police view of the case, (though both require always to be kept in mind), let us consider the matter as it affects us peaceful citizens of our "little village," "living under our vine and fig tree," (metaphorically of course), and "drinking the waters," (not always wholesome), of our own cisterns. Undoubtedly in this as in other directions a "craze" comes over the public from time to time, and there have been periods in the history more or less of all great capitals, where persons have disappeared in succession without any ostensible reason, and without for a long time any possible discovery. But is there then beyond the probable recklessness perhaps, or folly, or wickedness of some "sensationalists," male or female, any possible and reasonable explanation of those mysterious disappearances? Is there any system at work amongst us which would facilitate such a regrettable state of affairs if means were found to make it worth while for any to incur the risk of detection and legal punishment, by pandering to the cupidity or revenge of others, and causing certain persons to disappear from active life? Several of our Judges have from time to time, in striking words, warningly reprobated that system of "special agency" which is now in full swing amongst us, of which we see notable advertisements, and which may clearly be turned by the disreputable and the desperate to the worst purposes, and to the most criminal ends. Many of the recent proceedings of our police and law courts must inspire and alarm the minds of all who value the English constitution, and are proud of the liberties we enjoy as English citizens. Striking cases tell us of special agents terming themselves "detectives," (a word solely belonging to the police force), apeing the functions, assuming the very name of the police, intimidating the weak, watching the unsuspecting, tampering with the characters of servants, and performing acts for which they have no possible warrant. No Englishman has a right, for instance, to be followed about, except by a sworn officer of justice, or a sworn officer of law, and any such act is in itself "an incentive to a breach of the peace." Yet this is precisely what is now of daily, hourly occurrence by special agents. We are of opinion, therefore, that the whole special agency system requires the strictest "surveillance" of the police, as dangerous to "public safety," and as very susceptible, (the gains are so great), of being turned by the unscrupulous and the penniless, of whom there are many in such a city as London, to the very worst possible purposes. It will be remembered in Bauer's most mysterious case, (almost inexplicable to us still), that the "secret societies" were stated to be the "motive cause," but knowing as we do the "dangerous class" from which special agency is recruited, we are rather inclined to believe that "some one" has made it worth "somebody else's" while to bring about that "denouement" of disappearance which startles all so much. At the same time we do not wish to be unjust even to "special agents," and we shall be glad to hear that to some other causes these and other disappearances are really owing. One question we should like to have answered—what becomes of the "luggage?" The persons disappear, where do their effects go to? Is there perchance a "Special-Agency-Lost-and-Unclaimed Luggage Department," where all these "little objects" can be found? or do they disappear amid the philanthropic attentions of accommodating "fences," and the kindly solicitude of marine store dealers, male and female? We think that we may fairly commend such a matter to the careful attention of the City Detective Force and the Criminal Investigation Department at Scotland Yard.

THE FRENCH ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE.

Monsieur le Directeur du "Freemason," à Londres.

J'ai lu avec surprise l'article contenu dans votre estimable journal sur les événements qui préoccupent si vivement tous les esprits des Maçons Ecossais en France et à l'Etranger. Il me paraît évident que votre bonne foi a été surprise, et, pour vous donner la possibilité de juger par vous-même du caractère profondément Maçonnique du mouvement dont mes amis et moi nous acceptons la responsabilité, je crois ne pouvoir mieux faire que de vous transmettre les brochures et documents qui contiennent l'expression de nos idées.

Après avoir lu ces écrits, nous avons la confiance que dans votre haute impartialité vous voudrez bien reconnaître que nos demandes du réforme sont présentées sur un ton modéré qui appelle la discussion, et non les apostrophes violentes dont votre journal s'est fait l'écho. Il est possible de contester l'utilité des réformes que nous demandons, mais on ne saurait justement nous refuser le mérite d'agir avec le calme que comporte une conviction sincère dans la justice de notre cause.

Je vous serais très-reconnaissant de m'adresser le numéro de votre journal qui contiendra la rectification que j'ose attendre de votre équité.

Veillez agréer Monsieur le Directeur, l'hommage de ma considération distinguée

P. GOUMAIN-CORNILLE.

TRANSLATION.

I have read with surprise the article contained in your estimable journal with respect to the events which preoccupy so anxiously the minds of all Scotch Masons, in France and abroad. It is evident to me that your good faith has been surprised, and in order to give you the possibility of judging for yourself the profoundly Masonic character of the movement of which myself and my friends accept the responsibility, I think I cannot do better than transmit to you the pamphlet and the documents which contain the exact expression of our ideas.

After having read these we have the confidence that in your high impartiality you will readily admit the fact, that our demands and reform call for discussion, and do not deserve the violent epithets of which your journal has been made the echo. It is possible to contest the reforms which we ask for, but it would be impossible justly to refuse to us the merit of acting with the calmness which belongs to a sincere conviction in the justice of our cause.

I shall be very grateful if you will send me the number of your journal containing the rectification, which I venture to await from your equity.

[We have read the documents, but see leader for our opinion, and reply to our Bro. Cornille.—Ed. F.M.]

CHARITY REFORM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You must have been dwelling in some very serene and sequestered lodge not to have known as well as heard of the "abuses" of the present charity voting system.

Let me, however, accept your challenge, and re-state some of these parasitical growths that have gradually our readers some of the leading features in his graces' career.

And, first, as to his Masonic achievements, the materials for forming a just conception of which are somewhat scanty, though enough is known to show that he was in every way worthy of the honour bestowed upon him when he was nominated and unanimously elected "our first noble Grand Master." It was at his request that, on 24th June, 1721, and just previous to his installation at Stationers' Hall as Grand Master, several gentlemen, among whom figured Philip, Lord Stanhope, afterwards Earl of Chesterfield, were initiated into Freemasonry, the ceremony taking place at the Queen's Arms, St. Paul's Churchyard, where Grand Master Payne and his Wardens, accompanied by the Masters and Wardens of twelve lodges, had assembled for the purpose of meeting their noble Grand Master elect, and where, when Grand Lodge had been opened, the minutes recording his election were confirmed. Thence Grand Lodge marched in procession to Stationers' Hall, where they were received by 150 brethren properly clothed. His grace was then installed, and having received the salutations of all present, at once appointed Bro. John Beal, M.D., F.R.S., to the office of Deputy Grand Master. This is the first brother appointed to that exalted office, and is the same with the Bro. John Beal, M.D., F.R.S., who as W.M. of Lodge No. 12 signed the "approbation" to the first edition of the Constitutions published in 1723. On this occasion also what are known as the Old Regulations, which had been compiled by Grand Master Payne with so much care and ability, were read and generally approved, so that on the very opening day of the new Grand Master's reign Freemasonry received a fresh impetus in the direction of a clearer and better defined disciplinary code. We may not unreasonably attribute to this the later energy he displayed in the same direction. At all events, very soon after his election he charged Anderson, who was assisted in his task by Past Grand Masters Dr. Desaguliers and Payne, with the revision, arrangement, and digest of the Gothic Constitutions, old charges, and general regulations. So expeditiously did they work, that at the next meeting of Grand Lodge, held at the Queen's Arms, St. Paul's Churchyard, on the 25th December in the same year, the manuscript was submitted, and a Committee of fourteen brethren was appointed to consider and report upon the same. At the Grand Lodge held at the Fountain, in the Strand, on the 25th March, 1722, the Committee reported their approval, subject to certain amendments they had thought proper to introduce, and Grand Lodge gave orders for the whole to be prepared for the press and printed with all possible expedition. However, the publication and formal approbation of the Book of Constitutions belong to the Grand Mastership of the Duke of Wharton. Suffice it, therefore, to say, that while the signatures of his Grace of Wharton, of his Deputy and Wardens, and the Masters and Wardens of twenty lodges are appended to the first, or 1723, edition of the Constitutions, to John, Duke of Montagu, belongs the honour of having taken the initiative in directing their preparation. Thus, so long as Masonry, and especially English Freemasonry, continues to flourish, it will, we feel assured, most readily acknowledge its indebtedness to the zeal and attention, as exhibited in this matter, by our first noble Grand Master.

But in one respect we are, if possible, still more deeply indebted to his Grace of Montagu. Had, as at one time seemed not unlikely, a schism then broken out in the newly-constituted fraternity it might have proved fatal to its existence, or, at all events, most seriously retarded its progress. However, such a catastrophe, though, as our readers are aware, it occurred several years later, was happily averted at the time, thanks to the kind and conciliatory spirit shown by the duke. Such was his grace's popularity that, in 1722, he was nominated a second time to fill the office of Grand Master, but his re-nomination gave umbrage to the young, ambitious, and eccentric Duke of Wharton, who, though he had not then filled the office of Master of a lodge, convened a meeting of brethren at Stationers' Hall on 24th June, 1722—according to Preston on 25th March of that year—had himself proclaimed Grand Master of Masons and appointed his officers. These irregular proceedings might have induced the most serious consequences had it not been that Montagu, as it is excellently well put in Bro. Kenning's Cyclopadia, "was not only less ambitious, but also much more Masonic," while even the Duke of Wharton—according to Preston—saw immediately the error of his ways, and publicly acknowledged the wrong of which he had been guilty. By this as it may, the Duke of Montagu summoned a meeting of Grand Lodge on 17th January, 1723, and waiving his own undoubted claims to the office, himself installed his brother duke as Grand Master of England. Such a noble instance of forbearance, securing, as it did, the complete restoration of harmony in our newly-formed Grand Lodge, deserves all the honour which publicity, again and again renewed, must bring with it. The cases in which it can be paralleled are, even in Masonry, few and far between.

We have but little to add to this portion of our sketch. The Duke occupied the Masonic throne for over a year-and-a-half, namely, from the 24th June, 1721, to the day his successor was installed, that is to 17th January, 1723, or, as it was then customary to reckon it, 1723 or 1723-3. We read of him as having been present at the installation at Merchant Taylors' Hall, on 19th April, 1732, of Viscount Montagu, to whom, however, he was not related, and doubtless, in the quarter of a century and upwards which elapsed between the events we have been recording and his death in 1749, there were many other occasions on which he showed his interest in Freemasonry. Lastly, it is worth while mentioning that there are still in existence four lodges whose warrants of constitution were granted during the period of his Grand Mastership, namely, British, No. 8, warranted 19th January, 1722; Westminster and Keystone, No. 10, warranted 28th January, 1722; Royal Alpha, No. 16, warranted May, 1722; and Tuscan, No. 14, warranted 25th November, 1722.

GRAND MASONIC FAIR.

In our issue of the 19th ult., we directed the attention of our readers to the proposed Masonic Fair to be held at St. John, N.B., Canada. We have now to state that contributions of articles or money can be sent to the brethren named up to and including August 23rd.

Masonic and General Tidings.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.—In our report of the above the appointment of Bro. G. C. Adames, of the Phoenix Mark Lodge, as P.G.M. St. R., was omitted.

EXETER.—A grand Masonic Bazaar and garden party, under distinguished patronage, will be held at Exeter on the 27th inst., in aid of the orphans of the soldiers who fell at Isandula, the scheme for the education of children of deceased Freemasons in Devon, and of the Freemasons' Hall Building Fund, Exeter.

Bro. Alderman Bridgen met with an awkward accident in London a few days since, and, indeed, had a very narrow escape. He was alighting from an omnibus in the Strand, when the wheel of a passing cab struck him in the back and knocked him down. The wheel then passed over his foot, and he was severely bruised. Fortunately, however, the worthy alderman was not seriously hurt; and we are pleased to join his numerous friends in congratulating him on the fact that the accident was attended with no graver results.—Brighton Examiner, July 29th.

THE NEW TOWN HALL, FREE LIBRARY, &c., AT READING.—The foundation stone of the new public buildings to be erected at Reading, at an estimated cost of £44,000, is to be laid with Masonic honours, and the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master of the English Freemasons, has consented to perform the ceremony on Tuesday, the 14th of October next, when his lordship will be accompanied by the Countess. It is anticipated that there will be a numerous attendance of Freemasons on the occasion.

ANONYMOUS MUNIFICENCE.—At the recent meeting of the Governors of the Chelsea Hospital for Women the Earl of St. Germans (the President) received at the hands of the Rev. Canon Fleming (one of the Board of Management) an anonymous donation of £1000, towards providing furniture for the new hospital. In the spirit of true charity it is given on the express condition "that no name is mentioned," it being simply acknowledged as "From a Friend, per Canon Fleming." We know not which to admire the more, the munificence of the gift or the manner of bestowment.

On Saturday, the 26th ult., the members of the St. Paul's Ecclesiastical Society made an antiquarian visit—the last expedition of the present season—to the Abbey Church of Waltham Holy Cross, under the conduct of Mr. G. F. Birch. The vicar, the Rev. J. Francis, who is a member of the Society, offered every facility to those who wished to make a pilgrimage to Harold's tomb. On reaching the church, Mr. Birch read a paper, mainly from his own notes and those of Mr. William Burges, Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects, describing in detail the existing fabric, which he showed to be only the nave of the ancient structure, the chancel and transepts, with the central tower, having been thrown down at the Reformation, while the nave, like the Abbey of St. Albans, was utilised as the parish church. He showed that antiquaries were not agreed as to whether the Norman arches which divide the nave from the side aisles, and the clerestory and triforium above, were or were not actually the work of Tosti and Harold, the latter of whom is said to have formerly lain in the old and long demolished chancel. He also commented at considerable length upon the Lady Chapel on the south side, the flat roof, the windows, and other features of the church, which has lately undergone a very extensive and careful restoration on the old lines. Mr. De Grey Birch, of the British Museum, exhibited some fac-simile casts of the old monastic seals of Waltham Abbey in the days of its splendour, and also read a most interesting account of the legend of the first foundation of the Abbey and of the later life of Harold, who—if the story be true—was not slain at Hastings, though severely wounded, but lived to put on the cowl of a monk at or near Chester, on the banks of the Dee.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—[ADVT.]

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Gout.—These purifying and soothing remedies demand the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, sciatica, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves, or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the unguent should be diligently rubbed upon the adjacent skin, unless the friction should cause pain. Holloway's Pills should be simultaneously taken to reduce inflammation and to purify the blood. This treatment abates the violence, and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases, which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. The Ointment checks the local remedy. The Pills restore the vital powers.—[ADVT.]

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

ALEXANDRA PALACE LODGE (No. 1541).—This youthful but exceedingly prosperous lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Saturday last, the W.M. Bro. John Lee, and the whole of his officers being present at the opening of the lodge. The W.M., after the preliminaries of the lodge had been disposed of, initiated Mr. Emanuel into the mysteries of Freemasonry in a most masterly manner. The W.M. afterwards passed Bro. Ormond to the Second Degree; but the climax of good working was attained in the raising of Bros. A. Clark and McCulloch—the W.M., surpassed, if possible, his usual eloquent and impressive working, and in this good work he was well supported by Bros. Daniel, S.W.; Larchin, J.W.; Stacey, as S.D.; Denison, J.D.; and Gush, I.G.; and a painstaking P.M. was also found in Bro. Haigh. The excellent working of this lodge was much exalted by many P.M.'s of various lodges who honoured the Master by their attendance. The W.M., in his deep anxiety to enhance not only the good work of Masonry, but to please the brethren, had invited the ladies of the members to banquet, after the business of the lodge had been gone through, and for the pleasures of the evening Bros. Bertram and Roberts had provided a most recherché banquet, which was in every way fully acknowledged. The W.M. amongst his many toasts paid a tribute to the ladies for their honouring the banquet by their presence, which was felicitously responded to, on behalf of the ladies, by Bros. Reubenstein and Brookman. Many songs were sung with much expression and taste by Misses Daniel, McCulloch, Stead, and Stacey, and Bros. Ward, Stead, and McCulloch. Several pieces were performed on the piano-forte by Misses Bennett, McCulloch, and Stacey. The musical arrangements were carefully carried out by Bro. Ward. The W.M., in replying to the good wishes expressed in his behalf, said, so gratified was he with the success of the day's proceedings, that he should note it in his memory as one of the reddest of red letter days, and as he had been so ably assisted by his officers in carrying on the lodge work, as well as in his endeavours to carry out the programme of the evening, he most heartily thanked them, which was eloquently acknowledged by Bros. Daniel, S.W.; Dyte, P.M., Treasurer; and J. R. Stacey, P.M., Secretary.

ALL SAINTS LODGE (No. 1716).—The regular bi-monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 1st inst., at the Town Hall, Poplar. There were present Bros. John Dennis, W.M.; J. Kemp Coleman, S.W.; L. Potts, J.W.; W. H. Farnfield, P.M., and many other brethren. The business consisted in passing Bro. Wilshaw and initiating Mr. John Smith—the second candidate for the First Degree was unable at the last moment to attend. This being the last regular meeting of the Masonic year of the lodge, the election of W.M. for the ensuing year then took place, and the suffrages of the brethren were unanimously conferred upon the S.W., Bro. J. Kemp Coleman. The W.M., in communicating the pleasing fact to his S.W., reminded the brethren that Bro. Coleman had only been a Mason three years, and in that time had served the office of Steward to both the Boys' and Girls' Institutions, taking up to the former Charity £50 and to the latter £63, and, as W.M. of the lodge, he had given in his name to complete the Stewardships by representing the lodge at the Benevolent Institution, where he hoped a list equal to those he had mentioned would be presented. Bro. Coleman returned thanks for the honour conferred upon him, and, after the routine business of electing Treasurer, Tyler, and the Audit Committee, and the meeting of a summer festival, to be held in September—where all attending contribute their proportion of the expense, the lodge funds not being touched—the meeting adjourned, the lodge being closed in due form.

GREENWICH.—Lodge of Amity (No. 171).—The last meeting for the season of this popular "summer lodge," whose members so well and worthily exemplify the motto which is inscribed on their banner, Esto Perpetua, was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 5th inst., at the famous old Ship Tavern, at Greenwich. About thirty of the brethren assembled soon after four o'clock, many having taken advantage of an agreeable trip by steamer from London, which, on so bright an afternoon, is always enjoyable. At half-past four lodge was opened, in accordance with ancient rites, under the presidency of Bro. J. Clever, of Lewisham, who now fills the presidential chair for the second time. It will be recollected that in June last Bro. Clever was installed by his own son, who is now the respected I.P.M. and Secretary of the lodge, and who, at the preceding annual meeting, was installed by his father, who was retiring from his first occupancy of the chair. It is not often such an interesting occurrence is to be noted in connection with any lodge, and shows the confidence and goodwill which is felt by the brethren towards Bro. Clever, who have done so much to carry on the affairs of the lodge in a satisfactory manner. The Worshipful Master on this occasion was supported by Bros. Edward Phillips, S.W.; W. H. Marden, J.W.; C. Harcourt, Treas.; Joseph W. Clever, I.P.M. and Sec.; G. G. Gooding, S.D.; E. H. Buck, J.D.; F. C. W. Penn, I.G.; and S. P. Smith, Tyler. There were also present Bros. Whitley, P.M.; T. Batty, P.M.; J. Browne, F. L. Toms, J. R. Tannahill, E. H. Maddick, G. W. Dodd, and others. Amongst the visitors were Bros. B. Hayter, P.M. 231; J. Sealey, 25; A. S. Treherne, 1441; J. L. Whitmarsh, 49; and others. Lodge having been opened in form, and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, the ballot was prepared for Mr. James Richard Tannahill, who had been proposed by Bro. Penn, seconded by the Worshipful Master. The votes were unanimously in favour of the candidate, who, being present, was initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order by the W.M., who worked the whole of the ceremony in a creditable manner. Subsequently the lodge was advanced, when Bro. F. L. Toms, who was found to have made sufficient progress, was raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M. A few matters of business were transacted, the principal of which was that relating to country members, but the discussion ended in the matter being deferred until the next meeting, in May, 1880. The customary congratulations having been exchanged, the lodge was closed in due form, when the brethren sat down to an elaborate banquet, served in a style for which the old "Ship" has long been celebrated. The dishes were interspersed with epigrams and vases of choice cut flowers, which emitted a delicious fragrance, whilst the dessert was of a recherché description. At the conclusion of an admirably served repast, the customary loyal toasts were proposed by the W.M., and received with honours. The W.M. then rose and said he was about to submit to them a toast which he felt convinced would be received with the heartiest satisfaction, as it was always a welcome one to the brethren of the Lodge of Amity, and that was "The Health of the Initiate" that day. They were all pleased to welcome Bro. Tannahill into their midst, and they treated his life might be long, happy, and prosperous amongst them. (Applause.) They all knew Bro. Tannahill as one with whom they were delighted to associate, and no doubt he would form an agreeable acquisition to the Lodge of Amity. The toast was most cordially received, and, in responding, Bro. J. R. Tannahill thanked the brethren sincerely for the very hearty welcome which had been accorded to him on this occasion. He felt it a great honour to be admitted into the ancient and honourable institution of Freemasonry. It would be his pleasurable duty so to apply himself to a study of the art as should enable him to comprehend fully its value and advantages, and he trusted he might be apt in the acquirement of that progress which all true Masons must desire. (Applause.) The I.P.M. next proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master," who had that evening given them another opportunity of seeing the manner in which he had performed the ceremonies of the lodge, and the geniality with which he did the honours of the table. There were already an initiation and passing on the agenda paper for the opening meeting of next season, which took place next May, when they might hope again to meet a goodly assemblage of the brethren in that neighbourhood, which was so full of historical associations. The toast having been most heartily accepted by the company, the Worshipful Master sincerely thanked the brethren for the repeated compliment which they had paid to him. They had extended to him a very kind indulgence, in what he felt had been shortcoming in his rendering of the ritual on this occasion; but he accounted for the want of his usual confidence by an unexpected and painful circumstance which had happened during the afternoon just before he came to the lodge. A friend of his, who had been staying with him, had been taken suddenly ill, and this had greatly alarmed him. He had barely time to rush off, and had been excessively unnerved in consequence of the painful occurrence. He hoped, however, in the future to perform the duties of his office as he had hitherto done, and he thanked them most heartily for their having been to his faults a little blind on that occasion. In proposing "The Health of the Visitors," he said this was always a toast proverbially welcome to the brethren of the Lodge of Amity; and he alluded in felicitous terms to each of the visitors who had honoured them with their presence on that occasion. Bro. Hughes, P.M., and Bro. J. Sealey severally responded, acknowledging the magnificent hospitality which had been extended to the visitors that day, and expressing the pleasure which had been afforded them by the working of the lodge, and a visit to this grand historical locality, to which allusion had already been made. The Worshipful Master then proposed "The Healths of the Past Masters of the Lodge, Bro. Harcourt, Whitley, Batty, and Clever, jun.," the toast being warmly received. Bro. Clever, I.P.M., alluded to the fact that the attendance of Past Masters was not quite so numerous as usual, and he regretted the absence of Bro. Cooper, who was no doubt with them in spirit, although he had been unavoidably prevented from attending. The Past Masters were always desirous of doing their duty, and of helping forward all measures that were calculated to promote the interest and welfare of the lodge. The W.M. next proposed "The Healths of the Treasurer and Secretary," the former of whom was the oldest member of the lodge, and who had rendered them great and valuable services. With regard to their Secretary he was comparatively new to the duties of his office, though he was not new to him (the speaker). These officers deserved well of the brethren, and he asked them, therefore, to drink most cordially to the toast which he had proposed. Bro. Harcourt, P.M., in responding, observed that no Treasurer of a lodge could perform his duties satisfactorily without a certain amount of trouble, though it must be admitted such trouble was always very largely seasoned with pleasure in meeting as he did a number of brethren whom he could regard as his friends. Still he had the duty, not always pleasant, of keeping them within bounds, and within their income, so that the festivities with which they supplemented their labours did not form a too absorbing feature in these very agreeable meetings. He was pleased to know that the lodge was in a most satisfactory position, and trusted that it would continue to be so in the future. The Secretary also returned thanks in a few happily chosen sentences. In proposing "The Health of the Officers of the Lodge," the W.M., acknowledged the valuable assistance he at all times received from the brethren who supported him in the various chairs, and who were all animated by a desire to do what they could to maintain the prestige of the lodge. Bro. Phillips, S.W., in reply, felt sure every officer who held a position in the Lodge of Amity must feel pleased with the reception which had been accorded to the toasts, and to the appreciation which the brethren always expressed of their efforts to do their duty faithfully. They all endeavoured to the utmost of their ability to support and assist the W.M. in carrying on the duties of the lodge in a proper and efficient manner, and he trusted that the same good feeling and harmony which had characterised the lodge in times past might long continue to subsist amongst them. Bro. Marden, J.W., also responded, and the list of toasts was brought to a fitting termination by the Tyler shortly before ten o'clock. In consequence of the rain, which had set in during the evening, the brethren were debarred the usual outdoor pleasures which accompany their meeting, though the riversides were illuminated brilliantly at intervals by other gay and festive assemblies; whilst the steamers returning from pleasure excursions down the river were lit up with coloured fires, and reverberant with the sounds of music and merry voices. Some excellent songs were sung during the evening, and the meeting altogether was of a most agreeable and harmonious description.

TEDDINGTON.—Sir Charles Bright Lodge (No. 1793).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on the 25th ult. at the Clarence Hotel, when there were present Bros. J. Hurst, P.M. 1512, P.A.G.P. of Middlesex, W.M.; Forge, S.W.; Piller, J.W.; Fitt, Secretary; Walls, P.G.S.B. of Middlesex (Freemason), S.D.; Goodchild, I.G.; C. Stevens, Organist; Baldwin, P.P.G.P. of Middlesex, hon. mem.; Rawles, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. Elsam, P.P.G.D.C. Surrey; Handel, and Drummond, 1656. The ballot was taken for Messrs. Hickinbotham and Edward Warner, and having been found unanimous the former, who was in attendance, was duly initiated. The ballot was also successfully taken upon behalf of Bro. Müller, 788, as a joining member. Bros. T. Beauchamp, W. G. Collier, and H. Owen were raised to the degree of M.M., the ceremonies of initiation and raising being well performed by the W.M. The interesting ceremony of presenting each of the founders with a jewel in recognition of their services was performed by Bro. Baldwin. The founders present were Bros. Hurst, Forge, Piller, Fitt, Walls, Stevens, and Captain Brown. The remaining founder, Bro. H. W. Linton, J.D., was, unfortunately, absent in consequence of illness. The lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren partook of a collation. The only toasts given were "The Queen and Craft," "The W.M.," "The Initiate," and "The Visitors," which were briefly proposed and acknowledged.

Charles Horsley, P.P.G.R. of Middlesex, acting M.E.Z.; Tomlinson, M.E.Z. elect; Carma, P.G. S.B. of Middlesex, H.; S. H. Knaggs, J.; W. Taylor, S.N.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, P.S. Walters, P.P.G.A.S. Middlesex; and Dr. Clark, P.Z. The minutes of the previous convocation having been read and confirmed, the installation of Comp. Tomlinson, which ceremony had been postponed at the last convocation of the chapter in consequence of his very serious illness, was ably carried out by Comp. James Stevens. A vote of thanks was subsequently passed to him for his services as Installing Officer, and he, together with Comp. James Terry, who had installed the Second and Third Principals at the previous meeting, were elected honorary members. There being no other business before the chapter, it was duly closed, and the companions adjourned to the banquet. Upon the removal of the cloth the customary long array of toasts were proposed and duly honoured. Comp. Horsley responded upon behalf of "The Provincial Grand Officers," and he also proposed, in very complimentary terms, "The Health of the M.E.Z." The toast of "The Visitors" was acknowledged by Comps. Stevens, Clark, and Walters. "The Health of the Officers" having been given, and responded to, the proceedings shortly afterwards terminated.

COCKERMOUTH.—Faithful Lodge (No. 229).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday afternoon, the 30th ult., at five p.m., in the Masonic Hall, Station-street. The following were present: Bros. W. F. Lamony, W.M. (Freemason); W. Shilton, L.G., as S.W.; W. H. Lewthwaite, J.W. and Org.; Capt. F. R. Sewell, M.O., H. Peacock, S.D., as S.O.; W. Paisley, as J.O.; R. W. Robinson, S.O., as Sec.; T. Mason, as I.G.; and Jos. Hewson, Tyler. The minutes having been read and confirmed, Bro. L. F. B. Dykes, J.P., of Doventy Hall, Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002, was balloted for, and unanimously accepted as a candidate for advancement. The next business was the election of W.M. for the ensuing twelve months, when the W.M. and J.W. withdrew their names in favour of Bro. R. Robinson, S.W., who was absent through family bereavement, and, being the only eligible candidate, had a unanimous vote when the ballot box went round. It was arranged to hold the installation of the W.M. elect on Wednesday, the 27th inst., at seven p.m., when the ceremony will be performed by the retiring W.M. Three members (the Overseers) were elected to serve on the Permanent Committee, and the statement of accounts was ordered to be prepared for the first anniversary. There was no other business, and the lodge was closed in form.

COCKERMOUTH.—Dykes Conclave (No. 36).—The annual assembly of the members of this conclave was held on Wednesday, the 30th ult., in the Masonic Hall, Station-street, Cokermouth. The muster roll was called at noon, when only nine responded, viz. Sir Knights T. Mandle, M.P.S.; W. F. Lamony, P.S., as V.E. (Freemason); W. Shilton, P.S., as Prelate; Sir Knights J. R. Banks, as S.G.; T. Bird, as J.G.; W. H. Lewthwaite, Treas. and Org.; Jas. Gardiner, Rec. and V.E. elect; H. Peacock, Herald; and Jos. Hewson, Sentinel. This was certainly a wretched muster, when it is considered that the conclave numbers forty-eight members. After the minutes of the last assembly were read and confirmed, it was announced that the M.P.S. elect had withdrawn from the Order, and, under the circumstances, the members agreed that the present head of the conclave should occupy the throne for another year. The M.P.S. and V.E. then exchanged places, when Sir Knight J. Gardiner, V.E. elect, was presented for consecration. Subsequently a College of Viceroys was opened, and the new Viceroys were duly consecrated and placed in the chair of E. by the acting Sovereign. After the college was closed, the following officers were appointed and invested:—Sir Knights J. R. Banks, S.G.; T. Bird, J.G.; H. Peacock, H.P.; W. H. Lewthwaite, Treas., Rec., and Org.; W. Shilton, P.S., Pref.; Jos. Abbott, St. Br.; Jas. Quay, Orator; G. Dalrymple, H.; P. de E. Collin, Almoner; I. Evening, Steward; and J. Melmore, D.C. The Treasurer's statement of accounts was read and adopted, and finally the conclave was closed in F.U.Z. Afterwards the Sir Knights proceeded to the old hall for refection.

Joyce Murray and G. A. Berkeley to the degree of Knights of the East and West, and perfected them as Princes of the Order of Rose Croix of H.R.D.M. The ceremonies were carried out with those attentions to ritual and elocution which invariably characterise the "working" of Bro. Pullen. The ceremony of installing Bro. Coffin into the chair was most ably performed by the M.W.S. The officers appointed and invested were Bros. the Rev. D. Aoe, D.D., H.P.; D. Nicols, 1st General; J. L. Dampier, 2nd General; F. H. Atkins, G.M.; F. Curlier, Raphael; W. Paas, Almoner and Treas.; D. M. Dewar, Recorder; J. O. Wood, Capt. of the Guard; A. Williams, Org.; and T. C. Walls, D.C. Previously to the chapter being closed, a vote of thanks was passed to the I.P.M.S., for the manner in which he had conducted the ceremony of installing his successor in the chair. The banquet was held at the Café Royal, Regent-street. Upon the removal of the cloth, the usual toasts were done full justice to. The proceedings terminated at an early hour.

Wellington, 351, P.P.G.R. Sussex; and W. Rickards, Tyrian, 90.

The lodge was formally opened by the Prov. G.M., who, in a short address, remarked that Masonry had previously flourished in Shoreham, and the then existing lodge had, doubtless, been visited by Royalty. He was pleased to be present to assist in renovating the lodge and once more establishing Freemasonry in the ancient borough.

Sir Walter having vacated the chair, Bro. John H. Scott, Deputy Prov. G.M., proceeded with the ceremony of consecration, which was performed with due solemnity, and in a most impressive manner Bro. Scott embraced the opportunity of addressing the brethren present. He congratulated the founders of the lodge upon the success they had achieved in securing their charter, remarking that especial thanks were due to Bro. Lord Arthur Hill for coming forward to fill the onerous post of W.M. While, also, congratulating the founders upon the name they had selected for the new lodge, he assured them that they had placed great responsibilities upon their shoulders, for the name of Burrell had for a line of years been borne by those with whom had been associated all that what was noble, generous, and true, and it would be their duty to see that the name was not sullied by any act of those belonging to the new lodge. He (Bro. Scott) had addressed the brethren at great length at the consecration of the Atlingworth Lodge, a few days ago, and would, therefore, content himself with a few remarks only. He concluded by impressing upon the brethren the cultivation of those principles so dear to Masonry, and heartily wished prosperity to the new lodge.

Bro. the Rev. E. F. Cave Browne Cave, Prov. G. Chaplain, also gave an address.

The ceremony being concluded, the W.M. elect, Bro. Lord Arthur Hill, was duly installed, while the following, who, with his lordship, were the founders of the lodge, were appointed to their respective posts, viz., Bros. C. J. Smith, W.M. and P.M. 1466, acting I.P.M.; Captain R. Burrell, P.M. 271, S.W.; W. Tunstall Clarke, 315, J.W.; A. Burrows, 186, Treas.; E. Bridges, J.D. 311, Sec.; T. Packham, S.W. 315, S.D.; R. B. Higham, 315, J.D.; A. Brazier, 851, I.G.; Rev. G. Rose-Johnson, 487, Chaplain; J. Braithwaite, P.M. 869, P.P.G.J.W. Herts, D.C.; A. R. Brown, 697, Steward; and H. H. Hughes, Tyler.

The effect of the consecration ceremony was greatly enhanced by the musical accompaniments given under the direction of Bro. A. King, Prov. G. Organist, who was assisted by Bros. J. Large (late of Westminster Abbey), E. Broadbridge, W. Roe, and G. Cole. The efforts of the vocalists were most successful. The ceremony being concluded, the brethren adjourned to the Royal George Hotel, where nearly eighty brethren sat down to an excellent banquet supplied by Bros. Sayers and Marks, whose catering gave every satisfaction. The chair was taken by the newly-elected W.M., Bro. Lord Arthur Hill, who was supported by Bros. Sir W. W. Burrell, J. H. Scott, and C. J. Smith.

The Chairman gave the usual loyal toasts, "The Queen and the Craft," and "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," which were enthusiastically drunk.

The Chairman next gave "The R.W. Pro G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the Officers of Grand Lodge, Present and Past."

Bro. Thomas, A.G.D.C., in responding, passed a well-deserved eulogy upon Lord Carnarvon for the intense interest he at all times showed in the cause of Masonry. Lord Skelmersdale was a general favourite among Freemasons, and worked hard, not only in his province, but for the general welfare of the Craft. He was pleased to find that he intended taking the chair at the next meeting of the Boys' School Masonic Charity, and to learn that their worthy W.M., Lord Arthur Hill, would also be present as a Steward representing the new lodge. He took the opportunity of complimenting Bro. J. H. Scott upon the splendid manner in which he had performed the ceremony of initiation.

The W.M. next proposed "The R.W. Sir W. W. Burrell Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M. of Sussex," who had at all times shown great interest in the working of Masonry, and had visited nearly every lodge in his province. He trusted he would be long spared to hold his high position.

Sir Walter, who was received with great applause, expressed the pleasure he felt in being present at the opening. Masonry, he said, had indeed made rapid strides. Five years ago the Ockeden Lodge was opened, bearing 1465. He had been its first W.M., and now he found the Burrell Lodge bore No. 1829. The great impetus given to Masonry he believed to be in a great measure owing to the active interest taken in the Craft by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Four new lodges had been opened during the two years and a half he (Sir Walter) had been in his present office, and a fifth, he believed, would be shortly consecrated. (It was understood as St. Leonard's, Hastings.) The old lodge founded at Shoreham had flourished, and he believed it had been honoured with a visit from the late Duke of Sussex. He trusted that the new lodge would regain the prestige of the first and almost forgotten one, and that its business would be carried on in a truly Masonic manner. To the Secretary, who was a young Mason, he would tender a few words of advice. He begged he would take especial care to note every minute of the lodge proceedings. They had an excellent Prov. Grand Secretary, whose duty it was to examine their books, and he was desirous that no complaints should be made to him of any laxity on the part of the newly-appointed Secretary. In issuing notices of meetings he wished him to forward at least two copies to the Prov. Grand Secretary, that the Provincial Officers might know what was taking place. In conclusion, he fervently hoped that the new lodge would not, like its predecessor, be allowed to collapse.

The W.M. next gave "The D.G.M. of Sussex, Wor. Bro. J. H. Scott, and the Officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge, Present and Past." He regretted that Bro. Scott had been compelled to leave through indisposition. He (Bro. Scott) had performed the consecration ceremony in a masterly manner, and was at all times ready to assist in the furtherance of Masonry. Bros. Freeman and Dixon responded. The former expressed the pleasure he felt at being present, and was glad to say that the returns which had lately come in from the various lodges had been of a satisfactory character.

Bro. C. J. Smith proposed "The W.M., and Success to Burrell Lodge, 1829." After some considerable delay, the new lodge had at last been fairly started, and he was proud to find so able an officer as their newly-elected W.M. There was also a good first lieutenant in Captain Raymond Burrell, son of their worthy Prov. G.M. Starting under such auspices, the success of the Burrell Lodge was a foregone conclusion. Their W.M., he was assured, would set them a good example, and take to heart the words that had fallen from their Prov. G.M. and the addenda supplied by the Prov. G. Secretary. For all he would say, "Come and welcome," and the officers would certainly not fear the visits of the "prying Secretary." (Laughter.) Great care had been exercised in getting initiates, and not a fourth part of those anxious to join had as yet been considered. Lord Arthur Hill, in responding, feared that his election had been the result of their good feeling towards him, and not of his own merits. ("No.") He declined at first taking the post, thinking that a loca brother would be a more acceptable one. He thanked the brethren for the confidence reposed in him, and would do his utmost to further the interests of the lodge.

Sir W. W. Burrell apologised for the absence of his son, who had had an engagement of six weeks' standing which he found it impossible to put aside.

The W.M., in proposing "The W.M.'s of Lodges in the Province," remarked that those present represented more than half the lodges of the province.

Bros. Sandeman, W.M. St. Cecilia, 1636, and T. J. Sabine, W.M. Atlingworth, 1821, responded. Bro. Sabine remarked that Freemasonry in Sussex had received great and encouraging influence from Sir W. W. Burrell, who was a genuine specimen of the "fine old English gentleman," and he trusted the day would be far distant when his active support would not receive the hearty co-operation of all W.M.'s, upon whom devolved the great responsibility of maintaining the freedom, the privileges, and the successful continuance of Freemasonry in the Province of Sussex.

Sir Walter, replying to these observations, felt a great share of the praise was due to Bro. John H. Scott and his brother officers.

The W.M. gave "The Masonic Charities."

Bro. Binckes, in responding, stated that the Boys' School contained 217, and the Girls 200, and that there were in addition aged of both sexes, numbering 300, dependent upon their Charities.

Bro. W. T. Clarke proposed "The Visitors," to which Bro. Cubitt responded.

Bro. Eberall proposed "The Officers of 1829."

Bros. Clarke and Braithwaite responded.

The remaining toasts were "The Ladies" and the Tyler's toast.

The post-prandial proceedings were agreeably interspersed with glees and songs given by the brethren who had assisted in the musical part of the consecration ceremony. A word of praise is due to Mrs. Gates for the characteristic decoration, of the banqueting-room, which elicited the warmest marks of approval, so appropriate to this special occasion were they.

MASONIC PICNIC AT SUNDERLAND.

By the kind permission of the Earl of Durham, the twelfth annual Masonic picnic in connection with the lodges of Sunderland was held at Lambton Park, on Wednesday, the 23rd ult. The company were conveyed in brakes and other conveyances, leaving the Gas Offices at ten, and on arrival at the park were met by Mr. Hunter (gardener), and Mr. Mays (gamekeeper), and by those in authority, and were most courteously conducted through the castle. After this the company adjourned for luncheon, which was provided by Mr. Burn, of the Lambton Arms, Chester-le-street, in capital style.

The luncheon being finished, the Chairman (Bro. J. Egglestone, jun., W.M. of the Williamson Lodge), gave the toast of "The Earl of Durham," saying that he had conferred a great favour on them by granting them permission to visit the grounds and castle. The healths of Mr. Hunter and Mr. Mays, and those who had given their hearty assistance in the arrangements at the castle, were also given, and were enthusiastically received. As is customary on these occasions, a townsman, Mr. Stabler, with his photographic apparatus, accompanied the party, and was successful in taking two groups of them. After this had been done, the company, under the direction and guidance of Mr. Hunter, proceeded to view the beautiful grounds and gardens, as well as the numerous vineries and hothouses, the whole of which were greatly admired. During luncheon and tea the band, under the conductorship of Mr. Lax, played several pieces of music, and after tea dancing was commenced and continued with great spirit.

The arrangements reflected great credit on the Committee, consisting of Bros. John Egglestone, jun., Chairman; Jno. Newton, Treas.; Mark Frampton, Sec.; Geo. Porteous, M.C.; Robt. Kinmond, H. Munro, J. T. Smart, Chas. Macnamara, and J. Deans. The party arrived home about ten o'clock, having spent a delightful day.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A meeting of the General Committee was held at Freemasons' Hall on Saturday, the 2nd inst., Bro. W. F. C. Moutrie in the chair. There were also present Bros. the Rev. Dr. Morris, Head Master of the school; T. Meggy, C. F. Matier, R. Tyrrell, E. C. Massey, F. K. Adlard, W. Maple, R. B. Webster, and H. Massey (Freemason). Bro. Taylor attended in lieu of Bro. Binckes, the Secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting of the General Committee in July last were read and confirmed, and the minutes of the Quarterly Court, as well as those of the House Committee and Sub-Committee, were read for information. The report of the Audit Committee was received and adopted, and the Chairman was authorised to sign the cheques drawn for the quarterly accounts.

Two candidates were admitted to have their names placed on the list for election in April, 1880.

An outfit vote of £5 to J. E. Batty on leaving the school was granted.

An application on behalf of Woods for the sum of £10, being the second moiety of a sum voted in April last, was ordered to stand over until the expiration of the six months specified in the previous minute.

An application for a grant of £30 to W. S. Spark to assist in preparing him to pass his second examination for a military commission was granted. This finished the business on the agenda, but before the Committee separated Bro. Webster said he desired to put a question to the Chairman respecting the matter in dispute between the Institution and Bro. S. B. Wilson. He wished to ask the Chairman whether it was true that the House Committee had refused to accept Sir Henry Arthur Hunt, C.B., as arbitrator in the dispute between them and Bro. S. B. Wilson, and, if it was true, what was the reason of such refusal.

The Chairman, in reply, said that it did not appear upon the minutes which had been read that any such proposition as that referred to had been refused.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF MIDDLESEX.

The annual convocation of this district Grand Chapter was held on Saturday, the 2nd inst., at the Grammar School, Enfield Town. The school-rooms had been kindly placed at the disposal of the Provincial Grand Superintendent by the trustees.

The arrangements of the chapter room, which was tastefully decorated with flowers, &c., had been carried out under the superintendance of Comp. Letchworth, P.Z. of the Enfield Chapter, and to whom great thanks are due for the admirable manner in which everything passed off.

Among those present we noticed Comps. Col. Burdett, P.G. Supt.; Davison, P.P.G.H.; H. C. Levander, P.G.S.E.; Pearce, P.P.G.N.; H. Buss, P.G. Treas.; Letchworth, P.G.R.; E. Hopwood, P.G.S.B.; Cama, P.G. Std. B.; the Rev. Dr. Brette, P.P.G.A.S.; Laxton, P.P.G.R.; C. Horsley, P.P.G.R.; George Kenning, P.P.G.D.C.; H. A. Dqbois, P.P.G.D.C.; Gilbert, P.G. Janitor; Sherrill, P.Z. 382; Jaffa, P.Z. 1237; Mathison, 1237; Postans, H. 1237; Lewzett, J. 1237; Massa, 1293; Cordwell, P.Z. 1236; L. Beck, 1326; Shackleton, 1326; T. O. Ockenden, P.S. 1423; Dr. Ramsey, and Walls, P.G.O. (Freemason). The visitors were Comps. S. Hill, P.Z. 109; E. W. Mackney, P.Z. 134; James Stevens, P.Z. 720, 771, &c., A. Durrant, M.E.Z. 1185; and W. Dorn.

The roll of Provincial Grand Officers was called, but through unavoidable causes many were absent. The roll of chapters in the province was then read out, and with one exception all the chapters were represented. The minutes of the previous convocation having been read and confirmed, the report of the Audit Committee (Comps. Pearce and Walls) was received and adopted. The election of Treasurer was unanimously in favour of Comp. Buss.

The investiture of Provincial Grand Officers then took place as follows:—

- Comp. Levander Prov. G.H.
- " Dr. Brette Prov. G.J.
- " H. A. Dubois Prov. G.S.E.
- " Glover Prov. G.S.N.
- " Dicketts Prov. G.P.S.
- " Cordwell Prov. G. 1st Asst.
- " J. Hammond Prov. G. 2nd Asst.
- " Buss Prov. G. Treas.
- " Keen Prov. G. Reg.
- " Cama Prov. G. Swd. Br.
- " Shackleton Prov. G. Std. Br.
- " Walls Prov. G.D. of C.
- " L. Beck Prov. G. Org.
- " Gilbert Prov. G. Janitor.

Previously to the convocation being closed the sum of five guineas was unanimously voted to the Wentworth Little Memorial Fund, and a vote of condolence was ordered to be forwarded on behalf of the Provincial Grand Chapter to Mrs. Little.

The banquet, which was well served by Comp. Mathison and assistants, was held at the ancient hostelry of The George.

Upon the removal of the cloth, the toasts of "The Queen and Royal Arch Masonry," "The G.Z.," and "The G.H. and J." were duly honoured.

In proposing "The Health of the P.G.S. of Middlesex," Comp. Levander said that as the companions present knew so well the merits, both socially and Masonically, of their excellent Grand Superintendent, Comp. Colonel Burdett, it would be superfluous on that occasion for him to dwell at any length upon the subject toast. The Grand Chapter of Middlesex had not been established nearly so long as the Provincial Grand Lodge, but, all things being considered, it had progressed very well under the fostering auspices of their genial chief. His (the Grand Superintendent's) services to the general cause of Freemasonry in the province, embracing a period of nearly ten years, had been very great. In every Masonic capacity Comp. Col. Burdett had endeared himself to his brethren and companions, and was so deservedly popular that his name had become a "household word" in Middlesex. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion, he hoped that for many, many years to come the Masonic destinies of the large and influential Province of Middlesex would continue to be under the rule and genial sway of their most excellent Superintendent.

The Prov. Grand Superintendent, in reply, after expressing his thanks for the flattering way in which his health had been proposed by Comp. Levander and received by the companions, said he was exceedingly pleased at the manner in which the cause of Royal Arch Masonry had progressed in the province. He felt very happy and very proud at holding the position of Provincial Grand Superintendent. The chapters of the province were increasing fairly, but he personally should like to see greater progress made. The Royal Arch Degree was so very impressive and beautiful that it ought to be encouraged and supported in every possible way. With regard to the convocation that day he was gratified with the manner in which the proceedings had passed off, but he was sorry that the meeting had not been more numerously attended. In concluding his remarks, he said that, as the time at the disposal of the companions was necessarily limited, he should not further trespass upon their indulgence, but would conclude by cordially thanking them all for the services they had rendered to the cause of the Royal Arch Order in Middlesex.

There were no other toasts, but the subsequent proceedings were enlivened and enhanced by the efforts of Comps. James Stevens, Charles Horaley, and others.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE DE GREY AND RIPON LODGE, No. 1356.

As a pleasant sequel to the more serious yet interesting installation business of the previous week, the members of the De Grey and Ripon Lodge, No. 1356, whose meeting place is at the Masonic Chambers, North Hill-street, Toxteth-park, Liverpool, started for their pleasant summer out, in company with their wives, sweethearts, and sisters, on Thursday, the 16th ult.

Bro. Alfred Woolrich, the esteemed and courteous Worshipful Master of the lodge, was present as a matter of course, guiding and controlling the various arrangements, which were generally of a highly satisfactory nature, receiving cordial and valuable aid from his official staff and "full privates" of his lodge.

The scene chosen for the picnic was Eaton Hall, the seat of the Duke of Westminster, near Chester, which has frequently been visited by the Masonic combinations in and around Liverpool.

All told, the company of members and their fair friends numbered about 200, who were conveyed from Birkenhead, by special arrangement with the Great Western Railway Company, at a comparatively early hour.

After dining, at the Grosvenor Hotel, in Chester, the large party proceeded to the beautiful park of Eaton Hall, where some time was pleasantly spent. The pleasure of the return journey was much marred by falling rain, and the enjoyment was further curtailed by the fact that a great number of those who were present had sent no intimation of their intention to attend, thus upsetting the arrangements of the Committee. As a consequence the Committee's "order of the day" could not be observed nor possibly carried out. It is very much to be regretted that attention cannot be paid to little matters like the answering of a Secretary's note, when so much of the general enjoyment depends upon proper arrangements. The W.M., and all under his command, used their utmost endeavour to remedy the awkwardness of the unexpected attendance of numerous visitors, and on the whole the picnic was voted a pleasant "out," even with falling rain.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

NEW MASONIC MAGAZINE IN U. S. A.

Another claimant for the support of the American Craft has just appeared in Iowa, the name selected being "The Square and Compasses." No. 1 and 2 (for May and July) are now before me, Bro. John Stirling, jun., of Bonaparte, being the publisher and proprietor. Its general appearance is similar to the "Evergreen" (sometime deceased), and certainly if it proves to be as healthy and vigorous in tone as that excellent periodical it will deserve the generous support of the brethren in Iowa especially. The terms are low (5s. per annum) as compared with others of a similar class, though it is a very much thinner book than the Masonic Magazine, issued by Bro. George Kenning, but the pages being more devoted to Masonic matters renders it as bulky Masonically as many much larger productions. An index, however, to each number would be found useful, and add materially to the value of the publication. In the opening remarks, appropriately headed "Good Morning," Bro. Stirling states what he means to do on his part, provided the 20,000 members in Iowa, Missouri with an equal number, and the young and growing States of Kansas and Nebraska ("with their lodges springing up like magic") are prepared to co-operate and furnish the needful assistance in the shape of subscribers. A history of Masonry in Iowa is to be furnished in parts (month by month), and the programme is all that can be wished. We are told in the first No. that "Bro. R. F. Bower, of Keokuk, has the largest and best private Masonic libraries in the United States, with possibly one exception," but in the second issue we are informed that Bro. Bower "has the largest private Masonic library in the United States, if not in the world." Knowing so well the character of this famous collector, and the diligence of its worthy collector, Bro. Bower, we are inclined to consider it the largest of the kind anywhere, it being especially rich in bye-laws of various degrees, which not only add considerably to the number of the books, but also to the value, from the difficulty being great to procure any works which are privately printed. Another well known collector is Bro. E. F. Carson, of Cincinnati, who is the only brother at all likely to prove a rival claimant to the honour.

I note that at the Grand Lodge of Iowa, recently held, Bro. Bower presented his credentials as Grand Representative from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and that "he displayed a splendid jewel sent him by the said Grand Lodge." I should like R.W. Bro. J. H. Neilson, of Dublin, to send a description of this jewel for the readers of the Freemason, so that we may all share in the pleasure. The veteran Grand Secretary, Bro. Parvin, also presented his credentials as Grand Representative from Egypt, remarking as he did so that this Grand Lodge was "working almost beneath the shadows of the ancient Pyramids, those monuments of the past overlooking the civilisation of the present." These brethren were duly welcomed accordingly by the M.W.G.M. I am sorry to read that in consequence of the expense the reports from the "Committees of Correspondence" are not to be printed in future.

THE FREEMASON.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9, 1879.

OUR AMERICAN BRETHERN.

One of the greatest privileges and pleasures of Freemasonry consists in the firm friendships it often happily knits between brethren living in distant lands and opposite hemispheres. There seems to be something in the genial fellowship of Freemasonry, denounced by the bigoted, and decried by the ignorant, which overleaps the dividing boundaries of nations and of seas, and cements between the most severed and distant of our race kindly sentiments and sympathetic interests. It often happens in this world of ours that, as we all know too little of each other, even that very little is marred and disfigured by angry traditions or ancient animosities. We grow up often in antagonistic views and calm unconcern for others until something happens to thaw our coldness, or remove our misapprehensions, and then we find not only how well we agree, but how much after all we really like each other, how much and how deep an interest we have in fact in that abiding "cosmopolitanism" of humanity which, say what we will, has a real and lasting charm at all times, and under all circumstances, for the kindly, the cultured, and the elevated. It is, no doubt, this idea of "brotherhood" which for 1800 years at any rate has dominated mankind, in which is to be found the best hopes alike for the future union of the widely dispersed children of the dust. Freemasonry may not be perfect in all its conceptions, or all its aims, its professions or its practice, but at any rate it does this, like the Good Samaritan, while Priest and Levite are "looking on," or "passing by," it does seek to pour in the "balm of oil and wine" into the "open wounds" of suffering human nature. We know nothing more striking in the history of the world or of man, than that a brotherhood like the English brotherhood, be the method sound or unsound, perfect or imperfect, (we care not a jot), is raising annually something like £40,000 in the noble and goodly work of charity, and is advocating with unflinching voice, amid noisy factions and braying shibboleths, the sacred teaching of toleration, goodwill, and compassion for all men. And we do not say this in praise of English Freemasonry alone, but wherever true Freemasonry abounds, holding to the same truths, enforcing the same system, and practising the same virtues, there we do know also as a matter of fact that mercy and charity hold their righteous sway over the feelings and acts of men; there peace and civilization, mutual goodwill, and mutual forbearance are to the fore, there the voice of toleration is heard, there the work of religion is active, there consideration for others is prevalent, there liberty of conscience unfurls her goodly oriflamme. In the United States of America Freemasonry has found, for instance, a congenial home and an important sphere of utility and benevolence. Its 600,000 Masons, dispersed throughout its sovereign States, amid a growing and a mighty Republic, have grasped firmly and serenely the ennobling message of its peace, morality and its time-honoured lore. That there are some incongruities in American Freemasonry we do not deny; that there are some weaknesses in the joints of its armour, its truest friends do not attempt to conceal; but of that noble array of "Freemasons;" we, who live in England, have every reason to be proud, for we can rejoicingly recall the fact that the American State Grand Lodges come from us, and belong to us, the only regular bodies of Craft Masons in that remarkable country—that they are our own kith and kin, "bone of our bone," and "flesh of our flesh." It was the high privilege of the publisher of this paper, about a year ago, to evince his sympathy for American Masons and Masonry, and to make the intimate acquaintance of a distinguished body of American brethren, visitors and travellers in England, in a most pleasant and enjoyable gathering at Freemasons' Hall. We venture to believe that the memories of that genial and kindly evening have not faded from the minds of any who were present, and that the friendships we then formed, and the links we then intertwined, in heartfelt goodwill and interest for each other, will last for us our own "little time" here. And, therefore, it is we hail rejoicingly the telegram from our esteemed and admired friend and brother, Charles E. Meyer, which appeared in last week's Freemason, as an evidence that all our warm feelings are reciprocated on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, and that the true hearts, and kind friends, the zealous Masons whom we were privileged to receive and know twelve short months ago, still retain for us those fraternal feelings, and that living interest, which, overpassing "dividing waters," are still lingering as it were with their pleasant host, still sojourning for a little season amid our good and warm-hearted English brethren. Long may this union between American and English Masons endure, and may it be a happy omen of the lasting friendship, peace, and concord between two great nations, upholding alike with firm and straightforward hand legality and order, right and justice, and advancing against all opposing and conflicting interests the true welfare of the community, the liberty and happiness of the individual, and the lasting peace, progress, and prosperity of all mankind.

CHARITY REFORM.

Bro. Simpson has given us his little plan for reforming our excellent Charities, (which we did not know wanted reforming), and we will now consider it. We are little afraid that some of our readers may be reminded of Mr. Weller and "advice gratis," but still, as Bro. Simpson is in earnest, we feel it right to call attention to his proposals. His complaints of grievances are just what we said they would be, and though our statements have been questioned, they are now "vouched for" by our Past Grand Chaplain himself. They are: 1. Entire absence of proper investigation of election claims. 2. Exchange of votes. 3. Sale of votes. 4. Canvassing by cards and circulars. 5. Polling days and scenes. What this latter remarkable passage means we can positively not even conceive. We have read it over more than once, thinking that it was, perhaps, a printer's error, as printers' errors will creep even into the Freemason. But no. Such seems to be the "ipsissima verba" of Bro. Simpson, and we can only leave them, in our startled and happy ignorance, to his own eloquent words of explanation and description. We are a little amused, we must confess, to find Bro. Simpson, "Jupiter Tonans" though he be, borrowing, (that is the polite word), a little of our own harmless "thunder," and falling back magnificently, for the first time, on the "original selection of candidates," our own little suggested pet reform, as a leading point in his own enlarged programme. When we said that this reform, which we advocated, was a "slight reform," we did not mean, as the "context" would show, that we considered the matter a "slight matter" at all, but only that the change from the present system, to a closer scrutiny was a very easy matter in itself as a matter of detail. Curiously enough, with that tendency to "exaggeration" in which speakers and writers like so sensationally to indulge to-day, Bro. Simpson skillfully converts our honest admission of a "weakness of detail" into the entire "absence of all enquiry." We never said that there was no enquiry, for there is, according to our rules; but what we did venture to suggest, knowing from old experience the "red tape" of all committee work, was, that there should be a closer enquiry than is now practicable into the "position of the candidates" and the "means of their friends." We wonder that Bro. Simpson did not discover the fallacy of his own position and the palpable exaggeration into which he was falling, but we can only suppose that, like other "great reformers," intent on one "point," he is "indifferent to the minutiae of time, place, and fact." And advisable, in our opinion, as this more close scrutiny of claims would be, we doubt very much if the Life Governors will ever consent to turn the "open court" for claims of the "General Committee" according to our laws, into the "close court" of a special "Sub-Committee." But here, no doubt, is a weakness which, as we have often said, requires attention. The facility with which "cases" get on the list, and, above all, the recklessness with which brethren place their names on cards, for cases often the very weakest of their kind, is to be much regretted. Perhaps Bro. Simpson can recall such a case. All the other grievances of Bro. Simpson, except the "scenes," whatever they may turn out to be, resolve themselves into the "old, old story" of "exchange of votes." Bro. Simpson and ourselves do not agree on this point, and it seems useless to prolong the discussion, and, therefore, we pass it by, only once more expressing our distinct opinion that "exchange of votes" is perfectly right and proper, "per se." As regards "cards, indeed, and the like," wherever Charity Committees exist they pass away, and if they are wrong, which we do not and cannot see, at any rate they are the exception now, and not the rule, and the expense for them is reduced to a "minimum." As regards the "sale of votes" we do not know what Bro. Simpson means, and fear that he has been grossly imposed on by some one, if he uses the word "sale" as it would be generally understood. And then how does Bro. Simpson propose to remedy all those real or imaginary, open or mysterious, grievances? By having the voting papers sent direct to the Secretary and then scrutinized by a Committee. Well, we can only say, after giving Bro. Simpson a full and patient hearing, that we much prefer the present system—open, honest voting, and "scrutinies" which can be scrutinized—to "uncontrollable returns" and "irreversible decrees" of "irresponsible Committees and Scrutiniers." We are quite sure of this, that if Bro. Simpson's "crude reforms" and "retrograde changes" could be adopted, our excellent Charities would become "standing jobs" and "hateful favouritism." Our Charities are now well managed, our voting is open, honest, and above board, if errors exist they can be easily corrected, if wrong is done it can be soon remedied; and, therefore, let us leave would-be-reformers to themselves, and insist upon our Charities being "let alone."

FREEMASONRY DORMANT.

In France when a lodge is in "non-activité" it is said to be "en sommeil, (in slumber), and such is the normal state just now of Metropolitan Freemasonry, and of a large portion of our English Craft. The lodges meet not during the recess, the brethren are scattered, and even the "Tyler" is off to Herne Bay, with his "wife and olive branches." For a few months the good old lodge is, as it were, "non est," its functions ceased, its membership a name. Over are the gay doings of hospitable symposia, ended the pleasant assembly of cheerful associates. The brethren have put on one side their "paraphernalia," and unless they carry upon their persons some of Bro. Kenning's chaste and mystic Masonic "Brelouques," have ceased "pro tem" to own themselves Masons, members of our great and wide-spread Fraternity. If a curious eye could follow them into their retreats, into their holiday homes, what amusing revelations, what strange discoveries might be made. The W.M. was last seen in a nautical dress talking in correct marine lingo with a coastguardsman at Weymouth. Our Senior Warden is at "Bel Alp," using strong language about the snow; our Junior Warden is in Brittany, admiring Breton lasses and Breton scenery all at the same time. That P.M. of ours, our own dear, musical P.M., is at Scarborough, delighting several young ladies at the "Crown," and our excellent Treasurer is President of the Queen at Harrogate, pleasing all, old and young, with his unconquerable urbanity. Our Secretary is at Margate, very serious and very didactic with Mrs. Secretary, and both our Deacons are in Paris, on the very best of behaviour. As for the rest of the "Father Neptune" Lodge, they are here, there, and everywhere. That rising young Mason, Jorrox, is at Homburg, and Potter is at Schwabach, and Jones is at Ettrets, and Maguire is at Ostend, where his antics in the water have created both alarm and amusement among the ladies. One or two are in Scotland, and another is ascending Plinlimmon. And so these "disjecta membra" of a very kindly old body have yet, let us hope, once again to be united in the "caldron" of true Masonic fervour. And when we meet again what tales we shall have to tell, what wonders to recount to one another. How well the "old enemy" slip away as we listen in rapture to stories of adventure, war, and love, to wonderful encounters, curious episodes, and mysterious scenes, and dangerous neighbours! But, alas, shall we all meet again? When we again gather, cheery and kindly, in answer to our good Secretary's summons shall we all be together? Who knows? who can say? Kind readers, good brethren, who of us all can venture or dare to foresee or foretell when stern "Atropos" shall "snip" for us the "thread of life," when our "work is ended," when our "last summons has come?" Hardly a day passes but we see how the hurrying eddies of the great river of time bear away on its resistless tides the hopes and fears, the loves, the lives of men; how young and old alike are swept away, and how that all ends here often suddenly, and sadly, and darkly, (to us in our ignorance), "like a tale that is told." Let us hope, when life and activity are restored to our now dormant lodges, that we are destined, in the good providence of T.G.A. O.T.U., again to meet in happy friendship and kindly converse, and genial sociality once more, the friends of years, the tried and the trusty, the honest and the true.—So mote it be!

THE SECULAR REVIEW.

This is a weekly paper read by Secularists, and has recently delivered itself of a "testimony" to ancient Freemasonry. Not probably that it matters much, one way or the other, but as people like sometimes to hear what their kind friends say of them, our readers and brethren may not be displeased with us if we let them know what the Secular Review thinks and says of them. It is always pleasant to realize what value people put upon us, or what opinion they form of us, and we can only trust that our readers and brethren will be impressed, gratified, and edified by this public enunciation of the estimate and ideas of the Secular Review respecting Masons and Masonry. It seems that a "querist" having asked the Editor of the Secular Review for "information as to the advantages likely to accrue to society, and to be hoped for by individuals from the society of Freemasons," (we hope our reader will note the classical language of the querist), the Editor, always wishful to impart information, immediately replies to him. Having from "years of observation," (pray mark this), realized its effects on personal character and in its collective capacity," (there is a haziness about this style of writing which is, as far as we know, specially Secularist), the Editor thus incontinently, ore rotundo, delivers his opinion, spins out his explanatory "yara." In the first place, we are glad to hear that "Freemasonry is quite as opposed to genuine free thought as any other of the religious sects," on the evidence of the "Secularist" himself, for on this point, to us, blame is desirable and praise would be condemnation. Long may Freemasonry so continue. "Age has not improved," the writer tells us, "the morality of Masonry." Why should it? Morality is, "semper eadem," alone really, and truly, and safely built on the "Word of Truth," on the "Rock of Ages," but not on secularism. The writer then proceeds to exemplify his intimate acquaintance with Freemasonry when he tells us "the principal business of the Craft now-a-days is to eat, drink, and carouse; they wash down all minor animosities and unavoidable differences of opinion in bumpers of wine, and the complaints of society are lost in the clatter of plates and loyal toasts." This indeed may be very fine writing, and probably is, but how far it is from the truth, taking even a Secularist standard of that virtue and commodity, we pause not here to enquire. Suffice it to say that notwithstanding special and intimate knowledge of Masons and Masonry, if the writer gets no nearer "Truth" than he is now he has a long march to make for it, and a very protracted journey to take to reach it. His "Temple of Truth" is indeed "over the hills and far away." But let us listen a little longer. "Judged from a purely secular standpoint, Masonry becomes a system to regard almost with abhorrence, especially in its initiatory stages." As the Irishman says, "we are mighty glad" to hear this expression of opinion, as nothing, on the contrary, can be more distasteful or repellant to honest Freemasons than the "secularism of Secularists." Like all great writers, or rather egotistical propounders of hopeless platitudes or insufferable bathos, and just now "nomen illis legio est," the writer winds up with this magnificent but illogical peroration—"It is evident that Masonry is a useless and expensive bauble, the grand qualification for advancement in which is money." This dogma from this "profoundly illuminated 'Grand Copht' of secularism" is both amusing and astounding. We hardly know which quality preponderates the most in such a statement, ignorance or absurdity. Let us hope that, despite the "Secularist" view, "men" are "better," and "wiser," for being Masons, and, though this great authority dubs Masonry as an "idle and mischievous association," that it will yet outlive the slanders of the mendacious, the complaints of the ignorant, and the criticism of the unjust. It is, however, a very curious fact in the history of Freemasonry, explain it as you will, that these vehement attacks are made upon it just now from the very "antipodes" of all real true "free thought" and "liberty of conscience" and "toleration" in the world, namely, the Ultramontane and the Infidel schools.

OUR GRAND SCRIBE E.

Our readers will notice with regret the announcement of the absence of our esteemed and excellent Grand Scribe Ezra, Comp. John Hervey, from Grand Chapter on Wednesday evening on account of illness. We shall but echo the unanimous feeling of our Order when we express our hope soon to hear of his complete convalescence and his return to the duties of that important office he performs so well, to the entire satisfaction of an admiring and appreciative Craft.

Original Correspondence.

MR. LABOUCHERE ("TRUTH?") AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Ex uno disce omnes. Tommy Tell-truth's exposition of Freemasonry in Truth of the 17th inst. may be very accurately appraised by the following extract from his pen, appearing in the same journal of this day's date.

"The oath of the Grand Arch Degree, by which each member engages to support another, whether right or wrong, ought, however, to be altered, for this might involve obligations inconsistent with the duties of a law-abiding citizen."

It is humiliating to have to trot out a very old Joe for the purpose of illustrating a proposition, but your lay readers will perceive the point of my protest against belief in this self-assertive, truth-telling writer's statements (those within the light will require no such demonstration) from the well known anecdote of the correction of the definition of a crab by the Committee of the French Academy by the eminent naturalist Cuvier.

The Savants defined a crab triune, as thus:

1. A fish,
2. Of a red colour,
3. It walks backwards.

The naturalist accepted the definition as correct with three not unimportant exceptions:

1. The animal was not a fish
2. Its colour was not red,
3. It did not walk backwards.

Now, as the oracular Jack Burnsby would say, "the bearin's o' this observation is in the application on it."

Take Mr. Labouchere's statement.

1. There is no Degree or Order known as the Grand Arch in Freemasonry. (Probably the Royal Arch was in the writer's mind, but surely this fact is a sufficient commentary on his assertion that the doors of the Craft are always open to him, because he sometimes "amuses himself by passing as a Freemason.")

2. In the Royal Arch Degree no such oath, or any obligation by any possibility bearing any such construction, is taken.

3. Neither in the Craft nor in the Arch are any pledges imposed in any way, however remotely, involving obligations inconsistent with the duties of a law-abiding citizen, and this is the assertion, not of one who has played the impostor for amusement, but of one who has acquired his knowledge and attained a not insignificant position among the fraternity by arduous study and labour in the jurisprudence, ritual, and active practice of both the Craft and Arch Degrees.

That my brethren may, if they think proper, deny the proud title I hereby claim—repudiate my self-assumed character as champion of the beloved Order—I sign my name and titles, and scorn to sneak under any nom de plume, whether ironically, cynically, or genuinely adopted; whether meant to assert veracity or to be, accepted on the principle of lucus a non lucendo.

It is, perhaps, hypocritical to call attention to the fact that the authority, a recourse to whose aid has been attributed to Mr. Labouchere, has his name spelt Carlile—and not Carlisle. He was a notorious Atheistic bookseller, he spent several years of his life deservedly in gaol for disseminating seditious, blasphemous, and obscene publications. His own account of his acquisition of what he promulgates as the genuine secrets of Freemasonry brands him as a man devoid of every principle of honour and morality.

As to Eckert, whose authority is vouched for by Mr. Labouchere, why does not that gentleman's flippant, dogmatic, sententious, egotistical profession of knowledge find its own discount among those who really do know, in the fact that he quotes a German writer on Masonry as the authority for the practice, ritual, and secrets of the English lodges?

"Save me from my friends," says the proverb; "from my enemies I can defend myself." How truly may this be applied to Freemasonry. Here is this man, obviously sent to curse us, and, like Balaam, "Lo! he has blessed us this three times." We all know that we have secrets, choice and invaluable secrets, eminently worth possessing. Let us be thankful then to those who, like Tommy Tell-truth, by exhibitions of ignorance, vulgarity, conceit, arrogance, and mendacity, help us to resist the attacks of the insidious. I very much doubt whether our secrets could have been so well kept but for the assistance afforded us by the misrepresentations of our enemies. One test—one illustration. This person tells us that he has played the character of El Hakim.* In this matter, for the opinions of the exoteric world I care not one straw, not speaking disrespectfully—their impressions are not worth recording, but I will appeal to my esoteric brethren. If T. T.'s pretensions to qualification as a physician were no better grounded than his claim to pass as a Mason, why, either medical knowledge must be at a very low ebb, which is possible in Mussulman countries, or intrusion into a harem does not involve an introduction to the bowstring as it used to do.

"Special Edition!—The Editor Cow-hided Again!!" Such a "leaded" heading has been before now used to push the sale of a vapid journal, but then it has been on the other side of the Atlantic. Now a set of nasty writers desiderate reviving the infamies of the late Barnard Gregory. They give us rechauffés of the "Age," the "Satirist," "Paul Pry," and the "Town," and call them "Society journals." Society may or may not read the nauseous compound, but the sheets sell, and of the coin when it comes in the purveyors of filth, diaphanously disguised, can say with the Roman Emperor "Non olit."

Brethren, as we stand shoulder to shoulder, let our loins be girt and our arms braced when we recall the proud—the incontrovertible—fact that no good man—no unsoiled man—no man with cleanly reputation, has ever yet attacked our noble Order.

Fear of the law of libel ought, perhaps, to induce our editor to except Tommy Tell-truth from this sweeping proposition, but I do not think that he is so weak-kneed as to crouch like this. This, the latest pretended exposure of Freemasonry, comes from the pen of a man who pretends for amusement to be what he is not, and owns to satisfying a prurient curiosity by invading the sanctity of a brother man's home, and outraging his finest feelings of delicacy by acting a part the assumption of which would the better enable him to gratify a spirit of inquiry which I will not characterize.

"There is a soul of goodness in things evil, Would men observingly divil it out."

Brethren, this Balaam brings us good. Is it possible this impostor has passed for a Mason? Has he ever escaped the keen eyes of an O.G., and the strict scrutiny of a J.W.? If it be possible, which I do not believe, and in his lucubrations there is certainly no internal evidence of the fact, it behoves us to be on our guard, and to utilise the warning he has kindly though unintentionally given us by inculcating upon our officers the necessity of greater vigilance in the future.

Enough. Again I say, Ex uno disce omnes. He tells, page 134, third paragraph, number of July 31st, an utterly impossible anecdote of my own profession, one which, from internal evidence, I know can not be true. When Dr. Johnson was asked how he could account for some marvellous narration, which his faithful biographer related to him, the great man quietly replied, "A lie, sir, you may depend upon it."

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

POLLING DAYS AND SCENES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a Vice-Patron of all our excellent Charities, and often of late honoured by my brethren with a request to preside at our Quarterly Courts and on polling days, I have had my attention called to a letter in your columns of last week by Bro. Simpson, P.G.C., in which he talks, I see, of polling days and "scenes." As I am utterly unaware of any "scenes," and equally ignorant of what Bro. Simpson can possibly allude to, in justice to many worthy friends I think it but fair to ask him publicly in the Freemason what are the "scenes" to which he refers. I think there must be some mistake.

* See "The Talisman."—Sir Walter Scott.

Yours fraternally,

J. CREATON, G.T.

EXCHANGE OF VOTES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a reader of the Freemason I have noted the letters you have inserted on so called "Charity Reform," and in particular the objections to exchange of votes, with which I have not been able to agree, and as I take it that all large questions are only the accumulation of individual ideas, I wish to give an instance why I believe in exchange of votes.

I now know a very eligible case for the Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, and as I have some votes for Boys' School that I have no particular candidate for, I should be glad to exchange them for Benevolent votes, and it seems to me I should be benefiting both cases by exchange, whereas, if I do not exchange, the full use of both votes will be lost.

I am, yours fraternally,

CHARLES FENDELOW.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can you, or any of the readers of the Freemason, inform me where I can get a perfect version of an old Freemasons' song beginning

"You, brethren, all who wish to know How Masonry first began, 'Twas in the garden of Paradise, Where Adam first he sprang."

I took it down from the lips of an old lady of over fourscore years, some years ago, and have never yet come across the verses in print. The second stanza runs thus—

"'Twas in the garden of Paradise, As plainly you may see, When the fig-leaf aprons they put on To show their Masonry."

I will be much obliged by any one giving me information on the above.

HERMES.

Reviews.

LE MONDE MACONNIQUE. Paris.

"Le Monde Maconnique" is an interesting number for French Freemasons for July. It has come very late to us. But we are much amused with the manner in which our good old opponent, Bro. Grimaux, is induced to "envisager" or regard the present crisis in the "Rite Ecossais." No one knows better than Bro. Grimaux the utter hollowness and unrightfulness of the present agitation against the "Administrative Commission," and the absurdity of the demands of these pseudo reformers to make the "Grande Loge Centrale" a second Grand Orient. He sees it, and he is manly enough to avow it. Bro. Grimaux and ourselves equally recognize the ridiculous pretensions of those who are agitating the "Rite Ecossais" to ignore the rightful claims of the High Grades, and the impossibility of making the "Rite Ecossais" a symbolic body. But then, such is the state of excitement and agitation into which the proceedings of the Grand Orient and the old and long continued manoeuvres of Massol and others have thrown all French Freemasonry, confounding right and wrong, truth and falsehood, legality and illegality, that though his premise is sound, his conclusion is hopelessly illogical. He regrets the "act of suspension," but why? Surely the "Administrative Commission" had a moral as well as a legal right to "frappé," that is, to put a stop to jesuitical and unlawful attempts to change by violent agitation the whole constitution of the "Rite Ecossais," and to throw down a burning torch of discussion, discord, and revolution. We wonder what Bro. St. Jean, or the "Grand Conseil of the Grand Orient," would have said, if some uneasy spirits had circulated resolutions and appeals, calling upon the lodges to interfere and protest against the legal decisions of the Grand Conseil? Would they not have frappé? Yes, and frappé with vigour? We think so, and we only wish that our worthy and able adversary would be consistent and just to the ruling powers of the Rite Ecossais. We are quite one with Bro. Grimaux, when he regrets that warrants for symbolic lodges are granted by the Rite Ecossais. With Bro. Albert Pike, (no mean authority), we doubt the power of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite to give warrants for Craft Lodges; but that is not the question before us now. The Administrative Commission has inherited a "system," and it is seeking loyally to abide by its own laws. It deserves in our opinion the support of all honest Masons, and we trust that Bro. Grimaux may yet, like us, learn to see that that most hateful of all teaching is a lie and a snare, which declares that "the end justifies the means," and that we "may do evil that good may come."

MODERN THOUGHT. Richardson Best, 5, Queen's Head-passage, Paternoster-row.

We have received No. 7 of this monthly magazine, but, unfortunately, cannot discuss its articles properly in our columns, as they infringe upon the "debatable ground" of theological controversy. It seems ably written up to its own "standard," but, to say the truth, as far as we know anything of "modern thought," judging by some works we have to "wade through," it is hazy and unsatisfactory in the extreme.

THE SQUARE AND COMPASSES. Buonaparte Town, U.S.

We have to acknowledge No. 2 of a new Masonic serial, and we wish it all possible success. It very wisely reproduces some of the able articles of that good and sound old teacher, Bro. T. W. Bailey, founder, we believe, and for some time editor, of the well-known American Masonic periodical, The Voice of Masonry.

MUSIC.

I'M MOVING ON. Words by WALTER R. CLEMENTS, Music by CHARLES GLOVER.

We commend this successful and pleasant song to the notice of all our musical brethren.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTERS OF MIDDLESEX & SURREY.

A meeting of this Provincial Grand Mark Lodge was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Richmond, on the 24th ult., under the banner of the Hiram Mark Lodge, No. 13. At five o'clock Bro. Raymond Thrupp, P.G.J.O., opened the Hiram Lodge, with Bro. W. G. Brighten, Prov. G. Sec., acting S.W., Bro. Dr. A. Clarke, Prov. S.G.W., as J.W., when Bro. J. A. Anderson, of the Old Dundee Lodge, was advanced to the Mark Degree in a very able manner.

The ballot was then taken for W.M., which resulted in the unanimous election of Bro. Littor.

Bro. R. H. Thrupp was re-elected Treasurer, and had the pleasure of announcing that the funds in hand amounted to £103.

Bro. Harrison was re-elected Tyler, and after the transaction of some routine business the lodge was closed.

At six o'clock the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in due form, the Prov. Grand Mark Master, Bro. Colonel Burdett, 32°, being received with enthusiasm.

The officers and brethren present were V. W. Bro. Davison, Deputy Provincial Grand Master; W. Bro. A. Clark, Prov. S.G.W.; Bros. Rev. Ambrose Hall, Prov. G. Chap.; C. Hammerton, Prov. G. Treas.; J. Mason, M.O.; J. B. Shackleton, Prov. G.D.C.; A. W. Hume, Prov. G. Std. B.; H. Court, jun., Prov. G.O.; Dr. E. Passawer, Prov. I.G.; E. Gilbert and R. W. Brown, Prov. G. Stewards; John Gilbert, Prov. Lovegrove, C. Pultman, P.G. Std. B.; H. Ridge, W. Stephens, and many others.

The minutes of the previous Provincial Grand Lodge were read and confirmed, and the roll of lodges called over.

The Prov. G. Secretary reported an increase in the number of lodges and members.

The Treasurer's account was circulated and approved. The reappointment of Col. F. Burdett as Prov. Grand Mark Master was proposed by Bro. J. Stevens, P.G.J.O.

The next business was the appointment of Grand Officers for the year, when the following were invested:—

- Bro. O. H. Pearson Prov. G.S.W.
- " R. P. Spice Prov. G.J.W.

- Bro. J. Gilbert } Prov. G. Tyler.

The revised bye-laws of the Province were taken as read, and printed copies distributed.

A Committee for General Purposes was elected, and the Grand Lodge closed in ample form.

The banquet was served in the large room of the Greyhound, when the usual toasts were duly honoured.

The toast of "The M.W.G.M.M., and the Grand Officers," brought a most effective response from Bro. Binckes, who mentioned the great progress made by the Degree during the last twenty years, and its recognition by almost all the great Masonic bodies.

The gathering was very successful, and indicates the flourishing condition of the province.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are the proper medicine for people whose faculties are jaded and whose energies are exhausted by excessive heat. A few doses of these Pills always prove a simple, safe, and cooling treatment for all stomach and liver complaints, a longer course will set right every organ whose action is impaired, strengthen every structure whose tone is diminished, and remove that blood whose purity is tainted. Giddiness, headache, nausea, flatulency, and all other dyspeptic symptoms yield with surprising certainty and celerity to these corrective Pills, which lay siege to the seat of these distressing sensations and carry off without any pain or other disagreeable drawback those peccant matters which are disordering the entire human machine.—[Adv't.]

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER.

The Quarterly Convocation of the Supreme Grand Chapter was held on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, when there were present M.E. Comps. Capt. Wm. Platt, H.; Samuel Rawson, J.; Ernst Emil Wendt, Scribe E.; H. G. Buss, P.S.B., Scribe E.; Lieut.-Col. John Creation, Treas.; Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke, Principal Sec.; Rev. C. W. Arnold, First Asst. Soj.; E. S. Snell, P.S.B., Second Asst. Soj.; Capt. Phillips; T. Fenn; Peter de Lande Long; Joshua Nunn, P.D.C.; Alex. J. Duff Filer, Past S.B.; Samuel Mullins, D.C.; Hickman; and H. Massey (Freemason).

The minutes of the last Quarterly Convocation were read and confirmed, and the report of the Committee of General Purposes was received and adopted.

Scribe E. announced that the absence of the actual Scribe E. was attributable to illness, and that it was solely from that cause that M.E. Comp. Hervey was not present; which announcement called forth expressions of sincere regret.

Letters were read from Comps. George Mellor, Second Asst. Soj.; Col. Burdett, and the Rev. C. R. Davey, excusing their absence.

The Grand Janitor was invested.

Charters were granted for the following chapters:—Sir Hugh Myddelton Chapter, Agricultural Hall, Islington; Etheldreda Chapter, Crown Hotel, Wisbech, in the County of Cambridge; Eryri Chapter, Masonic Hall, Portmadoc, in the County of Carnarvon; Trafalgar Chapter, Ship Hotel, Greenwich; Ley Spring Chapter, Red Lion Tavern, Leytonstone; St. Martin's-le-Grand Chapter, The London, Fleet-street; Abbey Chapter, Abbey Council Chamber, Abingdon; Cathay Chapter, Freemasons' Hall, Zealand-street, Victoria, Hong Kong, China; Loyalty Chapter, Masonic Rooms, Hall-street, St. Helen's, in the County of Lancaster (W.D.); Port Natal Chapter, Masonic Hall, D'Urban, Natal, South Africa.

The prayer of a memorial from the St. Anne's Chapter, No. 970, East Loos—a charter for which was granted by Grand Chapter on the 6th November last—that Comp. John Saell Tucker may be appointed to fill the office of the Third Principal J., in lieu of Comp. William Fenwick resigned (it being shown that Comp. Fenwick had permanently left the neighbourhood, and, consequently, could not act in the above capacity), was granted.

A RECORD OF THE PAST.

On the 9th of August, 1796—nearly three years after the foundation-stone was laid—the Wearmouth Bridge was formally opened for public use. The ribs were braced together and thrown over the river in ten days, the light scaffolding being immediately removed, so as not to interfere with the navigation of the river. The Provincial Grand Lodge showed their esteem for Bro. Burdon, as the father and founder of the structure, by requesting him to act as Grand Master at the opening ceremony, and afterwards to rank as a Past Grand Master. At nine o'clock the Loyal Sunderland Volunteers met at the Batteries, and fired a salute of twenty-one guns, after which they marched to the Phoenix Hall, where the officers of the Grand Lodge and about three hundred brethren were assembled. The brilliant procession was then formed, Prince William of Gloucester walking in front of the Grand Master, Bro. Rowland Burdon. Moving down Queen-street, High-street, and Bridge-street, the south end of the bridge was reached, a triumphal arch having been erected there, and a temporary building for the accommodation of Mrs. Burdon, who was attended by an assemblage of the first female beauty and elegance in the country. The "brethren of the mystic tie" having transacted their formal business, Bro. Nesfield delivered an eloquent speech, the peroration being as follows: "Allow me, brethren, to call back to your minds the object of our assemblage here to-day—the commemoration of this stupendous edifice—our wonder, our delight, our astonishment; an honour to our art; the ornament of our country at large; the pride and boast of this great county in particular. Exposed, by its aerial situation, to the rude shock of the tempest, and the fury of contending winds, may it still rest firm on its foundations, unshaken by the conflict of the jarring elements, unimpaired by the ravages of devouring time! May it in our days stand a glorious monument of British taste and national grandeur; and may it in after ages maintain its proud eminence, permanent and durable as the work of the immortal Roman."

More durable than brass the frame,
Which here I consecrate to fame;
Higher than pyramids that rise,
With royal pride, to brave the skies;
Nor years, though numberless the train,
Nor flight of seasons, wasting rain,
Nor winds, that loud in tempests break,
Shall e'er its firm foundation shake.

At the conclusion of the oration, "grand honours" were given, after which Bro. Burdon delivered an impressive address, and the heralds proclaimed with speaking trumpets that the work was well constructed and fit for public use. This was the signal for a shout of joy from the assembled multitude, computed at about 80,000 people; the Lincoln militia, who were drawn up on the Bridge, fired three volleys, and the ships in the river discharged their ordnance. The procession was then re-formed and marched to chapel, where an earnest and appropriate discourse was delivered from the words, "Now therefore, our God, we thank Thee and praise Thy glorious name." General festivity and rejoicing was the order of a truly red letter day in the annals of Sunderland.—Sunderland Daily Echo, August 2nd, 1879.

