Reviews.

An Introduction to the Reading and Study of the English Bible. By WILLIAM CARPENTER, author of "Scientia Biblica," "Scripture Natural History," &c.; editor of "Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible;" fifth large edition and abridgment. Three vols. S. W. Partridge and Co., 9, Paternoster-row.

We hail the republication of this learned and luminous work with very great pleasure, inasmuch as the present time is truly one of transition, both as regards the political world and the religious world. As the author aptly remarks in his preface, the "religious thought" of mankind is "stirred up from its very depths." We live in an age when all super-mundane agencies are ignored—all divine inspiration denied—all the "strains of high belief, so heavenlike, so sublime," utterly derided and despised. The wildest and most visionary theories are propounded day by day and find eager disciples; communism in social politics, and rationalism—so-called—in points of faith, are spreading fast around us, and we quite agree with our Brother Carpenter that it is the duty of every man who values the precious treasures contained in the Scriptures, to place those treasures within the reach of all who read and think.

In the handsome work now under review, we have no hesitation in saying that Brother Carpenter has fully attained his desired object. To a chaste and perspicuous style, he adds a thorough comprehension of the lofty truths elucidated and enforced in the pages of the Bible. Years of study must have been consumed to give our venerable and venerated confrere so great a mastery over the text as to enable him to illustrate it with such conspicuous power and eloquence of expression. The secret, we fancy, lies in the fact that Brother Carpenter is fully imbued with the grandeur of his theme, and conceives no effort of intellect sufficiently adequate to convey to the reader its surpassing interest and importance. And it is precisely this feeling which ever leads to the accomplishment of a great literary success. Perfection rests upon the mountain-top—let us struggle towards it. We cannot however, accept our author's modest estimate of his book as an "attempt;" on the contrary, we consider it to be a well-digested, well-matured, and exhaustive work upon the Holy Scriptures, and these attributes really confer upon it permanent value for reference hereafter. But it is more than this: it is not merely doctrinal—not merely a concordance or an historical summary—but a fair and impartial interpretation of those obscure passages and symbolic phrases with which certain portions of the sacred volume abound.

We confess that we have not yet had time to peruse thoroughly, and to analyse minutely, these excellent volumes, but we may say that they fully sustain the fame of their veteran author, who, now that the shades of three-score-and-ten years rest upon his brow, is as zealous as ever in the good cause of rational freedom—civil and religious. The extraordinary range of thought which the work embraces may be faintly imagined from the following list of its contents, as published in Parts:—1. The English Bible: How to read and study it. 2. The Symbolical and Figurative Language of the Bible. 3. The Beauties and Peculiarities of Style in the Bible. 4. Modern Infidelity and Bibliophobia, and the objects and influences of the Bible. 5. Biblical Natural History: Astronomy, Geology, and Botany. 6. Biblical Natural History: Zoography. 7. The Sources and Character of Scriptural Difficulties, real and imaginary. 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12. Examination of Scriptural Difficulties; the Pentateuch; the Post-Mosaic Histories; the Poetic and Prophetic Books, and Gospels of Matthew and Mark; Luke to Colossians; Colossians to Jude.

Such is a brief outline of the task which Bro. Carpenter has set himself to perform, and which he has accomplished so admirably and completely. To all—and who is not?—interested in the study of the oldest and best book written for man, we can confidently recommend "An Introduction," with the certain conviction that it will make many doubtful points clear, and illuminate with rays of wisdom many apparently dark and unintelligible allegories.

The Marquis of Lorne and the Clan Campbell. John Hogg, York-street, Covent-garden.

This very neat and pleasant work contains an epitome of the history of the house of Argyll, and is extremely interesting at the present moment, when all England—and of course we include the "land of the mountain and the flood"—is rejoicing over the marriage of the Royal Louise with the heir of Lorne. The vicissitudes of fortune that have befallen the Campbell house during the last six centuries are faithfully portrayed, and the chronicle is one which may well awaken conflicting thoughts of joy and sadness in the minds of all who read. Now, however, the glories of the house appear to have culminated in the royal alliance which has just been consummated; and in cordially counselling our readers to secure a copy of "The Marquis of Lorne and the Clan Campbell," we may be permitted to hope that the auspicious event which has caused its advent may prove the commencement of a long career of happiness to the Princess and her noble consort.

History of the Lodge of Hengist, No. 195. By Bro. Rev. P. H. NEWNHAM, W.M. London: Bro. R. Spencer, 26, Great Queen-street.

[EXTRACT.]

It seems to be generally understood that Thomas Dunckerley was a natural son of George II.; and a considerable pension allowed him by the Crown, in acknowledgment of this claim, placed him in easy circumstances. His life was a varied one. In early youth he studied for the law; was subsequently called to the bar, and practised his profession. At a later period, however, we find that he was employed in the navy, and that he took part in active service at the siege of Quebec. As a Freemason, his services to the Craft commenced in early life, and in recognition of these he was ultimately honoured with the chair of S.G.W.; and it was specially ordered by G.L. that he should always take precedence of all Past Senior Grand Wardens. He was P.G.M. for Bristol, Dorset, Essex, Gloucester, Hereford, Somerset, Hants, and the Isle of Wight; and after the formal constitution of the Royal Arch Degree, he was Grand Superintendent for these same provinces, together with Wilts, Devon, Kent, Nottingham, Surrey, Suffolk, Sussex, and Warwick in addition. Nor did he limit himself to the study of Craft Masonry only; but heartily identified himself with those other orders which, as his large Masonic researches had, no doubt, convinced him, have for the last 700 years been more or less closely allied with that Masonry which, in some of its so-called "Landmarks," is probably less ancient, if not less genuine, than those other orders. Thus we find that he presided over the Revival of the Order of Knights Templar in England in its present exclusively Masonic form; and that for some years after this revival (in 1790) he was M.E. and S.G.M. of Knights Rosa Crucis and Knights Templar (degrees of chivalric and philosophical Masonry which, at that time, were worked under one Constitution); and that he composed a lecture, which for some time was worked in K.T. Encampments under the name of "Dunckerley's Sections." Perhaps, however, the most important fact to be noted in connection with Dunckerley's Masonic career is his early connexion with the establishment of the R.A. Degree upon a recognised basis.* This Degree (originally known as "Dermott's Degree") was in the first place constructed out of materials extracted from two degrees previously worked on the Continent (and which probably originated in Germany) by the seceding brethren about the year 1738; and apparently, in the first place, with no higher design than to widen the gulf between themselves and the Constitutional Masons. It appears to have been practised in England, exclusively by these Seceders, for about thirty years, during which time some modification or other of the Degree had been introduced into Scotland, Ireland, and America; while it was still ignored by our own Grand Lodge. Dunckerley, perceiving that the Degree had taken a hold upon the Masonic system too strong to be shaken off, wisely resolved to join in the movement forestablishing it among the ranks of the Constitutional Masons, which originated with Heseltine and others about 1766-9. Accordingly he visited the so-called "Ancient" Lodges, carefully studying their rights, and eliminating therefrom much that was incongruous; and thus, shortly after the date of the formation of our lodge, he brought out that modification of the Seceder's Ritual which was known as "Dunckerley's Degree," and was, no doubt, the foundation of our present R.A. Degree, although I believe that a very small portion of the original ritual would be recognised by the R.A. Masons of the present day. After a public Masonic career of nearly half a century, Dunckerley died at Portsmouth in 1795, at the age of 71. He was a man, not only of great learning, but of thoroughly and genuinely liberal mind. His speeches possessed much grace and much humour, as well as real eloquence, and undoubtedly did good service in advancing the best interests of Masonry. In private life he was distinguished by a large-hearted charity; and it is said that he treasured seriously upon his income by his readiness to assist every case of distress.

* It does not appear, as is supposed by some, that Dunckerley was actually the originator of the "Modern" R.A. Degree. As remarked above, warrants for the working of this Degree was issued by Grand Chapter in 1769, in which year one was granted to the Chapter of Friendship, Portsmouth—on which, although it was within his own special province, Dunckerley's name does not appear, a strong piece of presumptive evidence that he was not as yet connected with the Degree. The first warrant on which his name does appear is that granted to the Chapter of Concord, No. 13, Southampton, which was issued in 1777, though the chapter did not work until 1793.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

BY BRO WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

The arrangements made with the Royal Arch Chapters and K.T. Encampments, dated 5th September, 1805, are thus clearly expressed, and it is evident these degrees were sanctioned by the Grand Lodge, although as to regulations and management, they were to be kept distinct. The communication for 3rd July, 1807, however, shows that the Grand Treasurer presented the whole of the fees received from all the degrees in one and the same account. It is stated therein that the Grand Lodge excluded "Alexander Seton, late Deputy Grand Secretary, from the rights of Masonry" on the 2nd April, 1807. The following notice is also appended:—"It is necessary to caution brethren against publications issued by some persons from the Taylors' Hall, Backlane, affecting (without any right or authority, and in direct violation of the laws and constitutions of Masonry) to call themselves a Grand Lodge. And to assure the Craft that no Grand Lodge has been held at that place for these twelve months past. The brethren are further cautioned not to receive or sanction certificates signed G. D. Irvine and A. Seton, dated since the 1st May, 1806, as they have not held any office under the Grand Lodge of Ireland from that period." Then follows a list of "174 cancelled lodges"! or lodges erased from the books of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. The Grand Lodge lost no time in forwarding to the "Ancients" at London (with whom they held regular correspondence) particulars of the struggle on which they had entered, and the following is the report that Body made on the subject. It is somewhat amusing to read the resolutions of the "Ancients" on such a subject, seeing that they had initiated a similar secession some fifty years before, and had actually done their utmost to destroy the influence of the regular Grand Lodge of England:—

Grand Lodge "Ancients," London, 2nd September, 1807.

In consequence of certain representations and official documents have been transmitted by the R.W. Grand Lodge of Ireland to our R.W. Deputy Grand Master, and by him laid before the Grand Lodge on the 4th March last; the same were referred to a special committee, consisting of all present and past Grand Officers to examine into and consider the same, and report thereon; and the said committee having fully investigated those communications, presented a report thereon, whereby it appears—

"That for some time past a riotous and turbulent faction has existed amongst the Fraternity in Ireland, but which more particularly manifested itself on the 5th June, 1806, when a number of persons, at that time unknown to the Grand Lodge, through claiming to be Freemasons from the North of that kingdom, did assemble and obtrude themselves into the Grand Lodge, and there attempted, by force of numbers alone, to pass certain resolutions subversive of the true principles and usages of Masonry; and the said persons, after the Grand Lodge had been duly closed by the Deputy Grand Master and Grand Wardens, at a late hour, and after the Grand Officers and most of the Representatives of the Dublin lodges had retired, did affect to reopen the Grand Lodge, to rescind several of its solemn and deliberate Acts, to remove from their situations two of the most respectable and zealous officers of the Grand Lodge, and to substitute other persons in their places, contrary to the established laws and usages of the Craft.

"And that Alexander Seton, late Deputy Grand Secretary, appears to have been at the head of, and acting, aiding, and assisting in said illegal faction; and when called upon to deliver up the muniments and property in his hands belonging to the Grand Lodge, refused to comply therewith, whereupon the Grand Lodge of Ireland, upon the 2nd April last, expelled the said Alexander Seton from all his Masonic rights and privileges."

The foregoing report having been presented by said committee at the Quarterly Communication on the 3rd June last, the Grand Lodge unanimously adopted the following resolution, which was at this meeting unanimously confirmed, viz.:—

"That this R.W. Lodge shall not, upon any account, receive or acknowledge any certificate issued by and under the hand of said Alexander Seton, bearing date at any time subsequent to the 5th day of June, 1806; neither shall any person, by virtue of such certificate, be thereby received into any lodge under the sanction of this R.W. Lodge, nor shall any such person receive the honours of Masonry amongst us."

The next reference to the "differences" of importance is contained in the report of the monthly meeting held 7th day of April, 1808, when Bro. Alexander Seton was again accepted as a member of the Grand Lodge. From the "Communication" one would fancy that all opposition was over, and that harmony generally prevailed. Such, however, was not the case, as the Grand Lodge of the Seceders flourished most actively several years afterwards, and this same Bro. Seton was Deputy Grand Secretary even as late as 3rd June, 1812, and probably still longer.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

At the Monthly Meeting of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, held at the Taylors' Hall in the City of Dublin, on Thursday, the 7th day of April, 1808,

THE Earl of Donoughmore, Grand Master of Ireland, in the chair—his lordship having by circular letters to the different lodges signified his intention of presiding in person on that day. Present: Alexander Jaffray, Esq., Deputy Grand Master; Francis Fetherstone, Esq., Acting Senior Grand Warden; Henry Bunbury, Esq., Acting Junior Grand Warden; John Boardman, Esq., Grand Treasurer; John Leech, Esq.; the Honourable Francis Hely Hutchinson, the Honourable Abraham Hely Hutchinson, the Honourable and Reverend Lorenzo Hely Hutchinson, and several other members of the Grand Master's Lodge—together with a most numerous attendance of the Masters and Wardens of the several lodges of Ireland.

The Grand Master having called upon John Cuthbert, Esq., of the Grand Master's Lodge, to act as Secretary for the day, in order that the proceedings might be signed by a person who had not taken any part in the differences that had unhappily subsisted, and that nothing might be done that should call in question the rights of the parties who had appealed at a court of justice. He took his place at the table accordingly.

The Grand Master having desired to be informed whether the several books, papers, seals, and other muniments of the Order had been laid upon the table of the Grand Lodge, pursuant to the orders he had caused to be served for that purpose, and the same having been presented to his lordship, and laid upon the table accordingly:

His Lordship caused to be read a communication from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Munster, and numerous communications from the several lodges in the other provinces, in reply to his circular letter of the 26th ultimo, expressive of their full confidence in the interest his lordship has always shown for the welfare of the Order—calling upon him to interpose his authority to put an end to the existing differences, and assuring him of their full concurrence in such measures as he should think proper to adopt for that desirable purpose.

His Lordship, from the chair, proceeded to deliver his sentiments at considerable length upon the various subjects by which the harmony of the Order had been so much disturbed, and having animadverted upon the conduct of the different parties, and explicitly delivered his opinion as to their respective rights—And having stated to the Grand Lodge the only grounds on which, as he conceived, any just hope could be entertained of an amicable and permanent adjustment of these contentions which had so unhappily interrupted the harmony of Masonry—by mutual sacrifices on the part of those whose contests had nearly severed the Order into two opposite interests—armed against each other with a spirit of the most direct and avowed hostility—and above all things, by placing the offices of Grand Secretary and Deputy Grand Secretary in such hands, as to avoid the giving of a victory either to one party or to the other.—And his lordship, for the accomplishment of this object, looking only to the general meeting of the Grand Lodge at the regular and accustomed period for the annual election of Grand Officers—which period now so nearly approached—and having communicated his intention of selecting for the purpose of presiding at that election as Deputy Grand Master a member of the Grand Master's Lodge, most near to himself in blood, in feelings, and affection—who had been unmixed in any of the late differences—and around whom, therefore, all the brethren of the Order, however they may heretofore have differed in opinion, might assemble with the surest confidence and the certainty of meeting from him the most cordial efforts for a general and complete accommodation.

His Lordship declared his brother, the Honourable Abraham Hely Hutchinson, his Deputy Grand Master accordingly—distinctly stating, at the same time, that such appointment was not to be understood as conveying, in the remotest degree, any imputation upon the conduct of his late respectable Deputy, or as the withdrawing from him of that confidence and regard to which his zealous intentions towards the honour and interest of the Craft had at all times so fully entitled him.

And the Grand Master, not thinking that any good would be likely to result at the present moment from any attempt on his part to bring the subject of the existing differences of the Grand Lodge, in the shape of any substantive resolutions affirming or denying the rights of parties, which were at issue in a court of justice—although, by the unanimous resolution of one entire province, and by those of many other and most respectable lodges, his lordship had been armed with full power to decide finally thereupon for them and in their name. His lordship concluded with proposing the following resolution, which being seconded by Alexander Jaffray, Esq., late Deputy Grand Master—received the cordial approbation of every member present, and was unanimously adopted:—

"Resolved,—That it be strongly recommended to the members who compose the Grand Lodge, when they assemble together on Thursday, the 5th day of May next, for the election of Grand Officers for the ensuing year, to bring with them to this place, that spirit of mutual conciliation, friendship, and brotherly love, which alone can heal those wounds by the late unhappy contentions so deeply inflicted on the Order of Freemasonry in Ireland."

The Grand Master having called the attention of the Grand Lodge to a proceeding of theirs at a former meeting respecting an expulsion voted against Bro. Alexander Seton, under circumstances on which the Grand Master thought it his duty to animadvert, but which had now ceased to exist—all the muniments of the Order, of what kind soever, having been produced and delivered over to his lordship's custody as the head of the Order. His lordship proposed the following resolution, which being seconded by Brother John Williams, who avowed himself the mover of the expulsion, stated the circumstances under which he had then acted, as well as those which influenced his present conduct. The same was adopted without a dissentient voice.

On a re-consideration of all the circumstances which led to the resolution of the Grand Lodge for the expulsion of Brother Alexander Seton, and from the discussions which have taken place this day—and all the books and muniments of the Order having been now committed to the hands of the Grand Master—and the Grand Lodge being desirous to give an earnest of their cordial disposition to concur in those sentiments of conciliation so strongly recommended and impressed upon them by his lordship,

"Resolved,—That the said resolution be rescinded and expunged."

"Resolved,—That the proceedings of this day be printed, and transmitted to all the lodges of Ireland."

The Grand Master having communicated several applications from military brothers and others for new warrants and reviving old ones, the same were approved and ordered to be issued accordingly, on payment of the usual fees.

Ordered,—That the several petitions laid on the table this day be referred to the Committee of Charity.

And then the Grand Master closed the lodge till Thursday, the 5th day of May next, then to be here held for the election of Grand Officers and other business, at twelve o'clock at noon.

Signed by Order,

JOHN CUTHBERT, Acting Secretary.

We notice that the right of the Grand Lodge to issue a list of expulsions was disputed in 1808. The "item" of £325 2s. 10d. "was paid on account of costs incurred in an action brought against the Deputy Grand Secretary for having published the expulsion of the person above alluded to from Masonry. In this action a verdict was given for the defendant and affirmed by the Court of Common Pleas, whereby the right of the Grand Lodge to publish the names of persons expelled is established." "N.B.—An execution and attachment have been issued in these causes against the person alluded to to the amount of £320 10s. 5d., but as yet without effect."

In the report or communication dated 19th January, 1810, it is stated by the Rev. Dr. Robert Handcock, G. Secretary, "That no Warrant issued or revived since June, 1789, is legal or genuine, unless under the actual signature of the Right Worshipful Grand Master, the Earl of Donoughmore," and here it may be proper to remark that the most exalted and illustrious Mason in the empire has most explicitly declared "That the authority of the Grand Lodge should be strictly maintained, not only with a view of preserving Masonry from those irregularities which would take place without the control of that body, but because on no other terms will the Government now permit the existence of lodges."

We notice that on St. John's Day, the 27th December, 1811, "A charity sermon was preached in St. Anne's Church, by the Rev. Robert Handcock, D.D., Grand Secretary, for the Masonic Female Orphan School, in which the orphan daughters of Freemasons are maintained and educated. The sum then collected, with subsequent donations, amounts to £167 12s. 10d." After which a letter is inserted containing very severe remarks about lodges in arrears of dues, and the note annexed concludes the report:—

Highly respectable individuals having been stated as holding offices in some meeting, pretending to be a Grand Lodge, it may be necessary for the information of the Craft to publish the following extracts of letters from the Right Honourable Lord Blayney and the Right Honourable Sir George Fitzgerald Hill, Bart.:

"I must particularly request you will give my brethren to understand that, when I went to Dungannon, I did consider, and it was so represented to me, that the lodge assembled in Dungannon was by permission of Grand Lodge, and under their direction and controul for the accommodation of the province of Ulster; as I find there has been a misrepresentation, I shall beg leave to withdraw my name."

"I have to assure you that I did not ever authorise my name to be affixed to the paper you enclosed. I have not ever accepted of any Masonic office, nor have I attended any Freemason lodge since 1798. I am fully satisfied that all self-established lodges without the sanction of the Grand Superintending Lodge are productive of mischief and ought to be discountenanced by every means."

The above appears to have been published sometime in 1812, but we cannot discover exactly when. The lodge dues are made up to December, 1811.

We will now present the other view of the question, and will let the Seceders speak for themselves. The first "communication" we have before us is dated 8th May, 1808, and reads thus:—

At a meeting of the several officers of 79 lodges from the North and other parts of Ireland, held at the Ormond Tavern, on Thursday, 5th May, 1808."

"Resolved,—That we, the majority constituting the Grand Lodge of Ireland, assembled on the morning of this day, at the Taylor's Hall, Backlane, do hereby humbly request of our Right Worshipful Brother Colonel Irvine, Grand Master of Ulster, to call a Grand Lodge meeting at Dungannon, in the county Tyrone, for the purpose of vindicating our rights and for establishing the future meetings of the Grand Lodge at such times and places as shall be then and there agreed on, and for the regulation of such other Masonic business as shall be deemed necessary for the preservation of the Ancient and General principles of Masonry in Ireland."

"Resolved,—That it is our opinion that any Master or Wardens of a lodge shall be competent to represent such number of lodges at such meeting as may nominate or appoint him or them, under the respective seals of such lodges."

WILLIAM IRVINE, Grand Master of Ulster. Dublin, 8th May, 1808.

The business transacted was as follows:

GRAND LODGE OF ULSTER.

Pursuant to a requisition, signed, William Irvine, Grand Master of Ulster, for the purpose of vindicating the rights, and for establishing the future meetings of this Grand Lodge, at such times and places as should be then and there agreed on, and for the regulation of such other Masonic business as should be deemed necessary for the preservation of the Ancient and General principles of Masonry in Ireland.—A Meeting was held at Dungannon, on Monday, the 6th of June, 1808, at which 311 Lodges were represented—when, Brother William Richardson, Esq. (in the absence of the Grand Master of Ulster) was unanimously called to the chair; Br. William Bateman, Esq., Senr. Grand Warden; Br. John Taylor, Esq., Junr. Grand Warden; Br. Alexander Saunderson, Esq., Secretary.

It was unanimously Resolved, That a Committee, consisting of a Chairman, and two Representatives from each County be formed, to report their opinion, on the best mode of accomplishing the objects of this Meeting.

The Committee having made its Report, the following Resolutions were severally agreed to:—

That a Grand Lodge be forthwith formed in the Province of Ulster, and that the said Grand Lodge will not be governed by the Grand Lodge held in Dublin; the conduct of the said Grand Lodge having been entirely repugnant to the opinion of the Brethren of this Province.

That if the Grand Lodge in Dublin shall at any future period, make such concessions to us, with respect to the election of officers (and those other points on which we hold a different opinion) as shall be reasonable and satisfactory, the door of Reconciliation shall be opened, and we shall be happy again to meet our Brethren of Dublin.

That a Fund be forthwith formed for the relief of Indigent Brethren, and the support of an Orphan School in this Province, and that the Fund so formed shall be expended on these purposes by a Committee of Thirty Members, appointed by the Country Lodges, which Committee shall meet once in each month.

That for the formation of said Fund, all dues and arrears of dues, &c., &c., shall be paid on or before the 6th day of July next into the hands of the Treasurer, to be this day appointed.

That the different Lodges of Ireland not present at this Meeting, be and are hereby requested to accede to these our Resolutions, and to assist us in the accomplishment of the above objects.

That we will not hold Masonic communication with any Lodge in the Province of Ulster which shall not accede to these our Resolutions.

That the Town of Dungannon is a fit and proper place to hold the Meetings of the Grand Lodge.

That said Grand Lodge shall hold Quarterly communications, the first to be on the first Wednesday in July next.

The Undernamed Persons were unanimously elected Grand Officers for this present Year, viz:—

Br. Colonel William Irvine, Grand Master; Br. the Honourable John B. O'Neill, Senr. Grand Warden; Br. the Right Hon. Arch. Earl Gosford, Junr. Grand Warden; Br. Georges D'Arcy Irvine, Esq., Grand Secretary; Br. William Brownlow, Esq., Grand Treasurer.

That the thanks of this Grand Lodge be presented to our Worthy and Revered Brother, Colonel William Irvine, for his promptitude in calling this Meeting.

That the warmest thanks of this Grand Lodge be and are hereby presented to our much esteemed Brother, Georges D'Arcy Irvine, Esq., for his uniform, persevering, and spirited conduct, in defending the rights of the Order.

That the warmest thanks of this Grand Lodge be, and are hereby presented to Brother, Alexander Seton, Esq., for his uniform, persevering and spirited conduct, in defending the rights of the Order, and we strongly recommend him to the Grand Secretary, to be continued in the Office of Deputy Grand Secretary.

That we entirely approve, and hereby return our thanks to those Brethren who attended the Grand Lodge in Dublin, on the 5th of May last, for their very proper and spirited conduct in refusing to acknowledge as Treasurer an Individual who had previously been disqualified to hold any situation in the Order.

That the proceedings of this Grand Lodge be published, and circulated to all the Lodges in Ireland, and that Brother Wm. Canning, of Dungannon, be appointed Printer to this Grand Lodge.

Brother Richardson having left the Chair, and Brother the Rev. Francis Burrows been called thereto, it was unanimously Resolved, "That the thanks of this Grand Lodge be presented to Br. Richardson for his proper conduct in the Chair."

Signed by Order,

A. SAUNDERSON, Secretary.

"The GREAT, AWFUL, TREMENDOUS, & INCOMPREHENSIBLE NAME."

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

A much-esteemed brother who stands high in the Craft and in the Arch, has called my attention to that passage in the ceremonial of Royal Arch Masonry in which the incommunicable name of God is introduced, with certain impressive injunctions, remarking, what is no doubt the fact, that some perplexity is occasioned by characterising the NAME as "incomprehensible," and then proceeding to explain its meaning. I confess that this view of the passage never struck me; but it has often struck me that there is something in that part of the ceremony which has a tendency to create such an impression, regarding the reverence due to the sacred name mentioned, as to diminish that proper feeling of awe and reverence which is due to the G.A.O.T.U., under any and every name or appellation by which He has been pleased to make Himself known. I am induced to write a few lines on this subject, not hoping to impart light, but to receive it from some of my brethren. Why should we—I write as a Christian, but with the utmost respect for the convictions or opinions of our Jewish brethren—why should we utter this Name with feelings of awe different from and far above those with which we utter any other name of the Supreme Being? He was known, as already intimated, by other names, communicated to His true worshippers, from Adam to Moses; and often, after this name was imparted to the Hebrew deliverer and lawgiver, He was spoken of under those names. And every name is expressive of some infinite perfection or power, as exhibited to His creatures. To Moses, He said, "I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob by the name of el shaddai (God Almighty);" and He appeared to them by other names also, as Elhoim, Fehovah-elhoim, el elion, Adonai, &c.; and when Moses asked what name he should give to the children of Israel when he announced to them his mission, and they asked of him the name of the God of their fathers, who had sent him, God (elohim) said, "I AM THAT I AM (hejah asher hejah); and thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you." All the other names by which He had made Himself known, appear to have had reference to His power—His omnipotence, as the Creator, the All-sufficient one, the Supporter, the Preserver—in a word, T.G.A.O.T.U.; but this name had reference to His being itself—to His self-existence, as He who was, and is, and is to come; the verb hejah, "to be," including the past, present, and future of being.

It was under one or other of these names, that the patriarchal worshippers knew God, and they were inspired with awe and reverence in the contemplation of any one of them, remembering that "wherever we are or whatever we do, He is with us, and His all-seeing eye beholds us." They felt that they were creatures who owed Him their being, and who were also dependent upon His power and goodness for their preservation. To them every name of God was "great, awful, tremendous, and incomprehensible;" or, rather, we should say, that to them God, under whatever name, was so; and they bowed with awe and reverence before Him, as when Jacob, awaking out of the sleep in which he had dreamed of the ladder set upon the earth and reaching into heaven, and on which the angels of God ascended and descended, exclaimed, "How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and the gate of heaven." It was not until the Almighty was about to enter into covenant relationship with the children of Israel, and to make them the depositary and asserters of that great truth which lies at the foundation of all true religion—the Divine Unity—that this name, JEHOVAH, became that by which, exclusively and distinctively. He was to be known. To see this clearly, we must advert to the circumstances attendant upon this adoption of THE distinctive NAME. Moses had appealed to Pharaoh, in obedience to God's command, but without working any miracle: "Thus saith the LORD GOD (Jehovah elohi) of Israel, Let my people go." Pharaoh, hereupon, peremptorily repelled him and Aaron, with the question: "Who is Jehovah, that I should obey his voice?" I know not, I confess not, I honour not Jehovah; and I will not let Israel go. The priests and people of Egypt were the most superstitious and idolatrous people on earth, and they were accustomed to give peculiar names to their idols, and to worship them under those names. They did not worship one Deity, as the G.A.O.T.U.; but they worshipped many deities, with various names, which were regarded as titles of honour, expressive of some especial power; and each town, city, or individual placed itself under the protection of one or more of these deities. From them they expected temporal power, greatness, and honour; and the obtaining of such worldly prosperity was the mark or token that their idols heard their prayers and blessed them. The meaning of the answer of Pharaoh to Moses, therefore, was—"Who is the peculiar God whom you call JEHOVAH? What name among us, of honour or distinction, can that God bear who permits his worshippers to be my despised and afflicted bondslaves? What power can such a God possess? I know not—I confess not—I worship not—I fear not a God whose adorers are my servants; who gives to his people neither greatness, wealth, nor honour, as my gods have given me; who is unable to protect his people, but who appeals to me as the King of Egypt, instead of exerting his power as God." Then followed that augmentation of the Israelites' coercion and oppression of which we read in Exodus v. But the Lord was about to exhibit His power in the punishment of Pharaoh and his abettors, and in the deliverance of His people. "Now shalt thou see what I will do to this proud King, who believes the afflictions and sorrows of Israel to be the proof that the gods of Egypt are superior to the God of Abraham. I am JEHOVAH. This is my name. Formerly, the idols of the heathen had no names in opposition to me; now they bear names of honour, which encourage Pharaoh to blaspheme. I, too, will be known by the one name which shall be remembered as the title of honour superior to those of all their gods. I will be known as I was not known to your fathers: as the overthrower of the gods of Egypt—as the judge of the Egyptian idolatry—as the self-existent and glorious God, before whom the gods of Egypt of every name, title, attribute, and honour shall fall, and as the one peculiar guardian God—the own, the covenant God—of my people Israel, whom I will bring out of Egypt, casting down and degrading Cneph, and Ptha and Chem, and all their crowned and horned rabble of gods; and I will be more glorious before these, my people, than I was ever known to be, even to the most favoured of their fathers. I will keep my promises, and bring them into Canaan." Such were the circumstances in which this NAME was made the distinguishing and intransferable name of the Most High. That they were memorable and glorious circumstances all must feel and acknowledge, but there was nothing in, accompanying, or following them which intimated that the NAME was more awful, tremendous, or incomprehensible than any other of the several names by which God had been pleased to make Himself known to the patriarchs. Observe, this was not the revelation of a new Name. The Creator was chiefly known as God (elohim), or GOD ALMIGHTY (el shaddai), but He was known also as JEHOVAH, this appellation being sometimes combined with elohim, as in the detailed account of man's creation and fall (Gen. ii, iii.); and sometimes standing alone. And this suggests a circumstance that should be especially attended to—namely, that the name, JEHOVAH, evidently had a special relation to redemption and the agent through which it was to be accomplished. It first occurs in the exclamation of Eve on the birth of Cain (Gen. iv. 1), "I have gotten a man, Jehovah." Not, as in the English Bible, from JEHOVAH, there being nothing in the Hebrew that will bear such a rendering. Eve, no doubt, ever had in her mind the merciful promise (Gen. iii. 17) regarding the woman's seed, made by God immediately after the fall; and believing that she had given birth to the deliverer, exclaimed that she had obtained Jehovah; that is, he who was to come—the coming one—for so the word may signify, as it includes the present, the past, and the future of the verb being. And this view of the peculiar aspect of the Name is confirmed by the fact that it is at special epochs in the history of redemption, or in connection with such promises, that it comes prominently into view; as in the case of Eve just noticed; in that of the covenant which God made with Abraham (Gen. xv., &c.); in that he made with Isaac (ch. xxvi.); and in that with Jacob (ch. xxviii.); as also in the case of Abraham's intended sacrifice of Isaac on Mount Moriah; and, more especially, in the deliverance from Egypt, when the import of this Divine name was fully revealed, and set, so to speak, in a position from which it was never afterwards removed.

Thus we arrive at the conclusion, that the name Jehovah is not only or chiefly expressive of the self-existence of God, but that, on the contrary, it is especially expressive of some relation in which He, in a peculiar manner, draws near to His people, and through which He manifests Himself more fully than by any displays of power, as the Creator, the Strong or Mighty God, the Lord, or ruler and governor, &c., however glorious and irresistible those displays may be. It is a name indicative of a covenant relation between the Most High and His people, a covenant into which He enters with them, and by which He engages to be their God, and to take them for His people. God, in His character of Jehovah, will thus fulfil those promises on which faith rested from the beginning; and, as such, He will be more fully recognised for the future.

Not only, then, is there no intimation in Scripture of the peculiar greatness, awfulness, or tremendousness of this name, as compared with the other Divine names, but there is, on the other hand, unmistakable intimations that it is one of peculiar mercy and goodness, calculated to inspire feelings of gratitude and trust, rather than of fear, awe, or dread, over and above what can be excited by any other character under which God has revealed Himself. Under whatever name or appellation He is recognised, He is to be held in that reverential awe, and to be contemplated with that humility and self-abasement that become a dependent and sinful creature in the presence of his Creator and Judge. All the names of God are sacred, indicative of some or other of His Divine perfections, or of their manifestation to mankind; and unduly to exalt one over all the rest, as not to be uttered lightly or profanely, is calculated to induce the idea that such an obligation does not extend to all. The truth is, that we have in Arch Masonry some of the rabbinical traditions by which this name was invested with extraordinary sanctity and power. They allege that he who pronounces it shakes heaven and earth, and inspires the very angels with astonishment and terror. It is, according to them, the ineffable and unutterable name, every letter in it possessing peculiar and tremendous properties; and that both Moses and Christ wrought their respective miracles by the possession of THE NAME. Neither Jew nor Christian is obliged to believe these or the many other things attributed to or said of the word JEHOVAH by Jewish rabbins, any more than he is obliged to believe what is in opposition to many parts of the Bible, i.e., that the Name was never lawfully uttered by any one but the High Priest, and that only once a year when he entered the Holy of Holies, on the great day of atonement, to make reconciliation for sin.

ROCHDALE COUNCIL RED CROSS KNIGHTS OF BABYLON.—A meeting of this Council was held at Rochdale, on Saturday, the 25th ultimo, under the presidency of Sir Kt. Cousin William Roberts, P.G.S., in the absence of the R.S. and B.C. Sir Kt. Richard Hankinson. Sir Kts. J. S. Ross, John Ashworth (jun.), and Thomas Burgess were installed. Banquet followed the business of the Council, and the Sir Knights enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

METROPOLITAN.

Lodge of Peace and Harmony, No. 60.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the London Tavern on Thursday evening, March 23rd, when there was a good attendance of members and visitors, amongst the latter being Bros. Samuel Tomkins, G.T.; Major Creaton, P.G.D.; S. Leith Tomkins, P.G.D.; Young, Robertson, Watson, Read, and others. After the routine business had been transacted, Bro. Dr. Thomas Goodwin was installed W.M. at the hands of Bro. Binckes, P.G. Steward, one of the Past Masters of the lodge, who kindly performed the ceremony with an earnestness and fluency that made a deep impression on all who heard him, and especially on the new W.M., who for the first time undertook the responsibilities of the chair. The W.M. then appointed Bros. Munton and Maxwell to be the Senior and Junior Wardens, invested Bro. William Young, P.G.S.B., as Treasurer, and appointed Bro. Binckes, P.M., as Hon. Secretary. The remaining officers having been duly appointed by the W.M., the lodge adjourned to the banquet, where the hospitality always exercised by this lodge was fully appreciated. In the course of the evening, Bro. Binckes stated that at the request of the W.M., he had a very pleasing duty to perform, which was to present a testimonial from the lodge collectively and from the members individually to Bro. John Newton Tomkins, P.G.D., their late Treasurer. That brother had been initiated in the lodge in 1846, twenty-five years ago; he had been W.M. in 1853, had been made a Grand Deacon in 1854, and for the last thirteen years had been their Treasurer. His amiable qualities and genial disposition had endeared him to them all, while his experience in the Craft as W.M. of three other lodges, and for many years a member of the Boards of General Purposes and Benevolence, had gained their respect, and led them to look up to him for the advice and assistance he was at all times so ready to afford. Bro. Binckes looked with pride on the personal friendship that had existed between them for so long, and said that he had often been indebted to the counsel of Bro. J. N. Tomkins in cases of difficulty. The state of his health was unfortunately such as to make the duties of Treasurer too onerous, and he was obliged, although reluctantly, to resign. Bro. Binckes said that one and all felt the greatest sympathy for Bro. J. N. Tomkins' indisposition, and he would ask the brethren present to drink to his speedy recovery and long life. The testimonial (which was a handsome silver tankard) he would ask the Grand Treasurer to receive for his brother. He then read the inscription:—"Presented by the Peace and Harmony Lodge, No. 60, to Bro. John Newton Tomkins, as a token of regard and friendship on his retirement from the office of Treasurer to the lodge. 1871."—The toast was warmly responded to, and Bro. Samuel Tomkins, G.T., on behalf of his brother, thanked Bro. Binckes and the lodge for their magnificent present. He said that the kindly feelings so ably expressed by Bro. Binckes were fully reciprocated by his brother, and that the quarter of a century during which his brother had belonged to his mother lodge had raised endearing recollections and founded friendships that would last his lifetime. Some of the happiest hours he had spent had been in the bosom of this lodge, and he would always look with pride and satisfaction on the gift, which even in its name of "Loving Cup" was a token of the affection of the lodge, and would recall associations of unmingled happiness and pleasure. He hoped his brother would soon recover, but he knew it was his fixed intention that, come what might, he would not terminate his connection with the lodge while he lived. For himself, the Grand Treasurer thanked the lodge for the cordial reception they had given him. The sentiments of regard and affection entertained for his brother were a tie which he felt brought them closer to himself, and the pleasant hours he had passed, and the true Masonic feeling he had witnessed, would never fade from his memory.—The proceedings were enlivened with some excellent singing, and the brethren separated with regret.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—The usual meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 20th ult., at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. The lodge was opened by Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, W.M., who was assisted by Bros. G. Free, S.W.; G. J. Grace, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M., Treas. and Sec. pro tem.; A. L. Dussek, S.D.; S. Harman, J.D.; I. Wilkins, I.G.; J. H. Batten, W.S.; F. H. Ebsworth, I.P.M.; D. Rose, P.M.; H. Keeble, J. W. Dudley, F. E. Cooper, and many others. The W.M., in an admirable manner, raised Bros. Sutton, Treton, and Baguley, and passed Bros. Hurray and A. Lloyd. The W.M. announced that he would represent this lodge as its Steward at the Girls' School Festival on the 8th of May, when the Prince of Wales will preside; and he solicited the support of the brethren. Notice was given of a motion to put ten guineas on his list from the lodge funds. Ten guineas were voted from the lodge funds to the Boys' School, to be placed on Bro. S. Harman's list. In consequence of the severe illness of the respected Secretary, Bro. J. Donkin, the banquet which was to have been held was deferred till next meeting; but the brethren partook of some slight refreshment before they parted. Visitors: Bros. Dr. T. W. J. Goldsboro', P.P.S.G.W. North Wales; &c.

Industry Lodge, No. 186.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 28th ult., at Freemasons' Hall. Present: Bros. T. E. Tallent, W.M.; C. W. Noehmer, S.W.; J. Seax, J.W.; H. G. Lake, P.M., Treas.; W. Mann, P.M., Sec.; D. D. Beck, S.D.; J. E. Wylie, J.D.; W. L. Holt, I.G.; G. Henly, Steward; T. Mortlock, P.M.; T. Price, I.P.M.; A. Mole, T. F. Foovey, W. H. Davis, J. Death, E. J. Dyne, J. F. Duggett, G.

Dyer, J. W. King, J. Elliott, S. Earl, E. Andrews, T. Bramwell, T. Felton, and others. Visitors: F. Walters, P.M. 73; W. Lacey, P.M. 174; A. Timewell, 548; R. Bond, P.M. 1098; H. Griffiths, S.W. 1258. The work, done in a correct, impressive manner, was raising Bro. T. F. Toovey, and passing Bro. A. Mole. The candidates for initiation were unable to attend. The brethren adjourned to the Albion Tavern, Russell-street, Covent-garden, to banquet.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 197.—This lodge held its regular meeting at Freemasons' Hall on Friday, the 24th March, Bro. Charles Hutton Gregory, P.G.D. and P.M., in the chair. It is worthy of remark that all the offices of this lodge are held by Past Masters, in commemoration of the completion of their first centenary, and by a coincidence, quite accidental, the number of members present at the centenary festival amounted, with their guests, to the exact number of one hundred. The Right Hon. the Earl of Fife, K.T., proposed by the Worshipful Master, seconded by Bro. Admiral Currie, was elected a member of the lodge. Bro. Thomas Salmon, recently initiated, was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. Bro. Salmon was introduced by his father, Bro. William Salmon, who after an absence from the lodge for upwards of fifty years, rejoined his mother lodge for this special purpose. The Treasurer, Bro. J. Van Norden Bazalgette, P.M., in the name of his wife, presented the lodge with a bust of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., bearing on the pedestal the following inscription:—"Presented by Mrs. J. Van Norden Bazalgette, to the Jerusalem Lodge, No. 197, W.M. C. H. Gregory, P.G.D. and P.M., to commemorate the celebration of its first Centenary in February, 1871, on which occasion His Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, P.G.M., was pleased to visit the lodge and to become an honorary member." The bust is from the studio of Marshall Wood, Esq., and is considered to be an admirable and correct likeness of His Royal Highness. Bro. Gregory, the Worshipful Master, presented the lodge with the "dies" of a medal commemorative of the completion of the centenary. This medal is the result of the good taste and antiquarian and classical knowledge of the Worshipful Master, and of Bros. Horace Jones and Octavius Hansard, P.M.'s. It represents on the obverse the celebrated ancient castellated gateway of St. John, Clerkenwell, where the first meeting of the Jerusalem Lodge was held on the 20th of February, 1771, and bears around on the top "No. 408 A.D. 1771—No. 197 A.D. 1871;" being the numbers in those respective years held by this lodge on the list of the Grand Lodge of England, and the words "Domus Natalis" on the lower portion of the circle. The reverse is a fac-simile of an ancient Jewish gold coin, representing the porchway or entrance to King Solomon's Temple, with the Royal Chair of State. It bears the legend "Hierosolyma, mater Communis." This classical and beautiful design has been admirably executed by Messrs. Warrington and Company, of Garrick-street, Covent Garden. Both of these presents to the lodge elicited the highest expressions of admiration from the brethren and visitors, and cordial votes of thanks to the respective donors were carried by acclamation. After the reading of an interesting account of the proceedings of the Centenary Committee, cleverly written by Bro. Charles E. Hollingsworth, P.M. and Secretary, and a vote of thanks to Bro. Hollingsworth, the lodge was closed in due form.

Whittington Lodge, No. 862.—The last meeting of this lodge for the season was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Monday, the 20th ult. The W.M., Bro. S. S. Davis, presided, and was supported by Bros. W. I. H. Jones, J.W.; D. J. Davis, P.M.; W. F. N. Quilty, P.M.; J. Brett, G.P., Wine Steward; A. Frickenhaus, S.D.; W. F. Smith, J.D.; T. Kingston, D.C.; C. Steiner, G. C. Pritchard, W. Choyce, J. D. Taylor, E. Keru, L. M. Adutt, W. W. Anderson, T. Voight, C. Sissons, C. Walker, P. Bergheim, C. P. Lutchmeepathy Naidoo, and A. R. Haley. The visitors comprised Bros. J. Melzen (193), C. W. Wilson (172), and H. Shaw (939). The business performed consisted of one raising (Bro. Choyce), and three passings (Bros. Steiner, Pritchard, and Bergheim), both of which ceremonies were rendered in a masterly style by the W.M. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet-room, and a fraternal and happy evening was spent by all present.

PROVINCIAL.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Lodge, No. 200.—This lodge held its regular meeting at the Masonic Hall, Globe-street, on Wednesday, the 15th of March, when the following officers and a full lodge of brethren were present: Bros. David Fletcher, W.M.; G. H. Walshaw, S.W.; J. W. Taylor, M.D., J.W.; H. C. Martin, P.M.; Sec.; J. W. Teale, S.D.; W. Milner, J.D.; J. S. Cook, I.G.; and J. Ash, Tyler. The lodge was opened at 7 p.m., and the minutes were read and confirmed. Two gentlemen were balloted for, and elected unanimously, and being present, they were separately admitted and initiated by the W.M., who also explained the working tools. Bro. Walshaw, S.W., explained the tracing-board, and Bro. Taylor, J.W., gave the charge, all of which were listened to with marked attention. The brethren were unanimous in expressing their high opinion of the zeal and ability thus displayed by the W.M. and Wardens, this being only their second meeting in office. The lodge was now closed in due form, and the brethren spent a convivial and fraternal hour at the refreshment board, at which the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were drunk and responded to, and some capital songs sung.

BATLEY, YORKSHIRE.—Nelson of the Nile Lodge, No. 264.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Park-road, on Monday, the 6th March. The W.M., Bro. Benjamin P. Parker, in the chair, assisted by his officers. The lodge being opened into the first degree, the minutes of the last regular lodge meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened into the second and third degrees, when Bro. Charles Clifton, after answering the usual test questions, was raised to the sublime degree of M.M. by the I.P.M., Bro. J. H. Senior, in his usual eloquent and impressive manner. After this, the lodge was closed into the second degree, and Bros. John Sheard and James Parker were passed to the degree of F.C. After some formal business had been transacted, the lodge was duly closed.—The annual festive gathering of this lodge was held in the same place on Wednesday, under the direction of the W.M., as M.C., when about 160 brethren, their wives and lady friends, sat down to a good and substantial tea, followed by singing and dancing, which were kept up with unflagging spirit till four o'clock a.m.—On Thursday, the 9th ult., the children of the members of the lodge held their annual festive gathering, and enjoyed themselves exceedingly in singing, reciting, and dancing till 11 p.m. With respect to the getting up of the tea and refreshments on both days the lodge is greatly indebted to the Provisional Committee—Bros. Jacob Senior (purveyor for the lodge), I.P.M.; Joshua Gomersall, and David Fitton. The committee for providing for the amusements of the evening also deserve the warmest thanks for the excellent way in which they managed the festival. It consisted of the following brethren: J. A. Parr, S.W.; W. H. S. Newsome, J.W.; A. Parker, J. L. Heaton, J.D.; S. Denton, and C. Winterbottom.

EAST STONEHOUSE.—Metham Lodge, No. 1205.—On Monday, the 21st ult., the members of this lodge assembled in their beautiful temple at Stonehouse, for the purpose of installing the W. Master, Bro. Major H. R. Russell, of the 57th Regiment, in the chair of King Solomon, and transacting other business. There was a good attendance of Past Masters and of visitors. This lodge was specially formed to enable the members of the United Services to take official rank in a manner more readily than they could otherwise do in ordinary lodges where the civilians, who are stationary, can establish claims to office which military and naval men, on account of their nomadic habits, are unable to sustain. Hence most of the members of Metham Lodge are either military or naval men, and it is something like a point of honour with them apparently, that if a brother fills one of the chairs, and is called away by duty to another part of the globe, he is to be remembered on his return, and to take up, as far as possible, the position he occupied when he left. Thus, in the present case, Bro. Major Russell, owing to the removal of the Senior Warden, has passed from the J. Warden's chair to that of the Worshipful Master, and it was pleasant to hear, in the course of the day, a sort of tacit pledge given that if the late S.W. returned at any proper opportunity the Master's chair should be placed at his service. The acting Worshipful Master on this occasion was the V.W. Bro. Colonel John Elliott, who is the founder of the lodge, and is a most admirable worker, being learned in all the mysteries of the Craft. He performed all the ceremonial of the installation, and delivered the charges, in a most agreeable and efficient manner. On the completion of the installation, the W. Master was saluted with the customary honours, and the solemn service was much enhanced by the appropriate music that was performed at intervals by Bro. Daniel Cross. After the installation, the following brethren received their collars:—Col. Elliott, P.M. 1029, 1205, P.P.S.G.W., 30, I.P.M.; Wm. Powell, S.W.; Daniel Cross, J.W.; James Montgomery, P.M., Treas.; Henry Arbery, Sec.; Henry T. Taylor, S.D.; E. A. Northey, J.D.; Michael Sullivan, I.G.; Lieutenant and Adjutant J. Phillips, D.C.;—Hunter and Wm. Howe, Stewards; Thos. Shepherd, Tyler. After appointing his officers for the ensuing year, the Worshipful Master proceeded to raise one of the brethren to the sublime degree of a M.M., and he performed this ceremony in a beautiful manner. Subsequently the brethren dined at the Duke of Cornwall Hotel, under the presidency of their Worshipful Master. There was a good attendance, and many distinguished visitors had the honour of receiving invitations. Amongst those present were: Bros. Colonel Elliott, P.M. 1029, 1205, P.P.S.G.W. 30; R. R. Rodd, P.M. 189, P.P.G.S.W. Cornwall; Captain Shadwell Clarke, 21st F.P.M. 1205, P.G.S.B.; Lieutenant the Hon. Walter Hylton Jolliffe, R.N.; Staff-Surgeon Ahmutey Irwin; Capt Hore, R.M.; Lieut. McIlwaine, R.M.; Capt. Hallett, 57th Regiment; Lieut. Beechey, R.M.; John Sadler, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.B.; James Clase, P.M. 250, P.P.G.D.; E. W. Cole, P.M. 105; L. P. Metham, D.P.G.M., P.G.D.; I. Latimer, P.P.G. Sec.; J. N. Blake, P.M. 1205; H. Miller, P.M. 223; J. May, P.M. 223; E. Murch, P.M. 202, P.P.G.O.; L. D. Westcott, P.M. 70.—The dinner was excellent, and was well and quickly served, doing great credit to the "management" of the hotel. After dinner, it being somewhat late, the Worshipful Master omitted some of the toasts, so as to reduce the number of speeches. Bro. Cross, J.W. again officiated at the piano, and thus added much to the pleasures of the evening. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, and some excellent speeches were made.—Colonel Elliott descanted on the value of the lodge for it would enable the members, when abroad, to keep up lodges which had often broken down for want of Masters to govern them.—Bro. Clase spoke eloquently and feelingly, as he always does, of the cosmopolitan character of Freemasonry; of its brotherhood amongst all men, without regard to their politics or their religion; and of the charitable principles which it inculcated, and which were so frequently evidenced wherever it was a living principle.—Bro. Metham also enlarged upon this important point in the speech proposing "Our Poor and Distressed Brethren, wherever dispersed, speedy relief to them"—a toast with which all banquets of Freemasons quietly conclude, and gave some touching instances of the benefits conferred by Masonry upon the orphan, the bereaved, and the distressed brethren, upon whom the shafts of misfortune may have fallen. In the course of his speech, he referred to the Children's Masonic Bed in the Albert Hospital, and called for the liberality of the brethren towards the maintenance of a charity of so much value.—We ought to state that the lodge has nearly a hundred members, and that its finances are in a flourishing condition.—Western Daily Mercury.

ROYAL ARCH.

MANCHESTER.—Chapter of Virtue, No. 152.—At a meeting of this chapter held on Friday evening, the 24th March, Comp. Uriah Nichols, 1st Principal, Comp. Robert M'Dowall Smith, Past 1st Principal, was presented with a gold 1st Principal's jewel.—Comp. John Smith, P.G.S.B., in presenting the jewel, said the testimonial was the spontaneous gift of the companions of the chapter, and that he but uttered the wish of every member when he asked Comp. M'Dowall Smith to accept it as the unanimous expression of their high esteem for him, and their acknowledgment of his valuable services during his year of office; and that all joined in the prayer that he might be long spared to give the chapter the benefit of his great experience.—Comp. M'Dowall Smith, on rising, said he could scarcely find words to express his feelings towards the brethren on that occasion; but he accepted their gift as a kindly proof of their good feeling towards him. He had only done his duty; and if he had by so doing been of any service to the chapter, he was more than repaid by the knowledge that his efforts had met with the approval of his brethren. He trusted he might be able to continue in the chapter for many years. He should be proud to wear the jewel; and hoped that, after he had ceased to meet with the brethren, his children might treasure it as a memorial of the honour which had been conferred on him, and that it might be the good fortune of some of his sons to enter the Virtue Chapter, and afford that assistance which it had been his great pleasure to give.—After the toast of "The Past 1st Principals" had been given, Comp. T. R. Williams, in acknowledging the toast, said he also had a pleasant duty to perform. There were few in Lancashire who had not heard of John Duffield—his position in the musical world and his connection with so many public offices had made his name almost a household word. It was no ordinary honour to number Bro. Duffield as a Past 1st Principal of the Virtue Chapter. He had, therefore, very great pleasure in asking Comp. Duffield to accept from the chapter a gold 1st Principal's jewel; and he trusted he would long wear it, and afford the brethren the benefit of his counsel and experience.—Comp. Duffield replied in a very feeling manner, and regretted that the pressure of his many public duties had prevented his meeting with the brethren as often as he could wish. He should prize the jewel as the visible expression of many of the most pleasant memories of his life, and he hoped he should be spared to unite in promoting the prosperity of the chapter.—The evening was enlivened with the harmony of several of the musical brethren, and the companions separated more than ever convinced that their chapter was a bond that united them in the furtherance of true Masonic principles.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

ROCHDALE.—Albert Encampment, No. 3.—The annual meeting of this encampment was held in the Masonic Room, Rochdale, on Thursday, the 16th ult., on which occasion the Sir Knights were honoured with the presence of the Deputy Grand Commander and the Grand Chancellor for Lancashire. The encampment was opened at 6.30 by the E.C. Sir Kt. Clement Molyneux Roys, assisted by his officers and a good attendance of Sir Knights, amongst whom we noticed the following: W. H. Wright, D.G.C.; G. P. Brockbank, G. Chancellor; W. Roberts, P.P.G.C.; W. H. Prince, G. Expert. The C.E. having vacated the chair, the D.G.C., Sir Kt. Wright, in a very able and effective manner, performed the ceremony of installing Sir Kt. Holroyd, as E.C., for the ensuing year, after which the E.C. appointed the following Sir Knights as his officers, viz.:—W. H. Prince, P.E.C., Prelate; William Ashworth, 1st Captain; H. Turner, 2nd Captain; William Roberts, P.E.C., Reg.; C. M. Jones, P.E.C., Treasurer; E. Woodcock, Expert; John Fothergill, Capt. of the Lines; Robert Whitworth, Almoner; Robert Butterworth, 1st Standard Bearer; Thomas Oakden, 2nd Standard Bearer; T. B. Ashworth, 1st Herald; John Ashworth, jun., 2nd Herald; Ed. Wrigley, P.E.C., Organist; John Ashworth, sen., Equerry. The immediate P.E.C., Sir Kt. Roys, presented the encampment with £5 5s. to purchase a vote for the Boys' School, in commemoration of his having sat as E.C. in the encampment, named after his uncle, Sir Kt. Roys, the Grand Commander for Lancashire, the vote to be vested in the C.E. for the time being of the Albert Encampment. The encampment having been closed, the Sir Knights adjourned to banquet, provided by Sir Kt. Butterworth, of the Golden Fleece Hotel.

GIBRALTAR.—The Calpe Encampment, No. 60.—Under the authority of a dispensation from the M.E. Grand Master, a special meeting of this celebrated encampment was held on the 3rd ultimo, for the purpose of installing the Eminent Commander-elect. There was a strong muster of the knights, and the ceremony was most impressively carried out by P.E.C. Sir Kt. the Rev. George Alton, assisted by P.E.C. Sir Kt. G. Dantz. Sir Kt. J. Balfour Cockburn, M.D., having assumed the insignia of his office, and taken his position as Eminent Commander, proceeded to elect his officers nominating Sir Kts. B. Carver, Prelate; Capt. St. Leger, 1st. Capt.; Captain Allfrey, 2nd Capt.; Captain Richardson, Expert; and Lieutenant Todd, R.E., Capt. of the Lines. The proceedings of the evening terminated with a splendid champagne collation, provided by the generous liberality of the Eminent Commander.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for THE FREEMASON should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

VERBUM SAP.—We are glad to find that you like the spirit of our article on the Supreme Grand Council 33°. We are not actuated by any unfriendly feeling in the matter; and since our connection with the Ancient and Accepted Rite, we have ever warmly supported it, and are still prepared to defend its best interests. We anticipate a better and brighter future for the Rite now that Lord Carnarvon—in whose honour and capacity all England places implicit confidence—has accepted high, if not the highest, rank in the Council.

We have received several communications from various parts of the country relative to the A. and A. Rite, but, with the exception of Bro. Ashworth's letter, deem it inexpedient to publish them. They prove, however, that the spirit of dissatisfaction is even more widely diffused than we had imagined.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1871.

The price of THE FREEMASON is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance).

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the EDITOR, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

PRECEPT AND PRACTICE.

WE are all familiar with the words of the preacher who said "Do as I tell you, but not as I do," and unhappily the saying might serve as a text for a daily sermon in the experience of most of us. Few have, indeed, the moral courage to avow their weakness in this respect, but heedlessly give the lie by their conduct to those excellent principles which at other seasons they complacently inculcate and enforce. Now, there is no institution in the world, apart from those religious systems which govern the faith of mankind—there is no school of philosophy extant in which purer ethics are taught—than those which are solemnly communicated and enjoined in every Masonic lodge. Let us take the case of a young man who is just entering life—one whose soul yearns for communion with his fellows—one whose heart is pre-disposed to receive the sublime precepts of Freemasonry as a veritable lamp to his path. He becomes a member of the Fraternity, is captivated with its moral grandeur, reveres it as a beneficent science, and loves it as an embodied truth. To him, the words, "Brotherly love," convey no empty sound—to him, the Masonic bond is a sacred tie, not to be loosened at pleasure—to him, Freemasonry signifies the highest wisdom, the sweetest hope, the divinest light. Behold him labouring vigorously in the vineyard of the Craft! Is not every congenial spirit that he meets a triumphant manifestation of the power of Freemasonry? Are not the virtuous deeds he witnesses plain results of Masonic instruction and guidance? Can evil exist side by side with so much good—nay, not only exist, but oft-times usurp the seat of excellence? This is the first bitter revelation to an ingenuous and unsophisticated mind. Unfortunately, no precautions, however stringent—no barriers, however great—can effectually shut out "unfit and improper persons" from gaining admission to our mysteries. It was the same in the rites of the ancient world; although wondrous proofs were required and terrible trials had to be endured, occasional instances of unworthiness occurred on the part of the neophytes, and remain on melancholy record. Freemasonry cannot change the naturally vile disposition of a man who may chance to enter within her pale, although her hand is ever skilful to mould, and potent to direct, the aspirations of her children to pure and noble purposes. The villain, who under the guise of honesty, sneaks into the Fraternity is frequently obliged to pay homage to virtue by wearing a decent mask of hypocrisy—but he still remains a villain at heart. The slanderer, whose delight is in traducing his neighbour, ceases not to slander his brother when he obtains the honourable badge of a Mason; but he is possibly more cautious and sly in his mode of operations, though not the less dangerous or vicious. To those, however, whose minds have not been warped by evil influences, Freemasonry is a restraining and a guiding spirit—leading them imperceptibly, step by step, into higher regions of thought and holier spheres of action. But, above all, upon the truly virtuous man she sets her impress and crown—her ideal becomes reality in the blessings which he dispenses to all around, and his life becomes a visible incarnation of precepts the most sublime.

We must therefore dissociate the theory and doctrines of the Craft from the imperfect practice of some of its members, who, either from human weakness or natural vice, so sadly violate the moral law. Next to the duty of succouring a brother in distress, there ought to be no more sacred duty than that of compassionating his faults; yet how often do we find mere errors of judgment magnified into crimes by the very men who ought to palliate and condone them. In the crusade against wickedness we are ready to join; but we want to see more forbearance shown by one Mason to another for human failings, to which they are all more or less prone. Would not such a course be more in accordance with that excellent maxim of the Craft, Silence? and more in harmony with the merciful suggestions of a truly fraternal breast? But, unhappily, there are some who, for the gratification of the most paltry pique or prejudice, would do injury even to the innocent. For them we can have no words but those of reprobation; and we can only regret that they ever found admission into an Order whose teachings they so grievously falsify. An exalted standard of perfection is presented to the view of every earnest student of Masonic mysteries, and all should strive to exemplify by their conduct and demeanour to their fellow-men—and especially to those of the same household—how much they appreciate that lofty code of morality.

We recommend the words, "Precept and Practice," to our readers as words not to be lightly dismissed from their memories, but rather, as syllables to be carefully noted, because precept is, or ought to be, the parent of action. It is but little use preaching good whilst we practise evil—of small avail to praise virtue and at the same time follow vice—or to extol truth and not ignore falsehood. In the Masonic world there is room for improvement in this respect, but the heart of the Order is sound, and the might of Brotherly Love will, in the end, prevail. In connection with this subject, we were much struck with some lines which have recently appeared in the Philadelphia Keystone, and as the sentiments they express are analogous to our own, we subjoin them as a fitting finis to this article:

In our judgment of others, we mortals are prone
To talk of their faults without heeding our own;
And this little rule should be treasured by all—
"If you can't praise your neighbour, don't name him at all."

Men's deeds are compounded of glory and shame,
And surely 'tis sweeter to praise than to blame—
Perfection has never been known since the Fall—
"If you can't praise your neighbour, don't name him at all."

Remember, ye cynics, the mote and the beam;
Pause in your fault-finding, and ponder the theme—
Who has the least charity, quickest will fall—
"If you can't praise your neighbour, don't name him at all."

If we would but endeavour our own faults to mend,
We'd have all the work to which we could attend.
Then let us be open to Charity's call—
"If you can't praise your neighbour, don't name him at all."

CONSTITUTIONS OF THE FREEMASONS' G.L. OF ENGLAND, 1776.

I am now in possession of every edition of the Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of England (London) from A.D. 1723 to the present time, excepting the edition published in A.D. 1776 (being those of A.D. 1767 and appendices).

I shall esteem it a favour to be told where to obtain this volume at a reasonable price, or shall be happy to exchange some other work or works of value for it.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

P.S.—I think of publishing a reprint of Dr. Dassigny's work of A.D. 1744 in a few months. Can any brother inform me of any one who has a copy besides myself?

W. J. H.

"MASONIC SKETCHES AND REPRINTS," BY BRO. HUGHAN.

I appreciate Bro. "Lupus'" kind note in THE FREEMASON for March 25th, and thank him for so fraternally and approvingly referring to my new work. Were I permitted to reveal the real name of the writer of the above letter, the Craft would agree with me in stating that our ancient and honourable Fraternity is more indebted to Bro. "Lupus" than to me for aiding and increasing the literature of Freemasonry.

I anticipate arranging with my publishers ere long to print a second edition of "Masonic Sketches and Reprints." The American edition is now preparing (and almost ready for publication) by the well-known firm, "The Masonic Manufacturing Company," Broadway, New York.

Should I issue a second edition, it is my intention to insert several more hitherto unpublished MSS., because it is my firm conviction (as Bro. "Lupus" well observes) that "documentary evidences are worth all the arguments and assertions of individual opinions which have ever been propounded."

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

P.S.—Should the Craft support Bro. R. Spencer's reprints of the "Constitutions" as he well deserves, I intend soon after to publish verbatim et literatim reprints of others scarce Masonic works.

W. J. H.

Referring to the Statutes of the K.T., at page 62 it is stated that "the mantle of the Order (Knights of Malta) is of black serge, with a white 8-pointed cross on the left shoulder."

No allusion is made to the hood. Will you kindly tell me in your next publication if there is a hood attached to the black mantle, and whether such hood is lined with any distinguishing colour of the silk, as is the case of Eminent Commanders of K.T. Encampments?

CONSTANS.

THE SAINTS JOHN IN MASONRY (p. 186).

"Philetas" would make readers believe that in the middle of the 18th century the late Bro. Dunckerley introduced into the lectures what we now have as to the patronage of the Saints John. I doubt not that he may have lectured on the subject, but the title "Saints John" we find introduced amongst Freemasons long before this. A lodge of the name "Saints John," dating as far back as 1057, is still in existence in Scotland. Other Freemason lodges we find celebrating the Festival of St. John in 1697. And, again, in 1714, we find a lodge laying down the following law:—"It is statute and ordained that every member of this lodge duly and strictly attend the brethren on St. John's Day yearly for commemorating the said Apostle, our Patron and tutelar Saint, under penalty of forty shillings Scots." We are thus carried back to a date long before the days of the late Bro. Dunckerley, and have proof positive of the name being in use amongst Freemasons for several hundreds of years, but will not for the present further dwell until Bro. J. Evan replies.

"THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL FORCES IN MAN" (p. 185).

While the subject of morality and intellect may be discussed in a general way in the outer world, it is not the duty of Freemasons to cause jealousy between any nation. There is no line, in a point of morality, to be drawn between the German and French nations. What the French term "incest," and prohibit as forbidden by the Law of God, some of the German states consider a virtue. The good seed sown by Calvin, Coligny, Palissy, Theodore de Bèze, Bossuet, Fenelon, of the Cuviers, of the Monods, was both true and good. Let us hope it has not withered, but sunk in the earth only for a while to grow up with fresh life and beauty.

A FRENCH FREEMASON.

MASONRY AT SEA.

I have just had the following communicated to me by a distinguished and zealous Mason, and forward it at once as an interesting communication for the "Notes and Queries" department.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

"A lodge of Freemasons having been founded here April 5th, 1765, being the Lodge of Amity, No. 160. In this lodge is presented a memorial of one of the most striking instances on record of the prevalence of Masonic sympathy, and which occurred in the experience of one of the brethren of the lodge. This memorial is a biscuit of coarse bread, preserved in a glass frame, and hung up in the lodge, with the following inscription: 'This biscuit is preserved by the Lodge of Amity as a memorial of their gratitude and brotherly affection to Jacques de Bon, Captain of the 'Jurion,' a French privateer of St. Maloes, who captured at sea on the 13th December, at 11 a.m., 1813, in lat. 49° 50' N. long. 70° 10', the brig 'Oak,' of Poole, Brother Stephen Pack, Master, belonging to Brothers G. W. Leagard and John Gosse, on her passage from Bilboa to Poole, who, after treating him and his crew with every mark of kindness, returned him his vessel, and sent on board a dog (which before had been taken from a brother), with this biscuit suspended by a string round his neck, signifying that he would not keep a brother's dog in bondage, nor see him want bread.'—Copied from the "History of Poole in Dorsetshire," published in 1839.

"GAMMA" ON "BETA."

The best answer I can give to "Gamma" is to invite him to compare his communication, on page 185, with mine at page 57, of THE FREEMASON, and then he will find there is not a shadow of reason to suppose I object to fair criticism in any way; but, on the contrary, I not only criticise myself, but am always glad to be criticised. If an error is made, let it be pointed out in a gentlemanly manner, and I shall be delighted to acknowledge it; only let us not descend to personalities, and blot the pages of THE FREEMASON with petty insinuations, weak subterfuges, and attempts to damage the statements of Masonic writers, without actually offering one fact in substantiation of the objections made. Surely, as Masons we ought to be able to give and receive light in a proper spirit, and with becoming thankfulness.

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE III.

It speaks of Esther, that noble daughter of bondage, who so bravely resolved to share the fortunes of the exiles of Israel. It tells us of Martha, mourning the loss of her dearly-beloved brother. And, finally, it thrills us with an account of that devoted philanthropist, Electa, who, above all women, suffered for her master's sake, the loss of home, family, wealth, and life itself. But before I can communicate to you the secrets of the Eastern Star degrees, whereby you can make yourselves known to Masons, it is necessary that each of you should make a solemn pledge of honour, that those secrets shall be kept inviolably in your possession. For any one of you to go out and expose to others what we so secretly tell you here would not only be fatal to your own character for truth, but would destroy all the advantages of the Order itself. Its great value consists in its being kept in the hands of proper persons. I am happy to inform you that, although many thousands of ladies have received it, and they scattered through every section of the country, no instance is on record of any lady having dishonourably exposed it. Nor, indeed, do we fear that such a misfortune can ever occur. A lady who makes us a pledge of honour, such as I require of you, pledges her very soul; the honour of a woman is more to her than life itself. Those of you, therefore, who give us such security may safely be trusted with our most cherished secrets. The pledge that we require of you is in this form: So many of you, ladies, as will pledge the sacred honour of a woman never to communicate improperly the secrets of the Order of the Eastern Star, will raise your right hands. [See that each one does it.] My brethren, I have thus far confined my remarks to the ladies, whose coming together on this occasion we may justly feel to be a compliment to us. You know, and can testify, that all my statements as to the principles of Masonry and its advantages to its members are true, and that these ladies do stand in the close relationship to our Fraternity that I have described. I will now explain to you that only wives, mothers, widows, sisters, and daughters of Master Masons—the sisters and daughters, if unmarried, to be eighteen years of age and upward—are entitled to receive the Eastern Star degrees, and that it must never be conferred unless there are five or more such ladies present. So many of you, my brethren, as will pledge the honour of a Master Mason never to confer or be present at the conferring of the Eastern Star degrees, except under the restrictions mentioned, will now raise your right hands. [See that each one does it.] Should a lady at any time find herself in distress, and among strangers, she has the undeniable right, and should not hesitate, to make the acquaintance of any Master Mason who may be present, by using one of the signs which I will teach you. Each sign has its appropriate name and explanation, and each has a proper password to be given in answer to it by the Mason who recognises the sign. The first object to which I call your attention is the signet of the Eastern Star. This is prepared with a view to assist the memory after a person has taken the degrees. You will observe that the star in the signet is five-pointed, and that each point has a colour of its own, which are blue, yellow, white, green, and red. The names of the five characters—Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha, and Electa—are seen in the different points, and their histories make up the degrees. The emblems—the sword and the veil, the sheaf, the crown, and the sceptre, the broken column, and the joined hands, on the same points, are illustrative of the above characters. The emblems in the several divisions in the centre of the star also allude to the distinguished characters comprising the degrees. 1st. The open Bible is appropriate to Jephthah's daughter as the symbol of obedience to the Word of God. 2nd. The bunch of lilies is appropriate to Ruth, as the Lily of the Valley. 3rd. The sun is appropriate to Esther, as the effulgent sun is the symbol of crowned majesty. 4th. The lamb is appropriate to Martha, as the symbol of innocence, faith, and humility. 5th. The lion is appropriate to Electa, as the symbol of the courage and power which sustained her during her severe trials."

The particulars of the first point of the signet of the Sisterhood will be embodied in the ensuing article. C. S.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you kindly inform me, through THE FREEMASON, to what object the money collected for the Zetland Fund has been applied, and the particulars?

Yours fraternally,

THE CASE OF ALFRED NUTT.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Allow me through your columns to draw attention to an error in the voting papers for the approaching election for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. It is in connexion with the case of Alfred Nutt, No. 27 on the list, and which, if left uncorrected, may be prejudicial to his claims for support. By an unfortunate error of the press the number of children dependent upon Mrs. Nutt is stated as two only, whereas the real number is five. This mistake is the more to be regretted as the case is a truly deserving one. The late Bro. John Nutt, after being in a good position and a subscribing member to St. John's Lodge, No. 279, Leicester, for 17 years, became a bankrupt, through losses in a farm which he occupied, and (it may literally be said) died broken-hearted only a few weeks afterwards, leaving his widow and these five unfortunate orphans totally unprovided for. Any proxies in favour of Alfred Nutt, will be thankfully received by the widow, or by,

Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

WILLIAM KELLY,

Prov. G.M. Leicestershire and Rutland.
Leicester, March 28th, 1871.

THE ANTIQUITY CHAPTER ROSE CROIX, BATH, AND THE SUPREME GRAND COUNCIL, 33°.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I yesterday received a printed copy of a pamphlet purporting to be a reply to that issued by the Antiquity Chapter Rose Croix, Bath, in reference to its suspension by the S.G.C. 33°. As it was directed to my former address, it is not improbable that a couple of days' delay in its delivery may have been caused thereby.

This, though late, recognition of so plain a duty, absolves the managers of the 33° from the censures expressed in my letter of the 11th inst. on that part of their conduct, which I hereby retract; and if my letter should be published, you will oblige me by letting this appear in your next number.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

EDMD. WHITE.

Victoria Villa, Bathaston, Bath,

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your impression of Saturday last, there is a letter from one who signs himself "A Mason who believes in his Obligation," commenting upon a correspondence touching Bro. Yarker and the S.G.C., which he would have us believe he knows all about, and which, by-the-by, I shall not attempt to dispute, but wish to draw the attention of the brethren generally to the latter part of his letter, where he says, "I am sorry to see that evil example is soon felt." I ask, where is the evil example, and where the necessity to be sorry? "And that some of the members of the Rochdale Rose Croix Chapter have held a meeting for the purpose of conferring the 30° and 32° degrees, which they have no more right to give than the M.A. of Oxford or D.D. of Cambridge." Query, how does he know this? Is he in the secret confidence of all the authorities, and does he know everything that has transpired from time immemorial, or does he even now understand what he is writing about? Is so, let me ask him, to whom does the Rochdale Chapter owe allegiance? I can tell him, not to the S.G.C. in Golden-square, and therefore they have no right whatever to dictate to us, as to what, how, when, or where, we may choose to confer the degrees which are so admirably worked at Rochdale. I will further inform "A Mason who believes in his Obligation" that the authority to which we owe our allegiance dates much further back than that of the S.G.C., which, according to their own showing by letter received from the Grand Secretary General, 33°, and dated 16th February, 1871, wherein he says the authority under which they confer these degrees, was received from America 27 years ago, by Dr. Crucefix. Our authority, which is much older than this, has never been questioned before, neither has it been termed a forgery.

The climax, however, of your correspondent's audacity and power of misrepresentation is embodied in the following quotation from his letter above referred to:—

"The Craft in general must have a very good idea of what these so-called degrees are, when I am informed, on very good authority (that is authority equal to his own) that the sum charged to such candidates, as may be gulled, will not exceed 1s. 6d."

Now, Sir, I wish to be as mild and as respectful as possible, but cannot refrain from saying that the statement above quoted is a barefaced fabrication on the part of your correspondent, or else he has been woefully gulled into giving publicity to the vile fabrications of others. If he is really so void of common sense as to think that the brethren will believe what he says, that the degrees which he would have us believe are worthless can be had at Rochdale for 1s. 6d., I would advise him not to try it on; if he does, he will certainly be gulled.

I would, however, ask if these degrees are worthless, why so much fuss and bother by and on behalf of the S.G.C., why did the Grand Secretary General write me that "it is contrary to the statutes of the Order for there to be more than one Supreme Grand Council in each Kingdom?" Why did he also circulate the whole country, and why so many telegrams and letters flying about from the powers who have constituted themselves in Golden-square; I say we have a right, independent of and prior to the S.G.C., to confer this and other degrees, and that it is only because they feel their power waning that a strong effort is made to ward off the death, blow. But who is this Mason who believes in his O.B.? Is he the only one? If so, he must be a great curiosity. Why not have given his name and address, so that we might have had an opportunity of knowing him?

I would advise him to be careful, lest some-one might ascertain his whereabouts and run away with him, and exhibit him as the paragon of perfection in Masonry.

I just wish to say a word, on behalf of myself and the Rochdale brethren, in reference to Bro. Yarker, whom we know to respect, and think that his endeavours on behalf of pure Freemasonry are deserving of something better than kicks from those who have received kindness and instruction at his hands, and whose only sin now, so far as we know, consists in a wish that the S.G.C. should do to others as they would wish others to do to them. But why, I would ask, kick Bro. Yarker? Is he alone in this quarrel with the S.G.C., and if not, why not attack the system and thereby strike to the root?

We have no desire to interfere in any way with the quarrel between Bro. Yarker and the S.G.C.—supreme over its own chapters, not ours—but wish them and every other Council or body in Masonry, all the good and kind wishes it is possible to conceive, and hope the day may come when we shall be united as one body, and when the executive will be elected, as in the Craft, by the voice and vote of the people in Masonry.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

Rochdale.

WM. ASHWORTH.

THE AMERICAN TEMPLARS' VISIT TO EUROPE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

MY DEAR BROTHER,—A kind friend has placed in my hands a copy of your journal of February 11th last, containing, among other articles, one from the pen of Bro. W. James Hughan (whom I hope to have the pleasure of meeting) entitled "American Brethren and their visit to Europe," and endorsing an article which had previously appeared in your columns, recommending the American brethren who designed visiting your country next summer not to attempt any procession in your streets.

I wish to say to you, on behalf of the Sir Knights of Allegheny Commandery, No. 35, K.T., composing the excursion party, that nothing is further from their intention, and you can rest assured that while they are in Great Britain and Ireland they will conform to all the "rules and regulations" of their brethren whom they hope to have the pleasure of meeting. They will go from home "equipped and uniformed" according to the customs of American Knights Templar. They will each be provided with a Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter, and Grand Commandery certificate, and they will endeavour to prove themselves Knights Templar, and hope to visit lodges, chapters, and encampments; but when they land in Queenstown, and when they travel, their uniforms and equipments will be in their baggage, and they will only be worn when their brethren request it.

To the public, they wish to be known as a company of American citizens travelling for pleasure; to the Craft at large, they wish to be known as brethren of the "mystic tie."

Pardon me for getting on a subject that really I did not intend. The copy of your paper to which I refer is the first I have ever had the pleasure of seeing, though I have frequently read extracts from it. I like it so well that I enclose 2½ dollars (which is, I think, equivalent to 10s.), for a year's subscription, commencing in January last, which I hope, with the back numbers, to receive hereafter.

Truly and fraternally,

E. M. JENKINS.

P.S.—Allegheny Commandery expect to leave New York about June 10th, and land at Queenstown June 20th; will visit Cork, Killarney, Dublin, Londonderry, Portrush, and Belfast in Ireland; crossing to Glasgow, Ayr, Obau, St. William, Inverness, Dunkeld, Perth, Stirling, and Edinburgh; thence to London, stopping at Newcastle, York, Sheffield, &c., and will be in London about the 10th of July. From thence they go to Belgium, Rhenish Prussia, Switzerland, Italy, to Naples; returning, via France, again to London, and on to Liverpool, via Oxford, Stratford-on-Avon, Warwick, Birmingham, and Chester. Mr. Thomas Cook, of No. 98, Fleet-street, London, has been contracted with for the excursion, and will go with and conduct the party, which will number about fifty.

Allegheny, Pa., March 2, 1871. E. M. J.

NO. 3 BIS AND ITS PROCEEDINGS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Allow me to inquire, through the medium of your columns, what St. John's Lodge is drifting to, when we find such sentiments as the following expressed within its walls, viz. (page 188): "He also observed that by so doing the Grand Lodge had thereby broken the laws of the land, and that, therefore, he considered that this lodge had sufficient reason for throwing overboard its allegiance to Grand Lodge?" It appears to me that the foregoing smacks rather strongly of Masonic treason. However, it is quite possible, remembering the proceedings of the speaker at Grand Lodge on 6th February, that there may be little in it, or that on some occasions he does not very well know the meaning of what he says, e.g., after the imaginary story which he related to Grand Lodge in reference to some arrangement affirmed to have been entered into between himself and Bro. Coghill, and the way in which Bro. Coghill stood up and contradicted the whole statement, amid the laughter of the members of Grand Lodge assembled, the R.W.M. of No. 3 bis ought to keep very quiet. He went to Grand Lodge striving to set up a lot of absurd pretensions, and finding himself baffled, he, in order to cover his defeat, strives to throw dust in the eyes of his lodge by talking about not getting justice in Grand Lodge; and that, therefore, in order to get things all their own way, they ought to start on their own hook, by starting up a Grand Lodge of their own, and, shall we say, of course putting him on their "throne" as their first Grand Master! Bro. Coghill, no doubt, may thank his stars he is not a member of No. 3 bis, or he would have caught it for daring to call in question any remark made in support of the pretensions of No. 3 bis, no matter whether said remark was right or wrong! The ideas promulgated by St. John's on this matter appear to me to be nothing else than a mere farce. In fact, so much so that some of their own members, even, have repudiated them. It will be time enough for No. 3 bis to think of "throwing overboard its allegiance" when Grand Lodge has broken the "landmarks of the Order."

I am, yours fraternally,

M.G.L.

OUR ANCIENT BROTHERS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Liston, when a very young man, before Paul Pry, &c., &c., made his name famous, is said to have lodged in an attic in the neighbourhood of the Haymarket, where he kept "bachelor's hall"—that means, he had to cook and do his own marketing, &c. One morning he presented himself to the milkman (of whom he always bought a haporth), with two jugs in his hand, and said, "Look here, my friend, here is a half-penny, but I want you to put the milk into this jug and the water into the other, and I will do the mixing myself." For a similar reason I expressed a hope in my last communication that either Brother Hughan or some other worthy brother, would be pleased to print in a book or books all the charters, charges, notices, or allusions to "our ancient brethren," wheresoever scattered, either in the public libraries or in private records of old lodges, &c., &c., so that we may all be able to judge in future the relative quantity of milk and water in the compositions of our Masonic writers. This wish of mine, I noticed in the New York Dispatch of Feb. 19th, is about to be accomplished. Brother W. J. Hughan appears to have anticipated my desire, and is actually engaged in the compilation of such a work. It cannot indeed be expected that the first effort of such an undertaking can complete the desideratum, or that a single man, howsoever industrious, can explore all the mines where our desired information lies buried. But yet Bro. Hughan will render good service by making a beginning, and his effort will either stimulate others to follow in his track or, may be, convince us that the discoveries, whatever they may be, are not worth the labour bestowed on their research.

This week I came across a book called "Memorial of London and London Life in the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries, from the early archives of the City of London; selected and translated by Henry Thomas Riley, A.M.: Longman, Green and Co., 1868." In that book I found an anecdote and a code of laws, interesting to us as forming links in the historic chain of our fraternity, and as I have no recollection of having seen either the book or the City of London records alluded to in THE FREEMASON, I herewith send you the extracts, hoping that they will not only prove interesting to your readers, but by making known the source whence they are derived, it may perhaps be the means of attracting the curious into a new region, or a region not yet thoroughly explored. A complete collection of all the old Constitutions, charges, documents, anecdotes, etc., etc., of bygone days cannot, indeed, benefit speculative Masonry, but it may be a benefit in serving to disabuse the minds of many worthy brethren from a notion of the superior sanctity, morality, religion, &c., of "our ancient brethren," and the inordinate desire to restore, or abide by, what they imagine to be the ancient landmarks of the fraternity. A better acquaintance with the manners and customs of the middle ages, derived from history and from these very old documents, must tend to give us more a correct idea, and will demonstrate that the object of the Masonic organization in the middle ages was not for the purpose of inculcating religion, morality, &c., but for securing bread and butter. The very extracts I now enclose will show that the then organization meant business. Masters tried to grind down their workmen, and working-men were often turbulent and boisterous. Disputes between Master Masons were settled, not in the lodge but by giving bonds to the City officials to keep the peace, and the laws and regulations for the government of the Craft, were not drawn up "in due manner by the government folks of their own trade," as other trades did, but the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs had to step in to put down dissensions, "for the profit," as they said, "of the common people." But here are the extracts, and let the reader judge for himself:—

Terms of Reconciliation of two Master Masons, 26th Edward I., A.D. 1298. Letter Book C., folio xxiii. (Latin.)

On Monday, the morrow of St. Lawrence [10 August], in the 26th year of the reign of King Edward, there came before Henry le Galeys, Mayor, Thomas Romeyn, William de Leyre, Geoffrey de Nortone, Walter de Feyingefeld (generally written as "Finchingfeld"), and certain other Alderman, Master Simon de Pabingham and Master Richard de Wetham, masons, who were then reconciled as to certain abusive words which had before passed between them.

And the agreement was to this effect:—That the said Simon and Richard did grant, each for himself, that if either of them should be able to give information against the other that he had by the same abusive words, or in deed, committed trespass against the other; and such person should, upon the faith of two trustworthy witnesses, be found guilty thereof, he should give 100 shillings towards the fabric of London Bridge; and they further agreed that in case such person should not do so, the Chamberlain should cause the same amount to be levied, &c.—(Page 38.)

BRO. THOS. VERITY, we are happy to see, has obtained the first prize for the drawings for the "Criterion," to be built by Messrs. Spiers and Pond in Piccadilly.

"I HAVE one more word to say, before I close, of the Perry Davis Pain Killer—a most valuable medicine. I have travelled a good deal since I have been in Kansas, and never without taking a supply of it with me. I used it freely in my practice for cholera in 1849 and again in 1855, and with better success than any other medicine.—A. HUNTING, M.D., Manhattan, Kan., Ap., 1866.—To P. Davis & Son."

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this institution was held on Thursday, the 30th ult., at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. J. Nunn in the chair. There were present: Bros. J. Hervey, Major Creaton, W. Young, B. Head, Rucker, J. R. Sheen, E. Cox, Paas, F. Walters, Hemsworth, White, Corben, Moutrie, and E. H. Patten, Secretary.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and verified.

Two petitions were received, and the candidates accepted—one deferred.

Ten guineas were unanimously voted to be given to the servants for services rendered during the sickness which had prevailed at the schools, the same to be divided amongst them. Some notices of motion were given and other business disposed of.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES.

MOUNT SINAI ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER OF INSTRUCTION.

This excellent chapter of instruction, which diffuses light and knowledge in the mystic art to brethren resident at the west end of town, held its annual festival on Saturday, the 18th ult., at the well-known hostelry formerly kept by the late Bro. Adams, the Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-street. Comp. John Boyd, P.Z. of 145 and 534, occupied the honourable post of chairman, supported by Comps. J. Brett, P.Z. 177, as H., and J. L. Thomas, H. 13, as J.; Major E. Hamilton Finney, P.S.; John Hervey, G.S.E.; C. A. Cottebrune, P.Z.; W. Mann, P.Z.; E. C. Cockcraft, P.Z.; R. W. Little, P.Z.; Rice, Z. of the parent chapter; E. H. Finney, jun.; T. W. White, G. A. Ibbetson, C. F. Hogard, T. Selve, M.D.; J. E. Walford, L. Mercik, P.Z.; Cameron, D. C. M. Gordon, D. D. Beck, and Stevens, Z. 185.

A most capital banquet was served, and after the cloth was cleared, the President proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Comp. Hervey, G.S.E., responded most eloquently for the Grand Officers, and Comps. Little and Cockcraft for the visitors. "The Health of the M.E.Z., Comp. Boyd," was greeted with unanimous approval, and that worthy companion expressed his acknowledgments in a brief but effective speech. With the healths of the two other Principals, Comps. Brett and Thomas, the enthusiasm displayed may be said to have reached its acme—the former being the renowned teacher of Royal Arch Masonry under whose fostering care the working of that supreme Order in the metropolis has attained to such comparative perfection; and the latter being a most genial and hard-working Mason in several degrees of Freemasonry. Both companions returned thanks, and hoped the Chapter of Instruction would continue to flourish and rival even the great Chapter of Improvement at Freemasons' Hall, or the Metropolitan Chapter in Fleet-street. Comp. Rice, of the Mount Sinai Chapter, expressed his gratification at being present, and echoed the wish of the other companions.

Major Finney, the P.S., replied to the toast of the Vice-Chairman with great earnestness, and after the loving cup had been passed round, the companions separated—all truly delighted with the evening's extertainment. Comps. Stevens, Walford, &c., charmed the company with their choice songs and recitations.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Nothing preserves the health so well as an occasional alterative in changes of weather, or when the nerves are unstrung. These pills act admirably on the stomach, liver, and kidneys, and so thoroughly purify the blood, that they are the most efficient remedy in warding off derangements of the stomach, fever, diarrhoea, dysentery, and other maladies, and giving tone and energy to debilitated constitutions. All who have the natural and laudable desire of maintaining their own and their family's health cannot do better than trust to Holloway's Pills, which cool, regulate and strengthen. These purifying pills are suitable for all ages, seasons, climates, and constitutions when all other means fail, and are the female's best friend.—[Advt.]

GALVANISM.—Pulvermacher's Monthly Record of Cures is now ready for the benefit of Sufferers, containing documentary evidence of remarkable Cures effected by Pulvermacher's Improved Patent Self-applicable Volta-Electric Chain-Bands and Pocket Batteries, and may be had on application to the Sole Inventor and Patentee—J. L. Pulvermacher, 200, Regent-street, London, W. A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution.—Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c.—[Advt.]

MIDDLESEX.

The annual meeting of the Province of Middlesex was held at the Belmont Masonic Hall, Uxbridge, on Monday, the 20th ult., under the auspices of the Royal Union Lodge, No. 382, the members of which met earlier in the day for the transaction of their own lodge business.

The Provincial Grand Officers having been duly marshalled in procession, entered the lodge room, when the chair was taken by the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, Colonel Francis Burdett, and the Wardens' chairs by Bros. F. Davison, Prov. S.G.W., and J. M. Stedwell, Prov. J.G.W. The Provincial Grand Lodge was then opened, the Rev. D. Shaboe, Prov. G. Chaplain acting as D.P.G.M., and the other G.C., Rev. F. C. de Crespigny, offering up prayer. The Prov. Grand Secretary then read the minutes of the Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Isleworth, on the 7th May last, and they were unanimously confirmed.

The election of Prov. Grand Treasurer being the next business, Bro. Shaboe, Prov. G.C., nominated, and Bro. F. Walters, W.M. 1309, seconded for re-election Bro. H. G. Buss, the present Treasurer, and he was re-elected accordingly.

The R.W. Provincial Grand Master, then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers for the ensuing year, as follows:—

Bro. James Glaisher, F.R.S., P.M. 382, Prov. S.G.W.

Bro. Joseph Taylor, (P.M. 18) 1238, J.G.W.

Bro. Rev. David Shaboe, (P.M.) 1293, G.C.

Bro. Rev. F. Champion de Crespigny, 708, G.C.

Bro. Antonio J. Codner, (P.M. 25), 382, G.R.

Bro. R. Wentworth Little, (P.M. 975), W.M. 1293, G. Secretary.

Bro. Thomas Cubitt, (P.M. 157), 1194, S.G.D.

Bro. George Kenning, (W.M. 192), J.W. 1293, J.G.D.

Bro. William H. Coulton, W.M. 382, G.S. of Works.

Bro. Alfred Avery, (P.M.), 1194, G.D.C.

Bro. William Smeed, P.M. 946, A.G.D.C.

Bro. Thomas R. Mc'Ilwham, P.M. 946, G.S.B.

Bro. James Weaver, (P.M. 862), 1293, G.O.

Bro. John G. Marsh, (P.M. 28), 1194, G.P.

Bro. Lieut. A. Bampton Donnithorne, I.G. 1293, A.G.P.

Bro. John Gilbert, G. Tyler.

The following brethren were appointed Provincial Grand Stewards:—Bros. Odell, 1194; Freeman, 1238; Major Palmer, 1293; Sillifant, 1309; Barrett, 1309; Moss, 1326.

The Rev. Bro. Shaboe, Prov. G. Chaplain, acting D.P.G.M., then rose and said that he considered the P.G. Lodge had a duty to perform before it was closed, and that duty he would place before them in as few words as possible. It was probably known to most present that the Masonic services of their Provincial Secretary, Bro. Little, were about to be recognised in a substantial manner—(hear, hear)—and although the Province of Middlesex was but young, and not over rich at present, it must not be unrepresented in connection with the "Little Testimonial Fund." (Cheers.) After some eulogistic remarks respecting the P.G.S., Bro. Shaboe said he would not mention the amount, which he hoped would be named by the P.G.M. himself, but would move that a suitable sum be voted to the testimonial in question.

Bro. the Rev. F. C. de Crespigny, had great pleasure in seconding the proposition, upon which the Prov. G. Master intimated his entire concurrence in the proposed vote, but preferred that the amount should be indicated by the Rev. mover.

Bro. Shaboe then proposed the sum of ten guineas, which, being seconded by several brethren, was put to the vote and carried unanimously.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren departed from the hall to the Chequers Hotel, where the banquet was served. Bro. Coulton, I.P.M. 382, and his excellent Wine Steward, exerted themselves most creditably to promote the comfort of the brethren.

After the removal of the cloth, the P.G.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were warmly received, and the majority of the brethren returned to town by the 9.15 train.

Among the brethren present were: the P.G.M. and P.G. Officers, already enumerated; Bros. T. A. Adams, P.G. Purst. Eng.; A. B. Day, M.D., P. Prov. S.G.D.; W. Coombes, P. Prov. G.S.B.; R. Gurney, W.M. 788; H. Briggs, P.M. 865; T. Nash, P.M. 865; F. Walters, P.M. 1309; W. Platt, P.M. 946; J. Bowron, P.M. 933; W. H. Green, S.W. 1310; T. J. Barnes, P.M. 933; Major E. H. Finney, 1293; J. Boyd, P.M. 145; T. W. Sedgwick, P.M. 180; C. Horsley, P.M. 33; J. P. Woodley, J.D. 1326; T. G. Browning, 753; Capt. J. B. Payne, I.G. 7; J. Weedon, 382; J. Reed, P.M. 857; besides Bro. Jaquin, W.M., the Wardens, P.M.'s, and about forty brethren of the Royal Union Lodge, No. 382.

It should be mentioned that after the closing of the Provincial Grand Lodge, the work of the Royal Union Lodge was resumed for the installation of the W.M., when Bro. Coulton, the outgoing Master, installed his successor, Bro. Jaquin, in excellent style, and was rewarded by the congratulations of the most numerous Board of Installed Masters we have ever witnessed out of the metropolis, and but rarely even in London, very nearly 40 P.M.'s being present at the ceremony.

GRAND LODGE of MASSACHUSETTS, U.S.A.

At the quarterly meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, U.S.A., held at Boston on the 8th of March, the M.W. Grand Master, William Sewall Gardner, made the following announcement:—

"I have the honour to inform Grand Lodge that the Right Hon. the Earl De Grey and Ripon, M.W. Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England, has been sent by his sovereign on a mission of peace to the United States of America, that he has arrived in this country, and is now at Washington in the performance of his high duties.

"From 1733 to 1777, a period of forty-four years, the Craft in Massachusetts owed fealty and allegiance to the Grand Master of England. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts is closely allied in the past with the Grand Lodge of England. From 1733 to this time, none of the distinguished predecessors of the present Grand Master have visited this country while in office, except the Duke of Sussex, who, in 1826, travelled in the Canadas. The opportunity is now presented of exhibiting our Masonic esteem and regard of our mother Grand Lodge, by courtesies shown to the Illustrious Chief of the English Craft, now among us in the interests of peace.

"THE FREEMASON, published at London under the special sanction of the Grand Master, noting his departure for America, said:—

"It cannot be doubted that the true-hearted Freemasons of the States will readily come forward to greet the Grand Master of England with genuine enthusiasm upon his auspicious visit to their shores, and the influence of such an event will be felt in the land long after our most worshipful brother's return to England; an influence for good, a remembrance which will cement, let us trust for ever, the union of two free and mighty nations."

"I recommend that a Committee be appointed, authorised to extend on behalf of our Grand Lodge such courtesies and attentions to the M.W. Grand Master of England, as may be consistent with the dignity and ancient renown of the oldest Grand Lodge upon the Continent of America."

Upon the recommendation of the Grand Master, the following Committee was appointed and invested with full powers in the premises:—Charles Levi Woodbury, Rt. W. Deputy Grand Master; Winslow Lewis, Rt. W. Past Grand Master; John T. Heard, Rt. W. Past Grand Master; Charles R. Train, Rt. W. Past Deputy Grand Master; Marshal P. Wilder, Rt. W. Past Deputy Grand Master; Gerius D. Nickerson, Rt. W. Past Deputy Grand Master; William Sutton, Rt. W. Past Grand Warden; Samuel C. Lawrence, Rt. W. Past Grand Warden; Charles W. Moore, Rt. W. Corresponding Grand Secretary.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW CONCLAVE
AT COLABA, BOMBAY.]

A meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, No. 1, Grant-buildings, Colaba, on the 23rd January, 1871, for the purpose of consecrating the St. Peter's Conclave, No. 32, and investing the office-bearers. Present: Illus. Sir Kts. J. Percy Leith, Intendant-General of the Order in India; the Honourable J. Gibbs, P.M., P.S.; E. Tyrrell Leith, M.P.S.; Captain B. H. Mathew, P.M., P.S.; Captain H. Morland, M.P.S.; Colonel L. W. Penn, M.P.S.-elect of Bombay Conclave; Sir Kts. M. Balfour, Viceroy of ditto; T. Crawford, J. Thomas, Alfred Swift, J. W. Seager. Members of St. Peter's Conclave: Sir Kts. G. L. F. Connell, Viceroy; J. H. Irvine, Senior General; J. Baird, Junior General; F. Burdett, Herald; G. Bease, Recorder; W. Abraham, Treasurer; J. W. Butler.

The conclave was opened in due form, and the Intendant-General and Senate entered in procession. The petition for the new conclave and dispensation having been read, the Intendant-General proceeded with the consecration ceremony, and after the sprinkling of corn, wine, and oil, accompanied with the usual invocations, the Intendant-General delivered an impressive charge and declared St. Peter's Conclave open for business.

In consequence of the unavoidable absence of Em. Sir Kt. G. S. Judge, M.P.S., Em. Sir Kt. E. Tyrrell Leith kindly officiated in that office.

The following candidates were reported eligible for installation:—Bros. M. B. Cohen, T. Keighley, A. Molkenteller, J. Anderson, J. C. Houghland, W. J. Addis, and P. Belleli.

Bros. Cohen and Houghland being present, were admitted, received, constituted, and installed as Knights of the Order.

It was proposed and carried by acclamation:—"That the thanks of this conclave be tendered to Illus. Sir Kt. Percy Leith, Intendant-General, and the members of the Council of the Senate, for their very great kindness and trouble in attending to consecrate this conclave."

It was proposed and carried unanimously:—"That Illus. Sir Kts. J. Percy Leith, the Hon. J. Gibbs, E. Tyrrell Leith, B. H. Mathew, and H. Morland be elected honorary members; for which honour the distinguished Sir Knights severally returned thanks.

There being no further business before the conclave, it was closed in solemn form.

UNION OF THE MASONIC CLERGY.

BY BRO. THE REV. J. KINGSTON, R.N.,
Chaplain of the Royal Naval Barracks, Sheerness, Pa
Provincial Grand Chaplain for Dorset, &c., &c.

It is proposed that an organisation should be formed by the Masonic clergy, having for its objects:—

1. The spiritual and moral welfare of the members of the Masonic Order.
2. Their intellectual advancement.
3. The effort to produce kindly feeling between the different schools of theology in the church.
4. Mutual aid.

On the first object proposed, it may be remarked that in its attainment there need not be the slightest interference with the rights of conscience.

Lectures on literary and scientific subjects, as well as on Masonic history, antiquities, ritualism, &c.; the founding of a Masonic University, &c., might be suggested as the means whereby the second proposal might be carried out. The Masonic clergy must, of course, enlist the co-operation of the Masonic laity on this point, otherwise success will be impossible.

The endeavour to produce "peace on earth" is one of the chief aims of our holy religion, and of her hand-maid—Freemasonry; and will therefore, it is hoped, have the hearty approval of all.

The advantages of mutual aid are too obvious to require any remark. There are innumerable ways in which the associated Masonic clergy might "bear one another's burdens."

Suggestions and offers of help and adhesion are earnestly requested.

The annual supper was held in the lodge-room on 15th ultimo, when there was a good turn-out of the members, the R.W.M. in the chair. The supper was served out in Bro. Gunn's best style, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to by the brethren in their usual hearty manner. During the course of the evening Bro. Reith, in the name of the lodge, presented the R.W.M., Bro. George Borland, with a handsome Past Master's jewel, and also a Mark jewel, in recognition of valuable services rendered by him to the lodge. After a pleasant night's enjoyment, the meeting was closed at high twelve by "Happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again."

GLASGOW.

St. John's Lodge, No. 3 bis.

A special meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, 28th February, Bro. Baird, R.W.M., on the throne, supported right and left by Bros. Robert Neilson, Dep. M., and James McMillan, Sub. M.; Bro. Kyle, S.W.; Bro. Fletcher, J.W.; and about sixty-six brethren being present.

The lodge being opened, the Secretary read a circular calling the meeting, and also lodge minute of date 7th February, in both of which it was intimated that this meeting was called in order to "consider the language used by Bro. Buchan to the R.W.M. Bro. Baird, at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Scotland held on the 6th inst."

After these were read, Bro. Buchan tabled the following protest: "Under the circumstances, and as a member of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, I protest against your whole proceedings in this matter as an unwarrantable interference with my privileges as a member of Grand Lodge, as also an unwarrantable encroachment upon the prerogatives of Grand Lodge.—(Signed) W. P. BUCHAN."

The business then went on, the R.W.M., Bro. Baird, asking the brethren present to state their opinions on the matter. It was stated that at the meeting of Grand Lodge on 6th February Bro. Buchan had applied the words "false statements," or "tissue of falsehoods," to certain remarks made by Bro. Baird at said meeting of Grand Lodge, and that therefore he ought to be punished by this lodge for doing so.

Bro. Robert Gray, Past Treas., having observed that, as it seemed the present business arose out of the memorial presented to Grand Lodge on the 7th November last, he should like to know when said memorial was laid before St. John's Lodge and approved of by it?

The R.W.M. said it was got up by him and the office-bearers in a hurry, and that they had no time under the circumstances to lay it before the lodge.

Bro. Gray: In that case, by your own confession, you presented a new memorial to Grand Lodge superseding the original one, pretending to be from St. John's Lodge, while, at the time, St. John's Lodge knew nothing about it. However (observed Bro. Gray) I desire to hear this memorial read over now for the information of myself and others of the brethren assembled.

This being done, Bro. Gray observed that he considered Bro. Buchan was perfectly entitled to speak as he had done in Grand Lodge, for he (Bro. Gray) found fault with many things in it; for example, he was astonished that they were so foolish as to go before Grand Lodge with such a thing as their pretended Malcolm Charter, a document which any brother of St. John's might easily perceive by perusing a copy of their own by-laws, the Grand Lodge of Scotland had already refused to acknowledge; while also the report on their memorial approved of by Grand Lodge entirely contradicted the statement he had heard made that St. John's Lodge carried the working tools at Mossbank.

Bro. Park and other brethren re-asserted the statement that St. John's did carry the working tools at Mossbank.

Bro. David Walker observed that they were departing from the proper business of the meeting.

Bro. McMillan, Sub. M., observed that in his opinion, Buchan had been disturbing their meetings for some time back, and that therefore Buchan—several of the members here called out "Brother Buchan," but neither the speaker nor the chair took any notice—ought by some means to be prevented from attending their meetings, if some means could be adopted to that effect. For that purpose he proposed that the R.W.M. should send Buchan a letter ordering him not to attend any more meetings of St. John's Lodge as long as he was Master. (This motion was not seconded.)

Bro. Park, P.M., proposed that Bro. Buchan should be suspended for five years, and went on to say that Bro. Buchan had, on several occasions, disturbed the harmony of their lodge; for example, above four years ago an occurrence took place between the then R.W.M. and him in open lodge, for which he (Bro. Buchan) was called to account in a very severe manner, yet by his writings and remarks he still persisted in lowering the dignity and status of their ancient and honourable lodge.

Bro. Park's motion was seconded by Bro. McDonald.

Bro. Robert Gray begged to correct Bro. Park in reference to the upshot as to what took place between Bro. Buchan and their R.W.M. of the time referred to, as the conclusion of the meeting was quite the opposite of what Bro. Park had stated; for at the meeting referred to only Bro. McMillan and another brother spoke against Bro. Buchan, all the rest of the office-bearers, with that exception, holding that it was the R.W.M. who had made a slip in the matter, while Bro. Buchan, who was then Senior Warden, was quite justified in what he had done.

Bro. D. Carrick asked if Bro. Buchan had got a proper legal summons?

The Secretary, in view of the summons issued by him to Bro. Buchan on the 11th February, replied in the affirmative, the opinion of Bro. J. B. Walker, P.M., as to its informality, as expressed by him at the lodge meeting on the 21st February being ignored.

Bro. Smillie made several remarks, stating that if Bro. Buchan had expressed any sentiments of contrition for what he had said in Grand Lodge, he would have been ready, even now, to propose an easy termination to their proceedings; but instead of this, Bro. Buchan had even gone the length of protesting against all they were doing.

Bro. David Walker then rose to propose a motion, but the R.W.M. checked him, stating that he was too late, as Bro. Park's motion was carried.

This being, however, strenuously objected to by the meeting, Bro. Walker was allowed to proceed, and he proposed that Bro. Buchan should be suspended for two years. He had, he stated, formerly supported Bro. Buchan for the chair, but seeing the manner in which he had attacked the interests of his lodge, his opinion of him had now changed.

Bro. Walker's motion was seconded by Bro. Cameron.

Bro. Charles B. Grassby then rose, and stated that he considered they were going too fast in this matter, as they were quite overlooking what was properly due by this lodge to the brother whose case was now before them. He (Bro. Grassby) had been a member of this lodge for the last six years, and during all that time Bro. Buchan had been taking a warm and active interest in its affairs. About four years ago the whole work of the lodge had devolved upon Bro. Buchan, and he had done it in a manner that had never been surpassed. Bro. Buchan was just as able, if necessary, to do the work now as he was then; and if he would only stop "touching them up" in the way he occasionally did, he was quite sure he had many friends in the lodge who would rally round him still. Taking these and other things into consideration, he therefore considered that it would be quite sufficient to ask Bro. Buchan to apologise for what he had said, and if he would do so that ought to satisfy the lodge.

Bro. Neilson, Deputy M., said: Bro. Buchan will be a great fool if he apologises.

Bro. Grassby's motion was not seconded.

Bro. Gray then asked if Bro. Buchan's remarks in Grand Lodge had been objected to by the M.W.G.M., or by the Grand Lodge, but received no response. Then, continued Bro. Gray, since neither the Grand Master in the chair nor Grand Lodge found fault with what Bro. Buchan said, I cannot see upon what grounds St. John's Lodge can take upon itself to proceed in this matter in the arbitrary way in which it is now doing. If this lodge objects to what took place in Grand Lodge, I consider it ought to lay a complaint there on the subject, and I propose that as a motion.

This was not seconded, Bro. D. M. Neilson objecting against allowing Grand Lodge to interfere in the matter.

Upon the motions of Bros. Park and Walker being about to be put to the meeting, Bro. Park seemed desirous to withdraw his motion in favour of Bro. Walker's, but the R.W.M., Bro. Baird, objected, observing that "five years was little enough." Two brethren then voted for Bro. Walker's motion, and twenty-seven for Bro. Park's, the remaining brethren not voting. Bro. Park's motion was declared carried.

Bro. Baird, who had acted both as pursuer and judge in the case, then intimated to Bro. Buchan that he was suspended for five years as a member of the lodge.

Bro. Buchan thanked him for the information, but intimated his intention to appeal.

The R.W.M. then desired the Secretary to read over the minutes of proceedings before closing. Bros. Gray, Buchan, and others retired, after which the brethren were called to refreshment.

The Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73.

This lodge met in their hall on the 17th ult., Bro. G. M'Donald, R.W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. G. W. Wheeler, Acting S.W.; W. Donaldson, J.W.; Thomas Stewart, I.P.M.; P. Thompson, Treas.; J. S. Ampleford, Sec.; and a goodly muster of the brethren. On the east we also observed the R.W.M. of 441, Bro. Willson, and five other visiting brethren. The business of the evening consisted in the passing and raising of Bros. James Branagan and James Watt. The P.M., Bro. Stewart, at the request of the R.W.M., conducted the ceremonies in his usual excellent style. The case of a distressed brother was brought before the lodge, and the R.W.M. promised to see Bro. Wallace and request him to make the necessary inquiries, so that the case may be reported to Grand Lodge. Refreshment followed labour.

DUNDEE.

Festivities in honour of the Marriage of Princess Louise with the Lord of Lorne.

The Operative Lodge, No. 47, took occasion to celebrate this happy event on the eve of Tuesday, the 21st ult., when about fifty of the brethren assembled, at seven o'clock, and sat down to a splendid repast in the lodge room. The R.W.M., Bro. Wm. Longmuir, presided. After the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal, Masonic, and patriotic toasts were given and responded to with great spirit. At nine o'clock arrangements were made for visiting the illuminations of the public buildings, the fireworks, crystal fountain, and Queen's arch, all of which reflected much honour on Bro. Fairweather, of this lodge, for the really beautiful designs displayed throughout. A return was then made to the lodge hall, where the lady friends of the brethren joined them. Dancing was then engaged in by the whole company, and kept up with untiring vigour till an early hour in the morning. The music was supplied by members of the lodge, and at intervals during the evening songs and sentiments were given by different members of the company. The only invitations sent out were to the R.W.M. of Lodge Ancient, No. 49, and the R.W.M. and the Past Master of Forfar and Kincardine, No. 225, who were present, and seemed to enter fully into the spirit of the joyous occasion. Votes of thanks and the National Anthem by the whole company terminated this most successful meeting.

The brethren of Lodge Forfar and Kincardine, No. 225, along with their fair friends, assembled in their lodge hall, Meadow-street, on Thursday evening, the 23rd ult., to celebrate the happy event of "Lorn's wedding." In all, about seventy sat down to an excellent supper, purveyed and attended to by the Committee of the lodge. The R.W.M., Bro. Geo. F. Rogers, presided. The programme of toasts included the "Queen and the Craft," the "Prince of Wales, Grand Patron of the Order, and the other members of the Royal Family," and "Princess Louise and Lord Lorne," during which the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. The meeting was honoured by the presence of the R.W.M.'s of Nos. 47 and 49, who responded to the "Visiting Brethren." Some excellent songs were rendered by Bros. Kidd, Adams, and M'Nab, and at eleven o'clock the ladies retired to the ante-rooms until the hall was cleared for dancing, which was heartily carried on till long past the "wee short hour." A general desire seemed to pervade the brethren that such happy reunions, with ladies present, should be held more frequently, as being preferable to the ordinary "saltbeef-and-mustard" meetings of the Craft. The meeting closed by singing "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem, all seeming to have thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

THE new edition of the "Book of Constitutions," printed by order of Grand Lodge, is now ready, and is to be had only at the office of the Grand Secretary.

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Brouchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CHESHIRE MASONIC EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.—On Tuesday evening, the 28th ult., a grand musical and dramatic performance in aid of the funds of this excellent institution took place in the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead. The house was crowded in every part, and the entertainment was one of the most enjoyable given in Birkenhead for a considerable time past.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

THE LONDON WARMING AND VENTILATING COMPANY (LIMITED),

23, ABINGDON STREET

WESTMINSTER, S.W.

Manager, Director, and Secretary, MR. WOODCOCK.

Churches, Greenhouses, Offices, and Buildings of every description warmed by means of a modification of the plans successfully used by Sir Goldsworthy Gurney in both Houses of Parliament.

The cost is less, and the effect greater, than that of any other known means. The Horticulturist will also find an instrument of new and important power.

This Company has warmed St. Paul's Cathedral, York Minster, all the principal Cathedrals, and more than one thousand Churches in England, and numerous Cathedrals and Churches in France, besides Government and other Public and Private Buildings too numerous to name in an advertisement.

Particulars and Testimonials forwarded on application.

French Offices, 12, BOULEVARD ST. MARTIN, PARIS.

THE RITE OF MISRAIM.

BY A CONSERVATOR-GENERAL 90°.

"Speech is silvern, but silence is golden," said the sage, and it would have been as well if the Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General 33°, who sit enthroned on high stools at 33, Golden-square, had borne the maxim in mind before they published in the columns of your contemporary the record of their impertinent interference with the establishment of the Rite of Misraim in England. However, as their blind animosity could be no longer restrained from open expression, the propitious moment has arrived for revealing the whole scope and character of the Machiavellian policy by which the acts of this soi-disant Masonic body are evidently dictated. To effect this object little more than a plain statement of facts is required, and the Masonic world can then judge upon which side are to be found truth, justice, and honour.

About the beginning of last December the "Sovereign Grands," finding that the Mark Grand Lodge had determined to absorb the "Ark" and other analogous degrees, deemed it a fitting opportunity to increase their own stock of wares by annexing the Rite of Misraim to the Ancient and Accepted Rite. They accordingly commissioned a trusty henchman to attend a meeting of the Grand Metropolitan Chapter Rose Croix, and then and there to begin business. Faithful, however, to their traditional policy, which regards £ s. d. as the summum bonum of Masonry, the first qualification for candidates was to be the deposit of a five-pound note, to cover the expense of certain rituals and plates which had come into their possession. Nor was any movement to be made until at least twelve victims at £5 each, representing a total of £60, were found willing to undergo the transformation process. But the best-laid schemes of men and mice are, in this troublesome world, subject at times to unforeseen and unexpected collapse. The laudable (?) intentions of the 33° oozed out, and became known to certain brethren, one of whom was then the only man in England competent and legally entitled to confer the degrees of the Rite of Misraim. As an apposite comment upon the above, it may be remarked, en passant, that the S.G.C. in Golden-square actually purposed working the Misraimitic degrees without any authority whatever, except that derivable from the possession of the rituals and plates before-mentioned! Finding, therefore, that such was their resolve, a meeting of brethren desirous of establishing the Rite upon a legal basis was held, and this meeting was attended by a pupil of Marc Bedarride, the "Premier Grand Conservateur" of the Order, and who had received its degrees thirty-seven years previously from the great chief himself. This distinguished brother assented to the Rite being reorganised under his auspices, and without his presence and leadership not a single step would have been taken in the matter by the present Conservators-General. It is quite true that, for reasons easily understood by those who are acquainted with the inquisitorial system pursued by the S.G.C. 33°, the illustrious brother alluded to thought it expedient to keep his name out of sight until the Rite was firmly consolidated, and it is equally true that he sought co-operation and aid from Ill. Bro. Cremieux, 33°, of France, who was then in London. It is further beyond question that Bro. Cremieux would have attended the inaugural meeting of the "Bective Sanctuary" had he not been unavoidably prevented by urgent business.

Bro. Cremieux, however, as a proof of his willingness to assist, sent to the meeting his diploma as a member of the French Grand College of Rites, and this diploma was placed upon the table during the proceedings, and was examined by several out of the hundred Masons present. It was also understood that Bro. Cremieux's diploma invested him with power to found rites or orders recognised by the Grand Orient of France (the Rite of Misraim being one) in all countries where no such rites existed, and this statement was accepted as confirming and endorsing the previous action of the prime mover, Marc Bedarride's friend and pupil. The communication (published by your contemporary) from Bro. Thevenôt, Chef du Secretariat of the Grand Orient, denies, however, that Bro. Cremieux had any such authority, and he doubtless knows best; but in reality it is a matter of indifference, inasmuch as the organization of the Rite in England rests upon another and a surer foundation—its title being derived, as already stated, from the great Bedarride himself, and not from any foreign jurisdiction however "ancient and accepted." The only subject for regret is that the illustrious brother under whose ægis the present Council General of the 90° was formed, should, from motives of expediency, have conceived the idea of remaining incognito throughout the transaction, and that the name of Bro. Cremieux should have been introduced at all. The result, however, proves that the policy of concealment was in a great measure justifiable and necessary, as the Supreme Grand Council 33° have now foolishly expended their gasbag of indignation upon the "wrong man's" head, and they will henceforth find all their subtle and secret machinery of no avail should they attempt to effect the strangulation of the infant Hercules, he being now somewhat endowed with thews and muscles, and perfectly able to defend himself against their imbecile attacks.

It may appear an enigma to the Craft generally why the Golden-square people should trouble their heads about the Rite of Misraim, when they possess such an El Dorado of their own; but in reality this is the root of the whole matter. Note well the contrast. The S.G.C. 33° wanted to add to their coffers five pounds from every brother admitted to the Rite of Misraim, while the present Conservators General do not make any charge whatever to members of the Red Cross Order, nor to others, except a small sum to defray the cost of paraphernalia. Bearing this fact steadily in view, the disappointed rage of the "Inspectors General" can be readily understood. Just as the golden cup was at their lips, and an endless vista of five-pound notes spread out before them, the ghost of Marc Bedarride inspired his disciple to dash the goblet aside, and the unreal vision of profit, like a mirage on the ocean, quite melted away. It would be tedious, if not irrelevant to the subject, to recount here the various causes of offence which have rendered the 33° Council obnoxious, and, it may almost be said, odious to their own quondam adherents. A section of self-elected oligarchs at the best, they are in no sense entitled to pass judgment upon others, and they may rest assured that unless they refrain from "meddling and muddling" in affairs beyond their jurisdiction, they will awaken such a storm of opposition as will shake down their card-board edifice of obstructiveness, and scatter their transcendental pretensions to the winds.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF AN OLD LADY.

Written by one of her dearest friends,
BRO. C. I. PATON.

"Her children arise and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

Another pass'd away—a friend
From childhood's dawn beloved, revered!
The pleasant converse is at end
By which, till now, life's path was cheered.

Well was she worthy of the love
Which was her portion here below;
Only the better home above
Can love more pure and constant know.

Her's was a long and happy life,
Though not without its painful days:
As girl, woman, daughter, wife,
She walked in virtue's peaceful ways.

She lived in piety and faith,
Pursuing still the heavenward road;
Always in readiness for death,
For always waiting upon God.

Her children rose to call her bless'd,
Her husband gave her willing praise;
And all the neighbouring poor confess'd
Her liberal hand and gentle ways.

With age her spirit's beauty grew,
And, till away from earth she pass'd,
Shone with a radiance ever new,
Bright'ning and mellowing to the last.

We now shall see her face no more,
Nor hear her voice, until we stand
With her on Jordan's farther shore,
Inheriting the promis'd land.

But still the remembrance will abide
Of her example bright and fair,
To rouse our slumb'rous souls, and guide
Our footsteps till we meet her there.

BREAKFAST. — EPPS'S COCOA. — Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cocoa, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

A long letter by Bro. Alexander Seton, Deputy Grand Secretary for the Seceders, pretty fully embodies the reasons for opposition to the Grand Lodge at Dublin, and we will therefore give it in its entirety, as also reports of Grand Lodges held June 6th, 1810, and 3rd June 1812, and a letter respecting the Grand Masonic Hall and Orphan School:—

SIR AND BROTHER, June, 1810.

In my last letter, dated 5th April, 1810, I was obliged to expose to Masonic view one of those exertions of ingenuity, which, although in legal contemplation, amounted not to the crime of forgery; yet, morally and Masonically speaking, was one of the most dishonest and unprincipled that duplicity ever resorted to. It was not a mere simple falsehood, the disgrace of which, on detection, must fall on the promulgators, but it was a compound fabrication, which might have involved in it the names of brethren in the sister country, but whose noble rank and illustrious character fortunately removed far from them the imputation which might attach to personages whose virtues may be less readily acknowledged even where their conduct is best known. I did entertain a hope, which, for the Masonic honour of the parties, I sincerely regret has not been realised, that the family of the once Grand Master of Masons in Ireland would, on his and their own behalf, have seized the earliest opportunity to disclaim all association in that fabrication. I was willing and weak enough to suppose that the detection of the imposition having rendered it unproductive of the desired effect, the honour and the integrity of the Mason would have been roused into an indignant rejection of any participation in the reproach and contempt which ever attends base and unsuccessful management; such was the idea I had formed of those who profess to have "no other object in view than the honour and the interest of the Order." I must now, however unwilling, retract that opinion, and acknowledge, as I have been emphatically told by one of these parties, that "I knew not the sort of men I had to deal with." It is, however, fair to state that on a recent occasion the D.G. Master, from the chair of the Dublin G. Lodge, expressed great indignation on reading the detection contained in that letter; but, observe, the indignation was levelled, not at the parties concerned in the fabrication, but at the party who detected it. I must confess on such occasions I prefer, notwithstanding the Deputy's indignation, the character of detector to that of detected; and I had rather be the object of enmity by exposing duplicity and falsehood than of friendship as having been guilty of them. In this, I trust, there is no peculiarity of taste, but as questions of such nature bear not an argument, I pretend not to prescribe in that respect to others.

The D.G.M. on the same occasion declared that such things were infamous; I agree with him, and add, nothing can be more infamous; but, you will again observe, it is to those convicted of the act the infamy belongs, and not to the detector. Whatever guilt attaches to the latter I freely take to myself—the rectitude of the former I must leave to the proper owners. I am much afraid this explanation will not gratify them, but as they are not bound to be pleased, so neither am I bound to please them. The D.G.M. having thus indulged his indignation against the absent detector, challenged an inquiry into the Masonic conduct of his Principal, and as I knew that "any statement of facts is to that Principal a matter of perfect indifference," I cannot be supposed in the slightest degree to injure his feeling by accepting that challenge; and although the Masonic world and the Deputy may somewhat differ in their sentiments on these facts, "the freedom from partialities and prejudices," and the total absence from the Grand Master's contemplation of "any other object than the honour and the interests of Masonry," yet I may hope that the difference of opinion in this case will not be visited on me as an offence more than the peculiarity of taste in the former.

It is a fact, that 21 years ago, after the late Marquis of Downshire and the late Duke of Leinster had declared themselves honoured by being called to the Masonic Throne of Ireland, the then Baron Donoughmore condescended to succeed them. The benefits which followed that gracious condescension I cannot pretend to enumerate; but the first eighteen years may be well divided into two grand periods, of which the best account we have, coming from his adopted and bosom friend, we may reasonably suppose those benefits suffer not from them any envious diminution. From 1789 to 1797, having certainly "no other object in view than the honour and the interests of the Order," the Grand Master was entirely occupied by two most important employments: raising regiments for the honour of Masonry, and establishing with equal disinterestedness a Grand Lodge in the city of Cork for the accommodation of twelve or fourteen lodges.

Such great exertions, no doubt, required great repose, or in the classic language of the family friends, "having no more regiments to raise, the Order was no longer an object of attention to the Grand Master." This period of rest may well terminate with 1807, some little dreams of resignation in 1805 and elections in 1806 and 1807, not being for the present worth observation. I would not here be supposed to detract from the merit or deny the necessity of raising men to fight the battles of our country, and I am well persuaded that a man is not the worse soldier for being a good Mason. Corporal Trim says "the greatest cowards are always the greatest scoundrels," I yet may doubt whether much advantage is derived to the principles of Masonry, or much honour to its practice, by converting the rendezvous into a lodge room or the Crimp Serjeant into a Master Mason. It may be objected to me that the Grand Lodge of Cork is called provincial; 'tis true, but essentials are of more consequence than names. The Grand Lodge of Cork does all acts within the power of a Grand Lodge, decides controversies, receives annual dues, dispenses these annual dues, honestly in charity, not dishonestly in litigation. 'Tis true, like other Grand Lodges, the Grand Lodge of Cork is not omnipotent; for in 1808, no doubt without any solicitation on his part, twelve or fourteen members of that Grand Lodge invested their founder with an unlimited authority, not over themselves, but over the rest of the Masons of Ireland. The validity of this grant was unkindly denied, and the Grand Master was very cruelly refused the benefits he expected from it, on this most ridiculous pretence: that three or four hundred lodges in Ulster ought to be in the Grand Master's estimation of at least equal importance with ten or twelve in Cork; whereas it is well known that out of his great impartiality he prefers one vote in Cork to one hundred in Ulster; and that, barring a small trifle of family patronage which he has in view, and which we will mention hereafter, "he would not condescend to be Grand Master even in Dublin with a single dissenting voice." But here, again, you will observe a small distinction: every one who votes for him, even a Fellow Craft, is a good, valid, and existing vote; but those who vote against him, so says the Deputy, are nonentities. Hence you learn the vast importance of being allowed to contribute to family aggrandizement; so long as you support a certain family with your votes, and a certain lawsuit with your money, you are the most honourable, independent, existing Masons in the world; but the moment you withdraw your confidence from one, or your subscription from the other, your Masonic existence terminates—you are nonentities. The D.G.M. has pronounced the sentence of annihilation from the Dublin Throne; and extraordinary as it may appear, each Mason in the kingdom, the favourite city of Cork, and the brethren therein residing always excepted, although he may believe in his existence, attend his lodge, eat, drink, sleep, &c., &c., he is to all intents and purposes, Hutchinsonically speaking, a nonentity. It may be a point of doubt, which is most to be admired, the novelty of this idea, or the prudence of the Deputy's challenge springing from it—nonentity having neither person nor voice, there was little danger to be apprehended, the courage and wisdom balanced each other

So nicely pois'd, 'tis clear his brain
Outweigh'd his courage—half a grain.

It is a fact, that between the months of June, 1808, and December, 1809, a period in which the Order in Dublin has not only been honoured by the condescension of this Grand Master in holding office, but also by the superintendance of his Special Deputy, and his regular attendance on election nights, that the Fund of Charity has been distributed with a very liberal hand, no doubt to very deserving objects. Those of the greatest merit seem to be Mr. Ay. Hill and Mr. I. Williams, attorneys; £471 8s. 4d. is incontestible proof, not only of their deserts, but also of the strength of the fund in 1808; and the poverty in 1810 is evidenced by a balance in hands of £1 13s. 3d. This sum of £471 8s. 4d. was a small tribute of gratitude for the Masonic talent and "best judgment" of a Grand Master who "perfectly free from prejudices or partialities" with the experience of twenty-one years, "having no other object in view than the honour and interests of the Order" conducted that Order to a crisis equally honourable and advantageous. £1 13s. 3½d., at the end of twenty-one years, is nearly 1s. 7d. per annum—incontestable proof of the great benefits received from such wonderful condescension. I must here confess, that in my opinion somewhat greater liberality has been used with respect to the charity money than the conductors of that fund are ready to evince with respect to their own money. Some people have the art of taking better care of their own money than of that with which others may entrust them. In this I may be mistaken, and as nothing could afford these conductors greater satisfaction than to detect my errors, their friends have now the best opportunity to prove my ignorance, and their liberality; let the lodges attached to them, according to the usage of the Cork brethren, which must be right, suspend for two or three years the payment of their dues, and if in that time the Grand master of Dublin and his Deputy, the Grand Secretary and his Deputy, the Grand Treasurer, individually or collectively, expend in their Masonic litigation as many shillings of their own as they have done pounds belonging to the Fund of Charity, I will again acknowledge that "I know not the kind of men I have to deal with." 'Tis only fair to afford these liberal conductors an opportunity of proving in purse as well as in person their disinterested attachment to the Order, and their perfect freedom from all interested and personal objects. Should I, however, be correct in my opinion, the brethren, by adopting this plan, will, at the end of two or three years, have the satisfaction to find their lodge chests, instead of being exhausted in idle litigation, replenished with means to relieve the indigent and distressed brother, to give food to the hungry, to clothe the naked; and the reflection that they are enabled so to do will give more gratification to the Masonic mind than can be derived from any measures of family aggrandizement or any display of family adulation; and should the brethren then deem it expedient to reimburse them their just and necessary expenses, it will afford a testimony of attachment on both sides—honourable and disinterested.

Having disposed of these comparatively lighter matters, I will not at present enter into a detail of the various occurrences which took place between the Grand Master's dream of resignation in 1805 and the meeting of 1808, which was "to re-illuminate the sun of Masonry in Ireland," nor will I now suppose the Grand Master fomented dissensions for the sole purpose of subjecting the Order of Freemasonry in Ireland, in all its branches, to his absolute control; to be afterwards wielded as a weapon of political consequence or converted into a tool of family aggrandizement. These points may afford matter for a future occasion; the suggestion of them at present may be a caution to the brethren that they may become not the victims of such artifice. But I will recall to your recollection the pomp with which the Grand Master assured the brethren of "his perfect freedom from partialities and prejudices," and his having "no other object in view than the honour and the interests of the Order." When "perfect freedom from partialities and prejudices," and "no other object in view than the honour and the interests of the Order" are mentioned among Masons, it is not unnatural to suppose these expressions are to be understood in their ordinary meaning, without any sinister design or personal object skulking behind them; but here again, in the family language, "you know not the kind of men you have to deal with." Should it be my misfortune to prove duplicity of conduct, falsehood of statement, and breach of obligation, the portion of Masonic honour which remains will not be very burthensome. You will, then, understand what is meant by "freedom from partialities," and "know the kind of men you have to deal with." Among Masons, you know, guilt in the two former charges always implies guilt in the latter: the Mason who endeavours to injure or deceive, who falsely vilifies or wilfully mis-states, in addition to the moral turpitude attached to deceit and falsehood, is also guilty of a breach of Masonic obligation; he tears assunder those bonds which bind Mason to Mason, which when preserved form the wreath of moral superiority, when severed, the disgrace falls not on the institution, but on the individual. The Grand Master having thus pledged himself "to have no other object in view but the honour and the interests of the Order," we will examine the sincerity of that profession. The office of Deputy Grand Secretary has always been in the gift of the Grand Secretary, and not in the gift of the Grand Master. It has trouble attached to it, and has also, in the Grand Master's words, "unfortunately some emolument." It had until latterly been supposed not to be injured by a little respectability in the person who held it; a knowledge of spelling and English, a little education, and such other trifles, were thought not incompatible; in short, both for Masonic and other reasons, it was formerly believed expedient it should be held by a gentleman—we have, out of respect to the Masons of Ireland, been latterly told in Dublin that it ought not to be held by a gentleman. Be that as it may, the G.M., in April, 1808, gave it as his solemn opinion that neither of the parties who claimed to be Grand Secretary ought to be elected; their very claims, he said, disqualified them. The majority of the brethren thought otherwise of one of them, Bro. Irvine, and attended for the purpose of electing him. He did not entertain this new-light idea concerning his Deputy. The brethren who, at the solicitation of the Grand Master's family, had voted on three different occasions, one of these his own election, into which they had been cajoled, were, by an arbitrary decision and paltry manœuvre of the Special Deputy, prevented voting on the fourth. The great majority of the brethren, with Bro. Irvine, instantly withdrew, and Mr. Hancock was elected Grand Secretary. The Grand Master of Ulster was requested to call a meeting at Dungannon, which took place in June, 1808, when 300 lodges declared themselves independent of the Dublin G.M. and the Dublin G. Lodge; and yet that G.M. talks of not "conceding to hold office with a single dissenting voice." The intended meeting alarmed the family, and in three days it was proposed to Bro. Irvine, by one of the family, that Mr. Hancock should resign, that Mr. Irvine should, disqualified as he was, be elected G. Sec., with, however, this small preliminary proviso, that he should cede to the G.M. the nomination of the D.S., with the "unfortunate emoluments." Does it require much discernment to discover in this proposal an object different from the honour of the interests of the Order? How did the lapse of three days disqualify Bro. Hancock and qualify Bro. Irvine? The family fear dreaded his influence and respectability; and the family duplicity, judging from their own feelings, supposed he would, for office, sacrifice his own honour and your independence to promote their patronage and their aggrandizement. So long as Bro. Irvine respected the dignity, the independence, and the privileges of his office, he was disqualified; but if he invested the G.M. with the emolument, in a moment he was qualified. The proposal was treated with the contempt it merited. True to his object—you see "how honourable" it was—the G.M. did not stop here; he acted so as to leave no doubt; his cupidity for the "unfortunate emoluments" got the better of his prudence; and he furnished incontrovertible proof of the meaning which he attached to "the honour and the interests of the Order." I know not whether the compliance of Bro. Hancock to the cession was presettled, but this I know, that after the family was rejected, a letter was written to the G.L. printer, by the G.M.'s directions, signed J. Cuthbert, Act. Sec., in which he desired that "50 copies of the transaction, then printing, should be sent the G.M. for the brethren in Cork, and the remainder to be sent to Mr. Marsh, whom his lordship had appointed to be the Dep. Sec. Here, I think, is conviction that patronage and emoluments were his real objects, and the "honour and interests of the Order" a mere stalking-horse for their attainment. It is true that appointment did not take place; the G.M.'s new friends, whom he thought he had secured by violating the laws of the Order, most ungratefully refused to assist in carrying that nomination into effect, and after threemonths' negotiation, appointed another person, in opposition to the nomination of the Dublin G.M. and the G.S. Was private honour a question, which happily is not the case, it might be balanced in the scrupulous mind; what addition it has received by this G.M.'s associating with a party that could so unkindly deceive and thwart him in these his disinterested exertions for the "honour and interests of the Order;" or in his adopting and countenancing the principles and conduct of those associates who great Masonic talent and industry appear by their fruits better adapted to the purposes of anonymous correspondence, and fabricated replies, than to conduct the business of the Dublin G.L., or of the party, by means either honourable or justifiable.

The next charge it may be my fortune to prove, is that a statement of falsehoods was published under the authority and by the direction of that G.M. in which his title to a "perfect freedom from partialities and prejudices" may appear to rest on the same foundation with his "freedom from any other object than the honour and the interests of the Order." As accuser, it is proper that I stand with clean hands before you. Early in 1806, just after the G.M.'s dream of resignation, in which he foresaw the approaching contentions, I informed him that if he thought I was a party to those contentions, or that my resignation could prevent them, I was ready to resign, and wait until such time as his convenience would allow my conduct to be investigated. That proposal was not attended to. The opinion of the G.L. on the very night on which his resignation was sent in, as the best method to prevent contentions, and was suppressed by his then Deputy as the best means to promote them, was, with respect to my conduct, highly flattering. From that period until 1808 I had acted in conformity to the known and established laws of the Order, but often in opposition to that Deputy whose conduct, in the G.M.'s own words, was such "as he could neither sanction nor be guilty of," yet who, it would seem, had obtained the G.M.'s confidence by suppressing his resignation. The G.M. having thus, in December, 1805, foreseen, and for two years, until February, 1808, superintended the contention, "without any other object in view than the honour and the interest of the order," he then sent to inform me that for reasons personal to himself, but hostile to me, I must resign; not being his Deputy, I refused to resign, and I again demanded an investigation of my conduct, and relied on the laws of the Order for my justification. The G.M. chose not to be governed by the laws of the Order; they could not forward his objects. Masonic legality of conduct, and principle of action were now essential points; many brethren in town, and most brethren in the country, had for these two years, concurred in conduct with me. The G.M. changed his ground, if I would resign for his accommodation; in other words, if I would abandon that principle, and those brethren who had acted according to the laws of Masonry; if I would betray the trust reposed in me, for the accommodation of the G.M., I might make such pecuniary arrangement as I thought proper for my own advantage; I would thus, in the G.M.'s idea, become worthy of the profits, though not of the ostensible situation. Divide et impera, a political, but not a Masonic maxim, became the G.M.'s principle of action. I had not been accustomed to convert the liberty and privileges of others, to my private advantage or emolument; I was not a trader in such articles; I refused the bribe and accommodation. The G.M. in his letter of May, 1808, written some days previous to the Grand Lodge meeting, tells the brethren that "I had refused to comply with his due authority, by not sending him some books, to the custody of which he thought himself entitled," and that I had also "to deceive," sent him an unsevicable seal. With respect to the books; exclusive of other reasons, before another tribunal, he had not, by the laws of Masonry, any right to the custody of them, and I had found sufficient reason not to confide beyond the law. When, therefore, the G.M. relying for the custody of these books on a right which exists not, states that I had refused to comply with his due authority, he states what is not true. When he states that I had imposed an unsevicable seal upon him, thereby insinuating that I had retained a servicable one, it is also false. I never had, or used in the office of D.G.S. previous to the writing of that letter, any other seal than that which I sent him. Should his Deputy now say that these statements were made on the representations of others, I beg to inform that Deputy, that negligence or inattention is a miserable apology for him who publishes a falsehood; and that where a little enquiry must have procured decisive information, such statements, in addition to their being unfounded, are to be considered wilfully and maliciously so.

It may be asked, among Masons, what motive could induce a G.M. to write and publish such falsehoods? Could he, by such calumnies, have deprived me of the confidence of the Order, he thought he might the more readily accomplish his object, and enrich his follower with those "unfortunate emoluments." I had resisted his threats, refused his bribes, and therefore "entirely free from partialities and prejudice" as he must be, and "having no other object in view but the honour and interest of the Order," he wrote a letter unfounded and false in its contents, to influence the election. The seal was in his possession, the books he alluded to were on the Grand Lodge table where they ought to be, and the brethren of Ulster finding contempt, insult and mockery practised towards them, when they withdrew left them not behind.

I think I have already stated sufficient to prove not only the two charges to which I have applied myself, duplicity of conduct as a Mason, and a deliberate and premeditated aspersion of character, false, in fact, and founded in insinuation, but also to prove the breach of obligation. I will yet go farther. A Grand Lodge cannot do business except on the third degree of Masonry; nor can an any Apprentice or Fellow Craft sit, vote, or speak therein. It is not unreasonable to suppose that twenty-one years' experience should have instructed the Grand Master in this essential point. It is stated, and on the most diligent inquiry I am convinced, the fact is, that one brother introduced by the Grand Master to the meeting of April, 1808, was then no higher than a Fellow Craft; that brother, in the Grand Master's own words, is "near and dear in blood, in feelings, and in affection"—he is his own brother. There is, therefore, little reason to suppose him ignorant of the circumstance—there is evidence to prove the G.M. well acquainted with it. In opening the lodge, the G.M. called it a lodge of Master Masons—he used the Fellow Craft sign. Shall this evasion be set up as a defence, doing honour either to the Masonic talent or the Masonic integrity of that G.M.? The same brother, still a F.C., attended the meeting of May, 1808. He was questioned as to the degree of Masonry to which he belonged. Under the advice of counsel he declined to answer. He was not, however, by the Deputy prevented taking an active part in the transactions of that day. Will the Deputy, "dressed in a little brief authority," now get up, and in the petulance of demi-official intemperance and noisy invective against the absent, parade before a party known even in Dublin only on election nights, the Masonic virtues and the Masonic talent of the now G.M. of Dublin; will that Deputy, who in his former ecclesiastic function must have learned the lessons of truth and sincerity, now say, that a G.M. can dispense with the laws of Masonry, or absolve himself from those solemn obligations, the strict observance of which in others he should enforce, not only by precept but by example? Ere he uttered his philippic and threw out his challenge, he ought to have considered that truth and rectitude shrink not before duplicity and falsehood, and that the humblest individual in society who states facts will eventually obtain credit in opposition to his superior who states falsehoods. He ought to have known that exalted rank is best supported by exalted conduct, but that neither the one nor the other are the sole property of any family. He should have recollected that the existence and the respectability of Masonry depends not on family accommodation or family aggrandizement, nor will it expire with family discomfiture. Soaring far superior to such paltry arrangements, its virtues will flourish, its benign influence be acknowledged when family schemes are defeated or forgotten. To be at the head of Masonry was once an honour, it is now a condescension, and an expensive condescension it has been; but when people talk of condescension in public, and intrigue for the attainment of their object in private, 'tis not difficult to see that there are ulterior objects in view—"the honour and the interests of the Order" may again be used as a stalking-horse; and, again, may personal advantages and personal aggrandizement be found skulking behind him.

Let it not be supposed that I enjoy any gratification in meeting the Deputy's challenge. As a man and a Mason, it is most abhorrent to my feelings to expose even to Masonic view the picture now before it. In their fondness for notoriety they have forced the task upon me. In most instances the evidence comes out of their own hands; they will not say is the less credible on that account. The Grand Master with conscious foresight warned you to beware how you suffered yourselves to come under the control of an individual so humble as myself. Our conduct is before you, and I will not stop to draw a comparison between the tempter and the tempted—an humble individual in a subordinate situation and a monopolizing family in a superior one. But I will warn you to beware how you submit yourself to the domination of any family, which for twenty-one years could struggle to keep the Order in its trammels, and at the end of twenty-one years, for the attainment of yet ulterior objects, could force that Order to the verge of pecuniary and Masonic ruin.

If, therefore, the Masons of Ireland regard the independence and prosperity of their Institution. If they wish to transmit to posterity their Masonic rights in the same ample and virtuous form in which they have received them; if they wish to stand superior to paltry schemes, and remain independent of family arrangements, and unconnected with systems of family aggrandizement; if they wish to preserve themselves unpolluted by political agitations, and unshackled by Masonic speculators, they will take the law of Masonry as their guide, and spurn the tyrannic usurpations of every person who violates that law for purposes of patronage, or who assumes the power of dispensing with its solemn obligations for purposes of personal advantage, or of personal gratification. The threats, the enmity or the coercion of such individuals may, by the Masons of Ireland, be despised; their friendships, their flattery, or their bribes, must, to the Masons of Ireland, be fatal.

I have the honour to be,
Your very obedient Servant and Brother,
A. SETON, D.G.S.U.

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The regular Committee meeting of this Institution was held on Saturday, the 1st inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. B. Head, V.P., in the chair. There were present: Bros. H. Browne, V.P.; R. W. Stewart, V.P.; J. R. Sheen, V.P.; G. M. E. Snow, V.P.; F. Walters, V.P.; G. Myers, V.P.; J. G. Chancellor, V.P.; B. Mallam, V.P.; R. Spencer, V.P.; J. R. Stebbing, V.P.; Cox, V.P.; J. C. Parkinson, V.P.; T. J. Sabine, J. W. Dosell, H. W. Hemsworth, &c.

Bro. F. Binckes, Secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed.

Four applicants were placed on the list of candidates for the October election, whose petitions were brought before this meeting, and one was deferred. Five boys, who had been educated in this school, had each £5 voted to supply them with clothing. In consequence of the removal of one of the boys from the school, through ill-health, another vacancy was now declared, making fifteen instead of fourteen boys to be elected on Monday, April 17th. One candidate (Fitzwater) is withdrawn from the list of applicants seeking admission into the school.

Some other business having been disposed of, the usual vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Royal Jubilee Lodge, No. 72.—This old lodge was held on Monday, 3rd inst., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street. Bro. H. J. Wright, W.M., presided. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The W.M., in a correct, painstaking, and excellent manner, initiated two gentlemen into the mysteries of the Order, and afterwards, in the same pleasing style, raised two brethren to the third degree, which completed the work of the evening; and after some formal business had been disposed of, the lodge was closed. The usual banquet followed, served up in Bro. Clemow's well-known superior style, under the able superintendence of Bro. W. Smith, whose indefatigable exertions to please all were fully appreciated. The regular toasts were given and responded to, and after a few hours of enjoyment, the brethren separated, well pleased with their happy meeting. There were present Bros. J. J. Laskey, J.W.; H. Webb, P.M., Treas.; J. Nunn, P.M., Sec.; J. Dann, S.D.; A. Curry, D.C.; C. Dodson, P.M.; &c. Amongst the numerous visitors we noticed Bros. R. Boney, P.M. 79; H. Wington, 79; F. Walters, W.M. 1309, P.M. 73; H. Thompson, P.M. 177, P.M. 1158; B. Robards, W.M. 228; H. A. Lovett, 1314.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 28th inst. Bro. J. Speed, W.M., presided, assisted by Bros. C. C. Taylor, S.W.; Green, J.W.; Themans, S.D.; Catmur, J.D.; Kennett, I.G. There were also present Bro. Hill, I.P.M.; Anslow, P.M. and Sec.; W. Carter, P.M. and Treas.; W. Stewart, Gottheil, and Gluckstein, P.M.'s; and a moderate collection of brethren. After the usual preliminaries, Bros. P. Davis, Abbott, and Hutton received their third degree, and Bro. Parker was passed to the second. The ballot being in favour of Messrs. W. J. Downey, Jacob Wigel and Adolph Levy, those gentlemen presented themselves and were severally initiated into the ancient mysteries of the Order in accordance with the established rules of the Craft. After several hours of labour, the brethren adjourned to their well-earned refreshment, which was liberally provided for them by Bro. Clemow under the able and courteous superintendence of Bro. Wm. Smith. On the removal of the cloth, the customary series of toasts were proposed and responded to; by Bro. Downey for the initiates, Ransome on behalf of the visitors, Hill and Steward for the P.M.'s, Themans for the officers. The proceedings were also enlivened with songs by Bros. S. Davis, Mallet, Gairy, Ransom, and M. Davis. The Tyler's toast terminated a very pleasant evening. The lodge was honoured by the following visitors: Bros. Gillard (150), Ransome (W.M. 169), S. Sequira (776, Paris), R. Davis (169), and Pestojee Bazonee (Eastern Star, 1189, Bombay).

Lodge of Unity, No. 183.—On Monday, the 27th ult., at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, the installation meeting of this lodge was held. Bro. G. Thompson, W.M., presided, and completed the work of his year of office by passing one and raising another brother. Bro. Todd, P.M., took the chair, and in a faultless manner installed Bro. H. Wadling, W.M., who then appointed the following brethren as his officers: Bros. the Rev. D. Shaboe, P.G. Chap. Middlesex, Chaplain (re-invested); Garrett, S.W.; R. W. Groombridge, J.W.; Spelth, Treas.; Doggett, Sec.; E. C. Moore, S.D.; E. Collins, J.D.; R. Spencer, I.G.; and Bavin, P.M., Tyler. A vote of thanks and a handsome Past Master's jewel were presented to Bro. G. Thompson, I.P.M., which were duly acknowledged by him. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet.

Fitzroy Lodge, No. 569.—The regular meeting of this distinguished lodge was held at the Head Quarters of the Honourable Artillery Company, Finsbury, on Friday, the 24th ult. Bro. Peter Yeames Gowland, M.D., W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes were read and confirmed, and the ballots for candidates for initiation were unanimously in favour of their admission. The W.M., in his accustomed correct, impressive, and admirable manner, did the ceremonies of initiation and passing, which must have produced a lasting impression on all those who were fortunate to receive those degrees from him. The routine business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed; the supper followed. There were present: Bros. J. C. Daniels, J.W.; P. Matthews, P.M., Treas.; J. Egles, P.M., Sec.; C. J. Watson, S.D.; W. H. Honey, J.D.; J. Dyer, I.G.; H. T. Adams, P.M.; J. W. Long, P.M.; F. Graves, I. Wilkins, G. Smith, W. S. Spicer, &c. Visitors: Bros. Lazarus, F. Walters, &c.

Lodge of St. James, No. 765.—The installation meeting of this young and prosperous lodge, which has nearly completed fourteen years since its consecration, was held at the Leather Market Tavern, New Weston-street, Bermondsey, on Tuesday, the 4th inst. The lodge was opened by Bro. Hyde, W.M., supported by Bros. R. P. Hooton, S.W., and W.M.-elect; T. Neville, J.W.; R. White, Sec.; W. Jones, S.D.; Child, J.D.; P. M'Cullum, I.G.; H. Jolly, W.S.; M. Scott, P.M.; D. Boyce, P.M.; and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were unanimously confirmed. Bro. Hyde, W.M., in an impressive, earnest, and correct manner raised Bros. R. Jolly, Bishop, Ireland and Brimmer to the third degree. Bro. M. Scott, P.M. (father of the lodge), then took the chair, and in his usual superior and masterly manner installed Bro. R. P. Hooton, W.M., who appointed as his officers Bros. T. Neville, S.W.; W. Jones, J.W. and Treas.; R. White, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); Child, S.D.; P. M'Cullum, J.D.; H. Jolly, I.G.; M. Scott, P.M., D.C.; Buckworth, W.S.; and W. J. Laing, P.M., Tyler. The investiture addresses to the officers and the other addresses were most beautifully given by the Installing Master, and on the completion of the ceremony a hearty burst of applause greeted him before he resumed his seat. It was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously that a vote of thanks be given to Bro. M. Scott, P.M., for the able manner in which he had rendered the ceremony of the installation, and that the same be entered in the lodge minute book. The report of the Audit Committee was read, showing that the lodge funds, and all other things connected with the lodge, were in a prosperous state. The lodge was then closed, and the usual good banquet followed, but in consequence of the serious illness of the host, harmony was dispensed with. The usual toasts were given, and Bro. Hyde, I.P.M., at the festive board, was presented with a handsome five-guinea P.M.'s jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him from the lodge funds at a previous meeting. Bro. Scott, in an eloquent speech, returned thanks. Visitors: Bros. E. Harris, P.M. and Treas. 73; F. Walters, P.M. 73; D. Rose, P.M. 73; G. Free, S.W. 73; G. J. Grace, J.W. 73; T. Blakeley, P.M. 765; Parker, P.M. 765; H. Bartlett, J.W. 147; A. P. Haley, 862; Smith, 902; &c., &c.

St. Mark's Lodge, No. 857.—A meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday, the 28th ult., at Bro. Time-well's, the Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane Brixton. Present: Bros. Shuck, W.M.; Hambly, S.W.; Day Goss, J.W.; Bragg, S.D.; Morley, I.G.; Harrison, M.D., P.M. and Treas.; H. E. Frances, P.M. and Sec.; Seaton, M.D.; King, Goalen, Adams, Gamble, Crouch, Cox, Dodwell, Bunker. The visitors were: Bros. Hambly, P.P.G.T., Devon; Bowden, P.M. 278; J. L. Thomas, P.M. 492; W. S. Wallace, P.G.S.W., Gloucestershire; W. Worrell, S.W. 1339, W.M. of the Windsor Lodge, and several other distinguished brethren. After the opening of the lodge, the business of the evening was proceeded with, which was to install Bro. Hambly into the chair of King Solomon. This interesting ceremony was performed in a most impressive manner by Bro. Harrison, M.D., P.M., the father of the lodge, and additional effect was imparted by the admirable performance of Bro. Worrell on the harmonium. The W.M., being installed, then invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Day Goss, M.D., S.W.; Bragg, J.W.; Seaton, M.D., J.D.; Morley, S.D.; and King, I.G. Bro. Frances, P.M., was re-invested as Secretary. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. Bro. Timewell, who must be on intimate terms with geni of the "Arabian Nights," provided a banquet which surprised every one by its recherche style; the resources of a much larger establishment have often failed in giving such entire satisfaction as was afforded on this occasion. After the usual Masonic toasts had been given, the W.M. proposed the healths of Bros. Goalen and Adams, who were initiated a week previous at a lodge of emergency, the Entered Apprentices' Song being admirably given by Bro. Worrell. Bros. Goalen and Adams returned thanks in very happy terms. The W.M.'s health having been proposed by Bro. Shuck, P.M., Bro. Hambly said he was proud of the high position he had achieved in Freemasonry, especially so as it had been given by the members of the St. Mark's Lodge. Ever since he had joined the lodge he had made it his study to do his duty to the utmost of his ability in every office he had been placed. He owed his knowledge of Freemasonry to his punctual attendance to the class attached to the lodge, and was particularly indebted to Bro. Frances, their Secretary and Preceptor, for the instruction he had so kindly given him. He should always study the best interests of the lodge, and hoped he should live to install his successor, and remain a P.M. of the lodge for many years.—The W.M. then proposed the health of the visitors.—Bro. Hambly, P.P.G.T., Devon, said he had travelled very many miles to be present on this occasion, and very interesting it was to him to witness the installation of, he may say, his double-brother—brother of the flesh and brother in Freemasonry—into the chair of King Solomon. He felt sure he was quite deserving of that honour, and expressed his thanks for the kindness he had always received from the brethren of the St. Mark's Lodge.—The Treasurer and Secretary's healths, as officers and P.M.'s, were proposed and drank enthusiastically.—Bros. Harrison, M.D., P.M., and Frances, P.M., returned thanks in very eloquent terms, expressing their hopes that the brethren would take advantage of the class which met in the house they were then in, and at which they could all obtain that excellence which was necessary for them to fill a similar proud position to that which Bro. Hambly then so deservedly occupied. The Officers' health being drunk, Bro. Day Goss, M.D., returned thanks in his usual fluent manner. The Tyler's toast being given, the brethren adjourned, after having spent a most pleasant evening, which was added to by the excellent performance of Bro. Worrell on the piano.

Lodge of Asaph, No. 1319.—This lodge held its regular monthly meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, on the 3rd inst., at 1.30 p.m. Present: Bros. E. S. Jones, P.M., W.M.; Charles Coote, P.M., S.W.; J. M. Chamberlain, P.M., J.W.; James Weaver, P.M., P.G.O. Middlesex, S.P.; Edward Frewin, J.D.; Charles Coote, jun., Treas.; C. S. Jeykill, I.G.; W. A. Tinney, D.C.; W. H. Weston, J. M. Ball, W. H. Stephens, H. Snelling, J. Egerton, H. Snyders, H. J. Tinney, H. Baker, J. Baker, John Strachan, John T. Carrodus, Thos. Edgar, J. Boatwright, W. T. Maby, and Edward Terry. Visitors: Bros. Chas. Heywood (186) and Edward Swanborough, 188. The lodge being opened, the ballot was taken for Messrs. W. J. Castell, W. Graves, L. Silberberg, for initiation, and they, being in attendance, were duly into the mysteries of Freemasonry. Bros. John Strachan and J. T. Carrodus proved themselves proficient in their examination, and were passed to the second degree; Bro. Joseph Baker also having given proof of the knowledge of his examination was raised to the degree of M.M. The W.M. gave the explanation of the tracing-board in the three degrees and the charge to initiates. Bros. John Read, P.M. 720, Organist; Edward Swanborough, 188, Theatrical Manager; Charles Wellar, Organist, were proposed as joining members, and Mr. George Augustus Compton, Professor of Music; Joseph Horton, Professor of Music; Charles Wright, Treasurer, Theatre Royal, Haymarket, for initiation. A distressed brother was relieved with the sum of £5. The ceremonies were conducted in the usual good manner this young lodge so strictly observes. The business being finished, the lodge was closed in due form with solemn prayer.

PROVINCIAL.

Ipswich, British Union Lodge, No. 114.—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 30th ult.; Bro. Phillip Cornell, W.M. There was a large attendance of brethren, and the visitors included the W. Masters of the other three Ipswich lodges, and several brethren from Colchester and Bury St. Edmund's. Bro. H. C. Fox, Lieut. R.E., having passed a satisfactory examination, was raised to the sublime degree of a M.M., after which a most interesting lecture, on "Jerusalem Raised," was delivered by Bro. William Warren, Lieut. 60th Rifles (brother of Bro. Captain Warren, the Jerusalem Explorer). The lecture was illustrated by numerous diagrams, photographs, and models. At the close, Bro. Warren presented the lodge with several valuable books on Jerusalem, &c. A vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Warren, and the W.M. requested him to accept two guineas, to be presented by him to the "Palestine Exploration Fund," as a slight acknowledgment for his trouble and kindness in giving the lecture. The brethren then retired to an admirable banquet, to which about thirty-five sat down.

WARRINGTON, Lodge of Lights, No. 148.—The regular monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Rooms, Sankey-street, on Monday evening, the 27th ult. The W.M., Bro. W. Richardson, occupied the chair of K.S., and he was supported by Bros. W. Mossop, W.M. 1250, as S.W.; D. W. Finney, P.M. 148, as J.W.; John Harding, S.D.; John Bowes, P.M., P.P.G. Reg., Cumberland and Westmorland; W. Crompton, I.G.; Horatio Syred; Charles Wood; T. Mee Pattison, Org.; Thos. Jones; Peter Jones; Samuel Hunt; James Hepherd, P.M.; W. S. Hawkins; Rev. Dr. Massingham; Robert Richardson; Thomas Morris; John H. Gornall, M.R.C.S.; John S. Patten; John Pilling, P.M.; James Hannah, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. Joseph Burton, No. 300; Thomas Jones, No. 291; P. J. Edelsten, No. 1250; Edwin Roberts. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot box was then sent round for Mr. Edward Howorth and Mr. John Wild Thorp, candidates for the mysteries and privileges, which proved in favour in each case. Mr. Thorp, being present, was initiated according to ancient custom by the W.M., under the able deaconate of Bro. W. Mossop, by whom also the charge was delivered with equal ability. Bro. Patten then claimed advancement, and, having proved himself worthy, was entrusted and retired. The lodge was opened in the second degree, Bro. Patten admitted and passed by the W.M., the working tools being presented and explained by W. S. Hawkins. The lodge was closed in the second degree. Bros. Dr. Gornall and Dr. Massingham signed their Grand Lodge certificates and afterwards received them from the Secretary. A discussion now followed relative to Boys' votes, when, on the motion of Bro. Bowes, seconded by Bro. Mossop, it was unanimously agreed to give them in favour of Thomas Lassiter Molineaux, being No. 21 on the list, this boy being connected with Warrington. Nothing further being proposed for the good of Masonry in general or of this lodge in particular, it was closed with the usual solemnities, and the brethren separated in harmony.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Rutland Lodge, No. 1130.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, March 28th. Pro. J. J. Fast, W.M.; J. E. Bright, S.W.; Bernard, Sec.; W. Leadbeater, I.G.; Rev. W. Langley, P.M.; together with several members and visitors. Amongst the latter were Bro. Wright, of the Arboretum Lodge, Derby; Bro. Smith, Manchester; and Bro. Taylor, Leicester. One gentleman was proposed for initiation at the next meeting, and one of the brethren of the lodge offered his services as Steward at the next Festival of the Girls' School. A new banner (supplied by Bro. George Kenning, reflecting great credit upon his establishment) has been lately added to the lodge furniture, which is now complete.

LIVERPOOL.—Pembroke Lodge, No. 1299.—On Thursday, the 16th ultimo, the brethren of this lodge—one of the youngest but most promising lodges in the province of West Lancashire—were assembled at West Derby Hotel, West Derby, near Liverpool, for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master-elect, and for other business. This was the anniversary day of the consecration of the lodge, and it is most creditable to the zeal and unanimity of the brethren connected with the "Pembroke" that the necessary cost of furnishing the lodge (carried out with the greatest taste by Bro. Joseph Wood) has been nearly defrayed during the first year. Bro. W. Crane, W.M., opened the lodge in the first degree, and after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the second degree. Afterwards Bro. William Vines, as the W.M.-elect, was presented to Bro. T. Marsh, A.P.G.D.C. and P.G.S.B., by Bro. Hamer, P.G.T., and Bro. W. Crane, W.M., P.M. 249, for installation. The ancient rites having been read, Bro. Vines was duly installed W.M. in a highly impressive manner. The brethren having saluted in the three degrees, the W.M. appointed the following officers: Bros. J. Sallars, S.W.; J. Clegg, J.W.; Clayton, Treas.; P. Macmurdrow, Sec.; W. Jones, S.D.; W. Wilson, J.D.; W. Cotter, I.G.; J. Cook, D.C.; J. W. Kelly, Steward; and J. Robinson, Tyler. Bro. Marsh gave the address to the officers, and Bro. Hamer addressed the brethren. Amongst the visitors were Bros. A. C. Mott, P.G.D.; J. Jones, S.W. 216; James Ridley, P.M. 321 (Ireland); Dr. Speer, 1094; Pickup, 1094; W. J. Lunt, P.M. 823; &c. Bros. Thomas and Ogle were elected joining members, and the lodge was then closed in due form. An excellent banquet was afterwards provided by Bro. Rawlinson, of the West Derby Hotel, to which about forty brethren sat down. After the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proposed the loyal toasts in short and happy terms. He also proposed "Our Masonic Rulers, Supreme and Subordinate," to which Bro. Mott replied, remarking that he was proud to be in a position to do so. They had a nobleman at their head who had shown an unusual amount of interest in the Craft; and he (Bro. Mott) thought that during his temporary absence across the Atlantic, the Earl of Carnarvon, as his Deputy, was "the right man in the right place." In their own province they had a Grand Master who had served his apprenticeship in a similar capacity for several years, and a more genial and more noble man than the Deputy Provincial Grand Master did not exist. At the last meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge vessels were wanted for consecration, and Bro. Lord Skelmersdale at once said he would defray the cost, amounting to about £80. (Cheers.) Referring to a recent visit to a lodge at Kirby-Lonsdale, Bro. Mott said he was very much struck with the quantity of purple there, and he expressed a hope that before long the same free distribution would be seen in the province of West Lancashire. (Hear, hear.) He expressed great pleasure at hearing of the prosperity of the Pembroke Lodge, No. 1299, although it had only been in existence a year. He was glad to say that No. 1345 had been consecrated the other day, which showed that Masonry was increasing very much. He also referred to the satisfactory nature of the report about to be issued, and said he was proud to know that that lodge, though comparatively new, had contributed its full share towards the educational institution for children. (Cheers.) The claims of that institution were very great, and he trusted the brethren would put their shoulders to the wheel. He congratulated the brethren of the Pembroke Lodge at having placed in the chair a brother who was so eminently qualified to fulfil the duties by his large experience and genial disposition.—Bro. Crane, I.P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," said the selection was one which would do credit to Masonry generally, and prove highly satisfactory to the brethren of that lodge in particular. Bro. Vines was known to most of them as an excellent Mason, and he gratefully acknowledged the good service he had rendered to him (Bro. Crane) during his year of office, never having been absent from a single meeting. (The toast was drunk with much enthusiasm.)—In acknowledging the compliment, the W.M. thanked the brethren very sincerely for having placed him in the chair. In taking that position, he said, the lodge had been very much indebted to Bro. Crane for the efficiency he had displayed during his year of office, making it one of the most promising in that province. He (Bro. Vines) assured the brethren that he would do his best for the interests of the lodge, so far as his time and circumstances would permit. The W.M. said he proposed with much pleasure "The Health of their esteemed and worthy P.M., Bro. Crane." It was the intention of the lodge to present him with an address, but as it was not completed to his (Bro. Vines') satisfaction, he had resolved to postpone its presentation till next meeting, if that met with their approval. (Hear.) No lodge could possibly have prospered more than No. 1299 had done under Bro. Crane. They had spent something like £137, and he was happy to say they had now only owed about £16. (A Brother: That is in addition to the £137, Worshipful Master.) The lodge ought to be proud at having had such a Master during the past year, and he hoped Bro. Crane would be spared to see the Pembroke Lodge rank second to none in the province. (Applause.)—After the toast had been drunk with true Masonic cordiality, Bro. Crane said he hardly knew how to thank the brethren for their very flattering terms of approval. The financial position of the lodge was not due to his exertions alone, but was largely due to the cordial help he had received from the officers and brethren generally. He never entered with more pleasure upon the duties of any office than the Master of that lodge, after the S.W. (Bro. Sellars) had represented that West Derby was desirous of having a lodge; and he assured them it gave him the greatest delight to see that up to that time it had been successful, and bade fair to be one of the most prosperous in the province. He had received the most hearty support from all the brethren, for which he must express his gratitude; and he trusted it would be an incentive to him to continue to work for the interests of the lodge, Masonry in general, and all his fellow-men. (Hear, hear.)—The toast of "The Visiting Brethren," proposed by the W.M., was acknowledged by Bros. Mott, Baker, J. Jones, Ridley, Speer, T. Dodgson (W.M. Lodge of Furness, No. 995), and Worthington.—The W.M. said it was well known, however good the captain, a ship could not be well navigated without excellent officers, and therefore, in proposing "The Health of the Office-bearers" in that lodge, he expressed his belief that the lodge would be carried on prosperously and efficiently during the coming year.—The S.W. (Bro. Sellars) thanked the W.M. and brethren for their kindness, and assured them that he and his brother officers would heartily unite in promoting the interests of the Pembroke Lodge.—"The Newly-admitted Brethren" was acknowledged by Bro. Thomas, and the toast of "Bro. Rawlinson, their host," was also proposed by the W.M. A very pleasant evening's entertainment was greatly enhanced by the excellent singing of Bros. D. Saunders, J. Jones, J. Busfield, E. Hughes, Fisher, &c.

ROYAL ARCH.

CONSECRATION OF THE ROYAL MIDDLESEX CHAPTER, No. 1194.

This new chapter was consecrated at the Northumberland Arms Hotel, Isleworth, Middlesex, on Saturday, the 25th ultimo, by E. Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E., assisted by Comp. James Brett, P.Z., as J.; Comp. John Boyd, P.Z., filling the chair of H., and Comp. R. Wentworth Little, P.Z., officiating as Director of Ceremonies.

The chapter having been duly opened by the Principals the companions were admitted, and the beautiful rite of consecration was then administered by the presiding officer. At the conclusion of this important ceremony, Comp. F. Walters, P.Z., presented Comps. Colonel Burdett, W. Roebuck, C.E., and G. Cattel, the Principals-designate, for installation in the chair of J., and they were installed accordingly by Comp. Little. Comp. Cattel having retired, Comps. Burdett and Roebuck were advanced to the rank of H. by Comp. Brett, and the supreme dignity of Z. was then conferred upon Col. Burdett by Comp. Hervey—the whole of the ceremonies being most ably and impressively rendered by the Installing Principals.

Upon the readmission of the Companions, the M.E.Z. proposed, and it was duly seconded and carried unanimously, that Comps. Hervey and Brett be elected honorary members, in appreciation of their valuable services, and a vote of thanks for the same was also voted.

The names of eight brethren for exaltation and five companions for joining were then proposed by Comps. Roebuck and Little, the latter companion having been previously chosen and invested as Scribe E.

The chapter was then closed, and the Companions sat down to dinner, after which the usual loyal and R.A. toasts were proposed by the M.E.Z. Comps. J. Boyd, Z. 145, and C. Horsley, P.J. 28, responded eloquently for the visitors. The health of the Consecrating Principal was exceedingly well received, and Comp. Hervey expressed his acknowledgements in felicitous terms, and then proposed the "M.E.Z.," for which Col. Burdett returned thanks. Various other toasts were given, including the "Founders," represented by Comps. G. Kenning and D. D. Beck, and the last toast having been proposed by the Janitor, Comp. Gilbert, the Companions separated.

PROV. GRAND R.A. CHAPTER OF EAST LANCASHIRE.

The installation of the M.E. Grand Superintendent, Lieut.-Colonel N. Le Gendre Starkie, took place in the Town-hall, Bury, on March 30th, at 2 p.m., which was numerously attended by the Provincial Grand Officers and companions from the neighbouring towns.

Comp. Henry Muggeridge, Past Grand Standard-Bearer of England, having kindly come down from London, performed the ceremony in his usual true Masonic manner, installing Lieut.-Colonel N. Le Gendre Starkie as M.E. Provincial Grand Superintendent, Comp. John M. Wike as 2nd, and Comp. W. Birch as 3rd Provincial Grand Principal. The rest of the Grand Officers being appointed and invested, Comp. Henry Muggeridge delivered an appropriate address to the companions present, which was listened to with marked attention. The roll of chapters being then called over, the Grand Chapter was closed and officers retired.

The chapter was finally closed at 4 p.m. by Comp. Henry Muggeridge, when the brethren, about sixty in number, partook of a first-class banquet, under the presidency of M.E. Provincial Grand Superintendent, Lieut.-Colonel N. Le Gendre Starkie, at the Derby Hotel, provided and superintended personally by Bro. William Handley, W.M. 1012, in that style for which this hotel is famed.

During the evening Comp. Henry Muggeridge gave "The Balaclava Charge," by Tennyson, which was received with great pleasure. The musical arrangements were ably conducted and performed by Comps. Bailey and Dumville and Bros. Edmondson and Bro. Wroe, accompanied by Comp. Thos. Law, Provincial Grand Organist, and a very interesting meeting was concluded at 10 p.m.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—De Mowbray Chapter, No. 1130.—The regular Quarterly Communication of this chapter was held on the 9th ult. Present: Comps. Newcome, M.E.Z.; E. J. Orford, H.; Douglas, J.; Langley, P.Z., Treasurer; Adcock, Scribe E.; J. J. Fast, P.S.; J. E. Bright, A. Soj.; J. C. Duncombe, A. Soj.; Markham, Leadbeater, Johnson, Chester, Newcombe, Selby, &c. Bro. Bugg, of the Hundred of Elloe Lodge, Spalding, was balloted for, elected, and exalted by E. Companion Langley, at the desire of the M.E.Z. The lectures were given by Comps. Douglas, Orford and Langley, the whole of the work being very correctly rendered. The following companions were then elected to office for the ensuing year: Orford M.E.Z.; Douglas, H.; Fast, J.; H. Dean, P.S. They will be installed at Leicester at a Provincial Grand Chapter which the P.G. Supt. of Leicestershire is about to hold to instal the Principals of all the chapters in the province. There are three or four names down for the next meeting, in June, which will be the second anniversary of this flourishing chapter.

MASONIC ORPHAN BOYS' SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

We have great pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter:—

Freemasons' Hall, Dublin, April, 1871.

Dear Sir and Brother,—I beg to bring the Masonic Orphan Boys' School under your consideration. Although the Institution has been so recently established, we are now creditably maintaining and educating eleven orphans, sons of our departed brethren.

At our first general meeting a resolution was adopted that we should not cease our efforts until a sum had been collected sufficient to justify the formation of a suitable Orphanage, such as the Female Orphan School, and we have the great satisfaction of informing you that we have been enabled, through the liberality of the brethren, to invest in good securities the sum of £4,300; and so soon as the invested sum shall have reached £5,000, we purpose forthwith to take steps for the immediate opening of an independent Institution. At our last election twelve most truly deserving applicants for admission presented themselves. Our funds only admitted of our electing one. I therefore now most earnestly appeal to you to assist to place us in a position to announce that another election will be held during the course of the ensuing autumn.

A Vice-President's fee is £30, a Life Governor's donation is £10, and the Annual Governor's subscription £1; but any sum will be most thankfully received, and trusting that I shall be favoured with permission to add your name to the list of subscribers, have the honour to remain, yours fraternally,

A MAXWELL HARTE, Assist. Sec.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Comfort for the afflicted.—When the blood becomes impure through breathing foul air, or through the imperfect performance of any bodily function, the greatest benefit will be derived from these pills, whose purifying, alterative, and tonic virtues are too well known to need any commendation here. After taking a few doses, a marked amendment will be felt from day to day; the appetite will grow better, the stomach stronger, the liver wholesomely active, and the bowels naturally regular. While taking these pills there is no danger of catching cold, nor are any, save the simplest, precautions (plainly set forth in the directions for use) necessary for securing the full beneficial results desirable from this well-known world-esteemed medicine.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

RECENT CONTRIBUTIONS to MASONIC LITERATURE.

THE labours of Bro. HUGHAN in the field of Masonic literature are so strenuous and successful, his devotion is so untiring, and his ability so widely acknowledged, as to leave little room for additional words in his praise. But even amongst those who gladly hail the results of his industry and zeal there are some who do not to the fullest extent appreciate the actual work involved in the elimination of Masonic evidences from the mouldy records of the past. Nothing, we feel assured, but a high sense of duty, and an overflowing love for the ancient Craft, can at once animate and sustain those who may be emphatically called the historians of Freemasonry.

We have on a former occasion expressed our views pretty strongly upon the various theories broached and advocated with reference to the antiquity of the Masonic Order, and while giving every brother credit for his honest convictions, we then pronounced a deliberate opinion against what is called the "1717" theory. That the rites of the Masonic Order have undergone many changes and modifications during the last two hundred years none will deny, and the preponderating "speculative" element in the fraternity is undoubtedly a creation of modern times; but there are quite enough links connecting us with the mediæval sodalities, and with their prototypes, the Roman colleges and similar institutions, to warrant the belief that Freemasonry is but part of a great chain of union reaching back into long-forgotten cycles, yet never broken or corroded by the hand of time. The traditions still preserved in our Order, misty and mythical as they may seem to many, agree in essentials with those communicated to the operative Masons of old. Hiram Abiff, the prince of architects, is to this day the patron of the handicraft of stone-cutters, who render due honour to his memory upon all festive occasions.

It is of course very questionable whether the exalted moral doctrines now explained and inculcated in Masonic lodges were really taught in the ancient artisan fraternities, but there remains the important fact that the grand principle of brotherhood was proclaimed ages ago in those fraternities—that century after century it has been gaining strength, and now finds triumphant acceptance in the universality of the Craft. Every incident, therefore, which sheds the faintest glimmer upon the past history and progress of the royal art must be welcomed by the Masonic student. Quaint customs that prevailed amongst our forefathers very frequently bear relation to still older practices, and it requires an intelligent mind to group and connect such coincidences together so as to form one continuous and harmonious whole. The extraordinary capacity for work of this arduous character, already evinced by Bro. HUGHAN, must have prepared our readers in some measure for his masterly "History of Freemasonry in York," which is now republished in a work entitled "Masonic Sketches and Reprints." His diligence in collecting materials is only equalled by the care with which he preserves every item of real value; and the result is, not only an accurate, but most readable account of the sayings and doings of Freemasons in the olden times. The second part of these sketches is scarcely less valuable, inasmuch as it embraces unpublished records of the Craft, relating more especially to the discovery of a missing volume of the minute books appertaining to the "Ancient Society of Free and Accepted Masons of the Grand Lodge of All England, held at the city of York 27th December, 1774, to 31st July, 1780."

It is not possible for us to do more than indicate the valuable contents of this minute book, but it may be fairly deduced therefrom that the York Masons recognised but five degrees, namely, the Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, Master Mason, Knight Templar, and Royal Arch; the Knight Templar being also called Knight of the Tabernacle. This seems to settle the assertion that the Rose Croix, Ne Plus Ultra, and other foreign grades were ever sanctioned by the brethren at York, although it is probable that some portions of those degrees, as well as of the Red Cross of Constantine, formed part of the ritual of the Templar Order.

These records, however, throw very little light upon the so-called Heredom working, and do not support the various theories which have been promulgated as to its comprehensive character. Be this as it may, the warmest thanks of the Fraternity are due to Bro. HUGHAN for his painstaking and laborious efforts in the cause of Masonic literature, and for the extremely lucid manner in which he invariably marshals and arranges his facts. Nor must his distinguished colleague in the preparation of "Masonic Sketches and Reprints" be overlooked, and when we mention his name, the Rev. Adolphus F. A. Woodford, Past Grand Chaplain, it will be at once recognised as that of a good Mason and a sound scholar. Bro. Woodford analyses with keen literary acumen the evidences adduced in favour of the antiquity of York Masonry, and arrives at the conclusion that the traditions which connect the early history of the Craft with that city are worthy of acceptance and credit. As we have already intimated, our space will not permit us to give even an outline of this interesting Masonic work; but we could not allow the opportunity to pass without adding our humble wreath of praise to the laurels of approbation which such distinguished services to Freemasonry so amply merit at the hands of every lover of the mystic art.

Mulum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE RITE OF MISRAIM.

A disingenuous and disgraceful attempt has been made by the opponents of the above Rite to make capital out of a circular issued by Grand Lodge some twelve years ago against the Reformed Rite of Memphis.

