RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF FREEMASONRY.

NO. I.—FREEMASONRY & CHRISTIANITY.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN,

P.M. 131, Provincial Grand Secretary Cornwall, &c.

Of late, lengthy discussions have been conducted by brethren in the pages of Masonic magazines on the religious aspects of Freemasonry, both at home and abroad. Some are firm believers in Freemasonry being Christian even at the present day, while others are so strongly opposed to its being a religious institution at all that they actually advocate the removal of the Volume of the Sacred Law from the Master's pedestal, and the substitution of the Book of Constitutions in lieu thereof! It would be a mistake to suppose that the former only number among their ranks the Christians who adorn our Fraternity, for among the latter there are many brethren who make a profession of Christianity, and what is more, practise its glorious precepts of Faith, Hope, and Charity.

The differences of opinion arise from contrary views of the character of Freemasonry; and the errors of judgment, we think, is a consequence of confounding the scope of the Society with its origin or nature. We neither accept the narrow belief of those who would restrict membership of our Craft to Christians, nor do we share the opinion of some who think that Freemasonry would be advanced by the removal of the Holy Bible from the lodge; and for the following reasons:—

I. Freemasonry, as a guild, had a Christian origin. We presume this will not be doubted; but as we do not enter on the inquiry in a disputatious mood, but simply as a humble student desirous of stating the result of his researches and of expressing his fears of the revolutionary tendencies of some Masons equally earnest as himself to uphold what they believe to be genuine

Masonry, we will glance a little at the evidences for the assertion made. All the old Constitutions confirm the fact, and recognise Christianity. The old Rules at York, A.D. 1370, speak of "He Goddy's Malyon and Saynt Petirs." The MS. in the British Museum, Bib. Reg. 17 A.I., f. 32, 14th or 15th century, says as follows:—

"Plures Constitucioes

"That whose wol connec thys Craft and come to a state

He most love wel God, and holy churche algate."

"ars quatuor coronatorum.

"Suche mawmetys he hade yn hys dawe, To tume the pepul from Crystus lawe, But they were stedefast yn Cryste's lay And to here craft, withouten may

* * * * *

So he dede that tyme other also, Of dyvers craftes mony mo. Through hys grace of Crist yn heven He commensed yn the Syens seven.

* * * * *

"And when thou herest the belle ryng

To that holy sakerynge

Kneie ze most, both zyng and olde

And bothe yor hondes fayr upholde

And say thenne yn this manere

Fayr and softe, without bere—

'Jhesu Lord, welcome thou be,

Yn forme of bred, as y the se'.

Now, Jhesu, for thyn holy name

Schulde me from synne and schame."

There are many instances more in the same MS. as the foregoing. The next oldest is

"Add. MS. No. 23, 198," late in the 15th century (in British Museum):—

"but behoveth hem fyrst princypally to God and holy church & all halowis and his mastr. and his felowes as his aine brotheryn."

The Harleian, Sloane, and Lansdown MSS. in the British Museum, containing the old charges of the 17th century, commence with an invocation to the "Holy and undivided Trinity" much as follows:—

"The myght of the Father of Heaven With ye wisdom of the glorious Son Through the goodness of the Holy Ghost Yt be three in one God, &c. Be with us att our beginning And give us grace so to govern us in our living Yt we may come to His bliss That ne'er shall have ending." Sloane MSS. 3323, f. 209, A.D. 1659.

The commencement of the Rawlinson, York, and Scotch MSS. agree almost verbally with the foregoing, and contain so many references to Christianity that the recognition of that religion by our ancient brethren must be accepted as a fact. The Fraternity were to be "True to the wholy Church." The initiates were sworn upon "The wholy Scripture," and the "Helpe of God" was invoked during the obligation.

The Constitutions of Edinburgh-Kilwinning of about 1670 conclude thus:—

"These charges that wee have now rehearsed unto yow, and all others that belongeth to Massons, yow shall keep, so help yow God and your haly-doome."

In the readable "Recollections of the Lodge at Thornhill," Bro. D. Murray Lyon observes as follows:—

"Theism is said to be the religion of Freemasonry. Theoretically this may be so; but, in practice, the Kilwinning Fraternity ignore this cosmopolitan characteristic of the Order, and substitute in its stead a feature (not, however, till after the initiate has crossed the threshold of the lodge) which effectually debars Turk or Jew from a full participation in their work."

We object to such an exclusiveness in the present era of Freemasonry, and strongly believe in admitting to our mysteries neophytes irrespective of their creed, colour, or clime, so long as otherwise they are worthy. This broad view, however, is not shared generally by many belonging to the old lodges in Scotland even now. That it was Christian only early in the last century, and before then, we take it as proved. The past we cannot alter; but, surely, the present being in our own hands, we can open wide the threshold of the Craft to good and virtuous men, whether Jews, Turks, or Christians. Bro. D. Murray Lyon further states (in confirmation of our first proposition)—

That the Eglinton MS. "held the Wardens of lodges answerable to the Presbytery for all offensis committed by the 'maissions subject to the ludgis' over which they were placed; and to the Deacon and Warden of Kilwinning was it 'given' . . . to put forth of their societie and company . . . all persoins disobedient ather ta the Kirk, Craft, Counsall, &c."

This MS. is dated 1599. There is a MS. in the archives of Mother Lodge Kilwinning of about A.D. 1670. Bro. Lyon informs me that the following sentence in the charges to Prentices embraced in this MS. clearly shows the Roman Catholic faith to have been that of the Craftsmen to whom the Mason oath was administered prior to the Reformation:—

"That you shll be a trew man to God and the Holy Church, and that you use no heresie nor error, to your understanding or discredit man's teaching. . . . So help me God and the Holy Dame."

The commencement of this old manuscript is as follows:—

"The might of the Father of Heaven And the wisdom of the Glorious Sonne Through the grace and goodness of the Holy Ghost That been three persons and one God Be with at our beginning, and give us grace for to govern us here in our living That wee may come to his bliss that never shall have ending. Amen."

In the "Laws and Acts of Parliament" (Edinburgh, 1682) we read that the sums of money

"Employed by any corporation, guild, fraternity, company, or fellowship of any mystery, towards the maintenance of any priest, anniversary, obit, lamp, light or the like"

had to be "paid yearly as a rentcharge to the King."

The Constitutions of the German Masons of Strasbourg, according to our friend Bro. Findel, provide that "No Craftsmen or Master shall be received in the Fraternity who goes not early to the Holy Communion, or who keeps not Christian discipline" (A.D. 1459).

But enough has been said to prove Freemasonry was Christian before the 18th century. From A.D. 1716, and mostly throughout that century, it was Christian in its character and ceremonies. Of this we have many proofs—a few of which will now be presented. The first printed work that was issued after the "Revival" on Masonry was the "Operative Constitutions of A.D. 1722;" the only copy we know of being in the possession of Bro. R. Spencer, London. It commences thus:—

"The Almighty Father of Heaven, with the wisdom of the Glorious Son, thro' the Goodness of the Holy Ghost, Three Persons in one Godhead, be with our Beginning, and give us his Grace so to govern our lives, that we may come to his Bliss, that never shall have end. Amen."

The next printed work published was the one of A.D. 1723, viz., "Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of England." In this volume will be found a number of charges purporting to be extracted from the "Ancient Records of Lodges Beyond Sea, and of Those in England, Scotland, and Ireland." It is a curious fact that these charges were in reality a compilation of the Rev. Dr. James Anderson, from various documents; but in such a free manner that in many respects in their new garb they are quite the opposite to the originals. These charges by the Rev. Dr. Anderson have never been surpassed for simplicity, beauty, and universality by any ritual-makers since, and deserve to be held in high esteem by the Craft now, as in the past. But we are certain that the same liberal spirit did not actuate the members of the lodges, nor did the brethren who added to our ceremonies after the Revival dispense with the Christian references in the ceremonies of the Craft. Much of the old rituals were quite unsuitable to be worked before or by any but Christians, and the earliest rituals are palpably Christian. The ancient Sloane MS. 3329, f. 142, declares "He yt was caryed to ye highest pinnicall of the temple of Jerusalem" to be greater than a Freemason. "The Holy Chapell of St. John" is mentioned, and the asseveration "So help you God, and by the contents of this book" concludes the MS.

But we need not particularize on this head, as all conversant with the rituals of Freemasonry during the last century will be aware of their Christian tendency. Since the "Union of A.D. 1813" a more general arrangement of the rituals has taken place, and the members of the Fraternity of the present day are alive to the claims of the Institution as respects its universality. Indeed, unless as an unsectarian Society, it could not possibly succeed in its exalted mission, and hence we strongly believe in the friends of the Order who endeavoured to so alter the ceremonial parts of the reception of candidates as to permit of "Jews, Turks, and Christians" being admitted on an equitable equality, and in the most fraternal spirit. Even now, however, the observant Mason can detect references which certainly may be traced to Christianity; and we hope no religionist will complain if such suits not his views, as it is wholly impossible to utterly obliterate Christian and Jewish explanations in the rituals, without creating an entirely new institution. As Christians, we now hold out the right hand of fellowship to men of all religions and creeds who believe in God, the Creator of the Universe, and in future rewards and punishments, and are glad to see them joining the Masonic Order, if otherwise worthy. On this broad basis we think we shall be excused in maintaining that Freemasonry had a Christian origin, and still perpetuates the evidences of such a birth, although to promote "Peace on earth and goodwill towards men," its votaries are now content by simply acknowledging these facts, and recognise beyond all sectarian differences and bickerings that, in the liberal and universal sense in which our ceremonies must be understood, all religionists are eligible for admission into our Order if they believe in God and practise the sacred duties of morality.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The regular monthly meeting of the General Committee of this Institution was held on Thursday, December 29th, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. J. A. Rucker, V.P., in the chair, Bros. Major Creaton W. Young, Frederick Walters, Edward Cox, Geo. Cox, J. R. Sheen, W. Farnfield, H. Massey, Samuel Noble, and E. H. Patten (Secretary), were also present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed.

The cases of eight candidates for election were considered; one withdrew, one stood over, and, finally, six were added to the list for next April, which closed at twenty-three candidates.

There will be vacancies in the institution for six pupils on that election.

ENCYCLOPEDIA METROPOLITANA.

BY BRO. C. G. FORSYTH.

Col. Todd mentions its existence on large blocks of the walls at Mundore, and on some ancient medals in his possession, dug up at Oogein, containing the symbols of the twenty-four zain apostles. (They occur also in many of our own Gothic buildings, as, for instance, in the Abbey Gate at Bury St. Edmunds, erected about 1377.) In a representation of Diana of Ephesus joined with Isis and Seraphis, it appears over the right shoulder of Seraphis; it is afterwards found with many other Masonic emblems among the Templars. Many of the ancient statues of the heathen divinities discovered in Egypt, Greece, Persia, and Hindustan, also in America, are decorated with superb aprons; and the Levitical priesthood, we are informed, wore girdles or aprons composed of the three colours, blue, crimson, and purple; but the Freemason may find a more recent and more probable origin for their decorated vesture in the leathern aprons of their operative brethren. The Egyptian mysteries were among the most celebrated; the priests, especially at Memphis and Heliopolis, were noted for their learning. In consequence of their repute, many philosophers and persons of rank from all nations sought to be initiated, and afterwards introduced some of the peculiar rites into their own countries. Thus Lycurgus, Solon, Pythagoras, and others, intermingled them with their own doctrines. Even Moses is said to have been initiated, and to have applied in the worship of the true God such forms as he thought might be useful for the conduct of the Levites, establishing at the same time certain proofs in order to keep them more distinct from the rest of the people, which proofs are supposed to have existed undivulged until the time of King Solomon, and, indeed, until the troubles of the Jews commenced, when they became partly known to the conquerors. Among the Druids, the priesthood of the Celtic nation, we find similar rites, secret probations and obligations to secrecy, with hidden doctrines similar to those of the Magi, the Gymnosophists, the Brahmins, the Chaldeans, and the priests of Egypt. The same may be traced in the rites of Vitzliputzli in Mexico, and Pacha Camai in Peru. From Egypt the religious mysteries would naturally travel to Greece with the earliest colonisers, or would soon follow them. The celebrated mysteries established at Eleusis in great splendour in the reign of Erichthonius, the year B.C. 1500, are better known to us than any other, in consequence of the numerous allusions to them in different old writings. They were afterwards carried to Rome, where they flourished until suppressed by Theodosius the Great in the beginning of the fifth century; but so popular were they even after that time, that traces of them were to be discovered. In all cases, the candidate had to undergo severe and lengthened trials, sometimes even death ensued. At the commencement of his probation, he was purified by ablution, and admonished to lead a new life, founded on the strictest rules of virtue. He was led in darkness through winding avenues, with gloomy recesses, and startled at every step by terrific noises—the howlings of wild beasts, the hissing of serpents, and other strange cries. His resolution was put to the proof by the infliction of bodily suffering. According to Tertullian, a drawn sword was opposed to him on his entrance into the Mythriac cavern, from which he occasionally received wounds—his progress was fearful, through night and darkness. Voices heard, now whispering, now bursting into thunder. Intermittent flashes of tremulous light exposed to his affrighted view scowling faces and terrible spectres; sounds of grief and lamentation for the departed God were heard, and as the time of probation (which was sometimes protracted at intervals for many days) drew to a close, the severity of his trials increased. The earth quaked beneath his feet, and he was left apparently suspended over an abyss. Sometimes he underwent a symbolical death in a bed or coffin, and after a certain time was raised therefrom to participate in their mysteries. Arrived at the confines of death, the candidate was hurried rapidly through the trial of the four elements. At length, when just exhausted, he received the reward of his courage and perseverance; his persecutions ceased, soft sounds with melodious symphonies were heard, and the gloom of night gradually dispersing, fair groves and flowery plains were disclosed to view. The gates of the inmost sanctuary were opened to him; he was admitted to the sight of celestial beauty in all the dazzling splendour of its perfection, and beheld the sun shine with meridian lustre, even in the middle of the night. He was crowned and clothed with a white garment, various symbols were explained to him, and he was finally declared to be born again and made perfect, and dismissed with the formula—Konx Omphax. These words formerly considered inexplicable are now ascertained to be Sanscrit, and are still used by the Brahmins at the conclusion of their religious ceremonies, they should be expressed Kamska Om Paksha. The first is the most ardent vows, Om is the mysterious name of the Deity, Paksha means change, turn, vicissitude, &c. Though it appears to have been used in the sense of silence, whence the word Pax (Latin); Paix (French), used with the same significance. The entrance of the candidate through intricate passages and through darkness, was emblematical of the wanderings of the soul through the mazes of vice and error before initiation. The noises and spectres surrounding him typified the various diseases, calamities and evil passions incident to that mental bondage from which he was about to be emancipated, and exemplified the punishment of the guilty in a future state. His admission into the full splendour of the rites and the dispersion of the shades of night before the brilliant sun of the mysteries, represented the dispersion of the clouds of mental error before the sun of truth. The foregoing description of initiation has chiefly reference to the Elusianian mysteries of which we have fuller accounts extant than of any other, but wherever we have records of, or allusions to others, we find the same similarity. The Pyramids with many celebrated caves, as that of Trophonosius have been considered as the scenes of initiation; and there is said to have been a large cave at Eleusis, but frequently the necessary apparatus and chambers were attached to and perhaps underneath the Temples, the severest penalties were denounced against a breach of the obligations to secrecy, and Ovid is thought by some to have been banished upon mere suspicion of having encroached too much upon the Elusianian secret in the fiftenth book of his "Metamorphosis." In many of the religious ceremonies, the initiated were finally entrusted with a mysterious word having reference to the Supreme Being or Omnipotence. The Egyptian word was Om; that of the Hindoos Om, compressed from the Arilateral word Aum, representing the creating, preserving, and destroying powers of the Deity, and typifying therefore the Indian trinity, Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. The Chinese, Japanese and Ceylonese, who practised Buddhism used the word O-Mi-To-Fo to signify Omnipotence. The sacred term of the Thibetians was Om-ha, hum the Druids, the sacred name in a manner known only to themselves, but used the letters O. J. W. The mysterious name of some of the North American Indians is curious from its similarity to that of the Jews. They call their supreme god Ishtohollo, but they have also a tetragrammaton never used in common speech, compounded of four notes and confined to their most sacred ceremonies. It consists of the syllables Ya, O, He, Wah, thus composing the word Yo-he-wah. The veneration with which the Pagans made use of the name of the Deity should be an instructive lesson to those who daily abuse it. Far from being introduced into general discourse it was considered a subject for devout and private meditation. Cicero says they did not dare to mention the names of their gods, and Lucan states that but to name the Name would shake the earth. The Jews believed that the true pronunciation and import of the sacred tetra-grammation composed of Yod, He, Vau, He if discovered would be sufficient to work wonders, and attributed our Savours miracles to his knowledge of the unutterable word the Shemhamphoresh. Josephus says that the word was never known until God himself revealed it to Moses in the Wilderness, and that Moses afterwards did not dare to mention it, since it was forbidden to be used except once a year by the High Priests alone, when he appeared before the mercy seat on the day of expiation, he adds that it was lost through the wickedness of man. Rulo (de vita nos) mentions the time when, and why it was lost. In common the Jews used Elohim or Adonai, and when it was necessary to write the name in the volume of the Sacred Law, peculiar ceremonies were laid down for the usage of the scribes on the occasion. Among the mysteries established in B.C. 1500 were the Dionysian, in honour of Bacchus, who after the introduction of theatres had the credit of being their inventor. With the mysteries were subsequently connected with the Dionysiac artificers, a body of scientific men, architects and engineers, who claimed the exclusive right of building temples, theatres and other public edifices, much in the same manner as trading Freemasons in the after ages endeavoured to monopolise the building of cathedrals and conventual edifices. Their chief mysteries and most important secrets were comprised in the mechanical and mathematical sciences. The temples of their gods and their theatres required an immense apparatus of machinery for some of their mysteries. At the time of the migration from Attica to Ionia about 1044 B.C., a few years before the erection of Solomon's Temple, the Dionysiac artificers had attained to a considerable reputation and had spread through a considerable part of Asia, and even to India. In order to distinguish them as a body and to preserve inviolate the peculiar secrets of their science, they had appropriate signs and symbols, taken most probably from those mysteries with which they were so intimately acquainted, and when engaged in any great work, they are supposed to have formed into what we should now call lodges, each having its Master, with his assistants or Wardens. The poor brethren of the Order were relieved or employed, and in many respects their institutions remind us of the Freemasons of the middle ages.

THEATRICAL.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.—Bro. Thomas Thorne announces his benefit for Saturday evening, the 7th inst., (to-night), when the "Two Roses" will be performed for the 187th time, to be followed by Mr. Byron's burlesque of "Ill-Treated Il Trovatore," (by permission of Mr. Webster,) and, for the 115th time, the farce of "Chiselling." We are sure he will have a bumper.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—Mr. Buckstone continues to draw a full house every evening. He produces O'Keefe's musical piece "The Poor Soldier," the comedy of "The Palace of Truth," the comedieta of "Uncle's Will," and concludes with the "The Spectre Bridegroom." The performances as is usual here go off admirably, and a host of admirers welcome the appearance of Mr. Buckstone. It is sufficient to state, he is supported by Messrs. Kendal, Everill, Clark, Braid, Buckstone, jun., and Rogers; Mesdames Robertson, Chippendale, C. Hill, F. Wright and Fanny Gwynne, to ensure all visitors that they will have a good evening's amusement if they patronise this fashionable theatre.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.—Crowded houses every night prove the attractiveness of the pieces selected by Mr. A. Harris at this West-end theatre. The performance commences with "The Lottery Ticket," and concludes with the pantomime, "Sleeping Beauty." The scenery is beautifully painted, the music is played with great effect by the admirable band, and the principal characters are all that can be desired.

At the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, on 25th January, Bro. H. G. Buss, of 127, Offord-road, Barnsbury, will represent the Knights of Constantine, and will be happy to receive additions to his list.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Gihon Lodge, No. 49.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Guildhall Coffee House, on Thursday, December 14th. Bro. J. Miles, W.M., initiated Mr. Mills in an able manner. Bro. Mills, P.M., installed Bro. Tipton, S.W., as W.M., who appointed as his officers: Bros. Peacock, S.W.; J. Smith, J.W.; Stillwell, P.M., Treas.; Cox, P.M., Sec.; H. Venn, S.D.; A. Williams, J.D.; T. Cargill, I.G.; and Longstaff, Tyler. The usual Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. J. Miles, I.P.M. There was a very large muster of the members present. The usual good banquet was served, followed by the customary toasts. Visitors: Bros. J. Hervey, G.S.; C. Drummond, P.M. 403; H. Marshall, 91; M. Cockburn, 820; R. J. Chillingworth, S.W. 1228; N. Rosier, 15; G. Barton, J.W. 15; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; J. H. Harmsworth, S.D. 1178; J. H. Fudge, J.D. 1178; and others.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—On Tuesday, 20th ult., at Bridge House Hotel, this lodge held a meeting. Bro. F. H. Ebsworth, W.M., presided. There were present: Bros. Loewenstark, S.W.; Free, J.W.; Harris, P.M., Treas.; Donkin, P.M., Sec.; Grace, S.D.; Dussek, J.D.; Harman, I.G.; Williams, D.C.; Walters, P.M.; Dr. Dixon, P.M.; Rose, P.M.; and others. The work done was raising Bros. Dowsett, Hager, and Ginham to the third degree, passing Bros. Adams, Hetley, and Linging to the second degree, and initiating Dr. A. Lloyd. The ceremonies were well and ably rendered. Bro. Loewenstark, S.W., was elected W.M.; Bro. Harris was re-elected Treasurer; and Bro. W. Y. Laing (P.M. 45) Tyler. A six-guinea P.M.'s jewel was unanimously voted to the retiring W.M. The Auditors were elected; the number of meetings reduced from nine to seven; and Bro. S. Harman was elected as Steward for the Boys' School. Visitors: Bros. M. Ohren, W.M. 452, J.W. 33; Hetley, 33; and Linging, 33.

Pythagorean Lodge, No. 79.—This ancient lodge held its regular meeting on Monday, December 26th, at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich. The chair of K.S. was occupied by Bro. T. Perridge, W.M., and there were present: Bros. J. S. Burls, S.W. and W.M.-elect; C. Nash, J.W.; J. H. H. Doughney, P.M., Sec.; J. R. Nash, S.D.; H. Roberts, J.D.; C. M. Munyard, I.G.; R. Boney, P.M.; W. West Smith, P.M.; W. R. Dussie, W. Blackburn, T. J. H. Wilkins, E. Webb, H. Bond, J. Shaw, Partridge, and others. The visitors were: Bros. F. Walters, W.M. 1309, P.M. 73; J. Griffin, J.W. 933; J. Smith, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed; Bro. Beckwith was passed; and Messrs. Kingston and Heard were initiated. The work, as is usual in this lodge, was admirably and correctly given. Bro. J. S. Burls was elected W.M.; Bro. W. C. Penny, P.G.S., P.M., was unanimously re-elected Treasurer; and Bro. Riley, P.M., Tyler. The usual five-guinea Past Master's jewel was voted from the lodge funds to the retiring W.M., Bro. T. Perridge. Bro. T. J. H. Wilkins was accepted as the Steward to represent the lodge at the forthcoming Boys' School Festival, on Wednesday, March 8th, 1871. The lodge was closed, and the usual good banquet followed. Some excellent songs and recitations enhanced the evening's enjoyment.

St. George's Lodge, No. 140.—This old lodge met on Wednesday, the 21st ult., at the Trafalgar Hotel, Greenwich. Bro. C. Hudson, W.M., in the chair. He raised Bro. R. H. Miller, and passed Bro. W. B. Blackmur. Bro. G. C. Stuart (325 I.C.) was elected a joining member. Ten pounds were voted to the Male Annuity Fund; Bro. Johnson, S.W., was elected W.M.; Bro. W. Noak, P.M., Treasurer; and Bro. Riley, re-elected Tyler. The lodge was duly closed, and banquet followed.

Lodge of Temperance, No. 169.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 15th ult., at the White Horse Tavern, Deptford, and was numerously attended. Bro. John Thomas Moss, W.M., presided, assisted by the officers. After the minutes of the lodge had been read and confirmed, the brethren proceeded to the election of a W.M. for the ensuing year, and the choice of the brethren fell upon Bro. Alfred Pulley, S.W., by an unanimous vote. Bro. J. W. Barrett, P.M., was re-elected Treasurer. Upon the motion of Bro. Pulley, S.W., seconded by Bro. Marshall, J.W., and carried unanimously, a jewel of the value of five guineas was voted to Bro. John Thomas Moss, the retiring W.M., and after the appointing of a day for auditing the accounts, the lodge was closed, when the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The W.M., Bro. John Thomas Moss, quickly disposed of the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. George Brown, P.M., proposed "The W.M.," which was received with more than usual applause.—"The W.M., in acknowledging the compliment, said if he had done his duty to the satisfaction of the lodge, he was amply repaid, and he thanked the officers, especially the P.M.'s, for the assistance they had rendered him during his year of office.—"The W.M., in most suitable terms, proposed "The health of the W.M.-elect, Bro. Alfred Pulley," and expressed the satisfaction it gave him and the brethren of the lodge on his election.—Bro. Alfred Pulley replied in one of those bursts of enthusiasm for which he is famous, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

Lodge of Sincerity, No. 174.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Guildhall Hotel, Gresham-street, City, on Wednesday, 21st ult. Present: Bros. Arthur Gee, W.M.; Adkins, S.W.; Favey, J.W.; Crawley, S.D.; Tuck, J.D.; Moore, I.G.; C. Lacey, I.P.M.; Rawley, P.M. and Treas.; Barlow, P.M.; Bulmer, P.M.; J. Newton, P.M. and Sec.; and a full lodge. The visitors were: Bros. D. Davis (141), M. Davis (141), T. Scotchley (55), J. Tocher (375, Aberdeen), and J. Bennett (212). The usual preliminaries having been disposed of, Bro. Wheeler received his second degree, and Bros. Morrison and Roberts obtained their rank of M.M. This being the evening for electing officers for the ensuing year, the brethren were pleased to elect Bro. Adkin, the S.W., as W.M. Bro. Rawley, P.M., was re-elected as Treasurer, and Bro. Thompson, Tyler. The business of the evening being ended, the brethren adjourned to refreshment. On the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given with delightful brevity. To "The health of the Visitors," Bro. D. Davis (141) replied. "The health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. Lacey, I.P.M., in most kindly terms, to which the W.M. briefly responded. Bro. Lacey also responded to the toast for the P.M.'s. "The Prosperity of the Masonic Institutions" was then proposed by Bro. Barlow, P.M. He stated that the Lodge of Sincerity had voted £5 5s. to be placed on Bro. Rawley's list, who is standing Steward for the Aged Freemasons' Institution at their next festival, and he trusted the brethren would, by their liberality, make it as imposing a list of subscriptions as any that may be sent up.—"The health of the W.M.-elect" being the next toast on the programme, was proposed, and very cordially received.—Bro. Adkins, in reply, hoped to be able to perform the duties of the high office to which he had been elected with the same efficiency that had distinguished his predecessors. After the health of the rest of the officers had been proposed and responded to, the Tyler's toast terminated the proceedings. During the evening the brethren were entertained with songs by Bros. M. Davis and Atkins, and a recitation very effectively given by Bro. D. Davis. It should also be mentioned that various sums were subscribed by the brethren to assist three widows of former brethren of the lodge.

Lodge of Industry, No. 186.—This lodge met on the 27th of December, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Price, W.M., presided. The other brethren present were: Bros. Talent, S.W. and W.M.-elect; D. D. Beck, as J.W.; Lake, P.M., Treas.; W. Mann, P.M. Sec.; Noehmer, S.D.; Seex, J.D.; Wylic, I.G.; &c. One joining member was admitted, one brother passed, and one gentleman initiated. Bro. Talent, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M.; Lake, P.M., re-elected Treasurer; and Woodstock, P.M., Tyler. A five-guinea P.M.'s jewel was voted to Bro. Price.

New Concord Lodge, No. 813.—The usual monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at Bro. Gabb's, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Islington, and the following officers and brethren were present: Bros. T. Bartlett, W.M.; M. J. Atkins, S.W.; J. Salisbury, J.W.; Hart, I.P.M.; J. J. Wilson, P.M. and Treas.; W. H. Main, P.M. and Sec.; Denny, J.D.; A. Hill, I.G.; C. J. Hill, S.; Townsend, Briestlin, Heinemann, Gallant, H. J. Gabb, Hofbawr, J. Meyers, C. J. Meyers, Fauquey, Harris, King, Mountford, Cain, Wagner, and Treble. Bro. Roddy (Victoria) was the only visitor. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. Schweitzer as a joining member, and he was unanimously elected. Bros. King, Meyers, and C. J. Meyers were severally passed to the degree of Fellow Craft; and the W.M. afterwards very ably delivered the traditional history. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to a very excellent banquet, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and a very pleasant evening was passed, enlivened with some capital singing by Bros. Mountford, Meyers, Salisbury, Hill, and others.

St. John of Wapping, No. 1306.—This well-established lodge held a meeting on the 14th ult. at the Gun Tavern, Wapping. Bro. W. Mann, W.M., presided, and was supported by all his officers. The work performed was initiating Messrs. Millhouse, Macklecken, and Sweetenham; and passing Bros. E. Randall, T. J. Taylor, and W. Poore. The ceremonies were rendered in an admirable manner, and reflected great credit on the W.M. and the officers. The lodge was closed and banquet followed. Visitors: Bros. T. Mortlock, P.M. 186, and Grant, 186.

PROVINCIAL.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge St. John, No. 70, and St. John's Lodge, No. 1247, met on 21st ult., at the Huyshe Masonic Temple, Plymouth, for the purpose of installing their respective Worshipful Masters for 1871—Bro. R. M. Andrews for Lodge 70, and Bro. R. P. Culley for Lodge 1247. The Installing Master was V.W. Bro. J. B. Gover, P.P.G., A.D.C., assisted by the P.M.'s present. At the close of the installation, the W. Bro. Andrews appointed the following brethren as the officers of Lodge 70 for the ensuing year:—W. Bro. L. D. Westcott, I.P.M.; V.W. Bro. I. Watts, P.M., P.P.G.T., Treas.; V.W. Bro. J. B. Gover, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C., Sec.; Bro. C. Knowsley, S.W.; J. Wainwright, J.W.; E. Crook, S.D.; C. Stribling, J.D.; H. Bowman, I.G.; W. H. Thomas, D.C.; H. B. Northcott, A.D.C.; W. F. Windcutt, Org.; R. Pengelley, S.S.; W. Harris, I.S.; T. Smith, Tyler.—The W. Bro. Culley appointed for Lodge 1247 the following: W. Bro. J. Bennett, I.P.M. and Treas.; W. Bro. J. B. Gover, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C., Sec.; Bro. P. Skelton, S.W.; J. H. Keats, J.W.; W. H. Browning, S.D.; W. F. Windcutt, J.D.; S. Davey, I.G.; C. H. Treherne, D.C.; J. P. Elliott, A.D.C.; G. Cassell, S.S.; J. R. Lord, J.S.; T. Smith, Tyler.—At six o'clock the brethren of Lodge St. John, No. 70, together with a number of visitors, dined at the Globe Hotel, when a sumptuous dinner was put on the table in Bro. Watt's usual good style. After dinner the various Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to, and the harmony was greatly enhanced by the really capital songs of several of the brethren. Bro. Windcutt presided at the pianoforte. During the evening the immediate Past Master, W. Bro. L. D. Westcott, was presented by the V.W. Bro. I. Watts, on behalf of the members of the lodge, with a very handsome Past Master's jewel, on his retiring from the chair of St. John's Lodge, No. 70, to mark their fraternal appreciation of his services therein. A strong muster of Prov. Grand Officers, in addition to the officers of the lodge and other brethren, were present.

SUNDERLAND.—St. John's Lodge, No. 80.—The regular meeting of this lodge for the installation of W.M. and appointment of officers for the ensuing twelve months was held at the new Masonic Hall, Park-terrace, Sunderland. Bro. R. Dixon, the retiring W.M., ably and impressively performed the ceremony of installation, and having duly placed his successor, Bro. Martin Weiner, in the chair of K.S., the newly-installed W.M. appointed and invested the following officers, viz.:—Bros. R. Dixon, I.P.M.; J. Wilson, S.W.; J. Davison, J.W.; T. Godfordson, Treasurer; R. Hodgson, Secretary; T. W. Graham, S.D.; J. Bell, J.D.; H. J. Turnbull, I.G.; A. Forrest, O.; J. Thompson, Tyler; R. Giesicke and Young, Stewards. The attendance of Past Masters, members, and visitors was unusually large, among the latter being the W.M.'s of the Phoenix, Palatine, Williamson, and St. Hilda (South Shields) Lodges; Bros. B. Levy, P.P.G.J.W.; W. H. Crookes, P.G.S.; M. Douglass, P.P.G.J.D.; P. G. Hoistendahl, P.G.P.; and several other present and past Provincial Grand Officers, and brethren from the other three lodges in the town and several distant lodges. The W.M. has presented to the lodge a new set of collars, with which he invested his officers, and has provided a piano for the refreshment room.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Lodge, No. 200.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 21st ult. in the lodge-room, Globe-street. Present: Bros. R. H. Peacock, W.M.; J. W. Woodall, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; W. F. Rooke, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; H. A. Williamson and Spurr, P.M.'s; W. Peacock, I.P.M.; S. H. Armitage, W.M. 1248; D. Fletcher, S.W.; G. H. Walshaw, J.W.; H. C. Martin, P.M., P.P.G.D. of C., Secretary; H. Grover, S.D.; H. McKinley, J.D.; W. Milner, I.G.; J. Ash, Tyler; and a very numerous attendance of brethren. The minutes were read and confirmed, and Bro. Thackeray, 734, was unanimously elected a joining member. One gentleman was initiated in due form, and two brethren were passed. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year then took place, when Bro. David Fletcher, S.W., was elected by a very large majority. Three guineas were voted in aid of a distressed brother, and five guineas to the widow of a late member of the lodge. The W.M. announced that the installation banquet would take place at the next regular meeting, and he hoped the officers and members of Lodge 1248 would attend as guests of the Old Globe on that occasion. Bro. Armitage, W.M. 1248, acknowledged the compliment in very fraternal and flattering language. One gentleman was proposed for initiation, and some private business transacted; after which the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren spent a very pleasant hour at the refreshment board.

IPSWICH.—St. Luke's Lodge, No. 225.—The usual meeting of this old established lodge was held in their lodge-room on the 14th ult. The business to be transacted was to ballot for and, if accepted, to initiate Mr. Castledine, of Bury St. Edmunds, to raise Bro. Ellis, and the installation of the W.M. for the ensuing year. Present: Bros. J. W. Robb, W.M.; G. S. Golding, S.W.; C. Byford, J.W.; P. Whitehead, P.M., Sec.; J. Clarke, P.M., Treas.; T. Prentice, S.D.; J. Talbot, J.D.; Skimmer, I.G.; Syer, Tyler; W. T. Westgate, D.C.; J. Richardson, Jos. Whitehead, C. Davy, Cade, S. B. King, Noble, and Turner, P.M.'s; W. Flory, Ellis, Ca. the line, Callaway, Cucklow, and a long array of visiting brethren. In the temporary absence of the W.M., the lodge was opened by Bro. W. T. Westgate, P.M. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and Bro. Castledine was regularly introduced and initiated by the W.M. (pro tem.), the charge being well rendered by Bro. Jos. Whitehead, P.M., and the working tools explained by Bro. W. T. Westgate, P.M. The W.M.-elect, Bro. G. S. Golding, was duly installed and saluted in the three degrees, and then appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. Byford, S.W.; Prentice, J.W.; Talbot, S.D.; Skimmer, J.D.; A. C. Barber, Sec. The W.M. had the pleasure of decorating Bro. Barber with a P.M. jewel, for his services as Secretary to the lodge. The Treasurer and Tyler having been previously elected were duly invested; Bro. W. T. Westgate undertook the duties of D.C., the I.G. being left open. Bro. Fisher, of Lodge Fidelity, 555, was proposed and seconded as a joining member, and the lodge was finally closed with solemn prayer. This was one of the largest meetings ever known in this lodge, nearly fifty being present; and this is to be in a measure accounted for by the popularity and high esteem in which the new Master is held in the Craft. The brethren then adjourned to a banquet (by invitation of the W.M.), served in Bro. C. Goddall's usual style, and reflecting credit upon all concerned in its preparation, when forty-five sat down. On the removal of the cloth, grace was said by the P.G. Chaplain, Bro. R. N. Sanderson. The W.M. then proposed the first toast of the evening, "The Sovereign of our Land and the Craft." National Anthem, by Bro. P. Whitehead. The "Sovereign of our Order, Earl de Grey and Ripon;" the "P.G. Masters," mentioning Earl of Zetland and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales; the "D.G. Master Earl of Carnarvon." Song by Bro. G. Abbott, "What nobler theme?" The "Prov. G.M., Col. Sir R. A. S. Adair." Song by Bro. Talbot, "The House may be." The "Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. E. J. Lockwood, and the Past and Present Prov. G. Officers," coupling with the toast Bro. Sherridan as present, and Dr. Pitcher as oldest Past officers. The toasts throughout the evening were most heartily received.—Bros. Sherridan and Pitcher returned thanks.—Song by Bro. P. Whitehead, "Sweet Mad line."—Bro. J. W. Robb, I.P.M., proposed in very eulogistic and happy terms, "The Health of the W.M. and prosperity to the St. Luke's Lodge," and hoped it might flourish under his guidance, and he be assisted by the united energies of his officers.—The Almoner of St. Luke's then passed round the column for contributions to the Fund of Benevolence, and a liberal collection was made. A vote during lodge for assistance for a distressed brother was taken and relief ordered.—Song by Bro. W. A. Smith, "Never mind the rest."—The W.M. responded to the toast of his health, and congratulated the lodge upon his witnessing so many and pleasing faces around him, and trusted that his zeal in the cause might, under the G.A.O.T.U., be blessed to his lodge, and no exertion on his part should be wanting to attain so desirable an end; and before resuming his seat he had great pleasure in calling upon the brethren of St. Luke's Lodge to join him in hearty welcome to the visitors, coupling the names of Bros. Sherridan, W.M. 516; W. A. Smith, W.M.-elect 376; P. Cornell, W.M. 114; and W. T. Westgate, W.M. 959; all of whom severally responded.—Song, by Bro. Jos. Whitehead, "So mote it be."—Bro. W. T. Westgate proposed "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. J. W. Robb," which was heartily responded to.—The W.M. then gave the E.A.'s, Bro. Castledine's, good health, enforcing the study of our noble Order in emphatic terms.—The "E. A. Song," by Bro. J. Richmond; song, by Bro. Sherridan, "The Old Irish Gentleman"; recitation, by Bro. T. C. Howitt, "Little Jim."—The W.M. then gave "The Health of the Officers of the Lodge," and trusted to their hearty co-operation in carrying out the duties incumbent upon them. The S.W., Bro. C. Byford, suitably acknowledged the toast in an appropriate speech.—Song, "The Men of Merrie England," by Bro. Castledine. In the absence of the Tyler, Bro. Syer, the Tyler's toast emanated from Bro. Westgate, and was received with the solemnity it deserves. Early hours were reached ere the brethren could force themselves away from a meeting so social and agreeable.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281.—The regular meeting of this old-established and prosperous lodge, for the celebration of the festival of St. John the Evangelist and installation of the W.M., was held on Thursday, the 29th ult., at the Masonic Rooms, Athenaeum, Lancaster. There were present Bros. John Hatch, W.M.; Edward Storey, I.P.M.; C. Hartley, S.W.; John Harrison, as J.W.; Edmund Simpson, P.M., Sec.; W. Heald, S.D.; W. Fleming, J.D.; W. Hall, I.G.; Watson and Beeley, Tylers; Bro. J. Daniel Moore, P.M., the W.M.-elect; Bros. N. G. Mercer, W.M. 1051; Kelland, P.M.; King, P.M.; E. Airey, J. Beesley, R. Bateson, J. Budd, W. Balfield, J. Dale, J. Dickenson, W. J. Sly, J. Stanley, J. Tilley, R. Taylor, &c. The lodge was opened, the minutes read and confirmed, and other business transacted. Bro. Edward Storey, I.P.M., proposed, and Bro. King, P.M., seconded a vote of thanks to the retiring W.M. for his active services during the past year, which was carried by acclamation. A F.C. lodge having been opened, the W.M.-elect, Bro. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.S. of W., was presented by Bro. Storey, I.P.M., to receive the benefit of installation. The qualifications were recited and regulations read and agreed to, when the ceremony was proceeded with, and in a Board of Installed Masters Bro. Moore was for the third time placed in the chair of K.S., the important duties of installing officer being ably and effectively rendered by the W.M., Bro. John Hatch. The regular proclamation, salutes, and greetings were then given, and the W.M. proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows:—W. Bro. John Hatch, I.P.M.; Bros. William Hall, S.W.; William Fleming, J.W.; Jas. Hatch, P.M., Treasurer; Edmund Simpson, P.M., Secretary; Edward Airey, S.D.; Wm. J. Sly, J.D.; John Harrison, I.G.; J. Watson, Tyler; R. Taylor and H. Sumner, Stewards. The charges were delivered to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren by the Installing Officer, and the W.M. commenced the duties of his year of office by delivering a short address on "The Tassels of the Lodge." The great attention paid and the unanimous vote of thanks awarded to the W.M. at the conclusion of his address, amply testified that it had been much appreciated by the brethren. After the lodge was closed the brethren adjourned, and to the number of about six-and-thirty, assembled at the hotel of Bro. Sly, where a banquet was provided worthy of the occasion. After the cloth was drawn the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, those to the health and prosperity of the W.M. and I.P.M. being especially received with enthusiasm.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Sincerity, No. 292.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, on the 12th ult. Present Bro. Thos. Wylie, P.M., P.G.R., as W.M., and the following officers: Bros. R. Wylie, P.M., P.G.D.C., as Sec.; Hamer, P.M., P.G. Treas., as S.W.; Wilson, J.W.; Hess, P.M., Treas.; Hestwick, J.D.; Evans, I.G.; Elliott, M.C., and a limited number of the brethren. Visitors, Bros. J. M. Johnson, M.D., P.M. 1051, P.G.S.; W. H. Gimmer, P.M. 155 and 216; J. McCrossan, 1313; and J. McKillop 292, S.C. Bro. Fletcher was duly raised, and Bro. Llewellyn passed. The two ceremonies being performed in that painstaking and correct manner for which the P.G. Registrar is well known, his labours being not a little lightened by the proficiency of his subordinates. The lodge then proceeded to elect its W.M. for the ensuing year, when the unanimous choice of the brethren was found to rest on their highly-esteemed S.W., Bro. Pelham, who, unfortunately was prevented by illness from receiving the deserved congratulations of his fellow-workers. There being no other business for consideration the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to partake of a splendid banquet at the Angel Hotel, where under the sway of their W.M., Bro. R. S. Williams, and with a largely increased company, a pleasant evening was spent.

LINCOLN.—Witham Lodge, No. 297.—The festival of St. John was celebrated by the brethren of the Witham Lodge. The following officers were installed and invested for the ensuing year:—Bros. Watkins, W.M.; R. J. Ward, S.W.; Scorer, J.W.; G. Cullen, S.D.; J. Bayles, J.D.; G. H. Shipley, M.C.; R. R. Dawber, jun., Treas.; G. Bacon, Sec.; Cotton, L.S.; C. Mann, Tyler. After the duties of the lodge had been performed, the brethren, about forty in number, dined at the Great Northern Hotel, the new W.M. in the chair. The lodge was stated to be in a most flourishing condition. The health of Bro. Carline, late W.M., was drunk with much enthusiasm, and in acknowledging the compliment he stated that during his year of office he had initiated nearly a score of new members. The dinner was served in first-rate style by Bro. Prickett, and a very agreeable evening was spent.

HELSTON.—True and Faithful Lodge, No. 318.—The brethren of this lodge held their annual celebration of St. John the Evangelist, and installation of Master. The W.M.-elect, Bro. J. Q. James, was duly installed by the W. Bro. T. Taylor, P.G.S.D., ably assisted by W. Bros. T. N. Curry, P.P.G.S., and T. Davey. The W.M. elected the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. R. H. Cross, S.W.; H. Trembath, J.W.; Rev. W. H. Bloxsome, S.D. and Chaplain; R. H. Cade, J.D.; T. Taylor, Treas.; W. K. Stephens, Sec.; P. G. Hill, O.; A. Tresise, P.G.R., D.C.; E. J. Ridingson, I.G.; Vicary and Jennings, Stewards; R. James, Tyler; W. Bro. T. N. Curry, Steward for Cornwall M. A. Fund. Bro. A. Grant, late of the Bodmin Lodge, was duly elected a member of 318. The business of the day being over, the brethren retired to the Angel Hotel, where they sat down, under the presidency of the W.M., to a most excellent spread, provided by Mrs. Bennetts.

NORTHAMPTON.—Pomfret Lodge, No. 360.—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held on Tuesday, the 27th ult., at the George Hotel, Northampton. Bro. Riley, P.M. 540, of Bedford, in an excellent manner installed Bro. J. V. Stanton, as the W.M. for the ensuing year. The officers were appointed and the lodge duly closed. The usual good banquet followed, the regular loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received, an agreeable evening was spent.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—A regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held in Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 15th ult., when about thirty members and visitors were present, including the Prov. G.M., the W.M., Bro. Buzzard, who presided, and all the officers except the I.P.M., Bro. Toller, who was unavoidably absent. The list of business included three raisings and three passings; only one half of the candidates however presented themselves. Bros. Thorpe and Wood were passed, and Bro. Wynne was raised to the degree of M.M. Some private business was brought forward, which, after some discussion, was resolved to be considered at an emergency meeting an hour before the next regular monthly meeting. The case of the widow and infant family of an Irish brother, recently deceased in the town, was brought forward by the W.M., and it was unanimously resolved to recommend it to the Board of Benevolence, and a petition was accordingly signed by the officers and members present. On the motion of the W.M., a committee was appointed to act with a similar committee of St. John's Lodge to make the necessary arrangements for the Masonic Ball, to be held on the 10th inst. There being no further business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

SOUTHEND.—Priory Lodge, No. 1000.—The usual monthly meeting of the members of this lodge recently, took place at the Middleton Hotel, and from the fact of Bro. S. J. Girling having notified his intention of presenting the lodge with a banner on this occasion, there was a larger number of brethren present than at any previous ordinary meeting. The W.M., Bro. B. Notley, R.A., took the chair, supported by his officers as follows:—Bros. Eham, S.W.; Wardell, J.W.; Wood, P.M., Treas.; Cox, I.P.M., Sec.; Rowley, P.M.; Phillips, D.C.; Barton, Org.; Hermann, S.D.; Lucking, J.D.; Glasscock, I.G. The lodge having been duly opened and the preliminary business transacted, Bro. John Whitfield was raised to the sublime degree of M.M. This done, the following gentlemen were balloted for, approved, and initiated in order:—Messrs. Joseph Naylor, Robert McGregor, Samuel W. Thompson, and Alfred James. The whole of the work was admirably performed. Bro. Girling then rose and performed the promise which he had made at the last meeting, by presenting the lodge with a very handsome banner, and, in the course of a speech which was listened to with breathless silence, said he had but one motive in doing so, which was to mark his high appreciation of the glorious principles of Freemasonry. He spoke at considerable length upon the pleasure he experienced on his admission to the lodge, the deep impression which had been left on his mind by the moral principles contained in the solemn ceremonies of Masonry, and the brotherly love evinced towards him by every member of the lodge since his initiation. He felt highly pleased to see the love and harmony ever the predominant feeling prevailing in the lodge, and trusted that nothing would ever arise to disturb the excellent feeling which existed now, but that it would continue to endure for many years to come. In concluding his speech he unfurled the banner, and handed it to the W.M. amid the acclamations of the brethren.—The banner is a magnificent one, manufactured in a manner creditable to the establishment of Bro. Geo. Kenning, of Little Britain, from a design of Bro. Girling's, whose exquisite taste is proverbial. By desire of the W.M., Bro. Wood, P.M., father of the lodge, thanked Bro. Girling in a manner worthy of the members of the Priory Lodge. Bros. Eltham and Frost regretted having to defer the presentation of a carpet in consequence of the manufacturer failing to fulfil his engagement, but hoped to do so at the next meeting. Five gentlemen calculated to maintain the prestige and prosperity of the lodge, were proposed by Bro. Girling as candidates for Freemasonry. No year has been crowned with greater success than that which has just closed under the rule of Bro. Notley, W.M., and seldom can be witnessed more harmonious working than that which has characterised the Priory Lodge during his Mastership. The brethren subsequently adjourned to refreshment, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, interspersed with some excellent vocal and instrumental music, under the able presidency of Bro. Barton Organist to the lodge.

SALFORD.—Richmond Lodge, No. 1011.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Spread Eagle, Salford, on Thursday, the 15th ult. In the absence of the W.M., Bro. Caldwell, P.M., took the chair. Present: Bros. J. Wallis, S.W.; M. Fenton, J.W.; T. Preston, S.D.; John Ellis, J.D.; Richard Johnson, I.G., and others. The lodge was duly opened and the minutes of last lodge read and confirmed. The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren and friends, about 100, held their annual soiree and ball.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge, No. 1051.—The regular meeting of this lodge for the celebration of the festival of St John the Evangelist and the installation of W.M. was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenaeum, on the 23rd ult. Present: Bros. W. Hall, W.M.; Moore, as I.P.M.; N. G. Mercer, S.W.; John Hatch, W.M. 281, as J.W.; W. Barker, Treasurer; E. Simpson, P.M. 281; Stanton, P.M. 281; Tilley, Conlan, J. Storey, R. Taylor, and J. Watson. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and other business transacted. Bro. Moore having been called to the chair as installing officer, Bro. Neil Gray Mercer, M.D., the W.M.-elect, was presented by Bros. Hall, W.M., and E. Simpson, P.M., 281, to receive the benefit of installation, the better to qualify him for the discharge of the duties of his important trust. The qualification having been assented to, and the ancient charges read and agreed to by the W.M.-elect, the ceremony was proceeded with, and in a Board of Installed Masters Bro. Mercer was duly installed into the chair of the Rowley Lodge according to ancient custom. The new W.M. was saluted and proclaimed in the various degrees, and appointed and invested his officers, viz., W. Bro. Hall, I.P.M.; Bros. Rev. A. Wright, S.W.; Wilson Barker, J.W. and Treas.; Dr. Moore, P.M., Sec.; W. J. Sly, S.D.; C. E. Dodson, J.D.; Taylor, Tyler. The charges were then given, those to the Wardens and brethren being delivered by Bro. John Hatch, and the lodge was closed.

ABERYSTWTH.—Aberystwith Lodge, No. 1072.—The installation meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Aberystwith, on the 5th ult. There was a goodly muster of the brethren, and the lodge was opened in due form and with solemn prayer by the W.M., Bro. E. L. Cole. There were also present Bros. C. Rice M.D., S.W.; J. W. Szlumper, C.E., J.W.; Major J. A. Lloyd Philipps, Prov. G.S.W., P.M.; G. T. Smith, Prov. G. Sec., I.P.M.; J. Vaughan, P.P.G. Supt. Wks., Treas.; E. Hamer, Sec.; W. Williams, S.D.; R. J. Jones, J.D.; Inglis Bervon, Org.; J. P. Jones, I.G., and about thirty other members of the lodge. The R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Sir Pryse Pryse, Bart., was, in consequence of an accident he unfortunately received whilst hunting, unable to be present. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. returned thanks for the confidence and support the brethren had shown him during his year of office. He then vacated the chair, which was taken by Bro. G. T. Smith, Prov. G. Secretary, the installing officer, who opened the lodge in the second degree, and the W.M.-elect, Bro. C. Rice-Williams, S.W., was presented by Bro. Major J. A. Lloyd Philipps, P.M., P.G.S.W., and installed by Bro. Smith. The officers were then invested as follows: Bros. E. L. Cole, I.P.M.; J. W. Szlumper, S.W.; W. Williams, J.W.; J. Vaughan, Treasurer; E. Hamer, Sec.; R. J. Jones, S.D.; J. P. Jones, J.D.; Inglis Bervon, Org.; Geo. Causwell, D.C.; Morris Jones, I.G.; E. V. Rees, Tyler. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to a splendid banquet provided by Bro. Pell.

FOREIGN.

TURKEY.—Bro. J. Laffan Hanly, late S.W., has been elected W.M. of the Oriental Lodge, No. 637, for the ensuing year, and Bro. Henry Woods, (Lieut. R.N.), late J.W., has been elected W.M. of the Balwer Lodge, No. 391. Both lodges are in a flourishing condition, and are constantly receiving accessions. The Oriental has recently initiated several Turkish functionaries of rank. Freemasonry is spreading to such an extent among the Musselmans of the capital, that the institution of a Turkish lodge under the English Constitution has been talked of for some time.

INSTRUCTION.

The Lewis Lodge of Instruction.—Associated with the Lewis Lodge, No. 1155, meeting at Bro. Jones's, the Nightingale Tavern, Wood Green, of which Bro. Binckes (Sec. of the Boys' School), and the late respected Bro. Udall were firm supporters, the W.M., Wardens and brethren have established, under the warrant and permission of the parent lodge, a Lodge of Instruction where a correct knowledge of the mystic arts and ceremonies can be obtained, and is imparted to every brother desirous to learn, with a willingness to oblige characteristic of the Craft. The meetings are held every third Saturday in the month. And the rules and all particulars can be freely obtained of the courteous Secretary, Bro. Alfred Rees.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Carnarvon Lodge, No. 7.—A meeting was held at Freemasons' Tavern on the 8th December. Present: Bros. the Rev. W. T. Jones, W.M.; Earl of Limerick, G.S.W., as S.W.; Conrad Dumas, J.W.; F. Binckes, Grand Secretary, M.O.; Captain J. King, G.M.O., as S.O.; Geo. Cockle, J.O.; R. J. Mure, S.D.; Stephen C. Dibdin, P.G.O., Sec., as D.C. and I.G.; and Rev. Dr. Sedgwick. Bro. Captain C. J. Burgess having been duly balloted for and elected, was introduced and advanced to the degree of Mark Master. A ballot was then taken for the election, as a joining member, of Bro. Lord Lindsay, a Mark Master under the Scotch Constitution, and found to be unanimous in his favour. A ballot was also taken for the election, as a joining member, of Colonel Burdett, P.G.M. of Middlesex, a Mark Master under the Irish Constitution, which also proved unanimous in his favour. A resolution as to the date of the next meeting, the fourth Thursday in February next, having been put and carried, the lodge was adjourned accordingly.

PROVINCIAL.

LANCASHIRE.—St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 22, S.C.—The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held on the 13th ult. at the Freemason's Hall, Cooper-street, Manchester. The lodge was opened by the R.W.M., Bro. C. F. Matier, 30°, D. Prov. G.M.M.; assisted by his officers, Bros. W. Wayne, S.W.; J. A. Whyatt, J.W.; Turner, M.O.; Parr, S.O.; Hopkins, J.O.; and a large number number of visitors and brethren, including Bros. T. Entwisle, 18°, Prov. G.M.M., S.C.; Brockbank, 18°, Prov. G.S.W.; Edward Friend, P.G.T.K.; J. L. Hine, P.G.S.O., E.C.; John Tunnah, P.G.J.O., E.C.; John Yarker, N.P.U., P.M.; Josiah W. Taylor, P.G. Sec., S.C.; and many others too numerous to mention. Letters of apology were read from Bros. the Earl of Rosslyn, Earl Percy, L. Mackersy, G.S.E. Scotland; F. Binckes, G.S. England; Wm. Romaine Callender, jun., P.G.M., E.C.; J. M. Wike, P.G.J.W.; &c. Several candidates were then balloted for and duly elected. Bro. Ingram being in attendance was passed as Mark Man, and afterwards advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master by the R.W.M., Bro. Matier, who also presented him with the working tools, and addressed him with the congratulatory charge. At this stage of the proceedings, the P.G.M.M. was announced, and on entering was saluted according to his rank. Bro. Matier then briefly addressed the brethren, and gave a short retrospect of the progress of the lodge from the foundation—during the two years he had presided over them. He alluded to the prosperity that had attended them, the very favourable report of the Treasurer, and the large number of brethren that had been advanced; and trusted for a still further increase under the R.W.M.-elect. The R.W. Prov. G.M.M. then presented Bro. Wayne, S.W., Prov. G.R. of M., and R.W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation. After the usual preliminaries, all brethren below the chair were requested to retire, and a Board of Installed Mark Masters was formed. Bro. Wayne was then obligated and installed in the chair of Adoniram with the customary solemnities, and invested the D. Prov. G. M.M., Bro. Matier, as his I.P.M. On the brethren being readmitted, the following officers were appointed and invested:—Bros. J. Adam Whyatt, as S.W.; W. George Turner, J.W.; James Parr, jun., M.O.; W. H. Hopkins, S.O.; John Parker, J.O.; Rev. E. A. Lang, Chaplain; J. Gibb Smith, Treas.; W. H. Pratt, Sec.; J. W. Allison, Rec. of M.; H. T. Robberds, D. of C.; S. J. Phillipson, S.D.; Joseph Gilman, J.D.; J. Dabell, T.K.; Wm. Dean, elected Tyler. The appropriate addresses to each, and the concluding charges to the R.W.M., officers, and brethren, were given by Bro. Matier. Heartly good wishes were then given by the representatives of the sister lodges, and the routine business being over, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer. After the banquet, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, Bro. Matier responding for the S.G.R.A.C. of Scotland, and Bro. Entwisle for the Prov. Grand Lodge. The toast of the newly-installed R.W.M. was heartily received by the brethren, and Bro. Wayne, in responding, assured them of his earnest desire to do all in his power for the good of Mark Masonry in general and the St. Andrew's Lodge in particular. He then asked them to charge their glasses for the next toast, "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. Matier, D. Prov. G. M.M.," to whose Masonic attainments he alluded in highly flattering terms, particularizing the excellence of Bro. Matier's working, both in the ceremony of advancement and of installation, and the many services he had rendered to the St. Andrew's Lodge, and to the Mark Masters of the province. The toast was received by the brethren with loud and continued cheering, which was repeated on Bro. Matier's rising to respond. He thanked the brethren for the great kindness with which they had supported him during his term of office, and assured them of the great pleasure with which he would always come among them. He trusted his name would be long handed down as the first of a long and honoured roll of Mark Masters, and in that capacity, though forgotten in all others, be ever preserved in the St. Andrew's Lodge. The health of the visitors was replied to by Bro. G. P. Brockbank, Prov. G.S.W., a member of St. Mark's, No. 1; Bro. J. W. Taylor, Prov. G. Sec., No. 2; Bro. Edward Friend, No. 5; Bro. J. L. Hine, Prov. G.S.O., E.C., Union Lodge; Bro. John Tunnah, Prov. G.J.O., E.C.; and Bro. John Yarker, P.M. of several "time immemorial" lodges. The brethren separated at an early hour, well pleased with their reunion, which was enlivened by songs from Bros. Robberds, Taylor, Whyatt ("Green Leaves"), and Parker.

SOUTHAMPTON.—St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 63.—The annual installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Bugle-street, Southampton, for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect (Bro. H. Abraham). A goodly number of brethren were present, including Bros. J. R. Stebbing, Grand Treasurer of Grand Lodge of Mark Masons, and Shepherd, from Winchester, who attended purposely to conduct the ceremony of installing the new Master. The lodge was opened in due form, and a ballot taken for four brethren for advancement, which proved unanimous. Bros. G. Cross, 359, and E. H. Wilkins, 120, being in attendance, were duly advanced to the degree of Mark Master Masons, and received their due. The brethren below the degree of Installed Masters having retired from the lodge, Bro. Shepherd, in a most impressive manner duly installed Bro. Henry Abraham as W.M. for the ensuing year. The brethren having been readmitted, they saluted the W.M. in due form, and he then appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. J. R. Stebbing, I.P.M., W. Hickman, S.W.; T. P. Payne (Mayor of Southampton), J.W.; H. Coles, M.O.; W. Waters, S.O.; J. Lemon, J.O.; J. E. Le Feuvre, Reg. of M.; A. Coles, Sec., Montague Haynes, S.D.; A. Miller, J.D.; Stroud, I.G.; Bemister, D.C.; Biggs, Tyler. After transacting the ordinary business, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment. A capital banquet was done justice to, and the brethren separated in harmony.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

METROPOLITAN.

St. Andrew's Conclave, No. 15.—The first anniversary assembly of this conclave since its establishment in London, was held on 17th ult., at Masons' Hall Tavern, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street. The M.P.S., V.E. Sir Knt. Raynham W. Stewart, G. Inspec. of Regalia, presided, and was supported by Sir Knts. R. Kenyon, Viceroy; F. Binckes, G.D.; W. Jones, J.G.; S. Rosenthal, H.P.; W. H. Hubbard, Rec.; W. Roebuck, Prefect; D. M. Dewar, as Herald; Col. F. Burdett, 7.P., G.S.G.; R. Wentworth Little, G.R.; Capt. H. Lyon Campbell, M.P.S. 11, Gibraltar; F. H. Gottlieb, 7.P., Intendant General Eastern Archipelago; W. J. U. Copeman, II. M. Hunt, W. Scott, J.G.; Marsh, G.A.; J. Tanner, &c. After the confirmation of the minutes, Bros. Chas. Sanders, M.D., and W. B. Johnston were installed as Knights of the Order. The ceremony of enthroning Sir Knt. Kenyon, as M.P.S., was then performed by the G. Recorder, who afterwards admitted Sir Knt. Binckes to the Priestly Order, and placed him in the chair of Viceroy. The officers were then appointed in rotation, and the following resolution, proposed by Sir Knt. Raynham W. Stewart, P. Sov., was carried unanimously, "That in future, in consequence of being called the St. Andrew's, the enthronement of the Sovereign shall take place on St. Andrew's Day, namely, on the 30th November." The Conclave was closed, and the Knights retired to the refectory, where a bountiful repast was served. During the evening Sir Knt. Stewart presented a charity box, which was duly sent round and a handsome sum realised, as the worthy Past Sovereign announced his intention to represent the conclave at the next festival of the Girls' School.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA.—The Holy Cross Conclave.—A preliminary meeting for establishing in Calcutta the Holy Cross Conclave of Knights of the Imperial, Ecclesiastical and Military Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, was held at the rooms, 5, Waterloo-street, on the evening of Friday, the 23rd of November last, when the Acting Inspector-General for Bengal, Eminent Sir Knt. William Osmond Allender, under dispensation and by authority from the Grand Imperial Council of the Order in England, assisted by Em. Sir Knt. J. L. Taylor, Past Honorary Sovereign of the St. Helena Conclave, created and installed the following Sir Knights, viz.: W. F. Westfield, J. R. Alexander D'Cruz, O. B. Andrews, A. B. Mitchell, D. McGregor, J. P. Hubbard, R. Hendry, Adolph Friedemann, Whitmore Girling, W. A. Holton and George Lambert. At the conclusion of the ceremony, a petition to the Grand Imperial Council of England, praying for a Charter of Constitution was signed. By votes unanimously declared by the Sir Knights present, E. Sir Knt. Isaiah Lawrence Taylor was elected as Sovereign, and E. Sir Knt. William Francis Westfield, as the Viceroy to the Conclave for the ensuing year, and who were respectively placed in their chairs by E. Sir Knt. Allender. The following appointments were then made:—Sir Knts. J. R. Alex. D'Cruz, Recorder; W. A. Holton, Treas.; O. B. Andrews, Senior General; A. B. Mitchell, Junior General; D. McGregor, Prefect; A. Friedemann, Herald; Whitmore Girling, Standard-Bearer. After recording a vote of thanks to Sir Knt. Allender for the interest he had taken in the introduction of the Order in Calcutta, the Sir Knights closed this meeting.

KNIGHTS' TEMPLAR.

Mount Calvary or Early Grand Encampment of England.—A meeting of this old Encampment was held on Thursday, the 8th ult., at Freemasons' Hall, when Sir Knts. J. G. Chancellor, E.C.; F. Binckes, P.E.C.; W. Stone, E.C.-elect; S. Rosenthal, 2nd Capt.; D. M. Dewar, Prelate; W. Paas, Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, as Capt. of Lines, were present amongst others. Comp. Charles Webster Wilnot was installed as a Knight Templar, the ceremony being ably rendered by Sir Knt. Binckes, after which a Priory of the Order of Malta was opened, when Sir Knts. Little and Wilnot were readmitted and received as Knights of that venerable Order. The Priory and Encampment having been closed, the fratres separated.

MASONIC ORDERS in ENGLAND.

AT the commencement of a new year it may not be amiss to look around us, and consider for a moment the actual position and future prospects of Freemasonry in England. There cannot be a doubt that the Order never was so powerful as it is at present, and we do not allude to mere numbers, but to the influence which it exercises over a vast array of intelligent men. We are also inclined to believe that a larger per-centage of really desirable candidates have of late years been added to the muster-roll of the Craft. We have literary lodges, like the "Urban," holden at that quaint old hostelry, the Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate; and we have musical lodges, like that of the "Asaph," where brethren of eminence in the inspiring art of which St. Cecilia is the tutelary deity, are enabled to conduct the ceremonies of Freemasonry with great ability and success. Again, the martial element is represented by the "Fitzroy" and the "Macdonald;" while those who plough the ocean waves are found in the "Merchant Navy" and other maritime lodges at the East end. Congenial fellowship—a great desideratum in life—is therefore attainable by men of the most varied habits and pursuits, and it is, we are satisfied, a very wise and graceful policy to encourage the formation of lodges for all sections of the community, especially for the professional classes, who are in general animated by a commendable esprit de corps. It is estimated that about eight thousand initiates swell the ranks of English Masonry every year, and this rate of increase is likely to continue, provided no calamity, such as war, should intervene. Fifty new lodges are also annually added to the Grand Lodge roll, and these, of course, in due time augment materially the numerical strength of the Fraternity. Royal Arch Masonry, as we took occasion to remark some time ago, is also in a very flourishing condition, and its adherents are rapidly increasing, the number of new chapters granted each year averaging fifteen. The sum total of Craft lodges actually working and in good order is 1250, and the Royal Arch Chapters number 380.

We now come to what are termed the unrecognised degrees, and during the past year we find that the "Mark" Degree has outstripped all its competitors, and is now second only to the Craft and Royal Arch Masonry in prestige and importance. This is mainly due to the untiring energy of the Most Worshipful Bro. Portal, whose career as Grand Mark Master has been an uninterrupted series of successes. Not that we ignore the valued services of the distinguished brethren who preceded him in his high office—on the contrary, each and all have afforded him the most loyal and cordial support—but the fact cannot be gainsaid that with the zeal of an apostle, Bro. Portal combines those rare faculties of mind which at once attest a man's claim to rule and direct his fellows. The Mark Grand Lodge has now about 120 lodges under its jurisdiction, and its constituents are to be found in nearly all the foreign and colonial possessions of England. We are also glad to state that, with a wise prevision, it has been arranged that all the allied or kindred degrees, such as the Most Excellent Masters and the Royal Ark Mariners, shall be worked under the authority of the Mark Grand Lodge, and by the adoption of this course the multiplication of supreme Masonic bodies has been very properly prevented.

The Order of the Temple comes next to the Mark in strength, numbering as it does about 110 encampments. The Knights Templar do not, however, increase very rapidly, but as their executive department is extremely well managed, we may fairly anticipate that they will hold their own for a long time to come amongst the various branches of the Masonic Brotherhood.

The Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, although, as a revived body, the youngest of the Masonic organisations in England, has already outstripped the Ancient and Accepted Rite in the number of subordinate conclaves on its roll, which can now boast of no less than 40. This result may also, as we stated of the Mark Degree, be attributed to the great zeal and activity shown by the leading members of the Order, who have never wavered in their determination to set its claims and merits fairly before the Craft. The Red Cross Order likewise possesses the great advantage of having at its head a young and popular nobleman like Lord Bective, lately and better known as Lord Kenlis, aided as he has been by such good Masons as Sir Frederick M. Williams, Colonel Burdett, and John Hervey. Under their auspices the Order cannot fail to flourish, and it bids fair to assume a very high position in the estimation of the Masonic world.

The Rite of Misraim has been recently annexed to the Red Cross Order, chiefly, as we are informed, to prevent its establishment as an independent jurisdiction, an idea which it seems was seriously entertained by a well-known metropolitan brother. The last great Masonic power is the Ancient and Accepted Rite, and this branch of Masonry has also made some progress during the past year, the number of Rose Croix Chapters working under the Supreme Council being now 34. Of the primary degrees of this Rite we have already spoken in THE FREEMASON, and intend continuing our remarks upon the higher grades at a suitable opportunity. We shall also glance at the peculiar mode of government which prevails in the Rite, and compare it with the systems which obtain in other Masonic bodies.

Having thus hastily surveyed the position of the various Orders which are allied to the English Craft, we may next enquire whether the growth and extension of "fancy" degrees, as they are sometimes termed, are really matters for congratulation. Many brethren, we know, will at once answer in the negative, and contend that nothing but Masonry pure and undefiled should be cultivated. It is, however, well to bear in mind that without these degrees many estimable Masons would be entirely lost to the Order, and if such men take an interest in the ceremonies of the high grades, their opinions upon the subject are entitled to respect. We cannot ignore the evident truth, that if brethren desire to enter those branches of the mystic art, they will not be deterred by dogmatic assertions of the superiority of Blue Masonry. Even in republican America they have quite as many Masonic organisations as we have at present in England. A Grand Lodge, a Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masonry, a Council of Royal and Select Masters, a Grand Encampment of Knights Templar, and Council of the 33°, all flourish in the States. Let every man exercise his own judgment, and provided the paramount claims of the Craft are not neglected, we are quite prepared to say that he may join all the Knightly or Sovereign Orders in existence. But the duties inculcated in the "Three Degrees" are in reality the foundation and glory of Freemasonry, and the principles which should guide our conduct through life must ever be those taught at our initiation—"Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth."

THE DATE OF SPECULATIVE MASONRY.

At page 685, Bro. C. G. Forsyth has the following passage:—"But it appears that Speculative Masonry—to which alone 'Freemasonry' is now applied—was scarcely known before the time of Sir Christopher Wren, and that it was engrafted upon Operative Masonry," &c. Will Bro. Forsyth kindly say whether this alludes to the period of Wren's birth (1632), or his death (1723), and how it so appears?

LUPUS.

ALFRED NUTT'S CANDIDATURE.

I am very glad to notice the advertisement in THE FREEMASON of to-day respecting the above, as his case has only to be generally known to secure election. In fact, I am persuaded that, were the Craft brought acquainted with all the circumstances of the case, the late respected Bro. John Nutt's son would be an inmate of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys from the April election. The father was a contributor to the Craft—a generous supporter, in fact—for upwards of twenty years, I believe; and it was only through misfortune—and that entirely unavoidable and unforeseen—that his decease left a widow and five children totally unprovided for. The little son of the afflicted widow has already received 579 votes in his favour, and though I do not wish to prevent any other candidate being successful, I do say that few, if any, have greater claims on the subscribers for election than has Alfred Nutt. The support of Bro. William Kelly, Prov. G.M. Leicestershire and Rutland, ought to ensure a satisfactory result—the province, however, is small, and hence appeals to the Craft.

MASONIC MSS.

At page 657 "A Masonic Student" says:—"I am, I confess, much astonished to see that Bro. Buchan again ventures to fix the date of the 'Halliwell MS.' at 1500. If there is one point more clear than another, it is that that MS. belongs to the close of the 14th century—from 1370 to 1400." Now, there are two mistakes here. First, I did not say "at 1500," for, as per page 642, I said, "between 1400 and 1500, or near 1500;" and second, I consider that it is not "clear" that this "Halliwell MS." is between "1370 to 1400," for Mr. Bond, keeper of the MSS. British Museum, informed me that it was "of the middle of the 15th century." And Dr. Kloss also places it in the fifteenth century. So that I fear "A Masonic Student" is wrong upon this point, as I greatly fear he also is upon several others.

I shall give some remarks upon Masonic MSS. in a week or two, if spared to do so.

W. P. BUCHAN.

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE AND A GOTHIC CATHEDRAL.

At page 653, first column, a remark is made upon this subject. Now at page 451 of The Building News, of 16th inst., it is stated that a Roman basilica exists at Trèves, and "in it we have the type after which the earliest Christian churches were built; and, indeed, it was simply by modifications of, and improvements upon, these basilica that the mediæval architects arrived at their noble cathedrals. W. P. B.

HEBREW POETRY.

It is worthy of remark that Hebrew poetry, notwithstanding its grandeur and the lofty tone of exaltation to which it is often elevated, by the charm of music scarcely ever loses the restraints of measure, as does the poetry of India. Devoted to the pure contemplation of the Divinity, it remains clear and simple in the midst of the most figurative forms of expression, delighting in comparisons which recur with almost rhythmical regularity. The poetical literature of the Hebrews is not deficient in variety of form; for while Hebrew poetry breathes a tone of warlike enthusiasm from Joshua to Samuel, the little book of the gleaner, Ruth, presents us with a charming and exquisitely simple picture of Nature. Goethe speaks of it as "the loveliest specimen of epic and ideal poetry which we possess."—Humboldt.

The Statute of Labourers, 25 Edw. III., stat. i., cap. iii., enacts as follows:—

"Item qe carpenters masons teglers & autres coverours des mesons ne preignent le jour pur leur overeygne forsque en manere come ils soloient cest assaver mestre carpenter iii d. & autre ii d. mestre mason de franche peer iv d. & autre mason iii d. & leur servantz i d. ob. teguler iii d. & son garceon i d. ob. & autre coverour de ros & estreyin iii d. & son garceon i d. ob."

Does not the above designation "Master Mason of Free Stone" solve the question as to the derivation of the prefix "Free" in "Free Mason"?

AFTER-DINNER ORATIONS.

By W. H. P.

The second great consideration was to conciliate the brethren owing allegiance to Scotland, so as to induce them readily to join the ranks of the Grand Mark Lodge, when the time arrived that Scotland surrendered her authority over them. This was also done mainly by the untiring and self-sacrificing zeal of one to whom this Grand Mark Lodge owe a deep and lasting debt of gratitude—Bro. Frederick Binckes, who is thoroughly appreciated and liked in Lancashire.

A great deal is also due to the gentlemanly courtesy shown on all occasions by the English Provincial G.M.M., Bro. W. R. Callender, jun., S.G.D. England.

Although many of us believe that an obligation willingly entered into is binding until a release is given, still several of the brethren (Scottish) attended the Provincial G.M. Lodge held at Manchester, for the purpose of showing their respect to Bro. Callender.

We are informed, their presence was acknowledged most gracefully by that brother, and sincere and hearty aspirations for union prevailed. This is what Bro. Portal is pleased to call "the great raid on Scottish Mark Masonry," surely a term more applicable to the Border Warfare of our semi-civilised forefathers than to a friendly re-union of brethren bound by one common tie, and having one common purpose.

He says, "We showed the Scottish Mark Masters conclusively how hopeless it was to think they could hold their ground in Lancashire." Well, it may be so; we have held our ground for a good many years now, and were quite content to go on in our Philistine indifference to the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, which we can remember was for some time called the "Bon Accord Lodge," exalted on a pedestal of its own manufacture.

We held our ground in Lancashire when the St. John's Lodge of Bolton had candidates from far and near, having advanced among others the English Prov. G.M.M., the D. Prov. G.M.M., the Prov. S.W., the Prov. G.M.O. and J.O., the Prov. G.S.D. and J.D. There was no lodge then holding from the self-exalted Bon Accord. Certainly several autonomous lodges were in existence; some still survive the infliction of the London Body on the degree, some have been absorbed.

Our organisation in Lancashire is complete, we increase in strength and numbers daily, and we only wish to be let alone. Our wants are few, our income is sufficient, but we have none to spare for London men and mendicants.

Bro. Portal tells us the "raid of Lancashire," or to be locally correct, so as to enable the historians of the future to chronicle this hostile advance, the "raid" of Manchester, was the great inducement for the Supreme Chapter of Scotland to "come to terms."

The rev. brother must surely be speaking off his book; the conference was agreed to before even the Provincial Grand Mark Master was appointed, but the Supreme Chapter has not yet come to terms, nay perhaps never will. I fear Bro. Portal has been trying to induce his no doubt sympathetic audience

To swallow gudgeons ere they're caught,
And count their chickens ere they're hatched.

It is no means certain, even were the Supreme Chapter of Scotland to throw us over (which we do not anticipate) that we should hand in our allegiance to the Body over which Bro. Portal presides. It would then become a question for us as to whether we would not rather preserve our autonomy, than be merged into the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters. In such case we should establish ourselves as the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters for England North of the Trent.

We do not wish to be forced into this procedure, but we certainly shall not hesitate to accept the gage of battle, which, by his ill-timed speech the Grand Mark Master has thrown at our feet.

For the sake of that love and harmony which theoretically always characterises Freemasons, we are willing to be coerced only by love, to be ruled over only by gentle treatment and delicate handling, and to submit to authority when declared constitutional, if we are treated as brethren, estranged if you will, but not hostile.

Bro. Portal cannot do better than follow the advice old Isaac Walton gives the angler, "Put the worm on the hook tenderly, and as if you loved him;" and we sincerely trust that in his next oration, whether delivered before or after dinner, he will not try to evoke that malevolent spirit of discord and antagonism which can so easily be stirred up by an insult or a slight.

We desire peace and concord, but we are equal to either fortune.

We beg to acknowledge the reports of lodges 9, 172, 188, and 192, London; 303, Teignmouth; 315, Brighton; 581, Ardwick; 995, Ulverstone; 1045, Altrincham; also several Scotch lodge reports, and other news, which will appear next week.

The audit meeting of the Domestic Lodge, No. 177, was held on Friday evening, the 23rd of December, at Anderton's Hotel, when there were present: Bros. Foulger, W.M.; Walford, W.M. elect; J. Smith, G.P.P., Treas.; H. Thompson, M. Haydon, Brett, F. Smith, and Tanner, P.M.'s; Ferguson, J.W.; Kent, J.D. The auditors present were: Bros. R. Montagu, Kent, Ferguson, Hancock, and Charles E. Thompson, S.W. 1158, besides one or two other brethren. After the accounts had been carefully audited, it was found that there was a balance to the credit of the lodge. The manner in which the accounts and books had been kept reflected the highest credit upon Bro. Tanner, the Secretary. The business being concluded, the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and a pleasant evening was spent.

ANCIENT & PRIMITITE RITE OF MISRAIM.

As we intimated last week, the Bective Sanctuary of Levites was inaugurated on the 28th ult., by three Conservators-General of the Rite, viz., the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, Sigismund Rosenthal, and R. Wentworth Little. In the unavoidable absence of Colonel Francis Burdett, Dep. Sov. Grand Master, and Regent ad interim, who was unfortunately confined to his bed by a bronchial attack, the chair of H.P. was filled by Bro. Little, and Major E. Hamilton Finney was duly received as a Conservator General. The admission of brethren as Levites then followed, and we regret that we have not a complete list of the names, but in consequence of the very large attendance at the meeting, a considerable number of those present were unable to sign the sheets provided for that purpose, besides which one sheet is missing. However, amongst those obligated we noticed as representatives of the Premier Conclave of the Red Cross Order, Bros. W. H. Hubbard, H. Parker, G. Kenning, H. C. Levander, M.A.; G. Powell, H. G. Buss, T. Cubitt, J. Taylor, M. Edwards, T. B. Yeoman, G. A. Taylor, E. Sillifant, A. J. Codner, A. B. Donnithorne, J. G. Marsh, J. Coutts, J. W. Barrett, J. T. Moss and W. Dodd; of the Plantagenet Conclave, No. 2, J. Boyd, J. Brett, C. Hammerton, J. L. Thomas, E. H. Thiellay, D. R. Still and C. P. Ward, M.D.; of the Rose and Lily Conclave, No. 3, J. Terry, W. Mann, D. D. Beck, and J. Gilbert; of the Roman Eagle Conclave, No. 6, J. Weaver, T. L. Fox, W. Carpenter, A. A. Pendlebury, W. C. Lucey, M.D., W. W. Anderson, C. P. Haigh, S. G. Foxall, W. F. N. Quilty, J. R. Foulger, W. B. Hamblly and D. R. Adams; of the Villiers Conclave, No. 9, F. Walters, T. Smale, H. Allman and E. Clark; of the Mediterranean Conclave, No. 1, Captain H. Lyon Campbell, 74th Highlanders; of the St. Andrew's Conclave, No. 15, J. Tanner, F. H. Gottlieb, J.P., W. Scott, Raynham W. Stewart, R. Kenyon, D. M. Dewar, W. J. U. Copeman, W. Roebuck, H. W. Hunt, W. Jones and W. B. Johnston; of the St. George's Conclave, No. 18, H. Thompson and E. Shaughnessy; and also Major E. H. Finney, E. H. Finney, jun., T. W. White, D. C. M. Gordon, W. Smeed and T. Lancaster, who are not members of the Red Cross Order. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the H.P. announced that with the sanction of the Earl of Bective, Grand Sovereign, the Rite would be attached to the Red Cross Order, and that his lordship had accepted the post of Sovereign Grand Master, with Col. Burdett as Deputy and Regent pro tem. It was also announced that the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick would be Senior Grand Superintendent, and another eminent brother, Junior; while letters of adhesion had been received from more than fifty noblemen and other brethren, who also expressed great regret for their inability to attend the inauguration of the Bective Sanctuary. The election of six brethren for the 66°, the next grade worked, was then proceeded with, when the choice of the brethren fell upon Bros. J. Brett, Donald C. M. Gordon, J. Lewis Thomas, John Boyd, George Kenning and Raynham W. Stewart. The alms having been collected, the Sanctuary was closed in solemn form, and between thirty and forty brethren adjourned to supper, and a pleasant evening was spent. The toasts given were, "The Queen and the Order," "The Earl of Bective, Sov. Grand Master-nominate," "Col. Burdett, Regent, with better health to him,"

"The Earl of Limerick and the Supreme Council-General," for which S. Bros. Rosenthal, 90°, and Major Finney, 90°, ably responded; "The elected Members of the 66°," for which Bros. Boyd and Kenning returned thanks. W. Bro. Carpenter, 33°, in his usual felicitous style, proposed "The health of S. Bro. Little, 90°," which was exceedingly well received, and briefly responded to, after which the evening's proceedings terminated.

It may be as well to state, that in all probability the Rite—beautiful and philosophical as it is—would not have been openly worked in England by the few members who were scattered here and there, had it not come to their knowledge that certain unauthorised persons were about to start it in the metropolis on their own account, and thus add another Masonic Jurisdiction to those already existing. The members thereupon sought and obtained powers to form a working body, offered to annex it to the Red Cross Order for administrative purposes, and commenced operations with the success which we have now the pleasure of placing on record.

THE GRAND MARK MASTER OF ENGLAND AND THE SCOTCH
MARK MASTERS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—Your widely-circulated journal contained a report on December 17th, of some remarks made by me at the banquet held after the closing of the last Grand Mark Lodge.

What I then said with reference to Scotch Mark Masonry in Lancashire has, I regret to find, given offence to the Lancashire Scottish Mark Masters. I am exceedingly sorry that my remarks should have been so understood, and that they were not more carefully worded; and I beg to take this opportunity of assuring both the brethren in question and all others who may have read your report, that nothing was further from my intention than to wound the feelings of the Mark Masters hailing from Scotland, or to imply the slightest want of respect to them.

I wish, then, to say now what my words, had they been more clearly expressed, would have conveyed at the time, viz.:—That Scottish Mark Masters had been maintaining a definite principle in Lancashire (in my opinion, of course, a mistaken one); the principle, namely, that the Mark degree could only lawfully be conferred under a Grand Chapter warrant. That they had no doubt hoped that all Mark Masters in Lancashire would have accepted this principle, but that the contrary principle of an independent English jurisdiction having been so zealously maintained by a large number of Lancashire brethren, the Scotch principle was found to be no longer tenable.

I need scarcely say that I never intended to imply that Scotch Mark Lodges would be unable to exist side by side with the English lodges. Knowing as I do the zeal and high character of the Scotch Mark Masters in Lancashire, such an idea would be simply ridiculous.

But what I desire to be understood as saying is: That the harmonious and united working of the degree under one jurisdiction being the object of the Scottish Mark Masters no less than of ourselves, and the former finding that a large body of English Mark Masters would not accept the jurisdiction of the Grand Chapter of Scotland, and that a united body under Scotland was impossible, they were willing to enter into negotiations for union with the Grand Mark Lodge.

In conclusion, I will only say that no one can more highly appreciate that willingness on the part, both of the Grand Chapter of Scotland and the Lancashire brethren hailing from the Grand Chapter, than myself, or the honourable and truly Masonic spirit which prompted it; as no one can be more anxious than I am that all past disagreements should be buried, and that the valuable and important body of Scottish Mark Masters in Lancashire, now severed from us, should, in union with us, place the Mark degree in the position which it deserves to occupy.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
G. R. PORTAL, G.M.M.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED
RITE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

"I will wash mine hands in innocency: So will I compass thine altar, O Lord!"

It may be accepted as an axiom in all civilised countries, at the present day, that hereditary right, the general suffrages of bodies corporate, and Parliamentary enactments alone confer the privilege of office, and that there is no such principle recognised as that of spontaneous election, any more than in physics that of spontaneous generation is received.

Where a small minority of nine men assumes to elect itself a Supreme Council mero or propria motu, such an act is a violation of all law and a direct usurpation of the rights of the majority. Such an act of spontaneous generation, as we may term it, is simply ridiculous in itself, and would call for nothing but neglect and contempt were it not that a large majority of the Craft, who are unacquainted with the true origin of this Supreme Council of the 33°, suppose naturally that it has been established by general election; and if not by election throughout the Craft, then it is only the shadow of a mighty name, and simply confined to the affairs of the so-called 33rd Degree, which affairs, like the degree itself, are of a purely arbitrary origin, based upon gratuitous assumptions. In the name of common sense, what Mason, with the true interests of the Craft at heart, or knowing the facts of the case, will hesitate to repudiate pretensions so preposterous, where one elects the other among themselves, as in the late Manx "House of Keys"—an absurdity not to be tolerated by modern legislation. There can be, therefore, no subordination due to those who have set the example of insubordination by an usurpation of the rights of others. I regret to say that I was myself ensnared into the Rite of 33° by a flagrant misrepresentation; but being so, and having paid my fees, I condoned the offence, but refused to go further. But as I was admitted without law, so is the attempt made to unseat me without law; but ex nihilo nihil fit, out of nothing nothing can be made. And if by this species of illicit election a spurious degree can be contrived, it is but a fanciful idea, and its promoters can neither confer real rank nor take it away. Judgments with legal force cannot emanate from that the constitution of which is, in its very nature, illegal; and the taint of fraud (so to speak) will vitiate every transaction in which it is found. Wherefore, by my own sole authority, in a legal point of view, I have as much right to suspend the members of the so-called Supreme Council, and declare as a Commander of the old ne plus ultra (their 32°), that all their acts and functions, ab initio, are null and void, and absolutely abrogated, as they could have any right to fulminate any personal decree against me. Supported by the great body of Freemasons, the Council and all its usurpations might be swept away by a legitimate exercise of our power, like some gipsy encampment surreptitiously attempting to invade the rights of commonage and to form an enclosure by stealthy occupation.

Who, knowing the circumstances, can calmly endure the meddling and unmasonic invasion of our rights with pretensions so extravagant and absurd? If brethren must and will have high degrees, the Rite of Misraim, consisting of ninety degrees, the K.H., or ne plus ultra, being sixty-five degrees, is superior in every respect to this. Even Dr. Mackey, the great American Mason, admitting that it is the most philosophical of all the rites. Nor do we believe that it will attempt to interfere with the Templar Kadosh, but rather seek its support.

But the time has come for some influential Mason to put away that fancy association called the 33rd Degree, unestablished as it is by Masonic law or precedent; and to make it render an account to the Grand Lodge of England of the fees, amounting to many thousands of pounds, of which it has possessed itself, and which should be carried, under the circumstances, to the credit of the Treasurer of Grand Lodge. Were the members of the Supreme Council following a profession on the strength of their diplomas, from accredited sources, and practising for fees, the latter would undoubtedly be entitled to personal remuneration for services rendered. But here there is no accrediting diploma—no profession, no services—but simply the self-created function of receiving fees, which cannot be considered as due, or the reward of any personal services. And therefore those who have taken upon themselves to levy them ought to be held amenable to the Grand Lodge for a grave offence—inasmuch as they have usurped functions not pertaining to them on any hypothesis, and have assumed to exercise a position and authority detrimental to the status of Grand Lodge and subversive of order and discipline throughout the Craft at large.

It has been the policy of the Supreme Council (so-called) in every possible way to oppose those who, like myself, have shown a spirit of restiveness, and to hunt them down at times even in the Craft at large—this being the necessary result of a self-elective centralizing authority issuing its mandates to its subordinates, and determined to maintain power at all hazards. Hence, when I proposed four candidates, men of position most highly recommended by their lodges, I was met by two Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret (32°) ready to oppose them at the ballot; and as at the banquet afterwards I announced my intention of again working the old Templar Kadosh, or ne plus ultra, I was called to account for my conduct by this surreptitious authority. The following extracts from a recent correspondence are given to save me from misrepresentation, and will elucidate my further reasons for bringing before the general Masonic body the proposal to suppress the so-called Supreme Council as not requisite in the Craft. The replies were mere maudling letters, useless to print for any purpose:—

Nov. 11th, 1870.

“Dear Sir and Brother,—I am duly in receipt of your favour of the 9th inst., informing me that some ‘Commission’ had been appointed to inquire into and report upon my conduct at a late meeting of the ‘Palatine Rose Croix Chapter.’ The phraseology of your letter, coupled with verbal report, precludes my supposing, as I have a right to do, that this letter springs from an attempt to do me justice against certain misrepresentations, made by four individuals against four well-recommended Irish candidates proposed by me, and whose reiterated falsehoods were very energetically repelled by me at the time. But before I can reply further to your letter, I must beg you to inform me: 1. What is the object of said inquiry? 2. By what authority does the commission sit? In reference to query 2 I may observe that I do not claim to be either a member of your Rite or a Sovereign Prince, nor have I ever either contributed to, or been asked to contribute to, the election of Grand Inquisitor Commanders, Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret, or Most Potent Sovereign Grand Commanders; and it is therefore very desirable that I should know who these ‘Commissioners’ are who assume to themselves these high prerogatives, as it is usually considered good Masonic law that the governed should have some voice in the election of such high functionaries. When I hear further from you as to these points, I will consider whether it may be advisable to be present at your ‘Commission’ either myself, or to send my solicitor to protect my good name and fame so slanderously assailed. At present it seems to me that your so-called Supreme Council have adroitly seized upon a circumstance which, whatever the result, may equally suit me or them.”

“In my reply to your notification I took the liberty of inquiring: 1. What is the object of the commission? 2. Under what authority does it sit? At the same time I alluded to the fact that the so-called Supreme Council is a self-constituted body, having not the slightest representative character or authority from the governed. But your satisfaction of these questions would be scarcely sufficient to enable me to come to a conclusion, and I must beg for information on these other three points: 3. Who are the Most Wise Potentates, Grand Inquisitors, and Sublime Princes of whom the commission is composed—their Masonic rank and services, and their trade or professions? 4. What other Sovereign Princes are conjoined with me in this complaint, as laid before the so-called Supreme Council? 5. Who has preferred the said complaint?”

[Here followed by name charges of unmasonic conduct, better omitted, also showing the ridicule brought on tradesmen by the assumption of the magniloquent titles common to this Order.]

“My hostility to the unrepresentative character of your so-called Supreme Council and exquisite and sublime irony in such designations as the ‘Illustrious Sovereign Prince John Yarker, Yarn and Cloth Merchant, Manchester,’ have been well known for the last half-dozen years, and has brought down no end of malignant venom on my head. I have been represented as crotchety and quarrelsome by people who knew that they were uttering the most deliberate falsehoods; and in every case where I have met with unmasonic treatment the offender has been one of your ineffable and Sublime Potentates. This is so well known to me that I barely hesitate to mention names. In the face of this I can only refer to an active and useful Masonic career of sixteen years, during which I have occupied the chief chair in every rite and degree, aiding in keeping alive and constituting several Masonic lodges, Mark lodges, chapters, and encampments; and I challenge any individual out of your so-called Supreme Council to say that during such period I have been unmeek, uncharitable, quarrelsome, or guilty of a single unmasonic act; or, commercially, of a single disreputable transaction. Yet during all this time I have seen the wicked flourishing like a green bay tree, and bankrupts in character and reputation promoted to high office. In fine, the treatment I have always received at the hands of members of your Rite (and from members of your Rite solely have I received unmasonic treatment) has been such that for many years I abstained from all attendance at the Palatine Chapter of Rose Croix, and the second meeting I did attend afterwards was to meet with a repetition of insults, snubs, and snobbish manners.

“I now await your reply to these two letters, which I beg you not to delay, as I wish to close the correspondence by a final reply, when I know what are the grounds which your so-called Supreme Council have assumed on the question.”

“Nov. 15th, 1870.

“I received your very proper letter this evening, but you must see for yourself that I cannot attend any meeting which does not take into account my charges against others, and which I am prepared to support on proper occasion. This I must say, that a similar course of procedure would at any moment produce a still stronger ebullition of feeling. Had this unpleasantness not occurred, I might have probably become a zealous member of your Rite, reserving my disapprovals for more convenient occasions. As it is, all that is now past, and I must perforce bide my time. My experience of the notorious clique who have reduced the Palatine Chapter from being one of the best in England to an attendance of about a dozen members, is the only unpleasant reminiscence I can possibly have of Freemasonry.

[Here followed certain names and charges better omitted, and a suggestion that I ought in a Masonic manner to have been asked to withdraw the candidates privately, if their admission was not desired.]

“In my previous letter I alluded to the fact that there was no representative government of the Rite in existence, that one elected the other like the late Manx ‘House of Keys;’ and I further pointed out the absolutely ridiculous and ironical nature of all its titles, an objection which did not and does not exist in the old English Rite now and formerly practised here.

“The question of insubordination and allegiance is a very peculiar and conflicting one, and I do not consider myself to belong to your Supreme Council, not being in possession of any degree over which they can claim exclusive jurisdiction. When I became a member of the Palatine Chapter of Rose Croix I was induced to become so on the representation that it was a continuation of the Jerusalem Chapter of Rose Croix, which had a chapter of the Order, as well as of Kadosh and ne plus ultra, long before your Supreme Council was ever heard of; and of this chapter and all its degrees (revived then) I am a Past Commander. The Rose Croix and Kadosh are perfectly legal and stand by themselves without the assistance of your Supreme Council. Indeed, there is no degree but the 33° over which your Supreme Council can legitimately claim jurisdiction, and even in that you are a self-constituted authority, as if I, a 33°, were to establish a 34° for my friends. All degrees of the rite worth retaining were possessed by the Grand Conclave of Templars since 1791, whilst you obtruded yourselves here in 1846 only, and it is upon the ruins of that Grand Conclave that you have erected your Supreme Council. Besides this, it is almost impossible, in the confused working of the Palatine Chapter as I have seen it given, to say what any one possesses.

“But this is by no means the worst feature of your case. You are, or ought to be, aware that your Rite originated with certain non-recognised Masons at Paris, in 1758, styling themselves Emperors of the East and West, and the twenty-five degrees possessed by these Sublime Potentates were governed by an elective body. From Paris the Order went to Berlin, and adopted a Constitution in 1762—thence it spread to America. Here, in 1786, certain brethren, lustig for power, inserted eight more degrees, and forged a Constitution under the name of Frederick the Great of Prussia. This fraud is historically well known (vide Bros. F. Bolger, Findell, and other reliable historians), and one proof of it is at my elbow in the printed statutes. I find at page 129 the four names—Stark, N. Willelm, D’Esterno, Woellna, the remaining five (the inventive faculty of the forger having failed him) is stated to have been effaced by the attrition of sea-water. Singular to say, the miraculous objections of sea-water is shown at page 134 in the attrition of the same names. But even one Council is at war with another, and Scotland brands England as illegally constituted.

“It is for Masons of probity and wisdom to say whether this fraudulent Constitution and its abettors shall be allowed to exist. But there is still another view of the matter. If the Rite is to be made the means of individual annoyance against brethren who differ on certain points in this way, by a clique without a single claim to respect, the names of these Mighty, Sublime, and Most Wise Potentates (to be found in any Masonic Calendar) must be proclaimed, and the Craft must stamp out these degrees as a Masonic pest.

“With regard to the ceremonies of the Rite, I may say that several official rituals of the whole thirty-three degrees are in my possession; and whilst many degrees are unobjectionable, the bulk are a chaos—everything valuable we had here before your Council existed, and shall have generations after it has ceased to exist.

“It only remains for me to observe that this quarrel has been forced upon me greatly against my wish—not desiring to offer annoyance to your degrees, but live peaceably in my own way; but if your Supreme Council will not see justice done to me, I will do myself the justice to circulate this correspondence throughout the world. In it I have said all that I could say if present at your ‘Commission,’ and it is for you to report upon it to your Supreme Council.”

JOHN YARKER.

P.S.—I will, if time and convenience permit, refer again to this subject, and probably give further particulars in my forthcoming work on “Secret Schools of Antiquity and of the Middle Ages.” J. Y.

A CHRISTMAS WISH.

AN ACROSTIC inscribed respectfully to the members of the Royal York Lodge of Perseverance, No. 7, by a deceased Freemason's daughter, who recollects their kindness with gratitude.

Angels hear my supplication,

Christmas once again draws near,
Heaven-sent gifts my home are cheering,
Rend'ring bright the closing year.
In our grief kind benefactors
Soothed bereavement's keen distress;
Taught my mother, thro' her suffering,
Mentally their names to bless.
At this festive season, Father,
Strew Thy mercies o'er their way,

Watch o'er those they love most fondly
In each trial, I humbly pray;
Shed Thy blessed solace o'er them,
Hope's bright star shine o'er before them.

THE "RECTANGULAR REVIEW" ON "FREEMASONRY; ITS USE AND ABUSE."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is just as I expected. The balance-sheet published in your issue of the 24th ult., though giving in detail every item of expenditure, has failed to satisfy the querulous Editor of "R.R." And why? Because having started with erroneous assumptions, he is determined to maintain them at all hazards; to harden himself stubbornly against conviction, and, looking down calmly and complacently from his purist elevation, to smile condemnation on those he has so shamefully abused. I will now, in brief, "give the amount by which the debt was actually reduced by the collection of 1869":—

On the 1st January of that year we had a balance at our bankers of ...	£1,286
Our receipts for the year from all sources were ...	12,847
	£14,133
On the 1st January, 1869, we owed—
Mortgage ...	£10,000
Builder and Architect ...	8,710
Of this we paid to Builder and Architect ...	8,710

Leaving a liability of ... £10,000 and therefore our debt was reduced exactly by the £8,710. Add to this the cost of the establishment at Wood Green, £4,671, and £1,334, "special expenditure," including interest, and you have a total of £14,715—the difference between £14,133 and £14,715, showing balance due to the bankers on current account 31st December, 1869, £582. I again ask, can any statement be plainer than this?

We are threatened, I see, with another taking up of "the whole question of the waste of public charity (including the Masonic)." I sincerely trust that the experience of the past will be evidenced in the future, and that equity, truthfulness, and candour will take the place of those qualities which to the regret of all have characterised the singularly angular periodical which claiming for itself the definition—right—has shown itself to be utterly inappreciative of what is thereby generally understood.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
FREDERICK BINCKES,
Secretary Rl. Mas. Inst. for Boys.
6, Freemasons' Hall, 2nd Jan. 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am certainly at a loss to know what more a reasonable man can require than has already been furnished by Bro. Binckes in regard to the disposal of subscriptions for the support of the Boys' School. But as the Editor of the "R.R." is so very anxious to know what is done with the fees of the Stewards to the various charities, I would suggest that at some or all of the forthcoming festivals he should signify his intention of serving the honourable office of Steward; he will then be able to support the charities effectually, and likewise have his mind set at rest as to what is done with his and the other Stewards' fees.

Sincerely hoping he will stand for the Boys, and gladden the heart of Brother Binckes by a long list and a good round sum,

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,
J. O., P.M. 861.

SEASONABLE BENEVOLENCE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The inmates of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution wish to convey their grateful thanks to a worthy brother who has generously presented each of us with a bottle of wine to cheer us at this festive season. God bless him for his kindness!

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours respectfully and fraternally,
L. BRIVEAU.

BALD STATEMENTS.

DEAR SIR,—Is not a statement like that made over the signature "C. G. Forsyth," on p. 608, No. 90 of your paper, a "bald statement"? otherwise a statement totally unsupported by evidence, and, as such, may we not set it down as the fancy of C. G. Forsyth? He says, "from the Encyclopædia Britannica we learn." How does he learn it from that work? No such paragraph as he gives, as if copied from that work, is to be found in it. No one but a man who desired to establish a fraternal connection between the Knights Templar and Freemasons would write such a paragraph. Bro. Anthony O'Neale Haye has given us the best history of K.T.'s that has ever been produced, and nowhere in it can be found that any other connection than that of employer and employed ever existed between the Knights Templar and the Freemasons—the free smiths, or any other handicraft. And yet such paragraphs as this, I notice, are repeatedly appearing in your paper and the Freemasons' Magazine and M.M., and, being read, are believed, and disputes subsequently predicated upon them.

In No. 595 of the latter publication, on p. 428, is a paragraph copied from the Charter of Cologne. It appears as editorial, or among the "Masonic Sayings," and the object apparently of it is to show that in the sixteenth century none were made Masons but professors of the Christian religion. Now, it would seem but reasonable that at this day the editor of such a respectable paper as the Freemasons' Magazine, &c., would have learned that the Charter of Cologne within years immediately following its publication by Frederick of Nassau, in 1819, was pronounced a forgery and a "Masonic fraud;" and that it and the accompanying "Records of the Lodge Valley of Peace," said to have existed at the Hague in 1637, were evidently gotten up for the purpose of creating the belief that Masonry existed in the form of five degrees in Holland as early as the beginning of the sixteenth century. In his "History of Freemasonry," Bro. Clavel enters into an exposition of this Charter of Cologne fraud more fully than any other historian I have read after. He says of the "charter":—

"La charte est écrite sur une feuille de parchemin, en caractères maçonnique; elle est rédigée en langue latine du moyen-âge; l'écriture en est si altérée que souvent il à fallu ajouter des lettres à des mots devenus in complets."

Of the register or lodge record, he says:—

"Le registre parait avoir été assez volumineux. Les seuls feuillets qui restent indiquent qu'ils ont fait partie d'un livre relié, et l'ont voit qu'ils ont été endommagés par le feu."

Of both these documents he then says:—

"De savants antiquaires de l'université de Leyde ont constaté que le papier de ces feuillets est celui dont on se servait en Hollande au commencement du xvii. siècle, et que les caractères qui y sont tracés appartiennent à la même époque."

He then gives a statement of the effect the discovery and publication of these documents had upon the brethren—some favouring their authenticity, others denying the same; and closes a paragraph upon this subject with the following:—

"Sans parler des anachronismes dont abonde la charte prétendue de 1535, du dementi qu'elle donne aux faits incontestables et prouvés dont nous avons été l'écho dans le premier chapitre de ce livre, il y a une considération qui ruine de fond en comble l'économie de la pièce fabriquée, et qui n'aurait pas dû échapper à la sagacité des critiques. Cette considération la voici. L'assemblée de Cologne se plaint en son charte qu'on calomnie dans le public les intentions et le but de la société maçonnique, et elle rédige une déclaration qui a essentiellement pour objet de les faire mieux connaître. Et pourtant ce n'est pas un public, qui accueille et qui propage la calomnie, qu'elle adresse sa déclaration; c'est, aux loges, à qui elle est inutile, puisqu'elles savent pertinemment à quoi s'en tenir sur la réclite des accusations que l'on porte contre elles. Et comme si l'assemblée de Cologne craignait que la justification qu'elle en treprend n'arrivât, par cas fortuit à la connaissance des personnes étrangères à la maçonnerie, auxquelles elle est naturellement destinée, puisque c'est à ces personnes seules qu'elle peut apprendre quelque chose, elle rédige sa déclaration en langue latine, qui n'est entendue que des savants, et elle la trace en caractères maçonniques, intelligibles pour tous autres que pour les initiés! Cette déclaration eût donc été sans motif plausible, et, dès lors, il serait absurde de prétendre que dix neuf personnes d'un esprit élevé, telles que Coligoni, Melancthon, Stanhope, et les autres, fussent venues à Cologne, de tous les points de l'Europe, tout exprès pour la rédiger."

He then pronounces the document, together and separately, fraudulent, and matters which he should have passed over in silence, had not some Swiss and German Masons, like the editor, I must believe of the Freemasons' Magazine, with more zeal than discretion, endeavoured to foist those frauds upon the Fraternity as authentic and well supported. While he admits that Masonry existed in Holland as elsewhere in the middle ages, it was the masonry of the stonecutter and church-builder—an organisation differing essentially from the imaginary society mentioned in the Charter of Cologne of 1535; and there, as elsewhere on the Continent, such operative Masonry was dissolved within that century, not to be again revived. Not until 1725, under the auspices of Captain Smith—he of the "use and abuse" defence of Masonry, possibly—did the Freemasonry of the present day become known in Holland; and there, in 1731, at the Hague, as Preston informs us, at an "occasional lodge," was initiated Francis, Duke of Lorraine, subsequently Emperor of Germany.

Would it not be well and praiseworthy for each editor and correspondent of a Masonic paper to refrain from publishing "bald statements," particularly when they are calculated to mislead the mind of every

INQUIRING BROTHER?

THE LIVERPOOL GORDOVIC EISTEDDFOD, 1870.

This literary festival was held on Monday, the 26th ult., in St. George's Hall, Liverpool, where the winning competitors in prose, poetry, and music were adorned with the prize and blue ribbon by the President, Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P., P.G.M. North Wales and Shropshire, who presided on the occasion. After a most complimentary address had been read to the president, and his reply thereto, Miss Edith Wynn sang the solo, and the Birkenhead Cambrian Choral Society sang the chorus of the following song, written specially for the occasion by Bro. Evan Jones, of Chester (Hibernia Lodge, 597). The sentiments of the song were so effectively given by Miss Wynn, that an encore was immediately demanded, and the large audience joined in the chorus. The song was also given, by special request, at the evening concert, when the spacious hall was crowded.

MUSICAL ADDRESS TO THE PRESIDENT.

Of all the Chiefs of Cambria,
    Syn byw y dyddiau hyn,
There's none who love the Cymry
Like Watkin Williams Wynn;
The Princes of old Cambria,
    Immortalized in song,
Were noble, brave, and gen'rous,
And loved their native tongue.

Chorus—Of all the Chiefs of Cambria,
    Syn byw y dyddiau hyn,
There's none who love the Cymry,
Like Watkin Williams Wynn.

Defenders of their people,
The bulwark of their race,
And patrons of the "awen,"
Oh! who will fill their place?
And have they all departed?
    Gofyna Cymru'n syn!
There's one, the bard's re-echo—
Sir Watkin Williams Wynn,

Chorus—Of all the Chiefs of Cambria,
    Syn byw y dyddiau hyn,
There's none who love the Cymry,
Like Watkin Williams Wynn.

BRO. EVAN JONES.

Chester, Dec. 5, 1870.

We are requested to announce an alteration made in respect of the meetings of the Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216. It has been deemed advisable to limit their number, and in consequence, the regular meetings will in future be held on the second Wednesday in the months of February, April, May, June, October and December instead of every month as heretofore. The place of meeting, (the Head Quarters of the First Surrey Rifle Corps, Brunswick-road, Camberwell), is not altered.

A FEW months ago I was suffering from inflammation of the throat, brought on by a severe cold, so that I could only with difficulty swallow any food. I could get no permanent relief until a friend induced me to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, a few doses of which completely cured me.—J. MACK, 118, Gordon-st., Liverpool.—To Perry Davis & Son."

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

FREEMASONRY IN DEVON AND CORNWALL, 1870.

With respect to Freemasonry in these two Western provinces, we may state that in the province of Devon two new lodges have been opened, namely, one at Topsham and another at Crediton. The Semper Fidelis Lodge at Exeter has been consecrated, and St. Peter's Masonic Hall, at Tiverton, dedicated. A chapter was opened at Honiton, and the progress of the Craft has been very satisfactory. The last returns of members are up to the 31st December, 1869. They show somewhere about 1,800, but these figures are deceptive because many of the brethren are returned as members of several lodges. At the Provincial Grand Lodge, which was held at Tiverton, on the 21st of July, the R.W. the P.G. Master, the Rev. John Huyshe, brought forward a motion of very great importance to the local charities connected with the Craft. By a slight increase to the annual contribution of each member—so slight that it could not be felt—an addition was made of about £80 per annum permanently to the charitable funds. This proposal of the R.W. brother was unanimously adopted, although at first it met with some opposition, and by its adoption the P.G. Lodge will be able to increase their donations to the General Masonic Charities of England, and to elect two or three additional annuitants on the Fortescue Fund in this province.

In the Province of Cornwall no new lodges have been warranted during the past year. There are twenty-four lodges now working in the province, the oldest being dated A.D. 1751, and the latest 1868. The province has doubled itself with respect to the number of lodges every thirty-five years since the middle of last century, but probably the culmination of that increase is attained. There are upwards of 1,000 members, and the majority of the lodges meet in lodges of their own, apart from hotel influences. The Provincial Grand Lodge was held at Truro, on the 19th July, 1870, when the Masonic Hall, built by the munificence of the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Augustus Smith, Esq., was dedicated in ancient form, by the P.G.M. in the presence of the P.G.M. of Devon, and a large number of brethren. The following new by-law was then passed:—"No person, resident in any town or place where a lodge is established, shall be balloted for into any lodge held elsewhere within this province, unless the Master of the lodge, wherein he so seeks admission, shall previously make inquiry in writing of the Master of every lodge in the town or nearest the place where the candidate resides, touching the fitness of such candidate. The brother of whom such inquiry is made, shall make prompt reply thereto in writing, and it shall be incumbent on the Master to read the reply to the members of the lodge before the ballot is taken." There is also a directory for the province, edited by Bro. W. J. Hughan, the P.G. Secretary, of Truro, who is one of the most voluminous writers on Freemasonry in this kingdom. We ought to state that Devon has also its directory. These manuals, compiled with much care, are very useful to the Craft.—Western Daily Mercury.

CHESHIRE EDUCATIONAL MASONIC INSTITUTION.

On Wednesday evening, the 21st ult., a grand concert in aid of the funds of the above institution was given in the Music Hall, Birkenhead, before a numerous and highly respectable audience. By a special dispensation received from the R.W.P.G.M., Lord de Tabley, the brethren appeared in full Masonic clothing, which being a novelty in that part of Cheshire brought a great many more brethren than would otherwise have come, and in itself proved a novel spectacle to the rest of the audience.

The artists, who all kindly gave their services for the good cause were, Miss Galloway, Miss Phillips, Miss Maria Phillips; Bros. Emondson, Dumville and Robberds, (of the Gentleman's Glee Club, Manchester); Vaudrey (of Congleton), T. J. Hughes, G. A. Wielopolski Phillips, solo cornet, Dr. Moss (of Congleton), solo flute, and Bro. Twiss, P.P.G.O. Cheshire, conductor and accompanist. The programme consisted of a selection of some beautiful songs, glees, and concerted pieces, the whole of which were rendered by the artistes in an exceedingly creditable manner. Miss Galloway was in splendid voice, and rendered the canzonetta "Il Buon Angario" with exquisite taste and finish, while her warbling of Randegger's "Only for One," brought from the audience a genuine burst of applause. The Misses Phillips sang very sweetly a number of simple ballads during the evening, and rendered effective aid in the concerted pieces. Bro. Emondson's singing of "Madoline" met with well merited approval, as did also the other solos given by Bros. Hughes, Vaudrey, Robberds, and Dumville.

The audience were especially charmed by the flute solos of Dr. Moss, who showed himself a perfect master of his instrument, and Bro. Phillips showed some excellent instrumentation in his cornet solo, Chappelle's "Serenade."

The glees and other concerted pieces, in which the strength of the company appeared, were very successfully executed. As a whole we have reason to know that the audience thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment, which passed off with great élat.

It appears from the last annual report of the institution, that the balance in hand had been increased from £1,086 14s. od. to £1,223 15s. od. During the past year fifteen children had received the benefits of education, and two had received funds for the purpose of advancement in life. The satisfactory position of the funds was mainly due to increased support afforded by annual subscriptions, and the interest arising from the investments, comparatively little having been derived from extraneous sources. There were still sixteen children on the books, and the committee had received applications to place four more on the educational fund, and from the friends of one for advancement in life.

The amount expended in paying for the education of the fifteen children was £85 8s. 9d., and towards the advancement in life of the two children £8 7s. 3d. The places at which the children received the education were, Liverpool College, Sandbach Grammar School, Wycliffe Grammar School, and at private schools at Ashton-under-Lyne, Entwistle, Warrington, Ruthin, Everton, Macclesfield, Runcom, Chester and Southport. We believe the result of the concert will be a considerable addition to the funds of the Cheshire Educational Masonic Institution.

Obituary.

BRO. PHILIP HARDWICK, R.A.

We regret having to announce the death of Bro. Philip Hardwick, R.A. He was the architect and designer of the warehouses and large buildings of the St. Katherine's Dock Company, the new hall of the Goldsmiths' Company, the entrance of the Euston Station of the London and North-Western Railway, and in conjunction with his son, Mr. C. P. Hardwick, of the new hall and library of Lincoln's-inn. He was for many years architect to the Duke of Wellington, and to the Greenwich Hospital Commissioners. He received the gold medal of the Institute of British Architects, and was awarded the gold medal of the Paris Exhibition of 1855. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society, of which he has been vice-president.

Bro. Hardwick was an eminent member of the Masonic Order, and for a long period filled the post of Grand Superintendent of Werks in Grand Lodge.

BRO. JOHN THOMAS TRICKETT, R.V.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of Bro. John Thomas Trickett, R.V., who was a member of St. Aubyn's Lodge, No. 954, after many months of intense suffering (which he bore with noble Christian fortitude) he succumbed to that insidious disease, consumption, on last Sunday evening, at the early age of 26 years. The lamented brother was initiated in the St. Aubyn's Lodge, No. 954, at Davenport, on the 20th February; joined the Villiers Lodge, No. 1194, on October 2nd, 1869, and continued a subscriber until the time of his death. He was advanced in 1869 to the Mark Degree in Southwark Mark Lodge, No. 22, installed into the Rose Croix 18°, and in the St. Aubyn's Chapter at Devonport; was an annual subscriber to the Male and Female Annuity Fund, and last year became a Life Subscriber to both funds. He was a truly good Mason, and had he been spared would have continued his useful career in the Order, although being a naval officer, he was unable to take office in his lodges or chapters. He was beloved by all who knew him; we deeply sympathise with his father (who holds distinguished position in the Craft) and all his family for the loss they have sustained.

SCOTLAND.

MASONIC FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW HALL.

On St. John's Day the members of the Lodge of Glasgow (St. John, No. 3 bis.), assembled in their new hall, No. 213, Buchanan-street, to take part in the solemn ceremony of its consecration.

Bro. F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M., occupied the chair, and he was supported on the right by Bro. Steel, S.G.M., and on the left by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Burns, V.W.P.G.C., and other brethren.

The lodge having been opened in due form, the V.W. the Prov. G. Chaplain delivered an oration. Before speaking of the solemn aspects of the Craft, he begged to congratulate the lodge on the beautiful hall in which they had met. It was creditable to them that they had provided such accommodation for themselves, and he hoped they would have many pleasant meetings in it in the time to come, and would initiate many who would be an ornament to the Craft and likewise a blessing to those with whom they were concerned. A very happy time had been chosen for its consecration—a time when one of their great principles was very apparent in the intercourse of society. This was the season of goodwill, of happy and cordial greetings—the season pre-eminently, he might say, set apart for kindness and the interchange of friendship. (Hear, hear.) That feature was certainly one of the most distinguishing of the venerable Craft, for it inculcated upon its members a large-hearted charity, and it required them in any intercourse they had with the world to follow out the principle of love. And certainly never was there a season of the year more fitted for giving expression to feelings of benevolence and the principles of the Craft than the present. However frequent might be the visitations of sickness and death, they were specially frequent in the fall of the year. Poverty, too, tightened its grip with the cold, and they found that many of their brethren were not only obliged to combat the storms, but also to battle with sore disease and want; and were their more fortunate brethren to extend to them their sympathy, and minister to their wants, Freemasonry would be felt as a power in the world. He would recall to their minds the high code of morality which was inculcated by Freemasonry. It required them not only to have loving hearts, but also to lead pure and honourable lives; and never, perhaps, in the history of the world was there greater need felt for that than now. It was for Freemasons in this country, therefore, to live in the spirit of the Craft, to set an example of what was good, and to practise those principles which underlie the Order. If they did so, they would find Freemasonry becoming a greater power; and instead of being a mere name—as to some extent it was at present—it would be felt to be a reality, their lodges would be largely swelled in number, and they would discover that they existed for a great purpose, and that it was an Order blessed largely by God for the good of their fellow-men. (Applause.)

The P.G.M. Depute complimented the lodge on the great zeal and assiduity they had shown in their efforts to procure a new hall.

The R.W. Master returned thanks.

The lodge was closed with grand honours.

The following office-bearers of St. John's Lodge were afterwards appointed and installed:—Bros. John Baird, R.W.M.; Robert Neilson, D.M.; Jas. McMillan, S.M.; Wm. Kyle, jun., S.W.; Thomas Fletcher, J.W.; R. D. Samuels, Treas.; Thomas J. Smillie, Sec.; John Dick, S.D.; James Kyle, J.D.; James Hamilton, Architect; D. S. Henderson, Jeweller; David Walker, Director of Music; Rev. Alex. Guthrie, Chaplain.

813TH ANNIVERSARY OF GLASGOW ST. JOHN.

The members of this lodge held their festival on St. John's Day. There were upwards of one hundred present, and the chair was occupied by Bro. Baird, R.W.M. Bro. William Kyle, jun., acted as croupier. On the removal of the cloth, and the disposal of the introductory toasts, "Prosperity to the Glasgow St. John Lodge" was pledged with enthusiasm. The R.W.M. replied, and referred to the long array of honourable work to which the lodge could point as having been performed by it in years by-gone. Few lodges could show a brighter history, and he had no doubt it would be equally successful in the future.

In proposing the "Three Grand Lodges," the R.W.M. said that at the last Masonic festival in the City Hall Bro. Lord Rosslyn, who was in the chair, stated, in the absence of the reporters, that he had received an invitation to spend Christmas with the Prince and Princess of Wales, at Sandringham, but that he excused himself on the ground of having to attend a Masonic gathering. He (the R.W.M.) thought that was a most promising augury for the future of Masonry.

The evening was agreeably varied by good singing.

CONSECRATION OF THE TALBOT LODGE, No. 1323, at SWANSEA.

Seldom has it been our lot to be present at a more interesting and successful Masonic meeting than that, the proceedings of which we are about to chronicle. From first to last there was not a halt or hitch, not a single contratempus to mar the regularity and beauty of the whole.

It has been for some time in contemplation to form a new lodge in Swansea, to be called in honour of the R.W. the Prov. G. Master, Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot, the "Talbot Lodge;" and it was by its projectors unanimously decided to request the talented and skilled brother, Edward James Morris, the deservedly respected Deputy Prov. G. Master, to become its first W.M. Bro. Stone, the worthy host of the Mackworth Arms Hotel, with the liberality and promptitude which has always distinguished him, determined to meet the wishes of the brethren, and immediately set to work and built in the rear of his large house a splendid suite of rooms for the accommodation of the new lodge. The principal room is 50 feet long, 20 wide, and about as many high, and is lighted by a sunlight in the centre. In the east there is a raised dais, and fixed raised seats for the brethren run all round. The chairs and furniture are of polished mahogany, and are very handsome.

The consecration of the new rooms and installation of the W.M. were fixed for Thursday, the 8th of December, at one o'clock, when there was a very large attendance of brethren from the two divisions of the province of South Wales. As far as we have been able to ascertain, there were fully 150 present.

The lodge, which is numbered 1323, was opened by the W.M. of the Cambrian Lodge, No. 364, Neath, assisted by the Past Masters of his lodge as officers, and a dispensation from the R.W. the P.G. Master was communicated, authorising the W.M. designate to initiate two gentlemen who were candidates for the honour of admission into Masonry, in order that they might be enabled to witness the consecration and installation ceremonies. This was accordingly done, and the candidates—J. J. Jenkins, Esq., Mayor of Swansea, and Walter Mills, Esq., an influential merchant of the same place—were initiated by Bro. Morris, Deputy Prov. G. Master, in a most beautiful and impressive manner.

The "wearers of the purple" then left the lodge-room, and with the R.W. the Prov. G. Master, Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot (whose arm was, we regretted to observe, in a sling, having recently been broken in the hunting-field), and the Deputy Prov. G. Master, Bro. Morris, re-entered in procession, admirably marshalled by the Prov. G. Dir. of Cer., Bro. Jones-Hewson.

The chair was then taken by the R.W. the P.G. Master, who proceeded to consecrate and dedicate the lodge in conformity to ancient custom, and afterwards to instal the W.M., both ceremonies being most admirably performed.

The officers were then appointed and invested in the following order: Bros. Charles Bath, P. Prov. S.G.W., S.W.; George Browne Brock, P. Prov. J.G.W., J.W.; Charles Tebbotts Heartley, Prov. G. Chap., Chap.; Samuel Browning Power, Treas.; William Cox, P. Prov. G. Treas., Sec.; Richard Aubrey Essery, S.D.; John Jones-Hewson, Prov. G.D.C., J.D.; James Griffith Hall, Prov. S.G.W., D.C.; George Allen, P. Prov. G. Sec., Org.; Howel Walters Williams, P. Prov. G. Purs., I.G.; and Henry Simons, Tyler. Each one, on his investiture, being greeted with some exceedingly happy and well-chosen remarks by the talented W.M.

The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to a magnificent banquet in the spacious ball-room of the Mackworth Arms Hotel. An exceedingly pleasant evening was spent, and many good songs and glees effectively rendered, the musical arrangements of the whole meeting being admirably managed by Bro. Middleton, P. Prov. G. Org. This gentleman is a solicitor at Neath, whose musical talents are of a very high order, and the manner in which he managed his department reflects the highest credit on him. He was ably assisted by several other brethren, more especially by Bro. Jones-Hewson.

The success of the Talbot Lodge may be looked upon as assured, presided over as it is by one who is second to none in a knowledge of Masonry, and officered by men also of recognised skill and ability. May its sphere of usefulness be a broad and wide one.

AN amateur dramatic performance will be given at the Literary Institute, Altrincham, in aid of the funds of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, on Wednesday, January 11, 1871.

BREAKFAST. — EPPS'S COCOA. — Grateful and Comforting. — The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks: — "By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled — JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cocoa, a very light, thin, evening beverage. — (Advt.)

A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution. — Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c. — (Advt.)

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. — Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy. — Select Testimonial. — Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease." — This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. *Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist. — (Advt.)

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS. — Indisputable Remedies. — In the use of these medicaments there need be no hesitation or doubt of their cooling, healing, and purifying properties. The Ointment stands unrivalled for the facility it displays in relieving, healing, and thoroughly curing the most inveterate sores and ulcers and in cases of bad legs and bad breasts it acts as a charm. The Pills are the most effectual remedy ever discovered for the cure of liver complaints — diseases most disastrous in their effects, deranging all the proper functions of the organs affected, inducing restlessness, weariness, melancholy, inability to sleep, and pain in the side, until the whole system is exhausted. These wonderful pills, if taken according to the printed directions accompanying each box, strike at the root of the malady, stimulate the stomach and liver into a healthy action, and effect a cure. — (Advt.)

BY BRO. C. G. FORSYTH.

As the Dionysiac artificers flourished in Judea, or rather its vicinity, at the time of building the Temple of Solomon, it may fairly be inferred that they assisted at the erection of that stately edifice, and the knowledge of some of their peculiar secrets may have been imparted to their fellow-builders. About the year B.C. 300, they were incorporated by command of King Pergamus, who assigned to them a settlement—Teos, where they had erected a superb temple to Bacchus, the patron of their order. From the remnant of these Dionysiacs, probably, sprang some of the first trading Free-Masons, or early Christian architects, among whom, we are told, were many Greeks. After the erection of the Temple, a confraternity of the Jews was formed, called the Kassideans or Assideans, consisting of persons of rank and opulence, connected by secret tokens, and bound by solemn ties to preserve and keep up the Temple and the edifices connected with it. A company of them joined Mattathias and the Maccabees, their distinguishing characteristic being to fight zealously for their religion, and for the defence of the honour of the Temple. From them were derived the Essenes, a sect whose doctrines inculcated the necessity of leading a pure and chaste life—discarding the luxuries of the world. None were admitted without a long and strict probation, and on their admission all were obliged to engage by the most solemn oath to observe the laws of modesty, piety, and justice, and of humility to God and their rulers; to preserve the books of their institutions, to keep carefully the names of the angels, and never to violate the secrets of the Order. This sect was not confined to the Jews, but persons of any nation or of any rank, if otherwise qualified in a proper manner, might be admitted. There were two classes, one practical, the other theoretical, called Therapeutæ; and of this last the principal society was formed at Alexandria. It does not appear that the Essenes particularly applied themselves to the architectural art or science. Many of the primitive Christians had doubtless been instructed in the Pagan rites, and initiated therein, and belonged to some of the societies before mentioned. They would, perhaps, in some cases, in order to obtain a respite from persecution, symbolise their religious rites, borrowing for that purpose such of the Pagan usages as they thought suitable. Some of the early teachers of Christianity, adopting a mistaken course in their zeal for conversion, would, in order to make a greater impression on the weaker part of their congregation, make use of such coincidences as struck them between the Pagan and Christian religion. Gregory Nazianzen relates the manner in which some of the popular Pagan rites were made thus subservient, as was thought, to the advancement of the Christian. When Pope Gregory the Great sent over St. Austin to convert the Anglo-Saxons in the year 596, he expressly instructed him to humour his intended proselytes, and to accommodate to their forms as much as they could those of the Christians; to convert their temples into churches, and the Pagan into Christian feasts. This indulgence to the weaker disciples of Christianity, even in the time of the Apostles, met with just rebuke from them. St. Paul particularly warns the Colossians from mixing up any part of heathen devotion with Christian worship, and St. John denounces the Church of Pergamus for practising heathen rites through fear of temporal inconvenience. The existence of such practices, however wrong, is thus proved, and may account for the preservation of many Pagan symbols, while others probably were retained by early Christian architects, who had obtained a knowledge of them from the before-mentioned societies. In some cases the fraternities of primitive Christians required proofs by certain signs and tokens previous to admitting any stranger to participate in their ceremonies, and it is stated in a French work on Freemasonry (which gives Zovet Cultes Religieuses, for its authority), that there was in existence so late as 1751 a religious fraternity of Greek Masons in possession of the Constitutions of their Order so far back as A.D. 327, when they officiated at the erection of the magnificent Temple of Constantine the Great, and that their rules were similar to those of the priests of Memphis, so far as we have any knowledge of them. Some Masons rely for the great antiquity of their Order upon an old manuscript, said to be in the Bodelian Library, in the handwriting of Leland, being a copy of one still older in the handwriting of Henry VI. This attributes the introduction of Masonry into England to "Peter Gower (Pythagoras), a Grecian, who wacksynge and becommynge a myghtye wysacre, framed a grate lodge at Groton (Crotona), wherefromme, yn processe of tyme, the arte passed into Engelande." Without questioning the authenticity of this manuscript, which has never to my knowledge been proved, as might easily be proved if it is in the Bodelian Library, we may shortly refer to the Pythagoreans, as the writer seems to lay some stress on their institutions. They were originally formed into a society at Crotona by Pythagoras in the 6th century before Christ, and possessed many forms and ceremonies in common with the Essenes. Pythagoras, as well known, had travelled much, and had studied most of the rites of the Pagan mysteries, many of which he adopted and applied to his own School of Philosophy. The society founded by him obtained much repute, and spread over a considerable part of the South of Europe; but their tenets appear to have more reference to theoretical than to practical science. On the introduction of Christianity, considerable changes would be introduced in sacred architecture. Temples formerly reeking with the blood of expiatory victims required in heathen worship, were replaced by churches for the adoration of Him whose sacrifice was the atonement for the sins of all mankind; and the gorgeous splendour of the Pagan rites was superseded by the simplicity of Christian worship. The ancient priesthood would lose their power, but the architects or builders, whether Dionysiac artificers or others, would in many cases adopt or accommodate themselves to the new mode of building required—would become Christians; but they would still retain many of their peculiar symbols, although their society might be broken up as an integral body. When the demand for ecclesiastical architecture increased, the architects or their descendants would again rise into distinction as a body; and from them would probably spring the Freemasons, to whom we are indebted for the construction of the most celebrated churches, particularly those usually called Gothic, whether in England or on the Continent. In this way, also, it will be seen how they would obtain the signs and tokens of the earlier world, discarding those that were only applicable to the Pagan mysteries, but preserving such of them as appeared to be connected with their science and adapted to the preservation of the secrets of the Fraternity from the world at large. The primitive Christians frequently made use of the Heathen Basilicæ for their places of worship, being well suited for that purpose; and their first churches were probably built upon a similar plan, until the erection, or, rather, rebuilding, of the Cathedral of Sancta Sophia, in 532, by Justinian, in the shape of a Greek cross, caused some change. In the first thousand years of Christianity a corrupted notion of Roman architecture prevailed, known by the names of Saxon, Norman, Lombard, &c. After that period the Gothic or Pointed style became gradually introduced. The cathedrals of Spire, Mentz, and Worms, partaking in a degree of both orders, were built about the beginning of the 11th century; those at Rheims and Amiens in the beginning of the 13th century; and in 1277 the beautiful edifice at Strasbourg was commenced. A long list of intermediate churches might be given, if not foreign to the present essay; but it is necessary to mention Strasbourg Cathedral, as it is intimately connected with the Freemasons who had, at the date of its erection, become a large and renowned Society. That church was looked on as the wonder of the world; in fact, as a second Solomon's Temple. In progress with it, or immediately following, were the churches of Vienna, Cologne, Zurich, &c. The architects, with their assistants and pupils, formed associations (as was the custom of the Freemasons) called Hütten (or lodges). At an assembly held at Ratisbon in 1459 it was agreed that a Grand Lodge should be formed at Strasbourg as the place of general assembly, and that the architect of the cathedral, for the time being, should be Grand Master; and accordingly

Dotzinger, of Worms, the successor of John Hülz, of Cologne, who completed the spire in 1449, was chosen the first Grand Master. The Society was composed of Masters, Companions, and Apprentices, who had a secret word, with signs of recognition. In 1464 and 1469 there were general assemblies at Strasbourg; but they were afterwards neglected for some time, until the Emperor Maximilian I., being at that city in 1498, granted them certain privileges by charter or diploma, which was renewed by subsequent emperors. The diplomas, together with the regulations and statutes, were kept in the house of the architect of the cathedral, in a chest with triple locks, of which the architect and the two oldest Masons kept the keys—so that it required the presence of all three before the chest could be opened. These documents were in existence until the time of the French Revolution, when they were destroyed to prevent them falling into the hands of the Jacobin Commissioners. Their rules impressed the necessity of leading moral lives; submission to the Masters, whom the Companions served for five or seven years; attention to their religious duties; and charity to their poorer brethren, &c. Among their symbols were the square, plumb, rule, and compasses, which are distinguishing marks of the officers of a Freemasons' Lodge at this day. Grandidier, in his account of the cathedral, states that when the foundation stone of the tower was laid by Bishop Conrad, of Lichtemberg, the Master Masons contended who should next lay their hands to the work, and in the scuffle one of them was killed by the blow of a maul. According to him (Grandidier) the first Strasbourg lodge was held in a building called the Maurerhoff, in the place opposite the chapel of St. Catherine, which used formerly to be the workshop in which the choicest ornaments of the church used to be cut. In the Cathedral of Vienna are two half-length cut sculptures of the architect Anthony Pilgram, of the date 1313. In one he appears holding a pair of compasses, and in the other a square. Some accounts call the former figure the Master, and the latter his Apprentice. A story is also related respecting the completion of two circular windows in the south transept of the Abbey of St. Ouen at Rouen, finished about the year 1439. One was executed by the Master Mason, the other by his Apprentice; but the latter was of so superior a class of work that it excited the anger and jealousy of the Master, who poniarded the unfortunate Apprentice. For this crime he was tried, condemned, and executed in January, 1440; but the monks gave him Christian burial, as appears from a tomb to his memory, wherein he is described as "M. Alexandre de Berneual, Maistre de Œuvres de Massonerie au Balliage de Rouen et cette Eglise," &c. A similar tradition of the death of an Apprentice, if my memory serves me right, is to be found in the history of Rosslyn Chapel, Scotland, with the exception that in this case it is known, instead of a window, as "The Story of the 'Prentices Pillar."

"FOR a year and a half I suffered so much with rheumatism in my arm as to deprive me of all rest; and as I could get no relief from the faculty, my daughter persuaded me to try your Vegetable Pain Killer. The first bottle convinced me that it would restore the use of my paralysed arm as well as relieve the pain, and before I had finished the second I had got the cure I had so long sought in vain.—ELIZA MARKS, Milksham, Oct. 1868.—To P. Davis & Son, London."

Obituary.

BRO. THE COUNT DE SALIS.

We have to record the death, on the 24th ult., of Bro. Peter John Count de Salis. The late count was the only child of Jerome Count de Salis, by his first wife, Sophia, second daughter, and eventually heiress, of Admiral Francis William Drake, of Buckland Abbey, Devon. He was born February 26, 1799, and succeeded his father October 20, 1836, as Count of the Germanic or Holy Roman Empire. The deceased count married, first, February 19, 1821, Henrietta de St. Denis de Grancy, but by her had no issue; and, secondly, July 19, 1824, Cecilia Henrietta Margaret, Bourgeois, daughter of M. David Bourgeois, of Neufchatel, by whom he had issue four sons and a daughter. The late brother was a lieutenant-colonel in the capitulated service of Switzerland, and served in the Swiss Guards of the King of France; was a Knight of Malta and of the Order of the Red Eagle of Prussia; and was a Deputy-Lieutenant for the county of Armagh, and a magistrate for Middlesex and Westminster. The deceased was a member of the Masonic Order and a Mark Master, the latter degree having been conferred upon him at his residence by special dispensation. He was also a Knight of the English Langue of the Order of St. John, over which R.W. Bro. the Duke of Manchester presides.

ROSICRUCIAN SOCIETY OF ENGLAND.

The Bristol Provincial College; under the control of Frater Captain Irwin, 31°, held their quarterly meeting at the Masonic Rooms, Weston-super-Mare, on Monday, 2nd inst. The M—C— was formed at 6 p.m. by Captain Townsend, R.N., the celebrant, who, after opening the college, explained to the fratres that there was but one vacancy in the grade of Zelator, and the Chief Adept had selected the senior aspirant, Bro. Whereat, to fill it.

Bro. Whereat being in attendance was ordered to be prepared, and was, on his admission, advanced to the grade of Zelator by the celebrant, Frater Townsend, who performed the ceremony in the most impressive manner. He was ably assisted by Fratres Cox, Clarke, Davis, Jones, and others.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the Chief Adept, with the unanimous approval of the members of the college, appointed the following officers for the present year:—

Frater Davis, 30° ...	... Celebrant.
" Townsend, 18° ...	... Past Celebrant.
" Munbee, 30° ...	... Suffragan.
" Cox, 18° ...	... Conductor of Novices.
" Clarke, 18° ...	... 1st Ancient.
" Gregory, 18° ...	... 2nd " and Org.
" Jones, 18° ...	... 3rd "
" Whereat ...	... 4th "
" Inskip, 18° ...	... H., & Cus. of Temple.
" Beedle, 18° ...	... Torch-bearer.

The officers of the college having been installed, the Chief Adept announced his intention of holding another Rosicrucian meeting in February, for the purpose of conferring the 2nd grade, or Theoricus, on the officers of the college who had so ably assisted him during the past twelve months, and thus enable several aspirants to attain the grade Zelator.

He reminded the Fratres that Grand and Provincial College fees were now due, and set an example (followed by every member present) of paying to the Secretary-General all fees and subscriptions to 1st January, 1872.

Frater Irwin then called attention to the manner in which the college had been prepared for the evening's ceremony. He said Frater Cox had been employed decorating and preparing during the greater part of the day, and the appearance of the room well repaid all labour bestowed upon it.

Nothing further having been offered for the good of our Order, and after the usual questions, the college was closed by the new Celebrant, Frater Davis, in the solemn and impressive manner peculiar to this grade, and the M—C— was broken.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

THE GRAND SENATE.

An assembly of the Grand Senate of this Order was held at Freemasons' Tavern, on Saturday, the 7th inst., for the purpose of conferring the higher grades of the Red Cross upon approved candidates. There was a very large attendance, and amongst those present we observed Ill. Kts. John Hervey, G.H. Chancellor; W. H. Hubbard, G.T.; R. Wentworth Little, G.R.; J. G. Marsh, G.A.; Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., G.A.M.; G. Powell, G.S.B.; W. Mann, V. 3; W. West Smith, 1; G. Chubb, 2; G. Kenning, K.G.C. 1; Rev. W. B. Church, V.-elect 6; A. C. Morton, 6; F. Walters, P.S.G.; J. Brett, K.G.C. 2; M. Edwards, 1; J. Boyd, P.S. 2; G. Lambert, 15; A. J. Codner, 1; and C. A. Cottebrune, M.P.S. 3.

A College of Viceroy's was first opened, and the following knights were admitted: The Rt. Hon. the Lord Eliot, Intendant-General for Devonshire; Andrew Hay, Intendant-General, Unatt.; E. A. Philbrick (Recorder of Colchester), Capt. J. Bertrand Payne, T. Burdett Yeoman, and W. Blake Johnston.

The Senate was then held, and Sir Kts. Lord Eliot, E. A. Philbrick, F. Binckes, A. Hay, Capt. Payne, C. Lucey (M.D.), J. Taylor, J. Dyer, T. Burdett Yeoman, and W. B. Johnston were duly enthroned as Sovereigns of the Order, both ceremonies being rendered by Sir Kt. Little, who was ably assisted by Sir Kts. Lewis as V., G. Powell as Expert, and G. Kenning as Herald.

Before closing the Senate, the Presiding Officer reminded the knights present that the Triennial Grand Conclave of the Order would be held on the 6th March next, under the sceptre of the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Bective, Grand Sovereign; and he expressed a hope that his lordship's presidency on that occasion would be loyally supported by a most imposing array of Red Cross Knights.

ANCIENT AND PRIMITIVE RITE OF MISRAIM.

A meeting of the Bective Sanctuary of Levites was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Saturday, the 7th inst., and was well-attended, two of the Conservators-General being in their places in the East, and between thirty and forty Levites in the tabernacle. The following candidates were admitted, nine being members of the Red Cross Order, and five Master Masons: Bros. John Dyer, C. A. Cottebrune, C. H. Rogers-Harrison, A. G. Morton, Rev. W. B. Church, M.A., W. West Smith, Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., G. Lambert, G. Chubb, Major P. Dunbar (P.M. 437), G. Everett (177), H. M. Green (804), I. J. Wilkins (79), and J. Willing, jun. (177).

The portrait of the late Ill. Brother Marc Bedarride, "Premier Grand Conservateur" of the Rite, having been kindly lent for the occasion by one the Conservators-General, who was unable to attend, was exhibited to the brethren present, and excited much interest.

Letters of apology for non-attendance were received from S. Bros. Capt. F. G. Irwin, 90°; W. J. Hughan, 90°; and other influential members who reside at a distance from town.

We understand that the following brethren have been selected for office in the sanctuary by the M.E.H.P.: Major E. H. Finney, 90°, S.S.; James Terry, 33°, J.S.; C. H. Rogers-Harrison, 33°, C.L.; S. Rosenthal, 90°, Treasurer; John Boyd, 66°, Almoner; H. C. Levander, M.A., 33°, E.; Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., 33°, A.E.; T. Burdett Yeoman, 33°, M.C.; G. Kenning, 66°, W.G.; H. Parker, 33°, Org.; W. Carpenter, 33°, Mann, 33°, G. Lambert, 33°, E. Sillifant, 33°, G. Powell, 33°, T. W. White, 33°, and J. L. Thomas, 33°, Guardians of the Veil.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

On Wednesday, the 11th inst., the Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons held a meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Bro. Major J. Creaton, V.P., in the chair; and there were also present: Bros. B. Head, Spiers, J. Smith, P.G.P.; F. Walters, J. Bellerby, W. Farnfield, Sec.; H. M. Levy, Fraser, J. R. Sheen, Hemsworth, Browse, Young, and others.

The minutes of the meeting held on Dec. 14 were read and unanimously confirmed.

The death of Bro. G. White, male annuitant, was announced. Out of twelve applications as candidates for the Annuity Fund, one male was deferred until next meeting, and eight males and three females were placed on the list.

Other business having been disposed of, the usual vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

A Quarterly Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held on Thursday at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. Amongst those present were Bros. John Hervey (in the chair), Major J. Creaton, Thos. W. White, W. Young, John A. Rucker, &c.

The minutes having been read and confirmed, it was announced that there were twenty-three candidates for election in April, and the meeting declared six vacancies.

A resolution was agreed to authorising the Committee of Management to purchase £1,000 Three per Cent. Consols in the names of the trustees.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the proceedings.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A meeting of the General Committee of the Boys' School was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Saturday, the 7th inst. Bros. B. Head, V.P. (in the chair), Symonds, V.P., J. G. Chancellor, F. Walters, V.P., G. Cox, J. Weaver, F. Grosjean, R. Spencer, Meyers, Philbrick, Turner, F. Adlard, H. Browse, J. R. Sheen, T. W. White, and F. Binckes (secretary) were present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed.

Of the nine candidates who presented their petitions, seven were accepted and two deferred. One candidate who had stood previous elections withdrew.

The list of candidates stands thus:—On old list, 37; new applications, 21; total, 58; out of which number only fourteen can be elected next April.

The quarterly meeting was announced to take place on Monday, the 16th inst., at 12.

CHRISTMAS AT WOOD GREEN.

During the usual Christmas vacation the comfort and happiness of the pupils of the above Institution have not been neglected. The season's exceptionally generous cheer has been provided, and enjoyed in wholesome moderation, and we are rejoiced to find that throughout the establishment health and contentment prevail.

On Monday, 2nd inst., Bro. Seymour Smith gave his "Humorous Entertainment," and succeeded in charming all present by his witty and genial style. On Thursday there was a "Magic Lantern" exhibition on a large scale, which proved a fund of amusement, thanks to the kindness of Bro. J. J. Cox, of Ludgate-hill. On Friday evening, M. Evanion attended and produced his "Evening of Illusions," as presented before their R.H.'s the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other distinguished assemblies. Nothing could exceed the cleanness and dexterity with which the various illusions were performed, and the pupils, with a numerous gathering of "children of larger growth," including the entire executive staff, servants, members of the House Committee, and friends of the Institution resident in the neighbourhood, were alike surprised and delighted with the marvels of illusionist art.

Educational duties were resumed on Monday, the 9th, and it is hoped the wheels of the scholastic curriculum will roll all the easier for the previous supply of the oil of merriment so judiciously applied.

THE FREEMASONS' LIFE BOAT.

The Committee met at Bro. Forster's, Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on Thursday, 5th inst. Bro. N. Gluckstein, P.M. 51, P.P.S.G.W. Essex occupied the chair, and there were also present Bros. S. Davis (Treasurer), Gottheil (Hon. Sec), C. C. Taylor, Mortlock, and Carter. The visitors were Bros. Stutter (429) and M. Davis (141).

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the following brethren were severally proposed and accepted as members of the committee:—Bro. the Rev. D. Shaboe, P.M. and P.G. Chaplain Middlesex; Bro. Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M. 249 and 1094; and S. Levy, 141.

A vote of thanks to Bro. Gluckstein terminated the proceedings, and the meeting was adjourned to Thursday, the 2nd proximo, at 8 p.m.

N.B. The vote of thanks to Br. Kelley, mentioned in the last report should have been to Br. W. Mann, P.M. 186, for his kindness in presenting the committee with 1500 circulars and lists of subscriptions.

LIFE-BOAT SERVICES IN 1870.

Although the year which has just closed has been very stormy, yet it is gratifying to know that it will be remembered for the continued great exertions which have been put forth to rescue shipwrecked persons, as may be seen from the noble list of services rendered last year by the life-boats of the National Lifeboat Institution. This long list shows a total of 503 lives rescued by the life-boats of the Institution, in addition to 21 vessels saved from destruction. During the same period the Lifeboat Institution granted rewards for saving 271 lives by fishing and other boats, making a grand total of 774 lives saved last year mainly through its instrumentality. Altogether the Institution has contributed to the saving of 19,854 shipwrecked persons.

These noble services of the life-boats have varied much in character. Many have been during the dark hours of night, others have been by day, but the same glorious result has in nearly every instance followed them—the salvation of imperilled men from a watery grave. It is also a providential fact and deserving of special record and acknowledgment that, notwithstanding the life-boats of the Institution have been manned on all occasions during the past two years by between 12,000 and 13,000 persons, not a single life has been lost from them during that period!

Still it should be remembered that the work of saving shipwrecked persons, even in the best equipped life-boats, must always be one of danger, and that no little courage and hardihood are required on the part of those who engage in it. By giving their invaluable aid they perform their full share of the duty of alleviating and reducing the amount of the misery and evil produced by the storms on our coasts. It remains for those who cannot share the risks and exposure which those gallant men incur, to perform their part in this humane work by enabling the Institution to continue without slackening its great and philanthropic work on behalf of the shipwrecked sailor. The National Lifeboat Institution therefore appeals to all benevolent and generous persons in the kingdom to contribute towards so good a cause. We may add that contributions in aid of the great and important work of the National Lifeboat Institution are received by all bankers throughout the United Kingdom, and by the Secretary, at the Institution, 14, John-street Adelphi, W.C.

CANADA.

We learn that several of the lodges in Montreal, under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, have decided to forego the annual dinner, and to donate to their Grand Lodge the sum such dinner would have cost.

Nor is Quebec city behind hand in its attachment to the new Grand Lodge, the late Provincial Grand Lodge of England for Quebec and Three Rivers, being numbered amongst the things that were, has presented its beautiful silk banner to the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and jewels and regalia have been purchased by the subordinate lodges, and are about to be presented by them to the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

For the benefit of our readers, we lay before them a most important and interesting communication touching the present existing troubles in the Craft in Canada, addressed by M.W. Bro. T. D. Harington, Grand 1st Prin. Z. of the Grand Chapter of Canada, to the M.W. the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec:—

“Grand Chapter of Canada,
Office of the Grand Chapter, Ottawa,
10th Dec., 1870.

“To M.W. Bro. J. H. Graham, LL.D., Grand Lodge of Quebec.

“Most Worshipful Brother,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt from your Grand Secretary, R.W. Bro. J. H. Isaacson, of a letter, dated the 30th November, and written by your command. I briefly replied to him without delay, telling him at the same time that I would write more at length, which promise I now proceed to carry out. That communication conveyed to me, for the information of Grand Chapter and myself, the official intelligence of the existence of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and was accompanied by a list of Grand Lodge Officers elected and installed at your first annual communication, held in Montreal in October last, for which act of courtesy I have to express my thanks. I beg now to offer my best wishes for the future prosperity of the Grand Body over which you preside, and sincerely trust that all obstructions thereto, of whatsoever nature composed, may take to themselves wings and fly away, and I congratulate you personally on your own high position.

"You ask me to use my influence to preserve and maintain the goodwill and harmony which, in accordance with the goodly customs and courtesies of our Fraternity, should ever exist between the two grand divisions of ancient Masonry—the symbolic and the capitular; and you express your desire, and as being the sincere and hearty desire of your Grand Lodge, to have established and maintained amicable and fraternal relations between the Grand Chapter of Canada and the Grand Lodge of Quebec and their respect subordinates, so that from henceforth harmony and amity may be preserved in our beloved Order in its several departments.

"Most Worshipful Grand Master, I assure you that your truly Masonic wishes are cordially responded to and reciprocated by me, and nothing on my individual part shall be wanting to ensure a result in every way so desirable. I shall with pleasure bring to the notice of Grand Chapter at its next convocation your courteous and fraternal communication, and in the interim, candidates hailing from the Grand Lodge of Quebec for admission into our chapters, will be received and acted upon as they are from other Grand Bodies with whom Grand Chapter is in communion. This course will, I trust, be satisfactory, and secure pleasant intercourse as well as serve to show how my wishes coincide with those so courteously and kindly expressed to me in your behalf by your Grand Secretary.

"I observe and take due notice of the list of Grand Lodges from whom the Grand Lodge of Quebec have received recognition, &c., one of which belongs to this dominion. I trust that you will be able, before any distant date, to state that this recognition has become universal, and that there will not exist one single impediment to the Canadian Craft working harmoniously together, in and for the several provinces comprising the Dominion, as well for its own advantage and advancement as that for the entire Antient and Honourable Order of Freemasonry spread over the world, and of which we form a component portion. My humble services in aid of this devoutly-to-be-wished-for consummation you may freely count upon, and I pray you to give me credit for both goodwill and sincerity.

"I observe, likewise, upon reference to the list, that several of the officers, past officers, and members of Grand Chapter hold rank and position in the Grand Lodge of Quebec, which is of itself a good reason for pleasant intercourse between the two Grand Lodges; and as a conclusion to this letter, I hope we may all be spared to assemble together at future convocations of the same fraternal nature as the one at which we met at the good old city of Quebec in August last, and with the same pleasing recollections after separating.

"I beg to remain, Most Worshipful Grand Master,

"Yours truly and fraternally,

(Signed) T. DOUGLAS HARRINGTON,
"Grand First Principal Z., G.C. of Canada."

THEATRICAL.

GLOBE.—The grand new fairy burlesque extravaganza called "The White Cat" is the Christmas attraction at this theatre. The plot is rather intricate, but the scenery and acting is first class. "Delicate Ground" precedes the extravaganza. The entertainments at this elegant little theatre are well worth a visit.

ASTLEY'S.—"Tom Tittlemouse and the Eleven Dancing Princesses" is the piece at this house, and it is indeed a gorgeous affair. The elaborate scenery is splendid, and two beautiful ballets are introduced. This pantomime may be pronounced a decided success. Mr. John Baum, the energetic manager, well deserves the enthusiastic applause nightly bestowed upon him.

GAIETY.—Mr. Hollingshead has produced an opera bouffe bearing the title of "Aladdin II." The story is improbable, but it is very amusing. Mr. J. L. Toole is great as a magician, and Miss E. Farren pretty and entertaining as Aladdin. The piece is full of songs and lively music, and the dresses and scenery are really magnificent. The ballets were well received, and the piece is likely to run until Easter.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Albion Lodge, No. 9.—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern. The lodge was opened by Bro. R. Bullen, W.M., and he was supported by Bros. Stevens, Young, Valentine, S. Cooke, E. Coote, and Moring, P.M.'s, and many others. Amongst a large number of visitors present we noticed Bros. C. C. Dumas, A.G.D.C.; F. Binckes, P.G.S.; D. II. Jacobs, P.M. 27; W. Harling, W.M. 30; S. Ayres, W.M. 95; W. Holland, J.W. 157; H. Massey, P.M. 619; J. Sweasey, 946; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; A. Avery, W.M. 1314; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188; &c., &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The Audit Committee reported a large balance in favour of the lodge. They also recommended that a P.M.'s jewel be presented to the retiring W.M., Bro. R. Bullen, as an acknowledgment of the able manner in which he presided as W.M. during his year of office. This proposition was carried unanimously. The committee also proposed that in token of the recognition of the many years of service rendered by Bro. Burton, P.M., as Secretary (who now resigns through ill health) that a handsome silver snuff-box be presented to him. This also was carried unanimously. Bro. E. Kimber (1009) was unanimously elected a joining member. He acted on this occasion as Organist. Bros. Carter and Knight were passed to the second degree in an able manner. Bro. S. Valentine, P.M., then installed Bro. W. H. Baylis, S.W., into the chair. The officers for the ensuing year are: Bros. H. Albert, S.W.; Morton, J.W.; Moring, P.M., Treas.; H. Mitchell, Sec. pro tem. (for Bro. Friend, absent through illness); Harvey, S.D.; R. Papineau, J.D.; Cater, I.G.; and G. Smith, P.M., Tyler. The new W.M. gave proof of his proficiency by initiating, in an able, correct, and impressive manner, Mr. David Bewicke. The lodge was then closed, when banquet and dessert followed. The W.M. gave the usual toasts with great ability, Bro. C. C. Dumas responding for "The D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present," and Bro. F. Binckes responded in his usual eloquent manner for "The Masonic Charities," stating how the funds collected had been expended on the Boys' School, soliciting each brother to examine the accounts published, and appealing to the lodge to send a Steward. Subsequently Bro. T. Moring, P.M., Treas., responded by consenting to be a Steward for the Boys' School at the forthcoming festival. Some good songs were sung by Bros. Thomas, Stevens, P.M., and others, and Bro. Jordan in admirable manner played some good music on the piano.

St. Alban's Lodge, No. 29.—This ancient red-apron lodge held its installation meeting on Monday, the 9th inst., at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. Bro. C. Murton occupied the chair as W.M. The only work was installing Bro. Webster Glynes, G.S., into the Master's chair, which was done in the presence of a goodly number of Installed Masters. Bro. W. Glynes appointed and invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Clark, S.W.; Haigh, J.W.; S. E. Nutt, I.P.M., Sec.; Johnson, S.D.; and G. Smith, P.M., Tyler. The usual addresses were then given. It is but seldom we witness the ceremony of installation so well performed. The lodge was then duly closed, when the usual superior banquet followed. Amongst the visitors we noticed Bros. C. Murton, P.M. 7; F. Binckes, P.G.S.; M. Ohren, W.M. 452, J.W. 33; F. Walters, W.M. 1309, P.M. 73; &c.

Lodge of Joppa, No. 188.—On Monday, the 2nd inst., at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, this old and prosperous lodge held its installation meeting. The lodge was opened by Bro. H. M. Levy, P.M. (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Aarons, W.M.), assisted by Bros. M. Alexander, J. Wand, W.M.-elect; C. Nathan, as S.W.; E. Hunt, J.D.; O. B. Roberts, I.G.; S. Hickman, D.C.; T. Abrahams, P.M., Treas.; E. P. Albert, P.M., Sec.; M. Van Diepenheim, L. Alexander, J. Phillips, H. Harriss, and P. Beyfus, P.M.'s; and others. The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bros. Engel and M. Hyman were raised, and Bros. Hunt and Hyman passed, Bro. L. Alexander working the second and third degrees. Bro. M. Van Diepenheim then installed Bro. Maurice Alexander, as W.M., who appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Berkowitz, S.W.; Ed. Hunt, J.W.; J. Elkan, Treas.; E. P. Albert, Sec.; O. Roberts, S.D.; C. Nathan, J.D.; S. Hickman, I.G.; A. Dodson, D.C.; Goldsmith and M. Hyman, Stewards; Van Noorden, Organist. Two guineas were voted to a distressed brother, and the lodge was called off to one of Bro. Jennings' superior banquets, Bro. Keeping superintending in the Christian, and Bro. M. Silver in the Jewish division. The usual toasts were duly honoured. Bro. J. Hervey, G. Secretary, responded for the Grand Officers, and Bro. Beyfus for the "Joppa Benevolent Fund," the report of which had been previously read, showing a balance in hand of over £1,000. Bro. H. G. Buss, P.G.T. Middlesex, replied to the toast of "The Visitors," of whom a goodly number were present. The pleasures of the evening were enhanced by the musical arrangements under the superintendence of Bro. Van Noorden, who gave an amusing song, composed by himself. Miss P. Laverne, Miss Couves, Miss F. Eldon, and Mr. Bolton sang some good songs, and Bro. Stevens, by desire, gave his excellent Masonic song, "What better theme than Masonry?"

Lodge of Confidence, No. 193.—On Monday, 9th inst., at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, a regular meeting of this lodge was held. Bro. W. Thomas, W.M., presided, and was supported by a large attendance of the members and the following officers, viz., Bros. R. Lee, I.P.M.; J. Williams, S.W.; Cutting, J.W.; J. Rogers, P.M., Sec.; Shackell, S.D.; King, J.D.; F. Bonney, I.G.; Warre, Webb, and W. F. Rogers, P.M.'s. The minutes of the installation meeting were read and confirmed, after which Bro. Barker was passed, and Bro. Ansell, Thompson, S. Hill, Howland, and Godfrey raised. The entire ceremony, including the history and tracing-board. The W.M. proved by his earnest rendering of the ceremonies how well he had perfected himself in all his work, and what a sincere interest he felt in doing his duty, and was warmly congratulated by several P.M.'s when he had concluded. After labour the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and the usual enjoyable evening was spent. It is worthy of notice that several of the brethren of this lodge have formed themselves into a club for the purpose of obtaining Life Governorships of the Masonic charities. A certain sum is paid by each, and when enough is in hand a draw takes place, and the successful brother thus becomes possessed of a Life Governorship. By such means every lodge might enrol a number of its members as Life Governors. It is gratifying to record how well the claims of our Charities are supported by the Lodge of Confidence.

Lodge of Israel, No. 205.—On Tuesday, the 27th ult., the members of this lodge held their usual meeting at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars. Bro. J. Emanuel W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. H. Harris, S.W.; M. Emanuel, J.W.; J. Isaacs, P.M., Treas.; A. Cohen, P.M., Sec.; Hogan, J.D.; J. Emanuel, I.G.; Hayden, D.C.; S. Jones, P.M., as Org.; C. Coote, J. Harriss, W. Littauer, S. Harris, and Nathan, P.M.'s; Morse, Moses, Barnett, Mendoza, Collinridge, &c., &c. Amongst the visitors were Bros. H. M. Emanuel (P.G.S.W. Hants), F. Walters, J. Phillips, and H. M. Levy, P.M.'s; W. G. Kent, and J. Gutnacher. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The work done was passing Bros. J. T. Samuel and Rexworthy, and raising Bro. Smith, which ceremonies were gone through in an admirable manner. Elections by ballot resulted in favour of Bro. H. Harris for W.M., and Bro. C. Coote, for Treas. (Bro. Isaacs declining the honour of re-election); Bro. T. Vesper, P.M., was re-elected Tyler. Five gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and Bro. H. A. Isaacs, P.M., was elected an honorary member. Three guineas were voted from the lodge funds towards a P.M. jewel for the retiring W.M.; a poor brother was relieved; and after some other business the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of an excellent banquet.

Perfect Ashlar Lodge, No. 1178.—This lodge was held on Thursday, the 5th inst., at the Gregorian Arms, Bermondsey. Bro. J. Green, W.M., opened the lodge, there being also present: Bros. J. W. Avery, P.M.; G. J. Grace, S.W.; J. W. Dudley, J.W.; F. H. Ebsworth, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; J. H. Harmsworth, S.D.; J. H. Fudge, J.D.; T. W. Cox, I.G.; C. Deakin, D.C.; J. Ruse, W.S.; G. Mabbs, W. May, J. Wootton, P. Fry, J. A. Astell, H. Bartlett, G. A. Claeys, F. Cox, S. Butcher, C. D. Tustin, C. F. Robinson, G. Drapper, J. Swinyard, T. Jones, G. Free, J. A. Smith, J. Rambert, &c. The minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. G. A. Claeys was, in an admirable manner, passed to the second degree. Bro. J. W. Avery (in consequence of the ill health of the W.M.) then took the chair, and in his usual correct style raised Bros. F. Cox, T. Jones, J. Swinyard, and C. D. Tustin to the third degree. The W.M., having resumed the chair, presented Bro. Avery with a massive gold P.M.'s jewel, which had been subscribed for amongst the members of the lodge. Bro. Avery, in an appropriate speech, returned thanks. The by-laws were revised, and the lodge having been closed, the brethren separated.

PROVINCIAL.

HINCKLEY.—Knights of Malta Lodge, No. 50.—The annual festival of this old lodge was held on Wednesday, the 28th ult., and the W.M.-elect, was installed by Bro. W. Langley, the outgoing W.M. At five o'clock the lodge was opened, and after business of a private kind, the lodge was raised to the second degree, when Bro. Cotman presented Bro. E. Houston for the benefit of installation. Bro. Langley then, after administering the usual oath, placed his successor in the chair of K.S., and he was duly proclaimed in each degree. The following brethren were then invested as the officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Rev. W. Langley, I.P.M.; J. Worsey, S.W.; Thomas Atkins, J.W.; T. W. Clarke, P.M., Sec. and Treas.; Rev. P. H. Phelps, S.D.; Harrold, J.D.; J. Billings, I.G.; Young, Tyler. The Treasurer's report was taken as read, and the lodge was closed. At nine o'clock the brethren and their wives and friends again assembled for a ball, and a very lively evening was spent. At eleven o'clock a sumptuous supper was served, and after it a P.M.'s jewel was presented by Bro. Atkins, in the name of the brethren, to Bro. Langley, in an eloquent speech. After a short reply, thanking the brethren, the dancing once more commenced, and was kept up with much spirit until half-past four o'clock. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Buzard, W.M. 379; Dr. Williams, 18, S.W. 47; Williams, 279; Newgent, I.P.M. Abbey Lodge, Nuneaton, Duncombe, S.W. 1265. The P.G.M., Bro. W. Kelly, was prevented by the illness of his sister from attending.

RINGWOOD.—Lodge of Unity, No. 132.—The installation of the W.M. of this lodge took place on the 29th ult. The choice of the brethren having fallen unanimously on Bro. H. F. Brouncker, he was duly installed, the ceremony being performed by Bro. W. M. Heath, P.M., P.G.S.W. Dorset, who fulfilled his duties as Installing Master most admirably. The W.M. then nominated his officers, who were respectively invested by Bro. Heath as follows: Bros. W. Reade, S.W.; J. C. Halliday, J.W.; W. Fletcher, S.D.; T. G. Horder, J.D.; Etheridge, I.G.; Hicks, Sec.; E. Low, Treas.; Elliott, Tyler. Bros. Low and Packman were appointed Stewards of the lodge. The brethren present, besides those named, were Bros. Cull, Mafey, and Michel, P.M.'s; Hume and Waters. The visitors were Bros. P. H. Newham, W.M. 195; E. W. Rebbeck, P.M. 195; Brimblecombe and Tripp, 319; Webb and Holloway, 195; Ridley, Lewis, and Chilcott, 1112. After the lodge was closed, the brethren adjourned to the Magistrates' room in the Ringwood Town Hall, where an excellent dinner was provided by Bro. Low, which was done ample justice to by the guests. The usual Masonic toasts followed, and the whole proceedings were of the most pleasant and satisfactory nature.

STONEHOUSE.—Lodge of Sincerity, No. 189.—This Lodge held its annual banquet at the Duke of Cornwall Hotel, and about thirty brethren sat down to an excellent dinner. In the necessary absence of Bro. Capt. Shanks, R.M., the W.M. of the Lodge, Bro. Balkwill, I.P.M., presided, and was supported on his right by the V.W. Bro. Metham, D.P.G.M., and on his left by V.W. Bro. R. R. Rodd, P.M., P.P.G.S.W. of Cornwall; Bro. Roberts, S.W., acted as vice. A pleasant evening was spent. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and drank with enthusiasm.

ROCHDALE.—Lodge of Harmony, No. 298.—The annual meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Wednesday, Jan. 4th, for the celebration of the festival of St. John and the installation of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Robert Howard. The lodge was opened in the first degree by the W.M., Bro. John Waterson, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and other business transacted. The lodge was afterwards opened in the second degree, when a Board of Installed Masters was formed, under the presidency of Bro. Wm. Roberts, P.G. Officer of East Lancashire and West Yorkshire, who called upon the following brethren to assist him, viz., Bros. John Barker, P.P.G. Treas., as S.W.; William Ashworth, Hon. Sec., J.W.; C. M. Jones, P.P.G.D.C., S.D.; James Holroyd, I.P.M., J.D.; John Fothergill, I.G.; and James Parr, who presented the W.M.-elect for installation. Bro. Howard having answered the necessary questions and being found qualified for the office of W.M., the lodge was opened in the third degree, when the brethren below the degree of an Installed Master retired, and the Board of Installed Masters was opened, when Bro. Howard was duly installed in the chair of K.S. in ancient form, by Bro. Roberts. The brethren having re-entered the lodge, and the W.M. regularly proclaimed and saluted, he proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows, viz., Bros. Jesse Firth, S.W.; R. Butterworth, J.W.; W. H. Prince, P.M., Treas.; W. Ashworth, P.M., Sec.; James Cross, S.D.; Thomas Oakden, J.D.; Edwd. Wrigley, P.M., Org.; W. T. Stott, I.G.; John Ashworth, jun., D.C.; and John Waterson, I.P.M. The address to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren was given by Bros. Holroyd, Ashworth, and John Barker, and the ceremony was most efficiently performed. The W.M., in closing his lodge, had great pleasure in receiving the hearty congratulations of the brethren of Harmony Lodge and representatives of 541, 152, 226, 308, 367, 816, 1055, 1129, 1134, 1147, 1213, and Prov. Grand Lodges of West Yorkshire, East Lancashire, and West Lancashire. The brethren then adjourned to a substantial banquet provided for forty-five, and served by Bro. James Ashworth in his usual style. After ample justice had been done and the cloth removed, the usual toasts, interspersed with songs, glees, and recitations, were ably and pleasantly proposed and responded to by various brethren, and a most pleasant evening was spent. This lodge is to be fully represented at the festivals of the Boys' and Girls' Schools, four brothers having given in their names as Stewards.

TEIGNMOUTH, DEVONSHIRE.—Benevolent Lodge, No. 303.—The anniversary meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, on Monday, Jan. 2nd, when the lodge was opened by Bro. Burdon, W.M., assisted by Bros. Hallett, S.W.; Coles, J.W.; H. M. Bartlett, I.P.M.; Short, S.D.; Perry, as J.D.; Tomes, Sec.; and Haggerty, Tyler. There were also present: Bros. Capt. Walrond, P.M. and P.P.G.J.W.; W. J. Paul, P.M. and P.P.G.J.D.; many members of the lodge, and Bros. H. Bartlett, 710 and P.P.G.D.C.; and Dr. Hopkins, 710, P.M. 43 and 958, and P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire, with one or two others, as visitors. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and a ballot was taken for a candidate, which proved unanimous in his favour. Mr. John Cox was then introduced and duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order by the W.M., who promised to complete the proceedings by giving the charge and lecture on the tracing board at a Lodge of Emergency, to be held on early day, as well as to confer the second degree on several candidates to whom it is due. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the chair was taken by Bro. Walrond, who had undertaken the duties of Installing Master. Bro. Burdon was presented as having been elected to preside over the lodge a second year, and was again inducted into his office of W.M. The Installing Master well deserves a compliment on the efficiency with which he, for the first time, conducted this important ceremony. The following appointments to office for the ensuing year were made: Bro. H. M. Bartlett, I.P.M.; Hallett, S.W.; Short, J.W.; Tomes, Sec.; Whidburne, Treas.; Roach, S.D.; Collins, J.D.; Coles and Lorain, Stewards; Perryman, I.G.; and Haggerty, Tyler. The brethren afterwards adjourned to the Queen's Hotel to partake of the annual banquet, which was prepared with his usual care and liberality by Bro. H. M. Bartlett, the host.

LISKEARD.—Lodge of St. Martin, 510.—On St. John's Day, the brethren of this Lodge celebrated their annual festival. Bro. S. Seacombe presided, and was assisted in Masonic labors by Bro. Lang, who installed the W.M. elect, Bro. W. Skin, in the chair. Bro. Skin then appointed the following brethren as his officers for the year ensuing:—Bros. S. Seacombe, I.P.M.; N. A. Courtney, S.W.; T. White, J.W.; J. Clymo, Treasurer; T. Lang, Secretary; J. Sobey, S.D.; N. Martin, J.D.; J. H. Botterell, I.G.; J. George and J. Hodges, Stewards; R. Penwarden, Tyler. The brethren afterwards sat down to a most sumptuous banquet, provided by mine host, Bro. Venning, who catered in his usual liberal manner.

CALLINGTON.—Loyal Victoria Lodge, No. 557.—The annual meeting of this Lodge was held at their Lodge-room, Bull's Head Inn, Callington. The W.M. elect, Bro. G. Crabb, was duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year, the ceremony being ably performed by the Installing Master, Bro. Pearce, P.M. and P.P.G.J.D., assisted by P.M.'s Bros. Mason, P.P.S.G.W., Steele and Coward. The W.M. then appointed the following brethren to be his officers, viz.:—Bros. J. Harris, S.W.; G. Bale, J.W.; Pearce, P.M., Treas.; Williams, Sec.; Turner, S.D.; Richards, J.D.; Cornish, I.G.; and Henwood, Tyler. Bro. Mason was appointed Steward of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund. At the conclusion of the business the brethren sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by their worthy host, Mr. Brown. After the customary loyal and masonic toasts had been given and responded to, Bro. Kempthorne, P.M. and P.P.J.G.W., on behalf of the Lodge, presented to Bro. Pearce a handsome silver claret jug.

FOWEY.—Fowey Lodge, No. 977.—On Monday week this Lodge assembled at their rooms, situated in Church-street, Fowey, to perform the business connected with the monthly meeting, to install the Master, and to celebrate the festival of St. John. The Lodge was duly opened by Bro. W. Hicks, W.M.; a candidate was initiated in the degree of Entered Apprentice; and a Brother passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The W.M. elect, Bro. J. Truscott, was ably installed by Bro. J. D. Hawkesley, P.M., P.P.G.C., assisted by Bros. Dr. Treffrey, P.M., and Col. Peard, P.M., P.P.O. The W.M. then invested as his officers:—Bros. W. Hicks, I.P.M.; J. Slade, S.W.; W. N. Abbott, J.W.; H. W. Durant, Treasurer and Steward of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund; Bros. W. Tonkin, Sec.; J. Wellington, D.C.; Greet, S.D.; Nurse, J.D.; Beale and Rescorl, Stewards; Couch, I.G.; J. Pain, Tyler. The brethren adjourned to a banquet provided by Bro. Nurse, in his usual good style, at the Ship Hotel. The W.M. presided, and was supported on his right and left by six Past Masters. Amongst the visiting brethren were Bros. Hawkesley, P.M., P.P.G.C., and Elliott, from "St. Andrew's;" P. Giles, W.M., and G. Dyke, J.W., from "Peace and Harmony," &c., &c. The usual loyal and masonic toasts were drunk with enthusiasm, and some telling speeches were made in responding, when, and after a truly agreeable afternoon, the Lodge was closed about 8 p.m.

NEWTON ABBOT.—Devon Lodge, No. 1138.—The brethren of this Lodge assembled at the Masonic Rooms, Courtney Park, on Tuesday week, at noon, and after initiating one Brother and raising another, proceeded with the installation of the W.M.-elect, Bro. F. D. Bewes, P.M. There were present as a board of Past Masters, W. Lambie, Major, Yates, P.G.S.W., and after the installation the following brethren were elected and appointed officers by the W.M.: Bros. Geo. Stockman, S.W.; E. W. Lambie, J.W.; H. G. Benchev, P.M., Treas.; R. L. Lloyd, Sec.; A. Christie, S.D.; John Williams, J.D.; R. Coldridge, I.G.; T. Weeks, Tyler.

MARK MASONRY.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DEVON.

A Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Masters was held recently at Sincerity Lodge, No. 35, St. George's Hall, Stonehouse. The R.W., Bro. Dowse, presided, assisted by Bros. Rodd, P.M., P.G.O., as D.P.G.M.; Metham, S.W.; Col. Elliott, J.W.; Roberts, M.O.; Blake, S.O.; Balkwill, J.O.; Bisset, S.D.; Baxter, J.D.; Bayly, P.

After the usual business, the following sums were voted to charitable purposes:—Ten guineas to the Fortescue Annuity Fund, five guineas to the Masonic bed of the Royal Albert Hospital, and five guineas for aged and decayed Freemasons.

The R.W. Bro. Huyshe was unanimously re-elected Grand Master for three years. The following officers were then appointed for the ensuing year:—

Bro. Rev. J. Huyshe	... P.G. Master
" Dowse	... D.P.G. Master

BURY, LANCASHIRE.—Callender Lodge No. 123.—On Friday, the 6th of January, the Callender Lodge, No. 123, under the English Constitution, was opened at Bury, Lancashire. A warrant having been granted by the Most Worshipful Grand Master, Bro. George R. Portal, it was thought desirable to hold a preliminary meeting to advance a number of brethren previous to the consecration and inauguration, which was fixed to take place on Friday, the 13th of January. A dispensation for the purpose was therefore granted by the Prov. G. Master, Bro. W. Romaine Callender. Great credit is due to Bros. W. O. Walker-Law, Booth, and G. M. Whitehead for the establishment of the lodge, and the great success of its first meeting. These three brethren took the degree some three months ago in the Union Lodge, No. 46, Manchester, and they immediately set to work to form one in their own town. We sincerely hope other brothers in the province may do the same. Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, W.M.M. Blair Lodge, 118, Prov. J.G.D. Lan., who was invited to open the lodge, after reading the dispensation and explaining the circumstances of the meeting, opened the lodge, when four brothers were affiliated Mark Masters under the E.C., and fourteen advanced to the degree. This number making a total of twenty-one members. The lodge then unanimously elected a Treasurer and Tyler. Other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. We may add that Bros. Roberts and Butterworth, from Roberts' Lodge, Rochdale, rendered great assistance in working the ceremonies. After banquet, the usual loyal toasts were given, when Bro. Thomas Hargreaves proposed the toast of "Success to the Callender Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 123." He referred to the progress now being made in the Mark Degree in Lancashire—this would be the second lodge that the Prov. G.M. had been called upon to consecrate since the formation of the Prov. G. Lodge in October last. At that time there were only five working lodges in the province; this, he thought, would make the number into eight, and several more were in course of formation. There were a great many lodges in Lancashire who worked the degree, and in a variety of ways—all of them without warrants, and in some cases as far from correct as it is possible to imagine. Now, it was the earnest desire of the Prov. G.M., as also that of the G.M., that all these lodges should be abolished—abolished so far as this: that they should acknowledge the correct working of the degree, as authorised by the Grand Lodge, and come under its jurisdiction. In one sense, they would retain all their old rights and privileges as time-immemorial lodges. He had been well pleased at one part of the ceremony, that of affiliating four brothers from those spurious lodges (he hoped the brothers would not be offended at the expression) as members of this lodge; and he trusted a great many more would follow in their footsteps. He should simply ask those four brothers, whenever they saw any of the spurious brother Mark Masons, to explain the different working of the degree. This would be the most effective way of bringing them to a happy union.—The toasts of "Bro. Hargreaves," "Bro. W. O. Walker, W.M.-elect," and others, were afterwards given.

GUILDFORD.—Percy Lodge, No. 114.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Angel Hotel, on Thursday, the 5th inst., when, in the unavoidable absence of Earl Percy, W.M., the chair was taken by the Rev. G. R. Portal, M.W.G.M. After the confirmation of the minutes, the Treasurer's report of the balance sent to the fund for the relief of the sick and wounded from the concert given by the lodge in the summer, was received and adopted. It appeared that £40 3s. 11d. had been transmitted, the cost to the lodge being £7 8s. 1d., one half of the expenses incurred. The report of the Committee on the by-laws was received, and the by-laws read and approved. A vote of thanks was passed to the M.W.G.M. for the present of an appropriate stamp for the lodge summonses. A ballot was then taken for Bros. Thomas White, of Godalming; Philip William Lovett and Col. Thomas Martin, of Guildford; A. W. Cooper, of Chertsey; Spencer Compton, of Horsell; and Mantering W. Bolton, of London, which proved unanimous. Bros. Col. Martin, Lovett, and Bolton being present, were then advanced. After the closing of the lodge, a banquet was held, when the usual Masonic toasts were duly given and acknowledged. The M.W.G.M., in responding, said that he looked forward with confidence to the speedy union of all Mark Masters in England under one jurisdiction. Nothing could exceed the kind and Masonic feeling evinced by the G.C. of Scotland and the Scotch Mark lodges, especially in Lancashire, in consenting to a conference with a view to an arrangement that should be alike honourable and satisfactory to all parties, and nothing should be wanting on his part to bring matters to the conclusion which was so desirable. The G.C. of Ireland and the G.C. of Canada had behaved in the handsomest way to this G.L., and so soon as the treaties had been concluded between the Mark G.L. and the other non-recognised degrees, he thought that a new era of mutual assistance and consolidation would be opened up for all the degrees and Orders. The banquet was enlivened with some excellent singing by Bro. Bolton, in a style that was rapturously applauded.

FAITH LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—The above Lodge of Instruction is held every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the spacious and commodious rooms at Bro. Fisher's Restaurant, Metropolitan District Railway Station, Victoria, S.W. Ceremonies and lectures worked every Tuesday, except the third Tuesday in the month, when the ceremonies alone are rehearsed. The DOMATIC CHAPTER OF INSTRUCTION is also held in the above rooms every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, from October until April inclusive.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

OUR AMERICAN CONTEMPORARIES.

THE progress of the Masonic press in America, which of late years has been so remarkable, continues, we are happy to say, undiminished, and similar signs of intellectual activity are visible in the Dominion of Canada. We have now before us a considerable number of magazines or newspapers published on the other side of the Atlantic, some of which are professedly Masonic organs, while others devote a portion of their columns to the dissemination of Masonic information and intelligence. One of the oldest periodicals comprised in the first category is the Freemasons' Monthly Magazine, edited by Brother Charles W. Moore, Corresponding Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, at Boston, in that State. This valuable magazine comes to us in a very handsome wrapper, profusely illustrated with emblems of the various Orders of Masonry. Thus, as a heading, we have the High Priest, the King and Scribe, or the three Principals of a Royal Arch Chapter, according to the American ritual, seated in gorgeous chairs, under elaborately decorated canopies, surmounted with four banners, bearing the respective devices of a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle. There are also the rose-circled cross of the 18°, the Paschal Lamb of Knight Templary, the mitre of High Priesthood, the bee-hive of the Master Mason, the crowned bi-headed eagle of K.H., the symbolic level, square and compass being depicted at the sides; while the rest of the corner represents those dramatic incidents in the career of Zerubbabel to which we recently alluded in our account of the American Red Cross degree. The contents of Bro. Moore's magazine are always interesting, practical, and instructive, and as a Masonic juriconsult, we know no safer guide than our venerable and venerated confrere.

Another Masonic magazine which has stood the test of time, and is deservedly held in high estimation, is the Masonic Review of Cincinnati, Ohio, which is edited by another Brother "Moore"—Cornelius, to wit, of that ilk. The Review is replete with information, and the editor's experience and literary ability are conspicuous in all the original articles. Like many other American Masonic periodicals, however, the Review contains well-selected tales and other extracts of general interest to the non-Masonic reader.

