Reviews.

A General Register of all the Lodges and Grand Lodges of Freemasons in North America. By J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, editor of the American Freemason, &c. Cincinnati, 1871.

This is not only a very useful book of reference, but contains much valuable information as to the origin, history, and progress of the several Grand Lodges in North America, of which forty-two are situate in the United States and five in the Dominion of Canada. The magnitude of the work, which, although compendious, is complete, may be imagined when we state that the names of more than 8,000 lodges are given, together with the number of their members, names of Secretaries, and places of meeting. The names of the principal Grand Officers of each supreme body are also given, and the Register, so far as it goes, appears to us to have been compiled with laudable care, and attention to important details. The introduction of similar information into our English Masonic Calendar would be of great service to the Craft.

Old Merry's Monthly, Part 1, January, 1872. Warne and Co., London.

Under a new name an old favourite serial, "Merry and Wise," appears to claim the support of the reading public; and judging from the varied and interesting character of the contents of this first part, we may safely predict a prosperous future for "Old Merry's" metamorphosis. Need we say more than that the tales are capital, the illustrations really graphic, while the price is but—sixpence.

The Commercial and Domestic Diary and Almanac for 1872.

This really handy and useful almanac is issued by Messrs. Moses and Son, the eminent clothiers, whose establishments in the City, as well as those in Oxford-street and Tottenham Court-road, are so well known to our "country cousins," as well as to the general metropolitan public. This little work is replete with valuable information, and is not to be confounded with the ordinary "new-year" trade circulars. The price is only one penny.

FREEMASONRY & ISRAELITISM.

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

XXV.

It is now time that I should bring these—too long, perhaps, extended—papers to a close. Not that the subject is by any means exhausted, for the further it is pursued the more evident is it that many points of history, at first passed over unnoticed, have more or less relation to the subject of our enquiries, and furnish collateral proofs of the descent of the Saxon race from the ten captive tribes of Israel, and of their being the people to whom pertain the promises, which, in so many forms, and given under so many circumstances, are to be found in the sacred writings, from the days of Moses to those of the last of the Hebrew prophets; and a due understanding of the bearing of which invests those writings with much additional interest, linking them, as they do, with our own times. If the Israelitish history were, as I believe it was, a typical representation of the history of God's church and people in all time—if the derelictions of duty and lapses into idolatry, and the repeated chastisements and manifold restorations to the Divine favour of that people, pourtray, as I believe they do, the chequered course of all men in this their mortal career, then do the pages of sacred and profane history throw a flood of light on the Divine government, and enable us to read, in unmistakable language, many of the things that shall come to pass, as the descendants of Israel proceed in the fulfilment of their mission in the world. With how much more interest will the history of the Israelitish people, and the prophecies and promises pertaining to them, be read, when we discern in them, not what relates to a people long since passed away—"lost"—and living only in their history, but to a people now living—a people of whom we form part, and a people who are destined by God's special providence to be the instruments of bringing the whole world into the fold of the Great Shepherd, and of sowing the seeds of civilization, with all its attendant blessings, throughout the four quarters of the globe! And has not such a reading of the Hebrew history and prophecy a tendency to impress us with a deeper and more abiding sense of those obligations which devolve upon us, as a portion of the privileged instruments thus employed, and into which, as Masons, we have voluntarily entered, to promote the great and sacred principles of brotherly love, relief, and truth? Throughout our ceremonies, especially in the Master's degree and in the Royal Arch, we identify ourselves with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and we claim them as our forefathers. What life would it infuse into our ceremonies, if we realised this as a truth, and with what life should we ourselves be animated, if we knew, indeed, that we formed part of that race which is to be employed by the Almighty in turning men from darkness to light, and transforming a world of ignorance, and vice, and misery, into a world of knowledge, and virtue, and righteousness, and happiness! Then shall "a king reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule with equity; and a man shall be as a covert from the storm, as a refuge from the flood; as streams of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great rock in a land fainting with heat: and him the eyes of those that see shall regard, and the ears of those that hear shall hearken. Even the heart of the rash shall consider and acquire knowledge, and the stammering tongue shall speak readily and plainly. The fool shall no longer be called honourable, and the niggard shall no more be called liberal. The wilderness shall become a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be esteemed a forest: and judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and in the fruitful field shall reside righteousness; and the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness perpetual quiet and security." (Isaiah xxxii.)

I have traced, very briefly, and therefore very imperfectly—for, to do so fully would occupy volumes—the migration and history of the Goths, or Getæ, or Scythians, or Saxons—Angles and Jutes—that is, Anglo-Saxons—from the north-eastern parts of Europe and southern parts of Asia—the very regions into which the Israelites were deported by the Assyrians, about 725 B.C.—to their settlement in these our islands—"THE ISLES OF THE SEA;" and, subsequently, their missions, colonising and religious, into every quarter of the globe; and, in this, their fulfilment of the mission which it was predicted should be that of Israel—to occupy the Isles, to raise up a standard for the nations, and to make known the true God and His salvation to the ends of the earth. Throughout these enquiries I have endeavoured to keep constantly in the mind of my readers the distinction, very markedly made in the prophecies, between Judah and Israel, the head or leading tribe of the latter being Ephraim, the descendant and inheritor of the birthright of Joseph, and of whom the God of Abraham declared, by the prophet Jeremiah, "I am a Father unto Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born"—that is, possessing the privileges and possessions of the first son. Writing for the columns of THE FREEMASON, in which I have been compelled to avoid everything of a sectarian character, and everything that might throw an obstacle in the way of my Jewish brethren following me in a truly Masonic or catholic spirit, I have been deprived of many arguments and proofs, of which I should have availed myself, had I been writing for those only of my own faith. Nevertheless, I think I have shown, even in the brief and imperfect sketch I have given of the recorded prophecies, promulgated many years ago, and of the literal fulfilment of many of them as written on the pages of ancient and modern history, that it would demand a great amount of credulity to believe that the exact agreement, in so many particulars, between the one and the other, was the result of mere chance, or that it only exhibits a series of coincidences which, though the like is not to be found elsewhere, constitutes the only rational solution of the problem. The reading of a series of arguments in detached portions cannot possibly produce the impression which they would be likely to produce if they were made the subject of uninterrupted reading and study. Still, I venture to hope, that, even under the disadvantages necessarily incident to such a reading, no one can have followed me in these brief sketches, and have failed to perceive that there is at least a great weight of evidence in favour of the Israelitish origin of the Saxon race, of which our own island may be regarded as the cradle and the home, whence have gone forth the progenitors of those vast populations which are now taking a leading part in the civilization and evangelization of the rest of the world.

In the preface or introduction to "Lecture on Ancient Israel and the fullness of the Gentiles," by John Wilson, to whom I, and all who write upon this interesting subject, must be indebted for many valuable suggestions, are found the following queries on the Israelitish origin of the British nation, and I feel that I cannot do better than conclude these papers by laying them before my readers:—

"1. Is not the House of Israel, and especially the tribe of Ephraim, clearly distinguished from that of Judah in the historical and prophetic parts of Scripture? (1 Chron. v. 2; Jer. iii. 2). Were not of Ephraim, especially, to come the many heirs of the promises made unto the fathers, just as of Judah was to come the One Heir from whom the blessing was immediately to descend? (Gen. xlviii. 15-20, xlix. 8-12.)

"2. Were not the lost tribes of Israel to be found in these, the latter days, as a seed whom the Lord hath blessed? (Hos. ii. 14-23; Is. xxix. 17-23; lxi. 9, 10; lxvi. 8-14; Jer. xxxi. 1-10; Ezek. xi. 15-20; Hos. i. 10, 11.)

"3. Have not all previous attempts to find the lost tribes of Israel proved abortive, especially as to the accounting for Ephraim, the heir of the promises, and of which was to come the promised 'fullness of the Gentiles,' or 'multitude of nations'? (Rom. xi. 25; Gen. xlviii. 19; Is. xli. 25-29.) Does not the Scripture declare that the previous non-discovery of Israel has been occasioned by its blindness, and not by God's having failed to fulfil His word? (Is. xlii. 18-25; xliii. 1-13; xlv. 17-21.) Do not the Scriptures expressly recognise our present condition as being that in which Israel would be found? And do they not predict matters which can be fulfilled only in these nations? (Is. xxvii. 6-10; Jer. xxxi. 10, 11; Mic. vii. 16; Jer. iii. 18; Ezek. xi. 16; &c.)

"4. Does history (which traces our Saxon ancestry back to the very countries into which Israel was carried captive by the Assyrians) present anything opposed to this view? (Turner's Anglo-Saxons, vol. 1, pp. 94-102.) Is it likely that the God of truth would utterly cast away the people unto whom the promises were made; and out of the same place bring forth a people to have fulfilled in them the promises freely made to Israel, and so solemnly confirmed to them by oath? (Mic. vii. 18-20; Is. xxv. 1-7; Ps. cv. 10.) Could it be said, in such case, that 'the gifts and calling of God are without repentance'? (Is. xli. 8, 9.)

"5. Are not the intellectual, moral, and physical characteristics of the Anglo-Saxons exactly those that were to be expected of the nations that were to come of Ephraim? Can our ancient religious rites, political institutions, acquirements, and manners better be accounted for than as having been derived from ancient Israel? Do not the favours bestowed upon these nations in the north-west, and the whole course of God's dealing with the English nation, clearly indicate that they are under the kindness and care of the Good Shepherd of Israel? (Gen. xlix. 22-26; Ps. lxxx. 1-3; cxlvii. 19, 20.)"

Let me add one question to these:—

Do we not seem to recognise our Israelitish origin in our Masonic Constitution and Ritual? It matters not, in this respect, to what period in history our origin may be carried back. One of our brethren is endeavouring to show that we take our rise in ancient Roman times, Numa Pompilius being our founder; that would be, probably, thirty or forty years after Israel was carried captive into Assyria. Another is carrying back our birth to a period long antecedent to that. Well, guilds and architecture may have flourished, as I believe they did, at the times respectively referred to; but I venture to say that the Jewish traditions and ceremonial rites which are to be found in Masonry, show, at least, that if we do not derive our origin from the early times to which some of our historians would carry us back, there is something still more striking than guilds and buildings, which links us with that extraordinary race that, in God's mysterious but beneficent dealing with mankind, has been destined to be the salvation of the world, and the glory of its Creator and Governor.

In conclusion, let me observe, that, if the reasons that have been assigned show that the Saxons are identical with the people who, in the Divine councils, have been selected as the instruments to bring about this blessed state of things, it should, surely, stimulate us to further investigation and study. The truth, if it be one, is of no slight importance. The race is made up of its units; and if the high mission and the glorious privilege to enlighten, civilize, and exalt in righteousness the human family—if the uniting of Israel and Judah, and the preparing of the way for the return of the chosen people to their own land, where they are to form the centre of attraction to all nations, which, through them, shall be brought to the knowledge and worship of the true God—if this be our mission, then, we cannot trifle with it and be guiltless. The work will be accomplished, though we should be indifferent to it, or even turn our backs upon it, for it is God's purpose, and His purpose shall stand. There will be a "remnant," as there ever has been, and through them God will do his own work; for, "Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I myself will take from the shoot of the lofty cedar; even a tender scion from the top of his scions will I pluck, and I myself will plant it on a mountain high and eminent. On the lofty mountain of Israel will I plant it, and it shall exalt its branch and bring forth fruit; and it shall become a majestic cedar; and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of its branches shall they dwell; and all the trees of the field shall know that I, Jehovah, have brought low the high tree; have exalted the low tree; have dried up the green tree; and have made the dry tree to flourish: I, Jehovah, have spoken it, and will do it" (Ez. xvii. 22-24). "Thus, saith the Lord, Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: Publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel. Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child, and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither. They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born. Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattereth Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock. . . . Behold, the day is come, saith the Lord, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of man and with the seed of beasts. And it shall come to pass that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict, so will I watch over them to build and to plant, saith the Lord. . . . Thus, saith the Lord which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; the Lord of Hosts is his name: If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever" (Jer. xxx.) "Behold, I will gather them [the children of Israel and the children of Judah] out of all countries whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God; and I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me all days, for the good of them and of their children after them: and I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul" (chap. xxxi. 37-41).

GRAND MASONIC BALL IN ROCHDALE.

On Friday night, Dec. 29th, the Rochdale Town-hall presented a scene of unusual gaiety on the occasion of the holding of the Masonic ball. The assembly-room was brilliantly lighted, and when it was fully occupied by magnificently attired ladies and the members of the Craft, who wore all the emblems of their Order and of their respective degrees, it was exceedingly picturesque and imposing in appearance. The entertainment was attended by about 300 persons, and was characterised by great éclat. The arrangements which had been made by the committee gave great satisfaction; and it was evident that the Secretary, Bro. Wm. Ashworth, P.M., Prov. J.G.D., P.D.C., and K.T., had neither spared time, attention, nor effort in that respect. The Stewards also proved themselves to be efficient in the ceremonies of the evening. The proceeds were to be devoted to the aid of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and it is believed that a substantial sum will be realized. The orchestra was occupied by the band, under the Mastership of Mr. Goodwin, of Manchester, and the programme comprised the most fashionable waltzes, quadrilles, and galops. The Mayor (Mr. Shawcross) personally entertained some of the brethren, and led off the ball in a quadrille with Miss Winward; the opposite partners being Bro. Wike, Grand Deacon of England, and Mrs. Shawcross (the Mayores); and the side couples were Mr. Clement Royd (C. Royd and Co., Bankers) and Mrs. Pears, and Mr. Eckersley and Mrs. Wike. There was an interval about midnight for supper, which, with the refreshments, was provided by Messrs. Smethurst and Butterworth, of the Golden Fleece Hotel. The second part of the ball was novel, and splendidly characteristic of the Order. The brethren, who appeared at first in Craft clothing, changed at eleven o'clock, some to Mark, Royal Arch, and thirtieth, thirty-second, and thirty-third degrees; after the adjournment for supper, the Knights Templar quadrille was danced, the Sir Knights being in the Knights Templar clothing, the others in those of the Rose Croix, Red Cross Priestly Order, and other degrees. The Ball was kept up with enthusiasm until a late hour next morning. The names of the patrons are subjoined. We may remark that the Secretary had the pleasure of receiving replies to his invitations from all the patrons, and many of them were accompanied by good donations.

The following brethren acted as Stewards of the ball, each being distinguished by a very neat badge made for the occasion by Bro. George Kenning of London, and they discharged their duties admirably: Bros. W. H. Prince (President), John Ashworth, jun. (Vice-President), Thos. Oakden (Treas.), T. B. Ashworth, Laurence Booth, Ralph Collingwood, Jesse Firth, R. H. Heys, C. M. Jones, John McNaught, R. O'Neil, J. M. Rutter, L. Schofield, Amos Stott, Robert Walker, W. Walker, and Edmund Wrigley.

The following brethren constituted the committee of management, and ably discharged their duties: Bros. W. H. Prince, P.M. 298, P.P.S.G. Deacon, East Lancashire, President; John Ashworth, jun., I.G. 298, Prov. G.A.D.C. Lancashire (Mark), Vice-President; Thomas Oakden, J.D. 298, Prov. Grand Standard-bearer, West Yorkshire (Mark), Treasurer; T. B. Ashworth, J.W. 367; W. Ashworth, S.W. 367; Robert Butterworth, J.W. 298, Prov. G.D.C.L. (Mark); James Cross, S.D. 298; Jesse Firth, S.W. 298; James Holroyd, P.M. 298, Prov. Grand Sword-bearer, West Yorkshire (Mark); Robert Howard, W.M. 298; Sam Jackson, P.M. 54; C. M. Jones, P.M. 1129, P.P.G.A.D.C. E.L.; E. Leech, P.M. 54; John McNaught, 298; Dan Mitchell, W.M. 54; Wm. Roberts, P.M. 298, P.P.G. Purst. E.L.; Luke Schofield, J.W. 54; Wm. Walker, W.M. 363, P.P.G.P. L. (Mark); Robert Walker, S.D. 363; Edward Woodcock, P.M. 854; Edmund Wrigley, P.M. 298, P.P. Grand Sword-bearer, East Lancashire; James Wrigley, 298.

CONSECRATION of the GLADSMUIR LODGE, No. 1385.