In the first place, the two rites are perfectly distinct—the first having been founded in 1782, and the other so recently as 1839. But the essential difference is this: that the Rite of Misraim, as now practised in England, rests upon the basis of the Craft degrees, and works only a few grades peculiar to the Rite, whereas the Grand Lodge of Philadelphia, or Reformed Rite of Memphis, actually works the Craft degrees, and those only. It was for this unwarrantable interference with the authority of Grand Lodge that the Memphis lodges in London and its vicinity were denounced as spurious and illegal by the Board of General Purposes. It was because they professed to make, pass, and raise Masons without the sanction of the Grand Master, that their proceedings attracted any notice at all, for, had they—being, first of all, regularly initiated—created themselves 33rds all round, it would not have fallen within the province of Grand Lodge to condemn them. The attempt to establish a parallelism between Memphis and Misraim is therefore simply an imposition. VERITAS.

UNION OF THE MASONIC CLERGY.

The proposal of Bro. the Rev. J. Kingston (page 204) is a most valuable suggestion. There already exists an ancient and beautiful Masonic degree inculcating the very principles enunciated by Bro. K., in almost identical words. It is that of Templar Priest, but unfortunately limited to Templars, whilst many clergymen do not belong to that Order. Bro. Kingston's proposal deserves the hearty support of the Craft.

JOHN YARKER

MASONIC SKETCHES AND REPRINTS.

I beg most cordially to join with Bro. "Lupus," at page 185, in recording my thanks to Bro. Hughan for his recent first-class addition to our Masonic literature. I look upon Bro. Hughan as one of my schoolmasters in the Masonic literary way, and value him as one of the most reliable of our historians; and though we sometimes differ slightly as to the conclusions to be drawn from certain facts, yet it must be acknowledged that it is to Bro. Hughan's energy alone that in many cases we have come to the knowledge of several most valuable and interesting facts. I wish him good health and strength to carry out his intention of giving us some more "hitherto unpublished MSS.," as also reprints, as soon as possible.

W. P. BUCHAN.

ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST AND THE 1717 THEORY.

At page 185 Bro. Paton asks for evidence that he "not only shows his ignorance of what the 1117 theory really is, but also shows his want of observation as to what takes place in the columns of THE FREEMASON." Now, I beg to acknowledge receipt of the necessary evidence in his own remarks at page 201, April 1st.

W. P. BUCHAN.

As dates, when made matter of history, should be accurate, and an "inexactness" having crept into some of our accounts of the dates of the initiation of the Dukes of York, Gloucester, and Cumberland, I beg to be allowed to correct it through your columns.

Preston, by Dr. Oliver, states that the Duke of Gloucester was initiated 16th February, 1766, and that "the Duke of Cumberland was initiated at an occasional lodge at the Thatched House Tavern," but no date is given of the latter event; and in the "Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar" for the present year it is stated that the "Dukes of York and Gloucester were initiated in 1766," but no mention is made of the Duke of Cumberland. The Duke of York was initiated into Masonry abroad, but the place or date at which this event took place is, I believe, unauthenticated. The Duke of Gloucester was initiated, as stated in Preston, on the 16th February, 1766, as the following extract from the original minute book of the "New," but afterwards re-named the "Royal" Lodge, No. 313, in my possession, proves:—

"New Lodge at the Horn Tavern, Palace-yard, Westminster, on the 5th March, 1766. Present: Rt. Hon. and Rt. Worshipful Lord Blaney, Grand Master; Col. John Salter, D.G.M.; Richard Ripley, Esq., S.W.; Peter Edwards, Esq., J.G.W. pro tem.; Horatio Ripley, Esq., M.L.

"The Rt. W.G.M. reported that, at a Lodge convened by him on Sunday, the 16th day of February last, his R.H. the Duke of Gloucester was made a Mason, and raised a Master, in the presence of His R.H. the Duke of York; and that at the same time their R.H.'s desired their names to be entered in the Book of the Lodge, and that they may be admitted as Honorary Members thereof."

The Duke of Cumberland was initiated February 9th, 1767, as appears by the following extract from the minutes of the same lodge:—

"Royal Lodge, held at the Thatched House Tavern, Saint James's-street, on Wednesday, 4th March, 1767. Present: The R.W. Colonel Salter, D.G.M., as M., in the chair; R.W. George Patterson, Esq., as M. of the Lodge; W. Alexander Campbell, Esq., S.W.; W. Thomas Twisleton, Esq., J.W., &c., &c., and a very full lodge, amongst whom was the Duke of Beaufort, afterwards G.M.

"The R.W. the D.G.M. acquainted the lodge that at a Grand Lodge convened for that purpose on Monday, the 9th February, at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James-street, his R.H. the Duke of Cumberland was made a Mason, had passed the degree of Fellow Craft, and was raised Master. That his R.H. had at the same time done this lodge the honour of desiring to become a member of it. Ordered that his R.H.'s name be inserted as an Honorary Member. . . Two lectures in Masonry were given."

At the lodge on the 1st April following both the Royal Dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland attended, and the Duke of Cumberland was then installed as its W.M., which office he held during the two following years. In December, 1770, he was again elected W.M., and presided several times during that year of office. In December, 1771, he was elected Perpetual Hon. M., and frequently took the chair during the years 1772 and 1773. Many of the minutes, which extend from 1763 to 1777, are curious and amusing.

QUALIFICATION FOR MASTERSHIP OF A MARK LODGE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—From the last report of the Mark Grand Lodge, I see that this question has been under the consideration of the General Board; but regret to find that, "while recognising the difficulty in which lodges are undoubtedly placed, the Board thinks it wiser to defer this question for future consideration."

It appears to me that the present rule, which requires that a brother must be an installed Master in the Craft before taking the chair in a Mark lodge, is one very detrimental to the interests of the Mark Degree. A Mark lodge is usually smaller in number than a Craft lodge, consequently the duties and responsibilities of government are somewhat lighter; but what could be a better preparation for presiding over the Craft than previously taking the chair of the Mark?

In my own lodge I have known instances of brethren who have taken great interest in the Mark, and have worked up to the chair, and then, though quite competent to take the office, have been compelled to retire. Were this rule not in force I am persuaded that we should find many good Masons (who are, perhaps, "crowded out" from office in the Craft) devoting themselves to this degree, to its very great advantage; but now that the highest honours are not attainable, the Mark is looked upon with indifference, and only to be attended to after filling the chair of the Craft Lodge, when, as we all know, in many instances there is an immediate and marked diminution of Masonic zeal.

The governing body of the Mark have always shown themselves so very ready to adopt needful reforms, that I cannot believe this can be long delayed. In the meantime, I trust that those Mark Masters who are not P.M.'s in the Craft will bestir themselves, and endeavour to secure what appears to me to be a right.

To show that I am not actuated by motives of self-seeking, I beg to subscribe myself,

Yours fraternally,
A CRAFT P.M.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having removed from Glasgow—in which town I had the honour of being Master of my mother lodge, Caledonian Railway, No. 354—I find, on coming to Maryport, Cumberland, that I am deprived of Masonic privileges unless I pay 55s., my initiation fees being in mother lodge £2 10s. The above sum being with my fees already paid more by one guinea than the fees of said lodge, which are £4 4s.; and which said lodge have by-laws to the effect that no brother shall be allowed to visit more than once in twelve months. I may also state that there is in this town more than thirty members of the Scottish Constitution, who are desirous of fraternising together as Masons should, but from the above cause are debarred from doing so. Would you, therefore, with your usual kindness, say if it would be competent to get a charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland to meet in Maryport, as there is more than a sufficient number of well-qualified brethren willing and competent to hold and constitute the same. Trusting that you will excuse the liberty of a constant reader of your valuable paper,

I am yours fraternally,
WILLIAM FOSTER,

Regulation for the Trade of Masons, 30th Edward III., A.D. 1356. Letter Book G., fol. xli. (Latin and Norman-French.)

At a congregation of the Mayor and Aldermen, holden on the Monday next before the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary [2 February], in the 30th year of the reign of King Edward the Third, etc., there being present Simon Fraunceys, the Mayor, John Lovekyn, and other Aldermen, the Sheriffs, and John Little, Symon de Benyngtone, and William de Helbeche, Commoners, certain Articles were ordained touching the trade of Masons, in these words:—

Whereas Simon Fraunceys, Mayor of the City of London, has been given to understand that divers dissensions have been moved in the said city, between the masons who are hewers on the one hand, and the light masons and setters on the other, because that their trade has not been regulated in due manner, by the government of folks of their trade in such form as other trades are; therefore the said Mayor, for maintaining the peace of our lord the King, and for allaying such manner of dissensions and disputes, and for nurturing love among all manner of folks, in honour of the said city, and for the profit of the common people, by assent and counsel of the Aldermen and Sheriffs, caused all the good folks of the said trade to be summoned before him, to have from them good and due information how their trade might be best ordered and ruled for the profit of the common people.

Whereupon, the good folks of the said trade chose from among themselves twelve of the most skilful men of their trade, to inform the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs as to the Acts and Articles touching the said trade, that is to say: Walter de Sallynge, Richard de Sallynge, Thomas de Bredone, John de Tyryntone, Thomas de Gloucester, and Henry de Yeevelle, on behalf of the masons hewers; Richard Joye, Simon de Bartone, John de Estone, John Wylot, Thomas Hardegray, and Richard de Cornwaylle, on behalf of the light masons and setters; the which folks were sworn before the aforesaid Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs, in manner as follows:—

In the first place: That every man of the trade, if he be perfectly skilled and knowing the same.

Also—that good folks of the same trade shall be chosen and sworn every time that need shall be, to oversee that no one of the trade take any work to complete, if he does not well and perfectly know how to perform such work; on pain of losing to the Commonalty, the first time that he shall by the persons so sworn be convicted thereof, one mark; and the second time, two marks; and the third time, he shall forswear the trade for ever.

Also—that no one shall take work in gross [wholesale or by contract], if he be not of ability in a proper manner to complete such work, and he who wishes to undertake such work in gross, shall come to the good man of whom he has taken such work to do and complete, and shall bring with him six or four ancient men of the trade, sworn thereunto, if they are prepared to testify unto the good man of whom he has taken such work to do that he is skilful and of ability to perform such work, and that if he shall fail to complete such work in due manner, or not to be of ability to do the same, they themselves who so testify that he is skilful and of ability to finish the work, are bound to complete the same work well and properly at their own charges, in such manner as he undertook; in case the employer who owns the work shall have fully paid the workman [the contractor], and if the employer shall then owe him anything, let him pay it to the persons who have so undertaken for him to complete such work.

Also—that no one shall set an apprentice or journeyman to work, except in presence of his master, before he has been perfectly instructed in his calling; and he who shall do the contrary, and by persons so sworn be convicted thereof, let him pay, the first time, to the use of the Commonalty, half a mark, and the second time one mark, and the third time twenty shillings; and so let him pay twenty shillings every time that he shall be convicted thereof.

Also—that no one of the said trade shall take an apprentice for a less term than seven years, according to the usage of the City; and he who shall do to the contrary thereof shall be punished in the same manner.

Also—that the said Masters, so chosen, shall oversee that all those who work by the day shall take for their hire according as they are skilled and may deserve for their work, and not outrageously.

Also—if any one of the said trade will not be ruled or directed in due manner by the persons of his trade sworn thereunto, such sworn persons are to make known his name unto the Mayor; and the Mayor, by the assent of the Aldermen and Sheriffs, shall cause him to be chastised by imprisonment and other punishment, that so other rebels may take example by him, to be ruled by the good folks of their trade.

Also—that no one of the said trade shall take the apprentice or journeyman of another, to the prejudice or damage of his master, until his term shall have fully expired; on pain of paying to the use of the Commonalty half a mark each time that he shall be convicted thereof. —(Page 280, 1 and 2.)

The following extract from the Preface to the said book may also be new to many of the readers of THE FREEMASON:—

The word "mystery," or its old-fashioned and now obsolete "mistry," as signifying a trade, it will be remarked, has not been used in this translation; mestery, or mester, having always for its equivalent the word "trade" or "craft." These words are derived, in fact, from the Latin ministerium, "a serving to," and are in no way connected with mysterium, "a secret," which the use of the misguided English word "mystery" as their representative might easily lead the purely English reader to suppose.

I shall only add, that throughout the book from which the above was extracted I could not perceive the slightest indication of any difference in the religious aspect between the masons, coopers, saddlers, &c., &c., of which trades anecdotes are interspersed. Nor could I find any allusion—either in that book or in any other book, constitution, charge, &c., written previous to the establishment of the Grand Lodge of England—of "our ancient brethren" ever having paid homage to the Saints John, either as Grand Masters, Grand Patrons, or as members of the Masonic fraternity. I find, indeed, in several old constitutions, such as that of Strasburg, Halliwell's poem, &c., mention made of "four holy crowned martyrs." These may probably have been regarded by the brotherhood as Masonic patron saints, but that these four holy crowned kings, architects, sculptors, and painters ever existed very few of our modern brethren can believe, and how our ancient brethren came to believe in the legend of the said martyrs can only be accounted for on the principle that Masons have always been credulous. They were imposed upon precisely in the same manner as our modern Masons were with the legend of Grand Mastership of the Saints John—as Dr. Oliver was imposed upon when writing his "Antiquities of Masonry"—as our high-degrec-mongers were with the Most Puissant Grand Commandership of Frederick the Great—and a hundred other little matters besides.

Fraternally and respectfully yours,

JACOB NORTON.

Boston, U.S., February 22, 1871.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF BENGAL.

At the last Quarterly Communication of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal, held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, there were present, the Right Worshipful Hugh David Sandeman, District Grand Master; W. Bro. G. H. Daly, M.D., Deputy District Grand Master, and about sixty brethren, including visitors.

The District Grand Lodge was opened in due form at 6.30 p.m.

The R.W.D.G.M.: W. Brethren,—Before addressing you on the general subject of business to be brought before Grand Lodge, I have, to my great sorrow, to make an announcement to you which I am sure will be received with very deep regret, and which is, the great loss that has been sustained by Masonry in India by the death, since we last met, of the District Grand Master of British Burmah. It would be superfluous for me to recapitulate all that Col. Greenlaw did for the good of Freemasonry up to the very time of his decease; how he laboured for its interests with his pen as well as with his personal support and countenance, or to tell you how dearly loved he was by all with whom he came in contact, whether as a Freemason or as a companion in ordinary life. Personally, I have had to deplore the loss of a very dear friend, with whom I was very intimately acquainted, and in close and constant correspondence for many years. The Craft has lost in him an honest supporter, a hardworking, conscientious, and upright brother, whose memory will long live in the annals of the Order. I propose that a letter be addressed to the District Grand Lodge of British Burmah, expressing, on behalf of this Grand Lodge, sincere condolence with them in the loss of this eminent brother. I have further the painful task of announcing to you the demise of W. Bro. Conway, who was well-known among the Masonic fraternity in this province, and much esteemed by us as well for his private and social good qualities as for the interest which he manifested in all matters connected with our ancient Craft. You will remember that he was especially conspicuous in the manner in which he laboured for the advancement of our Masonic Charities. I have reason to know that his loss was acutely felt in his own lodge, and I am equally well assured that this feeling is not confined to Lodge Excelsior. The D.G.M. then moved:—"That a letter of condolence from this District Grand Lodge be addressed to the District Grand Lodge of British Burmah."

Seconded by W. Bro. Col. Ford, D.S.G.D., and carried unanimously.

The R.W.D.G.M. then proceeded to address the brethren of District Grand Lodge, and said:—Your attention this evening will be mainly directed to the committee reports, which have always to be considered at our meetings. From the report of the Finance Committee it would appear that the state of our funds is somewhat improved since June, yet it must be remembered that in addition to the sum exhibited as a balance against the Grand Lodge Fund, there is a debt of £250, which still remains unliquidated, and which every effort must be made to clear off. I hope that during the next half-year we may see this done, and that we may then be able to work on in a state of positive solvency. It will be a matter of regret to you to see the names of certain lodges reported as defaulters by the Finance Committee, who have, however, done but their duty in the matter. I pass over the cases of "True Friendship" and "Marine," as they have in part complied with the laws of Grand Lodge in respect to the payment of their dues, without further comments than to remark upon the discredit which attaches to lodges remaining debtors to Grand Lodge, notwithstanding all that has been said from time to time by myself and others in Grand Lodge on the subject, and notwithstanding their knowledge of the urgent necessity which exists of relieving Grand Lodge from an embarrassment which is partly attributable to their negligence. In the other cases, upon the recommendation of the Finance Committee, I directed the Masters to appear before a Committee, which I appointed, to investigate their cases, together with their books and warrants of constitution. The Committee have reported to me in the case of Lodge Temperance that the disregard to the instructions which are issued from time to time from the Grand Secretary's office, has resulted from ignorance and not from intentional motives of disrespect, and they are of opinion that a reprimand, which they administered to the officer in charge of the lodge, was sufficient to meet the case. I have, of course, supported their judgment and their action. I am sorry to be obliged to add that the lodge is very far from being in a satisfactory state, and I have been compelled, upon the appeal of one of its members, to interfere with the election of its Master for the ensuing year. The Master of Lodge Anchor and Hope paid no attention to the orders communicated to him to appear before the Committee, and a peremptory summons was accordingly issued; upon this he appeared with his Secretary, but without his warrant or books, as he was desired to do. His replies were considered by the Committee to be so unsatisfactory, and his statements regarding the lodge so suggestive of the fact that it was in a completely disorganised state, that they felt themselves bound to recommend a withdrawal of the warrant. This I have directed to be done, and it will be for you to decide, upon hearing the case, which will be laid before you during the evening, whether it will be prudent again to entrust the warrant to the keeping of a Master who is apparently unable to comprehend the responsible nature of his duties as a ruler in the Craft. The Master of the lodge is himself under sentence of suspension from his Masonic privileges, until such time as he shall obey my order to deliver his warrant into the hands of the Grand Registrar. While on the subject of irregularities, I have to notice a case which has occurred at Fyzabad in Lodge Light in Ajoodyha, where the Master, on being removed from the station prior to the expiration of his term of office, placed a new Master in the chair, instead of handing over the lodge, as he should have done, to the rule of his Senior Warden. As the irregularity in this instance arose entirely from ignorance on the part of the Master, I have contented myself with reprimanding him for his want of knowledge of ordinary Masonic law and procedure. The case is painfully illustrative of the fact that a Mason does not always make himself sufficiently acquainted with the duties of a Master before taking upon himself that very responsible office. As regards the reports from the Fund of Benevolence and the Bengal Masonic Association, I have nothing to say further than that, under the existing relations between the Fund of Benevolence and this District Grand Lodge, relations which I believe to be entirely founded upon error, no discussion can take place regarding a report which is sent to us for information and record only; and that the progress made in the affairs of the Bengal Masonic Association ought to be a matter of congratulation. This report also is sent to us for record and information only. Fears were entertained for a short time that Lodge Rock of Gwalior, at Morar, might collapse, owing partly to the transfer of its Master and some of its members to a distant station, and partly to resignations and deaths. I am happy, however, to add that W. Bro. Major Wroughton, whose name has been for some time prominently associated with the Dinapore and Fyzabad lodges, and who is now stationed at Morar, has taken the affairs of the lodge in hand, and holds out every hope of its again working prosperously. I wish to call attention to the handsome mural tablet which has been placed in the monument room of this building, by brethren of Lodge Excelsior, to the memory of our departed Bro. Abbott; and also to notice that the erection of the handsome monument in memory of the late Bro. J. J. L. Hoff, has been delayed in consequence of repairs to St. Andrew's Kirk, in which it is destined to remain. Consent to its erection has been formally obtained from the church authorities. I have to report three exclusions from lodge for non-payment of dues.

Reports of the Finance Committee and Grand Committee of the Bengal Masonic Fund of Benevolence were read and adopted.

The District Grand Master then appointed the officers of the District Grand Lodge for the year 1871. He took the opportunity of thanking W. Bro. Daly and the officers of the past year for their general services, and for the support which they had given him during their tenure of office, and further expressed a hope that he might continue to receive the benefit of their future advice and counsel. He remarked that while it was absolutely necessary to ask some brethren to retire from office for a season, it was of course understood that they retained full possession of their privileges as Past Officers as long as they continued to retain their names on the roll of some regular lodge, and he hoped, after the lapse of a twelvemonth, to be in a position again to recognise their merits and their claims, by promotion to higher office. He thought it advisable, as in previous years, to bestow some rewards upon deserving Masons in the Mofussil, who frequently had great difficulties to contend with in their endeavours to promote the interests of the Order, and who, by holding office in Grand Lodge, would necessarily be led to take a still deeper interest in matters connected with the Craft; and he had endeavoured, to the best of his ability, to apportion the remainder of the appointments fairly among the town lodges, selecting brethren whose real worth and personal merit he believed to be acknowledged and respected by their fellows. He thought it unadvisable to bestow any offices upon the members of those lodges which had been unfavourably reported upon by the Finance Committee, as neglecting to comply with the rules and regulations which they were bound, as Masonic bodies, to respect. The District Grand Master, then passed a very warm eulogium on the brother whom he had selected for the high position of Deputy District Grand Master, observing that he had served as District Grand Secretary for a period of five years, that during that time he had placed his office on an efficient footing, which, as far as his experience went, was unprecedented in the Province, that he had seen brethren promoted before him, consenting to continue the good and useful work in which he was engaged, until a brother could be found to supply his place, who was both equal to the work and possessed the confidence of the brethren at large. Such a brother had now been found, and the acknowledgments of Grand Lodge were due to Bro. Captain Murray for his kindness in undertaking the duties of what was a very arduous, difficult, and not unfrequently an invidious position. He considered that the thanks of Grand Lodge were eminently due to Bro. Locke, who had for so long a time fulfilled those duties with such untiring energy and marked ability, and whose unflagging zeal in the interest of the Craft would still have full scope of action in his high office as Deputy District Grand Master.

W. Bro. Locke was then conducted to the east by the Grand Director of Ceremonies, and invested with the insignia of his office by the District Grand Master, who congratulated him upon his advancement and delivered to him his patent as Deputy District Grand Master of the Province.

The District Grand Lodge was then announced to be composed as follows:—

Henry H. Locke, P.M. 109, Deputy Grand Master.
John Pitt Kennedy (Barrister-at-law), P.M. 109, Senior Grand Warden.
William B. Farr, W.M. 825 and P.M. 486, Junior Grand Warden.
Rev. W. F. Robberds, B.A., 109 and 1210, Grand Chaplain.
Demetrius J. Zemin, W.M. 229, Grand Registrar.
Capt. Wm. George Murray, W.M. 109, P.M. 639, Grand Secretary.
Col. H. R. Wroughton, P.M. 836, 1066, and 1210, Senior Grand Deacon.
Isaiah L. Taylor, P.M. 392, Jun. Grand Deacon.
Col. J. M. Campbell, W.M. 486, Grand Supt. of Works.
Capt. F. F. J. Toke, P.M. 486 and 552, Grand Director of Ceremonies.
William O. Allender, W.M. 67 and 232, Assist. Grand Director of Ceremonies.
Major C. T. Hitchens, P.M., Chota Nagpore Lodge, Grand Sword Bearer.
Joseph Van Gelder, 67, Grand Organist.
Lieut. J. W. Lay, P.M. 413, Grand Pursuivant.
Capt. G. G. Nelson, S.W. 486; William Henry McGowan, P.S.W. 486; Thomas Carritt, S.W. 825; Edmund Healey, Treas. 67; Thomas H. Henty, P. Sec. 229; William Joseph Curtoys, 109; Grand Stewards.

Worshipful Bro. J. H. Linton, on the nomination of Wor. Bro. Keighly, Past D.G. Deacon, seconded by Wor. Bro. Locke, Dep. D.G.M., was unanimously re-elected District Grand Treasurer, and was duly invested with the insignia of his office by the District Grand Master, who complimented him upon the mark of confidence he had received from the brethren in being thus chosen for the fifth time to fill the important post of District Grand Treasurer, and thanked him on behalf of the District Grand Lodge for his past services as custodian of their funds.

Bro. Amos was re-appointed Custodian of the Hall for the ensuing year, receiving the thanks of the District Grand Master for his past services.

A collection was then made for the Fund of Benevolence. The amount was announced by the District Grand Secretary to be Rs. 274.

There being no further business to be brought forward, the District Grand Lodge was closed in due form at 7.45 p.m.

"FOR a long period I have been subject to frequent attacks of lumbago, at times so severe as to totally unfit me for business. After trying many medicines, to little or no purpose, I was induced to use your Vegetable Pain Killer, and the result was truly surprising, for in a few days the pain left me entirely and has not since returned.—J. J. HORROX, New Mills, Derbyshire, Nov. 1869.—To P.D. & Son."

MARK MASONRY.

CONSECRATION OF THE PERCY LODGE AT STOCKTON.

The consecration of the Percy Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 112 (English Constitution) took place at Stockton-on-Tees, on Tuesday, the 28th ult., by the Right Hon. Earl Percy, M.P., R.W.D.G.M., and Prov. Grand Master for Northumberland and Durham, at the Freemasons' Hall, in the presence of a large number of brethren from various Mark Masters' Lodges in the Province.

The brethren met at four o'clock p.m., and the illustrious visitor was to arrive about the same time by train from London. Much disappointment was evinced when the deputation appointed to meet his Lordship at the station returned without him, or any tidings as to the cause of his non-appearance.

The lodge was opened for the despatch of business by Bro. A. Clapham, D.P.G.M.; and shortly afterwards the receipt of a telegram from the noble Earl, informing the brethren he had missed the train at Thirsk and was coming on by Darlington, at once removed all apprehension and disappointment. In a short time he entered the lodge, and was saluted according to ancient form. The warrant and dispensation were read by the P.G. Secretary, and the brethren having signified their approval of the officers' names therein, the Prov. G.M. then called upon the Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. H. R. Tristram, LL.D., to deliver the oration, and for nearly half-an-hour the attention of all present was rivetted by the very instructive and interesting account of the Mark Degree in connection with ancient Freemasonry, and also the learned traveller's experience of Mark Masonry in America, Canada, Africa, and Asia Minor, but especially during the last five years in the explorations in Palestine, proving without any doubt the existence of Operative Mark Masonry at the building of the first temple. Very excellent reasons were given for the origin of the legend and ceremonial peculiar to the Mark Degree. The orator concluded his address by a pleasing and merited allusion to the purely Masonic and philanthropic labours of the representative of the lodge, Bro. Thomas Whitwell, during the last few months at the seat of war.

After an anthem by the choir, the Chaplain gave the consecration prayer. The Prov. G.M. gave the invocation, a procession marching round the lodge to solemn music, and scattering corn, wine, and oil, and the Prov. G.M. bearing a censer of incense, with the concluding prayer and dedication, completed the ceremony. The noble earl paid a high compliment to Dr. Tristram for the elaborate oration with which he had favoured the meeting. Bro. Frederick Binckes was present and assisted in the ceremony with his usual ability.

The Craft was represented from West Hartlepool by Bros. Harpley, Dr. Gourley, Cameron, Pearson, and Stafford; from Darlington, by Bros. Jos. Morrell and John Bailey; Newcastle, by Bros. Clapham, Stokoe, and Strachan; and Stockton, by Bros. Whitwell, Trotter, Charles Ianson, jun., Rev. J. Milner, Watson, Knowles, Head, Nelson, and Waller.

A dinner in the banqueting-room of the hall concluded the day's proceedings.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW LODGE AT SUNDERLAND.

A few weeks ago, when referring in these columns to the spread of Mark Masonry under the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of England and Wales, we mentioned among other warrants that had been granted one for a lodge at Sunderland, in the Province of Northumberland and Durham, under the title of the Union Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 124.

A meeting of the lodge was held under dispensation on the 14th ult., when eight candidates were advanced, and the P.G.M., the Earl Percy, having named Friday, March 31st, as the day for consecration, the necessary arrangements for the formal opening were at once perfected. The attendance of brethren to support the noble Earl on this occasion was large, including Bros. F. Binckes, G.S.; A. Clapham, D.P.G.M.; J. S. Ridsdale, P.G.J.O.; J. Stokoe, G.D. and Prov. G. Treas.; T. Y. Strachan P.G. Sec., and W.M. Northumberland and Berwick Lodge; Rev. J. Marritt, P.G. Chaplain; W. Brignall, jun., P.G.S.D.; Hubert Laws, P.G.J.D.; W. Coxon, P.G.I.G.; Cameron, W.M. Eclectic Lodge, No. 39 (W. Hartlepool); J. Trotter, Percy Lodge, No. 122 (Stockton-on-Tees); E. D. Davis, L. M. Cockcroft, Lieut.-Colonel Addison Potter, J. S. Challoner, and others.

Prior to the consecration, dispensation being given by the R.W.P.G.M., Bro. R. Hudson, W.M. of the Craft Lodge, No. 949, was advanced to the degree by Bro. F. Binckes, whose beautiful rendering of the ceremony was much admired by all the brethren present.

A Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened by the Earl Percy, M.P., the M.W.D.G.M. of Mark

Masters of England and Wales, &c., and R.W.P.G.M. of the recently-formed Province of Northumberland and Durham, the preliminary formalities were gone through, and the lodge was duly consecrated, Bro. F. Binckes giving the oration.

The W.M.-designate, Bro. Levy, having been duly installed in the chair, the following officers were appointed for the ensuing twelve months:—S. J. Wade, S.W.; R. Dixon, J.W.; J. J. Clay, M.O.; P. Hvistendahl, S.O.; W. Liddell, J.O.; R. Humphrey, Treas.; A. Clay, Sec.; J. Riseborough, Registrar of Marks; J. H. Coates, S.D.; J. Davison, J.D.; F. Maddison, I.G.; R. Giesecke, O.; J. Thompson, Tyler.

The number of members seeking admission will, in a very short time, make the Union Lodge an exceedingly prosperous one. The meetings of the lodge will be held in the commodious lodge-room in the new Masonic Hall, Park-terrace, Sunderland (where the consecration took place).

The lodge being closed, the brethren who were not compelled to leave by early trains adjourned to the consecration banquet at the Queen's Hotel, served up in first-class à la Russe by the host of that noted hotel. The Earl Percy occupied the chair, supported by the newly-installed W.M., and the Grand and Provincial Grand Officers. The vice-chair was ably filled by the S.W. (Bro. S. J. Wade).

The usual loyal and complimentary toasts having been satisfactorily disposed of, the noble Chairman proposed in flattering terms "The Health of the W.M."

Bro. Davis (by permission of the Prov. G. Master), supplemented the toast, and paid a very high compliment to the manner in which Bro. Levy worked the three Craft degrees and the Royal Arch, in which he had been an instructor and teacher for years, and was certain that the newly-opened lodge would prosper under his presidency.

The P.G.M., in proposing the toast of "The Union Lodge," expressed the great pleasure which the spread of Mark Masonry in his province gave him, more especially the opening of such lodges as that to-day in great centres of Craft Masonry, and expressed every hope of prosperity to it and its members.

The W.M. responded in fitting terms, and thanked his lordship and the Grand and Provincial Grand Officers and brethren for their attendance.

"The Northumberland and Berwick Lodge" was proposed by the Vice-Chairman, who assured visitors that they would always receive a hearty welcome at the Union Lodge.

Bro. Strachan, responding, expressed the satisfaction he felt at having advanced such a large number of worthy Masons to the degree as he had done.

"The Eclectic and Percy Lodges" was proposed by Bro. J. J. Clay, M.O., and responded to by Bro. W. Brignall, jun., who stated that shortly they would be asking the P.G.M. to consecrate a lodge in the city of Durham.

Bro. J. H. Coates, S.D., proposed "The Benevolent Fund and Masonic Charities," and expressed the opinion that, if the work of the charities were regularly brought before the lodges, and arrangements made for collecting small donations in every lodge for each charity before each anniversary festival, a much larger sum would be gathered and more cases relieved.

Bro. F. Binckes, G.S., responded, and stated that it was the wish of the M.W.G.M. of Mark Masters that the subject of the Benevolent Fund should be brought before each lodge, and that every lodge should, by the box or other means, collect money for charities at every meeting. The claims of the Benevolent Fund were great, as by their arrangements deserving cases were speedily relieved in a delicate way.

"The Countess Percy and Lord Warkworth," proposed by an irrepressible and enthusiastic brother, and the Tyler's toast, brought a pleasant day's proceedings to a close. Songs by Bros. Giesecke, Maddison, Liddell, Coates, and others, diversified the evening's proceedings. Bro. Giesecke, Organist of the lodge, presided at the piano.

LEICESTER.—Forake Lodge, No. 19.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Thursday, the 23rd ult., the W.M., Bro. Duff, in the chair. On the confirmation of the minutes, the chair was taken by the R.W. Prov. G.M.M., Brother Kelly, who proceeded regularly to install Bro. Charles Johnson, who was afterwards proclaimed and saluted. The Treasurer's accounts having been passed, and that officer re-elected, the W.M. invested the following brethren as the officers for the ensuing year, viz.: Duff, I.P.M.; Weare, S.W.; Partridge, J.W.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, M.O.; Toller, S.O.; Richardson, J.O.; Stretton, Treas.; Sculthorpe, Sec.; Toone, Registrar; Atwood, S.D.; Barber, J.D.; Wildowson, I.G.; Atwood and Buzzard, Stewards; Bembridge and Dunn, Tylers. Bro. William Tertius Rowlett, elected at a former meeting, having been duly advanced, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Howe Lodge, No. 21.—The regular meeting of this lodge, postponed from January, was held on Tuesday, March 28th. V. W. Bro. Rev. W. Langley, M.A., Grand Mark Chaplain and D.P.G.M.M. of Leicestershire, occupied the chair (in the absence of Bro. Douglas, the W.M.) A ballot was taken for Bro. Jas. King, of the Rutland Craft Lodge, and he was unanimously elected, but not being present his advancement was put off for the next meeting. Bro. Fast was then elected as W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Leadbeater Treasurer. The next meeting will be held in May, when Bro. Fast will be installed.

ROYAL ARK MASONRY.

The Dove Lodge, No. 4, held a meeting at the Freemasons' Tavern on the 29th ult., Bro. Loewenstark, G.S., acting as Commander (in the absence of the C.N., Bro. Abrahams); Bro. M. Emanuel, as S.W.J.; Bro. E. P. Albert, as J.W.S.; and Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, P.N. and Insp.-General, acting as Deacon. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and ballots taken for several candidates favourably, Bros. T. K. Tippett, Mark Lodge 86; C. Snow, E. Petit, and J. Faulkner, all of the Samson and Lion Mark Lodge, being in attendance, were elevated to the degree of Royal Ark Mariner. Bro. Major Duncan, P.G.M. British Burmah, who was elevated at the last meeting, was unanimously elected an honorary member. It is expected that at the October meeting nearly two dozen candidates will be elevated.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

St. Andrew's Conclave, No. 15.—The usual meeting of this conclave took place on Wednesday, the 22nd ultimo, at the Masons' Hall Tavern, Basinghall-street. The only business was the installation of Sir Gilbert Edward Campbell, Bart., as a Knight of the Order. Amongst the Sir Knights present were the following: R. W. Stewart, G.I. of R., P.S.; Robert Kenyon, M.P.S.; Frederick Binckes, V.; Wm. Jones, S.G.; S. Rosenthal, J.G.; W. H. Hubbard, G. Treas., Recorder; W. Roebuck, Standard-bearer; Donald M. Dewar, Herald; William Scott, Charles Saunders, M.D., W. J. A. Copeman, Joseph Tanner, W. B. Johnston, and Sir Gilbert E. Campbell, Bart. The meeting was very enjoyable, and the newly-installed companion-in-arms, who is shortly going abroad, expressed his satisfaction at being received into the Order.

LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave, No. 44.—The first regular meeting of this conclave since its consecration was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Monday, the 27th ult., when there were present Sir Knights Kelly, M.P.S. and Intendant-General for Leicestershire and Rutland, on the throne; Rev. W. Langley, Viceroy; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, High Prelate; George Toller, Senior General; Partridge, Recorder and acting Prefect; Sculthorpe, Treas.; Duncombe, Standard-bearer; and Bembridge, Janitor. Sir Kts. Clarke (Junior General) and Deane (Herald) were unavoidably absent. The conclave having been opened and the minutes of the inauguration meeting read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for the following candidates for knighthood in this illustrious Order: The Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, W.M. 799 and P.G.J.W.; C. Stretton, W.M. 279 and P.P.G. Reg.; W. Weare, P.M. 279 and P.P.G.S.D.; T. H. Buzzard, W.M. 523 and P.P.G. A.D. of C.; George H. Hodges, P.M. 523 and P.P.G. S.W.; John Hunt, M. of C.S., P.P.G.A.D. of C.; R. A. Barber and T. Shuttlewood, 279; Fred. J. Baines, Sec. 523 and P.G. Steward; J. J. Fast, W.M. 1130 and P.P.G. Supt. of Wks.; W. Adcock, Treas. 1130 and P.P.G. Sword-bearer; Thomas Markham, W.M. 1265 and P.G.D. of C.; W. R. Bryan, F. Arnatt and J. Taylor, 1007; and Thos. White, of Ballymena, Ireland. All the candidates were unanimously elected, and the following were regularly received and installed as Knights Companions of the Order, viz.:—Bros. Stretton, Weare, Baines, Hunt, Fast, Barber, and White, the last-named candidate having travelled 150 miles to be present on the occasion. The by-laws proposed at the first meeting were read and adopted with some modifications. Two or three candidates (at their special request) were proposed—the names of others being kept back until those already elected shall have been installed at future conclaves. After labour which extended over three hours, the conclave was closed and the Sir Knights adjourned to the refectory for refreshment.

INSTRUCTION.

Doric Lodge of Instruction, No. 933.—This lodge held its usual weekly meeting at Bro. Scurr's, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road; Bros. G. Gottheil, W.M.; Austin, S.W.; Bingerman, J.W.; Scurr, I.G. There were about thirty brethren present, amongst whom we noticed Bros. Barnes, P.M. 933 and 554; J. Stephens, P.M. 554; T. Mortlock, P.M.; Scurr, P.M. 933; Saunders, W.M. 1278; Atkins, W.M. 174; Barnett, W.M. British Oak Lodge; Cundick, Ashdown, Clayton, Bradbrook, Musto, Verry, Field, M. Davis, Simmons, Rugg, Appelby, Jones, Ballard, &c. The fifteen sections were worked by the W.M., assisted by the following brethren:—First lecture: first section, Bro. Scurr; second, Bro. Mortlock; third, Bro. Field; fourth, Bro. M. Davis; sixth, Bro. Barnes; seventh, Bro. Scurr. Second lecture: first section, M. Davis; second, Bro. Cundick; third, Bro. Musto; fourth, Bro. Verry; fifth, Bro. Saunders. Third lecture: first section, Bro. Austin; second, Bro. Barnes; third, Bro. Mortlock. Bro. Simmons, 188, was elected a joining member. A vote of thanks to the W.M., for the very able manner he had performed the duties of the evening, terminated the proceedings. The lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned until Friday next, at 8 p.m.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES.

DOWNSHIRE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 594, LIVERPOOL.

The above lodge held its 8th annual banquet at the Royal Mersey Yacht Hotel, on Tuesday, the 14th ult. After the brethren had partaken of the sumptuous fare provided by the hostess (Mrs. Crewe) in her usual and effective style, the cloth being removed, Bro. Frederick Sergeant, S.W. of the regular lodge, as W.M. of the evening, proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured. He next proceeded to give the toast of the evening, viz., the health of Bro. Peter M. Larsen, P.M., First Principal of 220, and D.W.M. of Mark Lodge 65, to whom he presented, in the name of the lodge, a superb and elegantly designed time-piece, bearing the following inscription:—"Downshire Lodge of Instruction, 594. Testimonial to Bro. Peter M. Larsen, P.M. Preceptor." In so doing, the W.M. expressed, with great feeling, the hope that Bro. Larsen would accept it as a memento of the high honour and esteem in which he was held by his brethren for his very unremitting attention and careful guidance, which conducted so largely to the progress and prosperity of this Lodge of Instruction.

Bro. Crosby Leighton here rose and begged to declare his great pleasure in being able to second the above magnificent presentation with the following testimonial, beautifully illuminated, and signed by upwards of 50 members of the lodge:—"Downshire Lodge of Instruction, No. 594. Testimonial from the brethren to Bro. Peter Miller Larsen, P.M., Preceptor for the years 1869 and 1870, evincing the high esteem in which he is held by them, and the testimony to his unremitting zeal and attention to the instruction of those brethren desirous of attaining to the privileges of the highest honours in Freemasonry."

In acknowledging the toast, which was given with Masonic honours, Bro. Larsen assured the W.M. and brethren that he felt too deeply affected to be able to respond in a proper manner to their very earnest expressions of esteem, and the high honour accorded him; however, in the past twelve years which he had been a member of the Craft, he had in any way assisted in promoting the principles of Masonry, he was extremely gratified, and would ever treasure and prize their beautiful gifts.

The W.M. next called upon the members to join him in doing honour to the next toast, the health of the Secretary and Treasurer, Bro. Henry Hodgson, who, for the past ten years, had so ably and successfully managed the business of the lodge, which was unanimously received in the usual Masonic style.

Bro. Hodgson replied in a very able and eloquent speech.

After spending a very pleasant evening, the brethren separated at an early hour.

CALEDONIAN LODGE, No. 489, HASKEIM, CONSTANTINOPLE.

The second annual concert and ball given by the above lodge took place at the Haskeim Institute recently, notwithstanding very severe weather, the lodge hall, which was tastefully decorated with flags and evergreens, was filled to overflowing, clearly demonstrating the necessity of the proposed enlargement of the building. Bro. William S. Henderson, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by several representatives of the Caledonian, Leinster, and Oriental lodges, all in full Masonic costume.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, said he was so well pleased at seeing so many brethren, with their friends, wives, children, and sweethearts around him, that he felt almost in the humour to divulge some Masonic secrets—more especially to the ladies, who, he knew, dearly loved to hear secrets at any time—but they would agree with him that it would be rather out of place, seeing that they had met solely for the purpose of enjoying themselves, which he hoped every one would do. Like every society or association connected with Haskeim, the Masons were flourishing, increasing and prospering, as a society founded on such principles must ever do. Of course they might say it was an easy matter for one to blow his own horn, but there were occasions when it was necessary to speak of themselves. He had often been amused as a Mason at observing the irritation displayed by some young brother at hearing the Order to which he belonged spoken of disrespectfully; as if they, more than others, should escape criticism. That feeling should never be given way to; such criticism should only make them try to watch and guard their conduct through life so that they might never bring discredit on an institution they all loved so much. He had often laid it down as a maxim for his own guidance, that next to a bosom friend we should value our critical enemy or opponent, for his adverse criticism operated as a healthy corrective. If the outside world who are not Masons expect Masons to be more free from the faults that afflict humanity, as Masons, it should only make them try to be as free from them as possible. They, Haskeimites, knowing each other as they did, were free to confess that they were more a community of critics than philosophers, and that Diogenes and his tub would have little or no countenance from them. And perhaps it was right that it should be so. Situated as they were, in a foreign land, with more time on their hands than they had been accustomed to have, dependent on each other as they were for all the social comforts they enjoyed, it seemed so natural that they should sometimes sail on a voyage of discovery and find a little island in a neighbour's eye, forgetful of the mighty continent in their own. Yet with all the Haskeimites' faults, he believed there was more good feeling and real friendship amongst them than many were inclined to think. When they fell out it was only like a lovers' quarrel—just for the pleasure of making it up again; and with all their little differences, he believed most of them would say, "Haskeim, with all thy faults I love thee still!" And many of them, through friendships contracted there, would even say, with Montgomery:

A dearer spot on earth, supremely blest—
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest.

Let each and all of them try to make it so, by working harmoniously together. He just remembered the saying of a great Master in Masonry, mighty Solomon, that there is a time to dance and a time to sing; but if his memory did not deceive him, Solomon never said there was a time for speechifying. So as he had no doubt they all considered the time to sing had arrived, he would conclude. (Applause.)

The concert, with the exception of an excellent professional band, was sustained by amateur performers (Messrs. Teadstill, J. Ferguson, Knighton, Tucker, Laird, Stone, Hosking, Lindsay, Dunn, J. Blair, W. Blair, R. Turner, H. Witheritt, and J. Till), commenced with a well-rendered chorus from the opera of "Faust," and continued with songs and recitations, all of which were well received and many of them loudly encored. From beginning to end the concert was a complete success, and although it was prolonged nearly an hour beyond the time at which it was intended to finish, the only regret felt by the company was that it could not continue. According to custom, the concert concluded with "God save the Queen," in which the whole assemblage joined.

By half-past eleven the room was cleared and the ball commenced, under the direction of Bro. G. R. Warren, P.M., and was kept up with unflagging spirit until daybreak. During the concert and ball fruit, cakes, sweets, and tea, and other sober beverages were handed round, and in another room the visitors found, at any time, an abundant supply of sandwiches, and tea or coffee—a far preferable arrangement to the customary supper.

The whole of the arrangements reflect great credit upon the Committee, Messrs. Jas. Anderson, John Thompson, Thos. Blair, Robert Jamieson, W. Dorrell, Jas. Till, and H. T. Rand, who had their reward in the complete satisfaction which was freely expressed by everyone present.

SCOTLAND.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND AND THE ST. JOHN'S LODGE MEMORIAL.

Report of Sub-Committee appointed by Grand Committee, 25th Nov., 1870, to investigate the memorial from the Lodge St. John, Glasgow, No. 3<sup>2</sup>, anent the carrying of working tools at processions and other ceremonies of Grand Lodge.

In carrying out the remit made to them, your Sub-Committee requested the Grand Clerk to serve copies of the memorial on the Lodge Journeymen, No. 8, and Bro. W. P. Buchan, a member of No. 3<sup>2</sup>, who claimed the right of replying to certain of the statements contained in the memorial when read at the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge; and to the replies received as well as to minutes of Grand Lodge, and other documents bearing on the matter at issue, the Sub-Committee have given careful consideration.

The memorial of St. John's Lodge maintains:—1st. That the lodge was conceded, by virtue of a charter granted to it by Malcolm Canmore, certain rights and privileges, and assigned by virtue of their position precedence in rank over all the daughter lodges of Scotland. 2nd. That the practice invariably exercised hitherto by the Grand Lodge in the ceremonial of laying the foundation-stone in provinces other than that of Edinburgh has been to concede in courtesy and right to the senior lodge of the province to appoint such Operative Freemasons as they shall think fit to select to carry the working tools. 3rd. That the right and privilege of the Lodge Journeymen is distinctly circumscribed and confined to the district of Edinburgh, as laid down in Grand Lodge Laws, chap. xx., sec. 3; and that this law defines their position as that of "Edinburgh and no other place." 4th. That the Grand Master acted contrary to Grand Lodge Laws in awarding prece-dency to the Lodge Journeymen on the occasion of meeting in Glasgow Cathedral previous to laying the foundation-stone of the Albert Bridge on 3rd June last, the deciding of such a question being vested in the meeting and not in the chair. And, 5th. That St. John's Lodge understood they were to be left in undisputed possession of their ancient rights and privileges on the occasion referred to, in consequence of a correspondence which they allege took place between the late Grand Secretary, Bro. Laurie, and the Master of the lodge.

After investigating the several statements above narrated, the Sub-Committee are of opinion:—

1st. That St. John's Lodge has not proved that it possesses, in virtue of its charter or of any law or resolution of Grand Lodge, exclusive privileges, beyond precedence in virtue of its number on Grand Lodge Roll, over the other lodges in Glasgow province. Grand Lodge has nothing whatever to do with any rights or privileges St. John's Lodge claims in virtue of its so-called Malcolm Canmore Charter, the genuineness of which it has never acknowledged. On joining Grand Lodge in 1850 St. John's received its present number, 3<sup>2</sup>, in virtue of its connection with the granting along with other (operative) lodges of the Roslin Charter of 1628, but this confers no special powers or privileges in reference to the question at issue.

2nd. It is asserted that the practice invariably exercised hitherto by Grand Lodge in provinces other than that of Edinburgh has been to concede in courtesy and right the privilege of carrying the tools, &c., to the senior lodge of the province in which the demonstration took place. No evidence has been produced to substantiate this statement, and, on the contrary, the Journeymen Lodge, it is proved, has officiated at most demonstrations of Grand Lodge out of the Edinburgh district for many years past; the more important events since 1848 being at laying foundation-stones of Corn Exchange (Haddington, 1853), Wallace Monument (1861), Duke of Athole's Monument (1865), Corn Exchange (Hawick, 1865), Industrial School (Mossbank, 1868), and Paisley Museum (1869). If St. John's Lodge claims the right in virtue of its antiquity and precedence on Grand Lodge Roll to carry the tools out of the metropolitan district, or especially in the western provinces, why did it allow the Journeymen unchallenged to exercise what they state they consider an ancient and established privilege at the important demonstrations of Wallace Monument, Mossbank, and Paisley, at all of which St. John's Lodge was present? It is true St. John's Lodge carried the working tools at laying foundation-stone of Victoria Bridge, Glasgow, in 1851; but it must be kept in mind that the Journeymen Lodge was not present on that occasion. All the other demonstrations in Glasgow at which St. John's performed this duty were promoted and presided over by the Provincial Grand Lodge; and on all such occasions, whether in Glasgow or elsewhere, the Journeymen have never claimed the right to carry the tools, as they consider the privilege they have so long enjoyed only extends to demonstrations at which Grand Lodge presides.

3rd. There can be no doubt that chap. 20, sec. 3, of Grand Lodge Laws distinctly enacts that the Lodge No. 8 shall be entitled to carry the working tools in all processions in Edinburgh or neighbourhood. The Journeymen Lodge, in its answer, states that "it protested against the law as at present existing when the revised edition of Grand Lodge Laws was being printed in 1848; but that the lodge was requested by the Grand Committee of that year not to raise the question, as all the draft copies were at that time issued; but the lodge was guaranteed the ancient usage should be continued, and hence the reason of its being continued to the present time." No minute or resolution of Grand Committee or Grand Lodge exists to prove this statement; and there can be no question as to the right of members of Grand Lodge to form their opinions of the meaning of the law as now printed, and which also existed in the 1836 edition. It must be borne in mind, however, that, as has been previously stated and proved, the Journeymen have officiated at most of the important demonstrations since the laws were last revised, and till now have done so unchallenged.

4th. The Sub-Committee are clearly of opinion that the Grand Master had an undoubted right to give a decision on the question of carrying the working tools when it was brought before him at meeting in the Cathedral, and the Sub-Committee consider that it showed a want of true Masonic good feeling on the part of the office-bearers of St. John's Lodge, present on that occasion, not to have at once acquiesced in the equitable proposal first made by the Journeymen to divide the tools between the two lodges for the day, by which the good feeling and harmony all were met to promote would not have been interrupted, and an unseemly break in the procession would have been avoided.

5th. St. John's Lodge states that a correspondence took place with the Grand Secretary as to the carrying of the working tools, and "up till the last minute it had been understood the members of St. John's were to carry them, in virtue of their ancient rights and privileges, and that the Grand Secretary, as assessor to the Grand Lodge, should have informed the Grand Master of the right of procedure in this Province and upon all occasions by the Lodge St. John." The present Grand Clerk denies that there was any correspondence with St. John's Lodge whatever in reference to carrying the tools on the occasion referred to, the only communication received being from the Prov. Grand Secretary in reference to Bro. McGuffie, of Glasgow, who requested, as a favour, to be allowed to carry the inscription plate, as he had performed that duty on several previous occasions, to which the Grand Secretary replied that he did not anticipate any objections would be made to the request. No blame can be attached to the late Grand Secretary for not informing the Grand Master of St. John's claims to the exclusive right of precedence in such cases; he could not be expected to do so, when St. John's Lodge had never insisted on these, or ever brought them forward (pro forma) on former occasions when the Grand Lodge was presiding at demonstrations in the Western Provinces.

The above are the facts of the case as elicited by your Sub-Committee. There can be but one opinion as to the desirability of some measure being adopted which shall allay, in future, the irritation which has sprung up in reference to the right or honour as to who shall carry the working tools, &c., of Grand Lodge. The Journeymen Lodge, at conclusion of their answers, state, that "they are not unwilling to enter into an arrangement whereby the present privileges of the lodge may be preserved intact, but they are also willing that such other plan be arranged as will enable any operative lodge in the Provinces to enjoy the privilege on intimating a desire to that effect to the Grand Secretary within a reasonable time, previous to the date of the ceremony, and that the same be intimated to the Lodge No. 8." Bro. Porteous' motion, which comes up for discussion at next quarterly communication (i.e., on 6th February, 1871) of Grand Lodge, also seeks to have it enacted that "in Provinces out of the Metropolitan district, the working tools shall be carried by the Senior Operative Lodge, or failing which, the oldest lodge in the district on Grand Lodge roll." The Sub-Committee are of opinion that the adoption of either of these motions will not secure a harmonious and lasting decision of the question at issue. Both motions seek to maintain, and that in a new law, a distinction between Operative and Speculative Masonry, which is not, and has not been, recognised by our own or other Grand Lodges for many years past, and by giving this preference to the elder, they would effectually exclude the younger lodges from the privilege in question,—though it cannot be disputed, that they are quite entitled to participate along with the older lodges in all honours Grand Lodge has to bestow.

Your Committee, in concluding this report, would venture to suggest that the simplest and fairest way to settle the point at issue, and secure peace and harmony in future, would be, while allowing the Journeymen Lodge the privilege they have hitherto enjoyed of carrying the working tools and other paraphernalia of Grand Lodge in the Metropolitan district, that, if it is the wish of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow—which forms a large and influential section of our Craft, and whose opinions and request must always meet with brotherly consideration from Grand Lodge—that St. John's should have the same privilege in that Province, the honour should be conceded to No. 3<sup>2</sup> there and in any other place or Province when the Grand Lodge is officiating, the Grand Master, or the brother acting for him, shall have the power of fixing on the lodge or lodges to carry the tools, &c., for the occasion, and his decision should not be open to review. This course was adopted by the Earl of Dalhousie, at Forfar, in 1809, when he divided the honour between the two lodges of the town in which the demonstration took place, and which arrangement gave general satisfaction to all parties concerned.

(Signed) ALEXANDER HAY.

(Do.) DAVID KINNEAR.

(Do.) WILLIAM HAY.

The foregoing report was submitted to Grand Lodge at quarterly communication on 6th February, 1871, and adopted without the suggestions contained at the close thereof. As to the motion of Bro. Porteous, above referred to, owing to his absence on 6th February, it fell through. Consequently the general arrangement as to carrying working tools for the future has yet to be made.

GLASGOW.

On the 20th March the members of the Glasgow Thistle Lodge, No. 87, met in considerable force, graced by the presence of "charming woman," in Mr. Ancell's Hall, Trades-buildings, Glassford-street, and celebrated their 109th anniversary, the lodge being chartered on 16th March, 1762, just seventeen years after Prince Charles's farewell to Glasgow. Bro. John Fraser, R.W.M., presided, supported on the right by Bro. W. J. Hamilton, P.M. of the Caledonian Railway Lodge, No. 354, and Bro. Thomas Hart, Secretary; and on his left by Bro. W. Lawson, Acting Chaplain, and Bro. John Dobbie, Treasurer, whilst Bro. James Henderson, S.W., did the duties of croupier at a most excellently-served supper. The tables having been cleared, Bro. Lawson delivered a rhymical occasional address, which met with approbation, and the song of "The Thistle, 87," was sung by Bro. T. Hart. The only toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the Thistle Lodge," was given by the P.M. of the Caledonian Railway Lodge, and happily responded to by the Chairman. Thereafter the croupier, in becoming terms, presented the lodge with a beautiful sword in steel scabbard, which he characterised as "a virgin blade, never to draw the blood of a brother." The entertainment then assumed the form of conversazione, in which song, recitation, and dance alternated, and much versatile ability was displayed, Bro. James Perston's and Miss M'Fee's voices lending much pathos to the hour, while well-concerted glees gave variety. Bro. Burton kindly acted as maitre de danse.

WISHAW.

An assembly, under the auspices of the R.W. Master and brethren of St. Mary's Coltness Lodge, No. 31, came off in the Public School, on the evening of Friday, the 3rd ult. The hall and side-rooms were most tastefully and artistically adorned with a profusion of evergreens, and the insignia of the Dalziel, St. Clare, and Coltness Lodges were displayed with excellent effect in the hall, and caused it to have an appearance of considerable splendour. The following lodges were present:—P.G.L. Upper Ward, headed by Bro. M'Gillivray; P.G.L. Middle Ward, headed by Bro. King; No. 7 Hamilton Kilwinning, headed by Treasurer Mackie; St. David's, No. 36; St. James's, Old Monkland, 176; Hamilton, 233; St. John's Woodhall, Bro. M'Murdie, 305; St. John's, Dalziel, 406; St. Clair, 427; St. John's, Crofthead, E.D.B., No. 151, mother lodge of the R.W.M. Carriages began to arrive at nine o'clock, and dancing was soon after commenced and carried on till an early hour. Altogether this was a really first-class assembly, and will long be remembered with the greatest pleasure by those who had the privilege of being present. The best thanks are due to Bro. Forrest for his indefatigable exertions in getting up and carrying through so very successfully this assembly. Under Bro. Forrest, St. Mary's Lodge is in a most prosperous condition, and a large addition to its membership has been made during the time he has been R.W. Master. Bro. Forrest is heart and soul a Mason; he has occupied the Masonic chair most worthily, and we hope he will long be spared to be an ornament and honour to Masonry and all that belongs to it. As a Mason he is highly respected for his sterling uprightness and kindness of heart; and under his direction Masonry in his district is sure to flourish, and not only free itself from much of the obloquy that has been heaped upon it, but to rise greatly in public estimation. We are glad to learn that, after paying all expenses, the balance left over is to be handed to the Ladies' Clothing Society.

MILITARY INVENTION BY BRO. CAPT. NEWMAN.—

One of our local volunteers has produced a comparatively safe cover for military engineers whilst engaged in throwing up earthworks and batteries in the face of an enemy's guns. We allude to a square gabion, designed by Captain H. Newman, of the 1st L.E.V., which, has recently been brought under the notice of the authorities at the Military School, Chatham. The chief advantages which this gabion has over the circular ones, now in universal use, are, that being already made, it can be placed in position by one man in three or four seconds. It is formed of a series of horizontal bands of iron riveted together at the ends, and can be doubled up into the smallest possible compass. When unfolded it may be placed either on the square or at any given angle, and it is therefore obvious that in revetments this description of gabion will be close together, and the openings seen in circular gabions, when placed side by side, will be altogether avoided. As almost every non-military man must know, these openings present a good mark for weapons of precision, and thus the artificial covering does not afford a very safe protection to the men who work in the rear, especially in single sap, and who generally strengthen the weak points with sand bags. The ordinary brush gabion cannot be made in less than five or six hours, whilst an iron one requires two men at least five minutes to put it together. By means of Captain Newman's invention a sapper could carry a protector in each hand, place them together, and fill them with earth, so as to form a solid wall at, say within a thousand yards of the enemy's battery, and could then set to work, under a comparatively safe shelter, to sink or raise an earthwork, from which his own regiment could reply to the opposite fire. The invention seems to be an exceedingly good one, and no doubt it will meet with approval from those to whom it has been submitted. We understand that the gabion has been forwarded to the engineer school through Lieutenant-Colonel Ellison, who may congratulate himself upon having so thoroughly practical an officer as Captain Newman to assist him in raising his regiment to the highest possible state of efficiency.—Liverpool Daily Post.

THE UNITED PILGRIMS' LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

On Friday last week we attended this famed Lodge of Instruction, held at the Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, and were in time to hear the three sections worked in the second degree—Bro. J. Stevens working the 1st, J. Thomas the 2nd, and E. Worthington the 3rd. It would be superfluous to add any comment on the perfect working, when three such well-known names in Masonry are mentioned. Bro. Francis was at his post as Secretary. We can with the greatest confidence recommend this lodge to all those Masons who may wish to learn the working of Masonry in a perfect and correct manner. But few lodges have such experienced Masons as those named above, who attend regularly at this lodge of instruction. The anniversary festival is arranged to be held at 7 p.m. on Friday, the 14th inst., and from the encomiums passed on Bro. Timewell for his catering for St. Mark's Lodge, No. 857, we have no doubt the reunion on the 14th will be a great success. The lodge meets every Friday evening at seven, and that prince of Preceptors, Bro. John Thomas, is the Preceptor.

THEATRICAL.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mrs. John Wood announces that she will appear at this fashionable theatre (for the first time in London) as Mistress Anne Bracegirdle, in a new comedy, entitled "The Actress by Daylight," written expressly for her. We have no doubt but what it will prove as attractive as the other popular pieces produced here.

HAYMARKET.—Mr. Sothorn is announced to reappear at this popular theatre on Monday, May 1st, in a new comedy, entitled "An English Gentleman." The "Palace of Truth" is still performed, and continues to draw crowded houses.

VAUDEVILLE.—The pieces at this theatre still remain unaltered in consequence of their great success—viz.: "Chiselling," "Two Roses," and "Elizabeth." Places must be booked early by those who may wish to attend.

GRAND LODGE.

The R.W. and Rt. Hon. Somerset, Earl of Belmore, G.M.
 " " A. T. Lord Blaney, J.G.W.
 " " Sir G. F. Hill, M.P., S.G.W.
 The Worshipful " Gorges D'Arcy Irvine, Esq., G.S.
 " " Wm. Brownlow, Esq., M.P., G.T.
 " " Alexander Seton, Esq., D.G.S.
 Brother " Robert Mitchell, G. Tyler.
 " " Henry M'Laughlin, G. Purs.

The Right Worshipful Grand Lodge, in its transactions of March last, had occasion to call the attention of the brethren to an imposition practised on them in the transaction of a Right Worshipful Grand Lodge meeting in Dublin, in which that Grand Lodge had the temerity to publish as true an extract from the alleged letter of an illustrious personage, but which on inquiry manifestly appeared to be a fabrication.

The Grand Lodge was then convinced that other statements in that Dublin transaction were equally unfounded, but did refrain from any observation until it was possessed of unquestionable testimony of their falsehood.

It was stated in that transaction "that brethren holding warrants or receiving certificates under the sanction of the G.L. of Ulster would not be received or acknowledged in any part of the world." The Grand Lodge is now enabled to assure the brethren that such statement is absolutely and entirely void of truth. There was this day laid on the G.L. table most authentic and unquestionable proof that the warrants and certificates issued under the authority of the Grand Lodge of Ulster are received with all Masonic honours by the brethren of England, Scotland, and America.

This Grand Lodge is not without sufficient proof that brethren from Ulster visiting in foreign countries have been refused admission into their lodges, and the reason was because they did produce certificates under the sanction of a Dublin Grand Lodge, and not under the sanction of the Ulster Grand Lodge, to which they ought naturally to belong.

It was further stated in that Dublin transaction that certain warrants therein mentioned, held in the province of Ulster, had applied to the Dublin G. Lodge for its sanction. This Grand Lodge has received letters from various lodges inserted in that list, in which "they most unequivocally and positively denied the truth of that assertion, and express their confidence that the Grand Lodge of Ulster will not look upon them as traitors through such false statements of the Dublin Lodge."

It being thus manifest that the statements in said Dublin transaction are entirely unfounded, the brethren of Ulster will now see that the various obstacles so unmasonically and invidiously thrown in the way of their prosperity have vanished before the light of truth, and they will in future be on their guard against similar impositions.

It remains therefore for the Grand Lodge to caution the brethren against the schemes of certain individuals, who are only known to the Order as traders in Masonry, and who, as such, are only active when Masonry can be converted to their own advantage. The experience of the brethren in their respective neighbourhoods will readily point out the individuals of this description, and their knowledge of them will be a sufficient warning against their faithless devices.

This Grand Lodge has great regret in being thus repeatedly obliged to animadvert upon the conduct of a Grand Lodge composed of their fellow-countrymen; and in the genuine spirit of Masonry, it would recommend to that Grand Lodge to prevent the recurrence of such animadversions by adopting truth, sincerity, and justice as its Masonic guides, instead of intrigue, mismanagement, and fallacy. No object can sanction or palliate the use of the latter in Masonry, no authority or power can dispense with an adherence to the former.

By Order,

G. D. IRVINE, G.S.

The next meeting of the Grand Lodge will be on Wednesday, the 5th September, at the town of Dungannon.

A List of the Right Worshipful Grand Officers of the Grand East of Ulster, Elected the 3rd June, 1872.

- R.W. Bro. J. Craig, Esq., M.P., G.M.
- R.W. Bro. John Shaw, Esq., D.G.M.
- R.W. & Rt. Hon. A. T. Lord Blaney, S.G.W.
- R.W. Bro. Joseph Fulton, Esq., J.G.W.
- W. Bro. Georges D. Irvine, Esq., G. Sec.
- W. and Rev. Francis Burrows, G. Chap.
- W. Robert Bradshaw, Esq., G. Treas.
- W. Alexander Seton, Esq., D.G. Sec.

The Grand Master having opened the Grand Lodge, and being attended by his Deputy, and a very numerous and respectable representation of lodges, Bro. Joseph Fulton, Esq., was introduced, and duly installed Junior Grand Warden.

Pursuant to the Report of the Building Committee, it was Resolved—That the Grand Officers, together with the Masters of all Lodges hailing from the Grand East of Ulster, be appointed a Committee to collect subscriptions for the purpose of building a Masonic Hall and Orphan School-house, in the town of Belfast.

Resolved—That in addition to the Grand Officers, Bros. Alexander Barr, Hugh Fisher, and Thomas Welsh, of 684, George Lepper and John Ward, of 587, Edward Alexander, of 38, and Nathaniel Boyd, of 687, and such other brethren as they may select, be appointed a Committee for the purpose of collecting subscriptions in the town of Belfast. Bros. J. Fulton, J.G.W., John J. Beers, 978, David Murray, 112, Mackay, 173, Fulton, 749, be appointed a similar Committee for the town of Lisburn. All subscriptions to be paid over to Bro. Robert Bradshaw, Banker, Grand Treasurer, at the Quarterly Meeting next after they are received.

Resolved—That the several lodges in arrear be earnestly requested to settle their respective accounts previous to the next Grand Lodge meeting.

Resolved—That the Grand Lodge take 200 copies of a book, entitled "An Enquiry into the late disputes among Freemasons in Ireland;" and that the several brethren of the Grand Lodge be requested to endeavour to dispose of them for the benefit of the fund.

The Committee having settled the accounts referred to them by the Grand Lodge, found a balance of £79 18s. 8d. to the credit of the Charity Fund, which was deposited with the Grand Treasurer.

Belfast, June 4, 1872.

Sir and Brother,—I have the honour to transmit for your information, and that of the brethren of your lodge, a list of the Right Worshipful and Worshipful the Grand Officers of the Grand East of Ulster, together with the transactions of that Right Worshipful Lodge, and resolutions entered into at its last Quarterly Meeting on the 3rd inst.

I am desired by the Grand East to express to you and the brethren at large the sincere satisfaction it feels at the approaching accomplishment of that most desirable and important object, "The erection of a Grand Lodge Hall and Masonic Orphan School-house," a measure no less honourable to the independent spirit of the brethren of Ulster, than consistent with the dearest feelings of humanity and the true principles of Masonry.

I am, at the same time, instructed to impress particularly on the minds of the brethren the urgent necessity of active exertions on their part, towards the accomplishment of the above objects; and to express the confidence felt by the Grand Lodge, that it will meet with the cordial assistance and co-operation, not only of particular lodges, but of the brethren at large, in its measures for the advancement and honour of the Craft.

To the Masters and Officers of lodges is earnestly recommended an immediate settlement of their respective accounts, conformable to the regulations and principles of Masonry; and it is further hoped that each officer and brother will exert his best influence to forward the subscription which has been opened in support of these truly Masonic establishments.

I have the honour to be, Sir and Brother,
 Your humble servant and brother,
 G. D. IRVINE, Grand Secretary.

Subscriptions will be received by the several Grand Officers, and the Masters of the different lodges, who will remit the same to the Grand Treasurer, at or previous to each quarterly meeting. All communications to be addressed to A. Seton, Deputy Grand Secretary, Grenville-street, Dublin.

Sir and Brother,—Arrangements having been made with the Worshipful Brother Robert Bradshaw, Esq., Grand Treasurer to the Grand Lodge of Ulster, that all monies due to the Grand Lodge, and also such fees of office as may be due to me as Deputy Grand Secretary, shall in future be paid into Commercial Bank, Belfast, of which Brother Bradshaw is one of the proprietors, I have to request you will have the goodness to pay your dues, and such fees as may be due to me, into the Bank above-mentioned with a memorandum of how you wish the money should be placed to your credit in form as underneath, and receipts will be given for such sums as you may there deposit.

In order that the funds may be in as respectable a state as possible at the next Grand Lodge Meeting, on Wednesday, the 2nd December next, and, as much of the success of the benevolent project now on hand depends on that circumstance, you are particularly requested to settle your accounts previous to that day.

You are also, Sir and Brother, earnestly entreated to forward with all your influence the subscription for building and establishing the Grand Masonic Hall and Orphan School, now in the contemplation of the Grand Lodge of Ulster—a measure so fraught with important advantages to the Masonic body of our province—a measure which will not only serve as a rallying point to the Masons of Ulster, and give permanency and stability to the Order therein, but by it will be raised an asylum for the destitute children of deceased brethren, who might otherwise be exposed to poverty and consequent wretchedness. Under those weighty considerations, it is confidently expected, that every true Mason will feel so much interested in the cause, as to induce him to contribute towards carrying the benevolent design into the fullest effect.

I have also to request that you will attend the meeting of the next Grand Lodge, as it is expected that plans of the building and the institution will there be laid before the brethren for their discussion. You will please collect all the information in your power on such subjects, so as that the Grand Lodge, at that meeting, may be enabled finally to agree upon plans, both of the building and of the institution.

When the great importance and general utility of this project is considered—when it is contemplated what an eminent point of view the Masons of Ulster must stand in by carrying it into execution, and when the open and candid manner of proceeding for which this Grand Lodge stands conspicuous is taken into view, it is not only unnecessary, but in some degree indecorous, in me to attempt to use any arguments to prevail upon the brethren of Ulster to come forward with their dues and their subscriptions on the occasion.

At the Bank, please enquire for Mr. Thomas Welsh or Mr. William Moore, who will receive the money, and give the receipts in the name of the Grand Treasurer.

I am, Sir and Brother, your obedient Servant,
 A. SETON, D.G.S.

THE BEST FRIENDS.—In cases of erysipelas, inflammation, ulceration, and all the varieties of cutaneous diseases, Holloway's Ointment never fails to give relief. Its very first application lessens the inflammation, and diminishes the heat and pain. This soothing ointment, by depurating the blood on its route to, or return from, the affected part, promotes healthy action; old indolent ulcers which have resisted every other treatment, speedily assume an improved appearance; healthy granulations spring up, the sore contracts and soon closes on the judicious use of Holloway's noted remedies. In severe and chronic cases, the pills should always be taken, as their purifying, alterative, and restorative qualities place the whole mass of solids and fluids in a wholesome condition.—[Advt.]

PROXY COMMISSIONS to the GRAND LODGE of SCOTLAND MUST BEAR an ADHESIVE STAMP.

BY A PAST MASTER.

Some discussion has arisen on the question whether or not it is requisite that Proxy Commissions to the Grand Lodge of Scotland should bear an adhesive stamp. The question is one of law, to be settled by reference to Acts of Parliament. It will not be disputed that it is the duty of Freemasons to obey the law of the land on this as on every other point, and the Grand Lodge of Scotland may certainly be expected to set a good example in this respect. The first duty of every Freemason, according to the oath which he takes at the very threshold of the Order on his entrance into it, is to be "a peaceable subject," and "cheerfully to conform to all the laws of the land." Deviation from the law, or wilful disregard of it in any particular, is a violation of the obligation under which every brother has placed himself by his oath, and it would be a disgraceful and lamentable thing if in the Grand Lodge of Scotland disregard were shown of the law by the receiving of unstamped Proxy Commissions, if the law really requires that they should bear a stamp.

To determine this point, we must refer to two Acts of Parliament, 27 Vict., chap. 18, and 33 and 34 Vict., chap. 97. In the first of these, Schedule C., we find the following clauses, declaring what kind of commissions and other papers conveying authority to any person to act or vote on behalf of another party must bear an adhesive stamp, and what the value of the stamp must be:—

Letter or power of Attorney, Commission, Factory, Mandate, or other Instrument in the nature thereof for the sole purpose of appointing, nominating, or authorising any person to vote as a Proxy or otherwise at one Meeting of the Proprietors or Shareholders of any Joint Stock or other Company, or of the members of any Society or Institution, or of the Contributors to the Funds thereof or at one Meeting of any Body exercising a public Trust in the United Kingdom, or to vote at one Parish Meeting of Heritors or Proprietors of Real or Heritable Property in Scotland—one penny. Voting Paper (that is to say): Any Instrument for the purpose of voting by any Person entitled to vote at any such Meeting, as aforesaid, in any part of the United Kingdom—one penny.

The following clauses of the Act 33 and 34 Vict., chap. 97, section 102, bear also on this subject:—

(1) Every letter or power of Attorney, for the purpose of appointing a Proxy to vote at a Meeting, and every voting paper hereby respectively charged with the duty of one penny is to specify the day upon which the Meeting at which it is intended to be used is to be held, and is to be available only at the meeting so specified, or any adjournment thereof.

(2) The said duty of one penny may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the instrument is executed.

(3) Every person who makes or executes, or votes or attempts to vote under or by means of any such letter or power of attorney or voting paper, not being duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

(4) Every vote given or tendered under the authority or by means of any such letter or power of attorney or voting paper, not being duly stamped, shall be absolutely null and void.

(5) And no such letter or power of attorney or voting paper shall on any pretence whatever be stamped after the execution thereof by any person.

The language of both these Acts of Parliament seems to be sufficiently clear, and the conclusion irresistible, that every Proxy Commission to the Grand Lodge of Scotland must bear an adhesive stamp of the value of one penny, and that to present or use an unstamped Proxy Commission would render the brother doing so liable to the penalty of fifty pounds. To remove all possibility of doubt on this subject, however, a brother who is desirous not only always to obey the law of the land himself, but to secure to the utmost of his power safety on the part of his brethren, caused the following letter to be sent to the Chancellor of the Exchequer:—

[COPY.]

20th January, 1871.

Sir,—We shall be obliged if you will inform us whether section 102 of the Stamp Duties' Act of last year applies to votes by proxy at Masonic meetings? We have little doubt ourselves that it does, but have been requested by the Right Worshipful Master of one of the Lodges to write to you before acting on our own opinion.

We have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servants,
(Signed) SMILLIE & KEITH.

To this letter the following reply was received from the Secretary to the Board of Excise, to the chairman of which Mr. Lowe had sent it:—

[COPY.]

Somerset House, 26th January, 1871.

Gentlemen,—The Chancellor of the Exchequer having forwarded your letter of the 20th inst. to the Chairman of this Board, I am desired to acquaint you that the 102nd section of the Stamp Act, 1870, is applicable to Letters of Attorney for the purpose of appointing proxies to vote at a Masonic meeting.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,
(Signed) WALTER C. GRIFFITHS.
Messrs. Smillie and Keith.

The Act of Parliament 33 and 34 Victoria, chap. 97, "The Stamp Duties Act," was passed in 1870, and came into force at the 1st of January, 1871. It seems evident, indeed, from the Act 27 Vic., chap. 18, that Proxy Commissions to the Grand Lodge of Scotland ought to have borne a stamp in years that are past, as it requires every commission or other instrument to bear a stamp, which authorizes any person to vote as a proxy at a meeting of "the members of any society or institution." On this, however, it is not necessary to insist. The transgression of the law, if it was transgressed, was certainly not intentional, but took place through inadvertence. This can no longer be the case, as no brother, however learned he may pretend to be, can venture to dispute the import of the words above quoted, and it concerns the honour of the Masonic Institution that the law shall henceforth be obeyed.

It will be observed that the Act of 1870 expressly declares every vote given or tendered under the authority of a commission not duly stamped, to be absolutely null and void. It will be observed also that, according to the Act, a Proxy Commission can be used only at one meeting, or an adjournment of it, and must specify the date of the meeting at which it is to be used. Words cannot be plainer than the words of this Act on these points; and such being the law of the land, obligatory on every subject of our gracious Queen, whatever position he may occupy, it behoves Freemasons to comply with it, and the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Scotland must be regulated accordingly. There are many brethren who expect that this will be done, and any attempt to use an unstamped proxy commission, or one not specifying the date of the particular meeting at which the brother who has it presented is to take his place as a member of the Grand Lodge, will certainly be protested against. If, unhappily, the Grand Lodge should decide to receive such Proxy Commissions, very serious consequences may be expected to arise. Let us hope that, at next meeting of the Grand Lodge of Scotland the upholders of the law will prevail, and that all danger may thus be averted.

We cannot but regard with great satisfaction that clause of the Stamp Duties' Act of last year, which makes it necessary that every Proxy Commission shall specify the date of the meeting at which it is to be used, and makes it available for use at that meeting only, or at an adjournment of it. The Grand Lodge of Scotland will no longer reckon among its members brethren holding Proxy Commissions for a long period, and lodges throughout the country will probably be induced to take a greater interest in its proceedings, when the question of granting a new Proxy Commission comes frequently before them; so that they will really be better represented, for the holders of these commissions have hitherto rather acted for themselves than for the lodges on whose behalf they appeared in the Grand Lodge. The sentiments of Masons in general throughout the country will thus, it is to be hoped, be more fully expressed in the Grand Lodge than heretofore, and have greater influence in its proceedings. It would be still better that Proxy Commissions should be abolished altogether. The Grand Lodge of England does not receive them, and there is no good reason why the Grand Lodge of Scotland should do so.

"THE RELATION of St. JOHN THE EVANGELIST to FREEMASONRY."

(A REPLY AND FURTHER REVIEW.)

By Bro. SAMUEL EVANS, Boston, U.S.

Bro. Chalmers I. Paton, in THE FREEMASON of January 28, has furnished the first instalment of an "Answer" to my criticism, which appeared in that journal for December 10, of his paper on "The Relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry," which saw light in THE FREEMASON for October 29.

In reference to Bro. Paton's first paper I wrote: "I find myself unable to discover anything in the whole four columns that is new or true on the relationship of the Evangelist to Freemasonry." I will now add that throughout the entire length of the nearly two columns of such part of his "answer" as has yet reached me, there is not a single sentence, or even word, of light upon the relationship of the Evangelist to Freemasonry, unless it may be where Bro. Paton says: "But the question remains as to the existence of connection between any 'saint' and the Masonic Body during his life upon the earth; and if such connection could be shown to have existed, an important relation must be deemed still to exist." Here we have not only a hint of Bro. Paton's idea of "saint's patronage"—namely, of the perpetuation of an influence through the memories which other individuals may have of them—but we have also an "if," thus, "if such connection could be shown to have existed."

Now, in the original paper of Bro. Paton, he asserted that "such connection" did exist, and he asserted that it was "related by ancient and eminent Masonic authority," and so-forth. Why is this "if" now introduced? I had previously challenged Bro. Paton to name that "ancient" authority, that "eminent" authority, that "Masonic" authority. And it would also be required of him to prove, not only the antiquity (in the general sense, not the Masonic), but also the eminence and reliability of that authority, and of the reliability of the source or sources whence that authority obtained the information which he "related." What is wanted are the facts of the case—such facts, I must say, are extremely slow in coming. Bro. Paton has distinctly asserted that he has ancient and eminent authority which "related" thus and so. I deny that he has any such authority. If he has, let him out with it, and at once overwhelm me with shame at having presumed to doubt the simple assertion of Bro. Paton. Why not make short work of me in the way I suggest? But, perhaps, he would prefer to play with me, as the expert fisherman does with the trout, and then, when he himself is tired of playing, skilfully draw me to the landing and his net. Were he merely a member of the litterati, this might be supposed, but as he disclaimed "literary relationship," which I had innocently attached to him, but is simply an archaeologist, "etc., etc.," my wonder is great that he does not, more in accordance with the sober and severe rules of archaeology, treat the readers of THE FREEMASON to the simple facts. Those facts once adduced would settle all disputes concerning "the relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry." Let him remember, too, that time is short, and should therefore be treated as of some value. According to Bro. Paton, "there are many St. Johns in the Roman Calendar; no fewer than thirty are noticed." Now, if any other brother or brothers should be disposed to follow the example of Bro. Paton, by sending papers to THE FREEMASON to try to establish the relation of those thirty St. Johns to Freemasonry, it would have been well, and to the credit of Bro. Paton, to have set a better example than by romancing through six columns without making a single point, so far as I have been able to discover, tending to show that even one "saint" had any relationship whatever to Freemasonry during his life.

What is the nature of the "answers" which I receive to my demand for evidence, for "chapter and verse," to prove the existence of the relationship in dispute? It reminds me of the cuttle-fish, which has been provided by nature with a large ink-bag, or pouch containing an inky fluid, and of the trick which that curious creature has of ejecting forth this black stuff into the water at the slightest prospect of an attack from its enemies, and having thus discoloured the sea all around its whereabouts, it seeks safety from pursuit by dropping quietly to the bottom. It has also recalled the story of "Knickerbocker" concerning the sea fight whereinto fell a Dutch vessel of war and an English one, and wherein, the story says, the Dutch commander getting the worst of it, set himself and crew to smoking their tobacco pipes with such might and main, as that he was enabled to baffle the Englishman completely, and by the aid of the fog so raised make a drawn battle of that which would have otherwise resulted in his defeat. The first part of Bro. Paton's "answers" is all "ink" and "fog." He descends to verbal criticism. He objects to my calling my paper a "criticism,"—he himself "might have designated it a letter to the editor." Any one else but Bro. Paton, would have taken it to be a criticism, and even a damaging one, perhaps, if I had not called it one. And could not "a letter to the editor" be a criticism also? Bro. Paton may say no; but I do not think any body will join him in such nonsense. Are we discussing philology or archæology, about words or things?

I called the heading which he had given to his article a "caption." He says, "The word caption, however, is new to me in this sense." It is "new" to him. He should be thankful for that something "new." He may count on that as one of the bona fide gains of the discussion. "There is more in nature than is dreamt of in your philosophy;" but the word is not new in the sense in which I used it. It is in use, in the sense of a heading or title, in the United States, and has its place in our dictionaries with that meaning attached. Bro. Paton may (practically or not does not matter) have learned its "Scottish legal" significance; but Scotland is a very small country in comparison with this, and is very much given to "Scotticisms." Now in this country the English language is receiving a development under which it does not suffer near as much abuse as it does in the land o' cakes and of sans culottes. And when it is to be borne in mind that within the United States the English language is spoken by more people—more by millions—than speak it throughout England proper, and that education is much more generally diffused here, it would be modest at least to admit that the people of America have as much right to attach a meaning to a word as can be claimed for a Scotch lawyer, and that once in awhile an "Americanism" may be exported for English use as well as "Anglicisms" imported for American use.

Bro. Paton also alludes to my use of the plural in the use of the word "relationships" when that word had reference to a certain "Institute" and to two etc.'s, and suggests that "for the purpose of creating a little prejudice against me (him) at the outset of the 'criticism,' the singular—had it been warranted—would have served better." Now why he should suggest that I could better raise a little prejudice against him by violating grammar than by observing it is more than I can comprehend. He must have reference to circumstances connected with the "Institute" or his connection with it of which I am ignorant, and if I have raised any prejudice against him by referring to his membership in the "Archæological Institute," I regret it, and pray that nobody may inform me of the circumstance.

The whole purport of my reference to the "Institute" was of this kind. Had Bro. Paton produced a paper on a geological subject, and added to his name "Member of the Geological Society," he would have entitled me to claim a more scientific treatment of his subject, than if he had not made public his association with the "Geological Society." As it was, Bro. Paton publishes a paper on "The Relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry,"—a very fitting subject of Archæological enquiry, considering that so very much has been said, and nothing proved concerning that relationship, and Bro. Paton appended his name, and as he undoubtedly had a right to, added that he was a "Member of the Masonic Archæological Institute of England, etc., etc." Now, here we have a brother who claims to make Masonic antiquities a special and regular study, who has undertaken to tell us something concerning a matter of Masonic antiquity, concerning the relation of the Evangelist to the Masonic Institution. From such a brother we may look for some new light upon the subject. Have we got it? We had a chapter or more of extracts from the New Testament, which has not one word to say about Freemasonry—and an assertion that certain, as yet, nameless authority related something about the Evangelist and so forth; a re-hash of a well-worn fable and fraud, and not one word such as a professed archæologist should have written on such a subject. Does Bro. Paton see the point now?

MASONIC ODE.

BY T. F. MARVIN, DANVILLE, KY.

The Brotherhood that widest claims
Our warmest sympathies to move,
Is that whose ancient structure frames
In Truth, and Harmony, and Love;
How great and good its vast designs,
Its solemn grandeur fills the earth,
The mystic love that gems its mines,
To only Masonry has birth.

The Architect that built the skies
Has willed and stamp'd it all divine,
And where its glorious temples rise
The laws of order noblest shine;
The orphan's and the widow's tears
Have known its softest, kindest care,
And round the sick bed of long years
Untir'd its watchful ling'ring are.

Its tents from earliest history trac'd,
And solemn tabernacles stood;
Yet was its hand ne'er crimsoned with
A known, or signal'd Brother's blood;
Its circle is the radius where Truth's lovely banners are unfurl'd,
Its rainbow hues are sorrow's tear,
And plummet plumbs the balanced world.

Its pillars hieroglyphic'd o'er—
Where mysteries deep hidden lie,
Where quarried from immortal love
Beneath the broad, all-searching eye;
The cloud that guides the pilgrim on
Is silver lin'd and fring'd with gold;
And pearl'd the staff he leans upon
As unknown mysteries unfold.

Its laws were known on Sinai,
And where the waters kiss'd the rod,
Its compass, square, and rule fram'd by
The wise, unerring hand of God;
And when the Craft are called to work,
Through yon grand arch that bends above,
Be Truth the password all may breathe
Within the list'ning ear of Love.

Freemasonry is the light that shines in the dark places, the light that brings peace and joy to the disconsolate, the light that shines into the heart of the widow and the fatherless.

METROPOLITAN.

Lodge of Prosperity, No. 65.—This ancient lodge held its installation meeting on Thursday, the 23rd ult., at the Guildhall Coffee House, Gresham-street. Bro. G. F. Cook, W.M., opened the lodge and there were present during the evening: Bros. D. Forbes, S.W. and W.M.-elect; E. C. Mather, J.W.; J. Bellerby, P.M., Sec.; J. Stevens, S.D.; T. Davy, J.D.; J. Carruthers, I.G.; E. Cornwall, P.M.; E. Arnold, P.M.; J. Goodyer, P.M., and a large number of members. Amongst the large number of visitors present were: Bros. J. Emmens, P.G.P.; E. Harris, P.M. and Treas. 73; F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; J. Terry, P.M. 228; G. Bilby, P.M. 861; C. W. Ashdown, J.W. 1076; S. Watkins, P.M. 212; J. McCubbin, W.M. 948; J. L. Fysh, 107; H. Lawler, 286; J. Bradbury, 781; W. H. Nain, P.M. 813; G. Sinclair, D.C. 813; J. Hart, P.M. 813; J. Bowron, P.M. 933; W. H. Spratt, 813; J. Forbes; W. Haines, J.W. 917; J. Canter, W.M. 1000; J. Salisbury, S.W. 813, and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The W.M., in perfect style, raised Bro. Browne, and installed the W.M.-elect, Bro. Forbes, as W.M. for the ensuing year. The customary salutes having been given, Bro. Forbes, W.M., appointed and invested as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. G. F. Cook, I.P.M.; E. C. Mather, S.W.; J. Stevens, J.W.; J. Bellerby, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); T. Davy, S.D.; J. Carruthers, J.D.; L. A. Liens, I.G.; C. T. Speight, P.M., Tyler (re-invested), and whose re-appointment, as usual, gave universal satisfaction, as by his gentlemanly conduct and polite attention he has made himself popular and respected by all who meet and know him. The newly-installed W.M. soon proved his proficiency by the excellent manner in which he initiated a gentleman into the Order. He then had the pleasure and gratification of presenting, in the name of the lodge, a handsome gold Past Master's and Secretary's jewel to Bro. John Bellerby, P.M. and Secretary, in recognition for his faithful services rendered to the lodge for several years past as Honorary Secretary, which had been voted to him from the lodge funds. This testimonial was duly acknowledged by the recipient, who has won the respect of all by his kind courteous manner in which he discharges the onerous duties of Secretary to so large and influential lodge as what the Prosperity really is. Over eighty brethren sat down to a first-class banquet, admirably served à la Russe which well sustained the high reputation of the caterer. The regular loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to. The toast of "Immediate Past Master" was given and most enthusiastically received, and W.M. expressed the feelings of pleasure he sincerely felt in placing on Bro. G. F. Cook's breast the Past Master's jewel which had been unanimously voted to him from the lodge funds, and in addition gave him a magnificent diamond ring, purchased by private subscriptions amongst the members. Bro. Cook, in a neat and appropriate speech, acknowledged these gifts.

Panmure Lodge, No. 720.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham. Present: Bros. J. B. A. Wolpert, W.M. (in the chair); J. Thomas, P.M., Treas.; H. F. Huntley, J.W.; W. P. Moore, Sec.; H. Payne, J. Poore, G. Lilley, R. W. Huntley, &c. The lodge was opened in due form and with solemn prayer, and the Secretary having read the minutes they were confirmed. This being the annual meeting for election of officers, a ballot was taken for the election of W.M., and it proved unanimous in favour of Bro. J. M. Young, S.W. A ballot was then taken for the Treasurer-ship, which was also unanimous for Bro. Thomas; but Bro. Thomas wishing to be relieved of the office, Bro. Pulman was elected as Treasurer. The election of a Tyler next came forward, and Bro. Bradley was again chosen. It was then proposed by Bro. Moore, Sec., and seconded by Bro. H. F. Huntley, J.W., that an address be engrossed on vellum and presented to Bro. Wolpert, expressive of the estimation of the lodge for the manner in which he had conducted the working of the business and ritual during the current year, which was carried unanimously. It was afterwards proposed by Bro. Thomas, P.M. and Treas., and seconded by Bro. H. F. Hodges, that a Past Master's jewel, of the value of five guineas, be voted to Bro. Wolpert, W.M., which was carried. The Committee for auditing the past year's accounts was then appointed, viz.: Bros. C. Pulman and C. E. Caines, in addition to those members entitled to be on the Committee ex-officio. The lodge was then closed in harmony and with prayer, and adjourned until the third Monday in May, emergencies excepted.

Royal Standard Lodge, No. 1298.—The regular meeting of this very flourishing lodge was held at the Marquess Tavern, Canonbury, N., on the 4th inst., under the presidency of that excellent working Mason, Bro. R. Lee, P.M. 193, the W.M. Owing to the unavoidable absence of our worthy brother, John F. Wilson, the S.W., his chair was ably filled by Bro. H. Ballantyne, P.M. 754; Bros. W. J. Woodman, J.W.; R. Shackell, W.M. 30, Hon. Sec.; H. Dudden, S.D.; E. G. Modridge, J.D.; P. Rafter, Org.; and M. Sweetland, I.G. Among the brethren present we observed Bros. C. Woodman, W. H. Cohen, G. W. Rutherford, S. T. Cleaver, H. W. Catlin, W. Jameson, &c.; and among the visitors were Bros. R. Buller, P.M. of the Albion Lodge, No. 9, and E. Hart, of the St. James's Union Lodge, No. 145. Bro. Lee, the W.M., in his usual able manner, passed Bros. Cohen and Cleaver to the second degree, and initiated Mr. Daniel James Woodman into the mysteries of the Order. After a little routine business, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned for a slight refreshment separating at an early hour, every one expressing themselves very much pleased with the manner in which the business of the lodge is carried on.

PROVINCIAL.

STONEHOUSE.—Lodge Sincerity, No. 189.—A meeting was held in the lodge-room at St. George's Hall, on Monday evening, when a joining member was elected, and two brethren passed to the degree of F.C. It was agreed that the sum of ten guineas, which had been voted by the lodge as a subscription to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, should be given to the W.M., Capt. Shanks, R.M., who is going to act as one of the Stewards of the Girls' School. A letter was read from the P.G.M. of Devon, the Rev. John Hynshe, who made an appeal on behalf of the Girls' School Fund. This appeal has no doubt been sent to all the lodges in the province, and will probably meet with that liberal response which has generally attended the charitable efforts of the excellent Grand Master of Devon.—Western Daily Mercury.

JERSEY.—Yarborough Lodge, No. 244.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 3rd April, at the Masonic Temple, Stopford-road. Wor. Bro. Staff-Sergeant Michael Tracey, Royal Artillery, W.M. and Prov. G. Sec., in the chair. The business of the evening was to confer the third degree on Bro. Colour-Sergeant Trollope, 13th Regiment, and to initiate Sergeant Cooper and Corporal Nixon, 12th Brigade, Royal Artillery. At the conclusion of the ceremony of initiation, the W.M. briefly alluded to the lamented death of Wor. Bro. C. H. Mann, one of the Senior Past Masters of the lodge, and which was the cause of the lodge-room being draped in deep mourning, as a mark of respect to the memory of an upright man and a Mason. The W.M. called upon Bro. the Rev. C. G. Williams, Prov. Grand Chaplain, to address the brethren present on the death of their late respected brother. The following is an outline of the rev. brother's address:—Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not, charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity; but rejoiceth in the truth, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth. Masonry is charity; and if Masonry is faithful and fearless, let us have all the world against us and the Great Architect of the Universe for us, rather than all the world for us and the Great Architect of the Universe against us. In Masonry, what a history is to be read; we are more or less our brother's keeper, and the good we would do must be done now, as far as our fellow-creature is concerned, because national life has no hereafter, but is essentially a thing of the present world—no need of national life in the world to come. National life can have no existence beyond the grave, by the crystal sea, amongst the choir of angels. The Divine command to each is, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might;" and this is a Christian duty—this exercise of charity, which we owe to all people, even to those with whom we have nothing in common except the community of form, community of redemption, community of nature. Look at the several degrees of Freemasonry, and what they teach. Masonry is universal, and as each brother clasps hand to hand, be it of whatsoever nationality, he learns to form that tie which knits each heart to each other, and all hearts to the Great Architect of the Universe. We have to lament the death of a brother, personally known to me, and from whom I have received many a little act of kindness. The name, the character, the face of Bro. Chas. H. Mann, one of your oldest Past Masters of the Yarborough Lodge, cannot but be familiar to nearly all here to-night, and his departure from the "lodge of time" to that of the Great Architect of the Universe should lead you to contemplate your inevitable destiny, and guide your reflections to that most interesting of all human studies—

"The knowledge of thyself."

Our hope is of our deceased brother that hereafter he may rise from the tomb of transgression to "shine as the stars for ever and ever." So mote it be. In the ages of old, thousands of years ago, angels visited the earth, and if it be permitted to spirits to still visit us (though unseen to mortal eye), it may be that our brother is with us even now in spirit. True we cannot trace his footsteps, cannot hear his voice or realize his presence, yet by the memory of the past, "he being dead," as a worthy member of our Fraternity, "yet speaketh." Could we gaze upon that form cold in death, could we close the weary eyes and fold the hands meekly on the still breast, part the damp locks, from the forehead that has no more pain to bear, and place within the coffin's lid "one sprig of Acacia," we would as brethren do it, and bury him as a brother; but this is not our lot, he having died in England. Be it ours to exemplify what pure religion is in God's word declared to be, "Visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction." Man must have been a very important being in the estimation of the Great Architect of the Universe, or he would not have built this beautiful and stupendous lodge for his habitation. It was to light the soul of man on its way to the Celestial Lodge that the sun, moon, and stars were hung out of heaven. It is for the life and growth of the soul that the valleys spread out their bosoms, that the mountains lift up their heads towards the heavens, that ocean with its million waves bathes the shore, that serpent, fish, and birds were formed, and the "cattle upon a thousand hills." Masonry, from the first question to her children, "In whom in difficulty do you put your trust?" gives also the answer, "In God." When the world asks—What is Masonry? we answer: That which is founded upon true principles of justice, morality, and virtue. We render honour to whom honour is due; we pay custom to whom custom is due; tribute to whom tribute; we render to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; to God the things which are His,

Masonry is love Charity is love; and the Great Architect of the Universe is love; and by-and-bye we shall in the due course of nature join our departed brother, and—

"As we have shared our earthly sorrows,
Each with the other here,
We shall share our Heavenly gladness
Each with the other there."

In this world one human being cannot be merged into another. Man must accept the separate personality that belongs to his nature; but the isolation of every man from his fellow in the hour of extremity may become the means of pressing the sufferer nearer another companion who is able even then to remain. "There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." May our departed brother have realised this, as he passed through the valley of the shadow of death, and may his somewhat sudden departure remind us of the nearness of eternity. Whatever good Bro. Mann has done for our Order will, as his memory must be, never forgotten. Meanwhile let us remember the words of the poet:—

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

So mote it be.—The lodge was closed at the conclusion of the rev. brother's address in due form, and with solemn prayer.—Jersey Express.

BATLEY.—Nelson of the Nile Lodge, No. 264.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 3rd inst., in the Freemasons' Hall, Park-road; Bro. Benjamin P. Parker, W.M., in the chair, assisted by his officers as follows: Bros. J. A. Parr, S.W.; W. H. L. Newsome, J.W.; Wm. Parker, S.D.; J. L. Heaton, J.D.; Benjamin Preston, I.G.; R. Brearey, Sec.; A. Talbot, Treas.; James Preston, D.C.; J. H. Senior, I.P.M. The lodge being opened in the first degree, the minutes of the last regular lodge meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot took place for Messrs. Dixon Hall, William Cave, and James Watson, which proved unanimous in each case; after which, the lodge was opened in the second and third degrees, and Bros. John Sheard, James Parker, and John W. Blackburn were severally raised to the sublime degree of M.M. by the W.M. and the I.P.M., Bro. Joshua Blakeley, P.M., giving the historical part in his usual and impressive style. The lodge was closed down to the first degree, and the formal business was gone through. The following resolution was passed, viz.:—"That we give £10 to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons' and their Widows," after which the lodge was closed in peace and harmony.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge No. 279.—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, the 31st ult., the W.M., Bro. Stretton, in the chair. There were also present: Bros. Wear, P.M. and Treas.; Crow, S.W.; Widdowson, Sec.; Palmer, S.D.; Smith, J.D.; Halford, I.G.; Shuttlewood, Blankley, Beeton, Gurden, Wilkinson, Edwards, Elwood, and C. Bembridge, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. Toller, P.M.; Partridge, S.D.; Sculthorpe, S.W.; Atkins, Rev. W. T. Fry, Mace, Barfoot, and Thorp, of No. 523. The business was to initiate three candidates, viz: Mr. Walton Wilkinson, Mr. John Elwood, and Mr. Robert Edwards, all of Leicester, and they being in attendance were initiated into our mysteries, the ceremony being performed by Bro. Toller, P.G. Sec., in his usual highly efficient manner. On the conclusion of the business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

BERWICK-ON-TWEED.—Lodge St. David, No. 593.—The members of this lodge met on the evening of Tuesday, the 4th inst., within their own Hall, King's Head Assembly Rooms, Church-street, Berwick-on-Tweed. It was their regular monthly meeting. Bro. George Moor, Worshipful Master, occupied the chair, the Wardens' chairs being filled by Bros. C. I. Paton, S.W. and C. Hopper, J.W. The lodge was opened in due form, and previous minutes were read and confirmed, a report coming up from the Work and Finance Committee to the effect "that all spare funds should be laid aside for the erection of a new and more suitable hall for lodge purposes." After some explanations from Bro. Fair, P.M., the members unanimously agreed to the proposition, and appointed a large committee to carry it out. The next business on the programme was the "approval of a new code of by-laws," and, after having been read over by the Secretary, with some slight alterations, were approved, and ordered to be printed, copies to be sent to the Provincial Grand Lodge for approval, and on acknowledgment of approval, to be engrossed in the minutes, and a copy sent to all members of the lodges. The next business was the settling of the "purchase of a portrait of one of the Past Masters." After some discussion, it was agreed to purchase it out of the funds of the lodge, and to become lodge property. The Senior Warden then craved liberty to bring forward his motion to the effect that "the Provincial Grand Master be thanked for his noble conduct," and that a Committee be appointed to draw up a letter and send it to him; this was agreed to by the whole of the members of the lodge present. The next business was the "advancement to the third degree of a brother who had served sufficient time in the inferior degrees." The lodge was then raised to the third degree, and the ceremonial was conducted by Bro. Moor, Worshipful Master, in a perfect manner. The lodge was then reduced to the first degree, when some letters and other business were taken up, but was agreed to be left over till next monthly meeting to make some necessary enquiries. No other business being before the lodge, it was then closed till next regular meeting.

SOUTHPORT.—Lodge of Unity, No. 613.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on the 3rd instant, when there were about thirty brethren present. Bro. William Dodd, W.M., occupied the chair—all the other officers also were at their posts. Bros. J. B. Culshaw, C. Gialoussy, and J. Butcher having passed the usual examination, were raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The following brethren were passed to the degree of F.C., after having given proof of their proficiency as E.A.'s: J. Sutton, T. Crook, J. Ellis, A. B. Sloan, and J. Hirst. The business of the evening being ended, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to supper.

ABERYSTWITH.—Aberystwith Lodge, No. 1072.—The monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Monday, the 3rd inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Belle Vue Royal Hotel, Aberystwith. There were present: Bros. C. Rice Williams, M.D., W.M.; E. L. Cole, I.P.M.; G. T. Smith, P.M., Provincial Grand Secretary; Major J. Allen Lloyd-Philipps, Prov. Grand S.W.; J. W. Szlumper, C.E., Prov. G. Supt. W., S.W.; W. Williams, F.R.C.S., J.W.; J. Vaughan, P.P.G. Supt. W., Treas.; E. Hamer, Sec.; R. J. Jones, S.D.; J. P. Jones, J.D.; Inglis Bervon, Org.; George Careswell, D.C.; Dr. Morris Jones, I.G., and about a dozen other brethren. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. proceeded to initiate William Oliver Williams, Esq., into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. Mr. Williams, who is a painter of reputation and skill, known in the artist world as Mr. Oliver, is a brother of the W.M., and son of the J.W. of the lodge, which fact added additional interest to the occasion. It was the first time the W.M. had worked a ceremony, except for practice in instruction lodge, and he went through the whole, as well as the full explanation of the tracing board, without a single slip or halt in a very admirable and able manner. The work of the Wardens and Deacons was also very correctly and ably performed. After the ceremony another gentleman was proposed for initiation in May, and the lodge having been duly closed, the brethren adjourned to partake of an excellent supper, provided by Bro. Pell, the worthy host of the Belle Vue Royal Hotel, whose liberality as a caterer is above praise. After the usual toasts had been given, Bro. G. T. Smith, P.M., Prov. G. Sec., proposed the health of the W.M., and congratulated the lodge in being presided over by such a zealous Mason, and said that after what they had seen that evening he might well be proud of his pupil.—The W.M. having responded in a very happy style, proposed the Provincial Grand Lodge for the Western Division of South Wales, and coupled with it the name of Bro. Major J. A. Lloyd-Philipps, P.M., the present Prov. Senior Grand Warden.—Bro. Major Lloyd-Philipps returned thanks, and expressed the great pleasure it afforded him to attend the meetings of the lodge at all times, and regretted that he resided so far from the town and therefore could not be present on every occasion. He said he would propose a toast in a few words—every one there knew who he meant—the "coach" of 1072.—The toast was most cordially received, and Bro. Smith in returning thanks, said he would try to imitate his brother P.M. (Major Lloyd-Philipps) in brevity. He had before expressed his gratification at the admirable manner the ceremony had that evening been performed, and if they continued to progress so well, his duties as "coach" would soon be over. He thanked the brethren for the kindness, confidence and support he had received during the three years he had had the honour to preside over them, and although he was now becoming a veteran on the retired list, he hoped he might yet be of service to them in filling an occasional gap in the ranks.—Several other toasts were proposed, and some good songs given, those by Bros. Bervon, Organist, and W. Williams, J.W., being particularly effective. The party broke up at eleven o'clock, after spending a very pleasant evening.

IVYBRIDGE.—Ernie Lodge, No. 1091.—On the 30th ult., the members of this lodge assembled at the King's Arms Hotel, Ivybridge, for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master-elect, Bro. W. H. Ley, into the chair of King Solomon. Bro. J. Harris, W.M., P.G.R., opened the lodge in the first degree, and after the minutes had been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the second degree. Bro. W. H. Ley, as W.M.-elect was then introduced to Bro. Gover, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C. (Installing Master), by Bros. J. W. Hawton, P.M., P.P.G.T., and J. Watts, P.M., P.P.G.T., for installation. The ancient rites having been read, Bro. Ley was duly installed W.M., in a most impressive manner, by Bro. Gover, assisted by Bros. W. Littleton, P.M.; Hambley, P.M., P.P.G.T.; Harvey, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; Nicholls, P.M., P.P.G.T.; Price, P.M.; &c. The brethren having saluted in the three degrees, Bro. Ley was proclaimed the W.M., and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. J. Harris, P.G.R., I.P.M.; M. Patison, S.W.; J. Foot, J.W.; J. W. Hawton, P.M., Treas.; H. Cole, Sec.; J. Hambley, S.D.; W. Boxall, J.D.; Bunker, I.G.; Weatherel, D.C.; Boon, Org.; Baker and Conway, Stewards; Ford, Tyler. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a very excellent banquet, provided by Bro. J. Toms, and presided over by the W.M., Bro. W. H. Ley.—After the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proposed the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," and in doing so said: The first half of my toast needs little remark from me to commend it to the sympathies of the brethren of this lodge; the second half needs none. The Queen may be said to dwell in the hearts and affections of her people, whose countless numbers extend far beyond the confines of this gem of the ocean—our island home. She has made the palace the pattern of all the domestic virtues, and I hope she may long live to reign over a loyal and devoted people. The second half needs only to be named to conjure up the heartfelt response which is of the very essence of nobleness and brotherly love, and therefore of Freemasonry. Freemasonry aims at the elimination of that which is base in human nature, from that which is noble. It knits together brother man to brother, upon the common basis of reciprocity of feeling, and mutuality of confidence and love. It strives to establish and to inculcate those high moral principles of integrity and uprightness, the decline of which would inevitably ring out the death-knell of our glory as a nation. Our noble Craft seems to me to be the beacon light, pointing the way to yet higher aims and aspirations, raising the thought to scenes above that of sense and of time. We should then see to it, that our profession be not mere idle words, but that our walk and conversation—our relation with our fellow-man—our loyalty to our Queen and devotion to our country—our life of purity and holiness—are conformed to our principles, and shed abroad the light of the faith that should be in us.—The W.M., in proposing "The healths of the M.W., the Earl de Grey and Ripon, G.M., and the Prince of Wales, P.G.M.," said: The high and honourable offices in our noble Craft, held by the noblemen who fill them, afford a certain guarantee that they are men endowed with certain pre-eminent merit. The pinnacle of our imposing structure is occupied by the Earl de Grey and Ripon, who, I believe, worthily discharges the duties of his high office; next to him comes the future King of England. Amongst the great roll of names, forming our honourable body, may be found that of Kings and Emperors; but speaking as an Englishman, I think we, of this country at least, have reason to congratulate ourselves on the accession of the heir-apparent to our ancient Craft. Freemasonry levels all social distinctions; it breathes that fraternal spirit which makes the peer and peasant kin. Will this not help royalty itself to descend from a pinnacle of isolation imposed on it by the trammels of an obsolete tradition, and by the presumed requirements of a certain icy decorum? I trust the Prince may be constrained so to act as to succeed his mother, our beloved Queen, not alone upon the throne, but also to occupy and retain her place in the affections of the people, and thus may his reign shed a lustrous splendour around the British throne. I may observe that I have had the honour of sitting in the Grand Lodge with the Grand Master, Earl de Grey and Ripon, and also the Past G.M., the Prince of Wales, with whom I was particularly struck. A kindly disposition, simplicity of demeanour and condescension, appears to me to be the prominent features of his character.—The I.P.M., Bro. Harris, in proposing "The health of the W.M.," spoke of him in very flattering terms, and said the lodge had elected a most worthy and straightforward brother to fill the chair.—Bro. Ley, in responding, said it would be difficult to find words suitable to the occasion to convey to the brethren an expression of the depth of his gratitude for the generous response which had been accorded to the toast of his health. He had looked forward to this great honour with a feeling of pride, and it afforded him much pleasure to receive such a cordial welcome. It would be his earnest endeavour so to discharge the duties of his high office as to merit a continuance of the confidence of which he had that evening received so tangible an expression.—"The health of the I.P.M., Bro. Harris," was then proposed by Bro. Hawton, who paid him a high compliment for the able manner in which he had discharged the duties of W.M. for two years, at the same time presenting him with a solid gold P.M.'s jewel (manufactured by Bro. George Kenning), subscribed for by the members of the lodge, for his efficient services during his two years' Mastership.—Bro. Harris, in very feeling terms, thanked the brethren for the flattering manner in which they had drunk his health, and also for the beautiful jewel which they had been pleased to present him with.—The healths of the visiting brethren, office-bearers, &c., having been drunk, the meeting separated, having spent a most pleasant evening.

MARKET HARBOUROUGH.—St. Peter's Lodge, No. 1330.—A regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Assembly Rooms, Three Swans Hotel, on Friday, the 31st ult., under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. W. Kelly, P.G.M. The other officers and brethren present were Sir Henry St. John Halford, Bart., S.W.; Rev. John F. Halford, J.W.; R. Waite, P.M., Treas.; W. H. Marris, P.M., Sec.; F. Kemp, S.D.; Thomas Macaulay, M.R.C.S., I.G.; Freestone, Steward; Clark, Tyler; Dr. Grant, Fuller, Harrison, Martin, Lawrence, Rev. F. M. Beaumont, Platford, Gibbs, and Healey. Bro. Gibbs having been duly examined in the first degree, was passed a Fellow Craft, after which Bros. Rev. F. M. Beaumont and Healey, having also passed a highly satisfactory examination in the second degree, were severally raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The W.M. reported to the lodge an offer made by Bro. Charles Johnson, P.M., of Leicester, to present to the lodge photographic likenesses of the members, which was accepted with thanks. The lodge was then closed and refreshment succeeded labour.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Hotel on Thursday, 6th inst. The W.M., Bro. E. Carnegie, P.M., P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works Essex, occupied the chair of K.S., and was supported by Bros. Fenn, S.W.; Captain Richardson, R.E., as J.W.; M'Kenzie, as S.D.; Bennett, as J.D.; and Laverty, as I.G. There were about thirty brethren present, including two visitors from the Panmure Lodge. The lodge was opened in the first degree in due form and with solemn prayer. The minutes of the last regular meeting, and the emergency meeting held on the 23rd of March, were separately read and confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Bros. Irvin, 4th Regiment, and Larkin, 101st Regiment, as joining members, which proved unanimous in each case. A ballot was also taken for Sergt. Gardyne, R.E., and Colour-Sergt. Griffiths, 4th Regiment, as candidates for initiation, which was unanimous in their favour. They were then initiated by the W.M. according to ancient custom, the J.W., Bro. Capt. Richardson, presenting and explaining the working tools. The questions appertaining to the first degree were put by the W.M., and answered by the brethren for the information of the newly initiated. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when Bros. Shillington and Beach were presented for advancement, and having proved themselves worthy, were entrusted, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and Bros. Shillington and Beach were raised to the sublime degree by the W.M., the working tools being explained by Bro. Fenn, S.W. The lodge was then closed down to the second and first degrees. The W.M. announced that a lodge of instruction would be held on the 27th inst. A brother having been proposed as a joining member, and Sergt. A. Swann, 107th Regt., as a candidate for initiation, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren sat down to an excellent supper, and a very pleasant evening was spent, Bros. White and Peers contributing materially by their excellent singing. A collection having been made for the Charity Fund, the brethren separated in peace, love, and harmony.

ROYAL ARCH.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Chapter, No. 1094.—The members of this chapter held their regular meeting at the Masonic Temple, 22, Hope-street, on Tuesday, 28th March. The officers, &c., present were Comps. James Hamer, Z., P.Z., P.G. Treas., West Lancashire; Robinson, H.; Pemberton, J.; P. Macmildrow, Scribe E.; Winstanley, Scribe N.; Dawson, P. Soj.; Dr. Speer, Treas.; Dr. J. K. Smith, P.Z.; Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.Z.; J. Wood, &c., &c. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, the ballot-box went round for Bros. Thomas Tibson, jun., Lodge No. 1094, and James Hope, Lodge No. 1013, who were declared duly elected, and then introduced for the ceremony of exaltation, which was ably performed. Three candidates were proposed for the next meeting, and the progress of this young chapter is being marked in a most satisfactory manner. A letter of condolence written to the widow of the late Comp. Dilworth was read, and a supplement in the shape of three guineas was voted for the benefit of the family. This being all the business, the chapter was closed in due form, and the companions sat down to a substantial plain supper, after which the usual Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to. Comp. Thomas Ashmore, Z. 823, P.G.P. Soj. West Lancashire, responded for the other visitors, who were Comps. Dr. Kidley (477), Thomas H. Ashmore (823), and Cotterell (823). Several companions sang excellently during the evening. The next meeting of this chapter will be held on the 23rd (4th Tuesday) of May.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Northumberland Lodge, No. 118.—The quarterly regular meeting of this young Mark lodge was held at Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C., on Thursday, 23rd March. Present: Bros. Morton Edwards, W.M.; Harris, W. Koch, E. H. Thiellay, H. W. Binckes, A. D. Loewenstark, J.T.G.; and M. A. Loewenstark, Past Grand Steward, Woodstock, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O.; F. Walters, P.G.T.G.; C. Lacey, J. S. Bulmer, and W. Lowder. The lodge was opened in due form, and Bro. T. Vervey being in attendance was admitted and advanced to the honourable degree of a Mark Master Mason by Bro. A. D. Loewenstark. The minutes of two emergencies and the last regular meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to banquet.

PROVINCIAL.

IVYBRIDGE.—Hawton Lodge, No. 100.—The members of this lodge assembled on the 30th ultimo, for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect, V.W. Bro. J. Harris, P.P.G.T., as W.M. for the ensuing year. The installation ceremony was very ably and impressively performed by V.W. Bro. Gover, P.M., P.P.G.O., assisted by V.W. Bros. Watts, P.M.; Harvey, P.M.; Hawton, P.M.; Nicholls, P.M.; Price, P.M.; Littleton, P.M.; &c. Bro. Harris, after being duly proclaimed W.M., appointed and invested the following officers: V.W. Bro. W. H. Ley, P.P.G.O., S.W.; Bro. W. Boxall, J.W.; Bro. J. Toms, Treas.; V.W. Bro. Hawton, P.P.G.T., Treas.; and Bro. Whittell, M.O.

ROYAL ARK MASONRY.

Royal Clarence Lodge, No. 1.—The third regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C., on Thursday, 23rd March. Present: Bros. A. Harris, Inspector-General, Commander; A. Lacey, G.G., S.W.; A. D. Loewenstark, Inspector-General; M. A. Loewenstark, G.S.; F. Walters (St. Mark's), H. W. Binckes (Royal Sussex), E. H. Thiellay (Prince of Wales, No. 2), T. S. Bulmer (Dove, No. 4), and F. W. Koch (Prince of Wales, No. 2). The lodge was opened in due form by the Commander, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O., being in attendance, was properly prepared and duly elevated to the degree of a Royal Ark Mariner by the Grand Commander, Bro. Morton Edwards. The warrant for this lodge was then delivered to the Commander by the Grand Scribe. An Assembly of Commanders was then duly formed, and Bro. T. Meggy and W. Lowder had the rank of Commander conferred on them. The lodge was then closed according to ancient custom, and adjourned to June next. The lodge was in mourning owing to the decease of one of its members, Bro. T. Dorrington, Past Grand Commander, 33, P.Z., P.M., Past Grand Mark Master, &c., who was a very active member of most of the ancient orders in Masonry, and indeed had attained the highest honours in them. Bro. Dorrington was one of the guardians of the Emperor Napoleon at St. Helena, and had enjoyed for many years a pension from the Government for long, faithful, and meritorious services. He was, as will be known to many of our readers, a most ardent Mason, and able before he died to see the Royal Ark Mariners' Degree restored to regular working, which, as he expressed himself, enabled him to die happy, for it had been the dream of his life to endeavour to thoroughly revive the degree; but until quite lately, and until some zealous Masons had assisted him, he had been unable to do more than keep it alive by meetings from time to time. The Mark Degree has been also indebted some years back to Bro. Dorrington for the same assistance.

K. H. S.

Mount of Olives Sanctuary.—A meeting of the members of this sanctuary, now attached to the Rose and Lily Conclave Red Cross, No. 3, was held at Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, on Saturday, the 25th ult. The sanctuary having been opened, Bro. Knight C. H. Rogers-Harrison, P.P.-designate, was enthroned by Bro. Knight Morton Edwards, assisted by Bro. Knight T. W. Barrett. The newly-throned P.P. then inquired whether any candidates for reception were in attendance, and the reply being in the affirmative, Sir Knights H. M. Green (Conclave No. 35), T. S. Bulwer (Conclave No. 6), E. H. Thiellay (Conclave No. 2), and J. B. Payne (Premier Conclave) were duly admitted and received into the Order of K.H.S., and expressed themselves very gratified with the ceremonial. The P.P. having appointed some of his officers for the year, it was proposed that as the meeting convened at Freemasons' Tavern on the 3rd May, 1870, to organize commanderies and sanctuaries decided that the members of the Order be divided equally into three sanctuaries, and a meeting of the Executive afterwards allotted the following members to this sanctuary, viz., Bro. Knights T. W. Barrett, T. W. Boord, T. Brett, C. Burmeister, Morton Edwards, C. H. Rogers-Harrison, R. Ord, W. W. Smith, D. R. Still, T. Terry W. Tweedy, with the following officers of the Council, viz., as honorary members, Bro. Knights W. H. Hubbard, W. J. Hughan, J. G. Marsh, Capt. J. W. C. Whitbread, and A. A. Pendlebury; that they be considered as founders. That the regular meetings of the sanctuary be twice in the year, on the same evening as the Rose and Lily Conclave, to which it is now attached. That the subscription be one guinea, and the reception fee be two guineas, for the present. That the number, in accordance with the regulation in the statutes, be strictly limited to 33; and that a committee from both sanctuary and conclave arrange details so as to work harmoniously with the conclave. Knights of the Red Cross are informed that those wishing to take this degree are requested to address the Registrar, Bro. Morton Edwards, as above.

ANCIENT AND PRIMITIVE RITE.

Beetive Sanctuary.—A large and influential meeting of the members of this sanctuary was held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, W.C., on Wednesday, the 6th instant. The whole of the ceremonial of the 33rd was worked, excepting the oration on the building of the Tabernacle in the wilderness and the mystical explanation of the seven lights. Five candidates were received, and instructed in the symbolism of the Rite, after which a committee of twelve brethren, comprising members of the 33rd, 66th, 77th and 90th, was appointed to take the future organization of the Order into consideration for report at a future meeting. The brethren then separated.

A FREEMASONRY for TEETOTALLERS.

Lately a meeting of temperance reformers was held in the Temperance Hall, Grosvenor-street, Manchester, under the presidency of Mr. Robert Whitworth, for the purpose of taking steps to organise a Grand Lodge of Teetotallers in England. Mr. Rodgers, of Dumfries, attended as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the members of which are enrolled under the title of "The Free Templars of St. John." The object of the movement is to form a fraternity of teetotallers somewhat akin to the principles of many other existing societies, with the important difference, however, in the case of the teetotallers, of enrolling and initiating women as members of the craft. The lodge is to consist of fifteen officers, the chief of which will have the title of the Worthy Master. The door of the lodge is to be guarded by an outer and an inner sentinel, so as to protect the society from intruders, or those who have not been properly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft, and are unable to give the current password. Every candidate for initiation will be required to enter into an obligation not to divulge to the outer world the ceremonies of the order; but Mr. Rodgers assured the audience that there were no secrets to disclose, and that the ceremony was of an edifying and instructive character. The object of the order was, he explained, to improve upon the old mode of taking the pledge, and to make the temperance movement more attractive than it had been. A resolution was passed approving of the project as explained by Mr. Rodgers, and it was stated that between seventy and eighty teetotallers in Manchester had expressed their readiness to become candidates for initiation.

RESURRECTION of the DEAD.

THE relationship of life and death is a subject which has ever engaged the most profound researches of the human mind, although the fathomless abysses of being present a problem at once so solemn and incomprehensible that the limited faculties of man might well be excused from seeking its possible solution; yet, from the earliest ages of the world's history, by an impulse which must surely be Divine, successive generations have sought to lift the veil which separates life from death, and to penetrate the awful secrets of the Hereafter. The ethical codes, forms of worship, and religious rites of antiquity are permeated with the one supreme desire to know and to reveal more of man's future than the brief record of his mortal career. The "longing after immortality," so beautifully described by Addison, was felt by millions in days gone by, even as it is felt now by all endowed with the gift of reason. And nowhere in the chronicles of the past do we find stronger proofs of this unquenchable thirst for knowledge than in those secret ceremonies which foreshadowed and typified greater mysteries. Even from a superficial acquaintance with the philosophy of the ancients this fact becomes apparent, and its importance will be readily conceded by all who have studied the analogy between the symbolic teachings of Freemasonry at the present day and the carefully-shrouded and intentionally-obscure doctrines unfolded to the neophytes of old. One of the principal dogmas—if not the very central one upon which all depended—was the belief in a resurrection of the dead. Initiation into the Egyptian mysteries was so conducted as to illustrate this belief in a very forcible and impressive manner. Plutarch informs us that the candidate represented Osiris, a wise king of Egypt, who, after accomplishing great good, was, according to the tradition, assassinated by his brother Typhon, who enclosed the remains of his victim in a chest, which he cast into the river Nile. As soon as Isis, the wife of the unfortunate Osiris, heard of the death of her husband,

"whom all the ancients had denominated the same god as the sun, when she learned that the genius of darkness had shut him up in a coffin, she commenced a search after his body. Uncertain of the route she ought to pursue, uneasy, agitated, her heart lacerated with grief, in mourning garb, she interrogates every one she meets. She is informed by some young children that the coffin which contains the body of her husband had been carried by the waters out to sea and thence to Biblos, where it was stopped, and was now reposing upon a plant, which had immediately put forth a superb stalk. The coffin was so enveloped as to bear the appearance of being but a part of it. The king of the country, astonished at the beauty of the bush, had it cut, and made of it a column for his palace, without perceiving the coffin which had become incorporated with the trunk. Isis, actuated by a divine impulse, arrives at Biblos; bathed in tears, she seats herself near a fountain, where she remained overwhelmed with grief, speaking to no one until the arrival of some of the queen's women. She salutes them politely, and commences dressing their hair in such a manner as to spread in it, as well as over their whole body, the odour of an exquisite perfume. The queen learning from her women what had happened, and perceiving the exquisite odour of the ambrosia, desired to know this stranger. She invites Isis to her palace, attached her to her household, and placed her as nurse to her son. The goddess then made herself known, and demanded that the precious column should be given to her. She drew from it easily the body of her husband by disengaging the coffin from the branches which covered it. These she found to be of light texture, which she perfumed with essences. She sent to the king and queen this envelope of strange boughs, which was deposited at Biblos, in the temple of Isis. She then embarked and returned to Egypt, to Orus, her son, and deposited the body in a secluded place. Typhon, having gone that night to the chase, finds the coffin, recognizes the corpse, and cuts it into fourteen pieces, which he scattered here and there. The goddess seeing this, returned to collect these dispersed fragments. She interred each part in the place where it was found. Of all the parts of the body of Osiris those of propagation were the only ones Isis could not find. She substituted for them the phallus, which was the image of them, and which was consecrated in the mysteries. This is the precise Egyptian legend concerning Isis, which has not been handed down to us without much mutilation, and which make part of a sacred poem upon Osiris, Isis, and Typhon, their enemy."

It is to be observed that this relation corresponds very closely with the Hindoo myth respecting the death of Chrisna, with the Scandinavian legend which narrates the death of Balder; and with the tradition of Mithras in the Persian mysteries. In fact all the descriptions of initiation into the mystic rites of the ancients now extant closely resemble each other, and the doctrine of regeneration and resurrection from the sleep of death is exemplified more or less dramatically in each and all.

The perils encountered by those who sought admission into the greater sacerdotal mysteries were, it is well known, manifold and astounding. Death by water, death by fire, met them on the way; but nothing could daunt the sincere aspirants, who pressed on to the fruition of their daring hope. The nature and character of their trials may be gathered from an account in the "Encyclopedia Metropolitana," recently extracted by our intelligent contributor, Bro. Forsyth, and published in the pages of THE FREEMASON, and to those who thoroughly comprehend the scope and objects of the Masonic ceremonies, we need hardly point out that Freemasonry teaches the same lofty truths, but in a manner more dignified and less painful to her votaries. The voice of Truth speaks through the silence and the darkness, and the heart of the aspirant is hushed in reverence before the glorious revelation of immortality which is presented to his view. In words never to be forgotten, the eventual triumph of life over death is foretold—when the desolate gloom of the grave shall be made brightness in the presence of the Lord of Light.

THE pleasing anticipations in which we indulged respecting the fraternal reception of the Grand Master of England by our American brethren have been fully realised. On Monday last Lord de Grey and Ripon was entertained at New York by the Masonic Fraternity—a large and brilliant assemblage being collected to do honour to our noble chief. In the name of the Freemasons of England, we tender our thanks to the American Craft for this signal proof of their goodwill, and we trust that the same spirit of brotherhood may ever animate the two great sections of the Anglo-Saxon race.

ANCIENT MSS. AND "SPECULATIVE" MASONRY.

In performance of my promise I now submit the reply to my inquiry respecting the MS. transcribed by Bro. Cooke. My correspondent says: "I have looked at the Masonic MS. mentioned, and there is not a shadow of a doubt that the word 'speculatif' is quite correct, and it occurs again almost immediately with the addition of the final 'e.'" This is evidence of a thoroughly competent expert.

I so far agree with your contributor "Gamma" that the criticism of correspondence in THE FREEMASON is necessary and beneficial, when confined to the evidences and arguments advanced, and if restricted to these fair and reasonable bounds, no contributor has a right to object; but when it is applied simply to a writer's style and manner, it becomes personal and offensive, and degenerates into a mere attempt to "put him down." It is to be regretted that this contributor, in pointing out what he conceives to be the errors of "Beta," should have so far ignored the proprieties of correspondence as to conclude with a very unjustifiable and insulting allusion. All of us may "find occasion to forbear," and hence I would submit that personal criticism is in the highest degree objectionable. Even your correspondent "Gamma" exposes himself to the chance of its being said that your readers will probably have learned for the first time that "Dogberry" claims a place in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and that they will perhaps wonder whether "Bottom" has, by way of exchange, had a small part allotted to him in "Much Ado About Nothing." Verily, if these are the "fireworks" to which your correspondents are to be treated, there will be plenty of inducement for all those who desire the fair and legitimate use of your columns to retire and leave these pyrotechnists to practise upon each other.

I crave your indulgence if I shortly recall the present position. Some time since I ventured to say that the advocates of the 1717 theory had never supported their assertions by a single proof (I repeat this statement), whilst the fact that there was more in the old Masonic Fraternity than in other corporate guilds was evidenced by the Statute Book of England. I was at once met by a challenge to produce an Act of Parliament passed before 1700 which referred to Masons alone, and also by an assertion that the word "speculative" could not be found in any Masonic document before the same date. I produced the statute of 1425, which you printed in extenso, and I produced the MS. of 1490 (about), as containing two examples of the word "speculative." The statute was received in silence, the position was abandoned; but a bolder policy now attends the damaging little word "speculative," and the veracity of the transcriber is impugned by the insinuation that his "rendering" (forsooth) has been "strained and apparently for a purpose." Your readers will now judge where the "strain" has been put on.

Long before your American correspondent opened his battery upon me I had, as you are aware, taken my leave of the 1717 controversy, and should have no more referred to the subject had I not been forced to speak in my own defence. Unless something can be advanced in its support, I look upon the theory as mere bubble, and with all its empty and airy nothingness, again bid it adieu.

ANCIENT MSS. ON MASONRY.

My friend Bro. Jacob Norton, of Boston, U.S., has done good service in directing attention to "Memorials of London and London Life in the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries." I have read his extracts with considerable interest, and will procure a copy of the work, as it is quite new to me, and certainly must be very entertaining and valuable. I am familiar with the contents of all the known ancient MSS. on Masonry in England and Scotland, but I cannot accept Bro. Norton's opinion relative to their being of no higher purpose than for "securing bread and butter." Let any one peruse the Halliwell, Cooke, Lansdown, Harleian, Sloane, Kilwinning, and other MSS., and then I fancy he will discover clear attempts to inculcate not only morality, but also religion.

I have no desire to dogmatize in the matter. There has been far too much theory, and too little proof relative to Freemasonry in the past. At the present time, however, Masonically, we cannot be said to live in a credulous age, but in one pre-eminently for enquiry, honest investigation, and rejection of whatever cannot stand the test of a careful and complete examination. That in some respects Masons differed from other guilds seems to me evident; not, however, so much radically, but in a superior position as respects organization and membership.

Bro. Norton may be able to find similar MSS. and ancient charges in connection with other guilds, as the old Halliwell MS. and others, but I have not been able to, and know not of any one who has. On this subject I cannot do better than quote from an able letter received by me from Bro. "Lupus" in June, 1870:—

I am clearly of opinion that we do actually represent the ancient guild of Operative Masons. One question has been much pressed: Why should we not have been free Tailors or free Cordwainers? I reply, because there were very few guilds containing the elements of a higher social class than the mere trading members. The Masons comprised architects of great eminence, as well by profession as amateurs, and no doubt the latter formed a considerable infusion at all times when the art has been held in high esteem. As the necessity for a trading guild died out, the amateur class probably became stronger, and ultimately others entered, and so it became taken up as a non-trading association, with only the name to betoken its former intent and purpose. That it was of a much higher class than most trading guilds is abundantly proved by the distinguished names of skillful members on actual record. Take one instance only, Henry de Yevelee, an architect, and master mason to three successive kings. He was director of works at Westminster as early as 1365. In 1370 he was employed to retain masons to be sent in the king's retinue over the sea. (Issue Roll of Thos. de Brantingham, Bp. of Exeter: Ed. by Fredk. Devon, 1835, p. 3.) In 2nd Ricard II. "Master Yevelee" was chief mason to the new work in progress at the Church at Westminster, and receive for his fee 100s. a year, with 15s. for his dress and furs (Fabric Rolls). This, and the records of other such names, plainly proves the importance of the guild, and leads to the probability of its perpetuation by other means. I am not aware of any records of distinguished tailors or great cordwainers. In another guild, once of great importance, the Clothiers, there is a local example in the ancient city of Worcester. The clothing trade has entirely disappeared from the city for probably considerably more than a century, and as it faded out, the more eminent citizens and neighbouring gentlemen were admitted to the guild, so that during all the long period since the trading element became extinct, the guild in that city has consisted of men of rank and position, having no connection whatever with the manufacture of cloth, and in very few instances with any other commercial pursuit. The guild so continues at this moment, and that there may be no mistake about its actual representation of the old trading fraternity, I may add that the present guild not only possesses the charter, seals, books, and various insignia of its ancient brotherhood, but also holds what was unsold of its household and landed property. Again, too, the language of the early statutes relating to Masons clearly indicates that there was much more importance in their guild, and their "chapters and congregations," than in the other trading bodies. What would they ordinarily want with such assemblies? And if there was nothing of significance in them, why make the "chapters and congregations" the subject of legislative interference? If any brother can seriously ask himself why he is not a free Tailor, I think perhaps he has mistaken his present vocation, I, however, only refer to these as showing the important position of the old Craft, and the clear reason, as in the case of the Clothiers, why other persons should seek admittance, and in the end save the guild from annihilation. In these days we have societies incorporated by charter, instead of the old guilds, and we may take the Institute of Civil Engineers as an example—a highly honourable and distinguished society, which amongst its roll of the class called "Associates," numbers eminent men of many professions and of no profession, distinguished soldiers, sailors, men of law, and men of science generally. Is not this a forcible example of the same kind?

Faithfully yours,
LUPUS.

I had intended referring to it at more length, but regret not having the requisite time so to do.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

MISRAIM AND MEMPHIS.

I am in a position to corroborate the statement made by "Veritas" last week at page 216, as the following extracts from the General Statutes of the "Reformed Rite of Memphis" will very conclusively show:—

The Reformed Masonic Order of Memphis recognizes only three degrees, those of Apprentice, Fellow-Craft, and Master.

The Masonic sovereignty is in the general body of Masters of the Order. That power is exercised collectively by the Masters of the different lodges who form the Grand Lodge of the Philadelphes.

This Grand Lodge sits at London. It is charged: 1st. To govern and administer the Order. 2nd. To direct the scientific part of the works. 3rd. To unite all the lodges of the Rite. 4th. To deliver to the lodges their constitutions and diploma, and to affix the seal of the Order. 5th. To centralise the works of the lodges, and to collate all the archives by means of the duplicata which are gathered by them from the different lodges of the Rite.

The works of the Grand Lodge are directed by the officers elected in general assembly by an absolute majority of the members present. These officers are chosen from among the ancient members of the Symbolical Lodge, who shall be named to continue the works of initiation and instruction of the Grand Lodge of the Philadelphes, and as much as possible among those who have been already charged with any office.

The Lodge of Stratford, which was denounced by the late Grand Secretary, Bro. W. Gray Clarke, was one of the lodges held under this spurious Grand Lodge, and it is difficult to believe that this fact was not known to the parties who recently endeavoured to implicate the Rite of Misraim in the condemnation pronounced against a totally different organization. If this be so, it presents a melancholy example of human depravity in the so-called "high places" of Masonry, indicating a course of action which must be abhorrent to every right-thinking man.

For the information of your readers, it may be stated that the "Order of Memphis" meets at the Eclectic Hall, Soho, and comprises men who are not recognized as Masons by the laws of the land. On the other hand, the "Rite of Misraim" is comprised only of brethren who are loyal and devoted adherents of the United Grand Lodge of England, working members of the Craft, supporters of the Masonic Charities, and who have as much right to pursue their investigations into other branches or offshoots of Freemasonry, as they have to walk about in the clothes for which they have paid. At this time of day, it will not do for interested parties who uphold the Ancient and Accepted Rite to denounce the pretensions of another and a somewhat similar rite as spurious. If those gentlemen will take the trouble to trace their own origin, they will find it based upon as rare a foundation of mendacities as ever issued from the inventive brain of a Munchausen. The fables promulgated about Frederick the Great, the forged charters and constitutions, all are patent to him who knows aught of Masonic history, whereas nothing worse can be said of Bedarride, the apostle of Misraim, than that he came forward, boldly professing to have penetrated the obscurity which veiled the birth and subsequent development of Freemasonry, and put forth his ideas as the perfection and completion of the structure. Beyond doubt, he was mistaken; but this will not prevent diligent Masonic students from winnowing the corn from the chaff, and preserving in any way they may think most advisable the many noble thoughts and masterly ideas interspersed throughout the teachings of the Rite. ST. MARTIN'S KNIGHT TEMPLARS' ENCAMPMENT, No. 1, BURSLEM.

To all whom it may concern :

These are to Certify that our worthy Brother Companion Sir Henry Rothwell, of St. Martin's Chapter, No. 115, who has under the Keystone signed his name, having been warmly recommended unto us and found worthy, was upon the sixteenth day of February, 1840, in the body of our Encampment, justly and regularly initiated and instructed in all the mysteries of our religious and most Christian Orders of Knight Templars and Knights of Malta, the trusty, true, and faithful soldiers and servants of Jesus Christ, and that we have installed and dubbed him a Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. We have also expounded unto him all the secrets of a Knight of the Black Mark, a Knight of the Red Cross, the degree of a Rosicrucian, or Knight of the Rosy Cross, and a Knight of the Royal Prussian Blue Order; the Ark Mason, Mark Mason, the Jordan, Babylonian, and Mediterranean Passes; and latterly a Pillar of the Priestly Order; he having through the whole ceremony given us the strongest proofs of his steadiness, skill, and valour during the many amazing and mysterious trials attending his admission. We also give and grant unto him all those privileges which from time immemorial have belonged, and now, of right, appertain to those of our Orders, not doubting but he will be permitted to reap and enjoy the same with all our dear and excellent Companions wheresoever dispersed. We therefore greet well all our worthy brethren and knights of the above illustrious Orders throughout the Universe, to accept of him as such, and to take him under their brotherly care and protection.

Given under our hands and the seals of our Orders, hereunto appended, at Burslem, this eighteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and forty, and of Light, five thousand eight hundred and forty.

THE WORD "SPECULATYF."

In reference to the word "speculatyf" which occurs at line 623 of Add. MSS. No. 23, 198 in the British Museum, and as given in Bro. Matthew Cooke's copy is as follows:—

and ler
nyd practyke of yt sciens to his speculatyf. For of speculatyfe he was a mastr.

I beg to say that Mr. Bond, of the British Museum, kindly writes me—"The word speculatyf occurs as you quote it in MS. 23, 198, f. 26. I presume it means the theory of the science."

I am extremely happy, therefore, to be able to afford the above confirmation of the accuracy of Bro. Cooke's copy; and further, in reading over many of Bro. Cooke's remarks written years ago, I must acknowledge the ability of the writer, and although we differ on some points, I am glad to find that we cordially agree upon so many; and although we fellow Masonic students do at present differ upon some points, I trust we can all hold out the right-hand of fellowship to each other with a cordial and truly fraternal grasp, knowing and feeling that each and all of us, according to the light we have—it is a pity that greater light is not more general—are simply and faithfully striving after the truth. W. P. BUCHAN.

THE PRAYER AT INITIATION.

I have observed that in nearly all the lodges I have visited, as well as in my own lodge, a passage in the prayer at initiation is thus given: "And grant that this candidate for Freemasonry may so dedicate and devote his life to Thy service as to become a true and faithful brother amongst us." Surely, the adverbial limitation so as should be omitted. It would then stand, "may dedicate and devote his life to Thy service, and become," &c. It is not intended that we should pray that the candidate should, just in so far, or in such a degree only, dedicate and devote his life to God's service as to become a true and faithful brother, but that he should do so in the widest sense of the terms, and also become a true and faithful brother. Upon turning to Dr. Oliver's "Antiquities of Freemasonry," I find that he gives the prayer in accordance with the view which I have taken of it. WILLIAM CARPENTER.

ELECTION OF OFFICE-BEARERS IN GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

Many of the members of Grand Lodge of Scotland may not be aware of the fact that the Wardens in the Grand Lodge of Scotland do not continue in office longer than two years. On a reference to the Laws and Constitutions, chapter iii., paragraph viii., it reads thus: "The Grand Wardens shall not continue in office for a longer period than two years." It seems unfair that this law should only apply to the Wardens; why not include the others? Equality is a law of Freemasonry.

A PAST MASTER.

CATHEDRAL BUILDING IN THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY.

In a review of Viollets Le Duc's new work upon architecture, which appeared in the Building News for March 24th, we find the following, which, I have no doubt, will be interesting to many of your readers:—

We have only to look at the state of the building trades, as reported upon to the Chapter of Reims, at the end of this century and the commencement of the sixteenth, to see the state of anarchy into which all this order had from these causes fallen. Under the reign of Louis XI. a fire occurred which burnt off the roofs and destroyed the upper portion of the masonry, and all the various trades were called in to advise how it should be rebuilt. Then came the delegates from the masons, and the carpenters, and the plumbers; there was the "Noble Grand" of the Ancient Order of Blacksmiths and the Most Wise from everywhere, and a pretty mess they made of it. Each trade worked independently of the other; they destroyed the harmony of the building, and found none amongst themselves. The plumber sent his waterspouts where he liked, quite irrespective of where the carpenter had made his roof to shed the water, who also was regardless of where the mason had intended him to do so. The stone-carver—we can hardly dignify him with the good old name of sculptor—worked at home, and came and hung up his handiwork on the wall as though it were an easel picture, painted for anybody who would pay the sole thing needful—the price. Metaphorically, these garrotted the architect—he became simply an engineer and a keeper of accounts, and amongst them they murdered art. Henceforth these assassins simply struggled amongst themselves; progress was no longer made, and the true principles which had led to such grand results were forgotten.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—As an article in your number of the 8th instant contains an unwarrantable attack upon the S.C. 33° of the A. and A. Rite, I am directed to request you will insert in your next number this official reply thereto, which reply is that there is no foundation whatever for that part of the article which applies to this Supreme Council, and that it is altogether untrue.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

THE MARK CHAIR.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—I believe the inconvenience is very generally felt in Mark lodges being restricted in their choice of a W.M. to those brethren who have previously filled the chair of a Craft Lodge. As your correspondent last week very justly remarks, the Executive of the Mark Degree have never shown themselves backward in the adoption of any reforms that were likely to increase its prosperity, and I have no doubt that as soon as matters are settled with the R.A. Chapter of Scotland, the desired change in the Constitutions will be proposed.

But, meanwhile, let me remind your correspondent that a dispensing power is expressly reserved to the G.M. by the Book of Constitutions; a power which has, I believe, in no single instance been refused to be exercised when duly applied for.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
ANOTHER P.M.

SUBORDINATION IN THE HIGHER DEGREES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—There are men of peculiar order of intellect who, as Polonius says, can only "harp upon my daughter." The best arguments of Newton and Locke would be thrown away upon them, and though you may with every just argument and with the whole force of logic roll them up like the stone of Sisyphus, no sooner do you reach the end of your labour than down again comes the ponderous and dull mass, with its monotonous echoes. On the man whose only answer to mathematical demonstration is "I don't know it," no intellectual effort can have the least effect; nevertheless, by constant reiteration, if indeed worth while, some effect might possibly be produced.

Your correspondent, the conscientious believer in HIS OBLIGATION, traverses and retraverses the same ground, and observes on the S.G.C. (so called) that Bro. Yarker lays down the dictum that it is usually considered good Masonic law that the governed should have some voice in the election of such high functionaries.

Now let us ask your correspondent:—1. What is Masonic law? 2. Whether self-election is its radical principle? 3. Whether it is an oligarchy or a fraternity? and, lastly, whether the 33° is truly within the pale of Masonry?

He goes on to say that "the Council derives its charter from the Supreme Grand Council, N.J., United States." But where did the S.G.C., N.J., receive its charter? I fear that we may be pursuing our enquiry into the "vast illimitable," where à nihilo nihil fit. A strange cometic power makes its appearance, and invading our system, eclipses (or is supposed to do so) the meridian sun of Grand Lodge! The same writer goes on to talk of expulsion from S.G.C. as a very awful and serious matter; and so it must be to those who put faith in its authority and pretensions, but beyond the pale of its own influence who regards it? Indeed, can any man of honour, knowing its history, retain membership with it? By their own act Bro. Yarker has been freed from all claims upon his slavish obedience. Are there not thousands of good Masons who never even heard of it, and who would ridicule the very idea of its preposterous claims? There is a well-known child's rhyme beginning "How many miles to Babylon?" but people now-a-days in England have no mind for such exposition of geographical notions. The S.G.C. may, however, perhaps live in the mystic capital, and no doubt their votaries imagine that they can annihilate time and space and reconcile seeming impossibilities—but does the public on that account abandon railway, ship, telegraph, and other modes of communication, and entrust their business to the rapid carriers, subtle fancy?

The same writer proceeds: "Freemasonry would soon be in a state of anarchy if every Mason or every lodge thought fit to give, or professed to give, whatever degrees it liked and to be accountable to none." But supposing that they did so, and acquired a large gathering (exactly on the same principle, be it observed, as the S.G.C.), what power is there to prevent it? If crowned with success, such efforts would not fail to be recognised as legitimate, and even if not, who has a power effectually to condemn? If appealed to to pass judgment on the offenders, twenty-eight out of every twenty-nine of the population of the kingdom would be convulsed with laughter at anything so serio-comic? If coercion and penalties were to be threatened by self-elected judges, they would be inoperative in society, and indeed could not be enforced, for Freemasons are not under such autocratic rule. But as I comprehend the matter, Bro. Yarker represents the old and only legitimate "Council of Rites," whose functions the 33° have usurped, and stands a better chance of recognition than his antagonists.

The same writer asserts that people are "gulled" by the present offenders, who are such good social economists as, in their legitimacy, to accept fees of rs. 6d., for which the antagonistic body charges £10 under forged warrant.

The concluding grand peroration of the letter in question is highly diverting, inasmuch as multitudes of as good Masons as the writer are laughing heartily at such impotent rap. For my own part, however, I pity it, and hope these zealots will read the daily papers, profit by the progress of the times and Parliamentary reform, and learn to be "wiser and better men" rather than "children of a larger growth."

VAMPIRE.

NO. 3 BIS AND ITS PROCEEDINGS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read the exceedingly curious, and I think I may also add, unparalleled proceedings of the Glasgow St. John's Lodge, No. 3 bis, as recorded at page 205 of your paper. It seems strange to me, to say the least, how the members of a lower court can take upon themselves to interfere in such an arbitrary manner with the proceedings of a higher court. One would have thought that the proper plan for them to do, had they found fault with anything said, or supposed to have been said, in Grand Lodge, would have been to have made a complaint to that body, stating the grounds of what they found fault with; instead of which they openly ignore Grand Lodge, and in consequence we perceive a daughter lodge sitting in judgment upon Grand Lodge itself.

However, when we look under the surface, the enigma can be easily solved, which, to us, turns out to be a most barefaced attempt to bamboozle the members of a lodge by the office-bearers. Said office-bearers were carrying on a very high-handed policy against Grand Lodge, in which, however, they were defeated, and had all their absurd actions and pretensions thrown back upon themselves, as is shown by Grand Lodge Report, page 220, April 8th. In order, therefore, to lead away the minds of the members of their lodge, they cast about for a scapegoat upon which to lay the sins of their own proceedings, and, Eureka! they discover it in one of their own members! Capital idea to lay the burden of their own faults upon another. So, the signal being given, the crowd rush on as they are led, without even knowing or thinking of what they are doing. Only I should not wonder if before long they find out somehow that they have made a mistake. Seeing also that according to their Memorial, a copy of which is given at page 662, December 17th, they actually desired a vote of censure to be passed upon the Grand Master himself (the Earl of Dalhousie), we need not wonder at any absurd proceedings they may enter into against one of their own members who takes the liberty either to think or judge for himself, and who will not, therefore, tamely submit to be led by the nose by any un-masonic pretensions, no matter who are the authors of them. Another point in this case is, that while the one party appeared in Grand Lodge as R.W.M. of No. 3 bis, the other appeared there as Proxy S.W. of No. 432 (St. Andrew, Dunedin, N.Z.); consequently this adds to the absurdity of any Glasgow lodge, or even the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow, sitting in judgment upon the action which one of the representatives of a foreign lodge chose to take in Grand Lodge, and more especially when that action, whatever it really was, was not called in question by either the Grand Master in the chair, or Grand Lodge at the time.

I am, yours fraternally,
M. G. L.

BIBLICAL ACCOUNT OF THE CREATION.

(Reply to Bro. Carpenter's Letter of March 4th, p. 138.)

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—My letter printed February 25th, was designed to show that Anderson's charges separated the past from the present. Before 1717, Masonry was undoubtedly exclusively Christian; since 1717 or 1723, it avowed itself as an universal institution, and every departure from universality must necessarily be a violation of the principles laid down in those charges. Now, the paper of January 7th reached me on the 21st, and my reply was mailed January 24th, in short, my letter was written in haste, and as I have no chance of correcting the proof sheets, I hope the reader will be indulgent in overlooking errors which do not affect the main question. As a case in point, I happened, for reasons which I shall hereafter state, to say that "Oxford professors deny the biblical account of creation." Had I said scientific instead of "Oxford," it would not have weakened my argument, and had I known that the phrase would give offence, I most likely would have used the former. The word "Oxford," however, appears to have furnished my worthy Bro. Carpenter with an opportunity of pouncing upon me—of clinching me—of pinning me down to the point. He not only challenges me for proof as to when and where Oxford said so, but is pleased to hamper me with rules and conditions how the desired proof should be given. He not only challenges, but claims also the rights to choose the ground and weapons. As this, however, is against all the rules of civilized warfare, I beg most respectfully to decline his conditions, and shall explain matters after my own fashion.

I must here premise by reminding the reader that I have hitherto abstained from giving my personal opinion on bible questions, because the ventilating of such opinions must tend to the introduction of religious discussion, and discussions of that nature should be avoided among Masons. I am, however, in self-defence, compelled in a measure to depart from that rule, and therefore beg to state to my worthy opponent that when the bible tells me that "in six days God created the heaven and earth," and an Oxford professor says that "six" meant more or less than six, I am justified in saying that the professor denied the bible account of creation, and what is more, in order that there should be no mistake in the writer's meaning, he was pleased to define "one day" to mean "evening and morning one day." After this definition, I have no more right to construe or misconstrue the "one day" to mean an indefinite epoch, than the forty day's deluge to mean forty indefinite epochs. Now suppose I was informed that the Copernican theory of astronomy was taught in Oxford, would not I have a right to infer that the Oxford professors denied the Ptolemaic theory? For equal reasons I was justified in stating that the teachers of geology deny or disbelieve the Mosaic account of creation. With regard to the encyclopedia, I shall only say that I formerly owned an edition of the "Britannica," printed in the last century, with a supplement printed in 1824. In one of the articles of the former it may have been "earth" or "deluge," I distinctly recollect the writer combating the then modern heresy of indefinite epochs, while in the supplement the writers on geology appear to have become converts to the new theory, and it is needless to say that the seventh and eight editions of work maintain the anti-biblical theory of creation. But to show still further that geologists without exception have discarded the Mosaic account, I shall summon Mr. C. W. Goodwin, M.A., to give his evidence. On page 210, "Essays and Reviews," he says, "The school books of the present day, while they teach the child that the earth moves, yet assure him that it is little less than six thousand years old. On the other hand, geologists of all creeds are agreed that the earth has existed for an immense series of years, to be counted by the million rather than by the thousand, and that indubitably more than six days elapsed from its first creation to the appearance of man upon its surface." And as I have no reason to doubt Mr. Goodwin's veracity, I have a right to infer that by "geologists of all religious creeds," Mr. Goodwin includes the Oxford professors.

Now, my aim in importing (as Bro. Carpenter was pleased to call it) the fact that the Oxford professors deny the Mosaic account, was simply done to call attention to another fact, viz., that certain parts of the English ritual cannot conscientiously be subscribed to, even by men holding the highest positions in your seats of science and learning, and if Bro. Carpenter should still doubt my assertion, I would respectfully suggest to him to send a copy of that part of the section which illustrates the six day's creation, such as I formerly used to hear in the Grand Stewards' Lodge, to the Oxford professors of geology, and if those learned gentlemen should acquiesce and acknowledge the correctness of the theory as expounded in that lecture as literally true, then I shall cheerfully admit that I was misinformed.

Bro. Carpenter's own letter, however, convinces me that there is, after all, very little difference between us. We only differ in this, that what he is pleased to call "interpreters" of the bible, I call perverters. For it is my opinion, that if the author of the Book Genesis had intended or designed to convey the idea of six indefinite epochs, he could and would doubtless have found a Hebrew word or words to have expressed that idea lucidly and clearly.

Fraternally yours,
JACOB NORTON.

QUALIFICATION FOR MASTERSHIP OF A MARK LODGE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I was pleased to see the above question taken up by "A Craft P.M." in his communication to THE FREEMASON of the 8th April.

There can be no difference of opinion as to the injurious effect which the rule prohibiting any one but a Craft P.M. from occupying the chair of a Mark lodge has upon the degree generally.

Many young Masons having no prospect of presiding over a Craft lodge for some years, in consequence of the great number of candidates for the honour, have taken an interest in the Mark Degree. After working through the various offices below the chair, they find their labour is lost in consequence of their not possessing the qualification the above rule demands, whilst the position of W.M., which they have fairly earned, frequently goes begging, and, as I have more than once seen, is pressed on some P.M. who either has not the time or the inclination to perfect himself in the duties of the office he is selected to fill, and the work of the lodge is consequently either done by deputy or in a very imperfect manner.

I trust the Mark Grand Lodge will speedily reconsider their decision. If, upon such reconsideration, they still find they cannot rescind this unjust rule, they should at least assign some reason for adhering to it, such being entirely wanting in the last Grand Lodge report.

I am, yours fraternally,
KEYSTONE.

CAUTION TO THE CRAFT.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I shall feel obliged if you will insert the enclosed paragraph from the Evening News and Hull Daily Express. Those of your readers who have had any experience among "begging Masons," will be glad to see that an effort has been made to check the progress of such impostors. Too much praise cannot be given to the W.M. of the Kingston Lodge, 1010, for the moral courage he has displayed in dealing so promptly with this case. He has rendered a great service to the Craft, and I hope to hear soon that others have followed his example. The evil is a growing one, and requires energetic and determined action to endeavour to stop such disgraceful practices. As far as possible enquiry should be made respecting the correctness of the statements made by these rascals, and members of lodges should be cautioned not to relieve persons travelling from place to place, but refer them to the person appointed to deal with such cases.

I am, dear Sir, your obedient servant,
WM. DAY KEYWORTH,
P.M. 57, and Almoner for the Hull lodges.

"At the Hull Police Court, before T. H. Travis, Esq., Henry Newcombe was brought up on a charge of begging.—It appeared that the prisoner had obtained from the prosecutor, Mr. C. James Todd, Worshipful Master of the Kingston Lodge of Freemasons, the sum of 10s., being third-class railway fare from Hull to Liverpool, under the following circumstances:—On Saturday last he represented himself to be a member of 26 years' standing of the Mariners' Lodge, 249, Liverpool, and that he had been the assistant carpenter of the ship Percy, Captain Holmes, from Liverpool to New York and home, and which ship, he stated, had been wrecked off Deal on the 6th inst. on her passage home, in which he lost everything, and that he only wanted sufficient to get to Liverpool again. Instead, however, of going to Liverpool on Saturday, he seems to have enjoyed himself with the money he had obtained, for on Sunday he was found very drunk in the streets of Hull, and on Monday commenced a fresh system of plunder, carefully concealing the fact that he had already been relieved. He had also collected other sums on Saturday. No ship called Percy had been lost off Deal, nor is the prisoner a member of the Mariners' Lodge. He pleaded guilty to the charge of begging.—Mr. Travis sentenced him to 30 days' imprisonment, with hard labour. The prisoner is a short, thick-set man, with sandy hair, moustache and whiskers slightly tinged with grey, with a reddish face. He is about 5 feet 7 inches in height, and about 47 years old."

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., Bro. A. Perkins in the chair. There were also present: Bros. Browse, J. Smith, J. Brett, J. Farnfield, R. Spencer, Gale, Fraser, F. Walters, G. Bolton, N. Wingfield, Young, Adlard, R. W. Stewart, C. A. Cottebrune, T. Meggy, L. Stein, H. W. Hemsworth, J. R. Sheen, E. Cox, and others.

Bro. W. Farnfield, Secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting for verification, and the report of the Finance Committee, which were unanimously received and adopted.

Some formal business having been disposed of, a vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the meeting to a close.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Quarterly General Court of this Institution was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 13th inst. Bro. J. Hervey, V.P., G.S., in the chair, and there were present Bros. H. Browse, Poultney Scott, B. Head, J. Symonds, W. Farnfield, S. May, R. Spencer, J. R. Sheen, Rucker, S. Rosenthal, J. Empson, Major Creaton, J. Brett, F. Walters, H. Massey, Hime, Chadwick, E. Sillifant, T. W. White, A. H. Tattershall, E. Cox, H. Muggeridge, S. Muggeridge, and others.

Bro. E. H. Patten read the minutes of the previous Quarterly Court and the several general meetings.

The list of committee formed from annual subscribers was read and approved of.

Bro. B. Head proposed, and Bro. F. Walters seconded, "That a sum not exceeding seventy guineas be granted as a recognition of the medical attendance during the late visitation of sickness at the school; that a committee of five members be appointed to carry the foregoing resolution into effect; that Bros. Head, Nunn, Creaton, Young, and E. Cox be nominated as such committee." (The resolution was carried nem. con.)

Bro. B. Baker's notice of motion was not entertained, in consequence of his non-attendance.

Some formal business being disposed of, the Court was closed. The election of candidates for Girls' School was then proceeded with (for result of which see advertisement on our front page).

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

"THERE is no medicine at the present day I value so highly as the Pain Killer. I have used it in my family for years, and in every instance it has proved a sovereign remedy. I tested it to-day on a severe burn, and found it all that could be desired. I cannot praise it too highly.—A. D. MILNE, editor of Messenger, N.Y.—To P. Davis & Son."

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.

Festival of the Girvan Knights Templar Encampment, No. 32.

The annual soiree of the Girvan Knights Templar Encampment, No. 32, was held on Tuesday evening the 4th inst., in the New Masonic Hall, Struthers-street, Calton, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. Sir Kt. Robert Bell, M.N.C., occupied the chair, and surrounding him on the platform were Rev. J. C. Stewart, and Messrs. Thomas Clannachan, P.C.; James O. Park, D.C.; James E. Speirs, C.G.; James Love, Treasurer; Edward M'Farlane, Secretary; James Barclay, J. W. Paterson, William Phillips, Joseph Singleton, Thomas Barclay, and J. Thompson.

After tea, the Chairman delivered the following address:—Ladies and Gentlemen, it gives me very great pleasure to see so large and so influential an assembly at this our annual festival. It is an indication that we are making progress, and our prosperity will appear when I say it is not more than eighteen months since we emerged from the deepest obscurity with a number of members barely sufficient to open an encampment; but now I am glad to tell you that already our number is adequate to fill this spacious hall. I regard our prosperity in the higher Orders as another index of the prosperity of Masonry in general—a prosperity which is substantiated by every source of information. It is not only making great progress in Scotland, but it is marching forward with rapid and majestic steps all over the world. Why should it not? It is truth, and truth will prevail; moreover it is truth based on charity, the best of all foundations, and when strengthened with union it breathes the very spirit of the psalm we have just sung "That it is a good thing for brethren to dwell together in unity," and to enjoy happy anticipations of the life that shall never end. It is the mystic tie that binds men of all nations, though varied their creeds, with one determination to preserve unsullied the purity of that virtue which alone emanates from her great light—the Bible. It is the tie that binds them into one band of a peaceful brotherhood, which all the machinations of the world has hitherto assailed in vain. Though she is as invincible as her landmarks, still her invincibility branches out into a moderation and toleration that has taught many important lessons to the present increasing Christian alliance. Her combination and fraternization has been of great service to the world; when discord and division is breaking up into fragments every system of church and state, she towers her loving head above all disorder, and with outstretched arms is ever ready to receive and comfort the desolate and downcast, who are tossed to and fro with the cold selfishness of the world. Even when nation is rising against nation, she is not only unshaken, but is rich with the balm of Gilead; the first to stretch out pecuniary aid, and the foremost to bind up the wounds of the afflicted; her nature being love, sorrow and suffering delight to nestle under her wings; her habits being social, union and communion is the very atmosphere in which she loves to breathe; it is the soil on which grows her most fragrant and fertile plants—friendship, integrity, mutual love. It is here where the mystic tree, with its evergreen-foilage and never-dying principle, adapts itself to our isolated necessities, and when we come under its impartial protecting shade, it becomes clearly demonstrated to us that it is rooted in love, and love is God. It is her love and social element that endears her to our social natures; but after all we are still strangers and pilgrims in the world. Here we have no abiding-place. Our loved objects fall by our side and crumble into dust beneath our feet; the seeds of decay and suffering are inherent in our present constitution, and thus are we surrounded with sorrows manifold. What then can be more reasonable, more refreshing and consoling than thus socially to meet and mutually to bear each other's burdens, and so fulfill the law of love? By doing so we put to shame the narrow-minded selfish, and compel them to say, "Behold, how they love one another." I had just commenced to note some of the special blessings that naturally flow from union and communion; but no sooner was my anchor weighed and sails set, than I was told by the Committee that the programme was long, and that my words must be few. This at once took the wind out of my sails, and sent me adrift on the fathomless deep of social bliss. I trust, however, that they have not in like manner clipped the oratorical wings of our Rev. and very worthy brother, Bro. Stewart. I expect he has been left unfettered to ascend the social tree, and that he has culled for us some of its choicest fruit, which I know he can serve up with a master hand. It must be very congratulating for him to see so many happy faces present ready to receive the good things of our Order. Now, good ladies, I have just one favour to ask of you, and it is this, "will you have a special care over the gentlemen for this evening?" If so it will greatly facilitate and alleviate the duties of the chair; but, in obedience to the Committee, I hasten to bring you under the captivating power of harmony and song, trusting you will enjoy yourselves this evening, more especially when the ladies are present, for without them our meeting would have been the shell without the kernel.

A concert followed, the artistes being Mrs. Henderson, and Messrs. T. Paul, A. Brodie, J. C. Wilson, M'Elroy, T. Collins, &c. An assembly brought the proceedings to a close.

Caledonian Chapter of Unity, No. 73.

This chapter met in the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 28th ult., Comp. David Gilchrist, M.E.Z., presiding. Gomp. A. H. M'Couleagh, having sent an apology, the chair of H. was taken by Thomas Findler, his seat as J. being occupied by William Donaldson, G. W. Wheeler acting as P.S., and George McLeod as Scribe E. The First Principal of No. 69 having resigned, at the request of the officers of that chapter, Comp. Gilchrist, in his usual impressive style, exalted for them Bro. George Robertson. The chapter was then opened in the Mark Degree, and Bro. James Dunlop, Master Mason, Commercial, No. 360, and H. G. Y. McLeod, of Caledonian Railway Lodge, No. 854, were elevated to that degree. A lodge of Past Masters was then opened, and the I.P.Z., Comp. James Balfour, entrusted those two gentlemen with the secrets of that degree, all the ceremonies being very effectively worked. In the course of the evening a very handsome brooch, with Masonic and Royal Arch emblems at the back, was presented to Comp. Thomas Findler, for his past services as Scribe E.

Comp. E. D. Gilchrist, as the Z. of the chapter, in presenting, said that he knew it would be prized far above its intrinsic worth as a memento of the kind feelings of all the Companions towards both Mr. Findler and his wife, and he trusted that she might be long spared to grace the brooch which she would do quite as much as it would adorn her.

Comp. Findler thanked the M.E.Z. and the rest of the Companions for their kind appreciation of his services. When he was consulted as to the form he should like their gift to take, he suggested a brooch for his wife, for although he could not entrust her with his Masonic secrets, he thought it only fair she should participate in the honours they had been pleased to bestow upon him, as the time devoted to their service, which had earned this reward, had been principally taken from that which he usually devoted to home, but the very handsome gift he was now going to take her would make him re-double, if possible, attention to that chapter and the duties of his present office therein.

The health of the newly-exalted Companions was also drunk with enthusiasm, and responded to by Comps. McLeod and Dunlop.

IRELAND.

A grand Masonic reunion took place on the 12th inst., at the Exhibition Palace, Dublin. Several thousand persons were present, the scene being one of much magnificence. The assembly included several personages of distinction.

Lord Powerscourt, in the course of some remarks, said that charges had been made against their Craft, on the ground that Masonry was a secret society, and, as such, akin to Fenian and other similar organisations, existing for political and disloyal purposes. Such was not the case. Nothing contrary to law and order was ever permitted in their body. Their object was to promote peace on earth and goodwill to men. (Cheers.)

Owing to sudden indisposition, the Grand Master of All Ireland (the Duke of Leinster) was not present.

THE FREEMASONS' LIFE BOAT.

The Committee held their regular meeting at Bro. Forster's, the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on Thursday, the 6th inst. Bro. A. E. Harris presided, and there were also present Bros. S. Davis (Treasurer), E. Gottheil (Hon. Sec.), N. Gluckstein, C. C. Taylor, D. Beck, Cottebrune, Dairy, Lacy, Mortlock; visitor, Bro. Gillard, 180.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following brethren were then severally proposed and accepted as members of the Committee: Chas. J. Corder, P.M. 732, 271, 851, P.Z. 732, P.P. S.G.W. Sussex; Magnus Ohren, W.M. 452, J.W. 33, S.E. 33; Jas. W. Gillard, 180; F. A. Philbrick, W.M. 18; E. Grant, 228 and 742, hon. member 435.

The following further subscriptions were then announced:—

Table listing subscription amounts (e.g., Amount already acknowledged in THE FREEMASON ... £ 264 8 0).

Total (exclusive of Grand Lodge grant of £50) £319 14 0

The meeting was then adjourned to Thursday, 4th May next, at 8 p.m.

For the information of subscribers, it should be mentioned that Bro. W. Mann, P.M. and P.Z. 186, has for the second time presented the Committee with 1500 circulars, and that therefore the best thanks are due to that brother for his valuable assistance.

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE Freemasons of Paris have issued a manifesto, calling on the French people, in the name of humanity, fraternity, and their desolate country, to stop the effusion of blood, and to establish the basis of a definite treaty of peace.

THE "Friar's" Lodge will be consecrated on the 19th inst., at the Cheshire Cheese Tavern, Crutched Friars—Bro. Foxall being W.M.-elect. Bro. J. Terry, P.P.G.S.B. of Herts, is the brother nominated by the Deputy Grand Master as Consecrating Officer.

THE Fifteen Sections will be worked on Wednesday, the 26th inst., at 7 o'clock, at the Confidence Lodge of Instruction, held at Bro. Forster's, Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. Bro. Verry, S.W. No. 554, will occupy the chair, and from his well-known "good working," no doubt there will be a good muster on that occasion.

A MEETING of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Monmouthshire will be held at the Town Hall Newport, on Thursday, the 20th instant, when the R.W. Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot, Prov G.M. for the Eastern Division of South Wales, will instal the R.W. Bro. Colonel Charles Lync as Prov. G.M. of Monmouthshire, and the V.W. Bro. S. George Homfray, as Deputy Prov. G.M. The Prov. Grand Lodge will be opened at high twelve. The banquet will be held at the King's Arms' Hotel at 4.30. A procession will be formed at 2.30 p.m., and the brethren will proceed to St. Woolo's Church, where a sermon will be preached by the P.G. Chaplain, and a collection made on behalf of local and Masonic charities.

GALVANISM.—Pulvermacher's Monthly Record of Cures is now ready for the benefit of Sufferers, containing documentary evidence of remarkable Cures effected by Pulvermacher's Improved Patent Self-applicable Volta-Electric Chain-Bands and Pocket Batteries, and may be had on application to the Sole Inventor and Patentee—J. L. Pulvermacher, 200, Regent-street, London, W. A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution.—Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmatic, Bronchitic, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. *Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

Reviews.

Masonic Trials. By HENRY M. LOOK, Past Master, G.V. and L. of Michigan K.T. New York Publishing Company, 432, Broome-street.

This handsome volume of 347 pages may be said to exhaust the laws and forms appertaining to Masonic jurisprudence. In America it is well known that offences against morality or the Constitutions of the Craft become subjects for investigation and trial in the lodge or other body to which the delinquent belongs. Hence the necessity for such a work as Bro. Look's book on the other side of the Atlantic, and beyond doubt it will prove invaluable as a guide in all such proceedings. In this country the Board of General Purposes settles the few differences which sometimes arise between brethren, and although a somewhat more rigid discipline might be fairly enforced, on the whole we are not inclined to seek alteration in the English mode of procedure. Cases of dereliction from the right path, which may bring scandal on the Craft, should, however, fall within the scope of Masonic censure and punishment, and we congratulate our American brethren upon the important accession to their Masonic textbooks, which "Masonic Trials" undoubtedly is. The work also contains copies of the old Constitutions and Landmarks, besides an appendix of forms and a capitally-arranged index, and the manner in which it is printed reflects the utmost credit upon the Masonic Publishing Company of New York, whose enterprise is so well and favourably known.

"I CAN confidently recommend your Pain Killer for diarrhoea, dysentery, &c., having repeatedly tested its virtues in these diseases, and never known it to fail. I always keep a bottle of it in the house in case of need.—RICHARD CLARKSON, 2, Hopwood-st., L'pool.—To Perry Davis & Son."

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

By BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

There was a most violent attack issued against the Grand Lodge of Ireland (Dublin) by a brother who signed himself "A Sincere Friend." It may be true what he says in the printed letter, and if so, it reveals a deal of "jobbery" and unmasonic conduct by some of the then Grand Officers utterly foreign to Masonry.

We have no means now of judging accurately of the causes that led to the Irish schism. On which side lay the most blame of course would be a nice question to decide. Undoubtedly the seceders were wrong in starting a rival Grand Lodge, and, on the other hand, the authorities were evidently very lax as respects discipline, finances, and as to preserving the Masonic landmarks. In the letter referred to the then Grand Treasurer has certainly an extraordinary character given him, and the Deputy Grand Secretary, Bro. Seton, is stated to have horsewhipped the former officer! It is then declared that the "next thing we know of Mr. — was his new-fangled Grand Lodge of Red and Black Masonry, and half a dozen other vagaries, to get your money without either a why or wherefore." A great deal being of a similar character to the above, and in some respects worse, we forbear quoting further, as the extracts given will be sufficient an exhibit of the rancour which animated the brethren in Ireland early in the present century. The conclusion to the document is as follows: "Mind what I tell you, stick together like a bundle of rods, and you cannot be broken. If you separate, you will be a laughing-stock, and your money will be lost, and your poor will starve, and most likely your Grand Lodge may be transported to London, or Scotland, or Botany Bay!"

We are now at the end of our information respecting the schism. We are told that the Grand Lodge of Ulster issued a number of warrants at a cheaper rate than the Grand Lodge of Ireland (Dublin), and when the differences were happily adjusted, there was an offer made to confirm the warrants, which was declined, as the members would not pay the amount demanded by the regular Grand Lodge. Hence these brethren became expelled or clandestine Masons, and met in groves, hills, or valleys, and thus became known as "Thorny or Bush Masons," and we are creditably informed their custom was to confer degrees on all applicants for a small consideration, or "treats of whiskey." From this body, it is believed by some observant and respectable Masons, "that the secret societies that so permeated the lower classes in Ireland had their origin, and were fostered by the Roman Catholic clergy until the Emancipation of 1829, when they boldly threw off the mask, and hurled the anathemas of the Vatican at the Freemasons. This of course may be true, but as we have not sufficient on the point to give an opinion, we shall rest content by mentioning it. We may state that the information and statements here given were communicated to us in a letter expressing the thanks of the writer for the facts we have made known respecting Freemasonry in Ireland.

Obituary.

BRO. WILLIAM P. GUNNELL.

Death has struck down suddenly in the very prime of life Bro. William P. Gunnell, the late agent at Cape Coast, of the firm of Messrs. F. and A. Swanzy, of London, who died at Cape Coast, South Africa, a short time since. The honourable and upright character, frank and unassuming manner, and thoroughly amiable disposition of the late lamented gentleman had greatly endeared him to all classes of our community. His remains, followed by a prodigious number of persons of every rank and of both sexes, were conveyed to the new burial ground for interment Bro. Gunnell, who occupied the position of Worshipful Master of the Gold Coast Lodge at the time of his death was buried with Masonic honours. The corpse was conveyed to the church from the factory at about eight in the morning, and there the funeral service was read by the Rev. Bro. D. Smith, Colonial Chaplain. After this, it was borne to the place of interment, the procession marching in the following order:—Bro. Nylander (as Tyler) with a drawn sword; he was followed by Bro. Isaac Robertson, bearing the banner of the lodge. Next followed two Fellow Crafts, Bros. Clementson and Bradshaw; after them the following Master Masons, two and two, viz., Bros. D. Haywood and R. A. Quansah, J. R. Thompson and Samuel Davis, Lieut. Hopkins and W. J. Browne. Then came Bros. J. H. Capper, Treasurer; W. J. Mercer, Secretary pro tem.; H. A. E. Mullen, J.W.; and F. E. Bennett, S.W.; Bro. Charles Bartels walking next bearing the Bible, followed by Bro. S. Bannerman, P.M. and acting W.M. Next came the choristers, whose performance on this occasion was exceedingly creditable. They were followed by the Rev. Bro. D. Smith, Colonial Chaplain. Next came the hearse, containing the body of the late Bro. W. P. Gunnell, and followed by Bros. W. D. Howson, S.D.; and C. C. Brown, S.D., bearing rods; then His Excellency the Administrator and Capt. W. E. Hoare; behind whom walked Bros. Drs. Dugan and J. R. Thomas, Stewards; and last of all (of the Masons) Bro. Joseph Hagan, Inner Guard, with drawn sword.

A large number of ladies and gentlemen, and a very great gathering of the humbler classes, followed the Masonic procession. As the burial ground was approached, it was observed that a considerable concourse of persons had already assembled there, waiting for the arrival of the funeral party. The coffin was consigned to its resting-place surrounded by one of the largest assemblies that has ever accompanied a white man here to the grave. Peace be with him!—West African Herald.

Referring to our article last week, the astronomical explanation of the mutilation of the body of Osiris into fourteen pieces is thus given by Plutarch:—

"This is, into as many parts as there are days between the full moon and the new. This circumstance, has reference to the gradual diminution of the lunar light during the fourteen days that follow the full moon. The moon at the end of fourteen days enters Taurus and becomes united to the sun, from whom she collects fire upon her disk during the fourteen days which follow. She is then found every month in conjunction with him in the superior parts of the signs. The equinoctial year finishes at the moment when the sun and moon are found united with Orion, or the star of Orus, a constellation placed under Taurus, which unites itself to the Neomenia of spring. The moon renews herself in Taurus, and a few days afterwards is seen in the form of a crescent in the following sign, that is, Gemini, the home of Mercury. Then Orion, united to the sun, in the attitude of a formidable warrior, precipitates Scorpio, his rival, into the shades of night; for he sets every time Orion appears above the horizon. The day becomes lengthened, and the germs of evil are by degrees destroyed; It is thus that the poet Nonnus pictures to us Typhon conquered at the end of winter, when the sun arrives in Taurus, and when Orion mounts into the heavens with him."

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE IV.