Bro. W. T. Boord, M.P., opened a bazaar at Woolwich on Monday, in aid of the fund of St. Thomas's Rectory.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The consecration of the Connaught Lodge will take place this day at Cawte's Hotel, Southsea Common.

The Provincial Grand Chapter of Kent was held at Plumstead on Wednesday last. A report will appear next week.

PROVINCE OF SOMERSET.—The St. Keyna Lodge, No. 1833, was consecrated at Keynsham on Tuesday last by the W.D.P.G.M. Bro. R. C. Else, and the officers of P.G.L. of Somerset.

We are pleased to note that the "Staffordshire Knot" Lodge, No. 726, has a distinguished candidate for initiation at its next meeting on the 12th inst., viz., the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot.

Bro. Thomas Brassey, M.P., offers a prize of £25 for the best handbook of suggestions to merchant officers willing to help their crews in spiritual matters, and to conduct Divine worship on board ships at sea.

We beg to call public attention to the subscription, which is being conducted by a few friends of the late Wm. Smale, in favour of his distressed widow and children. Of our personal knowledge we can say that it is a case meriting the warmest sympathy of the public.

In consequence of the death of the son of General Doherty, C.B., the meeting for the installation of Col. Peard as Provincial Prior of the Knight Templars of Cornwall is postponed until the latter part of September. The meeting of the Rose Croix will be postponed for the same cause.

BOROUGH OF PORTSMOUTH FREEMASONS' HALL AND CLUB COMPANY (Limited).—The foundation stone of the Club Building will be laid by the Mayor of Portsmouth, Bro. Alderman W. D. King, J.P., this afternoon (Saturday). A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

ORDER OF ST. LAWRENCE.—A meeting of the Metropolitan Lodge of the Order of St. Lawrence will be held at the Alexandra Palace this day (Saturday), at 3 p.m., for the purpose of installing the W.M. and other business. The annual festival will be held at the same place at five o'clock.

THOMAS'S HATS.

(LETTER FROM THE PREMIER TO "PUNCH.")

Oh, my dear Mr. Punch, what a fuss, what a clatter,
People talk of naught else but the Practical Hatter;
If you're speaking of Gladstone, the Budget, the Queen,
This Practical Hatter is brought on the scene,
And the "Telegraph," "Echo," the "Standard" & "Times,"
All have leaders on Thomas's Hats and his Rhymes,
Whilst the Editors swear "when in Thomas's Castor
Their ravings flow brighter, and lighter, and faster;"
And I hear Tupper, Tennyson, Ruskin, Carlyle,
Have offered him odes and critiques by the mile;
With no other return for their essays and lays

Than his finding them Hats for the rest of their days.
So I felt half inclined, since they've made such a row
'Gainst the "penny guld wreath" to encircle my brow,
The pleasure of wearing at once to forego,
And exchange it away for a Thomas' Chapeau.
For, to tell you the truth, my dear Punch, I've a dread
Of any more weight being placed on my head,
And as Thomas's Hats are so easy and soft,
Whilst the wreath will be hard and not easily doffed,
If Thomas is willing, I'll readily yield
The wreath for a hat. Ever yours—Beaconsfield.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.
 Craft Masonry.

ERA LODGE (No. 1423).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 9th inst., at the Albany, Twickenham. There was a goodly muster of members and visitors, including Bros. Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M.; Sabine, P.G.S.W.; J. T. Moss, P.G.R.; E. H. Thielley, P.G.S.B.; J. W. Baldwin, P.G.P. (Treasurer); E. W. Devereux, W.M.; A. Loos, S.W.; J. Faulkner, J.W.; B. Wright, Sec.; J. H. Pearson, S.D.; Dr. Bersford Ryley, J.D.; G. L. Wingate, W. Simmons, P.M. 1559; H. Ough, 1150; T. Kingston, P.M. 862; W. C. Greaves, 22. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed, and duly signed by the W.M., after which (by the kind permission of the W.M.) Bro. Baldwin, P.M., proceeded to initiate Mr. B. Squire into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, which ceremony it is almost superfluous to add was rendered in the usual impressive manner for which this brother is so justly celebrated. Business ended, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, and Col. Burdett responded on the part of the "Grand Officers," and explained his reasons for endorsing the petition to Grand Lodge for the removal of the lodge to Twickenham, and expressed a hope that the change would be appreciated by the brethren. Bro. Moss, P.M. (the Irrepressible), in his usual felicitous manner, responded for "The Provincial Grand Officers," and at the conclusion of his remarks handed to the Secretary the names of three gentlemen, Messrs. A. A. Sims, R. Chipperfield, and F. P. Jenkins, for initiation at the next meeting. After some remarks from Bros. Sabine and Baldwin, and some excellent music by the "Irrepressible" and Bro. Thielley, the meeting was brought to a conclusion, and the brethren returned to town.

FARRINGTON WITHOUT LODGE (No. 1745).—A meeting of this new but prosperous lodge was held on Monday, the 26th ult., at the Viaduct Hotel, Holborn, when there were present Bros. C. Jacques, W.M.; T. C. Walls, P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, &c., S.W. (Freemason); H. J. Lardner, J.W.; W. Ramsey, P.M., Treasurer; S. H. Jackson, jun., I.P.M. and Secretary; M. Samuel, S.D.; W. Potter, I.G.; Strugnell, D.C.; Hart, Honorary Organist; Parkinson, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. Tomkinson, S.W. 97; Butt, J.W. 907; and J. H. Wildash, 1662. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Eberhardt was raised to the Degree of a M.M. by the I.P.M. The W.M. having resumed the chair passed Bro. T. Simpson to the Second Degree. The ballot was then taken upon behalf of Messrs. Richards and A. Wildash, and having been proved unanimous, those gentlemen were duly initiated into Craft mysteries by the W.M. In consequence of the lateness of the hour the question of the bye-laws was again postponed. The lodge having been duly and formally closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was admirably served by the caterer, Bro. Acland, and assistants. Upon the removal of the cloth the customary toasts were duly proposed and done full justice to. The proceedings were enlivened by the instrumental and vocal abilities of several of the brethren.

BLACKBURN.—Lodge of Fidelity (No. 269).—The above lodge held a meeting on Thursday evening, the 7th inst., when the following brethren were present:—Bros. Edward Brooks, W.M.; Samuel L. Buckley, S.W.; James Heap, J.W.; Allen Blenkhorn, I.P.M.; John Troop, P.M. and Treas.; Thomas Parkinson, Sec.; William Fletcher, S.D.; William H. Cunliffe, P.M., D.C.; Nathaniel Jones, I.G.; William Barton, S.S.; John Tomlinson, J.S.; William Croft, Tyler; John Shaw, Org.; William F. Townley, P.M.; Miles Aspinall, R. Bradshaw, F. W. Vernon, 782; Thos. Preston, W. C. Bantle, N.

Gillett, George H. Holt, 345; R. C. Duckworth, P.M. 345; John B. Leopold, 1775; J. T. Hall, S.D. 1519. Mr. Thomas Parker, having been balloted for and elected, was ably initiated into the mysteries of the Craft, the ceremony being ably performed by the W.M., and the charges most impressively given by Bro. John Troop, P.M. The lodge was closed at eight o'clock in peace and harmony, when the brethren retired from labour to refreshment.

MANCHESTER.—Lodge of Affability (No. 317).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 7th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, Bro. John Roger Lever, W.M., presiding, assisted by the following officers: Bros. Mark Vickers, S.W.; W. Michall, J.W.; Daniel Doubavand, I.P.M.; Robt. Tomlinson, S.D.; Joseph Halliday, J.D.; John Church, Sec.; Ezra Cohen, I.G.; John Bladon, D.C.; W. J. Cunliffe, Org.; J. Wilson, Stewart; and J. Sly, Tyler. There were also present Bros. J. Dawson, P.M.; Samuel Titmas, P.M., P.P.G.D.C. E.L.; E. J. Rex, N.D.; Jas. Smith, George Heywood, Henry Furbaw, H. Walmsley, R. Bradshaw, Francis Hilton, John W. Edwards, — De Yongh, — Holmes, and H. R. Lisenden (Freemason). Visitors: Bros. Bostock, 1212 and 1612; C. H. Stephenson, 1632; and Michael Scheelsfeld, 1262 (West Yorkshire). The lodge was opened at 8.20 with solemn prayer, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. Mr. Ellis Jones was then balloted for and unanimously elected a member of the lodge. Mr. D. G. Wenham was next balloted for, and was also elected. During the preliminary arrangements necessary for initiating Mr. Ellis Jones (Mr. Wenham not being present) Bro. Francis Hilton, who was eligible for passing to the F.C. Degree, was interrogated and answered the queries very satisfactorily indeed. Mr. Ellis Jones being admitted, was duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry by the W.M., who performed the ceremony in his usual able manner, and also explained the working tools. Bro. John Church, Secretary, delivered the charge in good style and without a hitch, and it is the more pleasant to record this fact as this was the first time an opportunity had presented itself of displaying his powers of memory. On the retirement of Bro. Ellis Jones and Bro. Hilton, the lodge was raised to the Second Degree, and on the re-appearance of Bro. Hilton he was passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft, the W.M. performing this ceremony also and presenting the working tools. The ceremony of passing being ended, the lodge was lowered to the First Degree. The W.M. announced that it gave him great pleasure to state to the brethren that the application which had been made to Grand Lodge, for the relief of the widow of the late Bro. Walker, had met with a satisfactory response, the Board of Benevolence having in the most generous manner sent him the sum of £30, which added to the sum of £15 previously sent by them made £45; this, in addition to £5 kindly forwarded by the East Lancashire Benevolent Institution, made a total of £50, which he need scarcely add would be very acceptable to the widow. He further stated that he had received a letter from Mrs. Walker acknowledging her gratitude to him and the brethren of the lodge who had signed the petition in her favour. "Hearty good wishes" were then expressed by the visitors, and the lodge was closed in due form at 8.20. The brethren afterwards assembled at the social board, where the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to, as were also the toasts of the candidates, visitors, &c., &c., and the brethren separated before eleven o'clock, after spending an enjoyable two hours and a half, which were considerably enlivened by some good singing by Bros. C. H. Stephenson, Cunliffe, Walmsley, and J. H. Greenwood, as well as some well rendered recitations by Bros. Donbavand, Bostock, and Bracewell.

LEIGHTON.—Beaudesert Lodge (No. 1087).—The installation of Bro. Green, as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, took place on Friday, the 8th inst., at the Town Hall, Leighton. The Installing Master was Bro. Past Master Gotto. Among the officers chosen by the W.M. were Bros. George Holdom, S.W.; Grafton, J.W.; T. C. Tidmarsh, S.D.; Dr. Sandell, J.D. The ceremony being concluded in the Town Hall, the brethren repaired to the Bell Hotel, where a banquet, consisting of every delicacy of the season, was provided by Bro. Pickering, the worthy host. Among the visitors were Bros. Wilmer, Beart, King, Bradshaw, Cubbing, and Walker. The cloth being removed, the usual toasts were proposed in a most admirable manner by the W.M. That of "The Grand Officers" was suitably responded to by Bro. King. "The Health of the Installing Master, Bro. Past Master Gotto," was proposed by Bro. Dr. Gross, who eulogised the excellent manner in which he had performed the ceremony. This toast was enthusiastically received. The toast of "The Visitors" was next proposed, and briefly, but very heartily, responded to by each highly congratulating the lodge upon their choice of Worshipful Master, who is deservedly held in the highest esteem among his brethren in the lodge. The evening's entertainment was enlivened by several good songs from Bros. George Holdom, S.W.; Willis, Bradshaw, Walker, and others.

EAST GRINSTEAD.—Sackville Lodge (No. 1619).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at the Crown Hotel. Present: Bros. John G. Horsey, W.M.; S. Davison, S.W.; E. A. Head, J.W.; Wm. Hale, P.M., Treas.; C. Sawyer, I.P.M., Sec.; Wm. Rudge, S.D.; Jas. E. Woodbridge, Steward; F. Sargeant, Tyler; Past Masters Bros. Jas. Noke and W. H. Hook; Bros. Jas. Cooper, Jno. Woodbridge, C. T. Young, E. Dickman, Wm. Pile, and J. H. Heckford. Visitors: Bros. W. C. Banks, W.M. Amherst, 1223; Babington, Hopkinson, and G. Trench, of the Faversham Lodge. The Auditor's report was received and approved. Bro. Wm. Pile raised. Ballot being unanimous, Messrs. C. Firbank,

G. W. Holmes, and M. Ovenden were duly initiated. After the banquet the usual toasts were given. In replying to their toast the Past Masters each spoke very highly of the excellent and impressive way in which Bro. John G. Horsey, their W.M., had worked the First and Third Degrees for the first time. Bro. Hale said that during the many years he had been a member he had never heard better working. Several of the visitors expressed themselves in a similar manner.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Albert Edward Lodge (No. 1780).—The W.M. of this lodge, Bro. W. Hickman, the Dep. Prov. Grand Master, at its last regular meeting received as visitors the W.M. of the Lodge of Peace and Harmony, No. 359 (Bro. T. Lashmore), and a large number of the Past Masters and officers of that lodge. Several brethren were passed to a superior degree and a candidate was initiated into Masonry, the ceremonies being conducted by the W.M., and the charge to the newly-admitted brother ably given by the Prov. Grand Sec. (Bro. Le Feuvre, P.M., an honorary member of the lodge). At the subsequent banquet the toast of "The W.M. and Brethren of the Lodge of Peace and Harmony" was very heartily given, and ably responded to by the W.M., Bro. Lashmore, and a very pleasant meeting was brought to a close with the toast of "The Officers of the Albert Edward Lodge," which was acknowledged by the S.W., Bro. Harle.

SHOREHAM.—Burrell Lodge (No. 1829).—The first regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 7th inst., at the appointed meeting house, the Royal George Hotel, where a goodly number of brethren put in an appearance. Six well established and influential members of Freemasonry were unanimously elected joining members. Five candidates were also elected and, being in attendance, initiated. The ceremony of initiation was very ably performed by Bro. C. J. Smith, P.M. and W.M. 1466, acting I.P.M., in the absence of the W.M., Bro. Lord A. W. Hill, who was called away to Ireland. It is pleasing to notify the unanimous open good feeling existing among the brethren, also the easy masterly manner the officers perform their duties, an evidence that their hearts are in the work. The presence of several P.M.'s and W.M.'s of other lodges was very encouraging, and we think the brethren who laboured in founding the lodge may congratulate themselves upon their success, and the noble auspices under which they commenced their labours. A lodge of emergency will be held on Thursday, the 21st inst., for the purpose of initiating three candidates and electing four joining members. The regular meetings are arranged to be held the first Thursday in each month, and we feel assured brethren travelling south will be gratified in attending and heartily welcomed by the brethren of the new lodge.

INSTRUCTION.
DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1544).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston. Present: Bros. J. L. Payne, W.M.; J. Lorkin, S.W.; F. Jacob, J.W.; C. Lorkin, S.D.; W. Ferrar, I.G.; W. Fieldwick, Precept; J. Williams, Sec.; and several other brethren. The lodge was opened in ancient form with solemn prayer. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of passing was rehearsed. Bro. Ferrar, candidate, having answered the necessary questions, was passed to the degree of F.C. Bro. J. Lorkin, assisted by the brethren, worked the First, Second, and Third Sections of the Lecture. Bro. W. Fieldwick proposed, and Bro. F. Jacob seconded, that Bro. J. Lorkin be W.M. for the ensuing Wednesday evening—carried unanimously. Nothing further offering, the lodge was closed in ancient form.

Mark Masonry.

MALTA.—Broadley Lodge (No. 248).—This lodge, which has been recently founded by a number of influential and well-known Mark Masters in this island, held its first meeting on Tuesday, the 30th ult., at the Masonic Hall, No. 27, Strada Stretta, La Valletta, Bro. C. E. Coffey, W.M., who had been previously installed at a meeting of the Keystone Mark Lodge under a provincial warrant from Bro. A. M. Broadley, P.G.M.M. of the Province of Tunis and Malta, in the chair. After the warrant of constitution had been read by the Secretary, a ballot was taken for two joining members and six candidates for advancement, which proved unanimous. The joining members were then admitted, and five of the six candidates being present, were, after due preparation, advanced to the rank of Mark Masters. Lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the refreshment room. After the usual Masonic toasts had been given, "The Success and Prosperity of the New Lodge" was given, and received with enthusiasm. "The Health of the W.M. and Officers" was afterwards proposed, and the joining members congratulated them warmly on the excellent manner the ceremony of advancement had been carried out.

In connection with the Horbury Floral and Horticultural Society, held on Saturday, August 9th, there was an open air glee contest, when the first prize was awarded to the "Batley Orpheus Quartette," Bros. Buckley, Fox, Sheard, and Brearley (Trafalgar, No. 971), who sung "Gently sighs the evening breeze," by Tarwood, and "Of a the airts the win can blaw," by Shaw, as also the best glee, "The Sycamore shade," by Sir John Goss, selected by the Committee.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

This lodge was held on Monday at Ventnor, the place of meeting being the Assembly Rooms. The Prov. Grand Master, Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., was attended by the Dep. Prov. G. Master, Bro. W. Hickman, of Southampton; the Prov. Grand Treasurer, Secretary, and other Past and Present Grand Officers, to the number of between thirty and forty, filling the dais, which had been very beautifully decorated by the Ventnor brethren with a choice collection of stove and greenhouse plants and flowers.

The roll call was responded to by representatives of nearly every lodge in the province, numbering thirty-one, and extending from Bournemouth and Ringwood in the west, to Aldershot and Basingstoke in the north, and Petersfield in the south of the county. The Portsmouth brethren, as was inevitable from their numbers and comparative proximity to Ventnor, were in considerable strength; the Island, too, contributed a very respectable contingent, the total attendance probably numbering between three and four hundred, among whom we noticed the familiar face of Bro. Binckes.

The Prov. Grand Treasurer's accounts formed the first business, and showed a balance in hand of £274 14s. on the current year's transactions, exclusive of fees of honour. Two amounts of £20 each, one of £10, and one of £5, were voted to the widows and families of deceased brethren, and the accounts having been approved Bro. Mark Frost was unanimously re-elected Provincial Grand Treasurer amidst very warm applause.

Several committees having been appointed for the ensuing year, the Prov. G.M. proceeded to appoint and invest his Grand Officers, prefacing it by remarking that the province had now become so large and extensive as to embrace more than thirty lodges. As he had only about ten offices at his disposal, even according to that eminent authority Cocker (a laugh), he thought the brethren would recognise that it would be impossible for him to confer honours on every lodge. Under these circumstances he asked the brethren to allow him to assure them that if names were sometimes passed over it was rather because there was no possible place for them than because of any indisposition to recognise their merits and labours in their respective lodges. In connection with this matter, he would remind the brethren that the offer of a Steward's collar was by no means to be misunderstood; it was to be regarded rather as a reminder to brethren that they were not entirely forgotten than as implying any want of due recognition of their efforts in the respective spheres they occupied in Masonry; and in fact, in so large a province the office of Steward would probably in the future more than in the past have to be regarded as a stepping to higher honours as the opportunity offered. He then invested the Prov. Grand Officers for the year as follows, special recognition in their plaids being paid by the brethren to those whose labours are best known in the province:—

Bro. W. Hickman, P.M. 130	... Prov. D.G.M.
" F. Newman, P.M. 551	... Prov. G.S.W.

Bro. J. Biggs, 130, and J. Exell, 487	... Prov. G. Tylers.

The Prov. Grand Lodge being closed, a few of the brethren sat down to a cold collation, which had been provided at the Literary Institute, but the majority, including the Grand Master, were compelled, by the exigencies of the train and boat services, to leave Ventnor within an hour of the termination of Prov. Grand Lodge business.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The General Committee of the Institution met on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Colonel J. Creaton in the chair. There were also present Bros. C. G. Dilley, J. M. Case, W. Clarke, J. H. Leggatt, J. G. Stevens, F. Newton, Wm. Stephens, Edgar Bowyer, George Penn, James Brett, C. J. Hogard, T. Goode, W. Hilton, Jas. Terry, Secretary, and H. Massey (Freemason).

The minutes of the meeting of the 9th July were read and confirmed.

The Secretary reported the deaths of four annuitants as having taken place since last meeting.

The Secretary read a list of the sums payable at this term, and the Chairman was authorised to sign cheques for the same.

Applications from the widows of two deceased annuitants for the allowance of half their late husbands' annuities were granted; and petitions from three female and one male candidates were received and examined, and the names ordered to be placed on the list of candidates for next election.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF MIDDLESEX.—The names of Comps. H. Adams, M.E.Z., and J. Linzell, J. of Enfield Chapter, were omitted from the list of those present in our report last week.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF KENT.

Ex. Comp. Viscount Holmesdale, Superintendent of the Kent Royal Arch Chapter, and a goodly concourse of Royal Arch Masons from all parts of the province, assembled at Plumstead on the 6th inst., for the business and pleasure of the annual meeting, the arrangements for which were made by the local chapter, the Pattison, No. 913. As soon as they learnt that their invitation to Plumstead had been accepted by the province, the members of the Pattison set about their preparations, and the result was one on which they were warmly thanked and complimented by the visitors. The large covered building at the Skating Rink in Eglinton-road was engaged for the purpose, and, being partitioned by curtains, served the purposes of reception room, lodge room, and banquetting hall, under one roof. At one p.m. the Grand Chapter was opened with the ancient ceremonies, and the business proceeded.

Among those present were the Grand Superintendent, the Right Hon. the Viscount Holmesdale, P.G.H.; Comps. the Rev. Thos. Robinson, M.A., P.G. Treas.; B. K. Thorpe, P.G.S.E.; T. S. Warne, P.S.; J. D. The minutes of the previous meeting were then read and confirmed, and the roll of chapters in the province called.

The report of the Audit Committee was then read and passed. In it was a recommendation that the second seven chapters on the list be granted ten guineas each for Life Governorships in the Boys' School.

Ex. Capt. Thorpe was then unanimously re-elected Grand Treasurer for the ensuing year.

That being the whole of the business, the Prov. Grand Chapter was closed in solemn form, and the companions repaired to the banquet, which was elegantly served by Bro. Wain, of the Pier Hotel, Erith, the tables, which were arranged in the shape of a trident, and well decorated with flowers, having an admirable appearance. Upwards of a hundred guests sat down, and the pleasures of the feast were enhanced by the sweet music discoursed by a selected orchestra of the Royal Artillery Band, led by Bro. Quartermaster Sergt. Smith. The Masons dined "in clothing," which is to say that they wore their sashes, aprons, and jewels, thereby heightening the picturesque effect of the scene, but the guard upon the doors had terminated with the conclusion of the secret conclave, thus affording an opportunity for introducing as spectators a number of ladies in one of the galleries. There the scene and the music for the enjoyment of the wives and daughters of the members, while the members themselves discussed the more solid enjoyments at the tables below; and although towards the end of the banquet there were ample supplies of wine and fruit sent to the galleries, the somewhat late attention hardly compensated for the first hour's neglect, for the fairer and the sweeter sex are but human, with appetites, perhaps, as keen as coarser man, and they must have been angry indeed if they did not employ that awkward hour in scrutinising and criticising, with mental notes for future service, the exhibition beneath them. However, they had the advantage of seeing a good specimen of a public dinner, and of becoming acquainted with the style in which the gentlemen enjoy themselves on such occasions, and let us hope that they will exercise the knowledge mercifully.

When the cloth was removed, a number of loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed from the chair, as follows:—

The Chairman: Companions, before submitting to your notice any of the toasts upon this list, I must remind you that as the presence of ladies in the gallery renders this portion of the day's proceedings not purely Masonic, it will be necessary to dispense with the usual Masonic forms in doing honour to these toasts. Premising this, I shall propose the first toast without comment, and ask you to drink "The Queen and Royal Arch Freemasonry."

The toast was heartily received, and a few verses of the National Anthem were sung, the solos being rendered by Miss Jessie Royd.

The Chairman: I have now to ask you to drink "The Health of the Most Excellent the Grand First Principal, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Most Excellent the Pro Grand First Principal, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon." The Prince of Wales, as you are well aware is a most earnest Freemason, and is devoted to the interests not only of the Craft but also of Arch Masonry. I may say the same thing of the Most Excellent Pro. Grand First Principal, the Earl of Carnarvon, who is second only to the Prince of Wales in the position he holds among us; he devotes a great deal of attention to our interests, and we are grateful to him for the time he gives to Arch Masonry.

This toast also was enthusiastically received, and "God bless the Prince of Wales" was sung by the company, after which Arne's fine song "The Soldier tired" was sung by Miss Jessie Royd.

The Chairman: Brethren and companions, I now ask you to drink "The Health of the Second and Third Principals, the Most Excellent Lord Skelmersdale and Lord de Tabley, and the other Officers of Supreme Grand Chapter." The remarks I made about the First Principal will in a smaller degree apply to those most excellent companions named in this toast. They all perform the duties devolving upon them with the greatest ability and interest; and I am sure that this toast to their health will be received with the honour that it well deserves. I give you "The Health of Lord Skelmersdale, and the other Officers of Grand Chapter."

After this toast Bro. Stedman sang "Mary of Argyle" very effectively.

Comp. Robinson: I have the honour to be permitted to propose the next toast, which is the toast of the day, and I hasten to do it before more companions have left the room. The toast which I now present to your notice is "The Health of the Grand Superintendent for Kent, the Most Excellent Viscount Holmesdale, M.P." No language I can use would be too strong to express our sense of the admirable manner in which he performs the duties of his high office or of the advantages we enjoy under his rule. Arch Masonry in this province proceeds with increasing prosperity under his superintendence, and we hope and trust that he may continue to rule over us for a long period. Two years ago Lord Holmesdale kindly consented to accept the superintendence of this province, and by doing so he gave an impetus to Arch Masonry in the district—the various chapters obtained the privileges and happiness of meeting together on occasions like the present, and each received an impetus to endeavour to make theirs the best chapter in the province. I am sure, companions, I need not add any more words in presenting this toast. I give you "The Health of the Most Excellent Viscount Holmesdale, our Noble Chief;" may prosperity and happiness attend him as long as he lives, and may he be spared many long years to preside over us.

This toast was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm. When the applause subsided Miss Kate Leopold sang "Amor Misterioso," from Carmen.

The Chairman: It has always been my good fortune when I have come amongst you on such occasions as the present to bear my health proposed in very flattering terms, and to note the kindly response it has always met with at your hands. It has been so proposed and received on the present occasion; and I can only say that as years go on I am heartily glad to see that that toast has not lost its popularity. It is evident that interest in Royal Arch Masonry is increasing in the province, and I trust that it will go on prospering and to prosper; and I think we may say that the progress made in the last few years is remarkable. We, of course, aspire to very much larger numbers, but we may nevertheless think that these meetings are not the less pleasant, because, though considerable, they are not overcrowded. If it should go on increasing and prospering, all I can say is, companions, I think we should have reason to be proud of the hold modern Arch Masonry had taken upon the Craft, and should not consider the lessened personal comfort of these meetings, pleasant as they are. When we consider what our principles are (I am not going to tell the ladies in the gallery what those principles are) we shall make the further extension and further development of those principles the first consideration.

The Chairman: I have now, companions, to ask you to drink "The Health of the Second and Third Principals of the Provincial Grand Chapter," "sweet and low." We all know that sweetness is connected with all that is Masonic. I think we should not separate without honouring the health of the Second and Third Principals. The working of the chapter devolves a good deal upon the second of the Principals; his work is of a very important nature, and I think we should not let this occasion pass without drinking his health. I shall couple this toast with the name of Comp. Eastes, whose appointment for the ensuing year I am sure cannot fail to give satisfaction. I call upon you to honour the toast to the Second and Third Principals of Provincial Grand Chapter.

Song. "Sweet and Low."

Comp. Eastes: Most excellent companions, I return you the very sincere and heartfelt thanks of the Third Principal and myself for the toast that has been proposed by our Grand Superintendent, and I thank you for the heartiness with which you have been pleased to receive it. Companions, His Excellency has been pleased to appoint me to the honour of Second Principal, and has been very kind in the remarks he has made in connection with that appointment. It is true that I have endeavoured, and shall endeavour, to perform my duties satisfactorily, and if I do not succeed in pleasing every one, I hope I shall be able to please the Grand Superintendent. I must, however, ask the companions to show a little forbearance towards me now that I have become a member of Provincial Grand Chapter. I think that every Arch Mason ought to aspire to do so, whatever the position may be; and in the future arrangements that may be made I hope you will feel assured that I have done my duty to the best of my ability, and, if only I have done that, a man can do no more. I hope to see the chapters in the province multiply; I feel that every lodge ought to have its chapter; and I think we ought to use our influence to bring that to pass. If we do not use that influence I think it will be a disappointment to our Grand Superintendent. And with regard to the lodge entertaining us to-day, I feel that they must be very gratified to know that they have done their utmost for the interest of Royal Arch Masonry in this province on this occasion, and I am sure we must all be struck with the arrangements made for decorating this room, and the preparation of that for the Royal Arch Chapter to-day.

Comp. Bird (Third Principal) also replied in a few appropriate words to this toast.

The Chairman: I now ask you to drink "The Health of the Officers of the Provincial Grand Chapter, Present and Past." I trust that they will all be good enough to do their best to uphold the dignity of this Provincial Grand Chapter. If we secure the efforts of the Officers of Grand Chapter we may reckon on an increase in our numbers and an increase in our prosperity. I am sorry to say the Provincial Grand Treasurer was compelled to leave early on account of a death in his family, which I regret to say deprives us of his company now. With this toast I shall couple the name of Comp. Warne.

Comp. Warne, in returning thanks, said that while it gratified his ambition to become a member of Provincial Grand Chapter, there was still a deeper feeling of gratification in being considered worthy to receive the honour at his lordship's hands. He was pleased to see that one step had been taken (or rather a flight of steps) towards the admission of ladies on these occasions; that day they were admitted to the gallery, but he lived to hope that they would be in closer companionship on future days.

The Chairman: Before the next song, as I am reluctantly obliged to leave very shortly, I wish to propose "The Health of the Principals and Past First Principals of the Pattison Chapter, 913, the Receiving Chapter." I regret that the weather has been so unfavourable as to deprive us of the pleasure of enjoying the beauties of the grounds, but I am sure that none who have attended this Provincial Grand Chapter can say that they have not been well received by the Pattison Chapter. Their arrangements have been most thoroughly satisfactory; and I was anxious to give this toast myself, that I may heartily drink to the success and prosperity of the Pattison Chapter.

Comp. Penfold, in replying, said that the Pattison Chapter was fully sensible of the honour conferred upon them by the very kind and generous way in which his lordship had spoken of their reception of Provincial Grand Chapter, which was really on a moderate scale, because his lordship had been understood to say on a former occasion that it was not desirable for the different chapters to try to cut each other out. That had been kept steadily in view by them, although, on the other hand, they had been most anxious to do what was requisite to maintain the dignity of Provincial Grand Chapter.

At this period of the evening his lordship retired, amid the cheers of the company.

Comp. Robinson, having taken the chair, proposed "The Health of the Visiting Companions," coupled with the name of Comp. Binckes, Secretary of the Masonic Institution for Boys, who returned thanks.

The Chairman said that though the toast was not in the programme he could not declare the meeting at an end without asking them to drink to "The Health of the Ladies," who had added grace to the occasion by their presence in the gallery. He trusted that on future occasions they would be able to imitate the example (to which Comp. Binckes had referred) that had been set at the last Boys' School Festival, when the ladies and brethren dined together. He should call upon Comp. Butter to respond to this toast.

Comp. Butter thereupon ascended to the gallery, and said: On behalf of the ladies, I tender you our sincere thanks for the kind manner in which you have drunk our health. We consider it is a very long lane that has no turning, and we are glad to observe that the long lane of Masonry is taking a turn at last; the mysteries of the banquet-room are at length revealed to us partially; on future occasions we hope for a closer acquaintance with them. With this we should be satisfied. We do not know what took place on the other side of that curtain, and we hope you will believe—in spite of our reputation for curiosity—that we do not want to know. We know that it is very important business; and when you come home at 11 or 12 o'clock—if not later—we do not mind, we know that you have been engaged on important business. These, I assure you, are our true sentiments; but we do hope that, if we do not object to your employing your time on important business, you, on the other hand, will not be averse to admitting us to participate in your banquets on future occasions.

NOTABLE MANUFACTORIES.

GEORGE KENNING, GOLD, SILVER, AND TINSEL LACE, EMBROIDERY, JEWELLERY, &c., LITTLE BRITAIN, FLEET-STREET, LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND GLASGOW.

(From Land and Water.)

There is little likelihood that even the most civilised of mortals will ever become utterly indifferent to the wearing of decorative stuffs and materials. The love of finery is instinct in man, and those who speak disdainfully of the poor savage with his bead necklets, armlets, anklets, &c., are oftentimes the greatest offenders in respect of the very fault they condemn so severely. The Indian chief is not more proud of his tuft of feathers than are some among us of the jewellery they wear so profusely. Even those who affect the severe simplicity of republicans bear a kind of negative testimony to the justice of this view, for it is the absence of the gewgaws which gives them a conspicuousness they would not otherwise receive. Wherever, therefore, men do congregate together in cities and towns, there will be found both the much-desired emporiums for the sale of jewellery and the places where they are manufactured. And, further, we may be very certain that wherever there is a tolerably well-filled purse to draw upon, there will be frequent calls made upon it for the satisfaction of that particular desire for personal adornment which, as we have said already, is so characteristic generally of the human race, especially in the case of that one moiety of it which constitutes the fair sex. Again, where in bodies of men there are different gradations of rank, &c., it is thought desirable, if not absolutely necessary, that the ensigns by which each is distinguished should be worn conspicuously on some part of the uniform or dress, the making of these insignia will be sure to find a place among the recognised manufactures of the country. Societies which are formed for some special purpose, be it of simple pleasure or severe business, are likely to adopt some characteristic emblem. Even in the dry routine of everyday business it is often found expedient that people who are engaged in them should wear some numerical or other badge by which it may be possible to distinguish individuals. All these requirements of modern times have necessitated what may almost be regarded as a new branch of trade, while, the love of personal display remaining at least as conspicuous as it ever has been, there are the same inducements for people to trade in those articles which tend to foster that love as ever. There is this difference, perhaps: with at least an equal amount of taste and inventive power, the mechanical means at the command of the manufacturer are far more considerable, and far more ingenious, as well as far more complete than formerly. The steam-engine plays a conspicuous part in the manufacture of nine-tenths of the goods that are turned out of our workshops. Nor has it lessened the amount of manual labour which is also required. In a business of any extent it will be found there are as many hands employed as before. Thus, with the old inducements and the new, and with the old requirements supplemented by new, and oftentimes by others which are of great importance, it cannot be doubted there is a wide and ever-expanding field for the exercise of our energies, and with a fair field before him and no favour, a man may in a very few years build up a business of great proportions. In this instance, at all events, Mr. George Kenning has shown what he is capable of, and more than one provincial branch of his business bears testimony to the success of his efforts. Be it our present purpose to describe the principal articles he manufactures, on so large a scale that, if we include the outdoor as well as the indoor staff of workers, we shall not be far wrong if we set them down at several hundreds.

GOLD AND SILVER LACE.

First in order, if not in importance, in the several branches of Mr. Kenning's business, must be mentioned the manufacture of the different kinds of lace, and it will doubtless interest our readers to learn briefly and free from all dry technicalities the various stages through which the metal passes before it reaches that rich and effective material which plays so conspicuous a part in decorating the uniform of our military and naval officers, the quiet and unpretentious as well as the more gorgeous State liveries of our gentlemen, and what are commonly known as the regalia of our numerous societies, political and non-political, charitable, temperance, and the like. But few, perhaps, of those who at some time or other in the course of their existence have donned a volunteer's uniform have ever given a thought to the time and labour bestowed on the manufacture of the badges of honour they may have earned, or the emblems of the rank they hold—the chevrons of the non-commissioned or the lace of the commissioned officer—nor are we aware if the study of lace manufacture and the art of embroidery has a place in the mystic rites of the Oddfellows or the Antediluvian Buffaloes. Yet assuredly it is most interesting to go through the different workshops of Mr. Kenning where these things are made, and note the successive stages of their manufacture. Hand labour and mechanical labour both play their part, the motive power of the latter being a gas engine, which, if necessary, will work up to 5-horse power, while skilled men, women, and girls supply the former. But the gold and the silver and the less precious but oftentimes as effective metals, how are these fashioned into such exquisite stuffs? Well, the solid ingot having been in the first place converted into wire of the requisite size, the process which is known as puri-making begins—that is, one end of the simple wire is made fast to a fine steel needle, and is then passed rapidly by handwork through the machine on which it is placed, and, presto! the simple wire is exquisitely-wrought according to the particular pattern needed, and all ready for the embroidery-room. In the flattening-room the wire is flattened out by means of steam rollers, and then taken to the spinning-room, where the threads are wound on the braid machines.

In the braiding department may be seen a great variety of these machines, each having a different number of spindles, and working, therefore, a different pattern of braid. It is very curious to watch the regularity and precision with which the bobbins keep moving round to the right and left, as the case may be, while, as the work is done by machinery, the braid when manufactured is perfection itself. It is needless to say that all these processes are carried out methodically, and the utmost order prevails in each of the departments, while the machinery is carefully fenced round, so that, except in cases of wilful stupidity or carelessness, it is impossible for an accident to take place. In the weaving-room are a number of looms, single and double shuttle, where is manufactured the gold lace. In this, as indeed in the other branches, the principal workfolk are young women and girls, whose labour is superintended by foremen of skill and experience. Other processes there are in the preparation of the different kinds of lace. Thus, there are embossing and crimping machines, the mere mention of which will suffice to indicate their respective purposes, and again some of the spindles are used in making flat braid, and others braided cord.

EMBROIDERY DEPARTMENT.

Having got our gold and silver thread and lace, we now enter the department where these materials are utilised. The quality of the work done in the embroidery department varies from the simplest to the most elaborate patterns. For the latter the designs are all drawn most carefully. They are then pricked out for the purpose of being affixed to the cloth or silk or other material which they are intended to adorn, and then the pattern is worked in gold, silver, or both. All this is done by hand, very rapidly and very deftly we may be assured. Where a high relief, as in the case of grenades, crowns, &c., is necessary, there are several layers of the cloth or other material placed under the design, while, in the case of such ordinary insignia as the chevron the marksman's badge, &c., it is merely a case of stitching. Our readers will understand this description if we mention, for instance, such insignia as are worn on the collars, caps, shakos, &c., of naval and military men, the devices on the banners and bannerettes of different societies, as well as on the sashes and belts worn by men of high rank in those societies. In the show room we had submitted for our inspection several of these latter, and, as may be imagined, the effect was very pleasing, not to say brilliant; in fact, were a number of them grouped about a hall or other building the rich hues of the costly silks and velvets, set off with the gold and silver and precious stones or paste, would be even magnificent.

THE WORK ROOMS.

Here are manufactured the different articles, such as sashes, aprons, and the like, the rosettes, grenades, and more elaborate designs being also sewn on. Here, too, we saw the process of making tassels, such as are affixed to velvet cushions, sword knots, &c. Indeed, it is in this department where the several parts of the numerous articles made in this establishment are completed. Both in this and the preceding branch the work is done by females.

COCKADES.

The way in which these are made is very simple. The material used is leather. When the pattern has been punched out, it is placed in a pickle, and when dry, is again placed under the punch for the purpose of being fashioned into the necessary shape, additional pieces being jammed hard into the bosses, or raised parts. It is then dipped into another pickle, somewhat similar to the first, in order that the leather may be sufficiently hardened, this process being rendered necessary by the porous character of the material used, and if this and the former pickling are not well done, the result is a failure—in the first case as regards the colour, which must be a dead black, and in the second as regards the substantiality of the cockade. The different parts are then put together, and the cockade only needs a coat of varnish in order to be complete.

JEWELLERY DEPARTMENT.

It is not our purpose to describe at any length the character of the work done in this department, for the simple reason that those who are already informed of the interior economy of a jewel manufactory must be well advised of what is done in this. The distinctive feature of this branch of Mr. Kenning's establishment is the amazing variety of the jewels manufactured for the different societies established in this country and our colonies—the different Masonic bodies, the Order of Foresters, the Oddfellows, Orangemen, Ribbonmen, Good Templars, Buffaloes, &c., and as in each case the different grades of officers wear different jewels, while in many the rank-and-file also carry a distinguishing symbol of the body they belong to, it may be imagined that the work done in this branch embraces a far wider range (in respect of variety at all events) than is done in the workshops of an ordinary manufacturing jeweller. It were hardly possible to give an adequate idea of the effect produced by an array, such as may be seen here, of the quaint-looking—we use quaint in the sense of unaccustomed—devices in gold and silver, squares, levels, plumblines, cross-pens, cross-keys, Maltese and every variety of cross, badges with enamelled centres, &c., to say nothing of the usual contents of the jeweller's tray, such as rings, chains, bracelets, and the gold, silver, and bronze medals and medallions which are awarded as prizes at schools and by agricultural and other societies. One branch of this department is devoted to engraving, gilding, and plating. In the last two processes are used, in the case of gilding, a Daniell's battery, containing a solution of sulphate of potassium—the foreman told us he had also tried the late Mr. Smee's batteries and found them most serviceable—while for plating a battery with bichromate of potassium is required. During our brief visit a few bars, such as are worn on the ribands of our war-medals, were subjected to the process of gilding. These bars were hung to a piece of copper wire, the latter portion being twisted so as to form a circle. They were then dipped into a solution of cyanide of potassium, and after remaining a few seconds—a longer or shorter time is necessary according as the gilt coating is to be thicker or thinner—were taken out and brushed by machinery, the utmost delicacy of manipulation being necessary in this last stage, or else the coating of metal will be no sooner on than it is again rubbed off.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Faultless Antidotes.—Whatever may be the cause of fever, diarrhoea, dysentery, and similar ailments, it is well ascertained that these diseases are rampant in summer, and it should be as well known that they can be safely and successfully subdued by these purifying preparations. Holloway's Ointment, well-rubbed upon the entire abdomen, his Pills taken internally, and his dietary rules strictly observed, embrace the domestic and medical management of these diseases, which, when neglected, weaken if they fail to prove fatal. These remedies remove the causes of complaint from the system, and no sufferer, whether his disease be chronic or acute, should despair till trial has been given to these medicines.—ADVERT.

OTHER ARTICLES NOT SPECIFIED IN THE ABOVE REMARKS.

These include naval and military accoutrements of every kind such as are in use in the sister services—namely, swords, helms, pouches, cocked hats, forage caps, shakos, busbies, sashes, &c.; implements used in laying the first stones of buildings, and the furniture and implements that are in use in Masons' lodges and those of other societies. As regards the last mentioned, those of our readers who are members of one or other society know well enough already the admirable character of the work which issues from Mr. Kenning's establishment. As to specifying these different articles and implements, that is interesting to Masons, Foresters, Druids, and the like rather than to the general public. Then there is the tinsel used for stage purposes, in which term we include not only the spangles worn by harlequin and sprite, and the coloured stuffs which look so bright and glittering, as well as the simple but showy trimmings of ballet dresses, but also the richer and more effective laces and fringes which, albeit composed of metal that is not precious, are in their way precious costly. Those on whom devolved the expenses of producing Babil and Bijou, with its rich dresses and magnificent spectacles, will bear out this statement. Even the twist used in dressing dolls and for making up cosques and bon-bons, as well as the so-called gold and silver shavings which form part and parcel of the humblest "ornaments for your fire stoves," may be had here, by the ton if necessary.

FISHING GIMP AND LINES, &c.

Mr. Kenning manufactures these in two kinds. One is of wire, in several patterns, spun on silk, and the greater strength required, the greater is the proportion of silk used, the strongest gimp being equal to bearing the strain of the largest fish. The other leading speciality in this branch is a silk and hair tapered line for fly-fishing, which shows the most delicate workmanship, and the merits of which have been already proved in all parts of the United Kingdom. Here also may be seen the gold and silver threads and tinsels which are placed round the bodies of the artificial flies used in salmon and trout fishing, and here, likewise, the llama-fringe, as we believe it is called, which, with gold and silver threads, &c., plays so conspicuous a part in the manufacture of artificial flowers.

CLOCKS AND WATCHES.

The articles we have enumerated above are manufactured at the premises, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, and 175, Aldersgate-street. No. 198, Fleet-street, is in a great measure devoted to the sale of clocks and watches. Several of the specimens of workmanship were shown to us, and our advice to intending purchasers of this class of article is that they should go and judge for themselves.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

We have by no means exhausted the branches of business in which Mr. Kenning is engaged; but, as those which yet remain hardly come within the scope of this article, let it suffice if we mention that he is the publisher and proprietor of several Masonic periodicals, all of which are printed as well as published at the Fleet-street branch, and amongst which the Freemason occupies the foremost place, while he is also a Masonic bookseller and printer and publisher of Masonic works on a very extensive scale. In addition to his two London establishments he can boast of three others, severally situated in as many of our largest provincial towns, viz., one at 9, West Howard-street, Glasgow; a second at 2, Monument-place, Liverpool; and the third at 47, Bridge-street, Manchester. He does also a very large trade with India and the colonies. It will be understood that a position in business such as this can only have been achieved by energy, ability, and enterprise; and we trust there are none so churlish as to grudge success to the man who has shown himself the possessor of these qualities.

SUMMER BANQUET OF THE HENLEY LODGE, No. 1472.

One of those pleasant outings that the brethren of the above excellent lodge annually indulge in, and to which their fair and amiable b-longings are invited, took place on the 30th ult., and being well arranged and carried out was, as the result, most enjoyable. The start took place from Bro. E. West's house, the Three Crowns, at North Woolwich, and the party proceeded by boat to Gravesend, which was reached at about two p.m. The Clarendon Hotel, where the banquet was to be held, was first visited, and there Bro. Neale, the worthy proprietor, received the brethren and ladies, and after partaking of refreshments they embarked in two handsome breaks and went for a drive through the beautiful country around, and returned about five o'clock, when a splendidly appointed and admirably served banquet was partaken of.

Bro. W. T. Turner, the W.M., presided, and Bros. Dr. W. Vance and E. J. Lloyd, Senior and Junior Wardens, filled their respective chairs.

Among the officers and brethren present were Bros. J. Ives, Sec. and P.M.; E. West, P.M.; Jas. Elder, S.D.; V. J. Holloway, D.C.; E. T. Lewis, W.S.; M. Sherwin, Org.; W. Page, P.M. 1076, Tyler; G. Plum, Caley, R. W. Hawkes, C. Jolly (Freemason), and others.

The ladies, among whom were Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Ives, Miss West, Mrs. Caley, Mrs. Frost, and others, were tastefully and elegantly attired, and added a rare charm to the feast, which was highly commended by all.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, but without the fring.

Bro. Past Master Manney, in giving the toast of "The W.M.," spoke of the courtesy and urbanity he had always displayed in his intercourse with the brethren, and of the pleasure they all felt at seeing him presiding over them upon that occasion, when the ladies, whose presence so much enhanced the pleasure of their proceedings, had kindly consented to honour them with their presence. He wished him and his amiable wife many years of happiness. (Cheers.)

Bro. Turner, in his response, trusted to see ere long the Henley Lodge one of the most influential and prosperous in the metropolitan district, and thanked the brethren especially for their good wishes towards him.

Bros. Turner and Lloyd had the honour of responding for "The Ladies," and did it well.

Bros. West and Ives responded for "The Past Masters," and Bro. Vance for "The Officers."

Bro. Jolly responded for "The Visitors," and under the management of Bro. M. Sherwin some pleasing harmony enlivened the proceedings, until an early departure for town broke up a gathering at once Masonic, social, and pleasant.

Bro. Neale presented some handsome bouquets to several of the brethren for the ladies, and was heartily thanked for his excellent catering.

OUR FIRST NOBLE GRAND MASTER.

(Concluded.)

Turn we now to his public career, and a relation of those events in his life which bear evidence to his character. His grace was born in 1688 or 1689, and in March 1708-9 succeeded to the title on the death of his father. In 1715 he married Mary, fourth and youngest daughter and co-heir of the illustrious John, Duke of Marlborough. At the coronation of George I., on the 11th October 1715, he acted as Constable of England. Subsequently he became Colonel of the 1st Regiment of Foot Guards. In 1718 he was made Knight of the Garter, and on the revival of the Order of the Bath, in 1725, the King appointed him Grand Master. He likewise held the office of Master of the Great Wardrobe, an office in the Royal Household which had been styled on his father by patent, with remainder to himself. He was also "Lord Proprietor and Captain General of the Islands of St. Lucia and St. Vincent, in America," probably, says Lodge, by virtue of grants which reverted to the crown at his death. In August, 1733, he was appointed Governor of the Isle of Wight, and in June of the following year Captain of the Band of Gentlemen Pensioners. In 1736 he was sworn in a member of the Privy Council. Though, in his lifetime, he held many military appointments, his grace never saw any active service. He received his commission as Major-General in 1735, and became Lieutenant-General in 1739. In May, 1740, he was appointed Master-General of the Ordnance, and Colonel of the Queen's Regiment of Horse. He was also in this year, and in the years 1745 and 1748 likewise, one of the Lords Justices appointed to administer the Kingdom during his Majesty's absence in Hanover. On the outbreak of the Jacobite Rebellion, in 1745, the duke raised a regiment in the counties of Northampton and Warwick, of both of which he was Lord-Lieutenant, and in acknowledgment of his loyalty he was made General of Horse. That a nobleman, however distinguished, who held such a number of appointments should provoke sallies, good or ill-natured, as the case might be, is not to be wondered at, accordingly, we find Sir Charles Hanbury Williams writing of his grace as follows:—

"Three regiments one duke contents,

With two more places, you know;

Since his Bath Knights

His Grace delights,

'In tria junct' in uno."

The duke died of a fever at his house in Privy-gardens, Whitehall, on the 16th July, 1749, without male issue, but leaving two daughters his co-heirs, of whom one—Isabella—married (1) William Montagu, Earl of Manchester, and (2) Edward Hussey; while the other—Eleanor—married George Brudenell, fourth Earl of Cardigan, who, in 1766, assumed the family name, and in whom the titles of Marquis of Monthermer and Duke of Montagu were revived, only again to become extinct on his death without male issue in 1790.

Lodge speaks of the subject of our sketch as an eccentric humorist, but with a heart overflowing with kindness and generosity, and his irresistible affection for the surprising and the ridiculous seldom failed to insinuate itself even in those noble acts of beneficence which ought to immortalise his name. The neighbourhood of Brighton, his favourite seat at Northamptonshire, still cherishes abundant anecdotes of his disposition; while his tenderness—and this must be regarded as the truest test of its genuineness—extended to every class of animated nature. His tenants and dependents were strictly charged neither to work nor kill their old and disabled cattle, but to bring them to his park, a portion of which, called the "reservoir," was set apart for their reception, and there they remained until, in the order of nature, death put an end to their existence. He also is said to have kept a dog which, owing to its ugliness, he treated most kindly, because, as he said, it was too intensely hideous to have any claim on the kindness of others. We gather further, from the memoirs of the "Kit-Kat Club," that "he was constantly seeking for objects whereon to exercise his benevolent propensities, and was remarkable for performing acts of charity and kindness with a singularity and dexterity of achievement which at once astonished and confounded the persons on whom his favours were lavished, and he used to declare that it was this very surprise on the party which afforded him so much delight and amusement, and that the pleasure with which he bestowed a benefit on a deserving individual was precisely in proportion to the opportunities he had of making the reverse so much the more extraordinary and unlooked for." As to his personal appearance, he is described as having been of middle stature, but inclining to be tall, with a dark complexion and a very expressive eye. We close this notice with the following anecdotes—(1) of his foliosome disposition, (2) of his great generosity; and we are assured our friends will read them with the greatest pleasure. On a certain occasion the duke gave an entertainment at the well-known Devil Tavern, Temple Bar, to several of the most considerable among the nobility and gentry, one John James Heidegger, a sort of reformer in the conduct of operas and masquerades, being also one of the guests. Within a few hours after dinner Heidegger was made so intoxicated that he was carried out of the room insensible and laid upon a bed—at the time we are writing of extreme conviviality was the order of the day. While he was in this state, a mould was taken of his face, from which a mask was made, and a few days before the next masquerade, at which the King and Countess of Yarmouth had arranged to be present, his grace obtained information of the dress Heidegger would wear. An exactly similar dress was made and fitted on a man of the same stature as Heidegger, who could imitate his voice and gestures exactly. The day arrived, and when the King had taken his seat, Heidegger, as usual, ordered the musicians to play "God Save the King." The moment, however, his back was turned, the false Heidegger ordered them to play "Over the Water to Charlie," to the no small consternation of the guests who were not in the secret. The true Heidegger at once flew to the music gallery, where he stamped, swore, and raved like a madman, accusing the musicians of being drunk or engaged in a conspiracy to ruin him. So long as he remained, all went well, but the moment he went to the drawing-room the counterfeit appeared in the gallery and ordered the musicians to play the above-mentioned treasonable tune. At length the uproar became so great, and the cries of "Shame" so loud and continuous, that the officers of the guard were on the point of rushing into the gallery and kicking the musicians out, when the Duke of Montagu gave the real Heidegger to understand that he must immediately make a most abject apology to the King, who was in a most violent passion, and could not be otherwise appeased. Heidegger had no sooner done so than his "double" presented himself, to the intense astonishment of the real Simon Pure, who looked round and at once became speechless. The laughter which followed when the mask was removed from the face of the counterfeit and the plot explained may be more easily imagined than described.

But, however laughable a practical joke of this kind may have been to those who witnessed it, it only illustrates the broad humour instinct in the duke's character. The following shows how generously he could behave to those whom misfortune had overtaken. Soon after the peace in 1748, his grace noticed that a middle-aged man in a kind of military dress, the lace of which was much tarnished, while the cloth itself was worn almost threadbare, was in the habit of making his appearance every day in the Park, and walking about or sitting down in a state of melancholy abstraction. Accordingly he made inquiries, and very soon learned that the man was a gentleman who had invested the whole of his small fortune in the purchase of a commission; that he had fought bravely during the war, and that when peace had been concluded he was one of those unfortunates who had been compelled to retire into private life on half-pay. The duke further ascertained that the gentleman had a wife and numerous family, whom he had sent down to Yorkshire to live as they best could on one moiety of his half-pay, while he eked out his existence on the other half in London on the chance of finding some suitable occupation. Having gathered these particulars, his grace one day sent his valet to the gentleman with an invitation to dine with him on a certain day, he himself standing some distance off and watching the amazement of his future guest. The invitation was accepted, and on the day fixed the gentleman appeared, and was ushered into the presence of the duke, who received him very cordially, and told him he had invited him expressly to meet a lady who was an old friend and deeply interested in his welfare. The gentleman at once replied that his grace must be labouring under a delusion, as he knew no lady who was a mutual friend of theirs. At that moment dinner was announced, and, on entering the room, the officer, who was in a state of no little perplexity, bowed low to the assembled guests, when, on recovering himself, what was his astonishment to find his wife and children present. The lady was equally astonished. She had been induced to come up to town from Yorkshire on some pretence or other, and had no more expected to meet her husband than the latter had expected to meet his wife. The sequel may be told very briefly. A legal gentleman had been specially invited to attend with a deed or instrument all ready prepared, and conveying to the gentleman a handsome competence for life. The astonishment of the fortunate couple may be imagined, as well as the fervour of their thanks and the pleasure of his grace at having performed so generous a deed.

We are indebted to the kindness of Bro. Jacob Norton for having directed our attention to these two out of the many anecdotes which might be related of his Grace of Montagu our first noble Grand Master."

Bro. Major Charles Mercier was on Thursday last presented with a testimonial in recognition of his services as Honorary Secretary in connection with the interchange of visits made by the Garles Civiques of Belgium and the Volunteers of Great Britain. The presentation was made by Alderman Sir James Clarke Lawrence, Bart., M.P.

WORDSWORTH'S "COCA PILLS" the successful remedy for sleeplessness, neuralgia, and Hay fever. 2s. per box. Homoeopathic Chemist, 6, Sloane-street, London.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Monmouthshire held their annual gathering on Thursday at Tredegar, under the banner of the St. George's Lodge, No. 1098. The brethren arrived by special train, and business commenced at high noon, the opening ceremony being performed by the Right Worshipful P.G.M., Bro. Colonel Charles Lyne, in the presence of the Very Worshipful Deputy P.G.M., Bro. Captain S. G. Homfray. At the conclusion the P.G.M. appointed and invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year, viz.:

- Bro. H. J. Gratte Prov. G.S.W.
- " R. Bond Prov. G.J.W.
- " W. Pickford Prov. G. Treas.
- " Rev. E. Jones Prov. G. Chap.
- " C. Rowe... .. Prov. G. Sec.
- " W. Dovey Prov. G. Reg.
- " Joseph Coates Prov. G.S. Deacon.
- " James Horner Prov. G.J. Deacon.
- " L. P. Graveron Prov. G.D. of C
- " G. G. Golding Prov. G. Org.
- " C. H. Olive, jun. Prov. G. Swd. Br.
- " T. Harby Prov. G. Purst.
- " T. Preece... .. Prov. G. Tyler.

The business being completed, the brethren formed a procession, and, to the strains of the famous band of the 11th Monmouth Rifle Volunteers, led by Mr. T. Hardy, marched to St. George's Church, to attend Divine service. The sermon, a most stirring one, was preached by the newly-appointed Prov. G. Chaplain (Rev. E. Jones, vicar). The choir was stronger than usual, and the music was specially selected for the occasion. The Psalms, Magnificat, and Nunc Dimittis were sung to Gregorian tones, the anthem being "Judge me, O God" (Mendelssohn). The vicar arranged the service, and had a few hundred copies printed for the use of the congregation, thus obviating the use of any books. The organist of the church, Mr. Caird, presided at the organ during the singing of the anthem and service, and Bro. Giles Golding, in his capacity as Provincial Grand Organist, also rendered assistance. In the anthem the organ was supplemented by a select party of instrumentalists, conducted by Mr. Hardy, bandmaster, and the effect was most striking. After the singing of the Hundredth Psalm (old version), the procession was again formed, and, led by the band, the brethren marched back to the Masonic Hall, when the lodge was closed in due form.

An adjournment then took place to the Town Hall, which was fitted up in elegant style, for the banquet, which was prepared in such a way as to sustain to the fullest extent the well-earned reputation of Bro. Walter Taylor, of the Castle Hotel. The banquet was to have been held at the hotel, but the death of Bro. Taylor's only child, which took place on Monday, necessitated the change, and the use of the Town Hall was kindly conceded by Mr. Colquhoun, of Bedwellty Park. The tables were laid out most artistically, and, what with pictorial and floral decorations, the old hall was completely metamorphosed, the presence of Captain George Homfray carrying one back to far brighter times than now prevail. After dinner the usual Masonic toast list was gone through.

MASONIC MUSIC.

A very interesting and instructive lecture on this subject was given by Bro. Dr. Spark, of Leeds, P.P.G.O., P.M. 289, to the brethren and visitors of the Lodge of St. Germain, Selby, on Friday evening, the 8th inst., under the auspices of Bro. T. M. Weddall, P.P.G.S.D. The lecture was divided into two parts—the first consisting of music adapted for the various ceremonies of the Craft, and the second of that used at Masonic festive gatherings. The illustrations, which were most efficiently given by Bros. Blagboro and Dodds (of Leeds), and Rawling (of Selby), were taken from the "Masonic Liber Musicus," edited by Dr. Spark, who also took part in the vocal examples, and played the necessary piano accompaniments. Mendelssohn's "Like as a father pitieth his children," Mozart's "Guide us, oh, Thou Great Jehovah," and the lamented Henry Smart's "I will wash my hands in innocency," were much appreciated amongst the adapted music of the first division of the lecture; whilst of the music specially composed for Masonic ceremonies, a quartette, "Now the evening shadows," by Dr. Spark, and a Sanctus with a tenor solo and a soft responsive chorus by the same composer, were greatly admired, the solo in the latter piece being beautifully given by Bro. Blagboro. In the second division of the lecture, "Hail! Masonry divine," an inspiring composition specially written by the lecturer for the ceremony of installation of the Marquis of Ripon as Grand Master, was very effective. A very quaint old English tenor song, "The pretty flowers," composer unknown, was much applauded, and was given with that charming sweetness and purity of tone for which Bro. Blagboro is so justly celebrated. For obvious reasons we cannot enlarge upon the subject of the lecture, applying as it did to ceremonies known only to the initiated. But this we may say without violating any Masonic secret, that the worthy Doctor was, as might be anticipated, a strong advocate for the alliance of good and appropriate music with the beautiful ritual of Freemasonry, as we believe is the case in Germany. The first part of the lecture was of course au sérieux, but in the second part the lecturer found scope for that humour which seems so natural to him. The literary merits of the lecture were considerable, and seemed to be thoroughly appreciated by the brethren present, whose enjoyment was further enhanced by a capital repast, provided by the generous hospitality of the Worshipful Master, at the Londesborough Arms, after which harmony again was in the ascendant. If all lectures had such conclusions, the lecture-going public would, we imagine, be very largely increased.—Selby News, August 9th, 1879.

NEW MASONIC HALL, CLUB, AND LODGE AT PORTSMOUTH.

The shareholders of "The Borough of Portsmouth Freemasons' Hall and Club Company," of which the Mayor (Bro. W. D. King) is Chairman, Bro. Councillor G. T. Cunningham, Vice-Chairman, and Bro. E. S. Main, Secretary, held an extraordinary meeting at the offices of the Portsea Island Gas Company, Commercial-road, Landport, on Saturday morning, the 9th inst., and after the business had been transacted an adjournment was made to the eligible site between the gas offices and the Theatre Royal, on which the Freemasons' Hall and Club is to be erected. The directors and a number of shareholders and other Freemasons, with several ladies, were present, and the Prov. Grand Lodge was represented by the R.W. the Prov. G.M., Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.; the V.W. Deputy Prov. G.M., Bro. W. Hickman; the Prov. G. Sec., Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, and others.

The building will be in the plain Italian style of architecture, and the front, which will have a gable, with terra cotta terminals on either side, is to be constructed of red bricks with Bath and Portland stone dressings, with ornamental tile panels. On the upper floor there will be a bay window projecting on an ornamental corbel, and, in a circular panel immediately over the centre plate, will be engraved a Masonic emblem. The building will have a frontage of 20ft., with a depth of 63ft., and its height to the extreme point of the gable will be 54ft. The ground floor is to be let off as offices, and the room on the first floor, 30ft. 6in. long by 18ft. wide, will be appropriated to the Chamber of Commerce, while the upper storey will have a Masonic club-room of equal dimensions, together with an ante-room 22ft. by 14ft. At the rear of the building are the Roman Catholic Schools, which, having been included in the purchase, will be converted into a banqueting-room and a lodge room, with the requisite ante-rooms.

The foundation stone was of Portland, and bore the following inscription:—"This foundation stone was laid by his Worship the Mayor of Portsmouth (Mr. Alderman W. D. King, J.P.), Chairman of the Company, August 9th, 1879. E. J. Smith, architect. W. D. Lewis, contractor.

The trowel used for the occasion was of silver, elaborately chased, with an ornamental ivory handle, and had inscribed upon it "Borough of Portsmouth Freemasons' Hall and Club Company. Presented to his Worship the Mayor (Mr. Alderman W. D. King, J.P.) on his laying the foundation stone of the Club House, Commercial-road. W. D. Lewis, contractor. Emanuel J. Smith, architect. August 9th, 1879."

The Mayor, in declaring the stone well and truly laid, alluded with satisfaction to the presence of the R.W. Prov. G.M., and described the negotiations which had led to the purchase of the site. A few energetic Masons had recognised the necessity of establishing what had long been wanted in the borough, a central meeting place for the purpose of carrying out the principles of Masonry. They at once set to work, and the brethren generally cordially co-operated with them, with the result that they would shortly have a decent building, in which pleasure and instruction might be advantageously blended. If they were assembled that day merely as speculative Masons, his position could not have been more fully occupied by Bro. Beach; but they were there as operative Masons, and he could not, therefore, refuse to take part in the erection of a building which would be a credit to the borough, and reflect honour upon its designer and the contractor. (Hear, hear.) From his knowledge of the Directors he had very little doubt that a few months hence they would again meet to celebrate the opening of the club, and they would then readily accord to one and all who had been associated with the erection of the building that meed of praise to which they were fairly entitled. (Hear, hear.) It was in contemplation to open another Masonic lodge, and those outside the Craft would be glad to learn that Masonry was fast spreading in the borough, so that its principles were taking a firm hold upon those who came together to help each other not only while they were in health but, what was far more material, when they were in sickness. He was much obliged to the R.W. Prov. G.M. for his presence, and hoped to have the pleasure of again seeing him at no distant day to celebrate the opening of that building and the consecration of an appropriate room.

The constitution of the Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1834, for which a warrant has been granted under the signature of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England, took place in the handsome Assembly Room at Cawte's Hotel, Southsea, on Saturday afternoon, the 9th inst., in the presence of a large number of members of the Craft, including a strong muster of Past and Present Prov. Grand Officers and Worshipful Masters and Past Masters.

The ceremony was impressively performed, and the Prov. G.M. expressed the great pleasure which he experienced in taking part in the constitution of the new lodge, as it showed the extent to which Freemasonry was spreading in the province, and particularly in that locality. It was by no means satisfactory to found a new lodge when there were grave doubts as to its success. In this instance, however, they need not entertain any such apprehension, but they might rest perfectly certain that under the auspices of the present Worshipful Master (Bro. Henry Cawte) who had had so much experience in Freemasonry, and others who would assist him, the lodge would attain a very good position in the Craft. After referring to the impetus which a new lodge often gave to Freemasonry, the P.G.M. said it was very gratifying to him to see, the way in which Freemasonry was thriving. He reminded the W.M. and the brethren of the new lodge that considerable responsibility rested upon them, and it was for them to show that they were worthy of the confidence which was placed in them, and that they were determined to make the lodge worthy of the locality, of the province, and of the Craft. No doubt, actuated by these sentiments, they would achieve success, and that when he had the pleasure of attending the lodge again he should find not only his anticipations realised but exceeded.

The musical portion of the ceremony was ably performed. Bro. F. Wilton presided at the harmonium, and the vocalists consisted of Bros. G. Pearman, 487; G. Grant, S.W. 1705; J. W. Stroud, J.W. 1703; Batchelor, 1708. Prov. G. Org.; and G. F. Lancaster, Prov. G. Deacon and P.M. 903. An appropriate oration was delivered by the Prov. G. Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. S. Scott. The plan used in the consecration of the lodge was lent by Bros. H. M. Emanuel and Sons. The W.M. designate (Bro. H. Cawte) was installed by the P.G.M., who referred to his deep interest which he had for many years taken in Freemasonry. The W.M. appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Thomas Good, S.W.; George Mason, J.W.; S. R. Ellis, Treas.; W. D. Parkhouse, Sec.; G. F. Brown, S.D.; Geo. Banning, J.D.; J. W. Willmott, Dir. of Cer.; T. Larcom, I.G.; Trivess, Steward.

A cold collation was afterwards served in the corridor adjoining the Assembly Room, the Mayor presiding, supported by the P.G.M. and the Present and Past Provincial Officers.

On the conclusion of the repast, the Mayor gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. In proposing "The R.W. the P.G.M. of Hants and the Isle of Wight, Bro. W. W. B. Beach, Constituting and Installing Officer; the V.W. the D.P.G.M., Bro. Hickman; and the Officers of the P.G. Lodge, Present and Past," the Mayor thanked the P.G.M. for his presence at the laying of the foundation stone of the hall and club, thus showing his desire for the success of the undertaking. He spoke in eulogistic terms of the services rendered to Freemasonry by Bros. Hickman and Le Feuvre, and other officers of the Grand Lodge.

The P.G.M., in responding, referred to his devotion to Freemasonry, and to the gratification which he experienced in opening new lodges, and mentioned that in the ensuing week he should be called upon to instal the Prov. G.M. elect of Devonshire. He had been asked to attend the laying the foundation stone of a new hall and club. That was a work in which Freemasons must take a warm interest. They were in the present day speculative Freemasons, but they could not be insensible to the fact that their ancestors who laid the foundations of the Order were operative Freemasons, and as such won fame, and handed down that fame to future ages. He could not, therefore, but take the warmest interest in the work of operative Freemasonry, and he was pleased to stand by and see the Mayor performing the work he was called upon to do. It was not surprising that the directors of the new company, which would conduce to the prosperity of Portsmouth, inasmuch as it would afford accommodation for some of its inhabitants, should ask the chief magistrate to lay the foundation stone, and he had pleasure in being present to afford him the sanction which the head of the Freemasons of this province could afford to the good work. He proposed "The Chairman of the Freemasons' Hall and Club Company, the Worshipful the Mayor of Portsmouth, Bro. W. D. King, J.P., the Directors, and Success to the undertaking."

The toast was received with great enthusiasm, and the Mayor, in reply, referred to the successful manner in which the preliminaries connected with the company had been carried out, and predicted that the undertaking would prove remunerative to the shareholders and give an impetus to Freemasonry in the neighbourhood.

The other toasts were "The W.M., Bro. Henry Cawte, P.P.G.W., and Success to the Duke of Connaught Lodge," "The W.M.'s and Representatives of neighbouring Lodges," "The Visitors," and "The Officers of the Lodge."

ARRIVAL OF DISTINGUISHED CANADIANS.

Among the passengers by the Allan steamship Sarmatian, which arrived in the Mersey at nine o'clock on Monday, the 4th inst., after a very rapid passage from Quebec, were Sir John Macdonald, the Canadian Premier, and Lieut.-Col. Sir A. T. Galt, K.C.M.G., D.C.L. Sir J. A. Macdonald, though not very old, has performed great services for Canada, and won a distinguished place among Dominion celebrities. His father was a Sutherlandshire man, who migrated to Canada, and settled at Kingston, Ontario, where the Sir John was born on the 11th January, 1815. He studied for law, was called to the bar in 1838, and was made a Q.C. ten years later, and is head of the extensive law firm of Macdonald, Macdonald, and Marsh, Toronto. He is the Grand Representative in Canada of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of England, and now is a P.G.S.W. of the Freemasons of Canada. For more than thirty years he has occupied a prominent place among Dominion politicians, and in various ministries filled such posts as Receiver-General, Commissioner of Crown Lands, Attorney-General, Minister of Militia Affairs, Minister of Justice, and Prime Minister. The Premiership was offered to him as far back as 1865, but he then waived his claim. In 1873 he was unanimously appointed leader of the Canadian Liberal-Conservative Opposition, and last year he became Premier and Minister of the Interior. Lieut.-Col. Galt is the youngest son of the late Mr. Galt, a well-known writer of fiction, and for some years a Commissioner of the Canada Land Company. Lieut.-Col. Galt was born at Chelsea, in England, and educated in this country; but has served Canada, in many ways, and at present fulfils duties in connection with several public bodies in the Dominion.

ROYAL ARCH CHAPTERS.

The demands for warrants for Royal Arch chapters are happily progressing and progressive at a marked rate of increase. We are glad to note it. It has long been our opinion that the restriction of chapters was unwise and unsound, and that the time had come when every lodge after twelve months' existence might fairly ask for a charter for a Royal Arch chapter to be attached to it. All lodges, in our opinion, ought to have chapters belonging to them, except in the case where one chapter can be made to do for two lodges, as may well often happen in London. But the present rule works hardly for Royal Arch Masonry and no better for Craft Masonry. A lodge is founded and consecrated in a good provincial town, twelve months elapse, the lodge is numerous and flourishing, and thirty Master Masons wish to obtain the Royal Arch Grade. Where can they get it? Well, they have to go to another town to obtain that which they ought to be enabled to obtain at home. Thus, over and over again, the "status" of the Craft lodge is weakened, because its members going elsewhere for Royal Arch Masonry join the lodge also elsewhere, and equally the Royal Arch Grade suffers, in so far that a large proportion of Master Masons have never taken the Royal Arch Grade. At this moment not one-twentieth of Master Masons are Royal Arch Masons. And there is no reason for this. The ceremonial is most interesting, the tradition of the Grade is striking, and all its accessories are both pleasing and attractive. Indeed, we speak from personal experience, when we say how much pleasure and profit we have found from Royal Arch Masonry, and we can remember a remark of our good old friend and companion, John Boyd, which was marked by all his common sense and knowledge of the subject, "that it was quite unaccountable to him why the Royal Arch Degree was so much neglected, as no more beautiful degree existed." We trust that better days are in store for Royal Arch Masonry, and we hope that ere long we may hail a removal of all restrictions as to granting Royal Arch charters, which militate with the happy progress and expansion of this stately and picturesque Grade. Twelve months are quite sufficient time, as we said before, for a lodge to establish its position and exhibit its working qualities, its cohesion, and its concord; and we are not without hopes that so reasonable a reform will commend itself ere long both to our rulers and the majority of Grand Chapter.

SCENES AT ELECTIONS.

We think it right to express our approval of our distinguished Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton's letter on this subject, as we feel sure that all our readers will share in his surprise and regret at such an expression from our Past G. Chap., Bro. Simpson. Like our esteemed Grand Treasurer, we feel sure that there is some "mistake" in the matter, and that either our excellent brother has been "imposed upon" by some gossiping brother or sister, or "more hibernico" has "imposed upon himself." We do not remember seeing Bro. Simpson at any of our Quarterly Courts, and we do not think that he is a life governor of either the Girls' or the Boys' Schools, but we may be in error on this point. Therefore his remarks must apply to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and we think we see Bro. Terry's face when he realizes that such an imputation rests on the election proceedings of that great Institution he serves so well. We must leave our esteemed Past Grand Chaplain to the tender mercies of Bro. Terry, who is a host in himself, and we, who have often heard his eloquence and admired his energy, know well, that he is able efficiently to defend both the interests and reputation of a most useful and benevolent Masonic Charity. Again we ask, like the Grand Treasurer, what are the "scenes?"

TRUTH—NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.

We are immensely amused with the expansive pertinacity with which the editor of Truth affects to assume the position of the "Great Revealer of Masonic Secrets." It puts one in mind, more than anything else, of the old showman at Greenwich fair, "Walk up, ladies and gentlemen; take care, my little dear, you pays your money, and you takes your choice." There is a flavour of Bohemian audacity about it which is immensely striking. It is quite clear, despite his categorical statements, that the writer knows nothing whatever about Freemasonry, Royal Arch, or any other, himself, and simply goes to a "crib" for information, which he then with "pompous preludes" declares to be his own original and personal information. In the present instance this excellent and admirable representative of Truth—pure and simple; truth "semper eadem," truth one and undefiled, through all changing vicissitudes and startling epochs of the world's history—has had recourse to the so-called "Revelations" of that viler impostor Morgan, which have a lie on their brazen front, and are utterly worthless as an authority, being equally incorrect and contemptible. What a pity it is that when editors will express their opinions on subjects on which they know nothing, they do not get some meritorious but sensible "sub" to post them up in the facts, and to keep them from blunders and follies of various kinds. Freemasons, especially Royal Arch Masons, will laugh heartily at this last professed exposure of Masonry, which, like many another of similar savoury antecedents, will go the way of worldly disbelief and oblivion. For us, we regret to see Truth wasting type and space on such absurd and fictitious statements, which, positively deceptive and unfounded in themselves, are a disgrace to Truth, and a reflection on decent journalism. What can Mr. Labouchere be about to allow some "Anser Maximus" so to impose on his ignorance and credulity and on that of his patient readers?

MANNERS AND MORALS.

We feel bound as honest journalists to call attention to a growing evil amongst us all—this haunting of law courts in which spicy or startling cases are heard, this love of the sensational and the morbid, the questionable and the unwholesome, which affects so many readers of all classes amongst us just now. There seems to be a tendency to read matters and cases which our forefathers and foremothers carefully eschewed, and some papers devote their publication, (to please for instance domestic servants and others), to the record of what is criminal, and appalling, or discreditable and debasing. All such sensational narratives are greedily read, all such doubtful cases are curiously attended, until, in our humble opinion, the public taste is greatly vitiated, and personal morals are gravely relaxed amongst us. In a recent melancholy trial, in a well-known court, Sir Henry James, very properly, called attention to the number of ladies attending this deplorable exhibition, and we quite concur in the gist and tendency of his appropriate remarks. Certainly such scenes and such trials ought to be avoided by ladies, and nothing can more decidedly point to the decadence of moral feeling amongst us than this intense desire to listen to evidence in which the basest and the worst passions of human nature are unfolded, in which, as recently, we hear much which is discreditable to honour and morality, degrading to virtue and truth, and calculated to throw a lasting suspicion on the motives of the professed religious, and to discredit openly the sacred name of religion itself. We cannot commend the publication of such reports and proceedings, because, in our opinion, they tend to deprave public manners, to loosen private morals, and to shake to its very foundation the whole fabric of our social existence. To assume that such a "cancer" exists in the very bosom of society, often hidden, partly unsuspected, which a recent trial exhibits is alike saddening and humiliating to all thoughtful minds, and we cannot too much deplore the fact that such purient statements and such mournful episodos are carefully and eagerly conned over by large numbers of old and young amongst us. Is it not a melancholy picture, is it not an unwholesome fact, which that distinguished judge, Sir James Hannen, shows and states so clearly and effectually, that a large proportion of those who apply for a divorce only want to marry some one else? We think so, and no doubt in so far it is a most melancholy reality in itself, look at it as you will, regard it as you may. We wish we could hope that the leaning we fear of most of us to what is sensational and dubious just now, both in manners and morals, might in any way be checked or diverted, but at this moment we are, as it were, in mid stream, and the current is very strong, and we ourselves are eagerly running along at a good pace. Let us trust that healthier views and a better literature may lead many of us to turn away from reading that which is hurtful, from sensationalism which is morbid, and from a representation of manners and morals which is humiliating to us all, and which seems to portend grave evils alike to the future happiness of all classes, whether in personal, domestic, or national life.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A more disingenuous answer could scarcely have been made to a plain and simple question than that given by Bro. Moutrie in answer to Bro. R. B. Webster at the last General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Bro. Webster asked "whether it was true that the House Committee had refused to accept Sir H. A. Hunt, C.B., as arbitrator in the dispute between them and Bro. S. B. Wilson, and if it was true, what was the reason of such refusal." Bro. Moutrie replied "that it did not appear upon the minutes which had been read that any such proposition as that referred to had been refused." Now, it can hardly be conceived that Bro. Moutrie, being a member of the House Committee, could be ignorant of the fact that my proposition to refer the matter to Sir H. A. Hunt had been declined, as the following letter, sent by Bro. Binckes to my solicitors, clearly shows:—

"Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.
Office: 6, Freemasons' Hall,
Great Queen-street, W.C.,
19th July, 1879.

"Messrs. Baylis and Pearce,

"Dear Sirs,—

"Re Mr. S. B. Wilson.

"Yours of the 26th. June was submitted to and considered by the House Committee at their meeting yesterday.

"The Committee decline to accept Sir H. A. Hunt as referee.

"I am instructed to refer you further in this matter to Mr. J. Stanley, solicitor, 22a, Austin Friars, with whom I hope to communicate personally on Monday.

"I am, dear Sirs, yours faithfully,

"FREDK. BINCKES,
"Secretary."

I am very much mistaken if the great majority of the General Committee will allow the matter to be treated in this hole and corner fashion.

I am at a loss to imagine why the House Committee are acting to me in a spirit of hostility, as I can hardly suppose that my refusal to support the penny wise and pound foolish ideas that some of the members entertain for the sustentation of the buildings and grounds of the Institution can influence them, and it must be apparent to any unprejudiced person who looks over my account against the Institution that the charges I have made are fair and reasonable, in which opinion I am supported by two eminent architects of large practice, who gave me independent valuations of the proper charges for the work that I have done, and who will both give evidence to this effect should the House Committee drive the case to trial.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully,

S. B. WILSON.

TRUTH.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think you have taken the right line, (excuse me for saying it), as regards two most sensational articles in that truth-loving paper Truth, and therefore I do not propose to take up much of the space of your columns, to be filled with much better matter, with any comment on all this "rubbish." But I do wish to point out, that if, as this great authority tells us, Masons "by making either their arms, legs, feet, hands, or fingers assume a position in which a perpendicular line rests as a horizontal line (how very fine), make themselves known to each other," he clearly omits that most important sign of all, vulgarly called "taking a sight," which he ought to know, if he knows anything, is always a Masonic sign, especially to cowans and donkeys.

Yours fraternally and sisterly,

SAPPHIRA JONES.

MASONS' MARKS IN INDIA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Athenæum of the 9th inst. contains the following paragraph, under the head "Fine Art Gossip":—"Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac has sent us a copy of his essay 'On Masons' Marks from Old Buildings in the North-West Provinces of India,' reprinted from the Indian Antiquary. General Cunningham recommended that the stones of these edifices should be examined for such marks, but he did not give any of them in his accounts of the ruins of Sarnath or the Bhilsa Topes. Mr. Carnac has, to a certain extent, supplied these omissions in the plate of fifty-six marks from Sarnath and from Jaunpur, which accompanies this essay, selected from many thousands of similar examples, most of which are hidden, and all of which were originally concealed by the outer facing, now removed from the former structure. This subject is extremely curious and obscure, and hardly yet studied, even with regard to European buildings. No one has done more for it than Mr. Street, who, in his Gothic Architecture in Spain, reproduced a considerable number of Spanish examples."

Can any reader of the Freemason inform me how a copy of Mr. Carnac's essay can be obtained? I am anxious to procure one for the library at the Freemasons' Hall in this town.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM KELLY, F.S.A.,

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY.—THE LONDON COTTAGE MISSION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir,—

Your readers can well imagine the boon a day in the country is to poor children who live in the crowded streets of East London, and, as many of them have assisted the London Cottage Mission in giving for seventeen weeks during the winter Irish stew dinners to poor children, we are hopeful that through your valuable columns they will assist us in providing a trip for our children, who (despite the wet weather) are looking forward with the greatest anxiety for this unspeakable pleasure.

The smallest gift will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Miss F. Napton, 304, Burdett-road, Limehouse, E., or by,

Your obedient Servant,

WALTER AUSTIN.

THE PONTE SISTO FOUNTAIN AT ROME.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—I see with satisfaction that your Correspondent in Rome has expressed something of the bitter regret which all who know and love Rome feel at the destruction of the Ponte Sisto fountain. To destroy this beautiful and most uncommon ornament of the Rome of the Renaissance is but one of the many execrable outrages on art and history which have marked the "Liberal" occupation of the capital of the world. I sketched, painted, and wrote of the fountain, which is, as your Correspondent says, the centre of the whole story of my "Ariadne," until I regarded it, perhaps, with an affection that hardly any one else can share. But in the pain and the disgust with which the wholesale injuries now done and doing on the architecture of this city fills me, I am but one among a multitude of, alas! impotent artists and scholars who, day after day, see monuments effaced that nothing can restore, and landmarks levelled that the archaeologist of the future will mourn for in vain. A writer in Blackwood last month (whose noble love of art makes it easy for all who know him to recognise his pen) speaks of the frightful destruction of the Farnesina gardens in the questionable works now in progress on the Tiber; of the levelling of avenues 300 years old, and the impending ruin of the great Raffaele frescoes, to say nothing of the destruction for ever of that exquisite view from the Ponte Sisto, which was a joy never to be forgotten by those who gazed at it in the golden lustre of the sunset hour. I write these lines now in hope that the utterances of the English Press may excite some shame in the breasts of Italians, who work more havoc on their own country than any horde of Gauls or Goths ever worked in olden days. For the hand of the invader is hot and heavy, but only lies on a land for a season; the ruin wrought by national ignorance and cupidity is a blight that never passes, and, like the worm, revels in corruption and putrefaction. It is this blight which now is destroying Italy. Her people, singularly enough, have lost all sense of the beautiful and all reverence for art. In the main terribly ignorant, they have altogether lost that instinct towards the arts which one would have imagined would have been bred in their bone. Oblivious of all that in the past made them famous, they seem only now ambitious of imitating the follies of greater nations, as boys imitate the vices and vanities of men. As their youths in high life are mere bad, exaggerated copies of the Paris gommeux, so every petty civic council aspires to be a Lilliputian Haussmann. The result is that the country is overrun with jobbers and intriguers of every kind; that contracts are sold and resold until no one save a few unscrupulous speculators benefit; and that the most venerable relics and noblest beauties of art and architecture perish that concessionnaires may pillage and attorneys gorge. Against such a state of things has not Europe the right to protest, since Italy is not merely the slave of any petty municipality of the moment or ephemeral Government of the hour, but is the treasure-house of history, the sanctuary of the Muses, and the heritage of all mankind?

Yours obediently,

OUIDA.

August 2nd.

[We publish gladly this eloquent appeal, which appears in our contemporary, from the gifted pen of "Ouida," as quite homogeneous with Masonic sympathies, and a noble protest against Italic Vandalism.—Ed. F.M.]

Reviews.

THE EARLY HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES OF FREEMASONRY. By Bro. Geo. Fort. G. Kenning, 198, Fleet-street.

We are pleased to see the fourth edition of this very valuable work, for it is a recognition, both by the Craft and public, of its striking merit and its intrinsic value. Just now Masonic toleration is at a discount, and as some ignoramuses and party writers like to say that Freemasonry has "no literature," we are glad to call attention to a work which, at any rate, is a striking rebuff to that ignorance and that malevolence which seem to find in Freemasonry, (though why we know not), an object for meaningless sarcasm or mendacious bathos.