The Masonic Record, edited by Brothers John Frizzell and George S. Blackie, M.D., and published at Nashville, Tennessee, is a credit to that great State, and to the Masonic bodies thereof which it so ably represents. There is an entire absence of that bitterness which is unfortunately but too often visible in the writings of some of our Transatlantic contemporaries, who fancy that strong language is a sign of mental power, even as vulgar people imagine that the use of expletives strengthens the force of their statements. Bro. Blackie, who is, we believe, a "Britisher," hailing from the "land of the mountain and the flood," is evidently a cultivated gentleman, and one who has no relish for the trade of roaring down a literary opponent. He is now, we are pleased to add, Representative of the Grand Lodge of England at the Grand Lodge of Tennessee.

The Voice of Masonry, edited by Brother John C. W. Bailey, at Chicago, Illinois, is an exceedingly neat and well-arranged magazine. It has not, however, reached us of late with any degree of regularity, owing probably to its attractive exterior, which excites the curiosity—may we say cupidity?—of certain lovers of literature either in our own or the American Post Office. Fortunately, the number for November, 1870, is before us, and we can judge by its contents that Bro. Bailey's "Voice" is still as resonant as ever in support of the principles of Freemasonry.

Our namesake, the Freemason, of St.

Louis, Missouri, is larger than any of the magazines to which we have previously referred. It is edited by Bro. George Frank Gouley, Grand Secretary of the State—a man of great ability and comprehensive views. It is, however, a source of regret to us that the Freemason also does not come to hand regularly, the last one received being the number for October, 1870.

Similar remarks apply to the Evergreen, of Dubuque, Iowa. Bro. E. A. Guilbert, M.D., the editor, is a Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Iowa, and a sound Masonic authority. He has consistently advocated the recognition of the new Grand Lodge of Quebec, which, we are glad to record en passant, is now in fellowship with no less than twelve Grand Lodges on the American Continent. We miss Bro. Guilbert's excellent periodical, and hope soon to hear of it again.

The Masonic Trowel is published at Springfield, Illinois, under the editorial management of Bro. Harman G. Reynolds, a Past Grand Master, and one who can wield his pen with great advantage to the Craft. The contents of the Trowel are very varied, but always readable and instructive.

The Landmark, of New York, next claims our attention. This is a weekly paper, and appears to be well supported by the Fraternity. Short tales and brief extracts from general literature, as well as Masonic information, grace its pages, and the ladies, we may observe, have their own special department.

The Masonic Mirror hails from El Dorado, being published at San Francisco, California. The number for December 3, 1870, is now before us, and contains much valuable pabulum for the minds of our Californian brethren. It would be better, however, in our opinion, if the advertisements were not intermingled with the literary portion of the Mirror, and we are sure our worthy San Franciscan confrere will pardon us for the hint.

The Masonic Tidings, of Lockport, New York, edited by Bros. John W. Simons and John Ransom, is a genuine Masonic newspaper, full of intelligence of an interesting nature, and with less "padding" than any other periodical of its class; but unfortunately we do not see enough of it, and must again throw the blame on the insatiable horseleeches of the Post-office, who swallow all our Tidings.

The Michigan Freemason, published at Kalamazoo, a very promising magazine, has found its way to us once or twice. So has the American Freemason, edited by the Masonic free lance, Bro. J. Fletcher Brennan, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Bro. Brennan is somewhat revolutionary in his tendencies, and does not appear to be in great favour amongst his brethren of the Masonic press. It is not always well to show us only the dark side of events, nor always advisable to portray only the baser attributes of a man's character. In appearance and typography, however, Bro. Brennan's magazine may fairly challenge comparison with any of its contemporaries.

The New York Dispatch and Pomeroy's Democrat, published in the same city, have each capital Masonic departments; but we must defer further comment on our American contemporaries for the present, and also upon those in Canada, merely observing that the Masonic Fraternity in the Dominion are well represented by the Craftsman and the Gavel, both being ably conducted and talented organs of the Craft.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

BRO. JOHN YARKER.

Bro. Yarker is not the only victim to the tyranny of Bro. Vigne and Co., of Golden-square, as they have also suspended the members of an entire chapter at Bath; and if they go on in this style, the "Thirty-Thirds" will soon have no "pale, affrighted" slaves to rule over. "I would I were a bird," but not a Thirty-Third, preferring to remain

AN EX-BATH CHAIRMAN.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

The statement submitted by Bro. John Yarker in last week's FREEMASON merits the careful consideration of the Craft, as for some time past the high-handed proceedings of the soi-disant Supreme Council in Golden-square have excited the indignation and disgust of many of their quondam supporters. But Bro. Yarker's case marks a climax in their iniquitous career, inasmuch as this worthy brother has not only been condemned unheard, but positively one of his chief accusers* was appointed his judge in defiance of the plainest laws of equity! This fact alone, which cannot be denied, of course vitiates the unjust decision of the so-called "Holy Emperors of the 33°" with respect to Bro. Yarker, who is not only as good a Rose Croix Master as ever, but what is more, a "Ne Plus Ultra," which none of the Golden-square magnates (or maguets, so far as cash is concerned) can ever hope to be. It is very much to be desired that Bro. Yarker will, in his forthcoming work, probe the origin of the present Council of "Sovereign Grand Inspectors General," as a well-founded opinion prevails that they have no claim whatever to rule the ancient English degrees of the Rose Croix and Kadosh, formerly attached to K. T. Encampments, by virtue of powers affirmed to have been procured from foreign parts by the late Dr. Goss or "Crucefix," by which latter cognomen he was better known in Masonic circles.

A VOICE FROM THE WEST.

[*We withhold the name, as we can hardly believe so extraordinary a statement.—ED. F.]

A brother informs me that a 34° of this rite is in existence, called the "Apex," thus corresponding with the 90° of the "Ancient and Primitive Rite of Misraim." There are only three holders of the "Apex" in the whole world, who exist by the succession of triplicate warrants from Frederick the Great of Prussia, signed immediately after the Grand Constitutions. The symbols are the cord and the dagger; the ceremonials are very august, and detail the legendary history and object of the degree, which is to draw the funds and energies of all the councils of the world to one great centre. Grave purposes are said to be in view, but whether such is the expulsion of the Turks from Constantinople, or the establishment of a single empire either on the Continent or in America, is not known.

HISTORICUS.

Is it regular for a Master Mason to wear a jewel? If so, to what jewel is he entitled?

H. S. L. GURNEY, 897.

[Master Masons are not entitled to wear jewels; but we have seen a five-pointed star worn in some lodges where the discipline is lax, and also at Masonic balls.—ED. F.]

BRO LUPUS.

If Bro. Lupus will have the kindness to wait for a short time, his question respecting Sir Christopher Wren will be answered fully—I hope to his satisfaction. At the present moment, it will be going rather ahead of the work I am engaged on to reply fully to it, otherwise I should be happy to do so.

G. F. FORSYTH.

"E. T. T." AND RECORDS OF THE ALNWICKE LODGE.

Bro. "E. T. T.," of Alnwick, has, in the most fraternal manner, forwarded to me the minute-book of the above lodge, which commences on Sept. 29th, 1701.

I have had no time yet to do the valuable volume justice, but have compared the extract given by Bro "E. T. T." in THE FREEMASON for Nov. 12th, 1870 (p. 578), with the original entry, and find it correct in every particular. The spaces left by Bro. "E. T. T." are as follows:—The "forfeit" should be "two shillings and sixpence," and the remaining blanks are person and persons. The words in italics are quite right.

A copy of the "Mason's Constitutions" is inserted immediately before the Laws of the Lodge A.D. 1701, and consequently the document is of much value. I think the lodge was an operative one, but will write more after a careful investigation.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

P.S.—That it is a genuine and authentic minute-book of the Alnwick Lodge, I am certain.

"QUARTERLY REVIEW" (p. 657).

I have examined Vol. XXV., page 146, of the Quarterly Review, and find that although "Vol. XXIV." was wrong, Bros. Newnham and "Lupus" are correct as to such a remark really occurring somewhere in the pages of the Quarterly Review; but the reference there made is not given within inverted commas, as an exact quotation, but is simply brought in in an off-hand sort of manner; and while it there says, "white leather gloves and a white apron," with the "Masonic Student," I would like to see "the original authority," for it may simply have it, "a leather apron and gloves," the giving of which to masons or carpenters then was no more mysterious in the time of Henry VI. than the giving of gowns, shoes, or any other article of clothing for the outside of the body was to the giving of "herryng" (see page 641) for the inside.

However, to return to the Quarterly Review, the article in which this remarkable apron occurs is headed "Normandy—Architecture of the Middle Ages," and is a clever and racy production. The following which I copied, is very good (page 143): "To the common observer every object which is older than his grandmother is a piece of antiquity; he leaps over centuries, and annihilates both time and space." However, I only had time to glance over it, still I cannot agree with all the author (who tells us he is not a Freemason) says—e.g., his assertion that "Subsequent ages afford presumptive evidence that the Freemasons were the architects of the proudest Gothic piles" is, I consider wrong (see page 211 ante); but as his article was published in 1821, or about half a century ago, I shall say nothing further.

As to white, "A Masonic Student" seems to put no stress upon it, while Bro. Newnham again does. However, in the very interesting article on "Masonic Curiosities" (page 660), we find in the 2nd and 3rd rules white especially alluded to.

W. P. BUCHAN.

BRO. JAMES ANDERSON.

I am induced to believe that the name of James Anderson occupies a much more important place in the annals and history of Freemasonry than has been accorded to him. Through the medium of the columns of THE FREEMASON, in the promulgation of this sketch some facts of a more extended character, touching his early life, habits, talents, and immediate connection with the Masonic Institution, may be elicited through the researches of some of your able and industrious contributors. In giving the following sketch a place in your paper you will confer a favour on

R. M.

James Anderson, D.D., and minister of the Scotch Presbyterian Church in London, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, August 5th, 1684, and died in 1746, aged 62 years. He was a man of high literary ability. As a member of one of the four old lodges at London, he assisted in the organization and establishment of the first Grand Lodge of England; and on the 29th September, 1721, was commissioned by the Grand Lodge to collect and compile the history, charges, and regulations of the fraternity, from the then existing ancient Constitutions of the lodges. On the 27th December following his work was finished, and the Grand Lodge appointed a committee of fourteen learned brethren to examine and report upon it. Their report was made on the 25th of March, 1722; and, after a few amendments, Anderson's work was formally approved, and ordered to be printed for the benefit of the lodges. This is the now well-known "Book of Constitutions," which contains the history of Masonry (or, more correctly, architecture), the ancient charges, the regulations and charges, as the same were in use in many old lodges. Anderson and the Grand Lodge which approved his work have been frequently accused of having falsified and suppressed many important particulars, and of having misrepresented many of the ancient usages of the Craft. These objections were especially raised by the "Ancient Masons," and by their historian, Laurence Dermott. Even the critical Krause, in his admirable work on "The Three Oldest Documents of the Freemasons' Fraternity," has fallen into this same error. The later researches of Kloss and Keller have, however, very clearly and distinctly proved that Anderson conscientiously based his work on the ancient records of the lodges then in existence; while the various manuscripts which have been preserved from destruction, and which have only at a late day been brought to light, show that he wrote his work in the true spirit and some of the ancient regulations, and was scrupulously careful to omit nothing that was essential. Even at this day, we find Masonic authors who endeavour to cast ridicule and derision on the history of Masonry with which his work begins, without taking into consideration the fact that he has merely given us the old legend of the guilds, as he found it in the ancient records. This is sufficiently shown by the care with which he guards himself from misinterpretation, in making improbable or incredible statements, by remarks such as "this was believed firmly by the old Fraternity," "the ancient Constitutions affirm this strongly," &c. The Andersonian history of Masonry, if divested of its fabulous and traditional character, may be considered as a not altogether unimportant contribution to the history of architecture; and although it contains some slight chronological errors, yet many of its statements are confirmed by later works on architecture. From many passages of his history it is apparent, not only that he compiled it from architectural works, but that he had some personal experience in the technical knowledge of the builder's art. This would, in his case at least, seem to account in a very natural way for his entrance into the guild or company of Masons. The short space of time in which he completed the work he was commissioned to execute, renders it probable that the history of the fraternity of which he was a member, had already previously engaged his attention, and that it was merely necessary for him to select from the materials he had collected in order to submit his work to the inspection of the committee.

"A SPIRITUAL AND MOST PRECIOUS PEARL,"
By Otho Wermullerus. (Wm. Tegg, 1870.)
The first English edition of this book was translated by Bishop Miles Coverdale at the request of Protector Somerset, whose preface to the Christian reader begins in royal style, "Edward, by the grace of God, Duke of Somerset, greeting." Wermullerus was a preacher in a city which the printer calls "Tigryrie," but which few ordinary English readers will recognise as Zurich. We think that if such old books are printed they ought to be edited, and not loosely turned off without note or even preface. The drift of the book is that all affliction comes from God, and is the sign of His Fatherly mind toward the afflicted, and we believe that many troubled persons will find more relief and help from the reading of this quaint and believing old treatise than from some more ambitious and modern books. The critical reader will find a few curiosities in it not unworthy his attention, as, for instance, "God, the Heavenly Freemason" (for Architect); "an whole multitude," the use of the word "only;" "God martyreth and utterly subdueth in us our sins." He "yoketh" us as "the foreman his horses."

QUALIFICATIONS OF VISITORS TO LODGES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—A difference of opinion exists amongst the Past Masters of a lodge to which I belong as to the qualifications necessary to entitle a visiting brother to claim admission into a lodge. Will you kindly give your own opinion, or obtain that of some of the many experienced P.M.'s amongst your readers, on the following points:—

1. In the case of an individual, who is a perfect stranger, presenting himself as a visitor for admission into a lodge, is it sufficient qualification for him to pass a satisfactory examination; or is it essential that he should, in addition, produce his Grand Lodge certificate?

2. What definite meaning is to be attached to the word "vouchers" in the following, among the Ancient Charges, to which every W.M. has to give his assent on his installation?—"You promise that no visitor shall be received into your lodge without due examination, and producing proper vouchers of his having been initiated in a regular lodge."

The "Book of Constitutions," under the head of "Visitors" (pocket edition, p. 89), is very vague, no mention being made of the visitor's certificate; but Dr. Oliver, in his "Masonic Jurisprudence" (page 124), says: "No visitor . . . can be admitted unless he be known to, or vouched for, by some member of the lodge; or, if he be a perfect stranger, he must produce his Grand Lodge certificate, and submit to the usual examination, of which no specification has been prescribed, but it is commonly left to the discretion of the proper officer."

In many lodges great looseness exists in the examination and admission of visitors, whilst in others great caution is exercised. It would be well that the "Book of Constitutions" should clearly define the qualifications of visitors for the proper guidance of lodges.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
AN OLD P.M.

"BALD STATEMENTS."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I regret to have to take up the space in your paper, which might be so much better employed than replying to "Enquiring Brother;" but his illbred remarks on you as editor and on myself demand an answer, and cannot be passed over in silence. In the first place, if he will look at No. 90 of THE FREEMASON, he will find that I stated the "Encyclopedia Metropolitana," not the "Encyclopedia Britannica." Secondly, it is to be found in Oliver's "Landmarks," vol. 1, page 344. Any one with common justice will allow that, if I have been anywise to blame, it has been in copying better authors than myself. Again, as to wishing to establish a fraternal connection between K. Templars and Masons, I have no motive for such an act.

To conclude this disagreeable letter, the next time "Enquiring Brother" attacks any of the contributors to THE FREEMASON, who are working for no profit, and (to many) little honour, and falls into any blunder through his overhaste, he will not only give his name, but a few words of apology.

I remain yours fraternally,

THE "RECTANGULAR REVIEW" ON "FREEMASONRY; ITS USE AND ABUSE."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—We would have been glad to have concluded this correspondence by allowing Bro. Binckes the last word, but his letter in your last week's paper is so vague that we are compelled again to make a few comments.

We have referred to page 21 of annual report, published March, 1870, where we find the building account dealing with a total sum of upwards of £46,000; but as no dates are given, it is impossible for the uninitiated to say what portion of that amount belongs to the year 1869-70.

Regarding the large sum of nearly £2,000 paid for architect's fee, we should like to know who the architect was who pocketed such a handsome amount, and whether he also acted as surveyor, which involved another £200. It would seem also that there was also still due to architect and surveyor about £450, in addition to the above amount paid, making altogether about £2,650 for that item.

Bro. Binckes includes in the cost of the establishment at Wood Green £926 expended at the Hall, about half of which to Secretary and Collector, who again figure in the special expenditure for a considerable amount. Greater detail and simplicity in the accounts would enable us to take a clearer view of the position of the institution. Perhaps the next report, soon to be published, will prove more satisfactory in this way.

Referring to "J. O.'s" letter in your last week's number, we may say that we have already served "the honourable office of Steward" at many charity festivals, including all the Masonic; and it was the result of our observations on these occasions that led us to inquire for a detailed account of the Stewards' fees, which, in the case of the Boys' Institution, Bro. Binckes declined to give for the information of the Craft.

Yours truly and fraternally,
THE EDITOR "RECTANGULAR REVIEW."

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—When I glance through your paper and read the remarks of some of your correspondents, I am tempted to ask myself: Do those brethren ever read any history of Freemasonry? Now, there is your correspondent "Lupus," in THE FREEMASON for December 3, who terms the discussion going on in that paper about the antiquity of the gloves and apron a "small discussion;" and after congratulating the opponents of the 1717 theory, he flies off to Bro. Matthew Cooke's B. M. manuscript to prove that Prince Edwin, son of Athelstan, was a Speculative Mason, because "he wist well that hand-craft had the practice of geometry so well as masons, wherefore he drew him to council and learned the practice of that science to his speculative, for of speculative he was a master, and he loved well masonry and masons, and he gave them charges and names," &c.; and this Bro. "Lupus" decides to be—and emphasises the decision in cursive characters—"a clear and unmistakeable distinction between Speculative and Operative Masonry!"

Now, the word "speculative," and to which Bro. Lupus attaches so much importance, was, I believe, as we Freemasons understand it, first applied to Masonry by Wm. Preston, when he improved the "work" or ritual from that of Martin Clare, and its signification in this connection is thus set forth in a passage of Section IV. of Preston's "Illustrations of Masonry," which at the present day is so familiar to Freemasons that it would preclude the necessity of me here quoting it, but to put it in apposition with Bro. Lupus's quotation from Bro. Cooke's old manuscript, and which I here do:—

"Masonry passes under two denominations—operative and speculative. By the former we allude to a proper application of the useful rules of architecture, whence a structure derives figure, strength and beauty, and whence result a due proportion and a just correspondence in all its parts. By the latter we learn to govern the passions and tongue, maintain secrecy, and practise charity. Speculative Masonry is so far interwoven with religion as to lay us under the strongest obligations to pay that rational homage to Deity which at once constitutes our duty and happiness. It leads the contemplative to view with reverence and admiration the glorious works of creation, and inspires them with the most exalted ideas of the perfection of the divine Creator. Operative Masonry furnishes us with dwellings and convenient shelters from the inclemencies of the seasons; and while it displays the effects of human wisdom, as well in the choice as in the arrangement of the materials of which an edifice is composed, it demonstrates that a fund of science and industry is implanted in man for the best, most salutary, and beneficent purposes."

Now, if any brother can see any family likeness between the "speculative" of Edwin and the "speculative" of Preston, as herein both are given, he can do more than certainly I can.

But Bro. Lupus proceeds to assert that the language of the old MSS., according to Bro. Cooke's and Mr. Halliwell's transcripts, "is inapplicable to a guild that knew nothing but hewing of stone and spreading of mortar," because "one of those MSS. recognises 'Speculative' Masonry by name." I do not know that Bro. Ruchan, or any other supporter of the 1717 theory ever asserted that the operative Masons only knew how to hew stones and spread mortar. In common with the operative Armorers, the operative Carpenters and Joiners, or the operative Tailors, they were, to the extent of the master workmen at least, equally allowed the privilege of designing their work; and that a knowledge of geometry, or the science of measurement as applied to solids, surfaces, lines and angles, should be generally known among the overseers at least of operative builders, whether masons or carpenters—workers in iron, wood, or stone—every candid Brother must admit. Besides, the very title of the Halliwell MS. shows plainly that it refers to the teachings of the science of geometry, according to Euclid, and the lines 471-476 are headed "Another adaptation of the Art of Geometry;" while in that MS. transcribed by Bro. Cooke, Freemasonry is designated as the "Science of Geometry."

In the same number of your paper Brother Newnham candidly acknowledges that the original authority for his extract as to gloves and aprons, as worn regularly by Freemasons, is Mackey's Lexicon. Now, it is well known to the Masonic student that all of Mackey's Lexicon not extracted—some would call it stolen, as in but the fewest instances is there credit given—from French and German works of a somewhat similar character, is Mackey's own, written so because he desired to so represent the matters therein represented. Had Bro. Newnham given the authority beyond Mackey's Lexicon, it would be better, as we could then estimate the value of it.

To return to the MSS. herein mentioned as choice authority for Bro. Lupus. In the Gentleman's Magazine for June of the year 1815, the passage from the Legends of the Craft, rendered as he has given it by Bro. Cooke, appears in the following words, to wit:—

"Right soon after the decease of Saint Albone there came divers wars into the realm of England of divers Nations, soe that the good rule of Masonry was destroyed unto tyme of Kinge Athelstone's days that was a worthy Kinge of England, and brought this land into good rest and peace; and builded many great works of Abbyes and Towres, and other many divers buildings; and loved well Masons. And he had a sonn that hight Edwinne, and he loved Masons much more than his father did. And he was a great practiser in Geometry; and he drew much to talke and to commune with Masons, and to learn of them science; and afterwards for love that he had to Masons and to the science, he was made a Mason, and he gatt of the Kinge his father a Chartour and Commission to hold every year once an Assemble, wher they ever would within the realme of England; and to correct within themselves defaults and trespasses that were done within the science. And he held himself an Assemble at York, and there he made Masons, and gave them charges, and taught them the manners, and commanded that rule be kept ever after, and tooke then the Chartour and Commission to keepe, and made ordinance that it should be renewed from Kinge to Kinge."

Here we do not find one word that can be construed into "speculative," though it is plain to every reader that the legend is the same, and as a legend, no better than that of Romulus and Remus and the wolf. If Bro. Lupus will spend an hour or so in reading Bro. Findel's "History of Freemasonry," I would refer him to pages 30-46, and to pages 83-170, second edition. He will in the first reference find that which he ought to know concerning all those old manuscripts which refer to Masonry; and in the second he will, in the history of the first lodge at York, discover that which I think will satisfy even him that it will take something more forcible than Bro. Newnham's discovery anent the gloves and apron to upset the 1717 theory of Bro. Buchan.

I remain, fraternally yours,
AN AMERICAN FREEMASON.

TRINIDAD.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF TRINIDAD, S.C.

On Friday evening, the 25th November, at a meeting of the above lodge, held on Mount Moriah (not for election, but general business), the election of office-bearers came off for the ensuing year, when the P.G.M., having waived his right of appointing his officers, ceded to the members the right of balloting for the entire staff of office-bearers. The annexed list is the result of the ballot:—

James M. Reid	...	...	Dep. G. Master
C. Besson	...	...	Sub. G. Master
C. F. O. Rooks	...	...	Sen. G. Warden
J. Palmer	...	...	Jun. G. Warden
E. DesRoses	...	...	G. Treasurer
V. A. Davis	...	...	G. Secretary
T. Murrell	...	...	S.G. Deacon
Edward Aerstin	...	...	J.G. Deacon
J. B. Collymore	...	...	G. Architect
Charles Renaud	...	...	G. Jeweller
P. J. Delisle	...	...	G. Bible Bearer
J. H. Agard	...	...	G.D. of Ceremonies
H. S. Billouin	...	...	G. Bard
James Wharton	...	...	G. Sword Bearer
J. Monteil	...	...	G.D. of Music
N. A. St. Hilaire	...	...	G. Marshalls
H. St. Hilaire	...	...
A. Scamaromy	...	...	G. I. Guard
A. Libert	...	...	G. Standard Bearer.
Robert Young	...	...	G. Stewards
Jos. Lewis	...	...
J. C. Lewis	...	...
— Lafargue	...	...

By the above result of the election, it will be seen that the proportion of the subordinate lodges, holding under the registry of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, are as follows:—

Lodge United Brothers, 251	...	11
Lodge Eastern Star, 368	...	9
Lodge Athole, 438, San Fernando	...	3

We are sorry, in deed, not being able to avail our selves of the invitation given us to attend this meeting, and perhaps the more so, not on account of the great interest we at all times feel and always take in the promotion of the welfare of the Order, but because of the pain we have felt at hearing some dissatisfaction expressed as to the mode of proceeding to, and the result of, the election. Not having been present, as we have already stated, it is impossible for us to undertake to say, with any amount of certainty, how far justified are the reports we have heard; but this much we will undertake to say, that our experience of the P.G.M. is of too high a standard, to allow us to believe, even for an instant, his being able to connive at anything not strictly constitutional and fair, and therefore we hold him wholly exonerated. But it is argued that certain evil machinations were brought into play which, notwithstanding the good intention of the liberal concession of the P.G.M., counteracted its intended beneficial effect; to this, we say, so much the worse for those who, having had the confidence of a good and beloved leader reposed in them, have recklessly abused it, whilst we trust that the experience of the past will serve as a useful lesson for the government of future action.—New Era, Trinidad.

FOR MUSIC.

(From the "Rosicrucian.")

Still beautiful—still bright to me,
Though dark the clouds of life may be—
This sad yet trusting heart of mine
A refuge ever seeks in thine.

Thy smile—it lives within my soul:
Thy voice—though seas between us roll—
Mysteriously enchains me now,
Like music sweet, and soft, and low.

Would I the fond enchantment break,
Or from its happy dream awake?
Oh no! Though fate our steps may sever,
In spirit we are linked for ever.

R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

LINES

Addressed in sympathy to a Mason's Daughter who lost by death a beloved Parent on New Year's Day, 1870.

Once more New Year's Day approaches,
Once more ring the merry chimes,
Once again we sit and ponder
O'er events of bygone times.
Well I know the mournful feeling
Still prevailing in thine heart;
Twelve short months have little influence
O'er bereavement's bitter smart.

Ever sad is Death's invasion,
But more sorrowful 'tis found
When at joyous festive season
Happiness beams around.
Still more poignant seems our anguish
As upon the startled ear
Falls the voice of thoughtless stranger,
Wishing us "A Glad New Year."

Thou, dear friend, wert sadly stricken
Full of grief last New Year's Day,
Yet thou hast had many mercies
In the twelve months pass'd away—
One kind parent still is spared thee.
Trust in God and hope will dawn—
Hope that points to joy in Heaven
On the Resurrection Morn.

SCOTLAND.

THE LODGE OF EDINBURGH (MARY'S CHAPEL, No. 1).

PRESENTATION TO BRO. WILLIAM OFFICER.

The ancient Scottish metropolitan lodge celebrated the Festival of St. John in the lodge-room, Waterloo Hotel, on the 27th of December. There was a large gathering of influential brethren—more than ordinary interest being attached to the communication from the circumstance that the retiring R.W.M. was in the course of the evening to be presented with a testimonial for the eminent services rendered by him to the lodge during his six years' tenure of office. Bro. W. J. Cranfield Abbott, merchant, Leith, was unanimously elected to the chair as successor to Bro. William Officer, S.S.C. Among other business transacted after the installation of the new office-bearers was the honorary affiliation of that eminent craftsman and Masonic literati, Bro. David Murray Lyon, of Ayr, who is at present engaged in writing a history of the lodge. Bro. Lyon was highly complimented by the brethren.

The lodge then adjourned to the banqueting-hall, and sat down to a sumptuous dinner. The chair was filled by the R.W.M., who was supported on the right by Bros. Officer, D. Murray Lyon (Proxy Master for the Lodge Scarborough, Island of Tobago), F. S. Melville (Past Depute Master), and Thomas Swinton (Substitute Master); and on the left by Bros. William Mann (P.M., S.G.W.), James Ballantine (G. Bard), Owen Gough (Proxy Prov. G.M. of New South Wales), and the Rev. F. Rowbottom, of St. James' Church. The croupiers were Bros. W. G. Roy, S.W., and Dr. Lilburn, J.W. Apologies were read from Bros. Henry Inglis of Torsonce (Substitute G.M.), the Lord Rosehill (Depute Master of the lodge), Colonel Campbell of Blythswood (J.G.W., and Prov. G.M. of Renfrewshire), Col. Guthrie of Carlogie, and some other eminent brethren.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the R.W.M. gave in succession "The Queen and the Craft," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Patron of the Scottish Craft, and a member of the Lodge of Edinburgh," "The Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland, coupled with the names of their respective Grand Masters, the Earl de Grey and Ripon, the Duke of Leinster, and the Earl of Rosslyn," all of which toasts were neatly introduced and responded to with enthusiasm, as was also in a special manner that of "The Earl of Dalhousie, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Scotland."

In proposing "The Health of the Retiring R.W.M.," Bro. Mann passed a high eulogium upon Bro. Officer, whose Masonic enthusiasm and industry in the discharge of the Mastership had been fruitful of results tending to the honour and prosperity of the lodge in a measure which had excited the surprise as well as the high gratification of its sons. In looking back, he (Bro. Mann) was astonished at what had been done by the lodge during the six years of Bro. Officer's reign. Two hundred new brethren had been admitted, many of whom, now scattered over the globe, were at this moment remembering with fraternal feelings the happy evenings they had spent in Mary's Chapel. After further referring to Bro. Officer's devotion to his mother lodge, and to his success in its management, the speaker begged his acceptance of the testimonial which the brethren had resolved to present to him on the occasion of his retirement from the chair, in token of their respect for him and their high appreciation of the distinguished services he had rendered to the Lodge of Edinburgh and to the Craft.

[The testimonial, which was much admired, comprises a magnificent silver epergne, after an original design, the figures on which were modelled by Gourlay Steel, Esq., Royal Scottish Academician, and three other pieces of silver plate.]

The applause which followed Bro. Mann's remarks having subsided, Bro. Officer said he accepted the gift with the profoundest gratitude as an expression of the friendly sentiments of the brethren, and their approval of the manner in which he had discharged the duties of the honourable office to which they had so often elected him. He thanked them for their munificent gift, and for their fraternal indulgence and cordial support during his occupancy of the chair. His long connection with the lodge had not afforded a mere evanescent pleasure, for within the radius of its membership he had enjoyed the friendship of many with whom it was alike an honour and a privilege to be associated; and though now resigning the trust that had been reposed in him, his best services would ever be at the command of the lodge. (Applause.)

At this stage of the proceedings, the following song, written for the occasion by Bro. James Ballantine, Grand Bard, was most effectively sung by the Senior Warden:—

Air—"When the Kye come Hame."

Be honest and be gentle; be kindly and be true;
And help your humble brethren aye this life to warstle through;
And gin through life ye ope your hearts to Charity and Love,
You'll find yoursels aye nearer drawn to Him wha reigns above.

True gentleness and kindness this night we honour here,
Our worthy Master, Officer, wha's deeds hae made him
dear;
'Mong a' the Mason Craft throughout, his fame is far and wide,
And 'neath his sway St. Mary's Lodge was every Mason's pride.

Since David, Scotland's saintly king, brought foreign Masons o'er
To build fair Holyrood, that aye has been Edina's glorie,
The Masters o' St. Mary's Lodge hae ever led the van
In teaching art, and harmony, and brotherhood to man.

Then Schaw* and Milnes for centuries, through seven monarchs' reigns,
Our Masters aye, wi' gems o' art, graced Scotland's hills and plains;
And earls and knights have joined our ranks wha fought for Scotland's weal;
Our country, 'mid her trials, aye found Mary's Chapel leal.

And lo! behold! what gallant chields, 'neath Officer's kind reign,
Duke Rothesay† and five noblemen, are numbered in our train,
To say nought o' the humble bards, like gude Torsonce and me,
Wha do our best to win your love and share your festive glee.

A bumper fill for Officer, Past Master and fast friend, May he be lang, lang spared wi' us, sic joyous nights to spend,
And when kind Providence is pleased us frae this life to free,
May we a' meet in harmony around yon throne on hie.

* William Schaw, the King's Master of Works, signed the first minute extant of Mary's Chapel in 1598, and the Milnes, who succeeded him as Masters of Works during the reigns of seven monarchs, were all Masters of the same lodge.

† During the six years that Bro. Officer has been Master of the lodge, Mary's Chapel, there have been affiliated—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and Duke of Rothesay, as also Lords Dalhousie, Haddington, Zetland, Rosehill, and Lindsay. The Duke of Leinster has also accepted honorary affiliation.

Several toasts, in addition to those mentioned, having been given and responded to, this interesting communication was concluded in the most harmonious and fraternal manner. The Craft in general, to whom Bro. Officer is favourably known as one of the most able and influential office-bearers in the Grand Lodge of Scotland, will read with the highest satisfaction the preceding report, as containing a record of the estimation in which Bro. Officer's Masonic worth is held by those who are best able to appreciate it.

PROVINCE OF GLASGOW.

The tenth annual festival of the Masonic lodges of the province of Glasgow was held on the 23rd ultimo, in the City Hall, Glasgow. The meeting was under the patronage of the Grand Lodge of Scotland and the Provincial Grand Lodge, and there was a large attendance of the Masonic brethren and their friends. The Right Honourable the Earl of Rosslyn, G.M.M. of Scotland, presided; and was supported on his right by Bros. Sir M. Shaw Stewart, Bart., R.W.G.D.M.; Henry Inglis, of Torsonce, S.G.M.; William Mann, S.G.W.; Colonel Campbell, J.G.W.; John Lawrie, G. Clerk; W. C. Miller, G.D.M.; H. G. Copeland, Acting-S.D.; Murdoch Mackenzie, C.G.M.; W. P. Buchan, G.S.; and W. M. Bryce, G. Tyler; and on the left by Bros. W. Montgomerie Neilson of Queenshill, P.G.M. of the province of Glasgow; the Hon. the Lord Provost, Sheriff Bell, F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M.; David Dregghorn; D. Kinghorn, P.G.J.W.; James Wallace, P.G.S.D.; J. B. Walker, P.G. Treas.; A. M'Taggart, P.G. Sec.; Robert Craig, P.G.B.B.; James Leith, P.G.D.C.; Robert Robb, P.G.M.; James Gillies, P.G.S.B.; James Balfour, P.G.J.G.; James Pollock, B.G.O.G.; and W. J. Hamilton, P.G. Convener. The Masters of lodges on the platform were—Bros. John Baird (32), George Sinclair (27), John Frazer (87), Thomas Halket (102), Alexander Bain (103), Thos. Grainger (117), Robt. Mitchell (332), Andrew M'Inyre (333), George Thallon (362), John Buchanan (408), James M'Leod (465), George M'Donald (73), John Mathieson (178), — Davidson (219), Wm. Philip (275), John Miller (413), A. M'Dougall and Matthew Wilson (441).

Lord Rosslyn (who was received with loud applause) said—When I had the honour of an invitation to preside at this soiree, I was little aware of the greatness of the undertaking. When I see before me this vast assembly—and one, no doubt, so critical—it is only the great position which I have the honour to fill among the Masons that inspires me on the approach of the time to carry out the undertaking. (Applause.) And when I consider that I am not only addressing Freemasons, but that I have upon this occasion the honour of addressing Masons' wives and Masons' bairns, I feel quite certain that the fairer portion of my audience will, at all events, be lenient to my efforts, and will give me that applause and that encouragement of which I stand in need. (Applause.) Ladies and gentlemen, I had the honour to be placed in the position which I now hold but a very short time since, and this is the first public meeting at which I have had the honour to preside since I have been elected to fill that office. (Applause.) If I say this here it is because a whisper has reached me that the Freemasons of the West have sometimes felt that they donot see so much of the ruling powers of the West as they would like to do. Now, let me assure you that if this complaint should for the future be given expression to, I shall not at least be in fault. (Applause.) Now, ladies and gentlemen, I had the idea before I came here that, as Grand Master Mason of Scotland, I would have been required to speak on Masonic secrets which the ladies would never be privileged to hear; but I am pleasantly disappointed. This is not a Masonic gathering—for while there are none here but those who are closely connected with Masons, I believe I may speak in language which is not entirely Masonic. I think that if anybody may claim some title to be called on to address the fairer portion of the Masonic body—to whom we are not generally in the habit of speaking—it is myself; because it happened to be my fortune to be dining at a Masonic meeting when I had the honour and pleasure to give an invitation to the Masons present to a meeting, to be held that day twelvemonths, at a place I have in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh, called Rosslyn; and I added that I should not only be glad to see the Masons, but that they must bring their wives, daughters, and sweethearts. (Applause.) We met accordingly on a beautiful summer day, among scenery as beautiful as any Scotland can produce—and when I say that, I speak of the most beautiful scenery in the world; and I think they enjoyed themselves—at least, I hope so. (Applause.) That was the first Masonic gathering I had the pleasure of attending at which the ladies and gentlemen enjoyed themselves together. This, I am glad to see, is a meeting of the same character, and I must be allowed to congratulate the Masons of the western part of Scotland on the gathering I see before me, which would be a credit to any portion of the country. (Applause.) It is with the greatest pride and pleasure that I preside over such a meeting at such a time as this, when we must all feel for the great suffering existing in many parts of the world—when commerce and trade, and all that makes a country prosperous and rich, is not only interrupted—when not only the Masonic Brotherhood, but natural brotherhood, which is even stronger—is being rudely torn asunder. At such a meeting as this, when we have the great privilege of joining together in peace and harmony, even in festivity we cannot but think of that terrible, almost unprecedented war which is devastating the fair land of our nearest neighbour and former ally. (Applause.) In the countries now engaged in this terrible conflict not only have the bonds of Masonry been broken, but every social tie has been loosened; and many of those whom we were wont to look upon as prosperous and happy brethren are now lying wounded or dead. I think it is well that at a moment of this kind Masonry should be triumphant. (Applause.) The ties of Masonry are not limited by any climate or by any soil. They know neither political nor territorial boundaries, but as far as the civilised world extends so far do the ties of Masonry reach. (Applause.) These sentiments, which receive your approval and which you have acted on, it must be our aim and our privilege to bring to practical effect. It must be our duty wherever we have the opportunity to aid our foreign brethren who have been rendered destitute in these wars and other calamities; and in so great a community as this, I would, with all the importance of the office in which you have placed me, recommend them to your consideration and continued friendship; and I am satisfied that if you can render them any assistance you will not fail to do so. (Applause.)

Mr. Montgomerie Neilson then proposed a vote of thanks to the strangers present, to which the Lord Provost replied.

Sheriff Bell, who followed, said it was now a good many years since he was admitted a member of the Masonic body in the Canongate (Kilwinning) Lodge, which claimed for itself—although its title was disputed by a lodge in the West—to be the mother lodge of Scotland. The tenor of his life had not enabled him to mingle much with the Masonic body since that time; but his predecessor in the office which he had the honour to hold was one of the most enthusiastic, straight-forward, and eloquent Masons ever known in Scotland. (Applause.) He (the Sheriff) had also had the honour of attending on more public occasions than one when the late Grand Master so eloquently and admirably represented the Grand Lodge. No man could have held that office with greater dignity and satisfaction to all than Lord Dalhousie; but he rejoiced to see that—he having retired with years and honours—his seat had been filled by another nobleman with all the enthusiasm of youth, and all the energy of a benevolent manhood. (Applause.) He was sure that he would worthily fill the chair which Lord Dalhousie had vacated; and he hoped that for many years to come they would be able to look to him as a most worthy representative of Masonry, and as one in whom they might have confidence to assist them in any difficulties which might occur in the various lodges; who would rule, he hoped, decidedly—at the same time with love. (Applause.)

The musical portion of the programme was sustained by Madame Vaneri, Miss Smith, Messrs. Walker, Houston, and Fraser, and a Masonic choir.

A grand assembly followed, Bro. Henry Inglis of Torsonce, Sub. G.M., leading off the ball with Miss Barrow.

AFFILIATION OF LORD ROSSLYN AND THE LORD PROVOST.

On the 23rd ult., an emergency meeting of Lodge St. Mark, No. 102, was held in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, for the transaction of important Masonic business. The Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn being in Glasgow for the purpose of presiding at the annual Masonic festival, the opportunity was taken of making his lordship an ordinary affiliated member of the lodge. The Hon. the Lord Provost, who was present, was also proposed as an honorary affiliated member.

Bro. Halkett, R.W.M., presided, assisted by Bros. Jas. F. Mitchell, acting S.W., and D. Watson, J.W. There were present, among others, Bros. Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, P.G.M. Renfrewshire West; Colonel Campbell, Blythwood, P.G.M. Renfrewshire East; F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M. Glasgow; A. McTaggart, P.G.S.; Wallace, G.L. Committee; Baird, R.W.M. No. 3 bis; Donald Campbell, P.M. 102; W. P. Buchan, R. D. Samuels, and D. Walker, No. 3 bis; &c.

The lodge having been duly opened, and the Right Hon. Earl Rosslyn and Hon. W. Rae Arthur (Lord Provost) heartily and unanimously approved of by the brethren, a deputation, consisting of Bros. Sir M. S. Stewart, Col. Campbell, F. A. Barrow, and Wallace, was sent out to intimate the result to the distinguishing brethren, and escort them into the lodge.

The affiliation was then proceeded with in proper form, and the new members having duly subscribed their names in the roll-book, Bro. Halkett, R.W.M., resigned the chair in favour of the M.W. Grand Master Earl Rosslyn, who, in returning thanks for the honour which he had just received, said that as long as he occupied the high position of Grand Master he would consider it his duty and privilege to uphold the dignity of the Craft, and never forget his duty to St. Mark's. The newly-made members then retired, and the lodge was closed.

THE CRAFT.

BRECHIN.—The St. Ninian Lodge, No. 66, met in St. Ninian's Hall, Market-street, on Tuesday evening se'nnight, for the purpose of installing the respective office-bearers for the ensuing year, and to celebrate the festival of St. John. Bro. Robert Walker, R.W.M., opened the lodge, and installed the R.W.M.-elect, Bro. David Spence, and the rest of the officers into their respective offices. The work of the lodge having been disposed of, and friendly deputations exchanged between the sister lodge (St. James), at nine o'clock the lodge was closed with love and harmony, and the brethren, in company with their wives, sweethearts, and bairns, celebrated the festival of St. John with a supper and ball.

DUMBARTON.—On the 26th ultimo, the brethren of St. John Kilwinning Lodge, No. 18, met for election and installation of office-bearers, when the following brethren were appointed: W. Ross, R.W.M.; W. Riddell, S.M.; T. Wiggans, D.M.; W. Barr, S.W.; J. McArthur, J.W.; G. Chapman, Treas.; J. McKellar, Sec.; M. S. Kirving, S.D.; G. Thomson, J.D.; J. Thomson, S.S.; J. Purdie, J.S.; J. Nixon, B.B.; J. Crawford, S.B.; J. Tosack, I.G.; and S. Murphy, T. Bro. Wm. Graham, R.W.M. of St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, No. 321, to whose charge was committed the ceremony of installation, performed these duties in a masterly and impressive manner, which was testified by the applause of the brethren.—On the following evening the feast of St. John was celebrated, upwards of fifty of the members being assembled, Bro. Ross, R.W.M., presiding, supported by Bros. Riddell, D.M., S.M.; Wiggans, P.G.L., S.W.; and Patersen. Bros. Barr, S.W., and McArthur, J.W., acting as Croupiers. Toast and song followed each other in rapid succession, while Bro. McKellar, Sec., introduced an able paper on "The Ancient Brethren, and their Doings from 1726," as recorded in the minutes still extant. It is worthy of notice that in 1761 the name of Sir James Colquhoun of Luss appears as R.W.M., which office he held for eleven years; while, amongst other names known to fame, the illustrious house of Smollett figures on our roll repeatedly from 1750 until the present time, when the credit of Masonry is still upheld in this district in the person of Bro. A. Smollett, P.G.M. The usual toast, "Happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again," with "Auld Lang Syne" by the brethren, brought to a close a very happy meeting.

GLASGOW.—The annual meeting of Lodge St. Mark, No. 102, for the election and installation of office-bearers, was held in their hall, 203, Buchanan-street, on the 28th November, Bro. Halkett, R.W.M., in the chair. There was a large attendance of brethren. The following brethren were unanimously and cordially elected: Thomas Halkett, R.W.M.; Wilfred M. Robertson, D.M.; John T. Craig, S.M.; Robert Jamieson, S.W.; Daniel Watson, J.W.; B. H. Remmirs, Treas.; James F. Mitchell, Sec.; James White, Jeweller; Alexander Gladstone, jun., Director of Music; David Stewart, S.D.; William Andrews, J.D.; James O. Smith, P.G.S.; William Duncan, S.S.; George Robertson, J.G.; and James Pollock, O.G. The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. Donald Campbell, P.M.

A regular meeting for election and installation of the Clyde Lodge, No. 408, came off in their lodge-rooms, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 28th ult., Bro. John Buchanan, R.W.M., in the chair, when the following brethren were unanimously elected and duly installed by the retiring Master: William Lindsay, R.W.M.; D. Downe, S.W.; William S. Williamson, J.W.; Thomas Gordon, D.M.; John Boyle, S.M.; James Morton, Treas.; William Clinton, Sec.; W. S. Hart, S.D.; John McCaul, J.D.; Robert Burns Thomson, Chaplain; Alex. Gilmour, S.S.; Hugh Kelly, J.S.; Archibald McPherson, P.G.S.; James Stewart, B.B.; John Campbell, Architect; Andrew Strathorne, Jeweller; William Bannerman, J.G.; and Thomas P. Mullin, Tyler. After installation, the new Master had the lodge placed under the benign influence of the J.W., when a very happy evening was spent with toast, song, and speeches.

POLLOKSHAW.—The brethren of the Royal Arch Lodge, No. 153, met in Maxwell Arms Inn, on Tuesday evening, 27th ult., for the purpose of electing office-bearers for the ensuing year. The following brethren were declared duly elected and installed into office: Bros. J. Kirkwood, R.W.M.; G. Mackay, P.M.; W. Adams, D.M.; W. Slimon, S.W.; J. Purse, J.W.; J. Cullen, S.D.; J. Slimon, J.D.; A. Whyte, S.A.S.; W. Cullen, J.A.S.; R. Campbell, S.B.; J. Purton, Chaplain; J. Barbour, G.M.; and J. Macfarlane, Tyler.

THE FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN AT ABERDEEN.

The festival of St. John was celebrated by the Masonic bodies in the city on Tuesday. The annual elections of office-bearers were made at business meetings held in the afternoon or early in the evening, and the brethren afterwards enjoyed social gatherings in their various lodge-rooms or in the hotels selected for the occasion. Deputations of visitors passed between the meetings in the evening, and it is needless to say that the finest fraternal feelings prevailed. The Aberdeen and Neptune Lodges had supper in the Queen's Hotel, where Mr. Duffus served an excellent repast. The St. Nicholas met in their hall, 41, Green; the St. George's, in Donald's Restaurant; and the Operatives in their hall at Mutton Brae. The following is a list of the office-bearers appointed for the year:—

Aberdeen Lodge, No. 34.—J. Lamb, R.W.M.; W. Taylor, P.M.; Alexander Diack, D.M.; W. M. Fraser, Proxy M.; George Smith, jun., S.W.; Thos. St. Nicholas Lodge, No. 93.—J. Gordon, R.W.M.; Alexander Troup, D.M.; Edward Savage, P.M.; S. P. Davie, S.W.; John Adlington, Proxy Master; J. Yarrol de Neville, J.W.; Samuel Angus, Treas.; A. McKenzie, Secretary; James Chasser, S.D.;

James Jack, J.D.; Charles Colley, I.G.; J. Franklin, Organist; D. Campbell, Tyler.

Operative Lodge, No. 150.—Wm. Pirrie, R.W.M.; George Milne, R.W.P.M.; Archibald Emslie, D.M.; William Duff, S.W.; Wm. Smith, J.W.; Robert Birnie, Treasurer; James Mann, Secretary; James Dawson, G.S.; James Hay, S.S.; Robert Harper, J.S.; Chas. Bruce, Tyler.

St. George's Lodge, No. 190.—John S. Fraser, R.W.M.; George S. Forrest, P.W.M.; William Henderson, D.M.; Daniel Robertson, P.M.; Thos. Graham, S.W.; J. Stewart, D.S.W.; T. Saunders, J.W.; — Dey, D.J.W.; Alex. Dakers, Treasurer, Alex. McDonald, Secretary; George Skakels, S.D.; Wm. Dunningham, J.D.; George Walker, I.G.; J. Franklin, Organist; D. Campbell, Tyler; H. Gaudie and J. Drummond, Auditors.

Neptune Lodge, No. 375.—Jas. Mitchell, R.W.M.; J. Harvey, P.M.; Wm. Milne, D.M.; J. Walker, S.M.; Wm. Philip, S.W.; Geo. Smart, J.W.; J. Scorgie, Treasurer; Geo. Chamlers, Secretary; Jas. Crombie, S.D.; Wm. Forrest, J.D.; J. Maitland, I.G.; D. Campbell, Tyler, W. W. Fyfe and Robert Fernie, Auditors.

RED CROSS KNIGHTS.

A Council of this ancient Order was held at the Masonic Hall, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on the 27th ult., under the presidency of Sir Kt. J. Balfour, assisted by Sir Knights David Gilchrist, the acting Captain of the Guard, T. Donaldson, W. Forster, W. Jamieson, and J. T. Mullins, when Brothers G. W. Wheeler and E. H. G. Dalton were duly received and dubbed Knights of the Sword, and were afterwards created Knights of the East and Knights of the East and West. The Sir Knights partook of refreshment together, when special reference was made to Sir Knight Dalton who is about to proceed on a long voyage to the West. In reply he pledged his knightly word that while in the West he would do his best to uphold the principles of Masonry in general and those of this Order in particular. Sir Knight Wheeler also replied, and pledged himself to act in the West of Scotland as his companion had in the Western hemisphere.

ARK MARINERS.

Companion J. Balfour, Noah, received into the ark, on the 27th ult., two poor distressed Mariners, named respectively G. W. Wheeler, of Lodge and Chapter 73, Mount Lebanon, also 73, S.C.; and E. H. G. Dalton, of Montefiore Lodge, No. 1017, and Chapter 73, S.C. The ceremonies were very impressively rendered by the Noah and his sons.

Masonic Miscellanea.

A GRAND Masonic ball, to which the public will be admitted, will be held at the Town-hall, Preston, on Wednesday, the 18th inst., in aid of the Preston and County of Lancaster Royal Infirmary Fund.

At the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, on 25th January, Bro. H. G. Buss, of 127, Offord-road, Barnsbury, will represent the Knights of Constantine, and will be happy to receive additions to his list.

A ROYAL Ark Lodge of Instruction will be opened at the Lyceum Tavern, Strand, on Monday evenings, from seven precisely till eight, commencing Monday, the 16th. All necessary information may be had of the Scribe (pro tem.), Bro. M. A. Loewenstark.

WE have the gratification to announce that the Order of the Red Cross of Constantine has been successfully introduced into the United States of America—Illus. Bro. Alfred Creagh, L.L.D., having established it in Pennsylvania, and Illus. Bro. R. Ramsay, L.L.D., of Orillia, Canada, in the State of Ohio. For these great results we are mainly indebted to Col. McLeod Moore and Bro. Douglas Harington, the Intendants-General in the Canadian Dominion; and we are assured that the beauty and simplicity of the Red Cross ceremonies are highly appreciated at the other side of the Atlantic. A second conclave, the "Holy Cross," No. 37, has been opened at Calcutta by Illus. Bro. W. O. Allender, Intendant-General for Bengal. Conclaves will also shortly be established at Portsea and Cokermouth, the charters having been granted by the Earl of Bective (late Lord Kenlis), G. Sovereign.—Rosicrucian.

MR. ROBERT TUCKER, of South Molton, has just issued the sermon which was preached in the parish church of Crediton, on the day of consecration of the Lodge of Unity, No. 1332, on November 2nd, by the V.W. Bro. the Rev. T. H. Maitland, M.A., vicar of South Molton, and Prov. Grand Chaplain of Devon. The sermon (as our readers will remember) is founded on Psalm cxxxiii. 1, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The discourse is a most admirable one, inculcating that brotherly union which is the principal object of Freemasonry. This sentiment is enforced by a variety of sterling argument, pointing out the best means by which it may be promoted, and the happy effects that result from it. The sermon has been published by command, and is dedicated to the R.W. Bro. the Rev. John Huyshe, Prov. G.M., and the other Grand Officers of the province of Devon.

LECTURE ON THE WAR.

Bro. Colonel Wigginton, W.M. 1298, recently delivered a lecture at St. Paul's National Schools, Canonbury, on his "Trip to Sedan." The lecturer passed rapidly over the journey from London to Antwerp, Brussels, and Bouillon, commencing his subject at the latter place by describing the castle erected by Godfrey de Bouillon, a name well-known in England's history, and the advantage the colonel and his companions derived from the Masonic introduction given by Bro. Distin, of the English Hotel, Antwerp. We give this in his own words: "Tired and wet, we at last reached the Hotel de la Porte (the best hotel in the place), where our entrance was greeted, not by obsequious waiters or smiling lasses, but by a stench that fairly staggered us. Imagine the smell of a large, crowded, badly-ventilated stable, in early morn, at first opening the door; and you may have a faint idea of the odours that we expected were to attend us at the dinner-table, coffee-room, and sleeping-berths. Stifling our feelings—as the smell stifled our olfactory nerves—we ferreted out the landlady's sacred domain, and presented our John Bull Distin's introduction; when, after sundry questions being put to us, we were handed over to the care of a pretty little lass, who tripped upstairs before us to the best room in the house, where we espied two beds, in one of which she informed us Napoleon slept upon his journey from Sedan to captivity, the room being now called 'Napoleon's room.' And here we found the value of Bro. Distin's recommendation. What he said in his note we know not, but the result was, immediate (and the best) accommodation; for three days afterwards, at Sedan, we met two poor fellows who asked us how we were treated at Bouillon, for the night they saw us arrive, they told us, they were turned out of 'Napoleon's room,' and had to turn about for a bed, getting one at last in a peasant's cottage! These were non-Masonic Englishmen! Commend me hereafter to a body calling itself Masonic, the mysterious agency of which can reach even the landlady of an hotel, when over-politeness and consideration, at that busy time, were conspicuous by their absence. I have experienced the gentle influence of the gentle Craft before, but here was a marvellous illustration of its power, it being felt most mysteriously by one of that sex which, as a rule, are steeled against, and jealous of, its influence. Suffice it to say, that at Antwerp, Brussels, and Bouillon it opened gates that would have been fast barred against us, and cleared a road that would otherwise have been beset by difficulties."

We cannot follow the lecturer through two and a half hours' discourse; suffice it to say, that it was full of incident, and that the audience were held spell-bound, as it were, till its conclusion, when long-continued acclamations testified to their appreciation of what was unanimously accepted as an intellectual treat. Col. Wigginton proposed to deal further with the battle-field of Sedan, when we hope the charity for which he exerted himself will be largely benefited.

BREAKFAST. — EPPS'S COCOA. — Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. "The Civil Service Gazette" remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cocoa, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 3s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Ulcers, Wounds, Sprains.—Bad legs, old wounds, and sprains, whether recent or chronic, yield with surprising celerity to the cooling, healing, and curative properties of this invaluable Ointment. It may be relied upon in all such cases as have baffled the skill of our best hospital surgeons. No matter the length of time the malady has endured, this Ointment, assisted by a course of Holloway's Pills, will quietly but certainly reach the core of the complaint, and thoroughly eradicate it, without additional impediments to pleasure or business. These remedies will overcome the worst form of disease and the foulest state of the blood. They never fail in extirpating noxious humours, the first step towards renewing soundness.—[Advt.]

The ALNWICKE MS. & RECORDS of the ALNWICKE LODGE.

BY BRO. W. JAMES HUGHAN, P.M. 131, Prov. G. Sec. Cornwall, Hon. Member "Mother Lodge Kitwinning" (Scotland), No. 75 (Falmouth), No. 1010 (Hull), No. 1159 (London), &c., &c., &c.

Bro. "E. T. T." has kindly placed in my hands for perusal and publication the records of the Alnwick Lodge, the rules of which are dated 29th September, 1701, and are signed by the members belonging to the lodge of that period, and subsequently as late as August 31st, 1722. At the commencement is a good copy of the "Masons' Constitutions," evidently of date A.D. 1701, or a little earlier, and certainly a transcript from a much older document. It is similar to the "York Constitutions of A.D. 1704," which we made known to the Craft, in the "Masonic Annual for 1871" (M. C. Peck and Son, Hull). It differs, however, from it and other MSS. in some few unimportant particulars, and belongs to a year in which no other was written of those still preserved. The following beginning to the MS. is new to us:—

"Draw near unto me, ye unlearned, and dwell in the house of Learning."

Ecclesiasticus, cap. 5, ver. 23.

"In the hands of the Craftsmen shall the work be commanded."

Ecclesiasticus, cap. 9, ver. 19.

Then follows the commencement of the MS. proper:—

"The might of the Father of heaven with the wisdom of his Glorious Son, through the Grace and Goodness of the Holy Ghost, Three Persons in one Godhead be with us att our beginning, and give us Grace soe to govern us here in our living That we may come to his Blisse thatt never shall have ending. Amen."

It finishes with—

"These charges thatt we have reckoned, and all other thatt belongeth to Masonry you shall truly keep and well observe, so helpe you God and Holydoome, and this Book to the uttermost of your power." FINIS.

The rules of the lodge are of much value, as they are dated A.D. 1701, and follow immediately after the MS.; besides which their antiquity is such as to attach much value to the clauses then agreed on as the laws for the members. They are headed:

Orders to be observed by the company and Fellowship of Free Masons at a Lodge held at Alnwick Sept. 29, 1701, being the genll. head meeting day.

1st. First it is ordered by the said Fellowship thatt there shall be yearly Two Wardens chosen upon the said Twenty-ninth of Sept. being the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, which Wardens shall be elected and appoynted by the most consent of the Fellowship.

14th. Item, Thatt all Fellows being younger shall give his elder fellows the honour due to their degree and standing. Alsoe thatt the Master Wardens and all the Fellows of this Lodge doe promise severally and respectively to performe all and every the orders above named, and to stand by each other (but more particularly to the Wardens and their successors) in suing for all and every the forfeitures of our said Brethren, contrary to any of the said orders, demand thereof being first made.

Sixty-nine signatures are attached to these rules, some of which were written A.D. 1701, when the rules were inserted in the book, and the remainder were appended according to the dates of initiation: e.g., "Patrick Mills 1706, made Free Decr. 27th, and George Potts made Free this 20th of Jany. 1708." To some of the names marks are attached in the form of monograms, &c. The records are mostly taken up with the narration of fines, the arrangements for indentures, and such like, as from the earliest minute to the last (ranging from 1703 to 1757) the lodge was of an operative character, and the members assembled for the purpose of aiding one another in sickness, for the preservation of their secrets as Freemasons, and for the proper conduct of Master and Fellows, both within and without the lodge. The earliest minute of the Alnwick Lodge preserved is dated October 3rd, 1703:

"Item. Itt is agreed by us whos names is under written thatt Wm. Balmrow for a brech of ye 12 Artickole shall be prosecuted according to Law, and furdur James Mills of some other offence thatt will be mad apeer at time convenient."

On Dec. 27th, 1705: "It is agreed and concluded upon by the genll. consent of the Lodge thatt James Mills and James Gammon, Matthew Doores [these names are all subscribers to the orders of A.D. 1701] Jno. Kennington and othrs. offenders. be prosecuted and fined Nobles each for their absence from Warkworth and Alnwick Lodge, as witness or hands the day & year above written. The Fines upon the said offenders. to be forthwith prosecuted as agreed by us present this day att the Lodge holden att Alnwick." (Signed) ... ..

At the Lodge held — 1706 (?) several brethren, "for not meeting at the Lodge held on this Day at the usuall place upon due summons are fined six shillings Eightpence each of them."—(Signed by Thomas Davidson, master, and 14 members.)

Dec. 27th, 1707: "Agreed upon by the consent of this Lodge holden att Alnwick this St. Jnos. Day, the Day and year above written, Thatt James Mills of Alnwick aforesaid is by general consent of the sd. lodge chosen and elected master of the sd. Lodge. Thomas Dally jr. and Thos. Davidson Wardens."

The next election occurred 27th Dec., 1708.

At Alnwick Dec. 27th, 1710: "Its ordered by the genll. consent of our Lodge thatt on the Third Day of February next after the Date hereof thatt all the Brothers and fellows concerned in the sd. Lodge then & there to appear & to concert & enquire into all such offences contrary to the Orders and Constitutions of the sd. Lodge & and to put the same in Execution, according to Law, as they shall answer the contrary the Penalty for not answering on the Day aforesaid six shillings, eightpence, as witness our hands the Day and year above written,"

--(Signed) THOMAS DAVIDSON, Master;
MATTHEW FORSTER } Wardens; DARRICK MILLES }
and Brethren.

Then follow several instances of fines for non-attendance and disobedience. The next minute is the most important of those recorded, and is the only instance I can find of a reference to sermons being preached on behalf of the Society, or, indeed, of any public appearance of the members of the Lodge in the book. That the Masons walked in procession with their aprons on, and that the Masters for the time being were held responsible for such taking place annually, the record proves clearly; and these old minutes are therefore of much value, apart from the importance which is necessarily attached to the "MS. Constitution" of A.D. 1701, which prefaces the volume:—

That at a true and perfect Lodge kept at Alnwick at the house of Mr. Thomas Davidson, then one of the Wardens of the said Lodge the twentieth Day of this instant Jany. 1708. It was ordered thatt for the future noe member of the said Lodge Master, Wardens, or Fellows should appear at any Lodge to be kept on St. John's Day in Christmas without his apron and common square sixt in the belt thereof; upon pain of forfeiting two shillings sixpence, each person offending, and thatt care be taken by the Master and Wardens for the time being that a Sermon be provided and preached on that day at the Parish church of Alnwicke by some clergyman at their appointment: when the lodge shall all appear with their aprons on and common squares as aforesaid, and that the Master and Wardens neglecting their duty in providing a clergyman to preach as aforesaid shall forfeit the sum of Ten Shillings. The severall forfeitures to be disposed of as the then Lodge shall direct, and all persons offending shall upon refusall of paying the severall mulcts above mentioned shall be excluded the said Lodge.

Witnesses our hands the said Twentieth Day of Jany. 1708.

JAMES MILLES, Master of the aforesaid Lodge.
THOS. DAVIDSON } Wardens of the said
JOHN CHARLTON } Lodge.
(and eleven others.)

The next minute is dated Alnwick, 27th December, 1748, and

"Is to certify that we whose names are hereunder subscribed are made Free Bros. of the said Lodge holden at the House of Mr. Thos. Harrison, Jr., Alnwick. The Lodge erected as follows: Roger Robson in Thropton, chosen Master; George Snowdon and Richd. Atkinson, Wardens; Cuthbt. Yeuns, Robt. Snowdon, and Wm. Anderson, Bros. to the assistance of the said lodge."

The minute is also signed by twelve other brethren. It appears as if several leaves had been removed, and in fact in some places the remains of a few pages are distinctly visible. The proceedings sometimes are well recorded, but generally speaking the minutes are not well written. The MS. Constitutions, however, and the orders of A.D. 1701, are good specimens of caligraphy. That the lodge continued true to its operative origin even in later years is evident from the fact that all the business transacted at the meetings had reference simply to Operative Masonry in one form or other. On Saturday, 31st December, 1748,

"It was ordered that all apprentices that shall offer to be admitted into this Lodge, after serving due apprenticeship, shall pay for such admittance Ten shillings. Also that all other persons and strangers (not serving a due apprenticeship) that shall apply to be admitted into said Lodge, shall pay for such admittance the sum of Seventeen shillings. The meeting days for said Society to be the 24th day of June and the 27th day of Decr. in every year."

Certain fines are then agreed on, and officers chosen. It was "Ordered that none shall be admitted into the said Lodge under the age of 21 or above 40. Also that in case of any of the said members of the said Society shall fail in the world, Its ordered that there shall be paid weekly out of the said Lodge 4s. Producing proper certificates of the same, and when able, the said sum to be withdrawn."

On the 24th June, 1749, provision was made for the relief of the wives and children of deceased members to the extent of half a crown weekly. It was also "Ordered that there shall be paid out of the said Lodge Dan. Cuthbertson musicians the sum of Ten shillings yearly (to wit) 5s. at Christmas and 5s. at Midsummer."

The same sum was also agreed to be paid to Mr. Nich. Brown, as Clerk to the Society, and in like manner. At this lodge (24th June, 1749) there was left "in the Box or Lodge" £3 4s. On the 27th December in the same year the amount was raised to £7 5s. 10d. The largest sum recorded was at the lodge held June 24th, 1756, when a net balance was declared of £51 16s. 10d. The following entry is made:—

"Inrollments of Apprentices—James Swan bound apprentice to Patrick Mills, November, 1751; Edward Robinson bound apprentice to Michael Robinson, April, 1752."

We find that these two Master Masons were members of the lodge.

The minutes conclude with a statement of account dated "June ye 24th, 1757," and mentions that two shillings were "paid for Travelling Brother." Whether any but operative masons were admitted we cannot determine from the volume of records. It is probable other than masons were accepted as members, which, after all, would be nothing unusual, for gentlemen were received into operative lodges in the seventeenth century. Mainly, however, if not wholly, the Alnwicke Lodge was an operative one, and was for the protection of the Craft and the benefit of the Craftsmen.

ENCYCLOPEDIA METROPOLITANA.

BY BRO. C. G. FORSYTH.

In the proper course of my extracts, the next one in succession should be that respecting the Knight Templars; but as it has already been given in No. 90, page 608, and is of but little consequence to the present essay, I shall pass it over, merely saying that the justice or injustice of their dissolution has been long and eagerly discussed, and among the many works that it produced we may take notice of one by the celebrated Orientalist, Hammer, who, in his work entitled "Mysterium Bophomete Rivalatum," vol. 1, part 1, Vienna, 1818, attacks the Templars in no measured terms. He accuses them of infidelity and Gnosticism, and from the monuments in their churches, he taxes them with the commission of those crimes charged against them by their enemies at the time of their persecution. He gives several representations of the figure Bophomet, which, he contends, is typical of the secret doctrines; but Reynouard in the "Journal de Savans" for March and April, 1819, in a review of the above treatise, endeavours to prove that the above figure was Mahomet, and apparently with success refutes the imputations cast by Hammer. In some of the churches formerly belonging to the Templars strictly Masonic emblems are found, as at Erfurt, Schœngraben, and Prague—especially in the last, of which Hammer gives several specimens, including among them the square, the level, the triangle, the compasses, the compasses with quadrant, the maul, the interlaced triangle, the flaming star (étoile flamboyant of French Masonry), the truncated cross, &c. (several Masonic emblems may be seen in the church of Calais, but this is of more recent date). Hammer wishes to derive the Freemasons from the Ismailites who originated in the Ædes Sapientia founded at Cairo in the eleventh century, where philosophy and the sciences were taught and various degrees given. It is possible that some of the travelling Masons may have visited England at an early age of Christianity, as St. Alban, the proto-martyr of England, is represented to have been the great patron of the art, and to have increased the emoluments of its professors; but this report stands principally on the traditions of the Society. The earliest authentic account of their introduction into this country is in the year 674, when Wilfred, Archbishop of York, built the church at Hexham and Benedict Biscop the abbey at Weymouth. The latter personage went to France to collect a number of Masons to build his church of stone after the Roman manner, as it was then called. At the same time he procured some glassmakers, their art being unknown at that time in England. Before that time the churches had, with little exception, been built of wood, the Anglo-Saxon term for building being Gelymbrian, to make of wood; for, although Bishop Ninias is stated by Bede to have built a church of stone near Wigan in 432, yet the stone churches built before the eighth century were probably on a small scale. The first Christian church in Northumberland was built by Paulinus in 627, of wood. When Alfred, in the ninth century, formed the design of rebuilding his ruined churches and monasteries, the greater part of the new buildings were of wood. He was also obliged to send abroad for artificers to assist his own people. In the middle of the tenth, Edgar the Peaceable, after his accession, complained that the monasteries of England were in a ruined state and consisted of rotten boards only. The introduction of these masons in the seventh century by Benedict Biscop improved by degrees the architecture of the country, though at first they were principally confined to the northern counties. Alfred subsequently brought over some more, as above stated; others, perhaps, occasionally joined their comrades. The Society would thus soon obtain a permanent establishment, keeping themselves a distinct body from other artificers, and preserving their scientific knowledge secret from those not admitted into the order, by means of their peculiar signs and tokens. According to the traditions of the Society, the first Grand Lodge of England was formed at York in the time of King Athelstan, A.D. 926, where Prince Edwin presided as Grand Master, having obtained a charter for it. At the same time he collected all the writings connected with Masonry, "and there was some in French and some in Greek, and some in English and some in other languages." Whatever credit may be due to the Grand Mastership of Prince Edwin, it appears certain that York was considered the principal seat of Freemasonry, until the division which took place in the Craft in the beginning of the eighteenth century. The members of the Society were not strictly confined to the masons themselves, though the exceptions were in general kings, princes, and men of rank and wealth, who patronised and fostered the science and protected the inferior brethren in a great measure from the evils incident to a state of vassalage. Great improvements took place in architecture in the twelfth century. The clergy, many of whom were architects themselves, increased the ardour for building churches and other religious edifices by offering pardons and indulgences to those who expended their property in such pious uses. Yet the first English architect of whom we have any positive account is one William, who was employed about Canterbury Cathedral from 1178 to 1184. In the thirteenth, the science still improving and the demand for builders being great, the Popes, in order to encourage them, granted many indulgences by means of their bulls and charters, of which one is stated to have recited in its preamble the precedence of the chief builder of King Solomon's Temple having incorporated a body of architects with the power (among others) of regulating the prices of their labour. This recital was afterwards taken as the record of a fact, as if the Society had existed uninterrupted from the time of King Solomon. Among the privileges thus granted them by the Popes were those of settling their own prices, of taking apprentices, and admitting and accepting of approved masons into their corporations.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Grand Stewards' Lodge.—This Lodge met at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday last, when Bro. Jabez Tepper was installed by Bro. Henry Norman, P.M., into the Master's chair, who thereupon appointed his working officers in rotation, according to their seniority in the lodge, as follows: Bros. Frederick Binckes, S.W.; J. T. Swainston, J.W.; Charles H. Waters, S.D.; John S. Banning, J.D.; and John M. Stedwell, I.G. Bro. R. Spencer, P.M., was re-invested as Treasurer, and Bro. W. Watson, P.M., re-appointed Secretary. Bro. Noyes was unanimously elected a member. The lodge was duly closed, after which the brethren, accompanied by several distinguished visitors adjourned to the banquet at the Tavern, and spent a happy evening.

Grand Master's Lodge, No. 1.—This lodge met on Monday, January 16th. The W.M., Bro. E. K. Bailey, installed Bro. W. S. Gover Master of the lodge for the ensuing year, who appointed the following brethren to the different offices, viz., Bros. W. Trego, S.W.; W. H. Wilkin, J.W.; W. A. Colls, S.D.; George Payne, J.D.; R. Herve Giraud, P.G.D., Treas.; and E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B., Sec. After the lodge was closed, the brethren partook of an excellent banquet, when a testimonial, consisting of a silver tea service, value twenty-five guineas, bearing the following inscription: "Presented to Bro. Edward Henry Patten, P.G.S.B., in recognition of his valuable services as Acting Secretary in the lodge during the past ten years, and for the courteous and kindly feelings which have endeared him to every member—16th January, 1871," was presented to Bro. E. H. Patten. There were about thirty brethren present, including Bros. John Hervey, G. Sec.; John Savage, P.G.D.; Joseph Smith, P.G.P.; and Col. Hogg (Chairman Metropolitan Board of Works).

Lodge of Justice, No. 147.—This lodge was held at the White Swan Tavern, Deptford, on Wednesday, 11th inst. Bro. J. Percival, W.M., presided. A brother was raised, and Bro. G. Bolton, P.M., in his usual correct, able and most impressive manner, then installed Bro. J. Whiffen as W.M. for the ensuing year, who invested as his officers—Bros. H. Sadler, S.W.; H. Bartlett, J.W.; J. Percival, I.P.M., Treasurer pro tem. (in the unavoidable absence of the Treasurer, Bro. J. Lightfoot, P.M.); G. Chapman, P.M., Sec.; C. G. Dilley, S.D.; J. Roper, J.D.; W. Roberts, I.G.; R. W. Goddard, P.M., Tyler. Five pounds were unanimously voted from the lodge funds for the Female Annuity Fund, to be placed on Bro. J. Percival's list as the lodge's Steward at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Fund. The lodge was closed, and the usual good banquet followed, during which a five-guinea P.M.'s jewel was presented to the I.P.M., Bro. J. Percival.

Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192.—The brethren of this old lodge met on Thursday week at the Canon-street Terminus Hotel, Bro. E. Roberts, W.M., occupying the chair. Bro. Newman was raised to the third degree, and Bro. Baker passed to the second, both ceremonies being performed by the W.M. Bro. Bryant, P.M., then took the chair in consequence of the W.M.'s illness, and initiated Messrs. Clements, Domme, Chillingworth, and Edwards. Bro. H. Muggerridge, P.M., afterwards took upon him the Master's duties, and installed Bro. George Kenning, S.W. of the lodge, as W.M. for the year ensuing in the presence of some eighty brethren, thirty of whom were Past or Installed Masters. Better evidence than such a large attendance afforded of the popularity of the W.M. could not be given. The officers appointed by the W.M. were Bros. Harris, S.W.; Trott, J.W.; Goodyer, P.M., Treas.; H. G. Marsh, P.M., Sec.; Abbot, S.D.; Dickenson, J.D.; Newman, I.G.; King, P.M., W.S.; Colu, D.C.; and G. Smith, Tyler. On the motion of Bro. Goodyer, P.M., seconded by Bro. Harris, S.W., a Past Master's jewel was voted to Bro. Ebenezer Roberts, I.P.M., as a testimony of their regard on his relinquishing the office of W.M. Bro. Kenning, as W.M., thereupon closed the lodge, and the brethren, to the extraordinary number of seventy-nine, sat down to an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. S. Spencer, the manager of the hotel, which gave general satisfaction. On the removal of the cloth, grace was sung by the brethren, and the W.M. proceeded with the proposal of the usual toasts.—Bro. Hyde Pullen responded for the D.G.M. and the rest of the Grand Officers, and assured the brethren that the more they performed their duties as individuals in their own lodges the more they would estimate the labours, the powers, and the capabilities of the Grand Officers. He was pleased at being present at the installation, and he thought there was before the lodge a year of intense happiness and prosperity. When he saw the number of visitors and the spirit of hospitality extended to them, he felt sure that every lodge-night the same cordiality would be displayed. Hospitality was one of the vital principles of Freemasonry, and the other virtues which followed in its train might be expected to be exhibited in their fullest and grandest splendour this year in this lodge, and make it one of great success.—Bro. E. Roberts, I.P.M., proposed "The W.M.," whom he was pleased to see in the position he himself so lately occupied. He hoped he would go through his year of office with honour to himself and the Lion and Lamb Lodge, and that when he resigned his chair to another brother, the members would be able to say that he had done his duty. No doubt he would fulfil them admirably; if he did not, it would be from no lack of determination on his part to give satisfaction, for he was resolved to exert himself in the interests of the lodge to the utmost of his power.—Bro. Theodore Distin having sung "What better theme than Masonry?"—The W.M. said: Brethren, it gives me unfeigned pleasure to rise in my place as Master of this lodge to respond to this toast. It has long been my ambition to become Master of my mother lodge, of which I have now been a member for eleven years. I pledge myself in very few words to do my best, and I hope I shall give the same satisfaction as my Bro. Roberts has given. If I do as well as he has done, I shall give satisfaction to myself at least. I thank all of you heartily.—The W.M.: The next toast I have the pleasure to propose is that of "The Initiates." This toast is peculiarly pleasurable to this lodge, inasmuch as the initiates are the life and soul of Freemasonry. We are always pleased to have initiates among us. Some of them turn out lions and some turn out lambs; but whichever they may be, we are always ready to greet them.—Bro. Donne replied. He did not know who were the lions and who the lambs out of the four initiates, but it seemed to him that all the initiates were the lions of the evening. One thing he would say concerning them—he hoped they would all prove worthy members of the lodge.—Bro. Binckes replied for "The Masonic Charities." The proposition of this toast was one of those acts of refined cruelty which only a W.M. could be guilty of. It was disguised under the name of kindness, inasmuch as such a toast was not on the list, and he had hoped to enjoy himself without being called upon to say a word. However, without any notice, the W.M. sounded his gavel, gave the toast, and very kindly coupled with it the name of Bro. Binckes. Under those circumstances he was bound to acknowledge that kindness—cruel kindness, though it be—and say a very few words. He did not hesitate to say he felt flattered and proud that the W.M. had even interpolated the toast, though at such a late hour the brethren would be sorry the Secretary of one of the charities was present, because that might be the reason why the toast had been proposed. However, he would not shrink from his duty, which, on this occasion, would be brief because he was spared making a forcible appeal on behalf of the institutions by the W.M. having intimated his intention of becoming a Steward for this lodge the next festival of the Boys' School. For this kindness he expressed his gratitude, and he hoped the brethren would support the W.M. with great generosity. That school was indebted to its bankers on current account something like £6,000, and it required support, assistance, and encouragement rather more than the other institutions, which enjoyed funded property. This was the second time he had visited this lodge, and he could not but feel struck with the observations of the initiate who responded for himself and brothers, that he did not know which of them were the lions and which the lambs. It was a similar cognomen that this lodge bore. It naturally reminded him of the prediction of the prophet, that at some happy yet remote date the "lion and the lamb shall lie down together." Then he thought of an old proverb which spoke of one of our months as coming in like a lion and going out a lamb. Applying that proverb to the present occasion, it might be that the outgoing Master was the lamb, and the incoming Master the lion, who would exercise his authority for twelve months, and sustain "the heat and burden of the day." On a former occasion he had sat down with the lamb; he felt pleased that he was now sitting down with the lion. He had encouraged the lamb; he hoped the lion would encourage and support the Boys' School, and that the Lion and Lamb would encourage and support all the institutions. In lodges, he would inform the initiates, all conflicting views of politics and religion which disturbed the outer world were put on one side. The lion and lamb reconciled opposite opinions, opposite creeds, opposite politics, and opposite sentiments when they met. Nothing would more thoroughly symbolise real Freemasonry than the title of this lodge, where the lion and the lamb sat down together in peace. While that was the case, there was no lodge in which the "still small voice" of charity could be more thoroughly heard; and what it had done in days gone by, he knew it would do in the present and in the future. For himself his feeling was one of gratitude for the past, pleasure in the present, and that old stereotyped word "hope" that if might not be the last time he might mix with that very pleasurable gathering. Bro. Binckes concluded by again thanking the W.M. for undertaking the stewardship of the Boys' School, and for the kindness with which the brethren had received the toast.—Bro. R. Wentworth Little, replying for the visitors, of whom there were 36 present, said the first duty he had to discharge was to express their extreme gratification at the auspicious ceremony which had that evening taken place. They were all rejoiced at seeing Bro. Kenning achieve the object of his ambition, and the brethren of the lodge would have been disappointed if he had not, after passing through the various offices, and done his best therein, been placed in the Master's chair. Having elected him, they had a Master who would perform the duties of his high position in an efficient manner. He had represented the charities, had put his hand into his pocket for them, and induced others to do the same. The visitors thanked him for the extremely hospitable way in which they had been received, and expressed their feeling of regard, veneration, and respect to the lodge in general for the entertainment. Whenever they had met at this festive board, they had been received with the same cordiality. It was the eighth or ninth time that he (Bro. Little) had attended the installation of the W.M. in this lodge, but the reception he met with on all those occasions induced him to hope that he might often have the pleasure of repeating his visits.—Bros. James Stevens and Dr. O'Connor also responded.—Bros. E. Roberts, I.P.M., C. Hosgood, P.M., Goodyer, P.M., and Muggerridge, jun., replied for the P.M.'s; Bros. Harris, Trott, and Abbott for the Officers of the lodge, and the brethren then separated. The harmony of the evening was increased by the performance of some beautiful music by Bro. H. Parker, who superintended this department, and who, assisted by Bros. Carter and Theodore Distin, sang some charming songs. Besides the officers above-named, the following brethren were also present:—Edward Jones, E. Taylor, Thos. Colu, A. C. Payne, W. Elliott, T. Fisher, R. E. Bright, W. R. Baker, Henry Davis, J. Haynes, J. Kent, J. Muggerridge, J. Mabel, E. Coleman, J. Hyde, W. Putman, T. Layborn, Geo. Parker, A. Garnett, Charles Cann, C. Ankell, G. T. Smith, B. Marsland, J. T. Marks, F. Baker, S. Lucas, T. J. Newman, C. Hopkins, and J. M'Kinnan. Visitors: Bros. Jas. Absell, 813; W. Davis, Duke of Edinburgh; C. Jardine, 140; James Stevens, W.M. 1216; E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B., Sec. Girls' School; John Boyd, P.M. 145; Henry Birdseye, 715; J. W. Turner, 144; T. L. Fox, 19; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; A. Bryant, 12; G. J. Hillstead, 169; G. A. Taylor, 22; J. T. Moss, 1326; E. Sillifant, 1309; H. W. Wickens, 1293; W. Palmer, 177; J. Carey, 177; F. Bigg, 66; Magnus Ohren, W.M. 452; H. Massey, P.M. 619; R. Wentworth Little, P.M., P.G. Sec. Middlesex; Thomas Riley, P.M. 540; J. B. Wolpert, P.M. 720; Thomas Jones, 25; H. J. Ingram, 860; William Kibbell, W.M. 715; A. A. Penderbury, P.M. 1056; W. Dodd, W.M. 1194; F. Binckes, Grand Stewards' Lodge; R. W. Williams, 1314; Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; Henry Jenkins, 169; T. A. Taylor, 879; G. H. Proctor, 379; William D. Connor, P.M. 28; Thos. Distin, Henry Parker, J. B. Johnston, Bombay, and J. Carter.

Polish National Lodge, No. 534.—This lodge met at Freemasons' Hall on Thursday, the 12th inst., when Bro. Merick, P.M. (in the unavoidable absence of the W.M.), took the chair, and in an able manner initiated two gentlemen into the Order. The lodge was then closed. At the subsequent banquet, Bro. Paas, P.M., responded to the Secretary's toast, and Bros. Walters and H. Binckes for the visitors.

Beaton Lodge, No. 619.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday at the Greyhound, Dulwich, Bro. Saul Wells, W.M., presided, and was assisted by Bros. W. H. Green, as S.W.; Captain Arthur Smith, J.W.;

W. Seaman, S.D.; J. Kinson, I.G.; P. R. Leeuw, D.C.; A. P. Leonard, P.M., Sec.; H. Massey, P.M.; J. A. Green, J. Whitley, and R. J. Wood. Mr. Wright, the candidate for initiation, was not present, and the brethren adjourned to a small banquet, and spent a very pleasant evening. Before they retired, a letter was received from the S.W., resigning the lodge. Bro. Capt. A. Smith, J.W., was thereupon heartily congratulated on the prospects he had of becoming W. Master. In reply, he said that if such good fortune awaited him, he hoped to be able to restore this, his mother lodge, to the state of happiness and prosperity in which he found it when he became a member of it. It was stated that there would be several candidates for initiation at the meeting of the lodge in May.

MIDDLESEX.

Acacia Lodge, No. 1309.—The members of this lodge held their regular meeting on Wednesday, the 11th inst., at the Railway Tavern, Potter's Bar, Bro. Frederick Walters, W.M., in the chair. There were also present: Bros. E. Sillifant, P.M., Treas.; G. Cattel, P.M., Sec.; J. R. Tustin, T. D. Barnard, Ovenden, &c.; visitors, D. Jewiss (73), C. Staber (P.M. 871), Selby (157), and some other brethren. The work done included one passing, and two initiations. An appeal from Bro. Sillifant showed the deep interest felt by all the members in supporting him with liberal donations to his list as Steward for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

PROVINCIAL.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge Fortitude, No. 105.—The brethren of this lodge met on the 22nd ult., to instal the W.M.-elect, Bro. G. C. Bignell. A very full attendance took place, and the chair having been taken by the V.W. Bro. R. R. Rodd, P.G.R., he proceeded with the ceremony in his usual correct and able manner, assisted by Bro. A. W. Rodd, P.M. of Lodge Borundura, 718 E.C., Melbourne, Australia. The W.M. having been regularly installed in the chair, made the following appointments of officers:—Bros. Charles Carey, I.P.M.; Martin Williams, S.W.; Wm. Anthony, J.W.; S. Jew, P.P.G.T., Treasurer; James Rowe, P.P.G.T., Secretary; Thos. Carey, S.D.; Robt. Twose, J.D.; C. H. Cooper, I.G.; Elliott Square, D.C.; Wm. Vercoe and Thos. Buchanan, Stewards; and Wm. Smith, Tyler.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights, No. 148.—The annual meeting of this ancient lodge was held on the 26th ult. The W.M., Bro. William Smith, presided, and was supported by Bros. Mossop, W.M. 1250, as S.W.; W. Richardson, W.M.-elect, as J.W.; H. B. White, P.M., Prov. G.S.D.; John Bowes, P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmorland; Gilbert Greenall, P.M., P.G.S.W. of England; R. Stevenson, Hephed, Shaw Thewlis, D. W. Finney, and Joseph Maxfield, P.M.'s; M. Harding, I.G.; W. S. Hawkins, T. M. Pattison, Org.; Thos. Morris, James Curry, Sam. Hunt, Jos. Cassidy, Dr. J. H. Gornall, Rev. J. D. Maningham, D.D., LL.D., R. Richardson, A. F. Huttman, W. Crompton, W. Sharp, W. Woods, James Hannah. Visitors: Bros. H. Poynter, W.M. 1087; Jas. Whitlow, W.M. 941; Robert Jackson, P.M. 104; Jos. Chrimes, 521; Rev. S. J. Butcher, Hibernian Lodge, 95, Cork; Jas. Harding, 143; J. H. Potter, R. Brierley, W. Polliitt, E. Aukland, and E. Roberts, 1250. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and Bro. W. Sharp was unanimously elected a joining member. Bros. J. H. Gornall and Rev. Dr. Maningham were passed by Bros. Stevenson and Finney. The chair of K.S. was now assumed by Bro. John Bowes, as Installing Master, when Bros. Stevenson and Smith presented Bro. W. Richardson, W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation, which was ably done in accordance with ancient custom, and the W.M. appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows: Bros. W. Smith, I.P.M.; Jas. Jackson, S.W.; W. Sharp, J.W.; H. B. White, Treas.; John Bowes, Sec.; John Harding, S.D.; Jos. Cassidy, J.D.; Thos. M. Pattison, Org.; W. Crompton, I.G.; J. Hannah, Tyler. Bro. Bowes delivered all the charges usual on such occasions, and before the lodge was closed, a vote of thanks was accorded to him for his services. After some other business had been disposed of the lodge was closed with the usual solemnities, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Jabez G. Hughes's for the banquet, which included the choicest delicacies of the season. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. William Richardson while the Wardens occupied their "constant places." The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Pattison, Organist. The cloth having been withdrawn and the loyal toasts heartily honoured, the W.M. proposed "The M.W.G.M., the R.W.D.G.M., and the Grand Lodge of England."—Bro. Jas. Hephed, P.M., proposed the next toast. He said their Provincial Masonic Rulers were well known to them all in a greater or lesser degree, and from all he had heard and knew of them he believed they were "worthy Masons all." The toast was "The R.W. Prov. G.M., the V.W.D.P.G.M., and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers," and he was proud that he could call upon one of the most esteemed members of their own lodge to respond to the toast. There was no member of the lodge to whom they were so largely indebted for past services in working the lodge as Bro. H. B. White; he therefore called upon them to drink the toast with all the warmth they could command. Bro. H. B. White, Prov. G.S.D., thanked the brethren for the flattering reception they had given the mention of his name. He was proud to be a member of the Provincial Grand Lodge, because it brought him into contact with brethren imbued with a true Masonic spirit, and who had the good of the Craft at heart. Before he sat down he was privileged to propose the next toast, "The Provincial Grand Lodges of the neighbouring provinces." He rejoiced in this opportunity, because he could call upon a brother to respond whom he claimed as a godson in Masonry—he referred to Bro. Bowes. He would not only call upon him to respond to this toast, but would refer to him in another capacity—that of Installing Master. He felt proud that a member of their own lodge should be able to perform that interesting ceremony in a correct and impressive manner; it was many years since they did themselves a similar honour.—Bro. Bowes, P.G. Registrar of Cumberland and Westmorland, said he was proud to be in a position to respond for their Prov. Grand Lodge, because amongst its officers were some of his best friends. As for his services that day as Installing Master, he had always felt that it was not respectable for a lodge of standing to be obliged to seek aid outside itself for the due performance of its ceremonies, but so far as the Warrington lodges were concerned, that sort of reproach did not now attach to them. He had done his best, and was amply rewarded if his services had proved acceptable. He would now offer them a toast which he knew would be received with the greatest enthusiasm. It was "The health of the W.M., Bro. William Richardson," and needed no words of his to commend it, as they had given proof of the esteem in which they held that brother.—The W.M., in responding, said his motto was "Deeds, not words," and therefore they must not expect a speech from him. He was very proud of the position he occupied that night, and could assure them that it would be his constant study, with the help of his officers, to maintain the lodge in its present efficient state. He begged to thank them most heartily for the compliment they had paid him. He concluded by proposing "The P.M.'s and Officers of No. 148," coupled with the names of Bro. Robt. Stevenson, P.M., and Bro. W. Sharp, J.W.—Both brethren suitably responded.—The other toasts were: "The Officers and members of the Gilbert Greenall Lodge, No. 1250," responded to by Bro. Wm. Mossop, W.M. 1250; "The Visitors," who each acknowledged the toast on his own behalf; "Masonic Charities," proposed in an exhaustive speech by Bro. William Smith, after which the Tyler proposed his toast and the proceedings terminated. Some capital songs and glees alternated most pleasantly with the speeches which well received throughout.

CHELTENHAM.—Royal Union Lodge, No. 246.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Cheltenham, on Wednesday, January 4th, to celebrate the Festival of St. John and instal the W.M. for the ensuing year. Between thirty and forty of the brethren were present. The lodge was opened in due form by Bro. William Forth, W.M. and W.M.-elect, all of whose officers were present, viz., Bros. W. R. Porcher, I.P.M.; Stapley, S.W.; Robertson, J.W.; J. Brook-Smith, Chap.; W. L. Bain, Treas.; William R. Holman, Sec.; E. Alder, S.D.; T. Furber, J.D.; R. J. Dixon, I.G.; Ricketts and Humphreys, Stewards; and Wiggins, Tyler. The minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. The W.M. vacated the chair, and it was occupied by the V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Grand Chaplain of England, who re-installed the W.M. in a most able and impressive manner. The officers were then invested as follows: Bros. Porcher, I.P.M.; J. Robertson, S.W.; William R. Holman, J.W.; W. L. Bain, Treas.; E. Alder, Sec.; Furber, S.D.; Dixon, J.D.; Howard, I.G.; Alen, P.M., D.C.; Ricketts and Humphreys, P.M.'s, Stewards; and Wiggins, Tyler. Grants were voted to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Cheltenham General Hospital and Dispensary. The usual proclamations were made, and the lodge closed in due form. The brethren then adjourned to the banquetting-hall, and spent the evening in great harmony, the toasts being proposed and received in a hearty Masonic spirit.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—The annual festival of this lodge was celebrated at the Freemasons' Hall, Halford-street, on Wednesday, the 4th inst., when there was a numerous attendance of members and visitors. Amongst those present, in addition to the W.M., Bro. W. E. S. Stanley, were Bros. W. Kelly, I.P.M. and R.W. Prov. G.M.; W. Weare, P.M. and Treas.; G. F. Brown, P.M.; Clement Stretton, S.W. and W.M.-elect; E. J. Crow, J.W.; A. Palmer, S.D.; J. Wright-Smith, J.D.; R. W. Wuldowson, I.G.; Bembridge and Dunn, Tylers; Captain Goodchild, J. Halford, J. M'Allister, Atwood, Barber, Matts, Gosling, Porter, Blankley, Gardin, Kirby, Shuttlewood, Beeton, Pyc, and others. Visitors: Bros. W. Worrall, King Solomon's Lodge, Toronto, Canada; and T. H. Buzzard (W.M.), W. Beaumont (P.M.), George Toller (P.M.), Rev. Dr. Haycroft (J.W.), E. Mace, S. S. Partridge (S.D.), W. Barfoot, W. S. Bithrey, A. Ross, and J. F. Smith, of the John of Gaunt Lodge, &c. The lodge having been opened, and the election of the W.M. duly confirmed, a ballot was taken for Mr. Samuel Cleaver, as a candidate for initiation, who was duly elected. Bros. Beeton and Pyc were passed as F.C.'s—the ceremony, at the request of the W.M., being most efficiently performed by the Prov. G. Sec., Bro. Toller. The W.M. initiated Mr. S. Cleaver. The chair was then taken by the Prov. G.M., Bro. Kelly, who proceeded to instal Bro. Clement Stretton, P. Prov. G. Reg., as W.M. A vote of thanks for his attention to his duties, and for his efficient services in the chair, was unanimously accorded to Bro. Stanley, the I.P.M., and a similar well-deserved compliment was paid to Bro. Weare, P.M., for his valuable services as Treasurer, to which office he was again unanimously elected by ballot. The report on the state of the Treasurer's account was of a highly satisfactory character, showing a balance in favour of the lodge of upwards of £100. The W.M. then appointed and invested the following brethren as the officers of the lodge for the ensuing year: Bros. W. E. S. Stanley, I.P.M.; E. J. Crow, S.W.; Dr. Pearce (who was unavoidably absent), J.W.; W. Weare, P.M., Treas.; R. W. Wuldowson, Sec.; A. Palmer, S.D.; J. Wright-Smith, J.D.; John Halford, I.G.; and C. Bembridge and J. Dunn, Tylers. Relief having been voted to a case of distress, the Prov. G.M. reported that the W. Bro. Hughan, P.G. Sec. Cornwall (who had evinced the greatest interest in the case of their local candidate for the Boys' School, Alfred Nutt), had kindly placed at his (the P.G.M.'s) disposal a collection of rare and curious Masonic works to be raffled for, the books to be presented by the winner to the library in the hall, and the proceeds, £5 5s., to be placed on Bro. Deane's list, as Steward for this province on behalf of the Boys' School, for a Life Subscribership for Bro. Hughan, who would give the vote in favour of Alfred Nutt until elected. The P.G.M. added that the list having been filled up with twenty-one subscribers at 5s. each, the raffle would take place in the interval preceding the banquet. Accordingly, after the transaction of some business of a private nature, the lodge was closed, and the raffle took place, the winner being Bro. G. H. Hodges, P.M. 523 and P.P.G.S.W.—The P.G.M. then announced that Bro. Hughan had most liberally promised that, on condition of the books being presented to the library, he would supplement it by a further donation to the collection himself. (Applause.)—The brethren sat down to a bounteous repast and dessert, to which a plentiful supply of champagne and other wine was liberally contributed by the W.M., Bro. Stretton, who, of course, presided, and was supported by the P.G.M. and nearly fifty other brethren. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were, in turn, duly honoured, interspersed with some excellent songs by Bros. Crow, Atwood, Palmer, Bithrey, and others. After a most pleasant and harmonious celebration of the festival of the patron saint of the lodge, the brethren finally separated, previously to which the "Final Toast" (recently published for him by Bro. George Kenning) was sung by Bro. Crow, S.W., and which is doubtless destined to be brought into use at most Masonic gatherings throughout the Craft.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster, on Wednesday evening, the 11th inst. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.P.G.S. of W., &c., who was supported by Bro. John Hatch, I.P.M.; Bro. W. Hall, S.W.; Bro. W. Fleming, J.W.; W. Bro. J. Hatch, P.M., Treas.; W. Bro. E. Simpson, P.M. and Sec.; Bros. E. Airey, S.D.; W. J. Sly, J.D.; Harrison, I.G.; R. Taylor and Bullfield, Stewards. There were also present: Past Masters Kelland, King, W. Hall, and Whimpray, and about 20 other brethren. The lodge was opened and general business transacted, when the W.M. announced the death of Past Master Richard Stanton, and moved that an expression of regret at his decease should be entered upon the minutes of the lodge, and an address of condolence forwarded to his widow. This was seconded by Past Master Kelland, and carried unanimously. In accordance with a notice upon the circular calling the meeting, the W.M. moved that £30 should be voted from the lodge funds for a special charitable purpose. The circumstances requiring this vote were explained and commented on by the Treasurer, Bro. James Hatch, P.M., Bros. E. Simpson, P.M. and Sec.; G. Kelland, P.M.; and Bro. R. Bond, and the vote was carried unanimously. Bro. Hayes having given proof of his proficiency as a Fellow-Craft Freemason, was in due course raised to the degree of a M.M. by the W.M. There being no other business before the lodge, it was closed in due form.

BRIGHTON, SUSSEX.—Royal York Lodge, No. 315.—A meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion, on Tuesday evening, January 3rd. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. James Curtis. After the minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed, Bro. Thomas Packham was passed to the second degree, the W.M. performing the ceremony in the most able and satisfactory manner. During the evening the Secretary, Bro. Eberall, read the resignations of three members of the lodge: one on account of increasing infirmities and great age, another on account of the night of meeting being most inconvenient to him, and the other because he has removed some distance from Brighton. The business of the evening having been disposed of, and no fresh propositions made, the lodge was closed in perfect harmony. There were present: Bros. J. Curtis, W.M.; J. W. Stride, S.W.; John Robinson, P.M., as J.W.; Pearson, S.D.; Slater, as J.D.; Eberall, Sec.; W. Marchant, P.M., Prov. G.A.D. of C. Sussex; W. Challen, P.M. 315 and 1141, P.Z. 732, P. Prov. G.S.B. Sussex; George Emery, Thomas Packham, C. Wren, I.P.M.; Nell, I.G.; Sabine, P.M. 73, &c.; and J. M. Cunningham, P.M. 811, P. Prov. G.S.W. Sussex. The J.W. and Bro. C. Sandeman, the J.D., were unavoidably prevented from attending. The next meeting, for the election of the W.M., will be held at the same place on Tuesday, the 7th proximo.

YEovil.—Lodge of Brotherly Love, No. 329.—On Wednesday, January 4th, the members of this lodge celebrated the festival of St. John, and performed the ceremony of installing the W.M.-elect for the ensuing year. For this purpose they assembled at their lodge-room, Three Choughs Hotel, at one p.m. The V.W.D.P.G.M. of Somerset, Bro. Captain Bridges, according to ancient form, duly installed into the chair Bro. J. Howe Farley, S.W. 329 and P.P.A.G.P. The W.M. appointed his officers for the ensuing year as follows: Bros. John Chaffin, S.W.; W. B. Milborne, J.W.; Rev. R. J. F. Thomas, P.M. and P.G.C. of England, Chap.; G. K. Forster, Treas.; H. Raymond, P.M. and P.P.J.G.D., Sec.; W. J. Nosworthy, S.D.; J. Millborne, J.D.; W. S. Gillard, W.M. 1168 and P.P.J.G.D. of Dorset, D.C.; J. Whitby, P.M., P.P.J.G.W., Org.; J. Palmer, I.G.; E. Helliar and R. S. Chant, Stewards; and J. Harvey, Tyler. After the ceremonies the brethren partook of a very sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. T. Sharland. Amongst those present, besides the officers above-named, were the I.P.M., Bro. G. G. Style, P.P.A.G.D.C.; Bros. R. C. Else (Bridgwater), P.S.G.W. Somerset; P. Cox, P.P.G.S. of Wks.; J. H. Ryall, P.P.J.G.D.; S. Cross, P.P.G.S. of Wks.; Dr. Garland, P.P.G.D.C.; Rev. R. Thompson, P.P.G. Chap. Dorset; John Murfis, P.P.G.S.

of Wks.; J. Budge (Crewkerne), P.P.J.G.D.; Strawson, W.M. 814 (Crewkerne), and many other distinguished brethren.

BERWICK-ON-TWEED.—Lodge St. David, No. 393.—The brethren of this lodge met, on the evening of Tuesday, 27th December, being the annual festival of St. John the Evangelist, for the purpose of installing the W.M. for the year 1871, and for the appointment of office-bearers. Bro. George Moor, having been unanimously elected W.M. for the year 1871, was installed in the chair in an imposing and impressive manner by the retiring W.M., Bro. J. S. M'Gregor. The following officers were then appointed by the W.M., and had the insignia of office conferred on them, viz., Bros. C. I. Paton, S.W.; C. Hopper, J.W.; R. Ferguson, Treas.; W. Scott, Sec.; R. Anderson, S.D.; A. Marshall, J.D.; J. Richardson, S.S.; D. Paterson, J.S.; W. Graham, I.G.; and A. F. Turnbull, Tyler. A banquet was afterwards held in the lodge-room in celebration of St. John's festival, at which thirty-eight of the brethren were present. The W.M. occupied the chair, the Wardens' chairs being filled by Bros. C. I. Paton and C. Hopper. During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to in Masonic fashion. After proposing "The health of the Retiring Master, Bro. J. S. M'Gregor," the W.M. presented him, in the name of the lodge, with a handsome Past Master's jewel, bearing a suitable inscription, as a mark of esteem and in appreciation of his services while occupying the chair. Bro. J. S. M'Gregor feelingly expressed his gratitude for so unexpected a gift, and his interest in the cause of Freemasonry. The proceedings of the evening were enlivened with song and sentiment, and after spending an agreeable evening in the greatest harmony the brethren separated.

SPILSBY.—Shakespeare Lodge, No. 426.—The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held in the lodge-room, Town Hall, Spilsby, on Thursday, the 5th inst. The ceremony of installing Bro. P. Newbould, S.W. and W.M.-elect, was most impressively performed by Bro. E. Rainey, P. Prov. G.J.D.; after which the newly installed W.M. appointed and invested his officers, as follows:—Bros. C. Starmer, I.P.M.; R. Mackinder, S.W.; Ed. Walker, J.W.; T. Thimbleby, P.M., Treas.; E. Rainey, P.M., Sec.; Gay, S.D.; T. W. Thimbleby, J.D.; Ed. Cash, I.G.; G. Smith, P.M., Steward; C. Starmer, O.; R. Wright, P.M., Almoner; and G. Badley, Tyler. An excellent banquet followed, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given and responded to; the Tyler's toast, at an early hour, concluding a very enjoyable evening.

HOLYHEAD.—Hibernia Lodge, No. 597.—The anniversary and installation meeting of this flourishing and rapidly-increasing lodge was held on Monday, 2nd inst., when the following brethren were present:—J. Peters, W.M.; E. P. Mellor, I.P.M.; W. Riva, S.W.; J. L. Griffith, J.W.; S. S. Wilkes, P.M., Sec.; Rev. O. W. Jones, Chaplain; Wm. Lewis, S.D.; John Ellis, J.D.; O. R. Ellis, Organist; Samuel Hughes, Tyler; Evan Evans, Robert Evans, H. W. Glasier, E. J. Cann, Dr. Owen Williams, Joseph Jones, J. Lloyd, Capt. George Lewis, Samuel Clark, John Devonald, W. H. Smith, Rd. Williams, George Gould, Dr. J. Roberts; visitors, Bros. the Rev. R. H. Williams (1113) and Wm. Owen (1264). The lodge was opened in due form, previous minutes were read and confirmed, and Bro. the Rev. R. H. Williams, P.M. 1113, was unanimously elected a joining member. The brother chosen to fill the office of W.M. for the ensuing year was J. Peters, who has during the past year presided over this lodge in a most able, worthy, and successful manner. It was consequently the prevailing wish of the brethren (as shown by the result of a ballot at the previous meeting) that he should be re-installed. Bro. Mellor, I.P.M., was called to the chair as Installing Master, the necessary formalities were proceeded with, and the installation was completed according to ancient usage. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers in the following order:—Bros. J. L. Griffith, S.W.; W. Lewis, J.W.; J. Ellis, S.D.; Dr. O. Williams, J.D.; J. Lloyd, I.G.; S. Hughes, Tyler; S. S. Wilkes, Sec.; Rev. O. W. Jones, Chaplain; and O. R. Ellis, Organist. The lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to a capital banquet, prepared by Bro. W. H. Smith, of the Marine Hotel, where the lodge is held. After the table was cleared the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drunk with enthusiasm; a few of the brethren responded, their speeches being eminently and truly Masonic; and several soul-inspiring songs were sung. Altogether, the whole affair proved quite a success, and the brethren after having thoroughly enjoyed themselves parted in perfect peace and harmony.

ALDEBURGH.—Alair Lodge, No. 936.—The usual monthly meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Friday, the 6th inst. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bro. G. Harper, Fairfield House, Saxmundham, who had been duly re-elected to the chair of K.S. for the ensuing year, was proclaimed and saluted in due and ancient form. The W.M. then appointed and invested as his officers: Bros. James, S.W.; Taylor, J.W.; Hayward, Sec.; Carr, S.D.; Moore, J.D.; Newman, I.G.; Roper, Tyler. The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The W.M. presided, supported by Bros. Banning, Fletcher, Baker (525), and a goodly muster of the brethren of the lodge. The banquet was served by Bro. Moore, who had spared no efforts to ensure the comforts of the brethren. The cloth being removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. Newson Garrett, P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and the W.M., in reply, expressed the great pleasure it gave him to see that his efforts to promote the interests of the Craft in general, and of this lodge in particular, were so duly appreciated by the brethren. He earnestly advocated that all who accepted office should, as far as they were able, make themselves perfect in the duties.—The Officers of the lodge duly responded to their several healths, and Bro. J. S. Banning to that of the visitors.—Bro. Newson Garrett made a touching allusion in the course of the evening to the severe affliction sustained by Bro. Rendle in the loss of his son. The harmony of the evening was much enhanced by songs and recitations, and the Tyler's toast brought a most pleasant and satisfactory meeting to a close.

ULVERSTON.—Lodge of Furness, No. 995.—The annual meeting of the members of this lodge was held on the 27th ult. at the Masonic Temple, Theatre-street, to celebrate the festival of St. John the Evangelist, and to instal the W.M.-elect. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. Case, supported by his officers. The minutes of last communication were read and confirmed. Bro. Moore, M.D., F.L.S., P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. G.S. of Works, having kindly consented to act as Installing Officer, then took the chair, and Bro. Case, W.M., presented Bro. Dodgson, the W.M.-elect, to receive the benefit of installation, which ceremony was performed in Bro. Moore's usual eloquent and impressive style. Bro. Dodgson then appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. John Case, I.P.M.; J. H. Matthews, S.W.; Robert James, J.W.; Henry Crook, Treas.; W. Harrison, Sec.; T. Roper, P.M., D.C.; G. Brocklebank, S.D.; R. Casson, J.D.; P. J. Blacklock, S.S.; T. Mashiter, J.S.; Jas. Postlethwaite, I.G.; J. Robinson, O.G. The offices of Chaplain and Organist were left open. The lodge was duly closed, and the brethren to the number of fifty, and the following visitors: Bros. J. Daniel Moore, T. Wylie, Prov. G. Reg.; W. Dodd, W.M. 1074, Prov. G.S.B. C. and W.; W. James, S.W. 1074, Prov. G. Steward; H. Cook, P.M. 1021, P.P.G.S. of W.; Geo. Cornfield, P.M. 1225; adjourned to the house of Bro. Smith, Sun Hotel, where a most sumptuous banquet had been provided, and to which the brethren did ample justice. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given and responded to, the proceedings being greatly enlivened by the lady friends of the worthy Past Organist, Bro. Casson.

CHESHIRE.—Stamford Lodge, No. 1045.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Town Hall, Altrincham, on the 2nd inst. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer by Bro. Capt. Hardy, W.M., assisted by Bros. James Sudren, I.P.M.; James A. Birch, P.M. and P.G.S.D. Cheshire; Siddeley, as S.W.; T. H. Kirk, J.W.; R. Heathcote, P.M., Treas.; Richard Newhouse, P.M., Sec.; John Siddeley, S.D.; T. Kenyon, J.D.; R. Ferguson, I.G.; J. Worthington, Tyler; and about 30 other brethren. Visitors: Bros. the Rev. E. Dakin Garven, W.M. 758, P.G.C. Cheshire; Samuel Lamb, 152, Manchester; John Beresford, P.M. 104, Stockport; J. Cavanagh and T. Evans, 317; J. Sly, 152; Wm. Sykes, W.M. 104; J. Steen, 758; J. M. Bentley, Wm. Laxton, W.M. 317. The minutes of last regular meeting were read and confirmed, and ballots were taken for Messrs. J. Woolf, Rev. R. Hodgson, and J. Ferri, as joining members, which proved unanimous, and Mr. J. Woolf, being in attendance, was regularly initiated by Bro. Jas. Sudren, I.P.M. The working tools were given by Br. Kirk, J.W.; Bro. Kenyon, J.D., delivered the charge. Bro. Ralph Weston, P.M., then took the chair, and raised Bro. T. Kent to the sublime degree of M.M. Bro. J. Steen, 758, was proposed as a joining brother. Hearty good wishes were expressed from several visiting brethren, the lodge was closed in peace and harmony, and the brethren partook of a sumptuous supper, provided by Bro. Harvey, Unicorn Hotel, Altrincham.

ROYAL ARCH.

METROPOLITAN.

Chapter of Hope, No. 206.—This ancient chapter was held on Thursday, the 12th inst., at the Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich. Comp. J. Hasler, M.E.Z., assisted by his officers, opened the chapter. As all the officers were re-elected, they were re-installed and re-appointed. The alteration proposed in a by-law was made, and the chapter was closed, banquet following. Visitor: Bro. E. Shalless, 73.

PROVINCIAL.

MANCHESTER.—Rectitude Chapter, No. 581.—The regular convocation of this chapter was held on the 27th ultimo, at the Corporation Hotel, Ardwick. The chapter was opened in ancient and solemn form by Comps. Thos. Tyers, Z.; Bridge, H.; and Dobson, P.Z., acting as J., assisted by Comps. Hardon, E.; Pritchard, N.; Wayne, P.S., after which the minutes were read and confirmed, when the ballot was taken for six companions, and eight brethren for exaltation, and declared unanimous in their favour. The 1st Principal then requested that worthy and distinguished Mason, Comp. William Abbey, P.Z. No. 993, Alexandra Chapter, Levenshulme, and the present Z. of the Chapter of Prosperity, No. 290, Huddersfield, to take the chair of Z., and perform the ceremonies of exalting Bros. J. T. Richardson (No. 581), Julius Arensburg (1161), and James Robinson (1161), which he did in his usual able and masterly style. A conclave of 3rd Principals was formed, when Comp. Abbey installed Comp. Pritchard into the chair of J. in a most impressive manner. The conclave was then closed, and after some minor business was transacted, it was intimated to the companions that a very prosperous year was apparently in store for them, when the chapter was closed in solemn form, and the companions retired to a most recherche banquet provided by Comp. Lee (although some few of the companions considered the dishes were even more numerous than necessary), and after carefully providing for the inner man, a most pleasant evening was spent.

NEW MALTON.—King Edwin Chapter, No. 660.—A convocation of this chapter took place at the Masonic Hall in this town, on Monday, the 9th instant, and was opened by M.E. Comp. J. Staniland, Z.; Marshall, H.; and S. Walker, J. (in the presence of Comps. Major Smyth, P.Z., P.G.M. Lincolnshire; James Frederick Spurr, P.Z.; and J. W. Woodall, P.Z. 200, who proceeded to the installation of the Principals-elect for the ensuing year—z.e., Comps. Bond, J.; S. Walker, H.; and Marshall, Z. Comps. Copperthwaite, Preston, Ward, Rose, Snarry, and Wandby were also present at the chapter, which was duly closed at 6 o'clock, after which the companions dined at the Talbot Hotel.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

St. Mark's Lodge, No. 1.—This old lodge held a regular meeting at the Masons' Hall Tavern, Masons' Avenue, Basinghall-street, on the 2nd inst., but was not so well attended as usual, owing to the Siberian severity of the weather. Bro. J. G. Marsh, P.G.I.Wks., the W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. Rev. W. B. Church, G.C., S.W.; T. Cubitt, J.W.; H. C. Levander, P.G.D.C., P.M., Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, P.M., Sec.; S. C. Davidson, S.O.; W. Dodd, J.D.; T. B. Yeoman, I.G.; and other members. Ballots were taken for several joining members, of whom Bros. J. Boyd and T. J. Barnes were present, after which Bros. W. B. Heath, P.M., and A. B. Donnithorne were advanced to the degree of Mark Master. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to supper, and a very agreeable evening was enjoyed by all present.

Samson and Lion Mark Lodge, No. 86, and Dove Ark Mariners' Lodge, No. 4.—At the Freemasons' Tavern, on Wednesday, the 4th inst., the Dove Ark Mariners' Lodge was opened, when five candidates were admitted. Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, N., presided, and the ceremony was worked by Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, assisted by Bro. M. Edwards. The ballot for N. for the ensuing year resulted unanimously in favour of Bro. T. Abrahams, and Bro. A. D. Loewenstark was unanimously elected Treas. The subscription was fixed at 8 shillings a year for the present, to enable Mark Master Masons to join an Ark Lodge irrespective of banquets, the sum fixed being to cover the expense of working the lodge only. The other officers present were Bros. J. L. Rosenthal, J.D., and E. Hart, G.O., Organist.—The Samson and Lion Lodge of Mark Masters was held in the same room. Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, P.G.T.G., W.M., opened the lodge, supported by Bros. T. Abrahams, S.W.; S. Pollitzer, J.W.; M. A. Loewenstark, P.G.S., P.M., Sec.; W. Littaur, M.O.; J. Rosenthal, S.O.; J. Emmanuel, S.D.; R. Boney, P.M.; Abberdoeffer, and others. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballots were unanimous in favour of all the candidates, and Bro. J. K. Tippett, S.D. 169, being in attendance, was, in an admirable manner, advanced to the degree of a Mark Master Mason. The beauties of the ceremonies were enhanced by the musical accompaniments introduced on this occasion by Bro. J. Stevens, G.J.O., assisted by Bro. Hart, Organist. Bro. T. Abrahams was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, Treasurer, and Bro. W. J. Laing was re-elected Tyler. Bro. T. Abrahams in an able speech proposed, and Bro. R. Boney seconded, and it was carried unanimously, "That three guineas be given from the lodge funds towards purchasing a P.M.'s jewel (the remainder to be added by private subscriptions), and the same to be presented to Bro. A. D. Loewenstark as a slight recognition of his valuable services, rendered to the lodge during his year of office." With the usual formal ceremonies the lodge was closed. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, February 1st. Visitors: T. Stevens, G.J.O., W.M. 104; F. Walters, P.G.I.G., P.M. 22, P.M. 86, 1; M. Edwards, W.M. 118; T. J. H. Wilkins and J. Howes, 22. Refreshment followed labour.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

METROPOLITAN.

An assembly of this conclave was held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, on Monday, the 9th inst. The M.P.S., Sir Kt. D. R. Still, was at his post, supported by Sir Kts. J. Lewis Thomas, as V.; G. S. States, S.G.; T. Cubitt, G.H., Treas.; J. G. Marsh, G. A. Rec.; J. Last, S.B.; J. Gilbert, S.; also by Sir Kts. J. Boyd, J. Brett, R. Wentworth Little, G.R., P. Sov.; E. H. Thiellay, C. A. Long, C. Hammerton, Dr. C. Parker Ward, H. Dicketts, G. Chubb, T. Bull, &c.

The conclave having been duly opened, ballots were taken for a number of candidates, and the following being in attendance, were then regularly admitted, received, constituted, and installed Knights of the Order: Bros. John Kirk, W.M. 1328, S.W. 142; J. Batstone, S.W. 1328, J.W. 142; Major C. Sendey, J.W. 1328; Major E. Hamilton Finney, 255; T. W. White, Sec. 21; E. H. Finney, jun., 478; D. C. M. Gordon, 255; G. A. Ibbetson, 231; F. G. Bailey, 231; and J. Willing, jun., 177.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows: E. Sir Kt. J. L. Thomas, M.P.S.; Sir Kts. G. S. States, V.; T. Cubitt, Treas.; and J. Gilbert, Sentinel.

The conclave was then closed, and the knights adjourned to the banqueting-room, under the presidency of Sir Kt. Still, where a first-rate banquet was served—the viands being well cooked and the wines excellent, while the attention paid by the able manager, Bro. States, and his staff of assistants, to the comfort of the brethren was so assiduous and painstaking as to elicit a special toast of warm commendation from the chair, amid the hearty congratulations of the members present. The success already achieved by the "Caledonian" as a Masonic hostelry is, however, but a herald of the prosperity which awaits it when the merits of the present management are more widely known and appreciated. After the removal of the cloth, the M.P.S. proposed the usual loyal and chivalric toasts, and then introduced "The healths of the ten Newly-Installed Companions-in-Arms," alluding in complimentary terms to the good qualities and Masonic services of the brethren who had joined the Order that evening.—Sir Kt. Major Finney and other fratres acknowledged the toast, and expressed the great pleasure they had experienced throughout the whole of the installation ceremony.—Sir Kt. Still then rose, and said he had a most pleasing task to perform, namely, to present to their esteemed friend, Past Sovereign John Boyd, a jewel of his rank in the Order, as a slight memento of the zeal and ability he had ever shown for the welfare of the Plantagenet Conclave. (Cheers.) Sir Kt. Boyd had never deserted them, even when their fortunes were somewhat at a low ebb. On the contrary, he had put his shoulders to the wheel, brought in his friends, and contributed in a very great measure to the present flourishing position of No. 2.—The toast was received with hearty fire, and the E.P. Sovereign returned thanks in an able speech, assuring the chevaliers that he was determined to promote, to the utmost of his power, their happiness and prosperity as a conclave.—"The health of the M.P.S." followed, and was exceedingly well received, and the name of the M.P.S.-elect, Sir Kt. Thomas, was also greeted with great enthusiasm, and cordially responded to by that worthy fratre. Other toasts succeeded, alternated by songs and speeches, nor were the claims of charity forgotten, inasmuch as a collection was made for the subscription list of Bro. Sir Kt. Buss, who will represent the Red Cross Order at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution on the 3rd February. Sir Kt. States had quite an ovation on his rising to respond for the toast before-mentioned; and altogether the entire proceedings were of the most pleasant, harmonious, and enjoyable character. The enthronement meeting in April is expected to be a still greater success.

PROVINCIAL.

LANCASTER.—Red Rose Conclave, No. 12.—A convocation of this conclave was held on Friday evening, the 13th January, at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. The M.P.S., Sir Kt. J. Daniel Moore, 18, Ill. Intendant-General for the Division of North Lancashire, presided, supported by the E. Sir Kts. T. Mason, V.E.; Bagnall, S.G.; Barker, J.G.; Hall, Prefect; Dean, Herald; Taylor, Sentinel; &c. The conclave was opened in due form, the minutes were read and confirmed, and other business transacted. Bros. John Dickenson and John Tilley, of the Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281, were balloted for and unanimously elected, and being in attendance, were regularly installed and proclaimed as knights of the Order. The historical oration of the Order was delivered by the M.P.S., and the conclave closed in due form.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Mount Calvary, or Early Grand Encampment of England.—The Enthronement Meeting of this encampment was held on the 13th inst. at Freemasons' Tavern. Sir Knt. F. Binckes, P.E.C., was in the chair, and ably installed Comps. G. A. Brown and Capt. J. Bertrand Payne as K.K.T., after which he enthroned Sir Knt. W. Stone as E.C. for the ensuing year. Sir Knts. S. Rosenthal and D. M. Dewar were appointed Captains; R. W. Stewart, Expert; W. Paas, P.E.C., Treas.; F. Binckes, P.E.C., Reg.; W. Roebuck, S.B.; the other offices being filled by Sir Knts. E. Baxter, F. H. Ebsworth, C. J. Morgan, and J. Hervey. The report of the Audit Committee showed that the funds were in a very healthy condition, and there is every probability of a continuance of the great success which has hitherto attended the career of this old encampment. After the active labours of the encampment, the knights adjourned to the banqueting-room, and discussed a dinner which was by no means as good as it ought to have been, considering the liberal price paid by the encampment. Among the knights present, besides those named, were Capt. N. G. Phillips, P.G.C. Suffolk; J. M. P. Montagu, P. 1st G.C.; Major E. H. Finney, J. Stohwasser, P.E.C.; and R. Wentworth Little.

SCARBOROUGH.—Geoffrey de Bouillon Encampment.—This encampment met on Friday, the 30th December, in the Masonic Hall, Globe-street. The following Sir Knights were present: W. F. Rooke, P.E.C., as E.C.; J. W. Woodall, P.E.C.; H. W. Garnett, 1st Capt.; S. H. Armitage, 2nd Capt.; H. C. Martin, Reg.; J. A. Chapman, Capt. of Lines; W. T. Farthing, E.C.-elect; J. F. Spurr, Expert; and J. Verity, Equerry. The encampment was opened, and the minutes were read and confirmed. Sir Kt. W. T. Farthing was installed E.C. for the ensuing year, after which he appointed Sir Kt. Armitage, 1st Capt.; Marwood, 2nd Capt.; Martin, Reg.; Spurr, Expert; Rev. H. Blane, Prelate; Chapman, Capt. of Lines; and Verity, Equerry. The encampment was now closed, and the Sir Knights, with a few friends, partook of one of Sir Kt. Chapman's excellent banquets, and parted in love and harmony.

MASONIC LEGENDS.

THE Masonic system abounds in legendary lore; it preserves, as in a casket, not only precious truths and sublime philosophical teachings, but with equal care cherishes and rescues from oblivion many quaint and curious traditions of the past. There is scarcely an order or degree connected with the Craft in which we do not at once discern the traces of some mystic tale or ancient allegory. Symbolic Masonry—or the Solomonian degrees—record passages in a life-like drama which will leave their impress on the mind of man until the footsteps of time shall be blotted out by the overwhelming waves of eternity. Precepts practically unfolded sink deeper into the heart, and the recollection of events, when we see them pictorially represented, is more easily retained. All the dramatic incidents in the history of the Temple at Jerusalem; every scene in the tragical fate of its master builder; each successive development of the solemn story, is engraven more firmly in our memories; because we have each, so to speak, sustained a part in the plot, and have each realised individually the surpassing interest in its progress and final catastrophe.

In like manner the Mark degree presents to our view a well-digested narrative of the rewards which ever await skill and perseverance in the path of duty. The legend of the degree is in complete harmony with all our acquired ideas of Masonry, and the dramatic unities are carefully acknowledged and preserved. Every Royal Arch Mason can bear testimony from his own experience of the work that caputular Masonry is realistic in its ceremonies to an extent which recalls to a thoughtful mind the trials and probations undertaken by the heroic neophytes of old. The Sandhedrim itself is figurative of those profounder mysteries that appertain to the regions of theurgy and the Kabbala. The sacred arch is an emblem of such infinite importance that volumes might be written upon the occult significations it will bear; in fact, the whole ceremonial of Royal Arch Masonry, when directed by intelligent men, may justly be said to verify the boast of its champions, inasmuch as by unveiling and interpreting the secrets of the primitive world, it offers us a passport to higher dominions of thought, wherein are revealed the glories of true wisdom which constitute the veritable climax of Masonic science.

When we depart out of the beaten track of Hebrew history, we are somewhat at a loss how to proceed. So many degrees have been dovetailed into the Masonic system, and so manifold and various are the duties and objects which they inculcate, that at first sight we are ready to exclaim, "Chaos is come again!" Yonder we behold a Knight Templar spurring his fiery steed across the desert plains of Syria; anon, he is transformed into a Knight Hospitaller of St. John, and alternates deeds of valour with deeds of mercy and humanity. The scene changes, and we see him at the stake, the victim of kingly avarice and priestly hate. Looking around, we observe a rival to our Templar friend in a brother very elaborately arrayed, be-jewelled, be-collared, be-aproned, be-sworded. He also hails from Jerusalem, and maintains that as a Rose Croix Mason he is as far superior to a companion of the Royal Arch as the planet Saturn is to one of his own satellites. Another ornate individual, however, disputes the palm of victory with him of the 18°, resting his claims, like Joseph Smith, of Nauvoo, upon a later revelation. From the time of the crucifixion—with all its attendant horrors, earthquakes, rending of veils, and grave-delivered dead—we are wafted into the Constantinian era, when signs and wonders were witnessed on high, and the empire of the earth dropped like a ripe plum into the all-attracting hands of the son of St. Helena.

Now, this leads us to the consideration of a Masonic Order which is very little known, although it is one of the most instructive in theory and beautiful in practice of all the degrees sheltered under the expansive wings of Freemasonry. Let us therefore, quote the legend: "St. Helena was of British extraction, and by some recorded as the daughter of Coel, Duke or King of Colchester, of which he was the alleged founder, whence its name, Coel-caester or Colchester. She was married to Constantius, the Roman General, who had become passionately enamoured of her; though after having borne him a son—the afterwards illustrious Constantine the Great—she was for some time divorced, and sent to Britain. When her son assumed the Imperial dignity, St. Helena was recalled, and by her virtue and piety prepared the mind of that noble champion of the Christian cause to receive those mystic truths for which he has been held in veneration. At the advanced age of eighty she visited the Holy Land, desirous of contemplating the spot which had been sanctified by the death of the Saviour of the world, and by His miraculous resurrection from the tomb. The chapel that had been built by Adrian, and dedicated to the pagan Venus on purpose to profane that sacred spot, soon was levelled to the dust, and the eager desire to view the original monuments of the redemption prompted every exertion on the part of the workmen employed. Deep in the ground, at length, three crosses were discovered, and the fervent piety of those who laboured in the holy work instantly recognised them as those on which the Saviour suffered and on which the two thieves, at the same time, expiated their guilt." The manner in which the true cross was selected is thus related: "The corse of a female some time defunct was placed alternately upon the three crosses: the two first that were tried produced not any effect, but the third instantly raised the body in a state of reanimation." "Over the spot where the Holy Sepulchre had been revealed, the prudent emperor (Constantine the Great) raised a superb edifice, but the clergy had first taken from the hallowed ground the nails, the lance, the crown of thorns, and the pillars at which our Saviour was scourged." "Constantine the Great first displayed the symbol of the cross in a shield on the eagles in the imperial arms by a Greek monogram, thus  $\alpha|\epsilon$  and subsequently thus  $\chi|\rho$  expressive of the figure of the cross, and exhibiting at the same time the two first letters of the word  $\chi\rho\iota\sigma\tau\omicron\varsigma$ , Christ. This device he had impressed on his helmet—in which St. Helena had caused some of the true nails to be enclosed—and on the shields of his soldiers; and so early as the commencement of the fourth century the standard of Rome wholly gave place to the Labarum, or banner of the Cross." As a continuation of the legend we find the following: "When St. Helena had discovered the true cross, she permitted various fragments to be taken from it, which were encased, some in gold and some in gems, and conveyed to Europe; leaving the principal or main part of the wood in the charge of the Bishop of Jerusalem, who exhibited it annually at Easter, until Cosroes, King of Persia, plundered Jerusalem in the reign of the Emperor Phocas, and took away this holy relic. Heraclius, the Roman emperor, about the year 615, giving Cosroes battle and a complete overthrow, recovered the cross by subsequent treaty with Cosroes' son; and transported with zeal, resolved himself to carry back to Mount Calvary the much-venerated wood. He accordingly dressed himself in his imperial robes, and summoned the attendance of his numerous and splendid train to grace the solemnity of the occasion; but vain were all the efforts of the sturdy emperor; the sacred wood remained immovable, defying his utmost exertions even to raise it from the ground, when lo! a voice from heaven explained the mystery. Christ himself had entered Jerusalem mounted on an ass, lowly and meek; while the emperor had sought to defile the hallowed cross on which the Saviour had suffered dressed in the gaudy trappings of worldly grandeur. Shame for a while overwhelmed the splendid retinue; but roused by the sacred explanatory admonition, Heraclius instantly cast off his royal garments, and then with ease lifted on his shoulder and conveyed to the destined spot that cross which before he could not with his utmost efforts cause to move. By this miraculous intervention the identity of the cross was ascertained beyond every possibility of doubt, and it was subsequently solemnly deposited in the great Church of the Twelve Apostles at Constantinople."

Of the other legends connected with the Knights of the Holy Sepulchre we cannot now speak at length, but may probably revert to the subject at some future time. Enough, however, has been said to prove the correctness of our premises, that "the Masonic system abounds in legendary lore," and that it offers to the diligent student abundant food for thought. The apparent chaos of its rites and principles can be reduced to order and regularity when we possess the key to the inner mysteries, and are enabled to distinguish the beauty and grandeur of the whole Masonic cosmogony in the faultless mirror of truth. To accomplish this magnificent task should be the unceasing aim of all brethren who desire to be something more than Masons in name; and we can promise them the utmost satisfaction and delight when they attain the utmost round of the Masonic ladder, and are really enrolled as priests in the temple of light.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

In his kind efforts to assist me, "A Voice from the West" has alluded to a fact which, in the interests of Masonry, I had wished to conceal, preferring, as I did, to allow the question to rest on the abstract historical merits of the rite, and not on the personal character of its members; many of whom are ignorant and deceived men. Nevertheless, I assure you that Charles James Banister, ably seconded by three of his supporters, insulted, accused, and judged me. To him it was, as the Summoner of the Sovereign Tribunal, that my letters printed last week were addressed. He, probably, presided over the meeting, as he received the thanks of the so-called thirty-third degree in a copy of one of their printed circulars, which came to my hands, and may afford grounds for an action for libel; prior to which, I wish some of the London brethren to inform me how I can have the question heard by Grand Lodge. I was expected to apologise to those from whom I demanded an apology! All this is the justice of the so-called Supreme Council. "Whom the gods wish to destroy they first drive mad."

JOHN YARKER.

P.S.—I have just received reliable evidence that Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Grand Chancellor of K.T.'s (and also a 32° under this Council), has furnished them with copies of some of my letters addressed to him on the subject of the Templar Kadosh. It is pointed out to me that owing to the position in the Craft of the nine members of the 33°, I stand no chance of success in a contest with them. But legal proceedings or Grand Lodge proceedings are open to me, and I should be glad if any London brother would aid me in bringing my case before the Grand Lodge Committee. They might write to me.

J. Y.

It appears that a very illustrious brother has taken up the cudgels in real earnest, and is not to be trodden under foot by the Golden-square clique; and there is no doubt that he will be well supported in all he has said, as it is well known that there are many others who are quite ready to join him, and suppress such ill-judged proceedings as have lately emanated from three or four who choose to denominate themselves the S.G.C. of the 33°. There is a very strong feeling abroad in this matter, and very few of those self-styled S.G.C.'s are known as labourers in the world of Masonry. Perhaps it is that they cannot descend to so low a sphere, but at all events, at present, they are standing on a very insecure foundation, and it is only from the sufferance of the brethren that they are not supplanted and superceded.

NEMESIS.

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS.

Under this title, at page 26, appears a personal attack upon me, and my recent contributions to your columns, by "An American Freemason." As I have no intention to take further part in the discussion of a theory in support of which nothing has been yet adduced beyond very positive assertion; I decline a controversy into which this brother seeks to import a personal element, and which, therefore, must become of a very unsatisfactory nature; at the same time, I think it due to your other correspondents that I should notice the (distorted) points upon which he thinks it right to found his communication.

1. At the time I used the term "small discussion," with reference to the gloves and apron, it was a literal fact; the discussion having then extended only three or four brief communications.

2. I adduced the proof of the word "speculative" because a brother who has taken a large part in the discussion asserted that the word could not be shown to have been used in connection with Masonry before a very modern date. That the word occurs in the MS. published by Bro. Cooke is clear, and that it is used in another than an operative sense is equally plain. The American brother appears to prefer Preston to a fourteenth or fifteenth century MS., but he will find it difficult to persuade your readers to a like conclusion.

3. It is true that Bro. Buchan has not said that "operative Masons only knew how to hew stones and spread mortar"; but he has said in effect that there was no more in the Masonic guild than in that of the tailors; and I repeat that the language of these MSS. is inapplicable to a brotherhood that held no higher place in the world of art than the "designing" of a doublet.

4. It is inconvenient for the American brother that at page 25 Bro. Buchan tell us that the authority (Quarterly Review) for the quotation as to gloves and aprons is correct.

5. Here the American brother attempts to blind your readers by a confused passage, which permits them to infer that a copy in the Gentleman's Magazine of the same MS. as that published by Bro. Cooke, contains an entirely different version of the passage quoted by me. This is not a fact. I am well acquainted with the copy in the Gentleman's Magazine, which is to be found at page 489 of the volume for 1815. It is an entirely different MS., communicated by one James Dowland, who says of it: "It is written on a long roll of parchment, in a very clear hand, apparently very early in the 17th century." In support of the 1717 theory, it has been asserted in your columns that the word "speculative" could not be proved to exist in connection with Masonry before (say) 1717; and that no Act of Parliament relating to the Masonic guild alone could be produced before 1800. I have called attention to the word "speculative" in a 15th century Masonic MS., and have produced a statute of 1425. Let us have an answer to these two facts, instead of an attack upon a contributor, who, at all events, tries to be honourable and honest as a controversial opponent.

6. I am here patronised, and kindly recommended to read Findel for an hour. I have read Findel, and probably as many other Masonic historians as the American brother, excepting, perhaps, some of the astounding publications of his own land. I speak with much respect of Findel, and little of Preston (as a writer); but I say that if the American brother prefers either, or both, of these to earlier documentary evidence, he knows very little indeed of Masonic investigations; and if of MSS. his experience is confined to the Gentleman's Magazine, of these he knows still less,

Lastly. In return for this brother's patronising advice to myself, let me recommend him to give your readers a few proofs in favour of the 1717 theory, which he supports, and of which he is in great need, instead of exhibiting his skill by criticising the honest endeavours of those who do not think as he does, and who are content to contribute their humble share of information without desiring to appear clever at the expense of others.

Bro. Buchan has led the discussion of this theory. I, perhaps, have spoken strongly upon it; but I am certain that Bro. Buchan will join with me in regretting that any member of the Craft who thinks with either of us should consider it desirable to publish an article intended to disparage the communications of the other, without contributing a single atom to the cause he affects, but does not serve.

This is my final communication as a participant in the controversy.

THE ALNWICKE RECORDS AND MASONS' APRONS.

I observe that Bro. Hughan, at page 25, considers the Alnwick Lodge "an operative one." However, at present we must thank Bro. Hughan for supplying the blanks left out by Bro. "E. T. T." at page 578. Only in connection with this subject the following extracts may be useful—they are from the "Aberdeen Burgh Records."

"1st February, 1484: The first dai of Februar, the yer of God mcccclxxxiiij, it is ordainit and decretit be the alderman and counsall, that the talyeours and al utheris craftismen within the town, sal in tyme to cum, beyr thare takynis of thare craft apone thare beristis, and thare best aray on Candelmes day at the Offerand; and quha that contervinis, and dois nocht, sal tyme thare fredum for a yer."

"23rd January, 1496: The saide day, it was statat and ordainit be the alderman, bailycis, and consale, for the honor and defenss of the toun, that everie craftismen within this burgh sale ger mak ane standart for thar craft."

In 1554 we find it "decernit" that the smiths have, as before, the post of honour next the Sacrament, "and the said wrychtis, masouns, cowperis, and sklaiteris to proccid togidder befor thame" in the approaching procession upon Corpus Christi day.

"22nd November, 1498: The said day, Mathow Wricht oblist him be his hand uphaldin to mak gude service in the luge and retenche to the bigin and furnysing of the queyr, at the command and sicht of the alderman, consal, and the master of the kirkwerk," &c.

"The said day, Nichol Masone and David Wricht oblist them be the fathis of thar bodiis, the gret aithe sworne, to remane at Saint Nicholes werk," &c.

In 1530 the "haill toun maks oath be thair hand uphaldin in jugment, the haly croce tuichit euery man be himself to obserue and keip all and sindric the ponts and artikilles forsaid," &c.; "and hereto bund and obleist thaim be the futhis in thair bodiis," &c.; "to underly the panes containit in the said statut," &c. "And, attour, the said toun, eueryk man be himself, fre and unfre, hes maid fayt, the gret aith sworne in ingement, neur to reuele," &c.

After a burgess or gild-brother in the fifteenth century had taken the oath, "he ought to kiss the provost and the brethren, if he be a brother of the gild."

Then, in a charter of King Robert II., A.D. 1373, we read: "The same Holy Gospels by each of them touched, swore their bodily oath, &c., and each raising his hand after the manner of faith-giving, in token of the universal consent of the whole clergy and people, publicly expressed and declared their consent and assent." And, lastly, in this week's newspaper I read:—

"Curious Will of an old City Worthy.—On New Year's Day a sermon is preached by the rector of the united parishes of St. Magnus (London-bridge), St. Margaret (New Fish-street), and St. Michael (Crooked-lane), in conformity with the will of Mr. Henry Cloker, a late member of the Grocer's Company. The will is dated 1573, and contains some singular clauses, one of which being that the Master, the Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Cooper's Company shall attend Divine service, and a sermon preached on New Year's Day in the afternoon for everr."

W. P. BUCHAN.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The regular meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday, the 18th instant, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Bro. Clabon, President, in the chair. Bros. J. Nunn, S.V.P., and James Brett, J.V.P., C. C. Dumas, J. Hervey, Joseph Smith, N. Bradford, J. Coutts, J. Williams, F. Walters, H. Garrod, J. W. Halsey, C. J. Hogg, R. Wentworth Little, H. G. Buss, W. Mann, S. Rosenthal, S. May, A. Pratt, C. A. Cottebrune, E. Smith, J. Stevens, J. Turner, Hemsworth, and several other brethren were also present.

The laws of the Benevolent Fund were read, and grants passed at the previous meeting confirmed.

Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., agreeably with notice of motion given at last meeting, proposed that a respectful memorial be sent to the M.W.G.M. requesting his sanction to the hour of meeting being changed from seven to six o'clock p.m., which being duly seconded was carried nem. con.

Fourteen petitions were brought under the consideration of the meeting, out of which number four were deferred until the next meeting, and ten were relieved, viz., three £10, five £15, one £20, and one £40, subject to some of the larger grants being confirmed at the next meeting. The total amount voted was £165, a smaller sum than has been voted for some months past.

ROSICRUCIAN SOCIETY OF ENGLAND.

The annual or obligatory meeting of the Rosicrucians was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on the 12th instant. The M.G. Frater Hubbard being unable, through illness, to attend, the M.C. was opened by Frater R. Wentworth Little, S.M., Past M.G., assisted by Fratres J. Brett, D.M.G.; Dr. Rogers Harrison, Dr. W. R. Woodman, J. Hervey, W. Carpenter, J. Weaver, W. F. Hambly, H. C. Levander, the Rev. W. B. Church, W. Ferguson, Angelo J. Lewis, George Kenning, W. Bird, J. Coutts, D. R. Still, and M. Edwards.

The minutes having been read and confirmed, the following approved Aspirants were introduced and admitted to the grade of Zelator: Bros. Major E. Hamilton Finney, E. Hamilton Finney, jun., Sir Gilbert E. Campbell, Bart., D. C. M. Gordon, E. H. G. Dalton, T. Burdett Yeoman, James Willing, F. H. Gottlieb, J.P., and G. Chubb. The ceremony was ably worked, with the usual musical accompaniment by Frater Jas. Weaver.

Frater Brett was then installed as M.G., Dr. Harrison as D.M.G., the other officers being H. G. Buss, Treas.-Gen.; Dr. Woodman, Sec.-Gen.; W. F. N. Quilly, H. C. Levander, W. B. Hambly, Jas. Weaver, Wm. Carpenter, Rev. W. B. Church, E. Stanton Jones, Ancients; A. J. Lewis, Precentor; W. J. Ferguson, C. of N.; D. R. Still, T.B.; T. Cubitt, Org.; W. Bird, H.; G. Kenning, Medallist; Major Finney; D. C. M. Gordon, Assist. Sec.

Letters of apology for non-attendance from Fratres Hughan, Quilly and several others, including three or four from Aspirants, having been read, the M.C. was closed, and the Fratres then sat down to their annual dinner, under the presidency of R.W. Frater John Hervey, who kindly undertook the duties of chairman, in the unavoidable absence of Col Burdett, Hon. V.P., whose health was not sufficiently restored to allow him to attend.

A more enjoyable evening it has seldom been our good fortune to experience; the fratres were in excellent spirits, and the chairman acquitted himself to the admiration of all. Fra. Carpenter made one of his quaint speeches in returning thanks for the Council of Ancients, and considerable amusement was caused by the apparition of an approved Aspirant, Bro. Alfred Smith, somewhat late in the evening, he having been engaged elsewhere. The chairman, however, with great courtesy and good humour not only permitted Bro. Smith to join the fratres, but afterwards proposed his health in a speech overflowing with wit and bonhomie, to which compliment Bro. Smith responded in a similarly happy vein. Altogether, it was a reunion which will long be remembered with pleasure.

ANCIENT AND PRIMITIVE RITE OF MISRAIM.

It being in contemplation to form a second sanctuary of the 33rd degree of this philosophical rite, to be named the "Burdett," after the highly-respected Regent of the Order, a meeting was held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, on the 9th inst., for the purpose of enrolling members. S. Bros. R. Wentworth Little, 90°, G. Arch., and Major E. Hamilton Finney, 90°, C.G., were present, assisted by Bros. J. Brett, J. Boyd, J. L. Thomas, D. C. M. Gordon, 66°, Nominat; D. R. Still, T. Cubitt, J. G. Marsh, E. H. Thiellay, C. Hammerton, C. Parker Ward, M.D., G. Chubb, E. H. Finney, jun., T. W. White, and J. Willing, jun., 33°.

The following candidates were received and obligated as Levites of the sanctuary: Bros. Chas. A. Long, Herbert Dicketts, John Kirk, Fred. G. Bailey, Thos. Bull, G. Spencer States, Major Chas. Sendey, Joseph Last, John Batstone, and Geo. Aug. Ibbetson.

The sanctuary was then closed, it being understood that a meeting for the election of officers, and further enrolments of brethren, would be shortly convened.

As the "Bective" Sanctuary alone already comprises about 100 members, no doubt a third sanctuary will soon be required, especially as there are hundreds of candidates waiting to take the degree, not only in London, but in various parts of the country. The Conservators-General do not, however, as we are informed, intend to enrol more than 800 brethren during the present year, and the expediency of restricting the Order to a total of 999 has also been discussed, although nothing has as yet been determined upon this point.

MASONIC ORDER OF MIZRAIM.

BY MARC BEDARRIDE.

INTRODUCTION.

Our venerable Order was created by the Almighty in the first ages of the world. In those days our Grand Conservators hardly dared to report the plans and workings of our scientific institution, or to endow succeeding generations with the knowledge they acquired; some because they wanted the necessary documents and materials, and others because they feared to perjure themselves or tarnish the sublime mysteries which they had witnessed.

They have, however, transmitted, orally and by traditions, written in hieroglyphics, intelligible only to the initiated, the whole of their knowledge and a complete history of our Order.

Thanks, a thouand thanks, should be rendered to the Eternal who has deigned to preserve for us this knowledge, from which we have gathered in our long and painful life the materials necessary to complete this work.

Sons of P. and F. Gad Bedarride descended from the ancient race of the patriarch Beda, Grand Master ad vitam of our Order, in the Valley of Ramessis, in the land of Gessen, in Egypt. Elevated in the principles of Mizraim by our dignified and learned father, Grand Master ad vitam.

After having been initiated in our antique and sublime Order, I studied for a long time the sacred languages of the ancient world, and then travelled with our victorious armies over the principal part of Egypt and Europe, and afterwards over Great Britain, Palestine, and the Islands of Greece, countries which were first peopled by the grandchildren of Noah, and afterward by various peoples, his descendants. In these travels I spent twenty-nine years of my life.

After having climbed all the rounds which compose the mysterious ladder of our Order until I arrived at the 90°, or last—after having taken all the Masonic degrees, and made the acquaintance of the most enlightened Masons of all countries, who inherit the great light and profound knowledge of the patriarchs their fathers; after having excavated in their archives, and after profound meditation, we have completed the documents belonging to the four series of our antique and sublime Order. I have worked in each degree, and, above all, have given, in the name of the Order, light to a great number of neophytes. I have constituted lodges of all the degrees in many valleys; have had the happiness of being preserved by the Almighty in many perils during the campaigns of the French army. After having the sweet satisfaction of returning again to our beautiful land—after having reunited the children of Mizraim which were found in the great valley of Paris—initiated in our Order the most renowned Masons, possessed the highest degrees of other rites, and occupied a distinguished rank in the Government of all, founded and constituted the governing body of our Order for France, and raised in the French provinces new Mizraimite temples to work for the glory of God, the prosperity of our Order, and the general good of humanity.

After having struggled during fifteen years against the antagonists of Mizraim; having driven back from the entrance to our temples all innovations and innovators, coming out victorious from the badly founded attacks directed in an underhand manner against us, and seen with joy that all the enlightened Masons of other rites have, in every case that they have known the truth, fully appreciated our conduct. But after long meditation, we have compiled matter connected with the Order of Mizraim which will confound our enemies, and confute the fables they have invented about our Order.

We are now about to produce an history of our Order, which for many years we intended to publish, but were prevented by the numerous tribulations to which we have been exposed. Thanks to the Eternal, who, from the height of His Throne, has deigned to cast a benevolent eye upon us, and to remove the obstacles which opposed our design, after four years of persevering efforts we have finished this scientific history—a history that proves at once the antiquity of our Order, and confounds those who, in the falsehoods they have written, have given us the honour of being its inventor; indeed, this would be a great glory to us if they told truly, for the fact would immortalise our name. But enlightened Masons know that this sublime institution is not the work of men; that our sublime mysteries have been venerated in all ages and in all countries; and do not our detractors proclaim most highly our antiquity, seeing that they could not pronounce a discourse in their lodges without admitting that Masonry is derived from Isis and Osesis, nor without praising our ancient patriarchs, such as Minis, Moses, Orphus, Homer, Solon, Thalys, Pythagoras, and many other sages. These they cite as very enlightened Masons. They carefully refrain from teaching to their disciples that all these philosophers were Mizraimites, and that the great Minis, Osesis, Seraphis, or Adonis are no other than the Great Mizraim. This silence on their part, and their false and sharp criticism against our Order, have been a double motive to cause us to give our time to this work, for which we can say, without vanity, that all the Masonic writings which have appeared down to this time are not able to compare with its patriarchal language, the purity of its style, and the noble thoughts which they contain, developed with as much care as clearness, recommend it to the initiated of all degrees, and of every rite, but more especially to the lecturer, who can draw from each page subjects to improve and enlighten the young workman—yes, to enlighten for Masonry, which some say is derived from Solomon's Temple, others from the time of the Crusaders, and others from the English.

Unhappily, this beautiful and sublime institution has found in every age enemies who wished to stifle the light of truth, and have sought, but, happily, ever in vain, to fetter her march, as will be seen in the course of this work. On the announcement that we were about to publish what we had seen and learned, our patriarchs in every country grew alarmed and set up the following cry . . . "God Almighty! are our Masonic secrets about to be revealed—the secrets of an institution which Thou has created, and which has been worked for untold ages under the sublime name of Mizraim; has been hidden for all that time from the eyes of the profane, although her sacred mysteries were professed by different denominations. Ah! why, tell us, Great God, is it that the Order of Mizraim which joins antiquity to science, and science to antiquity, prove in this age subject to the same fate as other institutions, and be exposed to the profane?"

Have no such fear wise and provident patriarchs! Be not alarmed, dignified brethren, be not alarmed! None of our mysteries will be divulged. As you have made us swear so will we be bound by our oath; and you will never have to reproach us with the least indiscretion as regards the secrets of our Order.

The work which we publish is not of a nature to inspire the initiated with fear, or to bring a blush on the cheek of a Mason; on the contrary, it gives to it a new lustre by the beautiful things which are there reported and the holy morals which flow from them.

This work is divided into forty stations, forming two volumes. We there learn the time and date of the creation of our Order; the name of the region where it was established by our ancient patriarchs; an abridgment of their history, as well as the beautiful Masonic acts of the Sovereign Princes, Great Captains, Philosophers, and other notable personages who have appeared from generation to generation; the persecution to which many of those patriarchs have been exposed; and the manner in which they have fed the sacred fire; for it is to their zeal, firmness and perseverance that we owe the happiness of possessing in its primitive purity this Order, which has existed 5848 years.—Communicated.

THE ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE TESTIMONIAL.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It gave me very great pleasure when I saw announced in last week's FREEMASON that it is intended to present Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, P.M., P.Z., etc., with a testimonial. Our worthy Bro. Little has endeared himself to hundreds of Freemasons through his kind and courteous behaviour to all with whom he may come in contact. His knowledge of the ceremonies of the Craft, Arch, Mark, and the higher degrees is marvellous; he never appears lost for a word, and the most charming trait in his character is, that he communicates his knowledge freely to any brother who may ask him for it, in an unpretentious manner, without allowing him to feel for a moment by any remark or gesture that he is inferior in Masonic knowledge—a line of conduct which thoroughly distinguishes the educated man and gentleman. I am sure that there are hundreds of Freemasons who esteem Bro. R. W. Little quite as much as I do, and that they will come forward with their subscriptions freely, so as to make this testimonial a substantial one. I hope that the W. Master of every lodge who knows Bro. Little will bring it before his lodge, and get a list of subscriptions to assist in the presentation. In conclusion, allow me to state what the brethren of the Whittington Lodge did last night towards the testimonial. I proposed that five guineas should be voted from the lodge funds, which was carried unanimously and by acclamation; and although we had only about twenty-two or twenty-four brethren present (the Whittington not being a large lodge) about £12 or £14 were collected, making a total of about £18. I cannot give the exact amount at the present moment, as I have not the list by me; but it will be duly handed over to the Treasurer, Bro. John Hervey, G.S.

Trusting that my brethren in Freemasonry will heartily support this testimonial,

Believe me, yours fraternally,

JAMES WEAVER,

P.M. 862, S.D. 1319, etc., etc.

A COWAN.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you permit me to ask Bro. Hughan or any other learned Mason for the origin and meaning of the word COWAN? Dr.

Mackey and Dr. Oliver alike find its origin in the Greek word cuon, a dog. The former says this word was, in the early church, applied to infidels and unbaptised, or those not initiated into the Christian mysteries; and the word being borrowed by the Freemasons, was, in time, corrupted into cowan. To support this derivation of the word, Dr. Oliver quotes from the Apocalypse: "Without are dogs," cunes; and from S. Paul, who exhorts his fellow-Christians to "beware of dogs." I confess that neither of these derivations of the word satisfy me; firstly, because I have no evidence that the primitive Christians call all unbaptised persons "dogs"; and, secondly, because I think the passages referred to by Dr. Oliver will not bear the interpretation he puts upon them. "Dogs," in these passages, mean, as I think, not unbaptised persons, but something more than that. In S. Paul, our translator omits the article. S. Paul speaks not of "dogs," but of "the dogs," whom he classes with the "evil-workers"; they, therefore, were men who were emphatically "dogs"—animals which were held in abomination by the Jews, as they are by the Mahometans; as lascivious, impure, greedy, and filthy. They were men who pretended to be teachers of religion, but who were profane and sensual in their lives, and were classed, therefore, with the "evil-workers." So also in the Apocalypse, they are classed with the worst conceivable characters—"the sorcerers, the whoremongers, the murderers, and they who love and make lies." Thirdly, I think the classing together of "cowans" and "intruders," by the compilers of our ritual, show that they had an eye to those description of persons. Now, corrupt and depraved persons would not certainly be known as such upon sight, and the obligation of keeping them off could not, therefore, be laid as an obligation on the Tyler. Besides, if they sought to make their way into the lodge, they would be "intruders," no less than other uninitiated persons; so that the Tyler would be charged to keep off all intruders. I look, therefore, for some other derivation or meaning of the word "cowan" than that generally accepted. Can it be found in the Anglo-Saxon word cowen, which signifies a herd, as of kine, but which we use metaphorically to denote as a company of thoughtless people, or a rabble? In this sense, it would be the duty of the Tyler to keep off all idle or thoughtless men who might accidentally, or without any special object, be inconveniently near; and also intruders, who sought to make their way into the lodge out of mere curiosity or for purposes of mischief. This is a crude idea, merely thrown out to elicit information from those who are our teachers in the arena of Masonry.

Yours fraternally,
WILLIAM CARPENTER.

A MASONIC TOUR.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, U.S., Dec. 20, 1870.

Having a little spare time I write you, as promised, a short outline of my tour in America, my visits to Masonic lodges and temples, and Masonic experience in general having, of course, the first place throughout.

Starting from London 19th Oct., 1870, I reached Waterford and Limerick, Ireland, next day. Experienced very heavy weather crossing the Irish Sea, the sad news of the wreck of the Cambria and the loss of 170 lives off the coast a few days before being the topic everywhere. Commencing my Masonic tour in Limerick, I visited the Masonic Hall—a large but plain building, the property of the Masons of the city—wherein Lodges 13, 73 and 333, also a R.A. Chapter and a K.T. Encampment meet; but unfortunately there was no meeting during my stay. The Tyler, Bro. D. Dunlop, very kindly showed me through the building. The several lodge-rooms are well and tastefully furnished, No. 1 and K.T. room particularly so. The Hall stands on ground belonging to the W. Bro. the Earl of Limerick. Limerick is poor in trade and money—(I hope his Grace will let the brethren off the ground-rent or, seeing this)—but rich in old associations, and has some splendid ruins of castles, churches, &c. St. Mary's Cathedral (A.D. 1180), the Castle, the bridge over the Shannon, and the famous Treaty-Stone particularly merit passing notice.

At Cork we have Lodges 1, 3, 8, 67, 71, and 95, R.A. and K.T. Chapters, &c., &c. Cork boasts of the oldest (first) lodge in Ireland; under one of whose warrants the celebrated "lady Freemason," the Hon. Miss St. Ledger, was initiated.

At Queenstown are Lodges 190 and 557. Here, as at Limerick and Cork, there was no meeting, so I was contented in visiting the hall occupied by the brethren of 190. It is a quaint old house, but the room is well furnished. A naked arm with trowel in hand, over the W.M.'s chair, attracted my attention. The trowel is here, as in all places where the old York Rite is worked, considered the chief tool of a M.M.

The Masons of Queenstown, Cork, and Limerick are not numerous, but they are respectable; like the brethren in other parts of Ireland, they reflect credit on the Craft. As at Dublin, there is no display of Masonic insignia on house or person. I was much disappointed in not witnessing any working, but from enquiries I am led to believe that, next to the Americans, the Irish brethren are the best and strictest working in the world.

I had a pleasant trip from Queenstown to New York, and was exceedingly pleased with everything I saw in the New World—the noble well-guarded entrance to the harbour or bay, with its thousands of shipping; the immense grand palace steamers, boats, &c., continually passing between New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey cities, &c., &c., much surprised me, and on landing (Dec. 10), the beautiful streets, fine marble-fronted houses, immense shops, well-stocked markets, omnibuses and fine hack-coaches, but above all, the numerous splendid street cars, or tramway omnibuses, pleased and astonished me. A trip through the Broadway (five miles long), Fifth Avenue, the Central Park, the immense hotels each of which can accommodate 1000 people, the Grand Opera, and other buildings demand more than a passing glance here; and the City Hall, with its noble paintings, &c., the New Post Office, Masonic Hall, &c., &c., would each require a better pen and more space for description than this poor brief account. I can only say that I spent an exceedingly pleasant week in New York, and was delighted with all I saw. I boarded at the Belmont Hotel (Bro. Richards, proprietor), visited the opera, &c., and lived as cheaply and comfortably as you can in London. As to kindness, civility and attention, I never experienced great or better.

I must now turn to Masonic matters. On the 11th, I visited Lodge Americus, No. 535. How shall I describe the scene, the work, &c., witnessed in this splendid lodge? Well, sir, I'll try—your readers must excuse defects. The Masonic Temple is a fine, large, and not over-ornamental building; it accommodates numerous lodges and chapters, and the several rooms are named "Corinthian," "Grecian," &c., according to their style. The lodge I visited (Americus) met in the former, and was opened at half-past seven o'clock, the W. Bro. Fitzpatrick presiding. The names of the other officers are similar to ours, but their duties differ considerably. When I entered there were about 100 members present, by the time it opened this number was doubled, and ere it closed there were 300 brethren present, nearly all wearing plain lamb-skin aprons. There were few jewels, those and superior aprons being only worn by Grand Officers. The gathering was really fine; and as to the hall, I must say that, with the exception of the Grand Lodges of England and Ireland, it is the largest and finest I ever beheld. The room is about 70ft. by 40ft., handsomely carpeted, with fine paintings, banners, transparencies, and numerous lamps adorning the walls. There are two 10ft. pillars at the entrance; the great light is placed on a handsome altar, with three other lights flanking it. The seats all round (benches and chairs) are covered with blue velvet, and a splendid organ graces the north side, the powerful music of which added greatly to the charm of the ceremonies. W. Bro. Fitzpatrick administered the O.B., &c., &c., in the second degree, and W. Bro. Selmes, in the third degree. Never have I seen such splendid working; from the W.M. to the junior officer, all performed their task admirably—all perfect. The work was old-style York Rite, and was full, rich and perfect in all its details. I have visited numerous lodges in many different countries round the world, but I have never seen anything to compare with the splendid working of "Americus." From what I saw in New York, Philadelphia, and this place (Washington), I must say that we at home are put in the shade by our brethren of the United States. Masons and Masonry in America eclipse the Old World—from top to bottom we are excelled by America.

At "Americus" I had the pleasure of meeting several officers of the Grand Lodge of New York, amongst them being the R.W. Bro. J. W. Simons, Past Grand Master, and a Masonic writer of great ability and worth. I also had the pleasure of meeting the R.W. Bro. Robert Macoy, the renowned Masonic author. To those gentlemen, and to Bros. Fitzpatrick and H. Lark (of the Sun office, N.Y.), I am much indebted for the very pleasant and instructive hours I spent amongst the brethren of New York. "May their shadows never be less."

Whilst in New York it was my good fortune to visit a Lodge of Lady Freemasons, and as the wives of many brethren at home may feel some interest in their sisters in America, I will now give a short account of the lodge, &c., so far as permissible. The sisters, under the title of "Eastern Star" Chapter, Alpha, No. 1, meet in a splendid hall (594, Broadway), 60ft. by 40ft., beautifully carpeted and fitted up in splendid style, the walls adorned with fine lamps, paintings, transparencies, &c.

There is a good organ, which, played by one of the fair sisters, adds much to the really impressive ceremonies, prayers, &c. The lodge has over fifty lady members; the duties, form of lodge, &c., resemble our own. The following is a list of the present officers:—

Mrs. E. F. Johnson (presiding)	Worthy Matron.
„ M. A. Warner ...	Assoc. ditto.
„ A. C. Asten ...	Treasurer.
„ C. H. Butrick ...	Secretary.
„ C. Quimby ...	Conductress.
„ E. L. Chipman ...	Assoc. ditto.
„ M. A. Waring ...	Ada.
„ C. Dilks ...	Ruth.
„ E. A. Macoy ...	Esther.
„ C. M. Crawford ...	Martha.
„ C. Walker ...	Electra.
Miss M. A. Johnson ...	Warden.
Mr. Robt. Macoy ...	Patron.
„ John Osborne ...	Sentinel.

Thus it will be seen that all the offices are filled by ladies, except the Patron and Sentinel. The lodge was duly opened with prayer; the several reports were read and passed, as in our own lodges, save that the ladies, as might be expected, manage the charity and sick matters far better than we do. It was really pleasing to hear the sisters of the various committees report their visits, aid, &c., to the sick and poor of their several districts: "Visited Mrs. — (or family of so-and-so), on (date), found a little improvement, consoled (or gave so much relief), and promised to call and see them again on —." "Made enquiries concerning —, we found her (or him) deserving of aid, and recommend," &c.; and thus are many kind Masonic acts reported and recorded. After all the reports had been received, a sister notified that a lady was in attendance for initiation. A committee was sent to examine and report, which proving favourable Mrs. — (just then returning home to Scotland), was introduced and admitted to the degree. I must in justice say the ceremony of initiation was really well rendered by the several sisters. The beautiful lessons of "Ada," "Ruth," "Esther," "Martha," and "Electra" were respectively delivered by the ladies in an unusually eloquent manner. The origin and aim of the Order, as well as its signs, passwords, &c., were elegantly and impressively explained by the Worthy Matron. After the initiation the Patron delivered a lecture, and the lodge was duly closed. I had the pleasure of being introduced by Bro. Macoy, the founder and Patron of this excellent chapter, to the Matron and officers of the lodge, as also to several other sisters, and by all I was warmly welcomed. I received several kind invitations—one to their Chapter Ball—but unfortunately, time pressed, and I could only call on the Matron. I may mention that Bro. Macoy offered to aid in establishing a similar chapter in England or India (where I hail from). I may also add that the wife, sister, or mother of a Mason are eligible, and that any Master Mason belonging to the Order can confer the degree; but to open a chapter a warrant from the Grand Chapter U.S. America is necessary. When at Mrs. Johnson's, I saw a pretty little girl whose mother (a Mason's widow) died in the city about two years ago. The little orphan, being friendless and penniless, was adopted by the sisters of "Alpha" chapter. A young son of Bro. Lark, of New York, was also, on the death of his mother, adopted by the chapter. These and numerous other cases of kindness to the distressed fully prove the excellence of the Lady Masons of America, and will in time, I hope, move our brother Masons of England to follow the example of their cousins in the West—find some kind charitable work for their wives, sisters, and others. W. Bro. R. Macoy, 432, Broom-street, and Mrs. E. F. Johnson, 16, Vandam-street, New York, will afford all information on the matter.

I now conclude with a verse I heard sung in the "Alpha." It forms part of one of their lodge hymns, and as sung by fifty ladies, aided by a fine organ, was, I assure grand, and particularly pleasing to me—a poor wanderer from Old England:—

"Stranger, on a rocky strand,
Longing for thy fatherland,
Through the gathering clouds that rise,
Veiling thy natal skies,
Look beyond—there's hope for thee,
Dawning o'er a tranquil sea;
Softly it smiles, though distant far,
The beautiful Eastern Star."

FAITH LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—The above Lodge of Instruction is held every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the spacious and commodious rooms at Bro. Fisher's Restaurant, Metropolitan District Railway Station, Victoria, S.W. Ceremonies and lectures worked every Tuesday, except the third Tuesday in the month, when the ceremonies alone are rehearsed. The DOMATIC CHAPTER OF INSTRUCTION is also held in the above rooms every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, from October until April inclusive.

SCOTLAND.

DUNDEE.

The various lodges in Dundee met within their own respective halls on the 27th ult., when the following Worshipful Masters who had been elected on St. Andrew's Day were duly installed into office for the ensuing year:—

Operative Lodge, No. 47, Bro. W. F. Longmuir.
Ancient Lodge, No. 49, Bro. Alexander Kelt.
St. David's Lodge, No. 78, Bro. James Berry (Past Master 375, Aberdeen).
Thistle Lodge, Bro. W. Gellately.
Forfar and Kincardine Lodge, No. 225, Bro. Geo. F. Roger.
Caledonian Lodge, No. 254, Bro. John Forbes.
Albert Lodge, Bro. James Cant.
Broughty Castle Lodge, Bro. James Scott.

And thereafter under their presidency celebrated the Festival of St. John, exchanging during the evening the usual fraternal visits at which the greatest cordiality prevailed.

St. David's Lodge.—Since St. Andrew's Day numerous meetings of this lodge, under the presidency of Bro. Berry, have been held; fourteen initiations having taken place.

Operative Lodge.—A meeting in committee of the members was held on Wednesday se'nnight, Bro. Longmuir, presiding, when it was resolved in recognition of the eminent services rendered to the lodge by Bro. John Logic, the Immediate Past Master, to present to him a gold watch, with the usual appendages.

TURKEY.

The members of the Oriental Lodge, 687—the "mother lodge" of Turkey—celebrated the great annual masonic festival of St. John the Evangelist, patron saint of the Order, on Tuesday evening last, when the W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. J. Laffan Hanly, was duly installed, the ceremony being performed by W. Bro. H. Newbolt, P.M. of the Lodge, and W.M. of the Bulwer Lodge, assisted by probably the largest Board of Past Masters ever assembled here on such an occasion, the twelve present including the R.W. District Grand Master of Turkey, Bro. J. P. Brown, and several of his officers and past officers, and representatives of all the other lodges of the capital, under the English, Irish, Scotch, French, and Italian Constitutions. After his installation, the new W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers:—Bros. W. Temple, M.D., S.W.; Louis Blair, J.W.; Mountain, P.M., Treasurer; Jas. Morrison, Secretary; A. Kanuna, S.D.; Wait, J.D.; Allan Harms, I.G.; Green, Tyler. One candidate was elected, out of four who had been proposed, but his initiation had to be postponed through want of time. The lodge having been closed, the brethren present, numbering 60—an unusually large attendance, and comprising many visitors—adjourned to the Hotel du Nord (late Baltzer's), which has just been re-opened by Bro. Franz Appel, when the Installation Banquet was prepared. The W.M. Bro. J. Laffan Hanly, presided, and was supported by the R.W.G.M. and several of his officers and other brethren of high rank in the craft. The provision made was of the very best, but the excellence of the dinner was much marred by the long intervals between the courses, which was served, as was afterwards explained, in German fashion, with the notion that the eating was to last the whole night, and the toast-drinking and speech-making to be interspersed between the dishes. This little misunderstanding, perhaps, extinguished a good deal of masonic eloquence which otherwise might have gratified—or bored—the brethren; but the company had the pleasure of hearing at least one admirable address, which was from the W.M. of the Italian Lodge "Risorta," in response to the toast of the "Visiting Brethren of the Foreign Lodges," in which the speaker broached, with much force and feeling, the idea that masons, irrespective of their different "Constitutions" and rituals, ought to form, in something more than their signs and secrets—which are, of course, uniform and immutable—a united creed and nationality, so to speak, and thus give still greater effect to the beneficent principles of the Order. Among the toasts proposed during the evening—immediately after "the Queen, the Sultan, and the Craft" and the "Grand Master of England, and Past Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales"—the health of the R.W. Bro. Brown, District Grand Master of Turkey, was drunk with great cordiality, and was suitably acknowledged by that distinguished brother, who concluded by proposing the health of Bro. Hanly, the new W.M. of the Oriental Lodge. These and other toasts were drunk with the usual masonic honours, W. Bro. Warren, P.M., officiating as he had previously done in lodge, as Master of the Ceremonies.

Masonic Miscellanea.

WE understand that the Stockwell Lodge, No. 1339, will be shortly consecrated by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, the officer appointed for the purpose by the M.W. Grand Master.

THE Grand Mark Master Mason has accepted the invitation of the Sampson and Lion Lodge to visit them on the occasion of the installation of the W.M. on Wednesday, Feb. 1.

WE beg to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement announcing the postponement of the festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution to Friday, the 3rd Feb.

AT the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution Bro. H. G. Buss, of 127, Offord-road, Barnsbury, will represent the Knights of Constantine, and will be happy to receive additions to his list.

BRO. DR. H. BEIGEL, W.M. Lodge of Tranquility, who is now with the army of General Manuffel, was decorated on the 4th instant with the Order of the Iron Cross—an order which can only be gained by personal bravery on the field of battle.

MARK Masonry under the English Constitution continues its onward course, warrants for new lodges having recently been granted for Percy, 122, Stockton-on-Tees; Callender, 123, Bury, Lancashire; Union, 124, Sunderland; Hengist, 125, Bournemouth; and All Souls', 126, Weymouth.

FROM the Kapunda (South Australia) Herald we learn that the foundation-stone of the Kapunda Institute was laid on the 12th October last, with Masonic honours, by the Hon. Captain John Hart, Companion of the Honourable Order of St. Michael and St. George, Treasurer and Premier of the province, and Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Freemasons under the Scottish Constitution in South Australia. The ceremonies were very ably performed, and the event went off with great eclat.

A GRAND Masonic ball was held at the Public Rooms, Kidderminster, on Tuesday last, the 17th inst., under the most distinguished patronage from Worcester and neighbouring provinces. The proceeds are to be devoted to the funds of the new infirmary. The arrangements were complete, and the band, under the direction of Bros. Synyer and Gilmer, was everything that could be desired. Upwards of 190 of the brethren and general public were present, including, of course, a large number of the fair sex, and dancing was kept up until an early hour. We have no doubt that the proceeds will be a considerable sum, the object being of such a deserving character.

THEATRICAL.

THE PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—The extravaganza of "Little Gil Blas," by Mr. H. B. Farnie—in which Mrs. H. Paul still continues to please all as the student of Salamanca—is now worked closely and pleasantly. The ever popular drama "Peep o' Day" is again revived, and is the first piece performed. The performances close with "He's a Lunatic." Mr. Phelps appears on this day (Saturday) in the "Man of the World."

ADELPHI THEATRE.—At this theatre there is revived that pleasing little drama "One Touch of Nature," Mr. B. Webster in his old character. "Smoke" precedes it. Mr. H. B. Farnie's burlesque "Mistletoe Bough" terminates the evening.

Reports of the following lodges stand over:—30, 91, 140, 177, 194, 206, 538, and 862, London; 216 Liverpool, 330 Bodmin, 531 Hartlepool, 737 Wellingboro', 1000 Southend, 732 Brighton, 1035 Liverpool, 1086 Kirkdale, 1248 Scarborough, 1330 Market Harboro', and 1331 Aldershot.

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS—Life's Grand Boon.—Indigestion, dyspepsia, or disordered stomach are more or less the companions of most men whose time is occupied by literary, legal, or commercial pursuits, which prevent out-door exercise essential to health. This last is increased in winter in females, and all whom the weather makes prisoners. Holloway's Pills have long been famed as the easiest, safest, and most certain correctives of weak stomachs, disordered livers, or torpid bowels. They insure a healthy action throughout the alimentary canal without distressing or debilitating the system. They are the most efficient yet painless antidotes of all visceral disturbances; they stimulate, moderate, or repress any exceptional function; they make the digestion good, the body strong, and the mind vigorous.—[Advt.]

MASONIC CHARITIES.

We reprint the following correspondence on this subject from the Poole Herald of 15th ult. and 15th inst. :—

(To the Editor of the Poole and South-Western Herald.)

Sir,—I was very much pleased at the full and comprehensive report you gave of the grand Masonic gathering at Bournemouth, and of the speeches at the banquet. Charity was not forgotten by the speakers, and I only wish it was oftener remembered at the festive board. I think, however, there are two duties, one almost as necessary as the other, in order that benevolence may be exhibited in its purity. It is one duty to give, but it is another to see what is given is made the most of towards benefiting the object for which it is intended. This latter one is too often lost sight of, and I heartily wish all speakers would impress this on their hearers. In reading your report of what was said at the banquet, I find P.G. St. Bro. F. Binckes, who is secretary to the boys' school, spoke most ably on the first duty, and his remarks are worthy of attention. If, however, he had said a little about the other it would have to my mind been an improvement.

Take his own school and look at the report for 1868. The building expenditure was either thirty-eight thousand pounds or forty-three thousand, and yet they say only 103 boys had been maintained in, and two boys educated and clothed out of the establishment. Our county school for the sons of gentlemen will only cost, I am informed, from eight to ten thousand pounds, and room for 200 boys. I think if those who had given had been asked this, they certainly would have objected to such an outlay, and preferred the money going more directly to the orphans than the costly erection of such a building. Look at the expenditure and income. The secretary in the same report, I see, under special expenditure, has—

Travelling expenses .. .. .	84	8	2
Under ordinary expenditure—salary .. .. .	70	11	0
Then there is a pension to a former secretary	129	4	9
	£534	3	11
Then a collector gets .. .. .	136	10	0
Then a clerk, £39, messenger, £10 .. .. .	49	0	0

I don't say one word against the parties. They may be well worth their money, but when we read in the report that only 103 boys in and two out, total 105, had been provided for, although the applications were numerous, I certainly think some at least, of this money would be saved. Instead of such an outlay on the building, the interest alone would keep two hundred boys yearly, in my opinion, and I believe of many more, it would have been better to have taught three hundred poor orphans, instead of rather more than one, each one of whom would have been a far worthier illustration of the charity of the order than that of bricks and mortar.

It is the same with many other large and, I may say, noble institutions in England. Therefore, let us not only give, but see what we do give is made the most of, not in show, but more directly to benefit the object.

I am, yours truly,

R. N. HOWARD.

Weymouth, 12th December, 1870.

(To the Editor of the Poole and South-Western Herald.)

Sir,—Bro. R. N. Howard, of Weymouth, in his letter under this heading, which appeared in your journal of 15th December, seems to think that the outlay on the new building for the Boys' School has been incurred without consulting the subscribers. 'I think,' he says, 'if those who had given had been asked this, they certainly would have objected to such an outlay.'

Allow me to state, for the satisfaction of Bro. Howard and of the numerous brethren in Dorset, Somerset, and Hants, who are readers of your journal, that there are no charities so thoroughly under the supervision and control of the subscribers as the two Masonic schools.

The general committee of each school, consisting of all life governors (donors of ten guineas) in addition to the annually elected members, meet monthly. At each meeting the proceedings of the house committee are fully reported, and, if need be, freely criticised and dealt with.

The finance and audit committee, consisting of nine brethren annually elected, meet quarterly, and are directed by the rules to "report their proceedings to the general committee, with any observations they may deem necessary."

General courts which every annual subscriber of one guinea, and life subscriber of five guineas, and all life governors and vice-presidents are qualified to attend, are held quarterly. At these, the proceedings of the committees are reported, and any brother may propose a resolution disapproving of any act which he may not deem justifiable.

The house committee is elected annually. The meetings at which its elections take place are generally attended by a large number of brethren, and there are frequently contests for a seat on the committee, as it is thought desirable by many brethren, myself included, that new blood should occasionally be infused into it. I retired several years ago from the house committee of the Boys' School (to which Bro. Howard's letter more especially refers), other occupations preventing my giving a regular attendance, I can, therefore, speak freely with respect to their proceedings; and I venture to say that no body of men, unpaid, and with no private interests to serve, ever devoted themselves more earnestly, sometimes under heavy discouragements, to the promotion of the welfare and prosperity of an institution that the house committee of the Boys' School. Each of the present twelve members of the committee has constituted himself a vice-president by a donation of not less than fifty guineas, and several (I am not sure I may not say all) have contributed considerably more than this sum.

It is earnestly to be hoped that through the continued zealous support of the Craft throughout the country, the institution will soon be freed from debt. This desirable consummation will allow of a considerable increase in the number of boys admitted to the school.

In conclusion, allow me to say that if Brother Howard will become an annual subscriber of one guinea, he will be qualified to attend the quarterly court. If he will constitute himself a life governor by a donation of ten guineas, he will be a member of the general committee. In either capacity, any suggestion he may make, any resolution he may propose, will be carefully considered, and if it commend itself to the approval of the brethren as likely to promote the interests of the institution, it is sure to be adopted.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SYMONDS,

Vice-president of both the Masonic schools,
3, Ingram-court, Fenchurch-street,
London, Jan. 9th, 1871.

Obituary.

W. BRO. COL. JAMES ROGER WESTERN,
P.M., P.Z.

We regret having to record the decease of this well-known brother, who expired at his residence, 12, Park-square West, Regent's Park, on the 13th inst. Bro. Western was initiated in the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2, on the 23rd February, 1842, and soon after left England for India, where he was exalted in the Chapter of Hope, No. 109, Calcutta, on the 14th December, 1846. On his return to London he rejoined the Lodge of Antiquity on the 3rd February, 1857, and became an active member of the Chapter of Hope and Unity, No. 214, Romford. The late brother was a Vice-President and liberal supporter of all the Masonic Charities, and had served on most of the committees of the Craft.

We are requested to contradict the obituary notice recently inserted in a contemporary respecting the supposed decease of Bro. W. E. Walmisley, P.G. Sword Bearer; and we are happy to add, upon the very best authority, that the worthy and worshipful brother is not only not defunct, but that he continues to enjoy remarkably good health, despite the Siberian severity of the present winter. He has, however, experienced the rare felicity, if such it really be, of seeing his own post mortem record in print while still in the land of the living.

"EVERY mother and housekeeper must often act as family physician in the numerous illnesses and accidents that occur among children and servants. For many of these cases I have used Davis' Pain Killer, and consider it indispensable in the family medicine box."—N. Y. Examiner.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

GALVANISM.—Pulvermacher's Monthly Record of Cures is now ready for the benefit of Sufferers, containing documentary evidence of remarkable Cures effected by Pulvermacher's Improved Patent Self-applicable Volta-Electric Chain-Bands and Pocket Batteries, and may be had on application to the Sole Inventor and Patentee—J. L. Pulvermacher, 200, Regent-street, London, W. A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution.—Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

"The RELATION of ST. JOHN the EVANGELIST to FREEMASONRY."

ANSWER BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON.

An article by me in THE FREEMASON of 29th October, 1870, on "The Relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry," has attracted the attention of Bro. Samuel Evans, Boston, U.S., from whose pen the readers of THE FREEMASON have been favoured, on the 10th December, 1870, with his thoughts and opinions on this subject, in what I might have designated a letter to the editor, had not Bro. Evans himself thought proper formally to announce it as "A Criticism." On this criticism I beg leave to offer a few remarks.

Bro. Evans begins by referring to my article as appearing "under the above caption," by which I suppose he means the title, or heading—the same which he has prefixed to his criticism, and which I again prefix to this letter. The word caption, however, is new to me in this sense. I know it as belonging to Scottish legal phraseology, in a sense accordant with its derivation from the Latin verb capio, I take, and as therefore not of pleasant sound in the ears of poor debtors; but Bro. Evans seems to have imagined that its derivation is from caput, a head. I would not have noticed so trifling a blunder had it not awakened in me some doubt, before I had read two lines, of Bro. Evans's capacity as a critic—a doubt which was confirmed when in his second sentence I found him describing the designation which I had appended to my name, as prefixed to the article, of "Member of the Masonic Archæological Institute of England, &c., &c.," as a "naming of its author's literary relationships." It is not worth while in such a case to say much of the question of the singular and the plural, although it cannot but be observed that for the purpose of creating a little prejudice against me at the outset of the "criticism," the singular—had it been warranted—would have served better. Nor do I care to inquire if membership of the Masonic Archæological Institute of England can properly be denominated a literary relationship.