This new lodge was consecrated on Friday, 29th December, at the Red Lion Hotel, Barnet, Herts. The proceedings commenced about half-past two o'clock, when the Consecrating Officer, Bro. H. B. Hodges, Prov. Grand Senior Warden, Herts, P.M. 403, took his seat, and nominated Bros. H. Lloyd Thomas, P.P.G.W. Herts, P.M. 449, and E. West, P.G.D. Herts, P.M. 1076 and 1327, as his Wardens, and Bro. Hester, P.M. 749, as I.G. The lodge was opened in the three degrees, and the proceedings were commenced with prayer.

Bro. E. A. Simson, S.W. 403, Acting Secretary, read the warrant, after which the Presiding Officer inquired if the brethren still approved of the officers named in the warrant. An affirmative response being given, Bro. J. Terry, P.P.G. Sword-bearer, P.M. 228 and 1327, who very ably assisted Bro. Hodges, then delivered an oration, which was followed by the brethren singing the anthem, "Tis a pleasant thing to see." The new Master, Bro. J. R. Cocks, P.P.G.W. Herts., P.M. 403, was then presented to the Presiding Officer, after which came the first portion of the dedication prayer, "Sanctus, Glory be to Thee, O Lord." The brethren turned to the East, when the Presiding Officer gave the Invocation. The lodge board was uncovered, and the W.M. and Wardens carried corn, wine, and oil three times round the lodge during solemn music. Bro. Terry took the censor three times round the lodge, and then delivered the second portion of the dedication prayer. Bro. Hodges dedicated and constituted the lodge, and a second anthem was sung.

The W.M.-designate, Bro. Cocks, was then presented for installation, which duty devolved upon Bro. Terry. Upon the re-admission of the brethren, the usual salutes were given, after which the W.M. invested his officers as follows: Bros. E. H. Edwards, S.W.; W. Cutbush, J.W.; and J. G. Yolland (71), S.D.

The W.M. proposed that, in estimation of the services rendered to the lodge during the ceremonies of consecration and installation, which were most ably performed, by Bros. Hodges and Terry, they be enrolled as honorary members of the Gladsmuir Lodge. The two brethren gracefully acknowledged the compliment. Bro. J. Speed, P.M. 141, officiated as Organist. Five names were proposed as initiates, and one joining member.

A banquet was afterwards held, and it was served by the host, Bro. Fisher, in first-rate style, and gave great satisfaction to the brethren. The usual toasts were given, and the proceedings terminated at an early hour, a most charming evening having been enjoyed by all.

Besides those already named, the following brethren were present at the consecration and banquet: Bros. J. D. Melcalf, Prov. G. Deacon, W.M. 403; C. Drumm on 1, P.P.G.S.B., P.M. 403; T. S. Carter, P.G. Supt. of Works, Hon. Sec. 403; T. Neale, P.G. Steward, J.W. 403; C. B. Payne, G. Tyler; E. R. P. Francis, 403. The lodge was named "Gladsmuir" in commemoration of the battle of Barnet, fought on Gladsmuir Heath in 1471.

FREEMASONRY IN LEEDS.

The past month has been a busy and a happy one with the Masons in Leeds, Yorkshire. In five of the lodges the installation of W.M. has taken place, followed by the St. John's festival. The selection of Masters has been an unusually good one. In the Alfred, Bro. Charles Hopps succeeds Bro. Denison; the Philanthropic brethren have chosen Bro. Lowrey; the Fidelity, Bro. Beck; the Excelsior, Bro. J. S. Allett; and the Defence have re-elected Bro. Major Moore. In the other two lodges, Godrich and Zeland, the year does not expire at present, so that Bros. Fryer and Wetherell retain their seats as W.M. Everything has passed off well and satisfactorily, and no more need be said, only that there are three important events which deserve to be placed on record.

At the Excelsior banquet, Bro. R. V. Allison, who has held the office of W.M. for two years, and who last year was presented with a P.M.'s jewel, was, on this occasion, presented with a handsome gold watchguard, and an address on vellum, as a small token of esteem for his valuable services. We do not hesitate to say, there is no more worthy or deserving a Mason in Leeds or elsewhere than Bro. Allison, or one who really loves his work, and we cordially wish him a long life to wear his present and to continue his work.

Every Mason has hailed with great satisfaction the appointment of Bro. J. L. Oates, the resident manager of the Masonic Hall, Leeds, as the Senior Warden of the Philanthropic Lodge. This is a well-deserved compliment, and a step in the right direction. Bro. Oates is thoroughly acquainted with Masonry, and we venture to hope that next year we may see him W.M. of his lodge.

Poor Old William, the Tyler of the Alfred for over fifty years, has been pensioned on full pay, and Bro. William Kirkbride appointed in his place. He retires with the best esteem, not only of the Alfred, but of all other brethren.

KNIGHT TEMPLARY.—The knights of the Royal Veterans' Encampment assembled at their temple, Plymouth, on the evening of the 20th ultimo, for the purpose of installing several companions of the Royal Arch degree into this illustrious order. There was an unusually large number of Knights Companions present, together with no fewer than seven Past Eminent Commanders, including a Provincial Grand Commander, Captain Clerke, 33°. The encampment presented a very imposing appearance. In the unavoidable absence of the Eminent Commander Sir Knight Diboss, the baton was assigned to Past Eminent Commander R. Rodda, who ascended the throne, and having disposed of the preliminary business of the encampment, the ballot was taken for six Companions of the Royal Arch degree, and the whole were declared duly elected; four of the number being in waiting, they were introduced as pilgrims, and duly installed as Knights Companions. The ceremony was administered in an able, impressive, and effective manner, with all due solemnity, by Sir Knight Rodda, P.E.C., the pre-iding officer, Sir Knight Cluse, P.E.C., most efficiently assisting as prelate. At the close of the encampment every one seemed to leave with a fresh heart and hope for the future of the Royal Veterans, a shadow of its pristine character appeared to pass over the fratres, and in the unanimity of feeling which prevailed was visible the prospect of a successful career and an unexampled future for this ancient conclave.

FREEMASONRY AT NEWPORT.

There was a large and brilliant gathering of the Craft at the Isca Lodge, No. 683, on Wednesday week, it being the occasion for electing a W.M. for the ensuing year. The Masonic Temple in Dock-street, has recently been renovated and most elaborately decorated. It is not too much to say that these decorations are gorgeous, and that certainly they do infinite credit to the mind that conceived, and the hands that executed, them. No pains, no expense have been spared; above all, the whole is strictly in harmony with those mysterious rites, those signs and symbols so edifying to the Craft, so perplexing to the outer world.

The business of the evening consisted in conferring the accolade of Masonry, the "sublime degree," on two brethren—and initiating into the mysteries of the Craft two candidates, one being a "Lewis," and son of a P.M.

The W.M., Bro. R. J. Chambers (who, by-the-by, is about to retire from the chair, after two years of most efficient service), rose to make a proposition. He asked indulgence for deviating somewhat from the ordinary course observed in lodge. He was satisfied that when the proposal he had to make was before them, that indulgence would be freely granted. It had pleased The Great Architect of the Universe to lay his afflicting hand on our illustrious brother, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. He, in whose hands are strength and weakness, life and death, had graciously heard the prayers of a loyal people, and had averted that calamity which appeared inevitable. All Englishmen, all good men of all lands, in anxiety and in sympathy, felt deeply both for his Royal Highness, for the Princess, and for her Most Gracious Majesty. He begged to move the following resolution and address:—

"That this lodge, having watched with the deepest solicitude the long and severe illness of your Royal Highness, and having collectively and individually experienced inexpressible anxiety during those moments of painful suspense to all Masons, and, we may say, all Englishmen, and even the good men of all lands, when those who so closely and tenderly nursed your Royal Highness well-nigh despaired, render now their sincere and heartfelt congratulations upon your seeming promised recovery, and most devoutly do they offer to the Great Architect of the Universe their unbounded thanks for His merciful loving-kindness to them, and this, their happy land, for the restoration which He has vouchsafed; and that He may complete this precious boon, and grant your Royal Highness perfect health and long years of peace and prosperity in the bosom of your family and nation, is the earnest prayer of us all."

[Signed (on behalf of the lodge), by the W.M., the I.P.M., Wardens, and Secretary.]

The resolution was seconded by I.P.M. Bro. Thos. Williams. He said that they had seen the sublime and solemn spectacle of a whole nation watching with a solicitude as deep as it was genuine at the bedside of a beloved Prince. The Craft contemplated the prospect of his recovery with feelings in which fraternal regard would mingle with, and if possible, cement still closer, that loyal affection for which Masonry had always been pre-eminent. They would hail the return of His Royal Highness to the active duties of Masonry with the fervour of brotherhood—that mystic tie which was recognised all over the habitable globe.

The resolution was unanimously affirmed, the brethren signifying their approval in the usual manner.

The unanimous choice of the lodge fell upon Bro. Dr. James Cheese, the S.W., as Worshipful Master. The W.M.-elect (who, let it be observed, has given ample proof of his zeal for the Craft, and his ability to discharge the important duties to which he has been elected), very appropriately returned thanks.

The installation ceremony will be on the 13th Wednesday in January, and the dinner at the Westgate Hotel.

The Golden Rule Lodge held their bi-monthly meeting and banquet on Tuesday, the 2nd inst.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTHPORT.

On Wednesday afternoon, 27th ult., the members of the Lodge of Unity, No. 613, met together in their lodge-room, Wright-street Southport, for the purpose of transacting their annual business, the most important of which was the installation of the W.M. for the ensuing year. That honour was unanimously conferred upon Bro. Thomas Parker, who was selected by his brethren to succeed Bro. W. Dodd, whose year of office has been characterised by great success and harmony. Bro. W. Dodd, the retiring W.M., acted as Installing Master—the first time, we believe, such an event has occurred in Southport—and most ably did he discharge the duties he assumed. Bro. Dodd was assisted by Bro. Hamer, W. Prov. P.G. Treas.

The installation having been completed, the following were invested as officers of the lodge for next year:—Bros. Cullingworth, S.W.; Griffiths, J.W.; Platt, M.C.; Cory, S.D.; Leeming, J.D.; Wainwright, Treas.; Bailey, Sec.; Smallshaw, I.G.; Merchant, S.; Melling, S.; Sutton, O.; Hartley, T.

Before the termination of the proceedings Bro. Stocker, P.M., moved, and Bro. Jeffries, P.M., seconded, "That the most hearty and cordial thanks of the lodge be presented to Bro. W. Dodd, retiring W.M., for the able and efficient manner in which he has discharged the duties of his office during the past year." The resolution was enthusiastically passed, as was also a second, to the effect that a P.M.'s jewel be presented by the lodge to Bro. Dodd, as a mark of esteem and gratitude for the services he has rendered to Freemasonry. The jewel, which had been previously procured, is a very beautiful and valuable affair, being of 15-carat gold, and it bears a suitable inscription. Bro. Dodd responded in an appropriate and very pleasing style, and expressed his high and increasing admiration of Freemasonry.

The Festival of St. John was afterwards celebrated by a banquet, at the Scarisbrick Hotel, provided in most admirable style by Bro. R. Watson. The chair was occupied by Bro. Thomas Parker, W.M., the vice-chairman being Bro. Cullingworth, S.W. Nearly 40 brethren sat down to the repast, including Bros. George Woods, R. Jeffries, E. W. Stocker, James Platt, and W. Dodd, P.M.'s; J. Woodley, W.M. of Lodge No. 755, Llandudno; and brethren connected with the two local lodges, viz., Lodge of Unity, 613, and the Fermor Lodge, 1313.

At the close of the repast, the W.M. gave the health of the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family, both toasts being received with much enthusiasm. The health of the Marquis de Grey and Ripon and the officers of Grand Lodge followed, and was succeeded by Sir T. G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., and officers of Prov. Grand Lodge, which were received with true Masonic heartiness.

Bro. Dodd, I.P.M., then gave "The health of the W.M. of Lodge 613." He said it gave him great pleasure to ask them to join in wishing health, happiness, and success to Bro. Parker. All knew him well, and the longer they knew him the more they respected him, for they found him to be all that a man and a Mason should be. (Cheers.) He had no doubt they would find his deeds as W.M. speaking loudly in his behalf. He had the battle to fight and the gauntlet to run, and he hoped that at the end of the year he would retire with the honour and the grace which had gathered around most of those who had filled the chair in past years. (Applause.)

The toast was enthusiastically received, and in response,

Bro. Parker, W.M., said that during his year of office he would do all in his power to keep up the prestige of Lodge of Unity, 613. (Hear, hear.) He hoped that peace, harmony, and prosperity would continue to prevail.

The W.M. then proposed "The health of Bro. W. Dodd, I.P.M. and Installing Master." All would readily acknowledge how earnestly he had laboured for the good of the Craft, and it was not too much to say that no W.M. of 613 had fulfilled the duties of the chair more zealously than had their esteemed Bro. W. Dodd, who also had been, for the last few months, W.M. of "The Fermor Lodge, No. 1313." He wished him health and happiness. (Cheers.)

Bro. Dodd, I.P.M., thanked the W.M. and the brethren for the very hearty fashion in which the toast had been given, and said he did feel in a happy and proud position that evening. It only appeared like yesterday that he became one of them, only as it were a few weeks since he first saw the light of Masonry and began to rejoice in its glorious principles. He had been misguided, and had cherished the notion, which he had since found to be a mistake, that Freemasonry was simply an excuse for inordinate eating and drinking. This was his feeling till Providence threw him into connection with one who was a gentleman and a Christian. He was led to entertain the highest respect for him, and he found that it was no uncommon thing for him to travel 40 or 50 miles to attend a lodge. He (the speaker) could not help thinking there must be something good in that which thus proved so attractive—and he had, indeed, found the Order to contain and exhibit the true and the beautiful. (Cheers.) His great desire was that all just and upright men would become fellow-masons. He had endeavoured to do his duty to the best of his ability, and it was with much satisfaction that it could be reported that no fewer than fourteen had joined the lodge during the year, and he hoped that his successor would be as happy in the chair as he had been, and end his term of office with as joyful a feeling as that which he experienced at that moment. (Cheers.)

The W.M. then proposed "The health of the P.M.'s. of Lodge 613," which was responded to by

Bro. George Woods, P.M., who said he believed he was the oldest Mason in Southport. He was fully persuaded that any one who acted up to the principles of Freemasonry must be a better man in all respects, as it was supported by, and in accordance with, the laws of God and of man. (Cheers.)

Bro. Stocker, P.M., proposed "The newly-invested officers of Lodge 613," who, he said, had an easy task before them in consequence of the bright example set them by the retiring W.M. and his officers, who had gone through their work uniformly in a most exemplary fashion.

Bros Cullingworth, S.W., and Griffiths, J.W., responded.

"The Retiring Officers of Lodge 613" was then given, and responded to by Bro. Witham.

"The W.M. of Lodge 1313" followed, and was responded to by Bro. W. Dodd, W.M., who said that the Fermor Lodge, though only a little more than twelve months old, showed signs of great healthiness, and the brethren would at all times be glad of the presence at their meetings of the members of Lodge of Unity 613. He then proposed "The Auditors, Bros. Smallshaw and Leeming," whom he highly complimented on the most satisfactory financial statement.

Bro. Smallshaw returned thanks.

The W.M. then gave "Our Visiting Brethren," coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Woodley, W.M., 755, who expressed the great pleasure he had in being with them on that happy occasion.

"The health of Bro. Dobson, Organist of the Fermor Lodge," was then given and responded to, and "All poor and distressed Freemasons" brought the list of toasts to an end.

The proceedings, which were most interesting throughout, were delightfully varied by songs, given in admirable style by several of the brethren, and the party broke up about ten o'clock after having spent a most pleasant evening.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

BANQUET of the TYNWALD LODGE, ISLE OF MAN.

The members of the Tynwald Lodge, No. 1242, held their annual installation lodge and banquet, on Wednesday se'night. The members, with several brethren of the Athole Lodge, No. 1004, met in the lodge-room, St. James's Hall, Douglas, at three o'clock in the afternoon, when the installation of Bro. W. L. Clarke, P.S.W., as W.M., was effected with all due Masonic honour, Bro. John A. Brown, I.P.M., performing the ceremony in an admirably impressive manner. Bros. J. J. Harwood, P.M., assisted as S.W., E. Tibbits, P.M., as J.W., and Webb, W.M., and Lofthouse, P.M., in other capacities as officers of the P.M. lodge.