If an essayist, endowed with an enterprising spirit, were to commit him to the task of collating, as far as practicable, the particulars of the gross deeds done by religious fanatics in ancient and modern times, men gifted with well-balanced minds would revolt at the hideous picture of human depravity and wickedness presented. "Man's inhumanity to man make countless thousands mourn," observes an author. The remark, unquestionably based upon a practical knowledge of the workings of mankind, challenges scepticism. Philosophers exhibit a disinclination to abrogate assumptions indicating an affinity to honesty or just principles. They have, in the course of their investigations of natural phenomena, clearly explained some subjects which, from their intricacy, had formed exceedingly contentious themes among the ordinary class of men. Their assistance cannot for a moment be questioned, for their labours have, in a remarkable manner, exemplified their value and importance. It is true that upon some points there will always be a diversity of opinion owing to their extreme complexity, but it will be allowed that the views of learned men, however much hostility they may receive in different quarters, are entitled, at least, to respect and consideration. Those who have devoted a great part of their lives in the pursuit of knowledge have been shocked at the egotism, selfishness, and cruelty displayed by human nature in its vagaries, and have been sorely tried to apply a remedial agent. The evil passions of man are more or less modified or subdued and rendered dormant by the influences of civilisation, but they only require force of circumstances to arouse them, and when they are so excited, in what ugly forms do they frequently present themselves! The laws of God are outraged and forgotten, the finer feelings are overcome and rendered powerless to exercise any restraint upon corrupt thoughts and acts! But there assuredly arrives a time when all transgressors discover the enormity of their offences towards their Creator. In what manner can sinners hope to atone for their misdeeds? It is not by the immolation of innocent lives, nor by self-inflicted torture by way of penance, but simply by earnest appeals at the Throne of Grace!

There have been many arguments as to the fate of Jephthah's daughter among commentators of the Bible. By some writers it is maintained that she was not sacrificed in the manner described, but was dedicated to the service of God, passing the remainder of her life in a state of celibacy. There are several who will not hesitate to support this liberal interpretation, especially when it is remembered that no parent possessing the great love for his offspring as manifested by Jephthah could be prompted to carry out any vow so imprudently made. Indeed, the law of the Israelites expressly forbade any human immolation, which had, moreover, been proclaimed by God to be an abomination to Him. It can therefore be reasonably assumed that there is sufficient evidence to justify the conjecture as to her real fate. An annotator says that many who have considered the question argue thus:—"That Jephthah was an Israelite, and as such lived under a law which prohibited human sacrifices by the severest penalties: that, had the vow been intended in this sense (i.e., the one generally accepted), God would never have vouchsafed Jephthah so signal a victory as he did, which must have terminated in the violation of His own laws; and therefore they conclude that so kind and tender a father as Jephthah is represented would never have sacrificed an innocent, dutiful, and obedient child, as her whole carriage seems to denote her, in discharge of a rash and inconsiderate vow; especially when, according to the prescriptions of the law, he might have redeemed his daughter at a price so inconsiderable as ten shekels of silver." Can it be denied that these remarks have no legitimate claim upon attention? The unbiassed will probably acknowledge that they were not dictated by minds governed by prejudice and illogical tendencies, but purely by firm and conscientious principles. It is greatly to be regretted that religious controversies should engender so much rancour and strife among the several denominations professing Christianity. Even those who had mutually professed great love and respect have, after similar discussions, separated with feelings akin to the bitterest hatred. Much might be said upon the subject to confirm the oft-repeated passage, that

"Man, proud man,
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence—like an angry ape—
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep."

For the present I must cease further comment, and indulge in a hope that I may be permitted on some future occasion to enlarge upon the matter.

One of the characters chosen from the sacred writings by the Eastern Star Order is the daughter of Jephthah, as mentioned in a previous article. The submissive spirit evinced by her under trying circumstances excites the warmest praise, and affords an example upon which many will probably fail to reflect:—

THE FIRST POINT.

JEPHTHAH'S DAUGHTER, OR THE DAUGHTER'S DEGREE.
[The Symbol of the Veil.]

"She will not die as thief or murderer dies,
Whose fate but expiates his horrid crime;
She will not veil her pure and loving eyes
As fearing death, for her's is death sublime;
Lo, with determined heart and eye she stands,
Her face upturned towards celestial lands!"

The Scriptural illustration runs thus: "And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me; for I have opened my mouth unto the Lord and I cannot go back."

The point of the signet is coloured blue, the hue being allusively represented by the violet. The flower, from "its retired, shrinking nature," is regarded as being emblematical of the maiden. The sword and the veil are also illustrative of the character.

The lecture, which embraces an historical narrative of the Virgin, is delivered by the Instructor in this wise:—

"The structure of Freemasonry in its obligations and principles is peculiar, and we, as Master Masons, are taught to respect the binding force of a vow. Therefore, when we find in Bible history a person who submits to wrongs, to suffering, and death, to secure the sanctity of a vow, we seize upon that character as our own. We adopt or surround it with fraternal protection. We hail it as a Masonic character, and we claim whatever credit or honour may be associated with it. Such a character, forcibly delineated, we discover in the Book of Judges, under the title of Jephthah's Daughter; and we have so surrounded the sacrifice of that noble and heroic woman with emblems, legends, and tokens of recognition, as to make of it a section in Adoptive Masonry. The history of Jephthah's Daughter, as composing a degree of the Eastern Star, is thus given: Her father, Jephthah, was a resident of Mizpeh, in the mountains of Gilead, a warrior, and a man of decided personal character. Being called upon, in the extremity of his country's trials, to go at the head of its armies and resist the Ammorites, its enemies, he prepared his household for a campaign that would perhaps cost him his life, and then committed himself to the protection of God in solemn prayer. It was an age when religious knowledge was scanty, and man knew but little of his Maker's will. Jephthah thought to propitiate Deity by a vow, such as his forefathers had made when about to depart upon dangerous enterprises. And this is the record of his vow, as found in the 11th chapter of the Book of Judges: 'Jephthah uttered all his words before the Lord in Mizpeh. And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said: If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt-offering.' It is difficult to explain this vow. It has been conjectured that being a hunter in the mountains of Gilead, Jephthah was accustomed to be much absent from home, and that on his return from those expeditions he was often welcomed by the favourite lamb of his daughter; and that this fact was in his mind suggesting the object of sacrifice, should his present enterprise be crowned with success. This explanation is accepted as the best at our command. Jephthah went forth to battle, expecting, if victorious, to make a thank-offering to God of the pet lamb of his daughter. The victory was gained; and the warrior returned to Mizpeh, exalting in his success. God had redeemed his people. The thanks and praises of a grateful nation were showered upon his track. The loving father hastened home to enjoy the congratulations of his neighbours, and still more of his daughter—his only child. Arrived upon the hill which overlooked his dwelling, he halted, for now the full purport of his vow broke in upon his mind. The Lord had 'without fail delivered the children of Ammon into his hands;' he had returned in peace to his house, 'and whatever' came forth of the doors of his house to meet him must be the Lord's, to be offered up for a burnt-offering. It was but for a moment. The door opened as his eye painfully regarded it. It opened, and something came forth; not a pet lamb, not even a servant or a neighbour; but his daughter—his only child, the object in whom his very existence was bound up. 'Behold,' says the sacred narrative, 'his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances.' Jephthah rent his clothes, and in the anguish of his heart cried aloud, 'Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low. I have opened my mouth to the Lord, and I cannot go back.' Adah was a daughter in every way worthy of that warrior-sire—the mighty hunter of Gilead. Casting away the instruments of rejoicing, and changing the merry dance to solemn measures, she answered: 'My father, if thou has opened thy mouth unto the Lord, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth.' She had but one request to make, and she was ready for the sacrifice. She asked that she might go among the mountains for two months, and there, with the virgins of Israel, prepare her mind to meet in calmness and resignation her impending doom. The request was granted, and during two revolving moons the heroic woman joined in the hymns and prayers of her friends, with which the mountain caves of Gilead became vocal. When the two months had expired, and the day arrived which was to bring this sad affair to a close, a vast multitude gathered together to witness the event. Precisely as the sun came on the meridian she was seen, followed by a long train of her friends, winding their way down the mountain side, to the fatal spot where the altar was erected, and her father, with an almost broken heart, was standing prepared to fulfil his vow. She approached him, and with one long kiss of affection bade him farewell. Taking hold of the thick mourning veil which she wore, he drew it gently over her face, and drew his sword. But she rapidly unveiled herself, and said she needed not to have her face covered, for she was not afraid to die. Her father replied that he could not strike the blow while she looked upon him, and again cast it over her. She threw it off the second time, and turning from him said she would look up to the heavens, so that his hand should not be unnerved by the sight of her face, but that she would not consent to die in the dark. A third time, however, he insisted, and a third time she as resolutely cast it off; this time holding the ends of it firmly in her hands; and then, in hearing of the multitude, she solemnly declared that if this ceremony was insisted upon she would claim the protection of the law, and refuse the fate that otherwise she was willing to endure. She said it was the practice to cover the faces of murderers and criminals when they were about to be put to death; but for her part, she was no criminal, and died only to redeem her father's honour. Again she averred that she would cast her eyes upwards upon the source of light, and in that position she invited the fatal blow. It fell. Her gentle spirit mounted to the heavens, upon which her last gaze had been fixed; and so the deed was consummated which has rendered the name of Jephthah's Daughter for ever famous in the annals of Scripture. For hundreds of years, and even down to the time of Samuel, 'it was a custom in Israel that the daughters of Israel went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah, the Gileadite, four days in the year.' The colour blue alludes to the cerulean line of the mountains, in whose solitude Jephthah's daughter passed two months while preparing herself for death. The emblem of the sword reminds us of the instrument of her death. The sign alludes . . . The pass is used to recall the lamentable but glorious event to which the entire history of Jephthah's Daughter refers."

The following lines are intended as a tribute to the maiden:—

"See 'midst the multitude the victim stands!
Dauntless, serene, though terror palsies them!
And she must die by her own father's hands!
And she must die a sacrifice of shame!
Of shame? ah, no! she flings the veil abroad,
Once, twice, yea thrice; looks hopefully to God;
Fixes the noonday sun with earnest eyes,
Then crowned with innocence, the maiden dies!"

"Lament for Jephthah, ye who know his fate,
Weep and lament; 'Broken the beautiful rod,
And the strong staff; Mizpeh is desolate!
But for sweet Adah weep not; let the word
Be: 'Joy to the captive, freed from earthly dust,
Joy for one witness more to woman's trust,
And lasting honour, Mizpeh, be the strain
To her who died in light without a stain!"

The second point of the signet will be explained in the next paper. C. S.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Quarterly General Court of this Institution was held on Monday, 17th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. Symonds, V.P., was unanimously elected to fill the chair. There were present Bros. J. Hervey, G.S., V.P.; B. Head, H. Browse, T. Fenn, Major Creaton, F. Walters, J. R. Sheen, E. Cox, J. C. Parkinson, S. May, Raynham W. Stewart, and A. Pratt, V.P.'s; E. H. Patten, J. B. Moncton, W. Farnfield, Walker, H. Smith, Chadwick, A. H. Tattershall, W. Young, H. Massey, T. W. White, H. Empson, D. Rose, M. A. Loewenstark, J. L. Hime, J. Terry, R. J. Spiers, T. Barton, J. Weaver, J. Stevens, A. L. Codner, and others.

Bro. Binckes, the Secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting and the general meetings held monthly.

The minutes requiring confirmation were confirmed, and Bro. A. Perkins was unanimously re-elected Treasurer.

In addition to those already on the list, Bro. B. Head proposed, and Bro. Walters seconded, "That Bros. H. Massey, G. Smith, and T. Young be added to those who represent the Life and Annual Subscribers at the Committee meetings." (It was carried unanimously.)

Agreeably to notice previously given, Bro. Parkinson, V.P., P.M. 181, proposed, and Bro. Fenn seconded, "That Vice-Presidents being individual donors of fifty guineas each, shall have two votes for life, instead of one, for every additional five guineas contributed by them in one payment."

Bro. Parkinson's remarks and views are so much in accordance with our own that we give his speech in extenso. He said:

I rise with considerable diffidence to propose the resolution of which notice has been given; for I know I am in the presence of men who have devoted their energies and time to this Institution for years, and that their administration has been so pure and excellent as to have commanded the esteem and confidence of the entire Craft. I desire, in the first place, therefore, to thank those brethren, in the name of subscribers, who are, like myself, supremely satisfied with the internal management of our Charities; and who have nothing but gratitude to express for the self-denying labours by which that management is secured. It is not given to us all, brethren, to work in the same way; and though the absorbing character of my own avocations has made it impossible for me to act upon any of the Committees to which the Craft owes so much, my testimony to the admirable working of our Masonic Schools will not, I hope, be unacceptable when I tell you that it springs from independent observation, the results of which have been laid from time to time before the public. Through the friendship of the late Mr. Charles Dickens (who though not himself a Mason, took, let me tell you, a warm and ardent interest in the objects of the Craft), and by reason of the kindly sympathy of the editors of the Daily News, I have been permitted to bring the great merits of both our Girls' and Boys' School before the outer world, and, as I have been proud to learn (from correspondents in the four quarters of the globe, who are known to me only by name), with the happiest results. It is as one, therefore, whose interest in this Institution has been publicly testified and is of long standing, that I venture to address you now, and to ask your assent to an alteration in our laws, which though trivial in itself, affirms an important principle, and is calculated to augment our usefulness by increasing our means. In a word, brethren, I wish you to give further encouragement to members of our Order to become Vice-Presidents of this Institution, and to encourage Vice-Presidents to continue their benevolence. You know what that rank means—a substantial donation and a certain number of votes for life. I want you to give a small special privilege for sums of not less than £5 5s. subscribed in addition to that donation of fifty guineas; and I hope to prove to you that larger subscriptions, and more of them than our returns show at present, are not too much to expect from the circumstances in which we find the Craft to-day. Speaking always in round numbers, some forty thousand pounds are spent in Freemasonry every year in London alone, and with the exception of an independent sum of some seven thousand pounds which London contributes to the Masonic Charities, what have we to show for this vast amount? "Leather and prunella." Yes, brethren, Masonic millinery absorbs more money than Masonic charity. Ribbons and white leather, medals and laces, jewels, collars, aprons, silvering, gilding, and show, represent a far larger expenditure than we bestow upon either the succour of the orphan or the relief of the distressed. During the past twelve months, more than six thousand certificates were issued by the Grand Lodge of England; as a necessary consequence, more than six thousand aprons were bought; more than seven thousand pounds were spent in this one item of Masonic adornment, and this by the new blood brought into the Craft in a single year. It is unnecessary to multiply statistics. We all know that the two hundred Freemasons' lodges which flourish in London represent a heavy outlay; and we all know the direction in which that outlay goes. I would not have it diminished. I do not wish for one moment that any of the items I have quoted should be reduced. In all ages and among all civilised people the value of symbolism and the importance of emblems have been insisted on and felt. The insignia, the orders, and adornments of Freemasonry are the outward and visible signs of the solemn mysteries and great principles we unite together to preserve and to hand down unsullied to our successors. Experience proves the efficacy of our emblems in fostering emulation, and in making precept practice; and I am prepared to defend them as logically justifiable, wise, and sound, should they ever be assailed. It may be asked, however, if our symbolism has quite kept pace with our prosperity, and if, in particular, it has been adapted to our enlarged capacity for charity? It is plain that the Order devised and granted by the late Duke of Sussex, and having for its object the increase of the number of Stewards and Life Governors of our Boys' and Girls' Schools, has fulfilled its purpose admirably. That honourable testimonial is extensively worn; but I ask whether, in our altered circumstances, its scope might not be extended with advantage, and if the kind of stimulus which has been so effective in creating Life Governors might not be used for increasing the number of Vice-Presidents? But you may say it would not be cared for; it would fall short of its purpose. The zealous promoters of education do not need this form of encouragement. Brethren, there is no escape from this dilemma: either symbolism is useful, and should be adopted to the utmost; or it is useless, and should be altogether set aside. We don't give a corporal a good-service stripe, and tell him he must wear that and nothing else after he has won his commission. We don't tell a divine that, having acquired the right of wearing a Master's hood, there shall be no lawn for him if he comes to be a bishop. We don't say to the barrister, when we give him a silk gown, that he should not have ermine when he sits upon the bench. But in charitable Freemasonry we say, spend a comparatively small sum of money on the Charities; devote to them a small degree of labour and time, and you shall achieve honorary distinction; but devote five times the money, or time and labour, which, as in the case of our brother committee-men, are practically unlimited, and you shall achieve—nothing. Our repertory of distinction is exhausted. You may have, under certain circumstances, another stripe or two on your arm, but the corporal's uniform is the highest you can wear; your silk shall never give way to ermine; lawn sleeves are not for you. Observe, brethren, I confine myself purely to the Charities of our Order, and to those who serve them faithfully and devotedly in person and by purse. For the committee-men and Vice-Presidents of our Charities we have no symbol, and, up to this time, no special privilege in voting. In the matter of symbolism, I shall content myself on this occasion with having raised the question, and with hoping that some of the advisers of the Grand Master whom I see present, may think it worthy of consideration whether the example set by the Duke of Sussex should not be followed, and whether some modest insignia should not be devised for committee-men of a certain standing and for Vice-Presidents, which shall be to Life Governors and Past Stewards what the badges of the latter are to the rest of the Craft. With respect to the motion I have to propose, I believe it to be sound in principle, and in accord with justice and common sense. It is prospective in its operation; it will interfere with no man's rights. Its aim is to induce those who have already given freely to our Charities to give more, and to acknowledge their services in what will be, I submit, a graceful and appropriate way. Give your support, I pray you, brethren, to a motion which enforces the principle of recognition of service, which fosters a larger and wider interest in our Charities, and which, by creating an inducement to increased benevolence, may gladden many a widow's heart, and bring sunshine into many a shady place, by enabling us to still further relieve those who are desolate and oppressed.

After some discussion the motion was carried. The election of candidates was then proceeded with, and the result will be found in our advertisement columns.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

On Wednesday morning, the 12th inst., the Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire held their annual meeting in the Masonic Hall, South Parade, Huddersfield, under the presidency of Bro. Bentley Shaw, P.G.D. of England, D.P. G.M. of West Yorkshire. Most of the Prov. Grand Officers were present, and about 150 brethren from various parts of the province.

The preparatory lodge had been opened up to the third degree by the W.M. and officers of Lodge of Huddersfield, 290, and previous to the entering of the Prov. Grand Officers. Bro. Smith, P.M., called the attention of the brethren to a somewhat singular fact in the records of Masonry, viz., that the three principal chairs of the lodge were occupied by one family—Bros. J. L. Rhodes, W.M.; J. W. Rhodes, S.W.; and D. K. Rhodes, J.W.

The routine business of the Prov. Grand Lodge having been gone through, and the candidates to be supported at the forthcoming elections in the various Masonic charities agreed upon, the investment of the officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with.

The following brethren were among those invested:—Lieut-Colonel Harpin, of Holmfirth, P.S.G.W.; Henry Day, of Dewsbury, P.J.G.W.; Dr. Elliott, P.S.G.D.; Fred. Whitaker, P.J.G.D.; Jonas Craven, of Huddersfield, P.G. Registrar; Henry Smith, Wakefield, P.G. Secretary; Clarke, Bingley, P.G. Chaplain. Bro. C. Oldroyd was unanimously re-elected P.G. Treasurer.

A petition for relief was received and attended to, and after a communication from the Secretary of the Masonic Institution for Boys had been read, the lodge was closed.

A banquet afterwards took place in the banqueting-room.

Masonic Miscellanea.

WE are informed that our distinguished Bro. W. Romaine Callender, jun., D.P.G.M. East Lancashire, has accepted the office of Intendant-General of the Red Cross Order for South Lancashire.

A NEW conclave of the Red Cross Order, to be named the "Hydaspes," No. 53, is about to be opened at Lahore, with Bro. Walter Adlard, P.M., D.G.W., as first M.P.S.

A charter has been granted for a conclave at Detroit, Michigan, U.S.A.; it is named "Michigan," and numbered as 54 on the roll. Bro. D. B. Tracy, 33°, is the first M.P.S.

FREEMASONS' LIFE BOAT.—In last week's issue, in the list of subscriptions for the above object, Bro. Hind, 141 (2nd sub.), should have been 10s. 6d. instead of 2s. 6d., and Lodge of Harmony, 372, £1 was omitted.

THE Fifteen Sections will be worked in the Camden Lodge of Instruction, held at Bro. Vinall's, Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, on Monday next, the 24th inst., at seven o'clock precisely. Bro. T. A. Adams, P.M. and Preceptor, will be in the chair. Any brother in search of Masonic information will have a great treat, as the sections will all be worked by first-class Masons.

UNITED STRENGTH LODGE OF INSTRUCTION No. 228.—This—one of the oldest lodges of instruction in existence—meets every Wednesday at the Bull and Gate, Kentish Town-road, under the guidance of Bro. J. N. Frost, one of the ablest Preceptors of the present day. The Fifteen Sections will be worked on Wednesday next, the 26th inst., when no doubt a large number of brethren will be present, as, from the many well-known P.M.'s who have promised to assist, a great treat may be expected. Bro. Frost will take the chair at seven o'clock.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—The last meeting of the session of this old, flourishing, and prosperous lodge was held on Tuesday, the 18th inst., at the Bridge House Hotel, Wellington-street, Southwark. Punctually at half-past five o'clock p.m. the lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, who was supported by Bros. G. Free, S.W.; G. J. Grace, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M., Treas.; S. Harman, J.D.; Gomme, I.G.; F. Walters, P.M.; D. Rose, P.M.; and many of the brethren. The only work which presented itself after the minutes had been read and confirmed was raising Bro. Dr. Arthur Lloyd to the third degree, which the W.M. did in an excellent manner. Bro. D. Rose, P.M., agreeable to his previous notice of motion, proposed, and Bro. F. Walters, P.M., seconded, "That ten guineas be voted from the lodge funds, and be given to the Girls' School in the name of the next senior officer of the lodge (for the time being) who is not a Life Governor, and that it be placed on the list of the W.M., who represents the lodge as its Steward at the forthcoming festival," which was carried unanimously. The petition of a poor brother, who was once a member of this lodge, was signed, recommending him for relief at the Lodge of Benevolence. The petition for a new lodge to be held at Acton was recommended by the lodge. Bro. F. Walters gave the following notice of motion: "That all the by-laws be revised, and a new set be formed." Some formal business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed until the third Tuesday in October. The usual banquet followed, served up under the superintendence of Mr. J. Spencer, who, as usual with him, did all he could to promote the comfort of all present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, Bro. J. T. Moss replying for the visitors and Bro. F. Walters for the P.M.'s. The usual pleasant evening was agreeably spent, and the brethren separated. Visitors: Bros. Dr. Goldsboro, P.P.S.G.W. North Wales and Shropshire; J. T. Moss, P.G.S. Middlesex, P.M. 169, W.M. 1326; J. Hills, W.M. 157; Verey, &c.

Bedford Lodge, No. 157.—The usual meeting of this old lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, the 14th inst., Bro. J. Hills, W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. W. Holland, S.W.; J. Brander, S.D.; J. Twigg, J.D.; J. W. Selby, I.G.; G. Brown, P.M.; Levander, P.M.; Treas.; S. Millis, P.M.; T. Cubitt, P.M.; &c. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed nem. con., the ballots for initiates were taken separately, and proved unanimously in favour of their admission. Bro. G. Brown, P.M., took the chair, and in his usual good style initiated his friend, Mr. H. Sach, into Freemasonry. Some other business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed. Banquet and dessert followed, some good songs being sung and the regular toasts given, when the brethren separated at an early hour. Visitors: Bros. J. R. Goode, 49, and F. Walters, W.M. 1309 and P.M. 73.

Royal Albert Lodge, No. 907.—The installation meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Monday, the 17th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. the Rev. J. M. Vaughan, W.M., presided, supported by his officers and Bros. Lewis, P.G.P., P.M.; J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M.; W. H. Farnfield, P.M.; J. Farnfield, P.M.; H. T. Lewis, P.M.; C. Chard, P.M.; and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and the report of the Audit Committee was read and unanimously adopted. The work done, and which was rendered in an admirable manner, was raising Bros. Crane and Black to the third degree, and passing Bros. Moore, Sandwell, and Poulard to the second degree, the candidates for initiation not being present. Bro. Thomas Morton, S.W., was duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year, and he appointed and invested as his officers: Bros. Dennis, S.W.; Miller, J.W.; J. Smith, P.G.P., Treas. (re-invested); W. H. Farnfield, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); Rev. J. M. Vaughan, I.P.M., Chap.; Sandle, S.D.; Flatow, J.D.; Moore, I.G.; Griffiths, D.C.; and Gilchrist, P.M., Tyler. The addresses were given, one by the Installing Master and the others by Past Masters of the lodge. On the motion of Bro. H. T. Lewis, P.M., and duly seconded, it was resolved "That the initiation fee be £10 10s. on and after the October meeting next," and it was carried unanimously. Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., and Treas., proposed, and it was seconded, "That a chapter be attached to this lodge, to be named 'The Royal Albert Chapter,'" which was carried unanimously. Some other business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed. The usual superior banquet and dessert were served, and the customary toasts were given. Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., and Treas., proposed "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. the Rev. J. M. Vaughan," in an excellent manner, and in the name of the lodge, presented him with a handsome P.M.'s jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him. He also said that, as Bro. Vaughan would have to visit Grand Lodge, he would require a Past Master's collar and jewel, and he felt great pleasure in investing him with the collar and jewel which was presented to him by the members of the lodge. Bro. the Rev. J. M. Vaughan, in a suitable reply, acknowledged the presents. Bro. F. Walters responded for the visitors, and Bro. J. Farnfield, P.M., for the Past Masters. The lodge intends sending six of its members as Stewards to the Girls' School. The indefatigable Chaplain went round with his list, and had the gratification of announcing that he had £106 placed on it, and when the other Stewards unite their lists with his, no doubt a handsome sum will be realised for the Girls'

School. Some good songs were sung, and after a few hours of pleasant enjoyment, the brethren separated. The visitors were Bros. F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1307; H. Mosely, P.M. 554; C. J. Green, J.W. 256; S. Davis, 507; F. Roberts, 79; J. C. Hall, 190; &c.

Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216.—This lodge met at the headquarters of the First Surrey Rifles, Brunswick-road, Camberwell, on Wednesday, the 12th inst. In consequence of business connected with the corps in reference to the late Easter review and other matters, the attendance was not so numerous as is usual. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. James Stevens, P.M., supported by Bros. Thomas Meggy, P.M.; John Thomas, P.M., as S.W.; S. H. Wagstaff, J.W.; Dr. Eugene Cronin, Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; G. H. N. Bridges, J.D.; J. H. Hastie, D.C.; W. Messenger, I.G.; and Bros. Alfred Williams, H. Hammond, A. Wolton, T. W. Cannell, M. S. Larlham, A. Kethro, and visitor Bro. Wadybank, of the Burgoyne Lodge. The candidates not being in attendance, the lodge was opened in the second degree, and a portion of the sections of that lecture was worked. The lodge being closed to the first degree, the elections for the ensuing year were proceeded with, and Bro. Wagstaff, J.W. (Bro. Dubois, S.W., having declined promotion), was unanimously elected W.M. Bro. Dr. Cronin was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Grant was also re-elected as Tyler. A P.M.'s jewel of the value of ten guineas was voted to the retiring W.M., Bro. James Stevens, in terms of cordial acknowledgment, for the services he had rendered as founder of the lodge, and subsequently as Presiding Officer. A donation of five guineas from the Charity Fund, to supplement the individual subscriptions made by the members in the name of the lodge, was voted to the list of Bro. Meggy, P.M., who will represent the Macdonald Lodge at the ensuing festival of the Girls' Masonic School. All business being ended, the lodge was closed, and the brethren proceeded to refreshment. The proceedings terminated at the customary hour of eleven by the Tyler's toast, and the brethren then separated. The ensuing installation meeting is appointed for Wednesday, the 10th May.

St. John of Wapping Lodge, No. 1306.—The first anniversary of this flourishing and well-established lodge was held at the Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, on Wednesday, the 12th inst. Punctually at 4 p.m. the lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Mann. The report of the committee was read, and it showed that after every liability was discharged, the furniture paid for, and Grand Lodge dues fully paid up, a large balance was in the hands of the Treasurer. Ballots proving unanimous in favour of Messrs. H. Townsend, R. Garrett, J. Catchpole, and T. Griffiths, they were introduced separately, and, in a faultless manner, duly initiated into Freemasonry. Bro. W. Bartlett, S.W. and W.M.-elect, was presented to the W.M. for installation. That ceremony was well done, and Bro. Bartlett appointed and invested the following brethren as his officers, viz: Bro. W. Mann, I.P.M., Treas.; Rev. R. Gordon, Chap.; D. D. Beck, S.W.; Dawson, P.M., J.W.; H. Fountain, Sec.; W. Beck, S.D.; J. Maud, J.D.; E. W. Frost, I.G.; A. W. Coleman, Org.; J. Pearson, W.S.; Longstaff, Tyler (re-invested). Bro. Mortlock, P.M., gave the addresses in his usual masterly manner. The appointment of the officers seemed to give universal satisfaction, for a hearty burst of applause greeted each appointment, and no one exceeded in popularity Bros. W. Mann, P.M. and Treas., and D. D. Beck, S.W., whose investitures elicited strong marks of approval, both being such popular members and most deservedly so, as they have done such good suit and service to the lodge. Bro. H. Carpenter, P.M., having declined to accept the office of Secretary for a second year, it was unanimously agreed to present him with an honorary membership of the lodge in consideration of the great and arduous duties rendered to the lodge as its first Secretary; which he accepted, and in an appropriate speech acknowledged the great honour conferred upon him. It was decided to present the testimonial to Bro. W. Mann, I.P.M. and Treas., at the next meeting, ten guineas having been unanimously voted from the lodge funds for that purpose, and it was supplemented by a large amount contributed voluntarily by the members. The usual routine business followed, and the lodge was closed. The banquet was then served under the personal superintendence of the host and his son, who were unremitting in their attentions to please every one. It was a good banquet and well served, and gave universal satisfaction; dessert followed. Programmes of music, toasts, &c. having been presented to each brother, the pleasures of the evening were enhanced by the excellent singing of Bros. Coard, Frost, Fountain, Willets, Mortlock, and Catchpole; Bro. Coleman presiding at the pianoforte. The usual toasts were given and responded to.—Bro. F. Walters replied for the visitors in his usual happy style.—The initiates each responded to their toast.—After a few hours most agreeably spent, the brethren separated, well pleased with the happy reunion of this well-established lodge.—It was mentioned in the course of the evening that in addition to paying for furniture, &c., that this lodge had given £10 to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, showing a determination to do all they can to support those excellent Institutions, the Masonic charities.—There were present, besides those named, Bros. W. Boore, E. Ramsay, T. Willet, R. Denny, H. T. Hardy, J. W. Jackson, J. McDougall, H. Townsend, T. Griffiths, T. Williams, R. Garrett, J. C. Holt, R. Hayward, &c. Visitors: Bros. F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; G. Simpson, S.W. 93 (S.C.); H. Hastelov, P.M. 101; C. Lacey, P.M. 174; G. Henley, 186; T. Scotcher, P.M. 55; T. Mortlock, P.M. 186; H. Coard, S.D. 554; J. Hood, J.D. 554, &c.

PROVINCIAL.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—The brethren of this lodge assembled for their usual monthly meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 5th instant, when the minutes of the last regular lodge and of an emergency meeting having been read and confirmed, a F.C.'s lodge was opened, and Bro. Samuel Cleaver was examined, after which he was raised to the degree of M.M., the ceremony being performed by the Prov. G.M. Bro. Kelly, assisted by Bro. Charles Johnson, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W. Jersey, on the organ. On the conclusion of the traditional narrative, Bro. Toller, P.M. and P.G. Sec., gave the explanation of the tracing-board and the working tools. The Secretary read a letter from Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.G. Sec. Cornwall, acknowledging his sense of the honour done him by the lodge in unanimously electing him, at the last meeting, an honorary member. The P.G.M. reported that he had received from Bro. Hughan another donation to the library of the hall, in addition to his previous valuable presents of Masonic works. The I.P.M. of the lodge, Bro. W. E. S. Stanley, M.R.C.S., tendered his resignation as a member, he being about to emigrate to Kansas, U.S., which was accepted with regret, the P.G.M. and W.M. expressing their own and the brethren's best wishes for the health, happiness, and prosperity of Bro. Stanley in his future home. Grand Lodge certificates were delivered to those who were present out of twenty brethren initiated, passed, and raised in the lodge during the preceding year. The business of the evening being concluded, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. In addition to the W.M., Bro. Stretton, P.P.G. Reg., who presided, there were present: Bros. Kelly, P.G.M. and P.M.; Stanley, M.R.C.S., I.P.M.; Weare, P.M. and Treas.; Clarke, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W.; Widdowson, Sec.; Palmer, S.D.; Smith, J.D.; Halford, I.G.; M'Allister, Porter, Captain Goodchild, Blankley, Shuttlewood, Statham, Elwood, Cleaver, Edwards, Wilkinson, and Bembridge and Dunn, Tylers. Visitors: Bros. Richard Massey, Sec. 614; R. Hawkes, 103; and Buzzard, W.M.; Toller, P.M.; Charles Johnson, P.M.; Sculthorpe, S.W.; and Partridge, S.D. of No. 523.

TWICKENHAM, MIDDLESEX.—Strawberry Hill Lodge, No. 946.—This lodge held its installation meeting at the Grotto Hotel, Twickenham, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., when Bro. Whitley, the Master-elect, was installed by W. Bro. W. Smeed, P.M., Prov. A.G.D.C. Middlesex, whose working was so excellent as to elicit warm encomiums from Bros. J. Coutts, A.G. Purs.; R. Wentworth Little, Prov. G. Sec.; T. H. Pulsford, P.M. 1158; and other well-known judges of Masonic work, who were present. Several other ceremonies were rendered, and after the labours of the lodge, the brethren sat down to a magnificent banquet, provided by Bro. Bendy, S.W. 788, the worthy host. A most enjoyable evening was spent, and the hospitable reception experienced by the visitors will not readily fade from their recollection. We regret being unable to furnish all the names of those present, but may mention Bros. J. M. Stedwell, P.M., P. Prov. G.W. Middlesex; W. Platt, P.M. Sec.; T. W. M'Ilwham, P.M., Prov. G.S.B. Middlesex; E. Hopgood, P.M.; H. J. Smith, P.M.; R. Gurney, W.M. 788; and E. Sweasy. About five-and-thirty sat down to dinner.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge, No. 1094.—This lodge assembled at the Masonic Temple, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., at three o'clock, for the purpose of installing Bro. D. W. Winstanley in the chair of King Solomon. There was a good attendance of members and visitors, amongst the latter were Bros. G. Turner, P.M. 86; Skief, P.G.O. W.M. 216; Clegg, J.W. 1299; J. R. Robinson, 1013; Lowe, W.M. 1013; Hughes, 249; Hamer, P.G.T.; P. Pennington, P.M. 249; &c. The lodge having been opened by the W. Master, Bro. Thomas Marsh, P.M., P.G.A.D.C., P.G.S.B., assisted by his officers—Bros. Winstanley, S.W.; Dawson, J.W.; Wood, Treas.; Sweeting, Sec.; H. Pearson, S.D.; R. B. Martin, J.D.; R. Washington, as I.G.; Pickup and Gibson, Stewards; Deacon, Organist; Crane, Johnson, Smith, and Sheldon, P.M.'s; &c. Ballots were taken for Messrs. M'Lean, Duff, and Walters, who were initiated into Freemasonry, after which the lodge was opened in the second degree, when the W.M.-elect was presented by Bro. Crane, P.M., to Bro. Marsh, the W.M. and Installing Master, who performed the ceremonials of installation and delivered the charges in a most agreeable and efficient manner. On the completion of the installation, the W.M., Bro. Winstanley, was saluted with the customary honours, and the solemn service was much enhanced by the appropriate music that was performed by Bro. Joseph Skief, P.G.O. The following officers received collars: Bros. March, P.M.; Dawson, S.D.; Gilbert, J.D.; March, Sec.; J. Wood, Treas. (for the sixth time); Sweeting, S.D.; R. Martin, J.D.; Gibson, I.G.; J. Deacon, Org.; Richard Washington, M.C.; A. Pickup and J. C. Yelland, Stewards; and P. Ball, Tyler. After which the lodge was closed, and after an excellent banquet the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the brethren separated.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Macdonald Lodge, No. 104.—This lodge held a regular meeting at the Headquarters of the First Surrey Rifles, at Camberwell, on Saturday, the 15th inst., when there were present V.W. Bro. James Stevens, G.J.O., W.M.; V.W. Bro. Thomas Meggy, P.G.M.O., as J.W.; Bro. Dr. Eugene Cronin, S.W.; W. Bro. C. Hammerton, M.O. and Sec.; Bros. T. W. White, as S.O.; A. Wolton, J.O.; R. Berridge, S.D.; W. Worrell, Reg. of Marks and Organist; G. Newman, I.G.; C. Fountain, Steward; Alfred Williams, C. Dean, W. J. Messenger, &c. The visitor was Bro. J. B. Johnson, of the Zaradatha Lodge, Bombay. The lodge having been duly opened, Bro. Major E. H. Finney was unanimously elected a joining member, and took his seat in the lodge. Ballots were then taken for Bros. E. H. Finney, jun., and W. M. Newton, and being found clear, those brethren were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Masters with perfect ceremony and the usual musical accompaniment, for which this lodge is celebrated. The W.M. then delivered the lecture of the degree, with which the brethren expressed their gratification. Bro. Dr. Cronin was unanimously elected as W.M. for the ensuing year. V.W. Bro. F. Binckes, Grand Sec., as Treas.; and Bro. Grant was re-elected Tyler. A P.M. jewel was voted to the retiring Master, the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, G.J.O. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, terminating a very instructive and agreeable evening with the Tyler's toast, and separating in hopeful anticipation of a successful installation meeting on the 10th June next.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

METROPOLITAN.

Plantagenet Conclave, No. 2.—The enthronement meeting of this conclave was held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, on Monday, the 17th inst., and was numerously attended. After the conclave had been opened, Sir Kt. James Lewis Thomas was inducted into the chair of Constantine, and ballots having been taken for several candidates, Bros. Raymond H. Thrupp, W. T. Hall, and T. R. Parker were regularly installed as Knights of the Order. Sir Kt. G. S. States was then obligated and placed in the Viceroy's chair, the other officers appointed being Sir Kts. C. Parker Ward, M.D., Sen. Gen.; Major E. Hamilton Finney, Jun. Gen.; R. Wentworth Little, H.P.; T. Cubitt, Treas.; J. G. Marsh, Rec.; G. A. Ibbetson, Prefect; F. G. Bailey, S.B.; C. Hammerton, Herald; H. Parker, Org.; E. H. Finney, S.S.; T. W. White, Aide-de-Camp. The installation, visitors', and associates' fees were, pursuant to notice, increased, and the question of the adoption of the tunic by the conclave, as also the device of the "Plantagenista," was referred to a committee of five. The conclave was then closed, and the knights adjourned to the refectory, where a bountiful and choice banquet was served. In the course of the evening the M.P.S. gave the usual loyal and chivalric toasts, which were all heartily received. A Past Sovereign's jewel was presented to Sir Kt. D. R. Still, the Immediate P.S., in recognition of his services and courteous demeanour at all times, and that worthy knight expressed his thanks briefly, but to the purpose. E. Sir Kt. John Boyd, P. Sov., proposed the Sovereign's health, and dwelt at some length upon the many merits of Sir Kt. Thomas, who, he said, was so eminently qualified to preside over the conclave. Sir Kt. Thomas replied in acknowledgment of the compliment. The "newly-installed companions-in-arms" also returned thanks to the toast of their health, and Sir Kts. W. B. Johnston, of St. Andrew's Conclave, No. 15, and G. F. Henley, of the Rose and Lily Conclave, No. 3, responded for the visitors.

Rose and Lily Conclave, No. 3.—This conclave held its fourth anniversary meeting at the Masons' Hall, Mason's-avenue, on Saturday, the 15th inst., when the M.P.S.-elect, Sir Kt. W. Mann, was enthroned, the ceremony being performed by Sir Kt. Little, G.R. Bros. John Webb and George F. Henley were then admitted, received, constituted, and installed Knights of the ancient confraternity of the Red Cross. The M.P.S. then invested the officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Sir Kts. G. Kenning, Viceroy (elected); J. W. Dawson, S.G.; D. D. Beck, J.G.; J. McKiernan, H.P.; C. A. Cottebrune, P. Sov., Treas. (elected); M. Edwards, Rec.; D. Bliss, Prefect; G. F. Henley, S.B.; J. Webb, Herald; and J. Gilchrist, Sentinel. The conclave having been duly closed, the knights sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by Br. Chas. Gosden, in the splendid style for which his establishment is now famed. The visitors were Sir Kts. F. Walters, P. Sov. 3, an ex-member, and C. Parker Ward, of No. 2. During the evening several good songs were sung by Sir Kts. Henley, Dawson, and others present, and all were highly pleased with the entire proceedings. This conclave, which had somewhat languished after its removal from Richmond, is now becoming more prosperous, five members having been installed at the last two meetings; and under the able guidance of so good a Mason as Bro. Mann, and with the valuable assistance of Bro. Cottebrune—both being widely known and talented brethren—it is likely to attain a position second to none.

PROVINCIAL.

SURREY.—St. George's Conclave, No. 18.—This conclave met at the Palmerston Arms, Grosvenor Park, Camberwell, on Thursday, the 6th inst., when Bro. Sir Kt. J. Thomas, P.M., P.Z., P.G.D.C. of the Grand R.A. Chapter of England, and M.P.S.-elect, was duly enthroned in the seat of Constantine by the G.R., Bro. Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little, who was assisted by Bro. Sir Kt. Marsh, G.A. The Viceroy-elect, Bro. Horatio J. Wright, was unable to attend; but the Treas. (C. A. Marshall), the Rec. (E. Shaughnessy), the Prefect (T. Catherwood), and the S.B. (B. Robards) were present, amongst others. Illness precluded the attendance of the respected Past Sov., H. Thompson, and several other Sir Kts. were also unavoidably absent owing to the time of meeting being the night before Good Friday. After the investiture of the officers, the conclave was closed, and after slight refreshment, the Sir Kts. separated.

LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave, No. 44.—A meeting of this newly-established conclave was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, 12th inst., for the installation of a further number of the many candidates on the books. There were present Sir Kts. W. Kelly, M.P.S., and Intendant-General of Leicestershire and Rutland, on the throne; Rev. William Langley, V.E.; Geo. Toller, S.G., as J.G.; Partridge, Rec.; Sculthorpe, Treasurer; Baines, Prefect; Duncombe, Standard-bearer; Deane, Herald; Bembridge, Sentinel. Visitors: Sir Knights Horrocks and Belcher, of the Rose of Sharon Conclave, Birmingham, the former of whom kindly officiated as S.G., and the latter most efficiently presided at the organ during the ceremony. A ballot was taken for Bros. C. A. Spencer, of No. 523, Leicester, and Capt. John Bailey, of No. 1265, Oakham, who were duly elected. Bro. Earl Ferrers and six other candidates were down for installation on this occasion, only three of whom were, however, able to be present, viz., Bros. Buzzard, W.M. 523; Amott, 1007; and Shuttlewood, of 279; who were regularly installed as Knights of the Order by the M.P.S., who gave the several charges. On the conclusion of the ceremony the historical oration was delivered by the Rev. Sir Knight Langley, V.E.; the M.P.S. gave the address illustrative of the jewel, the tunic, and the sword, as representing the three great watchwords of the Order; and Sir Kt. Toller, in the absence from indisposition of Sir Kt. Haycroft, D.D., gave the lecture appropriated to the High Prelate. Several propositions having been made, the Conclave was closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to refreshment. An invitation was given to the members to visit the Rose of Sharon Conclave, Birmingham, which several Sir Kts. accepted, with thanks for the courteous assistance rendered by its members to No. 44.

GALVANISM.—Pulvermacher's Monthly Record of Cures is now ready for the benefit of Sufferers, containing documentary evidence of remarkable Cures effected by Pulvermacher's Improved Patent Self-applicable Volta-Electric Chain-Bands and Pocket Batteries, and may be had on application to the Sole Inventor and Patentee—J. L. Pulvermacher, 200, Regent-street, London, W. A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution.—Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Windy Weather.—Throughout the spring, and sometimes far into the summer, the keen easterly winds sorely test the weakened, the rheumatic and the neuralgic. To subdue the first indications of these maladies, Holloway's well-known remedies should be applied at once; each day's neglect makes the treatment more difficult and the issue more dangerous. These Pills throw off all impurities, clear the lungs, regulate the circulation, and overcome inflammatory tendencies; and the Ointment well rubbed in near the affected part, checks all erroneous action, draws all surplus blood which is creating mischief to the surface, and gets rid of it by increasing the capillary circulation of the skin and augmenting its exhalations.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nutritious matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

The Freemason

is now the accepted organ of the Brotherhood in the United Kingdom, and also enjoys an extensive sale in the colonies and foreign parts, its advantages as an advertising medium can scarcely be overrated.

The ANCIENT and ACCEPTED RITE.

[THIRD ARTICLE.]

At the request of several readers, we resume our synopsis of the higher degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite. Having left off at the Rose Croix, or 18°, we have now to consider the "Historical and Philosophical" degrees—the first of which is called the "Grand Pontiff," and ranks as 19° in the series. By many these grades are considered the most important of the Rite, although, to our judgment, nothing can surpass the beauty and solemnity of the Rose Croix, when properly rendered and with all the requisite surroundings complete.

However, in the 19° the candidate still advances in the holy work of constructing the Third Temple, "as taught in the preceding degree, and with the hope and endeavour to make the world a Temple fit for the dwelling-place of the G.A.O.T.U." The degree itself is founded upon certain apocalyptic mysteries appertaining to the New Jerusalem; it rests upon the three characteristic virtues taught in the Eighteenth degree, and proclaims the Alpha and Omega. There is more than a tinge of Rosicrucianism in the language of this degree, and a mediæval odour pervades its entire ceremonial. For instance, upon investing the candidate, the Thrice Potent or Presiding

Officer thus addresses him: "This robe of white linen with which I now invest you is emblematical of that equity and purity which should characterize one who is consecrated to the service of Truth; and reminds us also of the vesture of the one hundred forty and four thousand who refused to wear the mark of the beast on their foreheads; for it is so written, 'They shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy; he that overcometh the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the Book of Life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before His angels.'"

From the Pontifical dignity we pass to the 20°, which is known by the high-sounding designation of "Grand Master of all Symbolic Lodges, or Master ad vitam." The power confided to a member of this degree is, however, purely imaginary, as our readers may well suppose, it not being claimed or exercised even in countries where the Rite prevails. In this degree there is a fine explanation of the figurative sense in which these lofty titles are to be understood, and we therefore place it before our readers: "The Knight with us, is he who devotes his hand, his heart, his brain to the science of Masonry, and professes himself the sworn servant of Truth. The Prince is he who aims to be chief (princeps)—first or leader—among his equals, in virtue and good deeds. The Sovereign is he who, one of an order whose members are all sovereigns, is supreme only because the law and constitutions are so which he administers, and by which he, like every brother, is governed. The titles, Puissant, Potent, Wise, and Venerable, indicate that power of virtue, intelligence, and wisdom, which those ought to strive to attain who are placed in high office by the suffrages of their brethren; and all our other titles and designations have an esoteric meaning, consistent with modesty and equality, and which those who receive them should fully understand."

The next degree is called the "Noachite or Prussian Knight," the legend of which is exceedingly curious and instructive. It narrates the history of Peleg, or Phaleg, the architect of the Tower of Babel, who, after the confusion of tongues which scattered the workmen, is said to have betaken himself to the vast solitudes of Northern Germany, in what is now called the Kingdom of Prussia, where he built a temple in the form of a Delta, led a life of great austerity, and at last obtained pardon for his sins of vain glory and pride. The tradition also gives us an account of the organization of the Prussian Knights after the Crusades, when they became known as the Holy Vehme—that mysterious and terrible order before whose edicts even monarchs trembled. They assumed the name of "Noachites," "because they strove to imitate the primeval justice and purity of the beloved Patriarch." Meetings of this grade are held only on the nights of the full moon—no other light being allowed at receptions, a custom said to be derived from the mysteries of Ceres, and the old worship of Isis.

The next step presents to our view the "Knight of the Royal Axe, or Prince of Libanus," the twenty-second degree, and the principal doctrine or axiom laid down appears to be that "labour is honourable." The 23°, or "Chief of the Tabernacle," is a kind of introduction to the 24°, which is styled "Prince of the Tabernacle." It represents the lodge in the wilderness, and is extremely interesting. Moses, Aaron, and his sons—Aholiab, Bezaleel, Caleb, and Joshua—are conspicuous figures in the ceremonies of these two degrees, which "illustrate the rite of the priests in the ancient Temple, and explain the esoteric meaning of their many avocations in equipping the Temple, and sustaining their various sacerdotal employments." The especial duties of a Prince of the Tabernacle are to labour incessantly for the glory of God, the honour of his country, and the happiness of his brethren.

Our attention is next attracted by the degree called "Knight of the Brazen Serpent," the 25°. It teaches the importance and absolute necessity of faith, of which the brazen cross and serpent are the symbols and signs. The philosophic teaching of this degree is of a very high order, as may be judged from the following extract:—"The Great First Cause has ever revealed itself by the Cross—the cross, that one composed of two, each of the two divided so that they constitute four; the cross, that key of the mysteries of India and Egypt, the tau of the patriarchs, the divine symbol of Osiris, the stauros of the Gnostic, the keystone of the Temple, the symbol of occult Masonry; the Cross, that central point of junction of the right angles of four infinite triangles; the four in one of the Divine tetragram."

When Domitian was Emperor of Rome, in the night of persecution when danger and death hung on their footsteps, the Christian Masons met in the catacombs—an assemblage of whom is represented in the next degree, the "Princes of Mercy," or "Scottish Trinitarians." In this grade we find by quotations from ancient religious theories, that the ternary or three-fold character of the Deity is alluded to in all. Thus the Hindoo speaks of the "three forms and aspects of the first, the supreme single, invisible God, cause of all phenomena, and soul of the world." The Persians refer to the coming in the fourth age of Sosiosch, the Saviour, who shall prepare the human race for the general resurrection. The Sabean mysteries taught that Mithras was three in one; the ancient Egyptians worshipped Amun-Re as the Supreme Triad—father, mother, and son. The Hebrew Kabbalists say that the Supreme has "three heads contained in one head"—Chochmah, wisdom; Binah, the mother of understanding; and Daeth, intellectual cognition. Maimonides, the great Rabbi, it may be observed, elucidates the ternary idea with peculiar brilliancy and erudition in his well-known commentaries. The colours worn by a Prince of Mercy symbolize the Masonic trinity—they are green, an emblem of wisdom; red, of power; and white, of harmony. We must now pause, leaving to a future occasion our remarks upon the remaining degrees. It will be seen that the Ancient and Accepted Rite possesses a philosophy peculiarly its own, and although we are not prepared to agree with some of the principles it advocates, it cannot be questioned that there is much to be learned in its secret rites by an earnest student of Masonic lore. Many of the apparently incongruous elements of the system, when defined and exemplified, prove parts of a well-considered whole, and many obscure allusions become clear when viewed in connection with the complete system. As, to paraphrase the words of the poet, "nothing that relates to Freemasonry can be foreign to us," and as many of our readers are interested in these sketches, we will continue the subject as soon as possible.

Mulum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

Our best thanks are due to those brethren who have clearly established the fact that the word "speculatyf," as applied to Freemasonry, is to be found in a MS. the date of which is admitted not to differ many years from 1490. One step in advance has thus been won on behalf of those who consider that early Freemasonry (though very different from that of the present day) still contained within itself, so to speak, the germ of much that now-a-days has been developed into something better and more extensive than of yore; but still not different, in its fundamental principles, from that of which every earnest brother should set himself lovingly and teachably to disentangle the primitive elements.

I venture, with some diffidence, to call attention to a curious statement, which, if it can be verified, will, in my judgment, afford a not unimportant corroboration of the early existence of a Society banded together for something more than the mere "securing of bread and butter."

In the Book of Constitutions, edit. 1738, page 70, it is stated that in 1350 "John de Spoulee, call'd Master of the Ghiblim," rebuilt St. George's chapel. Bro. Findel (Hist., p. 91) quotes the same title for this architect (spelling it "Giblim").

Now, I want to know if there be any historical evidence that masons were actually called "Ghiblim" in 1350. If this be the case (and it is not Bro. Findel's habit to endorse or adapt more than he feels to be proved, concerning the ancient Freemasons), then it seems to me perfectly fair to argue that a mere trades-union, devoid of any element of what we understand by "speculatyf" mingling with their "chapters and congregacions," would have been most unlikely to have gone to the Hebrew language to find for themselves a title.

P. H. NEWNHAM.

In a recent communication which I have received from an esteemed Past Senior Grand Deacon of the Grand Lodge of England he referred to the tau and the cross as being symbols formerly used in Egypt, and happening to mention the subject to a diligent student of ancient mythologies, he sent me the following remarks, which may prove interesting to some of your readers.

R. W. L.

THE THREE TAUS.

In the old Hebrew alphabet the  $\tau$ , Thau was originally in the form of a cross. The tau or T is the last letter, and in conjunction with A answers to the alpha and omega of the Greeks, i.e., the first and the last. As the D and T are interchangeable, hence we find A D as in Adam, Adonis &c. In the science of astronomy the cross stands for the equinoxes; in both cases this symbol represented the year's commencement and end. The sacred year began at the autumn equinox, and the civil year at the vernal. The autumn cross represented death, when vegetation is under the destructive principle, and life, in the vernal when vegetation is renewed; hence the idea of the cross representing life and death. Among the Scandinavians and Germans this idea was represented under the form of Thor's hammer, by which he produced and changed all things. The ancient British cross was a tree bared of its branches. As Thoth of the Egyptians is the same with the German Thor, both in the physical represented the sun. The Egyptian  $\tau$ , Thoth, gives us the Greek  $\theta$ eos, Theos, as the Greeks invariably change the oth terminate of the Chaldees to as, and the Latins to us; hence their deus, the latter changing the Th prefix to d. Thoth is also represented by an I or obelisk or pillar, or column, as the name implies, on which were engraved the hieroglyphics. Thoth was also called Hermes, which means a heap of stones, and has reference to the temples covered over with the sacred writings as they are found in Egypt. Thoth was also called Trismegistis, i.e., thrice great, hence his symbol of the three taus to represent the beginning, the perfection, and decay of letters. The ancients never inserted their names to their writings, hence it is said that Thoth or Trismegistis was the inventor of letters. No doubt the term Word of God, or Theos, or Thoth, comes from this circumstance: Thoth was called Taut, and it is most probable that our word taught (to teach) is also derived from this source.

"From the time of Ruffius, of Socrates, and of Solomon," Dr. Clark states, "this triple hieroglyphic, the crux ansata, has occasionally exercised the ingenuity of the most learned scholars." The jewel of the Royal Arch among Freemasons is expressed by a sign consisting of three taus, joined by their feet at right angles, thus completing the monogram of Thoth, or Taut, the symbolical and mystical name of hidden wisdom, and of the Supreme Being among the ancient Egyptians—the  $\theta$ eos of the Greeks—sometimes as the sun in the lower hemisphere (see Jablonski i., 235); and hence we plainly see what is meant by an ancient patra with a knob in the bottom of it. The Greek Theta is another symbol of Thoth, as already stated, and is another form of the Lingam and the Zoni, like the Thoth or pillar of the generating power of nature. The phallus, which in Greek signifies a pole (hence our own May pole), is the same. The Theta and the T combined gives us the crux ansata. Sometimes it is represented by a cross fastened to a circle; sometimes with the letter T, surmounted by a circle. By the circle, says Kercher, is to be understood the Creator and Preserver of the world; as the wisdom derived from Him which directs and governs it, is signified by the T, the monogram, as he farther considers, of Mercury, Thoth or  $\phi$  T, Ptha. I am of opinion that the circle with a dot in the centre is meant to represent the feminine element or principle. As some asserted, the first principle was feminine, or darkness, which was called athur, that long eternal night out of whose womb all things originated, Jablonski deemed the crux ansata the same as the phallus, i.e., male principle. The T represents the three great ones in the moral, i.e., the man's virilities and the circle the female. The three great ones are also heat, light, and water; the latter feminine, hence mere, the sea or mother, the earth being surrounded by water, and the dot represents the earth in the circle. Another form of the feminine principle is the vesica so prevalent in church architecture, alluded to in Solomon's song, where he says, "O, my dove, thou art in the cleft of the rock." The term for dove in Hebrew is yone, and yone is the female organ in conjunction with the ling, i.e., male; hence the yone lingam of the Hindoos, which is a complete symbol of the universe. The earth, Brama; the water, Vishnou; and Siva, the sun or fire. The rim of the lingam is called the argha or ark, the pedestal in the centre is the mast of the ark or ship, which idea is carried out in our church steeples; the ling, or mast, and the church, the nave, from navis, a ship. This idea is further illustrated in the form of the church doors and windows—the entrance or opening of the door, female—the outside line, male. In Gothic architecture we have the three great ones represented in the form of a trefoil, or triangle, which in all cases when the point is upwards represents the male; when downwards, the female; when united, a conjunction of both. The sun and the earth is also represented by these symbols. The term pyr in pyramid signifies fire. Fire is masculine; for "God is a consuming fire," identical with Siva, whose symbol is fire. His wife, Parvati, is the earth. Of course there is a theological meaning to all this, but in general the theological meaning is too heavenly to be understood.

THE ORDER OF MISRAIM.

In the "Freemasons' Calendar for Ireland," 1848, compiled "under the sanction and by the authority of His Grace Augustus Frederick, Duke of Leinster, M.P., Ill. Sup. Head, and Most Worshipful Grand Master, and of the Right Worshipful the Grand Lodge of Ireland," at page 35, I find among the "Representatives of the Grand Council of Rites," under the head of "Order of Misraim, Dublin," the names of John Norman, Richard Wright, and William Woodhouse. Turning to page 37, I find under the same heading, in addition to the above names, those of the Duke of Leinster, Gd. Master, John Fowler, and W. Conolly. The Duke was, and is still, M.P.S.G. Commander 33°; Fowler was Lieut. Grand Commander; Norman, G. Sec., H.E.; Wright, G. Treas., H.E.; Conolly a K.H., and Woodhouse a Prince Mason of the Original Chapter 18°.

It is clear, therefore, that the Order of Mizraim, or Misraim, was recognised, not only by the S.G.C. 33° for Ireland, but by the Grand Lodge itself; as at page 42 it is stated "that this Grand Lodge strictly prohibits as unlawful all assemblies of Freemasons in Ireland, under any title whatsoever, purporting to be Masonic, not held by virtue of a Warrant or Constitution from this Grand Lodge, or from the other Masonic bodies recognised by, and acting in unison with, the Grand Lodge of Ireland."

At page 78 will also be found, under the heading of France, "Puissance Sup. de Misraim," Michel Bedarride, Grand Conservateur, and it may be added that Bedarride never merged his powers in those of the Grand Orient of France, although it is true that the latter body gave permission to its subordinate lodges to work the rite of Misraim, a privilege which they now exercise, or rather did before the late war turned French Masonry topsy-turvy.

In the "Irish Calendar" for 1858, at pages 39 and 40, the "Order of Mizraim" also figures—represented by the Duke of Leinster and W. Woodhouse. After this it is idle to contend that the Order of Misraim is a spurious rite.

VERITAS.

"A RENOWNED MASONIC AUTHOR."

In THE FREEMASON for March 11th, 1871, you allowed a letter to appear with the above heading, and signed "Veritas." I am sorry you permitted such an attack on Bro. Robert Macoy, of New York, to be circulated through the medium of your excellent Masonic journal, as you are thereby assisting to spread a very erroneous impression as to the merits of a much-respected and esteemed Masonic author.

I have refrained until now from noticing the letter complained of, because I hoped you would have editorially alluded to the unfortunate oversight.

To say that the statement by "Veritas" concerning my friend Bro. Macoy is untrue, would be like saying half the truth only, as he is not only the publisher of works of which he is the author, but also has assisted to a considerable extent in the production of other works in which his name does not appear. I much regret the insertion of such a letter in THE FREEMASON.

W. J. HUGHAN.

[We regret with our esteemed Bro. Hughan that the statement should have appeared, as Bro. Macoy's talents are quite as much valued by us as they can be by Bro. Hughan.—ED. F.]

THE P.M. OF THE MARK AND THE P.M. OF A CRAFT LODGE, ETC.

I have been interested in the discussion as to the pre-requisites for installation in a Mark Lodge, but do not think a sufficient reason has yet been offered for an alteration in the laws respecting installation for Mark Masonry.

"Another P.M." (FREEMASON April 15) has wisely directed attention to the "dispensing power expressly reserved to the Grand Master by the Book of Constitutions," and therefore when any lodge is so circumstanced as to feel the law requiring a W.M. of the Mark to have been previously installed a Master of a Craft Lodge a hardship, or impossible to obey without the re-election of Past Masters, the members have only to petition the M.W. the G.M.M. to secure a dispensation.

I feel persuaded that the lowering of the standard for installation would result in the dignity and honour of the Mark chair being less valued.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

In regard to the query of Bro. Carpenter in THE FREEMASON of last week, as to the O.B. to maintain the five points of fellowship before knowing what they are, permit me to say that, when I passed through the ordeal nearly a quarter of a century ago, I well weighed every word I was required to repeat, and refused to take that part of the O.B. without the requisite information. A compromise was at last effected by a promise on the part of the W.M. to release me from it, in case I should make any objection on subsequently receiving the explanation. I have often wondered that the same or a somewhat similar course has not been more commonly adopted. I fear that some have regarded it as a mere matter of form, which ought not to be, while on inquiry from others why they so readily uttered words which they could not understand, the reply has been that, from the experience previously gained in the former degrees, they have relied on the good faith of the Craft that nothing improper would be demanded.

A correspondent signing himself "Another P.M." remarks on the "inconvenience felt in Mark lodges being restricted in the choice of a W.M. to those brethren who have previously filled the chair of a Craft lodge." This has been experienced in my district; but there was no difficulty in obtaining a dispensation from the M.W. the G.M. As, however, according to the Book of Constitutions, a fee is to be paid for such a document, a change of the law in this respect appears desirable, and no doubt will in time be made.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

METROPOLITAN.

Mount Calvary Chapter.—A meeting of this chapter was held at Freemasons' Tavern, on Friday, the 14th inst., under the presidency of E. Bro. D. M. Dewar, M.W.S., assisted by his officers, Bros. G. Cockle, 30°, H.P.; F. Binckes, 30°, 1st G.; S. Rosenthal, 33°, 2nd G.; and several members and visitors, including Ill. Bro. J. M. P. Montague, 33°, Sec. Gen. H. E. Bros. W. Mann, P.M., and Dr. Williams, being in attendance, were received and perfected as Sovereign Princes Rose Croix H.R.D.M. The election of M.W.S. for the ensuing year resulted unanimously in favour of Bro. Cockle, H.P., and Bro. Paas was re-elected Treasurer. The chapter was then closed, and the brethren proceeded to the festive board.

PROVINCIAL.

Ipswich.—Victoria Sovereign Rose Croix Chapter.—A regular meeting of the Royal Victoria Rose + Chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Easter Monday, when the following distinguished brethren were present: Ill. Bro. Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 30°, M.W.S.; Ill. Bro. Capt. Phillips, Lieut. Grand Commander, S.G.C., 33°; Ill. Bro. J. M. P. Montagu, G. Sec. Genl. S.G.C.; Ill. Bro. S. Rosenthal, 33°, France; Henry Dubose, 30°; Ex. Bros. W. T. Westgate, 1st Genl.; G. S. Golding, 2nd Genl.; W. Cuckow, Raphael; Emra Holmes, 31°, Recorder; Dr. Beaumont, R.N.; Dr. Mills, Dr. Muir, Rev. G. W. Marwood, M.A., Prelate of Hilda Chapter; &c., &c. After the chapter had been opened in due and ancient form, the ballot was taken for the following brethren, amongst others not present, who were unanimously elected, and installed and perfected as S.P. Rose Croix: Bro. Phillip Cornell, W.M. British Union Lodge, 114; Bro. W. Warren, 60th Rifles, and Bro. Capt. Cotton, 27th Inniskillings, both of the British Union Lodge; Bros. Capt. Hales, Capt. Herring, and Pinwell, 27th Inniskillings, of the Angel Lodge, Colchester, and the Pentangle, Chatham; Capt. Terry, 60th Rifles, of the Angel Lodge, Colchester; and Rev. Thomas George Beaumont, rector of Chelmondiston. The interesting and impressive ceremony was performed by the M.W.S., the accolade being given by the Lieut. G. Commander. Ill. Bro. Harcourt, 30°, was unanimously accepted as a joining member. On the motion of the Recorder, the subscription of non-resident members was reduced to one-half that paid by residents. The M.W.S. gave notice that he should propose at the next meeting an alteration in the by-laws relative to members compounding for their annual subscription. After some candidates' names had been given in for perfection at the next meeting of the chapter, the M.W.S. proceeded to appoint the following officers for the ensuing year:—Ill. Bro. Emra Holmes, 1st General; Ex. Bros. Rev. T. G. Beaumont, High Prelate; Dr. Mills, 2nd General; W. Cuckow, Grand Marshal; A. J. Barber, Recorder; G. S. Golding, Treasurer; W. Warren, Raphael; W. T. Westgate, D.C.; P. Cornell, Capt. of the Guard. The Recorder presented from the Supreme Grand Council a scroll containing a list of members of 31°, 32° and 33°, which was ordered to be framed and placed in a conspicuous position in the chapter. The alms having been collected, the third point given, and the candidates received into the mystic circle, the sovereign chapter was closed and the brethren retired for refreshment. On the removal of the cloth, the great toast of the evening was the S.G.C., coupled with the names of the gallant and popular Lieut. Grand Commander and his worthy coadjutor the Sec.-Genl., which was received with great enthusiasm. The brethren separated at a late hour.

ROCHDALE CHAPTER OF ROSE CROIX.

A special meeting of this prosperous chapter was held in the Masonic-rooms, Anne-street, Rochdale, on Saturday last, the 15th inst., summoned at the urgent request of several worthy and distinguished Sir Knights who were anxious to become members of this Illustrious and Princely Order. The chapter assembled at three o'clock, under the presidency of Ill. and Perfect Prince William Roberts, Past M.W.S., when Sir Kts. Cousins Ross and Bowers, of Ashton; Sutcliffe, of Burnley; and Burgess, of Brighouse, being four of the Sir Kts. who had requested the M.W.S. to convene the meeting, presented themselves, and were duly constituted Illustrious Princes of the Order. After the ceremony was completed, the brethren adjourned to banquet, provided by Bro. Butterworth in his usual recherche style, after which the newly-constituted, in responding to a toast given by the Chairman, expressed themselves highly delighted with the beauties of the degree, and also with the manner in which the ceremony had been performed.

THE RITE OF MISRAIM.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—Your correspondent, "Bro. J. M. P. Montagu, Hon. Sec. to the S.C.," affirms in his letter at page 234, that my statements with reference to the S.C. and the Rite of Misraim are altogether untrue. Is the gentleman serious? or does he really wish me to publish the names of the individuals concerned in the transactions to which I referred? This I am naturally reluctant to do for several reasons, not the least of which is that I hope arrangements will soon be effected whereby the reflection of such proceedings will be for ever rendered impossible. In the meantime I challenge categorical contradiction to the several assertions in my former statement.

Yours Fraternally,
A CONSERVATOR-GENERAL, 90°.

BIBLICAL ACCOUNT OF THE CREATION.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Brother Jacob Norton is much mistaken if, as he seems to do, he supposes that I am on the look out "for an opportunity of pouncing" on him. I am not so fond of controversy as to rush into it on mere personal grounds, or with any particular person, whatever his name may be. I am sometimes tempted into it when I think great truths are at stake, and fancy I may perchance say a word towards helping forward what I deem to be correct views. Bro. Norton chose to gratuitously introduce into his reply to Brother Hughan a statement which I believe to be unfounded, and I courteously asked if he would furnish the proof of it—if it were to be had. He says (April 15th) I not only "challenged him for proof," but "hampered him with rules and conditions how the desired proof should be given," and that I "claimed the right to choose the ground and weapons." This is all a dream of my worthy brother's—the mere figment of his own brain. I did nothing like it—I wrote nothing upon which the most perverse ingenuity could fasten such a meaning. But, beyond this, he gives me credit for an amount of skill to which I can lay no claim. He avers that I "clinched" him—"pinning him down to the point." Pin him down to the point! As well might one attempt to hold an eel with the naked hand. You may try to clinch him, or to pin him down, but the more you try the more he won't be clinched or pinned down. Hold him tight as you will, he evades your grasp, and hopes to cover his retreat in a cloud of words. I asked him a question, which he might have answered in a single sentence. He occupies an entire column (April 15th), and wholly evades the question! He had stated (February 25th) that the "Encyclopedia Britannica" and "the Oxford professors" "deny the Biblical account of the creation." I asked him (March 4th) if he would kindly tell me where and in what terms the Encyclopedist did so, and who were the Oxford professors referred to? I prescribed no rules nor conditions, but asked for a simple answer to the question; premising only that it was the denial I enquired after, and not diversities of interpretation touching particular words or phrases. But his "Reply to Brother Carpenter's letter" is, as I have said, no reply. Instead of quoting the "Encyclopedia" and giving the names of the Oxford professors, as he was asked to do, he exhibits his confusion worse confounded, and aggravates his former rash assertion by writing: "When the Bible tells me that in six days God created the heaven and earth, and an Oxford professor says that six means more or less than six, I am justified in saying the professor denied the Bible account of the creation." No doubt. But the question was: Who are the professors stigmatised as denying the Bible account of the creation? The answer is: "When a professor says," &c. Who is the professor that thus writes himself down an ass, saying "that six means more or less than six?" The public have an interest in knowing who is the professor who thus teaches our youth, destined for the highest professions—divinity, law, and statesmanship—the elements of arithmetic and logic. But this is a professor; the assertion was of many, or certainly of more than one. It would, however, gratify one's curiosity to ascertain who even this one extraordinary professor is, and in what manner he inculcates his principles of arithmetic and logic. Where and in what terms does the Encyclopedia deny the biblical account of the creation? I asked. Here is the "reply:" "It is needless to say that the seventh and eighth editions of the work maintain the anti-biblical theory of creation." Proof is asked for, and we are told it is needless even to say it is so! Brother Norton says he might have "said scientific instead of Oxford," but, then, he did not; and that he might have said "the teachers of geology," instead of the "Oxford professors," but that would not have been so damaging as he intended, and so he unjustifiably put forward the Oxford professors. But the teachers of geology no more deny the biblical account of the creation than the Oxford professors do. "The geologists, without exception," he says, "deny or disbelieve the Mosaic account of creation." Oh, my worthy Brother Norton, how is it you are in the habit of making such rash assertions? You cite Mr. C. W. Goodwin, author of the "Mosaic Cosmogony," in Essays and Reviews, as your authority for this bold and unqualified assertion; but Mr. Goodwin makes no such statement—he knew better than to do so. What he says is, that "geologists of all creeds are agreed that the earth has existed for an immense series of years, and that indubitably more than six days elapsed from the first creation to the appearance of man upon its surface." He does not say that this is in opposition to the biblical account, but in opposition to "the school-books of the present day." That there are teachers of geology as rash and reckless as Bro. Norton, I know; but to say that the geologists—or, as he more precisely puts it, "geologists without exception"—are so, is to scandalise a large number of the most eminent teachers of the science, who maintain, and furnish good reasons for so doing, that the facts of geology and the Mosaic narrative are in as complete harmony as if Moses had been acquainted with all the phenomena which the crust of the earth exhibits.

Although Brother Norton has not answered my question, he has introduced into what he calls his "Reply to Brother Carpenter," several things that tend only to aggravate his original offence. As the great French Atheist said he could have made a better world than this if the work had been entrusted to him, so Bro. Norton suggests that he could have found a better word than Moses has employed to describe the six stages of creation. Be it so. I am satisfied to accept the word Moses uses, in the same sense in which it is used in many other parts of the Hebrew text, to denote an indefinite period of time. Others may differ from me in this without denying the Bible account of the creation, as Dr. Pye Smith, Dr. John Harris, and others, who so read the Hebrew narrative as, without doing violence to it, to understand the days (jamim) of Gen. i., 3 et seq., as natural days of 24 hours each, while the original creation and antiquity of the earth, with all the geological changes it had undergone in its internal structure, are indicated in verses 1 and 2. Brother Norton takes credit for not having "given his personal opinion upon Bible questions," because, as he says, "the ventilation of such opinions must tend to the introduction of religious discussion, which should be avoided among Masons." But he has taken pretty good care to let us know what his opinions are; and I have yet to learn that any one is entitled to any credit for representing another man's belief in what he holds of all things the most important, as false and ridiculous, by inuendo and suggestion rather than by the more manly course of direct and open assault. Neither Brother Norton's opinion nor mine, on the question under discussion may be of any value; but while he prefers to express his disbelief in the Bible account of the creation by approvingly referring to those whom he alleges to so disbelieve it, I express my unshaken belief in it, and deem it more consistent with a rational reading of history and the uniform experience of mankind, in the use and application of human language, to think that the Bible was not intended to teach astronomy, geology, or any other branch of natural science—that it was not designed to teach either the mere facts or the philosophy of history, but to teach the doctrine of God's government of the world, and that the events related in proof or illustration of the doctrine are matters of fact—actual occurrences, divinely attested. I hold that the obvious purpose of the sacred writer in Gen. i. is to teach the great truth, that God is the Creator of all things; and that all the nature of the case requires is, that however anthropomorphic and popular the language employed may be, the events related in illustration of the truth should be actual occurrences; and in this both the Encyclopedist and the Oxford Professors agree with me, and not with Bro. Norton.

WILLIAM CARPENTER.

PROXY COMMISSIONS TO GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read the remarks upon this subject in your last number, but consider the writer has sadly wasted his time, for two reasons. First, Masonic Proxy Commissions are not granted by "Letters of Attorney." Second, The Freemasons are a secret society, consequently I do not think the Right Honourable the Chancellor of the Exchequer will, under the circumstances, "fash his thumb" about them and their proxies. As to the brother who is so wonderfully "desirous not only always to obey the law of the land himself," &c., I suppose that is the same brother who took such an extraordinary active part in this same matter at the last meeting of Grand Lodge, viz., the W.M. of No. 3 bis, while the "Smillie" of "Smillie and Keith" is, I also suppose, the same Bro. Smillie who is also the Secretary of No. 3 bis. Further comment at present is unnecessary.

I am, fraternally yours,

A MEMBER OF THE G.L. OF SCOTLAND.

THE 1717 THEORY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the position which I have taken up, after due consideration, as to the antiquity of our Freemasonry, I am aware that whatever is said by me upon that subject tends to the overthrow of the generally accepted ideas regarding it, consequently from that fact alone whatever I may say is condemned by the many even before I have uttered it. I am denounced as a Masonic heretic, while what I say which goes against the popular notions, is also, of course, rank heresy. Such being the case, I am all the more indebted to you therefore for the liberty which you have given me in expressing my views; more especially am I indebted to you at present for affording space at page 234 for the quotation I sent up upon the state of the building trade in the fifteenth century, of which "building trades" the Masons, or stone-cutters, only formed a section, with no distinction between them and the others except in the material they wrought upon, the mason working the stone, the carpenter the wood, the smith the iron, and so on. Such a quotation at page 234, and considering where it comes from, goes very far to answer the remarks of Bro. "Lupus" at page 223. Further, Bro. "Lupus," at page 233, states, "I produced the statute of 1425, which you printed in extenso." Now you did not do so, simply, I suppose, because you did not get it! As we perceive by turning back to page 641, December 10th, you only printed "cap. 1," which relates to Masons; but where is cap. 2, &c.? However, as I already stated, this first head of that statute simply refers to the meetings of the Masons as operatives, met to talk over their work and wages. If anything were necessary to prove this, we find it in this same statute itself, in the words "the good course and effect of the statutes of labourers be openly violate and broken." All the "speculative" Masonry here referred to therefore was the speculation of these "labourers" as to the best means of keeping up their wages, or of drawing an extra sixpence from the pockets of their paymasters. But as this was touching a tender point, down comes this 1425 statute in support of low charges—against the operatives, but in favour of those employing them. It had nothing earthly to do with what we now-a-days know as "Freemasonry." And in this view I am supported by several scholars, and also I consider by Toulmin Smith's "English Guilds," and by the Aberdeen Burgh Records, many extracts from which I have already published; and in reference to this the following from Bro. D. Murray Lyon's writings will also be useful: "There is no record extant, Masonic or profane, from which can be drawn any conclusion, further than that in their organization the members of the Ancient Building Associations of Scotland were leagued together for the protection of their common rights, much after the manner of the trades' unions of modern times." As it was with the Scots, so it was with the English. As to the imaginary "damaging little word speculatyf," it is neither "damaging" nor "little," and simply means, as Mr. Bond, at page 234, says "the theory of the science," or as I expressed at page 642, Dec. 10th, it shows—accepting the legend pro tem—he took an interest in the drawing and working out of the plans, &c., most certainly not that he knew aught of what we now know and practise as "Freemasonry." Those who affirm otherwise are bound to prove the affirmative. More especially is Bro. "Lupus" bound to do so, if he can (?) after using such words as "mere bubble" to a theory which I deliberately challenge both him and all the best Masonic writers in the world to upset. While as regards the remarks made by him at page 233, the foregoing completely upsets them. Bro. "Lupus" will find it easier to run away from the 1717 theory, which he calls a "mere bubble," than to burst it.

I am, yours fraternally,

W. P. BUCHAN.

P.S.—As to the imagined high status of the Masons that, as I pointed out at page 652, December 17th, is a great mistake. More, we are told of King Edward III. joining the "Linen Armourers," but I never have seen the slightest proof of any of our Kings joining the Masons before the last century, viz., after 1717. Further, I return my sincere thanks to Bro. Hughan for what he has given at page 233; the reference to the Clothiers' Guild is just the very thing to support my ideas—think it over.

W. P. B.

SUBORDINATION IN THE HIGHER DEGREES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In spite of what Bro. Ashworth says as to my gross fabrication respecting the price charged for his Rochdale and Todmorden high degrees, I am afraid I must simply reiterate the statement, that it is currently reported in Lancashire that the price charged for them is about the sum I have stated, is. 6d. Indeed I believe I overstated the amount; at all events, it is said that at Todmorden they charge thirteen pence half-penny for each degree.

Perhaps Bro. Ashworth has heard of the late Bro. Newall—verbum sap. Will Bro. Ashworth kindly tell us, if my information is not correct, what he and his friends do charge for the 30°, 31° and 32°, and whence, apart from so-called "time-immemorial rights," they derive their authority to confer them? Does Bro. A. fondly imagine that no one has seen Bro. Hughan's "Masonic Reprints," in which that able Mason disposes of Bro. Yarker's preposterous claims with reference to these degrees? The warrant under which these high degrees are given at Eastwood Todmorden was granted by Rodwell Wright in 1812, and is simply an old Templar warrant, similar to those at Newcastle-on-Tyne and Ipswich; and on the strength of its being addressed "To the Knights Companions of the Royal Exalted Religious and Military Order of H.R.D.M., K.D.S.H. Grand Elected Knights Templars of St. John of Jerusalem," these brethren claim to be able to confer the highest degrees in the Ancient and Accepted Rite. I am aware that the Knights Templar degree was sanctioned and acknowledged by the Grand Lodge of All England at York so early as 1780, but the 31° and 32°, as such, were never given—I may say, never heard of—at that time.

If Brother Ashworth had seen the Freemasons' Magazine of March 25th, he would remark that I was quite aware that the Rose Croix chapter at Rochdale is not a legally-constituted one, though I must admit that on first seeing it so prominently noticed in THE FREEMASON, and before looking at my "Cosmopolitan Calendar," I thought it was. With its members the Supreme Grand Council have nothing to do, any further than protesting against its interfering with their jurisdiction; but it is a different matter with Bro. Yarker and others who have taken an oath of allegiance to the S.G.C. and then forsworn themselves. One cannot help feeling that if the regulations of the Ancient and Accepted were only properly carried out, and chapters reminded that high social and moral character are indispensable requisites before any one can be admitted as members of that rite, we should have less of this breaking of obligations, and less of that insufferable vanity exhibited by men who seem anxious to drag their names before the Masonic public and glory in their shame.

I don't know much of the Rochdale high degrees which have been already gibbeted by one of the American papers, but I should like to know, as a matter of curiosity, what governing body in the whole world recognises them. The fact is, I suspect, that they are about as highly-esteemed amongst Masons as the American Masonic M.A. is by the members of our own Universities.

I should like to make one suggestion, which is this: The givers of these irregular degrees are responsible to no one. The Supreme Grand Council is a regularly-constituted body whose members are well known, one of them being the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy G.M. of England. The S.G.C. requires brethren who wish to cultivate the ineffable degrees to be at least of one year's standing and well recommended as Master Masons before they are eligible for the Rose Croix. It seems unfortunate that of late some brethren have been well recommended who were not worthy. Candidates for the 30° must be Rose Croix Masons of at least three years' standing, or they must have held, or still occupy, the position of M.W.S. of a Rose Croix chapter. Members of the 31° are selected by the S.G.C. for their zeal in Masonry, their attainments literary or otherwise, their high social position, and the fact that they are "bright" or "learned" Masons. From this body the 32° are selected, and from the last-named dignified circle the ranks of the S.G.C. itself are filled.

I am not certain that the principle of selection is not in itself as good as that of election. Of this I am certain, that in the A. and A. Rite a Mason who is worth anything is certain to get on. I am not at all sure that this is so in the Craft. Look, for instance, at the appointment of Grand Officers. How often is Grand rank given to members from the provinces, and what chance has a provincial Mason (no matter how learned in Masonry he may be) of ever attaining the purple? I answer, unhesitatingly, that as a general rule he has none at all. Dr. Oliver, to whom Masonry owes more than to any living Mason (except, perhaps, Dr. Beaumont Leeson), was made a member of the 33°; what honours did Grand Lodge confer upon him?

Bro. Ashworth seems to doubt my knowledge of the hautes grades, and so far as the Rochdale degrees are concerned I am fain to acknowledge I am lamentably ignorant as to their history and origin. Perhaps Bro. A. will favour us with some evidence as to their time-immemorial character.

The Ancient and Accepted Rite is the most widely spread in the world, Supreme Grand Councils of the 33° existing in almost every country in Europe and America. Which of these Supreme Bodies knows of Bro. Ashworth's existence as a Rochdale 30° or 32° (whichever he is), and which of them recognise his degrees? If Bro. Ashworth knows anything of the A. and A. Rite, he must be aware that one Supreme Grand Council only can exist in any kingdom, and that the 32° can only be conferred by the S.G.C. I suppose Bro. A. is scarcely prepared to say that the 32° ever existed outside or apart from the A. and A. Rite since the appointment of Frederick the Great as the first Sovereign Grand Inspector-General 33°. As to the imputation of forged charters and warrants, we had better not go into that question; it cuts both ways, and drags in the Craft as well as the higher degrees.*

I have very little to say to "Vampire," except that it was not I who first proposed to expound Masonic law, but Bro. Yarker, to whom I beg to refer him. "Vampire" wishes to know if any man of honour, knowing the history of the S.G.C., can retain membership with it. I reply that there are two or three thousand of us whose names are not unknown amongst our brethren of the Craft, and who are proud to be owned as members of the Ancient and Accepted Rite.

Following the example of such good Masons as "Lupus" and a "Masonic Student," I am not so anxious as some Masons to puff my name before the Craft, but am quite content again to sign myself,
A MASON WHO BELIEVES IN HIS O.B.

* The proof of the Charleston warrant and statutes not being a forgery is to be found in the 3rd volume of "Histoire secrète de la cour de Berlin," par Mirabeau.

[We have omitted a portion of our correspondent's letter which referred to the Rite of Misraim, inasmuch as we have reason to believe that negotiations are now in progress which will ensure an amicable and Masonic solution of the difficulty. Under these circumstances, we must now close the discussion on the subject.—ED. F.]

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM AND MASONRY. (To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Some time back I had the misfortune to incur the displeasure of one of your contributors who signs himself "Enquiring Brother," pressure of business has hitherto prevented me from paying so much attention to the question (Knight Templarism in connection with Masonry) as I should have desired. If my memory serves me right, "Enquiring Brother" wished to repudiate any connection between Knight Templarism and Masonry; and as both of us cannot be in the right, I may be allowed to give my reason for thinking that the Knight Templars who took their rise during the Crusades in 1125, if they did not openly practise Masonry they must have been very well versed in the theory of it. To make a long story as short as possible, there is little doubt, if any, of the connection between the three degrees commonly called St. John's, or Blue Masonry, and Royal Arch Masonry. Certainly there is some obscurity respecting its first introduction into this country, and the principal cause of this obscurity is that while St. John's Masonry has been always in connection with public buildings, the greater part of Royal Arch Masonry has been practised only in private. The earliest printed notice of it is an address by Lawrence Dermott to the "Gentlemen of the Fraternity," published about the middle of last century, in allusion to the differences between the ancient and modern Grand Lodges of England. He asks "whether it is possible to initiate or introduce a modern Mason into a Royal Arch Lodge (the very essence of Masonry) without making him go through ancient ceremonies." In "La Mçonnerie considerée comme le resultat des Religions Egyptienne Juine et Chretienne" (by M. Reghellini de Schio), tom ii., page 124, it is said: "un de reformateurs les plus accredités fut le Chavalier Ramsay Eccossais; il crea en 1728 un nouveau rite aux trois Grades symboliques il en ajouta quatre autres basés sur de nouvelles institutions et doctrines 1° L'Eccossais, 2° Le Novice, 3° Le Cher du Temple, enfin le 4° et le dernier des sept, etait le Royal Arch sous l'emblemme duquel l'Eglise est toujours symbolisée;" and the same words are used in tom ii., page 59, of the "Histoire de Franc-Maçons," by Dubrenvil, a fictitious name adopted by Reghellini. As, however, no other author notices the R.A. in connection with Ramsay's system, there is reason to suppose that Reghellini is mistaken, and the passage is merely alluded to to show the opinion entertained as to a connection between Royal Arch Masonry and the Masonry of the Temple. The third of the degrees is most probably the same as the Red Cross degree permitted to be granted by Scottish Royal Arch Chapters.

Ramsay is said to have created a new system, and to have alleged that it was brought from the East by Godfrey du Bouillon at the time of the Crusades. In so far as Ramsay invented new degrees, the assertion may be correct; but the system which gave rise to his degrees was previously well known in England and Scotland. Ramsay's degrees were founded on by the Chapter of Clermont in 1745, and it was then or soon after that Baron Hund drew up the account of Masonry for the lodges of the Strict Observance, in which all the degrees, even the most fundamental, are derived from the persecutions of the Templars in 1307-1311.

In Scotland, as well as England and Ireland, there has always been a close connection between Royal Arch Masonry and Masonic Templarism, and scarcely half a century has elapsed since these were placed under two distinct governing bodies. Some time ago there were mentioned, among other Masonic relics in the kingdom, two rudely-engraved plates in possession of the Stirling Ancient Lodge, to which I will briefly take notice. One of them relates to the two first degrees of Freemasonry—the other contains, on the one side, certain emblems belonging to a Master's Lodge, and on the reverse, five figures. The one at the top is called the "Redd Cross, or Ark." At the bottom is a series of concentric arches, which might be mistaken for a rainbow were there not a keystone at the summit, indicative of an arch. The three other figures are enclosed within a border—the upper is called the "Sepulchre;" the second, "Knights of Malta;" and the third, "Knight Templar." The age of these plates is unknown, but they can scarcely be more modern than the beginning or middle of the seventeenth century. The lodge itself never mixed up these degrees with St. John's Masonry—they formed a different series, and about the beginning of the last century a complete separation into two lodges took place, the new lodge soon beginning also to grant the three degrees of Blue Masonry. The Ancient Lodge joined the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1736, but the new one, called the Royal Arch, remained independent until 1759. After it received its charter, by which it was debarred by the Grand Lodge from practising the higher degrees, another division took place; but until 1811, when a Supreme Encampment of Knights Templars was formed in Scotland, and a further separation of degrees took place, the above high degrees were all conferred in a Royal Arch Chapter, or rather Knight Templar Encampment. It is now well known that, although most authors allege that the chivalrous Order of Knights Templar was entirely extirpated in 1309, a remnant was preserved in this country (Scotland), their preservation being chiefly owing to the wars of King Robert Bruce and Edward of England. There are even some modern foreign degrees of Templar Masonry to which Knights of Malta are refused admittance on account of their supposed assistance in overwhelming the Templars, and of having obtained possession of part of their estates; but sufficient public documents have been collected to show that in Scotland their animosity, if any did exist, was extinguished as early as the fourteenth or beginning of the fifteenth century, and that the two bodies resided amicably together in the same preceptories. This union continued until the era of the Reformation, when many, both of the Templars and the Knights of St. John, embraced the Protestant faith, and laying aside their arms, fraternized with the Freemasons. Although others of the Templars appear to have preserved the chivalric or military character of their Order, and handed it down to the time when Prince Charles Edward Stuart was elected Grand Master of Holyrood in 1745, still as a body they seemed to have lived in obscurity; and therefore it is to the Masonic branch that the Knights Templar of the present day still hold their chief seat in Scotland, and to them they are mainly indebted for the preservation of the ceremonies used at a reception. It is generally understood that the Knights of St. John had no secret ceremonial, and therefore one now called the Masonic Knights of Malta must have been instituted in imitation of that of the Templars; but whether, during their residence together before 1650 or after, they had formed an alliance with the Freemasons cannot now be satisfactorily demonstrated. The former appears the more probable, because the Knights of St. John could have no object in joining the Freemasons, unless for the preservation of those rites which for some time previous they had been accustomed to practise. Now, when we find those degrees, as well as the Royal Arch, mixed up, as already alluded to, in an old plate belonging to the Stirling Ancient Lodge, and that none of these degrees were granted in the Common Lodge, as the minutes show, but in an annexed lodge or chapter solely for those degrees, there is a strong presumption that all were introduced by the Knights Templar and the Knights of Malta.

Lawrie's "History of Freemasonry" (page 83-88, or ed. 2, page 41-44) says: "It is not to be supposed, however, that the Knights Templar wore aprons or Masonic emblems, as we do, or practised our three degrees of Craft Masonry; but they could scarcely have mixed with Syriac fraternities common at that period in the East, without obtaining a knowledge, not only of the elementary degrees, but also of the supplementary portion, or the mode of filling up the void left in the third degree, to complete which is the end and aim of all systems of true Masonry."

Much more on this subject could be said, but I think this is sufficient to show that Templarism and Blue Masonry are, and have been for some time, closer connected than a casual reader would have been led to infer. I had hoped that some of the brethren deeper read in the question than myself would have taken the question up; but as it is, what I have given are from good authority, and I only hope "An Inquiring Brother" will not put them down as "Bald Statements," without inquiring carefully into them.

I am yours fraternally,
CHARLES G. FORSYTH.
Dunoon, Argyleshire, April 15th, 1871.

THE ladies of San Francisco have been long working very steadily for Female Suffrage, but, as usual, not without meeting abundance of serious opposition. A Californian paper now expends its wrath on a terrible innovation, worse than that of women at the ballot-box—it is known as the Freemasons' Lodge. The Irish lady of the St. Leger family who in the last century managed to surprise the secret of her father's friends, and was afterwards admitted into the Order, has been, it seems, left far behind by the go-ahead dames of the Far West. It is, we are told, a remark now often heard from the lips of women, "I am a Mason. I am going to my lodge to-night. I have taken so many degrees." The disgusted complainant asks, How is it possible for women to undergo the ordeal of initiation, in which, as he or she informs us, are included the ceremonies of riding on a goat, and being put on a gridiron and into a coffin? The indignation of the writer is directed against the insult done to Freemasonry by admitting women to its sacred mysteries. If the mysteries were such as she imagines, it is the women who are insulted by being invited to share them. But how extraordinary it is that people should always assume there is something ridiculous or improper in any assembly to which they are not admitted.—Echo.

FREEMASONRY IN HAMPSHIRE.

The annual meeting of the Royal Arch Freemasons of the province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight was held at the Masonic Hall, Winchester, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., under the presidency of the M.E. Comp. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., the Prov. G. Sup. There was a large attendance of companions of the Order from all parts of the united province. In the unavoidable absence of Comp. C. E. Deacon (the 2nd G. Principal), Comp. W. Hickman (Past G.P.) was requested to fill that position, and Comp. E. Booth acted as 3rd G.P.

The P.G. Sup. addressed some appropriate remarks to the companions, having particular reference to their duties in this degree of Freemasonry, and their relation to Craft Masonry.

The following companions were appointed officers of Prov. G. Chapter for the ensuing year :

Comp. C. E. Deacon	...	2nd G. P.
" H. Abraham	...	3rd G. P.
" W. Hickman	...	G. S. E.
" S. Everett	...	G. S. N.
" W. Bemister	...	G. P. S.
" A. Coles	...	G. 1st Asst. ditto.
" J. Wallingford	...	G. 2nd ditto.
" M. E. Frost	...	G. Treas.
" W. H. Ford	...	G. Reg.
" G. Green	...	G. Sword-Bearer.
" T. Stopher	...	G. Standard-Bearer.
" J. J. Hare	...	G. Dir. of Cers.

On Thursday evening, the 13th inst., the Royal Gloucester Lodge of Craft Masons at Southampton, on entering upon the hundredth year of its existence, was honoured by a visit from the R.W. the Prov. Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., with his officers. There was a very full attendance of the brethren, including many of the leaders in Masonry in Southampton, and from Winchester, Portsmouth, Gosport, Cowes, and the New Forest Lodge.

The W.M. of the lodge, Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, having delivered the lecture in the first degree, placed before the Prov. Grand Master for his perusal the Athol warrant of the lodge, and after lodge duties were concluded, expressed a hope that when the centenary was celebrated, the P.G.M. would not only come again to Southampton, but interest himself to secure the presence on so interesting an occasion of some of the officers, past and present, of Grand Lodge.

Bro. J. R. Stebbing intimated that his researches into the lodge-books and documents, with the object of preparing a brief history for presentation at the centenary, convinced him that it would be found full of interest and of incidents such as but few lodges in England could boast of.

The Prov. G. Master, humorously referring to the warrants under which the lodge had acted, said its fathers were more successful in serving two masters than fell to the lot of many, and they might have been placed in an awkward fix half a century ago by authority saying, "Which king, Bezonian? Speak or die!" The W.M., however, assured him when the fiat went forth that Athol Masons should not meet in York lodges, and York Masons should not meet in Athol lodges, and lodges were required to elect under which warrant they would rule and to give up the other, the Royal Gloucester managed to retain both. (Cheers and laughter.) It was thus enabled to illustrate the universality and the true brotherhood of the Craft.

Several other references of a purely Masonic character were also made, and the Master congratulated on the way in which the lodge is worked. The exceedingly pleasant and highly-successful manner in which the brethren entered on this very interesting year gives good hope for believing that the centenary will be celebrated in a manner befitting so pleasant an event.

CHESHIRE EDUCATIONAL MASONIC INSTITUTION.

On Tuesday evening, the 28th ult., the Birkenhead Theatre had one of its grand level nights, and was attended by nearly all the rank and fashion of the Cheshire side. The occasion, we need hardly say, was no ordinary one, being in aid of the funds of the above useful Institution—one of the worthiest that could arouse the sympathies or evoke the cleemosynary aid of the generous public.

The performance commenced with Maddison Morton's screaming farce, "To Paris and back for Five Pounds," in which the several characters were admirably sustained by brethren of various lodges. Bro. T. Earl Hignett, W.M. 537, illustrated the exaggerated burlesque character of Mr. Samuel Snuzzle in his usual humorous and talented manner, and Bro. R. T. Parkinson made a capital Markham; while Bro. S. Pearson as Lieut. Spike, R.N., Bro. W. C. Beggs as Superintendent, Bro. Wilson as the Waiter, Mr. Percy B. Gooch as Detective Pounce, and Mr. H. N. Hill as Spriggins, were equally well placed. Miss Dacre personated the heroine of the piece with good effect. When the curtain rose a second time, it was to introduce Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul, whose world-renowned impersonations of character are too well known to render comment necessary. The entertainment concluded with Bro. C. H. Duval's appearance in his popular "Odds and Ends," which he has so successfully given in Liverpool during the last five or six weeks. The result will no doubt leave a handsome sum to the Institution above-named.

On Wednesday, the 29th ult., the annual Court of Governors was held at the Crewe Arms Hotel, Crewe, which was numerously attended by the brethren of the Province, and presided over by Bro. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., P.P.J.G.W. The business of the day was to accept the Treasurer's accounts and report, and we are glad to see this infant Institution in so prosperous a condition, it having the sum of £1340 17s. 7d. of invested capital, after providing education and advancement in life for no less than 19 orphan children during the past year. Seven additional candidates presented themselves, and were all elected, making 26 recipients of this fund for the current year. This additional expenditure will we doubt not rouse the brethren of the Province to extra exertions for so noble a cause.

CONSECRATION OF THE FRIARS' LODGE No. 1349.

This new lodge was consecrated at the Cheshire Cheese, Crutched Friars, City, on Wednesday, the 19th inst. Bro. James Terry, P.P.G.S.B. of Herts, P.M. 228, was the officer selected by the acting G.M. to perform the ceremony. At the appointed time, the usual preliminaries having been gone through, he took the chair as W.M., and he was supported by Bros. S. Foxall, P.M., as S.W.; J. Nunn, P.M., as J.W.; Wright, P.M., as I.G.; T. J. Barnes, P.M., as D.C.; Dawson, as Organist. The beautiful ceremony of consecration was then most ably given and correctly performed before a large assemblage of the brethren; after which, Bro. T. J. Barnes, P.M., presented Bro. Thomas Foxall, W.M.-designate, for installation to Bro. J. Terry, who in a faultless manner installed him the first W.M. in the presence of a Board of Installed Masters, composed of twenty-one brethren. Bro. T. Foxall, W.M. appointed and invested as his officers Bros. W. Musto, S.W.; W. Hogg, J.W.; Willden, Treas.; E. T. Reed, P.M., Sec.; P. Stevens, S.D.; V. Stevens, J.D.; Johnston, I.G.; and Verry, Tyler. The usual addresses were then delivered, and when concluded hearty applause proved how well the working was appreciated.

It was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously "That a vote of thanks be given to Bro. James Terry for his kindness in performing the ceremonies of consecration and installation in such an admirable manner, and that the same be entered on the lodge minute book; and that he be elected an honorary member of the lodge."

Bro. J. Terry, in a suitable reply, acknowledged the vote and compliments paid.

The services of the Organist, Bro. Dawson, were acknowledged by a vote of thanks, the same to be entered on the minute book.

Bro. Dawson expressed his gratitude and thanks for this compliment.

Several joining members were proposed and some candidates for initiation at the next lodge meeting. The lodge was then closed, and by its warrant it is empowered to hold its regular meetings on the third Wednesday of each month.

We cannot refrain from expressing the great pleasure, delight, and satisfaction all felt who were present at this consecration and installation meeting. Never were the ceremonies of consecration and installation better done by any one. The musical arrangements were good. The vessels for corn, wine, and oil were kindly lent by Grand Lodge, and in every detail care was taken to render the ceremonies complete.

An excellent banquet was served under the superintendence of the host, whose exertions were to make all happy and comfortable, and in which he succeeded. The usual toasts were given, and the brethren separated, well pleased with the enjoyments of what will be considered a red-letter day in Masonry.

Amongst the large number who were present, besides those named, were Bros. J. R. Sheen (P.M. 201), C. Payne (G.T., P.M. 27), E. Hughes (P.M. 217), F. Walters (P.M. 73, W.M. 1309), H. Chown (831), W. Andrews (1076), Huggett (61), R. W. Newman (235), W. Thorpe (217), S. Chown (65), W. Hallett (781), J. Newton (P.M. 174), N. B. Headon (Sec. 1287), W. J. Helps (P.M. 781), Barnard (P.M. 781), R. Mills (217), J. Holt (781), J. Miller (174), J. Bulmer (174), J. Gaywood (206), T. F. Huggins (S.W. 18), J. Hayward (946), G. Parson (211), J. Bowley (781), C. Rouston (903), J. J. Bever (554), T. Shorey (831), J. M. Kinnell (87), H. Morrison (J.W. 554), W. H. Myers (820), E. Coombes (554), G. Price (933), T. Austin (923), J. Dunstan (174), &c.

CONSECRATION OF ST. DAVID'S MARK LODGE, No. 25 (S.C.), LLANDUDNO.

The Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland, having been pleased to grant a warrant for a new Mark Lodge at Llandudno, to be attached to the Province of Lancashire, the R.W. Prov. G. M.M., Bro. Thomas Entwisle, appointed Saturday, 1st April, for the consecration ceremony.

The Mark Lodge was accordingly opened at 12 o'clock by Bro. Entwisle assisted by Bros. Capt. Hunter, 30° (W.M. 755); Capt. J. L. Hampton, 18° (W.M. 1113), P.M. of Ireland; Tysilis Johnson, P.M. 5, Joppa Lodge; H. Barclay, M.O. 5; J. McEvoy (W.M. 721), S.O. 5; M. Dyer, 31°, and several others.

The following brethren were then admitted and advanced to the degrees of Mark Man and Mark Master by Bro. Entwisle, P.G.M.M., viz: Bros. Dr. J. C. Roden (P.M. of 43, 606, 482, 755, 1113, and P.P.G.S.W. of Warwickshire), G. D. Woodley, William Warren, Dr. Pritchard, Dr. Hughes, Dr. Jones, W. G. Roberts, G. Higgins, and Captain H. Platt.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then opened in due form by the P.G.M.M., who called on the acting Secretary to read the petition and warrant from the S.G.R.A.C. of Scotland, and demanded of the brethren if they were satisfied with the officers named therein. This question being answered in the affirmative, the P.G.M.M. then called on Bro. Dr. Roden to repeat the first part of the consecration prayer. After the usual preliminaries, the procession was formed, Bro. Platt bearing corn, Bro. Woodley wine, and Bro. Pritchard oil. The elements of consecration having been sprinkled on the lodge with the customary formalities, the censer with incense was borne round by Bro. Hunter. The P.G.M.M. then solemnly dedicated and consecrated the lodge for the purposes of Mark Masonry, by the style and title of St. David's Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 25, S.C.

Bro. Hampton then presented the R.W.M.-designate, Bro. Charles Hunter, for the benefit of installation, and the ancient charges having been properly responded to, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Hunter was installed in the chair of Adoniram by the Prov. G.M.M. The following officers were then appointed and invested with their several collars of office: Bros. Dr. J. C. Roden, S.W.; Capt. Hampton, J.W.; Woodley, M.O.; Capt. Platt, S.O.; W. Warren, J.O.; Dr. Pritchard, Treas. and Sec.; G. Higgins, D. of C.; Dr. Hughes, S.D.; W. G. Roberts, J.D.; Dr. T. E. Jones, T.K.; M. Dyer, Tyler.

After the appropriate speech to the R.W.M., officers, and brethren, the R.W.M. proposed that the best thanks of the lodge be given to the R.W. Bro. Entwisle, Prov. G.M.M., for his kindness in attending that day, and for the service he had rendered them in so ably transacting and filling the duties of his exalted station. They had all seen the beauty of Bro. Entwisle's working in the long and arduous ceremonies gone through that day—those of advancement, consecration and installation—and he was sure the brethren would heartily agree with him in this. He would also propose a hearty and cordial vote of thanks to the R.W., Bro. C. Fitzgerald, Matier, 30°, D.P.G.M.M. of Lancashire, &c., who was unfortunately prevented at the last moment from attending, and who had been of the utmost assistance to him in the formation of the lodge, the application and petition for a warrant, &c., &c. The R.W.M. concluded by proposing that Bros. Entwisle and Matier be elected Honorary Members. (The motion was unanimously and enthusiastically carried.)

Letters of apology were then read from H.I.H. the Prince Rhodocanakis, 33°; C. F. Matier, 30°; William Bully, P.M. 5, and several others. Hearty good wishes were then given, and labour being at an end, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, supplied by Bro. Williams, of the Royal Hotel.

The usual loyal, Masonic and special toasts were done ample justice to by the brethren, who had to separate early for the purpose of catching the trains.

We may mention we have seldom seen such perfection in ceremonial as displayed by Bro. Entwisle, and do not wonder at the exalted rank the S.G.R.A.C. of Scotland has seen fit to advance him.

We wish every prosperity to the St. David's Lodge, whether they continue to work under the S.C., or whether they will be (as seems not unlikely) taken under the wing of the G. Mark Lodge of England. A little bird has whispered in our ear that the millenium (in the Mark Degree), is nigh at hand. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished by all.

THE MASONIC FEMALE ORPHAN SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

ANNUAL DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.

The annual recurrence of this event is now looked forward to with interest and pleasure by a large section of the community, and probably the most brilliant assemblage ever yet gathered together in the great Concert Hall of the Exhibition Palace, Dublin, was that which congregated on Wednesday, the 12th inst., to witness the distribution of prizes to the pupils of the admirably-conducted Female Orphan School of the Masonic Order in Ireland. Apart from the attraction of observing the progress made by an Institution so benevolent in its conception, the r union is ever made the occasion of a brilliant display by the Fraternity, whose members are to be found in every quarter of the globe, anxious to aid a worthy and deserving brother, and always ready to extend the hand of unobtrusive charity. As in recent years, the gathering was held in the Exhibition Palace, the only building in the city capable of accommodating the multitude of friends who had signified their intention of being present. The number of tickets actually disposed of was, we understand, upwards of 7,000.

Shortly after seven o'clock the doors were thrown open, and in a remarkably short space of time the large concert-hall, where the business part of the programme was to be transacted, was thronged to excess, while thousands had to content themselves with the thoughtful arrangements made by the Committee of Management for promenading in the glass transept. The interior of the concert-hall was a scene of wondrous animation and gaiety—the gorgeous insignia of the Brotherhood, the bright and many-coloured dresses of the ladies, who were present in great numbers and all in evening dress, and the simple but chaste decorations, formed the details of a picture which few could witness and forget. During the hour which elapsed before the proceedings proper commenced the bands of the Royal Irish Constabulary and the 8th Hussars performed a choice selection of music, to the thorough enjoyment of all who crowded the transept, the Leinster Hall, and the galleries. Punctually at eight the brethren invited to occupy places on the platform, and who had assembled in one of the adjoining rooms, formed a procession, and conducted the Deputy Grand Master from the Leinster Hall to the Grand Concert Hall in the following order, the band of the Royal Irish Constabulary playing a Masonic march specially composed for the occasion by Bro. John Dunne, W.M., Mus. Doc., introducing the Masonic song by the late Bro. Dr. Smith:—

“Should the changes of life ere compel me to roam,
In a lodge of Freemasons I'll sure find a home;
There the rich and the poor on a level do meet,
And brother each brother doth cordially greet.”

ORDER OF PROCESSION.

Past Deputy Grand Masters.
The Grand Director of Ceremonies, with his Wand.
Stewards.

On ascending the platform, the brethren filed off according to lodges, and took their respective places. The pupils of the School, accompanied by the pupils of the Boys' School, then entered the room and occupied the seats provided for them on the platform, the Grand Organist, Bro. Francis Quin, presiding at the organ.

In the unavoidable absence, owing to illness, of the Worshipful his Grace the Duke of Leinster, Grand Master of the Craft in Ireland, the chair was occupied by the R.W. Bro. Robert Wm. Shekleton, Deputy Grand Master.

On the post of honour being taken, the President was saluted, according to ancient usage, with “11 on the third coming down,” the word of command being given by Bro. Lord Viscount Powerscourt. A portion of the rooth Psalm having been sung by the entire assemblage, and prayers having been read by Bro. the Rev. John J. MacSorley, one of the Grand Chaplains,

The Deputy Grand Master said a very unpleasant task devolved upon him—to intimate that his Most Worshipful Grace, their Grand Master, the Duke of Leinster, was unable to be present that evening. He (Bro. Shekleton) regretted this on various grounds. First, on account of the cause that kept him from amongst them; and, secondly, because it is thus my lot, as his Deputy, to take the chair which he has so worthily filled on so many occasions. At a late hour on the previous evening he had received a communication from his Grace stating that with all his nursing for the past ten days, he had not been able to recover himself sufficiently to attend on that occasion. It was too late to give public announcement of this fact, and he wrote to his Grace asking him to strive to be with them at the opening, even for a few minutes, and quite recently an answer had come to hand in the following words:—“I assure you I much regret not being able to attend to my duty this evening. Although much better, the doctor will not allow me to go out at night yet.” In expressing his unfeigned regret at the absence of his Grace, whose presence had lent dignity and prestige to many of their assemblies, he was sure that he was expressing the sentiments of every one in the room. (Hear.) Whether they regarded the Duke in his Masonic, in his public, or in his private character, he was alike respected and beloved. As a nobleman resident amongst them, he had set a bright example to those of his high order; as President, he had always manifested the greatest possible interest in the success of the Orphan School, while the fact that he had occupied for 58 years the exalted office of Grand Master, proved the estimation in which he was held by every member of the Craft in Ireland. (Hear.) He was assured that all present, as well as the brethren throughout the land, would sympathise with his Grace in his present indisposition.

Bro. Edmond Digges LaTouche, Honorary Secretary, submitted the report of the past year of the Committee having the management of the Schools, but which we have not space to insert.

Bro. Viscount Powerscourt in rising to move the resolution that the report be adopted, said: Brethren, ladies, and gentlemen, before advert- ing to the object of the resolution which has been put into my hand to move, I would say one or two words upon the subject of the Craft generally. Freemasonry has had many burdens put upon its shoulders which it has no real right to bear. As a so-called “secret society,” it has been classed with other combinations which aimed at the overthrow of law and order, and it has been said by many people that such schemes were among its tenets. I have had long discussions about it with gentlemen outside the Order, both at home and abroad, and notably with a distinguished foreigner, who made out that the revolutions in Italy and other nations were fostered and encouraged by Freemasons. I pointed out that our constitutions are directly opposed to any subversion of the powers that be, and that any person conspiring in any way would be looked upon as unworthy to assist in a lodge; and that liberal constitutional governments look upon our Craft as a beneficial and harmless institution. (Hear.) The true work of Freemasons is that which we are assembled here to celebrate to-night—charity. There is only one answer to those who say that Freemasonry is a secret society in the dangerous sense, and that is—look at our Constitution, examine it and tell me if you found anything in it breathing any other sentiment except “Peace on earth, goodwill toward men?” (Hear and applause.) The symbol of the square is to show that we endeavour to square our actions, and the trowel and compass that we act with justice and forbearance in all dealings with our fellow-men. (Hear.) There are some benevolent ladies and gentlemen who have taken upon themselves to help in the work of charity we are here to celebrate to-night, who deserve our warmest thanks for their disinterested exertions undertaking the management and surveillance of the Female Orphan Schools, and to whose sacrifice of their time and money we are indebted for the efficient state in which we find those institutions. I think you will agree with me that the ladies who have put their hearts into the good work desire most highly the best thanks we can offer them for the interest they take in keeping up the credit of the Order—(hear, hear)—in providing education for the children of our poor brethren. I hope that the sight of the orphans of deceased poor Freemasons to-night may induce some of the charitably disposed here to look upon those Schools as worthy of support, and may make them think that the ancient Craft is doing some good in rescuing these poor children from a life of ignorance and misery, and giving them an opportunity of becoming useful members of society.

Bro. Sir John Marcus Stewart, Bart., Prov. Grand Master of Tyrone, seconded the resolution, which was put to the meeting, and adopted unanimously.

A number of the pupils then performed several selections of pianoforte music in a very finished style. They were very warmly applauded. At the conclusion of the musical portion of the programme,

Bro. Major-General Dunne said he had been unexpectedly called upon to propose a vote of thanks to their Deputy Grand Master, who presided in the absence of his Grace the Duke of Leinster. He was sure they all regretted the cause of his Grace's absence, and they were, doubtless, equally certain, from their knowledge of his Grace's general attention to, and love of, the Masonic Order, that he would have been present with them if it were possible. (Applause.) The meeting had been very fortunate, however, in the chairman who had presided in his Grace's absence. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. William Fetherston H, Prov. Grand Master of Westmeath, seconded the motion, which was put to the meeting by Viscount Powerscourt, and adopted with acclamation.

Bro. Shekleton returned thanks for the unparalleled honour conferred upon him, and assured the brethren he considered the position he occupied one of the most distinguished. (Applause.)

This concluded the proceedings in the large Concert Hall, and the procession then re-formed, and the Deputy Grand Master was conducted to a dais erected at the northern end of the nave, where he presented the prizes awarded at the annual examination.

At the conclusion of this interesting ceremony, the bands performed some music for promenade, of which those present availed themselves. The transept and Leinster Hall were brilliantly illuminated by a multitude of gas-jets, and some very beautiful and appropriate designs in gas, such as the square and compass, and the rose, thistle, and shamrock combined, were displayed in different parts of the building. The proceedings did not terminate until an advanced hour.

THE man who didn't believe in advertising has gone into partnership with the sheriff, and they are going to have an auction.

BREAKFAST. — EPPS'S COCOA. — Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—“By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.” Each packet is labelled—JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London. Also, makers of Epps's Cacaoine, a very light, thin, evening beverage.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the “Anti-Lancet,” says: “I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease.”—“This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.” Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on “Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels,” a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

Is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Men to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, sitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss, which cannot fail to fit, forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the MANUFACTURER, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d. and 31s. 6d. Postage 1s. of a Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s. and 52s. 6d. Postage 1s. 8d. of Umbilical Truss, 42s. and 52s. 6d. Postage 1s. 10d. Post Office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post Office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEECAPS, &c. The material of which these are made is recommended by the faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS, VARICOSE VEINS, &c. THE BEST PUDDING. MAYAR'S SEMOLINA.

NOTICE.

Read this with care and attention.) THE MANUFACTORY of MAYAR'S SEMOLINA was established in 1815. It is the oldest and the largest in the World, Twenty-five Million pounds being yearly produced. (25,000,000.) Our SEMOLINA is the staple food in France, Russia, Spain, Italy, &c., and will soon be that of England. It has obtained 24 PRIZE MEDALS in the Great Exhibitions for its superiority over all others, and is pronounced by the most eminent members of the Medical Profession, both in London and in Paris, to be far more Nutritious than Tapioca, Arrowroot, corn flour (which are only Starch), or any farinaceous food already introduced into this country. See Dr. Hassall's Analytical Report in the columns of this paper. N.B.—Being determined to maintain its reputation, we again CAUTION the Public, that an imitation, to which a false and ridiculous name has been given, is introduced by a well known Firm, taking advantage of its name and publicity to sell a similar article of very inferior quality, to realise extra profits, and who advertise in favour of that article the qualities possessed by our Semolina. As a proof of our assertion we challenge a comparison, by analysis, between our SEMOLINA and the so-called Pearlina.

- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is solely the heart of the very best Wheat.
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is richer than any other farinaceous food in Azotic matter, indispensable in the muscular formation of the body.
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA Highly recommended by the Faculty for Children and Invalids.
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA Is extremely nourishing and easily digested.
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA makes delicious Puddings, Custards and Pastry
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA unequalled for thickening Soups, Beef Tea, and Gruels.
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is the greatest delicacy for Breakfast and Supper
- MAYAR'S SEMOLINA Is very economical. May be used with or without Milk. Recipes on each Package. 6d. lb. in Packet, 8d. in Canister. Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, &c.

HOMINY.

MAYAR'S HOMINY, produced from the best Indian Maze, without any adulteration obtained by grinding, is far superior to the Maize Corn Flour already introduced in this country, which is only Starch obtained by a process of washing, which deteriorates entirely the quality, and is sold at a very high price. Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, and Corn Dealers. Wholesale at MAYAR'S, 36, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C. A Wholesale Agent wanted in every Town.

P o e t r y .

THE LAST BREATHINGS OF A FREEMASON'S DAUGHTER, WHO DIED AT THE EARLY AGE OF NINETEEN YEARS.

"Come quickly Lord!" our lov'd one cries,
 "And waft my spirit to the skies;
 O, Jesus, come this night, I pray,
 Take me to dwell with Thee for aye.

"Dear father, sit now by my side,
 I cannot long with you abide;
 I struggle hard for every breath,
 You soon must close my eyes in death.

"Oh! do not weep, my father dear,
 I'm happy—happy, even here,
 But happier still I'll be above,
 With the Redeemer whom I love.

"Oh! be not sore distress'd for me,
 But think when on this bed you see
 Only the clay! the soul has fled
 To Him whose blood for us was shed.

"O Lord, now if it please Thee come—
 My weary spirit longs for home;
 Fain would I enter into rest,
 And worship Thee with all the blest.

"I leave this world without regret,
 My friends, I trust, will follow yet,
 And all life's cares and sorrows o'er,
 Meet me in Heaven and part no more.

"Three brothers are already there,
 Whose happiness I long to share,
 And in their fellowship to raise
 A song of thanksgiving and praise.

"Oh! how I long to be away!
 I hope to go ere dawn of day;
 Come quickly, Jesus! take me home—
 Oh, I am weary!—Jesus, come!

"Brothers, I bid you all farewell;
 Seek God whilst upon earth you dwell,
 Oh keep from sin, cease not to pray,
 And sanctify the Sabbath-day.

"Farewell, farewell, my own dear mother—
 You'll miss me more than other,
 But all your tender care and love
 Ere long will find reward above.

"Sweet Jesus! now I wait for Thee,
 Thy glory and Thy love to see;
 Friends, cheer me with that song divine—
 How bright these glorious spirits shine!"

With faltering voice our dear one cried,
 "Take comfort, Christians." Ere she died,
 She whisper'd in her father's ear,
 "I see Him now:" the Lord was near.

'Tis over—that brief earthly life,
 That gentle soul, has left the strife
 And sin of this poor world, to dwell
 With Him whom here she loved so well.

We mourn, but not as those who know
 No comfort in their earthly woe—
 We think of her as happier far
 Than any in this world that are.

The grave shall yet its charge resign,
 And she shall in new beauty shine;
 Yes, we await, with humble trust,
 The resurrection of the just.

FLIES.—Amongst the little discomforts of life is one which is particularly obnoxious to those who cannot leave London during August and September, and particularly the unfortunate bachelors who are obliged to make their daily meals in an eating-house or restaurant. It is the nuisance of flies, to which some people are so sensitive, that to dine becomes a positive trial, instead of a pleasure. A little attention on the part of proprietors of dining-rooms would get rid of the evil. In Belgium the butchers use laurel oil on their doorposts and window-frames to such good effect that the flies will not enter the shops. Is not this hint really worth taking?—Food Journal.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

In the "Bi-annual Communication" from June to December, 1813, the following announcement is made:—"The Right Worshipful the Grand Lodge of Ireland have great pleasure in announcing to all their brethren the union of the two Grand Lodges of England, after a separation of nearly a century; they are now happily and indissolubly re-united under the auspices of our Most Illustrious Brothers their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Kent and Duke of Sussex, Grand Masters of each. By the completion of this great work, so highly interesting to the whole Fraternity, perfect unity will be restored to the Order, the pure and perfect forms of Ancient Masonry recognised and unalterably determined, and the most perfect confidence and communication permanently established between the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, and Ireland."

The foregoing admirable statement is a most graceful tribute to the zeal and ability of the distinguished promoters of the blessed "Union," and, as might have been expected, the re-uniting of the scattered elements has been the means of placing the Craft in a position never before attained. The officers of the three Grand Bodies at this date were as follows:—

The Present Grand Officers of the United Grand Lodge of England.

- The M.W. His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, Grand Master.
- R.W. the Rev. Samuel Hemming, D.D., Senior Grand Warden.
- R.W. Isaac Linds, Esq., Junior Grand Warden.
- W. John Dent, Esq., Grand Treasurer.
- W. William Meyrick, Esq., Grand Registrar.
- W. William Henry White and W. Edwards Harper, Grand Secretaries.
- W. the Rev. Edward Barry and W. the Rev. Lucius Coghlan, Grand Chaplains.
- W. the Rev. Henry Isaac Knap, Deputy Grand Chaplain.

The Grand Officers of Scotland.

- His Royal Highness George, Prince of Wales, Prince Regent, Grand Master Mason and Patron of the Order.

M.W. and Right Hon. Robert, Lord Viscount Duncan, Acting Grand Master under His Royal Highness.

- R.W. and Right Hon. Charles, Lord Kinnaird, Deputy Grand Master.
- R.W. William Inglis, Esq., Substitute Grand Master.
- R.W. James Gardiner Baird, Senior Grand Warden.
- R.W. Sir John Hamilton Dalrymple, Junior Grand Warden.
- W. Sir John Hay, Grand Treasurer.
- W. Alexander Lawrie, Esq., Grand Secretary.
- W. and Rev. Dr. John Lee, Grand Chaplain.
- W. James Bartram, Esq., Grand Clerk.

Grand Lodge of Ireland.

- M.W. His Grace Augustus Frederick, Duke of Leinster, Grand Master.
- R.W. and Hon. A. H. Hutchinson, Deputy Grand Master.
- R.W. and Hon. John Lord Hutchinson, A.B., Senior Grand Warden.
- R.W. and Hon. James Lord Kilmaine, Junior Grand Warden.
- W. John Boardman, Esq., Grand Treasurer.
- W. the Rev. Robert Handwell, D.D., Grand Secretary.
- W. the Rev. J. A. Coghlan, A.B., Grand Chaplain.
- W. William F. Graham, Deputy Grand Secretary.

In 1813, the M.W. Bro. Augustus Frederick, third Duke of Leinster, was elected Grand Master, and has so continued down to the present time (A.D. 1871). We believe such a lengthy appointment to be without parallel. To be annually elected Grand Master for fifty-eight years is something surely extraordinary! Our Past Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, K.T., &c., occupied the Grand East for about half that period, and though his lordship's rule was deservedly appreciated, many distinguished Masons thought the term much too long for one brother, however able, to continue as Grand Master; and in that opinion we decidedly concur. It seems a pity, to say the least, for the highest honour we, as Masons, can bestow on noblemen who have evinced considerable zeal and ability on behalf of the Craft to be retained by one brother, to the exclusion of all others equally worthy and capable of supporting the dignity of the high position, for the period of half a century! We are of opinion that the present requirements of the Craft decidedly point to a limitation of the term of office; but whether the Grand Mastership should cease to be held after three, five, or seven years' occupancy it is not for us to say. The practice of Scotland favours the shorter period; but we think the seven years would be more generally supported in this country. The former Grand Master of Ireland, General Richard, second Baron and first Earl of Donoughmore, was first elected in 1739, and continued to be chosen to that exalted position for about a quarter of a century.

The following sensible notice is appended by the D.G. Sec. to the Bi-annual Report for 1814:—"It is recommended that, when a brother is proposed to become a member of a lodge, who has been initiated in another, that he shall (previous to admission) produce a certificate from the Grand Lodge of the Establishment of the country in which he was initiated, in order to ensure the lodge admitting such candidate that he comes from a regular lodge, and also that he has withdrawn from it in a proper manner."

The Grand Treasurer served the Grand Lodge for twenty-five years, and was so respected by the members that on his decease "an appropriate monumental entablature was erected in the cathedral of St. Patrick to his memory," the expense of which was defrayed by subscriptions of the Grand Officers, the members of the Grand Master's Lodge, and ten other Dublin lodges, three military lodges, &c.

The Grand Secretary, the Rev. Dr. Handcock, preached in the cathedral, Dublin, on the 24th November, 1814, the collection on which occasion amounted to £325 os. 5d. (with subsequent donations), on behalf of the "Masonic Female Orphan School." It is refreshing to read of such instances of liberality so early in this century, for, generally speaking, it is only of late that the systematic and proportionate benevolent offerings of the Craft have been properly cultivated and responded to by the members. Even some Grand Lodges in the present day are without such admirable institutions as Masonic schools, and fritter away their revenues nobody hardly seems to know where or how.

The following notice was addressed to the members in 1815 respecting a Freemasons' Hall for Ireland, and we append at the same a few of the rules then in force:—

The attention of your lodge is earnestly requested to the project now in progress, of providing a GENERAL ESTABLISHMENT or FREEMASON-HALL in Dublin for all purposes of the MASONIC BODY, and which has been undertaken with such success as to require but a reasonable share of assistance from the brethren of the country lodges in the registry of Ireland to complete it effectually. The sister countries have established institutions of this nature by the zeal and spirit of the CRAFT, but in Ireland there is no Sanctuary or Temple for the work of the Order—no memorial or testimony of fraternal love, or of the devotion of FREEMASONS to the duties they have undertaken and the principles they have solemnly pledged themselves to support. To redeem the Body from this reproachful state is the object of the measure submitted to the consideration of your LODGE, as well as to that of every FREEMASON under whose view it may happen to come; and your support is expected on the strength of this conviction—that there is no part of the world where Masonic duties are better understood and fulfilled than in Ireland, and that therefore the munificent example of genuine Masonic zeal displayed by the GRAND MASTER, and liberally followed by several lodges and individuals of the CRAFT will not nor cannot be contemplated with indifference, or without good effects by any of the brethren. Any contributions forwarded for this purpose to the Grand Treasurer will be recorded with due credit to the motives and the source from which they proceed.

Extracts from Rules:

- Country lodges are to return their officers, whether elected or continued, and a list of all their members, to the Secretary on or before St. John's Day, and any lodge not complying shall be fined 5 s. 5d. for each omission.
- Lodges in arrears of dues to the Grand Lodge, or not making regular returns for two years, shall be suspended, at the end of three years cancelled.
- No lodge shall make any person a Mason until he has attained the age of twenty-one years, let his other Masonic qualities be what they may, unless by dispensation from the Grand Master or Grand Lodge.
- No person shall be made a Mason in any lodge for a smaller admission fee than one guinea and a half, including the fee for registry.
- All the lodges of Ireland are to register their members in the Grand Lodge books within six months after they are raised to the degree of Master Masons, as well as the names of those transferred from other lodges, under penalty of 5s. 5d. for each neglect.
- Every lodge in Ireland shall pay 10s. 10d. annually to the Grand Lodge, as formerly, on or before the first Thursday in June and December, the Grand Master's Lodge to pay what they shall think proper, and no Master or Warden shall be suffered to sit in the Grand Lodge until such contribution be paid, but no military lodge is to be charged with annual dues whilst on foreign service; the price of Grand Lodge certificates as heretofore.
- All communications to the Grand Lodge to be post paid.
- No military lodge shall make any townsman or citizen a Mason in any part of the British dominions when there is a registered lodge held in the town or district where he resides, or where such military lodge meets; and no town or country lodge shall make any military man a Mason when there is a warranted lodge held in the regiment, troop, or company to which such military man belongs, and any military or other lodge violating this rule shall be fined one guinea for each individual so made or admitted, and if such conduct is persisted in, the warrant shall be withdrawn altogether or suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.
- No religious or political discussion is by any means or under any pretence or pretext whatever to find its way into a Masonic lodge.
- No brother shall attend as a Mason clothed in any of the jewels or badges of the Craft at any funeral or other public procession in the city of Dublin or its vicinity without a special licence first had and obtained for such funeral or procession from the Grand Master or his Deputy, and in all Masonic funerals, or other public processions of what kind or nature soever, although authorised as above, no brother shall wear any other ribbons or colours than Masonic ones; or, if attended by music, shall play or cause to be played any other than Masonic tunes, it being strictly prohibited to introduce on such occasions any party or political colours or tunes, so that the honour of the Craft or the peace of the country may be compromised, and every brother offending against this rule shall be liable to exclusion or suspension from the rights of Masonry during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

From and after the 24th of June, 1816, no brother being the proprietor of a house of entertainment in which a Masonic lodge hold its meetings shall be eligible to hold the office of Master of such lodge during the time it meets in his house, and any lodge electing such brother as their Master shall have the warrant thereof suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

Any regular Mason aiding or assisting at the works of a lodge not authorised or warranted by the Grand Lodge, or whose warrant has been suspended or cancelled, acts contrary to the fundamental principles of Freemasonry, and shall be excluded or suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

Grand Lodge, 2nd of November, 1815.

Ordered, That no application for reduction of dues or arrears of dues by individual lodges be received by this Grand Lodge, and that the Secretary be ordered to return all such applications.

By Order of the Grand Lodge,

ROBERT HANDCOCK, Grand Secretary.
WILLIAM F. GRAHAM, D.G. Sec.

FRATRES ROSICRUCIANÆ SOCIETATIS IN ANGLIA.

The Quarterly Convocation of the Rosicrucian Fraternity was held at Freemasons' Tavern on Thursday, the 20th instant, and amongst those present were: Colonel Burdett, Hon. V.P.; J. Brett, M.G.; R. Wentworth Little, P.M.G.; C. H. Rogers-Harrison, D.M.G.; W. R. Woodman, M.D., S.G.; H. C. Levander, M.A.; W. B. Hambly, J. Weaver, E. Stanton Jones, Rev. W. B. Church, M.A.; and W. Carpenter, Ancients; W. J. Ferguson, T.B.; T. Cubitt, Org.; Major E. H. Finney, G. of T.; J. Boyd, G. Butler, J. R. Foulger, E. H. Finney (jun.), M. Edwards, and J. S. Banning.

After the confirmation of the minutes, the following ten candidates being in attendance were admitted to the grade of Zelator: Bros. S. Rosenthal, W. B. Johnston, Captain J. Bertrand Payne, D. M. Dewar, W. Roebuck (C.E.), G. Cooper, T. W. White, R. H. Thrupp, J. O. Oxland, and J. W. Barrett. Fratres Woodman, Ferguson, Weaver, Butler, and Jones were advanced to the 7°, or grade of Adeptus Exemptus, Colonel Burdett and H. C. Levander to the 6°, or Adeptus Major, and fourteen other fratres to the rank of Adeptus Minor, the 5°.

It was proposed, seconded, and unanimously resolved that the sum of five guineas be voted from the funds of the Society to the "Wentworth Little Testimonial" Fund in recognition of the services of Frater Little, S.M., Past Master General.

Letters of apology for non-attendance from Frater Hughan and others were read.

The Sec. Gen. reported that he had appointed Frater Finney, jun., Asst. Sec., vice Gordon, superseded for absence without leave.

An application was then made by Frater Oxland, of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, for permission to found a subordinate College of Rosicrucians at that ancient seat of learning, and the S.M. said that the application should be duly laid before the Council of Ancients.

The Sec. Gen. was requested to prepare a list of the actual members of the Society by the next meeting, arranged in the order of their several grades, and distinguishing the names of those who belonged to the colleges at London, Bristol, and Manchester respectively—the list to be neatly copied and suspended in a frame for the information of the Society at every future meeting.

At the next meeting a paper on "Mediæval Mysticism," by Frater Little, will be read and discussed.

"THERE is no medicine at the present day I value so highly as the Pain Killer. I have used it in my family for years, and in every instance it has proved a sovereign remedy. I tested it to-day on a severe burn, and found it all that could be desired. I cannot praise it too highly.—A. D. MILNE, editor of Messenger, N.Y.—To P. Davis & Son."

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE V.

Bibliologists are perhaps more exposed to the shafts of a censorious world than any other logicians, the subject upon which they treat affording considerable scope for comment. To write a treatise upon the sacred writings so as to be generally acceptable would therefore be found to be exceedingly difficult, if not thoroughly impracticable, the opinions of individuals disagreeing in a very remarkable manner, as exemplified by the innumerable essays and other compositions that have from time to time appeared. There has been much dissension with regard to the "clandestine act" committed by Ruth, previous to her espousal to the distinguished citizen of Bethlehem. Her behavior being tolerably well known to most readers of the Scriptures, need not here be minutely described. Some have endeavoured to prove that her conduct is to be construed into no other light than that of a pure and honest intention; while others emphatically declare that her proceeding, being quite inconsistent with the dictates of modesty and virtue must be extremely offensive to all who prize decency and chastity. Is the latter estimate indicative or uncharitable, or is it deficient in reasonableness? Let the enthusiast ponder over the subject. Let his inferences be tempered by his own conscience. I feel that in this instance it is not for me to consider whether the "female Masons" have been wise in their selection of Ruth as an example of piety, or whether another representative more eligible for the purposes of the Order might have been discovered in Holy Writ. My duty is now to lay before the reader the annexed particulars, having reference to the second point of the signet of the sisterhood:—

THE SECOND POINT.

RUTH, OR THE WIDOW'S DEGREE.

[The Symbol of the Ripened Grain.]

"Pity the widow, desolate and poor;
Those little parcels are her only store;
Meekly upon her breast she crosses them,
Prophetic of the Cross of Bethlehem;
Then looks imploringly into the sky,
Where sits enthroned the pitying Deity."

The scriptural illustration is the following verse, taken from the 2nd chapter of Ruth:—"Then said Boaz unto his servant that was set over the reapers, Whose damsel is this?"

The point is coloured yellow—the hue being typified by the sunflower. The emblem of the degree is a sheaf.

The lecturer, in addition to other matters, thus discourses upon the incidents connected with the life of Ruth:—

"Freemasonry in its obligations, emblems, and principles is peculiar, and we, as Master Masons, are taught to respect devotion to religious principles. Upon our first entrance into the Masonic lodge we testify our faith and trust in God. Atheism will effectually debar any person from becoming a Freemason. Therefore, when we find in history a person who forsakes home, and lands, and parents, and country through piety to God, we seize upon that character, and hail it as Masonic; and we claim whatever credit or honour may be associated with it. Such a character, forcibly delineated, we discover in the Book of Ruth under the title of Ruth; and we have so surrounded the piety of that noble and heroic woman with emblems, legends, and tokens of recognition, as to make of it a section in Adoptive Masonry. The history of Ruth, as composing a degree of the Eastern Star, is as follows:—Ruth was of the nation of Moab, an idolatrous people. She married a man named Mahlon, formerly a citizen of Bethlehem, who had taken up his residence in the land of Moab, where he died. He was a worshipper of God, and by his pious example and teaching she was converted to the true religion. A few happy years followed, and then the calamity of widowhood, came upon her. Upon his death-bed he solemnly exhorted her, for her soul's sake, to leave the dangerous company in which she would be thrown, and go to the city of Bethlehem, where dwelt the people of God. Immediately after his death she obeyed his pious injunctions. Forsaking her home and friends, she journeyed, in company with her aged mother-in-law, to Bethlehem, where she arrived in due time, wayworn and so poor that she was compelled, for her own support and that of her friend, to seek some means of securing a livelihood. There was nothing, however, that she could do, save to go into the barley fields—for it was the time of harvest—and glean among the poorest and lowest classes of the people for a support. The very first attempt she made at this labour exhausted her strength. She had been reared in luxury, and the toil was too great for her. The sharp stubble wounded her feet; the blazing sun oppressed her brain; the jeers and insults of her companions alarmed and discouraged her, and long before the hour of noon, with only two little handfuls of barley as the fruits of her labour, she sought the shade of a tree to rest herself for a few moments before retiring from the field. At this instant Boaz, the owner of the field, entered. He was a pious and charitable man. None in Bethlehem was so rich; none more beloved and honoured than he. As he entered the field, he observed near the gleaners the form of one differing in garb and manners from the rest, and asked the overseer who she was. In reply he learned that she was a woman from Moab, who had asked leave to glean among the sheaves, but that evidently she was unaccustomed to such labour, for she had been there since the sunrise and had gathered but two little handfuls of barley. This excited the kindly feelings of Boaz, and he went to her to say a word of sympathy, and to offer her relief. As she saw him approach she supposed him to be the owner of the field and come to order her away. Ever since the morning she had met nothing but scorn and reproach, and she looked for it now. Raising her hands, therefore, to show him how small were her gleanings, and that she had taken nothing from the sheaves, she placed them meekly upon her breast, as showing her willingness to submit to whatever lot she might be called upon to endure, and cast her eyes upward as appealing to God against the inhumanity of man. It was for God she had forsaken home, wealth, and friends, and the disconsolate widow, alone in the world, had none other to whom she could look for protection. This mute appeal was not lost upon the kind heart of Boaz. He spoke words of sympathy and tenderness to her; he encouraged her to persevere. From the provisions brought for his reapers he bade her eat and drink. He directed that handfuls of barley should be dropped on purpose in her way by the reapers, so that she might gather an ample supply; and when she returned home to her mother-in-law she bore with her enough for their immediate necessities. In a short time Ruth became the wife of Boaz, by whom she had a son, called Obed, the father of Jesse, the father of David, the father of Solomon, whose wisdom and power are known to every intelligent Freemason. The colour yellow alludes to the ripened grain that composed the barley sheaves of Boaz, among which Ruth was gleaning. The emblem of the sheaf reminds us of the liberality of Boaz, who from his sheaves commanded that portions be taken and cast in Ruth's way, that she might gather an abundance. The sign alludes . . . The pass is used to recall the then lowering but afterwards glorious history of the heroic Ruth."

The lines quoted beneath are designed as a tribute to Ruth:—

"Widow, mourning for the dead,
'Midst the golden harvest mourning,
Beats the sun thy aching head?
Burns the stubble 'neath thy tread?
No kind look thy gaze returning,
These poor parcels all thy store?
Surely God will give thee more,
Surely God will give thee more."

"Stand, then, mournfully and sigh;
Raise thy hands in meek submission;
Thy redeemer, Ruth, is nigh—
Marks thee with a gracious eye,
Knows thy lonely sad condition;
All thou'st given him and more
Shall be rendered from his store,
Shall be rendered from his store."

The details of the third point, being rather lengthy, are reserved for the next article. C. S.

WE are requested to state that the working of the Fifteen Sections at the Confidence Lodge of Instruction is unavoidably postponed from the 23rd inst. to Wednesday, the 17th May.

The RESURRECTION of the DEAD.

The resurrection of the dead is the most important subject that can occupy the attention of mortal man. It is a theme the most lofty upon which man can write or speak, and therefore I think it a mistake to speculate upon the subject merely as an abstract principle instead of one that has been brought to light by the glories of revelation. The state of the whole world, seven centuries before the Christian era, is graphically depicted by the prophet, "Behold the darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people," and then he immediately adds, "But Jehovah shall arise upon thee; and his glory shall be seen upon thee; and the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." The ideas of the after life of man in his state of immortality were among all peoples of the ancient world most gross and sensual, yet expressed by a most beautiful language in all the refined terms of scholarship and philosophic thought, so that as described by St. Paul (a perfect scholar of his age), to the Corinthians, in whose capital was a school of theology and philosophy, "That the world by wisdom knew not God." The same authority also declared "That life and immortality had been brought to light through the gospel," the light evidently predicted by the prophet. If so, then as Masons, who conspicuously acknowledge the authority of the Sacred Law, I think then we are bound to draw our inferences and mode of thought from that source alone. If so, the conclusion I arrive at is, that the word death, as we use it in common, is a misnomer; in fact, there is no such thing as natural death—a spiritual death there most certainly is. Death signifies the cessation of any particular state or quality. Man is said to be dead when in the bloom of health and activity, when within him there is a cessation of the principles of honour, integrity, or noble feelings. He is then said to have no life of goodness in him; but the separation of the body from the spirit is only a continuation of life in a new state, either of weal or woe, for as the tree falls so it lies. The works done in the body will go with him, and the dust shall return to the earth as it was, but the spirit unto God who gave it. In the volume of the Sacred Law the resurrection of the body is never even alluded to, it not being a fact; but a resurrection from a grave of iniquity is a constant theme, "And you hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and in sins." The resurrection of the dead, then, can take place only in this world, and not in the world to come. The real man, that is his spirit, is imprisoned, while in this world, in a covering of clay, and from which whether he is conscious of it or not, he is continually attempting to escape, which sometimes he does by his own violence. Man, while on earth, can never realize his hopes; "Man never is, but always to be, blest. His constant cry is "excelsior," and the wisest among men, whose glory is the theme of emulation, at the close of an unprecedented career of glory confessed, with saddened experience, "All has been vanity." "Call no one happy till he is dead," said the heathen sage to the then supposed richest monarch on the earth, and the Christian sage may say, "call no one happy till the resurrection of the soul from the grave of this body of flesh, which shall be on his last day in this world." Take the example of the resurrection of the warbler from the grave of his shell to his introduction to the world of light. The egg is a beautiful and vivid illustration of the resurrection of the dead. In that prison of the shell, from the pulpy and edible matter which it contains, are formed the bones, muscles, feathers, &c., to prepare it for its future life. The shell will be left behind and scattered to its native elements, as man shall leave behind him the shell of his body to be disposed of according to natural laws. The spirit is now in the spiritual world and obedient to spiritual laws; but here the comparison terminates. The feathered beauty enjoys his little day in the possession of sun and light, and the active tie congenial to its nature, busies itself in preparing for its progeny, and soon ceases to be an unit in the creation. Not so man; his resurrection has been to life eternal. All his aspirations, while in the grave of his body, will be set free. No longer pent up, "cabin'd, cribb'd, and confined," he can enter into the fulness of those delights of love and charity which he yearned for here. He has hungered and thirsted after the happiness of being, and doing, good; he is now satisfied. "Behold the fowls of the air. are ye not much better than they?"

GRAND CHAPTER OF ENGLAND.

The following is the business paper for the next convocation on Wednesday, the 3rd May:—

The regulations for the government of the Supreme Grand Chapter during the time of public business to be read.

The minutes of the last quarterly convocation to be read for confirmation.

Installation of Principals, and appointment and investiture of officers for the ensuing year.

Election of the Committee of General Purposes for the ensuing twelve months.

Report of the Committee of General Purposes.

The Committee of General Purposes beg to report that they have examined the accounts from the 18th January, 1871, to the 18th April, 1871, both inclusive, which they find to be as follows:

To balance 18th January ...	£343	9	7
„ subsequent receipts ...	315	1	8
	£658	11	3

By disbursements during the quarter ...	£241	18	8
By balance ...	416	12	7

which balance is in the hands of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., bankers of the Grand Treasurer.

The Committee beg also to report that they have again considered the question on which they reported to the last Grand Chapter, and which was referred back to them for further consideration and report, viz.: "as to the eligibility of a companion who had served as a Principal of a chapter acting under a foreign Constitution to be a Principal of an English chapter, he not having served the office of Worshipful Master in an English lodge." The Committee have not been able to alter the view they took of the question, and they therefore respectfully adhere to their report of the 18th January, 1871. The Committee refer Grand Chapter to the fact that the laws have been frequently relaxed in favour of companions in the colonies, but decline to offer any opinion as to the expediency of making any alteration on this question.

The Committee have received the following petitions:—

1st. From Companions James Mackay Cunningham as Z., Thomas Lane as H., Walter Kirkland as J., and seven others, for a chapter to be attached to the Hartington Lodge, No. 916, Eastbourne, to be called "The Hartington Chapter," and to meet at the Sussex Hotel, Eastbourne, Sussex.

2nd. From Companions Alfred John Hancocks as Z., James Fitzgerald as H., William Lea Faucott as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Hope and Charity, No. 377, Kidderminster, to be called "The Chapter of Hope and Charity," and to meet at the Lion Hotel, Kidderminster, Worcestershire.

3rd. From Companions Charles Henry Rogers-Harrison as Z., William B. Hambley as H., George Shück as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the St. Mark's Lodge, No. 857, Brixton, to be called "The St. Mark's Chapter," and to meet at the Duke of Edinburgh Hotel, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, Surrey.

4. From Companions John Thomas Barnes as Z., John Geeves Stevens as H., George Morris Elliott Snow as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Doric Lodge, No. 933, London, to be called "The Doric Chapter," and to meet at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, in the city of London.

5. From Companions Joseph Smith as Z., John Albert Farnfield as H., Rev. Joseph Marychurch Vaughan as J., and seven others, for a chapter to be attached to the Royal Albert Lodge, No. 907, London, to be called "The Royal Albert Chapter," and to meet at the White Hart Tavern, Abchurch-lane, in the city of London.

The foregoing petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

The Committee have also received a petition from the Eureka Chapter, praying to be detached from the Southern Cross Lodge, No. 793, meeting at Maldon, Victoria, and to be attached to the Mount Alexander Lodge, No. 692, meeting at Castlemaine, in the same colony. Both lodges having given their consent, the Committee recommend that the prayer of the petition be granted, subject to the approval of the District Grand Superintendent, which does not accompany the petition.

In consequence of the very insufficient manner in which many chapters make their returns to the Supreme Grand Chapter, the Committee beg further to report that they have passed the following resolution: "That all chapters be required to make a return annually of their subscribing members, and the rank each member holds in the chapter."

(Signed)

W. PULTENEY SCOTT, President.

Resolved—"That the best thanks of the Committee be given to the President, Companion William Pulteney Scott, not only for the great attention he has devoted to the business of Royal Arch Masonry, and for the admirable manner in which he has conducted the duties of the office he has so long and ably filled, but also for the urbanity and kindness with which he has presided over its meetings.

Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C.,
19th April, 1871.

CONSECRATION of the SCIENCE MARK LODGE, No. 128, at WINCANTON.

A special Mark Lodge was held at Wincanton, on Monday, the 17th inst., in the National School-room, by the very Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master of the Province of Somerset, Bro. Capt. F. G. Irwin, and his officers from Weston-super-Mare.

Bro. the W.D.P.G.M. appointed Bros. F. Vizard, S.W.; W. H. Davies, J.W.; Rev. R. H. Bigsby, Chap.; Jones, M.O.; Thomas Clarke, S.O.; A. W. Butter, J.O.; Benjamin Cox, Sec.; R. C. Else, S.D.; W. S. Gillard, J.D.; Dr. Swete, Org.; Major Vizard, I.G., as his officers pro tem., and proceeded to open the lodge, when the following brethren, having been approved of by ballot, were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master:—Bros. Charles R. Shepherd, W.M. 437; Rev. R. H. Wingfield Digby, P.M. 1168, and P.P.G.C., Dorset; Benjamin Atwell, P.M. 437; Wm. H. Hannen, S.W. 437; Dr. James Johnstone Luce, P.M. 437; John Fry, 437; Rev. Wm. J. E. Percy, Chap. 1168, and P.P.G.C. Dorset; Ernest Baker, 1168; Wm. Croad, 1168; John Rumsey, Org. 1168; Frederick Foan, 446; John Himbury, 1168; John Chaffin, S.W. 329; and Walter Dowding, 437. Nine other brethren were approved of by ballot but could not attend.

The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with. Bro. F. Vizard, W.M. 102, then presented Bro. William Salter Gillard, of Sherborne, W.M. of Craft Lodge 1168, for installation, and he having answered the usual queries, all brethren below the chair were requested to retire, when Bro. Gillard was installed as W.M. of the new lodge, who appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. F. Vizard, P.M.; Charles R. Shepherd, S.W.; John Howe Farley, J.W.; Rev. W. J. E. Percy, Chap.; Benjamin Atwell, Treas.; W. H. Hannen, Sec.; Dr. J. J. Luce, Registrar of Marks; A. W. Butter, M.O.; Ernest Baker, S.O.; John Fry, J.O.; John Chaffin, D.C.; John Rumsey, Org.; Walter Dowding, S.D.; F. Foan, J.D.; John Himbury, I.G.; William Croad, Steward.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the W.M. proposed, in feeling terms, a very cordial vote of thanks to the D.P.G.M. and his officers for the perfect manner in which the ceremonies had been worked, which was suitably acknowledged.

The business being concluded, thirty of the brethren adjourned to the Greyhound Hotel, where a banquet was prepared, which was presided over by the new W.M., who was well supported right and left.

This bids fair to be a very strong lodge of Mark Master Masons, as, in addition to the 23 brethren approved by ballot, 14 Mark Master Masons were admitted as members of the lodge.

A PATRON of a certain newspaper once said to the publisher: "Mr. Printer, how is it you have never called on me for pay for your paper?" "Oh," said the man of types, "we never ask a gentleman for money." "Indeed," replied the patron, "how do you manage to get along when they don't pay you?" "Why," said the editor, "after a certain time we conclude he is no gentleman, and we ask him." "Oh—ah—yes—I see. Mr. Editor, please give me a receipt," and hands him a V. "Make my name all right on your books."—Keystone.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Pythagorean Lodge, No. 79.—This ancient lodge held its usual monthly meeting (the last of the season) on Monday, 24th inst., at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich. The lodge having been opened by the W.M., Bro. J. S. Burls, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. In consequence of the unavoidable absence of the candidates, no work was done, an event which has not happened in this lodge for many years. A resolution was unanimously carried that a letter of condolence be sent to the highly-respected S.W., Bro. C. Nash, on the loss he had that day sustained in the death of his wife. This event cast a gloom over the meeting, more particularly at the festive board. One pound was given to a poor brother hailing from Scotland. The lodge was closed until Monday, September 25th. There were present Bros. Roberts, S.D.; Munyard, J.D.; Shaw I.G.; W. West Smith, P.M., D.C.; J. H. H. Doughney, P.M., Sec.; T. Perridge, P.M., Partridge, Wilkins, Dussec, &c., and amongst other visitors were Bros. F. Walters, H. Keeble, H. Bagshaw, and A. Stevens.

Lodge of United Strength, No. 228.—The last meeting of the season of this flourishing old lodge was held on Tuesday, the 11th inst., at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell. Bro. B. Robards, W.M., opened the lodge, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Three members of the Finsbury Park Lodge, 1288, viz., Bros. T. Goode, jun., F. Rothschild, and F. W. Simmonds, were introduced, two were passed and the other raised by the W.M., Bro. Robards. The ceremonies were performed in a correct manner, as is usual in this lodge, which can boast of having amongst its members at least half a dozen P.M.'s capable of working the Fifteen Sections. Business having been disposed of, the brethren sat down to one of Bro. Wickens' excellent banquets. Toasts and songs followed in most agreeable style. Bro. Terry responded for the P.M.'s and Bro. F. Walters for the visitors. There were present: Bros. Winsland, P.M., Treas.; Crump, P.M., Sec.; J. Terry and E. Davis, P.M.'s; J. Hillhouse, S.D.; J. White, J.D.; W. Smith, D.C.; R. Griggs, and many others. Visitors: Bros. F. Walters, J. Newton, and T. Meekham, P.M.'s; J. Goode, F. Rothschild, F. W. Simmonds, G. De Maid, &c.

New Concord Lodge, No. 813.—The first meeting of this flourishing lodge since the installation was held on Friday, the 21st inst., at the Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Atkins, supported by Bros. Salisbury, S.W.; Denny, J.W.; J. J. Wilson, P.M., Treas.; W. H. Main, P.M., Sec.; A. Hill, S.D.; Mountford, J.D.; C. Hill, I.G.; Sinclair, D.C.; Fauquez, W.S.; and several others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot proved unanimous in favour of a candidate for initiation. Two brethren were passed, all the officers doing their several parts of the ceremony in an excellent manner. An eloquent appeal for votes for a widow (Mrs. Carvell), who is a candidate for the annuity fund, was made by Bro. Wilson, and met with a good response. The lodge was then closed, and supper was served under the superintendence of the host, Bro. Gabb, who, as usual, was unremitting in his endeavours to make every one comfortable. A very pleasant evening was spent. Bro. F. Walters, W.M. 1309, responded for the visitors, one of whom was Bro. J. Terry, P.M. 228, P.G.S.B. Herts.

Rose of Denmark Lodge No. 975.—This flourishing lodge met at the White Hart, Barnes, Surrey, on Friday, the 21st inst. Bro. C. A. Smith, W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. W. H. Barnard, S.W.; S. H. Stephens, J.W.; G. T. Noyce, P.M. and Treas.; R. W. Little, P.M. and Sec.; K. B. Huddleston, S.D.; C. Butcher, J.D.; T. Farrell, W.S.; H. Potter, P.M.; W. Hamlyn, H. N. Hewett, J. Ayles, J. T. Clipson, W. Hayes, P. Davis, S. Curtis, Harris, Phillips, C. Willcox, T. T. Willcox, Spittle, Makepeace, Parr, Tyler, Brooks, and S. Harris, with a large number of visitors, including Bros. Bond, Stean, and Fabian, P.M.'s. Five brethren were raised to the third degree, the ceremony being admirably rendered by the W.M. and his officers. Mr. W. Palmer was then initiated, and the resignation of Bro. Claridge was announced. Pursuant to notice of motion, it was proposed, seconded and carried unanimously that the sum of five guineas be voted to the "Wentworth Little Testimonial" fund, and Bro. Noyce, P.M., Treas., as the seconder, spoke in the highest terms of Bro. Little's services to the Craft, and to the Rose of Denmark Lodge in particular, during the last eight years. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a substantial repast, when the evening was enlivened with several good speeches and songs. The W.M. is evidently a Mason of the right stamp, who can perform his duties well both in the lodge and at the festive board, and now that the "Rose of Denmark" has become a summer lodge, an even greater share of prosperity may be expected to attend its future career.

PROVINCIAL.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—One of the regular monthly meetings of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on the 20th inst., when there were present: Bros. T. H. Hubbard, W.M., in the chair; W. B. Smith, P.M. and Treas., as S.W.; Charles Johnson, P.M. and Org., as J.W.; A. Sargeant, as Sec.; E. Mace, I.G.; J. G. Thorp, C. Whittaker, W. T. Rowlett, Dr. Clifton, A. Ross, C. B. Lange, R. V. Barrers, and C. Bembridge (Tyler). Visitors: Bros. C. Wiede, Germany; J. M. Moore, J.W. 1085, Derby; J. H. Johnston, P.M. 129 and P.P.G. J. W. Cumberland; and W. E. S. Stacey, M.R.C.S., A. Palmer, R. W. Widdowson, George Statham, and L. S. Atwood, of No. 279. Apologies were made for the unusual absence of so many of the officers, the P.G.M., the I.P.M., S.W., Secretary, and S.D. having gone to Birmingham to pay a return visit to the officers of the Rose of Sharon Conclave of the Red Cross Order, and the J.W. being in ill health. After the preliminary duties had been performed, Bros. Dr. Clifton and Barrow were severally raised to the sublime degree of M.M. There being no further business before meeting, the lodge was closed down and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

MANCHESTER.—Yarborough Lodge No. 633.—This lodge held its usual monthly meeting at the Masonic Hall, Cooper-street, Manchester, on the 19th inst. Bro. W. H. Hopkins, W.M., presided, assisted by Bros. Williams, S.W.; Sussman, J.W.; Openheine, S.D.; Orton, J.D.; and Linck, I.G. There were about thirty brethren present, including Bros. Lieben, P.M.; Goplett, P.M.; Sallon, P.M.; Nathan, P.M.; Schlessenger, Treas.; Phillips, Sec., and several visiting brethren. Bros. Hugo Goetz and R. Wilson was raised to the sublime degree of M.M.s, and Bro. J. G. Wilson having answered the necessary questions were passed to the second degree. Too much praise cannot be given to the W.M. and his officers for the masterly manner in which the ceremonies of this lodge are worked. After the business of the evening, the brethren adjourned for refreshment, provided in the hall by Miss Nelson in her usual praiseworthy style.

STAFFORD.—Staffordshire Knot Lodge, No. 726.—The anniversary festival of St. John the Evangelist of the Staffordshire Knot Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons was held on Tuesday, the 11th inst., at the Vine Hotel. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. John Bodenham, who read several letters apologising for the absence of various brethren, amongst them being one from the Provincial D.G.M., G. Singleton Tudor. The lodge having been raised to the third degree, the installation of Bro. J. Pilling took place as Worshipful Master for the year ensuing, in the presence of several Past Masters, the other brethren having previously retired. On their re-admission to the lodge room, the W.M.-elect was declared to have been elected in the usual form, and he then proceeded to the appointment of his various officers, namely, Bros. James Senior, S.W.; Arthur Gee, J.W.; Thomas Moore, S.D.; James C. Marson, J.D.; Henry Woodhouse, Treas.; N. Joyce, Sec.; Henry Fairhead, I.G.; F. Greatrex and John T. Cox, Stewards; and William Dibb, Tyler; after which the lodge was closed. The customary banquet took place at five o'clock, the W.M. presiding. Amongst those present were: Bros. C. Marsh, P.M., W.M. 460; John Bodenham, P.M.; George Spilsbury, P.M.; George Gordon Warren, P.M.; John Storer, P.M.; W. Clarke, J. T. Cox, W. Dibb, H. Fairhead, A. Gee, F. Greatrix, G. W. Hodgkinson, J. R. Jones, J. C. Marson, and James Senior. The dinner was sumptuous and well served. The toast of "The Queen and the Craft," followed by others, were given, and drunk with Masonic honours.—The health of the W.M. was proposed by Bro. Bodenham, P.M., who observed that amongst the many pleasurable duties which his official year had brought about, none had afforded him greater pleasure than that day engaging in the installation of Bro. Pilling as the W.M. of their lodge. His regular and admirable discharge of all previous appointments, and the very hearty manner in which he had taken an interest in Masonry, pointed him out as a brother every way worthy of the honour which had been conferred on him; and he believed that the gavel of the lodge would pass from him with the hearty good feeling of Masonry kept up, and its interests in every way promoted.—The W.M. assured the brethren that no duty should be neglected by him, and he hoped, with the assistance of his officers and the Past Masters of the lodge, to maintain the honour of Masonry and the prosperity of the lodge.—In the course of the evening, Bro. Bodenham, P.M., called attention to the various Masonic charities, suggesting a plan by which a more certain and regular revenue could be secured. Bro. Bodenham's idea is, that by the payment of a guinea per year by twenty brethren, four life memberships could be obtained the first year, and the continuation of the payment for five years would secure, in a comparatively easy way, a life membership for each of the twenty brethren in either the Aged Freemasons' and Widows' Institution, or the Boys' and Girls' Schools, and at the same time ensure a more permanent source of revenue to the charities.—The suggestion was most favourably received, and will be likely to meet with general adoption.—The "Tyler's toast" brought the proceedings of a pleasurable evening to a close.

ROCHESTER.—Gundulph Lodge, No. 1050.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the King's Head Hotel, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect, Bro. Ransom, when there was a very large assembly of the Craft. The W.M., Bro. Rei Fry, having opened the lodge to the second degree, called upon Bro. G. Ashdown, P.M. 1050 and P.P.G. Purst, Kent, to perform the ceremony, which he carried through in that most excellent and impressive manner which characterize all his Masonic work. After the W.M. had been placed in the chair of K.S. and regularly saluted, he appointed the following as his officers for the following year: Bro. Rei Fry, I.P.M.; G. Watson, S.W.; R. Bruce, J.W.; J. O. Moore, Treas.; J. Nicholls, Sec.; G. Sollitt, S.D.; G. Curel, J.D.; W. Newton, I.G.; W. Colson, D.C.; A. Bryant, Organist; W. Curel and J. P. Griffen, Stewards; and Fearn, Tyler. The W.M. then presented in very complimentary terms a splendid solid gold P.M.'s jewel, subscribed for privately by the brethren of the lodge, to Bro. P.M. Fry, for the satisfactory manner in which he had performed the duties of W.M. during the past year, and as a mark of their respect and esteem.—Bro. Fry thanked the brethren in a very feeling manner, and assured them that as long as life lasted he should place a very high value on their present, and said that having received his Masonic birth in the Gundulph, and after filling various offices (particularly that of W.M.), it was most gratifying to him to feel that he still had their confidence and esteem, and that they had shown it in such a marked manner. Bro. Fry then presented to the lodge a W.M.'s gavel with the wish that each successive W.M. might with it command that attention and respect which his high position entitles him to. (The gavel is of ebony and ivory, inlaid with a silver tablet bearing a suitable inscription. It was supplied by Bro. George Kenning, Little Britain, London, and was greatly admired.)—The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet presided over by the W.M., supported on his right by the Rev. Bro. Robinson, P.P.G. Chaplain Cambridgeshire, and on his left by Bro. Rei Fry, I.P.M. There there were about fifty present. The usual Masonic toasts were duly proposed and responded to. Bro. P.M. Fry, in proposing the health of the W.M., expressed the gratification he felt in doing so. He was truly pleased that his mantle had fallen on so worthy a brother; he had been closely associated with him for many years, and was convinced that he was imbued with those great Masonic principles which would enable him to carry out his duties to his own credit and to the honour of the lodge.—The W.M. thanked them in a very neat speech for the cordial reception he had received at their hands; he would endeavour to the utmost of his ability to carry out his duties to their satisfaction, and trusted that at the expiration of his year of office he might still retain their esteem.—After spending a most pleasant evening the brethren separated at an early hour.

HAMPTON COURT.—Burdett Lodge, No. 1293.—This lodge met at the Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court, on Saturday, the 22nd inst., under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. R. Wentworth Little, who was supported by Bros. Col. Burdett, P.G.M., I.P.M.; R. Kenyon, S.W.; J. Self, M.D., as J.W.; Rev. D. Shaboe, P.M. Prov. G. Chaplain; H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treas.; D. R. Adams, P.M.; S. Rosenthal, P.M., Major E. H. Finney, E. H. Finney, jun., R. Kotzenburg, C. Smethurst, H. Phythian, and by several visiting brethren, including Bros. T. H. Edmonds, G. Steward, W.M. 8; J. Bond, P.M. 145; W. Tinkler, W.M.; D. C. M. Gordon, E. Kimber, and D. Spielmann. The lodge having been duly opened and the minutes confirmed, a ballot was taken for Mr. Frederic Kelly, and the same proving favourable, he was then initiated into the Order. Bro. Phythian, a candidate for the third degree, was examined, after which the W.M. vacated the chair in order to allow Bro. Adams, P.M., to perform the ceremony of raising his friend at his special request. The lodge was afterwards resumed in the first degree, when a joining member was proposed. Bro. the Rev. D. Shaboe presented the lodge with a handsome charity box, and expressed a hope that through its instrumentality the lodge might soon become a Life Governor of all the Masonic charities.—A vote of thanks was heartily awarded to Bro. Shaboe for his very appropriate gift, and Bro. Rosenthal then intimated his intention to present the Deacons' wards.—All business having been concluded, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the social board.—After the cloth was cleared, the W.M. gave the usual toasts, Bro. Edmonds responding for the Grand Officers, and Bros. Shaboe and Buss for the Prov. Grand Officers.—The W.M.'s health was then proposed by the I.P.M., Col. Burdett, and warmly received, and after due honour had been paid to the "Initiate," Bro. Little proposed the health of the I.P.M., Col. Francis Burdett, P.G.M., and in the course of his observations placed upon the gallant brother's breast a magnificent 18-carat gold jewel, upon the ribbon of which was a shield bearing the arms of the Burdett family beautifully engraved. The presentation was greeted with immense applause, and the R.W. brother returned thanks in most appreciative terms, saying that he should value the P.M.'s jewel of the Burdett Lodge as the proudest decoration he could wear.—The toast of "The Visitors" was given with great unction by the W.M., who particularly noticed them all, but specially coupled with the toast the name of an esteemed P.M., Bro. John Boyd, of the Prudent Brethren and Polish National Lodges.—Bro. Boyd responded in handsome terms for the compliment, and expressed himself highly pleased both with the working and the hospitality of the lodge.—Bro. E. Kimber then gave one of his inimitable parodies of the speeches made by Hon. Members of "The House," when presenting petitions, and his talented exertions were hailed with unanimous demonstrations of approval.—For the Officers Bro. Kenyon, S.W., replied, and hoped all would do their duty and maintain the prestige of the lodge.—Bro. Major Finney expressed the acknowledgments of the "lay members" for the honour done them in proposing and drinking their healths, and the charity box having been sent round and the Tyler's toast given, the brethren departed to catch the 9.20 train to town.

ROYAL ARCH.

Mount Zion Chapter, No. 22.—The regular convocation of this chapter was held on Monday, the 10th inst., at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars. The chapter was presided over by Comps. Cox, P.Z., as M.E.Z.; R. Wright, II.; and Bryant, J. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. It being Easter week and so many of the Companions away at Brighton, no work was done. A P.Z.'s jewel was voted to another old P.Z. for past services. Some other business having been disposed of the chapter was closed until Monday, October the 9th. Supper followed.

Pythagorean Chapter, No. 79.—The anniversary meeting of this prosperous chapter was held on Thursday, the 20th inst., at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich. Punctually at five o'clock the chapter was opened by Comps. J. H. H. Doughney, M.E.Z.; R. Boney, H.; and W. West Smith, J. Comps. J. Brett, Simpson, and J. W. Halsey, P.Z.'s, were also present. The minutes of preceeding meeting were read and confirmed, when ballots were taken which proved unanimous in favour of the exaltation of Bros. Partridge (79) and Phillips (W.M. 548), Comp. James Brett occupied the several chairs, and in his well-known superior manner installed Comps. Thomas Perridge as J., W. West Smith as H., and Boney as M.E.Z. The following companions were appointed as officers for the ensuing year: Comps. Perridge, J., Treas.; J. Griffin, S.E.; J. R. Nash, S.N.; R. Trill, P.S.; E. Bumstead, 1st A.S.; W. Myatt, 2nd A.S.; Grant, Janitor. The newly-appointed officers soon gave proofs of their proficiency by the admirable manner in which they exalted Bro. Partridge into Royal Arch Masonry. The M.E.Z., on behalf of the subscribers, presented Comp. J. H. H. Doughney, with a six-guinea P.Z.'s jewel, as a mark of esteem for the admirable manner he had conducted the chapter as its first M.E.Z., and for the many services rendered as one of its founders. Comp. Doughney, in a feeling speech acknowledged the present. The usual business having been disposed of, the chapter was closed until October. A first-class banquet followed.

Beacon Chapter, No. 619.—An emergency meeting of this chapter was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Dulwich, on Thursday, the 13th inst. Companions J. W. Avery, M.E.Z.; H. Massey, H.; and J. W. Halsey, J., opened the chapter. Comp. F. Walters, P.Z., as acting S.E., read the minutes of preceeding meeting, which were unanimously confirmed. Ballots were unanimous in favour of the three candidates who were proposed for exaltation. Bro. J. H. Harmsworth, S.D. 1173, being present, was exalted into Royal Arch Masonry, the ceremony being well rendered, as every officer was proficient in his duties. Comps. G. A. Smith, S.C., and W. H. Green, were the Sojourners on this occasion. It was carried unanimously that the future meetings of the chapter be held at Comp. C. Gosden's, Masons' Hall Tavern, Mason's-avenue. No less than a dozen names were mentioned of brethren who were anxious to be advanced in this chapter at the next meeting. The chapter was closed, supper was served, and the Companions returned to town by an early train. Visitor: Comp. Laskey, 72.

MARK MASONRY.

GUILDFORD.—Percy Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 114.—This lodge assembled at the Angel Hotel, Guildford, on Thursday, the 20th inst., in goodly numbers. Bro. Earl Percy, M.P., W.M.; the Rev. G. R. Portal, M.W.G.M. of Mark Masters; A. R. Grenfell, the Rev. L. O. Bigg, Drewett, Wells, Mason, Smallpeice, Peggott, Nealds, Charrington, Vickers, and Botting, were among the members present. The W.M. having opened the lodge, a ballot took place for Bro. James Knight, of Farnham, banker, P.M. St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1046, and Bro. Richard Eve, of Aldershot, solicitor, P.M. Lodge of Peace and Harmony, No. 359, and both were elected. The W.M. proceeded to advance Bro. Eve, he being the only candidate present out of five. After this ceremony had been performed, Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, M.W.G.M., Chaplain to this lodge, proposed the reelection of Earl Percy, as W.M., to mark the high respect in which his lordship was held and in recognition of the kind manner in which he had presided over the lodge and of the great assistance he had given to its support.—Bro. Grenfell ably seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.—Earl Percy gracefully acknowledged the compliment offered to him, which he accepted with pleasure, and hoped that his numerous engagements would not prevent the attention to his duties at this lodge which he desired to give; he trusted the prosperity and success which had hitherto attended this lodge would continue.—Bro. Smallpeice was also unanimously elected Treasurer, and returned thanks for the honour. He was requested to remit £3 3s. to the Charitable Fund attached to the Grand Lodge.—Bro. Rev. L. O. Bigg kindly consented to act as a Steward at the ensuing festival.—It was suggested it would be desirable to hold a Mark Lodge during the Bath and West of England Exhibition, which will take place at Guildford in June. The W.M. promised to attend to it and appoint a day.—The lodge was then closed, and the brethren repaired to the banquet hall, and partook of the excellent repast which Bro. Michaux, of the Angel Hotel, had provided.

THE Grand Conclave of Knights Templar will be held at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars, on Friday, the 12th May, at 3 o'clock.

NEW MUSIC.—Mr. Andrew Nimmo, of Wigmore-street, has just published the song, "Adieu! a Heart's-warm, Fond Adieu!" by Mr. J. A. Shaw, the well-known comedian. The melody is charming, breathing the true spirit of the words. It is dedicated to Mr. G. Honey, of the Vaudeville Theatre.

THE length of the Grand Festival report excludes the following, amongst other matters, from the present number:—Article on the Royal Arch by Bro. Carpenter, Masonic reception of Earl de Grey and Ripon at Washington, letters from Bro. Yarker and Jacob Norton, reports of Lodge 1089 Sheerness, Camden Lodge of Instruction, Chapter 292 Liverpool, Red Cross Conclaves 35 and 44, A. and A Rite Bournemouth.

THE Mot d'Ordre announces that M. Thiers received a Masonic delegation, who went to ask an armistice in favour of the inhabitants of Neuilly, and to propose an arrangement on the basis of the recognition, pure and simple, of the Municipal franchise of Paris. M. Thiers replied that, as regards the first point, General Ladmiraunt would grant a truce for the time absolutely necessary for the inhabitants to leave the villages which are being bombarded. On the second point no understanding was possible, M. Thiers declaring that for the present he adheres to the Municipal law voted by the Assembly.

GALVANISM.—Pulvermacher's Monthly Record of Cures is now ready for the benefit of Sufferers, containing documentary evidence of remarkable Cures effected by Pulvermacher's Improved Patent Self-applicable Volta-Electric Chain-Bands and Pocket Batteries, and may be had on application to the Sole Inventor and Patentee—J. L. Pulvermacher, 200, Regent-street, London, W. A Test on Loan sent gratis if required. Caution.—Spurious Electric Appliances being advertised by Quack Doctors, Patients should consult Pulvermacher's Pamphlet on that subject (free by post), embodying other most interesting matter for those suffering from Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Functional Disorders, &c., &c.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Effects of Colds.—In spring almost every current of air is pregnant with sore throats, influenza, and a host of similar annoying disorders. All may be readily subdued by rubbing Holloway's ointment externally over the affected part. The unguent penetrates and corrects diseased and erroneous action. Whatever, or wherever the malady, this invaluable ointment searches out its cause and safely effects the precise remedial action required, without weakening the system or leaving behind the seeds of future disease. Holloway's pills greatly assist this curative action. The sick of all nations have voluntarily borne testimony to the wonderful cures performed by Holloway's medicaments when both the faculty and the patients themselves saw no relief but death.—[Advt.]

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opium Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

FREEMASONRY IN FRANCE.

WE regret having to chronicle another of those unaccountable acts of folly on the part of the Freemasons of France, or perhaps we should say, of Paris, which have both astonished and grieved the friends of the Craft in every other land. It is announced that the Parisian brethren have met and determined to offer their services as mediators between the two contending parties, whose internecine strife seems destined to complete the ruin of France. If this action on the part of the Brotherhood were all we had to record, it would elicit nothing but praise and a hearty God-speed from every English Mason; but, unfortunately, our French brethren go further—they parade their political bias, and degrade the Order to which they belong, by adopting the views of the Commune as the Masonic programme of peace. Now we have nothing whatever to say against brethren in any part of the globe adhering manfully to their political creed, whether it be Cæsarism, royalism, or federalism but we must reiterate our protest against the name of Freemasonry being imported into discussions which are entirely foreign to its original scope, as well as to its present objects.

Fancy the Grand Lodge of England, after solemn debate, condemning Mr. Lowe's budget, or pronouncing in favour of the ballot! The very idea sounds supremely ridiculous, and yet it is with questions like these that the French Grand Orient, or the lodges under its control, are continually meddling. It was only the other day that an official of this semi-political body repudiated with emphasis the assumption that the Grand Orient had authorised the establishment of the Rite of Misraim in England—the effect of which denial was, upon our mind, rather favourable to the promoters of the Rite than otherwise, inasmuch as we should have felt it our duty to denounce the introduction into this country of any new degrees which derived their origin from so doubtful a source. Naturally one would be led to imagine from M. Thevenôt's letter that the Grand Orient never recognised irregular bodies or encroached upon other Masonic jurisdictions. Yet, strange to say, we find that the spurious Grand Lodge of Philadelphes, or Reformed Rite of Memphis, now meeting in London, comprises amongst its list of members the names of a present official and an ex-official of the Grand Orient of France, and we are also in possession of the awkward fact that members of the spurious lodges here are freely received and welcomed by their brother Socialists of the Masonic lodges in Paris.

Our American brethren have sustained a similar, if not a more grievous, wrong at the hands of M. Thevenôt and his colleagues, by whose fostering care a clandestine body of Masons has been established in the State of Louisiana. For this scandalous breach of Masonic honour the Grand Orient has been very justly placed under the ban of the American Craft, and no Mason hailing from the Rue Cadet, or its subordinate ateliers, will now be acknowledged by any Lodge in the United States. We deplore the course of action which the Grand Orient has of late years thought fit to pursue, and we warn our French brethren that such conduct, if persevered in, will entail very serious consequences. It will become a question whether the Grand Lodges of Great Britain, Germany, or America can any longer recognise as Masons men who so frequently pervert the influence of the Fraternity to their own selfish ends. Our English readers do not require to be informed that the Grand Lodge of England has ever steadily declined exchanging representatives with the Grand Orient—mainly, we believe, on the ground that two so-called supreme Masonic bodies exist, and have for many years past existed, in France. This, however, has not prevented the admission of French Masons to a participation in the labours of our lodges both as visitors and affiliated members. But now that the first principles of the Craft are openly spurned—now that we find an assemblage of Parisian Masons accepting the theories of a political faction as their own, and not only accepting those theories, but preparing to propound them as an ultimatum to their opponents in arms—surely it is time for all who value true Masonry to disavow such acts and to reject such men as Masons.