Bro. Evans proceeds to say that "during years he has been interested in the question of the relationship of St. John the Evangelist and various other St. Johns to Freemasonry, but has never been able to discover that any such relationship existed, or could with any degree of plausibility be shown ever to have existed;" and that, therefore, the title of my article, and the naming of my literary relationships, having led him to look for something substantial as well as interesting in the article, he perused it with much interest, "for the purpose of finding out what more could be said that was either new or true on so threadbare a theme by a member of an archæological institute." The reference to my being a member of that institute, with which any Freemason may well deem it an honour to be connected, is here again introduced, evidently in order to gain a little point at the commencement, which has nothing, however, to do with fair argument, with an honest criticism of my article, or a proper discussion of the subject of it; in which, "during years," Bro. Evans says he has been interested, but which he seems to have latterly dismissed as threadbare; till in the perusal of THE FREEMASON his attention was recalled to it. And the reference to the "various other St. Johns," whose names have been mentioned in connection with Freemasonry, is equally remote from the only question fairly before Bro. Evans—the relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry. Bro. Evans, in a subsequent part of his criticism, to which I shall further advert in due time, names in particular St. John the Baptist and St. John the Almoner. St. John the Baptist is mentioned in my article, and my critic was of course entitled to take what notice he thought proper of all that I had said about him; but the various other St. Johns, and in particular St. John the Almoner, might never have existed for anything of which it was the object of that article to treat. There are many St. Johns in the Roman Calendar; no fewer than thirty are noticed. If anyone wishes to establish a relation between any of them and Freemasonry, or to disprove the existence of such relation, each presents a distinct question to be considered by itself. In the discussion of any such question, I would not easily be persuaded to engage.

In perusing the first paragraph of the criticism, I was much puzzled as to the meaning of the statement already quoted, that Bro. Evans had never been able to discover that any relationships of any of the St. Johns to Freemasonry "existed or could with any respectable degree of plausibility be shown ever to have existed." It seems to me that if it ever existed—if it existed during the lifetime of the Saint—it must be regarded as an unchangeable historic fact. I began to see, however, what Bro. Evans might be supposed to have in view when I came to a paragraph beginning, "The idea of saints' patronage is universally discarded by intelligent men, and the Masonic Institution should consist of none other than intelligent men." I have a higher opinion of many members of the Roman Catholic Church than to refuse them credit for intelligence, and high intelligence; and although I am as decided a Protestant as Bro. Evans can be, and would be as far as he from saint worship, or from looking up to heaven for the patronage of any saint in the calendar, I must seek some other way than he has chosen of expressing opinion on this subject. It would be contrary to the first principles of Freemasonry to refuse admission in the Masonic Brotherhood to a Roman Catholic applying for it, because of his being a Roman Catholic and holding the doctrine of his church respecting saints. But the question remains as to the existence of connection between any "saint" and the Masonic body during his life upon the earth; and if such connection could be shown to have existed, an important relation must be deemed still to exist. His memory would fitly be cherished with peculiar regard by Freemasons, who would with delight and benefit call to mind the excellency of his character and the works by which he contributed to the welfare of his fellow-men. Protestants refuse to accord anything like worship even to the Apostles, but they do not, therefore, refuse reverence to the memory of the Apostles, nor fail to rejoice in the thought that the power of Christianity was gloriously illustrated in their lives and in their deaths. A church dwells affectionately on the histories of its founders and its martyrs; a nation reveres the memory of its distinguished patriots; and the Masonic Brotherhood must, in like manner, ever hold specially dear the names of those whose connection with it gave it lustre, and imparted to it, through their influence, something of their own excellence in former times, however remote.

DISTRIBUTION of the HONOURS of FREEMASONRY in THE GRAND LODGE of SCOTLAND.

BY BRO. THOMAS SWINTON,

Sub. Master, Lodge of Edinburgh, Mary's Chapel, No. 1.

The Grand Lodge of Scotland ought to command the respect of all the Freemasons of Scotland and its dependencies, and to be dear to them all as the highest representative body of their Order. But this must depend on the manner in which the affairs of the Grand Lodge are conducted; and, unapplying, this has not hitherto been such as to make Freemasons generally regard it with the confidence which is so much to be desired, nor with the respect which, from its relation to all the daughter lodges in Scotland, ought to be deemed due to it. The reason of this is simply that the Grand Lodge has long been under the control and management of a few individuals, who have divided amongst themselves all its high offices—office-bearers being re-elected from time to time—so that some of the most honourable places have been filled by the same brethren for twelve years or more, whilst others, equally worthy of these honours, have never been permitted to enjoy them. It is unnecessary to employ the term "clique," which might be deemed offensive; it is enough to say that a few individuals have got the management of the affairs of the Grand Lodge in their hands, and for many years have managed them according to their own pleasure. This is not as it ought to be. The provincial lodges of Scotland, as well as those of the capital, ought not only to be represented in the Grand Lodge, but their most eminent members ought often to be elected to honourable offices in the Grand Lodge, by which the feeling of common brotherhood would be promoted, and the members of the Order throughout the whole country would be united together in affection, and not merely in name. There are brethren in many of the provincial lodges who have signalized themselves by their zealous endeavours to promote the cause of Freemasonry, and have, with great liberality, been the means of erecting buildings for their several lodges, or have bestowed upon them munificent gifts. But all these things seem never to have been considered by the rulers of the Grand Lodge, who have contribute to distribute the honours at their disposal as if there were no brethren worthy of regard but those resident in Edinburgh; and, in fact, even of these none have had the least chance of being elected to any high office but those of a certain very small and select circle, who can hold a private meeting before the meeting of the Grand Lodge, and arrange all that is to take place in it. It is not to the honour of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, nor of Freemasonry in Scotland, that the Grand Lodge has come to be commonly spoken of as the Grand Lodge of Edinburgh, instead of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. But there is no wonder that this is the case, when it is considered how exclusively the honourable offices of the Grand Lodge are filled by brethren resident in Edinburgh, and to how great an extent the Grand Lodge itself is composed of the members of Edinburgh lodges. One Edinburgh lodge sends no fewer than twelve Grand Stewards as its representatives to the Grand Lodge, which is out of all proportion beyond the representation of any provincial lodge. The provincial lodges are thus discouraged, and their representatives do not care to attend the meetings of Grand Lodge; whereas, if their proper place and influence were granted to them, they would probably make an effort to attend as frequently as possible, and would carry home to the most distant parts of the country an increased knowledge of Freemasonry, and impressions highly favourable to its interests. The existing state of things is utterly contrary to that great principle of equality amongst brethren which is the boast of Freemasonry. It is not, indeed, to be supposed that each lodge ought to have the same number of office-bearers in the Grand Lodge as another; but it might be expected that a rule should be adopted for the representation of the lodges in something like proportion to the number of their members. A rude approach to this is made in the representation of the British people in the House of Commons, and in the representation of the citizens of our towns in Town Councils. The Presbyterian Church also proceeds upon this principle in the representation of Presbyteries in their General Assemblies. The principle is one evidently right in itself, and which commands approbation whenever it is stated. It is a principle which seems especially to accord with the fundamental laws and principles of Masonry, and the only wonder is that it has been so long and so much disregarded. A complete practical acknowledgement of it could not fail to have most beneficial results.

It is worthy of notice that the present state of the Grand Lodge of Scotland is an anachronism. Freemasonry has of late years made great progress in Scotland, but the management of affairs in the Grand Lodge has remained unchanged. Not very many years ago there were sometimes only a few members present at a meeting of the Grand Lodge, and it was a thing to be talked of among the brethren if there were more than thirty. Now there are often 300 present, and often there are many more. When only a few members were present—all, or almost all, resident in Edinburgh and its immediate neighbourhood—it was only to be expected that they should elect each other to all the honourable offices at their disposal. It was almost impossible for them to do otherwise. But the state of the case is now changed, and a greater liberality of spirit displayed towards brethren belonging to all parts of the country would redound to the honour of the Order, would aid in elevating the Grand Lodge to that high position which it ought to hold, and would promote brotherly feeling among all the Masons of Scotland. A proposal is about to be made, in the form of a motion, at the approaching Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge, "That no office-bearer shall hold office for a longer period than three years, and on the expiry of his term of office shall not be eligible for re-election to the same office, and that at least three years must elapse before he is appointed to it again." This, however, is not to apply to the Grand Master or paid officials. This of itself would go far to cure the evils of which there is so much cause to complain. Honours would be more extensively distributed among brethren, and a better and more kindly feeling would be promoted; and if, at the same time, a more equal system of representation were adopted, brethren would feel—as they do not at present—that their attendance at the meetings of the Grand Lodge was not a thing of mere formality and sociality, but that they were called upon to take a real part in the concerns of the Grand Lodge and of the Brotherhood.

The great facilities of communication by railroad and telegraph make it possible for Masons in all parts of the country to maintain an intimacy of fellowship formerly unknown. It would be for the advantage of the interests of Freemasonry that full use were made of these, and that the management of the affairs of the Grand Lodge were accommodated to them, instead of continuing to be such as it was when the whole state of things was very different, and when the presence of a member from Stromness or Stornoway was hardly to be expected.

ENCYCLOPEDIA METROPOLITANA.

BY BRO. C. G. FORSYTH.

In consequence of these advantages, the Fraternity called themselves Free Masons, claiming to be exempt from the laws which regulated common labourers, and to be exonerated from the burdens thrown upon the working classes of the community, whether in England or the Continent. They consisted in a great measure of Italians, with some Greek refugees, French, Germans, and Flemings, and roamed from one country to another to build churches and other edifices. A Surveyor governed in chief, and every tenth man was called a Warden, overlooking the other nine. Persons of rank frequently gave materials from feelings of religion or charity, or as a commutation of penance. That part of the Fraternity which passed into England would be more stationary and of a more permanent duration than their brethren on the Continent, being in a country less liable to the distractions occasioned by becoming the seat of war; and in consequence of its insular position offering less facility for removing. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, a considerable number of churches and ecclesiastical structures were built, including several of the colleges at Oxford and Cambridge. In the reign of Henry III., alone, upwards of 150 abbeys and priories and other religious edifices were erected. The style became highly ornamented in the fifteenth century, finishing with the beautiful specimens of St. George's Chapel at Windsor, King's College Chapel (Cambridge), and King Henry VII.'s Chapel (Westminster), which was not finished until the beginning of the sixteenth century in the reign of Henry VIII. After that date the Pointed Architecture declined, and the Grecian Orders were introduced under the skilful conduct of Inigo Jones. Records may be found of several contracts with Masons for the performance of work. In 1306 the dean and chapter of Lincoln contracted with Richard de Stow, Mason, to attend and employ other Masons under him for the new work, with additional east end as well as the upper parts of the great tower and transepts, which were done in the time of King Edward III., in the twenty-fourth year of his reign, when founding the College at Windsor: "Granted to John de Sponlee the office of master of the stone hewers, and gave him power to take and press both within and without the liberties so many artificers as were necessary, and to convey them to Windsor to work at the King's pay, but arrest such and imprison such as should disobey or refuse until the King took other order: with command to all Sheriffs, Mayors, Bailiffs, and I to be assisting on the King's behalf." It appears that the Masons, being dissatisfied at the "King's pay," entered into a combination in many places to evade the writs issued—in consequence of this charter or grant (and this description of grants was not singular in former times) availing themselves of their peculiar signs and tokens to recognise and assist each other from being pressed into the service. The Masonic Constitutions mention, among others, an architect called Henry Yevle, the King's Freemason. Weaver (582) mentions an inscription in St. Michael's Church, St. Alban's, on Thomas Wolver (or Wolven), Master Mason or Surveyor to the King's stone works in the time of Richard II. By an indenture dated 5th of June, twenty-first of Henry VIII., John Hylmer and William Vertue, Freemasons, undertook the vaulting of the choir of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, for seven hundred pounds, and to finish it by Christmas A.D. 1508; and in Dugdale's "Monasticon" is an agreement between the commissioners of Richard, Duke of York, and William Harwood, Freemason, for rebuilding of Fotheringhay in Northamptonshire. In the fourth year of Henry VIII., Mr. Robert Hacomblein, Provost of the "Kynge Colledge Royal at Cambrydge, and the scholars of the same with the advise and agreement of Mr. Thomas Larke, Surveyor of the Kynge's works there," entered into a contract with "John Wastell, Master Mason of the said works, and Henry Severick, should set up a vault for the church, to be completed in three years' time, for £1,200," and in the following year Wastell contracted to set up the vaulting of two porches and seven chapels in the body and nine chapels behind the choir of the church and battlements, &c., and undertook to keep forty Freemasons on the same. Other examples might be given, if necessary. The next will be a few extracts of law enactments respecting Freemasons.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A Quarterly General Court of the Governors and Subscribers was held at Freemason's Hall, Great Queen-street, on Monday, the 16th inst., Bro. John Hervey, V.P., in the chair. The minutes of the last Quarterly Court were read and confirmed, and the minutes of the various meetings of the General Committee were read for information.

The minutes of the Special Court of 8th December last were also read and confirmed, viz:—

"Royal Masonic Institution for Girls,
St. John's Hill, Battersea Rise, S.W.
"Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, Wood Green, N.

"At Special General Courts of the above institutions held simultaneously at Freemasons' Hall, London, on Thursday, 8th December, 1870, John Hervey, Esq., V.P., in the chair, the report of the Committee appointed at the last Quarterly General Court of each Institution—as embodied in the minutes now read—was received, viz:—

"Special Joint Committee, Wednesday, 7th
December, 1870.

"John Symonds, Esq., V.P., in the chair, R.M.I.G.

"R. W. Stewart, Esq., V.P., in the chair, R.M.I.B.

"Proposed by Henry Browne, Esq., V.P., seconded by Major Creaton, V.P.:—"That in the opinion of this Committee the privileges now enjoyed by lodges, chapters, and societies, under Laws 8, 11, 17, be restricted, in future, to a term of twenty years."

"On amendment proposed by Joseph Smith, Esq., L.G., seconded by John Chadwick, Esq., L.G., put, carried, and subsequently adopted unanimously as a substantive resolution—

"Resolved,—That while recognising the justice of Bro. Browne's proposition as a matter of principle, it is inexpedient, at present, to make any alteration in the qualifications of donors, subscribers, &c."

"Resolved unanimously,—That the minutes just read, and received as the report of the Committee, be adopted.

"Resolved,—That, having reference to the resolution preceding, these Courts earnestly hope that the friends of both institutions will use their influence to increase the number of individual subscribers."

In accordance with the recommendation of the General Committee, it was resolved that the list of candidates as now read, in number 58, including 37 unsuccessful from the last election, and 21 new cases, be approved as the list from which 14 boys shall be elected at the Quarterly Court on 17th April, that being the number of vacancies as now declared.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Casualties.

When the cold weather necessitates the use of fire for our comfort, how appalling is it to read in the public prints the awful accidents constantly befalling children and others from this source. For burns, scalds, sores, and wounds, Holloway's Ointment stands unrivalled; it soothes the present pain, reduces the inflammation surrounding the injured parts, extracts all unwholesome humours, and so purifies the blood in the neighbouring vessels that sound flesh soon displaces all injured or unhealthy tissues. Every household should have these remedies at hand. In the ulcerated throat, now named diphtheria, this ointment rubbed on the throat is wonderfully effective. In all chronic or constitutional ailments, Holloway's pills should be taken whilst applying the ointment.—[Advt.]

"I was suffering greatly a few weeks ago from severe pains about the kidneys and excessive weakness in the back, accompanied with nauseous sickness, confined to my bed, when a friend who had long known and experienced great benefit from the use of your Vegetable Pain Killer brought me a bottle which I used with the best results.—A. SHERREFFS, Aberdeen, October, 1867.—To Per y Davis & Son."

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

United Mariners' Lodge, No. 30.—The installation meeting of this ancient lodge was held on Tuesday, the 17th inst., at the Guildhall Coffee-house, when there were the following visitors present: Bros. J. H. Hills (157), C. Douglas (554), E. Jex (1259), Vivian (228), Thicke (144 and 538), Cottebrune (733), Webb (15), Davis (141), Ward (1257), Wigginton (1298), and Charles E. Thompson. The officers of the lodge are: Bros. Harling, W.M.; R. Shackell, S.W.; G. J. C. Smith, J.W.; Jesse Turner, Treas.; Barnes, Sec.; Osborn, S.D.; Ansell, J.D.; Deeley, D.C.; Bethell, I.G.; and Brown, Steward. There were also present amongst others: Bros. Driscoll and Taylor, P.M.'s; Tyrrell, Gladwell, Hoare, Thomas Smith, Fagg, Caseley, Lefeaux, &c., &c. In the unavoidable absence of Bro. Harling, Bro. Driscoll, P.M., took the chair, and after the transaction of the routine business, initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order Mr. Thompson. Bro. Gladwell was then passed to the second degree. The next business was the election of a W.M. for the ensuing year, and the choice of the brethren having, by unanimous vote, fallen upon Bro. Robert Shackell, S.W., and P.P.G. Officer Hampshire, he was presented, and received the obligation of a W.M.-elect. A Board of P.M.'s was then formed, and Bro. Shackell received at the hands of Bro. Driscoll, who is a very painstaking and efficient Mason, the benefits and privileges attaching to the chair of K.S. The after addresses he delivered with great precision, and at the conclusion was greeted with much applause. The newly-installed W.M. then invested his officers as follows: Bros. G. J. Smith, S.W.; W. F. Osborn, J.W.; Jesse Turner, P.M., Treas.; R. E. Barnes, P.M., Hon. Sec.; W. Ansell, S.D.; H. Bethell, J.D.; Lefeaux, Org.; E. J. Brown, D.C.; Deeley, I.G.; W. J. Caseley, Asst. Dir. of Cer.; J. Driscoll, P.M., Steward; Thomas Smith, Asst. Steward; and William Grant, Tyler. It was stated that, by vote of the lodge, the sum of five guineas had been paid to Bro. Binckes, the Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, in the name of Bro. Harling, for a Life Subscribership in lieu of a jewel.—The W.M. stated that this vote had been come to as a mark of respect to Bro. Harling for the way in which he had passed through his year of office. He (the W.M.) would have been much pleased to have been able to have presented him with a jewel subscribed for privately, and to which he would willingly have given one-third had the members seen fit to subscribe the rest, because he had never seen the duties of a W.M. carried out so efficiently as they had been by Bro. Harling. (Hear, hear.)—After the claims of a worthy old Mason attached to this lodge had been spoken of in reference to an application he had made to the Board of Benevolence, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent dinner, superintended by Mr. Crawford, the manager, and which, by the way, gave the most unqualified satisfaction. The W.M. proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured.—He then presented the rather unusual compliment of "The Brethren in the Army, Navy, and Volunteers," and adverted to the fact that they had present a very distinguished Mason who was Colonel of a Volunteer corps (Bro. Wigginton), and from what he had seen of him, and the way in which he carried out his duties as a Mason, he was quite sure he would do the same in his military capacity. He coupled with the toast his name and that of Bro. Thompson.—Bro. Colonel Wigginton said he was very much obliged to the W.M. for giving the toast, and to the brethren generally for the way in which they had responded to it; and he could assure them it was his firm conviction that, should the services of the Volunteers ever be required, they would be found ready to a man.—Bro. C. E. Thompson also briefly returned thanks.—"The health of Bro. Thompson, the Initiate," was the next toast proposed, to which that brother responded, and said he hoped the more he knew of the Craft the better he should like it.—Bro. Driscoll, P.M. and Installing Master, after alluding in feeling terms to the absence, through illness, of Bro. Harling, said the W.M. had entrusted him with his gavel, and he had no doubt they all knew for what purpose. He gladly availed himself of the privilege of proposing his health, and although he could not then speak of his ability as a Master, he had no doubt at all but that he would discharge his duties with credit to himself and satisfaction to the brethren; and if, at the end of his year of office, they were spared, he should be delighted to be able to say he had done his duty well and faithfully. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) If he excelled Bro. Harling, he would be the best Master in London; and if he equalled him, he would rank among the most learned in the Craft.—The toast was received with every demonstration of good feeling and respect.—The W.M. said he thanked them for the very kind manner in which they had received him. He hoped by attention to his duties to earn their approbation, and at the end of his tenure of office to leave the chair with their entire approval of the manner in which he had acquitted himself, and with their good wishes and esteem. (Hear, hear.) He hoped the junior members would work zealously to get into office. The W.M. concluded by proposing "The healths of the P.M.'s," to which Bro. Turner responded in efficient terms. For "The Visitors," Bros. Wigginton, Vivian, Cottebrune, and C. E. Thompson severally returned thanks, and other toasts concluded a very happy evening, contributed to in no small degree by the kind attention and genial politeness of the W.M., Bro. Shackell.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—This celebrated old lodge held its installation meeting at the Bridge Hotel, Wellington-street, Southwark, on Tuesday, the 17th inst.

Punctually at 5 p.m. the lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. F. H. Ebsworth, all his officers being present to assist him. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The report of the Audit Committee was then read and ordered to be entered on the minutes. It showed that the funds were in a most flourishing state, all liabilities discharged, and an unusually large surplus in hand. Messrs. Treton and Bagely were duly initiated, the ceremony being rendered in a most admirable manner. By desire, Bro. D. Rose, I.P.M., took the chair, and Bro. F. H. Ebsworth, W.M. presented Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, S.W. and W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation, when he was duly installed as the W.M. for the ensuing year, and appointed as his officers: Bros. F. H. Ebsworth, I.P.M.; G. Free, S.W.; G. J. Grace, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M., Treas. (re-invested); Donkin, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); A. L. Dussek, S.D.; S. Harman, J.D.; Gomme, I.G.; T. Wilkins, D.C.; and J. H. Batten, W.S. The lodge was then called off, and about sixty brethren sat down to the banquet, the W.M. presiding. Bro. F. H. Ebsworth, I.P.M., was afterwards presented with a six-guinea Past Master's jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him at the previous lodge meeting. On the lodge being resumed, the sum of £21 was voted from the lodge fund to the charity fund of this lodge. Bro. F. J. Timms presented the lodge with a handsome album to hold the photographs of the members, and agreed to photograph each member free of expense. It was ordered to be entered on the minutes that a vote of thanks be given him for such an useful present. There were present besides those named: Bros. T. J. Sabine, P.M.; Dudley, Jacobs, Williams, Keeble, Chipperfield, Cooper, Frankenberg, G. Wilkins, Rayden, Mercer, Hager, &c. Amongst a large number of visitors were: Bros. E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B.; F. Binckes, P.G.S.; Lazarus, P.P.G.S.W. of Wilts; T. Maidwell, Reed, E. W. Mackney, Hunt, Verry, Stiles, A. D. Loewenstark, J. W. Avery, Moorcraft, Allsopp, Skarf, Mutter, Meggitt, Palmer, and several others.

Lodge Regularity, No. 91.—This old lodge held its usual meeting at Freemasons' Hall on Thursday, the 12th inst., when Bro. C. Fish, in an able manner, initiated a gentleman into the Order. The election for W.M. resulted unanimously in favour of Bro. Romford; Bro. C. Fish was elected Treasurer, and Bro. Hoare re-elected Tyler. Banquet followed.

St. George's Lodge, No. 140.—This celebrated old centenary lodge held its regular meeting on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Trafalgar Hotel, Greenwich. Bro. C. Hudson, W.M., opened the lodge, supported by all his officers. Bro. G. C. Stuart (325, I.C.) was unanimously admitted a joining member. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. Bro. W. B. Blackmur was raised to the third degree in an admirable manner. Bro. E. Hubbuck, P.M., then took the chair and duly installed Bro. Johnson as W.M. for the ensuing year, who appointed and invested his officers. A five-guinea Past Master's jewel having been presented to Bro. Hudson, P.M., for services rendered to the lodge during his year of office, the lodge was closed. Banquet followed, when the usual toasts were given and received—about thirty brethren being present. Visitors: Bros. R. Boncey, P.M. 79; Killick, P.M. 781; Read, P.M. 781; Griffin, S.W. 933; &c.

Domestic Lodge, No. 177.—At Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Friday, the 20th inst., the installation meeting of this popular and numerous lodge took place, when there were about a hundred brethren present, amongst whom we noticed Bros. Foulger, W.M.; Walford, W.M.-elect; Ferguson, J.W.; Timms, S.D.; Kent, J.D.; and Everitt, I.G.; Carpenter, Brett, Thompson, Haydon, F. Smith, P.M.'s; Clarke, Pulsford, and Chas. E. Thompson (Southern Star), Willing, Price, Dyer, E. B. Clarke, Treadwell, and Bird. Amongst the visitors were Bros. F. Walters and Carey. The business consisted of passings and raisings, one initiation (Mr. Dyer), and the installation by the respected Bro. Brett of Bro. Walford, S.W., who delivered the after address with much effect. The W.M. then raised his officers one step each in rotation, Bro. Treadwell (one of the oldest and most respected members) being made I.G. An excellent banquet followed, and a pleasant evening was spent.

Manchester Lodge, No. 179.—On Thursday, the 19th inst., at Anderton's Hotel, this old lodge held its regular meeting. Bro. Ash, W.M., opened the lodge, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The first work done was installing Bro. Kew, W.M., who appointed as his officers Bros. Ash, I.P.M.; Letteller, S.W.; Hayward, J.W.; Hopekirk, P.M., Treas.; Hughes, P.M., Sec.; Morton, S.D.; Munro, J.D.; Sullivan, I.G.; and Gowland, junior, Org. The usual addresses were delivered and the ceremony given in an admirable manner. The newly-installed W.M. soon gave proofs of his proficiency by initiating, in a solemn, correct, and painstaking manner, Messrs. D. Witt and Shaw into Masonry. He then presented, in the name of the lodge, his predecessor, Bro. Ash, with a P.M.'s jewel. After some formal business had been disposed of, the lodge was closed. There were also present besides the above-mentioned brethren: Bros. W. Stuart, Gowland, Maddox, Berry, and Leighton, P.M.'s. Amongst the visitors were Bros. C. Greenwood, P.G.S.; Suncy, Frost, P.M. 228; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; and J. Thomas, W.M.-elect 142. The usual good banquet followed, served up under the superintendence of the ever-popular Bro. W. Smith, who, as usual, was unremitting in his attention to please all present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received, and after a few hours spent in an agreeable manner, the brethren separated.

Lodge of Tranquility, No. 185.—On Monday, the 16th inst., this lodge was held at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars. The lodge was opened by Bro. Harfield, P.M. (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Dr. Biegel, W.M., who is with the German Army in France), assisted by Bros. L. Barnett, S.W.; Bloomfield, J.W.; P. Levy, Hon. Sec.; H. Abrahams, S.D.; N. Moss, J.D.; Schnitzlas, I.G.; Knapp, Org.; J. Holbrook, I.P.M.; M. Harris, A. E. Sidney, L. Isaacs, N. Harris, S. J. Ross, P.M.'s; and many other brethren. The visitors were Bros. F. Walters, L. Lazarus, &c. The minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. The work (done in an admirable manner, and much enhanced by the music so well introduced by the Organist) was passing Bros. Lyons, Constable, and Ross, and raising Bros. Lazarus and Matthews. The by-laws was then read. The elections resulted in Bro. L. Barnett, S.W., as W.M.; and J. Peartree, P.M., re-elected Treas. It was carried unanimously that a letter of condolence be sent to the sorrowing widow and family of the late Bro. Joseph Abrahams, P.M. The lodge was then closed, and an excellent banquet, supplied by Bro. J. Hart, followed.

St. Paul's Lodge, No. 194.—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Tuesday, the 17th inst. The lodge was opened by Bro. E. S. Eves, W.M., who was supported by Bros. E. H. Sparks, S.W.; W. Aldridge, J.W.; E. M. Veal, P.M., Treas.; R. Fowler, P.M., Sec.; G. Fowler, S.D.; S. Werton, J.D.; F. G. Brown, I.G.; J. Watson, C. Wilson, J. Harper, H. Renshaw, F. Renshaw, G. Wells, E. Randall, W. J. Ford, Hooper, Saxton, W. Clapton, W. Vark, H. H. Woodbridge, W. G. Temple, &c. The visitors were Bros. J. Hervey, G.S.; R. Spencer, P.G.S.; G. F. Cremer, H. Garrod, F. Walters, E. Bage, E. Loates, H. Parker, A. Gilbert, R. Avery, &c. The W.M., in an earnest, correct, and impressive manner, raised Bro. H. H. Woodbridge to the third degree. Bro. R. Fowler, P.M., Sec., in the name of the lodge, presented the W.M. with a massive gold jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him. The W.M. having been re-elected, the usual ceremony of the installation was dispensed with, the Secretary giving the address to Wardens and brethren only, which was rendered in his usual correct manner. The lodge was closed, and the usual superior banquet followed. The pleasures of the evening were much enhanced by the good music, which was given under the direction of Bro. Parker, assisted by his professional brethren.

Lodge of Friendship, No. 206.—This lodge held its meeting at the Ship and Turtle Hotel, Leadenhall-street, on Thursday, the 12th inst. Present: Bros. E. B. Barnard, W.M.; George Collier, S.W.; Alfred Harris, J.W.; H. Earles, S.D.; Wm. Conbro, J.D.; John Graywood, I.G.; Alfred Turner, Steward; William Rumsey, Treas.; John Rumsey, Sec.; R. Boyd, H. M. Collier, Frank Harrison, and John Stewart, P.M.'s; Thomas Taylor, John Waters, Allan Rumsey, W. Clifford, W. Medcalf, Samuel Gamman, and C. T. Parsons. Visitors: Alfred T. Hunt, Industry, 186; Philip Pound, Eastern Star, 95; Benjamin Abbott, Preston, 766; and J. Rollinson, Prosperity, 65. Mr. Henry Beatie, M.D., was initiated and Bro. William Clifford was passed; after which, the installation of the new W.M., Bro. George Collier, was proceeded with by Bro. John Rumsey, the ceremony being very efficiently rendered. The W.M. then appointed and invested the following officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Alfred Harris, S.W.; Henry Earles, J.W.; W. Conbro, S.D.; John Gaywood, J.D., Samuel Gamman, I.G.; Alfred Turner, Steward. Bro. William Rumsey was re-invested Treasurer, and John Rumsey was re-invested Secretary, both these brothers having held their offices upwards of a quarter of a century. At the conclusion of Masonic business, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, served in Bro. Painter's most superb style, and an evening, enlivened by Masonic and loyal toasts, speeches, and fine singing, brought the meeting to a close.

Lodge La Tolerance, No. 538.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall on Thursday, the 5th inst. There were present Bros. Jas. Kench, W.M., in the chair; T. E. Hardy, S.W., and W.M.-elect; Lindus, J.W.; Sly, Sec.; Hart, S.D.; Steward, J.D.; Leech, I.G.; and a large number of members. Among the visitors were Bros. John Hervey, P.S.G.D. and Grand Sec. of England; Reed, W.M.-elect St. James' Union Lodge; S. Pollitzer, P.M. 49; George Shaw (late of this lodge), MacGregor, Victoria Lodge; H. Ellis, Stanhope Lodge, 1269; Seymour Smith, Crystal Palace Lodge, 742, and several other brethren. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, and the report of the Audit Committee had been received and adopted, a gentleman was duly initiated into Freemasonry, and Bro. Ellis was raised to the third degree, both ceremonies being performed in a most able manner by Bro. Kench. The installation of the W.M.-elect was then proceeded with, and Bro. John Hervey having presented the W.M.-elect, the ceremony of installation was worked in a faultless style by the W.M. The following officers were then appointed—viz.: Bros. Lindus, S.W.; Hart, J.W.; Jas. Kench, Treas.; M. Watson, Sec.; Steward, S.D.; Sly, J.D.; W. J. Thicke, I.G.; and Leech, W.S. The W.M. then invested the I.P.M. with a P.M.'s jewel, for which Bro. Kench expressed his thanks. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet. After the cloth had been removed, the W.M. gave the usual toasts in very eloquent terms. When he arrived at the toast of "The D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers," he stated that he had received letters from Earl Vane, P.G.S.W., and Sir Albert Woods, Garter, G.D.C., regretting that illness prevented them attending the banquet as they intended. He then referred to his privilege of receiving the Grand Secretary as a guest, and called upon him to respond to the toast.—The Grand Secretary made a long and eloquent speech in reply, and after acknowledging the toast on behalf of the D.G.M. and the other Grand Officers, said it gave him no ordinary pleasure to be present on that occasion. He looked forward to the installation meetings of that lodge with interest, because he witnessed the Masonic progress of several of its members with extreme satisfaction. He felt more than usual gratification in seeing his friend Bro. Hardy in the chair, for he knew him to be a good Mason, and one who would reflect honour on the lodge. He had seen him work in another lodge, with which he (the Grand Secretary) had been connected for 25 years, and he could assure the brethren that a most efficient worker, and was in every respect calculated to make an admirable W.M. He (the Grand Secretary) was also pleased with the appointments of officers. The S.W., Bro. Lindus, was a zealous worker in the Emulation Lodge, who had been nominated by the Grand Master as Master of a lodge before he had attained the rank of Warden. Bro. Hart, the J.W., was also a member of that lodge; while the S.D., Bro. Steward, was an old Mason, and one of the most distinguished workers in the lodge, and he only regretted that it had not been his good fortune to see Bro. Steward installed a Master of his lodge, but he hoped soon to have that pleasure. Of the other officers he had no doubt they would discharge their duties in an efficient manner, and he thought he might congratulate the W.M. on having such good officers, and the lodge in having so excellent a W.M., and he wished him, in conclusion, a happy year of office. (The Grand Secretary resumed his seat amid loud cheers.)—The next toast, "The Health of the W.M.," was proposed by Bro. Kench, the I.P.M., in a highly flattering and effective speech, and was responded to by the W.M. in the following terms:—Bro. P.M. Kench: For the extremely kind manner in which you have submitted the toast of my health to the brethren, I beg you to accept my warmest thanks; and to you, brethren, for the kindness and the cordiality with which you have responded, I offer my heartfelt acknowledgments. It would be mere affectation on my part were I to attempt to conceal from you the pride and gratification I experience in being permitted, by the kind favours of the members of the Lodge La Tolerance, to occupy the honourable and dignified position I now hold. In undertaking the duties of the Mastership of this lodge, I am deeply sensible of the serious responsibilities that devolve upon me. Still, I am free to confess that it has been my ambition to attain to the position I now occupy. This I regard as a legitimate and laudable ambition in every Mason, provided he is actuated by proper motives; and I trust there is not a member of the lodge who is not influenced by the same feeling and sentiment. Permit me, however, earnestly to exhort those of my brethren who may entertain the desire to occupy the chair of the lodge, seriously to reflect upon the responsibility that will devolve upon them; thoroughly to acquaint themselves with the nature of the trust to be confided to them; and to qualify themselves for the efficient discharge of the duties of the office; so that it may never in future be said that La Tolerance possesses a Master who is incompetent to the work. Indeed, brethren, my heart's desire is that this, my mother lodge, may become a perfect pattern and example in this respect. And as one means of obtaining so desirable an object, I should be glad to see a by-law to the effect that no member should be installed as Master of the lodge until he had given proof of his proficiency in all the duties appertaining to the office. I would even go a step further, and under a deep sense of the responsibilities "for the faithful discharge of the duties annexed to the appointment," and conscious that the honour, reputation, and usefulness of each lodge in particular, and of Masonry in general, depends on the skill and assiduity of its rulers, I should be gratified to see established in the metropolitan district, and in connection with each of the Provincial and District Grand Lodges, Boards of Examiners, whose certificates of competency should be an indispensable condition to installation to the Mastership of every lodge under the English Constitution. This would not only secure a fulfilment of the ancient charge, that all preferment should be grounded on real worth and personal merit, and that "no Master or Warden should be chosen by seniority, but for his merit;" but it would also go far to guarantee a uniformity of working, and eliminate from the ceremonies the false grammar and absurdities which now too frequently disgrace their performance. But while urging with all due emphasis the absolute necessity of one uniform and "established mode of working," I would not have it supposed that I consider Masonry to consist in the practice, however perfect, of the ritual and ceremony. These are necessary in an institution such as ours, and their effect should be to leave a solemn and reverential impression on the mind. Our ritual and ceremonies, however, are but a means to an end—the improvement of the human heart. The arch-enemy of bigotry, superstition, and fanaticism, the grand object of Masonry is to assist in promoting the civilization and welfare of mankind—the bringing of rude matter into due form, and socially to bind in one indissoluble bond of charity, all sorts and conditions of men. Unfortunately, it is too often applied to the most improper purposes. This I attribute to the too indiscriminate manner in which men are admitted into the order—without due enquiries being made into their position and character. The consequence is, that we find men who are no sooner admitted into the Craft than they publicly exhibit Masonic emblems, with a view to attract custom and to promote their own commercial interests. Every right-minded Mason must regard such proceedings with abhorrence, and I should rejoice to see Grand Lodge adopt some summary and effective step to put an end to such a gross degradation of the Order. For my own part, I studiously avoid such men—regarding them as men who have sacrilegiously violated in solemn obligation; as men who have desecrated one of the grand principles of the Order—truth; as men who are ignorant of and are incapable of appreciating the dignity and high importance of Masonry; and who, regardless of their moral responsibilities disgrace the Craft by perverting "Best things

To worst abuse or to their meanest use."

Brethren, our ritual itself, in several of its parts, points to something far loftier and more noble than this—to something far beyond the reach and attainment, or even the comprehension, of such men as those to whom I have alluded—to something more than mere ceremonies and the making of Masons. Breaking down the barriers which separate nations from nations, and man from his fellow-man; recognising the law of contrasts in the order of nature as the law of love in the moral order, Masonry sends out an invitation to man, wherever she finds him, bidding him put forth a new activity in the exercise of universal benevolence and charity. She bridges over the abysses which national religions have opened up between the nations of the earth, and unites them together in spirit by the bonds of charity under the law of the same Great Architect of the Universe. It is the accomplishment of this freedom and this unity that Masonry adopts as her mission, proclaiming to the world the true principle of humanity—the unity and brotherhood of all human kind, without distinction of nature or of race. It is upon this basis that Freemasonry builds, and will continue her task until she completes her glorious edifice. It is this that constitutes the grand aim and object of Freemasonry, but which can only be understood and appreciated by those who are actuated by that

"Desire which tends to know
The works of God, thereby to glorify
The Great Work-Master."

To receive at the hands of my brethren the appointment as one of the rulers of such a noble institution is indeed an honour, which I duly appreciate and esteem. To the faithful discharge of the important duties it involves, I shall devote my best efforts, with the hope that the kind wishes you have individually and collectively expressed towards me may be realised; and assuring you that I shall ever look back upon the present occasion with a grateful recollection, remembering it as amongst the happiest of my reminiscences. (The W.M. was loudly cheered at the conclusion his speech.)—The next toast "The Visitors," was responded to by Bro. Read.—The toast of "The P.M.'s" was replied to by Bros. Burmeister, P.M., and Kench, I.P.M.—Bro. Lindus, S.W., replied to the toast of "The Officers," and the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to an end. In the course of the evening some excellent vocal and instrumental music was given by Bro. S. Smith, assisted by the brethren.

Nelson Lodge, No. 700.—This flourishing lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich. Bro. W. D. May, W.M., occupied the chair, supported by Bros. W. Graham, S.W.; J. Norman, J.W.; C. Hobson, S.D.; Ingle, J.D.; Ritchie, I.G.; Glashier, Org.; Henderson, Crawford, Cook, Rowland, Dunham, Bowles, and Tongue, P.M.'s; Copeland, W.M., and P.M. 913; Davies, W.M. 13; Yong, S.W. 13; in addition to a strong muster of the members. The work done was initiating two gentlemen, passing one, and raising three. Bro. Biddick, 913, was also balloted for, and admitted a joining member. £5 was voted to a distressed brother, and £10 to each of the Masonic schools. The business being ended, the lodge was closed in due form, when the brethren sat down to refreshment, supplied by Bro. Hilton, and spent a most pleasant and harmonious evening.

Pumore Lodge, No. 715.—The installation meeting of this flourishing and most prosperous lodge was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Saturday, the 21st inst. Bro. W. Kibble, W.M., opened the lodge supported by Bros. J. H. Townend, S.W.; W. Bennett, J.W.; S. G. Myers, P.M., Treas.; H. Muggerridge, P.M., Sec.; J. Crossfield, S.D.; H. Birdseye, J.D.; J. Jonas, I.G.; J. Paddle, C. Vines, C. H. Fielder, and J. H. Weedon, P.M.'s; C. Wyche, J. Lacquin, M. Bennett, J. Harris, T. B. Yeoman, H. Warden, J. Clemmans, G. Wyatt, W. E. Stoner, J. Gale, &c. Amongst a large number of visitors were Bros. E. H. Patten (P.G.S.B.), A. Bryant, G. Yapp, G. A. Taylor, R. H. Townend, E. H. Tipton, J. H. Cox, C. Bennett, F. Walters, F. Carritt, S. Muggerridge, F. Trott, T. Turner, W. Nicholls, and H. Chambers. The work gone through was raising Bros. J. Lacquin and J. Harris, passing Bro. M. Bennett, and initiating Mr. Alfred Carritt, the W.M. performing the ceremonies in a very satisfactory manner. The installation of Bro. J. H. Townend as W.M. was then proceeded with by Bro. H. Muggerridge, who went through his work in his usual superior style. The newly-installed W.M. appointed, and Bro. H. Muggerridge invested, the officers, viz., Bros. W. Bennett, S.W.; J. Crossfield, J.W.; H. Birdseye, S.D.; J. Jonas, J.D.; T. B. Yeoman, I.G.; G. Smith, P.M., Tyler. Bros. S. G. Myers and H. Muggerridge were re-elected as Treas. and Sec. respectively. The W.M., on behalf of the lodge, presented the I.P.M., with a superior P.M.'s jewel. Br. Kibble returned thanks in an appropriate speech, and the lodge was closed. An excellent banquet followed, and we regret that pressure of matter precludes our giving the speeches delivered at this and other festive boards.

Whittington Lodge, No. 862.—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at Anderson's Hotel on the 16th instant. The I.P.M., Bro. Weaver, occupied the chair (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. S. S. Davis, W.M.), and about four-and-twenty brethren were present, including Past Masters Hurlstone, Brett, and Quilty; W. J. H. Jones, J. W.; R. W. Little, Sec.; A. Frickenhaus, S.D.; W. F. Smith, J.D.; T. Kingston, D.C.; J. D. Taylor, C. Bergemann, C. Walker, W. H. Kaye, L. Adutt, F. Moll. The ceremonies of the evening comprised two initiations (Messrs. C. Steiner and G. C. Pritchard), and two raisings (Bros. Lutchmepathy Naidoo Garu and Whitehead), both being ably rendered by the Acting W.M. and his officers.

Bro. Weaver then proposed, Bro. Jones, J.W., seconded, and it was carried by acclamation, "That the sum of five guineas be voted to the 'Wentworth Little Testimonial Fund,'" and it may be added that in the course of the evening this amount was supplemented by liberal subscriptions from the brethren individually. After the proceedings in lodge a capital banquet was served, and the remainder of the evening was spent in the usual convivial and happy fraternal manner. Bro. Brett, G.P., responded for the Grand Officers, Bro. F. Walters for the visitors, and Bro. Hurlstone for the P.M.'s. Several songs were well sung during the evening with musical accompaniment by Bro. Weaver, whose execution of a difficult fantasia on the pianoforte, was also highly appreciated.

Royal Oak Lodge, No. 871.—The members of this lodge met at the White Swan Tavern, Deptford, on Wednesday, January 25. Bro. J. Truelove, W.M., opened the lodge, and passed Bro. Wilson to the second degree. Bro. W. Andrews, P.M., was elected W.M. by a large majority; Bro. H. A. Collington, P.M., Treas., was re-elected; and J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler. Present: Bros. J. Barrett, S.W.; T. Kilner, J.W.; H. A. Collington, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; J. W. Reed, S.D.; W. Myatt, J.D.; G. Andrews, I.G.; W. Andrews, P.M.; J. Ragg, G. Harvey, &c. Refreshment followed labour.

Rose of Denmark Lodge, No. 975.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the White Hart Tavern, Barnes, Surrey, on the 20th inst. Bro. C. A. Smith, W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. W. H. Barnard, S.W.; S. H. Stephens, J.W.; G. T. Noyce, P.M., Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, P.M., Sec.; R. B. Huddleston, S.D.; C. Butcher, J.D.; W. Bell, I.G.; T. Farrell, W.S.; R. G. C. Lemon, C. Willcox, W. Hamlyn, J. Ayles, S. Curtis, W. Hayes, E. Harris, T. T. Willcox, and several other members and visitors. Mr. Samuel Harris was initiated, and six brethren were passed to the second degree. A notice of motion was given that the sum of five guineas be voted to the "Wentworth Little Testimonial Fund," after which the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to a substantial repast provided by Bro. Willcox, the host of the White Hart.

Sphinx Lodge, No. 1329.—The regular meeting of this rapidly-rising lodge was held on the 21st instant at the Stirling Castle, Camberwell. Present: Bros. Ed. Clarke, P.G.S. of W. Middlesex, W.M.; Major H. W. Palmer, S.W.; E. J. Bailey, J.W.; J. G. Reynolds, Treas.; H. Allman, Sec.; Dr. V. Bedolfe, S.D.; S. Saunders, J.D.; J. Vockens, I.G.; J. Sugden, Steward; Hyde, P.M.; Dr. Pinder, Campbell, Mansell, Blanch, J. S. Dunbar, and Hancock; visitors, Bros. James Stevens (W.M. 1216), E. Worthington (P.M. 507), Pulsford (P.M. 507), Larlham (1216), and Green (1194). The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., and the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for the admission into Freemasonry of Messrs. George Craggs, George Champion, William Andrews, G. T. Bickerton, and Charles J. Coles, which proving unanimous in each of their favour, and Messrs. Andrews, Bickerton, and Coles being in attendance were severally initiated into the Order, the ceremony being effectively rendered by the W.M., who unfortunately was suffering from the effects of a cold. Bro. Jas. Stevens, kindly relieving the W.M. of his duties, proceeded in his usual careful and correct manner to pass Bros. Campbell, Mansell, Blanch and Hancock. Several gentlemen having been proposed for initiation at the next meeting, and a petition from various brethren for permission to hold a lodge of instruction under the warrant and sanction of this lodge, with Bro. John Thomas as Preceptor, having been duly considered and unanimously granted, a vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Dr. Bedolfe for a very handsome present made by him to the lodge (the Sphinx beautifully executed as a coat of arms), the lodge was closed in due form and the brethren adjourned to the banquet table, Bro. White's catering well meriting the eulogiums passed upon it by the visitors.

PROVINCIAL.

COWES.—Medina Lodge, No. 31.—On Thursday, 12th January, the brethren of this lodge held their installation meeting. This is the oldest lodge in the province, being established in 1731, and recently, by command of the late Grand Master of England, has been, with the other Island lodges, annexed to Hampshire province. The brethren having assembled, Bro. J. Hall Smith, W.M., opened his lodge in the third degree. Bros. Westbrook, Tait, and Parnell were then introduced, and having passed the necessary examinations, were separately raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The W.M. then resumed the lodge to the first degree, when Messrs. Pepper and Hurst were initiated, after which a Board of Installed Masters was formed, when Bro. O. Haxthausen was duly placed in the chair according to ancient custom. The brethren were then admitted, and the W.M. was saluted, who proceeded to the election of his officers for the ensuing year as follows: Bros. J. Hall Smith, I.P.M.; J. G. Wheeler, S.W.; G. Jones, J.W.; J. R. Dawson, P.M., Sec.; C. Sarl, Treas.; Hunter, S.D.; J. Netten, J.D.; C. Fellows, I.G.; and D. White, Tyler. There being no further business before the lodge, the W.M. closed the same with solemn prayer, according to ancient custom. The brethren then retired to the Dolphin Hotel to a banquet, the chair being occupied by the W.M., who proceeded with the toasts, the first being "The Queen and the Craft." This was followed by "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G. Master of England," "The Earl de Grey and Ripon, G.M., and the Grand Lodge of England," "The P.G. Master," "The P.G. Lodge," and "The Officers of the Lodge." We need not expatiate upon the various toasts, suffice it to say that they were drunk with a deal of brotherly feeling. The W.M. then proposed "The health of Bro. J. Smith, I.P.M.," and alluded in kindly terms to the duties that had devolved upon him during his year of office. Other toasts were proposed and responded to, and the brethren passed the remainder of the evening in a most enjoyable manner. Bro. George Jones presided at the piano, and also during the evening enlivened the harmony with some capital music upon the cornet.

BROMPTON, KENT.—United Chatham Lodge of Benevolence, No. 134.—The annual meeting of the brethren of this excellent lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on the 19th inst., when Bro. Sergeant-Major Cole, R.E., was duly installed W.M. in the presence of a large assembly, amongst whom were Bros. J. Redman, P.M., P.G.S., the retiring W.M.; W. Blakey, P.M., W.M. 1174, and P.P.A.D.C.; J. Strowse, P.M., P.S., and Treas.; W. Turtle, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; Ashdown, P.M. 184 and 1050, and P.P.G.P.; Carter, P.M. 20, P.G.D.; Burfield, P.M. 20; Fowle, W.M. 20; Seabrook, P.M., Sec. 1170, and P.G.S.; Martin, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., &c.; and Darley, P.M. 158, Sheerness. Bro. Redman, with great ability, conducted the beautiful and impressive ceremony to the admiration of all. The installation being over, the brethren of the junior degrees were admitted and did honour to the W.M. The following officers were then appointed: Bros. Murphy, S.W.; Robinson, J.W.; Strowse, P.M., Treas.; Gale, Sec.; Higgins, S.D.; Morson, J.D.; Hurley, I.G.; Husband and Hewitt, Stewards; Gorham, D.C.; and Drago, Tyler. Amongst the large number present were several military brethren. On thanks being proposed to the Installing Master, Bro. Redman, the lodge was closed, and the brethren retired to refreshment at Bro. Wraith's, the Golden Lion, where they did ample justice to a spread which proved the capability of Bro. Wraith to gratify the taste, and which gave the utmost satisfaction.

LIVERPOOL.—Harmonic Lodge, No. 216.—On Thursday, the 12th inst., the monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Adelphi Hotel, where there was a highly respectable gathering of the brethren. An additional interest was given to the proceedings by the installation of the W.M. and the investiture of his officers. Bro. Crook, whose services in the chair appear to have given the liveliest satisfaction during his year of office, vacated his position, and Bro. Joseph Skeaf was installed as W.M. The ceremony was performed in a most impressive and highly efficient manner by Bro. James M'Kune, P.M. and P.Z. The following officers were invested by the newly-elected Master, and afterwards received the different charges from Bro. M'Kune: Bros. Jones, S.W.; John Beesley, J.W.; John Turner, S.D.; John Norman, J.D.; George Rigby Smith, Sec.; William Laidlaw, Treas.; William B. Lennie, I.G.; John Madlock, D.C.; and Ball, Tyler. In handing in the yearly balance-sheet the Treasurer made the gratifying announcement that the funds in hands at the close of the year amounted to £70 odd. The accounts were unanimously passed, and occasion was taken by several of the brethren to express their satisfaction at the financially prosperous condition of the lodge. Messrs. Conley and Crook, after being balloted for, were duly initiated in a most efficient and impressive manner by the W.M., the working tools being presented by the J.W. The charge, given by the S.W., was especially striking in its delivery, and secured the hearty approbation of all who listened.—During the evening Bro. Jones, S.W., called the attention of the brethren to the painfully sudden and lamented death of Bro. Lancelot Fleming, who had received his third degree only at the previous monthly meeting of the lodge. In the course of a few well-chosen and feeling remarks, the S.W. referred to the great loss which Freemasonry in general, and No. 216 in particular, had sustained by the unexpected death of their young brother, who, he said, had even at the outset of his Masonic career given the greatest promise of being both an active and efficient worker, and likely to rise to the very highest position in the lodge. He (Bro. Jones) concluded by moving that a letter of sympathy should be sent by the Secretary to the widow of the deceased.—Several of the brethren assembled also referred in terms of praise to the high character and great promise of the late Bro. Fleming, and the resolution was at once and unanimously adopted. After labour a splendid banquet was provided in the large and handsome dining-hall connected with the hotel, which was admirably served.—After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts (proposed in the happiest terms by the W.M.), Bro. Crook, P.M., proposed, in highly eulogistic terms, "The health of their newly-appointed Master," and said he was sure that during his year of office he would prove himself fully qualified to perform all the duties connected with it—an efficiency which had been fully established by the manner in which he had conducted the business of the lodge that day. (The toast was received with true Masonic enthusiasm.)—The W.M., in reply, said he must thank the brethren very cordially for the reception which they had given to the toast just proposed. He trusted that the manner in which the duties of the lodge were performed would, at the end of the year, meet with their approbation. No. 216 was his mother lodge, and as they were all bound morally to respect and love their mothers, he would strive to do so with regard to that lodge by doing his duty in connection with the chair in the best manner possible. His professional engagements occupied a large part of his time; but he assured the brethren that he would do his utmost to make the working of the lodge as efficient as possible, and give it his honest attention, as his predecessors in office had done. (Cheers)—"The health of the I.P.M., Bro. Crook," was then proposed by the W.M., who spoke in high terms of the manner in which he had fulfilled the duties of the chair.—Bro. Crook, in responding, said he must regret that business engagements had on more than one occasion prevented him from attending to his duties; but he assured the brethren he was a true Mason at heart, and as such he had endeavoured to carry out all the duties of his office.—"The Visiting Brethren," "The Newly-initiated Brethren," and "All Poor and Distressed Masons," were the remaining toasts on the list, after which the lodge was closed in due form at an early hour. During the evening Bro. Busfield contributed to the harmony in a most material manner by the splendid style in which he sang several songs. The I.G. (Bro. Lennie) also added to the pleasure of the meeting by the spirited manner in which he sang "The Merry Days of Old," which the brethren generally appreciated. Bros. M'Kune, Jones, Bennett, Willett, Hook, &c., also gave vocal contributions, which went far to justify the title of the "Harmonic Lodges."

BODMIN.—One-and-All Lodge, No. 330.—The annual meeting was held at Freemasons' Hall on the 27th ult. The lodge was opened in the first degree by Bro. Wallis, W.M. After the minutes of the last lodge had been read and confirmed, Bro. the Hon. Levison Gower, M.P., was proposed to be affiliated a member, and Dr. Adams was proposed to be initiated at the next regular lodge. The lodge was then opened in the second and third degrees. A board of Installed Masters was formed under the presidency of Bro. Capt. Colvill, P.P.J.G.W., and the choice of the lodge having fallen on Bro. W. R. Oliver, of Bodmin, now of 40, Chancery-lane, London, as W.M.-elect, he was presented by Bro. Rub, P.P.G.D.C., and duly installed by Bro. Colvill, assisted by Bro. Wallis, P.P.G.R., and Bro. the Rev. J. D. Hawsley, P.G.C., in a most impressive manner. After the W.M. had appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing year, the lodge was called off from labour to refreshment, and repaired to Bro. Sandoe's, Royal Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was partaken of, and the proceedings throughout the evening were conducted in a truly Masonic spirit.

TRURO.—Phoenix Lodge of Honour and Prudence, No. 331.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, New Public Rooms, Truro, on Monday, the 16th inst., Bro. J. F. Penrose in the chair. After the reception of an approved candidate, the W.M.-elect, Bro. J. T. Ferguson, was duly installed as W.M. for the ensuing year by Bro. J. F. Penrose, I.P.M. The ceremony was conducted in a most efficient manner. The following officers were then appointed:—Bros. R. M. Paull, S.W.; S. Serpell, J.W.; Rev. F. B. Bullocke, M.A. (Prov. G.C.), Chaplain; J. O. Mayne (P.M., Prov. S.G.W.), Treasurer; Thomas Olver, jun., Secretary; Hon. T. C. Agar Robartes, S.D.; J. W. Wilkinson, J.D.; Thomas Solomon, J.P. (P.M., Prov. S.G.W.), Director of Ceremonies; S. Harvey (P.M., Prov. G.P.) Inner Guard; J. F. Phillpotts and W. H. Cristoe, jun., Stewards; W. Rooks, Tyler. The business being concluded, the brethren adjourned to the Red Lion Hotel, where the banquet was served. The W.M. presided, and the Senior Warden was in the vice-chair. Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., Grand Warden of England, and numerous other members and visitors were present.

HARTLEPOOL.—St. Helen's, No. 531.—On Thursday, 12th inst., a number of Brethren of this lodge met at the house of Bro. C. Humbles, Cleveland Hotel, when that brother, in his usual style, supplied them with a most sumptuous banquet. Bro. T. H. Haigh, of the Lodge of Truth, No. 521, Huddersfield, in the chair. Bro. J. N. Sidney, St. John's Lodge, No. 80, Sunderland, in the vice-chair. The loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed from the chair in a very efficient manner, and were right loyally and Masonically received; after which Bro. T. Turnbull, I.G. of the lodge, made a presentation to Bro. J. J. Armstrong, I.P.M., No. 531, Com. 954 (from a few private friends), of a beautiful portrait of his wife, to complete a pair, one of himself being presented to this distinguished brother a few months ago. Bro. Turnbull also presented the same brother with a splendid signet ring and Past Master's jewel on behalf of the brethren of the lodge, as a token of respect and esteem. The jewel was engraved as follows:—"Presented to Bro. J. J. Armstrong, I.P.M. of the St. Helen's Lodge, No. 531, by a number of brethren, as a mark of regard and esteem. Hartlepool, January 1st, 1871." These presents were suitably received and responded to in a very feeling manner. The portraits were from the studio of Newcombe and Sydney, West Hartlepool, and reflect great credit on the artists. The size of the portraits and frames are 3ft. 6in. by 3ft. During the evening, Bro. J. J. Armstrong presented to Bro. Thomas Forbes, P.M., a beautiful Past Master's jewel, on behalf of the brethren of the lodge, also the jewel was fixed to his breast by Bro. Armstrong. Bro. Forbes, P.M., made a suitable reply in a good speech, thanking the brethren for their kindness in presenting him with such a beautiful testimonial. Several other toasts followed, and the evening was spent in mirth and harmony, several brethren singing some really good songs. The tyler here put a stop to the hilarity by his toast, "To all Poor and Distressed Masons," which finished the evening, the brethren separating at a seasonable hour.

BRIGHTON.—Royal Brunswick Lodge, No. 732.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 12th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion. The lodge was opened by the highly-esteemed W.M., Bro. G. Smith, P.P.G.P. Sussex, and the minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed Mr. Plumer was initiated in an able manner by the W.M. Bro. V. Freeman, P.P.J.G.W. presented Br. E. Carpenter, S.W., to be duly installed in the chair of K.S., which ceremony was performed in a most perfect manner by Bro. V. Freeman, P.M. The newly-installed Master then nominated and invested his officers as follows: Bros. G. Smith, I.P.M.; J. L. Brigden, S.W.; W. Smith, J.W.; S. Ridley, Treas.; T. Lawson, Sec.; G. H. Day, S.D.; S. Solomon, J.D.; Jeffcoat, I.G.; Hopewell, D.C.; F.

Vincent, Steward. The W.M. then, in most appropriate terms, presented, in the name of the lodge, a P.M.'s jewel and collar to the retiring W.M. Br. Smith having returned thanks, the lodge was closed and the brethren, to the number of fifty, adjourned to the banquetting chamber, where an excellent dinner had been prepared by the Messrs. Mutton. The cloth having been cleared, the usual toasts were heartily honoured, and an exceedingly happy evening was brought to a close at an early hour.

WELLINGBOROUGH.—Wentworth Lodge, No. 737.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held in the Town Hall on the 16th inst. The lodge was opened in due form, and after the usual preliminary business Bro. Miller was, in accordance with ancient custom, installed into the chair of K.S. by Bro. S. Inns, D.P.G.M. The W.M. then invested his officers as follows: Bros. James, S.W.; Woolrych, J.W.; Burkitt, S.D.; Cook, J.D.; and Housden, I.G. Bro. Cook was re-elected Treasurer, and Matthews, Tyler. Labour being ended, the lodge was closed in due form with prayer. The brethren afterwards adjourned to the Angel Hotel and partook of an excellent banquet. The customary toasts were given and responded to and a very pleasant evening was spent.

SOUTHEND.—Priority Lodge, No. 1000.—The installation meeting of this lodge, to install Bro. Jas. Cantor, the W.M.-elect, was held in the lodge-room, at the Middleton Hotel, Southend, on Tuesday, January 10th. The ceremony of installation was most impressively performed by W. Bro. William P.M. 160 and P.P.J.G.W.; after which, the newly installed W.M. appointed his officers for the ensuing year, and they were duly invested as follows:—Bros. S. Cox, S.W.; J. R. Hemmann, J.W.; Rev. T. W. Herbert, P.M., Chaplain; Frederick Wood, P.M. and P.P.S.G.W., re-elected Treasurer; W. Smith Cox, P.P.G.S.B., reappointed Secretary; A. Lucking, S.D.; G. J. Glasscock, J.D.; H. Rowley, P.P.S.G.D., as D.C.; Barton, Organist; Joseph Louth, I.G.; Edward Parsons, re-elected Tyler. A strong muster of Past and Present Provincial Grand Officers, Past Masters, and visitors were also present. The lodge been closed about thirty-four of the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, which was served up in capital style. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The enjoyment of the evening was greatly enhanced by the excellent singing of Bros. J. Burton, J. Brazier, Girling, and Johnston.

LIVERPOOL.—Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 1035.—The installation meeting of this lodge took place on Thursday, 12th inst. The voting having been in favour of Bro. J. W. Turley, without dissent, he was duly installed by Bro. P.M. Fozzard, who fulfilled his duties most admirably. After the installation, the W.M. appointed his officers, who were invested by Bro. Fozzard, viz.:—Bros. Morgan, S.W.; Sculthorpe, J.W.; Ferguson, S.D.; Stewart, J.D.; Crosby, I.G.; Bunting, Treasurer; Bilsbrough, Secretary; Pye, Organist. At 6 p.m. the brethren sat down to banquet, prepared by Bro. Vines in his usual satisfactory manner. Among the visitors present were Bros. Drs. Smith, Johnson, and Hughes, De la Perrelle, and Healing, P.M.'s; Lunt and Clark, W.M.'s. After spending a very pleasant evening together, the brethren separated at an early hour.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.—This lodge, which was formed to supply a want long felt by the military at this large station, was consecrated by Bro. Sir H. W. Beach, Bart., M.P. Prov. Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, on the 11th Nov. The officers of the lodge are Bros. C. Carnegie, P.M., P. Prov. G. Supt. of Wks. Essex, W.M.; J. Fenn, S.W.; J. Hopkins, J.W.; Captain Richardson, R.E., S.D.; M'Kenzie, J.D.; R. White, Sec.; I. Vincent, Treas.; Laverty, I.G.; and Rev. J. W. Colliers, Chap. At the first meeting of the lodge on the 1st December there were three candidates initiated and fourteen joining members balloted for. The last monthly meeting was held on the 5th inst., when all the officers were present, except Bro. Hopkins, who was detained by duty at Woolwich. Bro. J. Belling, P.M., acted as Past Master, and Bro. Osmond acted as J.W. There were about thirty-six brethren present. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed. Bro. Osmond, P.M., was then balloted for and admitted as a joining member. Five candidates for initiation—three of whom belonged to the Royal Engineers, one to the 17th Lancers, and one to the Army Service Corps—were then balloted for and approved. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when Bro. Gillon and Peers (Royal Engineers), and Plimsand (17th Regt.), were passed to the F.C. degree. The lodge was then closed down to the first degree, when Messrs. Lucas, Shillington, and Mount (Royal Engineers), Lavagear (17th Lancers), and Gardner (A.S. Corps) were initiated into Freemasonry. A code of by-laws was then considered and agreed to by the lodge. Bro. Vincent was appointed Almoner to the lodge, and Bros. Richardson and M'Kenzie, members of the Board of General Purposes. As the lodge will have to lease its present locale in March, a committee—consisting of Bros. C. Carnegie, J. Fenn, and Captain Richardson—was appointed to see places suitable, and report the terms at the next meeting of the lodge. The W.M. announced that a meeting would be held for instruction on the last Thursday of each month. Several candidates having been proposed for initiation, and as joining members, the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony.

The following reports of lodge meetings remain over until our next:—169, London; 221, Bolton; 307, Hebden Bridge; 523, Leicester; 605, Seacombe; 958, Jersey; 1086, Kirkdale; 1248, Scarborough; 1330, Market Harborough.

J. M. A.—Nearly every Grand Lodge but that of England adds the 4004 to the vulgar era to complete the "Annus Mundi," or "Annus Lucis," the year of light. The "Ancients" in England formerly used the same mode of computation.

D. MACFARLANE.—The lodge "La Tolerance," No. 538, was formerly composed chiefly of French brethren, but it is not so now, and we cannot point to any lodge in the metropolis as being distinctively French in its membership. At 71, Dean-street, Soho, you might get information on the subject.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

CHARITY is again our theme; and the immediate object of our solicitude is the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Having said thus much, it may easily be conjectured that the approaching Festival in aid of distressed Masons and the widows of poor Masons is the foundation of our present remarks, and of our desire to enlist the sympathies of our readers. Some time ago, a French contemporary, the Monde Maçonique, whose voice is now unhappily silenced by the sterner notes of war, observed, with reference to English Freemasons, that their charity was a system well organised and ably administered. Our contemporary, if we remember rightly, deprecated spasmodic efforts, and commended the "long pull, the strong pull, and the pull altogether," which had produced such creditable and lasting results as the great Masonic Institutions of England. And, undoubtedly, the Monde Maçonique had reason on its side, because the education and nurture of destitute or orphan children, and the permanent shelter and sustenance afforded to the aged, in those institutions far outweigh, in actual good to the recipients, any mere transient relief to the needy, on however profuse or extensive a scale it may be. Not that we are disposed to discredit the practice of ready assistance of a temporary nature to those who really require it; but at the same time it cannot be disguised that more money is wasted on impostors and undeserving objects than would suffice to keep one hundred more children in our schools, or as many annuitants on the funds of our Benevolent Institution. There is, however, another aspect to the question, and we allude to it with regret, that more than four-fifths of the Craft in England do not contribute at all to any of the noble foundations established by their forefathers. Nay, some are content to apply for the benefits of those Institutions without ever having thought of them in more prosperous days—without ever having sympathised in the sorrows, or really commiserated the distress of their aged brethren or of the widow and the orphan. Can we wonder, therefore, that many of the subscribers, justly indignant at so lamentable an apathy, would fain exclude from the temple of charity those who have never sacrificed upon its beneficent altar? Can we wonder, although we may not agree with them on principle, that many are anxious to restrict the benefits of our institutions to those who have subscribed to their funds, or who have shown, in better days, a practical interest in their welfare. Were it not for the comprehensive nature of Freemasonry, and the glorious catholicity of its creed, the derelictions of duty manifested by many nominal Masons would recoil upon their own heads in the hour of penury and want. But, fortunately for them, the ample cloak of charity covers their sins of omission, and all are allowed to participate in the advantages of education and maintenance for their children, as well as sustenance for themselves, although, as we have already intimated, they have really no claim to the support of the Craft beyond the natural sympathy which is ever evoked in generous minds by tales of misery and misfortune. Still we are glad to record that of late years great interest has been taken by many members of the Fraternity in the welfare of our charities. The increasing number of Stewards at each successive Festival, with the augmented subscriptions on their lists, may be accepted as a healthy sign of progress; but we shall not be satisfied until the responsibilities of Freemasonry are brought home so forcibly to the breast of every brother that all "who profess and call themselves Masons" shall be found eager to help the good work by fairly contributing according to their means. The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was, as many of our readers are aware, established with the view of providing an asylum for the veterans of the Craft in old age, and the widows of such brethren as had died in straitened circumstances. At a later period a scheme for granting annuities to a similar class of deserving persons was promulgated under official sanction, and eventually the Asylum and Annuity Funds were amalgamated, with the happiest results.

On behalf of this invaluable charity a Festival is held annually, under the presidency of some distinguished Mason who has attained high honours in the Order. This year the Right Worshipful Brother Colonel Francis Burdett, Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex, has undertaken the onerous but pleasing task of representing the aims and claims of the Benevolent Institution at the usual Festival, which will be held on the 3rd February; and it is very gratifying to be able to announce that the Stewards ranged under the Right Worshipful Brother's banner upon that occasion will number more than one hundred. We therefore anticipate a great success for the Institution, and we know that the most praiseworthy exertions are being made to secure it. And when we consider how many deserving old Masons are sheltered and secured from want—how many widows are aided in like manner—few words are required to commend the cause to the warmest support of the brethren; but even at the risk of harping upon one string, let us advise those who are already subscribers to the various Masonic Charities to urge the imperative necessity of subscribing upon all brethren in their respective lodges who may have been previously oblivious of the truism that Freemasonry has its duties as well as its privileges, and that one of the highest, the holiest duties of a Mason is to do good to the household of the faithful.

There can be but few of us, however young in Masonry, who have not witnessed many strange vicissitudes and changes of fortune amongst our friends and acquaintances; there can be but few of us who have not passed hours in the house of mourning, as well as in the chambers of rejoicing. Young as we may be, grief and pain and death are not unfamiliar visitants to our homes; nor can the noblest or the most prosperous claim exemption from the common ills of life. Let us each, therefore, help to bear a brother's burden; let us each endeavour to lighten his load of care, and to smooth his troubled passage to the grave. "Behold the night cometh" when "no man can work;" but the present is ours, and can be woven by kindly words and generous deeds into a pleasantly-remembered past. The knowledge and the conviction that we have striven to do our best for the comfort of our fellow-creatures will not only awake happy memories in our hearts; but when the awful hour of dissolution approaches, our thoughts shall not be haunted by visions of vows forgotten, bright opportunities wasted, and paramount duties neglected. No hideous spectre shall affright our souls, because we shall have carried out in their entirety and truth those principles which are the glory of our Order by caring for the widow and orphan, and giving the homeless and shelterless where to lay their heads.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

We have received, and hold over, several letters relating to Bro. Yarker and the Ancient and Accepted Rite. All are personal to a degree which renders their insertion impossible, unless carefully pruned; and one signed by "A. S. P., of the Palatine Rose Croix Chapter," is not accompanied by the name and address of the writer. Bro. Yarker's communication contains historical facts of an interesting nature, but is intermingled with observations respecting the Supreme Grand Council 33° which we cannot publish.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

BRO. YARKER AND THE SUPREME GRAND COUNCIL 33°.

That there are two sides to every question may be accepted as an indubitable fact; and I should be sorry that the ten thousand readers of THE FREEMASON should be allowed to suppose that Bro. Yarker's ex parte statement of his own case does not admit of being looked at from a point of view somewhat different from that which he has selected.

I propose neither to criticise nor to refute the arguments contained in his statement; but as a humble yet entirely independent member of the A. and A. Rite, I wish to invite the attention of all brethren to a most important matter of principle which is involved in the present discussion.

Every member of this Rite, when he is obligated in the 18°, whether as a newly-admitted candidate or as an affiliated member of one of the old independent bodies (which last I gather to have been the case with Bro. Yarker), voluntarily takes a solemn obligation whereby he binds himself, among other things, at all times to render proper allegiance to the Supreme Grand Council 33°.

Bro. Yarker, by his own confession (at page 11), admits that he publicly announced his intention of "again working the old Templar Kadosh." Now, whether he be right or wrong, personally, in his wish to see this degree again worked, there can be no doubt that his intention was a direct infringement of the regulations established by the S.G.C. 33°; and, consequently, that he was bound by his sacred word of honour to submit his private judgment to their decree; and in contumaciously refusing conformity thereto he must, in the judgment of all right-minded Masons, be held to have unjustifiably violated his obligation of obedience, and to have deserved the penalty which has been inflicted.

Let me illustrate this position by supposing a parallel case. We know that in former days the "Ark," and many other "side degrees," were habitually worked in some private lodges; but, I ask, what would be said now should Bro. Yarker rise at a P.G.L. banquet, and publicly announce his intention again to work the old Ark or the Mark Degree in a Craft lodge? I think there can be no doubt that, if he persisted in the assertion of such an intention, the sentence which would be passed upon him by G.L. would not differ materially from that which he has suffered at the hands of the S.G.C.

I must avow that, to my mind, this matter of playing fast and loose with Masonic obligations, and declaring that "no subordination is due" to those whom it suits our own private purposes to accuse of "usurpation," is a very serious matter indeed. Granted that our governing body is non-elective, and that it consists of "a small minority of nine men," Bro. Yarker knew all this when he submitted himself to that body; and they were just as much usurpers when he was likely to "become a zealous member" of their Rite as they are now, when they have refused to be guided by his individual opinions. A few weeks ago we were all crying shame upon Russia for her faithlessness in repudiating solemn engagements at the first moment that it suited her personal interest to do so. But what difference is there between her conduct and that of any brother (whether at Bath or at Manchester), who, after having entered into solemn engagements, in order to obtain a certain Masonic rank, or the possession of real or imaginary secrets, or some other advantage best known to himself, is, nevertheless, ready, the moment he finds his opinions differing from those of others (who, after all, may possibly be as well qualified judges as himself), to abjure, propria motu, the most sacred obligations; and to ignore the truth which he was taught on first receiving "the Light"—namely, that a Mason's honour is inseparable from fidelity and obedience.

P. H. NEWNHAM, 30°.

"A COWAN."

In response to Bro. W. Carpenter's interesting communication on the word "Cowan," I will not lose sight of the subject, and hope before long to write a few lines thereon.

Permit me, however, to say that I know no one better qualified to speak on the subject than Bro. Carpenter himself, and I feel sure it is only owing to his being of such a retiring disposition that he has refrained from speaking more fully and positively on the subject.

His connection with the literary world for at least half a century, and the knowledge that he has of the mysteries of the Craft, both ancient and modern, would warrant us, I feel certain, in receiving with every attention, not only his "crude ideas," but also his mature thoughts on the subject.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

MASONIC WRITERS AND CORRESPONDENCE.

May I be permitted to remind the brethren who write any time to object to the statements made by several writers in THE FREEMASON, that we simply communicate our information (often obtained after considerable labour, and frequently at no slight cost) for the benefit of the Craft universal, without any pecuniary fee or reward; and that therefore we, who thus write, are as anxious to receive light as those can possibly be to whom we wish to give light. Hence, their objections should be supported by facts, and not offered in an unruly or ungentlemanly manner. I must say that unless such is the case I shall not trouble to attempt to aid or advance the literature of the Craft; and although my withdrawal may be of little consequence, as it will for certain lead others to do likewise the fact will then be of consequence.

MASONIC RIVALRY IN GLASGOW.

There has been a great struggle going on for long among several of our Scottish lodges for precedence in regard to their antiquity, while the wonderful discoveries that are sometimes made are often rather curious. One of the latest—which, however, requires further explanation—is in reference to the Glasgow St. Mungo Lodge, No. 27, and its new date of "1051." On looking over the list of Scottish lodges for years back, I find the date of St. Mungo Lodge given as "1729." Yet, shortly since I was shown a large and gorgeously-painted silk banner, with the inscription in large gold letters upon it, "Glasgow Lodge St. Mungo, 27, A.D. 1051." This date therefore of the St. Mungo Lodge throws the St. John's, with its "Malcolm Canmore" fraternity and pretended "813th Anniversary," completely in the shade; for does not 1051 carry us back to the classical times of the immortal Macbeth? What next? However, pray tell us all about it.

THE APAMEAN MEDAL.

I must apologise to Bro. Craig, at page 688, December, 31st, for being so long in replying to his query, but three things kept me back: I had to wait until the other notes I forwarded had their turn to appear; I had not a copy of Hugh Miller's work beside me, and I was engaged otherwise. However, I have now seen the "Testimony of the Rocks," page 283, where the engraving of this old medal occurs, as also "Calmet's Dictionary," which I have, and in which, under "Ark," a similar print appears, only a little smaller, and I have now great pleasure in stating what I think about it.

This medal shows us Noah and his wife in two different situations; first, in point of time, we see them seated within the ark, which is floating upon the water; then we see them after leaving the ark, and walking away from it. In this latter we perceive that Noah and his wife have their right hands elevated in token of adoration and thankfulness to God for his mercy in saving them. This position was quite common as a posture of prayer, &c. Ps. cxli., 2: "And the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice;" and 1 Tim. ii., and 8: "I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands." Prov. i., 24: "Because I have called and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand and no man regarded." Then in Isaiah ix., 12 and 17, we find the stretching out of the hand alluded to as a symbol of entreaty and mercy. Then Gen. xiv. 22: "I have lift up mine hand to the Lord." The appearance of both the man and the woman is similar, and quite in keeping with their circumstances. Both are simply shown as walking, while the left hand of the man resting on his stomach, or above his girdle, has no more connection with Freemasonry than any other portion of the sketch, and I must say that to fancy that the artist who executed this had any thought of Freemasonry in his head at the time, is, in my opinion, purely imaginary; only I am ready to admit that Bros. Desaguliers and Anderson got a number of their ideas from subjects similar to this when they manufactured our present system. There is nothing mysterious in up and transmogrifying old stones into a new building.

W. P. BUCHAN

P.S.—In connection with this I would respectfully request Bro. Craig to read and think over my quotations at page 42 of last week's FREEMASON, from the old Burgh Records of Aberdeen, especially under date 1530; and after doing so, it strikes me he will get "more light," in a manner which may be useful to him in his future Masonic readings.

W. P. B.

At a meeting of a Lodge of Emergency for the purpose of an initiation and passing, the other evening, the S.W. and J.W. were both absent. The W.M. directed the I.P.M. to take one chair, and one of the P.M.'s the other, and one P.M. the I.P.M.'s collars, there being several junior M.M.'s in office capable and anxious of an opportunity of filling those chairs. The question afterwards arose as to "there being a right on the part of the P.M.'s to claim to fill those chairs," or if the junior officers (at the discretion of the Master) might not rightly fill them for the evening? An answer in your valuable paper will much oblige,

A SUBSCRIBER.

QUALIFICATIONS OF VISITORS TO LODGES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—Having had considerable experience in the above subject, I think I can answer "An Old P.M." in a tolerably satisfactory manner.

1st. Should a perfect stranger present himself for admission to a lodge, my custom has been, for the last twenty years or more, and it is derived from very old and experienced Masons, on the I.G. announcing that there is a stranger in the porch seek for admission, to send out the Deacons or two trustworthy brethren to examine him in the three degrees, and also his G.L. certificate, or any other he may have; at the same time I would not reject a brother entirely, unless I felt convinced he was an impostor, as I have known instances where men have been entered, passed, and raised in a lodge in the colonies, and have not entered a lodge for a considerable time afterwards, when words and signs have been forgotten and no G.L. certificate may ever have been given to the brother. I know an instance of this, when a brother wished for admittance to a lodge but could not pass himself in, and was very nearly rejected, but an old experienced brother came out, and after putting a number of questions to him, felt convinced that he could not have known what he did had he not been legally entered, passed and raised, but of course this required great caution and care. This brother rose eventually very high in the Order, and held very prominent offices; had he been rejected, the Order might have been deprived of a very useful member.

2nd. With respect to vouchers, the only way they can be relied on is, when a brother in the lodge can "vouch" that he has previously sat in lodge with the visitor who presents himself, or that some other well-known brother has "vouched" to him that the visitor has sat in lodge with him.

It is certainly necessary to exercise every caution in admitting a perfect stranger, but at the same time a certain amount of discretion may be used; for a very worthy brother may be rejected, and perhaps annoyed and disgusted, and never attempt to enter a lodge again. What I have written is entirely from practice and experience, and I don't think I ever remember an instance where this test has not proved satisfactory. I may say that in one lodge where I was W.M. and P.M., in the neighbourhood of a large garrison town and camp, we had an immense number of strangers presenting themselves of all sorts and denominations, when we were, of course, obliged to be very particular, and though a few were rejected most were admitted. The Book of Constitutions (page 89) recommends due examination, but says very little on the subject.

I am, Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

F. B.,

An old P.M. and P.G.M.

BRO. LITTLE AND THE "TESTIMONIAL."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

VERY DEAR BROTHER,—I am delighted to know that Bro. Robert Wentworth Little's worth is to be recognised in a tangible form. We have all been familiar with him as a most energetic, zealous and learned Mason; and, what is more, London Masons are not the only brethren who are aware of Brother Little's great exertions on behalf of the Craft, for his fame is known throughout the length and breadth of the land, and as many of the articles from his gifted pen have been anonymous, we make bold to say that even where his name has not been heard, his admirable articles have been read and appreciated most heartily. In fact we know such is the case, as we have had letters on the subject from brethren who have acknowledged the excellence of Brother Little's writings, to whom the talented brother was unknown, but who, however, "gave honour where honour was due."

I beg, Bro. Editor, to unite my feeble testimony to the most fraternal communication of Bro. James Weaver, in THE FREEMASON of to-day. I support every word of that letter, and believe Bro. Little to be all and even more than Bro. Weaver says; and I feel sure that the worthy Chairman, Treasurer, and Secretaries will receive a ready response to their appeal.

Fraternally yours,

W. JAMES HUGHAN,

Prov. G. Sec. Cornwall.

Truro, 21st Jan., 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Fully coinciding as I do in the sentiments so ably expressed by Bro. Weaver in THE FREEMASON last week, I am sure my motives in now addressing you will not be misunderstood when I say that the advertisement signed by Bros. Moss and Levander has in some respects caused considerable surprise to a large section of the Craft. I do not for a moment question their good intentions, which are sufficiently evident; but I may be permitted to suggest that it would have been more in accordance with the feelings of Bro. Little's Masonic friends if a general meeting had been called, and an opportunity had been afforded to other brethren who have known Bro. Little for a more lengthened period than have the two above-named Hon. Secretaries, to take an active part in initiating a testimonial in his honour.

At such a meeting the officers could, have been chosen, and thus what now appears to be a self-elected status, would have been avoided, while many would have been greatly pleased to originate lists of subscriptions in their own immediate circles. I merely throw this out as a hint, and to remove impressions which seem to prevail; and will simply add that our esteemed Bro. Brett is giving practical effect to a similar idea by making a goodly collection on his own account, and I am sure he will receive the hearty support of very many metropolitan Masons.

I will also mention that at the last meeting of the Plantagenet Conclave, Bros. Major Finney, J. L. Thomas, Finney, jun., Cubitt, Dr. Ward, and others mooted the question of a testimonial to Bro. Little.

Dr. Ward and myself were asked to act as Secretaries, but we did not consider ourselves of sufficient weight and influence in the Craft to carry out so desirable and important an object, but thought it would be much better to call a meeting of Bro. Little's friends. On the following Saturday, with much surprise, I read the advertisement in THE FREEMASON.

I have since received a note from Bro. Moss asking me to be one of a committee. I have not yet replied to his note, as I await an opportunity of consulting the brethren connected with the movement to which I have referred.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN BOYD.

P.M. 145 and P.Z. 145.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I was highly pleased to see the advertisement in your last issue informing the brethren that a testimonial was being "got up" for presentation to my esteemed and valued friend Bro. Little. I feel confident that the time has arrived when it would be a great injustice not to recognise in some public manner the many services he has rendered to our Order; and the object of my writing to you, is to suggest that a Committee be at once formed for the purpose of receiving subscriptions from the brethren who know and esteem him so highly, and that such Committee should include one of the Grand Officers of the province of Middlesex, of which Bro. Little is the first Prov. G. Secretary, and in the formation of which he has done so much.

Yours fraternally,

A PROVINCIAL BROTHER.

Our valuable contemporary the Era thus alludes to the "Wentworth Little Testimonial":—

"BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE.

"Following the example set in the cases of Bros. H. Muggeridge and James Brett, the brethren have resolved to give a proof of their recognition of Bro. Little's services to Freemasonry by presenting him with a testimonial. The services of Bro. Little, it should, however, be understood, are of a different character to those rendered by Bros. Muggeridge and Brett. These brethren, as the present representatives of the instructors in Freemasonry, have rendered invaluable assistance to the Craft in communicating the knowledge of the forms and rituals which make a perfect officer of a lodge or chapter; and consequently have exercised great influence over the spread of Masonry, and made it more attractive by the accuracy with which the ceremonies are performed when new members are added to the Order. Their labours have therefore been rewarded in a most liberal and handsome manner, and with a due regard to the value of their works. Bro. Little, however, though as perfect as they in his knowledge of lodge and chapter ritual, has devoted much of his time and attention in another direction. With him it has been a duty to pursue antiquarian researches after the history of Freemasonry, and to remove the dust and rubbish which, in a long succession of centuries, have naturally accumulated on the original fabric of the mystic art. To present it in its purity, undeformed by modern so-called improvements in the structure, to strip it of all 'meretricious graces' on the one hand, and to restore it 'majestic in its own simplicity' on the other, has been his end and aim; and while the services of Bros. Muggeridge and Brett were justly recognised as invaluable to the Craft, those of Bro. Little, in a higher and more eminent degree (seeking after knowledge "as silver and searching for her as for hidden treasure"), merit an ample and substantial reward at the hands of his brethren. The movement has met with cordial approval among the leaders of the fraternity, and Bro. Colonel Burdett, P.G.M. for Middlesex, and Bra. John Hervey, G.S., have accepted the offices, respectively, of Chairman and Treasurer of the Fund.

"OUR AMERICAN CONTEMPORARIES.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

In the interesting article with the above heading in THE FREEMASON for January 14th you omit a magazine which I think one of the best published in the Masonic world, viz., The Masonic Monthly (Theop. G. Wadman, Boston, U.S.).

It is just probable it may not be sent you in exchange, and if it is not, it ought to be. The omission would be at once remedied by Bro. Wadman's attention being called to the fact; and, on the other hand, if you do receive it, I know well the leaving it from your admirable sketch was an oversight. "Our American Contemporaries," and such like articles, are desirable features in THE FREEMASON, and remind us, like the "Masonic Calendar," that Freemasonry is cosmopolitan. I send you an account of the Temple just erecting in Manchester, New Hampshire. The old structure was burnt, but the Craft in that country soon determined to repair that loss.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Monthly Meeting of the Committee of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Thursday, the 26th inst., Bro. J. A. Rucker in the chair.

The minutes of the last General Committee were read and confirmed, and the minutes of the last Quarterly General Court and the House Committee were read. The medical officer's allowance was increased from £25 to £40 a year, in consequence of the great increase of work. Also a notice was given to present him with a gratuity of one hundred guineas for his great exertions during the recent heavy sickness at the school. The subject will be brought before the next Quarterly Meeting.

One petition was received.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.

Masonic Miscellanea.

A GRAND Masonic assembly is to be held at Aberdeen early next month, which we have no doubt will be the means of bringing the members of the various lodges together, and have a fine fraternal effect.

THE "Stockwell" Lodge, No. 1339, will be consecrated on Thursday, the 2nd proximo (by Brother R. Wentworth Little, G. Sec. Middlesex), at the Duke of Edinburgh, Stockwell, at 5.

WE are glad to see that Bro. Dr. Jones, of Asparria, Cumberland, has been presented with a purse of gold in recognition of his musical talents, and more especially for his services in connection with the church choir.

A GRAND Masonic ball, to which the public will be admitted, will be held at Pendleton Town-hall, by united Lodges of Salford, on Thursday, Feb. 2, in aid of the Salford and Pendleton Royal Hospital and Dispensary Funds.

AT the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution Bro. H. G. Buss, of 127, Offord-road, Barnsbury, will represent the Knights of Constantine, and will be happy to receive additions to his list.

A MEETING of the Bective Sanctuary of the Rite of Misraim will be held at Freemasons' Tavern, on Tuesday, the 31st inst., when the Levitical and other high grades of the Rite will be conferred on brethren in attendance. In order to remove erroneous impressions, it may be as well to state that none of the grades worked in any wise conflict with the degrees worked under the Ancient and Accepted Rite.

WE are informed that the following new conclaves of the Red Cross Order have been, or are about to be, opened:—

- The "United States' Premier," No. 38, at Washington, Pennsylvania.
- No. 39, at Cleveland, Ohio.
- No. 40, at Cincinnati, Ohio.
- No. 41, "St. James's," at Maitland, Ontario.
- No. 42, "St. George's," at Bolton, Lancashire.
- No. 43, "Roman Eagle," at Poona, East Indies.

WE have received some lines on the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, at Croydon, Surrey, written by the venerable Bro. John Harris, P.M. and P.Z., an inmate of this Institution, and who is now in his 80th year. They are published on a 4to royal sheet, price 2d., and the proceeds arising from their sale will be given to the Royal Masonic Life-Boat Fund. Bro. Harris is now totally blind, but his faculties are evidently as bright, and his zeal for Masonry as unabated, as they were in his younger days.

WE understand that the majority of the copies of "Masonic Sketches and Reprints," by Bro. W. James Hughan, are already subscribed for, and that in all probability there will not be a copy left when the book is ready for issue, early in February. The brethren who have had circulars sent them respecting it should lose no time in applying direct to the author (Turo, Cornwall), or disappointment will be theirs. The first part will be a careful reprint of the "History of Freemasonry in York," which has been exceedingly well received by the press both at home and abroad. The second part, which Bro. Hughan has just completed, will contain "Unpublished Records of the Craft," and valuable appendices, copies of the Harleian MS. (No. 2054) and the Sloane MS. (No. 3323), from the British Museum, and other MSS. never before published. Also extracts from the Records of the extinct Grand Lodge of all England, lately discovered. The work is to be dedicated to the Prov. G.M. of Cornwall, and will be sold on behalf of the Masonic Charities.

CAPITULAR Masonry is spreading in New Zealand, the Grand Chapter of England having recently warranted a new Chapter at Hokitika. Thus is Masonry taking the place of paganism and cannibalism.

It is announced that the Crown Prince of Denmark, who has recently been made a Mason by Charles V., King of Sweden, is to succeed the late M. W. Bro. Bastrup, as the Grand Master of Danish Freemasons.

HUNGARY, where Masonry has been dormant for almost eighty years, through the prohibition of the Austrian Government, is rapidly throwing off its lethargy. The three lodges already established at Pesth, Temesvar and Osdenburg, are said to number fifty members each. The establishment of new lodges at Presburg and Baja is under contemplation, and we hope to be able to announce the formation of a Grand Lodge in Hungary at no distant day.

THE Masonic fraternity in California is enjoying a prosperity unexcelled by any State in the United States, reaping bountiful harvests of blessings innumerable; numbering its hundred and four score lodges, with a membership of nearly ten thousand; with a magnificent temple, at once the pride of the Order and of the city in which it is located; with a Grand Lodge fund of twenty thousand dollars; with private lodge funds and halls all over the State of millions of dollars value; with a membership of the first citizens of the State for wealth, wisdom and social and moral standing. On its trestleboard is laid out a plan for a Masonic Home for Masons in distress.

ROYAL ARCH.

On Thursday, 26th January, a meeting of the Mount Lebanon Chapter, No. 73, was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. Present: Comps. J. W. Avery, M.E.Z.; T. J. Sabine, H.; F. Walters, P.Z., as J.; A. D. Loewenstark, P.Z., Treas.; M. E. Loewenstark, S.E.; J. T. Moss, P.S.; E. Harris, 1st A.S.; &c. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Comps. T. J. Sabine, M.E.Z.; J. Trickett, C.E., H.; M. A. Loewenstark, J.; A. D. Loewenstark, P.Z., re-elected Treas.; W. Roebuck, C.E., S.E.; T. J. Moss, S.N.; and E. Harris, P.S. Comps. Shalless, Stedman, and Timms were elected Auditors. It was carried unanimously that a five-guinea P.Z.'s jewel be presented to Comp. J. W. Avery, M.E.Z., for his efficient services during his year of office. Comp. T. J. Sabine, M.E.Z.-elect, represents the chapter as its Steward for the Boys' School at the next festival in March. The chapter was then duly closed. No visitors were present.

INSTRUCTION.

The usual weekly meeting of the Confidence Lodge of Instruction, was held on Wednesday last, the 18th inst., at Bro. Foster's, Railway Tavern. Bro. C. C. Taylor on the chair. Bro. Maud, S.W.; Bro. Felton, J.W. and Sec.; Bro. Gotthiel, S.D. and P.M. and Bro. M. Davis, I.G., and several other brethren. After the minutes were read and confirmed, and the third degree ably worked by the W.M., as also, the 1st and 2nd sections of this lecture by Bro. Gotthiel, the following propositions were carried unanimously:—Bro. C. C. Taylor, elected as Treasurer; Bro. T. F. Felton, re-elected as Secretary; Gotthiel, P.M. elected Preceptor; Bro. Eltham, (Priory Lodge, No. 1000) elected joining member, it was also deemed necessary in the interest of the lodge to alter the time of meeting from seven to half-past seven o'clock, and to close at half-past nine instead of nine o'clock as heretofore.

MASONIC BALL AT LIVERPOOL.

This, one of the principal provincial balls of the season was held on Tuesday the 10th inst., in the Town-hall, and was attended, by between 500 and 600. This was all the more gratifying, as the object for which this annual reunion is held is a charitable one—namely, providing funds for the education of the orphan children of deceased brethren in West Lancashire who have been left unprovided for. We understand that upwards of forty such orphans are now being educated in this way in different schools in the kingdom, and the funds which are annually derived from these gatherings form a very handsome nucleus for that purpose. Thus it will be seen that those of the brethren, together with their uninitiated friends—including, of course, the Lancashire witches, who, however ardently they may desire to pry into the mysteries of Freemasonry, are unable to have their wishes gratified—have a double motive to serve in attending the Masonic Ball—namely, that of deriving pleasure themselves and of conferring material benefit upon others. Two more powerful motives cannot operate in the minds of those who desire to enjoy the sweets of life to their fullest, and hence is to be attributed the large attendances at the annual festivities. Next to a fancy dress gathering, nothing is so picturesque as the scene which a Masonic ball-room presents—the elaborate costumes and costly paraphernalia of the brethren vying in splendour with the elegant dresses of the ladies, which may be said to include more colours than are to be found in a rainbow. Indeed, nothing so nearly approaches a fancy dress ball as a full dress gathering of the Masonic body; for among the number are brethren who rejoice in the dignity of "Knights Templar," whose cloaks of many colours, with devices of every conceivable kind, conspicuous among the number being the red cross, hide completely the regulation broadcloth dress coat and give their wearers rather a romantic appearance. Then, again, the gold-edged collars and cuffs, the crimson scarfs, the white aprons, and the adornments of other members of the craft, impart a very novel aspect to the ball; while Scotch brethren, in their kilts, and military and naval men, in their uniforms, add to the tout ensemble. Thus it becomes almost difficult in contrasting a fancy dress ball with that of the Craft to say where the one ends and the other begins. The company at the Town-hall included the merest tyro in the mystic art, as well as those who had reached the thirty-second degree. Although the Tylers stationed at the bottom of the staircase had not very warlike countenances, their drawn swords were sufficient to strike terror into the hearts of any who had come upon other than pleasureable motives bent. The party began to assemble at half-past eight o'clock, and continued arriving until midnight. The two ball-rooms were fully occupied by dancers up to an early hour and nothing that could contribute to the terpsichorean delights was left unprovided. The excellent music discoursed by Bro. G. W. Phillip's band appreciated by those who stood up in the dances, while the few who lounged upon the cushions and settees seemed to revel in the combination of sweet sounds, and to be bewildered by the rapid movements of the dancers as they flitted to and fro like so many objects in a kaleidoscope. Although the two rooms were crowded, the space was so utilised as to prevent unpleasant collisions; and this was in no small degree due to the admirable tact which that redoubtable master of his art, Bro. Molyneux, displayed in conducting the ceremonies. At eleven o'clock the supper-room was thrown open, and for the next two hours Bro. William Vines, of the Canton, was engaged in attending to the creature comforts of the party, which, with the aid of an admirably selected and well-stocked cuisine, he was able most successfully to do. The list of dances, included four polkas, six quadrilles, four galops, four lancers, four waltzes, and two schottische.

THEATRICAL.

OLYMPIC.—During the past week Mr. A. Halliday's "Nell," has been performed here to crowded houses—followed by "Paul and Virginia," which most satisfactorily finishes the evening's amusement. All the pieces meet with a good reception nightly and are well appreciated.

ROYALTY.—At this house has been acted "Diamond cut Diamond," then "Dora's Device," the programme concluding with the burlesque of "Whittington Junior and his Sensation Cat," to numerous audiences who testify their approbation of all the pieces produced. We can recommend this theatre to all who may wish to enjoy a good evening's entertainment.

SADLER'S WELLS.—It is sufficient to observe that Mr. Pennington still appears at this house, to ensure the attendance of all those who appreciate his talents as an actor, in "Richard the Third," "Merchant of Venice" and "Virginius." The concluding piece is the pantomime "Sinbad the Sailor."

PRESENTATION TO BRO. LOGIE AT DUNDEE.

The Operative Lodge, No. 47, met on Wednesday evening, the 18th inst., Bro. Longmuir, R.W.M., occupying the chair. The R.W.M. was accompanied by Bros. Alexander Kelt, R.W.M. 49; Jas. Berry, R.W.M. 78; William Gelletly, R.W.M. 158; George F. Roger, R.W.M. 225; and Past Masters Logie, Stratton, Robertson, Cowie, and Depute Masters Brew, Smyth, and M<sup>r</sup>Gregor. Bro. Henry, S.W.; and Bro. Wilson, J.W.

The lodge having been opened by the R.W.M. in due and ancient form, he intimated the meeting to be a special one called for the purpose of presenting Bro. Logie, the I.P.M., with a gold watch and appendages as a token of respect and in return for the eminent services rendered to the lodge. The lodge having been put under the charge of the Junior Warden, supper was thereafter served by the Stewards, which finished and duly charged, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts duly pledged and responded to, the R.W. Master called upon Worshipful Past Master Stratton to make the presentation.

Bro. Stratton then said: Right Worshipful Sir, Worshipful Masters, Past Masters, and brethren—I must say that I would have preferred the duty which you, Worshipful Master, desire me to do—namely, to propose the health of your respected predecessor and to make this presentation—had been undertaken by yourself. As you and the brethren of the lodge think otherwise, I have to thank you for the honour thus conferred on me, and I will now do so with great pleasure. This, Worshipful Master, has been the third testimonial made in this lodge during the past twenty-one years, and though presentations are now too common, this one is an exception, and is alike honourable to you in proposing it as it is to Bro. Logie, now about to receive it. I had the honour of being Master of this lodge when Bro. Logie joined, now about thirteen years ago, and during this long period of years Bro. Logie has been but one year out of office, and that one when ill with fever. Step by step—Deacon, Junior Warden, Senior Warden, Depute Master, and then Master (and I have always held that rising step by step is for the prosperity of lodges). Bro. Logie, therefore, in his quiet, unostentatious manner, having filled all the offices of the lodge, and as he has done a deal for the lodge, is well entitled to this testimonial; and I am glad to hear your subscriptions to it have been heartily given, and must therefore redound to the credit of you, Bro. Logie; and (turning to Bro. Logie) I have now much pleasure in handing to you this handsome testimonial, and I have no doubt you will look upon it as such. I wish you long life to wear it—a wish reciprocated by all the members of 47; and before I sit down I desire to say to you, young members of the lodge that this presentation and this happy meeting ought to stimulate you in your duty to your mother lodge.

Bro. Logie: Worshipful Master, Past Masters, Wardens, and brethren, I don't think that I ever rose with the idea of less to say than I can now. If I fail in properly thanking you all, I know you will excuse me. I have, as Bro. Stratton has said, held all the offices in the lodge, and, specially, that of Master, now for four years; and I am glad you are all pleased with the services rendered. I have never studied to add largely to the lodge—quality, not quantity, has been my aim. I now wish to thank you sincerely for this handsome present. I appreciate the gift very much. I can only say it will never be parted with by me as long as I live, and though a bachelor, I do trust it may descend to a worthy member of the Craft.

The following toasts were then given: "Sister Lodges," "Success to 47," "Provost and Council of Dundee," "Harbour Trust," "Town and Trade of Dundee," "The Cause of Education," and the toast of "The Master," when the Junior Warden called the lodge again to labour, and thereafter the R.W.M. closed the lodge.

EDINBURGH.—St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 48.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall. The lodge was opened by Bro. C. F. Matier, W. Depute Master, assisted by Bro. Dr. Hammond, S.W.; Bro. William Hay, P.M., as J.W.; and several other brethren. A petition was presented from Mr. W. C. Gilles, and being found regular, he was balloted for and unanimously elected. The candidate being in attendance was then admitted and initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry by Bro. Matier. The ceremony was performed with the utmost solemnity, and was deeply impressing to the candidate. No further business being brought forward, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren afterwards sat down to a substantial supper, to which they did ample justice. Bro. Dr. Loth, R.W.M., was in the chair, supported by Bros. Dr. Carmichael, P.M., and Matier, D.M. Bro. Mackersey, P.M., acted as croupier. The only toasts were "The Queen," "The R.W.M.," and "The Newly-initiated Candidate." The brethren separated at an early hour.

Rifle Lodge, No. 405.—On Tuesday, the 17th inst., an interesting ceremony took place at this lodge, which was the presentation of a very handsome jewel to Bro. W. M. Bryce, 30°, Treasurer. The jewel had been especially made for the purpose, and was the gift of Bro. Captain Gordon, 30°, R.W.M. of St. Ternan's Lodge, who was, unfortunately, unable to be present, and had deputed Bro. C. F. Matier, 30°, G.S., to present it in open lodge. Bro. Matier, after a few appropriate remarks, affixed the jewel to Bro. Bryce's breast, and trusted he would be long spared to wear it.—In reply, Bro. Bryce expressed his high appreciation of the kindness of Captain Gordon, and assured the brethren generally of his desire to do all that lay in his power to promote the interests of the Craft.

ABERDEEN.—St. Nicholas Lodge, No. 93.—A special meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, on the 16th inst., for the purpose of initiating Signor Guglielmo, the composer of "The Lover and the Bird," and other popular ballads. The chair was taken by Bro. E. Savage, P.M., 30°, assisted by Bros. Forrest, P.M., as S.W., and Milne, as J.W. We also observed present: Bros. C. Fitzgerald Matier, P.M., 30°; Captain Gordon, W.M. St. Ternan's, 30°; Captain Crombie, W.M. St. Machar's; and many others. The first degree was given in the best possible style by Bro. Savage. The chair was then taken by Bro. C. F. Matier, and the lodge being raised to the second degree, two candidates were passed Fellow-Crafts. Bro. Matier then raised the lodge to the third degree, and gave the first portion of the ceremony in his usual excellent manner to three brethren. Bro. Savage gave the second part, and there being no further business, the lodge was closed in due form, with solemn prayer. We are exceedingly pleased to have had an opportunity of visiting the brethren in Aberdeen, and of testifying to the excellence of their work, which puts many a London lodge to the blush. We have never seen it equalled, except in East Lancashire and West Yorkshire. This shows the fallacy of the popular idea that Masonry is very loose in Scotland. We advise those who think so to go for a short time to the North, and visit the "Granite City."

MARK MASONRY.

CONSECRATION OF THE CALLENDER LODGE OF MARK MASTERS, No. 123, E.C.

This new lodge was opened in the Town Hall, Bury, Lancashire, on the 13th inst., by Bro. Thos. Hargreaves, W.M. of the Blair Lodge, No. 113, E.C., Haslingden, in due form with solemn prayer; Bros. Lawrence Booth acting as S.V. and J. M. Whitehead as J.W. The following brethren were then advanced to the degree of Mark Master, according to ancient custom, by Bro. Wm. Romaine Callender, jun., R.W.P.G.M.M. of Lancashire—viz.: Bros. James Kenyon, James Shaw, and John Randle Fletcher. The R.W.P.G.M.M. then called upon the P.G. Sec. to read the warrant from the M.V.G.M.M., after which, Bro. W. O. Walker, the W.M.-designate, petitioned the R.W.P.G.M.M. to consecrate and constitute the lodge as the Callender Lodge, No. 123, E.C.

The R.W.P.G.M.M., in accordance with the petition of the brethren, proceeded to consecrate the lodge, assisted by the following P.G. Officers:—Bros. J. M. Wike, P.G.J.W., as P.G. Chaplain; John Tunnah, P.G.S.O.; John Chadwick, P.G. Sec.; John Duffield, P.G. Reg. of Wks.; W. Roberts, P.G.S.D.; Thos. Hargreaves, P.G.J.D.; S. Titmas, P.G.D.C.; Thomas Ashworth, P.G.A.D.C.; W. H. Prince, P.G. Swd. B.; L. Booth, P.G. Stand. B.; John Fothergill, E. Hartley, and Amos Stott, P.G. Stewards; and W. Walker, P.G.I.G. On the completion of the ceremony of consecration, Bro. W. O. Walker's assent was required to the ancient charges. The brethren beneath the rank of Installed Master were requested to retire, and the W.M.-designate was installed, according to ancient custom, by Bro. W. Roberts. The brethren were readmitted, and having duly saluted their new W.M., he proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows:—Bros. Lawrence Booth, P.M. 191, S.W.; John Mitre Whitehead, P.M. 1012, J.W.; Joseph Handley, P.M. 191, M.O.; Andrew Milne, P.M. 191, S.O.; Frank Dawson, P.M. 191, J.O.; James William Kenyon, P.M. 42, Chaplain; Thomas Crompton, P.M. 191, Treasurer; Henry Maiden, P.M. 191, Secretary; Frederick Crompton, J.W. 191, Registrar of Murks; John Halliwell, S.W. 1012, S.D.; William Handley, W.M. 1012, J.D.; Captain Watson, Past Warden 1174, Dir. of Cers.; John Randle Fletcher, Organist 191, Organist; Samuel Bailey, S.W. 191, and William Balmer, Sec. 191, Stewards; George O'Neil, I.G. 1012, I.G.; Ingham, Sec. 42, Tyler. The Provincial officers then retired, and the lodge was closed in ancient form, with solemn prayer, by the W.M.

The brethren then sat down to a banquet, provided by Bro. W. Handley, of the Derby Hotel, Bury, in his usual recherché style. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and received in a most enthusiastic manner. The enjoyment of the evening was essentially contributed to by a most efficient glee party, consisting of Bros. Bailey, Dumville, Edmondson, and Wroe, accompanied by Bro. J. R. Fletcher.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF MARK MASTERS.

The quarterly meeting of the Ashton United Lodge of Mark Masters was held recently at the Astley Arms Inn at Dukinfield, Ashton-under-Lyne. There was rather a poor attendance of brethren. The lodge was opened by Bro. John G. Whitehead, W.M. Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, W.M. Blair, 113, Prov. J.G.D. Lancashire, being the only visitor. The minutes of the last regular lodge were read and confirmed.

At the last quarterly meeting held in October, at the Pitt and Nelson Inn, Ashton-under-Lyne, Bros. W. R. Callender and Hargreaves being present, it was resolved to form a committee to look into the accounts of the late deceased Secretary and report to next lodge. They were also empowered to report to next lodge upon the advisability of joining the Grand Mark Lodge of England.

The Secretary read the report, which was as follows:—"The committee who were appointed at the last meeting have met several times, but are not prepared to report upon the accounts of the late Secretary until next lodg. They have taken into consideration the desirability of joining the Grand Mark Lodge of England, and have come to the conclusion that, if the Mark Masters of the Ashton district were to amalgamate with the Grand Lodge, it would impose upon the brethren extra contributions, which the majority would not be willing to pay, as they would not gain any privileges they have not at present, except uniformity of working and visiting the lodges under the jurisdiction of the G. Lodge, which very few would avail themselves of. They also believe that it would be a serious disadvantage to the members of the Funeral Fund, although it would not be interfered with by G. Lodge."

The W.M. read a letter he had received from Bro. Binckes, assuring them that the Funeral Fund would not be touched in any way. He (the W.M.) was sorry there were so few present. He wished that the matter might have been thoroughly discussed. Would any of the brethren express their opinions? The obstacle in the way of fees payable to Grand Lodge would prove very great; and another fear was that of introducing a third element, as there would be a few dissentients from the movement. There were already two elements—members and non-members of the Funeral Fund.

The S.W. moved, and the J.D. seconded, that the report be received and entered on the minutes. Bro. Thomas Hargreaves did not wish the brethren to think that he had come there to dictate to them, and to tell them what to do and what not to do. He hoped the brethren would thoroughly disabuse their minds of any such opinions; he would be the last to introduce any dissension into the lodge, or to cause a break in its harmony. He would simply say what he in their case would do; and before the W.M. put the motion to the meeting he expected by arguments and plain facts to induce some of the brethren to propose an amendment. It would not be advisable, from the small number of members present, to decide the question one way or another. It was a momentous question, and one not to be settled without due deliberation. The Mark Degree, to his certain knowledge, was worked in Lancashire in four different ways, and each party so working maintained that theirs was the correct ceremony. All could not be correct, and the question then arose—Which was the correct ceremony? A solution of that difficulty could only be arrived at by the brethren visiting the different lodges and seeing the working. If they did so, he felt sure they would think as he did: that the ceremony as authorised by the G. Lodge of England was the only correct one. And he asked them, as Masons and as men of common sense, if they found that their working was wrong, would they not correct it at once? Most decidedly. Now, he should ask them to adjourn the debate until next lodge; and in the meantime the brethren would have an opportunity of visiting the Blair Mark Lodge, at Haslingden, and the Union Mark Lodge, at Manchester, to both of which he most cordially invited them. For all the brethren who might visit either of those lodges, he felt convinced, if present at the next meeting, would vote for amalgamation with G. Lodge. The W.M. has said there were already two elements in the lodge, and it would be injudicious to introduce a third. He thought differently: that by amalgamation it would have a tendency to bring the two former elements into closer contact, and to place them all upon one common level.

Bro. Stafford and others protested against receiving the report.

A Brother did not think the working ever had been correct, as during his membership he had seen it changed two or three times.

Bro. Walker proposed as an amendment, and Bro. Stafford seconded, that the report stand over until next meeting, which was carried.

Bros. David Radcliffe (Milton, 1144) and George Burton (Unanimity, 89) were advanced to the degree of Mark Master. Several brethren were admitted members of the Funeral Fund, and others proposed. Bro. James Pollitt (W.M. Milton, 1144), on behalf of that lodge, wished to be incorporated with this Mark Lodge. It was ordered to be entered on the minutes.

Business being finished, the lodge was closed.

ROYAL ARK MASONRY.

An influential preliminary meeting of members of the Royal Ark Mariners' degree was held at the Lyceum Tavern on the evening of Monday, the 16th inst., when a Lodge of Instruction was opened, Bro. James Stevens, of St. Mark's Lodge, presiding as Commander N. The ceremony of elevation was rehearsed in a most satisfactory manner, Bro. Harris acting as J. and Bro. Lowder as S.

It was resolved that the next meeting be held on Monday, the 23rd inst., and then to found the Lodge of Instruction; all members of the degree present on that occasion to be recognised as founders of the lodge, without payment of the entrance fee. A vote of thanks was passed unanimously to Bro. Stevens for the efficient and impressive manner in which he had rendered the beautiful ceremony of this ancient degree; and it was also resolved that he be requested to occupy the chair of N. on the next occasion. Among those present were Bros. M. Edwards, Hammerton, Loewenstark, &c. Bro. M. A. Loewenstark is the Scribe (pro tem).

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

WILLIAM DE IRWIN CHAPTER, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

The William de Irwin Chapter of Sov. Princes of Rose Croix held their first meeting (after reception of warrant from Supreme Grand Council, for the chapter has during the past year been worked under a dispensation) on Thursday, the 12th inst., in the Weston-super-Mare Masonic Rooms, which had been tastefully and correctly fitted up by E. and P.P. Cox. The following E. and P.P.'s were present at the opening of the chapter, which had been called for an early hour in order to suit the convenience of visitors:—Ill. F. G. Irwin, 31°, M.W.S.; Ill. General Munbee, 30°, Sen. General; Capt. Townsend, Jun. General; E. T. Inskip, Treasurer; Benj. Cox, Registrar; Fredk. Vizard, Raphael; Ill. — Davis, 30°, Grand Marshal; F. Clarke, Captain of the Guard; Matthias and Jones, Heralds.

The chapter having been opened in due form, the following brethren, members of the Weston-super-Mare Craft lodge and R.A. chapter, were balloted for and unanimously elected, viz., Major John Walter Vizard, Alfred William Butter, and Wm. Thomas Male, the latter by dispensation as a serving brother. The candidates having been prepared and entrusted, were perfected and advanced to the degree of Sov. Prince Rose Croix of H.R.D.M., the ceremony being rendered in that impressive and correct manner for which this young chapter has frequently been commended by the Supreme Grand Commander of the Order. We particularly noted the working of E. and P.P. Vizard as R., Davis as Gd. M., and Townsend as H.P.

At the close of the second point, the M.W.S. expressed his regret at the absence of the Sov. Gd. Commander, the Ill. Bro. Vigne, and said he was quite sure the E. and P.P.'s would regret it still more when they learned that illness alone prevented his attending the chapter that evening. The M.W.S. proceeded to say that Bro. Vigne had presented for the use of the chapter a handsome alms-bag, and he was quite sure the members would value it still more highly when he told them it was worked expressly for the chapter (as the monogram would show) by the fair hands of their Supreme Grand Commander's daughter.

The thanks of the chapter were voted to Miss Vigne for her handsome gift.

The M.W.S. announced that the Supreme Grand Council had been pleased to confirm their charter and present them with a regular warrant, which he read, and afterwards said he was quite sure the members of the De Irwin chapter would continue to deserve the high opinion formed of them by the Supreme Grand Council.

E. and P. Bro. Inskip was unanimously elected Treasurer for the ensuing year.

The M.W.S. then proceeded to appoint his officers as follows: Ill. E. and P.P. Munbee, S. Genl.; E. and P.P.'s Clarke, J. General; Townsend, High Prelate; Cox, Registrar; F. Vizard, Raphael; Davis, Grand Marshal; Major Vizard, Capt. of the Guard; Matthias and Jones, Heralds; and Perfect Brother Male, Outer Guard.

The Most Wise Sovereign next appointed the presiding officers under the Grand Lodge of Perfection, Council of Princes of Jerusalem and Knights of the East and West, as follows:—Ex. and P.P.'s Cox, Most Powerful Master of the 4°, or Lodge of Secret Masters.

Jones, Right Worshipful Master of the 5°, or Lodge of Perfect Masters.

Butter, Most Illustrious Master, 6°, or Lodge of Intimate Secretary.

Matthias, Thrice Illustrious Master, 7°, or Lodge of Provost and Judge.

Wiltshire, Thrice Potent Master, 8°, or Lodge of Intendant of Buildings.

Taylor, Commander, 9°, or Lodge of Elect of Nine.

Major Vizard, Ill. Commander, 10°, or Lodge of Elect of Fifteen.

Pigott, Thrice Ill. Commander, 11°, or Chapter of Sublime Knights Elected.

Davis, Most Potent Commander, 12°, or Chapter of Grand Master Architect or Knights of Kilwinning.

Inskip, Grand Master, 13°, or Chapter of Royal Arch of Enoch.

F. Vizard, Thrice Potent Grand Master, 14°, or Chapter of Grand Lodge of Perfection.

Townsend, Sovereign Master, 15°, or Council of Knts. of East and West or Kts. of Red Cross of Babylon.

Clarke, Most Equitable Sov. Master, 16°, or Council of Knights of Princes of Jerusalem.

Munbee, Most Puissant Ven. Master, 17°, or Council of Knights of the East and West.

A communication from Supreme Grand Council was read, and some remarks made relative to the possibility of the suspension of the Bath brethren interfering with their position in the other (so-called) unrecognised degrees. The M.W.S. said it was a subject that could not be entertained in a Rose Croix Chapter.

After a short discussion relative to by-laws and other matters, alms were collected, and after the usual ceremonies the chapter was closed and the members adjourned to dinner, which was served by Bro. Kirkbride, of the York Hotel, in his usual excellent manner. After dinner a most pleasant and instructive evening was spent, the brethren heartily regretting when the M.W.S. and other brethren were forced to leave by train for Bristol.

KING WILLIAM CITED FOR TRIAL.

In compliance with the request of a valued correspondent, we place the following document on record. We have already expressed our opinion on the subject:—

"CIRCULAR FROM THE MASONS OF PARIS.

"Lodge of Henry IV., Grand Orient of France, 16, Rue Cadet, Paris.

"TT. CC. FF.—Encircled by the armies which obey the Sovereign of Prussia, we come to address to you the last cry of distress, and that it may reach you we entrust it to those sublime messengers which Science—that fruitful mother—has taught us to hurl through space, as if to defy the mad efforts of the men of prey, who foolishly suppose that thought can be penned up, subdued, chained, like a criminal in prison.

"Do not imagine, TT. CC. FF., that we ask for physical intervention. The self-denying spirit which animates us, the consciousness we have of defending a right cause, and, permit us to add, our own courage, will enable us, it is our firm hope, to conquer those who have made themselves the detestable instruments of the barbarous theory which dares to assert that Might may oppress Right. As you will see by the enclosed document, our sole object is to call for the formation of an impartial Masonic jury, from which we will enquire whether the complaint that we make against Bros. William and Frederick of Hohenzollern—the one King of Prussia and the other Prince Royal—be well founded, yes or no, from a Masonic point of view.

"If you will have the goodness to examine the reasons brought forward by us in support of this request; if, in addition, you admit that they are well founded in right and Masonic ethics, remember, TT. CC. FF., that never has an occasion presented itself where the universal human brotherhood could show its existence and its power in a manner so solemn and so impressive. By constituting itself supreme judge of the great case brought before it, it will show that it does not confine itself to inscribing at the head of its documents the noble device, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," but that it understands that each of the terms of that motto is capable of serious application to all its members without distinction. It will do more: it will open the glorious path, in which the outer world cannot soon avoid following it, namely, that differences between nations, instead of being decided by brute force, ought to be settled by international arbitration, on principles purely legal, but conformed to the humanitarian aspirations of modern civilization, of which Freemasonry is and will remain the torch-bearer.

"This circular, with the enclosed document, is addressed to the Orients and the lodges of the whole world. Each one of them may elect and send a commissioned delegate, credentialed with regular powers, to represent it at the illustrious Areopagus, summoned to assemble provisionally at Lausanne, Switzerland, March 15, 1871.

"In the hope, TT. CC. FF., that our appeal will be listened to, we offer you the expression of our fraternal regard.

"Given at Paris, November, 1870.

"THE FRENCH FREEMASONS TO THE UNIVERSAL MASONIC BROTHERHOOD.

"Requisition to put on trial the Bros. William and Frederick of Hohenzollern:—

"Brothers: At the beginning of the sanguinary war which is desolating humanity and civilization, the Freemasons of France, far from approving of the aggression against Germany, of which Bonaparte has been guilty, protested energetically. In all our lodges a cry of horror was heard, and its echo must have reached your midst.

"At the present time the sovereigns of Germany, who at first had taken arms to defend themselves, not content with having chastised the aggressor, continue a war which has no longer a legitimate object. They attack, in their turn, a people which has never ceased to show itself most friendly of all nations to foreigners, and particularly to the German nation. They make use of the numerous Germans who had received the hospitality of France, to betray that hospitality and to repay it by murder, fire, robbery, and devastation. They push their barbarous conduct even to the extremity—leading their soldiers to the walls of Paris, that great city which, more than any other, has shown itself liberal, pacific, and opposed to all international war.

"Brothers, the German sovereign has been guilty of the greatest of crimes, and that crime is the more to be detested because William of Hohenzollern and his son, the leaders of the German army, on entering the Masonic body, swore solemnly to observe its laws.

"William of Hohenzollern and his son are, in consequence, accused of perjury and treason. The Universal Masonic Brotherhood summon them to the bar of its tribunal three months from this date. The tribunal before which they are to appear will be composed of all the Orients of the world.

"The sittings of the jury will be held in neutral territory, at Berne, or any other city that may be ultimately fixed upon.

"If they fail to appear in answer to this summons, William of Hohenzollern and his son will be declared false to their oath, felons, and outside the pale of Masonic law. They will be condemned to suffer the penalties prescribed by our laws. They will be execrated for ever, and their memory will be handed down to the imprecations of posterity.

"Given at Paris, 30th Nov., 1870

"Address notes of compliance to Bro. J. F. J. Tierque, senior, Place de Chevelu, No. 6, Geneva (Switzerland)."

Bro. H. NEWMAN and the VOLUNTEER BALL IN LIVERPOOL.

On Friday last week the annual ball of the First Lancashire Engineer Volunteers took place at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, and was a complete success in every respect. No fewer than 1500 invited guests, officers and volunteers were at the merry meeting, which comprised a prize distribution and soiree as well as a ball, and the almost unprecedented enjoyment and harmony which marked the whole of the evening's proceedings were solely due to the untiring exertions of Bro. Henry Newman, Captain in the corps, who is well known as an indefatigable Volunteer and excellent Mason.

Amongst the large company were the following brethren: Bros. His Worship the Mayor (J. G. Livingston, Esq.), Major Bousfield, Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M. (surgeon to the corps), Dr. Slack, Dr. Keisch, Capt. Hargreaves, Capt. Boggs, Capt. Newman, Richard Morley, G. Dyke, John Macbeth, J. Wood, W. H. Molyneux, J. B. MacKenzie, &c.

After tea and the prize distribution (which was made in happy terms by Bro. Livingston), dancing was commenced and continued for several hours with the greatest spirit.

The supper for the officers and invited guests, and refreshments for the men were provided by Brother Wm. Thomson, of the George Hotel, Upper Pitt-street, his purveying giving complete satisfaction.

PROPOSED MASONIC HALL FOR LINCOLN.

Masonic halls are springing up throughout the country. The design for the new Masonic Hall for Lincoln, to be erected on the site recently purchased on the north side of Newland, has been decided on. The building will be commenced in the spring, and, in addition to the rooms to be used for Masonic purposes, will comprise a large assembly-room, or concert-hall, and other rooms and offices. The designs have been prepared by Bro. W. Watkins, architect, of that city. The ground-floor plan contains two entrances, each 9ft. wide. Between them is a room 24ft. square, to be used for sales or small meetings. Immediately behind this room, and approached from the right-hand entrance, is the large open staircase leading to the Masonic departments, which occupy the whole of the front or the first storey. Immediately behind the sale-room, and approached from the left-hand entrance (which will be the chief entrance to the public assembly-room), are cloak-rooms. Behind these are staircases leading to the galleries, which extend round three sides of the large assembly-room. This hall, which is 78ft. long, 32ft. wide, and 25ft. high, has an orchestra at the extreme end, 16ft. wide and 13ft. deep, to right and left of which are two green-rooms. Exclusive of the orchestra, the hall will seat 700 persons. The principal staircase, approached from the right-hand entrance, leads to the Masonic lodge, which consists of a reception-room, 24ft. by 18ft.; a porchway leading to the lodge-room, which latter is 36ft. by 24ft., and 22ft. high in the centre; and a preparation-room, together with stores for lodge furniture, &c. The building is designed in the Geometric style of Gothic architecture, and is intended (on certain conditions) to be a memorial of the late Dr. Oliver, and, with that view, provision is made in the centre of the front for a life-size statue of him, which will be placed upon a pedestal, supported by coupled polished granite columns, and surmounted by an ornamental traceried canopy. The front will be 45ft. wide, and 50ft. high from the pavement to the apex of the centre gable, which will be surmounted with the life-size figure of St. John. It is to be regretted that the design is for merely a front.—Builder.

FAITH LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—The above Lodge of Instruction is held every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the spacious and commodious rooms at Bro. Fisher's Restaurant, Metropolitan District Railway Station, Victoria, S.W. Ceremonies and lectures worked every Tuesday, except the third Tuesday in the month, when the ceremonies alone are rehearsed. The DOMATIC CHAPTER OF INSTRUCTION is also held in the above rooms every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, from October until April inclusive.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine—a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

REPORT OF Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina:—"I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. *Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

By BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

It is most unfortunate that so little is known of the history of Freemasonry in Ireland. Even its progress within the last few years in unchronicled, and the pages of Masonic magazines rarely contain anything relating to the Craft in the "Emerald Isle." Now this cannot be because THE FREEMASON and Freemasons' Magazine object to insert intelligence respecting the history of the Order in Ireland, but simply because no such information is afforded them. We presume this lamentable state of affairs is mainly due to the objection the revered and respected Grand Master, the Duke of Leinster, has to Masonic literature, and partly also from the fact that the chief Masons in Ireland appear little interested in the Fraternity as respects its universal and cosmopolitan character; and therefore it is not to be wondered at that few out of that country really know how the Order flourishes in Ireland, and few in the Isle are aware of the state of the Order elsewhere.

We suppose it would be for the members in Grand Lodge assembled to say whether they desire this inactive state to continue; and we consider the members should bestir themselves, and accept THE FREEMASON as their organ, as the Grand Masters of England and Scotland have already done. We say this much, not in a fault-finding spirit, but solely because of our interest in Freemasonry in Ireland, especially as we know there are many there who are "bright" Masons, and whose assistance and counsel would be invaluable to the Fraternity generally.

Bro. Findell remarks in his history (Asher and Co., London): "Before the year 1730 the history of Freemasonry in Ireland is enveloped in complete darkness; but from accounts handed down to us we are led to conclude that in that year it began to struggle into existence" (page 188). In another part this learned author remarks: "The information relating to the history of Irish Freemasonry is so scanty that a few remarks are all we have to offer" (page 409). These statements are endorsed by many who are familiar with Masonic history, and to such, as also to all Masonic students, we feel sure that any additional intelligence respecting the Order in that country will be gratefully received. We have just had forwarded to us a quantity of quarterly reports of the Grand Lodge of Ireland extending over a series of years, and many contain much that is of interest and value to those searching for light where there is so much darkness. We intend scanning them, and affording the readers of THE FREEMASON the benefit of our examination. We must premise, however, that though we lament the present state of the Order in Ireland so far as its being a part of the Craft universal is concerned, no Grand Lodge possesses a better "Council of Rites," or works more harmoniously with all the separate degrees and rites; and its laws are well framed, and only require obedience in the spirit, as well as the letter, to render it one of the best-managed and most flourishing Grand Lodges in the world.

By resolutions of the Grand Lodge Oct. 4, 1836, and on the 1st Feb., 1844, respectively, the following became law:—

1. "That the Grand Lodge recognise the Constitution of the Grand Council of Rites for Ireland, and act in unison with it, as with the Grand Royal Arch Chapter and Grand Conclave of High Knights Templars."
2. "That this Grand Lodge strictly prohibits as unlawful all assemblies of Freemasons in Ireland, under any title whatsoever, purporting to be Masonic, not held by virtue of a warrant or constitution from this Grand Lodge, or from the other Masonic bodies recognised by, and acting in unison with, the Grand Lodge of Ireland." We do not ourselves believe in any such agreement being made by the Grand Lodge with what are known as the "higher degrees." The Craft is concerned only with Craft Masonry, and should never recognise or have anything to do with aught else. What may be done without its sanction or independent of it is another question, but we submit a Craft Grand Lodge has no business to concern itself with the "higher degrees," as in reality it knows no superior, is complete in every sense, and requires neither additions nor alterations to render it the chief Masonic Body and the highest tribunal for Freemasons in the land. However, the recognition of these degrees is but nominal in Ireland, as it is provided that "no member of the Grand Lodge, or visitor thereto, shall be permitted to wear any jewel, medal, or device belonging to any order or degree beyond that of Master Mason, in which, however, the jewel of a P.M. is considered to be included."

The early history of the Craft in Ireland is involved in almost an impenetrable cloud. Whether there was ever a Prov. Grand Lodge at Munster A.D. 1726 we know not. At any rate, it is so stated, and in the absence of evidence we cannot do more than admit its probability, as there is every likelihood such was the case. There are documents held by some brother or brethren in Ireland that would throw light on this subject. They were once in the possession of the well-known Masonic publisher Bro. Spencer, and were inserted in a catalogue of his containing many valuable works. In the later editions, however, these have been omitted, and we understand they were published by an Irish Mason. We believe they were mostly the records of the Craft before removal from Cork to Dublin, and therefore before A.D. 1730. Bro. Findell is unable to give any information on the subject, and if these remarks are the means of drawing attention to them, and obtaining their publication for the assistance of Masonic students, we shall be amply repaid for the time we have devoted to the matter.

The Constitutions of A.D. 1730, published by J. Watts, Dublin, and edited by J. Pennell, are about to be reprinted by Bro. Spencer, with those of A.D. 1726 (MS.), 1723 (England), and 1722 (Operative). The edition of A.D. 1730 is mainly, however, as those published by the Grand Lodge of England A.D. 1723, and Bro. Findell informs us that the "old charges are the same as in the English edition, with the exception of charge vi., 2, where the passage unpalatable to Roman Catholic prejudices has been omitted."

The first Grand Master mentioned by Bro. Findell is Lord Kingston, A.D. 1730; the following, however, were the Grand Masters according to the official record. A.D. 1728, Hon. Colonel James O'Brien Grand Master, and Robert Longfield Deputy Grand Master; A.D. 1729, Right Hon. James King Lord Kingston, Grand Master. Lord Kingston was elected and installed Grand Master of England A.D. 1728, to whom the edition of Cole's Constitutions was dedicated (of which we issued a fac-simile lithograph in 1869).

Bro. John Pennell was the Grand Secretary A.D. 1730. By the same source we are informed that the Committee of Charity was established by the Grand Lodge A.D. 1738, being the same year in which Frederick the Great is declared to have been initiated.

We now come to the next edition of the Constitutions, of which we have an imperfect copy, and which is unnoticed, and apparently unknown to Irish Masons, and to Bro. Findell and others.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S INTEREST IN DOMESTIC MATTERS.—During the Fine Arts Exhibition at York, the Prince attentively watched a blind girl working a sewing machine with the utmost care and dexterity. So greatly was His Royal Highness interested that he repeatedly called the attention of the Princess to the operator, and her clever performance. After making several gracious inquiries respecting the blind girl, and ascertaining that the machine was one of the Wanzer manufacture, the Prince subsequently commanded that two of their celebrated family sewing machines should be sent to Marlborough House, and one to Sandringham Hall, in Norfolk. This pleasing incident, while it speaks loudly of the Prince's benevolent disposition, is no less emphatic of his reputed discernment and practical good sense in discovering and approving a machine which has justly obtained general preference over every other similar invention. We lately read in the Engineer a very clear description of this favourite household servant, which combines simplicity with perfection.—York Herald.

"The RELATION of ST. JOHN the EVANGELIST to FREEMASONRY."

ANSWER BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON.

There is another historic question, however, of no little importance. Were St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist regarded by Masons as their patron saints in the times when throughout Europe the worship of saints and a belief in the value of the patronage of saints were all but universal? This I believe to have been the case, and that from the Freemasons of the middle ages their successors of our own day have derived the use of the names of these saints in the designation of their lodges, and the practice of meeting on their festivals. And this I regard as affording a strong argument against the notion of the very recent origin of Freemasonry (the 1717 theory), or that—less in vogue at present—which ascribes the invention of the system to Elias Ashmole. How, indeed, can it be accounted for that zealous Protestants, in the middle of the seventeenth century or the beginning of the eighteenth, should inweave into a new system of their devising, so much that it might rather have been expected they would have sought to discard? The truth rather appears to be that they accepted these things as handed down to them from the past, although only modifying them so as to bring them into accordance with their own religious opinions. It is not much more easy to imagine Desaguliers and Anderson introducing the names of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist into connection with a system originated by themselves, than it would be to regard the Beltane fires and yule logs which were often kindled in Scotland, even since the days of the Reformation, as having been introduced by John Knox and his fellow-reformers. They were traditions of the ancient Paganism, which Christianity supplanted as to all its beliefs and rites, but not as to all the customs with which these were once connected, and which lingered to be interesting subjects of study to antiquaries. In like manner, the connection of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry must be traced to a time when their patronage was sought as powerful, although Freemasons who are Protestants reject this belief, and only contemplate their lives as worthy of admiration, their examples as fitted to encourage and incite to the practice of the highest virtues.

But what if we should deem it necessary to come to the conclusion that St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist had no connection with Freemasonry during their lives; or, which comes very much to the same thing, if we should find that alleged connection unsustained by any evidence sufficient to give it strong probability, must we therefore cast aside as worthless all idea of a relation between their names, and our Brotherhood, and remodel our system so far as no longer to take notice of them in any way in our lodges? By no means. It is to the honour of Freemasonry that it keeps these names continually in prominence before the Brotherhood, and calls to the imitation of their virtues. It is in this point of view that the existence of a relation between them and Freemasonry is of real importance, and it is of comparatively little consequence when that relation was established, or when the Freemasons first began to recognise them as their patron saints. To this, therefore, it was that I chiefly directed attention in the article which Bro. Evans has thought worthy of so lengthy a criticism. "The fact," says Bro. Evans, "that St. John taught the love doctrine, and inculcated fraternity nearly two thousand years ago, and in a country which, if it knows anything of Freemasonry to-day, received it from England, or from some organisation that did receive it from England, is no evidence of his relationship to Freemasonry, which also entertains and is based upon the principles of fraternity." I hold a very different opinion: that St. John the Evangelist did in his day much to diffuse what Bro. Evans calls "the love doctrine," and to promote the recognition of the principle of fraternity amongst men, must surely be deemed sufficient to establish a relation between him and those whose very bonds of union were fraternity and love, so that they may be expected to regard his memory with special respect, and think of him with a feeling which, if he were now actually present among us, would be fitly designed as love.

The case of Confucius, which Bro. Evans proceeds to introduce for the purpose of sustaining his argument, is by no means a parallel one, although probably, as Bro. Evans says "that Chinese sage taught truths which Freemasons accept, and which may be found exemplified in Masonic rituals and lectures," because there is far more argument between the teaching of St. John and that of Freemasonry than between the latter and the teaching of Confucius. It is in vain, therefore, that Bro. Evans asks, with an air of triumph, "What intelligent man or Mason will pretend that Confucius had any actual relationship, as a person, with Freemasonry?" His argument fails here also:—First, because such relationship, in the case of Confucius, has never been asserted, whereas in the case of St. John it has; and, secondly, because it is not chiefly on the ground of this assertion, which is to be tried by mere historic evidence, that an important relation is regarded as now subsisting between Freemasonry and the name and memory of St. John.

I have already commented on Bro. Evan's strong denunciation of all who admit the idea of saints' patronage as unworthy to be reckoned amongst intelligent men. On this subject nothing remains to be said, but that where religious opinions are involved, it behoves all Christians to express themselves with charity even concerning those whose opinions they feel bound most strenuously to oppose. Many an acute and powerful mind has accepted as matters of implicit faith those doctrines of the Church of Rome which Protestants deem equally contrary to reason and Scripture. I do not hold this to afford any argument, even of the weakest presumptive kind, in favour of their opinions; but, on the other hand, I cannot, on account of my dislike to their opinions, refuse to acknowledge high and noble qualities which they display. However marvellous the fact may seem in some of its aspects, there can be no doubt that many intelligent men are to be found amongst Mahomedans, Brahmans, Parsees, &c., &c., and that much ingenuity has been shown by some of them in framing arguments to repel the attacks of Christians upon their various religions. But Bro. Evan's says, "This harping on St. John the Evangelist, Baptist, or Almoner, is evil, and only evil; as our expression of that sectarianizing influence so rife now in England and America—which every believer in cosmopolitan Freemasonry must deeply mourn the presence of—with increasing activity within the borders of our Institution." I am somewhat at a loss to make out the drift of this sentence. Freemasonry is cosmopolitan, indeed, and admits into its membership men of all various religious opinions who profess their belief in God and a future state; but are Masonic lodges in a Christian country therefore to put away from them everything which may possibly be construed into a recognition of Christianity? for to this and nothing less it amounts to stigmatise as sectarianizing the reference to names such as those which Bro. Evans has specified. The Bible is always to be seen on the altar of a lodge; must this also be given up so that we may appear as men of no religion? And what then would remain to remind ourselves in all our meetings, and to show forth to all who behold us in public solemnities the great first principles of religion, which are essential to true Freemasonry wherever it may exist upon the earth. On similar grounds, to be thoroughly unsectarian—in the sense in which I am afraid I must regard Bro. Evans as employing the word "sectarianizing"—it would be necessary for us to cease from appointing Chaplains, and to cease from hallowing our meetings and our works by prayer.

As to "the story of St. John the Evangelist accepting the Grand Mastership in Freemasonry when he was ninety years old or thereabouts," which Bro. Evans describes as a "long-ago exploded fable and baseless legend," he does not seem to have duly observed that I only mention it as a story which has been related by ancient and eminent Masonic authority. It seemed that my article would have been incomplete without some reference to it. Bro. Evans says that, by narrating this story as I have done, I have conferred upon him the right to challenge me, "in the interests of archæology itself, and of the readers of THE FREEMASON also," to give in the columns of THE FREEMASON the name of that ancient and eminent Masonic authority. He saves me the trouble, however, of answering his challenge, although made with such flourish of trumpets, by the words which he himself employ when he designates it a "long-ago exploded fable and baseless legend." He does not seem to be aware that he thus admits all that I have stated, unless it be that the Masonic authority from which it is derived is eminent. Bro. Evans may satisfy himself on this point by pursuing his own investigations a little, or I will do so, if he shows what right he has to assail me as if I were purposely or wantonly endeavouring to mislead the readers of THE FREEMASON on this subject. That the story has been related is certain enough; upon what authority it ultimately rests I would be as glad as any of your readers to ascertain; and perhaps some help would be afforded to this through the previous researches of others, if Bro. Evans were to state how long ago it was exploded, and by whom.

As the name of St. John the Almoner may not be familiar to some of the readers of THE FREEMASON, perhaps it may be proper to mention that he was Patriarch of Alexandria in the beginning of the seventh century. He was raised to the patriarchate in A.D. 608, when he was upwards of fifty years of age, and held that high ecclesiastical office till his death in A.D. 619. He was particularly distinguished for his charity to the poor, denying himself, not only the luxuries, but even the ordinary comforts of life in order to relieve their necessities.

BY BRO. C. G. FORSVYTH.

The first legal enactment which we find is an old one of 34 of Edward III. c. 9. that has any bearing with regard to Masons, wherein it is declared that all alliances and covins of masons and carpenters, and congregations, chapters, ordinances, and oaths between them made shall be void. In the twenty-third year of that reign there was a great pestilence, and in consequence of which the first Statute of Labourers was passed (23 of Edward III., followed by 25th Edward, st. 1., cap. 4), there being a scarcity of servants of all descriptions from the mortality that had taken place among them and those that survived endeavoured to get excessive wages; those forbidden meeting were probably thought to have for their object in part a monopoly of trade and combination for keeping up the price of labour. This was supposed to be the case also in 1425, when the Act of 3 Henry VI., c. 1. was passed, as the preamble states, that by the congregations and confederacies made by Masons in their general assemblies the good course and effect of the Statute of Labourers was openly violated and broken, wherefore, "Chapiters and congregacions shall be punyshed as felons, and other Masons comynge to the same shal be impryoned, and make fyne and ransome at the Kynges wyll." This statute, however, does not seem to have been acted on, and Henry VI. is said to have been himself initiated when he came to manhood. Wherever Freemasons are mentioned in any of the statutes or ordinances respecting wages, they are classed with the highest rates, and in some instances higher than any other artificers. Leaving St. Alban altogether out of the question (who, according to the manuscript before-mentioned, allowed the Masons 3s. 6d. per week), one of the earliest statements respecting their wages appears in a roll of expenses of King Edward I., at Rhuddland Castle, in Wales, in the tenth and eleventh year of his reign. In this account sundry payments are charged to Masons (commentarii) on the following scale:—The Master Mason, 6d. per diem; the other Masons, 4d.; and workmen, 3d. In 1351 wages were lower, and this, too, was just after the pestilence; a Master Mason, by the day, 3d.; other Masons or Tilers, 2d.; and their servants or boys, 1½d. In a petition from the House of Commons, presented A.D. 1445, in the 23rd of Henry VI., to regulate wages, which was granted and converted into a law, it is prayed that with respect to Masons, &c., “Yat from the Fest of Ester unto Mighelmesse ye wages of euy fre mason or maister carpenter excede not by the day iii d., withe mete and drynke; and without mete and drynke, v d. ob. A Maister Tyler or Sclatter, rough maister and meen carpenter, and other artificiers concernynge bildynge, by the day, iii d. ob;” and from Michaelmas to Easter the Master Masons and carpenters one halfpenny less by the day. In 1446, from Easter to Michaelmas, a Free Mason, with diet, by the day, 4d., without, 5½d.; a master tiler, rough Mason, slater, by the day, with diet, 3d., without diet, 4½d.; from Michaelmas to Easter, one penny by the day less. By 6th of Henry VIII., c. 3, it is ordered that “A Free Mason, mayster carpenter, rough mason, bryklayer, mayster tiler, plommer, glasyer, caruer, and ioyner from Ester to Mighelmas to take by the day vid., withoute mete, and withe mete, iii d.; and from Mighelmas to Ester, withoute mete, v d., and withe mete, iii d.” In the regulations for the wages for artificiers, made 28th of May, 1610, by the Justices of Okeham, in the county of Rutland, and which would be similar to those throughout the rest of the country, they allow,

With meat. Without meat.

A Free Mason which draws his plotwork and set accordingly, having charge over others before Michaelmas, by the day	8d.	12d.
After Michaelmas ...	6	10
A rough mason, which can take charge of others, before Michaelmas ...	5	10
After Michaelmas ...	4	8
By similar regulations for Warwickshire, in 36 of Charles II., the allowances are for—
A Freemason ...	6d.	1s. 4d.
A master brickmason	6	1 0
Their servants and apprentices, above eighteen ...	4	8

From the middle of September to the middle of March one penny by the day to be abated off the wages above specified. There is a tradition of Queen Elizabeth that being jealous of the Masons being in possession of peculiar secrets which they would not divulge, she sent an armed force to York to break up the Grand Lodge, but that Sir Thomas Sackville, the Grand Master, interposed, and procured the initiation of some of the principal officers, who consequently made such a favourable report of the Society that she countermanded her intended persecution. Under superintendence of Inigo Jones, the Fraternity prospered, and held regular assemblies, and many gentlemen were initiated. But not long after his Grand Mastership, the civil dissensions in the kingdom commenced, which caused great interruption to Freemasonry, though in the midst of them the origin of the Free and Accepted Masons, or Speculative Masonry, appears to have taken place, although it did not become fully established for some time. Elias Ashmole was made a Mason at Warrington in 1646. At the same time, a Society of Rosicrucians had been formed in London, founded partly on the principles of those established in Germany in 1604, and partly on, perhaps, the plan of the Literary Society, allegorically described in Bacon's “New Atlantis” as the House of Solomon. Among other emblems they made use of the sun, moon, compasses, square, triangle, &c. Ashmole and some of his friends—literary characters—belonged to this society, which met in the Masons' Hall, as well as the Masons, and they revised and added to the peculiar emblems and ceremonies of the latter, which were simple, and had been handed down to them through many ages. They substituted a method of initiation founded in part on the knowledge of the pagan mysteries and rites, and partly on the system of the Rosicrucians; and retaining, probably, in somewhat varied form the whole or greater part of the old Masonic secrets, and hence arose the first degree or Apprentice of Free and Accepted or Speculative Masonry, which was shortly after followed by the Fellow Craft degree. The Master's is said to have been invented during the Commonwealth, with reference to the unhappy fate of Charles I.; but there is no sufficient proof of this, and it is more likely to be of more recent origin, and that for some time none were recognised as Master Masons until they had filled the chair of a lodge. These innovations of Ashmole were not, perhaps, immediately adopted by the Fraternity in general, but Speculative Masonry gradually increased, and mingled with Operative Masonry until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when it was agreed, in order to support the Fraternity, which had been on the decline: “That the privileges of Masonry should no longer be restricted to Operative Masons, but extend to men of various professions, provided that they were regularly approved and initiated into the Order.” This had the effect of rendering Freemasonry still more a speculative society, as it entirely became a few years later. In the meantime, since the initiation of Elias Ashmole, two kings, who were Freemasons had reigned, viz., Charles II. and William III., and Sir Christopher Wren had succeeded to the Grand Mastership, and presided over the old Lodge of St. Paul's, now represented by the Lodge of Antiquity. This lodge has in its possession, among other relics, the mallet with which Charles II. laid the foundation-stone of St. Paul's Cathedral in 1673. In the year 1718 Sir Christopher Wren, then aged 86, was superseded as Surveyor of the King's Buildings by Mr. William Benson. A great number of Masons in London, disgusted at this treatment of their Grand Master, refused to act in conjunction with the new officers, particularly as some new innovations were introduced into the Craft in 1717, as will be hereafter mentioned, which did not meet with their approbation. They accordingly, with a number of country lodges, declared themselves to be acting under the old lodge at York, where the Grand Lodge under this system, which was now called Ancient Masonry (as they professed to keep inviolate all the ancient landmarks of the Order), was now established and supported, and for many years no friendly intercourse subsisted between them and the Grand Lodge of London, or of the Modern Masons as the Ancients called them. These last, however, flourished, and added to their number many men of rank and fortune. The Ancient Masons removed their Grand Lodge in 1757 to London, the Earl of Blesington being chosen Grand Master. For many subsequent years the schism continued between the two societies until 1813, when a union was happily effected between them under the auspices of the Dukes of Kent and Sussex, their respective Grand Masters. The Duke of Athol, who for fifty years previously had presided over them (the Ancients, thence called frequently the Athole Masons), having resigned in favour of the Duke of Kent for the express purpose of facilitating the union. Sir Christopher Wren vacated the office of Grand Master before he was superseded as Surveyor of the King's Buildings, but no successor was immediately appointed, and the meetings of the society were much neglected. Several of the London Masons, in opposition to those, as we already mentioned who ranged themselves under the York banner, endeavoured to renew the assemblies, and revive the Fraternity. They met accordingly (including the only four lodges in the south of England) in 1717, to make such arrangements as they thought were requisite, and appointed a Grand Master. Dr. Desaguliers, who was appointed to that office 1719, took great interest in their proceedings, and revised and introduced some alterations in the usages of the Craft for these brethren, which were the more readily received in order to make some slight distinction between themselves and the Ancient Masons. Each party, however, probably preserved the original emblems of the society, differing only in those ceremonies of recent introduction. At the same time the peculiar signs of the Masons were revived or arranged, and from this period may be dated the establishment of the present system of Freemasonry in London, and the commencement of its authentic annals. Searches and enquiries were also made for any records or manuscripts relating to the origin or doctrine of the society for the purpose of compilation, but several valuable papers were destroyed for fear of divulging too much to the uninitiated. The spread of Speculative Masonry from this time, both at home and abroad, is so generally known that I think that any more on this subject from me will be unnecessary; therefore, I hope in finishing this series that it has been of some little benefit to a few of the readers of THE FREEMASON.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

The Lodge of Temperance, No. 169.—This lodge held its usual meeting at the White Swan Tavern, High-street, Deptford, on Thursday evening, the 19th January. Bro. John Thomas Moss, W.M., in the chair, supported by his officers as follows: Bros. Alfred Pulley, S.W.; W. P. Marshall, J.W.; J. W. Barrett, P.M., Treas.; J. Rosenstock, S.D.; T. K. Tippett, J.D.; and T. Littlecott, I.G. The lodge was opened in due form, the previous minutes were read and confirmed, and Mr. Thos. Richard Biggs Debac was regularly initiated into the Order by the W.M. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. George Bolton, P.M., then installed Bro. Alfred Pulley into the chair of K.S. The necessary formalities were proceeded with, and the installation was completed in a most impressive manner according to ancient usages, the charges being given by Bro. Bolton with excellent taste. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers in the following order: Bros. W. P. Marshall, S.W.; J. Rosenstock, J.W.; T. K. Tippett, S.D.; T. Littlecott, J.D.; J. Dingle, I.G.; and J. W. Barrett, P.M., Treas. After the appointment of the officers, the W.M. then presented Bro. John Thos. Moss, I.P.M., with a Past Master's jewel, which had been voted unanimously by the lodge at their last meeting. The brethren having adjourned to the banquet, after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the W.M. expressed his thanks to Bro. George Bolton, P.M., for the services he had rendered that evening as the Installing Master, and it was now suggested that at the next meeting the thanks of the whole lodge should be given to Bro. George Bolton for the impressive manner he had rendered the ceremony, and that the resolution should be entered on the minutes. Bro. Bolton, in responding, expressed his gratification at the kind feeling evinced by the lodge, and his desire at all times to be of assistance to the members of the lodge. The lodge then broke up after a most pleasant evening. Visitors: Bros. Dille, W.M. 1155; Smith, W.M. Sydney Lodge; Swain, 831; and Combs, 548.

Euphrates Lodge, No. 212.—The installation meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Masons' Hall, Masons' Avenue, Basinghall-street, on the 25th ult. The ceremony was beautifully rendered by Bro. F. M. Stean, a very old member of the lodge. Several initiations, passings, and raisings were effectively done by the W.M., after which Bro. S. W. Franks was installed in the chair of K.S., and appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Field, S.W.; Hammond, J.W.; Rushton, S.D.; Thompson, J.D.; Dent, I.G. The lodge was afterwards closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren, amongst whom were many visitors, adjourned to an excellent banquet where everything was of the choicest description. The usual honourable toasts were drank and the evening was joyfully spent in mirth and harmony.

Fitzroy Lodge, No. 569.—This celebrated lodge held its installation meeting at the head-quarters of the Honourable Artillery Company, Finsbury-square, on Friday, January 27th, Bro. Peter Gowland, M.D., W.M., presiding. There were also present: Bros. W. Jolliffe, S.W.; P. Matthews, P.M., Treas.; J. Egles, P.M., Sec.; J. C. Daniel, J.D.; L. J. Drew, I.G.; H. J. Adams, R. Helshan, T. Wilson, and J. W. Long, P.M.'s; J. Dyer, C. J. Watson, G. Smith, J. B. Fawcett, R. G. Webster, F. W. Barker, W. H. Honey, T. J. H. Wilkins, W. H. Main, A. Bashford, Hall, J. H. Stevens, F. Graves, W. L. Holt, R. Palmer, W. T. Spicer, R. J. Jenkins, J. M. Gerrard, &c. Amongst a large number of visitors we noticed: Bros. S. C. Hadley, P.M. 1; J. A. Rivington, P.G.P. Oxon, 357; E. Ransford, P.G.O.; F. A. Philbrick, W.M.-elect 18; E. Triggess, 14; H. V. Rawlings, 11; C. H. Pook, P.P.G.S.B. Herts, P.M. 869; E. H. Pinney, 478; J. W. Hughes, 95; M. Edwards, 218; J. Dale, P.M. 11; R. J. Chappell, S.W. 7; T. W. White, J.W. 21; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; T. Kingston, 862; W. Gore, 917; H. St. John Ingram Scay, 860; D. W. Pentecost, 231; &c. The work done was initiating Mr. J. M. Garrard and passing Bro. R. G. Webster, these ceremonies being rendered in such a correct and impressive manner as to be very pleasing to all who were fortunate enough to be present. The W.M., Bro. P. Gowland, having been re-elected, the usual installation ceremony was dispensed with; but Bro. P. Matthews proclaimed and had him saluted in the three degrees as W.M. for the ensuing year. The W.M. then appointed his officers for this year as follows: Bros. Jackson, S.W.; Daniel, J.W.; P. Matthews, P.M., Treas. (re-invested); J. Eglese, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); Watson, S.D.; Honey, J.D.; Dyer, I.G.; T. Wilson, P.M., D.C.; and T. Hoare, P.G.S., Tyler (re-invested). Bro. J. Eglese gave the charges to the Wardens and the brethren in his usual correct and impressive manner. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation at the next meeting, and the lodge was duly closed. The brethren then partook of an excellent banquet and dessert, during which and for the remainder of the evening Bro. T. Wilson was indefatigable in his exertions to make all happy and comfortable.

British Oak Lodge, No. 831.—The installation meeting of this properous lodge was held on Monday, the 31st of January, at the Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile-end. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. One gentleman was initiated into the Order. Bro. D. Scurr, P.M. 933, installed Bro. Barnett, W.M., who appointed his officers. Bro. D. Scurr then resumed the chair, and raised three brothers to the third degree, all the ceremonies being well and ably done, after which the lodge was closed. A good banquet and dessert followed, Bro. Heckell, P.M., Sec., being, as usual, unremitting in his exertions to make all present happy and comfortable. Amongst a large number of visitors were Bros. Barnes, G. Brown, F. Walters, and D. Scurr.

MIDDLESEX.

Burdett Lodge, No. 1293.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 28th ultimo, at the Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court. The Audit Committee met previously, and the lodge was then opened Bro. R. Wentworth Little, P.M., Prov. G. Sec., the Treasurer and W.M.-elect, when the minutes were unanimously confirmed. Bro. Phythian was then examined as a candidate for the second degree, and the arrival of the W.M., R.W. Bro. Colonel F. Burdett, Prov. G. Master, being announced, the Acting Master directed the brethren to receive him with all the honours due to his high station—a command which was most cheerfully obeyed, as all the brethren were delighted to see their worthy W.M. in Freemasonry again, it being Colonel Burdett's first appearance at any meeting since his recent severe illness. The W.M. then took the chair, and Bro. Phythian was passed to the second degree. The arrival of the V.W. Bro. John Hervey, P.S.G.D., G. Sec. of England, who had kindly undertaken to install the W.M.-elect, was then reported in due form, and the V.W. Brother being thereupon requested to assume the chair, proceeded with the beautiful ceremony of installation, for which purpose Bro. Little was presented by his predecessor, the Prov. G. Master. After the re-admission of the brethren, and the usual salutes, the W.M. invested the officers as follows: Bro. R. Kenyon, S.W.; G. Kenning, J.W.; Rev. D. Shaboe, Prov. G. Chap., Chap.; H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treas., Treas.; W. H. Hubbard, Sec.; Major H. W. Palmer, S.D.; D. R. Still, J.D.; A. B. Donnithorne, I.G.; H. W. Wickens, D.C.; and J. Weaver, Org. The addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren were then splendidly delivered by Bros. Hervey and James Brett, G. Purs. A Past Master's jewel, which is to bear the arms of the Burdett family—to whose ancient title and estates Colonel Burdett is the presumptive heir—was voted by acclamation to the retiring Master, and the lodge was closed. The brethren then sat down to the banquet, under the hram of Bro. Little, W.M., who was supported by R.W. Bro. Burdett, V.W. Bro. Hervey, W. Bros. J. Brett, Rev. D. Shaboe, H. G. Buss, R. S. Banning, P.G. Steward of England; G. Kenning, Prov. G. Steward; W. H. Hubbard, J. Weaver, W. West Smith, and R. Boney; Bros. Major E. H. Finney, Major H. W. Palmer, A. B. Donnithorne, H. W. Wickens, R. Kotzenberg, and C. Sissons. After the cloth was cleared, the usual toasts were given, Bros. Hervey and Brett responding for the Grand Officers, Bro. Banning for the visitors, and Bros. Shaboe and Buss for the Prov. Grand Officers, and the utmost enthusiasm prevailed in honour of the occasion. "The health of the Prov. G. Master" was proposed in highly appreciative terms by the G. Secretary, and Bro. Colonel Burdett expressed his thanks to the brethren for the sincerity and warmth of their reception of the toast. "The health of the W.M." was greeted with every demonstration of approval, and after several choice recitations and songs by Bros. Brett, West Smith, and Wickens, the toasts of the evening were brought to a close, and the brethren, for the most part, returned to town, highly delighted with the harmony and success which had marked the first anniversary of the Burdett Lodge.

PROVINCIAL.

WHITEHAVEN.—Lodge Sun, Square and Compasses, No. 119.—The brethren of this lodge celebrated their annual festival in the Masonic Hall, College-street, on the 16th ult. They were joined by a large number of the members of Lodge 872, and also by brethren representing neighbouring lodges. Bro. Edward Fearon, W.M., was supported by Bros. Greaves P.D.P.G.M.; Crowther Morton, W.M. Kenlis Lodge; James Robertson, W.M. 872; H. Cook, W. B. Gibson, John Spittal, J. M'Kelvie, White, George Kenworthy, and Barr, P.M.'s; &c., &c. The vice-chairs were occupied by Bro. Windross, S.W., and Bro. Henry, J.W. The dinner was a most excellent one, and on the removal of the cloth the customary loyal and Masonic toasts were appropriately given and heartily received.—Bro. Kenworthy returned thanks for the Prov.

G. Officers.—Bro. Gibson, at the request of the W.M., proposed "The Health of the P.D.P.G.M., Bro. Greaves, and in doing so said that the fact of Bro. Greaves having occupied the high position of Deputy Provincial Grand Master for the long period of between fourteen and fifteen years proved that he must have been well qualified to hold office. During the period referred to, the Prov. G.M. was not present with them for a considerable time, and in his absence the whole business of the province devolved upon Bro. Greaves. From that time, he (Bro. Gibson) might say Freemasonry in Cumberland began to spread, and he especially noticed a regular and steady increase in the attendance of members of the Prov. Grand Lodge. In addition, Bro. Greaves worked hard in securing the election of candidates for the Masonic charities. Scarcely a year passed without Cumberland securing the election of one or more candidates. Whitehaven had particular reason to feel proud of Bro. Greaves. About twenty years ago, Lodge 119 was in the lowest depths of poverty and distress. Two or three members kept the lodge together; and in course of time it became necessary that these poor members should have something done for them, and in that emergency they all knew how kindly Bro. Greaves interested himself in their behalf, and how warmly he had ever since been attached to the lodges in this part of the province.—Bro. Greaves, in a very feeling speech, returned thanks. He said that in his early connexion with Lodge 119 it was certainly at a very low ebb, but after a short series of years it had become one of the most powerful and numerous lodges in the province; and while he could not help regarding Lodge 119 as the corner-stone of Freemasonry in this division of the province, he at the same time regarded it as one of the chief means whereby the province itself had acquired the name it now enjoyed, not only throughout the north but elsewhere, for they would find that it had likewise made its mark in the south of England.—Bro. Wicks in flattering terms proposed the health of their much-respected W.M.—Bro. Fearden, after suitably thanking the brethren for the very hearty reception given to the toast, went on to say that from the first day he was made a Mason he took a peculiar liking to Freemasonry, and was determined to master all the lessons of instruction and to make himself proficient in the ancient art. As a result of his perseverance, he had risen in seven years from the lowest office to the highest that he could possibly attain to in the lodge of which he was a member. He had during that time taken every pains to fathom the secrets of Masonry, and yet such were the hidden mysteries of the art, that he felt that he was not one-half, nor one quarter, at the summit of that steep whereon the bright temple of Freemasonry so illustriously shone, and where it would continue to shine "brighter and brighter until the perfect day." No matter how much any of them might know, they would find that in Freemasonry there was always something fresh to learn, and perhaps one of the best means of perfecting themselves in the art was visiting neighbouring lodges.—After several other toasts and some excellent speeches, which want of space compels us to omit, the brethren separated, having enjoyed themselves immensely. During the evening some songs and glees were capitially sung by Bros. E. G. Hughes, Franklin, Fears, &c., Bro. Cooper most ably presiding at the pianoforte.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Lodge, No. 200.—This lodge held its annual installation meeting on Wednesday, the 18th ultimo, in the lodge-rooms, Globe-street. The W.M., Bro. R. H. Peacock, was in his place, supported by his officers and a very large assembly of P.M.'s, members, and visitors, numbering in all about fifty. The lodge was opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. One gentleman was balloted for, and having been unanimously elected, was admitted and initiated by Bro. W. Peacock, I.P.M., in a very impressive manner. Two brethren were passed to the second degree, and two other brethren raised to the sublime degree of Master Masons by Bros. Rooke and Williamson, P.M.'s, in their usual very impressive manner. Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M., P.P.G.S.W., now took the reins of office as Installing Master. Bro. Williamson, P.M., presented Bro. David Fletcher, S.W. and W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation, and the usual questions having been read over and answered by Bro. Fletcher, he was installed in a very careful and impressive manner, when he appointed the following brethren as his officers: Bros. R. H. Peacock, I.P.M.; G. H. Walshaw, S.W.; J. W. Taylor, M.D., J.W.; J. W. Woodall, P.M., Treas.; H. C. Martin, P.M., Sec. (the Treas. and the Sec. being re-invested for the seventh time uninterruptedly); J. W. Teale, S.D.; W. Milner, J.D.; G. B. Thackeray, Org.; J. S. Cook, I.G.; and J. Ash, Tyler. It was unanimously agreed to purchase an organ for lodge use. Bro. Hanks, P.M. 643, gave an invitation to the members of the Old Globe, as a return compliment, to attend the annual installation of his lodge on the second Monday in February; and Bro. Rooke, P.M. and W.M.-elect of the Denison Lodge (1248), gave a similar return invitation. The lodge was then closed in due form, and about forty brethren, including many visitors, sat down to one of Bro. J. A. Chapman's sumptuous and excellent banquets. The usual routine toasts were proposed and drunk with all due honours, the W.M. being selected for a very high and deserving compliment, to which he responded in a very fraternal manner. "Mine Host and Miss Chapman," of whom for courtesy and kindness too much cannot be said, was most enthusiastically received, and responded to by Bro. Chapman for himself and sister in true old English and Yorkshire style. At low 12 an evening's real enjoyment was brought to a close, and the brethren retired with a feeling of real satisfaction and fraternal good will.

BOLTON.—St. John's Lodge, No. 221.—The annual meeting for installation of the W.M., and celebrating the festival of St. John the Evangelist, was held on Wednesday, the 18th January, at the Commercial Hotel. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. E. C. Gilbert, assisted by his officers. The minutes of the preceding meeting having been confirmed, a Board of Installed Masters was formed under the presidency of Bro. Thos. Entwisle, when the W.M.-elect, Bro. William Green, was presented, and thereupon obligated, installed, proclaimed, and saluted in ancient form. Bro. G. P. Brockbank, P.M., was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. William Dawson re-elected Tyler for the ensuing year. The following brethren were also invested with the collar and badge of office: Samuel Mitchell, S.W.; Wm. Hewitt, J.W.; James Fitznewton, Sec.; W. H. J. Jones, S.D.; Robert Gomie, J.D.; J. M. Rutter, I.G.; Peter Staton, Org.; M. Entwisle, Dir. of Cer.; and Charles Stanley and Ralph Winward, Stewards. The charge to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren was rendered with great efficiency by the Installing Master. A cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Egerton C. Gilbert for the able, urbane, and very satisfactory manner in which he had conducted the proceedings of the lodge during the past year, and the interest he had taken in its welfare from his initiation to the present period. Bro. Gilbert was at the same time presented with a Past Master's jewel by the senior Past Master present, on behalf of the lodge, as a testimony of their approbation of his conduct as W.M.—Bro. Gilbert, in appropriate terms, expressed his gratification at the honour conferred upon him, and tendered his hearty thanks to the brethren for their kindness in this and in other matters, and for their constant and uniform good feeling towards him.—Bro. G. P. Brockbank then asked the lodge to accept as a souvenir of his connexion with them (extending now to a period of twenty-five years) a silver chain, to be worn, as directed by the Book of Constitutions, over the ordinary collar of the W.M. The chain is composed of thirty links, the monogram, 221, and the eagle, symbolic of St. John, to whom the lodge is dedicated, being placed alternately. Suspended from the chain is the square within a circle, and the crest of the donor; and pendant therefrom a Masonic silver eagle. The lodge-room was filled with the members and visitors, amongst whom were Bros. Tunnah, Prov. G. Sec.; Reuben Mitchell, P.P.G.S.B.; W. H. Pratt, 1009; Provis, 1052; J. Gibb Smith, W.M. 44 (who wore the silver collar formerly the property of the Anchor and Hope Lodge, No. 37, Bolton, and presented by them to their Manchester brethren on the occasion of the re-numbering of the lodges); and the following members of the senior lodge of the province, No. 37: Bros. J. Pickington, J.W.; John Sharples, Treas.; William Slater, S.D.; Newton, Blain, and Brown; also Bros. Makin, S.W. 348, and Horrocks, J.W. 348. Bro. Brockbank, Treas., who is serving this year as Steward for the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, &c., advocated the claims of this charity, and the sum of £20 was added to his list by private donations of the brethren of the lodge, making a total amount promised in Bolton of £134. Hearty good wishes were given by the members of the various lodges present, and the lodge was closed in due form. The customary banquet was celebrated at the conclusion of business, and the usual toasts proposed and responded to. The evening's pleasure was considerably enhanced by the vocal entertainments afforded by Bros. Entwisle, Taylor, Rutter, Smedley, the recitations of Bro. Pratt and Provis, and the skilful manipulation of the harmonium by Bro. Staton, Organist of the lodge.

HEBDEN BRIDGE.—Prince Frederick Lodge, No. 307.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 9th ult., at the White Horse Hotel. The lodge was opened in the first degree at 6.15 p.m. by Bro. Roberts, W.M., assisted by his officers, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when the chair was taken by Bro. Isaac Booth, P.M. No. 61, P.P.G.S. of W., who attended this meeting for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect, Bro. Gamaliel Sutcliffe, who now took his obligation, having been presented for that purpose to the installing officer. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and a Board of Installed Masters opened, when Bro. Sutcliffe was duly installed W.M. of No. 307 for the ensuing year. The brethren who had retired were then readmitted, and saluted the new W.M. in the various degrees in the usual form, after which the W.M. proceeded to invest the officers for the ensuing year, as follows:—Bros. Austin Roberts, I.P.M.; Richard Worsick, S.W.; Thomas Whitaker, J.W.; Lewis Crabtree, P.M., Treas.; William Gibson, P.M., Sec.; Richard Whitaker, S.D.; James Winterbottom, J.D.; David Heap, P.M., I.G.; James Dewhurst, Tyler. The only visitors present, in addition to Bro. Booth, were Bro. Richard Jessop, 448, and Bro. William Cooke, P.M. 1302. There being no other business to transact, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet-room, where, after having refreshed the inner man, the remainder of the evening was spent in a very harmonious manner.

MORLEY.—Lodge of Integrity, No. 380.—The annual Festival of St. John was duly held in this old Yorkshire lodge on Wednesday, the 18th ult., under the chairmanship of the respected W.M., Bro. G. T. Bedford, when the following officers and brethren attended:—Bro. J. Sykes, S.W.; Wm. Oakes, J.W.; Atkinson, Sec.; L. Hirst, S.D.; F. Tesson, J.D.; M. Rhodes, Steward; Dr. Hirst, Treas.; and William Smith, H. Bradley, O. Watson, J. Rayner, G. Perkin, P.M.'s; W. Hirst, J. Peel, Jackson, L. Hobson, N. Wood, E. Hellwell. Visitors: Bros. Rev. H. Williams and Nichols. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given from the chair, Bro. Dr. Hirst, the Immediate Past Master, in feeling terms, proposed "The Health of the W.M. and Officers," which was ably responded to by them. The other principal toasts were "The Stewards of the Building Committee," ably responded to by Bros. Perkin and Jowett in appropriate terms; "The Visitors," responded to by Bros. Williams and Nichols; and the Tyler's toast, by Bro. C. Thorburn. After dinner, a collection (as customary) was made for the Fund of Aged and Decayed Masons, which was liberally responded to by the brethren. Great credit is due to the outgoing Stewards for the manner in which the dinner was provided. The musical arrangements were under the direction of the worthy J.W., Bro. Oakes, ably assisted by Bros. H. Bradley, G. Jowett, Atkinson, L. Hirst, and F. Tesson. The brethren separated in peace and harmony at 10.30 p.m. We may add, for the information of those brethren who have not visited this old Yorkshire lodge, that in two years some fifteen of the brethren have raised a spacious temple, which for elegance, comfort, and convenience cannot be surpassed by any in the province, and that this lodge has on its books, out of forty-five members, some eighteen P.M.'s. Great regret was expressed that some of the oldest members of the lodge, through stress of weather, could not be present, especially Bros. Perkin, Helliwell, and Dixon, the founders of the lodge.

HALIFAX—St. James's Lodge, No. 448.—On Tuesday, the 10th ult., the members of this lodge celebrated the Festival of St. John the Evangelist. The lodge having been opened in the first degree by Bro. Lupton, W.M., and the usual routine business transacted, the lodge was opened in the second degree, when the chair was taken by Bro. G. Normanton, P.M., P.P.J.G.D., who had been invited to perform the ceremony of installation. The W.M.-elect, Bro. Joseph Ibberson, having been presented to the installing officer, and given his assent to the ancient regulations, the lodge was opened in the third degree, and a Board of Installed Masters formed, when Bro. Ibberson was duly placed in the chair of K.S. by the installing officer. The brethren below the chair were then readmitted, and the new W.M. at once commenced his duties by investing the officers for the ensuing year, as follows:—Bros. Wilkinson, S.W.; Farrar, J.W.; Milligan, Treas.; Charnock, P.M., Sec.; Matthewman, S.D.; Rawlings, J.D.; Mills, D. of C.; Wheelhouse, I.G.; Rhodes, Goodally, and Buckley, Stewards; Greenwood, P.M., Tyler. The various addresses were ably given by Bro. Normanton. The ceremony being completed, the lodge was closed in due form, and a large number of brethren repaired to the banquet, which was provided in the dining-room, and supplied in a most satisfactory manner by Bro. Ibberson. The W.M. presided, and was supported on his right and left by several Past Masters. The loyal, patriotic, and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, and heartily responded to by the brethren; Bro. T. Whitaker presiding at the piano. The response to "The Army, Navy, and Reserve Forces" was given by Bro. Charnock, P.M. No. 408. The healths of the Grand Master of England and the P.G. Master of West Yorkshire were heartily received, the latter being responded to by Bro. F. Whitaker, P.M., P.G.S., and Bro. Normanton, P.M., P.P.J.G.D. The next toast was "The W.M. of St. James's Lodge," which was proposed by Bro. Alfred Lupton, P.M.) and replied to by the W.M., who next proposed the "Installing Officer," to which Bro. Normanton responded. Bro. Wilkinson proposed "The Worshipful Past Masters of St. James's Lodge," Bro. Lupton responding. "Our Visiting Brethren" was proposed by the Chairman, and responded to by Bro. Pilling, P.M., of Todmorden, and Bro. Holmes, a member of a lodge at the Cape of Good Hope. The toast of "The Two Sister Lodges in Halifax" was next given from the chair, and responded to by Bro. Tasker, P.M., and Franklin, S.W., for the Lodge of Probity, 61; and Bros. Firth, W.M., Whitaker, P.M., and J. Seed, S.W., for the De Warren Lodge, 1302. Bro. Knowles, P.M., proposed "The Building Committee," to which Bro. E. Walshaw, P.M., responded. A pleasant evening was passed, Bro. A. Walshaw, E. Walshaw, and J. Firth adding much to it by their vocal efforts.

LEICESTER—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—A monthly meeting of this lodge took place on Thursday, the 19th ult., at the Freemason's Hall, and was numerously attended, nearly fifty brethren being present. The W.M., Bro. Buzzard, presided in the early part of the proceedings, and all the officers were in their places, except the I.G. (Bro. Mace), and the following P.M.'s were present:—Bros. Kelly (R.W.P.G.M.), Toller, Goodyer, Geo. H. Hodges, W. B. Smith, Rev. John Spittal, C. Johnson, and Duff. Visitors: Bros. Worrall (King Solomon's Lodge, Toronto, Canada), Stretton, W.M., L. A. Clarke, P.M., Palmer, S.D., and several other brethren of No. 279. A lodge of emergency was held an hour before the usual time of meeting for the transaction of some private business, on the conclusion of which the regular lodge was opened. The minutes having been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for Mr. Robert Harry Worthington, as a candidate for initiation, who was unanimously elected, and afterwards duly initiated. Bros. Kealey, Wood, and Thorp were severally raised as Master Masons. The W.M. being compelled to leave after the lodge of emergency was closed, the duties of the chair were most efficiently performed by the I.P.M., Bro. Toller, whilst Bro. Charles Johnson most effectively presided at the organ during the ceremonies. Bro. Geo. H. Hodges, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W., having been the winner of the five guineas' worth of rare and curious Masonic works, kindly presented by Bro. W. J. Hughan, Pro. G. Sec. Cornwall, to be raffled for, for a Life Subscribership in the Boys' School, formally presented the collection, through his lodge, to the Masonic Hall Library, in doing which he intimated his intention of having such as required it bound at his own expense, and concluded by proposing a vote of thanks to Bro. Hughan for his handsome present of the books, and to the Prov. G.M., Bro. Kelly, for his kindness in making the arrangements for the raffle, which was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Haycroft. Bro. Kelly, in acknowledging the vote of thanks, said that he was deputed by Bro. Hughan to present direct to the library, in his name, the very scarce first edition of Barrnel's "History of Jacobinism," in four volumes, and several other works, for which he proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Hughan, and in addition, nominated him an honorary member of the lodge, as a slight mark of respect for his handsome donations to the Hall Library, and for the great interest he had evinced in the success of their local candidate for the Boys' School—Alfred Nutt. This was seconded by Bro. G. H. Hodges, warmly supported by the acting W.M. (who spoke highly of Bro. Hughan's literary services to Masonry), and cordially approved by the brethren. Bro. Kelly then presented to the library, on his own behalf, in addition to former gifts, several scarce Masonic works, dating from 1730, and a copy of his "Notices Illustrative of the Drama and other Popular Amusements in the 16th and 17th Centuries," for which also a vote of thanks was accorded. The Library Committee was empowered to make a catalogue of the collection of books. The W.M. pro tem. drew attention to the loss the brethren had sustained by the sudden decease of Bro. William Penn Cox, proprietor of the Leicester Advertiser; and said that the respect in which he was universally held was testified to by his late colleagues at a recent meeting of the Town Council, of which he was an active member. Two gentlemen having been proposed as candidates, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

SEACOMBE—Combermere Lodge No. 605.—This lodge celebrated its installation meeting on the 19th ult., at the Seacombe Hotel, Bro. W. Wade, P.M., in the chair. The lodge was opened in ancient form, and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed. Mr. Fleming was regularly initiated into the secrets and mysteries of the Craft. Bro. Horbury then presented Bro. J. Sillitoe, S.W. and W.M.-elect, to Bro. Wade, P.M., to receive at his hands the benefit of installation, the usual ceremonies being performed. Bro. J. Sillitoe was declared duly installed in the chair of K.S., and he, according to ancient custom, then appointed his officers, as follows:—Bros. W. Wade, I.P.M.; W. Theobald, S.W.; W. Smith, J.W.; J. Horbury, Sec.; W. Theobald, Treas.; Ratcliffe, S.D.; Staley, J.D.; Barry, I.G.; Owen and Culum, Stewards; Ward, Organist; W. Lewin, Tyler. Bro. Wade, the Installing Master, then gave the usual charges in that beautiful and impressive manner which renders the installing ceremony so sublime. The lodge was then called off, and about thirty of the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was arranged in Bro. Stokes' usual excellent style, and presided over by the W.M., when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to. During the evening some capital songs were sung, and the Tyler's toast concluded a very enjoyable evening.

LIVERPOOL—Derby Lodge No. 724.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 25th ult., for the purpose of installing Bro. C. H. Hill, the W.M.-elect. There was a very large attendance of members and visitors, especially the latter, no less than 28 Masters and Past Masters attended to open a Board of Installed Masters, and thereby testify their respect to the W.M.-elect. The visitors were Bros. Jas. Hamer, Prov. G. Treas. West Lancashire, Installing Master; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. S. W.L.; R. Wylie, Prov. G. D. C. W.L.; W. Bulley, P.P.J.G.D. Cheshire; J. Goepel, P.M. 155; Dr. M'George, G. Broadbridge, and R. Wilson, P.M.'s 241; Jas. M'Kune, P.M. 216; J. W. Baker, P.M. 220; Healing, P.M. 249; P. Larsen, P.M. 594; T. Clarke, P.M. 673; T. Ashmore and W. J. Lunt, P.M.'s 823; S. Haynes, W.M., 823, J. B. Robinson, P.M. 1013; W. Archer and John Lunt, P.M.'s 1086; Dr. Smith and Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M.'s 1094; J. Pemberton, W.M. 1264; Sillitoe, W.M. 605; J. F. Jones, W.M. 1276; R. Wilson, 43; T. H. Ashmore, 823; R. Carr, 673; T. S. Jones, S.W. 1276; T. Earp, Sec. 1276. The following P.M.'s of the Derby Lodge, were also present:—Bros. Wade, Stediford, Chesworth, and Cain, besides many other brethren. Bro. C. Leighton ably presided at the organ. The Lodge was opened by Bro. Chesworth, P.M., and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed, after which, the lodge voted a gold P.M.'s jewel to Bro. Cain for his valuable services to the lodge during the past year, which was carried unanimously. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Hill, the W.M.-elect, was presented, and the charges having been delivered, he took the customary O.B. A Board of Installed Masters was then opened by Bro. Hamer, as W.M., Bro. Wade, as S.W., and Cain, as J.W., assisted by twenty-five other Masons, and the remaining portion of the ceremony was performed by Bro. Hamer, the Installing Master, in that able and efficient manner for which he is so justly celebrated, and Bro. Hill having been placed in the chair of K.S., forthwith proceeded to appoint and invest as his officers Bros. Cain, I.P.M.; J. F. Jones, S.W.; W. Shortis, J.W.; Chesworth, P.M., Treas.; J. D. M'Laren, Sec.; Vaughan, S.D.; Ballard, I.G.; Smith, Tyler; and the office of J.D. remaining open for the present. The lodge was then closed down in due form and perfect harmony by the new W.M. After the lodge had been closed, the brethren sat down to a banquet, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, after which a collection was made by Bro. Johnson for the Masonic Life Boat Fund, and the brethren separated in peace and harmony.

WHITEHAVEN—Lewis Lodge, No. 872.—A meeting of this lodge was held on the 16th inst., under the W.M., Bro. James Robertson, for the investment of officers for the ensuing year. Bro. T. R. Holme had been elected W.M., but was prevented by indisposition from being present, and his installation is consequently postponed. In the meantime Bro. Robertson has kindly consented to continue to discharge the duties of W.M. of the lodge.

The following officers were invested:—Bros. E. W. Watts, Chaplain; John Spittal, Treas.; Wm. Gill, S.W.; A. Hodgetts, J.W.; F. M. Haines, S.D.; T. Atkinson, J.D.; Thos. Brown, I.G.