ARTS, INDUSTRIES, AND INVENTIONS, with Illustrations. By Percy Russell. Wyman & Sons, 81, Great Queen-street.

This cheap and useful little "handbook" deserves notice, and merits perusal. It is clear and concise, and gives an effective explanation of matters of which many are ignorant, and of details which are important for those whose business or interests lie in the direction of the technicalities of arts and industry, and scientific inventions and discoveries. It is a most readable little book.

BUDA PESTH.

This is the official organ of Johannite Grand Lodge of Hungary, and though we are not privileged to read, much less understand, Hungarian, we are glad to recognize a contemporary well-printed, and which, no doubt, is of deep interest to all its Masonic compatriots.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

MASONS, COMPANY OF.—Is one of the Livery Companies of London, but not one of the twelve great ones. In the reign of Edward III., however, it was represented in the Council. The Company had a coat of arms granted them by Wm. Hawkeslowe, Clarenceux King of Arms, in the fourth of Edward IV., 1464, confirmed by Thomas Benett, alias Clarenceux Kyng of Armes of the South, in the twelfth year of King Henry VIII., 1521, and entered by Henry St. George Richmond, 1634. See Arms of Freemasonry. It is doubtful, somewhat, when this Company was actually incorporated by Royal Charter. It has been said, not until the reign of Charles II. Ashmole mentions a meeting in the hall in Basinghall-street, in 1684; but the minutes of the Company do not refer to it, and Ashmole was not a member of the Company. It was, in our opinion, entirely distinct from the "Society of Freemasons," though many of the Freemasons mentioned by Ashmole as present at the meeting in Basinghall-street were members of the Masons' Company. Indeed, the fact that they were members of the Masons' Company, and yet admitted into the "Fellowship" in Masons' Hall, Basinghall-street, is a proof to our mind that the two Associations were entirely distinct. No record of such meeting exists in the books of the Company, and the Masons' Company did not dine that day or that year at the "Half-Moon, Cheapside." Indeed, when we come to look into Ashmole's words critically, it is plain, we think, that at that memorable meeting two events took place,—1st, that he himself, as he says, was admitted into the Fellowship of Freemasonry; and 2ndly, that several other persons were admitted into Freemasonry. In what Ashmole's admission consisted, we are not told. He calls himself the "Senior Fellow" among them (his terminology being neither very critical nor correct). He probably means no more than this: that he was the oldest Freemason actually amongst those present. Whether Ashmole was admitted to what we call the Second Degree, or Third Degree, is impossible, we apprehend, to say; though, following the advice of the Scottish Minute Books as far as they are decisive on the subject, as we have so far no available English evidence of that date, we should be inclined to say Fellow of Craft. The "Fellows" seem to have been nine in number. The allusion to William Wise, Master of the Company in 1684, which is historically correct, proves that there was an essential difference between the two associations—the one being the Masons' or Freemasons' Company, the other the "Society of Freemasons," to which "Worshipful Society of the Freemasons of the City of London" Robert Padgett Clerk belonged who transcribed the Antiquity MS. in 1686, and who, we are assured by competent authority, did not belong to, nor is his name to be found in the books of, the Masons' Company. We then come to the conclusion that the Masons' Company was one thing, the Society of Freemasons, like those lodges mentioned by Dr. Plot as existing in Staffordshire in 1786, quite separate and sui generis.

ZERUBBABEL.—Dr. Mackey has devoted considerable space in his Masonic Encycloppedia to a sketch of the "Prince of Judah," and has also embodied in the article

Although not a Roman Catholic priest myself, I was once invited to take my post as such in a confessional, and by the orderly officer of the day, the confessor himself. Like most people, I have felt some prurient curiosity in my time, and one manifestation of it, some twelve years ago, was to embue myself—to saturate my mind—with the details of a work, then popular among a certain class, called "The Confessional Unmasked." From assiduous perusal of this refining work then I learned all the duties of the office of a spiritual director in the Catholic Church. I happened to be residing at the time in that fine old town in Rhenish Prussia, Trier, or Trèves, where the celebrated Empress Helena, the mother of Constantine the Great, is said to have been born and to be buried, and, as I had very little to do, I wiled away my time by masquerading in a Capuchin friar's cowl and gown, and deceiving some of the ignorant inhabitants of the renowned ecclesiastical city. I was fortunate enough to obtain from a poor Luxemburgian fraulein, in a low quarter of the town, some delicate information under the supposed seal of confession, which whetted my appetite for more. She spoke the Lohengrin or Lorraine patois, but inasmuch as I am acquainted with all languages, and every dialect of each, ever spoken on the face of the earth, it was exceedingly easy to understand her. I suppose she was deluded by my flannel and clothes line. I observed she looked somewhat dubiously upwards to my occiput as I stooped to say the Par Fobiscum over her. I began to think that I was an impostor. However, when we parted, I retired to my hotel, the Rotes Haus, and re-attiring myself in the dignified habiliments of the British snob, i.e., a suit of "reach-me-downs," at 42s., I adjourned to the nearest pharmacie, where a silver groschen, invested in white sticking plaster, a pair of compasses, and a pair of scissors enabled me to effect a more than usually good representation of the tonsure. This I clapped on the back of my pate, resumed my "flannels" and "cords," and sallied forth again.

The good old priest who was deputed to perform the "offices" in the Dom Kirche that day hid at the hour of duty an appointment to keep at "Gegenuber dem Ship Markt, No. 92."

I do not know the establishment.

Many priests go there privately to confess the young women, of whom there always appear to be a great number on the premises.

It is probably a regi-try office for domestic servants.

The aged father, however—the news was brought to my knowledge—was confined to his room, too overcome with Schnapps to be able to attend.

I arranged with the venerable Sacristan, who takes snuff and knows, or affects to know, a great deal about the Holy Coat and a very little about St. Helena, or the Emperor Constantine, to go in the confessor's stead.

By the by, the ancient servitor parried one of my questions about the legend of In hoc signo vincit with a conundrum, "Sare, Monsieur, illustrious Herr, sat is ze diff'rence between a dead Englishman and a dead Frenchman?"

For the first and only time in my life I owned that even to me ignorance was possible.

The senile one chuckled and poked me in the ribs.

"Ze von is no more and ze ozzer is à la mort," was his reply to his own idiotic question.

And then he chuckled again and took snuff.

He likewise took a thaler which I disbursed liberally from my pouch—not like you, dear Freddy—didn't you cavil with the box keeper the other night whether it was a threepenny or a fourpenny piece you parted with at the T.R., never mind where? Sweet boy, the eye of yours truly is ever upon you.

For that thaler I had the free run of the property room of the Theatre Royal—I mean access to the vestiariu[m] of the Cathedral of St. Helena, Trèves, on the Moselle.

Be sure I did it—proper—Oh the "larx!" as Joe Gargery spells the word—What secrets were communicated to me in that confessional box—Well, there!

I sometimes amuse myself with retelling what I heard to a select party of contines and lady friends. The "leggiest" actresses of the T.R., Madame Angot, and a few peers, friends of mine, sometimes do me the honour to partake of a strawberry five o'clock tea at my little villa at Twiggintin on Sunday afternoons.

I never bore people with my anecdotes. I narrate a good one and then relegate my guests to their sports. The ladies tuck up their jupons, and then, their superbly laced calecans being well displayed, challenge my aristocratic guests to play leapfrog. The innocent, child-like, joyous chirp of "tuck in your twopenny" resounding over my lawn on a summer Sunday afternoon is a wholesome protest against conventional propriety, a fitting rebuke to straight-laced Pharisism, a deserved lesson to Philistine morality, to stiff-necked society.

I am not in Society, as it is so called, but I have often amused myself by pretending that I am one of its members. If Society disclosed its secrets it would lose little worth keeping and the world would gain little worth acquiring.

I sometimes assume the disguise of a respectable man. One day I penetrated the innermost recesses of Belgravia in the character of "the party who had called from the company to look after the gas meter." In this capacity I obtained a considerable insight into the esoteric secrets of society.

I am under no obligation not to communicate them to the world.

The secrets consist of a sign, token, and word. The sign, or test, is given, when an individual pretends to be one of the initiated, by crooking the index finger of the right hand to represent a note of interrogation (?) as implying doubt. This, on the part of the communicator, is accompanied by a frowning expression of countenance, and the utterance in English of the denunciatory word "Lying!" The token is then communicated, by the assuming member, whose profession is doubted, pointing to his open mouth, and giving the second part of the word in French "La Bouche." The emeritus, convinced, then strikes his breast, and completes the recognition by pronouncing the third part of the mystic abracadabra—this time in English, "Here!" Thus the compound word duly given, received, and reciprocated, combining the two languages most generally spoken over the surface of the globe—for Society is one—cosmopolitan, universal—expresses "Lying! La Bouche! Here!"

It was formerly considered ungentlemanly illegitimately to obtain information and dishonourable to impart the knowledge thus gained.

We are far beyond those antiquarian constructions of the definition of the "grand old name of gentleman," derived from obsolete feudal traditions.

Likewise reverence for one day in seven, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," is an exploded superstition.

Besides, we have no Sabbaths now. We keep—some of us affect to keep—the "first day," as the Quakers say. Only the Jews assume to preserve the traditions of the seventh—the day of rest. And I know the Jews—Oh, don't I?

Again, how absurd the surviving old prejudices about the honour and dignity of the corporal person.

Do those prejudices linger? I have been, as I have said, occasionally mistaken for a gentleman, and I have in that assumed character been kicked in Hombourg and caned in London, and have practically ridiculed the effete notion of the character by meekly turning my other cheek to the smiter, and have superbly submitted and sticken not again.

Mawworm liked to be despised. I think to be personally chastised in addition is condiment adding zest to the enjoyment.

If any of my readers will thus contribute to my relish for life I pledge my honour—but that is an obsolete term, and with me savours of a past period, into the feeling of which I have never been able to enter—well, I pledge my circulation that they shall learn no more of the little agreeable variation of the monotony of their and my existence than can be acquired from attendance on a summons at a Police Court or appearance before one of Her Majesty's judges in an action (for damages) for assault and battery.

I cannot make out what these initials mean. The second—the surname—abbreviation is apparent enough, but the first L., is it Lawrence or Lying?—Pr. Dev.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Earl of Carnarvon, in reply to a petition from the members of the Era Lodge, 1423, has given his consent for the removal of the lodge from the Island Hotel, Hampton Court, to the Albany, Twickenham, and the lodge met there on Saturday last for the first time.

SOUTHDOWN LODGE OF MARK MASTERS, No. 164.—The annual garden party of this lodge will be held at the Station Hotel, Hayward's Heath, on Friday, August 29th.

The portrait of Bro. Sheriff Burt, which has been exhibited in the Royal Academy, has now been removed for inspection by the large body of subscribers who have joined in the presentation. It is arranged that a deputation from the subscribers shall proceed to Swanage, where the presentation will be publicly made—it is hoped—by the Lord Mayor, who with the Lady Mayores will shortly be the guests of Bro. Sheriff Burt and Mrs. Burt. The portrait of Mrs. Burt, which is intended for presentation by the members of that lady's family, will be presented at the same time. Both portraits have been painted by Mr. J. Edgar Williams.

Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac has sent us a copy of his essay "On Masons' Marks from Old Buildings in the North-West Provinces of India," reprinted from the Indian Antiquary. General Cunningham recommended that the stones of these edifices should be examined for such marks, but he did not give any of them in his accounts of his ruins of Sarnath or of the Bhilsa Topes. Mr. Carnac has, to a certain extent, supplied these omissions in the plate of fifty-six marks from Sarnath and from Jaunpur which accompanies this essay, selected from many thousands of similar examples, most of which are hidden, and all of which were originally concealed by the outer facing, removed now from the former structure. This subject is extremely curious and obscure, and hardly yet studied even with regard to European buildings. No one has done more for it than Mr. Street, who, in his "Gothic Architecture in Spain," reproduced a considerable number of Spanish examples.—Athenæum.

THE TURNERS' COMPANY.—The Rev. Bro. Dr. Cox, P.G.C., was presented with the honorary freedom and livery of the Turners' Company on the 7th inst., pursuant to a resolution passed at a court of the company held at Guildhall on July 3rd. The following is a copy of the resolution: "That the honorary freedom and livery of the company be presented to the Rev. John Edmund Cox, Doctor of Divinity, vicar of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, with St. Martin Outwich, in recognition of his high attainments in literature, music, and archaeology, of unwearied efforts in the cause of charity, and of his long services as a clergyman in the City of London." The proposer (Mr. Past Master Smithers) and seconder (Mr. Past Master Charles Hutton Gregory, C.M.G.) both highly eulogised Dr. Cox, the proposer confining himself to his public career, and the seconder to his personal worth and private character.

BRITISH ARCHEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—The members of this society started from the Star Hotel, Great Yarmouth, at nine o'clock Wednesday, the 14th inst., for an excursion to Burgh Castle, the property of Sir Francis G. M. Boileau, and went thence to St. Olave's Priory, Suffolk, under the guidance of the owner. The former building was thoroughly examined, and its history and principal features were described. Mr. E. P. Loftus Brock, F.S.A., gave an account of St. Olave's Priory. Mr. H. E. Buxton, of Ritton, entertained the party at his residence, and a short drive soon brought them to Herringfleet, where Colonel Leathe joined them and assisted in an explanation of the points of antiquarian interest contained in the parish church. Proceeding towards Lowestoft a halt was made at St. Margaret's Church, on the history and architectural features of which Mr. J. L. Clemence gave a few notes, but no other buildings were visited in the town. The archaeologists next accepted the invitation of M. J. J. Colman, M.P., to visit Corton, where they were entertained; and, after a cursory inspection of the beautiful grounds, a return was made to Yarmouth. A meeting was held the same evening in the Town-hall, when Mr. Charles H. Compton and Mr. Henry Prigg read papers.

The town of Barnstaple was on Tuesday en fête in recognition of the presentation to the public by Mr. W. F. Rock, a native of the town, of a beautiful park between seven and eight acres in extent. The park is pleasantly situated beside the River Taw, and is a continuation of the plot of ground known as Chaner's Green, which was dedicated to the public in 1863.

The liquidators of the West of England Bank have succeeded in selling the premises occupied by the bank in the centre of Bristol. The price first asked was £50,000, but they have been sold for £30,000 to the new Bristol and West of England Bank, which has transacted business there since its establishment in February.

THE FIRTH OF FORTH RAILWAY BRIDGE.—The Board of Trade has given its formal sanction to the plans submitted to it for the erection of the great railway bridge across the Firth of Forth. The Company is bound by the Board to keep open during the progress of the work one, at least, of the two navigable channels, to exhibit such lights and signals as the Board shall require, and to undertake no temporary works without having obtained special sanction. The central spans of this great structure will be 150 feet above high water mark.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE CONGRESS.—The following have consented to accept the presidential offices in connection with the Congress to be held at Manchester from the 1st to the 8th October:—The President, the Bishop of Manchester. Presidents of Departments: Jurisprudence, Sir Travis Twiss, D.C.L., Q.C., F.R.S.; Education, the Hon. Lyulph Stanley; Health, F. S. Powell, Esq.; Economy, the Right Hon. Lord Reay; and Art, Sir Coutts Lindsay, Bart.

The Empress Eugenie has expressed to Col. Pemberton, 60th Rifles, her gratitude for the services performed by him during his recent voyage home from Natal, when he had charge of the remains of the late Prince Louis Napoleon. Her Majesty has also sent letters to the Cape thanking the officers and men of the Zulu expedition for the respect shown by all ranks to the memory of their deceased comrade in arms.

The annals of the Grand Lodge of Iowa, for 1879 (36th annual Communication), prepared under the skillful eye and by the ready hand of Bro. Theodore S. Parvin, the veteran Grand Secretary, are full of interest, and very handsomely issued. There are steel engraved portraits of Bros. A. C. Abbott, G.M., and the late Thos. H. Benton, Jr., Past Grand Master, and nephew and namesake of the great Missouri Senator and Statesman.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—[ADVT.]

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

SUNDERLAND.—St. John's Lodge (No. 80).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Towara-road, on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst., at 7.30. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Newton. The minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken for Mr. James Summers, a candidate for Masonry, who was duly elected, and he was then admitted and made an E.A. Mason. Bro. Craven proposed that each candidate be presented with the Book of Constitutions, which was seconded by Bro. Huntly, P.M., and carried unanimously. Bro. Lowes, P.M., was re-elected to represent the lodge on the Charity Committee for the ensuing year. Carried unanimously. All business done, the lodge was closed, according to ancient custom, in due form. The brethren then retired to refreshment, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

SUNDERLAND.—Phoenix Lodge (No. 94).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Freemason-street, on Wednesday evening, the 6th inst., at 7.30. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened by the W.M. The ballot was taken for Mr. Jonathan Hollins, a candidate for Masonry, who was declared duly elected. Mr. Joseph Cowan, a candidate previously elected, was then admitted and made an E.A. Freemason by the W.M., who gave the charge in this Degree in a most impressive manner. The lodge was then raised to the Second Degree. Bros. Burns and Cawthorn were then examined and gave satisfaction; they then retired for preparation, when the lodge was raised to the Third Degree, when Bros. Cawthorn and Burns were admitted separately, and raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. by the W.M., assisted by Bro. P.M. Pearson. The lodge was then closed to the Second, then to the First Degree. All business being done, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom in due form, when the brethren retired to refreshment, and a pleasant evening was spent.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners' Lodge (No. 249).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 7th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. There was a large attendance of members and visiting brethren, and the whole of the proceedings were marked by the truest spirit of brotherhood and cordiality. Bro. W. Corbett, W.M., was in his place at the appointed time, and the attendance also included Bros. Fredk. Barnett, P.M.; John C. Jobinson, P.M.; J. Hayes, P.M.; John Whalley, S.W.; H. Wynne Parry, J.W.; J. Kellett Smith, Treas.; Robert Collings, Sec.; W. H. Vernon, S.D.; J. Jenaway, J.D.; Morris Davies, I.G.; Alfred D. Ewart, Org.; David Cangle, S.; Thos. Joseph, S.; and Wm. H. Ball, Tyler. The members present were Bros. B. J. Parry, J. Morrin, T. Grindell, J. P. Jones, M. W. Thornton, M. Goldstone, Thos. Poyser, S. Johnson, John N. Pendleton, Frederick Cooper, James Whitney, J. Nicholas, Wm. Pyc, John Baines, John Harries, W. Loxian, R. G. Bradley, J. Sykes, John Pyc, Henry J. Pyc, Peter Ball, William Hazell, Alfred Samuel, J. Williams, J. Leather, Robert Thomas, Richd. Fitzgerald, William Gamble, James Messenger, John Cribbin, James White, John Harvey, J. H. Walter, Fredk. J. Porter, A. Draper, and H. Hyman. The list of visitors included the names of Bros. Robert Jones, 1182; J. Jacobs, 724 and 1576; Edwin Hartnell, 1264; Robert Bethell, 1094; C. Goble, 594; H. M. Davies, 667; John Corlett, 1325; T. Gray, 1325; Wm. Flintoff, 64, Scotch Constitution; R. Scott, 241; Thos. Johnson, 823; Thos. Brown, 477; Wm. Leatham, 594; Wm. Arthur, 438, Scotch Constitution; R. Maddox, 594; and John Crompton, 823. The lodge having been opened according to ancient form, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for two candidates, Messrs. H. Waggett and R. Roberts; for an honorary member, Bro. Hugh Edwards, P.M.; and for Bro. Alfred E. Ewart, Org., as a joining member, and all were declared duly elected. Mr. Griffiths, who had been duly balloted for and elected at a previous meeting, and Messrs. Waggett and Roberts being in attendance, were admitted and initiated according to ancient custom. Two candidates for the Second Degree, Bros. Leather and Grindall, were examined, and proving themselves proficient, were entrusted with the test and retired. The lodge was during their absence opened in the Second Degree, when the above-named brethren were re-admitted and passed. Bros. Hazel and Pyc having proved their proficiency, were entrusted and retired. During their absence the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when they were re-admitted and the Third Degree was given them. The Three Degrees were worked in a manner which was highly creditable to all concerned, from the W.M. downwards. According to the circular two degrees, the First and Third, were only to be given, but as Bro. Leather, who was initiated in October last, had just returned from sea, and had not had an opportunity of taking his Second, Bro. Corbett, W.M., considered it his duty to stretch a point in his favour; hence the Three Degrees were given in one evening. The lodge was duly closed down to the Second and First Degrees. "Hearty good wishes" having been given by the visiting brethren, and a gentleman proposed for initiation, the lodge was duly closed. The brethren then sat down to refreshment, provided by Bro. Chaplin, House Steward. After the cloth was removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Owing to the amount of business gone through it was late before the brethren separated in peace and harmony.

CHINGFORD.—Chigwell Lodge (No. 453).—This old established lodge met on Saturday, the 16th inst., at the New Forest Hotel, to inaugurate that building, (prior to the public opening), which is one of the handsomest structures in the county of Essex. It stands in the most romantic and picturesque part of what now remains of the grand old forest, that less than a hundred years ago covered 60,000 acres, and is in close proximity to the ancient Hunting Box of Queen Elizabeth. This stately edifice, built in that fine style which matches so well with woodland scenery, the Elizabethan, commands extensive views over Epping and Hainault Forests, so rich in events and incidents connected with the history of England. It has been erected by Bro. John Egan, under the superintendence of Bro. Saunders, whose architectural designs deserve the highest encomiums. Striking as the hotel is in outward appearance, it is no less effective in its internal arrangements. Built expressly for an hotel, it is replete with everything that can add to the comfort and convenience of visitors, and we learn that the tariff will be framed to meet the requirements of all classes. The lodge was opened in due form by Bro. W. Glass, W.M., assisted by Bros. Egan, I.P.M.; Corble, P.M.; Martin, S.W.; Holloway, J.W.; Wren, S.D.; Beck, J.D. Bros. Corble, Sibley, Pearson, and Glass, were passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, the ceremony being ably performed by the W.M. Prior to the closing of the lodge, Bro. R. Martin, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Corble, P.M., Treasurer. All Masonic business being ended, the brethren adjourned to the banquetting hall of the old lodge, formerly occupied by Good Queen Bess, where a most sumptuous banquet was provided by Bro. F. Gordon, of the Holborn Restaurant (assisted by a very efficient staff), which gave great satisfaction to all the brethren present. The usual toasts having been disposed of, Bro. Frank Toole and others amused the brethren until nearly nine o'clock, when the company separated. Twenty-three sat down to banquet.

LIVERPOOL.—Dukes of Edinburgh Lodge (No. 1183).—The annual installation meeting of this numerous and admirably conducted lodge was held on Thursday afternoon, the 14th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, when Bro. George Musker, W.M. elect, was duly placed in the chair of K.S. in the presence of a gathering which numbered about 100, "all told." The lodge was originally consecrated at Wavertree, and met there for several years, but for "sundry divers and important reasons" it was thought wise to remove its meetings to the Liverpool Masonic Hall, where it has greatly prospered in all its chief concerns, increased largely in numbers, and adding to its influence amongst the eighty lodges of the Province of West Lancashire. There were no fewer than thirty-one W.M.'s and P.M.'s present on this festival occasion, and the gathering was, therefore, one of no common interest. The retiring W.M., Bro. Thomas Davis, took the chair, supported by Bros. John Williams, I.P.M.; Capt. W. Williams, P.M.; T. B. Myers, P.M.; J. A. Edginton, P.M.; George Musker, S.W.; G. D. Hesketh, J.W.; William Brown, Treas.; H. Barclay, Sec.; Thomas O. Dutton, S.D.; John O. Rea, J.D.; H. Haynes, I.G.; R. Martin, jun., P.M., D.C.; T. Wareing, S.; T. C. Holden, J.S.; and P. Ball, P.G.T., Tyler. The members present included Bros. T. Wright, J. H. Tyson, S. Wilkinson, A. Barnes, T. Davis, R. Jones, J. Potter, H. Finger, T. Ward, J. Roberts, T. H. Pierce, H. Sawyer, J. F. Jarvis, J. Holder, W. W. Chapman, J. Rushton, J. J. Ratchford, J. MacIntyre, J. Newport, J. Wilson, E. Paull, J. Coates, R. Hargreaves, J. P. Harvey, J. Waddell, T. J. Thursby, J. Jones, T. Banks, and others. The visitors present were Bros. John Jones, 1035; J. R. Bottomley, W.M. 1675; J. Johnson, J.W. 1675; J. H. Hunter, 1356; T. Whitefield, 203; G. W. Saul, W.M. 1201; W. Barley, W.M. 786; W. Williams, 1609; D. Jackson, P.M. 673; B. Russell, 1393; J. Keet, J.W. 1356; J. L. Houghton, P.M. 594; F. P. Hugo, 1035; A. Morrison, P.M. 1570; H. Firth, W.M. 677; J. W. Williams, P.M. 1356; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; J. Devaynes, P.M. 667; T. Saiter, W.M. 241; W. C. Erwin, S.W. 1393; W. T. May, P.M. 673; J. T. Callow, P.G. Treas.; L. Herman, S.W. 673; P. M. Larsen, P.M. 594; H. Barrows, P.M. 673; A. Child, 1505; R. E. Mitton, 1356; I. E. Jackson, P.G.S. of W.; A. Woolrich, W.M. 1356, Treas. 1609; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; T. Roberts, P.M. 673; J. Seddon, J.W. 673; H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; J. Hayes, P.M. 249; W.

Brackenbury, W.M. 673; T. Boswell, W.M. 594; R. Brown, P.M. 241; J. Jacobs, 724; W. Forrester, 1035; J. Bryan, 203; C. Waterson, 1035; H. Dunlavy, 594 and others. The W.M. elect, Bro. G. Musker, was presented by Bro. Captain Williams, P.M., and Bro. T. B. Myers, P.M., and effectively installed. The first part of the ceremony was performed by Bro. T. Davis, and the second by Bro. T. B. Myers, both doing their onerous duties in an admirable manner. The following officers were then invested for the ensuing year:—Bros. T. Davis, I.P.M.; A. D. Hesketh, S.W.; A. Barclay, J.W.; W. Brown, Treasurer (re-elected for the thirteenth year); T. O. Dutton, Sec.; W. Davies, Organist; J. O. Rea, S.D.; H. C. Haynes, J.D.; R. Martin, jun., P.M., D.C.; T. Wareing, I.G.; T. Holden, J. H. Tyson, F. Wright, and R. Baines, Stewards. Bro. P. Ball was re-elected Tyler. At the conclusion of the ceremony the brethren sat down to dinner, provided by Bro. Chaplin. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. "The Provincial Grand Master and Officers" was responded to by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary, who congratulated the brethren on the progress made by their lodge since its formation, and its position in regard to the Masonic Charities. Their P.G.M. and D.P.G.M. would be set free from their Parliamentary duties on the coming day, and he was sure the brethren would give them a hearty welcome back to Lancashire at the approaching P.G. Lodge meeting, which would this year be held at Morecambe Bay, on Wednesday, the 1st of October. He expected that Lord Skelmersdale would be present on that occasion, and that all the arrangements would meet with the approbation and conduce to the comfort of the brethren. It had given him (Bro. Alpass) great pleasure to be present that evening at the installation of a lodge, at the consecration of which at Wavertree he took an active part. It was started under very good auspices, and although there had been many changes he was glad to find the lodge had weathered the storm, and that it was still well worked and well officered. He was likewise pleased to find that the members had not neglected the duty of contributing something towards the Charities, as shown by the balance-sheet for the year, which would compare very favourably with others. As Freemasons it was their duty to be always giving, to meet the circumstances which might arise, and he was glad to find that the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge did its duty in this respect. He concluded by appealing for their liberal support of the decoration scheme in connection with the Masonic Hall, and by wishing the W.M. a happy and prosperous year. The "W.M." was enthusiastically honoured, and "The Installing Masters" was proposed by Bro. W. Williams, P.M., and cordially received, the Installing Masters responding. "The Past Masters" followed, and the W.M., in a few hearty words, presented Bro. T. Davis, the I.P.M., with a handsome Past Master's jewel on behalf of the lodge, a gift which was suitably acknowledged by that brother. "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution and other Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. R. Martin, jun., P.M., was acknowledged by Bro. R. Brown, joint Hon. Secretary of "The West Lancashire," P.M. 241, who said that at the next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge a scheme for clothing as well as educating the children would be proposed. Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., also responded on behalf of the Hamer Benevolent Fund and the Masonic Charities in London, appealing most impressively to the brethren to give these Institutions their cordial and continued support. "The Visitors," given from the chair by the W.M., was acknowledged by Bros. W. T. May, P.M. 673; J. E. Jackson, P.G.S. of W.; J. B. Mackenzie, S.W. 1609; A. Woolrich, W.M. 1356, Treasurer 1609; J. Skeaf, P.G. Org.; and Dunlavy. The toast of "The Officers," proposed by Bro. E. Paull, Treasurer 1356, in eloquent terms, was acknowledged by Bro. A. D. Hesketh, S.W. Other toasts followed, and the harmony of the evening was greatly promoted by Bros. A. Child, 1505; C. Waterson, 1035; T. Foulkes, W.M. 1325; Webster Williams, 1609; John Hill, 1609; and W. Forrester, 1035; the accompaniments being furnished by Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., and Bro. J. P. Bryan, 1035. The annual picnic in connection with the lodge took place at Lymm, near Warrington, last Thursday, the 21st inst. A special train left Lime-street Station, Liverpool, at 10.30 a.m., and arrived at Lymm at 11.15 a.m. Dinner was provided at the Plough Hotel, near the station, at 1 o'clock, and tea was served at the same place at 6 o'clock. A military band was in attendance. The return train left Lymm at 8.50 p.m., arriving in Lime-street Station about 10.15 p.m.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—The last regular meeting of this lodge for the present year was held at the Lion Hotel, on Saturday, the 16th inst., Bro. John B. Shakelton, P.G.P. Middx., P.M. 1524, W.M.; Bro. E. Sacop, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. John Hammond, officiating as S.W., and the remaining offices were filled by the brethren appointed at the previous meeting, viz: J. W. Baldwin, Prov. G. Std. Br. J.W.; Fred. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., Secretary; H. Gloster, P.M., S.D.; Thos. Stone, J.D.; Steinbauer, I.G.; F. Knight, D.C.; and John Gilbert, Tyler. Amongst those present during the evening were Bros. James Stevens, P.M., P.Z., hon. mem.; T. W. Adams, John Thompson, C. W. Baker, J. E. Smith, F. Dye, J. Mc Naughten, W. J. Smith, A. J. Rogers, J. Lawrence, and others. Visitors: Bros. W. A. Barrett, P.M. 76; T. Butt, J.W. 957; J. Hancock, 1657; and T. M. Butt, 1623. The minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed, and election made of Bro. C. Paulson, 1309, as joining member. Bros. W. J. Smith and F. Dye were raised to the Degree of M.M. Four propositions for initiation at next meeting were submitted, and it was intimated that probably a lodge of emergency would be called for an early date. Three brethren were recommended to Prov. Grand Lodge for honours, and there being no further business before the lodge, it was closed with solemn prayer. After a ramble by the river side for about half-an-hour, the brethren again assembled for refreshment. A very excellent and substantial "high tea" had been provided, to which all present did justice, and which appeared to afford more satisfaction than an elaborate and expensive banquet could have done. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured to the accompaniment of a "grog and a cigar," and a very pleasant and harmonious hour or two were passed before the 8.30 train whisked off the metropolitan brethren to their respective homes. Bros. Barrett, Butt, Marsh, and Stevens effectively aided the genial intercourse of the evening, the former producing a fine old song not often heard now-a-days, and the latter reciting, in his most able manner, his increasingly popular "Mason's Vows." Order, peace, and harmony ruled throughout the entire proceedings, and this meeting of the Lebanon Lodge will long be remembered with satisfaction by all those who had the privilege of being present.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Abercorn Hotel, on the 6th inst., and, although not so largely attended as usual on such an occasion, passed off with great satisfaction to the brethren present. The retiring W.M., Bro. G. Tidcombe, who had held office for thirteen months through the untimely death of Bro. Ebbs, W.M. elect, opened his lodge at 2.50, ably supported by Bros. Helsdon, P.M., acting S.W.; W. Shury Marshall (W.M. elect), as J.W.; Rogers, Treasurer; C. Veal, Secretary; Roy, S.D.; Long, J.D.; Hall, I.G.; Vincent, I.P.M.; Middleton, Tyler; and F. T. Honeywell, Prov. G.O. for Middlesex, Organist; Paten, Darby, Buck, Biggs, Rickett, and Felton. Visitors; Bros. H. C. Levanter, 1415, P.G. Sec. Middx.; Pimiger and Taffs, 186; and Porter, 1719. After the minutes of the previous lodge meeting had been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree to admit of the examination of Bros. Biggs and Puckett, prior to being raised to the Third Degree, which proving satisfactory, the lodge was opened to that Degree, and those brethren further advanced by the W.M., and duly enlightened as M.M.'s. The W.M. then resumed his lodge to the First Degree, and initiated Mr. W. Marshall, who was accepted on the ballot at last meeting, in his usual instructive manner; he then vacated the chair in favour of his I.P.M., Bro. Osman Vincent, who was privileged to proceed with the ceremony of installation, himself presenting Bro. W. S. Marshall, the respected J.W., to receive such benefit at his hands, and which, after the worthy brother had assented in due form to the ancient charges, was most ably and impressively performed, he placing the candidate in the chair of K.S., amidst the hearty congratulations of the several P.M.'s present. On the re-admittance of the brethren, who had necessarily retired for a short time, the new W.M. received the customary salutes in each Degree, and on resuming to First Degree, Bro. P.M. Helsdon with his wonted excellence delivered the usual interesting addresses from the pedestals; the W.M. then selecting and investing his officers for the coming year as follows: Bros. Roy, S.W.; Long, J.W.; Rogers, Treas.; Veal, Sec.; Hall, S.D.; Darby, J.D.; Helsdon, I.G., pro. tem., and D.C.; and Vincent, W.S. He then, having previously invested the retiring W.M. as I.P.M., in the name of the lodge very appropriately presented a handsome Past Master's jewel on his leaving the chair, which was very suitably acknowledged. A few minor matters having been disposed of, and "Hearty good wishes" received from the visiting brethren, the lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 6.15. All then adjourned to the customary banquet, served à la Russe, amidst perfume and flowers, which passed off admirably, the new W.M. displaying equal knowledge of the banquet-table as in the lodge-room. He gave the usual Masonic toasts with great effect, and all were heartily responded to, that of "The Prov. G.M. and his Officers" receiving hearty response from the Prov. G. Sec., who also, with the visitors, thanked the W.M., for their hospitable reception. The brother initiate made a brief but creditable reply, and received the E.A. song from the Secretary, with the usual successful chorus. Bro. Honeywell, the Prov. G.O. for Middlesex, discoursed sweet music in his superior manner to the enjoyment of all, and in which many of the brethren ably assisted. Last, but not least, the W.M. made a truly eloquent appeal to the brethren on behalf of the Boys' School, and successfully completed a plan, originating last year with the previous W.M., of collecting subscriptions in small sums at the banquet-table, thus reaching the amount of ten guineas, and securing a vote in perpetuity for the lodge to bestow on the acting W.M. at each election, the result receiving hearty applause. This, with the Tyler's toast, completed an enjoyable meeting, and the brethren dispersed at 10 p.m.

Black Masonry.

COCKERMOUTH.—Faithful Lodge (No. 229).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 19th inst., in the Masonic Hall, Station-street. After the permanent committee had made their arrangements for the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. R. Robinson, S.W., which takes place on Wednesday evening, the 27th inst., the lodge was opened, there being present Bros. W. F. Lamouby, W.M. (Freemason); R. Robinson, S.W.; W. H. Lewthwaite, J.W.; Capt. Sewell, M.O.; R. W. Robinson, S.O.; T. C. Robinson, J.O.; J. Black, Treas., Sec., and Reg. M.; H. Peacock, S.D.; W. Shilton, I.G.; W. Paisley, T. Mason, and Jos. Hewson, Tyler. Bro. T. Weatherston, Lodge 151, was also present as a visitor. The business before the lodge was the advancement of Bro. L. F. B. Dykes, J.P., of Dovenby Hall, Skiddaw, Craft Lodge No. 1002, son of the late Bro. Dykes, who was successively D.P.G.M. of Cumberland to the late Right Hon. Sir James Graham, M.P., and G.M. of the United Province of Cumberland and Westmorland, being the predecessor of the Earl of Bective, M.P., the present P.G.M. Bro. Dykes being in attendance, was admitted, and regularly advanced to the honourable degree of M.M.M. After "Hearty good wishes" had been tendered by the visiting brethren named, the lodge was closed with the usual address from the chair.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DEVONSHIRE.

The annual Provincial Grand Lodge of the Province of Devon was held at the Victoria Hall, Exeter, on Thursday, the 14th inst., when Bro. Hugh Fortescue, Viscount Ebrington, was installed Provincial Grand Master, and one of the largest gatherings of Freemasons ever held in the county took place.

The first Grand Master for Devonshire, under the sanction of the Grand Lodge of England, was Sir Chas. Warwick Bampfylde, Bart., who was elected on the 27th December, 1774, after initiatory steps had been taken by the Union Lodge, which became extinct in 1789. This lodge numbered amongst its members such names as Ellicombe, Carew, Drake, Rous, Foulkes, Pine, including two clergymen afterwards raised to the Episcopal Bench, Dr. Henry Bathurst, Bishop of Norwich, and Dr. Herbert Marsh, Bishop of Peterborough.

This lodge met at the Globe Tavern, and in conjunction with the lodges held at the Old Valiant Soldier and the Bear Inns, now Nos. 39 and 112, elected Sir C. W. Bampfylde on the above date, and he was duly installed on 10th December, 1775, by Bro. John Codrington, W.M. of the Union Lodge. Sir C. Bampfylde held the office for 44 years, and was succeeded by the late Earl Fortescue, in 1819, who held it for 42 years until his decease in 1862. The province was ruled by the Rev. John Huyshe as Deputy until 1866, when he was appointed P.G. Master, and was installed on the 24th May in that year by V.W. Bro. E. McIntyre, Grand Registrar of England. The brethren took the opportunity to present him with a Provincial Grand Master's superb gold chain of office, of the value of 100 guineas, in testimony of their esteem, and to mark their appreciation of his long and valuable services to Masonry, especially as D.P.G.M. of this province. He resigned a few months since on account of the infirmity of age—the venerated and beloved brother having been born with this century.

The present P.G.M.'s grandfather was installed by Col. Tynte, M.P., P.G.M. of Somerset. Dr. Carwithen was appointed Deputy P.G.M. Old Masons will remember the Masonic work carried out under the noble earl's rule. We find that under his auspices sermons were preached and collections made in aid of the North Devon Infirmary, the funds of the Southmolton Bell Schools, the Chudleigh Bell Schools, the South Devon Hospital, and the Royal Female Orphan Asylum. On September, 23rd, 1841, a handsome set of four silver dishes and covers, weighing 218 ounces, were presented by the province to the Rev. W. Carwithen, D.D., D.P.G.M.; and the brethren presented a very handsome Masonic silver candelabrum, weighing over 228 ounces, to Earl Fortescue, P.G.M., on May 19th, 1847. Lord Fortescue, as P.G.M., also laid the foundation stone of the Exminster Asylum and the Royal British Female Orphan Asylum at Devonport. At the decease of Earl Fortescue, on Sept. 14th, 1861, the brethren established the Fortescue Annuity Fund—an institution intended as a permanent and characteristic memorial of the Masonic virtues of the then late revered Grand Master of Devon after having fulfilled this distinguished office for forty-two years—for the purpose of providing annuities for life for aged and infirm Masons of the province.

The present P.G.M. has been happily chosen for this important office by the Prince of Wales as, Grand Master, as he may be considered somewhat hereditary in Masonic office, being the grandson of the noble earl whose memory the Devonians have cherished by the statue in the Castle Yard. The present earl also is an old Provincial Grand Officer. Curiously enough, in an upper chamber of the premises in Gandy-street, now occupied as the Freemasons' Hall, Exeter, some old lead-work glass was found, with the inscription cut in, apparently with a gem, "John Faithfull Fortescue," with the motto, "I lift my heart to Thee, my God and guide;" and on other panes were "William Fortescue, 1725 (?)" also coats of arms and crests. The Rev. R. H. Fortescue, M.A., the present rector of St. Paul's, in which parish the premises are situated, has elicited the fact that the Fortescues had some connection with the parish, as appears by the parish registers, and probably lived in the above historic street and house.

The Committee of Petitions met at the Freemasons' Hall, Gandy-street, at ten o'clock, under the presidency of the Chairman, the Right Worshipful Bro. L. P. Metham, P.G.D. England, P.D.P.G.M. The report of the Secretary having been read, several petitions were considered, and a sum of money (amounting in the aggregate to forty-five guineas) was voted to each. The following notices of motion were considered, viz.:—By W. Bro. C. Godtschalk, P.M. 70, 1255, P.P.G.D., "That this Committee recommend the sum of one hundred guineas be voted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, and Widows of Freemasons," and by V.W. Bro. S. Jones, P.M. 112, P.G.J.W., "That this Committee recommend the sum of one hundred guineas be voted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, and Widows of Freemasons." The result was that a sum of fifty guineas each was recommended to be granted to the movers of both resolutions. On the motion of the V.W. Bro. J. E. Curteis, P.M. 189, P.P.G.S.W., the Committee recommended that the sum of fifty guineas be voted from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. It was also recommended that a sum of twenty guineas be voted for the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

At eleven o'clock Viscount Ebrington was duly installed Worshipful Master of a lodge in St. George's Lodge, No. 39, by the Right Worshipful Bro. W. W. B. Beach, Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, the Installing Provincial Grand Master.

At twelve o'clock the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at the Victoria Hall, which had been decorated and arranged as a Grand Lodge by Messrs. Goff and Gully, of Exeter. The room was adorned by the banners of the various lodges in the province, the Fortescue arms occupying the centre of the balcony, and flanked on either side by the shields and banners of the Knights Templars. The throne was placed in the orchestra, and the brethren who were not entitled to vote had seats assigned to them in the balcony. The hall and balcony were well filled with Freemasons from all parts of the county, and the effect of the different decorations was most brilliant.

Among the brethren present at the Grand Lodge were the Right Worshipful the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, Prov. Grand Master of Cornwall; the Right Worshipful W. W. B. Beach, P.G.M. of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Installing P.G. Master; Rev. John Huyshe, P.P.G.M.; the Hon. Walter Hylton Jolliffe, P.M. 1285, P.G.S.W.; S. Jones, P.G.J.W.; W. R. Woodman, W.M. 444, P.G.S.B. England; Rev. R. Swansborough, G. Chap.; Robt. Bishop Twose, G. Treas.; P. Stewart Kersteman, P.G. Reg., 303; W. G. Rogers, P.G. Sec.; Hy. Woodgates, P.M. 847, G.S.D.; Wm. On arrival, Bro. Huyshe, who was so feeble as to have to be led to his seat, was very warmly received.

The Grand Lodge having been duly formed and opened, the Installing Master, the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, the Rev. John Huyshe, and the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Metham, were saluted, and a deputation of seven Installed Masters (of the seven oldest lodges in the province, Nos. 39, 70, 105, 106, 112, 156, and 159) were sent to attend on and introduce the R.W. Provincial Grand Master (designate). On being placed before the pedestal, the patent of appointment of Viscount Ebrington as P.G.M. was read by the Grand Registrar. Viscount Ebrington was then heartily cheered, and attired in his robes of office, the Past P.G.M. putting around his neck the gold chain which had been presented to himself personally. Having been conducted to the throne by the Installing Master, the P.G.M. was received with a flourish of the trumpet.

In addressing the P.G.M. designate, Bro. Beach pointed out to the noble lord that he was about to succeed in an important office a brother who had been the admiration of the Craft, not only in this county, but throughout the whole kingdom—(applause)—and he need scarcely express the sorrow which he experienced on learning that increasing years rendered it impossible for him any longer to continue in his high office. The P.G.M. would have a worthy example to follow in the discharge of the important duties of an office for which, indeed, he seemed to have a family qualification. He trusted he would prove himself worthy of the confidence which the Grand Master of England had imposed upon him. (Hear, hear.) The P.G. Registrar then read the patent of appointment of Bro. Walter Goddard Rogers as Deputy Provincial Grand Master. Dr. Clarke Whitfield's anthem, "Behold, how good and joyful," was then sung by the musical brethren, Bro. E. M. Vinnicombe presiding at the harmonium. The following address to the new P.G.M. on his appointment was then presented by the P.D.P.G.M. Bro. L. P. Metham, on behalf of the lodges of the province. It was signed by the W.M.'s of all the lodges in the county, and probably represented the united voice of over 2000 Masons under the rule of Viscount Ebrington:—

To the Right Worshipful Hugh Fortescue, Lord Viscount Ebrington, Provincial Grand Master of Freemasons for Devonshire.

We, the Freemasons of the Province of Devon, of every rank and degree, desire to convey to you our most sincere congratulations on your elevation to the august office of Provincial Grand Master.

Under any circumstances an address presented to the eminent brother who had been selected to preside over the province would faithfully reflect the spirit of loyalty and affection which always characterises the tone of Freemasons towards their chief; but in your case these feelings are greatly enhanced, for the province preserves a grateful recollection of the kind and honourable rule of your noble grandfather.

We entertain the hope that the Masonic virtues which so greatly distinguished him are inherited by you, and that you may be enabled to maintain for the Province of Devon that prominent position which has been achieved by our two last excellent and beloved Provincial Grand Masters.

We shall at all times deem it our duty to co-operate loyally and cheerfully in furthering your efforts to maintain and extend the grand principles of the Craft, and we sincerely trust that the Great Architect of the Universe will be pleased in His infinite wisdom and goodness to grant you a long and prosperous Masonic career to rule and guide with pleasure and profit the brethren of this province.

Bro. L. P. Metham, P.D.P.G.M., in presenting the address, said: There is not, I am confident, a Freemason present who will not re-echo, with acclamation, the good wishes this address expresses—that health, happiness, and a prosperous reign may wait upon our newly-appointed Grand Master. There is not, I trust, a brother in this room who will not agree that he ought, and that he will, as far as his own conduct goes and as far as his influence extends among his fellow Masons, resolve that our Grand Master shall never have cause to regret that he has taken on himself this important and onerous office. With the moral and well-regulated efforts of the Craft to sustain him, his onward progress will be smooth and successful. The road he will have to travel has already been distinctly marked out by his predecessors, and he will have but to tread in their footsteps, keeping his eye steadily fixed on the landmarks of the Order, which they, by their lives and conduct, have so fully and brightly illustrated, to render his rule light and pleasant to himself and advantageous to those over whom he is placed. For myself, Right Worshipful Sir, I am grateful to the Great Architect of the Universe that I, who, more than a generation ago, received my first Provincial honours from your noble grandfather, am permitted to stand here to-day, to take part in this ceremony, and to be the mouth-piece of my brethren of this large province, in welcoming as the successor of my beloved and revered friend a scion of the house of Fortescue. The young who live for what the years to come may bring, and who find the greatest delight in devising ambitious schemes which they sanguinely believe will crown their future with success, think that the old have no pleasures that can equal theirs. But that is a great mistake, as to-day can testify, for if the past carries in its bosom no sting born of an illspent or useless life, but if, on the contrary, there are abiding green spots in bygone memories on which the mind can dwell with satisfaction when life's busy part has been well played, and the shades of evening are surely but tranquilly closing round, advanced life must possess many pleasures unknown to those who have as yet realised no expectations, and who are still struggling towards the goal which the old have reached and passed. You will all understand to what and to whom these remarks apply. We have to-day prayed the Great Architect of the Universe to speed on his noble mission our newly-installed Master, and, with one mind and one voice, cordially welcomed him to that chair to which he has so strong an ancestral claim. But we have one other duty to perform, without which I am quite sure you, Right Worshipful Sir, would be the first to declare that the ceremony of to-day was incomplete. We have to bid farewell to him—happily only in his official capacity—who, for so many years, has not only been our genial Master, but the steadfast counsellor, sincere friend, and affectionate brother of us all. At his installation, now many years ago, it was my pleasing privilege to present to him an address of welcome such as I have been honoured in presenting to you, his successor, to-day. Then I dwelt, as I truthfully could, without flattery or exaggeration, upon his private virtues and excellent public qualities, as well as upon the services he had rendered not only to the Craft in particular, but to humanity at large, all welded together into one harmonious whole by the daily practice of "Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth" in their best and widest sense. I prophesied then that when the day came which should close his rule over us, the Freemasons who should live to see that day would be able to say, as we said so long ago, with fervent, sincere, and grateful feelings for all that he had done for us and for the Craft: "He led us with a true and faithful heart, and ruled us prudently with all his power." Said I not well then, brethren? Say I not well now? Dear Bro. Huyshe, as sincerely as we have to-day welcomed our coming ruler with loyal acclamation do we, in the face of this great gathering, and in the face of the Masonic world, pray the Great Architect of the Universe to speed you, our parting ruler, and bless you with mental and bodily health to look back, as I know you will, with kindly feeling and affectionate regard to us, your brethren, who on our part shall continue to love and respect, as we have always loved and respected, you.

Bro. the Rev. J. Huyshe then rose and shook the new P.G.M.'s hand, and Bro. Metham called upon the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe to say a few words of congratulation on behalf of his Province of Cornwall.

Bro. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, who was warmly received, addressing the P.G.M., said he was glad that he had been afforded the opportunity of making a few remarks, because he attended that day to represent in some measure a great many other brethren who were unable themselves to be present on that interesting occasion, but who were anxious, nevertheless, to convey their congratulations to the brother who had just been elected to so high an honour. He himself was especially desirous of doing so, inasmuch as he was a member of the Province of Devon, having received "the purple" from the hands of the grandfather of the present P.G.M. Since he had been installed P.G.M. of Cornwall he had been in many ways linked to this county, having at the outset been inducted by the P.G.M., who had just vacated that office. And during the time he had held the dignity he had not looked in vain to Bro. Huyshe for the assistance which he had often required. He trusted that many years would be spared their respected brother to enjoy the sympathy and rest he had so richly earned. The P.G.M. of Cornwall proceeded to mention that if he had been unable to attend the gathering himself the sister county would not have been unrepresented at those proceedings, for he observed that there were present two officers of high degree from his province. He trusted that the sympathy that had so long existed between the two counties would long continue. He might vouch for its so doing on his side of the Tamar, and he had no doubt that the brethren present would readily admit that the same sentiments prevailed on theirs. In conclusion, he would once more congratulate the noble lord on having attained to such a position, and he expressed a fervent hope that the Great Architect of the Universe would be pleased to grant him long life, so as to enjoy a lengthy tenure of office, and when his term came to an end he trusted that he would be able to regard what he had done with as much satisfaction as his predecessors had had cause to do. (Loud applause.)

The P.G. Master, in reply, said he was heartily thankful for the address, and to the D.P.G.M. and the P.G.M. of Cornwall for their kind congratulations. The very kind words were all the more gratifying from the reference they contained to his honoured grandfather. It was seldom, he believed, that so young a man as himself had been appointed to the distinguished office which His Royal Highness the Grand Master had conferred upon him, and the proper discharge of its duties was not rendered easier by the high standard which had been established by his predecessors. He could hardly hope to equal them, but he was encouraged by the confidence of those present as shown in the address, and that they were not insensible or forgetful of duty well done he was reminded by that banner, preserved all those years in honourable remembrance, and by that gold chain, the proof at once of how well the Freemasons of Devon could appreciate life-long and devoted service, and of the love for the Craft, which was so conspicuous in the warm reception given to his predecessor, whom they were all gratified to see present. (Loud applause.) With the help of the Great Architect of the Universe, he would do his best to walk in the footsteps of those who had gone before him, and to administer the province honestly and impartially, and so in some way to verify the hopes expressed in the address, for which he again thanked them. (Prolonged applause.)

Bro. Rogers said the P.G.M. had asked him to read the following paper, being himself so feeble to address them, and his eyesight too imperfect to allow of his seeing to read it himself:—"I am most anxious that the beautiful and costly chain so affectionately presented to me on my installation as P.G.M. of Devon, on May 24th, 1863, by my Masonic brethren, should become an heirloom in the province, descending from each retiring Prov. G.M. to his successor. I have great satisfaction in knowing that the first of these is the grandson of my old and venerated chief and predecessor, Earl Fortescue. To Viscount Ebrington's charge I commit this splendid badge of office, to be by him worn as Prov. Grand Master of the Freemasons of Devon, whensoever he sees fit. May the G.A.O.T.U. give him grace, health, and strength to preside over this large province, with benefit to the Craft and satisfaction to himself; winning the esteem and affection of every worthy brother, through a long series of years. This is the earnest and heartfelt prayer of, my dear brethren, your aged and affectionate P.P.G.M., John Huyshe." (Applause.)

Bro. W. G. Rogers was then invested with his D.P.G.M.'s regalia by Bro. G. Hirtzel, W.M. of Lodge No. 39, of which lodge Bro. Rogers is a Past Master of twenty years' standing. The regalia had been subscribed for by the members of that lodge, and presented to Bro. Rogers as a token of their esteem and regard.

The minutes of the last Prov. Grand Lodge, held at Okehampton, were read and confirmed.

The P.G.M. said he anticipated that it would be the unanimous wish of all present that a minute be inserted in the records of this Prov. Grand Lodge, expressing their regret that failing health and infirmity had obliged Bro. the Rev. John Huyshe to give up the office which he had held for so many years with such advantage to the province, and thanking him for the handsome present to himself and successors of the chain of office, which was presented to him on his installation by the Freemasons of Devonshire. He was very sensible himself of the kindness of Bro. Huyshe, and of the assistance already rendered to him in everything connected with the duties of his new office. He was also sure that all felt equally grateful to him for kindnesses received at his hands in time past. (Applause.) The motion was carried unanimously.

The bye-laws of the province were confirmed, and the report of the P.P.G. Sec. was read.

Bro. Rogers remarked that all the lodges had made their returns and none were in arrear.

The Treasurer reported that the whole of the dues and fees of honour had been paid. The total receipts for the year, including a balance in hand at the commencement, were £543 14s. 2d., leaving a balance in hand at the present time of £228 3s.

Bro. F. Pollard, Sec. to the Fortescue Annuity Fund, reported a balance in hand from last year of £64 17s. 7d. The total receipts for the year had been £256 0s. 7d., leaving a balance due from the Treasurer of £79 7s. 1d.

The report of the Committee of Petitions was read by Bro. Gover, the Secretary, and the recommendations contained therein were adopted.

Bro. Metham bore testimony to the value of the work of the Committee, and of the indefatigable exertions of the Secretary; and he presented to Bro. Gover, through the P.G.M., a cheque for £50, collected by private subscription.

In acknowledging the testimonial, Bro. Gover said he had held the office of Secretary for ten years, and he had looked upon his duties as a labour of love, requiring no recognition.

Bro. Rogers proposed the addition to the Committee of Petitions of the name of the P.D.P.G.M., but Bro. Metham declined the honour on account of increasing age.

The report of the Auditors was read, and a Committee formed to carry out a suggestion made therein.

On the motion of Bro. S. Jones, seconded by Bro. Curtis, Bro. Henry George Beachey, of Lodge No. 1138, was elected Treasurer for the ensuing year.

On the motion of Bro. Brewer, seconded by Bro. Rogers, Bros. Curtis, 189, and W. S. Pasmore, 444, were appointed to audit the accounts of the year.

THE FREEMASON.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 23, 1879.

FREEMASONRY IN THE AIR.

Is it possible? Do our eyes not deceive us? No! We read, by the courteous remembrance of our distinguished Bro. A. Fabien, of Paris, that a "profane" was actually initiated in the "circumambient aether!" On the authority of that interesting letter we print with a translation elsewhere, a lodge was held, not on the "highest hills," as of old, but amid the "airs of heaven," and not only a lodge was held, but a profane was actually initiated and received the light and atmosphere of Freemasonry. A French lodge, No. 239, under the Scottish Rite at Paris, "the true brethren united and inseparable," went up in a balloon, and after the lodge was opened and closed, and the initiation completed, returned safely to their mother earth, and to suitable refreshment, (we trust), after so daring an excursion and such arduous labours. We are amused and interested at the same time with the note of our good Bro. Fabien, and congratulate the lodge on so successful an ascent, so safe a descent, and on so amusing and original a summer excursion. We need hardly point out to our many readers that thus in Masonry, as in the world in which we live, there are always "things not dreamt of" in our "philosophy." This is a novel and striking way of making our summer "excursions" linger in our memories, being at once scientific and sensational in the highest degree. What new ideas and fresh emotions might come to some of our good brethren, wearied with the "march of life" and the "sameness of lodge assemblies," in thus ascending in a balloon, and looking down on that dirty little speck beneath their feet, which we call the earth on which we live, with the dignity of enlightened Masons and the complacency of elevated philosophers. Indeed, we forbear to let our minds dwell on the airy scenes and imaginative regions to which such an excursion might conduct some of our worthy brethren, intent upon an exciting and sensational journey, for fear we should be put down at once by some of our "heavy squad" as altogether in "nubibus" ourselves. We simply record the fact, pleased to receive Bro. Fabien's letter, and we leave this successful ascent and this completed initiation to the calm consideration and fraternal appreciation of those who have the benefit and privilege of reading the Freemason, and thus realizing week by week what Freemasonry is, what it does, what it says, and where it can go to. We have a special gratification in turning away from the untoward strife setting in for the Rite Ecossais, from malevolent remarks and angry attacks, to such a pleasant scene of fraternal amity, interest, amusement, good humour, and good will, and we thank Bro. Fabien sincerely once more for communicating the incident to our columns.

THE CONFLICT IN THE FRENCH RITE ECOSSAIS.

In the Chaine d'Union, of August, we note that this deplorable contest is extending and increasing in bitterness, and, we venture to think, in destructive principles of theory and action. Bro. Hubert says himself, the able Editor of the Chaine d'Union, at p. 359: "We are no longer in presence of a difference, but we are in presence of a separation, of a revolution." As that esteemed brother does not seem quite to realize the full bearing of the views we have ventured to express on the subject in dispute, and as we are always anxious to agree with him, we think it well to repeat once more the reasons which have led us to support the "Administrative Commission" of the Rite Ecossais in this deplorable and inopportune conflict. We may say, as we know Bro. Hubert will believe, that we speak most seriously and carefully, fully weighing our words, and understanding what we write about. We wish that there should be no possible misunderstanding or misrepresentation of our humble but honest opinion, and, therefore, we will proceed categorically to state why it is we deem the present agitation in the French Rite Ecossais alike unbefitting, unreasonable, and unjust. We are quite aware of the professed difference between the reforms asked for by the "Premiere Section" of the "Grande Loge Centrale" and the alterations carried out in the Grand Orient of France. But, as we have shown before, in our opinion, the reforms which are claimed constitute a revolution in the Rite Ecossais, and are neither admissible nor defensible. For our Bro. Hubert is, we fancy, too far-seeing not to realize, as we do, that after all the motive principle of action, however it be covered over, is the same in both jurisdictions, and that the "idol" of the movement party in the "Grand Orient" is also the "idol" of the movement party in the "Rite Ecossais." We think that even our able opponent, Bro. Caubet, will not deny that however Professor Littré's initiation may have given an impetus to the movement, to Bro. Massol's initiative must be fairly attributed the great revolution eventually accomplished after many years in the Grand Orient of France. And though it be the fact, that at present, as Bro. Hubert says, only a "modus vivendi" is sought for by the Symbolic Lodges, or rather, to put it in honest language, the preponderance of the Symbolic Lodges in the Administrative Commission as in the Grande Loge Centrale, yet, if that be granted, which amounts to a complete annihilation of the superior rank and authority of the Thirty-third Degree, what is to prevent a majority repeating in the Grande Loge Centrale the system of revision, purgation, and revolution, successfully carried out in the Grand Orient? At this moment a commission of revision is considering the necessary changes to be made in the ritual of the Grand Orient, and what that report to the approaching "Convent" is likely to be, to accord with the views of an ardent majority, it does not require a prophet to foretell. It is this exaggeration of views in respect of the teaching and objects of Freemasonry, it is this fanatic intolerance of all opinions, except one which suits an excited majority, which constitute the great danger for all French Freemasonry. It is this idle cry for reform, this Jesuitism of assumed intolerance, which render this new movement in the Rite Ecossais, veiled though it be by professed principles of moderation, so full of peril to the Rite Ecossais itself. For where is it to end? What are its actual limits of thought and action? If the Symbolic Lodges are to be paramount, alike in the Grande Loge Centrale as in the Administrative Commission, what is there to prevent a complete modification of the teaching and ritual of the "Rite Ecossais," an entire approximation to the "Syllabus" of the Grand Orient? Is it not the case, that some of the most active brethren in this movement in the Rite Ecossais are warm admirers of Massol? Do they not also heartily approve of the proceedings and present position of the Grand Orient? What is to hinder this childish desire of being, as they say, "in harmony with the principles of the hour," completely ruling the words and actions of an active and, we fear, inconsiderate party? What is to save the Rite Ecossais from a Vandalic overthrow, either by the craze of "Positivism" on the one hand, or the suicidal folly of the "Morale Independante" on the other? All Theistic principles must then be disavowed. Behind, then, this seeming vindication of professedly innocent changes, (but which are tantamount to a revolution), lie, in our opinion, the destruction of lawful authority, the development of un-Masonic theories, the actual weakening and the eventual dissolution of the Rite Ecossais itself. In saying this we feel sure that we are only expressing the opinion of a large number of the members of the French Rite Ecossais, very anxious at the present aspect of affairs in that distinguished body. Probably the result of this angry controversy will be, as Bro. Hubert seems to anticipate, the creation of a spurious "Grande Loge Centrale Symbolique," but in this struggle between lawful authority and malcontents the sympathy of English Masons, whether Craft or High Grade, will remain actively and warmly with the Administrative Commission. No such body could or would be recognized in England. At a meeting of the "Premiere Section" of the "Grande Loge Centrale," July 15th, at Paris, a Bro. Chemalé is said, in Bro. Hubert's careful report, to have declared that the "grossest insults had been published by the Freemason against honourable and devoted brethren," and Bro. Clement, whose letter has already been alluded to in our columns, wished to know the name of the brother who had translated and distributed the article of the Freemason attacking Frere Massol. A Bro. Metayer asked that this brother should be punished for translating and distributing the article. We smile, as our readers will smile, at such childish bombast, and we may perchance gain a measure of the minds to whom this wild scheme of change is palatable. We beg to say that the Freemason never displays personality in its leaders, but it claims for itself what those liberal brethren seem to wish not to accord it,—liberty of thought and words. We can only conclude this article, as we began it, by saying that our sympathies entirely go with the "Administrative Commission of the Rite Ecossais in Paris."

EXAGGERATION.

What a striking characteristic is this amiable but hurtful mistake of all common conversation and current literature to-day! We live in an age of exaggeration, and everything around us assumes the appearance of want of proportion. We speak exaggeratedly of everything and everybody. We form exaggerated ideas of things and persons; the speeches we make, the books we write, the lives we lead, all are tinged with the prevailing colour of wholesale exaggeration! Hence arises so much of that unsatisfactoriness of all modern conversation, or oratorical addresses, of the normal literature of the hour. We are not anxious to speak or know the truth, and so we indulge in innumerable glosses and fashionable equivocations, until society itself has become unreal and unmeaning, both in its aims and existence, and is simply dominated by a love of ostentation and profession, the "shimmering" and the tinsel of rampant vulgarity, that barbarism of mere wealth, without taste or teaching, refinement or culture, which drags us all down to a common level of ineptitude and worthlessness. Everything thus for us wears the gaudy hues of exaggeration. We cannot keep to quiet words or tranquil expressions, but indulge in "superlatives" of all kinds, both meaningless and mischievous. Not caring for truth ourselves, and living in an habitual atmosphere of deliberate exaggeration, the prevailing tone of conversation in all classes alike leans to the sensational and the scandalous, the narration of high-spiced adventure, the facetiae of dubious morality, and the baseness of personal detraction. And so in the same way as regards our orators: how true it is also that the spirit of "high falutin" and hopeless "bunkum" seems to have seized them, with some, happily, notable exceptions. Hardly a day passes but we take up the broad sheet of the Times, for instance, and read a speech which we know is not true, and is simply marked by a ruling spirit of exaggeration and excess. It is not "truth" that the speaker was seeking to establish, but "party," self, a paradox, a parody on all that bears the sacred name of truth. It is lamentable often to think and to note into what excesses this tendency to exaggeration leads many of our contemporaneous public men to bow at the shrine of the loathsome "fetish" of mere party spirit. In its most exaggerated development, they are ready, nay eager, to sacrifice the welfare of the many, and even the peaceful progress of mankind. As for our literature, what can we say of it, but that it represents the "avatar" of exaggeration. Take the books we see announced day by day, open them, read them. Of how few of them can we conscientiously declare that truth is the object either of their professed aim or actual teaching? Of how many of them must we not declare, on the contrary, that exaggeration of theory, argument, sentiment, as the case may be, marks every line, and is blatant on every page? When old Carlyle, writing years ago, gave as his advice to a young generation "keep clear of bottled moonshine," he certainly was a good "mentor" for us all. But equally to-day the teacher and the philosopher may say to us all, old or young, "Avoid exaggeration." It is now a serious evil, affecting the pulpit and literature, the press and the stage, the society we frequent, the conversation we take part in, the associations we indulge in, the very existence we call our own. Nay, more than this, it is undermining perceptibly the better teachings of "truth" in us all, alike in our public and our domestic life.

T. C. F. Kenning,—

Il est sept heures du soir. La Loge 239, "Les Vrais Freres Unis Inseparables" est entiere au sein des airs, dans la nacelle du grand ballon de Paris transformé pour la premiere fois en loge aérestatique. Le maillet retentit, un profane recoit la lumiere, et nous lui expliquons qui s'il domine ainsi le monde profane qu'il voit bien loin sous ses pieds c'est l'emblème de la hanteur a laquelle la Maçonnerie cherche à élever les ames au dessus des passions humaines. Dans la région élevée ou je me trouve en le moment, les instants sont si comptés que je me borne à ces quelques mots que je vais livrer à la poste aussitôt sorti du temple extraordinaire dans lequel je vous écris.

TRANSLATION.

To the glory of the Great Architect of the Universe. In the name and under the auspices of the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite, Ancient and Accepted, in France and its dependencies. By 48 of latitude N. and 29 of longitude W. of the meridian of Paris. At 900 metres of altitude above the profane world, on board the balloon "Captive of Paris." August 12, 1879.

Very dear Bro. Kenning,—

It is seven o'clock in the evening. The Lodge 239, "Les Vrais Freres Unis Inseparables," (The True Brethren United and Inseparable), is altogether in the bosom of the air, in the basket of the grand balloon of Paris, turned for the first time into an acrostatic lodge. The gavel of the Master resounds, a profane receives the light, and we explain to him that if he thus dominates the profane world which he sees very far off at his feet, it is an emblem of the height to which Masonry seeks to elevate the souls of men above all human passions.

In the elevated region where I find myself at this moment, the instants are so numbered that I confine myself to these few words, which I will deliver to the post as soon as I have emerged from the extraordinary "temple" in which I write to you.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I hear that at the meeting of the House Committee, before which the claim of Bro. S. B. Wilson was taken into consideration, it was decided not to appoint any Mason as referee in the dispute between the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys and Bro. S. B. Wilson.

Will some member of the Craft explain how this can be reconciled with the principles of Masonry, and thereby enlighten,

Yours fraternally,

A YOUNG MASON.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly give a reply to the following questions in your next issue?

1. Is a Warden, invested by proxy, after having served his year of office eligible as a candidate for the chair of K.S.?
2. The W.M. not having sufficient time to conclude the business of the evening, calls off from labour to refreshment and resumes the next evening. Are candidates initiated at the latter meeting legally made Masons? If not, supposing that the calling off and resuming were inserted in the summons a week previous, would that make it legal?
3. The I.P.M. of a lodge being elected Treasurer, which office should he take in open lodge, and what should be done with the other collar?

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

M.M. 711.

[1. No. 2. No; adjournments are illegal. 3. I.P.M., but he can wear both if he likes.—Ed. F.M.]

CHARITY REFORM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me once more to add a few words of comment on your last article. and to correct one or to great misapprehensions under which you labour.

I never put forth any plan, "little" or big, for "reforming our Charities," but I have ventured to point out some great abuses which attach to the election system adopted by our Charities and many others. These abuses cannot be defended by a little innocent banter, such as your article contains, but by some solid argument to prove they have a raison d'être for their existence. This has not been attempted, and, perhaps, for the best reasons. From information I have received, I believe there is an "entire" absence (not of "investigation" of some kind, but) of proper investigation into the claims of candidates. There is a little investigation, which, like a "little learning," is "a dangerous thing." I am glad to find you are one with me in a desire for reform in this point.

The "scenes" of the polling day—with widows and orphans and voters running about, and canvassing, and exchanging, and purchasing, and waiting for the verdict, and their jubilee and wail—why, Sir, all this is a proverb, and, let me add, a bye-word too; so much so, that the Graphic or Illustrated London News not long ago had "the scene taken" at the London Tavern or Cannon-street. My good Bro. Creation can see for himself on any of the sensational days to which I allude. The elections can be as "open, honest, and above board" without the abuses as with them, and far more so; and be assured, dear Sir, and Brother, we will never rest until we get rid of them.

Yours fraternally,

R. J. SIMPSON.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.—REPRESENTATIVE CLOTHING, &c.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As my esteemed friend and our R.W. Bro. William James Hughan in his letter in a late number of the Freemason calls on me to send you a description of our Irish Grand Lodge representative collar and jewel, which is presented to each Representative on his appointment, I gladly do so.

The collar is a small but very neat one, made of sky blue (called in Ireland Masonic blue) corded silk, two inches deep in front, narrowing to one inch in back, bound with gold lace of quarter of an inch, and in front (where there is an opening for jewel to hang) gold fringe of a half inch.

The jewel of office is silver gilt, made in the shape of a buckle ring, 2½ inches in diameter, the ring being of Masonic blue enamel, on it, in gold letters, the words "Representative from the Grand Lodge of Ireland." In the centre of the ring is an Irish Past Master's jewel, being the square and compass, gilt, and between them the letter "G" in Masonic blue enamel. This collar and jewel are the property of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. Until very recently each Representative on his appointment was presented by the Grand Lodge of Ireland with an Irish Junior Grand Warden's clothing, consisting of collar, jewel, apron, and gauntlets, but owing to the large increase of representation to foreign Grand Lodges a change had to be made, and the Representatives have now to purchase their own apron and gauntlets.

I may mention that the Irish Grand Officers' clothing is of a different pattern from all others, and the gauntlets, I am sorry to say, are seldom worn in Ireland. The clothing of the Grand Lodge of England is garter blue, every part of it being very beautifully ornamented in gold lace. In Scotland it is thistle green, the collar being a simple piece of corded silk ribbon, but the apron being beautifully ornamented. The gauntlets are also handsomely ornamented, but the cordon, or sash (not worn in England or Ireland) is, like the collar, plain corded silk ribbon, with six inches of gold fringe at the end of it. The grandest clothing certainly is that of the Grand Lodge of Egypt, which consists of a collar of a most peculiar shape, being pointed back and front as also over both shoulders. This collar is five inches deep, save in front, where it is eight inches. It is dark green, and made of the richest Lyons (silk) velvet, magnificently embroidered with the lotus leaves (signifying fertility and devotion) in silver lace, meeting in front, where there is what is commonly known as "a true lover's knot," also in silver lace. This collar is edged with red silk ribbon, also embroidered in silver lace, with an exceeding neat chain pattern, in silver, on it (green and red being Egyptian colours). Over the knot and between the lotus leaves is a crescent in gold lace, between the points of the crescent three stars, and over them "Cons. Del. G. Maestro."

My collars were presented to me on my being honoured by being made an Hon. Senior Grand Warden. I am aware the cost of this collar in Egypt is nearly £ to 10s.

The jewel is gold or silver gilt, being a Senior or Junior Grand Warden's jewel, according to rank in Grand Lodge or by commission, and contained within a ring three inches in diameter; at the bottom of this ring is a sprig of acacia and an ear of corn, at the top the word "Egypt."

The gauntlets are dark green, silk bound, with silver lace and fringe half an inch deep, and a Warden's jewel on each. The apron is, of course, the lambkin, bound with dark green silk ribbon and silver lace, half an inch deep. The flap is of the Scotch circular pattern, also bound with silver lace, half an inch, and fringe one inch, and on it the letters C. D. G. M. This apron has also levels in gold on it. The collar alone is presented by Grand Lodge, and on death or resignation of Representative (unless it be presented to holder as a special mark of honour) is to be returned to Grand Lodge. The rest of the clothing is procured by the Representative.

Many of your readers will, doubtless, be surprised at this variety in clothing, but it is well to have it so. But the clothing does not vary more than the working in points non-essential, as no two Masonic bodies work in exactly the same way. This I look on, and I have by experience learned to be, one of our greatest safeguards against impostors. I am aware that many think there should be a perfect uniformity all over the world, in non-essential, as there is in every essential, and by knowing which essentials every true Mason, come he from north, south, east, or west, can obtain admission into any lodge he may wish to visit.

Our valued and R.W. Bro. Theodore S. Parvin, Grand Sec. of Iowa, has truly styled this vain idea of uniformity in non-essentials as "a myth." I would go much further and call it an evil, which, I am sorry to say, some Irish and Scotch brethren, not understanding or apparently appreciating the grandeur and beauty of the Masonic working in non-essentials in England, Ireland, and Scotland (when taken separately, and as each of them being a perfect system of working within itself) are, in their ignorance, trying to import (especially into the grand old Irish working) somewhat of the English working, and thus doing vast injury to both.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES H. NEILSON.

THE BANK HOLIDAY. C. Goodall, Printer, Cookridge-street, Leeds.

This is a facetious performance by a learned but anonymous brother of ours, in which the adventures of Daniel, the groom, and Mary, the parlour-maid, on St. Lubbock's Day, are "amusingly described." We agree with the writer that the "rhymes occasionally to be found in this composition are altogether unnecessary," and that they "have been allowed to stand out of consideration for readers not yet educated up to the appreciation of a purely classical metre" is a proof of much consideration for his readers on part of the author. Poor Polly's sufferings may serve to show that the "course of true love never did run smooth," but we refer our readers to the affecting and edifying little tale itself.

AT NIGHT IN A HOSPITAL. By E. LYNN LYNTON.

This interesting little pamphlet, which seems to be intended for private circulation only, is a reprint from "Belgravia." It gives a most graphic account of the work of that most admirable institution, the London Hospital, and will well repay perusal and thought. Its statistics are very remarkable. This much needed hospital has a paid income of £14,000 per annum, but its expenditure is three times that amount. During 1878, of 6448 in-patients, 4794 were admitted free, and 1654 cases were recommended by Governors. Of 49,791 out-patients, 29,215 were treated free, and 20,576 were recommended by subscribers. As the writer truly says of its accounts "these items are not uninteresting." From seventeen to eighteen cwt. of artificial ice are used weekly. The milk bill is over £2100 yearly, eggs over £820, and vegetables a few pounds less. Bread stands at £1386 14s. 3d., meat at £5777 18s. 6d. The water bill is £190 7s. 8d., and coals and light come to £2658 7s. 2d. Thus it is virtually a "Free Hospital," nearly three-quarters of the patients being received without the recommendation of subscribers, and admitted into wards according to the severity of their cases, as adjudged by the medical and surgical officers, while no accident or similarly urgent case, from whatever quarter it comes, is ever turned away. Need we say anything more to prove the value of this noble institution to the humbler classes, and the absurdity, in our opinion, and the irreligion of the movement which is seeking on grounds of political economy, or rather of Pharisaic selfishness, to interfere with these great free hospital institutions of ours, and make them self-supporting and remunerative. Happily, so far, it is only a very small section of the medical profession, always benevolent, which patronises such retrograde notions.

THE FOUR ELEMENTS. By FRATER JOHN SARTAIN.

Wm. Hildare, 734, Samson-street, Philadelphia, U.S.

This is a very mystic paper by a Rosicrucian adept, and more fitly belongs to our good contemporary the "Rosicrucian." What it means, or to what it tends, we are positively unable to say. The four elements represent "earth, air, fire, and water," but what they have to do with us, or we with them, in this mystic sense, it is impossible for us to guess, much less explain. But we are struck with the eloquence of the writer, and his ingenious moral application of mystic speculations. We can only suppose that it is our personal denseness and want of Rosicrucian light which prevent us deriving all the benefit we ought to derive from so abstruse and well written a production. To us it is "Chalde," to Rosicrucians it will, no doubt, be "Caviare."

On the motion of Bro. Tanner-Davy, the thanks of the Prov. Grand Lodge were given to the retiring Auditors, Bros. J. Way and V. Bird, who had most satisfactorily performed the duties of that office for several years.

The following notice of motion stood in the name of Bro. J. E. Curteis, P.P.G.S.W., viz., "That, having regard to the difficulty in securing the election of the adopted candidates of the province for the Royal Masonic Institutions for Boys and Girls, it is expedient to found an educational scheme confined to the province, which, whilst not antagonistic to the Charities before mentioned, will secure speedy relief being afforded to a larger number of deserving cases than can be hoped for with the means at present at the disposal of the province; that it be referred to the Committee of Petitions to draw up such a scheme and regulations for the management thereof." However, after expressing his views on the subject, he withdrew the motion.

On the proposition of Bro. Curteis, a vote of thanks was accorded to the Installing Master, Bro. Beach, for the way in which he had performed the ceremony of that day.

In response, Bro. Beach thanked the Prov. Grand Lodge for the compliment paid him, and said he echoed the good wishes expressed on behalf of the new P.G.M. for a long life and a prosperous rule over the province.

The banquet was held at four o'clock, at the Royal Public Rooms, which were prettily decorated for the occasion. A splendid collation was supplied by Messrs. Palmer and Battershall, and it gave unqualified satisfaction. The Prov. Grand Master presided, and was supported by Bros. Beach, Rogers, Swansborough, Rev. John Carwithen, Hon. Hylton Joliffe, Tanner-Davy, Curteis, S. Jones, Perry, Hine-Haycock, Elphinstone Stone.

The toast list commenced with "The Queen and the Craft," proposed from the chair. Viscount Ebrington remarked that when a law was passed interfering with secret societies, the Ancient Society of Freemasons was specially excepted, and he was sure that they were not now less loyal than they were then.

"The M.W.G.M. of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," was also proposed from the chair. In doing so, the noble Chairman said that His Royal Highness had, since his connection with Freemasonry, been of great advantage to the Craft, for he had brought to it the same interest and attention which made the English department of the Paris Exhibition such a grand success. (Hear, hear.) It was gratifying to know that His Royal Highness would soon be in that province again on the errand of laying the foundation stone of the Eddystone Lighthouse. That building seemed to him to represent in the water the three great principles of their Order—brotherly love, relief, and charity. On his journey, he was sure that His Royal Highness would have the good wishes of all. (Applause.)

In proposing "The R.W. the Pro Grand Master of England, Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present," the Chairman remarked that their Senate could challenge the Senate of the nation on two points—the speediness of their legislation—for obstruction was not one of those hidden mysteries of nature and science which had yet received much attention—and with regard to the illustrious names on its rolls. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Dr. Woodman, Past Grand Sword Bearer of England, and Past Master of No. 444, Union, Devon, who responded. He said it had given him the greatest pleasure to witness the ceremony of the day, by which they had all acknowledged the rule of one whose position in the province might be considered all but hereditary. The Order was never more prosperous nor in greater favour than it was at present, under the rule of our Royal Prince, assisted by such chiefs as Lords Carnarvon and Skelmersdale, and supported by the rest of the Grand Officers, who were ever ready at the call of duty to do whatever work they might be required to perform, whether for Grand Lodge or for their respective provinces; and he was proud in their name to thank the Grand Master of Devon for the manner he had proposed their health, and the brethren generally for their cordial response to the same.

The Right Worshipful the Installing Master proposed, "The R.W. the Provincial Grand Master of Devon, Viscount Ebrington." He said that the Chairman had that day taken upon himself a position which involved large and important duties, but he was sure that all would agree that from the earnestness he had shewn that day they need not entertain any apprehension of the way in which he would discharge the duties of his office, or that he would not justify the expectations formed of him. (Hear, hear.) The duties of his office were by no means light, but he had entered upon them with the full sense of his responsibility, and he was sure he would do his best to carry out the duties to the fullest extent. He would have active, energetic, and able Masons to support him, and he would, no doubt, conduct their business in a manner which would draw forth the encomiums of all the Masons in England. (Hear, hear.) He asked the brethren to drink long life and prosperity to the P.G.M. (Applause.)

The P.G.M., in reply, heartily thanked the brethren for the kindness expressed towards him, and he could only hope that half the good things said about him would be accomplished. If such were the case, he did not think that either they or himself would have reason to complain. But among all the virtues and good qualities ascribed to him, the speaker was not able to reckon that of experience in Masonry. He had one advantage, however, in that respect, for it could not be said of him that he was too old to learn. (Laughter.) He meant to do his best to rule the kindness wisely and well, and in a manner worthy of his predecessors. He would promise that he would do so honestly, and with an impartial regard for the true interests of the Craft. In the West they were proud of their character for hospitality, and they heartily welcomed a stranger, even if he had no other recommendation than that he was one. But the brother whose health he should now ask them to drink came to them from Hampshire, with the reputation of being a good landlord, a good neighbour, a good magistrate, a good member of Parliament, and a good master of hounds. (Laughter and loud applause.) Besides all those recommendations, he brought the reputation of being a very good Mason, which should be of especial weight in such an assembly as that. (Hear, hear.) At various times he had served no less than six years as W.M. of a lodge, and now for many years he had been P.G.M. of the extensive Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight. Of his love for the Craft they had him there as a living example, for he had come a considerable distance, at no slight personal inconvenience, to assist them that day. He (the Chairman) was therefore sure that those present were as grateful to the R.W. Bro. Beach as he was for the way in which he had performed the ceremony that morning, and he believed that they would show their appreciation of him by heartily receiving the toast. (Applause.)

Bro. Beach returned his warm thanks for the manner in which his name had been received. He was not quite a stranger, for a good many years ago he came to Devonshire to seek a wife. (Hear, hear.) But, if he had been a stranger before, the welcome and kindness he had received that day would make him a stranger no more. He was glad of the opportunity afforded him that day of seeing the admirable way in which Freemasonry was carried out in Devonshire, and he should take the first opportunity of attending one of the lodges in the province. (Hear, hear.) As the Order extended, so the responsibility of each Mason increased, and it behoved every one to sustain the credit of the Craft and to maintain its ancient principles. The change of principles in other countries had been most disastrous, but in England there had been no disturbance of attachment to the Order.

Bro. Tanner-Davy proposed, "The Health of the R.W. Past Provincial Grand Master of Devon, the Rev. John Huyshe, M.A., P.G.C. England." He regretted that Bro. Huyshe had been obliged to resign an office which he had filled for so many years to the entire satisfaction of every Mason in the province, and an office the duties of which he had discharged with great courtesy and firmness. (Hear, hear.) He had known the P.P.G.M. as an intimate personal friend, and he would assure his brethren that he was as good in his private life, as thorough and sincere, as in the discharge of his Masonic duties. He was always ready to dispense acts of kindness or charity to anybody who required them, and in his own parish he was looked upon as a sort of "prophet, priest, and king." Col. Tanner-Davy went on to congratulate Viscount Ebrington on his elevation, and said that Bro. Huyshe was exceedingly gratified at the selection of his successor.

The toast was heartily received, three cheers being given for the P.P.G.M., and three for Mrs. Huyshe.

Bro. the Rev. J. Carwithen acknowledged the compliment, in the absence of the P.P.G.M. He said he was one of Bro. Huyshe's oldest friends, and perhaps the oldest Mason in the room. The P.P.G.M. was much pleased at the appointment of Viscount Ebrington, and was sure that he was the right man in the right place, and that he would add lustre to Masonry. The Chairman's grandfather first made him P.G. Chaplain.

In proposing "The V.W. the Deputy P.G.M. of Devon, Bro. Rogers, and the rest of the P.G. Officers, Present and Past," the noble Chairman said that he felt sure of the same support and assistance from all of them as had been kindly and freely given to him by the P.P.G.M. (Applause.)

Bro. Rogers said he was very gratified at the manner in which his name had been received, and he could not but think that his distinction was due to some extent to his late chief. The ordinary ambition of a man had been more than realised in his case, and he hoped to deserve the confidence placed in him, to carry out the duties of his office with satisfaction to everybody, and that none of its dignity would be lost in his hands. In conclusion, he thanked his brethren of Lodge 112 for presenting him with his beautiful Deputy Provincial Grand Master's regalia, in token of their fraternal esteem and affection. He valued the gift highly, and gratefully acknowledged the feelings which prompted it. (Hear, hear.)

In proposing "The W.M.'s of the Lodges of the Province, Present and Past," the noble Chairman claimed for the Province of Devon as prominent a place in Masonry as she held in everything else, and that position it would ever be his earnest endeavour to maintain and advance, and it was to the W.M.'s of lodges and their immediate predecessors and successors that he must look to for help to do that. With the toast he gave the name of Bro. J. Jerman, the W.M. of the ancient lodge which held the proud position of heading the long list that begun with 39, and ended—he hoped only for the present—with 1753. (Applause.)