At six o'clock some twenty-three members of the Craft sat down to a grand banquet at the Castle Mona Hotel. The table was spread in the large banqueting room in the south-west wing of the building, and nothing could exceed the taste which Miss Bates and her able assistants exhibited in their art of rendering a banqueting table attractive. Massive silver epergnes, elegantly decorated with fruit and flowers, studded the board; while here and there, in addition to the very beautiful chandeliers which gave warmth and light to the noble room, were placed elaborate candelabra, which added a brilliancy to the well-laid-out board exceedingly captivating to the sight, the whole scene appearing to be pervaded with a restless, bright shining light, that danced and flickered, like a dazzling Will-o'-the-Wisp, from one end to the festal board to the other; while the glass and silver sent back in a thousand directions their bright starry reflections. So brilliant a scene gave fair hopes that the kitchen would be equally effective in its part of preparation for the feast; and the brethren were not disappointed in their hope, for, from soup to pastry, everything bore evidence that a chef de cuisine had provided the viands. The wines, too, were good, a circumstance which does not always attend public banquets. Altogether Miss Bates was exceedingly successful in her work of providing the banquet. Bro. W. L. Clarke, W.M., presided and was ably assisted by his S.W., Bro. Quinney, and by his J.W., Bro. Cowley.

On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave in appropriate terms the toast, "The Queen and the Craft." This was followed by "Bro. his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," which the W.M. gave with a few remarks apropos of his Royal Highness's present severe affliction. The toast was drunk in solemn silence. The W.M. next gave "The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, and the other Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of England," which was drunk and honoured with "twenty and one." Bro. J. A. Brown, I.P.M., then gave "Our W.M., Bro. W. L. Clarke," which was introduced with a high eulogium upon Bro. Clarke's fitness for the honour which the lodge had that day conferred upon him, a fitness which had been acquired by his close attention to the duties of his office and the interests of the lodge. The toast was received with "H.M.H.," and "twenty and one." The W.M. briefly returned thanks; after which he presented to the I.P.M., in the name of the lodge, a handsomely-chased P.M.'s jewel, as a token of respect for the manner in which he had performed the duties of W.M. during the past year. The jewel is a splendid piece of workmanship, handsomely chased. The framework is of solid gold, 18 carat. It is suspended with a ribbon, ornamented with a handsome gold buckle, and bears the following inscription: "Presented to Bro. J. A. Brown, as a token of Masonic efficiency as W.M. of Tynwald Lodge, No. 1242, December, 1871." Bro. J. A. Brown briefly, but feelingly returned thanks. The next toast, "The Past Masters," was given by Bro. Quinney, S.W., and was received with "twenty and one," Bros. Tuton, Lofthouse, and Harwood, P.M.'s of 1004, and Bro. E. Tibbits, P.M. of 1242, responding. Bro. Tibbits, P.M., then gave "The Installing Master," which he accompanied with a few words of well-merited praise on the manner in which Bro. J. A. Brown had acquitted himself in the installation ceremony. The toast was received with a hearty "twenty and one," and "H.M.H." Bro. Brown I.P.M., responded. The W.M. then gave "The Wardens and other officers of 1242," which was responded to by Bro. Quinney, S.W., Bro. Cowley, J.W., and Bro. Parkinson, S.D. Bro. Tibbits then gave, in appropriate terms, "The W.M. and Officers of the Athole Lodge, 1004," which was received with "twenty and one," and "H.M.H." Bro. Webb, W.M., Bro. Lofthouse, P.M., and Bro. Tuton, P.M., of the Athole Lodge, responded. "The other Insular Lodges," by Bro. R. Tuton, P.M., and "The Tyler's Toast," by Bro. Lofthouse, P.M., brought the list of toasts to a close at about half-past ten o'clock. Bro. James Brown added very materially to the pleasures of the evening, by singing in a very effective manner the following pieces: "Tubal Cain," "Hail to thee, England," and "My old friend, John;" and Bro. Lofthouse, P.M., set the brethren laughing, by reading the eccentricities of "Owd Tipitoe," from "Lancashire Sketches." We ought not to omit that Bro. Long officiated in an efficient manner as I.G., during the banquet, and Bro. O'Conner equally as effectively as Tyler. Thus was brought to a close a festal day long to be remembered as one of great pleasureableness by the Craft in Douglas; and we cannot do better than hope that so much good feeling may become cemented, and be lasting.—Isle of Man Times.

FESTIVAL OF ST. DAVID'S LODGE, No. 393.

The brethren of this lodge, in common with the Craft in all quarters of the world, celebrated the festival of St. John the Evangelist, one of the patron saints of the Order, on Wednesday the 27th ult., within their own lodge Church-street, Berwick-on-Tweed. The occasion was marked by the local brethren with much heartiness. Previous to the festival the brethren assembled in their lodge-room for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master and his colleagues in office for the ensuing year. Bro. Moor, W.M., presided, and opened the lodge in regular form. After the initiation of one brother and passing of another, the brethren proceeded to the installation of Bro. Chalmers I. Paton, of The Tower, Portobello, as W.M.; Bro. J. S. McGregor, G.O. of the Provincial Lodge, conducted the ceremony in a manner which won the admiration of the brethren. Having been duly installed into office,

Bro. C. I. Paton, the newly-elected Master, said: Brethren, it is almost needless for me to say that I am deeply sensible of the honour conferred on me, in being placed in my present position. But you will allow me to say it, because I feel it. I am very grateful to you also, brethren, for your election of me to this high office, for the confidence which you have thus shown that you repose in me, and for the brotherly kindness which I esteem most of all. I shall endeavour to discharge the duties of this office in such a manner as to show my sense of its importance, and to maintain my brotherly relations to all of you. Allow me to mention that I have for many years been a Master Mason in an English lodge, and that before being elected to my present office, I graduated for it, serving the office of Warden in this lodge for a year. I am, therefore, well known to you, and I have great pleasure in thinking that my election to the Master's chair in this lodge is in some measure to be regarded as a recognition of the faithfulness with which I have already filled the former offices. Perfection is unattainable; but an honest and persistent effort to attain it I can promise to make, and for all shortcomings and deficiencies I doubt not you will be ready to make fair allowance. I am happy to think of the efficient assistance I am sure to receive from the Wardens and other office-bearers of this lodge. I trust that uninterrupted harmony will prevail, and that the bond of brotherhood which unites us all to each other will in no case be weakened, but on the contrary will become stronger and stronger, drawing us more closely together to our mutual advantage and the increase of our happiness. Freemasonry aims at the promotion of all the sciences, and it should be the endeavour of every Freemason to acquire as much as possible of all useful knowledge. The cultivation of the mind has a present reward in enjoyments very high and pure; it also fits a man for greater usefulness, an object at which every Freemason ought continually to aim. Let me now, in conclusion, only thank you once more for the high honour which you have conferred on me in placing me in this office, and express my hope that by the blessing of Him whose blessing we have already solemnly sought, I may be enabled faithfully to perform its duties with firmness and with gentleness, with the approbation of my own conscience, and with what next to this I most of all desire, with your approbation. (Applause.)

The Master then appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. C. Hopper, S.W.; A. Baxter Visick, J.W.; Richardson, Treas.; W. Scott, Sec.; Rev. T. Procter, Vicar of Tweedmouth, Chaplain; J. S. McGregor, Organist; A. Marshall, S.D.; Thompson, J.D.; W. Redpath, S.S.; W. Gray, J.S.; A. Macconochie, I.G.; Farmer Turnbull, Tyler.

At the close of the ceremonial of installation the brethren sat down to dinner in the lodge-room. The company numbered upwards of forty brethren. The W.M. (Bro. C. I. Paton) occupied the chair, and was supported by the Immediate Past Master Bro. Moore, G.J.D., and P.M.'s Lambert, M'Gregor, Strother, Gibson, Wood; Bro. the Rev. Adam Stewart Muir, Paisley (an affiliated brother of St. David's); the Secretary, Bro. Scott, and the Treasurer, Bro. Richardson. The vice-chair was filled by the Senior Warden, Bro. C. Hopper. Grace having been said by Bro. the Rev. A. S. Muir, an excellent dinner, in Bro. Gray's usual excellent style, was served. Thanks returned,

The W.M. gave the toast of "Her Majesty the Queen." Loyalty, he said, was a prominent feature of Freemasonry, and the brethren would have shown themselves very disloyal if they had not placed the toast of the Queen first on the toast list. They saw in her Majesty a woman of kindly and affectionate nature, who was endeared to all her subjects. (Cheers.)

The W.M. next gave the toast of "The Prince of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family." There was one thing, in regard to the Prince of Wales, he said, Masonically speaking, that was to be regretted, that he had not been initiated under the jurisdiction, originally, of English constitutions. His Royal Highness, however, had become affiliated with the English Order, and had therefore become amenable to English jurisdiction. He occupied at present a very prominent position in the Craft, that of Past Grand Master of England. It had been very sad to the nation at large, and to the Masonic Fraternity more especially, to fear that they were about to lose him some few days ago. If the nation had lost his Royal Highness by death, the unfortunate and melancholy circumstance would, in all probability, have changed the aspect of politics in this country. Happy we ought to be that the change had not taken place. (Hear, hear.) It was certainly very gratifying to know that during his Royal Highness's recent serious illness, representative men of other nations—nations with which this country was connected by fraternal relations—had in the name of their respective countries manifested great sympathy for the afflicted Prince and her Majesty. It was indeed great satisfaction to learn that the Prince was nearing convalescence, and he (the W.M.) trusted that his Royal Highness would grow stronger and stronger day by day, until he had become as strong as ever he was. (Cheers.)

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Grand Master Mason of England, the Marquis of Ripon," and referred to his mission of peace to America. The toast of "The Sister Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland, and the health of the Grand Masters of the respective lodges, the Earl of Rosslyn and the Duke of Leinster," was afterwards given. (Cheers.)

Bro. Gibson, P.G.S.W. of East Lothian, replied in a brief and appropriate speech; there would be nothing wanting on his part, to advance Masonry to the highest pitch. (Cheers.)

The W.M. gave "The Health of Earl Percy, Prov. G.M. of Northumberland," and Bro. J. S. M'Gregor, G.O., replied.

The W.M. proposed the toast of "Continued prosperity of the Lodge St. David's." He was pleased to say that since he had entered the lodge he had witnessed it prospering and going on to prosper; and the brethren showed a zeal to do what was best for the lodge. They had nothing to complain of, but on the contrary had very much to be joyful for. (Cheers.) He coupled the toast with the name of the I.P.M., Bro. Moor, who had, he said, in an upright and honourable way filled the chair during the past year. (Cheers.)

Bro. Moor, acknowledged the toast, and in doing so stated that the lodge had prospered very much within the last five years. They had a good balance at the credit of the lodge, and there were close upon seventy subscribing members on the roll. (Cheers.)

Bro. Moor, then proposed "The Health of the new W.M." Bro. C. I. Paton was much respected as a man, held a high standing as a Mason, and had shown great interest in the prosperity of St. David's since he had become affiliated. Through his kindness and benevolence they had now a lodge second to none in the province. (Cheers.)

The W.M., in reply, said: It has been my ambition to fill the high and honourable position which you have this day placed me in—the highest mark of esteem you can confer on a brother. There is something in the arcana of Freemasonry which, when thoroughly understood, is a true type of Christianity. There are a great many interpretations by the neutral world of what is really and truly Freemasonry. My impression of Masonry is this—and I have arrived at the conviction after long study—that it is the foundation of a speculative science upon an operative art, and the symbolic use and explanation of the terms of that art for the purposes of moral and religious teaching. This is the proper definition of Freemasonry. The Order has also laws of its own, which it behoves us all to obey; but these very laws and the ancient landmarks themselves, which are the foundation of our whole code, refer us to that highest law which we have received from the Creator and Lord of the Universe, and to the laws of our country. To be good and worthy Masons, we must strictly observe the moral law, and must also show constant respect for the law of the land, neither transgressing it ourselves nor encouraging any other in doing so. Thus shall we prove ourselves worthy successors of those who, in former days, made the name of Freemasonry honourable, and won for our Order high esteem amongst men. The loyalty which has always distinguished our Order in former times has not, I am confident, suffered diminution in the present day. From this, the most northern lodge in England, meeting at the farthest extremity of the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England, may light shine over all the land! May our working in our lodge, the example of our lives, and the influence which we exercise amongst men, all tend, not only to the promotion of the interests of Freemasonry and the honour of our Order in this town and neighbourhood, but also in a far wider sphere! For, such is the connexion subsisting amongst all the members of our Brotherhood, that the example of one lodge is of benefit to other lodges also—a good example stimulates and encourages many to follow it: and as we ought to rejoice when we see it anywhere presented to our view, so ought we continually endeavour to present it to others. (Cheers.)

The W.M. next proposed the toasts of "The Office-bearers of the Lodge," and "The Past Office-bearers." Bro. C. Hopper replied to the former toast, and Bro. Strother to the latter.

The W.M. then, in the name of the brethren of the lodge, presented his predecessor in the chair, Bro. Moor, I.P.M., with a Past Master's jewel. He complimented Bro. Moor on the faithful and zealous manner in which he had discharged his duty, and expressed the esteem in which he was held by the brethren.

Bro. Moor, in fitting terms, returned thanks.

A number of complimentary toasts followed, interspersed by some capital songs.

The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

LANCASHIRE.—We do not think that the contingency to which you allude affects the main point. No question should be asked—consequently, no answer need be expected. [This reply has been overlooked.]

940.—The "Fifteen Sections" have been the growth of time. Before the Union there were twelve—sometimes thirteen (see "Finch"), seven in the first, and three each in second and third. The present lectures were arranged by Bro. Williams, Provincial Grand Master for Dorset, and revised by Bro. the Rev. S. Hemming, D.D., about 1815.

493. Gloucester.—We should say that the subjects selected for the adornment of the reredos were not in accordance with accepted Masonic ideas; and we say this the more freely, because we believe, as a high-grade Mason ourselves, that certain Christian degrees operate as a kind of safety-valve to the Craft, without which sectarianism would inevitably be introduced when opportunity served. Groups in conformity with our Solomonic traditions ought to have been selected.

C. J. T.—Although we appreciate the justice of your sentiments, your letter is hardly suitable for publication and we are convinced that you will readily concede this upon maturer reflection. The question of ritual is a difficult one to deal with, and we must keep the discussion within due bounds.

MASONIC PROGRESS IN ENGLAND.

IN accordance with our custom at the commencement of a new year, we shall now proceed to review the present status and recent progress of the several branches of the Masonic family in England.

To the increase of the Craft in general we referred last week, and it only remains to add that, forty-one lodges appear to have been added to the roll of the Grand Lodge during the past year, making the nominal total 1375. We say "nominal total" because, as we pointed out in No. 43 of THE FREEMASON, many lodges have surrendered their warrants in consequence of the formation of independent Grand Lodges in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; and these "defections," as some would call them—although the lodges still exist on the muster-roll of the Craft Universal—reduce the number of lodges under the jurisdiction of England to about twelve hundred and eighty—a sufficiently formidable array, and one which is not approached by any other Grand Masonic Body in the world. Each of these lodges, if within the London district, pays the sum of four shillings annually to the Fund of Benevolence for every one of its subscribing members, and the country lodges contribute two shillings, in like manner, to the same Fund. Lodges in the colonies and foreign parts are not required to subscribe to the Fund, although their members are equally eligible to participate in its benefits. The administration of the vast sums thus collected is confided to a committee, technically called the "Lodge of Benevolence," and which consists of a President, who is nominated by the Grand Master, two Vice-Presidents, and twelve Past Masters, elected by Grand Lodge—all present and past Grand Officers, and the Masters of lodges during their tenure of office. This Committee meets every month for the consideration and disposal of the various petitions for relief, which are frequently very numerous. Owing, however, to some excellent alterations in the laws—mainly originated by the worthy President, Bro. CLABON, and one of the Vice-Presidents, Bro. NUNN—the classification of applicants has become much simplified, and the amount of relief extended by the Lodge is now, in some degree, adequate to the claims and services exhibited on behalf of the majority of cases placed on record. Temporary relief is thus afforded to many deserving brethren, enabling them to make a fresh start in life; nor is substantial aid withheld from those whose meritorious labours in Freemasonry demand greater recognition—an instance having occurred recently, when the handsome sum of two hundred and fifty pounds was voted to a poor, but worthy, brother.