Let us amputate an arm, lest the whole body perish. Let us sever all Masonic intercourse with these fanatics, rather than allow the fair fame of our ancient Order to be tarnished by their unmasonic deeds. It can scarcely be matter of wonder to the outer world that Freemasonry is denounced as an irreligious and turbulent sect by priests and rulers when we see such colour given to the accusation by the insensate doings of Parisian Masons. An Order whose watchwords are "Glory to God on high, on earth peace, goodwill to all mankind," is made to assume the appearance of a truculent league for the abolition of all government—human and divine. A Fraternity which should ever be the Palladium of true freedom, is pressed into the service of anarchy and blood! And are we, who boast ourselves the guardians and conservators of pure ancient Masonry, to stand by with folded arms and voiceless lips while this most miserable metamorphosis is being effected? Are we to give the sanction of our silence to proceedings which strike at the root of all Masonry? No! let it go forth to the world that the Freemasons of England disavow most heartily the manifestoes of those misguided French brethren, and repudiate any connection in their fraternization with the Communists or Red Republicans. It is nevertheless important to bear in mind that it is with their action as a body we find fault, and not with the opinions which any individual Mason may choose to enunciate and support. We fear, however, that the evil is almost ineradicable, and that nothing but ostracism for a time from the Masonic Body Universal will cure our French brethren of the fatal fancy for using their influence as Masons in political matters. They must also be taught the virtue of non-interference as regards other Masonic jurisdictions—a lesson which American Grand Lodges have already enforced. The quasi-recognition which they have extended to the Grand Lodge of Philadelphes in London would alone call for severe measures on the part of the Grand Lodge of England, and viewed in connection with their general proceedings, it becomes a crime of no small magnitude.

There are, we doubt not, many true and honourable members of the Masonic Order in France, and to them we appeal in order to avert the ruin which impends over French Freemasonry. To them we appeal to preserve the few remaining links which still unite our erring brethren to the great chain of the Craft Universal. But if their efforts should fail, we must then invoke more powerful aid, and resolutely lop off from the parent tree a branch which bears such strange, unwholesome fruit.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE PRAYER AT INITIATION (p. 234).

Bro. William Carpenter has directed attention to a passage in the prayer at initiation. The word "so" surely means to imply an amount of strength and assurance—"and grant that this, &c., may so," i.e., in such manner, dedicate, &c., as to, &c. The passage, I fancy, is weakened by the suggestion of my esteemed old friend, whom I am glad to see "chipper and sassy" as ever.

CRYPTONYMUS.

BRO. FORSYTH AND "ROYAL ARCH MASONRY."

In the sketch of "Templarism" in connection with Freemasonry Bro. Forsyth remarks that the "earliest printed notice" of the Royal Arch "is an address by Laurence Dermott, published about the middle of the last century."

Without entering into the question which Bro. Forsyth is anxious to elucidate, I should like to mention that the above address is not the earliest reference in print to Royal Arch. I presume Bro. Forsyth's authority for the statement is the "Introduction to the Regulations of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Scotland." If he will examine the latest edition of that excellent publication, he will find that the earliest printed work is Dr. Dassigny's of A.D. 1744, being twenty years earlier than the address referred to.

It was on my representation that the alteration in the admirable "Introduction" was made, as I have a copy of the work of A.D. 1744, open for any brother's inspection, and intend soon to have it reprinted for the information of the Craft universal.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

P.S.—The Royal Arch can thus be traced in print for one hundred and twenty-seven years, but Masonic Knight Templary cannot for anything like that period.

W. J. H.

"COWAN" AND ITS ORIGIN, &c.

I would like to draw the attention of Bro. William Carpenter, P.M., to the following reference to the above subject in "The Origin and Early History of Masonry," published by the well-known firm, The Masonic Publishing Company, New York, 1864:—

The original meaning of the word "cowan," which has so long been the subject of discussion among Masonic writers, will be found in John Jamieson's "Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language," 2 vols. folio, Edinburgh, 1808, and plainly shows that our ritual is derived from that of the operative Masons, viz. :—

"Cowan: S. 1.—A term of contempt, applied to one who does the work of a mason, but has not been regularly bred. (Scottish.)"

"2.—Also used to denote one who builds dry walls, otherwise denominated a dry-diker. (Scottish.)"

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

THE LATE SULTAN MAHMOUD ON TOLERATION.

"Let protection be equally extended to every one. Mussulmans must only be distinguished from other men at the mosque, Christians at the church, and Jews at the synagogue."

W. P. B.

In answer to the query of your correspondent "P.M.," in last week's impression, I have to state that the Tyler of Lodge of Virtue and Silence, No. 332, Hadleigh, Suffolk, is in possession of a copy of "Brown's Master Key," without any date, but apparently a very old edition.

W. HART, P.M. 332.

"HELE."

I have recently observed in THE FREEMASON a controversy as to the correct word to be used in the O.B. whether it should be "hail" or "hele." Now, I have recently met with a definition which I think is the best I have ever heard, and which induces me to extract it for the benefit of your readers; it is to be found in Mackay's "Lexicon of Freemasonry," page 131. I give the extract below:—

Hail or Hele.—This word is used among Masons with two very different significations:—1. When addressed as an enquiry to a visiting brother it has the same import as that in which it is used under like circumstances by mariners. Thus—"Whence do you hail?" that is, "Of what lodge are you a member?" Used in this sense, it comes from the Saxon term of salutation, "hæl," and should be spelt "hail." 2. Its second use is confined to what Masons understand by the "tie," and in this sense it signifies conceal, being derived from the Saxon word "helan," to hide. The preservation of this Saxon word in the Masonic dialect, while it has ceased to exist in the vernacular, is a striking proof of the antiquity of the Order and its ceremonies in England.

The author adds in a footnote—

"E" in Anglo-Saxon is to be pronounced as "a" in the word fate.

In the western parts of England, says Lord King, "at this very day to hele over anything signifies among the common people to cover it, and he that covereth an house with tile or slate is called a hellier."—Critical History of the Apostles' Creed, page 178.

There is another definition of the word "heal" at page 133 of the same work, but that is beside the present question.

W.M.

THE ANNUS LUCIS.

I was surprised to see in a calendar that this was found by adding 4004 to the Annus Domini. Surely this must be wrong, the practice in the Grand Secretary's Office being different, as every Craft certificate giving the two dates shows a difference of only 4000 years.

W.M.

LODGES OF INSTRUCTION.

Will some Master of a lodge of instruction kindly give some practical information as to the establishment of one of these, the regulations respecting which in the Constitutions are very vague. Is a petition for one necessary, and if so, is it to be in the same form as that for an ordinary lodge, and are the officers to be named therein to hold their offices for the usual year? or, can a lodge by a mere resolution sanction certain brethren holding a lodge of instruction whose officers shall change at every meet-by rotation, and can such brethren admit as regular joining members brethren not belonging to the mother lodge?

W.M.

A CURIOUS RELIC.

Bro. George D. Stanton, M.D., of Stonington, Conn. Deputy Grand Lecturer, communicates the following interesting account:—

I have in my possession a curious and remarkable Indian relic, which was ploughed up last fall in this town, near the vicinity of an old Indian settlement. It appears to have been an Indian "medicine man's" charm. It is of slate, bearing on one side the outline of a human face, above which are rudely drawn the rays of the sun. On reverse are some characters emblematic of different degrees of Masonry. There is also another character enclosing the oblong square or grave and spring of Acacia, which is a mystery to me, unless it was intended to represent the sickle. I have conferred with Grand Lecturer C. M. Hatch, of this State, and some antiquarians, for the solution of the mystery of this singular stone, without any satisfactory results. We have local traditions here of certain Indian chiefs in the early colonial days having shown evidences of Masonry, but nothing authentic. At Newport, R.I., thirty miles from here, there is a peculiarly constructed stone and mortar tower, concerning the origin of which there is no traditional nor historical account; but it is supposed by some that it was built centuries ago by the "Northern men." The Indians might have obtained the Masonic degrees from these "Northern men," or, at a later date, from the earliest French settlers. This stone was unmistakably carved by means of rude stone chisels, and was, therefore, probably made before the iron implements of the English settlers came into use among them.—N. Y. Dispatch.

GRAND FESTIVAL.

The Grand Festival of the Grand Lodge of England was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. The Grand Master was not present; but his place was admirably filled by the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master. Grand Lodge was not very full, but there were a considerable number of town and country brethren present, the Senior Grand Warden's chair being filled by Bro. Algernon Perkins, and the Grand Junior Warden, Sir F. M. Williams, M.P., occupying his own seat.

We noticed the following Grand Officers on the dais:—R.W. Bro. R. J. Lewis, D.G.M., Sumatra, as Deputy G. Master; Lord Eliot, P.G.W.; Samuel Tomkins, G. Treas.; Æneas J. McIntyre, G. Reg.; F. P. Cockerell, G. Supt. of Works; R. J. Bagshaw, P.G.M., Essex; Rev. J. Huyshe, P.G.M., Devon; R. Hamilton, P.G.M. Jamaica; J. I. Evans, P.B.G.P.; Major Creaton, H. Browse, G. Cox, J. Savage, S. L. Tomkins, C. Hutton, Gregory, E. B. Sutton, C. C. Dumas, J. Cooper Forster, Thomas Fenn, P.G.D.'s; Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter) G.D.C.; John Hervey, G. Secretary; E. E. Wendt, G. Sec. German Correspondence; Rev. Dr. J. E. Cox, Rev. C. J. Martin, Rev. W. F. Short, Rev. Sir J. W. Hayes, Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.'s; W. Farnfield, P. Assist. G. Sec.; Hyde Pullen, E. H. Patten, J. Nunn, E. Busher, James Mason, J. Hollon, P.G.S.B.'s; James Coward, P.G.O.; J. Smith, James Brett, W. Ough, P.G.P.'s

After the formal opening of Grand Lodge, Grand Secretary read the minutes of last quarterly communication, which were put to the brethren and unanimously confirmed.

The Acting GRAND MASTER then rose and said that, as Grand Master was not present, the installation and saluting of him must be omitted; but he was commissioned by his lordship to state that he regretted his absence, which he knew they would excuse. The Acting Grand Master further stated that it had pleased the Grand Master to nominate him (the Earl of Carnarvon) as Deputy Grand Master. (His lordship was accordingly saluted.)

The following brethren were then invested as Grand Officers for the year, the Acting Grand Master accompanying each announcement with highly commendatory expressions on the qualifications of each:—

- Lord Lindsay, S.G.W.
- Col. Whitwell, M.P., J.G.W.
- Rev. W. F. Short, } G. Chaplains.
- Rev. John Brownrigg, }
- S. Tomkins, G. Treasurer.
- A. J. McIntyre, G. Registrar.
- John Hervey, G. Secretary.
- Ernest E. Wendt, G. Secretary for German Correspondence.
- J. Van. N. Bazalgette, } G.S. Deacons.
- J. E. Saunders, }
- J. M. Wike, } G.J. Deacons.
- Raynham W. Stewart, }
- F. Pepys Cockerell, G. Superintendent of Works.
- Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter), G.D.C.
- W. Hickman, Assist. G.D.C.
- Dr. J. Daniel Moore, G.S.B.
- Wilhelm Ganz, G. Org.
- John Coutts, G.P.
- John Boyd, A.G.P.
- C. B. Payne, G. Tyler.

These brethren were then formally saluted.

The Acting GRAND MASTER: Brethren, it is now my duty to make the announcement to you, which is customary on these occasions, that I have appointed Bro. James Brett, late G. Pursuivant, to take the rank and wear the clothing of a Past Grand Pursuivant; and I will now call on the Grand Secretary to read the return of the Grand Stewards.

Bro. HERVEY then read the following list of Grand Stewards:—Bros. Trego (1), Brandt (23), E. Lewis (8), G. Sharpe (2), Stephens (4), Middlemist (5), Eaton (6), Hillier (14), Sewell (21), Threlfall (26), Clarke (29), Witley (46), Hobson (58), Munter (60), Frost (91), Stevens (99), Glen (197), and Bolton (259).

Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, at which the Earl of Carnarvon presided.

On the drawing of the cloth, grace was sung, and the speeches of the evening were delivered. In proposing the first toast,

The Acting G. MASTER said: Brethren, the first and the oldest toast to which I have to invite your attention is that of "The Queen and the Craft." It is a toast which often recurs on these occasions, and let me tell you that as Masons we think that it never can recur too often. (Hear.) Every year that goes by ought to teach us, whether in town or country, the many and multiform advantages of the Craft, and not only every year, but this year especially it calls to our minds the lesson that in this country it is our good fortune, as it has been the good fortune of our forefathers before us, to live under the rule of a tempered and an hereditary monarchy. (Cheers.) When we see the misfortunes, the evils, the miseries, which other countries have undergone where that hereditary principle has been wanting, we may congratulate ourselves that our lot has been cast in this land, and we may trust that we may hand that blessing down unimpaired to our children as we have received it from our forefathers. (Hear, hear.)

After this toast had been drunk and the National Anthem beautifully sung,

The Acting GRAND MASTER said: Brethren, I do not intend to allow you much time between the toasts, but I do so on this principle, that no one ought to be "weary of well doing," and I think it is well doing to give you the next toast. You have just now drunk the old immemorial toast of the Queen and the Craft, I now wish you to fill your glasses and pledge them to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family. We drink His Royal Highness's health on this occasion, not merely as Prince of Wales, but as a Past Grand Master of England; we drink his health as a member of our own great body; we drink his health as that of one who has shown deep interest in all that concerns the welfare of the Craft; and I have to remind you that, and this is a fitting time for it, that within a few days from this time H.R.H. will fill this chair that I now unworthily occupy—"No, no"—and will plead, and I have no doubt plead most eloquently, for one of those great charities of our Order which are our highest boast and honour and distinction. Brethren, I trust on that occasion, not only in honour to him, but after all in honour to something even greater still, the principle which is involved, the charity which is at issue, that this great hall will be full to overflowing—that instead of seeing three tables before me, I, if I have the happiness to be present, shall see many more crowded in that same area, and that we shall hear a great subscription list read out in honour and in assistance of the Girls' Charity. Brethren, I have to ask you to fill your glasses, and to drink them to "The Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family."

This toast having been drunk, was followed by a song.

The Acting GRAND MASTER: Brethren, I can quite sympathise with the unwillingness of any one to listen to words spoken after the extremely beautiful melody to which we have just been listening with such rapt attention; but I have to perform a duty in proposing to you the next toast, and it is one which you will, I am satisfied, gladly welcome: it is "The Health of our absent Grand Master." (Great cheering.) There is an old proverb which warns us not to talk about the absent, and there is another which says the absent are always in the wrong.

Well, now I intend to violate the first rule and talk of the absent; and in the next place I am certain you will agree with me that Lord de Grey, so far from being wrong, is quite the right man, and if he can return to England having, with his colleagues—very able colleagues both in this country and in America—if he can return having achieved satisfactorily the objects of his mission, it will be a matter of very great congratulation to men of all views and of all parties in the State. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I feel particularly that my noble friend ought to be here this evening, because to-day is the day on which not only all our great appointments are made in Grand Lodge, but on which he also ought to have been proclaimed as our Grand Master. Unfortunately he has been absent, and it seems to me rather in meeting here to-day without him that it is a little like playing the play of "Hamlet" with the part of Hamlet itself omitted. Nevertheless, our good wishes go with him, and though he is not present we accept him as our Grand Master quite as heartily. (Hear, hear.) And I think this is a fitting occasion for me to mention that recently, whilst in America, though engaged, of course, at other times on other State affairs, he has received at the hands of his American Masonic brethren a welcome worthy of them and worthy of the Craft in England, in honour of whom that welcome was given. (Cheers.) I have seen few things lately which have given me greater satisfaction than to note the hearty, cordial, and fraternal spirit which was exhibited in Washington on the part of the American Masons—(hear, hear)—and if that was the case as regards them, I may say also somewhat as regards my noble friend our Grand Master, that the trowel, as we all know, is the emblem and instrument of Masonry, I have no doubt that my noble friend as an operative and speculative Mason knows how to use it; but I am quite sure of this, that in all his dealings in and intercourse with American Masonry he will well know how to put in that cement of friendship and brotherly feeling. Brethren, "The Health of the Grand Master."

The toast was drunk with most enthusiastic heartiness.

Bro. LEWIS, Prov. G.M. Sumatra: Brethren, you are all aware of the toast which I now have the honour to propose to you, and I am sorry it has not fallen to better hands; but, were I on this occasion to give expression to my feelings, I am sure I should meet with your indulgent consideration. But, as the noble lord, whose health we are about to drink, is present, permit me to observe that he has endeared himself to the Craft, not only by attending on all occasions at our Grand Lodges, when our Grand Master has not been able to be present, but at the last especial Grand Lodge the noble lord gave expression to feelings which were an honour to him, and raised the Craft greatly in the public estimation. I will not, in his presence, say more than, at the same time, we hope that the day is not far distant when we shall have the pleasure of seeing him preside over the Craft as Grand Master. With those remarks, I ask you to drink his health.

The Acting GRAND MASTER: Brethren, I assure you that I labour now, as I constantly do, under the extreme difficulty, not to say the impossibility, of returning in meet and adequate language my sense of your kindness on these occasions. I constantly, I am happy to think, come into contact with the Masonic brethren, and I never leave them without feeling that somehow or other we have parted perhaps even better friends than we met. I hope that you will at least do me the justice to believe this, that, whenever I have had the honour of filling the chair, and presiding over your deliberations, I have endeavoured faithfully and fairly to do that which I conceive to be my duty—(hear, hear)—speaking without fear or favour, and keeping in view, as I hope I always shall do, the interests of the Craft apart from every other consideration, no matter what. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, if anything could give me greater satisfaction, or could be perhaps a greater compliment to me, when my health was proposed this evening, than anything, it would be in the fact that that toast was given you by my Right Worshipful friend, Bro. Lewis, on my right. It is forty-nine years, I think, since he received his appointment at the hands of your late Grand Master, the Duke of Sussex. I esteem it no light thing when one, I will not say burdened with years, because he carries them so lightly that the youngest of us may well envy that brother, but when one who has had so long and so large an experience of Masonry in every clime and in every part of the world—I say I esteem it no light compliment to us, the Grand Lodge of England, when he returns, as he has returned this evening, to take part in our councils, and I esteem it no light compliment to myself that he has done me the honour to propose this toast. Brethren, let me say one word now as to the occasion of our meeting here this evening. The revolving year brings round with it, as we all know, at this season our appointed festival. We meet indeed upon other occasions, and for other objects. We have other duties then in view. Some of us have to plead the cause of particular charities; others among us, and certainly not less an important task, have to meet that appeal by putting our hands into our pockets. I am far from saying which of the two parties discharge the most important duty. I am sure of this, however, that those who put their hands into their pockets, and go deep enough, certainly realise the most practical advantage of the meeting. Well, brethren, these are our duties on other occasions; to-night I have not got to vex you with any solicitations on this subject, and every man may return home with as heavy a purse as he has brought. But, on the other hand, it is my duty to congratulate you on our happy meeting here this evening, and to look forward, I trust, to a similar happy meeting this time next year. We have much, very much in this our Masonic England for which to feel very thankful. When we look abroad, and see the picture, but a few miles across the water, of unmitigated evil and sorrow existing there, we cannot feel, I think, too thankful for the calm and the even tenor which we are allowed to pursue here in England. We see on every side of us our charities well supplied; we see our lodges multiplying and growing up; we see, as I hope and believe, the spirit of Masonry growing stronger and better from day to day; we see our funds increasing so much that some of the wisest heads among us think it right in Grand Lodge to repress as far as they can the desire to dip our hands into the public purse. Well, all these are good and great signs; and allow me to say it depends upon you, it depends upon all of us, not only in our corporate capacity as the Craft, but in our capacity as lodges, and still more in our capacity as individuals, to uphold and maintain at its highest point the Masonic standard which has hitherto been set before us, and we can only do that by persistently practising, exemplifying, illustrating, and inculcating the great Masonic virtues upon others. This is our duty, and this it is, and this only, which will enable us this time next year, when we meet again in this hall, to feel that the last twelve months have not gone by in vain, and that English Masonry stands, I will not say higher, but at all events as high, as it does at present. Brethren, you have been pleased to drink the health of my noble friend the present Grand Master; you have been pleased now to drink mine. I cannot sit down without giving you the health of another, of one to whom Masonry in this country is, I think, largely indebted for the high and pure standard which in his private and in his public capacity he constantly set before us. I mean your late Grand Master—(hear, hear)—who for a quarter of a century filled the chair of Grand Lodge. (Cheers.) Brethren, I have only to add, in proposing his name, and coupling with that the toast of "The Past Grand Masters of England," that I personally do so with the greatest satisfaction when I look back upon the long personal friendship and acquaintance which it has been my good fortune to enjoy with Lord Zetland. I trust that, though he has retired from this chair, he may long live; and whenever the interests or the necessities of the Craft require it, that he will be found in the midst of us to give us his valuable support, as he has already given it once to my knowledge within this last twelvemonths. Brethren, I have to give you "The Health of the Past Grand Masters of England."

The Acting GRAND MASTER: Brethren, I have to remind you that here in England, though we meet as a Grand Lodge, and though Grand Lodge is no doubt the first and the paramount thought in our minds, there are two sister Grand Lodges which, on an occasion like this, we certainly cannot afford to overlook. It is my duty, and a most satisfactory duty, to ask you to fill your next glass in honour of the Grand Lodge of Scotland and the Grand Lodge of Ireland. Scotland, as we all know, is a country having a soil rugged in external appearance; but she has indemnified herself well for her natural drawbacks by the high qualities of her people—(hear, hear)—and their great virtues and power; and on no soil, I think—if even the thistle has bloomed upon the Scotch soil—have all the great Masonic virtues found a kindlier root than they have there. Brethren, I may say the same of Ireland. We sometimes hear of lodges in Ireland of a somewhat questionable frame and character; but I do not think there has ever been one hint of a doubtful character which could be urged against Irish Masonry. (Hear, and cheers.) Whatever may have been the unhappy circumstances and feelings in other parts of Ireland, Irish Masonry, so far as I know it, has been loyal to the crown and to the connection with this country. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, may these two great sister Grand Lodges be long, steadily, and firmly united to each other, and to us, and may they and we take to heart a maxim which, I remember, is written upon one of the halls of one of our great London companies, and which Masonry, like every other society, may read, and mark, and hold with advantage: Concordia res parva crescut; discordia res maxima diminuitur. I give you "The sister Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland;" and though I wish there were present many representatives from each, I am glad to think that we have present here at least one, Captain Gordon, who will worthily represent, and, I doubt not, worthily answer on behalf of, the Grand Lodge of his own most illustrious country.

Captain GORDON: Most Worshipful Grand Master, officers, and brethren, I must say that the lines might have fallen to me in more pleasant places. I never thought when I came this evening into this fine hall that I should be called upon to respond for the Grand Lodge of Scotland, because your present Senior Grand Warden, Lord Lindsay—than whom there is no better or more ardent Mason—I thought, would have been here to reply to the toast. But he has left, and the duty has devolved upon me to return thanks on behalf then of Grand Lodge of Scotland. I beg to thank you for the kind manner in which you have drunk its health. Although some quarrels have occasionally arisen, yet, as the Right Worshipful Grand Master has said, let discord cease, let concord reign, and let our motto be "upwards and onwards." On behalf of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, I beg to thank you.

The Acting GRAND MASTER: Brethren, I have now to give you "The health of Provincial Grand Masters." We are not favoured this evening with the presence of very many; but we are grateful to those who have attended. The duty of a Provincial Grand Master is really an important one; it is sometimes a difficult one. I belong myself to the confraternity, and I know sometimes how many are the difficult and the delicate questions which come before us; but this, at least, I can say from personal experience, as I believe most of my brother Provincial Grand Masters might also say that any Province to which you appeal loyally and frankly will always answer you in the same spirit, and as I look back myself with feelings of great gratitude to my Province for the support which I have uniformly received at their hands, I am confident that the great majority of Provincial Grand Masters in England know that they have but to deal frankly and straightforwardly with the brethren of their Province to insure also at their hands the most hearty and cordial support. Brethren, I have to give you the "Health of the Provincial Grand Masters of England," and with that toast I will take the liberty of joining the health of my Right Worshipful brother, Bro. Bagshaw, on my left. His merits are well known to you here in London, just as they are even better known, if I may say so, in his own Province of Essex. Let me give you "The health of the Provincial Grand Masters of England," coupling with it the name of Bro. Bagshaw. (Cheers.)

Bro. R. J. BAGSHAW: Brethren, I am sorry to say that I am hoarse, and shall scarcely be heard; but it affords me very great satisfaction to express to you our gratitude for the honour you have conferred on us in drinking our health. As an old Provincial Grand Master, I feel that we have ever received the support of Grand Lodge of England, and I can only say I hope the Provinces will long continue to work most heartily with the Grand Lodge of England. I will not further inflict on you the punishment of listening to a hoarse voice, but will only add that I am very much indebted to you for your kindness in acknowledging our services.

The Acting GRAND MASTER: Brethren, one of the most important duties which call us together this evening in Grand Lodge is, as you are well aware, the appointment of the Grand Officers for the ensuing year; and it is now my pleasing duty to ask you, nearly at the close of my list as I am, to fill your glasses and to drink then in honour of the Grand Officers for the ensuing year. The duties in Grand Lodge are not very onerous, or, generally speaking, very difficult; but at the same time they do require attention and care; and I trust that the Grand Officers of this year will set the example, which I am confident they can set, of steady attention to, and a careful performance of, their duty, and of a perfect knowledge of all those details of their relative positions which we expect at their hands. It is by these qualities that in a great measure the dignity of Grand Lodge and the prosperity of our proceedings is preserved; and I look forward with confidence to those brethren who have accepted offices this day, discharging those duties fully and effectually. I regret that my noble friend, Lord Lindsay, who has received the office of Senior Grand Warden, is not present at this table. He was obliged, sorely against his will—for I believe there is no more unwearied, no more earnest, Mason within the four seas than he—he was obliged to leave us very early; but we are fortunate in having his colleague here present, the Junior Grand Warden, Colonel Whitwell, and I shall take the liberty of joining with the toast his name. I am satisfied that all those duties in Grand Lodge, to which I have adverted, are in very good and safe keeping when they repose in his hands. Brethren, "The Grand Officers, not merely of this year, but of the past year—the Grand Officers both Past and Present."

Bro. Col. WHITWELL, J.G.W.: Most Worshipful Grand Master, you cannot regret the absence of my brother, our Senior Grand Warden, Lord Lindsay, much more than I do; but like my friend who responded to the last toast, though I regret it, I feel that it is the duty of every Mason when the front rank is vacant to obey the commands of you, my lord, and to step into his place as becomes a good soldier of the great Fraternity of Masonry. But when I reflect upon the heavy responsibility devolving upon me to respond for not only the present officers but for the past, I feel overcome with the difficulty. I call to remembrance that honourable descent and uninterrupted succession from times long gone by into the dark vista of history, of which we are the notable, and I trust, the faithful representatives. Talk of an aristocracy, talk of antiquity, the officers of this lodge represent an aristocracy and an antiquity beyond any other known aristocracy or antiquity in the world. I say, my lord, when I remember this, and when I consider for an instant that if all the illustrious men who bore office in this Grand Lodge were figured on the walls of this hall, I suppose they would not be sufficiently large to afford accommodation for the artist to paint them. I trust, my lord, that your observations will not be in vain, and that the honourable distinction you conferred on the present officers will be amply fulfilled, and that they will do their duty like those who have gone before them. One thing, however, we do learn, and that is this: In our punctuality and in the order and solemnity of our proceedings we learn the duty of obedience to higher authorities, the duty of order, and faithfulness and truth; and in endeavouring to fulfil those great duties, officers in past times have always succeeded, and I trust all officers will so succeed in times to come. I have to ask the cordial concurrence of my brethren in drinking the next toast, I mean the toast which I have the permission of the chairman to propose, and that is, a toast which commends itself to every Masonic heart, that of "The Masonic Charities." If I possessed the eloquence of our Bro. Binckes, who is known far and wide, in every extremity of this United Kingdom, I might ask you to "lend me your ears" for a little time longer; but the advocacy of those charities is much better in his hands than mine. One thing I do rejoice in, that in those charities our order has manifested that far-seeing, intellectual desire for advancement which is now only coming to be apparent in the world at large, and not like the almshouses and the hospitals, built in many cases as the only relics of those that have gone before us, Masonry has added to her charity the duty of educating her children; and while the country is awakening to a sense of the importance of education, Masonry has for a long series of years anticipated that sense in advocating the charities of our order. We do it, not only to promote the moral and the intellectual, but also the best interests of the children under our care. I have to remind this assembly that the meeting of the Girls' School and the Festival take place on Monday week, and I would not only support it myself in answer to the invitation from the chair, but I would hope that every brother who is able to be present on that occasion will be present.

Bro. E. H. PATTEN, P.G.S.B.: Right Worshipful Dep. G. Master, before I return thanks for the toast which has just been proposed, you must allow me to thank you personally for the very kind manner in which you introduced a notice of the Girls' Festival in proposing the health of the Prince of Wales, and I only hope the brethren will take your advice and come. I beg to announce to the brethren that it is nothing new to them, because they are all aware that the festival will take place on the 8th of May, on which occasion His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will take the chair. I am only afraid that the brethren who attend that festival will be short of accommodation, and there may be some inconvenience; but if there is, I must ask them to make every allowance for us, and do their best to conduce to the success of that meeting. And now I thank you all very heartily for drinking this toast.

Bro. A. J. M'INTYRE, G. Registrar, proposed "The Grand Stewards," to which Bro. W. SUTTON GOVER, President of the Board of Stewards, replied.

"The Ladies" having been duly honoured, the company adjourned to the Temple, where a vocal and instrumental concert was given, in which, under the direction of Bro. Jas. Coward, P.G. Org., Madame Florence Lancia, Miss Dalmaine, Miss Julia Elton, and Bros. Barnby, Carter, Montem Smith, and Distin took part; Mr. J. C. Arldige performing some beautiful solos on the flute. The musical selections were carefully made, and all the vocalists were in fine voice. We have never found such an excellent musical provision at any of the Masonic festivals, and have much pleasure in recording the fact as a testimony to the care taken by the Grand Stewards, who were very attentive to the wants of the visitors, and were the recipients of much laudation, both by the brethren for their care of them, and by the ladies for the alacrity with which their needs were supplied.

The duties of toastmaster after the banquet were performed by Bro. T. Spencer with his accustomed ability.

Original Correspondence.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions expressed by Correspondents.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Several Past Masters and brethren have requested me to return our thanks to our worthy Brother William J. Hughan, not only for his interesting work, "Masonic Sketches and Reprints" in connection with English Masonry, but for his valuable communications respecting "Freemasonry in Ireland," which appear in THE FREEMASON, and we trust he will continue to give us more light. We intend to ask our Masonic friends to favour him with any old Masonic documents they may have, and hope many others may be induced to do the same. There are many old lodges in this country that have never ceased working since their warrants were granted, and no doubt there is much valuable information to be obtained if a search was instituted.

Yours very fraternally,
CHARLES SCOTT,
P.M. 350 (I.C.), P.P.J.G.W., Devon.
Strathroy, Omagh, April 25, 1871.

THE 1717 THEORY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I regret to notice, at page 251, a letter from Bro. Buchan, in which he implies a charge against me of want of good faith towards yourself and your readers, in what he supposes is the suppression of part of the statute of Masons, 1425. Bro. Buchan, being a Scotsman, is probably not familiar with the English statute book, and this must be his excuse for so grave an insinuation. Permit me to explain that you did print the statute of Masons in extenso. The English statutes are divided into "chapters" (each of which is "a statute") and are now invariably published in separate form; but, at the earlier period referred to, many of such chapters were frequently published in one general statute. The one in question is "The statute made at Westminster the third yeere of King Henry the sixth." It contains five chapters as follows:—1, Masons; 2, "Sheepe and Wollys" from Flanders; 3, Offences against the Customs; 4, As to the Staple of Calais; 5, As to a Commission concerning the river Ley. I think before making these strong assertions Bro. Buchan would do well either to make enquiry for himself, or to invite further explanation in your columns. Even in the statute of labourers to which he alludes, masons and carpenters are prominently distinguished from all other classes. This statute (1361) in dealing with labourers enacts "That the Lords of Townes may take and imprison them by fiteene dayes if they will not instifie themselves and then to send them to the next gaole, there to abide until they will instifie them by the forme of the statute." Subsequently it proceeds: "And that as well carpenters and masons be comprised in this ordinance, as all other labourers, servants, and artificers. And that the carpenters and masons take from henceforth wages by the day, and not by the week, nor in other manner. And the chief masters of carpenters and masons take foure pence by the day, and the other three pence or two pence according as they be worth, and that all alliances and couines of masons and carpenters, and congregations, chapters, ordinances and oathes betwixt them made, shall be from henceforth void and wholly annulled."

Here, in the statute of labourers itself, we have a remarkable distinction between the masons and carpenters, and the ordinary classes of artificers in other trades, and the enactment is made special for the purpose of including them. As to dogmatic assertions of what these statutes mean and refer to, they are idle and futile, and your readers must take them at their phantom value.

In another statute of Edward VI., 1549, a distinction is made between the classes of masons in an enactment, "That no person or persons shall at any time after the first day of Aprill next comming, interrupt, denie, let or disturbe any free mason, rough mason, carpenter, &c."

I wish distinctly to remark that I have only troubled you at any time with these curious old laws upon the express challenge of Bro. Buchan, who immediately makes positive statements respecting the meaning of statutes of the existence of which he had never before been aware.

I entirely dissent from Bro. Buchan's view, that those who do not accept his mere assertions and "affirm otherwise are bound to prove the affirmative." On the contrary I say that he is the one who has affirmed, and that he is bound to support his theory by some proofs of his affirmation. Do not let Bro. Buchan forget, or ignore, that when he has asked me for proofs he has not had long to wait for them; and do not let any of us forget that he has never given any reasonable argument or evidence in reply. Bro. Buchan tells us that the case of the Clothiers' Guild is quite in support of his ideas; but if this be so, his assertions and his ideas must run in different channels, unless it be that he publishes the assertions and retains the ideas to himself. I should have no disposition to run away from the bubble if there was anything in it, but like other bubbles it is entirely empty, and, if it burst not, it must remain a bubble still.

I am, faithfully yours,
LUPUS.

LODGE BY-LAWS.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your issue of the 8th inst. you was kind enough to insert my question as to whether it was competent to get a charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland under which Scottish or other Masons could meet in England, since which I have ascertained that such cannot be. But I now ask, Mr. Editor, if the said by-law spoken of in my last is Masonic or according to the Constitution of the Grand Lodge of England, and according to the ancient landmarks of our noble Order. If such be in accordance with G.L. laws, then, as an Englishman, I must submit, but would earnestly impress upon the Scottish Craft the necessity of impressing upon the mind of every candidate that Masonry is not, as we express it in our instructions, universal, and that we must not expect the right hand of fellowship; neither does the noble and beautiful lessons taught in our lodge-rooms extend to him, a Scotch Craftsman, further than the land of the thistle, and which he will have to acknowledge by paying one guinea more than the fees of said lodge, or be deprived of those privileges which are dear to every true Mason's heart.

But independent of all this, Mr. Editor, it would be a great boon to many Masons who do not measure Masonry by the amount of initiation fees, if the Grand Lodges of the United Kingdom would take steps not only, as was suggested in your valuable paper some time since, to have uniformity of working, but also uniformity of fees, so that such unseemly and unmasonic conduct may not be found among us. But surely, Mr. Editor, this cannot be according to the landmarks of that Freemasonry which teaches us in the N.E. corner that rank and pomp are all levelled here, and that jewels, riches, or gold are of no avail in the attainment of Masonic honour, but that Masonic perseverance and brotherly love is to be the criterion of our advancement and progress in the attainment of the honours of our Order.

This, I again repeat, Mr. Editor, cannot be the Masonry which for the sake of £ s. d. debar us from the ennobling, and should be humiliating, lessons taught by the working tools of the Craft degree, viz., that in a short time hence we shall all meet upon the —, before Him who is no respecter of persons, and in that low valley where the bones of the prince will be undistinguishable from those of the peasant, and where the Scottish Mason will not be judged by the amount of his initiation fees, but by the plumb-line of his Masonic conduct according to the teaching of our patron St. John, who said, "By this shall ye know if ye are of us—love one another."

Again apologising for for intruding on your valuable space,

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
WM. FOSTER,
P.M. 354 S.C., P.Z. 87 R.A.C.
Maryport, April 18, 1871.

[It would be a despotic exercise of power were the Grand Lodge of England to dictate to its subordinate lodges in matters which are usually settled by the lodge by-laws. Every lodge has a right to make its fees as high as it pleases, or to reduce them to the minimum allowed by law. We trust our correspondent will see the propriety of every lodge being thus permitted to regulate its own membership.—ED. F.]

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM AND MASONRY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your impression of April 22nd, I find a long letter from Bro. Charles J. Forsyth, giving a truly admirable account of the apparent connection between the Ancient Knights Templar and the Masonic Order. Bro. Forsyth deserves the thanks of the Craft for his accurate transcription, the greater part of the article in question being from the pen of that highly accomplished Mason, the late Bro. George Walker Arnott, 33rd, LL.D., Medical Professor of Botany at Glasgow. It can be found, word for word, at the commencement of the Regulations of the Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland, to which it forms an introduction. As the letter quotes the whole of Dr. Arnott's argument, verbi et littera, one would naturally expect some acknowledgment of the source the writer derived them from; but Bro. Forsyth has omitted this, no doubt inadvertently. May I ask this brother to rectify his error of omission in your next issue.

I am, my dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
† ZANONI, 30<sup>o</sup>.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I observe in your impression of the 22nd inst., a letter on this subject, which contains several statements that I cannot let pass without lifting up my feeble voice against them.

In the first place, I hold, and I know a good many of the Order hold with me, that our adhesion to Masonry was only to preserve our Order from being swept off the face of the earth, and that we only borrowed signs and symbols from Freemasonry to distinguish friend from foe, our ancient forms of reception remaining the same as they had been before our adhesion.

Again, with regard to the wonderful discovery or Masonic relics at Stirling, I count that discovery as nil, for this reason, that when there were no charters from governing bodies the Craft lodges without any authority used to work not only the Royal Arch, but also the Knight Templar and Red Cross Degrees. Only recently I discovered in Aberdeen the seals and jewels of office of the St. James's Encampment which had been worked in connection with the St. James's Lodge.

As to the Masonic branch of Knights Templar having their chief seat in Scotland at the present day, I, on behalf of the Scotch Knights Templar, entirely deny it. There are a few so-called Encampments in some towns in Scotland that do not recognise the governing body. These may be called Masonic Knights Templar, but as for the priories holding of that body, they never can be called Masonic. Why, our very title, "Religious and Military Order," entirely throws Masonry aside.

I am, yours fraternally,
A SCOTCH KNIGHT TEMPLAR.
Langham Hotel, April 24th, 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read the lengthened remarks on this subject by Bro. Charles G. Forsyth at page 252, and which, as he informs us, are "given from good authority," only they appear to me to be taken from very bad authority, or rather from no authority at all. He would have done well ere writing his letter had he read up the information to be got in the past pages of THE FREEMASON on the subject from such writers as "Lupus," W. J. Hughan, D. Murray Lyon, &c. The popular Masonic idea of the old Knights Templar being Freemasons and "practising Masonry," is simply pure imagination; many of them, however, were admitted freemen of the burgh, for the purpose of being able to buy and sell—not for the purpose of learning a trade, nor for the purpose of being initiated into the three degrees of St. John's Masonry, for said three degrees never existed until A.D. 1717-23. And as to Royal Arch Masonry, it never existed until the second quarter of last century. As to the engraved plates of the Stirling Ancient Lodge we hear so often about, yet so little definitely, taking them at the best, instead of their age being "the beginning or middle of the seventeenth century," about the middle of the eighteenth century would be nearer the true mark. However, if they be in existence give us a photo. of them, and if we can allow them to be older than the middle of last century, or even so old, we shall be quite happy to do so. Then as to Prince Charles Edward Stuart being made Grand Master of the Templars at Holyrood in 1745, that I consider is all a mere dream, while the bombastic pretended letter on the subject from the "Duke of Perth" is, in my opinion, anything but genuine, as I have stated at length at page 236 of THE FREEMASON, May 14th, 1870, and which opinion has been privately supported since by one of our best writers. Altogether, therefore, I would most respectfully and fraternally desire Bro. Forsyth to study this subject properly before writing upon it again.

I am, yours fraternally,
W. P. BUCHAN.

THE RITE OF MISRAIM.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read with interest the account in your paper of the founding in this country of the Rite of Misraim.

At first it was stated that it was under the authority and with the sanction of M. Cremieux, of the Grand Orient or Supreme Council of France; but since that has been denied authoritatively by M. Thevenot, in the columns of your contemporary you state in your issue, of the 8th inst., that the Rite is to be worked under the authority of a pupil of Mark Bedarride, the founder of the Order, and that the charge to members of the Order of Constantine is to be nil.

Now as some of us would like to take these degrees, which would cost us £20 or £30 under the A. and A. Rite, as they are to be had so cheap, and as we are anxious to have the real thing, would you or some other brother oblige by stating in your next number who is this pupil of Mark Bedarride?

Yours fraternally,
RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

[We have no authority to publish the name of the brother, but he is a 33° A. and A. Rite. Further correspondence on the subject, unless to substantiate previous statements, can do no good, and we hope the whole question will soon be set at rest.—ED. F.]

THE CASE OF CHARLOTTE JACKSON.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you allow me to draw the attention of the Craft to the case of Charlotte Jackson, a candidate for the benefits of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution.

This is her fourth application, and from want of influential Masonic friends, she is likely to have to make four more before she is successful, unless more support is given that she has hitherto received.

I have personally investigated the case, and can assure you that she is utterly without the means of support. In all human probability she will not require our aid very long; but if she could obtain the annuity, it would enable her to pass her few remaining days in comfort, and as she is the only one on the list who has had to make four applications, I do earnestly hope the Craft will vote in sufficient numbers to ensure her success.

I shall be very happy to receive proxies on her behalf.

I am Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
JESSE OWENS.

PROXY COMMISSIONS TO GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The article by a "Past Master," in your impression of the 15th, bearing on the subject of Proxy Commissions in the Grand Lodge of Scotland, is fraught with the most vital importance to Scottish Freemasonry. The evils arising from votes by proxy are almost too numerous to be dealt with in a single letter, and the brethren in this neighbourhood are glad the subject has been taken up with such ability, and in a quarter having so much influence as yourself.

The brethren of the Province of Forfar—desirous no doubt to be present at Grand Lodge Communications during the presidency of their own Grand Master, whom they so much admire—have been gradually throwing off the yoke and bondage of this feudal vassalage of the Grand Lodge, and appearing, as their duty is, in their own interests, which I may add, has brought down the holy indignation of the paid officials of Grand Lodge and their boon companions.

On a recent occasion, representatives from several lodges in this Province appeared in the Secretary's Chamber of Grand Lodge and tendered their fees, according to the printed form, more than the prescribed time prior to the opening of Grand Lodge; but an absurd technicality was thrown in their way, and the fees of three lodges were refused. A fourth, having paid its fees about six weeks previously, desirous of the privilege of voting, was informed they had no vote. The Master, remonstrating, said if fees were the key to a vote, these had been in the Grand Secretary's possession for some time, when, on turning up the books, no entry of the money had taken place, and in order, I suppose, to save criminal proceedings, the Grand Secretary, Grand Clerk, and Grand Assistant Secretary, clubbed the amount amongst them, and handed it back to the head of the deputation, in presence of a dozen others, who are prepared to substantiate what I write, and the impudent slang given those deputations could not be believed even were it my misfortune to repeat it here, which I shall respect you, sir, by not doing.

I hope lodges in distant parts of the country shall think well before they dispose of their birthright in the manner so commonly followed, but rather consider whether it would not be better not to vote than have their vote given adversely to the interests of the Craft.

Railway companies are now very liberal where a special trip is desired for such purpose as being present at a public Board, and every lodge should endeavour to send at least one member to every meeting of Grand Lodge, and following the legal plan laid down in Past Master's article, the security of honest voting would be much increased.

I believe the Province of Glasgow are fully alive to the importance of self-representation also, and are doing much to rid us of the grievance of Proxy Commissions. Let us all unite in the same, and purity must prevail.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
ROY.

QUALIFICATION FOR THE MARK CHAIR.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am glad to find that my former letter has been the means of directing attention to this subject, and that—with the exception of your esteemed contributor Bro. Hughan—all your correspondents express themselves favourably towards the proposed change.

If, indeed, it be true that a dispensation is granted as a "matter of course," it necessarily modifies my objections, but I still think it advisable to do away with any such restriction.

Bro. Hughan says the result would be that the dignity and honour of the Mark Chair would be less valued. I take exactly the opposite view, believing that the Mark Degree is quite good enough to stand on its own merits, and that any brother who took the pains to work through the various offices to the chair, and was then honoured by being elected to that office, would be quite as careful of the dignity and honour of the degree which first recognised his merits, as if he had already passed the chair in the Craft.

The Mark is an independent degree, but I wish to see it made thoroughly so, by the members choosing the brother to preside over them, who by his industry and skill has qualified himself for the office, without reference to the offices which he may or may not have held in the Craft.

Yours fraternally,
A CRAFT P.M.

WHEN WAS NOT THE BIBLE USED?

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR,—In Oliver's "Revelations of a Square," it is stated that, instead of the Bible, old lodges in England used the Church Prayer Book. The statement is vague, and I cannot make it more precise, but I give it thus in reply to Bro. Hughan's question on page 164 in his response to Bro. Norton. I believe it is the only authority extant on the subject, if it may be deemed authority at all. So long as oaths are administered in Masonic lodges, it is superfluous to state that the Bible must be used in Christian countries, as that book which men in authority are disposed to regard in public as in private essential and necessary in the administration of an oath. I think before Bro. Norton advocates the removal of the Bible from the lodge, he should begin back of that, and advocate the removal of the obligation by oath in any of the forms now in use. If men are to be obligated by extra official oaths, some other object than the Bible might equally well be used. The Free Judges, a Westphalian secret society of the last century, swore the initiate on the hilt of a sword, the right hands of obligator and obligatee resting on it, and the brethren grouped around. Other secret societies have had different modes of administering oaths. In our courts of justice, and wherever judicial oaths are taken, the religious convictions of the obligatee are respected, and he is allowed to affirm or swear, as may be his customary way of taking an oath. Except in Rhode Island at present, I have not been advised that this is permissible in a Masonic lodge in America. Masons maintain the legend of the slipper or shoe, but they reject its meaning; and many other things have place in our forms to which some other than the original meaning is attached, as our orthodoxy has been strong or weak, and partook much or little of the spirit of the past centuries. Prior to the present century it was proper in most Christian countries to regard a Jew as the enemy of the Christian religion, and the reason assigned that it was the Jews who destroyed the life of the founder of that religion. As all admitted, on question, that it was necessary for the existence of the Christian religion that the life of its founder should be taken, and that He should suffer a violent death, the aptness of hating a Jew on that account did not appear so clearly to the questioner.

That the principal use for the Bible at the present day in a Masonic lodge is to obligate initiates upon, I think will be generally conceded. To a Christian who believes it to be the inspired word of God, its presence there has, as well, an assuring and comforting effect. For a Jew the book, even the O.T. portion alone, and were it printed in the original Hebrew, has no such effect, as among Jews an obligation is not administered upon the O.T., nor does he regard its presence there as proper, but, on the contrary, making that common which he holds sacred; while as he does not believe in the N.T. at all as a sacred book, of course it has no value for him upon the Masonic altar, no more than would any other volume of biography and letters of a celebrated person. Hence it is natural that he advocate its removal, and the substitution of something inoffensive to his religious sentiments, as in American lodges the candidate is assured prior to his entry and also prior to his obligation that there is nothing in the rites of Masonry, the ceremonies, or obligations that will conflict with his civil, political or religious sentiments, be they what they may. I think it is in reference to this fact that Bro. Norton uses the objectionable word "cheating," and which Bro. Hughan misconstrues. Bro. Norton regards the subsequent proceeding, after that assurance is imparted, as a fraud practised upon the candidate, if he be a Jew, and rightly; for if I assure a man before I obligate him, and when I have him at an advantage, that in anything I require him to do he shall not be offended in any of his convictions, and shortly afterwards he discovers cause for offence, and I know that he will so discover it, I do certainly cheat him. Now it is evident that the assurance as given in America certainly, if not elsewhere, must be changed in the ritual, or that which offends should be removed.

Of course, in reply to all this, brethren can say: If Jews are not content to be sworn on our Bible, or listen to our disquisitions anent the two St. Johns, or regard our prayers but as offensive to their religious sentiments, they had better stay out of the lodge. All true; but as they do not wish to stay out, but from a favourable opinion conceived of the Masonic Institution do apply for admission and get elected, would it not be better to inform them that, as Jews, they will probably be offended at some of our rites and ceremonies, instead of assuring them that in those neither they nor any other religionists will find anything offensive to their religious sentiments or convictions, "be they what they may?" Either this or remove the offensive explanations and forms. Why cry "Peace, peace," when there is no peace? Why say that Masonry in its rituals is inoffensive to any man, when such is not the fact? Why persist in maintaining conditions calculated to give offence, if those might equally as well be removed? Is it not to please the majority, rather than any special value there may be in those conditions? It is deemed offensive to not only a Jew but any man of education in religious history, to assure him that John the Baptist was a patron of Masonry, or John the Evangelist. Well, say you, or some other orthodox Christian brother, let the men of education in religious history and the Jews stay out of the lodge, and they will not be offended. True again; but then you say Masonry is universal, not exclusive, not sectarian, not religious as an institution, but men of every creed and clime can enter within its portals and meet in its assembly as brethren all, with nothing to offend them admissible, and in this particular it is, as an institution of man, sui generis. Here is a paradox—a direct contradiction, and Bro. Norton and men of his mode of thought accuse Masonry of false pretences—of making to the ear promises which are broken to the hope. This, I think, is the manner in which he regards this matter. If Masonry, in his opinion, and as I understand his opinion, was, under the 1703 memorable resolution thenceforth to take in all sorts and conditions of men, provided only that they be duly elected, and treat them uniformly as brethren, then it is plain we must do something more than merely assert this. We must remove from our midst all cause for offence to any man.

I am, fraternally yours,
J. FLETCHER BRENNAN,
Editor of American Freemason.

THE RED CROSS ORDER.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have just received a communication from Dr. Partridge, M.P.S. of the Rose of Sharon Conclave, No. 19, Birmingham, in which he states that, at a meeting held on the 20th inst., one of the members, named Astley, acting under "inspiration" from London, falsely charged me with having "obtained possession of papers for archaeological purposes from the Earl of Zetland, and applied them to improper uses." The simple truth being that certain documents, comprising rituals, books, and letters belonging to the Red Cross Order when held under the Duke of Sussex, were handed over to the Earl of Bective as the head of the Red Cross Order, without any reservation whatever, by order of the M.W. Past Grand Master. I append a copy of the Grand Secretary's certificate on the subject, which ought to be conclusive.

As, however, I have recently been subjected to various anonymous and cowardly attacks from certain quarters, I must now, very reluctantly, invoke the aid of the law in defence of my character, and upon obtaining Mr. Astley's address, my solicitor will take the necessary steps in the matter. The very fact that I am a trusted servant of Grand Lodge in the Finance Department renders it imperative that I should energetically repel these slanderers, and in doing so I feel confident of the sympathy and support of the whole Craft.

Yours fraternally,
R. WENTWORTH LITTLE, P.M.
27th April, 1871.

[COPY.]

"I hereby certify that the manuscript, of which the above is a verbatim extract, is one of the documents relating to the Red Cross Order which were found in the archives of the Grand Lodge of England, and handed over by command of the Right Honourable the Earl of Zetland, P.G.M., then M.W. Grand Master, to Lord Kenlis, the head of the Order of the Red Cross in England.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

There was a grand ceremonial at Newport, on Thursday, the 20th inst., nothing less than the installation of a Provincial Grand Master. The choice of the Grand Master of England fell upon Bro. Colonel Lyne, who had for many years discharged the duties of deputy to the late lamented R.W.G.M., Bro. Rolls. The ceremony of installation was appointed to take place at the Town-hall. Not less than three hundred brethren were present, when the Installing Master, Bro. T. Mansel Talbot, entered the room, and took the seat. The lodge was opened in due form, and seven of the senior Past Masters of the several lodges in the province were requested to conduct the Provincial Grand Master-elect into the lodge. Presently the Grand Tyler reported that the G.M. was at the door, when the organ solemnly pealed forth.

The Grand Master-elect stood before the pedestal, whereupon Bro. Talbot, having the gavel, commanded the Prov. Grand Secretary to read the patent from the Grand Lodge of England. Then came the obligation and the salute, such a salute, perhaps, as was never seen in the province of Monmouthshire.

The R.W. Colonel Lyne made a most suitable acknowledgment for the high and distinguished compliment paid to him, and expressed his determination to do all he could to carry out Masonry in its purity in the province of Monmouthshire. He also paid a graceful tribute to Bro. Talbot, and proposed a vote of thanks to him for the part he had taken in the proceedings of the day.

Bro. Homfray, D.P.G.M., seconded the proposition, which was unanimously carried.

Bro. Talbot hailed with pleasure the advent of that auspicious occasion, and trusted that the two provinces, geographically allied as they were, would yet by more fraternally brought together.

At the command of the newly-installed P.G.M., Bro. Colonel Lyne, five Past Masters conducted Bro. S G. Homfray to the pedestal, and the Patent having been read, he was duly ratified as D.P.G.M., and saluted according to Masonic rite.

Bro. Pickford, acting as P.G.T., handed the jewel to the Master, who presented it to Bro. S. G. Homfray.—Bro. Homfray, in a suitable and earnest reply, thanked the Grand Master. He assured the Craft that his perseverance and industry would be devoted to the good of Masonry.

The Prov. G. Officers were then appointed, viz.: Bros. George Homfray, 1098, D.P.G.M.; Kennard, 1258, P.G.S.W.; Hellyer, 471, P.G.J.W.; Fox, 471, P.G. Chap.; Chambers, 683, P.G. Reg.; Pickford, 471, P.G. Treas.; Williams, 471, P.G. Sec.; Williams, 818, P.G.S.D.; Lewis, 1098, P.G.I.D.; Lawrence, 471, P.G. Sup. of Works; Cheese, 683, P.G. Dir. Cer.; Ingram, 471, P.G.A. Dir. Cer.; L. A. Homfray, 683, P.G. Sword Bearer; Groves, 683, P.G. Org.; Gratte, 471, P.G. Purs.; Bromage (457), Huxtable (471), Roper (683), Price (818), Davies (1098), Treharne (1258), P.G. Stewards; Preece, 457, P.G. Tyler.

The lodge was then adjourned, and the brethren formed a procession, and marched up Stow-hill to St. Woollos Church. The bells rang a merry peal, and the public had turned out in great force to witness the spectacle.

The sermon was preached by the P.G. Chaplain, the Rev. Samuel Fox, Rector of Holy Trinity, Newport. He took his text from Exodus iii. 2—"And the Angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and behold the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed."

On the conclusion of divine service, the procession re-formed, and returned to the Town Hall. Arrived in lodge, the remainder of the business, which consisted mostly of financial and complimentary routine, was transacted, and the closing in due form having been effected, the brethren repaired to the King's Head Hotel, where Host Gretton had prepared the banquet. Such was the crush of the Craft, that few more than one half of the number who attended the ceremonial could be accommodated. Two hundred tickets were issued, and those who were not wise enough to take "time by the forelock," had perforce to be "left out in the cold." The Assembly-room was crowded. The dinner was excellently served, and the proceedings passed off very agreeably.

THE BEST PUDDING. MAYAR'S SEMOLINA.

NOTICE.

Read this with care and attention.)

THE MANUFACTORY of MAYAR'S SEMOLINA was established in 1815. It is the oldest and the largest in the World, Twenty-five Million pounds being yearly produced. (25,000,000.)

Our SEMOLINA is the staple food in France, Russia, Spain, Italy, &c., and will soon be that of England. It has obtained 24 PRIZE MEDALS in the Great Exhibitions for its superiority over all others, and is pronounced by the most eminent members of the Medical Profession, both in London and in Paris, to be far more Nutritious than Tapioca, Arrowroot, corn flour (which are only Starch), or any farinaceous food already introduced into this country. See Dr. Hassall's Analytical Report in the columns of this paper.

N.B.—Being determined to maintain its reputation, we again CAUTION the Public, that an imitation, to which a false and ridiculous name has been given, is introduced by a well known Firm, taking advantage of its name and publicity to sell a similar article of very inferior quality, to realise extra profits, and who advertise in favour of that article the qualities possessed by our Semolina.

As a proof of our assertion we challenge a comparison, by analysis, between our SEMOLINA and the so-called Pearlina.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is solely the heart of the very best Wheat.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is richer than any other farinaceous food in Azotic matter, indispensable in the muscular formation of the body.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Highly recommended by the Faculty for Children and Invalids

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is extremely nourishing and easily digested.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA makes delicious Puddings, Custards and Pastry

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA unequalled for thickening Soups, Beef Tea, and Gruels.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is the greatest delicacy for Breakfast and Supper

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is very economical. May be used with or without Milk. Recipes on each Package. 6d. lb. in Packet, 8d. in Canister.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, &c.

HOMINY.

MAYAR'S HOMINY, produced from the best Indian Maze, without any adulteration obtained by grinding, is far superior to the Maize Corn Flour already introduced in this country, which is only Starch obtained by a process of washing, which deteriorates entirely the quality, and is sold at a very high price.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, and Corn Dealers. Wholesale at MAYAR'S, 36, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C. A Wholesale Agent wanted in every Town.

Obituary.

BRO. MAJOR MYERS.

Major Myers, who recently died in Schenectady, N.Y., U.S.A., was born on the 1st of May, 1776; was educated in New York city, and resided for several years at Richmond in Virginia. There he served in a military company, under Col. (afterwards Chief Justice) Marshall. He soon returned to New York, engaged in business there, and served in an artillery company. He was afterwards commissioned as a captain of infantry, and for two years studied military tactics assiduously under Monsieur de la Croix, who was a military authority at that period, especially in the sword exercise. When war was threatened he was active in raising volunteer companies, and in March, 1812, he was commissioned a captain in the 13th Infantry, and with his regiment joined General Wilkinson's army in the invasion of Canada. During the boisterous weather which assailed General Wilkinson's expedition from Sackett's Harbour in October, 1813, Captain Myers was very active in saving lives and property. At the battle of Chrysler's Field a bullet passed through Captain Myer's arm near the shoulder while at the head of his men in assailing the British behind a stone wall. The desperateness of the encounter may be conceived when the fact is stated that of eighty-nine men he lost twenty-three. Being in command of the boat-guard of the expedition, he did not join the attack until the fortune of the day seemed to be in jeopardy. A portion of his epaulette being driven into the wound rendered his recovery tedious and uncertain, and crippled his arm for life. During the war he performed laborious and gallant services under several commanders in the Northern Department, and in 1815 the disability produced by his wound caused him to be disbanded and placed on the pension roll for the half-pay of a captain. Thus ended his military career. He was the oldest as well as the last surviving officer of the old 13th Regiment, of which the late Major-General Wool was senior captain.

Major Myers represented New York city in the Legislature of the State for six years, and served two terms as Mayor of Schenectady; and was a candidate for congress when eighty-four years of age. He was present at the inauguration of Washington as President by Chancellor Livingston, and retained a vivid recollection of that event. He was probably one of the oldest Masons in the country, having been a member of the Fraternity for nearly seventy-five years. He took a high rank among the Fraternity, having been Grand Master and Grand High Priest, respectively, of the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter of New York State.

The Schenectady Times, to whom we are indebted for most of these facts, says: "Major Myers was in many respects a remarkable man. He was possessed of a clear mind, strong will, and the fact that, with all the hardships incident to the life of a soldier in the war of 1812, he lived to be nearly ninety-six years of age, is proof that he possessed a strong and robust constitution. His physical appearance was striking. No stranger ever met or passed him in the street without being struck with his appearance, being of large proportions, and having a remarkably clear and keen black eye that gave evidence of the strong intellectual power of the man. As Mayor of the city he added dignity to the office, and brought all the power of his strong common sense and an indomitable will to bear against wrong and in favour of right and justice."—New York Army Journal.

“That GREAT, AWFUL, TREMENDOUS & INCOMPREHENSIBLE NAME.”

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z.

ARTICLE II.

In my former paper on this high subject, I confined myself to a consideration of the import and use of the sacred Name, suggesting that there is nothing in the circumstances attending the adoption and special use of it, as the covenant and intransferable appellation of T.G.A.O.T.U., which suggested that it was more awful or tremendous than any other name by which He had condescended to make Himself known; and that if we are under an obligation to utter that name with reverence and humility, we are under the same obligation also in the utterance of every other Divine name. It remains to say something about the name as “incomprehensible”—emphatically so; or, by way of eminence or distinction. I am not unmindful of the spirit in which we should enter upon any discussion of so high and holy a subject, but feel that we should approach it with that reverence which was symbolised by the taking of the shoes from off the feet, as Moses was commanded to do when in the presence of the Great I AM.

The two prominent names or appellations by which God is known in the Pentateuch are Elohim and Jehovah (or as abbreviated, Jah.), both frequently used, sometimes separately and sometimes conjoined; and in the use of them we can discover nothing to indicate that the one is more “incomprehensible” than the other. Let us take them separately, with a view to discover their meaning, for it is not to be supposed that God designated Himself by names without meaning, or names that were not intended to convey some idea of His being, attributes, operations, or relationship to them to whom He thus made himself known. A careful student of the Bible soon perceives that the names are used discriminatively or appropriately, and not arbitrarily, as though there was no idea of a distinctive character involved in them. I abstain from all nice or profound criticism, and treat the subject in as plain and popular language as I can.

The sacred name יְהוָה (whatever its correct pronunciation may be) which we translate Jehovah, is the regularly formed future, in kal, of the verb הָוָה, to be. Kalisch concludes that this holy name of God denotes His eternal Being.

—He who is immutable, subject to no change, through all generations; for, as he remarks, the future implies, frequently, the meaning of duration, or prolonged existence. Names are, in the Hebrew, not unfrequently derived from the future, as Israel, Jacob, &c. Let us take the word, then, as denoting He who is permanently, eternally—He who exists of and from Himself; who is subject to no change, through all generations—“without beginning of days or end of life.” Maimonides interprets the name—He who exists by internal necessity. And this seems to be the primary meaning of the name; but, as I formerly suggested, it was adopted as the covenant and theocratic Name of God, and is especially or emphatically used in cases where the promise or idea of deliverance or redemption is involved or enunciated. The Jews assert that it is nomen misericordie, the name of compassion, which Elohim is not. The idea is a happy one, for compassion is necessarily involved in every voluntary act of deliverance. It was Elohim who heard the groanings of the Israelites under the oppression of the Egyptians, and remembered His covenant with their fathers (Exod. ii., 24), but when he signified to Moses that He was about to deliver them, the name of compassion (יְהוָה) takes the place of Elohim. “I (Jehovah) am come to deliver them out of the hands of the Egyptians,” &c. (ch. iii., 8). But the deliverance of Israel from Egypt was typical of a much greater deliverance yet to come; and hence the Messiah is called, perhaps from Ps. cxviii., 26; or it may be from Numbers xxiv., 17: “There shall come a star out of Jacob and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel. . . . Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion”—ὁ ἐρχόμενος—The Coming One. Coming to do what? To bruise the serpent’s head; to be man’s “propitiation,” “deliverer,” “mediator,” “wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, redemption,” “Saviour,” light, life; and to be what embraces all within its vast compass, man’s paraclete—the one coming to man’s aid, to do for him everything he needs for time and eternity. But take the name in its primary or simple meaning, as denoting God according to what He is in Himself, as Abarbanel puts it; or as Maimonides—the name which teaches of the substance of the Creator—He who is and will be; ever-during, everlasting, the Coming One, for ever and ever. What is there, then, incomprehensible in the name? Nothing. But there is in that which the name indicates. We can comprehend, clearly enough, that ever-existing in and from itself, signifies eternal—without beginning, or end, or change; but if we make an effort to comprehend the idea, we utterly fail. We may carry the imagination backward and forward to the utmost extent to which it is capable, but we fail to realise the idea. Pile countless ages upon ages, as to both eternity past and eternity to come, and we still fall infinitely short of comprehending the sublime and sacred mystery of the divine existence. We accept the name by which that incomprehensible mystery is indicated, and comprehend its meaning; but the existence itself—never.

Let us now consider the other divine Name, ELOHIM, that we may see whether the Being designated by it is more comprehensible than He is under the one we have been considering. If a word may be said to be incomprehensible in proportion as it difficult to ascertain its radical meaning, then the word Elohim would rank, in that respect, before Jehovah. Its meaning has occasioned much controversy, but to advert to this, particularly, would accord with neither my space nor my purpose. It will suffice to say, that some eminent critics derive it from aleh, a root still existing in the Arabic, where it signifies the adored, the worshipped; but as Kurtz observes: it is better to derive it from the Hebrew root aleh = אָלַהּ, to be strong. Hence, the fundamental idea attaching to the word will be that of strength, power, might. And this derives weight from the circumstance, that the work of creation is ascribed to Elohim, as the Almighty, or the Almighty power.

Among the Jewish writers of the middle ages, A. Jehuda, the author of the Book of Cozri, interpreted it as the name which distinguished the Deity as manifested in the exhibition of His power, without reference to His personality or moral qualities, or to any special relation which he bears to man; and Maimonides holds that it conveys the idea of the impression made by His power. In accordance with this, it may be remarked, that, upon an examination of the passages in which Elohim occurs alone, it will be found that it is chiefly in places in which God is exhibited only in the plenitude of His power, and where no especial reference is made to His unity, personality, or holiness, or to his relation to Israel and the theocracy. But the word, it should be observed, is in the plural—Elohim (אלהים), not Eloch (אלוה). There must be some reason for this, but it is not easy to discover it. Dean Stanley, following Le Clerk, Herder, De Wette, and others, finds in it a remnant of polytheism. According to this hypothesis, the earliest speakers of the Hebrew, believing in a plurality of deities, were wont to speak of “the gods,” which usage was retained after correcter views of the Deity came to prevail among their descendants. But to this it is enough to reply, that there is no evidence whatever that the religion of the Hebrews grew out of a polytheistic system; but abundant evidence to the contrary. Besides, all analogy goes to show that the effect upon their language of such a change of opinion regarding the Deity would have been the very reverse of that supposed, inasmuch as all peoples, on renouncing a belief in a plurality of deities, are careful to avoid every mode of expression that may be construed to imply such a belief. Many grammarians, following Rabbinical teaching, include this usage of the plural under what they have called the Pluralis Majestaticus, an idiom denoting the relations of greatness or power. But this hypothesis is not well founded, for bating the terms for Deity and the term for master, and one or two others, there is no noun of dignity which is used in the plural form; the words for king, judge, priest, prince, noble, general, &c., all terms expressive of authority and dignity, are singular, and do not assume this plural-of-majesty form. Some regard the use of the plural form as denoting the abstract—the nomen venerandum, the abstract embodiment of the ideas of reverence, authority, power, and judgment. But this fails, for the Jews did not conceive of God as a personification, but as a person; and it seems to the last degree improbable that they should use words to designate Him formed according to the words expressive of an embodied or personified abstract. Hengstenberg and some others explain the usage of the plural as an instance of the plural intensive, and consider it as serving the same end as the repetition of the names of God, as found in some passages. But though this use of the plural may serve to account for some of the instances of plural appellatives of Deity, it is not sufficient to account for all, and especially for the peculiar term of Deity—Elohim. When the Hebrews would denote a fierce lord, or an absolute proprietor, they use Adonim and Baalim pl., instead of Adon and Baal, sing.; and as God is the all-powerful Lord and the absolute Master of all, it may be said that the plural terms are applied to Him on this account. To this it would be difficult to reply; but when we come to consider the word Elohim we shall perceive that the cases are not exactly parallel. In the case of Adonim, Baalim, &c., the plural intensive is used to describe one who possesses in a very high, or in the highest degree, the quality possessed by every one whom we may designate by the singular. Adon, a lord; Adonim, (pl. intens.), a very lord, dominissimus. But Elohim is not the intensive of Eloch. In this case the singular means as much as the plural; and, accordingly, is occasionally used to signify the Great Supreme. The intensive here, therefore, for the intensive fails, and must be set aside by us as inadequate to explain the phenomena of the case. The same is true of Shaddai. We cannot aver that this is the intensive plural of a singular denoting a mighty one, for it has no singular, and so far as we know anything of the language, never had; for it, therefore, we must have some other mode of accounting than the plural intensive. After carefully looking at the several solutions of the plural form of the words as applied to the Deity, and noting that it is united with singular verbs and pronouns, I cannot help thinking that the use of the plural Elohim shadowed forth the truth—that the oneness of God was not mere naked monotheism, but a unity resulting from the combination, so to speak, of plurality—that it was not the oneness of a God, but the oneness of a godhead. I am conscious of the utter inadequacy of any illustration that can be used with the view of aiding us towards the understanding of this profound subject; but I cannot avoid noticing the usage of the plural with a singular signification in the Hebrew writings. It is where an object exhibiting plurality in unity is designated; in which case the plural is frequently employed. Thus, Ps. lxxviii., 15, a great sea (plural); the sea being the unity of many pluralities; as the line of one of our own poets: "Distinct as the billows, yet one as the sea." So Psalm cxxiv., 5: "The waters (pl.) has (sing.) gone over me," i.e., the body of waters, the accumulated mass. Jer. li., 58: "The broad wall (Heb. pl.) of Babylon," i.e., the one wall consisting of many separate sections. Ps. xviii., 15: "Much lightning" (Heb. pl.), many flashes. The Hebrew doctors have left records of this mystery. "Come and see the mystery of the word" (Elohim). Here are three degrees, and every degree by itself alone (that is, distinct); and yet, notwithstanding, they all are one, and joined together in one, and one not divided one from another," says R. Simeon Ben Jochai, in Zoar, upon the sixth section of Leviticus.

My object, so far, has been, not so much to indicate what I take to be the primary meaning of the word Elohim, and the idea of plurality included in it, as to point out that the word itself, if not wholly "incomprehensible," is, at least, very difficult to define; and that the word Jehovah is certainly not more so. But let it be assumed that we have got the real meaning and intent of the word Elohim, i.e., that it signifies the Mighty One, the All-powerful One, or the One possessing all power, the Creator of all things; not the framer or maker merely, but the Creator of the very substance, or elements, or first principles of things, as the best Jewish and Christian scholars maintain the use of the word ath, in Gen. i., 1., to mean—hora elohim ath—"ELOHIM created the very substance (of the heavens and the earth)." The Almighty Powers; let that be the meaning of the appellation. Is that meaning of the word—or rather, we should say, is the Being so designated more comprehensible than the Being (the same Being, of course) designated Jehovah—the self-existent—He who was, and is, and is to come? I think not. What idea can we form of All-mightiness, Omnipotence, the power which can form the first principles of all matter out of nothing? the Being who, by the mere volition of His will, can call into existence countless worlds, with all their wondrous properties, appurtenances, and inhabitants, and by the same volition regulate all their movements and preserve them in harmonious existence? I can as well comprehend the idea of self-existence as I can that of All-mightiness—that is, they are to me alike "incomprehensible." Dr. Pye Smith (Script. and Geol. Lect. vii.) has expressed my thought so much better than I can hope to express it, that I quote the following passage:—"Behold, God is great; and we know him not! Of the Divine nature, as infinite intellect, pure mind, we can form no conception but by reflecting upon and drawing conclusions from our own consciousness and the operations of our own minds. In like manner, we gain our knowledge of the Eternity of God, by adding the notion of infinity to our perception of the flow of time. By our touch and our sight we get the ideas of motion, resistance, and impulse; and, by reflecting on the lesson thus taught, we rise to the notion of effects and causes. We look and feel around, we lay hold of bodies extraneous to ourselves, and we discover certain states and alterations of states following upon certain conditions of tangible and visible things; we then rise to a wider survey of the sensible world around us, and we see a vast number of changes taking place, upon a scale of great magnitude; and at last, our feeble minds having acquired the idea of power, we transfer it, with the highest increase of form, to our conception of the Infinite and Eternal Deity: and we call our new idea Omnipotence. In a similar way we form conceptions of justice and kindness, from the actions of parental and infantile feelings, and from the mental phenomena which we experience inwardly, and the actions of our fellow-beings observed outwardly; to these conceptions we also annex the qualities of infinity and eternity, and thus we gain some notion of the moral attributes of the Supreme Majesty, his Holiness and his Bonignity. But, how faint, how low, are our best conceptions! 'Lo, these are parts of His ways, and what whisper-word is heard of Him. The Almighty! We find Him not!" (Job xxvi., 14.)

Let us now hear the conclusion of the whole matter. The Divine Being, under whatever aspect, or in whatever character He may be contemplated, is necessarily "incomprehensible," the reason being, that He is infinite and we finite. One Name of God is no more to be revered or dreaded than another. All His names, without exception, are sacred, and to be uttered only with reverence—never profanely, never even lightly or unthinkingly, for "He will not hold him guiltless who taketh His name in vain."

FREEMASONRY IN THE EAST.

A subject of so vast a magnitude as "Freemasonry" almost arrests the pen of the writer at the very commencement of his theme, and I take it up with many misgivings of the possibility of doing it justice. Freemasonry, in its ordinary acceptation and bearings, even if only in one part of the world, is deeply interesting; whilst in extenso it covers the whole expanse of the entire world, and, probably, leads to an universal brotherhood amongst mankind. No wonder, then, that it inspires so deep an interest everywhere in the minds and hearts of all those who have any knowledge of, or connection with, it. At the present time, there are probably more than a million of Freemasons, among whom are men of the very highest, as well as lowest, social positions of life. Like what is called civilisation, or knowledge, it penetrates everywhere, and has, or should have, an important bearing upon the moral character of man, wherever it is established and carried out, as it is designed to be carried out, in the lives and conduct of each and all of its advocates. It has no legal character, nor does it possess even the power and authority of religion. To limit it, or even to attempt to limit it, to any part of the world, or to any portion of mankind which recognises the Creator, is certainly contrary to its cosmopolitan principles. It is, nevertheless, possible and proper to allude to its existence in one or more countries, and I shall therefore limit my subsequent remarks to its condition in what is generally denominated "The East," though, more correctly, the Ottoman Empire.

In the first place, it may be stated that the name of Freemasonry here is but vague and unsatisfactory to many persons. Its abuse, or perhaps it should be said the misconduct of some of its professors, has attached to it a signification which it by no means merits. By many Masonry is supposed to be limited to the art of architecture, leaving the prefix Free still undefined and unexplained. Why are Masons freer than any other persons? The mystery which is attached to the meetings of its members, to the total exclusion of all others, certainly prescribes its limits, and no one is free to divulge their objects. As an art, it is intimately connected with the construction and component parts of the great historical Temple of the Hebrews at Jerusalem; as a fraternity of brethren, the whole family (not pagan) of man is its sphere.

We must form our opinion of men and their works among mankind by a due consideration of the times in which they lived and acted; and when we do not, we reach no correct estimate of their true character and abilities. Laws and regulations, though based upon excellent, even Divine principles, are apt to be disregarded, and to lose their weight if not adapted to the minds and intellectual capacities of the people for whose benefit they are laid down; and all great lawgivers and reformers cannot expect that their laws, or ceremonies, will be suitable for all time to come. What are called "Divine Laws" are based upon imperishable principles of right and wrong; but much is deduced from them conformable to the degree of knowledge and intelligence of those for whom they are designed. By this rule of action many greater reforms could be effected, if the lawgivers and the people among whom they lived were better prepared for them. Parables, symbols, and allegories are thus made use of when barren facts convey no lasting convictions. The Temple of Jerusalem may therefore now be regarded only as a great "symbol," or even an "allegory," by which the lives and acts of men are to be compared and shaped. The sphere of a man's life may be said to be contained within a limited circle, and his acts should be upright and square. The lines of architecture offer illustrations of what should be the accuracy and straightforwardness of his conduct, and he should, moreover, endeavour to construct an edifice of "good repute," respect, and esteem among his fellow-men. Bunyan went still further, and endeavoured to "spiritualize" the whole Temple of Solomon, and to give to each of its parts, not only a moral, but even a spiritual definition.

Thus, either as a moral or as a spiritual symbol, the theory of connecting Masonry with the Temple of Jerusalem is world-wide in its real definition, and may be carried out among men of all positions in life, of all countries, and of all religious faith. The perpendicular walls of any edifice, as well as the domes of all lofty buildings, may be regarded as so many symbols. All constructions have an upward and an upright tendency. This is a law of art and nature, and the remoter firmament seems to our vision to be a dome, for which, however, we are unable to find any material support.

The only real facts which we possess regarding the construction of the component parts of the Temple erected by the great and wise King of the Hebrews is found in the Book of their own ancient history. All the rest is simple tradition, and must be regarded as such. In many cases, however, tradition seems to fill up what is wanting in history, and the oldest histories are in themselves little more than traditions written many centuries after the events related occurred. In the "East" there are vast numbers of very ancient traditions, which, though never written out as so many indubitable facts, are generally believed by Orientals; and if they do not figure in history, it is simply because they, in many cases, differ from the narratives contained in the Bible, or are not alluded to there at all, and are now beyond the reach of proof. If some of the themes of Masonry are only based upon tradition, they are, at least, harmless, and do not conflict with the statements of the Bible; and serve to fill up points which are there deficient. They serve also as so many symbols; and, like the art of architecture, are made to be applicable to the lives and labours of mankind.

Freemasonry need not, nevertheless, be limited to the history or traditions of the Temple of Jerusalem, which edifice has long since ceased to exist. It should be connected, on the contrary, with something less perishable, something that will continue to exist to the end of time, if such a period can be entertained. The whole world, the entire universe, is the real temple of its Divine Master, and all mankind who acknowledge Him are therefore Freemasons. The lodge is certainly a symbol of our world. We should study and derive wisdom and knowledge—called by us, figuratively, light—from a contemplation and investigation of all the works of the Divine Creator of all things; and in this manner regard the Temple of Jerusalem as a model lodge, constructed by one of the wisest of mankind—one whose wisdom is imperishable, inasmuch as it, and that of his father David, were based upon the great Truths connected with the Architect of the Universe, the sublime principles of His creation, and the dependance of man upon His laws, natural and moral.

Notwithstanding that the temple, designed by David and constructed by his son Solomon, was by divine command, and therefore intended for a good and wise purpose, it has been seen that it received no particular divine protection. Repeatedly destroyed and rebuilt, it finally ceased to exist for the purpose for which it was originally constructed. It now remains only as a delapidated edifice, or, in its present condition, as a mosque; and its very entrance is, more or less, closed against the former people of God, whose greatest desire is to reconstruct it, and once more offer up there their adorations to Jehovah. Though strange as are the ways of Providence, what a vast change must come over men's convictions regarding prophecy, and their conceptions of the true character of the Deity, before such an event can be brought about. Ancient mythology, with its one great Divine Creator of the Universe, and the innumerable imaginative gods and goddesses, their temples and statues, beautiful as they were, have passed away, and given place to a modern belief in saints of both sexes—little less powerful than the former, though devoid of their beauty. These also must cease to occupy men's convictions, and mankind must return to the first principles of religion before this change can be effected. Indeed, we can only expect this when all the world again shall become Hebrew—or, as an alternative, when all Hebrews become Christians. Towards which, are the tendencies of our times? I leave the answer to wiser men than myself. We cannot expect it to be the effect of vast wealth, notwithstanding that wealth is power, or, at least, may obtain it; or will it be by the extension of true knowledge, of light, and truth; or by some unforeseen particular divine interposition—called a miracle? There is certainly a great reaction going on in men's minds throughout the world, occasioned by abuses and violence, against which they revolt, even if in silence and suffering, but none the less progressive. Will another prophet or great religious leader appear in the Old or New World; or will what is called science divulge indisputable truths and correct human errors? Future generations may probably smile at our present credulity, as we now do at that of the past.

Amongst no people should Freemasonry in its primitive degrees be dearer than the Hebrews. As connected with the Temple of their two great Kings, David and Solomon, it is the explainer and the promoter of their most ardent expectations; whilst to the Christian and the Moslem it has far less interest. There are many traditions in the "East" connected with its construction, its signification, and object; but it is only necessary here to allude to one—that all the Israelites turned their faces to it at prayer. Until several years after the Hijra, the Moslems did the same; then they divided it with the Temple of Mekka, and ultimately decided upon one Kiblah only—the latter. Many Moslems say that they are Christians, inasmuch as they declare that Christ was more than any other man, and was the soul and spirit of God. This is explained by their system of inspiration—to wit, the possession by man of more or less of the spirit of his Divine Creator; and they say that Christ possessed more of this than any other member of the human family. They do not, however, admit that He was, or is, God, whom they declare as one, and incapable of any division whatever. They attach an immense importance to the Temple of Jerusalem, and it is only of late years that they have permitted others than themselves to enter it, and to profane its purity with their uncleanness. Yet, with them it has no spiritual or symbolical meaning. It was constructed by one of their greatest prophets—whose wisdom they consider as unparalleled. None of its parts have been "spiritualised" by them, or made to serve as symbols for the guidance of men's lives and labours. It is only sanctified and held as holy in their estimation by its having been erected by Solomon on one of the most ancient scenes of the adoration of Jehovah by His creatures.

To them its Mosaic pavement, its lofty dome, has no other meaning than that of any other edifice. There are, however, now many Moslems who have become Freemasons, and as such are taught the significancy connecting them with what is always held to be the Temple of God. So beautiful a theory seems to impress them more than any ordinary teachings; and they now know that these are of an universal character, not limited to Hebrews or Christians, but to the whole family and fraternity of mankind, in every part of the world. They learn that the whole world is a temple, that all those who fully believe in the Great Architect of the Universe are Freemasons in theory, if not in fact—in spirit, if not in practice; that the rules of architecture are used as so many symbols, which may govern and direct the conduct of the Moslem as well as of the Hebrew and the Christian; and that the figurative signs and words used by them only serve as an universal language, to recognise those who are, from those who are not, Freemasons. All nature is a mystery to the uninitiated and the unenlightened; that knowledge can only be acquired by degrees, like the steps of a ladder, leading upwards—from earth to heaven, from infancy to mature age, and, finally, to the last round, beyond which is eternity. If the undeviating lines of architectural geometry do not always serve to guide and correct the lives of men, they are not the less truthful, unalterable, and applicable in all times and to all peoples. Gradually the mistrust of Moslems is being removed. They see that it has not been, and never will be, degraded by matters of mere worldly politics, or of a purely religious sectarian character; and that the whole sphere of this action is to set these aside, and to unite all mankind together in one great and universal Brotherhood.

An endeavour is being made in the lodges in Turkey to carry out Freemasonry in its true and ancient bearings; to connect it with what is the real duty of all men, viz., the study of the works of the Great Architect of the Universe. Science, and all of the arts, thus come within its circle. Useful knowledge is its centre, and the moral acts of individuals—if as correct as the sides of the square—even when contracted or expanded, are ever the same. Then, the tressel-board, the Mosaic pavement, the square, the compasses and the plumb-line have each a symbolic meaning—not only with the secrets of the lost Temple of Jerusalem, but with those of the greater Temple of the Universe. The lights and truths of spiritual faith, of dependance upon a Divine Providence, and perfect submission to the laws of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, serve to unite all men in the "East" together as fellow-creatures and the children of a common parent, when the ordinary and equally conventional observances and ceremonies of external religion separates and divides them. Freemasonry has been greatly needed in the "East," and when relieved from the prejudice which, in some minds, still exists against it—the result of ignorance regarding its real objects and principles—it must become popular and esteemed amongst men of liberal and cultivated minds. It will strongly aid the Sovereign and his highly progressive government in amalgamating the various peoples over whom he reigns, if not in one great nationality, at least in one great Fraternity, and remove the asperities of religious and faiths, and unite them all together as men, each professing and exercising his particular religious convictions—free from any sacrifice of what is as dear to the Moslem as to the Hebrew or the Christian—the dictates of the conscience.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS have been for years, and still are, renowned as a safe and salutary remedy for indigestion, liver complaints, and all skin diseases, pains in the stomach after eating, eructations of wind, pains in the back, aching of the right shoulder, weakness, languor, and tawny hue of the skin, all disappear under the purifying powers of these admirable pills. They contain no ingredient which by possibility could hurt the most feeble frame. They effect a salubrious though momentous change throughout the system by thoroughly expelling all impurities, and imposing on every organ its natural functions. Many testimonials of their efficacy can be produced received from all parts of the world.—[Advt.]

WEST OF ENGLAND SANATORIUM.

This Institution, which is a convalescent home, giving the advantage of sea-air and sea-bathing to patients recovering from illness or suffering from debility, was established in 1868 on the Cottage Hospital system, that of aiding poor people to help themselves by providing them with a proper lodging, attendance, and medical care without charge, whilst they themselves pay for their maintenance.

Intended more especially to benefit the West of England, its doors are open to all without any Governor's note, the only certificate needed being one from a medical man that the patient is a fit case, and has not suffered from any infectious disease; upon which, and the payment of 10s. a week, the patient is admitted to the first vacant bed. If the patient can get a subscriber's ticket, this payment is reduced to 6s.

The institution began in 1868 with four beds in a back street in a very humble way; in six months the old Strand House was taken, and the beds increased from twelve to eighteen, in the succeeding year to thirty, and last summer the pressure was so great that a wooden house was built as a day-room, and the number of beds increased to thirty-six.

At the conclusion of the third year, November, 1870, the institution was nearly £600 in debt, and rented their present buildings and land.

Mr. W. Gibbs, of Tynesfield, then offered £700, if £800 more could be raised by Christmas Day, £200 having been previously promised, to liquidate the debt. This was to be on the condition that no mortgage should ever take place, and no building commenced before the requisite funds were collected. This amount was collected by Christmas Eve, and Mr. Gibbs' donation was at once paid into the bank.

The Committee now being able to purchase the freehold, and announce the institution free from debt, the Trustees of the Bristol Fever Hospital Fund, per Mr. J. Hellicar, paid over their balance of £1,100 in consideration of certain benefits to patients from the Bristol Royal Infirmary and Bristol General Hospital; following which Mr. W. T. Hill presented the munificent sum of £2,000, requiring only a small return to benefit the Worcester infirmary and the employes on the Taff Vale Railway.

Plans were therefore at once drawn by Mr. Hans F. Price, architect, of a new building for one hundred patients, the Committee having purchased another piece of freehold land adjoining the institution, so that they are now possessed of nearly three acres of land with a front to the sea, the sands forming excellent bathing grounds for the patients.

The building, of which the foundation-stone will be laid by Lord Carnarvon, the President for the year, with Masonic honours, will be of the collegiate style, forming a quadrangle facing the sea, with a private chapel and glass-houses for recreation. The whole, when completed and furnished, with the purchase of the land, will not exceed £120 a-bed, which is very much below the average of public institutions, whilst every comfort is provided. The building will be erected in sections, as funds are collected. At present the Committee are in possession of about one-fifth of the required sum.

In helping this work, which is purely Masonic in its character, that of relieving necessity without pauperising the receiver, much good will be effected. Already more than 700 patients from all parts of England have enjoyed a month's change of air, and returned home for the most part in good health and strength, again to earn their living.

Any further information will be gladly given by the Secretary, E. D. Girdlestone, Esq., Weston-super-Mare.

NEWS OF DR. LIVINGSTONE

Bombay, May 3.

News has been received from Zanzibar that Dr. Livingstone was alive and well, but destitute.

HOLY WEEK IN MADRID.—The Tabla, after reporting the collapse of the efforts of a Protestant reformation at Madrid, continues—"But there is another enemy to the Church in Spain more potent far than heresy. Freemasons have obtained such wide-spread power that Government is afraid to offend them. The lower quarters of Madrid will soon be as hopelessly Masonic as the higher quarters of Paris, of Belleville, and Montmartre. Public conferences are held and advertised, and at these such doctrines as are most 'advanced' are openly taught and favoured. Attacks are made on every kind of worship, and the dominant 'view' is the negation of divine and (therefore) of human right."

"I HAVE used the Pain Killer in my family for bronchitis, diarrhoea, &c., and often given it to my workmen in like diseases, and always with the most complete success. I consider it the best family medicine in use.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, cart proprietor, L'pool, Jan. 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

St. George's Lodge, No. 140.—This old-established lodge held its last meeting of the session at the Trafalgar Hotel, Greenwich, on the 19th ult., when the W.M., Bro. Johnson, assisted by his officers, passed two brethren to the second degree. The committee appointed to make arrangements for the summer festival reported that it would be held at Seven Oaks on the 24th of June. After labour the usual good banquet followed, several distinguished brethren being present as visitors.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—The last regular meeting of the season of the above lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, E.C., on Tuesday, 25th ult. Present: Bros. Joseph Speed, W.M.; C. C. Taylor, S.W.; Green, J.W.; Hill, I.P.M.; W. Carter, P.M. and Treasurer; T. Anslow, P.M. and Sec.; N. Gluckstein, A. E. Harris, and E. Gottheil, P.M.'s; Themans, S.D.; M. Davis, as J.D.; J. Kennett, I.G.; and a moderate attendance of brethren. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, the business of the evening was proceeded with, which comprised the raising of Brother Parker to the third degree, and the passing of Brothers Downey and Levy to the second. The ballot was then taken, for Messrs. Ellis Berg, Arthur Dixon Housman, and Henry Hyman, which proved in their favour, and they being present were duly admitted into the Order. The following visitors honoured the lodge with their presence: Bros. B. H. Swallow (382), Chas. Haywood (186), W. N. Cobham (P.M. 342), and S. S. P. Blight (P.M. 39).

Lodge of Asaph, No. 1319.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 1st inst., in the Moira Room, Freemasons' Hall. Present: Bros. E. S. Jones, W.M.; Chas. Coote, P.M., S.W.; J. M. Chamberlin, P.M., J.W.; James Weaver, P.M., P.G.O. Middlesex, S.D.; Edward Frewin, J.D.; Chas. Coote, jun., Treas.; W. A. Tinney, D.C.; H. Snyders, H. J. Tinney, J. Strachan, J. T. Carrodus, J. Baker, Edward Terry, H. Snelling, W. T. Maby, L. Silberberg, J. Egerton, and J. Boatwright. Visitor: Bro. J. C. Pritchard, 862. The business consisted in a successful ballot for Messrs. G. Compton, J. Horton, and Charles Wright for initiation, and Bro. Edward Swanborough for joining. Messrs. Horton and Wright were initiated, Bro. Silberberg was passed, Bros. Carrodus and Strachan were raised, and Mr. F. Colmar, Prof. of Music, was proposed for initiation. The ceremonies were performed in the usual impressive manner observed in this young lodge, and the candidates were a credit to their instructors for the able manner in which they went through their examinations without being prompted. The lodge was closed in due form with solemn prayer.

PROVINCIAL.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights, No. 148.—The regular monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Monday, April the 24th. The W.M., Bro. W. Richardson, was supported by Bros. Jas. Jackson, S.W.; W. Sharp, J.W.; John Harding, S.D.; Jos. Cassidy, J.D.; John Bowes, P.M., P.P.G. Reg.; Horatio Syred, J. S. Patten, Thos. Jones, Peter Jones, John Wild Thorp, John H. Gornall, D. W. Finney, Edward Howorth, Rev. J. N. Porter, W. Mossop, Jos. Bancroft, Robert Richardson, Thos. Morris, W. Woods, Jabez G. Hughes, and James Hannah, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. George Jubb (261), H. Walmisley (317), P. J. Edelsten (1250). The lodge was opened in solemn form, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and declared to be duly recorded. Mr. Edward Howorth was duly initiated by Bro. Mossop, W.M. 1250; Bro. John Wild Thorp was passed by Bro. Bowes; and Bro. John S. Patten was raised by the W.M. A gentleman was proposed as a candidate for initiation, after which the lodge was duly closed.

TORQUAY.—St. John's Lodge, No. 328.—A very interesting meeting of this lodge was held on the 1st inst. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Thos. Oliver, who was supported by Bros. D. Watson, S.W.; J. Paul, J.W.; R. Bowden, P.M., Chaplain; Thos. Perry, Treas.; J. Chapman, Hon. Sec.; G. Glanfield, I.P.M.; J. Greenfield, C. J. Harland, H. J. Ward, and W. A. Goss, P.M.'s; Dr. H. Hopkins, P.Z. 587 and 710. The first business, after the minutes of past meeting had been confirmed, was to raise Bro. C. A. Baizent, to the third degree, which ceremony was very effectively worked by Bro. Glanfield, I.P.M., at the special request of the W.M., owing to Bro. Glanfield being about to leave Torquay for Colchester; and this being in all probability the last opportunity the brethren would have of seeing the efficient working of their respected I.P.M., it was more than ordinarily interesting. A very able lecture on the third degree was then given by Bro. Dr. Hopkins. Bro. J. Smith Ayerst, M.D., of Lodge Sincerity, No. 189, was then elected as a joining member. The lodge having been closed in harmony, the brethren, about thirty in number, in addition to six or seven visitors, then sat down to an ample repast, provided specially on the occasion of the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. G. Glanfield on the eve of his going to reside in Colchester. The banquet was of a recherché character, Bro. W. Hearder providing the wines. After the usual loyal toasts had been disposed of, Bro. the Rev. R. Bowden presented the testimonial, which consisted of a Life Governorship in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and also a beautifully illuminated address, executed by Bros. Harland and Chapman, displaying upon the border the various stages which Br. Glanfield had taken in arriving at his present exalted position in Masonry. The following is a copy of the address:—

"St. John's Lodge, 328, Torquay.

"To George Glanfield, Esq., P.M. 328, Z. Sun[Chap. 106, P.S. Pliades Chap. 710, J.W. Mark 710, P.P.M.O.

Prov. G. Mark Devon, P.P.G.S.D. Devon, and S.P. Rose Croix.

"Dear Sir and Brother,—We, the brethren of the lodge in which you were initiated and of which you have been on three occasions W.M., cannot allow the pleasing associations of so many years to be broken without some memento on our part which may serve to recall to your mind the fraternal love and regard we feel towards you. In deciding upon a form of testimonial to express in some slight degree our appreciation of your long and valued services to Masonry in this town, we are led to believe that a Life Governorship in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls will be more compatible with your wishes and feelings than any testimonial of mere intrinsic value; and in asking you to accept this our parting token of regard, we feel we shall be promoting the great Masonic principles you have practised and inculcated—Benevolence and Charity. May the G.A.O.T.U. guide, guard and direct you, and give you long life and happiness, and finally raise you to the Grand Lodge above.

(Signed) THOS. OLIVER, W.M. J. PAUL, J.W.
D. WATSON, S.W. T. PERRY, Treas.
J. CHAPMAN, I.G., Hon. Sec.

"Torquay, May 1st, 1871."

The short notice which had been given the brethren to prepare the work proved the high esteem in which Bro. Glanfield is held by the lodge when it is known that only a few days sufficed for the brethren to make the design, and complete the arrangements for privately contributing to and executing the work. The expression of kindly regard was very appropriately acknowledged by Bro. Glanfield, who fully sympathised with the idea of placing the substantial part of their efforts in one of the best and most worthy of the Masonic charities; while the unique and beautiful picture which surrounded the address, would ever remind him of the various steps up that ladder which had placed him in such an honourable position in Freemasonry. The usual Masonic toasts having been responded to, Bro. Glanfield retired, waving his adieux to the brethren, who will feel his absence very much, owing to the zealous and perfect character of his labours.

DURHAM.—Fawcett Lodge, No. 661.—On Friday, the 14th ult., a special lodge was held at the Lord Seaham Inn, Seaham Harbour, for the purpose of installing Bro. the Right Hon. Earl Vane as W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Sir H. Williamson, Bart., M.P., D.P.G.M., having presented the W.M.-elect for the benefit of installation, that ceremony was very effectively performed by Bro. J. Fawcett, Prov. G.M. Bro. Earl Vane then appointed and invested the following officers:—Bros. H. B. Wright, I.P.M.; W. Forster, S.W.; Joseph Armstrong, J.W.; J. Richardson, P.M. Treas.; E. Sellintine, Sec.; J. Pattison, S.D.; J. B. Wells, J. D.; and T. Gibbon, P.M., I.G. The brethren afterwards dined together, the newly installed W.M. occupying the chair, supported by Bros. J. Fawcett, P.G.M.; Sir H. Williamson, D.P.G.M.; W. H. Crookes, P.G.S.; W. Skelton, W.M. 97; J. Monkhouse, W.M. 124; M. Allison, P.M. 97; W. C. Blackett, P.M. 224; and H. B. Wright, P.M. 661. The lodges of the province were largely represented. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the noble chairman, and were duly respectively to.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge, No. 1051.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 1st May, at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster. In the absence of Bro. Dr. Mercer, the W.M., the chair was occupied by W. Bro. Hall, L.R.C.P., the Immediate Past Master, who was supported as follows:—Bros. Dr. Moore, Grand Sword-Bearer, as I.P.M.; W. Hall, S.W. 281, as S.W.; Wilson Barker, J.W. and Treasurer; W. J. Sly, S.D.; J. Harrison as J.D.; R. Taylor, I.G.; J. Watson, Tyler; Edmund Simpson and John Hatch, P.M.'s, 281; G. C. Barker, F.C.; John Harger, E.A.P. The lodge was opened, minutes confirmed, and other business transacted. Bro. G. C. Barker having been examined as to his proficiency with satisfactory result, was raised to the degree of M.M. in an impressive manner by the Acting W.M., Bro. Hall. The degree of F.C. was afterwards conferred upon Bro. Harger by Bro. John Hatch, P.M. 281. Bro. Moore reported that, on the 26th April, he had, for the sixth time, represented the Rowley Lodge in the Grand Lodge of England, on which occasion it had pleased the Grand Master to confer upon him the office of Grand Sword-Bearer. The W.M. proposed that the hearty congratulations of the lodge should be given to Bro. Moore on his appointment, which was carried by acclamation, the brethren saluting that energetic brother in due form as an officer of the Grand Lodge. Bro. Moore briefly responded, and, after the usual proclamation, the lodge was closed.

SHEERNESS.—De Shurland Lodge, No. 1089.—The regular meeting of this progressing lodge was held at the Fountain Hotel, Sheerness, on the 18th ult., Bro. Maurice West, W.M., presiding. There were also present, Bros. Pannell, S.W.; Smith, J.W.; Shrubsole, P.M., Treas.; Layland, P.M., Sec.; Nixon, S.D. pro tem.; Ingleton, J.D.; Archer, I.G.; Parish, Steward; J. R. McDonald, I.P.M., P.G.D.C.; Capt. Shepherd, P.M.; Jones, P.M.; Willis, Capt. H. Cotton, and many other brethren. The lodge having been opened in due form and the minutes of last regular meeting read and confirmed, Bros. Fleming, P.M., and Mole were elected as joining members, Bros. Horton and Bergie were passed to the second degree, and Bros. Pannell, S.W., and Shrubsole, P.M., were chosen to fill the offices of W.M. and Treas. respectively for the ensuing year. The lodge was closed in harmony, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment. The usual loyal toasts were proposed by the W.M. and heartily honoured. Bro. McDonald responded in his usual kindly manner for the Prov. Grand Officers. The gavel having then been intrusted to Bro. McDonald, he rose to propose the health of the present W.M., under whose reign the lodge had so happily prospered, and who had evinced so lively a desire to cement the groundwork of Freemasonry, viz., brotherly love.—The W.M. having ably responded resumed the gavel, and proposed the health of the W.M.-elect, expressing his pleasure at the choice of the brethren, as he felt sure the prosperity of the lodge would not diminish under his hands.—Br. Pannell, in returning thanks, expressed his appreciation of the honour conferred upon him, and trusted that at the termination of his year of office they would accord to him the same degree of approbation they had just shown towards their presiding W.M.—The W.M. then rose and said he had now toast to propose which would be drank with willingness by every one present; that was the health of two brethren who, he regretted to say, were about to leave the lodge and the town, viz., Bros. Willis and Archer. He knew he but expressed the feelings of all when he said they regretted those brothers leaving, and that they would carry with them the good wishes of every member of the lodge. He had specially to thank Bro. Archer, who had so ably assisted him as one of his officers during the past year. (The toast was warmly received.)—Bro. Willis offered to the brethren his best thanks. He parted from them with feelings of deep emotion; he had received the utmost kindness since his arrival in the town, where his profession as a solicitor needed so greatly the goodwill of all. He had met with so much good Masonic feeling of brotherly love, that it made the parting from them more difficult. He should wish it to go forth—not to Masons only, but to the whole town, friends and neighbours—that he parted from them with regret, and that he should for ever remember the kindness shown him.—Bro. Archer then in a most pleasing manner returned thanks for the great mark of respect shown to him. He regarded it as another great favour conferred upon him. He had deemed it one of the highest honours ever to have been admitted into the noble brotherhood of Freemasonry, and he felt that having been elected by the De Shurlanders and becoming a member of their lodge had added brightness to that honour; and, again, having been advanced to office so soon, made him proud of the kind favour shown towards him, and he had tried hard to make himself acquainted with the duties of his office, so that he might add his little part towards making the lodge work correctly and harmoniously, and if he had succeeded in earning the approbation of the W.M. to whom he was so much indebted, and to please his brethren, he felt himself repaid a hundred times for any little trouble he might have been at. He regretted that the opportunity for drinking his health as a parting brother should so soon have arisen. He should carry with him to his latest moments the remembrance of the many happy hours he had spent amongst them, and would endeavour at some future time to pay them a visit, when he hoped he should meet the same happy smiling faces he now saw around him.—During the evening the proceedings were enlivened by the excellent songs of Bros. Parish, McDonald, Nixon, Archer and Dutnall. The brethren separated after having spent a most happy evening.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude, No. 279.—A regular bi-monthly meeting of this chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall on Thursday, the 27th ult. In the unavoidable absence of the M.E.Z., Comp. L. A. Clarke, the Prov. G. Supt., Comp. Kelly, P.Z., presided, and there were also present Comps. Toller, J. and H.-elect; the Rev. Charles J. E. Smith (Rugby), J.-elect; Partridge, N., as P.S.; Captain Bankart, P.Z.; Weare, P.Z.; J. Wright, Smith, Baines, Sculthorpe, Bryan, and Bembridge, Janitor. Visitors: Comps. E. I. Orford, M.E.Z.-elect, and J. J. Fast, J.-elect, of No. 1130, Melton; and Thomas White, of No. 376. Apologies were received for the unavoidable absence of three out of the five candidates for exaltation. The first business was to instal the Principals of this and the De Mowbray chapter, and a conclave of Installed Principals having been opened, this was done in due form by the P.G. Supt. assisted by Comps. Bankart and Weare, P.Z.'s, as follows:—E. I. Orford as M.E.Z., Toller as H., and Rev. Charles J. E. Smith and J. J. Fast as J. On the other companions being admitted, Bros. the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, W.M. 279 and P.G.J.W., and R. A. Barber, 279, were regularly installed as Companions of the Order. On the conclusion of the ceremony, as some of the companions had to leave by early trains, a brief abstract only of the historical lecture was given, after which Comp. Toller gave the symbolical and Comp. Kelly the mystical lectures. Two additional candidates having been proposed, the chapter was closed in solemn form and the companions adjourned to refreshment.

LIVERPOOL.—Chapter of Liverpool, No. 292.—The regular convocation of this chapter was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, on the evening of Monday, the 3rd of April. Officers present: Comps. J. Mercer Johnson, M.D., M.E.Z.; R. Wylie, P.Z., II.; R. S. Williams, J.; Thomas Wylie, P.Z. and Treas.; Laidlaw, P.Z.; Hamer, P.Z.; Hustwick, S.E.; Hughes, as S.N.; and Pelham, P.S. Visitors: Comps. A. Fletcher, Z. Montreal Chapter, Montreal; Thomas Nicholson, 241; Pemberton, J. 1094. After the opening of the chapter, the Companions were admitted, and the S.E. read the minutes of the last meeting, which were duly confirmed. Comp. Hamer then took the 1st chair, and proceeded to install the Principals in accordance with previous election, Comps. Johnson, Z. (re-elected); Williams, II.; and Pelham, J. On the re-admission of the Companions, the 1st Principal invested his officers as follows, a suitable address being delivered to each by Comp. Thos. Wylie: Elliott, S.E.; Hughes, S.N.; Hustwick, P.S.; Ball, Janitor. Pursuant to notice, the late S.E. brought forward a motion to change the night of meeting from first Monday to fourth Thursday in January, March, May, July, September and November, this step being rendered necessary on account of the great inconvenience felt by many of the Companions, who are professional men, in having to attend

Monday nights; the motion was unanimously adopted. Excepting the proposition of a candidate for exaltation at the next chapter, there was no other business for consideration, and the chapter was closed, the Companions afterwards re-assembling at the Angel Hotel to celebrate the anniversary by supping together, a pleasant social evening being spent.

TWICKENHAM.—Royal Middlesex Chapter, No. 1194.—A meeting of this new chapter was held at the Grotto Hotel, Twickenham, on Saturday, the 29th ult. Comp. Col. F. Burdett, M.E.Z., presided, and was supported by Comps. W. Roebuck, H.; G. Cattel, J.; R. Wentworth Little, P.Z., E.; J. Coutts, P.Z. 177 and 382; F. Walters, P.Z.; W. Dodd, as P.S.; C. Horsley, T. Bendy. After due ballot, Comps. Horsley, Dodd, Major Finney, E. H. Finney, jun., and Sacré were elected joining members, and Bros. A. C. Morton, J.W. 9; H. Parker, 435; H. W. Hunt, S.D. 452; and J. Armstrong, 495, were then exalted to the R.A. degree, the ceremony being well rendered by all the acting officers. The minor positions in the chapter were filled by the election of Comps. W. Dodd, as S.N.; G. Kenning, P.S.; C. Horsley, Treas.; Morton, 1st Asst.; Hunt, 2nd Asst.; Parker, Org. A resolution to hold the future meetings at the Grotto Hotel was proposed by Comp. Little, seconded by Comp. Horsley, and adopted unanimously. The chapter was then closed, and the Companions repaired to the banquet under the presidency of Comp. Little, the M.E.Z. being compelled to leave, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The visitors were Comps. J. Boyd, Z. 145, P.Z. 538; J. M. Stedwell, P.Z. 946; F. Walters, P.Z. 73; J. S. Banning, P.Z. 214; and T. H. Edwards, J. 382.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

St. Mark's Lodge, No. 1.—This old lodge met on the 1st inst., at Bro. Gosden's, Masons' Hall Tavern, Mason's Avenue, City, and amongst those present were Bros. J. G. Marsh, W.M.; Rev. W. B. Church, M.A., S.W.; T. Cubitt, J.W.; H. C. Levander, M.A., P.M., Treas.; R. W. Little, P.M., Sec.; G. Kenning, M.O.; F. Walters, P.M., R. of M.; S. C. Davison, S.O.; W. Dodd, J.D.; J. W. Davison, I.G.; H. Parker, Org.; J. Weaver, and T. B. Yeoman. Bros. E. Hart Smith, P.M., and A. F. Donnagan were advanced to the Mark Degree, after which Bro. Church was elected W.M., a dispensation having been obtained as he is not a Craft Installed Master. Bro. Levander was re-chosen as Treasurer, and Gilbert as Tyler. It was proposed, seconded, and unanimously resolved that the sum of five guineas be voted to the "Wentworth Little Testimonial." The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a substantial repast.—After the cloth was cleared the usual loyal and Mark toasts were given.—Bro. Church, G. Chaplain, responded for the G. Officers, and both the newly-advanced brethren expressed their gratification upon being admitted into so interesting a branch of Masonry.—The health of the W.M. elect was specially proposed and cordially received, and that estimable brother, in the course of his reply, stated that he highly appreciated the honour which had been conferred upon him.

PROVINCIAL.

HALIFAX.—Fearnley Lodge, No. 58.—The regular quarterly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday the 26th ult. The following brethren were in attendance: J. Firth, W.M.; W. F. Wilkinson, S.W.; W. H. D. Horsfall, J.W.; J. Whitaker, M.O.; A. Roberts, S.O.; A. Horsfall, as J.O.; F. Waddington, Reg.; W. Cooke, P.M., P.G.S.O., Sec.; W. J. Laidler, S.D.; W. J. Beck, as J.D.; A. Matthewman, D. of C.; J. Barker, I.G.; C. T. Rhodes, Steward; J. Greenwood, P.M., Tyler; T. Perkinton, P.M., P.G.S.O., W. Tasker, J. Parker. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, three candidates were balloted for and unanimously accepted. The Secretary then read a communication from the Grand Secretary, announcing that the M.W.G.M. had been pleased to form the Mark Lodges (English Constitution), in West Yorkshire into a Province, and had appointed Bro. Thomas Perkinton to be the first Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master. He trusted that the formation of the lodges into a Province would tend materially to raise the degree in the estimation of the Craft generally, and be the means of consolidating the various lodges in a bond of union for the welfare of them all. The P.G.M.-nominate being then present, he called upon the brethren to express their gratification at the appointment by giving him a hearty salute. The W.M. then called upon Bro. Cooke, P.M., to take the chair, when Bro. J. W. Davies, of the St. James's Lodge, No. 448, and Bro. S. Metcalfe, of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 600, were regularly advanced to the degree of Mark Master. Bro. Perkinton having thanked the brethren for the hearty manner in which they greeted him, and stated how deeply he felt the great honour which had been conferred upon him by the M.W.G.M. in appointing him the first P.G.M. for West Yorkshire, the lodge was closed in harmony with the usual formalities.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

BIRMINGHAM.—Rose of Sharon Conclave, No. 19.—A meeting of this conclave was held at the Masonic Hall, Birmingham, on the 20th ultimo, under the presidency of Ill. Sir Kt. T. Partridge, Int. Gen. Unatt., M.P.S., assisted by a goodly number of members and the following visitors: Ill. Sir Kts. W. Kelly, M.P.S. 44, Int. Gen. Leicestershire; G. Toller, jun., S.G. 44; S. S. Partridge, R. 44; W. Sculthorpe, Treas. 44; F. J. Baines, 44; W. Weare, 44; and Capt. C. Hunter, Hon. Sov. 42. Bros. Percy Cocker, of Lodge 1246, and John Beach,

I.G. 347, were regularly installed as Knights of the Order, and after a discussion originated by Sir Kt. Astley respecting the Rite of Misraim, the conclave was closed in due form.

HAMPSHIRE.—Naval and Military Conclave, No. 35.—A meeting of this conclave was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Portsea, on the 21st ult., when it was proposed by E. Sir Kt. Howell, M.P.S., seconded by E. Sir Kt. Green, Recorder, and carried by acclamation, "That Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little, G.R., be elected an honorary member, as a token of the high esteem in which he is held by every member of the conclave." The Naval and Military Conclave is progressing very favourably, and we are informed that another is about to be formed at Winchester, in the same county.

LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave, No. 44.—An emergency meeting of this newly-formed conclave was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Monday, the 24th ult, when there were present: Sir Kts. W. Kelly, M.P.S. and Intendant General for Leicestershire and Rutland (on the throne); George Toller, jun., as V.E.; L. A. Clarke, J.G.; S. S. Partridge, Recorder; W. Sculthorpe, Treas.; F. J. Baines, Prefect; J. C. Duncombe, Standard-Bearer; White, Shuttlewood, Weare, and Bembridge, Sentinel. Visitor: Sir Kt. Kennedy, Rose of Sharon Conclave, Birmingham. On the conclave being opened, a ballot was taken for Bros. Chester Pern Newcome, of No. 1130, Melton, and William Johnson, P.M. of 523, Leicester, which was unanimous in their favour. From various circumstances, out of ten candidates due for admission into the order, two of them only were able to be present, viz., Bros. the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, W.M. No. 779, and Charles Alfred Spencer, of 523. Three of the officers were also unavoidably absent, viz., Sir Kts. the Rev. W. Langley, M.A., Viceroy; N. Haycroft, D.D., High Prelate; and H. Denne, Herald. Bros. Earl Ferrers and Spencer were duly admitted as Knights of the Red Cross, the charges during the ceremony being delivered by the M.P.S., and the historical oration and the High Prelate's lecture on the principles and teachings of the order being given by Sir Kt. Toller. The M.P.S. reported that he and five other members of this conclave had visited the Rose of Sharon Conclave, Birmingham, on Thursday, the 20th, where they were received in the most knightly and hospitable manner. The conclave was then closed in solemn form, and the Sir Knights adjourned to refreshment.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Vigne (late Bournemouth) Chapter, S.P.R.C.—The Easter meeting of this chapter was held at Bournemouth, on the 12th ult., when a fair number of brethren were present. At a previous chapter of emergency it had been unanimously resolved that the name of the chapter be altered from the "Bournemouth" to the "Vigne" Chapter. On the minutes of this chapter being put in for confirmation, the M.W.S. (Ill. Bro. Rev. P. H. Newham, 30°) called the attention of the brethren to the peculiar importance of the change of name now proposed to be confirmed; inasmuch as it was to be considered not only as a testimony of respect to the Supreme Head of the Order in England, but it would also go forth to their brethren as tantamount to a vote of confidence in the S.C. against which, as they were aware, many hard things had lately been said. He therefore begged that the brethren would not confirm the resolution of the chapter of emergency merely as a matter of form, nor unless they were heartily satisfied with it. The minutes were then unanimously confirmed. Ill. Bro. Coombs, 32°, of Dorchester, and Bro. W. L. Adye, 18°, of Ryde, were balloted for, and elected joining members; Bro. T. G. Horder, 18°, was unanimously elected M.W.S. for the ensuing year. There being no candidate on this occasion, the ceremony of this degree was then carefully rehearsed for the practice of the brethren, explanations of the history and symbolism of portions of the work being occasionally added by the M.W.S. The chapter was closed in solemn form at 7.45 p.m.

K. H. S.

The Knights of this Order celebrated the anniversary of the Invention of the Cross on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., at Freemasons' Tavern. Five Red Cross Knights, viz., Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, 30°, G. H. P.; Major-General G. B. Munbee, 30°, J.P., Int. Gen., Somersetshire; T. L. Fox, 18°; T. W. White; and J. G. Bales, were admitted into the brotherhood, and the third point was also communicated to them. Bro. Kts. R. Wentworth Little, as M.E.C.; Rev. W. B. Church, as Prior; J. G. Marsh, as Seneschal; H. C. Levander, as C.G.; T. Cubitt, as G.S.V.; E. H. Thiellay, as V.; J. W. Barrett, II.; and M. Edwards, W., performed the ceremony. Bro. Kts. Church was elected M.E.C.; H. C. Levander, S.; J. G. Marsh, P.; T. Cubitt, S.P.; and J. W. Barrett, C.G. The Commandery was then closed, and the Knights adjourned to the refectory, where a really first-rate dinner was served. Great regret was expressed for the absence of Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., and Sir Gilbert E. Campbell, Bart., both of whom had been expected to attend for reception into the Order, and it is probable that a special meeting will soon be called to receive them. After a very pleasant evening the Knights separated.

INSTRUCTION.

Stability Lodge of Instruction.—The fifty-fourth anniversary meeting of this, the oldest, Lodge of Instruction held under the sanction of the Lodge of Stability, No. 217, was held at Radley's Hotel, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, on Friday, the 28th day of April, at half-past five o'clock, under the able presidency of the veteran and best of instructors, Bro. Henry Muggeridge, P.M. 192, as the W.M. On this occasion the programme of work was the lecture of the second degree, worked in sections by the following brethren, viz.: 1st section, Bro. E. Henry Tipton, W.M. 49; 2nd section, John Jonas, J.D. 715; 3rd section, Henry Birdseye, S.D. 715; 4th and 5th sections, Alfred Bryant (Lodge Board) W.M. 12. The work, as usual on these occasions, being rendered in such an admirable manner as to make it quite a treat to all who heard it given. On the recommendation of the Treasurer, Bro. Henry Muggeridge, the following large and liberal donations were voted to the Masonic Charities:—Ten guineas to the Girls' School; ten guineas to the Boys' School; ten pounds to the Benevolent Fund. Bro. John Hervey, P.G.D. and G.S., proposed, and Bro. B. Head P.G.D. seconded, "That a vote of thanks be given to Bro. Henry Muggeridge, the Preceptor of this Lodge of Instruction, for the admirable manner he had presided as W.M. at this meeting, and the same to be entered upon the lodge minute book," which was carried by acclamation unanimously. Bro. H. Muggeridge, W.M., in a pleasing speech acknowledged this compliment. Bro. Thomas Fenn, P.G.D.C., proposed, and Bro. Colonel E. M. Perkins seconded, "That a vote of thanks be given to those brethren who had done the work in the sections, and the same to be entered on the lodge minute book," which was carried unanimously and duly acknowledged. After a large number of distinguished Masons had been enrolled as members of this Lodge of Instruction, the lodge was closed at eight o'clock. We cannot refrain from expressing our opinion that this was the most successful anniversary we ever remember being present at, and as we have witnessed nearly three apprenticeships of them, we can with confidence express our views on the subject. The work is rendered in the same correct style, and no alteration has been made in it in our time; it is precisely the same now as when we first saw it given, which is saying all that can be desired in its favour, and we congratulate that best of instructors, Bro. Henry Muggeridge, for the great pains and incessant care he must have used to have preserved such an uniformity in the working which he so admirably teaches.—The brethren adjourned to an elegant cold collation provided by Bro. John Hart. Bro. Aeneas J. McIntyre, P.G.D., and Grand Registrar, presided, and he was supported by Bros. Henry Muggeridge, the Preceptor; John Hervey, G.S.; Ebenezer Saunders, S.G. Deacon; Benjamin Head, P.J.G.D.; Thomas Fenn, P.G.D.C.; E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B. (Secretary of the Girls' School); Colonel E. M. Perkins, W.M. 5; Theobald, Scriven, and Jackson of the same lodge; J. H. Cox, E. M. Hubbuck, S. Muggeridge, G. A. Taylor, James Terry, G. Kenning, S. G. Myers, Spooner, F. Walters, J. A. Farnfield, J. H. Townsend, A. Pratt, T. White, E. Sillifant, T. Cubitt, F. Bigg, and other brethren to the number of about 130. The toasts were given as follows, and we regret very much that want of space prevents us from giving in full the admirable speeches we have written before us. "The Queen and the Craft," "M.W.G.M.," "P.G. Masters," "The Grand Officers," Bro. E. Saunders, S.G.D., responded to the toast of the Grand Officers, Past and Present. "The Lodge of Instruction and Bro. Henry Muggeridge," proposed by Bro. A. J. McIntyre, G.R., in his usual superior style; the speeches being excellent, brief and yet expressive. The amount of enthusiasm with which the name of Bro. Henry Muggeridge was received proved how well this brother has endeared himself to all who know him; his great popularity remains intact, and it was a most gratifying sight to witness how well his name was received. When he arose to reply, many minutes elapsed before he could speak, for the reception was so hearty and enthusiastic that no words could have been heard. However, he responded in a good speech, which was most attentively listened to, and when concluded the renewal of the applause showed how well it was received and appreciated. We were pleased and much gratified in being able to take a pinch of snuff out of a massive silver snuff-box which had lately been presented to our dear old friend, Bro. Muggeridge, by three brethren, members of a distinguished lodge, which is one of the many tokens of good will and friendship he has had presented to him during his long Masonic career.—Bro. J. Hervey, G.S., gave the toast of "Bro. A. J. McIntyre," which was most enthusiastically received, and Bro. A. J. McIntyre acknowledged it in an excellent speech.—"The Working Brethren" was proposed by Bro. B. Head; Bro. A. Bryant responded.—"The Sister Lodge of Instruction" was proposed by Bro. H. Muggeridge, which elicited a good response from Bro. T. Fenn, P.G.D.C.—"The Masonic Charities" was proposed by Bro. J. McIntyre, and responded to by Bro. B. Head, which completed the programme of the evening.—The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. T. Young, and he was supported by Bros. Ransford, P.G. Organist, and King, when the following programme was carried out: National Anthem; glee, "Winds gently whisper;" glee, "Merrily goes the bark;" song, Bro. Ransford, "True Courage;" duet, Bros. Young and Ransford, "Tell me where is Fancy bred;" song, Bro. Donald King, "Do you want a Guinea to spend?" glee, "Mynheer Van Dunk;" song, Bro. Young, "Sally in our Alley;" glee, "Spring's Delights."—The brethren separated at an early hour, all well pleased with this most enjoyable anniversary.

THE Grand Mark Master Mason has approved of petitions for Mark Lodges at Dorchester and Poona.

The following will appear in our next issue:—Grand Chapter report; Consecration of the St. Clement Danes' Lodge, Strand; report of Lodge 403, Hereford; 452, Croydon; 871, Deptford; R.A. Chapter 73; "Bon Accord" Mark Lodge; Jerusalem Chapter of Antiquity, Manchester; "K. Templarism and Masonry," by Bro. Forsyth.

The NEW GRAND OFFICERS.

IN the course of his remarks at the Grand Festival, Lord Carnarvon very truly observed that in consequence of the Grand Master's absence the proceedings of the day resembled the play of "Hamlet" with the part of the princely Dane himself omitted. The mission, however, which has been confided to Lord de Grey and his colleagues is one of such importance to the nation, and its success is so desirable from every point of view, that every English brother must for the time forget the Mason in the statesman, and rejoice that our Grand Master's absence is occasioned by his labours in the cause of peace, progress, and civilization. Elsewhere we record the noble reception experienced by his lordship at the hands of the American Craft—a record which is as honourable to them as it is pleasing to ourselves, and which we willingly accept as a proof of the fraternal sentiments which actuate the enlightened citizens of Great Britain and America. But if the actual "sceptred sovereign" of the Fraternity was not with us corporeally, we may be assured that in thought and in spirit our Most Worshipful Brother was in communion with his brethren on the 26th of April. Without any great effort of imagination he could easily pass in mental review the proceedings at our annual celebration, and it is but bare justice to the Deputy Grand Master to state that the grace and dignity with which he performed the functions of his chief left nothing to be desired, and certainly could not be surpassed.

The re-appointment of the Earl of Carnarvon to his high post of Deputy, was of course expected by the members of Grand Lodge, and its announcement elicited hearty applause, after which his lordship proceeded to nominate the Grand Officers for the year.

Lord Lindsay, the Senior Grand Warden, is, although but young in the Craft, a most earnest and zealous Mason. He belongs to several lodges, amongst others to the "Prince of Wales," No. 259, the "Harmony," No. 255, Richmond, which boasts so many noble Masons in its ranks; and Lord Lindsay is also the present Master of a lodge which bears his name and meets at Wigan.

The Junior Grand Warden, Colonel John Whitwell, M.P., is likewise a most worthy recipient of Grand Lodge honours. As the Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Cumberland and Westmorland, under Lord Bective, he has given the utmost satisfaction to the Craft, and our gratification at his promotion is decidedly not lessened by the fact that his solid abilities as a legislator seem destined to ensure for him, at no distant date, a high place in the councils of the nation.

Our knowledge of the new Grand Chaplain's Masonic antecedents is but limited. We believe he is a son of General Brownrigg, Past Grand Warden, and that he is well and favourably known in the province of Oxford.

The valuable services of Brothers Samuel Tomkins as Grand Treasurer, Æneas J. McIntyre as Grand Registrar, and John Hervey as Grand Secretary, are again at the disposal of the Craft, and the cheers which greeted their re-investment sufficiently attest the esteem and affection with which they are regarded by the representatives of the Craft.

Bro. Wendt was re-appointed Grand Secretary for German Correspondence, in which post he has done good suit and service.

The new Senior Grand Deacons were Brothers J. Van Norden Bazalgette, P.M. of the Jerusalem Lodge, No. 197, and Jas. E. Saunders, P.M. of No. 1, and both are most excellent appointments.

In the selection of the Junior Grand

Deacons, we are glad to notice that the claims of Lancashire were duly recognised by the appointment of Brother John M. Wike, than whom it would be difficult to find a better representative of the County Palatine; while the unwearied exertions of Brother Raynham W. Stewart on behalf of the Masonic Charities received a like reward. The enthusiasm which greeted Brother Stewart's nomination as a Grand Officer showed unmistakeably the personal popularity of the man, and we have very great pleasure in adding our congratulations upon his accession to office to the ovation so spontaneously accorded to him by the Grand Lodge.

A similar compliment was paid to Sir Albert W. Woods when the Deputy Grand Master re-invested him with the collar of Grand Director of Ceremonies—a post whose duties, it is needless to add, "Garter" fulfils to the admiration of the whole Craft.

The re-appointment of the Grand Superintendent of Works, and the choice of Bro. Hickman for the position of Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies, do not call for special comment. We understand that the latter brother is a most efficient and zealous Mason, and that he possesses the entire confidence of the brethren of Hampshire, from which province he hails. From personal knowledge we can, however, speak of the merits of Brother J. Daniel Moore, M.D., the new Sword-Bearer, not only as an active and energetic worker, but as a true supporter of the great principles of our Institution. It is men like him that we desire to see upon the dais, and it is a sufficient proof of the discrimination shown in the selection of Grand Officers when we see such men as Dr. Moore decorated with the purple. The post of Grand Organist, which has been held for some years by Brother James Coward, was conferred upon Brother William Ganz, whose musical ability must be well known to the brethren, inasmuch as he has on several occasions conducted concerts at the Masonic festivals. Brother James Brétt having most creditably performed his duties as Grand Pursuivant during the last twelve months, was awarded past rank, and Brother John Coutts was promoted in his stead—the position of Assistant Grand Pursuivant being conferred upon Brother John Boyd, a Past Master of several lodges and a most worthy member of the Order.

We have now exhausted the list of appointments, and it will be noticed that we have nothing but praise to bestow upon the selections made. We are far from saying that there are not as good men within the pale of the Craft as those chosen for so high a distinction—fortunately there are very many such; but it may be confidently asserted that the new Grand Officers will maintain the prestige and dignity of their respected offices in a manner which is sure to reflect honour upon themselves as well as on the great Fraternity of which they are now the conspicuous representatives.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

ON Monday next His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master, will preside at the 83rd Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. We have so often expressed our views upon the claims of the Masonic Charities that we need not recapitulate them now. Let us, however, breathe a hope that the Girls' Festival of 1871 will surpass in pecuniary results all those which have preceded it, and that the Institution may thus be enabled to extend the benefits of education to every child of our indigent or deceased brethren who may seek its fostering care.

POMEROY'S DEMOCRAT and the ROCHDALE BRETHREN.

WE have received a letter addressed to the "Editor of Pomeroy's Democrat," New York, by Bro. William Ashworth, of Rochdale. Now, beyond question, our brother editor did use some hard language respecting the Rose Croix Chapter at Rochdale, but this we conceive he did upon imperfect information as to the facts. We do not ourselves know the precise origin of the chapter, but if its non-adhesion to the S.G.C. 33° is to be accepted as prima facie evidence of a spurious basis, all we can say is—and we say it for the especial benefit of the Democrat—that the oldest Rose Croix Chapter in England, namely, the "Baldwyn," at Bristol, has never acknowledged the Council in Golden-square, and yet no one presumes to stigmatise its members as spurious Masons. It would have been wiser if Brother Tisdall, the Masonic editor of the Democrat, had learned a little more of the past history and present status of Masonic degrees in England before he 'dipped his pen in gall and denounced a number of true and honourable Masons. For instance, he has also written a tissue of absurdities upon the Red Cross Order, which he—knowing better probably than the members—states has no Christian basis, and whose origin he willingly ascribes to very modern times, in order to please those who act as purveyors to his imagination. It may interest him to know that the Red Cross Order had a separate Grand Council in England, presided over by our best Masons, long before the Supreme Grand Council 33° was imported from America; that the strongest documentary proofs of its high-standing still exist, and have been procured from what even Bro. Tisdall will not venture to call a spurious source—the archives of the Grand Lodge of England. Therefore, although we deem it advisable not to publish Bro. Ashworth's letter, it by no means follows that we approve of the article which excites his indignation.

WE are given to understand that the M.W. G.M.M. has constituted the warranted Mark Lodges in West Yorkshire into a province, and has nominated R.W. Bro. Thomas Perkinson, Past G.S.O., to be the first Provincial Grand Master. A preliminary meeting of representatives from the various lodges is to be held at Halifax on Monday.

BRO. J. FLETCHER BRENNAN AND THE "BIBLE QUESTION."

I am much obliged to the well-known Mason, Bro. J. Fletcher Brennan, for so clearly expressing the views of our Jewish brethren in the United States. I mention the United States because in this country I have never heard a word of objection raised to the system we pursue.

In England I have often seen our Jewish friends obligated on the O.T. according to their form, and exactly as they desire. We have two lodges in London mainly composed of brethren of that persuasion, and two better lodges it would be difficult to find anywhere. I have also often conversed with Jews who are Masons, and have never yet heard them offer the slightest objection to the system advocated and followed in this country. A Christian on the "whole Bible," a Jew on the Old Testament, and a Mohamedan on the Koran are surely sufficient evidences of liberality and universality for any one, especially when we recollect it is also legal for an affirmation to be taken in lieu of an oath! I have been present when the latter has been adopted, and was much struck with the simplicity of the promise given. Where the majority are Jews, let the Old Testament be on the pedestal, and where the most of the members are Christians, then have the "whole Bible." I am only anxious to regard the scruples and consciences of all.

THE TEMPLARS AND FREEMASONRY.

Bro. Forsyth's communication appears to have created some interest, and I shall be glad if it leads to a better understanding of the true claims of the Templar Order. I am glad to see the letters of Bro. Buchan and "A Scotch Knight Templar" on the subject. Perhaps the latter will tell us: 1. Where he considers is the chief seat of the Order? 2. Is the "governing body" to which he refers the Grand Conclave of Scotland? 3. What are the encampments which do not recognise this body? 4. Why is it that the priories holding under that body can never be called Masonic, seeing that every candidate must be a Royal Arch Mason? 5. When was it that there were no charters, and the Craft lodges used to work the Templar degree without authority? 6. Perhaps this brother will kindly give the probable date, and some description, of the Aberdeen seals and jewels? Probably if Bro. Forsyth can procure the loan of the engraved plates discovered at Stirling, the editor of THE FREEMASON will not object to give impressions in his issue.

Seeing the importance of the work which is now in the hands of the Grand Conclave of England, there could be no period when communications on the subject would be of greater value and interest than the present time.

"THE ANNUS LUCIS."

In reply to "W.M.," at page 265, I beg to send you an extract from the Book of Constitutions, "collected and digested" by James Anderson, D.D., revised by John Entick, M.A., and printed by Bro. W. Johnson, in Ludgate-street, London, 1767, by order of the Grand Lodge:—

In page No. 2, explaining A.M. 1 and B.C. 4004: "The first Christians computed their times as the nations did among whom they lived till A.D. 532, when Dionysius Exiguus, a Roman abbot, taught them first to compute from the Birth of Christ; but he lost four years, or began the Christian Era four years later than just. Therefore, though according to the Hebrew Chronology of the Old Testament, and other good vouchers, Christ was truly born in some month of the year of the world, or A.M. 4000. Yet these four years added make 4004—not before the Birth of Christ, but before the Christian Era, viz., 1756; for the true Anno Domini, or year after Christ's birth, is 1760; but the Masons being used to compute by the vulgar Anno Domini, or Christian Era, 1756; and adding to it, not 4004 as it ought, but the strict years before Christ's birth, viz., 4000, they usually call this the year of Masonry 5756, instead of the accurate year 5760; and we must keep to the vulgar computation, and so these letters A.M. signify Anno Mundi, or year of the world, and here B.C. is not Before Christ, but before the Christian Era. The A.M. or Anno Mundi is the same followed by Usher, Prideaux, &c."

The above is a simple copy of note in explanation of A.M. 1 in the History of Masonry, published with the Constitutions of 1767, A. F.

Was the late Bro. Deuchar, the Grand Master of the K.T. in Scotland, ever a member of the Rite of Misraim? I have seen certain jewels said to have belonged to him, and which bear the words Alex. Deuchar, Edin., on the reverse.

ROMAN ARCHITECTURE.

"In the style of French architecture which was created in the thirteenth century the disposition, the construction, the statics, the scale, and the ornamentation differ absolutely from those of the antique school. They were the consequence of two civilisations based on entirely differing principles. . . . The Roman monument is a species of modelling on a form which permitted the rapid use of an enormous mass of materials, consequent upon the facility with which a large body of workmen could be obtained. The Romans had at their disposal large armies habituated to public works, and could throw a large slave population upon a building; they therefore adopted a mode of construction convenient to these social conditions. To raise their edifices it was not necessary to have a body of skilled labourers. Some special men to direct the works, a few painters and plasterers, who covered the crude masses with a rich envelope; a few Greek artists to do their carving, was all the skilled labour needed, and plenty of brute force sufficed for the rest. Thus, whatever might be the distance from the metropolis to the place where the Romans built their amphitheatres, their baths, their aqueducts, their palaces, or their basilicas, their architecture was the same, and the buildings of the Romans were, before all things, Roman. In spite of soil or climate, regardless of the nature of the materials or the custom of the inhabitants, they were buildings of the city of Rome, and never the individual work of an artist. From the moment when Rome planted her foot upon a foreign soil, she there reigned supreme, and effaced everything that was strange to her. This was her power; the arts followed the same principle as her politics, and under this crushing influence the individuality of man disappeared. Even Greece—that brilliant home of art and human development—even Greece was extinguished by the breath of Rome. Christianity alone, by giving a sentiment of personality to the individual man, could struggle against this giant, but it took centuries to clear away the remains of Pagan civilisation."—Building News.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

By BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

A return of lodges was issued for the year 1813 (the first of its kind), and the number then in working order, according to the official papers would appear to be nearly one thousand! In all probability, however, half that number would have been nearer the mark. The officers endeavoured by dint of coaxing and private correspondence to secure a large number of responses to their applications for dues and over dues. The notice sent out early in 1815 was as follows:—

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND,

Dublin, the 5th of January, 1815.

Whereas, by order dated 7th of October, 1813, a letter was sent to the several lodges in arrear of dues, or who had not corresponded agreeable to rule calling on them to settle their accounts and make the necessary returns on or before the 27th day of December in the same year, under penalty of being cancelled.

Under this order the warrants of one hundred and six lodges were cancelled, and the penalty would have been inflicted to a greater extent, but that it was represented that several lodges were so circumstanced as to become unable to comply with the orders, and to those the Grand Lodge was pleased to enlarge the time for discharging arrears and making returns, of which indulgence several availed themselves to become regular.

It being probable, on further consideration, from different communications on the subject, that several lodges are still in such peculiar and difficult cases as to prevent their compliance with the order of 7th October, 1813. The Grand Lodge is hereby pleased to give a further extension of the time for paying arrears of dues, and making returns of officers and members, to the next St. John's Day, 24th June, on the next meeting, after which day the warrant of lodges then found irregular in those respects will be cancelled.

The decision of the Grand Lodge in this case extends equally to lodges which, having been suffered to compound their dues, are again in arrear, and all lodges are called upon to send in returns of their officers and members for registry before the specified time, under the penalty of suspension until they do.

The Grand Lodge having pursued a course of lenity and indulgence almost prejudicial to the interests of Freemasonry, with no good effect in the instance of several lodges, which have not only disregarded the rules and regulations, but the principles of the Constitution, as those are set forth in the "Ahiman Rezon," feels the necessity of acting with decision in order to preserve Freemasonry in its pure and constitutional precepts and doctrines, and will on no future occasion suffer lodges to exist under the sanction of the Grand Lodge that will not be amenable to the authority from which they have had their formation—an authority which collectively and individually they have solemnly pledged themselves to maintain and uphold.

Every lodge called upon to account for any irregularity with which it may have been charged shall answer for itself, distinctly and separately, and not in conjunction with any other lodges to whom similar transgression may be imputed.

A committee was subsequently appointed, and a report from that body was received at the Grand Lodge held in the following year. We happen to have a copy of the report, and beg to present it to our readers:

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND,

5th of December, 1816.

Ordered—That the following report of Committee on the state of lodges on the Establishment of this Grand Lodge be confirmed:

The state of lodges on 24th June, 1816, were as follows:—

- 607 Warrants, the dues of which are paid up within a period of three years.
- 110 ——— in arrear three years, and not exceeding five years.
- 68 ——— in arrear five years and upwards.
- 25 Military, that have not corresponded for many years.
- 210 Dormant and cancelled.
- 1020 Gross number.

In order to dispose of the 210 numbers now vacant as above, together with such others as may be in arrear of dues and cancelled by the rule of the Grand Lodge, it is ordered that, on and after the 24th of June, 1817, the numbers of cancelled and dormant warrants, and all numbers then unoccupied on the Grand Lodge books, shall be granted to applicants properly qualified and recommended for same in manner following, viz.: Every regular warranted lodge on the Irish Establishment not in arrear to the Grand Lodge for dues or fines, or under censure or suspension, the members of which shall apply to the Grand Secretary (post paid) for a senior vacant number, shall be arranged according to the seniority of their present numbers, and the oldest vacant number given to the senior applicants, and so on till all such applications shall have been acceded to, respect being always had to applications for particular numbers if vacant, provided that the particular number so claimed be not senior to that which the applicants would have been entitled to if they had not put in their claims to any specific number.

An exception to this rule is to be allowed in favour of military applicants when the number similar to number of the regiment is vacant.

Lodges not making their applications for exchange of warrants, and clearing off their arrears due to the Grand Lodge on or before said 24th of June, 1817, shall be considered as having relinquished their claim to the opportunity of obtaining senior numbers in the future numerical arrangement of the lodges of Ireland.

That, to meet the expense of revival and exchange of warrants, the sum of one guinea shall be forwarded with each application, and after same are defrayed the surplus shall be appropriated in aid of the funds of the Masonic Female Orphan School.

In order to prevent any confusion or disappointment in the revival or exchange of warrants, it is ordered that with each application the warrant now held be sent up (together with the names of the officers and a list of all the members), an acknowledgment for same to be returned.

In all cases of warrants exchanged for those of different numbers the sum of one British shilling must be paid for the transfer of each member to the new; same to be sent up with the application for such exchange.

In order to a perfect uniformity of warrants, the Grand Lodge recommend that such regular lodges as do not wish to change their present numbers will take a duplicate of same off the improved plate—in such case the original date shall be preserved and inserted.

After the lodges now in existence shall have their applications acceded to, all new warrants granted by the Grand Lodge shall be ordered for the highest senior number then vacant on the list, so that the numerical order shall not be increased till all the vacant numbers are disposed of.

It appears that of the sixty-eight lodges in arrear five years and upwards several have been in correspondence with the Grand Lodge, and made payments on account within said period. It is therefore ordered that time be given to those lodges to clear up their arrear to 27th December, 1817, after which period the rule shall be strictly enforced.

It is ordered that when the proposed arrangement is completed, a correct list of all the lodges on the Establishment of Ireland shall be printed, as they will then stand on the books of the Grand Lodge, with the names of the Masters and places where held, a copy of which shall be sent to each lodge.

It is to be observed that no part of the foregoing is to apply to brethren who may require a warrant to form a new lodge, the regulations for which are provided for in rule No. 6, section the 4th, of revised Laws.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND,

Dublin, 3rd of April, 1817.

Ordered—That the foregoing be printed and sent to all lodges of Ireland.

By order of the Grand Lodge,

ROBERT HANCOCK, Grand Secretary.
WILLIAM FRANCIS GRAHAM, D.G. Sec.,
35, Capel-street.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

QUALIFICATION FOR THE MARK CHAIR.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read with a good deal of interest the arguments of those brethren who are in favour of removing the qualification at present necessary for a W.M. in a Mark lodge, i.e., having already passed the chair in the Craft. I cannot in any respect agree with the proposed alteration which I am very sorry to see mooted, as I believe were the principal chair in a Mark lodge thrown open to any one, whether installed Master (Craft) or not, it would be the death-blow to the degree. "A Craft P.M.," in your last number, says "the Mark is an independent degree." I say it is not. It is as thoroughly dependent on the second degree as the Royal Arch is on the third, and so long as the wise regulation of the Supreme Chapter ordains that no one shall be installed principal of a chapter until he has been W.M. of a lodge, so long, I trust, will the Grand Mark Lodge insist on the same qualification for an Installed Mark Master. Why, even the very titles—Installed Master, or Installed Mark Master—would lead to countless abuses, and there is no body of Masons who should more jealously guard their privileges and their justly-earned honours than the Installed Masters of the Craft, and this they must do by refusing to permit any one to take their titles in another degree who does not possess their qualifications.

Any non-qualified brother who may have been elected to the chair of a Mark lodge can, by a dispensation, be placed in that chair to rule the lodge and confer the degree, but without receiving the degree or instructions of Installed Mark Master, which must not be communicated to him until he has received the similar degree in a Craft Lodge, when, of course, he will be entitled to receive them, although perhaps already out of the Mark chair. Should any attempt be made to alter this most necessary rule and to interfere with the status quo ante, I am quite certain that a large and important section of the Grand Mark Lodge will secede, and therefore sincerely hope the G.M.M. will not listen to the councils of the "Youngers," who are perhaps more enthusiastic, but certainly less discreet, than the "Elders." The expression of the astute French statesman is, in the Masonic world, a golden rule—Point de zèle.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

A D. PROV. G.M.M.

RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF FREEMASONRY.

[Reply to Bro. Hughan's article of March 18th, p. 163.]

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

MY DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I assure you that I entertain the highest opinion of Brother Hughan's integrity as an historian, and never questioned "what are his evidence." The word "cheating" I made use of in my letter Feb. 25th was not designed as an offence to Bro. H., and his lecture about writing as a gentleman was therefore entirely uncalled for. And in order to avoid an interminable discussion, permit me to define wherein Bro. Hughan and myself agree, and wherein we disagree.

1st. We agree that previous to 1717, the Masons were Christians, and their ceremonies were Christian.

2nd. From 1717 until 1813, Masonry avowed itself cosmopolitan, but its ritual was not so.

3rd. That after the union in 1813, the English ritual was brought into greater harmony with its professions of universality than ever it was before.

4th. That the Baptist's day was observed by Masons previous to the year 1717 (which I never disputed), but as the day was celebrated in Yorkshire in the 14th century, with processions, &c., by carpenters, saddlers, wheelwrights and a hundred other fraternities, and as those fraternities did not claim St. John to have been a Grand Master Carpenter, a Grand Master Saddler, &c., the cause of Masons' observance of St. John's-day may with propriety be attributed to a fashion at that time among the guilds, and the Masonic legends of the Saints John may be pronounced a pious fraud.

5th. That the Bible was absent from an English lodge for several lodge-nights, with the consent of that most excellent exemplar of Masonic virtues, the late Duke of Sussex. (I was informed about thirty years ago that the Duke performed the ceremony, but it was doubtless a mistake.) Thus proving that a lodge can be just, perfect, and regular without the presence of a Bible.

6th. We agree that "some are firm believers in Freemasonry being Christian even at the present day." I am satisfied, however, that my worthy opponent is too liberal-minded to be of that way of thinking, but whence have the "some" derived the opinion that Freemasonry is Christian at the present day?

The truth is, the greatest Masonic teachers were inconsistent in their teachings. They blew hot and blew cold; on one page glorifying Masonry for its cosmopolitanism, on the next for its Christianity, and on the third would declare that cosmopolitanism and Christianity mean the same thing, &c. Now, I call this double-dealing; and double-dealing is cheating, and is not in accord with our boast that sincerity and plain-dealing are and ought to be our distinguishing characteristics. Let us, for instance, examine the writings of Hutchinson and Oliver, the greatest Masonic teachers of their day and generation. The former says, "Masonry directs us to divest ourselves of confined and bigoted notions, and teaches us that humanity is the soul of religion. We never suffer any religious disputes in our lodges, and as Masons, we only pursue the universal religion of Nature." Now, if he believed it was so, why did he teach that the third degree was Christian, &c.? Dr. Oliver tells us (Golden Remains, vol. 4), "That Freemasonry in the abstract is not a system of religion, is an evident fact which no intelligent Mason will attempt to deny"; and, when defending Masonry from the attacks of some bigots, he goes on to say: "In contemplation of His goodness, His wisdom and His power, the Turk, the Jew, and the Christian can join in adoration and worship of a Deity in whose hands are the issues of life and death; and is it necessary that this admirable system of union for the best purposes should be destroyed by the introduction into a Christian lodge of the doctrine of redemption, which must offend the Turk? of the holy name of Messiah, which offends the prejudices of the Jew? or in a Turkish lodge the name of Mahomet, which must offend both Jew and Christian? and thereby defeat the universality of an excellent institution? No, we are brethren; the Godhead has taught us so to call each other; the innate principle persuades us that we are so. Shall, then, this temporary and happy accommodation of sentiment to good purposes stamp us deists? Very far from it. When the lodge is closed, each departs untainted by the other; the Jew to his synagogue, the Turk to his mosque, the Christian to his church, as fully impressed as ever with the divine origin and rectitude of his own faith from the principles he has never for one moment swerved in thought or deed." Now, who would believe that the same Dr. Oliver had ever written a book, or rather library of books, for the purpose of proving that Masonry teaches the "fall of man," "redemption," &c.? or that he ever racked his brain to torture every emblem on the Masonic tracing-board to have distinct reference to the doctrines of his church? Here, then, is the cause of the inconsistency which we complain of. We have to thank these worthies for the prevailing confusion of ideas regarding the religious and social design of Masonry. Bro. Hughan is doubtless sensible of the evils flowing from inconsistency. He knows that Masonry is not sectarian; he knows that it would be valueless if it were; and he must doubtless also know, that besides Christians, Jews and Mahometans, many are admitted into our society who do not believe in revelation at all, or whose construction of the Bible is so dubious that ninety-nine out of a hundred Christians would call them infidels. These brethren have individually received the same promises and assurances at their respective initiations that Jews and Christians have received; and I maintain that ninety-nine have no more right to break their plighted faith to one, than the one can do so to ninety-nine. That class of brethren our Bro. Hughan ignored entirely in his "Religious Aspects," but confined his remarks solely to believers in revelation, viz., Christians, Jews, and Mahometans; and in the event of a dispute between the members of a lodge belonging to different sects, Bro. Hughan recommends that a majority of votes shall decide which book of revelation shall generally lie open in the lodge. That is Bro. Hughan's remedy; but will a vote of a majority satisfy? Would it not rather tend to divide the lodge? and instead of accomplishing our design of uniting men of divers sects, we shall separate them into sectarian lodges, when each will claim the right of preaching in a lodge the doctrines contained in his holy book which lies open in the lodge, and all this confusion must be perpetuated in order to preserve what Bro. H. is pleased to call a "landmark." The term landmark is, however, a misnomer. It might with propriety be applied to the principles of Masonry, such as Brotherly Love, Relief, Truth, Honour, Justice, &c., but it cannot be applied to forms, ceremonies, or laws, because these have repeatedly been changed, and may be changed and altered whenever we find it needful, or when we find that the old forms are antagonistic to the principles of truth and justice so as to mar the harmony of our association. If, therefore, our Bro. Hughan mainly relies (as it appears) upon "landmarks" to prop up his theory, then, with all due respect to my worthy and learned brother, I claim that he is virtually beaten.

Bro. Hughan shows sensitiveness at the mention of the burning of heretics. This allusion I deemed necessary in order to remove his impression, that the origin of the Masonic idea is indebted to Christianity and its teachings. The fact is, we all imbibed the same kind of prejudices when young; each has learned to believe that the heart which beats in the bosom of a member of his own sect, is a better heart than the one that beats in the bosom of a member of another sect, and that the virtues of his sect is supreme, etc. Thus we hear one man talk of a "Christian heart," "Christian benevolence," etc., while his Jewish neighbour, just as conceited, will have it that the Jewish heart, Jewish benevolence, etc., is the most praiseworthy; and so it is with all other sects. Now, as a Mason, when writing to Masons, I have nothing to do with either Jewish or Christian proclivities; my object is truth; and it appears to me that the inspiration of Dr. Anderson and his coadjutors which gave rise to the Masonic idea "to unite men of every sect and opinion" into a brotherhood, was not indebted to Christian teachings, but to the religious persecutions and hatred of sects, which received its final check (I hope) with the expulsion of James II. from England, and with the Thirty Years' War on the Continent. It was the natural reaction from those barbarous times that revolutionized men's minds politically and religiously, and which inspired two Calvinistic Doctors of Divinity with a "charity to all mankind," such as was never openly taught by any Doctor of Divinity before the 17th century, and such as a majority of the Doctors of Divinity of to-day still squirm at.

The question, therefore, narrows itself to a point, and herein we disagree. Bro. Hughan maintains that the "Holy Bible," "sacred law," "sacred Scriptures," etc., is a landmark: while I think that, as no candidate was ever questioned (when he received certain assurances) about his belief or disbelief in any book of revelation, the Bible, therefore, is not a landmark, and what is more, we are morally bound to remove the Bible, or allusions to it, in the ceremonies as an inspired book, when any one objects to it from motives of conscience. And if our overzealous brethren are made acquainted with the true aim and object of Masonry, and if they learn that the Bible in the lodge is at the sufferance of, not majorities, but of a single individual member, they will naturally in future refrain from introducing topics during lodge hours, that mars that harmony and brotherly love, which it is our main duty to inculcate and cultivate.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,
JACOB NORTON.

Boston, Mass., April 5th, 1871.

P.S.—See page 667 Findel's 2nd edition "History of Freemasonry," from 27th to 30th line from top, both inclusive, from which I infer that the Bible was at one time absent from a lodge.

SUBORDINATION IN THE HIGHER DEGREES—THEIR HISTORY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I can produce printed evidence showing that certain high grades (which after 1744 were popularly believed to be associated with Rosicrucianism) were known 1721, 1724, and 1744, to the Grand Lodge of 1717. I am not able to demonstrate with unerring certainty what these high degrees were; but I can give good reasons for believing that they were Arch, Templar, and Priest. It is also certain from existing records that the "Royal Order of Scotland, H.R.M., R.S.Y.C.S.S." was of "time immemorial" antiquity in London in 1717. The so-called S.C. put forward semi-official papers some years ago to show that the "Royal Order of Scotland" was the parent of the French Rose Croix. I am not prepared to go that length, as I think it quite as likely that the old Arch or Red Cross and Rosæ Crucis are the parents of Heredom Rosy Cross, as the latter the former. Be it specially observed, however, that the latter order claims, by ancient tradition, to have been founded by Bruce's Templars in 1314, to be therefore a Templar Degree; be it also noted, as I will proceed to show, that near to 1750 the Templar and the Kadosh are historically known to have been separate orders and yet closely allied; so that our Ancient Templar rite, as we now have it, was in existence before the "Ancient and Accepted Rite." The learned Brother Gadlicke states in his Freemason's Lexicon, that prior to 1735-46, certain high grades were possessed by the lodge at Clermont; possibly the degrees approximated to the peculiar system of Bro. Ramsay, of which mention is made by Bro. Forsyth, page 252 of THE FREEMASON. Gadlicke also states that Field Marshal Von Marshall practised the Templar Order in 1740, and that Baron Hunde, "Privy Councillor and proprietor of many estates," crossed over to the French army at Brabant in 1743, and was there initiated into Templar Masonry; the Kadosh is said to have been established at Lyons in the same year. In 1745, Prince Charles Edward Stuart was made a Templar at Holyrood, and in 1747 he granted a charter to Arras as "King of Great Britain and in that quality S.G.M. of the Chapter of Heredom," known under the title of Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, and, "since our misfortunes, as Rose Croix." Baron Hunde, it would seem, was afterwards connected with Prince Charles, and in 1754 propagated a rite of seven degrees, of which 5th was Rosy Croix, 6th Templar, 7th Kadosh. This rite, in Germany, partially supplanted the Rosicrucian rite of 9 degrees. The records of the Royal Order of Scotland show that Hunde's rite was possessed by the Lodge of St. George of Observance, London, in 1782. The vaunted A. and A. Rite now makes its appearance. In 1758, Pirllet, a tailor, and Lacorne, a dancing-master, without authority invented a new rite of 25°, called the "Empire of the East and West." Their Sovereign, Chaillor de Joinville, gave a patent to a Jewish merchant, named Morin, to propagate the degrees in Jamaica; he there informed his chapter that a council had been held in Paris to decide whether or not the Templar and the Kadosh were the same degree. Anyhow, they adopted the designation, "Knight of the White and Black Eagle," the Templar colours, prior to the statutes of Bordeaux in 1762. Bro. Stephen Morin granted a patent to Bro. Franckin in 1769 to establish the rite; then of 29°, in America, where it continued to be propagated by wandering Masonic pedlars. At Charleston, in 1862, the K.H. is styled the 29°, and the statutes were therefore forged and the rite augmented, subsequent to that date. The rite went to France in 1804 from Charleston. It is historically noteworthy that the old certificate of the Camp of Antiquity, Bath, amalgamates two degrees as "Knight of the East and West and Knight of the Sword and the Eagle," and also omits the degree called "Prince of the Tabernacle," thus proving it to be the most recent interpolation. Such is the history of the so-called "A. and A. Rite" prior to its establishment in this country in 1845. The old Templar Rite continued to be practised in England down to 1790, in which year it was taken up by Bro. Thomas Dunckerley, whose official reports place the Rosæ Crucis degree before or after the Templar indifferently; but he distinctly states that the history of the Kadosh (itself a Templar history) cannot be written. No minutes were allowed. It was, however, at that time conferred only upon elected Templar Commanders, and was qualified as the "Commanders Degree of Ne Plus Ultra." The York Conclave of "Redemption" now of Hull (in common with the Jerusalem Conclave of Manchester, one of its emanations through the York Grand Lodge); the "Baldwin," Bristol; "Antiquity," Bath; and "Observance," London; all in 1790 gave the Seven Steps of Chivalry under Bro. Dunckerley's authority and warrant, the Ne Plus Ultra of which rite was at that time the Kadosh; and as the General Chapter in London was, prior to 1851, composed solely of Commanders, it was styled in all its circulars the "Grand Conclave of the Royal Orders of H.R.D.M.K.D.S.H. Ne Plus Ultra." According to Archdeacon Mant (no mean authority) any three Templars possessed of the Rosæ Crucis had ancient prescriptive right to confer it.

Can a conscientious believer in his obligation disprove all this? No. If ignorant thereof, he is disqualified from setting up himself as a "teacher in Israel;" if he is acquainted therewith he is then trying to deceive others in a most unprincipled manner. I readily, however, admit that the Templars ought not to trouple themselves with "ineffable" and other spurious degrees of the A. and A. Rite, whether they have right to do so is another question. What we do claim is undisturbed possession of our own degrees of Rosæ Crucis and Kadosh, nor will we ever allow spurious rites to stamp out our claims.

No one has greater esteem for our learned Bro. Hughan than myself, but I must altogether demur to the statement that he has disposed of our claims in his most excellent "Masonic Reprints," and I feel assured that worthy brother would be the last to claim a clairvoyant knowledge of everything that has hitherto occurred in the high grades. Why! Bro. Dr. Oliver, one of the few worthy names the 33° possesses, obtained all his high grades at Hull from the York Conclave of Redemption, whence the York Grand Lodge adopted its degree of Templar as the covering ceremonial of the rite! Nor do I believe that Bro. Hughan would lend his name and reputation to support the A. and A. Rite!!

Will your correspondent give us the quotation from Mirabeau to which he alludes? In Mirabeau's History of the Prussian Monarchy he laments that Frederick was never Grand Master of all the German lodges, and his History of the Court of Berlin shows that Frederick had been dying five months prior to the 1st May, 1786, when he is said to have established the 33°.

It is a pity that your correspondent should be unable to contribute anything but personal abuse to your pages; and should further exhibit such a lack of judgment as to express a belief that Frederick the Great, King of Prussia, would have transmitted to his warrant or authority to create batches of "Sovereign Princes" at five guineas a head.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN YARKER.

THE RED CROSS ORDER.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—A brother Mason has kindly forwarded to me a copy of a letter which appeared in your journal of Saturday last under the head of "The Red Cross Order," and signed by R. Wentworth Little, P.M., and as I am "the member named Astley," I shall esteem it a favour if you will admit my reply. He refers to "various anonymous and cowardly attacks from certain quarters." I have not seen or yet heard of them, but I assure him of this, that whatever proceeds from my pen will have my full signature. But to the circumstance of the charge for which I am threatened with a "solicitor"!! At a meeting of the Rose of Sharon Conclave, Birmingham, on Thursday, 20th ult., it was proposed by the M.P.S. that a sum of money be voted towards a testimonial to Sir Knt. W. Little, Grand Recorder, upon which I moved, as an amendment, that it be adjourned sine die until such time as the conclave had reliable information as to the authority for working and genuineness of the order, as personally I have my doubts about it, and wished to be satisfied that we were or were not working a fictitious order. I further remarked that it had been said that the order was given to some one by Lord Zetland; but from what was known of his general opinion of other orders, except Craft Masonry, if he gave it at all, it was more likely that he gave it for archaeological purposes than for working. This was the substance of my remarks; but beyond moving the amendment, I did not mention the name of the Grand Recorder or even allude to him.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

JOHN ASTLEY,

P.M. and Sec. 254, P. Prov. G. J. W. Warwsh., H. 284, E.C. and Prov. G. Expert, Staff, and Warsh., M.W.S.-elect, and Junior-General Rose of Sharon Conclave, No. 19, of Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, and one of its founder members.

[We have inserted the first part of your letter, but the remainder being entirely irrelevant to the points involved, cannot be inserted in its present connection.—ED. F.]

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—Several members of the A. and A. Rite, who, with myself, would like to join the "Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine," find ourselves unable to do so, owing to its supporters having tacked on to it a spurious branch of the "Rite of Misraim."

Now I would suggest to Bro. Little and his friends that if they would consent to drop the latter order altogether, the would probably have but little difficulty in effecting with the S.G.C. 33° a compromise regarding the Red Cross, which would greatly benefit the Order itself, and bring about a reconciliation between its members and the Supreme recognised Masonic authority in this country.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally,

ROSE CROIX.

2nd May, 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR,—Will you, or some of your readers, kindly give myself and several brother Masons the benefit of your experience by replying to the queries below in your useful journal. To make myself understood let me give you a brief outline of events, giving, for obvious reasons, suppositious names, &c.

A lodge, which we may designate the M.U., was opened by dispensation from the Grand Lodge on 16th Nov., 1869, of which K. was Master-elect—elected and installed on the opening day. On St. John's Day, Dec. 27, 1869, he was re-elected and duly made a P.M. of a lodge, and presented with a P.M.'s jewel. Again in 1870 he was a candidate for W.M., and again re-elected, and has since died.

Prior to the first opening of the lodge, two of the brothers named in the dispensation, respectively D. and E., who had never "sat in a Master's chair," or filled a Warden's chair in any lodge, were made or rather styled P.M.'s of one lodge by another lodge held in a neighbouring town, and assisted in the first installation. In Dec., 1869, D. was made a Warden, and in Dec., 1870, was a candidate for the W.M.'s chair, as was K., but D. was in the minority. On the death of K., the existing S.W. assumed the chair as Acting W.M., and ruled that another election for W.M. could not take place till the usual period, as named in the by-laws, in accordance with the Book of Constitutions. He further holds the opinion that he may not legally initiate, pass, or raise until a new W.M. is elected, unless when a

P.M. (genuine) is in the chair. The authorities on which we have acted are Book of Constitutions, cl. 2 (private lodges) and cl. 6 (Masters and Wardens), and Mackey's "Lexicon," article "Wardens;" also Dr. Oliver's "Book of the Lodge."

Notwithstanding the pains taken to obtain a right conclusion by myself and others, by searching for precedents and other authorities, various opinions are held by the brethren, and it is on this account that I venture to trouble you with the matter. My queries are:—

1. Had K. any right to stand for election for W.M. in Dec., 1870? See cl. 3, Masters and Wardens, Book of Constitutions. It is contended that the portion of a year from Nov. 16 to Dec. 27 does not count as a year, although K. got his P.M.-ship on account of it.

2. In case of the reply to the last query being in the negative, were any subsequent acts invalidated in consequence?

3. Are D. and E. really P.M.'s, and entitled to the privileges of the office or to the title?

4. Can either D. or E. claim the chair on the death of the W.M.? Or does the chair not fall of necessity to the S.W.? See cl. 6, Masters and Wardens.

5. Can the S.W., as acting W.M., sit in the chair? Or, if not, where is his place under the circumstances?

6. Can the Acting W.M. (who is S.W., and not a P.M.) confer degrees while acting in the chair?

Ten names were sent to the Grand Lodge, which appear in the dispensation. Immediately after sending these some seven or eight Masons joined the party, and assisted in making arrangements for opening the lodge, and contributed to the funds for the purpose. Their names were printed in the by-laws, which were submitted to the first lodge meeting and adopted. None of these persons were balloted for, nor could they well be, unless they balloted for themselves. They have since, for one and a half year, acted with, and been acknowledged by, the lodge as members, and contributing to its funds.

Qy. 7. Ought they to have been balloted for? If so, when should it have taken place? Or is it still necessary?

Your insertion of this letter in your valuable columns, with replies to the queries as far as possible, will confer a favour on many besides,

Yours fraternally,

M.M. 5779.

REPLIES.

1. K. could not rank as a P.M. at the completion of six weeks, and he had a perfect right to stand for re-election for the following twelve months.

2. Is governed by the preceding.

3. We do not understand how D. and E. could be "made" P.M.'s without serving the office of W.M. for one year, and the proceedings relating to them appear to be grossly illegal.

4 and 5. The S.W. "rules" the lodge on the death of the Master, but he cannot assume the chair. His place is at the right of the W.M.'s pedestal.

6. The S.W. can confer degrees when stationed as above, but if a P.M. be in the lodge at the time, the P.M. should occupy the chair.

J. The joining brethren ought to have been proposed at the consecration meeting, and balloted for at the first regular meeting next ensuing, otherwise they are not members.—ED. F.

THE Freemasons of Oldham have opened a new Hall, built at a cost of about £2,500, in Union-street. The building is of stone.

SALE OF RARE OLD COGNAC BRANDIES.—The continued unsettled state of France has caused unusual commotion in the brandy market, and many foreign proprietors who had sent their stocks to England for safety during the war have decided to realise upon them in this country, in preference to incurring the risk which would attend their reshipment to France. Several large sales have been made, and in most instances they are equally remarkable for the high quality of the brandy as for the immense quantities sold. One transaction alone has been recorded of the sale of upwards of 30,000 gallons of Cognac brandy, of vintages rarely heard of in this country—namely, 1827, 1829, 1841, and 1845. These fine old brandies were to have been sold by public auction, but, previous to the date of sale, were disposed of to Messrs. W. and A. Gilbey by private contract.—Morning Post, April 29.

St. George's Lodge of Instruction, held at Globe Tavern, Greenwich, concluded its session on Thursday, April 27th, when twenty brethren met at the festive board under the able presidency of Bro. Hubbard, P.M., and spent a very pleasant evening. This, the oldest, Lodge of Instruction in this locality, possesses several able instructors, and most of the Masons in the neighbourhood freely admit that here they gained the knowledge so essential to good working.

MASONIC RECEPTION and BANQUET at WASHINGTON CITY, U.S.A., to the EARL DE GREY & RIPON.

On Monday, the 10th ult., agreeably to previous notice, occurred the Masonic reception and banquet tendered by the Masonic Fraternity of the district of Columbia to the Earl De Grey and Ripon, and at which Lord Tenterden, Sir John A. McDonald, Mr. Northcote, and Mr. L'Estrange, Secretary of the British Legation, were present as Freemasons.

The assemblage consisted of about one hundred and seventy gentlemen, including eight Senators, and thirty-four members of the House of Representatives. Escorted by the Grand Master of the G.L. District of Columbia, the Earl de Grey was seated in the Grand Master's chair, and in a speech of a few minutes' duration, most warmly welcomed by Grand Master Stansbury. In response the Earl spoke as follows:—

Most Worshipful Sir and Brothers, I trust you will permit me to return to you, and to the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, my most grateful thanks for the very kind and fraternal welcome which you have given me on this occasion. I assure you, sir, that I esteem it the greatest honour to have thus been received and to have had an opportunity of being presented by you to the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia—an honour which, I am well aware, I owe not to my personal worth, but to the fact, and a most important and significant fact, that I am a representative of the Grand Lodge of England, holding the highest office that can be conferred upon a Mason in England, that of Grand Master. And, sir, I esteem it a most fortunate occasion—fortunate for me as an individual, and fortunate for Masonry in both countries—that there should at length have taken place so close a union between Masonry in America and Masonry in England, and that you should now for the first time, as you tell me, receive within the walls of this important Grand Lodge of Freemasons the Grand Master of England. We all know that fraternity is the first principle of Masonry, and therefore it is that all must rejoice at everything which tends to bind more closely together Masons of different countries. I, sir, esteem myself very fortunate, indeed, to have had it in my power to attend here to-night. I shall carry away from this Grand Lodge most grateful recollections of your kindness. I shall make it my first duty to tell my brethren in England of the magnificent reception which has been accorded to their Grand Master to-night, and I am confident that I do not misinterpret the feelings with which they will receive the information when I see them. They will, indeed, rejoice that the first step has been taken which will tend to a closer and more intimate union between American and English Masons—(great applause)—a union which, for my part, I have always believed existed, but which, I believe, will be closer and more intimate in future. (The Earl was greatly applauded as he resumed his seat.)

A recess was taken to enable the brethren to be presented to Earl de Grey. Lord Tenterden was also the recipient of attention. The latter is Grand Master of Harmony Lodge, England. After these greetings were over, the company proceeded to the Music Hall, which was appropriately decorated. The banner of the Grand Lodge was displayed in the east end of the room, and to the right and left were hung the portraits of George Washington and Queen Victoria, while the walls were draped with American and British flags. The company sat down to the banquet.

At the removal of the cloth a table lodge was opened, and the gavel of the Grand Lodge was supreme, as in the Grand Lodge. The Grand Master, C. F. Stansbury, wore the apron and sash and used the gavel which formed part of the insignia of Washington. None but Masons were admitted to any of the ceremonies. Even the caterers, servants, and musicians belonged to the Fraternity.

Grand Master Stansbury called the brethren to order, and extended to all a fraternal welcome. Several toasts were given and responded to, when Earl De Grey was brought to his feet by a complimentary allusion to him and to his mission, and to his position as a Mason.

The Earl said: Most Worshipful Sir and Brethren, I beg to return you my most grateful thanks for the very kind reception which you have been pleased to give to me this evening. I feel proud of this reception, because I know that it has been accorded to me as the representative of the great body of English Masons—(applause)—and therefore I think I may venture to say, accorded to me as a representative of my country. (Great applause). The leading principle of our ancient Craft is that of fraternity among every brother who belongs to it, whatever be the race and nation to which he holds allegiance, and therefore it will not be wonderful that America should be willing to greet with a fraternal welcome any foreigner who might come among them. But, sir, I do not feel that here, in the United States, I ought to call myself a foreigner. (Long-continued applause). I am constantly forgetting that I am not at home, and while it is true that our Fraternity extends beyond the bond of nationality, it is not less true upon every Masonic principle that the ties which ought to bind American and English Masons are of a very peculiar class and dear character, for, sir, they would greatly err who thought that the Fraternity of Masonry was an Order which made men forget their patriotism. I believe that all true Masons are inspired by the warmest feelings of patriotism. It was through the brethren of our ancient Fraternity in England that the Masons of the United States obtained their first charter, and that added one more to the many ties by which American and English Masons are bound together. Sir, the remarks which you have made this evening, the speeches to which we have just listened, and particularly the remarks which you have made to us in another place, have, in respect to the ties which bind together the two countries, left very little for me to say. But I am reminded of an old English election story, which is connected with the name of Mr. Burke, who, going out to argue with an opponent, was so eloquent that his opponent refrained to essay a reply further than to exclaim, "I say ditto." (Applause and laughter.) As it is, sir, I have little to say on that part of the subject, except that I say "Ditto" to the most Worshipful Grand Master. Yes, sir, it is true that we have the same history. It is true we belong to the same ancestry, and I therefore say it is not strange that you should have been pleased to accord to me, as the representative of English Masonry in this country, a warm and cordial reception. The first lodge warrants in this country bear the date of England, and that country has not forgotten the mighty and glorious empire which has sprung from her loins. (Applause and cheers). If I am permitted, and if I have rightly interpreted the meaning of the kindness which you have shown me to-day, I shall carry with me recollections of the deepest gratitude. I shall take back with me to my own Grand Lodge the account of the occurrences here to-night; and I am confident, when I relate them, they will be received with but one feeling in that distant Masonic assembly—a feeling of an earnest desire that we might see more and know more in England, and in English Masonic circles, of this country and of the Masonic Order of the United States; and I am tempted to take back with me across the Atlantic another recollection not purely Masonic—take back with me the recollection and to mention it where I know it will be received with great pleasure, of the manner in which was received the toast given to my illustrious sovereign; and another pleasant recollection will be the thought of having sat at the right hand of one who wore the scarf of Washington, and that a gavel of the first President of the United States was used on the occasion. (Applause). I can truly say the memory of this day will not easily fade from my mind. I believe that it is of the highest interest for the civilization of the world that there should be the closest and most intimate union between the two Governments. (Applause, long continued). If it should be the good fortune of my life to contribute to that result, I shall be happy. (Greeted with applause as he took his seat, and there was music by the band).

THE FLOWERS OF SPRING.

Flowers of spring,—we love them all,
As they peep forth, one by one,
And we joyfully watch their petals unfold
In the light of the April sun.
Winter is over, and radiant days
Have taken the place of its gloom;
How bright is the aspect that nature now wears,
In this season of beauty and bloom.

Flowers of spring,—we love them all,
From the daisy that decks the sod,
To the costly hyacinth, trained with care,
For all are the work of God.
June roses are lovely, but still our hearts
Seem with tenderest fondness to cling
To the flowers that first peep forth to view
In the earliest days of spring.

Flowers of spring,—we love them all,
May they lead us—as we gaze
On the opening buds—to think of One Whose ways are not our ways.
And oh! as we glance o'er the scene around,
Whilst the sweet birds gaily sing,
May our thoughts ascend to His home above,
That home where 'tis always spring.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES.

GRAND BALL AT WHITBY.

The members of the Lion Lodge, No. 312, held a grand ball recently in St. Hilda's Hall, Angel Hotel, Whitby, under the management of the officers of the lodge. The stewards were Bros. T. N. Marwood, W.M.; G. W. Smales, S.W.; H. Hallgate, J.W.; H. Bennett, S.D.; I. Wilkinson, J.D.; C. T. Clarkson, I.G.; W. Piercy, D.C.; J. Andrew, S., and G. Speedy, S. Bros. J. N. Lawson, P.M., and W. H. Marwood, P.M., ably officiated as masters of the ceremonies. The dancing commenced about 9 o'clock. The programme contained a nice selection of twenty-two dances, and when half the programme had been gone through the party retired to the banqueting-room, where the cloth was laid for 105. The Worshipful Master (Bro. T. N. Marwood) presided. The bill of fare consisted of roast sirloins of beef, round of beef (corned), roast legs of mutton, roast saddles of mutton, roast fore and hind quarters of lamb, roast young pork, boiled hams, collared brawn, boiled tongues, boiled pig's cheek, boiled fowls, roast chickens, roast ducklings, pigeon pies, beefsteak and kidney pies, veal and ham pies, lobster salad, potted salmon, potted turbot, Rodel's sardines, oyster patties, creams, custards, jellies, blanc mange, stewed fruit tartlets, lemon cheesecakes, confectionery, &c., with a choice selection of wines. The viands were cold, and the arrangements made by Bro. Piercy for seating comfortably so large a number in a comparatively small room were admirable, and carried through without the slightest confusion. Dancing was recommenced about half-past one, and was continued until dawn of day. The musical department was managed by Bro. Richard Bradley, and was highly satisfactory. The hall was neatly decorated with flags of different descriptions and a variety of Masonic emblems, the meaning of which the non-Masons were left to conjecture. A very brilliant star illuminated the gallery at the west end, which assisted in giving the room a lively appearance. About 40 couples joined in the dance, and the elegance of the ladies' dresses excited the greatest admiration. Taken altogether, the event reflected the highest credit upon Bro. Piercy, Angel Hotel, and the stewards, whose efficient catering contributed so much to the amusement of the brethren and their friends.

MASONIC BALL AT LIMERICK.

The annual Masonic ball for the district of North Munster came off in the ball-room of the Masonic Hall on a scale of unwonted splendour and magnificence. The event was in every respect eminently successful—worthy of the occasion, worthy of the charitable object in view, and an honour to the glorious and time-honoured institution of Masonry. The assemblage was one of the most brilliant that ever assembled in Limerick on a similar occasion, and comprised the elite of the entire province of Munster. The hall was approached under an awning through a brilliantly-lighted corridor, which also served as a promenade during the ball. The corridor was appropriately decorated with banners, and was perfectly in keeping with the aspect of the ball-room. The members of the Craft assembled in the lodge-room of No. 73 at ten o'clock, and shortly after that hour formed in procession. The ball-room was most superbly decorated, and presented a most imposing appearance. At the extreme end of the hall, and opposite the entrance, the chair of the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Dunboyne, was situated, surrounded by a profusion of Masonic emblems, conspicuous amongst which were the shield, the Dunboyne flag and arms, surmounted by his lordship's patent as P.G.M. The walls were decorated after the most gorgeous fashion with Knight Templars', Royal Arch Masons', and other devices of the Order, together with a large number of brilliant mirrors, the reflection of which lent a most imposing aspect to the room. The gasaliers were gaily decorated with garlands of evergreens, interspersed with artificial flowers. Altogether the devices were the most artistic and appropriate we have ever witnessed. The banners bore the usual mottoes, "Peace, love, and harmony," &c., the preparation of which must have cost an enormous amount of time and trouble; and we may here congratulate the brethren who acted on the Decoration Committee, and the band of the 47th Regiment, who, by kind permission of Colonel Lowry, spent some weeks in carrying out the decorations, on the triumphant success of the arrangements. Shortly before ten o'clock the ball-room was thrown open, and being perfectly a-blaze with illuminations, presented an appearance which cannot readily be forgotten.