In the unavoidable absence of Bro. Jerman, his I.P.M.—Bro. John Stocker—responded to the toast.

"The Visiting Brethren," proposed by Bro. the Rev. R. Swansborough, P.G.C., and "Our Poor and Distressed Brethren," by the P.G. Tyler, Bro. P. L. Blanchard, concluded the toast list.

Bro. S. Jones, P.P.G.J.W., had charge of the arrangements, assisted by the P.G. Sec. and a Committee of the P.G. Stewards, and the W.M.'s of the three Exeter Lodges, Nos. 39, 112, and 1254.—Exeter and Plymouth Gazette.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John M. Clabon, President, Bro. Joshua Nunn, Senior Vice-President, and Bro. James Brett, Junior Vice-President, occupied the three chairs. There were also present Bros. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary; W. Dodd, J. M. Case, P.G.D.; Erasmus Wilson, P.G.D.; C. A. Cottebrune, J. B. Shackleton, W. Stephens, G. P. Britten, Charles Dairy, H. Garrod, Neville Green, Charles Atkins, Herbert Dicketts, W. Hilton, Dr. W. Hill Evans, Thos. Senior, A. Lamarque, R. E. K. Wilkinson, T. F. Knight Smith, J. H. Matthews, Alfred Withers, John Holden, W. Body Date, John Lee, George B. Brodie, J. G. Robinson, W. Foulsham, Henry Speedy, Dr. W. Hope, E. Farwig, J. J. Cattle, Thos. Wm. Bond, George S. Elliott, A. Timothy, G. F. Seigé, E. Squirell, W. W. Gray, Robert Harman, D. Belfrage, George Coope, and H. Massey (Freemason).

The brethren first confirmed grants to the amount of £410, made at last meeting, and then proceeded to the new list, on which there were eighteen candidates. Five of these cases were dismissed and two were deferred. The remainder were relieved with a total sum of £425, consisting of two grants of £100 each (£200); one of £50 (£50); three of £40 (£120); one of £30 (£30); one of £15 (£15); one of £10 (£10); and two of £5 (£10). Lodge was then closed.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE BERKHAMPTED LODGE.

The summer outing of the Berkhampted Lodge took place on Wednesday, the 13th inst. Bro. W. C. Maddever, G.S.D., W.M., presided. Upon the arrival of the London train, 11.25, the visitors and others were met, and all adjourned to the Old Castle Green, in the Earl of Brownlow's park, where a substantial luncheon, under a marquee, was waiting. After the brethren had fully paid their devotions to the viands, &c., four drags were soon occupied, and, under weigh through the vast park, staying for a while to view the most attractive spots and distant landscapes, which this part of the country is noted for. Just before arriving at the Bridgewater Monument a drenching storm came on, which rather damped the ardour of the party, keeping them under the trees for a time until the sun again showed. On again, however, and stopped at one of the park lodges to wet the inner man, now thoroughly wet outside, and after another short sojourn were on the road again, making for the Earl's beautiful house and gardens. Having done the gardens, rosary, fountains, &c., which are, indeed, rare specimens of artistic taste and high-class cultivation, the company were ready to leave, when the Countess sent one of her attendants to know whether the gentlemen would like to view the chapel. Of course, all did like, and replied to that effect, thanking her ladyship for her condescending kindness.

Whilst in the chapel a surprise took place—the Steward of the house asked if any among the company would try the organ?

Bro. Haakins, of the Earl of Zetland Lodge, 1364, said he would, and taking a brother with him to blow, he quietly went into the organ gallery and pealed forth some most exquisite music, to the delight and great gratification of his hearers, who had not (until they heard the organ) the remotest idea they were going to be in for such an intellectual treat in the day's programme.

After a little more walking all took their places, and were rattled off at a good pace to the King's Arms Hotel, in the town, where a most recherché banquet was partaken of. Only a few toasts were given. Songs were sung by some of the brethren, and at 9.25 all were ready to start by the last train for London.

The utmost praise is certainly due to Bro. Wilson, the Secretary, who carried out the arrangements so thoroughly, and whose good taste, forethought, and great kindness were the means of all enjoying a pleasurable day, although it did rain bucketsful at one time during the drive.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The stomach and its troubles cause more discomfort and bring more unhappiness than is commonly supposed. The thousand ills that settle there may be prevented or dislodged by the judicious use of these purifying Pills, which act as a sure, gentle and acid aperient, without annoying the nerves of the most susceptible or irritating the most delicate organisation. Holloway's Pills will bestow comfort and confer relief on every headachy, dyspeptic, and sickly sufferer, whose tortures make him a burden to himself and a beggar to his friends. These Pills have long been the popular remedy for a weak stomach, for a disordered liver, or a paralysed digestion, which yield without difficulty to their regulating, purifying, and tonic qualities.—[Advt.]

Masonic and General Tidings.

Arrangements are being made for the opening of a new lodge at St. Leonard's, and a petition has been lodged for a warrant authorising the lodge to be opened. The petition is supported by the old Derwent Lodge, No. 40, and there is no doubt that Masonry will soon find a home and habitation in the western portion of the town, the non-existence having been long felt by the members of the Craft residing in that locality.

MONMOUTHSHIRE.—At the Provincial Grand Lodge meeting held at Tredegar, on the 7th inst., Bro. Jos. Gibbs, P.M. 471, and P.P.G.S.B., was appointed Steward to represent the province at the next annual festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and a sum of twenty guineas was voted to be placed on his list in the name of the P.G.M.

The name of Comp. W. Stephens, M.E.Z. Holmesdale Chapter, No. 874, was inadvertently omitted from our report of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Kent as one of the companions present at the convocation.

MAJOR CHARD, R.E.—Major Chard, R.E., the hero of Rorke's Drift, was formerly quartered in Exeter, and is a Freemason and a member of one of the Exeter lodges, the brethren of which have had the following address beautifully illuminated for presentation to him on his return home: "To Brother John Rouse Merriott Chard: We, the undersigned, Master, Wardens, and brethren of St. George's Lodge, No. 112, desire to express to you our great admiration of the determined and well-sustained courage and gallantry with which you defended the post of Rorke's Drift against an overwhelming force of Zulu warriors on the night of the 22nd and morning of the 23rd of January, 1879, our sincere congratulations on the well-deserved honours in the shape of a majority in the army and the Victoria Cross for valour with which her Most Gracious Majesty has been pleased to recognise your gallant feat of arms, and our earnest hope that you may long be spared to serve your Queen and country with that devotion and courage you have so early evinced."

On Saturday last, at the Shire Hall, Dorchester, the Lord Mayor (Alderman Sir C. Whetham) took the oaths as a magistrate for Dorsetshire. The Lord Mayor was accompanied by Bro. Sheriff Burt, to whom he has been paying a visit. In the evening the Lord Mayor presented the portrait of Bro. Sheriff Burt, on behalf of a deputation from 1000 of the employes of Messrs. John Mowlem and Co., in which firm the Sheriff is senior partner, the deputation having travelled to Swanage for that purpose. A portrait of Mrs. Burt, the gift of members of her family, was presented to her at the same time.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London have become patrons of the Early Closing Association.

Bro. T. W. Boord, M.P., has taken Ockenden Park, Sussex, one of the residences of Bro. S. W. W. Burrell, for a short term.

Among the list of visitors present at the late Grand Chapter of Kent meeting, held at the Skating Rink, Plumstead, should have been the name of Comp. H. Shaw, P.S. Union Waterloo Chapter, 13, and W.M. United Military Lodge, 1536.

BIGOTRY IN AUSTRIA.—A sad story of heartless fanatical bigotry comes from Prague. A nun of the English Cloister for Young Girls has at a moment's notice been turned out into the streets, without a florin in her pocket, for having given shelter during one night in her cell to her sick and destitute father, who had paid her a visit during the day, and who, as he was leaving his daughter, said that he had not the wherewithal to procure himself a night's lodging. He was at last persuaded by his daughter to remain all night in the convent. He was once a cavalryman, and very well off, but lost his money in speculation; beyond this there is no harm in the poor fellow. In most countries he could have procured some relief, and perhaps have been sent back to his native town had he desired and deserved it, for he is a Mason, but in Austria the Craft is at a discount, for its members—as, alas! is the case in many continental lands, notably in Italy and France—have had the imprudence to meddle with politics. The consequence is that, unlike their brethren in England, Germany, Sweden, &c., who boast sovereigns or heirs-apparent amongst their members, the Austrian Freemasons are looked upon with a jealous eye by the police. Indeed, no lodge is allowed within six miles of Vienna, the nearest being at Klasterneburg. A subscription is being got up for father and daughter, and great indignation is expressed at the intolerant and summary way in which the latter—a charming girl of eighteen—has been expelled. Doubtless the proverbially and hard-hearted world will in this instance prove more humane than Mother Church. It will not be the first time.—Yorkshire Post, August, 13th.

The Duke of Cornwall Lodge is to be consecrated at Freemasons' Hall on the 30th inst. The Consecrating Officer will be Bro. Col. S. H. Clerke, P.G.D., assisted by Bros. Capt. G. N. Philips and Rev. J. Simpson, P.G.C.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—[Advt.]

Public Amusements.

OLYMPIC.—"Davy Crockett." The main interest of this play is centred in a certain backwoodsman whose name gives the play its title. The plot is very simple and not very original, the incidents having a flavour of a happy combination of many plays. But the leading actor, Mr. Frank Mayo, portrays the character of Davy Crockett with such vigour and pathos that we are fain to be interested when we should otherwise be bored. It is only the clever acting of this clever actor that saves the piece, for the plot is, as we have said, very simple, and there is not a smart or clever saying in the whole five acts, and the way in which a certain fair actress reads some lines from Scott's "Young Lochinvar" is so bad, so devoid of all feeling and spirit, that we are only saved from laughter by keeping our attention fixed on Davy, whose face plays to the lines as they should be delivered, not as they are. If fairly cast all round, "Davy Crockett" might hold the boards for some considerable time, instead of, as announced, for four weeks only. We must not forget to give a word of praise to Mr. Meade, who played the villain remarkably well; he certainly showed great presence of mind and wonderful control over the risible muscles of his face when he delivers the line "No matter, the time will come." We strongly recommend our readers to see Mr. Frank Mayo as Davy Crockett; it is most refreshing, for his style is altogether new to English playgoers. The new farce "Cut and Come Again," from the pen of Mr. R. Soutar, produces much merriment and is decidedly clever.

THOMAS'S HATS.

(LETTER FROM THE PREMIER TO "PUNCH.")

Oh, my dear Mr. Punch, what a fuss, what a clatter,
 People talk of naught else but the Practical Hatter;
 If you're speaking of Gladstone, the Budget, the Queen,
 This Practical Hatter is brought on the scene,
 And the "Telegraph," "Echo," the "Standard" & "Times,"
 All have leaders on Thomas's Hats and his Rhymes,
 Whilst the Editors swear "when in Thomas's Castor
 Their ravings flow brighter, and lighter, and faster;"
 And I hear Tupper, Tennyson, Ruskin, Carlyle,
 Have offered him odes and critiques by the mile;
 With no other return for their essays and lays

Than his finding them Hats for the rest of their days.
 So I felt half inclined, since they've made such a row
 'Gainst the "penny gold wreath" to encircle my brow,
 The pleasure of wearing at once to forego,
 And exchange it away for a Thomas' Chapeau.
 For, to tell you the truth, my dear Punch, I've a dread
 Of any more weight being placed on my head,
 And as Thomas's Hats are so easy and soft,
 Whilst the wreath will be hard and not easily doffed,
 If Thomas is willing, I'll readily yield
 The wreath for a hat. Ever yours—Beaconsfield.

HIGH CROSS LODGE (No. 754).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, at the Seven Sisters, Page Green, Tottenham. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Henry Stephens, who was supported by the following officers and Past Masters:—Bro. G. Burford, S.W., W.M. elect; J. Farrin, J.W.; D. Roberts, P.M., Treas.; T. Cunningham, P.M., Sec.; Past Masters John Maller, G. Townsend, W. Dance, W. Steedman, W. Kelly, J. Linzell, and J. Jones; H. V. Clements, S.D.; T. H. Thompson, J.D.; Wm. Tegg, I.G.; J. Garrod, D.C.; J. Very, Tyler; and several members. The following visitors were also present:—Bro. G. C. Young, 820; J. F. Brown, J. Driscoll, P.M. 30; S. Hill, 109; W. W. Morgan, Jun., 1385; A. J. Manning, P.M. 1472; J. H. Thompson, 1580; J. Barber, 933; H. B. Carter, 1435; J. Badkin, 1365; J. Pinder, H. Cleverly, 1107; J. B. Reid, 946; J. E. Pinder, 1707. The lodge having been regularly opened and the usual formalities observed, the report of the Audit Committee was submitted. Bro. Mitchell was passed, and later on Bro. H. Cooper was raised. Bro. Dance, P.M., then presented Bro. Burford, the W.M. elect, for the benefit of installation. A Board of Masters being formed, that brother was regularly placed in the chair, and in due course he appointed the following brethren as his officers: Bro. Farrin, S.W.; Clements, J.W.; Roberts, Treas.; Cunningham, Sec.; Thompson, S.D.; Tegg, J.D.; Garrod, I.G.; W. S. Blenkinsop, D.C.; Stevenson, Steward; Lewis, Asst. Steward; Very, Tyler. The installing Master, Bro. Stevens, then gave the addresses usual after the installation ceremony. One candidate for initiation having been proposed, the W.M. proceeded to close the lodge, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, where a most enjoyable repast was provided by Bro. Oddy. At the conclusion of the banquet, and grace having been sung, the W.M. gave the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," which was followed by the National Anthem. "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W. Grand Master," followed, and was most heartily received. The toast of "The Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past," was the next honoured. After a song, Bro. Stephens proceeded to give the toast of "The W.M." He said he could not speak much of his ability as W.M., as he was new to that position, but as a member of the lodge, and a faithful officer, he paid him a great compliment. The W.M. had ever been at his post, and was well qualified to fill the position he now occupied. He trusted that at the end of his year of office Bro. Burford would be able to look back upon as successful a year as he, Bro. Stephens, had just passed through. The S.W. having favoured the brethren with a song, the W.M. replied as follows:—Brethren, I have to return my very sincere thanks for the kind manner in which you have accepted the toast proposed by Bro. Stephens. I am sure it is a very great honour to be elected as W.M. of the High Cross Lodge. There are few metropolitan lodges that can boast as many members as the High Cross Lodge, and if they have as many they have not so great a number of sincere Masons as we have. I cannot do more than thank you for placing me in the chair. Whatever I may do I will endeavour to do my duty, and work in unison with you all, and thereby please the members of the lodge. Should I seem to be averse to some of your wishes you may rely that I am differing only in the interests of Freemasonry. Ideas are not the same in all brethren, it being natural that we should have different views on certain subjects. It will be my endeavour to carry out the duties of my office satisfactorily, and I hope that I shall have a successful year; but to secure this I must ask for the aid of the brethren and my officers. The next toast the W.M. characterised as a most pleasing one for him to propose, it was that of "The I.P.M., Bro. Stephens." He was sure that those brethren who had been in the lodge during the past six or seven years must agree with him that Bro. Stephens had had one of the most successful years on record in the High Cross Lodge. The brethren must be all agreed that he had endeavoured to do his best for the lodge, and the result, he considered, had been proved without a doubt to be a success. More especially was this the case with regard to the handsome surplus he had left in the hands of the Treasurer. The W.M. then proceeded to place on Bro. Stephens's breast the jewel that was voted to him at the last meeting. In doing so, he expressed the great pleasure he felt in presenting this mark of the esteem of the lodge to so worthy a brother. Bro. Stephens, in reply, after thanking the brethren for the reception that had been accorded him, said: I do not know if I am deserving of the many kind things that have been said of me to-night. I have endeavoured to do my utmost while in the chair for the benefit of the lodge, and, as you are all aware, I have in a measure succeeded. If I have pleased you I am more than amply rewarded for any exertions I have made. I thank you most heartily for the splendid jewel your W.M. has just placed on my breast. I hope it may be handed down to my children and their children as a token of the respect in which their father and grandfather were held by the High Cross Lodge. I must again thank you for the kind way in which you have supported me during my year of office. The W.M. announced that the collection made on behalf of the Charity Fund of the lodge amounted to thirty-three shillings. The next toast proposed from the chair was that of "The Visitors." The W.M. said this was one always well received by the High Cross Lodge. Scarcely a meeting passed but they had a goodly array of visitors. On the present occasion they did not fall short, but had many visitors around them, all of whom were welcome. He considered that the lodge would hardly be complete without its array of visitors. With the toast the W.M. coupled the name of Bro. Driscoll. That brother, in reply, said: It will be my endeavour to do as much justice to the toast as will, I hope, satisfy my brother visitors. If the reception accorded this evening is an indication of the usual welcome given by the members of the High Cross Lodge, we can only hope for another invitation. For myself, I am an old hand, having been present at the anniversaries of the lodge for several years past. One thing I have noticed with pleasure at this lodge is the interest taken in its affairs by the Past Masters. On the present occasion I hear there is only one absent, and he, I believe, is far from home or would be among us. This fact must be a great pleasure to you all, and the way in which the brethren who have passed the chair are honoured should be an incentive to young members to take an interest in the lodge. The W.M. in giving the next toast said it was one that would doubtless be new to most of those present. That day happened to be the twenty-first anniversary of the establishment of the High Cross Lodge. Most of those around him could form their own opinion of the position of the lodge at the present time, but few could remember what was its condition at the time of its formation. They had one brother, however, who could tell them something on the subject, he having been the first initiate. The W.M. hoped that in another twenty-one years' time the lodge would number on its roll twice as many brethren as at the present time, and that it would ever remain in a flourishing condition. He then called upon the brethren to drink to "The Prosperity of the High Cross Lodge," coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Steedman, who was initiated on the night of its consecration, twenty-one years since. Bro. Steedman said: Brethren, you have thought proper to associate my name with a very peculiar toast, and I feel very peculiar in rising to respond to it. Our lodge was founded 21 years since, next Friday being the anniversary of its consecration. If you refer to the warrant you will find that at first the meetings were held every fortnight. This was continued for about three years, at which time the lodge found itself in debt to the extent of £250. I could recite other difficulties that the lodge has gone through, but will content myself, as we are now only concerned with its prosperous career. Bro. Steedman concluded by wishing that the lodge might be in as good a position twenty-one years hence as it was then, and trusted he might be there to see it. "The Health of the Past Masters" was next given, the W.M. referring to the great interest shown in the lodge by those who had passed the chair. He stated that he had received a letter from their only absent P.M., explaining that ill-health precluded his undertaking a long journey in order to be with them, but he hoped that at no distant date he would again be among the members present at their regular assemblies. The W.M. expressed his pleasure at having so large a Board of Masters to assist at his installation, and considered it something for the lodge to be proud of when eleven of its own Past Masters came to assist in placing a new Mason in the chair they each in turn had filled. He felt he could rely on their support during the term of his presidency. Bro. Wells was the first to reply. He tendered the heartiest thanks of the Past Masters for the way in which they were at all times received, and hoped that the newly-installed Master would be enabled to conduct the affairs of the lodge with satisfaction—he could assure the W.M. that he would at all times have the co-operation of those who had preceded him in the chair. Bro. Dance followed to the same purport, specially referring to the indebtedness of the lodge to Bro. Cunningham, P.M., the Secretary, who had, he said, faithfully discharged his duties for the whole of the time he had filled the position. The toast of "The Treasurer and Secretary" followed. The W.M. was extremely gratified at having two such worthy brethren to rely on. Bro. Treasurer replied, thanking the company for the way in which the mention of the names of the Treasurer and Secretary had been received. He had, he said, watched the lodge for a matter of twenty years, and was pleased to see it now in so prosperous a condition. Bro. Secretary followed, adding his thanks. Although it was some time since he had raised his voice to express his thanks for the kindness of the members it was not that he had not thanked them. He did so at all times, and only hoped he might continue to deserve the respect and esteem of his brethren that he now enjoyed. The work of Secretary of the lodge was no light task, but the thanks which he received from the members from time to time were ample to repay any little trouble he went to in carrying out the duties of his office. The toast of "The Press" was next given, and the proceedings terminated with the Tyler's toast.

GATESHEAD.—Lodge of Industry (No. 48).—The regular meeting of this well known lodge was held at 34, Denmark-street, on Monday, the 25th inst., when the W.M., Bro. Robt. Whitfield, was assisted by the officers as follows:—Bros. M. Corbitt, I.P.M.; R. B. Reed, P.M.; John Wood, S.W.; John Duckitt, acting J.W.; W. Brewis Elsdon, Treas.; Edw. Liddell, Sec.; E. W. Middlemast, S.D.; John Mout, J.D.; Jos. Boyatt, I.G.; R. Ferry, Org.; J. C. S. Liddle, S.S.; J. W. A. Boyatt, A.S.; and Joshua Curry, Tyler. Amongst the brethren of the lodge and the visitors present were:—Bros. Jacob Mathews, Matthew Swinburne, Jas. Liddle, B. P. Ord, I.P.M. 1527; Jos. Cook, P.M. 481, P.P.G.S.W.; J. F. Taylor, P.M. 1676; T. S. Wraith, P.M. 1643; John Duckitt, Jun., S.W. 481; R. A. Forster, 481; E. A. Gibson, 424; G. S. Sims, 1342; T. O. Smith, 991; T. McDermott, 24; E. Marston, J.D. 1676; W. H. Dunn, 1676; and others. The lodge was opened in due form shortly after 7 p.m. by the W.M., after which the ballot was taken for Mr. Donald McLeod, who was duly elected. The candidate being in attendance was regularly initiated into the mysteries of the First Degree by the W.M. The working tools were explained by the acting J.W., and the charge was given in an impressive manner by the S.W. Bro. Matthew Swinburne afterwards was examined as to his proficiency, received the test of merit, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, when Bro. Swinburne was admitted and passed to the degree of F.C. by the W.M. The S.W. explained the working tools. The lodge was again closed down to the First Degree, when the W.M. received the "Hearty good wishes" of the visiting brethren. There were three candidates proposed for initiation during the evening. The lodge was closed shortly after nine p.m., when an adjournment was made for refreshment, and, in spite of the very hot weather, an enjoyable evening was spent in harmony. The usual round of Masonic toasts was given and responded to. The first ballot of the second tontine for Life Governorships to the Masonic Charities was given in favour of Bro. G. S. Sims. The lodge appears to be in a thriving condition, judging from the quality and quantity of the new members, and we are pleased to see that it keeps up its reputation for good work.

GATESHEAD-ON-TYNE.—Borough Lodge (No. 424).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 18th inst., at Mr. Thomas Pearson's, Half Moon Hotel, High-street, Bro. Jesse Marchant, P.M., W.M., presiding, assisted by the following brethren:—Bros. A. G. Anderson, P.M., S.W.; John Mackay, J.W.; W. F. Poat, Sec.; John F. Boyes, S.D.; E. A. Gibson, acting J.D.; G. W. Wealleans, I.G. There were also present Bros. John Beeby, Joseph Probert, P.M.; Robt. Nicholson, John Shipley, T. S. Miller, Robt. Colquhoun, and William Colquhoun. Visitors: Bros. Jacob Mathews, 48; M. J. Wheatley, 48; J. Boyett, I.G. 48; J. Usher, W.M. 481; Thos. Prentice, S.D. 481; William Healey, 405; M. H. Dodd, J.D. 1119; J. E. Macdonald, 124; J. J. Taylor, P.M. 1676; Jos. Cook, P.M., P.P.G.S.W. Northumberland, 481 and Thomas Smith, P.M. 541. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second, or Fellow Craft Degree, when Bro. T. Prichard was examined as to his proficiency ere being raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The lodge was then raised to the Third Degree, when Bro. Prichard was re-admitted, and was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. by the W.M., Bro. Marchant, in such a way so as to elicit great praise from all present. Bro. John Mackay, J.W., explained the working tools in his usual and careful manner. The lodge was closed from the Third down to the First Degree. "Hearty good wishes" were then expressed by the numerous visitors, and the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren afterwards assembled at the social board, where the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the brethren separated after having spent a most pleasant evening.

ERITH.—St. John and St. Paul's Lodge (No. 615).—The installation meeting of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at the Avenue Hall, and was a most brilliant and impressive affair throughout. The hall was nicely decorated with flags and appropriate mottoes on tastefully designed shields, and over the Master's chair hung the silken banner of the lodge. Outside the hall, and across the road, fluttered variously coloured flags, imparting an air of festivity and welcome to the scene that had the effect intended. The brethren began to assemble soon after 3 o'clock, and then the W.M., Bro. G. W. Churchley, took the chair, and the lodge was duly opened. The minutes of the past meeting were read and passed. The lodge was then closed for refreshment, and after a short time resumed for labour again. Among the company present, besides the W.M., were Bros. F. Binckes, Sec. Boys' School, &c.; Dr. Spurrell, P.M., W.M. 829 and P.P.J.W. Kent; T. W. Knight, P.M. and P.P. Dir. of Cer. Kent; E. Macknay, P.M., 299, and P.P.G.P. Kent; T. Smith, P.M. and Treas. 829 and P.P.G.P. Kent; J. R. Foord, W.M. 503 and P.G.S. Kent; R. Stone, S.W. and W.M. elect; F. Fletcher, J.W.; R. G. Stone, Sec.; E. Tomkins, S.D.; G. Fletcher, J.D.; C. L. Boardman, I.G.; S. Chittenden, J. Hutton, W. Hills, J. Allud, J. C. Sheffield, and C. Bishop, all of the lodge; W. W. Medcalf, W.M. 1671; C. Eltham, W.M. 1827; H. Tuff, W.M. 1273; W. Barlow, W.M. 77; G. H. Cruell, P.M. 1050; T. Best, P.M. 700 &

J. Brown, P.M. 1066; J. Scott Mutch, P.M. 706; J. J. Michael, P.M. 1107; J. Rowland, P.M. 700; R. J. Warren, J.W. 1671; R. Challoner, Sec. 1178; H. King, 1622; J. Hart, 503; H. Fletcher, 1732; W. Canty, 913; J. Boulden, 1050; J. S. Randall, 1089 and 913; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason), and others. The lodge having been resumed, Bro. Stone was presented to the Installing Officer, Bro. Churchley, for the benefit of installation, and having consented to the ancient charge, a Board of Installed Officers was formed, and he was with the usual honours installed in the chair of K.S. The brethren then saluted and Bro. Churchley invested the officers as follows: Bros. E. Tomkins, S.W.; J. Fletcher, J.W.; H. H. Poole, Treas.; G. Churchley, P.M., Sec.; R. G. Stone, S.D.; J. Hutton, J.D.; C. Bishop, Org.; W. Hill, I.G.; J. C. Sheffield, Steward; S. Chittenden, D.C.; and Martin, Tyler. The three addresses were delivered by Bro. Churchley, whose fine declamation was rewarded with the unstinted applause of the brethren at its conclusion. Bro. Knight, P.M., was then unanimously re-elected to represent the lodge at the Provincial Charitable meetings. It was then proposed by Bro. Knight, seconded by Bro. Spurrell, and carried unanimously, that a vote of thanks should be tendered to Bro. Churchley for the splendid manner in which he had that day carried out the duties of Installing Officer, the same to be inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge. Bro. Churchley briefly returned thanks, and after "Hearty good wishes" had been given from representatives of every lodge present, the lodge was closed. The musical part of the ceremony was under the charge of Bro. C. Bishop, who with Bros. Cliff White and J. Fletcher, sang from the "Liber Musicus" the service incidental to the installation ceremony in excellent style. The "Liber Musicus" used was presented to the lodge by Bro. Churchley. The banquet took place at the Prince of Wales Hotel, and was in every respect a most delightful one. The room, however, was rather small, and we heard complaints of the difficulty felt by some of the brethren in being served, however, Bro. R. G. Stone was indefatigable in looking after the comfort of every one, his efforts, like the hospitality as displayed in the menu, being simply unbounded. After dinner the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were enthusiastically honoured and responded to. The W.M. then, in glowing terms, proposed the toast of "The Prov. G.M., Lord Holmesdale, Bro. Eastes, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Present and Past," which was duly honoured. The name of Bro. Spurrell was coupled with the toast. Bro. Spurrell, in reply, said he was proud of having his name connected with so important a toast. It would be impossible for him to tell them one-tenth of the amount of work done by Lord Holmesdale and Bro. Eastes for the wellbeing of the Craft, and Freemasonry in general in the province. He was exceedingly sorry that he was not able personally to attend the late Prov. Grand meeting at Maidstone, but had been to a meeting the day previous. When he was in office he attended a great many of the lodge meetings in the province, and had always met with a most flattering reception, which showed him that the Masons of Kent were loyal to those placed in position by the Prov. G.M. He had nothing very new to tell them, but must heartily thank them for the hearty manner in which the toast had been proposed and received. Bro. Churchley then proposed "The Health of the W.M." He said it would be an evil day for the lodge when the health of its W.M. was passed over, especially upon such an occasion as the present. It was not the custom to appoint W.M.'s in that lodge unless the brethren were sure those so appointed could, and would, do their duty. Their W.M. was, however, but mortal, and it was impossible for mortals to attain perfection, but they loved him so that if there were any faults they would not see them, but rather magnify his good qualifications. He could assure him in their name that anything he undertook—and in most things he undertook he succeeded—that would be for the benefit of the lodge, he would be supported by the brethren to the utmost, particularly in carrying out those grand principles upon which Freemasonry was founded. From the first time Bro. Stone had set his foot inside that lodge up to the present he had never been wanting in his efforts for its success, and there had never been a call upon his purse that had not been answered in a most kind, hearty, and brotherly spirit, and, therefore, he wished to assure him that during his year of office he could not call upon any brother of the lodge to carry out his wishes in any way without that brother feeling a pride and pleasure in so doing. He (Bro. Churchley) felt an especial pride in proposing this toast, because their esteemed W.M. was his father in Freemasonry, but to-day he (W.M.) was his "little boy." Bro. Stone, after thanking them for the toast, said it should be his constant endeavour to carry out the duties entrusted to him in every shape and form. He then presented a valuable Past Master's jewel to Bro. Churchley in the name of the lodge, as a token of the respect and esteem in which he is held by the members, and in pinning it on his breast, said nothing could have given him greater pleasure than the task now placed in his hands. He wished Bro. Churchley many years of life to wear it, for none could have more fairly earned it, or more deserved to wear it. The toast of "The Past Masters" was then given, and, in responding, Bro. Churchley said he had many things to be thankful to them for, not the least was their kindness in presenting him with the handsome jewel so kindly tendered to him by their W.M. He should always wear it with a deal of pride and satisfaction, because he felt sure that if he had not deserved it they would not have given it to him. He must congratulate the lodge upon its vitality; there was a time when it seemed destined to an early extinction, but, thanks to some of its members, in now was prosperous and flourishing, and what might it not yet accomplish? If they could do these things in the green, what might they not do in the dry? For himself, he should as long as he lived remember with pleasure the universal kindness he had received from every member of the lodge. This was an especially happy evening: here harmony and brotherly love prevailed, and every one must feel that here at least he was in good hands. He trusted their esteemed Master might have a good and prosperous year of office, and concluded by again thanking them for their hearty good wishes. The toast of "The Visitors" followed, and Bros. Barlow and Michael replied. Bro. Binckes was then honoured as the representative of the Masonic Charities, and was enthusiastically received. Bro. Churchley, in putting the toast, spoke highly of the energy, zeal, and tact displayed by Bro. Binckes in his office as Secretary of the Boys' School, and of the great and good work done by him for the cause of charity generally. Bro. Binckes, in reply, said he was an old member of the lodge before it became in a state almost of decay. This lodge used to be conspicuous for the large amount it gave to Masonic Charities, and now he asked them to think of the Boys' School, and not at the next festival, in June, 1880, to be conspicuous by their absence. If time had permitted, he had intended to have made a most elaborate speech, but he could not give it that night because the trains would not wait, but he would thank them in the first place for their kind reception of the toast, and in the next for their reception of him as the representative of the Masonic Charities, more especially the Boys' School. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and was responded to. "The Health of the Treasurer" was made a special toast, and Bro. Poole, who had held the office for some time, now met with a most flattering reception when his name was mentioned. Bro. Jolly responded for "The Masonic Press," and then the Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings. The musical arrangements were entirely in the hands of Bro. C. Bishop, who, with Miss Matilda Roby, of the Royal Academy of Music, and Bro. Cliff White, sung a choice selection of ballads.

DERBY.—Arboretum Lodge (No. 731).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Derby, on Wednesday, the 13th inst. Bro. G. T. Wright, P.P.J.G.W., as W.M. (in the absence of Bro. W. Cooper, W.M., who was unavoidably absent from the town), Bro. J. C. Merry, P.P.G.D. of C., as S.W.; Wm. Whittaker, J.W.; W. H. Burton, Treas.; G. Cay, Sec.; J. Bland, S.D.; James King, J.D.; Thos. Day, D.C.; C. Webster, I.G.; E. Horne and Jas. Copstick, Stewards; E. Holden, Tyler; John Brown, P.M., P.G.J.D.; James Taylor, P.M.; Thos. Cox, P.M., P.P.S.G.W.; John Smith, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; F. L. Smith, H. Fowkes, P.M.; W. W. Poplewell, T. Carter Wigg, P.M.; H. H. Lewis, William Knight, Visitors: Bros. A. Schofield, P.M. 1028; Wm. Rowbottom, 1028; E. R. Ward, W.M. 253; Thos. Hughes, 103; J. B. Coulson, P.M. 253; J. O. Manton, J.W. 1085; A. J. Waller, 802; and H. Glover, 802. The lodge was opened at 7.15, and the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. After the election of two candidates for Freemasonry, the W.M. opened the lodge in the Second Degree. The lodge was then advanced to the Third Degree. The W.M. said that he would at once proceed to the principal business of the evening, which was to listen to a lecture, which they were all expecting with very great interest, from one of the visiting brethren. The subject was one which he (the W.M.) had studied, and in which he found an inexhaustible and fascinating charm. He would at once introduce to them Bro. W. Rowbottom, the orator of the evening. Bro. Wm. Rowbottom, Royal Alfred Lodge, 1028, rose to deliver his lecture, entitled "The Great Pyramid of Egypt; its Masonic Origin and Teaching." It should be said, in passing, that for the intellectual treat afforded by this lecture the lodge is indebted to Bro. H. Barn, P.M., by whose influence it was arranged some months ago, but the somewhat heavy work of the lodge prevented its earlier delivery, and it speaks highly for the character of the lecture, and the strong interest felt in the subject, that at this holiday season so many brethren attended, some from long distances. One of the most remarkable signs of the progressive state of Masonry in the present day seems to be that we are not content to limit our attention exclusively to speculative Masonry, the ordinary and beautiful ceremonies of our ritual, or the attractions of the Fourth Degree, but there is an increasing desire to penetrate and study the historic work and teachings of our ancient brethren in the far-off ages of the past, in which they left their mark upon the world, "in records that defy the tooth of time." It is quite impossible in a short report to give anything like a fair resumé of this admirable lecture, which was delivered quite orally and in the number of figures and statistics proved Bro. Rowbottom's memory to be one of the most retentive. In eloquent language the lecturer showed how architecture "is the printing press of all the ages," giving the Masonic history of every time, from the Pyramids of the Pharaohs to the cathedrals of our own day. The theory and construction of the Great Pyramid, and its dependence on the proportions of the square and circle, were dwelt with in a masterly manner, proving clearly their connection with Masonic ritual and teaching. By observing the tendencies of analogous formations, it is most interesting to trace the links in the design of this wonderful and mysterious structure, and their intimate connection with general Masonic laws. Every great national architecture "is the manly language of a people inspired by resolute and common sense," and rendering resolute and common fidelity to the legible laws of an undoubted Great Architect of the Universe. In summarising the symbolical teaching of the mystic numbers in the cubic measurements of the passages leading to the centre, or king's chamber—the corner stone—the grand base and apex of this four-square pyramid, or perfect pentagon, the lecturer concluded by proving an eloquent parallel between the time of its construction, and the days of the later Temple, in the course of which the chronological symbolism of the passages was explained, and its result applied to the sacred narrative. In an eloquent peroration, showing how all this ancient symbolism, worked in imperishable stone, which time ever consecrates, and which, though grey with age, still more eloquently teaches—illustrating the unity and consistency of that old and illustrious brotherhood, whose immemorial watchwords have been "Love, Relief, and Truth"—the speaker brought his most interesting lecture to a close. Bro. Whittaker, J.W., proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Rowbottom for his exceedingly interesting and instructive lecture. For his own part he had been delighted to listen to it, and, judging from the rapt attention of the lodge, he had no doubt he was expressing the sentiments of every brother present. Bro. Taylor, P.M., seconded, and the vote was carried unanimously. Bro. Wm. Rowbottom, in reply, said that it had given him great pleasure to be present that evening with the Arboretum Lodge; and if anything had given him more gratification than another it was the great attention with which the brethren had been pleased to receive his lecture. At the conclusion of the business of the evening, the W.M. received the "Hearty good wishes" of the visitors, and the lodge was closed in harmony. The brethren then adjourned to supper, Bro. G. T. Wright, P.M., in the chair. After the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily received. After a most enjoyable evening, interspersed with excellent songs and instrumental music, amongst which ought to be especially mentioned an inimitable flute solo by a distinguished brother, the Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren separated.

WALTHAM.—King Harold Lodge (No. 1327).—The installation meeting of this prosperous country lodge was held at the Britannia Hotel, on Thursday, the 21st inst. Owing to the bad state of the weather on that day, the muster was not so great as was anticipated, but still a goodly array of brethren assembled to do honour to the occasion. Amongst the members present were the following: V.W. Bro. F. H. Wilson Iles, D.P.G.M. Herts; Bros. A. Malcolm, W.M., P.P.G.P. Herts; S. Jacobs, S.W., W.M. elect; J. Knight, J.W.; E. Reilly, Past Provincial Grand Officers of Hertfordshire, to meet Bros. F. H. Wilson Iles, Dep. P.G.M., and J. E. Dawson, P.G. Sec. Herts, at the railway station, and on the arrival of these distinguished brethren at the lodge house, they were conducted in ancient form into lodge, and had due honours paid to them, Bro. P.M. West acting as D.C. Two gentlemen were duly invested, viz., Mr. J. Shuter and Mr. George Sampson. The installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. S. Jacobs, was very ably proceeded with by the W.M., Bro. A. Malcolm, P.P.G.P. Herts, assisted by Bro. E. West, P.M. and P.P.G.D. Herts, the Board of Installing Masters numbering twelve. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bro. A. Malcolm, I.P.M.; J. Knight, S.W.; J. Fisher, J.W.; E. West, P.M., Treasurer; T. Reilly, P.M., Secretary; J. Noyes, S.D.; J. Robinson, J.D.; J. Gaskell, P.M., D.C.; W. W. Pritchett, P.P.G. Org. Herts, Org.; W. A. Rogers, I.G.; J. Lumsden, W.S.; W. Lewis, W.S.; and W. Steedman, Tyler. The lodge was closed, and the brethren retired to banquet, which was very neatly served up. The effect of the floral decorations was heightened by a contribution of some very choice plants by Bro. Fred. Drummond, P.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly honoured. The Dep. P.G.M. Herts, Bro. Iles, in responding for "The Provincial Officers," was pleased to express his hearty approval of the manner in which he found the business of the King Harold Lodge conducted. A Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. A. Malcolm, the retiring W.M., in token of the esteem in which he was held by the brethren of the lodge. Bro. Malcolm thanked the brethren in an able speech. The Tyler's toast brought a pleasant evening to a close, which was enlivened by very good harmony.

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge (No. 1353).—This lodge held its regular lodge meeting at the Masonic Rooms on Wednesday evening, the 20th inst., when there were present Bros. James Ellershaw, W.M.; W. Parker, S.W.; H. Hartley, J.W.; J. Acton, P.M., Hon Sec.; R. Cleminson, S.D.; Jos. D. Belc, J.D.; J. E. Oglethorpe, Org.; William Huntington, S.S.; P. Dutton, J.S.; C. J. W. The lodge was opened in the Second, there were two candidates for the Third Degree. Bro. J. Ellershaw, W.M., raised one, and Bro. J. Acton, P.M., Sec., raised the other. The W.M. gave the historical, the charge, the lecture and the working tools. Thus a good, long, and enjoyable evening was spent, and the lodge was closed at 10 o'clock p.m.

OKEHAMPTON.—Obedience Lodge (No. 1753).—The first annual installation of W.M. of this lodge, held at the White Hart Hotel, took place on Monday, the 25th inst. The lodge was consecrated on the 26th August of last year, on which day the Grand Lodge of the province was held at Okehampton. That was the last Provincial Grand Lodge at which Bro. the Rev. John Huyshe presided, and Obedience Lodge was the last lodge which Bro. Huyshe consecrated. There was a large gathering of Freemasons from all parts of the county; and, as this was the first lodge constituted in Okehampton, the proceedings created a great deal of interest. The lodge was founded mainly through the efforts of Bro. William Brodie, then W.M. of Semper Fidelis Lodge, 1254, who was installed its first Master. He, however, received considerable assistance from members of the Craft resident in the town. In April last, when the appointment of Viscount Ebrington as P.G.M. (in the room of Bro. Huyshe, resigned through age and infirmity) was notified, the Obedience Lodge passed a complimentary resolution to the R.W. brother, reminding him that he presided at his last Provincial Grand Lodge in Okehampton, and that Obedience was the last lodge that he consecrated. The lodge has flourished with considerable vigour during the twelve months of its existence, and it now numbers twenty members. There were seven initiations and three members joined from other lodges. Monday's proceedings commenced about 2.30 o'clock, a large number of visiting brethren being present, amongst whom were Bros. W. Brodie, P.P.J.G.D.; B. Barker, P.G.A.D.C., I.P.M.; Rev. C. W. H. Holley, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. J. R. Nankivell, P.P.G. Chaplain; H. M. Body, P.P.S.G.D.; G. C. Bignell, P.P.G. Supt. of Works; W. Pidsley, W.M. 1254, P.G.S.; J. W. Boon, J.W., W.M. elect; G. W. Gould, Sec.; A. J. G. Waters, S.D.; J. J. Ball, J.D.; A. Paddoo, I.G.; W. Burd, Taverner, Brendon, Trelliving, J. Wood, W. Yeo, C. Dacie, J. Horswell, Nos. 39, 106, and 1254; John D. Barker, 70; F. C. Hallett, 303; L. A. Stockham Myrten, 619; J. B. Elliott, 773; F. W. Brodie, 1254; S. Palmer, 1254; Thos. J. Smith, I.P.M. 1255; Lewis J. Hudd 1426; Dr. Pears, 1753 and 1550. The lodge having been duly formed and opened, Bro. James William Boon was installed W.M. for the ensuing year in the customary way, and he was heartily congratulated on his taking the chair. Bro. Brodie performed the duties of Installing Master. Bro. Boon then appointed the following as his officers for the year:—Bros. W. Brodie, I.P.M.; the Rev. C. W. H. Holley, S.W.; G. W. Gould, J.W.; R. T. Relf, Treasurer; J. Ball, Sec.; W. Burd, S.D.; W. Yeo, J.D.; John Wood, I.G.; and J. Coombe, Tyler. The next business was the presenting to the retiring W.M., Bro. Brodie, of an elegant and chaste gold Past Master's jewel, subscribed for by the members of the lodge. The jewel bore the name and number of the lodge, and on the riband the arms of the Borough of Okehampton in gold and coloured enamel relief. The back of the jewel bore the following inscription, "Presented to Bro. William Brodie, P.P.J.G.D., by the Officers and Brethren of Lodge Obedience, No. 1753, Okehampton, in appreciation of his services rendered as first W.M." In making the presentation Bro. Boon said it was a most pleasing duty to him. The lodge had only been established twelve months, and Bro. Brodie had worked zealously for its interests, and had spared neither trouble nor expense to make it prosperous. In recognition of his energy, his brethren asked his acceptance of that handsome jewel as a memento of his year of office, believing that he would feel proud to wear it. The lodge freely acknowledged its obligations to Bro. Brodie, and the gift was made with their heartiest good wishes. What Bro. Brodie had done in the past they felt sure he would continue to do in the future, and that the gift would be regarded as a mark of their respect. Bro. Brodie, in acknowledging the great compliment paid him, warmly thanked the W.M. and the brethren of the lodge for their handsome and valuable present, and assured them that it would be always highly prized by him as an expression of their goodwill and esteem, and as a proof of their appreciation of his services. His work in the lodge had been a source of great pleasure, and altogether a labour of love. A good deal of time and trouble had been expended upon it, but he had been far more than repaid by that substantial gift, and by their kind feelings towards him. The jewel would ever remind him of the liberality of the brethren, and of the pleasant time he had spent amongst them, and he desired nothing more than the prosperity of Lodge Obedience. Bro. Boon said that there were two other brethren—Bros. Barber and Pidsley—who were also entitled to their warmest thanks for the great assistance they had lent during the past year respectively as I.P.M. and S.W. They, too, had been instrumental in bringing the lodge to its present successful state, and in retiring from office the brethren desired them to accept a small jewel each, which he handed to them. Although the gifts were small, they were presented with the best and grateful thanks of the members. Bros. Barber and Pidsley briefly acknowledged the compliment paid them, and remarked that they would continue to take the warmest interest in the prosperity of the lodge. Before closing the lodge, Bro. Boon said he had a melancholy duty to perform, and that was to inform the brethren of the death, on the previous day, of Bro. Sydenham James, who had only a short time been made a member of that lodge, and to ask their sympathy for the orphan son and daughter who were left to mourn their loss. Bro. James only left the town a few days before in apparently good health, but he was taken ill and had died at a distance from his home. The funeral would take place on Tuesday, at four o'clock, and he would like to meet at the lodge as many brethren as could make it convenient, for the purpose of following his remains to the grave, and of performing a last mark of respect for their departed brother. The installation banquet was afterwards held in an adjoining room, when about thirty of the brethren sat down to a repast, which was served by Bro. Ball in a style which gave the most unqualified satisfaction. Bro. Boon presided, and was supported on the left by the I.P.M. The toast list commenced with "The Queen and the Craft," which was given by the Chairman, who followed with "The M.W. the Grand Master of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," "The Pro and Deputy G.M.'s, and the rest of the Grand Officers," and "The Provincial Grand Master of Devon, and the P.G. Officers, Present and Past." The name of Bro. the Rev. J. Huyshe was heartily received, and it was feelingly alluded to by the Chairman. Bro. Boon said that Bro. Huyshe paid that lodge a great compliment in coming to consecrate it last year when he was so aged and infirm. He had also greatly honoured Bro. Brodie in heading the subscription list for the jewel with a donation, but it was also a compliment to the lodge. That a little place like Okehampton should attract such notice was very gratifying, and would tend to make the lodge even more successful than it had already proved to be. Bros. Holly and Barber responded, and the latter feelingly alluded to Bro. Metham, P.D.P.G.M. of the province, whose name was received with much applause. In conclusion Bro. Barber proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Installing Master, Bro. Brodie." He said that no one was more entitled to their thanks than the Installing Master for the admirable way in which he had performed his duties that day, and for the deep interest he had taken in the lodge since its foundation. Bro. Brodie not only had won the good feeling and respect of the brethren in Okehampton, but of members of the Craft throughout the country, and especially at Exeter in his own lodge. His only fault was perhaps that he was a little over-zealous. Bro. Barber then read a letter from Bro. Huyshe, in which he paid a high compliment to the Installing Master and to the lodge, and the speaker suggested that a copy of it should be made in the minutes. Bro. Brodie, in reply, returned thanks for the manner in which the toast had been received, and said it would be his study to deserve all the kind things that had been said of him. Provincial honours had early come to the lodge, no less than four brethren in the room owing their provincial collars to the foundation of Lodge Obedience. In conclusion, he proposed "Health, Long Life, and Prosperity to the Worshipful Master, Bro. Boon." The Chairman, in response, remarked that he had been twenty years a Mason, having been initiated in Lodge Benevolence, No. 303, at Teignmouth, in which he attained the dignity of Senior Warden, but he declined to take the chair. He had come to Okehampton, and had helped to form that lodge, the chair of which he had been prevailed upon to take with great reluctance. He highly appreciated all their kindnesses, and the honour so many visiting brethren did him in being present. He hoped to prove himself worthy of their confidence, and to obtain the hearty support of all his officers and brethren. He trusted that the lodge would prosper under his rule, and that neither he nor they would have any cause for regret when he left the chair. The Chairman then proposed "The Health of the Officers," to which all of those present responded. Bro. Holley said that he was initiated twelve years ago in the Apollo University Lodge, but he then thought that Freemasonry would never be much use to him. When, however, he became the rector of a large parish, he found that his connection with the Craft brought him into real brotherly love and connection with a large number of his parishioners and neighbours. Bro. Boon proposed "The Health of the Visiting Brethren," to which Bros. Hallett, Nankivell, Barker, and Hudd responded. "Our Poor and Distressed Brethren," brought the toast-list to a termination. The death of Bro. James threw a gloom over the whole of the proceedings for the day, and the greatest sympathy was expressed for his relatives.

BRIGHTON.—Ailingworth Lodge (No. 1821).—The first regular meeting of this recently consecrated lodge (a full report of which appeared in our issue of July 26th) was held on Friday, the 22nd inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion, Brighton, at five o'clock. Godfree, the Secretary, had been read and confirmed, ballots were taken separately for the following gentlemen as candidates for initiation:—Messrs. J. B. Macfarlane, A. Loader, W. J. Bramwell, R. Allison, J. B. Hannay, John Field, R. A. Pearce, Thos. Berry, R. Burfield, and R. Hayler, all of whom were unanimously elected. Two joining members were elected by ballot—Bros. A. Macfarlane, Loader, Bramwell, and Allison, being in attendance, were separately initiated into Freemasonry by the W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. G. Smith, Past Master 732, and the charge after initiation was given in a most impressive manner, eliciting the warmest commendation of the brethren, by Bro. C. J. Smith, P.M. and W.M. 1466. The lodge was called to refreshment, which was served in the ante-room. On the lodge being resumed the Bye-laws Committee presented their report, which, after a short discussion, was approved and passed. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and three brethren for election as joining members. During the evening the W.M. announced that Bro. Edwin Booth had most kindly presented the lodge with a very handsome set of folding Tracing Boards, mounted in oak, and a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the donor for his very thoughtful and useful gift. All business being ended, the lodge was closed, and an emergency meeting was held next day, at three o'clock p.m., when there were present the W.M., Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.M., Past Provincial S.G.W. Middlesex; Bros. James Robertson, S.W.; H. G. Martin, P.M. 404, P. Provincial J.G.W. Herts, J.W.; Godfree, Sec.; J. M. Stones, P.M. 56, S.D.; W. Newsome, J.D.; S. P. Weston, I.G.; Paige, Steward; S. John Field, Thos. Berry, B. Burfield, R. Hayler, and R. A. Pearce being in attendance, were separately initiated into Freemasonry, the work being well done by the W.M. and his officers. The charge was again most effectively delivered by Bro. C. J. Smith, P.M. and W.M. 1466. All business being ended the lodge was closed in perfect harmony. The brethren and visitors, nearly thirty in number, adjourned to the Unicorn Hotel, North-street, where Bro. Paige, Steward, had provided a first-class dinner, which reflected great credit on the resources of this hotel. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the after dinner proceedings enlivened by songs and recitations. The company separated shortly before 11 o'clock, fully impressed with the vitality of the Ailingworth Lodge, which under its present management bids fair to be a well worked and successful lodge.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DEVONSHIRE.

The installation of Viscount Ebrington as Provincial Grand Master of Devonshire, in succession to the Rev. John Huyshe and the late Earl Fortescue, the present P.G.M.'s grandfather, is an interesting event in the annals of Freemasonry; and the meeting on Thursday, the 14th inst., in the Victoria Hall, Exeter, very fairly represented, both as regards the numbers of the brethren in attendance and their earnest unanimity, how strongly they feel in testifying their respect to those most able administrators of the Province of Devon, within the memory of the ancients of this present generation. The reports so ably furnished in the Freemason and other journals, north, south, east, and west, especially in Devonshire—all prove the existence of the same spirit of devotion to the interests of Freemasonry in the West of England. Where all has been so admirable it would be invidious to make comparisons except for the generous purpose of promoting nobler rivalry. We refer our readers to the journal before-named for a detailed account of the general proceedings, beginning with the muster at the Victoria Hall, Exeter, to the banquet's termination at the Public Rooms. It is satisfactory to find that the Masonic Charities, as reported by the Committee of Petitions, have been enabled to continue their aid to the aged members of the Craft, and the widows of deceased Masons, as well as to the orphans, male and female, of brethren requiring pecuniary aid. We may heartily congratulate the venerable and beloved Past Prov. G.M. of Devon, Bro. Huyshe, that he has reaped so ample an harvest even during his life-time, and feel assured that his remaining years will be most gratefully refreshed by the recollections of his Masonic labours of love. The golden chain of office, which he handed to be placed on the neck of his successor, Viscount Ebrington, young in years, but earnest to acquire experience, emblematises the more secret but not less desired linked affections of the general brethren, whether young or old, or whatever their circumstances. We conclude these remarks by the following lines, dedicated to Freemasonry in Devonshire:—

Descend, blest Spirit! from the realms of bliss,
As when Elijah mounted to the sky,
Nor let the soaring thought be aught amiss,
Which humbly prays thine aid for Masonry!
Descend! though not by falling mantle seen,
Nor bid us gaze, by anxious straining sight;

But rather let our judgment truly deem,
The golden yoke of office may be light!
Light as the labours of a well-spent life,
That tread the steps of faith, hope, charity;
So speed thou, Bro. Huyshe, o'er earth's strife,
To God's grand mansions of eternity!
And may the golden chain of tender love,
Bequeathed for Bro. "Ebrington" to wear,
Be like a charming faculty to move,
Each heart Masonic from a weight of care!

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF DEVONSHIRE.

Langmead, J.O. 16; W. Collins, J.D. 48; J. D. Barker, O. 50; Geo. Mitchell, I.G. 50.

At the Board of General Purposes there were present R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. J. Tanner Davy, W. Bros. Hon. W. Hylton-Jolliffe, C. Godtschalk, V. Bird, W. Vicary, S. Jew, J. B. Gover, and L. D. Westcott.

The accounts were audited, and showed an available balance for disposal of over £44.

The Board resolved to recommend a vote of forty guineas to the Devon Educational Fund, and "That the said sum be given in the name of the R.W. the P.G.M. for the time being, thus giving him fifty votes for the disposal of the fund for twenty years."

A brisk discussion on that proposition occurred between the members of the Board, some of them considering the vote proposed too large, and recommending that the amount should be reduced to twenty guineas. The majority, however, determined on recommending forty guineas.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was subsequently opened, and the admission of brethren became general.

The P.G. Secretary (V.W. Bro. Bird) reported that the returns of all the lodges in the province had been sent in with the exception of the Pleiades Lodge, No. 26, at Totnes, which, it was feared, was hopelessly dormant.

The P.G. Treasurer (Bro. Vicary) reported that the receipts for the year had been £33 0s. 6d., which, added to a balance in hand from the previous year of £23 2s. 7d., made total receipts of £52 13s. 1d. The payments had been £8 1s. 3d., leaving a balance in hand of £44 11s. 10d.

The P.G. Secretary read the report of the Board of General Purposes.

W. Bro. Gover proposed that the Board's recommendation should be carried out, and forty guineas voted to the Devon Educational Fund.

W. Bro. W. Hylton-Jolliffe seconded the proposition.

W. Bro. C. Godtschalk proposed an amendment that the vote should only be for twenty guineas. He thought it unadvisable to vote away the whole of the available balance to a local fund. When the Devon Educational Fund was being established it was asserted that it would not in any way interfere with the support of the London Great Masonic Charities, but if the revenues of the Provisional Grand Lodges were to be voted away in the wholesale manner proposed in that lodge such action would certainly interfere with the London Charities. The Province of Devon was deeply indebted to the London Charities for the great assistance extended to the province, and he thought in gratitude they should not be deserted. W. Bro. Lethbridge seconded the amendment.

W. Bro. E. Aitken-Davies supported the amendment. He thought that the principle so hastily introduced should be carefully considered. He approved of the Education Fund, but thought the attempt made by its officers to absorb all the disposable money in the province in the support of that project alone should be resisted. The support of the Education Fund should come from the individual contributions of members in the province. That was understood to be the source from which it was at first proposed to maintain the fund, and it would shew the interest taken in the fund by the brethren; but now all the old sources for maintaining the London Charities and voting to other benevolences were to be absorbed by the Education Fund. There was also another question. Was the forty guineas to be capitalised? or was that money to be used as revenue? If large sums were thus to be voted by the Prov. G. Lodges that matter should be settled first.

W. Bro. Stephens supported the amendment. W. Bro. Whitley supported the proposition. He did not see that any valid objections to the measure had been proved. A scrutiny was called for in the voting, when, of the brethren entitled to vote, twenty voted for the amendment and twenty-eight for the proposition. The forty guineas were, therefore, voted to the fund, and the question of how it should be used left to the Committee of the Educational Fund.

W. Bros. Saml. Jew, T. S. Bayly, C. Godtschalk, and Richard Lose were elected the Board of General Purposes. Bro. John Ingle, the J.D. of the Devon Lodge, No. 215, was elected the Treasurer.

The P.G.M.M. then invested the following brethren as the officers for the ensuing year:—

V.W. Bro. P. H. Newnham (by proxy)	Prov. G.D.M.

In the evening a large party of the brethren dined together at Walter's Farley Hotel, Colonel Tanner Davy presiding.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF CORNWALL.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of the Mark Master Masons of the Province of Cornwall was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 26th inst., in the Masonic Hall, New Public Rooms, Truro. W. Bro. W. Tweedy, Deputy P.G.M., presided, supported by W. Bro. Rev. W. H. Bloxsome, P.S.G.W.; I. Paul, P.J.G.W.; T. C. Polglaze, P.G.J.O.; W. Tregay, P.G. Treas.; W. J. Johns, P.G. Sec., P.P.J. G.M.W.; J. Q. Langdon, P.G. Tyler.

Among the brethren present were R.W. Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.P.G. Sec., and P.G.W. of England; W. Bro. George Brown, P.G.M.O. Leicester and Rutland; Bro. H. S. Hill, M.O. Charity, No. 76; and the following Past Provincial Grand Officers and lodge officers of the seven lodges in the province: Bros. John Thomas, P.P.G. Organist; T. Chirgwin, P.P.S.G.W.; W. Middleton, P.P.S.G.D.; J. C. R. Crewes, P.P.G. Supt. of Works; C. Truscott, jun., P.P.G.S.B.; W. Mason, W.M.; R. Lean, S.W.; J. T. Tillman, M.O.; W. P. Smith, S.O.; W. J. Trythall, J.O., and J. C. Furness, J.D. 78; F. H. Pool, P.P.G.M.O.; James Pool, P.P.G.J.O.; J. G. Osborne, S.W. 87; W. F. Newman, P.P.S.G.W.; M. Little, P.P.G.S.B.; Harry Tilly, J.W. 94; Rev. G. L. Church, P.P.G. Chap.; J. Hooper, W.M. 101; J. Eastlick, J.O. 101; and H. Trembath, S.W. 175.

Bro. W. J. Hughan said the first business would be to enter into the minutes of the province a record of the lamented death of the late Prov. Grand Master, Sir F. M. Williams, Bart. Bro. Hughan commented on the great regret felt by the brethren on his death, and of the interest which Sir Frederick always took in Mark Masonry since its introduction into the province in 1867, of which they had a lasting memorial in the handsome set of jewels, the most handsome in England, which their late P.G.M. had presented to the lodge. He moved that a minute expressing their regret should be entered, and that Colonel Peard should be empowered to convey the same personally or by letter to Lady Williams. W. Bro. W. H. Bloxsome seconded, and it was carried unanimously.

The Treasurer reported a balance of £9 13s. in hand, and Bro. Tregay received a hearty vote of thanks for his services as Treasurer since 1874.

Bro. W. Tweedy spoke of the gratification all must feel in seeing Colonel Peard appointed as Prov. G. Master; and of the R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. J. T. Davy, J.P., P.G.M.M. of the senior Province of Devon, attending for the purpose of the installation, and of their desire to promote good fellowship with their sister county.

A deputation was then appointed to receive R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Davy, who was appointed Installing Master by the M.W.G. Master, and he was placed in the W. Master's chair and saluted by the brethren.

The patent of the appointment of Bro. Peard as the second Prov. Grand Mark Master of Cornwall was read by the Prov. Secretary, and a deputation received Bro. Peard and conducted him to the pedestal.

Bro. Davy expressed the pleasure it gave him to instal Col. Peard. He congratulated him on the high honour conferred upon him, and the brethren of the province on the selection that had been made. The name of Colonel Peard was known, not only in England, but throughout the world, and he was known as one who thoroughly discharged whatever he undertook, and whatever duties devolved upon him. Courtesy and firmness would characterise his ruling, and satisfaction would be given to the Grand Lodge no less than to his province. Colonel Peard, he felt sure, was not insensible of the great responsibility devolving upon him, since the character of the Provincial Grand Lodge would in a great measure depend on his skill. He hoped that the Grand Overseer of the Universe would help him, and that Colonel Peard would make His revealed word his guide.

Colonel Peard was then installed into the chair, after taking the obligation, and was duly proclaimed and saluted.

The returns of the lodges in the province showed that Meridian, No. 73, Redruth, had 34 members; Fortitude, 71, Truro, 50; Cornubian, 87, Hayle, 49; Love and Honour, 94, Falmouth, 17; Boscawen, 101, Chacewater, 27; St. Michael, 175, Helston, 22; and Fort, 206, Newquay, 21; total 221 members.

Thanks were voted to R.W. Bro. Davy for the very able and efficient manner in which he had performed his duty; and a hope was expressed that he would again visit the province.

Colonel Peard could only endorse what had been said, and tender his own very cordial thanks.

Colonel Davy said he had met Colonel Peard in Craft lodges in Devon, and under his rule he hoped to see Mark Masonry flourish in the province. He (the speaker) was the first to bring Mark Masonry into the West, and it had spread and taken deep root.

It was resolved that Bro. Hughan should edit a directory of the members of the Mark Masons' lodges in the province.

The P.G.M.M. then invested the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—

Bro. T. Chirgwin, 78	Prov. G.D.M.
" W. Tweedy, 78...	Prov. D.P.G.M.

" J. Langdon	Prov. G. Tyler.

Bro. W. Tweedy was elected Treasurer. The P.G.M.M., Deputy M., Wardens, Secretary, Chaplain, and Registrar were appointed a Committee of General Purposes for the province.

The lodge was then closed in due form, and in the evening there was a banquet, under the presidency of Colonel Peard.

HOW BRO. JONES SPENT HIS HOLIDAY.

Bank Holiday on Monday next! Nearly three whole days from the smoky, noisy Manchester streets. But the question is, where shall I go to? Here, boy, run for a penny Bradshaw! Now for it. What about Wales? let's see—Rhyl four hours and forty minutes in the train. That's too long. Ah! glorious, only one hour and twenty minutes! Jones, my boy, Blackpool is the place for you. Having thus far settled how to spend my Bank Holiday, I retired to rest on Friday with a kind of boyish delight, contemplating the pleasures in prospect, for I had never visited the Northern watering place.

Saturday "Old Sol" managed at last to give us just one of his glorious summer warmings, and some two hours before my usual time for closing I issued the command to "Tom to up shutters," much to the delight of that urchin, who grinned all over his face when I announced to him the fact that he need not present himself again until Tuesday morning.

Dressed in my new tweed suit (which had been lying by for some weeks ready for summer), my best stove pipe go-to-meeting hat, real new gingham, and travelling bag, all complete, I started early for the L. and Y. Railway Station, thinking that I would have the pick of seats in the train, but, to my astonishment, I found that hundreds of others were of the same mind, and that instead of being first at the station I was at the tail end of a long human stream, which was moving at a funereal pace towards the pay-desk. All things have an end, so at last I faced the mild-looking young man who stood behind the counter. "Third-class, Blackpool," said I, putting down a gold coin. "No thirds by this train, all first express," replied the mild young man, at the same time exchanging my coin for a small piece of paste board and another coin just one-half the size of the one I gave him. Before I had the least chance of expostulating I was propelled along to the platform. Mentally calculating how my expenditure would have to be curtailed in consequence of having to pay extra fare, I arrived alongside a long train of coaches. Out of one of the windows suddenly came a hairy cap, having underneath a merry-looking face, and a well-known voice called out "Why, hang it, here's Brother Jones. Come in, old boy; just room for one," and in popped the hairy cap like an overgrown "jack in the box." Approaching the compartment from whence the friendly invitation came, I found my friend Bro. Tomkins, with four other brethren of the mystic tie, smoking away like factory chimneys.

"Why, I thought you were a regular third-class parliamentary swell," said one of the party, adopting, as is usually the case when on pleasure intent, the Lancashire dialect. "A'int he coming it extravagant, going a gallivanting first-class?" said another. The bell rang, the "iron horse" snorted, and off we dashed over the house tops. "Who's for a game?" says Tomkins, pulling a pack of cards out of his satchel. "Just to while away the time," says another. "Only a tanner a game," says a third. Not being an adept at whist, I respectfully declined taking part in the game, but was exceedingly amused at the remarks with which my loquacious and humorous fellow passengers diversified the play. "Now then, crack yer whip," says one, when a little delay occurred. That's too big for my fireplace," says another when unable to beat a card laid down. And so the game went merrily on until we reached the Hounds Hill Station. That being our destination, and bidding my friends adieu, I made for the sea-shore, which I was told was but a few yards distant. Goodness gracious! had I been dreaming? or was I at the time wide awake? Being satisfied on this important point I came to the conclusion that by some means I must have got into a wrong train and been landed at some new station in Manchester, for surely what I behold must be Knott Mill on a fair day. There certainly was a broader sheet of water than the Irwell. Still, near me sat the Deansgate boy without hands, whining in his usual nasal twang, and accompanying his doleful voice with a concertina. "The Moody and Sankey Minstrels" were calling upon everybody to "Hold the fort," another well known Knott Mill musical nuisance. A man playing a groaning harmonium was grinding out discords. The acting blind man was addressing his "kind Christian friends," and alternately uttering under his breath anything but blessings upon those who passed him by without increasing his ill-gotten store; Cheap Jacks bawling out the sale of their wares with their husky voices, and a lot of other itinerant impostors making the place hideous with their incessant yelling.

After passing along a continuation of this Babel of sounds, I struck out into the side streets for the purpose of finding a resting place, but even these were crowded by a rough mob of excursionists. In the winter gardens, on the pier, in the rink, the rabble and noise never ceased.

Feeling somewhat wearied, and anxious to find some hostelry wherein to refresh the inner man, I strolled towards the only quiet looking part of Blackpool, viz., "Claremont Park." Immediately after I had paid my admission copper and passed the entrance gate, I was hailed by a welcome—"Hullo, my boy; where do you think you're off to?" and the robust form of a jovial brother impeded my progress. Noticing my almost forlorn appearance, he kindly led the way to the magnificent hotel at the extreme limit of the promenade, where my bodily wants were soon supplied. During the repast I related to him my adventures and disappointment with Deansgate-on-the-Sea, and expressed my intention to return home the next morning if he could only find me a lodging for the night. Out came the brother's watch. "Just in time," says he, "not a minute to spare, so come on;" and by means of elbowing and jostling through the motley crowd for about a mile I found myself at the same station at which I had landed that afternoon.

Thinking that he intended returning to Manchester that evening I ventured to suggest that a little rest would be acceptable before undertaking the journey home. "Home," shouted he, laughing like a great hyena, "who's going home? Why, I'm going to take you where you can have a quiet night's rest—a peep at the sea, plenty of fresh air, and as good a dinner to-morrow as you ever sat down to."

"Now," said I, "I'm not in the humour for joking, so where are you taking me to; fair play and above board, you know?"

After mopping his jolly old face with his handkerchief, he managed to get out, "St. Ann's."

I was just on the point of turning away in disgust, for I really thought he was playing off one of his jokes, for the only St. Ann's I could then think of was the church and square so called in Manchester. At that moment a whistle sounded, and I was pulled into the train. "It's all right," said my jovial brother, "we shall be there directly," and in a few minutes the train slackened, and he pointed to a large board, on which was painted "St. Ann's-on-the-Sea."

When the train stopped we alighted, and passed out of the pretty little station. A few strides brought us in front of a beautiful hotel, wherein we entered. Every one seemed to know my companion, and on all sides we were heartily welcomed. After a "short nip" he left for his diggings, and I adjourned to the extensive and handsomely furnished coffee-room, just in time for a Lancashire "thick tea." This much needed meal dispatched, I mounted my smoke stack, and puffing away through the strong sea breezes reached the splendid promenade, which is laid out and walled for about two miles along the shore. The bracing air immediately revived my spirits and served to dispel from my mind the annoyances of the previous part of the day.

Here, thought I, I can enjoy my holiday in quietness, and with that pleasing idea I retired to my hotel, and at an early hour was snoring in my comfortable bed.

Sunday morning. A beautiful breeze blowing, and the sun making periodical attempts to burn through the thick clouds. Breakfast over, I strolled about the wide streets of semi-detached houses, across the numerous sand hills, covered with "star grass," along the shore, and back through rural walks amidst the farmsteads and cornfields in time to take part in the morning service in the quaint little church, wherein I heard an excellent sermon, and afterwards returned to "mine inn."

Having seated myself upon one of the comfortable garden chairs I determined "to enjoy a quiet weed," but judge to my surprise to hear my name called out from an open conveyance then pulling up in front of the hotel, out of which jumped my companion railway travellers of the day before. "Caught you at last, old boy," says one. "Nothing less than a white neck will do," says another. "Mumm's the word," says Tomkins, and, seeing a waiter at the door, he beckoned him to us; and without consulting either my desires or the length of my purse an order was given, and, said Tomkins, "to be put down to Jones's bill." "Bravo, we're in luck," shouted one of my noisy visitors. "Why, here's the Egyptian," meaning my jovial friend, who was just taking an appetiser on the shore. "Hi! Hi! there's old Pyramid!" bawled out another; "we're just come a lookin' for yer."

It is needless for me to endeavour to relate what passed in the half-hour before dinner, beyond the remark made by the waiter as the carriage containing the Blackpool contingent drove away, "That's a merry lot, sir, and just the sort to enjoy themselves," which I think will convey to the reader's mind a sufficient idea of their proceedings. After dinner I strolled along the beach to the picturesque town of Lytham, which is prettily situated at the mouth of the Ribble, and returned to St. Ann's by rail—so finishing the day.

Monday morning, in spite of the intermittent heavy showers, I commenced my day's peregrinations by visiting the public gardens, thence along the shore towards Blackpool, passing the Star Hotel, which is celebrated for fresh caught cockles; also the gipsies' encampment, the rendezvous of the young maidens who possess a desire to know the colour of the eyes and hair and the height and breadth of their future husbands. About an hour's walk brought me to what is termed the south shore, or, as I think, it may be more aptly termed "Juvenile Bay"—about two miles from the centre of Blackpool. Here was paterfamilias in all his glory, surrounded by his olive branches, furnished with the inseparable spade and bucket. Here, too, were the indigenous donkeys—galloping along the extensive sands with their juvenile burdens. Perambulators in scores occupied the wide promenade—and the joyous shouts of the hundreds of happy youngsters bore a cheerful contrast to the noisy rabble in the central part of the town.

From time to time I caught sight of some familiar face enjoying the bracing sea breeze, surrounded by his little flock; and now and again a hearty "Hullo, Jones; you here," came from the open windows as I passed by. The throng of human beings increased as I proceeded; the South Pier and the central beach were simply a living mass, and it was amusing to see the steamboats crowded as thick as bees in a hive.

The North Pier is evidently reserved for the upper ten, and here all the hideous fashions of the ladies' dresses are seen to perfection. One thought occurred to me, i.e.: supposing an alarm of danger should be raised, how would the ladies manage to escape? because to run is entirely out of the question, the longest steps permissible by their tight costumes being about six inches. Why do our fair friends try to imitate the Egyptian mummies? This pier is certainly one of the finest in Europe. At the extreme end stands the music-hall, capable of seating 2000 people, and in which an excellent band, conducted by Mr. Risegari, performs each evening; on special occasions some of our leading vocalists are engaged.

A stroll along the cliffs to Uncle Tom's Cabin and back brought the day as well as my holiday to a close, and at the appointed time I met my fellow passengers at the railway station, and, enlivened by the recital of their various adventures and experiences, I arrived at smoky Manchester.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Thursday last at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Col. Creaton, Grand Treasurer, presided. There were also present Bros. H. A. Dubois, Col. James E. Peters, Arthur E. Gladwell, Joshua Nunn, S. Rosenthal, F. R. W. Hedges (Secretary); and H. Massey (Freemason).

There was but one petition before the Committee, and that was deferred on account of unsatisfactory reading on the part of the child.

Authority for signing cheques was then given to the Chairman for payment of current expenses, and the Committee adjourned.

The telephone appears to be getting very popular in the United States, one company alone having now in operation over 40,000 instruments.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The Great Need.—The blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthen and invigorate the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favour of debilitated and nervous constitutions which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.—[Adv't.]

THE ROYAL MASONIC PUPILS' ASSISTANCE FUND.

Such is the name to be given to a "fund" about to be started, under very high auspices, and to which Bro. Dick Radclyffe has called our attention, being in one sense, we believe, the founder of it. Among several distinguished brethren who have already given their patronage to it we find Bros. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M.; H.R.H. Prince Leopold, K.G., P.G.W., Prov. G. Master Oxon; Earl of Rosslyn, K.T., P.G.M. Scotland, 33°; His Grace the Duke of Athole, K.T., Past Grand Master Scotland; Right Hon. Lord Henniker, P.S.G. Warden, S.G.W.M.M., P.P.G.W. Suffolk; Sir Daniel Gooch, Bt., M.P., Prov. G. Master Berks and Bucks; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C., Dep. Prov. G. Master Suffolk; F. Adlard, P.M. 7, P.Z. 214, P.P.A.G.D. of C. Essex; Sir John Bennett, Grand Stewards' Lodge; W. Biggs, P. Prov. G. Secretary Berks and Bucks; F. Binckes, P.G.S., Sec. R.M.I.B.; R. Bradley, Prov. G. Secretary Berks and Bucks; Colonel Frederick Brine, R.E., P.M., 30°; J. O. Carter, Sec. 209, P. Prov. G.D. of C. Berks and Bucks; Baron Fielder, P.M., P.G.S.W. Berks and Bucks; J. Jacobs, P.M. 482, P.P.G. Reg. Staffordshire; George Kenning, P. Prov. G.D. Middlesex; W. H. Lucia, G.S.B., Prov. G. Sec. Suffolk; Andrew Pears, W.M. 865; Robert Roberts, W.M. 209, Prov. G.J.D. Berks and Bucks; H. C. Tombs, P.G.D.; A. Withers, W.M. 211; and others. Many more will no doubt soon join the movement, and it will easily be got into working order. Its object is practically to "look after" our pupils leaving our excellent Schools, and assist them in meeting the difficulties and dangers of life as they start on their journey. It appears to us a practical scheme, and one likely to commend itself to all who interest themselves in our Masonic orphans, and who feel that the associations of our lodges, and the pleasures of Masonic social intercourse, are enhanced and expanded in wonderful measure when we seek to extend to the poor children of those who once were our "mates and confrères" in many a pleasant gathering of "auld lang syne," the kindly hand of Masonic charity, or the warm sympathies of Masonic benevolence. There is nothing about this plan grand or pretentious, chimerical or Utopian. It is a plain and practical development of what is right, needful, and truly considerate. In all similar praiseworthy movements, for some time past, in this country, there has been existing, happily, a growing conviction that our duty to the orphans we seek to educate, that our interest in them, cannot and do not cease with the conclusion and limits of the "school age." All over the land great anxiety has been evinced of late years to discover a method and elaborate a plan, by which our girls and boys on leaving school might find a continuance of culture and care, friendly help, and genial "surveillance," if we may so use the word, by which in the most dangerous period of life they may be shielded from the temptations which lure, and the perils which beset, young and ardent minds, bursting out with the feelings and vigour of youth, and emancipated from needful control or kindly advice. This is the main point of this new Masonic scheme, as we understand it, and as such we give it our warm approval. Our Institutions grant a sum for outfit and advancement in life, but there they stop. This new society will seek to carry on the good work, and watch over the progress of our pupils from the time they leave their respective Institutions, and will seek to find suitable positions for them, and in every way act as friends, counsellors, and helpers to those who from their peculiar position as orphans are too often friendless, and require much fostering care to enable them to reap the benefits of that admirable education which has been given to them. We are aware that this is not the best of times to make appeals or to found new charitable institutions, but we think the useful, the needful, and the practical so predominate in this simple and straightforward scheme, which we print elsewhere in detail, that we have thought well to call the attention of our readers specifically, if shortly, to it. As the Society increases in size and commences its work in good earnest as we doubt not, we shall from time to time have much pleasure in noting its reports and reprinting its proceedings, for the information and gratification of our readers.

CHARITY REFORM.

We must fairly confess that, in common, we fancy, with most of our readers, we are greatly disappointed with Bro. Simpson's reply to the Grand Treasurer's letter. As regards our own remarks, we do not see that Bro. Simpson attempts to answer them. It is plain to us that he is altogether ignorant—we say it most respectfully—of the position which Provincial Charity Committees now occupy in the question, and we can only repeat, what we fancy ninety-nine out of every hundred Masons will also say, "if great abuses exist, we do not know where or what they are." As regards the "investigation" into cases, which proposed reform Bro. Simpson took from us, and has now made part of his own little programme, he mentions "information he has received." We fancy that even in this respect he does not realize what it is he is proposing. There are now certain formalities laid down which must be complied with, and certain pre-requisite conditions which must be satisfied before candidates can be placed on the list. But that is not "where the shoe pinches." The only one real difficulty is a comparative question of poverty, of need. And this is a most difficult and delicate subject, as all who have looked into or handled Charity cases can testify at once. It is all very well to indulge in general propositions, in magnificent utterances and mysterious hints, but what we want is the reality and, above all, the truth of careful, conscientious enquiry. We need least of all the "crotchets of reformers," or the "high falutin" of the stock sensationalism, the "bombast" of the childish fallacies of the hour. "All that glitters is not gold," and all the professions of philanthropy, all the demands for change, the agitated craving for public discussion or popular approval, so rampant and so pretentious often just now, have not the slightest effect on the minds of those who understand their business, who care little for mere excitement or the platform, and who have watched the real wants of such institutions and have realized the true position of affairs. As regards the "scenes on polling days," we think our brother the Grand Treasurer will be as amused as we are with our worthy brother's gentle "casuistry" on the subject. For there is a "casuistry," as we have sometimes observed before, not purely of Roman origin, not alone practised at Stonyhurst. The illustration in the Graphic or Illustrated London News did not refer to a Masonic Charity, and it is idle, and worse than idle, in a discussion on Masonic Charities to bring in other charities. It is not quite respectful to the Craft or Bro. Col. Creton, when asked what are the scenes at Masonic elections, to be told they exist in other associations. The Craft wanted "particulars" not "generals." However, we do not wish to seem even to find fault. No proved abuses exist in our Masonic Charities. If our Past Grand Chaplain thinks so, let him openly say so, and point them out. But if not, the charge ought to be withdrawn at once, as detrimental to the character and derogatory to the imputation of the subscribers. We have said all this in the interests of our Charities, openly and fearlessly, but, we trust, also courteously and fraternally.

SERVANTS' CHARACTERS.

A good deal of controversy has arisen lately upon this very difficult and delicate question, and some amusing letters have been written, and some striking illustrations have been adduced to demonstrate the evils and inconveniences of the present system. Certainly, at present, everything is as doubtful and uncomfortable as well can be. The anxious housewife, rightly ever on "hospitable thoughts," and desirous of pleasing her "lord and master," seeks for a good cook, a comfortable housemaid, an active butler. Alas, poor woman! many are her difficulties, her drawbacks, and her dangers. The characters too often which she receives contain both a "suppressio veri" and a "suggestio falsi," and she soon finds that the "good cook" is a very indifferent performer, the housemaid who "knows her duties" is slatternly, and idle, and "cheeky;" and that the butler who is "thoroughly conversant with the requirements of his place" is a frequenter of the neighbouring public and a liberal dispenser of his master's "cellar." And so it goes on until the evil has reached a pitch which is almost unendurable. To say nothing of "false characters," reduced to a system, by which either information is sought for by "special agents" or notoriously unfit persons are comfortably located in a "genteel family," with an eye to business, pleasure, and "white soup" combined, we have daily to meet with untrue statements and dishonest replies. And why is all this? Simply because of the want of that rare commodity—truth—solely because we will not obey the golden and Divine law of "doing to others as we would be done by." Persons to get out of a scrape with a troublesome servant, or anxious to save their own pockets, deliberately slur over notorious shortcomings, judiciously suppress proved offences, and by an evasively worded and intentionally deceptive character or letter, mislead the anxious enquirer and palm off a discarded servant on a suffering fellow creature. Among the most absurd suggestions we have seen for mending the matter, improving the present most unwholesome state of things, is that from the well known Mr. (brother?) Pollaky, of Paddington-green, recommending the foreign "Dienstbuch" for servants. The "Dienstbuch" has, no doubt, its good points in Germany, like a similar Book of "Service" in France, Belgium, and Russia, but it has its bad ones. It has greatly and gravely broken down as a preventive of the very evils we have to contend with, and like the passport system is practically useless. It does not help the good; it can, and does, serve the bad, as no one knows better than Mr. Pollaky himself. Any such plan is utterly unsuitable to the habits and traditions of our people, and, though it might help certain parties amongst us, would be no guarantee to employers, on the one hand, no aid to servants on the other. No! all we want, to use a common expression, is "honour among thieves," a little more truth, honesty, uprightness, and faithfulness in our dealings one with another. Since we wrote the above we have seen another letter from Mr. Pollaky in the Times of Saturday, on the same subject, which suggests many serious considerations. We fancy that our skilled detectives in the City and in Scotland-yard will smile heartily at such remarkable statements and such sagacious suggestions, and that "polite letter writer" who favoured the Times with that striking epistle, must believe the English people to be very easily "led by the nose," if he can suppose for one moment that such flippant remarks about "constitutional difficulties," and the like, can dispose of the question or induce all classes amongst us to acquiesce, in what would be a social revolution. Mr. P. is enamoured of the "Dienstbuch." Be it so; he has quite a right to be so if he so pleases, but he cannot expect us to share his raptures, the more so as we, with others, well know what qualifications may be fairly adduced to the system, as a system. A letter, signed "A. B. C.," in the Times, fully confirms our views. Mr. P.'s last letter, like the preceding, is solely a special agent's letter, from a special agents views and interests, and can have no possible effect on the discussion, which requires English, not foreign, treatment. There is one sensational touch about "lost jewels," which as the old saying runs, is "worth a Jew's eye," (ought it not be a Jewess's?) and we can imagine how Mr. Bailey and Mr. Williamson will have laughed at this characteristic bit of "chaff." We trust that Sir E. Y. Henderson may be spared reading the threatened report which Mr. P. promises, as it is altogether a grave mistake to attempt to graft on our social life, a system which originates from an entirely different theory of government and legislation. We feel sure that this proposal is altogether inexpedient and unsound, and if persevered in could only tend to favour the game of "special agency," and to destroy all confidence between employers and domestics, that great, important portion of our community on which so much of its peace, happiness, and comfort hourly depends.

SCENES AT MASONIC ELECTIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is just as I expected. Bro. Simpson has made a mistake, or has been misinformed. He does not really mean our Masonic meetings, though his words might lead fairly to that inference in his original letter, but he alludes to other societies and other meetings not Masonic. I am very glad that it is so, as here my part of the controversy happily ends.

I am, yours fraternally,

J. CREATON.

A CAUTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Through the medium of your paper I am desirous of putting the Almoners of lodges and members of the Craft in general on their guard with respect to one who called on me on the 20th inst., and gave his name as William John Hutchinson, Hiram Lodge, No. 97, Belfast, but whose real or assumed name I am led to believe is Thomas Blain, and whose address has been at some time No. 14, Dock-street, Belfast. On his first application I referred him to the lodge Almoner, but he shortly after returned, and informed me that that brother was not at home; he was about half-an-hour too late for him (this I have since learned was untrue, as the Almoner was at home, and he was told by this individual that I had sent him to him; he was relieved, and receipt taken for the same). He, therefore, gave me his name, and produced a certificate, and very smartly answered the three or four questions I put to him. I relieved him, and as he begged hard for some old clothes, his being shabby and wet through, I gave him a coat and vest; he again shortly returned with some letters he found in the pockets, and unintentionally left his own letters and certificate, which have led me to take further interest in this individual. I immediately wrote off to Chichester and Arundel, and have since heard that he applied for relief the next morning at Chichester, but as he could not answer the questions put to him, he cleared out sharp. He says "that he is a mechanical draftsman, has lately returned from America," which he much regrets, and hopes soon to return again; he has a son in the R.E., who is on the Ordnance Survey Branch, and he has lately been at Aldershot to try and find him (one of his letters has been re-addressed to Aldershot). He is about 5ft. 10in. in height, slightly built, of dark complexion, and dark moustache, no beard or whiskers, and has something of a military bearing about him.