In Royal Arch Masonry, there is no annual levy for benevolent purposes, and although we are not prepared to advocate the adoption of the system, it may be doubted whether a portion of the fifteen shillings paid for each companion's registration might not be very properly devoted to the establishment and perpetuation of a fund for distressed Royal Arch Masons. It is a fact that some men, from fancy or otherwise, take a more active part in promoting the prosperity of Capitular Masonry than in advancing the interests of the blue degrees. Hence, their claims upon the Fund of Benevolence—measured by their career in the Craft—may appear but insignificant, whereas, if a Grand Chapter Fund existed, they would be enabled to have their additional claims more fully investigated, and, possibly, better appreciated. We throw out this suggestion in a tentative manner; but, as English Royal Arch Masonry can now boast some 400 chapters—twenty of which have been founded during the past year—the time seems to have arrived when the Order should be more closely identified with the great cause of charity. Let it not be said of Royal Arch Masonry that "here we have laboured in vain, and wasted our strength for nought."

Our review of the progress of the Craft and Capitular degrees shows that our illustrious Grand Master and Grand Principal, the Marquis of Ripon, presides over nearly seventeen hundred lodges and chapters, the membership of which bodies, combined, is estimated at about one hundred and forty thousand. It must be remembered, however, that the Royal Arch Masons are included in duplicate, they being, almost to a man, members of lodges as well as of chapters.

The "Mark" degree, although not the oldest of the unrecognised Masonic organisations, in England, is so intimately allied with the Craft, that its rapid increase in influence and numerical strength is somewhat accounted for. The number of Mark lodges under the Mark Grand Lodge is now 139, representing an advance within the year of twenty lodges. The jurisdiction of the Mark governing body in England is now recognised by the Grand Chapters of Ireland and Canada, and by several American Grand Chapters, and, beyond question, when the present Mark Grand Master, our energetic Bro. Portal, hands over his sceptre of office to his successor, Earl Percy, he may fairly congratulate himself and the "Mark" Degree upon the very splendid success which has attended his exertions, and those of his officers, during the period of his presidency as Grand Master.

We are unable to say much as to the position of the various degrees recently annexed to the "Mark," some of which are good, some bad, and one or two indifferent. With careful manipulation, the degrees of "Royal and Select Masters" may be taken kindly to in England, but we much doubt if the melodramatic "high falutin" of the "Super-Excellent" degree will ever find favour in the sight of English Masons. As to the inane farce of "Admiral Noah" and his coxswain "Ham," with the Ark and the other beasts, as our poor friend Artemus Ward would say—why, the sooner it and all its accompaniments are swept away in a Masonic deluge the better, even if we have to deplore the consequent disappearance of a more than proportionate number of the sons of Issachar.

Taking the "Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar for 1872" as our guide, we find that the Order of Knights Templar stands next in numerical strength to the Mark Masters, numbering, as it does, 121 encampments, an increase of six during the year 1871. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is now identified with the English Templars, and we have no hesitation in adding, that the Order is eminently worthy of the esteem with which it is regarded by the Prince.

The "Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine," another old chivalric order, stand next to the Templars in the Calendar, with 62 conclaves on the roll, an increase of no less than twenty-eight during the annual period. About a dozen of these conclaves are, however, located in the United States of America, where, it is only reasonable to suppose, independent Grand Councils of the Order will, in due course, be established. It is noteworthy that the meetings of the "Red Cross" and "Temple" orders are expressly permitted by the Articles of Union between the two Grand Lodges in 1813, at which time his Royal Highness the late Duke of Sussex was Grand Master of the "Knights Templars," and also of the "Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine."

The "Ancient and Accepted Rite" is the last of the great Masonic powers whose position we have under review. Under the Supreme Council 33°, forty-two Rose Croix chapters are working, eight having been added during the past year. This Rite will soon possess a splendid hall of its own in Golden-square, and has lately exhibited other signs of increasing vitality, which augur well for its future prosperity.

On the whole, we are proud to record our satisfaction at the progress of Freemasonry, and its attendant orders, in England during the past year, believing, as we do, that there is room enough for all; and so long as the unrecognised degrees are conducted in unison with the broad principles of the Craft, we shall not only maintain their right to exist, but emphatically wish them God speed in their career.

MARK MASONRY.—The M.W.G.M.M. has approved of a warrant for a new lodge at Whitefield, to be called the "Wike Lodge."

MARK AND ROYAL ARCH.

Bro. W. P. Buchan says, "We can admit the existence of the Royal Arch in the fourth decade of the last century, whereas we have no evidence of the existence of any Mark Degree until some time after that."

The Royal Arch degree is admitted to be no older than 1740. At that date their secrets were given in a Master Mason's lodge.

As regards the Mark, on the contrary, the G.C. of Scotland itself reports that "it was wrought by the operative lodges of St. John's Masonry from time immemorial, and long before the institution of the G.L. of Scotland in 1736." Mother Kilwinning Lodge made members choose their marks in the seventeenth century, and charged them four shillings each for the same.

Can Bro. Buchan tell us how the G.C. of Scotland came into existence in 1717? They are very zealous in picking holes in the constitution of the Mark G.L., which is constituted by ten immemorial English lodges, and several Scotch which have returned to their Masonic allegiance. But what R.A. chapters constituted the G.C. of Scotland? They have sedulously kept their origin in the dark, and I more than suspect that it rests upon no legitimate foundation whatever, but is self-constituted, and therefore spurious from beginning to end; as it is certainly unacknowledged, as Masonic, by the G.L. of Scotland.

AN ENGLISH MARK MASTER.

PRINTED RITUALS.

"An American Freemason," challenges my statement as to printed Rituals. Has he ever heard of the publications of the New York Masonic Publishing Company? I shall be very sorry to hear that Brothers Sickles and Macoy have been doing anything irregular, or that they can be mentioned in the same breath with Pritchard.

If the Brother wishes further information either as to my name, which he cavils at, or as to the Rituals, he will have it.

RANDOLF HAY.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

THURSDAY'S BULLETIN.

Sandringham, Jan. 4, Noon.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has slept well, and is in all respects making satisfactory progress.

(Signed) WILLIAM GULL, M.D.
JOHN LOWE, M.D.

We have great pleasure in announcing that the M.E. First Grand Principal, the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., has appointed Col. Francis Burdett, M.F.Z. 1194, Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons in the province of Middlesex, over which our distinguished brother presides in the Craft as Provincial Grand Master.

In another part of this impression we record the death of the "oldest Freemason" in England—the statement as to whose age is so well authenticated as to satisfy the doubts even of another Sir George Cornwall Lewis. We regret also to have seen in the daily press an account of the decease of the R.W. Bro. William Combyn Stephens, P.G. Wardon of England, and for many years representative of the Grand Lodge of Canada. Bro. Stephens was only 54 years of age at the time of his death.

THE FOOTSTEPS OF MASONRY;

OR,

Freemasonry in relation to Authentic History.

BY BRO. W. VINER BEDOLFE, M.D., J.W. 1329, Hon. Sec. Sphinx Lodge of Instruction.

Having, as we trust, established the identity of our Masonic with municipal institutions, and, further, commenced the identification of the offices and ceremonies with those which can be proved to have existed amongst those grand originators of municipal institutions, viz., the Romans, we now resume this identification and elucidation. We must again, however, inculcate the importance of bearing this fact (of its municipality) in mind, since it is the only clue that can carry us through the labyrinth of time, and enable us to bridge that chasm in which so many histories lie engulfed.

In pursuing our subject, we have not thought it necessary to carry back our investigations into the period of fable or dubious story. Doubtless, it can always be said, "Fortes ante Agamemnonem vixere," signifying that even that was not the beginning. Yet our object has been simply to find the first firm ground on which to stand; and as in our day the engineer constructing a bridge, say across the Thames, is, from experience, content with that solid substratum the London clay without seeking lower formations, so are we content with what history vouches, with what universal consent has consecrated.

There have undoubtedly been periods when these collegia, or lodges, have nearly disappeared from view, simply because no minute records of those periods exist; but supposing a planet to have suddenly disappeared before the epoch of Gallileo, had fragments, or small bodies, been subsequently developed by his invention of the telescope, and found to be still moving in the orbit of the planet, should we have doubted their connection with the former occupant of that orbit? To have done so would have been illogical; and we trust to bring similar logical proof of the identity of our own lodges with those of ancient times. Premising this, we proceed.

"Like the lost pleiad, seen no more below;"

"EAR OF CORN NEAR A FALL OF WATER."

I now call attention to the word said to be signified in a Masonic lodge by "an ear of corn near a fall of water." The explanation of this word, viz., "plenty" is quite in accordance with the emblem; but the story of its origin, apparently Talmudic, as given in the lectures, is quite at variance with its spirit.

To distinguish "friend from foe," the true from the false, the chaff from the wheat, was its object, and it is represented to have been anciently placed over the inner door or entrance to the "Tablinum" of the lodge.

Now, the word itself is possibly only a corruption of "tribulum," a flail, or threshing machine, and derived from the Greek τριβω, to thresh. Passive infinitive, τριβεσθαι, to be threshed (tribesthai). The "ear of corn" signifying the wheat for threshing, and the "stream of water" where the true grain should be separated from the husk.

It was in this sense St. Paul (being a Roman) employed this metaphor in the word "tribulation," alluding to the purgation of the threshing floor, for, writing to these same Romans (8 and 25), he says: "What shall separate us? Shall 'tribulation'?" And the figure has ever since been used in the sense of the separation of true from false Christians, by persecution.

Dr. Trench, in his Book on Words, takes this view of the "tribulum," as an emblem in use amongst the ancient Romans, to whom emblems were common; and some of the houses at Pompeii are carved with emblems indicating their trade.

Here, then, is an ancient Roman sign of undoubted authenticity retained amongst us, and of importance to our argument, since, as it was actually used by them, it shows our Latin origin.

IMAGES.

Amongst all the emblems of our lodges we have no images, and Numa strictly forbade the Romans to represent God in the form of man or beast, saying (says Plutarch), "that it was by the understanding only that we could form any conception of the Deity;" and however our prayers may have been modified since his time, they breathe the same spirit and recognise the universal Father and Governor of the Universe, a God not made with hands; for the triangle, although it may be looked upon as an emblem, is not an "effigy," or "eidolon," form or likeness, and it is this latter which constitutes idolatry.

THE JEWELS OF THE LODGE.

The jewels of the lodge are said to be "moveable and immoveable." The Roman law also divided possessions into "moveable and immoveable." The moveable, for example, were retained by the seller of a farm, &c.

The allusions may be accidental, but it was a division much insisted on in the Roman law.

FREEBORN.

"Privileges restricted to the Freeborn." Blackstone, in speaking of this subject, says: "The obsolete doctrines of old laws are frequently the foundations on which what exists is erected." But we remark that, in Masonry, obsolete ideas are, in this case, preserved, as are flies in amber.

Amongst the Romans, few things are more remarkable than the scrupulosity with which "free and freeborn" was regarded. "With what natural justice," says Blackstone, "I shall not now inquire."

It was a point greatly insisted on amongst them, and our retention of it eminently shows great approximation with the habits of ancient Rome; for, when the Emperor Caracalla granted the "freedom of the city" of Rome to all the Roman world, he restricted it strictly to the "freeborn." St. Paul calls himself a "tent-maker," not merely to state his trade, but as indicating also that he had a guild, and was consequently "free by birth." Horace, the friend of a favourite of Augustus, was, it is true, the son of a freedman, as he himself tells us, "Me libertino natum patre;" but he may have been born before his father became a captive and slave. But genius is a law unto itself, and free from all others.

Although seemingly illiberal, this very distinction shows the liberality of Freemasonry; for, in the early history of Rome, as in all ancient states, foreigners enjoyed none of the privileges, or even the dress, of citizens, and were much despised.

That Freemasonry only requires freedom of birth in their candidates points out the liberality and fraternity of those who, on this sole condition, opened their portals to others, and thus invited the co-operation of foreign craftsmen and men of science, "being worthy."

This fact, so recognised and insisted on in our traditions, is, undoubtedly, one chief cause of its universality; for, whenever or wherever a lodge was formed, no other obstacle existed for admission, all who came, of whatever nation, or kingdom, or people, being found worthy, were alike received.

"CLOSING THE LODGE WITH THE SETTING SUN."

This evident remnant of an ancient usage recalls forcibly to our minds this fact, that, in all the assemblies of the Roman people, nothing could be done before the rising nor after the setting of the sun.

Hence, we are told (Adams) that some one was always appointed to mark the setting sun, and close the collegium, by order of the Master of the assembly.

PLEDGES OF FIDELITY.

We must not omit an important characteristic of Freemasonry, evidence of ancient manners and of ancient teachings, viz., "oaths or pledges of fidelity." The King Numa built a temple to Faith, and, we are told, instituted formal oaths as pledges of fidelity, which were thus rendered legally binding, and thus avoided the necessity of giving hostages or pledges when such were not absolutely required.

The Romans did not forget his teachings, and their fidelity to their pledges and solemn obligations long distinguished them as a people, and Gibbon remarks that, "The goddess of human and social Faith was worshipped not only in the temples, but in the very lives of the Romans."

RECEPTION AND OBLIGATION OF CANDIDATES

Freemasonry retains evidently a very ancient form of receiving and obligating its candidates. Amongst the Romans, a candidate seeking any object or preferment, appealed personally to the Quirites or electors, but in a peculiar manner. It was usual for the candidate to be accompanied by a monitor, to instruct or inform him. On setting out, he assumed an appearance of humility, threw off his pallium or cloak, loosened his tunic or coat, and at the same time bared his arm and breast, the foot being slipshod. All this we are expressly told; it is not therefore necessary to seek amongst Eastern nations for parallel facts.

Of religious ceremonial, initiation or devotion, on great and important occasions, descriptions are not wanting; as when Dido, stung by the ingratitude of Æneas, seeks in religious devotion a solace for her woes. Virgil thus describes it—

"Pallor simul occupat ora
Ipsa molâ manibus que piis altaria juxta
Unum exutâ pedem, vinctis in veste recinctâ
Testatur moritura Deos."

Which may be thus rendered:—"The Queen herself, her face bedewed and pallid, her hair dishevelled—now resolute on death. Having one foot bare, her robe ungirt, standing by and holding the altar (pedestal) with pious hands, and offering salt-cake (the mola, or mass), makes her appeal to the gods and to the stars, conscious of her fate."

Some authors assert that it was the left foot which was bared, and in this condition the postulant made the round of the altars. Ovid describes Medea—

"Egreditur tectis, vestes induta recinctas, Nuda pedem, nudis humeris," &c.,

and which may be rendered: Arm, breast, and knee made bare, left foot slipshod. Horace and other authors also give a similar description, so that religious, political, and social postulants underwent ceremonial preparation. Dishevelled hair (for females), garment bound back (that they might be better enabled to go round the sacred building, it is said), the shoulder, arm, and left foot made bare, the hands upon the altar, and in this humiliating condition take the solemn obligation.

The ceremony of initiating "vestal virgins" is said by a learned editor (I cannot put my hand on the extract) closely to have resembled taking the veil in modern times, the latter evidently being imitated from the former, and might be studied with advantage. The duty of the vestal virgin was, as we have already mentioned (when their order was founded by Numa), to keep the sacred fire burning, and that is even now, in the Latin countries, a chief duty of nuns. In southern Italy, to the present day, in almost every house a lamp is kept burning to the honour of the Queen of Heaven; and what is that but the "sacred fire," descended—almost unknown, unseen, unthought of—even unto the present day?

It may be interesting to recal the "Declaration" with which the Pontifex Maximus received the Vestal Virgin "designate" from her mother or family: "I take thee, O beloved one (amata), as priestess to our Lady Vesta, to perform her religious service, and to discharge those duties with respect to the whole body of the Roman people, which the law requires of you as priestess of Vesta."

Thus far have we proceeded in the identification of our fragments, our object being, as our programme proposed, by studying its internal organization, to show the "unity of design" perceptible equally in the ancient and modern institution. We hope, in our next lecture, to be sufficiently advanced to point out where the Roman, or fundamental, or primary institution terminates, and the second, or accessory, commences.

DEATH OF THE OLDEST FREEMASON IN ENGLAND.—Bro. Matthew Greathead, of Richmond, Yorkshire, died there on Sunday in the 102nd year of his age. He was born at High Cunniscliffe, near Darlington, on April 23, 1770, and was believed to be the oldest Freemason in England, having been a member of a lodge for 75 years.

DENMARK.—His Royal Highness the Crown Prince has been elected Grand Master of the Danish Craft, in succession to the late M.W. Brother Brästrup. Representatives from the Grand Lodge of Sweden, Germany, &c., are expected to attend the new Grand Master's installation at Copenhagen, in the current month. Under the auspices of his Royal Highness (who is brother to the Princess of Wales), Freemasonry cannot fail to prosper in Denmark, where the ancient Craft has long been held in great estimation, the late King Frederick having been Grand Master up to the period of his decease.