At half-past ten o'clock the procession proceeded from the lodge on the third floor to the ball-room below, in the order of Masonic rank, viz.:—Blue and Red, followed by the following Knights Templar: W. H. McQuaide, W. Peacock, Samuel Harding, R. H. Dyer, I. Banks (P.G.J.D.), J. Fife,

C. H. Sterling, A. Rowand, Charles Armstrong, R. H. Dwyer, Captain Spaight, Captain Davies, Major Patterson, Joseph Fogerty, M. Petty (Ennis), and George Dartnell. The Provincial Grand Officers, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master (Bro. James Spaight), and the Provincial Grand Master (Lord Dunboyne) followed. On entering the ball-room, the brethren filed off to the right and left in the centre of the room, and between these two lines the officers marched to the throne. Immediately on their arrival, the Knights Templar formed the arch of steel, under which the Deputy and Provincial Grand Masters passed. Lord Dunboyne having ascended the throne, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master then, amid the hushed silence and eager gaze of the brilliant assemblage, directed the brethren to join with him in saluting the Grand Master with "Three Eleven and Three Distincts," which were given after the true Masonic fashion. The Provincial Grand Master, with Mrs. James Spaight, and the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, with the Hon. Miss Butler, then formally opened the ball. The following is the programme of the dances, the music of which was carefully arranged and, in some instances, composed, by Bro. J. Hogan, Bandmaster of the 47th Regiment:—

Quadrille, The North Munster Masons, Hogan; galop, Off we go, Hogan; valse, Bright Blue Danube, Strauss; lancers, Gaiety, Godfrey F.; galop, Chimes, Godfrey F.; valse, Mabel, Godfrey D.; quadrille, La Grande Duchesse, Strauss; mazurka, Florence, Hogan; galop, My Valentine, Relle; valse, Soldaten Lieder, Gungl; lancers, Echoes of London, Coote; galop, Cerese, Boosh; mazurka, La Belle de Bruges, Wallerstein; quadrille, Banting, Marriott; valse, Primavera, Hogan; galop, Foxhunters, Mariou; lancers, The Cure, Coote; mazurka, Veronika, Faust; valse, Mamma is waiting, Hogan; galop, Good Night, Hogan.

During the progress of the dances the room bore a most picturesque and animated appearance—the great majority of the gentlemen being dressed in the regalia of the Order—comprising jewels, aprons, stars, scarfs, &c. Nearly all the military and naval officers appeared in their regimentals, which added to the beauty of the picturesque scene. Shortly after one o'clock the company retired for supper, which was laid in one of the spacious rooms of the building. The tables were arranged in a style calculated to please the most fastidious, and the numerous and handsome Masonic devices wrought in the confectionery were greatly admired, and furnished a fruitful topic of wonder and remark. We may safely say that they were unsurpassed in point of beauty of design and taste in arrangement; and Mr. Coffee, the caterer, was well rewarded for his anxious trouble by the well-merited encomiums of the distinguished patrons and patronesses of the ball.

The cloth having been removed, the Provincial Grand Master proposed the usual loyal toasts, which were received with cheers. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master then proposed "The Health of Lord Dunboyne, P.G.M.," which met with a cordial reception, and was drunk with all the Masonic honours. The D.P.G.M. next gave "The Ladies," which elicited great cheering, and was honoured with "Three Elevens and Three Distincts." Dancing was then resumed, and kept up with much vigour and enthusiasm until a few minutes after four o'clock, when the company separated.

T H E A T R I C A L .

ST. JAMES'S.—After a successful run "Fernande" will on this evening be withdrawn, when a new nautical burlesque, by F. C. Burnard, entitled "Poll and my Partner Joe," will be produced, in which the talented actress, Mrs. John Wood, and the full company will appear, and for which Miss Caroline Parkes and Miss Emma Chambers have been specially engaged. The famous comedy, "Secret Service," by J. R. Planché, will also be revived.

HAYMARKET.—It is with great pleasure we announce that the ever-popular Mr. Sothorn will re-appear on Monday next at this fashionable theatre. An entirely new comedy drama, in four acts, entitled "An English Gentleman; or, the Squire's Last Shilling," will be produced, with entirely new scenery by O'Connor and Morris. "Mischief Making" will precede this new drama, and Charles Matthews' farce, "My Wife's Mother," will conclude the programme.

THE Blackheath Lodge, No. 1320, will be consecrated on Wednesday, May 10th, at 3 o'clock p.m., at the "Crown" Tavern, Blackheath, by Bro. H. Muggerridge.

SMALL-POX, FEVERS, AND SKIN DISEASES.—The predisposition to is prevented by Lamplough's Pyretic Saline. Vitalising and invigorating, its effects are remarkable in their cure and prevention. Take it as directed. Sold by chemists and the maker, H. Lamplough, 113, Holborn-hill.—[Adv't.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most successful success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

By BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

An edition of the Constitutions was published by order of the Grand Lodge A.D. 1817. We regret not having a copy, but in the circular issued by the Grand Lodge of Ireland A.D. 1825 several allusions to that date are alluded to, likewise a copy of the letter sent to the Masters of lodges respecting the holding of Masonic meetings, which we alluded to in THE FREEMASON some little time since in our series of articles entitled "Masonic Curiosities."

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

7th April, 1825.

Sir and Brother,—With the warmest feelings of congratulation, the Grand Lodge addresses their most respected brethren of the most Ancient and Honourable Society of Free and Accepted Masons of Ireland.

The Legislature having recently been most graciously pleased to recognise societies instituted without religious distinction for the advancement of science and public or private charity, no doubt remains that Masonic meetings, conducted in strict conformity with the rules and principles of the Order, will be protected.

Masters and Past Masters of lodges will therefore perceive the propriety and necessity of attending to the late circular of Grand Lodge, and forthwith congregate the members, resume their Masonic labours, and disseminate friendship, charity, and brotherly love.

The Grand Lodge enjoins and commands a steady adherence to the ancient charge, "That no subject of a political or religious nature shall be introduced or discussed at any meeting of the Craft." Any deviation from this Order shall cause the warrant of the transgressors to be immediately withdrawn.

The Grand Lodge having directed the Committee of Charity and Inspection to re-commence the dispensing of relief in cases of urgent necessity, confidently hopes that the June returns will enable them to extend it generally to all deserving applicants as heretofore.

Lodges are required to make the usual returns on or before St. John's Day, 24th June, 1825. Any warrants in arrear to the Charitable Fund of the Grand Lodge, beyond the period allowed by the "Ahiman Rezon," will be called in. A list will then be printed, containing the names of the Masters, Wardens, and places of meeting of all the lodges on the establishment.

J. WILLIAM HORT, Grand Secretary.
WILLIAM FRANCIS GRAHAM, D.G. Sec.

Abstract of rules to be observed:—

Whereas a practice has long prevailed of Masters of lodges holding the office for a number of years, to the injury of the Craft, by repressing emulation in the brethren, rendering them hopeless of advancement, and preventing a succession of persons qualified to conduct those lodges.

It is ordered—That from and after the 24th of June, 1823, no brother shall be eligible to hold the office of Master of a lodge for a longer period than two years successively, nor shall he be re-elected at any time afterwards until after an interval of one year from the expiration of his former Mastership, unless by the special permission of the Grand Lodge; and any lodge sending an incorrect return of officers, to evade the purport of this law, shall for the first offence be suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge, and if the offence is repeated, the warrant shall be withdrawn.

Any lodge making an incorrect return of members, knowingly or wilfully, shall be subject to the same penalties.

Masters of lodges are to take notice that they are not authorised to summon other lodges to attend them on St. John's Days, the Grand Lodge will not allow any other notice to be sent than an invitation, which will be optional to the parties to attend or not.

No lodge under the sanction of the Grand Lodge of Ireland is permitted to make Masons for a lesser admission fee than one guinea and a half, under a penalty of a fine of one guinea for each offence; and every person so unlawfully made, cannot receive benefit from the Charitable Fund, or enjoy any of the rights of Masonry, until authorised by the Grand Lodge on memorial.

All communications from the Grand Lodge to private lodges shall be read in open lodge, and deposited in the lodge chest, to be referred to on lodge meetings; any Master refusing or neglecting to comply herewith shall be disqualified to act in such office.

No application for reduction of dues or arrear of dues by individual lodges shall be received by this Grand Lodge, and the Secretary is ordered to return all such applications.

All cases of suspension or expulsion sent for confirmation, the cause of such sentence shall be fully stated, and the report signed by the Master, Senior and Junior Wardens, and Secretary, with the lodge seal affixed.

No brother being the proprietor of a house of entertainment in which a Masonic lodge holds its meetings shall be eligible to hold the office of Master of such lodge during the time it meets in his house, and any lodge electing such brother as their Master, shall have the warrant thereof suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge.

It is recommended, that when a brother is proposed to become a member of a lodge, who has been initiated in another, that he shall (previous to admission) produce a certificate from the Grand Lodge establishment of the country in which he was initiated, in order to insure the lodge admitting such candidate that he comes from a regular lodge, and also that he has withdrawn from it in a proper manner; after admission he is to be transferred to the lodge he has joined on the Grand Lodge books.

Whereas doubts have arisen respecting members of lodges desirous of or having obtained certificates from the Grand Lodge, be it understood that a brother obtaining a Grand Lodge certificate is not thereby exempted from the regular duties of his lodge while he continues a member thereof, or until he withdraws his name from its books in the usual and regular manner; and it is also to be understood that when a brother has so withdrawn or discontinued his support and attendance on his lodge, he is not entitled to interfere in its concerns in any manner, unless his advice or assistance be required by the Master thereof on a particular case.

If any candidate is proposed for admission into the Order, who is in any manner defective, the lodge wherein proposed shall not initiate without special leave obtained of the Grand Master or Grand Lodge, to be applied for by memorial, wherein the defect shall be clearly specified, under penalty of two pounds ten shillings, or such suspension as the Grand Lodge may award, on a case of transgression being proved.

Lodges in returning list of members are to insert all those then on the lodge books who have obtained the third degree.

The Grand Lodge will permit the exchange of warrants under the regulation of December, 1816, until further orders.

No petition for charity can be presented to the Grand Lodge unless vouched and recommended by the Master and seals of three regular lodges.

LETTERS BY BROTHERS HUGHAN AND NORTON.

I have carefully read the long and well-written communication from Bro. Jacob Norton in THE FREEMASON for May 6th, 1871, and beg to thank him for it. Bro. Norton wishes to avoid an "interminable discussion," and so do I; and as our opinions on the subject have been fairly ventilated, and, moreover, as it is my intention to refer to the "Religious Aspects of Freemasonry," No. 2, ere long, I think it advisable not to continue the present discussion any longer. Bro. Norton has pointed out wherein we agree and disagree, and the numerous readers of THE FREEMASON are no doubt familiar with the arguments and facts we have adduced in support of our positions in reference to the "volume of the Sacred Law," or "no law at all," but the "Book of Constitutions" being open in a lodge, or used at the O.B. of neophytes. I fully admit with Bro. Norton that Freemasonry is not sectarian at the present time; but is an institution open to the worthy votaries of all religions without respect to colour, politics, or country.

I also acknowledge that there are difficulties connected with my theory in regard to the "volume of the Sacred Law," but at the same time beg to remark that there are also obstacles to the reception of Bro. Norton's views on the subject. These we have made known, and each having had an opportunity to ventilate the matter, we can now cease disputing for the time, and endeavour to digest what we have read and advocated.

It is an important question to consider, and one that affects very materially the universality of our glorious and ancient Fraternity, and I am free to admit we are as yet but on the threshold of Masonic enquiry. We live, Masonically (as well as generally), in an investigating age, and whatever cannot stand the test of scrutiny, and the rigid application of the facts of history in our traditions and customs, must stand aside, and be thrown over amongst the rubbish of rejected and illogical statements of bygone days. We have, undoubtedly, been deceived in the past, let us therefore, be more wary in the future.

Before concluding my remarks, allow me to express my approval of the fraternal manner in which Bro. Norton has criticized my article on "Religious Aspects of Freemasonry."

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

SIR WILLIAM JENNER was examined before the Vaccination Committee on Tuesday week. No evil effects from vaccination had ever, he said, come under his notice; and as the father of six children he should consider himself wanting in his duty had he neglected to have them vaccinated.

MR. GOSCHEN ON UNIVERSITY EDUCATION.—On the evening of Wednesday se'nnight the Right Hon. G. J. Goschen, M.P., distributed certificates and diplomas to the successful candidates at the University Local Examinations in Brighton. In the course of his address he said he rejoiced at the fact of the Universities extending their privileges to the people in their own homes. He considered this system preferable to that of taking a solitary boy here and there, in a distant part of the country, and sending him to the University. It was highly important that the inhabitants of large towns should realise the great work which the Universities were engaged in, thus connecting themselves with the progress of education throughout the kingdom. In reference to the teaching of Latin and Greek, the right hon. gentleman said it was the mental training which the study of these languages imparted which rendered them so important as a branch of education.

*The RELATION of ST. JOHN the

[SECOND ANSWER.]

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON,

Bro. Samuel Evans, of Boston, U.S., has replied in THE FREEMASON, of 15th April, to my remarks which appeared in THE FREEMASON of 28th January, on his "Criticism of my paper on the Relation of St. John the Evangelist to Freemasonry," published in THE FREEMASON of 29th October, 1870. I am greatly at a loss how to follow out this controversy any further. Bro. Evans complains that I have been guilty of "romancing through six columns without making a single point;" and in this strain he proceeds, adding sentence to sentence, and figure to figure, declaring that a certain part of my answers is all ink and fog, jocularly speaking of the cuttle-fish, which conceals itself from enemies by the black stuff that it ejects into the sea, and, with still richer humour, quoting Knickerbocker's story of the Dutch captain who escaped from his English adversary by causing his crew to raise a cloud by smoking their tobacco-pipes. All this, so far as I can perceive, is very little to the purpose. To come to what is really so, I meet the challenge of Bro. Evans to produce an ancient and eminent Masonic authority for the connection of St. John the Evangelist with Freemasonry, by saying—what every educated Freemason must be well aware of—that the existence of this connection is asserted in many of the older works on Freemasonry. Bro. Evans, therefore, can be at no loss to find instances of this; but when he asks me to prove "the eminence and reliability of that authority," which he insists that I should produce, and not only so, but "the reliability of the source or sources whence that authority obtained the information which he related," I humbly submit that he asks too much, and that however desirable it might be to prosecute the question in this manner, it is by no means necessary for the vindication of the statement which I made.

In my former article on this subject—I mean in that of 28th January—I called upon Bro. Evans to say how he was warranted in stating that the idea of any connection between St. John the Evangelist and Freemasonry is exploded. I asked him to tell by whom it was exploded, and when. He has done nothing of this kind, makes no reference whatever to the subject, but rather hides himself under a cloud of smoke by making demands of me which I regard—as I daresay most of the readers of THE FREEMASON will—as in themselves unreasonable.

I observe also that Bro. Evans has entirely mistaken the import of my remark that if any connection could be shown to have existed between any "saint" and the Masonic body during the saint's life upon the earth, an important relation must be deemed still to exist. Had he not made this mistake, he could never have asked "Why is this 'if' now introduced?" Surely it is evident that I was merely stating a general rule or principle; not expressing any doubt as to a particular application of it.

I do not think it proper to follow Bro. Evans in his reply to my observations on the peculiarities of his style, nor in his personalities concerning my connection with the Archaeological Institute, and the like. I leave to those who care for such studies the paragraph which he devotes to a defence of his use of the word caption, and am perfectly willing to admit the right of the Americans to improve the English language, at least for their own use.

Bro. Evans concludes with the question, "Does Bro. Paton see the point now?" I confess that I do not see very clearly what point Bro. Evans means. Perhaps he will be so good as, in his next communication, to point it out. He might do so perhaps in as few sentences as he has paragraphs in the present instance. And if I might venture to make such a suggestion to a Transatlantic brother, I would say that perhaps he might as well refrain from such expressions as "a re-hash of well-worn fable and fraud," which he employs concerning my paper, the subject of his criticism. He will understand, I daresay, that this remark is not philological.

The BIBLE, the GREAT LIGHT of FREEMASONRY.

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON,

Author of Freemasonry in Relation to Civil Authority and the Family Circle.

The Bible is carried in Masonic processions in Britain; it is placed on the altar in the chief Masonic solemnities. Like everything else in Freemasonry, this has a significance. It shows, and is meant to show, that Freemasons believe in God; it exhibits also their regard for truth, of which they accept the Bible as the grand revelation. According to the laws of Freemasonry it is not, indeed, required that every Freemason should be a Christian or profess his belief in the Bible as the word of God. It is only required that he believe in the existence of God and in the doctrine of a future state. A Mahomedan, therefore, or a Parsee, may be a Freemason, and many Mahomedans and Parsees are so. Many Jews in Britain are members of the Masonic Order; but the Bible, containing the scriptures, which they acknowledge, holds its place without objection from them. In a lodge, chiefly composed of Mahomedans, the Koran is substituted for the Bible, with the same significance of reverence for God and for the truth which he has revealed,—in particular, for the moral law, which all Freemasons are bound carefully to observe. But whilst it is not absolutely requisite that a Freemason should profess himself a believer in Christianity, it is requisite that every one who makes this profession should be a good Christian. A Freemason, true to his obligation, must be a moral and honest man; and this cannot be if, professing himself to be a Christian, he does not act consistently with his profession. A man may be a good Freemason who is not a Christian at all; but a professing Christian cannot be a good Freemason without being a good Christian. The strict rule of morality which he is bound to observe as a Freemason requires him to act up to his profession as a Christian. As such he must reverence the Bible, owning it as the word of God. There may be difference of opinion amongst Freemasons, as there are amongst others, concerning the Bible, the inspiration of the writers of its books and the manner in which they are to be received, the interpretation of particular passages and the doctrines which they convey; but every Christian professes reverence for the Bible, and looks to it for that revelation of the Divine Will which is to guide him in life. It has, therefore, properly a place on Masonic altars and in Masonic processions. It is there as the great rule to which all may appeal in any question of morality such as may arise in a Masonic lodge; it is there as the light which shines upon all, and the brightness of which all rejoice to acknowledge.

Even those who do not believe in Christianity and who reject the authority of the Bible as a Divine revelation are constrained to own the excellence of its moral precepts, of the code of morality which it contains, and which is summed up in the two great commandments, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength and with all thy mind," and "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." These commandments are as much the laws of Freemasonry as they are of the Christian Church. It is not necessary to quote the ancient landmarks of Freemasonry in proof of this—every one who knows anything of them must be aware of the fact. The second of the two great commandments, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself," may be regarded as the foundation of the Masonic rules concerning conduct towards brethren. The whole system of Freemasonry is pervaded by this principle. The Freemason is not to regard his own interests alone, but to be helpful to his fellow-men as he has opportunity, and particularly to show brotherly kindness in every possible way to his brethren.

But simple as are the principles of the moral law, the two great commandments on which, our Saviour said, "hang all the laws and the prophets," the expansion of them into rules for the conduct of men in all the various circumstances and relations of life is far from being easy; and many questions arise as to which we may well be thankful to receive an answer of Divine authority and by express revelation. This all Christians believe that they have in "the law and the prophets"—in the Holy Scriptures. There are many points on which, without such guidance, it would be impossible, or well-nigh impossible, for men to frame a law for themselves; although, when we see the law laid down before us, we cannot but perceive its excellence, its accordance with the great principles on which the whole moral system is based, and its adaptation to the wants and interests of mankind. In this character of the moral code set forth in the Holy Scriptures, and of every particular portion of it, the Christian finds a confirmation of his faith, the wisdom and beauty of the whole attesting its Divine authorship. In the Bible the Freemason also finds a moral code prepared to his hand, so perfect that he cannot pretend to improve it in any particular, but must simply accept and admire it. From the earliest date, therefore, to which we are carried back by authentic history the Bible has been reverentially acknowledged by the Freemasons of all Christian countries, and regarded as containing and setting forth that moral law which they bind themselves strictly to observe. It is the great light by which the members of the Brotherhood walk; the exhibition of it in their solemnities and processions is intended to show their esteem for it, and to remind them of their duty with regard to it—that they ought diligently to study it and to frame their lives in accordance with its teaching. To remove it from the high place which it has hitherto held would be to change the character of the whole system of Freemasonry, and would throw into darkness and uncertainty many points of morality concerning which it is of the utmost importance that there should be no possibility of doubt, affecting the relations of brethren to each other and the conduct of lodges, as well as the personal conduct of individual members of the Order. That Freemasonry may continue to be worthy of admiration as hitherto and now, the Bible must be retained in its place, not only as symbolizing the great principles of religion and morality, but as authoritatively teaching them as the accepted rule of ultimate reference in all questions of morality, and the guide of each brother in his way through life. It must continue to be acknowledged as the great light of Freemasonry, and the more brightly that this light shines, the more evidence it is that every lodge is irradiated by it; the more perfectly that it is reflected in the character and conduct of every brother, the more will the Order be honourable, and the more will it be held in honour.

Freemasonry has always flourished most where the light of Divine truth has shone most brightly. In very ancient times—concerning which, however, it must be admitted that our information is very imperfect, and that we are compelled to depend upon inferential reasoning—it seems to have flourished more amongst the Jews than amongst any other people. When we come down to the times concerning which we have accurate and authentic information, we find it flourishing in Christian Europe; and its great revival in the beginning of last century was amongst a Christian people, a Protestant people, not only fully recognising the authority of the Holy Scriptures as the Word of God, but delighting to read them, and proclaiming the right to read them as a common right of all men. The distinguished men to whose exertions that revival is chiefly to be ascribed were men who revered and loved the Bible, appreciating aright its importance for the enlightenment of the world and its influence for the promotion of that brotherly kindness, that liberty, that respect for the moral law, for the law of the land, and for everything good and right, which it is the very object of Freemasonry to maintain and promote. Wherever the Bible has been extensively circulated, wherever its teachings have been received by any people, a powerful impulse has been given to the human mind, fresh intellectual activity has been displayed, and new progress has been made in the arts and sciences; whilst in the countries from which it has been excluded, or in which it is little known, there has been comparative stagnation, and even agriculture and the other useful arts have remained in a backward state. The benign influence of the Bible appeared in the Roman Empire, very soon after the first propagation of Christianity, in the improved condition of woman—an improvement which has invariably taken place wherever, in more recent times, Paganism or any other religion has been supplanted by Christianity. It appeared also in the mitigation of the woes of slavery, and ere long in the gradual disappearance of slavery from the social system of Europe; and although it must be admitted as one of the lamentable facts of history that our own and other Christian countries long continued to maintain slavery in their colonies, and to carry on the slave trade, it is also unquestionably true that the abolition of the slave trade, the abolition of slavery in the British colonies, and the recent abolition of slavery in the United States, are triumphs of Christianity, triumphs of the Bible, entirely to be ascribed to its influence over the minds and hearts of men.

Let the Bible, the great light of Freemasonry, continue to shine on our altars in our lodges.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM AND MASONRY.

Seeing that I have brought so many writers down upon me through my want of caution in my desire of obtaining knowledge, I must answer them in rotation as I turn over the pages of THE FREEMASON. First, Bro. Hughan; many thanks for his kind, hints in answer to "Zanoni." He is quite right, in part of his letter, where he says the greater part of the article will be found in the regulation of Supreme Grand Royal Arch Regulations; still it is doubtful if Bro. Arnott did not glean a good deal from the Masonic Landmarks of Bro. Oliver, published fifteen years previous. However, that little matters; "Honour to whom honour is due." If for the first time I have forgot to quote my authority it has been unintentional. "A Scotch Knight Templar," I must confess, rather puzzles me. He confesses that in the time of danger "his" Order made use of Freemasonry as a sheet-anchor, and when the storm blew by, it was quietly thrown aside; not very grateful to say the least of it. I shall merely ask him, with all due deference, which of the Orders of Templarism he belongs to, as I find there are two. I cannot do better than copy a letter from "Oliver's Landmarks," written by a Scottish Templar:—"The difference," he says, "between the Masonic and true Templar is this: the former is made in a priory or encampment attached to a Masonic lodge; while the latter can only be admitted and recognised as a genuine Knight Templar by a commission or confirmation from the only Grand Master of the Order in the world; and such commission is now never granted except to a person entitled to armorial bearings. All who cannot produce it are nothing but non-commissioned officers and privates, and are not recognised by us except as Masonic brethren." A provisional priory of the Scottish Order was holden at Edinburgh, Nov. 29th, 1843, for the admission of Lord Glenlyon, the Master of Strathallan, Sir David Dundas, and John White Melville, Esq.; the Preceptor and Grand Prior of Scotland, Fra. G. A. Walker Arnott, LL.D., presided. The chapter-house was decorated, &c. It seems to me to be a strange anomaly that an Order which entirely ignores Freemasonry, should compel its members to go through those grades previous to joining its ranks, if "A Scotch Knight Templar" is right; at the same time I must remind him that Freemasonry is a religious, if not military, Order.

Next to the front comes Bro. Buchan, who, without the least trouble, calmly sweeps everything away, in his idea, by quietly telling us "this is a dream," "that is fancy." Certainly it is very easy, after a month or so of reading, to think what a lot of trouble one might save themselves just by going to Bro. Buchan and be told "it is simply all moonshine." My dear sir, that sort of reasoning is very dissatisfying to one who simply wishes to hear the opinion of others, and gain a little knowledge from the learning of others. I am quite aware of the usual way that is given of the account of how James de Molay, in 1314, in anticipation of his speedy martyrdom, appointed Johannes Marcus Lormenius to be his successor in the dignity of Grand Master, and that the appointment was made by a regular, well-authenticated charter, bearing the signatures of the various chiefs of the Order, and that it is still preserved at Paris, together with the archives, banners, &c., of the soldiery of the Temple. It seems, moreover, from the same history, that there has been an unbroken line of Grand Masters to this day. Bertrand du Guesclin was Grand Master for some years, and the dignity was borne by several of the Montmorencies, and during the last century it seems that several of the Bourbon princes held the rank of Grand Master. Now it seems singular that such a titled body of men, holding such an unbroken line from their foundation in the 12th century, should require the assistance of any other body to keep them from being swept off the face of the earth, unless they had some closer link to bind them together. Two of the best works on Templarism are in German, and I am not aware that they have ever been published in English; they are Münter's "Statutenbuch des ardens des Tempelherren," and Wilke's "Geschichte des Tempelherrenordens." They are, unfortunately, out of my reach.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Committee Meeting of this Institution was held on Saturday, the 6th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Henry Browse, V.P., chairman. There were present Bro. W. Raynham Stewart, W. Paas, E. Cox, G. Cox, B. Mallam, J. R. Sheen, H. Bridges, F. Walters, J. G. Chancellor, J. Symonds, and G. Myers, V.P.'s; W. Farnfield, J. Weaver, Pierce, P. F. Grosjean, J. W. Dosell, H. Massey, A. D. Loewenstark, G. Smith, F. W. Shields, H. Empson, F. Adlard, W. Young, J. Tamer, &c.

Bro. Binckes, Secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed.

Three applicants were placed on the list of candidates for the October election, whose petitions were brought before this meeting and one was again deferred. One boy who had been educated in this school had the usual £5 voted to supply his clothing.

Notice of motion was given in reference to the privileges to be given to the Vice-Patrons, and of which we have already given a report.

It is arranged that a special court be held on Thursday, May 25th, at half-past three o'clock p.m., and of which the usual advertisements will appear, to consider the notice of motion and arrange the law so as to make it uniform in both schools.

Some other business having been disposed of, the usual vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

THE death has been announced of Brother Lord Garvagh, at Dublin, on Sunday. He was in his 45th year. The deceased nobleman, Charles Henry Spencer George Canning, was second baron in the peerage of Ireland, and succeeded his father in 1840. He was a member of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 255, Richmond.

THE SAFETY OF DR. LIVINGSTONE.—At the last meeting of the Geographical Society, letters were read from Dr. Kirk, of Zanzibar, respecting Dr. Livingstone. The intrepid traveller, in October last, was at a place called Manakoso, on the western side of the Great Lake, awaiting supplies to enable him to direct his steps homeward.

CONSECRATION of the St. CLEMENTS DANE'S LODGE, No. 1351.

The ceremony of consecrating and opening this new lodge took place on Thursday, the 4th instant, at the King's Head Hotel, 265, Strand, London. Punctually at the appointed time Bro. John Hervey, P.G.D. and G.S., took the chair as consecrating officer, and having duly appointed his officers, performed the solemn and impressive ceremony of consecration in his usual admirable manner. He was ably assisted by the Rev. Brother R. J. Simpson, rector of the parish and Past Grand Chaplain, who during the proceedings gave an excellent discourse on Freemasonry.

Bro. Hervey then installed Bro. W. Hale, P.M. 780, as W.M. of the new lodge, and he appointed the following brethren as his officers, viz., Hamilton, S.W.; W. Hilton, J.W.; the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Chaplain; Parker, Treas.; J. Child (churchwarden), S.D.; John Smith, J.D.; Rogers, I.G.; John Gilbert, Tyler. Bro. John Savage, P.G.D., in a correct and impressive manner gave the charges to the several chairs and the brethren.

A complimentary vote of thanks was accorded to Bros. John Hervey and the Rev. R. J. Simpson for their services, and those brethren duly acknowledged the compliment.

The names of nearly a dozen candidates for initiation were proposed, including that of the worthy host, Mr. Carr, and after some formal business had been disposed of the lodge was duly closed.

A very good banquet was afterwards served, which gave general satisfaction to those who partook of it, and showed how well the comforts of the brethren are likely to be attended to at the King's Head.

About twenty-five brethren were present, and besides those already named we noticed Bros. Joseph Smith, P.G.P.; Fred. Binckes, P.G.S.; W. Watson, P.G.S.; W. H. Baylis, W.M. 9; H. Massey, P.M. 619; C. B. Payne, G. Tyler; C. Lee, J. White, T. Parker, L. Alexander, and others.

CONSECRATION of the SANDEMAN LODGE, INDIA.

On Saturday, the 25th March, 1871, the interesting ceremony of consecration of Lodge Sandeman took place at the Freemasons' Hall, Dum-Dum. There was a large assembly of brethren from Calcutta and Barrackpore, and at 7 p.m. the following members of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal entered the new lodge room in procession, viz.:—Bros. H. H. Locke, Offg. Dep. District G. Master; Col. T. M. Campbell, Offg. Dep. D.G.M.; Dr. G. H. Daly, Past Deputy D.G.M.; Colonel B. Forde, S.D.G.W.; W. B. Farr, J.D.G.W.; Colonel W. G. Murray, D.G. Sec.; J. H. Linton, D.G. Treasurer; Major G. R. Fenwick, D.G.S.D.; H. B. Lewis, D.G.J.D.; W. O. Allender, D.G.D. of C.; W. B. MacTavish, Asst. ditto; Capt. G. G. Nelson, D.G. Supt. of Wks.; H. Compton, D.G. Org.; J. Lindley, D.G. Purst.; W. F. Westfield, W. Smith, O. B. Andrews, and T. H. Henty, D.G. Stewards; Geo. Alexander, D.G. Tyler.

The procession was received by the following brethren, who had taken their stations under their respective banners:—J. R. Pomeroy and Ayres, of Lodge Excelsior; R. C. Sterndale, F. W. Robertson, and T. C. Gill, of Lodge Industry and Perseverance; S. Lawry and A. LeFranc, Lodge Humility with Fortitude; Andrews and Turner, of Lodge Marine; D. G. Lisbenbals, E. H. Lloyd, and J. E. Barnes, Lodge Courage with Humanity; G. Keighly, S. Mitchell, Capt. Sartorius, and J. Hill, Lodge St. Luke; J. L. Limpus, of Lodge St. John; and Dr. Ferris, J. R. Alex. D'Cruz, R. Henry, A. M. Wybrow, A. Hillier, A. B. Mitchell, C. H. Harris, Burrows, J. L. Taylor, J. Andrews, A. Friedemann, W. Girling, O. Morrissey, J. Watson, W. Clayton, D. M'Gregor, W. Hunt, B. Oldring, J. W. Paschiny, E. Moriarty, and others.

The various District Grand Officers having taken their stations, V.W. Bro. Henry Hover [Locke, the Acting Deputy District Grand Master, proceeded to the east and opened the lodge in ample form, passed it to the second, and raised it in regular form to the third degree, according to ancient custom.

The brethren having resumed their seats, V.W. Bro. Locke desired the D.G. Secretary to read the Warrant of Dispensation for the formation of the new lodge. The brethren signified their assent for the formation of the lodge, and the A.D.D.G.M. then proceeded with the usual ceremony of consecration, in which he was assisted by V.W. Brothers Colonel Campbell and Dr. Daly. V.W. Bro. Locke offered an impressive prayer, after which the usual grand honours were given.

V.W. Bro. Colonel Campbell presented W. Bro. Isaiah Lawrence Tayler as the first W. Master of the new lodge, and the members having signified their assent in the usual manner, he was in due form invested and inducted into the chair, after receiving an appropriate exhortation from the V.W. the A.D.D.G.M.

The warrant of the new lodge and hiram having been handed to the W.M., Bro. Tayler, he called up Bros. Adolph Friedemann and Whitmore Girling, and after presenting them to the A.D.D.G.M. as the Senior and Junior Wardens of the lodge, they were, with consent, duly invested and placed at their respective stations in the west and south. The Secretary, Treasurer, and other officers having been in like manner appointed, took their various stations.

V.W. Bro. Locke delivered an appropriate speech wishing success and prosperity to the new lodge and exhorting the Master and officers to the proper observance of their respective duties.

W. Bro. Tayler thanked the A.D.D.G.M. for the honour of the visit and the very impressive manner in which the whole ceremony had been conducted. The officers of the District Grand Lodge then formed in procession and retired.

Lodge "Sandeman" was then reduced to the first degree, and some business brought forward in which the names of three candidates were proposed for initiation at the next regular meeting. Lodge was closed, at 8.30 p.m., and the brethren, to the number of about sixty, sat down to a sumptuous banquet which was laid out in an adjoining room.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to most ably by V.W. Bros. Locke, Murray, Fenwick and others. The band of H.M.'s 107th Fusiliers was kindly sent by the Colonel Commanding to enliven the intervals of the speeches and songs. The brethren separated at 11 p.m. to return to their homes.

CONSECRATION of a NEW MARK LODGE.

A most interesting and important event in connection with the Amity Craft Lodge of Freemasons, took place on Saturday at the Masonic Rooms, Thames-street, Poole, viz., the foundation and consecration of a Mark Master's Lodge of Freemasons, the advancement of several brethren to that honourable degree, and the installation of the W.M., and the appointment and investiture of the officers for the ensuing year. W. Bro. Frederick Binckes, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of England and Wales and the Colonies and Dependencies of the British Crown, kindly came down from London for the occasion, and rendered his most valuable assistance in the due performance of the several ceremonies. Several brethren from the neighbouring lodges were also present, amongst whom were Bros. Rev. P. H. Newnham, C. W. Wyndham, T. G. Horder, E. W. Rebbeck, J. W. Luff, E. Waters, &c. From these the W. Bro. Binckes selected his officers pro tem., and then proceeded to advance the following Craft Master Masons to the honourable degree of Mark Masters:—Bros. J. S. Hudson, W.M. 137; A. E. Guest, M.P., S.W. 137; G. H. Gutch, P.M. 137; J. H. Boyt, P.M. 137; E. P. Philpots, M.D., 395; Thomas Ings, D.C. 137; T. Manuel, J.D. 137; and Stevens, 137.

The lodge was then duly consecrated with solemn prayer by the Rev. Bro. P. H. Newnham, the warrant of constitution was read by Bro. Luff, and the lodge was declared formerly open by W. Bro. Binckes. The W. Bro. F. Binckes then proceeded to the installation of the W.M.-elect, Bro. E. Edsall, P.M. 137, as the first W.M. of the Amity Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 133, under the registry of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of England and Wales, &c.

The ceremony of installation being concluded by the salutations and congratulations of the brethren present, to which the W.M. responded in suitable terms, the warrant of constitution was delivered to him, and he then proceeded to appoint his assistant officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. W. Turner, S.W.; R. Sydenham, J.W.; Rev. P. H. Newnham, Chap.; J. S. Hudson, M.O.; A. E. Guest, M.P., S.O.; J. H. Boyt, J.O.; G. H. Gutch, Treas.; E. P. Philpots, Sec.; W. Stevens, Org.; T. Manuel, R.M.; T. Ings, S.D.; D. Sydenham, J.D.; E. W. Rebbeck, I.G.; J. White, T.

After the closing of the lodge the brethren adjourned to the Antelope Hotel, to an excellent dinner provided by Mr. Joseph Dowell, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and during the progress of the evening, at the request of the Chairman and other brethren, the W. Bro. F. Binckes (who from his close connection with the Masonic charitable institutions, was well qualified to speak on the subject), gave in an eloquent speech the history, progress, and successful working of those admirable institutions, and in so forcible a manner were their claims set forth that the brethren instantly collected sufficient funds to obtain for the newly-created Mark Lodge a vote for the Boys' Institution during the existence of the Amity Lodge, and handed the same to the Secretary (W. Bro. F. Binckes) before he left the table.

THE Grand Mark Master has approved of a warrant for a new lodge at Alnwick, to be called the "Hotspur" Lodge, the number of which will be 135.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Royal Oak Lodge No. 871.—The regular meeting of this well-established and prosperous lodge was held on Wednesday, the 26th ult., at the White Swan Tavern, High-street, Deptford; Bro. W. Andrews, W.M., presided. There were also present Bros. T. Kilner, S.W.; J. W. Reed, J.W.; H. A. Collington, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; W. Myatt, S.D.; G. Andrews, J.D.; S. O. Lewin, I.G.; J. Hawke, P.M.; G. Harvey, J. J. Pakes, R. Deal, R. Harman, F. R. Hood, F. G. Skinner, J. Wilson, and others. The visitors were: Bros. J. Lightfoot, P.M., Treas. 147; C. H. Porter, 147; T. Whiffin, 548; F. Jackson, 548; W. Lyver, 548. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The work, most ably done, was raising Bro. J. Wilson to the third degree, and passing Bros. F. R. Hood and F. G. Skinner to the second degree. Some important business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed. This being the day on which the Grand Festival was held, the customary banquet was dispensed with.

PROVINCIAL.

HARROW.—Harrow Lodge, No. 1310.—The anniversary meeting of this young lodge was held at the Railway Hotel, Harrow, on Tuesday, the 2nd inst. Bro. J. Coultts, G.P., W.M., opened the lodge, supported by his officers. The minutes of the meetings, held since the previous one, having been read and confirmed, the report of the Audit Committee was read, received, adopted and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Bro. John Cox was raised, and Bros. C. Tyte and A. Lewis (1178) were passed in an able manner. Bro. W. Smeed, P.M. 946, by desire of the members, took the chair. Bro. J. Coultts presented Bro. G. Pymm, W.M.-elect, for installation, and he was duly installed W.M., appointing as his officers: Bros. J. Coultts, G.P., I.P.M., Treas.; W. H. Green, S.W.; E. Harper, J.W.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); S. Homewood, S.D.; T. H. Lambert, J.D.; J. Harrison, I.G.; J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler (re-invested). The newly-installed Master soon gave proofs of his proficiency by the admirable manner in which he initiated Messrs. Edward Rawson and James Ariel Martin into the mysteries of Freemasonry. He then presented Bro. J. Coultts, I.P.M., with a neat chaste Past Master's jewel, of the value of six guineas, which had been unanimously voted to him from the lodge funds at a previous meeting, as a recognition for his valuable services rendered to the lodge as its first Worshipful Master. The jewel has a suitable inscription on its back, and is one of the best specimens of skill produced at Bro. George Kenning's establishment. It was universally admired by all who saw it.—Bro. J. Coultts, in a suitable speech, acknowledged this gift.—Several candidates for initiation and some joining members were proposed. A vote of thanks, to be recorded on the minutes, and an Honorary Membership of the lodge was given to Bro. W. Smeed, for his services as the Installing Master, which proved how well his efforts was appreciated, and for which he expressed his thanks. The lodge was closed, and the banquet followed. There were present: Bros. F. Harrison, J. Smith, W. Winsor, J. C. Hall, &c. The visitors were: Bros. G. Kenning, P.G.D. of Middlesex, W.M. 192; C. Atkins, S.D. 27; R. Hopkins, S.W. 87; J. Summan, J.W. 129; H. N. Levy, P.M. 188; T. Hammond, J.W. 212; R. Ord, 890; W. H. Waghorn, S.D. 946; A. Lewis, 1178; &c.

COLCHESTER.—Angel Lodge, No. 51.—At the last monthly meeting of this lodge, after the ordinary business had been disposed of, a most interesting lecture was delivered by Bro. W. Warren, Lieutenant 60th Rifles (brother of Captain Warren, whose researches in the Holy Land under the auspices of the Palestine Exploration Fund have already been made public), upon "The Great Pyramid." With the aid of diagrams, Bro. Warren described in detail the construction of the Great Pyramid, giving his reasons for believing that it was built by Masons, and expressing his opinion that further light would be thrown on the subject in a Masonic point of view by future researches. The lecturer then exhibited a model of Jerusalem, showing the present appearance of the city, and the extent of the excavations which have been carried on. At the close, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Bro. Warren for his interesting lecture.

BERKELEY.—Royal Lodge of Faith and Friendship, No. 270.—This old lodge held its usual monthly meeting at the Berkeley Arms Hotel, Berkeley, on Monday, the 1st inst. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. Joseph Bennett, who was supported by Bros. S. Davies, as S.W.; J. D. B. Trenfield, J.W.; John Gamble, as S.D.; W. Sinderby, J.D.; C. Partridge, P.M., Treas. and Sec.; O. Long, I.P.M.; G. Holbrow, P.M.; J. Cross, W. Pinnell, C. Rogers, Lindell, J. Oliver, Thomas Morse, W. P. Hadley, and Bro. O. Watson as a visitor. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read were unanimously confirmed. Bro. E. Rodgers answered the necessary questions and was passed to the second degree. Bros. Thomas Morse and W. Pearce Hadley were raised to the sublime degree of M.M. by Bro. Charles Partridge, P.M. (by special request), whose admirable and impressive rendering of this degree elicited the unqualified admiration of all the brethren. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet-room, where a very excellent repast had been prepared for them, and which was presided over by Bro. J. Bennett, W.M. The toast of "The Queen and the Craft," followed by others, were proposed and responded to with the usual Masonic honours. Several songs were sung by the brethren, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

HERTFORD.—Hertford Lodge, No. 403.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Town Hall on Tuesday week. The brethren present were H. B. Hodges, W.M.; C. Drummond, I.P.M.; J. D. Medcalf, S.W.; O. H. Wagner, J.W.; J. R. Cocks, Treas.; T. S. Carter, Hon. Sec.; C. B. Jones, S.D.; W. H. Nicholls, J.D.; S. Neale, M.C.; C. P. Wyman, I.G. and O.; S. Austin, P.M.; E. H. Ilott, E. A. Simson, I. Boatwright, L. Harvey, H. Campkin, E. Salisbury, W. H. Pallett, and F. Taylor. Visitors: Bros. Anthony, No. 13; Page, 902; Vernon, and Ibbetson. Bros. Pallett and Taylor were passed to the second degree. Mr. William Plumer Willson (Mayor of Hertford), was balloted for, and afterwards initiated. The working of the lodge reflects great credit upon the W.M. The brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet at the Salisbury Arms, where a pleasant evening was spent.

CROYDON.—Frederick Lodge of Unity, No. 452.—The usual meeting of this lodge was held at the Railway Hotel, East Croydon, on Tuesday, the 2nd inst. Present: Bros. Magnus Ohren, W.M.; H. E. Frances, as S.W.; William T. Sugg, J.W.; James Robins, P.M., Treas.; A. J. Dickinson, Sec.; W. Church Poole, S.D.; N. E. Jennings, P.M., as J.D.; J. Walter Sugg, J.D.; W. Locock Webb, P.M.; R. Evans, P.M.; George Wright, Masterman, Pollard, Davis, Campbell, and Beck. Visitor: Bro. H. B. Clarke, of the Albion Lodge, No. 9. Bro. Wright was passed, and Messrs. William Beck and James Charles Campbell, were initiated, both ceremonies being very ably and impressively performed by the W.M., Bro. Magnus Ohren. Bro. Captain William G. Davis, late of the Gooch Lodge, No. 123S, was elected a joining member.

HOLYHEAD.—Hibernia Lodge, No. 597.—Since the last report of the above flourishing and rapidly-increasing lodge appeared in THE FREEMASON, the brethren belonging thereto have met thrice:—On Monday evening, the 3rd April, a regular meeting, at which two gentlemen, Mr. Matthew Vaux and Mr. Joseph Hattersley, who had been previously proposed and seconded, were favourably balloted for; but being unavoidably absent their initiation was deferred. Bro. Thomas Jones, of New Zealand, was passed to the second degree, and Bros. T. G. Clay and William Pool were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason.—Lodge of emergency, held on April 10th, for the purpose of initiating Messrs. Matthew Vaux and Joseph Hattersley, which was accordingly done. On this occasion the Masonic chants, which have been specially compiled for this lodge by Bro. O. R. Ellis, Organist, were first used, the service throughout being conducted with musical accompaniment, to the apparent satisfaction of all the brethren present.—A regular lodge meeting held on the 1st May, at which there were present: Bros. John Peters, W.M.; Edward Mellor, I.P.M.; J. Ll. Griffith, S.W.; William Lewis, J.W.; John Ellis, S.D.; James Lloyd, I.G.; Rev. O. W. Jones, Chap.; Owen R. Ellis, Org.; Samuel Hughes, Tyler; and a goodly muster of the brethren. The lodge was opened with all due formalities, the opening ode sung, the minutes read and confirmed; after which the W.M. read to the brethren sundry letters and communications for their instruction and approval. It being desirable on this occasion to work the ceremony of raising first, the lodge was opened in the second and third degrees successively. Bros. Thomas Jones, of New Zealand, and Joseph Jones, of Holyhead, were subsequently advanced to the exalted and honourable degree of Master Mason, the whole ceremony being conducted in a most solemn and impressive manner. There being no candidates for passing, the lodge was then reduced to the first degree. Three gentlemen, who had been proposed as candidates for initiation, were now balloted for, namely, Messrs. William James King, Alexander Little, and Stephen W. Robson, the result proving favourable in each case. After due preparation, they were accordingly initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The W.M. then presented certificate to Bro. Poole, who signed his name in the margin thereof; and proceeded to appoint and invest two officers, namely, Bros. O. R. Ellis as Secretary, and William Evans as Steward. In so doing the W.M. dwelt on the years of faithful service and devotion with which the late Secretary, Bro. S. S. Wilkes, P.M., had served the lodge, stating that though, owing to his old age and many infirmities, he was unable to attend the fraternal gatherings, he (the W.M.), was convinced, in his own mind, that he still felt the cause of Masonry near and dear to his heart. The W.M. proposed John Roberts, Esq., Dublin, to become a member of the lodge, which was seconded by Bro. J. Ll. Griffiths; and after receiving "hearty good wishes" from lodges 1113 and 113, expressed by Bros. J. Lloyd Griffith and Gardiner, the lodge was closed in perfect peace and harmony.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Rulland Lodge, No. 1130.—The last meeting of this lodge, before the summer recess, was held on Thursday, the 4th inst., Bro. J. J. Fast, W.M., in the chair. Present: Bros. Rev. W. Kaye Robinson, P.M.; Rev. W. Langley, P.M.; and others. Visitors: Bros. Duncombe and Kew, from No. 1265. Mr. A. J. Dale was elected and initiated by the W.M., who also gave the ancient charge in a very perfect manner. The lodge was closed at 7.30, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

ISLEWORTH.—Willers Lodge, No. 1194.—This lodge met at the Northumberland Arms Hotel, Isleworth, on Saturday, the 6th instant. Bro. W. Dodd, the W.M., presided, supported by Bros. H. Allman, S.W.; E. T. Osbaldeston, J.W.; E. Clarke, P.M., Treas.; R. W. Little, P.M., Sec.; F. J. Lancaster, S.D.; R. A. Steel, I.G.; G. L. Ridge, T. A. Woodbridge, T. P. Yeowell, T. Verity, J. Verity, T. L. Green, and R. J. Davies. The lodge having been opened and the minutes read and confirmed, Mr. Charles Godfrey Slawson was regularly initiated, after which Bro. Davies was passed to the second degree in due form, the work being well done by the W.M. and his officers. Bro. Green was appointed Steward, and then, pursuant to notice of motion, it was unanimously resolved that the lodge be removed to the Grotto Hotel, Twickenham. A sum of two guineas was voted nem. con. to the "Little Testimonial" Fund, after which the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to slight refreshment, the recent decease of the landlord on the 29th ultimo rendering any attempt at a banquet out of the question. We believe the lodge will prosper exceedingly at Twickenham, and being already composed of about thirty-five members, it will not in any shape interfere with the progress of the very successful "Strawberry Hill" Lodge, now located at the Grotto Hotel.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.—The regular monthly meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, on Thursday, the 4th inst. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. C. Carnegie, P.M., P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works, Essex, who was supported by Bros. Fenn, S.W.; Capt. Richardson, R.E., as J.W.; McKenzie, as S.D.; Peers, as J.D.; Laverty, I.G.; White, Sec.; Osmond, P.M., and a numerous muster of brethren, among whom were Bros. Warner, Panmure Lodge, and Atkinson, 12th Lancers' Lodge (I.C.), who alternately performed the music appropriate to the several degrees conferred. After the minutes of the last meeting had been confirmed, a ballot was taken for Bros. Boyton and Wasp as joining members, and for Sergeant Swann, 107th Regt., a candidate for initiation, all of whom were unanimously approved of. Sergeant Swann was then duly initiated by the W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. Capt. Richardson, J.W. Bros. Gardyne and Griffiths, candidates for the Fellow Craft degree, were then questioned respecting their proficiency in the former degree, which proving satisfactory, they were entrusted with a test of merit and retired. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the W.M. conferred the F.C. degree on Bros. Gardyne and Griffiths, the working tools being presented by Bro. Fenn, S.W. Bros. Reynolds and Dillon, candidates for the sublime degree, having been questioned as to their proficiency with satisfactory result, and being entrusted, retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and those brethren were raised to that degree by the W.M., Bro. Fenn, S.W., presenting the working tools. The questions appertaining to the third degree were then put to the brethren for the information of the newly-raised. The lodge was then closed to the second and third degrees. The questions appertaining to the first degree were answered by the brethren for the benefit of Bro. Swann. Bro. Bennett, R.E., was elected Tyler, having kindly consented to fill that post till the next election of officers. The Lodge of Instruction was directed to be held on the second last Thursday in each month. Some other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in due form, and with solemn prayer.

ROYAL ARCH.

Mount Lebanon Chapter, No. 73.—The seventh anniversary convocation and installation meeting of this prosperous chapter was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Wellington-street, Southwark, on Thursday, April 27th. The chapter was opened by Comps. James William Avery, M.E.Z.; T. J. Sabine, H.; and H. Muggeridge, J. Comps. F. Walters, P.Z.; W. Roebuck, H. 1194; and others, being present. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed, and the report of the Audit Committee was read and ordered to be entered on the chapter minutes, as it was adopted. The ballot for Bro. Wollett (73) was declared to be unanimous in favour of his admission; but, through unavoidable circumstances, he was unable to be present, Comp. Henry Muggeridge, P.G.S.B., P.Z., took the chair of M.E.Z., and in his beautiful style installed Comp. T. J. Sabine as the M.E.Z. for the ensuing year. Comp. T. J. Sabine, M.E.Z., then installed Comp. M. A. Loewenstark, S.E., as the J., working the ceremony in an able manner. Comps. J. Trickett, C.E., H.-elect, and A. D. Loewenstark, Treas., were unfortunately absent through ill-health. The following companions were then invested as the officers of the chapter for the ensuing year: W. Roebuck, C.E., S.E.; J. T. Moss, S.N.; E. Harris, P.S.; T. Suffield, 1st A.S.; J. H. Butten, 2nd A.S.; S. Funckenstein, D.C.; T. D. Barnard, W.S.; and W. Y. Laing, Janitor, re-invested. Comp. J. W. Avery, P.Z., then had the usual five-guinea Past Z.'s jewel presented to him, which had at the previous meeting been voted unanimously to him from the chapter funds. Comp. Matthew Jennings was unanimously elected as the Steward to represent this chapter at the Festival of the Girls' School, The M.E.Z., Comp. Sabine, announced that it was his intention to become a Steward again to represent this Chapter at the Girls' School Festival in 1872. He had already completed his stewardship for the Boys' School as the chapter Steward, and had taken up a large amount on his list on March 5th, 1871. Several candidates for exaltation having been proposed for the next meeting, and some names of joining members, the chapter was closed until Thursday, Oct. 26th. A very good banquet was then served under the superintendence of Mr. J. Spencer, who, as usual, was indefatigable in his endeavours to please all. Dessert followed. The usual toasts were then given and responded to, and some excellent singing and good recitations were given during the evening—a well-spent and happy meeting being brought to a close when the Janitor's toast was given. There were present besides those named: Comps. J. R. Tustih, G. J. Loe, M. Jennings, A. P. Stedman, J. McKiernan, &c. The visitors were: Comps. W. R. Wood, P.Z. 2; W. H. Germain, 11; J. Terry, P.Z. 174; E. P. Albert, P.Z. 188; and some others whose names we were unable to ascertain.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Bon Accord Mark Lodge.—A convocation of the above lodge was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Wednesday, the 3rd inst. Present: Bros. Magnus Ohren, W.M.; Spencer, I.P.M.; Empson, Treas.; F. Binckes, G.M.S.; Sec.; Rev. Thomas Robinson, Chaplain; Baxter Davis, P.M.; Cockle, J.W.; Newton E. Jennings, I.G.; and other brethren. Bro. the Rev. V. H. Moyle having been duly elected, was advanced by Bro. Binckes, P.M., the W.M. performing the duties of S.W. and M.O., both those officers being absent. Bro. Richardson, the S.W., was duly elected W.M. for the ensuing session, and Bro. Empson was re-elected Treasurer. The value of the charity-box was shown in the case of a P.M. of the lodge who came to distress some time back and who had been recommended to the lodge for assistance. This box, which the Grand M.M. recommended to be used in this lodge, produced the first night 14s. 6d.; the second night, 14s. 9d.; and on this, the third night, the W.M. made an appeal to the members on behalf of the distressed brother, it having been agreed in lodge that the first three nights' subscriptions to the charity-box be given to that distressed brother; the result was an amount of £3 14s. 10d., which, together with the former amounts, made £5 14s. 1d. Visitor: Bro. Ware, No. 12 Craft Lodge and Mallet and Chisel Mark Lodge.

PROVINCIAL.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Howe Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 21.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, May 4th, when the attendance was very small. Bro. Fast was installed W.M., a dispensation having been procured from Grand Lodge as he had never served the office of Warden in a Mark Lodge. The chair was taken and the ceremony worked by Bro. W. Langley, P.M. 21 and Grand Chaplain of the Mark Grand Lodge, assisted by Bro. Robinson, Past S.O. of Grand Lodge and P.M. 21. The following officers were then invested:—Bros. W. Adcock, S.W.; J. E. Bright, J.W.; J. C. Duncombe, M.O.; T. Markham, S.O.; J. Bailey, J.O.; J. B. Leadbetter, Treasurer; T. Barnard, Sec.; Clark, S.D.; Chester Newcome, J.D.; Femeley, Org.; Berridge, I.G.; Turville, Tyler. Bro. Duncombe proposed a brother for advancement, and the lodge was closed at half-past six o'clock.

STUDY.

It has ever been the boast of Freemasonry that she was the mother of the sciences and the arts and the dispenser of knowledge to the world. This is a noble claim, but one that can be substantiated by the records of all past time. The broad earth from pole to pole is covered with the remains of grand architectural piles that owe their origin to the Ancient Craft; with others that still retain their integrity and pristine beauty; while of the most venerable there remains but the tale that enlivens the historic page, and lends to it an interest and value in comparison with which the selfish conquests of many a bloodthirsty prince and conqueror are as nothing. From the time when "Solomon in all his glory," aided by the King of Tyre and Hiram Abif, erected the first Temple, and dedicated it to God with the aid of descending fire from the "Upper Sanctuary," to the epoch of the noble enterprise of the restoration of the Temple, or the building of the second Temple, and then coming down the long ages since, during which temples dedicated to God's glory were erected and elaborately garnished throughout Europe—many of which are standing to this day—considering all these mighty monuments, how can we do aught than laud the works of these artificers, from whom we, as Freemasons, are descended, and to whom we owe all of the dignity, the glory, and the value of our principles. Brethren, so long as this halo of glory encircles us, so long will Masonry deserve to be studied; and he who is not a Masonic student, but at best a mere ritualist and by rote reciter, or perhaps, worse still, only a lounging and uninterested attendant at occasional meetings of the lodge, shares none of the honours of Masonry, but is a living monument, a walking tombstone. No one who has not "brains" should seek to join our Order, or, having them, does not intend to use them. A stupid man in these enlightened times is a pitiable enough object, but a stupid Mason is a contradiction in terms. If they are such, is in spite of both the light of this nineteenth century and that higher Masonic light that makes apparent to every brother the full circle of his obligations, and the many radiating paths of mystical and improving knowledge that are open before him.

Masonry is either something or nothing. If it be only a ceremony—a ritualistic display—it is nothing; but it cannot be this. No ceremony by itself could bind men together for thousands, or even hundreds, of years, by the strongest ties of fellowship and love; something else must underlie it. If it be not a bare ceremony, but a science, or rather a science or mother of sciences, then we can understand its antiquity, its permanence, the reason why the greatest names and the most cultured minds among men have been found to ally themselves to it. That which was founded by the wisest and the greatest Prince of ancient times, and ever since has been patronized by kings and philosophers, the noble, the wise and the pure, must be all that its proudest historians claim for it. It challenges investigation, both at the hands of its enemies and friends; from its enemies, that they may learn how it seeks no dark or devious ends, not even to accomplish good through illegitimate means; from its friends and brethren, that they may enjoy their high privileges, and be masters of the speculative sciences, as their predecessors were of the operative arts of the ancient Freemason.

The ritual of Masonry may be compared to a foreign language, an acquaintance with which may, or may not, be the means of largely increasing the knowledge of the individual, according as he learns it simply for himself, or, as a key to unlock the treasures that are contained in the various volumes of its lore. Language is the gateway of knowledge, not knowledge itself; so the Masonic ritual is but the vestibule to our spiritual temple, within which are treasures of wisdom, that only they discover who are earnest Masonic students. Who would devote the best years of his life to learn a new tongue, and then use it only as a spoken language, without ever looking into the thousands of volumes that contain its most precious knowledge? Yet precisely analogous to this is the action of that craftsman who is entered, passed, and raised, who glibly recites by rote his Masonic lessons, so to speak, in the lodge class, and who never gets beyond these A B C's of the Order. Such brethren, however old they may grow to be, are always, Masonically speaking, children, babes in arms; or, if they can toddle a little, never pass out of the reach of the leading strings that they have self-imposed upon themselves.

There is a soul in Masonry. The bare ritualist is ignorant of this. He sees the body, and is satisfied with it; while of the ethereal soul he has not the slightest conception. In the eloquent language of another, "Masonry has a soul as well as a body. It is not a magnificent temple, beautiful in proportions, rich in architectural taste, and lovely in its outward adornments; but empty and desolate, and dark within. If it is brilliant and comely without, its inner courts, secret halls, and private chambers are immeasurably more so. If its outward splendours bespeak the habitation of a divinity, go with me over its tessellated ground floor, through its middle chamber, and its sanctum sanctorum, and there you will see the altar, the fire, and the divinity itself. The great mistake of the day is, that what we technically call the work of Masonry is itself."

Brethren, consider these thoughts. If you are ambitious of becoming able Craftsmen and master builders, of attaining honour and eminence in the order, you must give heed to these considerations. The age demands it; the spirit of intelligence, generally rife among Masons, demands it. To-day, he who is not a Masonic student is a Masonic dolt. —Keystone.

NECESSITY FOR A MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. —In England, it would have hurt no agricultural show or farmers' club, if we had had a Minister of Agriculture, who could have urged on his colleagues and the legislature the removal of any injurious impediment and obstruction—who could have favoured exhibitions, colleges, professorships and experiments, by legislative measures, or by a small and judicious expenditure. Had there been such a Minister, even to reward and encourage the deserving, progress could not have been impeded, but might have been much stimulated.—Food for a real.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

THE connection of Freemasonry with chivalry may be interpreted in more than one sense. Even those matter-of-fact thinkers who resolutely deny that any of the present Masonic chivalric degrees are derived, however remotely, from the ancient orders, will admit that an ideal affinity, a kinship of noble aims, unites the modern Masonic "institutions with the heroic confraternities of the past. To a romantic ear there is a fascination in the very word "knight," and with the adjective "knightly" we are wont to associate everything that is good and true and honourable. To succour the weak, to defend the oppressed, to do battle for the faith, for one's country or one's friends—such was the glorious programme of the knights of old, and more especially of those who devoted themselves to the rescue of the Holy Land from the destroying hands of the infidels. The origin and history of the first great Knightly Order of Palestine

—the Templars—are so well known to all readers that it becomes unnecessary to dwell upon the subject here. But one great moral to be gathered from the record must not be forgotten; like the rivulet which swells into the river, like the acorn which expands into the oak, like the mustard seed whose growth overspreads the soil—even so arose those great orders of chivalry from small beginnings to wealth, power, and fame. We may, in like manner, safely conclude that Masonry itself was originally, and probably for many years, a pigmy which attracted but little notice, until by degrees it attained its present form, and now rejoices in the exercise of a giant's strength. But to return to the consideration of the chivalric orders. Of these we have in England only two, with their auxiliary or subsidiary degrees, and both are expressly tolerated, if not recognised, by the Articles of Union between the two Grand Lodges in 1813. We mean the Knights of the Temple, with the appendant Order of Malta, and the Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine, with the complementary Order of the Holy Sepulchre. As it is our intention to give a full account of these chivalric degrees upon a future occasion, similar to those already given of the grades belonging to the Ancient and Accepted Rite, we do not purpose entering into particulars now; but it may be said that all these orders, so far as Masonry is concerned, are, if not universal, at least peculiarly English in their genius and character. They are not the offspring of the Masonic adventurers of the eighteenth, or earlier part of the nineteenth, centuries—they were not hatched in the fertile brains of a Cagliostro, a Schroeder, or a Zinnendorf. The Grand Masters of the Craft, or other eminent brethren holding high office under the Grand Lodge of England, have for many years presided over, or patronized, the mysteries of those orders; and this fact in itself bespeaks for them the kindly feeling and respect of all true Masons.

Chivalry is but the helmet which completes the panoply of the Masonic soldier; without it he is none the less a soldier, but with it he can go forth into the battle of life with greater confidence and animated by a surer hope. The only argument which can be used against the Knightly Orders is that they are essentially Christian in their inception and scope. This is true, and it arises from circumstances which are now inseparably interwoven with the world's history, and which, therefore, cannot be annulled.

All the memories of the past cling to that central idea—the triumph of the cross; and those brethren who now, in a greatly altered state of human affairs, choose to commemorate the deeds of old, must adhere to the pact formerly sealed in blood, amidst the din of arms and the shout of victory. Fortunately we have no sentimental grievances upon this point among the Freemasons of England; no member of the ancient faith of Israel feels himself an out-cast because Knights Templar exist, or because the Red Cross banner is being unfurled day after day throughout the length and breadth of the land. We know that many of our friends of the Hebrew race—the true lineage of kings and princes—are good and faithful Masons; we appreciate their worth and honour their principles. Whenever the call of charity is heard, they are ever ready with their contributions, and outside the pale of Masonry, although a lodge bears his name, if we desire to mention a true philanthropist, what name is more universally appreciated than that of Sir Moses Montefiore?

Orders of Chivalry have their advantages, inasmuch as they cultivate and preserve that nice sense of honour, that delicate perception of the true and the beautiful, which is the attribute of all noble minds. While Freemasonry teaches justice, benevolence, and goodwill, chivalry exhorts us to the practice of self-denial and courtesy in every relation of life.

There can be no doubt that the Masonic Orders of Chivalry now flourishing in England preserve the essential characteristics of the ancient knightly fraternities, and we need not, perhaps, pry too archaeologically into their precise origin. It is at least certain that several English royal princes, including two who were afterwards kings, took a leading part in the organisations of both the Red Cross and Templar degrees, and as the Constantinian Order has now been so firmly re-established in England, let us hope that the two great bodies of chivalry will for ever distinguish themselves amongst Masons by the exercise of those rare but invaluable qualities which ought to be the peculiar characteristics of Christian Knight Masons.

THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.

WE have great pleasure in noting that the Grand Lodge of Quebec has now been recognised by no less than seventeen Grand Lodges in America, and there is every reason to believe that this number will, ere long, be considerably increased. The Keystone of Philadelphia—one of the ablest Masonic periodicals in the United States—now upholds the claims of the Quebec brethren, and gives its reasons for a change of opinion on the subject in an exhaustive article, which we hope to reproduce next week.

The calm and dignified attitude maintained by the Grand Lodge of Quebec throughout the trying ordeal to which it has been exposed is worthy of all praise, and cannot be without effect upon the minds of the brethren in the sister province of Ontario. We look forward earnestly to a happy termination of the dispute, as on both sides we see arrayed only Masons and brethren.

A MASONIC VETERAN.

I have had a few particulars sent me of a Mason who was initiated fifty years ago, and beg to submit them to the notice of the Craft. Bro. David Milne, who died on the 24th June, 1869, aged 79 years, was initiated in the year 1818 in one of the regimental lodges under the Grand Lodge of England, No. 426, as his lodge certificate testifies. We enclose a careful copy of that old document, which was kindly sent us by the zealous and intelligent Mason, Bro. Robert Walker, Past Master of St. Ninian's Lodge, Brechin, Scotland. It appears that our aged brother when very young joined the 92nd Regiment, and served through the Peninsular war, when he was discharged with a pension, and subsequently settled at Brechin. He joined the ancient Lodge St. Ninian's (which has minutes from A.D. 1714, to which we shall refer ere long), and was appointed Tyler about the year 1840. After twenty-five years' service the members had his portrait taken in his appropriate clothing as guardian of their mysteries, and in appreciation of his genuine character and Masonic worth. We are glad to hear that the brethren were exceedingly kind to the valiant old man, and we are told that his regard for the lodge was so great that he left them his earthly treasures, viz., his diploma and medals. There is something suggestive of solemn thought, when thus recounting a few of the many virtues of this aged Mason, who served his country faithfully, and then, in his "green old age," was buried by the Fraternity whom he loved, with full Masonic honours. The funeral service of the Craft was most appropriately and impressively read by Bro. Robert Walker, the Immediate Past Master of the lodge, in the presence of a large concourse of people who had assembled with the members of the Mystic Tie to consign to their last resting-place the mortal remains of a man who had lived and died a Mason.

BRO. YARKER AND THE "HIGH DEGREES."

I challenge Bro. Yarker to prove the first few opening sentences of his interesting communication in THE FREEMASON for May 6th, 1871. Bro. Yarker says he can "produce printed evidence showing that certain high grades (which after 1744 were popularly believed to be associated with Rosicrucianism) were known 1721, 1724, and 1744 to the Grand Lodge of 1717." Mark the word "produce." I hereby deliberately challenge him to produce the evidence mentioned with respect to the year 1721. I believe he cannot do so, and I know well that no one has yet done so. Bro. Yarker brought forward claims sometime since about the Constitutions of A.D. 1721, mentioning the "high degrees;" but these were exploded, as he and your correspondents know, by Bro. Hughan in THE FREEMASON sometime since. He cannot prove his statements concerning the "Royal Order" in 1717 either, but enough for the present. Bro. Yarker has written in a public Masonic journal, and is bound to make known the evidence which he says he can produce. 333.

STIRLING PLATES AND BRO. "LUPUS."

I notice your esteemed correspondent, Bro. "Lupus," states that "Probably, if Bro. Forsyth can procure the loan of the engraved plates discovered at Stirling, the editor of THE FREEMASON will not object to give impressions in his issue." I hope Bro. Forsyth will be more fortunate than the writer in obtaining a sight of these plates, or even in procuring any definite and trustworthy information about them. I spent some weeks, in odd hours, looking up the question a few years ago, and wrote officials in Edinburgh and at Stirling, and also made special inquiries at Stirling by kind co-operation of Masonic students who also investigated the matter; but all our many attempts only resulted in confirming what I was told at the outset, viz., that "No one knows aught about them either in Stirling or elsewhere. The friends at Stirling say the plates were sent to Edinburgh, and never returned, and the Fraternity at Edinburgh declare they were returned, and have since been lost"!!

BROWNE'S "MASTER KEY" (p. 232.)

The only copy of this curious work I have ever met with was lately presented by me to the Freemasons' Hall Library, in this town, and, I presume, is the first edition, that of 1809 being a reprint. It is a square 12 mo. volume, printed "A.L. vmcccxciv., A.D. mdccxcviii.," and was formerly in the possession of a brother who was Provincial Grand Secretary half a century ago, and the last Mayor of Leicester under the old régime in 1835; who was hence popularly designated as "Richard, the last of the Plantagenets," ALLEGORICAL SCULPTURES IN MEDIEVAL CHURCHES.

The following, bearing upon this subject, which appeared at page 267 of the Building News for 7th April, 1871, will, I have no doubt, both be interesting and useful, especially to such brethren as took an interest in the matter when it was being discussed in THE FREEMASON during the month of June, 1869, viz.: "The second paper—in 'The Sacristy'—is by Herr B. Ecke, on what he calls the 'Beast Epic,' in which the fox is more particularly described. These sculptured animals in sacred costume, which we so frequently find in churches, are shown to be nothing more than allegories of the deceits of the devil, and, in fact, they are the lineal descendants of Æsop's fables. The latter indeed, are often found literally rendered: thus among the precious series of incised stones in the cathedral of S. Omer we find, inter alia, the fable of 'The Fox and the Crane.'" W. P. ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

ANNUAL FESTIVAL.

The festival in celebration of the eighty-third anniversary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Monday night at Freemasons' Tavern. The chair was taken by H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, a Past Grand Master of the Order, a circumstance which no doubt greatly contributed to the unqualified success of the meeting. The attendance of brethren of all grades in Freemasonry, and of every rank in society, was very large, thus testifying not only their respect for the Royal brother who presided, but the deep interest they take in the welfare of this most laudable charity. That our fair sisters feel equally concerned in its prosperity the presence of about two hundred ladies after the banquet was sufficient proof. The Institution—which was founded between eighty and ninety years ago by the Chevalier Ruspini, and till within the last fifteen or sixteen years had its "local habitation" in the comparatively dingy district of the Westminster-road—now boards, clothes, and educates above 100 girls, taking the entire charge of them from seven to fifteen years of age, at a handsome and spacious schoolhouse at St. John's-hill, Battersea-rise, well known to all railway travellers by the Clapham Junction route. The number of inmates will shortly be increased, it having been deemed advisable to abolish the infirmary which now forms part of the building, and allot the space thus freed to the reception of additional scholars, a separate establishment being in the meantime erected in the extensive grounds for the treatment of all cases of sickness. These, it is pleasant to notice, are generally rare, the locality being salubrious, and the care taken on the children all that a mother's tenderness could bestow. But during last winter, scarlatina broke out in the school, and as many as 33 girls had to succumb. The medical officer, however carried them all through it successfully by dint of constant attention, which the General Committee so fully recognise that they are about to present him with a testimonial. Should an epidemic break out again, it was thought that the infirmary was too close to the healthy pupils; and hence its removal and a consequent addition to the number of children to be educated. The Institution, in an educational point of view, is admitted by all who know anything about it to be successful, and many of the scholars have obtained at various times honours at the Oxford and Cambridge Middle Class Local Examinations. Prior to each annual festival, a visit is paid to the school by the Stewards and their friends, and such a visit was paid on Tuesday last, when the pupils went through an inspection, and gave satisfactory proofs of their proficiency in their studies, and exhibited as happy and healthy an appearance as any loving father could desire to see.

Among the distinguished Freemasons who supported the Prince of Wales, we noticed His Serene Highness Prince John of Glücksburg, the Earl of Clonmel, Viscount Macduff, Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, the Marquis of Hamilton, the Hon. A. T. Fitzmaurice, Sir H. Pelly, Sir R. Graham, Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Bros. C. Sykes, M.P.; M. Guest, M.P.; H. Petre, the Rev. W. L. Onslow, F. Knollys, Sir Albert Woods (Garter), R. J. Bagshaw, Sir Pryse Pryse, Horace Lloyd, Q.C.; F. A. Philbrick, Raynham W. Stewart, Frederic Ledger, Joshua Nunn, John L. Evans, John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Æ. J. McIntyre, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, the Rev. R. J. Simpson, the Rev. J. Huyshe, the Rev. J. Edmund Cox, J. Van N. Bazalgette, Algernon Perkins, Samuel Tomkins, W. E. Gumbleton, Peter Matthews, Wm. Young, Frederick Binckes, Dr. Barringer, J. Cooper Forster, Chas. Watson, Collard Moutrie, John Boyd, E. Farthing, T. Meggy, Magnus Ohren, C. I. Paton, H. Empson, J. A. Rucker, Geo. States, Benj. Head, R. J. Spiers, Conrad C. Dumas, and T. Fenn.

At the conclusion of the dinner, grace was sung, and toasts were then proposed as follows:—

The PRINCE of WALES: Brethren, the toast that I have to give you is "The health of the Patroness of our Craft, the Queen," and who has also identified herself so far with Freemasonry as to extend her hand to all its charities. I call on you, brethren, to drink in bumpers "The Queen."

Sir PATRICK COLQUHOUN: Brethren, His Royal Highness, your President, has been pleased to convey to me this emblem of authority (the gavel) and in virtue of that I call upon you to preserve the most exact silence while I propose to you "The health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Past Grand Master, the Chairman of the day, with thanks for his attendance; the Princess of Wales, and other Members of the Royal Family." It is seldom that it falls to the lot of a subject to have this honour, and on the present occasion it has fallen to me, and I shall esteem it through the rest of my life to be the highest honour that could have been conferred upon me. The presence of H.R.H. here this evening has given you the opportunity of showing your loyalty and of exhibiting those feelings of charity which are inseparable from the character of a Mason. (Hear, hear.) But this toast never stands alone; it is always coupled with that of "the rest of the Royal Family." Under the present circumstances, I would call to your attention that that family has been visited by a very serious affliction—an affliction which will never be forgotten by the parents, and never forgotten by the nation over which a royal family rules. But happily time heals every wound, and I trust that it has healed it in the breasts that have once felt it so severely; at all events, it will be a satisfaction to you all to hear that Her Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales, now enjoys her former health—(cheers)—and whatever afflictions it may have pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to visit upon her and her royal husband, at all events He has been pleased to restore her to that perfect health which all the devoted subjects of her Majesty most ardently desire. (Hear, hear.) I should be trenching on the province of H.R.H. and abusing this emblem of authority which has been committed to my hand, if I detained you longer, and therefore I call upon you with hearty enthusiasm, and due devotion, and perfect loyalty to drink "The health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family."

After the toast had been most cordially drunk,

The PRINCE of WALES, who was received with the greatest enthusiasm, said: Most cordially, brethren, do I thank you, and from the bottom of my heart, for the kind reception you have given me, and for the manner in which you have received my health. As regards myself you may be certain that I give me great pleasure to be here this evening, and to be surrounded by so many brethren of the Craft, and to assure the brethren that from the day that I became one of your number, it has been a great pride to me. You may be sure that I shall always do my utmost to be a worthy brother of this Craft. (Great cheering.) Allow me, brethren, on the part of the Princess of Wales, to thank you, Bro. Colquhoun, for the kind and touching way in which you alluded to her name, and all the brethren for the kind way in which they received it. I am glad to be able to announce to you that the Princess is now, I hope, quite restored to her accustomed health—(cheers)—and that in a short time, I hope, she will be once more among you. Before sitting down, I have the pleasure to announce to you that she has consented to become Patroness of this Institution. (Loud and long-continued cheering.) Once more, brethren, accept my heartfelt thanks for your kind reception. (Cheers.)

The PRINCE of WALES: Brethren, it is now my privilege to propose to you the following toast, which I feel convinced you will receive with enthusiasm: "The Health of the Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, the Most Worshipful Grand Master, the President of this Institution and of the Board of Stewards." (Cheers.) I feel sure, brethren, that all of us must miss him here this evening; we must regret excessively that he is not among us, as he would have been if in this country; but, as you are aware, brethren, he is on the other side of the water, engaged, I hope, in the most successful termination of a long dispute. I hope, however, the day will not be far distant when our Grand Master will be once more among us, and at our hospitable board. I now call upon you to drink "The Health of the Grand Master, the President of this Institution." (Applause.)

The Rev. J. HUYSHE: Brethren, if you received the last toast enthusiastically, I am quite sure that you will be equally ready to respond to that which I have been commanded by your Royal Chairman to bring before you. It is not the custom of a Freemason to forget past services and past kindnesses, and therefore I feel confident that when I propose to you the health of that nobleman who presided over us for so many years, and who, by his wise and beneficent rule, gained the esteem, the love, and the veneration of every member of the Craft—I mean the Earl of Zetland—you will respond to it loyally and kindly and from the bottom of your hearts. I give you "The Health of the Earl of Zetland, Past Grand Master of England."

Bro. Col. SYKES, M.P.: Your Royal Highness, lords, and brethren, the toast I have the honour to propose to you is the "Health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Officers, Present and Past." As a Yorkshireman, I could speak with greater fervour of the merits of Lord Zetland and the present Grand Master, both of whom are Yorkshiremen, but I can only say this, that if the Earl of Carnarvon fills his post of Deputy Grand Master as well as the present Earl de Grey and also Lord Zetland, I am sure no member of the Craft will have reason to find any fault with him. Your Royal Highness, I beg to propose "The health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Officers Present and Past," coupling with that toast the name of the Grand Registrar, Bro. McIntyre. (Cheers.)

Bro. Æ. J. MCINTYRE: May it please your Highness, my lords, and brethren, I assure you that I have very great pleasure in rising to return thanks for the toast that has been proposed on this occasion. In representing now the Grand Lodge of England and its officers present and past, I cannot refrain from saying that those Grand Officers, with the Earl of Carnarvon at their head, have shown that they are not only capable of being good Masons, but that they can do good suit and service to the realm of England as statesmen, as warriors, and as patriots. We have our own Grand Master, as a statesman, on a foreign ground doing his duty to his country, and we do hope he will return crowned with those laurels which he will have won, and will have cemented that union between the Masons of America and the Masons of England which both desire. If we find that in our Grand Master, in his Deputy we find a worthy supporter; for Lord Carnarvon, in whatever he undertakes, adds lustre to the work which he does, for never does he touch any duty but he adorns it. For the rest of the Grand Officers, they are also desirous of doing their duty. Whenever they have the opportunity of promoting the interests and advantages of the Craft, they are always to be found in their place, and they are represented on this occasion by a great number who have come to assist this great and glorious charity; and I am proud to be among them, and to assure you that we will now and upon every occasion do that which will not bring discredit on you but tend to the benefit of the Craft. I beg to thank our Bro. Sykes for proposing, and your Royal Highness and the brethren for drinking this toast, and to assure you most sincerely that we deeply appreciate the honour you have done us.

The PRINCE of WALES: Brethren, it devolves upon me now to perform the pleasing duty of bringing before your notice the toast of the evening, which is "Success to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls," and the "Health of the Treasurer, Bro. Samuel Tomkins." (Cheers.) I feel sure that you will drink this toast most heartily. In addressing so many brethren as are here to-day, I may state that I have always had some diffidence in calling upon them to subscribe, but I have not that same feeling here this evening, when I know that you are all brethren of the Craft—(applause)—and that one of the most important principles which is inculcated in the minds of Masons is charity—(cheers)—and I feel equally convinced, when I see so numerous an assemblage of Freemasons here, that they have come for one object, and that is, to support an excellent Charitable Institution. (Hear, hear.) I feel, however, brethren, some difficulty in addressing you when I see before me the excellent Report which has been drawn up, because I can hardly find any fresh words to place before you the position of this Institution. At the same time, some of you may not have had an opportunity of reading it carefully through, and it may not be out of place that I mention to you briefly a few facts concerning it. (Cheers.) Its object is then, brethren, the clothing, the maintenance and the education of daughters of decayed and deceased Masons. That, in itself, almost sufficiently tells how good a charity it is. As I feel sure you would not wish that the children of any good, honest, trustworthy Masons should be left starving and unable to obtain their livelihood. (Hear, hear.) Another important fact connected with the Institution is that it is entirely supported by voluntary contributions. (Hear, hear.) Since its foundation, in 1788, as many as from 900 to 1000 girls have been educated, clothed, and maintained in it. To me also it is especially interesting to be connected in any way with this Institution, when I have been told that my grand-uncle, the late King George IV., and Prince of Wales also, took a great interest in its foundation. (Cheers.) It has been the great object, I understand, of all connected with it, constantly to give these girls a good, sound, simple and useful education—(hear, hear)—not what has become the fashion a good deal at the present day called "cramming." (Hear, hear.) The object is not teaching these girls what is almost an absolute necessity for them to know to have any success in life, but also to give them some preparation for different situations which it may suit them to take charge of. In these days, education is so much thought of—far more so than it was 50 years ago—a fact, as you are all well aware of, brethren, it is the great topic of the day—(hear, hear)—and I think I may say with justice—and I am also convinced that you, brethren, will back me up in this statement—that we Freemasons were the first to set an example in education, and in establishing and starting good schools. (Hear, hear.) That example, brethren, has been followed by others, and, having had that good name, let us keep it up. (Hear, hear.) The Council of this Institution, in order to test the standard of education which has been given in this school have entered the names of several candidates for the Cambridge Local Examinations; and I believe I am not wrong in stating that with very few exceptions they have passed those examinations with credit to their teachers and to themselves. I believe I may also state to you that the Institution is flourishing in every respect; that during the past year as many as 100 girls have received instruction in it, and some of them have gone forth to the world, we hope, provided for life. It has been found necessary, as you are doubtless aware, to build a new wing—an infirmary and a dormitory. We all know that in building—at least I know it myself—(laughter)—we cannot do it for nothing. It is, therefore, brethren, to defray the expenses of this building that we have met here to-night, so as not to get this Institution into debt. I am convinced that there is no danger of such being the case. I am convinced I shall not appeal to you in vain, for I am equally convinced that you will be glad to meet the sum of £3,000, which will be the cost, I understand, of this increase of building. Brethren, I will not detain you longer. I thank you for having listened attentively to the few and imperfect remarks I have made to you. When you read through the Report, you will find everything more in detail; but let me call upon you now most heartily to drink "Success to this Institution," and to offer, before you leave, a material guarantee of the interest you take in it.

Bro. SAMUEL TOMKINS (Treasurer): Your Royal Highness and Brethren, I beg, as the Treasurer of this Institution, on behalf of myself and the officers, to thank you most cordially for the way in which this toast has been proposed and received. The Officers of this Institution feel the deepest interest in the welfare of this great and noble charity. They anticipate that this evening will produce a grand result for that charity. They feel grateful to you, brethren, for your attendance to-day; they feel it a high honour that H.R.H. has presided to-day. This charity fills a very important place in the Craft. Anything which should throw it into an inferior place would be a damage to the Craft at large; but there is no danger of such a calamity happening. The charity always occupied an important place in the wishes of the Craft, and when the lists are read you will see that the ancient prestige of this charity is well maintained, and that we may look forward to many years of great and glorious prosperity. On behalf of all the officers, I thank you heartily for the honour conferred on us. (Cheers.)

Bro. E. H. PATTEN (Secretary) then rapidly ran through 124 lists of subscriptions, which amounted to £5200, leaving 26 lists to come in, the total of which is expected to realize £250. The announcement was received with loud applause, and Bro. Patten was heartily congratulated on the success which his exertions had achieved. His energy in the cause of the Girls' School, however, has accomplished great things before this; and it is probably mostly due to his excellent management of the Institution, which visitors have so frequently had an opportunity of witnessing, that such a liberal result was obtained. The Prince of Wales subscribed 100 guineas; the Princess of Wales 25 guineas; Baron F. de Rothschild 10 guineas; Prince John of Glücksberg 5 guineas; and the Marquis of Hamilton 3 guineas.

The PRINCE OF WALES: Brethren, I have the pleasure of bringing to your notice the following toast: "The health of the Visitors." I am sure you will receive that kindly, as it is a pleasure to us to see so many distinguished visitors around us supporting this charity. I have great pleasure in coupling with the toast the name of Prince John of Glücksberg, a distinguished relative of my own. I have much pleasure in proposing his name, as this is the first time he has been present at any gathering of English Freemasons. I am glad that he is present and that you so cordially receive him, for when I look back to the time when I first became a Freemason, three years ago in Sweden, I remember I was most kindly received in a Danish Lodge in Copenhagen. You will also, I am sure, appreciate the kindness which was then shown to me, and will be glad that I couple the name of Prince John of Glücksberg with the toast of "The Visitors." (Cheers.)

PRINCE JOHN OF GLÜCKSBURG: Brethren, in my name, and in that of the other visitors, I thank my illustrious relative most sincerely for proposing my health, and you, brethren, for so kindly receiving it. With the greatest pleasure, I shall carry back to my country the remembrance of this day, which I have celebrated here amongst you; and it will always remain an agreeable thought for me to have been here among English Freemasons. I thank you, brethren. (Great applause.)

The Rev. C. J. MARTYN, Past Grand Chaplain, rose to propose the toast of "The Vice-Presidents, Trustees, various Committees, and Medical Officers," but when he had got half through his speech, finding that Bro. S. Tomkins had erroneously returned thanks for that body, proposed "The Health of the other Masonic Charities." In doing so, he said: I hope and trust you will carry back with you to your own provinces an account of what you have heard and seen, the same as our illustrious visitor, Prince John of Glücksberg, will carry back to his own country what he has heard and seen, and thus stir up feelings of benevolence among your brethren. You will thus do your Masonic duty, and do honour to the Craft at large. Any words I can use giving you the merits of our Institution would be useless. I would only remind you that it is a most admirable one; that the two festivals already held have produced large sums of money; and I trust that the meeting of to-night will be equally beneficial.

Bro. JOHN HERVEY, Grand Secretary: At once I beg to return thanks for the toast which has just been so kindly proposed by the Past Grand Chaplain. I do not know that I can add anything to what he has said in reference to the Masonic Charities; and I think, if I were to make the best speech of the evening, it would be to return you the heartfelt thanks of the brethren whom he has mentioned, and say no more than how much those who have been associated in the toast feel in reference to the charities, and how much they are interested in them. I am sure that the Trustees, the Vice-Presidents, and all who are connected with the Charities, do their best to support them, that they will continue to do their best, and so long as they obtain your confidence and esteem, and command your support, they will feel they are amply rewarded.

Rev. J. EDMUND COX, D.D., Past Grand Chaplain: His Royal Highness has entrusted the next toast to my care. It is one which I am sure you will receive with peculiar satisfaction, because it is one which refers to the labours and good services of those who have catered so well for our entertainment to-day, and who have so nobly come forward to support His Royal Highness, our illustrious brother, on an occasion of deep and intense interest to every one of us. I have to propose "The Stewards of the day," thanking them for their services, and I am sure you will all unite with me heartily in acknowledging the great services they have rendered so well to-day. With that toast I shall give the name of the President of the Board of Stewards, Bro. Joshua Nunn, who will return thanks for that body, and do his duty in that respect as he does in all others. (Cheers.)

Bro. JOSHUA NUNN: May it please your Royal Highness, my lords, and brethren, as Stewards on this occasion we can but thank you for the support we have received, more particularly from His Royal Highness and from the distinguished visitors he has around him; and I feel convinced that the charity will flourish from to-day, knowing that we have for our patroness Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. (Hear, hear.) I am quite sure that there is no one connected with this charity but must feel that we have gained to-day the highest and brightest honour we can get in connection with our charity—(hear, hear)—and I am also sure that every brother who has joined me as a Steward will feel that His Royal Highness has, in naming the illustrious lady as our patroness, given us all the patronage we can desire. I feel certain we shall at least endeavour to deserve it. (Cheers.)

The PRINCE OF WALES: Brethren, the rule in this life is that all good things come to an end. This dinner is now approaching its termination, and the time has arrived for me to offer you the next toast. I feel sure you will do honour to it, and drink it in bumpers, when I tell you the toast is "The Ladies," with thanks for their attendance. (Cheers.) All Freemasons know the value of ladies' society—the rich and the poor—and we on this occasion, I think, may thank them for having attended and listened so patiently to our speeches. Unfortunately, when I look up in the gallery, I see that their ranks have very much diminished. I think there are barely any left. I trust our speeches did not weary them and cause their departure; but we will cordially drink the health of those who are present and of those who are absent.

His Royal Highness and the visitors then left the hall, and adjourned to the Temple, where a superb concert was performed, under the direction of Mr. Lawler, by Mdme. Florence Lancia, Misses Maria Johnstone, Beale, Severn, Edmonds, Montague, Mason, and Julia Elton; and Bros. Baxter, Mortem Smith, Carter, and Lawler; Messrs. Linley and Lewis Thomas. Mr. Churchill Arlidge gave some wonderful performances on the flute, and Mdme. Arabella Goddard presided at the pianoforte.

Bro. Thomas Spencer performed the duties of toastmaster to the satisfaction of every one.

THEATRICAL.

HAYMARKET.—Bro. J. B. Buckstone, with regret, announces that in consequence of Mr. Sothorn not having sufficiently recovered from his severe illness, he would not be able to re-appear in the new comedy drama, "An English Gentleman," until May 13th. The "Rivals" and "School for Scandal" have been performed during the week to large houses.

PRINCESS'S.—During the week "The Wrong Man in the Right Place," "The Fool's Revenge," and "The Man in the Moon," have been acted to large and fashionable audiences at this ever-popular theatre.

OLYMPIC.—"Daisy Farm" has proved a genuine success, and is performed nightly to large and crowded houses. "The Dumb Belle" and "A Chapter of Accidents" are also performed.

STRAND.—At this fashionable theatre has been performed "Up in the World," and a new burlesque, by H. J. Byron, entitled "Eurydice or Little Orpheus and his Lute." As usual, the theatre has been filled in every part. On Saturday, 13th, will be produced the celebrated Strand comedy, by John Oxenford, called "Neighbours," also an original farce, by F. Hay, entitled "Lodgers and Doggers."

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN KISSLING.

Death has again visited us, and removed from our midst one whom we could ill spare, and whose loss will be keenly felt, not only in his public capacity, but in several more intimate and private relationships. It is with profound regret that we record that Bro. John Kissling, manager of the branches at Blenheim and Picton of the Bank of New Zealand, breathed his last, after two days' illness, on Tuesday morning, the 10th January, at the early age of 31 years, leaving a widow and four young children to lament his untimely death. Sit tibi terra levis.

He was the eldest son of the late Ven. G. A. Kissling, Archdeacon of Waimate, and was born at Sierra Leone in 1839, where his father was at that time a church missionary. While the subject of our notice was yet very young his father removed to Auckland, and there his children were educated under the eye of Bishop Selwyn—then Primate—and each have made themselves prominent in recent years; one being accountant in the Auckland branch of the Bank of New Zealand; a second is Registrar of the Supreme Court, Auckland; and a third is a solicitor in extensive practice in the same city. The eldest son, John, received an appointment in the Dunedin branch of the Bank of New Zealand when it started, and has filled the office of manager for several years. He came to this province about three years ago, having been removed from the West Coast, where he performed his duties with such satisfaction that he was presented with a very handsome testimonial by the various employes under his care. Immediately on his arrival here he joined several of the local societies and clubs, in which he ever took a prominent and active part, which he continued until his death. He was one of the lay readers as well as a church officer at the Church of the Nativity; was one of the founders of the Marlborough Lodge of Unanimity, No. 1236, E.C., of which he was the W.M., having been twice successively installed; was a member of Court Blenheim, Ancient Order of Foresters; was Lieutenant of the Blenheim Volunteers; and a long time Captain of the Cricket Club. He was, in brief, a member of almost every organisation in the neighbourhood, and with his family took a very active interest in the Philharmonic Society and the Wairau Club, both of which will suffer an irreparable loss. Always zealous in good works and charitable actions, he was universally esteemed, as was shown by the respect paid to his remains. Requiescat in pace!

The interment took place on Thursday afternoon, and it remains for us to describe the event, which was unequalled in interest by any former instance of the kind in this locality. Being the chief officer of the Masonic fraternity, a special meeting of the members was convened, and the result was the organisation of a procession, in which the Foresters coalesced. The Masons met at their lodge-room, and proceeded to the house of deceased in Maxwell-road; passing between the Foresters, who drew up near the house, they entered and took up their positions. The Tyler at the door, the E.A.'s and F.C.'s lining the pathway (the M.M.'s alone entering the house, where the first portion of a deeply interesting ceremony took place); while the Foresters completed the lines. The procession left the house in the following order:—

- Tyler, with drawn sword.
- The Junior Deacon and Senior Deacon acting as Stewards, with wands.
- Apprentices of other lodges.
- Apprentices, bearing young acacia trees.
- Craftsmen.
- Master Masons of other lodges.
- Master Masons of Marlborough Lodge.
- Organist.
- Secretary, with roll. Treasurer.
- Junior Warden and Senior Warden.
- Past Master of Southern Star Lodge, Nelson.
- Past Masters of Marlborough Lodge.
- The Holy Writings, borne by the oldest Master Mason.
- The Acting Worshipful Master.
- Sword-bearer. THE COFFIN. Sword-bearer.
- The Chief Mourners.

The Inner Guard, with drawn sword.
The Foresters.
Forty gentlemen on foot.
Vehicles.
Horsemen.

Proceeding in admirable order along Maxwell-road, the cortège halted at some distance from the cemetery, when the coffin was taken from the hearse, and there was placed upon it two swords crossed, a sprig of acacia, the E.A. apron, and the P.M. jewel, presented to deceased about a year ago. The following gentlemen, representing the original founders, then bore the coffin to the gate:—Messrs. Douslin, Dodson, Nelson, Pitt, Somerville, Currie, M'Lauchlan, and Emerson. Here they were met by the Ven. Archdeacon Butt and the Rev. T. L. Tudor, who took their place in front of the coffin, which was borne between the ranks of the Brotherhood by the following as officers:—Bros. Alexander, acting W.M.; Marks, P.M.; Bagge, J.W.; Earll, P.M.; Wemyss, Treasurer; Robinson; Griffiths, Secretary; Carey, Organist; being followed by Messrs. Hull and Hodgson as chief mourners, having the eldest son between them. The beautiful service of the Church of England being completed, the acting W.M. took his place at the head of the grave, his officers being ranged on each side of him, and the Master Masons forming a chain round the whole; Bro. Alexander then completed the affecting ritual of the Craft, the Secretary deposited the roll in the grave according to ancient custom, an example followed by all the brethren casting in sprigs of acacia, and the ceremony was closed by the P.M.'s of the lodge, who planted acacia trees at the head and foot of the grave. The procession then returned to town in the reverse order in which they came, and with the like method as before.

Si monumentum requiris circumspice!

When we state that upwards of 300 persons took part in the cortège, the fact will be apparent that it included gentlemen from all parts of the province, who vied to do honour to the lamented gentleman and his family; while all business was entirely suspended, and flags were exhibited half-mast high by many of the establishments in town as well as by the shipping.—Marlborough Gazette, N.Z.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you or some of your contributors answer me the following question:—How is it that Moses and Solomon are designated as the two Grand Parallels in the tracing-board, and in the 5th section of the first degree the two St. John's are designated as the two Grand Parallels. Your insertion of the above, with replies, in your next issue, will oblige,

QUALIFICATION FOR THE MARK CHAIR.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Every Freemason must feel great respect for any opinion offered by our worthy Brother William James Hughan. As I know him personally; and that perhaps no brother can be found who does more to advance the true interests of the Order, I regret to find myself not able to agree with him with reference to the necessity of a brother having attained the W.M. chair in a Craft lodge as being a sine qua non for the W.M. chair in a Mark lodge.

It has been my good fortune to have been the means of assisting in the resuscitation of one of the oldest Mark lodges in England, which had fallen into a state of abeyance, and as the paucity of numbers was a serious obstacle in the way of suitably working the degree, it was felt that a new infusion of members desirous of initiation was a step which would conduce to ultimate success. Where, then, were we to obtain qualified brethren to fill the chairs?

It will, I think, be admitted that a large number of Craft Masons do not express a wish to become Mark Masons, and it is not every W.M. in the Craft who feels impelled to apply for initiation in the Mark. I therefore fully endorse the views expressed by "A Craft P.M." in the concluding paragraph of his letter in your issue of the 29th ultimo, and most firmly believe that if these views are carried out, the degree of Mark Masonry will gain an immense advantage, as the impetus will be given to brethren who perhaps from the large number of members in a Craft lodge have comparatively only a slight chance of attaining the W.M. chair in their lodge.

As to "dispensations," my own experience in another degree has led me to say I have found a "dispensation" to be an act of favouritism, not founded upon the principle of "brotherly love."

Yours fraternally,
A CRAFT AND MARK P.M.

THE 1717 THEORY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read the letter by Bro. "Lupus" at page 268, and have to thank him for the explanation he gives regarding the Masons' Statute of 1425. Seeing it was entitled "cap. 1," I of course naturally expected some explanation regarding the other heads, which Bro. "Lupus" has now given by informing us that there were "five chapters." In short, it is a miscellaneous collection of Acts, one of which refers to the "Masons" as openly violating the "Statutes of Laborers," and which "Statutes of Laborers," as Bro. "Lupus" himself tells us at page 268, simply shows us the masons mixed up with, and also put upon a par with, the carpenters—in fact the carpenters are put first, as it says: "And that as well carpenters and masons be comprised in this ordinance, as all other labourers, servants, and artificers." In short, the result of this discussion, so far, has clearly brought out what I have been asserting, viz., that the masons of that period were simply upon an equality with the carpenters, and that the law which applied to the one would, under similar circumstances, apply to the other, both carpenters and masons, as well as other crafts in the building line, being all, as Bro. "Lupus" tells us, simply designated as "laborers." In order to regulate their wages all these "laborers" were in the habit of meeting occasionally, just as the trades' unions of to-day; but what had that to do with our speculative Masonry? Certainly, nothing! And I am very much obliged to Bro. "Lupus" for his interesting and valuable quotations, which so clearly prove this: while in doing so he has been playing into my hands in the most amiable manner imaginable! He not only tells us that they were quarrelling about their "wages," but also that the "Chief Master" of the carpenters got "four pence" a day, while the "Chief Master" of the masons simply got—the same. While, as to "congregations, chapters, oaths," &c., the carpenters were equally guilty with the masons. Owing to the word "oaths" being here, the generality of Masonic writers would immediately jump to the conclusion that this is proof positive of the existence of our system then; but that would be a mistake, as the practice referred to is simply that of the period when it was customary sometimes for the whole male inhabitants of a town to take the oath in public, the one hand touching the cross while the other was uphaldin, or, as elsewhere, "the said chaplain shall be obliged at his entry, before he be admitted to the said hospital, to give his great oath by touching the sacred Evangile." So among the crafts, they had an oath only to show they had no particular secrets connected therewith—when even a master was admitted into the company, a certain number of apprentices had to be present. Consequently, so far as I am yet aware, our system of degrees, words, grips, signs, &c., was not in existence until about A.D. 1717. On this point our Masonic historian, Bro. J. G. Findel, lately wrote me, 14th November, 1870: "You are right if you say that our 'system' of speculative Masonry did not exist before 1717-23, and also the three degrees, in the present form; but I think you are not right if you deny that the elements, the groundwork of them, is not older." Now, as to this, I am obliged to Bro. Findel for his admission so far, and as to the "three degrees," I deny their existence among the pre-1717 masons in any form. I admit that certain of the "elements," or "groundwork," of them existed before 1717, only not among the masons; for, as I expressed it so far at page 188, April 16th, 1870, the founders of speculative Masonry mixed operative terms, Bible references, Rosicrucian lore, Egyptian and Jewish legends, &c., and so made up our system. And in connection with this see also page 417, August 27th, 1870, mid column, where certain remarks of Bros. Lyons and Hughan are given, all, as I consider, tending to confirm the views I am giving. A talented brother well says: "Facts alone are not sufficient; they may be distorted to appear in favour of a falsehood. I also agree with you that we want other MSS. on the Crafts generally." This was in answer to a remark that we want more facts, viz., truth, e.g., there were "Freemasons" in 1571 just as there are "Freemasons" in 1871, but the "Freemason" of the former period was quite a different individual from the "freemason" of the latter, while also the "freemasonry" of the two was quite different in ideas, constitution, objects, workings, end, and aim. The great thing which I find fault with, therefore, is the oft-repeated misapprehensions and mistakes which our Masonic writers fall into through not observing that a mere resemblance in nomenclature does not necessarily involve a relation—historical or otherwise—in fact.

I may here point out another mistake of Bro. "Lupus," viz., at page 268, where he says, "of statutes of the existence of which he had never before been aware." Now, if this refers to the Henry VI. statute, which he gave at page 641, December 10th, he is wrong, for at page 322, July 2nd, 1870, he may read my comments upon it—five months before his publication of it.

In his last paragraph Bro. "Lupus" virtually throws up the sponge in regard to his ability to prove the existence of our "Freemasonry" before 1717, and asserts that I ought to prove its non-existence, which of course is simply asking me to prove the negative. I consider this is hardly fair, seeing I was not born until A.D. 1836, while for above a hundred years previously Masonic authors had been asserting that the Freemasonry then in existence had existed for ages, only when proof is asked of its existence before 1717, it is never forthcoming! And now I am virtually told, "Well, we find ourselves unable to prove the affirmative, but we challenge you to prove the negative?"

Under the whole circumstances, therefore, I consider myself justified in saying that, as to the existence of speculative Masonry, the 1717 is the true theory, as my foregoing remarks show. There is room for "more light" regarding the immediate proceedings to the first Grand Lodge meeting of 1717, which I hope we may get by-and-by.

I am, yours fraternally,

W. P. BUCHAN.

P.S.—In reference to the Clothiers' Guild referred to by Bro. "Lupus" at page 233, we perceive that, although it was a "clothiers' gild," it admitted "eminent citizens and neighbouring gentlemen," or non-clothiers, just as was the case with the old masons—these gentlemen, however, were generally, I suppose, simply "Pentacles." But when so admitted before 1717, it was not for the purpose of receiving our secrets and degrees, for these were not in existence then, but with some it was an honour, with others a share in a benefit society, and so on. Consequently, had it not been for the system instituted by Drs. Desaguliers and Anderson, there would have been no more of our speculative Freemasonry in the old Lodge of Antiquity, e.g., than there was of speculative Clothiers in the Clothiers' Guild above referred to. I might go on explaining this further, but I must remember that your space is valuable; besides I consider it the duty of brethren to think it out for themselves, for, unless they do so, all our writing is nearly useless. Besides, "more light" will be found at page 417, August 27th, 1870. W. P. B.

PROXY COMMISSIONS TO GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Some of our Scottish brethren seem to be very hard up for something to fling at their Grand Lodge. They talk about Proxy Commissions, as if the whole blame of their existence lay with Grand Lodge, but that is not the case, each lodge has the power of sending its own actual Master and Wardens to Grand Lodge; but if said Master and Wardens will not go, why make any fuss about proxies! Who, I ask, is it that appoints the proxy? Is it not the lodge itself, or its Master and Wardens? Consequently, seeing such is the case, I know nothing more childish than the foolish remarks which have appeared upon this subject. Whence this sudden zeal? What selfish object is to be gained by it? Even when proxies have been appointed, the Master and Wardens of a daughter lodge may personally appear by sending due notice to Grand Lodge of their intention so to do. However, many of the Masters of Scottish lodges at a distance from Edinburgh refuse or are unable to attend the meetings personally, when of course a Proxy Commission is issued, in favour of whoever the lodge or its Master pleases, and if the one appointed does not please, they have it in their power to appoint another. Consequently the whole power lies with the daughter lodges, if they choose to take the trouble to use it. Then as to foreign lodges, whose Masters, &c., could never be expected to attend, it is only fair they should have the power to appoint proxies. As to the remarks of a "Past Master," I greatly fear there is very little in them, while of what there is, some appear rather un-masonic, and the lodge which tries "Past Master's" ideas on may possibly get its "fingers burnt" in the process.

I am, fraternally yours, A MEMBER OF THE G.L. OF SCOTLAND.

"PALMAM QUI MERUIT FERAT."

To the Editor of the Freemason.

SIR,—In the report of the anniversary festival of the St. George's Lodge of Instruction, Greenwich, given in your issue of the 6th instant, it is stated "That this, the oldest lodge of instruction in this locality, possesses several able instructors, and that most of the Masons in the neighbourhood freely admit that here they gained the knowledge so essential to good working."

I should not have trespassed on your space, but that I have a strong belief in the quotation which heads this letter, and that I consider that those who do really devote their time and attention to promoting the study of Freemasonry shall not be deprived of their laurels by those who are either too indolent or too ignorant to undertake that duty.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally, ONE WHO KNOWS.

Greenwich, May 8th, 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Seeing in your issue of last Saturday, in the notice of the new Grand Officers, an assertion that the new Grand Chaplain, the Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg, was well and favourably known in the province of Oxford, allow me as a member of that province to inform you that the new Grand Chaplain has no connection with it beyond an honorary membership of the Apollo University Lodge, conferred upon him when occupying the chair of the Isaac Newton Lodge in the sister University of Cambridge, to which province he therefore belongs.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, Faithfully and fraternally yours, AN OXFORD PAST GRAND DEACON. Monday, May 9.

ON SUBORDINATION IN THE HIGHER DEGREES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have watched with painful interest the progress of this discussion, and in common with those who cherish a sincere desire to promote a true Masonic spirit in all that pertains to the working of the A. and A. Rite, have been greatly grieved at the unfortunate feeling which has been displayed by your anonymous correspondents. I certainly do think that the seriousness of the question demands that every one who ventures to advocate either side of it should declare their names and addresses, and in the hope that you may agree with me, I express the opinion, and ask for the insertion of this communication in your next issue.

Yours fraternally, Ακρὸν λάβε, καὶ μέδων ἐξέεις.

P.S.—I would very much like to see in your columns, for the enlightenment of those brethren who are at present unacquainted with the matter, a notice of the origin of the Supreme Grand Councils 33° here and elsewhere. It would astound many, and interest all.

We are informed that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.S.H. the Prince John of Glücksburg, and many other eminent brethren, have expressed their great satisfaction at the style and execution of Bro. S. Rosenthal's splendid painting, the "Inauguration of Freemasons' Hall," which is now on view in the Grand Officers' Room, in that building. His Royal Highness picked out several of the portraits in the picture at once on the occasion of his visit to the hall on Monday last.

THE Fifteen Sections will be worked by Bro. G. W. Verry, S.W. 554, on Wednesday next, the 17th inst., at the Confidence Lodge of Instruction, held at Bro. Forster's Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street, commencing at seven o'clock.

JERUSALEM CHAPTER OF ANTIQUITY MANCHESTER, H.M. K.H.

Who or by whom these degrees were introduced first into Manchester does not seem quite clear. They were evidently, however, organised by Bro. John Hassall, who was connected with a Rotherham Conclave, which practised the high grades in 1780. From the old York Conclave of Redemption of seven degrees, the Grand Lodge of All England at York adopted the Templar, and granted the "Jerusalem" warrant in 1786. This was confirmed by Bro. Thomas Dunckerley in 1795, who some years previously had been elected Grand Master of the "Seven Steps of Chivalry."

HER MAJESTY has intimated her intention of opening the new St. Thomas's Hospital in the latter part of June.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Epidemic Diseases.—The alarming increase of deaths from influenza and bronchitis should be a warning to every one to subdue at once any irregularity tending towards disease. Holloway's Pills should now be in every household, to rectify all impure states of the blood, to remedy weakness, and to overcome impaired general health.

THE MASON'S RELIANCE.

"Come unto Me all ye that are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give ye rest."

Look above, ye weary-hearted,
Look above in every grief;
Though all hope may have departed,
One on high can give relief.
Sink not, then, beneath thy sorrow,
Faint not 'neath affliction's rod,
Brighter days may dawn to-morrow—
Look above, and trust in God.

Dark may seem the way before thee,
Little may be left to cheer;
Yet thy Father watches o'er thee,
Though no solace seemeth near.
Life hath scenes of grief and gladness,
Sorrow's path thou may'st have trod,
Still in every hour of sadness,
Look above, and trust in God.

Hath His mercy not sustained thee
In each tribulation past?
When each grievous trial hath pained thee,
Where didst thou thy burden cast?
At His feet. Then soothe thy sorrow,
Faint not 'neath affliction's rod;
Rays of hope may dawn to-morrow—
Look above, and trust in God.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chests. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. "Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on 'Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels,' a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

SMALL-POX, FEVERS, AND SKIN DISEASES.—The predisposition to is prevented by Lamplough's Pyretic Saline. Vitalising and invigorating, its effects are remarkable in their cure and prevention. Take it as directed. Sold by chemists and the maker, H. Lamplough, 113, Holborn-hill.—[Advt.]

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.

A Mark Lodge in connection with the Caledonian Unity Chapter, No. 73, was held on the 25th April—Bros. Gilchrist, W.M.; Thos. Fendler, S.W.; and G. W. Wheeler, acting J.W. Bro. Thomas M'Gleachy, of Lodge 103, was advanced. The Past Degree was then conferred on him by Comp. James Balfour, the P.M.E.Z.—The chapter was then opened by Comps. D. Gilchrist, Z.; J. Balfour, H.; T. Findler, J.; G. W. Wheeler, P.S.; and G. M'Leod, Scribe E., when Bros. Jas. Dunlop, of No. 360, and H. G. Y. M'Leod, of No. 354, were admitted into that exalted degree. Visitors: Comps. Adams and Shaw, of 50; and Robertson, of 69.

An emergency meeting of the Royal Ark Mariners' Lodge, No. 73, was held in the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on April 24th, for the purpose of initiating Bro. Dr. John Reid Morrison. Bros. James Balfour commanded as N.; J. Findler, J.; and Gordon Ross, acting as S.—A Council of the Knights of the Red Cross was then opened under the presidency of the M.E. Sir Kt. David Gilchrist, assisted by Sir Kts. J. Balfour, S.G.; J. Findler, acting J.G.; and G. W. Wheeler, Captain of the Guards. Bro. Dr. J. R. Morrison was then admitted, and afterwards received the degrees of Knight of the Sword, Knight of the East, and also Knight of the East and West. This council now holds regular monthly meetings, and the order is spreading rapidly in Glasgow.

VACCINATION.—Turning to the supply of lymph, much that is unreasonable, more that is untrue, has been written of late to prejudice the minds of ignorant or unthinking people against Jenner's immortal legacy to mankind; the dangers of vaccination, and especially of unhealthy vaccine matter, have been paraded ad nauseam, and are never absent from the minds of careful mothers, whether in the upper or lower classes. It will be a satisfaction, therefore, and perhaps a surprise to some who have given way to an unreasoning panic, to be told that a National Vaccine establishment has existed in England since the year 1808, and that it is at this time actively supplementing the lymph supply of the country, under the eye of a resident inspector, by whom the most minute particulars are recorded of the source and efficiency of each sample supplied.—Food Journal.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

We cannot do better than conclude the Craft portion of our sketch by giving in extenso the resolutions, &c., appended to the official report of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, dated 24th June, 1853, and for more modern information, we must refer our readers to the calendar published by that Grand Lodge, and the excellent "Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar," issued by Bro. George Kenning, of Little Britain, London:—

Laws and Regulations to which particular attention is directed:—

The several lodges and members of the Society of Freemasons in Ireland are most particularly requested to take notice that all Masonic processions are, by Order of the Grand Lodge, expressly prohibited, unless by permission first obtained from the Grand Lodge.

A lodge shall not ballot for, admit, or initiate into Freemasonry any person who is not a resident in the town, village, or neighbourhood in which the lodge meets into which he seeks to be admitted, until due inquiry shall have been made of such lodge or lodges as may exist in the neighbourhood of his residence, respecting the character of the applicant for admission, under penalty of forfeiting, for the first offence, the admission fee, and if repeated, the warrant to be suspended during the pleasure of the Grand Lodge; and if the candidate for admission into a country lodge be a resident of Dublin, his name shall be submitted to the Committee of Inspection through the Deputy Grand Secretary, to whom shall be paid the same fees as if he were initiated in Dublin.

Notwithstanding that unanimity is required in the ballot for the admission of candidates for initiation, yet in the case of ballot for members already belonging to the Order, the candidate shall be admitted according to the by-laws of each lodge. If a lodge has no by-law on the subject, unanimity is required.

Every brother initiated in any lodge holding a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, or transferred thereto from any foreign lodge, shall, in addition to the usual admission fees to the lodge, pay the sum of five shillings to the funds of the Grand Lodge.

A person already belonging to the Order cannot be admitted a member of any other lodge until he shall have produced a Grand Lodge certificate.

A candidate shall not be initiated in any country lodge for a less admission fee than one pound fifteen shillings, under a penalty of one pound fifteen shillings for each offence; nor in the city or county of Dublin for less than four pounds five shillings, under a penalty of being fined four pounds five shillings for each offence; all which payments, respectively, shall include the cost of registry and the initiation fee of five shillings, payable as above to the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge strictly prohibits as unlawful all assemblies of Freemasons in Ireland under any title whatever, purporting to be Masonic, not held by virtue of a warrant or constitution from this Grand Lodge, or from one of the other Masonic bodies recognised by, or acting in unison with the Grand Lodge of Ireland.

(The lodges are therefore desired to take notice that the Grand Lodge having granted its warrants for Blue Masonry alone, cannot allow or permit them to be used for any other purpose whatsoever; and lodges wishing to work the higher degrees must have separate warrants to authorise their proceedings, regularly signed by His Grace the Duke of Leinster, as head of all the grades of Masonry.)

The Secretary of every lodge shall make yearly a true and accurate return to the Deputy Grand Secretary of the members actually subscribing to the lodge during the past year, and if it shall appear that he has omitted the name or names of any such subscribing Members, the lodge shall pay a fine of Ten shillings to the funds of the Grand Lodge; this return to be forwarded to the Deputy Grand Secretary's office on or before the 27th of December in each year.

No memorial or other application can be received from any lodge which has not made the regular return of officers and members conformably with the rule above-mentioned, or which is three years in arrear of dues.

All lodges, the warrants of which were issued after the 27th December, 1845, and every other lodge having more than thirty subscribing members, shall pay annually to the general funds of the Order the sum of one pound as Grand Lodge dues.

All dispensations obtained from the Grand Master, his Deputy, or the Grand Lodge, are chargeable with the sum of one pound each.

No person shall be initiated as a Mason who cannot read and write.

Every subscribing member is entitled to retire from his lodge, and if a Master Mason, to obtain his Grand Lodge certificate, on making a regular application for that purpose, provided the lodge to which he belongs has no just grounds for refusing such certificate; and in all such cases of retirement from the lodge, the name of the brother so retiring shall be sent to the Grand Secretary with the next returns; otherwise, if the lodge should at any time afterwards be suspended or cancelled, such member having so retired will become suspended and deprived of his rights until restored by the Grand Lodge, according to the provision of the 19th law, section iv.

If a candidate proposed for admission is in any manner maimed, lame, or defective, he shall not be initiated without a dispensation from the Grand Master, his Deputy, or the Grand Lodge, to be applied for by memorial, wherein the defect shall be clearly specified, under a penalty of three pounds to be paid by the offending lodge.

With all cases of suspension or expulsion sent for confirmation, the cause of such sentence must be fully stated, and the report signed by the Master, both Wardens, and Secretary, with the lodge seal affixed; and no brother shall be suspended or excluded by his lodge until he shall have been first summoned to attend and answer the charges brought against him.

Any Freemason assisting at the works of a lodge not warranted by the Grand Lodge, or whose warrant has been suspended or cancelled, shall be liable to exclusion from the rights of Masonry.

If a warrant be suspended or cancelled, no member thereof at the time of its having incurred such penalty is entitled to visit or join any other lodge without special permission of the Grand Lodge, obtained on memorial; and a warrant when cancelled for any cause whatsoever, cannot be restored or revived for less than the cost of a new warrant, which is seven pounds sterling.

A new and revised edition of the Ahiman Rezon, or Book of the Constitution of Freemasonry, has been published, and may be had from the Deputy Grand Secretary, price five shillings, or sent to the country by post for five shillings and sixpence. The Grand Lodge laws only, published separate, price one shilling.

The regular quarterly meetings of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter are held at the Freemasons' Hall, in Dublin, on the third Wednesday in February, May, August, and November in every year; at which meetings country chapters may be represented by proxies appointed under the seal of their respective chapters, when their regular officers cannot attend. All applications for warrants are to be addressed to John Fowler, Esq., Grand Scribe to the Order, the charge for which is two pounds, and two shillings each for the registry of old members.

All Royal Arch dispensations are charged one pound each.

Mark Masons are under the protection of the G.R. Arch Chapter, and now to be registered in its books. Lodges holding R. Arch warrants are alone qualified to give the Mark Mason's degree, certificates for which may be had separately at two shillings and sixpence each, or included in the Royal Arch certificates without extra charge.

The regular quarterly meetings of the Grand Encampment of High Knights Templar are held at the Freemasons' Hall, in Dublin, on the third Wednesday in January, April, July, and October in every year, at which meetings country encampments may be represented by proxies, regularly appointed, when their officers cannot attend; and all applications for warrants are to be addressed to John Fowler, Esq., Registrar and Secretary to the Order.

All Knights Templar dispensations are charged one pound each.

The regular quarterly meetings of the Supreme Grand Council of Rites are held at the Freemasons' Hall, in Dublin, on the third Wednesday in March, June, September, and December in every year, at which meetings country chapters, &c., may be represented by proxies, when their officers cannot attend. Applications for warrants to be addressed to John Fowler, Esq.

A compact has been entered into between the Grand Lodge of Ireland, the Grand Royal Arch Chapter, the Grand Encampment of High Knights Templar, and the Supreme Grand Council of Rites for Ireland, by which it is agreed that any brother excluded, suspended, or restored to the rights of Masonry by one of the contracting parties, shall, on the case being officially communicated to the others, be by them severally excluded, suspended, or restored, as the case may be, without any further inquiry or investigation.

Since commencing "Freemasonry in Ireland," we have had a copy of the Constitutions sent us for perusal, dated 1839 (108 pp.). Its title is as follows:—"Constitutions of Freemasonry, or Ahiman Rezon; to which are added certain Lectures, Charges, and a Masonic Ritual. Dublin: Printed by Bro. William Underwood." The ceremony of dedication of Freemasons' Hall is likewise inserted. The Masonic Ritual referred to was compiled by Bro. the Venerable Archdeacon Walter Bishop Maut, Prov. G. Master of Carie, &c. In THE FREEMASON for April 22nd, page 249, we notice an interesting communication from "Veritas," entitled "The Order of Misraim," in which that voluminous rite is shown to have been recognised by the authorities in Ireland in 1848, and of which Order His Grace the Duke of Leinster is a member. The Constitutions of 1839 provide for the working and recognition of the "Order of Misraim," as follows:—

The Supreme Grand Council of Rites shall consist of the officers of the several high degrees of Masonry in Ireland, or three representatives from each, duly accredited, who shall be summoned to assist at all its meeting and deliberations, that is to say, the officers of representatives of

- The Grand Inspectors-General,
- The Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret,
- The Order of Misraim,
- The Grand Council of the Knights of the Sun,
- The Illustrious College of Philosophical Masons,
- &c. &c. &c.

We have before us now a copy of a certificate issued by the Grand Master of the Knight Templars of Scotland in 1823, which is signed "Alex. Deuchar, G.M., G. Com. of Scot. and 90° Mis." These quotations serve to show the recognition by well-known bodies of the "Rite of Misraim," and prove its position to be more than simply a rite without authority. We do not, however, desire by these remarks to be considered as believing in the boasted antiquity of this or any other rite. So far as these rites are concerned, all are comparatively of yesterday, as the first Grand Lodge was not instituted until the 18th century, and therefore all additions are proportionately later. Before the 18th century, undoubtedly, speculative Masonry existed, and minutes exist, dating before the "Revival," of lodges mainly supported by gentlemen. We have yet, however, to learn that "degrees" were worked anything approaching the grandeur and extent of subsequent creations.

THE HIGH GRADES IN IRELAND.

By HISTORICUS.

Bro. William James Hughan deserves the hearty thanks of the Craft for the interesting matter he has brought under our notice in regard to the past history of Freemasonry in Ireland, and your pages will thus afford very important information to the future historian. In this I am tempted humbly to follow in his footsteps. At the present day there exists many grievances in the Emerald Isle, not the least of which is the suppression of the Masonic press—in all cases of arbitrary proceedings the brethren must sit down, crushed, for there is there no Masonic public opinion before which they can bring their grievances. I hope shortly to see the impartial FREEMASON strongly supported in Ireland, and trust to see them as regular correspondents expressing their opinions pro and con.

Many of your readers would be wholly unaware that the constitution of the Irish Grand Lodge is totally opposed to the wholesome English system, which has invariably refused to form any alliance, or give any countenance, to the higher degrees. I conceive that it is to our Grand Lodge views in this respect that Freemasonry is indebted for its vast tolerance and expansion. At the Union in 1813 the English Grand Lodge went one step too far, and recognised the Arch. It is a great pity that this recognition cannot now be got rid of; but it would be an evil day for English Freemasonry if the Grand Lodge was ever allowed to go beyond it. But in Ireland not only does the Grand Lodge form alliance with Mark and Arch Masonry, but Templary, Rose Croix, Kadosh, and the Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General—which latter, I hold, as professing certain powers under a forged charter of 1786, are no better than obtainers of money under false pretences. Thus, on the one hand, the Grand Lodge is made the abettors of a dishonourable order, and on the other, the Craft is groaning under a Masonic oligarchy, or Old Man of the Sea, of the most oppressive and intolerable character, which they are unable to shake off. A system of exclusiveness exists even in this dishonour, offensive and destructive of Masonic equality and true and proper Masonic feeling; all preferment is not grounded upon real worth and personal merit, but upon landed estates and acquired wealth. Therefore the Craft in Ireland rests upon a volcano which may at any moment burst forth, and lay the stately mansion in ruins.

Not only is this a true and accurate statement of affairs in Ireland; but there are even grave doubts as to the genuineness of the high grades, and the authority of the "Council of Rites," and it would seem an absolute certainty as to its spurious character. So that wherever we turn our eyes we find no relief, and are led to thank heaven that we practise our Masonry under the Craft Constitution of England. It is not, however, for us to deal with these matters; when the grievance becomes intolerable our Irish brethren will rid themselves of it.

Bro. Hughan has undertaken chiefly to explain the past history of Craft Masonry in Ireland, so that the present writer may be permitted to take up the high grades. The present generation were scarcely aware that these degrees were also rent asunder twenty-five years ago by a violent schism. A most interesting pamphlet has recently been forwarded to us from Ireland for publication, and, with your permission, extracts shall be forwarded therefrom to THE FREEMASON weekly. The title-page is as follows:—

"A few words upon the degree of Prince Grand Rose Croix, &c., &c., &c., with an account of the revival and legitimate transmission of that Order in Ireland from the fourteenth century to the present time; also of the irregular descent of the Council of Rites, from an expelled member of the Grand Chapter of Ireland. 'For ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make ye free'—John, 8th chap., 32nd verse. Dublin: Printed by H. W. Talbot, Lower Ormond Quay, 1843.

"This tract has been prepared for the use of the Grand Chapter, and of the several chapters connected therewith or constituted by warrant therefrom; and also for the information of all Freemasons who may feel interested concerning the title, descent, and claims of the Grand Chapter and in support of the genuine principles of Masonry in Ireland.

"The object of the present compilation is, that every impartial, intelligent, and upright member of the Craft into whose hands this tract may fall may be made acquainted with the history of the Grand Chapter, with that of the Chapter of Zimmerman, otherwise called the Council of Rites, and with the nature of the dispute between them—the unexampled forbearance of the Grand Chapter for a length of time (during which it laboured earnestly for peace and for the restoration of the long-lost harmony of the higher degrees) having hitherto left a great proportion of the Masonic community almost totally unacquainted with these matters, unpossessed of the particulars or details of more than one side of the question which has of late years been raised respecting its authority; and therefore easy to be misled by any misrepresentations, however erroneous and unfounded, which may be put forward upon the subject.

"In this manner truth has been in a great measure concealed—the Grand Chapter still, from day to day, and month to month, and year to year, cherishing in silence the declining hope (of which every trace is now vanished) that the reign of error and of an unjust monopoly would terminate without a struggle, and that the Council of Rites (a body and a name unknown to Masonry in any part of the world till within the last few years, and even now scarce known, save by its unrelenting persecution and universal proscription of the most distinguished and ancient chapters of England and Ireland) would, of its own accord, cease to adopt implicitly the suggestions of a few of its members, whom chance and their own restless tempers have elevated to an unnatural position of consequence among the Freemasons of Dublin, and whose perpetual schemes of ambition have been pursued with reckless indifference to the concord and prosperity of the Order, to the ancient and well-defined principles of its constitution and discipline, and to the preservation of that ineffable bond of social and moral union by which the pure system of universal Masonry has been enabled in all its various orders and degrees to resist the shocks of time, and to survive the wreck of so many human institutions."

ANTICIPATED VISIT of AMERICAN KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

For a long time we have been in correspondence with a gentleman in America who has undertaken the responsibility of conducting to Europe a large company of Knights Templar from the Alleghanies. The proposal was for a party of not less than forty, nor more than sixty, to come under our arrangements at Queenstown, and to be personally conducted through the best parts of Ireland, Scotland, England, Belgium, the Rhine districts, Switzerland, Italy, and return to England via France, the entire tour to occupy seventy-two days from the time of landing at Queenstown to the end of August. We were able to procure for them excellent terms by the Cunard mail steamers, of the first class, but they selected a new Company, and they are to sail from New York on the 3rd June, and are expected to arrive at Queenstown on the 12th of the same month. As early as the first week in April, thirty-six had paid the full amount of fares, &c., and, at least, fifty are expected.

The Knights Templar constitute one of the highest orders of Masons; and, although there is no corresponding order in Great Britain—we believe there is one in Palestine—other divisions of the "Free and Accepted" are preparing to give them a cordial welcome at Perth and other cities; and the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot will give them a reception at Alton Towers. It is arranged that they come in the characteristic costume of the Order, with insignia and decorations; and we may fairly anticipate for them the attentions and honours of a sensational party. As many are anxious to know when and where they may be expected, we subjoin the following itinerary of their tour:—

Monday, June 12, expected to land at Queenstown; Tuesday 13, Cork; Wednesday 14, Glengariff; Thursday 15, to Sunday 18, Killarney; Monday 19 and Tuesday 20, Dublin; Wednesday 21, Belfast; Thursday 22, Giant's Causeway; Friday 23, sail at night to Glasgow; Saturday 24 and Sunday 25, Glasgow; Monday 26, Glasgow to Oban, by Kyles of Bute and Crinan Canal; Tuesday 27, Oban to Staffa and Iona and back; Wednesday 28, Oban to Glenco and Banavie; Thursday 29, Banavie to Inverness, by Caledonian Canal; Friday 30, Inverness to Killickrankie, Pitlochry, Dunkeld, and Perth; &c.—Cook's Excursionist.

THE Earl of Carnarvon presided at the annual dinner of the Newspaper Press Fund on Saturday last. The attendance was numerous, and the pecuniary result good.

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE VI.

History has furnished so many illustrations of feminine heroism and devotedness as to admit of no possibility of a doubt of the ability of woman to contend against sudden and unexpected difficulties that may arise in the daily routine of life. These qualities, so essential in times of emergency, excite the warmest commendation, and have unmistakeable claims upon the consideration of all classes of men. Cynical minds may, however, traduce the demeanour of the sex, and may even strengthen their argumentative discourses by exceptional cases, but it nevertheless remains an unalterable fact that woman is endowed with many virtues of the highest value and importance. Woman in all her counselings, no matter whether these counselings are received in the stately mansion or 'neath the humble roof, manifests such discriminative power as to render the greatest assistance to man in solving the most embarrassing questions or problems affecting his interest; and has, furthermore, by her influence exalted his condition to a degree unattainable by other means. The writer, who has devoted much time to physiological pursuits, has, during his travels in both hemispheres, rarely discovered in the fair sex any reservation in the exhibition of certain qualities or attributes in the hour of tribulation, viz.: a resolute bearing, a meek and zealous regard to administer to the comforts of others, and a firm and conscientious reliance on the beneficence of the Supreme Governor of the Universe. How often have these graces won the silent admiration of man! In sickness or in health, in influence or in poverty—who has not experienced solace and delight from a communion with woman's gentle nature? Upon dreary plains, sandy deserts, storm-tossed waves, and blood-stained fields, or within or beyond the confines of civilisation, the presence of woman has invariably shed a lustre that has awakened the noblest susceptibilities of man. An author has said that "if the heart of a man is depressed with cares, the mist is dispelled when a woman appears." Many will readily accord with the sentiment so cogently expressed. No one with any pretensions to morality will demean himself by misrepresenting the sex, whose tender sway can but be regarded as the dispensation of an all-wise Providence. Poets have never tired to sing panegyrics in honour of woman, while theologians, philosophers, statesmen, essayists, and others, have, in their writings and speeches, recognised her fame, and have clearly established her title to the goodwill and esteem of mankind. A writer thus estimates woman's gifts:

"Faithful—as dog, the lonely shepherd's pride;
True—as the helm, the bark's protecting guide;
Firm—as the shaft that props the towering dome;
Sweet—as to shipwreck'd seamen land and home;
Lovely—as a child, the parents' sole delight;
Radiant—as morn, that breaks a stormy night;
Grateful—as streams, that, in some deep recess,
With crystal rills the panting traveller bless."

Can it be questioned that this proposition is illogical or extravagant? The sophist may discover in it no elegance, but the well-disposed will not be slow in acknowledging its legitimacy. The subject of woman's worth possesses, undoubtedly, such peculiar charms and interest as will ever excite the pleasantest feelings and memories of the sage, the man of letters, and every one who has gratitude and regard for the infinite wisdom of the Creator.

The Order of the Eastern Star has chosen from the Sacred Volume Queen Esther to represent the third degree of the sisterhood. The intelligence and skilfulness displayed by her in the important mission to King Ahasuerus are proverbial, and will ever constitute a bright page in the annals of feminine grace and courage. That she averted the terrible visitation upon the Jewish people by her influence no one can for a moment call in question. Some may assume that the fate of Haman was too severe, but it must be apparent to most persons that the punishment was, under the circumstances, merited and well-approved by the people at the time, for it must be borne in mind that no sympathy can be justifiably extended to men plotting the destruction of human life in order to gratify ambitious and evil passions. The case of Haman requires no particularization, having so frequently been explained in sermons and other compositions. Moreover, I consider it quite irrelevant for me to reproduce the details of the history of Esther, as they are tolerably well known to Christian worshippers and others. Suffice it to say that her qualities offer overwhelming evidence in support of the observations made in the first part of this article. I will no longer brook delay in placing before the reader the particulars of the third point of the signet belonging to the "female Masons."

THE THIRD POINT.

ESTHER, OR THE WIFE'S DEGREE.

[The Symbol of the Crown and the Sceptre.]

"Nobly she stands, a queen; the glittering band,
Mark of a royal state, beneath her hand;
She points the silken robe with peerless grace,
Pure as her soul and pallid as her face;
Then reaches to the sceptre, whence is drawn
The kingly pardon she has bravely won."

The scriptural illustration runs thus:—
"Then said the King unto her, What wilt thou, Queen Esther? and what is thy request? It shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom."

The point of the signet is coloured white. The tinge is represented by the white lily, the plant being symbolical of the white garments worn by Esther. The emblems are the crown and sceptre. The officer presiding at the ceremony delivers a discourse, of which the following is the substance:—

"The principles and obligations of Freemasonry are fraternal, and we, as Master Masons, are taught to respect fidelity to kindred and friends. We are introduced into Freemasonry by a friend, vouched for by a friend, conducted by a friend. Friendly hands support us through life, close our eyes in death, and consign us tenderly to the bosom of mother earth. There is no offence in Masonry more degrading than a breach of friendship. Therefore, when we find in history a person exalted in station, rich in this world's goods, learned and beloved, who casts all these advantages aside in her fidelity to kindred and friends, we seize upon that character as our own. We adopt and protect it. We hail it as a Masonic character, and we claim whatever credit or honour may be associated with it. Such a character, forcibly delineated, we discover in the Book of Esther, under the title of Esther. And we have so surrounded the efforts of that noble and heroic woman with emblems, legends, and tokens of recognition as to make of it a section in Adoptive Masonry. The history of Esther, as composing a degree of the Eastern Star, is thus given: Her husband, Ahasuerus, otherwise termed Artaxerxes, was king of Persia, a monarch of vast power, a man faithful to his word, and devotedly attached to the queen-consort. The heroine Esther was a Jewish damsel of the tribe of Benjamin. The family had not returned to Judea after the permission given by Cyrus, and she was born beyond the Tigris, about five hundred years before the Christian era. Her parents being dead, Mordecai, her uncle, took care of her education. After Ahasuerus had divorced Queen Vashti, search was made throughout Persia for the most beautiful women, and Esther was one selected. She found favour in the eyes of the King, who married her with royal magnificence, bestowing largesses and remissions of tribute on his people. Her matchless beauty having attracted the attention of the King, her virtues secured his love, but her wonderful genius gained his permanent admiration and respect. No woman has ever left behind her a better record of wisdom than Esther. It is a standing tradition among her people that, as Solomon was to man, so was Esther to women, the wisest of her sex. The more intimately the King became acquainted with her mental powers, the more he respected them. There was no problem of state so intricate that she could not aid him to solve. In time she became his confidant, and shared with him in the greatness of the kingdom. These circumstances enabled her in a season of peril to save her nation from destruction. The enemies of the Jews, who were numerous and powerful, had brought false accusations before the King, and persuaded him to utter an edict that, upon a fixed day, the entire race throughout all Persia should be exterminated. The chosen people of God were doomed to be extirpated from the face of the country. The instrument to avert so great a calamity was the heroine Esther. No sooner did she learn this cruel edict than she promptly resolved to save her people, or perish in the same destruction. The King had often admitted his indebtedness to her counsels, and pledged his royal word to grant her any request she might make of him, even 'to the half of the kingdom,' and Esther now resolved to test his sincerity, and appeal to him, even at the risk of her own life, to reverse the horrible edict. She attired herself in her white silken robes, placed a brilliant crown upon her head, gathered her maidens around her, and went boldly and in state to the palace of the King at Shushan. It was a day of grand council, a gathering of the governors, princes, and officers of Persia. The dependent nations had sent in their deputations to pay homage and tribute, and the royal guards thronged the ante-chambers of the palace. It was a standing law of that place that none should enter the king's presence without summons, under penalty of death, and the sentinels, as the Queen passed, reminded her of this, and warned her of her danger. But she bade them stand aside, and so, pale but firm, she passed through the vestibule into the great council chamber. The scene was magnificent. The King upon his throne of gold and ivory, the gorgeous equipages of his officers, and the splendour of the apartment itself, all made up a display rarely equalled and never surpassed. Through all the crowd of courtiers Esther boldly passed, and amidst the deadly silence of the observers stood up before the King. Pale with fasting and sleeplessness, but not with fear, her cheeks emulated the whiteness of her silken robes. She fastened her eye fearlessly upon the King, who, angry at the violation of the law, frowned sternly upon her. It was the crisis of her life. The wise woman felt it to be so, and at once reminded him of his former pledges by a method understood between them. She saw his golden sceptre bend towards her, and hastened to secure her pardon by coming forward, kneeling, and laying her hand upon it. Graciously said the King, 'What wilt thou, Queen Esther? and what is thy request? It shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom.' The admiring crowds applauded the generosity of their monarch, and as he placed her beside him on the throne gave utterance to loud expressions of admiration at her beauty, discretion, and favour with the King. The sacred narrative informs of the consummate tact with which Esther pursued the advantages she had gained. She achieved a complete success and saved the nation, which to this day keeps an annual festival in her honour. The colour white alludes to the silken robes of Esther, emblematical of the spotless purity of her character. The emblem of the crown reminds us of the queenly state of Esther, and of the manner in which she hailed the notice of the King. The sign alludes . . . . . The pass is used to recall the grand sacrifice and triumphant success of the heroic Esther."

The subjoined lines are purposed as a tribute to Queen Esther:—

"See, oh King, the suppliant one,
Pale and trembling at the throne!
See the golden crown she bears,
And the silken robe she wears;
Whiter, brighter than their sheen
Is the woman's soul within.

Mercy's golden wand extend,
While her gentle head shall bend;
Meekly o'er thy sceptre now,
Pardon, favour, bounty show;
Naught in all thy broad domain
Like the woman's soul within!"

The fourth degree will shortly receive attention.

THE PAST MASTER'S JEWEL.

By Bro. J. DANIEL MOORE, M.D., F.L.S., G.S.B. England.

[A Lecture delivered in the Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281, Lancaster, 10th May, 1871, on the occasion of the presentation of a P.M. jewel to Bros. John Hatch, I.P.M., and J. L. Whimpray, Senior P.M.]

The first duty of a Worshipful Master on his being installed in the high and honourable position of the chair of the lodge, is to invest the retiring Master with the collar and jewel of a Past Master, significant of the high rank and position amongst the rulers of the Craft which he is henceforth to occupy. The form of the jewel is well known to you all, consisting as it does of a square, the distinctive bearing of the Master, with a pendant on which is represented the figure of the Forty-seventh Problem of the first Book of Euclid, denominated in schoolboy phraseology as "Pythagoras's Windmill." In noticing for a few minutes this evening the Past Master's jewel, I have chosen rather to dwell upon the pendant, the distinctive bearing of a Past Master, than upon the square itself, as that implement will be more thoroughly considered in its position as one of the moveable jewels of the lodge, and the symbol of the Master's office. The object to be enunciated in this figure is the fact that in any right-angled triangle, the square which is described upon the side subtending the right angle, is equal to the squares described upon the sides which contain the right angle, and the problem itself, from its great utility in making calculations and drawing plans for building, has been designated the "carpenter's theorem." The discoverer of the important principles involved in this enunciation was Pythagoras, whose name is deservedly illustrious, amongst other reasons, for his profound researches and discoveries as to the nature and properties of mathematical figures. Pythagoras, we are told, was the son of a sculptor, and was born at Samos B.C. 568. His tutor, Pherecydes, of Syrus, was esteemed as one of the greatest men of his time, and the first who taught the immortality of the soul. On the death of his master (Pherecydes), Pythagoras travelled into Egypt in search of scientific knowledge, and gaining the confidence of the Magi and priests, was indoctrinated into their mysteries and the interpretation of their symbolic writings, having previously undergone a most discouraging course of rigid discipline. After studying the customs and making himself Master of the sciences as taught in Egypt, at Thebes, Memphis, Crete, and Sparta, he returned to Samos laden with knowledge, which he was well calculated to turn to the greatest advantage. He then founded his system in his native island, and so rigid were his regulations that a strict silence of five years was required before a candidate could be admitted to a knowledge of his system which was only attained after having submitted to a most searching examination. The mysteries inculcated under his immediate direction are considered to be the most perfect approximation to the original science of Freemasonry which could be accomplished by a heathen philosopher bereft of the aid of revelation. Consequently, the members of our Fraternity are pleased to consider him, what he certainly was, in the true spirit of the words, an "Ancient Mason." Much ambiguity attends the reason for the figure of this proposition of Euclid being affixed as a pendant to the Past Master's jewel, and Dr. Oliver, in his learned and voluminous works on the subject of Freemasonry, scarcely gives it any mention. There is, however, but little doubt that it is in some way associated with the name and acquirements of the distinguished philosopher by whom its application was discovered. Indeed, it is said that Pythagoras was so much elated at the discovery typified in this figure (which has been aptly designated the Eureka of Pythagoras) that he made an offering of an hecatomb, or sacrifice of a hundred oxen, to the gods, and Mackay, in his excellent Lexicon of Freemasonry, continues to inform us "that the devotion to learning which this religious act indicated in the mind of the ancient philosopher has induced Masons to adopt the problem as a memento instructing them to be lovers of the arts and sciences." This, then, is the best reason that I can give for its adoption as one of our symbols; but, to my mind, something more is required in its teaching than that it should instruct Past Masters "to be lovers of the arts and sciences," as in the lecture on the tracing-board of the second degree and elsewhere the Fellow-Craft Freemason is instructed in the seven liberal arts and sciences, and is enjoined to make them his future study, in order that he may be the better enabled to do his duty as a Mason and estimate the wonderful works of the Almighty. The teaching of this figure Masonically, according to an ancient work on Freemasonry, refers to the connection which exists amongst the members of our Fraternity with reference to their relation to each other in their several conditions of health and indigence, and, in fact, to the principles upon which our order is founded—brotherly love, relief, and truth I was favoured some months since by the energetic Bro. Dr. Hopkins, P.P.J.W., with a copy of this explanation, which, however, has since been published in one of the Masonic journals. It is as follows: "As the formation of this figure depends on the connection of the several lines, angles, and triangles, which complete the whole, so Freemasonry depends on the unanimity and integrity of its members, the inflexibility of their charitable pursuits, and the immutability of the principles upon which the Society is established—namely, brotherly love, relief, and truth. The position is clear, and, therefore, in a symbolical sense, we demonstrate that some of our brethren, from exalted situations in life, may be considered as standing on a basis of earthly bliss emblematical of the greater square which subtends the right angle; others, whom Providence has blessed with means to tread the flowery paths of life, in affluence and ease, are descriptive of the squares which stand on the sides that form the right angle. The several triangles inscribed within the squares are applicable to those happy beings who enjoy every social comfort, and never exceed the bounds of mediocrity; whilst those who have the heartfelt satisfaction of administering to the wants of the industrious and indigent may be compared to the angles which surround and support the figure. The lines which form the figure itself remind us of those unfortunate brethren who, by a series of inevitable events, are rendered incapable of providing even the most common necessaries of life, unless aided by a cheerful and ready assistance from their more fortunate companions. Hence, by connecting the several links together, and bringing the unfortunate and industrious into contact with the affluent and exalted, we form a figure descriptive of the true basis on which our ancient brethren raised the superstructure of Freemasonry; a basis which no mortal power can shake, the bosom of all gentle charity. This Heaven-born virtue is assuredly a Divine attribute, a sublime emotion, that fully demonstrates the existence of a spiritual being, and animates us with the cheering hope of finally becoming partakers of a glorious immortality." In addition to the sentiments of charity, enjoined in this address on the jewel of a Past Master, let us also remind us that although the responsibility and honour of ruling the lodge has passed from us with the investiture of the newly-installed Master, we are by no means exempted from the discharge of great and important duties, and that we should add to the moral inculcated by the square a more intimate knowledge of the arts and sciences, acknowledged by and cultivated in a true research after the hidden mysteries of Freemasonry; and that so far from lapsing into repose, after having occupied for the prescribed period the throne of K.S., the Past Master should always be ready and willing not only to attend when called into consultation with his fellow-rulers in the Craft, but also by his example and teaching, to render such assistance to the junior members of our Fraternity as may tend to stimulate their arduous and direct their endeavours, and thereby add to the list of brilliant luminaries whose names are recorded in the annals of Freemasonry. We are told that to be invested with the jewel of a W.M., as an emblem of its office, is the highest honour that the lodge can confer upon any of its members. So it is in a certain sense; but as the authorities of the Grand Lodge permit the wearing of honorary jewels, in my estimation the highest honour that can be conferred, is not the investiture of an untried Worshipful Master with the insignia of his office, but is to be found in the lodge decorating the breast of a worthy and Worshipful Past Master who has performed the important duties appertaining to the chair of the lodge with zeal, courtesy, integrity and assiduity, so as justly to have earned the respect and approbation of the brethren; one who has spared neither time nor trouble in promoting the study of our ritual, and who, like some of the Past Masters of this lodge, including our own I.P.M., have by their conduct and judgment, won the gratitude and brotherly affection of all who have worked under their rule; and these qualifications, I think, cannot be more fitly acknowledged than by decorating the breast of such a Past Master, with the square, the emblem of Mastership in the Craft, together with this figure representing the Eureka of Pythagoras.

OUR thanks are due to Bro. B— for a copy of the Mot d'Ordre of Paris, and we hope to avail ourselves of his kindness next week.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Royal Athelstan Lodge, No. 19.—This ancient and well-known lodge held its last meeting of the session on the evening of the 11th inst., at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. The lodge was opened by Bro. William A. B. Williams, W.M., and there were also present Bros. S. Gale, P.M.; J. Savage, P.M.; B. Starling, P.M.; Treas.; Witham M. Bywater, P.M., Hon. Sec.; C. Tyler, T. L. Fox, M. Levinson, J. Dix, G. Rice, D. Nicholson, W. Pound, G. Campion, T. H. Potter, and J. Pollard, P.M.'s; Dr. J. Whitmore, P.M., S.W.; T. S. Stevens, J.W.; G. C. Ring, S.D.; C. Coleman, J.D.; J. C. Goldsmith, I.G.; and many others. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed, after which a ballot was taken for Mr. C. S. Barker, which proved unanimous in favour of his admission. The W.M., in an admirable manner, raised Bro. M. C. T. Stevenson to the third degree. Bro. Savage then took the chair, and in his usual faultless manner initiated his friend Mr. C. S. Barker into Freemasonry. The W.M. having resumed the chair, the necessary arrangements were made for the summer festival a slight alteration in a by-law was made, a joining brother was proposed, and the lodge was closed. A first-class banquet followed, and the usual toasts were heartily honoured. Bros. Gover and Hepworth Dixon responded in excellent speeches for the visitors; Bro. Saunders, S.G.D., having previously returned thanks for the Grand Officers. Bro. J. Savage, P.G.D., on behalf of the lodge, presented Bro. J. Pollard with a handsome gold P.M.'s jewel, bearing a suitable inscription, in acknowledgment of his services as W.M. Bro. Pollard, in appropriate terms, thanked the brethren for their gift. After a few hours had been agreeably spent the brethren separated. Bro. Saunders, Gover (W.M. 1), H. Dixon, F. Walters, and Morgan were amongst the visitors.

Bedford Lodge, No. 157.—The last regular meeting of the season of this old lodge was held on Friday, the 12th inst., Bro. John Hills, W.M., presiding. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. G. Brown, P.M., by desire took the chair, and in a very impressive manner passed his friend Bro. H. Sach to the second degree. A candidate for initiation was absent through ill-health. Bro. J. Hills resumed the chair, and it was decided to hold an emergency meeting on the second Friday in June, when the preliminary arrangements for the summer festival will be made. The lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to a good banquet. The usual toasts were proposed and responded to, Bros. Daylis and Worthington replying for the visitors; some songs were well sung, and after the usual happy evening had been spent the brethren separated. Bros. Millis (P.M.), T. Cubitt (P.G.S.D. Middlesex), L. Drew, W. H. Baylis (W.M. 9), F. Walters (P.M. 73), Worthington, Carey, &c., were also present.

Phoenix Lodge, No. 173.—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall on Saturday, the 13th inst., when the lodge was duly opened by Bro. G. R. Green, W.M., who afterwards raised two candidates in a very able and impressive manner. Bro. Watson, P.M., P.G. Steward, then took the chair, and installed Bro. Tansley Witt, W.M.-elect, as Master for the ensuing year. A P.M.'s jewel was voted to Bro. Green for his past services; also a handsome sum to a worthy brother present in acknowledgment of his services as Installing Master for many years. The brethren then adjourned to the Tavern, where a first-rate dinner was served, and the care of the worthy Treasurer, Bro. George Wilson, P.M., to promote the comfort of all was unremitting. Several capital songs were sung during the course of the evening, and the principal toasts were responded to by Bros. T. A. Adams, P.G. Purs.; G. J. Kane, P.M. 766, P. Prov. G. Sec., Warwickshire; R. Wentworth Little, W.M. 1293, Prov. G. Sec. Middlesex; T. Mason, P.M. 186; C. Chard, P.M. 907, W. Hilton, J.W. 1351.

South Middlesex Lodge, No. 858.—This lodge met on Thursday, the 27th ult., at Beaufort House, West Brompton. Bro. W. H. Weaver, W.M., in the chair, supported by the whole of his officers. Bro. Walter Wellsman was formally installed into the chair of King Solomon for the ensuing year by Bro. Radcliffe, P.M., in a most effective manner, which elicited the approbation of the members of the lodge as also of a large number of Past Masters and brethren, visitors to the lodge. The newly-installed W.M. then appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Worthington, P.M., S.W.; Jones, J.W.; Storey, S.D.; Johnson, J.D.; Pamphilon, I.G. The W.M. then in a very impressive manner initiated Messrs. F. Crane, C. J. Singleton, and F. Egan into Freemasonry, the clear and unaffected tone, and the well modulated enunciation, elicited a large meed of approval for the W.M.'s excellent style. After the close of the lodge, the brethren partook of an excellent banquet, served from the cuisine attached to the lodge; the W.M. most ably presided, and in his own happy and agreeable manner was the means of causing a delightful evening to the brethren. In his welcome to the visitors, the W.M.'s kindly remarks were eloquently replied to by Bro. Dwarber, S.W. of the Constitutional Lodge. During the evening a very handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to I.P.M., Bro. Weaver. Bros. Higgs and J. Dawson contributed much to the pleasures of the evening by some excellent singing.

PROVINCIAL.

Ipswich.—St. Luke's Lodge, No. 225.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 10th inst. Present: Bros. G. S. Golding, W.M.; C. Byford, S.W.; J. Prentice, J.W.; J. Talbot, S.D.; W. Skinner, J.D.; A. C. Barber, Sec.; C. Davy, P.M., as I.G.; G. Spalding, Tyler; S. Ellis and C. Godball, P.M.'s; W. T. Westgate; J. W. Robb, I.P.M.; Jos. Whitehead, S. B. King, John Turner; visitor, W. Parsons, 959. The lodge was duly opened and minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Minutes were also ordered to be entered of several presentations to the lodge of improved furniture, &c. There being no other business before the lodge, Bro. W. T. Westgate, P.M., gave the explanation of the tracing-board of the second degree. A brother was proposed as a joining member, and the lodge was closed with solemn prayer. The brethren, to the number of about twenty, then retired from labour to refreshment, and a pleasant evening, interspersed with song, toast and sentiment.

BATLEY, YORKS.—Nelson of the Nile Lodge, No. 264.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 1st inst., in the Freemasons' Hall, Batley. The W.M., Bro. Benjamin P. Packer, presided, assisted by his officers as follows: Bros. Parr, S.W.; Newsome, J.W.; Wm. Parker, S.D.; Heaton, J.D.; Talbot, Treas.; Brearey, Sec.; M. Parker, I.G.; Preston, D.C.; A. Parker, Org.; Blakeley, Gomersall, Bailey, J. J. Parker, and J. Parker, jun., P.M.'s; and a good attendance of members. Visitors: Bros. Wm. Ward (W.M. 971), Joseph Terry and George Speding, 971. The lodge was opened by the W.M. and the minutes of the previous regular meeting were read and confirmed. The business of the evening was then proceeded with, which comprised the initiation of Messrs. Dixon Hall, James Watson, and Wm. Cave, which was done by the W.M., Bro. Blakeley, P.M., giving the working tools and the ancient charge in his usual good manner. After this the brethren discussed the advisability of forming a Royal Arch Chapter in connection with the lodge, and a committee was appointed to carry out the same and report to the next lodge meeting. The lodge was then closed down in peace and harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the festive board, where harmony was kept up with spirit, and the usual toasts were duly honoured.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—A monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Wednesday, the 3rd instant, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Stretton, P.P.G. Reg., when there was a good attendance of members and visitors, including the Prov. Grand Master and Bros. the Rev. Dr. Haycroft, P.G.C., George Toller, P.G. Sec., T. H. Buzzard, W.M. 523, Dr. Clifton, Rev. W. T. Fry, and other brethren. The lodge having been opened, and the preliminary business transacted, the chair was taken by Bro. Kelly, P.G.M., who, after due examination, passed Bros. Wilkinson, Ellwood, and Edwards to the second degree, and afterwards initiated Mr. Charles James Worthington, the charge being given by Bro. Toller. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Bro. Wm. Pettifor, an old and highly-esteemed P.M. of the lodge and P.P.G.S.W., for past services; he has, to the regret of the brethren, been in ill-health for some months past, and he was nominated as an honorary member. A candidate having been proposed, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281.—The members of this old-established lodge assembled for their regular meeting at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on Wednesday, the 10th inst. The W.M., Bro. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., G.S.B. England, occupied the chair, and was supported by the following officers and brethren:—John Hatch, I.P.M.; Wm. Hall, S.W.; Wm. Fleming, J.W.; Edmund Simpson, P.M. and Secretary; Edward Airey, S.D.; Benjamin Mills, as J.D.; John Harrison, I.G.; J. Watson and Beeley, Tylers; Richard Taylor, Steward; J. L. Whimpray, G. Kelland, and E. Storey, P.M.'s; John Barrow, Jos. Barrow, J. Beesley, J. Bell, R. Bond, W. Bradshaw, C. Hartley, W. Heald, R. Jervis, J. Stanley, R. Harger, James Taylor, James Boltou, &c., &c. The lodge having been opened, minutes confirmed, and other business transacted, Bros. J. Taylor and J. Bolton gave full proof of their proficiency as E.A.P.'s, and were passed to the degree of F.C.; the former by the W.M., and the latter by Bro. J. Hatch, I.P.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. Hall, S.W.—The W.M. announced that in obedience to the summons received, he had, as the representative of the Lodge of Fortitude, attended the Grand Lodge of England on the 26th April, when it had pleased the M.W.G.M. to confer an honour upon him and upon the lodge by appointing him to the office of Grand Sword-bearer.—Bro. Simpson, P.M., in a somewhat eulogistic speech, in which he quoted from a leader in a previous number of THE FREEMASON, on Grand Lodge appointments, proposed, and Bro. E. Storey, P.M., seconded, a vote of congratulation to Bro. Dr. Moore on his appointment, and the brethren saluted him in due form as a Grand Officer of England. The W.M. then gave an address on the Past Master's jewel (which will be found on another page of our journal) which was listened to with great attention by the brethren. A Past Master's jewel of the value of five guineas was voted and presented to Bro. John Hatch, the zealous and energetic Immediate Past Master of the lodge; and a jewel of the same value, or an equivalent sum of money to be devoted to one of our excellent Masonic Charities, was voted to Bro. Whimpray, the senior Past Master, who had attended the lodge during the last three years; that estimable brother had presided over the lodge in the years 1843, 1851 and 1866, and desired that the sum should be given to one of our Charities. On the next evening that time will permit, the W.M. purposes to deliver a lecture on "The Ballot in our Lodges."

SOUTHPORT.—Lodge of Unity, No. 613.—This flourishing lodge held its regular meeting on Monday, the 1st inst., when more than thirty brethren assembled at the Masonic Hall, under the presidency of Bro. Dodd, W.M. The minutes having been confirmed, Bro. Howell, P.G. Treas. Stafford, &c., was elected a joining member. Bros. J. Sutton, T. Crook, and J. Ellis were raised, the ceremony being performed by the W.M. in a most solemn and impressive manner. Refreshment followed labour, and the brethren separated after spending a very agreeable evening.—A well-attended Lodge of Emergency was held on the 8th inst., when Bros. Sloan and Hirst were raised to the third degree by the W.M.

SUNDERLAND.—Williamson Lodge, No. 949.—The annual meeting of this lodge, for the purpose of installing the W.M. for the ensuing twelve months, was held in the lodge-room at the Royal Hotel, Sunderland, on Monday, May 1st. After the minutes of the last general lodge and of the Permanent Committee meeting (the latter recommending a donation to the Girls' School and the enrolment of the lodge on the lists of annual subscribers to the Sunderland Infirmary and the Sunderland Orphan Asylum) had been confirmed, two candidates were balloted for, and being accepted, and in attendance, were duly initiated. The W.M.-elect, Bro. W. Liddell, was then presented to the W.M. Bro. R. Hudson, P.G.D.C., to receive the benefit of installation, and was duly placed in the chair of K.S. in the manner prescribed by ancient usage. The brethren having saluted the W.M. in the usual form, he invested the following officers:—Bros. R. Hudson, I.P.M.; W. Bryans, S.W.; J. H. Coates, J.W.; R. W. Halfknight, P.M., Treas.; J. Barlow, Sec.; J. H. Sanderson, S.D.; T. Atkinson, J.D.; J. Eggleston, I.G.; A. Forrest, D.C. and Org.; J. Thompson, Tyler; C. F. Austin and R. Ward, Stewards; R. Shadforth and C. Bell, Auditors. The whole ceremony of installation was worked by the outgoing W.M., Bro. Hudson, with that care for which he has become noted during his year of office, and he threw the same zeal, heartiness, and ability into the performance of this duty that he has brought to bear during the past twelve months in the discharge of the multifarious and onerous duties attached to the Master's chair in every lodge. Among the large number of visitors present were the W.M., Bro. Wiener, M. Douglass (P.M., P.P.G.J.D.), T. Elwen (P.M., P.P.G.S.B.), R. Sangster (P.M., P.P.G.P.), R. Dixon (P.M.), and several members of St. John's, No. 80; the W.M. (Bro. Skelton), M. Allison (P.M.), and several members of the Palatine Lodge, No. 97; members of the Phoenix Lodge, No. 94, and St. Peter's (Newcastle), No. 481. Among the members of the lodge were Past Masters R. W. Halfknight, P.P.G.P.; W. Adamson; L. Chatt, P.P.G.P.; A. Cooke, P.P.S. of W.; and J. Trewhett, P.P.G.R.—The annual festival to celebrate the installation was held in the lodge-room on Monday evening, May 8th, when a large number of visitors and brethren were present. After ample justice had been done to the very substantial dinner provided by Bro. Richardson, the customary, loyal, Masonic, and other toasts were duly given and responded to. Bro. A. Forrest, O., presided at the piano, and to his efforts and those of Bros. Ferry and Giesicke the brethren are indebted for a very excellent musical treat.

BARNET.—Acacia Lodge, No. 1309.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Railway Hotel, Potter's Bar, Middlesex, on Wednesday, 10th inst. Bro. Frederick Walters, W.M., presided. He, in his usual proficient manner, raised one to the third and passed three brothers to the second degree, and then installed his successor, Bro. George James Loe, as W.M., who appointed as his officers: Bros. F. Walters, I.P.M.; J. H. Butten, S.W.; E. Richardson, J.W.; E. Sillifant, P.M., Treas. (re-invested); G. Cattell, P.P.G.J.D. Northampton, P.M., Sec. (re-invested); Clemmas, S.D.; C. F. Hall, J.D.; T. Barnard, I.G.; G. Corfe, D.C.; J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler (re-invested). Bro. F. Walters then delivered the charges to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren, and, when concluded, was rewarded with hearty applause, and a vote of thanks to be entered on the lodge minute book, for the admirable and correct manner he had performed the ceremony of installation. Vote of thanks, to be entered on the lodge minute book, was given both to the Treasurer and the Secretary for the correct and satisfactory manner they had performed their duties. Bro. F. Walters, P.M., announced that as the lodge allowed him to select how the five guineas was to be spent which had been voted to him for a testimonial for his services as the first W.M., he would wish it to be given to the "Little" Testimonial, as he was a brother they all knew (being one of their members), and to know him was to respect him. Several joining members were proposed and some candidates for initiation, and the lodge was closed. There were, as usual here, a large number of visitors present. The usual good banquet was served, and, after an agreeable evening well spent, the brethren separated.

ROYAL ARCH.

METROPOLITAN.

Pannure Chapter, No. 720.—A convocation of this chapter was held at the Horns' Tavern, Kennington, on Monday, the 8th inst., under the presidency of E. Comp. Edward Worthington, M.E.Z., supported by Comps. J. Nunn, P.Z., H.; R. H. Harvey, J.; H. C. Levander, P.Z., Treas.; James Stevens, P.Z., Scribe E.; and W. B. Church, P.S. Amongst other companions present were J. Reid, J. Thomas, and S. C. Davison, P.Z.'s; J. T. Niblett, Henry Smith, G. H. N. Bridges, G. Waterall, T. H. Pulsford, W. Worrell, A. Wolton, and M. S. Larham. The chapter having been opened in ancient form, Comps. J. Nunn, R. H. Harvey, and C. S. Davison were installed as M.E.Z., H., and J. respectively, and the following officers were invested: viz., Comps. H. C. Levander, P.Z., Treas.; Jas. Stevens, P.Z., Scribe E.; W. B. Church, Scribe N.; C. Hammerton, P.S.; and Bradley, Janitor. The P.S. deferred the appointment of his assistants until the ensuing meeting. Comp. J. Thomas, P.Z., P.G.D.C., was invested as D.C. Bros. Henry F. Hodges, of the Pannure Lodge, No. 720, and William J. Messenger, of the Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216, were balloted for as candidates for advancement, and being in attendance, were severally introduced and advanced to the supreme degree of R.A. A P.Z.'s jewel was presented to the retiring M.E.Z., Comp. Worthington, and all Masonic business being ended, the companions adjourned to banquet, provided with the usual liberality of Bro. Whittet. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, that of "The Past Principals of the Chapter" calling up every companion who had filled the chair of M.E.Z. since the foundation of the chapter. After a most enjoyable evening, the harmony of which was greatly enhanced by the musical performances of Comp. Weaver, who, with Comp. Everett, of Winchester, visited the chapter on this occasion, the companions separated.

PROVINCIAL.

WARRINGTON.—Chapter of Elias Ashmole, No. 148.—The regular convocation of this chapter was held on Monday evening last, at the chapter-rooms. The M.E.Z., Comp. D. W. Finney, was supported by Comps. John Bowes, Prov. G. Standard-Bearer, H.; William Mossop, J.; William Richardson, P. Soj.; W. S. Hawkins, Scribe E.; W. Sharp, Scribe N.; Robert Jackson, Asst. Soj.; John Harding, Asst. Soj.; Edwin Roberts, P. J. Edelsten, Rev. H. P. Stedman, William Smith, Richard Brierley, Thomas Auckland, William Crompton, Jabez George Hughes, and James Hannah, Janitor. The chapter was duly opened according to ancient custom by the Principals, when the minutes of the last convocation were read and confirmed. The ballot-box was then sent round respectively for Bros. W. Smith, P.M. 148; Rd. Brierley, and Thomas Auckland, as candidates for the mystic rites, and in each case it proved unanimously in favour. The three brethren being in attendance, they were severally admitted with due caution, and exalted by Comp. Bowes, the M.E.Z. delivering the symbolic lecture in an able manner. A long discussion then took place as to the desirability of raising the subscription, when it was decided not to do so; but to clear off the debt by special donations. Comp. Sharp, Scribe N., presented to the chapter a portrait of Elias Ashmole, beautifully framed in the Oxford fashion. A brother was proposed as a candidate, and there being no other business, the chapter was closed with the usual solemnities.

LINSLADE, BUCKS.—St. Barnabas' Chapter, No. 948.—The regular convocation of this chapter was held at the Elephant and Castle Hotel, on Thursday, the 11th inst. Comps. Rev. R. B. Fraser, as M.E.Z.; Gotto, as H.; Watson, as J.; and several other companions, were present. Visitor: Comp. John Bowes, P.Z., Prov. G.S.B. West Lancashire. The chapter was duly opened, the companions admitted, and the minutes read and confirmed. Two candidates were due for exaltation, but neither of them being in attendance, Comp. Watson, P.Z., delivered the historic, symbolic, and mystic lectures for the instruction of the companions. There being no further business, the chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to refreshment.

MARK MASONRY.

CARLISLE.—Cumberland Lodge, No. 60.—The Cumberland Lodge of Mark Masters, held their annual meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, Castle-street, Carlisle, on Friday se'night. Amongst the brethren present were: Bros. George G. Hayward, P.M. and G.J.G.; F. W. Hayward, P.M. and P.G.D.; William Murray, P.M. and P.G.S.; T. Blacklock, P.M. and P.G.D.; W. Johnston, P.M.; J. Porter, S.W. (W.M.-elect); W. Court, J.W.; William Pratchitt, M.O.; J. A. Wheatley, S.O.; and several other brethren. Only three candidates, Bro. William Thornton, of Lodge 1073, Keswick; Bros. Dr. George Shannon and Thomas McMechan, of Lodge 327, Wigton, being present for advancement, were duly prepared and advanced to this honourable degree by George G. Hayward, P.M. This being the annual meeting for the installation of the W.M., Bro. James Porter, the S.W., was presented and duly installed as the W.M. for the ensuing twelve months by the G.J.G. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers, after which he presented, in the name of the lodge, to George G. Hayward, P.M., G.J.G. of the Grand Lodge of England, &c., a handsome P.M.'s jewel for his very valuable services to this lodge. The lodge was then duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to partake of a banquet prepared by Mrs. McGowan at the Coffee House.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave, No. 44.—An emergency meeting of this conclave was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 10th inst., the M.P.S., Ill. Sir Kt. Kelly, Intendant-General for Leicestershire and Rutland, presiding. The following Sir Knights were also present: George Toller, V.E.; Partridge, R., as S.G.; Weare, J.G.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, H.P.; Baines, Prefect; Buzzard, as S.B.; Sculthorpe, Treas.; Barber, Herald; Bembridge, Sentinel; Amott, and Spencer. A ballot was taken for Bro. Dunn, as Sentinel, by dispensation, which was unanimously in his favour. There were eleven candidates due for installation, two only, however, were able to be present, viz., Bros. W. R. Bryan, of No. 1007, Loughborough, and John Thomas Thorp, of No. 523, Leicester, who were duly installed. The various charges on the delivery of the sword, or the jewel, tunic, and sword, as illustrating the three great watchwords of the order, &c., were delivered in the course of the ceremony by the M.P.S., after which the Viceroy gave the historical oration and the High Prelate the lecture illustrative of the religious and moral teachings of the order, and the special duties of its members. Some further propositions having been taken, the conclave was closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to the refectory.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Mount Calvary, or Early Grand Encampment of England.—An emergency meeting of this old encampment was held at Masons' Hall Tavern, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, on Thursday, the 11th inst., and was attended by Sir Kts. W. Stone, E.C.; J. G. Chancellor, P.E.C., W. Paas, P.E.C., Treas.; F. Binckes, P.E.C., Reg.; E. S. Stillwell, P.E.C.; J. Stohwasser, P.E.C.; S. Rosenthal (E.C. Grove Encampment), 1st C.; D. M. Dewar, 2nd C.; R. W. Stewart, Expert; E. Baxter, C. of L.; R. Wentworth Little, as S.B.; and W. H. Trego; with visiting Knights W. H. Wright, D.P.G.C. Lancashire; Prince, P.E.C.; and E. T. Inskip. Comps. Rev. Vivian H. Moyle, Jorga D. Larsen, and J. Cleaver were duly installed as Knights of the Temple. Sir Kt. Stewart gave notice that he should propose the removal of the encampment from Freemasons' Tavern to Masons' Hall Tavern at the next regular meeting, and the encampment was closed. A most sumptuous dinner was then served, under the personal supervision of Sir Kt. C. Gosden (who was installed in the encampment), and the utmost good feeling prevailed throughout the entire evening. We are glad to be able to state that the "Mount Calvary" is in a most flourishing condition, and is likely to continue so as long as the members pull together so amicably as they do at present.

Masonic Miscellanea.

BRO. S. C. HADLEY, C.C., took the chair at the anniversary dinner of the Coffee House Keepers' Society, on the 15th inst., at the London Tavern.

BRO. JOHN BOWES, P.M., P.Z., Past Prov. G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmorland, &c., was elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society at the last meeting of the society.

A BILL to incorporate the Mount Lebanon Lodge of Freemasons, Summerside, No. 984, passed the Legislative Council of Prince Edward's Island the end of last month. The Bill went through the House like "greased lightning," as our Yankee brothers would say.

MARK MASONRY.—The installation of Bro. Col. Burdett as P.G.M.M. of Middlesex and Surrey is arranged to take place on Friday, June 2, at Guildford. The M.W.G.M.M. will instal. The fact that the Bath and West of England Show will be going on at the time will no doubt prove an additional attraction.

THE installation of the Earl of Carnarvon as P.G.M.M. of Somerset is fixed to take place at Weston-super-Mare on the evening of Whit-Monday.

IT is intended to raise by subscription a sufficient amount to present a full-sized copy in marble of the bust of the M.W.P.G.M., the Earl of Zetland, K.T., by Bro. Morton Edwards, to the Grand Lodge, and also a copy to his lordship, both as a token of esteem as well as a memento of the twenty-six years' rule by the M.W.P.G.M. over the Craft. The bust, which his lordship sat for before retiring from the Grand Mastership, is in the full regalia of Grand Master, and is well known as being an excellent likeness and a fine work of art. Several distinguished and influential brethren have already signified their intention to subscribe, and it is proposed to make the movement sufficiently widespread to allow of the whole of the Craft from joining. Brethren wishing to take part are invited to send in their names to Bro. F. W. Koch, the acting Hon. Sec., at 7, Gower-street, Bedford-square, the office where the model of the bust may be seen. The committee is now being formed.

REPORT OF Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, & of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chests. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Adv't.]

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

ROYAL ARCH MASONRY.

WE disagree in toto with those brethren who entertain the opinion that the recognition of Royal Arch Masonry was an impolitic act on the part of the United Grand Lodge of England at the Union in 1813. Beyond doubt, the ancient subdivisions of the Craft were but three—the highest being the degree of Master Mason; but the mutilation of the latter necessitated the creation of a fourth, in which the imperfect revelations of the third degree were more fully explained and elucidated. We do not, of course, mean to convey that the dramatic arrangements of modern Royal Arch Masonry are necessary to a thorough comprehension of the mystery, although they are evidently not without their effect upon impressionable or plastic minds. But we contend that the lessons of the third degree, beautiful and practical as every brother will admit them to be, are nevertheless incomplete without the addition of the Royal Arch. As we pointed out recently, the central idea of all the pagan mysteries was the passage of man through the various toils and trials of life, and his ultimate apotheosis in the regions of light and perfection. This was a grand conception; but as one of our able correspondents on the subject observed, it was often disfigured by gross interpretations of the original sense. An Elysium of sensuous bliss—in which none of the entrancing sights and sounds of earth were wanting—was promised to the servant of the gods, nor were similar allurements overlooked in more modern creeds, whose hours beckon the true believer to the gates of Paradise. The third degree may therefore justly be said to illustrate the present condition as well as the future state of humanity; but the Royal Arch Degree carries us to a superior altitude of thought, imaging in reverential outline the nature and attributes of the Deity Himself. The one teaches self-knowledge—truly one of the most interesting branches of human study—while the other unveils the highest forms of wisdom and the divinest shapes of heavenly intelligence. If the one be more useful—speaking humanly—the other is more spiritual and sublime. If the one be the ladder of terrestrial hope, the other bears us up upon the wings of celestial joy. It would, therefore, be a fatal mistake to circumscribe the area of our Masonic investigations by the repudiation of the keystone of the structure—the Holy Royal Arch Degree as now practised in England.

It may be that the intense adoration of the Sacred Name which pervades the ritual of the degree is misunderstood by some superficial thinkers; it may be that its lofty idealism of the Supreme Being ill accords with certain modern rationalistic opinions. Be this as it may, we are not likely to part with the sacred legacy bequeathed us by our ancient brethren; but it behoves us to make better use of the precious gift. We must really learn and thoroughly understand the secrets and symbolism of the Royal Arch degree, as well as enforce a stricter attention to its ceremonial and formularies.

Now, this is unfortunately not the case at present. Many active Masons concentrate the whole of their energies on the promulgation of the Craft ceremonies and lectures, forgetting—if even they have ever acknowledged—the claims of the more philosophical Order. It might have been reasonably pleaded as an excuse for this apathy some few years ago that the same facilities for acquiring perfection, which were within the reach of every Craft Mason, did not exist in the Royal Arch. Now, however, we have several schools of instruction. Yet they are scantily attended, and the rare and valuable knowledge of the degree is confined to a very select few. A few months since we chronicled the formation of a "Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement" at Freemasons' Hall, and bore testimony to the unwearied exertions and ceaseless zeal of Companion Brett in the cause. We now take the opportunity of again appealing to our readers upon the subject of "more light," inasmuch as the new chapter is about to celebrate the close of its first session by holding a "public night," to which all companions of the Order will be welcomed, and which we hope will be very numerously attended. This meeting is fixed to take place on the 1st of June, and several Royal Arch Masons of eminence have promised their co-operation and assistance. The various expositions of R.A. mysteries will be given, and as usual among English Masons—if it be not heresy to say so—a carnal banquet will succeed the "feast of reason."

Have we said enough to induce our metropolitan companions to range themselves under the leading standards of the army of Israel upon the forthcoming occasion? Or must we descend to lower ground, and say that greater support and encouragement ought to be shown to the teachers of the Royal Art, if it were merely as an incentive to their arduous labours in the cause. We have no wish to see the study of the "blue" degrees neglected, far from it; but a little more time might be spent with advantage in mastering the deeper, broader, and higher secrets unfolded in the Supreme Degree of the Royal Arch. The inscription on the jewels of the Order should alone be a stimulus to our efforts in this direction; and if we can fully fathom the mystery, it may indeed be said, "If thou knowest this, thou knowest enough."

Obituary.

BRO. GEORGE W. K. POTTER,
Past Grand Deacon.

We deeply regret having to announce the decease of this well-known and estimable brother, who expired at his residence in Russell-square, on Friday, the 12th inst. Bro. Potter was initiated in the Moira Lodge, No. 92, on the 8th December, 1845, and duly passed the chair in that lodge. He was also a member of the Grand Master's Lodge, No. 1, and of the Royal Alpha, No. 16. On the 24th April, 1850, Bro. Potter was elevated to the rank of Junior Grand Deacon of England, and was appointed in the same year Sword-Bearer in the Grand Chapter.

For many years our deceased brother held the post of Treasurer of the Grand Officers' mess, and by his kindly disposition endeared himself to all with whom he was brought in contact. In him the Corporation of London has lost one of its oldest and most respected officers. He was admitted a solicitor in 1819, and was elected to the office of Secondary in 1831 by the Court of Common Council, in succession to Mr. Philip Wyatt Crowther, and year by year the appointment had been confirmed. In that capacity he presided over one of the City courts, and he also had the duty of providing juries at the courts sitting at Guildhall and at the Central Criminal Court. His position required him to act as legal adviser to the Sheriffs, and he conducted for them all the elections in which they were returning officers. He was likewise one of the Under Sheriffs for London. For forty years he had discharged his duties with the utmost regularity, and he was universally liked in the Corporation. One of his last official acts was that of presiding at the election of members of the School Board for the City.

He was well-known as an accomplished draughtsman and musician, and at the time of his death he was 73 years of age. It may be added that the late Secondary was a brother of Mr. Cipriani Potter.

KNIGHTS TEMPLARS AND MASONRY.