I am, yours faithfully,

T. F. 804.

P.S.—From the quantity of begging Masons, and some of them worthless fellows, being about, it is time that a better system of relief was organised. I would suggest that Almoners of neighbouring lodges should communicate with one another, and if each of them were required to make out a quarterly return of the particulars of those who called for relief, and the same forwarded to the G.S.'s office, where the lists should be analysed and then published with the G.L. quarterly report, it would in time weed out these parasites and make it much better for the genuine brother in distress.

LODGES OF INSTRUCTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

At this season of the year there is not so much to occupy the mind of the Masonic public, and hence it may be a fitting opportunity to draw some attention to the great advantage which has arisen from the establishment of lodges of instruction in all parts of the United Kingdom, and the many reasons existing for their encouragement and further consolidation.

It is to be presumed that most Masons are well acquainted with the origin of these admirable institutions, and also with the way in which they came into existence, viz., by the authorisation of regularly warranted lodges, under whose aegis they have flourished, and it is to be hoped will continue to flourish. We have in especial two lodges of instruction, the Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for Master Masons, and the Stability Lodge of Instruction. These two lodges have effected signal good in bringing up the standard of Masonic delivery to a point of excellence. They are supplemented by many more, and the value of these lodges can scarcely be over-estimated, inasmuch as by their means that impressive elocution is acquired which renders a lodge meeting something more nearly approaching its original purpose.

To hear the solemn words of our ritual droned out without a thought of their infinite and touching meaning has often been my unlucky fate; to hear the Master of the lodge prompted at almost every word in the course of a ceremony has not unfrequently been my fate; but to hear the solemn obligations administered by an inadequate authority has been the worst infliction.

I am aware that there are elocution masters, members of the Craft, who do their best to produce not only perfect intonation and due stress upon words, but if the spirit be absent, letter perfectness does little to convey to the person initiated, passed, or raised, the actual meaning of the grand and noble fraternity he is joining or is receiving advancement in.

This is a most important point—and it is partly overcome by the existence of these lodges of instruction, where, at an almost nominal cost, he can perfect himself not only in the essential parts of the Craft ceremonies, but in many instances in the Sectional Lectures as well. But it is hardly to be anticipated, unless lodges of instruction are further spread over the land, that the majority of Masons can be expected from the regular meetings to become accomplished either in the ceremonies or the lectures. Many of these lodges of instruction are permanent, and as they are duly advertised in the Freemason, no really studious Mason need plead ignorance of the source of knowledge.

But there exists another class of lodges of instruction very much to be deprecated. I allude to little coteries of Masons, otherwise very worthy, who occasionally meet without the sanction of the warranted lodges at places of entertainment, and there rehearse the ritual ceremonies, with the prospect of a chop and a pint of stout, and perhaps a glass or so of whiskey after it. This kind of lodge of instruction, and of such there are hundreds in the metropolitan district, is to be discouraged. They meet without authorisation—without paraphernalia—without fitting rooms—and, I may say, without that observance of secrecy and decorum which should mark all Masonic proceedings.

The existence of such conventions is undoubted—and I am not singling out one only for notice on the present occasion, nor am I imputing to the holders of them motives at variance with the spirit of our institution. I mention their existence, however, with a view of directing the attention of Masonic authorities to a grave error. I will put it this way. What would a Church of England clergyman say if the solemn offices of the Church of England were, I will not say travestied, but to some degree dishonoured by hole-and-corner conventions of the kind? What would a Dissenting minister say to a service conducted mainly for the purpose of ending in a "merry bout" of pipes and beer? I do not presume to suggest, but I, for my own part, should regard the matter with the utmost suspicion and horror.

Hence I venture to offer some ideas, in the hope that they will be accepted, as I enounce them, in a fraternal Masonic spirit.

First. I would propose that all lodges of instruction should be registered in a sub-register, duly authorised to rehearse the ceremonies and sections—of course without power of actually working—and that their places of meeting shall be invariable.

Second. That no lodge of instruction, thus registered, shall be allowed to continue without a quarterly report of its proceedings and the brethren present being sent to headquarters.

Third. That duly authorised and qualified inspectors be at any regular meeting of the lodges of instruction entitled to attend and report to headquarters.

And, fourth, that refreshments, except once or twice a year, be not supplied to members attending such lodges, but that a fair sum shall be paid out of the entrance money to the persons at whose homes they may from time to time be held.

I would also suggest that regular minute books be kept, showing the names of the brethren and the numbers of their lodges as they may attend.

In this manner I feel sure that the better class of lodges of instruction would take a higher standing in the Craft than they do now, and would in the end educate the fraternity more fully for the noble purposes it has in hand.

There are many Masonic instructors, and it would be invidious to mention any one in especial. These brethren work hard and receive little encouragement at present, but their status and importance in the Craft would be raised, without derogating from the authority of the regularly warranted lodges or their officials, by such a proceeding.

Wishing all properly constituted lodges of instruction every future success in any case,

I remain, very dear Sir and Brother, yours sincerely and fraternally,

KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Grand Lodge meeting of this province took place at Ventnor, on Monday, the 11th inst., under the presidency of the R.W.P.G.M., Bro. W. W. Beach, assisted by the D.P.G.M., Bro. Hickman. The usual routine business having been disposed of, the P.G.M. proceeded to appoint and invest his officers for the ensuing year, and it is this part of the proceedings that requires some notice.

The P.G.M. made his usual introductory speech, about the difficulty of distributing ten collars among thirty lodges, and that the six Stewards' collars, which he intended giving to W.M.'s and P.M.'s of lodges, must not be considered as a bar to their future advancement, but, on the contrary, should be regarded as a recommendation for honours in years to come.

Now, a Steward's collar, we all know, is never received as an honour by the Master or Past Masters of a lodge, and but for their dread of creating a scene in Prov. Grand Lodge they would almost invariably refuse to accept it, as its possession subjects them to continual annoyance from the jests of their brethren.

We all freely acknowledge the difficulty of dividing the honours equally, but fail to see how this desideratum can be obtained by nearly always giving the honours that are worth having to the same set of lodges, the others getting only Stewardships—or nothing.

I will not presume to say that the fact of what may be called the permanent officers of P.G. Lodge being members of these lodges has anything to do with this, but many brethren have this belief, and reference to the accompanying table, showing the distribution of honours since 1868, will shew that they have some excuse for their opinion.

There being some twenty-nine working lodges in the province, it follows that each lodge can only expect one Wardenship in about fifteen years, but these fortunate lodges average about one in three years.

It is abundantly evident that some alteration is necessary, and if the province is so large that justice cannot be done to the lodges comprising it, let it be divided into two—say the five Isle of Wight lodges, the nine lodges of Portsmouth and Gosport, together with Fareham and Havant, in all sixteen, under the title of East Hants; and the remaining fifteen lodges as West Hants. This or some similar division would clear the way for provincial honours and give satisfaction to all parties.

Yours faithfully and fraternally, AN OLD P.M.

IMPOSTORS.

The following reasonable and amusing letter in our contemporary last week we republish for the information and warning of our readers.—Ed. F.M.

To the Editor of the "Times."

Sir,—During the past year it would seem that impostors, who trade upon the kind-hearted and rob the really poor, have been more than usually active and ingenious in plying their trades. The following, which have all come under my own notice and have been proved to be impositions, may be taken as specimens of the modus operandi, and may serve to put your readers on their guard. First, there is the neatly-dressed young lady, the niece of a clergyman in the country, who has brought a girl up to a blind institution and finds that a few pounds more are required for clothes. Then there is the relieving officer, who has come up from the country with some people about to emigrate, and who has not enough to get certain necessities. There is the military-looking, middle-aged man, who is interested in getting a blind child into a school. There is a smartly-dressed man, calling himself a relieving officer of a West-end union, who asks help for a man whom the guardians cannot legally assist. There is a lady who finds herself in South Kensington, and, having lost her purse, does not know how to get home to Islington. This is occasionally varied by a poor woman, in a great flurry, in Grosvenor-square, who has been summoned to see her daughter, who is dying at Norwood, and who has had her pocket picked—purse and telegram and all are gone. There is the old sergeant who claims to have served with officers in every branch of the service. There is the old woman with the basket of fresh (?) eggs who has been sent by the master of the house all the way from the City to far Tyburnia. There is the young woman who is selling scissors in order to provide for her husband, who is waiting to be admitted to the hospital. There is the smartly-dressed, fashionable-looking man, who is collecting subscriptions for a song about to be published in aid of some charitable object. There are the two ladies who are collecting orders for a book in course of publication, the proceeds to be given to an aged governess. And last, but most heartless of all, there is the scoundrel calling himself the agent for a widows' gift charity, who, after getting all particulars from an unfortunate widow, finds he has not got the necessary 2d. for his omnibus fare, and promises repayment when he brings the gift.

Now, I think you will agree with me that all these not only directly rob the poor, for we none of us possess the purse of Fortunatus, but they tend to steel our hearts against genuine appeals, unless, in order to discriminate between the false and true, we avail ourselves of the services freely offered by the Charity Organisation Society, of which I may claim to be

FREEMASONRY IN SUFFOLK.
To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—
Having been away from town at the time Bro. Neilson's letter on the above article appeared in your columns, I have only just read it. Permit me, therefore, to inform him, through the medium of your esteemed journal, that this is the second of a series of articles I am writing, and that in the first, which described the rise and progress of "Freemasonry in Essex," I acknowledged Bros. Gould and Hughan's books as the principal sources from which I got my information. I do not think it necessary I should go on stating and re-stating this in each fresh article, but if it will be any satisfaction to Bro. Neilson, I will state now, and once for all, that in every similar article I may write for the Freemason, my information will be derived principally from Bro. Gould's "Four Old Lodges," and Bro. Hughan's "Register," &c.

I remain, fraternally yours,
THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.
London, August 21st, 1879.

DEATH OF SIR ROWLAND HILL.—We regret to announce that Sir Rowland Hill died at his residence at Hampstead, where he had lived many years, at half-past four on Wednesday morning last. He had been for many hours unconscious, and seemed to die without pain. It had been feared, owing to the painful character of the malady from which he suffered, that there might be a return of the paroxysms, but, happily, this was not the case. Sir Rowland was the son of Mr. Thomas W. Hill, a schoolmaster, near Birmingham, and was born in 1795. He was consequently in his eighty-fourth year. He is best known as the author of the penny-postal system. A public testimonial of the value of £13,360 was presented to him in 1846. From 1843 to 1845 Sir Rowland Hill was engaged in the management of the London and Brighton Railway, and in 1846 he was appointed Secretary to the Postmaster-General, becoming Chief Secretary in 1854. He was made a K.C.B. in 1860, and retired in 1864 on account of failing health. The Treasury issued a minute acknowledging the full success of his plans, and awarded him for life his full salary of £2000 a year. He also received a Parliamentary grant of £20,000.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

WILLIAM PRESTON'S INITIATION.

I think there are few Masons who have not heard of the name of William Preston, author of the "Illustrations" (which, from A.D. 1772 to the present day has commanded an extensive circulation), and yet, with all that has been known or said about this enthusiastic member, his early career as a Freemason has never been fully explained. In the "Freemasons' Magazine" of A.D. 1794-5, as also in the "European Magazine" for 1811, are recorded particulars of our zealous brother, but there is a lack of preciseness in the details afforded, and subsequent historians appear generally to have been contented with accepting the sketches in these papers by Bro. Stephen Jones (his old and valued friend) without further enquiry, sometimes acknowledging their indebtedness, and at others simply presenting the materials without a word as to their origin. Bro. Robert Freke, Gould, in his "Four Old Lodges," has contributed to the subject, and, as usual with him, credits the magazines named accordingly, but since the issue of his unique work he has succeeded in tracing the entry of Bro. William Preston's initiation in the "Ancient" Records (Seceders). Knowing the importance of this, and that hitherto the matter has been left in obscurity, I at once communicated with the author of the "Four Old Lodges," who has kindly obliged me with all the particulars.

It appears that on Preston's arrival in London, A.D. 1760 (vide "F. Mag.," &c.), a number of other gentlemen from Edinburgh were desirous of forming a lodge in the City under Scottish auspices, but, on the recommendation of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, applied to the "Grand Lodge, according to the Old Institutions, or "Ancients" (London), for assistance, and by that body a dispensation was granted to form a lodge and make Masons. "They accordingly met at the White Hart, in the Strand, and Mr. Preston was the second person initiated." *

According to the evidence Bro. Gould has submitted to me, the authority was granted as follows: "Bro. Robt. Lochhead petitioned for dispensation to make Masons at the sign of the White Hart, in the Strand, &c., and a dispensation was granted to him to continue in force for the space of thirty days" (G. L. minutes, March and, 1763, vol. 4., letter D.) At this period there was no lodge really formed, but the dispensation (usual at that time) answered every purpose. On the 20th April, 1763, the Lodge No. 111 was duly constituted, twenty-nine names in all being recorded under date 1st June, 1763 (respecting fees), the twelfth (not the second) being our Bro. William Preston. The second was William Leslie. It is quite clear that No. 111 was the mother lodge (so to speak) of Bro. Preston's under the "Ancients." Bro. Lochhead was a member of No. 81 (now 73, Mount Lebanon, London), and was the first Master (so Bro. Gould has found) of No. 159 (1769), which, in 1792, bought the vacant number 10, and is now No. 19, Royal Athelstan, London †

No. 111 was left or surrendered in the following year by Preston and his friends, as they preferred the regular Grand Lodge ("Moderns"), and so he and others received a warrant from the rival Grand Lodge (the Grand Lodge, in fact), dated Nov. 15th, 1764, to assemble at the Half Moon, Cheapside, from which period to the present day it has been aptly known by the name of the Caledonian Lodge (now 134). The warrant, evidently surrendered by Preston and the other members, was dormant until Nov., 1805, when it was re-issued to some brethren at Colchester, receiving the No. 135 after the union of the two Grand Lodges in Dec., 1813, but on March 5th, 1828, it was erased, with some sixty others. T.G.A.O.T.U.

Diderot refers (Letter on the Blind) to "the ingenious expression of an English geometer that God geometrizes." He is unaware apparently of the tradition which attributes the expression to Plato, though it is not found in Plato's writings. Plutarch, I believe, is the first person who mentions the saying, and discusses what Plato exactly meant by it. In truth, it is one of that large class of dicta which look more ingenious than they are true. There is a fine Latin passage by Barrow on the mighty geometry of the universe, and the reader of the Religio Medici may remember that Sir Thomas Browne pronounces God to be "like a skilful geometerian."

"3, 5, 7, OUT OF MASONRY.

(From "Rousseau." By JOHN MORLEY, Vol. 2, pp. 314-15.)

"The best of the musings are masterpieces in the style of contemplative prose. The 3rd, the 5th, the 7th especially, abound in that even, full, mellow gravity of tone which is so rare in literature, because the deep absorption of spirit which is its source is so rare in life."

ANCIENT MASONIC DIPLOMA.

It is with great pleasure we publish the following letter from Lodge 45, of Pittsburg, to Dr. Alfred Creigh, of this place. The letter speaks for itself in unmistakable language, which we commend to every one who takes an interest in ancient relics.

In connection with this subject, we may state that Allegheny County was not organised until 1788, seven years after Washington County, and before its organisation Pittsburg was in Westmoreland County. Lodge 45 was organised in Pittsburg in 1785, and is the oldest lodge west of the Allegheny Mountains.

Lodge 54 was chartered in 1791, and established in Washington. Its charter members were from Lodge 45, and some of the Eastern lodges. We shall recall the names of a few of the early members of Lodge 54 as an inducement for the present members of our Masonic bodies to imitate their example, as citizens and as Masons. The lodge consisted of such high-minded and honourable men as Dr. Absalom Baird, James Ross, David Reddick, John Hoge, Joseph Ashbrook, David Acheson, John Wilson, John Israel, Joseph Pentecost, Alexander Reed, Thomas H. Baird, and a long list of such honourable worthies, some of whose descendants are members of the fraternity in this place and are emulating the lives of their ancestors by adhering to the undying principles of Masonry:

Pittsburgh, April 2, 1879.

To Bro. Past Master Alfred Creigh, of Washington Lodge, No. 164,
Washington, Penn'a.

Dear Sir and Bro.,—At a stated meeting of Lodge No. 45, F. and A. Masons, held at Masonic Hall, 5th Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Wednesday evening, March 26th, 1879, Bro. George S. Haines, W.M., of Ionic Lodge, No. 525, in a few graceful and kindly words presented on your behalf to this lodge a diploma issued to Bro. David Reddick, bearing date June 6, 1799.

The interest attached to this venerable document is of no ordinary character. Having been granted at a time long prior to the birth of any living member, when not only this lodge but Masonry as an Institution was in its infancy in this locality, and Lodge 45 was the only Masonic body west of the Allegheny Mountains, it is very easy to conceive that a certain value was attached to it then, how much more should we value it now, and how much greater should we prize it, surviving as it has done all the trials and tribulations through which the fraternity has so nobly and so successfully passed.

The splendid state of preservation in which this relic reaches us, with the seal uninjured, the parchment scarcely worn, and the writing so clear and distinct that it might have been written to-day, demonstrates how thoroughly well the work was performed in the first place, and specially points out how sacredly it has been guarded through the nearly four-score years of its existence. It thus becomes a connecting link between the past and the present—the old time and the new—the bridge which spans the dark and troublesome days in Masonic history which so "sorely tried men's souls"—and leads us step by step to our present era of peace and prosperity.

Next to its value as a Masonic relic and the intimate relation it bears to our lodge, comes its record as a memento of a past century—of a time that has been; and in this connection, we can understand how sore a trial it may have been to part with so valuable a treasure, and can admire, whilst scarcely hoping to imitate, the self-denial practised by one to whom such rare articles are so dear. No poor words of mine can express our appreciation of, and sincere and cordial thanks for, so valuable and interesting an addition to the archives of our lodge.

We shall show our appreciation of this valuable relic—the diploma of a true-hearted Mason—by placing it in a frame worthy of so valuable a donation, and whilst we view its beauties and ponder over the vicissitudes of its strange and long history, we shall ever respect and admire its generous donor—and thus hand down the gift and the name of the giver to the latest posterity. Yours fraternally,

FRED. H. LACEY, W.M.

THE MONDE MACONNIQUE FOR AUGUST.

The "Monde Maconnique" for August gives us some interesting facts, as pointing out clearly the increasing "embroglio" and difficulties of French Freemasonry in the Grand Orient of France. Its friends like to declare that everything is "couleur de rose," and that "all is for the best" in this "best," not of "worlds," but of "jurisdictions." Those of us, however, who are behind the scenes are perfectly well aware that when the tinsel, and the fireworks, and the coloured lights are at an end there remains but a sad "residuum" of doubt and dissatisfaction, of fear and confusion for French Freemasonry to-day. The "Convent" which is to be held on September 8th, at Paris, of the Grand Orient, having dealt with the usual number of foolish, childish, and impracticable "vœux," that is, so to say, practical suggestions, or amendments and changes, has two most important matters before it—"the revised rituals," and the "payments from lodges" to the Grand Orient.

There can be no doubt as to what the report of the Council of the Order will be as to the "revised ritual," which "it has," says Bro. Grimaux, reassuringly "placed in harmony with the changes effected in the Constitution." This act of harmonizing means suppression of the name of God. Bro. Grimaux adds, that the new ritual is not to be "obligatory," but that "the lodges will always have the liberty of choosing between the new and the old." We shall hope that Bro. Grimaux's anticipations may turn out to be correct, that so tolerant a programme may be realized. But we confess that we have both fears and doubts on the subject. Nothing, alas! can now bridge over the chasm between the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Orient of France, and when Bro. Cousin tells an English brother, as we read in a recent "Bulletin du Grand Orient," that the divergence between the two bodies arises from a "mal entendu," a "mistake," we only wonder what he means, and ask if "words" are really "words" and "facts" are really "facts?" or if there be not a Masonic as well as a Jesuit non-natural use of words? But when the changed ritual is a "fait accompli" we ought not to hear anything more of a "mal entendu" at any rate, and we feel sure that Bro.

Caubet is too honest to accept any such position or state of the case. We have not always been "in accord" with Bro. Caubet, as our readers know, but we have always done justice to his sincerity. We honestly disagree, and we say so, on both sides, without any loss of mutual respect or Masonic good feeling. With regard to the "contribution from lodges" a good deal may be said, as Bro. Grimaux puts it, on both sides. In England we pay a "capitation" fee, according to the numbers of members in our lodges, and it seems that all the French lodges, if we understand Bro. Grimaux rightly, now pay a "cotisation," if numbering forty members of seventy-five francs, or close into £33s. in round numbers annually. It is now proposed to make each lodge pay a fixed payment, according to numbers, to be settled by the annual Convent. Bro. Caubet and others object that if one lodge, for instance, pays fifty francs and another pays 300 francs, the lodge paying 300 will want more votes than the lodge only paying fifty francs, and that all lodges are equal.

Bro. Grimaux points out that the present system is illogical, for if the lodge has forty-one members it pays 120 francs, or £5, so that lodges keep down the numbers to forty. If the Grand Orient would only turn its attention to its own financial position and leave "burning questions" alone, how much better would it be for French Freemasonry, nay Freemasonry "all the world over."

MASKELYNE.

THE ROYAL MASONIC PUPILS' ASSISTANCE FUND.

The course of training followed by the Masonic Educational Charities, in common with many similar institutions in various parts of the country, is looked upon as more or less successful in proportion to the results that can be shown as emanating from the pupils themselves. It is not only necessary that a girl or a boy should receive a good education, but it is likewise desirable that they should prove that such education has been of service to them in after life—indeed, that it has been the means of their securing a position which without such education they could not have attained. With a view to assist in this object the Committees of very many of the English Charities make it a part of their duty to interest themselves in the future of the pupils who have been educated under their care. This they do by obtaining for those whom they deem deserving situations in offices presided over or belonging to one of their number, who they are assured will act as parent or guardian to their charge, and by apprenticing, or otherwise starting in life those who, being orphans or from other causes, may need more aid than is forthcoming from relatives generally. The practicability and success of such a scheme can be vouched for in numerous instances where it has been in work for years past; and were it necessary the records of some of our largest Charities would give ample evidence of the satisfaction derived from keeping an account of each scholar's proceedings in after life. It has frequently been found that a little advice, counsel, or help has proved to be the starting point of success.

With regard to the Masonic Institutions, it has often been regretted that some further surveillance has not been exercised over those who have been so fortunate as to receive therein education and early training; and it is felt that without something be done to watch the future of those who leave the Schools, and, if need be, lead them a helping hand, the work of Masonic Charity is incomplete. This want may perhaps best be expressed in the words of the Right Hon. Bro. the Earl of Rosslyn, K.T., Past Grand Master of Scotland, who, as President at the eighty-first anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, brought the question particularly before the Craft. The Right Worshipful brother, in proposing prosperity to the Institution, after detailing the advantages and benefits which were derived from the School, said: "I will tell you a little fault, and I am sure I need only mention it to find it immediately corrected; and the fault that I am going to find is this—that it is not impossible that at the end of their schooling career some of these boys may leave the School homeless and in need. It may be that the good seed sown may bear fruit during their scholastic career, but it may also be that the fruit will perish for want of cultivation at a later period. It may be that having derived all the advantage that they could from their study, and from their religious training in your Institution, they may leave it to fall into evil courses and evil ways, or even to suffer penury and poverty. I would appeal to you once more, as that is the only blot I can find in your excellent Institution, to try and amend it, that the pupils may derive the full benefit of your bounty and your charity."

It is now proposed to raise a fund which shall act as an adjunct to the two Masonic Schools, and be the means of supplying the want set forth above; and for this purpose your support and aid are earnestly solicited.

It is proposed that an early date shall be fixed for a meeting of those who may express approval of the scheme, and thereat the various rules for the government and conduct of affairs shall be discussed, Committees appointed, and general arrangements made.

It is hoped that the fund when once established will grow from year to year, and that the dividends of the subscriptions—which will be invested in approved securities—may in themselves prove sufficient for the various objects aimed at.

Further particulars of the scheme will be announced as they are arranged; but in the meantime we ask you fraternally to lend your aid to the furtherance of the desired object, by making it known to your friends, offering suggestions, or in any other way you may deem desirable.

The main objects of the fund will be:—
To provide situations for the pupils on their leaving the Masonic Schools.

To watch their progress and offer aid and advice where needful.

To advance small amounts to aid in the purchase of tools, outfits, and, later in life, goodwills of businesses, &c.

To assist pupils who may have gained scholarships at the Universities, or boys who may desire to enter the Army or Navy, and aid them in obtaining commissions.

And generally to watch over the future of the pupils, and help them in securing success in life.

Circulars and forms for collecting, together with other information, may be had on application to Bro. Dick Radclyffe, 129, High Holborn, London, W.C.

—King John Act IV., sc. 3.

I am not myself a Freemason, but I have often amused myself by passing for one.

Freemasons are the most ignorant and credulous of mankind. I know—but then it does not become me to reiterate assertions, which sound like bragging, and, of course, as I am acquainted with everything, it amounts to a platitude to repeat that I am aware of this—I know more of Freemasonry than the brethren do themselves.

For instance, how few, or how many, Freemasons have ever enquired into the cause of the curious fact that the vast majority of the members of the Craft follow the avocation of undertakers?

It is so. I assert it. I know. That settles it.

Which postulate granted—as, of course, it must be—why is this thus? What is the reason of this thudness? as my most intimate and dear friend, the late Count Cavour used to say.

The immorality throughout Great Britain was never more hideously dreadful than it is at the present moment.

I lament it; I need not say this. The whole course of my previous life will attest the sincerity of my indignantly righteous denunciations of the prevalence of immorality.

But immorality has material results.

Alas!

Of all the useful handicraftsmen the necessities of an artificial state of society compel its votaries to employ, the undertaker is perhaps the most indispensable.

But may not his aid be sometimes invoked to conceal the results of vice, as well as with dignity and solemnity to hide the fragile tenement of clay that once clad the soul of the respected and lamented "loved and lost?"

An assistant schoolmaster, with whom I contract to supply me with the very little knowledge of English history I require in my business of gossip purveyor, sometimes most agreeably communicates his information over a glass of vermouth and a cigarette.

I invariably smoke the very best cigarettes.

My vermouth is the same as that supplied to His Excellency the Pasha of Beyrouth.

When I was in the House of Commons I served on the Members' Refreshment Committee. I endeavoured to procure the introduction of absinthe and vermouth.

I was defeated in this laudable object.

I was indubitably the most popular, and probably the most influential man in the House, but I was out-voted in the matter of vermouth and absinthe.

My instructor, the A.S., informs me that there existed a tradition, during the great civil war, that Lunford's Dragoons, then in arms for His Majesty's cause, used to breakfast on broiled babies.

I have breakfasted and dined upon almost everything, but I have never partaken of broiled babies. Boiled, with bread fruit sauce, they are very good eating.

The banquets of Freemasons are notoriously coarse and gross.

Undertakers are convenient purveyors.

The seal of secrecy is obviously an advantage.

When John Colman's son desired to descend a coal pit his father asked him why he wished to run the risk. He replied, "In order to say that he had been down a mine." Says Père, "What a fool you must be. Can't you say you have been down without going?"

I wouldn't be guilty of such mendacity for the world, Remember, I have never asserted myself to be a Freemason.
I have gone no further than saying that I have often been mistaken for one.
Perhaps I ought to have undeceived the deluded.
But I didn't.
To be taken for what you are not is perhaps, as the song says, "Naughty; but it's nice."
But I have passed the veils, as they say in the Order or Degree—the precise term is immaterial—of the Imperial Aqueduct. Oh, yes, I have passed the veils very often. I could never pass one without attempting to look under it.
Sometimes it would be raised,
Sometimes it wouldn't.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The consecration of the Duke of Cornwall Lodge, takes place this day (Saturday) at Freemasons' Hall. A full report will appear in our next.

Bro. Captain Webb and Bro. Captain Boyton are matched to swim a race of twenty miles, the former without artificial assistance and the latter with his buoyant suit and paddles.

THE LATE SIR ROWLAND HILL.—Bro. W. D. Keyworth, jun., has been permitted to take a cast after death of the late Sir Rowland Hill, K.C.B. It is Bro. Keyworth's intention to model a bust of the late Sir Rowland.

Bro. W. S. Daniel, of 84, Fleet-street, has established offices at 40, New Kent-road, S.E., and at Loughborough Junction (opposite booking offices of London, Chatham, and Dover Railway), for receiving advertisements for the Freemason.

Bro. Brackstone Baker, the Secretary of the Great Western Railway of Canada, has written a letter to the Grand Trunk Company in reply to one received from Sir Henry Tyler. He announces that Mr. Childers has retired from the board of the Great Western Company.

A lodge of instruction—which promises to be a very large and popular one—has just been formed at Putney, a spacious room at the Railway Hotel having been set apart for the use of the brethren. Bro. Charles E. Goldring, solicitor, is the Secretary. The time for meeting is eight o'clock on Monday evenings.—Mid Surrey Standard.

INSTRUCTION.—A meeting of the Wandsworth Lodge of Instruction, which has been removed from the Spread Eagle Hotel, was held on Tuesday evening, the 26th inst., at the Star and Garter Hotel, Wandsworth. Bros. J. J. Holland was the W.M.; F. Reed, S.W.; A. Newens, J.W. The two degrees were well worked. Votes of thanks were afterwards passed to the Treasurer (Bro. J. J. Holland), and Secretary (Bro. A. A. Denham), for this service.

We understand that that well-known and deservedly popular author, William Andrews, F.R.H.S., is about to publish a new work, entitled "Historic Romance, Strange Stories, Scenes, Mysteries, and Characters in our National and Local History." A somewhat novel and attractive feature of this forthcoming history is, that Mr. Andrews offers advance sheets of his new book, for simultaneous publication in a limited number of provincial journals, for twenty-six weeks, commencing in October 4th, 1879, each paper occupying about one-and-a-half column in length. An author so scholarly and notable for literary skill should command the attention of many of our leading journals, where his articles cannot fail to find favour with the general reader. We shall be glad to find that his "Historic Romance" runs its widening way from John O'Groats to the Land's End. Early communications should be sent to William Andrews, F.R.H.S., 4, Tinsley-terrace, Stamford Hill, London, N.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—[ADVT.]

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

SUSSEX ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—This Society visited Brighton on Wednesday, the 27th inst., when, despite drenching rain, there was a large attendance of members, associates, and friends. They assembled at the Pavilion, Museum and Library. Trips were taken to Rottingdean and Ovingdean, the ancient churches of which were visited, but a journey to Telscombe had to be abandoned owing to the weather. Returning to Brighton, the parish church of Old St. Nicholas was inspected, and a page on Sussex churches, by Archdeacon Haimes, read, and the party then adjourned to the Pavilion, where they dined. In the evening a soiréé on a large scale was given by the local committee.

Massey (Freemason).

Bro. John Read, P.M. 720, acted as Organist. Grand Lodge having been formally opened, Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, read the minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 4th of June, which were then put to Grand Lodge and confirmed.

Bro. Buss afterwards said he had received letters of excuse for being unable to attend Grand Lodge from Bros. Lord Carnarvon, Pro G.M.; Lord Henniker, Past G.W.; Lord Kensington, G.S.W.; Rev. W. A. Hill, G.C.; the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; the Rev. R. P. Bent, P.G.C.; E. E. Wendt, G. Sec. for German Correspondence; C. E. Willing, G. Org.; McIntyre, G. Reg.; and he had to announce that the Grand Secretary, Bro. Hervey, was too ill to attend, but he was happy to say that Bro. Hervey was improving in health. (Loud Applause.)

General Brownrigg said he was very happy indeed to hear that good news.

The Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C., then said: M.W.G.M., before we proceed with the business of the evening, may I ask the attention of Grand Lodge for a moment when I ask them to join with me, which I am sure they will do, in expressing our hearty sympathy with the Grand Secretary under the heavy trial which has lately befallen him, bringing him down by sickness, and our earnest and heartfelt prayer to the Great Architect of the Universe for his complete recovery. (General cries of "Hear, hear.")

General Brownrigg: I trust you will allow me to direct Bro. Buss to convey our feelings to the Grand Secretary. We all heartily endorse what has been said by the Grand Chaplain, and we all heartily wish that we may soon see Grand Secretary here safe among us again. Perhaps, Bro. Buss, you will be good enough to convey these expressions to Grand Secretary.

Bro. Buss then read the report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz.:

The widow of a brother of the Eleanor Lodge, No. 1707, Edmonton	50	0	0
The widow of a brother of the New Zealand Lodge of Unanimity, No. 604, Lyttelton, New Zealand	50	0	0
A brother of the Caveau Lodge, No. 176, London	100	0	0
The widow of a brother of the Phoenix Lodge, No. 257, Portsmouth	100	0	0
The widow of a brother of the Lodge of Amphy, No. 1319, London	50	0	0
A brother of the Maybury Lodge, No. 960, London	100	0	0
The widow of a brother of the Alfred

Lodge, No. 340, Oxford ... 100 0 0
 The widow of a brother of the Stortford Lodge, No. 409, Bishop's Stortford ... 100 0 0
 The widow of a brother of the Pentalfa Lodge, No. 974, Bradford, Yorks ... 50 0 0
 Bro. Joshua Nunn, as Senior Vice-President of the Lodge of Benevolence, is placing these recommendations before Grand Lodge for confirmation, said in reference to the first, that when it was proposed at the Lodge of Benevolence to give the brother £100 he (Bro. Nunn) objected to the amount as being too large. The brother had only been nine years and a-half a Mason. It was true he was a Past Master of his lodge, to which he subscribed down to the date of his application. Although Bro. Clabon had said previously at Grand Lodge that he did not think it was proper that Grand Lodge should go on increasing the large fund it had got, still he (Bro. Nunn) thought Grand Lodge ought to be just as well as generous, and he was bound, as Chairman of the June meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence, to bring this grant before Grand Lodge. He might say, however, that he did not recommend to Grand Lodge that the grant should be £100, and he should propose as an amendment that the grant be £50.

The motion having been seconded, Bro. Brackstone Baker, P.G.D., said: M.W.G.M., we are led to believe and suppose that the Lodge of Benevolence carefully look into all the details and all the particulars of the cases of those members of the Craft who apply to it for relief. I know nothing of either of the parties in this case. Unfortunately, my avocations prevented my attending the Board of Benevolence on the day when it was suggested that £100 should be granted to this brother; but £100 having been recommended, although I regret so much having been granted provisionally by the Board of Benevolence, and although I quite admit that the careful investigation that our Bro. Joshua Nunn gives to every case that is brought before him carries with it a sort quasi conviction, yet, I think that the Grand Lodge, before they decide to reduce the vote of £100 to £50, should be in possession of something more than merely the statement that Bro. Nunn has made. (Hear, hear.) I think so, Most Worshipful Grand Master in the chair. I have no proclivity either for one or the other, but I think it is only fair, if this sum of £100 is too much, and Bro. Nunn thinks that £50 is sufficient, that this Grand Lodge before they decide upon it should be in possession of something like an idea and a sketch of the motives and grounds upon which Bro. Nunn founds his amendment. I dare say Bro. Nunn is quite able to give his reasons, and I am far from saying he is not; but I think before the question is decided that he should give us some particulars in addition to the statement he has already made.

Bro. W. J. Murlis, Bro. G. P. Britten, and Bro. Russell, P.M. 77, rose together, and Bro. General Brownrigg called upon Bro. Russell to address Grand Lodge.

Bro. Russell, P.M. 77, then said: M.W.G.M., I much regret that the Vice-President has departed from the usual routine in this case. I fail to discern anything differing in the position of a Vice-President from that of an ordinary member serving on the Lodge of Benevolence after that a grant has been decided on. It is an incumbent on him as on any other member of that Committee to bow to the decision of the majority, except in the case of undue influence or of solicitation, neither of which is alleged to have taken place in this instance. Before the vote was taken the Vice-President strenuously opposed it. Well and good so far. But after the decision had once been arrived at I maintain that a graceful acquiescence would have been an appropriate part for him to have played. Besides, Grand Lodge is now placed in this invidious position—it is called upon to pronounce a decision, yet it has no evidence or anything worthy of the name of evidence placed before it whereby it is to be guided to that decision. On the other hand, a number of zealous and expert brethren are assembled expressly to dispense a charity fund, and meet at a time appointed for that purpose. Applications are made; full investigation is required; information is furnished; prescribed rules are complied with, and a grant is decided on. Surely, Most Worshipful Grand Master, the brethren with all that detailed information before them ought to be better judges of the amount to recommend than Grand Lodge, who have no special information before them. However, I will do what I can to remedy that defect, and put concisely before you the whole information connected with this case. Bro. ——— is about thirty-seven years of age. He was initiated in 1868, therefore, he was about twenty-six years of when he was initiated, a proper age for a man to join the Craft. He joined Royal Arch Masonry in 1870. He assisted to found the Erasmus Wilson Lodge at the end of 1874 and beginning of 1875. He was Worshipful Master of his mother lodge, No. 77, in the year 1874. To show Grand Lodge, M.W.G.M. in the chair, what his Masonic position at that time was in our province I would say that Lord Holmesdale, the Provincial Grand Master, selected the town of Gravesend in his year to hold the provincial festival, where it was held under the auspices of the lodge of which our Bro. ——— was Master, and in consequence he received the high honour of the Junior Provincial Grand Warden's collar. Bro. ——— is also a Life Subscriber to the Benevolent Institution. So much for his Masonic career. Now for his private life. I must inform Grand Lodge that he has a wife and seven children, the eldest only thirteen and a-half years of age. His father and mother are still living, both aged, and one bedridden. They having but a poor pittance, during his prosperity our Bro. ———, like a good Mason, devoted part of his income annually to assisting them, so as to as far as possible render the close of their days happy and comfortable, but now, alas! I fear as he is in distress he cannot render them that assistance to which they have been accustomed, and I am sorry to say their grey hairs must descend in sorrow to the grave. Finally, M.W.G.M. in the chair, Bro. ——— is afflicted with chronic rheumatism, from the effects of which he is permanently lame, and often for days is entirely confined to his house, and unable to do anything for a living. Since he failed he has eked out a miserable subsistence by teaching music, the sale of his furniture and valuables, and on the charity of a few private friends. The two latter sources are now nearly exhausted, and I very much fear that should he not speedily succeed in getting a situation Christmas will find him and his family without a roof over their heads. This sad fate Grand Lodge has in its power to avert, and I ask this Grand Lodge by its vote this evening to grant that sum which the majority of your representatives in the lodges of the Craft decided to recommend for him. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

General Brownrigg: Brethren, I do not wish to stop any discussion on this or on any other matter, but I do think, after all we have just heard, that we should not depart from our usual rule. I think we should be treading on very dangerous ground if we do not follow the recommendation of the Lodge of Benevolence. We have a Board of Benevolence, and it is for them to look into all these cases; and I think that unless some very strong ground is shown for refusing the grants recommended we are bound to endorse them. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. G. P. Britten: M.W.G.M. in the chair, may I be permitted to say a few words? From your own remarks, and the evident feeling shown by Grand Lodge, I take it for granted that this vote is already assured. But there is something in this matter of still greater importance and wider scope than voting £50 or £100 to Bro. ———. At the last meeting of Grand Lodge it will be in the memory of the brethren that Bro. Clabon brought forward a motion to the effect that the funds in the hands of the Lodge of Benevolence were excessive, and he made a very eloquent speech, setting forth with great clearness what he thought ought to be done with those funds; and then he withdrew his motion, thereby preventing any brethren stating their views on the subject. A good many of us thought that the fund of the Lodge of Benevolence is more especially a fund for Masonic Charity than, perhaps, either of the three other Masonic Charities. It is established for brethren in distress, the relief of whom is a duty enjoined upon us at our initiation, and impressed upon us in every step in Freemasonry, and it may justly be denominated the peculiar characteristic of Freemasons. Not having an opportunity of appealing to Grand Lodge on last occasion, some of us thought it was desirable to raise this question in another form, and this vote of £100 to Bro. ———, undoubtedly excessive as compared with the usual practice of the Lodge of Benevolence, was expressly proposed and carried, because (our Bro. Joshua Nunn, who was in the chair on that occasion, said that when it came before Grand Lodge he should oppose it)—this was expressly carried for the purpose of asking Grand Lodge to pronounce its opinion whether the funds of the Lodge of Benevolence should be held sacred to their legitimate purpose, or else voted to some other purpose, very good in itself, but altogether alien to the purposes of the Lodge of Benevolence. I hope that Grand Lodge by an overwhelming vote will confirm this grant, and, therefore, declare their view that the funds of the Lodge of Benevolence are to be dispensed in objects of charity.

Bro. Joshua Nunn said as he had been asked to give his reasons for opposing the recommendation, he would give them. He would make no reference to what had been said by the last speaker. He (Bro. Nunn) told the Lodge of Benevolence that it would be his duty to bring up the recommendation to Grand Lodge, but that he could not advise Grand Lodge to confirm it, and for this reason, that on the same night that the recommendation of this large amount was made, a Mason, who had been twenty-eight years in Masonry, was assisted with only £40. He was of opinion that the lodge should be just as well as generous, and he thought it was not just that a Mason of nine years' standing should have nearly three times as much money granted to him as a Mason of twenty-eight years' standing.

Bro. Binckes, who was met with loud cries of "Vote," said with reference to the remarks of Bro. Britten, that on a question of this kind, the relief of a distressed brother, Grand Lodge ought not to be asked to decide on a by-issue. He (Bro. Binckes) should support the £100 recommendation, but on totally different grounds to those of Bro. Britten. He asked Grand Lodge to vote on the issue of relief, and on no other issue whatever.

The recommendation was then carried, and the other recommendations having also been adopted, Grand Lodge was closed in due form, the report of the Board of General Purposes having been first received and adopted.

REPORTS, etc., intended for insertion in current number, should reach the Office, (198, Fleet-street), by six o'clock p.m., on Wednesdays.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 29th ult., at the Red Lion Hotel, Thames-street, Lion-square, Hampton. Bro. J. B. Shackleton, P.G.P. Middx., P.M. 1524, W.M., opened the lodge. A letter, which had been signed by three Past Masters and addressed to the Secretary, was read. Ballots were taken separately, and were declared to be unanimous in favour of the admission of Messrs. Tristram Frederick Edwin Walters (son of the Secretary), Edwin Charles Percy Stevens (son of Bro. James Stevens, P.M. 1426, Great City Lodge), Lewis Cohen, John Vickers Willis, Robert Follett, John Henry Ewen, and William Skerritt. The Secretary, Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., &c., in reply to the courteous offer of the W.M. to permit him to initiate his son Tristram, said his son would not be twenty-one years of age until March 24th, 1880, that he would prefer waiting until the next regular meeting in May, when he would gladly accept the kind and gracious offer of the Worshipful Master. In the same kind, courteous manner the W.M., Bro. J. B. Shackleton, offered the chair to Bro. J. Stevens, P.M., for the purpose of initiating his son, who was present. The W.M., in a sensible speech, expressed the great gratification he felt in knowing that two such well-known and highly distinguished Masons should have selected the Lebanon Lodge, 1326, to have their sons (one, the Secretary's, being his firstborn) initiated there, both candidates being under twenty-two years of age. Bro. James Stevens, P.M., took the chair. Bro. Col. F. Burdett, R.W.P.G.M., having expressed his wish that in all lodges in his province the candidates should be introduced separately, his wish is most religiously carried out here; the Lebanon Lodge greatly distinguishing itself in the way each candidate is introduced into the lodge. Amidst the most profound silence Mr. Edwin Charles Percy Stevens was introduced as a candidate for the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry, then, in a way that has never been surpassed, and but very seldom equalled, Bro. James Stevens initiated his son Edwin into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. He gave an explanation of the Tracing Board and the charge, which he supplemented with choice and beautiful language, so appropriate to the candidate. It must be recorded that (to use some words we heard made use of between the veteran Secretary and Bro. T. Poore, the subject being the initiation of Bro. E. Stevens) the ceremony was beautifully rendered, so correct, impressive, and soul-stirring. It was an intellectual treat, well worth "coming up from Leicestershire," or any where else to listen to. It would be an impossibility to enquire the initiation of Bro. E. Stevens or to bring the presiding W.M. before the footlights, but, to gratify the desires of those who were present, and at the express desire of the W.M., he initiated Mr. Lewis Cohen, who (being Hebrew) caused the ceremony to be a little varied. The W.M., Bro. J. B. Shackleton, took the chair, and, in an admirable manner, first initiated Mr. John Vickers Willis, and completed the afternoon's labour by initiating Mr. Robert Follett. The lodge was then closed. It was arranged to hold another emergency meeting in September. Refreshment followed labour. There were present besides those mentioned Bros. J. W. Baldwin, P.P.G.P. Middx., P.M., J.W.; D. Steinhauer, I.G.; J. J. Marsh, Org.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., Sec.; J. Stevens, P.M.; T. W. Adams, P.M.; R. Meyer, P.M.; C. Lucop, C. W. Baker, H. Potter, P.M., W.S. The visitors were Bros. W. J. Meek, Sec. 199; R. Masters, 1656; and others.

DALTON-IN-FURNESS.—Baldwin Lodge (No. 1389).—On Wednesday week the installation of Bro. James Garden as W.M. of this lodge took place in the lodge room, at the Castle, the installing officers being Bros. Thomas Dodgson, P.P.G.P., and R. Pearson, P.P.G.P., 995. Prior to the ceremony, a beautifully finished and remarkably striking likeness (in oil) of the recipient was presented to Bro. Baldwin, the founder of the lodge. In thanking the brethren for their gift, Bro. Baldwin said that if a place for it could be found in the lodge room, he would have great pleasure in giving it back to the lodge. This offer was accepted with thanks. A banquet was afterwards partaken of in the Wellington Hotel, provided by Bro. F. Bell in his usual excellent style. There was a fair sprinkling of visiting brethren. During the after proceedings Bro. Garden presented a jewel to Bro. Hosking for his services during the year. The officers for the incoming year are as follows: Bros. J. Garden, W.M.; R. Hosking, I.P.M.; T. Grieve, S.W.; R. Blake, J.W.; Rev. J. M. Morgan, Chap.; C. Godby, Treas.; R. Whiteside, Sec.; T. Trembath, S.D.; E. B. Mitchell, J.D.; G. B. Ashburner, Org.; R. Fownley, I.G.; J. T. Lawn, S.S.; F. Postethwaite, I.G.; and W. Pratt, Tyler. The Director of Ceremonies was Bro. John Case, P.M. 995.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge (No. 1536).—On Friday evening, the 29th ult., there was an emergency meeting of this lodge at the Lord Raglan Hotel, Plumstead, for the purpose of taking into consideration the advisability of removing the lodge regalia from the New Masonic Hall adjoining the Sir Robert Peel, where the meetings have hitherto been held, to the Lord Raglan, with the view to the future meetings of the lodge being held at the latter place. Bro. Hay Grieve Picken, I.P.M. (in the absence through illness of Bro. Shaw, the W.M.), occupied the chair, supported by Bros. Daniel Deeves, S.W.; William Welding, J.W.; Weston, P.M.; Murphy, Treasurer; George Kennedy, Secretary; and a strong muster of brethren. The ordinary business of the lodge having been disposed of, Bro. Walter Hume, of Lodge 160, S.C., and Bro. Daniel Baker, of Lodge 190, were duly balloted for and accepted as joining members. Mr. Thomas Hunt was regularly initiated into the rites and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry. Bro. Waldron was passed to the Second Degree, with the usual formalities. The acting W.M. informed the brethren of the circumstances under which it had become necessary to bring the question of removal from the Sir Robert Peel before the lodge, and left the matter to the discussion of the members. A discussion ensued, in the course of which Bros. Weston, McClelland, Kennedy, and Watkins took part, when it was ultimately decided to remove the lodge furniture and regalia to the Lord Raglan, the necessary authority being obtained from Grand Lodge for such removal. Doubts were expressed as to the capability of the hall at the Lord Raglan for the accommodation of the lodge, there being over 140 members on its books.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The brethren connected with this lodge met at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, on Tuesday afternoon, the 26th ult., and as this was the election meeting all the greater interest attached to the gathering. There was a numerous attendance of members and visitors. The lodge was duly opened by Bro. Lindo Courtenay, W.M., and amongst his officers there were Bros. W. J. Chapman, I.P.M.; Joseph Bell, P.M., D.C., P.G.S.; B. B. Marson, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; J. B. MacKenzie, S.W.; W. W. Sandbrook, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treas., W.M. 1356; John Atkinson, Sec.; R. Burgess, Org.; Joseph Skeaf, P.G.O., Hon. Org.; J. Pyer, I.G.; W. Savwell, S.S.; H. P. Squire, J.S.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. The list of members included the names of Bros. T. J. Adams, J. Ballard, J. W. R. Brown, P. F. Buck, J. Bayliss, C. Courtenay, J. de Frece, J. Hill, W. Heap, R. H. D. Johnson, P. Lowndes, H. Y. Pitts, J. Penny, H. Round, J. L. Shrapnell, D. Saunders, M. P. Tueski, E. H. Thompson, R. Williams, Dr. R. Williams, and others. The visitors who were present included Bro. Harry Jackson, Cyril Searle, H. C. Sidney, H. Firth, W.M. 667; G. Maxwell, Wright, and others. Bro. J. Bayliss, having been passed to the Second Degree, the brethren afterwards proceeded to the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, and the S.W. (Bro. MacKenzie) was unanimously chosen to fill that important office. Bro. A. Woolrich was again elected nem. con. to the office of Treasurer, a position which he has held since the consecration of the lodge, and in connection with the election, the W.M. spoke in high terms of the manner in which Bro. Woolrich had fulfilled the onerous duties of his office, and the compliment was feelingly acknowledged by the Treasurer. Twelve guineas were voted for the purchase of a Past Master's jewel for presentation to Bro. L. Courtenay, W.M., and after a substantial sum had been voted for the relief of a distressed widow, the lodge was closed according to ancient form. A banquet followed, and during the evening the toasts of "The W.M." and "The W.M. elect" were cordially proposed and warmly received. Bro. Cyril Searle responded on behalf of "The Visitors," and the proceedings closed about seven with the Tyler's toast. Songs and recitations of an enjoyable kind were given by Bros. Sidney, Harry Jackson, C. Searle, Chapman, R. Williams, and others; and a piano solo and accompaniments were played with masterly effect by Bro. R. Burgess, Organist of the lodge.

INSTRUCTION.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—A meeting of this lodge of instruction was held at Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston, on Wednesday, the 3rd inst. There were present Bros. C. Lorkin, W.M.; A. McDonald, S.W.; F. Jacob, J.W.; J. Lorkin, S.D.; J. L. Payne, J.D.; W. Ferrar, I.G.; W. Fieldwick, Preceptor; J. Williams, Sec.; and other brethren. The lodge was opened in ancient form and with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Williams being the candidate. Bro. W. Fieldwick, assisted by the brethren, worked the First, Second, and Third Sections of the Lecture. Bro. W. Fieldwick proposed, and Bro. F. Jacob seconded—"That Bro. A. McDonald be W.M. for the ensuing week." Carried unanimously. The following brethren were elected as officers of the lodge:—Bros. W. Fieldwick, Preceptor; C. Lorkin, and J. Williams, Secretary. Bro. J. Lorkin proposed, and Bro. F. Jacob seconded—"That the fifth Wednesday in every month be at the use of the Secretary." Carried unanimously. Bro. W. Fieldwick proposed, and Bro. J. Lorkin seconded—"That the annual supper of the lodge take place on Wednesday, 1st October." Carried unanimously. Nothing further offering, the lodge was closed in ancient form.

BURY.—Chapter of Unanimity (No. 42).—The annual installation meeting was held at the Derby Hotel on Wednesday, the 27th ult. In the absence of Comp. G. O'Neill, Z., through illness, the chapter [was opened by Comp. Halliwell, P.Z., assisted by Comps. J. Randle Fletcher, H.; W. Balmer, J.; W. O. Walker, P.Z., P.P.G.S.N.; and other members. There were also present as visitors Comps. C. N. Beswicke Royds, P.Z., P.G.H.; and J. H. Sillitoe, P.Z. 317, P.P.G.D. of C. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, after which Comp. Sillitoe installed and invested the following Principals and officers, viz.: Comps. J. Randle Fletcher, Z.; W. Balmer, H.; F. Probert, J.; S. Hamer, S.E.; A. Hopkinson, S.N.; W. Barrett, P.S.; W. Hutchinson, 1st A.S.; the Rev. W. R. Clayton, 2nd A.S.; J. W. Kenyon, Treas.; H. Bates, Janitor. At the close of the installation ceremony, Comp. Fletcher, Z., in very eulogistic terms, proposed a vote of thanks to Comp. Sillitoe for his attendance and valuable assistance, which was seconded by Comp. Balmer, H., and carried with acclamation. Comp. W. O. Walker desired to mark the pleasure the chapter had experienced from the visit of their Provincial Grand Second Principal, and proposed a vote of thanks to Comp. Royds for his attendance. Comp. Halliwell, P.Z., seconded the same. Comp. Royds, in reply, assured the companions that he was always ready to do anything within his power to promote the interests of that or any other chapter in the province. The chapter was closed in solemn form. The companions adjourned to a banquet, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening followed.

PANMURE LODGE (No. 139).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Monday last, the W.M., Bro. William Poore, P. Prov. G.J.O., in the chair. The members present were Bros. Thos. Poore, P.G.I.G., P.M.; G. Lilley, P.M.; Pulman, P.M. (W.M. elect); J. Stevens, P.G.J.O., Sec., P.M.; J. J. Gibson, P.P.G.S. of Werks; W. Ackland, Mitchell, Gunner, Vincent, Spiegel, Whittaker, and W. Steedman, Tyler. After confirmation of the minutes the ballot was taken for Bros. C. B. Gibson and Hawkins, and they were duly advanced by the W.M. Bro. Thos. Poore, P.G.I.G., then took the chair to instal the W.M. (Bro. Pulman), who was presented by the retiring W.M. The ceremony was performed in Bro. Poore's usual style, to the great delight of the brethren assembled, and at its conclusion the officers were invested as follows: Bros. J. J. Gibson, S.W.; W. Ackland, J.W.; W. Mitchell, M.O.; J. Syer, S.O.; H. Baldwin, J.O.; G. Lilley, Treas.; W. Gunner, Secretary; W. Vincent, S.D.; Whittaker, I.G.; W. Steedman, Tyler. A motion was brought forward, and carried unanimously, for a Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners to be worked in connection with the Panmure Lodge. At the conclusion of the business the lodge was closed in due form. The only visitors were Bro. G. Lovegrove, Prov. G. Sup. of Wks., and Bro. Sheadd. The usual toasts were duly honoured, that of "The Past Masters" being responded to by Bro. Stevens, the founder of the lodge, in a most eloquent and effective manner. The newly-invested officers responded to the toast in their honour, and promised to assist the W.M. to promote the welfare of the lodge.

COCKERMOUTH.—Faithful Lodge (No. 229).—The first anniversary of this young but progressing lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 27th ult., in the Masonic Hall, Station-street. It is only twelve months since the lodge was consecrated by the R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland, Bro. Colonel Whitwell, M.P., and only six weeks prior to that when a warrant was applied for; yet during the first year marked progress has been made, as, in addition to the six charter members, ten brethren have been advanced to the Honourable Degree, whilst another was proposed on the anniversary night. The brethren assembled at seven o'clock, when there were present Bros. W. F. Lamson, W.M., P.P.A.D.C. (Freemason); R. Robinson, S.W., W.M. elect; W. H. Lewthwaite, J.W.; Capt. Sewell, M.O.; R. W. Robinson, S.O.; T. C. Robinson, J.O.; J. Black, Treas., Sec., and Reg. M.; H. Peacock, S.D.; W. Shilton, I.G.; J. Hewson, Tyler; and W. Paisley. The remainder of the members were an unavoidably out of town. The visitors were Bros. P. de E. Collin, P.M. 151, P.G. Sec., Grand Steward of England; J. Gardiner, P.M. 151, P.G.J.W.; G. Dalrymple, W.M. 216, P.G.J.D.; J. Harper, P.M. 216, P.G. Swd. Wr.; J. H. Raven, J. Quay, J. Wilson, J. W. Robinson, 151; and J. B. Paisley, 60. After the lodge was opened and the minutes confirmed, the officer of the Grand Lodge mentioned was announced, and on his entry was saluted. Three members were then elected to serve on the permanent committee for the ensuing year, after which Bro. Black was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, as also Bro. Hewson, Tyler. Bro. R. Robinson was then presented to the W.M. for installation by Bro. Gardiner, and he was regularly placed in the chair of A. After the presentation of the working tools, warrant, &c., on the re-admission of the brethren generally, the following officers were then invested:—Bros. W. H. Lewthwaite, S.W.; Capt. Sewell, J.W.; R. W. Robinson, M.O.; T. C. Robinson, S.O.; H. Peacock, J.O.; J. Black, Treas., Sec., and Reg. M.; W. Shilton, S.D.; W. Paisley, J.D.; Geo. Brash, Steward; T. Mason, I.G.; Jos. Hewson, Tyler. The addresses to the W.M. and Wardens, and those to the Overseers and brethren of Faithful Lodge, were delivered by Bros. Gardiner and Dalrymple respectively, to whom a hearty vote of thanks was accorded. Bro. C. H. McCall, of Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002, was then proposed as a candidate for advancement, and, after the usual closing address from the I.P.M., the brethren adjourned to the Rampant Bull, where a most excellent supper awaited them, thanks to the well-trying catering of Bro. Peacock and his better half. The remainder of the evening, up to midnight, was spent in the most happy manner, under the presidency of the newly-installed Master, and the customary Grand Lodge, provincial, and complimentary toasts were honoured. In the intervals, too, some delightful harmony was contributed, the gems of which were "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," and "The Village Blacksmith," admirably sung by Bro. J. B. Paisley, whilst "Tam O'Shanter" was recited by Bro. Dalrymple in a style not to be approached by any but a native of "Caledonia stern and wild."

PHOENIX LODGE (No. 914).—At the ordinary meeting of this lodge, held at Port Royal on the 5th August last, a large number of brethren gathered to assist in the installation of the Master elect and officers for the ensuing year. The installing Master was the W. Bro. G. P. Myers, who called on the W. Bro. L. C. Hollar to present the Senior Warden, Bro. John Tyndall, for installation. The following is a list of the administration: W. Bros. J. Tyndall, Master; G. P. Myers, I.P.M.; Bros. W. C. H. Hastings, S.W.; J. Feesy, J.W.; J. Anderson, Treas.; A. Duffus, Sec.; W. Organ, S.D.; M. H. Smyth, J.D.; J. Wenman, I.G.; W. B. Hannan, Tyler. The brethren having completed their labours, were called to refreshment, and under the charge of the Junior Warden enjoyed a most pleasant evening. It may be interesting to state that the administration is entirely formed from brethren connected with H.M. Naval Department, and their positions are as follows:—Wor. Bro. John Tyndall, Surgeon H.M. R.N. Hospital; Bros. M. C. H. Hastings, Lieutenant H.M. Sur. Schr. "Sparrow Hawk;" J. Feesy, Clerk, R.N. Hospital; E. Anderson, Chief Clerk, H.M. Dockyard; A. Duffus, Dispenser, R.N.; W. Organ, Master Carpenter, H.M. Dockyard; M. H. Smyth, Lieut., H.M. Sur. Schr. "Sparrow Hawk;" J. Wenman, Warrant Officer, H.M. S. "Urgent;" W. B. Hannan, Warrant Officer, H.M. S. "Urgent," (retired).

CONSECRATION OF THE DUKE OF CORNWALL LODGE, No. 1839.

The Duke of Cornwall Lodge, No. 1839, was consecrated last Saturday at Freemasons' Hall by Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, P.G.D., who was assisted by Bros. Capt. N. G. Philips, P.G.D., as S.W.; Hugh D. Sandeman, Past District Grand Master of Bengal, as J.W.; Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg, Past Grand Chaplain, as Chaplain; Frank Richardson, Past Grand Steward, as D. of C.; T. C. Walls, Past Prov. Grand Org. Middlesex, as I.G.; and several other brethren, among whom were Bros. J. W. Brooke, T. C. Corpe, W. Gibson Bott, J. W. Dewsnap, Henry Cruse, George B. Smith, jun., Alfred Stokes, G. F. Smith, J. C. Wilkins, Adolph Baumann, Rev. S. B. Harris, P.M. 538; J. T. Calkin, 586; James Dann, P.M. 72; J. Shirley Hodson, 1706; John P. Sadler, 1670; Henry Gadsby, 1706; G. M. A. Low, S.D. 1589; F. H. Gruggen, 1670; H. Sadler, G. Tyler; and H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason).

After the lodge had been opened in the Three Degrees, Bro. Col. Shadwell Clerke said: Brethren, we have met here to-day for a very important purpose, viz., to add one more unit to the number of the great family of Masonic lodges in England—a lodge which has been honoured in being permitted to bear one of the titles of our Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. I feel sure that the founders will feel greatly the honour thus conferred on them, and I hope, and fully believe, from what I have heard of the high character of the Master designate and the founders of the lodge, that they will so conduct this lodge in every respect as never to give His Royal Highness cause to regret having given permission to the lodge to use his name.

The usual ceremonies were then gone through, and the following oration was then delivered by the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, Past Grand Chaplain, who said: Brethren, "In all labour there is profit." "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." So does God teach us by the words of our Grand Master Solomon, and how well did our ancient brethren follow this teaching. Whatsoever they did they did it as well as they could. They laboured for God's honour and God's glory, not simply for man's wages, and they thought nothing too good for God. Their heart was in their work; their principle was to do everything well, whether they got the credit for it or not. Every stone they laid was a practical sermon on the words I have quoted to you. Look at the buildings of our ancient fraternity and you will see a careful attention to every detail of the work—Work that was out of sight or far removed from the eye was not scamped and hurried over. Every colour was chosen with care, every ornament was in harmony, every man had his work. Some were hewing the timber in such forests as Lebanon, or moulding the brass vessels in such places as the clay ground between Zuccoth and Zarthan. Some were employed on the rough ashlar, others in finishing the exquisite tracery of the stone work—all, from the lowest to the highest, with their heart in the work, whatever it was, all endeavouring to do what they did do to the very best of their power; all labouring in obedience to the mind and direction of the architect. And what is the result? We see it in those buildings of our ancient fraternity which time has spared to us. There is a something about these works, a something more than the mere charm of antiquity, which speaks to our inmost heart of God. We feel that the house has been built for Him. Oh! what a contrast here to the noisy, glaring, garish temples which the world builds for her business or her pleasures. The work has grown beautiful and solemn under the hands of Craftsmen who worked for God, and it bears in every part the memorial of their high religious principle. The idle, selfish, unprincipled Craftsmen would not do such work. Why is it so difficult now-a-days to produce this "feeling" in our works? We can get the money, the stone, the wood, all that our ancient brethren had. We have many advantages which they had not, the appliances of modern skill and science. Yes, we ought to do better than they did, but we do not, as a rule, do as well. Why? Is it not because we cannot get the old workmen whose hearts were in their work, and who worked not only for their wages but also chiefly for God's honour and glory? But we meet to-day not as operative but as speculative, or free and accepted, Masons. Let us apply these lessons which we learn from the work of our ancient brethren to our morals. We have met together to-day, men of different professions, different tastes, different positions in life. Are we each of us carrying into our everyday life these principles, to do everything as well as we can, and everything not for self but for God? I think these are the principles which every ceremony of our lodge does try to impress upon our minds. There is nothing against which true Masonry sets her face so sternly as against idleness, selfishness, or the want of a right purpose in life. The man who values every day merely in proportion to the pleasures and amusements it brings; the man who cares only to please self; and, above all, the man who has not a high religious principle, independent of Masonry—all these are untrue and unworthy members of our Craft. My brethren of the Duke of Cornwall Lodge, when any one knocks at the door of your lodge for admittance, ask yourselves the question—Is he a man who is doing honestly as well as he can the work, whatever it may be, which God has set him to do in this life? And do not let him as a candidate ever pass that threshold unless you can answer this question satisfactorily. There is a need to be on our guard. We are living in times when Masonry is fashionable. Fashion brings to our doors men to whom our Order can be only an empty form. Surely it is well then to be careful; and will not this care have this real practical effect for good? If the idler—the coarse, sensual liver—and the profane find our doors closed against them, may it not be one means of bringing some of them to think "for what end was I made?" and so cause, at all events, some of them, having found the true answer, to return after a while and knock a second time, when we shall be able conscientiously to receive them. But we must watch ourselves as well as the candidates, and humbly endeavour to keep true to our principles. It is very easy to drift into a purposeless life; it is very hard to be always at labour. And yet, my brethren, in one sense all life, even the hour of recreation, is labour—a labour in all things to show forth God's honour and glory, to watch against anything which may dishonour Him. From this labour there will be no cessation until we hear those words "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord"—that joy to which alone those who here are not weary in well doing will be admitted—that joy which is itself the blessed work of ever doing God's will where sin will have no place.

At the conclusion of this oration Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke proceeded with the consecration of the lodge, and when this had been completed the Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg left for Newport Pagnell, where his ministerial duties for next day were numerous. Lieut.-Col. Clerke then installed Bro. Joseph Woolley, W.M. designate, in the chair of the lodge, and the following brethren were invested with the collars of their respective offices: Bros. Charles T. Corpe, S.W.; Dr. W. Gibson Bott, J.W.; J. W. Dewsnap, Treas.; Henry Cruse, Sec.; George F. Smith, jun., S.D.; Alfred Stokes, J.D.; George F. Smith, sen., D.C.; J. C. Wilkins, I.G.; Adolph Baumann, Std.; and Goddard, Tyler.

Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke afterwards delivered the addresses, and a Committee was then appointed to frame and consider the bye-laws of the lodge.

On the motion of the S.W., seconded by the J.W., the thanks of the lodge were voted to Bros. Lieut.-Col. Clerke, Capt. Philips, Hugh Sandeman, Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg, and Frank Richardson for their able services in the ceremony of consecration and installation, and these brethren, as well as Col. Du Plat, were elected honorary members of the lodge.

Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke acknowledged the compliment on behalf of himself and the other Consecrating Officers, and expressed the pleasure it had given all of them to be instrumental in launching the Duke of Cornwall Lodge, which they hoped they would avail themselves of the opportunity of visiting on more than one occasion.

Letters of apology for inability to attend were read by the Secretary from Bros. General Brownrigg, Prov. G.M. for Surrey; Malony, P.M. 25; Col. Du Plat, and Maybrick, 1706. A list of names for initiation and joining was then read, and the lodge being afterwards closed, the brethren afterwards adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, where a choice banquet, provided by Bro. Best and superintended by Bro. Dawkins, was partaken of.

At the subsequent proposing of the toasts of the evening, the W.M., in giving the toast of "The Queen and the Craft," said the Master of a new lodge when he rose for the first time in his lodge always proposed one toast. It was the custom in all countries speaking the English language that the toast of "The Queen" should take precedence of all others, and it was not the custom in Masonic lodges to do otherwise. But Masons coupled with it "The Craft," because every man who was a good Mason was supposed to be a loyal subject. In proposing "The M.W.G.M.," he said that Masons were proud to have their heir apparent to the throne of Old England at their head, and a better Grand Master he thought could not be found. The brethren of the Duke of Cornwall Lodge required no proof of the interest His Royal Highness took in Freemasonry, as he (the W.M.) held in his hand the warrant of the lodge, signed with His Royal Highness's own hand.

In proposing "The Pro Grand Master, &c.," the W.M. said that whilst such men were at the helm of the jolly good barque of Freemasonry as Lords Carnarvon and Skelmersdale, assisted by such Grand Officers as were present that evening, the barque would be safely steered through every storm, and be able to avoid every quicksand such as the Grand Orient of France had drifted on.

Bro. Sandeman, Past District Grand Master of Bengal, replied, and said that to every Grand Officer it was a matter of very great interest to be present at so important an event as the consecration of a new lodge. He had been looking forward to that evening for a considerable time. He believed there was only one other lodge bearing the same name as the lodge that had just been dedicated, and he and the other Grand Officers heartily wished it might live and prosper to a good old age. The family of English lodges was getting very large, and if any Mason twenty-five years ago had ventured to say that at a future time there would be 1839 lodges on the roll, he would have been looked upon as a Masonic optimist. There was no doubt that America and England, the two great English-speaking countries of the world, were masters of the position as regarded Freemasonry—it was only in America, England, and the colonies that Masonry really flourished, not as a political engine working against the good of the State, as, alas, it was in so many continental countries, but a strong political power to uphold the government, because although Masons were told that they must not speak politics in lodge, yet Masons like other men had their politics, which were to uphold the civil magistrate, to support the law of the land, and to maintain the principles of their Order at any cost to themselves. If they acted fully up to their profession they should set an example to the whole world, and show how men of cultivation, education, and science, men of every position, rank, and scale in society, knew how to honour God and their Sovereign; and it was for this reason that the English lodges were the envy and wonder of all continental Masons, who could not boast the same thing. Foreign lodges were merely political engines, sometimes for good, and sometimes for evil. Bro. Sandeman concluded by thanking the brethren for the toast, and for the hearty reception that had been given to the Grand Officers.

The W.M., in proposing "The Consecrating Officer, Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, P.G.D.," said he was sure all the brethren, as well as himself, had been deeply interested in the ceremony, and were delighted with the ready and excellent way in which the work had been performed. The brethren's very best thanks were due to Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, for so kindly attending and performing the ceremonies of consecration and installation, and he (the W.M.) felt he could not sufficiently express all he would like to say of him in recommending this toast to the brethren.

Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, in reply, said it afforded him very great pleasure when the W.M. wrote to him to perform the ceremony of the day, to be able to accept the invitation. It must be to any Mason who had the interests of the Order at heart a deeply gratifying feeling to be able to perform duties which would further the interests of the Order. He need not remind the brethren that consecrating a lodge was a very important and useful ceremony, and when he was asked to attend and officiate he did so with great pleasure and readiness. From what he knew of the brethren who formed the Duke of Cornwall Lodge he felt certain that it would not disgrace the Order. He was afraid there was at the present day too great a desire and too great a temptation among the lodges to press matters to extremes in vying with each other as to the number of initiates they made, in fact, entirely forgetting the principle to obtain quality in striving to obtain quantity. He was, therefore, pleased to learn from the W.M. that that would not be the principle of the Duke of Cornwall Lodge, but that they meant to go quietly and slowly, but surely, ahead. If they would only take a candidate now and then, when they were sure he was a good man and true, they would get on. They had frequently been told that it was very easy to get an undesirable member into a lodge, but it was uncommonly hard to get rid of him afterwards. Therefore, they might depend upon it that the principle which he (Bro. Lieut.-Col. Clerke) advocated was the best. Do not try to make the lodge too large, as some were, in which there was such a mass of brethren that there was very little chance of a man getting into the chair. He was sorry that some of his colleagues were unavoidably obliged to leave before the banquet. The eloquent brother, the Chaplain, who had so delighted them with his oration, lived a long way off, and he had four services to perform the next day, and, therefore, his presence in his parish was necessary. A severe domestic bereavement rendered it impossible for Captain Philips at present to stop to banquets after Masonic work; and Bro. Frank Richardson had a long standing engagement which had compelled him to leave when the lodge work was over. He mentioned these facts to show to the brethren that it was not through any lack of respect to the lodge that so many of the brethren who were at the consecration were not at a banquet. Their hearts, however, were with the brethren, and they felt the honour conferred upon them in being asked to assist in performing the ceremonies. Like himself, they took great interest in the future welfare of the lodge. With respect to himself, he felt very grateful for the honour conferred on him, and as long as he lived he should watch the career of the lodge most carefully and with a very great deal of interest. Before sitting down he would ask the brethren to join him in drinking "The Health of the W.M." Bro. Brooke had not long been a Mason, but he was a brother who had the interests of Masonry very dearly at heart, and from what the brethren had seen that night when he invested his officers they might be sure he would do his work well. He (Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke) had frequently seen Masters appoint and invest their officers, but he most candidly confessed that he never had seen a Master deliver the charges to his officers so fluently and perfectly. Ex uno disce omnes; and the brethren might, therefore, rely upon it the W.M. would do all the other work required of him in an equally efficient manner. The W.M. meant to do uncommonly well, and the brethren were very fortunate in having a brother like the W.M. to preside over them. He was very keen, and in a long correspondence he had upon the subject of the lodge on various points, he displayed an immense amount of keenness. That was a great point, and the brethren were extremely fortunate in having secured Bro. Brooke for the first W.M. of the Duke of Cornwall lodge.

The W.M., in reply, said the most disagreeable part of his duties, the speaking about himself, now devolved upon him, and consequently if he should get through it as quickly as possible the brethren would not blame him. In the first place he felt deeply indebted to the brethren for drinking the toast so enthusiastically, especially to Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, for the kind and flattering manner in which he had proposed it. As the first W.M. of the lodge to which the brethren had been kind enough to recommend him, it was his wish and desire to render the Duke of Cornwall Lodge all that Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke had said for it. They intended to be very careful whom they admitted to their ranks and would not admit any one hastily. Their lodge had the title of the Duke of Cornwall Lodge, and they owed it to the Grand Master to make the lodge worthy of the name. He asked the brethren to excuse him saying so little as he was only a baby W.M. When he had been a little longer in the chair he hoped to be able to say a little more.

The W.M. next proposed "The Visitors." The expression used in lodge, "brethren in the north, east, south, and west," was not a mere empty flow of words, because there were frequently in lodges brethren from India, China, Africa, Cape of Good Hope, and the continent.

Bros. Dann, Walls, and Calkin replied; and the Rev. E. B. Harris, in also responding, said this was the first consecration he had ever been present at, and he must say that with all the working he was not only delighted but instructed. He could not help feeling it was a great pity the Grand Chaplain should have been obliged to go so early, because after the admirable teaching he had given in his oration in the lodge they were justified in thinking he might have given them some more of it after banquet. They were surrounded by all those things which reminded them of God's goodness towards them, of the wonderful care of the Great Architect of the Universe, and they should all remember, and never forget, as Masons, that the two great principles of Masonry were these—to love the Lord our God first with all their heart, and all their mind, and soul, and strength, and then to love their neighbour as themselves.

The W.M. then proposed "The Press," to which Bro. Massey replied, and the toast of "The Officers," to which each of those brethren responded individually, concluded the business of the evening.

The Tyler's toast was then proposed and drunk, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

The ceremony of consecration was assisted by a musical selection under the direction of Bro. George F. Smith, jun., Organist and director of the choir of St. John's, Angell Town, Brixton, who had with him some of the boys of the choir. Bro. Chubb, G. F. Smith, sen., Mr. F. W. Flower, and Mr. Page Hannant also assisted in the music after dinner, and Bro. Walls and several other brethren likewise contributed their musical talents towards the enjoyment of the evening.

MASONIC BAZAAR AT EXETER.

A bazaar on a somewhat elaborate scale, and to which was to have been added a garden party, was spoilt at Exeter on the 27th of August by the wet and boisterous weather. Every preparation had been made to hold the event in the grounds of Parker's Well House, one of the prettiest suburban residences of the city, which Mr. William Brock had kindly placed at the disposal of the committee. The tents were erected on the lawn, and everything on the previous day looked at its best; but no sooner did those upon whom the management of the affair rested open their eyes on the morning than they at once saw that much of their labour had been in vain. A hasty consultation was held, and it was determined not to postpone the event, but to remove the "goods" of the bazaar to the Victoria Hall with all possible speed, and so to make the best of the most unfavourable circumstances. Shortly afterwards "sandwich men" were parading the streets in the pouring wet with announcements of the fact, and bills were exposed in various shop windows, but no other means were open to the committee to make their alteration known, and there is no doubt the bazaar, or rather the objects for which it was held, grievously suffered in consequence. Those objects were threefold, namely, to aid the "orphans of the soldiers who fell at Isandula," to assist the "scheme for the education of children of deceased Freemasons in Devon," and the "Freemasons' Hall Building Fund, Exeter." Influential patronage was secured for the event, the patronesses being Lady Poltimore, Poltimore; Lady Anna Maria Courtenay, Powderham; Lady Palk, Haldon; Mrs. Mills, Bude Haven; Mrs. John G. Johnson, Cross, Torrington; Mrs. Huysh, Clisthydon; Mrs. Tanner-Davy, Rose Ash; Mrs. E. Johnson, Farringdon; Mrs. W. H. Peters, Harefield; and Mrs. W. H. Walrond, Newcourt. The preliminaries were arranged by a committee, composed of the following brethren:—John Algar, William Brodie, B. Barber, J. A. Bowden, Robert Besley, William Brown, Harry Clark, C. Campbell, J. S. Cape, E. T. Fulford, William A. Gregory, E. S. Gully, J. Gibson, Frederick Horspool, John Horswell, J. Jerman, Charles C. Kendrick, James Kito, J. F. Long, T. B. Land, W. R. Lisle, F. Luget, Math. H. Lucas, William Pidsley, Joseph Page, W. F. Quicke, Henry Stocker, J. H. Warren, and Joseph Wells, jun. Apart from the fact that it was impossible fully to acquaint intending visitors that the bazaar would be held at the Victoria Hall instead of being postponed altogether, there is no doubt the Victoria Hall—beautifully decorated though it be—presented very inferior attractions to that which the pretty grounds of Parker's Well House would have offered on a fine day. The stalls were arranged round the hall, and the centre of the room was occupied by a stand of flowers contributed by Dr. Woodman.

The bazaar was opened, as announced, by the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Ebrington, soon after one. There was then hardly any one present beyond members of the committee and some ladies at the stalls. The members of the committee received Lord Ebrington at the entrance to the hall, and conducted him in sombre procession to the platform.

Mr. E. T. Fulford, who has acted as honorary Secretary, led his lordship to his position, and then, on behalf of the committee, requested him to formally open the bazaar. His lordship knew, Mr. Fulford said, that they were to have held the bazaar out of doors, but, considering the weather, they did not that morning feel justified in carrying out their arrangements; and they thought the best thing would be to come indoors. The result was that they had arranged and furnished the stalls hastily to the best of their ability, and they thanked his lordship most heartily for his kindness in coming there, at some amount of personal inconvenience, to open the bazaar. (Applause.)

Lord Ebrington began by expressing the gratitude every one must, he thought, feel at seeing the successful way in which the committee had combatted the inclemency of the weather, and the beautiful way in which they had arranged the bazaar in the short time available for the purpose. The objects of the bazaar must commend themselves to everybody; some of them, perhaps, more to a limited number, but one of them at least—the benefit of the widows and orphans of the brave soldiers who fell at Isandula—must commend itself to everybody without exception. (Applause.) He had much pleasure in declaring the bazaar open. (Applause.)

The band of the South Devon Militia, under Bro. Fly, of Plymouth, then played the National Anthem and "God bless the Prince of Wales," and, three cheers having been given for Lord Ebrington, the formal proceedings ended.

The ladies presiding at the stalls were Lady Anna Maria Courtenay, Lady Poltimore, the Hon. Miss Bampfylte, Mrs. Edward Johnson, Miss Johnson, Mrs. Chichester, Mrs. Pidsley, Mrs. Brodie, Mrs. Gregory, Mrs. Besley, Mrs. Fulford, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Lemarchand, Misses Long, Webber, Nott, Clarke, Besley, and Fulford. Refreshment stall—Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Barber, and Mrs. Battishill; assisted by Bros. Warren and Elmore.

Amongst the articles were two handsome screens painted and presented by Mrs. Stocker, of Exeter. At the upper end of the hall was the piece of sculpture by Giovanna Focardi, entitled "The Dirty Boy," which was exhibited at the Flower Show on Friday, the 22nd August. There were various subsidiary attractions. Entertainments, musical and theatrical, were given in the small hall upstairs by the Misses Long, Messrs. Bartlett, B. Barber, W. H. Hawker, J. Malmont, and W. Long. The attendance during the day was not large.—Western Morning News, August 28th.

WILLIAM PRESTON'S INITIATION.

The interesting fact relative to Wm. Preston's initiation alluded to by Bro. Hughan, on the authority of Bro. Gould, is a most important communication in respect of the history of Wm. Preston. And yet, curiously enough, lucid as my worthy friend and Bro. W. J. Hughan is, I do not see that he distinctly states in his communication when Wm. Preston was initiated. As I understand his words, Wm. Preston is found twelfth in a list of June 1st, 1763. But does that list declare him to be then initiated, or only a member? I shall be glad if Bro. Hughan will explain this statement fully in next Freemason. His words may be read both ways, I admit, but it is always best to be most precise.

MASONIC STUDENT.

BRO. GOULD'S "FOUR OLD LODGES."

I have again carefully perused the remarkable work entitled "The Four Old Lodges," and am confirmed in my opinion that this is the most useful, accurate, and laborious work of the kind ever compiled, for the use of Masonic Students, and as I have said before is, and likely to be, without a rival, as all is done that can well be statistically for the "Moderns." Now we want similar for the "Ancients," and to obtain the latter I shall be most happy to work with Bro. Gould in any way possible. In the list of 1792-1813, I see that Bro. Gould puts the last few lodges down to 1812. In my notes these are under 1813, and as they were added to list of 1814 (published in 1813) and are not in 1813 (published in 1812), I fancy the year 1813 must be correct. At page fifty-three, I find the present 67, Calcutta, is described as 165. Evidently it should be 185 of the 1740 nomenclature. Shall be thankful to hear of any other "trivial" errors—if there are any—as nothing of the kind is really trivial in studying the early history of the Craft, for by these invaluable tables every lodge can be traced from 1717 to 1814.

W. J. HUGHAN.

NETTELBLADT.—Four brethren of this name rendered great service to German Freemasonry, and especially C.K.F.W., Count of Freiherr, who was born in 1779, and died at Paccini, 1843. He was initiated in 1805, in the Lodge Tempel der Wahrheit, at Rostock, and in 1810 became P.G.M. of the P.G. Lodge of Mecklenburgh, which post he filled until his death. He edited the "Calender für die Provinzial Loge von Mecklenburg," &c., from 1821 to 1826, from 1830 to 1831, and from 1833 to 1837, in all thirteen volumes—"ausgezeichnet," Kloss says, "durch wichtige historische Abhandlungen und Berichte." He also wrote "Instruktionen Veträge, &c.," 1836, still in use, we believe, under the system of the Great Countries Lodge. In 1830 he had previously published "Geschichte der Angriffe und Verfolgungen ganzen das Bund der F. M."—Kenning's Cytopædia.

By a special dispensation of the Supreme Council Thirty-Third Degree for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States of America, Ill. Bro. General John Meredith Read, 32° of that Masonic Jurisdiction, and Minister of the United States at the Court of Athens, received the Thirty-Third Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, from the Supreme Council Thirty-Third Degree for Greece, on the 23rd of May.

ERRATA.—In the heading of the extract from John Morley's "Diderot," in our "Notes and Queries" last week, we printed T.G.A.O.T.U.; it should be T.G.G.O.T.U.

The Parkes Museum will be closed until the end of September, and when it is opened again in October, an enlarged edition of the descriptive catalogue will be ready.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN LAZAR, R.W.D.G.M. WESTLAND, N.Z.

With feelings of deep regret we have to announce the death of Bro. John Lazar, Right Worshipful District Grand Master of Westland, New Zealand, which took place at his residence, Hokitika, on Sunday, June 8th, at one o'clock p.m. The sad event has cast a gloom, not only in Westland, but over the whole Masonic fraternity in the colony, in which he was so well known, and deservedly respected and beloved. He was only confined to his bed about ten days before his death, and, though suffering great agony, his mind was full of living thoughts for the welfare of his brethren, by whom he was tenderly nursed throughout. He seemed to have no desires, but to be in communion with them, asking for them each in turn, and in the unconscious moments of his affliction his mind was engrossed with the thoughts of the happy past, his whole Masonic career seemed to be passing in review before him, and on his return to consciousness, he would recognise his dear brethren about him, and greet them with a cheerful smile and some little pleasantry, and bless them for all their kind attention and goodness to him. Many touching incidents occurred during his illness, which displayed his love for the time-honoured Craft. A few hours before his final dissolution he repeated, in a clear and solemn manner, one of the most beautiful prayers in our Masonic ritual, and during the silent watchings of the night tapped upon the bedclothes, and called upon his brethren to assist him in opening the lodge, but upon receiving no response to the sound of his fancied gavel, called upon them by name, according to the rank held by each, and in the melancholy silence which ensued, in deep distress exclaimed, "Oh! my God, that ever I should live to see the day that my officers would desert me." He called his beloved wife and daughter to his bedside, and blessed them with all the fervour and love of a devoted husband and father. He then implored the Divine blessing of his own faith, the ritual of which consists of two pages of solid printed matter, first in English and then in Hebrew, for he was a profound scholar in the latter language, then sank back exhausted, and never spoke again. Two hours afterwards the gentle spirit of the good old man passed away to its eternal and heavenly rest, full of resignation and hope, and the brethren are left to mourn for one of the most kindly and genial natures and for one of the brightest ornaments that ever presided over a lodge of Masons.