A LONDON SECRET WORTH KNOWING.—It is a matter of frequent surprise to our neighbours across the Channel, and of still greater annoyance to ourselves, that, with all our advanced civilisation and love of comfort, so little accommodation of an adequate character exists in London for any visitor in search of a really good dinner, or lighter refreshment, either for himself or for a party of friends. This is, undoubtedly, one of the matters that are, even yet, "managed better in France." It is true that our West-end clubs are luxurious and comfortable in the highest degree, but only a certain favoured few among the denizens of London can avail themselves of their privileges. On the other hand, the proverbial extortion of the great hotels, and their narrow and insufficient accommodation, want of roominess, general "stuffy" atmosphere, and indifferent cuisine, cause them to be avoided by those whose taste is at all fastidious, and whose means are moderate. Between the hotel and the club, and performing partly the functions of both, stands the restaurant, but of such establishments there are, unfortunately, too few in our metropolis, and most of those which do exist are situated in quarters of the town more accessible to men of business than to those of leisure; so that the question how to take a lady or a friend to a house where a really good dinner, well cooked and well served, with due quietness and privacy, can be procured, has hitherto been difficult of solution. A solitary but notable instance of an establishment offering all these advantages and conveniences has come under our notice, which seems to have attained the full measure of success such an experiment deserves. Situated in the most fashionable and frequented thoroughfare in the West-end, contiguous to the National Gallery, the theatres, and the Metropolitan Railway, the Pall Mall Restaurant is in no respect inferior to the best Parisian houses as they were under the Empire. Only recently some alterations have been made, providing many additional private rooms, a luncheon and dining room for ladies, a magnificent salle à manger on the first floor, and a bar for lighter refreshments. It cannot be too widely known that hot luncheons are served daily from 1 to 4 o'clock, in the New Luncheon Rooms, at prices as moderate as those of any house in London. The perfection of the cuisine, the really exquisite "service," and the plentiful "attendance," render it matter for no surprise that the Pall Mall has attained a high place among London restaurants, and that among our foreign visitors especially it has attained unbounded popularity. The speciality of the house for late suppers should not be forgotten, as this was an accommodation hitherto to be obtained only by journeying far to the east.—John Bull.

THE GREAT MISSION OF WOMAN.

Great, indeed, is the task assigned to woman! Who can elevate its dignity? Not to make laws, not to lead armies, not to govern empires; but to form those by whom laws are made, armies led, and empires governed; to guard against the slightest taint of bodily infirmity, the frail, yet spotless creature, whose moral, no less than physical being, must be derived from her; to inspire those principles, to inculcate those doctrines, to animate those sentiments which generations yet unborn and nations yet uncivilized will learn to bless; to soften firmness into mercy, and chasten honour into refinement; to exalt generosity into virtue; by a soothing care to allay the anguish of the body, and the far worse anguish of the mind; by her tenderness to disarm passion; by her purity to triumph oversense; to cheer the scholar sinking under his toil; to console the statesman for the ingratitude of a mistaken people; to be compensation for friends that are perfidious—for happiness that has passed away. Such is her vocation. The couch of the tortured sufferer, the prison of the deserted friend, the cross of the rejected Saviour—these are theatres on which her greatest triumphs have been achieved. Such is her destiny; to visit the forsaken, to tend to the neglected when monarchs abandon, when counsellors betray, when justice prosecutes, when brethren and disciples flee, to remain unshaken and unchanged, and to exhibit in this lower world a type of that love, pure, constant, and ineffable, which in another we are taught to believe the test of virtue.—Blackwood's Magazine.

ON Friday, 29th December, the Old Concord Lodge, No. 172, held their Audit and Ball Supper Committee meeting at the Masons' Hall Tavern, Masons'-avenue, City. After the business of the evening was concluded, the brethren present partook of refreshment, provided by the host, Bro. Charles Gosden, in his accustomed satisfactory style.

The Annual Banquet of the Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, which was postponed on the 15th ult., in consequence of the alarming illness of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., will take place on Friday, the 19th inst., at the Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, under the presidency of our esteemed brother, Past Grand Pursuivant James Brett, and a large muster of brethren is confidently expected.

THE subject of the Hulsean Prize at Cambridge for 1872 is "The Influence of Christianity on the Legislation of Constantine the Great."

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Bad legs, Wounds, Ulcers, and all descriptions of sores are cured by the proper and diligent use of these inestimable preparations. To attempt to cure bad legs by plastering the edges of the wound together is folly, for should the skin unite, a baggy, diseased condition remains underneath to break out with tenfold fury in a few days. The only rational and permanent treatment as indicated by nature, is to reduce the inflammation in and about the wound, to soothe the neighbouring nerves, to cool the heated blood as it courses along its vessels, and to render its watery icherous discharge consistent and healthy. Holloway's Pills should likewise be taken to purify the blood, and expel the noxious humour from the system.—[Advt.]

Poetry.

GOD SAVE THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The following is the song alluded to in our notice, last week, of the "Entertainments at Chester," as having been sung by Mr. Owen:—

Solo—Within our ancient City,
Above our hills and vales,
A Nation's prayers re-echo—
"God save the Prince of Wales."

Chorus—Within our ancient City,
O'er all our hills and vales,
A Nation's prayers re-echo—
"God save the Prince of Wales."

Solo—"God save our Earl of Chester,
His youthful life, O! spare;
Preserve him to this kingdom,"
Is Cestria's heartfelt prayer.

Chorus—Within our ancient City, &c.

Solo—"God bless his Royal Mother,
And bless his gentle Wife,
Who pray Thee, in Thy mercy,
To spare his precious life."

Chorus—Within our ancient City, &c.

Solo—"In mercy hear Thy people,
And if it be Thy will—
Long live the Prince of Cambria, To bless our Nation still."

Chorus—Within our ancient City, &c.

LINES BY A YOUNG DAUGHTER, ON THE DEATH OF HER MOTHER.

Alone, in the gathering shadows,
Watching the storm clouds arise,
Deeper and darker they gather,
Hiding the beautiful skies;
Thus it has been with life's pathway,
Happiness proves but a dream,
Just as my sky seems to brighten,
Clouds come and darken the scene.

Truly, God's ways are a wonder,
There's so much we can't understand,
So much that tempts us to murmur,
Yet all is the work of His hand;
He only has taken a loved one,
A lamb of His flock to her rest,
But, yet, it is hard for her children
To think it is all for the best.

Oh! mother, I cannot help wishing,
I cannot help longing to know,
If you from your bright home in heaven,
Can look on poor mortals below?
Or, are you so happy, my mother,
That never a shadow can come,
Never a thought of the loved ones,
Weary and lonely at home.

May be, across the dark river,
Over on Heaven's bright side,
You will be waiting, my mother,
To welcome us over the tide.
Ah! life would lose many a shadow,
And weary hearts many a pain,
If we were but sure of the meeting,
The knowing of loved ones again.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

[With a view to increase the circulation, and consequently the usefulness, of THE FREEMASON, it is suggested that Lodges, &c., desiring reports to appear in the paper, should take a certain number of copies in proportion to the space required for the report.]

A sum of ten guineas was voted for the purchase of a Life Governorship of the Boys' School, to be placed on Bro. Coote's list. It was also resolved, "That the members of the Lodge of Asaph, 1319, express their deep sympathy towards their illustrious Brother H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in his severe illness, praying that the G.A.O.T.U. will be pleased to restore him to his wonted health, and spare so valuable a life to his Masonic Brotherhood and to the nation at large." Mr. H. S. Wilkes was proposed for initiation, and the lodge was closed with solemn prayer.

PROVINCIAL.

HEYWOOD, LANCASHIRE.—Naphthali Lodge, No. 266.—The members of this now numerous and rapidly-rising lodge met at their rooms on Thursday, Dec. 28th, for the purpose of initiating three candidates, and installing Bro. Richard Gorton in the chair for the ensuing year. The ceremonies having been duly performed, with musical accompaniments, the brethren adjourned to the Victoria Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was placed before them. The customary toasts followed, interspersed with appropriate music and songs. In responding, the W.M. expressed his appreciation of the high and honourable position in which he had just been placed, and hoped, with the assistance of the officers, and strict punctuality in attendance to the duties of the lodge, to secure for it a high position in the Craft. Installing Officer, Bro. John Redfern, 42, P.P.G.P., and Bro. William Roberts, 298 and 308, P.P.G.P. East Lancashire, highly complimented the lodge on its prosperity and growing efficiency. The I.P.M., Bro. William Wescoe, ably addressed the brethren, and the evening was spent in a most pleasant and agreeable manner.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 281.—The regular meeting of this lodge for the celebration of the festival of St. John the Evangelist and installation of the W.M.-elect, took place at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on Wednesday, the 27th ult. The W.M., Bro. Dr. Moore, G.S.B. England, presided, and was supported by the following officers: Bros. John Hatch, I.P.M.; Wm. Hall, S.W.; Wm. Fleming, J.W.; Jas. Hatch, P.M., Treas.; Edmund Simpson, P.M., Sec.; Edward Airey, S.D.; W. J. Sly, J.D.; J. Harrison, I.G.; J. Watson, Tyler; J. Taylor (1051), as Organist; R. Taylor, Steward; and a large assembly of brethren. The preliminary business having been transacted, Past Masters John Hatch and E. Storey presented to the W.M. Bro. William Hall, S.W., the W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation. The Installing Officer recited the qualifications of a candidate for the Master's chair, and the ancient charges, which were read and assented to by Bro. Hall, and in a Board of Installed Masters he was placed in the chair of the lodge, and was afterwards proclaimed and saluted in the various degrees. He then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follow: W. Bro. Dr. Moore, I.P.M.; Bros. W. Fleming, S.W.; E. Airey, J.W.; James Hatch, Treas.; Edmund Simpson, Sec.; W. J. Sly, S.D.; J. Harrison, J.D.; R. Taylor, I.G.; J. Watson, Tyler; and R. Gregson, Steward. The charge to the W.M. was delivered by the Installing Officer, and those to the Wardens and brethren by Bro. John Hatch, P.M., who also presented the working tools. After the lodge was closed a number of the brethren adjourned to the house of Bro. Sly (the King's Arms), where a suitable banquet had been provided.

CARLISLE.—Union Lodge, No. 310.—The members of this lodge met at their rooms, Castle-street, on Tuesday se'nnight, for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect, Bro. John Slack, W.M., in the chair. After the usual lodge business had been transacted, the W.M.-elect was presented for installation by Bros. the Rev. W. Cockett, P.M., P.P.G.C., and Thomas Blacklock, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., the ceremony being most ably and correctly rendered by the retiring W.M., Bro. John Slack, P.P.G.J.D. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. W. Court, P.G.D., as S.W. and Treasurer; Jos. Moore, J.W., Secretary; Robert Metcalf, S.D.; Edward Harrison, J.D.; John Murray, I.G.; John Barnes, Tyler; Coole and Carruthers, Stewards. At the conclusion of the business the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to the Victoria Hotel, where dinner was provided by Bro. Campbell. The new W.M. presided, supported on his right by Bro. Jos. Iredale, P.D.P.G.M., and Bro. Moore, and on his left by Bro. J. Slack, P.M., and Bro. Blacklock. The vice-chair was taken by Bro. Court, S.W., supported on his right and left by Bros. Murchie, Dalton, Corbett, and J. Murray. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given, the W.M. presented to Bro. Slack, on behalf of the brethren, a beautiful P.M.'s jewel, and in course of his remarks said that he hoped that he might long live to wear it. Bro. Slack replied in suitable terms. The jewel, which was supplied by Bro. George Kenning, Masonic jeweller, London, bears the following inscription: "Presented to Bro. John Slack, P.M., P.P.G.J.D., by the members of the Union Lodge on the termination of his second year as W.M., in token of their appreciation and regard. Dec. 26th, 1871." During the evening several excellent songs were sung.

WIGTON.—St. John's Lodge, No. 327.—Wednesday, 27th ult., being the annual festival of St. John, was celebrated by the brethren as their sixty-fourth anniversary. The lodge was opened at high twelve, in the lodge-room, Lion and Lamb Inn, after which Mr. George Stamper, of Langrigg Bank, received his first degree in Freemasonry. Bro. James Porter, P.M., P.G.S., of the St. John's Lodge, Wigton, and the Concord Lodge, Preston, occupying the W.M.'s chair. Bro. Henry Bewes was then installed as W.M., Bro. Porter officiating in a masterly manner as Installing Master. The W.M. then appointed the following officers for the ensuing twelve months: Bros. Shannon, S.W.; Bowman, J.W.; Richardson, Treas.; J. Norman Hodgson, Sec.; McMechan, S.D.; George Carrick, J.D.; and Hewison, jun., as I.G. Bro. H. R. Dand is the retiring W.M. At the conclusion of the business of the lodge, the brethren, to the number of twenty-four, sat down to a banquet prepared by Mrs. Martin, which well deserved the encomiums passed upon it by the guests. Bro. Lemon, P.M., P.G. Treas., occupied the chair, and Bro. S. Halifax, P.M., the vice-chair. The Chairman was supported by Bros. Isaac Pattinson, J. N. Hodgson, McMechan, and Shannon. The loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received in a truly Masonic and spirited style. The proceedings of the afternoon were of the most agreeable and harmonious character; speech, toast, and song occupying the time for an hour or two after dinner.

TORQUAY.—St. John's Lodge, No. 328, held its sixty-first anniversary, in the Masonic Hall, on the 27th ult. The lodge was opened by W. Bro. Thos. O'iver, W.M., who, after the regular business of the lodge had been transacted, introduced Bro. D. Watson, the W.M.-elect, to the Installing Master, Bro. Dr. Hopkins, P.P.G.W. Warwickshire, who had kindly consented to act on the occasion. There was a good attendance of brethren, and the ceremony was rendered highly impressive by the able manner in which Bro. Dr. Hopkins conducted it. The newly-installed W.M. then proceeded to invest the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Thos. Oliver, I.P.M.; John Paul, S.W.; T. Perry, J.W.; Rev. R. Bowden, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.C., Chaplain; W. Harder, Treas.; Jas. Murray, Sec.; John Chapman, S.D.; J. C. Parker, J.D.; C. J. Harland, P.M., D.C.; J. H. Morgan, Organist; J. Pigott, I.G.; Henry Day and W. F. Hinton, Stewards; W. Cheuncour, Tyler.—At the close of the business, the brethren retired and partook of a substantial banquet. W. Bro. D. Watson, W.M., in giving the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," referred in sympathetic terms to the illness under which her Majesty had only recently been suffering, and also to the deep anxiety which she must have felt with regard to the illness of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and echoed the wish of every true Mason, in desiring for her a long and prosperous reign. The toast having been drunk with honours, the W. Master next proposed "The better health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M. of England," alluded to the world-wide anxiety which had been expressed with regard to the issue of that serious attack under which his Royal Highness had been suffering; reminded the brethren how his Royal Highness had interested himself in promoting the interests of the Craft, and concluded by wishing him a speedy restoration to health. The toast was received with musical honours, which were responded to in a manner indicating the deep fraternal sympathy of the brethren.—The usual Masonic toasts having been given with due honours, the retiring Secretary, Bro. J. Chapman, in responding to the complimentary terms the W.M. had used in proposing his health, reminded the lodge that it was their co-operation, under the benign influence and wise rule of their I.P.M., Bro. Oliver, which had produced the success of the past year, and urged the brethren to continue those efforts that had been crowned with such marked and satisfactory results. Among the items of interest that had transpired during the year, there appeared the result of the Masonic Ball, in February last, which produced a sum of £30 for Masonic charities. The income of the lodge had also very much improved, owing to the brethren having paid up their dues, and thus enabling the lodge to meet all its engagements, and also to assist those noble institutions of charity which had become the brightest ornaments of the Order. In addition to the regular efforts of the lodge, there had been, during the year, all the necessary arrangements made, and the principal part of the funds realised, for the formation of a R.A. chapter in connection with the lodge; the chief credit of which was due to Bro. Thomas Oliver; and which, it was hoped, would be ready for consecration in February next. The numerical increase was also in keeping with the other happy features that had characterised the lodge during the year, there having been added to its list of members one-fifth of its present number. One of the most interesting and important items of expenditure during the year was the appropriation of above £40 to Masonic charities, while a very considerable sum had also been expended in improving the appearance of the lodge. In concluding his remarks with regard to the present improved condition of Freemasonry in Torquay, the retiring Secretary appealed to those present to continue their efforts in the acquirement of knowledge and in the development of those grand principles of the Order, in the everyday life of all the members, which could alone entitle them to rank as Freemasons.—"The Visiting Brethren" having been given, and responded to by Bro. Dr. Hopkins, and the other usual toasts disposed of (in which Bros. the Rev. R. Bowden, T. Perry, J. Paul, J. Greenfield, P.G.S.D., W. Wreyford, and others took a part, the meeting was brought to a close, after the Tyler had given his toast, by singing the National Anthem.