KIRKDALE—Walton Lodge, No. 1086.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale-road, on Wednesday, 4th ult. The brethren present were Bros. A. C. Mott, W.M., P. Prov. S.G.D. West Lancashire; J. C. Lunt, S.W.; R. Abraham, J.W.; W. Archer, Treas.; J. P. M'Arthur, Sec.; W. Sephton, S.D.; J. Grimes, I.G.; Jno. Lunt, P.M.; and other members. Visitors: Bros. John Cobham, W.M. 241; John Horbury P.M. 605; T. Fozzard, P.M. 1035; and J. H. Turley, W.M.-elect 1035. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer and the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second degree, when Bro. Jos. C. Lunt, the W.M.-elect, was duly presented by Bros. Mott and Archer to the W.M. to receive the benefit of installation. The usual preliminaries having been duly observed, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, consisting of Bros. John Lunt, Mott, Archer, Cobham, Fozzard, and Horbury, when Bro. Jos. C. Lunt was duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year, and was proclaimed and saluted as such by the brethren in the several degrees, the ceremony being performed in a very able and affecting manner by Bro. John Lunt, P.M., father of the W.M. The following are the brethren whom the W.M. invested as his officers:—Bros. R. Abraham, S.W.; J. P. M'Arthur, J.W.; W. Archer, P.M., Treas.; W. Sephton, Sec.; J. Grimes, S.D.; H. Hughes, J.D.; C. M'Ewen, I.G.; Hardy and Ellis, Stewards. The addresses to the various officers and the concluding address were delivered by Bro. Mott, I.P.M., in his usual accurate and impressive manner. One gentleman was then proposed as a candidate for initiation, and hearty good wishes having been expressed for Nos. 241, 605, and 1035, the lodge was closed. The brethren then adjourned to Bro. Vines, Canton Hotel, Victoria-road, where an excellent repast awaited them, and to which ample justice was done. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been proposed, the I.P.M., Bro. Mott, gave the toast of the evening, "The Health of the W.M.," and spoke in high terms of his character and ability—as one well qualified to discharge the duties of the office, and to occupy the chair of that lodge.—The W.M. then rose and said: "Worshipful sir and brethren, I beg most sincerely to thank you for the kind manner in which you have been pleased to respond to the toast of my health. Brethren, you have elected me to the highest honour which it is in your power to bestow. The desire to occupy such a position is not only a pardonable but a laudable one, provided he who seeks it is actuated by a sincere and honest desire to render himself more extensively serviceable. It will be my earnest endeavour during my year of office to maintain the honour and welfare of the Walton Lodge, and I trust I may not disappoint the expectations which you may have indulged in respecting my qualifications, for I have to succeed a brother whose excellent working it has been our privilege to witness during the past year. However, I hope that any failings of my own will meet with your kind and fraternal indulgence. I can rely, I know, upon the able assistance of the P.M.'s at all times, and I hope when I leave the chair the lodge will not have lost any of the prestige which now attaches to it.—The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Installing Master," and said: "Brethren, I feel more than ordinary pleasure in proposing this toast, for I have had the very great honour of being installed by my father, which is a great privilege, and one that very seldom occurs, for which I have to thank Bro. Mott for his kindness in allowing him to discharge that pleasing duty, which otherwise would have devolved upon him (Bro. Mott). I will also couple with this toast that of the I.P.M., and I rejoice in the opportunity afforded me of expressing, on behalf of the Walton Lodge, the high appreciation we have of the admirable manner in which he has performed the duties of W.M. during the past year. I shall always cherish the remembrance that it was his hand that unveiled the mystic beauties to which I was introduced on becoming a member of the fraternity. Long may he be spared to give us his valuable assistance and advice.—The W.M. next proposed "P.M.'s," to which Bro. Archer responded; also "The Officers," each of whom severally responded.—Bro. Archer, P.M., then proposed the "West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," to which Bro. Mott, the Hon. Sec., responded in a speech of great eloquence.—Bro. Lunt, P.M., proposed "The Visitors," to which Bros. Fozzard, Horbury, and Turley, responded.—Bro. Mott proposed, in a very able speech, which was warmly received, "Prosperity to the Walton Lodge," Bro. Pyre responding. The concluding toast was then given, which brought the proceedings of the day to a most happy conclusion.

"Two years ago I had a fall, which so wrenched my thigh that I could not be moved without intense suffering. My doctor could give me no relief, nor even hope that I should ever be able to walk again. After lying in much pain three weeks, I tried your Pain Killer, which gave me almost instant relief, and I recovered so rapidly that I was able in a few weeks to walk without aid.—MARY RAPSEY, Hackney, Nov. 10, 1868.—To Perry Davis & Son, 17, Southampton-row, London, W.C."

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

KNIGHTS ERRANT.

AT the present time, when the tramp of countless hosts reverberates throughout Europe, and when the sword decides the fate of nations, it is refreshing to turn our gaze upon another band of soldiers, who, although fierce in guise, and accoutred in warlike fashion, have no intention to slaughter or destroy. Otherwise, it might be somewhat startling to announce to our readers that old England is about to be invaded by a phalanx of armed men from the West, and that our peaceful cities and quiet haunts will soon be overrun by a disciplined body of American Republicans. There can, we think, be no stronger proof of the hold which Freemasonry has secured in the minds of our Transatlantic cousins than the fact that a Commandery of American Knights Templar, fully equipped, is about to visit Europe, and to parade in military costume through our British streets. Familiarity with such demonstrations in their own country has, doubtless, caused our Templar friends to imagine that the spectacle will be equally appreciated in England; but we must beg to undeceive them. It is rarely indeed, we can assure them, that Masonic processions of any kind take place here in public, and so far as London is concerned, the apparition of an aproned Mason outside the door of his lodge-house would lead most people to the conclusion that he had escaped from Bedlam. We have an idea in this country that the symbols, as well as the secrets of the Order, should be, as much as possible, guarded religiously from the prying eyes of the profane; and unless at a ball, or in a shop-window, our squares and compasses and triangles are seldom or never displayed. There was a time, no doubt, when even the Grand Lodge of England, clad in gorgeous array, rode in many-horsed coaches through the City for the popular delectation; but we also read of the virtuous fit of repentance which ensued—how our respected forefathers resolved to eschew the pomps and vanities of chariots, and to forego for ever the glories of jewels and splendid attire in the presence of the fun-loving multitude. Nor has the wisdom of their resolve ever been seriously questioned, albeit some of the young and foolish amongst us would peradventure essay to walk through St. Paul's Churchyard or along Fleet-street in the hooded cloaks of the Templars, or the glittering collars of the Rose Croix, in playful emulation of the Lord Mayor's Show, when that interesting exhibition was at its best. It will be remembered by many of our readers that even at the ceremonial of laying the foundation-stone of the new Masonic buildings in Great Queen-street, great hoardings were erected by order of the Building Committee, so that none but Masons could obtain so much as a furtive glimpse of the proceedings. They manage these things differently in America, where the officers of lodges, chapters, and commanderies are frequently installed in the presence of ladies, and foundation as well as cape stones of Masonic edifices are often laid amidst the cheers of thousands of the popular world. Practices like these beget confidence in the minds of our Transatlantic brethren, and must tend to lessen our astonishment when we hear of the Knight-Templar excursion to Europe. These worthy brethren identify their trip with chivalric Masonry, and are proud of their regalia, of their drill, and of their Order in general. In warning them that such displays are unknown here, we are simply desirous of keeping them out of the reach of unthinking ridicule, which, because a thing is novel, at once declares it ludicrous. In the United States actual encampments of Templars in the fields for weeks together are by no means uncommon; and many of the Knights are really capable of performing difficult military evolutions. Here the Order of the Temple celebrates its mysteries and commemorates the martial past within closed doors, and its proclivities are rather towards the good cheer of the Freemasons' or the London taverns than otherwise. But in both lands we are satisfied that the good old chivalric spirit still exists, although in the one it may be more demonstrative than in the other. Of one thing we can assure our brother Knights, and that is, that we wish them a very pleasant pilgrimage. The route they have chosen is one calculated to stir their hearts with memories of those tales of love and war which haunt the relics of a by-gone age. From the lovely Cove of Cork—otherwise Queenstown—to the more romantic Lakes of Killarney, thence to Dublin, and from Dublin to the far-famed Derry, with a pause at the Giant's Causeway, and so on from Belfast to Glasgow. Glancing at the Western Isles, with the wondrous caves of Iona and Staffa, and after a rapid survey of the Highland lakes, our travellers will find their way to London—doing Edinburgh, Newcastle, and York en route. Away, then, across the North Sea to the mouth of the Scheldt, and on to quaint old Antwerp. Brussels the gay, and Waterloo the solemn, will then be visited, after which the Knights will seek the sweet odours of Cologne, and give the Rhine steamers a turn up to Mayence, passing through Bonn, Coblenz, and Bingen. Of course, if the war be over, and the Templar garb be carefully stowed away at the bottom of their portmanteaus, the pilgrims will domicile at Metz, and view the various other strongholds of once imperial France. From the mountains of Switzerland they will drink inspirations of patriotism, and a sojourn in rejuvenated Italy will fill them with hope for the future of that sunny land. Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome, and Naples—all will tempt their wandering feet to stay; and the attractions of Vesuvius, Pompeii, and Herculaneum will not be overlooked. Back again via Genoa, Turin, and across the Alps to Switzerland, on to Paris—thoughtless Paris no longer—to linger amid traces of the ruin and ravage of war until time warns them to return to England, and visit the halls of Oxford and the shrine of Shakespeare at Stratford-on-Avon, for few Americans indeed finish their European tour without going to view the birthplace and the grave of the world's great poet. This is a brief outline of the excursion which is mapped out for our American brethren, and we trust they will enjoy it heartily; but we would also counsel them very seriously to lay aside the panoply of war during their sojourn in the old world, and to ignore the martial exercises to which they may have been accustomed. Of one thing we may be certain, that, as Masons and as Templars, they will be received by our lodges and encampments with that courtesy and hospitality which have ever distinguished the English Craft, and which is still to be found in Masonic circles, even in these degenerate days when Knight-Errantry is somewhat at a discount.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

If any brother has copies of either of the "Constitutions of A.D. 1776, 1784 (4to)," or "1863 (8vo), Grand Lodge of England," I shall be glad to hear from him, and will be glad to purchase them or exchange. I have the editions of A.D. 1723, 1738, 1756, 1767, 1769, 1815, 1827, 1841, 1847, 1851, 1855, 1861, and 1867, and only want copies of the above to render my set complete.

W. J. HUGHAN.

In your number for January 21st Bro. Carpenter enquires the origin of the word "cowan." May I humbly venture to suggest its connection with, and probable origin in, the Hebrew word "cowan," literally, "a priest."

THE FATHER OF THE STEAM ENGINE AND THE GLASGOW INCORPORATION OF HAMMERMEN.

"James Watt, on attempting to set up as an instrument-maker in Glasgow, was prevented doing so by the then privileged Incorporation of Hammermen, as not being free of the Craft. Attempts were next made for obtaining their leave for a very small place wherein to make his experiments, but this was peremptorily refused. The University, however, in his difficulty, came to his rescue, and granted him a room within the precincts of the College, which was free of the incubus of all guilds.

THE WARDENS' CHAIRS.

At page 58 I perceive some remarks upon this subject, and without saying anything about the right of the W.M. in the matter, I might be allowed to view the question as one of Masonic courtesy and good feeling. In that case, I think the P.M.'s might rest satisfied with their privileges in the east; and in the case of absent Wardens, their chairs might be filled by Past Wardens, or if none such are present, then the office-bearers under that rank might be allowed to officiate pro tem., which would give encouragement to all. Of course, in doing so, I do it on the understanding that the various brethren are able to discharge the duties.

THE CHURCH OF SANTA SOPHIA.

The following extract may be found interesting to our readers who are members of the Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine:—

When Constantine dedicated his great city to Christ, he thought it right to erect in it a suitable edifice for Christian worship on a scale of magnificence commensurate with his capital; he therefore built one of the first public temples to the new faith that had been permitted since the destruction of Christian churches and the extirpation of their congregations by the decree of Dioclesian, and he dedicated it to the Ἁγία σοφία, "The Holy and Eternal Wisdom of God" as manifested in His blessed Son. During the discordant schisms which unhappily rent the Christian church, this splendid structure was reduced to a state of ruin, and it was reserved for the Emperor Justinian to re-edify it. He had the old foundations cleared away, and purchased at a considerable expense a larger area on which to erect it. To obtain funds for the purpose he suspended the pensions he had granted to learned men, and melted down the silver statue of Theodosius the Great, which weighed 7400 lbs. Ten thousand men were employed, whose exertions were stimulated by encouragements and rewards. The emperor himself appeared amongst them, and paid them every night for the work they had executed during the day. He was seen divested of his imperial robes, in a simple tunic of linen, examining their progress, and applauding and conferring gifts on the most expert and industrious artisans. In five years and eleven months the vast building was completed, and when he had thus accomplished his splendid undertaking, he exclaimed with exultation, "I have conquered thee, O Solomon!" The city was at that time so subject to earthquakes that private houses were generally constructed of wood to obviate their destructive effects. This magnificent work had scarcely been completed, when it was shattered by one of those rude and frequent shocks; but the indefatigable emperor again repaired the shaken ruins. From some unknown physical cause the violent concussions ceased to shake the place, so that slight and scarcely perceptible shocks occur only at intervals of many years; and the church of Santa Sophia is now as it was left by the last re-edification of Justinian.

When the Turks entered the city, they rushed to this building to massacre or make slaves of all who took refuge there; they then proceeded to demolish it, as the most eminent place of infidel worship. In this critical moment the sultan entered, and arrested the destruction just as it had commenced. He announced that he gave to his soldiers the plunder of spoil and captives, but the public edifices he reserved to himself. He at once conceived the idea of converting this magnificent Christian church into a Mohammedan mosque; and as he had transferred the government of the Osmaali to the most splendid capital, so the worship of Islam should be celebrated in the most splendid edifice in the world. In order to accommodate the interior to the new rites, the effigies and pictures which covered the walls were erased, and all trace of such representations was effaced by a simple and uniform colouring; the arms of the cross were, with little violence or alteration, bent up into the form of a crescent; and to silence the sound of a bell—so revolting to the followers of the Prophet—he caused a minaret to be erected at one of the angles, from the summit of which the faithful could be invited to prayer by the sound of the human voice, and having thus purified it from what he believed to be superstitious and idolatrous emblems, he sat down cross-legged in the sanctuary, and caused himself to be shaved there. He then ordered the Koran to be read in place of the Bible, offered up his prayers, and finally suspended the curtain that had once closed the door of the temple of Mecca. He made no further alteration in the Christian church, and it remains as it was left by Justinian, unchanged for 1300 years, the most perfect and splendid monument of the arts of the Lower Empire.

The general model of a Christian church was that of a cross—the stem represented by the nave, the cross by the transepts, and the upper part by the choir—but from the inequality of the parts, the western churches laboured under a disproportion from which the eastern were exempt. The arms of the Greek cross are all of equal length, and Santa Sophia is built on its model; it has therefore a symmetry which the Latin churches have not, though founded on the same symbol. The ground-plan is that of a cross enclosed in a square whose sides measure 243 feet, but including the portico its length is 269 feet. Over the centre of the cross rises the dome. This dome is called "aërial," because it is so constructed that its height is only one-sixth of its diameter, and its curve so flat that its convexity seems to correspond with that of the sky, and be a portion of the great firmament let down and suspended, as the Greeks say, by a chain. To effect this it is built of materials of the least possible gravity—pumice-stones specifically lighter than the water on which it floats, and bricks from Rhodes five times less weighty than those of ordinary burnt clay. The vast dome, thus reduced in weight, is further secured by the pillars on which it rests. These are ponderous piles of freestone, made of blocks hewn into cubes and triangles, united by hugh cramps of iron. It is partly by this judicious distribution of its materials that the vast edifice has stood so long unshaken by those shocks of earthquake which have prostrated so many other buildings in the same period. The mosque is entered by a portico 12 yards in breadth, this communicates with another by nine gates with marble arches, closed by valves of rich bronze cast into high relief; this opens into another parallel to it. These vestibules formed what is called the narthex or pronaos of the Greek Christian church. Here stood the font where catechumens were baptized, and penitents were placed before they presumed, or were deemed worthy to enter the naos or body of the sacred edifice. From hence they passed into the interior by five doors of plain bronze. The first object that strikes one on entering the body of the edifice, is the vast aërial dome, rising to the height of 180 feet above the flooring, reposing on four massive arches forming the segments of semi-domes, and supported by others still less. The dome is perforated by 26 windows, and a multitude of others appear in the perspective. On each side are colonnades supporting galleries, one of which was reserved for the Emperor and called the Gallery of Constantine. Round the base of the dome runs another gallery at a great elevation. It is splendidly illuminated during the evenings of the Ramazan and other Turkish festivals, and produces a magnificent effect. Different parts of the edifice are supported by 104 pillars, amongst which are eight of porphyry removed by Constantine from the Temple of the Sun at Rome, and six of green jasper from the Temple of Diana at Ephesus. The sun was the tutelary deity of the emperor while he continued a heathen; when he adopted a better he removed those ornaments of the temples both of Apollo and Diana to enrich the temple of Christ. The walls and domes are encrusted with mosaic in various forms and devices. They have been nearly obliterated by the Turks; though they yet remain in the four angles under the central dome great winged seraphims, whose faces are mutilated because they represented the human countenance. The rest are covered over with Arabic inscriptions from the Koran, including the 104 attributes of Allah, which every Turk is bound to repeat over in his daily prayers. The mosaic of the dome is constantly falling from its cement, and is found to consist of small cubes about the size of playing dice, of various colored glass, which the imaams collect and sell to the Franks, who have them formed and set in crosses, and thus commemorate that faith for which the mosque was originally built. Passing under the great dome, and opposite the vestibule, is the semi-dome which forms the termination of the temple. Here was the high altar of the Christian church; behind it the sanctuary, separated by a screen from the body of the edifice. This sacred place is now the Mehrahé where the Koran is deposited. The exterior of this interesting edifice is singularly heavy, and, as a celebrated French traveller says, furieusement lourde en dehors. It exhibits an irregular mass of cupolas, half-domes, shelving roofs, and stunted minarets, one of which, more mean than the rest, is the identical one erected by Mahomet to convert the church into a mosque. Even the great dome, so celebrated for its architectural beauty, and which the Turks have never yet been able to imitate, looks low and flat when viewed on the outside, and produces none of that aërial effect, in comparison with its internal structure. The edifice has at length begun to exhibit symptoms of decay. About six years ago, after a continued storm of wind and rain, one of the smaller domes fell into the church. On clearing away the surface of rubbish, the floor was found covered over with glittering cubes which had formed the ceiling, and in such abundance that every one was supplied with as much as he chose to take for a trifling gratuity.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR,—As a great many of the brethren may not have an opportunity of hearing of the cause of my not being present at the festival of the above institution on Friday, I must beg, through the medium of your columns, to acquaint the brethren, and especially the Stewards, that a very recent and severe domestic affliction (the death of a very near relative) is the cause of it, and to express my very deep regret, as I feel confident that I should be supported in a way that I should have much cause to be proud of. However, I have no doubt but that some other brother—every one of whom, I know, are ready to assist in time of need—will be found to fill that important position much better than I could have done.

Begging the Stewards and brethren to accept this apology for my absence,

I remain, dear Sir,

Yours very fraternally,

FRANCIS BURDETT.

QUALIFICATIONS OF VISITORS TO LODGES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It was with great interest I perused the letter addressed to you about the qualifications of visitors to lodges in your last issue. I am a young M. from Germany, quite new in the Order, and almost ignorant in its rites and workings. Immediately after my initiation I left for England, where I have twice entered a lodge during the last six months. Although I was admitted, yet I found the trial too awful and intimidating to undergo a third time, since it was stated that the password they gave me at my reception into the mysterious Craft was not the same as that used in the English lodges, and only my certificate from the Grand Lodge of Berlin opened me the gates. To describe the moral effects this intelligence had on me would be displaced and far too difficult for me to express in your language. It may suffice to say that after the second time I lacked the courage and desire to make a third attempt, and rather preferred to stand away—unknown, friendless, and disheartened—from those I was told to call my brethren.

I have never seen any working, and was only three times in the halls of the brotherhood I scarcely dare to call mine. The first time was at my reception; the second, at the "Virtue" in Manchester, where I was only admitted at the conclusion of the lodge (being still in the first degree, as prescribed by German Masonic laws to remain one year in the first); and the third time was at the "Integrity" in the same town, when there was no working at all—the first time within 15 years, according to their own saying. Thus I cannot consider myself a worthy member of that great fellowship, and shall hardly get more enlightened, living in the country and without any contact with Freemasons. The one living with me in the same village, and who recognized me a F.C., took no notice of it at all, and from this moment I have given up all further attempts to approach English Masons and lodges, and await anxiously for the time of my return to my own country. But to utilize the time and to forward myself a little in the rites and rules of the mysterious art, I should be very glad and thankful if you would be kind enough to indicate me the books fit for my self-instruction both in history and rites. I have seen a great many named in your paper, but have since abstained from choosing at random, and hope you will know better what suits the degree of my ignorance.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

January 28th, 1871.

J. B.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—I have perused with interest the letter of so experienced a Mason as "F. B., an old P.M. and P.G.M." Very recently, when at Brighton, I desired to enter one of the lodges there as a visitor. My certificate was demanded, and handed in; an officer of the lodge, to whom I had been introduced a few days previously, came out and conversed with me; I admitted that, owing to ill-health and other causes, I had been very little in the way of Craft Masonry, although a M.M. of six years' standing. By his own admission, I satisfied my querist that I had been raised to the third degree; he nevertheless declined the responsibility of passing me into the lodge—hence I was excluded.

I hereby learnt one lesson: never again to obtrude myself into strange company without being properly introduced by a personal friend.

I am, Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

28 January, 1871.

LODGE LA TOLERANCE, No. 538.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Without derogating from what is properly due to other brethren, permit me to acknowledge the great pleasure I derived from reading the very able, manly, and business-like address delivered by the worthy W.M. of Lodge No. 538, as reported at page 54 of your columns. To me it seemed a model address in many respects—there was no nonsense about it. The manly way in which he acknowledged his desire to occupy the chair is highly commendable. I would also support his idea that "no member should be installed as Master of a lodge until he had given proofs of his proficiency in all the duties appertaining to the office." That such is not the rule is surely absurd. Yet it is a fact that there are lodges who would find great difficulty in producing even two W.M.'s who ever worked the three degrees! How such can sit, night after night, in the chair, helplessly looking on while others are doing their work, I know not; or how they can feel while the response is being given to the question about the Master's duty when so placed, I know not—only there seems to me to be a curious anomaly in the position.

With well wishes for the prosperity of La Tolerance under its present management,

I am, sincerely and fraternally yours,

LEO.

LODGE ST. JOHN (1137), NEW ZEALAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Since receiving your valuable paper it occurred to me to make my complaint through your columns, as the most likely mode of obtaining redress.

I was initiated, passed, and raised in the above lodge some six years since, and have not yet received my certificate, although I have always paid whatever fees were due by me. I should wish you to explain, or at any rate let us understand, why we have been so neglected.

Does the Grand Lodge of England, under whom we work, under-value colonial Masons, or is it through some irregularity? You will no doubt be able to inform us. Mine is not an individual case, as, with three or four exceptions out of a lodge of forty or fifty members, we are all without certificates. Some short time since, several of the brethren left the colony and were obliged to depart without their certificates, and in one instance the brother was refused admittance into an American lodge because he was not in possession of his certificate and not very well up in the work.

We have not been fortunate as a body, being considerably in debt. We built a lodge or hall at a cost of £1,200, and still owe £500. Besides, for about three years we were ruled by a W.M. who, ambitious to keep everything in his own hands, could only do so by keeping us in ignorance, and squandered the lodge funds in banquets and refreshments of an expensive description. I should wish to know if it is not the duty of the Provincial Grand Lodge to keep an eye on the proceedings of country lodges, and occasionally send an officer to inspect them?

We are now, and have been during the last two years, ruled by a W.M. who takes some interest in our advancement, and we hope to fill the chair from amongst the officers who are working for it. We have done away with refreshments and all but the annual banquet on St. John's-day, and have commenced a benevolent fund.

Trusting that the next time you hear of our lodge it will be a more cheering account,

I remain, &c.,

A BROTHER

of Lodge 1137 Timaru, New Zealand,

THE ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE TESTIMONIAL.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—There is not a line in Bro. Boyd's letter but what I entirely agree with, and the suggestion he has thrown out will be adopted no doubt.

I can only say that the subject of a testimonial to Bro. Little was never suggested to me at any time; but at a meeting of the Palestine Chapter in November last, I mentioned it to Bro. Kenning and a few friends, who immediately expressed a willingness to co-operate with me in getting up a subscription for that purpose, and I certainly thought that if a circular, such as has been sent out, was submitted to the numerous friends of Bro. Little, it would induce many to subscribe, and at the same time many of influence in the Craft would suggest, as our Bro. Boyd has done, their views on the subject.

I will also, for the information of Bro. Boyd, the subscribers and their friends, intimate to them that Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, the Prov. G.M. for Middlesex, had, in the kindest manner, undertaken to call a meeting of Bro. Little's Masonic friends with a view to a committee being formed to carry out the object we had in view, and render the testimonial worthy of Bro. Little's acceptance; but severe illness prevented such meeting being called, and as he is now happily restored to health, it will immediately be done.

I can assure you, and also Bro. Boyd, that the sole object Bro. Levander and myself had was a sincere desire to obtain all we could, leaving it to the committee, when formed, to decide what the testimonial should be.

I had already solicited several brethren to be on the committee (Bro. Boyd himself), and below will be seen a list of those who have expressed their willingness to be on that committee. All that has been done by myself and my colleague has been done with the purest intentions, and we shall be very happy to hand over to Bro. Boyd, if he wishes, the large correspondence that we have received, and a faithful report of all that has been done in the matter. Assuring you, sir, that what we have done has been a pleasure; and if Bro. Boyd and his friends will co-operate with us and the committee already named, we feel satisfied the testimonial will be a suitable one, and such as all will be pleased to present to the worthy brother on whose behalf we have been working and are still ready to act.

Permit me to add that, although Bro. Boyd suggests it should have been left to older friends of Bro. Little, we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that, by the action we have taken in the matter, we have stirred up those older friends to exert themselves more than they have hitherto done, though the subject was mooted two or three years ago.

Yours fraternally,

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER OF ENGLAND.

The usual Quarterly Convocation was held on Wednesday, the 1st inst., and was of a formal character.

The minutes having been read and confirmed, the following report of the Committee of General Purposes was, on motion duly made, taken as read, and ordered to be entered on the minutes :—

To the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England.

The Committee of General Purposes beg to report that they have examined the accounts from the 19th October, 1870, to the 17th January, 1871, both inclusive, which they find to be as follows :—

To balance 19th October ... ..	£444	6	5
„ subsequent receipts ... ..	213	8	0
	£657	14	5
By purchase of £200 Consols, at 92½	£185	5	0
„ disbursements during the quarter	128	19	10
„ balance ... ..	343	9	7
	£657	14	5

which balance is in the hands of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., bankers of the Grand Treasurer.

The committee beg to report that they have received petitions :—

1st. From Comps. Stephen Walter Rains as Z., Charles Henry Dallas as H., Joseph George Hodgson as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Yokohama Lodge, No. 1092, Yokohama, to be called the "Yokohama Chapter," and to meet at the Masonic Hall, Yokohama, Japan.

2nd. From Comps. George Frederick East as Z., Andrew Bleackley as H., Louis Beaver as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Integrity, No. 163, Manchester, to be called the "Integrity Chapter," and to meet at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, Manchester, Lancashire.

3rd. From Comps. Charles Fryer as Z., Henry William Johnston as H., Henry Steib as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Unanimity, No. 113, Preston, to be called the "Chapter of Unanimity," and to meet at the Bull Inn, Preston, Lancashire.

The foregoing petitions being in all respects regular, the committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

4th. The committee have also received a petition from John Bedford Kerswill as Z., John Hill as H., William Coad as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Eliot Lodge, No. 1164, St. Germans, to be called the "Eliot Chapter," and to meet at private rooms, St. Germans, Cornwall.

This petition is regular, with the exception that the written consent of the lodge is not attached thereto. Should this consent be signified before the meeting of Grand Chapter, the committee recommend that the prayer of this petition be likewise granted.

The committee have received a communication from Comp. John James, Z. of the Victoria Chapter, No. 530, Melbourne, Victoria, in reference to the report of the committee to Grand Chapter in July last, and the decision of the Grand Chapter consequent thereon at the meeting of the Supreme Grand Chapter on the 3rd of August, 1870. The question was whether a companion, a member of an English chapter, was eligible to be installed as the 3rd Principal of the chapter, he, although a Past Master of an Irish lodge, never having served as Master of an English lodge? The committee, after referring to Article 8, page 16, of the Royal Arch Regulations, expressed their opinion "that to render a companion eligible to be elected a Principal of a chapter under the English Constitution, he must be the actual Master or Past Master of a Craft lodge under that Constitution," which opinion was confirmed by the Grand Chapter holden on the 3rd of August, 1870. This opinion is in conformity with a resolution of the Grand Lodge, holden on the 2nd Sept., 1863, upon a question which had been raised as to whether a brother, a member of an English lodge, who had served as Warden in an Irish lodge, was eligible to be elected Worshipful Master of an English lodge, and which resolution declared that such brother was not eligible until he had regularly served as Warden in the English lodge.

Comp. John James, however, refers the committee to a resolution of the Supreme Grand Chapter, at the Grand Chapter holden on the 6th of August, 1862, "That, in the opinion of the Grand Chapter, the words 'the actual Master or Past Master of a Craft lodge' occurring in the 6th and 7th lines of Article 7, page 15" [now Article 8, page 16] "of the Regulations, should be deemed and construed to mean the actual Master of a Craft lodge, who has been duly elected and installed, or such Past Masters who shall have served as Masters for the full period required by the respective Grand Lodges under which they hold, and which are recognised by the Grand Lodge of England as regularly constituted Masonic bodies"—and requested a decision as to the effect of the conflicting resolutions.

The committee have fully and anxiously looked into the subject, and taking into consideration the resolution of the Grand Lodge, come to after that of the Grand Chapter of the 6th of August, 1862, and the desirability of a conformity in the Constitutions of Grand Lodge and the Regulations of Grand Chapter, adhere to the recommendation to, and affirmed by, the resolution of the Supreme Grand Chapter on the 3rd of August, 1870, and they most respectfully recommend that that resolution be confirmed, that the resolution of the Supreme Grand Chapter of 6th August, 1862, be formally rescinded, and that, if necessary, the Article 8, page 16, of the General Regulations be altered in conformity with this recommendation, in order that there may be no further question in relation thereto.

(Signed)

W. PULTENEY SCOTT, President.
Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C., 18th January, 1871.

Charters for chapters were granted.

The subject of Comp. James's communication was referred back to the Grand Chapter Committee, to confer with the Board of General Purposes, and to make a report thereon to Grand Chapter.

MASONIC CONCERT AND BALL AT BOSTON, LINCOLNSHIRE.

The brethren in Boston, taking into consideration the extent of population, cannot be surpassed for numbers, devotion to the Craft, and desire to assist unfortunate brothers or widows of brothers in pecuniary difficulties. With this kind object in view, it was arranged that on Wednesday, the 18th of January, a concert should be given in the Corn Exchange, to be followed by a ball in the Assembly Rooms.

In this, as in many other laudable movements, Bro. Burland gave to the promoters his disinterested, powerful, and invaluable aid by undertaking, without fee or reward, to "educate" his choral class to such a state of perfection as to afford an entertainment, unaided by professionals, that should give entire satisfaction to an intellectual audience. There were, however, two obstacles to the successful achievement of this task, which, under less vigorous and talented conductors, must have brought with them certain failure. In the first place—a matter over which there was no alternative—rehearsals had to be commenced and continued during the Christmas festivities, when it was impossible to obtain regular attendance; and, in the next, "The Ancient Mariner" (a cantata, by J. F. Barnett) is a piece which, although sublime in its composition, severely taxes the power, conception, and ability of all engaged. Nevertheless, the repeated marks of approval fully testified that Bro. Burland had entirely succeeded in his very difficult task.

The Corn Exchange was crowded in every part, and the hall was comfortably warmed, while flags, banners, &c., bearing Masonic and other appropriate mottoes, gave to the interior a pleasant spectacle. The choral class, about eighty in number, were seated on an excellent platform, erected by Bro. William Rolfe, builder. Behind was the new drop scene belonging to the Boston Amateurs, and above this was a large illuminated star, kindly lent by Cooke and Son, brewers.

The first part commenced with "The Ancient Mariner," the principal vocalists who took part in which were the Misses Green, Messrs. Green, and Mr. Curnow. The cantata went quietly until we arrived at an extremely difficult solo, even for professional singers, commencing with "And a good south wind sprung up behind," which was exceedingly well executed by Miss Green. The aria, beginning with "Down drops the breeze, the sails drop down," by Mr. John Green, was also well rendered. The recitation, "The Steerman's Face by his Lamp gleamed White," was powerfully and excellently given by Mr. Curnow. A quartet, "The Souls did from their Bodies Fly," &c., was sweetly sung by the Misses and the Messrs. Green, who were much applauded. The difficult solo "Alone Alone, all, all Alone," was well executed by Mr. George Green. The aria, "Oh, Sleep, it is a Gentle Thing," &c., by Miss Lizzie Green, was splendidly rendered and warmly received. Mr. Curnow then gave, with capital effect, the recitation "And Soon I Heard a Roaring Wind," &c. Several other parts were well given, especially the soprano solo and chorus, commencing with "This Seraph Band each Waved his Hand," by the Misses Green, Broughton, and Small. The finale, a quartet and chorus, commencing with "What loud uproar bursts from that door," by the Misses and Messrs. Green, was admirably given and was loudly redemanded; but on account of the lengthened programme, it could not be complied with. Miss Wilson, a most accomplished player, presided at the first piano, and surprised all with the brilliancy of her execution. Miss Stevenson, who is a very clever pianist, deserves great praise for the excellent precision brought to bear in accompanying on the second piano. The choruses certainly astonished the audience, not the slightest hitch being visible from the first; and the power, harmony, and general effect were of an order seldom heard in mere local classes. The result speaks very much in behalf of Bro. Burland, who must have displayed remarkable patience, determination, and ability. Mr. G. Hildred was found a very valuable auxiliary by his excellent playing of the cornet.

The second part commenced with an overture, "La Figaro" (Mozart), on two pianos, which was well performed by the Misses Willson, Small, Stevenson, and Simpson. Miss Green then gave us that beautiful composition "The English Girl's Song." The exquisite manner in which the low notes were given in the charming chorus "Home, Home, Sweet Home," &c., appeared to touch the hearts of all present, when a spontaneous encore was complied with. "The Lover and the Bird," by Miss Lizzie Green, was sweetly rendered, when a simultaneous encore also honoured the efforts of this talented young lady. Miss Willson was then escorted to the front, whose appearance was greeted with manifestations of applause from all parts. This splendid pianist executed in fine style a piece called the "Magic Bells." Receiving an encore which there was no resisting, Miss Willson astonished and delighted the audience still further by playing an extremely difficult arrangement of "Home, Sweet Home," written expressly for the left hand, thus showing the great mastery this clever young lady possesses over the instrument. The "Red Cross Knight" was capitally given by the Misses Green, the Messrs. Green, and Mr. Curnow, with an effective chorus. Then followed the "Marsellaise," which is evidently getting very popular in England. The audience soon warmed up, and at the termination a general outburst of enthusiasm arose. An effort was made to avoid an encore, in consequence of the lateness of the hour, but the company could not be appeased until their demand was granted. The concert, which was a great success, closed with "God Save the Queen."

The ball was also a great success in every way. About 140 ladies and gentlemen attended, who spoke highly of the arrangements. Through the kindness of the commander, the North Lincoln Militia Band was engaged, which, directed by Mr. C. Addelsee, gave great satisfaction.

An excellent supper was given by the Misses Jackson, when about ninety ladies and gentlemen sat down.

We have authority for stating that the kind-hearted conductors of these combined entertainments will have a balance in hand of something like £20, which will be devoted to the Aged Freemasons' Institution. The expensive nature of getting up a concert of this description may be estimated from the fact that the music alone would cost about £10, which will also give some idea of the excessive labour that must have fallen upon the energetic Hon. Sec., Bro. Shepherd.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

JERSEY.

St. Aubyn's Lodge, No. 958.—Instead of their annual place of meeting, the brethren assembled on this occasion at the Temple, Jersey, on Tuesday, the 17th ultimo, Bro. H. Gee, W.M., presiding, assisted by Bros. Oatley, P.M., as S.W.; Le Cappellain, J.W.; A. J. Boullier, P.M., P.G.S.; Martel, J.D.; and E. Le Gros, I.G. There were also present: Bros. E. J. Newton, G. Allen, G. Preesley, R. G. F. Smith, P.M.; &c. The lodge having been opened according to Masonic usage, the minutes of the last lodge meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the higher degrees, and a brother was raised to the degree of M.M. by the W.M., whose rendering of this most sublime ceremony could not fail to make a lasting impression upon the mind of the candidate. An announcement was made that Bro. the Right Worshipful Colonel Ed. C. Malet de Carteret, P.G.M. Channel Islands, and the rest of the P.G. Officers, wished to be admitted. The Deacons, with their gilt wands, escorted them in procession into the lodge, where the P.G.M. took his seat on the dais at the right of the W.M. The lodge was then resumed to the first degree, and a candidate being present for initiation in the ancient mysteries of the Craft was duly admitted, and the ceremony of this degree was also performed by the W.M. in a manner reflecting the highest credit upon Bro. Gee, and the St. Aubyn's Lodge may well be congratulated upon having such a Master to direct their proceedings.—The W.M. rose and directed the attention of the brethren to the fact of the Temple being draped in mourning in consequence of the decease of their late lamented Bro. Dr. Lowe, the S.D.—a brother so highly esteemed among them all, so indefatigable in his exertions to promote the good of the Craft. The W.M. concluded a lengthened and most eloquent oration upon the merits of their late brother by pointing to the shortness and uncertainty of this mortal life as a lesson for every one to take to heart, and to perform our allotted task while it is yet day, doing all the good we can while health and strength is given us.—The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The cloth having been removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were briefly given in silence. "The health of the P.G. Master and Grand Officers" was proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bros. Williams, P.G.C., and Pugsley, P.M. 245.—The W.M. then proposed "The health of the Visitors," and "Success to the Freemasons' Life-Boat Movement," coupling with the latter the name of Bro. S. Davis, 141, London, to which Bro. Davis replied, and called the attention of the brethren to the progress of the movement. He was happy to inform them that the P.G.M. had kindly subscribed £3 to the Fund, and also that £5 5s. had been received through Bro. Pugsley; and hoped the brethren of the Channel Islands, who could better appreciate the value of life-boats than himself—seeing that they lived on one of the most dangerous of our rock-bound coasts—would rally round the W.M., who had kindly consented to be one of the committee, and give him all the support in their power. He also expressed his gratitude to Bro. G. Renouf, W.M. 599, who had promised to exert himself in the movement.—Several other toasts were then proposed and responded to; but the enjoyment of the evening was marred in consequence of the painful loss the lodge had sustained by the demise of Bro. Lowe. The visitors were: Bros. De Carteret, R.W.P.G.M.; J. Le Cronier, M.D., D.P.G.M.; Ph. Blamfield, 245, P.G.S.; A. Schmitt, P.M. 599, P.G.S.W.; C. Kingsworth, P.M. 245, P.G. Reg.; M. Tracy, W.M. 244, P.G. Sec.; W. Jones, P.G.S.; R. Barrow, W.M. 491, P.G.S.; T. B. Pitcher, J.D. 1003; G. Grigg, W.M. 1003; W. H. Richards, J.W. 1003; R. Row, 491; C. Leigh, 1003; G. Renouf, W.M. 599; J. Blamfield, 590; M. J. Emanuel, W.M. 205, London; S. Davis, 141, London; R. Mutton, 1003; E. Beadon, J.D. 187; R. Welsh, 378; W. Pugsley, P.M. 245; P. H. Maurant, 245; J. L. Hanan, 590; E. Gilley, I.G. 1003; Francis Bois, 1003; Le Eriffon, 590; D. Pallat, 590; and Turgis, 1003.

AUSTRALIA.

WOODS POINT, VICTORIA.—Alpine Lodge, No. 1078.—This lodge held their annual anniversary and installation meeting at the Masonic Hall, Bridge-street, Woods Point, on Friday, November 4. Present: Bros. Peter Simpson, W.M.; W. Harrison, P.M.; R. Brookes Peters, S.W.; John Holland, J.W.; and a number of the brethren of the lodge, with several visiting brethren. The financial business for the past year having been concluded, Bro. W. Harrison presented Bro. R. Brookes Peters, W.M. elect, to receive from his predecessor the benefit of installation. Bro. Simpson then proceeded with the ceremony, and installed Bro. R. Brookes Peters in an able and impressive manner, assisted by Bro. Harrison, P.M. The brethren having been readmitted, saluted the new Master in the several degrees. P.M. Simpson invested the following officers by direction of the W.M.; Bros. John Holland, S.W.; James Kayle, J.W.; John Jones, I.G.; William F. Roberts, S.D.; Jonas Sly, J.D.; and Mat. Marassovich, Tyler. Some other business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in due form with solemn prayer. The brethren then adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, ably provided by Bro. John Holland, at the Niagara Hotel. Grace was said by the W.M., after which the usual attention was paid to the good things of this life. The cloth having been removed, the W.M. gave the toasts "The Queen and the Craft" (National Anthem), and "The Earl de Gray and Ripon and the Grand Masters of Scotland and Ireland." P.M. Simpson gave "M.W. the Earl of Zetland and the Prince of Wales, P.G. Masters." Bro. S. W. Holland gave "The Provincial Grand Master of Victoria." The W.M. gave the toast of "The M.W.G. Masters of the colonies of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick" (Dominion of Canada), stating that the R.W.G.M. of New Brunswick, Bro. B. L. Peters, was not only his brother in Masonry, but also in family. "The P.M.'s of the Lodge" was then proposed, and replied to by P.M. Simpson, who proposed "The new W.M. and his Officers," all the officers in turn replying. S.D. Roberts gave the toast of "The Ladies"—song, "All Good Lasses." The toast of "The Visitors" was acknowledged by Bros. Adam Hope, William Pitt, and P.M. Harrison. "The Host and Hostess" was replied to by Bro. Holland. "All Poor and Distressed Masons," &c., terminated the proceedings, and the brethren separated at high twelve in peace and harmony.

NEW ZEALAND.

AUCKLAND.—Lodge Waitemata, No. 689.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the lodge-room, Masonic Hotel, on Monday, November 21st, the W.M., Bro. A. J. M'Math, in the chair. The minutes of the last regular and an emergency meeting were read and confirmed. Bros. Warren and Humphreys were passed to the second degree, and the lodge was resumed in the first. The W.M. then presented to P.M. Louis A. Nathan a splendid gold P.M.'s jewel, set with pearls, manufactured specially by Bro. George Kenning, and engraved with the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. P.M. Louis A. Nathan by the officers and brethren of Lodge Waitemata, No. 689, E.C., as a token of their appreciation of his conduct as W.M. for the year A.D. 1869, A.L. 5869." Bro. Nathan made a suitable reply, and the lodge then proceeded to the election of W.M. for next year. Bro. Gledhill, S.W., having declined, Bro. W. R. Hayward, J.W., was unanimously elected W.M., Bro. A. Rose was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Porter re-appointed Tyler. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren proceeded to refreshment, and after social enjoyment, separated much pleased with their evening's entertainment.

ROYAL ARCH.

METROPOLITAN.

Caveac Chapter, No. 176.—The regular meeting of this well-established chapter was held at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars, on Thursday, the 2nd instant, and was opened by Comps. P. A. Nairne, M.E.Z.; J. Lacey, P.Z., as H.; M. Scott, J.; assisted by F. Walters, P.Z., Treasurer; and W. Wanfor, P.Z. The companions were admitted, and the minutes of the preceding meeting read and confirmed. Apologies were received from absent candidates. The M.E.Z., in a suitable speech, presented Comp. J. Lacey with a five-guinea jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him at a previous meeting. Comp. Lacey, in an admirable speech, acknowledged the gift. Comp. F. Walters proposed, Comp. P. A. Nairne seconded, and it was carried unanimously that one guinea be transferred from the chapter funds to the "Little Testimonial Fund." The chapter was closed, and the Companions partook of a superior banquet served up under the personal superintendance of Bro. G. Hart, who was, as usual, most assiduous in his attention to all present.

Domestic Chapter, No. 177.—This old chapter met on Thursday, the 26th ult., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, under the presidency of Comp. J. Coutts, M.E.Z.; who was supported by Comps. W. J. Gilbert, H.; G. Wilson, J.; H. G. Buss, P.Z., Scribe E.; T. Cubitt, S.N.; J. R. Foulger, P.S.; A. T. Hayward, 2nd Asst.; W. Carpenter, J. Brett, C. B. Payne, C. A. Cottebrunc, E. Sisson, and R. W. Little, P.Z.'s; J. Weaver, Org.; D. G. Berri, M.C.; Scott, W. Platt, Webb, Roberts, and several other companions. After the usual ballot, Bros. Webb and Roberts were duly exalted into Royal Arch Masonry, after which the elections for the ensuing year were proceeded with, and resulted unanimously as follows:—Comps. Gilbert, M.E.Z.; Wilson, H.; Cubitt, J.; Buss, P.Z., Treas.; Little, P.Z., S.E.; Foulger, S.N.; Barrett, P.S. A Past Principal's jewel was voted to Comp. Coutts for his efficient services as M.E.Z., and the chapter was then closed. A very pleasant evening at the social board succeeded the work in chapter, and the enjoyment of the companions was greatly enhanced by the talented exertions of Comps. Weaver, Foulger, and Webb, who rendered some good old songs, with musical accompaniments, while Comp. Scott gave, as usual, his inimitable recitation of the "Showman." It was a subject of congratulation amongst all the members present that this well-worked chapter is rapidly resuming its former influential position in the Order, and what is more gratifying, there is every prospect of a continuance of the prosperity which now attends its labours.

PROVINCIAL.

ULVERSTON.—Furness Chapter, No. 995.—The regular convocation of this young and flourishing chapter was held on the 24th ult. at the Masonic Temple, Theatre-street. The chapter was opened in ancient form by Comps. Case Z; Wylie, as H.; and Porter, J.; assisted by Comps. Matthews, E.; T. Dodgson, N.; and Pearson, P.S.; after which the minutes were read and confirmed. Comp. Case then proposed Comp. Thomas Wylie, Prov.

G.R., as an honorary member, and referred to the many kind services and assistance rendered by him in the formation of the chapter, and subsequently in coming, at a moment's notice, so great a distance to assist in the working of it. Comp. Porter seconded the proposition, and on the ballot being taken, proved unanimous in favour of the election. The ballot was afterwards taken for Bros. the Rev. John Park and Aymer Ainslie, which proved unanimous in their favour. The First Principal then requested Comp. T. Wylie, a distinguished and zealous officer of the Prov. G. Chapter, to take the chair of Z., and perform the ceremony of exalting the two brethren, which he did in his usual effective and impressive manner. The absence of Comps. R. Dodgson, Treas., and R. James, S.E., through indisposition having been referred to, the chapter was closed in solemn prayer.

MARK MASONRY.

HALIFAX.—Fearnley Lodge, No. 58.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall on Wednesday, the 25th ult. The chair was taken by Bro. Normanton, P.M., and the lodge having been duly opened and some formal business transacted, the brethren were called from labour to refreshment in order to partake of tea. The brethren having refreshed themselves, at once returned to the lodge-room, when the chair was taken by Bro. W. Pilling, P.M. No. 14, who had been invited to perform the ceremony of installation, for which purpose Bro. Normanton now presented the W.M. elect, Bro. John Firth, who having given his assent to the declaration of obedience to the regulations of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, was duly placed in the East in due form by Bro. Pilling. The brethren were then re-admitted, and saluted the W.M. in ancient form, who then invested the officers for the ensuing year, as follows, Bro. Pilling giving the address as the W.M. placed the collar upon each officer:—Bros. Wilkinson, S.W.; Horsfall, J.W.; F. Whitaker, M.O.; Roberts, S.O.; Wavell, J.O.; Waddington, Reg.; Fleming, Treas.; Cooke, P.M., Sec.; Laidler, S.D.; Ellis, J.D.; Matthewman, D. of Cers.; T. Whitaker, Org.; Barker, I.G.; Hunt and Rhodes, Stewards; Greenwood, P.M., Tyler. A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Pilling, a candidate was proposed for advancement, and the lodge was duly closed. The brethren afterwards passed an hour or two in social enjoyment.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

Red Rose Conclave, No. 12.

The knights of this encampment met in conclave on Thursday evening, 26th ult., at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster. The chair of C. was occupied the M.P.S., the Illus. Sir Knight J. Daniel Moore, Intendant General for the Division of North Lancashire, who was supported by Em. Sir Knight Bagnall, V.E. and Recorder; Sir Knights Wilson Barker, Treas.; W. Hall, L.R.C.P., Prefect; F. Dean, Standard Bearer; J. Tilly, and Frater R. Taylor, Sentinel. The conclave was opened and general business transacted. The ballot was taken for Bro. Edward Airey, S.D. Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281, and Bro. William John Sly, J.D. Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281; and proving unanimous in their favour, they were separately installed as knights of the Order by the M.P.S., who afterward delivered the historical oration.

INSTRUCTION.

Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction, No. 95.—A meeting of this lodge was held on the 23rd ult., Bros. Wainwright, W.M.; Taylor, S.W.; W. Musko, J.W.; Davis, S.D.; and Kennett, I.G., being in their places. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bro. Wainwright worked the ceremony of installation in a very effective manner. Bro. Gotthiel worked the first and second sections of the first lecture. There were also present Bros. Barnes, Stevens, Austin, Scurr, Rugg, Hogg, Weatherall, Field, Bowron, Jetton, Dempsey, and Bradbury. Bro. Mallett, 141, was elected a joining member. The lodge was then closed.

Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, No. 554.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 24th ult. Present: Bros. Scurr, W.M.; Barnes, S.W.; M. Davis, J.W.; Mesurier, I.G.; and Hood, Sec. pro tem. The lodge was opened in due form and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The fifteen sections were worked by Bro. Scurr, assisted by the brethren as follows:—1st Lecture: Section 1, Bro. Salter; Section 2, Bro. Rugg; Section 3, Bro. Hood; Section 4, Bro. M. Davis; Section 5, Bro. Bowron; Section 6, Bro. Austin; and Section 7, Bro. Verry. 2nd Lecture: Section 1, Bro. Barnes; Section 2, Bro.

Cundick; Section 3, Meadway; Section 4, Bro. Barnes; Section 5, Verry. 3rd Lecture: Section 1, Bro. Roberts; Section 2, Bro. Bowron; Section 3, Bro. Austin. There were also present Bros. Middleton, Weatherall, and W. Musto. Bros. Pace and Colliver were elected joining members. The visitors were Bros. Watts, 916; Finlay, 1259; Rowe, 1259; Engle, 188; and Matts, 1076. A vote of thanks to Bro. Scurr for the able manner he had worked the fifteen sections terminated the proceedings, and the lodge was closed in due form.

Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, No. 749.—The usual weekly meeting of this well-known lodge was held on Friday, the 27th ult., at the Wellington Hotel, Spring Gardens. Present: Bros. T. Darke, W.M.; Binnie, S.W.; Beresford, J.W.; Waghorne, S.D.; Geo. Pymm, P.M. 749, I.G.; Bourne, P.M. 749; Elliott Smith, P.M. 157; Sennett, 405; Pulsford, Preceptor; Harper, Secretary. The W.M., in a very able manner, performed the ceremony of initiation, and seven sections were ably worked. At the last meeting but one this lodge voted the sum of £5 to Bro. Geo. Pymm's list, who is acting as Steward for the mother lodge at the annual Festival for the Aged Freemasons. Several of the brethren made a present to Bro. Harper as a small token of their regard and esteem for the way in which he had discharged the duties of Secretary. We strongly recommend those brethren who seek Masonic knowledge to attend this lodge. We need hardly say that under the instruction Bro. Pulsford, assisted by Bro. Bourne, one of the P.M.'s of the mother lodge, the business is conducted in the most able manner.

SCOTLAND.

THE CRAFT.

ANCIENT BRAZEN LODGE, No. 17, LINTHGOV.

The brethren of this ancient lodge commemorated the 112th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, the Scottish national poet, in their lodge-room, Linlithgow, on Wednesday, the 25th ult. The R.W. Master, Bro. David B. Buglass, occupied the chair. After refreshment,

The Worshipful Master gave the usual loyal toasts, followed by the healths of the Grand Masters of England, Ireland, and Scotland. On charging the brethren to fill their glasses to "The Memory of Robert Burns," he spoke as follows:—Brethren, we come now to the toast of the evening, and I am about to ask you to drink to the memory of Scotland's greatest poet, Robert Burns. It says something for a nation, I humbly think, when the memories of the good and great of bygone times, who have lived and died in it, are held in sacred remembrance; and yet, after all, when one looks chrefully into the matter, there seems to be but little gratitude underlying such a feeling, unless, indeed, we term that gratitude which is but the natural expression of public approbation for noble work—well and nobly done. If it is true that all men find their level in the course of the struggle for what is thought to be most desirable in this life, it is equally true, and even more palpably so, that when they have gone the way of all living, their life-work will be appraised at its real value, and thus also find its true level. Past history tells us and our own experience confirms the fact, that it is only the life-work of a few in each generation the standard of excellence of whom towers above that of the great crowd, and in consequence become meet for a nation's homage. They, from their very singularity and rareness, must ever remain the resultant monuments of God-like power; and as such, will ever have an upward and ennobling tendency on mankind. Such a monument Burns has left us in his works. Public scrutiny has not marred its comeliness—not even effaced its polish. It has withstood the shocks of many a storm of criticism in the past; and in our own day, the little puff of a Ferguson, though it had its rise in a pulpit, has not dimmed its lustre. The strictures and detractions of the tight-laced, in things moral and religious, have been powerless to lower the works of Burns in the estimation of his countrymen, and I may say of the civilised world; they have become classic, and what more can we say for them—truly, brethren,

A thing of beauty is a joy for ever.

Of the man himself much has been said, especially as to his moral character and deportment generally. These, we admit, were not perfection; but when we consider the times in which he lived, and the influences by which he was surrounded, they dwindle into a small matter; or if we contrast them with the noble aspirations of his great spirit, and that contrition of soul with which he ever deplored his human weaknesses, they absolutely become swallowed up in a flood of deep atoning penitence. Surely, then, the memory of such a man is well worthy a place in the nation's heart, and I need scarcely say that upon us, as brethren of the "mystic tie," it has strong claims to our affectionate remembrance, and in that light I am sure we will ever continue to hold it. Brethren, allow me, in the poet's own spirit-stirring words, to ask you to discharge a pleasing duty to his immortal memory—

One last request, permit me here,
When yearly ye assemble a';
One round—I ask it with a tear—
To him, the bard, that's far awa'.

Bro. A. Crocket having sung "Rantin Robin" The Junior Warden gave "The Poets of England."

The Senior Warden then proposed "The Poets of Ireland," and spoke of the beauty and pathos of Irish minstrelsy, and of the wit and humour of Irish character.

Bro. Little gave "The Poets of America," after which song and sentiment flowed till the lodge was closed at eleven o'clock—the brethren congratulating themselves on having spent one of the happiest evenings they had enjoyed for a long period.

ABOYNE.—The annual general meeting of the Charlestown Lodge of Aboyne was held within the Huntly Arms Hotel, when the following were appointed office-bearers:—Bros. Lord J. F. G. Hallyburton, R.W.M.; Geo. Paterson, P.M.; Geo. Middleton, D.M.; Joseph Smith, S.W.; Adam Begg, J.W.; Alex. Gray, Treas.; John Birss, Sec.; John Milne, G.S.; George Young, S.S.; William Begg, J.S.; Alex. Gray, Clerk; Peter Esson, D. Todd, John Burgess, and W. Macintosh, Councillors; J. Cunningham, Proxy M.; John Brown and John Beaton, Auditors; Joseph Grant, Tyler; after which the brethren partook of an excellent supper. A happy evening was spent, which was enlivened with the appropriate toasts and some excellent songs.

ROYAL ARCH.

GLASGOW.—On Tuesday, the 31st ult., Chapter 73 met in their Hall, Buchanan-street. Present: Comps. D. Gilchrist, Z.; J. Balfour, P.Z. as H.; Craske, Z. of 322 acting as J.; J. McLeod, Scribe E.; G. W. Wheeler and W. Donaldson, Sojourners; G. M. Donald, 1st Captain of the Veils. Bro. Andrew Bell received the degree of Most Excellent Master, and was afterwards exalted into the Holy Royal Arch; both ceremonies were very effectively worked by Comp. Gilchrist and his officers, and the chapter was closed according to ancient custom.

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE R.W. Bro. Earl Percy, M.P., S.G.W., has consented to preside at the next anniversary festival of the British Orphan Asylum, Slough, to take place some time in March next.

A SPECIAL Mark Lodge will be held at the White Hart Inn, Brislington, on the 9th day of February, at 1.30 p.m. precisely.

Bro. RANSFORD, P.G. Organist, announces that his Annual Evening Concert will take place on Tuesday, the 28th inst., at St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, at 8 p.m. Eminent artistes are engaged to appear.

At a numerously attended meeting of the Plantaganet Conclave, No. 2, Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi Terrace, Strand, on Wednesday, the 1st inst., Sir Knight James Lewis Thomas, Sov.-elect., in the chair, it was resolved that a requisition should be addressed to Sir Knight Col. Burdett, to convene a meeting for the purpose of appointing a General Committee to adopt the best means of promoting the success of the "R. Wentworth Little Testimonial."

WE have much pleasure in announcing that the only matter in difference between the members of the Beadon Lodge (619) has been adjusted, and that the harmony which always prevailed in the lodge prior to July, 1869, has been restored. It is not necessary now to do more than simply allude to the subject of the difference which existed; but it is of great importance that it should be known that the proper step for bringing back the prestige of this famous lodge has at length been taken, and that the removal of the great obstacle to the happiness of the brethren will withdraw that shyness and suspicion with which some very old friends have for the last eighteen months viewed each other. It is very gratifying also to find that at the next meeting in May several candidates for initiation will present themselves, and that Bro. Samuel Wells, the present W.M., who began his year of office in darkest cloud, is likely to terminate it in brightest sunshine.

THEATRICAL.

HAYMARKET.—This fashionable little theatre flourishes, with a good programme that requires no change. "The Poor Soldier," "The Palace of Truth," followed by "Uncle's Will," and concluding with "The Spectre Bridegroom," are the pieces provided for the crowded audiences who patronise this theatre every evening. Mr. Buckstone announces that "The Palace of Truth" will be performed during the whole of February.

QUEEN'S.—It is with great pleasure we are able to notice the reappearance of Mr. and Mrs. Rousby in "Twixt Axe and Crown," with all its original and powerful effects. "Joan of Arc," a new historical play, by Tom Taylor, is in active preparation, and will shortly be produced.

COVENT GARDEN.—We must remind our readers that the last morning performance of the great pantomime, "The Sleeping Beauty," will take place at two o'clock this day (Saturday, 4th inst). This pantomime still retains its attractiveness, and the house is well filled by a large audience every evening.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—This new theatre was opened in Sloane-square on the 25th January. It was once a chapel, but is now a pretty theatre. The lessee and manager is Mr. Litton, under whose auspices a successful season may be anticipated. Punctually at the specified time the curtain drew up on the old Strand farce of "Turn him out." Mrs. Herman Vezin delivered the inaugural address, expressly written for the occasion by Mr. J. Oxenford. The great attraction of the evening was "Randall's Thumb," written for this theatre by Mr. W. S. Gilbert. This was a most successful piece, and was well received by all present. The whole was concluded by a new comedietta by Mr. F. Marshall, called "Q. E. D." The house has been crowded every night since it has been opened.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mrs John Wood made her reappearance in the operatic bagatelle, by Mr. Angas B. Reach, of "Jenny Lind at Last," and gave for the first time in London her imitations of Titiens, Patti, Mario, and Karl Formes with very great success, the theatre being well filled by a fashionable audience. The performance commenced with the comedietta, by Tom Taylor, "To Oblige Benson," followed by the new comedy, by Mr. T. W. Robertson, "War," which, in spite of adverse criticism, maintains its place on the boards, and when more fully understood, is likely to prove a great success. "Jenny Lind at Last" followed, and "An Unhappy Pair" finished an agreeable evening's programme.

ADELPHI.—Mr. Burnard's new drama, "Deadman's Point, or the Lighthouse on Carn Ruth," will be produced this (Saturday) evening, 4th inst, the new and magnificent scenery by Mr. F. Lloyds. "One Touch of Nature" and "The Mistletoe Bough" are the other pieces performed at this popular theatre.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA.—Lodge Star in the East, No. 67.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, on Wednesday evening, the 14th December. Amongst the distinguished brethren present were: R.W. Bros. Judge, P.D.D.G.M.; Dr. Daly, D.D.G.M., M.P.S. Red Cross; Clark, P.D.G.W.; Brown, P.D.G.W. Burmah; and Farr, D.G.W., Red Cross; V.W. Bros. Captain Murray, D.G.S., V.E. Red Cross; and Pitt Kennedy, D.G.R.; W. Bros. Colonel Ford, D.G.D.; and Dove, P.D.G.D.; Bro. Van Gelder, D.G.O.; &c. Captain Moules (Bengal Army) was initiated into the mysteries of the Craft by W.M. Goodricke, assisted by R.W. Bro. Daly and V.W. Bro. Murray. A ballot then took place for the election of Master, Treasurer, and Tyler for the ensuing year, the result being that Bro. William Osmond Allender, S.W. of this lodge, and member of Lodge No. 145 (Prudent Brethren), S. Red Cross, &c., was unanimously elected to the chair of K.S., and Bro. Edmond Healey was elected Treasurer. The brethren then adjourned to refreshment, and after the usual banquet and the toasts of obligation, "The health of the Master" was proposed by R.W. Bro. Clark, and responded to by Bro. Allender, who briefly expressed his gratification at being thus elected to the chair of the oldest lodge in India. "The health of the W. Past Master" was then proposed by Bro. Roberts, and responded to by R.W. Bro. Judge, as the oldest Mason and Past Master in the district. After many other toasts and much harmony, the parting toast was proposed at 10 p.m., "Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again," and a very pleasant meeting was brought to a close. The R.W. the D.G.M. has conferred two purple aprons and one crimson one on brethren of Lodge Star in the East for the ensuing year—the recipients being Bros. Allender, Van Gelder, and Healey.—The regular meeting of Lodge Star in the East, which should have been held on the evening of the 28th December, was held on the morning of that day, on account of the drawing-room at Government House having been fixed to take place in the evening. W. Bro. W. O. Allender, Master of Lodge Marine, No. 232, was duly inducted as Master of this lodge (No. 67) by special dispensation from the R.W. the D.G.M., the ceremony being performed by V.W. Bro. Captain W. G. Murray, D.G. Sec.

LEEDS MASONIC RELIEF COMMITTEE.

The object of this committee is to act as a central board for aiding poor and destitute Masons—and to put an end to indiscriminate alms' giving by private members. Bro. Denton, P.M. and P.G.S.D., has gone warmly into the matter, and has succeeded in forming a committee consisting of two members from each of the Leeds lodges. It is proposed to keep up a weekly correspondence with similar committees in Liverpool, Manchester, &c., so that it may be known in each town what has been done for travelling Masons.

The committee met at the Masonic Hall, on Monday night for the first time, when Bro. Denton was elected President; Bro. Crossby, Secretary; and Bro. Oates, Almoner and Treasurer. A number of rules were drawn up and agreed to, and a circular was ordered to be sent to each of the lodges, requesting the brethren to refer all cases to the Almoner, who has the power to give immediate relief in urgent cases; and the committee will meet every Friday evening. It is expected that a rate of one shilling a member per year from each lodge, will meet all the expenses, and it is believed that the working of such a committee will be attended with excellent results.

DEDICATION of a MASONIC TEMPLE at MANCHESTER, NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Monday, December 26th, 1870, having been fixed upon for the dedicatory services upon the occasion of the completion of the new hall in Masonic Temple, the event was celebrated with imposing ceremonies, a description of which will be given below. The following is a description of the Building:—

The exterior is flanked by two wings, known as the "Globe" and "Johnston" blocks, and presents certainly one of the handsomest fronts in the State, and by far the most imposing in the city. The main building is 100 ft. long by 63 ft. in depth, four stories high and surmounted with a Mansard roof. The first floor, containing a tier of splendid stores, is faced with strong columns of iron; and these are surmounted with a belt and cap of granite. The windows are also trimmed with handsomely arched pieces of dressed granite. The best of brick, lumber, and other material was used in its construction and throughout the work no pains have been spared, either on the part of the owners or the several contractors to make the building a first-class one in every respect. The liberality of the proprietors has been quite in keeping with the magnitude of the undertaking, and the result has been a Temple well worthy the acceptance of the fraternity. The second floor is suitably divided into offices and suites of rooms and is still incomplete. The third and fourth stories are to be occupied and exclusively controlled by the various bodies composing the Masonic Order in this city. Consequently the disposition of the space upon these two floors has been made entirely with reference to the wants of the fraternity, and the projectors have not only listened to the suggestions and consulted their wishes, but have done so with a bestowal of labor and capital which it is but just to characterize as exceedingly liberal, to a greater extent even than could have been reasonably expected. The access to the main hall is by an ample stairway, broad enough for four to march abreast. The steps are of solid ash, the wainscoting of the same, and the railing and uprights of heavy solid black walnut. The hall itself is sixty-two feet in length by forty-five in breadth and sixteen and a half feet from floor to ceiling. The room is amply lighted with high arched windows cased in black ash done in elegant panel work, door casings also in black ash nicely turned, the doors themselves of heavy Michigan pine. The walls and ceiling are finished with a plain white surface, a broad cornice of plaster of Paris running around all. The floor is carpeted with heavy superfine ingrain from the Lowell Co.'s works, the piece being the first of that pattern ever put down. The raised platforms to the south, west and east, were covered with rich tapestry—a green ground sprinkled with flowers—and contrasting finely with the lighter shades of the centre space. The carpeting here, as well as that of the armory, reception and side rooms was furnished by Otis Barton. The gas furnishings are really elegant and tasteful, being a heavy dark bronze, relieved with gilt. The centre chandelier has twelve, and the right and left eight lights each, covered with heavy cut-glass globes. There are wall lights at convenient points, and upright jets at the west, south and east. The several ante-rooms are liberally supplied with means of illumination. Of two admirably executed pictures, painted in oil by J. N. Bruce some years ago and presented to the subordinate lodges, one was saved—that known as the "winding stairs"—and the other, known as the "brazen columns," has been recently repainted by the same artist, and now adorns the north wall. Another large oil painting by Mrs. Bigelow, a "Masonic Chart," hangs upon the east wall. The upper floor is devoted in the main to the purpose of a Banquet Hall, and it is a grand one, and calculated to accommodate eight hundred guests a single sitting. It is seventy feet long by fifty wide, is high posted, amply lighted by twelve windows, six upon each side. For evening sittings eight pendants of four lights each are provided. The walls and ceiling are in hard finish and the floor inlaid in a sort of wood mosaic, of birch, beach, maple, and probably other hard woods.—Access is had to this hall through four double-doors. The room is furnished with two hundred chairs for permanent use, and in the centre are several large tables. Additional tables for extra occasions, as upon this occasion, are to be kept in readiness. A coffee room, with ample provision for pantry, closet and the side rooms occupies the remainder of the upper story. We have no space to speak of the armory, the reception, ante and committee rooms upon the floor below, as in some respects they are yet incomplete. The general arrangement of the whole, as regards convenience, lighting, heating, ventilation, etc., are regarded as nearly perfect, and meet with general and hearty approval on the part of the members of the order.

The number of the tickets issued was eight hundred, and the whole number to be provided for reached upwards of one thousand. W. Master D. O. Farnald of Lafayette Lodge formally declared the lodge open, waiving all ceremony, and a committee of Masons was directed to inform the officers of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire that they were ready to receive them.

The officers of the Grand Lodge entered in slow and solemn procession, preceded by Grand Marshal John M. Shirley, of Andover. The officers of Lafayette Lodge then surrendered their places to the officers of the Grand Lodge, all taking their respective positions. The ceremony of dedication was then performed, presided over by the M.W. Grand Master, J. R. Holbrook, of Portsmouth, assisted by the Grand Marshal, and other officers of the grand body. At a given signal the lodge was uncovered, and prayer was offered by the Grand Chaplain, Rev. M. Adams of Candia. The procession of the Grand Lodge was dignified and imposing in the extreme, and every detail of the very interesting dedicatory services was listened to with breathless attention on the part of the audience.

At suitable intervals rich notes of music arose from a double quartette of wall voices, in response to the words of the Grand Master. This was not the least interesting feature of the evening, as the music performed was the same as that sang at the dedication of Masonic Temple in Boston. This part of the programme was excellently rendered, and demonstrates the fact that we have reached a high point in musical culture.

At the conclusion of the services, which were conducted according to ancient usage from time immemorial, the officers resumed their places, prayer was offered by Chaplain Borden of this city, and the brethren and guests were invited to listen to an address by John P. Newell, Esq.

This address which was historical in its character was extremely interesting, even to non-Masons, admirable in manner and in matter and reflecting great credit upon its scholarly author. He certainly deserves the thanks of the order for so valuable a contribution to Masonic literature.

After the singing of a hymn, Joseph Kidder, Esq. was introduced, who delivered a brief and well written address upon the subject of masonry, recounting with graphic power the great disaster of last summer when their hall was destroyed by fire. Mr. Kidder's remarks were well put and his effort deserves, at it will doubtless receive, the grateful recognition of his brethren in the craft.

At the conclusion of these addresses, the officers of the Grand Lodge surrendered their places to the officers of the Lafayette Lodge, after which the lodge was declared closed, and an invitation was extended to the Grand Lodge and to all visiting members of the order, with their ladies, to proceed to the grand banquet hall, where a feast was spread for the occasion.—Manchester Daily Union, New Hampshire, U.S.

Amongst our numerous contributions awaiting their turn are reports of Lodges 79, 141, 145, and 205, London; 148, Warrington; 271 and 811, Brighton; 292, Liverpool; and 1248, Scarborough; also Mark Lodges 24 and 46.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Easy Digestion.—These admirable pills cannot be too highly appreciated for the wholesome power they exert over all disorders of the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys. They instantaneously relieve and steadily work out a thorough cure, and in its course dispel headache, flatulency, and depression of spirits. It is wonderful to watch the daily improvement of the complexion, as Holloway's pills purify the blood and restore plumpness to the face which has lost both flesh and colour. These pills combine every excellence desirable in a domestic remedy. The most certain and beneficial results flow from the occasional use of this regulating medicine; even persons in health, especially when following a sedentary occupation, will find it an invaluable aperient. —[Adv.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country." — (Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London." — Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixer, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease." —This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Adv.]

FREEMASONRY in ENGLAND

BY THE SON OF SALATHIEL.

THE "ANCIENTS."

"On St. John's Day, June 24th, 1766, the Grand Lodge was not opened, but the brethren met, by permission of the Grand Officers, at the Angel Inn, Whitechapel, and from thence walked in procession to Stepney Church, where an excellent sermon, founded on the General Regulations of the Craft, and upon a suitable text, was preached by the Rev. Mr. Parker Rowlands, our most worthy brother. After the ceremony, the fraternity, amounting to a vast number, with three bands of music, walked in like manner to the Angel aforesaid, where they separated, and each lodge went to dine at the house where held."

At the meeting held at the Bell's Tavern, on the 3rd December following, Bro. Dermott explained to the brethren that Lord Kelly, the Grand Master, wished to retire from his high office, as he was not likely to return to town for a considerable period; but the Grand Secretary stated that he would soon be prepared to submit the name of a "very eminent brother" for the position thus vacated. Bro. Dermott somewhat slyly added that the brother alluded to was a gentleman of fortune, having an "estate of sixteen thousand pounds per annum;" and it may be fairly assumed that this latter announcement was not received as an evidence of the "very eminent" brother's disqualification for the post of Grand Master. In conformity with Bro. Dermott's suggestion, the customary election of a Masonic chief was postponed; but after a smart contest, Bros. William Clarke and Peter Duffy were chosen as Grand Wardens, Bro. Dermott being unanimously continued in the office of Grand Secretary. At this meeting a suitable piece of plate was ordered to be presented to the Rev. Bro. Rowlands "for his great love for the Craft," especially in preaching sermons before the fraternity. On the 27th December, the candidate for the Grand Mastership was announced in favour of the "Honourable Thomas Mathew of Thomas Town in the Kingdom of Ireland, Esquire." It was mentioned as one of the proofs of this gentleman's zeal for Freemasonry that, wherever he resided, "whether in Ireland, Great Britain, or France, he held a regular (?) lodge amongst his own domestics." It is somewhat singular that livery servants have been for many years, and are now, expressly excluded from the privileges of the Order by the laws of the Irish Grand Lodge, and yet one hundred years ago a "Provincial Grand Master of Munster" (for such was Bro. Mathew's rank in his native country) not only admitted them, but courted their society in his own house. Bro. Mathew was unanimously chosen to succeed the Earl of Kelly, and the thanks of the Grand Lodge were voted to the outgoing Grand Master for "the honour and service he had done to the Craft," although he does not appear to have attended the meetings of the brethren once even during his six years tenure of the Grand Mastership. The new ruler was evidently a man of a different stamp, as the following copy of his reply to the Deputy Grand Master's letter, notifying the action of Grand Lodge, will sufficiently indicate:—

Fisher's Lodge, Jan. 5th, 1767.

To Mr. Dickey, in Bow-street, Covent Garden.

Dear Brother,—I am extremely sensible of the great honour done me by the Fraternity, and shall always do my utmost to promote it. I shall come to town on purpose to be installed, of which I shall give proper notice to our worthy Grand Secretary, Mr. Dermott.

I am, with great esteem, dear Sir,
Your sincere friend and humble servant,
(Signed) THOMAS MATHEW, G.M.

Notwithstanding this note, however, the Grand Master-elect was privately installed, a circumstance which gave rise to some unpleasant feeling at a subsequent meeting. On the 12th June, 1767, Bro. Mathew presided over the Grand Lodge in person, when the representatives of 33 lodges, besides the Grand Officers, were present. Four Grand Stewards were chosen at this meeting, and the Rev. Bro. Rowlands was requested to preach a sermon at St. Clement's Church* on St. John's Day following. The next entry is so characteristic of Dermott that it would be high treason to his memory were it to pass unnoticed:—"The Grand Secretary humbly desired that his Worship the Grand Master would be pleased to nominate the text on which the sermon was to be preached." To which the Right Worshipful answered in Latin: "In principio erat sermo ille, et sermo ille erat apud Deum, erat que ille sermo Deus," to which the Grand Secretary made a bow, and said, "Fungor officio meo." And the said sermon was duly preached by Bro. Rowlands on the 24th June, 1767—the new Grand Master being deprived of the pleasure of attending in consequence of a "severe touch of the gout." On this pleasing occasion the ringers at St. Clement's were awarded one guinea for their services, the poor of the parish five guineas, and the beadles ten shillings and sixpence.

* The Rectorship of this church is now filled by a distinguished Mason, the Rev. Robert J. Simpson, P.G. Chaplain.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

We believe the Constitutions published, printed at Dublin, 1744, to be the second edition of the Constitutions under the authority of the Grand Lodge. The only copy we have seen is appended to the "Serious and Impartial Enquiry," by Fifield Dassigny, M.D., Dublin, 1744, in our library. The following is the title page of the laws: "The General Regulations of the Free and Accepted Masons in the Kingdom of Ireland, Pursuant to the English Constitutions. Approved of and agreed upon by the Grand Lodge in Dublin, on the 24th June, 1741. Tullamore, Grand Master. Dublin: Printed by Edward Bate for the Authr. MDCCXLIV." The author was "Edward Spratt," the Grand Secretary, who dedicated the volume "To the Right Worshipful and Right Honourable John Lord Viscount Allen, Grand Master, A.D. 1744, A.L. 5744." Unfortunately, our copy wants some seven pages, and in consequence of this misfortune, we have delayed the reprint of Dr. Dassigny's work, hoping a perfect copy of the laws will be found. On application to the authorities at Dublin, the work is preserved in their archives, so we shall continue our researches for a time. A list of regular lodges in the city of Dublin is inserted at the end of the work. The next edition was issued A.D. 1751, and is entitled the "Book of Constitutions; by Edward Spratt, Sec. J. Butler, Dublin" (172 pages and 40 pages of songs). Both these copies are very like the regulations of Grand Lodge of England, and indeed the latter were generally accepted by Grand Lodges for many years after the Revival. In Scotland, we believe the first independent Book of Constitutions was not issued until A.D. 1804, as an appendix to Bro. Lawrie's "History of Freemasonry." Bro. Spratt, the Grand Secretary, speaks favourably of the progress of the Craft up to A.D. 1751, and since its revival from its low state in 1745.

On the 26th April, 1779, some brethren in Dublin sent a petition for a charter to the Mother Lodge Kilwinning, Scotland, which was supported by Bro. G. A. Cunningham, a Past Warden of this old lodge. The petition read thus: "Brethren studious to follow Freemasonry on the justest principles of the ancient Craft, and willing to derive an authority from the first source, a Regular Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, held in Dublin, have been long desirous to obtain a charter from the esteemed brethren, the ancient lodge of Kilwinning, as they are fully satisfied with the title of Primogeniture. Anxiously soliciting after the attainment of this much-desired object, but at a loss to whom to turn for advice, or where to apply, they count it a fortunate era their meeting with their beloved Brother George Cunningham, Esq., whose friendship pointed out a clue to lead them out of their labyrinth and doubt. Under his auspices, therefore, they apply for a charter from you to hold a lodge, to be called the High Knight Templars' Lodge of Ireland, and hope ever to walk worthy of their vocation, and the high favour you will confer on them by granting it." The petition was granted, and thus was originated the High Knight Templars of Ireland. Although Mother Lodge Kilwinning only authorised the three Craft degrees (and has in fact never worked any others), these brethren, or their successors actually started the degree known as the "High Knight Templar," in consequence of which many have thought that the warrant from Scotland permitted of their so doing, but beyond the name of the lodge no reference whatever in any way is made to such an innovation.

We are not aware of any authorized edition of the "Constitutions of Ireland" between A.D. 1730 and A.D. 1744. There was, however, a work published in 1803 which professes to give the Laws as "published in the year 1738" (viz., Hill's "Ahiman Rezon," Dublin, A.D. 1803). In the same work, the Regulations for the Committee of Charity, "approved of and practised by the Grand Lodge of Ireland since the year 1738," are given, as also the Laws for the Stewards, &c. Laws were also revised and made known to the members in the year 1768, also in 1777 to early in the next century, when a general revision was made of all existing laws, preparatory to a reprint of the "Ahiman Rezon."

At the Grand Lodge held A.D. 1802 the position of the Masonic Female Orphan School was stated to be most unsatisfactory, for "the receipts were inadequate to the support of the establishment." In consequence of this fact the fees for Grand Lodge were raised, and each lodge was required to pay the sum of £1 2s. 9d. annually, instead of 10s. 10d. as heretofore, excepting military lodges, &c. The income of the Grand Lodge for twelve months amounted to the very respectable sum of £684 15s. 11½d. A list accompanies the "Communication" of seven persons excluded from Freemasonry by order. An Emergency Meeting was held 21st June, 1804, to consider a paper addressed to the Freemasons of Ireland, which was declared to be a "false, malicious, and scandalous libel." It seems that there was a dispute, which resulted in the formation of another Grand Lodge! Really, we had no idea of there having been two Grand Lodges in Ireland in working order at the same time, and until perusing these papers, kindly placed in our hands, we never heard of such a "split." We have seen a deal written about the "Moderns" and "Ancients" in England, and we know how, notwithstanding the latter were wrong in setting up an independent authority, and for about seventy years set the regular Grand Lodge at defiance, the original Grand Lodge received them back into the fold A.D. 1813, and ever since all such unseemly squabbles have been avoided. In Ireland it seems a division occurred, and we will carefully examine all the "communications" before writing again. We notice among the lot of papers reports from the Grand Lodge of Ireland from the "Grand East at Ulster." This must be the seceding body of which the Earl of Belmore was Grand Master, A.D. 1810! The Earl of Donoughmore was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge (Dublin).

THE FREEMASON of late has contained several important additions to the history of the "Ancients" in the valuable sketch of "Freemasonry in England," and we therefore cannot do better, having documents in our possession respecting the "Seceders" in Ireland, than to make them known also, as even more information is wanted with respect to the latter than the former.

MASONIC ORDER OF MIZRAIM.

BY MARC BEDARRIDE.

INTRODUCTION.

We learn from this history the time and place, when and where, each Masonic rite was created. In it is also described the anti-fraternal conduct of the ringleaders of the modern rite in 5826 or 1822, who wished to domineer in Masonry; the intolerance and calumny directed from their Temples against our Order, and against the Supreme Council of the Scotch Rite; the tribulations which they caused us by their accusations; our defence; and the refutation by the Scotch Rite of the badly-founded pretensions of our enemies.

But, thanks to the Almighty, to our own perseverance, and to the rightful cause of the children of Mizraim and Heredom, we have triumphed at last, whilst our enemies are covered with confusion. We find in this work details of the various cabals contrived by the plotters of our Order, and the firmness and acuteness with which our supreme rulers have acted. We finish by describing one of those numerous and magnificent ceremonies which have been celebrated within our temples within the Valley of Paris.

In giving our time to this work we have, indeed, been influenced neither by interest or by pride, nor yet by a desire to give greater renown to our venerable Order, or to diminish that of other Masonic rites—nor have we, in reporting the anti-Masonic deeds against us and our rights, been influenced by a desire to sustain or continue our arguments.

We have not stolen from history—our single aim has been, and ever will be, the welfare of our Order. All this the disciples of Mizraim well know; but to demonstrate to them the great desire we have to impart true Masonic knowledge, we have read portions of the following pages, not only in the lodges and councils of our Order, but in the presence of an immense number of Masons of various rites. These have been unanimous in their applause, and have asked us to hasten the issue of this work, which it was then our purpose to keep from the general public.

Thanks to Jehovah, our task is completed. Our greatest hope is, that our young adepts may find in this work the principles of wisdom, discretion, fidelity, goodness, and fraternity, which the great Mizraim has bequeathed to his sons; and, above all, that those brethren who have been misled may be brought back from error to truth, and cured of their intolerance—for tolerance is, and always will be, the most beautiful jewel of our Order, one which will cause the Masons of all rites, each independently of the other, to form that chain of union which should unite the children of the widow in both hemispheres. 90°.

END OF INTRODUCTION.

The above is as nearly as possible a literal translation given in the style and language of our Ill. Bro. Marc Bedarride.

ANCIENT AND PRIMITIVE RITE OF MISRAIM.

A meeting of this sanctuary was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on the 31st ult., under the presidency of the H.P., S. Bro. R. Wentworth Little, 90° G. Arch., supported by S. Bros. Col. F. Burdett, 90°, D.S.G.M. and Regent; Major E. Hamilton Finney, 90°, and Sir Gilbert E. Campbell, Bart., 90°, Grand Experts; by seven of the newly-appointed officers, and about thirty other Levites.

The sanctuary having been duly opened, the M.E.H.P. explained that the principal object of the meeting would be to elect and obligate members of the higher grades of the Rite, but that candidates for the 33° who might be in attendance would be received. Bros. W. Hurlstone, A. Montagu Haynes, and E. H. G. Dalton were accordingly introduced in due form and accepted as Levites. Forty brethren were then selected for the next grade worked, viz., that of "Benevolent Knight," the degree formerly ranking as 67°, but now placed as 66°, in order not to conflict with a degree of somewhat similar ceremonial in the A. and A. Rite. Out of the members of the 66°, eighteen were elected to the 77°, Regulators-General of the Order, and they in turn elected six of their number to the rank of Conservators-General—the 90° or ultimate degree. All having been duly obligated and entrusted in the several grades, the sanctuary was resumed, the alms were collected, the usual solemn closing followed, and the brethren separated.

The ANCIENT & ACCEPTED RITE.

Palestine Chapter Rose Croix of H.R.D.M.

A regular meeting of this new chapter was held at Freemasons' Tavern, London, on the 31st ult., and amongst those present were Ill. Bro. John Hervey, 30°, M.W.S.; R. Wentworth Little, H.P.; Colonel Francis Burdett, 32°, 1st Gen.; Hyde Pullen, 33°; Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, 30°, G. Kenning, H. C. Levander, T. B. Yeoman, J. W. Barrett, T. L. Fox, T. Luty, J. T. Moss, and T. Cubitt.

The minutes of the consecration meeting having been read and confirmed, Bros. R. W. Woodman, M.D., and E. H. G. Dalton, duly approved candidates, were admitted to the 17° by Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, and afterwards perfected as S.P. Rose Croix by the M.W.S., who performed his duties in a highly impressive manner, being ably assisted by Bro. Pullen, who acted as G.M. and Raphael. The M.W.S. then appointed the remainder of the officers as follows: Ex. Bros. Geo. Kenning, 2nd Gen.; H. C. Levander, G.M.; T. L. Fox, Raph.; C. J. B. Plestow, Herald; C. Hammerton, C.G.; E. Stanton Jones, Org.; Captain J. Bertrand Payne, D.C.; and J. W. Barrett, Almoner.

Communications from the Supreme Grand Council 33°, respecting the suspension of a chapter and the expulsion of a brother, were then read, after which the chapter was closed in due form and the brethren separated.

This new chapter already numbers twenty-three members, and bids fair to become one of the most successful ever formed.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

A special meeting of the Grand Senate was convened at Freemasons' Tavern on Tuesday, the 31st ult., for the purpose of conferring the higher grades of the Order upon Ill. Kt. the Rev. G. Raymond Portal, M.A., Intendant-General for Surrey.

A College of Viceroys was first opened by Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little, G.R., assisted by Ill. Kts. Col. F. Burdett, G.S.G., Int.-Gen. Middlesex; Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, M.A., G. High Prelate, Int.-Gen. Wilts; W. H. Hubbard, G.T.; J. G. Marsh, G.A.; Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., G.A.M.; H. C. Levander, M.A., G.A.T.; W. R. Woodman, M.D., G.A.R.; H. Parker, G.O.; T. Cubitt, G.H.; J. Brett, K.G.C.; G. Kenning, K.G.C.; W. Roebuck, J. Lewis Thomas, T. B. Yeoman, J. Weaver, T. Luty, T. L. Fox, J. T. Moss, M. Edwards, J. W. Barrett, E. H. Thiellay, H. M. Green, Major E. Hamilton Finney, E. H. Finney, jun., T. W. White, and about a dozen other knights.

Sir Kts. the Rev. G. R. Portal and the Rev. W. B. Church, after having been entrusted were introduced and received as members of the Priestly grade. A Senate of Princes was then held, when Sir Kts. Portal and Luty were duly enthroned as Sovereigns of the Constantinian Order. The Senate and College were then respectively closed.

The ceremonies were rendered with the advantage of Sir Kt. Parker's services as musical conductor, and the various offices were ably sustained by Sir Kts. Little, Ravenshaw, Marsh, Lewis, and Levander.

THE FREEMASONS' LIFE BOAT.

The committee met at Bro. Forster's, Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on Thursday, the 2nd inst., Bro. A. E. Harris in the chair. There were also present: Bros. Davis, Gottheil, C. C. Taylor, Mortlock, W. Mann, and C. Lacey.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Emanuel, P.M. 205, was elected a member of the committee.

It was then proposed by Bro. Davis, seconded by Bro. Harris, and carried unanimously "That a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes and transmitted to Bro. Johnson, M.R.C.S., P.M. 249 and 1094, for the energetic manner in which he is assisting the efforts of this committee, having forwarded £15 (collected mostly by one shilling subscriptions) in less than six weeks."

GALLANT LIFEBOAT SERVICES.

Dungarvan, Ireland, Feb. 3rd.

The brigantine "Margaret," of Lancaster (says John Hunt, Esq.), bound from Liverpool to Bristol, with a cargo of coals, which went on Dungarvan Bar a few days since, and whose crew were saved by the "Christopher Ludlow" lifeboat of the National Lifeboat Institution, was boarded yesterday by the master and crew, and fifteen other men who were engaged to throw the cargo overboard, to lighten the ship, in the hope that she might then be got off the Bar. The wind, however, increased, and a heavy sea got up, and the position of those on board became very perilous; and thereupon signals were made for the aid of the lifeboat. That boat at once went out, and proceeded alongside, when the coxswain proposed to take ten men off the wreck at first, but all were so apprehensive of the vessel's breaking up, that the whole of the men, twenty in number, crowded into the boat, the master being the last to leave his ship. The lifeboat, which is but a small one, 30 feet long by 6½ feet wide, then had twenty-nine men on board, including her own crew, but all were safely landed. On the way to the vessel a heavy sea broke into the lifeboat, but the water was speedily self-ejected through the patent valves with which most of the Lifeboat Society's boats are fitted.

Ramsey, Isle of Man, Monday.

About eleven o'clock on Saturday night, during a gale on the S.E., a schooner entered Ramsey Harbour, and reported that another vessel was in distress off the Point of Ayr (states the Rev. George Paton). The Ramsey lifeboat "Two Sisters," which belongs to the Lifeboat Society, was immediately launched, and found the schooner "William," of Liverpool, leaking, and in a dangerous position. Some of the crew of the lifeboat were placed on board, and an effort was made to reach Peel, but without effect. Fortunately, however, the wind changed, and Ramsey Harbour was safely reached about ten o'clock last (Sunday) night, after twenty-three hours' service, all hands being saved.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES.

BRO. T. A. ADAMS' ANNUAL BALL.

The annual Masonic ball of the esteemed veteran Bro. T. A. Adams, P.M., P.Z., P.G. Purs., was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Tuesday, the 7th inst., and was a greater success this year than ever—no less than 340 ladies and gentlemen being present. A splendid band was provided, and the company enjoyed the giddy mazes of the dance until about half-past 12 o'clock, when supper was served. After all had partaken of the good things provided, the President, Bro. R. Wentworth Little, P.M., P.Z., P.G. Sec. Middlesex, rose to propose the first toast, and was received with thunders of applause—the cheering being continued for several minutes, during which the worthy brother was fain to bow his acknowledgments for so unexpected an ovation. The toast being "The Queen and the Craft," was cordially received. Bro. Little then, in a highly complimentary speech, proposed "The Ladies," and it is needless to add that the health of the fair sex was welcomed with a burst of enthusiasm. Bro. John Boyd, P.M., P.Z. 145, returned thanks for the ladies in a brief but very effective speech. "The health of the President," coupled with that of Bro. Adams, was the last toast announced, the proposer being Bro. H. M. Levy, P.M. 185, who spoke in most flattering terms of the brethren named. Bros. Little and Adams expressed their gratitude for the kind reception of the toast, and the latter brother concluded his speech amid general demonstrations of approval. The company then returned to the hall-room, and enjoyed themselves until 5 o'clock, when dancing terminated.

The whole proceedings were characterized by complete success, and Bro. Adams is to be congratulated upon the support he obtained, and so richly deserved at the hands of his brethren in Masonry. Among the brethren present, with their ladies, we noticed, besides those already named: Bros. A. J. Codner, T. Cubitt, E. A. Baber, W. Hale, C. A. Cottebrune, D. G. Berri, W. Paice, T. Hyles, R. A. Steel, E. T. Osbaldeston, E. H. Thielley, T. Webb, W. Webb, M. A. Loewenstark, T. Tyrrell, and E. Coste.

MASONIC BALL AT PENDLETON.

A grand Masonic ball, in aid of the funds of the Salford and Pendleton Royal Hospital and Dispensary took place at the Pendleton Town Hall on 2nd Feb., upon which occasion a most brilliant and numerous assemblage was present. As we anticipated, the efforts of the brethren of the order in giving publicity to their object were pre-eminently successful, and the natural result was that the attendance evinced great interest and sympathy to the object both on the part of the public generally and the Craft in particular. To those brethren who first promoted the affair, and subsequently carried out the arrangements, the greatest credit is due. To particularise would, perhaps, be invidious, but we cannot forbear giving our testimony to Brother Uriah Nichols, in particular, for his persevering efforts in organising the scheme, and to Bros. B. Taylor, H. Holder, E. Brooks, J. Dickson, R. F. Woodruff, C. Eccleston, W. Riddell, T. Ellis, J. Harrop, A. H. Allen, R. Johnson, J. S. Whitaker, J. Bury, E. Simpson, Geo. Larmuth, and others, who also formed the committee for carrying out the object. Under such an efficient management, therefore, the ball programme was laid out, and a splendid list of patrons consisting of noblemen and gentlemen holding the highest honours in the Craft, besides others who were not of the order, who laudably and readily contributed their names in order to further the cause.

The corporate authorities, likewise, entered into the spirit of the undertaking, who after a deputation had waited upon them in reference to the Town Hall, Pendleton, kindly granted the free use of the whole building. In fact, a purely Masonic spirit seems to have pervaded the whole community, which culminated on Thursday evening. At eight o'clock visitors began to arrive at the hall, and continued to do so, without intermission, until after eleven o'clock. As the guests alighted from the vehicles which were drawn up at the entrance in Broughton Road—the floor of the entrance-hall and grand staircase being covered with crimson cloth, while on each side, and on the landing, were ranged trees and shrubs—they were received by a number of the past officers of the various lodges, dressed in the full regalia of the order, which had a most striking and imposing effect. Large suites of rooms were available as dressing and retiring rooms, from whence the visitor proceeded to the ball room. At the foot of the staircase, ranged on each side, the band of the Salford Rifle Volunteers, by the kind permission of Lieut.-Colonel Barrett, played a choice selection of music with great effect. Upon entering the ball room each lady and gentleman received a beautiful programme of the dances, and at nine o'clock dancing commenced to the strains of Bro. Batley's celebrated quadrille band. The scene at once became charming in the extreme. The room was brilliantly lighted, and bright crimson cloth upholstery the seats entirely round the room gave a striking effect to the white damask-covered floor, upon which traversed in the mazy dance the forms of "fair women and brave men." It was only to be expected that beauty and elegance would be characteristic of such an assembly, but it is utterly impossible to convey an adequate idea of the varied forms presented to the onlookers, of whom there were many. Amongst the very large number of guests present we observed Alderman Higson; Councillors, Bros. Jenkins, Jones, Goodwin, Dyson, Ommanney; M'Kerrow, Sewell, Lightbown, Grundy, Nosworthy, Nall, Walker, and Nuttall; Bro. Lieut.-Col. Barrett; Dr. Pankarst, L.L.D.

Some of the most striking features of the ball were in the grotesque, yet at the same time magnificent and harmonious blending caused by the "rich and rare" dresses of members of the various degrees of Masons. At eleven o'clock much interest was created by the entry of the Royal Arch Masons, of whom about fifty were present. At the "witching hour" another event occurred in the appearance of the Knights Templar, whose dress was superbly rich. Then it was that the ball seemed to become "a fancy dress one," and the spirit of the dance was gone into with even greater vigour than before; and until nearly five o'clock the light fantastic toe tripped it. Bros. R. F. Woodruff and T. Ellis directed the ceremonies, and owing to their admirable arrangements the comforts of the visitors were most particularly attended to; and many a bashful maid and jovial swain were indebted to them for the pleasure of inscribing their names on So-and-So's programme. The stewards of the evening, Bros. B. Taylor, Jno. Barker, Allen, Harrop, Larmuth, and J. Dickson, were also well and worthily appreciated, and the result of the combined efforts of all will no doubt be a handsome surplus to the funds of the above institution.

The decorations were by Mr. J. C. Williams, of Peter-street, Manchester, and the taste displayed by that artist entitles him to creditable mention here. The refreshments, which were of a most excellent character, were laid upon tables on the landing in the hall. They were of first-class quality, and in great variety, the guests partaking of them ad lib., and were supplied by Bro. Pearson, of Cheetham Hill, in his usual creditable manner.

METROPOLITAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

The anniversary banquet of this flourishing lodge of instruction was held at the Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, on Friday, the 27th ultimo, at 7 o'clock. Bro. James Brett, the Preceptor, occupied the chair, and was supported, right and left, by Bros. Still (Secretary), Major Finney and his son, John Boyd, Wm. Carpenter, Geo. Kenning, several W.M.'s and P.M.'s of metropolitan lodges, and about fifty brethren. The banquet was a very ample and varied one, and was admirably served.

Upon the withdrawal of the cloth, the chairman proposed the usual Masonic toasts, which were received and drank, as they always are, with great heartiness. In proposing the toast of the evening, the chairman reviewed the past progress of the lodge of instruction, and gave a very gratifying account of its present condition, urged brethren who did not attend lodges of instruction to do so forthwith, and earnestly pressed upon all present a conscientious discharge of their Masonic duties towards the Craft and the world at large. (The toast was received with applause, and was heartily responded to.)

Bro. Wm. Carpenter proposed "The health of the Chairman and Preceptor of the Lodge, Bro. Brett," and recapitulated some of the many services he had rendered and was still rendering to Masonry, Craft and Arch, and anticipated similar services from him in some of the higher grades, of which he was a member. He had laboured hard to acquire a perfect knowledge of the Masonic rituals, and he was as free in imparting knowledge as he had been diligent in acquiring it. (The toast was heartily responded to.)

The Chairman, in proposing the health of Bro. Still, the respected Secretary, spoke very highly of his indefatigable labours, and of the heavy obligations under which they lay to him for the prosperous career and condition of the lodge; and Bro. Still, in responding, furnished some gratifying facts, as to the progress and prospects of the lodge, and renewed his promises of exertion on its behalf.

Several other toasts followed, including the health of the visitors, which was responded to by Bro. Major Finney, Gordon, and George Kenning. The evening was in all respects a very pleasant one, and several brethren gratified the meeting by their contributions of song.

METROPOLITAN.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—This old, prosperous, and flourishing lodge held its usual meeting on Tuesday, 31st ult., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street. Bro. J. Speed, W.M., opened the lodge, and there were present: Bros. C. C. Taylor, S.W.; Green, J.W.; Haster, P.M., Treas.; Anslow, P.M., Sec.; Themans, S.D.; Catmur, J.D.; Kennett, I.G.; Hill, I.P.M.; Gottheil, Hyde, T. Arnold, Pope, Harris, and Gluckstein, P.M.'s; and a large number of brethren. The visitors were Bros. Lailham (1316), Weybeth (25), T. White (22), F. Walters (W.M. 1309), Austin (933), W. Hamer (97), H. Ash (179), Wiseman (172), Wylett (1000), C. A. Long (W.M. 25), &c. The minutes were read and confirmed. The work done was raising Bros. Berenfield, Cronmire, Whitby, and Wilson to the third degree, passing Bros. Bartlett, Keeler, and Abbot to the 2nd degree, and initiating Messrs. Davis and Hutton into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry, the ceremonies being well and ably performed. The lodge was then closed, when banquet followed.

St. Thomas's Lodge, No. 142.—On Saturday, the 4th inst., at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars, this old lodge held its installation meeting. Bro. Dubois, W.M., opened the lodge, supported by his officers, when the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. In consequence of failing health, the W.M. did not feel himself able to undergo the fatigue of working the ceremony of installation, and he therefore deputed Bro. Cockcraft, P.M. and Sec., to work it for him, who then took the chair. The W.M. presented Bro. James L. Thomas, P.M. 492 and I.G., the W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation, who was duly installed as the W.M. for the ensuing year, the beautiful ceremony having been performed by Bro. Cockcraft in such a manner as to elicit the commendation of the Grand Secretary. After the readmission of the brethren and the usual salutes, the W.M. invested the officers as follows: Bros. J. Batstone, S.W.; R. G. Scarth, J.W.; W. Battye, Treas.; Ed. Cockcraft, Sec.; Rookes, S.D.; Carlyle, J.D.; and F. G. Bailey, I.G. The addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren were then delivered in a masterly manner by Bro. Cockcraft. A Past Master's jewel was then for the second time presented to the retiring Master, who had so ably filled the chair for two years, and the lodge was closed. Amongst the visitors were the V.W. Bro. John Hervey, P.S.G.D. and G. Sec. of England; and Bros. John Boyd, P.M. 145; Taffs, P.M. and P.G.J.D.; Hanbly, W.M.-elect of St. Mark's; Ibbetson and Bailey, of St. Andrew's; F. Binckes, Sec. of the Boys' School; &c. The brethren then sat down to the banquet, under the presidency of Bro. Thomas, W.M., supported on his right by the Grand Secretary and the other visitors, and on his left by Bros. Dubois, the I.P.M.; Innes, R.V.; John Kirk, W.M. 1328; and several other P.M.'s of the lodge. The usual toasts were given, and the V.W. Bro. John Hervey's name was mentioned in eulogistic terms by the W.M. in giving the toast of "The R.W. Deputy Grand Master and the rest of the Grand Officers," which was responded to in the most felicitous terms by the Grand Secretary, who took occasion to remark that though it was the first time he had the pleasure of participating in the hospitality of St. Thomas's Lodge, he hoped it would not be the last.—Bro. Dubois, I.P.M., proposed "The W.M." He said that, having himself filled the chair for two years, he had become so accustomed to the position, that he could scarcely bring himself to think that the gavel he then held was only placed in his hands for a short time; but when he thought that the reason why he held it was to do honour to his successor, he felt that if he retained it in his possession until he had said all he wished to say on a theme so pleasing to himself and so welcome to the brethren present, he should keep them so long that they might justly think that he coveted a new lease of power. He would, therefore, with all his heart wish prosperity to Bro. Thomas as W.M. of St. Thomas's Lodge.—Bro. Carter then sang one of his beautiful songs to the delight of all present, and the W.M. responded to the toast by saying that he had attained the summit of his ambition in Masonry by being called upon to preside over so ancient a lodge as St. Thomas's, which was within a couple of years of obtaining her centenary, during which time that chair had been filled by some of the most distinguished names in the annals of the Craft; but there were none whose names were more endeared to them than that of Bro. Dubois, their immediate Past Master, who had the distinguished honour of presiding over them for two years successively, instructing them with the accuracy of his working in lodge, charming them by the genial kindness of his disposition, and entrancing them by the eloquence with which he gave utterance to those sentiments so dear to every true Mason. To succeed such a brother gave rise to mingled sensations of pleasure and sadness. Sadness, that we should not again see him in that chair he filled so ably, nor listen again to his sparkling wit and earnest pathos which had so often made the hours pass on unheeded; and pleasure, that during the coming year of office the W.M. would always have him near to turn to for counsel and advice. With such assistance he hoped to perform the duties of the high position in which he had been placed by the kind confidence of the lodge in a satisfactory manner; and although the members might not be able to award him that meed of praise so well deserved by his predecessor, he trusted they would be able to say, "He has done his duty."—Bros. Taffs and Boyd responded for "The Visitors," of whom there were fifteen.—The W.M. introduced "The Masonic Charities," earnestly and feelingly commending each brother present to hallow the festive board by thinking of those in need of more than sympathy, who a few short years back were probably enjoying themselves as they were now.—Bro. Binckes replied, and made an eloquent and touching appeal to the feelings of all present. Bro. Dubois replied for the P.M.'s, and Bro. Battye and Bro. Cockcraft for the Treasurer and Secretary in their usual happy style; Bros. Batstone, Scarth, Rookes, Carlyle, and Bailey for the officers of the lodge, and the brethren then separated, after enjoying a most delightful evening.

Prudent Brethren Lodge, No. 145.—The installation meeting of this celebrated lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall on the 24th ult. Bro. T. Moore, W.M., opened the lodge, supported by his officers and a large number of the members. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M., in an able manner, initiated Messrs. John Jones, Elisha Solomon, and H. S. Richard. Bro. Boyd, P.M. and Treas., then took the chair, and in his well-known superior style installed Bro. Walter, who appointed as officers: Bros. Last, S.W.; Cambridge, J.W.; J. Boyd, P.M., Treas. (reappointed); G. S. States, P.M., Sec. (reappointed); Milligan, Asst. Sec.; Jones, S.D.; Bull, J.D.; Purkis, I.G.; E. H. Thierlay, D.C.; Grant, Tyler (reappointed). The lodge was duly closed and banquet followed. More than sixty brethren were present during the evening; Bros. Donald King and Giles sang their usual good songs.

Lodge of Israel, No. 185.—The above lodge met on Tuesday, the 24th ult., at Radley's Hotel, Bridge-street, Blackfriars. The W.M., Bro. M. J. Emanuel in the chair; H. Harris, S.W.; M. Emanuel, J.W.; A. Cohen, P.M., and Honorary Secretary; Joel Emanuel, I.G.; and Past Masters J. M. Harris, Chamberlain, S. Harris, and W. Littaur. The lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. Bros. J. Samuel and Rexworthy, being thoroughly proficient in the necessary questions, were raised to the 3rd degree. This being the night for the installation for the W.M., Bro. A. Cohen, P.M., then took the chair, and Bro. S. Harris presented Bro. H. Harris, S.W., and W.M. elect, to the lodge, and Bro. A. Cohen, P.M., and Honorary Secretary, performed that beautiful ceremony in a very perfect and impressive manner, that gave great satisfaction to every brother and visitor present. On the re-admission of the brethren, the W.M. was saluted in the various degrees, and he then invested his officers as follows:—Bros. M. J. Emanuel, I.P.M.; M. J. Emanuel, S.W.; —, Hogard, J.W.; and he appointed Bro. C. Coote, P.M., Treasurer; A. M. Cohen, P.M., Honorary Secretary; Joel Emanuel, S.D.; — Ayden, J.D.; J. E. Morse, I.G.; P. Phillips, D.C.; and Bro. Vesper, Tyler. The W.M. in investing his officers addressed a few but appropriate remarks to those brethren in connection with those offices. The newly installed W.M. then proceeded to initiate Messrs. Kirke (comedian Holborn Theatre), Sparks, M. Marks, S. Gompers, and G. S. Marks, into the Order, in a very able and effective manner, and the brethren present expressed their satisfaction that so young a Mason, on his occupying the chair, should be so proficient. The lodge was then called off, and the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, supplied by Bro. Hart, and superintended by his nephew. On the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and masonic toasts were given. Bro. J. Emanuel, I.P.M., proposed the toast of the W.M., whom he said was a source of congratulation to every brother of the lodge to see that so young a brother in Freemasonry had not only invested his officers in the excellent addresses given to them, but on his occupation of the chair had initiated five gentlemen into the Order in so perfect a manner for so young a Mason. (Cheers.) They had placed the right man in the right place. The W.M. in a few select observations responded. The W.M., in proposing the toast of the Benevolent Fund attached to the lodge, said he was pleased to see brethren connected with that fund present on this occasion connected with the charity, and he would couple with it the name of a Past Master and the Treasurer, namely, Bro. J. M. Harris, who was one of its staunchest supporters. (Cheers.) Bro. J. M. Harris, in responding for the toast, said he had only been elected Treasurer to that fund; it was entirely local, and he felt it a degree of pride to say that those who had been relieved or might unfortunately require the assistance of that fund, it was never known beyond the members of the Committee. He then stated that the W.M., who occupied the chair, was his own brother; he was also a Past Master, and also his brother, S. Harris, P.M., and it was a source of pleasure to see three brethren occupying that chair, each one working their way in the space of seven years. (Cheers.) Bro. A. M. Cohen, P.M., and Secretary, announced, after the eloquent speech of Bro. J. M. Harris, P.M., that the following donations to that fund had been handed to him, viz.:—The W.M. 21s., Bros. Gompers, 21s., G. S. Marks, 21s., M. Marks, 21s., M. J. Emanuel, S.W., 10s. 6d., —, Hogard, J.W., 10s. 6d., J. M. Harris, P.M., 10s. 6d., A. M. Cohen, P.M., and Honorary Secretary, 10s. 6d., P. Phillips, D.C., 10s. 6d., Kirke, 10s., Sparks, 10s. 6d., A. Marks, 10s. 6d., Ayden, J.D., 10s. 6d., Emanuel, 10s. 6d., H. Barnard, P.S.W., 10s. 6d., M. J. Emanuel, I.P.M., 10s. 6d., H.

Lyons, P.W., 10s. 6d., M. Abrahams, (East London Theatre), 10s. 6d., Pierpoint, 5s. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the brother who had preceded him in the occupation of the chair. He had conducted those duties to the satisfaction of the brethren, and they, in recognition of his services, had delegated him (the W.M.) to present him, on his retirement from office, with a jewel and a very elegant clock. The jewel bore a very appropriate inscription. Bro. M. J. Emanuel thanked the brethren in a very able speech. The W.M., in proposing the toast of the Initiates, said it was a source of great gratification that on his occupying the chair for the first time, to have had the pleasure of initiating five gentlemen personally known to him, and he was sure they would prove a credit and honour to the Craft. Bro. Kirke, in a very eloquent manner, returned thanks for the toast. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the Visitors. Bro. H. G. Buss, P.M., responded to the toast. They were—Bros. S. M. Lazarus, P.M. 188, P.G., S.W. (Wilts); J. Jacobs, P.M. No. 1, U.S. America; E. P. Albert, P.M. 188; J. Nicholls, W.M. 861; S. Davis, 141; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188; R. A. Temple, P.M. 749, and Dobie Lodge, Kingston; M. Alexander, W.M. 188; J. Holbrook, P.M. 185; N. Braham, 1017; J. Abrahams, 188; S. A. Kisch, W.M., 1017, Maurice; A. Hyman, 188; C. Lynes, 188, and Gutnacher. Bro. A. M. Cohen, P.M. and Honorary Secretary, responded for the Past Masters, and said it was always gratifying to have initiations, but this evening there were six candidates, but being bound by the laws of Freemasonry, only five could be initiated in one night, and those gentlemen were initiated by the W.M. in very creditable manner; that must be a source of pleasure to the brethren to show the excellent selection they had made. He (Bro. Cohen) was gratified to hear the expression of the W.M. and the brethren, on his performing the ceremony of installation, and he, in conjunction with every Past Master in the lodge, would do all in their power to support the dignity of the chair. The toast of "The Officers" was responded to by Bro. M. J. Emanuel. The lodge was then resumed. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and a vote of condolence was accorded to the widow of a brother who had only been a short time initiated in the lodge. It was then closed, and the brethren experienced a great musical treat. Miss Fitzhenry delighted the brethren with her charming voice; her beautiful singing was loudly re-demanded, and created quite a furor. Bro. Morris Abrahams (lessee East London Theatre), sang "Simon the Cellarer," in a very artistic and humorous manner. Bros. Milton and S. Davis contributed to the harmony, and Bro. P. Phillips, D.C., gave a capital recitation. The latter brother, and Bro. A. M. Cohen, P.M., were unceasing the efforts to secure the comfort of the brethren and visitors. The brethren separated after enjoying a very agreeable evening.

Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192.—The regular meeting of this old lodge was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Thursday, the 2nd inst. Bro. George Kenning, W.M., occupied the chair, supported by the following officers: Bros. Francis Trott, J.W.; W. Goodyer, P.M., Treas.; J. G. Marsh, P.M., Sec.; George Abbott, S.D.; A. J. Dickenson, J.D.; Geo. Newman, I.G.; Thos. Cohe, D.C. The lodge having been opened in the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd degrees, Bros. Frank Baker and Arthur Garnett, after having passed the usual examination, were duly raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The lodge was then resumed in the second degree, and Bros. W. Donne, G. Chillingworth, and Sydney Edwards were passed to the degree of F.C. The working of the two degrees was rendered by the W.M. in a very able manner. The business on the agenda having been disposed of, the W.M. rose and said he had a very pleasing duty to perform. The brethren at the last lodge meeting had unanimously voted to Bro. Ebenezer Roberts, the I.P.M., a Past Master's jewel, and he (the W.M.) had much pleasure, on behalf of the lodge, in presenting and placing the same on his breast, and he trusted Bro. Roberts would receive it as a mark of the respect and esteem of the brethren for the very able manner he had discharged his duties as W.M. during the past year. The W.M. in so doing expressed a hope that the Great Architect of the Universe would bless him with a long life to wear it, and that he would be a useful Past Master of the lodge. (The jewel is of 18-carat gold and of the value of 10 guineas, of the most superb description, and beautifully designed.) There being no further business, the lodge was closed in due form and adjourned. The brethren then retired to a slight refreshment, presided over by the W.M., after which they separated at an early hour. Amongst the members present we noticed Bros. T. Fisher, A. C. Payne, E. Jones, S. Haynes, G. Parker, J. Kent, Chas. Arkell, W. R. Baker, J. T. Marks, T. J. Wheeler, and G. J. Smith. The following visitors were also present: Bros. Bryant, Master-elect No. 12; W. H. Mumford, J.W. 931; and Dr. W. M. Wheeler, 317, Kilwinning Lodge, Scotland.

Burgoyne Lodge, No. 902.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 23rd ult. Bro. W. Yevers, W.M., presided, and there were also present Bros. H. Smith, S.W.; W. Simmons, J.W.; S. Poynter, P.M., Treas.; L. R. Rogers, S.D.; R. Field, J.D.; T. Allen, I.G.; H. Allen, Gastrick, Page, E. Legg, P.M.'s; and many lay members. The visitors were Bros. F. Walters, W.M. 1309; Parker, 250; C. E. Thompson, S.W. 1158; and others. The work done was initiating Messrs. H. Smith, G. P. Smith, and Sharman; and passing Bro. H. Hencke. Bro. H. Smith, the S.W., was unanimously elected W.M. Bro. Poynter was re-elected Treasurer, as also was the Tyler. After the lodge was closed the brethren adjourned to banquet.

Urban Lodge, No. 1196.—The installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's-gate, Clerkenwell, on the 24th ultimo. The lodge having been opened by the W.M., Bro. Wm. Sawyer, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed, Bros. G. Palmer, W.M. 11, and W. M. Mayland, 441, were unanimously admitted as joining members. The W.M., in a proficient manner, initiated Mr. Buckingham into the Order. Bro. James Terry, P.M. and Sec., then took the chair and installed Bro. Charles Braid (the musical composer) as W.M., who appointed as his officers: Bros. J. R. Ware, S.W.; C. Wilson, J.W.; Dr. Johnstone, Treas.; J. Terry, Sec.; Kuster, Org.; J. Callingham, S.D.; W. Simpson, J.D.; R. Pearson, I.G.; Beckett, P.M., Tyler. The concluding addresses were given and the ceremony completed, the working of which, for its correctness, style, and able rendering was appreciated by all present, who fully acknowledged the superior manner in which it had been done. The lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to the usual good banquet, which, served up under the superintendance of Bro. Wickens, gave satisfaction to all. The W.M. presided at the festive board and, after the cloth had been removed, proposed the usual loyal toasts, which were duly honoured. He gave the health of the I.P.M., Bro. Sawyer, in a suitable speech, concluding by presenting him, in the name of the lodge, with a P.M.'s jewel, as a token of the esteem and affection of the members. The jewel bears the following inscription:—"Presented by the Urban Lodge, No. 1196, to Bro. William Sawyer, in appreciation of his valuable services as W.M. during the past year. 24th January, 1871." Bro. Sawyer acknowledged this gift in a capital speech. Other toasts followed, and the brethren did not separate till a late hour. Visitors: Bros. Veal, Douglas, G. A. Littlewood, A. Braid, and several other brethren.

Lodge of Asaph, No 1319.—This young and prosperous lodge held its regular monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on the 6th inst. at 1.30 p.m., in the Moria Room. Present: Bros. E. Stanton Jones, W.M.; Charles Coote, S.W.; J. M. Chamberlin, J.W.; Charles Coote, jun., Treas.; James Weaver, S.D.; E. C. Frewin, J.D.; C. S. Jeykell, I.G.; G. W. Martin, Org.; W. A. Tinney, D.C.; Frederick Burgess, G. Horton, J. Egerton, Thos. Edgar, H. Snyders, H. Snelling, W. H. Weston, J. M. Ball, W. T. Maby, H. J. Tinney, G. Tyler, J. Boatwright, and C. H. Stephens. Visitors: Bros. J. Laars, Perséverante Amitié, O. de Paris; H. F. Moale, Astrea, 972; P. A. Charrier, Dinapore, 1210; C. J. Cooper, St. John and St. Paul, 349. The business consisted in balloting for Messrs. Joseph Baker and John Tiplady Carrodus for initiation, and Bros. Frederick Burgess and Edward Terry as joining members. The ballot proved unanimous in their favour, and Mr. J. Baker being in attendance, was duly initiated into Freemasonry as an Entered Apprentice. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bros. H. J. Tinney, H. J. Snelling, and J. Egerton passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bros. W. A. Tinney, J. M. Ball, H. Snyders, W. H. Weston, and W. A. Easton raised to the degree of M.M. All the candidates for the second and third degrees answered the usual questions in the examinations faultlessly. The W.M. insists upon every candidate making himself proficient in the former before giving him a superior degree, according to the Book of Constitutions (large edition, page 83, par. 1). We should like to see this rule carried out in every lodge, as it is clearly stated "that a candidate is not entitled to receive a superior degree unless he give proof of his proficiency in the former. The respective ceremonies, charge, and lecture on the tracing board, were given by the W.M. in his usual impressive and grammatical manner. Mr. John Strachan, dramatic author, was proposed for initiation, and Bro. J. L. Toole, comedian, as a joining member. It is proposed to subscribe to the "Little" Testimonial, and the amount will be decided at the next meeting. The business being finished, the lodge was closed in due form. The respectability and financial position of so young a lodge (this being only its third meeting since the consecration) is most satisfactory; mustering 33 members all paid up, and the founders free from the costly debt of furnishing the lodge, everything of which is of the best quality, and the jewels sterling silver. The founders of the Lodge of Asaph have proved what can be done with energy and good management, and we therefore wish it every success in its future.

PROVINCIAL.

LYNN.—Philanthropic Lodge, No. 107.—On Saturday evening last, the Philanthropic Lodge, No. 107, of which the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master of England, is a member, was honoured with a visit by his Royal Highness, who was attended by the Rev. W. Lake Onslow, the Prince's private chaplain, and chaplain to the lodge, and Bro. Francis Knollys, of the Keystone and Westminster Lodge, No. 10. The brethren of the lodge to the number of about 25, having assembled in the lodge room at the Globe Hotel, received his Royal Highness with Masonic honours; and, having taken his seat on the right of the principal chair, he commanded Bro. J. T. Banks, the officiating Worshipful Master, to open the lodge. The usual ceremonies were then proceeded with, and Bro. Francis Knollys was advanced to the degree of a Fellow Craft Freemason. At the conclusion of the business of the evening, the Prince addressed the assembled brethren in a very feeling and impressive manner upon the principles and benefits of Freemasonry, expressing his earnest desire for their wide extension both within and without the Craft—adding with much emphasis: "And then we shall have peace." His Royal Highness also spoke in terms of gratification of the reception he had met with, and the manner in which the duties of the lodge had been performed. The lodge was then closed. Before returning to Sandringham, the Prince honoured with a visit Mr. T. M. Kendall, (a Past Master of the lodge, and surgeon to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales), at his residence, in St. James's-street. His Royal Highness had been hunting in the morning, and changed his attire at Viscount Marsham's, Gayton Hall, near Lynn, proceeding thence in a private carriage with Mr. Onslow and Mr. Knollys to Lynn. A private room adjacent to the lodge was placed at his service, and he there donned the splendid insignia of his office. Passing up the lodge room between the brethren, who gave the "grand and royal" on his arrival, and the same on his departure. His stay lasted an hour and a half. The tracing board in the second degree was explained to Bro. Knollys by Bro. G. S. Woodwark, W.M.-elect, who was then S.W. G. Sadler, P.M., acted as J. W., and C. T. Ives, P.M., as S.D.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights, No. 148.—The regular monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Rooms on Monday evening last week. The W.M., Bro. Wm. Richardson, was supported by Bros. J. Jackson, S.W.; W. Sharp, J.W.; John Bowes, P.M., P. Prov. G. Reg.; H. B. White, P.M., Prov. G. Deacon; and about forty other brethren. The lodge was opened in form, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second degree, when Bros. J. H. Gornall, M.R.C.S. Eng., and Rev. J. D. Massingham, D.D., claimed preferment, and having proved their claim, were entrusted and retired. On re-admission they were raised by the W.M., assisted by Bros. Stevenson, White, and Bowes. The lodge was closed down, and the brethren separated in harmony.

BATLEY.—Nelson of the Nile Lodge, No. 264.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 30th ult., at their lodge room, Freemasons' Hall, Park-road, Batley, Yorkshire. Bro. Benjamin P. Parker, W.M., occupied the chair, supported by Bro. Jas. A. Parr, S.W.; W. H. L. Newsome, J.W.; Wm. Parker, S.D.; J. L. Heaton, J.D.; M. Parker, I.G.; R. Brearey, Sec.; A. Talbot, Treas.; Jas. Preston, D.C.; A. Parker, Org.; M. Whitaker and J. Kitchen, Stewards; J. H. Senior, I.P.M. Visitors: Bro. W. Ward, W.M. 971; Bro. Joseph Hebblethwaite, in addition to a strong muster of the members. The lodge was opened by the W.M., when the minutes of the last regular lodge meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for the admission into Freemasonry of Messrs. John Sheard and James Parker, which proving unanimous, and they being in attendance, were initiated into the Order, the ceremony being gone through by the W.M. and J. J. Parker, which, with the help of the officers was rendered very effectively. Bros. John Wm. Blackburn and Chas. Clifton were passed to the degree of F.C., the ceremony being gone through by the W.M. and the I.P.M., Bro. J. H. Senior; after which the brethren took up the business of the lodge respecting the annual gathering of their wives and sweethearts, when the lodge was closed in peace and harmony.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Sincerity, No. 292.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, on the 9th ult., when, after the usual routine business was disposed of, a letter was read from the W.M. of 1013 requesting that the third degree might be conferred on Bro. Dr. Arkins of that lodge, who was immediately proceeding to sea. Bro. Llewellyn being also present for taking his third degree, after the usual preliminaries had been compiled with, Bro. T. Wylie, P.M. and P.G.R., proceeded to raise the two brethren to the sublime degree of M.M. The lodge was then closed down, and it was announced that an emergency lodge would be held at the end of the month for the purpose of installing Bro. Pelham, the W.M.-elect, at that time away for the benefit of his health. No other business appearing, the lodge was closed, and the brethren separated. The W.M. and several members of 1013 honoured the proceedings with their presence.—A lodge of emergency was held on Monday, the 30th ult., when a goodly number of members and visitors met to congratulate the W.M.-elect on his return with renewed health, and to assist at his installation. The lodge being opened, Bro. Pelham was presented to the P.G.R., acting as W.M., by Bros. R. Wylie and Holbrook. After the usual preliminaries, a Board of Installed Masters was declared to be sitting, and the P.G.R. proceeded with the installation. On the readmission of the brethren, the following were invested officers:—Bros. Wilson, S.W.; Hustwick, J.W.; Hess, P.M., Treas.; Elliott, Sec.; Evans, S.D.; Russell, J.D.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler; the Stewards-nominate were not present. The charges to the several officers were impressively given by the P.G.R. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet at the Angel Hotel, where a pleasant and harmonious evening was spent. Both lodge and banquet were honoured by the presence of several distinguished brethren, among whom we noticed Bros. Holbrook, Dep. Dist. G.M. of British Columbia and Vancouver's Island, an old P.M. of 292; Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M. 1094; Dr. Ridley, 477 and P.M. 321, (I.C.); Johnstone, S.W. 477; &c.

ROCHDALE.—Lodge of Harmony, No. 298.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening se'night. The lodge was opened at seven o'clock by the W.M., Bro. Robert Howard, assisted by the prompt attendance of his officers. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and the ballot taken for Mr. Henry Brewin Noble, who had been proposed by Bro. Ashworth, P.M., as a fit and proper person to be made a Mason, and become a member of the said lodge. The ballot proving unanimously in favour of Mr. Noble, Bro. Ashworth, by the kind permission of the W.M., was called upon to take the chair, and as the proposer, permitted to initiate Mr. Noble into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry, the address, &c., being given by the W.M., and the charge, &c., by Bro. Gilman. After the ceremony, which was very creditably performed throughout, Bro. Ashworth informed the brethren that an application having been received for the name of some brother to represent this lodge at the annual Festival of the Boys' Institution, to be held on the 8th March next, he had had the pleasure of forwarding to Bro. Binckes the names of four brethren, viz., W. H. Prince, P.M., P.P.G.S.D.; Robert Butterworth, J.W.; Thomas Oakden, J.D.; Jno. Ashworth, D.C., as the Stewards for this lodge; and expressed a desire that others in the lodge, who have both time and means at command, would follow the noble example of these brethren, and thereby assist our worthy Bro. Binckes—who so ably advocates the cause of the Boys' School—in providing the necessary funds for carrying out the increased accommodation so much required to meet the applications from all parts of the country for the education of sons of deceased Masons. The labours of the evening being ended, the lodge was closed in due form by the W.M., after which the brethren adjourned to banquet, and a pleasant evening was spent.

SOUTHPORT.—Lodge of Unity, No. 613.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, January 30th, when the chair was occupied by Bro. William Dodd, W.M., supported by Bros. John Wainwright, S.W.; H. E. Cullingworth, J.W.; C. H. Brown, Treas.; G. Bailey, Sec.; T. P. Griffiths, S.D.; T. S. Cory, J.D.; F. Brown and S. Kershaw, Stewards; and J. Witham, I.G. The minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, Bros. L. L. Heyward, J. Heyward, and Melling were raised; Bros. R. Watson, J. Smallshaw, and W. B. Leeming were passed; and Messrs. C. Gialoussy and J. Butcher were initiated into Freemasonry. The whole of the work, which lasted about four hours, was performed in a most praiseworthy manner by the indefatigable W.M., assisted by his officers; the beauty and solemnity of the proceedings being greatly enhanced by the use of appropriate Masonic music. The visitors were Bros. P. W. MacRorel, P.M. 986; P. J. Whitehead, 1313; and H. Heys, 637. Bro. J. Merchant was proposed as a joining member, and four gentlemen were proposed as candidates for initiation.

DEVIZES, WILTSHIRE.—Lodge of Fidelity, No. 663.—The installation meeting of this lodge took place in the lodge-room, at the Town-hall, on Tuesday, the 24th ult. The ceremony was to have been performed by the V.V. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Wilbey, but he was unfortunately prevented by illness from attending. He had, however, provided an excellent representative in Bro. R. de M. Lawson, of 632, Trowbridge, P.P.G.J.W. Wilts., who, having taken the W.M.'s place, received the W.M.-elect, Bro. T. J. O'Rielly (who was presented by Bros. Nott and Holloway, P.M.'s), and in a most impressive manner installed him into the chair of K.S. The newly installed W.M. afterwards invested his officers as follows: Bros. F. V. Holloway, I.P.M.; M. M'Hugh, P.M., as S.W.; J. J. Jefferies, J.W.; Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, P.G. Chap. of England, as Chap.; Joseph Burt, P.M., Treas.; William Nott, P.M., Sec.; J. H. Chandler, S.D.; H. I. Ward, J.D.; T. B. Fox, I.G.; Raymond, D.C.; and T. J. Mullings, Steward. The brethren afterwards adjourned to the Crown Hotel, where an excellent banquet had been provided by Bro. Raymond, comprising an abundant supply of venison and game from Bro. S. Watson Taylor, of Erlestoke Park. A very pleasant evening was spent, under the presidency of the newly-installed W.M. The brethren of 663 were gratified by the presence at the lodge and subsequent banquet of visitors from 144, 316, 325, 355, 632, and 751.

ROYAL ARCH.

METROPOLITAN.

British Chapter, No. 8.—This chapter met on Friday, the 3rd inst., at Freemasons' Hall, when the installations into the three Principals' chairs were as follows: Comps. John Braddick Monckton, Z.; Frank Richardson, H.; and Arthur Augustus Richards, J. Comps. Stanley Robinson and Thomas Ransom Sachs were the two Scribes, and Comp. Morris Evans, P.S., who appointed Comps. Edwin March and Francis Webb his 1st and 2nd A.S. Comp. Joseph Stohwasser, P.Z., was re-invested as Treasurer; Comp. Edward Baxter as Dir. of Cers.; and Comp. Wilhelm Ganz as Org., who, at the entertainment at the Tavern, gave the companions much pleasure by his skill on the piano. At the banquet the usual complimentary jewel from the chapter was presented to Comp. John Thomas Griffith, M.D., the late M.E.Z.

PROVINCIAL.

LITTLEBORO'.—Chapter of Benevolence, No. 226.—The annual festival and installation of officers of this chapter took place on Friday evening, the 3rd inst., under the presidency of Comp. Briggs, M.E.Z., supported by Comps. Davis, H.; Peacock, J.; and officers and companions of the chapter. The following visitors were also present: Comps. Davies, P.Z. Chapter of Hope, No. 54; Roberts, P.Z. Unity, 298, Prince George, 308; and Jos. Ashworth, Unity, 298. The ceremony of installation was ably performed by Comp. Roberts, assisted by Comps. Davis and Midgley, and the following officers were duly installed: Comps. William Briggs, M.E.Z.; William Peacock, H.; A. Rigg, J.; J. W. Kershaw, E.; Robert Whitworth, N.; James Briggs, P.S.; Kershaw, Treas.; Briggs, Org.; and Midgley, Janitor. There not being any further business, the chapter was duly and solemnly closed and the companions adjourned to the place allotted for their enjoyment, where a few hours were pleasantly spent.

The length of our report of the festival of the Royal Benevolent Institution has crowded out a large amount of copy, amongst which are several reports acknowledged last week, and also reports of Lodges 279, Leicester; 537, Birkenhead; 1074, Kirkby Lonsdale; 1085, Derby; 1130, Melton Mowbray; 1301, Brighouse; 1330, Market Harboro'; 1339 (consecration), Stockwell; also R.A. Chapter 148, Mark Lodges 62 and 122, Red Cross Conclave No. 3, and Grand Lodge of Scotland.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

A MODEL GRUMBLER.

OUR attention has been called to an eccentric magazine, whose advent into the literary world is but of recent date, and whose pages appear to be devoted to diatribes against everything in general and Freemasonry in particular. This pretentious publication, which is facetiously called a "Review," is in reality an apotheosis of Diogenes—we mean the extinct comic paper, not the famous cynical philosopher who dwelt in a tub. In one number we find horrible details respecting incineration, or the art of burning one's dead relations in an off-hand and satisfactory manner; the ghastly process being gravely commended as a sure and certain means of averting possible plagues amongst the living. In another article the Mosaic account of the Creation is quietly demolished; but as it is with the Masonic iconoclast's efforts that our readers are most concerned, we shall not, we hope, be doing them an ill turn if we present them with a few choice specimens of the epithets which our "Reviewer's" redundant vocabulary of abuse enables him to scatter for the edification of all who choose to listen. We may premise by stating that in a former number of this new-fledged Juvenal, THE FREEMASON, its proprietor, its contributors, its subscribers, are tarred with the same brush and share the same horrid doom of excommunication—the only wonder being that we have all not only survived the withering effects of our critic's wrath, but absolutely appear to thrive upon it, like the big navy who, when his Lilliputian wife thrashed him, good humouredly explained, "You see it pleases her, and doan't hurt me." However, be this as it may, we cannot resist the temptation of reproducing a few tit-bits—rare morceaux—from the intellectual banquet so prodigally provided for the benefit of the Craft. Entre nous, we wonder how many Freemasons read the said "Review?" In the first place, our Solomon redivivus being afflicted with a new disease—which we will take the liberty of calling, without consulting the faculty, "Grand Master on the Brain"—discusses in querulous tone and moody spirit a fearful wrong which he has experienced at the hands of the Earl de Grey and Ripon. Awful to relate, the editor of this "Quadrangular Review"—for such is an approach to the euphonious appellation of the new periodical—has applied for a new lodge, and has been refused. Was there ever such unheard-of despotism on the part of the powers that be? Does not the Grand Master, and the Grand Master's "Devil"—whoever he may be—deserve to be immolated at once on the altar of Masonic vengeance for so cruelly depriving our modern Solon of the hoped-for opportunity of airing his Masonic opinions in a select Masonic coterie of his own? Of course, after the expressive epithet "Devil," the term "old women," applied to the committees of the Craft, is weak and inconsequential. To be consistent, our "Quadrangular" friend ought to have made them all, without exception, imps—allotting at least one tail and two horns to each member. Further on we find the same diabolical imagery again in the ascendant—only this time the "Devil" is designated the Grand Master's "Mephistophelian prompter." "What's in a name?" says Shakespeare; but the line must be drawn somewhere. Inconceivable as it may seem, we have met men who object to be called by their Christian names "Rogue" or "Villain," although the said cognomen was fully confirmed by their countenances. In like manner, this mysterious Satan who sits at the Grand Master's right hand, and moves the figures on the Masonic chess-board, may, if he have an existence, rise up and protest against the opprobrious, if high-sounding, language in which his proceedings are noticed. In ancient times, every wizard had his familiar, who generally assumed the canine form and played up the tricks of "Old Harry" with all a juvenile dog's love of mischief. Does our reviewer mean to insinuate that a similar official prevails in Freemasonry, and that the boasted "light" of the Craft is but the reflection of a second Lucifer? But this is not all; the "Quadrangular" next concentrates his gaze upon a "self-elected and ignorant set of Masonic swash-bucklers," and with one stroke of the pen consigns to dust and ashes the Supreme Grand Council of the 33°. This Masonic body was, he avers, "imported from America by a low quack doctor, Crucefix, alias Goss and Co., the successor of the notorious Dr. Eady of Newman-street, whose name was chalked on every wall within twenty miles of London." This "quack," he continues, "soon bagged a whole tribe of Masonic duffers or dummies," gave them very grand titles, such as "Sovereign Grand Commanders," and did a rare trade in the distribution of magnificent decorations. Our Triton among the minnows then attacks the present officers of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, affirming that the "Sovereign" is an unknown nonentity, and that the "Treasurer-General" is the real controller of affairs, especially combining the receipt of cash with the equally agreeable task of snubbing his "Illustrious" inferiors. What a fearful tale is this, "my masters!" We are further told that an "unworthy prince," who recently "snapped his fingers at the Council," has been tried by a jury of "thirty-one idiots" and sentenced to "Masonic death," and that the said delinquent means to expose the whole body in the "Court of Queen's Bench." The reception of a "Prince Rhododendron" at a "high-falutin" meeting of "Grand Elected Knights K—h" is next alluded to in not very complimentary terms, and after a second onslaught upon Craft Masonry, an illustrative anecdote of a wooden ass—possibly an ancestor of the reviewer—winds up this charming model of good taste and Masonic courtesy. Stay; we had almost forgotten to add that a veritable illustration of the "Procession to Manchester" is annexed to this extraordinary literary production. It represents "The Sovereign Tribunal led by the Devil (our friend cannot get on, it seems, without a "devil"), carrying the banner of the 33rd, and accompanied by Grand Inquisitors, proceeding to Manchester, to pass SENTENCE on a Sovereign Prince Rose Croix for the crime of lèse majesté. A celebrated Tiler volunteers his services as executioner." A demon of the accepted type, three donkeys in various attitudes, personifying stolidity, bewilderment and triumph, three long-robed familiars, and a tom-cat carrying the sword of state are the principal figures in this astounding work of art. Now, if all this had appeared in an anti-Masonic publication, no one would have felt either surprised or annoyed, but when it comes out under Masonic auspices, we are tempted to ask—What next? Fortunately, the harm such eccentric escapades can effect is greatly limited by the fact that most people laugh at them as good, though some-what far-fetched, jokes, and now that our reviewer has evidently found his vocation, we have no doubt he will, for our future edification, continue to blend amusement with instruction in the same exquisitely refined style of which he so undoubted a master.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

As one of the many favoured brethren who have perused with interest the quotations from the "Encyclopedia Metropolitana," by Bro. Forsyth, I beg to thank him for the trouble he has taken, and I hope his example will act as an incentive to others in making known whatever may be of value to the Craft

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

I remember a brother named Demetrius Rodocanachi being initiated in the Sefton Lodge, No. 680, Liverpool, in the year 1859; can any of your readers inform me if "His Imperial Highness Prince Demetrius Rhodocanakis," whose name I have frequently seen in THE FREEMASON, is the same brother?

W.M.

THE WARDENS' CHAIRS.

At page 73 W. P. B. says "the question is one of courtesy and good feeling" as to who should be put in the chair of an absent Warden; and he thinks that "the office-bearers under that rank might be allowed to officiate pro tem." Very few, if any, will agree with him in that. In most lodges there are meetings for instruction just before the lodge meeting, at which the officers rehearse the duties to be performed; and it would most likely spoil the whole working of the evening, and bring discredit on the lodge, by a sudden change in the duties each officer came prepared to carry out; and no doubt, under such circumstances, a W.M. exercises a wise discretion by appointing Wardens from skilled members of the lodge; keeping the assistant officers to their respective duties.

W.M., M.O.

ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST AND THE 1717 THEORY.

The author of the remarks upon this subject at page 68 not only shows his ignorance of what the 1717 theory really is, but also shows his want of observation as to what takes place in the columns of THE FREEMASON. He implies that the supporters of the 1717 theory denied the connection between St. John and the masons. Now, that is untrue, for I did the very opposite, asserting that many of the old fifteenth century operative masons, like good Catholics, held St. John as their patron saint, just as the shoemakers held St. Crispin. However, while saying so, I deny that any sixteenth or pre-sixteenth century Speculative Masons held St. John as their patron saint, for that was impossible, simply because no Speculative Freemasons were then in existence.

AMERICAN BRETHREN AND THEIR VISIT TO EUROPE.

Allow me to support your leader of Saturday, the 4th of February, in reference to the contemplated visit of Knight Templars in America to Europe.

I most heartily endorse your kind and well-meant recommendation to our American brethren not to attempt any procession in our streets. For certain, as you say, it would expose them to "ridicule," and would not render their visit productive of unalloyed happy results, as we would wish. Let them come to England, Ireland, and Scotland as Freemasons to Freemasons, and let the secrecy of our ceremonies be preserved, even as respects our clothing, &c., as much as possible. For certainly any procession in public would be universally condemned by the Order in this country, especially as the Craft refrains so generally from displays of any kind. In our lodges, chapters, encampments, &c., we shall be delighted to greet them "properly clothed," and I am certain that a thorough, hearty, and most sincere welcome will await our American brethren from the north to the south and from the east to the west of the British Isles.

It would be well for the Craft in England to be kept informed on the subject, so that arrangements might be made to give our visitors a banquet in London.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

I find the following in the Jewish Record. What does it all mean, and who is the Grand Commander of the Supreme Degree?

HAM.

"It is with much pleasure we record that Bro. S. M. Lazarus, of Great Prescott-street, Goodman's-fields, has received from the Grand Commander and Inspector-General of the Supreme Degree of Royal Ark Mariners a diploma appointing him a Past Commander of the said Order and an Honorary Member of the Prince of Wales' Lodge, No. 2, in consideration of his services as a member of that degree for forty-eight years."

The following curious letter appeared in the New Era, Trinidad:—

"Sir,—Amongst the rules of the Roman Catholics here there is one prohibiting Freemasons from serving as godfathers to children. Can you inform me whether this rule has been altered of late? My reason for asking is, that one of the dignitaries of the 'Royal Trinity Lodge' was selected to hold the important office of 'Parain' to one of the bells destined for the chapel of the cemetery. It may be interesting for Masons to know whether the same rule holds good against 'des cloches.'

HIRAM.

"San Fernando, Dec. 29."

DERIVATION OF "COWAN" (pp. 43, 57, 73).

I give no opinion upon this subject at present, only permit me to state that some interesting remarks upon it are found at pages 267, 347, and 372 of the Freemasons' Magazine for Oct. 8th, Nov. 5th and 12th, 1859. At the same time I must put the Masonic student on his guard as to Scotland being either the "head-quarters of Speculative Masonry" or of "Masonic excellence," for England is the mother of our Speculative Freemasonry; and as to Operative Masonry, Scotland, after the thirteenth century, from its internal convulsions, &c., could not be put on a level with England at all.

W. P. BUCHAN.

QUALIFICATIONS OF VISITORS TO LODGES.

Will "J. B." give an address where a communication on the subject may reach him from one in a chrysalis state?

NEOPHYTE.

THE A. AND A. RITE.

I am pleased to see that you have decided that all communications on this subject shall be signed by the writers, shall be free from personalities, and confined to the merits of the rite; and upon these these terms I am willing to take the field against all comers. Who is the "Sovereign Prince" the Palatine Rose Croix Chapter boasts among its members? I should like to behold him in all the glory of his "potential wisdom." Will he please give his name and trade?

Though the letter of Bro. Newnham is not altogether free from the objections of personality, yet I am willing to pass that over, and consider his points, briefly, but in a courteous manner; the speciousness of his letter is provable from the communication of mine, to which he refers:—

1. I stated that I had never sought the honour of being a member of the A. and A. Rite, and that I was prevailed upon to join the Palatine Chapter by the misrepresentations of a friend; his intentions were, I believe, to have brought the chapter again under the ancient Templar government. The chapter at that time was very loosely worked, but done in a Masonic spirit—none of the elements of cliqueism being then present; this trouble having been brought about by the domineering spirit of a few who work in bands throughout the Craft. At the time of my admission I was unaware that I should be governed by nine men, who elect themselves for life, and wish I never had known it. It will be seen that a very difficult point in Masonry is here raised, for without any preparation beforehand the most solemn O.B. are dictated, and either misunderstood or else accepted, because retreat is no longer possible.

2. Another of Bro. Newnham's objections is easily answered. I said I might have become a zealous member of the rite "reserving my disapprovals," &c., which anyone may see merely means that I might have remained a member for the purpose of aiding its reform on a better basis.

3. The remark of Bro. Newnham about the obedience due to a P.G.L. in the Craft, is altogether out of place; because no legal Masonic body in this country is governed in the same way and in the same spirit as the so-called Supreme Council, and I sincerely hope never will be.

Thus I take it that all Bro. Newnham's objections to my communication fall to the ground, as he admits his inability to defend the rite on its own merits, and he therefore attacks me upon a casuistical question.

As Bro. Newnham has criticised, in freely-spoken terms, my conduct in regard to the so-called S.C., will he pardon me for asking him kindly to explain to me one thing in return, it is: How he, a Christian clergyman under sacred vows, can conscientiously add to his signature a degree like the 30°, which stinks in the nostrils of the rigidly orthodox? I cannot discuss this in your pages, but I am willing to do so privately with any member of the 30°.

Fortunately, all do not think with a few members of the rite, and my breakfast table is every day flooded with a correspondance (sacred even from my friends) devoted to execrations of the rite; and one brother, of good social position, strongly advocates my proposition to cite the so-called Supreme Council before Grand Lodge for obtaining large fees without warrant or authority.

JOHN YARKER.

P.S.—Your editorial note, I fear, is rather hard upon my last communication (not yet printed); as I am utterly unconscious of indulging in any personalities against the so-called S.C. therein. I certainly mentioned a notorious fact, namely, that one of its founders was an expelled Mason, hence probably their hereditary forte in that respect. If, however, there are any uncourteous expressions in that letter. I beg that you will print the same with necessary alterations; sending me proofs as requested. And I must beg to point out that after printing the letter of Bro. Newnham against me, I have a claim upon your kind consideration for the publication of this. J. Y.

I have heard, many years ago, that a Sir Knt. Dixon, of the time-immemorial Camp of Antiquity, Bath, purloined their warrant, and made nine high grades under it before it could be recovered. People seem to know so little of the origin of the Supreme Council that I venture to ask whether this step of Bro. Dixon has anything to do with the establishment of the Council? Evidently if Dr. Goss (an expelled Mason) and Dr. Leeson had ever legitimately received their degrees in a Templar Encampment their oaths would have prevented them establishing this Council. Who will condescend to enlighten us upon these points; or tell us in what encampment these two brothers were received ne plus ultra's?

THE "RECTANGULAR REVIEW."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—My attention has been called to an article in the Rectangular Review for January. As I was the originator of that publication, but declined, after the first number, to be a party to the gross Masonic strictures a certain Brother, acting as Editor, has since inserted, I shall feel greatly obliged by your kind insertion of these few lines to express my indignant repudiation of the same.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, otherwise known as CRYPTONYMUS.

Feb. 4, 1871.

THE ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE TESTIMONIAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In last week's number (604) of the Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror, under the head of correspondence, appear two letters, signed "A Craft Mason" and "An old P.M.," on what they call "The Proposed Testimonial to the Projector of the new-fangled Masonic Degrees." The writers are evidently well acquainted with the history of the gentleman and Brother Mason they write about, and therefore must know that he is highly esteemed by his Masonic friends, respected by his brother officers, and known for his honourable conduct; and this knowledge must make their unmasonic and unbrotherly conduct appear worse in the eyes of all who love justice, and many will regret that such men are found connected with Masonry. Unfortunately these letters will be read by young Masons who have never heard of the Orders in question, and who may consider that some crime has been committed in Masonry by a brother who deserves to be publicly exposed, and who is not fit to hold appointment in the Grand Secretary's office; and will not see—as all who know Brother R. Wentworth Little will—the animus which runs through those letters. The Editor states that he "is not responsible for the opinions expressed by his correspondents," but I hold that as a Mason, he is responsible for any article appearing in that paper liable in any way to injure the character of a worthy brother.

In the same paper there is a paragraph as follows:

"If Masonry is in your heart, you will be a moral, temperate, and prudent man, keeping a guard over lips and actions."

Again, at page 79 I read these beautiful lines:

"BROTHERLY LOVE.

In love review thy brother's acts,
He may have err'd—ere long mayst thou.
Be charitable in thought, in word, in deed,
And thus thy friendship to him show.
Should slander's venom'd dart afflict,
Be prompt the slanderer to repel;
If danger menaces his hearth,
Strive with thy might it to dispel."

I say the Editor of a Masonic journal should be a "true Mason" and practise "brotherly love," but in No. 605 (this week's Magazine) there is a leader on the subject, which clearly identifies the Editor as "endorsing the remarks of those correspondents."

I desire to protest in THE FREEMASON against such unmasonic—such unbrotherly acts. I have often had occasion to see Bro. Little in his official capacity, and can bear witness to his courteous manner and ever-ready willingness to give every information in his power, without in the least making a trouble of it, although often after business hours; and I hereby acknowledge the valuable assistance rendered to me on those occasions—on business of the Craft, I allow, but rendered in a truly Masonic spirit.

As for the snarl at the Grand Secretary, it is too contemptible to notice. That gentleman and brother is too firmly rooted in the hearts of all Masons who know him in Masonry, to think for a moment that a whirlwind of scandal could shake his position in the slightest degree; and it is an insult to him to doubt his love and fidelity to the Craft.

I am, yours fraternally,
MAGNUS OHREN.

Lower Sydenham, S.E., 6 Feb., 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The letter of Bro. Moss in your last number is very satisfactory, and has given great pleasure to many of Bro. Wentworth Little's friends, all of whom will now unite, I am sure, to promote the desired object. There is one point, however, to which attention may be called with advantage. Great stress has been laid upon the services which Bro. Little has rendered to the Red Cross and other high degrees; but it ought also be remembered that our worthy brother's labours have been quite as extensive, and his zeal as fervent and unremitting, in the cause of Craft and Arch Masonry. It is not every brother who, after a career of ten years in Freemasonry, can present such a record of work accomplished as Bro. Little. The number of some thirty lodges and chapters—and of which he is honorary member—bear testimony of Bro. Little's ability, either as consecrating officer, installing Master, or as an assistant to other eminent Masons officiating at those interesting ceremonies.

Of the position he has held in our esteemed Grand Secretary's office for the last nine years it is unnecessary to speak, because all London Masons know that Bro. Little has charge of the financial department, which is certainly not the least responsible or important amongst those confided to the employes of Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter. For these services he is paid as a matter of course; but all his spare time is devoted either to literary pursuits—many articles from his pen having appeared anonymously both in Masonic and general magazines—or to the equally pleasing task of communicating instruction to the brethren in Freemasonry.

In justice to Bro. Little I state these facts, in order to remove an impression—which I hear there is abroad—that the proposed testimonial is simply in recognition of the services he has performed on behalf of the Red Cross Degree.

Apologising for troubling you at this length,

I am, dear sir and brother,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN BOYD,

QUALIFICATIONS OF VISITORS TO LODGES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—After the letter promulgated by the Grand Lodge as to visiting brethren, I hold that no W.M. would be doing his duty in admitting a stranger to his lodge without his Grand Lodge certificate, and giving strong proof that he was the person named in the certificate; and a brother who desires to visit lodges where he is a stranger should prepare himself accordingly. In the case of the German, Bro. "J. B.," whose letter appears at page 74, I am not surprised that he was told he gave the wrong word, for I remember trying a German some years ago, and he gave me the word of the second degree for the first, and the first for the second, assuring me that the words were so given in Germany. This is very singular, and was no doubt the reason why Bro. "J. B." gave apparently the wrong word, although it would be right in his country. As "J. B." appears to be a reader of your paper, let me suggest to him that, if his stay in England is for any length of time, that he joins some lodge in his locality. He will then be affiliated, and can take the other two degrees, and get a Grand Lodge certificate, which will carry him through the world.

Yours fraternally,

W.M., M.O.

SCOTLAND.

SOCIAL MEETING OF LODGE ST. DAVID'S,
No. 78, DUNDEE.

Sometime ago, on the motion of Bro. Berry, it was decided to hold, in connection with the lodge, a social meeting of the members and lady friends, ending with an assembly. The meeting took place on Tuesday, the 24th ult., within the Thistle Hall, Dundee: the attendance was numerous, upwards of 120 being present. The R.W. Master, Bro. Berry, took the chair exactly at 8.30, having on his right the Rev. Dr. Andrew Taylor, P.G. Chaplain of Forfarshire; around the chair also we observed the Past Master of the lodge, Bro. J. Hutton; Bro. J. M. Beatts, Secretary; Bro. Longmuir, R.W.M. Operative Lodge; Bro. Roger, R.W.M. Forfar and Kincardine Lodge; Bro. Gellately, R.W.M. Thistle Lodge; Bro. Cant, R.W.M. Albert Lodge; Bro. Fenwick, P.H. Dundee Royal Arch Chapter; Bro. Captain Reid, Dundee Hyland Volunteers; Bros. Smyth, Henry, Kidd, Adams, M'Lennan, Inverarity (Treasurer), and Wilson, J.W. 47.

The R.W.M., after congratulating the lodge on the great success of the gathering, asked the Secretary to read the letter of apology from Bro. Sir John Ogilvy, M.P., for Dundee, and which was as follows:—

Bildovan House, Dundee, Jan 22, 1871.

Dear Sir and Brother,—I feel greatly obliged to the office-bearers of St. David's Lodge for the kind invitation they have sent to me, through you, to be present at their social meeting on the 24th current. I wish much I could avail myself of it, but the same reason which prevented me from attending a meeting of the Operative Lodge a night or two ago will prevent me from being with you. I had suffered so much from a severe attack of influenza a short time ago that I thought right, prior to my departure for London, I should altogether avoid going out at night. This resolution I have steadily kept, though in doing so I have had to deny myself the pleasure of being present at some meetings in Dundee which otherwise I would gladly have attended. I feel that under these circumstances my friends and brethren of St. David's Lodge will kindly excuse my absence—I am the loser. Wishing you all a pleasant gathering,

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN OGILVY.

To J. M. Beatts, Esq., Dundee.

The R.W.M.: I am sure we cannot proceed with our programme without thanking the hon. baronet for the sentiments he has expressed towards us in the letter now read. He has long represented Dundee in Parliament—now the second commercial town in Scotland; and I am sure it is your wish, as it is mine, he should long do so. The Committee to whom you referred the successful carrying out of this meeting, have placed in my hands, as Master of the lodge, a programme of the proceedings, and I find the first part consists of my own address to you, songs and recitations, and an address from our Rev. Bro. Dr. Taylor. This they desire finished by 10 o'clock, and then the Hall will be cleared for dancing till three in the morning, and that finishes the second part, and concludes the first—but I am sure not the last—social meeting of the members of this lodge, their wives and bairns. Br. Berry then went on to refer to the great prosperity in the town at present; the cause of the present gathering; the prosperity of the lodge, fourteen having joined it since St. Andrew's Day; finishing his remarks with a reference to the sad scenes of the present war; expressing a hope that the newly-proclaimed Emperor would not press his triumph further, but return to his Queen, re-echoing the message announced eighteen centuries ago—"On earth peace, good will toward men."

The first part of the programme having been gone through, and thanks recorded to Dr. Taylor for his address (and we regret we have no space for its insertion), an interval was allowed for refreshment, and during which the hall was cleared for the assembly.

Dancing commenced at 10.30, and was carried on with great spirit till 3 a.m., when, on the motion of the R.W.M. of the Thistle Lodge, 158, seconded by the R.W.M. of the Operative Lodge, 47, a hearty cheer was given to Bro. Berry for his kindness and attention to one and all.

Bro. Berry having returned thanks, declared the first social meeting of Lodge St. David's to be duly closed.

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE 73rd Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys is fixed for Wednesday, the 8th of March. Sir Watkin W. Wynn, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. G. Master of North Wales and Salop, has most kindly consented to preside.

THE name of Bro. S. Rosenthal, P.M., was accidentally omitted from the list of those present at the installation meeting of the Burdett Lodge, No. 1293, on Saturday, the 28th ult.

BRO. SIDNEY SPENCER's tender for the tenancy of the City Terminus Hotel for a term of years has been accepted by the South-Eastern Railway Company.

THE first annual ball of the Constitutional Lodge of Freemasons (Bro. R. P. Atkins, W.M.) was held at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon Street. The company numbered about 160.

A MOVEMENT is on foot, having for its object the presentation to Lord Dalhousie, of a testimonial, in acknowledgement of the distinguished services he has rendered to the Craft during nearly half a century. It is proposed that the testimonial take the form of a bust—in duplicate—one copy to be presented to the noble Lord, and the other to be placed in Freemasons' Hall.

A COURT of Assistants of the Gold and Silver Wire Drawers' Company was held on Wednesday, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, City. Bro. D. H. Jacobs, P.M. 27, was sworn in as Master of the Company. After the usual routine business was concluded, a sumptuous dinner was provided, the Master presiding, and the vice-chair was occupied by Bro. Charles Gammon, P.M. 795 (Maidenhead).

ERRATA.—At page 43, 3rd column, 2nd line, for "cuon" read kuon; 9th line, for "cunes" read kimes; 34th line, for "those" read two; 42nd line, after "intruders" read and intruders into Masonry; 47th line, omit the word "as;" last line, for "arena" read arcana.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly committee meeting of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 8th inst., Bro. Major Creaton in the chair. There were also present: Bros. W. Farnfield, Sec.; J. Hervey, G.S.; E. H. Patten, B. Head, Young, Cox, J. Smith, F. Walters, G. Bolton, C. A. Cottebrune, J. Bellerby, and some others. The minutes of the January meeting were read and confirmed.

It was announced that the legacy of £200 willed to this Institution by the late Miss Sarah Dowsett, of Reading, had been received. The result of the festival held on Friday last was declared to amount, with other lists to come in, to £3,471 14s. The usual vote of thanks was given to the chairman who presided at the festival, Bro. Samuel Tomkins, G.T., and to the Stewards who assisted in obtaining the good results on their lists, as also for their exertions at the festival—both votes being carried unanimously. It was also carried unanimously, "That the recommendation of the Finance Committee be carried into effect by allowing a clerk to be appointed, at £50 a year, to assist Bro. Farnfield in his increased duties; the salary to commence from the beginning of the financial year Dec. 1st, 1870." The deaths of Bros. Birdsall, of Northampton, and John Simmons, of Southsea (male annuitants), and Mrs. Ann Hamer, of Chichester (female annuitant), were reported. It was decided that fifteen male and ten female annuitants should be elected on Friday, May 19th. Other business having been disposed of, the usual vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

FESTIVAL of the ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The annual festival of this institution was held on Friday week, at Freemasons' Tavern. Our columns have for some time past announced that Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex, would take the chair on that occasion, and it was therefore greatly to the surprise of the Craft that our last issue informed them that he would be unable to be present. The death of one of his near relatives happening a few days ago, he was compelled to throw on Bro. Farnfield, the Secretary of the Institution, the task of finding another brother to occupy the President's place. The task was not a difficult one, for, as the gallant Colonel pointed out in the letter which we published, every Freemason is ready to assist his brother in time of need. The brother who stood in the gap on Friday week was Grand Treasurer Bro. Samuel Tomkins, and the observations which fell from him when he proposed the toast of the evening were such as to show that the institution itself and Freemasonry stand not in need of a wise and thoughtful advocate. He was supported in his office by a numerous body of brethren, many of the leaders of the Order taking part in the festivities of the evening. The new province of Middlesex, in honour of Colonel Burdett, was strongly represented by brethren, and its Treasurer, Bro. Buss, had the satisfaction of carrying in the largest lists of subscriptions.

Above one hundred Stewards supported the claims of the fund, and among the brethren who were present we observed:—John L. Evans, President of the Board of General Purposes; Rev. C. J. Martyn, G. Chap.; Major Creaton, P.G.D.; Benjamin Head, P.G.D.; George Gumbleton, P.M. 10; S. L. Tomkins, P.G.D.; E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B.; John Hervey, G. Sec.; H. Browse, P.G.D.; Captain Cope, P.G.S.B.; Edward Cox, V.P.; R. Wentworth Little, Prov. G. Sec. Middlesex; H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treas. Middlesex; John Bodenham, P.G.D. Staff.; F. A. Philbrick, V.P.; R. Spencer, V.P.; W. Hepworth Radley, P.P.G.W. Lincolnshire; J. Macre Moir; G. M. E. Snow, V.P. and P.P.G.W. Kent; W. Farnfield, Sec.; E. M. Hubbuck, Treas. Board of Stewards; J. A. Rucker, President of Board of Stewards; James Brett, G.P.; John Coutts, A.G.P.; W. Ough, P.G.P.; F. Binckes, Sec. Boys' School; H. T. Smith, P.G.S. West Yorks.; George Kenning, W.M. 192, P.G.S. Middlesex; Matthew Cooke; Samuel May, V.P.; George Pymm, P.M. 749; Barnes, P.M. 933; Joseph Tanner, P.M. 101; Stedwell, Prov. G.J.W. Middlesex; James Terry, P.M. 228, &c.; A. D. Loewenstark, P.Z. 73, &c.; Dr. F. J. Lilley, P.M. 507; Edward Baxter, P.G.S.; William Smeed, Alfred Layton, S.W. 181; T. Cubitt, P.M. 186; W. Mann, P.M. 186; E. J. Barrow, P.G.S.; William Clouston; J. T. Moss, P.M. 169; Albert Glover; Israel Abrahams, P.M. 188; H. Keeble, 1275; Thomas Meggy; F. Walters, P.M. 73, &c.; A. A. Pendlebury, P.M. 1506, &c.; W. Dodd, W.M. 1194; Boncey, Partridge Sillifant, Hill, Welch, Capt. Payne, Allan, and Roebuck. Many ladies also witnessed the proceedings.

Grace having been sung after the drawing of the cloth,

The CHAIRMAN rose and said: Brethren, before I address myself to my duties as your chairman on this occasion, I have to explain to you how it is that our friend, Colonel Burdett, is not here. He has met with a severe bereavement in his family, and he has written the letter I am about to read to you to Bro. Farnfield:—"Dear Bro. Farnfield,—As a great many of the brethren may not have an opportunity of knowing the reason of my absence at the festival this evening, I shall feel it a great favour if you will explain it to as many as you can, especially the Stewards, how much I regret not being able to be present, as I have looked forward to it with much pleasure, knowing how well I should be supported; but a very severe domestic affliction will entirely prevent it. In haste to catch the post, Yours sincerely, FRANCIS BURDETT." Our friend, Colonel Burdett, not being able to take the chair, it has fallen to my lot to do so. I am sure you feel sympathy for him in his affliction, and I trust you will extend your kind consideration to me. (Hear, hear). The chairman then proposed "The health of the Queen," which, as usual, was heartily drunk, and succeeded by the singing of the National Anthem.

The CHAIRMAN: Brethren, the next toast I have to submit to you will prove your Masonic loyalty to the Most Worshipful the Grand Master. We are fortunate in possessing, not only so good a Grand Master in himself, but one who endeavours to follow in the steps of a series of noblemen who have so ably fulfilled their duties as his predecessors. During the long reign of the Earl of Zetland Masonry made a great advance; and if it should please God that Lord de Grey's reign should be as long, I have no doubt the progress of Freemasonry during his rule will be as great in proportion. Not only do we pay this compliment to him as Master of the Craft, but as President of this Institution; and I call upon you in those two characters to drink his health.

The CHAIRMAN: Brethren, the next toast I have to propose to you is "The healths of the Right Worshipful the Past Grand Masters, the Earl of Zetland and the Prince of Wales." That is comparatively a new toast in our Masonic meetings. Though Lord Zetland's health has compelled him to retire from his post as our ruler, he still feels an interest in Masonry as a Past Master, and we shall ever drink his health with enthusiasm and affection. But not only do we now drink the health of Lord Zetland, but we express our affection and esteem for the Prince of Wales, who also takes a genuine and sincere interest in Freemasonry. We are very proud and happy that he should do so, and I am sure upon this and all other occasions we shall cordially unite in remembering him at our gatherings. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN: Brethren, the next toast is that of "The Right Worshipful the Deputy G. Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Present and Past Grand Officers." Now, I think we are happy in having so worthy a Deputy Grand Master. He feels an interest in his work, and the whole Craft and the whole community owe him their thanks for the kindness and courtesy with which he took up the question, during the dull months of August and September, of aid to the sufferers in the great Continental war. That was entirely the act of Lord Carnarvon, and in so acting he carried out his duty as Deputy Grand Master, and met our wishes. The other Grand Officers feel highly honoured by being appointed Grand Officers, and feel much pleasure in performing their duties. I shall call only on my friend, Bro. Llewellyn Evans, to return thanks for this toast.

Bro. LL. EVANS: Right Worshipful Sir and brethren, I feel very highly honoured at being called upon to respond to the toast of the Past and Present Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of England, although there is a brother present higher in rank than myself, to whom of right it ought to have fallen to acknowledge that toast. Brethren, our Right Worshipful President has told you that the Deputy Grand Master called Grand Lodge together last year in an autumn month, and proposed and carried unanimously a vote of money for the relief of the sufferers in France; but he did not tell you what I tell you—that, as Grand Treasurer, your chairman came forward and said, "I will pay the money at once without waiting for the confirmation of the vote by the next Grand Lodge." That shows you what sort of stuff our President of this evening is made of. With regard to the other officers of Grand Lodge, both present and past, I will only say for them, and for myself as one of them, that we are all anxious to discharge our duty to Grand Lodge and the Craft in general, and your approbation is the utmost reward we desire. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN: Brethren, the toast I have now to propose to you is one of the deepest interest on the present occasion. (Hear, hear.) It is "Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons." It is unnecessary that I should say one word to you as to the present Masonic charity. Your presence here is a proof that you both feel your obligations, and that you appreciate the pleasure to support it. What would Masonry be without its charities? They are an essential feature in the institution, and to see them flourish is the most gratifying thing that can happen to any Mason. Why do they flourish? Because a great many brethren, as they gradually rise in Freemasonry, feel an interest in the charities of the Craft. They first take the Stewardship of one charity, then of another, and then of a third. They interest their brethren and their friends; they keep up the traditional practice of charity in the Craft; and the noble annual subscriptions that we see announced at our various festivals are the result. Without this good feeling on the part of the Craft, and on the part of the brethren who come forward to work the charities as Stewards, they would present a very different figure to what they do; and it is a matter of profound gratification to every one in Freemasonry to see how the charities flourish. This charity was the last of the three charities in the date of its formation; but without it the Masonic scheme of charity would have been at fault. It was perfectly necessary that such an institution should exist to do justice to the scope and bearing of the charity we ought to exercise, and to the kindness we feel towards our unfortunate brethren. It is a very gratifying point that for some years past the amount collected annually for our charities has been very much larger than it used to be in times past. That is an unmixed source of gratification to every Mason. But I think we ought not to forget that, while this is owing partly to the exertions of the Stewards, partly to a better feeling prevailing in the Craft, it is, to a certain sense, owing to increased numbers. And what I want to draw your attention to is, that these great numbers will infallibly, in the ordinary vicissitudes of human life, produce a certain number of brethren who will require assistance from the Annuity Fund, whose widows will require to be assisted likewise by the Annuity Fund; and whose children—boys and girls—will also require to be assisted in the schools. While we congratulate ourselves on our prosperity as charities, that prosperity is largely owing to our increased numbers; and that the increased numbers will bring more claimants on our charity we cannot doubt. All honour to the Stewards! all honour to the Craft! But unless we are actuated by the same feelings of sympathy, our charity will not be in proportion to our increased numbers; and therefore it is necessary that on this occasion this consideration should be borne in mind—that, owing to our increased numbers, the amounts raised are not at all too much; they are very gratifying, but we require them not only to be kept up, but to be increased. And if we only bear this in mind; if we are thankful for the progress we have already made, but are determined that that progress shall only lead to further fruits, we are quite right; if we rest on our oars we are quite wrong. I will not detain you further on this topic; but I will just give you a few statistics of our past and present position. The institution for granting annuities to aged Freemasons was suggested by the Most Worshipful Grand Master his late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, in the year 1842. Since which time 316 aged brethren have been elected on the funds, to whom have been paid up to the end of December, 1870, the sum of £34,845 5s. After the election in May last there were 100 male annuitants, each receiving £26 per annum on the books. The aggregate amount paid them in the year was £2,600. The permanent annual income for the male annuitants at the present time is from Grand Lodge, £500; Grand Chapter, £100; dividends on funded property, £688 10s.; together, £1,288 10s. The residue of the income, including the working expenses of this branch of the institution, is made up from annual subscriptions and two-thirds of the donations; the other third has to be invested. There are twenty-one approved male candidates on the list for the next election. There are a great many distressed brethren who are anxious to be elected whose cases are found to be fit for assistance; but the amount of our funds will not admit of their being relieved. As to the Freemasons' Widows' Fund, it was established under the sanction of the late Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, in 1849, since which period 128 widows of our aged brethren have been recipients of relief from the fund, to whom have been paid, to December last, £15,538 10s. After the election in May last, there were 69 female annuitants each receiving £25 per annum, £1,738 10s. in the aggregate; in addition to which, there are seven widows entitled for three years to half their deceased husbands' annuities, unless elected annuitants in the meantime. The permanent annual income for the widows at the present time is, from Grand Lodge, £300; Grand Chapter, £50; dividends on funded property, £403 10s.; making together, £753 10s. The residue of the income, including the working expenses of this branch of the institution, is made up from annual subscriptions and two-thirds of the donations; the other third has to be invested. Mark this point again. There are twenty approved female candidates on the list for the next election. There is an asylum at Croydon attached to the institution capable of affording accommodation for 34 inmates, each of whom has two rooms. At present there are 32 occupants. The other annuitants, male and female, are permitted to reside where they please. The whole of the building has been paid for, and there is a sustentation fund of £1,000 stock, the interest of which is applied to the repairs of the edifice, so that the subscriptions for annuities are not applied for the purpose of maintaining the building. I think that is a most gratifying account; but while there are so many poor and distressed brethren and widows of deceased brethren claiming your assistance, you see there is a very strong reason for continued efforts and increased exertions for the adequate support of this charity. I wish its advocacy was in better hands than mine; but I trust to your Masonic feeling to do what is requisite, knowing that while you are thankful to the Almighty for giving you the means of living in comfort yourselves, you will do your best to assist your poorer brethren. (Cheers.)

Bro. FARNFIELD, jun., here read the Stewards' lists, which the CHAIRMAN afterwards announced represented a total of subscriptions to the amount of £3,377 16s.; fourteen lists, however, still left outstanding. (Applause.)

The Rev. C. J. MARTYN, G.C.: Right Worshipful Sir, to use the very common and hackneyed phrase, an honour and pleasure now devolve upon me, but to use a phrase well understood among us, the W.M., brethren, has entrusted me with his gavel, and therefore you know the nature of the toast I am about to propose. If it had not been that we are assembled to celebrate the establishment of a particular institution, it would have been the toast of the evening—it is "The Health of Bro. Samuel Tomkins, Grand Treasurer and our Chairman." (Hear, hear.) Brethren, you have shown me by the plaudits with which you have received his name the honour and estimation in which you hold him, even if it had not been already signified by the fact that the office he now holds he has held for nineteen years—a servitude such as falls to the lot of very few, and which relieves me of saying a great deal in his praise. I am certain on the present occasion it must be a source of great gratification to him to find he has presided over so large and influential a meeting, when the amount subscribed is £3,377, with fourteen lists to come it. Any man might well be proud to be in the position of Bro. Tomkins this night, because no one knows better than he that unless the funds are forthcoming, the affairs of these institutions could not go on at all. It is to me, and to many members of the Craft who take an interest in these charities, a source of regret that they are not better and more widely supported. I am sorry to find from a THE FREEMASON that there are four-fifths of the Masons who do not subscribe to the charities at all. That is a disgrace to our order which we ought each of us to try to wipe off. The other day, at a meeting of the Boys' and Girls' Schools, a request was made to the Craft to use their utmost endeavours to induce the brethren throughout the country to increase the funds of these institutions by becoming subscribers. You all know that it is the drop of water that wears away the stone; and so if each one of us would put his shoulder to the wheel and try to make these charities wider known and better appreciated—would try to show the brethren among whom he is thrown how excellent they are, instead of the £3,377, in which we rejoice to-night, our lists at these festivals would be three times that amount. Now, brethren, I beg to propose to you with all kindness, heartiness, and good feeling, the health of our Grand Treasurer and President this evening, Bro. Tomkins. It is very seldom that we find a brother come forward at such short notice to take the chair. We, of course, hoped to see the Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex here; but failing him, I am certain there is no one we would rather see in this chair than our Bro. Tomkins. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN: Brethren, I thank you cordially for the kindness with which you have responded to this toast. I assure you it is a great pleasure to preside at these festivals. It is a great pleasure to find this great charity flourish. It is a pleasure to find these brethren take such an interest in it; and it is also a great pleasure to find that when we meet brethren will tell us some truths which to all brethren may not be acceptable. I am sure that many brethren have not promoted the success of the charities as they ought to have done, and I hope they will kindly weigh and consider and bring into practical operation the thoughtful suggestions that have been made by the Grand Chaplain. We all have but one object; we desire that Masonry may rise and flourish; and we know it cannot flourish unless the charities are heartily supported. (Hear, hear.)

The CHAIRMAN: The next toast I have to give you is "Prosperity to the other Masonic Charities." They are all closely and nearly allied. We wish this charity to prosper; we wish equally that the other charities may prosper. Great success has attended them of late years; and I trust that their success this year will not be less than on recent occasions. The Boys' School Festival is to be held on the 8th of March. I am not able to tell you when the Girls' School Festival is to be held. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master, will preside, but he has not yet named the day. I hope as many brethren as possible will attend on both occasions, and that we shall have the pleasure of finding the pecuniary result of each festival will be large.

Bro. BINCKES: Bro. Chairman, it is a somewhat curious and singular coincidence that in commending this toast to the reception of our friends there should be some circumstances of doubt with reference to the festivals of both institutions whose success has been so heartily wished. The Girls' School, fortunately, have the most illustrious Chairman to preside at their festival, but the date at which it is to be held is left open for His Royal Highness to fix. The date of the Boys' School Festival is fixed for the 8th of March, but we have no chairman at present. What we are to do I do not know. Two or three illustrious brethren have been asked, but they are unable to take the chair; and here we are within five weeks of the festival, and I am not able to say who will preside at it. This is of itself a matter of anxiety, and causes one some little uneasiness. But, brethren, bear with me one moment when I say that other circumstances press on the Boys' School even more than the want of the name of a chairman. I cannot but feel that with the rival attractions which the sister institution presents this year, the amount of interest felt in the Boys' School must of necessity suffer some depreciation; but I do hope that our kind friends will not forsake us altogether, but will come forward in goodly numbers to our relief—if not, in such large numbers as in days gone by, yet still in such array as will enable us to conduct the business of that great institution in a proper and suitable manner. The next point I have to bring before you is this, that while the Aged Freemasons' Institution, whose festival we celebrate this evening, has a large funded property of £35,000, and supposing your contributions in any one year fall short of their annual wants, they can sell stock—"No, no"—they could if they had no other resource to supply their annual wants. The Girls' School with £28,000 could do the same; but if we, the Boys' School, suffer this year on account of a falling off in voluntary contributions, we have not this sum, we have not a shilling of stock we can sell, and therefore I must ask our friends not to forget that peculiar position in which we are placed this year. We have a fewer number of Stewards than ever we have had before; and I cannot at the present moment see how to provide the money required for our annual maintenance. Therefore, I think that if ever there was a moment when I was placed in a position to justify the making of a strong and earnest appeal to the liberality of our friends that moment is now; and I cannot help feeling that on account of that large amount of money which has recently been subscribed in this country for the relief of the distress which prevails abroad, we, along with other institutions at home, must suffer. But I do hope that our Masonic brotherhood will take care that their own charities do not fail of success, no matter how great is the distress in foreign countries. It would be a great shame—if I might use the term—if our own household should lack support in distress when support is given to suffering abroad; but the relief of which ought not to interfere with the legitimate support of our home institutions. You must bear with me in this, because I feel myself responsible in a measure for providing the maintenance and education of 128 of your sons. If we fail in doing that, you would immediately and naturally say, Who is to blame? You would lay it to me, and say it was from your trust to the position I hold that you in former years supported me; and I hope, therefore, that you will rally round us on the 8th of March very numerous, and rally round us a little more numerous on account of the difficult position in which we are placed. Our Bro. Farnfield I congratulate on his success. I thank your Chairman very much for the way in which he has spoken of this and the sister school, for which Bro. Patten will speak presently. I thank you for the whole of the executive for your support of our institution—for the large and generous assistance you have given us in the past. I assure you my faith is not shaken in our present success; and I have undoubted faith in what the future of that great institution will bring forth. No matter what may be said by a few isolated members in the outer world, every shilling we spend is carefully laid out; the institution's concerns are narrowly watched; your contributions are most gratefully received; and I pledge you my word every shilling you contribute is most faithfully applied. (Hear, hear, and great applause.)

Bro. PATTEN: Brother Chairman and brethren, I beg to thank you most sincerely for the very kind manner in which you have drunk success to the Girls' School. It is true that I have not the same claim upon you as Bro. Binckes has for the Boys' School; therefore I shall not detain you. I thank the Craft for the support they have given the Girls' School hitherto, and I hope they will continue it. The Prince of Wales has kindly consented to take the chair on a Wednesday in May next. The day is not fixed, because His Royal Highness has to fix the day for himself. I see around me many of my kind friends who have served the office of Steward for the Girls' School for some years past, and I do hope I shall receive their names as Stewards for the next festival. My letters went out to all the lodges on the first of this month, and I hope a large number of them will be returned with the name of a brother willing to act as Steward under His Royal Highness the Chairman. I do not know that I have much more to say to you. You have done me great service while I have been Secretary to the Girls' School. I trust that as long as I hold that position you will support me, and if you do you will perform your duty to the Craft. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN: I am sorry that at this hour of the evening there are so few brethren present to listen to and honour the toast that I am instructed to propose—"The Health of the Ladies." I can assure them that we fully appreciate their presence, and are extremely pleased to see them at our Masonic festivals. Their powerful and valuable influence should be a means of inviting us to the performance of good works; and I will therefore propose their health, and I shall call on Bro. Spiers to respond to it.

Bro. R. J. SPIERS, P.G.D.: Brethren, I am called upon to respond to this toast, than which there is not one that entails a more acceptable duty. We are all much indebted to them, and speaking in their name, I may say that although this toast comes to you at a very late period of the evening, I believe that it is not any want of gallantry that has caused this, but a desire to hear a toast which I hope will keep you quiet; at all events, will detain you here, because it is one of the best toasts of the evening. Brethren, you have not at present admitted to the privileges of Freemasonry the sex for whom I have now the honour to respond, but I think the time is not very far distant, because we see here in London that ladies are honoured by receiving a greater number of votes for our School Board than any of the gentlemen. In the place from which I come, the city of Oxford, we also have elected at the head of the poll a lady, the sister of one of our most eminent professors; and considering, what we do, the influence the sex ought to have upon us in contributing to that blessed work of charity, on behalf of which we have this day met, I am sure they are glad of the opportunity of coming forward to help you by every means in their power. Although they have deserted us now, at all events I feel assured that their best feelings are with us, and that we may always depend on that dear sex to help us on in that good work we are engaged in; and whether as wives, sweethearts, sisters, or daughters, we may ever rely on them to render service to this excellent Craft. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN: My last toast is that of "The Stewards." We are all much indebted to them for the extremely good meeting we have had. Everything has been judiciously arranged, and we have had nothing to find fault with. Our success is very much owing to the thoughtful care and laborious attention which the Stewards have bestowed on the arrangements of the evening, and I call on you to acknowledge, by drinking their health, the sense you entertain of their endeavours.

Bro. J. A. RUCKER: Right Worshipful Sir, having had the honour of being elected President of the Board of Stewards by those brethren who offered to serve that office with me, it becomes my duty—as I assure you it is a very great pleasure—to return thanks for them for the cordial manner in which their names have been received. I think it is patent to every one that there has been some trouble involved in the office, as we have met on the 3rd of February instead of the 25th of January. I will say that we entered on our business with cheerfulness, we pursued it with diligence, and we terminate it with gratification. We all admit that it is not customary for men to undertake a duty in which they have not a pleasure. That we have done our duties with diligence I refer you to our lists. That we have done them with satisfaction I cannot doubt after the way in which you have expressed yourselves. I thank you very much.

During the evening a beautiful selection of music was performed, under the direction of Bro. Lawler, by Madame Lancia and Misses Marian Johnstone, Montague, and Marion Severn, who were assisted by Bros. Young and Montem Smith, and Mr. Linley. A concert was given in the Temple after the toasts had been drunk, and the remainder of the evening was spent by the brethren in the company of the ladies, listening to some delightful and well-selected music.

The duties of toastmaster were most efficiently discharged by Bro. Thomas Spencer.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of the Boys' School held the usual monthly meeting on Saturday, the 4th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. H. Browse, V.P., occupied the chair, and there were also present, Bros. J. Hervey, G.S., V.P.; Raynham W. Stewart, V.P.; F. Walters, V.P.; B. Head, V.P.; Grosjean, J. Turner, Cox, White, and other brethren.

The minutes of the previous meeting of the General Committee were read and confirmed, and minutes of recent meetings of the Quarterly and House Committees were read for information. No fresh petitions of candidates were presented. The list now contains the names of 58 candidates for admission to the school, only fourteen of whom can be elected at the election in April next.

It was announced that a legacy of £200 from a lady had been paid into the Institution.

A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

Bro. RANSFORD, P.G. Organist, announces that his Annual Evening Concert will take place on Tuesday, the 28th inst., at St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, at 8 p.m. Eminent artistes are engaged to appear.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

TIC DOLOREUX, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, and all singular complaints, cured by Dr. Gee's Anodyne (embrocation). Price, 2s. 9d., or sent for 3s. It has never yet failed. Read testimonials and judge for yourselves. Agents, T. Barton and Co., 269, Strand, W.C. [Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Indisputable Remedies.—In the use of these medicaments there need be no hesitation or doubt of their cooling, healing, and purifying properties. The Ointment stands unrivalled for the facility it displays in relieving, healing, and thoroughly curing the most inveterate sores and ulcers and in cases of bad legs and bad breasts it acts as a charm. The Pills are the most effectual remedy ever discovered for the cure of liver complaints—diseases most disastrous in their effects, deranging all the proper functions of the organs affected, inducing restlessness, weariness, melancholy, inability to sleep, and pain in the side, until the whole system is exhausted. These wonderful pills, if taken according to the printed directions accompanying each box, strike at the root of the malady, stimulate the stomach and liver into a healthy action, and effect a cure.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

Furness ; Past & Present. By F. LEACH.

Part IV. of this work has reached us, and is fully equal to any of the preceding parts. Bro. Tweddell's connection with the publication appears to have ceased, but his mantle has fallen upon a worthy successor. Part IV. is embellished with a splendid coloured drawing of the famous Furness Abbey window, now in the Parish Church, Bowness, Windermere, and views of Holker Hall and Springfield, Ulverston, mansions of more than local fame. The work will be a complete record of the flourishing district to which its pages are devoted.

Phemie Keller, and The Rich Husband. By the Author of “George Geith,” &c.