The funeral took place on the 11th of June. Brethren from all parts of the district assembled at the Masonic Hall, some travelling sixty or seventy miles for the purpose. At one o'clock precisely the V.W. Deputy District Grand Master, Bro. John Bevan, opened the District Grand Lodge. About 150 brethren and companions were present. The lodge-room was closely filled, and the solemnities of that lodge will not be easily forgotten in a lifetime. With the lodge-room profusely draped in mourning, the brethren bowed in sorrow, men well matured in years and the experiences of life giving vent to their pent-up feelings of grief, and the District Grand Organist, Bro. Gosson, playing most solemn and appropriate music, the whole formed such a scene of heartfelt grief that no language can adequately express. The Deputy District Grand Master, from the moment he took his seat, was deeply and visibly affected, and on rising to address the brethren his emotion would scarcely permit him utterance. He said: Brethren, it needs no words of mine to remind you of the object of this solemn meeting. The grief is too fresh in your hearts to be easily subdued, and, therefore, I pray you to pardon me, and grant me your sympathy in these trying moments. Associated as I have been with him who is now gone from us for ever, on terms of the most sincere affection for many years, and enjoying his daily companionship, it is but natural that the well springs of our hearts, matured though they be with the stern trials of this life, should find relief in tears. I feel that I but re-echo the sentiments of your generous hearts, and but feebly express your grief at his loss, but I feel that each heart must now bear its own secret burden in this hour of deep affliction; and when amidst the scenes of his labours and loving companionship, and when we tread the place that he trod, when we gaze upon the place that shall know him no more for ever, may the recollections of his virtues encourage us to emulate his bright example, so that we may hallow and sanctify his memory with our good works, and thereby strengthen the bonds of our fraternal union, and cause us to live in peace and love with each other, so that when the cold grave shall claim its own, and we too shall be garnered in the solemn mansions of eternal rest, may we hope to meet him again in that Grand Lodge of bliss ineffable, prepared for the faithful and obedient of the human race. Let us not, therefore, my dear brethren, repine at the Divine decree, but submit in all reverence and humility to the will of Him who will not desert us in the hour of our deep distress, and to His name be the glory for ever.

The D.D.G. Master then called upon the brethren to unite in prayer, and in a most solemn manner delivered the last prayer uttered by the beloved deceased on his dying bed, which left a deep impression on his hearers. Comp. Hudson, P.Z., then followed with another grand and holy exhortation to the Most High. The Rev. Bro. Chambers, A.D. Grand Chaplain, then read a portion of the Masonic burial service, after which the brethren proceeded to the residence of the deceased, and performed the necessary and solemn ceremonial; then, preceded by a band playing the Dead March in Saul, headed the funeral cortege, and on arrival at the graveyard opened in double lines. The coffin, having the regalia of office upon it, passed between the long lines formed by the brethren, and beneath the arch formed by the companions with their wands. After the ceremonies pertaining to his faith had been disposed of, the Rev. Bro. Chambers, A.D.G. Chaplain, concluded the beautiful and impressive Masonic service, amidst much sorrowing and regret. Thus did the last solemn rites close over the earthly career of him who was so beloved by all with whom he came in contact. His fine form and commanding appearance will long be missed in the town. Every little child seemed, intuitively, to have an affection for that good and venerable man. As a proof of the estimation in which he was held, the shipping in port had their flags half-mast high. All the public offices were closed, in fact business throughout the town was suspended. The members of the borough and county councils followed immediately behind the hearse, and the townspeople in masses. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in Hokitika. Nearly all the lodges throughout the colony out of respect to his memory are going into mourning for three months, and letters of condolence are daily being received by the District Grand Lodge from every part of New Zealand. We give a short biographical sketch of his life, which we are sure will be read with much interest:—

Bro. John Lazar was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 1st of December, 1803. He was the son of the late Mr. Abraham Lazar, clothier, of that city. His father died at the age of 52. His mother, who was a native of Germany, died in the year 1825. His parents left Edinburgh when he was only eighteen months old, and repaired to London, where his father engaged in business on the Stock Exchange, which pursuit he followed up to the time of his death. Mr. John Lazar when quite a young man was engaged as a commercial traveller for the firm of J. F. Pawson and Co., of Chesapeake, and in that capacity travelled for several years over England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales. A few years later he commenced business on his own account as a silversmith and jeweller, at No. 5, Duke-street, Manchester-square, London, from which he afterwards removed to New-street, Covent Garden. He was married to Mrs. Lazar, his devoted partner in life, on the 2nd of November, 1825, and the good old couple celebrated their golden wedding in Hokitika, over three years ago, when a large number of their friends met at the Empire Hotel, and joyfully celebrated the occasion. In the year 1836 Mr. and Mrs. Lazar left England for Sydney, reaching that colony by the ship "Lady M'Naughton," which made a passage of ninety-one days, but during that time there were 123 deaths on board, owing to a terrible fever which had broken out whilst the vessel was becalmed in the tropics. The passengers, after arrival, were compelled to lay in quarantine for 112 days, Mr. Lazar himself having been stricken down with fever, and all hopes of his recovery abandoned. He however lost three of his children by that sorrowful visitation, and has often referred to the appalling incidents of that eventful voyage in connection with his arrival in the colony.

Bro. Lazar's family consisted of ten children, three of whom died in England, three, as mentioned, died on board ship, and four are still alive, one of whom, Mr. Samuel Lazar, is well and favourably known, and deservedly respected, in connection with theatrical matters in Sydney to the present day. Miss Lazar, who resides in Hokitika, has devoted her life to her aged parents, and is much esteemed by all classes of the community. In Sydney Bro. Lazar took to the stage, for which he had formed a love in early life, but had only appeared as an amateur previous to his reaching the colonies. He became very popular as an actor, and soon after obtained the management of the Theatre Royal in that city with Mr. Levy, who was then owner of the theatre. Mr. Wyatt, shortly after Bro. Lazar's engagement, bought the theatre for £6000, and six weeks after it changed hands it was burned to the ground. A new theatre was built, and Bro. Lazar obtained the management of it from 1837 to 1840, in which year he left Sydney for Adelaide, where he leased the theatre in that city from Mr. Solomon, at a rental of £10 a week. In 1843 he again returned to Sydney, and, being in tolerably comfortable circumstances, spent some time in visiting Hobart Town, Lancaster, and Melbourne. In 1848 he settled for the second time in Adelaide, leasing the theatre in company with Mr. George Coppin. In 1851 he entered into business there as a silversmith, and often he has related many stories connected with his gold purchases in those days, when it was readily purchased by him at £2 10s. per ounce. Between the years 1851 and 1853 he held the office of Alderman in the city, and in 1855 he was elected Mayor of Adelaide. To this high position he was three times returned by the citizens, and in 1858, when he was fifty-five years of age, he could have retired from business with a handsome competency. On his retirement from the position of Mayor, he was presented with a testimonial, signed by the Chief Justice, the Attorney-General, judges, barristers, members of both Houses of Parliament, Aldermen, and merchants of the city, expressive of the estimation in which he was held, and of the high opinion they had formed of his able judgments in the administration of the business of the Mayor's Court, of which he was the founder, and in the discharge of his many public duties. Bro. Lazar was also appointed by the Government as the first Returning Officer for the District, under the new constitution of South Australia. He was also a territorial Justice of the Peace of that colony. About this time, Bro. Lazar was offered the important appointment of "Commissioner of Bankruptcy," but he declined the honour, as it was then his intention to return to Europe and settle down on his well-earned competency. He, however, never carried out that intention, but remained in Adelaide until 1862, having lost his all in mining and other ventures, in which he had embarked. In 1863 he left South Australia for New Zealand. In Dunedin, if we mistake not, he was appointed the first Town Clerk towards the end of 1863, in which capacity he continued until 1866, when he resolved to leave for Hokitika. At the time he resigned his appointment in Dunedin he was presented with £300 from the incorporation there. In Hokitika he may be said to have been the founder of the first Corporation. He reached that town on the 13th of October, 1866, and on the 21st of the same month he was appointed Town Clerk. This position was held by him until the year 1873, when he was appointed County Treasurer, and subsequently in 1874, when the county gave place to provincialism, Bro. Lazar was transferred to the office of Provincial Treasurer. By the action of the Council, responsible Government was formed, and the position of Treasurer was made an elective office in the Council itself—consequently Bro. Lazar's services were no longer required. From that period up to the time of his death he has not been engaged in any pursuit—his failing sight, and the infirmities of old age entirely precluding him from engaging in any occupation, although his faculties and perceptions remained unimpaired to the last. We may say that the name of Bro. John Lazar, as a Freemason, is known in every part of the globe. For many years past his name has been recorded amongst the great Masonic celebrities of the times.

Bro. Lazar was initiated into Freemasonry on the 8th March, 1839, in the Australia Lodge, No. 548, now No. 399, Sydney. His remarkable oratorical powers and commanding address soon gained him prominence in the Craft. He was Deputy Provincial Grand Master of South Australia for many years, and performed all the active duties of that important office with great credit to himself and much benefit to the Order. He was the prime mover in getting the splendid Masonic Hall built in the city of Adelaide, and was instrumental in gaining many substantial and lasting benefits to the institution. He also held the position of Deputy District Grand Master in the Province of Otago, New Zealand, from the date of his arrival there, and in March, 1871, was installed the Right Worshipful District Grand Master of Westland, under patent received from the Most Worshipful Grand Master of England, the Earl de Grey and Ripon. Bro. Lazar was one of the most able Masons of his day, and his consecration and installation ceremonies were the admiration of the whole Craft. His eloquent delivery and clear enunciation, added to which his imposing and patriarchal appearance, could not fail to leave a deep impression on the minds of his brethren, by whom he was universally beloved. It has always been regarded a "red letter day" in Masonry when Bro. Lazar presided. He has in his time installed many distinguished brethren. He installed the following District Grand Masters under the English Constitution in New Zealand:—Bros. John Hyde Harris for Otago; Dr. Donald for Canterbury; the late Sir Donald M'Lean for the North Island; G. S. Graham for the Auckland district; Vincent Pyke for Otago; and the Hon. W. Whittaker for the Auckland district under the Scottish Constitution. The largest gatherings of Masons ever assembled in this colony have been held in honour of his visits. His genial nature expanded with the kindest feelings; he for ever cast a ray of sunshine about him. At the banquet tables, the walls resounded with plaudits to the revered old gentleman after quaint speech and jovial song, alas! sad memory now recalls. The brethren of New Zealand will remember him for many long years to come. The Auckland brethren will call to mind his latest triumph, so to speak, in Masonry, at the installations of Bros. Graham and Whittaker to the responsible positions of District Grand Masters under the English and Scotch Constitutions respectively on St. Andrew's Day, 1877. The grand scene witnessed on the occasion at the Choral Hall, when about 700 brethren assembled to do honour to the celebration, will long be remembered in that city. As the dear old man said on his return to his own district—"I could not see the tenths, but when the 700 pairs of white kid gloves were held up in honour of the ceremonial it was a beautiful and imposing sight." Then again, the reception he met with in the evening on his entrance to the ball-room, when the ladies formed an avenue right down the spacious hall, and strewed flowers in his path as he proceeded, and how the dancing was stopped as the clock reached "high twelve" to toast the health of the venerable brother, who at that hour had entered on his seventy-fourth year. In Westland he was positively idolised in Masonic circles; many, many happy reunions have they held with him at the annual installations. On his return from Wellington, after installing the late Sir Donald M'Lean as R.W. District G.M. for the North Island, the Pacific Lodge of Hokitika, to celebrate the occasion, and out of compliment to him, presented each of their members with a full-size cabinet portrait of their venerable chief, arrayed in full Masonic costume. The artist, Bro. Haigh, in acknowledgment of the favour, presented the lodge with a life-size likeness, beautifully coloured and mounted in a massive frame. The picture was unveiled by the Deputy District Grand Master, Bro. John Bevan, amidst much rejoicing, at the installation of Bro. George Benning as W.M. of that lodge, in the month of February, 1878. This valuable picture now hangs on the western wall of the lodge room, and we need scarcely add is highly prized by the brethren, and now affords them a melancholy satisfaction to look upon his benevolent countenance, for the brethren loved him as a parent, and for many years have always spoken of and addressed him as such. It was always a signal for a holiday, cheerful spirits, and great enjoyment when dear old "papa" was going to install; the pleasant country rides, the anecdotes, and the happiness of those days will never be forgotten by those who were privileged to enjoy his amiable companionship on these occasions. He loved to see everybody happy about him. He adored his Maker, and all His wondrous works. With the wreck and sorrow and ruin of life he wept, but comforted. His great mind grasped the whole human family, his well balanced thoughts and matured counsels were ever received with attention and respect. He was truly the man to whom the burdened heart could prefer its suit; his benevolent instincts were ever foremost in the good works of charity, and ever ready to assuage the sorrows of his fellow man. In fact he never wearied of doing good. As a Mason, and as a citizen, he has from time to time received many valuable testimonials. As a Mason his breast was literally covered with very costly presentation jewels, which gave him a most imposing appearance. The good old man has now gone to his rest at the ripe age of 76, beloved by all classes of the community. It may truly be said of him, that he was one of nature's gentlemen, an honest, conscientious, and noble-minded man, and one who will be missed in society for many years to come, but more especially in Masonic circles.

BRO. GEORGE KELLY KING.

With deep regret we chronicle the death of Bro. George Kelly King, which took place on Sunday, 24th August, at his residence, 14, Tamworth-road, Croydon, after a severe illness of several weeks' duration. Deceased was well known in Brighton many years ago as secretary and manager of a local fire and life assurance company, which afterwards became merged into the Sun Office, and in connection with which the Brighton Mutual Provident Society was first brought forward. A great lover of cricket, he subsequently became attached to Lord's Ground and the Oval as official scorer, and also became a recognised contributor in all cricketing matters to the principal sporting papers. About two years ago he took over a brewery business at Hurspierpoint, which unfortunately proved most disastrous, and the trouble of this, attendant on general weak health, must have hastened his decay. As a Freemason he was held in high esteem. He had served the office of Master of two lodges, was mainly instrumental in forming the Horsham Lodge, and but a few months back (with the assistance of a few friends) he established the Southdown Lodge at Hurspierpoint. His remains were interred on the 27th ult. at Croydon.

SUMMER OUTING OF THE SOUTH-DOWN LODGE, No. 164, OF MARK MASTER MASONS.

The summer months have almost closed without the universal expected appearance of genial and enlivening sunshine. The ever-spirited officers and brethren of this lodge, feeling a change must take place, arranged to re-suscitate the annual garden party, held at their meeting house, Station Hotel, Hayward's Heath, inaugurated and so much enjoyed by their late respected Prov. Grand Mark Master, Sir J. Cordy Burrows, P.M. 168. The Committee's endeavours were repaid by a fine and pleasant day, and fully appreciated, the goodly fashionable company assembled numbering beyond their expectation. A splendid tea was supplied by the proprietor, Bro. C. Golding, J.W., and ample justice done to the good things provided.

Mrs. C. J. Smith kindly presided over the tea table, assisted by Mrs. W. Hudson and Mrs. C. Golding.

After tea the company took a walk round the gardens, which were beautifully laid out, and regretted to see the failure in flowers (especially roses) caused by the late stormy weather. Upon their return the evening was occupied in dance and song until the time for departure arrived, when the whole company expressed themselves highly delighted with the arrangements so successfully carried out.

The following were amongst the company present:—Bros. C. J. Smith, W.M.; W. Hudson, P.M., W.M. 75; Capt. J. Routhwaite, P.M.; H. J. Maslin, I.P.M.; J. Pearson, P.M.; W. T. Nell, P.M. 75; T. J. Pulley, G. Mark Steward; H. W. Harrington, P.M., &c.; W. T. Clarke, Prov. Grand Mark Sec.; C. Golding, J.W.; F. Millard, Treas.; R. Paige; T. Cable, R. of M.; W. G. Bayliss, D. of C.; C. J. Carter; A. Burrows, and R. B. Higham, 75. Craft—Bros. B. Bennett, W.M. 73; Sandeman, P.M. 315; Payne, 315; Cockburn, 1466; E. Bridges, Sec. 1829; T. Gates, 1829. Mesdames C. J. Smith, W. Hudson, W. T. Nell, B. Bennett, Cockburn, Dick, Burrows, Clarke, Golding, Millard, Carter, Bridges, and Cable. Misses Bennett, Dick, Golding, Hollamby (Ash), Hudson, Maze, and Nell. Visitors—Messrs. Martin, H. Hollamby, J. T. Clark, and E. J. Golding.

The numerous Masonic and other friends of Bro. Sam Hague, of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge, No. 1609, proprietor of the minstrel troupe at St. James's Hall, Liverpool, will learn with regret that his wife died somewhat suddenly on Sunday, the 24th ult. Bro. Hague, by his large-hearted and open-handed generosity to every class, without respect to creed or anything but pure need, has won "golden opinions from all sorts of persons," and the expressions of sympathy which have reached him in connection with his sad bereavement have been general and sincere. Mrs. Hague was a lady whose name and fame were well known, and many will miss her kindly word and always genial manner, especially the artists connected with the minstrel company. The funeral took place on Tuesday week, and not only was there a very large concourse of sympathising private and professional friends, but all the chief shops in the neighbourhood of St. James's Hall were closed while the "last sad office of respect to departed merit" was being paid.

Madame Worrell will give her annual concert at the Angell Town Institution, Brixton, on Wednesday, the 1st October, on which occasion she will be supported by several well-known artists.

Miss Rachel Sanger (Mrs. J. C. Scanlan), wife of Bro. J. C. Scanlan, of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge, No. 1609, sailed on Thursday, the 28th ult., by the steamer Germanic, from the Mersey for New York, where she will commence what is sure to be a long and brilliant engagement.

MASONIC MENDACITY.

Is it true, alas, that we are now imitating those who for so long have had the monopoly of “lying,” as far as Freemasonry is concerned, everywhere? We use strong words advisedly. In the Times of Monday week appears a quotation translated from the Globe, a Parisian paper, as follows: “Masonry in France.—The Paris Globe gives the following statistics of Masonry in France, declaring that they are the best that can be ascertained, and are reliable as far as they go. There are 79 Grand Lodges and 119 Provincial Grand Lodges, having under them 7900 lodges. Twelve ‘High Councils’ direct 350 lodges. There are eight lodges which are signalled as ‘independent,’ ‘isolated,’ or ‘excluded.’ There are thus nearly 8500 lodges altogether. These include very nearly 500,000 active members. It is said that the number of members who have withdrawn from further participation in the Brotherhood, or may be characterized as ‘indifferent,’ or inactive, amounts to between two and three millions.” If we are to understand this statement as referring to Freemasonry in France, anything more palpably ridiculous or more absolutely untrue cannot well be conceived. We almost wonder how such a paragraph can have got slipped into our contemporary, except upon the old theory “omne ignotum pro magnifico,” in respect of Freemasonry. The statistics do not, and cannot, refer to French Freemasonry, as, in the first place, there are no Prov. Grand Lodges in France, and, in the next place, the whole number of Freemasons under all the rites does not exceed 30,000 brethren—if it even comes up to that amount. The writer has got “mixed up,” not only with “absinthe” and “vermouth,” but with figures he does not understand and totals he cannot explain. And so he has, in a most ludicrous manner taken, probably, the main facts of his erroneous and blundering little paragraph from “Kenning's Cosmopolitan Calendar,” and made of them a sad jumble and an extraordinary hash. We have often expressed our regrets that we have no proper statistics of Freemasonry, and hence we have often to read and to listen to the most extraordinary statements which are hazarded as regards the numbers of our Cosmopolitan and mysterious Fraternity. Probably, as we have said before, for at present any computation can only be approximate, there may be about two millions of Freemasons in the world, and that is a liberal figure. Freemasonry, which proclaims “Truth” to be one of its most unflinching characteristics, is never helped by exaggeration or swagger, by unvarnished clamour or untrustworthy assertions. Let us leave that “vulgar error” of our poor weak humanity to those who delight in the fictions of unreality or the perversity of unreliable and unhistorical data. But as Freemasons let us always be conspicuous for our love of “Truth,” in great things and small, in lodge and out of lodge, at home and abroad, in general statements and in special statistics. Freemasonry is quite strong enough in itself and needs not the adventitious aid of mistaken and unwarranted assertions, which are only “clap trap,” and please none but the empty-headed friends or the unreasoning foes of Freemasonry.

MASONIC IMPOSTORS.

Just now our lodges, when they do meet, are “exercised” greatly by Masonic impostors. We all of us know well the kind of persons we generally have to confront, and, alas! that we have to say it, the mendacity we have to deal with. Sometimes they are of American or Canadian growth, sometimes (or rather mostly) they hail from Scotland, sometimes from Ireland. English Masonic impostors, though they do exist, of course, are rare upon the whole, and for the most part we have to deal with those who were not originally members of our jurisdiction. But the charity of Masonry is large, and the kindness of Masons is proverbial. We do not like, we who are assembling in goodly numbers to attend to work in a comfortable lodge-room and then to adjourn to a pleasant social meeting—we do not like, we say, to send a poor brother, professedly hungry, and penniless, and destitute, often unable, as he says, to procure a night's lodging, and sometimes with a pining wife and suffering children to boot, empty and angrily away. And, hence, it too often happens that compassion is too strong for reason, and sentiment for political economy, and we give what, we fear, turns to little good, and is probably wasted, or even contemned, by the recipient. It seems then a fitting opportunity to say a few words about that facility of Masonic initiation which exists in some parts of England still, is far too great in Scotland, and requires correction in Ireland. Scotland is, however, the chief offender in this respect. We believe we are not overstating the case when we say that in many lodges of Scotland a man can be made a Mason for under £2, and that, owing to the vicious system in vogue in Scotland, by which annual subscriptions are not, as a rule, paid to all the lodges, a great many Masons having paid a small initiation and enrolment fee never meet the brethren of that lodge in fellowship again. The Almoners of our northern lodges and large towns in Yorkshire and Lancashire can tell a tale, if they will, of itinerant Masons hailing from Scottish lodges, making Masonic mendicancy a trade and a profession, living on it, living by it. And from this fact it is easy to see how a crop of impostors will spring up of all classes and degrees, like Burt, in America, recently alluded to in our columns, and like the obliging and engaging brother of Belfast mentioned by our brother from Ireland last week in the Freemason. It is not, however, for us to point out the remedy. Suffice it for us to note the malady, we must leave to the faculty, to abler and wiser heads than ours, to discover a cure for this growing evil. We have for long held the opinion, strongly, that our present initiation fees are too low, and we trust the day is not far distant when £5 will be the minimum allowed to every lodge under the Grand Lodge of England. We are aware that, as with most questions in this good world of ours, something may be said on both sides. But we feel quite convinced, after much and serious consideration, that such an increase is both called for and expedient in the best interests of Freemasonry in England. We hope that ere long the Grand Lodge of Scotland will take the question of annual subscription into its most serious consideration as a practical measure. Nothing, we are persuaded, will give such an impetus or add more to the prestige of Scottish Masonry.

A PRIVATE MASONIC PARTY TO PARIS AND SWITZERLAND.

Bro. Oscar Dietrich, conductor to Mr. O. H. Caygill, announces this tour for September 15th. We wish it all success. Paris is always worth seeing, and pleasant quarters at any time of the year, and the intelligent Mason will find plenty of occupation for his mind, his time, and his purse in that great metropolis. Switzerland also is full of beauty and interest for the traveller. Its “everlasting hills” are still the same in all their grandeur and glory, and its wondrous lakes are replete with charms to those who like to look at nature's most varied scenes. Ladies will form part of the “entourage,” and we need not say will add to the journey in every way. Everybody is out of spirits just now. Bad weather, losses in trade, a ruined harvest, our suffering farmers, all are subjects of vivid and hourly effect on the temper, the imagination, the pocket, our wife's expenses, and our balance at our banker's. Perhaps a short foreign trip may do us all good, and gradually restore our normal equanimity and mental tranquillity.

SERVANTS' CHARACTERS.

The controversy goes on, with no apparent signs of practicality or result. The ridiculous proposal of the “Dienstbuch” is a “hare” to lure many away from the “real scent,” and seems likely to land us in a discussion alike profitless and interminable. But here, as we have ventured to point, is not the real "hinge" on which the whole question turns. That is to be found rather in the "honesty" of the characters we give to those who ask us for them. In nothing do many of all classes so sin against right and duty and their fellow-creatures as in the cunningly worded and evasive replies they give to honest and bona-fide questions as to character. No "Dienstbuch" in the world would meet that difficulty, it could only add to existing complications, by providing another machinery of surveillance, which might be turned to the worst and basest purposes. So, leaving chimerical proposals and childish platitudes on one side, let us seek to realize the truth, most important for us all alike, that if we wish to amend a great evil and extinguish a greater nuisance, we must try and learn all of us a little more honesty, kindness, fellow-feeling, and loyalty in our dealings one with another. Another letter from Mr. Pollaky, in Saturday's Times, seems to show that the period of "great gooseberries" and "sea serpents," &c., is set in, or that our esteemed contemporary is very short of "copy" just now. Otherwise we can hardly deem the writer sane who pens the nonsense we read under an august signature. For now we have a cool and a calm proposal to place all servants under "police surveillance;" indeed, Mr. Pollaky looks on this as a sine qua non of his magnificent and sensible scheme, and adds, that all servants are to have their "signalement" or description recorded in this remarkable book. Mr. Pollaky offers, we do not know if from memory and personal verification, a very unflattering description of the British cook, and intimates this as exactly what he wishes all our servants to go through. Why, we shall have a servants' strike! Sincerely, we have never read or heard of so absurd a proposal, so utterly unreal and unpractical, so entirely opposed to every feeling of the English people. So let us hope we have heard the last of this unprofitable discussion. There is many an old courier who could tell amusing stories of how "Dienstbucher" may subserve the very worst of purposes, and how much of "bunkum" is to be found in the exaggerated praises of the system, for some purpose or other, we have lately read.

PROVINCE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think Hampshire Freemasons have cause to congratulate themselves on the interest which is from time to time displayed (on paper at least) in the proceedings of Prov. Grand Lodge, and that this year we have passed from the profound question of clothes, which was the subject of complaint last year, to that of the distribution of Prov. Grand honours. That the Prov. Grand Master is sensible of the impossibility of distributing a collar each year to every lodge in the province, seeing that he has only ten at his disposal as against over thirty lodges, must be patent to all from his remarks at several Grand Lodges in succession, if it were not too obvious to need any apology. The fault, as "An Old P.M." seems to hint by his suggestion, rests rather with those at the head of affairs than with the Prov. Grand Master, in that some years since the small Province of the Isle of Wight was added to that of Hampshire, already unwieldy and very extensive, instead of taking advantage of the increase to divide the district. Surely from Aldershot and Basingstoke, in the north, to Portsmouth and Petersfield, in the east, and from Ringwood and Bournemouth, in the west, to Ventnor, in the south, any one who looks at the map will admit the province is sufficiently extensive fairly to call for a division. If this be not enough, let me say that for some of the brethren living at the furthest distances from Ventnor to attend this year's lodge would have necessitated their starting from home overnight or their getting up at an unreasonable hour in the morning, as it certainly would have involved a very late arrival home.

Facts like these cannot fairly be overlooked in any return of honours conferred, however elaborately prepared, especially since it is a rule of the province—an I was acted upon at Ventnor—not to confer a Provincial Grand collar upon a brother who is not present, or who at least has not been present during the business of the day. There are also other considerations to which I find no reference in the returns of "An Old P.M.," such as the number and the social status of members of lodges, with the services those members may have rendered to Freemasonry in general or their own lodge or neighbouring lodges in particular. In towns, too, where there happen to be more than one lodge it not unfrequently occurs that members on whom Provincial Grand Lodge honours are conferred belong to several lodges, and occasionally a lodge number may appear in Grand Lodge returns which does not represent, practically, the lodge to which the particular member gives his most prominent labour; hence some lodges will appear to be favoured at the expense of others, when, in reality, the other lodges, equally with those named, claim the credit. Take some instances within my own knowledge. The "Vale of Avon, Fordingbridge," which appears as having received only two honours in the returns of "An Old P.M.," was practically defunct for some time, until several years ago it was removed to Shirley, near the residence of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, who assisted in resuscitating it, and was its first Master in its new sphere. Its present Master is a Provincial Grand Officer of Oxon, and its Immediate Past Master now resides at a distance and out of the province. Even "An Old P.M.," I presume, would scarcely find cause for complaint that this lodge is credited with so few modern provincial honours. In like manner, the "Twelve Brothers, Southampton," I have reason to believe, is in as full working as it has ever been. It is a kind of terra incognita to many, I may, perhaps, say to most, local Masons, but it is understood to have been for many years, if such is not the case at the present time, limited to twelve, all of whom are Past Masters, and probably the greater part of whom, from their known services and their social status, wear the purple. In view of facts like these, and of the impossibility of ascertaining how far brethren have complied with the rule to be present before they can expect to receive Provincial Grand Lodge honours, I beg to submit that the returns, however useful and instructive, are not to be taken as an infallible guide in the matter.

I should be glad, with your courtesy, to hear the opinions of others on this subject more competent to pass judgment in respect to it than myself.

I am, fraternally yours,
YOUR SOUTHAMPTON CORRESPONDENT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The appointments made at the last Prov. Grand Lodge have caused a vast amount of dissatisfaction, and a glance at the tabular statement, furnished by an "Old P.M." in your paper of the 30th August, is quite sufficient to show that some alteration is necessary, as it is evident that some influence is used when we find that any honour worth accepting rarely falls to any lodge which does not happen to have one of the permanent officers as a member, and in the tabular statement above alluded to we find that of twenty-four Warden's collars ten have been given to members of the three lodges to which one or other of these officers belong, and taking the total number of collars, viz., 120, we find that twenty-four, or one-fifth of the whole, are given to these three lodges.

Looking at these facts it is impossible to believe that the appointments made are always the result of uninfluenced selection, and I can quite understand the difficulty the Prov. Grand Master experiences in distributing the ten collars among twenty-nine lodges if the Lodge 487, of which the Prov. Grand Treasurer is a member, is to have ten, and Lodge 130, to which the D.P.G.M. and P.G.S. belong, is to have eight in twelve years.

The brethren of the province can in a small way assist the P.G.M. out of his difficulty by every year placing at his disposal one other collar, viz., that of P.G. Treasurer, whose duties are of such a nature as to allow of their being as easily passed to a successor as those of a Warden.

Therefore, let the brethren of Hampshire look around them, and select annually some brother whom they would like to honour, and exercise their undoubted prerogative of electing a Treasurer, and by this means increase the number of collars to be given away.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
A PAST PROVINCIAL OFFICER.

Sept. 1st, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am very sorry to see another attack made upon our R.W.P.G.M. respecting the appointment of his P.G. Officers (there was a similar one made last year), because I do not think that any R.W.P.G.M. takes more care in this respect than Bro. Beach, and I think the writer of the letter forgets "that it is not so much the number of the lodges in the province as the quality of the respective members of the lodges that has to be taken into consideration in appointing P.G. Officers." I will take, for instance, my own mother lodge (so to speak) in the province, St. Hubert's, 1373, Andover, where there is a S.G.W. and a G.D.C. in the list quoted. The S.G.W. is a well-known Mason (working one too), initiated in the Apollo Lodge, at Oxford, P.M. of that, of No. 10, Keystone, of 1373, and very high in the estimation of the Craft. The D.C.G. is a young member, comparatively speaking, but a thorough good working Mason. And again Royal Gloucester, Southampton—all the P.G. Officers in the years mentioned are, to my knowledge, men who have earned their laurels. Also as to Oakley, 694, Basingstoke, all good men; and I have no doubt the members of all the other lodges are equally deserving. Let the "Old P.M." give his name, as I do mine, and we will try conclusions. I may add that I never got P.G.L. rank for seventeen years after I was made a Mason, and justly so, because I never worked for it until 1868.

I am dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
EVAN YORKE NEPEAN,
P.G. Chaplain Hants and Isle of Wight; 497, Mother Lodge; P.M. 1373 and 130.

BASENESSES.

My dear Bro. Kenning,—

As a real and lasting remedy against the sad and painful frauds which are being practised daily upon so very many of our brethren, such as "T. F.," I beg leave to suggest that each and every Almoner be requested to have in his possession a number of small books, in which to enter the date, name of applicant, number and name of his lodge, amount supplied, where going, purpose of going, and any other particulars he may deem necessary. Any ordinary note book would answer this purpose. Almost any stationer would supply them at about 6s. the gross.

The Almoner, being in possession of necessary books, could supply one to every individual he may relieve, be he not already in possession of one. Let me rest here, my dear brother, to observe the smiles of some of my unsuspecting (?) brethren as they read this, for they know full well that my scheme would fail if allowed to rest here. But read on, ye whose eyes are dancing, I will now continue.

It grieves me to be compelled to make the confession, yet I feel that common justice calls upon me to make it. There are those who would destroy these books, and deny that they ever received them; to prevent this, therefore, let the Almoner, on delivering the book, make this note on the back of applicant's certificate, at right hand, top corner. R.B.S., place and date of issue. Of course where no certificate can be produced, no relief should be given. If this be done there can be no destroying of books, and the fraternity will soon be freed of those parasites it is now compelled to support; and, furthermore, a genuine case of distress will receive proper attention.

Should applicant plead he has lost his book, (for of course the Almoner will see if he ever had one), let him be supplied with another, and, as a matter of course, an additional entry of "R.B.S.," place, and date of issue, be made on certificate. I may explain that "R.B.S." are the initials of the words Relief Book Supplied.

It should be imperative upon all Almoners that they give no relief whatever without the applicant produce the book, unless it be to a member of his own lodge. This can be enforced by a proper motion in lodge. Nor should private aid be given by one brother to another (stranger) till the one applied to has satisfied himself as to the relief book, &c.

The above may, in the eyes of many of my good brethren, appear hard, yet I trust they will allow it is quite time our honourable Society be weeded of what is a great disgrace to it.

Almoners have confessed to me that there are those going the rounds of the country "whose faces are as familiar to them as the face of the clock," whom they as regularly—I had almost written relieve—supply with money. I doubt not this would be proved to be too true could we examine and compare Almoners' books.

I trust you will allow the subject to be an excuse for the length of my note.

I am, dear Bro. Kenning, yours fraternally,
ONE WHO WAS ONCE IN DISTRESS.

STEWARDS' COLLARS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see a letter in your last interesting issue, signed "An Old Past Master," respecting office in Prov. Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, in which I regret very much indeed to read the following passage: "A Steward's collar, we all know, is never received as an honour by the Master or Past Masters of a lodge, and but for their dread of making a scene in Prov. Grand Lodge they would almost invariably refuse to accept it, as its possession subjects them to continual annoyance from the rest of their brethren."

If this statement be correct all I can say is the Hampshire brethren indulge in most un-Masonic ideas, and such as are utterly unworthy of our Order. In one of the largest provinces of England the Steward's collar is properly highly valued, as a "passport" to subsequent honours.

Yours fraternally,
AN OLDER PAST MASTER.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL MISTAKE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As by a mistake "someveres" the end of my leader on "Charity Reform" is turned into utter nonsense, in the Freemason of August 30th, I beg to say, for the information of your readers, that the mistake is not mine, and that the whole sentence ought thus to run: "detrimental to the best interests of the Institution, and derogatory to the character of the subscribers." "Mistakes will occur in the best regulated families," but "derogatory to the imputation" is a "strongish order," and requires, I venture to think, "note and comment" in your usually most correct columns.

I am, yours fraternally,
THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

A CAUTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I notice in your issue of the 30th ult. a letter headed "A Caution," in which a name almost identical with my own is used.

In 1877, or perhaps late in 1876, my Grand Lodge certificate disappeared, under circumstances which could only lead to one conclusion, namely, that it had been stolen. Since that time I have kept a sharp look out for its appearance in a case like the one your correspondent narrates. I think it probable, therefore, that the man alluded to may be, by unlawful means, in possession of the missing document.

Yours fraternally,

THOMAS BLAIR, I.G. 1239.
THE NEW KHEDEVE AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF EGYPT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You will very much oblige the undersigned by the insertion of the following communication, which, as he thinks, may, perhaps, be of some interest to the readers of the Freemason and the fraternity at large.

On the 17th inst., at a quarter-past ten in the morning, His Highness Mehmeh Tewfik Pasha, the new Khedive, was graciously welcoming in his palace of Ismailieh (Cairo) a deputation from the National Grand Orient of Egypt. The deputation was composed of the M.M. W.W. B.B. Raph Borg, acting Grand Master of the National Grand Lodge; S. A. Zola, Past Grand Master; Dr. D. Teonopaputos, Deputy Grand Master; Prof. F. F. Oddi, Grand Secretary; and M. L. Zaia, D.L.L., Grand Orator. M.W. Bro. Borg, as Grand Master, and in his capacity of President, delivered the following address:—

"May it please your Highness,—

"Egyptian Masonry, through our deputation, beg leave to offer to your Highness their best congratulations and wishes upon your happy accession to the throne of Egypt. Masonry, being altogether a stranger to political and religious questions, has no other object in view but that of peacefully promoting the irrefragable march of intellectual progress and moral civilisation; its chief privileges and favourite province are to teach men their rights, and enforce upon them all their duties. These are the peculiar qualities that, keeping it up distinct and aloof from any other human institution, have on several occasions realised the coadjucancy and protection of those enlightened Sovereigns who felt always highly honoured to be reckoned among its votaries. This is, also, the reason that Egyptian Masonry, recently reorganised, has been favoured with the high patronage of your august father. We, then, once more beg leave to assure to your Highness that in all things relating to the moral development, progress, and civilisation of this country Egyptian Masonry can be fairly relied upon. And now we earnestly pray to God that your Highness may successfully accomplish the great work, whereof you have already shown yourself the most eager promoter, for the benefit of this old and classical land."

His Highness answered he felt very much impressed and moved by the sentiments the deputation had so expressly evinced; that he well knew, and thoroughly understood, the noble scope which Masonry aims at; that he was confiding in its help for the advance and progress of his own country; that he most cheerfully extended to the Masonic Order his high patronage and moral support; and that as soon as his Secretary had announced to him the visit of the deputation he at once expressed the very great pleasure he felt thereon.

Then His Highness continued for a little while to converse with the members of the deputation, and, expatiating upon the position of Egypt, he disclosed the noblest aspirations, and declared he was entirely trusting to the generous exertions of his people, and the sympathies shown to him, for bringing about a task, the several difficulties and many asperities of which he well knew and would never conceal from himself.

And now, with my best acknowledgments and regards,
I remain, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,

F. F. ODDI.

CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The meaning to be attached to the confirmation of minutes of private lodges has been engaging the attention of several brethren of the Masonic community in this city; differences of opinion, very strong on either side, exists as to the interpretation, and in one case the W.M. of a Scotch lodge refused to put the minutes of a previous meeting for confirmation, giving, as his ruling, that they were only read to show that they were correct records of transactions, and that the Secretary had faithfully done his work.

Those who support this view refer to page 167 of the last edition (1879) of the Scotch Constitution for their authority, and read the 1st Sec., English Constitution, "Of the Masters and Wardens of Lodges," to mean that it is not compulsory to read and confirm more of the minutes of the preceding meeting than that referring to the election of a Master, so that, in fact, they maintain that the minutes (if correct records) confirm themselves, and can only be interfered with by a notice of motion to rescind, which must be taken up at next meeting after the minutes of the previous have been proved correct.

Those brethren who support the view that minutes of a previous meeting are read (and ought to be put) for confirmation or approval, maintain that the intention is, that the brethren alone meeting should signify their approval or disapproval of the acts of the previous meeting by confirming or non-confirming the whole, or any portion, of the minutes, except such as are records of the carrying out of the constitutions or bye-laws of the lodge and the conferring of the degrees, which, of necessity, must be confirmed.

They are of opinion that the extract from page 167, Scotch Constitution, only refers to Scotch Grand Lodge, and that the 1st Sec. of English Constitution, "Of the Masters and Wardens of Lodges," means that whilst any portion of the minutes of the preceding meeting may not be confirmed or approved of, it is compulsory to read and confirm that portion relating to the election of Master before the installation can be proceeded with, and they claim to be supported in this view by the lucid arguments and affirmations contained in the latest (1874) edition of Dr. Oliver's Masonic Jurisprudence, under the heading of "Confirmation of the Minutes."

After the above statements I think you will agree with me that, for the sake of that unity which should characterise Masonry, it is of the greatest importance that there should be a settlement of the question here, and, as I am not aware of any ruling of the Grand Lodge of England on the subject as it affects private lodges, I venture to seek the experience of your able judgment through the medium of your widely circulated paper, and to ask, further, that you would kindly publish with this any English ruling or interpretation of the "confirmation of the minutes." In doing this, I may state that at a Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge, held on the 6th June, 1877, Bro. McIntyre referred to this matter, but the two extreme cases that were set up as examples were those in which no doubt rests, and, therefore, have not helped to settle the difficulty.

Falling any legal ruling or interpretation, I should be glad if you would give us the benefit of your opinion.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
KINGSTON, JAMAICA.

August 9th, 1879.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In common with a number of brethren, possessed of much greater influence and position in the Craft than I can boast of, I am deeply interested in promoting the election of a certain candidate for admission to one of our Masonic Schools. It is not my purpose to ask you to give the case a gratuitous advertisement by publishing here the name of my candidate, neither would your wise and salutary rules on this point permit me so to do. But there is one matter connected with all cases like to that which I am supporting, involving a principle not generally understood, which I think possesses sufficient Masonic interest to allow of its statement in your columns.

One of the cards recommending our case was returned to me by the brother to whom it had been sent, together with a courteous note expressing regret at his inability to support our candidate. The writer states that he has many applications from brethren soliciting votes for the children of Masons of very much longer standing in the Craft than the father of the child recommended by me, and that these applications must necessarily take priority of mine. The inference is, that "long standing" in the Craft is, or should be, the claim which governors and subscribers ought to consider first in determining the proper bestowal of their votes.

That this rule is very generally acted upon is, I think, beyond dispute, but I fail altogether to see the cogency of the arguments by which it is supported. In the matter of elections to the Benevolent Institution the claim of age, and particularly of age in Masonry, always does and always must command sympathy; but it seems to me that the principle does not apply in the case of children who seek admission to our Masonic Schools, nor ought it so to do. It would be impossible to deny that, other things being equal, the orphan child of a very old Mason has a better claim to the benefits of our Masonic Charitable Institutions than the child of a brother of less seniority in the Craft; but that is very far indeed from affirming that the test of age is the most important one, and the first that ought to be applied. If that were so, then some of the most piteous cases which appeal so strongly to our sympathies would be of right deferred to others far less deserving. For it cannot often happen that very old Masons die leaving a number of very young children, and yet it is in cases where families of tender age are left fatherless that we find the most clamant need of sympathy and assistance.

It should not be forgotten, moreover, that Freemasonry is not a benefit society like the Oddfellows or Foresters, et id genus omne. "Equality" is very nearly as strong a plank in our platform as "fraternity," and a Mason of fifty years' standing has no better claim to Masonic privileges and Masonic benefits than his brother who may be only a twelvemonth old. In other words, neither of them has any claim at all. And yet the idea underlying that consideration which is given to "long standing" in the Craft, is essentially this: that Masons may establish an actual claim upon their brethren in Freemasonry by long-continued membership; and the sentiment—a very sordid one when analyzed—is, that because much has been paid by them to the Craft, so much must be repaid by the Craft to them. This is a very good commercial principle, but charity ought to know little of such principles, and Masonry still less. Moreover, the test of age in Masonry is a very fallible one, if what is really wanted is acknowledged to be the amount of money contributed to the Craft. It will often be found that one brother pays more in five years than another does in five-and-twenty, and one Mason may do far greater service to Freemasonry in a single twelvemonth than his neighbour may do during a long Masonic life. In Masonry, as elsewhere, we have both bees and drones, and I fail to see why the drone of five-and-twenty should be deemed a better member of our society than the bee whose Masonic life has not even reached its first decade.

The case which my friends and myself are supporting on this occasion affords a striking illustration of my argument. The father died just one year ago, leaving a widow and six children, five of whom are wholly dependent. Like many of our most valuable members our late brother did not enter Masonry as a very young man, and at the time of his death he had been little more than six years a brother of our Order. But he had already reached high office in his mother lodge, held a somewhat lower position in a second lodge, and was a founder and first Master of a third. To these he had paid initiation, joining, and founder's fees, and all annual subscriptions as well. He was a member of the Royal Arch, and P.S. of his chapter; and he had been "advanced" in the Mark Degree. He had also contributed to our Charitable Institutions, was a life subscriber in one of them, and was only prevented by his death-illness from standing as Steward in one of the festivals of last year. He was most indefatigable in supporting and procuring assistance for all worthy cases requiring Masonic relief, and spared himself no trouble in any matter relating to the Craft. I may add that he was devoted to the cause of Masonic instruction; and, being possessed of a singularly retentive memory, he was complete master of all the ceremonies, and of the Fifteen Sections as well.

These are the "claims" which the orphan child of our late brother presents. Is it possible that they can be considered inferior to those acquired by a simple membership extending over a somewhat longer period of time? I hope and believe, for the sake of all that is best in our charitable system, that they will not be deemed so by my brethren who are Governors of the Schools.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, faithfully and fraternally yours,

P.M. AND L.G.

Reviews.

A SERMON. Preached by the Rev. Geo. Lowe, P.G.C. Lincolnshire, before Prov. Grand Lodge of Freemasons, Lincolnshire, at Spalding, June 19th, 1879. Wilkinson and Crush, Hall-place, Spalding.

We have received and read this sermon with much pleasure, and beg to commend it to the notice of our brethren. It is simply but forcibly written, clearly but eloquently expressed, and was, no doubt, as effective in the hands of the preacher as it was appropriate to the scene and the assembly. It is a very remarkably toned and cultured sermon, which it is both a pleasure to peruse and to possess. Many of our brethren may like to see it, and we call their special attention to it.

THE SKIN AND ITS TROUBLES. David Bogue, 31, St. Martin's-lane.

This is one of a series of "health primers," at the modest price of 1s. each, which is being published under the joint editorship of Messrs. Langdown Down, M.D., H. Power, M.D., J. Mortimer Granville, M.D., and John Tweedy, F.R.C.S. Among the able members of the medical profession who are contributors to the series we note the names of J. Chrichton Browne, Sidney Coupland, John Williams, M. Farquharson, H. H. Alchin, W. S. Greenfield, C. W. Heaton, and Harry Leach, and, no doubt, such a compilation will attract readers, and must have its value. But the old feeling comes over all, (like the warning of the Greek chorus, again and again), is it wise, or does it profit them medically, to explain everything? Do we not help to pave the way for "quacks," and "nostrums," and "specifics?" Are we not treading on that debateable ground which lies between skilled medical treatment on the one hand, and the remedies and advertisements of charlatans on the other? Buchan's "Domestic Medicine" did no good; the "Fallacies of the Faculty" did not advance the health or the tastes of suffering mortals, and for our part, though we doubt not the good intent of the designers of the series, and to a certain extent realize the object of such a publication, we yet prefer, on the whole, the old-fashioned system of medical advice, trusting your doctor like you do your lawyer, when you are in a difficulty, like a wise man. One of the great mistakes of the present day, in our humble opinion, is this encomium of and attempt at general knowledge. Our forefathers may have erred in the particular of special and limited study, but we are, at any rate, clearly astray on the subject of general study of science and the like. The consequence is, that while scholarship is retrograding, and special knowledge decaying amongst us, we have to confront a lot of "chatterboxes" who know nothing well, truly, "au fond," as the French say, but, like a lot of brainless monkeys, overwhelm you with the vulgarity of vehement jargon, and second-hand cramming as to facts and dates. We prefer the limited information of our forefathers, who, if they conversed on little, knew what they were talking about. We may add that this little book is very readable, its statements are very precise and very easily understood, and with the qualifications and warnings above mentioned, we can conscientiously recommend it to all who are either suffering from skin disease, or are interested in the study of the phenomena of the skin.

ROYAL VISIT TO CUMBERLAND. — Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived at Ravenglass on a visit to Lord and Lady Muncaster, at Muncaster Castle, late on Tuesday, the 2nd inst. On Wednesday, the 3rd inst., they left for Scotland via Carlisle, passing through Whitehaven at an early hour in the morning.

It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. THE CATHOLIC PERSECUTION OF FREEMASONRY.

A few months ago we had to take notice of the intolerant conduct of Romish priests towards Masons. Bro. Bogan, a member of Lodge Unity, 547, E.C., West Maitland, departed this life, and the Romish Bishop of West Maitland refused to bury him as he was a Mason, in consequence of which the remains of our dearly beloved brother were interred in a Protestant place of sepulture. The family of our brother has been very sorely tried by the intolerance of the Romish Church. The brethren of Lodge Unity, 547, E.C., West Maitland, have now erected a monument to the memory of their brother.

The monument has been raised at the sole cost of the members of Lodge Unity, who contributed apart from the lodge funds. The total cost is £40. The following are the inscriptions:—

On front face—"This monument is erected by the brethren of the Maitland Lodge of Unity, No. 547, E.C., to the memory of Bro. John Joseph Bogan, who departed this life on the 23rd day of December, A.D. 1878, aged 33 years. All glory to God Most High."

On right hand face—"The 4th verse of the 23rd Psalm, 'Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me.'"

On left hand face—"The 13th verse of the 12th chapter, of Ecclesiastes, 'Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep His commandments; for this is the whole duty of man.'"

On rear face—

"Hic jacet

"Johannes Josephus Bogan,

"Lapicida Maitland,

"Qui obiit 23rd December, 5878,

"Anno atatis, 33.

"Julio cæta nostris Lodge of Unity, Maitland, New South Wales, Numeri 547, 14 Januarii, A.L. 5872, habito frater in primo grand occulte scientiæ.

"Latomorum vel artis edificatoria inauguratus est necnon debuit, tempore ad secundum et tum denique ad tertiam gradum admissus est.

"Deo Summo Gloriam Pate."

From the Maitland Mercury we extract—

MASONIC MONUMENT.—We notice that Mr. Thomas Browne, monumental sculptor, of High-street, West Maitland, has just completed an admirably-proportioned obelisk, in Ravensfield stone, to the order of the brethren of the Maitland Masonic Lodge of Unity, No. 547, E.C. The obelisk is to be erected in the Church of England burial ground at Campbell's Hill, over the grave of Mr. Joseph Bogan, who was a member of that lodge, and was, we believe, a native of West Maitland.

Mr. Bogan was so highly esteemed by his Masonic brethren that they determined to mark his resting place by some suitable monument, and we think that the one under notice was very happily chosen.

The obelisk—consisting of the shaft and base—rests upon a stone pedestal designed to show three steps. The base bears on its front face an apposite inscription setting forth the name, age, and date of the death of him who lies beneath; also the name of the lodge; on the right and left hand faces are quotations from the twenty-third Psalm and the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes respectively; and the rear face bears an inscription in Latin of special significance to the Craft, announcing, as it does, the date of the deceased's admission into, and his subsequent progress in the ancient and Royal art.

The shaft is ornamented on its front face by a square and compass within a circle (the two former being gilded) and by a five-pointed star, also gilded; and on the other faces a square and compass are shown, without the circle and the gilding. These ornaments are boldly cut in relief, and contrast well with the pleasing plainness of the shaft and pedestal.

The memento is highly creditable to the brotherhood, and it is evident that whilst Maitland possesses such stone, and numbers amongst her townsmen the artist, her citizens need not go beyond her boundaries for the silent ornaments of the Necropolis.

Some idea of the amount of work on the monument may be formed when we state that there are more than seven hundred letters on the stone, the whole of which have been very neatly executed, and reflects credit on Mr. Browne's studio. Height of obelisk, including shaft, base, and pedestal—9 feet. The sculptor is a member of the Craft.—Australian Freemason.

Mr. William Andrews, F.R.H.S., is paid a well-deserved compliment in The Western Figaro, a witty paper, which publishes a brief sketch of his literary career, and also prints his portrait. Mr. Andrews is a frequent contributor to the best of our magazines, and the Academy speaks of his historical writings as being "interesting and valuable." Mr. Andrews is the editor of an interesting publication, entitled The Hull Miscellany. It is a very entertaining and well-arranged little work, which is exceedingly popular in the chief towns on the banks of the Humber, and nothing different to this could be expected from the careful and well-informed member of the literary family to whom he gave pleasure to refer.—Bradford Chronicle and Mail, August 14th, 1879.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE BRO. JOHN IRELAND.

On Wednesday, the 20th inst., we noticed the demise of the late Bro. John Ireland, a gentleman well-known and highly esteemed and respected not only as a citizen of Belfast, but also in his private dealings, whether socially or commercially. The exalted position which the deceased gentleman occupied in connection with the ancient Order of "Free and Accepted Masons," and the great fame which he had acquired as a devout and expert exponent of its mysterious rites and ceremonies, are already well-known in the northern provinces of Ireland, and no better or higher public testimony of the great estimation in which he had always been held by his brethren of the "mystic tie" could possibly be manifested than that of the large attendance of the members of the Craft at the funeral obsequies of their late brother, which took place on Thursday, the 21st inst. His was certainly the largest and most respectable Masonic funeral, as far as we know, which has ever been chronicled in the North of Ireland. At an early hour in the morning the brethren assembled in the Freemasons' Hall, Arthur-square, where arrangements were made for the order of procession to be observed by the brethren. The idea of a public Masonic procession or demonstration of a marked character was at first mooted, but the members of the Craft who had charge of the funeral arrangements having deemed it prudent and expedient to refrain from any too prominent public display on the occasion, it was resolved that the brethren, instead of appearing in the full insignia of the Order, should simply wear mourning badges, by which they should distinguish themselves from those who were outside the pale of the Masonic Institution. These badges, which were crape arm-bands, were provided and distributed to the brethren by the members of Lodge No. 59, of which the deceased was a member.

The funeral was arranged to take place at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and punctually to time the cortege moved from the deceased's residence, the coffin being born by Past Masters of Lodge 59, for a distance of some hundreds of yards, the order of the procession, as arranged by the Masonic funeral committee, being as follows:—

The hearse, drawn by four horses, containing a handsomely mounted oak coffin, in which were the remains of the deceased, covered by three handsome wreaths of immortelles, the inscription on the coffin being, "John Ireland, aged fifty-five years." Immediately after the hearse came the relatives of the deceased, and in rear of them the members of the Masonic fraternity, in the following order:—No. 8 Chapter of Prince Masons, to which deceased belonged, represented by Bros. John G. M'Gee, 28, P.S. of P.G.R.C.; Thomas Valentine, J.P., 10, P.S. of P.G.R.C.; Wakefield H. Dixon, P.S. of P.G.R.C.; Thomas Cordukes, P.G.R.C.; Henry M. Girdwood, P.G.R.C.; Charles R. Atkinson, P.G.R.C.; Wm. V. Plunkett, P.G.R.C.; Henry Murney, M.D., J.P., 30, P.S. of P.G.R.C.; John Oulton, P.G.R.C.; P.G.R.C.; and the members of Chapter No. 6 Prince Masons present were—C. J. Kinahan, P.G.R.C.; C. Johnston, P.G.R.C.

Next followed the Symbolic Lodge, No. 59, St. Alfred's, of which the deceased was a member; members of this lodge in addition to their mourning badges wearing white gloves. The following is the list of the members of this lodge who attended at the funeral: Bros. A. S. MacGowan, W.M., P.M., P.K., H.K.T.; Robert Carrey, S.W., H.K.T.; William M. Bullock, J.W., P.M., H.K.T.; W. C. Todd, S.P.M., P.K., H.K.T.; Robert Metcalfe, I.G.; Wm. M. Clarke, P.M., P.K.; John M'Connell, P.M., P.K.; Henry M'Casben, P.M.; Edward Allworthy, I.P.M., P.K.; Henry Hutton, P.M.; Samuel Douglas, P.M.; Alexander Parker, P.M., H.K.T.; James Young, P.M.; John M'Clure, P.M.; Robert Anderson, P.M.; Hugh Hamilton, David Allen, Chas. Cotton, Wm. Campbell, John Sefton, Wm. Easdale, James Young, jun., Alex. Robb, J. Jackson, D. Allen, jun. After the brethren of Lodge No. 59 followed the other members of the Craft present, forming three deep in processional order.

Among those present we observed Bros. Rev. W. C. M'Cullagh, 154, P.G.C.; Henry J. Hill, 111, P.G.L.I.; W. H. Ward, 154, Preceptor of Lagan Valley Encampment of H.K.T.; Geo. A. The route traversed by the funeral cortege was Great Victoria-street, Wellington-place, Donegall-place, Castle-place, Bridge-street, Donegall-street, Crumlin-road, Agnes-street, and Shankill-road, to the Shankill Graveyard. At the gate of the latter place the procession halted, and the Freemasons proceeded to form two lines extending from the entrance gate to the place of interment, the brethren standing with uncovered heads whilst the coffin, borne by members of Lodge 59, and followed by the relatives of the deceased, passed up between them. The coffin having been lowered into its last resting place, the brethren formed a compact circle round the grave, and inside this circle stood the Rev. George Cron, the Rev. W. C. M'Cullagh, and the members of the deceased's lodge. A most pathetic and appropriate service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Cron, after which the Masonic burial service was read in the most feeling and impressive manner by Bro. the Rev. W. C. M'Cullagh, during the course of which a Masonic apron was placed upon the coffin, and each member of deceased's lodge present deposited a sprig of acacia in the grave. The ceremony, which was one of the most solemn and affecting, was eventually brought to a conclusion by all the brethren assembled giving the public grand honours of Freemasonry.—Belfast News Letter, August 22.

Public Amusements.

STRAND THEATRE.—"Madame Favart" is the attraction here, and will long continue to be so. It is, without exception, the biggest hit in London. For once, fashion patronises merit. We cannot too highly commend the singing by the various leading artists. Miss St. John is, in the words of her old admirer in the piece, "a delicious illusion;" Miss Violet Cameron is as charming as ever, and she is always charming. Mons. Marius, than whom we have no better comic opera comedian, is in an element he thoroughly enjoys, and Mr. Harry Cox was never seen to better advantage than he is here as the Innkeeper. Mr. Ashley, who, it will be remembered, played Old Tubs, in "Pink Dominoes" so well, here personates the old roué, and plays it so well and so naturally that it is difficult to believe that Mr. Ashley himself is not a roué.

IMPERIAL THEATRE.—We have seen "H.M.S. Pinafore" at the Opera Comique—our readers may remember how we condemned the singing; we have seen it in the provinces; we have seen it in America; but we have never seen it so well mounted, so well played, and, better still, so well sung, as by the company by whom it is now played at the Imperial. We understand that after this week "Pinafore" will be produced by this company at the Olympic. We tell our readers who have been to the Opera Comique, wishing to see this most popular piece, that they must go to the Imperial this week or to the Olympic next week if they desire to be considered judges of the merits and demerits of this wonderful opera. To those of our readers who have not seen the piece we can only say, if you like musical voices for a musical piece follow the company now going from the Imperial to the Olympic.

PARK THEATRE.—"Jane Eyre, or Poor Relations," at this house, produced for the first time on Wednesday, the 27th ult., must be pronounced a success. Theatrical successes, however, have their classes like railways—this piece is a success in the third-class—it can never take a high rank either in London or the provinces, but it will serve its purpose in its three weeks' run at the Park. We can give it no more, a fortnight at the Standard or other kindred theatres, and an occasional performance in the country. "Jane Eyre" is preceded by the old, stale, and stupid comedietta, "A Day After the Wedding," which we should not notice at all but for the acting of Miss Maud Erskine, a young, beautiful, and clever little actress, who gives promise of "great things" if she only gets the opportunity. The main idea, a mainmast without a sail, is evidently taken from "Taming of the Shrew," and the very mild reflection of Shakespeare's Kate, as taken by Miss Erskine, convinces us that she is quite capable of playing Shakespeare's original, and playing it well, too, which is not saying a little.

We regret to notice the death of Bro. William Runtling, P.M. of the Belgrave Lodge, No. 749, and W.M. of the Londesborough Lodge, No. 1681. Bro. Runtling was initiated into Freemasonry in the Faith Lodge, No. 141, on the 24th of February, 1857. He afterwards joined the Belgrave Lodge, and became W.M. in the year, and was a subscribing member at his death. He was a founder and first S.W. of the Londesborough Lodge, No. 1681, of which lodge at the time of his death he was W.M. Bro. Runtling was well known and deservedly esteemed by many brethren, more especially by those living in the immediate vicinity of his residence, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square. He was interred at Woking Cemetery on Monday, the 1st inst., the funeral being attended by, among others, Bro. Garrod, Secretary of the Belgrave Lodge, Bro. A. Barfield, Treasurer, Honeyball, Thomas, and Ball, of the Londesborough Lodge.

Masonic and General Tidings.

Bro. Sir John Bennett has been re-elected a trustee of the Goldsmiths and Jewellers' Institution.

The Metropolitan Board of Works are making arrangements for illuminating their board-room and principal offices by the medium of the electric light.

A "welcome home" dinner was given on Thursday evening, the 28th ult., in the Prince's Room of the Holborn Restaurant, to Mr. William Simpson and Mr. Melton Prior, the well-known special artists of the Illustrated London News, who have recently returned respectively from Afghanistan and Zululand. Bro. G. Augustus Sala was in the chair, and Mr. Archibald Forbes was present.

We are happy to inform our readers that arrangements have been made for a private Masonic tourist party to visit Paris and Switzerland, to leave London on Monday, September 15th, and return on September 28th or October 2nd. The whole arrangements are in the hands of Bro. Oscar Dietrich, whose linguistic abilities and long experience as a tourist conductor, combined with the intimate knowledge he has of the places to be visited, render him eminently qualified for such a position. We see in the prospectus of the party that meetings are to be arranged with some of our brethren of the Craft on the Continent, which will, doubtless, be interesting, as giving the party an opportunity of witnessing Masonic ceremonies carried out in a style different to what we have in England. The exclusively Masonic character of the party is to be so far modified as to allow ladies to have a place, and, doubtless, many of the brethren will enjoy their promenades through the gay streets of beautiful Paris, and their railway, steamboat, and diligence rides through the magnificent scenery of Switzerland, all the more in consequence of having their wives or lady friends to share their enjoyment. The prospectus that has been issued promises a tour of extraordinary interest and pleasure at an extremely low figure, and we have no doubt that many of our brethren will avail themselves of the services of Bro. Dietrich, to whom we cordially recommend our readers.

Bro. William Francis, of the well-known Mohawk Minstrels, whose concerts at the Agricultural Hall for the last seven or eight years have grown to be an important institution in Islington, took his benefit on Tuesday evening, when, we are happy to say, this concert hall was crowded in every part, so crowded, indeed, that the staff of attendants had some difficulty in finding accommodation for the hosts of friends, who, for half-an-hour before the performance, kept trooping in. However, thanks to the tact of Bro. R. G. Thomas, the courteous manager, and the ability of his staff, every one found a good place, and the concert passed off admirably. The programme was, of course, a special one for the occasion, and included a very pretty, new pathetic ballad, entitled "Kiss the little ones for me," by the beneficiary himself. It was carried out well, as happens invariably at all Mohawk entertainments, and the audience were delighted. Bro. Francis, at the close of the evening, in a few well-chosen sentences, expressed to all present his deep sense of their kindness in honouring him as they had done on the occasion of this, his seventh annual benefit. The Mohawks, one and all, and including a former Mohawk, Bro. F. Dolby, acquitted themselves well. Bro. Edgar Mowbray, another of the proprietary body, will take his benefit on the 26th instant, when a programme of sea songs and ballads will be given. We trust, indeed, we have no doubt, it will be as successful as that of Tuesday.

Mr. Archibald Forbes is about to give a series of lectures in various places on the Zulu War, in which he will describe as an eye-witness some of its most momentous scenes, including the battle of Ulundi and the finding of the body of Prince Louis Napoleon.

BRO. LORD SKELMERSDALE'S SHORTHORN HERD.—On Wednesday, the 3rd inst., Mr. Thornton, of London, dispersed a large portion of the fine herd of pure bred shorthorns owned by Bro. Lord Skelmersdale. Prior to the sale there was a luncheon in the large marquee in Lathom Park, at which over five hundred gentlemen sat down. Lord Dunmore presided, and was supported by Lords Skelmersdale, Winmarleigh, Norton, Norreys, Lindsay, and Bective; the Hon. A. B. Wilbraham, the Hon. E. B. Wilbraham, Mr. Allsopp, M.P., Mr. Starkie, M.P., and the principal shorthorn breeders in the kingdom. The loyal toasts and the health of Lord Skelmersdale having been honoured, the company adjourned to the sale ring. Five out of six tribes sold at Kirklington sale in 1850 have been brought into this herd, and most judiciously blended. The principal sire is fourth Baron Oxford, bred at Holker, one of the very few remaining animals by seventh Duke of York and from the fifth Lady Oxford, the ancestress of the highest priced Oxfords at Holker. The following are the principal sales:—Maud Waterloo, roan, calved July, 1875, 150 guineas, to Mr. Davies, Cheshire; Frosty Gwynne, calved May, 1876, 310 guineas, to Lord Penrhyn; Winsom Beauty, 350 guineas, to Mr. Foster; Cumberland Duchess, of Ormskirk, 2000 guineas, to Mr. Loder, Towcaster, Northamptonshire; Winsom Beauty Fourth, for 400 guineas, to the Duke of Devonshire; Princess Blyth, for 585 guineas, to Sir William Salt, Saltaire; Cherry Grand Duchess Eleventh, to Messrs. Henry Waterbury, Kent, for 325 guineas; Florence Waterloo, for 310 guineas, to Mr. Davies, Ogden Hall, Cheshire; and Bertha Waterloo, 300 guineas, to Mr. Davies, Larry Barrington Fourth went to Mr. Patterson, Sirling, 4th September, 1879.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

VITRUVIAN LODGE (No. 87).—On Wednesday evening, the 10th inst., this lodge held its first meeting of the season at the White Hart Tavern, College-street, Lambeth. The lodge was very largely attended, and one gentleman was initiated into the mysteries of the Craft by Bro. Timothy, W.M., assisted by Bro. Nott, S.W., Bro. Skirving, J.W., and the other officers and brethren of the lodge. The ceremony was performed in a very impressive manner, and after the other business of the lodge had been concluded, the brethren adjourned for refreshment, where a substantial repast was served in the banqueting-room by Bro. Isaac, the proprietor. After the Masonic toasts had been given in Bro. Timothy's usual impressive manner, songs were indulged in, and reference was made to the new lodge-room in connection with the house now in course of erection at the corner of Belvedere-road and College-street, which is to take the place of the present White Hart. This will be a great boon, as the Vitruvian Lodge has grown to such proportions that the accommodation at the present house is not sufficient to meet its requirements. The new house will be opened in about two months hence, and special attention will be paid to meet the requirements of Masons.

PERFECT ASHLAR LODGE (No. 1178).—The regular meeting of this lodge took place on Thursday, the 4th inst., at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. The lodge was opened at five o'clock punctual by Bro. Joseph Strick, W.M., assisted by Bros. F. Garbett, I.P.M.; J. A. Smith, P.M.; T. Simpson, S.W.; J. J. Bell, J.W.; R. Challoner, Sec.; J. Quincey, S.D.; G. H. Forster, J.D.; E. Bridges, I.G.; and W. T. Laing, P.M., Tyler. There was a large body of brethren present connected with the lodge. The list of visitors included Bros. James Stevens, P.M. 1426; Percy Stevens, 1426; R. Nelson, 1671; W. B. Trisk, 1366; and T. E. Davis, 1471. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed the lodge was opened in the Second and Third Degrees, and Bro. D. McPherson Murdoch was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. Bro. W. E. Kelsey was afterwards passed to the Degree of F.C. The two Degrees were worked in a manner which was highly creditable to all concerned, from the W.M. downwards. This being election meeting the bye-laws were read in open lodge. The brethren then proceeded to ballot for a W.M. for the ensuing year, which was declared unanimously in favour of Bro. T. Simpson, S.W. A ballot for Treasurer then took place, Bro. F. H. Ebsworth, P.M., being unanimously re-elected. Bro. W. T. Laing, P.M., was re-elected Tyler. It was unanimously resolved that the sum of five guineas be taken from the funds of the lodge for the purpose of purchasing a jewel to be presented to Bro. J. Stock, W.M., on his retirement. All business being ended the lodge was closed according to ancient custom in due form, when the brethren retired to refreshment, provided by Bros. H. J. and W. J. Roberts. The usual toasts having been disposed of, Bros. W. Royal, R. Challoner, J. A. Smith, James Stevens, and others, amused the brethren until ten o'clock, when the company separated. The installation will take place on Thursday, October 2nd.

STAR LODGE (No. 1275).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, on Friday, the 5th inst., and was largely attended, the W.M., Bro. C. Woolmer Williams, occupying the chair, and there also being present Bros. W. Kipps, S.W., P.P.G.O. Kent, P.M., &c.; W. E. Williams, J.W., P.M. 1538, W.M. 162; Rev. Dr. G. R. P. Colles, P.P.G.C. Oxon, Chap.; R. W. Williams, I.P.M., Ph.D., P.P.G.C., P.P.G.S.B. Middx.; H. J. Green, P.M.; J. J. Limebeer, P.M.; A. Tisley, Sec.; Marketis, S.D.; Leaper, J.D.; G. S. Elliott, I.G., W.M. 1623; C. Marr, D.C.; J. Turnbull, Steward; J. Gilbert, Tyler; W. Brough, W. E. Williams, C. H. Dye, W. Willson, R. C. Edmonds, W. H. Ashton, P. Brentini, J. T. Duperoy, G. V. Cavalier, L. M. Williams, A. Valentine, G. B. Dawson, J. E. Player, L. Zdzienicke, Whaley, Somerville, W. Lake, P.M. (Freemason.) Visitors: Dr. Ralph Gooding, P.G.S., P.M., G.M. No. 1; F. B. Williams, P.M. 1532, St. Martin's-le-Grand; A. F. Jeffrey, P.M. 452, G. J. D. Surrey; A. Thomas, W.M. Dowsett, 79, Pythagorean; A. J. Jenkins, 1589, St. Dunstan's; Laverack, 917, Cosmopolitan. After the confirmation of the minutes Mr. James C. Somerville was initiated into the ancient mysteries. A Board of Installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. Wm. Kipps, P.P.G.O. Kent, P.M., &c., duly installed in the chair of King Solomon by the retiring W.M., who performed the ceremony in a very able manner. On the re-admittance of the brethren the W.M. received the customary salutes in each Degree, and the Installing Master delivered the usual addresses from the pedestal. The W.M. then invested his officers for the coming year as follows:—Bros. C. W. Williams, I.P.M.; W. E. Williams, P.M. 1538, W.M. 162, S.W.; Rev. Dr. G. R. P. Colles, P.P.G.C. Oxon, Chap.; R. W. Williams, I.P.M., Ph.D., P.P.G.O., P.P.G.S.B. Middx., Org.; J. J. Limebeer, P.M., Treas.; A. Tisley, Sec.; Marketis, J.W.; Leaper, S.D.; G. S. Elliott, W.M. 1623, J.D.; C. Marr, I.G.; J. Turnbull, D.C.; E. Lane, Stwd.; J. Gilbert, Tyler. The W.M. then in the name of the lodge presented a handsome Past Master's jewel to Bro. C. Woolmer Williams on his leaving the chair, at the same time expressing the sentiments of the brethren, thoroughly appreciating the value of the services rendered, and the able manner in which all the work of W.M. had been carried out. The brethren then adjourned to the customary banquet, which under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Kipps, passed off admirably. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and duly honoured, the proceedings being enlivened by some excellent singing, Bro. R. W. Williams presiding at the pianoforte. During the evening Bro. Tisley, on behalf of Bro. Cavalier, presented to the lodge a very handsome cigar cabinet, beautifully fitted, and filled with "weeds" of the choicest brand. We need not say that the gift was received with thanks, and, judging from the cloud of incense offered up by the devotees, it was thoroughly appreciated. The proceedings closed at an early hour, all having spent a very enjoyable evening.

ARUNDEL.—Howard Lodge of Brotherly Love (No. 56).—An emergency meeting of the above lodge was held on Monday, the 1st inst., for the purpose of initiating Mr. A. E. Garwood, who was elected for initiation thirteen years ago, but, being ordered away, this was the first opportunity which has enabled that gentleman to present himself for initiation in the lodge of his native town. The ceremony was ably performed by the W.M., Bro. T. U. Price, P.M., P. Prov. G.D. Sussex, and the E.A. Tracing Board was lucidly explained by the S.W., Bro. E. E. Street, the following brethren being also in attendance:—Bros. G. T. Evershed, P.M., Sec.; A. H. Smith, J.W.; R. Garwood, P.M.; T. Francis, P.M., S.D.; Neame, as I.G.; Robertson, Tyler; and Downer and Bert.

GIBRALTAR.—Inhabitants Lodge (No. 153).—On Monday, the 1st inst., this lodge held its monthly meeting in their large suite of rooms in Armstrong-buildings, South. The officers, all of whom were present, are Bros. Bacon, W.M.; J. Cunningham, P.M.; B. White, S.W.; J. King, J.W.; F. Myatt, Sec.; H. Button, S.D.; W. H. Allen, J.D.; H. Clisson, M.C.; O. Lyons, I.G.; C. Armstrong, Treas.; together with a large gathering of members and visiting brethren. Mr. Forbes, together with Mr. S. Evans, were duly accepted and admitted into the mysteries and privileges of the First Degree, after which the Second Degree was conferred on Bros. Brown and Stillman. Proposed alterations in the bye-laws were for some time after freely discussed, and finally left to a committee to present a report at their next meeting. The J.D. reminded the brethren that Masonry being essentially a charitable institution, it was their bounden duty to strain every nerve to make the donations to our poor and needy brethren as large as possible, and he felt sure they would heartily support him with their help and talent in the concerts which would be given during the winter months solely for that purpose. The W.M. thanked the J.D. for bringing the subject forward, and promised him very cordial support for an object so thoroughly Masonic. After a few minor matters had been disposed of, the brethren proceeded to their large refreshment room, the large amount of business which had been gone through seeming to have given them great zest for the good fare which had been placed before them by their energetic Steward, Bro. Azopardi. The usual loyal toasts were very feelingly proposed by the W.M., and responded to very heartily, especially that of "Our Noble Grand Master." The next toast, "The Initiates," the W.M. assured the brethren was one to him of unspeakable pleasure at all times, but especially so on this occasion, on account of the strong recommendation they brought, and their well-known, useful, and blameless lives, and he felt a certain conviction that the two new initiates that night would prove good, honoured, and useful members among them. The initiates rose, and Bro. Evans, in returning thanks, said it was impossible for him to find adequate words to confess the delight, surprise, and wonder at what he had seen, and the thankfulness he felt for the honour the brethren had done him, and promised, with all sincerity, to leave no stone unturned to prove his gratitude for kindness as unexpected as undeserved. Bro. Allen assured the lodge that he could remember no act in his past life which gave him such combined feelings of pride and pleasure as presenting to their respected W.M., in the name of the brethren of the lodge, a token of their admiration for the zeal he had shown as a Mason, his integrity as a man, and his steadfastness as a friend to them all. Yet he felt that an apology was due, both to those whom he represented as well as to the recipient of the present, for his incapacity to adequately convey to the mind of Bro. Bacon the feeling which actuated the brethren in marking him out for so special an honour, but felt confident that a few simple words spoken in deep sincerity would be as congenial to his and their tastes and feelings as the studied and perhaps exaggerated flattery of an accomplished speaker; and in a speech of some length dwelt on those characteristic traits of the W.M. which had been so beneficial to the lodge, to himself, and the brethren, and appealed to them, that if they were ambitious for the position of W.M. they must study much and long, and curb all vain, unbecoming thoughts, bridle their tongue, and above all endeavour to emulate the present occupant of that position, and prove themselves worthy to succeed a brother whose name is a synonym for integrity, enterprise, Masonic spirit and benevolence, and he trusted that their brother S.W. (the W.M. apparent) would next year remember who preceded him, knowing well he had the ability, and he fervently trusted a want of zeal on his part would not mar a year which promised so much for the cause of Masonry at Gibraltar, and appealing to the brethren to show the W.M. that they desired to corroborate and endorse his remarks, and to do him especial honour, asking them to kindly stand up while he performed the closing, and to him intensely gratifying task of presenting Bro. E. Bacon, their W.M., with a very handsome musical album, containing the portraits of the brethren, and while assuring him, though it possessed no particular value in itself, he felt sure that in the mind of its recipient it possessed an intrinsic value above price, for it represented to him, though but poorly, the feeling of admiration, love, and respect which was felt for him, he earnestly hoped that when he left Gibraltar his zeal would never be lessened, and that he might yet rise to higher position in the Order, and he knew the brethren would, and did, re-echo his prayer that the lives of himself and family might be one long continued tissue of health and happiness. Bros. Armstrong and King both expressed in concise, yet in a deep, feeling manner, their gratitude towards their W.M. and very heartily corroborated the Junior Deacon's remarks. The W.M., in reply, said the brethren had surprised him so much, by their embarrassing display of good will towards him, that he felt perfectly powerless to adequately thank them, and it was with feelings of gratitude such as are not often awakened, and can never be expressed, that he desired to thank and assure them from the very bottom of his heart that as long as he lived he should never forget or fail to appreciate that manifestation of personal respect and grateful remembrance which had been so largely evinced towards him that night, and assured the brethren that the portraits within the "album" would help him to realise them all in the future, with the greatest gratitude, tenderness, and consideration. It was quite true that the peace, happiness, and improvement of the lodge had ever been his fervent desire, but he was only too happy to acknowledge the great assistance he had received from all his officers, and the present prosperity of the lodge was mainly due to the hearty co-operation and Masonic zeal which actuated all. He entirely disclaimed meriting the encomiums which the speakers had showered upon him, but assured the lodge that that night would ever be a green spot in his memory, and while he remained in Gibraltar his efforts would be, if possible, doubled for the good of the "Grand old Order," and the prosperity of the lodge, and while he had life Masonry should ever find in him an ardent admirer. In concluding, he thanked them again and again with the energy of a thousand thanks in each one, and with a heart too full to permit him saying all he should like to, and begged to propose "The Health of the Officers of the Lodge," to whom all owed so much, and to all of whom he was so deeply indebted, coupling with the toast the name of the Senior Warden, Bro. White. Bro. White in responding expressed his gratitude to the Worshipful Master for proposing in such congenial terms their healths, and to the brethren for the very hearty manner in which they had responded to it. He assured the W.M. that there was felt for him a unanimous sentiment of kindness, affection, admiration and love, and felt sure that the knowledge of these sentiments must make him happy. Having passed a compliment to Bro. Allen for his speech, he assured the lodge that should they deem fit to place him in the position of W.M. next year he would, please God, do his very utmost to merit their approbation, and would endeavour to hand over the collar and jewels of office in the same unsullied form as he knew Bro. Bacon would. The W.M. begged permission to propose the health of an old benefactor to the lodge, and spoke in highly flattering terms of P.M. Cunningham's services to the lodge, his kindness of disposition, and his disinterested zeal for Masonry. The call was very heartily responded to, testifying to the popularity of Bro. Cunningham, who feelingly replied in a few terse sentences, saying that the prosperity of the lodge was his constant thought and prayer, and after speaking in terms of kindly feeling towards the W.M., the Tyler's toast brought to a close an evening which will live in the remembrance of all who were there as one of the most pleasant, enjoyable, and instructive this prosperous old lodge has ever had.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Peace and Harmony Lodge (No. 359).—An emergency meeting of this lodge, held on Thursday, was attended by special invitation by representatives of the Royal Gloucester, Southampton, and Shirley Lodges, in whose presence the W.M., Bro. Thomas Lashmore, initiated, passed, and raised two brethren in each of the Three Degrees respectively, performing the ceremonies in the admirably correct and intelligent manner by which his working has throughout the year been distinguished. Before the lodge closed Bro. T. P. Payne, the oldest Past Master, in the presence of about fifty of the members, in the name of the lodge presented the I.P.M., Bro. Martin, with a gold Past Master's jewel in recognition of his services in the chair last year. Adjourning to refreshment, Bro. Lashmore presided over an elegant repast, followed by some excellent speech-making, agreeably interspersed with charming selections on the harmonium, of which he is so complete a master, by P.M. Robert Sharpe, of the Royal Gloucester Lodge, and several admirable songs, not the least noticeable among them being the spirited interpretation by Bro. John Brown of "The March of the Cameron Men."

HARTLEPOOL.—St. Helen's Lodge (No. 531).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 4th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Regent-square, Hartlepool, at 7.30. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. F. H. Bennett. The minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken for Mr. George Thompson Walker, a candidate for Masonry, which, upon investigation, proved unanimous. The lodge was then raised to the Second Degree, when Bro. Matthew Harrison was examined, and having given satisfactory evidence of proficiency, was entrusted and retired. During his absence the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when he was re-admitted, and raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The lodge was then worked down to the Second and First Degrees, when "Hearty good wishes" having been given by the visiting brethren, and a brother proposed as a joining member, the lodge was closed, according to ancient custom, in due and solemn form.

HAVANT.—Carnarvon Lodge (No. 804).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, the 2nd inst. The following members and visitors were present:—Bros. C. H. Liddell, W.M.; W. Dart, J.W.; T. P. Hall, I.P.M.; J. Weeks, P.M.; Treas. T. Francis, P.M.; Sec. J. N. Hillman, P.M.; J. Harrison, P.M.; J. A. Elverston, S.D.; H. G. Richardson, J.D.; J. J. Field, I.G.; T. D. Askew, Org.; J. Collings and W. H. S. Parsons, Stewards; Blackmore, Tyler; J. Price, C. D. Gour, G. T. Gourd, C. U. Burr, H. Kimber, G. W. Chinnock, R. T. Leaver, H. S. Young, A. J. Dunn, E. Farminer, C. A. Harding, and J. J. Bascombe. Visitors: Bros. S. J. Fone, 731; W. Ford, 487; Bull, 353; W. M. Oubridge, J.D. 1776; W. Lemanten, 481; Goodwin Nash, 40; Leopold R. Mills, S.W. 49. The only business consisted of raising three brethren to the degree of M.M.'s, which was ably performed by the W.M., the lecture on the T.B. and the W.T. being given by the J.W. The lodge was closed down to the First Degree, and two gentlemen were proposed as candidates for initiation. There being no other business, the lodge was closed.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Station-street, Cocker-mouth, on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst. There were present Bros. Capt. Sewell, W.M.; T. Bird, S.W.; T. C. Robinson, J.W.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas.; W. Shilton, P.M.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; W. Taylor, P.M.; R. W. Robinson, Sec.; H. Peacock, S.D.; R. Harrison, I.G.; J. Hewson, Tyler; I. Evening, H. Carruthers, J. Towers, D. Sinclair, and W. F. Lamonby, P.M. (Freemason). The business before the lodge was the passing of Bro. Sinclair, which ceremony was performed by the W.M., who also explained the Second Tracing Board, whilst the lecture of the Degree was delivered by the S.W., and the working tools presented by the J.W. The lodge was then closed in form.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The general meeting of the members forming the above lodge was held on the 1st inst., in the Masonic Rooms at the Athenæum. Bro. N. W. Helme, the W. Master, presided, being supported by his respective officers, Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B. of E., filling the chair of I.P.M. There was a fair attendance of members and visiting brethren. The lodge was opened in the First Degree with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. Bros. Marriott and Kershaw were then advanced to the pedestal, and having given proficiency as Entered Apprentices, were entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. Marriott and Kershaw were separately re-admitted and passed to the Degree of Fellow Craft. The working of the Degree was well gone through, and at its conclusion the S.W. (Bro. Taylor) gave the lecture on the First Tracing Board, and the acting J.W. (Bro. Hannay) that on the Second; the S.W. also explained the working tools to the newly-passed brethren. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree, and the usual proclamations were made, eliciting "Hearty good wishes" from the visiting brethren, and the lodge closed in peace, love, and harmony, and with solemn prayer.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—The first meeting of the above lodge since its summer vacation took place on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., at Bro. West's house, the Three Crowns, and though not so well attended as usual, yet lost none of its usual attractiveness on the score of brotherly love and charity, which in this lodge has something more than a mere name. It is not a strong or powerful lodge at present, but its charity, brotherly love, and hospitality are above suspicion. The W.M., Bro. W. T. Turner, opened the lodge in due form and the minutes of the last meeting were passed. Mr. Thomas Tolhurst and Mr. Richard Clark were then, after being balloted for and approved, initiated into Freemasonry. Bros. Weaver and Stanley were passed to the Second Degree, and Bros. Jennings and Phelps were raised to the Third Degree, the whole of the work being done by the W.M., assisted by the following officers:—Bros. Dr. W. Vance, S.W.; J. Ives, P.M. and Sec.; E. West, P.M.; J. Elder, S.D.; J. Palmer, J.D.; V. J. Holloway, D.C.; Burgess, I.G.; M. Sherwin, Org.; and W. Page, P.M., Tyler. Bro. J. Gaskell, P.M. 1076, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Lloyd, took the position of J.W. Among the visitors were Bros. Gaskell W. Brown, 1076; C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason), and others. Before the lodge was closed Bro. P.M. West alluded in feeling terms to the loss they had sustained by the death of Bro. H. Sisley, P.M., and as he might fairly say the founder of the lodge. He regretted much that there had not been sufficient time since his death to acquaint the W.M., so as to put the lodge in mourning for their deceased brother, but moved that the lodge now go into mourning for two months for that brother. He spoke of visiting our deceased brother, and of the peace and faith in which he died. Bro. Ives added his regret to that of Bro. West's at the loss of one who was a worthy man and a good Mason, and spoke of the intimacy and good feeling that had always existed between himself and Bro. Sisley in life. It was then proposed and unanimously carried that the sum of ten guineas should be placed in the hands of widow Sisley for her immediate needs, and Bro. West undertook to see her, and report at the next meeting, with a view to an appeal to the Benevolent Fund of the Order. The lodge was then closed with "Hearty good wishes," and the brethren adjourned to partake of a cold collation, set out with all the taste and bountifulness so often evinced by Bro. West and his amiable wife. Upon re-assembling round the social board, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. "The Health of Bro. Turner" was cordially proposed and responded to. In reply to that of "The Past Masters," Bro. West drew a feeling reference to the sad event that took place that night last year, when the unfortunate "Princess Alice" was lost with over 700 souls. Then their harmony was broken by that dread event, and by a strange coincidence the sad death of one of their Past Masters, in fact the first P.M., Bro. Sisley, precluded the possibility of their indulging in a song that night. There was a general expression of regret at the loss the lodge had sustained, and after Bro. Gaskell had replied for "The Visitors," and "The Initiates and Officers" had been toasted, the proceedings ended.