HYDE, CHESHIRE.—Industry Lodge, No. 361.—On the afternoon of Thursday, the 23th ultimo, the brethren of this lodge met at the Norfolk Arms Hotel to celebrate the festival of St. John the Evangelist, and also to instal the W.M.-elect for the ensuing year. The lodge was opened at 3 p.m. by the W.M., Bro. Frederick Drinkwater, supported by his officers. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Drinkwater presented Bro. John Beech, W.M.-elect, for the benefit of installation, which ceremony was most impressively performed by Bro. Wayne, P.M. 993. The newly-installed W.M. appointed his officers, and they were invested by Bro. Wayne, as follows: Bros. S. N. Brooks, S.W.; Wm. Berry, J.W.; Wm. Brooke, Treas.; Brian Cooper, P.M. and P.G.P., Sec.; G. Hesketh, S.D.; Thos. North, J.D.; Wm. Jackson, I.G.; Jesse Taylor, Tyler; Wm. Hill, Asst. Tyler; William Wignall and John Ainsworth, Stewards. Heartly good wishes were expressed by visiting brethren from several lodges. Business concluded, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer.—After the ceremony, the festival banquet took place, which was served in a most excellent manner. The W.M. presided, Bros. Wayne and Turner supporting him on the right, and Bros. the I.P.M., Cooper, and Capt. Arrowsmith on the left. About sixty brethren were present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and duly honoured. A very efficient glee party, consisting of Bros. M. Stafford, B. Cooper, R. T. Bowden, and J. Calfon, with Bro. Kirk as accompanist, added much to the pleasures of a most enjoyable evening by singing glees, songs, &c., all of which were well received.

KIDDERMINSTER.—Hope and Charity Lodge, No. 377.—This lodge celebrated the annual festival of St. John the Evangelist in the lodge-room at Bro. Lloyd's, the Lion Hotel, Kidderminster, for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master-elect, Bro. J. R. Wood, and of presenting a testimonial to Bro. J. Fitzgerald, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., consisting of a P.Z. jewel and a purse £50, as a mark of esteem and gratitude for his long and disinterested services. The ceremony of installation of the W.M. Bro. J. R. Wood, was very ably performed by Bro. J. Fitzgerald, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., the Honorary Secretary of the lodge, after which the W.M. proceeded to induct the following brethren as officers for the ensuing twelve months: Bros. W. G. Hopkins, S.W.; B. Woodward, J.W.; G. Southall, Treas.; J. Fitzgerald, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Hon. Sec.; Robins, Dir. of Cers.; G. W. Grosvenor, S.D.; W. Turton, J.D.; J. Morton, I.G.; G. J. Meredith, Steward; H. Jones Tyler. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren proceeded to the excellent banquet provided by Bro. Lloyd, and were highly pleased by the manner in which it was served. When the cloth was cleared, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given by the W.M., who made a special reference to the health of Brother Albert Edward Prince of Wales, expressing the gratification the lodge felt at his approaching convalescence. The Worshipful Master then presented Bro. Fitzgerald with a purse containing fifty sovereigns and a P.Z. jewel, amidst loud Masonic applause.—Bro. Fitzgerald then rose and said: I can only say I am not deserving of the high honour you have this night paid me. Excuse an old man if I refer to years ago. There was a time when we had a difficulty in finding sufficient members to keep the lodge together. There was a time when we could not find enough members to install a W.M., and a time when we were not so punctual to time as at present. I had this day the honour of installing the thirteenth Master of this lodge, and eleven of those Masters were pupils of my own, and I am happy to say they were all thoroughly imbued with the spirit of Freemasonry. I can only say that if my efforts to benefit the lodge have proved successful I am proud, but feel, as a Mason, I have only done my duty; and as long as I live it will be my wish to do all in my power for the benefit of the Craft. I only wish I had the means to return a similar present to all the brethren who have subscribed towards this testimonial.

ULVERSTON.—Lodge of Furness, No. 995.—The annual meeting of this distinguished lodge took place on the 27th of December, at the Masonic Temple, Theatre-street. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Thomas Dodgson, and the minutes of last regular lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Reuben, P.S.W., was then presented for the benefit of installation by P.M.'s Barber and Case. The W.M., Bro. Thomas Dodgson, then proceeded with the ceremony of installation in such an able, impressive, and correct manner as to elicit the warmest approval of the brethren and visitors present. The W.M. then appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. Roger Dodgson, S.W.; W. Harrison, J.W.; Sergeant-major Paxton, Sec.; G. Brocklebank, Treas.; J. Postlethwaite, S.D.; J. Geldart, J.D.; W. Whiteside, I.G.; F. Bell, S.S. A. B. Lockett, J.S.; J. Case, P.M., D.C.; J. Robinson, Tyler. The lodge was called from labour to refreshment at the Queen's Hotel, where a most sumptuous repast was provided by Bro. Clayton. The room was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the arrangement of flowers, &c., very pleasing. The W.M. very feelingly referred to the illness of our esteemed P.G.M., his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. There were about fifty brethren present, amongst whom were the following visitors: Bros. T. Wylie, P.G. Reg. West Lancashire; H. Cooke, P.G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmorland; Arthur Woodhouse, 310, P.M. 412, P.P.G. Purs. Cumberland and Westmorland; W. Relph, P.M. 1021; G. Cornfield, P.M. 1225; J. S. Ormandy, W.M. 1225; John Heald, W.M. and P.M. 730; A. Hadley, 1225; W. H. Dawes, F. H. Clarke, R. Stirzaker, and G. Fell, 1021; and others. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Parker, Organist, assisted by Bros. Matthes, P.S.W., J. Harper, and F. Bell, S.S. The brethren separated at 10.30 p.m. after spending the evening in a truly fraternal and Masonic manner.

ISLE OF MAN.—Athole Lodge, No. 1004.—The members of the Craft had a very successful and enjoyable reunion on Wednesday week, on the occasion of the installation of Bro. Thomas Handley, S.W., into the office of W.M. of this lodge for the ensuing year. The members met at the lodge-rooms, St. James' Hall, shortly after two o'clock, when a brother was passed to the second degree, by the retiring W.M., Bro. Samuel Webb. The gavel was then handed to Bro. G. M. Lofthouse, P.M., who had consented to officiate as Installing Master; the duties of S.W. being fulfilled by Bro. J. A. Brown, P.M., and of J.W. by Bro. S. Webb. During the installation ceremony, which was admirably performed by Bro. Lofthouse, the new W.M. appointed his officers as follows: Bros. G. Heron, S.W.; J. Lambert, J.W.; G. M. Lofthouse, Treas.

and Org.; G. H. Wood, Sec.; J. Quine, Deacon; Lewin, M.C.; and Lanagan, Tyler. The brethren afterwards adjourned to Castle Mona Hotel, to banquet. The banquet, although by no means equal to that placed before the brethren of the Tynwald Lodge a fortnight ago, was on the whole an excellent one, and was done full justice to by the brethren. After the banquet, the first toast proposed was that of "The Queen and the Craft," followed by that of "Brother his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," the W.M. taking advantage of the occasion to refer to the deep feeling of loyalty which the recent illness of the Prince of Wales had evoked amongst all classes of the people of this realm. This and the next toast, that of "The Grand Master, and the other Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of England," were received with full Masonic honours.—The health of "Our W.M., Bro. Thomas Handley," was then proposed by the I.P.M., Bro. S. Webb, who expressed his conviction that the brethren could not have made a better selection for the Mastership than they had done.—In returning thanks, the W.M. proposed the health of the I.P.M., referring to the admirable manner in which Bro. Webb had fulfilled the office of Master during the past year; and, in the name of the lodge, the W.M. presented him with a very handsome Past Master's jewel.—The other toasts were "The Past Masters," proposed by Bro. G. Heron, S.W.; and responded to by Bros. Lofthouse and Tuton; "The Installing Master," proposed by Bro. J. J. Harwood, P.M., and responded to by Bro. G. M. Lofthouse, P.M.; "The Wardens and other Officers of 1004," proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bro. J. Lambert, J.W.; "The W.M. and Officers of the Tynwald Lodge, 1242," proposed by the I.P.M., and responded to by Bro. J. A. Brown, P.M.; "The other Insular Lodges," proposed by Bro. Tuton, P.M.; and "The Tyler's Toast," proposed by Bro. Lofthouse, P.M. The harmony and pleasure of the evening were much promoted by the singing of Bros. J. J. Harwood, G. M. Lofthouse, and James Brown. The latter during the evening sang the new Masonic song, published in No. 144 of THE FREEMASON.

KESWICK.—Greta Lodge, No. 1073.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the lodge-room, Keswick Hotel, Keswick, on Tuesday, the 26th ult. There was a large gathering of the brethren present to witness the installation of Bro. John Wood, P.G.S., 1073. The imposing ceremony was ably performed by Bro. James Porter, P.M., and P.G.S., 327, 343, 1256, of Preston, assisted by Bros. John Wood, C.E., P.P.S.G.W., P.M. 1073; R. Robinson, P.M., P.P.S.G.D., 1002; John Pearson, W.M., 1002; Cockermouth. Banks, I.G.; Matthew Cooper, Tyler. The brethren afterwards adjourned to the dining-room, where the annual banquet was held, under the presidency of the newly-elected W.M., Bro. Wood. It would be needless to add that the viands were of first-class character, and reflected great credit on the worthy manager, Bro. Hinks. A delightful evening was spent, and the brethren separated at an early hour with hearty good wishes for this rising and prosperous lodge.

EXETER.—Semp. Fidelis Lodge, No. 1254.—The third annual installation of W.M. of the above lodge was duly held at the Masonic Hall, Exeter, on Monday last. The V.W. Bro. Cann, P.P.G. The I.P.M.'s health was proposed and cordially received, and the W.M.'s health was also enthusiastically drunk, both with Masonic honours.—Exeter Gazette Telegram.

SOUTHPORT.—The Ferner Lodge, No. 1313.—The brethren of this lodge held their ordinary monthly meeting on Thursday, Dec. 28th, under the presidency of Bro. W. Dodd, W.M., nearly all the officers being present. After the confirmation of the minutes, Bros. Taylor, Hobbs, and Halsall satisfactorily answered the introductory questions, and were passed, in a most solemn manner, in due form to the degree of F.C. This lodge is very young, being scarcely eighteen months old, but its prosperity and harmony have been great. It now contains thirty members, and enjoys the high privilege of having Sir T. G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., M.W.P.G.M., as an honorary member. After the labours of the evening were closed, the brethren adjourned for refreshment to the Albert Hotel, where an elegant and seasonable repast was provided by Bro. Herrmann.

The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

FOREIGN.

GIBRALTAR.—Lodge of Friendship, No. 278.—Seldom before has such a large gathering of the brethren of the district of Andalusia assembled within the walls of the Masonic Hall, Gibraltar, as crowded together on Thursday evening, the 21st ult., to witness the installation of the W.M.-elect, Bro. Carver, by the retiring Master, Bro. J. Balfour Cockburn. Amongst those present we noticed: Deputy District Grand Master Bro. Alton, Past Masters Dantez, Henry, Crooks, Ellison, Francis, the W.M. of every lodge of the district; Bros. Lyon, Campbell, Hardy, Andrews, Lonsdale, Farie, Richardson, Wall, Price, Todd, and many others of the Royal Artillery, Engineers, 74th Highlanders, and almost every civilian member of the lodge, besides many visiting brethren from the navy, &c. After the lodge was opened, and the minutes had been read and confirmed, the W.M., Bro. Balfour Cockburn, rose and made the following speech, which was listened to with the most earnest attention, and received, at its close, with an impulsive burst of applause: Brethren, before proceeding with the regular business which has summoned us together this evening, I consider I should be wanting in my duty towards myself, and the respect I owe to the distinguished brethren who have honoured us with their presence to-night, and the members of the lodge generally, if I failed to give public expression to the alternate sentiments of hope and despair, and, finally, of mingled joy and gratitude, which, since we last met within these walls, have so profoundly agitated, not only every Freemason, but every member of those communities which enjoy the high privilege and happy fortune of forming a portion of the British Empire. The terrible ordeal through which it has pleased the Great Architect of the Universe that a member of our Royal Family should pass, has been, if I may so express myself, reflected and reproduced in the universal anguish and anxiety which has pervaded every portion of the globe over which the flag of England is unfurled, and has caused the arrival of each succeeding telegram, bearing accounts of that fearful illness which has hurried our beloved Prince to the very confines of eternity, to be awaited with fear, trembling, and agonising suspense; and though far removed in person from the Royal sufferer, in spirit we have lingered, with bated breath and palpitating heart, for a whisper of comfort or assurance, on the very threshold of that sad and mourning chamber which held within it the racked and tortured frame of one who has honestly earned and justly acquired the proud title of a nation's love, an empire's hopes. Happily, most happily, our latest intelligence from England places us in a position to believe that the dark cloud so heavily charged with grief, suffering, and death, which hung so oppressively over Sandringham, and which threatened to discharge its deadly contents on that royal and devoted household, has been raised and dissipated, leaving, alas! sad evidences of its pestiferous presence, but, nevertheless, disclosing a golden vista of hope and assurance which enables us with every confidence to anticipate that soon again we shall realise the pleasure of beholding his Royal Highness taking a part in, and performing, the important duties of his exalted rank and position with that charm of manner, that ability, and that princely tact which has endeared him to all and enshrined him in our hearts, and which gives such hopeful promise that when, under Providence, he is summoned to assume those higher duties for which, in all human probability, he is destined, he will bring to the throne of England those graces, those endowments, and those virtues which have been so pre-eminently and conspicuously illustrated by her Gracious Majesty, and which have rendered, and still continue to render, her reign so illustrious, making the country of our nativity the land, of all others, where the highest forms of moral and intellectual progress, of wealth, of prosperity, and of Christianity, have attained the climax of their vigour and development. As Freemasons, we are bound, on the threshold of our entrance into the Order, to an attachment and a devoted loyalty to the sovereign of our native land. When, therefore, the Heir Apparent to that high position is not merely a member of our Brotherhood, but stands forth a distinguished ruler in the Craft, we may, I think, utterly discard all imputation of selfishness, if, as a body, we have evinced a more peculiar, a more vivid, and a more intense feeling of interest and anxiety at the danger which threatened to remove from our assemblies so beloved, so respected, and so illustrious a brother; and we may, I contend, with equal freedom celebrate with exultation and rejoice with an exceeding great joy that the Mighty Master of man has, in His infinite wisdom and goodness, vouchsafed a favourable hearing to the earnest supplication, fervent entreaties, and heartfelt prayers of the whole kingdom, and has, in His great mercy, been pleased to lift our brother, the Prince of Wales, from the very portals of the tomb, and restore him in health and safety to the Queen, to his family, and to the nation.—The ceremony of inducting the W.M.-elect, Bro. Benjamin Carver, into the chair of King Solomon, was then commenced, and carefully and impressively conducted by the retiring Master. The W.M. named as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Price, S.W.; Wall, J.W.; Hepper, S.D.; Ashton, Sec.; Marin, Treas.; Richardson, D.C.; Clavarezzo, J.D.; and Imorri, I.G. After the business of the evening was concluded, the brethren retired to the banquet-hall, where, with the accessories of a well-spread table and under the genial influence and sway of the newly-raised W.M., the rest of the time was spent in pleasant converse and much social enjoyment.

There being no other business before the chapter, it was closed in due form.