With feelings of pleasure we resume our pen to record our impressions of Mrs. Riddell's powerful delineations of character. In “Phemie Keller,” we are somewhat reminded of passages in “Too Much Alone,” a work which we are now engaged in reading, and the same quaint stream of thought may be said to pervade all the author's novels. Various slight but natural touches, however, impart originality to each figure in the dramatis personæ, and the interest of the several stories are fully maintained to the end. The “Rich Husband” is rather a painful tale, although doubtless true to life. Many of the scenes are most graphically depicted, and the versatile talent of the author seems to shine as much in the pathetic as in the descriptive or didactic. Quite a harvest of choice sayings—and wise as choice—may be gathered from Mrs. Riddell's writings, and while lively incident and sparkling dialogue abound, there is an utter absence of that straining after effect, and that hungering after startling catastrophe, which are, unhappily, so conspicuous in the sensational productions of the day. We can, therefore, heartily commend these works to our readers, not only as specimens of a high order of intellect, but as narratives of modern life and manners, faithfully reflected in the mirror of a pure and cultivated mind.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

[The sentence, “On application to the authorities at Dublin the work is preserved in their archives,” should read is not preserved. The author of this article cannot procure or trace it anywhere.]

The following laws were compiled and arranged by a Special Committee of Grand Lodge appointed soon after A.D. 1810, and they were printed for general remarks and suggested alterations about 1815. We have never met with them before, and beg to present the “communication” in its entirety to our readers:—

The following report of a Committee appointed to revise and give a more practical adaptation to the Laws of Freemasonry, is submitted to you for perusal before the same shall be taken into consideration by the GRAND LODGE; any remarks or suggestions transmitted (post paid) to the Grand Secretary, No. 35, Capel-street, on or before the first Thursday in February shall be laid before the GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND, when the rules are under Discussion.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE.

His Grace the Duke of Leinster, Grand Master.
Hon. A. Hutchinson, D.G.	Alderman M. West, G.M. Master.
Henry Townshend, Esq.,	William Campbell, P.M. G. Treasurer.
207.
Revd. Robert Handcock,	John Sharkey, M. 189.
D. D. & G. Sec.	John Campbell, M. 489.
John Fowler, P.M. 620.	John Norman, P.M. 620.

The Committee appointed by the Grand Lodge of Ireland on Thursday the 1st day of June 1815, “to revise and adapt to practical purposes the Laws of the AHIMAN REZON,” and by a subsequent order of the Grand Lodge, on the 3rd of August being authorised to consult the MS. Books of the Order, having met and considered the same, are of opinion, that the Draft of the Laws hereto annexed, is such as is consistent with the “ancient Landmarks,” founded on the Basis of the former Code, and appropriate to the present state of the Order in this Country, and as such, they trust it may meet with the approbation of the Grand Lodge.

Your Committee have laid down for the outline of its plan,

1. General Classification.
2. Particular Arrangement.
3. Brevity and Simplicity.

They have therefore taken the liberty of altering the wording and arrangement of the old Code of Laws, when-ever it seemed necessary, either for elucidating the subject, or producing greater simplicity in the new One; often combining in one regulation, the purport of two, three, or even more of the old ones, for which Reason they have annexed to their Report, Marginal Notes, containing, for the Satisfaction of the Brethren, a reference to the Number of the Law, as well as the Page of the AHIMAN REZON (Brother Downe's last Edition), where the original matter of each of the Regulations in the annexed Report is to be found; and in all cases, where they have taken the liberty of suggesting any new matter for the approval of the Grand Lodge, they have particularly marked it as such, by Printing it in Italics.

All which in most respectfully submitted,
 J. FOWLER,
 Acting Chairman to the Committee.
 WM. FRANCIS GRAHAM, D.G. Sec.
 To the Right Worshipful
 The Grand Lodge of Ireland.

SECTION THE 1ST OF THE GRAND LODGE.

1. The Grand Lodge, the Supreme Authority, consists of the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, all former Grand Masters, Deputy Grand Masters and Grand Wardens, the Grand Treasurer, the Grand Secretary, the Grand Chaplain, the Members of the Grand Master's Lodge, and the Masters and Wardens of all the particular Lodges on the Registry of Ireland.

2. The Grand Lodge shall meet for the dispatch of business on the first Thursday in every Month, at 7 o'clock in the Evening, and at all times when summoned by the Grand Master; but shall not at any time be closed for a longer period than one Month; nor adjourned on any Night of its Meeting without the consent of the Majority of the Brethren present.

3. If at any Meeting of the Grand Lodge, the Grand Master and his Deputy, as well as all former Grand Masters and Deputy Grand Masters, be absent, the present Senior Grand Warden fills the Chair, and in his absence the Junior Grand Warden, and in his absence the Past Grand Wardens and Members of the Grand Master's Lodge, who have filled the Chair in any Lodge, according to Seniority, and in case no brother of the above description be present, the Chair shall be filled by the Majority of Voices present, and the Grand Wardens' Chairs in like manner.

4. In the Grand Lodge none can act as Wardens but the present Grand Wardens, if in Company, unless they are called upon to fill a more elevated station in the Grand Lodge, pro tempore, but in their absence the oldest former Grand Wardens are to be called upon to fill the Wardens' Chairs, but if no former Grand Wardens are present, their places are to be filled according to the foregoing Regulation.

5. No Brother shall sit in the Grand Lodge but the present and past Grand Officers, the Members of the Grand Master's Lodge, and the Masters and Wardens of all particular Lodges, without a dispensation from the Chair for that purpose, but if a Master or Warden be sick or necessarily absent a proxy shall be admitted in his place, provided he be a past Officer of the Station he represents, and a Member of the same Lodge, and in like manner a Grand Officer being at the same time the Officer of a Private Lodge, may appoint a past Officer of his particular Lodge to act, pro tempore, as its representative in the Grand Lodge, although he be present in his situation of Grand Officer.

6. Every Master and Warden at his first attendance at the Grand Lodge, shall stand such examination as the Grand Master or the Right Worshipful in the chair shall appoint, and if found incapable of his office, he shall not be received as a Member of Grand Lodge.

7. The Roll shall be called each Monthly Meeting of the Grand Lodge, and every absent Member, being the Representative of a Lodge in the City of Dublin or its Vicinity, who does not send a proxy shall be fined 1s. 1d., and the Lodge not represented by any of its Officers or their Proxies shall be fined 5s. 11½d.

8. The Accounts of the Grand Lodge are to be examined and settled half-yearly, and printed, and all Dues, Fines, and Forfeitures to be paid off on or before the first Thursdays in June and December; and the Masters and Wardens of Lodges or their Proxies shall not be permitted to take their places in the Grand Lodge if there be any Arrears due from their respective Lodges until such Arrears be first paid off, nor shall any of the Brethren belonging to Lodges in default be entitled to Grand Lodge Certificate.

9. The Masters or Wardens or their Proxies representing particular Lodges shall not be permitted to take their places in the Grand Lodge without their Jewels, which must be of Silver, and pendant to blue Ribbons, the Grand Officers alone being entitled to wear them of Gold, but all Members of the Grand Lodge must appear in White Aprons, bordered with Sky Blue Silk, and no other colour.

10. The Grand Lodge alone is competent to elect its Grand Officers, with the exception of the Deputy Grand Master, but, the Grand Master's Lodge is vested with the privilege of recommending candidates for that purpose to the Grand Lodge; and none but the Members of the Grand Lodge shall be admitted within the Doors during the Election of the Grand Officers: the Election to be held at the Grand Lodge Meeting in May.

11. At the Grand Lodge Meetings; all matters that concern the Fraternity in general, particular Lodges, or individual Brethren, are to be gravely, maturely, and sedately considered of; here also all differences that cannot be accommodated privately, nor by a particular Lodge, are to be decided, and if any brother think himself aggrieved by the Decision, he may appeal to a subsequent Meeting of the Grand Lodge, he leaving his appeal in writing with the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, or the Grand Secretary, provided there is an interval of one Month between the time of leaving his appeal and its being read in the Grand Lodge, that the Pursuivant may give timely notice to all parties concerned, unless in cases of necessity, or when the parties are all present.

12. All matters in the Grand Lodge are determined by a majority of votes, each Member having one, and the Grand Master, or the person representing him in the Chair, two, and the Grand Lodge has an inherent power and authority, for the benefit of the Fraternity, to make new regulations, or to alter those already formed, always preserving the old Land Marks, the Members of the Grand Lodge being the Representatives of the whole Order.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Bedford Lodge, No. 157.—At a meeting held of this lodge on Friday, 10th inst., at Freemason's Hall, there were present: Bros. J. Hills, W.M.; W. Holland, S.W.; G. Silcocke, J.W.; Brandar, S.D.; Briggs, J.D.; S. Hills, P.M., Sec.; J. Smith, I.P.M.; T. Cubitt, P.M.; Mills, P.M.; Eades, L. Drew, Tullet, Mack, Walker, &c.; and Bro. F. Walters, W.M. 1309, as a visitor. The lodge was opened in due form. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The candidates for the several degrees were absent. Bro. J. Hills, W.M., in an appropriate speech, presented Bro. J. Smith, I.P.M., with a massive gold Past Master's jewel, which, at the last meeting of the lodge, had been unanimously voted to him from the lodge funds. Bro. John Smith, in a kind feeling speech, acknowledged the handsome present they had made him. Several propositions for candidates for initiation to be done at the next meeting were made. The lodge was closed. The usual superior banquet and dessert followed, and some excellent singing brought this happy re-union to a pleasant termination.

Dalhousie Lodge, No. 860.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, 9th inst., at Anderton's Hotel. The lodge was opened. There were present: Bros. J. W. Williams, W.M.; T. Hardy, S.W.; R. Thomson, J.W.; W. Bristo, P.M., Treasurer; H. J. St. John Ingram, B. Seneat, S.D.; H. Dalarocce, J.D.; S. Smith, Organist; C. F. Knox, M. Hermann, W. France, F. Bristo, T. C. White, F. Allen, and others. The visitors were: R. A. Wright, P.P.G.S.D., Herts; F. Walters, W.M. 1309. The work done was passing Bro. White to the second degree, which was done in an able manner. The lodge was closed. The banquet followed, and the good music and singing, for which this lodge is so famous, completed the evening's proceedings.

PROVINCIAL.

BRIGHTON.—Royal Clarence Lodge, No. 271.—On Friday, January 20th, the annual meeting of this old established lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion. The lodge was opened by Bro. John H. Scott, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.W., Sussex (in the unavoidable absence of the W.M.), at half-past four o'clock, and the minutes of the previous lodge were read and confirmed. The Secretary then informed the acting W.M. and brethren of the communications received by him, which comprised the resignations of three members of the lodge—Bros. H. Smithers, P.M., Lardelli, and Craven—also that Bro. John Cordy regretted his inability to continue any longer the duties of Treasurer, on account of the increasing infirmities of age and the distance his present residence was from Brighton. Upon this, Bro. G. I. King, P.M., proposed in the kindest terms and most fraternal manner, "That the best thanks of the lodge be given to Bro. Cordy for his faithful and constant services during the many years he had held the Treasurership." In doing this Bro. King referred in the most feeling terms to the many years that Bro. Cordy had been connected with the lodge, both as a member and as an officer, but more especially as the Treasurer since the lamented death of Bro. D. M. Folkard, and expressed the regret that he was certain every member of the lodge would feel at losing the services and advice of their old friend, for such they had ever found him, especially in the days when Freemasonry in Brighton was not so flourishing as at present. Whatever fortune the lodge had experienced, good or bad, in times past, Bro. Cordy had always been prepared to share it, and at the present time it was a source of great regret they were compelled to receive from their excellent brother the intimation "That he felt unable to attend to the responsible duties of the office." The proposed motion was carried unanimously. The chair was then taken by Bro. G. E. Pocock, P.M., 271, 851, &c., Past G.S.B. England, and Prov. G. Sec. Sussex, to enable him to install his son, Bro. C. J. Pocock, S.W. and W.M.-elect, he having been initiated into Freemasonry in this lodge by his father some years since. It must be a particularly pleasing duty for a father to initiate a son into Freemasonry, but the pleasure of installing a son into the chair of K.S. must be much greater, it being the highest honour the brethren can confer on any of their members. To witness this most interesting ceremony, a very large number of distinguished Masons assembled from all parts of the province. Bro. King, P.M., 271, P. Prov. G.P., Sussex, presented Bro. J. C. Pocock as having been duly elected to the office of Master. This afforded him an opportunity of offering some observations in reference to the unusual circumstance of a father installing a son into the chair of the lodge. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and the brethren below the degree of Installed Master having withdrawn, a Board of Masters, in number about 24, was then formed. The business of the Board of Installed Masters having been completed, Bro. G. E. Pocock gave a Masonic explanation of the 47th Problem of Euclid, pointing out the harmony, the charity, and the beauty in a Masonic sense, of this celebrated figure in geometry, and impressing on the brethren standing around him, the importance and the necessity of complying with the rules of Freemasonry, in every way, so that its teachings should impress all with the necessity of cultivating a sense of the important responsibilities attached to the privilege of being a Mason. The Board of Installed Masters was then closed, and the Master Masons admitted. Bro. C. J. Corder, P.M., 271, P.P.G.W., Sussex, then proclaimed the W.M. in the East, West, and South. The address to the Master on the importance of his office, and the duties connected therewith, was given by Bro. E. J. Karner, P.M. 271, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Sussex, in a manner which elicited the expressed approval of the brethren present. Bro. John H. Scott, P.M. 271, P.P.G. Warden, Sussex, then addressed the Wardens on their duties, position, and responsibilities. The general address to the members was given by the Installing Master, and, at its conclusion, both father and son received the hearty congratulations of their friends. The officers nominated and invested were as follows: Bros. Beard, M.D. I.P.M.; E. Bright, S.W.; Loveday, J.W.; Rev. John Griffith, P.M. 811, P.G. Chaplain, Sussex, Chaplain; G. Tatham, P.M. 271, P.P.G.W. Sussex, Treas.; Rev. A. Creek, Sec.; W. Wilkinson, S.D.; Gill, J.D.; J. Corder, P.M. 271, P.P.G. Warden, Sussex, D. of C.; Ford, I.G.; John Fabian, P.M. 271, P.P.G.D. of Works, Sussex, Steward. Before the lodge was closed, various sums of money were voted from the lodge funds to charitable institutions: the Masonic Boys' School; the Masonic Girls' School; the Benevolent Fund for Aged Freemasons; the Sussex County Hospital; the Brighton Dispensary; the Brighton Eye Infirmary; the Brighton Soup Fund; the Brighton Lying-in Institution. All business being ended, the lodge was closed soon after six o'clock, p.m., and the brethren, to the number of 60, adjourned to the magnificent banqueting room of the Royal Pavilion, where was provided a banquet supplied by Mr. Mellison, of the Brighton Concert Hall Restaurant. The dinner-table was most sumptuously supplied with every delicacy in season, the wines of the choicest description, and the table decorations elicited special remark for their chaste and elegant arrangement. Mr. Mellison personally superintended, and the arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the brethren were generally approved. During the evening there was present: Bros. Rev. Sir John Hay, Past Grand Chaplain of England; G. E. Pocock, P.M. 271, 851, P.G.S.B. England, Prov. G. Sec. Sussex; W. R. Wood, P.M. 811, P. Grand Steward, England, P.P.J.G.W. Sussex; E. J. Turner, P.M. 271, Deputy Grand Master, Sussex; Rev. John Griffith, P.M. 811, Prov. Grand Chaplain, Sussex; W. Challen, P.M. 315, P.P.G.S.B. Sussex; C. J. Corder, P.M. 271, 732, 851, P.P.G. D. of C., Sussex, and P.P.G.S.W., Sussex; Taaffe, P.M. 811, P.D. of C., Sussex; John H. Scott, P.M. 271, P.P.G.S.W., Sussex; G. H. King, P.M. 271, P.P.G.P., Sussex; Scott, P.M., P.P.G.S. of Works, Sussex; W. Kuhe, P.M. 271, P.P.G., Organist, Sussex; Devine, 315, P.G. Organist, Sussex; P. R. Wilkinson, P.M. 271, P.P.G.D., Sussex; Dixon, P.M. 271, P.A. D. of C. Sussex; W. A. Stuckey, P.M. 271, P.P.A.G. D. of C., Sussex; V. Freeman, P.M. 732, P.P.G.W., Sussex; John Fabian, P.M. 271, P.P.G., D. of Works, Sussex; G. Tatham, P.M. 271, Treasurer 271, P.P.G.W. Sussex; Branwell, P.M. 271; Lowdell, P.M. 271; E. Bright, S.W. 271; Creak, Sec. 271; W. Wilkinson, S.D., 271; Wilkinson, 271; Sabine, P.M. 73; Loveday, J.W. 271; Gill, J.D. 271; Foord, I.G. 271; Langtry, 271; Evershed, W.M. 56; C. M. Smith, 271; Adams, 271; R. M. Webb, 732, Mayor of Brighton; A. H. Cox, 732, ex-Mayor of Brighton; W. H. German, 811; S. Wing, 811; G. A. Day, Sec. 732; James Curtis, W.M. 315; E. Turner, W.M. 811; E. Carpenter, W.M. 732; S. Ridley, Treasurer, 732; G. Hawkins, &c., &c.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—The first meeting of this lodge since the annual festival was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Wednesday, the 1st inst., under the presidency of Bro. Stretton, W.M. On the conclusion of the preliminary business, Bros. Pye and Beeton were duly raised to the third degree, the ceremony, at the request of the W.M., being very impressively performed by Bro. Toller, P.G. Sec, the effect being greatly enhanced by the musical service conducted by Bro. Charles Johnson, P.P.G.O., on the organ. Bro. Kelly, P.G.M., read a letter from Bro. W. James HUGHAN, of Truro, thanking the brethren for the handsome manner in which his former donations of books to the library of the Masonic Hall had been acknowledged, and now presenting, through him (Bro. Kelly) a further present of Masonic publications; Bro. HUGHAN writing—"You are heartily welcome to these for the library, and kindly say that if the members will only make the library worthy of the province, I will not forget the shelves, they may be certain." Bro. Kelly, after eulogising Bro. HUGHAN for his handsome presents to the library, and especially for the valuable aid he had rendered at the two last elections to their local candidate for the Boys' School—Alfred Nutt, son of the late Bro. John Nutt, of this lodge—proposed that, as a slight mark of esteem and gratitude, Bro. HUGHAN be elected an honorary member of the lodge, in addition to a vote of thanks, which was seconded by the W.M., and heartily concurred in by the brethren. On the proposition of the P.G.M., seconded by the W.M., a vote of condolence was passed on the recent decease of Bro. Robert Crawford, a P.M. of the lodge and a Past Grand Senior Warden of the province, who was for upwards of a quarter of a century an active member, and during a considerable portion of that time the Treasurer of the lodge. Some business of a routine character was then transacted, two gentlemen were proposed as candidates for initiation, a Committee was appointed to revise the by-laws, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 8th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Athenaeum. There were present W. Bro. Dr. Moore, W.M., P.P.G.S.W.; Bros. John Hatch, I.P.M.; William Hall, S.W.; Wm. Fleming, J.W.; James Hatch, P.M. and Treas.; Edmund Simpson, P.M. and Sec.; Edward Airey, S.D.; William J. Sly, J.D.; John Harrison, I.G.; John Watson, Tyler; Harry Sumner, Steward; and a large assembly of brethren. The lodge being opened and usual business transacted, Bro. Barrow proposed that the use of the lodge-room and furniture should be let to a new lodge, on the same terms that it had been to Lodge No. 1051. The question was deferred until such a time as the lodge should be founded, every probability being held forth that the request would be granted. Bro. Barrow then asked the recommendation of the lodge to a petition for a new lodge, to be called the Duke of Lancaster Lodge, to be held in Lancaster. This was seconded by Bro. Edmund Simpson, P.M., and carried unanimously. A petition to the Fund of Benevolence, on behalf of the widow of a deceased Past Master, was read, and received the unanimous recommendation of the lodge. One joining member and two candidates for initiation were proposed, and the lodge was closed in due form.

BERWICK-ON-TWEED.—Lodge St. David, No. 393.—The brethren of this lodge met on the evening of Tuesday, 7th February, being the regular monthly meeting, in their own hall. Bro. George Moor, Worshipful Master, occupied the chair, the Wardens' chairs being filled by Bro. C. I. Paton, S.W., and Bro. C. Hopper, J.W. The lodge was opened in due form, previous minutes were read and confirmed, and Bro. the Rev. H. Proctor, Vicar of Tweedmouth, was unanimously elected a joining member. A proposal was made from a brother for affiliation, accompanied with the usual recommendations, and was laid on the table and ordered to be entered in the summonses for ballot at the next regular monthly meeting. No further business being before the meeting, the lodge was closed, and the brethren immediately thereafter sat down to an excellent banquet, prepared for the purpose of entertaining the Senior Warden. After the table was cleared, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drunk with enthusiasm. The Worshipful Master, Bro. George Moor, rose and said: Brethren, we have this evening given honour to our illustrious ruler in Freemasonry, the Most Worshipful Grand Master of England, and also to our good and faithful Provincial Grand Master of Northumberland and Berwick-on-Tweed, but the banquet specially prepared, of which we all have partaken, was for the purpose of entertaining one of our own office-bearers—the Senior Warden. It is now some time ago since he joined us, and several of us have had the privilege of knowing him in private life, as well as in his Masonic career, and all of us in the capacity of Freemasons highly esteem him for his noble illustrations of the true principles of Freemasonry. The lodge has received many tokens of a ready willingness shown to improvement, which the brethren are fully aware of; and in order to mark our sense of the many efforts of this, the members of the lodge unanimously resolved to give our Senior Warden a suitable testimonial, which we consider would be best, in the shape of a handsome solid gold Masonic jewel, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. Chalmers Izett Paton, by the brethren of Lodge St. David, No. 393, in recognition of his many kindnesses, and as a mark of respect and affectionate regard, 7th February, 1871." I now present this solid gold jewel to him, in the name of the whole of the brethren of the lodge, in the earnest desire that he may long be spared to wear it, and continue to work in the glorious cause of our noble Order.—The Senior Warden, Bro. C. I. Paton, rose and said: Worshipful Master, Brother Warden, and brethren, it is with feelings of great pleasure that I sit here in the chair of the Senior Warden, and if I have carried out the symbolic teachings proper to my office to the satisfaction of the lodge, I cannot but rejoice in it. I accept with delight and gratitude the mark of your favour which I have just received; and will wear this jewel with pride in future days at all Masonic gatherings. Since I first saw the light of Masonry, I have endeavoured to walk according to strict rule and plumb, always striving to observe the glorious teachings and principles of our ancient and honourable Order. I can venture to defy any one to point out any deviation on my part from the ancient landmarks, laws, obligations, and charges. (One thing I may say—I do it without wishing to say anything derogatory to any one, and I hope I shall be understood, by every brother present—that the greatest fault of Freemasons is their not paying sufficient attention to the Divine truths taught in our ceremonials and illustrated in our symbols. No brother can be justified in allowing these great truths to escape from his memory and regard, because his promises, made at the very threshold of our Temple, ought to remain for ever deeply engraven on his heart. Were this more duly considered, and were these truths more constantly present to the minds of brethren, strifes or divisions, such as sometimes unhappily do occur among us, would be impossible. Freemasons, calling themselves Christians, throughout the world regard St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist with special reverence; and their admirable teachings of morality and brotherly love may be deemed the foundations of the rules and teachings of the Order. I have endeavoured, however, feebly to struggle for the maintenance of the rules of virtue and morality inculcated by them—the observance of which in their integrity is the honour and glory of our Order. I have endeavoured to maintain the laws of the Order by correcting errors. I have but imperfectly succeeded; I hope, however, that ultimately I shall be successful, and that these laws will be vindicated in their integrity. I often think of one of our symbols—"The All-seeing Eye"—and I rejoice to entertain the confidence that He who rules over all will with unfailing justice confound the guilty and protect those who are in the right. Some time may elapse; the course of Providence is often slow to our apprehension, but the end is not less sure. I am contented to wait for the end. In maintaining the cause of Freemasonry, I have lately been involved in a controversy with a brother living in America, on the subject of our relation to St. John the Evangelist; I hope, however, that I have been able to maintain our right to assert a relation to St. John as one who taught the same principles which we teach, and that from a very early period his name has been connected with Freemasonry, and that he has been specially revered by Freemasons in all parts of the world. I have laboured to maintain the antiquity of Freemasonry against those—some of them honoured brethren—who have adopted the opinion that our present or modern Freemasonry is a new thing, the existence of which dates no further back than the beginning of last century. I have constantly and earnestly—you will allow me also to say, honestly—opposed what is known as the 1717 theory. I do not believe that our system of Freemasonry was invented and palmed upon the world by Bros. Drs. Desaguliers, Anderson, and their fellows. I believe they were too good men to attempt anything of the kind, and that in their great labours for the revival and reorganization of Freemasonry they were as sincere as we are this night; and if this only is admitted, which the character of the men renders indisputable, the whole question is at an end. But I need not go far for an argument to prove an antiquity of Freemasonry, beyond the date which a few recent critics have assigned to it. I have only to look, Worshipful Master, to the chair in which you sit, which is decorated with symbols such as we use at the present day, but bears the date 1641. Thus we are at once thrown back beyond the year 1717, and the resuscitation of Freemasonry which then took place, and in which Dr. Desaguliers and Dr. Anderson were the chief agents. Again, Worshipful Master, Bro. Warden, and brethren, I have to thank you for the kindness which you have shown to me—for the honour which you have conferred upon me. I will always wear this jewel with fresh remembrance of you, and may I be enabled so to conduct myself that you may never be ashamed of me, and that the interests of the Masonic fraternity may be promoted by all that I do.—Bro. Lambert, a Past Master, next proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master," in a neat and appropriate speech.—The Worshipful Master briefly replied. A number of songs were sung by various brethren, and after every one having thoroughly enjoyed themselves, the brethren parted to meet again on another night.

HERTFORD.—Hertford Lodge, No. 403.—A lodge of emergency was held at the Town Hall, on Tuesday, last week. Present: Bros. H. B. Hodges, W.M.; J. D. Medcalf, S.W.; A. H. Wagner, J.W.; T. S. Carter, Secretary; J. R. Cocks, Treasurer; W. H. Nicholls, J.D.; C. P. Wyman, I.G.; S. Neale, M.C.; C. Drummond, P.M.; and E. A. Simson. Visitors: Bros. E. Salisbury, P.M. 901; H. L. Inskip, 449. Mr. Henry Campkin, of Datchworthbury, near Stevenage, Herts, farmer, was initiated. The whole of the ceremony was worked very creditably.

BIRKENHEAD.—Zelland Lodge, No. 537.—On Wednesday, 18th January, the annual installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Rooms, Hamilton Square, when Bro. Thomas Earl Hignett was placed in the chair of K.S., the ceremony being most ably performed by Bro. Willoughby, P.P.J.G.W., assisted by Bros. H. Bulley and J. P. Platt, P.P.J.G.W.'s; W. Bulley, P.P.J.G.D.; Thos. Platt, P.P.J.G.D.; Harold, P.P.G.P.; Stevenson, P.M.; Lambert, P.M.; Golborne, P.M., &c. Amongst the visitors present were: Bros. H. Holbrook, R.W.D.P.G.M., a lodge, and of expressing the feelings of the members in stating that the selection had given the whole of the members of the lodge the utmost satisfaction, as also the gratification it afforded him (Bro. King) in being allowed to present so conscientious a Mason, one whom they had ever found prepared to do the work of any office undertaken by him to receive the benefit of installation. The installing master then proceeded with the ceremony in that correct, impressive and kindly manner, which has for years distinguished Bro. G. E. Pocock's working in Masonry. Victoria, Vancouver's Island; J. B. Hignett, P.P.J.G.D.; Bullock, P.M. 971, &c. The newly-installed Master then appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bro. T. Marwood, S.W.; R. H. Moore, J.W.; J. P. Platt, Treas.; A. B. Golborne, Sec.; Hilton, S.D.; Golborne, J.D.; Biggs, I.G. Bro. Bullock, who had been proposed as a joining member, was then balloted for and unanimously elected. The usual annual subscriptions were voted to the various Masonic Institutions. Bro. H. Bulley, in an exceedingly appropriate speech, proposed that, in the name of the lodge, a sum of five guineas be given to one of the Masonic charities to constitute the retiring Master, Bro. Lambert, a Life Governor, which was unanimously confirmed. Bro. Lambert suitably acknowledged the compliment paid to him. Upwards of 30 of the brethren then adjourned to the Woodside Hotel, where they partook of a most excellent banquet. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and the evening was spent in true Masonic harmony and hilarity.

BRIGHTON.—Yarborough Lodge, No. 811.—The members of this, the last established of the Brighton Craft lodges, met on Saturday, January 21st, in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion. The lodge was opened by the W.M. Bro. Edward Turner, 30, and he was well supported by the various officers of the lodge. A gentleman was expected for initiation, but he did not present himself. Several questions, interesting only to members of the lodge, were discussed; one gentleman was proposed for initiation, and one brother, of Lodge 271, for joining. All business having been completed the lodge was closed at an early hour, thus permitting the brethren to enjoy the banquet which followed the close of the lodge. This was provided in the adjoining room by Messrs. Mutton Bros., of the King's Road, and in every respect, waiting included, gave satisfaction. The tables were decorated with great taste; fruit and flowers, vases and epergnés, intermingled in artistic array. The cloth having been cleared, the W.M. in brief, but most appropriate terms, gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. W. R. Wood, P.M. 315, 811, 63, Past Grand Steward, Past Prov. G.W., Sussex, replied on behalf of the Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Grand Officers Present and Past. He referred to the present position of Freemasonry in this country, and attributed it to the position and the knowledge of the present rulers of Masonry in England. They were in his opinion, as also in the opinion of the various bodies of Masons with whom he mingled, determined to do justice to their position, and to recognise the importance of acknowledging the right of every Mason to meet together in the circle in which he lived. (Hear, hear). This is fully borne out by the freedom with which the applications for new lodges had been entertained, and in so many instances during the past year been granted. He trusted that the present rulers of Craft Masonry would continue in this course and live many years to see the beneficial results to the order which he was sure would be the consequence. (Applause). Bro. J. C. Burrows, P.M. 811, Past Prov. G.W., Sussex, replied on behalf of the Past Masters of the lodge. He said, there is so much that is beautiful and good in the forms and ceremonies of this mystic art, so much that impels us to look with forbearance on the failings of others, and teaches us to pity and assist the distressed as well as to succour the weak, that it must commend itself to all men who desire to do good. He trusted that in some way or other every one present endeavoured to do something towards aiding their fellow-creatures in the hour of adversity; indeed, in looking round the table he recognised the faces of very many who sought, as he hoped he did, to practise Freemasonry as well as to speak it from the lips. The Past Masters of the Yarborough Lodge had, he fully believed, done this, as well as attending to their duties at the lodge meetings. "The Visitors" was responded to by Bro. R. M. Webb, 732, (Mayor of Brighton), who assured the company present that he felt honoured at being present that evening to enjoy the splendid hospitality of the lodge. This was the first time he had had the pleasure of being with them, he hoped, most heartily, not the last, and he urged upon them to return the visit to his own lodge—the Royal Brunswick, 732. Upon very many occasions he had witnessed the beneficial effects of Freemasonry, the true spirit of benevolence that actuated its members, who, in manner most practical, illustrated the teachings, and the lessons of the impressive ceremonies which, step by step, introduced every initiate to the full privileges of the Master Mason's degree. Benevolence and hospitality were the most brilliant gems in the Masonic diadem; long may the time be—indeed may the time never come—when their lustre shall be diminished by the acts of any brother of the Order. (Hear, hear). Several other toasts followed, and the evening was brought to a happy close shortly before twelve o'clock. There were present: Bros. E. Turner, 30, W.M.; C. Horsley, S.W.; S. Tnauer, J.W.; Nicholson, S.D.; J. Wood, J.D.; T. Lainson, I.G.; Rev. Tyffe, D. of C.; Artis, W.S.; J. C. Burrows, P.M. 811, P.P.G.W., Sussex; Molineaux, P.M. 811; G. De Paris, 811; Gell, Sec.; W. R. Wood, P.M. 315, 811, 63, P.G. Steward, P.P.G.W., Sussex, Treasurer 811; Rev. Dr. Griffiths, P.M. 811, Chaplain 271, Prov. Grand Chaplain, Sussex; Dr. Taaffe, P.M. 811, Prov. G. D. of C., Sussex; Dr. J. N. Cunningham, P.M. 811, 1110, J.W. 315, P. Prov. G.W., Sussex; R. M. Webb, 732, (Mayor of Brighton); J. C. Pocock, W.M. 271; G. Smith, P.M. 732, P.P.G.P., Sussex; Kuhe, P.M. and Organist 271, P.P.G. Organist, Sussex; Devine, Organist 315, Pro. G. Organist, Sussex; Yarrow, P.M., P.P.G.S. of Works, Cheshire; T. J. Sabine, P.M. 73; Hurrell; Adams, 271; Whatford, 271; Bristowe, German, S. Wing, Heckstall, Smith, Storr, &c., &c.

KIRKBY LONSDALE.—Underley Lodge, No. 1074.—The annual meeting for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect, and celebrating the festival of St. John, was held at the Concert Hall, Kirkby Lonsdale, on Friday, the 27th ultimo. Bro. Dodd, W.M., P.G.S.B., H. 995, &c., occupied the chair of K.S., supported by Bro. W. James, S.W., P.G.S., and W.M.-elect; and Bro. The Rev. Canon Ware, J.W., P.G. Chap. The following brethren were also present, viz., Capt. Braithwaite-Wilson, P.M., P.P.G.S.D.; Capt. Mott, P.M., P.G.S.D. West Lancashire; Lieut. Gawith, P.P.G.D.C.; H. Davis, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; R. James, J.W. 995; H. Ranthmell, P.G.D.C.; Dr. Page, S.W. 48, Edinburgh; &c. The ballot was taken for Mr. J. N. Hindson as a candidate to receive the light, which on proving unanimous, he was introduced and initiated by Bro. Dodd in his usual faultless style. Bros. Dr. Page and R. James were also unanimously elected as joining members. Bro. James, the W.M.-elect, was then duly presented by Bro. Captain Braithwaite and duly installed in the chair of K.S. by Bro. Dodd, the retiring W.M., he being ably assisted in the ceremony by that zealous and distinguished brother, Capt. Mott. On the lodge being resumed in the first degree a joining member was proposed, and the brethren afterwards adjourned to the Royal Hotel for the banquet, when a thoroughly fraternal evening was enjoyed, under the presidency of the newly-installed W.M., who was ably supported by the I.P.M., and Bros. The Rev. Canon Ware, S.W., and T. Wearing, J.W. The other officers appointed for the current year are: Bros. Dr. Page, S.D.; Rev. E. A. Sall, LL.D., P.G.C. Somerset, Chap.; W. Smith, Sec.; H. Brayshaw, I.G.; and Thomas Anderson, Tyler. At the previous meeting Bro. Dodd, I.P.M., was unanimously elected Treasurer.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge, No. 1085.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on the 1st inst., when Bro. L. L. Simpson, S.W., was installed in the chair of K.S. The installing ceremony was performed by Bro. M. H. Bobart, P.M., P. Prov. G.S. Derbyshire, in his usual correct and impressive manner. The following brethren were appointed as officers for the ensuing year: Bros. J. W. Webster, S.W.; J. M. Moore, J.W.; M. H. Bobart, P.M., Treas.; J. Worsnop, P.M., Sec.; P. Prince, jun., S.D.; H. Headland, J.D.; R. Radcliffe, I.G.; and W. Stone, Tyler. After the lodge was closed, the brethren adjourned to the Midland Hotel, where they partook of an excellent repast, provided by Bro. Plock. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly proposed and honoured, and the brethren separated after having spent a very enjoyable evening.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Rutland Lodge, No. 1130.—The annual festival and installation of W.M. was held, pursuant to summons, at the George Hotel, on Thursday, the 2nd instant. Present: Bros. W. Kelly, R.W.P.G.M.; Douglas, W.M. (in the chair); J. Jones Fast, S.W. and W.M.-elect; &c., &c. The lodge was opened in form at three o'clock, the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, and the Treasurer's report read by the acting Secretary and passed. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Fast was presented by Bro. Langley, P.M., to Bro. Douglas for the benefit of installation. After he was obligated as W.M., the lodge was opened in the third degree, and on the withdrawal of the brethren below the chair, a Board of Installed Masters was opened, and Bro. Fast was placed in the chair of K.S. by Bro. Douglas, in the presence of the P.G.M. and Bros. Toller, Langley, Brown, and Markham, and saluted. The brethren were then called in, and Bro. Fast was proclaimed and saluted in the three degrees. The usual charge having been given to the W.M., he appointed the following brethren as his officers: Bros. Douglas, I.P.M.; J. E. Bright, S.W.; S. Weaver, J.W.; Rev. C. H. Corydon Baker, Chap.; F. J. Oldham, Treas. (elected by the lodge); Thomas Barnard, Sec.; Capt. Hartopp, S.D.; William Adcock, J.D.; F. S. Petty, Org.; W. A. Leadbetter, I.G.; J. Turville, Tyler; and J. E. Clarke and Thomas Nixon, Stewards. The remaining charges were given to the Wardens and brethren. Bro. Fast then handed the Past Master's jewel, voted at the last meeting, to the P.G.M., for him to present it to Bro. Douglas, which he did—expressing the pleasure it gave him to do so, and fully endorsing the words of the proposer and seconder of the resolution authorising the purchase of the jewel.—Bro. Douglas replied, explaining that although he had wished to have the money devoted to charity, out of deference to the feeling of the brethren he had given way and thankfully received the jewel, which would remind him of many happy hours spent in the Rutland Lodge.—Bro. Fast proposed the usual vote of thanks to Bro. Douglas for his services during the past year, which was seconded by the P.G.M., who congratulated the lodge upon the fact that the outgoing Masters had made a point of installing their successors. Bro. Douglas briefly responded. The brethren present then paid their annual subscriptions. Bro. Langley proposed that the sum of £5 5s. be voted out of the lodge funds towards Bro. Dean's list for the Boys' School Festival. The W.M. seconded the proposition, and as Bro. Dean was present, the Treasurer at once handed him the money. The lodge was closed in harmony with solemn prayer at 4.30 p.m., and the usual banquet followed.

SCARBOROUGH.—Denison Lodge, No. 1248.—This lodge held its regular meeting on Thursday, the 12th of January, in the lodge-room, Grand Hotel. The W.M., Bro. Armitage, presided, supported by Bros. Donner, S.W.; Fricour, J.W.; Taylor, S.D.; Foster, J.D.; Delamare, I.G.; Verity, Tyler; also Woodall, P.S.P.G.W.; Rooke, P.J.P.G.W.; W. Peacock, Williamson, Martin, and Stewart, P.M.'s; and a goodly number of members. The lodge was opened at 8 p.m., and the minutes were read and confirmed. The brethren named for the second and third degrees in the notice paper being absent from illness and unavoidable circumstances, the business remaining to be disposed of was the election of the W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Bro. W. F. Rooke (the Worshipful the Mayor of Scarborough) was unanimously elected W.M., and Bro. J. Kitchin was re-elected Treasurer, after which the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren spent a fraternal hour at the refreshment board.

BRIGHOUSE.—Brighouse Lodge, No. 1301.—The fourth monthly meeting after consecration took place on Wednesday, the 18th January, when the following members and visiting brethren were present: Bros. William Boothroyd, W.M.; T. W. Hellewell, S.W.; T. Burgess, J.W.; Bro. T. Bottomley, Sec., being absent through a pleasing incident to himself and another, Bro. J. M. Wood kindly took his post for the evening; J. Powell, S.D.; J. Sugden, J.D.; J. M. Stott, I.G.; W. W. Widdop, P.M. 275, P.P.G.W.; J. Pease, P.M. 275, P.P.G.W.; T. Higgins, 521, P.G.D.S.; Williamson, W.M. 521; E. O. Child, W.M. 652; F. Crossley, P.M. 1231; Alderson, J.W. 495; H. J. Robinson, S.W. 521; &c. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and Bro. J. Craven, P.M. 290, was balloted for and approved as a joining member. Messrs. C. Sunderland and F. Spice were also balloted for, approved, and initiated the same evening. The lodge was closed in harmony, and the brethren retired to supper, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to in such a manner that none but Masons can understand. A few remarks made by several of the visiting brethren were listened to by the members of the lodge with feelings of gratitude for the kind and generous wishes towards the 1301, who, if they are careful in having none but fit and proper men for candidates, may be one of the most flourishing young lodges in the province.

MARKET HARBOUROUGH.—St. Peter's Lodge, No. 1330.—A monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Assembly Room, Three Swans' Hotel, on the evening of Friday, the 3rd inst., the following brethren being present, viz., Bros. W. Kelly, R.W.P.G.M., W.M.; Rev. J. F. Halford, M.A., J.W.; Waite, P.M., Treas.; Marris, P.M., Sec.; Douglas, J.D.; Macaulay, I.G.; Harrison, Martin, Freestone, Heygate, Shovelbottom, Whitehead, Dixon; and Bembridge and Clarke, Tylers. Visitors: Bros. Buzzard, W.M. 523 (who acted as S.W. in the unavoidable absence of Sir H. St. J. Halford, Bart.), and Charles Johnston, P.M. and P.P.G.O., who presided at the harmonium. On the conclusion of the preliminary business, Bros. Dixon and Platford having passed examinations, were duly raised to the third degree. A third raising and two passings were due, but the candidates were unable to be present on this occasion. Messrs. Joseph Healey and James Gibbs, both of Market Harborough, having been unanimously elected, were initiated into our mysteries. After some other business had been transacted, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.—The regular monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 2nd inst., the W.M., Bro. C. Carnegie, P.M., P.P.G. Sup. of Wks. Essex, in the chair. There was a numerous attendance of the brethren. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Bros. J. Gallagher (P.M.), J. Cunningham, G. Fleenoe, J. T. Evans, and W. Horner as joining members, and for Farrier-Major C. Dillon (3rd Hussars), Corporal Charles Beach (Royal Engineers), and Sergeant R. Young (9th Lancers), as candidates for initiation, who were all unanimously approved of. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when Bros. Gillon, Peers, and Plimsaul were questioned respecting their knowledge of that degree, and they received a mark of approval and retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and Bros. Gillon, Peers, and Plimsaul were raised to the sublime degree, the questions appertaining to the third degree being put to the brethren for the information of those who were raised. The lodge was then closed down to the second degree, when Bro. Evans, who had been raised in the Chatham Lodge of Benevolence, signed his Grand Lodge certificate, and was presented with it by the W.M. The lodge having been resumed in the first degree, Bros. Garden, Savigear, Mount, Lucas, and Shillington were questioned as to their proficiency in that degree, which, proving satisfactory, they were entrusted with a test of merit and retired. The lodge was then resumed in the second degree, when they were passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was again closed down to the first degree, and Farrier-Major Dillon and Corporal Beach were initiated into Freemasonry. The working tools of the first degree were effectively explained by Bro. Fenn, R.H.A., S.W. A letter was read from the Grand Secretary, in reply to an inquiry whether Wardens could confer degrees, which stated that though not positively illegal, it was most undesirable that Wardens should do so. It was proposed by Bro. J. Belling, B.A., P.M., seconded by Bro. Capt. Richardson (Royal Engineers), and resolved, "That the lodge remove to the Royal Hotel on the 1st April." The W.M. announced that he would hold a Lodge of Instruction on the 23rd inst. The questions appertaining to the first degree were put to the brethren by the W.M. for the information of the newly initiated. Bro. Anderson, Master Gunner at Aldershot, was proposed as a joining member. Nothing further having been proposed for the good of Freemasonry in general, or this lodge in particular, it was closed in peace, love, and harmony.

ROYAL ARCH.

WARRINGTON.—Chapter of Elias Ashmole, No. 148.—A regular convocation of this chapter was held at the chapter rooms on Tuesday week. After the chapter had been opened by the Principals, the rest of the companions were admitted, and the minutes read and confirmed. It being the meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year, the choice of the chapter fell upon the following companions, viz.:—Comps. D. W. Finney, Z.; John Bowes, P.Z.; Prov. G.S.B., II.; W. Mossop, J.; W. S. Hawkins E.; W. Richardson, P. Soj.; W. Sharp, N.; Robt. Jackson and John Harding, Asst. Soj.'s; Jas. Hannan, Janitor. This being all the business, the chapter was closed with the usual solemnities.

ROCHDALE.—Chapter of Unity, No. 298.—The annual festival and installation of officers of this chapter was held in the Masonic Rooms, Arm-street, on Wednesday, the 8th inst. The companions assembled in the above rooms at 6 o'clock, under the presidency of Comps. Prince, Z.; Holroyd, II.; and Ashworth, J.; supported by Comps. Roberts, Wrigley, and Briggs, P.Z.'s; Woodcock, E.; Waterson, N.; Macdougall, P.S.; Butterworth and Howard, Asst. Soj.'s; Rowcliff, Treas.; and other companions. The minutes having been confirmed, and sundry other matters having been disposed of, Comp. Roberts, who was called upon to perform the ceremony of installation, having assumed the chair of the M.E.Z., called upon the companions, Installed Principals, to assist him in forming a Board of Installed 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Principals, when Comps. James Holroyd was installed M.E.Z.; Wm. Ashworth, II.; and Woodcock, J. The following companions were also installed:—E. G. Heape, E.; R. Collingwood, N.; R. Butterworth, P.S.; R. Howard, 1st Asst. Soj.; T. Oakden, 2nd Asst. Soj.; Rowcliff, Treas.; J. Ashworth, jun., D.C.; Wrigley, Organist; and J. Ashworth, sen., Janitor. The ceremony of installation, &c., was ably performed by Comp. Roberts, who had great pleasure in receiving the thanks of the companions. The labours of the evening being ended, the chapter was duly closed, when the companions adjourned to banquet, after which the usual complimentary and loyal toasts were given and responded to, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by my physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, Jan., 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Macdonald Lodge, No. 104.

The regular meeting of this lodge, now in the second year of its working, was held on Saturday last at the Head Quarters of the First Surrey Rifle Volunteers, Brunswick-road, Camberwell.

Bro. James Stevens, W.M., officiated, and conferred the degrees of Mark Man and Mark Master respectively on Bro. Messenger, of the Macdonald (Craft) Lodge, No. 1216, in which he was ably assisted by Bros. T. Meggy, I.P.M.; Dr. Eugene Cronin, S.W.; S. Rosenthal, J.W.; A. Wolton, J.O.; Thos. H. White, J.D.; Charles Fountain, Steward; and G. Newman, I.G. Powerful effect was also given to the ceremony by Bro. W. Worrell, the Organist of Beckenham church, who presided at the harmonium, and played the various chants arranged by him for this degree, with exquisite taste. The other brethren present were Bros. C. H. Hammerton, Sec.; G. Neal, R. Whiffin, No. 118, and H. Massey, P.M., No. 22. The ceremony was given without any omission, and the lecture explanatory of the degree was delivered by the W.M. at the end. The brethren then adjourned to supper, and afterwards honoured the customary toasts.

The W.M. coupled the name of Bro. Rosenthal with the toast of "The D.G.M., Earl Percy," and remarked that the D.G.M. was as ardent in the cause of Mark Masonry as the Grand Master himself was.

Bro. S. Rosenthal, in answer to the call of the W.M., stated that Earl Percy, who would, if possible, have been at this lodge when the Grand Master honoured it with a visit, had promised that he would, if it were in his power, attend to-night. The first opportunity, however, that he had he should avail himself of the invitation, and not require one of the deputy officers to reply for him.

Bro. Meggy said that all the officers did their duties, and were happy in the performance of them. They did more as Grand Officers of this degree than did the officers of other degrees. This was a model degree, for Grand Officers did their work as well as hold office. The work must be done by some one, and they preferred to do it themselves. While they did so they deserved well of the Craft. For himself, he could say that he endeavoured to discharge his duty while he was a Grand Officer, believing that as he had accepted the post of honour, he had taken it with its consequent burdens.

Bro. Meggy proposed the health of the "W.M." The manner in which he had performed the work of the chair entitled him to the highest praise. He had really proved himself an excellent Master in Mark Masonry, because he went to the fundamental principle. In connection with himself (Bro. Meggy), the W.M. had been endeavouring to improve the ceremony and to elucidate, with the sanction and approval of the G.M., the difference between the ranks of Mark Man and Mark Master. After it had been worked a little time, they hoped to arrive at the climax, and submit to the G.M. a scheme for his approval and Grand Lodge's authorization. What Bro. Stevens had done, showed that he was desirous to benefit the degree; at the least, the possession of such a Master reflected credit on the lodge. From the way in which he had performed the ceremonies that evening he had proved himself a Master of the Art, and great praise was due to him for the labour he had bestowed on it, and the success he had achieved.

The W.M. thought that to receive praise from Bro. Meggy, who had been a fellow-labourer in the vineyard, was, to use a quotation which he remembered, "Praise from Sir Hubert Stanley is praise indeed." Bro. Meggy was the brother to whom the Grand Master had referred in many cases of difficulty in connection with the degree. Therefore he must have been a good worker to receive such distinction, and it was, consequently, doubly a gratification to him (the W.M.) to have his humble efforts so highly spoken of. Not having been connected with the degree above two years, he was pleased that the aptitude he had evinced for the Order had induced the Grand Master to couple him with Bro. Meggy in the work of securing and perfecting such a ritual as might hereafter be adopted through the whole of the Mark Degree. It was true that a little consideration and a good deal of attention, to what had been already taught him in the way of ritual, had been necessary; but it had resulted in what he hoped would be a permanent and satisfactory amendment acceptable to the whole of the Craft. Having seen the working in the lodge on former occasions, the brethren would have noticed that the distinction which was now made between the degrees of Mark Man and Mark Master, could not but do good, as it would serve to explain the difference shown in the narrative of the lecture. In that they had endeavoured, as far as possible, to approach towards similarity between the ceremonial and the explanatory lecture. The distinction between Mark Man and Mark Master was of great importance, and he hoped it would be recognised.

The W.M. next proposed the health of "Bro. Meggy, P.M.," and in doing so referred to the great services he had rendered to the lodge. During the twelve months he was in the chair, and subsequently he had done his best to show the brethren how Mark Masonry should be placed, and what he (the W.M.) had said of Bro. Irvine in reference to his connection with the Macdonald Craft Lodge, he could say of Bro. Meggy in reference to this Mark Lodge, that he hoped the day might be far distant, and it ought never to come, when his name was forgotten by the brethren.

Bro. Meggy said this was a pet lodge of his. He had partly founded it; he had watched over it as a child, and it had rewarded his attention by showing proficiency. He looked forward, when he founded it, to establishing a lodge that should do credit to the order, and he could "lay the flattering unction to his soul" that the Grand Master was pleased with what they had done, for, when he paid the lodge a visit, he stated that he was pleased, and requested that such a memorandum might be entered on the minutes of the lodge. The Grand Master had also mentioned it in other lodges. He had gone so far as to say, "If you only do it as they do in the Macdonald Lodge, you will be of service." This lodge ought to be proud of that recognition; and as long as it showed its proficiency, he (Bro. Meggy) would feel he was rewarded. It was the highest compliment they could pay him as one of the founders of the lodge. All the trouble he had had was amply repaid by the way in which the lodge conducted itself. As a member of the lodge he could only thank the brethren for the way in which they had drunk his health, and begged to assure them that his services would always be at their disposal.

The W.M. next gave "The Health of the newly-advanced Brother." As in the Craft, so in the Mark, it was one of the most pleasing duties of a W.M. to perform the ceremony on a new brother, and to welcome among the brethren assembled the brother who did the lodge the honour of joining it. Circumstances had prevented the attendance that evening of all the brethren they expected to be advanced; but it was gratifying to find that, not only they, but also members of the lodge who were absent, had felt it due to the W.M. and the lodge to send letters of apology for their non-attendance. With respect to the candidates, this circumstance alone would make their incoming at a future period the more welcome. That evening there had fortunately been work to do in consequence of the attendance of Bro. Messenger. That brother had been much impressed with the ceremony, and he (the W.M.) could only say that if Bro. Messenger saw the beauties of the Mark Degree that the other brethren of this lodge saw, he would give as much attention to it as he had already given to the Craft. They had in Bro. Messenger a member who would be a credit to the lodge, and one who was desirous of making that advancement in Masonry which all Masons should aspire to. As a comrade in the 1st Surrey Rifle Corps, and a brother of the Macdonald Craft and Mark Lodges, the brethren would welcome him most heartily among them, and would do their best to secure his promotion.

Bro. Messenger replied, and hoped that if he strove to become a proficient in this degree, the brethren would reward him, as they had his acquisition of a knowledge of Craft Masonry by putting him in office. He should then feel that his labour had not been without its fruits.

"The Visitors" and "The Charities" were the next toasts, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

Roberts Lodge of Mark Masters, Rochdale, No. 24, E.C.

I beg to hand you, for insertion in your valuable paper, a brief account of the formation of this very prosperous lodge, which is held in the Masonic Rooms, Arm-street, Rochdale, and which was commenced at a casual meeting of a few energetic brethren of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 298 (Craft) who are members of the Prince Edward Mark Lodge, No. 14, held at Stanfield Bottoms, about eleven miles from Rochdale.

It having been felt a great inconvenience to attend the duties of the lodge at so great a distance from home, and their being lodges, chapters, conclaves, &c., of almost every degree in Masonry in connection with the above rooms, except the Mark degree, it was resolved to apply to Grand Lodge for a warrant, and a petition was accordingly presented to our worthy Bro. Wm. Roberts, of which the following is a

COPY.

To Wm. Roberts, Esq.

Dear Sir and Brother,—We, the undersigned, being Mark Masons and Subscribing Members of a regular constituted Mark Masters' Lodge, under the constitution of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of England, beg you to take the necessary steps for forming a Lodge of Mark Master Masons, to be held in the Masonic Rooms, Arm-street, Rochdale; and we, the undersigned, hereby promise and undertake to bear the expense incumbent thereto, and to become members thereof.

We further beg that you will not lose any time in obtaining the warrant, &c., but that all necessary dispatch may be used by you for carrying out this our wish.

(Signed) W. H. PRINCE, P. M. JAMES HOLROYD, P. M.
R. ASHWORTH, P. M. JOHN BARKER, P. M.
R. BUTTERWORTH. JNO. ASHWORTH, jun.
JESSE FIRTH. THOS. OAKDEN.
JOHN Mc'NAUGHT.

In accordance with the invitation, Bro. Roberts met the promoters, when it was resolved:—

1st.—That a petition be presented to the Grand Master of Mark Masonry, setting forth the wish of the brethren, and praying them to grant a warrant for the brethren to hold a Mark Lodge in the above rooms.

2nd.—That the lodge be named the "Roberts Lodge," in compliment to our very highly-beloved and respected brother, Wm. Roberts, P.M., P.P.G. officer for the Craft, Royal Arch, K.T.'s, &c., of Lancashire and Yorkshire.

3rd.—That the brethren deposit the necessary funds in the hands of Bro. Oakden, as Treas., pro tem., for expenses of warrants, jewels, furniture, &c., which was done and, the necessary pedestals, jewels, &c., (complete set) were ordered to be procured at once. A petition having been drafted and signed, was sent to the Grand Secretary, Bro. Binckes, on the 6th December, 1869, who, with his usual promptness, replied by return of post that the Grand Master had graciously been pleased to grant the prayer, the lodge to be called the Roberts Lodge, No. 24; meeting on the last Wednesday in January, April, July, and October, with the following brethren as the first officers: Henry Prince, P.M., W.M.; James Holroyd, P.M., S.W.; Wm. Ashworth, P.M., J.W.

The petition having been granted but not received on the 30th December, a special meeting was held by authority of the Grand Master for the advancement of candidates, to enable the promoters to fill up the offices at the consecration. Several brethren joined the lodge as members, and were affiliated, so that at the consecration, which took place on the 25th January, 1870, there were about 22 brethren on the books, each having his proper clothing, collar, jewel, &c. The consecration ceremony was performed by Bro. Roberts, as D.G.M. by authority from the Grand Master, Bro. Portal, in a very able and impressive manner, assisted by Bros. Greenwood, Acting Grand S.W., and Heape, Acting Grand J.W. Bros. Prince, Holroyd, and Ashworth, were duly installed as the First Master, and Senior and Junior Wardens.

Bro. Wm. Ashworth, P.M., then resigned his office as J.W., in favour of Bro. Firth, and was elected, the First Treasurer, and with the rest of the officers, was invested by the W.M.

The officers for the first year are: Bros. W. H. Prince, P.M., W.M.; John Knight, P.M., I.P.M.; James Holroyd, P.M., S.W.; Jesse Firth, J.W.; Robert Butterworth, M.O.; Thomas Oakden, S.O.; Jos. C. Gillman, J.O.; Richard Hankinson, P.M., Chaplain; William Ashworth, P.M., Treasurer; William T. Stott, Secretary; William Roberts, P.M., Registrar; John Ashworth, S.D.; Robert Howard, J.D.; James Cross, D.C.; Edward Woodcock, I.G.; John Mc'Naught, Organist; Edwin Taylor, Steward; John Ashworth, sen., Tyler.

The first Annual Meeting of the above lodge was held on Wednesday, January 25th, 1871. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Prince, Grand S.B., Provincial Mark Lodge of Lancashire, assisted by his officers, after which Bros. H. Crossley, of Halifax, and R. H. Hays, of Southport, were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Masters by the W.M., assisted by Bro. Roberts, G.S.D., Provincial Mark Lodge of Lancashire. The ceremony of advancement having been concluded, the W.M. vacated the chair, and called upon Bro. Roberts to form a Board of Installed Masters, who took the chair accordingly, and requested Bros. Prince and Ashworth to assist as S. and J.W. Bro. Holroyd having been duly presented, and given his due qualified assent to the ancient charges, the brethren below the degree of an Installed Master were requested to retire, when the W.M. elect was O.B., and afterwards installed by Bro. Roberts in ancient form. The brethren having been re-admitted, saluted the newly-installed W.M., with the usual honours, after which he proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows:—Bros. Prince, P.M., I.P.M.; Firth, S.W.; Butterworth, J.W.; Oakden, M.O.; Gillman, S.O.; Howard, J.O.; Ashworth, P.M., Chaplain; Heape, P.M., Treasurer; Prince, P.M., Secretary; Roberts, P.M., Registrar; J. Ashworth, jun., S.D.; Woodcock, J.D.; Stott, D.C.; Collingwood, O.; Cross, I.G.; Hays, Steward; J. Ashworth, sen., Tyler. The brethren having been duly installed and saluted, the W.M., in closing the lodge, had great pleasure in receiving the hearty congratulations of the representatives of lodges No. 14, 20, 46, 123, and from the P.G.L., there being eight Prov. Grand Officers present. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to banquet, provided by Bro. Butterworth, of the Golden Fleece Hotel, in his usual recherché style. After the cloth had been removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were ably given and responded to by the various brethren. This lodge now numbers 42 members, many of whom have gained Prov. rank in the Craft, as well as in the recently-formed Prov. Grand Mark Lodge, and from the progress made in Mark Masonry in this town, as well as in the country at large, it seems certain that at no distant day Mark Masonry will become a very powerful institution and an influential auxiliary to Craft Masonry. It is a fact with Lancashire, which cannot be disputed, that those who have joined, and are constantly joining the Mark degree, are really those who have made Craft Masonry flourish, having done the work, and are ever ready to do more for the good of Masonry.

MANCHESTER.—Union Lodge, No. 46, E.C.—This lodge held its third meeting, since its resuscitation in October last, on Thursday evening, the 26th ult., when a goodly number of the brethren were present. The progress this lodge has made speaks well for the future of the Mark Degree in Manchester, and shows clearly the estimation in which the degree is held by the brethren in the North. About the year 1863 this lodge ceased working from a variety of causes, chief among which was the compulsory absence from the city of several of its best friends and supporters, whose daily occupations were removed considerable distances away, and from other reasons not necessary here to dwell upon. Suffice it to say that under the promised headship of our esteemed citizen Bro. Callender there were willing hearts and hands found to resuscitate the lodge, the first meeting of which was held in October last, at which time about twenty of the old original members rejoined. Since which there have been eighteen advancements, nine affiliations, and one joining member, and the lodge now numbers about sixty members, besides having already for its next meeting in March eight candidates for advancement and two for affiliation—showing very clearly the estimation in which the Mark Degree is held in the new province of Lancashire. On this occasion the highly-esteemed W.M.M., Bro. John M. Wike, was absent through severe indisposition, his place, however, being ably filled by Bro. Thos. Hargreaves, W.M. Blair Lodge, No. 113, who performed the ceremony of advancement in his usual good style. The visitors present were the W.M.M. of the old Ashton Lodge, Bro. Whitehead; Bro. J. Birch; and Bros. Handley and Milnes, M.O. and S.O. of the Callender Lodge, No. 123, Bury. After refreshments, the chair was occupied by Bro. J. L. Hine, S.W., when the usual loyal toasts were duly given and responded to, after which Bro. Chadwick, the Secretary, proposed "The health of the Visiting Brethren." In doing so he drew the special attention of the brethren to the fact that they were on that occasion honoured with the company of the W.M. of the Ashton Mark Lodge, which lodge, working without warrant, was neither connected with the E.C. nor S.C., but on a basis and foundation of its own, amenable to none and responsible to none. He (Bro. Chadwick) hoped the time was not far distant when the Ashton brethren would flock to their standard, and he was quite sure the M.W.G.M.M. and the P.G.M.M. would receive them with open arms; but they must have a name and habitation, and conform to the wishes and commands of the G.M.L. by holding no Sunday meetings and by having a fixed abode, not travelling about from town to town in search of a home. Bro. Chadwick concluded by proposing the toast, coupling with it the names of Bro. Whitehead, W.M. Ashton Lodge, and Bro. Hargreaves, W.M. Blair Lodge, No. 113 E.C.—Bro. Hargreaves briefly responded, and Bro. Whitehead thanked the brethren present for their kindness in receiving him and drinking the toast proposed by Bro. Chadwick. He, however, wished to say a few words respecting the Ashton M. Lodge, and in doing so wished to disabuse entirely the minds of Bro. Chadwick and others that there was any likelihood of their lodge joining bodily the Prov. Grand Mark Lodge of Lancashire. He was quite sure there was not—and this conclusion was forced upon him by various circumstances; besides, he said, that we were already getting into the fold all such who, in the first place, could afford to join a Mark lodge, and, in the second, those who were worth our acceptance. He (Bro. Whitehead) thought it would be well to let the Old Ashton Lodge alone, and if the P.G.M.M. thought it desirable to establish a Mark lodge in Ashton, there were plenty of brethren who would willingly support him in so doing, and he, for one, would gladly join a lodge thus formed. He again begged to thank the brethren of the Union Lodge for their kind reception of him, and if again invited, he should be glad to come and see them.—The remaining toasts were duly given and responded to, and the brethren retired at an early hour.

HAVANT.—Carnarvon Mark Lodge, No. 62, and Royal Ark Lodge, No. 7.—The usual quarterly meetings of these lodges were held on the 30th ult. In the Royal Ark Lodge, which was first opened, the chair of N. was taken by Bro. H. Martin Green, P.N., the W. Commander (Bro. Purnell) being unavoidably absent. Bros. Clay and Coles, of the Mark Lodge, No. 62, and Bro. Montague Haynes, of No. 63, were elevated in due form. Bro. Clay was appointed J.D., Bro. Coles, G., and Bro. Haynes, Steward, and the lodge was closed; visitor present: Bro. Frederick Binckes, P.N.—The Mark Lodge was opened by Bro. Trigg, W.M., assisted by his officers, and no candidate for advancement being present, Bro. Reynolds, S.W., was installed W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was faultlessly performed by Bro. Binckes, G. Sec., the Installing Master. The following brethren were appointed officers: Bros. Coles, S.W.; Good, J.W.; Green, M.O.; Clay, S.O.; Trigg, I.P.M., J.O.; Hillman, S.D.; Barnes, J.D.; Collings, I.G.; Blackmore, Tyler; and Bro. Hillman was invested as Treas. A vote of thanks to Bro. Binckes, for his kindness in attending from London on the present occasion, and for his willingness at all times to assist this lodge, was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously. The lodge was then closed.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—Percy Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 122.—The first meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Stockton-on-Tees, on Thursday, the 26th ult., under a dispensation from Earl Percy, P.P.G.M., authorising the lodge to meet previously to its consecration. The lodge was duly opened by Bro. Harpley, P.M., and the warrant of constitution and dispensation read, after which the minutes of the previous meetings of the members of the lodge were read and confirmed. The following brethren were then affiliated: Rev. James Milner, James Bowron, jun., C. A. Head, T. C. Davison, and Thomas Walton. A set of bye-laws was then submitted for approval, and was adopted, after which the ballot was taken, and several brethren were duly elected and advanced, after which Bro. H. G. Faber, P.M., P.P.S.G.W. was installed W.M. by Bro. S. Gourley, M.D., W.M., Electric Lodge, 39, and P.S.G.W., assisted by Bro. Brunton, P.M., P.J.G.W., and Bro. Harpley, P.M. The following officers were then nominated and invested:—Thomas Whitwell, S.W.; C. Ianson, P.M., J.W.; Thos. Bowron, P.M., M.O.; John Trotter, S.O.; James Bowron, J.O.; Rev. J. Milner, Chaplain; G. M. Watson, P.M., Treas.; A. C. Knowles, P.M., R.M.; I. H. Hart, Sec.; C. A. Head, S.D.; Thos. Nelson, P.M., J.D.; J. S. Byers, Org.; Thos. Walton, I.G.; John Trenholm, Tyler. After the closing of the lodge, the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall, and partook of a most sumptuous repast, followed by the usual loyal, Masonic, and complimentary toasts, interspersed with vocalism, and the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

Rose and Lily Conclave, No. 3.—An emergency meeting of this Conclave was held at Masons' Hall Tavern, Mason's-avenue, Basinghall-street, on Saturday, the 4th inst., when Bros. D. Bliss, of Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73; Jas. W. Dawson, of the Sun Lodge, 106; and Edward H. G. Dalton, of the Montefiore Lodge, 1017, were installed as Knights of the Order by Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little, who officiated as M.P.S. Ballots were taken for the officers for the ensuing year, when Sir Kts. W. Mann, Viccroly, was unanimously elected M.P.S.; George Kenning, V.; C. A. Cottebrune, P. Sov., Treas.; and J. Gilbert, Sent., by show of hands. The acting Rec., Sir Kt. M. Edwards, announced the resignation of Sir Kt. Ord, Treas., and the conclave having voted five guineas to the "Little" Testimonial, was then closed, and the Knights adjourned to the refectory and partook of a very substantial repast. A most harmonious evening was spent, enlivened by the songs and speeches of Sir Kts. Cottebrune, Mann, Kenning, Brett, and the newly-installed Kts. Sir Kt. Brett, K.G.C., P. Sov. No. 2, was the only visitor.

INSTRUCTION.

Chigwell Lodge of Instruction.—The inauguration of this new lodge of instruction was held on Wednesday, the 8th inst., at the Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, Essex. Bro. Joseph Tanner, P.G.S.D. Essex, P.M. and Sec. 101, S.W. 453, as the W.M., opened the lodge. He was supported by Bros. Dr. John Bunce, S.W.; Joseph Clarkson, J.W.; W. N. Trent, Treas.; G. J. Shepherd, Sec.; W. Lewis, S.D.; Samuel Lilley, J.D.; D. Reed, I.G.; F. D. Cates, N. Kepps, W. Skene, Frederick Gordon, Charles Halphouse, J. T. Taylor, W. M. Edmunds, Thomas N. Nicholson, John Egan, and many others, including a long list of visitors. The minutes of several preliminary meetings were read for information. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Taylor being the candidate. It was rendered in a correct, impressive, and painstaking manner, and was an agreeable treat and pleasure to listen to. Then, by particular desire Bro. Terry gave, in his usual correct and finished style, the working of the first, second, fourth, and fifth sections of the first lecture, which was acknowledged by a unanimous vote of thanks being accorded to him and placed on the minutes of the lodge books, for his great kindness in doing this work for the lodge. The propositions for joining members were then received, and other business followed, after which the lodge was closed. The beautiful new furniture of this lodge of instruction, so complete in all its details, was supplied by Bro. G. Kenning, of Little Britain. It gave the greatest satisfaction, and was the admiration of all present. Refreshment followed. Bro. H. Lock, the much-respected host, gave a liberal supply of all things needful both at banquet and dessert. He was most attentive to the wants of all, and his exertions were fully appreciated. The usual toasts having been given, the brethren separated at an early hour.

A ROYAL Ark Lodge of Instruction is held every Monday evening at the Lyceum Tavern, Strand, at 7 o'clock.

Two meetings will be held of a Mark lodge, one at the Freemasons' Tavern on Monday, the 20th February, at 6 o'clock, to advance Master Masons to the degree of Mark Master, and afterwards elevate them as Royal Ark Mariners, at a fee of two guineas for the two degrees; and the second at Bro. Gosden's, the Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C., on Monday week, the 27th February, at 6 o'clock, with the same design and at the same cost. Brethren wishing to avail themselves of these opportunities are requested to communicate with Bro. Meyer A. Loewenstark, Secretary, Devereux-court, Strand, W.C.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

THE departure of the Earl de Grey and Ripon for America upon a most important mission, cannot fail to have been noticed by our readers, and we believe there is scarcely a member of the English Craft who does not wish success to the message of peace and conciliation which the Most Worshipful Grand Master of England conveys to the citizens of the great Transatlantic Republic.

It is no business of ours, as a Masonic journalist, to discuss the political bearings or the moral justice of the Alabama claims; nor is it within our province to pronounce any oracular judgment upon the point of disputed fishery rights; but as the representative of a vast organization of peace-loving men, we hail with unfeigned delight the prospect of an immediate settlement of those vexed questions which have for some time past disturbed, and almost imperilled, the harmony which should ever prevail between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. It is also our privilege to rejoice that the olive-branch has been confided to a statesman who holds so high a rank in the Masonic fraternity of England, and who will, doubtless, pursue his difficult but honourable task in a spirit of candour, equity, and truth. Moreover, we believe that the same spirit will actuate the distinguished men who are associated with Lord de Grey as the exponents of English views, and that the Commissioners who have been selected to act on behalf of the American Government will likewise be guided by a far-reaching perception of the lasting advantages to be derived by both nations from the results of the forthcoming conference.

A great deal has been said and written about the common origin of Englishmen and Americans—about their community of faith and identity of language—but the world's history proves that these links are in themselves insufficient to bind men together in the bond of friendship unless strengthened by kindly acts and tokens of mutual affection.

Again, it must not be forgotten that, although the Anglo-Saxon element still prevails in the United States, there is a powerful and rapidly-increasing Teutonic element, and an equally powerful Celtic element, which may eventually obtain great sway in the Republic; and it may be added that neither of those elements is particularly friendly towards England.

We do not, however, wish to descend to the low stand-point of mere policy; but we say deliberately that the goodwill and alliance of our American friends ought to be courted by every honourable means, because they are allied to us, not only in blood, but in the exercise of those principles of civil and religious liberty so little known and practised by other nations. The time may yet come when the earth shall witness a final struggle between the powers of despotism and the champions of freedom, and in that day the might of America will count for much. A people now numbering forty millions, and increasing at the rate of 20 per cent. in each decade—a territory of almost boundless extent, rich in resources of every kind—such is the prospect presented to our view by the American Republic; and it is one which may well make us ponder over the probabilities of the future. The alliance of Albion and her giant-child Columbia will ever be a guarantee of the world's liberties and of civilisation—a stumbling-block to tyrants and slaves.

Fortunately, there is no reason to dread the outbreak of such a calamity as war between two such powers; but we want more than this negative satisfaction, we desire to see the most intimate and cordial relations established between the two countries, so that both shall march side by side in the van of human progress. The cultivation of feelings of amity and mutual respect should therefore be the constant aim of all enlightened statesmen on either side of the Atlantic, and the mission of the Lord President of the Council may be accepted as an evidence of this sagacious policy. Turning to the Masonic aspect of the question, it cannot be doubted that the true-hearted Freemasons of the "States" will readily come forward to greet the Grand Master of England with genuine enthusiasm upon his auspicious visit to their shores; and the influence of such an event will be felt in the land long after our Most Worshipful Brother's return to England—an influence for good, a remembrance which will cement, let us trust for ever, the union of two free and mighty nations. It may not be amiss to mention that Lord de Grey is accompanied by a zealous Mason in the person of Lord Tenterden, who will act as Secretary to the Lord President. As plain Brother Abbott, Lord Tenterden has long been known to the London Craft, and especially to the members of the Lodge of Harmony, and the Iris Chapter at Richmond, in both of which bodies he has occupied the principal chairs, and now holds the respective offices of Secretary and Scribe. Lord Tenterden is a really hard-working Mason, as a proof of which it may be mentioned that he can not only confer the various degrees of the Order with great accuracy and precision, but can also deliver that very difficult lecture on the "Platonic Bodies," which we had almost fancied appertained exclusively to the province of one of our best known and most respected Preceptors in Freemasonry.

Our Most Worshipful Grand Master will also be assisted in the adjustment of the delicate questions involved between England, Canada, and the United States, by the Premier of the Dominion, Sir John Macdonald, a brother of eminence, and who fills the exalted position of representative of the Grand Lodge of England at the Grand Lodge of Canada. Our best wishes have already been expressed for the success of their mission, and we may conclude with a hope that our Grand Master's stay in the States may combine pleasure to himself personally, with profit to the international interests, which it will be his ambition to consolidate and maintain. He will, as we have said, receive a hearty reception at the hands of American Masons, and may expect on his return a most cordial welcome from the brethren over whom he rules; for, however much we may differ in politics—and the political opinions of Masons differ as widely as the poles—we are all, at least, convinced that the honour of old England could not have been confided to a statesman of greater sagacity or more unimpeachable integrity than the illustrious Chief of the English Craft.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

In reply to the query of W.M., in last week's FREEMASON, I beg to refer him to your own issue of October 30th, 1869, wherein is given the full particulars of the initiation of H.I.H. THE PRINCE DEMETRIUS RHODOCANAKIS in the Saint Andrew's Lodge, No. 48, Edinburgh. The Mons. Demetrius Rodocanachi, or rather Demetrius Stamatii Rodocanachi, was initiated in the Sefton Lodge, No. 680, Liverpool, in the year 1859, just ten years before the Prince's entrance into the Brotherhood, and, we believe, is now a 33° of France, and a resident of Galatz. P.M.

WHAT IS TO "HELE," ETC. ?

I have no doubt that many, like myself, have noticed how frequently an initiate is perplexed when called upon to pronounce the word hele, in one part of the ceremony through which he is passed. He generally exhibits hesitation before he utters it, and then pronounces it as if he were not sure that he has caught the word aright. His perplexity is sometimes increased by the W.M. pronouncing the word as if written hail! or hale—a pronunciation which some are ready to defend. I doubt not that you agree with me in deeming it very desirable, not only that our ritual should be correctly recited, but that it should be well understood—that the meaning of every phrase and of every word should be thoroughly apprehended; and this should be especially so in our obligations. Now, I do not think this is the case in relation to the word in question. What does the verb hele really mean? I dismiss the words hail and hale as being wholly out of the question. I believe the only Anglo-Saxon word so pronounced is hal, which we spell hale—healthy, sound, robust, &c.; or when used as a salutation, spelt in English, hail, implying, probably, a good wish, as welcome! or, as we sometimes say, "all right." A hail-fellow is a companion—a good fellow. But neither of these words can have reference to secrecy, or concealment. Is not, then, the word we should use, the old Saxon word hele, from helan, to cover? From this same word we get our hell, which signifies a covered or hidden place, and answers to the Hebrew sheol and the Greek Hades, both translated hell in our Bibles, although it is plain, in almost every place in which the word is used, that it simply means the unseen or hidden place in which departed spirits are kept, and not a place of punishment, which the word is now used to denote. Thus the psalmist says (Ps. cxxxix., 8), "If I make my bed in hell, thou art there." If hele be the word we should use, and the meaning is to cover, I see why our Outer Guard is called a Tyler—his duty being to cover, that is, to hide or conceal, the entrance to the lodge. This word to cover is often thus used to signify to protect, to guard, as a shield is said to cover or guard the body; as also to hide, conceal, or put out of sight. So Job says, "If I cover my transgressions, as Adam;" that is, if, like Adam, I try to conceal my transgressions. In like manner, the psalmist says, "If I say darkness shall cover me," which is immediately explained by "The darkness hideth not from Thee." Thus, the Tyler covers, conceals, or protects the door of the lodge. Down to the present day, I believe, the meaning of the old word is retained in Cornwall, where tylers or tilers are called hellyers, or coverers, because they cover-in the roof of the house. But, then, why have we, "hele, conceal, and never reveal?" Some say these are mere synonymes, heaped on one another to render the obligation more impressive. I do not think so—firstly, because an accumulation of words tends to weaken a sentence rather than to give it strength or emphasis; and secondly, because the construction of the sentence will not justify that assumption. "Hele, conceal, or never reveal" might do so, but "hele, conceal, and never reveal" certainly will not. The conjunctive conjunction denotes that to reveal is something in addition to what goes before. Why, then, are the three words used? What is the difference in their meaning? Will this do?—

1. Hele, to cover or hide; that is, never to permit certain things to be seen.
2. Conceal, to be so cautious in our words that even the most astute or quick-witted stranger shall never be able to discern or discover what is not proper to be made known.
3. Never reveal, to abstain from making known, in any way, what is entrusted to us as Masons.

These suggestions are offered with all deference, and in the hope of eliciting something on the subject from some of our erudite brethren. I am obliged by Bro. Hughan's promise to say something on the word cowan, as I am also to Bro. Buchan for his reference to the Freemasons' Magazine, although the reference is useless to me, as I have not access to it. I do not think we can derive the word, as Bro. Walford thinks we may, from the Hebrew cohen. WILLIAM CARPENTER.

BRO. YARKER AND THE A. AND A. RITE.

As a general rule, I think it undesirable to prolong newspaper controversies, because they tend to degenerate into mere personal repartees, or into wranglings about what each writer is supposed to have said, or really did say. In the present case, however, as a great moral principle is at stake, I trust you will permit me a few words of comment upon Bro. Yarker's communication in your issue of the 11th inst. I ask my brother Masons to read my letters side by side with his; and I promise that this shall be the last with which I will intrude upon you, at least on the present aspect of the question.

Bro. Yarker says, that "A very difficult point in Masonry is raised" by the fact that "without any preparation beforehand the most solemn O.B. are dictated."

Now, I utterly deny that there is any difficulty in the point at all—at least, to a straightforward mind. We, to forward some purpose of our own, voluntarily put ourselves in a position, in which we are perfectly well aware, that an unknown O.B. awaits us. Under these circumstances, any man of honour or right feeling is bound to adhere to his sacred promise, even though he should, at some future time, see cause to regret that he made it. Bro. Yarker prefaced his first communication to you with a text of scripture. Let me quote another passage, which is at least equally appropriate to the subject under discussion:—"He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not,.....shall never fall."

Bro. Yarker says that I "admit" my "inability to defend" the A. and A. Rite "on its own merits." This is simply untrue. No word of my first letter can bear such a construction. When the present matter of principle has been settled, then I am perfectly willing to enter upon the further question of the comparative merits and de-merits of a professedly hereditary Governing Body in connection with any Masonic Institution; but that which we, as Freemasons, want to attain is Light and Truth. This can only be done by the calm discussion of ascertained facts, and general principles; and the introduction of personal grievances and private insinuations renders such discussion impossible. Nor will I, for one, take part in any controversy in which these weapons are allowed.

Bro. Yarker asks how I, as "a Christian clergyman, under sacred vows," can conscientiously belong to a degree like the 30°, "which stinks in the nostrils of the rigidly orthodox."

The "sacred vows" which a clergyman takes, are to be found in the "Ordination Service," and can be read by all who choose to consult that service. I am aware of nothing in those vows which can deter any clergyman from joining any degree of Christian or Philosophical Masonry.

As to the opinion of the "rigidly orthodox," let me say, once and for all, that such a phrase as this is well enough for bigots, or inquisitors, to hold over the heads of those whom they wish to terrify into submission; but it could not be used by any man whose sole desire is either to acquire, or to impart, truth.

If Bro. Yarker seriously wishes to raise the question whether any Christian man can conscientiously join the 30°, let him say so, and I, as a member of that degree, see no reason why the question cannot be discussed publicly, without revealing one jot or tittle of the secrets of the degree. I will only further remark that if in the 30° there be anything really "unchristian" in principle, it must be equally so to the laymen and to the cleric.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

Bro. Frank M. Pixley, Grand Orator of Grand Chapter of California, thus addressed the Grand Lodge, Oct. 12, 1869:—

"The ancient Craft Masonry consists of three degrees—the Entered Apprentice, the Fellow-Craft, and the Master Mason. These, with the appendage of the Royal Arch, form a system complete in all its parts. . . . This is the true Masonic Institution; and what is beyond this in the way of fancy degrees, Scottish rites, modern French rites, and all the various systems of modern origin, are new and ornamental only. . . . Among them are to be found Provosts and Judges, Illustrious Elects of Fifteen, &c., &c., &c., Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, all which is simply Masonry run crazy. None of these new-fangled systems, rites, and titles have ought to do with Masonry as practised by those early brethren whose lives were the embodiment of the highest lessons of Masonic wisdom, the impersonation of temperance, courage, self-sacrifice, heroic suffering for conscience's sake—the very types of a simple, holy, earnest life. Well has a standard writer upon Masonry remarked, that, when titles such as Sovereign Prince, Sovereign Grand Commander, Thrice Puissant Grand Master, &c., appear in the public prints, they are only calculated to make the vulgar stare, and with the right-feeling, sensible Mason—a man of the world—excites only derision and contempt." HISTORICUS.

THE APEX = 49° = 81°.

A very serious mistake occurs in THE FREEMASON of the 16th ult., in which it is affirmed that "there are only three holders of the Apex in the world, who exist by the succession of triplicate warrants from Frederick the Great," and that the symbols of the degree are a "Cord and Dagger."

Now, brethren should not be precipitate in their revelations on the subject of this climax of our Grand Historico-Masonic mysteries, for I am in a position to assert, most emphatically, that the warrants in question were not promulgated by Frederick the Great, and that the three so-called Apexes were, in fact, no other than the three sponsors of the ONE SUPREME APEX, whose very style proclaims his crowning and solitary grandeur, and the succession of whose high office comes by an Act of Grace on the part of the existing Apex, who, under circumstances of the greatest solemnity, and himself strictly veiled, transmits to his successor (if practicable, in the presence of one or more of the Sponsors) the rituals of all other orders (some of which are scarcely known in England), contained in an antique leaden casket cased in cedar of Libanus (or Lebanon). By this means the Apex-elect is, if of one of the lower degrees (but in no case under that of P.M.) under a peculiar dispensation put in possession of the working of all the others.

True enough, the Cord and Dagger are the symbols of the Sponsors, but not of the one unapproachable Apex, for he has seven (hence the con-fraternity known in the East as the Satbhac, seven brothers), but which failed under a secret suspension of the then (1845) Sublime Climax Apex, who, at that period, happened to be on one of his tours of secret inspection in India.

From the nature of the office of Grand Climax Apex, 81°, it has been a time-immemorial law that his name should never be divulged nor his actual identity known to any but a Sponsor. Sometimes it happens, where Apex dies in any remote locality, his successor cannot be known to the Sponsors, but the latter can always identify the true Apex by the seven symbols which lead to the leaden casket that crowns the mystic edifice, and which, with reverence, I venture to assert I have seen; but it is not fitting that I should say more.

There is a remarkable painting, of small size, called "The Dream of Apex." It represents a man in a gloomy apartment, startled at the appearance of a serpent; but, for reasons inconvenient to mention, the locality cannot be indicated.

As your correspondent is perhaps aware, the one supreme Apex takes in regular succession, as his symbol, one of the starry signs; but these are not numbered as amongst the seven occult symbols.

Allow me to add, that "the Frederick the Great" is not a warrant of authority. The Emperor Frederick Barbarossa certainly did issue one, but under the superior inspiration of the Veiled Apex, who, at that period, is supposed to have been a Venetian. N. B.—E.

THE WARDENS' CHAIRS, (pp. 73 and 89).

If "W.M., M.O.," will re-read his own remarks in conjunction with mine, he will see that he has shown no cause of difference between us. I spoke of "brethren able to discharge the duties," while he speaks of "skilled members," which is just the same. Now, a brother may be "skilled" who has never been in office. Then supposing the W.M. and S.W. were present, and the J.W. absent, while also no P.M. was present, I ask what could be done then? The Master of a lodge ought to know his men, and give every due encouragement to young members who are learning and taking an interest in the duties of the lodge. Consequently if he knows some of those brethren are quite qualified to do some absent officers part, he ought to encourage them by allowing them to do it, and not overlook them. I like to see a healthy emulation in a lodge as to taking part in its working—it is far too often absent—consequently I would respectfully ask the P.M.'s to encourage their younger brethren as much as possible, when duly practicable. W. P. B.

THE CHURCH OF SANTA SOPHIA (page 73).

The following addenda, being a condensation of Mr. Ferguson's remarks on the subject, may be interesting. St. Sophia was commenced by Justinian in the tenth year of his reign, on the ruins of one erected by Constantine, but destroyed by fire in that year; completed in six years, but twenty years after much injured by an earthquake.

In the course of the restoration, which ensued, several alterations and additions were made, but whether the exo-narthex or outer porch was added then, or after, is not clear; it was not part of the original design, but built during the Christian occupation of the city. St. Sophia has no external architectural beauty in its present state, but beautiful internally. The church itself is nearly an exact square of 229 feet north and south, and 243 feet east to west, surmounted in the centre by a great dome, 107 feet in diameter, and 182 feet from the floor. Internally the church, instead of showing a Greek cross, as is usually asserted, is virtually contracted in the centre, and in plan more the shape of an hour-glass.

The dome of Sta. Sophia is about the same diameter as St. Paul's, London, but 33 feet less in height internally, which is in favour of the former, and gives the effect of great space, while St. Paul's looks too much of a large hole in the roof. It is certain that no domical building of modern times can at all approach Santa Sophia's either for appropriateness or beauty. If we regard it with a view to the purposes of Protestant worship, it affords an infinitely better model for imitation than anything our own mediæval architects ever produced. So much for Justinian's work; but what about Constantine? Now it so happens that we have still an extant building erected by Constantine more than fifteen hundred years ago, and one, too, which may well claim the highest interest and veneration from the whole Christian world. I refer to the real church of the Holy Sepulchre, alias, the "Mosque of Omar," or, as Mr. Ferguson more correctly styles it, the "Dome of the Rock." This old Christian church is hallowed by many associations. It contains the tomb of Christ, and nigh it the words were uttered—"He is not here; He is risen! Come see the place where the Lord lay."

I intend to forward a few remarks upon this venerable and sacred structure shortly.

W. P. BUCHAN.

FREEMASONRY AND THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

One of the most extraordinary facts connected with the American Revolution is, that every general officer on the side of American independence was a Freemason, with one solitary exception, the traitor Benedict Arnold. C. F. M.

WASHINGTON AS A MASON.

We extract the following interesting item from Lossing's "Pictorial Field Book of the American Revolution."—

"The Americans were encamped in log huts at Morristown, and Washington's head-quarters were at the old Freeman Tavern, which stood on the north of the village green. In the Morris Hotel, a building then used as a commissary store-house, the chief often participated in the rites of Freemasonry in a room over the bar, which was reserved for a ball-room and the meetings of the Masonic lodge. There he conferred the degrees of the Order upon his companions-in-arms, and his warm attachment to the Institution lasted until his death." C. F. M.

THE "LITTLE" TESTIMONIAL.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

V. D. B.—It is quite refreshing, after reading the leader on "Masonic Monstrosities," to peruse the manly and most fraternal letters of Bros. Magnus Ohren and John Boyd respecting the testimonial to our mutual friend and distinguished brother, Robert Wentworth Little. I do not believe it worth while to notice any anonymous personal attacks on Bro. Little by persons who are no doubt envious at seeing real worth about to be rewarded. Those who know Bro. Little are aware of the falsity of such charges, and those who do not know him, instead of crediting slanderous tales, should remember that the Testimonial Committee are aided by Masons of world-wide fame, like the respected Grand Secretary and others.

Yours fraternally,

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

Edward-street, Truro, 11th Feb., 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR,—Having read with very great pleasure the letters in your last issue from Bros. Ohren and Boyd, I cannot refrain from addressing a few lines to you on the same subject.

The observations in your contemporary alluded to by Bro. Ohren exhibit so much acridity of temper and general mental disturbance that it is to be feared the writer must be suffering from a severe attack of jealousy, and no doubt imagines that he himself should be made the victim of a testimonial instead of our esteemed Bro. Little. Such, however, is not the case, as he is lacking to so culpable an extent in Masonic charity that much time and care will be required to restore him to a proper frame of mind and heart; and we commend him to the pure spring of Masonry, where charity—that chiefest of all the virtues—will be found a sovereign remedy for the crudity and narrowness of his ideas.

Let us now turn to pleasant topics, and a pleasanter one cannot be found than the testimonial now on foot. I need not say it has for several years been contemplated by many—it only required the right and fitting season now arrived, when, on being set in motion, it should extend as far as Masonry itself, on which the sun never sets; and I am sure that in every region where the light of Masonry illumines the heart of man, some will be found to give a hearty response to the call. I am but one of many hundreds who were waiting for the signal. All who know our Bro. Little know that his untiring energy and zeal, and the kindly manner in which he is ever ready to render his services, has given him a position in Masonry second to none as a real worker. His unwearied exertions in restoring the Red Cross Order and its cognate degrees to the noble position they now hold in Christian chivalry has not in the least prevented him from devoting an immense amount of time and energy to the Craft and the Royal Arch, in every ceremony of which so many of us have had frequent opportunities of witnessing his perfect working; and I can fully bear out Bro. Boyd's remarks as to the number of lodges and chapters wherein he has officiated either as the Consecrating or Installing Officer. I can only add that his testimonial stands on the broad basis of general Masonic work of the highest class, and thus commends itself to all Masons. Those who have had the pleasure of knowing him intimately, as I have for many years, will not require to be reminded that it would be difficult to find a more gentlemanly man, a more perfect Mason, or one more deserving of general esteem than our brother.

Yours in fraternity,

WILLIAM ROBERT WOODMAN,
P.M. 66, P.Z. 33.

QUALIFICATIONS OF VISITORS TO LODGES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—There has been some correspondence in THE FREEMASON on the above subject. A circular was issued by Grand Lodge, and ordered to be copied into the lodge minute books, warning lodges not to admit strangers, who, though able to pass the necessary examination, came unprovided with their G.L. certificate. I forget the date of the circular, and am absent from the neighbourhood of my lodge, but feel certain it was issued subsequent to 1860.

I am, yours fraternally,

W. M.

"LADY MASONRY."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Referring to my letter on "Lady Masonry," which appeared in THE FREEMASON, I have again to crave your indulgence and aid. I am happy to say, from inquiries made, I find many warm advocates for the "Eastern Star" as a most desirable means of gathering—uniting—the ladies of our families in our several towns and lodges, &c., for charitable purposes.

Many of our brethren I find averse to the system, lest it might clash with or infringe on our own Order. This is, as you know, erroneous—"Lady Masonry," beyond its object, Charity, is quite distinct, and in no way interferes with the Craft.

Having said so much, I earnestly hope the brethren will aid in opening a chapter of the beautiful and useful "Eastern Star"—the best and only means I know whereby our wives and sisters can unite and work together in acts of kindness and charity.

In conclusion, I may observe that many lady friends are desirous of being enrolled, and are anxiously waiting to prove their utility in the good work. I will be glad to hear your opinion, as well as any of your readers, on the subject. Brethren will please address as below.

Yours fraternally,

F. J. JORDAN.

CONSTITUTIONS OF GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

V. D. B.—Respecting the copies of the "Constitutions" I wrote about lately, allow me to state that, thanks to the kindness of brethren, I have now the Constitutions of A.D. 1858 and 1863 (8vo.), and I only want those of A.D. 1776 and 1784 to render my set complete.

I shall be happy to have these two volumes (or exchange), and would deem it a favour if any brother procures either or both for me at a reasonable cost.

Yours fraternally,

W. JAMES HUGHAN,

Prov. G. Sec. Cornwall.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mâgé, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

KING WILLIAM CITED FOR TRIAL.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The cry of protest which is echoing from every honest heart in this land against the horrors of the actual struggle is a solemn condemnation of King William, and cannot fail being heard in our lodges.

To remain silent would give a tacit approval of deeds which excite indignation in moral society.

I annex my protest, in which I trust our worthy brothers will join as a body. I shall feel thankful for its publication in your columns.

Ever fraternally yours,
E. DELFRAISSE.

Chard, 1st February, 1871.

In reading the document of the French Masons, recorded in your number of 28th Jan., 1871, page 61, the first impression tells your mind of a wild despair, a powerless wrath, an impossible madness. Then, whirling against time, you leap over long by-gone ages, when blind, intrepid boldness rebels against insuperable forces. But such impression is soon imperilled in the mind which the principles of our Craft have filled with enlarged views of the true mission of all honest men. The golden heart of a Freemason always thrills at the cry of distress of innocence, hurls vengeance against crime, unless he forsakes his duties. Rank and lineage are no boundaries to our domain; our laws cannot stand as dead letters against evil for the sake of the title of the evil-doer. The king who deserts the cause of humanity and justice to secure personal advantages perjures himself in the eyes of the universal Brotherhood. It is a very comfortable way of getting rid of the difficulty, by pleading politics as being without the pale of our laws. Moral, political society comprise an indivisible trinity; they form the trine virtues of humanity, which we are so proud to call the grand principle of Freemasonry.

With dint of a sophism, it may be said that war has cruel consequences, which necessity approves, or at least excuses. Well, as long as such a demoralising system stands as an accepted scourge of our civilised age, we must by force submit. While King William acted on the defensive he had justly deserved applause and praise in his glorious and holy task of protecting his subjects. But what for the useless, wholesale murders of women, old men, and children in their flight before his cohorts? What for the villages reduced to ashes? What for the millions of innocents closely clustered in burning cities, dying by hundreds daily from disease, from mutilation, from cold and starvation? What for the enslavement of many millions of people by sheer lust of conquest? Brothers, if such evil-doings constitute the glory of a king, for the sake and glory of our Order, never let a king soil the gates of our sacred lodges! We, pupils of a school of a pure moral, shall we let such evil triumph without whispering a few words of remonstrance to the ears of our guilty brother? When the sacred voices of justice and mercy faint all round us under the clash of arms—when powerless innocence bleeds under the sword, struggles against famine, or dies under torture—we, brothers, we, the sworn satellites of a merciful Providence, shall we witness the crime and not protest against it? Will not our courage be equal to our duty? Shall we spare King William—the Attila of our age, the scourge from above—the lesson we owe him? Well, it is perhaps better to let his heart spell his own condemnation, written with blood upon his imperial crown. Like Belshazzar, he shall call in vain all his wise men to explain how his eyes become blind by blood dropping from his crown; how his ears become deaf by childlike screams, by the moans of mutilated corpses heaped round his sleepless pillow; how every vein, every artery of his body grows turgid, constantly filling with the tears of tortured women, of widows mourning their mutilated husbands or children. Then his countenance will change; the joints of his loins will become loosed, until a brother, like Daniel to Belshazzar, shall whisper the word of prayer, saying, "The Great Architect have mercy on you! You, Brother William, who insulted morality, outraged humanity, and apostatised from your engagements to the Craft."

E. DELFRAISSE.

THE ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE TESTIMONIAL.

A meeting of the friends and subscribers to the above testimonial was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Saturday, the 11th inst. Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, P.G.M. for Middlesex, in the chair. There were also present: Bros. John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Weaver, Yeoman, Barrett, Walters, J. T. Moss, John Boyd, Parker, George Kenning, Thiellay, Roebuck, and Levander.

The circular convening the meeting having been read, the Chairman briefly explained the objects of the meeting. Letters were then read from the Rt. Hon. the Earl Bective, the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Jersey, Sir Gilbert Campbell, Sir Frederick M. Williams, M.P., &c.; and other brethren, consenting to be on the committee, and promising their support and assistance.

A committee was then appointed.

It was proposed and carried unanimously—

"That Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, P.G.M. for Middlesex, be elected as Chairman of the Committee; and that Bro. John Hervey, the Grand Secretary, be the Treasurer of the Fund."

"That Bros. J. T. Moss and H. C. Levander be requested to act as Hon. Secs. of the Committee."

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE Triennial General Grand Conclave of the Red Cross Order will be held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on the 3rd March.

WE are informed that Lords Limerick and Eliot have been admitted to the 30°, and the Earl of Carnarvon to the 32°, by the Supreme Grand Council 33° for England and Wales.

THE St. George's Conclave Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, will be consecrated at Bolton this day (Saturday, the 18th inst.) by the Illustrious the Intendant-General for North Lancashire.

HIS Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has named Monday, the 8th May next, for the Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, on which occasion His Royal Highness has kindly consented to preside.

As a result of the late Masonic ball in aid of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, held at the Town Hall, it will be satisfactory to the brethren to know that the Secretary (Bro. R. Wylie) has been enabled to hand over the handsome sum of £102 14s. 8d. to the Treasurer, Bro. R. Wilson.

WE are requested to state that the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters is now prepared to grant warrants and certificates for the Ark Mariners' Degree. All Applications must be made to the Grand Secretary G.L.M.M., at the office, 2, Red Lion-square, Holborn, W.C., no other person being authorised by the Grand Master to issue them.

A NEW conclave of the Red Cross Order—to be named the "Byzantine," No. 44—is about to be opened at Leicester, under the distinguished auspices of the R.W. Bro. William Kelly Prov. Grand Master; and the Rev. W. B. Langley, Rev. N. Haycroft (D.D.), the Right Hon. the Earl Ferrers, and other eminent brethren will hold office in the conclave.

THE Annual Ball of the Old Concord Lodge, No. 172, was held in the new Grand Hall, Freemasons' Tavern, on Wednesday last, when a large and brilliant company assembled on the occasion. The excellent arrangements reflect the highest credit upon the Stewards, nothing being wanted on their part to add to the comfort and success of the evening. Bro. Marriott's band attended, and the musical arrangements were conducted in a most efficient manner by that brother. Supper was served in a récherché style, after which dancing was kept up till an advanced hour in the morning.

The Sphinx Lodge of Instruction will not hold its usual weekly reunion to-day (Saturday) in consequence of the meeting of the mother lodge on this day.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Youthful Infirmities.—From causes difficult to discover, producing slight symptoms of deranged action scarcely perceptible at first, the young become prematurely enervated and debilitated. They lose alike their looks, energy and confidence. The general cause of this melancholy state is a disordered stomach, which Holloway's Pills will regulate. By improving digestion, and purifying the blood, they work wonders. They act so kindly, yet so certainly, upon every organ, that the nervous system soon recovers, and the wonted good spirits speedily return with strength, vivacity and vigour. ## GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held on Monday evening, February 6th, in the Freemasons' Hall, George-street, Edinburgh, at 6 p.m. The Earl of Rosslyn, Most Worshipful Grand Master occupied the throne, and was supported by Bros. H. Inglis of Torsonce, Substitute Grand Master; William Mann, Senior Grand Warden; Colonel Campbell of Blytheswood, Junior Grand Warden; Rev. F. Rowbotham, M.A., acting Grand Chaplain; Alex. J. Stewart, Grand Secretary; John Laurie, Grand Clerk; William Officer, Junior Grand Deacon; Alex. Hay, Grand Jeweller; Major Ramsay, Grand Director of Ceremonies; C. W. M. Muller, Grand Director of Music; Major Hope of Luffness, Captain Colt of Gartersherrie, and others.

The Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form by the Grand Master, the business of the meeting was proceeded with.

Upon the list of Proxy Commissions being read over, Bro. Baird, R.W.M. No. 3 bis, objected to their being sustained, on the ground, as he supposed, of their not having been granted in accordance with the new Stamp Act. Bros. Inglis, Sub. G.M.; and Mann, S.G.W., replied that as Masonic commissions were not granted by "letters of attorney," therefore Grand Lodge had nothing to do with Bro. Baird's objections as now stated, and especially at this stage of their proceedings.

Bro. Colonel Campbell, J.G.W., observed that if Bro. Baird wished to carry forward his ideas in Grand Lodge, he should table a motion to that effect in a proper manner, which would come up pro forma at the quarterly communication thereafter; but as to interrupting the proceedings of Grand Lodge in the way he was doing, that was quite unconstitutional.

Bro. Baird, however, persisting in his opposition in rather an obstreperous manner, the Most Worshipful Grand Master requested him to resume his seat.

The motion that the Proxy Commissions be sustained, was then carried.

The report upon the memorial of the lodge of Glasgow St John as to carrying the working tools at Masonic processions was afterwards read and met with great opposition from the R.W.M. of No. 3 bis, who made several statements, for which, however, he was called in question by the office-bearers and members of Grand Lodge present. He also alluded to the circumstance of the St. John's Lodge having carried the working tools at several Masonic processions in the Glasgow province previous to the said St. John's lodge joining the Grand Lodge in 1850.

Bro. Robertson, G.B.B., replied that if the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow really allowed the St. John's Lodge to act as stated, said Provincial Grand Lodge was simply breaking Grand Lodge laws when doing so.

Bro. Buchan, G.S., observed that it was, in his opinion, in great measure owing to the St. John's Lodge having managed to impose their pretended Malcolm Charter upon many of the Glasgow brethren which had enabled it to act as it had done; but seeing said document had been proved by some of the best Masonic and historical authorities in the country to be only a modern forgery, it followed therefore that the pretensions of the St. John's Lodge, as put forward in that memorial, were without due foundation, and fell at once to the ground.

The motion that the report of committee—minus some suggestions appended regarding future processions in Scotland—be sustained, was thereafter carried.

Another motion on the subject of Masonic processions was delayed till next Quarterly Communication, as the Glasgow brethren had to leave in order to catch the 9 p.m. train.

On the recommendation of the Grand Committee, Bros. the Earl of Dalhousie, Andrew Kerr, and William Hay were nominated delegates to represent Grand Lodge at a conference to be held in London on an early day to discuss the question of the Mark degree.

A memorial for the recognition of the new Grand Lodge of Quebec was refused. Fraternal relations with the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia were established by the appointment of Bro. George Fraser as representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland at the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, and the nomination of Bro. William Hay as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

Charters were ordered to be expedited for new lodges—Burns St. Mary, Hurlford, Ayrshire; Rising Sun, Bombay; and Hopetoun, Leadhills.

On the motion of the Substitute Grand Master, Bro. Major Hope, of Luffness, was appointed Provincial Grand Master for East Lothian, in room of the late Bro. the Earl of Haddington.

A letter was read from the Honorary Secretary of the Scott Centenary Committee asking the co-operation of Grand Lodge at the festival in August next.

After the appointment of Grand Committee for 1871-2, and the tabling of several motions, amongst them the following:—"That no office-bearer in the Grand Lodge of Scotland shall hold the same office for a longer period than three years, and, on the expiry of his term of office, shall not be eligible for re-election to the same office, and that at least three years must elapse before he is appointed to it again. This, however, is not to apply to the Grand Master or paid officials"—to be discussed at next Quarterly Communication, Grand Lodge was closed in the usual form.

CONSECRATION of the STOCKWELL LODGE, No. 1339.

This new lodge was consecrated by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, W.M. 1293, P.M. 975, Prov. G. Sec. Middlesex, on Thursday, the 2nd inst., at the Duke of Edinburgh Tavern, Shepherd's-lane, Stockwell. About twenty-five brethren were present, and the ceremony went off with great éclat, the presiding officer being absolutely perfect in the beautiful ritual, and great assistance being rendered by Bro. Worrell as Organist, and Bro. T. J. Barnes, P.M. 933, as D.C. The Wardens' chairs were filled by Bros. John Thomas, P.M., and W. B. Hambly.

At the conclusion of the consecration ceremony, Bro. Little vacated the chair in favour of Bro. H. E. Francis, P.M., who then installed Bro. C. Hamerton as W.M. in a most admirable manner. The officers appointed were Bros. W. Worrell, S.W.; J. C. Pain, J.W.; H. E. Francis, Sec.; J. Brighten, S.D.; J. M. Klinck, J.D.; D. Stolz, I.G.; and W. Grant, Tyler.

The thanks of the lodge were unanimously voted to Bro. Little for the able manner in which he had performed the consecration, and he was further elected an honorary member. Votes of thanks were also passed to the Installing Master, the Wardens and visitors generally, for their kind assistance, and after several propositions for initiations, &c., had been made, the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to a most magnificent banquet, provided by Bro. C. Timewell, the host. The wines were excellent, and the entire menu gave great satisfaction. Bro. Hamerton, the new Master, proposed the various toasts of the evening in a terse but telling style, and there can be no doubt that he is the right man in the right place. Among the brethren present were: Bros. J. Stevens, W.M. 1216; H. Thompson, P.M. 177; G. Shuck, W.M. 857; T. A. Taylor, 1158; H. Child, 72; J. Wyld, 54; H. Mills, 857; H. Massey, P.M. 619; J. Dawson, 72; &c.

ROYAL ARK MASONRY.

GRAND LODGE OF ROYAL ARK MARINERS.

A Grand Lodge of the Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Royal Ark Mariners was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, on Thursday, the 9th inst., at seven o'clock. Present: Bros. Morton Edwards, G.C.; R. W. Little, Past D.G.C.; F. Binckes, P.C.; Hyde Pullen, P.C.; S. Rosenthal, G.D.C.; A. D. Loewenstark, G. Standard-bearer; M. A. Loewenstark, G.S.; George Kenning, H. C. Levander, S. M. Lazarus, H. Massey, W. B. Church, H. W. Barrett, J. Rosenthal, W. H. Hubbard, T. F. Starkey, A. Harris, G. Hart, M. Emanuel, E. H. Finney, John Read, Waters, and Longstaff. Bro. Morton Edwards was G.C.; Bro. Rosenthal acted as S.W.J.; and Bro. Lazarus as J.W.S.

The Grand Lodge was opened in ample form and with solemn prayer, the minutes of meetings of 21st and 30th June, 29th July, and 2nd of February were read and unanimously confirmed, and letters were read from Bros. Colonel Burdett (Deputy G.C.), Lord Eliot (P.C.), George Lambert (G.T.), Israel Abrahams, and other brethren, apologising for absence.

The G.C. then stated that the meeting had been called to discuss the position the degree now stood in, to make such arrangements as may be necessary for the attachment of this degree to the Mark Degree, and to elect a Grand Commander for the next year.

Several letters and extracts from correspondence from Bros. Dorrington (P.G.C.), Thompson, Vesper, Greenwood, Pilling, and other Royal Ark Mariners, were read, by which it was shown that the degree had been extensively practised during the eighteenth century, and had been worked in various parts of the country and abroad since then and up to the present time. Bro. Edwards had been invested with power from Bro. Dorrington, the G.C., to re-open dormant, and found fresh, lodges, and call a Grand Lodge together under his authority and that of a warrant for the establishment of a Grand Lodge in 1793 signed by several distinguished Masons of that period, when H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence accepted the Grand Command of the Order. This was done on the 21st June, when, on Bro. Dorrington retiring, Bro. Edwards was regularly invested and enthroned as G.C., and appointed a number of officers, at a very influential and successful meeting. Since that period negotiations had been entered into with the Mark Degree for the attachment of the Royal Ark Mariners to it—much in the same manner as the Royal Ark to the Craft—which required some meetings still to complete; but in the interval the Order had been making rapid progress. Ten lodges had been either reopened or founded, other applications received, several Inspector-Generals had been appointed for provinces at home and abroad, and warrants and certificates could now be granted, for which application should be made to the G. Scribe, Bro. Loewenstark. The Mark Degree would, after the 21st June, take over the greater part of the management of the Royal Ark Mariners' Order, if the Grand Master of the Mark Degree, the Rev. G. R. Portal, be elected as Grand Commander; but in the meantime it was necessary that the arrangement for the attachment should be carefully made, so as to secure the rights of this degree to the members.

Considerable discussion now ensued, in which Bros. Binckes, Little, S. Rosenthal, A. D. Loewenstark, and Lazarus took part, Bro. Binckes stating that he considered the arrangements all but confirmed, and that no difficulty whatever would be experienced in coming to terms. But the real difficulty, he went on to say, was this: Did this Grand Lodge still wish to exercise supreme authority or did it not; or, on the other hand, was it willing to give it up to the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters? If the Grand Ark wished to resign to Grand Mark Lodge a nominal allegiance and retain the real power, the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters would not concede to those terms. If Grand Ark wished to surrender its powers to Grand Mark Lodge, and have it work the degree, then there was no difficulty in carrying that understanding into effect; but Grand Mark Lodge would not go so far as to come to an arrangement by which two concurrent supreme jurisdictions should be allowed to exist.

The G.C. stated that he expected to have seen three times the number of Royal Ark Mariners present, and he felt that the meeting consequently did not entirely represent the Order, but that which was wanted was this: that the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners should be merged into a council, to work as a lodge, which all Present and Past Commanders and all Present J's and S's should be entitled to attend, and rank as members; that a working committee or Board of Advice be formed to advise the Grand Commander on Royal Ark matters; that all fees should be the property of the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners to the 21st June, which would enable them to pay for their furniture, clothing, &c., and probably leave a surplus, part of which would go for charitable purposes, and part towards an installation banquet. The Grand Officers to pay fees of office, to have their past rank confirmed, and that all these fees for office and dispensation fees be the property of this Body, which would thus efficiently represent the Royal Ark Mariners' Order.

Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Past Deputy Grand Commander, then stated that Bro. Portal had done him the honour to show him a programme which he meant to submit to this Grand Lodge. He believed it met all the conditions previously arranged, and went further, and conceded that the officers of this lodge should wear their collars in Grand Mark Lodge. Again, this lodge was to retain all its fees until it had paid the debts it had incurred for clothing, &c. He thought the Grand Master had met, or endeavoured to meet, them in an amicable spirit, and there was probably no brother in the room who did not wish to see the treaty carried out to the fullest extent.

Bro. A. D. Loewenstark then moved that "The Rev. Bro. G. R. Portal be elected Grand Commander, the enthronement to take place on the 21st of June." The motion was seconded by Bro. Levander.

The G.C. then put the motion, and it being carried unanimously, he declared the Rev. G. R. Portal to be the Grand Commander-elect.

Bro. A. D. Loewenstark also moved—"That a Committee be formed of the G.C., and five members of this, as well as of Grand Mark Lodge, to arrange the difficulties in the meantime." This was seconded by Bro. Levander, and carried unanimously.

The Committee was then appointed as under:—The G.C.; Bros. Joshua Nunn, Harris, E. H. Finney, A. D. Loewenstark, and M. Emanuel.

Bro. Binckes stated that he should immediately take the necessary steps to call together the Committee of the Mark Degree, consisting of the Grand Master and five members of that degree.

The G.C. informed the brethren that having been so successful in the efforts made to restore this ancient Order to something like its former dignity, and having been so ably seconded by his officers and Royal Ark Mariners generally, he should not relax his endeavours to render it as influential and numerous as possible, in order to hand over to the Grand Commander-elect a powerful and well-organised body of brethren, and which must be a source of gratification to both degrees.

There being no further business, Grand Lodge was closed in ample form.

The appearance of the rooms on this occasion was certainly picturesque and handsome in the extreme, the brethren wearing the grand clothing, jewels, &c., of the Order.

A Special Lodge of the Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Royal Ark Mariners was held by dispensation at the Freemasons' Tavern on Thursday, the 9th inst. The lodge was opened by Bro. Meyer A. Loewenstark, G.S.B., in due form and with solemn prayer, when Bros. Waters and Longstaff were admitted and obligated as Royal Ark Mariners. The ballot was taken for Bro. Major E. Hamilton Finney, 31°; John Read (Grand Organist Mark); and A. B. Cook, 30°; which proving unanimous in their favour, Bros. Finney and Read were admitted, and elevated to the degree of Royal Ark Mariners according to ancient custom. On the retiring of some of the brethren, an Assembly of Commanders of the Order was then properly formed, and Bros. Finney, Starkey, and T. W. Barrett had the rank of Commander conferred on them by dispensation, the ceremony being conducted by the G.C., Bro. Morton Edwards, assisted by Bro. S. Rosenthal, 33°, G.D.C., and Bro. Lazarus, P.C. No. 2. The brethren were then readmitted, and saluted the newly-enthroned Commanders. No other business being before the lodge, it was closed in due form and with solemn prayer.

Dove Lodge, No. 4.—A meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Wednesday, the 1st of February, when a number of brethren of the order were present; A. D. Loewenstark, Commander. Bro. Major H. T. Duncan, D.G.M. for B. Burnah, and Bro. Geo. Neall were elevated, and the Commander-elect, Bro. Israel Abrahams, was enthroned as Commander N., and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. S. Pollitzer, S.W.J.; Wolf Littaur, J.W.S.; Rosenthal, S.D.; Funkenstein, J.D.; Albert, Steward; M. Emanuel, D.C.; J. Emanuel, Guardian; A. D. Loewenstark, Treas.; E. Hart, Organist; Meyer A. Loewenstark, Secretary; Laing, Warden. The lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer. At the banquet (a capital one) which took place after the Mark Lodge was closed, Bro. M. Edwards, G.C., stated that he had had the pleasure of elevating the M.W.G. Mark Master, and several Grand Officers, as well as some officers of Grand Craft Lodge, and some idea might be formed of the progress this degree is making, when out of some 30 who were round the table, all except five or six were Royal Ark Mariners, and he hoped that this degree, having been buried for years as one might say, possessing merits to some unknown, may yet become of considerable importance.

THE "CAPTAIN" RELIEF FUND.

The officers of H.M.S. "Resistance," several of whom are members of the Craft, gave an amateur performance at the Birkenhead Theatre on the 27th ult., in aid of the fund for relief of the widows and orphans of those who perished in the "Captain." The ill-fated ship having been built at Birkenhead, a great deal of interest is naturally felt in that locality in everything connected with her mishap, and that, together with the novelty of the entertainment given by the gallant officers, caused the theatre to be well filled. The evening for the performance having been quite accidentally chosen, it was a curious coincidence that that very day completed a year since the ship was floated out from the building-yard into the river Mersey. The pieces selected for this occasion were "Our Wife" and the Irish farce "More Blunders than One," in both of which the officers acquitted themselves very creditably. Between the plays, Lieut. Heron, R.N., entertained the audience with a song, which was vociferously encored, and the same compliment was also paid to Mr. Burnley, R.N., for his admirable execution of a sailor's "hornpipe." The evening's amusement commenced with a most appropriate prologue, written by Bro. Capt. Shanks, Royal Marines (W.M. 189), Knight of the Order of the Medjidie, &c., who, at the rising of the curtain, came forward and delivered it with great emphasis and precision, being frequently interrupted by enthusiastic and well-earned applause. When it was concluded, Bro. Shanks was again called to the front, and received quite an ovation from the well-pleased audience. This is the second entertainment of the kind that the officers of the "Resistance" have given within the last two months, and they have thus added considerably to the "Captain" Fund.

PROLOGUE.

Twelve months ago—'tis that within a day—
The "Captain" first on Mersey's river lay;
This day completes one year since she with pride
Came forth to navigate the restless tide;
On Friday she came forth—a day, 'tis said,
That even bravest sailors greatly dread—
But who then thought that noble ship would be
So soon o'erwhelmed with dire catastrophe?
Noble indeed she was—matchless in strength and speed,

Perfect in all but safety!—As a steed
From the restraint of rein and curb set free
Wanders unchecked, she roamed the faithless sea;
She sought not idle, calm repose, but loved
To face the tempest in its fiercest hour,
Yet, though her crew were brave, the sequel prov'd
She could not cope with its tremendous power.

Let us not sorrow for those heroes gone,
'Twas God's high will! their race on earth was run!
Within their liquid sepulchre they sleep,
May He their widows and their orphans keep.
Their death, to us, a lesson can impart
That should not fail to reach the hardest heart,
It loudly bids us lift our thoughts above,
And put our trust alone in heavenly love!

Friends of the widow and the fatherless
(As you desire that God should aid or bless),
Do you—with gen'rous rivalry—how prove
Foremost in deeds of charity and love;
Be't yours to dry the widow's burning tear,
The wretched orphan's poverty to cheer,
To soothe the bed of sickness, to impart
Hope to the hopeless—heal the breaking heart.
These are worthy objects—these, at least,
Can give pure pleasure to the human breast;
For this we, Amateurs, now tread the stage,
You, too, who hear me, in this cause engage.
We do not wish, to-night, to us our power
Merely to frisk away an idle hour,
We seek to aid in charity's design
And, in our task, most gladly see you join.

What joy 'twould be if every heart could feel
That happiness springs from the wounds we heal;
Could we but see all undisclosed despair,
And take delight in giving comfort there;
What joy if all the springs within that move
The tender sympathies of social love
Were melted to compassion's softest mood,
And our souls stirred—for age—to doing good.
When this world's vanities are nearly o'er,
Ere fate the curtain drops to rise no more;
When the fast fleeting breath has almost sped,
Some moments thus devoted then will shed
A calm and tranquil bliss, a ray serene,
To gild the mortal drama's closing scene.

Thoughts such as these made us adopt this plan
For bringing some relief to suffering man,
Inspir'd the Actors (who will now appear)
With hope to dry, at least, one bitter tear
From those, to whom that dreadful wreck has shown
What 'tis to pass through life unlov'd—alone!
Should then our efforts and our hopes succeed,
Yours be the merit, yours the happy need

Which gracious Heaven promises to those Who look with charity on human woes!
With true delight our histrionic crew
Exert themselves to win applause from you;
And feel supremely gratified to be
The humble instruments of Charity!
Cynics may say we're but a motley crew,
As well to acting as to speaking new:
That accusation is perhaps, too true!
Yet, though our skill as orators be slight,
And though our powers, Dramatic, may be few,
When British Sailors and Marines unite
There's nothing that they cannot "dare and do"!

CAPTAIN PETERSEN'S STEAM LIFE BOAT.

The invention of Capt. C. W. Petersen, for the application of steam power to lifeboats, is destined to effect an important improvement in our lifeboat system, and consequently to increase very considerably the means at our disposal for saving life at sea. The committee of the Shipwrecked Mariners' Society, after examining the models and drawings of the invention, have expressed themselves greatly pleased with it, and are especially anxious that it should have an adequate trial, the success of which, we believe, will fully confirm the anticipations which have been formed of it, strengthened by the opinion of practical and scientific men, who have pronounced the invention to be one of the greatest value. Capt. Petersen is confident that his boat will be able to put to sea in all weathers, and that, if upset, it will instantly right itself without losing its motive power. The advantages it will possess, both in respect to increased speed and power, over the lifeboats now in use must, of course, be self-evident; but the great thing is to put the invention to the test. This, Capt. Petersen is most anxious to do; but having necessarily exhausted, to a great extent, his available resources in experiments and multifarious incidental operations, he is obliged to appeal to the benevolent and to all interested in sailors and shipping, for subscriptions to enable him to accomplish this object, and considering the important bearing his invention is likely to have upon one of the greatest of our national philanthropic instrumentalities, we are sure that this appeal will not be made in vain. Indeed, the manner in which it has already been responded to, prevents the barest possibility of such a result. The cost of building a trial boat will be about £900 or £1,000, towards which the Committee of Lloyds have subscribed £50; the Salvage Institution, £52 10s.; the Shipwrecked Mariners' Society, £50; the Royal National Life Boat Institution, £100; Miss Burdett Coutts, £100; and about £200 have been contributed by merchants and others, making altogether upwards of £500. The names here mentioned, as subscribers, afford a satisfactory guarantee for the practicability of the proposal, and we trust their liberality will at once be supplemented to such an extent as to ensure the complete realisation of Capt. Petersen's intentions. The object is one of such national importance that it ought to command universal sympathy and support, and to be received with special favour and interest by maritime communities, directly concerned, in the welfare and interest of our seamen. This being so, Capt. Petersen may reasonably expect such an amount of assistance—and that, too, within a very short time—as will enable him to put his invention to the test. To this end subscriptions are invited, and for their attainment we are pleased to state that the Committee at Lloyd's have granted Capt. Petersen permission to attend daily in the vestibule in order to explain his interesting adaptation of steam power to lifeboat services. Donations may be paid to F. Lean, Esq., R.N., Secretary of the Shipwrecked Mariners' Society, Hibernia Chambers, London Bridge; to Messrs, Fuller, Banbury, & Co., Bankers, 77, Lombard-street; to Sir W. Mitchell, editor of the Shipping and Mercantile Gazette, in the columns of which paper favourable mention has recently been made of the invention. We trust the publicity thus given to the subject will have the effect of expediting the carrying out of an experiment which, from its immediate connection with an essentially national instrumentality, cannot fail to excite the liveliest interest and attention among all who appreciate the dangers of the deep, or who understand, even by imagination, the perils to which seamen are oftentimes exposed within sight of our rock-bound coasts.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The General Committee of the Grand Lodge met, and afterwards the Lodge of Benevolence was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 15th inst. Amongst the brethren present were: Bros. J. M. Clabon, P.G.D., President (in the chair); Colonel Cole, P.G.S.W.; J. Hervey, P.G.D., G.S.; J. Savage, P.G.D.; N. Bradford, P.A.G. Dir. of Cers.; W. Young, P.G.S.B.; J. Nunn, P.G.S.B., S.V.P.; J. Brett, G.P., J.V.P.; J. Smith, P.G.P.; H. G. Buss, R. Wentworth Little, C. A. Cottebrune, George Kenning, H. Dumas, F. Walters, W. Mann, J. Weaver, J. W. Halsey, W. Smith, M. A. Loewenstark, T. F. Creswick, J. Boyd, &c.

Notice of motion was given by Bro. J. Rankin Stebbing, P.G.D., "That, at the Quarterly communication of March 1st, £50 be voted from the funds of this Grand Lodge towards the purchase of a Masonic life-boat."

The grants voted at the previous meeting requiring confirmation were unanimously confirmed.

It was announced that the M.W.G.M. the Earl de Grey and Ripon had sanctioned that in future, on and after the 22nd March, the Lodge of Benevolence be held at six o'clock instead of seven.

There were twenty-one applications for relief. Two were deferred until next meeting, one was dismissed, and eighteen were relieved—one with £100, one £40, eight £20 each, seven £10 each, and one £5—subject to the larger amounts being confirmed at the next meeting. The total sum voted was £375, including £10 voted to an applicant who died before the amount was paid, but which was now transferred to the children.

A MASONIC TOUR.

Richmond Va., U.S., Nov. 22, 1870.

Agreeably, to promise, I continue notes of my tour to this, the well-known rebel capital.

I left New York (15), for Albany, capital of the state, via "Hudson Railway;" distance 142 miles; fare 2¾ dollars—about a penny a mile. The speed of the American railways average 25 miles per hour—slow, but most comfortable, travelling. The rail, or "track," as our cousins call it here, runs parallel, and close to the river, on both sides of which there are numerous pretty villas, towns, cities, &c. Those I note are Yonkers, a favourite watering-place; Singing, a great convict depot; Peek's Hill, where the ill-fated Major Andre was caught and hung as a spy by the Americans in 1777; Westpoint, noted for its military academy, fort, &c.; Hudson, a large city, opposite which are the famous Cats-kill Mountains and waterfall. Twenty-two miles further on we cross the Hudson over a fine bridge and enter Albany.

This is a fine, large populous place; from the enormous quantities of goods, provisions, particularly on the wharves and markets, one sees the trade is considerable. On my way to Albany, I visited the postal "car," as the Americans call those railway carriages; two, out of three, of the clerks were Masons. There were Lodges at the various towns we passed. Albany, they informed me, had ten, and, like New York, was full of Masons. I visited many of the public buildings; the Treasury-court, State-house, and Museum are fine. The new State-house, now building, is on a grand scale—will be one of the finest in the world.

My time being limited, I could not visit any of the lodges. After six hours' stay, I went on board the "Drew," and sailed for New York. How will I describe this grand steamer? To be brief, the saloon is 380x80; engines 1,000 horse power; speed 20 miles; no motion perceptible. We had been 20 miles on our way before I was aware of her having started. The saloon is most gorgeously fitted up; there are over 600 cabins, which frequently accommodate as many as 1,000 persons. This magnificent floating palace, like the grand river we were sailing on, must be seen to be appreciated. The Hudson is, and deservedly, called the Rhine of America; all the way it presents some fine points to admire. About Westpoint, the river is wide, bay-like, the fine bluff mountain, numerous islands, beautiful villas, fort, shipping boats, &c., &c., all combine to make the scene charmingly grand. Near New York, it is over a mile wide, known there as the North River. Numerous steamers, ships, pleasure boats, &c., crowd its bosom; several ships and forts defend it. The battery at Westpoint appears most formidable. On the whole, my trip to Albany was most pleasant. I shall not forget the "Drew" and the kind friend I met in her—Chief Steward Bro. W. Armstrong; fare 2½ dollars, including berth.

Back again in New York, where I slept; pushed on next day (17), to city of Philadelphia. The country en route is flat, not picturesque or interesting, numerous towns and rivers on our way. Crossed the Delaware, and into the city of Brotherly Love (as Philadelphia is called) in four hours; distance 88 miles; fare 3¼ dollars from New York. The city is large, populous, and well laid out; the streets most regular, "Chesnut," "Walnut," "Pine," and "Market" being the chief avenues; fine they are, the latter particularly, wide and lined with rows of trees, hence the names. Smaller streets intersect, and are all numbered, hence no going astray. Like New York, tramway cars are all the "go," comfortable and cheap; for 5 cents you can ride 5 miles, equal to ¼d. a mile. Fine houses, hotels, shops; people civil and obliging everywhere.

I visited the Masonic Temple, in "Chestnut" street, a fine Gothic building; numerous Chapters and Lodges, &c., meet here. The rooms, as in New York, are beautifully fitted up. I went to No. 72, "Philadelphia," and another Lodge room, both grand, but through a mistake did not remain to see the working. The Masons are numerous, their fine halls, &c., shows what wealth and numbers can do. Although they have a splendid hall, the Craft is now building another that bids fair to be the grandest in the world. It is now 4 years under construction (began in 1867) and will be 3 more before completed. The building is 250x150, an immense height, of granite, girders of iron, porch and pillars, tower, &c., in fact the edifice is a second Solomon's Temple. Bro. J. Windrim is the architect, and the cost is estimated at 2,000,000 dollars. The New York and Boston Temple are put in the shade, but of this more bye-and-by.

I also visited several of the public buildings. The Treasury is fine, but the "Hall of Independence" merits notice from the rare collection of paintings and relics it contains, many reminding us of days and people forming links in our own history. The fine paintings, statues, banners, &c., of the early settlers, the portraits of Columbus, Penn, Washington, the statue of the latter, relics of Washington and Columbus's ship, the tree under which Penn signed the treaty with the (now nearly extinct) Indians, the original draft of declaration of independence and the table on which it was signed by the American chiefs, the bell which tolled the same is also carefully preserved. These, with numerous relics of the old war, remind us of our claims on, and the relationship with the Americans. There is a curious coincidence attached to the old bell alluded to, viz., on the rim, in large raised letters, is the following quotation:—"Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof (Lev. xxv)", and the old bell (cast in 1753) did proclaim American liberty in the year 1777.

THEATRICAL.

OPERA COMIQUE.—"Our Mutual Friend," has been dramatised, and is now presented at this elegant establishment under the title of "Found Drowned," and is likely to be performed for a considerable time, it being a genuine success. The other pieces are Mr. J. R. Planche's Play "The Welsh Girl," concluding with Mr. Brough's laughable farce "The Comical Countess." An original burlesque is in active preparation; it is to be a parody on Verdi's opera "Un Ballo in Maschera," entitled "The Grand Duke of Camberwell," and will shortly be produced.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mrs. John Wood has produced "Vesta," a grand new classical burlesque, at this fashionable theatre; it has proved a great success. It is preceded by "To Oblige Benson" and "Naval Engagements."

STRAND.—The grand burlesque "Cœur de Lion," by Mr. Strachan, is a great success, and proves that the lessee has again made a good selection for her patrons. It is necessary to make arrangements beforehand for those who wish to possess good seats, as the house is crowded nightly.

SURREY.—The very popular pantomime of "My Son Jack" continues to draw crowded houses, and is pronounced to be equal to any of its predecessors.

THE LONDON WARMING AND VENTILATING COMPANY

(LIMITED),

23, ABINGDON STREET

WESTMINSTER, S.W.

Manager, Director, and Secretary, MR. WOODCOCK.

Churches, Greenhouses, Offices, and Buildings of every description warmed by means of a modification of the plans successfully used by Sir Goldsworthy Gurney in both Houses of Parliament.

The cost is less, and the effect greater, than that of any other known means. The Horticulturist will also find an instrument of new and important power.

This Company has warmed St. Paul's Cathedral, York Minster, all the principal Cathedrals, and more than one thousand Churches in England, and numerous Cathedrals and Churches in France, besides Government and other Public and Private Buildings too numerous to name in an advertisement.

Particulars and Testimonials forwarded on application.

French Offices, 12, BOULEVARD ST. MARTIN, PARIS.

Established 1798.

MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis.—Medical Press.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure, elegant and recherché, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee held its usual monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Thursday, the 23rd inst., Bro. Major J. Creaton, P.G.D., V.P., in the chair. There were also present: Bros. B. Head, P.G.D., V.P.; E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B., Sec.; W. Farnfield, P.A.G.S.; B. Baker, P.G.D.; W. Young, P.G.S.B.; J. R. Sheen, F. Walters, J. Terry, Cox, White, and others.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and verified, and the minutes of the House Committee were read for information. Five pounds was voted to one of the girls who had greatly distinguished herself at her studies. It was announced that the legacy of £100, free of legacy duty, was received from the trustees of the late Miss Sarah Dowsett, and paid into the funds of the Institution. The notice of motion to present the medical officer with one hundred guineas was withdrawn, as it was found to be distasteful to his feelings—he declined to receive any pecuniary reward. One candidate from Lodge 74 was accepted. It was stated that the sickness in the school has abated—no fresh cases occurring, and but one patient in the infirmary. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.

THE Byzantine Conclave of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, No. 44, Leicester, will be consecrated on Thursday, 2nd March, by the Illus. Sir Kt. the Intendant-General for Lancashire.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

By BRO WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

13. The Grand Lodge is to meet at High Noon on every St. John the Evangelist's Day, in order to proclaim the new or recognize the old, Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and the other Grand Officers; and also on every St. John the Baptist's Day, unless the said Festivals happen to be on a Sunday, in which case the Public Meeting shall be on the Monday evening following, and all the Brethren of every regular Lodge have a right to attend the Meetings of the Grand Lodge on every St. John's Day, but neither petitions nor appeals shall be heard on these occasions, nor shall any other business be transacted but the Ancient Ceremonies of the Day and the Collection of Charity.

14. In the Grand Lodge every Member shall keep in his seat, and not move about so as to disturb the assembly; and at the third stroke of the Grand Masters Hammer, as well as whenever the Grand Master, or his Representative in the Chair, shall think fit to rise and call to Order, there shall be a general Silence, at which time any Member wantonly disturbing the order of the Meeting, shall be publicly reprimanded.

15. Every brother that speaks in Grand Lodge shall rise and address himself in a proper manner to the Chair, nor shall anyone presume to interrupt him, unless by a special motion to order, or that the Grand Master, or his Representative in the Chair, finding him wandering from the question under consideration, shall of himself think fit to reduce him to order, and then the Member Speaking shall sit down, but after he has again been set right by the Chair, he may again proceed if he pleases.

16. No Brother is to speak more than once on the same subject unless to explain himself, or when called upon by the chair, and if any Member is twice called to Order at any one Assembly, for transgressing these Rules, and is guilty of a third offence of the same nature, he shall be peremptorily ordered by the Chair to quit the Grand Lodge for that night.

17. If any Brother shall use indecent or improper Language, or act indecorously towards a Brother in the Grand Lodge, he shall be placed under such disapprobation or censure as the Members may think commensurate to the transgression, even to the extent of exclusion, if his conduct shall be thought such as to justify that measure.

18. No motion for a new Regulation, nor for the alteration of an old one shall be made in the Grand Lodge, until it has been first handed up to the Chair in writing, and after having been perused by the Grand Master or his Representative it may be publicly moved, and if seconded, it shall be audibly read by the Secretary, committed to the consideration of the whole assembly, and decided upon at the next meeting of the Grand Lodge.

19. The Grand Lodge will not permit the private sale or transfer of a warrant, under penalty of the Warrant being cancelled, and the parties concerned in such private sale or transfer, excluded, nor will it permit the removal thereof from the place where it was granted to be held at, without special leave obtained on a Memorial to the Grand Lodge for such removal; but when it has been well authenticated that a warrant has been lost or destroyed by accident or fatality, a duplicate thereof shall be granted without any charge, save such as is usually paid to the Deputy Grand Secretary on granting a new warrant.

20. No petition of Charity shall be received in the Grand Lodge unless delivered at the Grand Master's Chair, and recommended by at least three Members of said Lodge.

21. Any Brother who has already or shall hereafter receive Charity out of the Funds of the Grand Lodge, shall never be returned, nor deemed to be qualified to sit as a member thereof on any account whatsoever, unless he shall have repaid into the Funds of the Order the full sum or sums of money that have been advanced to him.

22. On the exclusion of any member from the Order by the Grand Lodge, Notice thereof shall be sent to the several Lodges by the Grand Secretary, and the like Notice if he should be restored.

23. No Masonic Transaction is to be inserted in a Newspaper by any Brother, without permission of the Grand Lodge, under penalty of the severest censure for the first offence, and if repeated, he shall be excluded.

24. All the Lodges of Ireland are bound by the General Regulations of the Fraternity, and every Brother whatsoever, who shall not act amenably to the Rules, Orders and Regulations of the Craft, shall be fined as the Grand Lodge shall think proper, and shall not be suffered to sit in that, or any other Lodge, until the fine be paid, and such submission made as the Grand Lodge shall think fit to receive.

SECTION THE 2ND.
OF THE GRAND OFFICERS, THEIR ATTENDANTS, &c., &c.

1799 p 86 1. The Grand Lodge elects the Grand Master.

2. Application shall be made to the Grand Master by the Deputy Grand Master, or by some Brother whom the Grand Lodge may appoint in case of his failure, at least two months before St. John the Evangelist's Day, in every year, in order to inquire whether he will do the Fraternity the Honour of continuing in his office another year, or of nominating his Successor; and if the Grand Master or the person whom he shall think proper to succeed him, shall be out of town, the Deputy Grand Master shall write to either or both concerning the same, the copies of which Letters as well as the answers, shall be transcribed into the transaction Book of the Grand Lodge.

3. If the present Grand Master shall consent to continue another year in office, the Grand Secretary shall thrice proclaim him aloud "Grand Master of Masons," and all the Members of the Grand Lodge shall salute him in due form according to the ancient and laudable custom of the Craft.

4. If the Grand Master does not agree to preside over the Fraternity another year, he may nominate his successor, who if approved of by the Grand Lodge, and there present, shall be proclaimed, saluted and congratulated as the Grand Master Elect, and installed by the late Grand Master when convenient, according to ancient usage; but if the nomination is not approved of, the Grand Master's Lodge shall be called upon to recommend a Candidate for the Office of Grand Master.

5. If the Brother whom the present Grand Master shall nominate for his Successor, or whom the Grand Lodge shall elect as above, be out of town, and has returned his answer that he will accept the Office of Grand Master, he shall be proclaimed, and may receive the usual honours, homage and congratulations, by proxy, but the Grand Installation is not to be performed until the new Grand Master is present, nor is any other Officer but the Grand Master alone, allowed to be saluted by proxy.

6. The new Grand Master when Installed, shall as his inherent right, nominate and appoint his Deputy Grand Master, who shall also be proclaimed, saluted and congratulated in due form.

7. If the Grand Master should die during his government, or by sickness, or by being beyond sea, or in any other manner be rendered incapable of discharging his Office, the Deputy Grand Master, or in his absence the Senior Grand Warden, or in his absence the Junior Grand Warden, or in his absence any three Masters of Lodges shall assemble at the Grand Lodge immediately, in order to advise together upon the emergency, and shall send back two of their number to invite the last Grand Master to resume his Office, which now of course reverts to him, and if he refuses then the next last, and so backward, but if no former Grand Master be found, the Deputy Grand Master shall act as principal till a new Grand Master is chosen by the Grand Lodge, and if there be no Deputy, nor former Deputy to be found, the present Senior Grand Warden, or in his absence the Junior Grand Warden, shall act as Grand Master till the next Election, and in case no Brother of the above description be found willing to take the chair, it shall be filled according to the 3d Regulation of the Grand Lodge, section the 1st.

8. If the Deputy Grand Master be sick, or necessarily absent, the present Senior Grand Warden supplies his place, and the Junior acts as Senior, as in the first section of the Grand Lodge Regulations, but he that is chosen Deputy at the Installation, cannot be dismissed from his situation unless the cause be submitted to the Grand Lodge, for if the Grand Master is obstructed or dissatisfied in his Government by any act of his Deputy, he may call a Grand Lodge on purpose to lay the case before them for their advice and concurrence, and if they cannot reconcile the Grand Master with his Deputy, they are to allow him to appoint another Deputy Grand Master, so that harmony and peace may be preserved in the Order.

9. The Grand Master or his Deputy shall have authority to command the Treasurer or Secretary to attend him, with their Clerks and Books, in order to see how matters go on, and to know what is expedient to be done on any emergency.

THE M.W.G. Mark Master has granted warrants for the Portal Lodge, Dewsbury; the Holmesdale Lodge, Ramsgate; and the Science Lodge, Wincanton, Somerset.

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE I.

Having occasionally heard through various channels that there were in existence female Masons in American territory, I resolved a short time since to secure, if possible, some authoritative information respecting the mysterious craft in order to dispel the doubts of myself and several Masonic associates. By the courtesy of an intimate friend just returned from the New World, I have been furnished with materials which enable me to give very copious and interesting particulars appertaining to the sisterly community.

I may premise that Free and Accepted Masons in this country and elsewhere, after having perused the several articles which form my paper upon the subject, will readily understand that their ceremonies, lectures, &c., have not been violated, being totally different from those established by the female order.

It can excite but little surprise that an attempt should have been made by the fair daughters of Eve to organise a secret society among themselves, and no one will possibly show any determination to deprive them of the privilege of holding now and then a secret council, especially if the result of this communion is morally and physically advantageous.

However faithful the members may have heretofore been to the obligations imposed upon them at their initiation into the sisterhood, I should certainly not advocate their claims for admission into any lodge of Accepted Masons, but would strenuously oppose any endeavour to overcome the objections urged against their participation of the privileges enjoyed by the Craft. I do not think it necessary that I should enter into any explanation as to the reasons which prompt me to exhibit this solicitude for the interests of the Brotherhood; nor have I any desire to argue the question often mooted in social gatherings, viz., "Why females should not be entrusted with the same knowledge as that imparted to every Mason?" If the explanation were given unreservedly, I feel convinced that I should incur the lasting displeasure of all the ladies, besides being subjected to an unlimited torrent of reproaches.

The historical essay upon the foundation, &c., of certain secret institutions, as published in the "Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star," is sufficiently interesting to warrant its production in these columns:—

"Secret societies imitating Freemasonry for the admission of females as members were (says the author) first organized in France during the early part of the eighteenth century, and still exist there, and in other parts of Europe, as a distinctive rite. By the term Adoptive Masonry is implied that system of forms, ceremonies, and explanatory lectures which is communicated to certain classes of ladies who, from their relationship by blood or marriage to Master Masons in good standing, are entitled to the respect and attention of the entire Fraternity. These ladies are said to be adopted into the Masonic communion because the system of forms, ceremonies, and lectures above referred to enables them to express their wishes, and gives satisfactory evidence of their claims in a manner that no stranger to the Masonic family can do. To the organizations thus established for the initiation of females the French have given the name of 'Adoptive Masonry,' Maçonnerie d'Adoption, and the lodges are called Loges d'Adoption, or 'Adoptive Lodges,' because every lodge of females was obliged to be adopted by, and under the guardianship of, some regular Masonic lodge. One of the first of these societies was the 'Order of Perfect Happiness,' for so we may be permitted to translate the name of 'Félicitaires,' which they adopted. This society assumed a nautical character in its emblems and its vocabulary. It was divided into the four degrees of 'Cabin Boy,' 'Master,' 'Commodore,' and 'Vice-Admiral.' What little information we have been enabled to obtain from a very brief notice of its ritual leads us to believe that it was not of a character to merit countenance. It did not long retain its existence, for two years after its formation it gave place to the 'Knights and Heroines of the Anchor,' which was, however, but a refinement of the original society, and preserved its formula of initiation and nearly all its ceremonies. In 1747, one Beauchaine, the Master of one of the Parisian lodges, instituted a new society, which he called 'L'Ordre des Fendeurs,' or the Order of Wood Cutters. This institution borrowed its principal ceremonies from the society of the Carbonari, or Coal Burners, which had been previously established in Italy. The place of meeting of the Wood Cutters was called the 'Wood Yard,' and was supposed to represent a forest; the presiding officer was called 'Father Master,' and the male and female members were styled 'Cousins.' This society became at once exceedingly popular, and the most distinguished ladies and gentlemen of France united themselves to it. It was consequently the cause of the institution of many similar societies, such as the Order of the Hatchet, of Fidelity, &c. In consequence of the increasing popularity of the numerous secret associations which, in their external characters and mysterious rites, attempted an imitation of Freemasonry—differing, however, from that Institution, of which they were, perhaps, the rivals for public favour, by the admission of female members—the Grand Orient of France, in 1774, established a new rite, called the 'Rite of Adoption,' which was placed under the control of the Grand Orient. Rules and regulations were thenceforth provided for the government of these lodges of Adoption, one of which was that no men should be permitted to attend them except regular Freemasons, and that each lodge should be placed under the charge, and held under the sanction and warrant of some regularly constituted Masonic lodge, whose Master or, in his absence, his Deputy should be the presiding officer, assisted by a female president or mistress. Under these regulations a Lodge of Adoption was opened in Paris in 1775, under the patronage of the Lodge of St. Anthony, and in which the Duchess of Bourbon presided, and was installed as Grand Mistress of the Adoptive Rite. Many systems of Adoptive Masonry have from time to time been introduced in the United States with varied success, none of which, however, seem to possess the elements of permanency, except the Order of the Eastern Star, which was established in this country during the year 1778. The success of this order, therefore, corresponds in its beneficence and usefulness with the extent of Freemasonry. Its obligations are based upon the honour of the female sex, and framed upon the principles of equality and justice; that whatever benefits are due by the Masonic Fraternity to the wives, widows, daughters, and sisters of Masons, corresponding benefits are due from them to the members of the Masonic Fraternity. The theory of the Order of the Eastern Star is founded upon the Holy Writings. Five prominent female characters, illustrating as many Masonic virtues, are selected, adopted, and placed under Masonic protection. The selections are:—

1. Jephthah's daughter, illustrating respect to the binding force of a vow.
2. Ruth, illustrating devotion to religious principles.
3. Esther, illustrating fidelity to kindred and friends.
4. Martha, illustrating undeviating faith in the hour of trial.
5. Electra, illustrating patience and submission under wrongs.

"These are all Masonic virtues, and have nowhere in history more brilliant exemplars than in the five characters illustrated in the lectures of the Order of the Eastern Star.

"The honourable and exalted purposes had in view in its dissemination can have no opposition worthy the name. Its effects in winning to the advocacy of Masonry the virtuous, intelligent, and influential lady members of our families are truly encouraging, and stimulate its friends to persevere in a general promulgation of the system. According to the tenets of the Order of the Eastern Star, Adoptive Masonry stands a bright monument to female secrecy and fidelity, and proves how wrong all those are who fancy a woman is not to be trusted. There is not in the whole of the ceremonies of this rite a single point with which the most ascetic moralist could find fault. On the contrary, all is pure, all is beautiful; it is among the brightest jewels which spangles the records of Masonry. As the Adoptive privileges of the lady entirely depend upon the good standing and affiliation of the brother through whom she is introduced, this system will be a strong inducement, it is thought, to keep a brother, otherwise inclined to err, within the bounds of morality. A general diffusion of this rite will tend to supersede the other so-called female degrees as being, at the best, but trivial and henceforth superfluous and useless."

I purpose giving in my next article the prescribed rules and other matters calculated to engage the attention of all interested in the subject under discussion.

C. S.

BRO. HUGHAN AND THE BIBLE QUESTION.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

I trust that few readers of your paper will disagree with me that Bro. W. J. Hughan stands among the foremost in unearthing and bringing to light information derived from authentic sources. Among other productions from his prolific pen, the Fraternity are particularly indebted to our worthy brother for his contribution to the "Kingston Annual, 1871"—a history of the G.L. of York. Until very recently the said G.L. was regarded by many almost as a myth. Those who undertook to write about it vied with each other, not to enlighten, but to befog. All the information they gave was that it began in the days of Athelstan, and ended, "the Lord knows when." Bro. Findel threw some light on the subject, but Bro. Hughan exposed the whole to daylight. I therefore always take pleasure in reading Bro. Hughan's contributions, and have always relied on the correctness of his quotations, and generally approve of his inferences and conclusions. In your issue of January 7th, Bro. Hughan clearly proved by many citations from old Constitutions, &c., that the bricklayer and stone-worker associations of the middle ages were, and had to be, Roman Catholics. I do not object to his proofs—nay, I even thank him for it, and earnestly wish that either Bro. Hughan or some enterprising brother would furnish the Masonic world with a complete set of all the old documents and allusions appertaining to the old building guilds now scattered in the English libraries, so that brethren residing at a distance from their place of deposit might have an opportunity of judging for themselves the amount of actual value the information derived from them could be to our Freemasonry. But while thanking Bro. Hughan even for the fragmentary extracts, I must most respectfully dissent from his motives for furnishing them, and the conclusions they lead him to. Bro. Hughan appears to labour under the impression that those who would approve the removal of the Bible from the lodge were ignorant of the fact which his citations prove. Now, the only persons who expressed an opinion touching the removal of the Bible were Bro. Buchan and myself; but as Bro. Buchan and myself never disputed the Christianity of the Operative Masons, the information of Bro. Hughan, as far as the retention of the Bible is concerned, is superfluous. The question is not what religious belief was necessary in order to be an Operative, but a Speculative Mason; nor do I care whether Anderson copied the charges verbatim, or whether he composed them himself. The charges as printed by Anderson in 1723 were then received with applause, and they are still printed in our Constitutions. The question is, Are those charges consistent with the retention of sectarianism, even the Bible, in our assemblies? My opinion is, that the charges are as inconsistent with our practice as the American declaration, that "all men were born free and equal," was with their Constitution when it legalised human slavery. Bro. Hughan justly objects to the Scotch practice of pretending to cosmopolitanism, and when the candidate had crossed the threshold of the lodge, to find out, that Scotch cosmopolitanism "is all my eye;" in short, Bro. Hughan objects to it because such practice is neither more nor less than cheating; and if my worthy brother had only followed up his own logic, he would have found that the Scotch practice and his own conclusions are very much alike. The man who cheats another out of a pound inflicts a greater loss on his victim than the one who cheats to the extent of a shilling; but in the eye of justice the offence is equal.

Before, however, proceeding with my argument, I beg to premise that if a stranger were for the first time to fall into a company of Christians, and listen to the constant repetition of such phrases as "Christian charity," "Christian goodness," "Christian mercy," "Christian civilisation," &c., he might be led to imagine that Christianity possesses a code of ethics peculiar to itself, and that goodness, mercy, charity, &c., are synonymous with Christianity; but if the same stranger had taken up a Hallam, Macaulay, or even an ecclesiastical historian, and learned that the most goodly divines, both Protestant and Catholic, of the 16th and 17th centuries, zealously advocated persecution, and even the burning of heretics, as a Christian duty, the stranger, after having read all this, might be excused for not being able to reconcile Christian pretension with Christian practice. It is needless here to go into details of the wholesale slaughter of Protestants by Catholics, and vice versa in Holland, France, and other places on the Continent, or of similar tragedies enacted in England and in Scotland by Episcopalians, Presbyterians, &c., even in the latter half of the last century. Now, in 1717 there happened to live in London two very remarkable men—both were Calvinists and Doctors of Divinity. One of whom, being a Scotch Presbyterian, doubtless heard, even when a child, horrible stories related of Claverhouse and lambs and others against his co-religionists. The other, being a son of a French Huguenot, who, with his father, were driven out of France at the time of the revocation of the edict of Nantes, doubtless had similar tales instilled into his mind of the suffering of his forefathers for conscience sake. Being both educated men, they no doubt were aware that the fault did not altogether rest with the persecutors, because they knew that if their ancestors had had the power they would have persecuted their opponents with the same zeal. Such reflections must undoubtedly have sickened them of all kind of religious persecution, and these two men, Bros. Anderson and Desaguliers, happening to be initiated into the Society of Masons, conceived the design of so improving the society as to make it the means of obliterating all hatred on account of religious differences. From that time dates our Freemasonry. The charges and constitutions drawn up by those brethren were then received with applause, and the charges are still printed in our constitutions and form the corner-stone of our Masonry. And to show how significant the principle of Masonic universality was deemed by the founders of our Masonry—in the very first charge given in their publication, they go on to say: "Masonry being found in all nations, even of divers religions, they are now only charged to adhere to that religion in which all agree." Mark, only charged to adhere to that religion in which all agree; and continue: "Thus Masonry is the centre of union, and the means of conciliating persons that might otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance;" and in the sixth charge, the idea of the universal religion is again alluded to.

I shall not at present attempt to enter into an examination of the Masonic ritual at or before Anderson's time; suffice it to say, that from the catechisms given by Bros. Findell and Steinbrenner, and from the hints scattered in homœopathic doses in Oliver's "Symbol of Glory," and other works, I am warranted in saying that there was a time when Christianity was distinctively alluded to in the lodge; but at the same time the Bible was not even used for obligating candidates. The three lights were also variously explained—thus: "The three windows in a cathedral," "the sun, Master, and square," and the "Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

About or before 1730 the Bible, square, and compasses were alluded to; but the "great lights" were entirely omitted (Steinbrenner, p. 148-9). According to Oliver, Martin Clare, about 1732, revised the ritual, and first introduced quotations from the Old and New Testament. The old rituals were no doubt in conflict with the broad principles of universality laid down in the charges. The substitution of the Bible as the "Great Light" for that of the Trinity was not exactly "the universal religion," but was at least "the religion in which all (at that time) agreed." "The Bible," was neither offensive to the conscience of the Jew or Christian, to Trinitarians or Unitarians, but dove-tailed alike with the opinions of all. There are some, however, who, "if you give them an inch will take an ell;" and they have repeatedly been trying to make the presence of the Bible an excuse for Christianizing Masonry. Nor was the Bible the only cause of sectarian inroads into Masonry, the Grand Lodge in 1717 was organised on the Baptist's Day. Zealots afterwards made it obligatory on Masons to observe as Masonic festivals the days of both the Baptist and the Evangelist, the two saints which are not mentioned in any of the old charters, and which even Anderson, though he made every prominent man from Adam down to Herod, Rabis, Shammai, and Hillel, &c., into Grand Masters and Grand Wardens, never mentioned the Saints John as Grand Patrons, Grand Masters or even as Masons. Later scribblers, however, turned the two saints into full-pledged Masons with all the Masonic honours attached. The simple truth probably is: the Masons met on the Baptist's Day, because the custom in the middle ages was for the working people to enjoy themselves on that day. In Hone's "Year Book" (p. 985-6), Bro. Hughan may find an account of a turn-out in procession by "The brethren and sisters" on Saint John's Day. In Hone's "Every Day Book" (vol. ii., page 870), an article headed "Cow Mass" describes a similar scene to have taken place in 1789 in Dunkirk. It was the custom, not of Masons only, to walk in procession on the 24th of June, but of the guilds in general; and even now the Sheriff of London is elected by the Livery on Midsummer's Day. This simple coincidence—this meeting on St. John's Day—afterwards gave rise to the wildest speculations. Ramsay discovered through that the connection of Masons with Knight Templars, which caused Christian degrees to be manipulated by the thousand. Bro. Mackey, of Charleston, South Carolina, attributes the Masonic observance of that day to the Masonic philosophers of antiquity observing the soltices. So first with the introduction of saints, and next of the Bible, not only Masonic history became corrupted, but the ritual also kept pace with the corruption. Hutchinson's imagination ran wild with the idea that the third degree was Christian; Dunckerly introduced the saints as Masonic parallels; Oliver almost swore that he believed in the Saint John's legend. Bro. Paton pins his faith on Oliver's authority, and writes an article to THE FREEMASON on the connection of St. John the Evangelist with Masonry; and even the clear-sighted Bro. Hughan is led astray by supposing that because the bricklayers of old had to be Christians, we therefore must also somehow acknowledge Christianity in our lodges. I shall not enter into the corruptions of the Masonic idea prevailing in Prussia, Sweden, and Denmark, nor will I enlarge on the double-dealing practice of Scotland and America; but most state that in 1813 the Grand Lodge of England saw the labyrinth of inconsistency into which Masonry was then plunged, and wisely made necessary alterations. Saints ceased to be Masonic patrons, &c., and other improvements were made. The Bible was however left in the lodge for the very same reason that it was first introduced, viz., because no one objected to it; quotations from or allusions to the Bible were permitted, because no one objected to them. Be it remembered that in 1813 the "Encyclopædia Britannica" of that day denounced as infidels those who believed the world to be older than 6000 years. Professors in Oxford taught the same thing then. Now, however, both the "Encyclopædia" and the Oxford professors deny the Biblical account of the creation. This part of the Bible ceased to be the universal belief even in England. The long lecture of the "Six Days," with the Miltonian poetry of "Grace in her step and heaven in her eye," was very suitable for 1813, but is not suitable for the ideas of 1871; and if the Grand Lodge of England does not wish to drive the best educated and scientific professors from active participation in the Masonic work, that part ought better to be omitted.

But I beg to remind our brother of another fact. The Duke of Sussex initiated a Mahommedan, and for obvious reasons the Bible was removed and the Koran substituted. Here, then, for three successive lodge meetings the lodge was without a Bible; but will any one deny that the lodge then was just, perfect, and regular? Now, if the lodge could then be perfect without a Bible, why can it not always be so? Ah! but the Koran was there. But is not the Book of Constitutions of more importance to Bro. Hughan than the Koran? On the same occasion, the Duke could not have exhorted the candidate to put his faith in the Bible, nor could he have alluded in similar strains to the Koran, hence the ceremony must have been altered, so as to give no offence to either Christian or Mahommedan. But we will now suppose that the said Mahommedan brother was afterwards elected Master of the lodge, would any one insist when initiating a Christian Candidate for the Mahommedan W.M. to exhort the said candidate to believe in the Bible? Most assuredly not. Now, we will go still further, and suppose that one or more Mahommedan brethren object to the Bible being in the lodge—such a case may really occur in those Provincial Grand Lodges under the Grand Lodge of England existing in Turkey and East Indies—the Christians, on the other hand, would for similar reasons object to the Koran. Now, is it not better to remove both than to break up the harmony of the lodge? And if Masons are faithful to their own professions and their own charges, they need no more be accused of disbelief in the Bible, because they consent to its removal, than Anderson and Desaguliers could be charged with anti-Trinitarianism because they allowed the Trinity to be ignored in the lodge. And now comes the question: If we admit disbelievers in the inspiration of the Bible, why should we favour the conscience of a Mahommedan and despise that of a Deist? Must a Deist naturally be a bad man? Can he not be admitted into Masonry; or does our "charity to all mankind" stop with the believer with God with Mahomet, and reject the believer in God without Mahomet? These are my ideas of universality. If Anderson's charges mean anything, they mean just what they say: Masonry is "the religion in which all agree," and when they cease to agree concession must be made to the progressive change of religious ideas, which takes place whether we like it or not. In that sense only the metaphor can be realised. "Our lodge is as long as from east to west, as broad as from north to south," &c., and the Masonic teaching of charity to all mankind attains its true significance and become a reality instead of a sham.

In conclusion, I beg to state that I believe that if we are guided by the moral precepts contained in the Bible, we cannot materially err, and have no conscientious objection to the presence of the Bible in the lodge; but the moral precepts taught in the Bible would make me feel ashamed at sanctioning or even tolerating the Fesuitism practiced in Scotch and American lodges, and would induce me to sanction and even advocate the removal of the Bible if its presence is made an excuse for violating justice, "even in its most minute point." I have therefore a right to caution and inform those who are constantly clamoring for the Bible, that whereas the Bible can only remain in the lodge as long as it continues to be "the religion in which all agree," and whereas opinions are gradually changing, even among the highest dignitaries of the Church, regarding the inspiration of this or that part of the Bible. It is therefore the duty of every just-minded brother to abstain in the lodge or in Masonic assemblies from ventilating certain doctrines or details drawn from the Bible in which all do not agree. And if these men should persist in their unmasonic conduct, it must eventually terminate either in a disrapture or in an entire change in the whole Masonic system. We must either expunge from the charges and ritual all allusions to Masonic universality, or the very firm believers in the Bible, but who also believe that God is more pleased with those who practice the moral teaching thereof than with the mere clamorers who violate them. Yea, even these—even Bro. Hughan himself—may yet be driven to advocate the removal of the Bible; and they could no more be blamed or accused of what is called infidelity than Messrs. Anderson and Desaguliers could be charged with anti-Trinitarianism, because they sanctioned the ignoring of the dogma of the Trinity in Masonic assemblies.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Lodge of Emulation, No. 21.—The regular meeting of this old and well-known lodge was held at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on Monday, the 20th instant. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Thomas Davies Sewell, supported by his officers and Past Masters. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. Bro. George James Hillstead (169) was admitted a joining member, and Bros. J. C. Button and J. W. G. Brüggmann were passed to the second degree. The work was beautifully rendered by the W.M. The ballot was unanimous in favour of the W.M. being the Grand Steward to represent the lodge at the Grand Festival, and Bros. T. S. Howell and F. W. Blake were elected absent members. The lodge was then closed, and the usual superior banquet and dessert followed. Amongst the visitors we noticed Bros. Dr. T. S. Barringer, P. Prov. S.G.W. Herts; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; Littell, P.M. 860; &c.

Lodge of Justice, No. 147.—On Wednesday, the 8th inst., at the White Swan Tavern, Deptford, this old lodge held its usual meeting. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. James Whiffen, and there were present during the evening: Bros. H. Sadler, S.W.; H. Bartlett, J.W.; J. Lightfoot, P.M., Treas.; G. Chapman, P.M., Sec.; C. G. Dille, S.D.; J. Roper, J.D.; G. Bolton, J. Bavin, J. Cavell, R. G. Batt, J. Percival, and N. Wingfield, P.M.'s; F. Golding Shelton, C. Porter, Guest, Church, &c. Visitors: Bros. T. Whiffen, 548; M. J. Simmons, 871; &c. The work (done in an admirable manner by Bro. J. Percival, I.P.M.) was passing Bro. Tyler to the second degree, and initiating Mr. John Partington into Freemasonry, after which the W.M. resumed the chair and closed the lodge.

Universal Lodge, No. 181.—The usual monthly meeting of this ancient lodge took place on Thursday, the 16th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Bro. Alfred Layton, W.M., assisted by Bros. Donne, S.W.; Read, J.W.; Stanton, S.D.; Norfolk, J.D.; Drew Wood, I.G.; and Beale, Sec. The minutes of the previous lodge were read and confirmed. Bros. E. J. Layton, Lilly, Smith, and Hawkins were passed to the degree of F.C. Bro. Drummond, after examination, was raised to the sublime degree of M.M., the ceremony being well performed by the W.M. It having been announced that Bro. D. Wood had consented to stand as Steward for the Boys' School, and Bro. Donne for the Girls' School, the lodge voted from its charity fund two donations of £5 5s. to be added to each Steward's list—a similar sum having been added to the W.M.'s list on the occasion of his having served the office of Steward for the Aged Freemasons' Institution. All business being completed, the members partook of an excellent banquet at the Tavern. The W.M. proposed "The Health of the Queen," which was drunk in the toast of "The Crown and Craft."—"The W.M.G.M. and the Grand Officers" was then proposed, the W.M. observing that, as good Masons, our allegiance, next to that to the sovereign of the realm, is always given to the head ruler of Freemasonry, the Grand Master. Our lodges would never have been kept in such good order had they not been cared for and nourished by Grand Lodge and the eminent body of P.M.'s by whom it is largely composed.—The toast of "The Visitors" was ably replied to by Bros. Low, P.M. 3, and Yates, 101.—Bro. the Rev. W. T. Jones proposed "The Health of the W.M.," who, in reply said: In offering you my thanks, I own the position, which, by your suffrage, I now fill, has long been my aim; and I have diligently worked all minor offices having it in view. And yet I felt so much the importance of that position that, when the time came to occupy this chair, I confess I should have hesitated to occupy it had I not known that the hand of brotherly friendship was always extended to assist and encourage every earnest Mason; and I looked back upon a long line of eminent P.M.'s of this lodge on whom I could rely as a friend for help and assistance, if required.—The toast of "The P.M.'s" was replied to by Bro. Beale, P.M. and Sec., who is also father of the lodge. The toast of "The Officers" brought the meeting to a conclusion.

Nelson Lodge, No. 700.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, on Wednesday, the 15th inst., presided over by their respected W.M., Bro. W. D. May, assisted by his P.M. and officers. The lodge was opened in due form, and with solemn prayer. The minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed. The Treasurer's account was also read, and being in a very satisfactory state, was approved. Mr. J. Drake was duly initiated; Bros. Sadler, Lovelock, and Waters were passed to the second degree; and Bro. Chambers was raised to the third. The resignation of a brother was tendered and received, and a gentleman was proposed for initiation. All Masonic business having ended, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Freemasons' Hotel, where they enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

Cosmopolitan Lodge, No. 917.—This flourishing lodge met on Tuesday, the 14th inst., at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. Bro. S. Basilico, W.M., presided, and there were also present: Bros. G. F. Gibson, J.W.; J. B. Deporter, P.M., Treas.; L. Stean, P.M., Sec.; J. Cooke, S.D.; F. Lovell Keays, J.D.; F. W. Jones, I.G.; E. J. Stillwell, P.M.; D. Anderson; &c. The lodge was opened in due form, the minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed, and the W.M., in an able manner, initiated separately Messrs. Taylor and Lewis into the Order. Bro. L. Stean, in his usual finished style, raised Bro. D. Anderson to the third degree. Bro. S. Basilico, W.M., having resumed the chair, and closed the lodge, the usual superior banquet and dessert followed.

Leigh Lodge, No. 957.—At the Freemasons' Hall, on Monday, the 13th inst., this prosperous lodge held its usual monthly meeting, Bro. James Frost Creswick, W.M., in the chair. He was supported by Bros. F. Harvey, S.W.; W. Mitchell, J.W.; E. L. Cockerell, P.M., Treas.; C. A. Cottebrune, P.M., Sec.; C. Keeso, S.D.; J. Weddell, J.D.; J. Diprose, I.G.; M. Ederheim, I.P.M., D.C.; R. H. Whiteman, P.M.; E. Hampden, J. C. F. Wootton, F. Mosely, J. Hanks, &c. The visitors were: Bros. F. Binckes, P.G.S.; W. Pound, P.M. 16; G. F. Henly, 186; E. Lewis, 198; L. Pam, 482; P. Berghem, 826; F. Walters, W.M. 1309; C. Braid, W.M. 1196; &c. The lodge was opened, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The W.M. raised Bros. J. C. F. Wootton and A. Hirschfield to the third degree, and initiated separately Messrs. James Collins, Craven, Proctor, Cobham, and Arthur Wootton into Freemasonry—all being pleased and gratified at the very impressive and painstaking manner in which the work was given from the chair. The lodge was then closed, and a first-class banquet was served, Bro. M. Ederheim, P.M., D.C., being indefatigable in his exertions to make every one comfortable. The cloth having been withdrawn, the usual toasts were given, the pleasures of the evening being materially increased by the superior singing of the W.M., Bro. Henly, and others. Bro. M. Ederheim gave some solos on the violin, which pleased all, and proved how proficient he is as a musician. Bro. C. Braid played on the piano. Altogether the evening was most enjoyably and well spent.

PROVINCIAL.

RINGWOOD, HANTS.—Lodge of Unity, No. 132.—The ordinary meeting of this lodge was held on the 9th inst. The lodge having been duly opened by the W.M., the ballot was taken for Messrs. F. Ayles and J. Chiswell, which, proving unanimous, the candidates were duly initiated by Bro. Fletcher, P.M. 622. The charge was delivered by Bro. Garrett Horder, and the lecture was given by Bro. Reade, S.W. A banquet afterwards took place with the usual Masonic toasts. The Lodge voted five guineas to the Boys' School, to be added to Bro. Rebbeck's list.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Lodge, No. 200.—This lodge held its regular meeting in the Masonic Hall, Globe-street, on Wednesday, the 15th inst. The W.M., Bro. David Fletcher, was at his post supported by his officers, and Bros. R. H. Peacock, W. Peacock, J. F. Spurr, W. F. Rooke, and H. A. Williamson, P.M.'s, with a goodly number of members. After the confirmation of the minutes, a ballot took place for three gentlemen for initiation, the same proving unanimous, they were separately admitted and initiated in due form. One brother was raised to the 2nd degree, and one raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. The new organ, a very good one, was used during the evening with excellent effect. One gentleman was proposed for initiation at the next meeting. It was also proposed and agreed, that the annual Masonic concert, in aid of the charities, take place during the forthcoming spring. The lodge was now closed in due form, and the brethren retired to refreshment; the usual toasts were given and responded to, that of the W.M. being drunk with all honours, and Bro. Fletcher acknowledged the compliment in very courteous and fraternal language. The W.M., in giving "The Newly Initiated," coupling with it the name of Bro. Powley, the son of an esteemed Mason, said it was always one of the most pleasing duties to admit amongst us men of well-known integrity and good social standing. Bro. Powley, in returning thanks, stated that he should strive to be an efficient Mason, that he had for some time made up his mind to join the Old Globe, and from what he had seen that evening he was very much pleased; he sincerely hoped to be a useful member of the order, and begged to thank the brethren for having admitted him amongst them. At low twelve the brethren retired after spending a most agreeable evening.

BRIGHTON.—Royal York Lodge, No. 315.—This lodge met on Tuesday, the 7th inst., at the Royal Pavilion; Bro. James Curtis, W.M., presiding. The business of the evening consisted in raising, to the third degree, Bro. Packham, and this ceremony was most impressively performed by the W.M. Bro. Stride, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M. for the year ensuing. Bro. Hugh Saunders, P.M., P.P.G.D. Sussex, was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. W. Awcock, Tyler. The General Purposes Committee brought up the annual statement of accounts, which showed the lodge to be in a very prosperous condition, and also that during the past year much had been done for the Masonic charities; indeed in this respect, both from the lodge funds and from the brethren generally, this lodge stands pre-eminent in the province of Sussex, for its noble support of the charities, the members evidently believing that "It helps him who gives as well as him who receives." During the evening the brethren present were: Bros. J. Curtis, W.M.; Stride, S.W.; D. Cunningham, J.W.; Sandeman, S.D.; Nell, I.G.; Eberall, Sec.; Robinson, P.M.; W. Hudson, P.M., P.P.G.D. Sussex; Marchant, P.M., P.G.A.D. of C. Sussex; W. Bennett; W. Challen, P.M. 315, 1141, P.P.G.S.B. Sussex; Emery, G. R. Lockyer, Slatter. Visitors: Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.M. 73, &c., &c. The installation meeting of the lodge will be held on Tuesday, 7th March, when a very large gathering is expected to do honour to the new W.M., who is most widely known and highly respected.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—A monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall on Thursday, the 16th inst. Owing to an accident, the W.M. was unable to be present, and the chair was occupied by the I.P.M., Bro. Geo. Toller, jun., the Prov. G.M. and a goodly number of members and visitors being present. Amongst the latter, in addition to the W.M. and several members of St. John's Lodge, were Bro. John Pemberton, W.M. of the Neptune Lodge, No. 1264, Liverpool, and Bro. White, of Ballymena, Ireland. Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.M. 131, Truro, and Prov. G. Sec. for Cornwall, was, on ballot, unanimously elected an honorary member, and Dr. George Clifton, of Leicester, and Mr. Reuben Vincent Barrow, of The Grange, Bermondsey (he being generally in Leicestershire), as candidates for initiation; the former of those gentlemen was then initiated by the Prov. G.M., and the latter by Bro. Toller, I.P.M., assisted by Bro. Johnson, P.M. and P.P.G.O., on the organ. A candidate for the second degree was absent. Business being concluded, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

KENT.—Sydney Lodge, No. 829.—This excellent working lodge held its annual meeting at the Black Horse, Sidcup, on the 9th inst. Bro. T. Smith, W.M., presided, assisted by the Past Masters and officers. The lodge was duly opened, and the minutes of the former meetings read and unanimously confirmed. The ballot was taken for two gentlemen for initiation, also for a joining member, which proved unanimous in their favour. Mr. Strong being in attendance, was duly received into Freemasonry. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Paget, P.M., presented Bro. W. A. Thompson to Bro. Smith to receive from him the benefit of installation, which ceremony was proceeded with, the lodge being opened in the several degrees. Bro. Thompson having been placed in the chair of K.S. according to ancient custom, was proclaimed and saluted accordingly. He was then pleased to appoint the following brethren officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Borer, S.W.; Pot- tier, J.W.; Henderson, P.M., Sec.; Hamelton, S.D.; Christian, J.D.; Gates, I.G.; Hastings, D.C.; Gearing, W.S.; Peen, Tyler, who, with Bro. G. Snow, re-elected Treasurer, were invested with their collars, &c., by the Installing Master, Bro. Smith, who then delivered in a very impressive manner the usual addresses, which closed the installation ceremony. Messrs. A. Lubbeck and Dr. Chatterton, candidates for initiation, were duly received into the first degree of Freemasonry. The W.M. then stated that he had a very pleasing duty to perform, which was to present to Bro. Smith, P.M., the P.M.'s jewel voted to him at the last meeting of the lodge for the very efficient manner he performed his duties as W.M. for the past year. Bro. Smith acknowledged the gift in very suitable terms. He was also presented by Bro. Hastings with a jewel from those brethren who he had had the honour of initiating during his year of office; for which he also expressed his thanks, at the same time trusting they might be spared to enjoy each other's society for years. Nothing further being offered for the good of Freemasonry, the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. Watkins, the worthy host. After the cloth was removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, when the brethren separated in perfect harmony, after enjoying a very pleasant evening. The Visitors were Bros. Russell, P.M. 77; Dr. Grey, 13, 700; Pook, P.M. 193; Tinkler, W.M. 299; Shrubsole, P.M. 503; Sisley, P.M. 700, 1076; Richards, 79; Cleaver, P.M. 186; Tongue, P.M. 913; Wain, 913; Knight, S.W. 1107; Sherwin, Org. 1107; and several others.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—Lodge of Philanthropy, No. 940.—We are glad to observe that in this locality Freemasonry is flourishing, and this is particularly the case with the Lodge of Philanthropy, for which, thanks to the careful and zealous manner in which its interests are watched over by the officials whose exertions towards maintaining a high standard of Masonic excellence are worthy of high praise. The ancient borough of Stockton, which stands on the banks of the Tees, boasts two lodges—the Tees, No. 509, held at the Mason's Lodge Room, Masons' Court, and the one whose name precedes this notice. The former was removed hither from the Metropolis many years ago, but the latter has been in existence only about eight years, yet in point of numbers, influence, and position, may, without arrogance, claim the lead. Within the last year or two it has raised a new hall, which, for extent, appearance, and adaptability, is a credit to the Fraternity, and a noble tribute to the zeal of its originators. Since the new hall was, a few months ago, dedicated to Masonic purposes, a club has been commenced, and we are happy to say is well patronised; a lodge of instruction opened, and a lodge of Mark Masons (the Percy Lodge) instituted. The celebration of the annual festival and installation of W.M. took place on Thursday, the 16th inst. The lodge was opened at one o'clock, when there was attendance of the brethren, including Bros. A. C. Knowles, P.M., P.P.S.G.D.; W. Best, P.M., Past Provincial Grand J.W.; E. Cass, P.M.; J. H. Jackson, P.M., P.P.S.G.D.; Thos. Nelson, P.M., P.P.S.G.D., &c. After some formal business had been disposed, to two candidates (Messrs. W. Ashton and J. Fowler) were balloted for, and being elected were duly initiated. The lodge then proceeded to the installation of Bro. John Trotter as W.M. for the ensuing year, the ceremony being performed in an highly impressive manner by Bro. Anthony Crasby Knowles, who was the first W.M. of the lodge, and to whom the lodge is deeply indebted for the attention and devotion he has unceasingly shown for its true interests. The following officers were then appointed and invested:—Bros. J. F. Mann, S.W.; J. Broome, J.W.; J. Huntan, Treas.; I. H. Hant, Sec.; Guy Herbert, S.D.; Thos. Walton, J.D.; J. Usher, W. J. Watson, R. S. Happer and R. Dickenson, Stewards; J. Inverhalm, Tyler. At the close of the lodge, the brethren sat down in the banqueting-hall to an excellent repast. The usual loyal, Masonic, and complimentary toasts were drunk, interspersed with some capital vocalism by various members of the company. The proceedings were throughout of a most enjoyable character.

WEST INDIES.

Turk's Islands Forth Lodge, No. 647.—The regular annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, the 27th ult.—St. John the Evangelist's Day—the business being the installation of Bro. the Hon. C. R. Hinson, M.L.C., P.M., S.W., and W.M.—elect for the ensuing year. There was a goodly number of brethren and visitors present to do honour to the occasion, and after installation the W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers for the year, viz.: Bros. W. C. Moxey, I.P.M.; John T. Astwood, S.W.; James Maclean, J.W.; Rev. Isaac Pegg, M.A., Chap.; J. W. Darrell, Treas.; Jos. A. Gardiner, Sec. (re-appointed); J. W. Wilbourn, S.D.; M. Victoria, J.D.; Henry Kennedy, I.G.; Jas. Astwood and T. J. Godet, Stewards (re-appointed); A. Francis, S.B., Tyler. Bro. Secretary having read a dispensation from Grand Lodge, authorizing the formation of public processions, &c., the lodge was called off, formed in procession, and marched to the Baptist church, where the newly-appointed Chaplain delivered a most excellent and impressive discourse from 2nd chap. Luke, 14 verse; after which the brethren returned to their hall, closed the lodge down in due form with the usual solemnities, and separated, but again met together at a later hour and spent a most enjoyable evening.

ROYAL ARCH.

WEST LANCASHIRE.—Rowley Chapter, No. 1051.—The regular meeting of this chapter was held at the Masonic Rooms Athenæum, Lancaster, on the 20th inst. There were present: Comps. Bagnall, M.E.Z.; Dr. Moore, P.Z. as H.; Hall, J.; Mercer, E.; Whimpray, N.; Simpson, P.S.; Barker, Treas.; W. Hall, W. Heald, R. Taylor, J. Watson. The chapter was opened, and general business transacted. The ballot was taken for two brethren as candidates for exaltation, who were unanimously elected. The Companions then proceeded to the election of the Principals and Officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows: Comps. T. Mason, Z; Hall, H.; Mercer, J.; Whimpray, E.; James M. Moore, N.; W. Barker, Treas.; E. Simpson, P.; R. Taylor, Janitor. The installations will take place at the end of March next, and will be conducted by Comp. J. D. Moore, P.Z.

MARK MASONRY.

Carnarvon Lodge, No. 119.—This lodge was consecrated by the very Worshipful Bro. Capt. F. C. Irwin (Past Grand Master Overseer), Deputy Prov. G. Mark Master-designate of Somerset, on Thursday, the 19th inst., at the White Hart, Brislington. There was a good muster of brethren present, and the ceremony was performed by Bro. Irwin in a most admirable manner, for which he received a unanimous vote of thanks. At the conclusion of the consecration ceremony, a lodge of Installed Masters was opened, and Bro. Irwin installed Bro. Dr. Samuel Bryant as the first W.M. of this new lodge. On the brethren being readmitted, they gave the customary salute, and the W.M. appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. E. T. Inskip, S.W.; W. S. Gillard, J.W.; Rev. R. H. Briggsby, Chaplain; J. Macfarelan, S.O.; R. C. Else, J.O.; A. W. Butter, S.D.; Major J. W. Vizard, J.D.; C. H. Whereat, I.G.; F. G. Irwin, Treas.; B. Cox, Sec. A code of by-laws was approved, and Bro. Gillard presented a petition for a new lodge, to be held at Wincanton, asking this lodge to recommend the same, which was unanimously approved. Votes of thanks were given to the visiting brethren, and several propositions for advancement at the next meeting were made, after which the W.M. closed the lodge in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet, which had been provided by Host Marks. On the removal of the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proposed the health of the G.M. Bro. Portal, and the P.G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.P.G.M.-designate, Bro. Irvine, together with the various toasts of the evening in his terse but telling style, making him the right man in the right place.

ROYAL ARK MASONRY.

A meeting of the brethren of the order was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, W.C., on Monday, the 20th inst. A special lodge was opened, according to ancient custom and with solemn prayer, for the purpose of elevating candidates, by Bro. Morton Edwards, G.C., assisted by Bros. M. Emanuel, as J.; Capt. T. B. Payne, as S.; A. D. Loewenstark, as Deacon; M. A. Loewenstark, G.S., as acting Scribe. Visitor: Bro. Nickelson, Grand Treasurer of the Royal Ark Mariners, America. The following brethren were properly prepared and elevated in due form to the ancient and hon. degree of a Royal Ark Mariner:—Bros. John Coles Fourdrinier, P.G. Steward, P.P.G.S.W. Shropshire, P.Z., P.M. Antiquity, No. 2; John Lee, Grand Masters Lodge, No. 1; H. W. Binckes, Kent Mark Lodge; F. W. Koch, Thistle Mark Lodge. Bro. Capt. Nicholson gave, for the information of the brethren, some illustrations of the manner in which this degree is worked in America—especially the explanation of the three points and the steps—which was listened to with great interest, and gave universal satisfaction. The rest of the working appeared to be nearly identical, which, considering that this is the first time, at any rate since the order has been re-organised here, that the working of the two countries, England and America, have been compared, is very satisfactory, and shows the care that has been taken by the authorities of the order not to lose sight of the landmarks, and to restore, without impairing, the beauty of the ceremonies of this degree of Universal Masonry. On the retiring of some of the brethren, an assemblage of Commanders was then duly formed, and Bros. J. B. Payne and M. Emanuel were enthroned as Commanders, and expressed themselves very pleased with the ceremony which was performed by Bro. Morton Edwards, G.C., assisted by Bros. A. D. Loewenstark and Nickelson. The assembly of Commanders was then closed, the brethren re-admitted, who saluted the newly-enthroned Commanders, and this special lodge of Royal Ark Mariners adjourned till Monday, the 27th, when there will be another meeting for the purpose of elevating candidates, and conferring the degree of Commander at 7 o'clock at Masons' Hall, Masons' Avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Mount Calvary Encampment.—An emergency meeting of this encampment was held at Freemasons' Tavern, on the 13th inst., for the purpose of installing Comp. E. H. G. Dalton as a Knight of the Order, prior to his leaving England for Demerara. E. Sir Kt. Binckes presided as E.C., supported by Sir Kts. Rosenthal, Dewar, Paas, Roebuck, Baxter, Trewatha, &c. The ceremony was exceedingly well rendered, and gave great satisfaction to the newly-installed companion. The encampment was then closed.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

METROPOLITAN.