INSTRUCTION.

SOUTH HAMPTON.—Royal Gloucester Lodge (No. 130).—This lodge of instruction re-assembled after the summer recess on Monday, the 11th inst., when the W. Bro. R. Sharpe, its admirable Hon. Secretary and Treasurer for some years, was unanimously re-elected to that position, and heartily thanked for past efforts, which have so much conduced both to the vitality and the success of the lodge. It is perhaps worthy of passing notice that, anticipating some remarks lately made in the columns of the Freemason as to the proper mode of conducting these lodges of instruction, not only do the Master and Past Masters of the mother lodge regularly take part in its working, but the lodge is opened and worked precisely as a regular lodge, except, of course, in respect to initiations. Minutes are kept of its proceedings, and a report from time to time presented to the lodge under whose warrant it works of its proceedings, the state of its finances, &c.

Mark Masonry.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—The installation meeting of this distinguished lodge was held on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street. There were present among others Bros. H. A. Dubois, P.M., W.M.; G. Newman, S.W., W.M. elect; the Rev. P. Holden, P.G.C., &c., J.W.; H. C. Levander, G.R., &c. Treasurer; E. H. Thiellay, I.P.M., Secretary; Cubitt, G.S.O., P.M.; Simmonds, P.M.; W. Stephens, S.O.; Dr. Wilkinson, J.O.; W. E. Williams, S.D.; Shepherd, Registrar; Santer, I.G.; H. Parker, Organist; Gilbert, Janitor. Bro. T. C. Walls, S.W. 211, 238, &c. (Freemason), was a visitor. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the Rev. Bro. Holden, by permission of the W.M., most ably advanced Bros. C. G. Rushworth, G.R. of Middlesex, St. Thomas's Lodge, 142, &c., and G. Sandell, St. John's Lodge, 167. The ceremony of inducting Bro. Newman, W.M. elect, into the chair, was also performed by Bro. Holden. The elocutionary and general Masonic abilities of the reverend brother are so widely and deservedly known that it would be superfluous to expatiate upon them, but suffice it to say the beautiful ceremonial was so well performed that at its conclusion a vote of thanks to Bro. Holden was passed with acclamation, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes. The officers appointed and invested for the year were as follows:—Bros. Dubois, I.P.M.; the Rev. P. Holden, S.W.; Stephens, J.W.; Levander, Treasurer; Thiellay, Secretary; Dr. Wilkinson, M.O.; Shepherd, S.O.; Williams, J.O.; Santer, R. of M.; Lamb, S.D. (by Deputy); Frost, J.D.; Rushworth, I.G.; Parker, Organist; Gilbert, Janitor. The report of the Audit Committee was received and adopted. The subject of subscribing to the Wentworth Little Memorial Fund and the Mark Benevolent Fund was postponed until the next meeting. The lodge was then duly and formally closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. Upon the removal of the cloth the customary Royal and Mark toasts were done full justice to. "The Grand Officers, Present and Past," was acknowledged in brief but pertinent terms by Bros. Cubitt, Holden, and Levander. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed in eloquent and complimentary terms by Bro. H. A. Dubois, I.P.M., and having been duly honoured, Bro. Newman made a modest response. "The Advances" were pledged, and in reply Bros. Rushworth and Sandell expressed the great gratification they felt in having been admitted members of the St. Mark's Lodge, and they also spoke in very eulogistic terms of the manner in which they had been advanced. "The Health of the Visitor" followed, and was acknowledged by Bro. Walls. In giving the toast of "The Past Masters," the W.M. took occasion to congratulate the lodge upon possessing so many distinguished brethren who had passed the chair. He particularly mentioned the names of Bros. Dubois, Levander, Cubitt, and Thiellay, and complimented those brethren upon the great services they had rendered, not only to the Mark Degree, but to Freemasonry generally. This toast having been received with excellent "fire," the brethren thus signalled severally responded. The toast of "The Officers" was given, and the Janitor's toast terminated the proceedings, which were throughout eminently successful.

PLUMSTEAD.—Excelsior Lodge (No. 226).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Lord Raglan, on Tuesday evening, the 9th inst., Bro. John G. Holmes, P.M., &c., in the chair, supported by the following brethren:—Bros. Smyth, Weston, Solbé, Penfold, Keys, Palmer, Sculley, Moulds, Kennedy, Wilson, Tappenden, Deeves, Ovenden, Chamberlin, Hepburn, and others. The routine business having been disposed of, Bro. W. A. Tucker, of Lodge 913, was admitted with the usual formalities to the Degree of Mark Master Mason. Several grants for charitable purposes having been made, the lodge adjourned at an early hour.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PREMIER CONCLAVE.—The quarterly meeting of this popular conclave was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Monday, the 1st inst. There were present Sir Knights Kingston, M.P.S.; Nunn, P.G.S.G., P.G.S., &c., acting V.E.; Massa, I.G.; Cubitt, P.G.S., &c., Treas.; Levander, P.G.S., &c., Recorder; Marsh, P.G.S., &c.; H. A. Dubois, P.G.S., &c.; Thiellay, H.P.; Stedwell, Orator; T. C. Walls, A.D.C.; Gilbert and Harrison, Sentinels. The minutes of the previous convocation were read and confirmed. The roll of the officers appointed at the last convocation was called as follows: Sir Knights Peters, V.E.; Macartney, M.P., Senior General; Massa, I.G.; Thiellay, H.P.; Cubitt, Treas.; Levander, Recorder; Shirley, Prefect; Stedwell, Orator; Mather, S.B.; Parker, Org.; Moses, Herald; Stevens and Walls, A.D.C.'s; Gilbert and Harrison, Sentinels. Several communications from absent Sir Knights were read by the Recorder. Previously to the conclave being dissolved, Sir Knight Walls gave notice of motion that at the next quarterly convocation the subject of the recognition of the services of the subscribing Past Grand Sovereigns of the Premier Conclave should be considered. The Sir Knights then adjourned to an excellent and well-served banquet. The subsequent proceedings were but of a formal character. "The Grand Officers, Present and Past," was responded to by Sir Knights Nunn, Cubitt, Levander, Marsh, and Dubois. "The M.P.S." followed, and was proposed in happy terms by Sir Knight Marsh. Sir Knight Kingston having replied, gave "The P.G.S.'s." This toast having received ample justice, was acknowledged in a modest speech, upon behalf of himself and colleagues, by Sir Knight Cubitt. The proceedings terminated at an early hour with the Sentinel's toast.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN SEAGER.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. John Seager, of the Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, which melancholy event occurred early on Wednesday morning, the 3rd inst. Members of the Star Lodge of Instruction, who were wont to attend the weekly assemblies at this house will not readily forget the genial and courteous host who took so active a part in promoting the interests of the Craft, and they will share with a very wide circle of private friends the deep regret that has been caused at the sudden termination of a useful life. Bro. Seager drove to Chislehurst on Monday afternoon, and up to half-past eleven o'clock on Tuesday night he was apparently in his usual health and spirits. He was seized with illness during the night, however, and notwithstanding every care and attention was bestowed he passed away shortly before four o'clock on Wednesday morning. Bro. Seager was a warm supporter of the Benevolent Institutions connected with Freemasonry, as well as of the trade of which he was a member, and his loss will be very generally deplored. In consequence of this sad event the usual weekly meeting of Star Lodge of Instruction will not take place at the Marquis of Granby this (Saturday) evening.

BRO. REV. GEORGE THOMAS NOWELL WATKINS.

The New Zealand papers record the death of Bro. the Rev. George Thomas Nowell Watkins, incumbent of Holy Trinity, Greymouth, which sad event took place on June 18th last. Bro. Watkins was a native of Greenwich, where he obtained his early education, finishing his studies at King's College, London. He subsequently undertook the care of private pupils, acted for some time as Chaplain of Greenwich Union, and later on as curate of St. Paul's, Deptford. Ten years ago he was appointed to the incumbency of Holy Trinity Church, Greymouth, where he remained till his demise. His obsequies were attended with full Masonic honours, the brethren mustering in strong force to testify their respect to the memory of their departed brother, who during his residence amongst them had done so much to further the true interests of Masonry in the colony. He was borne to the tomb by six Past Masters—three of English and three of Scotch lodges, to both of which he belonged; and after the burial service had been read by the Bishop of Nelson, a Masonic oration was delivered at the graveside by Bro. Bevan, Deputy District Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons. Upwards of a thousand persons witnessed the impressive ceremony, during which the shops in the town were closed and the shipping in the port hoisted their flags half-mast high in tribute of esteem for one who had laboured so long amongst them as an earnest Christian minister and devoted friend, especially of the poor.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF CORNWALL.

After the business of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge, on the 26th ult., the brethren sat down to a recherché banquet at the Red Lion Hotel, W. Bro. Col. Peard presiding, and Bro. John Thomas, Redruth, occupying the vice-chair, as substitute for the P.S.G.W. The loyal toasts having been given, "The Grand Lodge of Mark Masons" was cordially received.

R.W. Bro. Hughan, P.G.W. of England, responding, said although situated far from the seat of the Grand Lodge, the value of its influence was fully appreciated by Cornish Mark Masons. It was a very great pleasure to them to know how greatly Mark Masonry was progressing under their own Grand Lodge. Since its formation, in 1856, it had issued 13,000 certificates to Mark Masons, of whom some 10,000 remained at the present time. There were 240 active lodges, so that it was clear that the Grand Lodge was doing its best to make the Degree known wherever its merits were appreciated—a Degree deserving a better position than it had yet attained. Many professed to be surprised that the Degree was not recognised, and urged that they did not care to belong to any of the "unrecognised Degrees," although they were themselves Knight Templars and members of the Rose Croix—Degrees which were no more recognised than was the Mark in this country. The fact was that in England no Degrees were recognised except the three first and the Royal Arch, this being the result of the arrangement under the "Articles of Union" in 1813. Mark Masons were, therefore, precisely in the same position as the Knight Templars and the members of the Rose Croix and other degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, but it was well to remember that wherever the English language was spoken, excepting in England, the Mark Degree was recognised by the Royal Arch Chapters, and in one case by the Craft. It was recognised in Scotland, Ireland, the United States, and in Canada; and in the United States and Canada, &c., the Royal Arch Masons accepted the English Grand Lodge Mark certificates, and unless possessed of these any one wishing to join would have to take the Mark Degree before being admitted. But, although the Degree was not officially recognised in England, it was virtually recognised, as Lord Skelmersdale, the Grand Mark Master, was the Deputy Grand Master of the Craft, and the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, was a P.G.M., and Provincial Grand Master in the Mark, as also were Lord Leigh, Lord Holmesdale, &c. And that it was really recognised in Cornwall was proved by the fact that both the Present and the Past Deputy Grand Masters of the Craft in the province had been Provincial Grand Masters of the Mark. As to the antiquity of the Degree, they had many time immemorial lodges and Mark records as far back as of the 16th century, also that day it had been his pleasure to show the Prov. G.M. a photograph of a number of Marks which dated from 1670; and this was quite antiquity enough. The spread of the Grand Lodge had been so rapid that it showed the wisdom of having collected all the Mark lodges under it. With such distinguished Masons at his head, the Degree was certain of prosperity throughout England, as it was in Cornwall under the governance of Col. Peard. (Applause.)

In terms of the warmest eulogy, Bro. W. J. Johns, Prov. G. Sec., proposed "The Provincial Grand Master," who, in responding, said, although a young Mark Mason, he was very much impressed with what he had seen of the Degree; and, reckoning upon the cordial assistance of every Mark Mason in the province, he would do his utmost to promote its further spread and prosperity. (Applause.) "The Installing Grand Master" was cordially toasted at the call of W. Bro. Chirgwin, Right Worshipful the Mayor of Truro, and Col. Davy, acknowledging the compliment, assured the brethren that it had given him great pleasure to be present on such an auspicious occasion. The visit had given him the fullest assurance that the interests of Mark Masonry in the Province of Cornwall would be well looked after by Col. Peard at its head and Bro. Chirgwin as his Deputy. In lodge, however, he had omitted to tell the D.P.G.M. that it was his duty, when the P.G.M. was unable to do so, to visit the various lodges and see that the work was properly carried out. Although a Devon man, there was some Cornish blood in his veins, inasmuch as his mother was of the family of Tanner, who for very many generations owned property east of St. Austell. With regard to Mark Masonry, he was very fond of the Degree, and he esteemed it a high honour to rule over the senior province in England, and also one of the largest. His hope was that the Degree would take still deeper root in the west, and that under the fostering care of Col. Peard it would flourish in the Cornish Province. (Applause.)

W. Bro. Chirgwin, responding to the toast of his health, proposed by Bro. Bray, said he was among the first to take the Degree in Cornwall, having gone to Plymouth for advancement. Then he assisted in forming the lodge in Truro, and was afterwards the G.S.W. of the province, but when he entered the lodge that day he had not the remotest idea that he should leave it as D.P.G.M. If he had been consulted respecting it he should have hesitated before accepting the high honour, much preferring that it should remain with W. Bro. Tweedy. The honour, however, having been placed on him, his best services were at the disposal of the brethren. (Applause.)

W. Bro. Col. Peard, proposing "The Prov. G. Officers," felt sure, from the manner in which their names had been received, that the appointment had met with the full approbation of the brethren. A friend fully agreed with him that the highest compliment that could be paid to Bro. W. Tweedy was to give him past rank and instal him as Prov. G. Treas.—an office in the Craft which he filled to the great satisfaction of every one. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Thomas, with much humour, for the Prov. G.S.W.; Bro. Truscott, the Prov. G. Treas., and the Prov. G. Sec. responded.

The Prov. G. Treasurer heartily thanked the Prov. G.M. for the great compliment paid him, and remarked that he did not consider it advisable to associate great demands on the purposes of brethren with every Degree. It was much better to confine the chief charity to the Craft. (Hear, hear.)

The Prov. G. Sec. suggested there should be an annual meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge. (Hear, hear.)

The Prov. G.M. proposed "The Representatives of the Seven Lodges," asking for the cordial assistance of all brethren, by the promotion of internal harmony in the lodges.

Bro. J. Thomas, responding, urged as one means of promoting a closer bond of union between the Mark Masons the periodical visitation of lodges by brethren who were skilled in the ritual. This would imbue them with energy; they would feel that they were not isolated, but members of a really great Order; and the progress of Mark Masonry in the province would be still more rapid. (Applause.)

Bro. W. Parker Smith, C.E., expressed a hope that a Mark lodge would be established at Lostwithiel or some other central town in the province, so that brethren should not be obliged to travel so many miles to lodge.

Other brethren from the remaining lodges spoke. The Hayle members had had to leave to catch the train, but R.W. Bro. Hughan took the opportunity of mentioning that the Hayle Lodge had held a meeting once a month ever since its formation, and in no lodge in England was the work better done, or the Degree more enthusiastically appreciated.

Bro. H. S. Hill, M.O. 76, responded for "The Visitors."

R.W. Bro. Hughan, in proposing "The Ladies," said there was no doubt at one time women as well as men were admitted to Masonry, the former as associate members. In an old manuscript he discovered at York dated 1693, the address to those about to be initiated read, "Let he or she," and it was also a fact that all the old charges were "to the dame" as well as to the Master.

Bro. Mason made a neat response, suggesting that at least Masons should admit the ladies to their banquets.

Bro. J. Q. James proposed "The Health of Bro. Hughan," who had rendered such excellent service to every Degree in Freemasonry, and was the acknowledged authority throughout the province. (Applause.)

R.W. Bro. Hughan responding, endorsed the remarks made respecting an annual Provincial Grand Mark Lodge, and the visiting of the lodges, and cautioned the brethren that numbers were not always strength.

With this toast and its response a very pleasant gathering was brought to a close.—Cornish Telegraph.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this Institution was held on Wednesday, the 10th inst., in the Broad-room, Freemasons' Hall. Col. Creton, Grand Treasurer, presided. There were also present Bros. C. J. Perceval, S. Rawson, James Brett, L. Stuan, Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, Richard Hervé Giraud, Raynham W. Stewart, C. G. Hill, A. H. Tattershall, Thomas Cubitt, Capt. N. G. Phillips, Thomas Good, C. G. Dille, John G. Stevens, Dr. Jabez Hogg, F. Adlard, C. F. Hogard, James Terry (Secretary), and H. Massey (Freemason).

The Secretary, after the minutes had been read and confirmed, reported the death of one candidate, who was the highest unsuccessful candidate at the last and previous elections. The Warden's report merely reported the departure of the various annuitants in the Asylum for their holidays and their return to the Institution.

The Committee's report was also read, which stated that they had visited the building, and found everything satisfactory. They also reported that if a tool house was erected it would free a portion of the Asylum, which would be available as a residence for another annuitant. The health of the inmates was satisfactory, considering their advanced age, one of them being over ninety, and the others also being a great age. The Committee recommended the erection of the tool house referred to.

Bro. Terry read the estimate of a builder, who calculated that the tool house would cost £38 to build, and that he would undertake the erection for that amount.

On the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, it was resolved that the tool house be erected, and that the estimate read be accepted.

One candidate was placed on the list for election, and one widow was granted half her late husband's annuity. The Committee then adjourned.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Saturday last at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joyce Murray was chairman. There were also present Bros. Donald M. Dewar, W. H. Perryman, S. Rosenthal, Arthur E. Gladwell, W. F. C. Moutrie, J. W. M. Dorell, James Winter, Fredk. Adlard, Dick Radcliffe, F. Binckes (Secretary), and H. Massey (Freemason).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of former meeting, two petitions were received and examined, and the candidates therein mentioned were placed on the list for the April, 1880, election. An outfit was granted to a pupil who has left the Institution and obtained a situation.

The following notices of motions for the Quarterly meeting of the Institution in October were read by Bro. Binckes:—By Bro. C. F. Matier, "That in Law 55, line 3, after the word 'seven' the word 'consecutive' be omitted."

(The rule now is that the father of a candidate must have subscribed to one of the Masonic Institutions seven consecutive years.) By Bro. J. A. Birch (East Lancashire), proposed alteration of Rule 73, sub-section 2 to read as follows:—"The election and removal of the Secretary shall be vested in the General Committee; the voting to be by balloting papers duly forwarded to each qualified member not less than fourteen days before the date of election, such balloting papers must be signed by the party entitled thereto, and may be presented by a member of the General Committee on his or her behalf at the time of election." (The rule at present is that subscribers wishing to vote on the removal or election of Secretary must attend personally.)

Bro. Dick Radclyffe's scheme for forming a fund for promoting the advancement of children leaving the schools, a full account of which has appeared already in the columns of the Freemason, was explained by Bro. Binckes a circular having been sent requesting the support of the members of the Committee individually, and the project received unanimous support.

The Committee then adjourned.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE BRO. SEAGER.

The mortal remains of Bro. John Seager, of New Cross, were interred on Monday afternoon last at Nunhead Cemetery, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends. The funeral cortège started from the Marquis of Granby at half-past one o'clock, and consisted of a hearse, two mourning coaches, and a number of private vehicles, the mourners in the first carriage being Mrs. Seager, the widow, Mrs. Seager, mother, Miss Seager, sister, and Mr. G. Seager, brother of the departed; and in the second his other two brothers, Messrs. R. and T. Seager, Mr. Hodges, and Mr. Wain, of the Bull's Head, Chislehurst (at which the lodge to which the deceased belonged was held). The route taken was along the New Cross and Queen's roads, up Lausanne-road to the Cemetery, where a number of Masonic brethren had already arrived and awaited the cortège, wearing sprigs of acacia in their button-holes. Amongst them were Bros. Gloster, W.M. of Chislehurst Lodge, 1531; G. Macdonald, P.M. 1158; G. Andrews, P.M. 841, and Preceptor of the Star Lodge of Instruction, held at the Marquis of Granby; Waterman, P.M. 147; Hutchins, J.W. 841; W. Fieldson, S.D. 548; Lefevre, Godfrey, Hoskins, Redman, Kedgley, Wright, Pegg, J. A. Smith, and others.

Amongst the friends were Mr. Hobson (late of the Marquis of Granby, and now of the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum), Messrs. Hubbard, Taylor, and others. Arrived at the chapel, the brethren formed in single file on either side of the porch, through which the funeral procession passed into the building, where the service was impressively read by the Rev. J. Merriott. At the grave a number of persons had also assembled, and here the concluding rite for the departed was performed, whilst every head was uncovered. The coffin was of English oak, polished, and on the lid a breastplate with the inscription "John Seager, died 3rd September, 1879, in his 47th year." On the lid had also been placed by Bro. Macdonald, on behalf of himself and Bros. Keeble and Andrews, a wreath of white dahlias, gardenias, jasmine, and fern, whilst some other sympathetic friends had adorned the bier with two handsome bouquets of white flowers and ferns. As the mourners were leaving the graveside, Bro. Andrews threw his sprig of acacia upon the coffin, with the words "As this evergreen once marked the resting-place of the illustrious dead, so let it mark the resting-place of our departed brother." The rest of the brethren followed the example, and thus testified their respect for one who had been so long and highly esteemed amongst them. In tribute of respect also a number of the tradespeople in the locality partially closed their shops during the time of the funeral.

Gena, the gorilla which has been exhibited at the Crystal Palace since August 19th, has just died, the cause of death being pleuro-pneumonia. A post-mortem examination showed that the heart was also affected.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Diarrhoea and Bowel Complaints.—These maladies are ever present, and if left unattended frequently terminate fatally. It should be everywhere known that both cholera and diarrhoea originate in the presence of some undigested substance in the stomach or bowels, or some deleterious matter in the blood, and that Holloway's Pills can expel either with ease and expedition. They concentrate in a surprising degree purifying, alterative, regulating and strengthening qualities, and thus exert over every internal organ the wholesomely controlling influence so necessary for subduing excessive action in the human frame. Holloway's medicine may be advantageously taken as a means of keeping the blood pure and the body cool—the only practical plan of maintaining health in youth, manhood, and old age.—[Adv.]

THE FREEMASON.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1879.

OUR GRAND SECRETARY.

Our readers will have perceived from our report, and realized with heartfelt regret, the absence of our excellent and kindly Grand Secretary from Grand Lodge at the last Quarterly Communication through continued illness, but will have equally rejoiced to learn on the high authority of Bro. Buss, A.G.S., that our esteemed and respected friend, (for friend he is to all of us), is "better." With Bro. Martyn's motion they will heartily sympathize, concurring alike in its words and aspirations, echoing the one and responding to the other, with the good old Masonic prayer, "So mote it be." We are sure we are but expressing the feelings of our entire Fraternity when we add that their anxious and hearty good wishes are with our admirable Grand Secretary in all his trials, trusting that in the Providence of T.G.A.O.T.U. we may soon welcome his genial presence amongst us again, in better health and in his wonted activity and urbanity, which are so great and so commendable, to continue his invaluable services to the Grand Lodge and universal Masonry.

PERSECUTION FOR RELIGION'S SAKE.

What a sad chapter is that in the history of the world which is darkened by the sorrowful records of persecution, by the animosities of countless professors of religion, by the cruel deeds of the blood-stained arena, by the lurid fires of the Inquisition. Indeed, it has often struck acute thinkers how strange is this tendency to persecute others for conscience sake in the annals of our race, and some one has called man "a thinking, indeed, but a persecuting animal." As we look back to-day through a long roll of ages, how melancholy is the spectacle presented to our view. Heathens and Hebrews, Christians and non-Christians, Mahomedans and Buddhists, —all equally in turn persecutors of others—who in this or that, in a doctrine or a declaration, a name or a novelty, a vestment or a picture, a creed or a catechism, disagreed or dissented from their neighbours. Indeed, it is hard to-day to put our finger on any one religious denomination and say of it that in its teachings or practices persecution is unknown. One great religious body, the Church of England, from which most of our excellent and admirable Chaplains emerge, is, perhaps, the most tolerant religious organization that ever existed, and to its wise toleration and large-hearted charity we are indebted, since Popes first cursed us, and the intolerant excommunicated us, for that long array of excellent Masons who have done honour both to our Craft and their own kindly and Catholic creed. But still, as we all know, and as we have seen of late years, the spirit of persecution survives, and whether it is Dominic wielding the scourge and lighting up the Auto-da-fe, or Baptists and Presbyterians banning, not blessing, Freemasons, or Roman Catholic Bishops and priests refusing the rites of religion, or Cardinals and Popes excommunicating us "en bloc," or unbelievers striking out the very name of God, it is all one and the same hateful system; what we call in our emphatic and truthful Masonic language, "the debasing practice of persecution." If "Truth" is to hold its own, if religion is to commend its acceptance to the doubtful and the disputations, the cold and the callous, the sneering and the sceptic, it is not by harsh words or cruel deeds, the outcome of unreasoning violence, intolerant injustice, and un-Christian anger. No! it is by the mild and persuasive words of gentleness, and charity, and goodness; by the active practice of what we profess; by charitable lives, as well as by kindly words, and by the exercise of that spirit of courtesy, consideration, and love which forgets that we are erring but realizes that we are human, which ignores that we are offending but "pitieth our infirmities." Religion, to be religion, requires no sword of Dominic, no fires of Smithfield; "its words are words of pleasantness, and all its paths are peace." One of the most humiliating chapters in the history of Christianity is the persecution of the Hebrew race. Admitted that the Jews in the first glow of Christianity were adverse and hostile to Christians; proved, as probably it may be, that in the early Roman persecutions they joined the heathen array, and took part in the mockeries and massacres of the arena, surely that is no reason why Christians, in the later and middle ages especially, should have looked on the Hebrews as hardly human beings, should have heaped every indignity upon their heads, and should have treated them habitually as the "off-scouring of all things," with every species of rapacity, plunder, cruelty, insult, and oppression. It really does seem to us a most degrading commentary on the practice of our age and the progress of civilization in the world, to be told to-day that in Servia and Roumania the great question is how not to give the Jews equal rights, and how that Roumanian statesmen are "beating about the bush" in all directions to seek to find some means of evading the provisions of the Treaty of Berlin, which enjoin equal rights and just laws, and kind consideration for the Hebrew race in that country. Wonderful paradox of humanity! We who have studied the Hebrew history know well what industrious and useful members of the body politic Hebrews are, and though perhaps it is true of them that they constitute a "nation within a nation," and that their true patriotic ardour is bound up with the land of their old renown, with Jerusalem and Jordan, the hills and vales of Palestine, yet we never could understand how Christians believing in Christianity could wish to persecute the Hebrews. We do, therefore, denounce to-day any refusal to them, in any quarter of the globe, of their just and undeniable rights. We protest against treatment which is detestable, and persecution which is cowardly, of a harmless, and kindly, and loyal race, and we trust that the time is not far distant when it shall be admitted that the rights of Hebrews are as sacred as those of any other religion or class in the world, and that they have every warrant to claim both our sympathy and our support, our good will and regard, as valued, and valuable, and industrious workers in the great social hive. Let us hope we have heard the last of Servian injustice and Roumanian cruelties to the Hebrews, and that we may live to learn to boast in this epoch of light and liberty that we persecute no one for conscience sake, much less for religion's sake.

MASONIC AMENITIES.

We are sorry to note how very abusive and unbrotherly Freemasons are when they once get into print. What is that peculiar power, or, (if we may so say), temper of publicity which continually renders us uncourteous and inconsiderate, unkind and unfair to others? Curiously enough, Freemasons, who are always preaching, or, as some one has said sneeringly, "spouting" brotherly love, seem sometimes in print the most censorious of critics, the most bitter of writers, and the most violent of opponents. Put a pen in the hand of a brother and give him space in our columns, and set him out and up with the "clearness of type," and there seem no limits sometimes to the causticity of his criticisms, no measure to the violence of his remarks, (not unfrequently libellous), upon others, whom he terms in lodge "his brethren in Masonry." Why is this? Whence this sad contrast between profession and practice? this abject parody on the whole kindly teaching and temper of our friendly, and fraternal, and considerate, and courteous Order? We suppose that it can only be attributed to the abiding weakness of our "poor humanity," and as Masons are only mortals, and mortals are always weak and erring, so the weakness and errors of our common nature remain the unvarying heritage of Masons as well as others. Otherwise we do not profess to understand it. It, no doubt, constitutes a great scandal to our Order, and is too often made use of as a handle, especially by the ignorant and weak-headed, against the use of Masonry in general, as an argument against its "outcome" in particular. We are always sorry when we note a spirit of personality creeping into our columns, and we have sought, and we venture to think not unsuccessfully, to keep the Freemason clear from language which is offensive, and open attack, or veiled insinuation, which are derogatory to our profession and practice as Freemasons. At the Antipodes we note that in the heat of Masonic controversy sad words are used, and most un-Masonic expressions run current. One brother calls an opponent a "Thug," and the other brother retorts by calling his assailant a "cur." And so it goes on until the outer world, if they judge of Freemasonry by rival editors or antagonistic papers, by Masonic Pottses or Sturks, must begin to think Freemasonry a great humbug altogether, to be sick of its tinsel and its speeches, its many professions of charity and brotherly love, and yet its undeniable proofs of "envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness." We trust, however, that all such episodes and facts are but exceptions, and passing "little notes in the glorious sunbeam of Freemasonry," and that its really beneficent principles and noble works will yet convince the world that however here and there we prove that as Masons we are always only mortals after all at the very best, we have a right to be proud of our excellent, and admirable, and really beneficial and charitable Brotherhood.

PROVINCIAL OFFICE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I venture to interpose in this controversy, which seems to have originated again in Hampshire, and in which a good deal of personal feeling is clearly mixed up, to say that I, for one, greatly deprecate these reiterated complaints of "vaulting ambition." There is a "craving" for rank just now "afloat" amongst us, which seems to portend great mischief to Freemasonry unless timely checked, and from some experience I feel sure that I am right in saying that it is both unmeaning and un-Masonic in the highest degree. In the exercise of their little yearly patronage our Provincial Rulers are often sorely tried by the claims of some who have no warrant to ask for provincial office, and yet feel themselves sorely aggrieved if they are passed over. If in the recent correspondence about Hampshire there is intended to be read a covert attack on the ruler of that province, all I can say is, that I am very sorry Hampshire Masons have nothing better to write about in your well filled columns.

"Delete," Bro. Editor, "Delete," and oblige yours fraternally,

AN OLD PROVINCIAL OFFICER.

THE PROVINCE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having carefully read the correspondence which has appeared in your columns relative to the distribution of Masonic honours in the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, I should like to offer a few comments thereon, in the hope of convincing the writers of these annual epistles to the Freemason how purely imaginary their grievances are.

"An Old P.M." evidently thinks that provincial honours ought to be distributed in equal proportions to all the lodges in rotation; but it is difficult to see the equity of such an arrangement. Provincial honours, to be worth anything, should only be given in recognition of Masonic ability or as a reward for distinguished services rendered to the Craft; and a careful analysis of the list of honours which have been conferred in the Province of Hampshire during the past ten years clearly shows that not a little discrimination and judgment have been displayed in awarding them. An impartial examination will convince any one that they have been invariably given for one of three reasons.

1. That the lodge is a large supporter of the Masonic Charities; 2. That it is numerically very large; or, 3. That some individual brother has shown himself to be possessed of conspicuous ability and devotion to the cause of Freemasonry which claims special recognition.

Take the lodges to which "An Old P.M." takes exception. To begin with Southampton, the three principal lodges of that town represent no less than 233 votes for the two principal Masonic Institutions (I include individual subscribers in this calculation). This represents an amount of self-denying labour and liberality which is not easily computed. Is a lodge which has only fifteen or twenty votes (and there are several) to receive equal recognition in the distribution of provincial honours? Basingstoke, which has received six collars in ten years, is represented in the lists of the two Institutions by 100 votes; Aldershot by ninety-six; the Royal Sussex by seventy-one; the Portsmouth Lodge by sixty; Winchester by fifty-six; Fareham by forty-seven; and the Phoenix Lodge by forty-five. To Portsmouth Lodge, no doubt, a large share of honours has fallen; but it must be borne in mind that it is a very numerous lodge (with one exception only, making the largest return to Grand Lodge), and that prior to 1868 it received but scant recognition.

There is another reason why other lodges do not stand higher on the list, viz., the non-attendance of their more deserving members at Provincial Grand Lodge, which renders them ineligible to receive those marks of distinction which would otherwise be gladly bestowed on them. As a rule, those most clamorous for provincial honours are the least worthy to receive them, and it is positively sickening to hear of the number of aspirants for the "purple" who are continually obtruding their claims to recognition on the notice of the Provincial Grand Master.

In conclusion, let me express a hope that unless there is some more worthy reason than that assigned by "An Old P.M." to be alleged against the preponderance of provincial honours in particular lodges we shall hear no more of the matter.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
Sept. 8th, 1879. A JUNIOR WARDEN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I quite agree with the remarks of your Southampton correspondent, that the R.W.P.G. Master has a very difficult duty to perform in distributing the collars, and it cannot be expected that he is personally acquainted with the merits of the brethren forming the various lodges under his banner; he is, therefore, necessarily greatly dependent on the recommendations of his officers, and as he probably keeps no list of the honours he bestows from year to year, he would not notice that certain lodges get the lion's share. Let this be as it may—one thing is certain, the province is far too large, and it would conduce greatly to its prosperity if measures were taken to obtain a division. With regard to the social status of the brethren, so long as they are in reputable circumstances (and if they are not they should not be admitted as Masons) their rank or station in the outer world should not be considered, for we are taught that "he who is on the lowest spoke of fortune's wheel may be equally deserving of honour and esteem with the one who is on the highest." It will often happen that the recipient of honour belongs to more than one lodge, but as a rule, brethren send in their names in connection with the one they are most actively connected with.

The lodges that are not in active work, and those which have been recently constituted, I specially marked to shew a reason for their not receiving honours.

The Hengist Lodge in 1876 received a Grand Director of Ceremonies' collar, and I find I have inadvertently put it in the next column, thus showing on the table thirteen Grand Superintendents of Works, and only eleven Grand Directors of Ceremonies.

If the P.G. Chaplain refers to my letter, he will find I have not said one word against the recipients of the honours—I do not doubt for a moment that they are quite deserving of them; but in his letter he, perhaps unintentionally, casts a slur upon members of the lodges that have been passed over, by remarking, "It is not so much the number of the lodges in the province as the quality of the respective members of the lodges," thus implying that these unfortunate lodges have few if any deserving brothers connected with them. Whether the word "quality" is to be understood to apply to their social position or their Masonic merits he does not say (and one of the great principles of Masonry being equality, money bags should not be allowed to count), but in either sense I can affirm, from my own personal knowledge of many of the lodges in question, and of a large number of the brethren (of good social position) connected with them, that our beautiful ritual is most ably carried out by the officers, that the Charities are liberally supported, and that many of the brethren are thoroughly good working Masons, deserving honours they may never hope to receive under existing circumstances. These are facts which the publication of my name cannot in any way alter.

With reference to the suggestion of a P.P.G. Officer to make the collar of the P.G. Treasurer available, I think this would only be as a drop in the ocean, and go a very small way towards improving our position, and our present P.G. Treasurer is a good working Mason, whose happy-looking face and genial manners I for one should greatly miss at our meetings. Our best remedy is division.

As Stewards are not entitled to wear the purple, or to rank as Past Officers after their year of office, the appointment is not valued as it would be if they were (and as it is in the Mark, &c.).

I did not say the collar subjected them to annoyance from the rest of, but from the jests of, their brethren.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
AN OLD P.M.

MASONRY AND TAPESTRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Cambrian Archaeological Society made Welchpool and its neighbourhood the scene of their annual meeting, and their last day's excursion (August 30th) included the inspection of Montgomery Castle, &c. About half-a-mile further on is a magnificent old timbered black and white house called "Lymore," which, after the destruction of the Castle in 1649, was made the residence of the Lords Herbert of Chisbury, the ancestors of the present Earl of Powis, the now owner, and it contains many well preserved hangings of tapestry. The finest specimen represents the "Visit of the Queen of Sheba to our Grand Master King Solomon." The figures in the foreground are nearly life size, and two of them are boldly depicted as embracing as Master Masons. The date of the tapestry is 1556, and evidently was removed from Montgomery Castle.

Can any brother give any further information of tapestry having so marked an intimation of our aporetta?

CONSECRATION OF THE DUKE OF CORNWALL LODGE, 1839.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I beg to call your attention to a clerical error in your otherwise faithful record of the proceedings on this occasion. You state Bro. Joseph Woolley, W.M. designate, was installed, &c., but omitted my surname—Brooke.

As my friends may not recognise me when shorn of my principal cognomen, I shall be obliged by your kindly correcting the omission.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

Masonic Notes and Queries.

ANOTHER MASONIC MS.

I am very delighted to inform the Craft through the medium of the Freemason that another old and valuable Masonic MS. has been traced, this time the fortunate finder being a most painstaking and intelligent Masonic student, Bro. W. Fred Vernon, P.M., &c., of Kelso, Scotland. For years I have, with others, endeavoured to find out if there were any versions of the "Old Charges" at Melrose, but I have utterly failed to do so, all enquiries ending with the same negative result, though I felt sure it was most likely one or more existed there somehow or other. Bro. Vernon has just communicated to me the pleasing intelligence that he has found one at last, after many trials, and so naturally it will be designated it being in the archives of the ancient lodge which assembled in Melrose for centuries. The beginning of the MS. is, as usual, an invocation to the Trinity. Of its general character Bro. Vernon had not time to make sure, but at the end of the MS. is the following:—

"Be it known to all men to whom these presents shall come that Robert Winchester hath lawfully done his dutie to the science of Masonrie, in witness whereof I, John Winchester, his Master Free Mason, have subscribit my name and sett to my mark, in the year of our Lord 1581, and in the raing of our most Sovereign Lady Elizabeth, the (22) year."

For the time then we put it down to 1583. On the margin is a note to this effect, "Extracted by me, A. M., upon the 1, 2, 3, and 4 dayes of December, Anno MDCLXXXIII," but it is evidently a copy of an older MS. I await impatiently for any further details, and have at once sent word to Bro. Vernon of the importance of his discovery, in which, as my able co-labourer, I feel certain Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford will most gladly join.

I trust the ancient lodge will afford Bro. Vernon every opportunity and facilities for his researches, and we have all full confidence in his ability to do full justice in the matter.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

WILLIAM PRESTON'S INITIATION.

In answer to "Masonic Student" I have to report that at present it is not possible to state exactly when Preston was initiated, as the dispensation was acted upon before the constitution of the lodge, but it is quite evident that he received the light between March and April 20th, 1763, or in other words, as the dispensation was agreed to on the 2nd March, to continue in force for "the space of thirty days," it is most likely the initiation took place in March, 1763. I think it probable that too much stress has been laid upon the order of the list of members of Lodge, No. 111, "Ancients," under date 1st June, 1763, and for the reasons stated very clearly in a letter received from our able Bro. Gould, as follows:—

"It must be recollected that the memoir in the 'Freemasons' Magazine' of 1795 was professedly compiled by his friend (and brother P.M. of Lodge Antiquity) Stephen Jones, Preston himself being at the time a contributor to the journal in question, and there can be no doubt he inspired, if indeed he did not actually write, this article. The entry in the books of Grand Lodge (Register of Lodges, vol. 4, letter D) proves, I think, that Bro. Loch-head having used his dispensation to good purpose, the brethren gathered together under his provisional authority, were constituted as a lodge on April 20th, 1763. Preston's position on the 11st (twelfth) might indicate that ten members of the new lodge had met under the dispensation before Preston and the first initiate were admitted. I am disposed, however, to attach no importance to the order in which the names appear. The three first on the roll were Wm. Leslie, Charles Holden, and John Irwin."

I have preferred giving the exact words of Bro. Gould on the subject, and feel glad that the letter of "Masonic Student" has called forth this second communication from the author of the "Four Old Lodges" respecting William Preston, and as we have now before us the latest known facts, we shall not fail in thanking Bro. Gould for his valuable information.

W. J. HUGHAN.

GRAND COMMANDERY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

E. Sir Knt. Chas. E. Meyer, Grand Recorder of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of Pennsylvania, has forwarded to me a copy of the proceedings of that body at the twenty-eighth annual convocation, held at Allentown, in May last. One cannot but be struck by the extent of labour involved in the compilation of such a report, consisting of no less than 232 pages, and by the excellence and care displayed both in its preparation and printing. The R.E. Grand Commander in his annual report alludes to the pilgrimages of some of the knights to Europe last year, and says, "from the glowing accounts received from the individual members who participated in the pilgrimages they must have had an enjoyable time, and created a favourable impression abroad of the Knights Templar of Pennsylvania." The Grand Recorder in his report also alludes to the pilgrimage, and says, "the most unbounded hospitalities were extended by all, and the warmest, heartiest welcome awaited them wherever they went;" and then he gives a number of names of brethren who were prominent in extending hospitalities. After the installation of the new R.E. Grand Commander, Sir Knt. John P. S. Gobin, he delivered an elaborate address, which is printed extenso. In the course of his remarks he said: "An examination of the basis of the charters of the York Masons reveals the facts that they are imbued with the spirit of the first Christian communities, whose members having separated themselves from those who were animated by totally different feelings, had surrendered themselves to such apostolic teaching as might present to them the pure doctrines of the new faith. The fraternal and uniformly equitable principles of the ancient laws of the Roman colleges were very intimately known to those who presented the primitive doctrine of Christ. The teachings of the Hermit School, the most prominent instructors at that time in the doctrines of the new faith in Great Britain, were found by the assembly of Freemasons, convened at York, so identical with the principles professed by them and their predecessors for nearly five hundred years that they did not deem it necessary to envelope such teachings in new forms. On the contrary, in forming the constitution they based it on the ancient humanitarian principles which were in entire harmony with universal morality, and in entire conformity with the early Christian doctrine." As usual, Bro. Meyer's report on correspondence is framed with great perspicuity, and the skill with which he has picked out the salient points and given a connected form to the whole is worthy of every commendation. It is a department in which our eminent brother excels. The address of the Great Prior of Canada, Col. W. J. B. Macleod Moore, is noticed at great length, and long extracts are given from it, the Grand Recorder justly saying that it is "very interesting and ably written." It is to be regretted that some better understanding cannot be come to between the Great Priory of Canada and the Grand Encampment of the United States on the question of equality of status. The practice of frequent appearances in public in the uniform of the Order manifestly leads to difficulties, and I notice that Grand Masters of several districts have been compelled to interfere and forbid the promiscuous wearing of Templar clothing. In this respect unquestionably our strict English rules are to be preferred. Amongst other items worthy of notice is the gift by the Grand Commandery of Mississippi of a "Templar medal of silver," to be worn by the best scholar in the Natchez Protestant Orphan Asylum. The Secretary of the Asylum reports that the medal has excited the greatest ambition amongst the children, and has produced the best results. Might not the Great Priory of England take a hint from this and give a decoration to be competed for by the pupils of our Boys' and Girls' Schools? There are numberless items of interest to be culled from this cheerful volume which will well repay perusal. Its frontispiece is a portrait of Past Grand Commander S. B. Dick, and a very good likeness it is. Sir Knight Dick brought to me a letter of introduction from Sir Knight C. E. Meyer, and I was privileged to spend a few hours in his company a few weeks ago, and to show him some of the archaeological curiosities of our ancient city. May the Masonic cord across the Atlantic be for ever strengthened.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

In reply to Bro. Hughan Lodges Nos. 637-40, of the 1792-1813 numeration, are placed by me at 1812 because no other date is assigned them in any official list published prior to 1815, and a deviation on my part from the figures exhibited in the "Freemasons' Calendar" would have changed the reprint I professedly appended to the "Four Old Lodges" into a fanciful production of my own.

I think it more than probable Bro. Hughan is quite right in lowering the seniority of the lodges in question to 1813, though as the 1813 edition of the Calendar (like all the rest) was prepared before the close of the preceding year, it is fairly possible that Nos. 637-40 were constituted in the interval between the publication of the Calendar and the end of 1812? Referring to my notes, I find that No. 636 was constituted on the 12th February, 1812, but the seniority of Nos. 637-40 I have no memorandum of.

I am much obliged to Bro. Hughan for pointing out my inadvertency (in the prefatory remarks to the 1748 list) in alluding to present No. 67 as the then No. 165, instead of No. 185. In giving, as I have attempted to do, full descriptions—viz., number, name, locality, and date of constitution—of more than three thousand lodges, together with nearly two thousand additional numbers by way of marginal reference, it is matter of certainty that some mistakes must have occurred, but I shall be very thankful to have them noticed, and am sanguine enough to believe that none of real consequence will be detected.

R. F. GOULD.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT TO A LIVERPOOL BROTHER.

An inquest was held on Friday, the 5th inst., at Liverpool, before Mr. Clark Aspinall, coroner, on the body of Bro. Samuel Porter, forty-nine years of age, a pilot in the service of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, who lived at 35, Kemble-street, Liverpool. The deceased was one of a number of pilots on board No. 9 pilot boat, which was cruising on the second Hoylake station on Tuesday afternoon. According to the statement of William Davies, a pilot, it appeared that the deceased was fishing on board the boat, and Dr. Henry George Samuels, of Shaw-street, Liverpool, who had been shooting gulls, was sitting on a seat on the starboard quarter, close to Porter. The boat was rolling considerably. Dr. Samuels had his gun in his hands, pointing over his left arm out to sea, over the boat's quarter. The hammer was down. The doctor had his toe against a "bit" to prevent his slipping off the seat, but the boat gave a heavier roll than before, and he fell forward off the seat. In his fall the gun went off, and the deceased said he was shot. Witness then noticed that Porter's right knee was injured. Dr. Samuels did all he could for the deceased after the accident, and remained with him till he was placed in the Northern Hospital at Liverpool the same night. William Crane, the pilot who was in charge of the boat, said that Dr. Samuels went out with them for a sail at his invitation. The boat was four miles outside the bar lightship at the time of the accident, and was sailing about two miles an hour. Dr. Samuels said that the accident took place exactly as described by the witnesses, and was entirely owing to his being thrown from his seat. The hammer was down, as he had finished shooting. He felt very seasick, or he should have gone below at once and taken off the cap. He held the gun so that it could not possibly have done any mischief but for the sea unexpectedly causing him to fall forward. The deceased's right leg was much shattered, and only amputation could save him. Dr. Batty, of the Northern Hospital, stated that the injured man's leg was amputated. He died from the injuries on Wednesday afternoon. The Coroner, addressing the jury, observed that nothing could be more painful to all parties concerned than an accident of this nature. Naturally, the severity of the shock fell chiefly on the domestic circle, but, outside the family, probably no one could have felt more keenly or regretted more bitterly the occurrence than did Dr. Samuels. For his own part he felt, personally, and he was sure the jury would all feel not only great sympathy with the family, but also a large amount of sympathy with the doctor in his painful position, as having been in a certain sense the innocent cause of such a fearful calamity. The Foreman, after consultation with the jury, said they were agreed that the deceased came by his death through a pure accident, and they deeply sympathised both with his family and the doctor. The Coroner requested the brother of the deceased to convey to the widow the expression of sympathy from the jury and himself, and added that he hoped something would be done in the way of provision for the wife and family bereft by the accident.

The mortal remains of the deceased were interred in Anfield Cemetery, near Liverpool, last Sunday morning, and the extremely melancholy nature of the fatal occurrence, coupled with the fact that he was very greatly and generally respected in the service, led to the attendance of an immense concourse of people. The deceased was connected with the Masonic body, having been initiated in St. John's Lodge, No. 673, in the year 1865, and he was also a prominent member of the Orange fraternity, occupying, before his death, the office of Master of the Pride of Liverpool Lodge, No. 248, which holds its meetings at the Conservative Association Rooms, Prescott-street. He was also a Royal Arch Mason, being connected with the St. John's Chapter, meeting at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street. These Orders were very numerously represented yesterday, showing the esteem in which the deceased was held by those attached to the fraternities. About 100 pilots connected with the port were present, and the concourse of persons in the cemetery must have numbered upwards of 2000. The funeral cortège, which included three mourning coaches (containing the relatives of the deceased) and about twenty private conveyances, followed by the Masonic and Orange representatives, left the late residence of the deceased, 35, Kemble-street, shortly after eight o'clock, and proceeded to the cemetery, where the interment took place about half-past nine o'clock. Amongst the Freemasons connected with St. John's Lodge present were Bros. Brackenbury, W.M.; W. T. May, P.M., Sec.; R. Pearson, P.M.; J. B. Bunting, P.M.; J. Hocken, P.M.; T. Clark, P.M., Treas.; H. Nelson, P.M.; T. Roberts, P.M. H. Burrows, P.M.; L. Herman, S.W.; G. Godfrey, S.; J. Atkinson, W. Matthews, C. Jacobs, G. Nixon, J. Roberts, Bebington, W. Crane, J. Lolly, Bevan, J. Black, W. Many of these brethren are pilots, and amongst the Orange representatives, who appeared in their regalia, were Bros. J. Ballard, P.G.S. (No. 2 district); W. Magee, W.D.M.; F. Morgan, D.S.; T. Gee, D.D.M.; G. M' Coy, Treasurer 248; R. Jervis, G.T.; G. Gordon, 57, and others. The general company also included Capt. Scott, Master of No. 9 pilot boat (with which the deceased was connected); Mr. J. Pritchard, Master of the Waterloo Dock; Mr. W. Brewer, steam pilot; G. T. Lunt, and others. The funeral service in the chapel, which was densely crowded, and also at the graveside, was conducted by the Rev. Isaac Holmes, Chaplain of the Kirkdale Industrial Schools, and clergyman of the cemetery. The members of the Orange body, who had gathered in a circle round the last resting place of their brother, afterwards paid their last sad tribute of respect to his memory; and after the hymn "Safe in the arms of Jesus" had been sung, Mr. W. H. Smith, connected with the Protestant Reformation Society, addressed a few practical words to the assembled brethren.

Bro. Rev. R. J. Simpson, rector of St. Clement Danes, Strand, having been appointed to the vicarage of Wimbish, Essex, the Marquis of Exeter has nominated the Rev. John Lindsay to the vacant rectory, to which he was instituted on Friday, the 5th inst.

At a meeting of the Supreme Council of Scotland, Thirty-third Degree, held on the 8th inst., presided over by Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Bart., III. Bro. S. Constantine Burke, Provincial Grand Master of Jamaica, S.C., was admitted to the Thirty-third Degree as Sovereign Grand Inspector General for the West Indies.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Lancashire will be held under the banners of lodges Nos. 281, 1051, 1353, and 1561, in the Winter Gardens at Morecambe, on Wednesday, the 1st October. The R.W.P.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, is expected to preside, and it is thought that the holding of the lodge at this attractive watering place will induce a large number of the Craft to be present.

The annual communication of the Province of North and East Yorkshire is announced to be held at the Guildhall, York, on Wednesday next. The programme of the proceedings includes a procession to the cathedral and a special service, with collection for the Masonic Charities and the Minister Restoration Fund, a banquet at the Defrey Rooms at five o'clock, to be followed by a conversation, to which ladies will be admitted. The meeting is held under the banner of the Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611, and its members are sparing neither pains nor expense to render the meeting an event to be long remembered. Remembering the success which attended the reception of the American Masons last year by this active and prosperous lodge we can have no doubt of the success of their efforts on the present occasion.

The Gazette of Tuesday announces that the Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross upon Captain Lord William Beresford, of the 9th Lancers, whose claim has been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for gallant conduct in having at great personal risk, during the retirement of the reconnoitring party across the "White Umvolosi River," on 3rd July last, turned to assist Sergeant Fitzmaurice, 1st Battalion 24th Foot (whose horse had fallen with him), mounted him behind him on his horse, and brought him away in safety under the close fire of the Zulus, who were in great force, and coming on quickly. Lord William Beresford's position was rendered most dangerous from the fact that Sergeant Fitzmaurice twice nearly pulled him from his horse.

The well-known Parsee philanthropist, Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, C.S.I., has given 20,000 rupees towards the establishment of a medical college at Ahmedabad, to be called after him. The same gentleman gave 40,000 rupees for a similar institution at Poonah.

L'Allegro, an experienced provincial journalist who has honestly earned a good reputation in the literary world as a writer of numerous popular serial stories, has ready for publication a series of novelettes entitled "Newspaper Romances."

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LOYALTY LODGE (No. 1607).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Alexandra Palace on Saturday last, the 13th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Webb, W.M., when a large and influential body of Freemasons assembled to do honour to the installation of Bro. C. J. Perceval, V.P. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the report of the auditors on the financial position of the lodge, which is eminently satisfactory, was received and adopted. Bro. Webb then, addressing the lodge, said that he felt it to be his duty before he vacated the chair to return his best thanks to Bro. Brown, P.M., for the able assistance which Bro. Brown had rendered him during his year of office, without which assistance he (Bro. Webb) felt that he would not have been able to perform his duties in so satisfactory a way as could be desired. He, in conclusion, invested Bro. Brown, P.M., with the collar of I.P.M. for the ensuing ceremony. Bro. Brown briefly acknowledged the compliment which the W.M. had paid him. The W.M. next recited the usual address to the brethren in relation to the annual election of a Master. The I.P.M. then presented Bro. C. J. Perceval, V.P., as W.M. elect, who, having signified his acquiescence in the regulations laid down in the Book of Constitutions (recited to him by the Secretary), was then obligated as W.M. elect. By direction of the W.M., the officers of the lodge vacated their chairs, which were then assumed by Bros. Lieut.-Col. Creton, as S.W.; and C. Lacey, Prov. Grand Officer Herts, as J.W.; Bro. James Terry, Prov. G. Officer Herts, acting as Director of Ceremonies. A Board of Installed Masters was formed, and the D.C. having presented the W.M. elect for the benefits of installation, he was duly obligated, and thereafter installed by Bro. Webb into the chair of K.S. with the usual solemnities. The Board having saluted the new W.M., was declared closed, and the remainder of the brethren being re-admitted the ceremony was completed. The officers appointed for the ensuing year were as follows: Bros. Legge, P.M., S.W.; Bredel, J.W.; Brown, P.M., Treasurer; Newton, P.M., Secretary; Knill, S.D.; Jones, J.D.; Carr, I.G.; Newham, W.S.; Roberts, D.C.; and Verry, Tyler. The manner in which the entire proceedings were conducted reflected the highest credit on all concerned. The working of the ritual by Bro. Webb left nothing to be desired, while the well known ability of Bro. Terry as a D.C. ensured the proper marshalling of the brethren under his guidance. Among the visitors present we noticed Bros. Lieut.-Col. Creton, Grand Treasurer; R. H. Blatchford, W.M. 1196; E. W. Braine, P.M. 1471; J. Miller, 174; Jas. Freeman, W.M. 1426; J. G. Stevens, P.M. 554; Thos. Hamer, S.D. 1426; A. E. Gladwell, J.W. 172; W. Musto, P.M. 1349; G. H. Stephens, 1623; Thos. G. J. Barnes, P.M. 933; F. Breuer, 204; Charles Searell, P.M. 1382; S. T. H. Seddon, W.M. 174; Thos. Blaiter, 804; C. Lacey, P.G.D. Herts; J. Egan, P.M. 453; G. C. Coles; W. D. Hodges, 1287; F. R. W. Hedges, Secretary R.M.I. Girls; F. Binckes, Secretary, R.M.I. Boys; James Terry, Secretary R.M. Benevolent Institution; H. Corlett, 620, (I.C.); W. D'Oyley; M. L. R. Duquenois, 1475; Morgan; Stevens; and E. C. Massey, P.M. 1297 (Freemason). The lodge having been closed in customary form, the brethren adjourned to the banquet-room, where a repast embracing all the delicacies of the season was provided by Bros. Bertram and Roberts, and appeared to be fully appreciated by the brethren, for the evening was far advanced before the servants left the room. As soon as this had been effected the chairman proceeded to propose the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. He first gave "The Queen and the Craft," and said: I will not try to do that in which all others have failed, viz., to add one iota to the loyalty with which this toast is received. He then gave "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales,

M.W.G.M.," and in doing so said: But few more words are required of me on this toast, therefore I will content myself with saying that which you all know, that he is a thorough Englishman and gentleman, and while condescending and affable to those beneath him, none know better than he how to maintain the dignity and position of the heir to the throne of the grandest empire in the world. The Chairman: The next two toasts, on account of the shortness of time, I will combine in one. They are "The Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master and the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers." Brethren, those who have had the privilege of attending Grand Lodge know how well the work is carried on there. Nobody could possibly fill the Prince of Wales's chair, in his absence, better than the M.W. Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon. As for the Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, he is always doing good somewhere. As regards the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past, they are too well known to you all to require any words from me. We had one of the Grand Officers here to-night, who, I regret to say, on account of illness at home, has been unable to remain, and has begged me to ask you to accept his excuses. That brother is the Grand Treasurer, so well known to you in connection with the Charities, no assembly for work in connection with those Charities appearing to be complete without the presence of Col. Creton. (Hear.) Bro. Webb, I.P.M.: Brethren, for the first time in my Masonic career a very pleasing duty devolves upon me as the youngest initiated Past Master. I have in my office of I.P.M. to propose "The Health of our Newly-Installed W.M.," and in doing so it becomes me to speak with the highest praise of him. It is pretty well known that the Worshipful Master gives much of his time and his means in the service of Freemasonry (hear); and I think we all feel assured that under his direction this lodge cannot fail of success. Brethren, I have not the gift of speech-making, and if I had, I am sure no long speech is needed from me to call upon you to drink to the health of the W.M. The W.M. in reply said: Immediate Past Master and brethren, I hardly know how to find words to express my thanks. Bro. Webb's proposal has been received with such tokens of approval that I hope I have deserved something of them. I consider that I am an extremely fortunate W.M. I come into office supported on my left by three Past Masters who cannot be excelled in Craft working, and besides, I have for my S.W. a brother who has already passed the Master's chair, and whose work in this lodge has been such that should I ever require support I shall not have to look to him for it in vain. For my J.W. I have one who has been in that office for six months, owing to the unfortunate circumstance of one of our brethren having been taken from us. Owing to the peculiarity of the regulations of the lodge I could not advance him to the Senior Warden's chair, though what he has done during the time he has been in office leaves nothing to be desired. Well, brethren, I suppose I must say something about myself. I have been six-and-twenty years a Mason, the first twenty-two years of that period were spent abroad. I never aspired to office until I came back to this country. Since I have taken office, since I have been affiliated by my friend and brother, Bro. Newton, I have continually endeavoured to do my duty to the Institutions; I have initiated two of my sons into Freemasonry, and I am sure they will turn out good men and true as long as they continue in Freemasonry, and if I had ten more I should introduce them also into Freemasonry. (Applause.) The Worshipful Master then proposed "The Visitors." This is a toast which is not only well received in the Sincerity and Loyalty Lodges, but in every lodge in the kingdom. Nothing can improve Masons more than visiting from lodge to lodge, attending the different workings, and where there is anything better than their own working, copy, and if it is the other way leave it alone. We have several visitors here to-night (reading names from attendance book); I trust that though they have come to-day specially to be present at my installation they will come again. I call upon you to drink "The Health of the Visitors." Bro. Binckes: Worshipful Master, whoever is the able and accomplished stage manager of this entertainment to-night I have to thank him for putting me into a chance of saying a word on a subject other than that on which I have generally to address my Masonic brethren. I have to tender to you, sir, to-night on behalf of the visitors their best thanks—I am sure they will allow me to say so—for the kindly greeting with which they have been received, and the magnificence with which they have been treated at your hospitable board. I have been under the impression that you had previously held supreme power in a Masonic lodge, but I learn that this is the first night of your advent to Masonic power. You have spoken in graceful language of the homage due to our Sovereign, and I could not help being reminded of the Prince of Wales's remarks upon the relation of loyalty and charity when I learned that in your position as Master of the Loyalty Lodge you are an illustration and exemplification of the Grand Master's sentiment, as you have already become a V.P. of the Charities. But I am, perhaps, travelling a little out of the record, and must not forget my task, which is to thank you for the very kindly reception we have met with to-night, not only at your hands but at the hands of your Past Masters and officers. The W.M. then gave "The I.P.M.," and said: If the I.P.M. felt pleasure in proposing my health, how much more must be my pleasure to propose his health, and present him at the same time with a Past Master's jewel. Bro. Webb, allow me to place on your breast this P.M.'s jewel; it could not have a worthier resting place; and I trust that you may long have health and strength to wear it. Bro. Webb: Worshipful Master, I have to express my sincere thanks to you for the very kind manner in which you have proposed my health, and you, brethren, for the very kind manner in which you have responded to it. I can assure you that my past career in the Craft has been marked by a desire to do my duty, and I trust I shall continue to do it in the future. Much as I prize this jewel you have placed on my breast, I prize much more the high opinion of the brethren. It is not the jewel, but it is the estimation in which one is held—in that sense, brethren, I assure you I thank you sincerely. If I have deserved your esteem I trust I shall never cease to deserve it, and this tangible mark of your approbation will ever serve to remind me of the happy hours passed in the Lodge of Loyalty. The W.M.: Brethren, the next toast on our list is "The Masonic Charities." We have had the company of the Secretaries of all three Charities this evening; one has been unfortunately obliged to leave, but there still remain two. On the merits of the Institutions I shall not enlarge, as our time is short, but I shall leave that duty to Bro. Terry, upon whom I will call to respond to the toast. Bro. Terry: Worshipful Master, brother Wardens, and brethren, in response to the toast you have proposed, permit me to tender you our very sincere thanks. Indeed (speaking for Bro. Binckes and Bro. Hedges), in this Lodge of Loyalty we know what you can do. Your new Treasurer, has, I believe, taken over £100 to the Boys' School; since then others have taken the position of Steward, and if I may instance only what your Junior Warden did this year, the Benevolent Institution had the benefit of his services, and the sum of £150 was brought up by him from this lodge. I have been to many lodges where a Master has been installed, but I may say that this is the first case in which a Master, before he has become one, has qualified himself as a Vice-President of all our Masonic Institutions. Brethren, you know what the Masonic Institutions have done, are doing, and have to do in the future. Bro. Terry continued that he did not suppose that the Institutions would ever have more money than they could do with, as there were always contingencies arising which absorbed surplus funds. He went on to remind them of the proposal now before the Craft for a fund to assist successful scholars to gain a position after leaving the schools, and objected that this was more than could be fairly demanded from the brethren, as many a man would be subscribing to the fund to the detriment of his own children. He hoped that the brethren would never let the subscriptions to the Institutions be placed at a disadvantage. He also noticed the proposal to increase the amount of the annuities granted by the Benevolent Institution, and believed that it would be far better to increase the number of annuitants than the amount of the annuities. Bro. Binckes desired to be allowed to say one word on the subject of the Pupil Assistance Fund. He wished every one to understand that it was not intended to be competitive with any fund for the Masonic Charities. The fund was intended to assist pupils of extraordinary attainments. There might be many cases in the Girls' School, with which he was not so well acquainted as with the Boys' School, where he knew boys who had proved themselves capable of attaining the highest positions in life; and when such talent forced itself upon the attention it appeared to him sad that there should be no fund which would enable the directors of the Institution to put the owners in the way of using those talents for their advancement in life. "The Healths of the Treasurer and Secretary, and other Officers of the Lodge" were also proposed from the chair, and duly responded to, and the Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings. It may be mentioned that the songs to the toasts were all by members of the lodge, assisted by Bro. S. T. H. Seddon, W.M. 174, who most ably presided at the piano.

LODGE OF PERSEVERANCE (No. 1743).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Imperial Hotel, Holborn Viaduct, on Saturday last, when, after performing one raising, one passing, and one initiation, the W.M., Bro. Louis A. Leins, P.M. Nos. 65, 1364, and 1471, installed Bro. Albert Barker as Master of the lodge for the ensuing year. The ceremonies were assisted by the musical performances of Bros. H. Ashton, F. H. Cozens, and A. Hubbard, under the direction of Bro. H. Ashton, and after the appointment of officers for the year the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to a choice banquet. The musical menu after dinner contained a liberal collection of compositions, all of which were most beautifully rendered by the accomplished artists engaged. The services of Bro. Leins to the lodge during his year of office were acknowledged by a handsome presentation, and some very flattering observations by the incoming W.M. on his fluency and ability in the performance of the ceremonies and his hearty Masonic spirit in conducting the affairs of the lodge.

SUNDERLAND.—St. John's Lodge (No. 80).—The regular meeting of the above lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday evening, the 4th inst., at 7.30. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. J. Newton, supported by Bros. Frampton, W.M. 94; Sharp, P.M. 97; Eggleston, W.M. 949; and Surtees, 94. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken for Mr. Charles William Huntly, a candidate for Masonry, and Bro. John George Lister, of St. David's Lodge, 366, as a joining member, who were declared duly elected. No other business being done, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom and solemn form. The brethren then retired for refreshment, when a very pleasing evening was spent.

SUNDERLAND.—Phoenix Lodge (No. 94).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 3rd inst., at 7.30, in the Masonic Hall. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. M. Frampton, supported by Bros. Lowes, P.M.; M. Douglass, P.M. 80; and Eggleston, 949. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Cowan, a candidate for the Second Degree, was then examined, and gave satisfaction, and then retired to be prepared. The lodge was then raised to the Second Degree, when Bro. Cowan was admitted and made a Fellow Craft. The lodge was then closed in the Second and then to the First Degree. No other business being before the meeting, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. The brethren retired to refreshment, when a pleasant evening was spent.

SUNDERLAND.—Palatine Lodge (No. 97).—The regular meeting of the above lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Towara-road, on Thursday evening, the 9th inst., at 7.30. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. T. M. Watson, supported by Brs. Newton, W.M. 80; Douglass, P.M. 80; Frampton, W.M. 97; Eggleston, W.M. 949; Wittle, W.M. St. Bede's, Jarrow; and Liddell, P.M. 949. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Mr. D. M. Wake, a candidate for Masonry, who was declared duly elected. Bros. Punshon, Nasbet, and Singleton was then examined in the First Degree, and gave satisfaction. Mr. C. M. Wake was introduced and made an E.A. Mason. Mr. Huntley, a candidate for Masonry in St. John's Lodge, by the kind permission of the W.M., was introduced and made an E.A. Mason by the W.M. of St. John's Lodge. The lodge was then raised to the Second Degree. Bros. Nasbet, Punshon, and Singleton were admitted separately and made Fellow Craft Masons. The lodge was then closed in the Second Degree. A petition to the Grand Lodge was signed by the W.M., Wardens, and brethren. The W.M. announced that the Grand Lodge had awarded to a brother of the lodge the handsome sum of £25. All business being done, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. The brethren then retired to refreshment, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. It was stated by the W.M. that the next Provincial Grand Lodge would be held at Gateshead, on the 21st of October.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Royal Gloucester Lodge (No. 130).—The W.M. of this lodge at its regular meeting last week received as visitors the W.M.'s of the neighbouring lodges of Clausentum and Albert Edward, with their P.M.'s and officers. The invitation happily coincided with a compliment paid by the lodge to several of its members who have lately been placed on the Commission of the Peace for the borough. The I.P.M., Bro. Phillips, Prov. Senior Grand Deacon, in proposing a vote of congratulation to these brethren on their promotion, pointed out that of the six brethren added to the borough commission, five were Freemasons, and of them four were members of this lodge, viz., Bro. W. Hickman, the W.M. of Lodge 1780, Deputy Grand Master of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Past Master of the Royal Gloucester, 130, 394, and 1112 lodges, and late Mayor of Southampton; Bro. J. Blount Thomas, P.M. of the lodge, and present Mayor of Southampton; Bro. G. T. Harper, P.M. of the lodge and ex-Sheriff of Southampton; and Bro. W. A. Lomer, of this lodge and Lodge 1461. Some objection had been taken to the lodge passing votes of this kind, as not relating exclusively to Freemasonry; but he urged that since lodges frequently passed votes of condolence to brethren in times of trouble they might reasonably ask to be allowed to participate with them in their joys. He also submitted that promotions of this kind had an important influence on Masonry, as testifying that the brethren who held high office commanded the respect and confidence of the outside world, and that the influence they exercised in the social and municipal life of a town must be reflected on the lodges with which they were associated. The W.M., Bro. C. W. A. Jellicoe, having seconded a resolution embodying these sentiments, a P.M. of long standing in the lodge took exception to all these votes as not forming part of the business of Masonry, but rather going outside it, and proposed, as an amendment, that the proposition be not entertained by the lodge, but finding no seconder, and several speeches being directed against his view, he eventually said he was quite content to have entered his protest, the resolution being therefore carried unanimously. The compliment was acknowledged by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and Bro. Thomas, the Mayor of the town, in felicitous terms, and the lodge, with its visitors, shortly afterwards adjourned to the banquet, following which the usual toasts were given, the D.P.G.M. responding to that of "The R.W. Provincial G.M. and his Deputy;" Bro. E. Booth, Past Prov. J.W., and Bro. Phillips, Prov. S.G.D., for "The Present and Past Officers of the Province." Bro. Hickman subsequently responded to the toast of "The Albert Edward Lodge," and taking up some incidental allusions of the last named speaker to the correspondence in the Freemason on the distribution of Prov. Grand Lodge honours, said he was constrained to say that he agreed very much with a recent contributor to the correspondence, the Past Prov. Grand Chaplain, Bro. Nepean (a member, by the way, of the Royal Gloucester Lodge, beside one nearer his home in North Hants), that work must be the eventual passport to Prov. Grand Lodge honours, and that work steadfastly pursued would in the end receive its recognition, though, from the extent of the province, it was simply impossible to make awards which should with accuracy indicate the precise position attained by brethren in particular lodges as bearing upon the general interests of the province. From his knowledge of the difficulties of this subject he thought if "An Old P.M.," or any other brother, could but place himself for a short time in the position of the Prov. Grand Master his views in this matter would be considerably modified. Nor could any statistics of the distribution of honours be accepted as an infallible guide without a knowledge of the special circumstances of each case, and without remembering that lodges of modern date could not fairly be placed in any tabular statement alongside others which had been working for a century, more or less. Bro. Rosoman, of the Clausentum Lodge, also responded for "The Visitors," and was followed by Bro. Chinterman, from a Bombay lodge, who, himself a Hindoo, temporarily residing in Southampton, at the last meeting of this lodge sat side by side with a Parsee, and was thus able practically to exemplify the universality of Freemasonry, and that it recognises no colour, creed, or caste as a special passport to its portals. The addresses of the evening were agreeably relieved by the performances on the harmonium of Bro. Robert Sharpe, P.M., whose treatment of that instrument is so masterly that, as the W.M. said, till he heard Bro. Sharpe play the harmonium he always regarded it as a kind of hurdy-gurdy. Bro. John Brown also gave some of his ever-welcome songs, and with other brethren materially assisted to make the gathering one of a truly fraternal and pleasant character.

MANCHESTER.—Galedonian Lodge (No. 204).—The first regular meeting of this lodge, after the vacation, was held on Wednesday, the 10th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street. Present: Bros. John Roberts, W.M.; G. T. Mullock, S.W.; Wm. Bagnall, J.W.; Rev. Phillip Hains, Chap.; R. L. Spencer, Sec.; Thomas Guest, S.D.; Jno. Sutcliffe, J.D.; Charles Duckworth, I.G.; John Roger Lever, W.M. 317, acting Org.; J. Tily, Tyler; R. A. Eldershaw, P.M.; R. Timperley, P.M.; A. Humphreys, P.M.; Jos. Sutcliffe, Wm. Grundy, Jno. Cliffe, Edmund Orrell, Thos. Shorrocks, P.M. 351; C. Stanley, and others. Visitors: Wm. Nicholl, J.W. 317; John Bollard, P.M. 126; and R. R. Lisenden, 317 (Freemason). The lodge was opened at 6.30 with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. The Secretary, Bro. Spencer, also announced that the picnic which was organised in July had been a decided success, both financially and to the satisfaction of all present on the occasion. A ballot was taken for Bro. the Rev. Joseph Cater, Bridge-water, 1213, as a joining member, and unanimously declared in his favour. The W.M. then announced that their Chaplain (Bro. the Rev. Phillip Hains) had kindly consented to give the brethren present an explanation of the First Tracing Board. Bro. Hains, who was received with applause by the brethren, then gave an elaborate explanation and lecture on the First Tracing Board, fully explaining and commenting on the various emblems, and on the morals to be drawn therefrom, to which the brethren listened with appreciative attention. At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks was proposed, thanking Bro. Hains for his kindness. The lodge was afterwards lowered to the First Degree. Bro. G. T. Mullock proposed, and Bro. William Bagnall seconded, a vote of thanks to the W.M. for so ably carrying out the arrangements for the picnic, which was carried. The W.M. in reply stated that in his opinion equal praise was due to Bro. Mullock and Spencer. "Hearty good wishes" having been expressed by the visitors, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer. The brethren afterwards assembled at the supper table, which had been substantially covered with the good things of this life under the able superintendence of Bro. Phillips, who is always most attentive and painstaking in his efforts to provide for the comfort of the brethren. On the removal of the cloth the usual toasts were proposed and responded to, and the remainder of the evening was spent in an enjoyable manner, Bros. Lever, Shorrocks, Spencer, and others materially contributing to it by a display of their vocal abilities. Before the brethren separated a message was received by the W.M. from Bro. H. T. Robberds, P.M., P.G. Org. E.L., or rather from one of the members of that worthy brother's household, to the effect that Bro. Robberds (who has been seriously ill for some little time past) was unfortunately slightly worse. All the brethren present received this news with sorrow, as Bro. Robberds is undoubtedly held in the highest esteem by the lodge and a large number of brethren throughout the province. Bro. John R. Lever rose and proposed that "The Health of Bro. Robberds" should be drunk, with earnest wishes for his recovery, and that the Secretary be requested to forward a letter of condolence expressing the sympathy of all the brethren present and their sincere wishes for his speedy return amongst them.

SUNDERLAND.—Williamson Lodge (No. 949).—The regular meeting of the above lodge was held on Monday, the 8th inst., in St. Stephen's School. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. J. Eggleston, supported by Bros. Newton, W.M. 80; Mark Douglass, P.M. 80; and Frampton, W.M. 94. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Osborne was examined, and answered his questions satisfactorily, and then retired for preparation. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Osborne was then admitted and made a Fellow Craft Mason by the W.M. The lodge was then closed to the First Degree. "Hearty good wishes" were given from Bro. Dolan, No. 11. All business being done, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. The brethren then retired to refreshment, when a pleasant evening was spent.

MOSSLEY.—Prince Alfred Lodge (No. 1218).—On Saturday afternoon last, the 13th inst., a lodge of emergency was held at the Commercial Hotel, to initiate Mr. Fearns Eugene Albert Lawton, son of Bro. Joseph Fearns Lawton, P.M., as he is about to leave this country for Australia. There were also proposed for initiation at the same time Mr. William Edward Bailey, son of Bro. Dr. Bailey, P.M., and Mr. George Fearns Lawton, son of the late Bro. John Lawton, P.M. The lodge was opened at three o'clock by Bros. James Buckley, W.M.; J. E. Roberts, S.W.; John Buckley, J.W.; Robinson, S.D.; Stephenson, J.D.; and Wilson, I.G.; after which a note was read from Bro. J. F. Lawton, P.M., calling the emergency, which was ordered to be placed upon the minutes by the W.M. In each case the ballot was unanimous, and the candidates were duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. The W.M. then vacated the chair, which was afterwards occupied by Bro. Lees, P.M., P.P.S.G.W. of East Lancashire, who initiated Mr. F. E. A. Lawton into our Order. Bro. J. B. Robinson, P.M. 295, 1013, P.Z. 1094, then took the chair, and admitted Mr. W. E. Bailey to a participation of our privileges. Not having met Bro. J. Robinson, P.M., in a Craft lodge for several years, it gave us great pleasure to again see him in the W.M.'s chair, and witness him work the ceremony (as taught by the Emulation Lodge of Improvement) with that correctness we frequently noticed in the early numbers of this journal. Bro. Lees, P.M., again took the chair, and admitted Mr. G. F. Lawton to the Degree of E.A. After the working tools had been explained, and the charge delivered, Bro. Lees, P.M., addressed the brethren. He said it had given him great pleasure to initiate two young gentlemen, who bore a name that was highly respected, not only in the Prince Alfred Lodge, but throughout the whole district. He had initiated, passed, and raised Bro. Joseph Fearns Lawton, and afterwards he installed him W.M. of the Prince Alfred Lodge, and that day, in the same lodge, he had initiated his eldest son. He also initiated, and in due time installed Bro. John Lawton, and now he had in like manner initiated his eldest son. He had spent many happy evenings in the lodge, but in the future he should look back with the greatest pride and satisfaction on the proceedings of that day. Bro. Lees concluded by enjoining the candidates to be guided by the principles of Freemasonry in all their dealings in life, for they would not meet with anything in our ceremonies but what was calculated to make a man a good man, and a good man a better man. The W.M. then resumed the chair, and closed the lodge in due form. During the ceremony the music compiled for the use of the Merchants Lodge, 241, by Bro. J. H. Youngusband, P.M., P.Z., was used, and contributed greatly to the success of the ceremony, the choir being Bros. Stafford, P.M.; Taylor, T. H. Tanner, and J. W. Tanner, under the direction of Bro. Marsden, who presided at the piano-forte. The brethren then adjourned to the dining-room, where an excellent repast was prepared by the host, Bro. Edward Nield. After dinner the usual toasts were proposed and responded to, Bro. S. P. Bidder, P.M., acting as D.C. The musical brethren added much to the pleasure of the evening by singing a number of carefully selected songs and glees. There were many visiting brethren present from the adjoining provinces of West Lancashire, West Yorkshire, and Cheshire, out of respect to the parents of the candidates, and to welcome into the Order another generation bearing their names.

LIVERPOOL.—De Grey and Ripon Lodge (No. 1356).—The prosperity and perpetuity of this lodge seem to be pretty well established, judging from the large and most successful meeting which was held at the headquarters of the lodge, 80, North Hill-street, Toxteth-park, on Wednesday evening, the 10th inst. Bro. Alfred Woolrich, who is deservedly popular with every brother, occupied the Worshipful Master's chair, and one of the "happy thoughts" of his year of office was put in force on this occasion, when he asked one of the Past Masters to give the Third Degree. The W.M. thus endeavours to excite a more general interest in the working of the ceremonies, and there is little doubt the experiment will be eminently successful. Amongst those present were Bros. B. B. Marson, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; Joseph Bell, P.M., P.G.S.; J. W. Williams, I.P.M.; C. Arden, S.W.; James Keef, J.W.; Edward Paull, Treas.; E. George, Sec.; H. P. Squire, S.D.; C. Costigan, J.D.; J. Ashley, I.G.; and P. M. Larsen, Tyler. There were about 100 brethren of the lodge and visitors from other "fraternities" present, amongst the latter being Bros. Major G. Turner, P.M. 823, P.P.G. Treas.; Geo. Musker, W.M. 1182; Thos. Slater, W.M. 241; Thos. Evans, S.W. 1675; W. W. Thomas, S.D. 1570; Charles H. Duval, 139; Webster Williams, 1609; John Potter, 1182; W. Braithwaite, 473; J. Brotherton, 241; Jas. B. Mackenzie, S.W. 1609, and others. Bro. A. Woolrich, the W.M., opened the lodge in due form, and afterwards initiated five candidates in a highly effective manner, the initiates being Messrs. T. Shaw, S. Swift, T. Talbot, R. Jones, and S. Owen. After the W.M. had opened the lodge in the Second and Third Degrees, the chair of K.S. was taken by Bro. B. B. Marson, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., who raised Bros. Hewitt and M'Innes to the Sublime Degree of M.M. in a most impressive, complete, and thoroughly masterly style. The striking character of the ceremonies was greatly enhanced by the musical services of Bro. R. Burgess, Org. 1609, and Bro. T. S. Beswick. The brethren subsequently retired from labour to refreshment.

ROYAL JUBILEE CHAPTER (No. 72).—The usual convocation of this old chapter was held at the Horns Tavern, Kennington, on Thursday, the 11th inst. After the chapter had been opened in due form by the Principals, the following companions were present:—Ex. Comps. Durkin, M.E.Z.; J. Nunn, H.; T. Foxall, I.P.Z.; Scribe E.; E. Dodson, P.Z.; Stephens, P.Z.; Comps. F. Dunn, Scribe N.; H. Lovegrove, P.S.; Strube, 2nd Asst. Soj.; Walker, Thurston, Lee, Jaccard, Potter (Janitor). Visitors: G. F. Smith, F. W. Clemow, and E. Salsca. The minutes of the last convocation having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Bro. Lewcock, of the Royal Jubilee Lodge, and he was in due course introduced and exalted into the Royal Arch Degree, the lectures and addresses being given at length. This being election night, the ballot was taken for the officers for the ensuing year with the following result:—Comps. Nunn, M.E.Z.; Lovett, H.; Dunn, J.; H. Lovegrove, N.; Salter, P.S.; Potter, Janitor. Comp. Webb, an old Past Principal, was re-elected Treasurer. After the transaction of some rouline business the chapter was closed in ancient form, and the companions adjourned to banquet, after which the usual toasts were given with great effect by the M.E.Z., who is equally skilful at labour and refreshment.