Bro. Forsyth is probably aware that the Scottish Templars have a recent origin, and that their first warrants were derived from a doubtful foundation in Dublin. These warrants were abandoned in 1811 in favour of an English charter. In 1844 an attempt was made to found what was called a "chivalric" branch, and a regulation was enacted by which persons who were not Masons could be received as candidates—their mode of reception, the amount of fees payable for installation, and the production of proofs of descent from four grand-parents entitled to coat-armour, distinguishing them from the ordinary Masonic members. The very statutes themselves of the Scottish Templars prove, by the following passage, that this was considered a questionable proceeding: "As all the charters granted between 1800 and 1836 stipulated that no one was to be admitted a Templar who was not previously a Royal Arch Mason, grave doubts may be entertained if the Chapter General had power to pass such a law." The system was not successful, and after a short reign of its wonderful pretensions the Scottish Templars retraced their steps, and the statutes of 1856 declared "that every one received into the Order must be previously a regular Royal Arch Mason." LUPUS.

THE "MARK" CHAIR.

I do not see that there is much difference between the views so ably advocated by "A Craft and Mark Past Master" and myself. Similar opinions have been expressed by other brethren as well respecting the "Mark" chair, which tend to show there is a strong feeling in favour of the change advocated.

Now, the ground I take is just this. So long as no lodge need suffer from members not being eligible for the "Mark" chair, because a "dispensation" can always be obtained from the authorities whenever the present law is shown to be injurious, there is actually no ground of complaint. I do not believe a "dispensation" has ever been refused to enable a brother, who is not an Installed Master in the Craft, being elected as W.M. of a Mark Lodge. Neither do I think a "dispensation" ever will be refused, as our Grand Mark Master, being so anxious to promote the best interests of the degree, would of course only be too happy to grant the "dispensations" whenever they are shown to be desirable. The present law prevents ordinary brethren coming in contact with the large body of Past Masters of the Craft who adorn the ranks of Mark Masonry.

I have advocated for some time the repeal of the law which requires an installed Craft Master to be also a Warden of a Mark lodge before being qualified for the Mark "chair," and I shall be among the first to advocate the qualification for the "chair" in a Mark lodge being only a Warden or Past Warden, if it can be proved that "dispensations" cannot be obtained.

THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.

We cannot conceive how any thoughtful American Freemason, conversant with all the facts of the case, can deny that the Grand Lodge of Quebec was duly and legally formed in accordance with all the precedents of acknowledged Masonic law. We believe it to be both de facto and de jure—a legitimate body. First, let us look at the logic of facts. We find that the Grand Lodge of Quebec has been recognised by sixteen of the Grand bodies on this continent—to wit: the Grand Lodges of Maine, New Hampshire, District of Columbia, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Kansas, Michigan, Nevada, Mississippi, Texas, and Nova Scotia. To this array of Grand Bodies might be added the names of many brilliant individual lights in Masonic jurisprudence who have, after mature consideration, and a familiar acquaintance with all the facts, unhesitatingly endorsed the Grand Lodge of Quebec. We need only mention R.W. Bro. Dr. Mackey, of South Carolina, M.W. Bro. J. H. Drummond, of Maine, and M.W. Bro. Charles F. Stansbury, of the District of Columbia. So much for the present recognised position and Masonic status de facto of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. Since the whole question has been recently brought afresh before the Masonic world by the published proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and the authoritative circular issued by the Grand Lodge of Canada in opposition to its claims, we propose to review the matter ab initio, and show by the closest reasoning, from admitted facts, that our Quebec brethren are entitled everywhere to fraternal recognition.

In the year 1840, Upper and Lower Canada were united, by an Act of the Imperial Parliament, under one government—with one legislature. Politically, they formed from that time one State. Then and thereafter for some years Upper and Lower Canada had separate Provincial Grand Lodges, the Provincial Grand Masters of which were appointed by the Grand Lodge of England. The various lodges of Canada might at any time thereafter have proceeded to regularly send delegates to a convention, and have formed one dominant Grand Lodge; they did not do so, however, until the year 1855, and in the course of three years the Grand Lodge of Canada, so formed, was recognised by all the Grand Bodies of the Masonic world. Its jurisdiction continued undisturbed until the year 1867, when the one province, called the "Province of Canada," and having but one Legislature or Parliament, by the "British North American Act" of July, 1867—to quote the very language of the Act—was "severed," and the "Province of Canada" made into two provinces, called the "Province of Quebec" and the "Province of Ontario," and these two provinces were confederated with two other provinces, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and formed into the "Dominion of Canada." Each of these distinct provinces from that time has had an independent Legislature of its own, very similar in authority to the Legislatures of our own States, and all of these provinces are severally represented in the Dominion Parliament, analogously to the representation of the States of our Union in the Congress of the United States. Two of these provinces—to wit: Nova Scotia (since 1866) and New Brunswick (since 1867)—have had independent Grand Lodges, whose legitimacy none deny. True, the former was constituted before its confederation, and the latter was Masonically unoccupied at the time of its formation; but, undeniably, the political status of each is precisely similar to that of Ontario or Quebec, and the existence of an independent Grand Body in any one of these provinces is by itself a strong argument in favour of the Masonic right of the lodges in each of the other sister provinces to have a like Grand Body of their own.

The crucial test of Grand Lodge jurisdiction on this continent is its correspondence with the political boundaries of the State in which it is situated. In other words, Grand Lodge jurisdictions are coterminous with political boundaries, and when a new State or territory is created by Legislative enactment out of what had theretofore existed as one government, it is open to the lodges working in the new territory to form an independent Grand Lodge. It was in accordance with this governing principle of Masonic law and usage, that the Grand Lodges of the territory of Washington, the territory of Idaho, and the State of West Virginia were formed, all of which the Grand Lodge of Canada has recognised by holding fraternal communication and correspondence with them.

The Grand Lodge of Canada ineffectually endeavours to evade the fact that before 1867 there was but one Legislature for the whole of Canada (while admitting that on and after that time the four provinces of Canada had each an independent Legislature) by alleging that at each session of the single Legislature of Canada East and Canada West many local laws were enacted, restricted in their operation to a single province. But this only shows that the authority of the single Legislature of the two provinces was at times exercised for merely local purposes; it cannot be argued from this that before 1867 the provinces were in any sense independent. The Legislature had the power to enact, and did enact, general laws; and this admitted, with absence of any local legislature, the unity of the two provinces before 1867 is established beyond contradiction.

The convention to form the Grand Lodge of Quebec met at Montreal on October 20th, 1869. In this convention, 21 lodges of the 37 then working in the province were represented. Since then seven additional lodges have adhered, leaving only eleven under the warrant of Canada, two under England, and one under Scotland still unfriendly to the Grand Lodge of Quebec. We are unhesitatingly of the opinion of R.W. Bro. Dr. Mackey, who, when consulted by the Grand Lodge of Canada, said that the political severance of Quebec from Ontario in 1867 made Quebec, Masonically, an unoccupied territory, and open for the organisation of an independent Grand Lodge by the usual proceedings. The District of Columbia, the State of West Virginia, Idaho, and others of our territories in the West, were suddenly left Masonically unoccupied in precisely the same way, and became in consequence independent Masonic jurisdictions. The precedents for the action of Quebec are so many, founded upon the fact of its new political status since the British Act of 1867, that we cannot see any shadow of a reason why it should not be recognised by every Grand Body in the Masonic world. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania has not, we believe, yet acted upon this matter; we hope when it is brought before them they will be guided by an enlightened reason and a full acquaintance with the facts. Justice is a Masonic virtue, and justice is all that the Grand Lodge of Quebec asks.—The Keystone.

The RECTANGULAR REVIEW versus FREEMASONRY.

It is only proper that I should again make a protest against the misuse to which the pages of The Rectangular Review are now being, at the arbitrary will of a certain "brother," put. I shall have occasion, I plainly see, to write the true history of that periodical, and perhaps you will favour me by announcing my intention to do so. I have, at the same time, no personal object to serve; but it seems strange that we should have amongst us so many wolves in sheeps' clothing. I do not criticise the last Masonic article, for it is below criticism; but when my vera relatio appears, probably many things will, at length, be seen in their true light. What is really desirable is unanimity towards our great ends—not petty diatribes against or anent individuals.

KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, otherwise known as CRYPTONYMUS.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by my physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, Jan. 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

A CANADIAN MASONIC VILLAGE.

BY AN ENGLISH BROTHER.

A few weeks ago I visited the celebrated Orillia, a small town situated on the shores of the "Killarney of Canada." The beautiful blue waters of Conchiching, surrounded with waving forests, clothed in dark evergreen, presenting a coup d'œil at once magnificent, picturesque, and romantic. The attractive scenery in the environs of this pretty village, nestled so cosily in the woods between hills whose terraced plateaus are verdant all the year round, is, to say the least, really a charming picture to contemplate, especially when enjoyed from the lake on a calm summer eve, and reminds me forcibly of the appropriate verse by "Zelia," a local poet (whose beautiful lines on "Freemasonry" written for the Gavel, were so extensively copied by the American Masonic press), entitled "A Summer Eve in Orillia :"—

'Tis even'g, all is calm and still,
Beauty reigns o'er vale and hill ;
The red sun sinks in a cloudless sky,
The breeze has changed to a low soft sigh,
Lake Conchiching looks like a silver sheet,
And her beautiful, beautiful leafy isles,
Resplendent they bask in the setting sun's smiles.

I do not propose, however, to dilate much upon the beauties of the surroundings or the picturesqueness of the splendid scenery, as upon the men whom I had the pleasure of meeting in the "La Petite Saratoga" of Ontario.

My only note of introduction was from a distinguished Quebec brother to Ill. Bro. Robert Ramsay, 32°, editor of the Gavel, who is devoted to our "Royal art," and one of the truest and most enthusiastic Masons that I ever had the felicity to meet. His name as a Masonic writer and knowledge as a Masonic jurisconsult is doubtless well known to you through his excellent magazine, which certainly would be a credit to any country. I need scarcely say that he received me with true knightly courtesy, and at once made me feel at home, and from him I learnt the history of the rapid progress of the Craft in this section of Canada, which I must add is not only due to the enthusiasm of the brethren, but also to the untiring energy and zeal of the editor of the Gavel.

In the year 1867, a few brethren devoted to the noble Order, met at the residence of V.W. Bro. C. S. Elliot, and drew up their petition for a dispensation for a lodge ; Bro. D. M. Malloch was appointed first Worshipful Master ; Bro. C. S. Elliot S.W. ; and C. A. Thompson, J.W. The following are the names of the charter members, all of whom, with the exception of the Junior Warden, who has removed to the United States, and Bro. Croker, who was soon after called to refreshment in the Grand Lodge above, are still active members, and as true to their noble little lodge, which now numbers fifty of the leading professional men, merchants and mechanics in the place. Charter members : Bros. Malloch, Thompson, Elliot, Braden, Moffatt, Croker, Jupp, Cozzens, Ross, Oliver, Corbould, as they were on St. John's Day, 1868, when only some seven or eight could be mustered to observe their first festival.

The following year Wor. Bro. Malloch left for Clinton, and Bro. Elliot was unanimously elected Worshipful Master, the honourable position of which he ably filled for two years consecutively ; he is one of the best ritualists that I have ever yet met. Bro. Robert Ramsay was then elected, and after occupying the East for one year was succeeded by Bro. Frank Kean, the present whole-souled and genial-hearted frater, who now fills that position. V.W. Bro. C. S. Elliot is this year a Grand Steward of the G.L. of Canada. I may here remark that at the opening of the lodge, Ill. Bro. Robert Ramsay was in the United States, and was elected a honorary member of the same, and upon his return to Orillia, in 1869, at once set to work, and with the assistance of Comps. Ardagh, Corbould, and Moffatt, three Royal Arch Masons of between thirty and forty years' standing, and some Companions from Barrie, the county town of Co. Simcoe, received a dispensation from M.E. Comp. Harington, and at the following session of Grand Chapter, 1870, obtained a warrant, when he was appointed 1st Principal Z. and Grand Standard Bearer. Comp. C. S. Elliot was next elected 1st Principal, and this year Comp. T. S. Atkinson, an excellent worker, occupies that exalted position. This chapter (Signet, No. 34) has now over forty members on its roll, and the work is done both creditably and well. Bye-the-bye, I forgot to state that the 3rd Principal, E. Comp. T. H. Tebbs, is a member of the Mersey Lodge, No. 477, Zetland, 537, G.R.C., and Joppa Mark Masters' Lodge, No. 4, G.R.S., all of Birkenhead, England.

After the chapter was in good working order, Sir Kt. Robert Ramsay applied to the Grand Prior of Canada, the V.H. and E. Col. Frater W. J. B. Macleod Moore, 33°, for a dispensation for an encampment of Knight Templars, and during last July the Grand Prior himself visited Orillia, opened the encampment, and installed twelve Sir Knights. V.E. Frater R. Ramsay, 32°, resigned his office as Eminent Commander in favour of Sir Kt. M. H. Spencer, P.D.D.G.M., who held the position till the annual election in December following, when our friend, Frater Elliot, was duly elected, and is now its presiding officer. I may mention that this encampment, "Mount Calvary," is now No. 108 on the roll of the Grand Conclave of England, and its Eminent Commander and Past Commanders are all officers in the Grand Priory of Canada, V.E. Frater R. Ramsay being Grand Sub Prior ; V.E. Frater Spencer Grand 2nd Captain ; and V.E. Frater Elliot Grand Hospitaller.

This encampment and priory is highly to be praised for its work, and the courteous and Knightly reception with which every officer and brother greets a visiting Frater. Since its inauguration, thirty Companions have been installed, and it is looked upon as one of the most flourishing in the Dominion of Canada.

The same day that Col. Moore opened the encampment, he also, as Chief Inspector-General for the Imperial Military and "Ecclesiastical Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine," granted a dispensation to Ill. Sir Kt. Robert Ramsay and others for Gethsemane Conclave, now No. 29 Grand Conclave of England. Ill. Sir Kt. Ramsay, immediately after installation, resigned the office of M.P.S. in favour of Ill. Sir Kt. Elliot, who held the same till the annual election, when Ill. Sir Kt. G. M. Wilson was elected M.P. Sov., who, by-the-bye, confers the grade of the "Novitiate Cross" with much impressiveness.

This beautiful rite, I may state, is daily gaining ground in the Dominion, and, if I may judge from the enthusiasm of the Illustrious Sir Knights of Orillia, its glorious symbol is now firmly planted on Canadian soil. The Fraters here have endeavoured to confine this branch to Templars alone, and although the Gethsemane Conclave numbers now some thirty members, they are all Knights Templar and Knights of Malta.

Leaving the chivalric bodies, I now come to a beautiful little rite, which, though very popular in the United States, numbering as it does some twenty-three thousand, has never yet been introduced into Europe : I allude to Cryptic Masonry. This branch, as I understand, consists of three degrees—Royal, Select and Super-Excellent Master—and in this country the degree of Knight of the Red Cross, or Babylonish Pass, has been added since. In the United States, it is a pre-requisite to the Templar grade, and is there conferred in all encampments ; the working of these degrees takes place in a body called a Council. Ill. Comp. Ramsay was the first in Ontario to apply to Ill. Comp. T. D. Harington, 33°, the Inspector-General of the Rite under the Grand Council of New Brunswick, for a dispensation to open a Council of Royal and Select Masters at Orillia, which of course was promptly granted, and at a special communication of the Grand Council of New Brunswick, held in November, 1870, a warrant for Shekinah Council, No. 5, was granted. Every Ill. Companion must be in possession of the Royal Arch Degree ; the three presiding officers are termed Most Illustrious Master, Right Illustrious Masters, and Illustrious Master. The brethren, who at present fill these positions, are Ill. Comps. Elliot, Corbett, and J. A. Ardagh, all being Doctors of Medicine. From this Council have since sprung Adoniram, No. 6, at Toronto ; Harington, U.D., at Galt ; and Labad, U.D., at Bradford. As far as I can learn, it is the intention of the Illustrious Companions to organize a Grand Council for Ontario, and doubtless under the guidance of that true and genial-hearted Mason, Ill. Comp. Harington, 33°, P.G.M. and Grand L., Cryptic Masonry may expect to take its stand as one of the regular legitimate branches of the Masonic tree in Canada. A great effort will also be made, I understand, to make these degrees a pre-requisite to the Templar, and thus, as the Gavel terms it, establish a system.

A dispensation has also been granted to Ill. Bro. Robert Ramsay, 32°, Bro. J. Ardagh, 18°, and Bro. William Lount, 18°, together with some members of the A. and A. Rite from a distance, to open a Rose Croix Chapter, named Immanuel, which, I doubt not, will prove as successful as the other bodies, although I fancy the A. and A. Rite is not likely to flourish here whilst its present system of government exists in England ; such, at least, is the feeling I found very generally prevail amongst such members with whom I came in contact. However, I am now writing about Orillia and not Golden-square, so I shall not allude to the government, or rather misgovernment, of this very dignified rite.

The Masonic Hall, in which these various bodies meet, is neat and plain. The brethren are preparing to erect an edifice for themselves, and during the coming summer will do so. I must say that I have invariably experienced, from all whom I chanced to meet, the greatest kindness and attention, and spent many happy hours amongst them ; they appeared to understand each other and act as one mind. Amongst others I may be pardoned for mentioning Bros. Ostrander, Sutherland, World, Bingham, Summers, and Bridgband—in fact, I cannot name all. I hope that if ever a brother from "the Canadian Masonic village" visits England, that the brethren there will only welcome him half as cordially as I was received here.

In conclusion, I might mention that most of the brethren here are reading and consequently intelligent working Masons, and following in the wake of those excellent monthlies, the Gavel and Freemason, are avowed and open advocates of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and would welcome its Grand Master, I believe, with more cordiality than some who hold high positions in the so-called Grand Lodge of Canada, which, after all, is a most absurd name, for the simple reason alone that its jurisdiction literally only extends over the Province of Ontario. I omitted mentioning that my friend, Ill. Bro. R. Ramsay, is the Grand Representative of the Grand Lodges of Ohio and Nebraska, near the Grand Lodge of Canada, and also of the Grand Commandery of Ohio, near the Grand Priory of Canada.

If this merits a place in the valued columns of THE FREEMASON, I shall feel most happy, at some future time, to furnish you with a sketch of Masonry in Toronto, the flourishing and enterprising metropolis of Ontario.

"That GREAT, AWFUL, TREMENDOUS and INCOMPREHENSIBLE NAME."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

Your correspondent, on the sacred and mysterious name of the true and living God Most High, deserves well of R.A.M. He has set an example that others would do well to follow. It is, I think, a mistake that there should be so much captious feeling in regard to writing and expatiation on the ritual of Freemasonry. There are, of course, landmarks and orders of the day to be observed by all Masons on peril of their fidelity ; but surely it is placing your light under a bushel, instead of your city upon a hill, if some of the most beautiful truths which are shadowed forth by Masonic emblems are to be kept hid from the popular world who are not Masons. Kept hid they cannot be, for they are known and appreciated by hundreds of men who, if they knew that in Masonry such Lessons were taught, would come among us and do honour to our Craft.

Your correspondent has given us a great and glorious truth, but he has put it before us in the shell: let us try to obtain the kernel. It is a very hard nut to crack; but if I can only produce a fissure in the shell, some more expert hand than mine may perfect the cleft and obtain the fruit.

Among the ancients, the word NAME had a different signification to that of the present age and generation. They understood the word name in no other sense than to contain the essence of the thing expressed. Each property or name in nature has a constituent part in man's creation. To say a man is brave is to designate him as a lion; that he is a glutton, call him a hog; that he is cunning, call him a fox; that he is firm, that he is a rock; and so through all nature, animate and inanimate. This is the language of allegory or correspondence, and was deeply studied by the ancients, and always used by them in their sacred writings, and thus the name or quality of Jehovah is the "Lord's divine human," and the manner in which it was communicated to Moses is most strikingly sublime.

The children of Israel, from their long state of captivity and degradation, were in a state of semi-civilization; they were tyrannized over by the most learned and cultivated nation then known upon the earth; they had (and the nations of the earth long after them) gods many and lords many. It is in the nature of man to contemplate God as a Being of like passions as himself. The Pantheon at Rome was a fit illustration of this. The devotee could enter this Temple and select from the number a god best suited to his proclivities for his worship and devotion; he made it his penate. It is so now-a-days; one idol after another engrosses the public mind. At present, it seems to be the worship of Reason, and a most bewildering goddess she is. What is truth? was once asked; but the querulous enquirer waited not for the reply. What is reason? may now be asked; but the most patient enquirer will have to wait long enough, and not receive a satisfactory reply. If we make Reason the object of our adoration, we must worship a finite abstraction, as the depths of our worship must be limited to our finite conceptions of her, and must sink to the level of the worst idolatry—self-esteem and self-sufficiency.

But to return to our subject. The Almighty, in His divine love and wisdom, was about to restore to man the knowledge of His divine essence and the immortality of the soul, and He made Moses His ambassador for that purpose. Moses had, by a Divine Providence, been reared in the college of the Egyptian priests, for we are told "he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," and no doubt had been a conspicuous member of the School of the Hierogrammatists; possibly, while brooding over his own extraordinary lot in life, and the hard fate of his tribe under the slavery and wrongs they were enduring, the Almighty made the wonderful manifestation, and gave him the command to stand before Pharaoh. Moses, no doubt conscious that this was a supernatural appearance, demanded to know the name—that is the essence, the property, and attribute of his visitant—and was no doubt surprised to hear only a declaration of His divine essence, and that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were still in existence, though not on this earth, and that He was then their God as He had been aforetime, that there had been no cessation of life, but only of state. But Moses, true to his traditions, yearned to know the name of that mysterious Being, under whose guidance he felt he was. The Egyptian mythology was full of theophanies, and although he had witnessed the bush on fire yet not destroyed, the scientifics of which perhaps he knew something, yet he could not rest satisfied till he should be in full possession of the attributes of this Being who had so wonderfully appeared to him. As the faith and importunities of the Syro-Phœnician woman prevailed, so did the Almighty grant the prayer of Moses, or so much of it as he could endure in the body of this clay. "No man can see Me and live;" but the sacred and mysterious name—His essence—was declared "Jehovah, Jehovah God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundance in goodness and truth." This is His NAME, His attributes, and who can comprehend them? They are as high as heaven; what canst thou know? They are deeper than hell; what canst thou discover? We may know more of them by-and-bye; "we now see through a glass darkly." We are in the cleft of a rock, and covered by the hand of Jehovah's care. We know now in part, but then we shall know even as we are known. W. B., 742.

GRAND CONCLAVE OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

The half-yearly meeting of Grand Conclave was held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Friday, the 12th inst., and was very numerous attended. Sir Kt. William Stuart, M.E. and Supreme Grand Master, occupied the throne, and was supported by Sir Kts. Rev. John Huyshe, D.G.M.; Earl of Limerick, G. Prior; Lord Eliot, P.G.C. Cornwall; Sir P. de Colquhoun, G.C.; W. W. B. Beach, M.P., P.G.C. Hants; Captain N. G. Phillips, P.G.C. Suffolk; J. Tepper, G. Treas.; W. Tinckler, G.V.C.; F. Binckes, P.A.G.D.C.; W. Ganz, G. Org.; Col. Vernon, P.D.G.M.; Col. H. Clerk, R. J. Spiers, Rev. G. Ross, and many other present and past officers.

The conclave was duly opened, and the knights proceeded to discuss the report of the Committee of General Purposes, which included a recommendation that Grand Conclave should enter into a treaty, offensive and defensive, with the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters and the S.G. Council 33°, to the exclusion of the popular and far more ancient Masonic body known as the "Red Cross of Constantine." This produced a warm debate, in the course of which the Rev. John Huyshe, D.G.M., proposed that the report be sent back for reconsideration, averring that he had seen all the documents relating to the Red Cross Order when the Grand Council was held under the Duke of Sussex, and was perfectly satisfied of their authenticity—in fact, the Order had as regular a basis as the Order of the Temple itself. Sir Kt. Huyshe's motion was supported energetically by Sir Kts. John Hervey, F. Binckes, Raynham W. Stewart, and others, and furiously opposed by Sir P. Colquhoun, Lord Limerick, and E. Holmes. As the arrival of the Prince of Wales was signalled in the midst of the discussion, it was adjourned, as some understood, until next Grand Conclave, but this proved to be an error.

The following ceremonial was then carried out in accordance with the programme:—

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and His Highness the Prince John of Glücksburg arrived at half-past four, and were received by the Aides-de-Camp Extraordinary, Major-General Doherty, Lieutenant W. C. Seymour, and the Hon. W. Warren Vernon, Chamberlain; Colonel G. A. Vernon, J. Tynte Agg Gardner, and E. P. Colquhoun, Chamberlain, at the door of Freemasons' Hall. The Grand Prior, the Earl of Limerick, the Provincial Grand Commander for Cornwall, Lord Eliot, the Grand Chancellor, Sir Patrick Colquhoun, and the Acting Grand Director of Ceremonies, Malcolm Ovans Sim, then conducted his Royal Highness and Prince John to the Grand Master's robing-room, and the Acting Grand Director of Ceremonies communicated the arrival of His Royal Highness and the Prince to the Grand Master, upon which the two Grand Captains immediately marshalled the knights, who formed an arch of steel, leaving a passage of six feet wide, and on the entrance of His Royal Highness and Prince John the Heralds sounded a Royal salute, and a march was played by the Grand Organist, Sir Knight W. Ganz. The procession entered in the following order:—

- The Acting Grand Director of Ceremonies.
- The Grand Chancellor.
- The Grand Prior. The Grand Commander for Cornwall.
- The Chamberlain. Banner-Bearer.
- His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.
- Aide-de-camp. Aide-de-camp.
- The Chamberlain. Banner-Bearer.
- His Highness the Prince John of Glücksburg.
- Aide-de-camp. Aide-de-camp.

The Grand Chancellor presented his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and His Highness Prince John to the Grand Master, who descended a step, and placed H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on his right, and H.H. Prince John of Glücksburg on the right hand of the Prince of Wales. The Grand Chancellor then presented to H.H. the Prince John of Glücksburg the Grand Master's certificate of his incorporation into the English branch of the Order as an Eminent Commander. The Grand Chancellor presented and named the Provincial Grand Commanders as they filed past, each saluting and retiring to his stall. He then presented the Grand Prelate, the Vice-Chancellor, the Grand Registrar, and Grand Treasurer. The other Grand Officers then filed past, saluted, and retired to their respective stations, after which the other knights filed past, wheeling, saluting, and retiring through the arch of steel, under the command and direction of two Grand Captains. During the ceremony all the knights stood "at order."

The Grand Officers of the year were then appointed as follows:—

| D. C. M. Gordon            | ... | G. Sword Bearer.       |
| G. Simpson                 | ... | G.M. Ban. Bearer.      |

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and his illustrious relative remained above an hour, and were escorted on their departure with the same formalities, a large number of knights following their example soon afterwards.

The discussion on the tripartite treaty was then cunningly resumed, and the promoters of the scheme—the numbers present being greatly reduced—snatched a hard-fought victory by a majority of TWO, as we understood in the confusion which prevailed. "A few more such victories and we are ruined," must have been the mental shriek of the "cohorts all blazing in purple and gold," who followed their leader so swift and so bold, and found at the end they had almost been sold.

Another precious piece of legislation was then introduced to the effect that encampments should no longer have the right to choose their own members, but that every name proposed for installation should be subject to the veto of the Provincial Grand Commanders in the provinces, and to that of the sweet-tempered (?) Colquhoun in the metropolitan district. Shades of ye ancient Templars! this monstrous proposition was actually carried, and henceforth the prosperity of an encampment and the liberty of the knights are at the mercy of one man, who, however estimable, may not be quite perfection.

After this let our English Knights Templar abandon the prefix "Masonic," for they have now nothing in common with a body of freemen and free Masons. The force of folly could no further go, and so we left in shame the servile show, convinced of this, that nothing can surpass an Alpileus turned into an ass! O tempora! O mores!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are decidedly the best remedy for all disorders of the stomach and bowels, the liver and kidneys. They act with so decided an effect, and yet so gently, that people of the most delicate constitutions can take them with perfect confidence. They do not contain a single grain of mercury or other noxious substance, being composed exclusively of rare balsams. They are, therefore, equally safe and efficacious, and as a family medicine, nothing yet invented or discovered, can be compared with them for a moment. With these inestimable Pills, at hand, together with the printed directions affixed to each box, no other medical advice or assistance can be needed in any ordinary case of sickness.—[Adv't.]

THE MARK DEGREE AND THE MARK CHAIR.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—In the letter of a D. Prov. G.M.M., at page 282, there are two statements which it would be highly interesting to have proved.

The first is, that the secrets of the Master's chair have a claim to antiquity. The second is, that the Mark degree is not independent, but "as dependent on the second degree as the Royal Arch is on the third."

As regards the first point, I find no mention in any of the old records of 1717 and the following years of a W.M. being installed in the absence of his lodge. On the contrary, every account of an installation leads the reader to suppose that the W.M. was installed "with certain significant ceremonies" in the presence of his lodge. If I am correct, then, the chair secrets are, as now given, an innovation, and a new degree, which may be very proper to be given, but have no necessary connection with the installation of a W.M.

As regards the second point, if the Mark is a part of the Fellow-Craft's degree, how comes it that it is altogether unknown in England, Sweden, Germany and France, and that where known and recognised, as in America, Scotland and Ireland, it is part not of the Fellow Craft, but of the Royal Arch system?

Wherever the Mark is worked independently, as in England (and for its own sake I am most thankful that it is independent of Great Queen-street), it seems to me that the good of Mark lodges ought alone to be considered in deciding the question of the qualifications for the Master's chair; and as regards this, the well-considered and yet incisive reforms that have hitherto been carried out, give us every reason to place the most implicit reliance in the wisdom of the G.M.M. and the G.M.L.

Yours fraternally,

A MARK P.M.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read with attention the correspondence in your pages on this subject, and have had my first impressions strengthened by the remarks of your several correspondents. Agreeing with those who feel regret that they cannot adopt the opinions of Bro. Hughan (than whom there are few better able to decide on questions of Masonic propriety), I have from the first considered it singular that that worthy brother cannot observe the absolute misplacement of the chair of K.S. before that of A . . . . . m.

It is quite true that "a regulation has been made in the Craft" that the degree of M.M. shall precede that of Mark Master, but that appears to be the result of a concession made by one Order of Masonry towards the other for the sake of preserving that unity and good-fellowship which both profess and desire to practise. Beyond the reservation thereby made, there is nothing that in the present order of things affects the independent working of the respective degrees.

If the Mark degree were, as was no doubt originally intended, the intermediate stage between the F.C. and the M.M. degrees, it might be reasonably expected that the chair of K.S. should be the only position of absolute power. Even then there would be no reason why the superior officer of the Mark degree should not occupy the chair of a representative subordinate to that of K.S. But it has been decided, whether wisely or not is for more experienced Masons than myself to determine, that the Craft and Mark degrees shall be kept separate and distinct. And, therefore, beyond the obligation to observe that regulation which I have before mentioned, there can be but one argument in favour of the objection to instal a Mark Mason not already an Installed Craft Master into the Mark chair.

Even this one argument—which I take to be the possibility of giving a brother an insight into the secrets of the chair of K.S. before he can be legally entitled to them—can be soon disposed of, for there is nothing in the ceremony of installation observed in the one degree (beyond the O.B., and that is a most important exception), which is not in the other shared in by the brethren generally, and no Installed Master of a Mark Lodge, not already installed in the Craft, is nearer the possession of the secrets of the chair of K.S. than any other Master Mason.

The many reasons why a zealous Mark Master should not be hindered in his progress and be prevented from ruling a Mark lodge must be obvious to all members of the Order, and scarce require discussion. In my opinion, it only remains to obtain the admission that the above presumed objection is founded on error to exhaust the subject.

There seems to be an absurdity in making the chair of K.S. precede that of the Mark degree, and so reversing what should be the proper order of merit. For if the Mark had been, as in years gone by it could have been, adopted in the Craft between the F.C. and M.M. degrees, surely every portion of its working and its several offices must have been subordinated to what would then have been the higher degree. But it is now an independent Order, and as such should not be trammelled by any requirement of another body, beyond what has already been agreed to. With every respect for blue Masonry, towards which I remain as loyal and zealous as I ever have been, I think the degree with which it would not concern itself has now assumed such proportions as justify its assumption of a right to act without restraint from that source.

The Mark Lodge "Macdonald, No. 104," has elected its Senior Warden (not yet or soon likely to be a Master of a Craft Lodge) as their next W.M., and he will, under the authority of the M.W. Grand Mark Master, be installed into that office on the 10th proximo. To have refused the worthy brother his preferment because his good qualities had not been properly recognised elsewhere, would have been an act of injustice to him and discouragement to other zealous Mark Master Masons, of such a nature as I trust will never be sanctioned in the Mark Degree.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES STEVENS, P.M. & P.Z.,
W.M. Macdonald Mark 104, and G.J.O.
Clapham, May 15, 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—"A D.P.G.M.M." finds fault with my assertion that the Mark is an independent degree. By "independent" I meant that it was independent in its government, i.e., that the body claiming exclusive authority over the degree in this country is totally distinct from and independent of the Craft Grand Lodge; it is dependent on the 2° and also on the 3° to this extent, that none but Master Masons can receive the Mark. This is however the case with all Masonic and chivalric degrees, e.g., the Red Cross; yet I am not aware that the M.P.S. of a conclave must necessarily be a P.M. It appears to me that were the present restriction carried out to its legitimate issue, the G.M. of the Mark ought previously to have presided over the whole Craft! With the Royal Arch the case is entirely different; the two systems are closely connected in their working, for example, the G. Sec. and G. Reg., if R.A. Masons, are ex officio entitled to the same offices in the Grand Chapter, and it is notorious that the subordinate and dependent position occupied by the Supreme Grand Chapter is extremely distasteful to the upholders of the Order.

As to the threat of secession in the event of the alteration being carried out, I cannot believe that any honourable body of men would hold so lightly a solemn O.B., voluntarily entered into, as to break it merely because some measure was passed of which they individually might not approve.

In conclusion, I must still say that as a friend to the Mark degree, I believe I am consulting its best interests in wishing to see the alteration carried out; that there is no inseparable objection to it is evident from the very fact that the matter has been under the consideration of the General Board.

Apologising for again troubling you,

Believe me, fraternally yours,

A CRAFT P.M.

THE 1717 THEORY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have no intention to prolong this discussion. I only desire to remark that Bro. Buchan forgets that the Carpenters and the Freemasons are jointly referred to in very many ancient fabric rolls and other historic documents, and that the Magister Carpentarius is mentioned frequently as a person of importance. I have no doubt that these guilds were allied, and hence their joint mention in the Statute of Laborers, in which your readers will have observed that no other association is specified by name, although the statute applied to the whole of these trading combinations. It must therefore be apparent to any unprejudiced reader that the carpenters and masons had within their organisation more important elements than the other trade-fellowships. I may remind Bro. Buchan that it was to the Tailors he compared the Masons; not to the Carpenters.

If by "playing into his hands" Bro. Buchan means the affording him information, I am very glad to contribute such as my humble stock will supply; but I think if Bro. Buchan was so well acquainted with the early statutes on the subject of Masons, it was unnecessary for him to specially challenge me to produce one referring to that craft alone before 1717, and still more unnecessary for him to imply that I had suppressed Chapter ii.

That the Masonic craft has existed, in some form, for centuries at least, we all well know from innumerable MS. as well as printed sources; consequently, when Bro. Buchan thinks it right to assert that its present constitution was invented in 1717, it is not asking him to prove a negative when I suggest that he shall show some evidence for his statement. I may give an example of this by myself asserting that it was founded in 1450: would Bro. Buchan refrain from asking me to prove this because it would in his view be proof of a negative?

Yours fraternally,

LUPUS.

THE LITTLE TESTIMONIAL.

We did not intend to have alluded to the services of our Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, towards the English Craft, but since The Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror (London) has been so contemptible as to allow disparaging remarks relative to him to appear in its columns under certain noms de plume, because he advocates certain Masonic orders, of which we dare to say, the learned (?) editor of The Freemasons' Magazine is entirely ignorant, then we deem it our duty to say a word or two regarding the testimonial, with which certain members of the Craft propose to present him.

Bro. Little we look upon as one of the advanced members of the English Fraternity. He may only be assistant to the Grand Secretary, but, certainly, for energy he is excelled by few. We do not know him either personally or by correspondence, but we are aware that he is a good ritualist (a somewhat rare thing in some parts of England) an earnest worker, and a true lover of the Masonic Fraternity. Such being the case, we are pleased to note that his services are to be rewarded by a testimonial worthy of the Brotherhood whom he has so long and so faithfully served.

The cry against him is that the said testimonial is for his services in the Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine. Such, we believe, is not altogether the case. Bro. Little has devoted his time also to the Craft and Capital Masonry, and although he has been most energetic in his efforts to spread that branch of which he is Grand Recorder, he has not, to our knowledge, been remiss in his duties to those other bodies to which he also owes allegiance. We think, moreover, that through him to a great extent will be accomplished the bringing together, under the one sovereignty, the various Masonic branches not now recognised by the Grand Lodge of England. For example there are now in England a Supreme Grand Council of the A. and A. Rite 33°, a Grand Mark Lodge, a Grand Ark Lodge, a Grand Commandery of Knights Templar, a General Grand Conclave of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, which last-named body has also authority over the Rite of Misraim. The Grand Mark Lodge and Grand Ark are also uniting, and we hope that all the other bodies will unite in forming a Grand Council of Rites, so as to systematise this Babel of Masonic languages. Bro. Little has worked to accomplish this, and we join with him in the movement, heart and hand. We want a system.

Let the Freemasons of England be liberal in their subscriptions towards a testimonial for one, who has devoted his time, his talents, and his energies to the welfare of the English Craft, its Orders and its benevolent institutions. Such a brother we believe our frater to be, and the Gavel sends him its best and most fraternal good wishes. — The Gavel, Orillia, Ont., Canada, May, 1871.

SCOTLAND.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, on the 8th inst. The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, Grand Master Mason of Scotland, occupied the throne, supported by the Past Grand Master, the Earl of Dalhousie; Henry Inglis of Torsonce, Substitute Grand Master; William Mann, Senior Grand Warden; William Officer, Acting Junior Grand Warden; John Whyte-Melville of Bennoch, Provincial Grand Master of Fifeshire; Colonel Muir of Caldwell, P.G. Master of Ayrshire; W. Montgomerie Neilson of Queen's-hill, P.G. Master of Glasgow; Major Hope of Luffness, P.G. Master of East Lothian; John Laurie, Grand Clerk; Rev. V.G. Faithful, Grand Chaplain; and other office-bearers. There was also a large number of members present.

The Grand Lodge having been opened and some preliminary business disposed of, the Lodge Kilwinning, Dumfries, was, on the recommendation of the Grand Committee, reopened to its position on the roll. A communication was read from the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, confirming the appointment of Bro. George Fraser as representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland at that Grand Lodge, and submitting the name of Bro. W. Hay, architect, of Edinburgh, as its representative at the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

Bro. Buchan's petition and appeal against the sentence of suspension by the Lodge St. John, Glasgow, was then taken up. Regarding this it was intimated that said appeal having been addressed to Grand Lodge, it had been decided by a majority of the Grand Committee (the minority, however, dissenting) to consider this appeal, owing to the fact that the words found fault with were, if uttered at all, said in Grand Lodge, and that the Lodge St. John, of Glasgow, was therefore ordered to send in replies within fourteen days, which it had not done. Considerable discussion then took place as to whether this appeal should be sent back to Prov. G.L. of Glasgow, or whether the action of Grand Committee should be approved of. Various members of the P.G.L. of Glasgow, who were present, spoke very warmly as to its being sent back to them. Bro. James Wallace considered that, as the suspension took place in Glasgow, that therefore the appeal should have been to the Prov. G.L. there. This view was supported by Bros. F. A. Barrow, Dep. P.G.M., and M'Connochie, the latter considering that if such had been done, it would never have reached Grand Lodge at all. Bro. W. M. Neilson, Prov. G.M. Glasgow, considered the case should never have occurred at all; but since it had been done in his province, the appeal ought to be sent back there—for, if that were not done, he would judge it necessary to consider what course should be, in consequence thereof, afterwards adopted. Bros. William Officer and D. Robertson supported the course adopted by Grand Committee, observing that, according to Grand Lodge Laws, a brother appealing had it in his power to appeal to either the Grand Lodge or Provincial Grand Lodge, and that, as this was a special case, the action of St. John's Lodge in the matter being an interference with Grand Lodge privileges, that therefore Grand Lodge itself ought to decide the case. Bros. Inglis, Sub. G.M., and the Earl of Rosslyn, M.W.G.M., judged it best that the Prov. G.L. of Glasgow should be allowed to take up the matter. A motion to that effect was proposed by Bro. Mackersy and seconded by Bro. William Officer, who considered it expedient to yield to the desires so strongly expressed by the members of the Prov. G.L. of Glasgow; which motion was carried.

A communication from the Grand Lodge of Quebec, praying the Grand Lodge of Scotland to reconsider their declination to recognise that body, was read and laid on the table.

A charter was ordered to be expedited for new lodge "Quadra," British Columbia.

The following motion then came on for consideration:—"Moved by Bro. Alexander Hay, Pr.M. 75 and R.W. Grand Jeweller, and seconded by Bro. D. Kinneir, R.W.M. 291: 'That cap. xx., sec. iii., of Grand Lodge Laws shall read as follows, viz.—The Lodge Journeymen, No. 8, shall be entitled to carry the working tools and other paraphernalia of Grand Lodge at all processions in the metropolitan district. The Lodge Glasgow St. John, No. 3<sup>d</sup>, shall have the same privilege in the Glasgow province, and when the Grand Lodge is officiating in any other place or province, the Grand Master, or the brother acting for him, shall have the power of fixing on the lodge or lodges to carry the working tools for the occasion, and his decision shall not be open to review.'" At this stage the M.W.G.M. handed in to the Grand Clerk a communication from the Lodge Journeymen on the subject, which the Grand Clerk was requested to read. It was to the effect that as the Lodge Journeymen, No. 8, had had their ancient privileges upheld by the Grand Master, the Earl of Dalhousie, and the Grand Lodge at the meeting held in the Chapter House of Glasgow Cathedral preparatory to the laying of the foundation-stone of the Albert Bridge, as also in the report upon the subject which was lately adopted by Grand Lodge, that therefore now, in order to promote harmony among all the brethren they had divested themselves of these privileges, so far as the provinces were concerned, reserving only to themselves the privilege of carrying the tools in the metropolitan district. Upon this being read, Bro. Hay withdrew his motion, as he considered the action now taken by the Lodge Journeymen quite sufficient to settle all difficulties. Bro. Baird, R.W.M. No. 3<sup>d</sup>, rose, however, to propose a motion on the subject, but was stopped by the M.W.G.M., who said such was informal at this stage, as this business was now settled. It was, however, open to any brother to table a new motion, which would come up at next Quarterly Communication.

After the withdrawal of two other motions, the Earl of Rosslyn announced that he had received a letter from the Grand Secretary, Bro. Alex. Stewart, and was happy to say that that brother was recovering from his recent severe indisposition.

The following motion was then moved:—"That no office-bearer shall hold office for a longer period than three years; and, on the expiration of his term of office, shall not be eligible for re-election to the same office, and that at least three years must elapse before he be appointed to it again. This not to apply to the Grand Master or paid officials." A discussion took place upon this motion, in the course of which the Earl of Dalhousie remarked that no good could be derived by adopting it. If any one objected to the proposing of a brother at their annual nomination, let him come forward like a man and propose a substitute. (Applause.) On a division, the motion was lost by a great majority.

In reference to the conference on the Mark degree, it was intimated that the Earl of Dalhousie declined taking part in it, seeing the Grand Lodge of England did not recognise it.

After the tabling of several motions for consideration at next meeting, the Grand Lodge was closed in ample form.

CENTENARY CELEBRATION OF LODGE ST. ANDREW'S, KILMARNOCK No. 126.

The centenary celebration of the Lodge St. Andrew's Kilmarnock took place in the George Hotel, Kilmarnock. Before the celebration was entered upon, a meeting of the Provincial Lodge of Ayrshire was held in the Hotel, which was numerously attended by the brethren—17 out of the 34 lodges in the province being represented. Bro. Col. Mure, of Caldwell, Provincial Grand Master of Ayrshire, took the chair, and intimated that the brethren were to be honoured with the presence of Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, Grand Master Mason of Scotland, and Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Dalhousie, Past Grand Master. Thereafter Bros. Rosslyn and Dalhousie entered the meeting, the Grand Master taking the chair, which he at once resigned to Bro. Col. Mure.

The Provincial Grand Master said the brethren had been called together to consider whether they might not enhance the benefits which were derived from Masonry by instituting some charitable scheme. He believed the proposal was to establish a bursary by subscriptions from the 34 lodges in Ayrshire, which should be confined to the Craft.

R.W.M. Shaw, St. Marnock's, proposed that a bursary in the University of Glasgow should be established in the name of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire, and that each of the lodges in the county should contribute towards it. He did not know what would be considered a respectable sum for a bursary, but there were 34 lodges in Ayrshire, and £2 each would raise £68. He would take the liberty of moving that each lodge should make an annual contribution of £2.

Bro. the Earl of Rosslyn said he was extremely glad to find that this proposal had been taken up so heartily. It had often been said that Freemasons were theoretical rather than practical—that they talked without acting—but he was happy to think that Ayrshire Masons were about to prove that this was not the case. The particular way in which they had directed their attention to advancing the good of the Craft received his most cordial wishes for its complete success. He felt certain that the example set by them would be generally followed, and that other Masonic bursaries would be instituted, but the Freemasons of Ayrshire would always have the credit of being the first to adopt such a creditable course. (Applause.)

Bro. the Earl of Dalhousie said he felt greatly gratified at being in Kilmarnock on that occasion to witness the inauguration of a scheme of education among the Masons of the West. They were perhaps not aware how largely in English Masonry the education of the sons and daughters of the brethren was attended to. In England, at least 200 boys and as many girls were educated in the Boys' and Girls' Schools. He was delighted to find that that subject was now engaging the attention of the Masons of Scotland. He quite agreed with the rule that the education proposed to be given should be confined, in the first instance at all events, to the sons of the brethren, and more especially to the sons of those brethren who, having been good and earnest Masons in their day, might through the visitation of Providence, have fallen some what into the sere and yellow leaf of poverty. (Applause.)

Bro. R.W.M. Turnbull seconded the motion.

The Provincial Grand Master said that, having agreed to carry out this work, the details might be left to a committee, and he would propose that Bros. Wylie, Shaw, and Turnbull be appointed for this purpose, with power to add to their number.

In the course of conversation which followed, it was stated that several lodges in the county had not received notice of the intention to found a bursary, and it was suggested that time should be allowed them to consider the proposal.

The Provincial Grand Master said the committee would take steps to ascertain the wishes of the various lodges, and when they were in a position to report he would call a meeting to consider what was best to be done.

The motion was then agreed to, and the lodge was closed.

The brethren then adjourned to the dining hall, and sat down to the centenary dinner. About 100 brethren were present. The chair was occupied by R.W.M. Turnbull, St. Andrew's Lodge. The duties of croupier were discharged by Bro. Dr. M'Alister, Past G.M. St. Andrew's. A blessing having been asked by the Rev. Bro. Thomson, dinner was partaken of, thanks being returned by Bro. the Rev. — Blair. The usual loyal and constitutional toasts were afterwards given from the chair, and cordially responded to—"The Army, Navy, and Volunteers" being coupled with the names of Bros. Colonel Mure, Moyes, and Lieut. Gowan, who responded.

In the evening a Masonic festival was held in the George Hotel. Deputations attended as follows:—From Mother Kilwinning; St. John's Kilwinning; Kilmarnock, No. 22; Loudon Newmilns, 52; Troon Navigation, 86; St. Marnock's, Kilmarnock, 109; Mauchline St. Mungo, 179; Ayr Operative, 138; St. Clement's, Riccarton, 202; Maybole St. John's; Cumnock St. Barnabas; Blue Bell Kilwinning; Stevenson, Thistle and Rose; St. John's Cairne; Burns' St. Mary, Hurlford; St. Mungo, Paisley; Shamrock and Thistle (Glasgow), 275; Ayr St. Paul's; Stewarton Thistle; Irvine St. Andrew's, 149. The chair was occupied by R.W.M. Turnbull, who was supported by Bros. the Earl of Rosslyn and Earl of Dalhousie. A variety of toasts were given and responded to, the evening being very happily spent.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF HILLHEAD BURGH HALL.

The memorial stone of the Hillhead Burgh Hall and public offices was laid on Saturday afternoon under very favourable auspices. About three o'clock, those who were to take part in the proceedings began to arrive in the Botanic Gardens, the use of which was kindly granted for the purpose of marshalling the procession, and the Freemasons and volunteers in their parti-coloured uniforms, imparted to the gardens an air of animation pleasing to behold; there was also a large assemblage of spectators. Shortly after four o'clock the procession was formed, and proceeded in the following order, by way of Hamilton-drive, Bank-street, and University-avenue, to the Burgh Hall in Victoria-street:—County police, headed by Superintendent Cornelly; band of the Cumberland training ship, under Bandmaster Digweed and Inspector Bisset; Provost Magistrates, and Commissioners; 13th Hillhead battery (1st L.A.V.) commanded by Capt. John King and Lieut. A. B. Grant; the Provincial Grand Lodge—Bro. F. A. Barrow, depute P.G.M., in the absence of Bro. Walter Montgomerie Neilson. All the lodges in the Glasgow province, with the exception of the Robert Burns; and representatives from lodges Mother Kilwinning (No. 0), Hamilton Kilwinning (7), Kirkintilloch Kilwinning, St. John's (28), Doric Kilwinning (68), Royal Arch Pollok-shaws (153), Kilbarchan (156), Old Monkland, St. John's (177), Maybole (198), St. Andrew's (465), Busby St. John's (458). The working tools were carried by members of St. John's Lodge, Glasgow, No. 3 bis. The procession numbered altogether about 2000, and was attended by several bands of music.

Arrived at the scene of operations, the acting deputation of the Provincial Grand Lodge stationed themselves in front of the stand which had been erected for the accommodation of lady spectators. After prayer by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Burns, P.G.C., Provost Bruce was presented with a silver trowel and mallet, each bearing an appropriate inscription, with which he performed the ceremony, and the memorial plate was laid over the cavity—the band meantime playing appropriate music.

The ceremony over, the Commissioners and a number of friends adjourned to cake and wine in the hall of the Kelvinside Free Church—Provost Bruce in the chair—when "Prosperity to the Burgh of Hillhead" was given by the Provost, and drunk with honours. The other toasts were "The Queen and Royal Family," "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers;" "The Clergy," replied to by the Rev. Dr. MacEwen; "The Neighbouring Burghs of Partick, Govan, and Maryhill," replied to by Bailie Thomson, Partick; "The Provincial Lodge of Scotland, and Freemasonry," replied to by Bro. F. A. Barrow; and "The Ladies."

It may be added that the hall is in the Grecian style of architecture, that it is estimated to cost £6000, and that the architects are Messrs. Clarke and Bell, West Nile-street, Glasgow.

FREEMASONRY in IRELAND.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

(Concluded from page 307.)

In 1825 "a special grant to Bros. Fowler, Bryant, and McGill was issued by the Supreme Council for the Southern Jurisdiction, United States, for the establishment of a Supreme Council 33° in Dublin" (C. T. M'Clenachan's Book of the Ancient and Accepted Rite*) This is believed by some to have been the origin of the Rose Croix and other degrees in Ireland, but nothing could be further from the facts. Long before this warrant from the Supreme Grand Council S.J. was sent to Dublin, the Rose Croix and Knight Kadosh degrees had been worked in Ireland. When they were first worked in that country we cannot determine, neither can we tell from whence the authority was derived to work them. We have not been able to trace these degrees so early in Ireland as in England. At Bristol, we believe, are preserved the earliest records of the R.C. in connection with the Knights Templar. Brethren were only permitted to take the Rose Croix and K.H. after being dubbed as Knights of the Temple, and the chapter has continued independent and is still in working order. In 1808 was published at Dublin the "Orations of the Illustrious Bro. Frederick Dalcho, Esq., M.D., reprinted by permission of the author, under the sanction of the Ill. the College Knights of K.H., and the Original Chapter of Prince Masons of Ireland." The following correspondence on the subject may prove interesting, and serve to prove the fact that the Rose Croix and Knight Kadosh degrees were worked sometime before the warrant was sent from the United States as mentioned by that learned Mason Bro. C. T. M'Clenachan:—

Copy of an Extract transmitted to the Illustrious Brother Frederick Dalcho, Esq., M.D.

The fifth day of the month called Tisvi A.F. 492—The members of the Illustrious College of Heredom, Knights of K.H. of Ireland, assembled in ample form. The Grand Commander, and Grand Conservator of the Archives of the third great light, Brother John Fowler, on the throne, opened a sacred conclave. The following communication from the Original Chapter of Prince Masons being read, viz:—

September the 6th, 1806.

Resolved,—That our M.W.S. be requested to write to our respected Brother Doctor Frederick Dalcho, of Charleston, for 50 copies of his most excellent Oration, to be paid for by draft on Messrs. Latouche and Co., bankers, in this city, or requesting his permission to reprint the same.

The illustrious members then resolved unanimously—That we do most heartily approve of the same, and authorize our Register and Keeper of the Seals to present our Grand Commander with a sealed copy of this our determination, to be used as he shall think expedient.

(By order of John Fowler, Grand Commander)
PETER HEAPHY, Register.

JOHN BOYCE, sen., Keeper of the Seals.

To this letter Bro. Dr. Dalcho replied from Charleston, South Carolina, 25th February, 1808, and expressed himself highly gratified at the request, and stated it would be his ambition to prove worthy of the honour. On the ninth day of the month called Nisavi, A.F. 493, it was resolved by the "Ill. College" at Dublin:

"That our Grand Commander be requested to reprint the oration of our Illustrious Brother Frederick Dalcho, M.D., Knight of K.H. and Sovereign Grand Inspector-General in the United States of America, together with his very polite answer to an extract from the minutes of our transactions of the fifth day of the month called Tisvi, A.F. 492.

(Signed) "PETER HEAPEY, Register."

As might have been expected from the lax state of Masonic history early in this century, the author is in error frequently when writing about ancient Masonry; but, on the whole, the lectures are well worthy of being printed.

A note of a remarkable character is appended to page 64 of Dr. Dalcho's orations from the pen of the learned doctor himself. The report sent by "the Supreme Grand Council for 33° S.J. to all the Governing Lodges throughout the two Hemispheres," 4th of December, 1802, says nothing of Masonry in Ireland. In consequence of which the author of the orations observes, "In this part of the report the inspectors omitted to insert that, on the 20th of February, 5792 (A.D. 1788), the Royal Arch Chapter in this city (Charleston, U.S.), working under a warrant from Dublin, formed a junction with the Sublime Grand Lodge (i.e., of Ancient and Accepted Rite), and their members were received into our degrees free of expense, and were acknowledged as high as the 13th inclusive." The 13th degree in the foregoing report is styled the "Royal Arch," and the K.H. the 29th; and Dr. Dalcho likewise declares "His Royal Highness Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, &c., is at present the presiding officer of the degree of K.H. in England." In another part of the work Bro. John Fowler is stated to be the chief officer for Ireland.

Here our investigations end. We have done our best to afford light where mostly darkness has prevailed for some years. The Craft have now before them extracts from authorized documents relating to "Freemasonry in Ireland," and should other MSS. or printed papers present themselves to our notice in continuing our examination of the records and transactions of old Grand Lodges, we promise again to refer to the subject. In conclusion, we desire to express a hope that the writer of the interesting articles on "Freemasonry in England" will soon resume the "gavel," and complete the valuable and unique information which he has evidently at his disposal, and which we have so far, in common with Masonic students, been delighted to peruse.

FREEMASONRY & ISRAELITISM.

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

I cannot tell whether it has ever struck others as anything remarkable, that so large a number of professing Christians in the United Kingdom, the British Colonies, France, Germany, America, and other parts of the world should have adopted a system and united themselves in a body, the foundation of which is obviously and indisputably laid in JUDAISM—using this word in its widest sense as equivalent to ISRAELITISM. To me there is in the circumstance something very extraordinary. Without alluding to the moot question of the origin of Freemasonry, further then to say that I presume no person, now, how far back soever he may be disposed to carry the origin of the Craft, is prepared to carry it back to a period anterior to the Christian era, much less to actually believe that a lodge was held in the wilderness of Sinai, soon after the exodus of Israel from the land of their bondage. Much labour has been thrown away in attempts to identify ancient peoples with Freemasonry, upon no better proofs than those afforded by the fact, that they inculcated those obligations of morality and beneficence which are characteristics of the Craft. Our knowledge of Freemasonry, as a system or institution, carries us back to no very remote times, but plainly fixes its origin in Christian times and amongst Christian people. How comes it to pass, then, that the foundation and framework of Freemasonry should be of a purely Jewish character? Its traditions, its ceremonies, its ritual all bear the impress of, and are, in fact, rooted in Judaism. Christianity is unknown in our lodges—as lodges—but Judaism is recognised and accepted, and important lessons of faith and morality are deduced from it. The Teutonic race—especially the Saxon branch of it—is characterised by great tenacity of will in the maintenance of opinions and principles that have been deliberately formed and adopted, and especially in the maintenance of religious opinions and convictions; and no revolution or reformation has ever been effected amongst them, in either civil or religious affairs, until after long conflicts and much suffering. However loosely many amongst us hold both political and religious opinions, there are comparatively few amongst those who may be thought to exercise any influence on public opinion who would voluntarily and deliberately deny or repudiate their political or their religious convictions, especially the latter. The question then presses itself—In what way are we to account for the striking fact, that multitudes of Christians have united themselves together in a solemn bond, the basis of which is laid in Jewish history and traditions? Can it be accounted for upon the mere presumption, that Christians in common with Jews revere and hold sacred the Jewish Scriptures? I think not; for Christians do not, of course, revere and regard as less sacred the Christian Scriptures; and though they might and ought to do much to live in harmony and to co-operate in all good works with their Jewish brethren, the motive and disposition to unite with them must be very strong to induce them to put their own religious attachments and usages aside and to adopt those of the Jews. We hear, too, occasionally, that there are in the Craft brethren who do not attach any sacredness to either the Jewish or the Christian Scriptures, but who regard what we receive as authentic history as only so many myths, or, at best, exaggerated or magnified traditions. Yet these, like the Christian brethren, make no scruple in accepting obligations which mainly rest upon a Jewish foundation. I do not pretend to be able to solve this problem, which seems to me to be full of interest, and to point, possibly, to a conclusion of high import and importance; but this must be left for future consideration, should the subject be deemed worthy of occupying a place in the columns of THE FREEMASON.

THE HIGH GRADES IN IRELAND.

BY HISTORICUS.

We shall see from the following pamphlet all that we have been able to glean in regard to the Irish Council of Rites. We are inclined, however, to consider even a constitution of this nature as more regular than such a body claiming powers from a foreign source: for it would appear from the Grand Lodge Constitutions that the Irish Masons afterwards obtained a 33° warrant from America, and the authenticity of the spurious Ancient and Accepted Rite is assumed in these Constitutions. The Charleston patents are probably the most valuable, inasmuch as they augmented the rite. About the year 1808, one, Bro. Abraham Jacobs, after travelling over America, settled at New York. He had given the first 18 degrees to Bro. J. J. Gourgas, clerk to a Dr. de la Motta. Bro. Gourgas afterwards showed a patent in his own handwriting, signed, however, by Dr. de la Motta, of the remaining fifteen degrees, and upon this the, no doubt, worthy Bro. Gourgas founded an authorised and schismatic S.G. Council in New York, he being then a clerk upon a boat trading with England. To this body applied Drs. Nash, Goss, Oliver, and Leeson in 1845, and Bro. Gourgas was glad to oblige them with a warrant and patents of 33°. Immediately thereupon these brethren abrogated the Templar qualification, and gave the degrees to any M.M.; but Bro. Nash received his degrees in the Templar Camp at Bristol (and was afterwards expelled by his friends of the 33°), Bro. Oliver in the Templar Conclave of Hull, and Bros. Goss and Leeson, as has been stated, at London; so that, as a learned brother remarks, the origin of the English Council, "was a schism, emanating from a schismatic body, through a schism." But to the Irish pamphlet:

"It is true, indeed, that upon one solitary occasion the Grand Chapter allowed itself to be dragged from the usual tenor of its unobtrusive course. Its claims were openly denounced in the public newspapers. It publicly asserted its independence and long recognized rights. But upon that occasion alone, and then only when it became a necessary measure of self-defence against an act of public and unprovoked aggression, and a public appeal to the Masonic community, ever resorted to by the Grand Chapter. And since that period, while its enemies have been, during the last two years, unremitting and indefatigable in their exertions to promulgate unfairly their ex parte statements, and to assail the Grand Chapter by secret communications and whispered charges, which they have never ventured to bring to the test of open and impartial investigation, the Grand Chapter, in proud consciousness of the unimpeachable integrity of its pretensions and rights, has invariably acted by the conciliating rule of uniform forbearance and patience of injuries; content with the complete victory which it had achieved in respect of truth and argument, although outwitted by manoeuvre and finesse; and satisfied (more, perhaps, than a selfish prudence would have dictated) with reflection that so long as those who had ventured to impeach its title, still shrank from its public, recorded an abiding challenge it would best preserve its own dignity, and most effectively advance the harmony of the Craft in general by gently turning a deaf ear to misrepresentations breathed only in secret, and calmly suffering to pass unnoticed each repeated, weak exhibition of those unenviable feelings and each impotent sally of those inglorious tactics which love to injure, but are afraid to abide the consequences of an evil conflict.

"But, as in matters of less vital consequence than the arbitrary assumption of supreme power by the Council of Rites, the Grand Chapter has ever been manifest in its desire to tolerate the claims of that irregular society; so it is determined never to bow its neck beneath the yoke of illegal and unconstitutional usurpation. It never will submit to surrender up its indefeasible rights to the imperious demands of a chapter, whose only title must be derived through an irregular descent from the Grand Chapter itself.

"In the spirit of this resolution, the following statement has been compiled, at the request of several distinguished friends of the Grand Chapter, in order that every present or future member of it, and every Mason who may at any time feel an interest in the subject may be prepared to repel misrepresentation wherever met with, and may be preserved from the fatal errors into which some (even amongst the intelligent and respectable members of the Craft) have been heretofore too easily seduced.

"The obscurity in which the origin of primæval Masonry is involved has extended itself to the several causes and occasions of most of the Masonic orders which from time to time have sprung up during the lapse of ages, and the original source of the transcendent degree of the Prince Mason is now lost in the darkness of remote antiquity.

"But the grand revival of this Order, from which all chapters now in existence have arisen, took place about the commencement of the fourteenth century, immediately previous to the period when the splendid qualities of Robert Bruce, displayed in the assertion of his claim to the Kingdom of Scotland, vindicated the honour of his country and restored its national independence.

"By that distinguished patriot this illustrious Christian Order was revived in Scotland about the year 1302, and was by him placed upon that solid foundation upon which it has continued down to the present time.

"At what period this Order, which had been for ages buried in oblivion, was first revived in Ireland is not certainly known. Some suppose that Bruce himself re-established the mystery during his residence at Rathlin, or Rachrin, a small island off the Irish coast, where, with some of his faithful followers, he was for some time reduced to seek a refuge from the pursuit of his enemies. This opinion, however, is much shaken by the circumstance that the island had been totally uninhabited until it afforded to King Robert a place of safety and concealment; nor does it clearly appear that Bruce ever approached nearer to the Irish shores. But, however this may be, it is well known that when Edward, the brother of Robert Bruce, having been invited by the men of Ulster to aid them in their resistance to the English, landed at Carrickfergus, A.D. 1315, with a considerable army, that gallant and enterprising leader initiated a number of his Irish allies into this sublime degree, and formed a chapter in that ancient town, where traces of the existence of a great Lodge of Prince Masons may even now be found.

"By these means the art of Prince Masonry was introduced into Ireland, where it is still cultivated, and where, for upwards of 500 years, its pure light has been preserved.

"Among the Irish chapters which derive their descent in direct succession from this distinguished source one is that which has been long known and recognised under the style and title of 'The Grand Chapter of Ireland,' which chapter has held its meetings in Dublin for a great number of years, and still continues to hold them in that city. This chapter, until the last few years, used to meet only at intervals for the purpose of transacting important business, such as the granting of warrants, enacting laws, and conferring its pre-eminent degrees upon the most distinguished members of the Masonic Order.

"In the exercise of these functions it appears from its records that, on the 7th March, 1796 (in which year several noblemen and other eminent persons were added to the Grand Chapter), the late Grand Master of the Freemasons of Ireland, Lord Donoughmore, the predecessor of his Grace the Duke of Leinster, was advanced in this chapter to the honours of Prince Masonry; and on the 10th June, 1809, a warrant to form a subordinate chapter in Dublin was granted upon the memorial of several respectable brethren of the degree of H.K.T.

"Dublin, April, 1809.

"To the Officers and Brethren composing the Chapter of Prince Masons, held at the Eagle, in Eustace-street.

"Gentlemen and Brethren, It having been intimated to us, the undersigned Past Masters of Blue Masonic Lodges and High Knights Templar, that it is your intention to establish another Chapter of Prince Masons in this city, under your immediate protection, to be composed of such members as you shall approve of, and who shall be bound to adhere to the laws you shall prescribe, for the general regulation of that sublime degree, we beg to offer ourselves as candidates.

"Should we meet your approbation, we pledge ourselves to act in strict conformity to such instructions as we may receive.

"We remain, Gentlemen and Brethren,

"Yours most fraternally,

Henry Straban, P.M. 155; John Sharkey, P.M. 189; Thomas Grubb, P.M. 207; James Frederick Adamson, 620; Michael O'Brien, 54; William P. Graham, 6; Andrew Cosgrave, 189.

"The above memorial having been presented to the Grand Chapter about two months previously, was, on the 10th June, 1809, taken into consideration, whereupon it was resolved, 'that the request of said memorial be complied with.'

"By giving this warrant the Grand Chapter showed its willingness to communicate the knowledge of its high degrees to all respectable Masons, being duly qualified; a willingness which was the more necessary, because, except the Grand Chapter, there was at the time no other authorised or legal society of Prince Masons which met in Dublin or its vicinity, which circumstance was the cause of the above application in the year 1809.

"In the year 1800, a foreigner, named Emanuel Zimmerman, who had been previously admitted into the Grand Chapter, was expelled for having committed several acts inconsistent with the principles of the Order; this being the only instance of an expulsion from the chapter since its formation.

"In 1802, this Zimmerman, being so expelled, and thereby under a legal disability to communicate the honours of Prince Masonry, affected to elevate Bro. John Fowler, the present D.G.S. of the G.C., to the rank of a Sovereign Prince Mason.

"It is altogether unnecessary, and would be beside the present purpose to consider, or enquire, whether or not Emanuel Zimmerman ever received the mysteries of the chair, or whether he received them surreptitiously or in a regular manner. Not a semblance of proof, however; not a vestige of presumption, or of probability, has ever been adduced to show that he had, by any means, regular or irregular, obtained any higher degree than that which is conferred upon all the brethren in a Prince's Chapter; but whether he was or was not possessed of the degree of a Sovereign, his expulsion—which was for the most base and scandalous offences—totally deprived him of any previous right to confer, or assist in conferring, any of the honours or privileges of the Princely Order.

"In the year 1804, Bro. Fowler, after having in this manner obtained an insight into the mysteries, unceremoniously proceeded to the formation of a chapter, and began to make Prince Masons, producing as his authority for so doing a piece of paper or parchment, which he called an authorisation from the before-mentioned Emanuel Zimmerman, the degraded Mason, whose sentence was never afterwards rescinded.

"Now, of what use or validity was this paltry document? Zimmerman had not, at any time, the authority to communicate, even in the body of a lawful chapter, the degree of a Sovereign Prince, and, if even he had once been qualified to do so, his expulsion must have divested him of all such rights. Could he thus—could this wretched man (after his expulsion, too)—not only admit persons to honours which he had never himself received, but also communicate to a party so admitted, a personal authority to elevate others, clandestinely, whensoever he pleased, without the assistance and sanction of any chapter or even of any third person.

"It has been stated in some of the vague rumours that have been put into circulation on behalf of this Chapter of Zimmerman, that its title is, or may be, derived from some other less disreputable source; and it has also been reported that, within the last two years, and long after the assumption by that chapter of its modern title of a Council of Rites, it became ashamed of its origin, and that it has lately procured, from a Continental chapter, a warrant or authority to legalise its meetings. For the first of these reports the members of the Grand Chapter are not, in any manner, responsible. They can neither vouch for its correctness, nor, on the other hand, are they anxious to enquire whether or not the Chapter of Zimmerman is entitled to the benefit of the fact averred. They only protest against that circumstance (if, indeed, it be a fact) being taken for more than it is worth; its true and only value being merely to prove that the previous title was bad; while it remains to be proved—notwithstanding the aversion of the Zimmermanians to all and every process of inductive reasoning—that it was at all within the compass of the authority of a Mason, or Masons, in a foreign country, to establish a Masonic supremacy in Ireland, any more than it lies within the compass or authority of the said Mason, or Masons, to elect members to sit in the Imperial Parliament, to place a member of the Council of Rites upon the woolsack, or, by means of a few worthless words upon a scrap of paper, to delegate to Bro. John Fowler the right to fill the throne of the United Kingdom."

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

MASONRY IN SCOTLAND.

Since my last communication I have been engaged looking over the Grand Lodge Laws of Scotland for the years 1836 and 1848, copies of which, I believe, are rather scarce. The one of 1836 gives the laws and regulations pretty much as they are at present; that of 1848 not only gives a lengthy introduction, but a copious appendix, containing, among others, copies of charters granted to Sir William St. Clair, of Roslin, by the Masons of Scotland about 1628, and by William Schaw, Master of Works to King James VI., from 1584 to 1602. As I do not remember ever to have seen any detailed account of him in THE FREEMASON, and as his name is so intimately connected with the Freemasonry of Scotland, a few particulars regarding him may not be out of place, taking it as I do without any comment from Appendix 2, No. 2. William Schaw was born in the year 1550, and was probably a son of Schaw of Sauchie, in the shire of Clackmannon. He appears from an early period of life to have been connected with the Royal household. In proof of this we may refer to his signature attached to the original parchment deed of the National Covenant, which was signed by King James VI. and his household at the Palace of Holyrood, 28th of January, 1580-1. In 1584 Schaw became successor to Sir Robert Drummond, of Carnock, as Master of Works. This high appointment placed under his superintendence all the royal buildings and palaces in Scotland; and in the Treasurer's accounts of a subsequent period various sums are entered as having been paid to him in connection with these buildings for improvements, repairs, and additions. Thus, in September, 1585, the sum of £315 was paid "to William Schaw, his Majesty's Maister of Wark, for the reparation and mending of the Castell of Stinerling," and in May, 1590, £400, by his Majesty's precept, was "delyverit to William Schaw, the Maister of Wark, for reparation of the hous of Dumfermling, befor the Queen's Majestie passing thairto." Sir James Melville, in his memoirs, mentions that, being appointed to receive the three Danish Ambassadors who came to the country in 1585 (with overtures for an alliance with one of the daughters of Frederick II.), he requested the king that two other persons might be joined with him, and for this purpose he named Schaw and James Meldrum of Seggie, one of the Lords of Session. It further appears that Schaw had been employed in various missions to France. We know also that he accompanied James VI. to Denmark in the winter of 1589, previous to the King's marriage with the Princess Anna of Denmark. The marriage was celebrated by David Lyndesay, Minister of Leith, at Upslo in Norway, on the 23rd of November, and on the following morning the King, as "a morrowing gift," granted to the Queen's Grace the Lordship of Dumfermline and other lands in Scotland. The King and his attendants remained during the winter season in Denmark. Schaw returned to this country on the 16th of March, 1589-90, for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for the reception of the wedding party. This we learn from David Moysic, one of the clerks of Privy Council, whose memoirs furnish some minute and interesting particulars of occurrences at that time. He says: "About the 16th day of March William Schaw, Maister of Wark, came from the King out of Denmark with direction to cause the schippis the Burrowis had appoynted mak out for bringing his majestie homeward to outred (prepare) the Abbey (of Holyroodhouse), and to have all thingis in readiness for his majestie's hame-cumming quhilk suld be in Apryle nixt, schewing also that the Quene was with bairne, and that the King and his company had been weil entertained." Schaw brought with him a paper subscribed by the King, containing the "Ordour set down be his Majestie to be effectuat be his Hienes Secret Counsall, and preparit agane his Majestie's returne in Scotland," dated in February, 1589-90. The King and his royal bride arrived in Leith on the 1st of May, and remained there six days in a building called "The King's Work," until the Palace of Holyrood was prepared for their reception. Extensive alterations had evidently been made at this time at Holyrood as a warrant was issued by the Provost and Council of Edinburgh to deliver to William Schaw, Maister of Wark, the sum of £1,000, "rest and of the last taxation of £20,000" granted by the Royal Burroughs in Scotland, the sum to be expended "in biggin and repairing of his Hienes Palice of Halyrudhouse," 14th March, 1589-90. Subsequent payments to Schaw occur in the Treasurer's accounts for broad scarlet cloth and other stuff, for "burde claythes and coverings to forms and windows layth in the Kirk and Palace of Halyrudhouse." On this occasion various sums were also paid by a precept from the King for dresses, &c., to the ministers and others connected with the royal household "to buy thame cleithing the tyme of his darrest bed-fellow marriage and coronation." On this occasion we find William Schaw Maister of Wark, received £133 6s. 8d. The Queen was crowned on the 17th of May, and two days following she made her first public entrance into Edinburgh. The inscription on Schaw's monument states that he was, in addition to his office of Master of the Works, "Sacris ceremoniis præpositus" and "Reginæ Quæstor," which Monteith has translated "Sacrist and Queen's Chamberlain." This appointment of Chamberlain evinces the high regard in which the Queen held him; but there can be no doubt that the former words relate to his holding the distinguished office of General Warden of the ceremonies of the Masonic Craft, an office analogous to that of Substitute Grand Master as now existing. It may also be proper to state that we must not confound him with his namesake, William Schaw, his Majesty's Master Stabler, who, along with his brother, Mr. Peter Schaw, was slain in the tumult, in the Palace of Holyrood, occasioned by Francis, Earl of Bothwell, on the 27th of December, 1591. The King, we are told, made an oration the following day in St. Giles' Kirk "anent the fray and William Schaw's slaughter." Neither is he to be indentified with another person of the same name who was struck through the body with a rapier by Francis Mowbray, son of the Lord of Barnbough, in April, 1596. William Schaw died at the age of 52 in 1602, and was buried in the Abbey Church of Dumfermline, where a handsome monument was erected to his memory by Queen Anna with the following inscription (his name and monogram cut in a marble slab, which, tradition says, was executed by his own hand, and containing his mason's mark, is shown on the work this is taken from) in Latin, by Alexander Seton, afterwards Earl of Dumfermling and Lord Chancellor of Scotland, who died in April, 1627, aged 67. A translation by Robert Monteith, Edinburgh, in "The Theatre of Mortality," in 1713, is as follows:—

"To His Most Intimate Friend, WILLIAM SCHAW.

"Live with the Gods, thou worthy, live for ever,
From this laborious life death now doth thee deliver.
ALEXANDER SETON, D.F.

"This small structure of stone covers a man of excellent skill, notable probity, singular integrity of life, adorned with greatest virtues, William Schaw, Master of the King's Works, Sacrist, and the Queen's Chamberlain. He died as above. Among the living he dwelt 52 years; he had travelled France and many other kingdoms for improvement of his mind. He wanted no liberal art or science; was most skilful in architecture. He was early recommended to great persons for the singular gifts of his mind. He was not only unwearied with labours and business, and insuperable, but daily strenuous and strong. He was most dear to every good man who knew him; he was born to do good offices, and thereby to gain the hearts of men, now he lives eternally with God.

"Queen Anna caused this monument to be erected to the memory of this most excellent and most upright man, lest his virtues, which deserve eternal commendation, should fail or decay by the death or mortality of his body."

I intend, as soon as time permits, to give a verb. et lit. copy of "The Statutis and Ordinances to obseruit by all Maister Massounis within this Realme," as prepared by William Schaw in the year 1598, Master of the Works to King James the VI., which curious document has been printed from the original, bearing William Schaw's signature, contained in the records of the Lodge of Edinburgh, now called the Lodge of Edinburgh Mary's Chapel. I am not aware that it has ever been given at length before; if such should be the case, perhaps some brother will kindly inform, for although a good story cannot be too often told, still it is not necessary when the space can be better filled in the pages of THE FREEMASON.

THE PARIS FREEMASONS.

The following letter recently appeared in the columns of the Gloucester Journal:—

(To the Editor of the Gloucester Journal.)

"Dear Sir,—I enjoyed the friendship of the late Rev. Canon Calderbank, of this city, and had a long evening with him on the night of his lamented decease. Some of the more pleasant hours of my life have been spent in the society of Catholic priests, and six years ago, when on a holiday visit to Paris, I saw and conversed with ecclesiastics of that church. A facetious Catholic invariably introduced me as 'a heretic and a Freemason.' Avoiding religious discussion, and indeed, which was never courted on either side, I found other and congenial subjects on which to agree. My Arminian belief was never in danger from such intercourse, nor do I give credence to that oft-repeated allegation against Catholics that they 'will compass land and sea to make one proselyte.' I had to submit certainly to some very hard hits against Freemasonry, and to quotations from the famous Allocution of the present Pope that the Craft is 'leagued together for the common ruin of religion and of human society.' In France it was said that the Catholic priesthood had not greater enemies than were to be found in the ranks of Freemasons. I could only reply that whatever the Craft might be in other countries, in England we knew naught of disaffection to legally constituted authority, and that the Catholics had not greater friends than were to be found amongst English Freemasons, who taught and practised toleration to the fullest extent for all religious denominations so long as they did not run counter to the law of the realm.

"That it was upon record that when, but a few years ago, a nobleman, at a Masonic assembly in Ireland, took advantage of his position as president of the meeting to speak against the Catholic hierarchy, Masonic law and usage were pleaded against him, and the Grand Lodge in which he held office required him to make a public retraction.

"It was alike honourable to the Craft and to his Order that the noble delinquent candidly acknowledged the error of his ways, and promised not to repeat the offence. In my interviews with Catholic priests, it was known that I originated the memorial to Bishop Hooper in this city, who suffered martyrdom at the hands of the Catholic church, and that I was instrumental in the Freemasons laying the foundation-stone of the monument. I could but affirm that the Freemasons did not do this from any hostile feeling to the Roman Catholics, but as a protest against the cruelties of bygone times, and to testify in these days of toleration, in the words of Goethe, that 'kindness is the golden chain by which the world is held together,' directing to persecute and condemn no one, but to love, succour, console and improve all.

"Protestants have their 'Book of Martyrs,' but if the history of nations were impartially written, all religions would be found blameable. 'Let him that is without offence cast the first stone.' Mary persecuted and put to death Protestants. Elizabeth was an intolerant bigot, and as a learned historian with no Catholic leanings, says, 'malignant' in her persecution of her Catholic and Protestant subjects. The barbarities practised during the reign of the Virgin Queen were a dishonour to our common humanity. But I have been very recently reminded of old arguments adduced by me in defence of the Craft to which I belong, and I have been good-humouredly taunted with the action taken by the Freemasons in Paris, and of the assertion of Citoyen Allix, a member of the Commune, that 'the Commune of Paris puts in practice that which Freemasonry has long since affirmed, that the reconstruction of the Temple was certainly of this epoch—the re-organisation of labour.' To this bathos I appeal to Masonic law, which inculcates, 'A Mason is a peaceable subject to the civil powers wherever he resides or works, and is never to be concerned in plots and conspiracies against the peace and welfare of the nation. He is cheerfully to conform to every lawful authority, to uphold on every occasion the interests of the community, and zealously promote the prosperity of his own country.

Masonry has ever flourished in times of peace, and been always injured by war, bloodshed, and confusion.

"The Paris Freemasons have covered themselves with obloquy and ridicule, and are without the pale of the Order. But the murky cloud which has settled upon Freemasonry in Paris is not without its silver lining. H. Hamel, of the Lodge L'Avenir, protests in the Steele against 'individuals arrogating to themselves the right of committing a corporation which numbers adherents in both camps to acts which, not being purely those of fraternal conciliation, are unfaithful to the primordial law of Masonry.'

"But what concerns me is the avcrment that the Paris Freemasons who threw in their lot with the insurgents have been influenced by a latent feeling of opposition to the Roman Catholic priesthood. I am afraid this can be verified. Still they stand condemned, as H. Hamel testifies.

"The great element in Freemasonry, and which has ever recommended it to my warmest sympathies, is (Communitic let it be) that we labour to bring together upon a common platform of social intercourse men of all religious creeds, and of varied shades of political opinion, to work in the cause of charity and for the alleviation of human suffering. 'Thus Masonry is the centre of union between good men and true, and the happy means of conciliating friendship amongst those who must otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance.'

"I am, dear sir, yours truly,
HENRY JEFFS.

CONSECRATION of the BLACKHEATH LODGE, No. 1320.

After a long time, as the number will indicate, has elapsed since the warrant of this lodge has been granted (through a combination of unforeseen events, which unavoidably caused the lodge to remain unopened, notably among them being the alteration of place of meeting), the consecration of this lodge took place on Wednesday, May 10th, at the Crown Hotel, Blackheath Village, Blackheath.

The lodge was opened by that veteran consecrating officer Bro. H. Muggeridge, P.M. 192, the officer appointed for the purpose by the M.V. Grand Master, the Earl de Grey and Ripon (and who has so frequently done this all-important ceremony, and we are pleased to note him again resuming his labours in that capacity), who appointed as his officers Bros. J. Hamilton Townsend, W.M. 715, as S.W.; Henry Birdseye, S.D. 715, as J.W.; James Clemmans, 715, S.D. 1309, as Organist. The ceremony of the consecration was most beautifully rendered, and the entire long programme was regularly carried out. Bro. Muggeridge then installed Bro. Henry Collington, P.M. 140, P.M. and Treasurer 871, as the first W.M., who appointed as his officers Bros. E. M. Hubbuck, P.G.S., P.M. 58, P.M. 140, S.W.; Walter Noak, P.M. 140, J.W.; E. W. Pook, P.M. 140, S.D.; Webster, Sec. The usual charges were then given by Bro. H. Muggeridge in his well-known and superior style. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the usual vote of thanks and other compliments were given to Bro. H. Muggeridge for his kind assistance as the consecrating officer, and we are pleased to bear our testimony that he never rendered the ceremonies any better than what he did on this occasion. It was most pleasing to all who were fortunate enough to be present to listen to him doing his work so well.

Several joining members and candidates for initiation were proposed. The lodge was closed.

We congratulate the brethren who have undertaken with such success the formation of this new lodge. Several residents of Blackheath and its vicinity have from time to time made attempts at doing so. Meetings have been held for such a purpose, but nothing has been carried out. Now, we have a body of energetic brethren, well-known in the locality, and we have no doubt they will make this lodge a great success. They have carried into effect what they have undertaken, and no doubt amongst the large number of brethren who reside at Blackheath, very many will avail themselves of the opportunity of joining the local lodge, which has the speciality of being a summer lodge. The brethren adjourned to a good banquet.

Amongst the large number of brethren present we noticed Bros. Col. Perkins, W.M. 5; T. H. Brankston, P.G.S., 46; W. E. Jackson, P.G.S.; C. J. Hogg, P.G.S.; W. Kibble, P.M. 715; H. Pook, late 766; and several other brethren.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by my physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, Jan. 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Egyptian Lodge, No. 27.—The last meeting of the season of this celebrated old lodge was held on Thursday, the 4th inst., at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street. Bro. T. Sheppard, W.M., opened the lodge. There were also present: Bros. J. Palmer, S.W.; Atkins, J.W.; B. P. Todd, P.M., Treas.; H. G. Buss, P.G.T. of Middlesex, P.M., Sec.; F. Harrison, S.D.; Lambell, J.D.; Donald M'Ree, I.G.; J. B. Poole, I.P.M.; J. Coutts, G.P., P.M.; H. Jacobs, D. G. Berri, W. H. Libbis, P.M.'s; and a large number of the brethren. After the lodge was opened, and the minutes of the preceding meeting had been unanimously confirmed, the W.M., Bro. T. Sheppard, in a correct, impressive, and superior manner, raised Bros. J. Gheek and G. F. Payne to the third degree, passed Bros. L. Benjamin and J. Bangs to the second degree, and initiated Mr. J. Soldini into Masonry. The officers, as usual in this lodge, were perfect in their work. It was then unanimously agreed to hold a summer banquet at Kew in July, and the lodge was duly closed. There was no banquet, and the brethren separated.

Lodge of Unity, No. 183.—This old lodge held its last meeting of the session on Monday, the 22nd inst., at the London Tavern, City. Bro. Wadling, W.M., opened the lodge, and there were present Bros. Garrett, S.W.; Broombridge, J.W.; Moore, S.D.; Collins, J.D.; Spencer, I.G.; Rev. Shaboe, P.M., Chaplain; G. Thompson, I.P.M.; Speth, P.M., Treas.; Taylor, P.M.; Vasey, P.M.; and others. The much respected Secretary, Bro. Doggett, P.M., was absent through ill-health, greatly to the regret of the brethren. The minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, the newly-installed W.M. made his maiden effort at work by raising Bro. Dixie to the third degree, and was highly complimented on the correct and highly impressive manner in which he went through the ceremony, the other officers adding to its beauty by the perfect style in which each performed his part. The W.M., on behalf of the lodge presented to the I.P.M., Bro. Thompson, with a massive gold P.M.'s jewel, bearing a suitable inscription. In so doing, the W.M. expatiated at some length on the services rendered by that brother during his Mastership of the lodge. Bro. Thompson acknowledged the gift in very appropriate terms. A vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Todd, P.M., for his efficient services as Installing Master at the previous meeting. Some formal business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed. A superior banquet followed, the usual toast were duly honoured, and with the good singing of some of the brethren, a few hours were most agreeably spent. Bros. F. Walters, M. H. Winder, and T. W. Rogers were present as visitors.

Bardon Lodge, No. 619.—This lodge met on Wednesday, at the Greyhound, Dulwich. Bro. Saul Wells, W.M., occupied the chair. Bro. J. Daly, Tyler, having died since the last meeting, and the Treasurer having resigned, the brethren elected Bro. W. Y. Laing to the former, and Bro. Charles Potter, P.M., to the latter office. On the transfer of the duties from the late to the present Treasurer, an Audit Committee was, at the late Treasurer's request, appointed; and Bro. Leeuw then proposed, and Bro. Captain Smith seconded, the names of Messrs. Edward Wright, W. Lockett, and William Angus for initiation at next meeting. An excellent dinner was afterwards partaken of, and the brethren spent a most happy evening together.

Panmure Lodge, No. 720.—This lodge held its installation meeting on Monday the 15th inst., at the Balham Hotel, when were present Bros. James M. Young, W.M.; Henry F. Huntley, S.W.; H. F. Hodges, J.W.; J. Poore, S.D.; Paine, J.D.; E. Pulman, I.G.; John Thomas, P.M., Treas.; J. B. Wolpert, P.M.; R. W. Huntley, Lilley, Maddern, Duck, Lane, and Withall. The visitors were Bros. James Stevens, P.M. 1216, and P.M. of this lodge; Edward Worthington, P.M. 507; W. Simmons and Edward Bye. The lodge having been duly opened, Bro. Lane was examined, entrusted, and subsequently raised to the sublime degree of M.M. Bro. John Thomas, P.M., then occupied the chair of K.S., and in his usual effective and impressive manner, installed Bro. H. F. Huntley as W.M. for the ensuing year, and completed the full ceremony by delivering the addresses to officers and brethren. The newly-installed Master at once commenced his work by initiating in very perfect style Mr. W. Trusler, and then closed his lodge. The new officers of the lodge are: Bros. H. F. Huntley, W.M.; James M. Young, I.P.M.; H. F. Hodges, S.W.; J. Poore, J.W.; John Thomas, P.M., Treas.; James M. Young, P.M., Sec.; Paine, S.D.; C. Pulman, J.D.; Withall, I.G.; Maddern, D.C.; and Duck, W.S. The usual installation banquet followed labour, the provision for which and the attention given throughout to the comfort of the brethren, amply merited the oft-repeated acknowledgment accorded to Bro. Lilley, at whose hotel the lodge holds its meetings. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to; that of "The I.P.M." calling up Bro. James Young, who expressed his thanks both for the handsome jewel with which the lodge had presented him, and the enthusiastic reception of his name. The initiate and the visitors respectively replied when called upon, and Bro. Worthington sang, in good style, Bro. Stevens' Masonic song, "What better theme than Masonry?" Song followed song, and harmony prevailed until the "time for trains" arrived, when the brethren separated well satisfied with their successful meeting.

Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216.—A meeting of this prosperous lodge took place at the head quarters of the 1st Surrey Rifles, Camberwell-road, on Wednesday, the 10th inst. Bro. James Stevens, W.M., opened the lodge at the appointed hour, and was ably supported by his officers. This being the installation night, Bro. S. H. Wagstaff was presented, and received the benefit of that ceremony, which was worked in an admirable manner by Bro. J. Stevens. The new W.M. gave a specimen of his ability by working the ceremony of initiation. It was proposed by Bro. Dubois, and resolved, that an inscription on vellum be presented to Bro. J. Stevens as a testimony of respect and esteem, and as an acknowledgment of the manner in which he had exerted himself for the welfare of the lodge. A magnificent banquet, served a la Russe, followed, and after the cloth was drawn, the usual toasts were given and duly honoured. The W.M., in proposing the health of the I.P.M., eulogised Bro. Stevens for the manner in which he had carried out the duties of W.M. for the past year, and presented him with a splendid 18-carat gold diamond mounted P.M. jewel. It bears the following inscription:—"1871. Presented to Bro. James Stevens, P.M., by the brethren of the Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216, in earnest appreciation of his valuable services as principal founder of the lodge, and as W.M. during the past year."—Bro. Stevens returned thanks, and said that he looked upon the Macdonald Lodge as he did on his own children; he felt a father's feelings towards the lodge in general, and as a brother to every individual member. He hoped they should go on and prosper, and allow no dissensions to disturb their harmony.—Among the visitors were Bros. Bridges, P.G.S.B.; Parsons, P.S.G.W. Surrey; Jordan, P.M. of an Indian Lodge; and Jesse Owens, Finsbury, 861. Several members were present, including Bros. Meggy, John Thomas, Curtis, Sec., &c.—Bro. Stevens sang his celebrated song "What better theme than Masonry?" and other brethren contributed to the harmony of a most enjoyable evening.

PROVINCIAL.

RINGWOOD, HANTS.—Unity Lodge, No. 132.—The usual meeting of this ancient lodge took place on the 9th inst., W. Bro. Budden, W.M. 622, officiating as W.M. The only ceremony worked was the passing of Bro. Lawrence, which was done by the W.M. in his usual correct and impressive manner. The charge was delivered by W. Bro. Edsall, W.M. Amity, 137, and the lecture on the tracing board given by Bro. Reade, S.W., 132. Several members of the lodge were absent, but all who were present were much impressed by the correct working of the W.M. After the lodge was closed, a banquet followed with the usual toasts. The health of "The W.M. and Lodge 622" (St. Cuthberga, Wimborne) was proposed by Bro. Reade.—Bro. Budden, in responding, expressed his willingness to assist 132 in every way, and his pleasure at seeing so old and good a lodge resuscitated.—Bro. Low, the Treasurer, announced a good balance in hand, a state of things to which 132 for some years has been a stranger. Bro. Reade alluded to this, and hoped that the lodge would subscribe to all the charities—it at present possessing only a life vote for the Boys' School—a suggestion which met with unanimous approval.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—A meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 18th inst., the W.M., Bro. T. H. Buzzard, in the chair, and the following brethren also being present: W. Kelly, P.M. and R.W.P.G.M.; George Toller, jun., I.P.M. and P.G. Sec.; W. B. Smith, P.M. and P.P.G.J.W., Treasurer; C. Johnson, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W. Jersey, Org.; W. Sculthorpe, S.W.; Rev. Dr. Hayeroff, P.G.C., J.W.; F. J. Baines, Sec.; S. S. Partridge, P.G. Reg., S.D.; J. G. F. Richardson, J.D.; G. B. Atkins and A. Sergeant, Stewards; E. Mace, I.G.; C. Bembidge, Tyler; C. S. Thomson, A. Ross, W. T. Rowlett, F. Parsons, C. A. Spencer, Dr. Clifton, and C. Whitaker. Visitors: Bros. C. Stretton, P.P.G. Reg., W.M., and W. Wear, P.P.G.S.D., P.M. and Treas., No. 279; and Dr. Loughnan, No. 724. On the minutes of the last meeting being read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for the W.M. for the ensuing year, which resulted in the unanimous election of the S.W., Bro. W. Sculthorpe, who returned thanks to the brethren for the honour conferred upon him. It was arranged that the annual festival should take place on Friday, June 23rd, in lieu of Saturday, St. John's Day. A vote of thanks for past services was unanimously accorded to Bro. Thomas Cooper, P.P.G.S.W., a retired P.M. of the lodge, and he was nominated as an honorary member. Two gentlemen having been proposed as candidates for Masonry, it was resolved to take their initiation at an emergency meeting. The Prov. G.M., on behalf of Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, presented to the library of the hall four curious photo-lithographic Masonic plates, a tracing-board, and the "Report of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Columbia" for the past year, for which the thanks of the lodge were voted to the W. Bro. Hughan for these additions to his former donations. There being no further business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge, No. 1094.—This lodge held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, the 10th inst., being opened in due form by Bros. David Watt Winstanley, W.M.; William Crane, P.M.; Smith, P.M.; Dawson, S.W.; Gilbert, J.W.; Jos. Wood, Treas.; Marsh, Sec., P.M., P.G.A.D.C.; Sweeting, S.D.; Martin, J.D.; Washington, M.C.; J. Deacon, Organist; and Pickup and Yelland, Stewards. Visitors: Bros. General Hines, New York; Vines, W.M. 1299; &c. Minutes of installation, &c, having been read, and the ballot taken for Mr. William Lupton, barrister-at-law, he was declared duly elected for initiation. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when Bros. Duff and Walters were duly passed to the degree of F.C. by the W.M., which ceremony he performed in admirable style, the working tools being given by Bro. Dawson,

S.W. There being no other business, the lodge was closed in due form.

WEST DERBY.—Pembroke Lodge, No. 1299.—The members of this lodge held their usual monthly meeting on the 20th ult., at Rawlinson's Hotel, West Derby, near Liverpool. Owing to the inclemency of the weather there was not quite such a large muster of the brethren as has hitherto distinguished this young lodge. Bro. Vines, W.M., presided, and was ably supported in his duties by the following officers: Bros. Wm. Crane, P.M.; Sellars, S.W.; Thos. Marsh, P.G.D.C. West Lancashire, and P.P.G.S.B., as J.W.; Clayton, Treas.; P. Macmurdrow, Sec.; Wm. Jones, S.D.; Wm. Wilson, J.D.; Cotter, I.G.; J. Cook, D.C.; Kelly, S.S.; &c. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, Mr. Adam Roberts Murthwaite was initiated, two joining members elected, and another was proposed for election. The W.M. then rose, and addressing the I.P.M., Bro. Crane, in a neat speech presented him with the following address, which had been engrossed upon vellum, illuminated in a high style of art, and enclosed in a handsome gilt frame:—

"To Bro. William Crane, P.M. Pembroke Lodge, No. 1299, of Free and Accepted Masons.

"We, the undersigned, on behalf of the members of the Pembroke Lodge, avail ourselves, upon the occasion of your retirement from the chair, to testify our deep sense of the uniform courtesy and able manner in which you have during your term of office discharged the duties of W.M. We heartily congratulate you upon the honourable position to which the Pembroke Lodge has attained under your care and guidance as the first Worshipful Master, and sincerely trust your life may be spared to see it second to none in the province.

(Signed) W.M. S. VINES, W.M.
JOHN SELLARS, S.W.
JOSEPH CLEGG, J.W.
HENRY CLAYTON, Treas.
PETER MACMURDROW, Sec.
WM. JONES, S.D.
JAMES COOK, D.C.
EDWIN HUGHES.

"West Derby, 1871."

Bro. Crane acknowledged the testimonial in suitable terms, expressing the gratification it gave him to find that his efforts for the welfare and success of the young lodge had met with the approval of his brethren and fellow-helpers, and assured them that they would always have his heartfelt sympathies and best wishes. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a substantial supper provided by Bro. Rawlinson, after which the usual toasts were drunk, and many excellent songs enlivened the proceedings. The visitors present were Bros. Capt. Allan Morison (263), Joseph Slade (1219), John Evans (220), Cookson (W.M. 1182), and Leighton (594), who each and all expressed themselves much gratified with the pleasure they had experienced in visiting the Pembroke on this occasion.

BROMLEY, KENT.—Acacia Lodge, No. 1314.—This most flourishing lodge held its regular meeting on Tuesday, the 9th instant, at the Bell Hotel. Bro. Alfred Avery, P.G.D.C. Middlesex, W.M., opened the lodge, and was supported by Bros. R. H. Williams, S.W. and Treas.; T. Knott, J.W.; E. Coste, P.M. and Sec.; Saul Wells, S.D.; Manger, J.D.; W. Seaman, I.G.; C. Warwick Jordan, Org.; J. W. Avery, P.M.; W. H. Baylis, W. Holland, J. Wyer, J. Savill, J. Bell, Manley, H. A. Lovett, R. Myatt, W. Sutton, J. J. Laskey, J. Barrett, and others. The visitors were: Bros. F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 1309; Pettit (95), S. Groves (95), F. Ridley (186), J. E. Brook (975), &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The W.M., in his well-known superior style and with his customary ability, raised Bro. James Bell, passed Bros. Sutton, Chubb, and Ellis (of Albion Lodge, No. 9) to the second degree, and then initiated Messrs. William Pratt Barrett, Arni Jaccard, and George Norris Kingstone into Freemasonry. Each candidate in the several degrees was introduced separately, and the ceremonies were accompanied with music, Bro. C. W. Jordan, the well-known organist, presiding at the harmonium in a manner scarcely to be equalled by any one. All the officers were well-up in their work, and none more so than the W.M., to whom all praise must be given for the admirable manner in which, as the first W.M., he has succeeded in establishing such a good lodge in the province of Kent, and one that any one may be justly proud of. Never were ceremonies better worked anywhere, and each candidate must have been fully impressed with the degree he had passed through. It was a great treat to all who were present to witness the ceremonies of the Order so beautifully carried out. The by-laws were read, after which the brethren balloted for W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Thomas Knott, J.W., was unanimously elected to that high position. Bro. R. H. Williams was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. J. Bavin P.M., re-elected Tyler. The Audit Committee was elected, and agreed to meet at the Queen's Arms Tavern, Weston-street, Bermondsey, which is famous for the large number of audit meetings held there every season—it being one of the most suitable houses in the metropolis for such a purpose. The Treasurer, Bro. R. H. Williams, in a feeling speech alluded to the efficient services of the W.M. who was about to vacate the chair, and proposed "That a six-guinea Past Master's jewel be presented from the lodge funds to Bro. Alfred Avery, P.G.D.C. Middlesex, their W.M., for the good suit and service rendered to the lodge, and great ability and talent he had displayed in rendering all the ceremonies in such a painstaking and efficient manner." This was carried by acclamation, and Bro. A. Avery acknowledged the high compliment which had been paid him. It is understood that this sum voted for the jewel is but a nucleus of the fund which will be raised by voluntary contributions of the members so as to present the W.M., in addition to his jewel, with something of more value and use in his own home, so that his wife and family may see and know how deservedly he is respected by the brethren of this lodge. A ballot was taken for Bro. Charles Bayley, of No. 9, and he was declared to be unanimously elected a joining member. Bro. F. Ridley, of No. 186, was proposed as a joining member. Bro. T. Knott, J.W. and W.M.-elect, was able, in the course of the evening, to announce what a large sum he had collected as their Steward when representing them at the Girls' School Festival. The lodge was closed, and the installation will be held on Tuesday, July 11th. Being an off-night, instead of banquet a superior supper was served (which in the majority of lodges would have passed for a banquet), and after the cloth was cleared, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, Bro. F. Walters responding for "The Visitors." Some excellent songs were sung—Bro. Manley singing "Thou art so near and yet so far," Bro. Ridley, "The Minute Gun at Sea," Manger, "The Man at the Nore," and some others. The Tyler's toast brought a most agreeable evening to a pleasant termination.

HAMPTON, MIDDLESEX.—Lebanon Lodge, No. 1326.—The first meeting of the season of this prosperous lodge was held on Wednesday, 17th inst., at the Red Lion Hotel, Hampton. Punctually at five o'clock the W.M., Bro. John Thomas Moss, opened the lodge. The minutes of the last regular and several emergency meetings were read and confirmed, after which a letter was read from Bro. W. Harvey, J.W., resigning his membership, which was received with regret. The W.M. then appointed the following officers, viz., Bros. R. Bowman, J.W.; J. F. Woodley, S.D.; G. Banks, J.D.; and J. Thomas, I.G. Bros. H. A. Dubois and Scott were elected joining members, and a ballot proved favourable to several candidates for initiation, who through ill-health and other causes were absent. The presiding officer, in an able manner, then raised Bro. Arthur Overton, 1309, to the third degree. Other joining members and candidates for initiation were proposed, and the lodge was closed. Refreshment followed labour. Present, besides those named: Bros. Wickens, S.W.; Hammond and Potter, P.M.'s; and others. Visitors: Bros. J. T. H. Moss and A. Devereux, 169, W. Haines, 184, A. Overton, 1309, &c.

MARKET HARBOUROUGH.—St. Peter's Lodge, No. 1330.—The last regular meeting of this young and flourishing lodge before the summer recess was held at the Assembly Rooms, Three Swans' Hotel, on Friday, the 5th instant, the W.M., Bro. Kelly, R.W. Prov. G.M., in the chair. There were also present: Bros. Rev. J. F. Halford, P.G.C., J.W.; R. Waite, P.M., Treas.; W. H. Marris, P.M., Sec.; F. Kemp, S.D.; Dixon, Org.; Lewin as I.G.; Freestone, Fuller, Heggate (M.R.C.S.), F. Grant (M.D.), Laurence, Shovelbottom, Harrison, Platford, Rev. F. M. Beaumont, Healey, Martin, Gibbs, and Clarke, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. S. Jacob, P.M. 445 and P.G.S.W. Northamptonshire and Hunts; Charles Johnson, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W. Jersey; P. J. Baines, Sec. 523 and P.G. Steward; and A. Palmer, S.D. 279. Apologies were received for the unavoidable absence on military duty of Bro. Col. Sir Henry St. John Halford, Bart., S.W., and Lieut. Douglas, J.D., and also of Bro. T. Macaulay, M.R.C.S., I.G., by a professional engagement. On the lodge being opened in the first degree and the minutes read and confirmed, certificates were delivered to such as were present out of between twenty and thirty brethren raised in the lodge since its opening in September last. A F.C.'s lodge was then opened, and Bro. Gibbs went through a highly-satisfactory examination in that degree, after which he was duly raised to the degree of M.M. Bro. Dixon, Organist, presided at the harmonium, and with the assistance of Bros. Johnson, Palmer, Freestone, and others, gave the musical chants. The ceremony being concluded with the traditional narrative, &c., the lodge was regularly closed down to the first degree, after which a gentleman having been proposed for initiation, the lodge was closed and adjourned to Michaelmas Day. The brethren then assembled at the banquet, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, interspersed with songs by Bro. Johnson, Palmer, and Healey, and the brethren finally separated after a very pleasant reunion.

ROYAL ARCH.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Chapter, No. 1051.—The regular meeting of this chapter was held on Monday, the 15th instant, at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. There were present: Comps. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.Z., as M.E.Z.; William Hall, L.R.C.P., II.; N. G. Mercer, M.D., J.; J. L. Whimpray, E.; W. Hall, as N.; Edmund Simpson, P.S.; W. Heald, R. Taylor, and J. Watson. The chapter was opened in due form, minutes read, confirmed, and signed by the Principals, and other business transacted. There being a vacancy for an Assistant Sojourner, Comp. E. Simpson, P.S., nominated Comp. Heald for that office, and he was duly invested by the M.E.Z. The chapter was then resolved into a preceptory of instruction, under the direction of Comp. Dr. Moore, after which it was closed in due form.

MARK MASONRY.

Kent Lodge.—This old time-immemorial lodge held its quarterly meeting on Tuesday, May 9th., at Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, E.C., when were present: Bros. F. J. Cox, W.M.; W. Stone, S.W.; S. Rosenthal, J.W.; D. Shaboe, Chap.; J. H. Wynn, Treas.; Marfleet, Dewar, Tustin, and H. W. Binckes. The lodge was then duly opened, and Bro. C. I. Paton, a Scotch Mark Master, was then obligated under the English Constitution. Bro. L. Spelman, of Craft Lodge No. 435, being in attendance, was balloted for, and regularly advanced to this interesting degree. The W. Bro. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O., then proceeded to the installation of the W.M.-elect, Bro. W. Stone, who was in due form invested and inducted into the chair. The brethren having been re-admitted, the W.M. then proceeded to appoint his officers as follows: Bros. S. Rosenthal, S.W.; H. W. Chadwick, J.W.; H. Marfleet, M.O.; J. Gower, S.O.; S. C. Hadley, J.O.; W. Roebuck, S.D.; Wm. Dewar, J.D.; J. H. Wynn, Treas.; H. W. Binckes, Sec.; L. Spelman, I.G.; and Gilchrist, Tyler. The W.M. then re-appointed Bro. Rev. D. Shaboe as Chap. Nothing further offering for the good of Mark Masonry, the lodge was then closed in due form until the second Wednesday in August. The brethren then adjourned to an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. C. Gosden, which gave universal satisfaction, and after a few hours of harmony and brotherly love, a most pleasant evening was brought to a close.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

IPSWICH.—Royal Phaulstegut Encampment.—The members of this conclave met at their field of encampment at the Masonic Hall, on the evening of Ascension Day. The minutes of the last conclave having been confirmed, Sir Kt. J. H. Townsend, Captain of Lines of the province of Suffolk and Cambridge, was installed Eminent Commander for the ensuing year, the ceremony having been performed by Sir Kt. Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 30<sup>o</sup>, Prov. D.G. Commander of the united provinces of Suffolk and Cambridge. The Sir Knights were honoured on this occasion by the presence of the highly-respected Prov. G. Commander Captain N. G. Philips, 33<sup>o</sup>. The newly-installed E.C. having appointed his officers, the encampment was closed in ancient form.

INSTRUCTION.

The fifteen sections were worked on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at the Confidence Lodge of Instruction, held at Bro. Forster's, Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. We have never yet had the pleasure of recording a more successful meeting. Bro. Verry occupied the chair; Bros. Gottheil, P.M.; Barnes, S.W.; Hogard, J.W.; Atkins, I.G.; C. C. Taylor, Treas.; Felton, Hon. Sec.; Austin, Saunders, Clarke, Yelch, Salmonese, Batly, Harfield, Constable, Berry, Ross, Richardson, Goldberg, Benjamin, Soldini, Hollington, Radford, Murphy, Partington, Johnson, Myers, Clayton, Snelling, Pinnell, Lazarus, Ducas, Genese, Bradbrook, and M. Davies. After the usual preliminaries, the sections were carefully and correctly worked as follows:—1st lecture: 1st section, Bro. Berry; 2nd, Bro. M. Davies; 3rd, Bro. Snelling; 4th, Bro. Berry; 5th, Bro. Barnes; 6th, Bro. Gottheil; 7th, Bro. Saunders. 2nd Lecture: 1st section, Bro. Harfield; 2nd, Bro. Austin; 3rd, Bro. Hogard; 4th, Bro. Barnes; 5th, Bro. Saunders. 3rd Lecture: 1st section, Bro. Gottheil; 2nd, Bro. Hogard; 3rd, Bro. Berry. The lodge was then resumed to the 1st degree, and the following brethren elected members: Bros. Partington (147), T. Johnson (1000), W. H. Myers (820), G. Clayton (1259), W. Snelling (180), L. Pinnell (1076), L. Lazarus (188), J. Soldini (27), M. Benjamin (27), B. Ducas (95), G. Hollington (933), S. Genese (188), Bradbrook (1259), and Berry (554). A vote of thanks to the W.M. for the admirable manner in which he had carried out the duties of the chair, also that he should be elected an honorary member, was unanimously carried. Bro. Hogard was also unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week.—The W.M. having, in an able speech, thanked the brethren for their attendance, more especially those who had come miles to support him, the lodge was closed; and this brought the evening to a very harmonious close.—Upon the above proceedings it would be entirely superfluous to make any comment—it speaks for itself—unless it be that we consider that Bro. Verry has almost arrived at the summit of his (Masonic) profession. He was perfect master of the fifteen sections, as also the duties appertaining to the position of W.M. His urbanity in the chair, as well as in his private capacity, gains for him many friends, to which the fullness of the room (not a seat vacant) fully testifies.

FREEMASONRY IN CORNWALL.—Bro. W. J. Hughan, the Prov. Grand Sec. of Cornwall, who has done so much for the literature of Freemasonry, has just issued a valuable little Directory for the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall. It contains a list of the 24 lodges of the province, the days on which, and the towns in which, they meet, an account of the annual meetings and festivals of the P. G. Lodge of Cornwall, a list of the officers of the P. G. Lodge, and a list of the past and present officers and members of the P. G. Lodge. Appended to this useful little work is an analysis of returns for 1869-70, from which it appears that there were 89 initiations in 1869 and 107 in 1870; 24 joining members in 1869 and 27 in 1870; total, 834 in 1869 and 869 in 1870. In 1869 there were 173 Past Masters, and in 1870, 189. To those who want information of the personnel of the different lodges, this will be a valuable text book.

"The Fair Sex and Adoptive Masonry" (Art. 7), and "The Number Seven," were received too late for insertion this week.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

THE SOI-DISANT MASONS OF PARIS.

THE tragi-comedy recently enacted by the pseudo-Masons of the French capital, while it disgusted, must have also astonished many minds. English Masons are so accustomed to look at the teachings of Freemasonry through English spectacles, that the astounding vagaries of the French frères wear to most of us the aspect of vague unrealities. We cannot imagine a master of a lodge, as such, transformed into a mountebank; still less can we conceive a multitude of mad Masons flaunting their ribbons and sashes and standards in the light of day, and glorying in the shame and scandal of their un-masonic acts. A little insight, however, into the history of French Masonry will speedily dissipate any illusions which may be entertained on the subject, and we shall then see how consistently the mummers of these present days preserve the traditions of their vanity-ridden predecessors. At a very early period in the history of modern Freemasonry, the French brethren were the first to contemn the sublime simplicity of the Craft degrees and to bow down before the gorgeous Dagon erected in the temples of the high grades. As far back as 1744, their repudiation of the "beautiful regulations of England" was bewailed by a contemporary writer, who further alludes to the "shameless deceit of hermaphrodite and secondary Masonry, which will soon be made the assembling place of vice," a prediction only too fatally fulfilled in the guilt-stained conclaves over which Egalité and his satellites presided. Who so ready to receive and welcome the "Quack of Quacks," as Carlyle calls him, the "Grand Cophta" Cagliostro? Who so ready to adopt his rhapsodies as the volatile French? Verily, throughout the whole chronicle of the Craft in France the same sad record may be traced; and not the least melancholy episode is the most recent, magniloquently styled by the now imprisoned Rochefort, the "grand Masonic manifestation" in favour of the rights of the collapsed Commune.

We are told by this worthy, in his Mot d'Ordre, dated "12th Floreal, year 79," in silly affectation of the revolutionaries in 1792, that the "manifestation" commenced at half-past nine in the morning, a vast crowd having previously taken possession of the Rue de Rivoli, the Place de la Concorde, and the neighbourhood of the Hotel de Ville. At the hour named, a deputation of the Commune left the Hotel de Ville, with a band of music at their head, and proceeded towards the Louvre, where they met the Masons, fraternised with them, and retraced their steps to the Hotel de Ville, accompanied by the members of the Fraternity, who were admitted into the Court of Honour. Our readers can now fancy the scene. A statue of the Republic, bearing a red scarf—a ladder placed before it, the Masonic banners are then placed successively on the steps of the ladder, and exhibited before the eyes of all as proofs that the programme of Freemasonry and the Commune are one and the same. A white banner borne by an artilleryman attracts particular attention, and amidst loud shouts of "Vive la Commune!" "Vive la Franc-Maçonnerie!" Felix Pyat addresses the meeting in a "powerful voice."

In this oration we recognise all the flowers of speech of the practised French demagogue, "grande patrie," "patrie universelle," "drapeau d'humanité," words which fall like flame upon the hearts of an excitable people. An old Republican, called Beslay, succeeded to the "stump," as our American cousins would say, and echoed the sentiments of Felix, winding up, by way of emphatic peroration, with embracing a Freemason who stood near him. Citizen Monière, flag in hand, claimed the honour of planting the first banner on the ramparts of Paris—the banner of "Perseverance," by which he meant, we imagine, a lodge of that name, which he stated to have existed since 1790. The red standard of the Commune was then confided by Citizen Leo Meillet to the Freemasons represented by Citizen Terifocq, each indulging in the usual buncombe as to the invincible courage of every one present, including himself, and laudations upon the glorious inspiration of the flag, which Terifocq shook wildly in the air as he concluded his speech. The Masonic cortege, numbering ten thousand members, then defiled before the Hotel de Ville, each man wearing the insignia of his grade—blue, red, and black—the officers of the Rose Croix with their red collars, the Knights Kadosh with their black scarves, fringed with silver and worn crosswise, all other officers being distinguished by a blue sash edged with gold. The three rites of France were represented: the Grand Orient, the Scottish Ancient and Accepted Rite, and the Rite of Misraim. In solemn march they then advanced through immense crowds of spectators—each banner in the procession being lowered before the column of July—until they reached the vicinity of the Arc de Triomphe, amid cries of "Long live the Commune," "Long live the Republic," to which foolish cries the Versailles cannon made sinister response. A delegate from each lodge, followed by his standard-bearer, then left the main body, and to the number of one hundred and twenty-five men they proceeded under the Arc de Triomphe, preceded by a venerable of the Order and a flag of truce. In the meantime shells flew fast around them, but, nothing daunted, they marched gravely but steadily on. Heroism like this alone redeems the drama from the ridicule otherwise its due; but we have yet to learn that the French, however badly they may have fought of late, are not essentially a brave people. At this juncture a Mason of the Scottish Rite was struck by one of the projectiles, and had to be conveyed to the Beaujon hospital. The delegates still pressed forward, and eventually succeeded under a heavy fire, in accomplishing their aim, and the banners of the Fraternity floated over the ramparts of Lutetia!

Such was the great Masonic demonstration, with the futility of which all our readers are acquainted. It is a lamentable instance of that prostitution of Masonic influence to political purposes which has ever been rife in France; and if we have dwelt upon the details, it is not from any pleasure we descry in the scene, but rather as a warning to the Brotherhood in every land to refrain from similar acts, and never to stain the white escutcheon of the Order by entering into ignoble alliance with anarchists and men of blood.

PERSONAL RELIGION AND TOLERATION.

What cause has the Protestant of to-day to boast of his Protestantism, the Catholic of his Faith, or the Jew of his Judaism? Is it not the fact that, in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, each and all are what they are, simply because their fathers were so before them? few thinking for themselves. The remembrance, therefore, of such a thought as this ought above all things to teach us the lessons of humility, charity, and extended toleration.

THE "MARK DEGREE" AND P.M.

I do not know that there is any need for me to continue the discussion relative to the prerequisites for the Mark chair. Only let it be shown that the present law injuriously affects any lodge (as a dispensing power is specially provided for), and I will join the present members in their attempts to procure its repeal.

The zealous Mason, Bro. James Stevens, even in seeking the change, states that the present S.W. of No. 104 Mark Lodge (not yet, or soon likely to be, a Master of a Craft lodge) will, under the authority of the M.W. Grand M.M.M., be installed as the W.M. ! This, then, is a case in point. The present law and its dispensing power exactly meet the wants of the lodge, and the brother will be installed, although not an installed Master of the Craft ! Then where is the grievance ?

I am not aware that the Mark Master's degree (not the Mark Man) was ever given as the intermediate stage between the F.C. and the M.M. degrees. I have endeavoured to make myself familiar with the history of Mark Masonry, and my investigations lead me to the opposite conclusion.

THE GRAND CONCLAVE K.T.

The only remedy now left to the independent members of the Order of the Temple, with respect to the illegal—I use the word advisedly—proceedings at the last Grand Conclave, is to join in a requisition to the M.E. and S.G. Master to call a special Grand Conclave for their reversal. It is absurd to suppose that thirty or forty gentlemen—members of an encampment—can be deprived of the power of choosing their own associates in the Order for the future.

In fact, the secret object of those who framed the law seems to be to weaken, if not destroy, the Masonic Order of Knights Templar. Let all opposed to such despotism act therefore, and at once.

A P.E.C.

BRO. YARKER AND THE "HIGH DEGREES."

I beg to back up the remarks of Bro. "333," at p. 297, and not only "challenge," but defy Bro. Yarker to produce real and substantial proof of several of the assertions which he makes at page 283. He made these assertions before, but, when challenged, his proof was non est! I refer especially to what he says about things having existed in or before the first quarter of last century. Bro. "333" is assisting in a good work when he challenges proof of statements which he considers to be untrue. We have had far too many of these already, without getting any more. The principles of Freemasonry seem to be one thing, the actions of Freemasons another; at least, if we are to judge by the lies, forgeries, and impositions which are, and have been, concocted and promulgated by individuals calling themselves "Freemasons," but who, I venture to say, although "Freemasons" to outward appearance, are not so at heart. If they were allowed to go on unchecked, such a "mine" of explosive material would soon be accumulated in and around our system as, if once set fire to by one living spark from the torch of truth, our Order might be buried in the conflagration of the rubbish which surrounded it. I trust, however, that all lovers of the truth—and these, it will yet be found, are the real friends of our Order—will unite in scattering to the winds the "rubbish" which men calling themselves "brethren" seek to pass off as "gold."

I would therefore respectfully request Bro. Yarker to be careful, and not to allow himself to be either imposed upon, or to be made the tool of unprincipled and designing men. I am sorry to have to differ with some of my brethren whom I esteem, but the truth ought to be paramount.

W. P. B.

A FEW IDEAS ON MASONIC ORGANISATION.

BY A ROYAL ARCH MASON.

The letter of the Empress of the French recently published, contains one sentence full of serious import, viz., "It will be necessary to prove that you have ideas and not expedients."

Ideas, after all, are those fertile seeds, of unpretentious aspect, which we may pick up with the point of a bodkin, like Carathis ("Vathek,") but which contain the germs of trees, affording protection and sustenance to many, and even fortune to a favoured few.

Of such ideas is the system of Freemasonry, based on a few simple and expansive principles, that require only judicious culture, to raise into the scriptural shade of the fig tree, where man may enjoy the fruits of his labour, undisturbed by the ambition of warring tribes.

But Freemasonry is something more. It is the leaven of the middle-class—that class in which are found the flourishing offshoots of the lower orders, and the decayed branches of the upper; that sphere of action in which brute force is repelled and struggling merit fostered—the class of "evolution not revolution."

The observer of "times and seasons" may perhaps remark, that the defect of Masonry is its esoteric character; and this we are not prepared immediately to deny. But Masonry is of so elastic a constitution, that it may not be premature to say that it is capable of any expansion, suitable to the exigencies of the times. Unity of organisation is that of which, at present, it stands in most need; and the details of such a reform, as should bring about the desirable object, we need not stay to discuss, but at once proceed to one of the many questions that will arise in contemplating so momentous a subject.

The truth seems to be that the Masonic body is at present scarcely fully aware of its own power and resources, and were these combined in the cause of progress, it would be difficult to over-estimate their value.

Opulent, intellectual, energetic, combining at once the highest legislative and executive qualifications in its vast confraternity, it is, nevertheless, exposed to absorption by the political parties with which it comes into contact, and is thus regarded, too much, as a speculative, whereas it is, in truth, or at any rate has the elements of, a large governing body.

Were this powerful body fully organised, it would form a counterpoise, by the obligations of its bond urged at certain popular assemblies, to any one of the estates of the realm, which should attempt to exert an undue influence over the others. Democracy would feel the corrective force of its precisely discriminative grades, while aristocracy would pause before its tenets of moral supremacy, which inculcate a cosmopolitan EQUALITY; and both would be unable to deny the force of that bond of brotherly love which makes creeds and churches, Whigs and Tories, with all the other distinctions that are known in politics, reconcile their differences in the furtherance of a common object—the prevention of violence, the protection of the weak, the coercion of tyranny, and the expansion of that world-wide charity which "covereth a multitude of sins."

But the Masonic body works only in the cause of humanity by its moral influence, and, so far, it does well; but the signs of the times are such as to demand our adopting every possible means of defensive cohesion: and, in order to effect this object, we ought to employ such material means as are in our power to ensure unity of action in the conservation of society, and to enable us, in any moment of trial or danger, to separate ourselves from other interests, and rally round those traditions which have made us respected, and have raised us above the level of the mere factionist.

Nothing being impossible, a time might come when it would be desirable for the scattered Masonic body to coalesce, for the object of self-protection and the preservation of the public peace. But in crowded assemblies of the people it would not be possible to distinguish a brother of the Craft from the general mass, and therefore, instead of the present ordinary full-dress costumes recognised in lodges, it might be well to substitute some special uniform, not essentially military, but so completely distinctive as should mark its wearer in any throng as one of the initiated.

The suggestion of uniform may be by association repugnant to some minds; but were not the hauberk of the Norman and the surcoat of the Crusader "uniform," and is not likewise the clerical gown and the judicial robe in the same category?

A simple, effective, and easily distinguishable costume or uniform might be, with advantage, adopted by the Masonic body, to be worn only on urgent and public occasions; and as regards Masonic decorations, it might not be unadvisable to restrict these to special services, rather than to grades, leaving to the latter the simple distinction of some sumptuary variation.

It were premature to develop the details of the present proposal, which is merely put forth as an idea; but the idea is, itself, akin to expediency, and though it may never attain to maturity, still it may have the effect of drawing our attention to that spirit of organisation which now appears to be paramount in the direction of political affairs, and consequently ought not to be a stranger to our own.

Freemasonry, in a liberal sense, is essentially a conservative institution, and, as such, may be said to be one of the most powerful bulwarks of the middle classes, divested at the same time of any element of exclusivism. Its privileges are attainable by such qualifications as inspire respect in every well-ordered social community, and to this cause may be attributed the widespread influence of its elastic organisation.

As a governing class, Freemasons are not open to the attacks which shake the foundations of others in the same category; and experience has shown that, constituted as they are, the bitter sarcasm of the Swedish statesman Oxenstiern, that "men are often exalted by their worst qualities, and depressed by their best," can never be applicable.

But while preserving inviolate our fundamental doctrines, the course of public events and the changes of the times may legitimately exercise their influence on those ceremonial and, so to speak, sumptuary laws, which are removed from the sphere of moral considerations.

Thus, a more uniform system in the government of lodges might be adopted with a salutary effect—considering that unity is one of the surest safeguards in the preservation of all bodies corporate; and as history has frequently inculcated the lesson, we may readily believe that this principle alone has often sustained a social eclipse (to say nothing of a political) long after all its extraneous supports have given way. Such fears, however, do not belong to Freemasonry; but, at the same time, we ought not alone to consider what is absolutely necessary, but also what may be beneficial.

Other questions at the same time arise, such as that lately propounded in these columns as to the use of the apron and gloves, and we add the appropriation of Masonic jewels and honorary decorations, and an uniformity in the costume of Masons when assembled in lodge or on public occasions.

With regard to the apron especially, immemorial usage seems to be in its favour, and we would not inconsiderately advocate any radical change in that direction, for it has often been observed that an undue interference with any custom, perhaps in itself not an essential, has often produced consequences the most serious in their ultimate bearing. The apron might be enlarged to the dimensions of the ecclesiastical, thus presenting the appearance of an under vesture, susceptible of endless variation.

But we may safely at all times modify the rigour of habit or custom, and adapt ourselves to the circumstances in which we are placed; and by analogy, "discipline," as Frederick the Great justly observed, "is not maintained by a blind adherence to certain fixed rules, but rather by an intelligent relaxation of them, according to the exigencies of the occasion."

One of the greatest inconveniences might arise from the difficulty of coalition amongst Freemasons, scattered throughout a large and heterogeneous concourse of people in the open air, when it might be desirable, in the interests of peace, that they should have some ready means of attrition, or drawing together as a compact body, and thus displaying a moral force in an imposing but inoffensive aspect.

Again, on festive occasions, where the harmony of apparel should not be deemed unworthy the consideration even of a man whose mind is set on higher things, the incompleteness of our present Masonic costume might be advantageously improved by the adoption of garments at once distinctive, and yet not necessarily obtrusive. The military have their uniforms and the Church and bar their gowns, in which they appear before the Sovereign on State occasions; and, therefore, it does not seem unreasonable that so vast and influential a body as that of the Freemasons should have an appropriate raiment in which they might take their place amongst those just mentioned, and thus, as it were, assert their standing in the community at large.

Such a movement might be carried out under the suggestions of a special commission, composed of delegates from the various international Grand Lodges of the world, and regulations might be framed with the view of ensuring uniformity in carrying out the design.

It would, of course, be desirable to observe economy in an undertaking applicable to the diversity of fortune in so widely-spread an organisation, so that no Mason should, owing to prudential considerations, be debarred from appearing in the general assembly of his brethren.

In order, however, to distinguish the office bearers and those who, by their eminent services, may have fairly earned the honorary rewards of the Craft, it might be found judicious to restrict the use of jewels to those that had received them in open lodge from the highest authority as the reward of superior merit, for Masonic actions performed, for special services generally, and not simply, as at present, at the option of the wearers in right of their respective grades; these latter being easily distinguishable by other more convenient means.

Under such a system, one class of Masonic jewels only would be recognised; and these again might be protected in the distribution by the promulgation of general statutes, thus constituting a special honorary Masonic Order of Knighthood, open to all grades and invested with peculiar privileges, which, by an international congress, might be secured in all parts of the world, under certain rigid restrictions, for these latter would be absolutely necessary in order to protect the integrity of the institution.

Should these remarks, thrown out broadcast, invite the attention of our chiefs to the subject, we shall be glad still further to develop our views; but as we cannot say "which seed will grow and which will not," we must, in the meantime, await the germinating influence of public opinion.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Skin Diseases.—Scrofula, scurvy, scorbutic affections, and all cutaneous eruptions caused by hereditary taints, imperfect digestion, deleterious gases, or an impure state of the blood, may be most speedily cured by Holloway's well-known remedies. The active principle in both Ointment and Pills is so harmless, yet so powerfully purifying, soothing, and restorative, that the most inexperienced person may use them with the certainty of producing the best results. The Pills quickly remove all impurities from the circulation and system generally, while the Ointment eradicates the superficial blemish or deep-seated local mischief. In the irritations of the skin, very annoying to infancy, this Ointment will prove itself the best friend.—[Advt.]

ROYAL MASONIC SCHOOLS.

Special General Courts of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls and Royal Masonic Institution for Boys were held simultaneously at Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 25th inst., Bro. J. Symonds, V.P., in the chair. There were also present: Bros. J. C. Parkinson, V.P.; Bridges, V.P.; F. Walters, V.P.; W. Young, T. W. White, S. Noble, H. Massey, F. Binckes, E. H. Patten, and others. Bro. J. C. Parkinson, V.P., proposed, and Bro. F. Walters, V.P., seconded, that the following clause be added to Rule 8, viz.:—"Every Vice-President, upon completion of a further donation of Fifty Guineas, by payments of not less than Five Guineas each, shall become a Vice-Patron." Carried unanimously.

Bro. J. C. Parkinson, V.P., proposed, and Bro. Young, seconded, that the following be adopted as a new rule, to follow Law 9:—"Every Vice-President, being an individual donor of Fifty Guineas, shall have two votes for life, instead of one vote, for each additional Five Guineas contributed by him in one payment." Carried unanimously.

A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman brought the proceedings to a close.

GIRLS' SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

A meeting was held on Thursday, the 25th instant, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. W. Young, chairman. Bros. Bridges, J. R. Sheen, Frederick Walters, H. Massey, T. W. White, A. D. Loewenstark, S. Noble, H. Browne, J. Nunn, Fred. Binckes, E. H. Patten, and others, were also present.

The minutes of the previous General Committee meeting were read and confirmed, and the minutes of House Committee meeting were read for information.

The twelve brethren nominated were elected on the House Committee. The nine brethren named on Audit Committee were elected, Bro. Cox having withdrawn his nomination.

There were five petitions presented from applicants to be accepted as candidates for election into the Girls' School. Two were accepted, viz., Sarah and Mary Young, the other three being deferred.

It was agreed to recommend to the House Committee the desirability of lending the school during the vacation, viz., on July 5th, to the Rev. Dr. Thompson for the purpose of holding a concert, under the most distinguished patronage, for his schools—he being the minister who presides at the church where the girls of the Institution attend.

Bro. Joshua Nunn gave the following notice of motion: "That a special court be held on Thursday, June 29th, to consider the desirability of erecting a new infirmary away from the main buildings, but within the grounds, and that the members of the House Committee be the committee to carry out that design."

The usual vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The General Committee of the Grand Lodge, at which the usual routine business was gone through and some notices of motion were given (the particulars of which will appear next week), was held at Freemasons' Hall on Wednesday, the 24th inst. Bro. J. Clabon, P.G.D., in the chair; after which was held the Lodge of Benevolence. There were present at these meetings Bros. J. Clabon, P.G.D. (chairman), Lord Leigh, J. Savage, J. Hervey, Baker, J. Nunn, J. Brett, J. Coutts, J. Boyd, Gover, Halsey, Thomas, J. Hills, Garrod, Pratt, F. Walters, S. May, J. Weaver, H. W. Hemsworth, C. A. Cottebrune, S. Gale, C. J. Hogg, Rosenthal, H. G. Buss, R. W. Little, J. Glaisher, J. R. Sheen, W. Smith, Rev. Vaughan, Child, Levander, Forbes Johnson, M. A. Loewenstark, Ware, Williams, Robins, Cockcroft, Marston, Alexander, Simpson, Tallent, and others.

Thirty cases came under consideration; one was dismissed, three deferred, and the others were relieved; £395 being voted away at this meeting.

The lodge was closed after four hours' hard labour.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Annual General Meeting of the subscribers of this Institution was held in the Board Room at Freemasons' Hall on Friday, 19th inst. Bro. John Savage, P.G.D., V.P., was elected chairman. There were present Bros. B. Head, J. Hervey, H. Muggeridge, S. May, E. Cox, R. Spencer, V.P.'s; H. Empson, E. H. Patten, Hyde Pullen, E. J. Fraser, S. Gale, James Stevens, H. Massey, H. M. Levy, G. Bolton, J. L. Hine, C. A. Cottebrune, N. Wingfield, W. H. Libbis, J. Terry, T. W. White, John Chadwick, J. R. Sheen, F. Adlard, H. G. Warren, A. Pratt, &c.

Bro. W. Farnfield (Secretary) read the annual report, which showed that the last year's income of the Male Annuitants' Fund was nearly £4,000, and that of the Female Annuitants' Fund about £3,000. Since the last election ten annuitants have died, and as the income of the Institution is sufficient to allow of an increased number of annuitants being received, nineteen males and thirteen females would be admitted at this annual election. It was added that this addition to the number of recipients of the funds could only be maintained by an annual increase of the income of the institution.

The report was adopted.

Bros. F. Adlard, Dr. John Dixon, and W. H. Farnfield were re-elected on the Committee. Bros. John Symond, J. R. Sheen, and H. G. Warren were re-elected auditors.

The poll was then declared open, and for the result we refer our readers to the advertisement on our first page.

After the declaration of the poll, thanks were voted to the Chairman and the Scrutineers for their valuable services so cheerfully given and efficiently rendered.

Masonic Miscellanea.

THE M.W.G. Master, the Earl de Grey and Ripon, and suite, started on their return journey to England on the 24th inst., and we hope his lordship will be present at the Grand Lodge on 7th June.

WE beg to call the attention of the companions to the advertisement of the annual festival of the R.A. Chapter of Improvement, and hope to see a large muster both at the meeting and at the banquet.

THE LITTLE TESTIMONIAL FUND.—ERRATUM.—In the additional subscriptions published last week, the sum appended to Lord Bective's name should have been £20; not £10, as erroneously printed.

THE Fifteen Sections will be worked on Wednesday next, the 31st inst., in the Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction, at Bro. Wall's, the Prince of Orange Tavern, Greenwich-road. Bro. Shaw I.G. 79, will preside, and the lodge will be opened at half-past seven precisely.

A GRAND Lodge of Mark Masters will be held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, W.C., on Tuesday, June 6th, at five o'clock in the afternoon. A Lodge of Improvement will be opened at half-past three o'clock, to give brethren attending Grand Lodge the opportunity of witnessing the ceremony of advancement (see advertisement).

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.—The Imperial Ecclesiastical and Military Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, which claims to have its origin on October 28, A.D. 312, at the memorable battle fought at Saxa Rubra, the conferring of which can be traced by authentic written proof in England from 1788, is progressing very fast in the United States. Warrants have been granted for conclaves at the following places in Pennsylvania: Washington, Bloomsburg, Reading, Harrisburg, Allentown, Bellefonte, Philadelphia, Ashland, Mauch Chunk, and York.—Keystone, Philadelphia, U.S.

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.

The Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73, held their usual bi-monthly meeting on the 16th inst. Present: Bros. G. M. McDonald, R.W.M.; William Walton, S.W.; G. W. Wheeler, Acting J.W.; T. S. Ampleford, Sec.; and a full attendance of the brethren. After some previous business, Bro. G. Goldie was prepared to be raised to the third degree, when a request was presented from the St. Clair Lodge, No. 362, on behalf of a seafaring brother, that he might take that degree also. This request was at once granted, and at the wish of the R.W.M., Bro. Dobbie, I.P.M. of the St. Clair Lodge, performed that ceremony in the quiet and careful manner which distinguishes all his working. The Wardens of the St. Clair Lodge proposed a vote of thanks to the officers of the Thistle and Rose Lodge for their kindness in raising their brother, and Bro. Singleton, of the Shamrock Lodge, supported it, saying he had been favoured in the same way several times by the officers of the Thistle and Rose Lodge.

The monthly meeting of the St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, No. 69 (S.C.), was held within their chapter-rooms, 170, Buchanan-street, on Tuesday evening, the 9th instant. The chapter was opened in the Mark Degree by Past P.Z. T. M. Campbell. Bros. Wemyss and Isbister were then admitted, and were duly Mark'd. The lodge was then raised, and the two before-mentioned were installed into the chair and received the degree of Past Master, the ceremony being worked by Comp. M. E. Campbell in the usual masterly style for which he is famed. The office of M.E.P.Z. was then declared vacant, and the Past Z. recommended the companions to elect Comp. M'Callum, the present H., which was unanimously agreed to. Comp. Wright proposed, and Comp. Robertson seconded, "That all companions in arrears to the chapter should be notified that if not settled by next monthly meeting, they should be suspended from Masonic privileges until such arrears were paid." The Scribe E. was instructed to sent intimation of such resolution. The chapter was then closed by the Past Z. After the companions had retired, the P.Z. installed and instructed the M.E.P.Z.-elect into his office. We wish the chapter success, and hope under the new auspices it will regain its former position, as said by the late father of R.A. Masonry, Dr. Walton Arnott—second to none in Scotland.

A council of the Knights of the Red Cross was held at the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on the 13th inst. Present: Sir Kts. David Gilchrist, M.E.P.; James Balfour, S.G.; G. M'Donald, J.G.; G. W. Wheeler, 1st Captain of the Guard; R. Bell, Treas.; W. Robinson, 2nd C.G.; T. Mullen, and W. Jameson, Sentinels. Comps. Geo. M'Leod and Andrew Bell, of Chapter 73, were introduced and dubbed Knights of the Sword, after which the Council was raised, and the same two gentlemen were successively received and admitted as brothers by the Knights of the East and the Knights of the East and West. The various ceremonies were very effectively rendered by the excellent President and his assisting officers.

The Royal Ark Mariners' Lodge, No. 73, met on Friday, the 13th inst., Bro. James Balfour as Noah; Bro. David Gilchrist, Shem; and Bro. G. W. Wheeler, as Acting Japhet. Comps. George M'Leod and Andrew Bell, both of Caledonian Chapter of Unity, No. 73, were then introduced and initiated into this ancient degree.

MASONIC CEREMONY AT ARDROSSAN.

The inauguration by the Lodge Neptune Kilwinning, Ardrossan, No. 442, of a tombstone that had been erected to the memory of the late Bro. Captain Harvey Cann, of Nova Scotia, took place on the afternoon of Saturday last. The lodge was opened in its own hall by the R.W.M., Bro. Francis Goodwin, aided by the Past Master (Bro. James Robertson), Depute and Substitute Masters (Bros. Hugh Boyd and Robert Fullerton), and about forty other brethren, among whom were: Herman, of the Lodge of Portland, U.S.; Ross, Blue Lodge, Donaghadee; Benjamin Scott and Gilliatt, Saltcoats and Ardrossan St. John, No. 320; Winker, Irvine St. Andrew, No. 139. The lodge, which was in full regalia, then proceeded to the new cemetery, whither it was accompanied by a large concourse of spectators. On reaching the grave the brethren formed three sides of a square, the Master, with the P.M., D.M., and S.M., forming a group at the head.

After prayer had been offered by the Chaplain (Bro. Wylie), the first verse of the 133rd Psalm was sung by the brethren, who were thereafter addressed by the R.W.M. in the following terms:—Worshipful Wardens and Brethren, I have thought it right to address to you a few words bearing upon the special object for which in our Masonic capacity we have returned to this spot. It is little more than three years since we here deposited, in their resting-place, the remains of a brother, who during a temporary sojourn in this port, far from home and kindred, had been summoned to the eternal world. Captain Harvey Cann being at the time of his death a comparative stranger to the most of us, though he is known to have sat in the lodge; but being in full communion with the Order, his interment with Masonic rites was resolved upon by the unanimous voice of the lodge, who thereupon took the place of absent relatives and friends, and paid the last honours to the departed one. In doing so, you gave a fresh illustration of that outpouring of fraternal sympathy which is a universal characteristic of the Craft, where its benign principles are understood and appreciated, and performed a duty which, in similar circumstances, may yet be done to some of our own seafaring brethren, whose earthly course may chance to terminate in a foreign land. It was subsequently resolved that a memorial stone should be erected on this spot at the expense of the individual members of the Lodge Neptune Kilwinning. To inaugurate this sepulchral monument, the last external mark of fraternal affection, was the object of our present meeting. The memorial, though plain and unpretending, is, as a work of art, highly creditable to the sculptor, Bro. Blakeley, who is entitled to the thanks of the subscribers for the efficient way in which he has carried out their wishes in this matter. In conclusion, I have to thank you for your presence on this occasion.

Towards the close of Bro. Goodwin's remarks the stone was divested of its covering. It bears the following inscription:—"In memory of Harvey Cann, Master of the Barque Josephine of Yarmouth, N.S., who died in the Harbour of Ardrossan the 26th September, 1867. This monument is erected by his Masonic brethren of Lodge Neptune Kilwinning, No. 442, in testimony of his worth as a man and a brother Craftsman." On the termination of the interesting ceremony, the lodge returned to its hall and was formally closed.

THE Freemasons of Aberdeen are about to build a fine Masonic Hall, and the estimated cost is £2,550; the site has been secured with a frontage in Exchange and Sterling Streets. When finished it will supply a want long felt by the brethren of the Granite City.

MASONIC BALL at GEORGETOWN, DEMERARA.

The ball given at the Assembly Rooms, on Friday, April 15th, with so much magnificence, by the Worshipful Master and brethren of the Union Lodge, No. 247, E.R., deserves to be fully chronicled in the annals of our colonial society.

The hour named was nine o'clock; and so anxious were people to witness the scene throughout, that by a few minutes after that time, some hundreds had arrived. About five hundred invitations had been issued, and it was estimated that at one period of the evening there were fully that number of guests present.

At the head of the room was a dais, on which the Master, Sir Kt. Oliver, presided, supported on either hand by Sir Kts. Pollard and Daly, and having Deacons in waiting. As each lady entered the room she approached the Master to pay her courtesy. He uncovered to all.

The room was enchantingly decorated under the superintendence of W.P.M. Abrahams. The broad alternate blue and white bars with which this hall was paled; the grotto at the entrance port, with its three fountains emitting refreshing perfumes, beneath the light of a glittering star; the Master's throne, with its luxury of mirrors and flowers, and other accompaniments, surmounted with an ideal painting of the cardinal virtues; and, most impressive of all, the Masonic emblems everywhere apparent, and the banners of the Knights hanging gracefully on either side of the hall—some of high pretence, others simply with their single device—all conjoined to produce, to a delicate sense, an air of peace and rest soon to be dispelled with the swell of music and the tread of measures.

At a quarter after nine o'clock, the approach of His Excellency the Governor was announced, whereupon the brethren, who were all in regalia, ranged themselves in open column from the entrance to the Master's chair; and thus protected His Excellency advanced with Mrs. Scott to the Master's throne, where they exchanged salutations with him.

At a quarter past eleven a delightful transformation took place. To the sounding of an onset, into the dancing hall trooped a large body of Knight Templars, clad cap-a-pieds, for all the world as if they had suddenly arisen from the middle ages. Sir Kt. Oliver, as Grand Prior of the Knights of Malta in the West Indies, wore the black cloak and cap of that order over his surcoat of a Templar. As if restrained in these days by the claim of "Woman's Rights," rather than impelled to deeds of daring by the presence of so many beautiful ladies, the Men of the Cross, instead of proclaiming a tourney, quietly dispersed to pay their devoirs to the fair ones. Two or three of these gallant Knights were worthy of the olden days, when they would have been

High placed in hall as welcome guests,

And one especially, so douce and debonnaire in manner and with sun-bronzed features, seemed to have Come from the land of the sword and shrine,

From the sainted battles of Palestine.

And the shade of the South o'er his cheeks is spread;
But stately his steps and his bearing high,
And wild the light of his fiery eye.

Of others it might fairly be said that, like the Monks of old,

A jollier crew could scarce be found elsewhere.

At about half-past twelve the company went down to the supper-room, passing to it under numbers of arches made of flowers and choice plants. A bountiful supper was provided, which supplied the Masons and their guests with materials for laying a good foundation.

Sir Kt. Daly acting as croupier, the Worshipful Master rose to propose the health of "The Queen," saying that Masonry inculcated the exercise of every virtue, and that, among these, loyalty was one of the chief. This toast being drunk with loyalty, the Master gave the health of "The Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," observing that in the future King of England Masons claimed a brother; and that the marriage of the Princess Louise would strengthen the affection entertained for her family.

The Worshipful Master then said he would propose the toast of the evening—"Prosperity to the Craft." Freemasonry, he said, was an honourable institution. No doubt the ladies considered Masons as a body of men who dressed themselves strangely, and professed to have some secrets; but though he was not going to tell the ladies what were those secrets—for he would justly deserve the indignation of his brethren if he did so—he would inform them that Masonry was as ancient as it was honourable. Its traditions went back to the time of Moses; and if the ladies wished to find out why they were not told the secrets of the Craft, they should read the 20th chapter of Deuteronomy. Masonry started with three principles: brotherly love, relief, and truth. With regard to brotherly love and relief, the Masons assisted their brethren in all parts of the world, in poverty and on the death-bed; and on the field of battle the drawn sword had been sheathed when the victim had been discovered to be a brother Mason. As to truth, it was always impressed upon Masons that they should tell their brethren nothing but what was honest and above-board. He would also say that reverence to the fair sex was taught to every novice on the night of his initiation.

The Master then gave the health of "His Excellency the Governor," whom, he said, the Queen had honoured by placing him to rule over this Colony. He also paid a tribute to His Excellency's private virtues and public usefulness.

His Excellency pleasantly replied, saying he had been received with so much ceremony by the Masons on his arrival, that he hardly thought he had yet recovered from his surprise. He did not know what the secrets of Masonry were to which Mr. Oliver had alluded; but he observed that the Masons were possessed of the secret of giving handsome entertainments successfully. Certainly, a more splendid entertainment had never been given in this Colony, and the only hope of its being ever equalled was by the brethren giving another ball. He was not, however, sufficiently well up in the secrets of the lodge to inform the ladies when that would be; but he hoped, for their sakes, it would be soon.

His Excellency then proposed, in a pleasing speech, the toast of "The Hosts, the Master, and the Brethren," and the Master replied shortly.

The Master proposed the health of "The Ladies of the Colony," coupling with the toast Mrs. Scott's name. She, he said, had since her arrival, by her acts of benevolence and hospitality, gained the esteem of society.

His Excellency returned thanks for Mrs. Scott. Mr. Maxwell, on behalf of the other ladies, said, he would say in the style of a certain Blue Book, which was on most tables in the Colony, that the ladies were very thankful for the entertainment they had enjoyed; they liked the supper very much, and would recommend the Masonic cook to "further honourable employment." Those Masons who were married might be "accepted," but it was a question whether they were "free."

A move was then made to the dancing-room, and dancing was resumed with great enjoyment by the votaries. After some time the company began gradually, but only gradually, to disperse, and it was only at five o'clock the next morning that the ball came to an end. The general opinion among the ladies especially is that Masons are all bricks.—The Colonist, Georgetown, Demerara.

OBSERVANCE OF THE BAPTIST'S DAY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In my communication of February 25th, I referred the reader to "Hone's Year Book," &c., showing that the Baptist's day was observed in olden times, not by masons only but by thy guilds in general. In confirmation of this fact, I copy the following from Brother C. W. Moore's Magazine, 1850, pages 39 and 40. It is not impossible that Bro. Moore may have copied it from an English Masonic journal of the above-named or previous year. The few lines I shall give will not only show that, although the London tailors and drapers never claimed, or pretended, that the Baptist was ever an eminent tailor or draper, yet the guild appears to have deemed it an important privilege to have permission granted to it "to hold a feast on Saint John Baptist day," but also that the Merchant Tailors regarded their society with the same kind of pride as the Masons did. Indeed, so far as the antiquity of the tailor craft is concerned, they might justly claim it to have preceded the mason craft. For Adam must have tried first to make himself a coat before he attempted to build a house. But that is not all—

Great kings, dukes, and lords
Have laid by their swords,

Our mystery to put a good grace on, was no more peculiar to the Freemasons than the observance of the Baptist's day was. The tailors claim precisely the same honours, and even the patronage of bishops and deans; and now for the extracts from Moore's Magazine :—

"In a work entitled 'Progress, etc., of King James the First,' is a curious dramatic production, published from a copy preserved in the Bodleian Library, called 'The Triumph of Re-united Britania.' It was performed at the cost and charges of the Right Worshipful Company of Merchant Tailors, in honour of Sir Leonard Holliday, Knight, to solemnize his entrance as Lord Mayor of the City of London, on Tuesday, the 29th October, 1605, and devised and written by A. Mundy, Citizen and Draper of London, in the reign of James 1st :

"When they were first a guild, and bare the stile
Of Taylors and armorers beside
Of linnen armorie : for no little while
Were they so knowne and daily did provide
These coats of arms that quailed our foemen's pride,
When England's bent-bow and the grey goos wing
Our many victories abroad did sing,
To build this body on a stronger frame
Richard the Second gave authoritie
A Mayster and four Keepers they should name,
And full elect to sway their mysterie ;
Granting them power to have a Lyverie,
And hold a feast on Saint John Baptist day,
Yearlie for ever, as they do and may."

From the last three lines we must infer that the tailors in the days of Richard II. observed the Baptist's-day, but as they had no legal authority to do so, the king granted the tailors the privilege to do as they did; and now we will go on—

"I find recorded in my register:
Seaven kings have honoured this society,
Fourteen great dukes did willingly prefer
Their love and kindness to this company,
Three-score-eight lordes declared their amitie,
Tearming themselves all brethren of this band,
The veirre worthiest lordes in all the land.
Three dukes, three earls, four lords of noble name,
All in one year did joyne in Brotherhood ;
I find besides great lordes from France there came
To hold league and to do them any good,
Yet no imbasing to their high in blood,
For they accounted honour then most hie
When it was held up by communitie.
Of bishops and deans, to those before,
My record could afford as many more."

I only hope and trust that my communications will induce brethren to study a little more carefully the manners, customs, and laws of the guilds during the middle ages. This may indeed tend to diminish our pride; truth should, however, be regarded as of more importance than pride.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

JACOB NORTON.

"OUR ANCIENT BRETHREN" ONCE MORE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your issue of April 15th, our worthy Brother Hughan endeavoured to defend the importance of "our ancient brethren," and triumphantly or sarcastically remarked: "Bro. Norton may be able to find similar MSS. and ancient charges in connection with other guilds, as the old Halliwell M.S. and others, but I have not been able to, and know not of any one who has;" and next cites a letter from Brother Lupus, who says, "Why should we not have free tailors or cordwainers?" to which he answers, because, in the 14th century, De Yeverley was architect to three successive kings. "This," says he, "and the records of other such names plainly proves the importance of the guild." . . . "Again, too, the language of the early statutes relating to Masons clearly indicates that there was much more importance in their guild and their 'chapters and congregations' than in other trading bodies. . . . What," he continues, "could they ordinarily want with such assemblies? and if there was nothing of significance in them, why make the 'chapters and congregations' the subject of legislative interference?" And he further added: "I am not aware of any records of distinguished tailors or great cordwainers." These are, I believe, the main points with which Brother Hughan endeavoured to sustain his position.

Now, with all due respect to the ability and sincerity of the above-named brethren, it looks to me, after all, as if they were begging the question. The same kind of religious fervour observable in the Masonic documents can no doubt be found in all other documents of the then time. For in addition to dates, each document of the time informs us also that the day was "before" or "after" such-and-such saint's day. In the charters of the Tailors' Company "The Virgin Mary," "the blessed Mother of God," "the Trinity," &c., are alluded to over and over again, and a similar strain of Roman Catholic phraseology runs through most of the public documents of that time. The doggrels called Masonic poems were written most likely by priests. It was the fashion then, as it is now, to celebrate a festivity with some rhyming composition. It is probable that for such an occasion, a priest composed the Halliwell M.S., and introduced therein allusions to "Noa's flod," to "Kyng Nabogodonozor," "the clerk Eucluyde," &c. A second priest manufactured the legends of Adam, Nimroth, &c., &c., which legends Anderson, Oliver, and the high-degree gentry of Europe and America successively amplified, illustrated and extended. Nor can I see how the mere fact of De Yeverley having been an architect can prove—first, that the said De Yeverley was a more moral and religious man than a tailor or cordwainer of his day was; and, second, Halliwell made known that Sir C. Wren did not join the Freemasons until after his reputation as an architect was placed on the highest pinnacle of fame. How, then, does Bro. Lupus know that Yeverley was ever initiated at all? or that the fraternity's relationship to Yeverley was in any way different to the relationship of the hod-carriers and bricklayers to an architect of to-day?

Nor can I see how the language of the statutes relating to Masons goes to prove their importance as a guild, or that the words "chapters" or "congregations" had necessarily any peculiar significance. Hallam says that the Freemasons were never legally chartered at all; if so, "free" could be more properly applied to tailors than to masons. The term "free," when coupled with the guilds, meant not only freedom of the guild, but also freedom of the town or city, with certain privileges attached. In that sense, the tailor was better entitled to the prefix free than the mason. That the masons of olden time were simply builders, is confirmed by one whom Bro. Hughan regards as a very high authority. The Rev. Bro. Woodford, in Part 2 of the "Unpublished Records of the Craft," (presented to me by our worthy Bro. Hughan himself, for which he will be pleased to accept my thanks), Bro. W. says: "We must bear in mind, however much we may not feel disposed not to give up our preconceived fancies in the subject, that the true history of Freemasonry in this country is the history of an operative body." And as far as the very documents themselves show, I can see no difference between the religious ideas of the then masons and the then tailors; the one was just as narrow-minded as the other.

In Froude's history of England, I found the best account of the classification of society in "merry England" during the middle ages, with the causes of its decay. Mr. Froude compares the then organization of society to that of a military camp. Sumptuary laws restricted each class to a particular kind of clothing, and to the number of dishes for dinner. Butchers, bakers, &c., had to sell their commodities at stipulated prices, and the daily wages of working people were equally prescribed by law. A time, however, came when England ceased to be merry under those legal restrictions. Laws of commerce, laws of supply and demand, now pretty well understood by our political economists, were in those days unknown, and those laws proved stronger than the mere enactments of legislative bodies. A time arrived when a derangement took place between the relative value of the precious metals and other commodities. Law or no law, the butcher and baker found that they could no longer supply themselves with cattle or grain at the old prices. Society here became ajar. It began to grate. The rich burgess could indeed buy immunity from the sumptuary restrictions by making a present to the king, the queen, or the mistress, but the poor working man, whose old wages became insufficient for the maintenance of his family, could not make presents to the king, hence he was obliged to resist the law, when the legislature stepped forward with fresh coercive laws, and "Hallam's Middle Ages," chap. 9, part 2, informs us that the masons "were charged 3 Fl. vi., with fixing the price of labour in their annual Chapters contrary to the statutes of laborers, and which chapters were consequently closed." Now, does not this prove that the object of the annual "chapters and congregations" was wages, or—bread and butter?

Again, Bro. Lupus "is not aware of any records of distinguished tailors or cordwainers." My letter to THE FREEMASON, dated April 21st, shows that there are records of such nature, and since the said letter was mailed, I consulted the work itself, viz., "Progresses, Processions, etc., of James the First; printed by J. B. Nichols, 25, Parliament-street, 1828." The dramatic composition cited in my letter I found in Vol. 1, p. 570, and it was performed by children. The notes to said composition further inform us that the tailors were anxious to make King James the eight king tailor and draper, which his majesty declined, because he was already—not a Mason, but—a Cordwainer! The king, however, gratified the Company with his presence in 1607, when Prince Henry and a crowd of courtiers became Free-tailors. We further learn from the notes, that in 1390 Edward Duke of York, Thomas Duke of Gloucester, Henry Duke of Hereford and Earl of Derby (afterwards Henry the 4th), Edward Earl of Rutland, Thomas Earl of Warwick, John Holland Earl of Huntingdon, John Lord Ros, Rafe Lord Nevil, Thomas Lord Furnival, Reignard Lord Grey of Rithim—from France came also Gaylard Lord Danvers, Barard Lord Delamote, Barard Lord Montferrart, &c., &c. These, besides Bishops and Deans, have all been Master Tailors, and after reading that long string of illustrious tailors, who will thenceforth dare to call a tailor "a ninth part of a man"? But that is not all. On referring to the festivities of the year 1607, when James visited their Hall, and when Prince Henry and others became free-tailors, I found more verses, probably composed by the same "Citizen Taylor and Draper," A. Mundy, author of "Britania Re-united," and here are the verses :—

"For seven of England's Royal Kings thereof [tailors] have all been,

And with their loves and favours graced this worthy company.

King Richard once the Second named, unhappy in his fall,
Of all his race of Royal Kings was Freeman first of all;
Bullingbrook, fourth Henry, next by order him succeeds,
To glorify this Brotherhood by many Princely deeds;
Fifth Henry, which so valiantly deserved fame in France,
Became free of this Company, fair London to advance;
Sixth Henry, the next in reign, though luckless in his days,
Of Merchant Tailors freeman was, to their eternal praise;
Fourth Edward, that most worthy King, beloved of great and small,

Also performed freeman's love in this renowned Hall;
Third Richard, which by cruelty brought England many woes,

Unto this worthy Company no little favour shows;
But richest favour yet at last proceeded from a King
Whose kingdom round about the world in Princes' ear doth wring—

King Henry, whom we call the Seventh, made them the greatest graced,

Because in Merchant Tailors' Hall his picture now stands placed—

Their charter was his princely gift, maintained to this day,
He added Marchant to the name of Taylor, as some say,
So Merchant Tailors they be called, his Royal love was so.
No London Company of the like estate so many Kings can show."

These extracts clearly prove that fraternities, brotherhoods, &c., similar to the Masonic fraternity did exist in England, though they never claimed descent from Dionysiacs or Roman Colleges. Second, as the tailors claim to have been armorers also, they could with more propriety claim affinity and relationship with the Knight Templars, than Masons can. And, thirdly, they not only answer Bro. Lupus's question, whether there ever was an eminent tailor or cordwainer, but I may now turn the table, and ask either Bro. Lupus or Hughan, whether either of them can furnish evidence from equally authentic records, showing as many distinguished names to have been associated with the Masons in olden times as the tailors do?

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

JACOB NORTON.

SUBORDINATION IN THE HIGHER DEGREES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. Yarker has written you what I confess is to me a very interesting letter, but it is no answer to mine. As a member of the Royal Order of Scotland, I am quite well aware of the antiquity and dignity of that Order, and of its intimate connection with both the Rose Croix and Templar degrees; but I am at a loss to know why it should be dragged into the discussion "on subordination in the higher degrees," and Bro. Yarker's conduct in relation thereto. To Bro. Yarker himself let me say one thing: I am heartily sorry that he has acted in such a bitter and hostile manner towards the Supreme Grand Council, because I think he is a Mason who would have done credit to the Ancient and Accepted Rite as one of the few real students of Masonry. I am sorry he should try to run down the S.G.C.—so-called, as he is pleased to term it—because, though his action cannot injure the members of the 33°, it only breeds strife amongst the brethren, and many of us would be glad to hold out the right-hand of fellowship to Bro. Yarker if he would only make his peace with the S.G.C. With regard to his statements as to the Ne Plus Ultra degree, there is a good deal of truth in them, and this I have before admitted. The K.H. was formerly given in the old K.T. encampments, and I myself received it, together with the Red Cross degree, in one of the oldest in England, though in a mutilated form.

But Bro. Yarker evidently forgets (I certainly give him credit for knowing the fact) that there were six degrees of Kadosh: the Knight Kadosh, Kadosh of the Chapter of Clermont, Philosophical Kadosh, Kadosh Prince of Death, and Kadosh of the A. and A. Rite*. Mackey's significant remark is worth recording:—"Of these degrees we need pay little attention to any except that of the Ancient and Accepted Scotch Rite, the most important of the few that continue to be worked."

As to Bro. Yarker's account of the origin of the A. and A. Rite, I must beg leave to again draw his attention to Mackey, who I presume will be considered an equal authority even with John Yarker. Mackey says, in his article on "The Emperors of the East and West:—"It is, however, a mistake to suppose, as has been asserted by Thory and Ragon, that the Council of Emperors of the East and West was the origin of the Ancient and Accepted Rite. The former had originally adopted (like their successors, the promoters of the Rite of Misraim) twenty-five of the degrees of the latter rite, but were subsequently re-formed and re-organised by Frederick." The words italicised are my own.

But supposing it were true that the originators of the A. and A. Rite were—one a tailor, another a dancing-master, as Bro. Yarker asserts, I am yet to learn that these occupations are not as good as that of a rag or yarn merchant, who is dubbed by his friends Grand Commander of the Ne Plus Ultra and Head of the Council of Rites. Bro. Yarker does not believe that our esteemed Bro. Hughan would lend his name and reputation to support the A. and A. Rite. Perhaps not; and yet I have at my elbow a volume of the Freemasons' Magazine for 1865 where I see Bro. Hughan is proud to put 18° after his name. Perhaps he wanted to be off with the old love of the A. and A. Rite before he was on with the new of the Order of Constantine; at all events, I see he has resigned membership of the Rose Croix Chapter to which he belonged. For my own part I am sorry for it, because I feel sure that Bro. Hughan would have risen in time to a high position in the A. and A. Rite, a position which his Masonic attainments amply deserve.

I cannot give the quotation from "Mirabeau" Bro. Yarker asks for, as I have not the work by me. I daresay, however, it is in the library at 33, Golden-square, and I am quite sure the courteous Secretary-General will gladly give any member of the A. and A. Rite free access to the same.

In conclusion, I must say your readers will be glad to see the altered tone of Bro. Yarker's letter, and for my own part, I am sorry if I have been led to speak harshly of any brother, though I felt bound to support the dignity and character of the Supreme Grand Council against the unjust aspersions and calumnious statements of some of your correspondents.

Permit me to add just one line as to the common-sense view of this question: I take it that it is proved that no body in this country but the S.G. Council has any right to confer the 18°, 30°, 31°, and 32°; that it is admitted that certain old encampments, notably Bristol, have given, or do now give, degrees similar, though not identical, with the 18° and 30°; that these bodies have never given anything approaching to the 31° and 32°; that the degrees they give are neither recognised by the Supreme Masonic Bodies in this or any other country; and that their certificates are so far useless as they will not gain the holders admission anywhere. What is the consequence of all this? Simply that brethren seeking admission and recognition can only do so by joining the A. and A. Rite. Take the Mark degree, for instance. Is it not worked at York in an irregular lodge? What are its certificates worth? Nothing! I know several Masons who took the Mark there, and who finding it useless joined properly constituted lodges, and now are worthy Mark

Masters, and some of them, I dare say, members of the Mark Grand Lodge. I feel assured that the Supreme Grand Council would, if properly approached, gladly meet the brethren half-way, and would, where it could be proved beyond doubt that these degrees had been worked from "time immemorial," establish chapters and lend their authority to their establishment on a proper and Masonic basis.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,
A MASON WHO BELIEVES IN HIS O.B.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM AND MASONRY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Upon this subject Bro. Forsyth, at page 293, is again at fault. He takes hold of a "broken reed," and thinks it a "strong cable," viz., the pretended charter of transmission. After what has been said about it, he ought to have been careful before alluding to it, for it has been denounced as a modern forgery, and I have never heard the slightest proof of its being aught else. Ignorant brethren may believe in and be imposed upon by it, or it may be a brother to the pretended Malcolm Canmore Charter. Yet as to both, all Masonic students would do well to ponder the remarks of Bro. Hughan at page 172, March 18th.

Bro. Forsyth also asserts that I gave him no information, but merely designated certain statements as "dreams," "fancies," or "moonshine." Now supposing I did use these terms, that itself was information so far. However, I did more; I referred him to the past pages of THE FREEMASON, where he will get lots of information if he chooses to take the trouble. Probably, however, this is not what he, and others like him, want. They wish some "Royal road to learning," by which they might become possessed of all Masonic knowledge by simply paying 2d. for a single copy of THE FREEMASON!

I am, yours fraternally,
W. P. BUCHAN.

THE GRAND CONCLAVE OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Permit me to make one slight correction in your report of Grand Conclave published in last week's impression. You say that the tripartite treaty was carried by a majority of two—whereas it should have been nearly two to one. The numbers were:—For the amendment (that the question be adjourned till the next Conclave), 32; against, 53. And on the original motion: For, 53; against, 29.

I am sure your desire that the truth should prevail will lead you to give this a place in your columns.

I am, yours fraternally,
ONE WHO WAS PRESENT.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am really quite shocked at the undignified and absurd procedure of the Grand Conclave magnates! One would have thought the testimony of the much-respected Deputy Grand Master, the Rev. John Huyshe, would have opened the eyes of even the Grand Chancellor to the position and importance of the Red Cross Degree; but, no! the Supreme Grand Council and the Grand Conclave must (to meet the former) endeavour to keep the "Red Cross" out in the cold! The treaty between the Mark Degree and the Red Cross was made prior to the ill-advised decision of the Grand Conclave, and it is mainly due to the energy and representations of those two grand bodies that these treaties have been made. For the Grand Conclave and Supreme Grand Council to thus unite, in my opinion, indicates a coming storm, and it therefore behoves the Baldwin Encampment, and others such, to look after their ancient privileges and rights respecting the Rose Croix and K.H. degrees, for, depend upon it, if it is a treaty at all, it will ultimately lead to all Knights Templar being prohibited from working any of the degrees worked by the "Ancient and Accepted Rite."

I am disgusted myself with the management of the "higher degrees" (so-called) but the "Red Cross," for there are more "bickerings, heartburnings, and unchristian deeds" in their puny organisations than in all the Craft lodges put together? I trust the capital notice of the meeting in THE FREEMASON will lead to an organisation throughout the country among the Knights Templar to proceed to the Grand Conclave next December, and oppose successfully the confirmation of the minutes so far as regards this most obnoxious one-sided treaty. No doubt, we shall soon hear of the expulsion of some Bath and Manchester Knights Templar because of their opposition to the 33°. I therefore beg to ask the attention of the Fraternity to this abuse of power, and I trust that, ere long, such arbitrary conduct will meet with its just reward, and be opposed most successfully.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—We should be glad of further information in regard to the Templar treaty with the Mark and the S.S.G.G.I.I.G.C. (under forged powers). Has the same passed into law? Most assuredly if the provinces had been aware of this proposed treaty, it would never have been allowed; and the Grand Master is bound in justice and honour to have the treaty submitted to a special Grand Conclave before he risks a large secession from the Order. We trust you will give us further information upon this matter.

There are at least five High Grade Chapters also claiming under the following law which passed Grand Conclave December 14th, 1866. These are Baldwin, Bristol; Observance, London; Antiquity, Bath; Redemption, Hull; Jerusalem, Manchester; and perhaps many others, whose names we should be glad to know, as all warrants bearing date prior to about 1850 are for H.M., R.H. The present Grand Conclave is just twenty years old, and has no history to fall back upon when these chapters withdraw from them.

What is to be done, then, with the chapters claiming hereunder?—"That in the case of any Encampment of Knights Templar, holding a warrant granted prior to 1791, and which warrant gives power to confer degrees not connected with the Order of Knights Templar and Knights of Malta, a warrant of confirmation shall, on proper application, be granted by the M.E. and S.G.M. assuring to such encampment all the powers it possessed under the original warrant, so far as the Orders of Knights Templar and Knights of Malta are concerned, leaving to the members, holding such original warrant, the discretionary exercise of the powers therein contained, so long as they are kept separate and distinct in every respect from the Order of Knights Templar and Knights of Malta."

The suggestion of the Gavel, page 316, is a very good one. There is an Ancient Royal Grand Council of Antient Rites—time immemorial—(recently revised), the certificate of which includes all the 33°, Ark Mariners, Red Cross of Constantine, Babylon, Palestine, Jerusalem, Order of Misraim, Phillippi, &c., &c., and it would be well if the more modern Orders of Constantine and Misraim could be united therewith giving us everything under one certificate.

Fraternally yours,
LIBERTAS.

QUALIFICATION FOR THE MARK CHAIR.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am glad that I have had the pleasure of reading Bro. Jas. Stevens' letter in last week's FREEMASON. I cordially agree in his statement that "to have refused the worthy brother his preferment" to the Mark chair "would have been an act of injustice to him and discouragement to other zealous Mark Master Masons.

As to the absolute necessity of obtaining a "dispensation," I humbly think there ought not to be any necessity for making such an application, which is attended with trouble and expense; for however small the latter may be, strict economy is very essential in many Mark lodges just now.

I hope ere much further time passes away, that we shall find our Mark lodges relieved from the incubus of requiring the W.M. to have first occupied the W.M. chair in a Craft lodge. I know (as no doubt Bro. James Stevens also knows) that many Mark Masons who would be ornaments and honours in any chair, have but a slight chance in large Craft lodges of attaining the Craft W.M. chair.

If a dispensation be necessary, it implies a power of refusal; and although the G.M.M. might in all cases grant it, yet he has the opportunity of rejecting such application if he felt so disposed.

Yours fraternally,
A CRAFT AND MARK P.M.

THE 1717 THEORY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—As your highly-esteemed correspondent, Bro. "Lupus," expresses his intention, at page 316, not to prolong this discussion, I shall now withdraw from it, at the same time desiring to return my most respectful thanks both to yourself and him for the courtesy displayed towards myself in it. I may also mention that since this discussion took place, I have had sent me some most interesting and valuable documents, going back to 1670, and in which are some rare remarks, rules, and regulations included. Consequently, until they are published, it will be just as well for any opponents of the 1717 theory to keep quiet, seeing they would be placing themselves at a disadvantage, as I know the contents of these rare old lodge minutes, &c., while at present they do not. Before closing, permit me a word of explanation to one or two of Bro. "Lupus's" statements. I did not "forget" that the carpenters and masons were often jointly referred to, for that was just what I affirmed. More, I stated that, as to social position, trade, &c., &c., both were simply on a par. Further, instead of saying these two crafts were "more important," or took a higher position than others, I have said, in the old Aberdeen trade processions, the smiths took precedence of them, while as to many other things, they were behind some of the other crafts. In many cases in social and burghal affairs the "Tailors" were ahead of them. I respectfully ask Bro. "Lupus" if he wishes to understand this more fully, to read over my former remarks again. As to the 1425 statute, I challenged Bro. "Lupus" to produce a statute referring especially to masons, and which did not also refer to the other house tradesmen, especially under similar circumstances; and he did not do it, but in the hurry mentioned this 1425 Masonic statute, in which other "laborers" are referred to.

As to Bro. "Lupus" asserting that our "present Constitution" existed in 1450, were he to do so, I would ask proof. Proof can be given of our system existing after 1717, but we can't get proof of its existence before then. More, we have proof that what existed before then was not the same; and I intend to support this negative shortly.

I am, yours fraternally,
W. P. BUCHAN.

THE WIFE'S FAREWELL.

Addressed by a lady, the wife of a Freemason, to her sorrowing husband, shortly before her dissolution.

Farewell, dear husband, we must part,
Farewell, a sad farewell;
The anguish of thy poor wife's heart
Is more than she can tell.
I know 'tis God who calls me home,
But still my tears will flow,
Whilst witnessing thee suffering
I share thy bitter woe.

Alas! it is not here, my love,
That we must look for rest,
A Power, which we dare question not,
Wills all things for the best.
Although the icy hand of Death
Stills hearts that beat in love,
The balm of prayer sweet solace gives
And guides our hopes above.

I feel my strength is failing fast,
The time is drawing near
When I must leave my home on earth
And all my heart held dear.
'Tis hard to die and part from thee
Whilst life seem'd full of joy,
And scarce a shade of sorrow came
Its sweetness to alloy.

Yet thou wilt bear up for my sake,
Although affliction's rod
Seems sad and grievous, we should trust
Through every trial in God.
Ah! now my sight is growing dim,
And through my sobs of grief
I hear the angels calling me
To Heaven's calm relief.

Weep not, beloved, life is short,
We soon shall meet again
In that bright world where joy and peace
Will take the place of pain.
Kiss me, my husband, lay my head
Upon thine arm to rest;
And let my last, my dying breath,
Be sigh'd upon thy breast.

Croydon. AGNES S.

THE CHOLERA.—It is much to be feared that the horrors of pestilence will, ere long, be added to those of war; nor can it be a matter of wonder. The cholera has appeared at Odessa, Rostow, Kertch, and Taganrog, in S.E. Russia; and will in all probability follow its usual track until it arrives in this country. It is frightful to think of the number of victims which it will snatch from among the crowded, ill-fed, and wounded populations which now fill the frontier towns of Germany and France. But are we, who are not suffering from these indications, ready to meet the cholera, if it comes? Is our health machinery in such perfect order that we can calmly face the epidemic and defy it? We think not.—Food Journal.

SMALL-POX, FEVERS, AND SKIN DISEASES.—The predisposition to is prevented by Lamplough's Pyrelic Saline. Vitalising and invigorating, its effects are remarkable in their cure and prevention. Take it as directed. Sold by chemists and the maker, H. Lamplough, 113, Holborn-hill.—[Advt.]

THEATRICAL.

HAYMARKET.—The new comedy-drama, "An English Gentleman," written by Mr. H. J. Byron, continues to increase in popularity, Mr. Sothron—who, we notice with pleasure, has recovered from his severe illness—taking the part of Charles Chuckles, Esq. The evening's entertainment commences with the musical piece "Mischief Making," and ends with Mr. Matthew's farce of "Uncle Fozzle." Bro. T. B. Buckstone, the manager of this fashionable theatre, is rewarded with full houses every evening.

ST. JAMES'S.—The new nautical burlesque by Mr. F. C. Burnard, "Poll and Partner Joe," is a great success. Mrs. John Wood, as Mary Maybud, must be seen by all who may wish to realize her wonderful performance, as her acting that character has produced quite a furor. The other pieces are Planché's comedy "Secret Service," which commences the programme, and the new farce "Rival Romeos," terminates as successful a list of pieces as has ever been presented to any audience. We noted with gratification that this elegant theatre was filled on the night of our visit.

OLYMPIC.—Mr. Byron's new drama of "Daisy Farm" is the great attraction here. As all playgoers are bound to see this successful drama, many months must elapse before it can be withdrawn.

STRAND.—This popular theatre is able to rely upon "Lodgers and Dodgers," "Neighbours," and the successful burlesque of "Eurydice," as the programme suitable for their patrons, and the success attending their judgment proves that no error has been made.

VAUDEVILLE.—Mr. James Albery's popular comedy "Two Roses," after a long run of prosperity has been withdrawn. In its place is a new burlesque from the prolific pen of Mr. H. J. Byron, entitled "The Orange Tree and the Humble Bee, or the Little Princess who was Lost at Sea." This burlesque is equal to any of its predecessors produced by Mr. H. J. Byron, and the characters are well sustained by Miss Nelly Power as Princess Precious, Miss A. Newton as Princess Ada, Miss Rose Evelyn as Princess Lina, and Misses Lavis and Nelly Walters sustained the other female parts. Miss Nelly Power gained encores in all her songs. Mr. David James as Tippertwitch, and Mr. Thorne as Croqueusitane, were the leading characters in the parts, and they were ably supported by Mr. C. Fenton as King Kakonibbs, Mr. L. Fredericks as Bow-wow, and Mr. W. Moore as Carniverous the Cruel. One of the noticeable features of the piece was a clog dance by the Misses Newton and Power and Mr. D. James, which the spectators encored again and again. On the fall of the curtain the whole of the performers were called to the front. This burlesque is certain to remain on the bills for a long time to come, as it is a genuine success. It was followed with a farce by F. Hay, Esq., entitled "Bubble and Squeak," in which the humour of Mr. D. James as Bubble and Mr. T. Thorne as Squeak kept the audience thoroughly amused. "A Fearful Fog" now commences the entertainment. The house was crammed on the night of our visit. From the spirited manner in which all the pieces are placed on the stage, we wish the lessees, Bros. H. J. Montague, D. James, and T. Thorne, every success, as their efforts to please their patrons must ensure a continuance of bumper houses every evening.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXER.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixer, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthmas, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers. Bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by J. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. *Invalids should read Crosby's Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

THE BEST PUDDING. MAYAR'S SEMOLINA.