Mount Calvary Chapter Rose Croix H.R.D.M.—A meeting of this chapter was held on the 10th inst., at Freemasons' Tavern, and among the brethren present we noticed the esteemed M.W.S., Bro. D. M. Dewar; Bros. W. Paas, P.M.W.S.; G. Cockle, 30°, H.P.; F. Binckes, 30°, F.G.; S. Rosenthal, 33°, S.G.; J. Hervey, 30°; W. Hyde Pullen, 33°; J. Stohwasser, W. Roebuck, R. W. Little, W. Fish, C. J. Morgan, and E. Kimber. There was also one visitor. An important matter was discussed by the members, and a decision arrived at, after which the chapter was closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet. Great amusement was caused, as usual, by the versatile talents of Bro. Kimber, and the evening was spent in a most pleasant manner by all present.

PROVINCIAL.

Rochdale Chapter.—The annual convocation of this chapter was held in the Masonic Rooms, Rochdale, on Saturday last, the 18th inst., Bro. William Roberts, P.M.W. Sov., in the chair, in the unavoidable absence of the Most Wise Sov. Bro. John Barker. The chapter was opened at 3.30, in the presence of illustrious and distinguished princes of the order, who honoured the chapter by accepting an invitation to be present. The minutes of the previous convocation having been read and confirmed, the muster-roll called, and other business transacted, Bro. John Fothergill, Red Cross Knight of Babylon and Knight of the East and West, was received, regularly exalted, and admitted a member of the Order according to ancient rites and ceremonies. After the ceremony, which was very efficiently performed by the respective officers, Bro. Prince, 1st Gen., was installed M.W.S. of the chapter for the ensuing twelve months, and appointed as his officers the following: Bros. Richard Hankinson, H.P.; James Holroyd, 1st Gen.; William Ashworth, 2nd Gen.; Robert Butterworth, Grand Marshal; John Fothergill, Raphael; Robert Whitworth, Chancellor; William Roberts, P.M.W.S., Herald; William Briggs, Organist; and Benjamin Toulson, Captain of Guard. The ceremony being ended, the convocation was closed, after having disposed of several matters which had been brought before the members, when several members formed themselves into a convocation of the Holy Order of K.H., &c.

INAGURATION OF THE ROCHDALE CHAPTER.

The inaugural ceremony of this convocation was held in the Masonic Rooms, Ann-street, Rochdale, on Saturday last, the 18th inst. The convocation was formed at 6.30, when the Chancellor pro tem. read a letter that he had received, dated "33, Golden-square, London, Feb. 16th," and signed "J. M. P. Montagu, 33°, Gd. Sec. Gen.," also several letters and telegrams that had been sent to him and other brethren in reference thereto. He also read a circular which had been very freely circulated throughout the country, of which the following is a

COPY.

33, Golden-square, London, Feb. 16th, 1871.
Dear Sir and Brother,—The following circular, purporting to call a convocation to be held on Saturday, the 18th inst., for the purpose of conferring the degrees of Knight Kadosh 30th and 32nd, having just reached us,

Masonic Temple, Ann-street, Rochdale,
Feb. 11th, 1871.

Holy Order of Kadosh and 30th and 32nd degrees,

Dear Sir Knight,—By command of the Royal Commander of the Holy Order of Kadosh and 30th and 32nd Degrees, a convocation will be held in the above Temple on Saturday next, the 18th inst., at six o'clock prompt, to create all Sir Knights who may present themselves, and are found worthy of that distinction.

We shall be happy to receive your name as a candidate on this occasion.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM ASHWORTH.

Chancellor pro tem.

All letters to be addressed 21, Ann-street.

We think it our duty to warn you against this illegal attempt to bestow degrees that we alone have a right to grant, according to our warrant and the Statutes of the A. and A. Rite (see Ancient Constitution), and to remind you that according to your O.B. you cannot even visit this or any other illegal body.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

J. M. MONTAGUE, 33°

G. Sec. Gen.

It was then agreed unanimously to proceed with the ceremony. The Supreme Grand Council having no authority whatever to assume to themselves alone the right to grant or confer these degrees, or to interfere with those who have had these rites handed down to them as having been conferred from time immemorial, the ceremony was therefore proceeded with, and several members of the Order of Rose Croix, &c., duly admitted by ancient rites and ceremonies to the degrees, &c.

The officers were then appointed, invested, and installed for the ensuing twelve months, and the chapter was closed in due form, and with hearty good wishes for the Supreme Grand Council and other sister chapters.

The brethren afterwards adjourned to a banquet, provided by Bro. Butterworth, of the Golden Fleece Hotel, in his usual richeché style, which was most heartily discussed and enjoyed. The cloth having been removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly proposed and responded to by the several brethren. The visitors and the sister chapters were severally responded to by the distinguished visitors.

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE fifteen sections will be worked on Thursday evening, March 2nd, at the Fidelity Lodge of Instruction, which now meets at the "Goat and Compasses," corner of Fitzroy-street, Euston-road. Bro. T. A. Adams, P.M., P.Z., P.G.P., will take the chair. A large muster of the brethren is anticipated—the room in which the Lodge of Instruction is held being capable of accommodating at least seventy.

THE following conclaves of the Red Cross Order have been recently established:—Orient Conclave, No. 45, Bloomsbury, Pennsylvania, Sir Kt. Christian Frederick Knapp, M.P.S.; Constantine Conclave, No. 46, Reading, Pennsylvania, Sir Kt. John C. A. Hoffeditz, M.P.S.; Trinity Conclave, No. 47, Harrisbury, Pennsylvania, Sir Kt. William H. Egle, M.D., M.P.S.; Mary Conclave, No. 48, Allentown, Pennsylvania, Sir Kt. Dewees J. Martin, M.P.S.; and the Macdonald Conclave, No. 49, Millbrook, Ontario, Canada, Sir Kt. James Might, M.P.S. The order is also about to be introduced into the Southern States of America.

WE are requested to state that at the present time there is only one body of Royal Ark Mariners in complete working order, and that is the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners, which up to this date has chartered twelve lodges, and receiving fresh applications every week, and already issued warrants and certificates both in England and abroad, while the Grand Mark Lodge has not even conferred the degree upon a single brother. Negotiations are pending between the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners and the Mark Grand Lodge, with a view to attaching the Royal Ark Mariner to the Mark Degree much in the same way as the Royal Arch is to the Craft. The G. Commander has appointed Bro. Loewenstark as Grand Scribe, and all communications on any subject connected with the Order of Royal Ark Mariners must be addressed to him at the office, Devereux Court, Temple, W.C.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

BUSINESS to be TRANSACTED in GRAND LODGE.

THE agenda paper for the next Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge is uncommonly light, and the subjects to be considered will not, we imagine, lead to any protracted discussion. The first business to which it is necessary to allude, will be the "Election of M.W. Grand Master," and this derives interest from the fact that Lord de Grey is at the present time absent from the kingdom, as we intimated last week, and will consequently not be able to witness the hearty unanimity with which his election as Grand Master for the second time will be carried in Grand Lodge; but although the exigencies of the public service may occasionally preclude his Lordship from attending the duties of Freemasonry, we are well assured that the interests of the Fraternity will not suffer, because in Lord Carnarvon the Grand Master possesses a Deputy who can worthily represent him whenever he may be required to preside over the legislative assemblies of the Craft. The next business will be the "election," or we should say, rather, the "re-election of a Grand Treasurer," there being not the faintest scintilla of doubt that the present highly-esteemed Treasurer, Brother Samuel Tomkins, will be re-chosen by acclamation. Upon many occasions Brother Tomkins has come forward, and with ready generosity advanced large sums, when voted by Grand Lodge, to various charitable funds, without waiting for the formal confirmation of the votes; in fact, he always seems to remember the truth and efficacy of the old adage, "Bis dat qui cito dat," in cases of urgent distress and calamity.

A communication by the Grand Secretary will follow, announcing that—

"The melancholy intelligence has been received from W. Bro. N. T. W. Smalenburg, Representative at the G. Lodge of the Netherlands, of the lamented death of Her Royal Highness Princess Louisa Augusta, Consort of His Royal Highness Prince Frederick, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands.

The Prince Frederick is, we believe, one of the oldest Masons living. He has certainly been Grand Master of the Dutch Grand Lodge between fifty and sixty years, and we are doubtful whether even the Duke of Leinster, Grand Master of Ireland, long as His Grace has held that high position, can bear away the palm of seniority from the Grand Master of the Netherlands. The deceased Princess was sister to the Emperor of Germany, who, as most of our readers will remember, was profoundly affected by the intelligence of her decease.

Another announcement will be made—

"That a memorial has been presented to the M.W. Grand Master by the Lodge of Benevolence praying permission for the meetings of the Lodge of Benevolence to take place at six instead of seven o'clock as heretofore; his Lordship has been pleased to comply therewith, and has directed that on and after Wednesday, 22nd day of March next, the meetings of the Lodge of Benevolence shall take place at six o'clock."

This change will be greatly appreciated by the members of the Lodge of Benevolence, as it has frequently happened under the present system, owing sometimes to the large number of petitions to be considered, but oftener to the diffuse statements of oratorical brethren, that the working members—those who really desire to do justice to all the cases on the list—have been detained till past eleven o'clock, a pleasure scarcely to be desired, especially on a cold winter's night. The Report of the Lodge of Benevolence, with recommendations for grants to two deserving petitioners, will next be read for approval, and then follows the report of the Board of General Purposes, which, upon this occasion, is simply a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts, which seem to be in a very healthy condition—the balance in the Grand Treasurer's hands amounting to the respectable sum of £3,695 12s. 3d., and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75. The Official Auditors' report of receipts and disbursements during the past year will also be read, and thus every brother will have an opportunity of ascertaining how carefully and how well the funds of the Order are administered.

"Proposed motions" come next. The first is by Bro. Joseph Rankin Stebbing, P.G.D.: "That a subscription of fifty pounds be given towards the fund for providing a Masonic life-boat." Now, we have so strenuously advocated the cause which Bro. Stebbing proposes to assist, that it seems almost a work of supererogation to state that we most cordially support the grant of the extremely moderate sum of £50 in aid of so noble an object. The brethren will bear in mind, likewise, that the proposition no longer emanates from any impecunious individual, but from one of the most talented and respected members of the dais; and they will also remember that the present Committee of the "Masonic Life Boat Fund" have published in these columns full details of every shilling contributed in support of the movement. We know that there are "two Richmonds in the field," but both are "honourable men," and whether the money, which we feel confident will be voted by Grand Lodge, be handed over to Bro. Davis or to Bro. Carpenter, we are equally satisfied that it will eventually find its way into the coffers of the "National Life Boat Society." The Craft has given liberally to the "Sick and Wounded" Fund and other benevolent institutions to which the Franco-German war has given birth, and it cannot be possible that the claims of a charity which almost daily preserves the lives of some of our brethren will be utterly ignored by the Freemasons of England.

The second notice of motion is by Bro. John Savage, P.G.D.:—

"That at page 10 of the laws relating to the Fund of Benevolence, in law 16, after the words in the lines 9, 10, and 11, 'shall not be effectual until confirmed at the next or a subsequent meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence,' be added the words, 'except in cases of recommendations to the Grand Lodge.'"

The object of this addition is to prevent the recurrence of a very serious delay in the relief of petitioners who may be recommended to Grand Lodge for large sums of money. At present a man who has rendered eminent services to the Craft—although those services may be practically recognised by a generous grant at the Lodge of Benevolence—is nevertheless compelled to wait several months before he can obtain the money, simply because the recommendation for the amount may have been made at the monthly meeting immediately preceding the Quarterly Communication, inasmuch as it cannot be submitted to the Grand Lodge until after confirmation by the Lodge of Benevolence. Bro. Savage proposes to remedy this defect in the law, which was doubtless overlooked during the recent revision of the laws affecting the Fund of Benevolence; and we anticipate a cheerful acquiescence on the part of Grand Lodge in the amendment which he intends to submit to the meeting.

The consideration of this question will be the last subject to occupy the attention of the brethren, and it argues a very happy state of affairs when we see that there are no difficulties to be adjusted, no dissensions to be quelled, and that the great English Craft continues to advance in prosperity—its progress being unimpeded by the snares of schism, and free from the shadows of discord or discontent.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

“Hele” is a word still of common use in Sussex, and its meaning is, as stated by Bro. W. Carpenter, “to cover or hide.”

“Cowan,” I am inclined to think, means a “smith,” or worker in iron. I. Kings, vi. 7 may perhaps tend to illustrate the Masonic use of the word.

“Gow” (Gael) is a smith, and in Sir W. Scott’s “Fair Maid of Perth” we have the word as a surname.

W. DE ST. CROIX.

COWAN.

The following remarks, as showing the difference of opinion respecting this word, may not be out of place. The first is by the author of the Masonic Ritual of Freemasonry, page 69 (America 1835), who has endeavoured to explain the origin of this word, and I subjoin his words, although they are at variance with my own opinions:—“The origin of this word is French, and was written chouan, and the h was omitted in English without aspirating it, agreeably to cockney pronunciation. The Chouans were loyalists during the French revolution, and the most determined and inveterate enemies of the Charitables—Robespierre, Billaud, Varennes, Callot d’Herbois, the Duke of Orleans, and all the rest of their bloodthirsty gang. The Chouans were worse than eavesdroppers to the Masons, who originated the revolution. They were a party connected with the several parties of armed royalists, who were of course opposed to the Masons, and the most inveterate of them, the Chouans. Hence, probably, all opposers of Masons were afterwards designated by the term Chouan, pronouncing the ch like k.”

So much for that definition; and before proceeding to our next, we may notice that in the lectures used at the revival of Masonry in 1717, the following curious punishment was inflicted on a detected Cowan:—“To be placed under the eaves of the house in rainy weather till the water runs in at his shoulders and out at his shoes.” The French rather extend this punishment:—“On le met sous une gouttière une pompe ou une fontaine, jusqu’à ce qu’il soit mouillé depuis la tête jusqu’aux pieds.” Hence a listener is called an eavesdropper.

From the affair of Jephtha, an Ephraimite was termed a Cowan. In Egypt cohen was the title of a priest or prince, and a term of honour. Bryant, speaking of the Harpies, says they were priests of the sun, and as cohen was the name of a dog as well as a priest, they are termed by Apollonius “the dogs of Jove.” Now, St. John cautions the Christian brethren that “without are dogs” (κυνες), cowans, or listeners (Rev. xxii., 15); and St. Paul exhorts the Christians “to beware of dogs, because they were evil-workers (Phil. iii., 2). Now, κυνων, a dog, or evil-worker, is the Masonic cowan. The above priests, or metaphorical dogs, were also called Cercyonians, or Cer-cowans, because they were lawless in their behaviour towards strangers. I throw out this hint for the consideration of the brethren, although aware that others have adopted very different opinions on the etymology of the word.

A writer in the F. Q. R. thus explains the word. “I trace it,” says he “to the Greek verb ακουω, to hear or listen to, from which it is but parcè detorta, and we have high authority for so importing words from one language to another.

Our illustrious Brother Sir Walter Scott, makes one of his characters in “Rob Roy” say—“She does not value a cawmil mair as a cowan, and ye may tell MacCullum More that Allan Inverach said sae.”

ANCIENT AND MODERN MASONRY IN INDIA.

“Explore the rock-cut temples and monasteries of India, and then inspect the great railway works of the nineteenth century—the excavations of Adjunta and Ellora, and the excavations of the Bhore Ghaut tunnel. In both the patient labour of man—the might of the many-handed multitude—is proclaimed by gigantic results. The actual workmen—the hewers, the carvers, the diggers—were probably well-nigh the same. They wore the same clothes, they ate the same food, they toiled in the same way; perhaps they were moved by the same common impulses, knowing as little and caring as little about what they were making. But how different the directing minds—how different the languages in which the work of men’s hands addresses itself to the imagination—how different are the sentiments which they inspire! The extremes of mysticism and utilitarianism are there to be seen in striking contrast.”—From “India Ancient and Modern,” by William Simpson.

The remark about the natives of India caring little about what they were making will apply in many cases to natives of our own island just as well—e.g., I have been told by a “sculptor” that all he cared about in his work was simply to get it taken off his hands, and get the money for it. Small chance of any great artistic improvement wherever that spirit prevails or holds sway. Yet, who is to blame? W. P. B.

“ONE WHO SEEKS LIGHT.”

The following address, delivered at the anniversary meeting of the Rosicrucian Society of England, on the 1st February, 1868, by Bro. Robert Wentworth Little (S.M.), then Master-General, will give you some information on the subject:—

“Brethren,—I am penetrated with a sense of my inability to address you this evening in a manner sufficiently worthy of the solemn and august truths developed in the study of Rosicrucian philosophy; for, although our thoughts may flash bright and beautiful as sunbeams, it is but seldom that we can invest them in language of a corresponding splendour, and the kindled glory of our conceptions is therefore lost, perchance, for ever. To the fitting contemplation of our mysteries we must bring minds divested of the cares and griefs of life—unfettered by the chains of custom—and free from the storms of passion and prejudice which darken and desolate the souls of men. The grandest heights that faith reveals, the most luminous regions of thought and intellect are, however, to be attained by a steady devotion to the cause of truth, and an unwavering progress in the paths of science. In general terms we may announce that the primary object of Rosicrucianism is to elucidate the mysteries that encompass us in life, and to reverently raise the veil from those that await us in the dreaded dominions of death—looming like awful shadows through the profound abysses of the infinite and the eternal. It is by calm meditation on such ennobling themes that the soul is prepared for its wondrous destiny in the radiant future, when the celestial essence of man shall be filled with glory from the fountain-waters of light and wisdom. It is no chimera of the imagination to believe that the rolling mists of error which obscure our spiritual vision will vanish before the resistless advent of knowledge; it is no vague dream that the mind of man may be purified and perfected by an humble recognition of the power of the Supreme, and a pervading sense of His love and beneficence. To attain this object we invite our aspirants—prescribing, by certain laws, the direction of their course, and guiding them through the arcana of the unknown. By regulated steps they are led from the dawn to the meridian of day. The talismans with which we entrust them are unalterable precepts of virtue; we tell them, in the language of a great thinker, that ‘the truth of nature is a part of the truth of God—to him who does not search it out, darkness; to him who does, infinity!’ We call upon them to bear aloft the torch of hope across the night of life. We proclaim that despair must be banished from our dwelling-places, for ‘a bold heart may command anything;’ and that the lamp of reason should never be extinguished by the spectral shades of doubt. The symbols with which our neophytes are familiar, as well as those which are known only to the advanced adept, equally demonstrate the existence of an All-Powerful and All-Sustaining Being, and alike impress upon us the necessity of religious faith. Our mystic lore is evolved from the ideal of Divine philosophy, our principles are indestructible as the great universe itself. Our studies tend not to the deification of matter, but to the exaltation of reason as the principal agent in the intellectual organisation of man. Our investigations are not, however, restricted merely to the moral aspect of nature—we glean from the fields of the physical world abundant food for thought, dedicating our efforts to the service of truth, and advancing hopefully in the spheres of duty allotted to us in the actual present. This, my brethren, is the true alchemy of life; this—the magic by which we remove mountains of ignorance and vice; this—the real ‘elixir vitæ’ from the springs of light and beauty; this—the revelation of the sublimest faculties of the soul. Nourished by lofty musings and divine imaginings, the faith to which we aspire will waft our spirits into the inner circles of wisdom—yea, beyond the lampless shores of death our feeble steps shall be upheld by the mighty strength of love, and supported by the unquenchable fire of universal intelligence. Such are the elementary principles of our philosophy, and such are the results that will inevitably follow a devout adherence to our laws. Thus, in the serene tranquillity of thought the soul is unconsciously elevated above the things of earth, and in the interpretation of the mystic symbols of antiquity, its ethereal sympathies are naturally awakened.

“Follow, then, my brethren, in the track of those enlightened sages whose names are hung, like constellations in the heaven of fame, beginning with the Chaldean shepherds of old, who drew lessons from the shining stars, or with those later adepts who, adopting the theories of Platonist or Pythagorean, used numerals or geometrical figures as a medium to instruct and guide mankind in the hidden ways of truth. Through the successive developments of occult and cabalistic science, let us trace their perpetual progress—let us mount with them the mysterious ladder, and learn the doctrines of nature, and the wondrous principles that govern the material and immaterial universe. But approach not the temple of light with darkened soul or impure thought—rather would I counsel you to recede in silence than to advance incautiously to the consummation of our holy rites.

“There are many things incomprehensible to untutored minds; our impressions in youth and childhood differ considerably from those which we experience in riper manhood; and it is so with our neophytes—placed in the vestibule of knowledge—should they attempt to enter the sacred penetralia too hastily or rashly, the influence of its revelations would be unfelt, and the spirituality of its solemnities unheeded by the unprepared mind of the thoughtless aspirant. But to him unto whom is vouchsafed the 'divine afflatus'—to him who not only feels the desire to know, but possesses courage to overcome the difficulties that beset his path—to him I say, Persevere! And although at first thy course may lie through barren fields and unprofitable herbage, soon shalt thou arrive at richer pastures and diviner fruits. Let no misgivings haunt thy soul, but press onward; bear with thee, like the memorable phylactery of the ancients, an unshaken trust in that great and glorious Name, which is associated with the mystery of our regeneration; bear with thee to the shrine of truth the tribute of an humble heart and a purified perception. From the dross of sensual life eliminate the gold of intellectual existence; and from the countless systems of human learning extract the atoms of true and heavenly wisdom.

Above all, as faith is the foundation of our hope, examine closely the book of nature, and find therein the clearest evidence of the teachings contained in the unerring Book of God. Inspired by such noble aims, and directed by such majestic impulses, thy passage through the labyrinth of life shall be a march of triumph, when, unlike the Cæsars of old, the captives in thy train shall be vanquished ignorance and sin, and the laurels on thy brow shall be the unfading wreath of immortality and joy!"

SIR AND BROTHER,—On Saturday night, 18th inst., there was a meeting of the lodges in the Aberdeen province, called by circular and advertisement by order of the P.G.M., anent the report of committee for a proposed new Masonic Hall. From 60 to 70 brethren were present, and the lodge was opened in due form in the First Degree; the R.W.P.G.M., Dr. Beveridge, in the chair. I was very much surprised to see on this occasion, in open lodge, that there were not over a dozen aprons worn by the brethren, including all the office bearers? Is this a common practice in England, or in other parts of Scotland? I always thought that in open lodge every brother, without exception, had to be clothed. Was I wrong? or is this a loose way of working?

Yours fraternally,
LANDMARK.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Can you or some of your readers, who may be experienced in such matters, inform me of the proper Masonic course to pursue towards a Treasurer who, after repeated requests by the W.M., refuses or neglects to pay the Lodge Bills, or render an account of the way he has disposed of the year's funds that have been entrusted to him for such purpose? A reply through your valuable paper will greatly oblige,

Dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
A COUNTRY P.M.

MASONIC RELIEF COMMITTEE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR,—You were kind enough to insert a notice of the formation of the Leeds Relief Committee. As a proof of the usefulness of such a Committee, and as a warning to the charitably disposed brethren, allow me to call attention to the first case that came before us. I may state that we are in weekly communication with similar Societies, and will also be glad to hear from any one interested in the subject.

A foreigner, named L. G., applied to our Almoner for relief, and on looking over the Manchester report, found he had received there 45s. He was given 7s. 6d., and told to meet the Committee on Friday. Next day another report arrived from Manchester stating L. G. and a companion had been found out to be gross impostors. Singularly the Liverpool report also warned us of them, they having found them out. The Committee, of course, refused the application of L. G., and it was amusing how rapidly he disappeared on finding we had heard of him from other towns.

This shows, at once, the advantage of the Committee, for had this man gone to the W.M.'s of all the lodges in the town, he would no doubt have been well, though unworthily, relieved. As it is very clear that L. G. and his companion are going about the country, I hope your readers will be on their guard.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
J. PARKER CROSSBY, M.D.,
Hon Sec.
Masonic Hall, Leeds, Feb. 18, 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—It must be very gratifying to all true lovers of our ancient mysteries to find there has been, of late years, a wonderful advance of the science and practice of Freemasonry. Frequently do the Masonic journals chronicle the consecration of a new lodge or chapter; but pleasing as such announcements are, they lack the interest that such events as laying of a foundation-stone, or the dedication of a building to be used solely for Masonic purposes, can give. Such occurrences as the latter show a healthy state of Masonic being, and also that the brethren have sufficient faith in the cause to contribute some part of their substance towards its support. It further exhibits a commendable desire for independence and freedom from hotel control. With such recommendations the possession of a purely Masonic building is an acquisition of which the brethren of any locality may justly be proud, and on which they are to be congratulated. Most of our important towns have their Masonic Temple or Freemasons' Hall, and with such examples before us as Glasgow, which is to have "a noble Freemasons' Hall, worthy of the name and city." Bristol, Birmingham, Halifax, and others, that I could name, will it be believed that here, in this town of Liverpool, the second town in the United Kingdom, the commercial metropolis of England—I may almost say, the world—in a town with the large number of nearly 40 Masonic bodies, we have not, by any means, a hall "worthy of the name and city." True we have a Masonic Temple, such as it is, and well it is for the credit of the Craft that this "Temple" hides its diminished head in a third-rate street, down a long reach of dingy gardens, and considerably below the level of the road.

Some years ago the brethren, being wishful to free themselves from extraneous control, purchased the building and freehold of the present Temple as a nucleus for a suitable hall when time and circumstances would permit the collection of funds; meanwhile to fit the building for its new purpose, it was altered and enlarged till it became a sort of patch-work puzzle. As this house contains but one lodge room (and that on the ground floor) a good deal of ingenuity has been expended in making the engagements of the different Masonic bodies who use the hall dovetail into one another; add to this, that the other rooms, one of which is occasionally extemporized into a lodge room, are small, inconvenient, and totally inadequate to their purpose, you may naturally be surprised that amongst the number, wealth, and social position of the Fraternity here, such a disreputable state of things should be allowed to continue.

Two years ago we were congratulating ourselves on a speedy relief from our difficulties; a Building and other Committees had long had the business in hand; an elaborate and comprehensive set of plans were prepared by a well-known architect, a P.M. of one of the most influential lodges in the town and a gentleman thoroughly qualified, both by professional and Masonic knowledge to conduct the work. Estimates and quantities were drawn out, funds to a large amount promised, a bazaar arranged to be held in St. George's Hall, and in fact all was going on swimmingly; the plans were highly approved, and the cost, under £7000, thought very reasonable. But alas! that it should be said, jealousy was allowed to creep into the Councils; a certain lot of junior members of the Committee thought possibly their ideas were not received with the deference they imagined was their due, but whatever the cause they managed to pack the next meeting, and, in a very short space of time, completely upset all the previous business. To say the least, this was very shabby treatment of the older brethren, men who had been Masons longer than some of the discontented ones had been in existence. So much for what can be done by a clique. With the exception of issuing a report as to what they proposed carrying out, which was a marvel of indifferent grammar and vagueness of detail, this "select" Committee has done nothing, and we are now in precisely the same condition as before, with the exception that then there was a chance of the settlement of this important question, now there seems to be none.

"In the multitude of counsellors there is safety;" still it remains a fact "that too many cooks spoil the broth." The multitude, while comparatively united, promised a speedy settlement, split up into factions they only spoiled and wasted the opportunity.

At the present, the state of Masonic accomodation in this town is a scandal and a disgrace to the Craft, and in this respect we have certainly become a bye-word to our neighbours. Many there are amongst us who deeply feel that this is the case, but who would still gladly unite to further the good cause, if all would consent to forego jealousies and cliqueism, and so work with "that love and harmony which should at all times characterize Freemasons."

That such a desirable consummation may be attained is very earnestly to be hoped for, and meanwhile I beg leave to remain,
Yours very fraternally,
J. DEACON.

TYRANNY ON TRIAL.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Our zealous Bro. Delfraisse gave us something very good last week; but, alas! it was too good for the practices of the age. We may cite King William for trial, and even pronounce against the red-handed monster the most severe judgment; but it is well-known among the Fraternity that the executive power falls far short of what would be done by the legislative. Freemasonry, like the Established Church of the present day, is not practical enough to grapple with things as they are—it must be content to rail at a distance. It is merely a speculative thing, holding up to view a sublime system of morality; but boasting no grand conclave of living exemplars who attain to such a lofty standard. Nor can the system vaunt a power or privilege to hurl the full penalties of broken vows against dastardly delinquents, whether king or subject. In short, Freemasonry is a pretty picture, beheld by a multitude of spectators, of whom Freemasons themselves are the nearest. Grand Lodge pays almost unconditional court to princes; and while that is the case, it will naturally wink at their doings. The more noble-minded, then, must dream out the lovely dream of Freemasonry themselves, and be contented to pity those whom its beautiful emblems cannot reach, finding the needed consolation in their hearts' most solemn call.

Yours, &c.,
A. CUTHBERTSON.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES.

OLD CONCORD BALL.

It is our pleasure to record the 31st annual ball of the above lodge, which took place on Wednesday, 15th inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street. With some regret we observe the event as occurring too late for our last week's publication, the more especially do we feel disappointment as we have the happiness to notice it as the most successful and brilliant that has as yet transpired in connection with the Old Concord Lodge. Our pleasure and satisfaction is undoubtedly increased when we contemplate the laudable object of its energy and enterprise, and thus associate it with its ostensible purpose, which is to aid and assist such benevolent and charitable institutions as may at this present most deservedly claim our consideration and support. The magnificent and appropriately arranged suite of rooms were opened for the occasion, and a truly distinguished company assembled.

Opening merrily and cheerfully, with a select and well-organised band, under the control of Bro. Marriott, the dancing commenced at nine o'clock. The programme, although excellently defined, could not possibly do justice to the execution and the music, which was of the most select and popular order. The first part of the entertainment having been thus far successfully attained, an intimation that supper was waiting drew the distinguished company to their seats, and where a well arranged and sumptuous repast was provided. Then came the customary loyal toasts, after which Bro. Emmens, P.M., who was received with great applause, proposed the health of the Chairman (Bro. Holland), and in doing so, said he was sure the Chairman and Stewards were proud to see such a large and brilliant company present, and continued by referring to the object for which recreation, pleasure, and unity had been combined in perspective of the most laudable and praiseworthy result.

The Chairman then proposed in a brief, but highly amusing speech, the health of "The Ladies," which was responded to by Bro. Dott-ridge, Hon. Sec., who, upon rising, was greeted with loud and prolonged cheers, after thanking the company most appropriately for the manner in which they had received the toast, spoke in the most cogent and respectful style on behalf of the ladies.

Dancing re-commenced of the most animated character, and the ladies, who were most magnificently attired, threw a lustre on the scene which lasted until a late, or rather early, hour in the morning.

It would be impossible to say sufficient in praise of the Stewards, who were Bros. King, P.M.; Gurton, P.M.; Watson, Lawson, Masterman, and Dottridge, Hon. Sec., for the excellent arrangements made for the comforts of those present, and especially we mention Bro. Dottridge, whose anxiety and care greatly added to the enjoyment of all. Bro. Frampton fulfilled the position of M.C. in an able manner, and we must conclude by stating that the band was excellent, and the whole proceedings passed off with the entire satisfaction of all assembled.

ROBERT BURNS LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

The Annual Banquet of this old and well-known Lodge of Instruction took place on Friday evening, the 17th inst., at the Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-street, W., when the brethren sat down to an excellent dinner provided by Bro. J. Smith, the proprietor.

The banquet was under the presidency of Bro. Thos. Arnold, the W.M. of the mother lodge, and he was ably supported by Bros. Wm. Watson, P.M. 25; Welch, P.M. 25; Herbert Dicketts, P.M. 25; John Boyd, P.M., P.Z. 145; George States, P.G.S.; C. A. Long, I.P.M. and Sec.; the officers of the mother lodge, and a numerous company of brethren.

On the cloth being removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

The toast of the evening was then proposed by Bro. Wm. Watson, in his usual felicitous manner, tracing the progress of the Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, interspersing his speech with many interesting facts anent his experience as President and its chief instructor, and "Prosperity to the Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction" was drank with great enthusiasm.

The toast of "Prosperity to the Robert Burns Lodge, Root and Branch," was then proposed by Bro. C. A. Long, I.P.M., who coupled with it the name of the W.M., Bro. Thomas Arnold. This having been drank with éclat, the W.M. responded in an excellent speech.

On the Treasurer, Bro. Welch, responding to the toast of his health, he informed the brethren that the Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction stood better in respect to the Masonic charities than many mother lodges. This was received with becoming pleasure by the brethren; and the Secretary, Bro. C. A. Long, in acknowledging the high compliment paid him in the manner in which his health had been proposed and received, stated that during the five years he had held the office of Secretary handsome contributions had been made to the three Masonic charities, and that although the lodge was not a very numerous one, still the small contributions of the members, when carefully handled, did really good service to the objects that Masons hold most dear.

Bro. Grant responded to the toast of "The Visitors," of whom a goodly number were present.

The "Officers of the Lodge" having been given was suitably acknowledged by Bros. Wingham, S.W. and E. W. Long, J.W.

The toast of "The Stewards" was given and ably responded to by Bro. Herbert Dicketts, who, in well-chosen language, thanked the brethren for having so well supported the annual banquet.

The Tyler's toast closed the business of the evening, which was enlivened by songs and by some excellent music by Bro. Wingham, jun., and the brethren separated after spending a most enjoyable evening.

BRIGHTON.

The annual ball, held under the auspices of the members of the Royal York Lodge, No. 315, took place on Thursday, 26th January, in the magnificent suite of rooms at the Royal Pavilion. On the occasion the company numbered about 250, and their enjoyment was attended to by a list of stewards, comprising Bros. J. Curtis, W.M.; Stride, S.W.; Dr. Cunningham, J.W. 315, P.M. 811, and Past Prov. S.G.W. Sussex; C. Sandeman, S.D.; Pearson, J.D.; Eberall, Sec.; Slatter, Dir. of Cer.; Nell, I.G.; W. Marchant, P.M., P.G.A. Dir. of Cer.; John Robinson, P.M.; W. Hudson, P.M., P.P.G.D. Sussex; Staples, Emery; Devin, Prov. G. Org. Sussex; Foot, A. Cowley, H. Nye, Chart, W. Steer, W. Bennett, Buckman; C. Hudson, Hon. Sec. to the Ball Committee; Byerley, Smith, Carden, Geer; Hugh Saunders, Treas. and P.M. 315,

P.P.G.D. Sussex; &c. The rooms were decorated with rare hothouse plants, shrubs, and flowers—colour and form being most tastefully intermingled. The well-known local firm of Balchin and Nell, florists, had charge of this department, and right well they executed their task. The bands were supplied by Bro. Devin, and the selection of pieces played, as well as the manner of their execution, left nothing to be desired. Dancing was kept up till a late hour in the morning, two of the rooms being occupied for the purpose, viz., the music room and the saloon. In the drawing rooms the card tables were well occupied by those whose dancing days were over. Supper was served à la Ecossaise in the noble banqueting-room, Bro. A. Cowley being the contractor, and he gave universal satisfaction by the manner in which the manner in which the tables were supplied with all the good things the most fastidious could wish for. The table decorations were of a light and tasteful character, just sufficient to please the eye and not heavy enough to impede the view down the length of tables. The surplus, after paying all expenses, will be handed over to some Masonic charity, and it is expected that twenty guineas will be about the amount. During the evening Bro. C. Laws, of London, handed to the W.M., Bro. James Curtis, a donation of ten guineas. Many of the brethren wore their various jewels and collars of present or past office. The arrangements during the evening for the comfort and enjoyment of the guests were admirably carried out by the following brethren, who acted as Masters of the Ceremonies: Bros. Curtis, Marchant, Staples, Eberall, Slatter, and Robinson. To the Committee of Stewards great praise is due for the careful and excellent manner in which the tickets were issued, and by the strict rules laid down continued to keep out a class of persons, both ladies and gentlemen, whose presence, at least at a former ball, occasioned much unpleasantness and annoyance. This year the company was most select, and doubtless next year the ball will be attended in much larger numbers. There is no reason, in a town of the size and importance of Brighton, why the Freemasons subscribing to lodges—whose number cannot be less than 400—should not combine, and the result would be, instead of a company numbering 250, at least a thousand would be present, thereby realising a much larger sum for the Masonic Charities. To the brethren of the Royal York Lodge, No. 319, great credit is due for having kept the annual ball alive for the past seven years.

LEEDS.

The annual ball of the Philanthropic Lodge, No. 304, Bro. Mason, W.M., took place on Thursday, the 16th inst. Dancing went on in the supper room, and the noble lodge room was used as a promenade, seldom presenting a more gay and brilliant appearance. Under the able direction of Bro. Kay, P.M., as M.C., a most successful and pleasant evening was spent. The Goderich Lodge, No. 1211, Bro. Crowe, W.M., have also lately had their ball in the rooms, and the Excelsior (1042), Bro. Allison, W.M., have had their's at the Great Northern Hotel.

TORQUAY.

A grand Masonic ball, under the auspices of the Torquay Lodge of St. John, No. 328, took place at the Bath saloon, Torquay, on Friday evening, the 17th inst. The smaller of the two rooms was used, as it was thought the attendance would not be sufficient to fill the other, but the larger might well have been taken. The room itself was beautifully decorated, including, of course, Masonic emblems, chiefly with ivy and artificial roses; and, with the numerous and tastefully-displayed lights, which were reflected in huge mirrors, presented a splendid appearance. This was under the superintendance of Bro. T. Oliver. In one of the large window recesses a quadrille band played indifferently well, though their selections were good. In two adjoining rooms excellent supper and refreshments were laid, served by Mr. Rolfe, and were well patronized by those present. In fine, the ball was a thorough success, and will, no doubt, answer its object.

THEATRICAL.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE.—On Monday "Amy Robson" will be revived. It is sure to be well received and have a long run.

THE HAYMARKET.—This theatre flourishes with the "Palace of Truth," "Uncle's Will," "Poor Soldier," and "Family Jars," having a crowded house every evening.

THE ADELPHI.—Miss Julia Daly, the popular American actress, has made her appearance here (after an absence of eight years) in "Our American Cousin," resuming her original character of Pamela. The sensational drama of "Deadman's Point" is still performed, and is a great success.

MASONIC CURIOSITIES.—VIII.

Under this heading the worthy and gifted Bro. W. James Hughan has gratified the readers of THE FREEMASON by contributing to its columns a series of curious, interesting, and instructive articles, which all must hope may be long continued ere the stores of valuable material at his disposal become exhausted.

As a small contribution, I venture to send as "Masonic Curiosities" copies of two certificates in my possession. The first (which is briefly described in my little "History of Freemasonry" in this province) is written on parchment  $7\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 4 inches, and is as follows:—

"Universis quorum Interest Attestamur Fratrem Gulielmum Licquorich fuisse Societate dictæ Masomiae Secundum regulas initiatum in Cætu Numero 91, et in Regno Angliæ, et Sicut Decet unum ex nostris ut mihi ex Testimonio Cætus ad quem pertinebat probatum est cum omni morum honestate Se gessit Datum Londini Sigillo Cætus Nostri Majoris et Subscriptione nostra munitum die Decimo Septembris Anno Domini 1764, et primitiis Societates 5764. Laurentio Dermott, Sec. M. Cætus."

"I do hereby certify that Brother William Licquorich is a regular Registered free Mason in the Lodge No. 91, in the Kingdom of England, and has during his stay amongst them behaved himself as became an honest and worthy Brother, as appears by the Lodge certificate to me.

(L.S.) "Given under my hand and the seal of the Grand Lodge in London the Tenth day of September, 1764, and in the year of Masonry 5764.

"LAU. DERMOTT, G.S."

Lodge No. 91 was held in Leicester. The date of its foundation is not known. At the Union in 1813 it was numbered 114, and soon afterwards became extinct. The certificate is the beautiful handwriting of the well-known Laurence Dermott, the author of "Ahiman Rezon," and for many years the Grand Secretary and most active leader amongst the (so-called) Ancient Masons. The seal, which is impressed on a wafer, bears as a device the square and compasses, surmounted by a dagger, surrounded by the inscription—"Virtue and silence. Grand Lodge of London." It will be seen that the title here claimed by that schismatic body was not that of the Grand Lodge of England, but of London merely.

The second document (which, like the former, is given verbatim et literatim) is a private lodge certificate on parchment, and is as follows:—

"And the darkness comprehended it not. In the East a place of Light where reigns Reason, Silence, and Peace.

"We, the Master, Wardens, and Secretary of Lodge No. 156 from the Grand Constitution of England, held in the King's (or 8) Regiment of Foot, Do hereby Certify and attest to all Men Lightened by the Truth, and spread over the Face of the Earth, that the Bearer hereof, our worthy Brother Robert Daniel, have been by our Lodge Entered an Apprentice, past a Fellow-Craft, and in Due time rais'd to that Sublime Degree of Master Mason, and he may without Demur or hesitation be admitted or incorporated into any lawful warranted Body wheresoever met, Congregated, or Conven'd; he having to the utmost of his Power strenuously supported and Contributed to the advancement of Masonry with zeal and vigour, he paying all just Dues and Demands to the Grand [Lodge].

"Given under our hands and Seal of our Lodge at Salisbury, the 24 Day of October, 1785; A.L. 5785.

"PHILIP BOCKIN, Secretary." "SAML. NEWSON, Mr. PETER DEACON, S.W. JOHN BEALY, J.W.

A wax impression of the lodge seal is attached to the margin of the certificate by a light blue ribbon; but it is too much broken and rubbed to be deciphered. As a literary production this certificate is about on a par with others of the period.

Leicester. WILLIAM KELLY.

A MASONIC TOUR.

Philadelphia is on the Delaware, which river falls into the Atlantic, and has a great trade. Numerous steamers and ships trade to England and otherwise, &c. "Washington Hotel," comfortable, 2½ (10s.) per diem; others more and less moderate. People kind; plain, but not at all quakerish. White servants at many hotels (women servants 3 dollars a week with board, &c.).

Left for Washington 19th, passing Baltimore (great trade and shipping port), Wilmington, and other large cities and towns—Susquehanna, very large river, &c.; reached Washington 10 p.m., 138 miles; fare, 5 dollars (about 2d. a mile). The capital is large; not populous; no trade; negroes appear to outnumber white population; black servants everywhere. The streets are wide—fine buildings numerous. The Treasury (Ionic), Post Office (Corinthian), Home Office (Doric), President's, or "White House" (Ionic), are very fine; but the "Capitol" excels any I have ever seen. It is (like the others) of white marble, or limestone (after the style of the Pantheon, Rome). The grand Corinthian columns, splendid (senate) halls, sculpture, paintings, &c., are amazingly grand. Length, 752; width, 324; height, 288. The building cost 24,33,844 dollars; stands on 153,112 square feet, enclosed space being 22½ acres.

All the public buildings are open free to the public; no guards; no police to bar the way; no servants to pester or beg for fees as in our places of interest. The President's house is open; no guards or fees asked for or expected by the attendants in waiting; same remark applies to the opera, theatres, hotels, &c., in America. What a lesson for our people! Well, to Masons again: On 19th I visited Chapter Lafayette, No. 5; very strict attention. There were about 100 companions present; no particular work—being installation night. The hall and room where we met were, as also the fittings, &c., excellent. Ex. Comps. D. S. Jones, P.Z., and J. E. Mason, Scribe E., kind good fellows.

On 21st I visited Lodge B. B. French, No. 15; W.M. was unwell; there was no work. There were about 60 members present; the hall, furniture, fittings, organ, &c., all of the best, reflect great credit on the Masons of Washington; 26 lodges. Had the pleasure of meeting Bros. Fitzki, Bell, Strachan, Warrick and others; by all kindly treated. Met a coloured Bro. —, belonging to Lodge Eurika, No. 5, which works under an English warrant; several similar in U.S., not recognised by the white brethren.

On Sunday (20th) attended divine service in Metropolitan Church, partly to see the President. General Grant occupies a plain pew or bench (No. 73) like any private person. No show; no escort, &c.; comes and goes like any citizen. No distinction for any one in U.S. The Rev. Dr. Newmas delivered a most eloquent and powerful sermon on "Peace." His opening prayer and sermon were clearly, forcibly, and unmistakably a lesson to all present to make, keep, and preserve the peace. The present European struggle—the late American war, with all its horrors—were alluded to with all the fire of language. This, with the remarks of many of the congregation then present—travellers and others, I since met with—all prove the bulk of Americans abhor of war, and will never draw the sword on England—or as they say here, "the old country"—except in self-defence. Here and elsewhere all wish for an amicable settlement of the Alabama question. May God grant it; for in language, religion, old associations, &c., we are one and the same people. There is a great love for the English and "the old country" as far as I have travelled.

At Philadelphia a man hearing me speak, excused himself, saying his "Father was English. He was proud of England, though he had never seen it." Choking, and scarcely able to contain himself, he begged me to take a glass with him for old association sake, when he drank prosperity to England. A lady, Mrs. —, travelling with me in a steamboat, recently told me she admired and loved old England. She said this feeling is largely shared in U.S.; but here in the South very much so. I hope we shall soon settle the Alabama claims, &c., and so keep friends with our kindred here in the New World. I visited Mount Vernon, and saw the tomb of Washington, &c., an account of which may interest you. Left Washington 10 o'clock on the 20th November, 1870, and steamed down the Potomac, a fine wide, but low-banked, river; touched at Alexandria, the city where Washington got his first commission. Passed forts Foot and Washington, the latter, Maryland side of river, is a strong, heavily-armed place, with some immense 15-inch guns in position.

AN APPEAL TO THE CRAFT.

We have been requested to publish the following appeal:—

The Just and Lawful Lodge Leopold zur Treue, Or. Carlsruhe, to all the Honourable F.A.L. Lodges of Free and Accepted Masons on the face of the globe. Greeting:—

Carlsruhe, Dec. 1870.

Right Worshipful M., Worshipful Officers, and honourable, dearly-beloved Brethren,—It is perhaps that a single lodge, relying upon the rapidity of modern communication, deeply impressed by the feelings of lively compassion and encouraged by the firm and joyful trust in the helping hand of brotherly love, undertakes to call out to the whole Masonic fraternity of the globe: T.M.J.S.O.T.W.!

What would be the meaning of that brotherly chain, which surrounds the globe; what the sublime consciousness of human community, this fundamental column of Masonry, if we could hesitate to call out the assistance of every brother in so great a misfortune. Only the combined help of all may be capable to re-establish the material existence of our unfortunate brethren.

The neighbouring towns of Kehl and Strasburg have undergone heavy damages during the siege and the defence of the forts of Strasburg, which took place in August and September of the present year. Whole streets have been entirely changed into ruins by fire and balls, and among those poor inhabitants, who have been hardly struck by the destruction of their houses and other property, there are about forty Freemasons, whose damages have been estimated at two and a quarter millions of francs.

The gifts of love tendered by our great German country, liberally as they were given, have scarcely been able to calm the misery of those poor creatures who have lost their homes and their daily bread. The lodges of Germany, though heavily taxed in every possible direction by the evils of the war, have already done their utmost for their unhappy brethren, and will not cease in their efforts, but their means are too feeble for such enormous damages—their assistance is disappearing like a drop in the ocean.

Therefore, D. B., we beg you heartily to reach your helping hand to these unfortunate brothers of Strasburg who belong to the Lodge of the United Brethren in the east of this town, and those of Kehl, who form part of our sister lodge, "Allfather of the Free Thought," in the East of Lahr, that they might be able to re-establish themselves, and that the truth may be confirmed again that the great fraternal chain of Freemasonry allows no one of her worthy and innocently distressed members to sink into ruin.

The present occasion, sad as it is, presents us, notwithstanding the great satisfaction to exchange our brotherly salutations with you, D.B., and to thank you cordially from the depth of our hearts for all you will have the kindness to do for our poor, intensely suffering brethren of Kehl and Strasburg.

Besides this, we beg to mention that we shall receive the most moderate gift with thanks, being a dear proof to us of your fraternal benevolence.

You will receive this circular-letter through the friendly meditation of your M.W. Grand Lodge, which we have requested to collect your donations and to forward them to the subscribed Baronet Cornberg, Carlsruhe, Grand Duchy of Baden, Germany.

If any lodge should wish to send her gift directly, she will please to do so by forwarding their remittance to the above-named receiver.

All editors of Masonic newspapers are requested to kindly insert this circular in a prominent place, and permit us to publish receipt of all the moneys and the use we made thereof.

We again send you, greeting, beloved brother of all rites, zones, and landmarks, I.O.S.N.,

And remain, in true brotherly love, yours,

O. BAR. CORNBERG,
Master of the Lodge.

Bro. RANSFORD, P.G. Organist, announces that his Annual Evening Concert will take place on Tuesday, the 28th inst., at St. James's Hall.

TIC DOLOREUX, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, and all singular complaints, cured by Dr. Gee's Anodyne (embrocation). Price, 2s. 9d., or sent for 3s. It has never yet failed. Read testimonials and judge for yourselves. Agents, T. Barton and Co., 269, Strand, W.C. [Advt.]

SCOTLAND.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE LODGE NEPTUNE
KILWINNING, ARDROSSAN, No. 442.

The seventh anniversary of this prosperous and most efficiently-conducted lodge was celebrated in the Town-hall, on the evening of Friday, the 10th inst., under the presidency of its new Master, Bro. Francis Goodwin, and amid the hearty congratulations of the Past Prov. Grand Master and the representatives of several sister lodges. The festivities of the occasion were inaugurated by a torch-light procession—an ancient custom of the Craft which has now nearly become obsolete, but which the sons of Neptune still enter into with considerable spirit. After the transaction of private business, a procession was formed in the lodge-room, whence the brethren, headed by a large instrumental band, and accompanied by a large concourse of spectators, marched along the principal streets of the town en route to the Assembly-rooms. Here the decorations by Mr. Thomas Phillips were of a chaste, yet most effective, style, Masonic banners and mystic emblems, interspersed with evergreens, being so arranged as to give the hall quite an enchanting appearance—an effect which was heightened by the taste displayed by Mrs. Hugh Boyd in the service of fruits, &c., usual to the lodge on such occasions.

On the lodge being opened, deputations were received from Mother Kilwinning, headed by Bro. Robert Wylie; St. John Kilwinning, Kilmarnock, No. 22, Bro. Thomas Brown; St. Andrew, Irvine, No. 149, Bro. John Sloan; Thistle and Rose, Stevenson, No. 169, Bro. Thomas Lambie; Blair, Dairy, No. 290, Bro. Graham; St. Clement, Riccarton, No. 202, Bro. Alexander; and Royal Arch, West Kilbride, No. 314, Bro. George Robertson. A number of brethren of St. John Royal Arch, Saltcoats and Ardrossan, No. 320, headed by Bro. Robert Boyd, were also present. In this his maiden effort to conduct the proceedings at the anniversary communication of Neptune Kilwinning, the R.W. Bro. Goodwin had the most effective support that it was in the power of his constituents to render. Surrounding him on the dais were Bros. Robertson, Past Master; John Barr, Provost of Ardrossan; John Craig, Acting Depute Master; Captain M'Dermid, Acting Substitute Master; Walter Hooks, Treasurer; Robert Anderson, Secretary; David Goodwin, of the Ardrossan Foundry; and William Wylie, Chaplain. Bro. William Reed upheld the dignity of the western potentate; the G.M.'s protegee in the south was personified by Bro. William Marshall; Bros. Caldwell Anderson and Edwin Robertson were the deacons; and Bros. Robert Guthrie, William Cowan, and William Ross were the stewards (the wines and liquors being supplied by Bro. James White)—while the approaches to the sanctum were placed under the ever-vigilant guardianship of Bros. Hugh Hamilton and Henry Barr. Unavoidable causes interposed to prevent the attendance of Bros. Hugh Boyd, Robert Fullarton, Councillor James Goodwin, and other leading members of the lodge.

The R.W.M. having, in a few well-chosen prefatory remarks, reviewed the lodge's labours during the year just ended, and given, a fraternal welcome to the visitors in their united capacity, proceeded to the discharge of the other duties of his office.

After the deputations were severally toasted, the usual compliments were paid to the office-bearers of the presiding lodge.

The Past Provincial Grand Master (Bro. R. Wylie) gave "The Health of the Master, Bro. Goodwin," whom he congratulated upon his advancement to the chief post in the lodge of which he was one of the originators, and for several years its highly efficient Treasurer; and concluded with a few words of congratulation and encouragement to the members generally upon the flourishing condition of their lodge.

The "Past Master" was proposed by Bro. John Mackay, of Kilmarnock St. John's, who passed a high eulogium upon Bro. James Robertson, whose services to Neptune Kilwinning during his six years' Mastership were of a character that would justify his being regarded as being one of the best Ayrshire Craftsmen. It is worthy of mention that Bro. Robertson's retirement from the chair proceeded from a conviction that the frequent re-election of a Master shut out from that honourable office many brethren whose past services and Masonic qualifications richly entitled them to the highest honour the lodge could bestow upon its members. The recent presentation of a gold medal to Bro. Robertson, and his being entertained at supper by the lodge on the occasion of his declining re-election to the chair, testify to the respect in which he is held by the brethren, and their gratitude to him for his signally successful career as their first R.W.M. His son, Bro. John Robertson, whose services in the Secretaryship were recognised by the lodge presenting him with a valuable set of Masonic jewels, has also retired after a six years' tenure of office, during which period upwards of 360 intrants had been added to the lodge roll.

Bro. Provost Barr's health was given by the Master, who thanked the chief magistrate for the warm interest he continued to take in Neptune Kilwinning, and in Freemasonry generally.

Several other toasts were given, the intervals between each being filled up by contributions of vocal and instrumental music, Bro. James Currie, of Neptune Kilwinning, conductor of psalmody in St. Marnock Church, Kilmarnock, presiding with exquisite taste at the harmonium, which had been kindly placed at the service of the lodge by Bro. Picken.

This was one of the most delightful reunions ever held under the auspices of No. 442, and is an augury of a bright future under the sway of the worthy, enterprising, and highly-popular brother who now presides in the orient.

The 19th Annual Festival of the Glasgow St. Clair Lodge, 362, was held at the Tontine Hotel, on Thursday, 16th inst., at 7 o'clock. Bro. G. Thallow, R.W.M., occupied the chair, and was supported by Bros. Wm. Gibson, S.W.; J. G. Stewart, Acting J.W.; Wm. Dobbie, P.M.; J. M. Threshie, Treas.; J. McGeachy, Chap.; Wm. Law, S.D.; W. Bainum, J. Robertson, and about 50 brethren sat down to supper, which was admirably served by Bro. Nimmo. Upon the removal of the cloth, the Chairman proposed the usual Masonic toasts, which were received and responded to, as they always are, with great heartiness. The harmony of the evening was well sustained by song, toast, and sentiment.

NORTH-EASTERN MASONIC CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION.

We have received a copy of the report of the above Institution, and reprint it for the information of our readers, and congratulate the brethren who have so ably carried out the objects of the Society:—

Bro. J. J. Wilson, P.M. 813, 1237, President; Bro. John Bellerby, P.M. 65, 1227, Vice-President; Bro. John Newton, P.M. 174, Treasurer; Bros. J. L. Mather (P.M. 65, W.M. 1227), John Wright (P.M. 781, 1259), W. H. Main (P.M. 813), Benjn. Picking (P.M. 13, 1227), D. Forbes (S.W. 65), Chas. Lacey (P.M. 174), John Hart (P.M. 813), Louis Stein (P.M. 212), James Bond (P.M. 101, 861), Robert Goddard (P.M. 65, Sec. 1227), David Roberts (P.M. 754), Thomas Bartlett (W.M. 813), N. Wingfield (P.M. 169, 1155), Committee; Bro. J. Terry, P.M. 228, 1278, Hon. Secretary.

REPORT.

The Committee in submitting their first report, have to congratulate the members upon the great success which has attended the establishment of this Association—a success far beyond their most sanguine expectations.

The number of members enrolled in this Association has been 116, and the total amount of their contributions £269 9s. 6d.; and as the result of your Committee's first year's labours, 26 members have obtained Life Governorships of the Masonic Charities.

Of these 26 members, five have chosen the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; three the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; sixteen the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons; the other two have not yet made their selection.

Your Committee regret to report the decease of one of the founders of the Association, who had obtained a Life Governorship; this has been transferred to another member, and the amount subscribed has been repaid to the widow without deduction.

Of the 26 members who have obtained Life Governorships, 12 have accepted the position of Steward, so that in addition to their own Life Governorships, procured through the medium of this Association, it may fairly be assumed they will each take in, at least, £30 more; thus making a total of over £480, and the Committee venture to think that but for this Association this sum would not have been collected. It may be inferred therefore that the establishment of this Association will materially tend to benefit the Institutions of the Order far beyond the amount contributed by its members.

The Committee would earnestly invite those who are not already Life Governors of the Masonic Institutions, either to join this or establish kindred Associations, feeling confident that there is ample room for many more in London and elsewhere; and from their experience of the successful working of this Association, cordially recommend them to all who are desirous of obtaining a Life Governorship, so that there may not be a brother but will be able to say he is a Governor if not of all, at least one, of our noble Institutions.

In conclusion, your Committee feel it is but justice to state that very much of the success of the past year is attributable to the energy and untiring zeal of the Hon. Secretary, Bro. James Terry, and they cordially recommend that the unqualified thanks are due from the members to him for his valuable services, as also for the correct and admirable manner in which the whole of the books and accounts have been kept.

JOHN J. WILSON, President.
JOHN BELLERBY, Vice-President.
J. NEWTON, Treasurer.

THE MASONIC LOADSTONE—CHARITY.

A SONG FOR MUSIC.

By Bro. T. BURDETT YEOMAN, Lodge 715.

Come, come, thou holy, hallow'd spirit,
Full of every gracious merit,
Kindling every heart to goodness,
Uprooting always things of sadness;
Never permitting toil, trouble, or care
To dwell in our midst, our comforts to share.
Chorus—Always true and ever free
Is Masonic charity.

Thou art the soul of all our actions,
The real loadstone of our attractions,
Sweetly beaming and brightly shining,
Cheering hearts by your silver lining.
Thus, gentle spirit and faithful friend,
Be our companion till life shall end.
Chorus—Being true and ever free
Is Masonic charity.

Holiest 'mongst the glorious three,
Guardian over our mystery,
Loyal to the core, never failing
To dispel gloom wherever hailing;
Warming the heart and cheering the mind
By casting dull care always behind.
Chorus—Ever willing, ever free
Is Masonic charity.

In first, in second, and third degree
The "aspirants" lead up to charity.
Brighter it shines the higher he goes
He'll find Faith, Hope, and Charity grows,
Oh! virtue sublime, life-giving power,
Distil on us this heavenly shower.
Chorus—For a Mason must be free,
The "Mystic Tie" is charity.

Brother, whence come thou, and in distress,
Show us the sign, thy way to confess.
If worthy found with our mystic key,
Thy wants are fed from our treasury;
Within the compass and on the square
Our secrets unlocked for you to share.
Chorus—Being willing and ever free
To help, to aid in charity.

Then charge your glasses, a bumper fill,
The fiat's gone forth, a Mason's will,
Is "Do unto others as ye would
They should do unto you" all they could
Our Masonic loadstone to unfold—
'Tis the "Mystic Tie" which makes us bold, Chorus—Our Grand Architect to see
In Masonic charity.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

"SOME months since my wife was suffering with a bad cough and severe pains in the chest, and totally unable to attend to her ordinary duties. She was advised to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and after a few doses was restored to perfect health, which she still enjoys. I also use it for piles, from which I have long suffered severely, and one dose invariably gives me relief.—JAMES BRADSHAW, Hopwood-st., Lpool, Dec. 1867.—To P. D. & Son."

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Scald heads, ring-worm, and all the cutaneous disorders peculiar to children, are permanently removed by the use of this healing and renovating Ointment. Mothers of families should never be without it, for it may be applied at all times without danger of any kind, as it is composed entirely of pure balsams, and should it not do good, it cannot possibly do harm. The parts affected should be first fomented with warm water, and then the Ointment should be rubbed in briskly, except where is any tendency towards irritability or excoriation. In that case, the painful spot should be gently lubricated with the Ointment twice every day, and the surrounding skin only should be rubbed therewith.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixer, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. "Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on 'Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels,' a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

A M.M. in embarrassed circumstances would be glad of immediate EMPLOYMENT as CLERK, or in any light capacity where he could make himself generally useful.—M. 13, Harman-street, Kingsland.

10. The Grand Master or his Deputy has full authority and right, not only to be present, but to preside in every lodge with the Master of the Lodge, on his left hand, and to order his Grand Wardens to attend him, who if present are to fill the Wardens' Chairs in that Lodge, or he may send his Grand Officers to visit the Lodges; in which case Deputy presides as Grand Master, or if the Deputy be not present, the Senior Grand Warden presides, the Junior Grand Warden fills the Senior's Chair, and the vacant situation is filled, pro tempore, by the appointment of him who presides as Grand Master.

11. The Grand Master should not receive any private intimation of business, concerning Masons or Masonry, but from his Deputy first, except in such cases as he may himself think fit to inquire into, and even the Grand Wardens, or any others, are first to consult with the Deputy, and not to apply to the Grand Master without his knowledge, unless he refuse his concurrence; and if the application to the Grand Master be irregular, he may direct the applicants to wait upon the Deputy, who is speedily to prepare the business, and lay it before the Grand Master.

12. The Grand Master, by his prerogative, is entitled to appoint Provincial Grand Masters; or in his absence the Deputy Grand Master may grant a Dispensation for that purpose, to such Brethren of eminence and ability in the Order as the Grand Master himself shall approve of and direct; such dispensation to be during pleasure.

13. The Provincial Grand Master is invested with the power and dignity of a Grand Master within the limits of the district for which he has been appointed, and is entitled to the costume of a Grand Officer on all occasions, he may appoint a Provincial Deputy Grand Master, who with his Provincial Grand Wardens may also wear the clothing of Grand Officers during the period of their respective Dignities, but only within their own District; and the Provincial Grand Masters, with their Deputies and Wardens, rank according to the dates of their respective Dispensations or appointments, immediately after the Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge, and before the Deputy Grand Treasurer and Secretary.

14. The Provincial Grand Master must correspond with the Grand Lodge, and transmit by his Secretary a circumstantial account of his proceedings, at least once in every year; to him belongs the right of recommending to the Grand Lodge all applications for new Warrants, or for the restoration of old ones within his jurisdiction, without which recommendation the memorial will not be taken into consideration by the Grand Lodge; by him also, or by his appointment, are to be constituted all Warrants granted by the Grand Lodge for the District over which he presides; and he is to have the annual dues and contributions for Charity collected within his District and forwarded to the Funds of the Grand Lodge; and to the utmost of his power to cause the regulations of the Order to be enforced within his province.

15. The Grand Lodge elects the Grand Wardens. Every Member has a right to put a Brother in nomination for each of the Grand Wardens' Chairs, and the person having the majority of votes, always preserving due harmony, to be declared duly elected; but they are not, if absent, to receive the honors of their situation by proxy.

16. The Grand Lodge elects the Grand Treasurer, who shall be a Member of the Grand Lodge by virtue of his Office, and shall always be present at its Meeting; to him shall be committed all the money received for the general fund of Charity, or for any other use of the Grand Lodge, and he shall not expend or disburse the same, unless according to the orders of the Grand Lodge, or its Committee of Charity and Inspection, before whom he shall lay his Books half yearly for their examination.

17. The Grand Lodge elects the Grand Secretary, who shall likewise be a Member of the Grand Lodge; to him shall be committed the care of the Books of the Grand Lodge, wherein shall be recorded all the Lodges with the usual times and places of their Meeting, and the names of all the Members of each Lodge, also the minutes of the Grand Lodge Transactions, and all the affairs of the Grand Lodge that are proper to be written.

18. The Grand Treasurer and Grand Secretary may each have a Clerk or assistant, if they think fit, who must be Master Masons, but not Members of the Grand Lodge, nor speak therein, without being allowed or commanded; but the appointments of Deputy Grand Treasurer and Deputy Grand Secretary must be approved of by the Grand Lodge, and these Officers shall be at all times responsible to the Grand Lodge as well as to their Principals.

19. The Deputy Grand Secretary receives as the Emoluments of his Office £2 5s. 6d. out of every Warrant granted or restored by the Grand Lodge; 8s. 1½d. for the registry of its three Officers; 2s. 8½d. for the registry of every Master Mason; 1s. 1d. for the transfer of the name of any Brother from one Lodge to another; and £10 sterling out of every Masonic Play for the benefit of the funds of the Order, for his care, service, and trouble on that occasion.

N.B. The duties of Deputy Grand Treasurer and Deputy Grand Secretary having for some years past been performed by the same Brother, he has declined receiving any compensation for the discharge of the duties of the former Office since the year 1803.

20. The Deputy Grand Secretary shall be fined 5 Guineas for every Warrant he shall hereafter issue to any Brother, to whom the same may have been granted by the Grand Lodge, before he is paid the full amount thereof.

21. The Deputy Grand Secretary shall report to the Grand Lodge on the regular Meetings prior to each each St. John's Days, the state of such Lodges as shall have incurred the penalties of Censure, Suspension, or Cancelling their Warrants according to the 23d Regulation for particular Lodges, in order that the same may be confirmed by the Grand Lodge, from which confirmation no lodge in default shall be exempted, unless by special motion regularly put and carried in the Grand Lodge for that purpose, the Deputy Grand Secretary neglecting this duty to be fined one Guinea.

22. The Grand Lodge elects the Grand Chaplain, who shall be a Member of the Grand Lodge by Virtue of his Office.

23. Two Master Masons shall be appointed by the Grand Lodge to fill the situation of Pursuivant and Tiler, but they cannot at the same time be Members of the Grand Lodge.

24. The Pursuivant shall receive for his attendance on the Grand Lodge, and service of Summons, £30 sterling per annum, payable half yearly; £2 5s. 6d. out of each Benefit Play performed in aid of the funds of the Order; and 6s. 8d. out of every Warrant granted or restored by the Grand Lodge.

25. The Tiler shall receive £10 sterling per Annum for his attendance on the Grand Lodge; 2 Guineas out of each Benefit Play performed in aid of the Funds of the Order; 1s. 7½d. for each attendance on the Committee of Charity and Inspection; 2s. 2d. out of each Warrant granted or restored by the Grand Lodge; and 1s. 1d. for each candidate reported to the Grand Lodge Committee, if approved of.

26. The Pursuivant shall be fined a British half-crown for admitting in the Grand Lodge any member thereof not uniformly clothed according to the instructions he shall receive; and the same for every Brother he shall permit to go out of the Grand Lodge when sitting, without leave of the Master in the Chair.

SECTION the 3d.

OF THE COMMITTEE OF CHARITY AND INSPECTION.

1. The Committee consists of the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, and all former Grand Officers, the Grand Treasurer, and Grand Secretary, with the Master of every regular Lodge in the City of Dublin for the time being.

2. The Grand Treasurer is not to disburse or expend the Funds of the Order, or any part thereof, on any account whatsoever without an order from the Committee of Charity, which order shall be signed by the Grand Secretary or the Grand Officer or Master then presiding in the Chair of said Committee, unless in such cases as the Grand Lodge itself may please to make an order for the issue or disbursement of money, and the Committee is to examine the Grand Treasurer's accounts half yearly.

3. Neither the Secretary, nor any other person whatsoever, shall give or sign any order on the Treasurer for any sum of money until the same be first approved of by the majority of the Committee then present, and entered into their transaction Book, together with the name or names of the person or persons to whom the same is to be given.

4. No anonymous letter, petition, or recommendation, by or from any person, or on any account or pretence whatsoever, shall be introduced or read to this Committee.

5. Every person who shall petition for Charity must have been one whole year registered on the Books of the Grand Lodge, unless in cases of such urgent and unforeseen calamity as may induce the Committee to feel themselves warranted in dispensing with the strict Letter of this Regulation, and no petition shall be received from a Mason in the Country unless signed and sealed by the Masters of three several lodges in his neighbourhood, nor from one in Dublin, unless signed by three Members of the Grand Lodge, and presented at the Grand Master's Chair, as in the 20th regulation, Section the 1st.

6. It shall be the inherent power of this Committee to dispose of the fund laid in for Charity, to Charitable uses and no other, and that only to persons who shall appear by their petitions as aforesaid to be deserving, and in real want of Charitable and Brotherly Assistance, not exceeding the sum of five pounds to any one person, or otherwise to supply them with weekly support as they shall judge most necessary.

7. No petition from a Brother, or Widow of a Brother, who has already received assistance from the Charitable Fund of the Order, shall be received by the Committee, unless some new and well-attested allegation appear to authorise a second application, and all certificates of deceased Brethren in the hands of their Widows, applying for Charity to the Grand Lodge, shall be destroyed before any money ordered them by the Committee is issued.

8. It is the Indefeasible right of the Grand Lodge to order the Committee of Charity and Inspection to meet when they shall judge necessary, who shall then resolve themselves into a Committee of the Grand Lodge, and have power to adjourn themselves from time to time as business may require, at any time between the monthly Meetings of the Grand Lodge, when all the proceedings of the Committee since last Grand Lodge, shall be read over, in order to inform them of the Charity expenses, and to receive their concurrence in any other matter, that may have been referred to them.

9. When the Committee is ordered to be assembled and thereto duly summoned, any seven of them then meeting shall be a quorum, elect their Chairman, and proceed upon business, and if any debate shall happen to arise, the majority of voices then present shall be decisive, always allowing the Grand Officer or him who shall then preside in the Chair, two votes, if occasion requires.

10. The Masters of all Lodges resident in the City of Dublin, composing the Committee of Charity and Inspection, are to pay a subscription of M. S. £2 16s. 4d. to defray the expence of the said Committee for each half year, Regulations for which their respective Lodges are responsible, the payments to be made at the rate of 8s. 8d. on the first day of meeting in each Month.

11. The Regular Meetings of the Committee are to be held on two Fridays in every month, the first being the day following the meeting of the Grand Lodge, and the other a fortnight after.

12. There shall be paid to the Committee for every person reported to them as a Candidate for admission into any Lodge in the City of Dublin or its vicinity, the sum of One pound sterling, before his eligibility is taken into consideration; should the candidate be approved of, 11s. 10½d. thereout is paid to the Masonic Orphan School Fund; 4s. 4d. to the General Fund of Charity; 2s. 8½d. for his registry; and 1s. 1d. to the Grand Lodge Tiler, but should he be rejected, the entire sum to be returned.

13. The several Lodges in the City of Dublin shall be visited by two or more members of the Committee, at least once in each half year, and these inspectors shall be empowered to examine the Books and by-laws of each Lodge, and also enquire into the character and conduct of the Members thereof; they are likewise to take notice if the several brethren are registered and make their report at the next meeting of the Grand Lodge, and any particular Lodge refusing to admit the Inspecting Committee, to lay before them their Books and Regulations, or to give them a list of their Members if required, shall be fined one Guinea.

The Visiting Committee neglecting this essential duty, or to make a report of their observations as above particularized, shall be subject to the censure of the Grand Lodge, unless some sufficient cause can be assigned for such neglect.

THE DUTY OF FREEMASONS TO CORRECT THE ERRORS OF THEIR BRETHREN.

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON,

Author of "Freemasonry in Relation to Civil Authority and the Family Circle."

We lately heard a Freemason express himself to the effect that it was not right in any member of the Craft to take notice of the faults of a brother, or in any way to direct attention to them. From his attainments and culture, and his position in the Masonic Brotherhood, we would have expected him to possess a knowledge of the laws of Freemasonry such as would have made it impossible for him to utter such an opinion. Nothing is more indisputable than the duty of Masons to watch over the conduct of their brethren, not in an unkindly spirit, but rather in the utmost kindness and brotherly affection, seeking always their good, and endeavouring to promote the general honour and welfare of the Craft. It is difficult to conceive that a well-instructed brother should be unaware of this, or should have utterly forgotten the charge at the third degree, in which the following words occur:—"In the character of a Master Mason, you are henceforth authorised to correct the errors and irregularities of brethren, and guard them against a breach of fidelity. To improve the morals and correct the manners of men in society must be your constant care." To this let us add a single sentence from the late Bro. Dr. Oliver's sermon on the Masonic obligations:—"Permit me faithfully to enforce the obligated duty of brotherly love, which, for brevity's sake, we will observe consists, first, in gentle reproof of an error; secondly, kind instruction and advice in ignorance and difficulties; and, thirdly, tender commiseration and relief in sorrow and distress." From all this it appears that it is the duty of Freemasons to watch over their brethren in a kind and brotherly manner—one brother addressing another as occasion may appear, or the matter, if necessary, being brought before the lodge, that the honour of the Brotherhood may be maintained. That no brother has any concern with the conduct of another, is contrary to the very first principles of Freemasonry, and to the idea of brotherhood which pervades all. It is contrary also to scriptural rules, which all Freemasons, professing to be Christians, respect as of the highest authority. They have the Bible open in their lodges; they carry it in their processions, and professing the greatest brotherly kindness and highest brotherhood amongst each other, they cannot be indifferent to what they acknowledge as divine instructions concerning the conduct of brethren towards brethren. In one of the Books of Moses, we read this ancient rule given to the children of Israel:—"Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart; thou shalt not in anywise rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him." There is something extremely beautiful in the preface—as it may be called—"Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart," connected as it is with the precept that follows; and it admirably exhibits the character of that brotherly love which Christians profess, and ought to exhibit—which Freemasons also profess one towards another, and which they claim as an especial characteristic of their Order. In perfect accordance with this rule of brotherly kindness are all the sentences bearing on the same subject which we find in other parts of the sacred scriptures—as, "He that saith unto the wicked thou art righteous, him shall the people curse; nations shall abhor him. But to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and a good blessing shall come upon them;" and "He that rebuketh a man afterwards shall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue." The great rule of Christianity, on this point may be said to be that given by our Lord himself:—"Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; if he shall hear thee, thou has gained thy brother, but if he will not hear thee, then take with the one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the Church; but if he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." The organisation of the Christian Church is, as all Christians believe, of Divine institution: the Masonic Brotherhood is to be regarded only as a human device, but may well claim to be esteemed as the most excellent of all schemes ever devised for promoting the welfare of men, by establishing the bonds of brotherhood amongst men of very various sentiments in religion and politics. The principles, however, which are appointed to regulate the one, must be seen at a glance to be suitable to the other, and the excellence of these principles, and of the rules founded upon them, or in which they are conveyed, no man, whatever may be his religious opinion or creed, can for a moment dispute. The Christian acknowledges their supreme authority; the Mahomedan, the Brahmin, or the Parsee, must all acknowledge them as admirably adapted to the requirements of human nature, and calculated to promote true brotherhood amongst men.

From all this, it is not difficult to learn how Freemasons ought to conduct themselves towards one another, however difficult it may be in practice to act aright, and to carry out, in a proper manner, the rules and principles of brotherhood. It is difficult for most men, and particularly for those of the most tender disposition, and full of the kindest brotherly feeling, to rebuke or find fault with a brother, to point out to him the errors of his conduct, and to urge upon him the necessity of amendment. Rudeness in speech or manner would almost certainly be of bad effect, and to maintain a perfect gentleness and brotherly love in pointing out the enormity of a gross offence, is far from being easy. In what cases the matter should be brought under the cognizance of the lodge, it may be also sometimes difficult to determine. It may, perhaps, be safely assumed that this ought not to be done where there is no scandal affecting the character of the lodge and the general interests of the Order; but that, where such is the case, no time ought to be lost in doing it. The character of the lodge ought to be dear to every member of it, and the honour of the Order to every Freemason; and to maintain these it is requisite that no brother shall be allowed to pass uncensured, who is guilty of scandalous immorality. The ancient rules of the order very particularly insist upon the duty of chastity, and a member of the order living in concubinage,—still more, one who lies under the reproach of any worse transgression of the seventh commandment—cannot be too soon subjected to the discipline which these rules enjoin, and debarred from fellowship with the lodge and from all enjoyment of Masonic privileges, until his evil course of life is relinquished, and he has shown himself worthy of being restored. The same rule must of course be applied to cases of habitual drunkenness, to cases of dishonesty, and the like. Far too little attention has been paid by Freemasons to the duty of watching over one another, and thus maintaining the character of their own lodge and of the order, whilst at the same time they render a brotherly service to their brethren in seeking to reclaim them to those paths of honour and virtue in which every true Mason should walk. It is a duty not to be discharged in a spirit of inquisitiveness or censoriousness. We ought not to pry into the affairs of our brethren nor to be ready to take up a reproach against them; but neither ought we resolutely to wink at any case of flagrant immorality, nor to shut our ears against reports which are so current that every one not wilfully deaf must hear them, and of such a nature that a virtuous and really innocent man would be glad of an opportunity of vindicating himself with regard to them.

In almost every club or society not associated for mere business purposes, some regard is had to the moral character and general respectability of its members. More particularly is this the case where social intercourse takes place amongst them. Men who are of good moral character themselves, and who desire the respect of their fellow-men, refuse to be intimately associated with those who are notorious transgressors of the moral law. They cannot bear the thought of being reputed as the associates of such persons; and, indeed, the society of men of flagitious lives cannot be agreeable to those who abhor their immoralities. It is impossible that a man living in concubinage or adultery should be a fit companion for the pure and virtuous. His whole nature is tainted; his mind and heart are defiled; his tastes and sympathies are different from theirs. He may place some restraint upon himself in their company, but his real character is sure to break out now and then, and to display itself in some way which they cannot but perceive, and feelings inconsistent with social enjoyment and brotherly good-fellowship are awakened in them. They feel that they are degraded by their association with him; they can hardly but feel also that they are contaminated, for the words which express even in a passing manner a vicious sentiment or feeling, may be as really what the ancient Grecian bard calls winged words as any utterances of the highest eloquence. A man cannot take fire into his bosom, and not be burned; he cannot touch pitch and not be defiled. It were strange, then, if the Masonic fraternity, which inculcates purity of morals of the most absolute necessity, should be restrained from all consideration of the character and conduct of its members, or if, indeed, every Freemason should not be bound, as the ancient laws and constitutions of the order show that he is bound, to raise his voice against whatever in the conduct of any of his brethren is opposed to the honour and welfare of the fraternity. We have said enough, we think, to prove the duty incumbent on all the brethren in this matter, and to demonstrate the falsehood of the notion, engendered by a spurious liberality and mistaken kindness, that after a Freemason has been admitted, he may live as he likes, without detriment to his position as a member of the brotherhood and without any possible loss of privilege or disqualification for the most honourable offices to which the lodge or Grand Lodge may have power to appoint. Let this notion prevail, and the honour of the Order is gone. It no longer stands forth as advocating and maintaining all that is excellent on morality; it no longer appears as contributing to the advancement of right feeling and good conduct in its members, or to the comfort and happiness of their families. Its whole character is changed, but changed by the overthrow of the first principles on which it was constituted. Let us rejoice to think that these principles cannot be overthrown; that they must ever remain what they have ever been, and that therefore no such notion as that on which we have inadvertently can long and extensively prevail.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The Quarterly Meeting of Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Hall. Grand Lodge was numerously attended, the brethren who were present numbering over 200, though the business to be transacted was exceedingly light, and nothing very attractive appearing on the business paper beyond the election of the Grand Master for the year. The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, D.G.M., occupied the throne, in the absence of the W.M. Grand Master, supported by Thomas Bagshawe, P.G.M. for Essex, as Deputy G.M.; the Right Hon. Thomas Dundas, M.P., S.G.W.; Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., J.G.W.; Horace Lloyd, G.D.; the Rev. C. J. Martyn, G. Chap.; John Hervey, G. Sec.; S. Tomkins, G. Treas.; E. H. Patten, G.S.B.; James Brett, G. Purst.; John Coutts, Assist. G. Purst.; C. B. Payne, G. Tyler; J. L. L. Evans, P.B.G.P.; J. M. Claton, President of Lodge of Benevolence; J. Nunn, P.G.S.B., Vice-President; John Savage, P.G.D.; J. R. Stebbing, P.G.D.; B. Baker, P.G.D.; Rev. J. R. Simpson, P.G.C.; Col. Cole, P.G.D.; W. Young, P.D.S.B.; Joseph Smith, P.G.P., and several others. Among the brethren who attended we observed:—

Bros. J. Tepper, W.M., Grand Stewards Lodge; Geo. States; John Bennett, P.M.; E. J. Baum, P.M. No. 1; A. C. Morton, J.W. 9; Geo. J. Palmer, W.M. 11; R. W. Stewart, P.M. 12; Samuel Field, P.M. 14; Alfred Green, J.W. 7; James Glaisher, S.W. 33; Geo. Kelly, P.M. 46; H. G. Buss, P.M. 27; F. A. Philbrick, W.M. 18; T. W. White, J.W. 21; Jas. Warner, J.W. 23; E. Marsh, W.; J. Bellerby, P.M. 1227; C. Braid, W.M. 1196; J. W. Avery, W.M. 1178; J. F. Creswick, W.M. 957; Thos. Bartlett, W.M. 813; Fred. Webb, W.M. 704; J. J. West, P.M. 548; James Kench, P.M. 538; H. J. Thompson, P.M. 742; H. Fitch, W.M. 742; George Gee, S.W. 1257; L. Alexander, P.M. 188; Samuel Webb, W.M. 619; Henry Massey, P.M. 619; E. Cox, P.M. 657; Thomas Price, P.M. 186; T. E. Tallent, W.M. 186; Kemball Cook, P.M. 197; Octavius Hansard, J.W. 197; E. W. Mackney, S.W. 134; T. B. Brabham, P.M. 59; Matthew Cook, P.M. 23; Samuel May, P.M. 33; T. Meggy, P.M. 21; J. Boyd, P.M. 145; J. L. Thomas, W.M. 142; C. C. Tayler, W.M. 141; Rev. J. M. Vaughan, W.M. 907; James Kew, W.M. 179; Henry Ash, P.M. 179; Henry Garrod, P.M. 749; W. Vevers, P.M. 902; E. Moody, W.M. 1287; T. W. Knight, S.W. 1107; G. Harvey, J.W. 1107; George Stacey, P.M. 209; R. A. Wright, P.M. 504; W. Roebuck, P.M. 463; W. Milner, P.M. 130; W. Jones, J.W. 371; W. Tinkler, W.M. 299; Geo. Cattell, 1194; W. J. Hughan, P.M. 131, P.G. Sec., Cornwall; G. S. Woodwark, W.M. 107; W. E. Gompertz, P.M. 869; W. H. Green, J.W. 1310; W. Dodd, W.M. 1194; J. S. Pullin, P.M. 209; J. Knott, W.W. 1314; G. Nelson, W.M. 1282; W. H. Coulton, W.M. 382.

All the P.M.'s of the Jerusalem Lodge, No. 197, which celebrated its centenary on Friday week, and which was honoured by the presence of the Prince of Wales and the Acting Grand Master, attended. These brethren were Bros. C. H. Gregory, W.M., Bazalgette, Hansard, Kemball Cook, Horace Jones, Hollingsworth, Linn, and Monckton. The Prince of Wales and the Acting Grand Master were made members of the Jerusalem Lodge on its centenary festival, and the attendance of all the Past Masters at the next following Grand Lodge was considered to be a necessary compliment.

Grand Lodge having been opened with the customary solemnities, Grand Secretary, by direction of the Acting Grand Master, read the regulations for the government of Grand Lodge during the time of public business, after which he also read the minutes of last quarterly communication, which, being put to the Lodge, were unanimously confirmed.

The Acting Grand Master then rose and said: Brethren, it is now my duty to make from this chair a communication to you, which seems called for by the circumstance that has come under my notice. I do not wish to lay more stress than is necessary upon that subject; at the same time I think it is right to communicate it to the Craft through you, and to secure, as I doubtless shall, your entire concurrence in the view that I shall lay down. On the 18th of February last, in a Masonic periodical, which I have no doubt is well known to most of you, and it is known by the title of THE FREEMASON, there appeared a letter from a brother, signing himself Delfraisse, of Chard, in Somersetshire, with reference to the recent unhappy war which has taken place in Europe. The letter itself was a short one, but it was coupled with a protest by that brother against the course of action which had been taken by the King of Prussia and the German armies. I can only say it would be undesirable, I think, for me to read that letter or the words in which that protest was couched. It is sufficient for me to say that it was written in an excited and, I think, an unwise tone, and whilst no doubt it would have been wiser and more prudent to have left such a letter and such a protest alone, no man who reads it calmly and dispassionately can deny that it was a document which, if published far and wide, was calculated to stir up the feelings of animosity and hatred. That it did produce that result, in a certain degree, is clear from the consequence, for a few days afterwards the Grand Secretary received a letter from a German brother, dated from Leipsic on the 21st February, in which he complains bitterly—and, I am bound to say, in a not less excited and a not less illogical manner than the letter with which he found so much fault—of that letter. This German brother, writing from Leipsic, called upon the Grand Secretary for a disavowal of the paper which had published this letter and protest. Well, brethren, it seems to me my duty to state to Grand Lodge what I understand to be the real facts of the case. So far as this paper is concerned, and indeed so far as any Masonic publication is concerned, neither the Grand Master nor the Grand Lodge, nor any of the constituted authorities of Masonry in this country are, or ought to be held, responsible. (Hear, hear.) This paper is allowed, as it states upon its title page, to publish the reports of the proceedings in Grand Lodge, with and under the sanction of the Grand Master, on the distinct understanding that those proceedings are accurately reported; but beyond that there is no responsibility whatever attached, as I have said, to the Grand Master or the Grand Lodge; they are not to be held responsible in any degree for that which is contained in the body of the paper. (Hear, hear.) Now, brethren, I wish therefore, in the first instance, to set right our correspondent in Germany, and to make him understand that he is wholly mistaken in attributing any official character either to articles or to letters or to anything that appears in the body of this or any other Masonic publication—(hear, hear); but I do not think that I should be fulfilling my duty if I stopped here. It is, I hold, my duty to condemn, so far as my voice can do it, this letter and this protest; and I do so not on the ground of having sympathy with one side or the other—(hear, hear)—that is a matter wholly beside the question. It is competent to—it is, indeed, the privilege of—every brother in this country to hold whatever political opinions he pleases—(hear, hear)—and to express those opinions, provided always, however, that he chooses the right time, and place, and mode by which that expression is made—(hear, hear); but in Masonry, and in a periodical which confines itself to Masonic matters, it is not only undesirable, it is entirely wrong, that political matters should be introduced. (Hear, hear.) It is wrong, I hold, on two grounds. It is wrong, first, because it is essentially unmasonic—(hear, hear); it is calculated, especially when dealing with those questions on which men's passions and sympathies are warmly aroused, to stir up enmity and strife, and to do that which is opposed to all Masonic feelings. (Hear, hear.) And in the next place, there is no principle which has been more equally, more distinctly and more faithfully adhered to—than that, in this country, at all events, Masonry should hold itself aloof from politics—(hear, hear)—and never, directly or indirectly, sanction any intermeddling with them. (Hear, hear.) And if this be true as regards our own internal and domestic politics, it is à fortiori true as regards foreign politics beyond the seas. Brethren, I have still one word more to say. As it has been my duty to bring this matter under the notice of Grand Lodge, I cannot close these remarks without expressing my personal regret that the manager of this paper should have allowed the introduction of such a letter and such a protest. (Hear, hear.) I do them all justice; I am quite willing to believe that it was one of those oversights to which the most careful managers of a paper are sometimes liable; but at the same time, I would put it to them most earnestly that, in carrying on this publication, they owe a duty both to the Craft and to Grand Lodge, and to the Grand Master, as the Parliament and the constituted head of Freemasonry in England. Privileges are accorded to them of reporting under the sanction of the Grand Master the proceedings of Grand Lodge; and I need scarcely point out that if difficulties of this sort—which happily have been most rare—were to occur, it would become absolutely necessary to reconsider the whole question of Masonic publications. (Hear, hear.) But I prefer, for my own part—I greatly prefer—to appeal to their own good sense, their own good feelings, and above all, that true Masonic spirit which, I am convinced, actuates them, just as much as it actuates all of us. They will feel and understand that in these publications, both with regard to such matters as these, both with regard to the matters which they publish and with regard to the matters which they ought not to publish—because that is often quite as incumbent a duty upon them—they are exercising a great and high trust towards the Craft; and I am satisfied that after this explanation of what has been a painful matter, it will be wholly unnecessary for any one again occupying this chair to call the attention of Grand Lodge to the subject. (The noble lord resumed his seat amidst loud applause.)

On the election of a Most Worshipful Grand Master for the year being brought forward,

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart said: Most Worshipful Acting Grand Master and brethren, I rise with a very great deal of pleasure, in accordance with my nomination at last Grand Lodge, to propose the Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon as our M.W.G. Master for the ensuing year. I am sure, brethren, it is a source of greatest and deepest regret that his lordship is not able to take his seat among us this evening. I know you all feel, as I do, that the way in which he has conducted the business of Grand Lodge while he has been our head and presided over us during the year that is past, he will repeat during the ensuing year. By force of circumstances he is not able to preside here to-night; but there is not one of us, although he may regret his absence, who must not feel gratified that he has been so highly honoured by the position in which he is now placed by her Majesty, by being sent on a political mission to America. Our American brethren will highly appreciate him, because, as we know, he goes fortified with this character: that he has been faithful to his Queen and country, and will act in the business on which he is engaged in the spirit of a true Englishman. I have, therefore, great pleasure in proposing the Earl de Grey and Ripon as our G. Master for the coming year. (Cheers.)

Bro. J. B. Monckton: Most Worshipful Acting G. Master and brethren, I have the honour of seconding the proposal which has been made by our brother, Raynham Stewart. To second the nomination of the head of our Craft is at all times an exceedingly high honour. It is, besides, a very great pleasure when the nobleman so proposed stands deservedly so high in the estimation of his brethren as the Earl de Grey and Ripon. Were I to add to the words which have fallen from our Bro. Stewart, I feel that I should be taking from rather than adding to the value of the brother who is nominated as Grand Master. Therefore, I beg simply to second the motion of my Bro. Stewart. (Cheers.)

The Acting Grand Master then put the motion, which was carried unanimously, amidst great applause.

The Acting Grand Master: Brethren, it will be my duty, and a very pleasant one, to communicate the result of this evening's unanimous vote to my noble friend and brother, Lord de Grey. I shall tell him how unanimous that vote has been. I shall tell him also how much his absence was regretted. If, on the other hand, we all regret that absence, we may be satisfied at least with this reflection: that he is absent in the discharge of a public duty—(hear, hear)—a duty which, if he, and his colleagues who are entrusted together with him in this important task, satisfactorily accomplish, they will have rendered no unimportant service to the country. I will only say that, as he goes fortified and armed with many advantages in his favour, I hold it not to be a less advantage that he goes out as Grand Master from this country. (Applause.) Grand Lodge will now proceed to elect a Grand Treasurer.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart proposed, and Bro. Francis Bennoch seconded, Bro. Saml. Tomkins as Grand Treasurer.

The Acting Grand Master: Brethren, you have heard the nomination of Bro. Tomkins put to you and duly seconded, is it your pleasure to accept that nomination?

The motion was carried unanimously.

The Acting Grand Master: Bro. Tomkins, I have the satisfaction of announcing that you are, as you most justly deserve to be, elected unanimously as Grand Treasurer for the year.

Bro. Samuel Tomkins: Most Worshipful Acting Grand Master and Brethren,—I say with great sincerity I highly appreciate your kindness and good feeling in re-appointing me to this honourable office. I assure you that though I have filled the office for many years, I fill it with more pleasure in each succeeding year. Through it I entertain every year a fraternal affection for a greater number of brethren in the Craft, and I have great pleasure in uniting with them in doing the work of Masonry. I thank you all very much for the appointment. (Cheers.)

The Grand Secretary then announced that the melancholy intelligence had been received from the W. Bro. N. T. W. Smallenburg, Representative at the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands, of the lamented death of Her Royal Highness Princess Louisa Augusta, Consort of His Royal Highness Prince Frederick, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands, and also that a memorial had been presented to the M.W. Grand Master by the Lodge of Benevolence praying permission for the Lodge of Benevolence to take place at six instead of seven o'clock as heretofore; his Lordship had been pleased to comply therewith, and had directed that on and after, Wednesday, the 22nd instant, the meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence shall take place at six o'clock. Also the report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz.:—Bro. G. D. H., of the St. Paul's Lodge, No. 194, £50, and the widow of the late Bro. G. A. B., of the Lodge of Fidelity, No. 230, Devonport, £50.

The first was moved by Bro. Clabon, and second Bro. H. Garrod; and the second by Bro. Clabon, and seconded by Bro. J. W. Halsey.

Both grants were carried.

The report of the Board of General Purposes was as follows:—"The Board of General Purposes beg to submit a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 10th day of February, showing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £3,695 12s. 3d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75."

This was received on the motion of Bro. Evans, and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

The report of Bro. Harding, the auditor of Grand Lodge accounts, which was read by the Grand Secretary, showed a balance of £1,695 14s. 7d. in hand, and, as we understood, a sum of £115 19s. 6d. to the account of the Fund of General Purposes.

This report was then received and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

Bro. Brackstone Baker: Brethren, I am very happy indeed that the Worshipful Grand Master has given me permission to mention to this present Grand Lodge assembled what otherwise would have been put on the agenda paper, which is, the completion of the testimonial to the Building Committee. When I say the completion, there still remains to be done the illuminated vellum which is to accompany the testimonial, and to be presented to each member. When that is completed, I dare say the Committee, of which I am the unworthy chief, will present such a report to Grand Lodge as will be a perfect explanation of all they have hitherto done. But, brethren, by the permission of the Grand Master I am happy to be able to inform you that the resolution passed in Grand Lodge in September, 1869, whereby the services of the Building Committee were to be in some measure recognised by erecting a suitable tablet or memorial in a conspicuous part of the building, has been so far carried out, that we have had the pleasure of to-day inaugurating and unveiling that memorial, and all brethren coming up the staircase to-night must have been pleased to see an entablature, butts and medallions so arranged that the architectural lines of the building have been attended to and carried out by our Bro. Durham, who I am happy to see is here, and who has so performed his work and fulfilled the views of the majority of the Building Committee, that I really think there is nothing further to be done. I very much regret that the facile princeps, the septem virorum preses, as he is called elsewhere, Bro. Havers, is away on this occasion, so that the proceedings at the unveiling must have appeared very much like the play of "Hamlet," with the part of Hamlet left out. We had to do it in the absence of our Bro. John Havers, and I the more regret it because the testimonial is nothing more than a proper and just and right acknowledgment and recognition of the great services rendered by the Building Committee. I am sorry the has been so long in incubation; it has however, at last been hatched in the shape of the tablet we have seen. (Applause.)

Bro. J. R. Stebbing: I have the great gratification of placing upon the notice paper of business this evening a proposition for a subscription of £50 for the Masonic Life-boat; but I ought to explain to you, which I will do in a few words, that this fund which is being raised for the Freemason Life-boat, of which Bro. Harris is the President, Bro. Davis, Treasurer, and a most energetic worker in the good cause; and Bro. Gotthiel, the Secretary. The Committee work with great care and prudence, and as fast as the money is received, it is paid into that very safe institution, the London and Westminster Bank, and about £260 has already been raised. I have been blamed somewhat for not proposing a larger sum; but I want the sanction of Grand Lodge to this Masonic effort. The amount is immaterial, because the example set this evening will, I hope, animate and stimulate the brethren to bear their part in this most interesting work. If so, the fund which is necessary will soon be raised. My lord, it would be a waste of time to press upon you the necessity for a Freemasons' Life-boat. Many institutions and many persons have set us the example of studing the coast of England with the means of saving life, and Freemasonry is now so universal that you can scarcely save a ship's crew without saving the life of a Freemason—at all events, if you do, you save the life of one who ought to be a Freemason. Of all persons in the world, the shipwrecked seaman and the shipwrecked passenger command our greatest sympathies. In returning home either from pleasure or from business from other lands, and hoping to delight their families with their presence, and enjoy the comforts of home, a storm suddenly comes on, the vessel is wrecked, they lose their lives, and in place of joy their homes are made unhappy, and widows and orphans are made of those they loved best, and who might have been clasped to their bosoms if the life-boats of England were more numerous. Let us, then, have one more, and let that have the honour of being subscribed for by the Freemasons. Let us set a good example, and while we do many generous things in the cause of charity, we shall also show that we can do something to help the shipwrecked. If you never save a Mason, you will save one who ought to be; and if he does not become one, you will at least have been the means of bringing happiness to his family. (Cheers.)

Bro. F. Bennoch: I second this motion with great pleasure—first, because I think it a most appropriate motion. All Freemasons naturally take an interest in the maritime glory of our own land, and to carry that out successfully many eminent men run in the face of danger. By the establishment of life-boats during the last five or ten years, numberless numbers—I was about to say but thousands—of our fellow-countrymen have been saved from a watery grave. This was my first reason for seconding this motion. The second is, that, when a premature motion was brought before us some time ago, to grant a sum similar to this for a like purpose, I felt bound to oppose it, and to move the previous question, because I found that nothing in reality had been done, and the whole thing was a chimera and was meaningless. Grand Lodge saw the propriety of the division I took. Now, however, the thing is changed. A substantial committee, earnest in heart, backed, encouraged, and supported by Bro. Stebbing, will, I am quite sure, in a few months have raised a sufficient sum to purchase a life-boat; and before another winter, with an angry sea, sets in upon our coasts, we may see the Freemason life-boat launched. I hope it will be a long time before it is called into action; but whenever it is, there will be true rejoicing on the land.

The motion was carried.

Bro. John Savage, P.G.D., moved—"That at page 10 of the laws relating to the Fund of Benevolence in law 16, after the words, in the lines 9, 10, and 11, 'shall not be effectual until confirmed at the next or a subsequent meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence,' be added the word, 'except in cases of recommendations to the Grand Lodge.'" This he did to remedy what had become a read grievance—the waiting by petitioners for several months before they could receive the money granted them by the Lodge of Benevolence, when the amount exceeded £50, till the grant was confirmed by Grand Lodge. At various times the powers of the Lodge of Benevolence had been enlarged. He knew three instances in which great hardship had been inflicted by the present rules; one was the case of a grant of £250, which was recommended last August, and by the present rules could only be paid to-morrow (Thursday last); if it had been sixty guineas it could not have been paid sooner. Many years ago it was decided that amount to £50 should not require confirmation, but now they did, and it threw applicants three months back. When it exceeded £50 it was a six months' wait. There was a case before the lodge to-night where a deceased brother had been a large subscriber to our funds, and the Board, by a perfectly unanimous vote, granted the widow £100, but that according to the existing rules, could not be paid till the 7th of September next. That was a denial, not only of justice, but time, charity, and true love. He would, therefore, ask them to make the alteration. It would not affect votes of £50; they would not require confirmation.

Bro. J. W. Halsey seconded the motion.

Bro. J. M. Clabon said that as the Grand Master had done him the honour of making him the first President of the Lodge of Benevolence, Grand Lodge would expect to hear from him what the Board themselves thought, and what he thought on the subject. They were now commencing a new system. A president and vice-president were appointed for the year, and the Board had met three times, and already they had begun to feel that some few amendments might be desirable in their constitution. This was one; but he thought it required a good deal of experience before they could come to Grand Lodge and ask them to make these amendments. This subject come newly before the Board, and he had to express his opinion at the moment. But if he had time he no doubt he could give good reasons for opposing Bro. Savage's motion. He felt he had not had time to make up his mind; he wanted more experience. He should therefore wish Bro. Savage to suspend his motion, and let the Board go on a little while longer till it had had more experience.

Bro. Joseph Smith agreed with Bro. Clabon. He thought it was hardly fair to their president, who had been recently appointed, to require him to pronounce an opinion on the subject. Bro. Savage might first have consulted Bro. Clabon before he asked Grand Lodge to make the alteration. He differed altogether in opinion from Bro. Savage, and if he (Bro. Smith) thought for one moment that the motion would be carried, he should have a great deal to say upon it. He would ask that the amendment of Bro. Clabon should be carried, and the motion referred back to the Committee to bring up a report which he hoped would be satisfactory.

Bro. Joshua Nunn reminded Grand Lodge that he, on a former occasion, brought forward a similar proposition, but he asked the Grand Master to allow him to withdraw it, for reasons similar to those which had been given by the President of the Board. The brethren who attended by the Board of Benevolence would agree with him that that body was hardly in working order yet, and he thought the carrying of such a proposition would be acting injudiciously.

Bro. J. Symonds must say that the result of this law was not contemplated when the alteration was before the Committee by the brother by whom the alteration was suggested. The Board had simply considered whether it was desirable that further powers should be conferred on the Lodge of Benevolence itself to give larger sums of money than they had hitherto given without the necessity of coming to Grand Lodge. As one of the Committee he felt that it was very desirable if that increased power were granted that there should be an opportunity of recommending the point in the Lodge of Benevolence itself before the money was paid; but it never was contemplated—it never entered his mind that it would interfere with the recommendation of the Board of Benevolence to the Grand Lodge. Let them remember if this alteration was maintained they would place every brother, and the unfortunate widow of any brother, in a very much worse position than they were in before the law was altered. (Hear, hear.) As the law stood, if the Board of Benevolence made a recommendation that did not require to be confirmed at the Board itself it was brought up to Grand Lodge, and Grand Lodge passed it. If it did not exceed £50, it was paid at once; if it exceeded £50, it came to the next Grand Lodge. In no case would four and a-half months elapse before the money was paid. The accidental alteration of the law—for he called it accidental because the whole circumstances were not before the Board—that in cases of grants of £50 sometimes three months and a-half must elapse before the money was paid; and in cases of larger amounts frequently very nearly seven months must elapse. That really amounted to this: the greater the distress, the greater the delay. Certainly, upon the point of order that had been touched upon, he thought it would have been better if Bro. Savage had consulted the President of the Board before placing the motion on the paper. He (Bro. Symonds) quite felt that was a mistake on the part of Bro. Savage, which he would admit himself he ought not to have committed. He hoped it would not be allowed to weigh, however; if it was, they would not be doing justice to the unfortunate brethren and widows of brethren. He would heartily support the motion of Bro. Savage.

Bro. Col. Cole was not aware that there was anything but the motion of Bro. Savage before Grand Lodge. He had heard a brother second a speech of the President of the Board of Benevolence, but there was no motion or amendment proposed by Bro. Clabon. The motion before Grand Lodge was the motion of Bro. Savage, who he thought was in the right in the principle he had advocated. He thought it never was intended that the Board of Benevolence should have the power to do everything without coming to Grand Lodge, who were, after all, the people to pay the money. The Board of Benevolence were the pioneers of Grand Lodge, and he objected to the Board of Benevolence superseding Grand Lodge. If the Board of Benevolence recommended a sum of money to be granted by Grand Lodge it would not be necessary in the intermediate time to get a second report, which would involve this—that the same brethren should be present at the Board. (Hear, hear.) It would give great trouble to members of country lodges, of which the Craft was more numerously composed than of London ones. It was no trouble to the London brethren, but those who came from the North of England would find it very inconvenient. Although the rules might not actually oblige them to be at the Board, yet a case to be successful, required brethren to be present who could speak well upon it. He thought Bro. Savage's motion was necessary to carry out the benevolent intentions of this Grand Lodge, and he should support it. If it was a point of honour between Bro. Savage and the Vice-President in not giving formal notice of the motion, it was really a weak point. He (Bro. Cole) heard the question discussed at the last Board of Benevolence. There might be a certain etiquette which it was necessary to observe, but he did not think it was necessary to follow its rules in cases of this kind where it did not apply. Grand Lodge was asked to put this off, but were not told what specific time was required.

Bro. Clabon explained that the matter was not discussed at the last Board of Benevolence, but at the Board of Masters. As to putting the matter off, he only wished it until the board had had more experience.

Bro. Horace Lloyd thought that, whether or not it would have been better for Bro. Savage to go to the President and Vice-President of the Lodge of Benevolence before bringing this motion forward, was a small matter; but Bro. Savage was at least entitled to say that he had not brought it forward hastily, without due consideration, or without conferring with, and having the approval of, those whose approval might help him. Nor had he brought it forward without giving reasons, and good reasons, why the change should be made; or without giving instances, and clear instances, in which the present law worked harshly and unjustly. Those instances were not picked for the purpose of supporting the case; but, as it was conceded, actually the last three or four instances were of cases where the law was enforced, and by being enforced was harsher. For himself, he should not come forward to support the proposition of Bro. Savage if he thought the law, as it stood, led to really more careful consideration of the grants, and to more care before a sum of money was given; but he believed it did not lead to greater consideration. It led to delay only, and for this reason—when the matter came up, after being examined, it was debated in the Lodge of Benevolence, and it was duly confirmed at another meeting, at which his practical experience led him to think it was impossible, or almost impossible, to contest it. The functions of Grand Lodge were most important functions—holding the reins, and when there was too great liberality on the part of the Board of Benevolence, checking it. He believed there would be more real control and supervision if the matters came straight from the Lodge of Benevolence to this Lodge, because it would then be a real court for the consideration of the matter. It would be their bounden duty to consider the circumstances of each case, and individually lend their minds to the matter. This very circumstance would no doubt render it not very agreeable, though he believed no brother wished to put his own feelings in the way. It might not be so gratifying to the President and the board to find that they were no longer the dispensers of the larger charities of the Order, which would be under the management and control of the Grand Lodge; but the control would be more real. He would support the proposition, which, he believed, would make the control of Grand Lodge a real thing. The only effect he could see of the present system was this, that the Lodge of Benevolence, instead of Grand Lodge, reconsidered matters which it was desirable should be reconsidered. He thought it desirable that a second body should be brought in to reconsider matters. There was also the other point suggested by Bro. Cole, of the inconvenience of brethren coming a long distance a second time to support a case. Under these circumstances, after duly considering the matter, he would uphold Bro. Savage in desiring to take the opinion of this large assembly; and he, for one, would give his vote for it.

Bro. A. J. McIntyre had not intended to speak on the subject were it not for the way the matter had been met by the President of the Board of Benevolence. The new system had not yet had a fair trial. They had adopted, after consideration, a certain mode of procedure which ought to have a fair trial; and those brethren who constantly attended the board were able to give better data than those who only attended now and then. The case put by Bro. Horace Lloyd was that in every single vote brought forward, because the Board of Benevolence had investigated the matter and reported on it, Grand Lodge ought not to reverse that decision. Why, there was one case some time ago where a large sum was granted, and when Grand Lodge sent the recommendation back for reconsideration, nothing at all was granted. Do not let them be hasty. If they had been hasty in making the law, let them not be hasty in abrogating it, and let them be guided by those who had the best opportunity of seeing the mode in which the system worked. He approved of Bro. Cole's opinions, which, he thought, were entitled to consideration.

Bro. Savage would not consent to withdraw his motion.

The Acting Grand Master: Brethren, you have had this question now very fully argued. After hearing the arguments on both sides, I think it is really one on which any brother may exercise a perfectly fair and impartial judgment. I can see myself very good reasons both for accepting the view of the proposer of this motion, and also for deferring your decision to another Grand Lodge. I merely wish to say that I am satisfied, on the one hand, that no discourtesy has been intended—(hear, hear); I am satisfied, on the other hand, that the opposition to this proposal arises simply from a not unreasonable feeling on the part of those who are responsible for the management of the Lodge of Benevolence in the proper and adequate discharge of their duties; and I would point out to Grand Lodge that when I shall put this question to the vote, no amendment has been moved. It will therefore be for those on the one hand, who accept this, simply to signify their assent; on the other hand, for those who are in opposition when their turn comes, to hold up their hands to signify their dissent. No amendment whatever has been moved. I understand, and I also think it fair to say so, the only objection of those who object to this, to be, not that the motion should be negatived, nor again that it should be indefinitely postponed, but that it should be adjourned simply till they, the President and the officers of the Board of Benevolence have had a little time to look round them to see the working of the new system—(hear, hear)—and to bring themselves either to accept this proposition, or to make some proposal in substitution for it. Whilst I feel that this is so open a question that I really hesitate to express any opinion of my own on the subject, I do also feel that in such a case as this I fear to give too great a latitude to those who are charged with the responsibility of such a board; and I would not needlessly hamper them in the exercise of their duty.

The motion was then put and carried, and Grand Lodge was closed in ample form and adjourned.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you permit me to state, for the information of my brethren of the Mark Degree, that I have no connection whatever with the so-called "Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners;" and that neither I, nor Colonel Burdett, have any intention of holding office in that body.

I shall be glad if matters can be so arranged with those brethren who have, in my opinion, unadvisedly committed themselves to that organisation, as that it may speedily be brought to an end, and a "Lodge of Advice" be formed instead to assist the Grand Mark Master in working the Ark as a side degree to the Mark, which is, I think, its proper position. But whether this result be, or be not, arrived at, I am desirous that the members of Mark lodges, who wish to work the Ark Degree under the Mark G.L., should be made aware that they can do so by applying to the Grand Mark Secretary for authority.

I am, Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
G. R. PORTAL,
Grand Mark Master.

UNVEILING THE BUILDING COMMITTEE'S MEMORIAL AT FREEMASONS' HALL.

A full report of this ceremony is in type, but owing to the extraordinary length of our Grand Lodge report, we must defer its insertion till next week.

CHARLES H. HUDSON, chemist, Ouse St. Goole, writes, Feb. 1870:—"Your Pain Killer is one of the few patent medicines I keep which I can confidently recommend, and I am bound to say that wherever it has been fairly tried it seems to have invariably answered its purpose well.—To Perry Davis & Son 17, Southampton-row, London, W.C."

A WORD IN SEASON.

AT the completion of a second year of labour in the editorial department of THE FREEMASON, we cannot refrain from expressing our deep sense of the increased support and encouragement by which our efforts have been sustained during the past year. It is no light matter to establish on a stable and permanent basis a weekly newspaper like THE FREEMASON; it is no light matter, in this age of competition, not only to have reached the haven of success, but to be enabled to maintain and augment the prosperity of any literary undertaking. We have, however, been fortunate enough to accomplish this great feat; and we can say, with all sincerity and truth, that the progress of this journal, in circulation, especially during the last three or four months, has kept pace with our most sanguine expectations. In fact, it is evident that the English Craft have adopted THE FREEMASON, and look upon its columns as an honest reflex of their own thoughts, opinions, and customs. The history of Freemasonry in England at the present day can be gathered from our pages, and the evil that is combated—the good that is achieved—by the Fraternity day by day is chronicled faithfully and impartially by men who delight in working for the welfare of the Order. And beyond all doubt, the Masonic Charities—whose cause we have ever warmly advocated—have derived substantial benefit from the appeals which we have continuously made in their behalf. We are happy to add that the amount received at the recent Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was larger even than the average sums announced for several years past; and this result is the more gratifying when we consider how many and how great have been the claims of late on the sympathies of the English public. The horrors of famine in Paris have been averted mainly through the timely and well-organized aid extended by the British people to their suffering neighbours, and in all parts of France which have been crushed and desolated by the iron heel of war our countrymen have been the first to hasten to the rescue of the victims, and to aid in the good work of mercy, relief, and consolation. All honour to the humanitarian spirit which prompts such deeds, for while other nations content themselves with expressing a barren sympathy with the woes of France, the practical mind of England devises the means of help, and affords substantial succour to those who are in need.

Still, it cannot be denied that the pecuniary assistance rendered by the benevolent to foreign distress is likely to tell severely upon our charitable institutions at home, and it is scarcely to be expected that the educational establishments of the Craft will be entirely exempt from the disturbing influence resulting from this cause. One of our institutions, the Boys' School, is, however, so exceptionally situated at present that we trust the brethren will allow no consideration, except the dictates of prudence, to interfere with the hearty support which the Institution so urgently requires. We know that strong opinions have been expressed as to the wisdom or unwisdom of spending so large a sum upon bricks and mortar as the Boys' Institution has undoubtedly cost. Probably if the Committee had to travel over the same road again, the amount expended would not be so heavy.

We learn by experience; and forty thousand pounds present a rather formidable appearance to many members of the Craft who are not exactly millionaires. However, the work is done—the school is built, and a very noble structure it is, replete with every comfort and convenience; and now there is the "little bill" to pay.

Thanks to the gigantic efforts made by the Fraternity during the last two years, the debt incurred has been reduced to the comparatively small sum of £6,000. But in addition to this, the current expenses of the Institution for the year must be defrayed, and we dare not hope that the ensuing Festival will witness the complete extinction of the debt. In common with many of the Craft, we had fondly hoped that the magnificent result of the appeal made by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales last year had completely released the Institution from its pecuniary difficulties, and we fear that the disagreeable discovery that such was not the case, has somewhat astounded many members of the Order. Now, our duty is plain: a Masonic charity is at present impeded in its career of usefulness, and its area of beneficence is circumscribed for want of funds. Get the Institution out of debt, that is the main point; and the ventilation of the theory that mistakes have been made in the past will certainly not help us to secure this result.

The Festival which is to be held in aid of its objects will take place under the presidency of the Sir Watkin Williams Wynne, on the 8th inst., and knowing as we do, how popular that Right Worshipful Brother is in the province over which he presides—North Wales and Shropshire—we may anticipate a goodly list of subscriptions, although scarcely the amount required to clear the Institution of debt. A considerable number of brethren, both in London and the provinces, have already contributed largely, but a still greater number have never given a shilling to any of our Masonic Charities. Now, if each brother who had given his mite were to make it his business to bring the subject under the notice of another brother who had not subscribed, even if no immediate donation were forthcoming, it would tend to remove that lamentable ignorance and apathy in which the best and noblest principles of Freemasonry are ignored and forgotten by too many members of the Craft.

It shall certainly be our study to disseminate from time to time as widely as our circulation extends, accurate and reliable information upon the position and prospects of our several charities, but in the meantime we earnestly recommend all to lend a helping hand to the Boys' School, so as to remove for ever the weight of debt which at present cripples its resources, and restricts its progress and development.

WE are pleased to hear that it is in contemplation to reopen the Florence Nightingale Mark Lodge at Woolwich. For some time past the degree has been in abeyance at Woolwich, and now it is about to be revived—the old Scotch warrant will be exchanged for one under the English Constitution. We wish the lodge every success.

"BRO. HUGHAN AND THE BIBLE QUESTION."

I shall have much pleasure in replying to the fraternal remarks by Bro. Jacob Norton, of Boston, U.S., in about a fortnight. I shall be away from home all the next week, and being so much engaged one way and another, it is quite impossible for me to do so before.

As a member of the Jewish persuasion, Bro. Norton naturally views Freemasonry in a somewhat different light to myself, as a professed Christian; but as the point at issue is neither what are his proclivities, nor what are mine, but what are the evidences in support of my article inserted in THE FREEMASON for January 7th, we need not labour under any difficulty because of our religious beliefs. I object to gratuitous assumptions, and shall notice no objections unless made to certain statements of mine. I mention this because part of Bro. Norton's letter I strongly support, and therefore that intelligent and zealous Mason will see he has done wrong to class me among those who oppose absolute freedom for all religionists, as to their obligations upon entering Freemasonry, and as to their continuance as members of our universal and unsectarian Institution.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

Truro, 25th Feb., 1871.

"COWAN," "HELE," &c.

I have long thought that the word cowan has a Masonic origin, and that consequently we need not accept fanciful notions of its derivation, as some learned Masonic authors favour us with.

If it be not a Masonic word exclusively, will some brother kindly instance its use by a non-Mason at a period when it is evident Freemasonry could not have been in any way connected with its origin.

That "hele" means to "cover or hide," as Bro. W. Carpenter well observes, and which view is supported by Bro. W. de St. Croix, I have no doubt.

The use of three apparent synonyms like "hele, conceal," &c., seems to be for the purpose of drawing more than ordinary attention to the solemnity and importance of the O.B., as with "evasion, equivocation," &c.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

I am enabled to enlighten "Historicus" on the reception of Bros. Goss (alias Crucefix) and Leeson in the following extract, for which I am indebted to a friend; it is valuable and worthy of your pages.

There is no doubt that both Bros. Goss and Leeson violated their obligations when they established their self-elected, so-called, S.C. In their case, the violation is the more reprehensible as they could have had no object but the acquisition of power by any or every means, as the degrees were under a better elective government than that they established, and which is now again revived by my own and many other chapters of the Templar high grades, which organisation our friends are invited to join.

But the facts seem to be that all reformers have thrown their obligations to the winds of heaven when it suited their purpose; prove a wrong (they say) and the obligations founded on it ceases. If we are bound to support an obligation after conviction of error, then the first line of the Prayer Book is wrong; and the Irish Church would not have fallen. Is that which is not binding on statesmen binding on others? Was Galileo bound in honour not to divulge the fact that the earth was round? Still more, Savonarolo against his priestly obligation; and, again, still more, Martin Luther? Are all seceding clergymen from the 39 Articles dishonourable? These make it no question of honour at all, but one of logic. To bring the matter home to our own Order, we are informed by Cornelius Agrippa that the followers of the material philosophy of Aristotle, bound their disciples by oath never to transgress his rules. Take down a copy of the Mosaicall Philosophy, of Robt. Fludd, the Rosicrucian (1633), and we find him glorying in the fact that he repudiated an oath he had vowed "by a ceremonial rite" to this papal philosophy in his youth. A brother may therefore be justified in repudiating a promise of obedience where that is a tendency to evil, as in the case of the A. and A. Rite.

I mention this as anticipatory of any reply the Rev. Bro. Newnham may make to my last, and would not wish to discuss the question further, as I consider such a discussion altogether unsuited to your pages. I hold my plighted word as sacred as any man, but these are casuistical questions for one's own judgment, and on which one may be quite as capable of deciding as Bro. Newnham.

Laws and Regulations of the Cross of Christ Encampment, No. 20, London, 1837. R. T. Crucefix, E. Commander.

X. That the admission fee to this Encampment be five guineas; that the Candidates for the Superior Degrees of R.C. and N.P.U., do pay three guineas each (which shall include the expenses of the banquet); and should any Knight Companion of the Encampment be desirous of receiving the Order of K. of M., he shall pay the additional fee of two guineas on his admission to such Order.

Page 8. A joining Member, according to rule xi., not having "received the Superior Degrees of R.C. and N.P.U. and K. of M., he shall be entitled to those degrees on the same terms as the other Members of the Encampment."

XIV. That a Sovereign Chapter of the R.C. and N.P.U. Degrees shall be holden once a year on or near Good Friday (emergencies excepted), &c.

Robert Thos. Crucefix, M.D., joined the Encampment 23rd September, 1831, from Edinburgh. Henry Beaumont Leeson, A.M., Blue Stile, Greenwich, was installed K.T. Dec. 16, 1836, and R.C. and N.P.U. May 5, 1837.

JOHN YARKER.

P.S.—This is itself quite conclusive of the sole legal right of the Templars to their own degrees; for the so-called S.C. was not established till 1845.

I may state that some years ago I was informed that the Ne Plus Ultra practised by the Cross of Christ Encampment was the Templar Priest, or N.P.U. of the Ancient York Rite; and that neither Dr. Goss (alias Crucefix) or Dr. Leeson ever had the degrees which they set up to confer. This is confirmed by the list of degrees and titles possessed by Bro. "Crucefix," given in the "Freemasons' Quarterly," vol. 8th, 1841, and by the fact that the system of "Cross of Christ" was identical with the official ritual of the Scottish Templars.

MASONS' COMPANY.

From the "City of London Directory" we learn the following particulars respecting this company:—

Office.—Their hall in Basinghall-street is now let, the income being devoted to charity.

Charters.—This company was originally designate the "Citizens and Freemasons of London" in 1410. They were first incorporated by 29th Charles II., December 17th, 1677, and their by-laws were approved shortly afterwards. James II. gave them a new charter February 9th, 1686. This was, however, vacated by statute of William and Mary, and Queen Anne exemplified and confirmed their previous charter, December 17th, 1677.

Arms.—Sable: on a chevron, between three towers argent, a pair of compasses of the first. Crest: on a wreath a castle, as in arms. Motto: "In the Lord is all our Trust."

Fees Payable.—Upon taking up the freedom: by patrimony or servitude, £5 5s.; by purchase, £7 7s. Upon admission to the livery, £15 15s. Upon election to the Court of Assistants, £5; Wardens, £15; Master, £10.

Charities.—These are several small pensions given to decayed members of the company or their widows; for particulars application should be made to the clerk.

THE ARK DEGREE.

Having seen so much in your paper lately about this degree, and coming across the "Scenes in the Life of Savonarolo," I send you an extract, with an enquiry whether the teachings conveyed in that degree correspond with those of that excellent man:—

"In Advent, Savonarolo had pointed out the need in which the Church stood of chastening and purifying, and that the scourge which was to perform this office was close at hand; and now he proceeded to treat of a sort of allegorical ark, which was to be the refuge of those who wished to escape from those imminent perils. This ark, literally speaking, was the ark built by Noah, but Savonarolo represents it figuratively as a sort of haven of safety for the righteous; faith is the length of it, charity is the breadth of it, and hope is the height of it. Savonarolo discoursed upon this strange allegory throughout Lent; every day, he added, he would say, 'a new plank to the ship,' and by this he would explain that he meant another of the virtues necessary to all faithful Christians. At last, on the morning of Easter-day, the allegorical ark was completed. 'Let every one hasten,' he said, when concluding his sermon that day, 'let every one hasten to enter into the Ark of the Lord. To-day Noah invites you all to enter in; the door is open now, but a day is coming when it will be shut, and many will seek to enter in, but shall not be able.'" W. D.

RODOCANACHI AND RHODOCANAKIS.

When I inform "W. M." that Prince Demetrius Rhodocanakis (not Rodocanachi) is under thirty years of age, he will at once see that the Demetrius Rhodocanachi about whom he inquires is not the same individual.

From twenty years' knowledge of the Greeks, I may add also that he cannot be a near relative either; but if it is of any importance to "W. M." to find a cousinship, I will try to ascertain for him.

There was a D. K. Rodoconachi, a Greek merchant who failed in Manchester some time ago, who, I know, assumed the name on leaving Smyrna. He held no blood relationship whatever. JOHN YARKER.

Will you kindly answer the following query through the medium of your columns: Is it perfectly correct for a brother, who is not a W.M. or a P.M., to deliver the lectures on the tracing boards, either as a sequel to the degree, or for the instruction of such brethren as wish to hear those lectures? JUNIOR.

[There is no law in the Masonic Constitutions to preclude a W.M. from calling upon any brother to assist either by delivering the lecture on the lecture or explanation of working tools, &c.—ED.]

BIBLICAL ACCOUNT OF THE CREATION.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Without incurring the imputation of obtruding myself into the question under discussion between Bros. Hughan and Norton, may I be permitted to ask our American brother, for purposes apart from Masonry, though imported by him into it, who are the "professors in Oxford" who "deny the biblical account of the creation," and where and in what terms the "Encyclopædia Britannica" does the same thing? Let it be noted that the allegation is, they "deny the biblical account of the creation." It will not be enough to reply that they interpret the biblical account differently to what some others, and probably most others, do; that is, that they regard the Mosaic text as a poetical or an allegorical description of the Divine Work, as Bishop Colenso does, and as Mr. Godwin, the author of the article in "Essays and Reviews" does; or that they and others interpret the Hebrew word, which the English version translates "day," as denoting an indefinite period—a period of any length which is in harmony with the subject to which it applies. But this cannot be said to be a new thing—a thing not known in 1813, for it was a mode of interpretation existing from the second century of the Christian era, and one that has long been maintained by scholars and divines, whose faith in the divine character of the Mosaic records is not to be questioned. It is the "denial" by the authorities Bro. Norton refers to that I ask him to help me to.

Yours fraternally,
WILL. CARPENTER.

FOUR GRAND LODGES FOR THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—I have to-day received from the Grand Secretary Grand Lodge of New Brunswick, in the Dominion of Canada, a copy of the "Proceedings" of that body at its third annual session held in September last. In the address of G.M. Peters there is, in my opinion, the most perfectly intelligible presentation of the issue between the Grand Lodges of the two Provinces, heretofore best known as Canada proper, that during the year ending October last, I have seen in print. In it, I am happy to say, Bro. Peters does not only assert but fairly proves that under neither bearing of the American G. L. jurisdictional rule the brethren of the Province of Quebec had the right to erect a Grand body for that Province. The effect, he says, of such erection would be that Ontario, as well, should have a Grand Lodge, and this necessarily would cause the dissolution of the Grand Lodge of Canada, the parent body and a generally recognized Grand organization. Now while I grant this conclusion as inevitable as it is indisputable, I beg the favour of a column of your space in which to inquire:—1st, What, if any, improper result would ensue from this act? 2nd, What is the object and purposes of a Masonic Grand Lodge? and 3rd, If it be proved that no improper result can ensue from the dissolution of one Masonic Grand Lodge, and the erection in its stead of two Masonic Grand Lodges, what is there in the institution known as Masonic to prevent such a condition?

It is evident to every man who has watched the outcry about "principle," "Grand Lodge sovereignty," &c., in this matter for the past year that at the back of all those fancy cries, there is something of far greater importance, and that something is nearly 50,000 dollars in the possession of the Grand Lodge of Canada which rightfully, and in case she recognize fraternally the Grand Lodge of Quebec, she would have to divide pro rata according to lodge membership in the respective provinces, with the latter. By the balance sheet of the Grand Lodge of Canada, cast up to the 29th of January, 1870, and which appears in the last printed proceedings of that body, there were 40,382.57 dollars at that date in the treasury of that Grand Lodge. This is all money or the representative of money, stocks and bonds of the Dominion of Canada, or other equally good securities, and accumulating interest. By the present time this amount has probably been increased 10,000 dollars, as the dues, &c., for 1869 were nearly that sum, and as this Grand Lodge pays no mileage or per diem to its members, the money received for charter fees, dues, certificates, &c., all amounting to this sum for a year, with the accumulation by interest on the large sum above, leave the nearly 50,000 dollars mentioned as probably in the treasury by this time. Of course were the Grand Lodge of Canada to recognize the Grand Lodge of Quebec, the next movement would involve the division of this Treasury—the lodges of the two Provinces having contributed this money—and such a division would be but eminently right and proper. The majority of the Quebec brethren, after a year spent in the occupancy of that position, are determined to have a Grand Lodge for that Province. This leaves the Grand Lodge of Canada—a title that under such circumstances is a misnomer—the Province of Ontario only; and its persistence in refusing to recognize the Grand Lodge of Quebec must have some more tangible basis than imaginary infraction of its authority. Is not the possession of 50,000 dollars a sufficiently tangible basis? What else is there involved in the issue that should continue this assertion of Masonic justice and fraternal right on the one hand, and the denial of the same on the other? Will it be successfully affirmed that, had the Grand Lodge of Canada no greater Treasury this day than has the Grand Lodge of Quebec, so persistent a stand would be maintained by the former? How will either Canadian Masonry per se, or Masonry universal be injured, or suffer to the slightest extent by the dissolution of the Grand Lodge of Canada and the erection in its stead of the Grand Lodge of Ontario? The same men, except residents of the Quebec jurisdiction, will probably become officers of the latter—is it supposable that it is those men who lead the maintenance of non-recognition?—assuredly it should not be conceivable that, at most, half-a-dozen men thus situated could rule this matter. And suppose that under neither bearing of the "American rule" as to jurisdiction of Grand Lodges the action of the Quebec brethren is not right, who can successfully affirm that this "American rule" itself is right; or is there nothing higher or better by which to determine this matter than a "rule" originally made by a few malcontents who, when all Masonic authority was dead in that colony, erected themselves into a Grand Lodge for Massachusetts in 1777, in defiance of every rule at that time known as to the manner of regularly organizing a Grand Lodge of Freemasons? Are not Masonic justice and the rights of brethren who, having elected that thenceforth they should as Freemasons govern themselves, to the best of their knowledge and ability and with no undue haste, proceeded to the formation of a Grand Lodge for that purpose, a higher consideration and more important than the rule styled "American," adopted in, or a year or so after, 1777, by a then organization which, except by itself, was not recognized to any extent by Freemasons as a Grand Lodge for Massachusetts? Is that which is established in assumption, in a country in a condition of rebellion, to be for ever after in Freemasonry recognized as a rule that must govern in time of profound peace as in time of war?

2nd. What are the objects and purposes of a Masonic Grand Lodge? This question would properly be introduced by a definition of the objects and purpose of modern Freemasonry. It being, however, granted that these are known to your readers, I will proceed to state that a Masonic Grand Lodge is a creation of Masonic, private, operative, or "subordinate" lodges, as the American preferred term is, and this creation is for the general government and better administration of justice among such lodges. No Mason will assert that this is not true, or that any Grand Lodge is created for the benefit of Freemasons not members of its lodges. Now inasmuch as this condition may be considered indisputable, does it not follow that those who legitimately erected a Grand Lodge can also legitimately dissolve the same? Is the creation more enduring than its creator? Is not Vox Populi Vox Dei in any organization of MEN?

Certain changes being considered reasonable and necessary for the perfect settlement of this question, what is there to prevent these changes having place? I have elsewhere, and before this said, and I think proved that a grand lodge is but a name, provided it has no treasury to constitute something more. A grand lodge is a body composed of representatives from the lodges of a territory, province, state, principality, kingdom, empire, or any other division of a territorial government. Those representatives elect officers for a Grand Lodge, to serve until their successors are elected and installed, and by this act a Grand Lodge is organized. The object of this body is to govern the lodges of its jurisdiction, and administer justice to every brother therein. Such a body may be dissolved to-day by the voice of a majority of those representatives, and re-erected to-morrow under another name, if such be the wish of that majority. There has never been any dispute about the propriety of two or more Grand Lodges of Freemasons uniting. Why should there be any dispute about one Grand Lodge dividing into two or more; or of one Grand Lodge dissolving and another thereupon, being at once erected with the materials of the first? Than such erection following such dissolution in the case present nothing can be more simple; as, for example: To-day the Grand Lodge of Canada, in annual or emergent session, assembles, and is opened in ample form. A preamble and two resolutions are prepared. The adoption by a majority vote of this preamble, and the first of those resolutions dissolve the Grand Lodge of Canada for ever. The adoption of the second resolution and consequent action re-erects the Grand Lodge under its proper name of the Grand Lodge of Ontario First preamble and first resolution may read thus: "Whereas circumstances, which the members of the Grand Lodge of Canada have been unable to control, having rendered the title, 'Grand Lodge of Canada' a misnomer, therefore be it resolved: 1st. That with the adoption of this preamble and resolution by a majority of the members of this Grand Lodge here present, the Grand Lodge of Canada is for evermore dissolved." That being adopted, the next resolution would read: Resolved, 2nd. That the Grand Lodge of Ontario be forthwith organized by the election of officers for that body." This resolution being adopted, and the election proceeded with to completion, and the officers-elect installed, the Grand Lodge of Ontario is thereupon properly organized for the dispatch of business; the first business in order being the recognition of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and the division of the funds with that body on a pro rata basis.

3rd. If it be proven, &c. To this third inquiry I answer—Nothing! If any other answer can be satisfactorily given I would be highly gratified to see it in your columns. Grand Master Peters, following Grand Master Stevenson, asserts in his address to his Grand Lodge that in this Canadian issue "the great doctrine of Grand Lodge sovereignty is on its trial." Since when, may I ask those gentlemen, has Grand Lodge sovereignty been a "great doctrine"? Would it not be as much in good taste, as truthful and appropriate, to speak of the sovereignty of the Canadian Parliament as to speak of the sovereignty of the Grand Lodge of Canada, or any other body of the kind? A Grand Lodge is a responsible, and not an irresponsible body. The convenience and accommodation of the creators of Grand Lodges are, taken together, a much greater "doctrine" than the "sovereignty" of any Grand Lodge. Freemasons existed, increased, and performed their greatest works before Grand Lodges were invented; and they would probably continue to perform all they are performing were those "sovereignties" to the last one for ever dissolved. Lodges exist without a Grand Lodge; but no Grand Lodge can exist without lodges. Of itself, it is nothing but a name. Sovereignty, the lexicographers inform us, is "the right to exercise supreme power, or dominion." In the matter of a Grand Lodge of Masons, how can this apply: Except for crime a Grand Lodge can exercise over the individual no power at all, and then it can but confirm the vote of that body in which the criminal was convicted. How can this be called supreme power or dominion over any person or thing? A little more modesty exercised by those eminent Grand Masters in their choice of terms would be praiseworthy, and the omission of this virtue is much to be regretted. It is, possibly, from the recurrence of such expressions as that of Grand Masters Stevenson and Peters that inquiry follows as to whether an ulterior object is or not entertained by Freemasons generally, when they get entirely consolidated—an object not published on the house-tops nor intended to be known of all men.

I remain, fraternally yours,
FLETCHER BRENNAN,
Editor of the American Freemason.

Masonic Miscellanea.

WE are glad to announce that all the Masonic meetings held at Freemasons' Hall, Woolwich, retire to Bro. De Grey's for refreshment. The Nelson Lodge, No. 700, now holds its banquets at Bro. De Greys'.

ON the eve of the Anniversary Festival, in connection with which a strong appeal for support is made to the brethren, it must be very gratifying to those who wish well to the interests of this Educational Institution to receive assurances and proofs of its efficiency and success. These are found in the fact that the whole of the pupils—six in number—who were entered for the Cambridge Local Middle-class Examinations in December last, passed through the severe ordeal with credit. One attained honour in the second class, three in the third class, and two satisfied the examiners.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—At the Bridge House Hotel, Wellington-street, Southwark, on Tuesday, 21st ult., this celebrated old lodge held its regular meeting. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Meyer A. Loewenstark, who was supported by Bros. G. Free, S.W.; G. J. Grace, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M.; Treas.; J. Donkin, P.M., Sec.; S. Harman, J.D.; I. Wilkins, D.C.; F. H. Elsworth, I.P.M.; T. J. Sabine, P.M.; H. Jacobs, J. W. Dudley, F. Cooper, Ginchaw, Rayner, Crawley, R. G. Chipperfield, J. F. Timms, and others. Visitor: Bro. F. J. Jordan, P.M. 1306. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The ceremonies rendered at this meeting were raising Bro. Adams to the third degree, passing Bros. Bagnaley and Treton the second, and initiating Mr. C. A. Swaine. A petition was signed on behalf of a poor brother to the Lodge of Benevolence, who formerly belonged to this lodge. The work was done in an able and correct manner, which proved the proficiency of the W.M. There not being any banquet or refreshment, the members separated after the lodge was closed.

Pythagorean Lodge, No. 79.—This ancient local lodge held its regular meeting on Monday, the 27th ult., at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich. Bro. Burls, W.M., opened the lodge, assisted by his officers, Bros. C. Nash, S.W.; J. Nash, J.W.; W. C. Penny, P.M., Treas.; J. H. H. Doughney, P.M., Sec.; H. Roberts, S.D.; Munyard, J.D.; Shaw, I.G.; T. Perridge, I.P.M.; R. Boncey, P.M.; F. W. Ward, P.M.; W. Smith, P.M., and many others. All the work on the agenda paper was gone through, viz., three raisings and two passings. The work as usual here was perfectly done. No lodge can excel, and but few equal, the masterly, correct and admirable manner in which every portion of the ceremonies are rendered in this lodge; every officer is well acquainted with his duties, and does his work correctly. The all-important business of the evening was the presentation of the Past Master's jewel to Bro. Thomas Perridge, the I.P.M. (whose unavoidable absence, through severe illness, at the installation meeting prevented its being given at that time). The W.M., in a neat and appropriate speech, presented the elegant massive hall-marked gold Past Master's jewel to Bro. Thomas Perridge, which had been unanimously voted to him at the December meeting from the lodge funds, as a mark of respect, esteem, and gratitude for the admirable manner he had presided as the W.M. during his year of office, and the efficient manner he had rendered the work. Bro. T. Perridge acknowledged this gift in a suitable reply. Bro. I. Wilkins, the Steward representing this lodge at the "Boy's" School Festival, was, as usual, indefatigable in his exertions to increase his list, which no doubt will be announced to exceed £100, showing how great his exertions are, and have been, to secure such a large sum for the Masonic charity which, of all, requires the most help and assistance. One brother was proposed as a joining member. The lodge was closed, and about 40 sat down to the excellent banquet, for which the Hotel is famed.

Eastern Star Lodge, No. 95.—The installation meeting of this ancient lodge was held at the Ship and Turtle Tavern, Leadenhall-street, city, on Tuesday, the 21st ult. Bro. G. S. Ayres, W.M., opened the lodge, supported by R. T. Hill, S.W.; S. Ducas, J.W.; J. Marriott, P.M.; R. Bateman, P.M.; F. L. Goode, P.M.; F. T. Sharp, P.M.; E. W. Davies, P.M., Treas.; R. Edinger, P.M., Sec.; J. Firth, J. G. Hook, J. Barnett, H. Bateman, J.C., W. Flower, E. H. Horn, E. Pound, E. Roberts, S. Groves, Pettit, H. Stewart, and others. The visitors were: Bros. E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B.; J. Edmonds, P.G.P.; W. H. Baylis, W.M. 9; E. Coste, P.M. 9; J. Westwood, 55; F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; W. Bellammy, 91; R. B. Newsom, P.M. 95; S. Francis, P.G.S., G.S.L., P.M.; J. Brander, 157; G. King, P.M. 172; A. Layton, 181; H. Herscoe, P.M. 231; A. Durant, P.M. 276; H. Reed, P.M. 733; J. M. Ross, 781; W. Bristo, P.M. and Treas. 800; W. C. King, 860; P. Baranji, P.M. 1189; J. Harvey, 1288, and others whose names we were unable to ascertain. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballot for the candidate for initiation was taken, and was unanimous in his favour; but through unavoidable circumstances he was unable to attend. The W.M., in a superior, impressive manner, raised Bro. Hook to the third degree. Bro. John Ennheus, P.G.P., was invited to take the chair. He then in his usual, faultless, correct, impressive and dignified manner, installed Bro. R. S. Hill, W.M., for the ensuing year, who appointed as his officers Bros. G. S. Ayres, I.P.M.; S. Ducas, S.W.; W. Wicks, J.W.; E. W. Davies, P.M., Treas., (re-invested); Edinger, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); Marriott, P.M., D.C.; T. T. Barnett, S.D.; Harry Bateman, J.D.; E. H. Horne, P.G.; C. T. Speigt, P.M., Prov. G. Tyler, Surrey, Tyler (re-invested), and whose re-appointment was greeted with applause, proving the great estimation this popular brother is held by all those who know him. The W.M., on behalf of the lodge, presented Bro. G. S. Ayres with a handsome Past Master's jewel from the lodge funds, as a mark of respect for his admirable conduct during his year of office; also for his good and efficient rendering of the various ceremonies. The lodge was duly closed. The brethren, about 50 in number, then partook of one of the first-class banquets provided for and superintended personally by Bro. Painter. Some capital songs were sung by the brethren during the evening. Want of space, we regret to say, precludes us from reporting the excellent speeches made at the festive board.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

Invicta Chapter Rose Croix H.R.D.M.—A meeting of this flourishing chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Woolwich, on the 17th ult., and amongst those present we observed: Ill. Bros. G. Cockle, 33°, M.W.S.; Col. H. Clerk, 33°, P.M.W.S.; George Lambert, 30°, P.M.W.S.; W. P. Ward, P.M.W.S.; J. Forrester, 30°, H.P.; J. J. Forrester, 30°, 1st G.; J. Glaisher, 32°, 2nd G.; P. Laird, Treas.; F. W. Boord, Sec. and Ralph; M. H. W. Sherwin, Org.; J. W. Figg, 30°, D.C.; T. Harrison, C.G.; G. Kenning and C. Cook. The chapter having been duly opened, ballots were taken for several candidates, four of whom, being in attendance, were then perfected as Sovereign Princes Rose Croix. The members of the chapter afterwards dined together, and enjoyed a remarkably pleasant and social evening.

THEATRICAL.

OPERA COMIQUE.—The performance here remains unchanged. It opens with "The Welsh Girl," followed by "Found Drowned; or, Our Mutual Friend," terminating with "The Comical Countess." The house was well filled on the night of our visit. We can recommend the theatre to all who enjoy good pieces.

KING'S CROSS.—This little theatre in Liverpool Street, King's Cross, was re-opened on the 18th February. Miss Amelia Nadin, of the Bath Theatre, is the directress; the manager, Mr. W. R. Waldron. The farce of "The Captain's not a Miss," opened the programme; it was followed by a "comedy-drama," entitled "Worth a Struggle." "The Water Nymphs" ballet divertissement terminated the performances.

SURREY.—The pantomime of "My Son Jack" still continues to draw crowded houses, and loses none of its popularity. It is preceded by "Ruth," which is well put on the stage.

Good deeds are worth recording, especially when connected with charity. Miss Esther A. Levy, a daughter of Bro. Alexander Levy, P.M. 188, some short time since composed a song entitled "Think of Me, and Forget Me Not." The proceeds of the sale were devoted in aid of the Metropolitan Free Hospital, Devonshire Square. This talented young lady has composed another song entitled "The Memories of Friendship," the proceeds of which are to be given in aid of the Jewish Board of Guardians, this charity being totally dependent on donations, to assist the suffering and destitute poor, to obviate the necessity of applying to the various unions. The words and the music possess rising talent. Copies of both songs can be obtained at Messrs. W. Williams and Co. 221, Tottenham Court Road.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE UNION LODGE,
No. 332.

The fortieth anniversary of the above lodge, late Duntocher and Fifely Union, was celebrated in a true Masonic spirit on Wednesday evening, the 22nd February, in the Assembly Rooms, Bath-street, Glasgow, Bro. Robert Mitchell, R.W.M., presiding, and on the platform were Bros. James Balfour, P.M.; Wm. Lindsay, R.W.M. of Lodge Clyde, No. 408; James B. M'Nair, S.W.; W. H. Johnson, J.W.; Robert Johnston, Sec. and P.G.S.; William Dempster, Treas.; Adams, S.W. of Lodge Commercial, No. 360; &c. The following lodges were also represented: Kilwinning, No. 4; Thistle and Rose, No. 73; St. Mungo, No. 27; Neptune, No. 419; Clyde, No. 408; &c. There was a good attendance of the brethren, their wives, sweethearts, and friends.

After tea, the Chairman, who was well received, expressed the pleasure he felt in meeting with the members of the lodge and the fair sex on that occasion, their fortieth anniversary, because such gatherings as that one gave them an opportunity and the sweet pleasure of intermingling with those whom they love and respect, and of enjoying a few hours of that happy and social intercourse which should characterize all such meetings. The Chairman, during his remarks, also adverted to the prosperous state of the lodge for the last twelve months, during which period about forty-five members had been added and £42 19s. 11d. placed in the hands of the Treasurer. The Benevolent Fund was also in a most satisfactory condition, so that in every respect, he believed, the lodge was second to none in the Glasgow province. The Chairman likewise referred to the moribund state of the lodge many years ago, and congratulated the brethren that it was now most vigorous and bade fair to pursue a prosperous career.

During the evening an excellent vocal programme was sustained by Bros. Gordon, Dempster, Halley, Porter, Clarke, M'Nair, and Mullen.

The following song, written for the occasion by Bro. Balfour, P.M., and sung by that brother to the stirring air of "Scots, wha hae," was received with great applause:—

Tae a', my freends, the nicht that's here,
May we meet frae year tae year,
And tae partake o' o'or guid cheer
In social harmony.
The Union men are here a' na',
Wi' their wives and sweethearts braw,
Welcome aye, we'll welcome a',
Tae this o'or annual spree.

'Tis forty years since frae the Grand
We a charter did command
Tae form a lodge and took o'or stand Tae practise Masonry.
Kilwinning men are here, &c.

Masonry it is sublime,
Which all men know who doth it join,
Its purity abroad doth shine
In love and unity.
St. Mungo's men are here, &c.

Masonry, though it is grand,
We've got the poor among o'or hand,
To them we lend a helping hand,
And spread o'or charity.
The Thistle and Rose are here, &c.

May health and strength be o'or lot
Tae wear the clothing we hae got Without a stain, without a spot,
Of inward impurity.
Commercial men are here, &c.

*The Union men are here a show,
Decked out in clothing new and braw,
But riches yet may leave them a',
This pomp and vanity.
The Union men are here fu' braw,
Wi' their wives and sweethearts an a',
Welcome aye, we'll welcome a',
Tae this o'or annual spree.

The ladies here that's got nae man,
Get a Mason if ye can,
He winna say a word that's wrang,
But serve ye faithfully.
The Neptune men are here, &c.

Freends, this night before we part
Send three cheers frae the heart,
And wish us perfect in the Art—
This glorious Masonry.
The Clyde men are here, &c.

Noo, worthy Chairman, I am done,
I hope that I've offended none;
I've done my best, the best I've done,
In this tae please ye a'.
The Union men are here here, a na',
Wi' their wives and sweethearts braw,
Welcome aye, we'll welcome a',
Tae this o'or annual spree.

Remarks were also made from Bros. Lindsay, Adams, M'Nair, and Johnson. An assembly followed, which was kept up with great vigour until an advanced hour in the morning, all being highly satisfied and seemed "Happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again."

PRESENTATION TO BRO. J. H. NORTH.

The brethren of Shamrock Masonic Lodge, No. 93, held their usual installation dinner at the Gresham Hotel, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. James Black; Bro. Collier, S.W.; and Bro. Gorton, J.W.

After dinner, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given and responded to, and an address presented to Bro. North, expressive of the admiration and esteem in which the brethren hold him.

The address was accompanied by a valuable testimonial, consisting of a tea and coffee service, with salver and kettle to match, the manufacture of Bro. Flavell, jeweller, 43, Grafton-street. Each article is ornamented with Bro. North's crest and monogram, and bears the inscription:—"Presented to Bro. James H. North, P.M., M.R., A.C., H.K.T., by the brethren of Shamrock Masonic Lodge, No. 93, as a small recognition of the prompt and untiring zeal he has shown in the discharge of his duties as Secretary to the lodge.

The W.M. presented the testimonial, and, in proposing the health of Bro. North, alluded to his many Masonic services in graceful and highly complimentary terms.

The address was read by Bro. Pearsall, and is as follows:—

"Dear Sir and Brother,—We, the brethren of Shamrock Masonic Lodge, 93, with whom you have laboured for many years, deem the present an appropriate time for placing on record our appreciation of your many virtues, and for conveying to you the expression of our sincere esteem and regard."

"We offer you our hearty congratulations on the success which has invariably attended your efforts in upholding the dignity of our order, but more particularly on the happy result of your untiring zeal in endeavouring to promote the welfare and uphold the honour and respectability of Lodge 93.

"Whatever may be alleged to the contrary by those who are ignorant of Masonry, it has in all ages, and in every clime, had a humanizing influence, and has shed a lustre and a halo on the people amongst whom it has been introduced. But the institution is too venerable and too sacred to require any laudation, or to render it necessary to be adverted to at any greater length on the present occasion.

"Since you came amongst us, you have shown a laudable desire to promote the interests of Freemasonry by every legitimate means in your power, to free it from misrepresentation, and to advance its usefulness. Your intelligence, your industry, and your singleness of purpose, have deservedly won for you the highest position in our power to bestow. The result shows that we were not mistaken in committing so important a trust as that of the Secretaryship of our lodge to your charge. To say that you have discharged the duties, often difficult and onerous devolving on you, in a creditable and highly satisfactory manner, would be but saying little. By your judicious and wise counsel, you have been instrumental in raising our lodge to the proud and prosperous position it now enjoys. Your generous liberality and support of our charities, have done much in enabling us to carry out one of the greatest objects of the Craft, in relieving the distressed and alleviating the miseries of the widow and the orphan.

"The manner in which you have discharged your duty in the various offices you have from time to time held in our lodge, has been such as to secure to you our highest meed of approbation, but it is to the still greater efficiency with which you have acquitted yourself as our Secretary, that we wish more particularly to allude. In this capacity you have at all times brought to bear no small amount of tact, discrimination, and sound judgment. Your time and attention have been freely given, and you have spared no pains in order to insure the efficient and harmonious working of your lodge, and while we feel that your devotion and solicitude in our behalf are beyond all praise and all recompense; still as a small token of our appreciation of your services, we beg your acceptance of the accompanying salver and tea and coffee service, certain that a more deserving, high-minded, or larger hearted brother does not exist, and we feel satisfied that we only do you justice, by stating that your conduct in our lodge and in Masonry in general, entitles you to the warm approbation of every brother in the order.

"Knowing as we do your sincere attachment to everything pertaining to Masonry and its rites, we hardly think it necessary to request from you a continuance of your services, persuaded as we are that the duties of the office you so creditably hold are to you a labour of love.

"Permit us, in conclusion, again to offer you our hearty acknowledgements, and to express our sincere hope that you may be long spared to assist in diffusing the blessings of Masonry.

"Signed on behalf of the Brethren,

"CHARLES BROWN, Chairman of the Committee of Presentation.

"WILLIAM H. HARRIS, Treasurer.

"THOMAS PEARSALL, } Hon. Secretaries."

"WILLIAM BONIS, }

The following is Bro. North's reply:—

"Worshipful Sir and Brethren,—Believe me, I am deeply conscious of the extreme kindness which prompted you in presenting me with your very flattering address, and the beautiful and costly testimonial which accompanies it, as a mark of your approbation of the manner in which I have discharged my duties as Secretary of Lodge 93. This marked and special token of your esteem has been as unexpected as it was undeserved, and on this account is the more highly prized by me. Any person placed in the position which I now occupy might well feel proud in receiving the assurances that he has been considered a fitting recipient of the confidence and regard of your lodge, the members of which stand so high in the order. I can unaffectedly assure you that the events of this evening have afforded me more sincere and heartfelt gratification than I have experienced on any other occasion in my whole life. The effect of your kindness, you may rest assured, will be to stimulate me to renewed exertions in advancing Masonry, and promoting the interests of your lodge in particular by every means in my power. You have alluded to the part I have taken in the discharge of the respective offices to which I have been at various times promoted by your kindness and generosity. If, in the various positions which I have filled, I have merited your approbation, I am more than repaid. I can sincerely assure you, that from the moment I entered the order it was my earnest desire, so far as in me lay, to further the interests of your lodge, and to secure for myself the affection and regard of all the brethren. In accomplishing this I am aware that I never could have done so without your kind assistance. At all times and on all occasions, I have had the benefit of your counsel and advice, and if I have been fortunate in attaining any of those objects which we had at heart, it is not from any merit of my own, but mainly through your co-operation. It is much to be deplored that those objects and aims have been so much misunderstood, or if understood, so misrepresented from time to time. Persons have been found to stigmatise us in unmeasured terms, and to place the members of the order in the same category as those who plot for the overthrow of the State in which they live. They are unable to penetrate our mysteries, or to comprehend the grand principles of Masonry, and hence the malevolent attacks made on us. Those who know ought of Freemasonry are aware that its principles are to banish feud and contentions, to allay enmity, to practise charity, to soothe the afflicted, to be temperate, faithful, generous and just. The grandest and most gorgeous temples ever erected by the ingenuity of man have crumbled to decay, leaving not a trace behind. Empires have risen and fallen, cities, once the capitals of mighty kingdoms have become deserts, and yet amidst these mighty changes Masonry has lived and flourished to elevate and enlighten the human race.

"Despite opposition from without it is pleasing to know that our numbers are increasing in a greater ratio than at any other time within living memory. The good and the noble of the earth are among its ranks, engaged in bestowing additional blessings on mankind, and assisting to spread abroad the privileges resulting from liberty and enlightenment. It is to be hoped that the time is not only coming, but that the time is not far distant, when mankind will be sufficiently educated to see more clearly than they have yet done the benefits of Freemasonry. And when the order will be co-extensive with civilization and Christianity, for Masonry, like the sun, diffuses light and knowledge wherever its influence is felt. It presents a common platform where men of all creeds and classes can meet, and by an interchange of thought and feeling come to understand each other better than ever they did before. It is an oasis in the desert, without which life would be a dreary and desolate waste. Let us then go forward and unite together in disseminating principles so exalted and commendable, fully persuaded that our efforts will be blessed by the Great Architect of the Universe. Personally it will afford me much gratification to be instrumental in any way in affecting so desirable an object. It will continue to be my anxious desire to merit your approbation and confidence by discharging the duties of Secretary of your lodge with increased energy and devotion. Again expressing my hearty acknowledgments for the marked compliment you have paid me, and praying for your individual welfare and happiness, believe me to be, dear brethren, very sincerely and fraternally yours,

"JAMES H. NORTH."

MARK MASONRY.

CONSECRATION OF A M.M. LODGE AT BOURNEMOUTH.

The ancient Craft Lodge of Hengist, the centenary festival of which we chronicled at some length three weeks ago, has now given proof of its inherent vitality by putting forth a new and vigorous offshoot, in the shape of a lodge of Mark Masons, bearing the same name as itself. This new lodge (125) was formally launched upon its career of work on Shrove Tuesday at Bournemouth, under the auspices of Bro. F. Binckes, 33°, G.S.; the visitors being Bros. J. M. P. Montagu, 33°, W.M. St. Mary's Lodge, Bridport, No. 125, and D.P.G.M. in Craft Masonry; R. H. M. Lawson, 30°, W.M. St. Cuthberga's Lodge, Wimborne, No. 99; C. Wyndham, J.W. 99; W. Reade, S.D. 99. Expressions of regret at their unavoidable absence were also sent from R.W. Bro. W. W. B. Beach, P.G.M.M.; Bro. Gundrey, P.G.M. Dorset; W. Bros. Stebbing and Sheppard.

The lodge was opened in ancient form a few minutes after four o'clock; and, after the necessary preliminaries, fourteen brethren were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master, Bro. F. Binckes acting as W.M. By this arrangement of the proceedings the newly-advanced brethren were enabled to be present at the formal constitution and consecration of the lodge. The warrant of constitution having been read, Bro. Binckes, in the name of the R.W.G.M.M., declared the lodge duly constituted, and proceeded to consecrate it in its solemn form. The ceremony being completed, the W.M.-nominate, Bro. Rev. P. H. Newnham, 30° (S.W. of Mark Lodge, No. 121), was presented for installation by W. Bro. Montagu; and, all below the degree of Installed Mark Master having retired, a Board of Installed Masters was declared open, and Bro. Newnham was regularly installed in the chair of Adonhiram by Bro. Binckes. The brethren having been readmitted, and having saluted the W.M., he at once proceeded the Wardens nominated by the warrant, viz., Bro. J. T. Briant, 18°, S.W.; T. G. Horder, 18°, J.W. The remaining officers were then appointed, as follows:—E. W. Rebbeck, 18°, M.O.; E. Edsall, S.O.; D. Sydenham, J.O.; J. B. Atkinson, Sec.; M. Webb, 18°, R.M.; R. Sydenham, S.D.; H. F. Brouncker, 18°, J.D.; H. Ling, D.C.; E. Waters, I.G.; T. S. Biggs and W. Turner, Stewards. Bro. Briant was unanimously elected as Treasurer, and Bro. Baverstock was chosen Tyler. Bro. Binckes then delivered the charges to the officers and the closing address in a manner which evidently made a lively impression upon all the brethren present.

The installation ceremony being thus completed, a ballot was taken for two brethren as joining members, which was unanimous in their favour. A code of by-laws was proposed, and ordered to be discussed at the next meeting. The W.M. then asked the brethren to pass a special vote of thanks to Bro. Binckes, for the services which he had so cheerfully rendered, though suffering from indisposition; observing that although on occasions like the present such a vote followed as a matter of course, he trusted Bro. Binckes would, under existing circumstances, receive it as something more than a mere formal tribute. A second hearty vote of thanks followed to the visitors; of whom Bros. Montagu and Lawson had travelled a considerable distance in order to ensure the formation of a Board of Installed Masters. The lodge was then closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to the commodious Assembly Rooms adjoining the lodge, where an excellent repast awaited them. Unfortunately, the W.M. and a considerable number of brethren compelled to leave by the eight o'clock train, so that the greater part of the usual Masonic toasts had to be dispensed with; but the W.M. on his health being proposed by Bro. Binckes, particularly begged the brethren to observe that their new lodge numbered among its members brethren from the Craft Lodges of Unity (132), Amity (137), and Faith and Unanimity (417), and while the Lodge of Hengist was sustained by such words as these, it was impossible that it could do anything but prosper.

REPORT OF DR. ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CENTENARY CELEBRATION OF JERUSALEM LODGE, No. 197.

Probably the most important event in the history of any individual English lodge occurred on Friday, the 24th February, on the occasion, always an interesting and notable one, of the Centenary Celebration of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 197, at the Freemasons' Hall, its ordinary place of meeting. The brethren of "Jerusalem," which (though by its bye-laws limited in numbers) occupies a prominent position, among what are termed the "Red Apron Lodges" had elected to the W.M.'s chair, for the second time in a quarter of a century, their Senior Past Master, Bro. Charles Hutton Gregory, P.G.D., late President of the Institution of Civil Engineers, who assisted as he was on this auspicious occasion by the Past Masters, by whom the whole of the lodge offices were filled, may well congratulate himself and his lodge on the end that has crowned the work of the past century. The Lodge having been opened in due form, and the usual formal business transacted, a communication was read from the M.W. the Grand Master, expressing his sincere regret that his enforced absence from England on business of national importance, prevented his Lordship from being present as he had intended, and adding his heartiest wishes for the success of the meeting, and the continued welfare of the Jerusalem Lodge. The W.M. then rose, and pursuant to notice in the lodge summons proposed that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G., Past Grand Master, be elected by acclamation an Honorary Member of the Lodge, to which proposition His Royal Highness had already given assent. This being seconded by the I.P.M., Bro. J. B. Monckton, was at once carried unanimously. In like manner, the Right Honble. the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master, proposed by the W.M., and seconded by Bro. J. V. N. Bazalgette, P.M. and Treasurer, was unanimously elected an honorary member of "Jerusalem." In vindication of the true principles of Masonry, the Lodge next proceeded to vote that the necessary funds (in addition to a donation of £10 10s. to the Girls School in the name the lodge by Mrs. J. V. N. Bazalgette), be paid to the Boys' and Girls' Schools to constitute the lodge a Vice-President of each of those magnificent Institutions. Shortly after 7 o'clock, it was announced to the W.M. by Bro. Whichcord, P.M. and Director of Ceremonies, that the Earl of Carnarvon, as acting Grand Master, and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, P.G.M. (with Provincial Grand Masters and the Grand Officers) were about to enter the Lodge, and they were received in the 3rd degree, by the brethren upstanding, and with the proper Masonic salute, the national anthem being well performed on the organ by Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, and the procession being marshalled by Garter King of Arms the Grand Director of Ceremonies.

A very interesting sketch of the Lodge history since its foundation by the I.P.M., and a most eloquent and excellent Charge by Bro. Dr. Cox, P.G. Chaplain, were delivered with admirable effect, and ordered to be printed for distribution among the members. Dr. Cox's charge was immediately preceded by the singing in perfect style by Bros. Fielding, Montem Smith and Winn, of the charming Trio, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem," from Boyce's well-known anthem. The Lodge being duly closed, the brethren escorted their Royal and distinguished guests to a Banquet, in which the skill and taste of Bro. Francatelli, the new manager of the Freemasons' Tavern, could not have been surpassed. The W.M. Bro. C. Hutton Gregory presided, supported on his right by the Earl of Carnarvon, Acting G.M.; the Earl of Fife, Prov. G.M. Banffshire; Lord Methuen, Prov. G.M. for Wiltshire; the Earl of Limerick, Prov. G.M. for Bristol; and Bro. Havers, P.G.W.; Tomkins, G.T.; Lt. Evans, Pres. Bd. G.P., and Bazalgette, P.M. and Treas.; and on his left by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M.; the Duke of St. Albans, Prov. G.M. for Lincolnshire; Lord De Tabley, Prov. G.M. for Cheshire; Lord Eliot, P.G.W.; and Bros. Dr. Cox, P.G. Chaplain; McIntyre, G. Reg.; and Monckton, I.P.M. Bros. Edwin Friend and Octavius Hansard, P.M.'s occupied the Wardens' chairs respectively; the other Vice-Chairmen being Bros. Hollingsworth, P.M. and Secretary, and Bro. Horace Jones, P.M. and I.G.; and there were also present, among many other brethren of Masonic distinction, Bros. Horace Lloyd, Q.C., G.S.D.; E. B. Sutton, G.J.D.; John Hervey, G. Sec.; Sir Albert Woods (Garter) G.D.C.; B. Head, P.G.D.; Major Creaton, P.G.D.; D. Fenn, P.A.G.D.C.; Dumas, A.G.D.C.; Sir Michael Costa, P.G.O.; J. Coward, G.O.; F. P. Cockerell, G.S., Wks.; Bradford, P.A.G.; D.C.; Bridges, P.G.S.B. and D.P.G.M., Somerset; Wood, P.M. 26, and P.P.I.G.W. Sussex; W. C. Fooks, Q.C., P.M. and Prov. G.S.W., Kent; Col. Henderson, C.B.; Dr. Pole, F.R.S.; Major Platt, P.M., 6; C. A. Murton, P.M. 7, James Glashier, P.M. 382; R. Glover, P.M. 181; William Hardman, P.M. 162; F. Bennock, P.M. 1; I. C. Parkinson, P.M. 181; E. Farmer, P.M. 28; F. W. Shields, P.M. 33; T. H. Devonshire, P.M. 4; A. Greatrex, P.M. 22; F. Knollys; Rev. W. L. Onslow; and R. S. Warrington; Admiral Currie; J. Whichcord, Dir. of Cers; C. E. Hollingsworth, Sec.; A. F. Linn, S.D.; Kemball Cook, J.D.; Horace Jones, I.G.; George Alexander; and L. Crombie; all P.M.'s of Jerusalem Lodge, 100 in all sat down to dinner, after which the usual Masonic toasts were given by the Master, enthusiastically received by the Brethren and eloquently responded to by the Royal and distinguished guests, whose presence added such lustre to the evening, and while the Jerusalem Lodge was heartily congratulated on the complete success of its Centenary Festival, the happiest results to the Craft generally were argued from the readiness with which the Prince of Wales had joined, not only the Celebration, but the Lodge itself; and the cordial interest which His Royal Highness showed in the Masonic proceedings. Much gratification was felt in the presence of the Earl of Carnarvon, whose accession to office as Reviews.

Bengal Freemasons' Almanack and Diary for 1871.

We are indebted to Bro. W. O. Allender, W.M. 67, D.A.G.D.C., for a copy of this very interesting work, the compilation of which reflects great credit upon Bro. H. Hover Locke, then D.G. Secretary, and now Dep. D.G.M. It not only gives complete lists of the several Masonic bodies in Bengal, but copious information of general interest. There are nine Craft Lodges in Calcutta, and a total of twenty-one in the district, working under the Grand Lodge of England, there being also four Scotch lodges in Calcutta. Mark lodges in Bengal number five, R.A. chapters seven, and K.T. encampments and priories three. Bro. Allender also informs us that two Red Cross conclaves have been recently established. The various branches of Freemasonry thus appear to have taken firm root in Bengal, and we hope will ever be found to work harmoniously together.

The Rainbow Stories; 1. "Phil Thorn-dyke's Adventures," by FRANCES WILBRAHAM. 2. "The Rift in the Rock," by Mrs. S. C. HALL.

These stories are the commencement of a series written for young people, and, judging from the examples before us, there can be little doubt that Messrs. Groom-bridge and Sons will be well supported in their endeavour to provide instructive and amusing reading for the young. Many writers of eminence will lend their aid, and the price of each number (fourpence) is such as to place it within the reach of all.

A Centennial Memorial of the Lodge of St. Andrew. Boston, U.S.A.

We have received from Bro. Ezra Palmer, the W.M., a copy of this splendid and interesting work, which is embellished with illustrations in the highest style of art. The memorial is compiled in honour of the fact that more than one hundred years ago (1769) the W. Master of the Lodge of St. Andrew, General Joseph Warren, was made Grand Master of Ancient Freemasons in Massachusetts, and the members deemed it a fitting occasion to present in a permanent form a narrative of the leading Masonic events of the last century and a quarter—not only those connected with the lodge, but such as tended to illustrate the history of the Craft in general. The result is a large quarto volume of nearly 300 pages—commencing with a copy of the charter of the lodge, and ending with a list of Grand Masters in Massachusetts from 1733 to 1870. An exhaustive address by R.W. Bro. C. W. Moore, G. Sec., on Freemasonry in Massachusetts, especially exemplifying the progress of the "Ancient" Grand Lodge is extremely valuable and instructive. The proceedings at the centennial celebration of the Lodge of St. Andrew in 1856 are given at length, including a fine oration by Bro. Hamilton Willis, Past Master.

SECTION the 4th.
OF PARTICULAR LODGES.

1. The Grand Master's Lodge shall be entered on the front of the Grand Lodge Register Book before all numbered regular Lodges, and all or any of the Members thereof, who may at any time think proper to visit the Grand Lodge, shall take place of every other Lodge on the Registry of Irem. S. 1810 land, and each and every of them shall be as fully entitled to all and every of the privileges and freedoms thereof as any other Member or Members that the Grand Lodge is composed of; but the precedency of all other Lodges shall be according to the numbers of their Warrants.

2. Every Warrant issued by the Grand Lodge must be regularly registered, and the Lodge using it must have conformed to the Laws as they are laid down in the preceding Sections before its Officers can be recognised as Members of the Grand Lodge.—No Officers of Lodges are exempted from attendance in the Grand Lodge, but those belonging to country Lodges.—The Lodge will be considered irregular and suspended whose Officers (with the foregoing exception) do not take their places in the Grand Lodge.

3. No Lodge can be assembled without a Warrant from the Grand Lodge, nor any individual acknowledged or received as a Free Mason who has not been admitted and initiated in a Regular Lodge so constituted; Any Lodge admitting a person to be present at its Meetings who is not properly qualified by initiation in a regular Lodge, violates the Principles of Free Masonry, and shall have its Warrant suspended or cancelled at the pleasure of the Grand Lodge; And any person present or assisting at a Meeting of the nature alluded to, or any other irregular Meetings, shall be subject to Suspension or Exclusion.

4. Any regular Mason aiding or assisting at the works of a Lodge not authorised or warranted by the Grand Lodge, or whose Warrant has been suspended or cancelled, acts contrary to the fundamental principles of Free Masonry, and shall be excluded or suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

5. Every Memorial to the Grand Lodge for a new Warrant shall have the recommendation of three regular Lodges, besides that of the Lodge or Lodges the applicants belonged to, if within a reasonable distance, and shall also have the approbation of the Provincial Grand Master, if there should be such an Officer efficient within the Province from which the Memorial may be sent.

6. The expenses of a Warrant is £7 13s. 5½d. of which the General Fund of Charity is to receive £3 8s. 3d.; the Deputy Grand Secretary £2 5s. 6d.; the Orphan School Regulations £1 2s. 9d.; the Grand Pursuivant 6s. 8d.; the Grand Tiler 2s. 2d.; and for the registry of its three Officers, 8s 1½d.

7. When it is well authenticated that a Warrant has been destroyed by accident, or fatality, a duplicate thereof shall be granted without any charge, except such as is usually paid to the Deputy Grand Secretary when a new one is granted; 1800 p 86 but no Warrant cancelled by Order of the Grand Lodge shall be restored for a sum less than that charged for granting a new one, which sum is to be appropriated as in the foregoing Regulation.

8. In the absence of a Master of a particular Lodge, a Past Master fills the chair, but if none such be present, the Senior Warden may act as Master, pro tempore.

9. In every Lodge a Brother shall be appointed Secretary, who shall keep a book containing the bye-laws, the names of the Members, and also all the transactions of the Lodge which are proper to be written.

10. Particular Lodges for their better Government may form their own bye-laws and regulations, provided the same be not contrary to the ancient Land Marks and general constitutions of the Order.

11. All particular lodges are to observe the usages as strictly as possible, in order to which and also for cultivating a good understanding among Freemasons, some Members of every Lodge shall be deputed to visit other lodges as often as shall be thought convenient.

12. No Lodge at its regular and stated Meetings has a right to refuse admission to a visitor who comes properly certified and recommended from his Lodge, provided he is able to prove to the satisfaction of the lodge he wishes to visit that he is qualified by his knowledge in Masonry to be admissible to the degree the Lodge is then occupied upon, for the regular meetings of Lodges should be appropriated to the cultivation of Masonry, and all private business of the Lodge should be transacted at a Lodge of emergency, to which visitors cannot claim admission as a matter of right.

13. No Lodge shall be removed from one house to another without the Master's knowledge, nor shall any motion be put for that purpose during his absence; but if the measure is regularly proposed, he shall order the whole Lodge to be summoned, specifying the business, and appointing a day for hearing and determining the affair, giving at least 10 days' notice, and the determination shall be made by the majority, unless the Master be of the minority against moving the Lodge, in which case it shall not be removed unless the majority consists of full ⅔ of the Members present; but if the Master refuse to direct such summon to be issued, the Wardens may do it, and if the Master neglect to attend on the day fixed, a Past Master or the Senior Warden may preside in the determination, but they shall not, in the Master's absence, enter upon any other subject but what is particularly mentioned in the said summons, and if the Lodge is thus regularly ordered to be removed, the Master or Warden shall send notice to the Grand Secretary for the publishing the same at the next Grand Lodge.

14. No person shall be admitted a Member of, or made a Mason in a particular Lodge without all the Members thereof having been duly summoned for that purpose, besides a previous notice of at least one week, given in open Lodge at a former meeting, in order to make inquiry into the reputation and capacity of the candidate, and then the candidate must have the consent and approbation of the Members present, according to the by-laws of that particular Lodge, provided that it shall not be lawful for any Lodge to admit any person a member thereof if there be three voices or ballots against him, and no person already a Mason shall be received as a Member of any Lodge until he produces a Grand Lodge Certificate, and any Lodge violating the provisions of this Regulation shall be suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

THEATRICAL.

STRAND.—A good farce "In Three Volumes" has been produced at this charming theatre with great success. The plot is easily perceived, and the incidents sufficiently humorous to attract the attention of the audience. It is supported by Messrs. Walter Joyce, H. Crouch, E. Chamberlin, Kinghouse, and the Misses Jenny Lee and H. Lemox. The three-act comedy, "Up in the World," follows, and the programme closes with "Cœur-de-Lion." The house was well filled on the night of our visit. This theatre is sure to give satisfaction to all who wish to have an agreeable cheerful evening.

ST. JAMES'S.—This fashionable theatre is extremely well attended every evening. The programme commences with the farce, "An Unhappy Pair," followed by the new comedy, "Two Thorns," by Mr. J. Albery, and concludes with the grand classical burlesque, "Vesta." Mrs. H. Vein and Mr. H. Marston appear in the new comedy in addition to the old members of the company. "To Oblige Benson" has been withdrawn, after completing a run of 112 consecutive nights, with Mr. Harry Cox as Trotter Southdown. Mrs. John Wood appears every evening, and continues to delight all who witness her performances.

UNVEILING THE MEMORIAL AT FREEMASONS' HALL.

On Wednesday, the 1st inst., prior to the meeting of Grand Officers for the Quarterly Communication to Grand Lodge, the memorial which has been erected to commemorate the successful termination of the Building Committee's labours was unveiled in the presence of a numerous body of the brethren. The ceremony of unveiling was performed by Bro. Brackstone Baker, who was supported on the occasion by, among others, the following brethren:—Bros. R. J. Bagshaw, F. Roxburgh, Q.C., J. B. Monckton, Dr. Jabez Hogg, F. Adlard, Joseph Durham, Edward Cox, F. Bennoch, E. J. Barron, John Savage, G. Plucknett, T. Meggy, Raynham W. Stewart, J. R. Stebbing, Joshua Nunn, W. M. Bywater, R. J. Spiers, H. D. Grissell, John Hervey, Samuel May, James Mason, Joseph Starkey, J. Hawker, F. Dundas, J. R. Wulmsley, W. Young, J. Cooper Forster, and H. Browse.

The memorial consists of a tablet with the following inscription:—

Honor's Causa.

The EARL OF ZETLAND, M.W.G.M.

In commemoration of the completion of this Building, which was inaugurated and solemnly dedicated to the purposes of Freemasonry on the 14th day of April, A.L. 5869, and in recognition of the services of the Building Committee, under whose able supervision the work was executed, this Tablet was erected by the Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England.

Surmounting the tablet is a bust of the Chairman of the Committee, Bro. Havers, while on either side are three medallions, those on the right being likenesses of Bros. L. Evans, H. D. Grissell, and J. R. Stebbing, and those on the left Bros. J. Savage, G. Plucknett, and John Hervey. The whole is the work of Bro. Joseph Durham, A.R.A., who has executed the same with consummate skill. Great difficulties stood in the way of the selection of a suitable site for this memorial. It must be obvious to any one who has a knowledge of the construction of Freemasons' Hall that from necessity there are few good places in which any work of art can be either seen—or seen to advantage—except in the hall, or Temple, as it is more properly called. Great delay consequently arose in the endeavour to choose an appropriate spot. To the sculptor the alcove over the steps leading to the Temple was unsuited, and therefore, with the ready adhesion of the architect, Bro. Cockerell, Bro. Durham proposed to divide the long blank wall on the right-hand landing of the first floor into three compartments, by placing pilasters so as to form three panels in the middle of the wall. In the central panel he proposed to enshrine the commemoration testimonial, and the excellent effect it has leaves no room for doubt that his judgment was correct. And it is in the adaptation of the spot selected, and the combination of the six marble medallions and a bust, that the designer's great skill consists. For perfect unity of colour, the six medallions are cut from one block of marble, enclosed in borders of egg-and-tongue mouldings of Tutbury alabaster. The bust of the chairman and the bracket are of one piece of marble. The pilasters are of what is known as Barton's Ipplepen marble, from Devonshire, the same as is used throughout the staircase.