HAMPTON COURT.—Burdett Chapter (No. 1293).—The regular convocation of this chapter was held on Saturday, the 13th inst., at the Mitre Hotel. Comps. H. C. Levander, M.E.Z.; D. W. Pearse, H.; and Thomas Massa, J., occupied the three chairs. There were also present Comps. H. G. Buss, P.Z., Treasurer; H. Phythian, S.E., P.Z.; W. Maple, S.N.; C. W. Gray, P.S.; J. Williams Sanders, 2nd Asst. S.; Frederic Davison, P.G.H. Middlesex, P.Z.; Wm. Kirby, W. Alfred Daws, W. G. Kentish, Col. James E. Peters, George Clark, A. W. Ducer, S. H. Wigglesworth, Don. M. Dewar, P.Z. 1194; G. A. Rook, H. 142; C. F. Hogard, P.Z., S.E. 142; F. W. Levander, P.Z. 143; W. Ashwell, S.N. 1044; John James Slater, 1044; H. Edmonds, 192; C. G. Rushworth, 1503; J. A. Green, 975; and H. Massey, 619 (Freemason). After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, and the reading of the correspondence, the companions proceeded to the election of Principals for the ensuing year. Comps. D. W. Pearse, H., was unanimously elected as M.E.Z.; Thomas Massa, as H.; Maple, J.; H. C. Levander, P.Z., S.E.; Gray, S.N.; Sanders, P.S.; H. G. Buss, Treasurer; and Gilbert, Janitor. There was no other work before the chapter, and Comp. H. C. Levander, Z., treated the companions to a new and original lecture on the Platonic Bodies and the Royal Arch Jewel, while Comp. Buss occupied the chair of M.E.Z. The learned lecturer, who had the assistance of some beautifully executed diagrams and models which had been prepared for the occasion by Comp. Thomas Massa, J., took the discourse of Plato on the four elements and the sphere of the universe, translated by him from the Greek expressly for the purpose of this lecture, and, fully explaining the angles and capacity of the geometrical bodies described by Plato, showed that the Royal Arch Jewel comprised the angles of the whole. At the conclusion of the lecture, which was most attentively listened to, votes of thanks, proposed by Comp. Buss, and seconded by Comp. Pearse, were unanimously passed to Comp. Levander for the lecture, and Comp. Massa for the diagrams and models; after which Comp. Levander acknowledged the vote of thanks to him, and stated that the usual lecture seeming to him imperfect, he had deemed it advisable at a leisure meeting like the present that the time of the companions should be profitably spent in considering the real substance of Royal Arch Masonry. He had, therefore, prepared the lecture just delivered, and, in answer to an observation by Comp. Pearse, that the companions would probably desire to have an opportunity of reading the lecture, said that he would consider of committing it to print. Comp. Buss then re-invested Comp. Levander as Z., and in proposing that a P.Z.'s jewel be presented to Comp. Levander on the occasion of his year of office terminating, reminded the companions that on the death of the late lamented Comp. John Boyd the difficulty the chapter had in finding at a moment's notice a companion fully competent to take his place, was overcome by Comp. Levander consenting to fill the gap for the year. The companions unhesitatingly adopted Comp. Buss's motion, and then closed the chapter. An elegant banquet followed, and the usual R.A. toasts were proposed. Comp. Buss replied to the toast of "The Grand Officers," in proposing which Comp. Levander said that Comp. Buss was thoroughly esteemed by all the companions, and in return he held a thoroughly good feeling towards them, consequently there was a bond which drew them all together. Comp. Buss, in reply, said he had been exceedingly liberal that evening, and he was afraid that unless they increased their subscriptions he would not be able to do as much in future. However, he did the best he possibly could for them; the companions were very ready at paying their subscriptions, and the best return he could make was to ensure the companions' comfort and happiness. To the toast of "The Grand Superintendent of the Province of Middlesex, Col. Francis Burdett," Comp. F. Davison responded, and said he was sure it was with great regret that Col. Burdett was not able to be present. September was rather a bad month for Masonic meetings. He (Comp. Davison) had to give up a very agreeable meeting in the country in order to attend this chapter, but as he had not had an opportunity of meeting the companions of the Burdett Chapter before during the present year he resolved to come. Col. Burdett, as well as all companions interested in Royal Arch Masonry in Middlesex, must be extremely gratified at the present meeting. It was the largest Royal Arch meeting that had been held in the province in September ever since the province first came into existence. It had given him (Comp. Davison) great pleasure to be present and hear the Most Excellent give the lecture he had given that day. It was the first time in his (Comp. Davison's) experience that such a lecture had been given. It was not only edifying but it was an immense advantage to those who belonged to Royal Arch Masonry, because there were many who joined Masonry who knew nothing about it, who wore a jewel, and could not explain the reason for its formation. The M.E.Z. had given a most intellectual lecture upon the Royal Arch Jewel, and he hoped that in consequence the companions would take a greater interest in Royal Arch Masonry than they had hitherto done. Comp. Davison next proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z." After the manner in which Comp. Levander had occupied the chair of Z. of the Burdett Chapter the companions must appreciate him most highly. In all Masonic gatherings he was appreciated. It so happened that he and Comp. Levander met at many Masonic gatherings, and he was able to say that Comp. Levander thought a great deal of Masonry, and did not go to Masonic meetings just to eat a good dinner and to drink good wine. It was with pleasure, as well as with pain, that he proposed this toast; with pleasure because he was happy to do honour to Comp. Levander; with pain because this was the last occasion on which Comp. Levander would preside at the festive board of the Burdett Chapter. The companions hoped that his chair would be occupied by one who would take as great an interest in the chapter as he had. No doubt it would, because when there was a good head ruling over a chapter or a lodge it was a great motive for his successor to try to do likewise. The companions would appreciate the toast, and would thank Comp. Levander for his lecture. It was the first time in his Masonic career that he (Comp. Davison) had witnessed anything of the kind, although his Masonic career had been a long one. He concluded by wishing Comp. Levander long life, health, and happiness. Comp. Levander, in reply, said it would be in the recollection of the companions that at the last installation meeting, owing to the sudden loss of Comp. Boyd, it was necessary to fill his place after he had been elected to the office of First Principal. He (Comp. Levander) was honoured by the choice of the companions falling upon him, and he thought it his duty to do all he possibly could in that position for the welfare of the Burdett Chapter and the interest of its several companions. It had just struck him that, perhaps, it would be rather a curious speculation to consider the origin of the lecture which he had had the pleasure to deliver, and, as far as he could, trace it back. It arose from a conversation he had had with Comp. Boyd, some three years' since, on a journey they had to Scotland, for the purpose of assisting in installing Col. Burdett in an office he now held in another Order of Masonry. Comp. Boyd and himself (Comp. Levander) were talking about the lecture usually given, and he told Comp. Boyd he thought a great improvement might be made in the mathematical part of it. Comp. Boyd told him that what he delivered as the lecture was what he had learned. Comp. Boyd asked him to write it down, which he did, and showed it to him. No doubt his (Comp. Levander's) letter accompanying the manuscript would be found among Comp. Boyd's papers. Comp. Boyd said he was perfectly satisfied with the emendations he (Comp. Levander) had made, but he (Comp. Boyd) had learned it in one particular way, and, of course, it could not be expected that he could get up another. That was the origin of making the alteration. He thought over it afterwards on several occasions, but he had not actually carried it out till lately. Some few months ago he thought that Royal Arch Masons ought to consider what were really the words of Plato, to which reference was made in that lecture, and for that purpose he read the dialogue. It was very long, very tedious, and very dry. Plato treated of almost every subject in the dialogue, but, of course, he (Comp. Levander) found special reference to that part of the dialogue with Timæus in which Plato treated of solids, and he (Comp. Levander) thought it might be necessary to lay before the companions the ideas of Plato about the creation of matter. He, therefore, determined to make a little addition to the lecture. When he considered further he thought some introductory matter was required to explain the ideas of Plato, and that brought in the first or mathematical portion. He had had no time to write it down till lately, in fact he did not write out the translation of Plato till Thursday, or the lecture till after tea-time on Friday; and though he had only intended originally to add a few lines to the lecture usually given, he found when he began to write that something arose which was different to what he before intended, and the companions, if they compared the lecture he had delivered with that ordinarily given, would not find twelve lines the same. He apologised to the companions, but though he did so he still felt he was justified in doing what he had done, and putting in the summons that it was "a new and original lecture." It had given him a great deal of pleasure to write the lecture; it had also given him a great deal of pleasure to have had the opportunity of reading it to the companions. What he was afraid of was, that there were some minds which would not take the same view of things which one did oneself. There might be some companions in the chapter who may have thought the lecture dry, uninteresting, and tedious; but if there were such, he could only say that he hoped they believed he wrote it with a view to improve the knowledge which Royal Arch Masons had of Royal Arch Masonry; and he also hoped that they would consider he was doing something for the welfare of the chapter on an afternoon when it appeared as if there was nothing profitably to employ their time. Not to say anything more on that subject he had now to thank the companions for the honour they had done him in appointing him to the chair of M.E.Z. of the Burdett Chapter, for their kindness to him during his year of office, and for the heartiness with which they had received this toast. Before sitting down he would propose "The Past Principals of the Burdett Chapter." He was very sorry to say that the list was incomplete. They had one or two columns to deplore the loss of—Comp. Little and Comp. Boyd—who had been taken from them by the ruthless hand of death. Col. Burdett was the first First Principal of the chapter. As before announced, that companion was not in the neighbourhood, or he would have been present; but there was one companion in the room who had passed the chair of the chapter, who was well known both in the lodges and chapters of the province, Comp. Davison, and with his name he would couple this toast. Comp. Davison, in reply, said he always had taken an interest in this chapter, and he hoped he always should do so. Although he could not always be with the companions, he would at least endeavour to be. "The Health of the Principals elect" was next given and drunk, and the toast was responded to first by Comp. D. W. Pearse, M.E.Z. elect. In replying, he said, in reference to Comp. Levander's lecture, that he hoped to see it in print, and then he trusted he should understand it. Although he followed it carefully, he did not grasp the mathematical problems Comp. Levander elucidated. The companions had done him (Comp. Pearse) the honour of electing him as their chief for the coming year. He could not hope to emulate Comp. Levander in his lectures, but he would endeavour, if they would find him candidates, to exalt them in as able a manner as Comp. Levander did. Whatever office he might fill in the chapter he hoped he should always fill to the satisfaction of the companions. Comp. Thomas Massa, who also acknowledged the toast, said the lecture of the M.E.Z. had rather cleared his brain than otherwise, and he hoped it would be so found when he was installed in the chair of H. The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by Comps. Massy and Hogard, both of whom hailed with satisfaction the somewhat novelty of a mathematical and geometrical lecture on Royal Arch Masonry in a chapter. Speaking in high terms of the ability displayed in the composition of the lecture, they hoped and expected that Royal Arch Masonry would be greatly benefited by the knowledge to be derived by the companions listening to such lectures. Comp. Buss, in replying to the toast of "The Treasurer," said that although the Burdett Chapter had excellent banquets, it nevertheless contributed to the Charities. He was not one of those who were always crying out that the money should be given to the Charities, and none spent on conviviality. He held that the Charities should not be forgotten, but he was also of opinion that if no money was spent on banquets the Charities would fare badly. It could not be said that Masons were forgetful of their duties when over £40,000 in one year was devoted to the three Masonic institutions. The Janitor's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

The lodge was then closed.

TUNIS.—Ancient Carthage Lodge (No. 1717).—The annual meeting for the election of the W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year took place at the Masonic Hall on Saturday, the 6th inst. There was a large attendance of members. Amongst those present were W. Bro. Broadley, D.D.G.M. Malta, W.M.; Dr. Perini, as S.W.; G. Pentecost, as J.W.; M. Lumbroso, Sec.; A. Blanch, Treas.; Prof. Souiller, as D. of C.; V. Finzi, as S.D.; V. Memmi, as J.D.; J. Barsotti, L. Curletto, and C. Foggetta, Stewards; M. de Gallais, I.G.; J. Eymon, Tyler; W. Bro. J. E. L. Barker, W.M. No. 1835, and many of the officers and members of the William Kingston Lodge, at the Goletta, W. Bro. Dr. Mugnaini, 33°, Hon. I.P.M.; and as visitors, W. Bro. Prof. Vais, 33°, and Bro. Lumbroso, Consular Agent for Italy at Mehdia, who was initiated in 1841 in the earliest lodge established in this country. The D.D.G.M. explained to the brethren that having served as W.M. for two successive years he was no longer eligible, and that their beloved and popular

S.W., Bro. J. H. Stevens, acting British Consul General, declined candidature for the Eastern chair on account of his heavy official duties and his approaching departure from Tunis. He read a letter from Bro. Stevens (absent through indisposition) supporting the claim of the J.W., Bro. Perini, to the honour, in which recommendation the D.D.G.M. most cordially joined. Bro. Perini was then unanimously elected by ballot as W.M. of the Ancient Carthage Lodge for the year 1879-80. Bro. A. Blanch was unanimously re-elected Treasurer. Bro. Professor Souiller, in the name of the members present, as well as on behalf of the brethren of the William Kingston Lodge, and the honorary members of No. 1717, in Malta, alluded in eloquent and laudatory terms to the able manner in which their excellent W.M. had discharged his arduous duties during the first two years of the existence of the lodge, and said they had unanimously resolved to mark his installation as R.W.P.G.M.M.M. of Tunis and Malta, and his retirement from the Mastership of the Ancient Carthage Lodge, of which he was the founder, and in the extraordinary success of which he had so large a share, by the presentation to him of an engrossed address, accompanied by a costly testimonial. The Secretary then proceeded to read the former, and the D. of C., with the assistance of Brns. Pentecost and Carriglio, carried the latter round the lodge for the inspection of the assembled brethren. It consisted of a rich mahogany casket, embellished with brass, and enclosing a complete set of P.G.M.M.M.'s regalia of the best quality, and three gold jewels, viz., those of P.G.M.M.M., D.D.G.M., and P.M.W.S. On a large silver plate, inserted in the lid, was the following inscription:—"This box, containing a set of P.G.M.'s clothing and three gold jewels, was presented to R.W. Bro. A. M. Broadley, barrister-at-law, first P.G.M.M.M. of Tunis and Malta, D.D.G.M. Malta; W.M. and Z. Ancient Carthage Lodge, and R.A.C. at Tunis, P.E.C. and E.P., M.W.S., &c., by the active and honorary members of the various Masonic bodies under his rule, as a mark of their affection and esteem, and of their high appreciation of his untiring exertions during two years as the pioneer of English Masonry in North Africa." The testimonial and address were then formally presented to Bro. Broadley, amidst much applause. The D.D.G.M. returned thanks, and said the mark of approval he had received at the hands of his brethren would be an incentive to continued exertions on his part for the prosperity of the lodge, be it in the capacity of D.D.G.M., or P.M., or Hon. Sec., for which post he intended to apply if Bro. Perini thought fit to accord him the favour. This observation drew forth signs of approbation from all parts of the lodge. Cordial Masonic salutes were accorded to the newly-elected W.M., Treasurer, the Hon. P.M., the W.M. and members of No. 1835, E.C., and the visitors, and the brethren so honoured returned thanks in appropriate terms. The proceedings were closed with the charitable collection, and the lodge adjourned.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE MELROSE MS.

All Masonic students will be interested in learning that another of the "Old Charges" has just been brought to light; but in order to profit by this discovery we require available copies of the various MSS. which have been previously unearthed, for purposes of examination and comparison. Can, therefore, Bro. Hughan be induced to supply this urgent want by issuing another edition of his justly esteemed "Old Charges of British Freemasons?" This work has long been out of print, and, consequently, to the bulk of present students is, unfortunately, only known by name instead of by its contents. In getting together so many of these curious charges within the compass of a single volume Bro. Hughan conferred, perhaps, the greatest benefit upon the Craft which has ever resulted from the publication of one work. I would now fraternally urge upon him the expediency of republishing, and, in so doing, to add one or two MSS. formerly well known, but now, like his own previous selection, out of print, and practically unavailable for general reference. I allude especially to the Halliwell and Cooke MSS.

If my memory is not at fault, Bro. Woodford at one time intimated an intention of bringing out an annotated edition of the Halliwell poem. To either Bros. Hughan or Woodford I offer as a contribution to this enquiry the following reference, to which my attention was directed by perusal of Mr. H. C. Coote's "Remains in Britain" (p. 419), viz., "Beda, H. E., lib. 2, cvii., p. 115, Stevenson's edition." Until meeting with this passage I had always regarded the allusion to the "Holy Martyres Foure," in the Halliwell codex, as suggesting the importation of this tradition from a Teutonic source. But the existence of a martyrdom of "four blessed coronati" at Canterbury, between A.D. 619 and 624, sufficiently attests that an English version of this legend was current many centuries earlier than has hitherto been commonly believed. At the same time, however, it may be well to quote Bro. Godfrey Higgins ("Celtic Druids, p. 134"): "What dependence can be placed on such witnesses as Bede, who, it is evident, did not know Scotland from Ireland, as in his chronicle he calls those Scoiti whom in his history he calls Hiberni?"

R. F. GOULD.

P.S.—Bro. Fort (at p. 118 of his work) comments on the occurrence of Charles Martel's name in the MSS. of Halliwell and Cooke. Can either Bros. Hughan or Woodford assist me in tracing this reference in the former manuscript?

THE MELROSE CONSTITUTIONS.

I rejoice with Bro. Hughan at Bro. Vernon's success, and hope that he will persevere in his laudable efforts. Bro. Hughan and myself some time ago tried to "strike oil" at Melrose, but in vain, and I, therefore, like Bro. Hughan, am pleased to think that Bro. Vernon has been more successful than we were. Melrose may yet furnish some important contributions to Scottish and general Masonic history. What about its lodge minutes?

LOCKE MS.—We have kept to this name, because more commonly used, though it is a misnomer in more senses than one. Many writers have, however, stated that Locke found the MS. in the Bodleian. Mackey and Mackenzie found the MS. the Leland MS., and their remarks may be properly consulted. The so-called MS. is not a MS. at all in its original form, though a late copy of it exists in Essex's handwriting among the Additional MSS., Brit. Museum. Essex does not give us any clue to the original, and it probably is transcribed from the printed copy, though if we could suppose that there is an old MS., original many questions of importance would arise. The first mention of it appears to be in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1753, where it is described "Copy of a small pamphlet consisting of twelve pages in 8vo, printed in Germany, 1748." This contains the so-called MS., and "Ein Brief von dem berühmten Johann Locke betreffend die Freimaurerei. So auf einem Schreibtisch eines verstorbenen Bruders ist gefunden worden." Of this printed pamphlet of 1748 no trace has been found in Germany, and it is believed to be of English manufacture. It has since been reproduced, it is said, in Hearne's "Life of Leland," though about this there is some doubt, as it is clearly not in the original edition, and appears only at any rate in a late edition, and so cannot claim Hearne's authority. It has also been printed in the "Pocket Companion," 1754; and Calcott introduces it in his "Candid Disquisitions," in 1769. Dermott in 1764, in his "Ahiman Rezon," and Preston in his first edition, 1772, also reproduced it without a question. Hutchinson again printed it in 1775. It also appeared in the "Constitutions" of 1759, 1767, and 1784. It has found many supporters, though it is perfectly clear, first, that the original of the so-called MS. has never been turned up, and, secondly, that the circumstances attendant on its original appearance are so suspicious as to throw the gravest doubts on its authenticity and genuineness. Dr. Plot states that the Freemasons of Staffordshire, in 1686, had in their lodges then a parchment roll which contained certain "charges," and that, inter alia, in that parchment roll it was stated that these "charges and manners were after perusal and approved by King Henry VI. and Council, both as to Masters and Fellows of the Right Worshipful Craft." This is the only portion of evidence indirect in itself which bears upon this question, as we are not aware of any other old constitution in which allusion to King Henry VI. is made at all. But this does not amount to very much; and while we give up the actual claim of the document to be a MS. of the time of King Henry VI., or to have been written by him or copied by Leland, we think that it is not unlikely that we have in it the remains of a lodge catechism conjoined with an hermetic one. With regard to Locke's letter, in consequence of which the name of Locke MS. has been given to the entire document, we confess that so far we are aware of no evidence in its favour. Dr. Oliver and Laurie have thought that from his letter to W. Molyneux they could find ground for believing that Locke was made a Mason in 1696, even between May 6th and June and that year, while in London; but no evidence of such a fact is, as far as we are aware, discoverable or producible, and we do not feel ourselves at all convinced as to the arguments of Oliver and Laurie—for this, among other reasons, that Anderson nowhere alludes to it, when it would have been so easy for him to have mentioned the Masonic tradition with relation to so distinguished a person as John Locke. At the same time, it is just possible he may have been made a Mason. We may add that the "Glossary" has always been looked upon with much suspicion by experts. It is not worth while reprinting the document itself here, as it can be found in Preston and many other similar works.—Kenning's Cyclopaedia.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joshua Nunn, Senior Vice-President, was in the President's chair; Bro. James Brett, Junior Vice-President, occupied the Senior Vice-President's chair; and Bro. C. A. Cotterbrune, P.G.P., that of Junior Vice-President. There were also present Bros. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary; A. A. Pendlebury, S. Rawson, Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, W. H. Perryman, Neville Green, H. Garrod, Knight Smith, Louis Hirsch, C. F. Hogard, W. Mann, F. Mullett, P.M. 1556; W. Stephens, John Lee, W.M. 1541; J. H. Matthews, W.M. 143; J. H. Smith, W.M. 1158; John Nuttall, P.M. 874; A. G. Timothy, W.M. 87; F. F. Mullett, W.M. 1441; Allan C. Wylie, P.M. 869; Thos. Edmonston, P.M. 1658; Sadler, Grand Tyler; and H. Massey (Freemason). In answer to Bro. Garrod, Bro. Joshua Nunn gave the brethren the gratifying intelligence that Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, who was staying with Bro. Dr. Woodman, at Exeter, was much better in health than he had been for some time past. The brethren first confirmed recommendations to the Grand Master to the amount of £155, made at last meeting. Of the new cases there were only eighteen on the list, and out of these one was dismissed and two were deferred. The others were relieved with £390, composed of one recommendation for £50, four for £40 each, three for £30 each, one for £25, one for £20, one for £15, and two grants of £10 each and two of £5 each.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF N. AND E. YORKSHIRE.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of North and East Yorkshire was, on the invitation of the Eboracum Lodge, 1611 (Bro. J. S. Cumberland, W.M.), held on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at York. A more suitable place for the meeting does not exist in the county, the ancient city being full of historic and antiquarian interest, and the result was perhaps the largest assemblage of Freemasons that has for some years past taken place in the province. Those present had a hearty welcome from the members of the Eboracum, a lodge established only some three years ago, and which has in that period displayed such interest in the Craft as promises to make it one of the most successful in the north. For the purposes of the Provincial Grand Lodge the Lord Mayor (Bro. Ald. G. Brown) kindly granted the use of the fine old Guildhall, the Council Chamber, and adjoining rooms; and beyond this kindness and courtesy he likewise placed the Mansion House at the disposal of the lodge. The arrangements in these places were of the most admirable character, and, despite the large number of brethren present, there was an absence of confusion, which reflects credit upon those who had the management.

The first business of the day was the meeting of the Board of Benevolence in the Council Chamber of the Guildhall. After this the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, received all Masters of lodges and visiting brethren from other provinces in the Mansion House, where they were introduced to him by the Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies (Bro. T. B. Whytehead, W.M. Eboracum, 1611). Previous to the opening of the lodge, the Provincial Grand Officers, Present and Past, as well as Provincial Grand Officers from other provinces, after having clothed and signed their names in the Mansion House, walked in procession to the Guildhall and entered the lodge-room, where special seats were provided on the dais for the Present Provincial Grand Officers, and also for Past Wardens, Chaplains, and Registrars. The Lord Mayor of York had also a seat on the dais. All other Provincial Grand Officers had special seats in the body of the hall. As the procession entered the hall the ode, "Hail, Masonry Divine," was sung. The lodge was then formally opened.

The minutes of the Prov. Grand Lodge, held last year at Beverley, having been read and approved, letters of apology were read, as also was a report of the Board of Benevolence. In this a number of grants were recommended for the children of indigent parents in various parts of the province, ranging, according to circumstances, from £10 to £20. A distressed brother was also recommended for the benefit of the Royal Benevolent Institution. A code of bye-laws for the management of the charity organisation was likewise before the Board, but it was determined to refer it back for further consideration to a special committee, who, at a subsequent period of the proceedings, were re-elected.

The balance-sheet of the Prov. Grand Lodge was read by the Prov. Grand Treasurer, which showed that there was a balance in hand of £22 19s. 2d. The same officer then proposed, and it was adopted, that a grant of £123 be made to the Royal Benevolent Society.

The different lodges in the province then, through their respective Masters, handed in various sums of money, as their contributions to Prov. Grand Lodge.

The following brethren were then installed Prov. Grand Officers for the ensuing year:—

Bro. J. W. Taylor, P.M. 200...	Prov. S.G.W.
" W. H. Rose, P.M. 660 ...	Prov. J.G.W.
" R. Mitford Taylor, 643 ...	Prov. G. Chap.
" H. Green, P.M. 630 ...	Prov. G. Reg.
" M. C. Peck, P.M. 1040 ...	Prov. G. Sec.
" Thomas Thompson, P.M. 57 ...	Prov. S.G.D.
" George Ayre, P.M. 1416 ...	Prov. J.G.D.
" W. F. Falkenbridge, P.M. 312 ...	Prov. G.S. of W.
" F. Foster, P.M. 1248 ...	Prov. G.D.C.
" Johnson Field, P.M. 643 ...	Prov. G. Swd. B.
" C. W. Cheesman, W.M. 1605 ...	Prov. G. Org.
" Jno. Ward, 236 ...	Prov. G. Tylt.
" Fredk. J. Lambert, 1010 ...	Prov. G. Purr.

The Prov. Grand Lodge then re-appointed Bro. W. R.

Hollon, P.M. 236 and 1611, Prov. Grand Treasurer; and the Prov. Grand Master named the following lodges whence a Steward was to be elected from each:—the Minerva (Hull); the Constitutional (Beverley); the Lion (Whitby); the Cleveland (Stokesley); the Zetland (Guisborough); the St. Germain (Selby). He said that he had received an invitation for next year's meeting from the Old Globe Lodge, Scarborough, and he had great pleasure in accepting it. The next year's meeting would, therefore, be held at Scarborough. (Applause.) He offered thanks to the Lord Mayor of York for the cordial manner in which he had received them, and placed the Guildhall and Mansion House at their disposal. He likewise thanked the Worshipful Master (Bro. J. S. Cumberland) and the brethren of the Eboracum Lodge, York, No. 1611, for their hospitable reception and the very excellent arrangements which had been made for the meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge. (Applause.) As to the position of the Craft in the province, the Prov. Grand Master added that they had cause for congratulation in the large assemblage on that occasion. He likewise congratulated them on the prosperity and perfect harmony that prevailed throughout the province. He had just received an application for the formation of a new lodge in Middlesborough, which spoke for itself, notwithstanding the great depression which existed throughout the country, and, perhaps, more so in that particular district than in any other part of the kingdom, of the prosperity of Freemasonry. (Hear, hear.) It was a cause for congratulation also that they had passed the grant to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Masons, for it was one from which they had on several occasions received no small share of benefit.

The business of the lodge ended shortly before half-past two, and at that hour, the weather being beautifully fine, a procession was formed to the cathedral. This, by the kindness of Colonel Gunter and the officers of the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards, was preceded by the band of that regiment, which played a suitable march. The procession consisted of a couple of Tylers with drawn swords, and then the lodges of the province, each with distinguishing banner, in numerical order (juniors first), from Scarborough, Saltburn, Hull, Hornsea, Thirsk, Northallerton, Redcar, Driffield, Bridlington, Malton, Filey, Howden, Middlesborough, Selby, Guisborough, Stokesley, Whitby, Beverley, York, Richmond, St. Patrick's Military Lodge, No. 297 (I.C.), attached to the 4th Dragoon Guards Regiment, and other visiting brethren.

The last of the ordinary lodges was the Eboracum, York, 1611, under whose banner the Provincial Grand Lodge was held. Then came the brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge in order. There was an immense assemblage to witness the march of this imposing procession—by way of Blake-street, and Duncombe-street—to the west entrance of the venerable pile. On arrival at the entrance to the choir the procession halted, and the brethren dividing faced inwards, and formed an avenue through which the Provincial Grand Master and the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, preceded by the Standard and Sword Bearers, advanced to their seats. The service was a special one, and an appropriate sermon was preached by the Rev. L. W. Heath, M.A., Provincial Grand Chaplain. "The rev. gentleman took his text from Ephesians iv., 16—"From whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." He said that they had reason to be proud of their fathers in Masonry as they sat in that noble temple, which was the result of their work. What grandeur of conception, skill, and execution, and efficient elaboration of every detail there had been manifested in it, and the purpose of their labour had been the good of their fellow-men and the glory of God. When they considered this, had they not good cause for congratulation that they were the representatives of those whose labours had embellished the world with imperishable and unapproachable evidence of genius and perseverance. He said imperishable, because was it not a fact that, notwithstanding the enormous strides that had been made in almost every department of trade and science, yet there had been nothing originated in architectural science or operative Masonry since those days? There were those, as they knew, who affected to condemn the system as recognised by present Masons, but they believed that Masonry was nothing more than the practice of those simple moral precepts which were enjoined by religion, pure as it had come from God, and unadulterated by the inventions of man. The rev. gentleman then went on to say that Masonry contributed to good order, good government, loyalty to God and king, and the practice of every domestic virtue, and the exercise of benevolence and charity amongst all classes of men; and he believed that one writer had said, seeing that religion was as it were local and not being extended all over the world, Masonry, from the fact that it embraced every colour, every clime, and every creed, could be really the pioneer to Christianity. He concluded by urging them in these times of distress to contribute of their means towards the sick and poor of their fraternity, and also to the restoration of the noble building in which they were assembled. A collection was made, to be divided between the Minster Restoration Fund and the Masonic Charities. Subsequently the brethren returned in procession to the Guildhall, where the Grand Lodge was formally closed. At five o'clock in the evening a banquet was held in the De Grey Rooms, at which nearly 200 brethren sat down, and were presided over by the R.W.P.G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland. At half-past eight o'clock in the evening a conversation was held in the same place, brethren introducing ladies, and this at a subsequent period resolved itself into a ball, which was heartily enjoyed by all present.—Yorkshire Post.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting-room, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

SUBLIME LODGE OF PERFECTION, 1781-9.

By Bro. C. E. MEYER.

A "dear wee book" was issued in 1878 by authority of the Consistory of the Thirty-second Degree in Philadelphia, U.S.A., and edited by my good friend Charles Eugene Meyer, 33°, who it will be remembered was in charge of the pilgrims of the "Mary Commandery" (K.T.) who visited the "Old Country" in 1878, and received quite an ovation. On opening the unpretentious work I was agreeably surprised to find it quite a treasure of information, and being printed in very small type, it will readily be seen that its size is not indicative of the quantity of matter it contains, for in the latter respect the fare is so ample as to exceed in variety and extent that of larger books.

The minutes of the Lodge of Perfection range from 25th June, 1781, to February 21st, 1789, and extend over about 100 closely printed pages, the records being given in full. Although there are other records extant of the Degrees about two decades earlier, these are especially valuable, because of their communicative character, the proceedings being narrated in a simple straightforward manner, and the order of working being quite evident to any ordinary readers. The order and names of the Degrees, &c., were as follows: 4. Secret Master. 5. Perfect Master. 6. Intimate Secretary. 7. Provost and Judge. 8. Intendant of the Buildings. 9. Knight elect of Nine. 10. Grand Master elect of Fifteen. 11. Grand Knight elect. 12. Grand Master Architect. 13. Royal Arch. 14. Grand elect Perfect and Sublime Mason. It is surprising to find such a large number presenting themselves for the Degrees, and every care was taken to prevent any improper admissions. The fees were high, and the progress generally from the Fourth Degree to the Fourteenth Degree was very slow, not more usually than one or two Degrees being given at a meeting, the whole being separately worked and the dues paid for each when received. The laws required the application to be made at one meeting (frequently held every week) and considered at the next, when if the candidate had duly "Passed the Chair," as an "Ancient" Mason, the Fourth Degree was there and then communicated. If not a P.M., a Master Mason's Lodge was opened and the candidate was entrusted with the secrets peculiar to that position, and then obtained the "Secret Master." If not an "Ancient" or "Atholl Mason" his application was not entertained, but was shelved," as follows, Dec. 13th, 1786. "A petition from Bro. Charles Palerke, a Master Mason, praying the honour of the Sublime Degrees, was read and received; whereupon Bros. Vaunost, Hamilton, and Thompson were appointed to investigate the facts set forth in his petition, who reported him a Modern Mason; whereupon his petition was withdrawn." It seems also that whilst ordinary Past Masters were admitted as such, Royal Arch Masons were not so accepted, for on the 25th June, 1781, "A Bro. Ogilby requested admittance, reporting he was a Royal Arch; upon examination, found he could not be admitted," the fact doubtless being that although he was a "P.M." and a "R.A.," the latter did not rank as the 13th of their Rite. This Lodge of Perfection was established 25th June, 1781, by Solomon Bush, Deputy Grand Inspector for Pennsylvania, and this energetic brother presided at a great many meetings, in fact he never appears to have been absent once whilst resident in this State, unless when ill. On November 5th, 1788, the Master, Bro. Solomon Bush, having decided "to set out shortly for Europe, thought proper, as this lodge had always been held under his presence, and in virtue of his patent"—he desired them to appoint his successor, when a Bro. Humphreys, one of the early initiates, and who had served the offices of Secretary and S.W., was elected Master." Bro. Bush was a member of what we know now as the Thirty-second Degree or "S.P.R.T.," and so also was another of the officers, Bro. Duplessis, who was elected a joining member on the 28th September, the Committee having approved of his candidature on the 15th September, 1788. He was then entitled a "Grand elect, Perfect and Sublime Mason" (or Fourteenth Degree) but on the 21st February, 1787, the Master mentioned "that he was happy in informing the lodge that Bro. Duplessis was possessed of all the Degrees of Sublime Masonry, a Foreign Prince of Royal Secret, &c., and delivered the book containing all the Degrees to his care." It is quite possible that Degrees above the Fourteenth Degree were worked by these brethren, for we find in one minute that Bro. Humphreys desiring further enlightenment he was made a "Knight of the East." The Lodge of Perfection was supported virtually, if not officially, by many of the chiefs of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and that both bodies worked harmoniously is clearly exhibited on a resolution agreed to December 19th, 1786, respecting the procession on St. John's Day of Craft and "Sublime" Masons.—"In case the Grand Lodge require their officers, viz., the Deputy Grand Master, the Junior Grand Warden, their Secretary and Treasurer, to walk with them, their request be granted (they being members of the Fourteenth Degree)." At first some members desired a warrant to work in the "three inferior Degrees," but the suggestion was negatived. The lodge room devoted in part to the Lodge of Perfection, having been duly dedicated, was also used as tenants by some Craft lodges, and evidently the brethren were bent on recognising one another as Masons, though not all as "Sublime Masons." The introduction to the bye-laws is most appropriate, and after the recital of the aims and objects of the Society states that "The sovereign regard which is due to the Craft, the reverence for ancient forms of the Fraternity, at once conspire to suggest these laws and regulations, and lead us without any hesitation to adhere to the ancient landmarks our fathers have set." A letter was agreed to be sent to the Grand Council at Berlin, addressed to "Frederick the Third, Sovereign of all Sovereigns and mighty Prince of Princes," December 7th, 1785, and a copy is given in the Records, from which we learn that his generous presidency over the two hemispheres at the Grand East of Berlin was warmly appreciated by the members in Philadelphia. Out of the many candidates accepted, not one was elected without a committee having first been appointed and reported favourably. Surely this is a custom worthy of imitation even now, after the lapse of about a century. The minutes end in 1789, of those preserved, and our thanks are due for the reproduction of these valuable and curious records to Bro. C. E. Meyer, the present intelligent and able Secretary of the Philadelphia Consistory of the Thirty-second Degree.

P.S.—I had written the foregoing before reading the racy sketch of the proceedings of Pennsylvania Knights Templars, by our good Bro. Whythead, so that our two communications will serve to exhibit our appreciation of the labours of Bro. Charles Eugene Meyer, of Philadelphia, who is well known and beloved at home and abroad. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

SOUTHAMPTON MASONIC BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

The fourth annual report of this Association, just presented to the members, shows that the Association continues prosperous. The receipts for the past year, from all sources, including £100 in payment of a bond, amounted to £236 6s. 6d.; and the expenditure, including the £150 invested in the 3 per cent. Red., to £183 2s. 9d., leaving a balance of £53 3s. 9d. to be carried forward to the next report. The total assets of the Association are £1178 13s. 6d., and show an increase of £54 5s. 6d. in the capital account. During the past year there has been four applications for grants of benevolence, all of which have received the consideration of the Committee as follows:—

To a brother of Lodge 359	5 5 0
To the family of a brother of Lodge 130	5 0 0
To the widow of a brother of Lodge 359	10 0 0
To a brother of Lodge 359	10 0 0

The list of life members has been augmented by the names of three brethren, and the Committee again thank the Royal Gloucester and Peace and Harmony Lodges for their generous support; each of these lodges having voted a donation of five guineas, and elected its Worshipful Master as a life member of the Association.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills are the best, the cheapest, and the most popular remedies. At all seasons, and under all circumstances, they may be used with safety and with the certainty of doing good. NUMBERS AND STRENGTH.

Bro. Hughan's warning last week in Cornwall that "numbers are not always strength," requires grave consideration from the Craft. Just now there is a tendency, in our opinion, unduly to expand and develop our lodge system. Quantity, not quality, is apparently the order of the day, and many are introduced into Masonry who, entering into our Order as into a benefit society, have neither tastes, nor inclinations, nor capacities to become either "bright Masons" or sincere believers in Freemasonry. The consequence is that we see on many sides of us signs, indubitable signs, of laxity, and lukewarmness, and half-heartedness, and want of interest. Masonry is to too many but a passport, so to say, to social amenities and a pleasant and respectable Fraternity. We fancy that if the lists of lodges, both in the Metropolis and in the provinces, could be published, it would be seen at a glance how incompetent and careless "Masters" have sacrificed the prestige, and even popularity, of their lodges, not only to cliques and coteries, but to the solicitations of the unfit and the importunities of the undesirable. With some lodges it seems to be an axiom, (most mistaken both in theory and practice), that the more numerous the lodge is the better it is for all concerned. And thus, as we know, lodges become unwieldy and unmanageable, a prey to agitators and impostors, governed by cliques and camarillas, and liable at any movement to be divested of all likeness to a fraternity of one mind, and to be cast into a seething caldron of bitterest personality and strife. Mere numbers is never any criterion of the good, or use, or value, or safety of anything. Mere numbers are often a source of great weakness, are often the cause of deplorable discord, the forerunner of inevitable decay and disruption. Hence we think Bro. Hughan's advice is good and seasonable, and deserves to be carefully noted and thought over. We have often ourselves issued a note of warning on the subject, and from all we hear and see such a state of things as now exists is alike discreditable and dangerous to the Fraternity. We are admitting numbers whose only claim for admission is that they can pay the fees, and some modern specimens of Masonry are suggestive of anything but credit and comfort to our Order. To them Masonry seems rather a name or an idea than anything else, and its history and its character are alike by them unheeded and to them indifferent. But it has rank and decorations, tinsel and tawdry in abundance, the outward pomp and the garish show, and for their little minds such is sufficient. We deprecate greatly the tendency, too prevalent just now, to lower the status of our candidates on the one hand, or to encourage initiations on the other, and we trust that Bro. Hughan's warning, like our own, may serve to convince some that in any relaxation of the sage rules and reticence of our Masonic forefathers, we shall probably inflict on our Order damage which is irreparable and evils which no one can repair.

MASONIC HONOURS.

There seems to be just now a somewhat unhealthy anxiety to obtain provincial honours, and much more Grand Lodge rank. A good deal is said and done by some, not for Masonry, not for the sake of its principles and its practice, but to advance self to gain much coveted rank. A correspondence from Hampshire displays a very irritable and dissatisfied state of feeling among some of the brethren of that distinguished province. The honours annually bestowed are, as we all know, few in number—the candidates are many and eager. The most judicious distributor of Masonic honours cannot please every one. The most impartial of provincial magistrates cannot satisfy all claimants. We regret to note this craving and excitability; we deplore this animus of complaint and fault finding. Supposing that one or two worthy brethren are passed over, how is Masonry damaged, provincially or generally? Would it in fact much matter if such honours were not given at all? Would the unchanging principles of justice and equity be affected? We venture to think not. In our humble opinion the question is one hardly worth discussing, and we are sorry to read such long letters upon the subject. The "subject is not worth the candle," to adapt a French proverbial expression, and we trust we have heard the last of it. It is all "much ado about nothing," and for the most part the complaints proceed from those who have no real ground of complaint to make, who have no services to allege, and no right to expect promotion. Occasional anomalies occur in this as in all other human arrangements, but our Provincial Rulers generally make excellent appointments, and fully recognize true Masonic service and truer Masonic merit.

PROFESSION AND PRACTICE.

Humanity abounds in weaknesses and shortcomings, nay distinct and disgraceful corruptions, which constitute a striking warning to all who love to dream of the perfectibility of mortal men, in themselves and by themselves, and offer a startling commentary on the paradoxes and perversities of a so-called Positivism. Glorified humanity, indeed! perfected humanity, truly! where can such be found on this groaning and travelling earth of ours? The Irish echo answers—"nowhere!" and in nothing is the abiding weakness and unsatisfactoriness of the "outcome" of humanity shown forth as in the difference between words and deeds, between profession and practice. Go where we will, listen to what we may, live in solitude or loiter amid the most crowded thoroughfares, we are confronted at every turn we take, we are companioned every mile we march forward, with the enduring characteristic of all mortal striving, of all human responsibility. We say, and we act not, we preach and we perform not; our professions are one thing, (very fine, per se), but our practice, alas, belies our vehement utterances, and continues an abject parody on every truth, and declaration, and profession, and theory of humanity. Nothing is more humiliating to the philosopher contemplating humanity, as a life-long study, a field of great deeds, heroic words, noble professions, goodly enterprize, but, alas that we should say it, at the same time of acts which run counter to all our words, of practice which is a stigma on noisy professions. Such, the great and widening weakness of all mortality, has seemed to some to betoken the fact that all of life, man, earth, time, was a sham and a lie, a "mockery, a delusion, and a snare." Freemasonry is ever human, most human in all things, and, therefore, shares in all the weaknesses and errors of its own special development. In Freemasonry to-day we are, and must be, struck by the fact that the professions in lodge are widely different from the practice out of lodge, and that if we were to judge of Freemasonry by what we hear brethren say, and what we see them do, our opinion of the worth and value, the utility and need of Masonry in the world would be very low and slight indeed. The brother, for instance, who dilates unremittingly and magnificently about Masonic charity and brotherly love in lodge, to the intense admiration of a most select circle, is out of lodge, or in print sometimes, the most ill-natured, tale-bearing, and slanderous of mortals. He does a frightful amount of mischief, and not only does reveal "secrets," but he very often "separates chief friends." You and I, kind readers, have often heard Bro. Mugginbotham, who is quite "touching" in all he says about "charity," &c., in our lodge gatherings; he affects the "visiting brethren," and "moves" the "reporters," (proverbially a hard-hearted race), but search the lists of our Charities, we find him not; and neither does Bros. Terry, or Binckes, or Hedges record with an approving pen the classic and euphonious name of "Mugginbotham" in their veracious lists. And, once more, we all know "Crusher," what a "swell" he is, how he lays down the law, how the lodge listens intent upon his words; how no one delivers an impressive ritual like "Crusher," and yet, alas, as we all know, his daily and hourly existence is a most mournful illustration of the utter hollowness of the principles he avows, the ritual he knows so well, and "spits out" so glibly. And so we might proceed, for "examples" many and striking are close at hand of the truth of what we are contending for, but we prefer to leave the matter here, hoping our brethren and readers will kindly bear with us and read over our humble words carefully, as we seek to throw a "spirit" of reality over the golden "letter" of Masonry, as we endeavour to demonstrate for our mutual benefit, one and all, the great gulf which, alas, lies in our lodge life to-day, too often and too truly, between Profession and Practice.

T. C. Fr. Kenning,—
Ce matin les obsèques du Baron Taylor ont eu lieu avec pompe et vous en trouverez le récit dans tous les journaux profanes.

Le Suprême Conseil de France, dont le Baron Taylor était membre depuis le 1 Mars, 1840, et dont il était Lieutenant Grand Commandeur élu depuis le 8 Mars, 1869, aurait aimé à rendre un éclatant hommage à ce grand homme de bien en faisant sur sa tombe même le récit de sa belle vie. Mais l'Institut avait ses droits, les nombreuses sociétés créées ou obligées par le Baron Taylor avaient les leurs, et l'usage en France étant de ne faire intervenir le Franc Maçonnerie que lorsque les cérémonies religieuses sont accomplies et les manifestations profanes terminées, il ne restait plus au Suprême Conseil qu'un cri d'adieu à jeter sur la tombe de son éminent Lieutenant Grand Commandeur. C'est l'orateur adjoint de la Grande Loge Centrale qui a été chargé de ce soin. Je me fais un plaisir d'adresser sous ce pli à votre journal le texte exact de la courte allocution qu'il a prononcée.

Les Maçons présent ont ensuite reformé, en la manière ordinaire, la chaîne d'union rompue par le décès du regretté frère Taylor.

Agréz mes fra. salut,
A. FABIEN, 33°.

Allocution prononcée par le Grand Orateur adjoint de la Grande Loge Centrale sur la tombe du Frère Baron Taylor.

Très regretté Lieutenant Grand Commandeur; Très illustre Baron Taylor:

Mon Frère,—Au nom de la Franc-Maçonnerie universelle, le Suprême Conseil du Rite Ecossais Ancien Accepté pour la France et ses dépendances, t'adresse, avec son dernier adieu, le sincère hommage de sa fraternelle admiration.

Nous avons contume de dire que l'existence de tout Franc Maçon est un temple qu'il élève à la gloire du Grand Architecte de l'Univers; toutes les actions de sa vie en sont les matériaux. Jamais temple plus splendide qui le tien n'a été élevé par aucun Franc-Maçon; jamais l'édifice d'une belle vie n'a mis plus de faibles et d'affligés à couvert du malheur. Aussi notre douleur est grande de perdre un pareil ouvrier.

Francs Maçons qui m'entourez, notre Lieutenant Grand Commandeur bien aimé, notre très cher Frère Taylor n'est plus—Gémissons—Gémissons—Gémissons.

Il n'est plus parmi nous, mais son âme immortelle reçoit dans un monde meilleur la récompense d'une si belle vie—Espérons—Espérons—Espérons—et pour donner à cette espérance, disons mieux, à cette certitude la forme symbolique qui nous est habituelle, couvrons les restes périssables de notre regretté frère de ces feuilles d'acacia qui sont pour nous l'emblème de sa radieuse immortalité.

Adieux, excellent Frère Taylor.

A. L. G. D. G. A. D. L'U.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I feel sure that you will learn with a heartfelt pleasure that on Thursday evening last we had a beautiful and impressive solemnity drawn up in order to give to our beloved Bro. Hubert, the talented and energetic editor of the "Chaîne d'Union," a public and lasting token of our esteem and regard.

More than five hundred Masons belonging to different rites and "Obediences," and hailing from almost every clime, had responded by their presence to the call of the Committee, thus giving to that manifestation the true universal character that would make it significant, and that we wanted for it. After a fine and appropriate opening speech by the President, Bro. Dalsace, Bro. Hubert was introduced in great pomp, and with all the Masonic honours, and the veil that covered it being taken off, the assembly could contemplate a most beautiful oil portrait of Bro. Hubert. That remarkable painting is the work of Bro. Tersolo, an Italian artist of great merit (and a true Freemason besides), who donated it to our Committee.

The enthusiastic applause with which that beautiful "souvenir" was greeted by the assistants was a high compliment both to the "executive" and to the "executed."

Bro. Cousin, Vice-President of the "Conseil de l'Ordre," although differing in views with our Bro. Hubert on questions that we consider as vital to our beloved Order, was present as an old friend, and was honoured and glad (so he said) to vest him with a handsome "bijou," the result of a general subscription.

Several speeches, retracing the life and works of the indefatigable editor of "La Chaîne d'Union," were made by Bros. Lebel, from Bruxelles, Cousteau, from Paris, de Loucelles and Lechant from Havre, to which the "hero of the day" responded with a deep emotion.

The poor were not forgotten.

Those that were happy enough to be present at that solemn gathering will long remember it, and we hope it will prove to our dear Bro. Hubert a reward for his disinterested and assiduous labours in behalf of the good cause.

I should feel happy if you would give to these lines, written from the heart, the hospitality of your widely-spread and influential paper, and accept the assurance of my fraternal and distinguished consideration.

MASONIC MEDALS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Would Bro. W. J. Hughan be kind enough to furnish for the Freemason a short article on the Prince of Wales, 1790, Medals, Masonic, stating how many varieties there are, the descriptions, and such explanations as would be of interest to American numismatists especially, and thus oblige many of your U.S.A. coin collectors?

Fraternally yours,

W. W. AUSTIN.

Richmond, Indiana, U.S.A.

[Bro. Hughan has kindly promised to respond to the wishes of our Bro. Austin in a few weeks' time, or, at least, as soon as he can conveniently.—E. D. F.M.]

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Two years ago I was initiated and passed the three primary Degrees in Freemasonry in the Prince of Wales Lodge, 1003, Jersey, but unfortunately left the island before the certificate to which I am entitled had arrived from Grand Lodge.

In the month of January, 1877, I applied to the Secretary for the certificate. He then said that I must get the Secretary of some other lodge to apply for it, when he would forward it to him instantly. Not knowing at that time a friend in London who would apply, I allowed the matter to drop, but last month a lodge Secretary interested himself in my case, and applied for the certificate. The answer was that I owed £2 lodge dues (annual subscription), and when that was paid the parchment would be forwarded.

Would you kindly inform me through the Freemason whether the Secretary is right and justified in the above course, and if not, what remedy I have? Can he detain the certificate for which I have already paid until I pay the subscriptions?

I remain, Sir, yours obediently,

F. H. WARREN.

85, Queen's Gate, South Kensington, S.W.,
September 8th, 1879.

[Having paid initiation fee Bro. Warren is entitled to certificate. He had better apply to G.S.—E. D. F.M.]

Reviews.

HISTORY OF CRAFT MASONRY IN CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND. Edited by Bro. W. F. LAMONBY, P.M. 1003, P.P.G.R. G. and T. Coward, Scotch-street, Carlisle.

Bro. Lamonby's fatigued pen has given us a very valuable little sketch of Masonic history in Cumberland and Westmorland. All these contributions towards a provincial and general history of English Masonry are alike important and improving. We know, as a fact, very little of the past. Our acquaintance with the annals of the great mother lodge of the English, European, and Cosmopolitan Masonry is still limited in the highest degree, and every one who seeks in the "highways and byways" of Masonry to unfold the forgotten fact, or to illustrate the passing present, deserves well of his brotherhood, and is fit to be enrolled amongst the honourable band of Masonic students. To the outer world these words may appear of little interest or importance, but not so to the expert Mason. Like little mountain rivulets fill the great lakes (and we are writing with Derwentwater before us in all its graceful and placid beauty), so all these little "labours of love" tend to elucidate what is obscure, and to make plain what is dubious, and to illustrate what is real in the local and general history of our English Craft. Union Lodge, No. 256, Kendal, is the earliest of the lodges in the provinces, the now united province, having been warranted in 1764, but at the Union, in 1813, it ceded its post of honour to the ancient lodge at Whitehaven—Sun, Square, and Compasses—which now ranks first. The next most ancient lodge in Cumberland seems to be No. 157—Sun, Square, and Compasses, in Whitehaven—warranted May 18th, 1768, now working first as just stated. But its annals previous to 1804 are wanting, as is, alas, too frequently the case. The Prov. G. Lodge of Carlisle was formed in 1771; Henry Ellison being appointed P.G.M. in 1771. It seems doubtful, however, whether the Prov. Grand Lodge met until 1801. Bro. Lamonby states:—The Prov. Grand Lodge of Westmorland was formed in 1788, Gen. Braithwaite being appointed P.G.M. in 1788. It seems very doubtful also whether any meetings of the Prov. Grand Lodge were held until 1860, when the Eden Valley Lodge was chartered at Appleby—only one lodge formed the province of Westmorland. In 1860, April 25th, the two provinces were consolidated into one, under the well-known Sir James Graham, Bart., as P.G.M. He died in 1861, and Bro. Dykes Laing reigned from 1816 to 1866. Lord Henlis, now the Earl of Bective, succeeded in 1867. Here, as elsewhere, we find defective materials for the Masonic Student, "lacunæ" which we cannot get over, chasms we cannot bridge. But we refer our readers to Bro. Lamonby's interesting book, and ask for it that support and patronage it so well deserves at the hands of the reading members of our body. We may observe that the minutes of the old Sun and Sector Lodge, Workington, unfortunately erased in 1821, go back in part as far as 1774. Some of the minutes, however, from 1774 to 1782, and from 1791 to 1813 are lost. What a commentary on lodge carelessness and apathy!

FREEMASONRY IN NORFOLK.

Our brethren in Norfolk have every reason to be proud of the position and influence of their province in Freemasonry. It is true the number of its lodges is somewhat circumscribed, but more than one half of them date their existence back to times anterior to the Union, while the majority of these can boast that their warrants of constitution are more than a century old. Nearly a hundred and fifty years ago Francis of Lorraine was raised to the Third Degree at an occasional lodge specially convened at Houghton Hall, the residence of the then Prime Minister of England—Sir Robert Walpole. Our Grand Master is a resident in the county, and last, but not least, it has been fortunate in the brethren who have been chosen to rule over it, as—if we only glance back during the last quarter of a century—is abundantly testified by the mere mention of its Grand Masters during that period, namely, the late Bros. B. Bond Cabell, and the Hon. F. Walpole, and Lord Suffield, its present chief. Such a combination of favourable circumstances renders the task of chronicling the rise and progress of Freemasonry in this district one of unalloyed pleasure.

To the city of Norwich, which still can boast of having on its roll the oldest lodge in the province, belongs the honour of having first encouraged Freemasonry to make what has since proved a permanent home in the county, the forty-seventh in order on the "1725 List of Lodges" being set down as held at the Maid's Head, at Norwich. In 1730 this figures as No. 30, the Queen's Head, Norwich—not improbably the same hostelry—and on turning to the 1736 list we find it bearing the same number and among lodges of 1724 creation, but as having migrated to the Three Tuns, in the same city. In 1740 it became No. 27, and was located at the same house, the year 1724 being given as the year of its constitution. In 1756 it was re-numbered 19, and held its meetings at the Angel, whence in the interval between that year and 1770 it migrated to the Thatch House, in the parish of St. Lawrence. In 1781 it became No. 17, White Swan, St. Peters, in the same city, and in 1792 No. 16, and at the same locality. Unfortunately, it died some time between that date and 1813.

A similar fate overtook the second lodge constituted in the province, which is given in the list for 1730 as No. 70, Duke's Head, King's Lynn, the date of whose constitution is given in the 1736 list as 1st October, 1729. It became No. 53 in 1740, No. 31 in 1756, No. 29 in 1770, and No. 26 in 1781. Its changes of quarters during the period of its existence do not need to be specified. It was erased from the roll of Grand Lodge in 1786.

The third lodge constituted in Norfolk has been more fortunate. It was founded in 1736, and first met as No. 146, at the King's Head, in the city of Norwich. It became by successive closings up of numbers, No. 131 in 1740; No. 80 in 1756; No. 66 in 1770; No. 52 in 1781 and No. 48 in 1792, and during the whole of this time and, indeed, to the Union in 1813, it retained its original quarters. In 1814 it retrograded to No. 68; in 1832 it advanced to No. 60, and in 1863 it became once more, as it is now, No. 52, its title being "The Union," and its quarters the Norfolk Hotel. This is the premier lodge of Norfolk, and may point with pride to an unbroken career extending over 143 years.

The next in order of foundation among the lodges in this province has been equally fortunate. It was constituted as No. 108, on the 9th of May, 1747, when it met at the Bear, Norwich. It became No. 132 in 1756, and No. 103 in 1770, when its quarters were at the Angel, in the same city. In 1781 it was altered to No. 83, and was held at the Queen's Head, Acle, in the same county. In 1792 it was re-numbered No. 83, but between that year and the Union it migrated to Lowestoft, in the adjoining county of Suffolk, for in Bro. Hughan's "Register of Lodges for 1814" it is described as the "Lodge of Unity, Lowestoft," its number having been altered to 99. In 1832 it was realtered to No. 84, and in 1863 to No. 71. It is now the Lodge of Unity, No. 71, Lowestoft, and, though by birth a Norfolk lodge, ranks as the premier lodge of Suffolk, with an uninterrupted existence of over 130 years.

No. 199, Maid's Head, Norwich, founded 5th January, 1748, comes next in order. In 1756 it was altered to No. 136, a West Indian Lodge of 1747, and two Plymouth lodges, founded in May, 1748, and June, 1748, respectively, having been placed above it on the roll. In 1770 it became No. 105; in 1781, No. 85, and in 1792, No. 78. It was no longer in existence when the Union was consummated in 1813.

We come next to Lodge No. 205, Guild, Norwich, which was founded on the 9th of January, 1749, and became successively No. 141 in 1756; No. 107 in 1770; No. 87 in 1781; No. 80 in 1792; No. 103 in 1814; and No. 86 in 1832. It died before 1863.

No. 207, held at the Hole in the Wall, Norwich, and founded 12th of February, 1751, became No. 145 in 1756; No. 114 in 1770; No. 94 in 1781; No. 86 in 1792; and No. 108 in 1814, when it was known as the Swaffham Lodge, Swaffham, Norfolk. It had passed away when the lodges were re-numbered in 1832.

Thus far Norwich and King's Lynn were the only places in the county which could boast of Masonic lodges, the former having exactly the same number as it has now. On 6th June, 1751, however, was constituted Lodge No. 210, at the Angel, Great Yarmouth, which became by successive changes of number, No. 147 in 1756; No. 117 in 1770; No. 96 in 1781; No. 88 in 1792; and No. 112 in 1814. Henceforward we have nothing to record, as in the course of the next eighteen years it passed away.

Norwich again claims our attention, as on 10th November, 1753, was constituted Lodge No. 232, Norwich. In 1756 it is described as No. 169, held at the Castle and Lion, in White Lion-lane in that city. It became No. 134 in 1770; No. 109 in 1781; No. 99 in 1792; No. 124, Faithful Lodge, Norwich; No. 100 in 1832; and No. 85 in 1863. Its description now is Faithful Lodge, No. 85, Harleston, in the county of Norfolk, so that it is the second oldest lodge in the province, with a career of over a century and a quarter to boast of.

Yet a few months elapsed, and on the 4th March, 1754, Lodge No. 239, Chequers, Norwich, came into being. It was altered to No. 179 in 1756, to No. 141 in 1770, to No. 115 in 1781, to No. 105 in 1792, between which year and the next change of numbers in 1814 it migrated into Essex, for its description at the latter date is given by Bro. Hughan as "No. 130, Lodge of Harmony and Industry, Ingatstone, Essex." It is since defunct.

The year 1755 witnessed the constitution of two additional lodges at Norwich, of which the earlier, namely, No. 264, at the Leg of Mutton, in St. Augustin's Parish, was warranted on 17th June. It became No. 201 in 1756; No. 165 in 1770; No. 132 in 1781, when it was held at the King's Head, Walsingham. Between then and the next alteration of numbers in 1792 it disappeared from the roll. However, the younger of the two 1755 lodges fared better. It was warranted on 16th September of that year, as No. 206, met at the Flower in Hand, in St. Mary's Parish, became No. 168 in 1770; No. 135 in 1781; and No. 120 in 1792. At the change of numbers in 1814 it became No. 145, Social Lodge, Norwich; in 1832 No. 110, and in 1863 No. 93. It retains that number still, and is the third on the roll of this province.

Early in 1757 two new lodges were added to the roll, one at King's Lynn, which had but a brief existence, the other at Norwich, of which more anon. The former was warranted on the 21st February, 1757, as No. 222 at the Star, King's Lynn, and became No. 181 in 1770. It had ceased to be when the next alteration of numbers took place. But the Norwich Lodge, which was warranted on 23rd March, 1757, as No. 223, and was held first of all at the Dove and Branch—an appropriate sign, by the way, for a Masonic trying-place—in the parish of St. Lawrence, still lives, though it has changed its quarters these later years from the capital of the county to its most important watering place, from the city of the shawl to the town of bloaters. This lodge became No. 182 in 1770, No. 148 in 1781, when it was held at the Castle and Lion; No. 133 in 1792, when it was located at the King's Arms at Blakeney; No. 159 in 1814, when it was again held in Norwich, and was known as the Lodge of Friendship; No. 117 in 1832, and No. 100 in 1863. Its present style and title are "No. 100, Lodge of Friendship, Great Yarmouth."

Equally fortunate has it been with the lodge which, next in order of time, saw the light for the first time, namely, No. 231, held at the Cock, St. Mary's, Norwich, which was warranted February 18th, 1758. The career of this lodge is remarkable from its having changed its locality—not the mere hostelry in which it was held, but the town—several times; from its having, in the course of those changes, for a time ceased to be a Norfolk and become a Suffolk lodge; and, lastly, from the fact of its having been formally consecrated (query re-consecrated?) on October 14th, 1793, as the Lodge of Unanimity, No. 136, of Cottishall, in Norfolk, by Sir Edward Astley, the then Grand Master of the province. A short account of the ceremony will be found in the "Freemasons' Magazine," Vol. IV., p. 113, for 1795. This No. 231 of 1758 became No. 188 in 1770; No. 153 in 1781; No. 136 in 1792, when it was held at the King's Head, Cottishall, at which hostelry its consecration the year following, as the Lodge of Unanimity, took place. In 1814, after the Union, it became No. 164, and is described as meeting at Bungay, in Suffolk; in 1832 it became No. 119, and in 1863 No. 102. It is now No. 102, Lodge of Unanimity, North Walsham, and is again, as it was originally, a Norfolk lodge.

Very brief was the existence of the Sea Captains' Lodge, No. 236, held at the Swan, Great Yarmouth. It was warranted on the 1st January, 1759, became No. 194 in 1770, and No. 159 in 1781. It was erased in 1786.

A third King's Lynn Lodge, though now defunct, had a longer life. It was born on the 9th January, 1762, being No. 283 on the roll, and met at the sign of the Duke's Head, in Lyme Regis. It became No. 230 in 1770, and No. 185 in 1781, when it is described as the Lodge of Friendship; No. 158 in 1792; No. 193 in 1814; and No. 139 in 1832. By the next alteration of numbers—in 1863—it had passed out of existence.

WENTWORTH LITTLE MEMORIAL.

The mural monument over the grave of our late brother is now finished, and we have been to the cemetery at Honor Oak to see it. The design is very simple, and consists of a plain marble pedestal, surmounted by a cross. The design was selected by the widow as being the least expensive, and, at the same time, in accordance with her taste; the fact of its having been erected by the Craft is recorded on the front of the pedestal. We are informed that a photograph of the monument has been ordered, and have promised to supply copies to any of our friends at cost price.

We would take this opportunity of informing any brethren who have subscribed to the memorial, or intend to do so, to send their contributions to Bro. Buss, the Treasurer, without delay, and trust there will be a substantial sum left after payment of the monument, although we are much afraid the result will not equal our expectations, owing to the general depression of trade and the numerous claims made upon the finances of our brethren. In our next issue will be published a complete list of subscriptions, paid or promised.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CEYLON.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Ceylon was held at Freemasons' Hall, Colombo, on May 2nd, the R.W. Bro. Maitland, R.W.D.G.M., presiding, with other officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Ceylon.

The Prov. Deputy Grand Master informed the brethren that the R.W. Prov. Grand Master had been prevented from being present on account of private affairs, and that he (the P.G.M.) regretted that he could not be present, much as he had wished, in order that he might testify to the merits of their deceased brother. He said: Brethren, you are all aware that we have met together to receive an intimation of the death of our much respected W. Bro. Hegarty, who was suddenly called from this sublunary abode to the Grand Lodge above. I feel that the subject is beyond me at this present moment, as my feelings upon our sad bereavement are great, but as the P.G.M. has had to leave Colombo for a time he has deputed me, while expressing my own sorrow and regret, to intimate that he (the P.G.M.) could but feel the loss we have all sustained very acutely indeed, and it would be a difficult matter to replace him. Doubtless, many would ask themselves, who can take his place? and the reply must be—no one. I can but agree with what fell from the lips of the P.G.M., as W. Bro. Hegarty stood pre-eminent in the Craft; indeed, his zeal often verged upon proving troublesome, yet his honest, straightforward nature was too genuine to be doubted. He did it all for the Craft, and not from any vain desire to exhibit his knowledge of Masonry, although he was an oracle in all abstruse points of Masonic lore. I have had the pleasure of W. Bro. Hegarty's acquaintance for the past few years, indeed, since he first came to the island, and during that time, both personally and Masonically, his character was such as not only to secure respect but something even stronger. In conclusion, the P.G.M. joins with me in wishing that our Prov. Grand Secretary forward to his widow a copy of the resolution I shall now propose: "That the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ceylon desires to place on record its deep sorrow at the death of W. Bro. Hegarty, Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies, whose untiring devotion to Masonry, conscientious regard for the principles of the Order, and general uprightness of conduct, both as a brother and citizen, had gained for him the respect and esteem of all who knew him."

Seconded by W. Bro. Cantrell (W.M. No. 115).

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS TO COMPEL THE INTERMENT OF A FREEMASON.

We take the following from the New York Herald:—
Such a dense throng as crowded Supreme Court Chambers, on its opening on Friday, the 29th ult., has rarely been witnessed in that court. The occasion of the unusual assemblage was a widespread eagerness evidently to listen to the expected argument on the question of making permanent the injunction granted by Judge Van Brunt prohibiting the Calvary Cemetery authorities from removing from its receiving vault the body of Bro. Denis Coppers, the circumstances connected with whose attempted interment on the part of his brother and others next of kin, and the forbidding of such burial by the cemetery officials, have already been fully detailed in the Herald. Mr. C. W. Brooke appeared on behalf of the friends of the deceased, and Mr. John E. Develin represented the cemetery. Various unimportant cases were being argued, during which the crowd remained with very little show of impatience. This patient waiting, however, did not extend to all the counsel, as the proceedings given below will indicate.

"If your honour please," at length said Mr. Develin, addressing the Court, after elbowing his way through the press of lawyers in attendance in other cases, "I see that the matter of Mr. Coppers is the last motion on the calendar. I have but recently been called in the case, and have had no opportunity as yet to read the papers, much less put myself in readiness for argument. I would respectfully ask, therefore, an adjournment to the first Monday of September."

"I have no objection," said Judge Van Brunt, "if the other side does not oppose the application."

"As to the application for an adjournment," said Mr. Brooke, "I do not desire to interpose any objection, provided that the preliminary injunction granted by your honour in this matter remains in full force, and the order, which is in the nature of an alternative mandamus, be continued in the meantime."

"Of course, I do not object to that," interposed Mr. Develin.

"I desire something more," continued Mr. Brooke. "I wish that the counsel for the cemetery as a condition of adjournment should stipulate that all necessary measures be taken for the preservation of the remains and that the relatives of the deceased be permitted to contribute what they may deem proper to this end."

"Counsel has only to make the suggestion to meet with full compliance on my part with his wishes," said Mr. Develin. "Everything is being done now that can be to preserve the body. They are about to put it in a leaden coffin. Everything that is necessary will be done."

"Everything being satisfactorily arranged then and understood," said Judge Van Brunt, "the argument is adjourned until the first Monday of September."

Upon this announcement the large crowd present speedily withdrew from the court room, with widely diverging comments upon the merits of the case. The Herald representative subsequently called upon Mr. Brooke at his office to obtain an outline of his proposed argument when the case comes up for a hearing in the courts. Mr. Brooke met the reporter with his usual affability, and stated frankly that he was perfectly willing to give the required information, as he had no fears of "showing his hand" to the other side.

"What is the chief point upon which you base your argument?" asked the reporter.

"The leading point," answered Mr. Brooke, "as indicated by facts set forth in the papers, is that unless there is some special covenant in the deed, or in whatever muniment of title the party has restricting the right to use the ground for the purpose which induced its purchase, there being no recognition under our law of the rules or regulations of any religious or other organisation, the party or his legal representatives are entitled to make use of the ground in any event as was within the contemplation of both buyer and seller at the time the title was conveyed."

"Is there any other legal point involved in the case?"

"In the event of the Court inclining even to entertain any suggestion of the right to prevent the use of the ground for the purpose for which it was purchased, I shall contend that, according to the theological authorities, the refusal to permit this interment in consecrated ground was not in accordance with any prohibition of canon law or of even doctrinal prescription. This, I believe, about exhausts the law on the question."

"Are there any precedents upon which you propose to base your action in the premises?"

There are only two precedents which I can find which might, superficially considered, be at all applicable to the case, and neither of them is directly in point, and, in fact, is scarcely sufficiently analysed to be urged as authority to the Court. One is the well known case of Joseph Guibord, in Montreal, with which the public is already familiar. Guibord was not a Freemason, but was a member of L'Institut Canadien, a liberal literary and social organisation, which had in its library certain books, the reading of which was interdicted by the Church. The Church excommunicated, formally, the members of the society as a body, after notifying them of its decision concerning the character of the books in question. Guibord was a printer by trade, and declined to leave the society, and upon his death the Church refused to allow his body to be buried in consecrated ground. It was, however, buried there after a long and bitterly contested struggle, in the course of which the case was taken before the Privy Council of England. A force of police and military escorted the body to the place of burial, and protected the persons engaged in the interment, the coffin being set in a large bed of cement underlying the grave. In Guibord's case the decision was governed by the principles of the ecclesiastical laws of England, and the final determination was made subject to the fact that the Established Church of the country moulded and shaped the laws concerning the question.

"The other case was the one in Cleveland, Ohio, in which Bishop Gillmore, of that diocese, was the respondent. In this case the evidence of the title contained an express covenant that the party should forfeit the right to burial in consecrated ground in the event of the happening of certain contingencies therein enumerated. One of such contingencies had happened in this particular instance, and, therefore, under the covenant in the title, the appellate Court decided that the party had forfeited his right to burial in consecrated ground."

"Is there anything further to be said," the reporter finally asked, "in connection with the legal points involved in this case?"

"Not that I think of at this moment," replied Mr. Brooke. "I have indicated the basis of my proposed line of argument. Of course there may be points raised on the other side which I cannot now anticipate—though I do not see how there can well be—and I entertain no fear of being able to promptly meet them. I thus candidly furnish you with a statement of our position for the reason that if the law of the land gives to the body of this decedent the right of burial in the spot in good faith purchased by him in his lifetime, and in which are interred his mother, wife, and children, we intend to have that right asserted. If the law does not accord us that right we purpose to have the Court specifically declare that fact and the reasons which prompt the denial of what we assume to be his right. It is, in fact, a question as to whether in our State and country any religious organisation or denomination can demand the substitution of its rules and regulations to supersede the law of the land."

A reporter also called upon Mr. John E. Develin, the chief counsel of the Calvary Cemetery Association. In response to an inquiry as to the future course in the matter Mr. Develin said:—

"I have not yet had any intimation from my side as to what they have said or done, or intend to do. I have had no conversation with any one except Mr. T. J. Glover, with whom I am associated in the case. The only conversation I have had with him was with regard to the adjournment of the matter, as the papers only reached him on Thursday afternoon. I did not see the papers until this morning, when I was in court in regard to another matter. I know nothing of this case except what I read in the Herald this morning. I have not read in the papers. Nothing has been prepared on our side, but I expect to consult with Mr. Glover in a few days as to the course we shall pursue."

"Is there any possibility of a compromise?"
 "I am unable to say, as I have seen none of the authorities and have had no opportunity to communicate with them. But I may say that the Catholic cemeteries are consecrated, and intended only for the burial of persons who die in full communion with the Church, and this must be well known to all who purchase burial plots in them. It is supposed that none but Catholics would apply for burial plots in such a cemetery."

"What is the unconsecrated ground?"
 "I am not aware of any owned by the Catholics, although there may be such for special uses. I do not know what was meant by the term used that 'this body must be interred in the unconsecrated ground,' unless it was meant that it must be deposited within the cemetery grounds of other than those belonging to the Catholic Church."

"Do you know of a body ever having been brought to Calvary Cemetery and then removed to a trench, there to be dissipated by quick lime?"
 "No; never."

"Are bodies ever sent to Potter's Field?"
 "Not that I have heard of."

"Do you think that this deed of Mr. Coppers' gave him the right of burial there?"
 "I have not read the deed. That will be a part of the subject of our consultation."

"Do you not know that the bodies of more than one hundred Freemasons are now interred in Calvary Cemetery?"
 "I do not. I do not know of my own knowledge, or of any information to that effect that such is the case, nor do I believe that any such burial would be permitted if the deceased persisted in his membership to the last, and this fact was known to those having charge of the cemetery. The rule is not directed against Freemasons alone, but it excludes members of all secret societies. Thus recently, combinations in Pennsylvania not of a Free Masonic character have come under the ban of the authorities of the Church."

"Do you know of the burial of one John Strach, a Freemason and a member of the New York Fire Department, in Calvary Cemetery?"
 "I never heard of him, according to my present recollection. I presume that the proper authorities could and would, under special circumstances of a sufficiently influencing character, grant a dispensation, but I do not know, this being a sort of theological question which is outside of the legal domain. I have never heard, however, of the exercise of any such privilege."

"Do you propose to prevent the interment of Denis Coppers' body in Calvary Cemetery, as the case stands now?"
 "I cannot say what course of action I will be instructed to pursue."

The following is the deed given Mr. Denis Coppers when he purchased the plot in Calvary Cemetery, which is now in the possession of the applicants for the injunction:—

Office of † Calvary Cemetery,
 New York, December 1, 1873.

Received from Mr. Denis Coppers, seventy-five dollars, being amount of purchase money of a plot of ground, 8 feet by 8 feet, in Calvary Cemetery.

$75. D. BRENNAN,
 Supt. of Office of Calvary Cemetery.
 Section 7. Plot D.
 Range 35. 4 graves, 5, 6, 7, 8.

Appended is a copy of the original letter ordering the removal of the body, and which was placed in the hands of Mr. Brooke by Mr. Edward Coppers on the 19th, the day on which it was received:—

Calvary Cemetery, Office, 266, Mulberry-street,
 New York, August 18, 1879.

M. Jones, Esq.—
 Dear Sir—I have been requested by Very Rev. Dr. Quinn to inform you that the remains of the late Denis Coppers cannot be kept in receiving vault for more than three days. If not removed at the expiration of that time they will be interred in unconsecrated ground. Respectfully,
 D. BRENNAN.

On Thursday evening, the 21st ult., the brother of Mr. Coppers applied to Mr. Hugh Moore for permission to put the body of deceased in a zinc casket. Permission was granted, and on Friday morning, the 22nd ult., the undertaker went to the vault at Calvary and transferred the body. Had this not been done it is probable the Board of Health would have interfered, for the heat was so great on Friday, the 22nd ult., that it would have been impossible to allow the coffin to remain in the vault.

My recent holiday at the sea-side, as recorded in your issue of the 29th ult., revived an old liking for wandering on the ocean, created in my younger days, which I then gratified by obtaining such employment as caused me to travel thousands of miles across its surging waves.

The other morning, whilst sitting in my sanctum, thinking over many pleasurable experiences of my rambling life abroad, I overheard the following question: "Is Mr. Jones within," to which my boy Tom replied in the affirmative, and immediately the burly figure of the jovial brother whom my boisterous friends at St. Anne's-on-the-Sea designated "Old Pyramid" was ushered into my presence (with his permission I shall use the same cognomen in this short narrative).

"Well, old boy," said he, "how are your feelings after your holiday?" and, on my assuring him that I was perfectly salubrious, he proceeded to enlighten me upon the purport of his visit.

"I'm thinking of having a short sea trip, but cannot quite make up my mind where to steer for," said he.

This idea was so consonant with my own feelings, that I entered most enthusiastically into the discussion of the merits of the various routes, &c. After many suggestions, we mutually concluded that a trip from Liverpool to Falmouth on one of the steamers calling at the latter port on her voyage to London would be the most enjoyable, and almost instinctively it seemed settled that I should accompany my friend.

Without loss of time I made arrangements with another friend to take charge of my establishment and superintend Tom's duties during my absence.

On Saturday, September 6th, we were speeding along on the Cheshire lines express, and soon reached the port of embarkation. Calling at the office of the owners of the boats, for the purpose of securing our berths, we were informed that the clerk was on board; and to him we must apply for our tickets; accordingly, with the aid of a swift hand, we landed on the busy dock. My friend, Pyramid, was armed with a letter of introduction to the owners, who were busily looking after the loading of their steamer, but who, nevertheless, found time to receive us in a most cordial manner and to escort us on board, and here let me pause to say that if anything would tend to raise the spirits of a timid passenger the affable, pleasant, and jovial demeanour of these gentlemen, coupled with the John Bull appearance of Captain Maddix, of the good ship "Truthful," would certainly accomplish that object.

At one p.m. the captain's voice was heard giving the requisite commands for clearing away, and we moved slowly through the intricate windings of the various docks until the river was fairly reached, when the engine-room gong sounded, the indicator on the telegraph disc pointed to "Go ahead full speed," and away we steamed at the rate of twelve knots past the Rock B.L.-buoy, the Bar Light-ship, and other precautionary marks, until we were outside the dangerous part of the Channel.

By the time the mountainous Welsh coast loomed in view the fifty-six saloon passengers had each settled their quarters on board, and many, pipe in mouth, perambulated the poop-deck, while others grouped themselves into little knots, and seemed bent on thoroughly enjoying their cruise; but, alas, in many cases their expectations were not quite realised. Old Father Neptune did not seem disposed to let us pass so freely and smoothly over his watery regions. About five o'clock we passed the Great Ormes Head, afterwards Point Lynas, when the steward's bell announced that tea was ready. As is usual at first starting, there was an eager rush for places, and our friends George (the steward) and Sarah (his wife, the stewardess), had a nimble time of it, but the latter, with a rather merry twinkle in her eye, in a kind of half-whisper remarked to my companion Pyramid (who, by the bye, is an old passenger on these boats, and consequently well known on board) that "the gentleman would not be in such good trim to-morrow."

On passing the Sherries, about six o'clock, the wind freshened, and the buoyant spirits of several of the passengers were considerably decreased, furtive glances were cast around, as though seeking some quiet corner; on rounding Holyhead, abeam the South Stack Light, there seemed to be considerable interest manifested in the colour of the water, as several heads were hung over the bulwarks, as though studying the phosphorescent display. One young gentleman nearly upset me in his haste to reach the side, and on my demanding whether he was going, he answered somewhat inarticulately something which sounded like "New Yo-o-r-k-k-k;" however, on his reappearing, he looked exceedingly pale, and was wiping a few stray tears from his eyes, so I supposed he had satisfied himself that he could not reach his destination that night.

Near the door of the captain's cabin had assembled about a dozen passengers, who could really enjoy the bracing breezes and a good smoke, and in the midst of these was the jolly skipper, spinning some of his amusing yarns, but every two or three minutes his "weather eye" was directed towards the shore, and at intervals he compared notes with the mate on the bridge.

Darkness set in, and the evening breezes became chilly. Many of the passengers retired to rest, while others enjoyed a fragrant weed on deck. After passing the Carnarvon Light-ship myself and the "Pyramid" turned in.

Sunday morning.—About five o'clock I was roused up by the stopping of the engines, and hastily dressing repaired on deck, when I found that we were so near the Bishop rocks (designated the Bishop and his Curates) that the captain had deemed it advisable to get a little more out to sea, and for this purpose had "slowed" on purpose to get the ship round. The morning was so hazy that we could not see the light upon the South Bishop until within a short distance. At intervals the mist lifted, during which we could discern St. David's Head and the Island of Grassholme, a knot of land about three-quarters of a mile in circumference, also the Islands of Scocum and Scomer.

During the early morning the rain continued, and the strong south-west wind caused the sea to rise on crossing the mouth of the Bristol Channel. The "Truthful" being of a very strong build behaved in the rough sea in a most exemplary manner—in fact, one could hardly perceive any rolling; nevertheless, many of the passengers stuck closely to their bunks, others were endeavouring to get shelter from the driving rain under the lee of the deck house or the boats.

Just before breakfast time the captain was assuring a knot of young fellows that we should soon have better weather, and that the sun would be out shortly, when a son of the Emerald Isle humorously observed, "Bedad, captain, the sooner ye turn on that tap the better for I'm mighty tired o' this sort."

In exemplification of Sarah's prediction, a great number of the noisy and boisterous passengers of the evening before were conspicuous by their absence from the breakfast table, and a more orderly assembly were seated round the saloon. When the dishes made their appearance, George (the steward) laughingly remarked to the Pyramid, "Let's see, sir, you don't like ham and eggs." "Oh, no," said the latter, but, to my astonishment, he set to in good earnest to make a clearance of a large dish of the same, and I should not like to mention the quantity he consumed. However, the keen morning air seemed to have sharpened the appetites of every one of us, and chops and steaks, and other excellently cooked viands disappeared with amazing rapidity.

By mid-day we sighted the Cornish coast, and the captain had proved a true prophet, for the sun shone out brilliantly and the sea moderated, the spirits of the passengers rising accordingly. St. Ives Head was the first land visible, then we crossed Red Sand Bay, the pretty coast scenery forming quite a panorama. The Longships' Lighthouse, standing out some distance from the mainland, was next observed, and after passing this, the world-known "Land's End" stood out prominently, guarded by the rock known as the "Armed Knight" and surmounted by the "First and Last House in England." On the west the Wolf Rock Lighthouse was plainly seen, to which is attached the following legend. It is said that formerly there was a chasm in the rock through which at low water the wind howled, resembling in its peculiar noise the growling of a wolf, and frightening the fishes from that part of the coast. The Cornish fishermen carried thousands of boat loads of stones from the shore and filled up the hole, eventually overcoming the howling and inducing the return of their scaly friends. The rocks derived their name from this source.

Rounding the dangerous rocks we entered Mounts Bay, and the water becoming smoother a considerably larger number of passengers responded to the summons of the steward's dinner bell.

After dinner we had a capital view of St. Michael's Mount and Penzance, and about 4 o'clock sighted Lizard Point, on which are placed two very powerful electric lights. We also passed within a short distance the steamer "Buel," which had been run ashore the previous evening, having on board over 200 souls, but happily all were saved. In close contiguity was another steamer, the "Nankin," which was wrecked about three weeks previously.

By 6 p.m. we entered Falmouth Harbour, which is said to be one of the finest asylums in England for shipping, being partially surrounded by lofty headlands.

At seven o'clock our good ship Truthful was moored alongside, and after bidding our jovial captain adieu, and expressing our best thanks for his attention and kindness during the trip, as well as our regrets that we were not able to continue with him for the remainder of his voyage to London, my friend Pyramid, another fellow passenger, and myself, landed on terra-firma, and repaired to the Royal Hotel, where mine host, a true type of the English Boniface, gave us a hearty welcome. After the requisite ablutions and refreshing of the inner man, we availed ourselves of the beautiful moonlight, and had a stroll round the town, and upon the little jetties which at intervals run out into the harbour; the reflection of the many ships' lights, as well as the shore lamps, in the placid waters forming a fairy-like scene.

Arranging for an early commencement of our pilgrinations the following morning, I retired to rest, but not until I had recognised our jolly boat as a member of the mystic fraternity.

Monday morning.—The sun shining brightly, the air balmy, the streets alive with merry Cornish faces, all looked cheerful and happy. I started alone for a cruise before breakfast. The town in many respects bears a resemblance to Malta, the streets being formed on inclines, and the houses in many parts built on sloping terraces. The old church, which is dedicated to Charles the Martyr, contains a curious old oak pulpit, and its galleries and seats in the body bear the stamp of antiquity. Along the docks the roadway was crowded with French, Swiss, and other Continental emigrants, who had been brought in during the night from the wrecked steamer Brest.

Returning to the Royal I found my friend quit ready for his matutinal meal, and after partaking of the very ample fare provided for us, we hired a conveyance, and had what my friend termed a bird's-eye view of Falmouth from the high promontory on which is erected Pendennis Castle. On our way thither our Jehu informed us that through his influence with Quarter-Master Sergeant Kelly we should be permitted to ascend the tower, and visit other parts of the battery not generally opened to visitors, and on our introduction to the veteran Hibernian we were politely conducted over the same. From the top of the tower the view is certainly grand. The town of Falmouth, with its clean white terraces, the smooth harbour, with its hundreds of ships and small boats lying peacefully at anchor, forms a magnificent panorama. To the east stands St. Anthony's Head, on which is placed a lighthouse. A little further on is the ancient city of St. Mawes, and looking across the creek of St. Just, Dodman Head is visible in the distance; to the westward Black Head and St. Kevern Church; to the south the broad Atlantic; and to the north the beautifully wooded inland scenery, each and all forming charming pictures.

On descending the tower our guide took us through the Armoury of the Militia Artillery, and then pointed out to us a cupboard in one of the turrets, which formerly formed a hiding place for Charles II.

Returning to our hotel, we found that a telegram had been received from Plymouth, stating that the return steamer had left that port, and would arrive about four o'clock, and, by way of postscript, "Have dinner ready for twelve at three o'clock," in which latter arrangement we desired to participate. Our host in true brotherly fashion had planned for us a pleasure trip up the Fal on the steamer "Resolute," but the early arrival of our steamer would not permit of our availing ourselves of the same; however, the sturdy captain of the little boat to whom we were introduced, determined to show us some fraternal attention, and he escorted us to the lodge room of Love and Harmony Lodge, No. 75, and pointed out to us numerous antique and curious properties belonging thereto; the Secretary, Bro. Carter (mine host of the Royal), at the same time presented us with a copy of the bye-laws, to which is attached a history of remarkable events connected with the lodge since its consecration, compiled by the Masonic historian, B. O. W. J. Hughan, of whom all English, but more especially Cornish, Masons are so justly proud.

Soon after four o'clock an omnibus laden with passengers hove in sight, and it did not require a conjuror to discern from whence they came. The ruddy complexion of the lively captain and the slightly bronzed cheeks of the others were sufficient to identify them, and in a very short space of time they, with ourselves, were assembled round the well-supplied festive board, and diminishing the heaps of good things with great rapidity, the captain having at first announced that he could only allow one hour on shore.

Punctually the omnibus again appeared, and the company were thereby conveyed alongside the steamer "Mary Hough," and at six p.m. I commenced my return voyage, which was accomplished with rather more difficulty than the outward one, the wind blowing quite a gale from the Lizard Point until we were under shelter of the land on the Welsh coast. Our steamer, although having to battle with head winds and a rollicking sea, behaved exceedingly well; the merry voice of Captain Wraight kept all on board in good humour, and a right jovial commander and companion he proved himself to be under the difficulties produced by the contending elements.

On Wednesday morning I landed in Liverpool, and at 9.30 a.m. was again seated in my dusty sanctum in Manchester.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire (Bro. the Right Hon. Lord de Tabley, R.W.P.G.M.) was held at Stockport on Wednesday last, the 17th inst. A report of the interesting proceedings will appear in due course.

Bro. the Earl of Bective, M.P., speaking at the Lonsdale Agricultural Association Show on Tuesday last, attributed the depression in agriculture to a succession of bad seasons, and to the condition of trade generally. He was very hopeful that the country would soon see a return to prosperity. As regarded suggested alterations in the land laws, he thought that landlords and tenants could manage their own affairs best themselves.

THE URBAN LODGE AND CHAPTER.—The Order of St. John, to which, we understand, the Gate House of the ancient Priory known as St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, now belongs, requiring the old hall and ante-rooms for their own purposes, the several lodges meeting at "the Gate" have received notice to quit at Michaelmas. The Urban (1196) will in future meet at Freemasons' Hall on the second Tuesdays in January, February, March, April, October, and November, and the chapter attached to the same will also remove to head-quarters, meeting on the first Mondays in February, April, July, and November.

We are pleased to state that the charge of libel preferred against Bro. Sir F. Wyatt Truscott has completely fallen through, the jury, immediately on the conclusion of the summing up, returning a verdict of not guilty.

The Grand Duke of Hesse is expected to arrive in England about the 23rd inst., on a visit to the Queen at Balmoral.

Our readers will learn with interest that a movement has been started at Plymouth, having for its object the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. Chard (Victoria Cross), one of the heroes of Rorke's Drift, on his expected early arrival from the Cape. The gallant Major, it appears, is a Devonian, and because of this, as well as in appreciation of the bravery he displayed, a ready response is being accorded to the appeal for subscriptions.

A message, sent via Aden to the Eastern Telegraph Company in London, contains the important news that on the 28th ult. the Zulu King, Cetewayo, was captured by the English. He was then on the borders of the Amatonga district, and was taken by Major Marter and a detachment of that officer's regiment, the 1st (King's) Dragoon Guards.