24 PRIZE MEDALS.

NOTICE.

Read this with care and attention.)

THE MANUFACTORY OF MAYAR'S SEMOLINA was established in 1815. It is the oldest and the largest in the World, Twenty-five Million pounds being yearly produced. (25,000,000.)

Our SEMOLINA is the staple food in France, Russia, Spain, Italy, &c., and will soon be that of England. It has obtained 24 PRIZE MEDALS in the Great Exhibitions for its superiority over all others, and is pronounced by the most eminent members of the Medical Profession, both in London and in Paris, to be far more Nutritious than Tapioca, Arrowroot, corn flour (which are only Starch), or any farinaceous food already introduced into this country. See Dr. Hassall's Analytical Report in the columns of this paper.

N.B.—Being determined to maintain its reputation, we again CAUTION the Public, that an imitation, to which a false and ridiculous name has been given, is introduced by a well known Firm, taking advantage of its name and publicity to sell a similar article of very inferior quality, to realise extra profits, and who advertise in favour of that article the qualities possessed by our Semolina.

As a proof of our assertion we challenge a comparison, by analysis, between our SEMOLINA and the so-called Pearlina.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is solely the heart of the very best Wheat.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is richer than any other farinaceous food in Azotic matter, indispensable in the muscular formation of the body.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Highly recommended by the Faculty for Children and Invalids

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is extremely nourishing and easily digested.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA makes delicious Puddings, Custards and Pastry

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA unequalled for thickening Soups, Beef Tea, and Gruels

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is the greatest delicacy for Breakfast and Supper

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is very economical. May be used with or without Milk. Recipes on each Package.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, &c.

HOMINY.

MAYAR'S HOMINY, produced from the best Indian Maize, without any adulteration obtained by grinding, is far superior to the Maize Corn Flour already introduced in this country, which is only Starch obtained by a process of washing, which deteriorates entirely the quality, and is sold at a very high price.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, and Corn Dealers. Wholesale at MAYAR'S, 35, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C. A Wholesale Agent wanted in every Town.

THEATRICAL.

VAUDEVILLE.—On last Saturday evening, at this fashionable theatre, Mr. James Albery's comic two-act drama, named "Tweddie's Rights," was performed to a crowded house for the first time. It is unquestionably original. John Tweddie (Bro. David James) is admirably rendered. The make-up is so good that no one would recognise him. Bro. T. Thorne was excellent as Tim Whiffler, a sporting man, ever anxious to put every body "up to a good thing." Miss T. Lavis is very good as the Widow Potts. Miss A. Newton as the affectionate Millie, Mr. E. Dyas as Dr. Pritchard, and Mr. Wyke Moore as the ill-used nephew, all well sustain their parts. At the end of each act the principal performers had to appear, and after its performance Mr. Albery had to bow his acknowledgments to the audience. We can pronounce this drama a decided success. It may not, perhaps, have a run of 300 nights, like its predecessor, "Two Roses," but it is sure to be performed for a long time to come, at any rate until the return of Bro. H. Montague from his provincial tour. All who admire Mr. Albery's plays should see this drama, which in no way diminishes his reputation, but, if possible, adds to it. Bro. D. James has proved himself a consummate actor by the masterly manner he renders the character of John Tweddie, and adds this character to his many triumphs. Mr. Byron's extravaganza of "The Orange Tree and the Humble Bee," and Mr. Hay's farce of "Bubble and Squeak," are still on the programme. The well-filled houses prove how the public appreciate the efforts made here to please them.

PRINCESS'S.—"Shadows," by Sir C. L. Young, Bart., was produced at this theatre on last Saturday morning. It is an original play, in four acts, with a prologue. The play lasted four hours, so, at the termination, the audience were dismissed. The "Lottery Ticket" was to have concluded the programme, but was not given on account of the length of time "Shadows" took performing. "Shadows" is a success, and likely to remain on the programme for some time to come.

JERUSALEM.—A movement is on foot to send abroad, under American auspices, an expedition for the purpose of making thorough explorations of Jerusalem and the Holy Land. A committee is already organised in Iowa, U.S., and is well under way towards carrying out such a plan.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

FREEMASONRY & ISRAELITISM.

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

II.

In pursuing the subject opened in my former paper, I promise to be as brief as is consistent with intelligibility, but I fear I shall have to appeal to the patience of some of your readers. To come at once to the subject, I observe that the consideration of the problem I have presented, furnishes, as it seems to me, one link in a chain of circumstances which lead to the conclusion that we, as a portion of that great race now identified with the western and southern nations of Europe, the States of America, the British colonies, &c., bear a closer affinity to the Hebrew race than is dreamt of in our philosophy.

I do not know that I need say anything to Freemasons on behalf of such an enquiry as that I propose. Apart from the interest it must possess for all who have a perception of the connexion between the Craft and the history of God's ancient people, and who feel the importance of obtaining as thorough a knowledge as can be obtained of the meaning of those prophecies which relate to the future of a people with so many of whom we are associated in the bonds of brotherhood, we are called upon, individually, in the course of our Masonic advancement, to regard, as amongst the peculiar objects of our research, those things which will the better enable us to estimate the wonderful works of the Almighty. Need I ask whether the whole history of Israel, and the many prophecies pointing more or less clearly to its future, are not amongst the most wonderful works of the Almighty, as demonstrating the exercise of His moral government, the maintenance of His covenant promises, and the unchangeableness of His divine purpose in the final redemption of mankind? Believing this to be so, I venture to hope that many of my brethren will not object that I should invite them to a careful consideration of the subject. In treating it, I shall take two things for granted, each of which is placed beyond doubt. (1). That the history of the conquest, by Assyria, of the ten tribes, or kingdom of Israel or Ephraim, as we have it in the Old Testament scriptures, is an authentic history; and (2), that the prophecies of the Old Testament, relating to this extraordinary people, have been, or will be, fulfilled. A short review of that history is necessary to the understanding of our subject.

Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob governed their respective families with unlimited parental authority. They were powerful princes, as the Emirs of the Nomads are to the present day. Their families and dependents formed very large bodies, and he who was the head of them was quite independent, owing allegiance to none, but forming alliances with other princes, and even with kings. For their own vassals they were the priests, the chiefs, and the judges; they exercised, in fact, all the functions of sacerdotal, civil, and military autocrats. The twelve sons of Jacob appear to have ruled their several families in like manner, but when their descendants had so far increased as to form tribes, each tribe had a prince as its ruler. Originally, this office appears to have been hereditary, belonging to the eldest son of the founder of the tribe, but, afterwards, as the tribes increased in number, it became elective. The tribes were subdivided into Families or Houses—clans—the rulers of which were denominated “Heads of Houses of Fathers,” “Heads of Thousands,” &c., but were in rank subordinate to the princes. This form of government exists to the present day among the Nomads, especially the Bedouin Arabs, who call their princes Emirs, and their heads of clans Sheicks. The Emirs have their secretaries, answering to the Soterim among the Hebrews, who sustained an important part in the government of the people. This form of government seems to have been maintained by the Hebrews while they dwelt in Egypt, where they were treated as guests, rather than subjects, until the entrance of a foreign dynasty of monarchs, who either not knowing or not caring for the services which one of their ancestors had rendered to the nation, looked upon them as intruders, and subjected them to the cruel treatment of bondsmen. The time of their deliverance at length arrived, and He who had covenanted with their fathers to be their God, to give them the land of Canaan as an everlasting possession, and to make them the witnesses of His Almighty power and beneficence (Genesis xvii. 4-9, xviii. 18, xxii. 18), in order to secure those great and beneficent purposes, so far changed their civil polity as to unite more closely the whole people; and the knowledge and worship of God was so intimately connected with the political structure of the nation that the one could not be maintained without the other. Jehovah assumed a marked and visible relation to the people, becoming their law-giver, supreme judge, and king; appointing judges and magistrates, making peace and war, and receiving the half-shekel as a tribute for revenue. We call this form of government by the distinctive appellation of a Theocracy. The laws were unalterable (Deut. iv. 1 and 2, xii. 32); and without the sanction of Jehovah, made known by Urim and Thummim, no measure of importance could be undertaken. The Tabernacle and the Temple were regarded as the palace of the Great King, the priests and Levites as His attendants, and the sacrifices, the libations of wine, and the shew bread as the daily provision for His household. It is only by taking this view of the Hebrew government that we can understand the reason for various prescribed laws and institutions under that dispensation. As soon as the people had taken possession of the land promised to them, they exhibited a desire to return to their ancient form of society, and this they were permitted to do, under such modifications as rendered it compatible with the Theocratic character to which we have referred. They had the princes of tribes, and, under them, the princes of families, or commanders of hundreds. The heads of the respective tribes presided over their affairs, administered justice in many cases, and led the troops in time of war; while the heads of families formed a council in such matters of policy as affected their particular districts, subject to the decision of the prince, in civil and criminal inquiries, and commanded under him in the field. These Heads of tribes and of families constituted the national senate, whose deliberations guided the administration of affairs in all cases of difficulty, and thus formed the bond of a federative society. Each tribe composed one entire political community, and these, in some respects, acted as independent nations, sometimes alone, and sometimes partly in conjunction with those who made common cause with them against their enemies. Nevertheless, Jehovah was the King of the whole people (1 Sam. xii. 12), who had one common temple, one common oracle, one common high priest, the prime minister of the king; a common learned class who possessed cities in all the tribes, and one common law of church and state. The advances made in the art of government of the people are very marked, and one can hardly avoid, even in this brier glance, comparing it with the progress in the art of government amongst ourselves. They did not rest in the patriarchal form. As soon as circumstances permitted, they were accustomed, first, to aristocratic rule, or government by a few—these being the natural leaders of the people. They had thereafter introduced the democratic principle—the people delegating their power to men who acted in their name, either for counsel or for judgment. At length the jealousies and disunion of the tribes, the effeminacy and cowardice of the people, their disposition to neglect their Divine King, and the degeneracy of Samuel's sons, who had been appointed subordinate judges or deputies, culminated in a revolt against their invisible and Divine King, and they resolved to have a king, such as other nations had, who might lead them to battle and victory (1 Sam. viii.). Samuel, after pointing out the many and serious evils which might result from thus raising one of themselves to the supreme power, presented to them Saul, of the tribe of Benjamin, the smallest in Israel, and of a family which was the smallest of the tribe, and he was elected king of the people (1 Sam. x. 24; xi. 15) We need not advert to the character of Saul's reign, further than to say that he was victorious over all the surrounding enemies of the people, that he administered civil affairs without aiming at any royal splendour, and that he restrained the tendency of the people to idolatrous practices; but that, failing to adapt himself to the theocratic nature of the Hebrew Constitution, he proved himself unfit to be the founder of a royal house. The kingdom was transferred to David, a shepherd boy of the tribe of Judah, which Jacob had predicted should rule, notwithstanding that this eminence, by right of primogeniture, belonged to Reuben. David, however, was not, as Saul was, elected by the people. He was by Divine command anointed king by Samuel, on the prophet's visit to Bethlehem, in which David's family dwelt, and afterwards he was chosen king over the house of Judea alone, while Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, became king over the rest of the tribes. The wars between the two peoples were fierce and long, but after a reign of seven years and six months over the tribe of Judah, the other tribes submitted to David at Hebron, and he was anointed king over all Israel (2 Sam. v.). The reign of David was a glorious one, for, understanding and keeping in mind his Divine mission, he regarded himself as the vassal of Jehovah. The Lord found in him "a man after His own heart"—that is, he realised the true spirit of the theocracy, and effected those reforms in the affairs of government and of public worship which were calculated to awaken and keep alive in the minds and affections of the people a sincere and exclusive adoration of Jehovah. His arms were victorious in every quarter, the borders of Israel were, in consonance with ancient prophecy, extended to the Euphrates, and all the neighbouring peoples were inspired with reverence or fear for the God of Israel. His desire to build a temple for the worship of the true and living God Most High was not permitted to be realised. That singular honour and glory was reserved for Solomon his son and successor, whose reign was the golden era of the Hebrew monarchy. As the Misses Rothschild beautifully remark (Hist. and Lit. of the Israelites, i., 413), "Like the Augustan age of Rome, the time of Solomon seemed to combine the power and the splendour of foregone and succeeding generations. Its brilliancy and magnificence rejoiced the hearts of all Israel, and dazzled the strangers of distant lands. Every trace of their being a people rescued from Egyptian slavery and settled in a conquered land, after violent feuds, had vanished, and no sign of future reverses or humiliations clouded the horizon. The Hebrew commonwealth was in the very noon-day of its happiness. Solomon, 'the peaceful one,' or Jedadiah, 'the darling of the Lord,' was to bring glory and power to the well-established empire," and he did so. But glorious as Solomon's reign commenced and continued for some years, it at length degenerated. The well-governed and flourishing commonwealth was changed into a kingdom, menaced by both foreign and domestic foes, and was tainted by the grossest idolatry. The licentious worship of Astarte, and the detestable rites of Chemosh, Milcom, and Moloch were introduced and almost universally prevailed, and, after a reign of nearly forty years, this once wise and powerful monarch died, unhappy and piteously, having passed from the summit of earthly happiness to the depth of human misery. At his death the kingdom collapsed. Rehoboam, his son and successor, by his inordinate pretensions and galling menaces, inflamed the discontent and disaffection which the oppressive character of the latter years of Solomon's reign had created, and Israel rebelled, Judah and Benjamin alone adhering to Rehoboam. For some time previously, jealousy and rivalry had existed between the tribes of Judah and Joseph, the two most powerful in the commonwealth. The latter inherited a double portion, being divided into two, Ephraim and Manassah, who valued themselves upon their descent from such an ancestor as Joseph, who had been so markedly and honourably distinguished from his brethren in the prophetic blessings pronounced by Moses and Jacob, and they were perpetually struggling for the pre-eminence which they ultimately attained to, Ephraim being represented as all Israel, and becoming another name for the kingdom. From the time of the revolt there were two separate and distinct kingdoms, governed each by its own monarch, often at war with each other, and distinguished in the sacred annals and in the prophets as JUDAH, and ISRAEL, or EPHRAIM.

THE FAIR SEX AND ADOPTIVE MASONRY.

ARTICLE VII.

In meditating upon the social and religious aspects of the different races known to exist, I have frequently regretted that Christianity should have received in various parts of the world, so much opposition and hostility. That it has stimulated the worst passions no one can, after carefully reviewing the scenes of bloodshed and persecution, feel justified in disclaiming. That it has been confined to narrow limits, and that it has from time to time been denounced as a barbarian institution is alike incontrovertible. It must be a matter of great surprise to the reflective that the number of its disciples should be in so great a minority to that of followers of Paganism, notwithstanding the persistent efforts of conscientious men to disseminate its doctrines among nations where its influence is considered so essential to the well-being of the inhabitants. It would be almost impossible to enumerate the valuable lives that have, since the advent of Christ, been sacrificed in this extremely hazardous undertaking. Will Christianity ultimately triumph over the many difficulties that now surround it? and will its adoption be universal? are questions that naturally suggest themselves to the mind, but can only be solved by the great truth-teller—Time. The systems of worship in vogue among the peoples of the earth are, it is well known, very considerable, and may be divided into four great classes, viz., the Jewish, Christian, Mahommedan, and Pagan. The number of devotees to each sect is, as near as possible, represented by the following figures:—

Jews ... ..	5,000,000
Christians ... ..	500,000,000
Mahommedans ... ..	160,000,000
Pagans ... ..	800,000,000

How antagonistic are the doctrines enunciated by each order! What sincerity to the established observances, and what extreme sensitiveness to their violation does each denomination manifest! How quickly are the designs of the other orders to make converts counteracted, and how often do they result in the bitterest strife! The Christian implicitly believes in his principles—so do the Jew, Mohammedan, and Pagan in their own. Each in his ardent zeal endeavours to point out the fallacy of the religious dogmas of the other, and even supports the controversy by some supposed authenticated proofs or records that have been handed down from generation to generation for hundreds of years. Shall the faith of either be condemned or ridiculed? The fanaticism shown by each has unquestionably produced vast evil, and will ever exercise its baneful effects wherever it presents itself. Let us, then, strive to respect the views and opinions expressed by others. Let us not be illiberal in our acts towards our fellow-creatures, for it must be remembered that each is endeavouring, in his own peculiar way, to reach that mansion where all (without distinction to caste or colour) bask in the supreme felicity of the great I AM.

The characteristics of the Christian religion are exceedingly beautiful, and have more or less done much to refine the feelings. May they continue to teach the duties due by man to his Creator, and may these duties be discharged with a spirit commensurate with their importance. To the true Christian the word "faith" is of great significance, but how frequently is it ignored in this enlightened age, as it is termed. Education has, in its progress, broken down the barriers of superstition and ignorance, but it has brought in its train a pernicious reveller called "Infidelity," who is constantly flitting about in places where his presence could scarcely have been expected. If evidence to establish this assertion respecting the shameless disregard to the will and pleasure of the Creator were necessary, it would be found in the behaviour displayed by many whose views had at one time been admired in public and private. It is sad to acknowledge that this social sore is extending every day. This fact may well cause much uneasiness to those who have silently observed its corrupting influence. It must, however, be some satisfaction that the supporters and sympathisers of the evil are, sooner or later, made to feel in some way the outrages they have committed before Him who gave them life. The mal-practices of men are seen in their hideousness only when the transgressors are cast upon beds of sickness, and exposed to the keen shafts incessantly hurled by conscience. Why do men act so wickedly? Have they not sufficient testimony of the existence of an All-wise Being when they view the green fields, the blooming flowers, the budding trees, and the other marvels in nature, clearly demonstrating that an unseen hand is ever at work? Can faith in these realities be shaken by the theories conceded and advanced by Atheists? Things do not create themselves, for there must be a motive power. That power is God, whose infinite wisdom and mercy are written upon every page of nature's works. How sweet and sublime is faith! Let it then be fostered throughout life. When the time shall arrive for the spirit to leave the body, the believer will be prepared to be ushered into the presence of the Great Geometrician of the Universe. "Be thou faithful unto death," says holy writ. The meaning of this passage is clear and impressive, and demands the strictest observance and most solemn attention from all whose hearts are inclined to love and rectitude. Those who strive to be mindful of God's decrees experience the happiest feelings and support in passing through this vale of tears—showing no fear of the inevitable dissolution of the body, but firmly relying on the supreme assistance in being guided through the shadow of death to everlasting glory. Who will feel disposed to say otherwise than that—

"Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The soul that rises with us, our life's star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar:
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter darkness,
But trailing clouds of glory, do we come
From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy."

Examples of the Christian's adherence to faith in the hour of tribulation and peril have been numerous in ancient and modern times, and excite the utmost pride and satisfaction to all who venerate the principles of Christianity. Readers of the Scriptures will not have failed to find the incident in the life of Martha peculiarly interesting and instructive, and as it is fully treated in the discourse hereunder given, I deem it unnecessary to review it in extenso. I shall therefore conclude my remarks by expressing an earnest wish that this and every other generation may be guided to emulate the characteristic that was so fervently exhibited by her in her affliction.

MARTHA, OR THE SISTER'S DEGREE.

[The symbol of the Uplifted Hands.]

“ Wildly her hands are joined in form of love,
As at the Saviour's feet the mourner lies,
Beseechingly she raises them above,
While showers of tear-drops blind her languid eyes;
Then looks and pleads and supplicates His aid
In words that win her brother from the dead.”

The biblical illustration runs thus:—
“ And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this ?”

The point of the signet is coloured green. The hue is represented by the pine leaf, which is emblematical of Martha. The emblem is the broken column.

A discourse is given by the Instructor in the following language:—

“ The structure of Freemasonry, in its obligations, emblems, and principles, is so peculiar that we, Master Masons, above all other men, are taught to respect undeviating faith in the hour of trial. The great doctrines of Masonry are all borrowed from the Bible. Our devotion to Masonry is chiefly founded upon this—that we believe the Bible to be the word of God, and therefore our principles, which are derived from the Bible, were written by the finger of God. Therefore when we find in history a person whose faith in the Redeemer was so fixed and thorough that even the death of her most beloved friend could not shake it, we seize upon that character as our own. We adopt and surround it with fraternal protection. We hail it as a Masonic character, and we claim whatever credit or honour may be associated with it. Such a character, forcibly delineated, we discover in the Book of John, under the title of MARTHA. And we have so surrounded the appeal of that noble and heroic woman to her Saviour, and her thorough confidence in His omnipotent power, with emblems, legends, and tokens of recognition, as to make it a section in Adoptive Masonry. The history of Martha, as comprising a degree of the Eastern Star, is thus given:—Her brother Lazarus was a resident of Bethany, a man of good standing among his fellow-citizens, and a friend of Jesus Christ. The family, composed of two sisters, Martha and Mary, with their brother Lazarus, seem to have possessed all things needful for a happy life. Bound up in the love of each other, and blessed with the friendship of Him whom to know is ‘ everlasting life,’ the little group were distinguished from their neighbours by a name that proved how their hearts were occupied with Divine things. They were ‘ the beloved of the Master, the happy household of Bethany.’ Upon an occasion when their Divine guest had gone out, beyond the Jordan, upon a mission of charity, Lazarus was taken suddenly and violently ill. The terrified sisters hastened to inform Jesus of the fact by a messenger, who was instructed to say, ‘ Lord, behold he whom thou lovest is sick!’ They reasonably supposed that so tender a missive could not fail of success. But the Saviour returned an ambiguous reply: the ‘ beloved at Bethany’ died and was buried. Four days passed—days shrouded with mourning—still the Saviour returned not. The sisters were abandoned to grief, not alone for the loss of their brother, their only earthly protector, but for the unkindness of him upon whom they had leaned as the ‘ Rock of their salvation.’ Yet Martha retained her faith, and trusted in Him yet to come and restore the friend they had lost. At the close of the fourth day, intelligence reached them that Jesus was returning to Bethany. Martha hastened to meet him, fell on her knees before, raised her hands imploringly towards his face, and, with a voice almost suppressed with emotion, cried aloud: ‘ Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died!’ Looking, a moment after, into His face, and animated by the God-like benignity with which he looked down upon her, she added, ‘ But I know that even now whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee!’ Amazing faith! heroic spirit of confidence in her Friend! Though her brother had been four days in the embrace of death, and the subject of its corrupting influences—though the weight of watchfulness and sorrow rested heavily upon her spirit as she knelt, her hands widely raised to heaven—there was a spirit of prophecy in her words which give them a value altogether their own. Then said Jesus: ‘ Thy brother shall rise again,’ testing her faith still further. She replied: ‘ I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.’ Jesus said unto her: ‘ I am the resurrection and the Life; he who believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?’ She answered at once, in the tone and spirit of perfect faith: ‘ Yea, Lord, I believe that thou art the Christ, the son of God, which should come into the world!’ The reward of such faith was soon rendered. Taking her by the hand, and passing by their dwelling, where they were joined by Mary, they went to the sepulchre, and, as every reader of scripture knows, Jesus raised the dead man to life. The colour green alludes to the resurrection of Lazarus, and, by direct inference, that final and grander resurrection in the last day. Never does Freemason cast the evergreen sprig into the open grave of his brother but the coming event is thus beautifully foreshadowed. The broken column is an emblem of the death of a young man in the vigour of life. The sign alludes . . . . The pass will recall the spirit of fidelity which characterises the history of Martha.”

The following verses serve the purpose of a tribute to Martha:—

“ Raise thy hands above, sweet mourner,
Higher, higher toward the throne!
Ah! He sees thee, hears thy story,
Hears and feels that plaintive moan.
He has wept for human sorrow,
Let thy sorrows with Him plead;
Raise thy hands in faith, and doubt not,
He hath power o'er the dead.”

The fifth point of the signet will be described in the next paper. C. S.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF BOMBAY.

The nineteenth half-yearly Communication was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Byculla, on Saturday evening, the 1st of April, 1871. Present: R.W. Bro. the Hon. Justice Gibbs, D.G.M.; R.W. Bro. George Taylor, P.D.G.M.; W. Bros. John Dixon, P.D.G.S.W., as S.G.W.; A. C. Gumpert, P.D.G.S.W., as J.G.W.; J. P. Leith, P.D.G. Chaplin; Bro. J. J. Winton, D.G. Treas; W. Bros. E. T. Leith, D.G. Reg.; W. H. Hussey, D.G. Sec.; Col. L. W. Penn, C.B., D.G.S.D.; Alfred Swift, P.D.G.D., as D.G.J.D.; S. Frammurze, D.G. Dir. of Cers.; Bros. George Bease, P.D.G. Dir. of Cers., as D.G. Sword Bearer; J. Thomas, D.G. Org.; H. J. P. Thompson, D.G. Steward, as D.G. Purs.; Dr. W. F. Knapp, D.G. Steward; J. W. Seager, D.G. Tyler; and the Masters, Past Masters, and Wardens of several lodges.

The District Grand Lodge was opened in ample form at 6.50 o'clock.

The District Grand Pursuivant having reported that the R.W. the Prov. Grand Master of Western India, R.W. Bro. Captain H. Morland, attended by his Depute Prov. Grand Master, R.W. Bro. M. Balfour, Honorary Depute Grand Master, Bro. Manockjee Cursetjee, and several of his Prov. Grand Officers, was at the porch, and had come to honour the District Grand Lodge with a visit, the District Grand Master requested the R.W. the Past District Grand Master would receive the Prov. Grand Lodge of Western India, which was done, and the R.W. Prov. Grand Master and Officers were introduced into the District Grand Lodge by the Past District Grand Master, the D.G. Deacons, the D.G. Dir. of Cers., and D.G. Stewards, and conducted to the East, where the Prov. Grand Master was warmly received by the R.W. District Grand Master, and placed in a chair on the right of the chair of K.S., and saluted with the grand honours.

R.W. Bro. Morland then acknowledged the welcome with which he had been greeted.

The minutes of the previous communication having been printed and circulated to all the members of the District Grand Lodge were taken as read and confirmed.

Bro. J. J. Winton was then unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. J. W. Seager, Tyler, for the year.

Before investing the officers for the ensuing twelve months, the District Grand Master thanked the Past Grand Officers for their support and assistance, and said that he had the same confidence in those on whom he was now about to confer District Grand rank as he had in those brethren who had so faithfully done their duty. He was quite sure that the Wor. Brother whom he had selected for his Depute would be approved of by one and all the Masons over whom he had the honour to rule. W. Bro. Percy Leith was Past Master of the oldest English lodge, Antiquity, No. 1, and also Past Grand Steward of the Grand Lodge of England.

He had proved himself to be a hard-working, zealous Mason, who spared no time or pains to promote peace in lodge and harmony between individual Masons. For the other offices, too, he had selected brethren well known for their ardour in the cause of Masonry, as well as for their position in society, so that he looked forward to a most successful year.

The following brethren were then appointed, and those who were present invested, District Grand Officers for the year ensuing:—

Some of the brethren nominated for office were unavoidably absent either through sickness or from business causes; every absentee sent an apology.

Three brethren were appointed by the District Grand Master and three elected by the District Grand Lodge to serve on the Board of General Purposes, viz.:—W. Bros. J. Dixon, J. P. Cornforth, Sorabjee Frammurze, A. Edginton, C. E. Mitchell, A. Mackenzie.

The District Grand Master proposed, and the Deputy District Grand Master seconded, that by-law No. 21 be altered so as to provide for the meetings being held in March and November as at present, but without fixing the date; and it was unanimously agreed that the words “ on the first Wednesday” be expunged from the article.

The District Grand Master was sorry to have to mention the names of several brethren who had been excluded for non-payment of dues. He also much regretted to notice, from the records of the past year, the deaths of the following brethren, who were members of lodges in this district, viz.:—Bros. Jones and Frye of Lodge Industry; Bro. Moylan of Lodge Truth; Bro. Davie and Wright of Lodge Alexandra; and Bros. Prince and Jackson of Lodge Emulation.

The District Grand Master stated that during the last few months he had visited officially all the lodges in the district with the exception of Lodges Union and Industry, in Sind; Alexandra, at Jubbulpoor; Orion in the West, at Poona; Friendship and Harmony, at Egutpoora; and Star of India at Bombay. He purposed attending Lodge Star of India the next Wednesday, and possibly he might finish his round during the year. He had performed the ceremony of installation in three of the lodges during those visits, and he should, in a few days, have the pleasure of performing the same office in Lodge Star of India. It was very gratifying to him to find all the lodges he had visited in excellent condition, and he particularly brought to the attention of the District Lodge that the working of Lodge Corinth, at Nagpore, was equal, in all respects, to that of the majority of town lodges. In Lodge Concord a difference of opinion existed in the minds of some of its members as to the election of their W.M. In consequence of a doubt arising after a scrutiny of the votes for a new Master, the Master (who had already served the lodge one year) nullified the first ballot and conducted the election in accordance with an opinion of the Past District Grand Master, which was on the records of his Lodge, and finally declared himself elected for the second year. Against this ruling an appeal was made, but not feeling himself justified in setting aside the expressed and recorded views of previous authority, he (the District Grand Master) confirmed the ruling of the Master, and he had been duly installed for the second time. Having, however, some doubts about the matter, he had represented the whole case in a letter to the Grand Secretary for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the M.W. the Grand Master. In that letter several important points were noted, and as soon as an answer was received it should be laid before the District Grand Lodge. In addition to the letter alluded to, he had forwarded to Grand Lodge a formal appeal against his (the District Grand Master's) decision, from one of the brethren who questioned the legality of the order on which the case was decided. It was brought to notice that a Pole, named Monse, who had obtained possession of a Master Mason's certificate, belonging to a brother named Bernard Schunk, had left Egypt for India lately. He was a man about 45 years old, of the middle size, dark complexion, rather quick in his manners, and had adopted the Jewish religion, or pretended to be a Jew. Masters of lodges were enjoined to take warning by this information.

The business having terminated at about eight o'clock, the District Grand Lodge was closed in peace.

After the District Grand Lodge was closed a procession of the District Grand Master and Provincial Grand Master of Western India and their Grand Officers was formed, and they retired between two columns, the brethren forming a wall on each side.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DERBYSHIRE.

On Tuesday last week, Bro. H. C. Okeover, D.P.G.M., of Derbyshire, summoned a Provincial Grand Lodge to be held at the Assembly Room, Market Hall, Ashbourn, the arrangements being under the excellent management of the W.M., officers, and brethren of the St. Oswald Lodge. This is the first time that a Provincial Grand Lodge has been held at Ashbourn, and it is most gratifying to state that the number of brethren who obeyed the summons of the D.P.G.M. was equal to those in the habit of attending the Provincial Grand Lodge at Derby. The attendance of brethren from Derby, Buxton, Ripley, &c., was very good.

At two o'clock in the afternoon, after the St. Oswald Craft Lodge had been opened by Bro. J. Britton, W.M., and his officers, a procession was formed of Past and Present Provincial Grand Officers, and the D.P.G.M. was escorted into the lodge room. Bro. Okeover, D.P.G.M., then opened the Provincial Grand Lodge in due form, prayers being offered up by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. A. A. Bagshawe. The minutes of the previous Provincial Grand Lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. John Smith, P.P.G.S.D., read the report of the Masonic Hall Committee, and moved its confirmation, which was seconded by Bro. T. Cox, P.G.T., and, after an interesting discussion, was carried. The site of the Derby Masonic Hall will be on the left-hand side going up Green-lane, at the corner of Gower-street, and opposite to the Scotch Presbyterian Church. The cost of the building will be a little over £2,000, a goodly proportion of the money towards its erection having been already raised, Bro. J. Smith, chairman of the committee, giving 50 guineas. The designs have been furnished by Bro. Sheffield, architect, Derby, and have been approved. It is intended to proceed with the erection of the hall as soon as possible. Bro. Varley, P.M., read the report of the Charity Committee, which was received and adopted. The Provincial Grand Secretary (Bro. Naylor), read a communication from Wirksworth, inviting Bro. Okeover to lay the foundation-stone of a new Town Hall, with Masonic honours, on or about the 14th September. Bro. Okeover replied that it would give him great pleasure to comply with the request, the arrangements being left to the Provincial Grand Officers. The Provincial Grand Chaplain and others made earnest appeals to the brethren to give all the support they could to the Masonic charities, more especially to the Boys' School at Wood Green, and before the Provincial Grand Lodge closed, Bro. Holland, P.P.G.S.W., expressed the great satisfaction the visit of the Provincial Grand Lodge had given the members of the St. Oswald Lodge, Ashbourn. He also thanked the D.P.G.M. for complying with their request to hold it in that town.

After the lodge had been closed in form, the brethren adjourned to the Green Man Hotel, where a most sumptuous banquet awaited them. The members of the St. Oswald Lodge had specially decorated the large dining-room for the occasion. The walls were draped with crimson cloth, artistically relieved with wreaths of evergreens, and hot-house plants were placed upon the tables, whilst to give effect to the whole daylight was excluded, and in addition to the gas, wax lights were suspended round the room. But one opinion was expressed as to the general arrangements, which must have entailed a great amount of labour upon the stewards. Mrs. Wallis provided a repast which called forth the encomiums of all present.

Bro. H. C. Okeover, D.P.G.M., presided, and was supported by the Provincial Grand Chaplain and other officers. Bro. H. Hillam, P.G.S.W., was in the vice-chair. About seventy brethren sat down. The usual Masonic toasts were given.

Bro. Hillam proposed "The Health of the D.G.M.," a brother whom the members of the Craft highly esteemed, and than whom a better Freemason was not to be found in the province of Derbyshire—(hear, hear)—or one to whom the Craft more looked up for guidance and support. Bro. Okeover had instigated the holding of moveable Grand Lodges, and had given them the opportunity of coming to Ashbourn. (Hear, hear.) It was the first time they had met at Ashbourn, but he hoped it would not be the last, for the gathering was a most successful one and the arrangements complete. (Hear, hear.) The holding of Provincial Grand Lodges at different towns in the province would be the means of cementing the union between the brethren more closely. (Hear, hear.) After alluding to what had been done in the lodge in reference to the erection of a Masonic Hall at Derby, which, he remarked, the Derby brethren had been struggling to get for seventeen years past, he concluded by proposing the toast, which was drunk with all the honours.

Bro. Okeover, who was received with considerable applause, said he thanked them most sincerely for the handsome and kind manner in which they had received him—indeed, they had on all occasions shown him the greatest consideration. It always gave him the greatest pleasure to meet them, whether at labour or refreshment. It was with peculiar satisfaction that he complied with the request of Bro. J. Britton, W.M. of the St. Oswald Lodge, to summon a Provincial Grand Lodge here. He (Bro. Okeover) was glad to summon them to Ashbourn. St. Oswald was his mother lodge, and he felt that anything he could do for the furtherance of the noble art of Masonry, he should only be too glad. (Hear, hear.) Ashbourn was a beautifully-situated town, second to none in the county, and at this time of the year could not be excelled for its floral beauties and charming scenery, and therefore it was a treat for them to have the opportunity of coming to a place surrounded by so many objects of interest, amongst which was the fine old parish church. (Hear, hear.) The meeting that day had been a great success, and some most interesting subjects had been discussed, including the proposed erection of a Masonic Hall for Derby. The last time the Provincial Grand Lodge assembled at Derby there was a dreadful war raging on the Continent. It was then nation against nation. It was now more horrible—brother against brother. (Hear, hear.) It must be gratifying to those present to note that the Freemasons of Paris had put their shoulders to the wheel to endeavour to put an end to this state of things, and it was to be hoped that their efforts might be successful. (Hear.) Bro. Okeover concluded by remarking that he had only one wish, one object in view, namely, that the Craft should flourish in the province of Derbyshire.

Bro. J. Britton gave "Brother Colville, P.D.P.G.M. of Derbyshire, and the Wardens and other officers of the P.G.L.," to which Bro. Hillam responded.

Bro. Varley gave "The Past Grand Officers of Derbyshire," which was responded to by Bro. J. Crossley. Bro. Okeover gave "The Visiting Brethren," which was responded to by Bro. Sir J. Alleyne, Bart. Bro. J. Smith, gave "The W.M., Wardens, and Brethren of the St. Oswald Lodge," which was acknowledged by Bro. Britain, W.M. Bro. Whitcombe gave "The other lodges in the province," which was responded to by Bro. J. C. Gribble, W.M. of the Arboretum Lodge, Derby. "The Masonic Charities" was proposed by Bro. Shipton, and replied to by Bro. G. T. Wright. The Tyler's toast, "To all poor and distressed Masons," &c, brought the very agreeable proceedings to a close, the brethren leaving Ashbourn with the most favourable impressions of their first— but is to be hoped not last—visit to that town. The Midland Company attached one of their saloon carriages to the North Staffordshire train for the conveyance of the brethren from Derby.

Amongst the brethren present were: H. C. Okeover, D.P.G.M., as P.G.M.; Henry Hillam, P.S.G.W.; Reginald Darwin, P.J.G.W.; Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, P.G. Chap.; Thomas Cox, P.G. Treas.; William Naylor, P.G. Sec.; Saml. Rowbottom, P.G. Supt. of Wks.; John Verte-zous, P.A.G. Dir. of Cer.; W. H. Burton, P.G. Purs.; L. L. Simpson, P.G. Steward; W. E. Holland, P.P.S.G.W.; Thomas Horsley, P.P.S.G.W.; James Crossley, P.P.S.G.W.; Hy. Carson, P.P.J.G.W.; F. Campion, P.P.G. Purs.; Frank Iliffe, P.P.G. Dir. of Cer.; John Smith, P.P.G.S.D.; Thomas Shipton, P.P.G. Reg.; Frederick Britton, P.P.J.G.W.; James Britton, W.M. 850; J. C. Gribble, W.M. 731; Samuel Taylor, W.M. 654; J. Whitham, 850; John Hewett, 850; W. C. Whitham, 850; G. H. Sheffield, 731; William Footman, 353; J. L. Gibbons, 353; T. Coulthurst, 731; Hazlehurst, W.M. Scarsdale Lodge; Dusautoy, 731; Huggett, 731; Ward, 253; Lister, P.M. 850; Bradley, 850; and others, including several members of No. 1235, who did not sign the Tyler's book. Bro. T. Cox acted as D.P.G.M.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF BERKS AND BUCKS.

On Friday se'nnight the Freemasons of Berks and Bucks, to the number of about seventy, assembled at Aylesbury for the purpose of holding their annual Provincial Grand Lodge, at which the presentation of reports from the different lodges in the province, the appointment of officers for the ensuing year, and other business, usually takes place. The brethren from Berkshire arrived at Aylesbury by special train, kindly granted by the Directors of the Great Western Railway Company, and at one o'clock the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in due form at the Assembly Room, under the presidency of the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., who was supported by Bros. Sir J. Warren Hayes, Bart., Deputy P.G. Master; R. T. Spiers, Deputy Prov. G. Master for Oxfordshire; the Rev. T. Barton, Prov. Grand Chaplain; the Rev. T. O. Grace, &c. There were also present the following brethren, most of whom hold high position in the province or in their respective lodges: W. Biggs, Prov. Grand Secretary; Holden, Prov. Grand Treasurer; W. W. Hodges, W. H. Cave, J. W. Hounslow, H. D'Almaine, W. Hedges, A. H. Simpson, W. C. Bland, G. Chancellor, J. Ellis, R. C. Hurley, R. Bradley, F. G. Hall, G. J. Cosburn, E. J. Tabor, G. Ratcliffe, W. Webb, S. Jacob King, W. J. Beauchamp, J. Williams, B. Fielder, J. Bance, T. Deller, R. R. Hollyer, J. Adam, J. T. C. Winkfield, W. H. Baker, A. L. Taylor, H. C. Lewis, J. W. Dover, E. Wootton, W. Hoblyn, C. A. Lippincott, S. G. Payne, T. Haddon, C. F. Whiskin, E. Wood, W. H. Herbert, G. M. Knight, Fred. Bland, W. Ford, J. Whitehouse, Marriott, Tolley, Briggs, Mortimer, G. H. Palmer, Grissbrook, C. W. Scriven, J. McCubben, H. Poynder, T. Cooke, Bolton, H. J. Gooch, R. R. Alexander, &c.

The P.G. Master, addressing the brethren, said he was pleased to be able to congratulate them upon the steady progress of Freemasonry in this province, forty-five members having been added during the past year. He trusted that the various lodges had been careful in admitting those only who would do honour to the Craft. He proceeded to explain the circumstances under which the Charity Fund had recently been established, expressing a hope that all the lodges in the province would regularly contribute to it, and thus afford systematic aid to the valuable Charities connected with the Order. Sir Daniel called attention to the newly-printed Book of Bye-Laws, with a history of the province, which had been carefully compiled by the Prov. Grand Secretary, Bro. Biggs. He was sure all the brethren were delighted that the first public act of the Prince of Wales, as a Freemason, was performed in their own province, when His Royal Highness laid the principal stone of the Reading Schools, on which occasion so many Grand Officers were also present. In conclusion, Sir Daniel Gooch said he hoped the Masons throughout the province would continue to work together with that harmony which was so essential to the prosperity of the Craft.

It was then moved, seconded, and carried unanimously, that Bro. Holden be re-elected Treasurer.

The Prov. Grand Secretary read the reports from the different lodges which were in all respects satisfactory.

The Prov. Grand Treasurer presented a statement of receipts and disbursements, showing a balance in hand of about £113.

On the motion of the Prov. Grand Master, seconded by Bro. J. T. Morland, it was unanimously resolved "That the sum of twenty guineas be presented to the Charity Fund."

Bro. Sir Daniel Gooch then appointed the Prov. Grand Officers for the ensuing year, and duly invested them with their regalia, as follows :-

| " Haddon                     |                     |
| " Liffencot                  | } Tylers.           |
| " Hemmings                   |                     |
| " Nowell                     |                     |

The lodge having been closed in the customary manner, the brethren adjourned to the George Hotel, and partook of a sumptuous banquet, served in a very satisfactory manner. Bros. Marriott, Tolley, Briggs, and Mortimer carried out the musical arrangements, and their performances were loudly applauded. Dessert having been introduced,

The Chairman (Sir Daniel Gooch) proposed "The Queen and the Craft," and next "The Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, M.W.G.M., His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England."

The Chairman then proposed "The Health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of England, Past and Present," for whom Bro. R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B. of the Grand Lodge of England, responded, and gave the brethren a cordial invitation to visit the Masons at Oxford.

The Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Rev. Sir John Warren Hayes), then rose, and said the pleasing and honourable duty devolved upon him of proposing the health of their worthy P.G. Master. (Cheers.) He was not at all surprised to find the brethren receiving this toast with acclamation, and he felt quite convinced that the longer Sir Daniel resided among them and filled the high office he held at present, the greater reason they would have for according to him a hearty reception. Their chairman had very important and responsible duties to perform, not only in connection with Masonry, but also in Parliament, and yet Sir Daniel always felt great pleasure in making it convenient to come amongst his brethren, not only in Provincial Grand Lodge, but also in the different lodges throughout the Province. (Hear, hear.) They had indeed great reason to congratulate themselves upon the progress of Masonry in this Province since it had been presided over by their worthy Bro. Sir Daniel Gooch. (Hear and cheers.) He begged to thank Sir Daniel for the good he had effected as Grand Master of the Province, and hoped he would long be spared to preside over them. (Cheers.)

The Chairman, in responding, said he felt he could do little or nothing himself, and that what good was done must be accomplished by the united action of himself and the brethren throughout the Province. It was necessary that they should all work together, harmoniously, to advance the great object which they all had at heart. When appointed to preside over this province, he heard a murmur of differences existing between the brethren of Buckinghamshire and those of Berkshire. As G.M. he knew no difference, and it was his duty not to know any. (Hear, hear.) He was glad, however, to find that such a feeling as that he had just alluded to had entirely passed away—(hear, hear)—and they had that day assembled in Aylesbury, and the brethren there had given them a kind and hearty reception, for which, in the name of them all, he offered their thanks. (Hear, hear.) He hoped that, individually and collectively, the brethren would aid him in carrying out the great and good works for the advancement of which they professed to be formed—namely, the welfare of mankind. (Cheers.) He was gratified to see Masonry prospering in the province; and, in conclusion, he thanked the brethren for the kind manner in which they had received the toast. (Cheers.)

The Chairman again rose, and, in complimentary terms, proposed the health of "The Deputy Grand Master, Sir J. W. Hayes," who, in replying, assured the brethren that any services that he could render would be gladly given to promote the interests of Freemasonry. (Cheers.)

The Chairman proposed, as the next toast, "The Masonic Charities," and urged all the brethren to contribute through their respective lodges to the Charity Fund, his ambition being that Berks and Bucks should stand second to no other province in the amount of aid afforded to the Masonic charities. (Cheers.) Let them drink success to the noble Institutions connected with the Order, and also determine that, so far as they were concerned, these Institutions should be attended with prosperity. (Hear, hear.)

To "The health of the Visitors," next proposed by the Chairman, Bro. Bolton responded.

The Chairman next proposed "The health of the Prov. Grand Secretary and Prov. Grand Treasurer," and spoke of the labour and zeal of Bro. Biggs, without whose assistance he (Sir Daniel) would have been as a lost sheep. There could be no doubt that a great deal of the success that characterized Masonry in this province was due to the untiring exertions of Bro. Biggs. (Hear and cheers.)

Bro. Holden and Bro. Biggs severally returned thanks.

The Chairman next proposed "The health of the Worshipful Master, Officers, and Brethren of the Buckingham Lodge, and the other Lodges in the Province," for whom Bro. Ambrose Taylor responded.

The Tyler's toast was then given, and the Prov. Grand Master vacated the chair.

The brethren from Berkshire left by the 7.5 train in the evening, and we are expressing the feelings of each one in stating that the visit to Aylesbury afforded them much pleasure, the brethren in that town having spared no pains in making the arrangements necessary for receiving and entertaining the Prov. G. Lodge.

The last occasion on which the Freemasons of this province met at Aylesbury was in 1865.

On the 10th May, George Stodart Blackie was elected Right Eminent Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the South of Tennessee. Bro. Blackie is well known as a most indefatigable labourer in the Masonic field—a most zealous and earnest Mason, worthy of this great honour. He is representative at the Grand Lodge of Tennessee of the Grand Lodge of Ireland and other Masonic bodies in Great Britain.

SECRETS.—Josh Billings, who ought to know, says that "Secrets are kussed poor property ennyhow; if you circulate them, you lose them; and if you keep them, you lose the interest on the investment."

"AND so ye have taken the teetotal pledge, have ye?" said one Irishman to another "Indade I have, and am not ashamed of it aither." "And did not Paul tell Timothy to take a little wine for his stomach?" "So he did; but, then, my name is not Timothy, and there's nothing the matter with my stomach, bedad."

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights, No. 148.—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening last. The W.M., Bro. W. Richardson, was supported by Bros. James Jackson, S.W.; W. S. Hawkins, as J.W.; John Harding, S.D.; Jos. Cassidy, J.D.; W. Crompton, I.G.; John Bowes, P.M., Past P.G. Reg. C. and W.; D. W. Finney, P.M.; W. Smith, P.M.; Dr. Spinks; Dr. Gornall; Rev. Dr. Massingham; Rev. J. N. Porter; J. W. Thorp; Peter Jones; T. Mee Pattison, Org.; Christoph Ekkert; Robert Richardson; W. Mossop, W.M. 1250; John Dimelow; J. Bancroft; Dr. Cooper; James Hannah, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. Rev. Francis Terry, M.A., Prov. G. Chap., Cheshire; Robert Jackson, P.M. 104; C. A. Pearse, No. 941; E. Roberts, P. J. Edelsten, and Richard Brierley, No. 1250. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Dimelow, and proving in his favour, and he being present, was initiated by the W.M.; the working tools were delivered by Bro. W. S. Hawkins, and the charge by Bro. Finney, P.M. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Thorp claimed advancement, and having sustained his claim to the satisfaction of all, he was entrusted and retired. The lodge was opened in the 3rd degree, Bro. Thorp re-admitted and raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. by Bro. Bowes. The lodge having been duly lowered, and some business transacted, it was finally closed with the usual solemnities, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Jabez George Hughes' for refreshment.

DARWEN, LANCASHIRE.—Lodge Harmony and Industry, No. 381.—At the last regular monthly meeting at the lodge-room, New Inn, Darwen, a beautiful M.M. jewel was presented to Bro. George Wood, P.M., by the brethren of this lodge, the inscription being truly indicative of the estimation this worthy brother is held by his co-workers:—"Presented to Bro. George Wood, P.M., by the brethren of Lodge Harmony and Industry, No. 381, Darwen, as a token of esteem. April, 1871." The jewel, which is valued at nearly £10, was presented in a suitable speech by the W.M., Bro. G. E. Stephens, and feelingly acknowledged by Bro. Wood.—Bro. Lawrence Roberts, P.M., proposed, and Bro. William Entwistle seconded, "That one guinea be sent to the Masonic Life Boat," which was unanimously carried. Other business being concluded, the lodge was closed with the usual formula at 9.30.

BOMBAY.—Lodge Emulation, No. 1100, E.C.—The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Mazagon, Bombay, on Thursday, the 20th April, 1871, and was very numerously attended, amongst whom were W. Bros. Alfred King, P.M. 757; P.D.G.S.W.; Alfred Edginton, P.M. 757; P.D.G.J.D.; Alfred Swift, P.M. 1062; W. H. Hussey, P.M. 944; D.G. Sec.; J. Lockley, P.M. 757; Alex. M'Kenzie, W.M. 944; Sorabjee Frammurze, P.M. 1189; D.G.D. of C.; R. H. Forrester, P.M. 371. S.C. The following lodges were represented by brethren present:—Concord (757), Truth (944), Star of India (1062), Eastern Star (1189), Rising Star (342), Perseverance (351), Caledonian (490), Union (767), Barton (475), Harmony, and Friendship and Harmony (1270). The lodge was opened in the first degree at 6.30 p.m., and the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when the W.M.-elect, Bro. George Lewis D'Emden, J.W., was presented by W. Bros. Alfred King, and Alfred Swift for installation. The qualifications were recited and ancient charges read and assented to, when the ceremony was proceeded with. A Board of Installed Masters was formed, consisting of W. Bros. A. King, A. Swift, A. Edginton, W. H. Hussey, J. Lockley, A. M'Kenzie, and Sorabjee Frammurze, and Bro. G. L. D'Emden was placed for the first time in the chair of K.S. On the brethren being re-admitted, and the customary salutes having been given, the following officers were appointed and invested:—Bros. T. Archington Hopewell, S.W.; E. Hewett, J.W.; E. Gleave, Treasurer; J. F. Pennock, Secretary; H. Ainsworth, S.D.; J. Hartley, J.D.; Rustonjee Cowasjee, D. of C.; J. G. Smith, I.G.; J. W. Leager, Tyler. The important duties of installing officer were ably and effectively rendered by Bro. C. Beard, the retiring W.M., by whom also was given the appropriate addresses and concluding charges to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren in a most perfect manner, which called forth continued expressions of approbation and praise. After transacting the ordinary business, the lodge was closed in peace and harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting-hall, where a capital repast was, as usual, provided by the worthy Steward, Bro. J. F. Pennock. Ample justice having been done to the "luxuries of the East," and the cloth having been removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to in a Masonic manner. The W.M., in proposing "The Health of the Immediate Past Master, Bro. C. Beard," referred to the many valuable services he had rendered to the lodge during the two years he had presided over it, alluding in highly flattering terms to Bro. Beard's Masonic attainments and particularising the excellence of his working. The toast was received, as it deserved to be, with long and continued acclamation, which was repeated on Bro. Beard rising to respond, which he did in appropriate terms. The intervals were much enlivened by some good selections on the pianoforte by Bros. Williams and Collins, and some first class songs were sung by some of the brethren present. The last toast of O.B. brought the meeting to a close, and the brethren separated, well pleased with their re-union. This some English readers will scarcely credit, when they learn that the thermometer stood at about 95°, and the temperature was only made bearable by the continual swing of the punkahs.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

BUSINESS to be TRANSACTED in GRAND LODGE.

ON Wednesday, the 7th inst., Grand Lodge will hold its usual Quarterly Communication, and the first business which calls for special notice will be the election of members of the Board of General Purposes, when the brethren will have an opportunity of selecting from a large number of candidates, all of whom, we doubt not, are worthy, although there may be degrees in their Masonic worth. The election of members of the Colonial Board will then be held, and as the duties of this Board are not considered so important as those of the Board of General Purposes, there are fewer aspirants for the honour of election. There will, however, be a contest, as more than the required number of members have been nominated.

The choice of members of the Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution will be the next business, followed by the report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which recommendations to Grand Lodge for grants amounting to £300 were made.

The report of the Board of General Purposes will then be taken, and we regret to see that the Board have recently had to adjudicate upon grave offences against the civil code, as well as against Masonic law.

In one instance it is alleged that the Secretary of a lodge has not accounted for certain moneys received by him in his official capacity, and, further, that he has not appeared before the Board to answer the complaint preferred against him, thus adding contumacy to the other offences laid to his charge. It must at all times be a most unpleasant duty to take cognizance of the derelictions of the brethren, but in the present case it is not merely an error of judgment that the Board has to deal with, but a most reprehensible breach of trust, committed by a Mason when in temporary possession of the funds of his lodge. The Board have therefore justly marked their sense of the transaction by suspending the offender from his Masonic functions "until such time as he shall make submission, and grace be granted him." The second and third cases which the Board have had under consideration, although affording matter for serious comment, are happily free from the taint of moral turpitude. They reveal, however, the fact that a very discreditable state of negligence exists on the part of brethren whose bounden duty it is to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the laws which govern the English Craft. In the first place, it appears that a candidate who had been duly approved at a meeting of the lodge, and who presented himself at the next meeting for initiation, was passed over in favour of five other candidates who were only elected at the latter meeting. But a still grosser irregularity took place on the same occasion, when the Master allowed three distinct ballots to be taken for one and the same person, "he," to quote the words of the report, "having been black-balled on the two first ballots." This, as a matter of course, strikes at the very principle of the ballot, and renders the whole proceeding simply a mockery. The Board have therefore suspended the lodge, and censured the Immediate Past Master under whose presidency the irregularities were committed.

Upon the report of the Colonial Board an important question of jurisdiction arises. Our readers are aware that a majority of the lodges held in the province of Quebec have formed a Grand Lodge, and we hold, and have ever held, that in taking this step they were perfectly justified. Among the lodges supposed to have joined in the movement was the St. George's Lodge at Montreal, No. 440 on the register of the Grand Lodge of England. It appears that the Master and other brethren were willing to secede, but no less than twenty-nine members of the lodge protested against the secession, and claimed the warrant in accordance with the laws of their mother Grand Lodge. But the Master has not surrendered the warrant, neither has he taken notice of the orders of the Colonial Board respecting it. He is therefore very properly suspended from his Masonic functions as an unworthy member of the Craft, the resolutions arrived at by the Board being as follow:

1st. That Bro. William Edgar Coquillette, who has seceded from the St. George's Lodge, No. 440, Montreal, not having, as directed by this Board, delivered up the warrant to the members of the lodge who adhered to their allegiance, according to Article 29, page 71, of the Book of Constitutions, edition 1867, has violated his obligation as Master of that lodge.

2nd. That Bro. William Edgar Coquillette, late of St. George's Lodge, No. 440, Montreal, be suspended from his Masonic functions, and that notice of such suspension be transmitted to the District Grand Master of Montreal, the various lodges under the English Constitution in the Dominion of Canada, and to the Grand Lodges of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick.

Verily, Brother Coquillette will be no acquisition to the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and for the sake of the many honourable men comprised in that body, we hope he will not be in any way supported in his unmasonic conduct by the Masons of Quebec.

Among the proposed motions to come before Grand Lodge we find the following extraordinary query by Brother Sir Patrick Colquhoun, No. 447:—

"Whether Grand Lodge countenance the Rite of Misraim of 90°, the Rite of Memphis, and the Order of Rome and Constantine? and if not, whether it be consistent with the position of a sub-altern in the Grand Secretary's office that he take a lead in these unrecognised degrees?"

It is to be regretted that the worthy brother has not studied the Constitutions of the English Fraternity to more advantage, or he would have known that, "by the solemn Act of Union between the two Grand Lodges of Freemasons of England in December, 1813, it was 'declared and pronounced that pure Antient Masonry consists of three degrees and no more, viz., those of the Entered Apprentice, the Fellow Craft, and the Master Mason, including the Supreme Order of the Holy Royal Arch.'" But there is evidently a latent motive in the inquiry, and we fear it is one not very creditable to the doughty Crusader. An insane desire to damage the popular chivalric Order known as the "Red Cross of Constantine" seems to be the real object of the interrogatories; but, inasmuch as Grand Lodge has nothing whatever to do with the unrecognised degrees, whether they be the Rose Croix, the Red Cross, or the Templar, we are of opinion that Sir Patrick has shot somewhat wide of the mark, and that his query will be relegated to the limbo of "rejected addresses."

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart will propose "That in future the meetings of Grand Lodge shall take place at five o'clock in the afternoon, and that the law No. 10, relating to the Laws of Grand Lodge, be altered from 'ten' by inserting the word 'eight' instead of 'ten' in the second line;" but we do not believe that this motion is likely to be carried—as, however desirable it may be not to protract the business of the Grand Lodge to a late hour, five o'clock would be a very inconvenient time to many who are accustomed to dine after the labours of the day are concluded. In this case, however, every brother will naturally study his own convenience, as no great principle is involved, and we merely express what we consider will be the feelings of the majority.

The last notice of motion on the agenda paper is by Bro. Head: "That the sum of £50 be given from the Fund of General Purposes. That the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Asylum of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, to supply the inmates at Croydon with coals during the winter season." It is one which commends itself at once to our sympathy and support, and the amount requested will most assuredly be granted without demur. The late Bro. Udall for many years had the privilege of proposing this vote, and his mantle has now fallen upon a worthy Elisha in the person of Bro. Head, who, we hope, may long be spared to plead for the "old people."

We have now finished our summary of the business to be transacted in Grand Lodge, and although it may seem a somewhat uninteresting recital, we believe that the Craft at large, who have no other medium of information, are not unwilling to learn through these columns all that is likely to transpire at each succeeding Quarterly Communication.

WE learn that the correspondence which has been published in this journal on the "Qualification for the Mark Chair" is likely to have a practical result, as we are informed that the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, G.J.O., has given a notice of motion for consideration of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, to be held on Tuesday next, with a view to amend that portion of the regulations which necessitates the installation of a Mark Master as W.M. in a Craft lodge before he can be installed as W.M. of a Mark lodge. The matter is one of great interest to the members of the Mark degree, and we hope it will be discussed without prejudice, and settled to the general satisfaction of the Mark Craft.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.—A conclave is about to be formed at Liverpool, and to be named the "Liverpool." Capt. G. W. Turner, P.M., P.Z., will be the first M.P.S., and Dr. Kellett Smith, P.M., P.Z., the first Viceroi.—A conclave, No. 56, has been established at Allegheny, Pennsylvania, and all the founders (sixteen in number) comprise part of the Knights Templar tourists, now on their way to Europe. Several other conclaves have also been recently started by Dr. Alfred Creigh, the zealous Chief Intendant-General for the Northern States of America.

DISINFECTANT FOR SCARLET FEVER.—A homely, but apparently most useful, method has been communicated to us for disinfecting houses and rooms in which cases of scarlet fever have occurred. Dissolve saltpetre up to the point of saturation, and in the solution soak several sheets of coarse blotting paper, which must be allowed to take up as much as they can, and afterwards dried. Carefully close every door, window, and chimney of the affected room, and let the prepared blotting paper be lighted and smoulder itself out. This is of course not intended to supercede the use of Condy's fluid, the value of which in every household where there is sickness is sufficiently well known; but we have heard of such success in checking the spread of infection by means of the saturated paper, and it is moreover so easy of trial, that we gladly publish the information sent to us.—Food Journal.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

BRO. NORTON AND "OUR ANCIENT BRETHREN."

It seems to me that for any special enquiry, the discussion lately conducted in a most friendly manner between Bro. Jacob Norton, of Boston, U.S., and myself has been much too discursive; and taking the last interesting communication of Bro. Norton's as a sample, I should require a number of THE FREEMASON to do justice to the evidence which he submits in support of his theories (and often in proof of my own), and therefore it is not my intention to continue the discussion in such a general manner. Let one statement say, be objected to in my article on "Freemasonry and Christianity," and when that is disposed of, then take another, and so on until all are exhausted; otherwise we might go on ad infinitum objecting and answering until the original points in dispute have altogether been forgotten and neglected. The main thing is to keep to the question at issue closely, and allow of no irrelevant matter being introduced.

Bro. "Lupus" (an illustrious Mason and scholar) and myself may (and can) cheerfully admit a great deal of what Bro. Norton presents to the readers of THE FREEMASON, and yet we still hold to our views of the Craft as expressed in these columns and elsewhere.

I believe strongly that the "true history of Freemasonry in this country is the history of an operative body." Notwithstanding, however, that such is the case, that does not invalidate the fact that gentlemen were members of lodges before the 18th century, and that lodges were held which were mainly speculative before the revival of 1717.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

BRO. BUCHAN AND THE "HIGH DEGREES."

I hope Bro. Buchan's well-meant note will be the means of aiding me in my attempt to have proof for the statements made so generally about the antiquity of modern degrees. Hammer away, Bro. Buchan, there is plenty yet to be accomplished; and, indeed, we need not rest from our labours until peace, harmony, and consistency are restored to the Masonic society. 333°.

MASONIC ORGANISATION VERSUS POLITICS.

After reading the remarks upon this subject at page 329, it appears to me that "A Royal Arch Mason" forgets that our system of Freemasonry has nothing to do with politics, and that to carry out his ideas would be to go dead against our constitution and doctrines. It is our duty as citizens to support the "preservation of the public peace." Everything in its own place. W. P. B.

CIVILISATION AND RELIGION.

The following from one of the able lectures now being delivered by Dr. Lerffi at the South Kensington Museum is worth studying, viz:—"The great importance of the studies of comparative philology and comparative religion, which seemed to give a clear idea of that gradual and progressive development which had embraced art, language, religion, and civilisation in general." From this we perceive that the Jew was possessed of special qualities for the development of religion, just as was the Greek for the development of art, both being equally "inspired" by God for the purpose to be served, This "inspiration" is not a thing of the past, for God is just as much "inspiring" or making use of men now as in ages long gone by.

W. P. BUCHAN.

THE 1717 THEORY.

I am obliged by Bro. Buchan's kindly expressions in taking leave of our short controversy, and, like him, I would also desire to part from it with assurances of fraternal goodwill. In saying thus much, I am sure he will excuse my correcting a slight error in his last communication, where he explains the result of his challenge to me by stating that I did not produce a statute relating to Masons alone, but one that referred to "other labourers." This is a mistake; the statute implies that the Masons had infringed the "Statute of Labourers," but in itself it refers to Masons only, and contains no reference whatever to "other labourers."

LUPUS.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

I have observed from time to time signs of the old and fallacious statements respecting this newly-invented Masonic degree cropping up in the pages of THE FREEMASON. Not long since I saw references to the documents in the box at Freemasons' Hall; I now observe a quotation from the Keystone setting forth that this degree "claims to have its origin on October 28, A.D. 312, at the memorable battle fought at Saxa Rubra, the conferring of which can be traced, by authentic written proof in England, from 1788." I think our American brethren should be told that they are deluding themselves by one of the most absurd and preposterous assumptions that ever cast ridicule upon our ancient and respectable Craft. Not only has it been honestly confessed in print that the degree has nothing but a Masonic origin; but the only document yet produced from the box contained evidences that it related to the old Masonic Red Cross Order, and had nothing to do with that of Constantine. And as to the appendant degree of the Holy Sepulchre, not a word has been ventured in support of its claim, beyond the very brief statement that a few years since it "flourished."

LUPUS.

BRO. YARKER AND THE "HIGH DEGREES."

I do not believe in all Bro. Yarker says. Who does? He is wrong sometimes beyond question. Who is not? Even I am now and then. Let us then be charitable. "One who believes in his O.B." attacks Bro. Yarker most offensively in terming him a "rag or yarn merchant." He is not the former; but supposing he were, it would be better thus and carrying on a lucrative business than be in the Bankruptcy Court, like some of our noblemen! Bro. Yarker is a Manchester merchant, and need not be ashamed of his calling. It shows the writer of the article alluded to must be short of arguments to be so petty. He also attacks Bro. Hughan, who is able to defend himself if he thinks it worth while to notice insignificant personal letters about matters quite foreign to the enquiry. It has occurred to me that Bro. Hughan might have thought the 18° an honour in 1865, under Dr. Leeson, but not now, in 1871. Not knowing, I cannot say. Does "One who believes in his O.B." accept the statement of Dr. Mackey about Frederick King of Prussia? If so, he believes what has been truly called the "great lie of the Order." Bro. Yarker has not done yet with the 33°.

THE ROYAL ORDER AND ITS ANTIQUITY.

At page 332 I perceive it stated by "A Mason who believes in his O.B." that "As a member of the Royal Order of Scotland, I am quite well aware of the antiquity and dignity of that Order," &c. As to this "dignity," we may put it on a par with the others, and as to its "antiquity," we may allow it to be so old as about the middle of last century. Should, however, any one assert its being older than that, I should like to see some real proof of such being the case. At present I know of none, and look upon the reputed connection with Robert the Bruce as pure imagination. X. Y. Z.

WILLIAM SCHAW AND THE MASONS.

At page 325 we read: "There can be no doubt that the former words—Sacris ceremoniis propositus—relate to his holding the distinguished office of General Warden of the Ceremonies of the Masonic Craft, an office analogous to that of Substitute Grand Master as now existing." Now, that is a mistake, for where were these "ceremonies of the Masonic Craft"? The false notion implied in the above is based upon the idea that our degrees and ceremonies were in existence and practised by the Masons in Schaw's time; but such was not the case, as they did not exist then. W. P. B.

The following extract will no doubt be interesting and instructive to your readers who are Royal Arch Masons, more particularly those who take an interest in the lectures and explanations of that supreme degree, in which, as in the Craft, the number seven holds a prominent place.

A. A. P.

THE NUMBER SEVEN.

The number is composed of the first two perfect numbers, equal and unequal, three and four; for the number two, consisting of repeated unity, which is no number, is not perfect; it comprehends the primary numerical triangle or time, and square or quartile conjunction, considered by the favourers of planetary influence as of the most benign aspect. In six days creation was completed, and the seventh was consecrated to rest. On the seventh day of the seventh month a holy observance was ordained to the children of Israel, who feasted seven days and remained seven days in their tents. The seventh year was directed to be a Sabbath of rest for all things; and at the end of seven times seven years commenced the grand jubilee. Every seventh year the land lay fallow; every seventh year there was a general release from all debts, and all bondmen were set free. From this law may have originated the custom of our binding young men to seven years' apprenticeship, and punishing incorrigible offenders by transportation for seven, twice seven, and three times seven, years. Every seven years the law was to be read to the people. Jacob served seven years for the possession of Rachael, and also other seven. Noah had seven days' warning of the flood, and was commanded to take the fowls of the air in by seven and the clean beasts by seven. The ark touched the ground on the seventh month, and in seven days the dove was sent out, and again in seven days after. The seven years of plenty and seven years of famine were foretold in Pharaoh's dream by seven fat and seven lean beasts, and the seven full and seven blasted ears of corn. Nebuchadnezzar was seven years a beast, and the fiery furnace was seven times hotter to receive Shadrach, &c. A man defiled was, by the Mosaic law, unclean seven days; the young of both animals was to remain with the dam seven days, and at the end of the seventh was to be taken away. By the old law, man was commanded to forgive his offending brother seven times; but the meekness of the revealed law extended his humility to seventy times seven. In the destruction of Jericho, seven priests bore seven trumpets seven days; on the seventh they surrounded the wall seven times; after the seventh, the walls fell. Balaam prepared seven years for a sacrifice; and seven of Saul's sons were hanged to stay a famine. Laban pursued Jacob seven days' journey; Job's friends sat seven days and seven nights, and offered seven bullocks and seven rams as an atonement for their wickedness. In the seventh year of his reign, King Ahasuerus feasted seven days, and on the seventh, deputed his seven chamberlains, to find a queen, who was allowed seven maidens to attend her. Miriam was cleansed of her leprosy by being shut up seven days. Solomon was seven years in building the Temple, at the dedication of which he feasted seven days. In the Temple were seven lamps: seven days were appointed for an atonement upon the altar, and the priest's son was ordained to wear his father's garments seven days. The children of Israel eat unleavened bread seven days. Abraham gave seven ewe-lambs to Abimelech as a memorial for a well. Joseph mourned seven days for Jacob. Naaman was cleansed of his leprosy by bathing seven times in Jordan. The Rabbins say that God employed the power of this number to perfect the greatness of Samuel, his name answering the value of the letters in the Hebrew word, which signifies seven; whence Hannah, his mother, in her thanksgiving, says, the barren hath brought forth seven. In Scripture are enumerated seven resurrections: the widow's son, by Elias;

the Shunamite's son, by Elisha; the soldier who touched the bonds of the prophet; the daughter of the ruler of the synagogue; the widow's son of Nain; Lazarus, and our Lord. The Apostles chose seven deacons. Enoch, who was translated, was the seventh from Adam: and Jesus Christ was the seventy-seventh in a direct line. Our Lord spoke seven times on the cross—on which he was seven hours; He appeared seven times, and after seven times seven days sent the Holy Ghost. In the Lord's Prayer are seven petitions, contained in seven times seven words, omitting those of mere grammatical connection. Within this number are concealed all the mysteries of apocalypse revealed to the seven churches of Asia. There appeared seven golden candlesticks and seven stars in the hand of Him that was in the midst; seven lambs before the seven spirits of God; the book with seven seals; the lamb with seven horns and seven eyes; seven angels with seven trumpets; seven kings; seven thunders; seven thousand men slain. The dragon with seven heads and seven crowns; and the beast with seven heads. Seven angels bearing seven plagues and seven vials of wrath. The vision of Daniel was seventy weeks, and the elders of Israel were seventy. There were also seven heavens, seven planets (?), seven stars, seven wise men, seven regular-made Masons, the W.M., the two Wardens, two F.C.'s, and two E.A.'s; seven champions of Christendom, seven notes in music, seven primary colours, seven deadly sins, and seven sacraments in the Catholic Church. The seventh son was considered as endowed with pre-eminent wisdom, and the seventh son of a seventh son is still thought to possess the power of healing diseases spontaneously. Perfection likened to gold seven times purified in the fire; and we yet say you frightened me out of my seven senses. The opposite sides of a dice make seven, whence the players at hazard make seven the main. Hippocrates says the septenary number, by its occult virtues, tends to the accomplishment of all things—to be the dispenser of life and fountain of all its changes; and, like Shakespeare, he divided the life of man into seven ages; for as the moon changes her phases every seven days, this number influences all sub-lunary beings. The teeth spring out in the seventh month, and are shed and renewed in the seventh year, when infancy is changed into childhood. At twice seven years puberty begins; at three times seven the faculties are developed and manhood commences, and we become legally competent to all civil acts. At four times seven man is in full possession of all his strength. At five times seven he is fit for the business of the world. At six times seven he becomes grave or wise—or never. At seven times seven he is in his apogee, and from that time decays. At eight times seven he is in his first climacterick. At nine times seven, or sixty-three, he is in his last or grand climacterick, or year of danger; and ten times seven, or threescore and ten, has, by the royal prophet, been pronounced the natural period of human life.

"OUR ANCIENT BRETHREN" ONCE MORE

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Kindly favour me with permission to ask Bro. J. Norton to oblige by stating what grounds he finds for believing that the lines (quoted in his letter to you dated 1st May), commencing were composed by A. Mundy.

"For seven of England's royal kings,"

The verses in question are a portion of one of the ballads contained in "A Crown-Garland of Gouldeu Roses," and are usually attributed to Richard Johnson; Mr. W. Chappell, who edited the "Crown-Garland" for the Percy Society, supports this view. (See Percy Society Early English Poetry, Ballads, &c., vol. ii., Introduction, page 5.)

Evidence for or against Johnson's to be regarded as author of any portion of the "Crown-Garland" will much interest those of your readers who care for this class of questions.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES H. H. HOWARD.

QUALIFICATION FOR THE MARK CHAIR.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am very much gratified to find that my esteemed Brother W. J. Hughan is disposed to give way, and "will join the present members in their attempts to procure its [the present law's] repeal . . . if it can be shown that the present law injuriously affects any lodge."

I venture, with great diffidence, to submit that the concluding paragraph of my letter which you have been so good as to publish in to-day's FREEMASON, does show that the simple fact of the G.M.M. having the power to either grant or refuse a dispensation at his option, an injurious effect may at any time be brought to bear upon the votes of any Mark Lodge who select a Brother for the Mark W.M. chair not being a W.M. of a Craft lodge.

In the second paragraph of my letter the words "absolute necessity" occur; I intended to have written "absolute certainty."

I hope now we shall have our worthy Brother W. J. Hughan enrolling his honoured name amongst the converts to the opinions held by many Mark Masters, as indicated in the letters of

"FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The above subject, which has been touched upon by our esteemed Bro. Carpenter at page 323, is one which has also crossed my own mind occasionally, especially lately. I do not consider that, whatever the solution may be, there is anything mysterious in it. Possibly, Drs. Desaguliers and Anderson held views in regard to Christ's teaching which were much in advance of their age, being possibly similar to those now held by "Rationalists" or Unitarians. Hence, if they were really Antitrinitarians, and looked upon Christ merely as a great man who gave out noble and humanizing ideas, there was nothing more natural than that while acknowledging God as T.G.A.O.T.U., they should fall back upon the Bible, or Old Testament, as a foundation of their system. Seeing also that by so doing they got their monotheistic or Masonic ideas engrated upon a foundation which was respected both by Jew and Christian alike. Since God has bestowed upon man the gift of reason, He surely expects that man will do so. In fact, it is man's duty so to do. However, had Desaguliers and Anderson, in 1717, spoken out in the same manner as the Rationalists of 1871, they might have fared rather differently; instead, they promulgated their universality ideas, with God as T.G.A.O.T.U., which was only Christ's grand idea of the Fatherhood of God in another form. It is when we come to look upon God as T.G.A.O.T.U., or as "Our Father," that we are able to cast aside the petty, and I trust temporary, animosities which differences in creed, language, or nationalities set up between man and man.

The foregoing is part of my own ideas on the matter, only as yet I have not had time to think it out properly, but perhaps Brother Carpenter may favour us with something further regarding it.

I am, yours fraternally,

W. P. B.

ROYAL ARCH.

Iris Chapter, No. 255.—A meeting of this distinguished chapter was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Richmond, on Tuesday, the 30th ultimo, when the chair of M.E.Z. was occupied by Comp. R. Wentworth Little, P.Z. 177 and 775, by special request, in consequence of the absence of E. Comp. Lord Tenterden, P.Z., from England, and the inability of the M.E.Z., Comp. Victor Buckley, to attend in time for the work. Comp. Lieut.-Colonel A. Macdonald filled the chair of H., Lieut.-Colonel F. Burdett that of J., and Comp. R. H. Thrupp performed the duties of P.S. most efficiently. The chapter having been duly opened, the minutes were read and confirmed, and Bro. Kirke, of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 255, being in attendance, was duly prepared, introduced, and exalted to the degree of a Royal Arch Mason. The chapter was then closed, and the companions sat down to a banquet comprising all the delicacies of the season. Comp. E. R. Hills, P.Z., presiding, until the arrival of Comp. Buckley, M.E.Z., later in the evening. A most agreeable evening was spent, and the customary toast, "May harmony ever be the characteristic of our chapter," was duly honoured. The M.E.Z., Comp. Buckley, in proposing "The healths of the Past Principals," coupled with it the name of Comp. Little, who had performed so well the ceremony of exalting the candidate. The toast was received with loud applause, and Comp. Little briefly returned thanks, and expressed his readiness to assist at all times in the work of Freemasonry when called upon by the brethren or companions. Comp. H. T. Cole, P.Z., proposed "The health of the M.E.Z.," and took occasion to extol the perfect working of Comp. Little, as witnessed that evening. The toast was received enthusiastically, and Comp. Buckley responded in a very genial and felicitous manner. The Presiding Officer then proposed the S.E., Comp. W. Owen, the P.S., Comp. R. A. Thrupp, and other officers, and complimented them highly upon the manner in which they performed their duties. Comps. Owen and Thrupp expressed their sense of the good opinion enunciated by the M.E.Z., and the latter made an earnest appeal to the companions so study the ritual, the ceremonies, and the teachings of Freemasonry, which would tend to instruct and ennoble their minds. The Janitor's toast was then given, after which coffee was served, and the companions separated. Among other companions present were: Comps. Clark (P.Z.), Major-General A. Flemyng Capt. Wyndowe, F. Morgan, J. Burrows, and Rev. W. Paramore.

ANCIENT RUINS.

Ruins of Ancient Magnificent Temples—Egypt, Palestine, and the East—Wars of the Egyptian Monarchs—Solomon's Immense Architectural Labours Style of Workmanship, &c.

BY M. W. ALFRED, A.M., M.D.

CHAPTER I.

Within the last one hundred years we have, through the agency of the French Commission, which accompanied the conquering power of Napoleon Bonaparte into Egypt, been brought into close propinquity with the transactions of thirty-four centuries ago.

Lapidary inscriptions, and the books of those ancient times, have been deciphered and translated into our own language, fraught with most important historical facts, long buried in oblivion.

One of these books, embalmed upon the breast of a mummy, we have ourselves examined. The arms of this body were crossed upon the breast with the right hand lying on the left shoulder, and the left lying on the right shoulder. Between the elbows, and over the sternum, the book was placed, and covered by a yellowish resin, or wax, to the depth of more than an inch, and which extended over all the body. The mode of preserving these bodies was this:—The contents of the abdomen and cranium having been removed, the spices were applied, and the body firmly bandaged from foot to head. The resin was then thickly applied, and again another stratum of straps applied, encasing the body, which was placed in an interior coffin, and this in an exterior coffin, and this in a sarcophagus of prophyry. This style is denotive of high rank.

The book was a roll of papyrus, equal in thickness to four hundred pages of our paper. The characters had all the freshness and legibility of writings of yesterday. At that time we had not seen any translation of the book or roll. The examination of this book and several of the embalmed bodies brought from Egypt, has perhaps awakened a greater interest in this matter, within our own mind, than we can produce in the minds of others by a mere description, though ever so graphically illustrated.

Believing, however, that we shall not fail to entertain our readers, especially the more philosophical of them, we venture briefly to give the result of much time and thought upon the matters above stated as the heading of this article.

It is in Egypt that civilization and the arts first raised man from a state of roving barbarism to the condition of civil and permanent society.

The extreme fertility of the soil in the Valley of the Nile adapted it to the support of a dense population. Its fertility and wealth exposed it to the predatory invasions of the surrounding barbarous tribes, who oftentimes descended upon the Egyptians for purposes of rapine and plunder. This necessitated a strong military organization, and unity in the social compact. They not only defended themselves, but overpowered the invaders, subjecting them to tribute and bondage. Many tribes, like the sons of Jacob, came to Egypt as supplicants for bread.

The annual flooding of the Nile not only enriched but formed thy soil along its valley. The whole valley rests upon a bed of sea sand, and consists of vegetable earth, from the annual affluence of the Nile of three months in each year. No fresher ever raises it, as it flows along in "solitary majesty."

The most minute survey of these deposits convinced the French Commission that in a century they amounted to about four and one-third inches. To form the depth of twenty-four feet would have required about six thousand six hundred years, after the sea had formed the sand-bed beneath. A writer represents this soil as long oscillating between the sea's billowy waves and the evaporating rays of a tropical sun. It is equally evident that many centuries must have elapsed after this formation ere the soil could have been cultivated. The annual inundation of the Nile for three months rationally accounts for their manner of interment.

This great river, three thousand miles in length before reaching the Mediterranean Sea, divides into several channels.

At the point of division is located the city of Cairo, opposite to which are seen the ancient Pyramids, "casting their gigantic shadows" over the native palm trees which luxuriate on the site of ancient Memphis, where colossal statues and triumphal arches lie smouldering in the dust. Here are the remains of magnificent temples, palaces, and obelisks. Here are crypts, cut in solid rock, and solemn catacombs. Here reigned Rameses the Great, son of Seti, King of Egypt, the Pharaoh who oppressed the Hebrew tribes, and embittered their lives with severe service.

We learn from the discoveries in Egypt that this Rameses was, perhaps, the most daring of men, to whom even Pyrrhus was inferior. He claimed to be the offspring, the son of God, in whom he placed all his hopes of victory over his enemies. Diodorus informs us that Seti had a dream, in which God announced to him that this "son should possess the empire of the earth." Rameses overpowered forty-eight Asiatic nations. His slave subjects saluted him as "The Son of the Sun, the Lord of Diadems, the Favourite of Phthah, the good deity, Sovereign of two Worlds, and eternal as the sun itself." The monuments aver that he commanded armies at the age of ten years.

As a specimen of his prowess in battle, we give the translation of a Papyrus, or embalmed book. The reader will discover that some sentences are lost:—

"The Prince of Cheta (Hittites) came with his archers and his horsemen well-armed. Every chariot bore three men. They had gathered together the swiftest warriors of those base Chetas, carefully armed, . . . and had placed themselves in ambush to the north-west of the city of Atesch. They attacked the soldiers of the King when the Sun, god of the two horizons, was at the middle of his course. The latter were on the march, and were not expecting an attack. The archers and the horsemen of his Majesty fell back before the enemy, who was master of Atesch on the left bank of the Aranta. . . . Then his Majesty, strong and sound in constitution, rising like the god Month, put on the panoply of battle, arrayed in his weapons, he was like Baal in his hour. The mighty coursers of his Majesty came forth from the grandstables of the Sun, the lord of justice, Rameses—Mei Amoun (Rameses, son of Jupiter). The King rushed forth in his chariot, plunged into the ranks of the despicable Cheta. He was alone, no other near him. This onset his Majesty made in sight of his whole retinue. He found himself surrounded on all sides by two thousand five hundred swift chariots, manned by the bravest warriors of the pitiful Cheta and his numerous allies. . . . Each of their chariots bore three men, . . . and the King had with him neither his princes, nor his generals, nor the captains of his archers or of his chariots.

"And this is what his Majesty of the sound and strong life said: 'What, then, is the intent of my father Ammon (Jupiter)? Is it a father who would deny his son? Have not I walked according to thy word? Has not thy mouth guided my goings forth, and thy counsels, have they not directed me? Have not I dedicated to thee magnificent festivals in great numbers? and have I not filled thy house with my booty? There is building to thee a dwelling for myriads of ages. The whole world is gathering together to dedicate its offerings unto thee. I have enriched thy domain. I have sacrificed unto thee thirty thousand men, with all the scent-bearing herbs and choicest perfumes. I have built for thee upon the sand temples of blocks of stone; and bringing obelisks from Elphantina, I have reared eternal shafts in thine honour. For thee the great ships toss upon the deep. They bear to thee the tribute of the nations. Who will say that like things have been done at any other time? Ignominy to him who resists thy designs, felicity to him who understands thee, oh Ammon! I invoke thee, oh my father! I am in the midst of a throng of unknown tribes, and I am alone before thee. No one is with me. My archers and my horsemen deserted me when I called aloud to them, and not one of them hearkened unto me when I cried to them for help. But I prefer Ammon to thousands of archers, to millions of horsemen, and to myriads of young men arrayed in phalanx. The wiles of men are as naught; Ammon will prevail over them. Oh, Sun, have I not obeyed the order of thy lips and thy counsels, have they not guided me? Have I not given glory to thee to the ends of the earth?'"

"These words resounded in Hermonthis: 'Phra comes to him who calls upon him. He stretches forth his hand to him. Rejoice and be glad, . . . he flies to thee, he flies to thee. . . . Rameses Mei Amoun! He says to thee: Behold, I am near thee. I am the father, the Sun. My hand is with thee, and I am more for thee than millions of men arrayed together. It is I who am the lord of troops and armies. Loving courage, I have found thy heart firm in valour, and my heart exults thereat. . . . The King pierced his way into the army of these vile Chetas. Six times did he enter into their midst. . . . I pursued like Baal in the hour of his might, and I slew them so that none could escape."

It appears, however, that the Chetas rallied again the next day, and made a desperate effort to save their city and themselves. In this day's battle Rameses had his whole force with him, and after a most dreadful conflict, completely subdued them.

From this lengthy description, as contained in the Papyrus, we give only the closing words of the translation of F. De Lunoze, from the French:

"The forests of spears, the clouds of arrows, the shields and the chariots crossed and recrossed each other, and met in deadly shock of battle with such reeking uproar that the earth trembled to its depths as though Apophis,* the great serpent, had broken away from the chains with which the gods had fastened him to the foundations of the world."

Now, any one acquainted with the sacred writings of the Hebrews, especially those of David, cannot fail to perceive a strong analogy between his invocations, zeal, faith, and triumphant exultation, and those of Rameses, as found in the Sallier Papyrus.

The phraseology in many places is almost identical with that of the great Hebrew conqueror, at least seven hundred years before he penned his beautiful psalms.

At the time Egypt was covered with cities, palaces, and gorgeous temples, Abraham dwelt in his frail tent on the plains of Mamre, the lord of "three hundred and eighteen armed servants," and the possessor of a vast herd of cattle.

His son Isaac and grandson Jacob roved with their flocks along the borders of the Red Sea, but unlike the Egyptians, never cultivated the soil. But the Hebrews, rising from this condition, became, in the reign of Solomon, as mighty a nation as their former oppressors.

* The formidable enemy of the Sun. The Sun represented God, and the serpent Apophis the Evil Genius, or Satan.

DON'T GET DISCOURAGED.

Don't get discouraged. Who ever gained anything by drawing down the corners of his mouth when a cloud came over the sun, or letting his heart drop like a dead weight into his shoes when misfortune came upon him? Why, man, if the world knocks you down and jostles past you in its great race, don't sit whining under people's feet, but get up, rub your elbows, and begin again. There are some people whom even to look at is worse than a dose of camomile tea. What if you do happen to get puzzled on the dollar-and-cent question. Others besides you have stood exactly in the same spot, and struggled bravely out of it; and you are neither halt nor blind that you cannot do likewise. The weather may be dark and rainy; very well, laugh between the drops, and think cheerily of the blue sky and sunshine that will surely come to-morrow. Business may be dull; make the best of what you have, and look forward to something more hopeful. If you catch a fall, don't lament over your bruises, but be thankful that no bones are broken. If you cannot afford to eat roast beef and plum pudding, eat your codfish joyfully, and bless your stars for the indigestion and dyspepsia you thereby escape. But the moment you begin to moan over your troubles, and count up your calamities, you may as well throw yourself over the docks and be done with it. The luckiest fellow that ever lived might have woes enough if he set himself seriously to work looking them up. They are like invisible specks of dust—you don't see them till you put on your spectacles. But then it is not worth while to put on your spectacles to discover what is a great deal better let alone. Don't get discouraged, little wife! Life is not long to spend in inflaming your eyes and reddening your nose because the pudding won't bake, and your husband says the new shirts you worked over so long "set like meal bags." Make another pudding—begin the shirts anew. Don't feel "down in the mouth" because dust will settle and clothes will wear out, and crockery will get broken. Being a woman don't procure you an exception from trouble and care; fight the battle of life as well as your husband, and it will never do to give up without a bold struggle. Take things as they come, good and bad together; and whenever you feel inclined to cry, just change your mind and laugh. Keep the horrors at arm's length, never turn a blessing round to see if it has a dark side to it, and always take it for granted that things are blessings until they prove to be something else. Never allow yourself to get discouraged, and you'll find the world a pretty comfortable sort of a place after all.—Landmark.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweat, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Adv.]

The SANATORIUM at WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

MASONIC CEREMONIAL.

The West of England Sanatorium—an institution destined, without doubt, to win for itself a position in the first rank amongst the great philanthropic establishments of which we are so justly proud—last Tuesday advanced another step in the gratifying course of progress which has marked its history since its humble beginning in a house in a back street in the town of Weston-super-Mare only some two years ago. The ceremonial of Tuesday inaugurated an important era in its history, and established on the enlarged and complete form contemplated at present, the building itself will be one of the most imposing edifices in the favourite watering place, while the work of philanthropy carried on within its walls will be united by special ties with the time-honoured charities of Bristol and many other places in the West of England. The architect is Mr. Hans F. Price, and his design, when completed, will have a very pretty effect. The whole, building, with the land, will cost about £11,000, but only the first three sections—the wings devoted to children and women, and comprising about one-third of the entire structure—will be at present proceeded with. These three sections will accommodate sixty patients, making with the thirty for which there is room in the old building, provision for 90 persons. When completed, however, the new building will give accommodation for 100 persons, and the old structure will then be removed. The portion now about to be built will cost £4000, and it will be composed of local stone lined with brick, and having freestone dressings. It will be in the domestic Gothic style, with pavilion roof in the centre. The contractors are Messrs. J. Harvey and Sons, of Torquay. The laying of the foundation-stone of the new building on a site by the side of the present Sanatorium, facing the Strand, on the road midway between Weston and Uphill gave rise to the imposing ceremonial of Whit-Tuesday. The brethren of the district, always so prompt to assist in noble and generous works of this character, lent a deep interest to the proceedings by undertaking the ceremonial, their Provincial Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, consenting to lay the stone. The volunteers, engineers, and rifles, the clergy, the town commissioners, members of the medical profession, and the residents of the town also assisted, and Weston-super-Mare—always such a popular place of resort during the Whitsuntide holidays—presented yesterday a more than holiday gaiety with its festive dressing of banners and flags, the bright uniforms of the Weston and Nailsea, companies of the 1st Somerset Volunteers, the brilliant badges of the Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons, and the many thousands of visitors who crowded the principal streets and thronged the beach.

The procession, comprising in addition to the volunteers and others a strong body of the Freemasons of different lodges of Somersetshire, was an imposing spectacle. It was formed on the South-parade, where many hundreds of spectators assembled about twelve o'clock. The various lodges of Masons met at the Assembly-rooms, and thence they proceeded to the parade, where the magistrates, Town Commissioners, &c., joined them, and they were headed by the Fife and Drum band of the Bristol Engineer Volunteers; and the procession was arranged in accordance with the following official programme, Captain Naish commanding the Volunteer Engineers, and Captain Whitting the Rifles:—

ORDER OF PROCESSION:

We should add that amongst the visiting lodges from Bristol were the following:—The Colston Lodge (610), Bro. Gullifer, W. M.; Beaufort Lodge (120), Bro. Hatherley, W. M.; Moira Lodge, Bro. G. Gay, W. M.; The Clarence, Bro. Coaffer, W. M.; and the Jerusalem Lodge.

The Uphill-road from the town to the Sanatorium was lined with crowds of sightseers, and the neighbourhood of the site of the old Strand-house itself was thronged with visitors. The grounds on the beach side of the present building were gaily decorated with coloured flags floating over the awning, beneath which were seats reserved for the numerous ladies who graced the ceremonial by their presence.

THE CEREMONY.

On the arrival of the procession at the entrance to the enclosure, the volunteers filed off and formed three sides of a square, the brass-band of the Bristol Volunteer Engineers occupying the centre to the south of the raised dais around the spot where the stone was to be laid. The Executive Committee took up a position to the west of the dais, and the brethren of the different lodges formed an avenue, through which the Provincial Grand Lodge passed to the platform, where the Provincial Grand Master, the Right Worshipful and Right Hon. Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master of England, and President of the Institution, together with Grand Officers who were to take part in the ceremony, assembled. Amongst them were the Ven. Archdeacon Browne and many of the clergy of the diocese, with some visitors from Bristol, amongst whom we noticed the Rev. D. A. Doudney and others. When all had taken up their position, the spectacle within the grounds was brilliant in the extreme. The foundation-stone formed the focus of an imposing display of the rich insignia of office and jewelled emblems for which the Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons are so celebrated. The Provincial Grand Master was of course the centre of the brilliant spectacle, and by his side was a lady, the richness of whose dress fairly challenged comparison with that of the members of the Order. She wore over an elegant silk train a superb shawl of crimson, exquisitely embroidered with gold. The Provincial Stewards and the Pursuivants who waited upon his lordship were gorgeously appareled, and the blue, purple, and scarlet scarves, edged with gold, which distinguished the various grades of officers of the Grand Lodge, gave ample variety to the centre-piece of the picture; while the surroundings, filled in with detached groups of the brethren, and the whole enclosed by a cordon of "citizen soldiers," presented a picturesque scene, upon which the mid-day sun shone with the brilliancy of a July morning. The ceremony commenced about one o'clock by the singing of the Old Hundred Psalm. The Ven. Archdeacon Wells having offered up prayer,

Mr. R. A. Kinglake, as Vice-President of the sanatorium, asked his lordship to lay the stone. In a pertinent speech he heartily thanked his lordship for sacrificing his parliamentary holiday to take part in the ceremonial. The presence of the noble earl to Englishmen was always acceptable, and still more acceptable was it to Somersetshire people, to whom he was closely allied, and he had no doubt that his lordship's name had that day been successful in bringing forth that galaxy of the beauty and grace of Somersetshire. (Laughter and cheers.)

A hymn having been sung and prayer offered by the Rev. J. C. Pigott, Provincial Grand Chaplain, Bro. Prideaux, Provincial Grand Secretary, read the following inscription that appeared on a brass plate covering the hole in the stone in which were deposited the local papers, with some coins of the realm:—"On Whit Tuesday, May 30th, A.L. 5871, A.D. 1871, and in the 34th year of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria; the Divine blessing having been implored by the Ven. Archdeacon of Wells, the foundation-stone of this building, designed for a home for 100 convalescent patients, and known as the West of England Sanatorium, was laid according to ancient Masonic custom by the M. W. and Right Hon. Earl of Carnarvon, D. G. M., P. G. M. of Somerset, assisted by the Grand Officers of the province. Glory be to God on high."

The Earl of Carnarvon, after the stone had been laid in due form during the playing of solemn music, and the oil, corn, and wine had been poured upon it by the Masters of lodges, said they had now laid that stone of the new institution between the site of the chapel and that of the hospital for the reception of patients, and it was fitly laid there as representing the work for which that institution was destined—the service of God and the comfort of suffering mankind. That bright day, that beautiful sun on the land and the sea, that great concourse of people around them, all bore witness to their proceedings that day, and made them hope that that great undertaking was launched happily—(applause)—and he asked all of them to say "Good speed to this undertaking." (Applause.)

Other Masonic forms were complied with, and the Rev. W. Hunt then delivered a telling oration, in which he spoke in eloquent terms of the ceremonial that day being a proof that every true Freemason had the welfare of his fellow-man nearest and dearest to his heart. A collection closed the proceedings at the stone.

THE BANQUET

was held at the Town-hall, where upwards of 300 ladies and gentlemen sat down, under the presidency of the Earl of Carnarvon. Amongst those supporting the chairman were Mrs. Long, Mrs. Rawlins, General Munbee, R. E., P. P. S. G. W.; Rev. W. Hunt, Past Grand Chaplain; Ven. Archdeacon Browne, M. A.; Captain Townsend, R. N.; Capt. Irwin, P. P. G. J. W.; Mr. E. P. Payne, Grand Treas.; Rev. C. R. Davy, P. G. Chaplain; Capt. Whitting, Mr. W. Ash, Mr. R. L. Jones, Rev. W. Hunt (Trinity Church), Major Allen, M. P.; Bro. Bridges, D. P. G. M.; Mr. A. Kinglake, Col. Rawlins, Mr. J. Cox, the Rev. G. S. Symes, Captain Bramble (1st Somerset Engineers), Bro. R. C. Else, P. S. G. W.; and Bro. B. Cox, P. G. S. On the removal of the cloth,

The Noble President, in giving the first toast, "The Queen, the Craft, and the Royal Family," took occasion to contrast the happy condition of England with the present lot of France. Alluding to the recent events in Paris, he characterised the proceedings of the insurgents as the most horrible and detestable conspiracy against law and order and everything that made human society good and noble and generous. (Cheers.) He thought these events had read us the melancholy lesson that, however great our civilisation, unless there were morals and religion all that civilisation failed. (Loud cheers.) In conclusion, he advised them to cling to our old institutions, and foremost among them all, the ancient and hereditary monarchy—the Queen and Crown. (Loud and enthusiastic cheering.)

The President next gave the "Prince and Princess of Wales and all the members of the Royal Family."

Coming to the toast of the "Bishop and Clergy," the President congratulated them on the position which the English clergy held as part of the people of this country—coming from them, mixing with them, and returning to them again—(cheers)—sympathising with them in all their pleasures, sympathising with them also, as it was their bounden duty to do, in all their distresses. (Hear, hear.) He rejoiced to see them on the ground that morning, and around that board. (Applause.)

The Ven. Archdeacon Browne, in responding, alluded to the unavoidable absence of the Bishop; and then, contrasting the position of the clergy of England with those of Paris, he said on the one hand they saw the Venerable Archbishop of Paris carried to execution as a common criminal, surrounded by his own zealous brethren—thus persecuted, not from any personal hatred to him, as the Archbishop was most moderate and temperate in his demeanour, neither was it for any political opposition on his part, for he had never interfered at all, but it was from diabolical hatred of that Great Architect of the Universe of whom he was the minister. (Loud applause.) On the other hand, they had the clergy of their own land having their labours recognised by their parishioners kindly and cordially, and received as they had received them with the kindest welcome. (Applause.)

The Rev. W. Hunt, in reply to loud calls, also responded in an able speech.

The President, in proposing "The Army, Navy, and Reserve forces," complimented them on the personal gallantry of our military, and pointed out that we had learnt a terrible lesson by the recent war that no personal gallantry was of service without military organisation. (Hear, hear.) Adverting to the costliness of panics, his lordship said the true remedy lay in making the amplest preparation, which was at once the most effective and the most economical. (Applause.) He thought with regard to the volunteers that they desired nothing better than to be subjected to a rigid drill and discipline. (Applause.)

General Munbee and Capts. Townsend, Whitting, and Bramble responded.

The Rev. W. R. Clark, Vicar of Taunton, in an eloquent and earnest speech, proposed "The Members of the Houses of Parliament." (Cheers.) Alluding to the increase of pauperism and its effect upon the character of a population, he said in the face of the miseries of the poor of this country he did not wish to speak despairingly, but the condition of the poor, and the care bestowed upon them, would, he thought, determine in a great measure the future history of England.

Major Allen, M.P., who was very warmly received, responded, and in the course of his remarks he touched upon the question of the Army, and trusted that the legislation of the House of Commons would not impair that efficiency which had never failed us in time of need. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. R. A. Kinglake, in eulogistic terms, proposed the toast of the "Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon and Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Somerset." (Cheers.)

The President, in responding, in the course of a speech of considerable length, adverted to the brilliant scene of that day, and expressed a hope that the Sanatorium was destined to do a great work. His lordship dwelt upon the special features of the undertaking, its freedom from death, and speaking of the munificent donations, he congratulated the Committee and Dr. Swete upon the conditions upon which they proceeded, not to advance a step which would involve debt. In conclusion, he proposed "Success to the Sanatorium." (Loud cheers.)

Dr. Swete, who has done so much towards promoting the success of the undertaking, briefly responded.

The Rev. D. A. Doudney, in responding on behalf of Mr. W. T. Hill, one of the absent donors, sincerely thanked them for their kind reference to Mr. Hill's munificent donation of £2000.

Other toasts were proposed, and further contributions were given in the room in aid of the building fund, the collection at the stone having amounted to £31 10s. 6d. His lordship gave a donation of £20. —Bristol Daily Post.

SCOTLAND.

DALRY.

The foundation-stone of the new parish church was laid on Wednesday, 10th ult., with Masonic honours. The day was fine, and a large number of persons assembled to witness the ceremony. Business in the district was suspended. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in the Blair Schoolroom, in the presence of Bro. Col. Mure, of Caldwell, who laid the foundation-stone with the customary formality—the ceremony being conducted by Bros. Capt. Neill, of Swinridgemuir, and R. Wylie, P.G. Sec. Capt. Blair, in name of the heritors, presented the P.G.M. with a handsome silver trowel, on which was engraved Col. Mure's crest, with a suitable inscription.

SMALL-POX, FEYERS, AND SKIN DISEASES.—The predisposition to is prevented by Lamplough's Pyreic Saline. Vitalising and invigorating, its effects are remarkable in their cure and prevention. Take it as directed. Sold by chemists and the maker, H. Lamplough, 113, Holborn-hill. —[Advt.]

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by my physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and is now strong and healthy. —JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, Jan. 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

ALLEGHENY COMMANDERY No. 35, of PENNSYLVANIA.

CRUSADE TO EUROPE.

Fifty berths have been engaged on the steamer "Oceania," of the new White Star Line, and the Pilgrim Knights expect to sail from New York on Saturday, June 3rd. Sir E. M. Jenkins, at the head of a committee, composed of the following Knights, visited New York and selected the steamer:—E. Sir A. M. Rambo, Columbia; M. Riley, Philadelphia; W. A. Short and S. T. G. Morsell, of Washington, D.C.; Judge Sholes of Allegheny; W. H. Thompson, of Wilmington, Delaware; J. J. Sprenger, of Lancaster; and J. B. Haner, of New York, who are all members of the European party.

Allegheny Commandery, No. 35, K.T., 100 strong, will leave Pittsburgh, on May 31st, by special train, will arrive in Philadelphia on Tuesday morning, June 1st, and be received by Mary Commandery, No. 36, and will be escorted from Philadelphia to New York, and will arrive in that city Friday, June 2nd.

The Templar Uniform of the European Excursionists.—The Allegheny Mirror says: So many inquiries have been made of us for information upon the above subject, that we have been to the trouble to obtain the following, which we publish for the information of those concerned:—

Coat—Regulation, clerical cut style, of fine black cloth, cut low enough in neck to show collar. Skirt to reach within two inches of the knee; black buttons, nine in front, four behind, and three on each sleeve, embroidered Maltese cross on each collar, three quarters of an inch in diameter.

Pants—Of fine black cloth to conform to above.

Chapeau—As per regulation, substituting an embroidered cross for one now used.

Sword and Belt—Made expressly for the excursion by D. B. Howell & Co., New York.

Baldric—Of white moire antique, lined with green satin, four inches wide, and to be two and half inches inside lace and velvet, embroidered nine-point star on black velvet.

Gauntlet Cuffs—With embroidered crosses, to be worn with buff-kid gloves.

Shoulder-Straps—All officers will wear the shoulder-straps of their rank, embroidered in heavy bullion, on green velvet, four inches long by one and three quarters wide.

In addition, each Sir Knight, forming the European party, will provide himself with lodge and chapter apron.

The Sir Knights while travelling in Europe will wear no distinctive mark or uniform, and will present to the outside world no other position than that of an American citizen. They will go to New York in full uniform, accompanied by a band, and carrying their banners, &c. After sailing, equipments will be placed among baggage, only to be worn when visiting encampments in Great Britain and Ireland.

When leaving London for the Continent, all equipments will be left at the Charing Cross Hotel.

The guide book, which has been prepared, is in the hands of the printer, and will shortly be issued. It is very complete. There will be but two hundred copies printed; one hundred and fifty of which are already subscribed for, and but fifty will be for general circulation. —The Voice of Masoury, Chicago, Illinois, U.S.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.—Keep good company or none. Never be idle; if your hands can't be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets, if you have any. When you speak to a person look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the very sinews of virtue. Good character is above all things else. Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your acts. If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that none will believe him. Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors. Ever live (misfortunes excepted) within your income. When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing all the day. Make no haste to be rich if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency with a tranquil mind. Never play at any game of chance. Avoid temptation through fear that you may not withstand it. Earn money before you spend it. Never run in debt unless you see a way to get out again. Never borrow if you can possibly avoid it. Do not put off till to-morrow that which should be done to-day. Do not marry until you are sure you can support a wife respectably. Never speak ill of any one. Be just before you are generous. Save while you are young. Trust to Providence, and fear not. —The Evergreen.

BETTER.

Better a little labour
Than over-rest;
Better a pleasant neighbour
Than tedious guest.
Better the funeral shroud,
With hope behind it,
Than light within the cloud
That silver lined it.

Better aspire to-day
Than dream to-morrow;
Climb through the upward way
Be vined with sorrow.
Better press toward the goal
God destined for us,
Though shadows walk the whole
Long way before us.

Better a sea of light,
When morn hath crowned it,
Than all the stars of night,
Its spells around it.
Better a life sublime,
Unshrined in story,
Than one gew-gawed by time,
And bruit with glory.

Better the mind to see,
And soul to fashion
Than senses that but be Art-slaves to passion.
Better one touch of God
At Nature's heart,
Than all that vain men plod
In realms of art.

Better a life that flows
God's holies under,
Than one of flaunting shows
And mortal wonder.
As lowlier be it here,
Where the heart acheth,
So loftier 'twill appear
When the morn breaketh.

IS MASONRY A RELIGION?

Is Masonry a religion? This Dr. Blanchard asserts. Some Masons are frequently heard to say, "Masonry is all the religion I want." We also see, frequently, in resolutions adopted by lodges on the death of a brother Mason, many sentiments that would lead the uninitiated to believe that Masonry is regarded by all as a religion. This, however, is not true. Religion, in its broadest sense, means a system of faith and worship. Its primary object is to teach the duties we owe to God. Duties to men are not religious, unless they are performed with reference to our relations to God. I may, for instance, give money to relieve the wants of a poor neighbour. This, in itself, is a charity, a virtuous or moral act. If, however, my motive in giving money be not only to relieve my neighbour, but primarily and mainly to please God, then it becomes a religious act. Unless love to God be the motive of our actions, they are in no sense religious.

The prominent objects of Masonry are to ameliorate the condition of suffering humanity, to silence discord and confusion among men, to banish hatred, malice, and envy from the human heart, and implant justice, mercy, and benevolence in their stead. Masonry commands us to assist the feeble, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, raise the fallen, protect the widow, and scatter blessings on all the race. It promotes every moral and social virtue; it makes men better brothers, better husbands, better fathers, and better citizens, but it does not claim to make men Christians. —Evergreen.

THE ceremony of installation will be worked in the Camden Lodge of Instruction, No. 704, held at Bro. Vinal's, the Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock Hill, on Monday, the 12th June, at eight o'clock. Bro. T. A. Adams will work the ceremony.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Unwholesome changes.—The changeable weather is causing much sickness and exerting the most powerful influence in deranging the secretions of the body. Alternating chills and heats so derange the capillary circulation, that the liver, stomach, or lungs, must become disordered. Holloway's Ointment well rubbed over these parts twice a day proves the quickest, safest, and best corrective. It penetrates the skin, enters the deeper structures, purifies their blood, rouses torpid organs to more active exertion, cleanses their substance, equalises their circulation, and renders their secretions abundant without annoying, irritating, or in any way depressing, much less exhausting, the vital forces. Holloway's medicaments afford an easy means of curing coughs, colds, influenzas, and asthmatic affections. —[Advt.]

THE BEST PUDDING.
MAYAR'S SEMOLINA.

24 PRIZE MEDALS.

NOTICE.

Read this with care and attention.)

THE MANUFACTORY of MAYAR'S SEMOLINA was established in 1815. It is the oldest and the largest in the World, Twenty-five Million pounds being yearly produced. (25,000,000.)

Our SEMOLINA is the staple food in France, Russia, Spain, Italy, &c., and will soon be that of England. It has obtained 24 PRIZE MEDALS in the Great Exhibitions for its superiority over all others, and is pronounced by the most eminent members of the Medical Profession, both in London and in Paris, to be far more Nutritious than Tapioca, Arrowroot, corn flour (which are only Starch), or any farinaceous food already introduced into this country. See Dr. Hassall's Analytical Report in the columns of this paper.

N.B.—being determined to maintain its reputation, we again CAUTION the Public, that an imitation, to which a false and ridiculous name has been given, is introduced by a well known Firm, taking advantage of its name and publicity to sell a similar article of very inferior quality, to realise extra profits, and who advertise in favour of that article the qualities possessed by our Semolina.

As a proof of our assertion we challenge a comparison, by analysis, between our SEMOLINA and the so-called Pearlina.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is solely the heart of the very best Wheat.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is richer than any other farinaceous food in Azotic matter, indispensable in the muscular formation of the body.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Highly recommended by the Faculty for Children and Invalids

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is extremely nourishing and easily digested.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA makes delicious Puddings, Custards and Pastry

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA unequalled for thickening Soups, Beef Tea, and Gruels.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is the greatest delicacy for Breakfast and Supper

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is very economical. May be used with or without Milk. Recipes on each Package. 6d. lb. in Packet, 8d. in Canister.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, &c.

HOMINY.

MAYAR'S HOMINY, produced from the best Indian Maize, without any adulteration obtained by grinding, is far superior to the Maize Corn Flour already introduced in this country, which is only Starch obtained by a process of washing, which deteriorates entirely the quality, and is sold at a very high price.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, and Corn Dealers. Wholesale at MAYAR'S, 36, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C. A Wholesale Agent wanted in every Town.

FREEMASONRY & ISRAELITISM.

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

III.

We have now to look at the Tribes of Israel as divided into two separate kingdoms; one constituted of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, the other of the ten tribes who had revolted. The kingdom formed by the latter was distinguished by the names of "Israel," "Ephraim," and "The House of Isaac;" the former was known as "Judah," or the Jews: sometimes, indeed, it is called "The House of Israel," but when so, the revolted tribes are called "All Israel," or "The whole house of Israel." As Mr. Bullock observes (Smith's Dict. 899), "the disaffection of Ephraim and the northern tribes having grown in secret, under the prosperous but burthensome reign of Solomon, broke out at the critical moment of that great monarch's death. It was just then that Ephraim, the centre of the movement, found in Jeroboam an instrument prepared to give expression to the rivalry of centuries, with sufficient ability and application to raise him to the highest station, with the stain of treason on his name, and with the bitter recollections of an exile in his mind." Thus was the great and flourishing kingdom which David had enlarged and consolidated split into two, and each of them, unhappily, started—the one immediately, and the other soon afterwards—on a downward course, because a faithless and a sinful one. The wonderful works of the Almighty, which had been for a period of 630 years wrought on their behalf, had made but a shallow impression on their minds and hearts. The splendid temple, with its magnificent and attractive services, into which music, at once exciting the imagination and soothing the feelings, so largely entered—

"The heaven-breath'd hymns stealing up the air,
While surges of harmonious sound
From cymal, trump, and dulcimer,
In solemn undulations rolled
Around the pillar'd courts, at even,
High chaunts, in which the minstrel king foretold
The peaceful glories of a sinless reign," was now lost to those who had abandoned the house of David; and Jeroboam, the monarch, thinking he might compensate for the loss, raised temples at Bethel and at Dan; one in the south, and the other in the north of his new kingdom. These, however, were not consecrated to the worship of the true God, but to the worship of golden calves, representing, no doubt, the Egyptian Apis and Menvis, who were proclaimed to be the gods who had brought Israel up out of the land of Egypt. A melancholy event that, in the career of God's chosen people; and the eighteen kings who reigned over the kingdom of Israel, for the space of about 240 years, followed, for the most part, the example set by Jeroboam. Ahab, under the influence of his wife, Jezebel, multiplied the objects of idolatrous worship, by introducing the gods of the surrounding nations. A multitude of the priests and prophets of Baal were brought in and maintained, and idolatry, in its grossest forms, took the place of the pure worship of the true God, the priests and Levites being driven to take refuge in Judah. The kingdom pursued, with few interruptions, its downward course of impiety and profligacy until it had filled up the cup of its iniquity. The pictures drawn of its religious, political, and social condition are truly appalling. The time of the end had come. The kingdom was first made tributary to Assyria, and the principal inhabitants were transported to the river Kur, which mingles its waters with the Araxes, and empties itself into the Caspian Sea. After the lapse of a few years, during which the sufferings of the remaining people, occasioned by the siege of Samaria, appear to have been horrible in the extreme, Shalmanezar carried away the rest of the tribes into Asshur—that is, Assyria—and to Halah, to the river Habor or Chebar, and to Gozan, north-western provinces of Assyria and Media. Thus "Ephraim," or "The Kingdom of Israel," was utterly extinguished, 253 years after the revolt, and 722 B.C.

The kingdom of Judah does not present so early nor so nearly uninterrupted a course of apostacy and idolatry, nor, therefore, so rapid a growth of vice and profligacy, as did its sister kingdom. In accordance with the Divine promise given to David, the sceptre never passed out of his family. Many of the kings were idolators and rebels, but there were interposed those of better views, who denounced and punished idolatry, re-established theocracy in the hearts of their subjects by renewing the services of the temple, restored the knowledge and worship of God, and reformed, though but partially, the moral and social condition of the people. Under most of the kings, however, all the restraints which the law imposed were broken and set at naught. Altars were erected to the gods of the heathen, the temple was altered to the Syrian model, and afterwards closed; and neither kings nor people regarded either Jehovah, the law, or the prophets. After the reign of the good Hezekiah, who restored the worship of God, re-opened the temple, abolished idolatry, and provided for the instruction and moral improvement of his people, the kingdom hastened to ruin. In the reign of Manasseh, the son and successor of Hezekiah, which extended over more than half a century, there was the greatest spread of idolatry and of all the vices with accompany idolatry—the most cruel persecution of the faithful, and the most outrageous profanation of the sanctuary—ever known. He seduced the people to do more evil than was to be found in the nations whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel. There was a ray of light in the reign of Josiah; the book of the law, which had probably been built into a wall of the temple, to conceal it from the destruction threatened by Manasseh, was found, and the temple and worship were purified but the darkness returned, and again overspread the land, under Jehoahaz, Josiah's son, whose reign was short and disastrous. The country was subdued by Pharaoh-Necho, the great monarch of Egypt, who carried away Jehoahaz, placing his elder brother, Eliakim, whom he named Jehoiakim, on the throne. Jehoiakim, who was probably the worst king that ever reigned in Judah, held the throne but eleven years. Judah was then invaded by Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, who, marching to Jerusalem, seized part of the furniture of the temple as booty, and carried away many of the sons of the Hebrew nobility—amongst whom were Daniel and his three friends—as hostages, and who were employed in the service of his court.

Thus commenced the Babylonian captivity, which, according to the prophecies of Jeremiah (xxv. 1-14; xxix. 10), was to last for seventy years. Jehoiakim was re-established on the throne by the Babylonian prince; but relying, probably, upon assistance from Egypt, he rebelled, after three years, against Babylon, and dying, Jehoiakim, his son, raised himself to the throne, but held it for only three months, when he surrendered to the Chaldeans, who had besieged Jerusalem. The money of the royal treasury and the golden utensils of the temple, procured by Solomon, were carried away to Babylon, and the whole court, with the nobles and men of wealth, and their wives, children, and servants, were led into captivity to the river Chebar, only the lower class of people being left in the land. Zedekiah, a brother of Jehoiakim, who was placed on the throne as the vassal of Babylon, after a reign of nine years, renounced his allegiance to his powerful lord, and entered into an alliance with the king of Egypt. That faithless power, however, deserted him in his extremity. The siege of Jerusalem was renewed, the city was taken, and everything valuable in the temple being seized, the sacred edifice was set fire to, with the rest of the city, the fortifications of which were thrown down. The remaining inhabitants were carried away, and the leaders of the revolt put to death at Riblah, the rest being forced into exile, Gedaliah being appointed governor over those who remained. But the treachery of Ishmael, a prince of the royal house, who, with his dependents, murdered Gedaliah with the Hebrews and Chaldeans attached to him, evoked the vengeance of the conquerors, and the land was entirely bereaved of its inhabitants, and reduced to a state of desolation, as the prophets had foretold. Thus, about 387 years after the revolt of the ten tribes, and 134 years after they had been carried away by the Assyrians, B.C. 588, the kingdom of Judah was visited with a similar punishment to that which had befallen her sister Israel.

It is not possible to read the history of Judah as it is written in the Hebrew annals, and especially as it is to be gathered from the prophetic writings, and not see that the apostacy, profligacy, and enormous wickedness which characterized the great majority of both kings and people exposed them to the righteous punishment of their abandoned God. In this kingdom, as in that of Israel, a succession of bold, honest, and inspired prophets reprov'd, warned, and threatened alike kings and people, and a return to the service of the true God was always rewarded by national restoration and prosperity. But kings, nobles, priests, and people pursued their downward course. As described by Isaiah, "the whole head became sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot to the head there was no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores." Side by side with a wanton contempt of true religion, there was an utter disregard of all moral obligations. The "princes were rebels and a gang of thieves;" "every one loves bribes and follows after rewards; they judge not the fatherless, nor does the cause of the widow come before them," exclaimed the faithful and fervid Isaiah; and the prophets Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Joel, Amos, Hosea, Micah, and Zephaniah, in their varied utterances, confirm the melancholy description. But, as the author of the second book of Chronicles, says—"They mocked the messengers of God, and despised His words, and misused His prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against His people, till there was no remedy [or healing]. Therefore He brought upon them the king of the Chaldees. He gave them all into his hand, and all the vessels of the house of God, and the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king and of his princes. And they burnt the house of God, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire. And they who had escaped from the sword, carried he away to Babylon, where they were servants to him and his sons" (c. xxxvi. 15-20). As Israel had been destroyed for her manifold and incorrigible wickedness, so was the judgment now brought upon Judah. Her captivity, however, was to be unlike that of Israel, for it was to be for the term of 70 years, only (Jer. xxv. 11; xxix. 10); and in the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, the return from the captivity took place, in accordance with the Divine promise—the only instance to be found in history in which a nation, having run its career of progress and decline, and fallen at last through its vices, has ever risen again. After the return, the reformation, or, we would rather say, the restoration, of the Jewish Church—effected through Ezra, the scribe, the temple having been rebuilt through the pious zeal and unwearied labours of Zerubbabel, the prince, Jeshua, the high priest, and Haggai and Zechariah the prophets—marks a new era in the history of the Jews, and affords one of the most striking proofs of the special providence of God that the world has ever heard of. Nehemiah completed the work which Zerubbabel and his compatriots had so far effected. He obtained from Artaxerxes permission to return to Jerusalem for the space of twelve years, and to rebuild the walls of the sacred city, which still lay in ruins. The work was carried on, in spite of the persistent opposition of the Samaritans, and was finally completed. The kingdom of Judah, thus restored, continued, under various vicissitudes and much suffering, to the time of Vespasian (A.D. 70), when it was swept with the besom of destruction, and its people were scattered throughout all lands, in which they now wander as strangers, finding no rest for the sole of their foot, and preserving themselves as a people separate from all others. They have not been utterly destroyed, though a full end has been made of their enemies. The Egyptians, the Assyrians, the Babylonians, and the Romans, though some of the mightiest monarchies that ever existed, have no representative on earth; while the Jews, oppressed and vanquished, banished and enslaved, and spoiled evermore, have survived them all, and to this hour overspread the world. Of all the nations around Judea, the Persians alone, who restored them from the Babylonish captivity, yet remain a kingdom.

PROCEEDINGS OF GRAND LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS, U.S.

We have lately been favoured with a copy of the above work, which comprises some 500 pages of closely-printed matter, and forms one of the most valuable records of "Proceedings of Grand Lodges" ever issued from the press. The "Constitutions" are appended, by which it appears that the Grand Lodge was incorporated in A.D. 1859, by the Commonwealth Representatives of Massachusetts; the said Corporation having the power to "take by purchase, gift grant, or otherwise, and hold real estate not exceeding the value of five hundred thousand dollars, and personal estate not exceeding the value of fifty thousand dollars." The laws for the government of the 200 lodges and 20,000 members under this jurisdiction are well framed, and minutely provide for all possible contingencies, and in many respects read just like our own. The statistics are most elaborate, and are so exhaustive and complete that it is possible for a stranger to be almost as conversant with the state of the Grand Lodge generally as the members themselves. The "List of Lodges, with date of precedence and date of Charter," is exceedingly valuable and useful for brethren who study the early history of the Craft in the United States. The first lodge, of course, is "Saint John's," Boston, of A.D. 1733; and the second, "Saint Andrew's," Boston, chartered by the Grand Lodge of Scotland November 30, 1756. Thirty-three were warranted during the eighteenth century, and the remainder have mostly been granted during the last twenty years. To each lodge of any note "remarks" are attached, which serve, when connected, to present an outline of the history of that flourishing Grand Lodge. The "Lodges of Instruction" are all granted by special warrants from the Grand Master, "and subject to be revoked" in like manner. The Worshipful Master generally holds office for three months, the Treasurer and Secretary one year, and the remaining officers one month.

The reports of the District Deputy G. Masters and G. Lecturers (of which there are 16 and three respectively) evince considerable acquaintance with the general work of the lodges under their jurisdiction, and evidently such appointments are calculated to take the place of our Provincial Grand Masters, excepting the Grand Lecturers, who occupy special positions, and which we regret are not found under the Grand Lodge of England. We are persuaded that were Grand Lecturers appointed in this country, the want of uniformity so manifest would soon cease to be deplored. It cannot be said that any "system" is adopted by our Grand Lodge, and therefore that point would first have to be decided, which, to say the least, would be a "knotty question" for the representatives to solve, as there are practically two systems of work in London, and in the country their number may be reckoned as legion!

In the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts the "work" is decided on, and by that standard all must abide; and the Grand Lecturers are especially enjoined to "report to the Grand Master, in writing, whenever and as often as they shall discover any deviation, either in the work or lectures, from the system adopted by the Grand Lodge." The great charm, however, of the work consists in the addresses of the Grand Master, Bro. William Sewall Gardner. These are always most readable and full of interesting details respecting the history of the earliest Grand Lodge in the United States. We cannot present even a sketch of these admirable addresses, as they are mainly parts of a series of extensive investigations which have been patiently conducted for several years.

In THE FREEMASON for Nov. 12, 1870 (page 572), we alluded to the statement made by Bro. J. L. Gould, in his "Guide to the Chapter" (p. 101), that the "three degrees of Masonry were worked in the spring of 1658" at Newport, U.S., and expressed our doubts of such an occurrence. We are pleased to notice that the

M.W. Bro. W. S. Gardner has examined this assertion, which was supported by an extract from the Rev. E. Peterson's "History of Rhode Island and Newport in the Past." In the edition of 1853, Bro. Gardner says the extract appears in totidem verbis, and immediately following it, in italics, "Taken from documents now in the possession of N. H. Gould, Esq." The Grand Master of Mass. then communicated with Bro. N. H. Gould, and received a letter from him in December last. If time permitted we would transcribe the whole of this rather long epistle for this sketch. We must, however, refrain from doing more than to quote the opinion expressed by Grand Master Gardner:—"It is almost impossible to treat this story with the attention which the subject demands. It bears upon its face the utter refutation of the assertion made by the Rev. Edward Peterson, and of the claim made by Bro. J. L. Gould, of Connecticut. It is unnecessary to argue that, admitting everything in the letter to be true, it affords no proof, not even the probability of the existence of Masonry in Rhode Island previous to its introduction there, by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Massachusetts about 1749." Fragmentary pieces of paper, containing partly illegible writing in the handwriting of no person known, nullius in filius, are not sufficient to controvert well-established historical facts. The M.W. Bro. T. A. Doyle, G.M. of Rhode Island, remarks, December, 1870: "I have made many enquiries about these documents of brethren in Newport, members of the Grand Lodge, and others, and do not find that any one has ever seen them; neither do the brethren believe that any proof exists of the truth of Peterson's statement." Bro. N. H. Gould declares the document in question to be as follows:—"Ths ye (day and month obliterated) 1656-8 (not certain which, as the place was stained and broken; the three first figures were plain), Wee mett att y House off Mordecai Campunnall after Synagog wee gave Abm. Moses the degrees of Maconrie." We beg to draw attention to the fact that "three degrees" are not mentioned, but only "degrees," which may after all be susceptible of explanation, even if the record is admitted to be genuine, and we hope Bro. Gardner will not cease his useful enquiry until he has carefully examined this "memorandum of A.D. 1656-8," especially as to the date and the last three words.

The subject is certainly of importance, and demands a most rigid scrutiny; and if genuine, let the evidence be made public. No records exist in England, Scotland, or in fact in any country, so far as we know, that mentions "three degrees of Masonry" before the second decade of the last century.

We must not forget to mention that the Grand Master, Bro. Gardner, at the "stated communication of the Grand Lodge" (December, 1870) spoke most favourably of the "Masonic Annual" published by Bro. M. C. Peck, Hull, and Bro. George Kenning, London, which work is published solely on behalf of Masonic charity.* The Deputy Grand Master, the Rev. Charles L. Woodbury, delivered an address at the "Quarterly Communication" (Sept. 14th, 1870). We hope soon to see it grace the columns of THE FREEMASON, for although we cannot entirely agree with the origin and character of our ancient Order ascribed to it by the worthy lecturer, there can be but one opinion as to the ability and research evinced in its preparation. As a Masonic address, it is far beyond the ordinary style of such productions, and the author is evidently an earnest and patient Masonic student.

The sketch we intended of these "proceedings" will soon be far too extended, unless we come to a halt. So, to prevent our trespassing too much on one number of THE FREEMASON, we will content ourselves with simply stating that the foregoing is only a brief account of a few of the interesting subjects contained in the work, and will conclude our hasty review by referring to the report of the committee on the "Montacute question." It seems of late that the correctness of such a title has been called in question by the members of the lodge bearing that name in *Copies may still be had of the publishers.

Massachusetts, and on memorial to the Grand Lodge, a committee was appointed to examine the subject. The committee consisted of Bros. John Heard, Winslow Lewis, and Henry C. Wilson—the two former being Past Grand Masters, and the latter brother the Master of the lodge. These brethren worked with a will, and have accumulated more evidence respecting the title of Lord Viscount Montague (or Montacute) than has ever been submitted on any question ever delegated to a committee by a Grand Lodge. Much information was also privately obtained by Brother Jacob Norton, of Boston, the originator of the enquiry, and who supported the application for alteration in the title from Montacute to Montague; and the libraries of the Fraternity and of public institutions throughout the United States appear to have been ransacked in order to discover light and evidence to guide the committee in making their report. The records and library of the Grand Lodge of England and of other societies in this country were also searched, and in fact nothing was left unexamined that was within the power of the committee to investigate. Some idea of the extent of these researches may be formed from the fact that the report occupies one hundred pages octavo of closely-printed matter. The point at issue was, whether the name of the Grand Master of England 1732-3 was Viscount Montague or Montacute? The latter had been generally understood to be the case in the United States, but of late this opinion has been questioned, and hence the investigation. Plates of the arms of this ancient family are inserted in the work, and several elaborate pedigrees are given of certain noble families connected with the Montagues or Montacutes. The heraldic researches are of a most voluminous character, and several Masonic works from early in the last century to the present time are also presented in evidence. Of course, it is impossible to give an adequate description of the labour of the committee in a few words; suffice it, however, to say that the report does them infinite credit, and is a monument of industry and research. We have always advocated the title of Lord Viscount Montague or Montagu (and not Montacute), and are pleased to find the committee concur in recommending the alteration of the name of the lodge from Montacute to Montague. We have carefully examined the references of the committee to various Masonic works, and find them uniformly correct. The following books, however, not having been noticed by them, we submit the result of our researches as a humble contribution towards so exhaustive and interesting an inquiry:—"The Freemason's Pocket Companion" (Edinburgh, A.D. 1761), page 145, has Lord Visc. Montacute, Grand Master. "Candid Disquisitions," by Wellins Calcott, P.M. (London, 1769), page 92; Scott's "Pocket Companion" (London, 1754), pages 108 and 187; and the "Masonic Miscellanies," by Stephen Jones, 1st edition 1797, 2nd edition A.D. 1811—have all Anthony Brown, Lord Viscount Montacute, as Grand Master. As the edition of the "Constitutions" of A.D. 1756 to 1784 perpetrated this error, we need not wonder at other authors, who mainly copied the historical parts of these works, making a similar blunder. Independent works, however, like "Preston's Illustrations" (from an early date down to the last edition) are in favour of Montague, and what is of some importance in the inquiry, but which seems to have been overlooked by the indefatigable committee, the "Freemasons' Calendars," published under the sanction of the Grand Lodge of England, support the title as the committee report, viz., Anthony Brown, Lord Viscount Montague. We have looked through these calendars in our library (which are now very scarce) from A.D. 1781 to 1810, and find that the Grand Master for A.D. 1732-3 is always recorded according to the patent of September, 1554, which was Montague, as certified by Bro. Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter.

We have to thank the Grand Master of Massachusetts for so kindly forwarding us a copy of these "Proceedings."

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

CONSECRATION of the "MARQUIS of LORNE" LODGE, No. 1354, at LEIGH.

The last day of May, 1871, was a red-letter day in the annals of the quiet yet busy manufacturing town of Leigh, Lancashire. The Craft, indeed, is no stranger at Leigh, but many years have elapsed since it had "a name and a habitation" there. A change, however, has "come o'er the scene;" new blood has been infused, and we opine a bright future for the mystic art in that locality. We are constrained to this conclusion because the town is remarkably well situated, and the W.M., Wardens, and promoters generally of the new lodge are imbued with a thorough Masonic zeal and determination which is sure to command success. Your correspondent was a visitor on the occasion, and having arrived at the scene of action some sixty minutes before the commencement of the ceremonial, had an opportunity of inspecting the rooms (which are private) and the furniture. Nothing in the one case could be more complete, or in the other more chaste and beautiful. The lodge-room, though small, is well proportioned, and lighted from the east and south. The ante-room is at once spacious and replete with every convenience. The furniture (which was supplied by Bro. Geo. Kenning, and is all that could be desired) is of polished oak and of excellent workmanship. Everything concerning the formation of the lodge seems to have been conceived in a proper spirit and certainly carried out with a zeal which does the promoters infinite credit. May all its future proceedings be characterised by a similar spirit!

The interesting ceremony of consecration was to have been performed by the V. Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of the province, the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, but in his unavoidable absence the R.W. Prov. G.M. was represented by Brother A. C. Mott (148, 241, 823, 1013, 1086, 1335, P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. S.G.D., and P. Prov. G.S.W.), who was attended officially by Brother H. S. Alpass, Prov. Grand Secretary. A lodge was opened by the consecrating officer, assisted by Brothers John Bowes (P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.R. Cumberland and Westmorland, and P.G.S.B. West Lancashire), as S.W.; D. W. Finney (P.M., M.E.Z. 148), as J.W.; Dr. S. D. Lees (P.P.S.G.W. East Lancashire), J. Barker (P.P.G. Treas. East Lancashire), Jos. Leach (P.M. P.Z. 300), Dr. J. F. Pennington (P.M. 484), Nat. Dumbille (152), J. C. Gillman (W.M. 1345), W. S. Hawkins (1250), J. Smith (300), J. Kershaw (300), John Fogg (484), John Bury (J.W. 325), D. P. Isherwood (S.W. 325), R. F. Woodruff (W.M. 325), Thos. J. Broadbent (W.M. 430), Fred. Cook (P.M. 300), Jos. Taylor (P.M. 300), Ed. Beswick (1134), G. P. Brockbank (P.M. 221), Jas. Pilkington (37), C. E. Wright (155, Philadelphia, U.S.), Jas. Kirkpatrick (286, New York, U.S.), B. Standen, H. Heap (300), besides the W.M.-designate and officers about to be installed and invested, who were arranged in order.

The lodge having been opened in the three degrees, the Presiding Officer addressed the brethren on the nature of the convocation, and then called on the Prov. Grand Secretary to state the wishes of the brethren and the proceedings they had taken with respect to the lodge. This part of the programme completed, the G. Sec. read the petition and warrant, and the brethren of the new lodge expressed their approval of the officers named therein. The Consecrating Officer then called upon the acting Chaplain to deliver an oration, after which the choir, under the direction of Bro. Beswick, sang the following anthem:—

Behold, how good and joyful a thing it is: brethren to dwell together in unity.

It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down unto the beard: even unto Aaron's beard, and went down to the skirts of his clothing.

Like as the dew of Hermon: which fell upon the hill of Sion.

For there the Lord promised His blessing: and life for evermore.

Then followed the first portion of the Consecration Prayer, and the chant, "Glory be to Thee, O Lord," and the Invocation.

The Lodge was now uncovered, and Bros. Alpass, Lees, and Barker carried the vessels containing corn, wine and oil thrice round the lodge, to solemn music, and halting in the East, the following anthem was sung by the choir:—

Glory be to God on high,
Peace on earth,
Good-will towards men.

The acting Chaplain then carried the censor three times round the lodge, and halting in the East, delivered the second portion of the Consecration Prayer. The choir then sang the following anthem:—

Glory to God on high,
Let heaven and earth reply,
Praise ye His name;
Masons His love adore,
Tyled in their mystic lore,
And cry out evermore
Glory to God!

The Presiding Officer now solemnly constituted the lodge in ancient form, and the ceremonial of consecration was concluded by the singing of the Hallelujah Chorus.

The lodge was resumed in the second degree, when Bro. J. T. Lancashire, W.M.-designate, was presented by Bros. Dr. Lees and Barker to the Presiding Officer for the benefit of installation, to whom the summary of the ancient charges, &c., was read by the Prov. G. Sec. That portion of the ceremony proper to this degree being concluded, the lodge was resumed in the third degree, and all below the rank of Installed Master were requested to retire, when a Board was duly opened at which eighteen brethren were present. This done, the W.M.-designate was solemnly installed into the chair of K.S. and proclaimed and saluted. Bro. J. Longworth was invested as I.P.M. The Board of Installed Masters having been closed, the M.M.'s, F.C.'s, and E.A.'s were successively admitted and saluted the W.M., who was duly proclaimed on each occasion from the east, west, and south.

The W.M. then appointed and invested the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year, viz.:—Bros. James Jackson, S.W.; Joseph Hartley, J.W.; W. Bryce, Treas.; George Dickenson, Hon. Sec.; Robt. Nield, S.D.; W. Duncan, J.D.; Thos. Smith, I.G.; H. Heap, Tyler.

Bro. Mott performed the whole of the ceremonies in a manner which met with the unanimous approval of all present.

There being no further business, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to the Drill-shed for

THE BANQUET.

The room was tastefully decorated, and the dinner, which was served by Mr. and Mrs. Rothwell, of the George and Dragon Hotel, gave universal satisfaction.

Grace before meat was said by the Prov. Grand Secretary, and after dinner Non Nobis was sung by the choir.

Bro. Barker kindly discharged the duties of Toastmaster.

The cloth having been withdrawn the following toasts were drank:—

Bro. Lancashire, W.M., said he regretted exceedingly that their Liverpool friends, Bros. Alpass and Mott, were obliged to leave them, but such was the case, and he was unwilling that they should do so without having an opportunity of speaking a few words to them; he therefore begged to call upon Bros. Alpass and Mott to address the brethren.

Bro. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec., said that his visits to Leigh were of a very pleasant nature. He did not know when he had been more pleased than he had that day. From the W.M. downwards, they seemed to be imbued by a truly Masonic spirit, and that augured well for the future. He was much pleased that they had been enabled to secure private rooms for he believed the time was fast approaching when Masons would cease to meet in houses of public entertainment. He regretted that they were obliged to leave so early; but he always made it a rule to be at home early whenever he attended a Masonic banquet. He commended the practice to all present, and concluded by proposing the health of the W.M. (Cheers.)

Bro. Capt. Mott said he was well pleased with the work of the day. He could endorse all that the Prov. G. Sec. had said, and he counselled all to do their duty individually, and their lodge would flourish. The W.M. had impressed him with the belief that he was the right man in the right place, and that being so, he was sure his selection of officers would be good. Bro. Mott then dilated in eloquent terms at some length on the excellency of Masonry, and concluded by joining Bro. Alpass in wishing the W.M. health and happiness during his period of office. (Cheers.)

Bros. Alpass and Mott then withdrew, amid the hearty cheers of those assembled.

The W.M., on rising to propose "The Queen," said it was always found on a Masonic toast list, and Her Majesty had no more loyal subjects than Masons. (Drank with all honours.)

"God save the Queen."

The W.M. next proposed "H.R.H. Bro. Albert Edward Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." He said no words of his were needed to ensure for the toast a hearty reception. His Royal Highness was allied to them as a brother, and he believed he was "a good man and true." (Drank with great enthusiasm.)

"God Bless the Prince of Wales."

The W.M. next proposed "The Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, M.W.G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W.E.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers."

"Prosper the Art."

The S.W., Bro. Jackson, on rising to propose the next toast, viz., "Sir T. G. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, V.W. Dep. Prov. G.M., and the rest of the P.G. Officers," said the G.M. and his Deputy were, he had no doubt, well known to most of them better even than to himself. He hoped, however, the day was not far distant when they would be all better acquainted. For his own part, he must say he should not rest content till the lodge deserved "the purple," and the G. Master induced to hold a Prov. Grand Lodge at Leigh. He begged to call upon Bro. Bowes, P.M., P.P.G.R., to respond to the toast. (Drank with all honours.)

Bro. Bowes did not know why he was called upon to respond to the toast, unless it was that he was a Past Prov. Officer of a neighbouring province—Cumberland and Westmorland. It was, however, a pleasant duty they had imposed upon him. He believed that Sir Thomas Hesketh, their Grand Master, was most anxious that Masonry should flourish in the province, and that the lodges should be well worked. The D.G.M. was also eminently qualified for the position he held. He was a thorough "working" Mason, as those who had witnessed his conduct in a lodge well knew. He thanked them for the compliment paid to the Prov. G. Master and the Prov. G. Lodge.

Bro. Longworth, P.M., rose to propose "Success to the Masonic Charities," and said that he did so with great pleasure, because he should couple with the toast the name of a brother who had recently been to London as a Charity Steward—Bro. Brockbank. (Drank with all honours.)

Bro. Brockbank, P.M., said he was pleased at the hearty manner in which the toast of "The Masonic Charities" had been received. As they all knew, they had a Boys' School, a Girls' School, as well as Institutions for Aged Freemasons and their Widows. All these institutions were worthy their warmest support. It was rather early to give the members of the Marquis of Lorne Lodge a lecture on charity; but he had no doubt that in due time they would become aware of their responsibilities in this respect. In Bolton, where he resided, they had a large share of the benefits of the Masonic Charities, and he often pleaded on their behalf. Recently he had taken a list of £150 to London. He thanked the brethren for the reception they had given his name in connection with the toast.

Bro. Barker, P. Prov. G. Treas. E.L., said, after the able manner in which the W. Master's health had been proposed by Bros. Alpass and Mott before leaving, little need be said by him by way of supplement. (Enthusiastic cheering.) As a man and a Mason, the W.M. was esteemed and respected by all who knew him. As an old personal friend, it had afforded him (Bro. Barker) extreme pleasure to be present that day, and witness the always-interesting ceremonies of consecration and installation, and to contribute his mite to the success of the proceedings by discharging the duties of Director of Ceremonies. He offered them the toast "The M.W.," in the full assurance that they would unite with him in doing it justice. (Continued cheers.)

A gicc by the choir.

Bro. Lancashire, the M.W., rose to return thanks, and was received with quite an ovation. He said, after the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed by Bros. Alpass and Mott, and supported by his worthy and kind friend, Bro. Barker, who had so efficiently directed the ceremonies of the day, he experienced great difficulty in finding fitting words to express his thanks. He had been charged with ambition; he pleaded guilty to one species of ambition—a desire to discharge his duty efficiently. From a boy, he had been taught that anything that was worth doing at all was worth doing well. From the time he first saw the mystic light, he had acted in belief of that principle; and as long as it pleased T.G.A.O.T.U. to give him health and strength, he intended to continue in the same undeviating path of duty. He had told the Grand Master's representatives that day—and he was in earnest when he did so—that he hoped at no distant period to see Sir Thomas Hesketh in Grand Lodge assembled at Leigh, and to see, at the same time, some of their members invested with the "purple." (Loud cheers.) In continuance, the W.M. said that however well he might discharge his duties, they would be of little avail without efficient Wardens, and those he had in Bros. Jackson and Hartley. In conclusion, he tendered his thanks to the members of No. 1354, individually, for the substantial assistance they had rendered him in discharging their pecuniary obligations. This was not a light matter, but he was happy to say there were no outstanding accounts. (Cheers.) He had undertaken the office of W.M., and he relied upon efficient service from his officers. Bro. Jackson, S.W., would act the part of preceptor, and he had their entire confidence. It only then remained for them regularly to avail themselves of his kind offices. This done, he should be enabled to retire from the chair with feelings of pride and satisfaction, and be enabled to hand the warrant to his successor as unsullied as he had that day received it. Let them then, one and all, be determined that their lodge should rank second to none in the province for efficient working and Masonic zeal. He again thanked the brethren, and sat down amid quite a storm of cheers.

Bro. Wright said that they were favoured that day by a number of brethren from a distance. They were proud to see them, and he trusted they should ever prove themselves worthy of the honour they had that day received at the hands of the visitors. He begged to offer for their acceptance the toast "The Visiting Brethren." (Drank with honours.)

Bro. Finney, P.M. and M.E.Z. 148, said:—W.M., Bros. S. and J. Wardens, and Brethren, when I came into this room I never expected for one moment to be called upon to say anything. Nevertheless, I do most sincerely thank you for associating my name with the toast; and I trust that the lodge—the Marquis of Lorne—whose advent we commemorate this day, will abundantly flourish and be eminently successful. I congratulate you, brethren, on this auspicious occasion. I congratulate you also, brethren, upon having a W.M.—judging from what we have seen of him this day—who is likely to do honour to the chair, and to the Craft in general, and in so doing to heap double honour upon himself. My worst wishes—and I am sure they will be shared by all the distinguished brethren who have taken part in the ceremony of to-day—my worst wishes are that the Marquis of Lorne Lodge may be as prosperous as the W.M. and brethren could themselves wish and desire. I congratulate you, W. Sir, upon the choice of your officers. You have exercised a wise selection—Bro. Jackson I have known for some time, and I know him to be a good and worthy Mason, regular and attentive to his duties and efficient in his work. You, sir, have reason to be proud of this day's work. Again I thank you, W.M. and brethren.

Bro. Woodruff and others also acknowledged the compliment.

Bro. Bowes, P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. G. Reg., on rising, said they had so far given due attention to the loyal toasts, to their Masonic rulers supreme and subordinate, to the Charities, to their worthy W.M., and to the visitors; and to him (the speaker) was reserved the honour of proposing the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the Marquis of Lorne Lodge." (Loud cheers.) He undertook the duty assigned to him with the utmost pleasure, but not without a thorough sense of the responsibility he had voluntarily undertaken. He was not ignorant of the labour and anxiety consequent upon the formation of a new lodge, and he rejoiced to find their labours brought to a successful issue. All honour was due to the W.M. and the other promoters for their long continuance in well-doing, and it must be a proud satisfaction to them to witness that day the success which had crowned their united endeavours. The rooms were both convenient and suitable, and as to their furniture, he believed none more handsome, none more chaste, could be found in the province. (Cheers.) The W.M. would not occupy the position he did unless he merited the highest esteem of the brethren, and he was quite sure the officers invested that day enjoyed the highest confidence of the W.M. Some of them he knew, and he knew them only to respect and esteem them. He witnessed the introduction of their S.W., Bro. Jackson, to light, and he had watched his Masonic career both with interest and satisfaction. He was a brother thoroughly imbued with a deep sense of his Masonic responsibilities and an able "worker." Such was his opinion of one of their officers, and he knew that the other officers were equally entitled to their respect and esteem. Some brethren were in the habit of looking down upon the subordinate offices—the Deacons, for instance—but this was a great mistake. (Loud cheers.) A good Deacon made a good W.M., and a bad one never made a W.M. at all. (Cheers.) The officers being unexceptional, it only remained for the "brethren all" to do their duty, and then, without doubt, the genuine tenets and principles of this noble Order would be transmitted through Lodge No. 1354. Many offers of help had been tendered that day, and he need not say that he should be glad at any time to give the W.M. a helping hand. (Loud cheers.) He then asked the brethren to join him in drinking "Prosperity to the Marquis of Lorne Lodge, No. 1354." (The toast was drank in a most enthusiastic manner.)

Bro. W. Duncan, M.D., J.D., in responding to the toast of "The Marquis of Lorne Lodge," said: I wish I could say with the distinguished brother who proposed the toast that my task is a simple one. I feel it to be a difficult one, as my native modesty conflicts with my wish to do the lodge justice. Indeed, brethren, however much we may discount the flatteries your kindness has so liberally bestowed upon us, it is impossible for us to avoid feelings of exultation or to repress a strong inclination to boast at this culmination of our labours. I can honestly say that we have really worked hard. We first tried to found a lodge at Tyldesley, and those present to-night of that little band that met week after week over a period of some months will remember with what enthusiastic love of Masonry and what keen determination to work its secrets we stuck to our project. From various causes, which I need not particularise, but which are well understood by all here to-night, we had to give way. We failed, however, only in our local habitation. We placed ourselves in the hands of our Leigh brethren, and our presence to-night is a proof of the faithfulness with which their trust was discharged. The first element in this final success was to get a first-rate Master, and much as you have heard to-night of Bro. Lancashire, you have not heard half enough. He tells us that in his early days it was impressed upon his youthful mind that a thing that was worth doing at all was worth doing well, and I can assure you he laboured hard to impress this on our youthful minds in (Masonically speaking) our early days. If ever a society had line upon line and precept upon precept, we had them, and the persistence and determinedness with which we were lectured and circulated into doing the right thing at the right time was worthy of the cause, and speaks well for our choice. Not satisfied, however, with mere having a good W.M., we were determined to have Wardens as good. On the merits of so well honoured and thorough a Mason as Bro. Jackson I need not dilate. They are known to all. His labours in working out the very many details of our undertaking have placed the lodge under a lasting debt of gratitude. Of our Junior W. I will only give myself time to say that he—as well as every other officer, great or small—was chosen with perfect cordiality and unanimity as the best man for the place, and though laid aside by illness during many of our meetings, he cordially acquiesced in all our proceedings, and responded most generously to our calls. In fine, for I fear I am becoming tedious, we have worked together in perfect harmony and brotherhood, and many as have been your kind wishes and kinder anticipations for our future, we intend to deserve them all. We will rest satisfied with nothing less than perfection, so you may be sure we shall always be striving, and if the character of his lodge will help our W.M. in his ambitious longings, it shall not be our fault if he does not wear "the purple." We thank you all for all the good advice you have given us, and we have already determined to gain a character by following the advice of Bro. Alpass, in being home early to our wives, and of Bro. Mott, in behaving as good husbands ought to do. For your presence, brethren, this afternoon—for the thoroughly efficient assistance you have rendered us in our consecration ceremony—for the hearty good wishes and bright anticipations with which, both publicly and privately, you have encouraged us in our undertaking—and, lastly, but not least, for the light of your countenances to-night, allow me to return you, from the Marquis of Lorne Lodge, our deepest and most heartfelt thanks.

Bro. Jackson, S.W., proposed in complimentary terms "The Newly-invested Officers," which was responded to by the brethren in turn.

The Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close, and the brethren separated in perfect harmony.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Euphrates Lodge, No. 212.—This old lodge held its last meeting of the season on Wednesday, 31st May, at the Masons' Hall Tavern, Mason's-avenue, Basinghall-street, (Bro. Gosden's). Punctually at the appointed time, Bro. J. C. Franks, W.M., opened the lodge, and he was well supported by all his officers. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. There was a large amount of work on the agenda paper, and from it was done the raising of Bro. Walker to the third degree, and passing Bros. Clisbey, Isles, and Bradley to the second degree. Then initiating Messrs. W. H. Hooper, W. W. Smith, and W. Welchman into Freemasonry. The working of these degrees was done in an admirable manner by the Worshipful Master, and when it is taken into consideration that the W.M. is not a native of this country, too much credit cannot be given him for the correct, impressive, and painstaking style he rendered all his work in the different ceremonies. The necessity of having a summer banquet was then fully discussed in the lodge. Last year a most successful reunion of the members and their friends was held at Bro. Henry Lock's (P.M. 212), the Falk-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, Essex, where every one thoroughly enjoyed themselves and spent an agreeable enjoyable day. Under such auspicious circumstances of past success, it was unanimously resolved to have an anniversary summer banquet at the same place, and the W.M., the P.M.'s, and others gave this arrangement their most cordial approbation and support. So, no doubt, when the appointed day arrives, a good muster of the brethren will be present to carry out this pleasant day's excursion into the country. Due notice will be given of the day appointed when all the necessary preliminaries are completed, and we anticipate another red letter day on that occasion in connexion with this distinguished old prosperous and well-established lodge. Some formal business having been disposed of, the lodge was duly closed and stands adjourned until the winter session. After business, the brethren adjourned to a superior banquet got up in that superior style for which Brother C. Gosden is justly famed. About fifty sat down, and their wants were liberally catered for. Bro. C. Gosden, as is usual with him, was unremitting in his attentions to see all were properly served and made comfortable. The cloth having been removed, the customary toasts were given and responded to. Some good singing and excellent recitations closed the last meeting of the season, and the brethren separated to enjoy "tired nature's sweet repose. balmy sleep."

Crystal Palace Lodge, No. 742.—The only ceremony at the meeting of this lodge on Friday, the 2nd inst., was that of installation, the retiring Master, Bro. Henry Finch, as W.M., installing his successor, Bro. George Weeks, with an amount of ability seldom surpassed. The officers of the year are Bros. Cooper, S.W.; Cox, J.W.; Acton, Treasurer; H. T. Thompson, Secretary; Seymour Smith, Organist; Steigerwald, S.D.; Morley, J.D.; Potter, I.G.; W. Bertram, D.C.; Stevens, W.S.; Woodstock, Tyler. After the ceremony, about seventy brethren adjourned to a banquet, provided by Bros. Bertram and Roberts in one of their charming rooms overlooking the grounds of the Crystal Palace.

Perfect Ashlar Lodge, No. 1178.—The regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Thursday, the 1st inst., at the Gregorian Arms' Tavern, 96, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey. In the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. Green, W.M., Bro. F. Walters, P.M., and Secretary, opened the lodge, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. J. W. Avery, P.M., took the chair, and in a masterly manner raised Bro. A. Lewis to the third degree, passed Bro. C. A. Swaine (73) to the second degree, and initiated a gentleman into Freemasonry—the W.M., Bro. J. Green, having relinquished his position through indisposition. The work was beautifully performed, the officers being well able to render their parts, which made all the ceremonies pass off in a superior manner. One gentleman was proposed for initiation at the next meeting. Notice of removal of the lodge (by desire of the landlord, Bro. G. Drapper) was given by Bro. F. Walters, P.M. and Sec., after which the lodge was closed. There were present besides those named: Bros. F. H. Ebsworth, P.M. and Treas.; G. J. Grace, S.W.; J. W. Dudley, J.W.; J. H. Fudge, J.D.; T. W. Cox, I.G.; J. Ruse, W.S.; G. Drapper, G. Free, J. A. Axtell, P. Fry, G. Mabbs, W. May, L. Ashton, H. Bartlett, T. Jones, J. Wootton, G. A. Claeys, &c. Visitors: Bros. E. H. Tipton, W.M. 49; T. Angel and C. A. Swaine, 73; &c. A good banquet was served, and a pleasant evening was spent.

Star Lodge, No. 1275.—This young and well-established lodge held its regular meeting on Friday, the 2nd inst., at the Marquis of Granby Tavern, New Cross. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. W. Ough, P.G.P., who was supported by the following brethren:—C. J. Hogg, P.G.S., S.W.; H. Keeble, J.W.; J. Smith, P.G.P. and I.P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; S. Homewood, as S.D.; H. Crabtree, J.D.; G. Pymm, P.M., I.G.; T. R. Darke, D.C.; J. J. Limebeer, W. Okey, W. Bull, G. F. Guest, A. Stevens, W. F. Wetten, J. Davis, W. Kipps, W. B. Tustin, J. Finch, R. F. Duff, T. Hobson, H. J. Clare, G. S. Elliott, and others. Amongst a large number of visitors we noticed Bros. T. Perridge (P.M. 79), J. R. Dussee (79), Henry Potter (P.M. 11), W. Bourne (P.M. 749), E. Sisson (P.M. 901), G. R. Lomax (913), W. H. Waghorn (S.D. 946), &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Ballots were taken and proved unanimous in favour of Messrs. R. F. Duff, C. K. Share, J. Davis, J. Finch, and W. Kipps as candidates for initiation, and of Bro. George Samuel Elliott (749) as a joining member. The work gone through was raising Bros. W. H. Trampleasure, J. J. Limebeer, and a visiting brother; passing Bro. Bull; and initiating Messrs. Duff, Davis, Finch, and Kipps. The candidates were introduced separately, thus enabling each to give an undivided attention to the ceremonies, which were all performed by the W.M. in a faultless manner. The by-laws were read, and the brethren then proceeded to the election of a W.M. for the ensuing year, the result being unanimous in favour of the S.W., Bro. Hogg. The Treasurer and the Tyler (Bro. J. Gilbert) were unanimously re-elected to their respective offices. The Audit Committee was appointed, and an arrangement was made for the convenience of the Secretary, to hold their meetings in town. It was also unanimously resolved that a ten-guinea testimonial be presented from the lodge funds to Bro. Ough, in slight recognition of his valuable and efficient services to the lodge as its second W.M.; the form of the testimonial to be left to the choice of that esteemed brother.—Bro. Ough, in a feeling speech thanked the brethren for the high compliment paid him.—The Treasurer then announced that his exertions as the lodge's Steward at the recent festival of the Girl's School, resulted (in a joint list with some other Stewards) in the realization of over £160. He would wish the lodge to send a Steward every year to, at least, one of the festivals of the great Masonic charities, and hoped every brother who was installed as W.M. of the lodge would also be a Steward to represent them on one of those occasions.—Acting on this suggestion, Bro. Hogg, the W.M.-elect, gave in his name as the Steward to represent the lodge at the festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution in January next.—Several joining members and candidates for initiation having been proposed, it was arranged that emergency meetings should be held for the purpose of clearing off all work previous to the installation meeting, and thus leave the ceremony of installation alone for that occasion; and as a large number of visitors are expected, it was determined to hold the installation banquet at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. The lodge was closed, banquet followed, and the usual happy evening was spent.

PROVINCIAL.

CREWKERNE.—Parret and Axe Lodge, No. 814.—A meeting of this lodge was held on the 25th ultimo, the W.M., Bro. Strawson, in the chair. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting confirmed, after which Bros. John Wright and R. S. Horsey were raised to the sublime degree of M.M., and the working tools were presented by Bro. P.M. Galpin. The lodge was then closed in form, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the W.M., on behalf of the lodge, presented the I.P.M., Bro. Galpin, with a handsome gold P.M.'s jewel, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. Galpin, P.M., P.G.D.C. Somerset, by the brethren of the Parret and Axe Lodge, 814, in acknowledgment of his valuable Masonic services. May, 1871." In doing so, the W.M. spoke highly of the uniform efficiency, liberality, and courtesy of his Immediate P.M. during his two years' Mastership. Bro. Galpin acknowledged the compliment paid to him in feeling and appropriate terms. The jewel was supplied by Bro. George Kenning, Little Britain, London. The Tyler's toast brought a most agreeable evening to a pleasant termination.

PLUMSTEAD, KENT.—Pattison Lodge, No. 913.—The installation of Bro. C. A. Ellis, P.M., as Worshipful Master of the Pattison Lodge, one of the finest lodges in the province of Kent, took place on Thursday, the 1st inst., at the Lord Raglan Hall, Plumstead. The installation ceremony was impressively performed by Bro. J. Graydon, P.M. and P.P.G.S. Deacon of Kent, and the W.M. then invested his officers in their several degrees as follows: Bros. S. H. Pain, S.W.; T. W. Knight, J.W.; E. Denton, P.M. and P.P.S. Purs. Kent, Secretary; A. Jessup, Treasurer; G. M. Tapp, S.D.; J. M'Dougall, J.D.; and A. Penfold, I.G. Subsequently an elegant banquet was served by Bro. Raymond. The W.M. presided, and there were also present: The R.W. Bro. F. Pattison, Past Grand Warden of England, and founder of this lodge; Bros. C. Coupland, the I.P.M.; G. Pongue, P.M. and P.P.G.J. Warden of Kent; Graydon, J. Henderson, and W. Norman, P.M.'s of this lodge; together with all the officers and the following members: Bros. J. Widgery, E. Hughes, R. Lister, T. W. Davis, W. Watts, W. Farnfield, G. W. Smith, E. Palmer, E. Biddick, W. B. Lloyd, J. Raymond, J. Griffiths, G. Cay, R. Lonergan, F. F. Thorne, W. T. Vincent, T. D. Hayes, F. Barnett, W. Canty, W. H. Pinkey, W. Lock, &c. The visitors present included Bros. Dr. Prescott, R.A., P.M. 706; Feiling, S.W. 706; Sydney Clarke, J.W. 706; J. Miles, W.M. 293; W. D. May, W.M. 700; W. J. Graham, W.M.-elect 700; G. B. Davies, W.M. 13; Marshall, S.D. 1308; Hastings, 1056; Pownall, 13 and 1089; &c. The whole proceedings of the day were of the most interesting character. Bro. Pattison responded to the toast of "The Earl of Carnarvon and the rest of the Grand Officers," and Bro. Graydon for "Lord Holmesdale and the Province of Kent." But for urgent parliamentary duties, his lordship would have been present.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

CALCUTTA.—Royal Kent Encampment.—A regular meeting of this encampment was held at the Freemasons' Hall, 55, Bentinck-street, Calcutta, on April 29th, 1871. Present: E. Sir Kts. J. L. Taylor, P.E.C.; G. H. Daly, P.E.C. and officiating Prelate; Sir Kts. B. M. Hunt, 1st Captain; G. M. Goodricke, 2nd Captain; J. R. Alex. D'Cruz, Registrar; D. M'Gregor, Expert; A. Friedeman, 1st Herald; W. E. Jellicoe, 2nd Herald; W. F. Westfield, Captain of the Lines; Frater G. Alexander, Equerry. Members: Sir Kts. Friedeman and Girling. Visitors: Sir Kts. W. H. M'Gowan, H. Compton, and Captain G. G. Nelson. The encampment having been opened in due and ancient form at 8 p.m., the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was prepared for Comp. Stephen Lawry, of Royal Arch Chapter Kilwinning in the East, No. 64, of Scotland, proposed by E. Sir Kt. J. L. Taylor, and seconded by Sir Kt. J. R. Alex. D'Cruz, and which, on being taken, proved favourable. Comp. Stephen Lawry was then admitted in due form, and installed a Knight Companion of the Order. Sir Kt. George Michael Goodricke having been elected as Eminent Commander of the encampment at the last regular meeting, was called up, and duly installed into the chair. The Sir Knights, members of the encampment, were then admitted, and paid due homage to the newly-installed Eminent Commander, who then made the following appointments:—Sir Kts. William Berry Farr, 1st Captain; David M'Gregor, 2nd Captain; J. R. Alex. M'Gowan, Registrar; W. F. Westfield, Prelate; W. E. Jellicoe, Expert; Adolph Friedeman, Almoner; Whitmore Girling, Captain of the Lines; J. L. Taylor, Treasurer; Frater G. Alexander, Equerry. An apology was recorded from the P.E.C. E. Sir Kt. William Osmond Alexander for non-attendance in consequence of important business having compelled him to leave town. There being nothing further before the meeting, it was closed in solemn form, and the Sir Knights adjourned to partake of the "Bread of Plenty" and "Cup of Cheerfulness."

ORDER OF MALTA.

GIBRALTAR.—A priory of this distinguished Order was opened in the rooms of the Calpe Encampment on the 23rd ult. by the Eminent Prior Sir Kt. J. Balfour Cockburn, for the purpose of conferring the degree on Comps. Price, 30°, Andrews, and Roche. There was a goodly muster of the Knights of St. John, and the ceremony was conducted throughout in a most impressive manner, and with a very strict and careful attention to details: Worthy Sir Kt. Ellison acting as Mareschal. This was the first occasion the priory was worked with banners instead of veils, and the change was universally hailed as a most sensible improvement on the old system. The following knights guarded the banners:—The white banner, Sir Kt. St. Leger; the red banner, Sir Kt. Allfrey; the black banner, Sir Kt. Dantez; the purple banner, Sir Kt. Morgan; the gold-coloured banner, Sir Kt. Marin. Thanks to the artistic skill and great heraldic knowledge of the Captain-General, Sir Kt. St. Leger, the Calpe Encampment, though not possessing a suite of rooms of any very great size, may fairly boast of the internal decorations of the same, in the shape of banners, standards, and devices, being second to no other encampment. We strongly counsel all wandering knights who may pass through Gibraltar not to fail to see this charming little priory, which may really be regarded as one of the "lions" of the place. Such a visit, we may safely add, will be most cordially received and as heartily responded to by the Eminent Prior, whose ability and courtesy are so well known.

THEATRICAL.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—This fashionable theatre has crowded houses to witness the ever-popular burlesque "Poll and Partner Joe," which is described by contemporaries as "one of the best burlesques that the best English burlesque writer has ever written," and "unqualified success," and to which we can add great and genuine success, well merited and richly deserved. Mrs. John Wood as Mary Maybud introduces her famous ballad, "My Love he is a Sailleur Boy," and sings "His Heart was true to Poll," and to quote from The Observer, "her fresh, funny rendering of the chorus is ringing in our ears as we write. Every one must hear that song." Then, "Black Brandon's sensation header through the port side of the ship is quite equal in impressiveness to the goblin monk's fall from Notre Dame."—The Graphic. The burlesque is sustained by Miss Caroline Parkes, Partner Joe; Harry Halyard, Miss Emma Chambers; Mr. Lionel Brough, Black Brandon; Dame Tiller, Mr. Harry Cox; Watchful Waxend, Mr. Alfred Young—all of whom well performed their parts. The comedy in two acts by Planche, "Secret Service." Mr. William Farren in his father's famous role. "Those who remember the first William Farren and his many Haymarket triumphs will be glad to revive their stage traditions, and see almost the old favorite actor again in his habit as he lived."—The Daily Telegraph. This performance is given first, then the burlesque, and terminating with H. B. Farnie's new farce "Rival Romeos." At Mrs. John Wood's benefit on Friday, May 26th, during the benefit performances, she was literally presented with "a bag of gold." A purse containing one hundred guineas, subscribed by the ladies and gentlemen connected with her management, was placed in her hands by Mr. Sothorn, who, in a neat impromptu speech, assured the fair manageress that she was as "good as gold," and that he could say for all concerned that "their hearts were true to Poll."

ROYAL COURT THEATRE (Sloane-square).—The successful comedy of "Randall's Thumb," which has been performed for more than one hundred nights, was on Whit Monday replaced by a dramatized version of Charles Dickens's celebrated novel of "Great Expectations." It is in three acts, with a prologue. It is thus placed on the stage. Prologue—Exterior of Joe Gargery's Forge adjoining Churchyard. Act 1—Interior of Joe Gargery's Forge. Act 2—Pips's Chambers in Barnard's Inn. Act 3, scene 1—Mr. Jaggers' Office in Little Britain; scene 2—The old Sluice House near the Lime-kill. It is well put on the stage, and is likely to have a great run. The successful musical fairy tale, "Creatures of Impulse," terminates the performances, which is commenced with a farce by the late Mr. T. Robertson, entitled "Not at all Jealous." It is with great pleasure we noticed no fees of any kind are allowed to be taken here, and no doubt in time that wholesome rule will be carried out in all places of amusement as well as at the theatres. There was a full house on the night of our attendance, composed of a fashionable audience. Repeated calls before the curtain of the principal performers in "Great Expectations," at the end of each act, proved how well this drama is likely to please the patrons of this well-managed theatre. It is a genuine success. We may add that the principal characters in the new melodrama are sustained by Mesdames M. Brennan, Kate Bishop, K. Manor, and Eleanor Bufton, and Messieurs E. Righton, J. C. Cowper, W. Belford, and John Clayton, to whom all praise is due for the great success that has been obtained.

THE UNRECOGNISED DEGREES.

OUR readers will remember that, some months ago, we advocated strongly the establishment of a Council of Rites for the regulation and government of the unrecognised degrees in England. Since then considerable progress has been made towards the desired point; treaties between the "Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine," on the one hand, and the "Grand Lodge of Mark Masters," on the other, having been adopted. The Mark Grand Lodge, the Supreme Grand Council 33°, and the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital have also entered into alliance; and as the subject is one of great importance to the Fraternity in general, we annex copies of the several conventions:

Draft Convention submitted to, and approved by, a meeting of representatives of the Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine and the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales and the colonies and dependencies of the British Crown.

I. It is hereby agreed that an intimate alliance be entered into between the Grand Imperial Council of the Masonic Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine (including the Order of Knights of the Holy Sepulchre) and the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales and the colonies and dependencies of the British Crown.

II. The Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons acknowledges the Grand Imperial Council to be the only legitimate authority over the Masonic Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine (including the Masonic Order of Knights of the Holy Sepulchre) in England and Wales.

III. The Grand Imperial Council of the Masonic Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine (including the Masonic Order of the Holy Sepulchre) acknowledges the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons to be the only legitimate authority in England and Wales and the colonies and dependencies of the British Crown over the degrees of Mark Man, Mark Master, Royal Ark Mariner, Link, Chain, and Wrestle.

IV. The Grand Imperial Council of the Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, &c., hereby agrees to surrender to the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons all the authorities and powers contained in the charter or warrant signed by Lord Rancliffe, under date 10th May, 1796, and now vested in the former, save and except any power therein contained over the Masonic Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine (including the Masonic Order of Knights of the Holy Sepulchre).

V. It is agreed that, for the better maintenance of Masonic discipline, sentence of suspension or expulsion by the supreme authority of the one order may be communicated to, and shall be accepted ipso facto by, the supreme authority of the other—provided always that, should the brother so suspended or expelled by the one order be also a member of the other order, he may appeal to its supreme authority against the carrying out of the said sentence by them.

VI. The said orders agree mutually to support each other to the best of their power in the exclusive exercise of their respective independent jurisdictions over the above-mentioned degrees, and for the benefit of their respective orders.

VII. The contracting orders mutually undertake that neither of them will work any degree other than those named in the premises, and which may be claimed by any existing Masonic authority in England recognised by them, or either of them, without the written consent of the other contracting order.

VIII. By the title "Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine," the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons understands a chivalric order consisting solely of Master Masons.

IX. Provided always that nothing contained in this agreement shall in any manner affect the rights and privileges of lodges of Mark Master Masons holding warrants under the jurisdictions of Scotland or Ireland in the colonies and dependencies of the British Crown.

Convention between the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons, the Supreme Grand Chapter 33°, and the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital.

I. The Most Worshipful Grand Mark Master Mason, the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, and the Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master of the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital, agree respectively to recognize each other as the sole supreme authorities, to wit—The Most Worshipful the Grand Mark Master Mason as the sole supreme authority over the Mark Degree; the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree as the sole supreme authority in the Ancient and Accepted Rite of Thirty-three Degrees, from and exclusive of the Master Mason and Royal Arch degrees up to, and including thirty-third; the Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master as the sole supreme authority over the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital and Malta; and without the unanimous consent of all the contracting parties, formally expressed in writing, to ignore, disregard, and refuse to admit into their respective convocations, chapters, lodges, or by whatever names their meetings may be designated, any person belonging to any Masonic order or degree which shall be in rebellion against any or either of the contracting parties, or any person who shall hereafter belong to any Masonic order or degree not recognized by one or other of the contracting parties, and not subject to the Judicial Council hereinafter described. Provided always, and it is hereby agreed, that the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters shall be at liberty to ally itself with a governing body, to be formed for the purpose of working the following ancient Masonic degrees—that is to say, that of "Royal and Select Master," "Excellent Master," "Super Excellent Master," and "Most Excellent Master," without such act being considered an infringement of the present convention, or as obligatory on the associated orders to acknowledge or receive as an associated body the governing body of the hereinbefore-mentioned degrees. Provided always that all orders or degrees now claimed and worked by either of the associated orders shall be considered as belonging to them.

II. For the purpose of hearing and deciding appeals as hereinafter provided, and of settling disputed questions between the respective orders and degrees, and for the more effectual promotion of their interests in general, the contracting parties will nominate, from time to time, a Judicial Council consisting of three delegates from each authority—to wit, the Grand Conclave of the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital, three members; the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, three members; and the Supreme Council, three members—of whom one representative present from each of the above bodies shall form a quorum. Provided always, that if on the summons of the second meeting a quorum shall not be present as aforesaid, then those present shall and may act and make their decree as though a member or delegate from each authority had been present.

III. It shall be competent to either of the associated orders to summon such Judicial Council on giving to the other contracting parties, and to any person or persons interested in the matter to be decided or judged, clear twenty-one days' notice of such council, together with the time and place at which it is intended that such meeting or council shall be held; the subject matter of such meeting, and the judgment, decree, or sentence of such council shall be definite and conclusive.

IV. Any member of the associated orders or degrees, on conviction by any one of them of a Masonic offence, may, within clear twenty-eight days after receiving notice from the proper authority of the associated order by which he shall have been so convicted, that the judgment, decree, or sentence will be duly communicated to the other contracting parties, lodge notice of appeal to the Judicial Council of the associated orders or degrees hereinbefore mentioned, with the acting authority of such orders or degrees, viz., the Grand Chancellor of the Order of Knights Templar, the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, and the Secretary-General of the Thirty-third Degree; and if such appeal be lodged in due form within the space of clear twenty-eight days, the said Judicial Council shall be summoned within clear twenty-one days of such notice being so lodged to meet before the expiry of clear twenty-one days, as hereinbefore provided, for the purpose of adjudicating on such appeal.

V. All judgments, decrees, or sentences shall be communicated to the supreme authorities of all the contracting parties, and shall be valid and executory without question or further process, and no appeal, error, or review shall lie against such judgments, decrees, or sentences, which shall ipso facto become the judgment decree, or sentence of all the parties hereto.

VI. All judicial acts done according to law by the supreme judicial authority of one of the contracting parties hereinbefore mentioned may be forthwith communicated to the officers designated in Article IV. of the other contracting parties; and if no appeal be lodged after the expiration of twenty-eight days from the service thereof on the party affected thereby, be published for its effect in all councils, chapters, encampments, or lodges of the other contracting parties, and any act of contumacy punished by one of the contracting parties shall, if communicated as above provided, be regarded by the other as contumacy against its own judicial act. Expulsion, suspension, or other minor pain or penalty adjudged by any one of the contracting parties shall be applied by the others in like manner. Provided always that all sentences of expulsion must be communicated to the officers designated in Article IV.

VII. The contracting parties agree to exchange lists of persons relieved from their respective funds, giving an abstract of each case and the amount of relief, as soon as possible after such relief shall have been given.

VIII. The contracting parties agree not hereafter, otherwise than by mutual consent, to recognize any other jurisdictions whatsoever, except the Grand Lodge of Craft, and Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, or to permit their members to join any other independent Masonic order or degree within any place in England and Wales, except as provided in Article I.

At the meeting of the Mark Grand Lodge on the 6th instant, both these treaties were agreed to unanimously, and the following resolution was carried in like manner—

"That the representatives of this G.L. on the Judicial Committee be respectfully requested to urge on the said committee the advisability of admitting the Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine into treaty for the mutual strengthening and protection of all the existing orders."

The admission of the Order of Constantine could only have been a question of time in any case, as it now holds too influential a position as a chivalric degree in connection with Freemasonry to be ignored by any combination, however powerful. We are also informed that, in order to facilitate an early settlement of the question, the members of the Red Cross Council have resolved to discontinue working the Rite of Misraim, which is considered by some brethren to be an infringement upon the degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite; and if a similar conciliatory spirit be evinced by the other bodies, the union of the four great sections outside the pale of Grand Lodge will be speedily consummated.

We confess that we hail the movement with feelings of the utmost satisfaction; it is so much more in harmony with the genius of Masonry than a policy of self-glorification, or a negation of the rights of others. The increase of the various unrecognised orders in membership during the past ten years has more than kept pace with the relative increase of the Craft; and moreover many of the best Masons in England are enthusiastic supporters of one or other, if not of all those orders. There is also another aspect to the subject which deserves attention. By a mutual arrangement and understanding between the various governing bodies, the formation of petty Masonic jurisdictions in future will be effectually checked, and the unseemly spectacle will no longer be presented to the Craft of the assumption of high-sounding designations and supreme authority by men whose neglected education and inferior social position utterly unfit them for any but the most subordinate station.

To the Reverend GEORGE RAYMOND PORTAL may very fairly be ascribed the chief merit of maturing the several projects of alliance now happily affected. He has worked hard to accomplish this union, and without forgetting the paramount claims of his own Grand Lodge, he has carefully studied to secure the rights and privileges of the other Grand Bodies. The consciousness of having laboured in so good a cause must, to such a zealous Mason, be itself an "exceeding great reward;" but we nevertheless hope and believe that the services he has rendered will not remain unacknowledged by the heads of all the "Unrecognised Degrees."

WE are in receipt of a circular from the Grand Orient of France, signed by Bro. de Saint-Jean and eight other members of the Council of the Order, in which they repudiate in the strongest terms any complicity in the recent so-called Masonic manifestation in Paris, and state that they protested at the time against the proceedings of the factious and besotted crew over whom the Communistic doctrines held sway. We rejoice to find that the Grand Orient is not responsible for those extraordinary demonstrations, but inasmuch as many Masons under its obedience must have taken part in them, we conceive that a severe example ought to be made of all such contumacious brethren.

WE have received a communication from Bro. H. C. Levander, P.M. 507, in which he thanks the 115 brethren who supported his nomination to the Board of General Purposes on Wednesday last, and assures them that although unsuccessful this time, he will renew his candidature on a future occasion.

PERSONALITIES—THE HIGH DEGREES.

I have been in hot water in your columns for taking strong exception to the use of personal remarks, and possibly my appearance at this moment may be thought gratuitous and unnecessary. Still I cannot avoid expressing my regret that the commercial occupation of a brother should be made the subject of remark, and apparent reproach, in a controversy which must be viewed with sorrow by all who wish well to the Craft, and desire to see the prosperity of such degrees as properly and lawfully appertain to it. I have never seen Bro. Yarker, and do not know precisely what his business occupation may be, nor do I understand or care what is meant by a "yarn merchant;" I, however, much deplore the introduction of the personal element into these controversies.