Before the unveiling took place,

Bro. Brackstone Baker said: I was very much in hopes that this afternoon this ceremony of unveiling and disclosing to public view the testimonial which Grand Lodge decided to erect in recognition of the services of the Building Committee, would have been embellished by the presence of the Chairman of the Building Committee himself—the facile princeps, the septem virorum princeps, the chairman of the seven—but unfortunately he is not here. The difficulty I have felt in being appointed by my colleagues to represent the Testimonial Committee is this: that there is no model, pattern, or precedent of such a thing having occurred before. In our days such a thing certainly has never happened; neither has it happened, as far as we are informed, before, for it is not enrolled in the records of antiquity—that of erecting during their lifetime a memorial to those who have been most active or taken a leading part in the construction of a building. But we must have this happiness. Unlike the Roman, who, when he died, having deserved well of his country, was crowned with wreaths of laurel; those wreaths of laurel are borne while our heroes live; and you may think it is far better that we should have the permission of Grand Lodge to record in imperishable marble—though we might say exequunt monumentum vere perennius—the facts which we have now met to notify. I am rather sorry the Chairman of the Building Committee is not here, because I should very appropriately have called to the recollection of that Committee that nine years ago, in hard 1862, the then Most Worshipful Grand Master proposed to recognise the services of Bro. John Havers, by granting him from Grand Lodge funds the sum of 500 guineas, to give him a perpetual life presentation in the Boys' and Girls' Schools. Bro. John Havers declined with great respect such a testimonial, because, as he said at that time, Grand Lodge had an important duty before it—that the proper channel for their funds was the providing a temple fitted for Masonry. At that time, in 1862, that Temple was not constructed, but I should have been very glad to have pointed out that although he declined that sort of, what I may call adventitious honours at the time, yet it was quite impossible that any man or any Mason with self-respect or proper self-estimation can refuse the acknowledgment of those services by the memorial which you have now before you. The history of Freemasons' Hall last night I endeavoured to sketch out, and I have put together a few notes which give a sort of brief history and retrospect of Freemasons' Hall. It will not take me long to run through it, and if you will bear with me I will give it you. At the time of the revival of Freemasonry in England in 1717, the annual assembly and feast of Free and Accepted Masons, when a Grand Master for the ensuing year was chosen, was held at taverns. The "Goose and Gridiron," in St. Paul's Churchyard, appears to be the earliest on record at this period. Five years later, by reason of the increasing number of lodges, Grand Lodge was agreed to be held at Stationers' Hall, Ludgate-street, where "they sat down to very elegant feast, and dined with joy and gladness," having previously assembled at the "Goose and Gridiron," now removed to the King's Arms, St. Paul's Churchyard. Later, the Fountain Tavern in the Strand, the White Lion in Cornhill, the Crown in Threadneedle-street, the Bell Tavern, Westminster; the Devil Tavern, Temple Bar; Queen's Head, Great Queen-street; the Rose Tavern, Marylebone; and the Crown and Anchor in the Strand, with occasional feasts at the Merchant Taylors' or Mercers' Hall, or Fishmongers' Hall. Here successive Grand Masters were elected and Grand Officers appointed. A plan had been for several years in contemplation to build a hall by voluntary subscriptions from private lodges and fees from Grand Officers' appointments, borrowing funds on a tontine scheme, which, as the Grand Master said (1763), "would not only give a sanction to our assemblies, but be a prelude to an incorporation should it be the opinion of the society to obtain a charter for that purpose." At the Grand Lodge held at the London Tavern April 27th, 1774, Lord Petre being M.W.G.M., the Grand Secretary, James Heseltine, reported from the Committee for building the hall that the Committee had contracted for the purchase of a plot of ground and premises consisting of two large commodious dwelling-houses and an extensive garden situate in Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, late in the possession of Philip Carteret Webb, Esq., deceased. That the premises had been surveyed and found to be in good condition, and that the real value thereof appeared to be £3,205, at the least; that £3,180 was the sum contracted to be paid for the premises; that as the front house would be at present useless to the Society and upon a moderate calculation might produce £90 per annum it would defray the interest on the mortgage, £1050, already lent upon the premises; that the back house would furnish commodious committee rooms, offices, kitchens, &c., without much alteration; and that the garden was sufficiently large to contain a complete hall for the use of the Society, the expense of which it was imagined would not exceed £3000. The first stone of the new hall was laid on May 1st, 1775, by Lord Petre, Grand Master, the brethren assembling at Freemasons' Coffee House, Great Queen-street, and adjourning to the feast at Leathersellers' Hall, Great St. Helen's. A year afterwards, May 23rd, 1776, the Hall was dedicated in solemn form to Masonry, virtue, universal charity, and benevolence. The tontine under a deed of trust continued to pay annuities to the survivors until the last of them died on August 26th, 1862, who was the daughter of Admiral Sir Peter Parker, himself a Past Grand Warden. By a curious coincidence the announcement of this lady's death was made at the same meeting of Grand Lodge, December 3rd, 1862, at which the Building Committee for the new construction was appointed. Freemasons' Tavern continued to be the home of London Freemasons, as well as a known place of assembly and resort for public meetings, dinners, and dances. The very name associated Freemasonry with tavern orgies, and for a long time this had been a reproach and opprobrium to the progress of Masonry, which in the later years of the Mastership of the Duke of Sussex and as soon as the rule of the Earl of Zetland commenced had taken great onward and advancing strides. On December 1st, 1858, the Board of General Purposes, by the mouth of its President, Bro. John Havers, proposed to Grand Lodge to erect suitable buildings and to separate Freemasons' Hall from the Tavern. Of the large block of buildings belonging to the Society in Great Queen-street, the only portions reserved exclusively for Masonic purposes were the Temple, the Grand Master's room, the Grand Secretary's offices, and the Grand Tyler's apartments. This being the largest Grand Lodge in the world, is the only Grand Lodge whose Temple was used as a tavern. At that Grand Lodge Bro. James Havers moved, "That it is desirable that the freehold property now belonging to the Society, or such part thereof as may be necessary, shall be devoted exclusively to Masonic purposes." This motion was carried; but, as on a subsequent occasion was well observed by Bro. Havers, no great or worthy object has ever been carried out without opposition—without having been considered, discussed, condemned, nay, forgotten almost, to be again and again brought forward before its final accomplishment. And an application of this pungent, but exact, criticism was found in the history of these new buildings. The matter was permitted to lie over until at Grand Lodge on March 5th, 1862, a report from the Board of General Purposes reproducing the resolutions of December 1st, 1850, requested authority from Grand Lodge to appropriate a portion of the property for a tavern, and after discussion, the question was referred back to the Board to consider the appropriation of the property to Masonic purposes or otherwise. A sub-committee was formed, and their report was presented to Grand Lodge June 4th, 1862, adopting the principle of isolating the Masonic structure from the tavern, and enumerating the accommodation required for the Craft. After much discussion and opposition the report was adopted, and it was agreed that plans should be prepared and estimates made to carry out the resolution. At the next Grand Lodge, in September, 1862, the law of the Book of Constitutions had to be amended to allow of power being delegated to a special committee of seven members to consider and specify the requirements of the proposed new building. Ultimately at the following Grand Lodge, December 3rd, 1862, the Committee were appointed, but it required three months more delay to advertise for plans and to buy up certain unexpired leases. However, at Grand Lodge, June 3rd, 1863, it was reported that twenty designs had been sent in, illustrated by 200 drawings. These had been submitted to the inspection of the Craft at St. Martin's Hall. The scheme required a Masonic Temple, apart from the large dining hall, lodge rooms, and offices for the Craft, and a tavern ministering to, but totally separate from, the Masonic portion. It was stated that putting the cost of building and furnishing at its maximum, an outlay of £45,000 might be required. This was to be provided by £20,000 then standing to the credit of the fund of General Purposes, and £25,000 to be borrowed of the Fund of Benevolence at 4 per cent. interest, in lieu of 3¼ per cent., which the investment of it in Consols was then yielding, and such was anticipated to be the increase of revenue, that the loan and interest was estimated to be paid off in ten years. Great discussion and opposition took place; objections of all kinds were raised. Some brethren predicted that £100,000 would have to be expended; it was asserted to be illegal and inexpedient to borrow of the Fund of Benevolence; it was contrary to practice to separate the tavern; it was even suggested that the opinion of the country brethren should be taken; in other words, that the Building Committee should consist of 100,000 members. Finally, of the three best designs, those of Bros. F. Cockerell, E. M. Barry, and S. Daukes, the first-named was chosen, and all requisite powers were given to the Building Committee. The foundation-stone of the new buildings was laid on the occasion of the Grand Festival, April 27, 1864. Bro. J. Havers is called in the inscription Curator emeritus septem virorum preses. The buildings were actively pushed forward, and on March 1, 1865, a portion was opened to the brethren attending Grand Lodge. The Grand Secretary's and charity offices were transferred June 7, 1865. The new hall was finished February, 1866, and at Grand Lodge on Dec. 4, 1867, it was announced that the buildings were completed, having consumed a period of three-and-a-half years in construction; and on this occasion Bro. James Mason was prompt in proposing a cordial vote of thanks to the Building Committee. The repair and redecoration of the Great Hall, however, were committed to the same hands who had hitherto acted so efficiently, and it was not until the Grand Lodge of March 3, 1869, that the present committee was appointed to recommend a suitable recognition of the eminent services rendered to the Craft by the Chairman of the Building Committee. Such, brethren, is a very brief retrospect of the history of Freemasons' Hall, under its old auspices and under its present. We maintain that the Building Committee, with Bro. Havers at their head, have vindicated the great principle which they had in view, namely, the separation of the Hall from the Tavern, the Tavern ministering to the Hall, but not forming an essential part of it. Now, I wish to refer to the constitution of the Committee which has brought to a conclusion this testimonial. It was at Grand Lodge of 3rd March, 1869, a resolution was proposed—"The buildings in connection with Freemasons' Hall being now completed, and the old hall repaired and re-decorated, 'That a committee of members of Grand Lodge be appointed to consider and report upon a suitable recognition of the eminent services rendered to the Craft by the Chairman and his colleagues of the Building Committee.'" That resolution was carried unanimously, and the committee were appointed, consisting of Bros. John M. Clabon, James Mason, Jabez Hogg, Ed. J. Fraser, Samuel L. Tomkins, Francis Bennoch, Joshua Nunn, Edward Cox, and Brackstone Baker. To tell of the meetings of the committee, the suggestions that were made, and the proposals that were brought forward, and afterwards urged again, would take too long a time. Suffice it to say, that Bro. Joseph Durham was finally selected to carry out the works, and by a report made to the Testimonial Committee in 1869, it was stated—"That the committee have had several meetings, and have considered various suggestions for carrying out the views of Grand Lodge, and they beg to report: 'That, in their opinion, the most suitable and permanent mode of marking the sentiments of Grand Lodge, and the most likely to be in consonance with the inclinations of the Building Committee, will be the placing of a sculptured tablet in a conspicuous part of the new building, with an appropriate inscription, to be surmounted by a marble bust of the Chairman, Bro. John Havers, and surrounded by marble medallion portraits of the Building Committee, which are Bros. John L. Evans, John Hervey, John Savage, J. Rankin Stebbing, George Plucknett, and Henry Grissell. The locality recommended is the hemi-cycle or semi-circular niche on the first floor, immediately facing the flight of steps leading to the entrance of Grand Lodge. The Committee recommend that they may be empowered to commission Bro. Joseph Durham, A.R.A., the eminent sculptor, to execute the same from his designs, with the advice and concurrence of the Grand Superintendent of Works. In the event of this report being approved by Grand Lodge, and the recommendations adopted, it is proposed to move 'That an expenditure not exceeding 300 guineas be sanctioned for this purpose.' The Committee further recommend that, as a personal memorial, and as an expression of the thanks of Grand Lodge for the valuable services rendered to the Craft by the Building Committee, the inscription to be placed on the tablet, with a concise statement of the circumstances which gave rise to it, should be transcribed on vellum ornamentally, and signed by the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, and presented to each member of the Building Committee.'" The proposal was carried unanimously, and the result is that Bro. Joseph Durham, whose name has become almost an historical name among the sculptors of England, has executed the work, and how successfully you must judge for yourselves. It is needless for me to refer to the ability of Bro. Durham. His well known statue of Hermione in the Egyptian Hall, and the colossal group in the Horticultural Gardens—which, though it does not belong to the Horticultural Society, they have appropriated to themselves—are the best testimony to his merits, and they were the first works he ever executed.

Bro. Baker here tore the veil down, and exhibited the memorial, which was greatly admired.

Calls were made for a speech from Bro. Savage, whereupon

Bro. Savage expressed the delight he felt, which he sure every one else felt, on seeing this beautiful piece of statuary unveiled. It reflected the highest credit on Bro. Durham. It was a masterpiece of art, and would be viewed with great delight, not only by the brethren of the Building Committee, but by all other brethren. The likenesses were excellent, and they did credit to the skill and bore testimony to the vast ability and consummate taste of their excellent and worthy Bro. Durham. In the name of the Building Committee, and on behalf of the chairman, he begged to thank the Craft for their recognition of the services of the Committee. He would have liked Bro. Stebbing to have returned thanks, but, unless he did so, they would allow him (Bro. Savage) to fill his place. It was a most gratifying day for all of them.

Bro. Stebbing was sorry he was so late, but he was most happy to bear his testimony to the great skill of the artist, and the great pains and care he took. It was only justice to him to say he had not required his (Bro. Stebbing's) attendance at his studio, except on the occasion of his taking the wax model of his head. It was so successful that he was able to copy it thus truthfully in the marble.

Bro. Brackstone Baker proposed, and Bro. F. Bennoch seconded, a vote of thanks to Bro. Durham, which was carried unanimously.

Bro. Durham (who was received with great cheering) said: I can only thank you, brethren, and however long I might speak, the terms I should use would all end in simply this: With all my heart I thank you. (Cheers.)

The brethren then separated.

KNIGHTS OF THE RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

TRIENNIAL ASSEMBLY OF THE GENERAL GRAND CONCLAVE.

The Triennial Assembly of the General Grand Conclave of the Ecclesiastical and Military Order of the Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine was held at the Freemasons' Tavern on Friday evening, March 3rd, for the purpose of receiving the report of the Executive Committee, to elect and enthrone a Grand Sovereign for the ensuing three years, and to elect three Past Sovereigns as members of the Grand High Almoners' Fund Committee. The following members of the Order were present:—The Earl of Bective, G. Sov.; Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart., M.P., M.E.G. Viceroy; Colonel Burdett, G.S.G.; W. H. Hubbard, G. Treas.; W. E. Gumbleton, G.C.; E. Busher, G. Marshall; Capt. F. G. Irwin, I.G. Bristol; H. G. Buss, G. Almoner; R. Wentworth Little, G. Recorder; John Hervey, G.H.C.; W. R. Woodman, H. Parker, H. C. Levander, Thomas Cubitt, A. J. Lewis, and R. W. Stewart, members of the Grand Senate. Past and Present Sovereigns of conclaves: George Kenning, W. Carpenter, T. W. White, Harrison, J. Taylor, W. Jones, W. Roebuck, D. Gordon, T. B. Yeoman, D. Dewar, Capt. L. Campbell, H. Thompson, S. Rosenthal, F. G. Bailey, A. A. Pendlebury, G. Lambert, W. B. Johnson, D. R. Still, and G. A. Ibbetson. Viceroy: Andrew, G. S. Haines, Donnithorne, E. Sillifant, Shaughnessy; and the following, amongst other Sir Knights: Robinson, Kingston, Hill, Lucey, A. M. Haynes, Hunt, Hurlstone, Worrell, H. Dicketts, Morton, Moss, Gottlieb, Willing, J. W. Barrett, Capt. Payne, J. L. Thomas, Major E. H. Finney, E. H. Finney (jun.), J. Boyd, J. D. Larsen, J. S. Banning, T. L. Fox, Major C. Sendey, W. W. Anderson, W. C. Barlow, E. H. Thiellay, &c.

The Grand Conclave having been opened in Imperial form, Sir Kt. Gottlieb, I.G. Eastern Archipelago, acting as G. Herald,

Sir Knight R. Wentworth Little read the report of the Executive Committee, which stated that since they last reported in 1868, the Red Cross Order had extended over many lands, and was now practised in Gibraltar, Bombay, Calcutta, Canada, and the United States; and there were now in working order no less a number than 51 conclaves, with aggregate of 1,000 members, and the funds were in a satisfactory and highly-flourishing condition, giving an assurance that it was making rapid progress in all parts of the world.

Sir Knight John Hervey and Sir Knight Gumbleton seconded the motion that the report be received, adopted, and entered on the minutes, which was unanimously agreed to.

Sir Kt. Hervey moved the following alteration of the General Statutes:—"The members of the Grand Council shall be appointed annually by the Grand Sovereign, with the exception of the Grand Treasurer, who shall be elected at the annual assembly of the General Grand Conclave. No officer shall hold office for more than three consecutive years, except the Grand Recorder, who may be re-nominated during pleasure. They shall be chosen from the members of the Grand Senate, but no senator shall be eligible for promotion to the Council until he shall have faithfully performed his duties in that capacity for at least one year." His wish, he said, in proposing this alteration was to popularise the body, and that it should be more generally thrown open to members, instead of being limited, as at present, to thirteen members.

Sir Kt. Col. Burdett seconded the motion, believing that the alteration would conduce to the benefit of the Order, as those brethren who were zealous for promotion would have the opportunity thrown open to them.

The motion was put and carried unanimously, as was one afterwards proposed fixing the assemblies of the General Grand Conclave to be held, annually, on the first Thursday in March.

Some other alterations of the statutes were proposed and agreed to, after which two lines were formed of the armed knights. The 1st Division under the command of the V. Ill. Sir Kt. Colonel Burdett, and the 2nd Division under the command of Sir Kt. Angelo Lewis, assisted by V.E. Sir Kt. Dr. Woodman; and an arch of steel being formed, the G. Sovereign and the members of the Grand Council retired, preliminary to the election of a Grand Sovereign for the ensuing three years.

Sir Frederick Williams, M.E.V., then occupied the throne, and alluded to the highly satisfactory manner in which the Earl of Bective had discharged his duties, and said it gave him great pleasure to propose the re-election of the Earl of Bective as Grand Sovereign for the ensuing three years.

Sir Kt. Gumbleton seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

The Grand Sovereign was then re-introduced, the Knights standing and saluting, and was conducted to the chair in front of the high altar, where the G. High Chancellor administered the oath of fidelity, after which the G. Viceroy invested the Grand Sovereign with the robe of state, and he was also presented with the sword of state. The Sovereign was then proclaimed by his style and titles, and being saluted by the Knights who passed in procession, the ceremony of enthronement was brought to a close.

Sir Kt. Hubbard having tendered his resignation as Grand Treasurer, he was unanimously re-elected to that office.

Sir Kt. Busher said he thought the time had arrived when, considering the hard way in which Sir Kt. Little had worked for the good of the Order, that he should receive some substantial recognition of his services, and as a mark of their good feeling towards him, he moved that the sum of 50 guineas should be given from the funds of the Grand Conclave towards the "Little Testimonial Fund."

Sir Kt. Dr. Woodman, M.D., had great pleasure in seconding the motion, which was put and carried unanimously.

The Grand Conclave was then closed in Imperial form, and the Knights adjourned to the banqueting hall, over which the Ill. G. Sovereign presided. At the conclusion of the repast, the loyal toasts were proposed and drank with all honours.

Sir Kt. Colonel Burdett then rose and said he need say little as to the toast he was about to propose, as he was quite sure it would be received in an enthusiastic, and he was almost going to say in an uproarious, manner. (Cheers and laughter.) They had, at their head, a nobleman who had, for three years, served them in a manner which was creditable to them and honourable to himself, and therefore he (Col. Burdett) had the greatest pleasure in proposing his health—(cheers)—which was that of their Illustrious Sovereign, the Earl of Bective. (Renewed cheering.) They had him in the position of their Sovereign, and they were greatly indebted to him for the support which he had given to their Order, and under his rule every thing had gone on and answered so well, that he had great pleasure in voting that he should be re-elected as their Grand Sovereign for the ensuing three years. He need say little about him, as he was well known to them all, and he did not come amongst them as a stranger, but one who had well done his duty. Whenever he was in London he always came amongst them, and, therefore, he had great pleasure in proposing "The health of their Ill. Sov., the Earl of Bective," asking them to receive it with the same hearty cheers as they had always received it before. (The toast was most enthusiastically responded to.)

The Earl of Bective said: Sir Kt. Col. Burdett and Sir Kts., all thanks to you for the hearty manner in which you have drank my health, and thanks to you, Colonel Burdett, for the kind way in which you proposed it. I can say that I have endeavoured, to the utmost of my ability, to do my best to secure the bright position which Col. Burdett has so kindly put before you. I can assure you that I feel it to be a great honour to be connected with this Order, which has extended so rapidly, not only over Europe, but over the Continent and the whole of the globe, and as it goes on it will extend those kindly feelings for which it is distinguished. I feel indebted to you for your good opinion, and although I am occasionally absent from you, I can assure you that does not arise from any want of zeal, but from circumstances which prevent me from being with you, and of forwarding the Order which I have most at heart. (Cheers.) You have heard to-day from our Grand Recorder in the Conclave, the excellent state of our Order, and I was sorry that I then had not the opportunity of returning thanks for the honour of being again re-elected as your Grand Sovereign for three years; but I considered that so far as we were transacting the stern business of the Grand Conclave, we should avoid speech-making as much as possible, and that was the reason that induced me to reserve what I had to say until a later period in the evening. (Loud cheers.) I am sorry that the extension of our Order does not meet with the encouragement of which it is deserving from some sections in Freemasonry, who look upon it with feelings of jealousy, but in doing so I am afraid that this section, setting aside those great principles of Freemasonry which ought to guide them in respect to other Orders, have fallen into the wrong path and have not regarded our Order with those feelings which ought to have actuated them as Freemasons. (Cheers.) They have gone so far as to say that we have asserted rights which we have never asserted, and we have not attempted to extend our Order by connecting it with one with which we have not the slightest claim. We have no desire to connect our Order with a dynasty long since scattered to the winds, and we only wish to preserve the traditions and mysteries of our Order, which has a distinct claim upon us as Masons. The time was when our Order on the field was baptised in blood, and that sealed the conquest that was won. We now go forth with an allegorical morality, presenting to the breasts of all not the sword but the cross, and ask all to go with us hand in hand in promoting the goodwill and prosperity of the world. We seek to bind all in concord and affection by those bonds which are known all over the world; we seek, not to fetter any with links of iron, but with noble hearts and an unsullied conscience. (Loud cheers.) As our empire extends over the whole world, so may extend the breastplate (as we understood the the noble lord to say) of the Swiss Confederation; and even in the late war which desolated Europe, and when the storm of war rolled the blood-stained billows to the shores of England, that sign protected many of our fellow-creatures from the ruthlessness of misguided men, and saved them from that fury which would have destroyed them. I hope that while future generations will remember this, that they will also remember that it is the sign and symbol of the Red Cross Order. (The noble lord sat down amidst loud cheering.)

The Earl of Bective proposed "The Health of the Most Eminent Grand Viceroy, Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart, M.P., and the rest of the Grand Conclave," coupling with the toast (in the absence of Sir F. Williams) the name of Col. Burdett.

Col. Burdett returned thanks, and said they would not relax in their endeavours to promote the prosperity of the Order.

Bro. Theodore Distin sang "The Red Cross," the words by Bro. Little, and he was loudly cheered, after which the author, Bro. Little, was called for.

Sir Kt. Little said, if his humble verses had pleased them, he was highly gratified, but he thought much more was due to the manner in which they had been sung, and the music with which they had been accompanied; but he hoped they would be handed down in connection with their noble Order.

The Grand Sovereign next gave "The Illustrious Intendants-General of the Order," coupling with the toast the name of Captain Irwin, of Bristol.

Sir Kt. Irwin, on behalf of the Intendants-General, returned thanks for the manner in which their names had been received, and said nothing should be wanting on their part to promote the interests of the Order, and alluded to the great enthusiasm with which the name of the Grand Sovereign was always received.

Sir Kt. Gumbleton proposed "The Grand Senate," and, in the absence of Lord Lindsay, coupled with the toast the name of Sir Kt. Levander, the senior member present. (The toast was well received.)

Sir Kt. Levander said he regretted that Lord Lindsay was not present, as he would have done more justice to the toast than he could, and in his name, he (Sir Kt. Levander) had to thank them for the honour they had done them in drinking their healths that evening. It was a great pleasure to co-operate with the Grand Council in promoting the Red Cross Order. When last they met he belonged to the youngest conclave then formed, which was No. 6; but now there was No. 56, showing that the Order was making great progress, which, he believed, would continue so long as they acted up to the watchwords of their Order, which were "Faith, Unity, and Zeal," and so long as they were adhered to, the Order could not fail to prosper.

"Representatives of Conclaves and Knights of the Grand Cross" was proposed, and acknowledged by Sir Knts. Thomas Angelo Lewis, Raynham Stewart, Captain F. G. Irwin, K.G.C.; and George Kenning, K.G.C.

Some other toasts were given, and all were well received.

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Sir Kt. Henry Parker (who presided at the grand pianoforte), assisted by Madame Emmeline Cole, Bro. Kerr Gedge, and Bro. Theodore Distin, and the whole proceedings gave entire satisfaction.

THE FREEMASONS' LIFE BOAT.

The monthly meeting of the Committee was held at Bro. Forster's, the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on Thursday, the 2nd instant, Bro. A. E. Harris in the chair. There were also present: Bros. S. Davis (Treas.), E. Gottheil (Hon. Sec.), Mortlock, W. Mann, Lacey, D. Beck, H. M. Levy, John Boyd, N. Gluckstein; visitors, Bros. M. Davis, D.C. 141, and Charles Dairy, 141.

The minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed. The following brethren were then severally proposed and accepted as members of the Committee: John Coutts, P.M. 27 and 1310, P.Z. 382, 177, A.G.P.; C. A. Cottebranc, P.M. 733, 957, 1257, P.Z. 177, 733, 77; J. Cohen, 174; and Charles Dairy, 141.

The Hon. Sec. communicated the pleasing fact that the Grand Lodge had voted the sum of £50 towards the Fund. Upon that the following resolution was proposed by Bro. S. Davis, seconded by Bro. H. M. Levy and carried by acclamation:—"That a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to the proprietor of THE FREEMASON for the valuable aid he has rendered in promoting the interests of the movement."

Additional subscriptions were then announced, viz.:-

A vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the proceedings, and the meeting was adjourned until Thursday, 6th proximo, at 8 p.m.

"TEMPLE" BALL.—The ball of this old and flourish-lodge (101), took place on Tuesday, the 21st ult., under the presidency of Bro. Grimby, at Freemasons' Tavern. The company were very numerous; indeed we hear that this year was the most successful of the many gatherings that have taken place. Dancing commenced at 9 p.m., to the lively strains of Bro. Adams's band, and was continued without intermission till supper was called, which was well served about half-past twelve. After which dancing was resumed, and kept up with unflagging spirit until nearly four o'clock in the morning.

To the Most Worshipful the Grand Master Mason of Scotland, the Right Worshipful Depute and Substitute Grand Masters, the R.W. Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, and the Remanent Office-bearers and Members of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Scotland.

DEAR BRETHREN,—At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, held in the Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, upon the 7th day of November, 1870, a document was read by Bro. John Baird, R.W.M.
No. 3 bis, purporting to be a memorial or petition sent in by the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, No. 3 bis, anent the carrying of the working tools at Masonic processions in the Glasgow province.
After this document had been read and presented,
I took the liberty to remark to the effect that I (although a member of No. 3 bis) knew nothing about this document, and would consider myself disgraced were my name attached to it; and as for the Malcolm Charter, to which allusion was made in it, I considered it to be nothing else than a disgraceful forgery. After this, a motion was proposed by Bro. William Officer, Acting Junior Grand Warden, and unanimously agreed to, that this memorial from the Lodge of Glasgow St. John,
No. 3 bis, should lie upon the table until next quarterly communication, so as to afford time for examination into its contents. Since then I have received from Bro. John Lawrie, Grand Clerk, a "certified true copy" of this memorial, as also, at the same time, a letter from him dated 8th December, 1870, requiring me to lodge with him, within fourteen days, my reasons for making the statements I made regarding it at the quarterly communication on 7th November, 1870.

Accordingly, in answer to this request, I respectfully beg leave to present the following remarks:—

Firstly, I beg leave to observe that, although this document was presented to Grand Lodge upon the 7th day of November, 1870, in name of the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, No. 3 bis, yet said document was not read in, or adopted by, the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, No. 3 bis, until the 15th November, 1870, or eight days after its presentation! At which meeting I was present, and, as a member of No. 3 bis, condemned it, and likewise reiterated my opinion that the "Malcolm Charter" they were founding upon was a forgery.

Secondly, Said document or memorial is, in my opinion, a very imperfect one, and contains many mistakes, as I shall proceed to show. Consequently, if such be the case, it would be anything but complimentary to any person to have his name attached to it. In proof of which I proceed to take up the "First" head of this memorial, which states that "the Lodge of Glasgow St. John (No. 3 bis) had, by charter dated 1157, conferred upon them and their predecessors the whole rights and privileges of Masonry within the city of Glasgow," &c. Now, the first question here evidently is: Is this pretended "charter dated 1157" genuine? To which I answer, No! Further, before going into the proof of its non-genuineness, allow me to remind the Right Worshipful Office-bearers of the Grand Lodge that when this St. John's Lodge, in 1849-50, wished to join the Grand Lodge of Scotland, they then brought up this same pretended charter, and held it forth as being granted to them by Malcolm 3rd, Canmore, King of Scots, in 1057; but upon examination thereof the Grand Lodge of Scotland at that time very justly decidedly refused to acknowledge said document as a charter of Malcolm the Third's, or of date 1057, and gave them their position of No. 3 bis upon the 1628 Roslin Charter.
Now, however, in this case it will be observed that the date given is 1157, which takes 100 years off its pretended age, and brings it down to the time of Malcolm IV.

However, whether the date given out be 1051, 1057, or 1157, all, in my opinion, are equally false, for, upon examining the document itself, we find it saying, My true age is much nearer 1857 than any of the foregoing dates—as I now proceed to shew:

First. The styles of the writing, and also of the Latin, are quite modern, as also the character of its contents comparatively so; while, in some points, it reminds me of the Glasgow Burgh Charter, 1175, as given in McUre's (1736) "History of Glasgow."

Second. The idea of an incorporation of Masons in Glasgow receiving a Royal Charter from either Malcolm III. or IV. is absurd and contrary to all reliable Scottish history.

Third. Even Glasgow itself did not receive its charter of erection as a Bishop's Burgh until the reign of William the Lion, and about A.D. 1175.

Fourth. In tracing back the existence of this document as far as possible, I have been unable as yet to discover any evidence of its existence before the year 1806, or nearly sixty-five years ago. At this time a Masonic procession was to take place in Glasgow in honour of the laying of the foundation-stone of the Nelson's monument on Glasgow Green, and at which procession the members of the Glasgow Freemen Operative St. John's Lodge, although not then in connection with the Grand Lodge of Scotland, not only wished to be present, but also to take precedence. The Glasgow St. Mungo Lodge, which was then the senior lodge of the province on the Grand Lodge roll, however, objected to this, as per their minutes of that date (a copy of which appears at page 307, &c., of the Freemasons' Magazine for Oct. 15th, 1870), where they rest upon the Laws and Regulations of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, especially appendix iii., chap. xii., as given at page 324 of Alexander Lawrie's "History of Freemasonry," published in 1804, and resting upon which they refused to acknowledge the St. John's Lodge, and call this Malcolm document, which was so opportunely brought forward or "discovered" then, a "pretended charter;" and in refusing to allow the St. John's Lodge to interfere with them, they are backed up by Bro. William Guthrie, Grand Secretary, and also by Sir John Stuart of Allanbank, the Provincial Grand Master, who says,
"On no account can or will I permit any lodge to appear in this procession that does not hold of the Grand Lodge of Scotland."

All this shows how mistaken are the statements in this St. John's memorial, which say, "those privileges were never called in question," or, where it states that the St. John's Lodge "were assigned by virtue of their position precedence in rank over all the daughter lodges of Scotland." For all, that I am aware, they got in 1806 was that St. John Stuart asked for "five or six handsome figures of operatives having black cloathes to carry my proper ensigns;" and it so happened that the operatives, having "handsome figures" and "black cloathes," so chosen, belonged to St. John's Lodge, which was so far a credit to that body; but that might have been only an accident so far, and it was a concession of Sir John Stuart to take them, as he entirely refuses to acknowledge or have any intercourse with the Glasgow St. John's Lodge as such; for the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as an independent body, and as the head of Speculative Freemasonry in Scotland, is not bound to recognise the preten-sions of any operative or other lodge out of its pale, or even within it, any further than it may rightly consider said pretensions to be just and reasonable.
The pretensions of operative Masons are one thing, the prerogative and constitution of the Grand Lodge of Scotland another.

Further, even the minutes of the Lodge St. John themselves prove the mistake of saying "those privileges were never called in question," for in 1833, when the foundation-stone of the Jama-street Bridge at Glasgow was to be laid, these so-called privileges of theirs were disallowed; however, great agitation was got up, and considerable pressure put upon the Lord Provost* and Dr. Cleland, Superintendent of Public Works, which latter had been imposed upon by the pretended Malcolm Charter, and had even published a so-called translation of it in his "Annals of Glasgow," as per vol.
ii., page 485. But whether the English "translation," or the pseudo "old monkish Latin" be the older, I cannot at present affirm. However, no doubt by appealing to this precious document they carried their point, to a certain extent at least, not, as I consider, because of any just and lawful right they had to interfere with the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Scotland then; but because local influence backed up, as it seems to me, by falsehood, fraud, and imposition, mixed with, or working upon, ignorance, were for the time triumphant.
Then be it observed that all the occasions mentioned in this memorial from the St. John's Lodge as the precedents, where some of its members have carried the tools in Masonic processions in Glasgow, are after A.D. 1806, as the oldest date there given is 1810. Consequently, seeing that this is the case, and that it was the St. John's Lodge itself which brought forward or "discovered" this pretended Malcolm Charter in 1806 to further its pretensions then, and has ever since upheld it as a great foundation of those pretensions, it follows that if said pretended charter be false, as I consider it is, all these pretensions based upon it fall at once to the ground, and the Lodge of Glasgow St. John as such, and as a lodge holding of the Grand Lodge of Scotland has no more right and

* According to page 162 of Bro. James Pagan's
"Sketch of the History of Glasgow," James Ewing, Esq., of Sirathleven, M.P., was Lord Provost then.

privilege over any of the other lodges under the sway of Grand Lodge than its position of No. 3 bis gives it, or the laws of Grand Lodge allow it.

Another point I may here mention is that although when St. John's joined the Grand Lodge of Scotland, about twenty years ago, it got the high position of No. 3 bis, yet founding upon this pretended Malcolm Charter, they have been again and again hinting at demanding a higher position on the Grand Lodge roll; in fact, this was made the foundation of a sort of standing grievance, by which, as it appears to me, a feeling was kept up among the members of No. 3 bis as if they had not got justice at the hands of Grand Lodge as per, inter alia, a motion by Bro. D. Hannay, Senior Warden, alluded to in a St. John's Lodge minute, of date 4th August, 1863: "That steps be taken to have this lodge placed in its proper position on the roll of the Grand Lodge of Scotland;" and, again, at the December festival of St. John's Lodge, 1867, which was styled their "810th Anniversary!"
and at which Bro. Captain Speirs, of Elderslie, M.P., the newly-elected Prov. G.M. for Glasgow, was present, and acted as Chairman (vide report of proceedings as given in Freemason's Magazine for January 11th, 1868), we find him saying, upon the authority of this pretended Malcolm Charter: "That although their lodge ranked 3½ in the Grand Lodge of Scotland, it was not in its proper place," and so on. Then, later still, we find Bro. Thomas McGuffie (the same, I suppose, who is mentioned in the memorial as carrying the plate), asserting in the Glasgow Herald, of date June 17th, 1870 (and as we also see by Freemason's Magazine, of date July 9th, 1870), that "The Glasgow Freemen Operative
St. John's Lodge is the senior lodge in Scotland, even to the Grand Lodge; and had our predecessors in office done their duty, every lodge in Scotland would have required to get a charter from them, and the St. John's would now be in the receipt of a large income, which I suppose the Grand Lodge now enjoys!" So we perceive that founding upon Malcolm's pretended charter the members of Glasgow St. John's Lodge would not only rise above all the other lodges in Scotland, but would fain soar above the Grand Lodge itself.
However, the statements made by Bro. Captain Speirs, P.G.M., at the so-called "810th Anniversary" of St. John's Lodge in December, 1867, led to an examination into the authenticity of this pretended Malcolm Charter, and in which examination circumstances led me to take an active part, and not only so, but under these circumstances I was bound in honour as a gentleman to make the result of said examination known, whatever that result was, which I did; and although by doing so I felt that many of my brethren in the lodge might be displeased, I could not help that, but simply strove to act upon the square, and to do what I felt to be my duty, be the result what it might. Therefore,
I not only made a personal examination of the document myself, but have also striven to get it examined by, or to learn the opinions of some of the best authorities in the country, which opinions
I now proceed to give:—

Dr. Anderson, in his "Memoirs of the House of Hamilton," says: "Apart from other considerations the writing is not above 200 or 300 years old."

Professor Cosmo Innes, V.P.R.S.E., S.A.S. Scot., &c., whose high standing and skill as a chartologist are well known, as witness his acting as editor to that splendid new work, "The National Manuscripts of Scotland," and many other authoritative and first-class works, and who saw it in 1868, said it was a forgery executed within the last 150 years, or taking plenty of time, within 200 at the utmost.
Further, it was made up of pieces taken out of different charters, and stuck together. Even before he saw it, and from a description of it which I sent him, he said it was a forgery; and when I asked him how he knew that before he saw it, he very kindly and courteously answered, "Our first Corporate Charters were to burghs, and not till long after came those to the gilds and corporations within and under burghs; but we have no charters to burghs till William the Lion (1165-1214)." So you see it did not require much sagacity to stamp the charter of Malcolm, full of the phraseology and the minute distinctions of a much later day, as a forgery.

The late Dr. G. A. Walker Arnott, the distinguished Professor of Botany in the University of Glasgow, and who long took an active interest in Masonry, as well as holding several high offices therein, called this pretended charter a forgery, and shortly before his death wrote me as follows:—
"23rd May, 1868.—On getting out of bed this forenoon (&c.), I read the Glasgow Herald, and in it what I presume is a letter from you, signed
'W. P. B.' I congratulate you on the frank and open manner in which you state your conclusions; and were such to be done in other cases, many discourteous dissensions would cease," &c.

THE MASONIC PRESS AND ITS PRIVILEGES.

THE remarks of the Earl of Carnarvon at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, on the 1st inst., with reference to a letter recently published in these columns, are of too important a character to be passed over by us in silence, or without explanation. In the first place, we would more particularly invite the attention of our readers to the editorial opinions expressed in THE FREEMASON on the 5th November, 1870, respecting the very points raised in the Deputy Grand Master's speech, when it will be found that in the article especially alluded to we deprecated in the strongest terms the conduct of certain Parisian lodges, the members of which had cited the King and the Crown Prince of Prussia before a Masonic tribunal for simply, as we expressed it, "doing their duty to their Fatherland." We, at the same time, protested vigorously "against the power and prestige of the Masonic Order being made available for the promotion of objects of a political nature." We pointed out in language which will bear repetition, because it is the record of our deliberate conviction, that, "as lodges of Freemasons, we meet to expatiate upon the mysteries of the Craft, and to secure the happiness of our fellows by obedience to its principles and precepts; not to uphold monarchies or republics—not to undermine dynasties or systems—but to pursue the plain path of moral rectitude by cultivating the blessings of social order." We spoke of the "fierce unreason" which had evidently dictated this foolish act of our French brethren, we enlarged upon the duties which a Mason owes to his country as a citizen, and we denounced the introduction of all religious or party discussions within the "tyled precincts of the lodge." This article, we may observe, was highly commended at the time by many eminent brethren, and it has since been approvingly reproduced by several of our American contemporaries.

On the 28th January, 1871, we placed on record the document issued by the Parisian Masons, with the remark: "We have already expressed our opinion on the subject." It had previously been published far and wide by the secular press and by nearly every Masonic paper in existence, and it appeared in THE FREEMASON simply as an item of Masonic intelligence which might fairly be placed before our readers. But, unfortunately, the publication of this portentous manifesto elicited a letter and a protest from a Brother Delfraisse, who enunciated opinions diametrically opposed to our own expressed sentiments on the subject. The Parisian document was the text, Brother Delfraisse's protest the sermon; and when we place them in juxtaposition, assuredly the sermon is worthy of the text. The grotesque form of wrath and the exaggerated picture of rage which Brother Delfraisse presented are so foreign to our English ideas that we should have scarcely thought it possible for any person, however prejudiced or dull of intellect, to attempt to identify our correspondent's opinions with our own.

It would seem, however, that the war note of defiance sounded by Brother Delfraisse reverberated as far as Leipsic, where it reached the ears of a certain ill-tempered German brother, who forthwith sat down and penned an equally furious epistle to the officials of the Grand Lodge of England, denouncing THE FREEMASON, and calling upon the Grand Lodge to disavow it, because Brother Delfraisse's letter had been inserted therein! Now, we have every right to assume that this Saxon brother is an obscure individual, or, at least, that he is not the Representative of any German Grand Lodge, nor the accredited agent of any considerable section of German Masons. We have too high an opinion of the reasoning faculties of the Teutonic race to believe for a moment that this nameless correspondent had authority to speak in their behalf; and we may therefore fairly enquire why such undue importance should have been attached to his petulant denunciations? If we had endorsed or supported the sentiments of Brother Delfraisse or other French brethren on the subject of the war, we could understand the feeling which prompted Lord Carnarvon's observations; but the contrary is the fact, as we have already sufficiently proved. We may, therefore, ask why THE FREEMASON, which has been so widely accepted as the organ of the English Craft, should have been thus singularly misinterpreted in Grand Lodge? And we do so with greater confidence when we reflect that, as the Deputy Grand Master rightly states, all the privileges which the Masonic press of England enjoy are summed up in one—they can send a reporter to each Quarterly Communication. It may not be known to Lord Carnarvon, or to other distinguished brethren, that THE FREEMASON is the only paper in England which regularly avails itself of this privilege; and we may remind his lordship that the reports are given for the information of a large body of brethren, by whom they are highly appreciated. At the same time, we may be allowed to remark that the day has for ever gone by for restrictive legislation with regard to the press; it is a policy which has long been abandoned in all enlightened States, and one which is hardly likely to be revived with success in any free country. Personal considerations can have very little weight with a conscientious journalist. We are old enough to remember the time when the discouragement of all attempts to furnish information to the Craft was considered eminently Masonic, and possibly Lord Carnarvon has not forgotten the period to which we allude. We, however, have a duty to perform, and in the discharge of that duty we shall ever remember that above all and beyond every consideration we have the interests of Freemasonry at heart; and we should deeply regret the commission of any act or the publication of any opinion which might have a tendency to circumscribe its progress and prosperity. As to the privilege of reporting the proceedings of Grand Lodge, we may observe that several secular newspapers in England enjoy, unchallenged, the same right, and occasionally place before the public garbled reports of the proceedings, while THE FREEMASON alone has exercised it in extenso. We have never boasted official inspiration, or vaunted the patronage of Grand Lodge; but we maintain that throughout our brief but eventful career, we have secured the suffrages of a vast number of Englishmen who are ready to unite as one man in promulgating and extending the principles of the Craft. To their verdict we can always appeal, and on this occasion we do so with the utmost confidence, feeling convinced that the liberty of the Masonic press is safe and sacred in their hands.

WE are requested to state that Lord Lindsay holds no office in, and has now no connection with, the "Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners."

HELE, CONCEAL, ETC.

I am quite sure that Bro. Hughan would not esteem it any compliment that a brother should accept his opinion as absolutely correct, however highly he may esteem his learning and judgment. I need not, therefore, apologise to him for expressing my dissent from what he wrote in the last FREEMASON on the words hele, conceal, &c. In what I wrote upon these words I gave my reasons for rejecting the idea that they are synonymous—so used for the purpose of giving more solemnity and importance to the O.B.; and I further ventured to suggest what I conceived to be the distinction in the meaning of the several words, each being the appropriate word for the purpose. Without noticing the reasons I have given against regarding the words as synonymous, or the definition I have suggested of their several meanings, Bro. Hughan writes: "The use of three apparent synonymes seems to be for the purpose of drawing more than ordinary attention to the solemnity and importance of the O.B." He may be correct in the view he takes of the words; but I submit that in reaffirming what I controverted, with reasons given, he was bound in courtesy to have shown the insufficiency of those reasons. I should not have noticed this, however, had not Bro. Hughan adduced as an illustration of the view he takes of the words, and as confirmatory of its accuracy, what, as it seems to me, he as much and in the same way misinterprets as he does the words "hele, conceal," &c. He regards these words as "apparent [why apparent?] synonymes, as are 'evasion, equivocation, &c.'" Why "as are"? Where is the proof of these words being synonymous, and of their being used only to draw "more than ordinary attention to the solemnity," &c.? Lacking the proof, I venture to submit that these words are no more synonymes than the other words are; but that, as each of the words "hele, conceal, and never reveal," has its appropriate and important meaning, so also have the words "evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation." The framers of our ritual appear to me to have been most careful to so guard our secrets that it should not be possible for any one to divulge them without a deliberately-formed and wicked—I mean consciously wicked—purpose to violate his solemn obligation; and that, as in the use of the words "hele, conceal," &c., they guarded against every mode of making known that which should be concealed, so, in the use of the words "without evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation of any kind," &c., they aimed to ensure the full and honest assent of the initiate to the words of the O.B., taken in their genuine meaning. I will not now enlarge on the importance of so construing the words in question, but simply suggest what I take to be their proper intent and meaning:—

Evasion.—Any attempt to set aside or get rid of the force of the O.B.

Equivocation.—Any using of the words in a sense different from that obviously intended by them.

Mental Reservation.—Any limiting in one's own mind the obvious comprehensiveness and perpetual validity of the O.B.

DR. ZERFFI ON ORNAMENTAL ART.

This celebrated professor says—Building News, February 17th—"Savages use generally only geometrical figures in the ornamentation of their vessels, weapons, oars, clubs, crossbeams or doorposts. The triangle, the square, and the circle are applied in a thousand different forms, windings, and combinations. As soon as man frees himself from the savage state, he takes his motives for ornamentation from the vegetable kingdom." W. P. B.

Whence arose the word "patronised" in reference to Masonry? Many of our members object to it, and say it ought to be "participated in." Can you give us any information on the subject? Is not Masonry far above all patronage?

A SUBSCRIBER.

Is it necessary to go through the whole ceremony of installation in the case of a brother who is already a P.M. of another lodge? Any hints as to the mode of proceeding will oblige.

I fear my former letter asking the same query did not come to hand. W. M.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The regular committee meeting of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall on Wednesday, the 8th inst. Bro. R. Hervé Giraud, P.G.D., in the chair. There were present Bros. W. Farnfield, E. J. Fraser, J. Smith, J. Brett, Hemsworth, E. Cox, F. Walters, L. Stein, Raynham W. Stewart, W. Young, and Major Creaton.

The minutes of the February meeting were read and confirmed.

It was announced that the death of two male annuitants had occurred since the last committee meeting; also that Mrs. Geils (an approved candidate) had died on 31st January. Her name will appear on the balloting papers, but to prevent mistakes, her death is inserted after her name. Her death had been communicated to the Secretary since the last meeting of the committee, and after the balloting paper had received the approval of this committee.

The usual formal business having been disposed of, the meeting was closed.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee meeting was held on Saturday, the 4th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. B. Head, V.P., in the chair. Present: Bros. J. Hervey, V.P.; P. F. Grosjean; F. Walters, V.P.; G. Cox, V.P.; R. Spencer, V.P.; W. Roebuck, T. J. Sabine, J. Turner, J. H. Butten, F. Adlard, &c.

Bro. F. Binckes, Secretary, read the minutes of previous meeting, which were confirmed.

All the applicants were placed on the list of candidates for the October election whose petitions were brought before this meeting.

Two boys who had been educated in the school had each £5 voted to supply them with clothing, after which the meeting was closed.

A RENOWNED MASONIC AUTHOR.
(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—On p. 44 of THE FREEMASON, in the communication from New York signed "F. J.," there occurs the designation above as applied to Bro. Rob. Macoy, of this city. How your correspondent got the notion into his head that our Bro. Macoy was "a renowned Masonic author" it would be difficult to determine, unless he got the name "Macoy" instead of the name of "Mackey" (Albert G. Mackey, M.D., of Charleston, S.C., at present of Washington city), the latter a Masonic author of some repute in the production of small useful books for the different departments of Masonry. The only books Robert Macoy ever published with his name on the title-page as author were two, neither of which he is very proud of, as he probably never wrote a page of either himself—for the same reason that the Indian did not read his Bible every day—though one of them carries a portrait of his kindly features as its author.

This mixing of names, and consequently men, is a fault with hasty and fulsome travelling writers of letters from this side of the Atlantic, and leads to much misunderstanding, which, to a slight extent, it is the object of this letter to correct.

IN RE "BALD STATEMENTS."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I crave the space which I believe you will not deny me, to respond to Bro. C. G. Forsyth, in response to his remarks, in No. 97 of your paper, under the quoted words of the above heading: first, to apologise to him for misquoting the name of the work from which he copied the extract that led to my notice of it; and, secondly, to in turn correct him in view of his statement that I indulged in ill-bred remarks on you as an editor. My belief is that I did nothing of the kind. The reference was—and I fail to see that it was ill-bred—plainly to the editor of the Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror, as it was that paper, and not yours, that contained the extract from the apocryphal Charter of Cologne. By way of supporting his extract in No. 90 of your paper, Bro. Forsyth states that such extract is also to be found in Dr. Oliver's Landmarks. This I grant him; but take leave to add that as Dr. O. copied it in all probability from the same work as did Bro. F., and as there is no evidence yet adduced that the writer of the article in the Enc. Met. was a Freemason, or any better informed than his readings permitted him to be, it appears to me that even yet the extract remains a very "bald statement."

I regret that Bro. Forsyth should exhibit so much feeling in replying to my short contribution to your columns, and which for his information I here kindly assure him was certainly as profitless (pecuniarily) to me as he states his are to himself. If I might be permitted to judge, and express that judgment here, I would say that in the pleasure derived from seeing their contributions so handsomely printed, your contributors should consider themselves amply paid.

In reply to Bro. Forsyth's last remark, I would say that the real name of any writer of extracts, scraps, or memorabilia for a weekly journal is, I conceive, of little consequence to the public, and to give or retain it a matter of taste. The apology for misquoting a given authority is, however, an important matter, and it is to him here very fraternally tendered by an ANCIENT MSS. ONCE MORE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—When I penned the letter which appeared on page 26 of the present volume of THE FREEMASON, I little expected to have Bro. "Lupus" take offence as he seems to have done, judging from his lucubration in the subsequent number at page 41. I had supposed that we were both on the same side of the discussion, and that he, in a fit of playfulness, having kicked out, I merely desired to show him that the occurrence of the in that place meaningless word "speculative," or which, if it had any meaning, certainly meant knowledge of geometry, was not sufficient to justify him in the use he made of it; but, in seeming accord with the disposition of the animal whose name he has adopted as a nom de plume, he turns aside and rends me with a fierceness that by its very force exhausts himself, and induces him to announce that he has incontinently withdrawn from the discussion. This is to be regretted the more as in it he was a burning and a shining light, and apparently enjoyed it to the full as much as Bro. Buchan himself, and that, you will admit, is saying a good deal.

As my contribution under this head and that of Bro. "Lupus" stand nigh each other, and are so very recent, I will only here request the impartial and gentle reader to again peruse both, and judge for himself whether or not I gave check to Brother "Lupus" sufficient to justify his change of base even, not to speak of his so sudden retirement from the field of this 1717 discussion. One point, however, calls for a correction by me, as Bro. "Lupus" therein attacks my veracity, and that is his point "5." In response to it, I here state that I did not say, nor even imply, that the "Legend of the Craft" in the Gentleman's Magazine for June, 1815, was copied from the MS. of Bro. Cooke. I said that it is plain Bro. Cooke's rendering and that of James Dowland are, if not from the same MS., evidently and certainly but different renderings of identically the same legend; and I now further say that if Cooke chose to render the expression that he found in the original by the word "Speculative," while Dowland rendered it by the word "Science," certainly this is in no sense sufficient to meet Bro. Buchan's assertion that the word "speculative" was unknown and could not be found in connection with Freemasonry prior to 1717, and, he might have added, for many years afterwards. Used as Cooke uses it, the term is outré, and void of relative sense—strained, and apparently for a purpose; for what meaning can be obtained from the always an adjective "speculative" in the following quotation:—"Because he (Edwin) wist well that handicraft had the practice of geometry so well as Masons, wherefore he drew him to council and learned the practice of that science (geometry) to his speculative, for of speculative he was a master"?

I might enlarge this letter, and reply in extenso to the ill-natured remarks of Bro. Lupus, for they certainly are that; but such a course would be but to fall with him into his error in literary ethics, and I therefore refrain.

FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The 73rd Anniversary Festival of this School was held on Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Tavern. The chair on the occasion was occupied by the R.W., Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of North Wales and Salop. The Board of Stewards comprised above seventy well-known brethren, whose President was Bro. James Mason, P.G.S.B., and whose Treasurer was Bro. F. A. Philbrick, W.M. No. 18. The list comprised many country as well as town Masons, and in addition to the Craft degree, the Royal Arch, the Mark, the Red Cross, and the Masonic Associations were specially represented. The Ark Mariner degree, however, notwithstanding its recent alleged rapid progress, did not send a single Steward, although there were many brethren present who belong to that amphibious tribe. The concurrence of so many Orders in the promotion of the one Masonic object of charity was a fine illustration of the unity of purpose which pervades professors of the mystic art, and the constancy with which this purpose is followed, should be the means of bringing among us many of the outer world whose hearts beat to the same tune. The institution for whose assistance so many brethren were banded together on Wednesday, stands much in need of any aid that can be afforded it, while this year it stands in the exceptionally disadvantageous position of having its sister institution as the lion of the festival season through obtaining the Prince of Wales as the Chairman of its anniversary celebration on the 8th of May. Along with the other home eleemosynary associations, it also expects to suffer from the large drain upon the funds of the benevolent which has been made through the channels which have conducted them abroad,—a fact that was foreseen and pointed out by a distinguished brother in the autumn of last year, when charity ran wild for a foreign trip. To counteract these two disadvantages, therefore, more than ordinary exertions are now necessary, and as the debt of the Institution has been reduced in the space of two years by £6,000, it is to be hoped that the efforts made by the Stewards of the 73rd Anniversary Festival will result in a still further lightening of the only load which prevents the School extending its usefulness. The circumstances in which the Boys' School is placed have been well described in a circular issued by Bro. Binckes, the Secretary of the Institution and Hon. Secretary of the Board of Stewards; and it may not be out of place if we take upon ourselves to add that the enormous expense which was at first incurred in building so large an establishment as that at Wood Green was only incurred once, and that that expense was incurred because it was believed that the immediate outlay on an extensive building would be less than that which would be ultimately necessary if periodically-required additions were made to the building.

Among the brethren present we observed: Bros. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, G.C.; W. E. Gumbleton, P.G.D.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B.; Captain Cope, P.G.S.B.; S. F. Furrian; Rev. C. Woodward, Chaplain; Algernon Perkins, P.G.W.; Treasurer; John Hervey, G.S.; George Cox, P.G.D.; G. Plucknett, P.G.D.; Benjamin Head, P.G.D.; Henry Browne, P.G.D.; W. Young, P.G.S.B.; H. Empson, P.G.S.B.; W. Farnfield, P.A.G.S.; Wm. Paas, V.P.; Raynham W. Stewart, V.P.; J. G. Chancellor, V.P., P.M. 657; B. Mallam, V.P.; Captain J. Wordsworth, V.P.; Edward Cox, V.P., P.M. 657; William Wells, M.P., P.G.W. Norths. and Hunts.; Peter Matthews, P.M. 11; Wharton P. Hood, Medical Officer; Henry Bridges, P.G.S.B.; John Boyd, P.M. 145; George Kenning, W.M. 192; T. W. White; Chas. Watson, P.M. 11; C. E. Hollingsworth, P.M. 197; Dr. Goldsboro, S. Rosenthal; C. Potter, P.M. 619; Captain G. Arthur Smith, J.W. 619; Alf. Avery, W.M. 1314; J. W. Avery, P.M. 619; Thomas Meggy, P.M. 569; Geo. Palmer, W.M. 11; Richard Spencer; F. Adlard, P.M. 7; Conrad C. Dumas, P.M. 410, A.G.D.C.; J. C. Parkinson, P.M. 181; Glover, P.M. 181; V.W. Bro. William Bulkeley Hughes, M.P. for Carnarvon, P.P.G.W. N. Wales and Salop; Bros. Love Jones Parry, M.P., P.P.D.C.; J. W. Last, S.W. 145; W. H. Green, S.W. 1310; Hyde Pullen, D.P.G.M. of the Isle of Wight; T. J. Sabine, Z. 73; F. A. Philbrick, W.M. 18 (Recorder of Colchester), who was also the Treasurer of the Board of Stewards; J. B. Wolpert, P.M. 720; R. Wentworth Little; A. A. Pendlebury, P.M. 1056; H. Thompson, P.M. 177; and H. Massey, P.M. 619.

The banquet was admirably served by Bro. C. E. Francatelli, and after it had been partaken of and the cloth had been removed, the Benedictus was beautifully sung by the professional brethren and ladies, and the toasts of the evening were proposed in due order.

In proposing the first loyal toast, "The Queen," the Chairman said:—Brethren, and I may say, Ladies, the first toast which I have to propose to you is that which is always drunk first at all similar meetings to this in our country, and as it is a loyal one it affords me the opportunity of remarking that there are no more loyal subjects in the realm and none who respect their Sovereign more than the Freemasons of England. If you look through the whole of the rules and regulations of Freemasonry, you will find that the tendency of all of them is to make them love their Sovereign and serve their God. Therefore it must be a great pleasure to us as belonging to that body to see our Queen gradually coming after her sore trial again among us. And I think as we are here now assembled for the purpose of benefiting one of our Masonic charities, our patron being Her Majesty, it is most fitting that we should drink in her honour. Ladies, we know—and I speak it in the presence of the ladies—cannot be made Masons, though we have it that one female was once admitted into the Order; but although our Queen is not a Mason, many of those Sovereigns who preceded her have been Masons. Her father and almost all the members of his family were; and we are happy in finding that her eldest son is one of us. I therefore give you "The health of the Queen."

The toast having been enthusiastically drunk, was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Chairman:—Brethren, the next toast which appears on the list after we have drunk the health of our Sovereign, is that of the chief of our Order, the Right Worshipful the Grand Master of England. This is the first time, I believe, that at the festival of this school we have had to propose his health in that capacity, and of course it is a matter of regret to all of us that he is not amongst us; but we must console ourselves with the recollection that he has temporarily left this country on a labour of love, and has given up his personal comfort to try and allay the angry feelings that have sprung up towards this nation. I trust that that labour may have not only great political results, but may also bring together the lodges of those of our brethren who are on the other side of the Atlantic. (Cheers.)

I shall propose his health, as we often have proposed that of one who long presided over us, hoping that Lord De Grey, having his example before him, may be as much respected at the end of a quarter of a century as is his immediate predecessor. (This toast was also drunk enthusiastically.)

The Chairman:—Brethren, the next toast I have to give you is that of "The Past Grand Masters of England," and I do not know which ought to be taken first, whether he, who for a very long time was the actual Grand Master, or he, who by his social position and by the respect we all have for him, stands high in Masonry. Perhaps it is right that loyalty rather than seniority should guide us. It is a great pleasure, I am sure to all of us, to think that though last year the Prince of Wales sat in this chair to make an appeal to the brethren on behalf of this charity, he is very soon coming again to preside for the good of the Girls' School. (Hear, hear.) It is a pleasing thing to see that, though from his position he cannot mix much in the government of the country, he is ready at all times to assist in its charitable institutions—(hear, hear,)—and I may say, as he has married a wife from Denmark, which country I know very well, that there is no country where Masonry is more looked up to and its benefits more appreciated. Perhaps it would have been a great pleasure to many I see here if he had been initiated, passed and raised in this Hall; but since it was his will to go through the different degrees in a foreign country, we hail his entry into the Order with delight, and accept him as a brother among us. I now come to Lord Zetland. There are but few here who do not recollect the days when he presided in Grand Lodge, and how kindly, fairly and enthusiastically he did his work. (Cheers.) Unfortunately there is a hard master called Anno Domini, whom we must all obey, to whom he also had to bend, and he now holds the rank of Past Grand Master instead of that of Grand Master. I believe I express the wish of the whole of the Craft when I say, long may he be spared to come among us. I beg to propose "The health of the Past Grand Masters of England, the Prince of Wales and Lord Zetland." (The toast was drunk with vociferous applause.)

Bro. Montague, D.P.G.M. of Dorset: Brethren, by permission of our president I am about to give you the next toast. Though we have heard how necessary it is that we should have very good heads of our Order, at the same time we must all be aware that they require to be ably seconded by their deputies. You all know how the Earl of Carnarvon fills the post of Deputy Grand Master, and no brother who has heard him in Grand Lodge can deny the wisdom of the Grand Master's selection of him for that distinguished office. I hope also at some future time we shall see him as the president of this great Masonic Charity. With this toast, which we shall drink to him, I shall couple the next toast, that of "The Health of the Provincial Grand Masters," which is so much the more appropriate as our president this evening is the Provincial Grand Master of North Wales and Shropshire. The Shropshire brethren who are here will be able to say how highly he is esteemed in his own province. I will couple with the toast "The Present and Past Grand Officers," all of whom have been selected by the Grand Masters because their work is well done. We have reason to congratulate ourselves upon the choice which has at different times been made in these appointments; and I think we cannot do better than acknowledge the services they have rendered to the Order by drinking their health. I shall call upon our brother, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Grand Chaplain, to reply to the toast.

Rev. C. J. Martyn: Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Officers, and Brethren, the task which has been imposed upon me this evening certainly is a very difficult one. You know we generally accept it as a proverb that if things are to be done well they must be done one at a time. Now, here we have three things to be done at once—the reply for the Deputy Grand Master, the Provincial Grand Masters of England, and the past and present Grand Officers of England; and therefore I am quite sure you will pardon me if, having to do so many things at a time, I fall short, and do none of it well. I thank all of you for the compliment you have paid us in drinking our health to-night. What has been said so well of the Earl of Carnarvon is perfectly true, and it requires no words from me to endorse it. All of us who have seen and heard him in Grand Lodge must have noticed the admirable way in which he always conducts any business that comes under his care; and all of us must be perfectly well convinced that in our Deputy Grand Master we have one whom the Freemasons of England may be proud to serve under. I come now to the Provincial Grand Masters. I think if we look round the country and see how well the different provinces are managed, and how efficiently Masonry is conducted beneath the rule of those who are as little kings in their provinces, we cannot but feel that we owe a deep debt of gratitude to our Provincial Grand Masters for their government. And now for the present and past Grand Officers of England. I am in the position of both, being a present and past Grand Officer; and in acknowledging this portion of the toast, I can only assure you that anything and everything any of us can do to promote the welfare, success, and good of the Craft, whose interest we have so deeply at heart, will be cheerfully rendered by us all. The roll of the Grand Officers of England contains the names of many men to whom our respect and admiration are due, and our only hope is that we may not at the end of our term of office have to reflect that by any act of ours we have tarnished our fame. We try to follow in the steps of those who have gone before us, and hope we may be entitled to the same approbation as they have met with at your hands. I beg to thank you in the name of the Deputy Grand Master, the Provincial Grand Masters, and the past and present Grand Officers for the kind way in which you have received the mention of our names. (Applause.)

Bro. Algernon Perkins, P.G.D.: Brethren, I have a very pleasing duty to perform this evening in giving you "The Health of the Right Worshipful Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Provincial Grand Master for North Wales and Salop," and your chairman. I am delighted to find a brother whom I have known in Masonry some few years, who has always been very eager for Masonry, and shown great zeal for the progress of it, at last take the chair on such an important occasion as this. To him I know it is a labour of love, but still it is a labour, because he has been working very hard to-day, and his work is not yet over. I think it very kind of him, and I hope it will be, as I feel it must be, of great advantage to the institution, seconded by the efforts of the other brethren. I cannot make a long speech, and I do not think it would be right if I did, because I should be keeping our chairman from proposing the toast of the evening, and completing the work he has so industriously begun. I shall therefore at once give you "The Health of our Chairman." (Cheers.)

The Chairman: Brethren and Ladies, I beg to return you my most heartfelt thanks for the honour you have done me in drinking my health; and I must say it is a very proud position for any brother to be in to preside over such an assembly. I may preside over a province which covers a large area, but a very great portion of it, I am aware, is not so thickly inhabited as the district I saw to-day when I went down to Wood Green. Still I believe Masonry is spreading in it, because I am continually being called upon to assist at the consecration of new lodges; and I trust that, as the people in the remote parts of Wales gradually see the excellent feeling of Masons, and the good that Masonry does, it will spread still further. We have just been listening to a beautiful song—"The Bells of Aberdovey," and I hope ere long to hear the bells of Aberdovey ringing over Freemasonry. There are at present lodges at a great distance from it; and as I see now the people of the manufacturing districts are gradually, through the introduction of railroads, being carried down to our Welsh coast, I hope we shall have the brethren from all districts, even from London, coming down to see what beauties Wales, both in lodges and in scenery, can afford. I was excessively pleased to-day at seeing the schools of your institution; but I suppose my remarks on that I ought to give you by-and-bye. I may say, however, it is not a very long journey from London, and I was amply compensated for any little trouble I took.

Bro. Binckes: In accordance with our custom, Bro. Chairman, there is now, I hope it will be considered, an agreeable break in the proceedings of the evening by introducing to the notice of our friends generally, and to the chairman, those pupils of our institution who have distinguished themselves in the past year, and gained that meed of reward which is adjudged to them by the kindness of various brethren. And I have great pleasure in saying that these prizes are of a mixed character. Some of them are for educational proficiency, and some for good conduct. Now, I humbly submit to a gathering such as this, that while we are quite prepared to admit that fostering good teaching, good education is the main object we have at heart, there is one thing that cannot be overlooked, and that is good conduct. Therefore, it is not for the members of our Managing Committee, still less for myself—and I am sure it will not be for our excellent chairman—to draw any comparison that would be more or less invidious between the peculiar excellencies that demand alike such rewards as those you are about to dispose. We know that Providence gives us talents of different sorts and different measure—to some remarkable intellect, to some remarkable amiability; and I don't know which, on the whole, is more likely to go successfully through the passage of life. I have known great intellectual ability to be connected with great irritability of temperament; and men who have not had great education we find take leading positions.

I am one of those who do not ignore the claims of one or the other. We cannot be all alike, fortunately for us, in this world. There are various fields of success open to us all. We cannot be all successful in every pursuit; and so in our little community we endeavour to signalise merit under whatever classification it may be placed. However, Bro. Chairman, I apprehend that I am bound to give the palm, perhaps on an occasion like the present, to intellectual proficiency; and therefore I present George Windham Martin—who has not only achieved the highest honours of our school at the Oxford Local Examination last year, but came out with second-class honours at the Cambridge University examination in December last, and who has so won the esteem and admiration of those who conduct the interests of this great institution and earned for himself the approving testimony of the Head Master, that he has not left us at the expiry of his term, but is sustained in our school in the honourable position of pupil teacher. I therefore ask you, Sir Watkin, to present this prize to him—the gold medal, for having passed with honours at the Oxford and Cambridge Local Middle-class Examination.

The Chairman: I have great pleasure, Mr. Martin, in presenting you with this little honour. I hope that the proficiency you have shown in your early days you will carry out in your latter ones. Recollect one thing, that there have been men who have had great early excellence, but have not carried it out afterwards. Let that be a warning to you. You have by your zeal, hard working and general good conduct, obtained this mark of respect from your masters. Try in your latter life to justify the good impressions they have of you.

Bro. Binckes: The next will be the silver medal, which is awarded from the funds of the institution to that boy who, by his good conduct to his masters, teachers, and those set over him, has given the least possible trouble. Now, as I said before, to speak of the various merits which we reward, I think any one will know that those who have to deal with the 120 boys, have not a light or an easy task to fulfil—and I think can be nothing more judicious—and it speaks well for our ancestors' wisdom when they founded the Institution—that good conduct, apart from intellectual excellence, should not be without its reward. But it is not to be supposed that with the highest character for good conduct the recipient of this prize is deficient in intellectual merit, although he may not be facile princeps in that particular, he is a boy of more than average merit, and has eclipsed all the others in good conduct, and thereby won the reward. I will thank you, sir, to present the good conduct medal to George Samuel Wrecknell.

The Chairman: Mr. Wrecknell, I have much pleasure in carrying out the request of the Committee in presenting you with this medal. Perhaps it has not pleased God, whose all-seeing eye is over us, to give you the talents some others have; but you have had the good sense and tact to make use of what talents have been given you, and you now get this medal which shows that you, among 120 boys, have worked effectually, and have merited the respect of your masters, and I trust that, in after years, you will strive to keep the good opinion you have earned already.

Bro. Binckes: The last recipient of reward at your hands is one who earns a prize on terms and conditions, that I think are perfectly unique—that is, as regards our Institution. As I have said, there may be boys, that deserve the highest rewards, that manifest great intellectual power. There may be those who earn reward by evincing the largest amount of discipline—that is to say, follow out consistently a career of good conduct. But I think I may appeal to you, sir, and all here who know of large institutions, to bear me out when I say that there are a class of boys who may neither be gifted with intellectual power nor yet with that wonderful quality that renders them subservient to discipline, and yet by that mysterious dispensation of an all-seeing Providence, who rules everything in this world, they are gifted with that disposition which endears them to the hearts of those of whom they are co-mates and school-fellows. Recognising this, through the kindness of a most excellent and distinguished supporter and Vice-President of this Institution, Bro. Edward Cox, there has been founded, in perpetuity, a prize value four guineas, called the Canonbury Medal, which is awarded to that boy who, by the unbiassed votes of his school-fellows, is annually found to be the most respected by them. Now, sir, for me to attempt to describe for a moment what may be, and what have been, the various qualifications, that from time to time entitle a pupil in our school, as I said just now, to this unique distinction which has been founded. I am one of those who hold that boys are a most critical and observant class; and I undertake to say that a boy who, out of 120, can earn such a reward as this, has in him the elements to make a good man. This boy is Percy Banks, who left us last December. He is the reipient of this medal, which the Chairman will now present to him.

The Chairman: This prize is one the like of which I have not seen established in the many schools I have had experience of. As your worthy Secretary has said, it is perfectly unique. To Bro. Cox's kindness you are indebted for instituting the gift. Your obtaining it this year shows that, whilst you have been in the school, you have made yourself a friend with all the boys. And it is my advice to you in later life to cultivate the good qualities that have endeared you to your schoolfellows. It may be the means of finding you a good friend in whatever society you are thrown. I trust, whenever you look at this reward, you will reflect that it is one of those things which should subdue any angry feelings that may arise in your breast towards any one; and I wish that many other schools would adopt the plan of finding out, as this school does, what boys are most appreciated by their school-fellows. (Cheers.)

[The Canonbury medal, so named after the Canonbury Lodge—of which Bro. Edward Cox, the founder of the prize, was a P.M.—was established in 1862 with the one and expressed intent of promoting a feeling of amity amongst the boys of the institution to the exclusion of selfishness and overbearing inclinations. The fostering of a spirit of emulation among the pupils was another object of its establishment; and we conclude that the earnest desire of the founder has been fulfilled. The prize consists of a spade-guinea piece, swung by gold rings from a circle bearing on its face the origin and foundation of the prize, and on the obverse the inscription of the recipient's name, the mode of election, and the date of presentation.]

The Chairman: Brethren, the next toast I have to give to you is, "Prosperity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys." I to-day had the privilege of going over the school, and I was shown, I think, everything in it. Through the kindness of the Master also I was told a great number of details. He showed me all the boys, and with a certain amount of knowledge of human nature, I do not think you would wish to see 120 boys looking cleaner, and better, and healthier than they were. (Hear, hear.) Recollect that many of those boys are the children of brethren who have been prosperous at one time, but who, through unforeseen circumstances, are not in that position now. It was very pleasing to me to see them so happy, healthy, and comfortable. I was glad to see there was a space set apart for an infirmary, with every appurtenance, in the most perfect order; but it was doubly agreeable for me to learn that it had not been used for a long while. There is, I believe, a great question as to using strong measures in the management of children—I think they call it the rod. I was happy to hear that during the year that had been a perfectly useless article. This shows that, by well-governing and well-teaching, all those things which are held as great faults and things to be avoided may be avoided frequently without using those strong measures to enforce lessons which are called punishment. This, however, is done without the strong measures being abolished from the school as a means of enforcing discipline. I am happy to see that, in spite of the large sum which that school has cost, a great deal of the debt has been wiped out; but still there is yet a very large amount—some £6,000—to be liquidated. It is for you, brethren, to struggle to try and see whether we cannot make sufficient exertions, in spite of the calls that are made upon us for distant countries and distant climes, to clear this off at once, and look after those who are much nearer and dearer to us. (Hear, hear.) I will not for a moment say that our neighbours on the other side of the Channel have not suffered greatly and do not require very great and very substantial assistance; but still for all that do not let us forget those—perhaps the children of brethren whom we have often met in this hall on festive occasions like this, or I may say in our provincial lodges. A very large proportion of the Masons of England are mixed up in mercantile pursuits, and we all know that mercantile pursuits are variable. Some of those men who were most prosperous at one time, you will frequently see very much the reverse at another; and therefore we must take care that their poor children shall not suffer for the misfortune of their parents. (Hear, hear.) I think that if the brethren and the ladies who are here to-night would go down to Wood Green, and see the domestic arrangements there, and the care that is taken to make the children of our unfortunate brethren comfortable and happy, they would try and help us out of debt. You will see, if you look over the balance-sheet which is set out in the book which has been distributed in the room, that almost all the items of expenditure are reduced as low as they can be, having due regard to the proper conducting of the school; and therefore I think that the words I read here, written by your admirable Secretary, very much express what your own feelings are—

"Gratitude for the past, confidence for the present, and undimmed hope for the future." There is a building already erected of large powers, and capable of affording increased accommodation, and all they want is funds; and when you look at the wealth of the Masons of England, I think I cannot be blamed for making this appeal to you. I therefore think, brethren, that in a case like this it is not a question of words—it is a question of facts; and I think if you do, as I said before, go down to Wood Green, you will see that I have not stated what is not exactly the case; and I also think it is one of those cases in which the less said about it the better arguments you will receive. I beg to conclude by proposing the toast, "Success to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys." (The toast was, of course, drank with great marks of approbation.)

Bro. Algernon Perkins, P.G.D., returned thanks.

Bro. Binckes then read the sums sent in by Stewards, making a total of £4,700. I was perfectly prepared (continued Bro. Binckes) for that. Many sanguine brethren might think it a failure, but I have known the time when a great deal less has been collected. Considering the distress that has prevailed abroad, and which places us in such an unfortunate position, I consider it a great success, as I can conscientiously announce £4,700, about equally divided. Our London list produced as nearly as possible £2,500, and our provincial list £2,200. Under the circumstances in which we are placed, I think we have a right to be tolerably thankful.

Bro. R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B., proposed "The Vice-Presidents, Trustees, and Auditors."

Bro. John Hervey, G.S., acknowledged the toast in suitable terms.

The Rev. C. J. Martyn, G.C.: By the favour of the chairman, the right of proposing the next toast falls to me, and I accept the duty which he has placed on me with feelings of great pleasure and pride, because if there is one thing which we all like in Masonry, it is that all-pervading spirit of charity which is one of the distinguishing marks of our Order. We have heard what a noble sum has been collected to-night, a sum certainly small in comparison with those that have preceded it, but still a noble sum—nearly a total of £5,000. The Benevolent Fund amounted to £3,500, and I trust that next May, when the Prince of Wales presides at the Girls' Festival, we shall have as large a list to support you on that occasion as we had at the Boys' School last year. And now I would say one word to you more. Probably a great many of you have not been intending to send in your names as Stewards of the Girls' School. The opportunity is now in your hands. Come forward and do it, as I do intend myself, and get as large a list as last year was got for the Boys' School. I beg to propose to you "Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution," coupling with it the name of Bro. Farnfield; and "The Royal Masonic Institution for Girls," coupling with it the name of Bro. Patten; but as Bro. Patten is away on account of ill-health, I shall ask Bro. Farnfield to reply.

Bro. Farnfield, P.A.G.S.: Right Worshipful Brother in the chair and Brethren, I regret the absence of Bro. Patten, because the festival of the Girls' School which takes place on the 8th of May is one of great moment to him, and he could do more justice to the toast than I can. I regret that from ill-health he is unable to be present this evening; however, it is his most anxious wish, as our Grand Chaplain has told you, to have a numerous Board of Stewards, an honour to the Craft, and satisfaction to the school. With reference to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institute, I take this opportunity of thanking the brethren and the Craft at large for the kindness with which they came forward at the last festival and provided an amount which will enable me at the next election to provide for all wants. I most sincerely thank you all.

Bro. Benjamin Head, P.G.D., proposed "The health of the Stewards," to every one of whom they were greatly indebted for the kind attention which had led to such good results.

Bro. James Mason, P.G.S.B., returned thanks.

Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Treasurer of the Board of Stewards, proposed "The Health of Ladies" in graceful terms.

The company then adjourned to the Temple, and terminated a most delightful evening with a concert (under the able direction of Bro. Donald King), in which Miss Leibhart, Miss Janet King, the Misses Owen, Madame Thaddens Wells; Bros. Thomas Young, W. Winn, and Conrad took part, the Misses King presiding at the pianoforte, and Mr. Ellis Roberts performing on the harp.

The greatest praise is due to the Stewards for their excellent arrangements, under which the evening was made one of the greatest successes of the season.

Bro. Thomas Spencer acted as toastmaster, and performed his duties with his accustomed skill and urbanity.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, the 28th February. In the unavoidable absence of Bro. Joseph Speed, W.M., Bro. Hill, P.M., presided, assisted by Bro. C. C. Taylor, S.W.; Green, J.W.; Themans, S.D.; Catmur, J.D.; Kennett, I.G.; Longstaff, Tyler; T. Anslow, P.M., Sec.; Wm. Carter, P.M. Treas. There were also present Bros. Peever, A. E. Harris, N. Gluckstein, and Gottheil, P.M.'s; and a numerous assembly of brethren. The proceedings of the evening, which comprised the three degrees, were ably conducted by the acting W.M. Bros. Bartlett, Bulter, and Abbott received the third degree, and Bros. P. Davis and Hutton were passed to the second; after which, Messrs. Morris, Glack, and W. Parker were admitted into the Order according to the rules of the Craft. The lodge was honoured with several visitors, amongst whom were Bros. J. R. Stebbing, P.M., P.Z., and P.G.D. England; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188, S.E. 188; &c. The banquet and usual toasts followed, during which the brethren were gratified by a most eloquent and interesting speech from Bro. Stebbing, as also with songs and recitations by Bros. H. M. Levy, S. Davis, M. Davis, P. Davis, L. Davis, Parks, and others. One of the most happy and agreeable evenings was brought to a close in peace and harmony.

Lodge of Industry, No. 186.—On Tuesday, the 28th ult., this lodge held its regular meeting at Freemasons' Hall. The lodge was opened by Bro. T. E. Tallent, W.M. There were also present Bros. C. A. Noehmer, S.W.; J. Seex, J.W.; W. Mann, P.M., Sec. D. D. Beck, S.D.; J. E. Wyllie, J.D.; T. Price and T. S. Mortlock, P.M.'s; A. Black, J. Thiers, J. F. Duggett, E. J. Dyne, T. F. Toovey, S. Earl, J. Hall, and others. Bro. F. Walters, W.M. 1309, visitor. Bro. T. Price, P.M., raised Bro. F. Duggett; and the W.M., in an able manner passed Bro. T. F. Toovey and initiated Mr. Alexander Mole.

St. Paul's Lodge, No. 194.—At the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Tuesday, the 21st ult., the usual meeting of this lodge was held. Bro. E. S. Eves, W.M., opened the lodge, and there were present: Bros. W. Aldridge, S.W.; Stanley Fowler, J.W.; R. M. Veal, P.M. and Treas.; R. Fowler, P.M. and Hon. Sec.; S. J. Weston, S.D.; W. Temple, P.G.; W. Harper, P.M., W.S.; C. Randall, P.M.; F. Renshaw, P.M.; C. Wilson, P.M.; E. H. Sparks, Wells, R. G. Clutton, D. Beauchamp, W. J. Ford, C. S. Hooper, II. H. Woodbridge, A. Rees, J. N. Watts, W. Nash, W. Clapton, and others. Amongst the visitors were Bros. J. J. Watson, 30, and H. Parker, 435. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The work done was initiating Messrs. Rees and Watts into Freemasonry, the Master rendering the ceremony in his usual superior well-known manner. After the formal business was disposed of the lodge was closed. The usual excellent banquet followed, and the customary toasts were given and received.

Fitzroy Lodge, No. 569.—The regular meeting of this distinguished lodge was held at the Head-quarters of the Honourable Artillery Company on Friday, the 24th ult. Bro. Peter Yeames Gowland, W.M., opened the lodge, supported by the officers and members. There were also a large number of visitors present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and ballots were unanimous in favour of Messrs. H. Hamilton and H. Munday being accepted as initiates, and Bro. C. Rook, P.M. 859, P.P.G.S.B. Herts, as a joining member. The work gone through was raising Bro. Webster to the third degree and initiating Messrs. E. Hazel and H. Munday. The work was rendered by the W.M. in a correct and impressive manner. The W.M. announced his intention (subject to certain arrangements being made) of being the Steward to represent this lodge at the forthcoming festival of the Girls' School. The lodge was closed, and a good supper was then served.

Whittington Lodge, No. 862.—A meeting of this lodge was held at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Monday, the 20th ult., and amongst those present we observed Bros. S. S. Davis, W.M.; J. Salisbury, S.W.; W. J. H. Jones, J.W.; W. F. N. Quilty, W. Hurlstone, J. Weaver, and D. J. Davis, P.M.'s; J. Brett, P.M., G. Pursuivant; R. Wentworth Little, P.M. Sec.; A. Frickenhaus, S.D.; W. F. Smith, P.M., J.D.; B. Seeley, I.G.; T. Kingston, Steward; C. Walker, E. Keru, Q. Dix, J. D. Taylor, C. Bergmann, W. H. Kaye, L. Naidoo, and C. Sissons. The visitors comprised Bros. Brackstone Baker, P.G.D., and Grand Representative of several American Grand Lodges at the Grand Lodge of England; Rev. D. Shaboe, P.M. 165, P.G. Chap. Middlesex; G. Cattel, P.M. 442, P.P.G.D. Hunts.; F. Walters, W.M. 1309, P.M. 73; F. Kent, S.D. 177. The lodge having been duly opened, and the minutes confirmed, Mr. William Chorgee was duly initiated, after which Bros. P. Bergheim, G. C. Pritchard, and C. Steiner were passed to the second degree, and the lodge was closed. The usual agreeable evening was spent at the festive board, and the proceedings were enlivened with songs and music of an extremely pleasing character. This lodge is one of the happiest and most united lodges in the Craft, and we trust it will ever continue to exemplify the harmony which should prevail amongst Freemasons.

Royal Oak Lodge, No. 871.—This lodge held its eleventh installation meeting on Wednesday, the 22nd ult., at the White Swan Tavern, Deptford. The W.M., Bro. James Truelove, being unavoidably absent, Bro. W. Andrews, P.M. and W.M.-elect, opened the lodge. There were present during the evening Bros. J. Hawker, P.M., as S.W.; T. Kilner, J.W.; H. A. Collington, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; J. W. Reed, S.D.; W. Myatt, J.D.; G. Andrews, I.G.; M. J. Simmons, C. Wood, J. J. Perks, W. Dalziel, J. Whiffen, G. Harvey, S. O. Lewin, J. H. Wilson, R. Deal, F. G. Skinner, F. R. Hood, J. G. Vohmann, R. G. J. Harris, and R. Harman. The visitors were Bros. G. Bolton, N. Wingfield, C. G. Dilley, W. Shaw, W. Ward, J. Roper, H. Child, J. J. West, E. J. B. Bumstead, J. Gallon, J. A. Smith, J. A. Stockwell, M. Landragin, J. Cawer, R. A. Taylor, T. Hobson, and J. Griffin. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. The report of the Audit Committee was read, and showed a large balance in the hands of the Treasurer. Ballots were taken for Messrs. F. G. Skinner, F. R. Hood, and J. G. Vohmann, and declared unanimous in favour of their admission; they were introduced separately, and in a most impressive and correct manner initiated into Freemasonry. By special request of the P.M.'s Bro. H. A. Collington took the chair, and Bro. F. Walters presented Bro. W. Andrews for the benefit of installation, and that brother was regularly installed as W.M. for the ensuing year. The officers he appointed were: Bros. T. Kilner, S.W.; J. W. Reed, J.W.; H. A. Collington, P.M., Treas. (re-invested); F. Walters, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); W. Myatt, S.D.; G. Andrews, J.D.; S. O. Lewin, I.G.; J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler. The customary addresses were admirably delivered. This ceremony was never better rendered, and at its conclusion a hearty burst of applause proved how well it was appreciated. A vote of thanks to Bro. Collington for the able and correct manner he had worked the ceremony was carried unanimously, and Bro. Collington expressed his thanks. In consequence of the great amount of business done at this meeting, and the lateness of the hour, the raising of Bro. J. H. Wilson and the subject of the presentation of the Master's jewel, were deferred until the next meeting. The lodge was closed, and the usual banquet followed.

Burgoyne Lodge, No. 902.—A numerous meeting of the members of this lodge took place at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Monday, the 27th ult. Present: Bros. Vevers, W.M.; H. Smith, S.W.; Simmons, J.W.; Poynter, P.M., Treas.; Rogers, S.D.; Field, J.D.; Allen, I.G.; Hervey, R. Bridges, and Wright, P.M.'s; Wellin, Smith, Windybank, Legg, Sherman, Goshawk, &c. Visitors: Bros. Thomas, P.M. 501, Francis, P.M. 851; J. Stevens, 1216; Nunn, P.M. 72; Tagart, P.M. 548; Winter, 72; Dickenson, 190; Patrick Tinwell, 548, &c. After the opening of the lodge, and the minutes being confirmed, Bro. Thomas took the chair. Bro. H. Smith, W.M.-elect was then presented for installation, and was duly placed in the chair of K.S. in ancient form. This interesting ceremony was performed by Bro. Thomas in his usual quiet impressive manner, the W.M., Bro. Smith, investing as his officers Bros. Simmons, S.W.; Rogers, J.W.; Field, S.D.; Allen, J.D.; Poynter, P.M., Treas. Bro. Smith then presented the lodge with a life-size portrait of the late S. Barton Wilson, P.G.D.; and with a few eloquent remarks; spoke of the respect and veneration the Burgoyne Lodge must ever feel towards that excellent Mason who had consecrated the lodge. The portrait was then uncovered, and gave great pleasure to the brethren, it being an excellent likeness, in a very handsome frame. On a shield is an elegant inscription, both in Latin and in English, from the pen of the worthy Treasurer, Bro. Poynter. Bro. Poynter moved a vote of thanks to the W.M. for such a valuable present, and bore testimony of the worthiness of the late Bro. S. Barton Wilson, and his claim of the gratitude of the Burgoyne Lodge. The vote was carried with applause, as also a vote of thanks to Bro. Thomas for his kindness in performing the ceremony of the evening. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, the worthy host seeming to have surpassed himself on this occasion, so excellent and choice were the viands. The usual Masonic toasts having been given and duly honoured, the W.M. gave the "Visitors," and spoke of the great pleasure he had in seeing so many present that evening; the Burgoyne always endeavouring to make them happy.—Bro. J. Stevens, on behalf of the visitors, returned thanks, speaking of the pleasure he always had in attending the meetings of the lodge. That evening was an especial pleasure, inasmuch as he had witnessed the fact of one of his oldest Masonic Friends being placed in the chair of the lodge—a position he had worked for and was worthy to fill, and would fill with honour—(cheers)—also he (Bro. Stevens) was delighted at being present when so valuable and interesting a presentation was made as their W.M. had given that evening. Portraits of those who they had honoured and valued were always an object of interest and reverence. If they could supplement such gift at all, it would be by (and he merely threw this out as a suggestion) having on the opposite side the portrait of their worth Treasurer and P.M., Bro. Poynter. (Applause.) Their cheers told him such a gift would be equally valued. He thanked them on behalf of himself and visitors for the toast.—Bro. Vevers then proposed "The Health of the W.M."—Bro. Smith returned thanks in eloquent terms, assuring the brethren that he would do his duty to the best of his ability, and make it his pleasure to study their happiness and comfort.—Bro. Vevers then proposed "Bro. Francis, P.M.," the artist who had painted the picture the W.M. had so kindly presented them with.—Bro. Francis, in returning thanks, gave an account of the original intention with regard to the picture; how that intention was diverted, and its ultimately coming into the possession of Bro. Smith who, with excellent taste, had thought it a suitable gift to the Burgoyne Lodge. Bro. S. Barton Wilson was a man who would be always remembered with respect by Freemasons, not only for his labour to improve their ritual, but for the active and untiring manner in which he carried out the principles of Freemasonry; for, after all, it was not the correct rendering of the ritual according to the dicta of this or that preceptor, but following the grand principles of brotherly love, relief, and truth, which were the brightest ornaments of Freemasonry and its truest landmarks. He (Bro. Francis) was proud that his picture had found a home in a lodge. Bro. S. Barten Wilson had consecrated. He thanked Bro. Poynter for the chaste and elegant inscription in the language of old Rome he had appended to it, and hoped it would be transmitted as a heirloom in the Burgoyne Lodge.—The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Installing Master, Bro. Thomas."—Bro. Thomas, in returning thanks, said he had that evening the pleasure to place one of his pupils in the chair of K.S. He thanked the P.M.'s for their kindness in allowing him that pleasure, as he was sure many of them were quite capable of performing the ceremony.—The toast of the "Masonic Charities" was then given, coupled with the name of Bro. Poynter.—Bro. Poynter returned thanks.—The toast of the "Officers" was duly responded to, and the Tyler's toast wound up a very agreeable evening, and enlivened by the excellent singing of Bro. Rogers and others. The trial from Pickwick was given with admirable gusto by Bro. Smith.

St. John of Wapping Lodge, No. 1306.—The election meeting of this young and most flourishing lodge was held on Wednesday, the 8th inst., at the Gun Hotel, High-street, Wapping. Bro. W. Mann, W.M., presided. There were present: Bros. Bartlett, S.W.; D. D. Beck, J.W.; Rev. R. Gordon, Chap.; H. Carpenter, P.M., Sec.; F. W. Dawson, S.D.; J. Pearson, T. Willets, J. Mann, E. Frost, W. Beck, H. Fountain, A. W. Coleman, &c. The visitors were Bros. T. Murtlock, P.M. 186, and F. Walters, W.M. 1309. The work done was passing Bro. G. Sweetenham and initiating Mr. R. Jeary. As usual with the W.M., he did his work in an admirable manner. The elections were unanimous in favour of Bro. Bartlett as W.M.; Bro. W. Mann, Treas.; and Bro. Longstaff, Tyler. It was carried unanimously—"That a five-guinea Past Master's jewel be presented to Bro. W. Mann for his great services to the lodge." The same will be accompanied by another testimonial subscribed for by the members of the lodge. The lodge was then closed, and no banquet was held on the occasion.

PROVINCIAL.

HULL.—Humber Lodge, No. 57.—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Tuesday, 21st February, Bro. William Tesseyman, W.M., in the chair. After two candidates had been balloted for, accepted, and initiated, a report was read by the Secretary, showing that the annual charity ball in connection with this lodge had in every respect been a complete success, and that the net balance arising therefrom amounted to £25 18s. 10d. The Committee of Management, after gratefully referring to the assistance and patronage received from their non-Masonic friends, recommended that in acknowledgment thereof that a donation of £1 1s. be given to each of the following local charities, viz., the General Sailors' Orphan Home, the Port of Hull Sailors' Orphan Home, and the Hull Branch of the Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Benevolent Society. It was recommended that, in order to endow the two Deacons' chairs (the Master's and Senior and Junior Wardens' chairs having already been endowed), the sum of ten guineas be presented to the Masonic School for Boys, the sum of £2 2s. be paid to the Freemasons' Life Boat, and the balance (£10 3s. 10d.) to be paid to the credit of a special reserve fund for Masonic charities. At the same lodge, Bro. Coatesworth, P.M., in an eloquent speech, on behalf of the officers and members, presented to the I.P.M., Bro. William Needler, an elegant and chaste gold Past Master's jewel, with suitable inscription engraved thereon, as a mark of their esteem of him as a Mason, and also of their appreciation of the great exertions he had used for the general good of the lodge during his year of office. After Bro. Needler had, in a very neat and feeling speech, thanked the brethren for their kind and beautiful gift, the lodge was closed in due form. Subsequently the brethren, numbering upwards of fifty, sat down to refreshment, and for a limited period enjoyed themselves in the most fraternal manner.

ROCHDALE.—Lodge of Harmony, No. 298.—The ordinary monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Ann-street. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Robert Howard, assisted by his officers and brethren, when the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, and a ballot was taken for Mr. Thomas Lord, which proving unanimous in his favour, that gentleman was duly initiated by Bro. Prince, P.G.S.D. The address was delivered by Bro. Richard Hankinson, P.M. of Newall Lodge, No. 1134; and the working tools were given by the W.M. of 298; and the charge, &c., by Bro. Fothergill, W.M. of 1129—the whole ceremony being very ably performed. Bro. Noble was passed to the degree of a F.C. by Bro. Holroyd, P.M. A sum of £10 10s. was voted to the Boys' School, and the labours of the evening being ended, the W.M., in closing the lodge, said he had great pleasure in receiving the hearty congratulations of Lodges 226, 363, 1055, 1129, 1134, 1345, and also of the P.G. Lodges of East Lancashire and West Yorkshire.

OXFORD.—Apollo University Lodge, No. 357.—The annual festival of this very distinguished lodge was held on Tuesday, February 21st, in consequence of the regular day of meeting being Ash Wednesday. Present: Bros. J. Heathcote Wyndham, M.A., Fellow of Merton College, the retiring W.M.; the Rev. Edmund Jermyn, M.A., Christ Church, W.M.-elect; the Rev. W. F. Short, M.A., Fellow of New College, P.M., G. Chap.; Cameron Churchill, Worcester College, S.W.; Reginald Bird, Fellow of Magdalen, J.W.; W. Gardiner, Exeter, and Fred. P. Marrell, M.A., St. John's, Secs.; Lord Burleigh, Oriel, S.D.; Jules Buc, M.A., Magdalen, and Vital de Tivoli, M.C.'s; W. W. Harrison, M.A., Bensmore, P.M., &c.; John Blandy Jenkins, P.M.; Richard J. Spiers, P.G.S.B., D.P.G.M. Oxon; H. W. Hemsworth, W.M. 190; and many other distinguished members of the Craft. There was no business except the installation, which ceremony was performed in a masterly style by that most experienced brother, Richard J. Spiers, who for so many years has occupied the proud position of Deputy Grand Master to this province, to the universal satisfaction of every member of the Craft. The Rev. Edmund Jermyn, of Christ Church, was duly installed, and the officers nominated by him were welcomed with unanimous applause. The brethren (about seventy in number), after the ceremony, adjourned to a splendid banquet provided at the Clarendon Hotel. The usual toasts were given, and followed by most appropriate glees, &c.—an excellent choir attending the banquet.—"The Health of the Visitors" was responded to by Bro. H. W. Hemsworth, W.M. 190 (formerly of Brasenose College), who, alluding to the glee appropriated to this toast—viz., "No Time can Change my Love for Thee" (Schneider)—expressed the feeling which had come over him on hearing so prophetic an allusion to himself. He deeply regretted that he had not joined the Apollo Lodge when he was a resident at the University; but Masonry at that time was little known there. In fact, although the first meeting of this lodge had been held in his own college, he had never heard of its existence until after he had left residence. He congratulated the W.M. on his attaining the distinguished position, which he occupied in succession to so many great Masons; and assured him that he himself would prefer being W.M. of the Apollo Lodge to holding the highest office in Grand Lodge.—The Rev. Past Master Short, Grand Chaplain, made some very kind and feeling remarks on the loss the lodge had sustained by the decease of Bro. Lamert, P.M., and also upon the pleasure which he felt in seeing so many provincial and city lodges represented, which for some years had not been the case.

ROTHERHAM.—Phoenix Lodge, No. 904.—The annual meeting of the above lodge was held in the lodge-room at the Ship Hotel, on Thursday, the 24th ult. The lodge was opened at 5.30 p.m. by the W.M., Bro. C. H. Perrot, assisted by his officers as follows: Bros. Saville, S.W.; Hutchinson, J.W.; Foote, Sec.; Garnett, S.D. (pro tem.); Fawcett, J.D.; and Shillito, I.G. There was a good attendance of brethren, amongst whom we noticed: Bros. Oxley, P.M. and Treas.; Needham, P.M.; W. Smith, &c. The visitors were: Bros. Pfeilschmidt, W.M. 1239; H. J. Garnett, P.M. 139 and 1239; H. Matthews, P.M. 1239; and Harvey, Org. 1239. The minutes having been read and confirmed, the brethren proceeded to the election of Treasurer; also a Charity Steward to represent the lodge in the Charity Committee of the Province of West Yorkshire; and several other matters of formal business. Bro. Oxley, P.M. and P.P.G.R., was unanimously re-elected to the offices of Treasurer and Charity Steward. Bro. Walter Smith proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Oxley for his past services as Treasurer, and more especially for his zealous labours in the sacred cause of charity, which was passed with acclamation. The W.M. then requested Bro. Oxley, P.M., to take the chair, to whom he presented Bro. Dr. Saville, S.W. and W.M.-elect, for the purpose of being installed in the chair of K.S. The beautiful ceremony was worked in such a correct, able, and impressive manner as to elicit the warmest approval from the whole of the visitors and brethren. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. Perrott, I.P.M.; Hutchinson, S.W.; Dr. Foote, J.W.; Oxley, Treas.; Walter Smith, Sec.; Fawcett, S.D.; Shillito, J.D.; Dawson, I.G.; Slinn and Redgrave, Stewards; and Chester, Tyler. All business having been disposed of, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to a most sumptuous repast, presided over by the W.M., Bro. Dr. Saville. After the cloth had been cleared, and all duly charged in the west and south, the W.M. proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were most heartily received.—Bro. Oxley, P.M., then gave the toast of the evening, "The W.M. of the Phoenix Lodge, Bro. Saville," saying it had been his good fortune to have the privilege of installing many brethren as Masters of that lodge, but he had never experienced such pleasure as on that occasion—having installed one whom he had long known as a friend, one who, he was sure, would sustain the dignity of the high office he was now placed in, and one who would discharge the various duties that office imposed upon him with credit to himself and satisfaction to the lodge. (The toast was most heartily received, and with the hon.urs.)—The W.M. replied in a very effective and exhaustive speech, which was loudly applauded. The following toasts were then given: "The I.P.M. of the Phoenix Lodge, Bro. Perrott," "The Installing Officer, Bro. Oxley," "The Visiting Brethren," "The P.M.'s of the Phoenix Lodge," "The Officers of the Phoenix Lodge," and "The Masonic Charities." After spending a most enjoyable evening in a truly fraternal and Masonic manner, the brethren separated in peace and harmony.

KIRKBY LONSDALE.—Underley Lodge, No. 1074.—This flourishing lodge held its regular meeting on the last Friday in February. More than the usual interest was excited on the occasion, in consequence of its being the first meeting held in the new Masonic Rooms, situate in the Market-place, which had been very tastefully decorated, and are well adapted for Masonic purposes. Bro. William James, W.M. and Prov. G.S., occupied the chair of K.S., supported by Bros. Dodd, I.P.M., P.G.S.B., H. 995, &c.; Rev. Canon Ware, P.P.G.C., S.W.; Thomas Wearing, J.W.; Dr. Page, S.D.; W. Smith, Sec.; H. Brayshaw, I.G.; H. Ranthmell, P.G.D.C.; &c. After balloting for Bro. C. Ray as a joining member, which was unanimously favourable, Bro. Dodd assumed the chair, and Bro. J. W. Hindson being a candidate for the second degree, he was passed thereto, the W.M. presenting the working tools. Bro. Dodd afterwards gave the explanation on the tracing board of that degree. Bro. Canon Ware generously stated it to be his intention to transfer the eight life votes in the Royal Albert Idiot Asylum at present standing in his name, and purchased with the proceeds of the collection in the Parish Church on the occasion of the installation of the Earl of Bective (then Lord Kenlis), to the W.M. of the Underley Lodge for the time being. Two joining members were proposed, and after notice of motion to change the day of meeting from the last Friday to the first Thursday had been given, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom, and the brethren and visitors adjourned to partake of some slight refreshment by way of a housewarming.

SCARBOROUGH.—Danison Lodge, No. 1248.—This lodge held its regular meeting in the lodge-rooms, Grand Hotel, on Thursday, the 9th of February. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. S. H. Armitage, M.D., assisted by his officers. After the confirmation of the ministers, one brother was elected as a joining member, when Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M., P.P.G.J.W., took the reins of Installing Master, and installed Bro. W. F. Rooke, P.M., P.P.G.J.W. (the Mayor of Scarborough) as the W.M. for the ensuing year, who appointed the following as his officers:—Bros. J. Donner, S.W.; J. Green, J.W.; J. Kitchen, Treas.; A. Fricour, Sec.; N. H. Delamare, S.D.; G. Taylor, J.D.; R. Slimon, Org.; F. Foster, I.G.; J. Verity, Tyler. The lodge was now closed in due form, and the brethren, about 30 in number, partook of the annual banquet. The tables were most sumptuously supplied with every delicacy; the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were drunk, and a very agreeable evening spent.

WARRINGTON.—Gilbert Greenall Lodge, No. 1250.—The regular monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, on the 13th ult. The W.M. presided, and was supported by the following brethren, viz.: W. Richardson, W.M. 148; John Bowes, P.M., P.Z., &c.; D. W. Finney, P.M., M.E.Z.-elect, &c.; W. S. Hawkins, W. Pollett, E. Auckland, R. Brierley, E. Roberts, T. Thistlethwaite, John Wood, T. Domville, J. Parry, H. Hoult, S. J. Butcher, J. Cassidy, P. Worthington, J. Barlow, W. Reid, C. Langridge, and J. Hannah. The lodge was opened by the W.M. and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Several gentlemen, were accepted by the lodge in the usual way, and, being in attendance, were initiated by the W.M., assisted by Bros. Bows and Richardson; Bro. Finney delivered the ancient charge. The ceremonies concluded, the W.M. made the usual appeal from the chair. Bro. Brierley rose and proposed, "That the regular meetings of the lodge be held on the second Tuesday in each month, instead of the second Monday as hitherto." This proposition having been seconded, was unanimously carried. One reason for the change is that Tuesday evening is found more convenient for a majority of the brethren to attend to Masonic duties than Monday, and, secondly, the meetings of the R. A. Chapter are fixed for Monday. The Hon. Sec. was instructed to order refreshments to be served after labour on the next regular meeting. Nothing further being proposed for the good of Masonry in general, of the G.G.L. in particular, it was duly closed, and the brethren separated in perfect harmony.

BRIGHOUSE, YORKSHIRE.—Brighouse Lodge, No. 1301.—The second monthly meeting for 1871, took place on February 15th, at the Masonic Rooms. The lodge was opened by the W.M., and the minutes of the last meeting were confirmed. Bros. Sunderland and Spice were passed to the second degree. A candidate was proposed for initiation, and after some other business had been transacted, the W.M. suggested that an instruction night should be held every Monday evening at 7.30; this was seconded by Bro. J. Sugden, and carried unanimously. The lodge was then closed in peace and harmony.

ROYAL ARCH.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude, No. 279.—A convocation of this chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 23rd ult., when there were present: Companions L. A. Clarke, M.E.Z.; George H. Hodges, H.; George Toller, jun., J.; William Kelly (Prov. G. Supt.), P.Z. and Treas.; C. Stretton, E.; Rev. Charles, J. E. Smith, N.; S. S. Partridge, P.S.; W. Sculthorpe, A.S.; E. J. Crow, Org., and others. Visitor: Comp. Needham (Rugby). There were four candidates due for exaltation, one of whom only, Bro. Alfred Layton, W.M., No. 181, London, presented himself, who was duly exalted, after which the historical and symbolical lectures were delivered by Comp. Toller, J., and the mystical by the P.G. Supt. The following were elected as the officers for the ensuing year, viz.: George H. Hodges, M.E.Z.; Toller, H.; Rev. Charles, J. E. Smith (Rugby School), J.; Stretton, E.; Partridge, N.; Crow, P.S.; Kelly, Treas.; L. A. Clarke, P.Z., and Partridge, Stewards; and Bembridge, Janitor. A favourable report was made on the Treasurer's accounts, and a vote of thanks passed to Comp. Kelly, P.G. Supt., for his services in that office for the past ten years. Seven candidates were proposed, viz.: the Right Hon. Earl of Ferrers, Sir Henry St. John Halford, Bart., and the W.M. and four P.M.'s of the Lodge of Rectitude, Rugby, after which the chapter was closed, and the Companions adjourned to refreshment.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Northumberland Lodge, No. 118.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was held at Freemasons' Tavern, W.C., on Monday, February 20th, by dispensation from the M.W.G.M.M., it being other than the usual place of meeting, which is at the Masons' Hall, Mason's-avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C., on the two regular meetings on the fourth Thursday in March and September, and at Hampton Court in the new Mark Province, under Bro. Col. F. Burdett, P.G.M.M.M., on the two other regular quarterly meetings on the fourth Thursday in June and September. Present: Bros. Morton Edwards, W.M.; A. D. Loewenstark, P.G., T.G., P.M. and Treas.; Meyer A. Loewenstark, P.G.S., P.M. and Sec.; F. W. Koch, T.O. Visitors: M. Emanuel, M.O. 86; Capt. Bertrand Payne, St. Mark's No. 1; Capt. Nickelson, Joppa; H. W. Binckes, Kent. The following brethren were then balloted for: James Brett, P.G.P., P.M., P.Z.; John Lee, Grand Master's Lodge, No. 1; John Coles Fourdrinier, P.G.S., P.P.G.S.W., Shropshire, P.Z. P.M. Antiquity, No. 2; J. E. Hewick, 208; and F. Craven. Bros. Fourdrinier and Lee being in attendance were admitted and duly advanced to the honourable degree of a M.M.M. Bros. H. W. Binckes, Kent; Major H. J. Finney, and C. Gosden, were balloted for as joining members. Bro. H. W. Binckes was appointed Registrar of Marks, and Bro. J. Lee, Organist. This young lodge, only founded and opened for the first time on the 22nd of September in last year, has made rapid progress, having now about twenty members.

PROVINCIAL.

LEICESTER.—Fowke Lodge, No. 19.—The brethren of this lodge assembled at the Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 16th ult. Present: Bros. Duff, W.M. (in the chair); Kelly, P.M. and P.G.M.M.; Johnson, S.W.; W. B. Smith, as J.W.; Partridge, M.O.; Toller, as S.W.; Deane, J.O.; Stretton, Treas.; Richardson, Sec., and various other brethren. The first business was to read and put for confirmation the minutes of the last regular lodge and of several lodges of emergency in connexion with the reception on the 27th October last of the Grand Mark Lodge of England, together with an entry in the minute book by the M.W.G.M. Master, expressive of his entire satisfaction with the working of the Lodge of Instruction by the Prov. G. Master and his officers, and of the arrangements for the reception of Grand Lodge. This being the time for the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, preparatory to a ballot taking place, Bro. W. B. Smith, P.S.W., expressed his desire not to be elected, and in consequence, Bro. Charles Johnson, the present S.W., was unanimously elected. Two candidates were due for advancement, but not being in attendance, the lodge was closed and adjourned to the fourth Thursday in March.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

THE RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

METROPOLITAN.

Roman Eagle Conclave, No. 6.—The third anniversary assembly of this Conclave took place on Saturday, the 25th ult., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, when the following Sir Knights were present:—W. R. Woodman, M.D., G.A. Rec., M.P.S.; C. H. Rogers Harrison, V.E.; Rev. W. B. Church, M.A., S.G.; J. Read, J.G.; H. Allman, H.P.; W. P. N. Quilly, K.G.C., P. Sov., Treas.; A. A. Pendlebury, K.G.C., Recorder; H. C. Levander, M.A., P. Sov. G.A., Treasurer; R. Wentworth Little, G.R.; W. Hurlstone, S.B.; J. Weaver, P. Sov., Org.; W. C. Lucey, M.D., Herald; A. C. Morton, A. Smith, D. R. Adams, J. R. Foulger, W. Carpenter, A. Perrot, J. J. Cancy. The Conclave was opened in due form, and the minutes were read and confirmed. Ballots were then taken for several candidates, and Bros. W. Worrell, S.W. 1339, and A. Montague Haynes, Lodge 130, P.G.S., Hants., were installed as Knights of the Order. Bro. T. L. Bulmer, M.D., of Lodge 73, being also in attendance, was obligated by Sir Kt. Little, in the exercise of his powers as an Intendant General of the Order. Sir Kt. Harrison was then enthroned as M.P.S., and the Rev. W. B. Church was inducted into the chair of E. The officers were then promoted a step down to H.P., the new H.P. being Sir Kt. Hurlstone; Dr. W. C. Lucey, Prefect; A. Perrot, S.B.; C. E. Thompson, II.; J. R. Foulger and A. C. Morton, Stewards. The sum of five guineas was ordered to be placed on the list of subscriptions to the "Wentworth Little" Testimonial, and after a discussion relative to increasing the installation fee and annual subscription, both of which propositions were eventually carried nem. con., the conclave was closed. The Knights Companions then sat down to an excellent banquet, under the presidency of the new M.P.S. The various toasts were given and received with the cordiality which has ever characterised the members of the "Roman Eagle," and in returning thanks for Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., Grand Viceroys, the G. Council, and G. Senate, Sir Kt. Little, G.R., caused considerable merriment by facetiously alluding to the manner in which he had been portrayed of late in certain publications. He said it reminded him of the pictures frequently seen outside old curiosity shops—one-half of the picture which had undergone the friendly process of renovation being remarkably handsome and attractive, while the other half presented a very dark and forbidding aspect. He could not lay the flattering unction to his soul that he deserved a title of the encomiums lavished upon him by his friends, but at the same time he might say the opposite party had so overdrawn the picture, that its fidelity as a likeness was completely sacrificed. He thanked the Knights Companions for the good opinions and good wishes towards him expressed on their behalf by the M.P.S., and trusted that in the future he should never forfeit the support and confidence so largely extended to him by his brother Masons at the present and in the past. (Cheers.)—The health of the newly-installed Knight was then proposed and heartily received, as was also the toast of the M.P.S. One of the most pleasant incidents of the evening was the presentation of a Past Sovereign's jewel to Dr. Woodman, the "Third Sovereign" of the conclave, by Dr. Harrison, the M.P.S., in a very neat and appropriate speech. The worthy Past Sovereign expressed his acknowledgments very eloquently, and concluded by wishing peace and prosperity to the "Roman Eagle" and its members. Several other toasts were proposed, and the proceedings were agreeably diversified by songs and music—the talented Organist, Sir Kt. Weaver, being, as usual, "at his post" at the pianoforte. After the Sentinel's toast the Knights Companions separated.

INAUGURATION OF THE ST. GEORGE'S CONCLAVE AT BOLTON.

The Inaugural Meeting of this Conclave was held on the 18th ult., at the Church Institute, Bolton, under the presidency of Ill. Sir Kt. Dr. Moore, 18°, I.G. North Lancashire, assisted by Ill. Sir Kt. G. Fitz Gerald Matier, 30°, P.M., P.S.; Sir Kt. James Moore.

The dispensation having been read, the conclave was opened in due form. Bros. G. P. Brockbank, 18°, M.P. S.-designate; Thomas Entwisle, 18°, V.E.-designate; Capt. Hunter, 30°, and twelve other brethren, were then severally admitted to the Order, and received the honour of Masonic Knighthood from the Ill. Presiding Officer. The Sir Knights were then arranged in order, and Sir Kt. Moore proceeded to consecrate the new Conclave. The corn was borne by Sir Kt. Brockbank; the wine by Sir Kt. Entwisle; and the oil by Sir Kt. Hunter; the censer was carried by Sir Kt. Matier, who ably discharged the duties of High Prelate. At the conclusion of this beautiful ceremony, which was performed by Sir Kt. Moore with that solemnity and accuracy so well known to the brethren, a College of Viceroys was opened, and five brethren were consecrated to the office of V.E.

A Senate of Sovereigns was opened, and Sir Kt. Brockbank was enthroned as M.P.S., Sir Kt. Hunter receiving the dignity of P.S. The Sir Knights having been admitted, did homage to their newly-installed G. Sovereign. It was then proposed by Ill. Sir Kt. Matier, and seconded by Sir Kt. Hunter, that a vote of thanks should be given to Ill. Sir Kt. Moore, and that he should be elected an Honorary Member of the Conclave, as a slight token of the appreciation of the brethren for his kindness. This was passed unanimously, and Sir Kt. Moore returned thanks in a few appropriate remarks.

Proposed by Sir Kt. Matier, seconded by Sir Kt. Entwisle, that Sir Kt. Robert Wentworth Little, Grand Recorder of the Order, should be an Honorary Member of the Conclave. This was also carried nem. con.

The routine business being finished, the Conclave was closed with hearty good wishes from all.

The Sir Knights then proceeded to banquet, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts followed in due course, and the brethren separated at an early hour, highly pleased with their reception into this Masonic Order of Chivalry.

INSTRUCTION.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—A meeting of brethren interested in the revival of this old Lodge of Instruction was held on Monday week at Bro. Wicken's, Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's-gate, Clerkenwell, for the purpose of re-establishing its weekly meetings. The members of several lodges were present. Bro. Follett, P.M., No. 45, presided as W.M.; Bro. Tunstall, P.M., No. 45, as S.W.; Bro. J. White, No. 228, as J.W.; and Bro. James Terry, P.M., No. 228, acted as Secretary. Bros. Pinkstone, Wickens, Moss, and Blake were also present. The beautiful antique silver jewels of the lodge were used on the occasion, and it was explained that the lodge having been in abeyance for some time, it was now considered advisable to revive it at this house in connexion with the United Strength and the Urban, the Strong Man, United Strength, and Urban Parent Lodges all meeting here. A resolution was passed that it should be revived, and Bro. Terry consented to act as Secretary and Preceptor; it was also resolved to meet every Monday evening, at eight o'clock, and to close at ten. The first meeting was held on Monday last, when the prospects of its success of the lodge were very good.

WE have been informed that five members selected by the Royal Ark Mariners degree, and five members selected by the Grand Mark Master, have held a meeting, and settled the basis of conditions for the amalgamation of the former degree with that of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters.

A MEETING of the Supreme Council of the Ancient Rites of the Temple was held at Bath, on Monday, the 6th inst., when various chapters were represented, and many important matters considered and appointments made, amongst others, Bro. John Yarker, P.M.W.S., and P.R.G.C., was appointed Prov. Grand Superintendent for Lancashire, which that brother agreed to accept, pending other and more satisfactory arrangements for the Province of Lancashire.

"I HAD been suffering several days from diarrhoea, attended with intense pain, when a fellow-traveller recommended to me so strongly your Vegetable Pain Killer for it, that I tried it, and got instant relief; and I can now recommend it as strongly to any so afflicted.—HY. J. NOONE (Clement & Co.), Burton-on-Trent, Nov., 1868.—To Perry Davis & Son, 17, Southampton-row, W.C."

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13 1/2 d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina:—"I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—This wonderful Ointment acts like magic in the dispersion of all sores and eruptions of the skin. When rubbed on the surface it penetrates, and, purifying each tissue in its passage, exerts the most wholesome influence over the external organs. It is an invaluable application for ulcers, sores, burns, and scalds, and in the various cutaneous eruptions incidental to childhood. Holloway's ointment always effects a thorough cure. Rubbed on the parts affected, it reduces tumours, glandular swellings, and similar enlargements, and is the best remedy for diphtheria. In bad legs, old wounds, scrofula, scrofulous eruptions, Holloway's cooling and healing Ointment will readily bring about a cure without irritating the nerves, weakening the system, or occasioning danger.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. *Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

The concluding remarks of Bro. Willis are not only sound, but beautifully expressed, and we give our readers the benefit of his able peroration:—

"Brethren of 'St. Andrew's,' let us be true to our own responsibilities as present workmen in the great Temple of Freemasonry; remember that by good work only can it be handed down to the ages to come. We are, each generation of Masons are, equally important links in the time-hallowed ancestral chain. May it with us be kept ever bright; may we remember also that we are the successors of men whose love for the rights of man, whose sturdy patriotism led them to do yeoman's service for a nation's independence. We, too, are the successors of Masons whose love for Ancient Free and Accepted Masonry drove to seek in a distant land a clear title empowering them to work. We also are the successors of brethren whose convictions of right, whose skill 'in the Craft,' whose patient endurance to the end, helped to give the Masonic Fraternity of the commonwealth an honourable affiliation. The life-long pathway of these brethren was beset with difficulties; ours, under a felicitous union and ample possessions, is made easy before us. Let not our course be wayward. In the absence of such pressure as our predecessors bore, it becomes us to avoid all thought of minor differences, if any arise, and aspiring to the just dignity of our glorious inheritance, work onward, upward, as they did, in the spirit of Masonry.

"The hundred years are complete! The eventful series is accomplished! We stand on the threshold of another century! The genius of the age bids us look forward, heeding the lessons of the past, but abiding upon ourselves. Thus are we to make history. Thus have we our own responsibilities, and thus alone must our memories encounter the test hereafter. Let us, let each generation of Masons be true to themselves. Then shall centuries go by filled with blessings, and centennial days shall herald grateful memories."

At the Centennial Observance, in honour of General Warren's Grand Mastership, which was celebrated under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, the Grand Master, Bro. W. S. Gardner, delivered a magnificent historical address, and at the banquet table speeches of almost equal interest and value, were made by M.W. Bro. J. T. Heard, P.G.M. (a gentleman whom we had the pleasure of meeting in London recently), by Bro. W. Parkman, P.G.M., by Bro. Hamilton Willis, P.M., the Rev. J. A. Bolles, D.D., Grand Chaplain, C. L. Woodbury, D.G.M., and J. W. Sheppard. The last-named brother, in noting the parallelism between General Warren and Pythagoras, gave the following sketch of the ancient philosopher's career, which will doubtless be read with interest:—

"Pythagoras was one of the most extraordinary and renowned men in any age or country. He was the first who assumed the name of philosopher. He was born about 588, and died 500 years before Christ. His father, Mnesarchus, was a person of distinction, who gave him a fine education. At eighteen he won the crown at the Olympic Games, where the elegance of his person and the courteousness of his address attracted much attention. In pursuit of knowledge, he travelled to Egypt, Chaldaea, and Persia, and according to Cicero, who called him vir praestanti sapientia, he visited many countries on foot. In the island of Crete he was initiated into the Eleusinian Mysteries of Greece, and in Egypt into the priesthood and ceremonies of Isis. It was Isis who said: I am all that has been, that shall be, and none among mortals has hitherto taken off my veil.

"At the age of forty he selected Crotona for his residence, and opened his famous school. Crotona (now Cortona) in the kingdom of Naples, lies near the mouth of the river Æsarus, which enters the Ionian sea—a walled city, with a strong citadel and about five thousand inhabitants, though anciently thirty thousand, when it was one of the richest and most powerful cities in Magna Græcia; now it is a decayed and abject place.

"He was skilled in music, medicine, and geometry; and such was his advance in astronomy that he placed the sun in the centre of the solar system and the planets revolving in their orbits around it, and more than twenty centuries passed before this fact was established and believed. He added strings to the harp, and increased the scale of music. Dr. Burnet says he invented the harmonical canon or monochord. His discoveries in geometry were very great; many of them were found in Euclid, particularly the celebrated 47th Proposition, of such infinite value, the demonstration of which is one of the most beautiful pieces of scientific logic which are known.

"In addition to his school, he instituted a college in his house, where the more abstruse sciences were taught. Jamblicus, who wrote his life in Latin—I have seen no English translation of this work—speaks of his college, where a brotherhood used to assemble in secret meetings, using mysterious symbols and peculiar signs of recognition. Whence many learned writers have derived the rudiments of Masonry; and therefore from time immemorial he has been claimed by Masons as a brother, and his celebrated Square of the Hypotenuse recognized as a symbol.

"The aspect of the Samian sage was noble and his presence dignified. His life was devout in religious duties and exemplary in morals; and such was his habit of abstemiousness that he avoided animal food. The influence which he exerted in Crotona was so powerful that it is said he reformed the voluptuous and vicious habits of the young men, and his eloquent lectures were listened to by large crowds. From Pythagoras emanated the maxim—'My friend is my better half.' In the midst of an idolatrous people he worshipped one God, the Supreme Intelligence. His 'Golden Verses' have come down to us in Greek; they were translated by Dr. Watts, and may be found in his 'Improvement of the Mind,' a book deserving a place in every young man's library.

How sweet the home of this good man;

His 'Golden Verses' led the way;

With orison the morn began,

With vesper hymn he closed the day.

"Such was Pythagoras, one of the purest and greatest men that ever lived—one who should be endeared to every Mason."

Altogether the whole work is so replete with Masonic information, so eloquent with bright and beaming thoughts, and so comprehensive as a record of memorable events, that we rise from its perusal with feelings akin to enthusiastic gratitude for the exquisite mental treat it has afforded us. Our special thanks are due to Bro. Dr. Palmer, the W.M. of "St. Andrews," for his courtesy in sending us a presentation copy.

The Westminster Papers. W. KENT and Co.

This monthly journal is devoted to the interests of chess, whist, games of skill, and the drama. A comprehensive carte, but one which we are bound to say is fully carried out. Published at the low price (for a class magazine) of sixpence, it gathers the "whisperings" of the chess world, places before us diagrams of clever positions and problems in the game, and is not only useful to a learner of chess, but interesting to an advanced student or adept of that most scientific of games. In the number under review (No. 35, March 1st, 1871), there is quite a learned article on "Fossil Chess," and which will be continued in future issues. The illustrations of whist are equally good, and besides correspondence, there is a capital statistical paper on the "Duty on Playing Cards," in which the writer is rather severe upon some points of the Government's financial policy. The contributor of "Dramatic Notes" evidently knows what he is discussing, and that is more than can be said of most dramatic critics. Altogether "Westminster Papers" deserve, and we little doubt receive, a fair share of the support of that large class of the population which believes in a fair modicum of cheerful relaxation without suffering the enjoyment of a friendly game to degenerate into gambling, or an occasional visit to the "pit" to drag them down to the one which is said to be bottomless.

RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF FREEMASONRY.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN, P.M. 131, Provincial Grand Secretary Cornwall, &c.

It is our intention to write as soon as possible (probably in three months) the second of the series entitled "Freemasonry and Judaism." After its issue no doubt our views will be better understood than they are at present by certain members of that persuasion. Already we have had objections to the first, viz., "Freemasonry and Christianity;" but as we think the exceptions taken to our remarks will be found to be unwarranted after a careful examination of our article, we shall content ourselves by simply and rapidly explaining why we think our observations are misunderstood by our able friend and Brother, Jacob Norton, of Boston, U.S. In THE FREEMASON for February 25, 1871, that well-known Mason examines our communication in THE FREEMASON for January 7th, 1871, under the heading "Bro. Hughan and the Bible Question." We thank him for his expressed appreciation of our labour respecting "Freemasonry at York," although his commendation is partly qualified by doubting the motives which prompted us to furnish some information for the Craft, e.g., citations from the old Constitutions. Bro. Norton "dissents from his (Bro. Hughan's) motives for furnishing them, and the conclusions they lead him to." Now, our motives in presenting them to the Craft universal through THE FREEMASON was to prove that Freemasonry had a Christian origin, and until the last century was a Christian Institution—in other words, Freemasons recognised Christianity. The conclusion we arrived at is, that whatever may have since been advocated with respect to the Institution in order to secure its universal acceptance, we must admit Freemasonry was originated, was maintained, and, in fact, was supported from the earliest period of its existence until the last century, by professed Christians. We say this only to draw attention to a historical fact, and so as to make our meaning plain. By bearing these statements in mind we are quite prepared to find a Christian ritual in use among Freemasons. In time, however, its character was gradually altered, and we have now a series of ceremonies substituted which, though not sufficiently changed to fully disguise their Christian origin, are, after all, suited for the present era of the Craft, and form a grand introduction to Freemasonry for neophytes of any religion, politics, or country. We wish it to be distinctly understood that we view with decided favour all attempts to open the portals of the Craft as widely as possible to all religionists, so long as the "landmarks" of importance are duly observed. At the same time, because we as Masons, require certain religious prerequisites, such as belief in the Great Architect of the Universe, &c., we strongly object to the removal of the volume of the Sacred Law from the pedestal, and the substitution of the Book of Constitutions. On this ground we presume Bro. Norton objects to our article. We say presume, as after a careful perusal of his communication, we cannot discover any part of our article specially mentioned or objected to, although we do find the "burning of heretics," and other such iniquitous practices, fully alluded to, and about which certainly we have nothing to do. In the second of our series we intend to recount a few of the persecutions by Freemasons (not as by Christians or other religions, which, after all, we are not called upon to consider), and by the time we write the third, or concluding article of the series, we fancy our friend, Bro. Jacob Norton, will not so warmly object to our "Religious Aspects of Freemasonry." Bro. Norton says: "The question is not what religious belief was necessary in order to be an Operative, but a Speculative, Mason." Well, suppose we take that for granted, we then will ask what religious belief was necessary in order to be a Speculative Mason during the last century? In answer, we state most emphatically that not a single copy of any ritual in use during that period can be produced which does not illustrate the connection of Freemasonry with Christianity! Hence, the fact is clear that the ceremonies of the Craft decidedly were of a Christian character long after the "Revival." The "ancient charges" promulgated by Bro. Dr. Anderson were not as the ancient charges, which was my object in quoting so largely from the ancient MSS. of the fourteenth century to the last. All these are Christian, which any one can verify by reference to several we have had printed, and by perusal of others published some time since. Also, however universal and unsectarian these charges of A.D. 1723 were, the rituals then, and subsequently for many years in vogue, were Christian. We do not like Bro. Norton's reference to "cheating." As we write to give and receive light, and Bro. Norton and numerous other worthies do the same, let us not employ such terms, but always write as gentlemen. We would wish to know in England during the last century when "the Bible was not even used for obligating candidates?" With respect to the festival of St. John the Baptist and the early Freemasons, we have plenty of evidence to prove that feast was observed by Freemasons before 1717. Bro. Norton states, from certain reasons "the clear-sighted Bro. Hughan is led astray by supposing that, because the bricklayers of old had to be Christians, we therefore must also somehow acknowledge Christianity in our lodges." Any oculist would certify our sight was good; but we fancy Bro. Norton must have the faculty of "seeing double," as we cannot discover where we state lodges must somehow recognise Christianity. On the contrary, we say it would be wro to require them to do so, and if in any lodge the majority of the members are Mahomedans, we would vote for the Koran being generally placed on the pedestal; in like manner, if the majority are Jews, we would advocate the "Old Testament" being "opened in Lodge;" and if the majority are professedly Christians, we should desire to see the Holy Bible (composed of the Old and New Testament) always on the pedestal, excepting for the initiation of other religionists, when their volume of the Sacred Law should be substituted. With respect to the initiation of a Mahomedan by the Duke of Sussex, we do not remember an instance, although Bro. Norton says so positively. The Ambassador from the King of Oude to this country was initiated in No. 6, London, on the 14th April, 1836, when H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex sent his valuable copy of the Koran, which was used at the obligation. The W.M. who presided was the Rev. Bro. Fallowfield (Freemason's Quarterly Review, p. 192, A.D. 1836). We are delighted to witness the introduction of good Mahomedans or consistent members of other sects into Freemasonry, and have had the pleasure of assisting on such occasions. Freemasonry is now unsectarian, and candidates can be obligated according to their consciences. When, however, we have to talk of Freemasonry as it was, we have to disregard our own views, and assume the place of a historian.

The "Book of Constitutions" would be of much less importance to me at the obligation of a Mahomedan than the Koran, because the latter opened on the pedestal, and saluted by the neophyte, would be a "pledge of fidelity," and according to the conscience of the candidate. At other times, the "Book of Constitutions" would to me, Masonically, be of more importance, certainly; but at no time would it be so to the Mahomedan, and at no time would it be to me of more importance than the Holy Bible. By a mutual concession to the religious beliefs of the Fraternity, and by ignoring all religious and political discussions in our lodges, we are free from the imputation of either sectarianism or bigotry. The Koran would be the "volume of the Sacred Law" to the Mahomedans, the "Old Testament" to the Jews, and the "Old and New Testaments," in one volume, to the Christians. We are not conscious of any difficulty as to the "Bible question" in this country. In London, especially, men of various religions are members of the same lodge, and work in "peace and harmony."

In conclusion, we beg to assure Bro. Norton of our sympathy with him in reading of the unmasonic laws existing among Masons in some parts of Europe, and at the same time would also remind him that such intolerance derives no support from this country.

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE 2.

It is an indubitable fact that many enterprises, promoted from time to time by well-meaning people, have signally failed in consequence of the irregular system manifested by the projectors. Their collapse has excited feelings of surprise and disgust; but how little was the origin of the misfortune understood! If men generally were, in all their transactions, determined to obey the Divine command—"Let all things be done decently and in order"—how many vexations and inconveniences would be averted!

It is imperative that all friendly societies should receive conscientious methodical treatment to ensure favourable results, for how can it be supposed that any undertaking, uncontrolled by well-devised principles, should flourish? The rules enforced by the order of the Eastern Star indicate a firm basis of government, for they exhibit care and forethought, and are well constructed and comprehensively explained. They are as follows:—

1. Not less than five ladies who are entitled to receive, or have received, the degrees should be present at any communication when the degrees of this Order are conferred.

2. The proper persons entitled to receive the degrees are:—1, All Master Masons in good standing; 2, the wives of Master Masons in good standing; 3, the widows of Master Masons who died in good standing; 4, the sisters of Master Masons in good standing; 5, the daughters of Master Masons in good standing; 6, mothers of Masons in good standing.

3. Those who are not entitled to receive the degrees are:—1, Unmarried ladies, if under 18 years of age; 2, half-sisters or step-daughters; 3, Master Masons who may stand expelled, suspended, or against whom charges may be pending.

4. Each person before acquiring a knowledge of the degrees must be honourably pledged to the observance of the above rules, and to the strictest discretion in regard to the essential secrets of the degrees.

5. A well-guarded apartment must be secured for conferring the degrees. No person should aspire to the office of Instructor until he has thoroughly qualified himself for the work by imprinting the lectures upon his memory, perfecting himself in the signs, passwords, and scriptural illustrations, and securing confidence in himself, so that he may not become confused when he rises to address an audience. The Instructor should make the lecture graceful, dignified, and impressive. No one should be allowed to enter the room after the pledge of secrecy has been imparted. These requisitions being complied with, the brother who may be acting as Instructor will proceed upon the general plan indicated; that is, he will make allusions, by way of opening, to the history, extent, and purposes of Freemasonry; its claims to the respect and attachment of the ladies, and the practical objects for which the Order of the Eastern Star was instituted.

The subjoined composition is the opening ode to the first ceremony, and is directed to be sung by all present, to the tune of the well-known air "Just before the Battle, Mother." The words possess pathos and simplicity, and must have an impressive effect upon the minds of all, especially the initiates:—

Here around the altar meeting,
Where the sons of light combine;
Mingled with our friendly greeting,
Is the glow of love divine.
For this hall to virtue given,
And our emblems on the wall,
Point us to the Lodge in Heaven
And the Master of us all.

Chorus—Keep in view the lodge supernal,
Life is love enthron'd in Heav'n,
Where the true light never wavers
And our mortal sins forgiven.

In the bonds of Mason's duty
Seek we now the Mason's light,
Forms of Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty
Teach us what is good and right.
Far be every sinful passion,
Near be every gentle grace;
And so at last this holy mission
Shall reveal our Master's face.

Chorus—Keep in view the lodge supernal,
Life is love enthron'd in Heav'n,
Where the true light never wavers
And our mortal sins forgiven.

The piece having been concluded, the Instructor recites the following words:—

A welcome and a greeting now,
To gentle friends and sisters true,
Around the place where Masons' bow,
And pay their homage due;
On checkered floor, 'neath starry sky,
Welcome, kind friends of Masonry!

To her who finds a Father here,
Or Brother's strong and trusty hand;
To her who mourns the lost and dear,
Once cherished in our band;
To her who husband's love doth own,
Greeting and Welcome, every one!

Welcome the light our emblems shed,
Welcome the hopes yon volume gives—
Welcome the love our covenants spread,
The wages each receives;
And when is past life's toilsome week,
Welcome the home that Masons seek.

The oration following this salutation will be quoted in the next article. C. S.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

By Bro WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

15. No Lodge shall make any person a Mason until he has attained the age of twenty-one years, let his other Masonic qualifications be what they may, unless by dispensation from the Grand Master.

16. No person shall be made a Mason in any Lodge for a smaller admission fee than 2 Guineas, including the fee for Registry; not in the City of Dublin or its Vicinity, for less than 1½ Guineas, besides the Grand Lodge fee of £1, under penalty of being fined a sum for each offence, equal to what they should have charged their candidates according to this Regulation; and the Brother so admitted shall be considered as irregular, and subjected to all the disqualifications of the 3rd Regulation for particular Lodges, until he shall be restored by the Grand Lodge upon Memorial, and pay into the Charitable Fund, whatever sum his admission fee already paid to his Lodge may have been less than the sum required to be paid according to this Regulation.

17. No person made a Mason under a Warrant which has been afterwards suspended or cancelled, shall be entitled to visit or join any other Lodge without the permission of the Grand Lodge obtained upon Memorial.

18. No person shall be made a Mason in the City of Dublin or its vicinity until approved of by the Inspecting Committee under a penalty of four Guineas for each offence, to be paid by the Lodge violating this Regulation, and on any person being proposed to the Committee for consideration One pound sterling shall be deposited with the Chairman of the Committee, of which 11s. 10½d. goes to the Orphan School fund; 4s. 4d. to the Grand Lodge fund for general charitable purposes; 1s. 1d. to the Regulations Grand Tiler; and 2s. 8½d. for registering the party admitted whenever he becomes a Master Mason, but the entire is to be returned if the person proposed is not approved of.

19. No Lodge shall receive a person among them, who shall be an Officer of Mace, Sheriff's Officer, Bailiff, Constable, Livery Servant, or any person of such like occupation, under penalty that the Officers present on such occasions shall be suspended from acting as Officers of any Lodge, during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge, and in case any such disqualified persons are Members of Lodges, they shall not be eligible to the situation of Officers therein.

20. All the Lodges of Ireland are to register their Members in the Grand Lodge Books within three months after they are raised to the degree of Master Masons, as well as the names of those transferred from other Lodges, within three Months after said transfer, under penalty of 5s. 5d. for each neglect.

N.B. The expense of registering or transferring, is stated in Regulation the 19th—2nd Section Grand Officers, &c., &c., under the article of Deputy Grand Secretary's fees.

21. Every Lodge in Ireland shall pay 10s. 10d. annually to the Charitable fund of the Order, on or before the first Thursday in June and December, the Grand Master's Lodge to pay what they shall think proper, and no Master or Warden shall be suffered to sit in the Grand Lodge until such contribution be paid, but no Military Lodge is to be charged with annual dues whilst on foreign service.

22. No Military Lodge shall make any Townsman or Citizen a Mason in any part of the British Dominions when there is a registered Lodge held in the Town or District where he resides, or where such Military Lodge there meets; and no town or country Lodge shall make any Military man a Mason, when there is a Warranted Lodge held in the Regiment, Troop, or Company, to which such Military man belongs, and any Military or other Lodge violating this Rule, shall be fined one Guinea for each individual so made or admitted, and if such conduct is persisted in, the Warrant shall be withdrawn altogether or suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

23. All the Lodges in the City of Dublin or its Vicinity, shall elect their Officers in the Months of April and October, and return their names, occupations, and places of residence, to the Grand Secretary, who is to produce the same on the Grand Lodge nights in May and November, that their characters may be inquired into, and reported to the Grand Lodge by the Committee of Charity and Inspection at the meetings preceding St. John's Day; country Lodges are also to return their Officers and a list of all their Members (post paid) to the Grand Secretary, on or before St. John's Day, and any Lodge not complying with the above shall be fined 11s. 4½d.

24. That from and after the 24th of June, 1816, if any Lodge in the City of Dublin or its Vicinity shall cease to meet regularly, keep up the Rules and Orders of the Grand Lodge, and discharge its dues to the Grand Lodge for the space of 6 Months, its Warrant shall be suspended, and if it remain in that state for 6 Months longer, the Warrant shall be cancelled; country Lodges for the like neglect shall be suspended at the end of 1 year; at the end of 2 cancelled by the mere operation of this Law; without motion or resolution for that purpose.

It is recommended that in cases where Lodges are so reduced in Members and circumstances as to be unable to keep up the regularity thereof, that the Warrants of such Lodges be returned to the Grand Secretary, in order to prevent their being suspended or cancelled, and the Members thereof subjected to the disqualifications of the 17th Regulation for particular Lodges.

25. If any of the Lodges pay any contributions or arrears, or any part thereof, to the Pursuivant or Tiler, or any other person without having the Grand Treasurer's or his appointed Clerk's receipt for the same, it is done at their own risk.

26. Any Brethren meeting on a Sunday as a Lodge, shall be excluded from the Order, and no Lodge in the City of Dublin shall meet on the same day on which the Grand Lodge meets.

27. If any Brother so far misbehaves himself as to disturb the good order and good feeling of his Lodge, he shall be thrice duly admonished by the Master and Wardens in open Lodge, and if he will not refrain from his imprudence, and obediently submit to the advice of his Brethren, he shall be treated according to the bye-laws of his own Lodge, or in such manner as the Grand Lodge shall think fit, and when any Brother is excluded from the Order for malpractice or breach of Masonic Duty, information shall be sent forthwith to all the Lodges of the City of Dublin, and as soon as convenient to those in the Country.

28. All the Lodges of Ireland shall have each a Seal with the impression of a hand and trowel encompassed with the name of the place where such Lodge is held, and number of the Lodge, in order to prevent counterfeit Certificates; and no Brother shall receive a Grand Lodge Certificate without producing one signed by the Officers, and sealed with the seal of his own Lodge, unless by the special order of the Grand Lodge for that purpose, to be granted on Memorial stating the causes why the Certificate of his own Lodge cannot be procured; the expense of a Grand Lodge Certificate shall in future be 5s. 5d., one half of which goes to the Deputy Grand Secretary, the other to the charitable fund of the Grand Lodge, and no private Lodge Certificate shall be in force for more than 3 Months.

29. No Religious or Political discussion is by any means or under any colour or pretext whatever, to find its way into a Masonic Lodge.

30. The Majority of every Lodge, when assembled, have the privilege of giving instructions to the Master and Wardens before the meetings of the Grand Lodge, because their Officers are their representatives, and are supposed to speak the sentiments of their constituents in the Grand Lodge.

31. No Brother shall attend as a Mason clothed in any of the Jewels or Badges of the Craft, at any Funeral or other Public procession in the City of Dublin or its Vicinity, without a special licence first had and obtained for such Funeral or Procession from the Grand Master or his Deputy, and in all Masonic Funerals, or other Public Processions of what kind or nature soever; although authorized as above, no Brother shall wear any other Ribbons or Colours than Masonic ones, and if attended by Music shall play or cause to be played any other than Masonic Tunes, it being hereby strictly prohibited to introduce on such occasions any party or political colours or tunes, so that the honour of the Craft, or the peace of the Country may be compromised, and every Brother offending against this Rule, shall be liable to exclusion or suspension from the rights of Masonry during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

32. From and after the 24th of June, 1816, no Brother being the proprietor of a house of entertainment in which a Masonic Lodge holds its meetings, shall be eligible to hold the Office of Master of such Lodge during the time it meets in his house, and any Lodge electing such Brother as their Master, shall have the Warrant thereof suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

33. No Committee of enquiry will be ordered on any complaint addressed to the Grand Lodge, unless such complaint is certified to be of a nature requiring Masonic Investigation, by the signature of the Officers and seal of a regular Lodge; this does not apply to cases of appeal.

34. No Brother shall be competent to be the Nov. 1810 acting Officer of more than one Lodge in the same Town or Country, during the same period of time.

SECTION the 5th.
OF THE MASONIC ORPHAN SCHOOL.

1. It is expedient that a fund be raised for the purpose of establishing a school for the Education and Maintenance of the Female Orphan Children of Freemasons.

2. The Grand Master of Masons of Ireland, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, the Grand Treasurer, the Grand Secretary, the Grand Chaplain, and the Masters of such Lodges as have paid or shall pay the sum of Ten Guineas at one payment, all for the time being shall be Governors.

3. Such Brethren and other well-disposed persons as shall pay Ten Guineas in one payment shall be Governors for life, and every Brother subscribing One Guinea or upwards annually, shall be a Governor as long as he continues a Subscriber.

4. The Wife, Daughter, or Sister of each Brother Subscribing as above, shall possess the privilege of visiting the School, and exercising her judgment and attention as she may think most conducive to its interests.

5. Out of the body of Subscribers 24 are to be elected annually to constitute a Board, to whose direction and superintendence the concerns of the School generally are to be committed. This Board, of which the Grand Officers for the time being are always considered Members, are to meet once in each Quarter, in order to examine the state of the School, inspect the receipts and expenditure of money, admit Candidates, dispose of the Children fit for trades or occupations, and do whatever else may be deemed necessary for its good management.—The Members of this Board to be elected by the Subscribers at large, when vacancies shall occur, as in the first instances of its formation.

6. The funds of the Institution consists of life or annual Subscriptions as above, one Guinea out of each Warrant granted by the Grand Lodge, 11s. 10½d. out of the report money for every person approved of by the Committee of Inspection to be made a Mason in the City of Dublin; 5s. from the Master, 3s. 4d. from the Senior Warden, and 2s. 6d. from the Junior Warden, of each Dublin Lodge, on their being approved of for those situations, if they are not already annual or life subscribers to this Charity, with the collections made at the Annual Charity Sermons; which funds being very inadequate to anything like an extensive Charitable Establishment, every lodge is earnestly solicited to assist the funds of this Institution, either by annual subscriptions or periodical contributions, and as the smallest donation will be thankfully received, it is recommended as a plan for carrying their Brotherly love and good feeling into effect, that each Lodge shall have regularly, at all its meetings, a Charity Box, called "THE ORPHAN'S BOX" to receive donations; the contents of which will be claimed on the 27th of December in each year by the Grand Treasurer.

7. The Treasurer of the Masonic Orphan School is to report the state of the funds thereof, and present accounts of money received and disbursed to the respective Grand Lodge meetings of January, April, July, and October in each year, and to the Committee of the Orphan School, or the Committee of Charity and Inspection, whenever they shall require such explanation, and he is also to report on each of those occasions the number of children admitted into the School, and apprenticed or otherwise provided for out of it.

8. All subscriptions to the Masonic Orphan School become due on every 27th of December, the subscriptions being in advance for the ensuing year, and the Treasurer having apprised each subscriber of the arrear he has incurred on that day shall return a statement of the Defaulters to the Grand Lodge at its meeting on the February following.

FINIS.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Britannic Lodge, No. 33.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, the 10th inst., and amongst those present we noticed Bros. Augustus G. Church, W.M.; James Glaisher, S.W.; Magnus Ohren, J.W.; Frederick George Finch, S.D.; George E. Eachus, J.D.; Franchis Pendered, I.G.; F. Webb Shields, John Sampson Peine, Henry Bridges, William Smith, and James Glegg, P.M.'s; Charles Horsley, Edmund Burke, Charles W. Turner, William Claviston, Thomas Spencer, David Hodge, Jabez Church, Frederick D. Banister, Thomas D. Parker, John N. Sharp, Henry Finlay, &c. Visitors: Bros. Frederick Leslie, of No. 1 Lodge (from Moscow); Marris Wilson, P.M. of St. Mary's Lodge; &c. Bros. Humphreys, Bloore, and Wallis were raised, and Bros. Hodge and Wilcox passed, both ceremonies being very ably performed by the W.M., and satisfaction was expressed at the perfect manner in which the candidates passed their examination. The regret of the lodge was expressed at the absence of Bro. A. Chubb, the Secretary, from illness, and also of the Treasurer, Bro. Crombie, from professional duties. Bro. James Glaisher, F.R.S., the S.W., was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year. The lodge adjourned to banquet about 7 o'clock, and in the course of the evening "The Health of Bro. Glaisher, W.M.-elect," was most cordially received.

St. George's Lodge, No. 140.—On the 15th inst., this old lodge met at the Trafalgar Hotel, Greenwich, Bro. E. Johnson, W.M., presiding. He initiated, in an able manner, Messrs. John Cowper Seard and William Sydney Wilkins into Freemasonry. It was unanimously agreed to vote a Treasurer's jewel to Bro. G. W. Edington, P.M., for his services as Treasurer for the last six years, to be presented to him at the next meeting. A committee was formed to carry out the arrangements for a summer festival, similar to that held last year. The lodge was closed. There were present: Bros. Hudson, P.M.; E. M. Hubbock, P.M.; E. W. Pook, P.M.; W. Noak, P.M., Treas.; A. H. Tattershall, P.M., Sec.; Webster, Allwright, &c. The visitors were: F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; E. W. Mackreay, S.W. 134; E. J. Bumstead, P.M., Sec. 548; H. A. Collington, P.M., Treas. 871, &c. The banquet followed.

Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, City, on Thursday, the 2nd inst. Bro. George Kenning, W.M., occupied the chair, supported by his Wardens and officers. The lodge having been opened in the first degree, the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the second and third degrees (Bro. E. Roberts, P.M., occupying the chair pro tem.), and Bro. W. Donne, J. G. Chillingworth and S. Edwards, being present, were raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The lodge was then resumed in the first degree, and Messrs. William Cotter and Wm. Ramsey, after being unanimously elected by ballot, were regularly initiated into Freemasonry, the ceremony being worked by the W.M., Bro. Kenning, with great ability. Several matters of business before the lodge having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in due form and adjourned till the next regular meeting in October next, emergencies excepted. Amongst the members present we noticed Bros. J. J. Harris, S.W.; F. Trot, J.W.; W. Goodyer, P.M., Treas.; J. G. Marsh, P.M., Sec.; Geo. Abbott, S.D.; A. J. Dickenson, J.D.; Geo. Newman, I.G.; Thos. Cohe, D.C.; E. King, Steward; Chas. Hosgood and E. Roberts, P.M.'s; H. Davis, G. T. Smith, E. Raffie, J. Hyde, T. Fisher, G. Parker, T. Gardner, W. R. Baker, R. E. Bright, F. Baker, E. Jones, A. F. Iselton, S. T. Lucas, B. Marsland, J. Kent, S. West, A. C. Payne, H. Legg, C. Arkell, H. Child, C. Cann, H. Griffin, A. J. Garnett, and S. Haynes. The brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, ably presided over by the W.M. During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair and enthusiastically responded to, Bro. Colonel Perkins, G. Steward, returning thanks for the Grand Officers and visitors in an excellent speech. Bros. Abbott, Bright, Gardner and others, by their vocal abilities, added much to the pleasures of the evening. The Tyler's toast brought this, the last meeting of the lodge for the season, to a most happy termination. During the evening it was unanimously resolved, on the proposition of the W.M., that there should be a summer banquet, and which we have every reason to believe will, under the popular management of the W.M., Bro. Geo. Kenning, result in a genuine success. The visitors who honoured the lodge with their presence on this occasion were Bros. Col. E. M. Perkins, G. Steward, and W.M. No. 5; A. Bryant, W.M. 12; J. Lake, 101; C. Jardine, J.D. 140; H. Windybank, 902; W. H. Thompson, P.M. 938.

Lodge of United Strength, No. 228.—At a meeting held at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, on Tuesday, the 14th ult., Bro. Bisley Roberts, P.M., in an impressive manner, raised Bros. Potter and Mott to the third degree. The lodge was closed. Present: Bros. H. C. Bebb, J.W.; J. A. Winsland, Treas.; Crump, P.M. Sec.; J. White, J.D.; H. Smith, D.C.; C. Braid, as Organist; Colston, P.M.; C. F. Stewart, P.M.; W. B. Vivian, P.M., &c. The visitors were: Bros. F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; J. C. Downing, 108; J. C. Cox, 1257; Buckingham, 1196; Bradley, 1 Hiram Lodge, New York.

Star Lodge, No. 1275.—This young lodge held its regular meeting on Friday, the 3rd inst., at the Marquis of Granby Tavern, New Cross. Bro. Ough, P.G.P., the W.M. opened the lodge, and there were present during the evening Bros. C. J. Hogg, P.G.P., P.M., S.W.; H. Keeble, J.W.; J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., Treas.; F.

Walters, P.M., Sec.; H. Crabtree, J.D.; G. Pymm, P.M., I.G.; T. R. Darke, D.C.; A. Stevens, Wetten, W. B. Tustin, W. Okey, S. Homewood, J. J. Limebeer, W. M. Bull, T. Hobson, W. H. Trampleasure; visitors, Bros. F. Dussee (79), F. Frampton (P.M. 87), A. Dixon (87) E. Farthing (S.D. 101), W. F. Fenton (25), E. Sisson (P.M. 901), G. Wilkes (1075), &c. The work done was initiating Messrs. Limebeer, Trampleasure, and Bull, and passing Bro. Wetten. Several notices of motion for next meeting were given, and the lodge was closed, the brethren passing an hour or two most pleasantly at the banquet-table.

Royal Standard Lodge, No. 1298.—The first anniversary meeting of this lodge was held at the Marquess Tavern, Canonbury, on Tuesday, the 7th inst. Bro. Wiggington, P.M. 902, P.P.G.D.C. Worcester, W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. Lee, P.M. 193, W.M.-elect; Robt. Shackell, Hon. Sec.; W. J. Woodman, Ballantyne, Dudden, Rutherford, Catlin, Tomlinson, Dupont, Modridge, Cleaver, Sansom, J. W. Wright, Rafter, &c., &c. Bro. Wiggington raised Bro. Whillier, and initiated Mr. Cohen, the ceremonies being ably performed. The installation by Bro. Younghusband, P.P.G.J.W. West Lancashire, of Bro. Lee, and the addresses to the W.M., Wardens and brethren, subsequently, were rendered in an almost perfect manner, and called forth many expressions of praise. The newly-appointed officers are:—Bros. R. Lee, W.M.; Wilson, S.D.; Woodman, J.W.; Wiggington, Treas.; Rev. R. Simpson, P.G. Chaplain, Chaplain; R. Shackell, P.P.G.D. Hants, Sec.; Dudden, S.D.; Modridge, J.D.; Bracey, I.G.; Sweetland, D.C.; Motion, P.M., 453; and Ballantyne, P.M. 754, Stewards; and Gilchrist, Tyler. The W.M. said he now had a very pleasing duty to perform, and that was to present to Bro. Wiggington, a handsome P.M.'s jewel, which, together with the freedom of the lodge, had been voted to him at the last meeting. The jewel, which is from Bro. Wiggington's own design, bears the following inscription:—"Presented by the Royal Standard Lodge, 1298, to Brother Colonel Wiggington, P.M. 902, P.P.G.D.C. Worcester, Founder and first W.M., as a token of respect for the courteous and efficient manner in which he presided during the year 1870-1871."—The W.W. said it was with intense satisfaction he rose to present to the Installing Master, Bro. Younghusband, a vote of thanks and the freedom of the lodge for the services he had rendered them in consecrating the lodge and installing the first two W.M.'s.—Bro. Younghusband made a suitable acknowledgment, and said his services were always at the command of the brethren.—The W.M. then stated that at the last meeting of the lodge it was unanimously resolved that an expression of the gratitude of the lodge to Bro. R. Shackell, the indefatigable Secretary, should be engrossed on vellum for the very great kindness and attention he had given to the lodge and its concerns. He (the W.M.) was very proud to have the honour of presenting, on behalf of the lodge, the hands and testimonial of the high estimation in which Bro. Shackell is held, and which was then before them. The freedom of the lodge, also handsomely engrossed, was likewise offered for his acceptance. In presenting these to Bro. Shackell, the W.M. dilated at some length upon his excellent qualifications for the office he held, and his untiring energy and zeal in the cause of Masonry. The testimonial, splendidly mounted in a large gilt frame, was to the following effect:—

"At a meeting of the lodge held on Tuesday, 7th Feb., 1871, Bro. Col. Wiggington, W.M., in the chair, it was proposed by Bro. Wilson, seconded by Bro. Modridge, and unanimously resolved, that the best thanks of the brethren, together with the freedom of the lodge, be given to Bro. Robt. Shackell, W.M. 30, P.P.G.P. Hants, Hon. Secretary, for the untiring zeal and energy displayed by him in the formation of the lodge, as well as that of the Lodge of Instruction in connection therewith, and also for the manner in which he has performed the onerous duties of Secretary of this lodge, and that the same be engrossed on vellum, and presented to him as a slight token of the esteem in which he is held by the brethren.

"Signed, Wm. WIGGINGTON, W.M.
R. LEE, S.W.
H. BALLANTYNE, J.W."

—Bro. Shackell, in returning thanks, said he could hardly find words to thank the brethren. He never expected such a recognition of his poor services, and it had taken him quite by surprise, but he could assure the brethren it would be highly prized as long as he should live.—The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet, after which several complimentary speeches were made and responded to. The visitors—who were Bros. Wells (15), E. R. Bass (861), E. H. Lambert (382), and Chas. E. Thompson, Masonic Reporter (177 and S.W. 1158)—in responding to the usual compliment paid them, expressed their satisfaction at the way in which the work was carried on, and congratulated the brethren on having secured so good an officer as Bro. Lee for their Master.—The brethren separated at a late hour.

Lodge of Asaph, No. 1319.—This lodge held its regular monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, W.C., on the 6th inst. Present: Bros. E. S. Jones, W.M.; C. Coote, S.W.; J. M. Chamberlin, J.W.; James Weaver, S.D.; F. Frewin, J.D.; C. Coote, jun., Treas.; Jeykll, I.G.; W. A. Timney, D.C.; J. A. Adams, P.G.P.; H. J. Timney, Weston, Snelling, Stephens, Egerton, Maby, Boatwright, E. Terry, Harper, Easton, Edgar, Horton, H. Baker, J. Baker, and Snyder's; visitors, Bros. John Read, P.M. 720, and Edward Swanborough, 188. The business consisted in initiating Mr. John Tiplady Carrolus, Professor of Music, and Mr. John Strachan, dramatic author; passing Bro. J. Baker, and raising Bros. H. J. Timney, H. J. Snelling, and J. Egerton. The sum of two guineas was voted to the "Lion Testimonial Fund." Messrs. W. J. Castell, L. Silverberg, and Wm. Cross, Professors of Music, were proposed for initiation, and the business being finished the lodge was closed in due form.

PROVINCIAL.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—This lodge held its usual monthly meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 1st inst., Bro. Clement Stretton, W.M., presiding, and amongst the brethren present were: Bros. W. Kelly, P.M. and R.W.P.G.M.; Weare, P.M. and Treas.; L. A. Clarke, P.M.; Crow, S.W.; Dr. Pearce, J.W.; Widdowson, Sec.; Palmer, S.D.; J. Wright Smith, J.D.; H. Deane, and other brethren. Visitors: Bros. Buzzard, W.M.; Toller, P.M.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, J.W. (who officiated as Chaplain), and several other members of the John of Gaunt Lodge. Bro. Cleaver having been duly examined, was passed to the second degree, the ceremony being performed by the Prov. G.M., after which Bro. Deane, P.P.G. Registrar, delivered the lecture on the tracing board. On the lodge being lowered to the first degree, a ballot was taken for Mr. Walton Wilkinson and Mr. John Ellwood, as candidates for Masonry, who were duly elected, but their initiation was postponed in consequence of the large amount of business before the lodge. A ballot was also taken for the W. Bro. William James Hughan, P.M. 131, Truro, and P.G. Sec. for Cornwall, who had been nominated an honorary member at the last meeting, in recognition of valuable donations of books to the library of the Masonic Hall, and especially of the great interest he had taken in promoting the candidature for election into the Boys' School of Alfred Nutt, one of the five orphan children of the late Bro. John Nutt, of this lodge; when Bro. Hughan was declared to be unanimously elected, and an official intimation of the fact, under the hands of the principal officers and the seal of the lodge, was ordered to be made to that worthy brother. The by-laws of the lodge, as revised by the Committee appointed for that purpose, were read seriatim, and, after some discussion, were unanimously approved and ordered to be printed. Bro. Deane, who this year represents the Province as Steward for the Boys' School, brought before the lodge the urgent claims of that admirable Institution for support. On the proposition of the P.G.M., seconded by the W.M., the sum of five guineas was voted from the lodge funds, in addition to the ten guineas previously subscribed, and several of the brethren also placed their names on Bro. Deane's list. More than usual interest is just now felt in this Institution from the fact that (as above mentioned in connection with Bro. Hughan) one of the five orphan children of the late Bro. John Nutt, for 17 years a member of this lodge, and who may literally be said to have died broken-hearted a few weeks after becoming a bankrupt, is an applicant for election into the School, being the first candidate from the Province for any one of the Masonic charities. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 8th inst., at the Masonic Rooms Athenæum. There were present: W. Bro. J. Daniel Moore, W.M., P.P.G.S. of W.; W. Bro. John Hatch, I.P.M.; Bro. W. Hall, S.W.; Bro. W. Fleming, J.W.; W. Bro. James Hatch, P.M. and Treas.; W. Bro. Edmund Simpson, P.M. and Sec.; Bro. R. Taylor, S.D.; Bro. John Harrison, I.G.; Watson, Tyler; Sumner, Steward; W. Bro. G. Kelland, P.M.; W. Bro. W. Hall, P.M. 1051. Visitors: W. Bro. Jesse Banning, W.M. 343; Bros. B. Mills, C. Hartley, Bullfield, Acton, J. Stanley, W. Heald, W. Hays. The lodge was opened punctually at the hour appointed, the minutes of the preceding meeting read and confirmed, and other business transacted. The ballot was taken for Bro. R. R. Hathornthwaite as a rejoining member, and he was unanimously elected. The Secretary gave notice of motion, and the lodge was then closed in due form.

BRIGHTON.—Royal York Lodge, No. 315.—The installation meeting of this lodge took place on Tuesday, the 7th inst. Bro. James Curtis, W.M., having opened the lodge in the first degree, the Secretary read the minutes of the previous lodge, which were confirmed; the Secretary then read the various communications. A candidate for initiation was expected, but he did not arrive. Bro. Stride, S.W. and W.M.-elect, was then presented, and the ceremony of installation was proceeded with by the W.M., to whom great credit is due for the masterly manner with which he rendered this beautiful and impressive service. The lodge having been opened in the third degree, and the officers having delivered up their collars and jewels of office, all the brethren below the degree of Installed Master withdrew. The Board of Installed Masters was then duly declared and the ceremony proceeded with. The Board of Installed Masters was closed, and the Master Masons, Fellow Crafts, and Entered Apprentices having been severally admitted, the newly-installed Master was duly saluted and proclaimed. The working tools, Book of Constitutions, by-laws of the lodge, and the lodge minute book were duly presented, after which the W.M. proceeded to invest his officers for the ensuing year, addressing to each brief, but appropriate, remarks on the duties of the several offices: Bros. James Curtis, I.P.M.; J. M. Cunningham, P.M. 811, 1110, P. Prov. G.W. Sussex, S.W.; James Ebbell, J.W.; James Pearson, Sec.; C. Sandeman, S.D.; C. Slatter, J.D.; Staples, I.G.; Hugh Saunders, P.M. 315, P. Prov. G. Deacon, Sussex, Treas.; Clifton and Foot, Stewards; Nell, D. of C. Bro. John Robinson, P.M. 315, gave the address to the W.M. in his usual correct manner, Bro. W. Challen, P.M. 315, 1141, P. Prov. G.S.B. Sussex, gave the address to the Wardens, and Bro. James Curtis, I.P.M., then concluded the ceremony with the general address to the members. After this, and just before the lodge was closed, Bro. Stride, the W.M., placed on Bro. Curtis's breast a neat solid gold Past Master's jewel, which was voted from the lodge funds. In doing so, the W.M. alluded to the services that Bro. Curtis had for several years, and in various ways, rendered to the lodge, but more especially during his past year of office as the W.M. He remarked that their excellent and esteemed brother was always earnest and anxious to carry out any duty he undertook.—Bro. Curtis briefly replied, and thanked his brother members of the Royal York Lodge, No. 315, for the honour done him, and for the willing assistance of all in the lodge, and for their generous forbearance of any errors and omissions committed by him. The lodge was then closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren, to the number of sixty-five, sat down to a banquet, supplied by that well-known caterer of Masonic and other large dinners, Bro. Cowley, the proprietor of the West Pier Refreshment Houses. A word of praise is due to Bro. Cowley for the excellent arrangements made by him for the banquet, for the liberal bill of fare, and for the unsurpassed quality of the wines. The dessert and the floral decorations were entrusted to Bro. Nell, who must have requisitioned his numerous and extensive hot houses to procure such splendid specimens of the floral world; plants and flowers in profusion, of the latter both cut an uncut. Each guest had a small bouquet placed before him. The following toasts were duly honoured:—"The Queen and the Craft," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M. of England," "The Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, M.W.G.M. of England," "The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W.D.G.M., and the Officers of Grand Lodge, Present and Past," "The Right Hon. Lord Pelham, R.W.P.G.M. of Sussex," "Bro. E. J. Furner, R.W.D.P.G.M. of Sussex, and the Officers of Prov. G. Lodge, Present and Past," "The Worshipful Master," "The Visitors," "The Past Masters," "The Officers of the Lodge," and "The Tyler's" toast. The musical arrangements were placed under the charge of Bro. W. Devin, Prov. Grand Organist, Sussex, who presided at the piano with his accustomed ability. During the evening, Bro. W. Kuhe, the celebrated pianist and composer, performed one of his most celebrated solos, which was greeted with unbounded applause. The vocal harmony was well supported by Bro. Hunt, "Maid of Athens," Bro. Cowley, "My Pretty Jane"; Bro. Brickman, "Good Night"; Bro. Eberall, "Tis Forty Years Ago, Friend, John," and several others. Among the brethren present were: Bros. Challen, P.P.G.S.B. Sussex; W. Hudson, P.P.G.D. Sussex; W. Marchant, P.P.G.A. D. of C.; John Robinson, P.M.; W. R. Wood, P.M., P.P.G.W. Sussex, Past Grand Steward; Devin, Prov. G.D. Sussex; W. Curtis, P.P.G.S.B. Sussex; Hugh Saunders, P.P.G.D. Sussex; James Curtis, P.M.; Cunningham, P.P.G.W. Sussex; C. Hudson, Steer, Emary, Chandler, Eberall, Pearson, Eyles, Kenyon, Foot, Carden, Clifton, Goodchild, H. Parsons, Newman, H. Nyechart, Buckman, Pritchard, Packham, W. Bennett, Tillstone, Payne, Sandeman, Miller, Nell, Barnes. The Visitors included: Bros. Craven, 271; C. Pawley, 33; Stokes, 38; Irvine, 86; E. Turner, 30; W.M. 811; J. J. Sabine, P.M. 73; Woillett, 73; C. J. Pocock, W.M. 271; E. Carpenter, W.M. 732; Baldwin, P.M. 40; G. Smith, P.M. 732, P.P.G.P. Sussex; Prin, P.M. 56; Luckett, 851, Prov. G. Warden, Sussex; Evershed, W.M. 56; G. H. Hunt, 851; Rev. Dr. Griffith, P.M. 811, Prov. G. Chaplain, Sussex; W. Kuhe, P.M. 271, P.P.G.O. Sussex; Lawson, J.D. 732, I.G. 811; Davey, 732; Booty, 271; Hopewell, 732; W. Wilkinson, J.D. 271; P. R. Wilkinson, P.M. 271, P.P.G.D. Sussex; H. Martin, Past Mayor of Brighton; J. Reed, P.M. 732; C. Lawes, 175; G. H. Day, J.D. 732, N. Freeman, P.M. 732, P.P.G.W. Sussex; Corder, P.M. 732, P.P.G.W. Sussex.

HERTFORD.—Hertford Lodge, No. 403.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Town Hall on Tuesday, the 7th inst. Present: Bro. H. Busy Hodges, in the chair; supported by Bros. T. D. Medcalf, S.W.; O. H. Wagner, J.W.; T. S. Carter, Sec.; J. R. Cocks, Treas.; C. P. Wyman, I.G. and Org.; C. Drummond, I.P.M.; S. Austin, P.M.; J. Boatwright, and H. Campkin. Bro. H. Campkin was passed to the degree of F.C. Mr. W. H. Pallet, of Much Hadam, farmer, was balloted for and initiated, and Bro. Salisbury, P.M. 903, was elected a joining member. The W.M. worked the ceremony very creditably and with great satisfaction to the brethren present.

CROYDON.—East Surrey Lodge of Concord, No. 463.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Croydon, on the 2nd inst. The W.M., Bro. Dossell, presided, and amongst other brethren present were Bros. W. Roebuck, C.E., P.M., P.P.G.S.B. Surrey; Price, P.M.; Woodward, P.M.; E. A. Sacré, J.W.; Podmore, S.D.; H. W. Hunt, J.D. This being the period for electing the W.M. for the ensuing year, a ballot was taken, and resulted unanimously in favour of Bro. E. A. Sacré, the Junior Warden. After the lodge business, the brethren dined together, and enjoyed a remarkably pleasant evening.

HOLYHEAD.—Hibernia Lodge, No. 597.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Marine Hotel, on Monday, the 6th inst. There were present Bros. J. Peters, W.M.; E. F. Mellor, I.P.M.; J. L. Griffith, S.W.; Wm. Lewis, J.W.; John Ellis, S.D.; Dr. O. Williams, J.D.; D. W. Savage, Steward; Jas. Lloyd, I.G.; Samuel Hughes, O.G.; Rev. O. W. Jones, Chaplain; Owen R. Ellis, Organist. Visiting brother, Charles A. Cleminshaw, 249, and a fair muster of the brethren. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken round for Mr. Thos. Jones, Nelson, New Zealand, who was a candidate for initiation. The result proved unanimously favourable to him. Bro. James Williams, University College, Dublin, formerly a member of this lodge, was also balloted for to become a rejoining member with a similar result. After having been properly prepared, the candidate, Mr. T. Jones, was admitted, and initiated into the sublime mysteries of ancient Freemasonry, the ceremony being performed by the W.M., Bro. J. Peters, in his usual solemn and impressive manner. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, for the purpose of passing Bros. T. G. Clay and W. Poole, who had given satisfaction to the brethren as to the progress they had made in that branch of the Masonic lore which concerned them as E.A.'s. They were accordingly passed, and Bro. Jas. Jones was examined as to his knowledge of F.C. Freemasonry. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, but it being inconvenient for the W.M. to proceed with the ceremony of raising, it was reduced successively to the first degree. The W.M. brought matters of general interest before the brethren, which were fairly discussed, after which the lodge was closed in peace and harmony.

MARKET HARBOUROUGH.—St. Peter's Lodge, No. 1330.—A monthly meeting of this young but flourishing lodge was held at the Assembly Rooms, Three Swans Hotel, on Friday, the 3rd inst., under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Kelly, R.W. Prov. G.M. All the officers were present except the S.W., Bro. Sir H. St. J. Halford, Bart., and the I.G., Bro. T. Macaulay, M.R.C.S., from whom apologies for unavoidable absence were received. Bro. F. Grant, M.D., was raised to the third degree, and Bros. Rev. F. M. Beaumont, M.A., and Healey were passed to the second degree, two other candidates being unable to attend. Bro. Crow, S.W. 279 and P.G.O., presided at the harmonium. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, Bro. Deane, P.P.G. Reg., as Steward for the Boys' School, made an appeal to the members for support, when one guinea (the funds being very low), was voted from the lodge, and a promise was made to increase it by subscriptions amongst the brethren so as to constitute the W.M. for the time being a Life Governor, like the other lodges in the province. On the lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 2nd inst. The chair of K.S. was occupied by the W.M., Bro. C. Carnegie, P.M., P. Prov. Grand Superintendent of Works, Essex. The other officers present were: Bros. Fenn, S.W.; Captain Richardson, Royal Engineers, J.W. pro tem; McKenzie, S.D.; Doulton, J.D.; Laverty, I.G. There were upwards of thirty brethren present, among whom were: Bro. Hickley, P.M., of the Panmure Lodge, No. 723. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Bros. Reynolds, 3rd Dragoon Guards, W. Adams, 101st Foot Regiment, and F. Anderson, Master Gunner, who were unanimously admitted. Bros. Dillon and Beach, who were candidates to be passed to the F.C. degree, were questioned respecting their proficiency in the former degree, which, proving satisfactory, they were entrusted with a test of merit, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bros. Dillon and Beach were passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, Bro. Fenn, S.W., explaining the working tools in an impressive manner. Bros. Gardner, Savigear, Mount, and Lucas, who were candidates for the M.M.'s degree, were questioned respecting their knowledge of the F.C.'s degree, which, proving satisfactory, they were they were favoured with the usual token of approbation, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and those brethren were raised to the sublime degree. The questions appertaining to this degree were then put round the lodge by the W.M., and answered by the brethren for the information of the newly-raised. The W.M. announced that the next meeting of the lodge would be held in the Royal Hotel, and that a Lodge of Instruction would be held there on the 30th inst. The W.M. was requested to order two copies of the "History of the Lodge of Hengist, No. 195," for the use of the brethren. A brother having been proposed as a joining member, and some other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love.

ROYAL ARCH.

PROVINCIAL.

WARRINGTON.—Chapter of Elias Ashmole, No. 148.—The regular annual convocation of this chapter was held on the afternoon of Monday, 13th inst., for the purpose of installing the principals and the investiture of the other officers. In the absence of the M.E.Z., the first chair was occupied by Capt. Mott, P.Z., Past P.G. Prin. Soj., as Installing Principal, who was supported by Comps. D. W. Finney, H., M.E.Z.-elect; John Bowes, P.Z., Prov. G.S.B., J.; H. B. White, P.Z.; W. Mossop, Scribe E. J.-elect; Rev. H. P. Stedman, E. Roberts, W. S. Hawkins, W. Pollitt, W. Savage, W. Sharp, W. Crompton, James Hannah, Janitor. Visitor: Rev. J. W. N. Tanner, De Tabley Chapter. The chapter was opened by the Principals, when the rest of the companions were admitted and the minutes read and confirmed. The ballot-box was sent round for Comp. Parry as a joining member, which proved in his favour. The ceremony of installation of Principals was then proceeded with, and ably rendered by Capt. Mott. The following Comps. were installed and invested: D. W. Finney, Z.; John Bowes, H.; W. Mossop, J.; W. Richardson, P.S.; W. S. Hawkins, E.; W. Sharp, N.; John Harding and Robert Jackson, Assist. Soj.; James Hannah, Janitor. The Auditors having made their report, Comp. Rev. H. P. Stedman gave notice that at the next convocation he should move that the subscription be raised from a half-a-guinea to one guinea per annum. The other business having been completed, the chapter was closed, and the Comps. adjourned to refreshment.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Chapter, No. 200.—The annual meeting of this chapter was held on Wednesday, the 1st inst., in the Masonic Hall, Globe-street, when the following companions were present: T. Cooper, P.Z. (of York), as Z.; Williamson, H.; Spurr, P.Z., as J.; Woodall, P.Z.; Farthing, Z.; Rooke, P.Z.; Smyth, P.Z., Lincoln (visitor); Chapman, Treas.; Martin, N., as E.; R. H. Peacock, as N.; W. Peacock, J.; D. Fletcher, P.S.; H. Grover, 1st A.S.; Inskip, 2nd A.S.; G. H. Walshaw; and J. Verity, Janitor. The chapter was opened at 6 p.m., and the minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. J. W. Taylor, M.D., was balloted for and elected a candidate for exaltation, and being present, he was admitted and exalted to the degree of a R.M. Mason. The following companions were then installed and invested as officers for the next year: Williamson, Z.; W. Peacock, H.; R. H. Peacock, J.; J. A. Chapman, Treas.; H. Grover, E.; H. C. Martin, N.; G. H. Walshaw, P.S.; and J. Verity, Janitor. The chapter was afterwards closed in due form, and the companions partook of one of Comp. Chapman's excellent banquets, which was served in his usual very superior style. At low 12 a very pleasant evening was brought to a close.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude, No. 279.—An Emergency Convocation of this chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on the 9th inst., for the purpose of balloting for candidates, and exalting five brethren of the Lodge of Rectitude, No. 502, Rugby, preparatory to the formation of a new chapter to be attached to that lodge. The officers present were: Comps. Kelly, P.Z. and Prov. G. Supt.; L. A. Clarke, M.E.Z.; Weare, P.Z., as H.; Toller, J.; Stretton, E.; Rev. C. J. E. Smith (Rugby School), N.; Partridge, P.S.; Joseph Harris and Sculthorpe, A. Sojs.; Bembridge, Janitor; and others. A ballot was taken for Bros. the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, W.M. 779 and P.G.J.W.; Sir Henry St. John Halford, Bart., S.W. 1330 and P.G.S.D.; and for Bros. Bird, W.M.; Haswell, P.M.; Bennett, P.M.; Vesey, P.M.; and Treaddell, S.W. of 502; and Richard Augustus Barber, of 523. The ceremony of exalting the brethren from Rugby having been completed, the lectures of the Order were delivered—the historical and symbolical by Comp. Toller, J., and the mystical by the P.G. Supt., Comp. Kelly. The chapter was then closed with solemn prayer, and the companions separated at an early hour.

DOUGLAS, ISLE OF MAN.—The Athole Chapter, No. 1004.—The quarterly meeting of the Royal Arch Chapter attached to the Athole Lodge, No. 1004, was held on Wednesday evening, the 8th inst. The chapter was duly opened by the three Principals—Comps. G. M. Lofthouse, Z.; H. P. Mayle, H.; and R. Tuton, J. After the minutes were read and confirmed, a brother belonging to the Craft lodge was balloted for and duly exalted. Comp. J. J. Harwood, P.M. 1242, was balloted for as a joining member, and was unanimously elected. During the exaltation Comp. Harris, Scribe E., performed the duties of Principal Sojourner in a very creditable manner, and the Principals and other officers did their duties admirably. After the exaltation, the election of officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with. The result was the following appointments: Comps. Mayle, Z.; Tuton, H.; Webb, J.; J. A. Browne, Scribe E.; G. H. Wood, Scribe N.; J. J. Harwood, Principal Sojourner; Handley, Treas.; and G. M. Lofthouse, Org. The by-laws of the chapter having received the approval of the Supreme Grand Council, were passed; and at the conclusion of the business, the companions adjourned to banquet, a very pleasant evening being spent. During the evening there was presented to the chapter by Comp. Lofthouse, on behalf of Comp. Tibbits, P.M. 1242, a set of Royal Arch candles, beautifully ornamented with a pattern similar to the chequered scarf worn in Royal Arch Masonry.—Isle of Man Times.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Bon Accord Lodge of Mark Masters. A meeting of this distinguished lodge was held on the 1st instant, at Freemasons' Tavern, under the presidency of the esteemed W.M., Bro. Magnus Ohren, P.G. Steward. Present: Bros. Richard Spencer, P.M., as S.W.; Edward M. Haigh, J.W.; Edward Baxter, P.M., as S.D.; George Payne, I.G.; Mortimer Davis, P.M.; Henry Empson, P.M., Treas.; Frederick Binckes, P.M., Sec.; and several other brethren. Visitors: Bros. the Rev. W. J. Martyn, W. J. Hughan, and R. J. Spiers. Ballots having been taken for Bros. Frederick Davis, of Craft Lodge 1017, and the Rev. Thomas Robinson, P.P.G. Chap. Camb., those brethren were admitted and regularly advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master. Bro. Captain George Barlow was also elected a rejoining member. A proposition to consider the advisability of holding a summer banquet was deferred. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet. After the removal of the cloth, Her Majesty's health was given and cordially received. The W.M. then gave the next toast, "The Health of the M.W. Grand Mark Master, the Rev. G. Raymond Portal," and in doing so, observed that, at the last meeting of the Bon Accord Lodge, the G.M. had done them the honour of visiting the lodge, and speaking of the charity fund—expressing his desire that Mark lodges should possess alms-boxes, which should be sent round at every meeting of the lodge. The W.M. stated that he had not been unmindful of those remarks, and he had the pleasure that evening of presenting to the lodge the box now placed before them. So long as he was the Master—and he hoped the W.M.'s to follow him would observe the custom—he intended that the box should be sent round immediately after the toast of the M.W.G.M. of M.M., that it might be borne in mind that so good a custom had been introduced by their M.W.G.M., the Rev. G. R. Portal.—The box, a very handsome one, designed by the W.M., and manufactured by Bro. Richard Spencer, bore the following inscription: "Bon Accord Lodge—Present by Bro. Magnus Ohren, W.M., 1871." The other toasts of the evening were duly proposed in excellent style by the W.M., and after a very pleasant evening, the brethren separated.

To Brethren of "the Mystic Tie."

A Married Clergyman (M.A. Cantab.), ætat 38, with wife and three children entirely dependent upon him, and having been a CURATE for fifteen years, would be extremely thankful to some kind, influential Brother if he would get him presented to a SMALL LIVING. Advertiser would gladly give, as a token of gratitude, all he possesses (which is about £150 in the Funds) towards some Masonic charity, or some good work connected with the parish. Acceptable Reader and Preacher, with no extreme views. Highest clerical and lay Testimonials. References also to the Masonic Lodge of which the advertiser is Chaplain.—Address, X. ## Answers to Correspondents.

We have received several communications from Bro. Yarker and others, relative to the "Ancient and Accepted Rite," the extreme length of which would in any case preclude their insertion. However, the whole subject will soon undergo analysis at our own hands, and we therefore content ourselves with acknowledging articles for which we can find no space.

A worthy brother is thanked for sending us what appears to be extracts from a Masonic print. With these we shall also probably deal when time and opportunity permit, although possibly the waste-paper basket were the more fitting receptacle for such mendacious rubbish.

E. WHITE, BATH.—We will give your letter careful attention, and when in possession of the full facts, purpose dealing with them fairly, honestly, and impartially.

MESSRS. LETTS & Co.—Thanks for the interesting copy of the letter from Paris, sur ballon monte. We will write a paragraph on the subject.

BRO. DELFRASSE.—You will have gathered our opinions from the leader of last week, and we must therefore decline inserting your lengthy letter, which can do no good, and may possibly lead to mischief. The ideas of English brethren and of Masons in some parts of the Continent differ materially as to what questions become proper subjects for Masonic discussion, and as we agree with the reticence on political matters which has so long obtained in England, we cannot espouse your case.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

THE "MASONIC FEMALE ORPHAN SCHOOL," DUBLIN.

WE know too little of the working of Freemasonry in Ireland, and as a natural result English brethren take but slender interest in the progress of the Order in the sister country. It has long been the practice in England to excite a healthy emulation amongst the lodges by reports of their proceedings in Masonic journals; and by the judicious publication of general information respecting the Fraternity, the non-Masonic portion of the community can readily form ideas of its utility and importance. There may be good and cogent reasons for the adoption of dissimilar measures in Ireland—one of the reasons which we have heard urged being the desire to avoid attracting openly the polite attentions of the Ultramontane party, who, unhappily, exercise so much sway over the minds of the Irish people. This, however, is an age when men, and especially organized bodies of men, are anxious to display their merits to the best advantage, and the policy of hiding one's light under a bushel may be very fairly questioned.

Every profession—nay, almost every considerable trade—has its organ; every section of political, literary, or religious feeling is represented in the public press, and with the best possible results to the interests involved. We are competent to affirm of our own knowledge that non-Masons are frequently induced to speak of Freemasonry with respect when they observe among the list of its adherents the names of men of recognised greatness in the state or in the republic of letters. "I had no idea he was a Mason," is the oft-repeated remark; "it must be a good institution, or such men as my Lord Bishop would not belong to it." For instance, the Americans are justly proud of their Washington, and the American Craft delight in quoting his Masonic sayings and in treasuring up the relics of his Masonic career.

We maintain, therefore, that too much obscurity, too much affectation of secrecy, in legally-communicable Masonic information, is injurious to the well-being of the Order. No one can dispute the assertion that the vastly-increased support now extended to the Masonic Institutions of England is mainly attributable to the energy and perseverance with which their claims have been placed before the brethren for some years past, and the more those claims are ventilated and discussed the greater will be the advantages to the Institutions. This brings us to our theme.

We question whether the immense majority of the English Craft know that there is such an establishment in existence as the "Masonic Female Orphan School," Dublin. And yet it is not a creation of yesterday, having been founded so far back as 1792, four years after the formation of its English prototype, then known as the Royal Cumberland School for Female Children. We are certain that if its objects and requirements were only made clear to brethren of affluence in this country, there are many who, while not deserting the cause of our own admirable Institutions, would nevertheless cheerfully help the orphans of Freemasons hailing from the sister Grand Lodge of Ireland. From a brief statement issued by the Governors of the School, we learn that

The children are lodged, fed, clothed, and educated. Their religious and moral training is most carefully regarded. They are thoroughly instructed in all the branches of a sound English education, the rudiments of French and drawing; and music to such as evince a natural taste for it. They are taught all the practical details of household economy, and particular attention is paid to plain needlework—the pupils make up their own clothes, and perform the principal portion of the domestic work of the house. They are trained to habits of order, neatness, and regularity, so that they may become useful members of society when they leave the school; and it is most gratifying to be able to report that many of its former inmates are now comfortably and respectably settled, and some have shown their high appreciation of the value of the Institution by contributing regularly to its support. The number of pupils at present (December, 1869) is thirty-nine, the majority of whom are the orphans of brethren belonging to country lodges. By far the greater number of these pupils are the offspring of parents whose position in life gave them little reason to apprehend that their children would ever be thrown on the charity of the Order. It is to be feared that the value and importance of this Institution, and the strong claims it possesses on every member of the Masonic Order, are not sufficiently known or felt by the brethren, especially those of country lodges, as the list of subscriptions shows that, of the many thousand members of the time-honoured Craft residing in Ireland, but very few, comparatively, have manifested their sympathy in the cause of the orphans of their brethren by aiding in the support of an Institution in which every member of the Order has a common interest, and which has been, by a competent authority, pronounced to be "an honour to the Institution by whose liberality it is supported, and a credit to the city in which it is located."

We echo the "fear" expressed in the above remarks, but trust that the day will soon dawn when every Freemason shall thoroughly realise his obligations by acknowledging the force and power of those sublime precepts—Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, which are beautifully defined in our Masonic lectures. We are glad to notice the names of two Past Grand Deacons of the Grand Lodge of England amongst the Vice-Presidents of the Dublin Masonic School—we allude to Brothers Gumbleton and Snell—and we trust that their good example will influence many other English Masons to contribute to so deserving an Institution.

From the rules we learn that—

Thirty pounds paid in one year, or fifty pounds in three payments, entitle the donor to become a Vice-President of the Institution, with the privilege of three votes for each vacancy at every election.

Ten pounds in one year, or three successive annual payments of four pounds, constitute the donor a Governor for life, with the privilege of one vote for each vacancy at every election. An extra vote is allowed for every additional ten pounds.

One pound per annum constitutes the donor a Governor for the year in which such payment is made, and entitles him to one vote for each vacancy at every election. An extra vote is allowed for every additional pound paid.

Ten pounds paid in one sum for any of the officers of a lodge or chapter constitute such officer for the time being a Governor, with the privilege of voting similar to Life Governors.

One pound paid annually for any of the officers of a lodge or chapter constitutes such officer a Governor for the year in which such payment is made, with the privilege of voting similar to Annual Governors; when not otherwise directed, the Secretary of the lodge or chapter for the time being is the officer entitled to the privilege of voting.

We should like to see something done by the English Craft in aid of this good work, and therefore have great pleasure in setting its claims before our readers. No more acceptable evidence of the friendly and fraternal relations which happily subsist between the Grand Lodges of England and Ireland could possibly be given than a fair list of English subscribers to the Dublin Masonic School, and we believe that if some influential brethren were to adopt and advocate the cause a goodly list would be speedily forthcoming.

We repeat that our own Masonic Institutions have the first claim, but there are many who could, and we feel confident would, contribute their guineas to a kindred institution in the sister island.

BRO. CARPENTER, BRO. HUGHAN, AND "HELE," ETC.