From occasional editorial notes which have appeared, I had hoped that the serious breach to which this controversy relates was likely to find a satisfactory adjustment; but from the still-continued correspondence this does not appear to be speedily resulting. I should be very glad to learn, for the sake of an honourable Craft and all its belongings, that this unfortunate case, upon which I entertain but one feeling of painful regret, could be referred in all its bearings to the review of some tribunal acceptable to all interested parties. I do not profess to understand the merits of the question—therefore I trust my observations will be accepted as arising only out of the one single desire to see terminated a state of things which appears to me calculated to produce considerable mischief and to weaken that bond of union in which lies the source of much strength.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Committee Meeting of the above Institution was held on Saturday, 3rd inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. Bro. J. Hervey, V.P., presided. There were present Bros. H. Browse, A. Perkins, W. Young, W. Paas; B. Head, G. Kenning, J. G. Chancellor, F. Walters, R. W. Stewart, and S. May, V.P.'s; G. Cox, W. Farnfield, J. R. Sheen, B. Mallam, R. Kenyon, W. Roebuck, J. W. Dosell, H. Empson, F. Adlard, T. W. White, Foxall, S. Rosenthal, D. Rose, F. H. Ebsworth, H. Massey, Myers, J. Turner, Burt, Freeman, &c., &c.

Bro. F. Binckes read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. The election for the members of the House Committee was then proceeded with. Bro. R. Kenyon withdrew his name from the list of candidates. Bro. F. Walters, V.P., as the nominator, and by consent of the candidate, withdrew Bro. T. J. Sabine's name. Bro. W. Sabben's name was also withdrawn. The ballot resulted in favour of Bros. J. G. Chancellor, G. Cox, W. Roebuck, R. W. Stewart, W. Paas, H. Browse, B. Head, G. Plucknett, B. Mallam, J. Taylor, J. Wordsworth, and W. Young, who were declared duly elected.

The Audit Committee was then elected. Bro. R. W. Stewart resigned, which left but nine names on the list of candidates, viz.:—Bros. G. Cox, J. W. Dosell, H. Empson, J. Hervey, B. Head, D. W. Pearce, J. R. Sheen, J. Turner, and F. W. Shields, who were declared to be the members of that Committee.

Petitions on behalf of candidates whose fathers were members of Lodges 9, 111, 394, and 696 were accepted, and their names added to the long list of applicants who will appear in the next election in October.

Two boys who had been educated in the school had each a gratuity of five pounds voted to them for outfits of clothing.

The usual vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.

GRAND LODGE.

The Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge took place on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. The lodge was very numerous attended, and the brethren who were present had the gratification of seeing the Grand Master in his place, although he had so recently returned to this country. When his lordship was announced, the brethren gave him a deafening cheer, which lasted till he took his seat. The warmth with which he was received appeared to be highly pleasing to him, as he frequently bowed his acknowledgments. The entry of the Grand Master was accompanied for the first time by the playing of the organ by the Grand Organist, Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, who very skilfully gave "See the Conquering Hero Comes." The following Grand Officers were present:—

M.W. Bro. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, K.G., G.M.; R.W. Bros. H. D. Lewis, District G. Master of Sumatra, as Deputy G. Master; Lieut.-Colonel Burdett, P.G. Master Middlesex, as S.G.W.; H. C. Sirr, P.G.W., as J.G.W.; J. Fawcett, P.G.M. Durham; the Earl Bective, P.G.M. Cumberland; R. Hamilton, P.D.G.M. Jamaica; Rev. J. Huyshe, P.G.M. Devon; V.W. Bros. Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, M.A., Rev. Sir John W. Hayes, and Rev. J. C. Martyn, G. Chaplains; Rev. R. J. Simpson, Rev. C. R. Davis, and Rev. T. S. Ravenshaw, P.G. Chaplains; Bros. Samuel Tomkins, G. Treas.; J. L. Evans, P.B.G.P.; Col. Cole, C.B., P.G.W.; Æ. J. McIntyre, G. Reg.; John Hervey, G. Sec.; E. E. Wendt, Sec. G.C.; W. Raynham Stewart J. V. N. Bazalgette, and J. E. Saunders, G. Deacons; B. Head, Edmond Phillips, B. Scott, George Cox, Major Creaton, H. Grissell, H. Browse, J. Savage, E. J. Fraser, J. Snell, and J. M. Clabon, P.G. Deacons; Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter, G. Dir. of Cer.; Conrad C. Dumas, as Asst. Dir. of Cer.; Dr. J. Daniel Moore, G. Sword-bearer; E. H. Patten, Hyde Pullen, R. J. Spiers, Hy. Bridges, W. Young, R. J. Hollon, J. Nunn, and J. Mason, P.G. Sword-bearers; W. Ganz, G. Org.; J. Symonds, P. Asst. G. Dir. of Cer.; W. Farnfield, P.A.G. Sec.; John Coutts, G. Purs.; John Boyd, Asst. G. Purs.; Jas. Brett, W. Ough, T. A. Adams, and Joseph Smith, P.G. Purs.

The Grand Master having opened the Grand Lodge with the usual solemnities, Bro. the Rev. Sir J. Warren Hayes acting as Grand Chaplain, the minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 1st March and of the Grand Festival of the 26th of April were read by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, and unanimously confirmed.

As at Grand Festival the M.W.G.M. was not present, the customary salutes were not then given on his proclamation as the re-elected Grand Master. On this occasion, therefore, the ceremony was performed, Bro. Sir Albert Woods (Garter), Grand Director of Ceremonies, giving the time.

The M.W.G.M. then rose, and was received with most enthusiastic cheers, which lasted for some time. When they had subsided, he said: Brethren, I beg most sincerely to thank you for the honour you have just been pleased to pay me, and yet more for the proof of your confidence, which you conferred upon me during my absence from this country on the public service, by re-electing me to fill for the present year the great office of your Grand Master. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, no one can be better aware than I am of how inadequately I have been able to discharge, during the year from which we have passed, the great duties of that office; partly on account of domestic reasons—with which you are all acquainted—(hear, hear)—and partly on the ground of the calls of public duty, which from time to time have interfered, I fear, too greatly for your convenience, with my power of attending to the duties of my Masonic office. But, brethren, I feel very strongly how large a claim I was obliged to make upon your indulgence when the important duties with which our gracious sovereign was pleased to entrust me, and which took me across the Atlantic—when those duties detained me for so lengthened a period at a great distance from this country. But I cannot doubt that one who was engaged in a mission of peace—(hear, hear)—in a mission the great object of which was to cement a friendship between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race—(hear, hear)—was engaged in a truly and most purely Masonic work—(hear, hear)—and therefore, brethren, I did count—though those were the sentiments by which you were animated—on a larger measure of your indulgence, because I felt that the claim I had upon that indulgence was more than, under ordinary circumstances, any man was entitled to make. But I beg heartily and sincerely to return you my warmest thanks for having again placed me in this great position; and I will only say now, that I trust I may be enabled to discharge its duties more adequately and more perfectly during the year which has now commenced than it has been possible for me to do during that which was concluded a few weeks ago. Brethren, as I am addressing you on this occasion, I cannot help availing myself of the opportunity—and I gladly seize the very first opportunity I have had since my return to this country—to convey to you from our Masonic brethren in the United States the warm expression of the truest Masonic feeling—(cheers)—which they charged me on their behalf to carry with me across the Atlantic and to communicate to the Grand Lodge of England. They gave to me, brethren—not to me, the individual, but to me, the Grand Master of England, the representative of English Masonry—a magnificent reception. (Hear, hear.) A reception which proved the hearty Masonic feeling by which they were united to all Masons of the old mother country. (Hear, hear.) As you are all probably aware, the Masons of the United States of America are not bound together by a single Grand Lodge: they have Grand Lodges in all, or nearly all, I believe, of their States and territories; and, consequently, although the meeting I attended was in name but of one district—the district of Columbia, in which the city of Washington is situated—there were nevertheless present on that occasion Masons from every part of the vast continent over which the dominion of the United States extends. They came from New England in the north, from Iowa on the west, and from Georgia and Louisiana on the south. The meeting was composed of men who came, I might have said, some thousands of miles to attend it, with the view of showing that they felt themselves bound to the Masons of England by a warm tie of fraternal union. I was charged to express those feelings to you. It is to me a most gratifying task to have such a duty imposed upon me, and I think you will agree with me—I think you will support me—in that which I said to that great meeting when I told them that I would insure to every American Freemason who might come to this country at any time the warmest, the heartiest, and most fraternal greeting by the Grand Lodge of England. (His lordship resumed his seat amidst loud applause.)

The balloting papers were then distributed for the election of members of the Board of General Purposes, of the Colonial Board, and of the Committee of Management of the Benevolent Institutions.

Bro. M'Intyre, G.R., in reference to what his lordship had said of the mode and manner in which he had been received by the American brethren, would with the permission of the Grand Master—as it was out of order, and could not be done without permission—venture to put before Grand Lodge a motion to be embodied in a resolution which should express the English Masons' sentiments towards their American brethren. It would be also a testimony of their extreme regard for his lordship, and show the satisfaction they felt at his return.

The M.W.G.M.: Brethren, There can be no doubt that, strictly speaking, the proposal which has been made by the Grand Registrar is not within the rules and orders of Grand Lodge, and consequently, unless it is one which meets with perfect approval on the part of Grand Lodge, it is one which I should not feel justified in permitting to be put. At the same time it cannot be denied that the circumstances to which our excellent brother has alluded are of an unique character, and I am bound to say myself that I do think it would be a very graceful and a very valuable step if this Grand Lodge were thus to take the earliest opportunity of embodying in a resolution the expression of its friendly and fraternal sentiments towards our brother Masons in America. Bis dat qui cito dat. It is better to do a thing of that kind at once than wait three long months before you do it; and, personally, I am bound to say, that I believe it would be for the public benefit—I cannot doubt that it would be for the advantage of Masonry and the world, if the Grand Lodge were on this occasion, in the warmth of its fraternal sentiments, to shut its eyes to the irregularity. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Æ. J. M'Intyre, G.R., said that having now the permission of the Grand Master and Grand Lodge, he would venture to ask the brethren to prove by resolution their hearty feelings of gratitude to the Grand Lodge of America, and the Grand Lodge of Columbia especially, and to all the Grand Bodies of America, and the American brethren who gathered together from all parts of that great continent to do honour to the Grand Master of English Freemasons. He had ventured to ask the Grand Master to permit this resolution to be put before the brethren because he felt the conduct which had been evinced by the Freemasons of America towards the Grand Master of England would find reciprocity in the heart of every English Freemason, who would perceive that a new bond of brotherhood bound together the Masons of the two countries by the reception accorded to his lordship. It was a spontaneous ebullition of feeling on the part of the American Freemasons who came forward to do honour to English Masonry; and it ought to be our spontaneous wish—a wish to be shown by immediate action—to return thanks to them for the kind and brotherly feeling shown to us by the entertainment of our Grand Master. He (Bro. M'Intyre) felt that we must lay this to our hearts, that a new era had arisen in Masonry by the friendly feeling between the two peoples that dwell on the two sides of the Atlantic; that though a great sea rolled between them, their hearts, their feelings, and their aspirations were the same; and that they were determined to be rivals only in their desire to inculcate the principles of Freemasonry. Let them take care that their Masonic brethren in America should know that we were not devoid of gratitude for the kindness they had shown to us, and let that gratitude be expressed by taking the earliest opportunity of recording that sense of gratitude on the lodge minutes—the feelings we entertain for those brethren who, in a distant clime, greeted our Grand Master as a brother. He (Bro. M'Intyre) would not detain Grand Lodge by putting the resolution in a particular form of words; but he thought he should be making the feelings of all the brethren best known by saying that this Grand Lodge begs to return its most sincere and hearty thanks to the Grand Lodge of Columbia and to the other Grand Bodies in America for the kind and fraternal love, affection, and esteem they showed to the Grand Master of England on the occasion of his recent visit so America. That was the substance of the resolution, and he would ask them to pass it, from the affection they had for their Grand Master, and for those who so warmly received him in America. He knew they would with one accord say that the American brethren were deserving of our regard, esteem, and thanks, and the more publicly that was made known the more it would be appreciated. (Cheers.)

Bro. H. R. Lewis, Provincial Grand Master of Sumatra: I have great pleasure in seconding the motion, and in doing so let me tell you, when our late Grand Master visited France such a compliment as was bestowed on Earl de Grey in America was not paid to him. The Americans honour and respect the Masons of this country; I have seen them pay honours which few have ever received before, and therefore I have much pleasure in seconding the motion which our worthy brother, the Grand Registrar, has made.

Bro. Bennoch suggested that in the formal drawing up of the resolution, the words "United States" should be used instead of the word "America."

The M.W.G.M.: Brethren, you have heard the resolution which has been proposed by the Grand Registrar, and seconded by the acting Deputy Grand Master. I sincerely hope that that resolution will pass unanimously in Grand Lodge. As I said before, the reception that was given to me was not given to me, the individual, but to me, the chosen representative of Masonry in this country for the time being; it was a reception given to you all in my person; it was a proof of the warm and fraternal feelings which are cherished by the Masons of the United States for the Masons of England; and I rejoice therefore that you should be able to take this opportunity of sending back a truly fraternal response to that greeting. I therefore put it.

The M.W.G.M.: Carried nemine contradicente. (Great cheering.)

The following report of the Board of Benevolence for the last quarter was taken as read. It recommended the following grants, viz:—

The widow of a deceased brother of the Royal Somerset House and Inverness Lodge, No. 4, London ... ..	£100
The widow of a deceased brother of the St Paul's Lodge, No. 194, London... ..	50
A brother of the St. Matthew's Lodge, No. 539, Walsall ... ..	50
The widow of a deceased brother of the Shakespeare Lodge, No. 284, Warwick ... ..	50
The widow of a deceased brother of the Restoration Lodge, No. 111, Darlington ... ..	50

All these grants were, on the motion of Bro. J. M. Clabon, confirmed.

The report of the Board of General Purposes was taken as read.

Bro. L. Evans said that, in moving that the report be adopted and entered on the minutes, he would call the attention of the Grand Lodge to the result of the deliberations of the Board. They had done their best in the interests of the brethren, and they trusted that from the report it would be found that they had studied the finances of Grand Lodge in providing the organ, which had cost far less than the vote of Grand Lodge authorised them to expend. (Cheers.)

The report was then received, and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

A statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on the 12th May, 1870, showed a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £3,723 1s. 3d., and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75.

Bro. E. J. Fraser moved that the report of the Colonial Board be taken as read. This was agreed to, and the resolutions regarding Bro. Coquillette, commented upon in our article last week, were therefore adopted.

The annual report of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, dated the 19th of May, 1871, was then laid before the Grand Lodge.

The next business was the motions, the first of which was in the following terms by Bro. Sir Patrick Colquhoun, P.M. 447:—

"Whether Grand Lodge countenance the Rite of Misraim of 90°, the Rite of Memphis, and the Order of Rome and Constantine? and if not, whether it be consistent with the position of a subaltern in the Grand Secretary's office that he take a lead in these unrecognised degrees?"

The M.W.G.M., after alluding to it, said: That proposal is not in the nature of a resolution, but of a question. It is not stated in the notice, as it stands, to whom that question is addressed. I must inform our worthy brother that owing to my absence from England—an excuse, I am sure, which he will be good enough to accept—to which I returned only late on Friday evening, I had not, as a matter of fact, the paper of business in my hands until I came to the Masonic Hall this evening. Consequently, my attention was not called to the motion of our excellent brother. I can only say that any motion of his would have commanded my attention if I had been here to attend to the business of Grand Lodge, as I ought to have done; but I have further to say, that, on the first blush, as a matter of order, a question in this form has hitherto, according to our practice, not been put in Grand Lodge. I have, however, not had time to look into the question, and should not feel myself justified, until I have done so, in ruling our Bro. Colquhoun out of order. At the same time, I do not desire to set a precedent which might have some inconveniences, unless I should see good reason for so doing. Under those circumstances, I would venture to appeal to our worthy brother to have the goodness to abstain from putting his question at the present time, to allow me to look more carefully into the matter than I have been able to do, and to have some private communication with him, in which I may learn his views on the question of order between this and next Quarterly Communication.

Bro. Sir Patrick C. Colquhoun: It would ill become me as a Mason, and it would ill become me as owing obedience to the head of the Craft, were I for a moment to hesitate in accepting the proposition which is thrown out by your lordship. The only object I could have would be that "all things be done decently and in order." I would not, under any circumstances, take any man by surprise, much less a member of the Craft. I therefore accede with much pleasure to the proposition which has been thrown out from the chair in the same terms in which it was proposed. (Cheers.)

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, in bringing forward his motion—

"That in future the meetings of Grand Lodge shall take place at five o'clock in the afternoon, and that the Law No. 10, relating to the Laws of Grand Lodge, be altered from 'ten,' by inserting the word 'eight' instead of 'ten' in the second line," said he did it to suit no purpose of his own, but simply in the name of Freemasonry, and with regard to altered circumstances. Fifty or sixty years ago, before railways were introduced, the brethren resided in London, and Grand Lodge was easy of access; but now, when most brethren lived out of town, their anxiety was to get home early. They therefore felt that, by meeting as late as seven o'clock, and the proceedings not being over till eleven, they were debarred from entering into a full participation of the benefits of Grand Lodge. The provincial brethren, if lodge met at five, would be able to attend, and get back to their homes the same night. He did not think brethren would suffer much inconvenience by attending at five, as even now, in their own private lodges, they met as early as four. He had no personal feeling in the matter, and would not press his motion if the brethren did not agree with him. He merely threw out the hint.

The motion appeared likely to drop for want of a seconder, but a brother, who said that rather than a full discussion of the matter should be stopped on that ground, having stood second sponsor to it,

Bro. James Mason, P.G.S.B., had hoped the time of the Grand Lodge would have been saved by a seconder not having been found. Some brethren seemed to think that nothing was good but what was changeable, and the oftener it was changed the better it was. The time now fixed for the meeting of Grand Lodge appeared to him most convenient for, at all events, the London Masons, and Grand Lodge was principally attended by them. Very few country members were present. If the preponderance of this Grand Lodge were country members then their convenience more especially should be studied. Altering the hour of meeting to five o'clock would disarrange the business of all the professional members, and would prevent their attending. It would be prejudicial to Masonry to that extent; City men and brokers it would prevent attending in due time. The suggestion made about the railways was a double-edged sword; the railways afforded great facility for brethren leaving Grand Lodge late at night. The proposal should be met by a direct negative. These proposed alterations, unless supported by good reasons, should not be brought forward. He thought it was not only wrong but un-masonic to bring such motions on—(no, no)—and he hoped that the opinion of Grand Lodge would take the same direction.

Bro. Col. Lowry Cole thought that Bro. Mason's speech had done the motion more good than harm. London Masons did not wish their convenience only to be consulted. This lodge wished to do justice, and attend to the convenience of all Masons alike. He himself would be much inconvenienced by Grand Lodge meeting at five o'clock instead of seven, but he would put up with that if a majority of country members found it convenient.

Bro. John Symonds thought that Bro. Stewart had done good service to the Craft in bringing the subject forward. The railways now enabled brethren to come up from all parts of the country, to arrive comparatively early, and to return home the same evening. He was not prepared to move it as an amendment, but his impression was that the proper time for Grand Lodge to meet would be one o'clock in the afternoon. (Laughter.) A large number of meetings in London were held at that hour, and meetings of public bodies were held at that hour. If Grand Lodge were held at twelve or one, brethren from West Yorkshire—a province over which his lordship so ably presided—could go down the same day to their homes. It was an important consideration that brethren from a distant province could come up, and attend to the business of the Grand Lodge. The business of Grand Lodge equally affected brethren in the provinces and in London, and every opportunity should be given them of attending.

Bro. F. Bennoch believed that no complaint had ever been made by the provincial brethren of the present hour of meeting. Then, what was the use of raising the question of meeting at five. Probably every brother in the hall could not possibly come at that hour. There was a large paper of business that night, and though they did not meet till seven, yet at the time he was speaking (half-past eight) that business was nearly over, and would have been quite finished but for the unwise motion which had been introduced. Bro. Stewart had made the modest remark that he would not press the motion if it was distasteful to Grand Lodge. Well, Grand Lodge did not feel that it could entertain the question, and but for Bro. Mason's speech it would have been decided long ago.

The M.W.G.M.: I am just going to make one or two observations before the discussion closes, and before our Bro. Raynham Stewart replies. I should not have naturally thought of taking any part in this discussion; but at the same time the question is one, whatever may be the decision at this moment, which it is not impossible may be raised again; and I do not think, therefore, it would be fair to Grand Lodge that I should not state the view which I take from a standpoint perhaps different from that of many persons now present. Now, I know personally that this change of hour would be exceedingly inconvenient to persons who, like myself, are engaged in parliamentary or official life. We have heard the views of those who represent the London Masons, and we have heard the views of those who speak on behalf of the provincial brethren, and I say that, as far as persons connected with parliamentary duties are concerned, the change from seven to five would be very inconvenient indeed. It would almost entirely exclude, in the early part of the session, at all events, members of the House of Commons attending Grand Lodge. Everyone acquainted with parliamentary business knows that on Wednesday from five to six o'clock in the House of Commons is a time when divisions take place, and critical occurrences arise; and consequently it would be of serious disadvantage to us in depriving us of the presence of those gentlemen from whom we derive much valuable aid. I do not think the slightest value can be attached to Bro. Stewart's argument about the railways; but he has put the question very fairly before Grand Lodge, and I have no wish to prejudice you against it. It is a matter which regards the convenience of the majority, and to the convenience of the majority we should all endeavour, as far as we can, to bow. Although it might be impossible for many of us to attend at the early hour of five, it is yet a fit question for debate and discussion.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart would withdraw his proposition, and would not have troubled Grand Lodge with it, but having given notice that he would bring it on, it would not have been right to withdraw it without giving the brethren an opportunity of ascertaining the general feeling on the subject.

The motion was accordingly withdrawn.

Bro. Benj. Head, P.G.D., moved, "That the sum of £50 be given from the Fund of General Purposes. That the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Asylum of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, to supply the inmates at Croydon with coals during the winter season." In doing so he stated that this motion was habitually introduced by the late Bro. John Udall, whose loss they sincerely regretted; and he then read a memorial which he had received, of the esteem in which Bro. Udall was held by the inmates of the asylum.

The M.W.G.M.: Brethren, I have one more duty to perform before I close this Grand Lodge—a duty in which I think I shall be undoubtedly supported by every brother in this room—that is, to take this opportunity, the earliest afforded me, of returning my public thanks, and my best thanks, to Lord Carnarvon, the Deputy Grand Master, for the manner in which he has conducted the business of the Craft during my absence of four months, when an amount of responsibility fell upon his shoulders, which I believe to be almost, if not quite, without precedent in the case of any Grand Master. I have reason to believe, from all I have heard, he has discharged those difficult duties to the entire satisfaction of the Craft; and I am very glad to take the earliest opportunity of thus publicly tendering him my warmest thanks for the able support he has given me.

Grand Lodge was then formally closed.

The following brethren comprise the

GRAND MARK LODGE.

The Half-yearly Communication to Grand Mark Lodge was made on Tuesday at Freemasons' Tavern. Previous to the assembling of Grand Lodge, a Lodge of Improvement was held, at which Bro. James Stevens, W.M. 104, presided, and worked the ceremony of advancement in faultless style. At Grand Lodge the M.W.G.M., Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, took the chair, having Bro. Col. Adair in the S.W. chair, and Bro. W. E. Gumbleton in the J.W.; Bros. Jas. Stevens, S.O.; Stebbing, Treasurer; F. Binckes, G. Secretary; Perkinton, 58, Fearnley, Halifax; S. Rosenthal, D.C.; and J. H. Wynne, as I.G. There were also present Bros. the Revs. T. F. Ravenshaw, D. Shaboe, W. B. Church, C. R. Davy, N. Haycroft, D.D., and J. Huyshe; Bros. W. W. B. Beach (P.G.M.), Col. Burdett, C. Hammerton, Eugene Cronin, W. Worrell, G. Kenning, Morton Edwards, A. D. Loewenstark, M. A. Loewenstark, Lazarus, R. J. Spiers, T. Hargreaves, Emmanuel, J. C. Parkinson, J. W. Dawson, T. Meggy, Joshua Nunn, H. W. Binckes, H. C. Levander, W. S. Webster, H. Massey, R. Spencer, and a full lodge.

After Grand Secretary had read the minutes of the December meeting, the report of the General Board was read. It stated that 489 certificates had been issued during the six months ending 31st of last March, and that the number of charters for new Mark lodges was, in the same time, ten. Two other provinces had, it was stated, also been constituted since that date. The events of more than ordinary importance which had occurred during the said six months were the holding of a conference lately in London between representatives of the various supreme Masonic jurisdictions in the country exercising rule over the Mark Degree, with the object of obtaining unanimity of action between conflicting interests; the concluding of treaties with the Red Cross Order, the Ancient and Accepted Rite 33°, and the Knights Templar; the producing of a tracing board for this Degree; the determining that the charity jewel should be presented at the expense of Grand Lodge; the suspending for the present of Grand Lodge's decision on the question of the qualification for office as W.M. of a Mark lodge; and the deciding by the Grand Master that Deputy Prov. Grand Masters should be nominated by the Prov. Grand Masters, submitted to him for approval, and then receive the rank of substantial Grand Officers, and have precedence immediately before the Grand Deacons. The report concluded by referring to the Ark Mariners' Degree, and stated that the stipulation made for the payment of the expenses of that body by Grand Mark Lodge having been complied with, and the meeting for the settlement of the details having been held, the Grand Mark Master having moreover been elected Grand Commander of the Ark Degree, its affairs were now vested in Grand Mark Lodge, which was prepared to issue warrants to Mark lodges empowering them to confer the degree.

Bro. Webster moved, and Bro. Stebbing seconded, "That the report of the General Board now read be received and entered on the minutes," which motion was carried.

Bro. James Stevens moved, and Bro. Col. Burdett seconded, "That the design for a tracing board, as recommended by the General Board, be approved and adopted, and that the thanks of the Grand Lodge be, and are hereby presented to Bro. S. Rosenthal, G. Director of Ceremonies, for his kindness in presenting the original painting to Grand Lodge."

Bro. Binckes stated that the tracing board to which this motion referred, and which was exhibited in the room, had been presented in the handsomest way to Grand Lodge by Bro. S. Rosenthal, who painted it.

The motion having been unanimously carried,

The M.W.G.M., addressing Bro. S. Rosenthal, said he had great pleasure in conveying to him the expression of the thanks of Grand Lodge.

Bro. H. C. Levander moved, and Bro. C. Hammerton seconded, "That the recommendation of the Board with reference to the jewel to be worn by brethren presiding at, or serving the office of Steward for, the Annual Benevolent Fund Festival, be approved and confirmed." The motion was then put and carried.

Bro. Gumbleton moved, and Bro. A. D. Loewenstark seconded, "That the sum of thirty guineas be placed at the disposal of the Grand Secretary as a special gratuity in consequence of the unusually large amount of business during the six months to 31st of March last, and which still continues."

The M.W.G.M. said there was an alternative proposition before the General Board which he would like to have the opinion of Grand Lodge upon. The work of Grand Secretary had increased very much with the progress made by this degree, inasmuch as there was not only the ordinary work of issuing the new certificates, but on every certificate a copy of the distinctive Mark of the brother whose certificate it was had to be drawn, and copied into the books of Grand Lodge. The gratuity proposed did no more than meet the case of the great labour already undergone, but the subject for consideration was the remuneration for the future, as, if the work went on increasing, there might be constant motions for remuneration brought before the brethren. If the sum of one shilling were granted to Grand Secretary for each certificate issued, according to the work would be the reward.

Bro. Gumbleton said there were several members of the Board who thought that a shilling should be allowed for every certificate above a certain number, say over 250.

Bro. Beach, P.G.M., thought this a very reasonable proposition, and he recommended that it should be referred back to the General Board for consideration.

The motion for the grant of £25 was then carried.

Bro. Davison moved, and Bro. Levander seconded, "That the report of the General Board be adopted."

Bro. Morton Edwards moved as an amendment the non-confirmation of that portion which referred to the Ark Mariner degree. There was at present a Grand Supreme Jurisdiction over this degree which had existed for some years, and though it had been in abeyance a considerable time, had recently been reconstituted. There was nothing in the management of that degree which called for any interference by another body. There were other minor considerations, the whole of which would, should the amendment be lost, be duly communicated to any brethren who might feel interested in the matter.

Bro. A. D. Loewenstark seconded the amendment, and stated that if the stipulations in the proposed treaty of union between the Mark and Ark degrees had been carried out, no amendment would have been proposed. Meeting after meeting had been held by the two bodies, and an agreement had been come to by resolution. This had not been fulfilled, and he consequently felt perfectly justified in seconding the amendment.

Bro. Binckes, in answer to the objections, would briefly state what had been done, and would also read a letter from the Grand Scribe of the Ark Mariner degree. The first meeting to which allusion had been made was composed of members of both the Mark and Ark degrees, at which nothing more important was done than the election of the Grand Master of the Mark degree as the head of the Ark Mariners, and the appointment of a committee of Ark Mariners to discuss with Mark Masons the terms of a final arrangement between the two bodies. After that, a meeting of the joint committee was held, and articles of agreement were drawn, talked over, and signed by the Grand Mark Master on the one hand and the brother styling himself Grand Commander of the Ark degree on the other. Those articles were afterwards modified, as read this day. At a subsequent meeting this treaty was again considered by the united committee, and certain modifications were agreed to by the representatives of the Royal Ark Mariners Lodge and Grand Mark Lodge. These were embodied in the minutes of March of the present year. A copy of the draft of a convention based on those minutes was sent by himself (Bro. Binckes) to Bro. Morton Edwards, who styled himself the Grand Commander of the Royal Ark Mariners' Lodge, and there was no objection to any one of the stipulations made; everything was conceded to that was thought reasonable. He had written to Bro. Edwards for that convention, and had waited and waited, and waited in vain, for a reply. At the first meeting there was rather a stormy discussion, but the brethren afterwards settled down and came to a thorough understanding as to what the articles of agreement should be. They were drafted and shown to Bro. Edwards, and a copy was given him, which he (Bro. Binckes) was quite ready to read; but he thought the matter might be shortened if he submitted to this Grand Lodge the following letter, which he had that afternoon received from Bro. Edwards:—

Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners,
Office, 1, Devereux-court, Strand,
London, W.C., June 6th, 1871.

The W. Bro. Fredk. Binckes,
Grand Secretary G.L.M.M.

W. Sir and Brother.—At a meeting of the Grand Council of the Order of the Royal Ark Mariners held on the 30th May last, the draft of the proposed treaty between the G.L. of R.A.M. and the G.L. of M.M., prepared by you, was submitted, and after a long discussion it was unanimously resolved, "That as it differed considerably from what had been agreed upon as the proposed basis of a treaty to be concluded between the two bodies, at the joint meeting of representatives held on March 7th last at Red Lion-square, the treaty be rejected."

I have therefore to inform you that a cheque will be forwarded for the amount advanced by the G.L.M.M. towards preliminary expenses for proposed attachment of the R.A.M. to the M.M. degree, less the cost of meetings, &c., &c., held by desire of and at the request of the G.L.M.M., as soon as the items of expenditure have been ascertained,

I remain, W. Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

(Sd.) M. A. LOEWENSTARK, G.S.

He contended that this letter not only shut the door positively against all attempts at conciliation, but said bluntly "We will send you back your cheque and have nothing more to do with you." Those were the facts of the case. This Grand Lodge had exhausted every means of making concession, and had failed in their object of uniting the two bodies.

Bro. Emmanuel was surprised that the proposal for a junction had fallen through, for he had thought the matter had been satisfactorily arranged by both parties at the meeting. He was sorry to hear the G. Secretary speak as though the differences which existed could not be healed. He (Bro. Emmanuel) had always advocated peaceful measures by waiving a little and giving a little. He had thought that that was the case, but seeing it was not, he would propose that the matter be deferred for the present and an attempt be made to reconcile their differences. Do not let such a thing as opposition be talked of.

The M.W.G.M. said it had never happened to him since he had had the honour of being Grand Master to decline the offer made to him of the adoption of a conciliatory course; but on this occasion he must honestly and candidly say that throughout this business he could not but feel that he had not been treated straightforwardly, but had been played fast-and-loose with. At the meeting referred to by the last speaker, the agreement was left in a plain and tangible form, and they had asked Bro. Edwards to agree to it. They had written to him till they were sick of writing letters, and ten days ago he (the Grand Master) got Grand Secretary to appoint a meeting with Bro. Morton Edwards. He did so, but although he (the Grand Master) attended, Bro. Edwards never appeared. He could not help feeling, and other brethren thought so, too, that there was a determination on the part of one or two brethren to carry out the organisation of the Ark degree, to spread it over the country, and then, perhaps, in six months to say to the Mark Grand Lodge: "We are such a strong body now that we shall not allow you to take us up." After giving the matter careful consideration—after considering the antiquity of the Ark Mariner degree, and whether Mark lodges could confer it (which they could, for Bro. Lazarus, who took it 50 years ago in a Mark lodge at Bath, was present and would testify to the power)—he must ask Grand Lodge to support him. It was his wish, as he had often said before, to work cordially with the Ark Mariner body, and it would still be his desire to meet the brethren composing that quasi Grand Body, and, if possible, come to terms with them upon the basis of the agreement come to at the meeting two months ago. But he thought that the letter received by Grand Secretary from Bro. Edwards shut the door against such a scheme because it said, in plain English, "We intend to work independently; we send you back your cheque, and will have nothing to do with you."

After a few words from Bros. Joshua Nunn and S. Rosenthal, Bro. James Stevens suggested, though he did not know that such was the case, that there might be some requirement on the part of the Ark Mariners that they should have some post of distinction in Grand Mark Lodge: there might be something of that kind which had prevented an arrangement being come to, but he saw no reason why, under ordinary circumstances, the arrangement should not be carried out. If it was, it might produce more satisfactory results than the Ark Mariner Lodge could effect by itself. They seemed to be standing in their own light, and he would recommend them to reconsider the course they were taking.

Bro. Morton Edwards would, as some imputations had been cast upon him for not keeping his appointments, that he had been keeping out of the way, explain that six weeks after the meeting in Red Lion-square he received the draft treaty, and a meeting of the Council of the Ark degree had to be called to consider it, and copies had to be given to them. That having been done, an appointment, not of his concurring in, was made to meet the Mark Masters. On that day he had certain business engagements which could not be put off, and the notice he had of the meeting was so short that he had not even time to let them know he could not attend. With respect to recent meetings, he could say he had been out of town, and only returned two hours ago. As to the Grand Master's connection with Ark Mariner, though he had written to THE FREEMASON that he had no connection with the Grand Lodge of Ark Mariners, he had been elected Grand Commander, but he was not by reason of his being Grand Mark Master, Grand Commander of Ark Mariners. That he (Bro. Edwards) totally disagreed with. The warrant of Grand Ark Lodge was as old as 1793, and the degree had been worked almost continuously ever since. The Mariners desired to have their rights intact. With regard to the draft treaty, the brethren differed so much from time to time that it was thought advisable to put an end to it. Grand Mark Lodge had issued circulars announcing their willingness to issue warrants to Mark lodges to work the Ark degree, and after such a step, he (Bro. Edwards) thought if an arrangement was come to between the two jurisdictions it must be formed on the basis of things existing as they had previously to the draft treaty.

Bro. Binckes enquired whether Bro. Edwards implied that the copy of the articles sent to him was not a fair and accurate copy of that agreed to, and approved of, at the meeting at which the Grand Mark Master was present?

Bro. Edwards said there were deviations. In the course of a discussion which followed, it appeared that the difference was not between the original draft as agreed to and its copy, but between the original parchment document that was before the brethren when the draft was made, and the draft after it had undergone revision at various meetings.

The M.W.G.M., before putting the motion and amendment, would just say a word. He was present at a joint committee of the two bodies, and, as he thought, they agreed on all that was to be done. He took some very rough notes of the points agreed on, and he also made some alterations on the original document. They agreed on all points but one or two; one was that Grand Mark Lodge was to take, and pay for, the ridiculous clothing and paraphernalia that Bro. Edwards had procured for the Ark Grand Lodge; another was that certain offices were to be given to Bro. Morton Edwards. From the altered document Grand Secretary drew up the articles of agreement, and set a copy of his draft to Bro. Edwards, and he would repeat, they tried to get a meeting with him. He (the Grand Master, was exceedingly anxious that the matter should be brought to a settlement. Of the antiquity of the degree there was no doubt, and there was no doubt also that it was conferred in Mark lodges. Bro. Lazarus told them that it was conferred on him in an old Mark lodge half a century ago. Bro. Hyde Clarke also agreed that this lodge had the power to work the degree. He (the Grand Master), while denying that the Ark Mariners Lodge were a separate supreme jurisdiction, was ready to come to any reasonable understanding with them in order that it might not be thought that among these degrees there was any disagreement.

The Grand Master then put the amendment, which, on a show of hands, was lost.

Bro. Emmanuel moved as a further amendment, "That the adoption of the report be deferred for the present," in order that some agreement might be come to. The difference was very trifling.

Bro. M. A. Loewenstark seconded it, but Bro. Emmanuel subsequently withdrew his amendment.

The motion, "That the report of the General Board be adopted," was then put, and carried unanimously.

The Grand Master drew attention to the next point, which was the ratification of the treaties with the Red Cross Order of Constantine, the 33rd degree, and the Knights Templar. He explained that the treaties were entered into for the purpose of mutual strength, and the articles of treaty made such provision that arbitrary conduct by any of the orders would be impossible. He had received the following letter from the Earl of Limerick about the treaty with these orders:

"88, Gloucester-place, Portman-square,
23rd May, 1871.

"My dear Grand Master,—I concur with you that the members of Rome and Constantine are entirely unaffected by the treaty, and that those who join that body hereafter will not be liable to any penalty.

"I am, yours fraternally,
(Signed) LIMERICK, G.S.W."

Bro. Levander seconded the Grand Master's motion for the ratification of the treaty, and the motion was thereupon carried.

Bro. Thomas Hargreaves proposed, and Bro. T. J. Sabine seconded, Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, M.A., for Grand Master for the ensuing year. The motion was carried amidst loud cheers, and Bro. W. W. B. Beach, P.G.M., declared him duly elected. The customary salutes were given, and

The M.W.G.M. said: I beg to thank you for placing me in this very responsible post for the third time, and I beg to assure you that my very best endeavours will be given, as they have been given, to promote the prosperity and progress of the order. I will now take the opportunity of saying again that no effort will be wanting on my part to arrange any differences that may exist between ourselves and other degrees. (Cheers.)

Bro. J. R. Stebbing was re-elected G. Treasurer. The following is the list of Grand Officers for the year:—

Earl Percy .. ..	D.G.M.
Lord Skelmersdale ..	G.S.W.
J. C. Parkinson .. ..	G.J.W.

Bros. Emmanuel, Dewar, Butten, Koch, Abrahams, Spiers, Webster, and C. R. Davy were appointed Grand Stewards.

Bros. Meggy, Rosenthal, Binckes, Levander, Benson, Spiers, Wynn, Stevens, Sabine, and Davidson were appointed the General Board.

The G. Master then presented the charity jewel to Bros. Meggy, Rosenthal, Levander, Binckes, Spencer, Sabine, and Shaboe, and the Rev. J. Huyshe presented one to the Grand Master.

The next Grand Summer Festival, it was announced, would take place at the end of July, and Bros. Spiers, Davidson, Parkinson, Dawson, and Shaboe offered their services as Stewards.

This closed the proceedings of Grand Lodge, and the brethren adjourned to BANQUET.

At the clearing of the cloth, grace was sung, and the customary toasts were drunk.

Bro. R. A. Benson proposed "The Health of the M.W.G.M." Mark Masonry, under him, had spread north, east, south, and west. The number of certificates issued would, a few months ago, have passed man's understanding. He congratulated the order on possessing such a chief, and judging from what they had seen in the past, he had no doubt that, under his government, the Mark Degree would continue to prosper.

The M.W.G.M., in reply, said he was pleased to inform the brethren that the degree was making rapid strides; and he might inform the brethren that a meeting had been held, with delegates from Scotland and Ireland, as to the recognition of the English Mark Grand Lodge by Grand Lodge of Scotland and Grand Chapter of Ireland. The meeting was a large one, and lasted two days. The proceedings were exceedingly amicable, and it was very satisfactory to him to have to announce this. As far as his visits to lodges were concerned, he was able to say that the Mark working was improving, the regularity of the meetings was getting greater, and larger interest was being taken in the degree.

The next toasts were "The Past Grand Masters" and "The Deputy Grand Master and the Grand Officers, present and past." To this latter toast Bro. J. C. Parkinson replied, and expressed his high sense of gratification at the kind reception given to his name. If the Grand Master was happy in having the services of the Grand Officers, they, at least, were proud of being able to serve with loyalty and Masonic affection a Grand Master who was so able to wield the gavel he held, and who had for more years than Mark Masons knew asserted the privileges of the Order, and that essential freedom which was one of the fundamental principles which all Masons supported.

The toast of "The Provincial Grand Masters" was responded to by Bro. Perkinson (Lodge 58, Fearnley, Halifax), and Bro. T. Meggy proposed "The Masonic Institutions, and Prosperity to the Mark Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund." Bro. Levander returned thanks, and the last toast of "Friends and Visitors" drew an excellent speech from Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, of the province of West Lancashire.

The brethren then separated. The musical arrangements were highly satisfactory, and some beautiful glees were performed by Bros. Coward, Carter, Jekyll, and Distin, under Bro. John Read, Grand Organist.

PROV. GRAND MARK LODGE OF SOMERSET.

The first regular meeting of the newly-constituted Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons for Somerset was held at the Assembly Rooms, Weston-super-Mare, on Monday, the 29th ultimo. There was a numerous attendance of brethren of the Mark degree (in addition to local brethren) from Bristol, Bath, Brislington, Bridgwater, Wincanton, Ilminster, London, &c. Amongst them were Bros. the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy G. Craft Master of England; Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart., M.P., P.G.M.M. Cornwall; Fredk. Binckes, Sec. G.M.L. England; Captain Irwin, Major-General Munbee, General Doherty, Major Vizard, Captain Townshend, Capt. Bramble, Rev. R. H. Bigsby, E. T. Payne, R. C. Else, W. H. Davies, F. Vizard, E. T. Inskip, W. S. Gillard, J. Sharpe, C. H. Shepherd, T. Clarke, B. Cox, R. Hunt, S. Jones, A. W. Butter, E. Gregory, L. Ricketts, P. T. Dick, R. Pearson, C. H. Whereat, E. S. Jones, R. Gregory, Lieut. MacFarlane, Lieut. Wiltshire, W. H. Beedle, T. Beedle, S. Lewis, E. White, and many other Mark Masons. Bro. Lieut. MacFarlane, of Bristol, presided at the organ.

Sir F. Williams (who had come from Cornwall specially for the occasion) presided. He read the charter constituting this Prov. Grand Lodge, and then proceeded through the ceremony of installing the Earl of Carnarvon as Grand Master of Somerset.

The Noble Grand Master appointed the following brethren as his Provincial Grand Officers:—

The Earl of Carnarvon .. ..	G.M.
Capt. F. G. Irwin, Brislington ..	D.G.M.
General Munbee, Weston-super-Mare ..	S.G.W.

After the beautiful ceremonials, the Grand Lodge terminated with the closing hymn.

The brethren then retired to the banqueting-room, and sat down to a most recherché and well-served banquet, provided by Bro. Wickenden, of High-street. The Earl of Carnarvon presided, and the vice chairs were occupied by Bros. General Munbee and Else. After refreshment, a number of highly-interesting speeches were delivered. The great advance of Mark Masonry, not only in Somerset but throughout the land, was a matter of attention.

The Grand Master left about 10.30, and proceeded to his apartments at the Royal Hotel.

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. JOHN BUCHANAN.

The brethren of Lodge Clyde, No. 408, entertained their Past Master, Bro. John Buchanan, in the Waverley Hotel, Sauchiehall-street, on Wednesday evening, 24th May, and presented him with a gold lever watch, gold albert and locket, gold signet ring, and gold-mounted ebony walking stick; also to Mrs. Buchan a beautiful gold brooch, earrings, and gold guard.

Bro. William Lindsay, R.W.M. 408, presided, and was ably supported by several eminent members of the Craft.

The Chairman, in his opening remarks, alluded to the prosperity of the lodge during Bro. Buchanan's reign, and was proud to say that the testimonial was given most heartily by the members of the lodge and other brethren.

Bro. Buchanan, on being presented with the articles, said: Mr. Chairman, ladies, gentlemen, and brethren, I will not seek to tax your patience with any lengthened speech, but with your kind indulgence, will say a few words. My connection with the Lodge Clyde dates as far back as ten years, and during that period I have filled several offices in the lodge, latterly that of S.W., and as my term of office expired, it was my ambition to become Master. The chair was then bestowed upon me in a manner most pleasing to my highest expectations. I have always striven for an amicable feeling and proper adjustment in lodge matters, and it is no boast in me to say that I have been so far successful, for my humble efforts have been directed for the good of the Craft. Believe me, I do feel quite unable to convey to you the warm expressions of my heart for the really beautiful and valuable articles which you, brethren, have been so kind as to present to my better half and myself. That the recollections of this occasion shall never be effaced from my mind, but will ever stir up in my bosom the deepest emotions of gratitude towards those who have so kindly shown to us both this token of their respect and esteem; and in the future it shall be with proud satisfaction that I can point to these presents, and say they are ours—these my friends have given me, for, as long as memory keeps her seat, my happy duty will be to keep them as dear remembrances of many dear friends. I know I do fail to express all I should to you; but of this I am sure, and for it you will give me credit, that what is wanting in words is more than made up in my feeling to you all. And before I sit down, allow me, on behalf of Mrs. Buchanan and myself, to thank you most sincerely from the bottom of my heart for this handsome testimonial.

The various toasts being given and responded to, that of "The Guests of the Evening" was proposed by Brother A. M'Pherson, P.G.S., in a rhythmical speech for which we regret not having space this week.

Bro. T. Stewart, P.M. Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73, in a most efficient style, gave "The Two Croupiers," which was replied to by Bro. D. Donnie, S.W., in an equally good manner.

A concert enlivened the proceedings of the evening, at which artists of the Order rendered due harmony.

An assembly followed, at which old and young showed great spirit. When high twelve was proclaimed, each was sorry to part but happy to meet again. The catables and liquors did Mrs. Crawford great credit.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF BENGAL.

A Quarterly Communication of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 21st March, 1871. Present: R.W. Bro. Hugh David Sandeman, C.S., District Grand Master; W. Bros. H. H. Locke, Deputy District Grand Master; W. Clark, Past Deputy District Grand Master; G. H. Daly, M.D., Past Deputy District Grand Master; J. P. Kennedy, D.S.G.W.; W. B. Farr, D.J.G.W.; J. Mackintosh, P.D.G.W.; J. H. Linton, D.G. Treasurer; Capt. W. G. Murray, D.G. Secretary; I. L. Taylor, D.G.J.D.; G. Keighley, Past D.G. Deacon; W. E. Ball, Past D.G. Deacon; Col. J. M. Campbell, D.G. Superintendent of Works; W. O. Allender, D.G. Dir. of Cers.; Bros. W. B. Mac-tavish, as Asst. Dir. of Cers.; W. G. Amos, Past Asst. Dir. of Cers.; T. C. Gill, as D.G. Sword Bearer; W. Bros. Major H. DeR. Pigott, as Standard Bearer; Bros. J. Vangelder, D.G. Org.; R. Harvey, as D.G. Pursuivant; Captain G. G. Nelson, W. H. McGowan, E. Healey, and T. H. Henty, D.G. Stewards; G. Alexander, D.G. Tyler; D. J. Daniel, Past D.G. Tyler. The following lodges were also represented, viz.:—Star in the East, 67; Industry and Perseverance, 109; True Friendship, 218; Humility with Fortitude, 229; Marine, 233; Courage with Humanity, 392; St. John, 486; Excelsior, 825; St. Luke, 848; Temperance and Benevolence, 1160. Visitors: R.W. Bro. Major C. McW. Mercer (District Grand Master of the Punjab), W. Bros. C. H. Harris (W.M. Lodge 401 of Scotland), A. B. Mitchell (W.M. Lodge 404 of Scotland), Bros. J. H. Nickels (229), Capt. J. Wilson (392), J. Woodmason (486), J. Watson (486), W. Hunt (486), J. Batson (486), R. M. Wibrow (1160), E. Green (1160), E. Coy, T. Tournerie, and W. G. Macpherson.

The District Grand Lodge was opened in due form at 6.45 p.m.

The District Grand Secretary reported the receipt of apologies from the undernamed brethren for unavoidable non-attendance:—W. Bros. F. Powell, M.D. (Past District Grand Warden), J. H. DeSalis (Past District Grand Warden), D. J. Zemin (D.G. Registrar), Col. H. R. Wroughton (District Senior Grand Deacon), Bro. T. Carritt (D.G. Steward).

The minutes of the Communication of the 27th December, 1870, having been printed and circulated, were, on motion of the District Grand Master, taken as read, and on being put to the vote were confirmed.

The R.W. the District Grand Master rose and said: W. Brethren,—Before addressing Grand Lodge, I wish to call your attention to the circumstance of our being honoured this evening by a visit from the District Grand Master of the Punjab. I am confident that every member of this Grand Lodge will be glad of the opportunity of welcoming the R.W. Brother, and I ask you to salute him with the Royal sign seven times, taking your time from the Grand Director of Ceremonies.

The brethren assembled accordingly, saluted R.W. Bro. Major Mercer with the Royal sign seven times, and the District Grand Master having addressed to him a few suitable words of fraternal welcome, requested him to take his seat on the immediate right of the chair.

The District Grand Master then addressed Grand Lodge as follows:—I have this evening to ask your attention to more than ordinarily important business, in the consideration of a report from the Committee which was nominated at our last Quarterly Communication to revise the by-laws of this District Grand Lodge. Our by-laws are out of print, and it is always desirable when re-printing to examine them thoroughly, and to take the opportunity of making such alterations as may appear to be advisable without disturbing the landmarks of the Order. You are aware that any decision at which we may arrive must be submitted to the Grand Master in England for his lordship's approval and confirmation before they can pass into law; and it was on this ground that I asked the Committee to submit their report at an early date, in order that unnecessary delay might be avoided. You will observe that the Committee have recommended some very important modifications, among which I may mention the removal of the anomalous position of the District Grand Master, who has hitherto been permitted by courtesy only to take any active share in the general business of Committees of Grand Lodge, in which, as local head of the Order, he must necessarily have a lively interest; and the adaptation of the rules regarding the Fund of Benevolence to those which obtain in the Grand Lodges of the parent country. I will not now take up your time by entering into detail upon the many recommendations of the Committee, as they will be laid, one by one, before you. I would, however, generally express my concurrence in the views of the Committee, whom I beg to thank for the promptness with which they have dealt with the question. The report of the Finance Committee appears satisfactory, the balance against the District Grand Lodge Fund being reduced from Rs. 813 to Rs. 454. The Finance Committee notice that two lodges in Calcutta are in arrears, but that it is believed that these arrears will be paid up before the end of next quarter, and I am authorised to state that one of the lodges has already done so. This is a marked improvement upon what I have had occasionally to report, and I hope soon to see the time when arrears will be reported as cases of rare exception. Of the twenty-one lodges in Bengal, Lodge Anchor and Hope is in abeyance, its warrant having been withdrawn in accordance with the recommendation of the Finance Committee, and my action upon it as approved by this District Grand Lodge at our last Quarterly Communication. Fears have been entertained that Lodge Dalhousie, at Mussoorie, may fall into abeyance, but I have hopes that this may still be averted. A new lodge is under construction at Dum-Dum, under the able superintendence of W. Bro. Taylor and others, who have paid me the compliment of naming it after me. I need scarcely add that I appreciate this compliment very highly, and I sincerely hope that the lodge may prove to be a prosperous one. Of the state of the lodges in Calcutta I have already spoken, and I would mention that of the Mofussil lodges seven have paid all dues and sent in their returns correctly; two have partly paid, but their returns being imperfect has necessitated our holding their money in suspense; while one is, I regret to say, in arrears for 1869 and 1870, and it will be necessary to enforce penalties if it continues to disregard the applications made to it from time to time for payment. The sale of the "Masonic Diary" in 1871 has been successful, though it is marvellous to me that it is not very much greater, considering the large number of subscribing Masons on our lodge rolls. I have to report that the monument to the memory of our late Bro. John Jacob Louis Hoff, at St. Andrew's Kirk, has been completed, and reported upon favourably by the Grand Superintendent of Works. I have been requested by the District Grand Secretary to announce that he is anxious to obtain possession of copies of the proceedings of the Quarterly Communications of this District Grand Lodge held in June, 1847, 1850, and 1852; September, 1852; November, 1848; December, 1840, 1841, 1849, 1851, and 1852, in order to complete the record of our proceedings from the date of the establishment of the (then) Provincial Grand Lodge in 1840. Should any brother have copies of any or all of the above proceedings, I would feel much obliged if he would kindly lend them to our V.W. Brother, who will return them, if desired, to the owner after taking copies, after which steps may be taken to reprint the whole of the proceedings in octavo size, with an index of contents, should a sufficient number of subscribers come forward to support the publication. I would like to say a word in favour of the Masonic Herald, an excellent publication recently started by Bro. Burroughs; and would solicit the aid of brethren by subscriptions in promoting the success of this journal.

The report of the Finance Committee was read and passed.

Some alterations and additions were made to the by-laws of District Grand Lodge.

The District Grand Master directed the District Grand Secretary to forward a copy of the amended by-laws, with as little delay as possible, to the Grand Secretary of England, in order to obtain the approval and counter-signature of the M.W. the Grand Master, without which they could not pass into law.

A collection was made for the Fund of Benevolence, when the District Grand Secretary announced the amount to be Rs. 111, which was handed over to the District Grand Treasurer.

There being no further business, the District Grand Lodge was closed in due form at 8.10 p.m.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Palpitation of the Heart is frequently not only felt but heard, prevents sleep, and begets the utmost dread of impending suffocation. These pills are particularly recommended for removing this affection, because they strengthen the nervous and the debilitated who are much more liable to this malady than other persons. Holloway's Pills so improve the digestion, increase the action of the liver, and give activity to the bowels, that giddiness, headache, and nausea depart as the palpitation diminishes, and the sufferer at once experiences the most indescribable relief from anxiety. Holloway's Pills form the best alterative and aperient in all cases of convalescence from fevers, inflammations, neuralgia, and all chronic diseases which have impoverished the blood and brain.—[Advt.]

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by my physician as 'past care.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., Lpool, Jan. 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

TEA ADULTERATION.—The adulterations practised before import are varied and disgusting. They consist in "facing" common tea with deleterious substances, in drying up foreign leaves (chiefly those of the willow) along with tea, and in redrying leaves which have already passed through the pots of the celestials, and which are doubtless considered quite good enough for us barbarians. A great trade has lately sprung up in this branch of industry, and the result is known as "Maloo mixture." It seems that the leaves are industriously collected and spread out to dry in the sun, when they again become shrivelled, and besides being thus, after a little facing, rendered saleable, they form a most excellent resting-place for the pigs and other domestic animals attached to the cottage of the manufacturer.—Food Journal.

REPORT of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, Analyst of the "Lancet" Sanitary Commission, Author of "Food and its Adulterations," &c., &c., on Mayar's Semolina: "I have carefully tested, chemically and microscopically, the samples of Semolina sent by Messrs. L. Mayar & Co., 36, Mark Lane, London, E.C. I find them to be perfectly genuine, of excellent quality, and eminently nutritious. They contain a very large percentage of nitrogenous matter, chiefly gluten, and are far more nutritious than any other food, such as Arrowroot, Tapioca, Sago, Corn Flour, Farinaceous Food, ordinary Wheat Flour, or any of the Cereals in use as food in this country.—(Signed) ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D., London."—Highly recommended by the Faculty for Infants, Invalids, &c. Makes delicious Pudding, Custards, Blanc Mange, &c. After a trial no family will be without Mayar's Semolina.

SMALL-POX, FEVERS, AND SKIN DISEASES.—The predisposition to is prevented by Lamplough's Pyreic Saline. Vitalising and invigorating, its effects are remarkable in their cure and prevention. Take it as directed. Sold by chemists and the maker, H. Lamplough, 113, Holborn-hill.—[Advt.]

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.—Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to Crosby's Balsamic Cough Elixir, as the true remedy.—Select Testimonial. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, Pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of pulmonary consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."—This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats, of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. "Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

FREEMASONRY & ISRAELITISM.

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

IV.

The utterances of deep anguish found in those eloquent and touching strains which come down to us as the "Lamentations of Jeremiah," bring vividly before us the awful change which had passed over the beautiful land occupied by the two nations, Israel and Judah. The people had been carried captive into distant and strange countries; the towns and villages were so devastated that lions and other beasts of prey multiplied in the land; the fortifications and walls of the capitals, Samaria and Jerusalem, were thrown down, heaps of ruins marked the spots where the royal palaces and the buildings of the princes and elders had seen many a day of rejoicing and revelry, and the sacred edifice, which had survived the faith and piety it was intended to foster, was consigned to the flames. The prophet, looking beyond the devastation of his own nation, extended his sympathies to Israel, and forgetting in its present sad condition the bitterness and hostility which had, from the beginning, existed between the two nations, saw only their common ruin, and his pathetic lamentations embraced them both—"The Lord hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, and hath not pitied; He hath thrown down in his wrath the strongholds of the daughters of Judah; He hath brought down to the ground; He hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof; He hath cut off, in fierce anger, all the horn of Israel. . . . The Lord was an enemy; He hath swallowed up Israel, He hath swallowed up all her palaces; He hath destroyed his strongholds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation; He hath cast off his altar, He hath abhorred his sanctuary, He hath given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; He hath made the rampart and the wall to lament; her gates are sunk into the ground; He hath destroyed and broken her bars; her kings and her princes are among the Gentiles. Mine eyes do fill with tears, my bowels are troubled, my liver is poured upon the earth for the destruction of the daughter of my people" (Lam. ii.). What a land! what a mourning!

But how could such a condition of things be brought about, while the promises made to the fathers remained on record? Had not God promised to give the land to Abraham and to his seed "for ever"—"for an everlasting possession" (Gen. xiii. 15; xvii. 8)? Yes; and these promises were renewed to Isaac (xxvi. 3), and to Jacob (xlvi. 4). How are we to reconcile the facts with the promises? There can be no more doubt that the promises were made than that the land was desolated and the people deported into distant countries, various idolatrous people being sent into Israel, which is now trodden down by the foot of strangers, who wander through it as the children of the promise wander through strange lands. "Is God a man that he should lie, or the son of man that he should repent?" No, "Let God be true, and every man a liar." In Him "there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." He will "perform the truth to Jacob and the mercy to Abraham, which He has sworn to our fathers from the days of old" (Micah vii. 20). As truly as the threatening of punishment, in the desolation of their land and the scattering of themselves throughout the earth has been fulfilled—as it is written on the pages of history, and as we have it before our eyes from day to day—so also will the promises of pardon and restoration, and future and everlasting blessedness follow. "Fear not, thou, O my servant, Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel, for behold I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed, from the land of captivity; I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee, but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure, yet will I not utterly cut thee off" (Jer. xli. 27, 28). "I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth. . . . Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, . . . and I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them in their own land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord God" (Amos ix.) It is herein that the word and faithfulness of God will be vindicated. "It shall come to pass in that day, the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. . . . and there shall be a highway for the remnant of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel in the day when he came up out of the land of Egypt" (Isaiah xi. 11-16). See also Isaiah xxvii. 12; Jer. iii. 18-23; Ezek. xxxvii. 21-25; Amos ix. 14, 15; Obad. 15-20; &c.

I have quoted and referred to these passages, in order to show that the restoration of Judah and Israel to the land that was promised them for "an everlasting possession" does not rest upon any casual expression or ambiguous promise, but upon many expressions and promises that are clear, explicit, and incontestable; and I take it that no one who has read history, which so demonstrably shows the fulfilment of the threatenings of punishment and dispersion of Israel and Judah, can doubt the ultimate and literal fulfilment of the promises of their restoration to the land of promise, and their establishment and glory there. The remnant of Judah we know. They are amongst us, as they are amongst all the nations of which we have knowledge. They are with us, although they are not of us; and we can count, or have had counted for us, four or five millions of them, who, surviving the persecutions and sufferings of many ages, still cling to Moses, and say, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning! Let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I do not remember thee; and if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy" (Ps. cxxxvii, 5, 6). Everywhere, their identity may be recognised. They retain their traditions, their ceremonies, their traits of nationality, of exclusiveness, and of type. They are to be found in every part of the world—in Europe, from Norway to Gibraltar; in Africa, from Algiers to the Cape of Good Hope; in Asia, from Cochinchina to the Caucasus, from Jaffa to Peking; in America, from Monte Video to Quebec. In Australia, they live, as here, separate from other people in their usages and worship; and they have given proofs of their power of acclimatisation under the tropics, where people of European origin have always failed to perpetuate themselves. These are of Judah—the two tribes. But where is Israel—the ten tribes? That is a question which has occupied men's minds for centuries; and there is no end of the discoveries that have been made of the hiding-place of these lost tribes. That they exist we know, for "the sure word of prophecy" has said that though they are sifted amongst all nations not a grain shall fall to the ground. Did they return with Judah—the two tribes—when they went up from Babylon, and with them re-occupy the land? We have no evidence of such a return. No doubt while the Jews were captives in Babylon some few of the other tribes may have come down and become united with them, but the nation did not do so. After Judah had returned, Samaria, the once capital of Israel, continued in possession of the Gentile nations, who had been sent thither from the north, and who had united the worship of Jehovah with that of the false gods, and between whom and the Jews a complete alienation and antipathy existed. The Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans.

Where, then, is Israel? The most remarkable circumstance attending their captivity, perhaps, is the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of finding them. They have been searched for in every quarter of the world, and every now and then history records something touching the discovery of a portion of the long lost tribes. In Tartary, China, Japan, Turkey, Afghanistan, Burmah, Malabar, Abyssinia, North and South America, and other countries, they are said to have been found, the customs and traditions of various tribes or small communities of people leading to their identification with Israel. There is no doubt that the traditions and usages of certain bodies of people, in different parts of the earth, bear a striking resemblance or affinity to the Israelites; and it is not improbable that from the countries north of Assyria some portions of them have made their way thither, without much difficulty, as a glance at a map will show; but there is no reason to believe that the whole people, nor even the principal part of them, thus disposed of themselves. On the contrary, as we shall by-and-by see, their destination appears to have been of a different kind, and to have been in a different direction.

The ABUSE of MASONIC CHARITY.

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON,

Author of "Freemasonry in Relation to Civil Authority and the Family Circle."

We have received information of a practice prevailing to some extent in Glasgow—and perhaps also in other parts of Scotland, although of this we are not certain—which cannot too soon be exposed, and the exposure of which, we trust, will be sufficient to put an end to it, for it is highly prejudicial to the interests of Freemasonry and to the honour of the Masonic Order. Our Scottish brethren are particularly bound to look to it, as it is confined to their bounds, and the very possibility of it depends upon points in their system or mode of conducting their affairs, to which we will presently advert, in which they differ, and we think unhappily differ, from their English brethren. A club is formed, the members of which make weekly payments of one shilling each to its funds, in order to raise the money requisite to be paid on the admission of any of their number into a Masonic lodge. When two or three pounds have been collected, lots are cast, and the member of the club who is fortunate on this occasion receives the money and employs it for the purpose of obtaining admission into a lodge. He is made a Freemason, and if he has any virtuous principle or feelings of honour, he goes on to make payments to the club as before, at least until his payments have equalled in amount the sum which he has received. He ought, rather, to continue his payments until every member of the club has received the requisite sum, and has been made a Mason, or has applied for admission into a lodge and has been rejected. But possibly he is a stranger from a distant part of the country, merely working for a time as a journeyman in the city where the club exists, and after having received his Masonic certificate he goes away to work somewhere else, and is no more heard of by his fellow-members of the club. We have heard, on authority which we deem worthy of credit, that many men have obtained admission into lodges through the aid of these clubs who have never afterwards made any payment to the clubs, or maintained any connection with them. It might be supposed that this would be enough to put an end to the existence of the clubs; but such is not the case—they go on as before, new members probably joining them, the chance of success forming their inducement, as in any gambling affair.

The man who has obtained admission into a lodge carries off his certificate, and proceeds to claim the enjoyments of all Masonic privileges wherever he may go. In particular, if visited with sickness or calamity of any kind, he is prompt to claim the charitable aid of his brethren, which men thus obtaining admission are more apt to claim and more likely to need than any others, as they seldom are men of high character or of industrious, sober, and provident habits. It ought to be expected that every candidate for admission into the Masonic Order should be industrious, sober, and provident; and in the case of a working man, some proof of this would be found in his being ready to pay the money requisite for his entrance into a lodge. But the case is entirely altered if a man is admitted in virtue of a few payments to a club. He who lays up his money in a savings' bank, and draws it on the occasion of his admission to a lodge, is, generally speaking, a very different man, and far more worthy of respect than he who comes forward with the money of the club in his hand, obtained by the casting of lots, and without regard to the number of shillings which he has paid. The system is attractive to a class of men who ought never to be admitted into the Masonic Order at all, and of whom, when they are admitted, their brethren have no reason to be proud.

It has long appeared to us to be a weak point in Scottish Freemasonry that no inquiry is made into the circumstances of applicants for admission. Were such inquiry made, as it is in all English lodges, there would be no such clubs as we have described, nor would persons such as are ordinarily their members ever find admission into the Masonic Brotherhood. The admission of such persons brings discredit on the Order, and is, in fact, an injustice to all its reputable members, who find themselves called upon more frequently than they otherwise would for the relief of necessitous brethren; and often when they cannot think that these ought ever to have been numbered amongst their brethren, or that their necessities are the result of such unforeseen and unpreventable misfortune as ought to call forth their charity. There is a tendency in such circumstances to the restriction—perhaps even to the undue restriction—of that charity which Freemasonry requires all members of the Order to cultivate, and to display one towards another. But if Freemasons often find themselves called upon to give pecuniary assistance to persons who are evidently not of sober and industrious habits, they almost of necessity begin to hesitate about giving, or give less liberally than they otherwise would; and truly-deserving brethren, sufferers from calamities which could neither be foreseen nor prevented, may receive the less because of the importunities of those who ought never to have been received into the Brotherhood at all. For, certainly, no man ought to be made a Mason who is not of good reputation, as sober, industrious, decently providing for his own support and that of his family—or, if a young and unmarried man, apparently in circumstances such that he may reasonably be expected to maintain a family when he shall have one. The laws of Freemasonry require that he who shall be admitted into the Order shall be a man having all the members of his body perfect and unimpaired. It is no disgrace to a man to have lost an eye or a limb; and if this happens to be a Freemason, he is received in his lodge with as much honour as before, but it would be a complete disqualification in a candidate for admission, the ancient law which determines this—one, in fact of the landmarks—being evidently founded upon a regard for the symbolisation of that perfection at which it is the object of Freemasonry to aim. It is even more important, however, that the avenues of Masonic lodges should be closed against those who are morally imperfect, the slothful, and the dissolute. Moreover, the understanding on which men join the Brotherhood, and become subject to the obligation of contributing to the relief of distressed brethren, is that all who are admitted are men in reputable circumstances—not men at present in need, or likely to be soon in need of charitable assistance. The ancient landmark just referred to requires that the man who is to be made a Mason should be sound in body and mind, hale and healthy, and able to do a good day's work. But it is notorious that many who have been admitted in Scotland were not so at the date of their admission; but were both physically and morally disqualified, their habits of life making the moral disqualification too evident. We know that men sometimes apply for admission into lodges in Scotland with the very purpose of taking advantage of the Masonic law of charity, and that some within a few weeks after being admitted have gone to their Masonic brethren to beg. Is it wonderful that in such circumstances the fountains of charity are at least partially dried up, or that its streams flow less freely than they otherwise might and ought?

There is a great contrast between Scottish and English Freemasonry in the points to which we have referred. The practice of, we believe, all the lodges in Scotland is, as we have described it, to make no inquiry into the circumstances of candidates for admission, and no declaration on this subject is required of the candidate, or of those who propose or introduce him. In England, on the contrary, we believe there is no lodge in which such inquiry is not made. The candidate for admission is asked if he is in reputable circumstances, and makes a declaration, amounting in solemnity to an oath, that he is. The brethren who propose and introduce him make a similar declaration on his behalf. It is not enough that he merely pays the fees. In Scotland, this seems to be all that is required. No question is asked. Another difference between the Scottish and English systems on which we think judgment must be given in favour of the latter system, is this: that in England there is in every lodge—we believe it is the case in every lodge—an annual test of membership in the payment of fees, the amount not being less, in any lodge that we have heard of, than eight shillings. In Scotland, there is nothing of this kind. No annual payment is required. The initiation fees being paid, the Mason is liable to no further demands. And what are the consequences? The lodge must have money to sustain its expenses, and the money being only to be obtained from the fees at initiation of members, there is necessarily a disposition to admit all who apply, and many are admitted who ought not to be admitted. Opportunity is thus given to needy and unscrupulous persons to take advantage of Freemasonry, and, in particular, of its great law of charity, for their own behoof. A German Jew—we mention a class of cases not unfrequent—applies for and gains admission into a lodge, and forthwith he obtains the names and addresses of all the Freemasons in the district, visits them, makes himself known as a brother, and asks them to purchase trinkets, etc., which they sell at a pretendedly cheap rate, but really a price far above the value of the articles. Nothing can be more discreditable to Freemasonry, and it is not to the honour of the Scottish lodges that their practice affords opportunity for it.

We hope our Scottish brethren will adopt some rule of inquiry into the character and circumstances of candidates for admission, such as will render it impossible for any man to take undue advantage of that law of charity which is a distinguishing glory of Freemasonry. Were such a rule adopted by all the Scottish lodges, there would be a speedy end of the Glasgow clubs to which we have referred, and of all such clubs, if they exist elsewhere than in Glasgow. There would be also a more general confidence amongst brethren as to applicants for assistance that their cases are really proper for relief and a greater readiness and liberality in giving, whilst the honour of the Order would be maintained by the exclusion. The clubs only serve the purpose of bringing into the Order men whom for its very honour it would be most desirable to exclude—inferior workmen, such as are well-known in Scotland as botches—men who cannot do a good day's work and very generally care little about doing it.

THE HIGH DEGREES.

I have read with a good deal of interest the notes bearing on the above subject that have appeared at intervals in this year's FREEMASON, and as it appears to me that the Craft in England is settling down more or less into a state of things that has for a long time been normal here in Ireland, I may perhaps be permitted to say a little on the subject from an Irish point of view.

The readers of THE FREEMASON will have learned from the sketch of our Irish Constitution, contributed by Bro. HUGHAN, that the Society of Freemasons here, including as such all the degrees, is governed by four bodies, namely, The Grand Lodge, the Grand Royal Arch Chapter, the Grand High Knight Templar Conclave, and the Supreme Grand Council of Rites. Those four bodies are in alliance with each other, and mutually support each other's authority. So that, for instance, if a brother should be suspended or expelled by any one of them, the mere official notification of the fact to any of the others ensures his suspension or expulsion from the body so notified, without any further enquiry and without the right of appeal to such branch of the Order.

The Supreme Grand Council of Rites has for a long time assumed the entire control of all the degrees beyond the H.K.T., and while a brother may, without impropriety, request to have his name sent forward to a Royal Arch Chapter or a Knight Templar Encampment to be balloted for as a member, the mere fact of his seeking admittance to a Rose Croix Chapter is taken as sufficient to debar him from that honour. He must wait till the Prince Masons see fit to select him for the degree, and "call him up" to share their dignity; and he is supposed to be in utter ignorance on the subject till his admission has been finally decided, when he has the privilege of either declining the honour or of paying the usual fees and of being initiated.

When to this fact is added another, that the candidate, after having passed the ballot in the chapter in which he has been proposed, has to be again balloted for in the Council of Rites, it is easily seen that it is practically impossible for any one not considered eligible, from the S.G.C. point of view, to gain admission to Rose Croix Masonry in Ireland.

It is pretty well understood that, no matter how deserving a brother may be, no matter how desirous a private Rose Croix Chapter may be to admit him, he is sure to be excluded by the final ballot, unless he belongs to a particular "set," or that his social position, worldly means, or aristocratic connections entitle him to a place among the "higher orders" of our "Ancient and Honourable" Fraternity.

As a consequence, the "higher degrees" in Ireland are, Masonically, almost worthless. Of course to outsiders a "Sovereign Prince," when he makes his appearance at one of our public displays in all the gorgeous array of his rank, is a very imposing personage, and they may come to the conclusion that it is owing to his services to the Craft, and his Masonic attainments, he owes the position which he holds. But the initiated know better. When time after time we find the ranks of the "high degrees" recruited by the accession of brethren who may be, and indeed frequently are, possessed of good social qualities and personal worth, but who have never given much time or attention to Masonry, and would find it perhaps difficult to fulfil with propriety many of its duties—while others equally suitable as Masons, and far superior as working Masons, are kept "out in the cold"—we can come to no other conclusion than that the "aristocratic" element, so foreign in its spirit to the first principles of Masonry, has full sway over the "high degrees," and that their possession is not by any means to be accepted as a gauge of true Masonic worth.

I do not, of course, pretend to be quite conversant with what I may call the "politics" of English Masonry, but I have given the subject some little attention, and it seems to me that a crisis has come, when either submission to the "Golden-square Council of the 33°," or secession from the recognised governing body of the Templars, is inevitable.

By the compact with the S.G.C., as given in last Saturday's FREEMASON, the claim of the S.G.C. is admitted and recognised by the Grand Conclave of Templars "as the sole supreme authority in the A. and A. Rite of 33°, from and exclusive of the M.M. and R.A. degrees, up to and including 33°." Now it is a proved fact that the Red Cross, K.H., and other degrees belong to the Templar Order, and that the control assumed over them by the S.G.C. is simply and plainly an unwarranted act of usurpation. Several encampments have, I believe, retained and exercised their right of giving those degrees, and at least one, "The Baldwyn," has never recognised the authority of the S.G.C. But those encampments are, I presume, under the jurisdiction of the Grand Conclave, and must now elect whether they will tamely surrender their ancient rights and privileges at the bidding of the S.G.C. 33°, or run the almost certain risk of suspension by the Grand Conclave for non-compliance with the recent compact. It may be that certain privileges may be conferred on such encampments to induce their adherence but we have a recent case in the "Antiquity," of Bath, where such retention of privileges has not saved them from suspension—if their statement be true, and we have yet to see it contradicted—without any formal charge being brought against them, and without any opportunity being afforded them of defence or disproof.

It does seem to me that such encampments as are resolved to maintain their ancient rights, must now do so at the risk of being cut off by the Grand Conclave, and thus forced to form a separate and independent body, not recognising its authority and not recognised by it; and whether it is desirable that such encampments should at once rally round some one body of high standing (such as the "Baldwyn"), or "take their chance" as "independent nuclei," is, of course, a matter on which I can hardly give an opinion.

Our English brethren have this advantage over us, that they can meet as individual societies. Here, we are liable, unless protected by the warrant of the "legitimate" authorities of Masonry, to have the police sent in on a Masonic meeting, a proceeding threatened, I am told, by some of the "high grades" in connection with some side degrees that did not meet their approval.

I have to apologise for the length of this communication, but the subject is an interesting one; and we in Ireland are anxious to see how matters will eventuate, as we are pretty well tired of the existing state of affairs here, and would be sorry to see a similar incubus imposed on our English brethren.

AN IRISH H.K.T.

Dublin, 12th June, 1871.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF ESSEX.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Essex was held at the Masonic Hall, Maldon, on Thursday, June 8th, under the presidency of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Robert John Bagshaw, who was attended on the occasion by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Bro. Andrew Meggy), the W.M. of the Richmond Lodge, the Past Grand Chaplain (Bro. the Rev. Charles J. Martyn), and other Grand Officers. Every lodge in the province (with one exception) was represented either by its Master or by two or more of its members.

Immediately after the opening of the lodge, the Grand Secretary of the province, Bro. John Wright Carr, read the minutes of the last meeting, and presented the reports, financial statements, &c.

The following appointments of Provincial Grand Officers were then made: Bros. Andrew Meggy, D.P.G. Master (re-appointed); G. P. Jay, S.W.; Joseph Bell, J.W.; Joseph Burton, Treas. (seventh time); John Wright Carr, Sec. (fourth time); Charles R. Tatham, Reg.; Rev. Eustace H. Crate, Chap.; Daniel B. Grout, S.D.; C. S. Tovell, J.D.; Robert Grout, Supt. of Works; Peter Matthews, Dir. of Cer.; Joseph Francis, Sword-bearer; Henry Barton, Org.; Thomas Aldam, Purs.; and S. Sarel, Tyler.

The brethren then quitted the lodge, and walked to All Saints' Church to attend Divine Service. Prayers were read by the Vicar (Bro. the Rev. E. Horwood), the first lesson by Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, the second lesson by Bro. the Rev. E. H. Crate, and the sermon preached by Bro. the Rev. J. F. W. Bullock, Radwinter. There was no collection, but upon the return of the brethren to the lodge to resume duties, the Treasurer was authorised to hand to the vicar, who was present, the sum of ten guineas, as a contribution towards the funds of the Maldon National Schools.

After the lodge had been closed, about seventy of the brethren partook of a banquet, served in excellent style by Bro. and Mrs. Hickford, of the Blue Boar Hotel.

The following is a list of those who took part in the proceedings of the lodge:—

Bros. Robert J. Bagshaw, R.W.P.G.M.; Andrew Meggy, D.P.G.M.; Rev. F. B. Shepherd, P.S.G.W., P.M. 276, P.G.C.; Joseph Burton, P.M. 276 and 1024, Past S.G.W., P.G. Treas.; John Wright Carr, W.M. 160, 276, 1343, P.G. Sec.; Jos. Tanner, G.S.D.; George Cooper, G. Supt. of Works; John Glass, G. Sword-bearer; Thomas S. Sarel, Tyler; Wm. Humphreys, P.M. 276 and 1024, P.P.G.J.W.; F. G. Green, P.M. 276 and 1024, P.P.G.W.; J. T. Bott, P.M. 276, P.P.G.S.W.; Thomas Aldam, P.M. 1024; Samuel H. Wymark, P.M. 650, P.P.G.S.D.; James Durrant, P.M. 650, P.P.G.J.D.; Charles Samuel Tovell, W.M. 650; W. H. L. Pattison, 276; F. A. Jones, 276; James L. Brown, 276; Geo. Bannister, 486; Albert Carr, 650; Joseph Bell, P.M. 1280; James Cantor, W.M. 1000; H. W. Moffat, 72;

Frederick Wood, P.M. 1000, P.P.G.S.W.; William Bright, 1024; D. B. Grout, P.M. 160; Robert Grout, 160; William Calthorpe, W.M. 697; J. T. Gale, P.M. 1024, P.P.G.J.W.; W. G. Small, 1024; J. Maskall, 1024; J. B. Taylor, 1024; Robert J. Francis, 1024; Alfred Day, 453; C. R. Tatham, W.M. 453; Thomas Rix, S.W. 697; John F. Kemp, 1024; Joseph Francis, P.M. 432; Thomas Eustace, J.W. 697; William Giles, P.M. 453; Thomas B. Harrington, 51; T. Carter Wigg, 1024; J. W. Jolly, 433; John Coppin, P.M. 51, P.P.G.J.W.; Samuel Ratcliff, 1024; W. F. Francis, 1024; G. G. Gardner, P.M. 453; John E. Wiseman, P.M., P.P.A.G.D.C.; James Self, P.M. 214; Edward Kemp, 1024; Rev. E. H. Crate, Chap. 51; John James Hawkins, J.W. 1024; A. C. Veley, J.W. 276; F. Whitmore, 81 and 276; James Nicholls, S.W. 276; Thomas Smee, S.D. 276; W. Hickford, 51 and 1024; C. Clarke, 1024; C. Cobb, 51; G. Motion, 453; R. W. Motion, 453; J. F. T. Wiseman, P.M., P.P.G. Sword-bearer; Rev. E. R. Horwood, P.M.; Samuel Cox, S.W. 1000; H. Rowley, P.M. 1000, P.P.G.S.D.; J. English, 1000; Samuel Chaplain, 51; G. P. Jay, W.M. 1024; Edward J. Sands, 51; Frederick A. Cole, J.W. 51; Rev. Chas. J. Martyn, P.G. Chap.; W. P. Lewis, W.M. 51; Henry Barton, 1000; and others.

A painful occurrence took place whilst the brethren were on their way to church. One of their number, Bro. W. Hickford, of the Blue Boar Hotel, Maldon, was seized with a fit, and had to be carried into the Corn Exchange. Fortunately, medical and other assistance was at hand, and the necessary restoratives having been administered, he was soon removed home, but he remains in a very weak state.

THE ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER OF IMPROVEMENT.

The first season of this new chapter of instruction was brought to a close on Thursday, the 1st inst., by a "Public Night" at Freemasons' Hall, and the programme of work was so attractive that a large number of companions attended, amongst whom were Comps. John Hervey, G.S.E.; E. H. Finney, E. H. Finney, jun., Thomas W. White, W. Mann, J. Self, A. A. Richards, F. Adlard, G. Darcy, W. Carpenter, W. W. Smith, G. Cooper, J. Boyd, J. G. Sharpe, C. Coote, S. Francis, J. W. Barrett, T. A. Tippett, W. C. Barlow, J. Slack, F. Avrillon, J. R. Nash, J. G. Manby, W. H. Green, E. J. Barron, J. Griffin, S. Carey, T. N. Edmands, G. A. Ibbetson, R. S. Warrington, T. Cubitt, J. R. Foulger, G. A. Smith, J. L. Thomas, R. Wentworth Little, and E. H. Thiellay. Visitors: Comps. H. H. Pearce (No. 214), C. Godfrey (214), G. Jeffery (214), S. S. P. Blight (112), W. Scott (22), Stanton Jones (188), H. Thorn (8), G. Kenning (14), W. Goodyear (25), G. R. Shervill (382), P. Hennell (145), G. Pymm (749), J. Smith (749), C. I. Paton, C. Stahr (169), F. Hockley (8), B. H. Swallow (19), C. G. Hill (177), G. Nicholls (214), E. Baber (1260), E. Lewis (382), R. Webb (177), J. G. Webb (177), and E. C. Cockcraft (211).

The chapter having been opened, the companions were addressed by Comp. Jas. Brett, P.Z., G.D.C., who then worked the first section, assisted in the first clause by Comp. J. Selfe, M.D., in the second clause by Comp. W. West Smith, and in the third clause by Comp. W. H. Green. Comp. J. L. Thomas then delivered the historical oration, and Comp. Geo. J. Sharpe the symbolical portion, after which Comp. Brett gave the illustration of the banners and ensigns. Comp. John Boyd, P.Z., followed with the mystical portions, and Comp. Brett then illustrated and explained the R.A. jewel and the Platonic bodies. The whole of the work was performed in a superb manner, and elicited loud cheering in nearly every instance.

Comp. Warrington, P.Z., then moved, Comp. Cubitt seconded, and it was unanimously resolved, "That the best thanks of the Chapter of Improvement be given to Excellent Comp. James Brett for his great interest in its welfare, as it is entirely through his constant attendance and uniform kindness that the chapter has been enabled to attain its present high position."

The following companions were then elected members, after which the chapter was closed:—G. K. Lemann (79), D. C. Nichols (214), C. G. Hill (177), R. Webb (177), J. G. Webb (177), G. R. Shervill (382), W. Goodyear (25), H. Thorn (8), F. Hockley (8), Geo. Kenning (22), and P. Hennell (145).

THE BANQUET.

After the proceedings in chapter, the companions, to the number of fifty-nine, adjourned to the Freemasons' Tavern, where the festival was held under the presidency of the genial and popular Grand Scribe E., Comp. John Hervey.

The cloth having been cleared, the Chairman proposed the usual memories, and the toast of "The Queen and Royal Arch Masonry." He then gave in hearty terms "The Health of the Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, K.G., 1st Grand Principal of the Order," alluding specially to the important mission with which his lordship had been recently entrusted, and to the success which had crowned his endeavours in the sacred cause of peace. The toast was received with enthusiasm, as was also the next, namely, "The Health of Lord Zetland, as Past Grand Z."

Comp. Hervey then proposed "The Healths of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, 2nd Grand Principal, and the Officers of the Grand Chapter, Present and Past." He said that the ability and zeal evinced by the noble earl, not only as a Mason, but as a statesman and senator, were so widely acknowledged that eulogy would be a work of supererogation on an occasion like the present. Lord de Tabley, the 3rd Grand Principal, was likewise a well-known and popular Provincial Grand Master, who had done great service to Masonry; and the other present and past Grand Officers were also excellent supporters of the Order. Fortunately (continued the V.E. Chairman), we have a representative of Grand Chapter amongst us this evening, and he is one who deserves, in every sense of the word, the distinction which has been conferred upon him. I shall have occasion to refer to him more particularly hereafter, so I will not detain you now, companions, further than to announce that, with the toast of the Grand Officers, I couple the name of our esteemed Comp. James Brett. (Great cheering.)

It is almost needless to add that the toast was drunk with the utmost cordiality, and elicited a handsome speech, in acknowledgment, from Comp. Brett.

"The Chairman's Health" was then given by Comp. Carpenter, P.Z. 177, who, amidst general manifestations of approval, spoke at some length upon the services which Comp. Hervey had rendered to the Craft during a long Masonic career. He (Comp. Carpenter) alluded to the delight with which Comp. Hervey's advent to the offices of Grand Secretary and Grand Scribe had been hailed at the time by all who knew him, and to the courtesy, ability, and attention he had since so conspicuously displayed in discharging the important duties connected with the secretarial department. On Comp. Hervey's abilities as a Mason, it would ill become him (the speaker) to dilate, because those abilities were already appreciated by many thousands in the Craft. The Grand Scribe E. was, as all were doubtless aware, the Treasurer of the R.A. Chapter of Improvement; he had helped it forward in its earlier stages, when success seemed doubtful, and he had shown ever since a great interest in its progress. He therefore called upon them to rise and drink the health of the brother and companion who presided over them so ably and so gracefully that evening.

The toast was received with loud and continued applause, which was renewed when the Chairman rose to return thanks, which he did in eloquent and pleasing terms, after which he gave the toast of the evening, "Success to the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement," coupled with the name of its prince of Preceptors, Comp. Brett.

This toast was likewise greeted with great cheering, and in the course of his reply, Comp. Brett detailed the history of the formation of the chapter and of its progress to the present time.

The visitors' healths were responded to by Comps. Smith, Paton, and Levy—the officers' by Comps. Boyd, Thomas, and Little; and Comps. Major Finney and G. S. States very ably expressed the thanks of the members of the Chapter Committee—the latter especially alluding to the preliminary meetings having been held at his place of business, the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, where sixty or seventy of the founders had assembled last September.

The Janitor was then called upon for the final toast, and the companions separated.

We must not omit to state that if the magnificent working of Comp. Brett and his coadjutors deserved our first and highest meed of praise, there is yet a warm corner in our cor cordium for the worthy Comps. E. H. Finney, jun., and T. W. White for the admirable way in which they managed to ensure the comfort of all present, especially the guests—in fact, all the details of the evening had evidently been well considered beforehand, and the result was simply perfection.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.—A newconclave, called the "Earl of Bective," No. 58 on the roll, has just been formed at Towanda, Bradford County, Pennsylvania, with Sir Kt. H. B. McKean, G.C.K.T. of the State, as the first M.P.S., and Sir Kt. C. S. Russell as the first Viceroy. Ill. Sir Kt. Alfred Creigh, 33°, LL.D., the local chief for Pennsylvania, is now Intendant-General for the Northern Jurisdiction of the United States, and is assuredly the right man in the right place,

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Caveac Lodge, No. 176.—On Saturday, 10th instant, this justly-celebrated lodge held its installation meeting at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars. The W.M., Bro. T. Quihampton, having taken his seat in the Solomonian chair, opened the lodge in due form, and the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. The report of the Audit Committee was also read, which showed that the funds were in a sound position. There was no work before the lodge except the all-important ceremony of installation. The W.M. having most satisfactorily explained why he had not been able to work up that ceremony in the efficient manner he would like to have rendered it, stated that Bro. P. A. Nairne, P.M., at a short notice, had kindly consented to perform the work for him. The W.M. accordingly vacated the chair, which was then taken by Bro. P. A. Nairne, P.M., who appointed as his Wardens Bros. Dr. C. Brown, P.M., D.C., as S.W., and Pemble Brown, P.M., Treas., as J.W.. Bro. T. Quihampton then presented Bro. Robert Stannard Foreman, S.W. and W.M.-elect, to receive the benefit of installation. That brother was duly installed into the chair of K.S., and, at the proper time, appointed as his officers: Bros. H. Besley, S.W.; F. H. Godsell, J.W.; Pemble Brown, P.M., Treas. (re-invested); E. Litchfield, P.M., Hon. Sec. (this reappointment was received by a perfect ovation, the venerable brother being escorted to the pedestal by the two senior P.M.'s present, and the prolonged applause which greeted him proved how sincerely the brethren appreciated the father of their lodge); H. Jermyn, S.D.; W. D. Barnett, J.D.; W. A. Hinde, I.G.; Dr. C. Browne, P.M., D.C. (re-invested); A. E. Tower, W.S. (re-invested); and T. Riley, P.M., Tyler (re-invested). Then followed the beautiful addresses, which were well given, those to the W.M. and the Wardens by the Installing Master, and that to the members generally by the polished elocutionist, Bro. Dr. C. Browne. Never have we had the good fortune to hear the ceremony of installation better rendered. It was indeed an intellectual treat to be present on this auspicious occasion, and we cordially congratulate the lodge on its possessing two such excellent workers as Bros. Nairne and Dr. Browne, who are worthy contemporaries of the many excellent Masons who are still on the lodge roll. Neither is there any fear that the present W.M., Bro. R. S. Foreman, and the officers under him will in any way lower the high standard of reputation so justly and deservedly earned by this lodge, as being one of the best worked in our great metropolis. Superior music was introduced during the ceremony of the installation, Bro. Besley, S.W., presiding at the harmonium, which, if possible, added to its beauty, and certainly promoted and enhanced to its effectiveness. A cordial vote of thanks was given to Bros. Nairne and Dr. Browne, which compliment they duly acknowledged. Bro. Dr. C. Browne, P.M., D.C., in an eloquent speech proposed that the usual ten-guinea Past Master's jewel be presented from the lodge funds to Bro. T. Quihampton, I.P.M., as a recognition of the able manner in which he had presided over their meetings during his year of office as W.M., which was carried by acclamation. Bro. R. S. Foreman then, in the name of the lodge, presented the Past Master's jewel to Bro. T. Quihampton, I.P.M., who, in an appropriate speech, acknowledged this gift. A petition on behalf of a widow of a member (who over thirty years ago once belonged to this lodge) was signed, recommending her to the Lodge of Benevolence. The worthy Secretary, Bro. E. Litchfield, in the kindest Masonic manner, consented to support this application at the next Lodge of Benevolence. Bro. G. H. Payne (176) was proposed as a rejoining member. It was understood that at the next meeting in October Bro. F. H. Godsell, J.W., will be elected as the Steward to represent this lodge at the festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, to be held next January. Arrangements having been made to decide upon where the next meeting of the lodge will be held (in consequence of Bro. J. Hart being about to relinquish his position as the proprietor of this hotel), the lodge was closed for the season. Then followed one of those superb first-class banquets for which Bro. J. Hart is so famous, served under his own superintendence, and followed by an elegant dessert. The wines were of the very finest brands, and every one seemed well pleased at the fare placed before them. Deep regrets were expressed that this should be their last meeting under the old hospitable roof, where so many pleasant evenings had been spent. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Warm eulogies were passed on the Secretary and Treasurer for the efficient manner both had performed their duties, and each responded in very happy and appropriate speeches. Bro. Dr. J. Barrington, P.P.G.S.W. Herts, responded for the visitors. Songs, recitations, and other amusements brought this enjoyable evening to a close. There were present besides those named (and many whose names we were unable to ascertain): Bros. W. G. Quihampton, F. Burghard, J. J. Wilkinson, W. Jones, E. Humphreys, &c. The visitors were Bros. E. Clark, P.P.G.D.C. Middlesex; W. Giles, P.P.G.S.D. Essex; G. H. Daw, P.M. 7; E. Martin, 23; F. Walters, P.M. 73; T. H. Perrin, S.W. 92; G. H. Payne, 176; F. Mitchell, P.M. 340; C. Marshall, 742; G. K. Leman, J.D. 890; C. F. Pearson, 890; P. C. Nixon, 957; A. Phillips, J.W. 1155, and others.

Lodge of Joppa, No. 188.—At the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on Monday, 5th inst., this old and flourishing lodge held its regular meeting. Bro. Maurice Alexander, W.M., opened the lodge, and there were present during the evening Bros. B. W. Aaron, I.P.M.; J.

Abrahams, H. M. Levy, L. Alexander, M. Van Diepenheimer, H. Harris, and L. Lyons, P.M.'s; Berkowith, S.W.; E. Hunt, J.W.; J. Elkan, Treas.; E. P. Albert, Hon. Sec.; O. Roberts, S.D.; C. Nathan, J.D.; S. Hickman, I.G.; Dobson, D.C.; J. Goldsmid, Steward; E. P. Van Noorden, Organist; and the usual large attendance of members. Amongst the numerous visitors were Bros. A. L. Emanuel, P.P.G.J.D. Hants; J. Harvey, W.M. 957; Webb, J.D. 11; J. G. Shearman, 28; B. Rotchild, late 188; L. H. Beck, 185; M. H. Benjamin, 416; J. Freeman, 1287, and others. The work done (after the minutes were confirmed) was raising Bro. C. Hyman to the third, passing Bros. Morris and Frank to the second, and initiating Messrs Gregory and Nathan into the first degree. The lodge was then called off. Bro. Jennings, the manager, provided a recherche banquet served under the superintendence of Bro. Keeping, which gave universal satisfaction. The usual toasts were given. When resumed, after refreshment, several propositions were made, and the lodge was duly closed until next October. Bro. E. P. Van Noorden, Organist, carried out the musical arrangements in an able manner. He sang some buffo songs, and Miss Eldon sang her songs in the usual delightful manner so pleasing to all.

Finbury Lodge, No. 861.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, May 26th, at the Jolly Anglers, Bath-street, St. Luke's. Bro. Nicholls, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and after some discussion, confirmed. The business done was raising Bro. Farrell by Bro. Mackey, P.M. and W.M.-elect, and installing Bro. Mackey as W.M., which ceremony was admirably performed by Bro. A. Day, P.M., Treas. The newly-installed W.M. then appointed as his officers Bros. Stokes, S.W.; Meanwell, J.W.; A. Day, P.M., Treas.; T. E. Purday, P.M. Sec.; Odell, S.D.; Thomas, J.D.; Legg, I.G.; Groom, Steward; Lowles, A.S.; J. Owens, D.C.; C. J. Speight, P.M., Tyler. The retiring Master, Bro. Nicholls, was presented with a handsome silver cup, in place of the ordinary Past Master's jewel. The lodge was closed, and banquet followed. A large number of visitors were present.

Lodge of Asaph No. 1319.—This popular lodge held its usual monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall on Monday, 5th inst. Present: Bros. E. S. Jones, P.M., W.M.; Charles Coote, P.M., S.W.; J. M. Chamberlin, P.M., J.W.; James Weaver, P.M. 862, P.G.O. Middlesex, S.D.; Charles Coote, jun., Treasurer; W. A. Tinney, D.C.; C. J. Jekyll, I.G.; T. A. Adams, P.G.P.; H. J. Tinney, J. Egerton, J. Baker, W. H. Weston, J. Horton, C. H. Wright, W. Graves, W. Castell, J. Strachan, L. Silberberg, H. J. Snyders. Visitors: Bro. M. W. Marryat, Star of Bethlehem, Chelsea, U.S.A.; G. C. Pritchard, 862; H. M. Horsee, 1896. The business consisted in initiating Messrs. G. A. Compton, Professor of Music, and W. H. Farnie, dramatic author; passing Bros. Graves, Castell, Horton, and Wright; and raising Bro. Silberberg to the sublime degree of M.M. Bro. James Weaver's musical and vocal Masonic services added much to the solemnity of the respective degrees so excellently worked in this lodge. The lodge then voted the requisite sum of money to become Governors of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. This young lodge is setting an example which ought to be observed in every lodge. Although only seven months old, it is clear of debt, Life Governors of the two charities, and has over £60 in hand to pay their Grand Lodge dues when they become due. Mr. Reynolds, Professor of Music, was proposed for initiation.

BERKELEY.—Royal Lodge of Faith and Friendship, No. 270.—This old-established lodge held its last meeting for the season at the Berkeley Arms Hotel, Berkeley, on Monday, the 5th inst. The lodge was opened in due form by Bro. Charles Partridge, P.M., who was supported by Bros. William Pinnell, S.W.; Samuel Davis, J.W.; Daniel Besley, S.D.; John Neale, J.D.; John Gamble, I.G.; Joseph Merrett, Tyler; Octavius Long, P.M.; John Carey, James T. Handy, W. Smith, T. Morse, W. Sinderby, James Oliver, E. Long, E. Roggers, Lieut. Boxsome, &c. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and unanimously agreed to, the business of the evening was to raise Bro. E. Rogers to the sublime degree of M.M., after which, the lodge having been closed in harmony, the brethren adjourned to another room, and sat down to an ample repast, and a happy evening was spent.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—The last regular monthly meeting of this lodge before the summer recess was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 7th inst., when, in addition to the W.M., Bro. C. Stretton, P.P.G.R., there were present Bros. Kelly, P.M. and R.W.P.G.M.; L. A. Clarke, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W.; W. Weare, P.M. and Treas.; Crow, S.W.; Dr. Pearce, J.W.; Widdowson, Sec.; J. Wright Smith, J.D.; Halford, I.G.; Bembridge, Tyler; M'Allister, Worthington, Edwards, Tarratt, Donisthorpe, Blankley, Cleaver, Beeton, Statham, and Kirby. Visitors: Bros. Buzzard, W.M.; Toller, P.M.; W. Beaumont Smith, P.M.; Sculthorpe, S.W.; Partridge, S.D.; Dr. Clifton, Whitaker, and Parsons, of No. 523. After the transaction of some preliminary business, Bro. Charles J. Worthington, having been duly examined, was passed a Fellow Craft, after which, Mr. Thomas Henry Kirby, M.R.C.S., was initiated into our mysteries, the ceremonies being performed by the P.G.M., and the working tools being explained by Bro. Toller. At the last meeting Bro. Wm. Pettifor, an old and highly-respected Past Master of the lodge, had a vote of thanks accorded to him for his past services, and he was nominated an honorary member, the ballot being on the list of business for this meeting. His death having, however, occurred in the previous week, the W.M. announced the fact to the lodge in appropriate terms of regret. The Prov. G.M., after alluding in high terms of eulogy to the zeal of the late Bro. Pettifor as a Mason and his character as a man, proposed a resolution expressive of the deep regret of the brethren at the decease of one, who, as a P.M. of the lodge, a P.Z. of the chapter, a P.P.G.S.W. of the province, &c., &c., during more than a quarter of a century had rendered valuable services to Masonry in the province in general, and to this lodge in particular; whilst his quick, unobtrusive manners, his obliging disposition, his strict integrity of character, and his other sterling good qualities in all the relations of life, had gained for him the respect and esteem of all with whom he was associated. The resolution concluded with an expression of sympathy with the widow and youthful family of the departed brother in their bereavement. This was seconded by Bro. Clarke, P.M., and supported by the W.M., and also by the W.M. of the John of Gaunt Lodge, who stated that Bro. Pettifor was no less esteemed, and his loss would be no less deplored by the brethren of that lodge than by those of St. John's Lodge. The resolution was carried unanimously, and a copy of it ordered to be signed by the principal officers of the lodge and to be transmitted to Mrs. Pettifor. The W.M. having proposed his son for initiation at the next regular meeting in October, which would occur on the day after the candidate's coming of age, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

Canonbury Chapter, No. 657.—The installation meeting of this prosperous chapter was held at the Masons' Arms Tavern, Masons' Avenue, City, on Thursday, the 26th ult. Comps. S. May, M.E.Z., J. Tanner, H., F. Cox, J., and other installed principals opened the chapter, and there were also present Comps. Webb, W. Ough, I. G. Chancellor, B. P. Todd, W. Watson, P.Z.'s, and others. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Comp. Watson took the chair and in his usual correct manner installed Comps. J. Tanner as M.E.Z.; J. Cox, H.; and H. Carey, J. The other officers appointed and invested were Comps. May, Treas.; W. Ough, S.E.; Dr. Ringrose, P.S.; Lerad, 1st A.S.; Hull, 2nd A.S. The newly-installed M.E.Z. then, in the name of the chapter and in a feeling speech, presented the retiring Principal with a valuable P.Z. jewel, as a slight recognition of his services to the chapter during his year of office. Some candidates for exaltation having been proposed, and the formal business disposed of, the chapter was duly closed. A superior banquet was served under the personal superintendance of Comp. Gosden, which gave general satisfaction. The M.E.Z., in neat and appropriate speeches, gave the usual loyal and R.A. toasts. Comp. May, I.P.Z., proposed the health of the M.E.Z. in eloquent terms, and the toast was suitably responded to. The Janitor's toast brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

Rose of Denmark Chapter, No. 975.—The usual quarterly meeting of this chapter was held at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew-bridge, on the 3rd inst., and amongst those present were Comps. G. Powell, M.E.H.; T. Price, J.; R. W. Little, P.Z., S.E.; A. A. Pendlebury, P.Z.; J. Brett, P.Z., G.D.C.; J. Terry, P.Z.; W. F. Smith, P.Z.; W. Dodd, S.N.; J. E. Walford, P.S.; W. Tinkler, A.S.; A. H. Longhurst, D.C.; T. H. P. Hartley, G. C. Banks, J. Newton, T. Sheppard, F. Ridley, C. Braid, W. H. Libbis, J. B. Poole, T. Shortland, E. Collins, D. A. Chudleigh, C. H. Gardner, F. W. Gardner, and several visitors, including Comps. W. Smead and J. Wright, P.Z.'s. The chapter having been opened and the minutes confirmed, Bros. Joseph E. Carpenter, Ph.D., P.M. 284 and 1196 (the well-known songwriter and editor of "Penny Readings"), and Arthur Porter, S.W. 1139, were introduced and exalted as R.A. Masons. Comp. Jesse Owens was accepted as an honorary member, and Comp. Price was installed as J. by Comp. Terry. The chapter was then closed, and a magnificent banquet was served, followed by dessert, when the usual toasts were given. Comp. Carpenter made a capital speech in responding for "The Newly-exalted Companions," and likewise Comp. Smead for "The Visitors." During the evening Comp. Carpenter sang several charming songs, accompanied on the piano-forte by the accomplished Organist, Comp. Chas. Braid, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—De Mowbray Chapter, No. 1130.—The second anniversary of this flourishing chapter was held on the 1st inst. Comps. E. J. Orford, M.E.Z.; Newcome, as H. (in the unavoidable absence of Comp. Douglas); J. J. Fast, as J.; Rev. W. Langley, P.Z., Duncombe, Adcock, Johnson, Bugg, Selby, &c., &c. The minutes having been read and confirmed, the M.E.Z. proceeded to invest Comps. Duncombe as Scribe E.; Adcock, Treasurer; Johnson, Asst. Soj. The chapter was then closed, and the companions sat down to an excellent banquet provided by Comp. Selby. The usual toasts were given and responded to, and a most agreeable evening was spent.

Premier Conclave of England.

The Quarterly Meeting of the Premier Conclave of England was held on Monday evening, the 5th inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, and was numerously attended by the knights of the order. In the unavoidable absence of Sir Knight John Trickett, Intendant-General for Kent and M.P.S., Sir Knight Little, G. Recorder, occupied the throne, Sir Knt. Angelo J. Lewis,

M.A., G. Inspector of Regalia, being in his place as the Eminent V.E. Amongst those present were Colonel Burdett, J.P., Prov. G.M. for Middlesex; Sir Gilbert Campbell, Bart.; the Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, P.G.C.; E. Hamilton Finney; H. Thompson, P.S., No. 18; and many others whose names we were unable to obtain.

The conclave having been opened in Imperial form, Bros. Scott and Wicks were introduced, and in a very able manner installed as knights-of the order by the acting M.P.S., Sir Knight Little.

The next business was the enthronement of the M.P.S.—elect, Sir Knight Angelo J. Lewis, for the ensuing year, which was done in due form.

Sir Knight Kenning was then invested as the E.V., after which the following officers were also invested:—Sir Kts. Boord, as S.G.; Andrew, J.G.; Little, Rec.; Moss, Prelate; Silliant, Prefect; Taylor, S.B.; the Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, Orator; Parker, Organist; and Barrett, Herald. The M.P.S. said he should take it as a pledge by any one accepting office that they would punctually attend to their duties, or they had better stand aside and let others take office who would attend.

The conclave was then closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to an excellent banquet.

At the conclusion of the repast, the M.P.S. gave the first toast, which was received in solemn silence and afterwards "The Queen and Christian Masonry," which was received with all honours and followed by the National Anthem, the solo parts by Sir Knight Marsh accompanied by Sir Knight Parker on the piano-forte.

The M.P.S. then rose and said that having done their duty to the sovereign of the country, they had a further duty to perform to the noble sovereign of their order, the Earl of Bective, who he might say without fear was the right man in the right place, who was most courteous to all, and who bore his honours in the Grand Senate with such dignity that he always kept himself strictly to the point, and kept others to the point also. A notice had appeared on the agenda of the Grand Lodge for Wednesday which was a very disagreeable one, and one calculated to lower the status of their order, but the Earl of Bective had given his guarantee that he would be in his place, and would support the order to which it was their high privilege to belong. He asked them with all cordiality to drink the health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Bective, M.L. Grand Sovereign. (The toast was enthusiastically responded to.)

The M.P.S. said the next toast was the M.F.G. Viceroy, Sir Frederick Williams, Bart., and the rest of the Grand Council," and he need hardly say how much of the prosperity of the order depended upon them. Since the order had been revived, more than sixty conclaves had been established, a fact which spoke more to the honour of the Grand Council than any words from him could convey. He would couple with the toast the name of the senior member present, Colonel Burdett, and with the health of the Intendants-General the name of Sir Gilbert Campbell.

Sir Knight Colonel Burdett said it was to him a great pleasure to have to return thanks for the kind manner in which the Sir Knights had received the toast of his health, and he could assure them that so long as he received their support the Grand Council would conduct the business, he hoped to their satisfaction and to their own credit. They were at present in troubled waters, but it only required a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether to silence the opposition of certain parties who were jealous that this order stood so high in all parts of the world as it did at the present time. There were some outside who tried to swamp this order, but he doubted not that it would go on and prosper, and in a few years would stand higher than any other order in existence. It had been successful hitherto, and although they had difficulties in the outset, if they held together they would easily be overcome.

Sir Gilbert Campbell thanked them for the kind way in which they had received the toast of the Intendants-General, and after what Sir Knight Col. Burdett had said, he had only to thank them for the honour conferred upon them.

Sir Knight Little proposed "The health of the M.P.S.," and said they all knew that this conclave had existed for a great number of years, but within the last six years it had been revived, and during that time many gentlemen of eminence had presided over them. They had, however, one now equally so, for he had taken all the offices, and performed every duty, and he had no doubt in his present position he would perform his duty to the satisfaction of the conclave and with credit to the order. As a member of the Grand Senate, he had displayed great zeal and activity; his working had been excellent, and he had done all in his power to promote the prosperity of the order. Under his rule the conclave could not fail to be successful, and therefore most cordially did he propose his health. (Drank with all honours.)

The M.P.S. (Sir Knight Lewis) said he had to thank them for the kind expressions in which his health had been proposed, and for the manner in which it had been received, and he could assure them that he would do his best to deserve their approbation. He had a special admiration for Masonry, and particularly so for the Red Cross degree. There was none more beautiful than the Red Cross degree, and he would do his best so that its impressiveness should not be destroyed by any shortcomings on his part. In the autumn he sought rest, and should be hundreds of miles from Freemasons' Hall, but with that exception he should not be absent from a single meeting. He accepted the honour he had obtained, and should feel it to be his duty to do his best, to the utmost of his ability, to deserve the confidence they had reposed in him. (Loud cheers.)

The M.P.S. said the next toast he had to propose was a very pleasing one, as they had that night added two new members, and he gave them a hearty welcome into this chivalric order. He gave "The health of Sir Knights Scott and Wicks." (Cheers.)

Song, "The Red Cross," Sir Kt. Parker. Sir Kts. Scott and Wicks severally returned thanks, trusting they would be found dutiful knights, and would do all in their power to promote the prosperity of the order.

The M.P.S. said they were always pleased to see visitors amongst them, and gave the health of Sir Kts. Hamilton Finney, Sir Gilbert Campbell, and H. Thompson, who severally responded.

The M.P.Sov. next proposed "The Past Sovereigns of the Conclave," who had joined their order in its twilight, and long before it had come into the full blaze of day. They had, however, continued to labour for its prosperity, and they now had their reward. He coupled with the toast the name of Sir Knight R. Wentworth Little, G.R., who was always present to fill up any gap, leaving them nothing to desire, and nothing that he (the M.P.S.) could say would add lustre to his name. (Great cheering.)

Sir Kt. Little said he felt very thankful to the M.P.S. for the high compliments he had paid him in proposing the toast, and to the Sir Knights for the kindness with which they had received it. He must say that their order of the Red Cross had, in five or six years, taken a very extraordinary stride; it was now disseminated throughout various parts of the world, and in the colonies it had attained a very proud position, for which they were greatly indebted to the Premier Conclave, which was distinguished for its zeal, devotion, and actual work. So great was the prestige of their order that the conclaves established in the United States were still willing to continue under the English rule, and to have their certificates signed by the Illustrious Grand Sovereign of England, and it could not fail to them to be most gratifying that a branch of Masons established at so great a distance from them were still glad to acknowledge the fountain and source of power. He was sure that they might look forward to a continuance of the same prosperity which they had hitherto enjoyed. He was at all times ready to render suit and service for the benefit of the order, and he returned his sincere thanks for the honour conferred upon him. (The worthy Sir Knight sat down amidst general cheering.)

The M.P.S. then proposed "The E.V.E. and the other officers," and was sure they would discharge their duties satisfactorily. However well the Sovereign might do his work, unless he was well supported by his officers it was useless.

Sir Kt. Geo. Kenning, E.V.E., said he felt deeply the responsible position in which he was placed, and felt that he should not be able to do the same justice to his high office as had been performed by his predecessor. However, he would do the best he could, and if he failed they must take the will for the deed. He thanked them for the kind manner in which they had drunk his health.

Sir Kts. Moss and Silliant also briefly returned thanks, and a very happy evening was brought to a close, which had been marked throughout by the true principles of Freemasonry.

JERSEY.—Concord Conclave, No. 8.—An assembly of this conclave was held on Thursday, the 1st of June, at the Masonic Temple. Owing to the departure from the island of Sir Kt. Michael Tracy, M.P.S., in consequence of his promotion in the army, Sir Kt. P. W. Benham, P.S., presided, being supported by his officers, as follows:—E. D. Le Conteur, V.E.; Ed. M. Lott, H.P.; J. W. Buesnel, S.G.; Jos. Gregg, J.G.; A. Schmitt, P.S., Rec.; Ph. Binch, P.; A. Bullion, H.; J. Blampied, Treas.; H. L. Manuel, S.B.; &c. The conclave having been opened in due form, the minutes of the last assembly were confirmed. The following candidates were reported eligible for installation, viz., Bros. Lieut. Ch. Ed. Trollope, R.A., 877; Ph. S. Le Cornu, C.E., 877; D. Le Geyt, 877; Jos. Pallot, J.D. 590; F. F. Amy, 590; and being in attendance, were admitted, received, constituted, and installed as Knights of the Order. After the usual business had been gone through, it was unanimously and by acclamation resolved: "That a letter be forwarded through the Recorder to Sir Kt. Comp. Michael Tracy, M.P.S., conveying their feelings of regret on account of his removal from the island, their warm thanks for the interest he has taken in the conclave since its formation, and their best wishes for his future success and prosperity." The conclave was closed in love and perfect harmony.

Liverpool Conclave, No. 55.—At a preliminary meeting of this conclave, held on the 12th inst., the following brethren were installed Knights of the Order:—Bros. J. R. Goepel, P.M. 155; J. B. Robinson, P.M. 1013; H. M. Molyneux, P.M. 241; S. Forrest, P.M. 241; W. Crane, P.M. 249; T. A. Lowe, P.M. 1013; T. Clark, P.M. 673; J. Wood, 1094; and J. Lloyd, 249. Under the able auspices of Sir Kts. Capt. G. Turner, M.P.S., and Dr. Kellet Smith, V., this conclave is sure to prove a great success, and will doubtless be the parent of others in Liverpool and its vicinity.

The Musical Standard hears that Mr. C. Hallé has been engaged to play at the Beethoven Festival to be held at Bonn in August.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for THE FREEMASON should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

R. M.—We regret being unable to assist you, but it is not consonant with our ideas to recommend particular professional men.

VERBUM SAP.—We cannot think of publishing anything from "Perry's List" respecting brother Masons, however unworthy.

"V.E.," "A Lover of Fair Play," "A Good Templar," and others are thanked for their communications respecting Sir P. Colquhoun's absurd notice, but really his abortive attempt to raise a Masonic storm in a teapot is so ridiculous, that we cannot allow it to be discussed as a serious matter.

A YOUNG ROYAL ARCH.—We know of no such work. Comp. James Brett is the Preceptor of the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement, at Freemasons' Hall, and under his tuition, if you could spare time to visit the metropolis, you would soon acquire the necessary proficiency in the lectures.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SPECULATIVE MASONRY.

It is now generally conceded, even by the most enthusiastic members of the Craft, that the speculative science of our day bears the same relation to the Freemasonry of old that the giant oak bears to the pigmy acorn. For, whether we consider it as a lofty code of morality, or merely as a bond of union, most assuredly the symbolism of our Order has been the growth of time; and it is even yet receiving, through the sage researches of learned brethren, additional interpretations of wisdom, strength, and beauty. The germ of modern Masonry was sown when men first gave proofs of that gregarious instinct which impelled them to build cities, and to dwell together in amicable and social communion. Freemasonry and solitude are not akin—the poet's sigh for "a lodge in the vast wilderess" finds no response in the Masonic breast. The very word "brother" suggests companionship, and is incompatible with the solitary gloom of the hermit. Freemasonry is, therefore, a twin with that human fellowship, of which it has since become the purest and most practical exemplar. But even as the laws of society were imperfectly understood and upheld in those primitive ages, so were the coeval teachings of Freemasonry equally crude and inoperative. The dream of fraternity faded before the fierce glow of ambition and the lurid glare of war. Tradition, which preserves the memory of Tubal Cain as a mighty worker in metal, also places on melancholy record his grief for having fashioned the sword and spear as well as the implements of husbandry. The same hands that built the house for protection erected the fortress for annoyance or defence; and the lessons of order, and comfort, and happiness were forgotten in the thirst for power and fame. As time rolled on the passion of conquest spread—heroes, so-called, arose whose glory rests upon the disastrous triumphs they achieved. Blood flowed in torrents, and the will of one man—too frequently a tyrant—became the arbiter of life and death. But the work of Craft Masonry still went on, amid the turmoil and strife; obscured, but not destroyed. Nor can we doubt that the genius of architecture—revelling as it did in the creation of beautiful or stupendous forms—aided to a superlative degree the progress, while it directed the course, of enlightenment and civilisation. Every temple was a landmark of thought and a monument of reason. Intellect shone through every pillar and illuminated every dome. The perfection of such kingly Masonry became to all a hope and an inspiration. Men gazed upon the structures they had reared, and exulted in the grandeur of the conception to which they had given such immortal shape and substance. It is also evident that the peaceful labours of those ancient Craftsmen must have banded them together in enormous masses. The Pyramids alone attest this fact, and the mighty ruins of ancient Greece and Rome speak eloquently of the vast Masonic confederations of old. What do we infer from all this? In the first place, that a common task beget a common sympathy, and that a common sympathy beget a common brotherhood. It may be said, and with great plausibility, that other classes of workmen were likewise called together in great numbers; but it must not be forgotten that the art of building was the centre upon which nearly all other useful trades depended. Without protection from the weather, the exquisite visions of the painter, and even the less delicate creations of the sculptor, must speedily have perished and decayed. Operative Masonry supplies this want; and as "Order is heaven's first law, and this confessed, it is, and must be, greater than the rest" of the handicrafts, however useful or ornamental. In the second place, the tools or implements made use of by working Masons are far more susceptible of a hidden significance—an occult symbolism—than those of any other art or trade. The square, level, and plumb-rule—their uses? Taken, both in an operative and speculative sense, the relationship is perfect, and the metaphorical connection complete. The pencil, the compasses, and, in other branches of Masonry, the mallet, the chisel, and the trowel, are apposite emblems of the highest moral truths, and forcibly inculcate the fulfilment of every social and religious duty. In this manner was built up, day by day and year by year, the wondrous system now called Freemasonry. Through the various stages of architecture—amidst its proudest triumphs, graven in stone as everlasting memorials of the will and power of man—we can trace the operative leading to the speculative, the material to the immaterial and sublime. Not merely in the chef d'œuvre of ancient art, in the arches of the Colosseum or the high-domed temples of Greece, but in the mediæval cathedrals—the modern palaces and pavilions which gem many European lands. We have no need to look for a mysterious origin in the occult ceremonies of the Persian Magi or Pagan Cabiri.

The builder's science is ours, and if we no longer erect earthly temples, we are taught by the symbolism of the royal art to raise a spiritual structure, strong in good works and fashioned after the model of a perfect man. In short, we must realise the splendid imagery of our great Masonic poet, Bro. Augustine Duganne:

"When the pillars of strength in our porch shall abide
With the lilies of beauty above,
And the veil of the Presence, encompassing wide,
Overshadow the Ark of our Love;
And the peace of the blessed Shekinah
Enfold, like the wings of a dove!"

Vain disquisitions upon the antiquity of the Craft are not to the purpose; it is now, and has ever been, to some extent at least, a school of morality and virtue. Let us profit by its lessons, and exemplify its real grandeur by deeds of charity and beneficence. The man who acts as a Mason is the only true one, whether he be an Entered Apprentice or a Grand Master; and this fact is daily impressed upon our minds by sorrowful experience. But the symbolism of Masonry ever remains the same—a deathless code for man's instruction; a book of wisdom for all who choose to learn. Let us, therefore, ponder more and more its teachings, and illustrate its deep and mystic meaning; convinced that in the end we shall attain to such an exalted perception of truth as was rarely vouchsafed even to the seers of old.

The English Craft, and we may add the Craft throughout the world, will gladly learn that the M.W. Grand Master of England, the Earl de Grey and Ripon, K.G., has been raised to the rank of Marquis, in recognition of his eminent services as Lord High Commissioner during the recent negotiations at Washington. Without being undue panegyrists of his lordship, we may safely add that never was reward more worthily bestowed, for a better type of the true, hard-working, intellectual statesman of England could not be found. The only matter for regret with us is that the dear, familiar title of "De Grey" has not been retained by the Grand Master as his future appellation—the transition would then have been easy.

We are also pleased, indeed, to hear that Bro. Lord Tenterden becomes a Companion of the Bath. He ought to be made at least a K.C.B.

Reviews.

The "Westminster Papers" for June are to hand, and we have great pleasure in recommending this periodical to those of our readers—and we presume amongst the Fraternity their name is legion—who are fond of the noble game of chess. The problems are admirable, and highly instructive. The articles on Fossil Chess are unique, and well worth studying. We give this "Paper" our unqualified approbation, and wish the editor every success.

We have also received the following:—

Bailey's series of Practical Masonry, comprising "The W.M.'s Special Help;" "The Secretary's Special Help;" "The Senior Deacon's Special Help." Bailey, Chicago, Illinois.

"Piper on Poultry;" "Piper on Pigeons;" "Carving Made Easy." Groombridge, 5, Paternoster-row

"The Cricket Calendar." Virtue and Co., Ivy-lane, Paternoster-row.

"Notes and Queries about Newcomen." By Bro. T. Lidstone.

"The River Plate;" "Emigration to the River Plate." Bates, Hendy and Co., 4, Old Jewry, E.C.

"Annual Report of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution."

These we reserve for future notice.

THE AMERICAN K.T. TOURISTS.

THE Knights Templar, from forty to sixty in number, are expected to arrive at Queenstown on the 12th instant, and Mr. John M. Cook will go to meet them, and conduct them through Ireland, and to Glasgow, where we expect to meet them, and from thence to accompany them through the best parts of Scotland. They are to be at Alton Towers, by request of the Earl of Shrewsbury, on the 4th of July, where they will celebrate their favourite anniversary of American Independence. They will then visit London, and, after a few days, then proceed to the Rhine, Italy, and Switzerland, all under personal arrangements.—Cook's Excursionist.

[We are glad to state that the Knights Templar arrived safely at Queenstown on Monday last, on board the Oceanic, having made the passage from New York in nine days, one of the most rapid on record.]

THE RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

Will Bro. "Lupus" favour one who appreciates his talents with an explanation of the terms "Old Masonic Red Cross Order" used in his contribution at page 345 of THE FREEMASON? The only Red Cross Orders with which I am acquainted are—

1. The Babylonish Pass or Red Cross of Babylon; given in Scotland by authority of the Grand R.A. Chapter, and also, I believe, at Rochdale.

2. The American Red Cross, which is somewhat similar to the above, and also modelled upon the 15th degree of the A. and A. Rite, called "Knight of the East or Sword."

3. The Red Cross of Constantine.

4. The Red Cross of Palestine, which is only another name for the old degree of "Knight of the Sepulchre," and used to distinguish them from the White Cross Knights of St. John or Malta.

To which of these Orders, or to what others, if any such existed, do Bro. "Lupus's" remarks apply? I may add, that I quite agree with Bro. "Lupus" in the belief that none of these Orders have any history apart from their connection with the Masonic Craft, and that the legends upon which their origin is based are now generally accepted by all thinking men for what they are worth, and no more. NEMO.

I deprecate as much as any man the introduction of "personalities" into discussions, whether they be Masonic or otherwise, but as Sir P. Colquhoun's notion of argument seems to be, like an auctioneer's hammer, on the "knock'em down" principle, I would ask by what authority he gave notice of a question, or ventured to present himself in Grand Lodge, he having, as I am credibly informed, lost his qualification as a P.M. years ago by having ceased to subscribe to a lodge? The conspicuous absence of his name from the lists of donors to our charities is also being made the subject of unfavourable comment.

A "REAL" MEMBER OF GRAND LODGE.

RECORDS OF OLD LODGES.

We shall be glad to hear from any brethren who possess, or have access to, lodge records before 1716, and which have hitherto been unpublished. It probable there are some such minutes extant which have not been made known. Only lately we have had extracts sent us of lodge meetings in A.D. 1714, which are most valuable and interesting.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

BRO. HUGHAN ON "SYSTEM."

At page 356, Bro. Hughan observes: "It cannot be said that any 'system' is adopted by our Grand Lodge, . . . as there are practically two systems of work in London, and in the country their number is legion!" Now, I venture to assert that that is a mistake, for all the lodges above referred to, I have no reason to believe, do otherwise than work the same "system." The leading characteristics or "landmarks" of all are the same—there may be differences in detail, or modifications in the working out of the system, yet that does not show a difference in the system itself, that is only an example of variety in unity, e.g., a man is equally a man whether he be black or white, tall or short, thin or stout. So with our mediæval architects of the same period—although no two churches were exactly the same in detail, yet the "style" in which they worked was the same. Bro. Hughan must remember that local peculiarities are one thing, the "style" or "system," as such and as a whole, is another.

W. P. BUCHAN.

IS MASONRY A RELIGION? (p. 349.)

In connection with this subject, permit me to quote my own opinion as given elsewhere about nine months ago, viz. :—By religion we understand the worship of God for the salvation of the soul of man; hence the manner or system in which a man worships God for that object is his religion. Freemasonry, however, not being a system by which God is worshipped for the salvation of the soul of the Freemason, but a system which, while acknowledging God as the Father of all, was formed as a "centre of union, and the means of conciliating true friendship among persons that must have remained at a perpetual distance," is not, therefore, a religion, but a philanthropic society. The objects of religion are spiritual, and point to the next world; the objects of Freemasonry are carnal, and point to this world. Or, if I may so express it, the great object of Freemasonry is peace on earth—the great object of religion is peace in heaven. May God, in His all-wise and omnipotent providence, order both to His glory and the good of mankind. W. P. BUCHAN.

Is a W.M. obliged to put a motion, duly seconded, to the vote of the lodge, if he, in his judgment, thinks it against the interest of the lodge? For instance, our by-laws have just been sanctioned, giving honorary members (of which I am one) all privileges, and now a brother moves for an alteration in the said by-laws, to prohibit them having any other privilege than voting for an initiate. Does my authority allow me to prevent this motion going to the vote? and should it have a retrospective effect on the by-laws already made?—AN HON. MEMBER.

[An honorary member has no status in a lodge.—ED. F.]

Count Bielfeld, the friend of Frederick the Great, paid a visit to the Grand Lodge of England on the 19th March, 1741. At that time an intimate alliance existed between the English and German Masons—several Provincial Grand Lodges in Germany being held under the jurisdiction of England. VIATOR.

THE ROYAL ORDER OF SCOTLAND AND ITS ANTIQUITY (p. 345).

Regarding the antiquity of the Royal Order of Scotland, the member must have been very dull who could not observe many proofs in the bosom of the Order that take it further back than the date to which he ascribes it. The facts related to every one on his admission are, that "King Robert Bruce, immediately after the battle of Bannockburn, founded the Royal Order of Heredom of Kilwinning, reserving to himself and his successors on the throne of Scotland the office and title of Grand Master," and in all meetings of this Order a chair is still placed as for the sovereign, which no one else ever occupies, and which the sovereign, if present, would take by right as his own.

Perhaps "X. Y. Z." will say where he received the Order, and proofs satisfactory may be given after then.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The committee meeting of this Institution was held on Wednesday, the 14th instant, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Bro. John Hervey, V.P., in the chair. Others present: Bros. J. Smith, J. Brett, J. Rucker, B. Head, W. Young, S. May, E. J. Fraser, N. Wingfield, G. Bolton, H. W. Hemsworth, F. Walters, H. M. Levy, W. H. Farnfield, T. Cubitt, &c.

Bro. W. Farnfield, Secretary, read the list of names on the committee for the ensuing year. The minutes of meeting held on 10th May were also read and confirmed.

The deaths of the following annuitants were announced:—Bros. John Brown, of Huddersfield; and W. D. Hughes, P.M. 73, London; and Mrs E. Simmons, of Southsea.

The Finance Committee was then elected, and the report of the Surveyor read, after which a committee was formed to carry out the suggestions made by the Surveyor and medical officer, and report thereon to the General Committee.

The usual vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

Obituary.

W. BRO. WILLIAM PETTIFOR,
P.P.G.S.W. Leicestershire and Rutland.

We regret to have to record the decease, on the 28th ult., at his residence, Rusbin-terrace, Leicester, of the above-named brother, at the age of fifty-one. The lamented brother, who was esteemed and respected by all who knew him, was one of the oldest Past Masters and most zealous Masons in the province. Bro. Pettifor was initiated in St. John's Lodge, Leicester, in the year 1845, and at the end of the following year he was appointed Junior Warden. In 1848-9 he served the office of Master, and on retiring from the chair was presented with a P.M.'s jewel by unanimous vote of the lodge. He was appointed Steward in the Provincial Grand Lodge in 1846, Superintendent of Works in 1847, and Senior Grand Warden in 1848. Having been exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter of Fortitude, attached to the lodge, he was elected Principal Sojourner, the duties of which office he performed most efficiently (as he did all which he undertook), and having passed through the chairs of J. and H., in 1851 he was appointed M.E.Z., and in 1858, the Grand Superintendent, Earl Howe, appointed him Third Principal in the Provincial Grand Chapter. He was advanced as a Mark Master in the Newstead Lodge, at Nottingham, and was one of the founders of the Howe Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 21, at Leicester (now removed to Melton-Mowbray), in which he served the office of Warden in the years 1858 and 1859, and in the following year he was elected Master; and he had also held office in the Mark Grand Lodge of the province. He was a zealous Mason, and during his membership of more than a quarter of a century his services were always available in any capacity where required, either in lodge or chapter; and although more than once declining to preside over the lodge a second time as Master, on two occasions, in the year 1855 and 1862, he accepted the office of S.W. under other brethren. Bro. Pettifor was of the most quiet, unobtrusive manners, and his obliging disposition and strict integrity of character made him to be universally esteemed and respected. After an illness of many months, he gradually sank, and expired on the 28th ult., at a comparatively early age, leaving a widow and youthful family to mourn his loss.

At a meeting of St. John's Lodge, No. 279, on the 7th inst., a resolution expressive of the deep regret of the brethren at his decease, and of their sympathy with his widow and family was adopted, as reported in another part of our paper.

BRO. LEMUEL LYON.

The funeral of the late U.S. Consul at Yokohama, Bro. Lemuel Lyon, took place on Sunday afternoon, 9th April, at three o'clock. The desire of the deceased was that he should be buried with Masonic ceremonies, and his wish was respected by his family and the brethren of the Craft. As his remains are to be conveyed to the United States for final sepulchre, and a fortnight will elapse before the steamer leaves for San Francisco, it was arranged that the coffin should be taken to the Masonic Hall, and there the ceremonies ordinarily observed at the grave should take place, and that the body should then remain in custody of the brethren until the time for shipment.

About 3 p.m. a large concourse assembled at the U.S. Consulate, including several of the consuls of other treaty powers, the personal friends of the deceased, and many of the residents. A preliminary prayer and address were offered by the Rev. Dr. Brown in the large room on the ground floor, in which the coffin had been placed, and then the mourners and visitors awaited the arrival of the Masonic Fraternity, who, having opened the lodge in due and ancient form, walked in procession to the house, and placing themselves around the coffin as directed, with the Worshipful Masters of the two lodges now working in Yokohama at the head of the coffin. The usual prayers and formalities appointed to be used at the house having been concluded, the procession formed again, and escorted the deceased, carried by seamen of the U.S. navy, to the hall, where the very impressive Masonic services were, as before, conducted by Bro. Rains, W.M. of the Yokohama Lodge, and Bro. Mitchell, W.M. of the O'Tentosama Lodge, assisted by the Past Masters, the officers and the brethren of both lodges, the public being admitted to that portion usually performed at the grave. This being done, the hall was cleared of all but Master Masons, and the lodge was closed. When all had retired, the widow and the immediate friends of the deceased visited the hall.

This is the first time a brother has been buried with full Masonic rites in Yokohama.—Japan Gazette.

Masonic Miscellanea.

BRO. the Rev. Charles Lee, Vicar of Holy Trinity, Haverstock Hill, has been elected to the perpetual curacy of Bilston, Staffordshire, after a severe contest, which resembled a political election.

THE Provincial Grand Master for Cumberland and Westmorland has appointed the Provincial Grand Festival to be held at Kendal, sometime in the latter end of September or beginning of October. The Right Rev. Dr. Magee, Lord Bishop of Peterborough, will be asked to preach on the occasion.

WE are requested to state that Master Masons, wishing to take the Mark and Royal Ark Mariners' Degrees, will be able to do so at a meeting at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, W.C., on Wednesday, the 21st June, at five o'clock, at a fee of two guineas the two degrees—if they make application to Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, 1, Devereux-court, Temple, W.C., previously.

ON Friday evening, 23rd June, the Fifteen Sections will be worked in the Doric Lodge of Instruction, No. 933, by Bro. Cundick, W.M., and fifteen brethren of the United Pilgrim's Lodge of Instruction, to commence at seven o'clock p.m. This novel interchange of working the sections in one lodge by the brethren of another lodge is the result of an invitation by the "Doric" to the "Pilgrims," who have kindly and promptly accepted the same.

It being deemed desirable to dispel an erroneous idea that members of the A. and A. Rite, or of the Order of the Temple, will in future be precluded from joining the Order of Constantine, we are requested to explain that the letter of Lord Limerick, which was read at the meeting of the Mark Grand Lodge on the 6th inst., referred solely to the treaty of alliance between the S.G.C. 33<sup>d</sup>, the Mark Masters, and the Knights Templar, and not to the separate treaty with the Red Cross Order.

THE distinguished services rendered by Lord de Grey in connection with the Treaty of Washington will, we are glad to know, meet with suitable recognition. The country will learn with pleasure that his lordship is about to be raised to the rank of Marquis, under the title of Marquis of Ripon. This step will, we are sure, receive the approval of men of all parties, who will recognise the value of Lord de Grey's labours in the negotiations so happily completed, and the beneficial influence he has been enabled to exert in strengthening the bonds of amity between England and the United States. Lord Tenterden, who acted as Secretary to the English members of the Joint High Commission, will be made a civil C.B.—Telegraph.

HALLIWELL'S POEM ANALYSED.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I presume that many of your readers have heard of Halliwell's poem or Constitution, but that very few have taken the pains to study it. For the information of the majority, I intend to point out what the poem is, and what may be learned from it.

In 1838, Mr. J. O. Halliwell discovered in the British Museum a manuscript poem, written five hundred years ago. It consists of nearly 800 lines, and embodies a constitution, charges, and legends known to the Craft at that time. As this is undoubtedly the first book which treats of Masons and Masonry, we must try and learn from it what the brethren then knew of Masonry, and afterwards compare their Masonry with our own. The author begins after the following fashion:—"He who will both read and look, may find in an old book" (what old book?) of great lords and ladies whose progeny was so numerous that they were not able to maintain them; so they called a counsell together and advertised for advice, when a "grete clerky yclept Euclde" undertook to 'organise the youngsters into a Fraternity, commanded them to call each other brother, and taught them "gemetry," which he called Masonry. From Egypt the Craft was introduced into England—not by Saint Alban, but in "good Kynge Adelstoun's day." The said king called an assembly of "dukys, erlys, barnes, knyghths, sqwyers," etc. Where or when the Parliament was held we are not informed. The word York occurs nowhere, nor are we sure that such titles as above given existed in the days of Adelstoun's or Athelstan's day. But, be that as it may, the king gave the Masons a charter, divided into fifteen articles, and as many points. Article 1st, headed "Articulus primus," commands honesty, faithfulness, &c.; 2nd enjoins the "Mayer" to attend at the assemblies; 3rd, 4th and 5th provides that an Apprentice must be of sound limb, no bondman, of "gentelle kynde," of "lawful blod," and must serve seven years. The law of "free-born" is attributed, in a later constitution, not to the history of Isaac and Ishmael, but to the noble blood of Euclide's pupils; and strange to say, later constitutions informs us also that those children of the Egyptian nobility were born of other men's wives. This last could not, however, have been known to good King Athelstan, for otherwise he would not have passed the law of lawful blood.

The fifteenth point ordains punishment for the disobedient. These were ordered the Craft to forsake, and if they would not do so, the sheriff was to put them in prison for trespass, take their goods and chattles to the king, and they were to remain in prison during the king's pleasure. Preston informs us that before the establishment of the G.L. of England, "Masons met together within a certain district with the consent of the Sheriff or chief magistrate of the place." This fifteenth point furnishes a key to the business of the sheriff at Masonic assemblies.

The 471st line, headed "Alia ordinacio Artis gemetria," provides for holding Masonic assemblies. Now, I imagine that 999 out of ever 1,000 of our American brethren would not mind betting a dollar that Saint John's Day was the day when Masons always met. Why? are we not nightly assured that the Saint Johns were eminent Masons, Grand Masters, and Grand Patrons? and do not our most profound St. John's Day orators almost swear that our ancient brethren, the Druids, used to hold their assemblies clothed in white aprons, &c., on the Baptist's Day? And yet, strange to say, our ancient brethren living in the days of Chaucer and Wicliff knew nothing about the Masonry of the Christian saints. The law provides that each year, or third year, an assembly should be held (not in York, but) "In every place wheresoever they would," and goes on to say, "Time and place must be ordained also." In short, no time of meeting was specified in the Constitution, but it was left to their discretion when, as well as where, they were to meet.

The 497th line, headed "Ars quatuor coronatorum," begins with an invocation to God: And "hys moder, Mary bright" that all the articles and points should be observed by the brotherhood, as did the four holy martyrs. These martyrs, who are elsewhere asserted to have been kings, are merely here mentioned as Masons and engravers of images. An emperor ordered them to make an image or idol; they being Christians, refused the job, and were therefore put to death. Next we are informed that the tower "Babyloyn" was seven miles high, so that in case of another flood the Babyloynians might ascend to the upper storey so as to be above high-water mark. King Nabogo-donosor undertook to strengthen the tower, when "an engele smote him with divers speihe." After which we are brought back again to "Clerky Euclide," teaching his pupils the seven sciences, of which "gemetry" is the most important. The above indicates the germ of some of our laws as well as lectures. The rest of the poem is devoted to moral and religious advice. Its religion, however, was simply the Roman Catholic religion, viz., to go to church, to shrive, to sprinkle with holy water, etc. It also says, "Much more ye must wyten [know] then ye fynden hyr wryten." This, however, does not indicate any secrets or mysteries, but merely refers to piety, religion, etc.

It is evident from the whole poem that five hundred years ago our ancient brethren knew nothing of Saint Alban, of York Masonry, or of St. John's Masonry; but what is most startling, they actually knew nothing, with the exception of Nabogodonosor, of any other scriptural Grand Master—not even of King Solomon and the Hyrams. The inference, therefore, is, that those legends were a manufacture of a later date. I know that the mere omission of an event does not necessarily prove that the event was unknown because it was omitted. In this case, however, the omission of, for instance, of naming the Saints John or Solomon from the said poem proves that the writer did not know their connection with the Masonic brotherhood. For be it remembered that we have internal evidence that the author of the poem was a priest, who was a warm friend and eulogist of the Fraternity, who must have had access to the assemblies, as well as the manuscripts, of the brethren, and who must consequently have been in possession of all the legends then known or in vogue among the Masons. The composition of the poem must have cost considerable time, labour, patience, thought, and expense—all of which must have been done from no mercenary motives, but purely for the purpose of edifying the brethren. And how, then, can we reconcile an evident fact that a Catholic priest, whose aim must have been to exalt the importance of the Masonic Brotherhood, as well as his religion, should have devoted so much of his composition to the Egyptian children, to Euclide, the four martyrs, Nabogodonosor, Adclstouns, etc., and at the same time should have utterly ignored every Biblical Grand Master from Adam up or down?

I have also perused Matthew Cooke's Constitution. One in the Freemasons' Magazine (1794), one in C. W. Moore's Magazine (1843), one in the Gentlemen's Magazine (1815), and five of the same class of documents published by my esteemed friend Bro. Hughan. I shall not at present attempt to compare them, but must only state some of them, if they are not forgeries, indicate a secret amongst the Masons. There is a strong family resemblance between all, and yet the legends differ. It reminds us of the tune of "Yankee Doodle," with variations; and however the variations may be, "Yankee Doodle" is discovered to form the back-bone. They nearly all begin with an invocation, followed by legends, and ending with "so help you God and the holy contents of this book." Others have it "this scroll;" and still in another we have it "so help you God and your halydom." Here we can see the different modes of taking an oath. In old Catholic times the Bible was not used for administering an oath—the word halydom or holiness sufficed. Afterwards "the contents of this scroll" was introduced. This could not have had reference to the Bible. I have never heard that Christians, after the 15th century, had their Bibles written on scrolls. The word scroll therefore simply meant the Constitution; and last of all the Protestant fashion of swearing by a book was introduced.

And now let me venture another suggestion. Very few intelligent Masons now disagree that previous to 1717 the Masonic Brotherhood were in possession of more than one ceremony or degree. It now strikes me that, as nearly all the old parchment Constitutions preserved in your libraries or museums begin with an invocation, immediately followed by or with "Good brethren and fellows, our purpose is to tell you in what manner this Craft was began," and each winding up with an oath, that each and all of those parchment Constitutions must therefore have been especially written for the use of old lodges, and that they were designed for the double purpose of a constitution and of a ritual. These constitutions, in short, contain the gist of the mysteries revealed to the then candidates. When the authorities of the G.L. of England in 1720 or '22 called upon the old members of the Craft to bring forward their old documents for the purpose of having a constitution printed, the old bricklayers were naturally horrified at the idea of printing their legends, so they immediately destroyed their manuscripts. The probability, however, is, that the manuscripts that were then burnt were neither more nor less than similar constitutions to those above alluded to; and if any brother would take the trouble, and place all the constitutions preserved in rotation according to their seniority, he may at a glance discover the successive additions made to our legendary stock from the 14th century to our own day.

One fact, however, must not be overlooked, viz., that in no constitution written previous to 1717 can I find mention made of observing St. John's Day, nor is the name of St. John anywhere alluded to.

Fraternally and respectfully yours,
JACOB NORTON.
Boston, U.S., May 25, 1871.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—As is well known, one of the degrees in our Craft has especial reference to the "hidden mysteries of nature and science," and we are charged to "study such of the liberal arts and sciences as may lie within the compass of our attainment." More especially are members of our order interested in all matters which have reference to building and architecture. In the case which it is now desired to place before your readers, there is a union of the latter with science which cannot fail to be interesting to all who take delight in archaeological pursuits. In many of our old towns, increased knowledge of the requisites for health and longevity, and many other causes, have led to the demolition of a large number of ancient buildings, some of which may perchance be connected with historical events or with the lives of great men of past ages, and it is very important that, while such relics are in existence, authentic records should be made and preserved, the compilation of which often brings out facts which are in danger of being lost. How much present labour, uncertainty, and expense, for instance, would have been saved had correct plans been preserved of King Solomon's Temple and the adjacent buildings, and thereby how much light might have been thrown on our Masonic traditions, by which they would have been confirmed or overthrown, and thus left no room for doubt or scepticism?

To the point, however. Dartmouth—several centuries ago a town of great commercial importance—has fallen into comparative insignificance; yet it boasts of the names of great men who have been connected with it, and of none more so than Newcomen, or Newcomin, whose fame as the inventor of the steam engine has been lost in that of Watt, its improver, for the machine of the former was effectively used to drain the mines in Cornwall long before the latter commenced his operations. Happily, Bro. Capt. Thomas Lidstone, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.S.W. for Devon, a most worthy and skilful member of our Fraternity, while carrying on business as an architect and builder, imbued with the spirit of research as an operative as well as speculative Mason, being often called upon to pull down old edifices and to erect new ones, has for many years carefully stored up decorations in wood or stone, chimney-pieces, panellings, &c., with a view to their preservation and adaptation elsewhere. Some time ago he was directed to destroy the house in which Newcomen had resided, in order to open a thoroughfare and make way for modern improvements. Anxious to preserve an authentic memento of so great a man, he purchased an old house of the period, in a situation not likely to require removal, completely restored it in the proper style, and arranged one room with the internal fittings which he had taken from that occupied by Newcomen. His next course was to compile a small work, which was published in 1869 by Longman and Co. (price 3s.) under the title of "Some Account of the Residence of the Inventor of the Steam Engine," illustrated by woodcuts. This ran through several editions, and was very favourably noticed in the Athenæum, as "a remarkable book." The result has been much correspondence, further inquiry, and the issue, last month, of another work by the same author, published by Hotten, 74, Piccadilly, London (price 8d.), entitled "A few Notes and Queries about Newcomen; a drawing of his engine, his house, and something about his kettle, his monument, &c."

A copy of this interesting work will be placed in your hands, and it cannot be doubted that your reviewer will favourably commend it to the notice of your readers to such effect as to lead to its extensive perusal; further, it is to be hoped that some persons may be able to furnish Bro. Lidstone with the additional information which he seeks.

Yours fraternally,

WAS IT MANLY?

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Excuse me expressing my disgust at the paltry "motion" recorded at the beginning of page 363. In my eyes it breathes a strong feeling of jealousy, while the personal attack implied against the "subaltern" referred to is anything but manly. Further, allow me to inform the supporters of this motion that the foundation upon which the Constantinian Order referred to is based, is just as good, either in fact or in a historical point of view, as that of the Temple, or any other Masonic pseudo-Knightly "Order." If this is the sort of warfare the "Knights Templar" of to-day engage in, the sooner they beat their swords into door-scrapers the better.

I am, fraternally yours,
AN ONLOOKER.

"FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the middle of my letter at page 346, there is a small lapsus penne, or misprint, viz., in, "Since God has bestowed upon man the gift of reason, He surely expects that man will do so," the two last words should be use it; i.e., "He surely expects that man will use it." The references being to the distinction to be drawn between true faith and what is in reality only simple credulity.

I am, yours fraternally,
W. P. B.

MARK MASONRY.

CONSTITUTION OF THE PROV. GRAND MARK LODGE FOR MIDDLESEX AND SURREY.

In accordance with a summons issued by the Percy Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 114, a considerable number of brethren of the Order assembled in the Council Chamber in the Town Hall, at Guildford, on Friday, the 2nd inst., for the purpose of assisting at the constitution of the new province of Middlesex and Surrey, and the installation of Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett as Provincial Grand Master. The M.W.G. Mark Master, the Rev. George Raymond Portal, M.A., having expressed his intention to personally constitute the Provincial Grand Lodge, and to instal its first Grand Master, was supported by the V.W. Bros. James Stevens, G.J.O.; Thos. Meggy, P.G.M.O.; F. Binckes, G. Sec.; and W. Bros. S. Rosenthal, G.D.C.; R. Spencer, P.G.S.B.; C. Hammerton, G. Steward; the brethren of the Percy Lodge; and the following brethren from London lodges, viz., Bros. E. Cronin and J. Thomas, of the Macdonald Lodge, No. 104; F. Davidson, No. 7; G. Barlow, Bon Accord; and others, whose names we were unable to ascertain.

Apologies for non-attendance were received from the R.W. Bros. the Earl Percy, D.G.M.M.; the Earl of Limerick, G.S.W.; Colonel Adair, G.J.W.; Lord Eliot, P.G.W.; and Bros. Setna, Harrison, Charrington, Goodliff, F. M. Williams, and others of various lodges; and from Bro. Captain Burgess, Alfred Williams, Deane, Waterall, and others, of the Macdonald Lodge, No. 104.

The Percy Lodge having been duly opened, the M.W.G.M.M. proceeded to instal Bros. Col. Francis Burdett and F. Davison as Masters of lodges, and subsequently constituted the new province, installing in due form Bro. Col. Francis Burdett as R.W.P.G.M.M. for Middlesex and Surrey.

The new Provincial Grand Master then appointed and installed Bro. Frederic Davison as R.W.D.P.G.M.M., and the usual salutes were given to the newly-installed officers.

The Provincial Grand Master then appointed and subsequently invested his Grand Officers as follows:—

- Bro. A. R. Greenfell... G.S.W.
- " Captain G. Barlow... G.J.W.
- " W. E. Elkins... G.M.O.
- " J. Nealds... G.J.O.
- " Rev. L. O. Bigg... G. Chaplain.
- " G. J. Smallpiece... G. Treasurer.
- " C. Hammerton... G. Secretary.
- " W. Cookson... G.D.C.
- " John Thomas... G. Sword-Bearer.
- " J. W. M. Piggot... G. Recorder.

In making these appointments, the R.W.P.G. Mark Master intimated that he had purposely left open some of the offices, in order to afford the opportunity to several lodges in the united province to recommend zealous members of the Order for appointment thereto, and it was to be distinctly understood that the acceptance of provincial office should not hinder promotion to office in Grand Lodge; but, on the contrary, the M.W. Grand Master would be disposed to give consideration to services in provincial lodges in furtherance of preferment to Grand rank.

An appointment of Committee to prepare the by-laws and consider the fees to be paid, and some other routine business ensued, and after a cordial vote of thanks to the M.W. Grand Master for his personal attendance on the occasion, the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed, and subsequently also the Percy Lodge.

The brethren then repaired to the Angel Inn, where a plentiful banquet had been provided, and at which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

We augur great success for the new province, as the officers appointed are really zealous for Mark Masonry, and will doubtless see that the several lodges under their control are made perfect in their work. As an instance of the interest taken in the new province, we may note the fact that, amongst other London lodges represented, one, the Macdonald, No. 104, had its W.M. and six officers present, with their Tyler in attendance.

The Provincial Grand Master presided at the banquet, and left with the London brethren for return to town soon after nine o'clock.

INSTALLATION MEETING OF MACDONALD LODGE, No. 104.

This lodge met on Saturday last for the installation of its newly-elected W.M. at the Head-quarters 1st Surrey Rifles, Brunswick-road, Camberwell. It was numerously attended, and had among its many visitors some distinguished Masons. The Rev. John Huyshe, P.G.M. Devon; F. Davison, Dep. P.G.M. Middlesex and Surrey, the V.W. Bro. Elsich, Grand Warden for the District of the Punjab; Capt. Barlow, P.G. Warden; and the Rev. D. Shaboc, were of these; and the members of the lodge who were present were Bros. Jas. Stevens, P.G.J.O., W.M.; Eugene Cronin, G.S.D., S.W.; S. Rosenthal, P.G.D.C., J.W.; G. Waterall, A. Wolton, T. Meggy, P.G.M.O., P.M.; C. Hammerton, Grand Steward, Sec.; T. White, C. Fountain, G. Newman, E. H. Finney, E. H. Finney, jun., C. I. Dean, Alfred Williams, W. Worrell, and W. Newton. There were besides, Bros. G. Barlow, Bon Accord; A. Geraldin, J. Jonas, H. Massey, P.M. 22; John Strachan, 1319; and G. B. Porteous, 1216; and others.

The W.M., Bro. James Stevens, first advanced Bros. Porteous, Geraldin, Strachan, and Jonas; and having then read communications from Grand Lodge, next thanked the brethren for the assistance they had rendered him during his year of office, and afterwards presented a handsome P.M. jewel to Bro. T. Meggy, the first W.M. of this lodge. Bro. Meggy having acknowledged the gift, promised the lodge his future support, and Bro. James Stevens, having first read the dispensation from the M.W. G.M., proceeded with the ceremony of installing Bro. Cronin as Master. At its conclusion, the W.M. invested Bro. Stevens as I.P.M., and presented him with a P.M. jewel. The following brethren were afterwards selected to serve as officers of this lodge for the year:—Bros. S. Rosenthal, S.W.; C. Hammerton, J.W.; G. Waterall, M.O.; A. Wolton, S.O.; W. Worrell, J.O. and Organist; T. Meggy, P.M., Treasurer; Berridge, Registrar; Thomas W. White, S.D.; G. Newman, J.D.; Alfred Williams, I.G.; C. Fountain, D.C.; E. H. Finney, jun., Wine Steward; W. Newton, Steward; and Grant, Tyler. Bro. the Rev. G. H. Porteous was elected Chaplain to the lodge, and Bro. Meggy having delivered the final addresses,

The Rev. John Huyshe complimented the lodge on the efficiency of all its officers, and on the admirable manner in which Bro. Stevens had performed the ceremony of advancement. As the oldest Mark Mason in the lodge, and the oldest Provincial Grand Mark Master, it had of course been his lot to see workings of all descriptions, but he had never, during his career, witnessed better working than had taken place in this lodge, nor, indeed, had he seen it equalled.

The brethren then assisted the W.M. to close the lodge, and adjourned, when this ceremony was completed, to a choice little banquet, which was aided by the supply of some delicious wines, the gift of the newly-installed W.M. Grace was said by the Chaplain, and the usual toasts followed.

Bro. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O., P.M., in replying to the toast of the Grand Officers, remarked that Earl Percy, the Dep. Grand Master, was a most energetic Mark Mason, and whenever he was engaged on Masonic matters, made himself thoroughly master of the subject he took in hand. Whenever his lordship spoke in Grand Lodge, he was listened to with attention, and what he said was received with respect. So favourable an impression had he created that when the time came for the present Grand Master to leave the chair the brethren of the Mark degree would no doubt supply his place by electing Earl Percy, and would feel that in doing so they were only performing an act of justice. Bro. Meggy added that the officers of Grand Lodge did their duty. It did not, perhaps, appear that they had much to do; but it was only by attention to the affairs of that body by the Grand Officers that everything went on so smoothly in it. While their services were appreciated, the Grand Officers felt that they had their reward, and they asked for no other.

Bro. James Stevens, P.G.J.O., I.P.M., proposed "The Provincial Grand Officers," and eulogised the enthusiasm of Bro. Huyshe, who came all the way from Devonshire much more frequently than would generally be believed; and of Bro. Davison, the Deputy Grand Master of a new province and likewise a Mason who was very energetic. The Macdonald Mark Lodge was composed of energetic Masons, and their labours were rewarded by grand office being conferred on many of its members. Their energy was shown by the presence of no less than nine of their members at the Moveable Grand Lodge at Leicester, and the Master, the I.P.M., the W.M.-elect, two Wardens, Secretary, and Tyler were at the constitution of the new province of Middlesex and Surrey at Guildford a few days ago. Being energetic themselves, they liked to receive energetic Masons, and when such visited them, their humble table was under a deep debt of gratitude to them, especially when, as was the case today, among them were to be found brethren who hailed from a distant clime. This evening had been a most successful one—one especially so, even among all the successful evenings that this lodge had had during the last two years—and he had felt very much gratified that the Prov. G. Master for Devonshire, his native county, had recognised the quality of the working he had witnessed.

Bro. Huyshe, Provincial Grand Master for Devon, in the course of a lengthy reply, after referring to the long time that he had been a Freemason—fifty years—asked whether any brother, however old a Mason he was, could say he regretted for one moment having become a Free and Accepted Mason. He did not; but he should have had cause for regret if he had not become one, for some of his dearest friends he owed to Masonry alone. Wherever he went, a brother held out "the right hand of fellowship." He again expressed himself pleased at the working of the lodge, and hailed with peculiar satisfaction the appointment that day of a Chaplain. The value of such an officer was very great, and he had no doubt the brethren would appreciate his services.

Bro. Davison, Deputy P.G.M. Middlesex and Surrey, also responded, expressing his pleasure at what he had seen and heard, and regretting the absence of Colonel Burdett, Prov. G.M., from such a treat, whom nothing but the most urgent circumstances, he was sure, would have kept away.

Bro. Elsich (District Grand Warden for the Punjab), who had been thirty years a Mason, and had during that time travelled in every part of the world, added his testimony to the superiority of this lodge. As he saw so many Grand Officers present, he would take the opportunity of laying before them for their consideration a hardship which he, in common with others in Her Majesty's service, laboured under. He was constantly being shifted from one station to another, and this necessitated his paying joining fees over and over again to new lodges. He thought that a remedy ought to be found for this evil, because it became a heavy tax, and many officers could not afford it.

Bro. the Rev. G. H. Porteous, Chaplain, replied for the newly-advanced brethren. He was convinced that there was a great deal of truth in the maxim, "Knowledge is power." Every fresh fact gained, every new discovery made, every opening perception of the mind, every new aspiration developed in the soul, was power. It was to that extent delight, pleasure, being. Although we were not operative Masons, we were in some sense practical ones, and our knowledge attached itself to certain sentiments, impulses, and common hopes that belonged to us as men. If to entertain the creed of a Mason, know its formularies, understand its doctrines, search and be able to learn something of its symbolism, meant nothing more than the theoretical acquisition of a knowledge of its creed, formularies, doctrines, symbolism, then we were less than men and less than brethren. The knowledge we acquired was essentially a humanising power, its groundwork charity; and if there was a philosophy at the back of our Masonic meetings, it was this—that our knowledge was to lead to practical consequences, to open-handed benevolence, to generous sympathies, to familiarity with the wants of the sick and the miserable, the poor and the forsaken in every way. It was to administer solace to those who were comfortless, homes to those who were houseless, and generosity to those whom Providence had cut off from kindness. As brethren, we ought to do a great deal on behalf of the Craft. Our Masonic art led to one sole object, how far could we, in exchange for wit and wine, advance the interests of each other. It was not by preaching abstract doctrines, nor by enforcing ancient formularies, but by the genial intercourse of man with man, that the heart was opened to misery and suffering. As their Chaplain, he would preach good-will towards men, and strive to impress upon them the grand distinctive principle of Masonry, cordiality—cordiality, having its background in charity and its sentiment in festivity. (Cheers.)

Bros. Jonas and Strachan also responded.

Bro. James Stevens proposed "The W.M."

The W.M.: I thank you very much indeed for the kind and cordial way in which you have received me to-night; in fact, I think I am not egotistic when I say I expected nothing else, because I know how kindly you have behaved to me ever since I have belonged to the lodge. I really feel what a responsible position I am placed in, but more especially as I have seen what a very high position the Macdonald Lodges have held, both in Mark and Craft Masonry, ever since they were founded. I never go anywhere and mention the name of the Macdonald lodges, without being well received and the lodges well spoken of. I am consequently highly pleased to belong to both. I do not know how I shall fill this chair; I will, however, always try to do my best, and I am sure that what I fail in the Past Masters will help me in. At all events, you will know that if I fail my failing will not come from want of good-will. (Cheers.)

Bro. Meggy replied for the P.M.'s, and Bro. Blight (of Exeter) for the visitors. This latter brother expressed his gratification at the style of work in the Macdonald Lodge, and hoped he should see it introduced into the West of England.

Bro. Davison, Deputy Prov. G. Master Middlesex and Surrey, offered himself as Steward for this lodge at the Grand Mark Festival, and his offer was received with much cordiality.

Bro. S. Rosenthal responded for the Officers, and the meeting, which was a most delightful one from beginning to end, broke up.

CONSECRATION OF THE FURNESS LODGE, BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

The Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland some time ago were pleased to grant a warrant for a Mark lodge to be held at Barrow, but owing to several unforeseen occurrences the consecration was postponed until Friday, the 9th instant.

The brethren duly met at the Royal Hotel, and the lodge was formally opened by the R.W.M.-designate, Bro. Relph, assisted by the future officers.

Amongst the visitors present were Bros. Thomas Entwisle, 18°, R.W. Prov. G.M.M. Lancashire; C. Fitzgerald Matier, 30°, D. Prov. G.M.M.; G. P. Brockbank, 30°, Prov. G.S.W.; and J. W. Taylor, Prov. G. Sec.

Two only of the candidates who had been approved of were able to attend, Bros. Cook and Lewes, P.M.'s, and on their introduction they were advanced to the degree of Mark Master by the P.G.M.M. The secrets, working tools, and congratulatory charge were given by the D.P.G.M.M.

The Prov. Grand Officers then retired, and a procession was formed—Bro. Dr. Allison, P.G.J.D.; Bro. Relph, P.G.J.O., bearing corn; Bro. Taylor, P.G. Sec., bearing wine; Bro. Brockbank, P.G. S.W., with the oil; and Bro. Matier, D.P.G.M.M., carrying the thurible and incense. The Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of Lancashire was then opened in due form by Bro. Thomas Entwisle, who immediately proceeded to the ceremony of consecration, which was gone through with the utmost solemnity and perfection of ritual by all engaged.

Bro. Entwisle then declared and proclaimed the Furness Lodge, No. 24, S.C., duly open, consecrated and dedicated.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed, and the officers retired in regular order.

On their re-entry, the chair was taken by Bro. Matier, and Bros. Taylor and Brockbank presented Bro. Relph for the benefit of installation. The usual preliminaries having taken place, all brethren below the chair retired, and Bro. Relph was formally installed in the chair of Adoniram. On the return of the brethren, the newly-installed R.W.M. was proclaimed and saluted, and the following officers were invested by, and received the appropriate addresses from, Bro. Matier:—Bros. Dr. Allison, S.W.; T. Kendal, J.W.; T. Ormandy, M.O.; G. Cornfield, S.O.; J. Morris, J.O.; J. Fisher, Treas. (elected); Henry Bagot, Sec.; W. F. Cox, Conductor; J. Huartson, S.D.; T. McKnight, J.D.; R. F. Taylor, Organist; M. Haslem, Time-keeper; T. Gabbatt, Tyler (elected).

Bro. Matier then addressed the R.W.M., officers, and brethren in his most impressive manner, and concluded the ceremony of installation.

Heartly good wishes were given by the visitors, and the lodge was closed.

The brethren then proceeded to banquet, served by Bro. Brownrigg, of the Royal Hotel, who kindly assisted in the administration of the creature comforts. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair and heartily responded to, and the brethren separated at an early hour, highly pleased with all they had seen and heard.

GIBRALTAR.—Gibraltar Lodge, No. 43.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 25th ult. In addition to the election of several joining members, and the advancement of three brethren, the annual election of the W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler for the coming year had to be carried out. The ceremony of advancement was performed by the W.M., Bro. Webster, in his usual clear and impressive style. The elections then commenced, and after the usual scrutiny, Bro. Balfour Cockburn was declared elected W.M. by 34 votes out of 37, and Bro. Treney, Treasurer, by an equally powerful majority. The W.M., Bro. Webster, in an eloquent speech then addressed a few complimentary words to the W.M.-elect, and congratulated the lodge on the prospective attainment of a W.M. who had already proved himself so competent in the management of other equally important Masonic charges. It is worthy of notice that the Gibraltar Mark Lodge is a firm supporter of the rule requiring candidates for the chair to be Masters or Past Masters of a Craft Lodge, and also to have served the office of Warden of a Mark Lodge. Notwithstanding the continually-floating population from which this lodge gathers its brethren, the great majority of the members being in the army, navy, or civil service, it has never yet had occasion to apply to Grand Lodge for a dispensation to break through this regulation, thoroughly competent and properly qualified brethren having at all times been forthcoming for election, and never at any time was the lodge more flourishing and vigorous than at present.

GLASGOW.

COMPLIMENTARY SUPPER.

On Friday evening, the 9th inst., about thirty gentlemen, including those without as well as those within "the light," met in Thornton's Restaurant, Argyle-street, Glasgow, in compliment to Bro. John Davidson, I.P.M. of Lodge Commercial, Glasgow, No. 360, on the occasion of his relinquishing business on his own account to join the firm of Messrs. Duncan, Campbell and Son, wholesale stationers, &c., Glasgow. Bro. J. D. Porteous, R.W.M. Lodge Commercial, presided, Daniel Wilson, Esq., officiating as vice-chairman; and amongst those present were: Bros. James Wallace, P.G.J.D.; J. Brodie, P.M. Lodge Commercial; John Ure, Sec. Lodge Commercial; G. B. Adams, John Rattray, Henry Purnell, Capt. Gilchrist, C. H. Fox, and R. McKenzie. The non-members of the Craft included Messrs. William Gilchrist, John Young, William Rankin, James Kay, John Mann, Donnison, &c. After the customary loyal and patriotic toasts had been disposed of, the Chairman, in brief and felicitous terms, proposed the toast of the evening—"Health and prosperity to Mr. Davidson"—who, we may mention, has on three several occasions been elected Master of the Lodge Commercial since its consecration, just twenty years ago, in 1851. The toast having been honoured with enthusiasm, and acknowledged in fitting terms by the guest of the occasion, a few other toasts were given and responded to—especially that of "Ours," a geological club of Glasgow, of which Bro. Davidson has long been a distinguished member. Songs alternated with toasts, throughout a most agreeable evening.

By request, we add to our report of the presentation to Bro. Buchanan, last week, the speech made by Bro. McPherson in proposing "The Guests of the Evening":—

Ladies, gentlemen, and worthy chairman—
My rhyme will not be so long as a sermon;
To make it short and it condense
Will be my part and no pretence.
In looking round the hall, I am afraid
That I some grave mistake have made
In trying to speak on this grand occasion,
This the evening of your presentation
Given to him you may rely on—
P.M. Bro. John Buchanan,
Our proper motto and more proper plan
Was to acknowledge the merit of the worthy man;
His humble efforts followed one on the other,
He was, indeed, the Mason friend and brother,
And in the Craft was prompt and steady,
With liberal open-handedness was ever ready.
Faith, Hope, and Charity in triangular form
Did many of his actions kind adorn—
For that latent power he well did feel
Which did the goodness of his heart reveal.
Now, to the partner of his ample board
May love, peace, and truth all afford
That bliss of mind which is untold,
And in vigorous force be uncontrolled,
Then to their basket and to their store
May each good be real, and each better than before.
And as years fly by, and time doth glide,
Find them in comfort by their ain fireside.
Brethren, fill your glasses, let not a drop be lost,
While the health of the evening's guests we toast.
Their continued prosperity is our earnest desire,
Then give with due Masonic fire.

ANCIENT RUINS.

Ancient Egypt, Palestine, and the East—Religion, Literature, &c.

By M. W. ALFRED, A.M., M.D.

CHAPTER II.

During the long reign of Rameses the Great, and preceding it, literature of a high order flourished in Egypt, and radiated throughout the vast dominions of that sovereign in Asia, as well as in Africa.

With the high state of military glory, there existed also evidences of immense intellectual development. Poetry of rich and exalted character was composed by Pentel-our, the friend and admirer of his sovereign. The books of Papyrus exhumed from the tombs attest the flourishing state of learning at the court of the Pharaohs before the Hebrews left the lands along the Nile for their Asiatic possessions.

Egypt had her "wise men, astrologers, and sooth-sayers," and her physicians had the greatest renown. The King had his officiating priests, who pronounced for him the words of Ammon; and from among the priests and college students were the ranks of the scribes supplied. These "wise men" withstood Moses, and performed some of the miracles which he performed. "They cast their rods upon the ground, and they became serpents." "They stretched their rods out over the river and pools, and the fish died." "They brought forth frogs, as Moses did." (See Exod. vii., viii.) Moses was thoroughly educated in all their learning. He was reared in a country which had carried art and industry to a very high pitch, and at a time when its literature shone with great brilliancy.

It is easy to recognise in the Egyptian texts the peculiar turn of verses which form the special character of the Hebrew poetry. The earliest sacred writers have directly borrowed from the priestly annalists certain expressions whose energy and beauty have long been admired, and it is no mean glory for the poet Pentel-our, and for the other men of letters assembled at the Court of Rameses Mei Amoun, to have had a considerable share in the literary education of the Hebrew legislator. (Viscount E. de Rouge.)

The Pharaohs sustained about the same relation to the religious worship of Egypt that David and Solomon did many centuries afterwards in Palestine. The Supreme Being was known to the Egyptians by the appellation Ammon, which is only another name for Jupiter. The Hebrew word Jehovah evidently comes from Jupiter. Dr. Clark has clearly stated this. If we decline the Latin name Jupiter, we have in the ablative case Jove, Jupiter, Jovis, Jovem, Jove. Instead of one syllable, divide "Jove" into three, and we have Ye-ov-ah. Both Egyptians and Hebrews used a number of appellations for God, as every student knows.

The Egyptians acknowledged the operations of evil spirits as clearly as the Jews, long afterwards.

A Stele, or sepulchral monument, found among the ruins of a Theban temple, represents a sovereign from the borders of the Tigris sending a solemn retinue to Egypt, commissioned to loan an idol reputed to possess the power of exorcising evil spirits from those possessed by them. The daughter of this functionary was supposed to be possessed by such a spirit, and consequently a journey of three hundred leagues was but a trivial undertaking to consummate its expulsion or exorcism.

So we see that the opinion which ascribes bodily infirmities to the operation of malign spirits prevailed prior to the days of Moses. It still prevails among the tribes of central Africa, if not in enlightened America.

We transcribe at this place a translation from the Stele of the Temple of Khons, which relates to this opinion:—

"In the fifteenth year of his reign, when his Majesty was celebrating at Thebes, that capital and mistress of the nations, the grand panegyric of his father Ammon, the Sun, the distributor of thrones; behold the arrival of a messenger, bearing rich presents from the King of Bouchten for the Queen, was announced to his Majesty. On being admitted to the presence of Rameses, the envoy saluted his Majesty in these words: 'Glory to thee, O Sun of nine peoples! grant to us the breath of life.' Then prostrating himself, he added: 'The King, my master, sent me to thy holiness because of Benten-za, the young sister of the Queen Ra-Neferou. A secret malady consumes her. Will thy holiness deign to send her one of those men who know all things?' The first person sent 'being placed in the presence of the spirit that beset the Princess, found himself its inferior, and dare not engage in contest with it.' A second physician was sent (Khonsou-Pasar-Secher), who exorcised the evil spirit, and 'Bentennest was instantly cured, and the spirit withdrew whither he saw fit.'"

We have given but a small part of this account as found on the Stele of the Temple of Khons, but enough for a specimen of the whole.

This event was transmitted to this monument long before the Hebrews possessed the Land of Canaan. But this Princess was not the only person in high rank who thus suffered. Hercules was said to have been similarly affected; and hence Aristotle calls epilepsy Morbus Herculeus; and Hippocrates, who wrote his medical treatise about three centuries B.C., styles it Morbus Sacer—the disease caused by the gods. It was believed that God sent good and evil messengers, or angels, to perform His purposes of vengeance or of kindness. It is recorded in our sacred writings of King Saul "that an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him" (1 Sam., xvi.), which David drove away by his skilful performances upon the harp.

Also in the New Testament we find professional exorcists, or expellers of demons. "Then certain of the vagabond (wandering) Jews, Exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying: 'We abjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preaches. And there were seven sons of Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests which did so.'" (Acts xix.) Exorcism was the professional business of a large class of "traveling" Hebrew doctors. Christ asked the Jews "by what authority their sons cast out demons?" (Luke, xi.), showing conclusively this fact. The casting out or exorcising demons was not in dispute, but they falsely accused Christ of casting them out through "Beelzebub."

Josephus says of King Solomon: "God also enabled him to learn that skill which expels demons, which is a science useful and sanative to men. He composed such incantations also by which distempers are alleviated. And he kept behind him the manner of using exorcism, by which they drive away demons, so that they never return; and this method of cure is of great force unto this day, for I have seen a certain man of my own country, whose name was Eleazar, releasing people that were demoniacal, in the presence of Vespasian, and his sons, and his captains, and the whole multitude of his soldiers. The manner of the cure was this: He put a ring that had a root of one of those sorts mentioned by Solomon to the nostrils of the demoniac, after which he drew out the demon through his nostrils, and when the man fell down immediately, he adjured him to return into him no more, making still mention of Solomon, and reciting the incantations which he composed. And when Eleazar would persuade and demonstrate to the spectators that he had such a power, he set a little way off a cup or basin of water, and commanded the demon as he went out of the man to overturn it, and thereby to let the spectators know that he had left the man; and when this was done the skill and wisdom of Solomon was shown very manifestly, for which reason it is that all men may know the vastness of Solomon's abilities, and how he was beloved of God, and that the extraordinary virtues of every kind with which the ring was endowed may not be unknown to any people under the sun; for this reason I say it is that we have proceeded to speak so largely of those matters." (Antiquities of the Jews, Book viii., ch. ii.) Fragments of these conjurations of Solomon may be found in Fabricius. (Cod. Pseudepigr., Vct. Test. p. 1054.)

Quoting again from the Stele of the Temple of Khons, it is asserted that the second prophet sent by Pharaoh, Khonsou-Pa-ar-secher, "On reaching the place where the Princess Benten-rest was, the spirit that beset her humiliated itself before him and said: 'Welcome to thee, mighty God, conqueror of those who rebel! I am thy slave; I shall be no hindrance to the purpose of thy journey, but shall return to the place whence I came.'"

Every reader will see at once the antiquity of the opinions concerning the evil operation of these malign spirits. Whether they are substantial or not in the minutiae each must judge for himself—our duty is simply to present the facts.

The inscription on each long-buried Stele, the hieroglyphic tales of the Papyrus, and the still fresh mural paintings but so recently disinterred in Egypt, come to us like a voice from eternity. As before stated, I have examined one of these Papyri which lay for many centuries on the breast of an Egyptian mummy, probably from the time when Joseph's brethren appeared before him to purchase those sacks of corn to transport back to their home in Canaan.—The Michigan Freemason.

In our account of the proceedings of the Mark Grand Lodge we inadvertently omitted to note the appointment of Bro. the Rev. N. Haycroft, D.D., an eminent Nonconformist minister of Leicester and a very distinguished Mason, to be Grand Chaplain. We ought also to have mentioned, as being present, Bro. the Rev. William Langley, P.M. 21 and D.P.G.M.M. of Leicestershire and Rutland.

The following stand over till next week:—"The Fair Sex and Adoptive Masonry;" "Festival of St. John the Baptist, Skiddaw;" Reports of Lodges 788, 869, 1222, 1224, 1250, 1309, 1310, 1331; Chapter 107; Conclave 44.

THE BEST PUDDING.
MAYAR'S SEMOLINA.

24 PRIZE MEDALS.

NOTICE.

Read this with care and attention.)

THE MANUFACTORY OF MAYAR'S SEMOLINA was established in 1815. It is the oldest and the largest in the World, Twenty-five Million pounds being yearly produced. (25,000,000.)

Our SEMOLINA is the staple food in France, Russia, Spain, Italy, &c., and will soon be that of England. It has obtained in the Great Exhibitions for its superiority over all others, and is pronounced by the most eminent members of the Medical Profession, both in London and in Paris, to be far more Nutritious than Tapioca, Arrowroot, corn flour (which are only Starch), or any farinaceous food already introduced into this country. See Dr. Hassall's Analytical Report in the columns of this paper.

24 PRIZE MEDALS

N.B.—Being determined to maintain its reputation, we again CAUTION the Public, that an imitation, to which a false and ridiculous name has been given, is introduced by a well known Firm, taking advantage of its name and publicity to sell a similar article of very inferior quality, to realise extra profits, and who advertise in favour of that article the qualities possessed by our Semolina.

As a proof of our assertion we challenge a comparison, by analysis, between our SEMOLINA and the so-called Pearlina.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is solely the heart of the very best Wheat.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is richer than any other farinaceous food in Azotic matter, indispensable in the muscular formation of the body.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Highly recommended by the Faculty for Children and Invalids

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is extremely nourishing and easily digested.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA makes delicious Puddings, Custards and Pastry

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA unequalled for thickening Soups, Beef Tea, and Gruels.

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA is the greatest delicacy for Breakfast and Supper

MAYAR'S SEMOLINA. Is very economical. May be used with or without Milk. Recipes on each Package.

6d. lb. in Packet, 8d. in Canister. Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, &c.

HOMINY.

MAYAR'S HOMINY, produced from the best Indian Maize, without any adulteration obtained by grinding, is far superior to the Maize Corn Flour already introduced in this country, which is only Starch obtained by a process of washing, which deteriorates entirely the quality, and is sold at a very high price.

Sold by all Chemists, Grocers, and Corn Dealers. Wholesale at MAYAR'S, 36, MARK LANE, LONDON, E.C. A Wholesale Agent wanted in every Town.