My old friend, Bro. Carpenter, must pardon me in writing so briefly in THE FREEMASON for March 4th respecting the words "Hele, Conceal, &c." It is impossible to do justice to his remarks (and certainly most accurate explanations) in the above journal for February 18th, without a complete consideration of the whole O.B., which could not be done in the pages of THE FREEMASON. I, however, fully support the views so ably propounded by Bro. Carpenter, and think the W. Masters of lodges would do well to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest" them, as I have heard the word "hail" often erroneously used instead of "hele," and so of other words equally important.

Although I termed the words "hele, conceal, &c.," or "evasion, equivocation, &c.," as apparent synonymes, I do not consider them really synonymous, but actually used to convey different and distinct promises respectively; although I also think the fact of three such words being employed is for the purposes of giving additional weight, solemnity, and importance to the O.B.

Bro. W. Carpenter is writing for the benefit of many by such able articles.

THE A. AND A. RITE AND THE TEMPLAR.

Excuse my reminding you that it is now several weeks since the last article on the degrees of the A. and A. Rite appeared, and it was then promised that the subject should be returned to.

In the meantime I should be obliged by information as to:—

1. The qualification for the 30°? The 31°, 32°, and 33° are, I believe, not strictly Masonic, i.e., there is no ritual, but they are simply administrative.

2. Does the Templar rank as one of the degrees of the A. and A. Rite, and do the S.G.C. claim the right to confer it? I am aware the right is not exercised, as in the case of the Craft degrees; but do not know whether it is merely dormant, but claimed.

3. Do not some old Templar encampments give "Kadosh" (or the 30°) or something similar?

4. What is the "Ne Plus Ultra Degree?" the 18° or 30°? This question seems absurd; but I have heard the 18° called so, and wished to know if it was correct? P.M.

[We shall be happy to give you the required information in our next number.—ED. F.]

If the enclosed extracts should be considered sufficiently curious, perhaps you will give them a place in your valuable paper. They are taken from an old book entitled "Every Young Man's Companion," which was printed in 1769, and is in my possession.

CURIOUS.

"THE MYSTERY OF FREEMASONRY EXPLAINED."

"Wheresoever Masonry is established there is a Grand Master. The person who now enjoys this dignity in Great Britain is the Duke of Chandos. He governs all the lodges, and delivers the laws of the society to the several Subordinate Masters. He holds a meeting or lodge when he thinks proper. This is generally the second Saturday in every month in summer, but oftener in winter.

"The other lodges meet regularly twice a month in winter, and once a month in summer. The expense of these meetings is defrayed by the quarterly payments of the members, which are from three shillings and sixpence to five shillings.

"There are also quarterly meetings, when the Wardens of every lodge in and about London bring in different sums of money for the Treasurer-General for charitable uses. But these charities are confined to Masons only, who are occasionally assisted with five, ten, or twenty pounds. Smaller sums are given to indigent members in proportion to their wants and long standing. Large sums are likewise sent in from lodges in the East and West Indies; whence accounts are transmitted of the growth of Masonry."

It goes on to state the positions of the several officers in the lodge—"Every brother has an apron of white skin."

"The brethren take place according to seniority, and have before them wine, punch, &c. This done, after a few minutes, the Master opens the lodge thus—"

Then is described the manner of opening a lodge, which is nearly similar to the present mode. The Master then continues:—

"This lodge is open in the name of Holy St. John, forbidding all cursing, swearing, or whispering, and all profane discourse whatever, under no less penalty than what the majority shall think proper.

"The Master then gives * * * upon the table with a wooden hammer, and puts on his hat, the other brethren being uncovered. They then sit down, eat, drink, and smoke promiscuously."

The book goes on and purports to give a description of initiation, with the signs, &c., of an Entered Apprentice to the Installed Master.

THE "LITTLE TESTIMONIAL FUND."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the Freemason's Magazine and Masonic Mirror of the 4th instant, "A Craft Mason" writes what he calls a reply to my letter published in your paper a few numbers back. He says, "I can, and do, thoroughly appreciate the de mortuis nil nisi bonum theory, but if that is to signify the living as well as the dead, then we shall all soon become dead alive." He does not seem alive to the fact that this is no answer to mine. I did not ask him to speak good of the living, but to cease to speak ill of those brother Masons against whom he may entertain feelings of animosity, without sure information and full conviction that they are unworthy.

The letter has three paragraphs; the second is another silly remark on the Grand Secretary, and the last apparently shows where the shoe pinches, viz., that others have done as much for Masonry as Bro. Little, and have had no solid testimonial. If "A Craft Mason" be one of the number, I can understand the paragraph—he has not had his back scratched, and he won't scratch the back of any one else. One would think also that THE FREEMASON had a share of his animosity, for instead of saying "a letter by Bro. Magnus Ohren, published in THE FREEMASON," he says "a letter signed 'Magnus Ohren,' published elsewhere." But perhaps he is carrying out the theory he professes to appreciate, and looks upon the back numbers as dead and gone, and is silent as to its naughty deeds in bringing to light virtues in the living which all cannot or will not see.

I am, yours fraternally
MAGNUS OHREN, W.M. 452, &c.

SUBORDINATION IN THE HIGHER DEGREES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to a correspondence in your admirable paper touching Bro. Yarker and his relations with the Supreme Grand Council, from which it appears that he has been acting on the well-known axiom, "If you have no case abuse the plaintiff's attorney." Bro. Yarker appears to have followed this advice to the letter, since he has thrown a good deal of dirt at the S.G.C., no doubt hoping some will stick.

It appears that Bro. Yarker has violated his obligation to that supreme body by seeking to give degrees belonging to the A. and A. Rite in opposition to the Council, and, as a consequence, he has been very properly expelled the Order. Bro. Yarker objects to the expulsion, on the ground that the S.G.C. is a self-elected body, and lays down the dictum that it is usually considered good Masonic law that the governed should have some voice in the election of such high functionaries. Perhaps Bro. Yarker will tell us what part Craft Masons have in the election of their Prov. Grand Masters; what power they possess in the selection of Grand officers and Prov. Grand officers? Bro. Yarker must say what he knows is not true when he urges that the S.G.C. has no accrediting diploma but the self-created function of receiving fees. The Council derives its charter from the Supreme Grand Council N.J., United States, which charter can be seen by any member of the higher degrees at the offices of the S.G.C., Golden-square. It is rather late in the day to talk of the so-called Supreme Grand Council, and to say that as a Commander of the old Ne Plus Ultra he has as much right to suspend the so-called Supreme Grand Council as they have to expel him.

Everyone knows that the Rose Croix, which itself was called the Ne Plus Ultra degree, was given with the Kadosh (30°) in the old Knights Templar encampments, but I deny that the latter was ever given in the Rose Croix chapters, or under a Rose Croix charter, apart from the Temple degree. When the Supreme Grand Council was established in England, it assumed, very properly, the exclusive control of those degrees which belonged to its own rite, and Grand Conclave, which is the governing body of the Templars, never disputed its right to do so, or professed to have power to confirm them. Freemasonry would be soon in a state of anarchy if every Mason or every lodge thought fit to give, or professed to give, whatever degrees it liked, and to be accountable to no one.

I am sorry to see that the force of evil example is soon felt, and that some of the members of the Rochdale Chapter of Rose Croix, have held a meeting for the purpose of conferring the 30° and 32°, which they have no more right to give than the M.A. or D.D. of Oxford and Cambridge. The Craft in general must have a very good idea of what these so-called degrees are worth when I inform my brethren that I have learnt, on very good authority, that the sum charged to such candidates as may be gulled will not exceed 1s. 6d.

The Supreme Grand Council was never in a stronger position than at present, some of the most distinguished Masons in England having recently joined the A. and A. Rite, including names of noblemen and savans famous throughout Europe. That distinguished body is in accord, I believe, with every Supreme Grand Council in the world, and the attacks of men who have broken their solemn obligations and violated their sacred word of honour will do nothing but bring down upon the heads of the offenders against all Masonic law the contempt of all true Freemasons.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,
A MASON WHO BELIEVES IN HIS OBLIGATION.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE OPENING OF MASONS' HALL TAVERN.

On Friday week a banquet of the choicest description was given by the gentlemen who frequent Bro. Gosden's, Masons' Hall Tavern, Basinghall-street, to celebrate the close of the first year of his proprietorship of this restaurant, and to express their entire gratification at the way in which all their tabernal wants are attended to. Nearly fifty gentlemen sat down to the repast, which fully sustained the high character which Bro. Gosden earned while he was manager at Freemasons' Tavern. A great number of those who were present were brethren of the Masonic Order, but there were many others who did not belong to the Fraternity. Among the company, who were presided over by our Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, we observed Messrs. F. Binckes, S. Rosenthal, W. Roebuck, W. Paas, D. M. Dewar, A. Macnamara, Joseph Armstrong, J. A. Farnfield, Councillor Thomas Beard, Dudley Rolls, Kenyon Wilson, Councillor Dearsley, Lemaitre, G. Allen, Morton, W. Jones, H. Keene, and J. Roughan, H.M. Customs, Comptroller of Accounts Office, London Docks.

The dinner was served à la Russe, a style which was always Bro. Gosden's peculiar forte, and which served to display his admirable taste in the arrangement of fruit and flowers. The primary vice-chair was occupied by Bro. F. Binckes, and the secondary by Mr. Keene.

At the conclusion of the dinner,

The Chairman proposed the usual loyal toasts, and after the drinking of these, gave "The Army, Navy, Militia, and Volunteers," who, he said, whatever might happen to their native country, would always be found ready to defend our coasts.

Bro. J. A. Farnfield, as a member of the volunteer force, responded. The doings of the army and navy were so well chronicled in English history that the few words he might utter would not enhance the estimation in which they were held by all. The volunteers and the militia were as yet an untried army, but he was sure that if, which he trusted God would avert, it should be necessary for them to take the field, they would be found ready to do so.

Bro. Binckes proposed "The City of London," which, he said, occupied a position second to none throughout the universe. He was much delighted to find that among the company around him were gentlemen intimately associated with the corporation by holding important offices in it. Two nights ago he took part in a celebration (the annual festival of the Masonic Boys' School), at which a great many of the members of the House of Commons assisted, and it was a pleasing thing to find that Freemasonry was so distributed that scarcely any body of gentlemen could sit down together without some among them being Freemasons. It was a common answer one received, when asking the question what business any person was, that he was "something in the City." To himself he had a notion that it was of importance to be "something in the City;" but he had still further a notion that it was of higher importance to be "somebody in the City," and he apprehended that any one charged with duties such as those which fell to members of the Common Council, held an important position, as they were chosen by their fellow-citizens for their social status and intellectual merits. He would specially mention, in connection with this subject, the names of Mr. Councillor Dearsley and Mr. Councillor Thomas Beard, wishing to the Corporation of the City of London all the success that could possibly attend the administration of those affairs which were entrusted to the City. He felt utterly powerless to do that justice to the toast which it deserved. It had occupied the attention of the most eminent statesmen of this country whenever they had been received as visitors on Lord Mayor's Day, and whenever this toast was given it had taxed the powers of the greatest orators in the land how sufficiently to state their obligations to the City of London. Amid "the wreck of empires and the crash of worlds" the Corporation still held its own, and he hoped would continue to hold its own for many years to come. He would not go into the question of what reforms were necessary, but he would say that the Corporation of the City of London had earned for itself in the past a niche in history that we should never forget ourselves or that would never be forgotten by our successors, even if we were spared—and he hoped we should not be spared—to see that lamentable period when the enlightened New Zealander should sit on the broken arch of London Bridge and sketch the ruins of St. Paul's. He trusted that the meed of approbation to which the City was entitled would never be withheld by any assembly that was gathered together either for convivial or other purposes. The changes that took place in this ever-changing world were valued by those who were at the same time conservative and progressive. The City of London had undergone many changes. Those who had clung to their ancient privileges and were desirous of maintaining them, were desirous also to do their duty to their constituents, and at the same time to show that they were prepared to march with a progressive age. That was the true spirit of Conservatism (he was not speaking politically) by which this great Corporation of the City of London was actuated, and he would wind up his remarks with the great motto of that city, Domine dirige nos, feeling assured that as long as they acknowledged that powerful direction they never could go wrong.

Mr. Councillor Dearsley assured the company the Corporation endeavoured to do their duty to their constituents. Men of good character only could be elected, and the Corporation consequently maintained a high position. He hoped it always would; and with regard to the defences of the country, which had occupied its attention in times past, the same would be done again if the assistance of the City was required.

Mr. Councillor Thomas Beard appreciated the honour which had been conferred on him and his colleague. But to go to the more immediate business of the evening, the support of Bro. Gosden, as he was now located in the City, and had become a citizen, he (Mr. Beard) trusted that the same encouragement which was extended to him west of Temple Bar would follow him eastward of it.

The Chairman next gave "The Health of Mr. Gosden." In honesty and sincerity he would say he had never sat down to a better banquet in his life than that he had just partaken of. Nothing could excel it; for in addition to the capital dishes put before them, they were served up in the quick-and-hot style which was the great secret of serving a dinner. Every one, he was happy to say, was well satisfied. They were all good judges of what a dinner should be, but he had not heard a single complaint. It was a bold thing of Mr. Gosden to leave his West-end connection and try catering for the public in the City, but he relied on his friends following him, and his reliance was proved to be well founded. He had taken a place which had been long shut up, but as a young man, with plenty of spirit and energy, he did not despair of succeeding. His name was sufficient to secure support, and already a large number of Masonic bodies had taken up their quarters with him. One of the proofs of his success was his having taken to himself a wife. He (the Chairman) would therefore ask the company to drink "Health, happiness, and success to Mr. and Mrs. Gosden." Might they not only have opened this place, but might it be a source of maintenance to them and to those who it was to be hoped would succeed them in the shape of children; and as an old married man, he (the Chairman) would add, might the lady Mr. Gosden had taken to himself be such a partner that he would never want another. (Cheers.)

Bro. Gosden, in reply, said he thought it better not to have an opening dinner when he first came into the City, because he preferred seeing how the concern answered before he met his friends at the banquet table. Now that it had proved successful, however, he did not hesitate to meet them: and it appeared that he had given such great satisfaction at Freemasons' Tavern and other places that those who supported him there were now his most ardent supporters in his new home. He had done his best for the company who employed him as their manager at Freemasons' Tavern, and he would, if he possibly could, do better even than that where he now was. After being in companies for fifteen years he would not have been able to be in business for himself had he not had the support of the many kind friends he saw around him, and whom he heartily thanked for their encouragement. As had been remarked by the chairman, he had lately taken one of the greatest steps in life—that of getting married, and he believed the young lady he had selected would prove a thorough helpmate to him in business. (Hear, hear.) She would be a great assistance in achieving the success at which he aimed, and he trusted that success would be celebrated on many future anniversaries with the same éclat as the first anniversary had been celebrated that evening.

Bro. Binckes proposed "The Chairman," an officer at all public gatherings, who should have great geniality, a certain amount of bonhomie, a desire to maintain order, and at the same time not be too strict nor too relaxing. Tact, talent, courtesy, and a sense of the importance of the position of a chairman were wanted, and in their friend Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, they had a man who combined those various and varying qualities. A warm, personal friend of his own, though not always agreeing on certain points, he did not wish to portray him as a perfect man. There were none such in the room. While he (Bro. Binckes) loved those who strove after perfection, he was one of those who detested perfection, for he never came across men or women who thought themselves perfection who were not the most disagreeable creatures on earth. With our poor humanity, liable to temptation, imbued with weaknesses, we were all of us more or less striving to do the best we could in the various positions we occupied, and yet falling far short of the standard of perfection to which we wished to attain. Therefore we should extend the largest amount of indulgent consideration when we treated of a man as a chairman. Bro. Stewart was eminently qualified for such a position. He was a good, honest, staunch, sincere friend; he had come forward to do all he could to assist the success of Mr. Gosden's first anniversary banquet, and the large company gathered round him showed the estimation in which he was held.

The Chairman having replied, the "Health of the Vice-Chairman" was proposed, and responded to by Mr. Keene, and the company shortly afterwards separated.

The music provided was very superior, and the singing of Miss Fraser, Mr. Osborne, Mr. Cooper, and Mr. G. Allen, gave more than ordinary satisfaction.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

CONSECRATION OF THE "BYZANTINE" CONCLAVE, No. 44, AT LEICESTER.

Arrangements having been made for the opening of a Conclave of the Red Cross Order, in the Province of Leicestershire and Rutland, Thursday, the 2nd inst., was appointed for the performance of the ceremony at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester. Sir Kt. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., Intendant General for Lancashire (a native of Leicester), was the consecrating officer, assisted by Sir Kts. Phillips and Kennedy, of the Rose of Sharon Conclave, Birmingham, and James Mason Moore, of Derby.

The Conclave having been opened with the usual formalities, the following brethren were installed as Knights Companions of the Order, viz.: William Kelly, R.W. Prov. G.M., Leicestershire and Rutland; Rev. W. Langley, P.P.G. S.W.; Geo. Toller, jun., Prov. G. Sec.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, P.G. Chap.; Leonard Alfred Clarke, P.P.G.S.W.; Henry Deane, P.P.G. Registrar; Samuel S. Partridge, Prov. G. Registrar; William Sculthorpe, P.G. Steward; John Clarke Duncombe, S.W. 1265; and Charles Bembridge, P.G. Tyler; after which the historical oration was delivered by Sir Kt. Phillips.

Sir Kt. Dr. Moore, as M.P.S., then proceeded to consecrate the chapter in solemn form, after which he delivered an oration illustrative of Freemasonry in general and the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine in particular.

A College of Viceroys was then opened, and Sir Kt. Kelly, and subsequently Sir Kts. Langley and Toller, were admitted to the Priestly Order.

A Senate of Sovereigns was then formed, when Sir Kt. Kelly was enthroned as Sovereign of the Conclave, and on his nomination the honorary rank of Past Sovereign was conferred on Sir Kts. Langley, V.E., and Toller.

Sir Kt. Kelly was then proclaimed and saluted as Intendant General for Leicestershire and Rutland, after which he invested the following as the officers of the Conclave: Sir Kts. Langley, Viceroy; Toller, Senior General; Clarke, Junior General; Dr. Haycroft, High Prelate; Sculthorpe (elected), Treasurer; Partridge, Recorder; Duncombe, Standard Bearer; Deane, Herald; Bembridge, Sentinel.

The by-laws of the Conclave having been adopted, the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, W.M., No. 779, and P.G.J.W., and 19 other brethren, were proposed as candidates for installation. Sir Kt. Little, Grand Recorder of the Order, and Sir Kt. Moore, Intendant General for Lancashire, were elected honorary members; and a cordial vote of thanks was proposed to Sir Kts. Phillips, Kennedy, and J. Mason Moore for the valuable services rendered by them in constituting the Conclave, which promises to be a highly successful one.

This Order possesses more than ordinary interest to the Fraternity in the Province, from the fact that the first Lord Rancliffe, P.G.M. for Leicestershire, was its Grand Master in the last century, and Bro. Hyppolito Joseph Da Costa, P.G.M. for Rutlandshire, was subsequently its Grand Chancellor under H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex. The tunic has been adopted by the Conclave as the appropriate clothing of this Knightly Order.

On the conclusion of the business, the visiting Sir Knights were entertained at a banquet by the members of the Conclave.

Original or Premier Conclave of England.

A quarterly assembly of this Conclave was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen Street, on Monday, the 27th ult. when, in the absence of the M.P.S., Sir Kt. Trickett, whose professional duties at Keyham Dockyard precluded his attendance, the chair of C. was occupied by Sir Kt. Little, G.R., and among other Knights present, we observed: Col. Burdett, G.S.G.; W. H. Hubbard, G.T.; H. C. Levander, G.A.T.; Dr. W. R. Woodman, G.A.R.; Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., G.A.M.; T. Cubitt, G.H.; Capt. J. Bertrand Payne, W. Carpenter, Dr. W. C. Lucey, Major E. H. Finney, H. Parker, G.O., S. Rosenthal, T. W. White, G. Kenning, G. A. Ibbetsón, F. G. Bailey, W. H. Andrew, E. H. Finney, jun., W. B. Johnston, C. M. Gordon, J. Lewis Thomas, T. Kingston, and a large muster of other Knights who came purposely to rehearse the Red Cross drill.

Bros. R. S. Lines, P.M. 834, and J. Stephen Banning, P.M. 4. P.G. Steward, were duly installed Knights of the Order.

The Knights were then practised in the evolutions of the Order by Col. Burdett, Capt. Payne, A. J. Lewis, and Dr. Woodman.

It was proposed, seconded, and resolved unanimously, that the sum of ten guineas be voted from the Conclave funds to the "Wentworth Little" Testimonial, in recognition of the Recorder's services during the last six years. The Conclave was then closed, and meetings of the superior grades were held, when a considerable number of Knights were promoted to the rank of Viceroy or Sovereign. After the completion of the business, the Knights separated, the banquet having been postponed by arrangement to the day of the Triennial Grand Festival of the Order.

We are requested to state that Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine can be received into the K.H.S. in the Mount of Olives' Sanctuary, which will meet on Saturday, the 25th inst., at 3 o'clock, at Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C. The Mount of Olives' Sanctuary is attached to the Rose and Lily Conclave, which will meet on the same afternoon.

SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH.

Rifle Lodge, No. 405.—At the usual monthly meeting of this young and enterprising lodge, held on the 21st ult. (the R.W.M., Bro. James Torry Douglas in the chair), the honour of affiliation as full and free members was conferred on Bros. Alexander Hay, Grand Jeweller to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and Past Master to the Edinburgh Lodge Celtic, and Captain Gordon, of the Aberdeen Lodge, in recognition of their services to the Craft. There was a large gathering of the members of the lodge, and among those present during the evening were the following office-bearers and members of Grand Lodge, viz.: Bros. Mann, Senior Grand Warden; Alexander Hay, Grand Jeweller; John Lawrie, Grand Clerk; Major Ramsay, Grand Director of Ceremonies; Samuel Somerville, Representative from Grand Lodge of Ireland; L. Mackersy, Representative from Grand Lodge of Canada; and F. D. McCowan, Representative from the Grand Orient de France. The despatch of business being over, the lodge adjourned to refreshment, song and sentiment succeeded, and after spending a very happy evening together, the lodge was closed.

GLASGOW.

Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73.—This old lodge held its usual fortnightly meeting at the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 7th inst. Present: Bros. George McDonald, R.W.M.; G. W. Wheeler, Substitute Master; J. Muniz, Depute Master; W. Walton, S.W.; W. Davidson, J.W.; P. Thompson, Treas.; J. S. Ampleford, Sec.; and about thirty other brethren. The work done was the initiation of Mr. R. Banigan, which ceremony was performed in a very impressive manner by the new Master. A petition was afterwards read from a distressed brother, and the lodge unanimously agreed to recommend his case to the Committee of the Benevolent Fund of the Provincial Grand Lodge. The R.W.M. informed the brethren that there was a proposition before Provincial Grand Lodge for an alteration in the scale of lodge payments towards the Benevolent Fund, and requested them to consider the subject at their next meeting.

Shamrock and Thistle Lodge, No. 275.—The fifty-fourth annual soiree of this lodge was held in their hall, which was densely crowded by the members and their male and female friends. Bro. W. Phillips, R.W.M., occupied the chair, supported by Bros. the Rev. J. C. Stewart, J. Singleton, W. Peden, D. Rowan, H. Mathieson, J. Cunningham, J. Smith, and Peter Balfour. After tea, the Chairman addressed the company, and in the course of his remarks spoke of the prosperity of the Shamrock and Thistle Lodge in the past year, saying:— "After extending the right-hand of brotherly love and charity to those connected with our own lodge who were in need of it, we at the same time sent our free-will offering to the Continent to assist in relieving our brethren who are at the present moment wounded and dying in consequence of the disastrous war that has for some time been raging there, but which has now come to an end. But I hope that the time will soon come when the beautiful sentiments contained in the 133rd Psalm will be realised in our midst: "Behold how good and pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." We ought all to feel very proud at having our lots cast in such a peaceful nation, where from the Queen on the throne to the humblest of her subjects, all vie with each other in deeds of kindness and of love. (Applause.) The proceedings, which were of a highly social character, terminated with an assembly, which was led off by the R.W.M. and Mrs. Phillips.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES.

GRAND BALL AT LINCOLN.

A full-dress Masonic ball, on Tuesday, 7th instant, was held in the county Rooms, Lincoln, in aid of the Royal Institution for Girls. The number of Masons present was very large, and included the Duke of Manchester, P.G.M. Northamptonshire; the Duke of St. Albans P.G.M. Lincolnshire; Major Smyth, D.P.G.M. Lincolnshire; and members from every part of the province.

The Prince of Wales (who was on a visit to Mr. H. Chaplin, at Burgherst Chantry, Lincoln), arrived at the ballroom shortly before eleven o'clock, and was received in the vestibule by the Duke of St. Albans, Major Smyth, the Mayor (Bro. Pratt), and by the Masonic Stewards, viz., Bros. Watkins, W.M. 297; R. Hall, P.P.G.S.W.; C. Harrison, M.D., P.P.G.D.; J. Norton, P.P.G.D.; F. R. Larken, P.G.S.B.; R. C. Carline, P.G.A.D.C.; and G. M. Lowe, M.D.; and after a brief introduction entered the ballroom, preceded by the above-named officials in double file, the band (Coote and Tinney's) playing the National Anthem, and advanced towards the upper end of the room between two rows of Masons, who, in accordance with ancient custom, gave the Masonic Royal salute. On arriving at the Master's chair His Royal Highness intimated to the Mayor his wish to dance with his daughter, who accordingly, on being introduced, joined the Prince in a quadrille, having the Duke of St. Albans and the Duchess of Manchester as vis-à-vis, the Duke of Manchester with Miss Hulland and Lord F. G. Lennox with Lady C. Ker completing the set. The next dance was a valse, His Royal Highness graciously taking for a partner Miss Hulland, neice of the Hon. Secretary. The dancing then proceeded with great vigour, and for nearly two hours the Royal party continued their exertions to please others as well as themselves.

The Prince, who wore the badge of a P.G.M. of England, joined most heartily in every dance. Towards one o'clock the Masons were made aware that the Prince was about to retire, and it was so arranged that this movement was carried out with the same ceremony which characterized the entry.

Whilst waiting the arrival of Mr. Chaplin's carriage, the Duke of St. Alban's presented Bro. R. Hall, the Honorary Secretary of the Ball Committee, to His Royal Highness, who, shaking him meanwhile warmly by the hand, thanked him for the pleasure that had been afforded to him during the evening, and pronounced the ball "a great success," then having shaken hands with each Steward, the Prince entered the carriage, and was driven, in company with his host, to Burghersh Chantry.

Under the influence of the splendid music, and a bountiful supper of the most elegant style, supplied by Bro. Kitchen, the guests continued to keep up the spirit of the ball with the greatest enthusiasm until a late hour.

The following is a programme of the music, which was delightfully executed by Messrs. Coote and Tinney's band:—1, Quadrille (Overture)—2, Valse (Am schonen Rhein)—3, Lancers (Favourite)—4, Valse (Julia)—5, Galop (Soldiers)—6, Quadrille (Chilperic)—7, Valse (Carnavals Botschafer)—8, Lancers (French)—9, Valse (Language of Flowers)—10, Galop (Trumpeters)—11, Quadrille (Vagabond)—12, Valse (Wein Wieb and Gesang)—13, Lancers (Burlesque)—14, Valse (Snowdrops)—15, Galop (Fairy)—16, Quadrille (Le Petit Faust)—17, Valse (An der schonen Blauen Donan)—18, Galop (Encore)—19, Valse (Fantasca)—20, Valse (Court Beauties).

"I HAD been afflicted nine years with rheumatism and griping pains all over my body, so as to be unable to work, and had been confined to my bed several weeks when I heard of your Pain Killer, and got a bottle. I began using it at once, and within twelve hours was entirely free from pain, and able to walk about with ease.—GEO. HEWSON, Warrington, Aug. 1867.—To Perry Davis & Son."

ANSWERS TO THE MEMORIAL OF THE LODGE OF GLASGOW ST. JOHN,
No. 3 bis.

(Vide Memorial at page 662 of THE FREEMASON, Dec. 17th, 1870.)

The late Bro. James Pagan, Esq., member of No. 3 bis, and editor of the Glasgow Herald, acknowledged it to be a forgery, stating that he had been misled by the late Bro. James Miller, R.W.M. of St. Mark's Lodge, No. 102, whose remarks on the subject he had copied and quoted.

Bro. Wm. H. Hill, Esq., who has considerable knowledge of old documents, and who not only saw it, but also examined the oldest extant minute book of the Glasgow Incorporation of Masons, which extends from 1600 to 1681, considered it a forgery.

Even our late esteemed Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Captain Speirs, M.P., afterwards acknowledged in a letter to me that he had been misled in December 1867, and June 10th, 1868, says:—"I am very glad indeed that you have investigated the matter, and although we should have liked if our charter had been a genuine one, still as it is an imposition it is a good thing that it should be showed up."

Our Scottish Masonic historian Bro. D. Murray Lyon, designated it "The Malcolm Canmore Swindle."

Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, who I am happy to acknowledge as one of the foremost Masonic students of the day, observes:—"I consider the 'Macolm Charter' to have been written by zealous but mistaken Masons, not earlier than the latter part of the eighteenth century, in order to deceive the Fraternity. In that respect it is on a level with the noted 'Locke MS.' and other un-Masonic forgeries which are well suited to act as beacons to prevent Masonic students from being shipwrecked on the quicksands of credulity."

Bro. Hyde Clarke, of London, another eminent Masonic student, and Foreign Secretary Ethnological Society, Member American and German Oriental Societies, &c., says:—"From internal evidence the reputed Charter of Malcolm cannot be genuine."*

It is unnecessary to give the opinions of other parties who have condemned this pretended charter, only I might observe that one Glasgow historian who was misled by it observed to me that the Masons used to carry it about in their pockets, which of course would tend to soil it and give it the appearance of age, and, I have been told, it is much dirtier-looking now than it was about thirty years ago, so that between that and other things, the present dirty, tattered, smoked-up appearance of the parchment may be easily accounted for.

At page 484, vol. 2, of Cleland's "Annals of Glasgow," published in 1816, we find what has sent all the succeeding Glasgow historians astray, viz.:—"Glasgow Freemen Operative St. John's Lodge.—The members of this lodge having lately discovered an old musty paper in their charter chest,† procured a translation of it, when it turned out to be a charter in their favour from Malcolm III., King of Scots, by which they claim precedence over all the other lodges in Scotland. Accordingly, in the grand Masonic procession which took place at laying the foundation-stone of the Glasgow Asylum for Lunatics in 1810, the Glasgow Freemen Operative St. John's Lodge took precedence of all other lodges, except the Grand Lodge of Scotland."

Even the minutes of the Lodge of Glasgow St. John themselves condemn this document, for on March 3rd, 1868, a motion was passed that a committee be appointed to examine into the historical evidence and data of the antiquity of the lodge (I must here observe that my information was not derived through this committee, although I gave it information); and on 15th September, same year, a report was read, which is engrossed in the minute book of the lodge, and which, so far as this Malcolm writ was concerned, effectually shows up its falsehood (to anyone capable of understanding what historical demonstration is), as the copy of it which I enclose will show, or as may also be seen by a perusal of it at page 189 of THE FREEMASON for April 16th, 1870. Yet, notwithstanding all this, the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, as a body, still holds forth the Malcolm document as genuine! every lodge circular sent out being stamped with what, I am sorry to say, I can only look upon as the usual lie, viz., "The Lodge of Glasgow St. John, chartered by Malcolm III., King of Scots, 1057." And whether in so doing, under the circumstances, the Lodge of Glasgow St. John is guilty of falsehood, fraud, and wilful imposition, it is for the Grand Lodge to judge, or whether a stop should be put to its further propagation, and consequent discredit of the Order, I humbly submit that it is the duty of the Grand Lodge of Scotland now to decide; and which latter, as a member of No 3 bis, I most humbly and respectfully pray that it may do.

* Bro. James Stevenson, late of Glasgow, and as representative of the Freemason's Magazine there then, sent in the report of the so-called "810th Anniversary" above alluded to, says he has no hesitation in saying that this pretended charter is a forgery of recent date, say no older than last century.

† This "charter chest" appears to have been the box belonging to the Incorporation of Masons, made in 1684, but their minutes go back to 1600, and do not mention this pretended Malcolm Charter!

As to the "Second" head of the St. John's memorial, which states that it has been the invariable practice of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to concede as a right to the senior lodge of the province in which the ceremonial takes place the appointment of the operatives to carry the tools, I can only say that I am not aware of this, and point to the fact that, not only did the Most Worshipful the Grand Master Mason of Scotland, backed up by Grand Lodge, when assembled in the Chapter House of Glasgow Cathedral preparatory to laying the foundation-stone of the Albert Bridge, on June 3rd, 1870, allow the members of the Journeymen Lodge, No. 8, to do so, but absolutely refused to allow the senior lodge of the Glasgow province to deal with the matter as it wished. Then, at the laying of the foundation-stone of the Paisley Free Library and Museum by the Most W.G.M. the Right Honourable the Earl of Dalhousie, on 27th April, 1869, we find the members of the Lodge Journeymen, No 8, carrying the tools, as also (vide page 423 of Grand Lodge Reporter, June, 1869) at the Industrial Schools, Mossbank, in 1868; Corn Exchange, Hawick, 1863; Wallace Monument at Sterling, 1861; and other places. So that, so far as precedent is concerned, the Lodge Journeymen, No. 8, can point to many places out of the Edinburgh province where they have carried the tools. Further, in looking over the Grand Lodge Books, we find the following law passed in 1783, which accords to the Lodge Journeymen a certain prerogative at all Masonic ceremonials, especially when the Grand Master is present, not only in Edinburgh but throughout Scotland, as the minute says: "It was moved that for some time past the Grand Tyler has been in use of carrying the mallet at the public processions of the Grand Lodge, and as that officer's attendance is often requisite on other matters of some importance, therefore it be a rule in all time coming that the senior member of the Lodge of Journeymen Masons, Edinburgh (out of office) carry the mallet behind the Grand Master in all future processions." Consequently, the carrying of the mallet by William Nielson, of the Glasgow Freemen Operative St. John's Lodge, at the laying of the foundation-stone of the Victoria Bridge at Glasgow on the 9th day of April, 1851, as mentioned in the first head of the St. John's memorial, was in direct violation of the above 1783 law, unless, indeed, the Lodge Journeymen, No. 8, voluntarily conceded the privilege, or onus, for the time being.

As to the "Third" head of the St. John's memorial, I would respectfully observe that the printed Grand Lodge Law, chap. xx., sec. 3, when taken in connection with the 1783 Grand Lodge minute above referred to, does not preclude, and has not precluded, the members of the Journeymen Lodge, No. 8, from carrying the mallet, &c., out of Edinburgh, for the words "Edinburgh and no other place," which the St. John's memorial pretends to quote, do not occur in this Grand Lodge Law, chap. xx., sec. 3. Therefore, their foundation in this case is so far a misquotation. And as to the members of No. 8 being "capable of carrying the implements in question," which the St. John's memorial would appear to fear, the upshot proved that, so far as capability was concerned, the members of No. 8 were just as "capable" of doing so at Glasgow as they formerly were at Paisley, Stirling, &c.

As to the "fourth" head of this memorial and its reference to Grand Lodge Laws, chap. xi., sec. 13, I would observe that, as I stated above, the decision of the Most Worshipful Grand Master on the occasion referred to was approved of by the members of Grand Lodge then assembled (myself included). And as to the assertion that "the chair in awarding precedence to the Lodge Edinburgh Journeymen, acted contrary to the laws of the Grand Lodge," I look upon that, under the circumstances, as a pure mistake; and as to the notion of altering the minutes of Grand Lodge from the foregoing imaginary data, that I consider to be absurd. The fact of the matter appears to me simply to be that if the St. John's Lodge wished it to be properly understood that it was the privilege of the Senior Lodge of a Province to look after the carrying of the tools at all Masonic processions in its district, it should have got a motion proposed to that effect, and so got the matter regularly settled; that such has not been done long ere now, is not therefore the fault of Grand Lodge, but is due to the remissness of the senior lodges themselves, including St. John's Lodge amongst the rest. Instead, therefore, of the St. John's Lodge asking, as is done in the latter part of their memorial, that the Grand Lodge should "declare and enact that the late assumption by the Lodge Edinburgh Journeymen, No. 8, of the (presumed) rights and privileges of the Lodge of Glasgow, No. 3 bis, was illegal and uncalled for," it is the opinion of a number of the members of No. 3 bis, including myself, that the conduct of the St. John's Lodge was neither so dignified nor Masonic as it ought to have been, and they may be very thankful that they were not ordered to apologise for their own proceedings then, for if redress be due from any quarter in relation to the proceedings at the ceremonial of laying the foundation stone of the Albert Bridge at Glasgow on the 3rd day of June, 1870, not to speak of former Masonic ceremonials in Glasgow, that redress, under the circumstances, is due from the Lodge of Glasgow, St. John's, No. 3 bis.

I must now apologise for replying to the request of the Grand Clerk at so great length, but as the pretensions of the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, and its pretended Malcolm Charter have been thrust forward so often and so prominently on so many occasions, I considered it would be better to enter into the matter fully and distinctly, so that any one not otherwise acquainted with the subject might be able to understand it. Some brethren have signified to me that, seeing I am a member St. John's Lodge myself, I should not therefore expose any of its faults, but I consider it to be no part of true Freemasonry to smother up the truth and to allow a lie to pass current as truth, more especially when the means are at hand to expose it. What I have said has simply been written in order to elucidate the truth, and truth, as we all ought to know, is one of the great foundations of all true Freemasonry. Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to do what I could in a fair and honest manner to uphold the dignity and status of the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, of which I have the honour to be a member and Past Office-bearer, but we must strive to build up that dignity and status upon a sure and legitimate foundation, and seeing that, as I have already said, the Lodge of Glasgow St. John got its status of No. 3 bis upon the 1628 Roslin Charter, it follows therefore that that status is not affected by the declaration of the unworthiness of this unfortunate Malcolm document. It has been the misfortune of the present members of No. 3 bis to suffer for the faults of their predecessors; but I hope that, aided by the counsel and assistance of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and guided by the evidence adduced, the members of the Lodge of Glasgow St. John, No. 3 bis, will now honourably acquiesce in such a decision upon this matter, as will settle it, humanly speaking, for ever.

I am, most respectfully,

Sincerely and fraternally yours,
W. P. BUCHAN,

Past Senior Warden No. 3 bis, Proxy
S.W. No. 432, and Grand Steward
Grand Lodge of Scotland.

CAUTION TO THE CRAFT.

Almoners of London and other lodges are desired to be cautious with respect to Charles Couch and George Gibbs. Reasons why can be had of

J. BIRD,
Almoner for Plymouth, Stonehaven, and Devonport.

THEATRICAL.

DRURY LANE.—"Amy Robsart" and "The Dragon of Wantley," will only be played for two weeks. All who wish to see these attractive pieces should book their places early, so as to prevent disappointment.

HAYMARKET.—The programme remains unchanged during this month. "The Wolf and the Lamb," "The Palace of Truth," "Uncle's Will," and "Blue Devils," are the pieces performed to crowded houses.

VAUDEVILLE.—No change has taken place in the programme at this popular theatre. "Chiselling," "Two Roses," and "Elizabeth," are sufficiently attractive to fill the theatre with a large audience every evening.

The M.W. Grand Master has sanctioned the alteration in the time of meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence from 7 to 6 o'clock, at which time it will in future be holden.]

THE name of Colonel Whitwell, M.P. for Kendal, and Grand Preceptor, was accidentally omitted from the list of knights present at the General Grand Conclave of the Red Cross Order.

BRO. J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor of the American Freemason, is now engaged in compiling a General Masonic Register of the Lodges and Grand Lodges in North America, which will contain such useful and necessary information concerning the 6,000 Masonic Lodges and the 45 Grand Lodges of the North American Continent, as is suitable for general circulation, compiled from the reports of the Secretaries now in office in the various lodges of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, with an appendix comprising most useful Masonic Memorabilia. It will be published by the American Masonic Publishing Association, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati; price, one dollar.

THE MASONIC HYMN.

(Extracted from "Ancient Poems, Ballads, and Songs of the Peasantry of England;" edited by ROBT. BELL.)

This is a very ancient production, though given from a modern copy. It has always been popular amongst the poor "brethren of the mystic tie." The late Henry O'Brien, A.B., quotes the seventh verse in his essay on "The Round Towers of Ireland." He generally had a common copy of the hymn in his pocket, and on meeting with any of his antiquarian friends who were not Masons, was in the habit of thrusting it into their hands, and telling them that if they understood the mystic allusions it contained they would be in possession of a key which would unlock the pyramids of Egypt! The tune to the hymn is peculiar to it, and is of a plaintive and solemn character.

Come all you Freemasons that dwell around the globe,
That wear the badge of innocence—I mean the royal robe,
Which Noah he did wear when in the Ark he stood
When the world was destroy'd by a deluging flood.
Noah he was virtuous in the sight of the Lord,
He loved a Freemason that kept the secret word;
For he built the Ark, and he planted the first vine,
Now his soul in heaven like an angel it doth shine.
Once I was blind and could not see the light,
Then up to Jerusalem I took my flight;
I was led by the Evangelist through a wilderness of care—
You may see by the sign and the badge that I wear.

On the 13th rose the Ark, let us join hand in hand,
For the Lord spake to Moses by water and by land,
Unto the pleasant river where by Eden it did rin
And Eve tempted Adam by the serpent of sin.

When I think of Moses it makes me to blush,
All on Mount Horeb, where I saw the burning bush;
My shoes I'll throw off and my staff I'll cast away,
And I'll wander like a pilgrim unto my dying day.

When I think of Aaron it makes me to weep,
Likewise of the Virgin Mary who lay at our Saviour's feet;
Twas in the Garden of Gethsemane where He had
The bloody sweat—
Repent, my dearest brethren, before it is too late.

I thought I saw twelve dazzling lights, which put me in snrprise,
And gazing all around me I heard a dismal noise;
The Serpent passed by me which fell unto the ground,
With great joy and comfort the secret word I found.

Some say it is lost, but surely it is found,
And so is our Saviour—it is known to all around;
Search all the Scriptures over, and there it will be shewn
The tree that will bear no fruit must be cut down.

Abraham was a man well beloved by the Lord,
He was true to be found in Great Jehovah's word,
He stretched forth his hand, and took a knife to slay his son:
An angel appearing said, "The Lord's will be done.

O Abraham, O Abraham, lay no hand upon the lad,
He sent him unto thee to make thy heart glad;
Thy seed shall increase like stars in the sky,
And thy soul into heaven like Gabriel shall fly."

O never, O never, will I hear an orphan cry,
Nor yet a gentle virgin, until the day I die;
You wandering Jews that travel the wide world round,
May knock at the door where truth is to be found.

Often against the Turks and Infidels we fight,
To let the wandering world know we're in the right,
For in heaven there's a lodge, and St. Peter keeps the door,
And none can enter in but those that are pure.

St. Peter he open'd, and so we entered in—
Into the holy seat secure, which is all free from sin—
St. Peter he open'd, and so we entered there,
And the glory of the Temple no man can compare.

The "Lorne" Lodge will be consecrated on Tuesday next, the 21st inst., at the Station Hotel, Sutton, at 3 o'clock p.m. precisely.

The consecration of the Lodge of St. John, No. 1343, took place recently at Grays, Essex, Bro. Henry Landfield being installed as Master; Bros. Rev. J. H. Bridge, S.W.; Richard Nicholls, J.W.; John G. Bond, P.M. 87, Treas.;
W. Bell, Sec.; David Robertson, J.D. Bro. James Terry, P.M. 228, 1278, acted as Installing Master, and Bro. George Bibby presided at the organ. There were also present many visiting brethren from Kent, Surrey, Middlesex, Hertfordshire, &c.; also several of the Grand Officers of the Province.

ERRATUM.—In the list of subscriptions to the Freemasons' Lifeboat Fund which we printed last week, for "Lodge of Prudent Brethren, 145, £5," read £5 5s.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Our long and trying winters undermine the health and prepare the way to premature decay when peccant humours are thoughtlessly permitted to infest the frame, from which at the dawn of spring they could readily be cast by these well-known long-esteemed Pills. The medicine addresses itself directly to the stomach, which it rouses to its highest healthy standard, perfects the assimilation of the food, and incorporated with its nutritive elements, enters the circulation and through it is brought in contact with every fibre and placed in a condition to remove all impurities. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse the blood, regulate any disordered organ, accurately adjust secretion and excretion, and gradually remove all corporeal imperfections.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. "Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

GALVANISM.—Pulvermacher's Monthly Record of Cures is now ready for the benefit of Sufferers, containing documentary evidence of remarkable Cures effected by Pulvermacher's Improved Patent Self-applicable Volta-Electric Chain-Bands and Pocket Batteries, and may be had on application to the Sole Inventor and Patentee—J. L. Pulvermacher, 200, Regent-street, London, W. A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution.—Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c.—[Advt.]

Reviews.

History of the Lodge of Hengist, No. 195.
By Bro. Rev. P. H. NEWNHAM, W.M.
London: Bro. R. Spencer, 26, Great Queen-street.

The historical records of lodges established many years ago must always prove interesting to the Craft, and more especially when the annalist is so capable of illustrating the subject as our Bro. Newnham, who is well and favourably known to our readers as an occasional contributor to THE FREEMASON. In tracing the history of the Lodge of Hengist we have no doubt Bro. Newnham entered upon a labour of love, and the information upon general Masonic progress which has been so industriously collected is extremely curious and valuable. If, in every old lodge, a competent brother could be found to fulfil a similar task, how many items of interest might be rescued from oblivion. As a specimen of the lucid and terse style of Bro. Newnham's narrative, we will quote next week his account of the celebrated Thomas Dunckerley, whose name appears on the warrant of the lodge.

We may add that the profits of this admirable work are to be given to the Building Fund of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and apart from the intrinsic merits of the "History" that fact is sufficient to ensure its cordial acceptance by the Craft.

The work is dedicated to the esteemed P.G. Master for Hants and the Isle of Wight, Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.

We are favoured by Bro. Spencer with specimen pages of his forthcoming reprint of the "Constitutions of 1722," and from the excellent manner in which the typography is executed, we augur well of the book as a whole.

The original copy of the Constitutions of 1722 is now, we believe, unique, and Bro. Spencer is its fortunate possessor. He is rendering a service to the Craft by its reproduction, and we hope to find that his labours will be appreciated by the Fraternity.

The price to subscribers will be ten shillings, and our Bro. the Rev. J. E. Cox, D.D., P.G. Chaplain, will supervise the reprint of the work.

THE A. & A. RITE AND THE TEMPLAR.

In answer to "P.M.'s" queries inserted in our last issue, we subjoin the following:—

1. No Prince Rose Croix is eligible to receive the 30th Degree unless he be a present or past M.W.S., or has been three years a member of the 18th Degree; excepting by special dispensation—the fee for which is two guineas.

2. The 27th Degree of the A. and A. Rite is called "Knight Commander of the Temple," and adherents of the Rite contend that it is the only legitimate Order of the Temple.

3. We are informed that some old encampments confer both the ancient "Rosæ Crucis" and Kadosh Degrees. The Baldwin Chapter of the Rose Croix at Bristol confers seven degrees.

4. The Rose Croix and Kadosh have both been called the Ne Plus Ultra, but the appellation more justly applies to the latter. The 33rd Degree is merely an amplification of the 30th, continuing the illustration and commemoration of the persecution of the Knights Templar by Philip the Fair and Pope Clement.

The Rose Croix and Kadosh are found as degrees in many Masonic rites and systems under various names.

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE Prov. Grand Master of Somersetshire, Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, has now definitely fixed Whit Tuesday (May 30th), for the purpose of laying the foundation-stone of an additional building at the West of England Sanatorium, Weston-super-Mare, with Masonic ceremonies. The additional building will probably cost about £10,000. It is expected that a large number of Masonic brethren from other Provinces will attend on the occasion.

ON Tuesday, the 14th inst., at the Commercial Dock Tavern, Russell-street, Rotherhithe (Bro. G. Bolton), Bro. N. Wingfield, P.M. 169 and P.M. 1155, 147, had a testimonial presented to him. Through his exertions the first Masonic Association was formed in the South-Eastern District. The idea originated at the Boys' School Committee Dinner Club, where, for years past, a plan has been carried out producing similar results. A large number of brethren were present.

SPRING.

AN ACROSTIC.

Sweet is it when winter leaves us
Pleasant lengthening days to view,
Radiant sunshine, beaming brightly,
In a sky of azure blue;
Nature's face is lovely ever,
God's works fade in freshness never.

Written by a Mason's daughter on the Scriptural text, "Pray without ceasing," which was presented to her during a season of affliction by a clergyman's lady.

Pray in the morning when first the light
Steals in the casement to greet thy sight,
When the golden rays of the rising sun
Seem to lead thy thoughts to that Holy One,
Whose gifts are the gifts of a Father's love,
Who has promised His children a home above.

Pray in the midst of thy daily care,
When thy crosses and trials seem hard to bear;
When earthly temptations assail thy soul,
And thy passions have need of self-control,
Plead for assistance to guide thy course
And keep thee from errors which leave remorse.

Pray in the soft, sweet twilight hour,
When the dew drops sleep on each fainting flower,
When the stars peep forth in the azure sky,
And the stillness whispers, Thy Father is nigh;
Kneel, at that moment of peaceful rest,
And plead that thy future life be blest.

Yes! pray in each season of joy or pain,
Think not thy prayers will be utter'd in vain;
Pray for thy lov'd ones—pray for thy foes,
Pray for assistance 'neath Life's woes,
Kneel at Salvation's golden gate
And for Christ's blessed answer wait.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

BY BRO WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

Any one at all conversant with the state of Freemasonry in Ireland in the early part of this century will be aware that the Grand Lodge was mismanaged to a very great extent. Of course it is not our province to keep this fact in the dark at the present time, for, in attempting to write the history of any period of Freemasonry, defects must be chronicled as well as virtues, seeing that the progress of the Craft is greatly dependent upon the laws and the character of the officers of the Grand Lodge being in harmony with the spirit and scope of the Institution. According to evidences we have had submitted to us, and judging from results, certainly Ireland was nothing like so well governed, Masonically, about 1810 as it is now, and even now a little more freedom would be appreciated by many. Although we would never countenance rebellion against a regularly constituted authority by members who have signified their adhesion to its jurisdiction and laws, and though we consider an obligation taken voluntarily by a brother is binding, and demands obedience to, or withdrawal from, the Society, yet we can quite imagine circumstances that would justify opposition to a Grand Lodge, so long as the brethren objecting refrained from starting a rival institution. In this respect the seceders from the Grand Lodge of Ireland did wrong, as also did the "Ancients" of England. Granting that there were reasons to complain of the "shameful mismanagement" existing in the Grand Lodge of Ireland early in this century, all the evils said to be connected with the government of the Craft would not form a sufficient plea to throw off allegiance and constitute a new Grand Lodge.

The obligation of fealty having been taken, it was simply for the discontented to seek a redress of their grievances by constitutional means, and failing in such an attempt, we would rather have withdrawn from the Body than have done wrong ourselves because others had done wrong also.

In order to understand the schism in the Grand Lodge of Ireland, we will now present a few authoritative documents, according to their chronological order as nearly as possible. The first is dated 12th December, 1805, and was issued by the regular Grand Lodge of Ireland. Even according to this account, there must have been much gross mismanagement of the funds of the Grand Lodge, and we can quite fancy the minds of the brethren could not have been easy under the circumstances. The revenue from 24th June, 1806, to 24th June, 1807, was £269 13s. 6½d., less £19 14s. 5d. owing to the Grand Treasurer, and yet in the latter part of 1800 upwards of £2,000 were owing by lodges in arrears, and the accounts had neither been settled nor audited for five years and a half! The communication is as follows:—

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND,
THURSDAY, THE 12th DECEMBER, 1805,
The Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master on the Throne.

The Grand Lodge met on emergency for the purpose of taking the following statements and observations into consideration, and the same having been read were unanimously agreed to, and ordered to be forthwith transmitted to the respective lodges in the kingdom.

PUBLICATIONS, grossly reflecting on the conduct of the Grand Lodge of Ireland and its Officers, have issued from an obscure and contaminated press—the productions of anonymous and despicable libellers—false in statement—unfounded in inference, and malignant in intent—they endeavour to deceive, pervert and revile.—Such attempts can do little mischief in the metropolis, where characters are known and facts can be resorted to.—It is at a distance that the injury works and its effects are to be deprecated.—To the Brethren and Lodges in the country, therefore, the following statements and observations are principally addressed:

AMONG many pretended grievances the separation of the offices of Deputy Treasurer and Deputy Secretary is held out as the chief, it is the unceasing theme of reprobation.

In the year 1767 the late Brother Thomas Corker was appointed Deputy Grand Secretary, and continued in that situation until his death, in the latter end of the year 1800, during which period he also acted as, and attempted to discharge the duties of, Deputy Grand Treasurer. The result naturally was an increase of perquisite to compensate this junction of offices, and great irregularity in the performance of their compound and incompatible duties.

Here it is necessary to protest that the slightest imputation is not intended against Brother Corker, who, during 33 years, acted to the best of his ability for the advantage of the Craft while he enjoyed health his exertions were unremitting, but even then he was unable effectually to fulfil the duties of Deputy Treasurer and Deputy Secretary.—The latter part of his life was embittered by affliction and disease.

Fees payable to the Grand Secretary by the Rules and Regulations of the 3d November, 1768*, Sec. X.	Fees which were increased at sundry times while Brother Corker acted as Deputy Treasurer and Deputy Secretary.
For a warrant £1 2 9	†For a warrant £2 5 6
For three members enrolled - 3 3	For a revived or restored warrant 2 5 6
Each member, for registry - 1 1	For three members enrolled - 8 1½
A member joining another lodge, for transferring - - 6½	Each member, for registry - 2 8½
For a Grand Lodge certificate - 1 1	Each member transferred - 1 1
	Grand Lodge certificate - 2 2
	Registering members of army lodges - 1 1

By this increase the average emolument to Brother Corker was about £300 per year, but as it was not specified what proportion of the increased fees were intended as a compensation to the Deputy Treasurer, no diminution took place when the offices of Treasurer and Secretary were separated. The Deputy Secretary now receives the entire.

On the death of Brother Corker the affairs of the Order were found to be in a state of the utmost confusion—the usual communications with the respective lodges of the kingdom had been neglected—an arrear of £2,000 and upwards was owing for Grand Lodge dues—and the sum of £446 10s. 9½d. for play-tickets, passed for the benefit of distressed free-masons—the accounts of the Order to the amount of £3,058 os. 6½d. had not been settled or audited for five years and a half. In this situation Brother Semple, at the request of the Treasurer, by extraordinary exertions and in the most satisfactory manner, arranged and stated the arrears due, and also Brother Corker's account as Deputy Treasurer, when a balance of £60 7s. 1d. appeared due to him thereon, so far as the slender materials and imperfect documents with which Brother Semple was furnished enabled him to do.

The arrangements made, and the regularity introduced, by Bro. Semple in the accounts and the method of keeping them, produced the most beneficial consequences, and it appeared of the utmost importance that the system thus introduced should be upheld. It was therefore, after a month's notice given for that purpose, Resolved by the Grand Lodge, on the 2d July, 1801, "That the Treasurer be empowered to allow his Deputy a salary of 50 guineas per annum, and also a poundage of £10 per cent. on the collection of all arrears due to the Grand Lodge up to the St. John's Day preceding, and £5 per cent on all moneys to be paid thereafter into the treasury of the Grand Lodge." Whereupon the Grand Treasurer, with the unanimous approbation of the Grand Lodge, appointed Brother Semple his deputy or assistant, as he was authorized to do by the Regulations of 1734, Rule XIII., Sec. 10, by which it is provided, "That the Treasurer or Secretary may each have a clerk or assistant, if they think fit," and under which provision the Deputy Secretary hath hitherto always been appointed. On the 24th June, 1803, Brother Semple resigned the office of Deputy Treasurer, having discharged its arduous duties in the most exemplary manner, and to the perfect satisfaction of the Grand Lodge.

For his services and the incalculable advantages resulting to the Order from his labours, he received the sum of £295 7s. 5d.; a sum, according to the opinion of eminent merchants most competent to appreciate the value, fall short indeed of remuneration adequate to his meritorious exertions.—After Brother Semple's resignation, on the 14th July, 1803, the Grand Lodge reduced the salary of Deputy Treasurer to £20 per annum, with £2 per cent. on all monies received at charity sermons and benefit plays, together with £5 per cent. on all other monies comprising the funds of the Order. In consequence of which reduction Brother Graham, the present Deputy Treasurer, receives about £40 a year for performing the duties of that most arduous and responsible situation which he fills with the entire approbation of the Grand Lodge to the great advantage of the Order.

By the accounts, which are regularly printed, it appears that from the 27th of December, 1800, to the 24th June, 1803, Brother Semple received, paid, and accounted for ...	£1888 5 4

And there is at present a funded property in Government stock, at £5 per cent., in the National Bank, for Grand Lodge ...	500 0 0

In the foregoing statement of money received, the sum of £903 18s. 7d. has been collected out of the arrear due at Brother Corker's death, and it is hoped more may still be collected.

It is to be observed, that since the appointment of a Deputy Treasurer, the sum due for tickets passed for benefit plays (except the last, which is not yet settled) does not in the whole amount to the sum of £5; and, further, that the £2 per cent. now allowed the Deputy Treasurer on the produce of benefit plays, has not amounted to £10, the sum formerly allowed the Grand Secretary.

By the foregoing statements, taken from the public accounts and proceedings of the Order, it is manifest that the funds are in a flourishing and progressive state of improvement, and that this is to be attributed to the necessary and judicious separation of offices, and the unremitting exertions and attention of those to whom the care and management of the funds have been entrusted.*

The conduct of the Grand Lodge in recently resolving to take the Royal Arch and Knights Templars degrees under its protection is another subject upon which the traders in libels display their falsehood, misrepresentation, and malignity.

Royal Arch Chapters and Knights Templars Encampments were hitherto held in this kingdom without the concurrence of the Grand Lodge, and not subject to any general or superintending control—hence want of uniformity in the practices and ceremonies of each degree—no authority to appeal to in matters of regulation—no power to redress in cases of complaint or grievance. To remedy these evils, which were very emphatically set forth in memorials from sundry Royal Arch brethren and Knights Templars, the Grand Lodge on the 5th day of September, 1805, agreed to the resolutions annexed.

The anonymous calumniators, persistent in untruth and uniform in perversion, have the hardihood to assert that these resolutions give to Blue Masons the power of controlling Chapters and Encampments, and granting warrants for holding them; but to men of common sense—to the plain understanding of any dispassionate and candid mind—it must be evident that such an inconsistency is expressly guarded against; as the Grand Royal Arch Chapter and the Grand Knights Templars Encampment are each exclusively composed of brethren (being members of the Grand Lodge) who are of those respective degrees.

To refute the other topics of anonymous attacks, it is only necessary to observe that the publications in question manifest throughout the most flagrant courage against truth and fact, in order to accomplish the most malevolent and evil designs.

It is the duty of the Grand Lodge to apprise the Brethren and Lodges of the kingdom of such designs, and to warn them against the machinations of depraved and wicked men.

The Grand Lodge is imperiously called upon to issue its paternal admonition, and guard the Craft against attempts intended to undermine the best interests of the Order, and injure the public and private characters of individuals who have disinterestedly and invariably, in all their actions,

JOHN LEECH, Grand Secretary.

Resolutions of the Grand Lodge, agreed to the 5th September, 1805, respecting

Royal Arch Chapters and

I. That for the purpose of establishing uniformity in the principles and ceremonies of the Royal Arch degree, and to avoid many irregularities which now prevail and have unavoidably resulted from the want of a controuling power to regulate the proceedings of the different Chapters in the kingdom: It is indispensibly necessary that the Grand Lodge should take that Degree under its immediate sanction and that warrants should be granted to such regular Lodges as shall make proper application; no person is to be admitted or initiated a Royal Arch Mason, under such warrant, except a Master Mason duly registered.

II. Until the first day of June next, the Grand Officers and Members of the Grand Lodge, being of the Royal Arch degree, shall constitute the Grand Royal Arch Chapter, and from the first day of June next the Grand Royal Arch Chapter shall consist of the Grand Officers and such Members of the Grand Lodge, being Royal Arch Masons, as represent or are officers of Blue Lodges that have warrants for holding Royal Arch Chapters in such Lodges as they represent.

III. That the Grand Royal Arch Chapter shall be invested with as full power and authority over Royal Arch Chapters and Masons of that degree as is exercised by the Grand Lodge of Ireland over warranted Blue Lodges and the Members thereof under its jurisdiction.—The Grand Royal Arch Chapter at all times regulating its proceedings, as much as possible, in conformity to the rules and regulations of the Grand Lodge.

IV. That a register of all warranted Royal Arch Chapters and the members thereof shall be kept.—One Guinea to be paid for each warrant; one shilling for registering a member; and two shillings for a Grand Royal Arch certificate.—These sums to be applied to the general funds of the Order.

V. That the Grand Treasurer be appointed Treasurer and Register of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter, and the Grand Secretary Secretary thereto.

Knights Templars Encampments.

I. That in order to establish uniformity in the principles and ceremonies of the Knights Templars degree, and to avoid many irregularities which prevail and have unavoidably resulted from the want of a controuling power to regulate the proceedings of the numerous Knights Templars Encampments in this kingdom, it is indispensibly necessary that the Grand Lodge should take that Degree under its immediate sanction and that warrants to hold Encampments should be granted to such brethren Knights Templars as shall make proper application; and no person is to be admitted or initiated a Knight Templar under such warrant except a Royal Arch Mason duly registered.

II. Until the first day of June next the Grand Officers and members of the Grand Lodge, being Knights Templars, shall constitute the Grand Knights Templars Encampment, and from the said first of June the Grand Knights Templars Encampment shall consist of such of the Grand Officers and members of the Grand Lodge as are Templars and members of Encampments held under warrants issued under the sanction of the Grand Lodge pursuant to the first resolution.

III. That the Grand Knights Templars Encampment shall be invested with as full power and authority over Encampments of Knights Templars and Masons of that degree as is exercised by the Grand Lodge of Ireland over the warranted Blue Lodges and the members thereof under its jurisdiction. The Grand Knights Templars Encampment at all times conforming in its proceedings, as much as possible, to the rules and regulations of the Grand Lodge.

IV. That a register of all warranted Encampments and the members thereof shall be kept.—Two guineas to be paid for each warrant; two shillings for registering a member; and three shillings for a Grand Knights Templars certificate. These sums to be applied to the general funds of the Order.

V. The Sublime Commander, for the time being, of each Encampment held under warrant granted pursuant to these resolutions shall be a member of the Grand Lodge, provided his election has been approved of by the Grand Knights Templars Encampment, and notice of such approbation transmitted to the Grand Lodge.

VI. That the Grand Treasurer be appointed Treasurer and Register of the Grand Knights Templars Encampment and the Grand Secretary Secretary thereto.

Applications for Warrants in the above degrees, and all communications respecting them, are to be made to John Leech, Esq., Grand Secretary, No. 20, French-street, Dublin.

BREAKFAST. — EPPS'S COCOA. — Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Adv't.]

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH of the Rev. Bro. JAMES ANDERSON, D.D.

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON,

Author of "Freemasonry in Relation to Civil Authority and the Family Circle."

There is no name of greater celebrity in connection with the history of Freemasonry than that of the Rev. Bro. James Anderson, D.D., the author of the "Constitutions of Freemasons," which ever since its publication, now almost one hundred and forty years ago, has been deemed by Freemasons in general an extremely valuable, and indeed, a standard work, of the highest authority on all questions concerning the laws and usages of the Craft. Dr. Anderson is also held in grateful remembrance by Freemasons throughout the whole world for the active part he took along with Dr. Desaguliers and others in the revival of Freemasonry in England in the beginning of the 17th century, when from a very low and declining state it was raised almost at once to great and previously unexampled prosperity, and began to extend itself over the whole world, its prosperity increasing and its extension becoming rapidly wider from year to year, till now the members of the Order are to be reckoned by tens of thousands, and its lodges are to be found in every civilised country. The readers of THE FREEMASON, it may well be supposed, must desire some information concerning one whose name has long been familiar to them all, and cannot but still be often brought prominently before them. The information which we possess concerning the life of Dr. Anderson is, unfortunately, more scanty than that which biographical dictionaries and other such works afford concerning many of his contemporaries far less eminent. Perhaps the publication of the present very brief biographical sketch may induce some readers to direct their attention to the subject, and to seek for future information in quarters of which the author has no knowledge, by which a desideratum in Masonic literature would be supplied.

Dr. Anderson was born at Aberdeen, Scotland, in the latter part of the 17th century, but the exact date of his birth is unknown. Nor do we know his parentage; but he was the brother—whether elder or younger is also unknown, but probably the elder, if we may judge from the dates of the publication of their respective works—of Adam Anderson, who was for forty years a clerk in the South Sea House in London, and finally rose to a high office in the service of the South Sea Company. The brothers seem to have possessed similar talents, and it would be hard to say which of them most excelled in ability for learned researches. Dr. Anderson is distinguished as an author, not only by his work already mentioned, "The Constitutions of Freemasons," but by another great work, evidently the fruit of much labour, entitled "Royal Genealogies; or, the Genealogical Tables of Emperors, Kings, and Princesses from Adam to these times," which was published at London, in 1732, in one large folio volume. His brother, Adam Anderson, was the author of the first work of any importance on the Commercial History of England—"An Historical and Chronological Deduction of the Origin of Commerce, from the Earliest Accounts to the Present Time, containing a History of the Large Commercial Interests of the British Empire"—which was published in two volumes folio, at London, in 1764, and is still of great value as a book of reference, being as remarkable for accuracy as for fullness of information on the subject of which it treats.

Dr. Anderson was educated at Aberdeen, and after passing through the usual curriculum of arts, either in King's College or in Mareschal College—although of which of them he was an alumnus is not known—he went on to the study of theology, and received license as a probationer or preacher of the Church of Scotland, probably from the Presbytery of Aberdeen. Of his early life nothing further is recorded in any work which has come under the notice of the present writer; but in 1710 he became Minister of a Presbyterian congregation in Swallow-street, London, in connection with the Church of Scotland, and from Swallow-street he and his congregation removed in 1734 to another meeting-house in Lisle-street, Leicester-fields. Of his life in London little more is known besides these few facts, except that he lived in a house opposite to St. James's Church, Piccadilly; that, like many others at the same date, he lost a considerable part of his property by rash speculations in the South Sea scheme; and that, probably from his dignified appearance and manner, he was often familiarly, although disrespectfully, spoken of amongst the Presbyterians in London as "Bishop" Anderson. He died on 23rd May, 1739.

Meagre as is the information which we possess concerning Dr. Anderson's life, there is enough of it to make the notion very improbable, which is essential to the maintenance of the 1717 theory, that he was guilty of deception, along with Desaguliers and others, in imposing upon the world a newly-devised system of Freemasonry as of great antiquity. It is not on slight grounds that such a charge should be brought against one who has been long in his grave, but who was certainly respected whilst he lived, and who held for many years the office of a minister of the Gospel. How much Dr. Anderson was respected, how highly his talents and learning were appreciated in his own day, may in some measure be inferred from the list of subscribers to his work on "Royal Genealogies," which begins with the name of His Royal Highness William Augustus, Duke of Cumberland, the second name being that of the Duke of Argyle and Greenwich, and the list including the names of many other noblemen and persons of distinction. That Dr. Anderson, although a Dissenting Minister, was respected even by dignitaries of the Church of England, appears from the occurrence of the names of some of them, as of the Right Rev. Dr. Chandler, Lord Bishop of Durham, in this list of subscribers.

The character of the man may be judged also by his works. Nearly every Freemason knows that in his Constitutions of Freemasonry, there is nothing but what tends to the encouragement of virtue; and to imagine the author of that work guilty of wilful and systematic deception, is to do violence to the laws of our own mental constitution, and to the feelings which must often in some measure control, and most beneficially control, our judgments. There is little, of course, in the work on Royal Genealogies from which any idea of the character of its author can be derived, except as to the patient laboriousness with which he must have prosecuted his studies, but in the dedication, which is to "The most High, Puissant, and most Illustrious Prince, Frederick Lewis, Prince of Great Britain, Prince of Wales, Prince and Stuart of Scotland," &c., &c., we find a few sentences which may perhaps be deemed indicative of the moral and religious sentiments of their author. He speaks of his being led "in compiling this work to admire and set forth the startling miracles of the Divine Wisdom and Providence in propagating the various nations of the earth from one common parentage, and in strengthening this original relation by subsequent ties and renewals of consanguinity, and in making both the union and dispersion of mankind, the rise and fall of empires, the virtues, and even the vices, of rulers, with all the numerous vicissitudes and seeming inconsistencies of human affairs subservient to the steady prosecution of one regular plan of unerring wisdom and goodness, to the exact accomplishment of the predictions of the Old and New Testament, and to the gradual dispersion of the light of true religion into the remotest corners of the earth." Again, he tells the youthful Prince that the study of history is fitted to put him in mind "that the stability of families, and the welfare of kingdoms, next under the blessing of God, depend on the wisdom, the application and personal virtues of Princes." Was the man who wrote this, it may be asked, a likely man to prosecute a scheme of imposture? Is he to be lightly suspected of such baseness? Those who pretend to honour him as one of the original authors of modern Freemasonry, are really guilty of traducing him, and, in oriental phrase, defiling his grave.

PROVINCE OF NORTH WALES AND SHROPSHIRE.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW LODGE AT WREXAM.

An interesting ceremony took place on Tuesday, the 14th instant, at Wrexham, and was numerously attended by brethren from Cheshire, Shropshire, North Wales, &c. The occasion was the consecration of the Square and Compass Lodge, No. 1336, by the R.W. Bro. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M. Strange to say, this prosperous Denbighshire town has never hitherto had an official connection with the Grand Lodge of England, and the circumstances under which the new lodge has been formed are somewhat peculiar. In the early part of last summer a traveller died at the Wynnstay Arms Hotel whose friends were not known to the landlord and could not be communicated with. It appeared, however, from documents in his possession that the deceased gentleman was a Master Mason belonging to a Birmingham lodge, and on the fact becoming known the brethren of Wrexham mustered in considerable numbers in full Masonic costume and followed the remains of their unknown brother to the grave. After the funeral the brethren held a meeting at the Wynnstay Arms, when the necessity and advantages of having a lodge in the town were discussed, and from that meeting—chiefly through the exertions of Bros. John Lewis, Walter Jones, and Albert Bury—there has arisen the present lodge, which promises to be flourishing and important. The petition to Grand Lodge was forwarded in July of last year, and the charter authorising the formation of the new lodge was received in September. Since then the numbers have been gradually increasing, and the consecration took place under the happiest auspices.

The ceremony was performed by R.W. Bro. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., M.P., in his capacity of Prov. Grand Master of North Wales and Shropshire, with the co-operation of Bro. E. G. Willoughby, P.P.G.J.W. Chester, as Installing Master. He was assisted by the following brethren in constituting the Provincial Grand Lodge: Dr. Goldsbro, P.P.G.S.W.; P. G. Bentley, P.G.C.; R. V. Williams, P.G.S.W.; G. W. Fisher, P.G.C.; J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W.; William Bulley, P.P.G.J.W.; &c., &c. The Square and Compass Lodge was duly opened in the drawing-room of the Wynnstay Arms. The officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge then entered the room and were received with the customary honours. The consecration ceremony was performed with due solemnity, amidst the sacred music of the organ and choir.

The following brethren were invested as officers of the new lodge: John Lewis, P.P.G.S.D., W.M.; Walter Jones, S.W.; Albert Bury, J.W.; J. F. Edisbury, Treas. and Organist; J. O. Bury, Sec.; Dr. T. Eyton Jones, S.D.; A. H. Reid, J. D.; W. Sherratt, I.G.; and Munro, Tyler.

Amongst the other members present were Bros. G. Bradley, W. Pierce, J. Norman, Caleb Lewis, C. E. Kershaw, Richard Chadwick, H. C. Murless, Wm. Jones, J. Wallis, J. H. Kidd, James Gladstone, J. B. Murless, and H. M. Dymock; and amongst the visiting brethren were J. E. Williams (P.M. 425), John M'Evoy (W.M. 721), E. H. Griffiths (P.G. Sec. Cheshire), W. H. Spaul (W.M. 1124), J. P. Owen (P.G.P.), A. W. Walker (J.D. 1124), C. Jennings (P.M. 789), J. L. Evans (1124), John Dennis (721), Edward Friend (1289), R. V. Evans, H. O. Jones (P.P.G.S. Cheshire), T. E. Hignett (W.M. 537), William Oliphant (Royal Denbigh), S. W. Guerin (Mersey), Charles Dutton (P.P.G.S.D. Cheshire), F. Smith (P.M. 201), &c., &c.

The Provincial Grand Officers having retired at the conclusion of the inaugural ceremony, the Square and Compass Lodge was duly closed.

A banquet was afterwards held in the ballroom of the hotel, and was attended by nearly a hundred members of the Fraternity. The Provincial Grand Master presided and was supported, on the right by Bro. R. V. Williams, P.G.S.W., and on the left by Bro. John Lewis, W.M. 1336. A sumptuous and well-served banquet was purveyed by Bro. J. B. Murless, and after the removal of the cloth the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to.

In giving the health of the Earl de Grey and Ripon, G.M., the Chairman said that although Masonry knew no creed and no politics, he rejoiced that one of those selected for the Anglo-American Commission to conciliate a matter which might have led to a serious quarrel was one who presided over the Masons of England. (The toast was drunk with all the honours.)

Musical party: "Hail to the Craft."

The Chairman next gave "The Earl of Zetland and the Prince of Wales, the Past Grand Masters of England," and expressed his gratification that the heir to the throne should be a member of the Craft. The spread which Freemasonry was making showed that the Order was properly ruled over by the authorities of Grand Lodge. (The toast was warmly honoured.)

Musical party: "God bless the Prince of Wales." The health of the Earl of Carnarvon, D.G.M., was next given and cordially received.

Bro. Lewis, W.M. 1336, then proposed the toast of the Provincial Grand Master, and said that they hailed him in a new character in their midst—that of a Mason—and he himself had peculiar gratification in doing so. Twenty years ago Sir Watkin accepted the office of Senior Warden under him when he was Master of the Cestrian Lodge, and he afterwards installed him as his successor. (Cheers.) He had also exalted Sir Watkin to the First Principal's chair in the R.A. Chapter at Birkenhead. Bro. Willoughby, who was present, had initiated him into Masonry, and by a singular coincidence they, along with Bro. Griffith, had acted as Grand Officers at Shrewsbury, with Lord Combermere, when their chairman was installed in office as head of the province. When their chairman took office there were only three lodges in North Wales and Shropshire, and now, including the one that day consecrated, there were fourteen, and that spoke more than anything he could say of the manner in which the Provincial Grand Master had discharged his duties. (Loud cheers.)

The toast was drunk with Masonic honours, and met with a suitable response from the Chairman.

Several other toasts followed, the proceedings throughout being conducted in a most happy and satisfactory manner.

The musical performance, which was of unusual excellence, was produced under the direction of Bro. J. F. Edisbury, Org., assisted by Bro. Halliday, of Chester, and Messrs. Waite, Orme, and Bell, of Chester Cathedral.

PROVINCE OF SURREY.

CONSECRATION OF THE LORNE LODGE,
No. 1347.

The consecration of this, the tenth lodge in the province of Surrey, took place on Tuesday, the 21st instant, at the Station Hotel, Sutton, Surrey. Bro. Dr. Harcourt, P.P.D.G.M., opened the lodge, appointing Bros. H. Parsons, W.M. 410, P.G.S.W. Surrey, as S.W.; T. Wood, W.M. 1149, P.G.J.W. Surrey, as J.W.; C. Greenwood, P.G. Sec. Surrey, as Secretary; and C. H. Woodward, P.M. 463, P.P.G.J.W., as I.G. He then proceeded with the all-important ceremony of consecration, and according to ancient custom duly consecrated the lodge.

Bro. C. Greenwood then presented Bro. Richard Peter Atkins, W.M.-designate, P.M. 55, and P.P.G. Reg. Kent, for installation, and Bro. Dr. Harcourt accordingly duly installed him as the first W.M. of the lodge. The W.M. appointed as his officers: Bros. J. H. Owens, S.W.; J. Swaine, J.W.; E. Farthing, S.D.; H. Langridge, J.D.; leaving the other offices open until the next lodge meeting.

Bro. C. H. Woodward, in an able manner, gave the addresses.

It was carried unanimously that a vote of thanks be given and entered on the lodge minute-book, and an honorary membership of the lodge given, to Bro. Dr. Harcourt for the able manner he had performed the ceremonies of consecration and installation. The same compliment was paid to Bro. C. Greenwood, the ever-popular and deservedly respected P.G. Sec. of Surrey, for his services rendered.

Both of the brethren expressed their thanks for the honour conferred on them.

A large number of joining members were proposed, and several candidates for initiation, auguring that in a very short time this lodge will be well established. Although the warrant was granted last January, the ceremony of consecration was deferred until Tuesday, the 21st inst., in compliment to the illustrious marriage of him whose name the lodge has selected for its title.

After the lodge was closed, the brethren adjourned to a banquet supplied by Bro. Barford, P.M. 55, of Leytonstone. The dinner was served a la Russe, and well sustained the high reputation enjoyed by Bro. Barford as a public caterer. After the banquet, which pleased all present and gave universal satisfaction, grace was sung by Bros. G. T. Carter, C. S. Jekyll, W. Dawson, and W. Farmer, and the manner in which the musical arrangements were carried out, both in the lodge and at the banquet-table, under Bro. Carter's management, won golden opinions from all present. The customary toasts were given and received, and we regret that want of space compels us to leave out the capital speeches made. The brethren returned to town at an early hour, having agreeably spent one of the red-letter days in Masonry. Amongst the large number of those present we noticed, besides those already named: Bros. G. Price, P.G.T. Surrey, P.M. 463; W. Blenkin, P.P.S.G.W. Surrey, P.M. 370; J. C. Chancellor, P.P.G.S.D. Surrey, P.M.

463; G. Snow, P.P.G.S.W. Kent, W.M. 55; J. Terry, P.P.G.S.B. Herts, P.M. 228; F. Binckes, P.G.S., Secretary Boys' School; Frederick Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; J. W. M. Dusell, P.M. 55, W.M. 463; T. Gilruth, P.M. 55; T. C. Diverlen, S.W. 55; Henry Potter, 55; Herbert Potter, 55; T. Barford, P.M. 55; J. T. Robertson, 55; C. W. Turner, 33; J. H. Townsend, P.M. 36; W. Farmer, 25; W. Russell, 77; C. A. Dunn, S.W. 77; R. H. Groombridge, I.G. 183; R. Spencer, 183; D. S. Potts, P.M. 206; H. R. B. Padmore, S.D. 463; G. T. Carter, P.M. 382; W. Hamilton, P.M. 554; J. W. Forge, 619; C. Gale, 1056; T. M. Paget, 829; C. T. Jekyll, L. Jouds (Pelican, Hamburg), &c.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Grand Stewards' Lodge.—This lodge held its regular meeting at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 15th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Jabez Tepper, W.M., and Bros. Frederick Hockley and Charles H. Waters as Acting Wardens (in the unavoidable absence of Bros. Binckes, S.W., and Swainston, J.W.), when Bro. William Sutton Gover, W.M. of the Grand Masters' Lodge, No. 1, and President of the Board of Grand Stewards, was unanimously elected a member of the lodge, and several qualified brethren were duly proposed and seconded for election as joining members. The Treasurer, Bro. Spencer, P.M., reported the funds of the lodge to be in a flourishing condition. The lodge was opened in the second degree, when the W.M. gave the lecture on the tracing-board. After the close of the lodge, the brethren and visitors adjourned to banquet at the Tavern, and spent a happy evening, the Grand Stewards of the year (not being members) having been invited to the lodge and banquet. The lodge has now forty-three members.

Domestic Lodge, No. 177.—The members of this lodge were called to attend their Masonic duties at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Friday, the 10th inst., Bro. Walford, the recently-elected Master, occupying the chair, being supported by his principal officers, Bros. Ferguson and Timms. There were present: Past Masters Brett, G. Purst; Carpenter, Heydon, Thompson (Southern Star), Foulger, Tanner (Secretary), Elmes. Amongst the other brethren present were: Bros. Kent, C. C., S. D.; Everitt, J. D.; Treadwell, I. G.; Pulsford, Ancombe, Mather, J. Willing, Smith, Charles Thompson (S. W. Southern Star), &c., &c. The lodge being opened, Bros. Burgess, Essau, Wilton, were passed; Dyer raised; and after the ballot had been taken, Messrs. Wolff, Chudleigh, and Gregory were admitted members of the Craft. The following resolution was passed in reference to the untimely death of Bro. Simpson, P.M.:—"The members of the Domestic Lodge having heard, with deep feelings of regret, of the sudden and untimely death of our respected Bro. Simpson, P.M., desire to convey to his widow their sincere condolence in her time of trial and tribulation, trusting that the Great Architect of the Universe will support her in her affliction." Bro. Simpson was, by his courtesy and kindness, and not less by his Masonic work, very much respected by the brethren.—A Brother, to the astonishment of nearly the whole of the brethren, proposed that the lodge be removed, and he certainly must have been very ill-advised in so doing, for it met with but little, if any, support. Bros. Thompson, P.M.; J. Smith, P.G.P.; Treadwell, Tanner, Carpenter, and others spoke against it, and expressed themselves highly satisfied with the way in which Messrs. Clemow had catered for them during the past seven years. The feelings of the lodge may be learned from the fact that only two brethren voted for the motion and seventy against it. It was resolved to hold the summer festival at Chigwell on the third Thursday in July. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. The W.M. gave the usual toasts, and to that of the P.M.'s he coupled the name of Bro. Thompson, who made a telling speech in response. Later in the evening the chair was taken Bro. Brett, G. Purst, &c. Bro. Charles E. Thompson, 1158, said: Having the permission of the W.M., pro tem., he had much pleasure in proposing a toast, one which he was sure they would all receive with pleasure, for it was "Success to the Masonic Lifeboat Fund," and after adverting to the recent vote of £50 made by Grand Lodge to that fund, he said it seemed almost a disgrace that other societies, of far less importance than the Masonic Craft—in fact Benefit Societies—could boast of one and two lifeboats, and even the Sunday School children had got one, while the body to which he and the brethren belonged (the most ancient and honourable society that had ever been in existence), had none. (Hear, hear.) He begged to couple with the toast the name of their respected Bro. Carpenter, who was associated with the City of London Lifeboat Fund, and had given much of his time to the subject.—Bro. Carpenter, in returning thanks, said he was much obliged to Bro. Thompson for bringing the subject forward as he had done, and he explained how it was that the "City of London Lifeboat Fund" had been started. He and some of his City friends felt it a great disgrace to the Masonic body that they had no Masonic lifeboat (Hear, hear). Some years ago a fund was started, but it failed, and at a sort of club in the city they started the "City Lifeboat Fund," not in opposition to the one holding its meetings at Bro. Forster's, Fenchurch-street, but as a sort of incentive to them. Recently, when spoken to in Grand Lodge by one of the Committee, he expressed his willingness to, and did, vote in favour of the £50 recently granted by Grand Lodge. He begged to assure Bro. Thompson that there was no opposition on the part of the City brethren to the other fund; but that one evening, amongst a few friends, £50 was collected, and other sums had since been subscribed, but whether they would start a boat he could not say. He did not see why they should not have two,—(hear, hear)—and supposing the other fund should not succeed in getting enough money for the purpose, then the City Fund Committee would come over to them, and, at any rate, they would secure one lifeboat.—Other toasts were given, and a pleasant evening was spent.

Manchester Lodge, No. 179.—The regular meeting of this old lodge took place on Thursday, the 16th inst., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street. The lodge was opened by Bro. Kew, W.M., who presided, and in his usual faultless, admirable manner, passed Bro. J. Hawes, raised Bros. D. Witt and Shaw, and initiated Mr. D. J. Brewer. The lodge was closed, and banquet followed. Present: Bros. W. Hopekirk, P.M., Treas.; W. Hughes, P.M. Sec.; H. Ash, P.M.; W. Stuart, P.M., as J.W.; Heywood, J. W.; Morton, S.D.; Munro, J.D.; Sullivan, I.G.; &c. The visitors were: Bros. F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 871; E. Page, 141; Ganett, S.W. 704; D. Fitzpatrick, 704; H. P. Lyon, 25 (S.C.), &c.

New Concord Lodge, No. 813.—The installation meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, on Friday, the 17th inst. Bro. J. Bartlett, W.M., presided. He raised Bro. Tiggell, and initiated Mr. John Grabham. Bro. J. Emmens, P.G.P., installed M. J. Atkins, S.W., as W.M. The officers appointed were Bros. Salisbury, S.W.; Denny, J.W.; J. J. Wilson, P.M., Treas.; W. H. Main, P.M., Sec.; A. Hill, S.D.; Mountford, J.D.; C. Hill, I.G.; Sinclair, D.C.; Fauquez, Steward. The work, as usual here, was rendered in an admirable manner. Bro. J. Bartlett, I.P.M., had a handsome P.M.'s jewel presented to him from the lodge funds. The lodge was closed, and an admirable banquet, served up under the superintendence of the host, Bro. Gabb, followed, and he was indefatigable in his exertions in seeing to every one's comfort. The visitors were: Bros. J. Terry, P.G.S.B. Herts, P.M. 228; G.F. Cook, W.M. 65; F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; F. Maidwell, 73; E. Jones, 192; R. Senecal, J.D. 860; Forbes, 805; J. Storey, I.G. 1107; D. Davis, 1257; G. T. Linn, 871, &c.

PROVINCIAL.

SUFFOLK.—Albert Victor Lodge, No. 70.—This lodge held its usual quarterly meeting on the evening of the 21st inst., at Ipswich, when the following brethren were advanced, viz.: Bros. William Warren, Lieut. of H.M. 60th Rifles; James Mortimer Vernon Cotton, Capt. H.M. 27th Regt., both of the British Union Lodge, Ipswich; Charles Sumner Pinwell, Lieut. of H.M. 27th Regt., of the Pentangle Lodge, Chatham. The ceremony was ably performed by the W.M., Rev. R. N. Sanderson, P.G. Chaplain, assisted by a set of efficient officers.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Sincerity, No. 292.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 13th inst. at the Temple, 22, Hope-street, the W.M., Bro. Pelham, presiding, assisted by Bros. R. S. Williams, I.P.M.; Thos. Wylie, P.G.R., P.M.; Robt. Wylie, P.G.D.C., P.M.; Hamer, P.G.T., P.M.; Hess, P.G.—, P.M. and Treas.; Wilson, S.W.; Hustwick, J.W.; Elliott, Sec.; Evans, S.D.; Russell, J.D.; Hughes, I.G.; and a fair proportion of brethren. The visitors present were Bros. Major Leslie, 1205; C. H. Hill, W.M. 724; and Jones, J.W. 1276. Considerable interest was attached to this meeting on account of its being the first occasion on which the new W.M. and officers would undertake the ceremonial work. After the usual confirmation of minutes, a ballot was taken for two candidates, and proved unanimous. Being in attendance, they were initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry by the W.M., who quite fulfilled all the expectations that had been formed of his abilities, going through the ceremony in a most efficient and self-possessed manner, showing that he has thrown his energies into the work, and is determined to succeed. The J.W. gave the working tools, and the S.W. the charge, the latter in such a manner as to show that he is completely master of his subject; indeed all the officers did their work remarkably well, considering that with most of them this was the first time they appeared in office. We feel convinced that if future Masters will prove as earnest, and officers as painstaking as those they now have, the lodge will ultimately regain its position as the premier lodge of the province of West Lancashire. Nothing more than formal business remained to be transacted and the lodge was duly closed, the brethren remaining to supper; after which, toasts and songs were the order of the evening, till the hour of separation arrived, and the brethren took their departure, well pleased with all that had transpired.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—A monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 16th inst., the W.M., Bro. Buzzard, presiding. There were also present: Bros. Toller, P.M.; Sculthorpe, S.W.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, J.W.; Baines, Sec.; Partridge, S.D.; Atkins, Ross, Thorp, Dr. Clifton, Barrow, Lange, and C. Bembridge, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. Stretton, W.M.; Palmer, S.D.; Stanley, P.M.; Capt Goodchild, Halford, Atwood, and Cleaver, of No. 279. Bros. Dr. Clifton and Barrow, after due examination, were passed to the second degree, the lecture on the tracing-board being subsequently given by Bro. Toller, P.M. On the lodge being lowered to the first degree, a letter was read from Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, P.G. Sec. Cornwall, stating that "he was really proud of the honour the lodge had done him in electing him an honorary member, as none of the members knew him personally, and therefore it could only be in consequence of a real desire to do him honour." After expressing his intention of periodically sending donations to the "Masonic Hall Library," through the P.G.M., Bro. Hughan added, "We seem to be fast approaching a time when Masonic literature is to be exalted, and mere attendance at banquets, to the neglect of the lodge duties, no longer the rule. I believe the movement in Leicester, in founding the Masonic Library, will materially aid in so desirable a result." The letter having been ordered to be entered on the minutes, the lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge, No. 1051.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Friday evening, the 17th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. The throne of K.S. was occupied (in consequence of the indisposition of the W.M.) by Bro. J. Daniel Moore, P.M., W.M. 281, P.P.G.S. of W.; who was supported by Bros. John Hatch, P.M. 281, as I.P.M.; W. Hall, S.W.; W. Barker, J.W.; W. J. Sly, S.D.; H. Sumner, J.D.; R. Taylor, I.G.; Watson, Tyler; Edmund Simpson, P.M. 281; G. Kelland, P.M. 281; B. Mills, J. Bailie, W. Fleming, J.W. 281; &c. The lodge was opened, the usual business transacted, and the ballot taken, which proved to be unanimous in favour of three candidates for initiation. Mr. James Taylor (a lewis) was then duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry by the W.M., and the same ceremony ably undertaken by Bro. John Hatch, P.M., in favour of Mr. Robert Harger, and afterwards by Bro. Moore for Mr. James Bolton, the working tools being delivered by Bro. Past Master Hatch. The W.M. gave notice of some alteration in the by-laws, to be proposed at the next meeting, and announced that a meeting of the Prov. G. Lodge (Committee of the Fund of Benevolence) will be held at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, on Tuesday, 11th April. There being no other business before the lodge, it was closed in due form.

BUXTON.—Phoenix Lodge of St. Ann, No. 1235.—A meeting of this most prosperous lodge recently took place, when the whole of the proceedings were of the most satisfactory and enjoyable character. The ordinary business of the lodge, which included two ceremonies, being ended, the W.M., Bro. Reginald Darwin, P.G.J.W., proceeded with the installation of his successor, Bro. R. R. Duke, in which he was ably assisted by Bros. Bragge, Ready, and others, Past Masters of other lodges, visitors on the occasion. The ceremony of installation ended, the W.M. proceeded to appoint his officers as follows:—Bros. F. Turner, S.W.; J. Taylor, J.W.; A. A. Bagshawe, M.A., P.G.C., Chaplain; W. Millward, S.D.; Smith, J.D.; Clayton, Treasurer; E. Milligan, Secretary; Klitz, P.M., P.P.G.O., Organist; Le Gros and J. C. Bates, Stewards; Lawson, D. of C.; Sykes, I.G.; Bennett, Tyler. The business of the lodge being concluded, the brethren, about forty in number, adjourned to St. Ann's Hotel, where a splendid banquet reflected the highest credit on Bro. Le Gros and his well-known establishment. Dinner, wines, and attendance were admirable, and elicited the unqualified praise of all present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been duly honoured, the W.M., in proposing "The Health of the Immediate Past Master," which he did in most complimentary terms, concluded by presenting him, in the name of the brethren, with a Past Master's jewel. The jewel, which is of solid gold, and of the most costly and elegant design, bears the following inscription:—"From the brethren of the Phoenix Lodge of St. Ann, 1235, to Bro. R. Darwin, P.M., P.G.J.W., on the expiration of his year of office, in grateful recognition of his services to the lodge, and his unvaried courtesy and urbanity to the brethren."—On expressing his gratitude for this most splendid testimony of his services to the lodge, the P.M. took occasion to refer to the unavoidable absence, through illness, of the first Master of the lodge, their most distinguished brother, and the senior Mason in the province, Bro. J. Millward, P.P.G.J.D., and most heartily was the toast of his speedy restoration received. The festivities of the day concluded with a grand Masonic ball at the Assembly Room, Crescent Hotel.—The ball was in every way a brilliant success, and we trust it is but a forerunner of many similar reunions. There were about 140 ladies and gentlemen present, and the decorations, music, and refreshments reflected credit on all concerned in the arrangements, and left nothing to be desired. We understand that Captain Arkwright, M.P., sent a message at the last moment that he could not be present.

MIDDLESEX.—Enfield Lodge, No. 1237.—The above lodge met on Monday, the 6th inst., at the Court House, Enfield Town, the W.M., Bro. Punday, in the chair; C. Tye, S.W.; R. Matthison, J.W.; J. J. Wilson, I.P.M.; Cornwall, Smith, &c. The lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. Bros. Ingersoll, Gray, and Cottier having answered the necessary questions, were passed to the second degree; and Messrs. Brown and Hall were initiated into the Order. A very elegant solid gold Past Master's jewel was then presented by private subscription to the retiring W.M., Bro. J. J. Wilson, who was the founder of the lodge, and had been for two successive years W.M., for his zeal and assiduity in promoting the interests of the lodge, which he acknowledged in a powerful and telling speech. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren separated, there being no banquet. The visitors were Bros. T. Bartlett, W.M. 813; W. H. Main, P.M. and Hon. Sec. 813; Roberts, P.M. 754; and Maller, J.D. 754.

ROYAL ARCH.

Mount Zion Chapter, No. 22.—This flourishing Chapter was held at Radley's Hotel, on the 13th inst. The chapter was opened by Comps. Taylor, as Z.; Bryant, H.; Sillifant, as J. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, some formal business disposed of, and the chapter was closed; banquet followed. Present: Comps. H. Mugeridge, P.Z., S.E.; Partridge, P.Z.; R. Wright, H.; Spooner, P.Z., &c., and F. Walters, P.Z. 73, as a visitor.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Chapter, No. 1051.—The installation meeting of this chapter was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on Monday, the 20th March, under the presidency of E. Comp. J. Daniel Moore, P.Z., &c., who officiated as Installing Officer. There were also present: E. Comps. Bowes, P.Z., Prov. G.S.B.; Bagnall, M.E.Z.; T. Mason, H.; and Hall, J.; Comps. N. G. Mercer, E.; W. J. Sly, as N.; W. Barker, Treas.; Edmund Simpson, P.M., as P.S.; E. Airey, and R. Taylor. The Principals-elect were presented to the Presiding Officer by the M.E.Z., Comp. Bagnall, and were installed in due form by Comp. Moore, assisted by Comp. Bowes, by whom the Scripture readings and invocations were very effectively rendered. The officers of the chapter for the ensuing year were invested as follows: Comps. T. Mason, M.E.Z.; W. H. Bagnall, P.Z.; William Hall, H.; N. G. Mercer, M.D., J.; J. L. Whimpray, N.; James M. Moore, E.; W. Barker, Treas.; Edmund Simpson, P.M., P.S.; E. Airey, Asst. Soj.; and R. Taylor, Janitor. Bros. Richard Ray and William Burrow Ray, of the Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281, were exalted to the degree of Royal Arch by Comp. Moore, the important duties of P.S. being undertaken by the newly-appointed P.S., Comp. Simpson, and the lecture delivered by Comp. Bowes, P.Z.; Comp. Hall, H.; and Comp. Mason, M.E.Z. A cordial vote of thanks to Bro. Bowes for his attendance and services was passed, and the chapter was closed in due form, when the companions adjourned to the house of Bro. Sly, where a banquet was served under the presidency of Comp. Mason, M.E.Z.

MARK MASONRY.

Southwark Lodge, No. 22.—On Saturday, 18th inst., at the Bridge House Hotel, this lodge met. Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, W.M., opened the lodge, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read. The new by-laws having been made, and some formal business gone through, the lodge was closed. There were present: Bros. F. Walters, P.M.; T. J. Sabine, P.M.; M. A. Loewenstark, P.M. and Sec.; T. Bulmer, T. D. Barnard, &c.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Mount Calvary or Early Grand Encampment of England.—This encampment celebrated the anniversary of the martyrdom of Jacques de Molai, on Saturday, the 11th instant, at Freemasons' Tavern, and amongst the knights present were the E.C. Sir Kt. W. Stone; F. Binckes, P.E.C. Reg.; W. Paas, P.E.C. Treas.; J. Stohwasser, P.E.C.; S. Rosenthal (P.E.C.), 1st Capt.; D. M. Dewar, 2nd Capt.; W. Roebuck, C. of L.; F. H. Ebsworth, S.B.; E. Baxter, S.B.; J. Hervey, 2nd H.; F. A. Philbrick, R. W. Little, and Major E. H. Finney. Visitors: Sir Kts. Capt. N. G. Phillips, P.G.C. Camb. and Suffolk; W. H. Pullen, P.E.C.; D. C. M. Gordon, R. H. Thrupps, and Dumas. Ballots were taken for several candidates and joining members, and Comps. E. H. Finney, jun., and Capt. W. T. Kinnersley, being in attendance, were duly installed as Knights Templar. The encampment was then closed, and a Priory of the Order of Malta was opened, Sir Kt. Binckes as E. Prior. Sir Kts. Philbrick, Finney, jun., and Kinnersley were then admitted to the Mediterranean Pass, and dubbed as Knights Hospitaller of Palestine, Rhodes, and Malta. The Priory having been closed, the Kts. Comps. adjourned to banquet under the genial presidency of Sir Kt. Stone, E.C., by whom the various toasts were given with great fervour, their reception by the fratres being equally enthusiastic. After a most enjoyable evening, the knights separated.

THEATRICAL.

HOLBORN.—The Holborn has revived, with great care, Douglas Jerrold's popular nautical drama of "Black Eyed Susan," after which follows the "Streets of London." Mr. Sefton Parry has abolished all fees, and we trust others may follow his good example. These revivals have attracted large audiences to this popular house.

STRAND.—"The Idle Apprentice" has been revived, and "Cœur de Lion" is withdrawn. "In Three Volumes," and "Up in the World," still continue to delight the large houses which are gathered nightly to witness these excellent pieces.

HAYMARKET.—The friends of Bro. J. B. Buckstone will be pleased to hear that he has just renewed the lease of the house he has so well managed for the last eighteen years, his original term commencing on March 22nd, 1852. We wish him most cordially a continuance of his success and prosperity.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

The Freemason

is now the accepted organ of the Brotherhood in the United Kingdom, and also enjoys an extensive sale in the colonies and foreign parts, its advantages as an advertising medium can scarcely be overrated.

THE SUPREME GRAND COUNCIL 33°.

We have now before us a pamphlet published by the members of the Antiquity Rose Croix Chapter at Bath, relative to their suspension by the Supreme Grand Council 33°, and we have also read an answer to the statements made by the Bath brethren. It appears that the Camp, or Chapter, of Antiquity is one of the five original Grand Encampments established in England; that for many years it worked all the Christian degrees without acknowledging the supremacy of the Grand Conclave, so far as regards the Order of the Temple, or of the Supreme Grand Council 33°, with reference to the Rose Croix and Kadosh degrees. However, in 1862 the members of the Camp were induced to place themselves as Templars under the rule of the Grand Conclave, and four years later they accepted a charter from the governing body in Golden-square. A misapprehension seems to have existed in the minds of the Antiquity brethren as to their liability to the payment of certain fees to the Council—it having been the custom in the Chapter, under the independent regime, to confer the Rose Croix Degree free of expense upon all members of the Knights Templar Encampment.

Now, we conceive that, if this were the only cause of complaint against the Bath brethren, it was one which might have been easily removed by the exercise of a little tact and forbearance on the part of the Supreme Council. There is not a single passage in the voluminous correspondence now before us in which evidences of revolutionary ideas on the part of the Antiquity Chapter can be traced, and we therefore remain unenlightened as to the real causes which led to the suspension of its members. It is very much to be deplored that such high-handed proceedings as those adopted by the Supreme Grand Council should be possible in any Masonic body; and it is certainly not in consonance with the laws of justice and honour that so grave a sentence as suspension should have been promulgated without giving the brethren inculcated a chance of explaining their alleged derelictions.

Unfortunately, however, the policy pursued by the Supreme Grand Council of late years, and especially since the retirement of Dr. Leeson from its head, has been retrogressive in its tendency and despotic in its operations. Masons who appreciate and admire many of the degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite are driven from its ranks by the glacial hauteur and extravagant pretensions of some members of the Council, who seem to fancy that their peculiar mission is to make other people uncomfortable. The dissatisfaction which such a line of conduct has naturally created is not confined to the Bath Chapter, it is felt very strongly by influential metropolitan brethren—it exists in more than one provincial chapter; and unless conciliatory measures and a thorough reform of the present government of the Rite be speedily adopted, it is not difficult to foresee that the power of the Council will be shattered. The first reform must be one of a vital character. Let the members of the 33° be elected by the representatives of the several Rose Croix Chapters. The system of self-election has been tried and found wanting, it is not adapted for a country with free institutions, and, moreover, it is in opposition to the recognised rules of government which prevail in the Craft and other Masonic degrees.

Another very important reform relates to the finances of the Rite—at present the members of the Order generally have absolutely no control over their own funds, nor have they the poor satisfaction of knowing how those funds are appropriated. It is true that some years ago, after a vigorous demand by one of the Knights K.H. for the production of some accounts, a so-called balance-sheet was issued by the Council, but inasmuch as it simply stated that the receipts were so much and the disbursements so much, without furnishing any details, or specifying any of the items, it can scarcely be called a very satisfactory exhibit of the exchequer. A similar document has since appeared annually, and we gather from it that the income of the Supreme Grand Council is a very handsome one, and that Golden-square is a very appropriate name for its head-quarters.

Now, every other Masonic jurisdiction in England publishes full and complete accounts of every shilling received and every shilling expended, and we see no reason why the 33° should be an exception to so wholesome a rule. There is, we are glad to testify, no ground whatever for supposing that the funds of the Ancient and Accepted Rite are applied to other than legitimate purposes; but we repeat that the brethren who contribute to those funds should have a voice in their disbursement, as well as the members of the Supreme Grand Council. It is to be hoped that the schism which now unhappily prevails will soon be healed, and that by a policy of mutual concession the Council of the 33°, and the brethren who dispute their power, may be reconciled to each other, and work with the love and harmony which should ever distinguish Freemasons. Whatever may have been the origin of the Supreme Grand Council—and no proof of its having been illegally constituted has, so far as we know, ever been adduced—no one can deny that it occupies a de facto position as a ruling body in Freemasonry, and has acquired certain rights and privileges. There are also, both in the Council and the subordinate chapters, men of high character and Masonic experience. It is to them we look to initiate such reforms in the administration as will satisfy a legitimate desire for information, and enable the Council to rely with confidence on the lasting support of the brethren of the Rite. At present the Councillors command but a negative respect—a barren homage—but our desire is that their power should be firmly fixed in the hearts and affections of all who owe allegiance to their rule. What we want is REFORM, not REVOLUTION.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The regular meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday, the 22nd inst., for the first time, at 6 o'clock (in future to be the regular hour), in Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. Present: Bros. J. M. Clabon, V.P., P.G.D., President (in the chair); J. Nunn, S.V.P.; James Brett, J.V.P.; J. Hervey, J. Savage, J. Cooper Foster, W. Farnfield, C. C. Dumas, J. Smith, J. Coutts, C. J. Hogg, S. May, W. Smith (E.C.), H. G. Buss, R. W. Little, S. Gale, C. A. Cottebrune, J. Weaver, M. I. Alexander, Harris, Reed, J. Boyd, G. Kenning, W. Mann, F. Walters, H. Garrod, H. W. Hemsworth, &c.

The grants passed at previous meeting were taken seriatim and confirmed.

Thirty-two petitions were brought under the consideration of the meeting, out of which number five were deferred until the next meeting, and twenty-seven were relieved as follows, viz., one, £3; four, £5; nine, £10; four, £15; seven, £20; one, £40; and one, £50—subject to some of the larger grants being confirmed at the next meeting. The total amount voted was £403—a larger sum than is usually voted.

"FOR several years I have suffered from repeated and severe attacks of lumbago, and I can truly say that I have never found such effectual relief as I have from your Vegetable Pain Killer. Its effects are truly marvellous.—JOHN LONGLEY, Chapel-st., London, Jan. 1870.—To P. Davis & Son."

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

I have been informed by members of the Craft that in foreign lodges, under the English Constitution, it is customary to give the E.A. the password and grip of the F.C. previous to the O.B. being administered, and the same of the M.M. degree to the F.C. Can you inform me if there is any truth in this assertion?

MONTRA.

MASONIC SKETCHES AND REPRINTS.

I have not troubled your readers for some weeks, but I cannot help asking your permission to record my public thanks to Bro. W. J. Hughan for his very valuable contribution to the literature of Masonry. These reprints of documentary evidences, be they for or against the antiquity of the Craft, are worth all the arguments and assertions of individual opinions which have ever been propounded. Bro. Hughan has placed the Craft under an obligation for the most useful service he has performed, and I hope he may render the obligation still more weighty by the publication of a second volume at no distant date.

ANCIENT MSS. STILL ONCE MORE.

I notice that your American correspondent, who favoured your readers some weeks since with a criticism of my writing, in which he endeavoured to cast ridicule upon my mode of argument, now cries out because he finds that his gratuitous observations are not permitted to pass in silence. I, too, appeal to "the impartial and gentle reader," and shall be content with his opinion whether any brother who has nothing to say upon the subject in which he interferes ought to publish a criticism like that at page 26. One "impartial and gentle reader" ("Beta," p. 57), has already expressed a strong opinion on the subject, and, if I mistake not, others will think it far from a complimentary manner of getting rid of an impediment to say that Bro. Cooke's use of the word "speculative" is strained, and apparently for a purpose. Your correspondent talks about the "rendering" of these words, but your readers will be well aware that in what professes to be a verbatim reprint of a MS., no "rendering" can possibly occur. The word "speculative" is either in the MS. or it is not; and as Bro. Cooke's accuracy is now impeached by way of escaping a difficulty, I will take means to ascertain whether the word is there beyond any mistake.

ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST AND THE 1717 THEORY (p. 89).

Looking over some numbers of THE FREEMASON, I found at page 89 a few remarks which had previously escaped my notice, by Bro. W. P. Buchan, under the heading of "St. John the Evangelist and the 1717 Theory." Bro. Buchan comments upon my remarks on the relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry, which were published in THE FREEMASON of February 4th, 1871, on page 68. He is pleased to say that the author of these remarks "not only shows his ignorance of what the 1717 theory really is, but also shows his want of observation as to what takes place in the columns of THE FREEMASON." These are sweeping charges, but how are they supported? By this statement "he implies that the supporters of the 1717 theory denied the connection between St. John and the Masons." He goes on to say: "Now, that is untrue, for I did the very opposite, asserting that many of the old fifteenth century operative Masons, like good Catholics, held St. John as their patron saint, just as the shoemakers held St. Crispin. However, while saying so, I deny that any sixteenth or pre-sixteenth century speculative Mason held St. John as their patron saint, for that was impossible, simply because no Speculative Freemasons were then in existence." It must be evident to everybody but Bro. Buchan himself that he is here begging the whole question, and arguing from the assumption that no Speculative Freemasonry existed in the sixteenth century or at an earlier period—for so I suppose the phrase pre-sixteenth century must be understood, although I confess it is new to me, and I am inclined to think it is a new contribution to the English language. Bro. Buchan must have entirely failed to perceive the drift of my remarks, in which I endeavoured to show that the connection of the Freemasons of the present day with those of the seventeenth and former centuries—their lineal descent from them, as it may be said—is established by the reverence with which the festival of St. John the Evangelist is regarded in the present times as much as three or four hundred years ago. This is a connecting link of no little importance, showing a similarity which centuries have not been able to obliterate. I have no intention at present of recapitulating my argument. But as I do not attempt to settle the question in a summary manner myself by an off-hand assertion, neither can I acknowledge Bro. Buchan's right to do so.

CHALMERS I. PATON.

I shall be happy to answer the query of "W. M." in your impression of 11th inst. Having carefully studied the working of our ceremonies, as well as of our various Boards, for the last thirty years, and more especially the laws and working of the Board of Benevolence and the ceremonial of installing a Master in the chair—and as regards the latter, having in bygone days performed that ceremony more times than I can now count up—any knowledge I possess on the subject is very much at the service of your correspondent.

"W. M." asks, "Is it necessary to go through the whole ceremony of installation in the case of a brother who is already a P.M. of another lodge?" I answer: There is no necessity. The whole of that portion of the ceremonial which takes place in the Board of Masters may be, and ought to be, omitted. The remainder of the ceremony should be performed in its entirety.

As I have pen in hand, I take the opportunity of adding that the Craft owes you many thanks for the excellent and full report you have given of the unveiling the memorial at Freemasons' Hall. I may be pardoned for referring to it, because the proceedings of that day and the events connected therewith will surely be engraven on the tablet of my memory.

JOHN SAVAGE.

"MASONIC WRITERS AND CORRESPONDENCE."

The paragraph under this head on p. 57, present volume, will not, I trust, be taken in the sense that all criticism of the correspondence, anonymous and otherwise, of THE FREEMASON is inhibited. It is, I believe, by the attrition of opposing minds that even Masonic light, like sparks from flint and steel, is evoked; and the more persistent the attrition the greater is the display of such—fireworks. I do not think that any brother who, desirous though he be as well to receive light as to give it, should, in consequence of his production being gratuitous, consider it so royally hedged about that all criticism of it must be enjoined. A contributor, whether paid or free, to a public journal, is, I believe, a fair target for every other contributor; and for one such to threaten as does "Beta" in the paragraph here noticed, must leave him liable to be interpreted in one of two ways, viz., that he has attempted to perpetrate a very dry joke, or he has written himself down in manner as Dogberry desired he should be written for the play in "Midsummer Night's Dream."

GAMMA.

THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL FORCES IN MAN.

Man has two forces working within him, the static and the dynamic. The static or moral force is always the same; the dynamic or intellectual never rests. Both these forces must be developed, or imperfection will result. The Greeks, Romans, Carthaginians, and now the French, highly exalted and cultivated the intellect, while morals were considered to be of comparatively small importance, and the result in each case was disaster. The English, Dutch, Americans, Germans, Scandinavians, and Anglo-Saxons generally will be found to have done more for the progress of civilization than other nations, because in them was found to exist a more perfect balance of the two forces working in humanity.

W. P. BUCHAN.

THE ROSICRUCIANS.

In THE FREEMASON, page 657, vol. 3, your readers were favoured with an extract from an old dictionary of 1776, "as being the opinion of an author of nearly a century ago" on the old Society of the Rosicrucians. Immediately after reading it, I turned up my old ditto of 1694 (of which I have become the fortunate possessor of two copies), and I beg to send you an extract from it on the same subject, as it may amuse some of your readers, "as being the opinion of an author of nearly two centuries ago." The spelling and italics are the same:—

"Roseroite or Rosercutiuns, called also the Inlightened, Immortal and Invisible. This was given to a certain Fraternity or Cabal which appear'd in Germany in the beginning of this age; those who are admitted thereunto called the brethren, or Rosercrucians, swear Fidelity, promise Secrecy, write Enigmatically or in Character, and oblige themselves to observe the Laws of that Society which hath for its End the re-establishing of all Disciplines and Sciences, and especially Physick, which according to their notion is not understood, and but ill-practised; they boast they have excellent Secrets, whereof the Philosopher's Stone is the least; and they hold, That the ancient Philosophers of Egypt, the Chaldeans, Magi of Persia, and Gymnosophists of the Indies have taught but what they themselves teach. They affirm, That in 1378, a Gentelman of Germany, whose name is not known but by these two letters A. C., being put in a Monastery, had learnt the Greek and Latin Tongue, and that some time after going into Palestine he fell sick at Damascus, where having heard speak of the Sages of Arabia, he consulted them at Damear, where they had an University. It's added that these wise Arabians saluted him by his name, taught him their Secrets, and that the German, after he had travelled a long time, returned into his own Country; where associating with some Companions he made them Heirs of his Knowledge, and died in 1484. These Brothers had their successors till 1604, when one of the Cabal found the Tomb of the first of them with divers Devices, Characters, and Inscriptions thereon; the principal of which contained these four Letters in Gold A. C. R. E. and a Parchment-Book written in golden letters, with the Eulogies of that pretended Founder.

"Afterwards the Society, which in reality is but a set of Mountebanks, began to multiply, but durst not appear publicly; and for that reason was surnamed the Invisible. The Enlightened of Spain proceeded from them; both the one and the other have been condemned for Fanaticks and Deceivers. We must add, that John Bringeret printed in 1615 a Book in Germany which comprehends two Treatises, entitled The Manifesto and Confession of Faith of the Fraternity of the Rosecrucians in Germany. It was dedicated to Monarchs, States, and the Learned. These persons boasted themselves to be the Library of Ptolemy Philadelphus, the Academy of Plato, the Lyceum, &c., and bragg'd of extraordinary Qualifications, whereof the least was, That they could speak all Languages; and after, in 1622, they gave this Advertisement to the Curious: We, deputed by our College the principal of the Brethren of the Rosecrucians to make our visible and invisible abode in the City, through the Grace of the Most High, towards whom are turned the Hearts of the Just: We teach without Books or Notes, and speak the Languages of the Countries where-ever we are, to draw men like ourselves, from the error of Death. This Bill was matter of merriment; in the meantime the Brethren of the Rosecrucians have disappeared, tho' it be not the Sentiment of that German Chymist, the Author of a Book entitled, De Volucris Arborea; and of another who hath composed a Treatise stiled De Philosophia Pura. Sponde. Gautier."

I beg to say, with Bro. C. G. Forsyth, that no disrespect is meant to the worthy brothers of the present Rosicrucian Society.

Original Correspondence.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions expressed by Correspondents

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you kindly allow me a little space in your columns, in order to call the attention of some of my Masonic brethren to an advertisement which appeared in your last issue? The advertisement I refer to contains a touching appeal from a brother Mason, a clergyman of 15 years' standing, begging some influential brother to appoint him to a living, however small. Surely if the Craft acted up to the principles it professes, such appeals as this would be unnecessary! May I not say impossible? It seems to me that those of our number who are patrons of livings—however much they may practice the Masonic virtues of "Relief and Truth,"—sadly forget "Brotherly Love!" If not, how could they reconcile it to their consciences to pass over the claims of needy clerical brethren in favour of those "who are not Masons?" I humbly conceive that no sums—however large—which may be given to Masonic, or other charities, atone for such a breach of one of the first principles of Masonry. If we really mean to act up to our O.B., and "prefer a M.M. in our dealings," ought not such preference to be shown to our clerical brethren—at least as much as to others? I do not hesitate to say that if the sublime principles of Masonry were carried out as they ought to be, we should have no more unbeneficed Masonic clergy of 15 years' standing! Hoping that this subject will be taken up by some abler pen than mine,

I am, Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
"A LODGE CHAPLAIN."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Please to give me a little space for some remarks on your article "The Masonic Press and its Privileges," as I wish you may do justice to "the reasoning faculties of the Teutonic race." Why you like to make any difference between the "Teutonic" and the "Anglo-Saxon" race, I cannot understand; we used to oppose only the Roman race to the Germanic or Teutonic, of which the Anglo-Saxon and the German (or Teutonic) are branches of the same spirit and the same blood.

I am fully on your side in defending the liberty of the Masonic press, and I hope with you, "that the day is for ever gone by for restrictive legislation with regard to the press, as it is a policy which has long been abandoned in all enlightened States." Therefore I very much regret the remark of the M.W. Dep. Grand Master relating to THE FREEMASON, but at the same time I am convinced of his right to censure your paper for the publication of the "exaggerated picture of rage" and the "fierce unreason" of the letter and protest of Bro. Delfraisse without any editorial remarks. As you have done your duty as editor of a Masonic periodical, when you have inserted the citation of the Parisian lodges, and on other occasions, it must astonish every reader of your paper that you have published the protest of Bro. Delfraisse without deprecating "this foolish act." To be silent, says the proverb, is to concede (is to be in accordance). This publication, without any editorial remark, especially at a time when the political press of your country was full of hatred against Germany, seemed to me a sign that you also had begun to introduce party discussions into the "tyled precincts" of a Masonic paper, and that you are in accordance with the calumniator of our venerable Emperor and Brother, William. A publication of such a nature in THE FREEMASON, "published with the special sanction of the M.W. Grand Master of England," bore evidently a hostile character against all German brethren and Grand Lodges, and—principis obsta—it seemed a duty to protest against such a publication. Well, the "obscure individual"—the "nameless correspondent"—from Leipzig, was the undersigned, who wrote a simple, not at all "furious," epistle to the highly-esteemed Grand Secretary, Bro. Hervey, explaining only the facts, and hoping that THE FREEMASON would be disavowed, as not in accordance with Masonry and with the M.W. Grand Master, as has been done in last Grand Lodge. I have written my letter without "authority," but, I am convinced, in accordance with all German Masons, who are now satisfied with the declaration of the M.W. Dep. Grand Master. If my letter seemed "furious," this is only caused by the circumstance that I cannot write your language as fluently and correct as I should like. Such a tone of my letter was not intended, and I regret it.

If our royal art is a reality, and not a mere child's-play, then every brother is obliged "to cultivate brotherly love, avoiding all wrangling and quarrelling, all slandering and backbiting, nor permitting others to slander any honest brother" (Old Charges, 1723). You cannot deny, dear brother, that you have permitted others to slander an honest brother, King William, the light and pride of Germany, and a true exponent of our royal art.

I hope your high opinion of the reasoning faculties of the Teutonic race will not become diminished so much, after having taken a step to defend our national honour, to secure peace between the English and the German Craft, and to uphold the purity of our institution—violated by the introduction of party discussions.

Fraternally yours,

J. G. FINDEL.

THE SAINTS JOHN IN MASONRY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I confess to being highly amused by so much of Bro. C. I. Paton's response to Bro. S. Evans' article as appears in THE FREEMASON on page 51. If that response, when completed, shall be proportionate to the introduction, as given in No. 99, I will regard it as the most exhaustive treatise on the subject with which Freemasons have ever been favoured; and I take this means of directing particularly the attention of the Fraternity, your readers, to it.

The difference, so far apparent, between Bro. Evans and Bro. Paton appears to abide in this, viz., that Bro. Evans, if not an iconoclast in the broadest sense, certainly is not a believer in saints or their merits, while Bro. Paton is not a disbeliever in either. He, it is so far evident, can find no more history to support the statement that either of the Saints John was a patron of Freemasonry than can Bro. Evans.

The story or fancy recounted by the former in your columns some months since, and strictures upon which formed the matter of the latter's article or criticism, comprised little beyond the fancy that has a place in our "lectures" as Freemasons (and that little, I believe, no better supported); all very pretty and pleasing I will admit, to believers in saints and angels, but very rubbish to those who are not, while certainly not historic, so far as yet proved, to any extent, no more than is dozens of other pretty fancies in those lectures. The practical mind of Bro. Evans would eliminate this fancy as a whole, as at this day mischievous in its tendency, for the reason that disbelievers in saints and their merits are as readily admitted into our lodges as those who are not, and everything that is not of real value, if offensive to such disbelievers, he believes should be removed and be replaced by truthful matter. In the middle of the 18th century, when, it is said, the late Bro. Duncerley introduced into the lectures what we now have as to the patronage of the Saints John, such introduction could give no offence, as none but Christians were made Freemasons. But, as I have said above, that condition no longer obtains, and it is due to ourselves to govern ourselves in such manner as to give no offence to any member of the Masonic family, provided we can remove the cause of offence without offending. Should Bro. Paton, however, prove that either of the Saints John could in their lifetime by any possibility have been patrons of Freemasonry (he very pertinently remarks that they could not at any other period be such), I believe a good work will be done worthy of Bro. Paton's talents and ability, and this vexed question be set at rest.

Fraternally yours,
PHILETAS.

THE ANTIQUITY CHAPTER ROSE CROIX, BATH, AND THE SUPREME GRAND COUNCIL, 33°.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—Early in February last a pamphlet was published (of which a copy was sent you) which contained, besides some explanatory introductory remarks, what, as far as the writer then knew, now knows, or could, or can ascertain, the whole of the correspondence between the Antiquity Chapter Rose Croix, Bath, and the so-called Supreme Grand Council, 33°, in reference to the suspension of the former by the latter. To the pamphlet were attached the names of all the members of the Antiquity who at the time were "within hail" as vouchers for its accuracy. The first copies (except proofs) issued by the printer were addressed by me to the leading members of the S.C., and duly posted by the printer.

I have just received from a kind friend and brother a manuscript copy of a printed circular which purports to be issued by the S.C., and to be a reply to the pamphlet. No name is attached to the circular, but the evidence of its parentage is too conclusive to admit of its being deemed spurious.

As it is essential in the cause of truth, honour, and honesty that some notice be taken of the circular, and as the facts are of some importance to every member of our Order—and I happen to know that your readers are very numerous and very influential—I beg to be permitted to explain them in your valuable publication; and, as I cannot hope to be allowed to trespass largely on your space, I will confine my remarks to the really essential points of the controversy. Should any of your readers wish for further particulars, he may, by sending a single stamp, with his name and address, to Bro. G. J. Parfitt, F.A.S., Terrace Walks, Bath, obtain the letters and pamphlet herein mentioned by next post. In order to avoid repetition, I beg to be understood by "pamphlet" to mean the statement published by the Antiquity Chapter; and by "circular," that published by the S.C. in reply thereto.

Although the circular denies the accuracy of the pamphlet, and has, I am told, been extensively circulated, not a single copy of it has been sent to any of those whose names are attached to the pamphlet. This attempt to keep the persons whose veracity it impugns in ignorance of the circular, is so flagrant a violation of the simplest rules of common courtesy, decent propriety, Masonic honour, manly integrity, honest and honourable warfare, controversy, or whatever else we call it, as, it might be hoped, even occasional intercourse with gentlemen would teach any person not instinctively and incurably addicted to meanness to avoid. Now for the facts:—

The circular calls the statement published by the Antiquity Chapter a "defence of the action it has taken in withdrawing from the A. and A. Rite," and adds: "It becomes incumbent on the S.C. to expose the causes which led to the suspension of that chapter." These statements contradict each other. The circular says:—"When, however, documents have been published and circulated containing only part of the truth"—and artfully and with apparent candour adds—"what can be more dangerous than the suppressio veri?" I reply, the suggestio falsi and the suppressio veri combined; and more "dangerous" still, the miserable man who, while pharisaically deprecating the former, does not scruple to practise both.

To say that a statement is only partly true and not to furnish proof of the fact—not to show in what it is untrue, or what material part of the truth has been concealed—is an old trick, which your readers, I doubt not, will appreciate at its true value, and which, therefore, I need not waste time in exposing.

The pamphlet states that the S.C. are a self-elected body, holding exclusively under their own control large funds that properly belong to the subscribing chapters. The circular says nothing in reply. The pamphlet charges the S.C. with an arbitrary and unconstitutional usurpation of powers and privileges that are inherent in and properly appertain to the heads and other representatives of the several chapters. The circular says nothing in reply. The pamphlet charges the S.C. with gross discourtesy in that they having appointed a day and hour for paying "an official state visit" to the Antiquity Chapter, not only did not keep their appointment, but they never sent any explanation of, or apology for, their absence. Hear what the circular says in reply:—"On that date (viz., the 24th of November, the date appointed by themselves) accordingly, four members of the 33°, appointed to represent the S.C., arrived in Bath from different parts of England, and naturally expected to receive intimation from the M.W.S. of the Antiquity Chapter of the time and place appointed for the meeting." "The 23rd, and up to 4 p.m. on the 24th November passed without any intimation being sent to the members of the S.C. of any place or time having been appointed for the meeting of the Antiquity Chapter, although the M.W.S. was fully aware that these brethren were in Bath, and of the address where they were to be found; and although he was called on personally by one of them (after previous intimation), as well as reminded of the intended visit by private letters; nor was any explanation subsequently given why such uncourteous treatment was shown, not alone to gentlemen who, at great personal inconvenience and private expense, had come from considerable distances to perform their duty, but also to the Governing Body of the Order that they were deputed to represent." I would stop here, fearing I may occupy too much of your space; but the next little morsel is too delicious to be omitted. "This contempt of authority being reported to the next special meeting of the S.C. and (as above stated) no explanation or apology having in the interim been offered by the Antiquity Chapter, the S.C. was reluctantly compelled to suspend this offending chapter." Surely an enemy hath written this! Is it the whole truth? Is it even partly true? Let us see. "On that date" (the 24th) "four members, &c., arrived in Bath." On the 23rd I saw Bro. Philips in the entrance passage of the Masonic Hall in conversation with the M.W.S. of the Antiquity, by whom, I am informed, he wastold that that was to be the place of meeting. (It is the place at which all Masonic meetings are held.) Again, on the 23rd Bro. Vigne, Bro. Philips, and others—who, I suppose, were their colleagues of the S.C.—were present at a meeting of the SS. Peter and Paul Chapter (I also was present), when a note from Bro. Wilton, of the Antiquity Chapter, to the M.W.S. of the SS. Peter and Paul Chapter was read. The note requested that the decorations, &c., might be permitted to remain for the use of the Antiquity Chapter on the following day. A motion was made "that the request be complied with," when Bro. Vigne distinctly stated that "the S.C. did not intend to visit the Antiquity." Need I add more? "What can be more dangerous than the suppressio veri?" Out of thine own mouth do I condemn thee; and I defy thee to deny the truth or cogency of these facts. Again, the S.C. is self-convicted of gross injustice. They admit, they even seem to take credit for, the fact (very near the beginning of their circular) that "they have hitherto maintained silence" in reference to "the causes which led to the suspension of the chapter." On the 24th of last November the chapter was condemned unheard; and, until now, it has vainly endeavoured to ascertain the cause. Even now it knows not on what evidence the charges are made, and their frivolity is such as, if capable of proof, would scarcely justify remonstrance or reproof; and yet these righteous judges did not scruple to publish the names of all the brethren of the Antiquity, as persons not worthy to associate with their fellows. They now admit that their judgment was not preceded by any investigation; that they have hitherto concealed the evidence on which they pretend to have acted; and as this is the substance of my charge against them, I will leave them to the judgment of all honest and impartial brethren of our Order.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
EDMD. WHITE,

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE III.

It will, doubtless, be admitted by the majority of the readers of this journal that the address, given in its entirety in these columns, has been framed by the founders with some skill, the principles of the Institution being expounded in an unconstrained, agreeable and intelligible manner. It may be justly said that the aphorism of the great bard, "words sweetly placed and modestly directed," is very applicable to the general tenor of the lecture, as delivered by the officer conducting the ceremonies of the society. As the discourse necessarily occupies much space, I deem it advisable to reserve, for a future communication, my comment upon certain bearings of the exposition. It runs thus:—

"LADIES,—We meet and welcome you here for a double purpose. First, that we may inform you as to your true relationship to the Masonic Fraternity, and thus remove any prejudices that you may have entertained against us; and second, to confer upon you the beautiful, instructive and useful degrees of the Order of the Eastern Star. Every one present knows that Freemasons set a great value upon their mysteries. They put themselves to much trouble and expense to attend their lodges, and they prove, by their words and actions, that Masonry is implanted in their affections. It must be plain enough to every wife and daughter and sister of a Mason, that there is something in Masonry, known only to the brethren, which is very delightful and precious to them. This oftentimes provokes the question, 'Of what use is Freemasonry to the ladies?' As it separates man and wife to some extent, by giving the man certain secrets and duties which the wife cannot share, the ladies sometimes take umbrage against Masonry, and even become its enemies, and oppose it violently as something contrary to the laws of God and man. A little knowledge, however, of the real nature and purposes of Masonry will remove all this, if there is any of it existing in the mind of any lady present. Masons love and cherish their society above all others, because it is designed to, and does, make them better, wiser, and happier men. Better, for it teaches morality, virtue, temperance, economy, charity, and justice to all men. Wiser, for it imparts knowledge to them that is weighty, solemn, and important; knowledge that has been handed down to them from age to age for nearly three thousand years. Happier, for it makes them acquainted with, and puts them in social connection with, the purest and best men in every section of the country. Is it any wonder, then, ladies, that Masons love Masonry? If a Mason is assailed in character, every other Mason is, or should be, prompt to defend him, if innocent. If he is attacked in person, he finds defenders. If he is distressed for means, poor and in want, having been reduced by misfortune, his brethren share their abundance with him. If, travelling in a foreign land, he falls sick, or in distress, though all around him may be strangers, the Masons are no strangers to him. They are brothers, and will be as kind to him as though they had known him all his life. If he dies, the Fraternity will bear his body to its last resting-place, and drop an honest tear to his memory. But now it is necessary that we should show you why ladies, too, should love Masonry, and should be, as many of them are, its warmest friends and defenders. I will answer the question that is often asked, 'Of what use is Masonry to the female sex?' Ladies, you are connected with Masonry by ties far more intimate and tender than you are aware of, or than I can even inform you of. The widow and orphan daughter of a Master Mason takes the place of the husband and father in the affections and good deeds of the lodge. If their character is unjustly assailed, the brethren are in duty bound to defend them. If they are in want, distressed for the necessities of life, the brethren will divide their means with them. If travelling at a distance from home, they find themselves sick and in want among strangers, they have but to make themselves known as the widow and orphan daughter of a worthy Master Mason, and, lo! the hand of relief is stretched out toward them! the voice of sympathy is heard to cheer them! they are no longer strangers, but friends, dear friends; and thus they are constrained to bless our Society, whose kind deeds are not confined to the narrow limits of home. Ladies, I draw no fancy sketch, I speak of what has happened, of what is happening every day. The widow has been provided with a home, her children educated, and reared up to honourable stations, her own heart cheered and comforted by the blessed influences of Masonry. These, then, ladies, are the reasons why we think you should be the most devoted friends that Masonry possesses. To you are given all the advantages of the Society, its shield of protection, its hand of relief, and its voice of sympathy, while we do not require of you any of the labour or expense of sustaining it. The only Masonic privilege denied to you is that of visiting the lodge, and this would be of no advantage to you, even if it were possible to grant it; but it would awaken the voice of scandal against you from a censorious world, and thus produce far more pain to your kind and amiable hearts than it could possibly afford you pleasure. Females cannot be made Masons. This is a rule that has been handed down with the other rules of Masonry for thousands of years. Each Mason present pledged himself before he was admitted into the lodge that he would never allow any of the ancient rules of Masonry to be changed, and this is one of them. Therefore we cannot invite you to visit our lodges. But, as I have said, we can, and do, and will share with you in all the solid privileges and benefits of Masonry, and thus practically unite you with us in this great, this glorious, this heavenly work of doing good. The only objection that can be advanced against what I have said is this: How is a lady, travelling among strangers, and finding herself in want of friends, to make herself known as the wife, widow, sister, or daughter of a Master Mason? Unless she has something more than her mere word to offer, those to whom she applies will be slow to believe her statements. The country is full of impostors, women as well as men. Almost every charitable person has been imposed upon, not once only, but many times. The lady, therefore, who has the relationship to Masonry that you possess, needs, in such a case, some particular means of recognition; some means of making herself known to Master Masons, which no other person can understand; some method, perfect, modest and proper, easily practised and easily understood. Is there anything of the sort? I imagine you asking me. Are there any means long-tried and proved, which a lady can learn, and by due practice remember, so that, if suddenly called upon, she can put it into use with confidence that it will prove effectual? I answer, there is just such a method, and one principal object of this meeting is to teach you that method. The Order is called the Eastern Star. It has signs and passwords, and means of recognition, which have been tried in a thousand instances, and proved to be exactly what a lady needs in the cases I have mentioned. The signs which are for a lady's use are easily learned and remembered. The passwords which Masons use in answer to the signs are equally so. The other means of recognition, by the aid of the signet, are not easily forgotten, and the whole system is available for practical use at all times when required. And there is one great merit in the Order of the Eastern Star, which, if there were no other, would render it worthy of your favour; it is pure, graceful and religious. It gives the history of that heroic daughter of Jephthah, doomed to die for her father's sake. It tells us of Ruth, the harvest-gleaner in the field of Boaz, who forsook all things to dwell among the people of God.

THE "Blackheath" Lodge, No. 1320, will be consecrated on Wednesday, May 3rd, at the Crown Tavern, Blackheath village, by Bro. H. Muggerridge, P.M.

GLASGOW.

St. John's Lodge No. 3 bis.

The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the New Hall, 213, Buchanan-street, on Tuesday, the 7th ult., after 7 p.m., Bro. John Baird, R.W.M., on the throne; Bros. Kyle, S.W., Fletcher, J.W., and a number of brethren present. The lodge being opened the minutes were read and passed. There being no other business, the R.W.M. gave an account of the proceedings at Grand Lodge the night before, and, inter alia, stated that he considered the Grand Lodge had acted unlawfully in sustaining the proxy commissions after he had said they were illegal if not stamped; however, Grand Lodge was not done with that yet. He also observed that by so doing the Grand Lodge had thereby broken the laws of the land, and that, therefore, he considered that this lodge had sufficient reason for throwing overboard its allegiance to Grand Lodge. He also found fault with the remarks made by Bro. Buchan in Grand Lodge the previous night.

Bro. Buchan having remarked that there were two ways of telling a story, said it was a pity some of the Edinburgh brethren were not present to give their version of affairs, more especially as the fact remained that St. John's Lodge lost every motion it desired to carry, all the pretensions it had set up being knocked down, not that Grand Lodge had acted unjustly, but because St. John's, in this case, was supporting what was wrong, as well as not going about what they had in hand in a proper business-like manner, &c.

After this the S.W. proposed, and J.W. seconded, that a special meeting of this lodge be called for this night three weeks, to which Bro. Buchan should be summoned, in order to consider the language used by him (Bro. Buchan) to their R.W.M. (Bro. Baird), at the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Scotland on 6th February, Bro. Buchan having there stated that he "was astonished Bro. Baird could have the audacity to stand up in this Grand Lodge and make the false statements he had now made."

Bro. Buchan denied having used the word "false," and considered that he was perfectly entitled to speak in an independent manner regarding whatever business was going on before Grand Lodge, and also that he was quite justified, under the circumstances, in saying what he did say.

After some further remarks, the motion of the S.W. was agreed to. The lodge was shortly after closed.

A meeting of this lodge was also held on the 21st ult., Bro. Baird, R.W.M., in the chair; Bro. John Dick, S.D., acting as S.W.; Bro. Fletcher, J.W., and a considerable number of brethren present. On the minutes being read, several corrections were made, after which they were passed.

The Secretary intimated that he had written to Bro. Buchan, giving him notice of the special meeting to be held on 28th February, and had received a letter in reply stating that he (Bro. Buchan), considered their summons informal, in so far that it did not contain a definite statement of the exact words objected to, as also that he was unaware that St. John's Lodge had any right or power to summon him before it for what took place in Grand Lodge.

Bro. J. B. Walker, P.M., supported the objection as to the informality of a summons being issued without a definite statement being given of the supposed fault.

The R.W.M. then read a copy of the report of the sub-committee of Grand Lodge on the St. John's Memorial, which had been read at the late meeting of Grand Lodge, after which he made some comments regarding it. Upon one brother desiring to have the report again read, the R.W.M. suggested the idea of publishing it, so that every brother might have a copy, and be able to read it himself. The J.W., however, objected to this—"more light" not being desired (?)—and the subject dropped.

The R.W.M. then read a copy of the motion tabled by Bro. Hay, and which was to come up at the next quarterly communication of Grand Lodge, to the effect that the Lodge Journeymen, No. 8, shall be entitled to carry the working tools and other paraphernalia of Grand Lodge at processions in the Metropolitan District. The Lodge Glasgow St. John shall have the same privilege in the Province of Glasgow, and when the Grand Lodge is officiating in any other place or Province, the Grand Master, or the brother acting for him, shall have the power of fixing on the lodge or lodges to carry the working tools, &c., for the occasion, and his decision shall not be open to review. Having read this, the R.W.M. stated that this motion did not suit their views. He also read certain remarks on the subject from Bro. Wylie, of Kilwinning, who, he stated, was a high authority upon Masonic matters. Some further remarks having passed, it was understood that St. John's Lodge decidedly objected to the settlement of the working tools controversy in the way Bro. H.'s motion intended. The lodge was afterwards closed in due form.

Lodge St. Mark, No. 102.

The hundred-and-fifth annual festival of the Lodge St. Mark, No. 102, was celebrated on the 13th inst. in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street. Bro. Thomas Halket, R.W.M., presided, assisted by Bros. Robert Jamieson, S.W., and Daniel Watson, J.W. The Master was supported by Bros. F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M. of Glasgow; John Baird, R.W.M. 3 bis; J. Miller, R.W.M. 413; Capt. John Gordon, Alex. Veitch, P.D.M.; Hugh Murdoch, S.S.; J. F. Mitchell, W. Robertson, 354; and Robert Graham. After dinner, the toasts of "The Queen and the Craft" and "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers" were proposed from the chair. Captain Gordon responded for the Army, and Captain Baird, L.E.V., for the Volunteers.—The R.W.M. next proposed "The Three Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland" and "The P.G. Lodge of Glasgow."—The latter toast was responded to by Bro. Barrow, who observed that the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow was one of no small importance, representing as it did nearly a quarter of a hundred lodges. Indeed, there was scarcely a P.G. Lodge which had a fourth of the number of lodges within its jurisdiction. The P.G. Lodge of Glasgow was for years the only P.G. Lodge in Scotland, and other P.G. Lodges had taken it as their model.—Bro. Barrow then proposed "The Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council."—Bro. Veitch, in giving "Masonry all over the World," expressed the hope that the principles of Masonry would prevail everywhere; for if so, war would be banished from every country, and peace and goodwill emanate from every heart.—Bro. Baird, in proposing "Lodge St. Mark, No. 102," observed that it occupied a high position in the province, and that its prosperity still continued.—Bro. Halket, R.W.M., in the course of an excellent address in reply, said that considerable progress had been made during the past year; but there had been a better sign of progress than a mere addition to their numbers. An earnest desire had been manifested by the office-bearers to render the working of the lodge as perfect and complete as possible. Several lodges of instruction had been held, with satisfactory results; and music suitable for the ceremonial had been practised, and a selection made and approved by the lodge. They had also had several lectures on the history and principles of the Order. It was thought by many that the success of the lodge depended altogether upon the office-bearers. This, however, was a mistake; for while it was the duty of the office-bearers to conduct the business of the lodge and perform the ceremonies of the Order in a proper and becoming manner, it was the special duty of every member to give a practical manifestation of the power of those principles by which they were united. Bro. Halket concluded by a very feeling and appropriate allusion to the loss the lodge had sustained by the death of their late I.P.M., Bro. Major Barbor. Other toasts followed. The proceedings were of a very harmonious character. Bro. Millar presided at the harmonium.

The annual supper and assembly of this flourishing lodge was held on Friday, the 10th inst., in the Tontine Hotel. The chair was occupied by Bro. A. Arrick Smith, R.W.M., supported by Bro. F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M.; A. McTaggart, P.G. Sec.; J. Fraser, R.W.M. 87; W. Robertson, P.M. 333; W. J. Hamilton, P.M. 354; D. K. Speirs, D.M. 354; J. Shaw, S.W. 354; J. Henderson, J.W. 354. The croupier's chair was occupied by Bro. P. Wilson, supported by Bros. Goodman, Henderson, R.W.M. 195 Belfast; H. T. Lannigan, and D. Robertson.

After an excellent supper had been partaken of, the usual introductory toasts were given from the chair, Bro. Henderson, R.W.M. 195, Belfast, replying for the "Three Grand Lodges." The "Provincial Grand Lodge" was replied to by Bro. F. A. Barrow. Bro. R. Wilson proposed "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers," replied to by Bro. D. K. Speirs. Bro. F. A. Barrow proposed "The Lodge Caledonian Railway," remarking that since its commencement it had been in a very prosperous condition, and he hoped it would be as flourishing in the future as in the past. Bro. A. A. Smith, R.W.M., replied. He stated that upwards of thirty members had joined the lodge during the past year; that the funds were in a good condition, and that Bro. Hamilton, on retiring from office, had left the lodge funds actually £20, better than what they were on his installation as R.W.M. The remaining toasts were "The Past Masters," by Bro. A. McTaggart, P.G. Sec.; replied to by Bro. J. E. Wilson, P.M. The "Ladies," by Bro. H. T. Lannigan; replied to by Bro. D. Robertson. The "Press," by Bro. R. Goodman; replied to by Bro. Jas. Drewette, of N.B. Daily Mail. "Friends," by Bro. R. Wilson; and "Happy to meet, &c.," from the chair.

During the evening, a testimonial was presented (in the name of the lodge) to Bro. W. J. Hamilton,

P.M., Bro. A. A. Smith, R.W.M., remarking: I have a very pleasant duty to perform, but I am only sorry that I lack language to convey sufficiently all I would like to say. On the retirement of Bro. Hamilton from the office of R.W.M., a few of the brethren thought that it was a duty incumbent on the members of the lodge to present him with a small token of their esteem. The matter was brought before open lodge and approved of; a committee was appointed to look after affairs and put them in shipshape order; the result you now see before you. I have known Bro. Hamilton some years, and I see others around me who have known him for a longer period and who could speak of his qualities to a greater extent than I am able to do. For myself, as a friend I have always found him of a kind disposition, gentlemanly manners, and a man in whose word the utmost dependence could be placed; as a brother, one who would do a good turn when in his power, and I am sure I speak the sentiments of every brother present, that he always met us on the "level," and acted as well as parted with us on the "square." As a Master, his conduct was the most exemplary, and the brethren all know his kind forbearance in giving every one a hearing when required, and not abusing his powers, nor using that token of his authority, the "mallet," unless when he actually could not avoid it. Then, looking at what he has done for the lodge, during his reign a Benevolent Fund has been organised, with which, to a certain extent, we have been able to relieve some of our poorer brethren. The jewels and clothing for all the office-bearers have been made complete, and I think I can safely say there is not in all the province a lodge where the workings have been gone into with more spirit and harmony amongst the brethren, from the Master to the Tyler (during the time Bro. Hamilton occupied the chair), than in 354. It is no disparagement to his predecessors in office, and I think every brother will bear me out in saying, that the Caledonian Railway Lodge owes its present flourishing condition to the zeal, energy, and perseverance of our worthy P.M. Hamilton. I feel myself unworthy to fill the position he so recently occupied; but as a virtuous example has a powerful tendency to mould the conduct of others, I trust his mantle may fall upon me that I may be enabled to walk worthy in his footprints. Since our last annual festival, Bro. Hamilton has taken unto himself a partner for life, whom I have not the pleasure of knowing so intimately; but I am sure that such a worthy gentleman deserves to have a worthy wife. From the few times I have had the pleasure of meeting her, I would say Mrs. Hamilton is one of those individuals "whom you often read about but very seldom see." Under the circumstances the committee thought that they could not do better than present Mrs. Hamilton (through you) the articles contained in this case (gold suite of brooch and earrings) as a mark of respect, and when she wears them (which I trust she may be long spared to do), it will recall to her memory, years after this, how highly her husband was esteemed and respected by his Masonic brethren of "354." Worthy Past Master Hamilton, it now remains for me to present to you in the name of the members of the Caledonian Railway Lodge, this silver tea and coffee service, which bears the following inscription:—"Presented by the members of Lodge Caledonian Railway, No. 354, with a silver tea and coffee service, to Bro. Wm. John Hamilton, as a tribute of esteem, on the occasion of his retiring from the office of R.W.M., together with a souvenir for Mrs. Hamilton. Glasgow, 10th March, 1871." I trust that you and Mrs. Hamilton may be long spared to use them, and Mrs. Hamilton to wear these. In your walk through life, may your body ever be an emblem of your mind, your feet the rectitude of your actions, and when your allotted task is finished here below, may you rise to the Grand Lodge above, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Bro. Wm. J. Hamilton replied as follows: The receiving of such a handsome gift as my brethren have deemed me worthy of, must necessarily make me feel a very grateful recipient, and stamp this eventful evening for ever on my memory. It should be a serious feeling to every honest man that each in his different sphere is exercising on those around him an influence that is only productive of two results: nay, I hope that in our intercourse the good may ever be in the foreground, exercising charity and kindness to our fellow-creatures, the firm bond for endearing us to each other. You will bear with me if I express but feebly the feelings I lack words to convey to you, my brethren, for this tangible token of your good-will towards me, and heartily do I feel that the gift has emanated from your kindness more than my deserts, which makes me feel still more keenly the favour you have conferred on me. I trust I shall ever continue to hold the same place in the esteem of my brethren, and by straightforward actions prove myself worthy of their confidence. I am both proud and happy to receive such an elegant souvenir, the possession of which shall ever be connected with the most pleasant reminiscences. Our R.W.M. (Bro. Smith) has conveyed to me, in very complimentary terms, the approbation of the lodge members with the conduct of business during my period of office; for this you will please accept my best thanks, and may I say that this result is in a great measure attributable to the unanimity which invariably prevailed in our midst by office-bearers and members exerting themselves to lend the "helping hand" when required, and I am justified in stating to the friends present that equals of "354" may be found in sister lodges, but no superiors. The honour which you chose to confer on me when you requested that I should accept office and preside for another year would have been gladly accepted, but circumstances with which you are all more or less conversant, and to which our R.W.M. has referred, prevented my doing so. I knew it would be impossible for me to devote the same amount of time to Masonic duties as I had hitherto employed in that way, so rather than half-do them I was obliged to adopt the alternative of leaving way for one who might devote the time necessary for discharging the duties of such an important position; and many happy meetings may our newly-elected R.W.M. enjoy from his present appointment, and in my capacity of P.M. I shall only be too happy to render any assistance which he may require having for its object the well-being of our lodge. The happily chosen gift which you have so kindly presented to Mrs. Hamilton will, I am sure, be duly appreciated by her, and will long be preserved as a memento of your favour. The brethren will, therefore, accept our combined thanks for this very elegant and unique testimonial, asking you to excuse the brevity of my reply, as I know it is encroaching on your time, more especially as I see before me many interesting faces of the gentler sex doubtless wishing this sort of work over, that the hall may be prepared for more agreeable pastime, and inwardly wondering what like will be the Masonic grip in the may dance. I will, therefore, conclude by wishing the Caledonian Railway Lodge a continuation of the prosperity which she at present enjoys.

The proceedings were brought to a satisfactory close by an assembly, which was kept up with spirit till 2 a.m. Bro. A. W. Banks supplied the music during supper, and his excellent "quadrille band" was in attendance at the assembly.

Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73.

The annual festival of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 23rd ult., in their hall, 170, Buchanan-street. Bro. George McDonald, R.W.M., presided, supported by his officers, Thomas Stewart, I.P.M.; G. Wheeler, D.M.; J. Muntz, S.M.; W. Walton, S.W.; T. Donaldson, J.W.; P. Thompson, T.; S. S. Ampleford, Sec., &c. Sixty-three of the members and their wives, &c., sat down to an excellent repast served up in good style by Bro. Ouen, a member of the lodge. A concert followed, supported entirely by Masonic talent, after which dancing commenced, Bro. C. Ramsay acting as M.C. Quadrilles, waltzes, polkas, and country dances were kept up with unflagging spirit till 5 a.m., many of the ladies expressing an opinion that their opposition to Masonry would soon cease if entertainments of this nature were more frequent amongst them.

The above Chapter recently met at the Masonic Hall, Buchanan-street, on the Mark Degree, under the presidency of the M.E.Z., Comp. McEwan, assisted by Comps. Paul and Orr as S.W. and J.W.; G. W. Wheeler, as I.W. Visitors present: Comps. D. Gilchrist, Z. 73; Wheeler, 73; Adams and Cummings, Chapter 50. After labour the Companions partook of refreshment, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given with enthusiasm. Comps. Wheeler and Adams responded to that of the visitors, wishing prosperity to the St. Andrew's Chapter.

The usual monthly meeting of the above Chapter was held on the 28th ult. D. Gilchrist, Z.; Jas. Muntz, acting as H.; Jas. Findler, J.; G. McLeod, Scribe E.; G. W. Wheeler acting as P. Soj. Comp. J. O. Park, Z., of 122 Thetis Chapter, attended to ask to have Captain Scott, who was leaving the next day, advanced to the Mark Degree, which ceremony he conducted. The Second Principal of the Roslin Chapter, 119, also requested Comp. Gilchrist to exalt two brethren for them. This request was also acceded to, and Comp. Gilchrist, with the assistance of his officers, conferred the degree of Most Excellent Master on Bros. Scott, Hughes, and Leadbetter, and afterwards exalted them into the Royal Arch. Refreshment followed labour, when the Principals of the Thetis and Roslin proposed, in highly eulogistic terms, the health of the Z. and other officers of the Caledonian Unity, for their truly Masonic spirit evinced, not only on this but also on former occasions, in exalting their members, and also for the very efficient way in which all the ceremonies had been rendered. Comp. Gilchrist, in reply, expressed the pleasure it gave him to be of service to his Masonic brethren.

Thistle and Shamrock Chapter, No. 87.

This Chapter met in their Hall, Struthers-street, and Comp. D. Gilchrist, Z. of 73, installed J. Stevenson as First Principal Z; David Brown, as H.; and Charles Bishop, as J; the other officers are A. Mackroyd, Scribe E.; J. Clanachan, T.; Michil Clanachan, 1st Soj.; George McAllister, 1st A.S.; G. Brown, 2nd A.S. At the request of the newly-installed Z., Comp. Gilchrist conferred the degree of Most Excellent Master on three brethren, and afterwards exalted them in the Royal Arch. All the ceremonies were distinguished by that correct and impressive rendering which marks Comp. Gilchrist's working; he was ably assisted by the P. Soj. About twenty members of the Chapter were present, and amongst the visitors we noticed Comps. Cowan, of 69, and G. W. Wheeler, of 73.

HOLYTOWN.

The St. John Woodhall Lodge, No. 305, held their annual banquet and ball on Friday, the 24th ult., in the Masons' Hall, Holytown, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with evergreens and the flowers of the season. A large number of the brethren, together with a few friends and their wives and sweethearts, having partaken of an excellent banquet (served up in Bro. Kirkland's best style), under the presidency of the R.W.M., Bro. W. McMurdo, who was supported right and left by Depute and Substitute Masters Moffatt and Woddell, Mark Masters Bros. Cockburn and Chalmers, of Lodge No. 88. Bros. Mason and Douglas acted as Croupiers, supported by Bros. Cunningham, Sec.; Russell, Chaplain; and Wylie, of Lodge No. 177. After supper, dancing commenced, under the superintendence of Bro. Cunningham, M.C., and was kept up to an early hour.

IF IT IS NOT SPIRITS, WHAT IS IT?

I have been a member of the Masonic Fraternity for thirteen years, and in June, 1864, it was our good fortune to have a visit and a course of lectures at Susanville, Cal., from Mrs. Emma Hardinge. During her stay we were privileged to receive her as a guest at our home.

The 24th of June was celebrated by the Masons, and while making preparations, I had some Masonic emblems in our parlour; and Mrs. Hardinge became partially controlled, and, while in that condition, and during a running conversation, she gave me two Masonic signs and two words in a manner that was not observable by herself or any one else present.

For the time I was very much surprised, it being the first Masonic sign that I had ever received from a spiritual source. When the influence left her, I asked her if she would meet with a few Masons in our parlour, and see what the spirits would do. She said she was willing to give her time. I invited some twelve or fifteen brothers from Lupen Lodge, No. 149—among them were the Master and Wardens. They met in our parlour, and the family retired to another part of the house. The doors were locked and the window-blinds closed. We all being seated around the room, Mrs. Hardinge became entranced, and to all appearance perfectly oblivious to surrounding conditions. She acted in the capacity of Master; went through the work of opening the lodge in the first degree of Masonry. She gave all the lectures, signs, and words pertaining to the degree in regular order; closed in that degree; opened in the next, giving everything in regular order; and so on through what is known as the Blue Lodge. After closing on the Master's degree, she gave us a very impressive address on the morals and teachings of Masonry, and remarked that she would like to have gone on through higher degrees, but she saw that was as far as any of us had gone (which was the case). This I give upon the honour of a man and a Mason. I say, let the sceptic deride. I know all the resources that Mrs. Hardinge would be likely to have to gain Masonic secrets and knowledge; and then, when we take into account the high moral character, and consider how far it would be from her, even if it were possible for her to have gained this knowledge from any other than a spiritual source, she would never have used it and claimed it to be from spirits. I cannot account for it upon any hypothesis, except that she was entranced and controlled by a spirit that knew more Masonry than all of us combined. I am thoroughly convinced that, in her normal condition, she knows nothing of the secrets of Masonry.

During the whole course of my investigation of spiritualism, I have tried to account for many of the tests I have received in some other way; but when I lay aside the agency of spirits, it is all a mystery.—P. Chamberlin, in the "Banner of Light."

A MASONIC TOUR.

I spoke to some soldiers—first and last seen by me in America. They are smart, well-dressed men. They told me they seldom leave the forts—not being allowed in towns, except on leave; people don't like them. Privates receive 16, and sergeants 24 dollars monthly, with food; they serve five years.

Nearing Mount Vernon the bell was tolled. This is and has been the custom for years by all vessels approaching this memorable spot, as a mark of respect to Washington. We landed on a temporary pier, walked up hill a bit through the grounds, and soon reached the resting-place of America's great hero, the noble Washington. On the summit, and facing the Potomac, is a covered brick vault, with an iron gate. Within are two marble tombs. The one to the right (the largest) is Washington's, the other his wife's, and there are several other tombs and monuments outside belonging to his family. The vault and tomb of Worshipful Bro. Washington (once the Master of a lodge), I am sorry to say, are much neglected. With veneration I uncovered before the tomb, gathered a few ivy leaves, &c., and afterwards entered the house and garden, planned and built by the old chief. There are several relics still left in his library, bed-room (where he died), &c., but all sadly neglected. The rooms being open, and the furniture, pictures, &c., unguarded. The room occupied by Lafayette, his great friend and general, is in good order, and the key of the Bastille, brought from France by Lafayette, still hangs in the hall. A visitor's book is kept, and subscriptions are received for repairs by the lady in charge. On inquiry, I found that the lady, Mrs. Cunningham, as also her gardener, were ill—hence much of the neglect noticed. But there are not funds sufficient for general repairs, which should be taken in hand by the Government. At present the estate, &c., is in the hands of, and partly managed by, a committee of ladies. I believe the Americans, particularly the Masons, need only to be informed of this neglect, and affairs will soon mend. Mount Vernon is sixteen miles from Washington; boats ply twice daily between, the fare being 1 dol.

Passed on to Acquia Creek, where the train waits for Richmond. Entered train, and started off, passing the Rapahanock River (boundary during rebellion), Fredericksburgh (where General Jackson received his death wound), and Avlington Heights, where some fierce fighting took place. Here thousands of headstones and graves mark the resting-places of the poor slain soldiers of both armies. The American flag floats high over the heads of the slain. These and other battle-fields are numerous on this line on the way to Richmond, the capital of Virginia (or Va., as it is written). Distance from Washington, 130 miles; fare, 7½ dollars—nearly 3d. a mile, a high rate. The country is poor and uninteresting—pine forest, long prairie and grass only to be seen—few towns or farms meet the view. The people along the line, as well as those I meet here, appear sad, look poor, and I fear are so from the war.

Richmond is in a wretched plight. The State house is in bad repair, streets and houses ditto. Hundreds of houses and factories were burned down by the stupid Confederate troops when retreating, and these houses, roofless ruins, give the place a wretched appearance. There are hundreds of one-armed and one-legged men in the city, some of whom are employed in hotels, offices, &c. The black population is numerous—car-drivers, porters, and house servants belong chiefly to this class. There is a splendid equestrian statue of Washington adorning, along with others, the public garden near the State House. There are two immense monuments to the slain—the triangular pyramid to the memory of the Confederate soldiers, and the other to the Federals—R.I.P. Richmond is on the James, a wide but shallow river, not navigable here. This was the boundary during the war. It was on this river (but lower down) that the U. S. gunboats did so much injury.

Regarding Masonry, there are three lodges, one chapter, and one K.T. encampment. I visited the latter, but too early, so went off, hoping to return, which heavy rain prevented me doing. So I can only describe the room as poor, and the lodge I found the same. Alas! Masonry, like everything else here, is poor—at a standstill through the war. The old Tyler informed me that the Federals, on entering the city, sent a guard to look after the lodge property, &c., so he nor the brethren of Richmond have anything to complain of on this head. On the contrary, numerous cases are recorded where life, liberty, and property have been spared through Masonry during that bloody and unnatural war. I did not hear anything of the coloured Masons here; the whites would not tolerate them in this part.

I am staying in Ford's Hotel; 2½ dollars a day; nice house, but dull—as, indeed, is the place in general. How different to the North. No theatre, no life, stir, or trade—all too plainly proving how terribly deep are the wounds and loss sustained through the war by poor Richmond.

I start for the West to-morrow; you will probably hear of me from Chicago or Niagara. Ere closing, let me describe the American "cars." They are about 50 x 10, double the size of ours; have water-closet, stove, water, washhand-stand, towel, and mirror in each end. In the winter hot-air pipes all round and under the feet. The seats (for two persons) are on each side, and have reversable, well-cushioned backs, so that four friends can sit and enjoy a chat together. The seats are covered with velvet of various colours, bound with German silver or brass, the inside and out being most elaborately ornamented, painted, &c. There is a window opposite each seat, of which there are fifteen on either side, so that sixty passengers travel in each "car." A door in each end, and a passage in the centre, permits going from end to end of train. A smoking car, drawing-room ditto, and on long-journey trains, a sleeping and a dining car accompany the train. The latter are palaces, and will be noticed in my next. The smoking car, besides usual accommodation, have card tables and easy chairs, and in fact every comfort for gentlemen; so that between smoking, cards, and pleasant, easy corners, time flies. Smoking, however, is only allowed in this car, the Americans being most strict on this and other points of etiquette. I have now travelled nearly 400 miles by railway, and never seen the slightest act of rudeness; smoking or spitting in non-smoking cars (which we hear so much of at home) would subject the offender to expulsion and loss of fare. You meet and travel here with the best of society, all being equal in the United States, yet I have never seen or even heard of anything that the most delicate or fastidious would or could object to. Travelling here is a luxury that we at home, in our comfortless hencoops or cold horse-boxes, are strangers to. Adieu for the present.

MARK MASONRY.

CONSECRATION OF THE HOLMESDALE LODGE, No. 129, AT RAMSGATE.

The brethren of Ramsgate, ever energetic and efficient in the performance of their duties, whether as Craft or Arch Masons, have completed the good work of universal Masonry by inaugurating, with perfect success and great éclat, on the 20th inst., the Mark Master's degree in that part of the Province of Kent.

Bro. F. Binckes, the G.S., being nominated by the M.W.G.M. to consecrate the lodge, he, as W.M., assisted by Bro. Loewenstark, P.G.I.G. as S.W., and Bro. R. Boncey, P.M. 86, as J.W., opened the lodge, when the following brethren, after having been approved of by ballot, were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master:—Bros. T. H. G. Snowden, P.M. 429, P.Z. and P.P.G.J.W.; B. Z. Hiscocks, P.M., P.P.G.J.D.; the Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, Vicar, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; John G. Ellerm, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; J. J. Darby, W.M. 429; Henry Wootton, J.W. 1209; John Mitchell, I.G. 1209; Capt. Sunkey, P.M. and P.Z.; A. H. Boys, P.M., P.P.G.R.; George Meager; G. Osborne; H. C. Furr, S.W. 1208; A. Gardner, W.M. 1206.

Bro. Viscount Holmesdale, M.W.P.G.M.M., (after whom the lodge is named), having arrived, was received and saluted in due form. The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with by Bro. Binckes, and in which the noble Lord assisted, Bro. the Rev. Sicklemore, the Vicar, acting as Chaplain. Bro. Viscount Holmesdale then presented Bro. George Neale, W.M.-designate, for installation, and he having answered the usual queries, all below the chair retired, and he was installed into the chair of Adonhiram in the Board of Masters, and then appointed the following officers:—L. Finch, P.P.G.D.C., S.W.; W. M. Cavell, Mayor of Deal, P.P.G.J.W., J.W.; Rev. J. Sicklemore, Chap.; Hiscocks, Sec.; Snowden, M.O.; Ellerm, S.O.; Darby, J.O.; Osborne, S.D.; Gardner, J.D.; Mitchell, I.G. H. Wootton, was elected Treas.; and G. Meager, Tyler.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, Bro. Binckes was loudly applauded for his perfect working. Bro. Lord Holmesdale was proposed as an Honorary Member, but his Lordship remarked he would, if they had no objection, prefer to become a joining member if any one would kindly propose him as such. Bros. Binckes and Loewenstark were elected Honorary Members, and a cordial vote of thanks was given to them.

The business of the lodge being over the brethren adjourned to the banqueting-room.

The banquet was of the most recherché description, and the W.M., supported on his right by Lord Holmesdale and on his left by Bro. Binckes, did the honours of the table as an old experienced Past Master.

The visitors present were: Bros. R. Boncey, P.M. 86; O. Phillips, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.S.W.; W. Stanley, and Capt. Burgess.

The proceedings throughout were marked with considerable enthusiasm, and the whole of the arrangements were carefully and efficiently carried out. In fact many Grand Officers had been expected, and preparations made for their reception in truly princely and Masonic style, and some slight disappointment was expressed at their absence, though apologies had been received. The charity-box was handed round, and produced two guineas, to be given to the Boys' School.

It must be a source of congratulation to the Ramsgate brethren to have had so successful and auspicious an opening, and we wish them further success.

Royal Sussex Lodge, No. 75.

The installation meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion, Brighton. There was a good attendance of the members, and at 5 o'clock p.m. the chair was taken by the W.M., Bro. Thos. Cook. Two Craft Masons were elected as members for advancement, and Bro. Munday, of No. 6 Mark Lodge under the Scotch Constitution, was elected a joining member and duly obligated under the English Constitution. Bros. H. Woollett (73) and G. Emary (315), who had been elected at a previous meeting, were regularly introduced and advanced to the degree of Mark Master Masons.

The chair was then taken by Bro. Cunningham, P.G. J.O., and Bro. Thos. J. Sabine, P.G.A.D.C., presented Bro. W. Hudson, P.M. 315 Craft Lodge and P.P.G.D. Sussex, the S.W. and W.M.-elect, to be installed into the chair of Adonhiram according to ancient usage, after which ceremony the newly-installed W.M. invested his officers as follows:—Bros. T. Cook, I.P.M.; S. R. Ade, S.W.; J. Robinson, J.W.; G. R. Lockyer, Treas.; J. Curtis, Sec.; Hornsey, M.O.; Berry, S.O.; Cowley, J.O.; Ebberall, S.D.; Slatyer, J.D.; J. N. Stoner, I.G.; J. M. Cunningham, Chaplain; Thos. J. Sabine, D.C.; Pearson and H. Woollett, Stewards. The address to the Master was given by the Installing Master, and those to the Wardens and Overseers by Bro. T. J. Sabine. The installation ceremony was brought to a close with the general address to the members. The report of the Audit Committee, which showed that the financial position of the lodge is good and the number of members steadily increasing, was then received and adopted. All business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in perfect harmony at 7 o'clock, and the brethren, to the number of twenty, adjourned to the Terminus Hotel (Bro. Pearson's) where a banquet of most excellent quality was supplied. All present were earnest in their praise of the catering and the excellent quality of the wines, proving that the fame of this well-known hotel has not been raised upon imperfect experience.

The cloth having been cleared and the dessert placed on the table, the W.M., Bro. W. Hudson, gave the toasts always honoured on such occasions. In proposing "The health of the Grand Master of the Order, Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, he said he had had only one opportunity of visiting the Grand Lodge of Mark Masons, and the manner in which he was received, the intelligent method of conducting the business, and the very fraternal manner in which every subject was discussed most deeply impressed him, and he would advise every Mark Mason to seek an opportunity of attending Grand Mark Lodge, the great privilege of so doing being (so he understood) granted to every Mark Master Mason who was a subscribing member of a Lodge, whether in office or not. (The toast was received and honoured with hearty applause.)

The W.M. next proposed "The health of the Deputy Grand Master of the Order, Bro. the Earl Percy, and the Grand Officers present and past." In reference to this toast, the W.M. said: Brethren, I can assure you that our noble brother the Earl Percy is, I faithfully believe, actuated by a sincere desire to promote Mark Masonry in all its purity and to render the Order a model Order; and I am sure that assisted by such Grand Officers as were assembled in Grand Mark Lodge on the occasion just now referred to by me, all of whom appeared to be possessed of one feeling—that of so placing this Order before the Masonic world as should demand the respect of all true Masons. In my own mind I am certain that the brethren present to-night will readily testify with me to the merits of our excellent brothers Cunningham and Sabine. The latter was one of the original founders of this lodge, the former is one of its most active and useful members, and both, through good and evil report have ever stood firmly and faithfully by the Royal Sussex Lodge, have helped on its success in every way and in every respect (hear, hear), and thoroughly earned the honours which the R.W.G.M. was pleased to confer upon them. (The toast was drunk with much enthusiasm.)

Bro. Cunningham, P.M. 75, P.G.J.O., in reply, said that from the day of his advancement into the privileges of Mark Masonry until the present moment he was deeply impressed with the great importance and the true Masonic value of this the most beautiful and instructive of all the degrees in Freemasonry. Its teachings were of the most exalted character, its tendencies of the most moral kind, its influences of the most benevolent stamp, and its practices of the most generous disposition towards the wants and necessities of the poorer and more distressed brethren. There were those in the ranks of Craft Masonry, holding high provincial-office and exercising great authority in matters relating thereto, who were pleased to go so far as to call Mark Masons impostors and their degree a sham; but such brethren knew little of them or their Order, and it was much to be regretted that such a narrow-minded and bigoted spirit should be displayed, and that so much influential authority should be exercised in disparagement of this Order. He claimed and would assert that every Mark Master Mason was as good, if not better, than any other Mason, and if every Craft Mason was also a Mark Mason he would be the better for it. (Applause.) For my own part (he continued), I thank you most sincerely for the honour you have paid our Grand Mark Lodge and me as one of its humble members, and you may rely that my best endeavours, my best efforts, and my best influence will ever be devoted to Mark Masonry in general and to the Royal Sussex Lodge in particular, and to the spreading of knowledge in connection with Mark Master Masonry. (Loud applause.)

Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.M. 22, P.G.A.D.C., (upon the unanimous call of the brethren), rose and thanked them on behalf of the Grand Officers present and past. It was true, most faithfully true, he had stood loyally by the lodge since its first establishment. It had been a task requiring great patience, and he was sorry to say, in many instances, great forbearance, in consequence of the unwise opposition that Bro. Turner, the late deeply-lamented Bro. Goulty, and himself had to encounter. It was a true saying that "a man who can afford to wait is sure to succeed." He had waited for, and watched over, the fortunes of this lodge, and he was indeed rewarded to find that the number of subscribing members exceeded forty, and that they worked so well and worthily together. The records of Grand Lodge proved beyond a doubt that Mark Masonry was making rapid progress. Every month new lodges were being opened in all parts of the world. All the leading members of Grand Craft Lodge of England were members of the Order; the present Deputy Grand Master, Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, was a Past Grand Master of Mark Masons; and on the muster-roll of the Grand Mark Lodge of England and Wales and the Colonies and Dependencies of the British Crown are enrolled all the most illustrious names of those who have distinguished themselves in Craft Masonry. Let any impartial brother search and compare the respective muster-rolls of the two Grand Lodges referred to, and he would be at once convinced of the truth of what he (Bro. Sabine) had stated. Mark Masons paid this respect to Craft Masonry—no one could be advanced to the honourable degree of a Mark Master unless he had previously been advanced to that of Master Mason. Bro. Sabine concluded thus: My past devotion to this lodge—my faithful adherence to Grand Mark Lodge, of which I have the distinguished honour of being a Past Grand Officer—is the most earnest assurance I can give you as to what my devotion shall be in the future, and before resuming my seat permit me to say that the time is not far distant when Sussex shall be constituted a Grand Province under the Grand Mark Lodge of England. (Great applause.)

The W.M. then presented, in the name of the lodge, a very handsome P.M.'s jewel to the retiring W.M. It bears the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. Thomas Cook, for his valuable and efficient services to the Royal Sussex Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 75, E.C., previous to, but more especially during, his year of office as W.M. 1870-71."

Bro. Cook suitably returned thanks.

Various other toasts were proposed and responded to, and the brethren separated just before 12 o'clock, having most thoroughly enjoyed the annual celebration of the establishment of the first and only lodge of Mark Masonry in the county of Suffolk.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Mark Lodge, No. 102.—The annual meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Carnarvon Hall, Regent-street, Weston-super-Mare, on Wednesday evening, the 15th inst., when there was a good assemblage of M.M.'s present. In the absence of the W.M. of the lodge (Bro. General Munbee) from indisposition, Bro. Capt. Irwin, the D.P.Gr. Master (designate) of the Province, presided. After the customary formalities and the transaction of sundry matters of business, Bro. J. C. Sharp, P.M. Craft, and P.P.G.S. of Works, of Hlmister, was admitted and advanced to the degree of M.M. Mason, the D.G.P.M. Irwin and officers conducting the elaborate ceremonial in splendid form. The visiting brethren present from Bath, Bristol, Brislington, &c., expressed themselves highly pleased with the form of working. Bro. Frederick Vizard, P.M. Craft, and Prov. G.S. of Works, was then duly inaugurated as W.M. of this Mark Lodge, 102. The W.M., Bro. Vizard, then appointed his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. W. H. Davies, S.W.; Benjamin Cox, J.W.; Rev. R. H. Rigsby, Chap.; Capt. John Townsend, Treas.; C. H. Whereat, Sec.; E. T. Inskip, Reg. of Marks; S. Jones, M.O.; E. Gregory, S.O.; A. W. Butter, J.O.; R. C. Else, S.D.; E. H. Swete, M.D., Org.; Major Vizard, I.G.; and W. T. Male, Tyler. A large number of Craft Masons were proposed for advancement at the next meeting, and other matters of business having been discussed, the W.M. closed the lodge, after seeing that every brother had received his just due. The brethren then adjourned to the York hotel, and after the banquet, various speeches followed, the brethren separating at an early hour.

Reports of the meetings of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex, Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, &c., and several reviews are reluctantly postponed.

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXER.—Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that delirium which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixer, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease." "This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Comfort for the Afflicted. —When the blood becomes impure through breathing foul air, or through the imperfect performance of any bodily function, the greatest benefit will be derived from these pills, whose purifying, alterative, and tonic virtues are too well known to need any commendation here. After taking a few doses, a marked amendment will be felt from day to day, the appetite will grow better, the stomach stronger, the liver wholesomely active, and the bowels naturally regular. While taking these pills there is no danger of catching cold, nor save the simplest precautions (plainly set forth in the "directions for use") necessary for securing the full beneficial results derivable from the well-known world-esteemed medicine.—[Advt.]

Reviews.

An Introduction to the Reading and Study of the English Bible. By WILLIAM CARPENTER, author of "Scientia Biblica," "Scripture Natural History," &c.; editor of "Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible;" fifth large edition and abridgment. Three vols. S. W. Partridge and Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

We hail the republication of this learned and luminous work with very great pleasure, inasmuch as the present time is truly one of transition, both as regards the political world and the religious world. As the author aptly remarks in his preface, the "religious thought" of mankind is "stirred up from its very depths." We live in an age when all super-mundane agencies are ignored—all divine inspiration denied—all the "strains of high belief, so heavenlike, so sublime," utterly derided and despised. The wildest and most visionary theories are propounded day by day and find eager disciples; communism in social politics, and rationalism—so-called—in points of faith, are spreading fast around us, and we quite agree with our Brother Carpenter that it is the duty of every man who values the precious treasures contained in the Scriptures, to place those treasures within the reach of all who read and think.

In the handsome work now under review, we have no hesitation in saying that Brother Carpenter has fully attained his desired object. To a chaste and perspicuous style, he adds a thorough comprehension of the lofty truths elucidated and enforced in the pages of the Bible. Years of study must have been consumed to give our venerable and venerated confrere so great a mastery over the text as to enable him to illustrate it with such conspicuous power and eloquence of expression. The secret, we fancy, lies in the fact that Brother Carpenter is fully imbued with the grandeur of his theme, and conceives no effort of intellect sufficiently adequate to convey to the reader its surpassing interest and importance. And it is precisely this feeling which ever leads to the accomplishment of a great literary success. Perfection rests upon the mountain-top—let us struggle towards it. We cannot however, accept our author's modest estimate of his book as an "attempt;" on the contrary, we consider it to be a well-digested, well-matured, and exhaustive work upon the Holy Scriptures, and these attributes really confer upon it permanent value for reference hereafter. But it is more than this: it is not merely doctrinal—not merely a concordance or an historical summary—but a fair and impartial interpretation of those obscure passages and symbolic phrases with which certain portions of the sacred volume abound.

We confess that we have not yet had time to peruse thoroughly, and to analyse minutely, these excellent volumes, but we may say that they fully sustain the fame of their veteran author, who, now that the shades of three-score-and-ten years rest upon his brow, is as zealous as ever in the good cause of rational freedom—civil and religious. The extraordinary range of thought which the work embraces may be faintly imagined from the following list of its contents, as published in Parts:—1. The English Bible: How to read and study it. 2. The Symbolical and Figurative Language of the Bible. 3. The Beauties and Peculiarities of Style in the Bible. 4. Modern Infidelity and Bibliophobia, and the objects and influences of the Bible. 5. Biblical Natural History: Astronomy, Geology, and Botany. 6. Biblical Natural History: Zoography. 7. The Sources and Character of Scriptural Difficulties, real and imaginary. 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12. Examination of Scriptural Difficulties; the Pentateuch; the Post-Mosaic Histories; the Poetic and Prophetic Books, and Gospels of Matthew and Mark; Luke to Colossians; Colossians to Jude.

Such is a brief outline of the task which Bro. Carpenter has set himself to perform, and which he has accomplished so admirably and completely. To all—and who is not?—interested in the study of the oldest and best book written for man, we can confidently recommend "An Introduction," with the certain conviction that it will make many doubtful points clear, and illuminate with rays of wisdom many apparently dark and unintelligible allegories.

The Marquis of Lorne and the Clan Campbell. John Hogg, York-street, Covent-garden.

This very neat and pleasant work contains an epitome of the history of the house of Argyll, and is extremely interesting at the present moment, when all England—and of course we include the "land of the mountain and the flood"—is rejoicing over the marriage of the Royal Louise with the heir of Lorne. The vicissitudes of fortune that have befallen the Campbell house during the last six centuries are faithfully portrayed, and the chronicle is one which may well awaken conflicting thoughts of joy and sadness in the minds of all who read. Now, however, the glories of the house appear to have culminated in the royal alliance which has just been consummated; and in cordially counselling our readers to secure a copy of "The Marquis of Lorne and the Clan Campbell," we may be permitted to hope that the auspicious event which has caused its advent may prove the commencement of a long career of happiness to the Princess and her noble consort.

History of the Lodge of Hengist, No. 195. By Bro. Rev. P. H. NEWNHAM, W.M. London: Bro. R. Spencer, 26, Great Queen-street.

[EXTRACT.]

It seems to be generally understood that Thomas Dunckerley was a natural son of George II.; and a considerable pension allowed him by the Crown, in acknowledgment of this claim, placed him in easy circumstances. His life was a varied one. In early youth he studied for the law; was subsequently called to the bar, and practised his profession. At a later period, however, we find that he was employed in the navy, and that he took part in active service at the siege of Quebec. As a Freemason, his services to the Craft commenced in early life, and in recognition of these he was ultimately honoured with the chair of S.G.W.; and it was specially ordered by G.L. that he should always take precedence of all Past Senior Grand Wardens. He was P.G.M. for Bristol, Dorset, Essex, Gloucester, Hereford, Somerset, Hants, and the Isle of Wight; and after the formal constitution of the Royal Arch Degree, he was Grand Superintendent for these same provinces, together with Wilts, Devon, Kent, Nottingham, Surrey, Suffolk, Sussex, and Warwick in addition. Nor did he limit himself to the study of Craft Masonry only; but heartily identified himself with those other orders which, as his large Masonic researches had, no doubt, convinced him, have for the last 700 years been more or less closely allied with that Masonry which, in some of its so-called "Landmarks," is probably less ancient, if not less genuine, than those other orders. Thus we find that he presided over the Revival of the Order of Knights Templar in England in its present exclusively Masonic form; and that for some years after this revival (in 1790) he was M.E. and S.G.M. of Knights Rosa Crucis and Knights Templar (degrees of chivalric and philosophical Masonry which, at that time, were worked under one Constitution); and that he composed a lecture, which for some time was worked in K.T. Encampments under the name of "Dunckerley's Sections." Perhaps, however, the most important fact to be noted in connection with Dunckerley's Masonic career is his early connexion with the establishment of the R.A. Degree upon a recognised basis.* This Degree (originally known as "Dermott's Degree") was in the first place constructed out of materials extracted from two degrees previously worked on the Continent (and which probably originated in Germany) by the seceding brethren about the year 1738; and apparently, in the first place, with no higher design than to widen the gulf between themselves and the Constitutional Masons. It appears to have been practised in England, exclusively by these Seceders, for about thirty years, during which time some modification or other of the Degree had been introduced into Scotland, Ireland, and America; while it was still ignored by our own Grand Lodge. Dunckerley, perceiving that the Degree had taken a hold upon the Masonic system too strong to be shaken off, wisely resolved to join in the movement for establishing it among the ranks of the Constitutional Masons, which originated with Heseltine and others about 1766-9. Accordingly he visited the so-called "Ancient" Lodges, carefully studying their rights, and eliminating therefrom much that was incongruous; and thus, shortly after the date of the formation of our lodge, he brought out that modification of the Seceder's Ritual which was known as "Dunckerley's Degree," and was, no doubt, the foundation of our present R.A. Degree, although I believe that a very small portion of the original ritual would be recognised by the R.A. Masons of the present day. After a public Masonic career of nearly half a century, Dunckerley died at Portsmouth in 1795, at the age of 71. He was a man, not only of great learning, but of thoroughly and genuinely liberal mind. His speeches possessed much grace and much humour, as well as real eloquence, and undoubtedly did good service in advancing the best interests of Masonry. In private life he was distinguished by a large-hearted charity; and it is said that he treasured seriously upon his income by his readiness to assist every case of distress.

* It does not appear, as is supposed by some, that Dunckerley was actually the originator of the "Modern" R.A. Degree. As remarked above, warrants for the working of this Degree were issued by Grand Chapter in 1769, in which year one was granted to the Chapter of Friendship, Portsmouth—on which, although it was within his own special province, Dunckerley's name does not appear, a strong piece of presumptive evidence that he was not as yet connected with the Degree. The first warrant on which his name does appear is that granted to the Chapter of Concord, No. 13, Southampton, which was issued in 1777, though the chapter did not work until 1793.