At its conclusion, he resigned the gavel to the Grand Secretary, who then proceeded to obligate Bro. Emra Holmes, 31°, W.M.-elect. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, especially dwelling on the illness of the Prince of Wales, and the hopeful reports of the last few days. He called upon the brethren to drink to the better health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The toast was drunk with every expression of loyalty and respect. The W.M. then gave the "Grand Master, the Rev. Raymond Portal, and the Past and Present Grand Officers." He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Binckes, the V.W. Grand Secretary, speaking in very eulogistic terms of his abilities, and thanking him very warmly on the part of the lodge for his kindness in coming to conduct the installation ceremony that evening. Bro. Binckes responded in brief but happy terms, and with his usual eloquence and good taste. The W.M. next proposed "The I.P.M.," whom he spoke of as the most enthusiastic, talented, and learned brother in Suffolk. The toast was very cordially received. Bro. Sanderson thanked the brethren for the kind way in which they had drunk his health. He disclaimed the praises of the W.M., whose health he then proposed. The W.W. briefly replied. Several other toasts were duly honoured, and the brethren separated at a late hour.

MASONIC NOTES.

BY A COUNTRY P.M.

NO. 1.—STABILITY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

Having an evening to spare, when in London the other day, we took a walk to the “Guildhall Tavern,” where the celebrated Stability Lodge of Instruction meets. It was on a Friday, at 6.30 p.m., and was raining fast at the time. We arrived early, and had to make several inquiries before we found out in which room the lodge met. We asked several waiters and servants we saw in the lobby, and inquired at the bar. None could tell even if the lodge met in the Tavern, and, hence, as we wanted to know in what room the brethren were to assemble, no information could be afforded us. At last we were directed to some one who knew, and arrived on the landing, where we saw the Tyler, and then all was well. It strikes us, Bro. Editor, that a notice of meetings held each evening should be placed conspicuously somewhere inside the principal entrance, and the number of the room stated, so as to guide strangers. We object altogether to lodges meeting in public-houses or taverns, and so do many who are not, like ourselves, “total abstainers;” and our objections are certainly increased when, in order to attend a Masonic meeting, we have to make inquiries at the “bar,” where Bacchus reigns triumphant.

However, we will return to the lodge-room, which was certainly spacious, well-lighted, and most suitable for Masonic purposes. We received a warm greeting from the Masonic veteran Bro. Henry Muggeridge, and almost to the minute of the time stated, the lodge was duly opened, the officers being as follows: Bros. Eames, W.M.; Noyes, S.W.; Venn, J.W.; Muggeridge, Preceptor; Muggeridge, jun., Sec.; Birdseye, S.D.; Jenkins, J.D.; and Wagner, I.G. There were also a few brethren present, but the assemblage was small, owing to its being the last Friday in the “old year.” Indeed, we scarcely expected that a perfect number would be in attendance, owing to the allurements of the festive season. The brother in the chair, we were told, was S.W. of a London lodge, and we were, therefore, agreeably surprised to find that his part was executed in a most finished manner. The “three degrees” were worked, so that the office of W.M. on such an occasion was no sinecure, and it is but justice to say that we could not expect the ceremonies to be much more perfectly rendered by the Preceptor himself. The W.M. delivered the “charges” as if they were really charges, and with a full realisation of their solemn and important character. Indeed, had the candidates been actual ones, we feel sure that their introduction into Freemasonry would have been to them one of the most impressive scenes in their personal histories. The Wardens were, on the whole, better versed in their duties than the assistant officers, excepting one of the Deacons, who evidently was an “old hand.” We were amused at noticing the Preceptor correct the latter brother, who thereupon questioned for a moment the dictum of that worthy Craftsman, and then fraternally acted as desired. We were much pleased to observe the respect and esteem invariably paid to Bro. Muggeridge, and how good humouredly all his strictness and correctness in “working” were taken by the members. Whenever anything goes wrong, one may always depend upon hearing Bro. Muggeridge’s call, “Commence again, Bro. —,” and then the reward, “Quite right, Bro. —.” Sometimes (as in the case of one of the officers this eve) the brother is almost wholly in ignorance of his official duties; then the Preceptor clearly informs him of his “part” in the ceremony, and has the sentences repeated until perfection is attained. Having had a taste for merriment in our younger days, we found scope for a little quiet fun in seeing how quick Bro. Muggeridge was to mark any deviation from the established landmarks and customs. No matter who was talking to him at the time (and considerable latitude is allowed to the brethren’s conversational abilities, even during the ceremonies—too much to please us), and however interesting the discussion might be, at the slightest inaccuracy, the Preceptor checked the work, and only allowed it to pass muster on a due accordance with the recognised oral ritual. We remember once the same extraordinary watchfulness on the part of the lamented Bro. S. B. Wilson. We were attending the “Emulation” (of which we have long been proud to be a member), and during a part of the “sections” being worked, we thought the Prince of Preceptors had fallen asleep, but, on a trivial alteration in one of the answers, we were soon assured otherwise by the respected brother opening his eyes, shrugging his shoulders, and having the answer properly worded. He then relapsed into his apparent indifferent attitude, to be again revived on an error being perpetrated of any kind whatever, even a difference of emphasis would make his body quiver.

We are aware some object to this exactness; but we believe thoroughly in it ourselves, as once a deviation is permitted, no one knows where the evil may end. In fact, we are in a position to state that there are many ready, on the first opportunity, to improve (?) on our ritual, and, without doubt, when innovations are permitted, we shall have a grand “hash” served to an inappreciative audience. We ardently wish our co-country brethren would attend this Lodge of Instruction, and the “Emulation,” and other Lodges of Improvement, when in London, as the little time thus devoted to instruction would amply repay them, and the unfortunate differences in working, so unhappily prevalent in the country, would soon fade away. We are told, however, that “they differ in London!” That is true, but all the variations are non-essential and of little importance. Bro. Muggeridge assured me that if the life of Bro. Wilson had been prolonged, a uniform system would have been agreed on between these two Masonic Preceptors. The decease of the one, however, should not prevent the carrying out of a scheme for reconciliation between the “two systems,” as, owing to the few differences, uniformity might easily be attained.

We were much pleased to notice engravings and paintings, on the walls of the lodge-room, of old Masonic worthies, now “of the past.” We also observed two portraits of Bro. Muggeridge, and other well-known Masons of the present day. The obliging Secretary (the son of the Preceptor, and whose grandfather was a member of the same Lodge of Instruction) furnished us with a list of several of the distinguished brethren who had been members of this famous lodge. It seems this school for instruction was formed A.D. 1817, and was evidently an offshoot of the “Lodge of Reconciliation,” formed to promote and secure the union of the two rival Grand Lodges, and to maintain a uniform system of work. Bros. Philip Broadfoot, James Black, Peter Thomson, Hearder, and J. Moloney were all members during A.D. 1817, and for several years most energetically worked to establish the lodge on a broad and secure basis. Bro. E. H. Patten, the esteemed Secretary of the Girls’ School, joined A.D. 1825, the present Preceptor A.D. 1839, and Bro. William Henry White, Grand Secretary, A.D. 1840.

We believe there never was a Preceptor more beloved by the members than Bro. Henry Muggeridge, and we hope his life will long be spared to continue his labours for the benefit of his lodge, and the welfare of the Craft in this country. H.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CANARY ISLANDS.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg to send you the enclosed translation from an article which has just appeared in the leading journal of the Canary Islands.

About a month ago the Bishop of the islands having heard that two corpses lately interred in the cemetery of Grand Canary were those of Masons, went in person to have the bodies exhumed, but a strong party of Masons, having previous knowledge, was on the spot, and forcibly prevented the barbarous intentions of the Bishop and his party. The holy man, finding his designs frustrated, had the cemetery reconsecrated. This meditated act of Vandalism, together with the indecent conduct of the clergy generally, who are doing their best to discredit Masonry, even from the pulpit, has called forth the article in question.

Yours fraternally,
NATHAN WETHERELL.
6, Lime-street, E.C.

"With sorrow we have to take up the pen, incited by a conscientious duty, to dispel the alarm which persons, respected for their distinguished knowledge and many virtues, have been for some time past instilling into the sanctuary of families, with the powerful resource which is lent them by the sacred ministry of their office. We refer to the attacks, to the anathemas, which some priests, as illustrious as they are respectable, are hurling from the cathedra of the Holy Spirit—from that high and venerable place whence nought but truth, in all its purity and wrapt in its profoundest conviction, should emanate. And we refer to other acts directed against Freemasonry—the grandest association, sublimest, and most moral among all that have ever owed their institution to man. Ignorance supposes her antagonistic to Christianity; to that sacro-sainted religion of our fathers, whose worthy and honoured memory we shall ever revere; a religion in which we were born, brought up, and bred, and which never have we failed to profess. In our character as Masons—by which title we are honoured—we do not propose to return offence for injury, injury for calumny, or calumny for offence. As far from our hearts are hatred and maledictions, infused by evil passions, as is the use of reprov'd means and sterile arguments; far from nursing resentment or rancor towards our detractors—towards those who pretend to defame the sublime institution to which we belong—we are only inspired by a feeling of pity for the errors into which they have fallen, for their unjust persecution, lamenting, as we lament, the extravagance of their reason in judging ill and condemning what they cannot have any knowledge of; and we give them thus a proof of true Christian charity.

"Let us now consign a short, but faithful, relation of the chief ends and tendencies of Masonry; now to instruct them who, doubtless for the want of that knowledge, declare themselves enemies of those very principles and foundations of morality and virtue on which our august Christian religion reposes, and now to bring tranquility and peace to the family fireside, and more especially to relieve the apprehensions of the devoted sex whose hearts have been so disturbed by untrue predictions, and by other recent acts which, in the observance of our love to our neighbour, we abstain from qualifying.

"Freemasonry, as old as man, walks hand in hand with truth; the weal of humanity and the constant practice of virtue are its chief aims; and, with these objects in view, she numbers eighteen millions who owe her allegiance from almost every habitable spot on the face of the earth.

"In bringing him into the world naked, weak, and helpless, God has shown man that He has destined him to live amongst his fellows, requiring their assistance, and has inspired him with the great and holy maxim that he must needs do unto others as he would have them do to him. Hence, the necessity of mutual love and help in misfortune, and thus is it that Masonry, established on the strength of love and virtue, even from the remotest times, has been transmitted to us, modified by civilization and refined by an irresistible thirst for liberty; withstanding calumny, aspersion, persecution, and vile tongues; for even all these have failed to undermine her solidity, formed by the united strength of tolerance and charity.

"She teaches us to face danger with fortitude; to appreciate truth and openness, while condemning falseness and hypocrisy; to fly to the relief of indigence, reaching out a helping hand towards the bed of sickness and the home of misfortune; to abhor tyranny; to repudiate vanity and superstition; to see in one's fellow, whatever his rank or fortune, a moral being in every respect one's equal, if he is virtuous. Can it, then, be asked why, among Masons, are to be found good citizens, the best of fathers, tender husbands, true friends, and, to sum up all, virtuous men?

"They speak false who say that Masons have no religion—each one professes and practises that which he inherited from his fathers. None is required to abjure it. No human victims are immolated on her altars, for Masonry abhors homicide, and condemns all crime and spectacles of horror, whatever be the causes which produce them.

"Whatever might wound in the slightest the cherished belief of any brother, to even speak on religious matters at her meetings—for this divides men, to unite whom is a Mason's care—Masonry prohibits. Not alone is she not inimical to all government and social order, but kings, princes, and chiefs of nations and of states have presided over her lodges, and been her votaries. Masonry permits no political discussion; she grows and flourishes under all forms of government, wherever is breathed the grateful air of liberty. Masonry is a moral Order, established by men of eminence in remotest ages, with the laudable object of perfecting the moral part of man through the practice of the virtues. She is founded on principles of the sanest morality, and her walk is the path of charity. Like unto the Founder of Christianity, she says: 'I give you a new precept—Love one another.' Those who condemn this Order would condemn God's own Word itself.

"To say that Masons secrete themselves and envelop themselves in mystery, is a great mistake. In England and the United States, they appear publicly with their insignia. In Paris, sumptuous Masonic funeral rites were performed over the remains of General Magnan; and, again, in Brussels, over those of Leopold the 1st, King of the Belgians; and, recently, similar tributes were paid in Madrid to the ashes of Henry of Bourbon, and to those of various other members of the Craft.

"The words and signs which serve brethren as a means of mutual recognition cannot afford motive for suspicion; if such were the case, it would be necessary to condemn military discipline, for it is a criminal offence in a soldier to make known his passwords and countersigns outside the circle of his comrades in arms.

"Our very church presents an example of secrets observed by her corporations; her cardinals are often sworn to keep inviolate the discussions held in the consistory, and canons swear not to publish what takes place at their sessions. Why, then, should Masons be reviled because they do not hold their meetings in the streets and public places?

"Many have been the errors committed since ages past, not only with respect to the great reforms with which civilization has gone on benefiting the world, but also against sublime institutions which, like Masonry, tend towards perfecting mankind.

"The writings of Copernicus were condemned as impious, because that sage astronomer said the earth revolved on its own axis.

"Galileo was thrown into chains for teaching the astronomical doctrines of Copernicus.

"Vigilio, the bishop, was condemned for saying there were antipodes; these nevertheless exist.

"The anathemas hurled against Copernicus, Galileo and Vigilio are fruitless, because they are opposed to the physical laws of nature, which are the work of God; and as fruitless are the calumnies directed against Freemasonry, for they oppose themselves to the moral laws of nature, which are equally born of the Most High.

"If from these elevated considerations we descend to practical work amongst ourselves here, where Masonry is only in its infancy, there may, nevertheless, be found not a few poor and virtuous families to bless her for the timely assistance she has given in secret and in love.

"Many are the tears she has washed away, and more than one charitable institution could testify to her humanity.

"The object of Masonry being to instruct in the study of the liberal arts and sciences, inculcating the love of work and the practice of all the virtues, bearing in mind the weal of mankind, its necessities and afflictions—with constitutional foundations in such strict harmony with the sage maxims which are the prop and stay of our august and venerable Christian religion—how can it be possible to find, save through ignorance, ministers of the altar, gifted with science and virtue, combating those very principles which it is their care to inculcate in the hearts of their flock?

"How is it possible that other acts can be committed which must disturb to even a greater degree the hearts of those same faithful—that as suddenly as unjustly the consciences of pious souls, timid and ignorant, should be alarmed by the introduction of discord and dissension around the sacred precincts of private homes, the peace of which should be one of the first cares of a priest's holy mission.

"Just, therefore, it is that these holy men should cease their erroneous crusade; and if they do not desist, but continue their attacks upon the noble and humanitarian Institution of Masonry, taking advantage of the Cathedra of the Holy Spirit and other sacred places which they profanate, we will defend her with legitimate weapons by means of the press, through those worthy and decorous ways which constitute its greatest honour."

[Signed by various Masons of Grand Canary.]

THE FREEMASONS IN LIMERICK.

Those of our readers who have not already heard of the recent crusade against the Freemasons of Limerick will doubtless receive the intelligence with considerable surprise. We have always been under the impression that Christmas Day brings with it glad tidings, peace and goodwill towards all men; but there are some people who contrive to make exceptions to the general rule. The present attack upon an Order which recognises in its deliberations neither politics nor religion, appears to be one of the most silly and unjustifiable that was ever made. The deplorable condition of the poor of the city is a matter of general remark. During the Christmas holidays our streets have been crowded with poor, wretched, half-clad creatures, begging assistance. For the purpose of aiding them, a few members of the Masonic Order, with praiseworthy liberality, came forward, and announced their intention of giving a course of readings, &c., in the Masonic Hall, to which the members of all religious denominations were cordially invited. It should be remembered that the object in view was the relief of the poor of the city, three-fourths of whom are Roman Catholics. How was this philanthropic effort met by the Roman Catholic clergy? On Christmas-day a document was read in each of the Roman Catholic churches of the city (with one exception), purporting to come from the Roman Catholic bishop of the diocese, warning the laity against patronising, either by their presence or support, an entertainment given within the walls of the Masonic Hall for the relief of the poor of Limerick. It was admitted that the object was most commendable; but, oh, fatal Order of St. John! the entertainment was "a trap to catch the unwary!" Do any independent-minded Roman Catholics in Limerick believe this? We know they do not. We might question the accuracy of the statement that the project owes its origin exclusively to the Freemasons, but there is no necessity for entering into it. The fact of an entertainment being given within the walls of a Masonic Hall, to which all creeds and classes are invited, is quite sufficient to call forth ecclesiastical censure. Notwithstanding the cool reception which the announcement of the entertainment has met with at the hands of the Roman Catholic clergy, we believe it will prove a splendid success, so far as numbers and respectability are concerned, several Roman Catholic ladies and gentlemen having expressed their determination to attend, notwithstanding the threat of excommunication.—Limerick Chronicle.

THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF FREEMASONRY.

In response to a cordial invitation, a large number of ladies and gentlemen assembled last evening in the Masonic Chambers, Place d'Armes, to listen to a lecture on "The Origin and History of Freemasonry," by the Rev. E. M. Myers, of St. Constant-street Synagogue. Shortly after eight, the chairman, Bro. T. White, D.G.M. of the Grand Lodge of Canada, Dr. Bernard, P.G.M., and the rev. lecturer, entered from the ante-room, and took seats on the dais. Each was arrayed in appropriate regalia, and looked gorgeous enough to grace a glass case. After a brief pause, the choir of the St. Lawrence Lodge struck up a Masonic song set to a well-known air. The accompaniment was furnished by an harmonium. At the conclusion, the chairman introduced the lecturer, and took the opportunity to tell the audience that the real object of Masonry was to do good.

The Rev. Mr. Myers then began his lecture, or, as he termed it, his address. What he had to say was merely a record of facts which he had gathered from various reliable works. The object of the lecture was to correct any wrong opinions which might be entertained on the subject. Some were willing to believe that it was a myth, and had only in view outside aims and purposes; others, that it was simply a club organised for good-fellowship and enjoyment. Its designs certainly included these latter objects, but it had also far higher grounds and aims, the chief of which was to make men honourable and virtuous. If some did not improve under the guidance of its principles, that was no reason why the whole Order should be condemned. As well might they blame the whole world for the badness of some. Freemasonry itself aimed at all that was sublime and beautiful. Of its origin there were different theories. Some considered it coeval with creation; others, that it had its rise in certain ancient political parties. It was, undoubtedly, very ancient, as Dr. Oliver proved by the resemblance of its rites to the old mysteries of Egypt and Greece. He would not attempt to prove it of antediluvian origin, but he might say that, soon after the deluge, the sons of Noah, the father of mankind, separated for the purpose of colonising the earth, carrying with them the religious truths which their sire had taught them. Those truths, though corrupted in the instance of Nimrod, were afterwards spread abroad over the earth by colonisation. Here the rev. gentleman gave an account of the theoretical or speculative and operative Masonry of the Egyptians, who paid great attention to the building of temples. To keep their knowledge amongst themselves they had instituted symbols. The priests soon succeeded in gaining admission to their Order, and added to its lore their own philosophy and mythology. The ordeal necessary for entrance was a severe one, including all possible horrors of mind and body, and many were unable to pass through it. It was carried to Greece by Cecrops, Cadmus, and Danaus. Triptolemus, having come to Egypt, wished to enter the mysteries of Isis, was unable, and his penalty was never to see the light, but the priests took pity on him, and he was initiated. He returned to Greece, and founded the Eleusian mysteries, which were sacred to Ceres. The Dionysian mysteries, which had reference to Bacchus, were practised through a great part of Asia. The initiated in them built superb edifices, wore jewels, and had signs and symbols. They had brought from Persia the style of architecture known as Grecian. He now came to consider the Freemasonry of the Hebrews. If the heathen nations excelled in operative, the Hebrews were advanced in speculative, Masonry, and to them modern Masons were greatly indebted. The attempted sacrifice of Isaac by Abraham was the first great offering. God had revealed to Moses his name, Jehovah, and the model of the Tabernacle. Joshua took from him the command of the Order, and after long years David thought of building a Temple; but, as he had been a man of war, the sacred duty was reserved for his son, Solomon. The result of David's repentance for the sin of taking the census was the second grand offering, which the Freemasons of to-day celebrate. In the building of the Temple, Solomon was assisted by Hiram, King of Tyre, who sent him timber and stone and skilled workmen, members of the Order of which he was Grand Master. The lecturer then gave an interesting account of the system observed and the persons employed in the great work of raising the Temple to Jehovah, which was begun in 1012, and finished 1005, B.C. The next year it was dedicated to the true and living God, and the third grand offering took place. A certain loss in connection with the Temple had an important relation to modern Masonry, which dated from that time. Then came the King's death, the revolt of the ten tribes, God's anger, the idolatrous worship of Teamuz, or Adonis, and the carrying away into captivity (B.C. 666). Among those who sought instruction in the Jewish Masonry were Thales, of Miltus, and Pythagoras, the latter of whom, having visited Daniel in Babylon, carried back his gathered knowledge to Simos, and finally settled and taught in Crotona, a city of Magna Græcia. Under Cyrus, the Jews had permission to return, and the second Temple was begun under Zerubbabel and Joshua. But the work was interrupted, only to be resumed and completed in the days of Haggai and Zachariah, under King Darius. After this, not much was known of the Order. It was said that Augustine and his forty monks knew the arts of Masonry, and that under them the Cathedral of Canterbury was built in the year 600, and others subsequently. Alfred the Great was a Freemason, so were St. Benoit and St. Swithin, and Archbishop Dunston. The lecturer here alluded to the creation and objects of the Knights Templar, and sketched the progress of Masonry to the present day. He bore testimony to its nobleness of purpose, and quoted several of its fundamental principles, which, if acted upon, certainly must make a Freemason the embodiment of goodness.

Votes of thanks to the lecturer, the chairman, and the choir were then proposed and, of course, unanimously adopted. Between the speeches the choir favoured the audience with songs. A stave of the National Anthem concluded the proceedings.—The Evening Star, Montreal, Canada, Nov. 30, 1871.

BRO. W. J. HUGHAN, of Truro, Cornwall, will be very glad to hear from any brethren who possess, or know of, minutes of lodges, or copies of M.S. Constitutions, of an older date than A.D. 1720. Our well-known and highly-esteemed Brother is now engaged in preparing another work for the press, which we believe will pay especial attention to the M.S. Constitutions of the Freemasons, and has in his possession several copies of these ancient and valuable documents, which he will publish for the first time. He is particularly anxious to have every information obtainable with respect to these manuscripts in the possession of lodges and brethren, as soon as possible.

MASONIC BALL AT WARRINGTON.

On Thursday evening, 28th ult., a grand Masonic Ball was held in the Assembly Rooms, Lion Hotel. The room had been very tastefully decorated for the occasion by Mr. Benjamin Hutchinson, assisted by Bros. Potter, Curry, and Hannah. On the stairs were arranged a number of choice plants, which had been lent for the purpose by Bro. Thomas Pierpoint, Bridge-street. At the upper end of the room was a centre-piece composed of the banners and shields of the Royal Arch Chapter, the centre banner being that of the Lodge of Lights. To the left of the centre-piece were three sceptres of the Royal Arch arranged as a star, and on the opposite side the swords (crossed) of the Outer and Inner Guard. Under the centre-piece were placed a number of choice ferns which had been kindly lent for the occasion by Col. Patten, and on each side of these, several spiral plants lent by Mr. Hutchinson. On the sides of the room were placed double triangles worked in evergreens. The orchestra was suitably adorned with wreaths and festoons, the Prince of Wales' Feathers being in the centre. Over one fire-place was a painting of Elterwater, in Westmoreland, the work of Bro. Charles Pettitt, which had been presented to Lodge No. 148, by Bro. Gilbert Greenall. Over the other was a fine copy of a fresco by Raphael, in the Vatican, which as it had been executed by a young artist, who received his education at the Warrington School of Art deserves some further notice. The work was done by Raphael for Pope Julius II., and represents "The expulsion of Heliolodorus from the Temple at Jerusalem." Heliolodorus had been sent by king Seleucus to bring away certain sums of money which he had previously given, but which he had been misinformed by an intriguer, were not appropriated to the purpose for which they had been given. Heliolodorus was taking the money out of the Temple against the earnest entreaties of the High Priest and the people, and to the right of the picture he is represented as swooning under the terrible chastisement inflicted by the angels, who scourge him, and the visionary warrior whose horse tramples him fiercely with his forefeet. The golden vase has fallen from his hand, from which the coin is scattered on the ground. In the centre of the picture are the sacred vessels and the seven-branched candlestick, and kneeling at the altar is Onias, the High Priest, offering up thanks to God for having so wonderfully delivered the Temple from the hands of the spoiler. The Holy of Holies is screened by the veil of the Temple. Immediately to the left of the High Priest are a number of Levites engaged in conversation. Some of the people to the left are represented as praying, whilst others who have seen the overthrow of Heliolodorus, are expressing their feelings of thankfulness. On the extreme left Pope Julius is introduced, borne on a chair into the Temple! Two of the men who bare him are portraits of Julio Romano and Francesco Penni, who were Raphael's chief pupils at the time the original was painted. This copy has been executed in a manner which speaks well for his future fame, by Mr. William Jenkin, a former pupil at the Warrington School of Art, who has been for thirteen months studying in Rome, during which time this work was completed.

The following is as complete a list as we could procure of those present at the ball. The brethren appeared in full dress of the Craft, wearing the jewels and insignia of their rank and office:—The Worshipful the Mayor of Warrington, and Mrs. Davies; R.W. Bro. MASONIC CEREMONIAL AT LIVERPOOL.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF A NEW CHURCH AT THE OLD SWAN.

Whatever allegations have been made against Freemasonry, it does not form one of the charges against the brethren of the mystic tie that they find their chief delight in making frequent public parades either of the Order or its honours and virtues. Some twenty years have elapsed since the Masonic brethren in Liverpool and its immediate neighbourhood were called upon to take any active share in a public work in this town; and therefore increased interest attached to the highly impressive ceremony which took place on the 8th inst., at the Old Swan, in connection with the laying of the foundation stone of the new Church of All Saints. Brilliant weather favoured the proceedings, and the consequence was a gathering of the Masonic Fraternity numbering between 300 and 400. There was a plentiful display of bunting in and around the Old Swan, and large crowds lined the roads taken by the procession.

An especial Prov. Grand Lodge was held at the Assembly Rooms, Salisbury-street, Old Swan, at which Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. Grand Master for the division of West Lancashire, presided, supported by the following Grand Officers: Bros. the Rev. J. F. Goggin, P.G.C.; the Rev. H. J. Vernon, P.P.G.C.; T. Wylie, P.G. Reg.; T. Armstrong, P.G.T.; Hamer, P.P.G.T.; H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; R. Wylie, P.G.S.D.; J. Pickering, P.G.J.D.; B. W. Rowson, P.G. Sup. of Works; Laidlaw, P.P.G. Sup. of Works; G. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C.; T. Marsh, P.P.G.A.D.C. and P.G.S.B.; J. W. J. Fowler, P.G.A.D.C.; R. Sharrock, P.G.S.B.; S. Ibbs, P.P.G.S.B.; J. Skeaf, P.G. Org.; J. Baxendale, P.G. Purst.; Dr. Mercer Johnson, C. of P.G.S.; C. H. Hill, J. W. Baker, G. de la Perelle, R. Robinson, W. Doyle, P.G. Stewards; J. B. Lambert, P.P.G.D. E.L.; James Taylor, W.M. 1264; W. Yate, P.M. 484; Edward Shaw, P.M. 680; P. M. Larren, P.M. 1044; J. Hocken, P.M. 673; R. Thorn, W.M. 1182; R. Bennett, 1299; Robert Pearson, P.M. 673; W. Lunt, W.M. 594; R. Landless, W.M. 1256; T. Clark, P.M. 673; Capt. Berry, W. J. Lunt, P.M., and Sec. 823; John Lloyd, J.D. 249; and W. Howells, P.P.G.S.W. Staffordshire and Worcestershire. The Craft lodge was opened shortly after one o'clock by the W.M. of No. 220, assisted by Bro. F. Sargeant, W.M. 594, as S.W.; and Bro. H. Nelson, W.M. 673, as J.W. Amongst the principals in Masonry present were Bros. T. D. Pierce, W.M. 823; D. W. Winstansley, W.M. 1094; H. Pearson, W.M. 249; R. Williams, 1094.

After the P.G. Lodge had been duly opened, a procession was formed in the following order, headed by the band of the 1st L.R.V., taking St. Oswald-street and Broadgreen-road as the

On nearing the place where the church is to be erected, the brethren divided to the right and left, face inwards, thereby forming an avenue, through which the R.W.P.G.M. passed, preceded by the P.G.S.B., and followed by the brother bearing the Ionic Light, the representative of the P.D.G.M., and the officers and brethren. There was a large gathering of the public on the ground and platforms which surrounded the stone, the highly-impressive proceedings being watched with apparent interest. After the P.G.L. officers and the brethren of the different lodges had taken up their position, Bro. J. B. Cooper, Chairman of the Building Committee, said he had great pride and pleasure in seeing the R.W.P.G.M. and his officers present that day at the laying of the foundation stone of the new Church of All Saints, and as it was a general desire that those feelings should be embodied in a more permanent form, he would call upon the Secretary to read an address which had been prepared.

Mr. J. H. Yates, Secretary to the Building Committee, then read the following address, which was illuminated with the finest taste by Mr. J. O. Marples, Liverpool and London Chambers:—

"To Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W.P.G.M. for West Lancashire.

"Right Worshipful Sir,—I am deputed by the Committee for building the Church of All Saints, Old Swan, to express, however inadequately, under what great obligation you have placed them by acceding to their request in attending here, accompanied by the Provincial Grand Lodge and so many of the brethren, to lay the foundation stone of this church with the ancient and beautiful ceremonials prescribed by the Masonic Order. To be associated in the erection of a temple dedicated to the Great Architect of the Universe, where brotherly love, the purest charity, and every other moral virtue will be taught, is a work that must commend itself to every good Mason and right-thinking man; whilst the fact of receiving material assistance from the Order, of which you are so bright an ornament, in this important ceremony, at the outset of the work, will imbue the Committee with renewed courage to overcome any difficulties they may encounter in the process of bringing to a successful termination the arduous labours they have entered upon. Animated by these sentiments, the Committee tender you, Right Worshipful Sir, their sincere thanks for your condescension in presiding on the present occasion, and believe they cannot better prove their good feeling for the brethren at large, and the appreciation in which their valuable co-operation to-day is held, than by expressing a hearty prayer that you may long be spared to hold your present exalted position, and to continue, as hitherto, by wise precept and generous practice, to promote the best interests of the Masonic Order in this province.

"On behalf of the Building Committee,
"J. B. COOPER, Chairman."

The R.W.P.G.M., after receiving the address, said he could assure them it gave him the greatest pleasure to attend that day in his capacity of P.G.M., although he was well aware how unworthily he fulfilled the duties of that high office. While that season of the year brought many festive engagements, and many joyful family meetings, it was also calculated to produce and maintain more serious reflections. They had just entered on a new phase of their existence, and he was sure the Masonic brethren of West Lancashire could not have inaugurated the new year better than by attending the laying of the foundation stone of a church dedicated to the Great Architect of the Universe. (Hear, hear.) He also felt sure that the exertions of the Building Committee, in endeavouring to obtain subscriptions for the erection of the church, proved not only that they are true Masons, but true Christians and citizens, and worthy of the town in which they reside. (Hear, hear.) After again thanking them, Sir Thomas said he would proceed to lay the stone with all Masonic formality.

Preparatory to the ceremony the P.G.M. scattered salt as an emblem of purity, after which the P.G.C. offered an appropriate prayer. The P.G. Treas. then deposited in the cavity of the stone a phial containing the coins and newspapers of the day; and the P.G. Sec., after reading the inscriptions on the plate detailing the circumstances of the ceremony, placed it on the lower stone. The upper stone was then lowered, and after the whole had been Masonically proved the P.G.M. declared it well and truly laid. Corn, wine, and oil were then poured over the stone with the accustomed ceremonies, the P.G.C. offered a prayer, and the proceedings shortly afterwards terminated. Ten purses, containing about £300, were then laid on the stone by members of the ladies' committee. The brethren afterwards returned to the Assembly Rooms, where the Prov. Grand Lodge was closed in due form.

The new church will afford ample accommodation for 800 worshippers on the ground floor. The style of the building is geometric decorated, which prevailed at the beginning of the 14th century. The tower, 52 feet high, will be a leading feature of the building, with a broach spire above, 70 feet high. The church will consist of a nave, 84 feet 2 inches by 25 feet; chancel, 24 feet by 22 feet 6 inches; north and south aisles, 32 feet 4 inches by 11 feet 8 inches; north and south transepts, 16 feet 7 inches by 27 feet 5 inches, &c. The contractor for the whole work is Mr. T. Bridge, of Burscough, whose tender amounted to £3708. Messrs. Wells and Sons, Liverpool, are executing the mason work; and the whole building has been designed by, and is now being carried out under the direction of, Messrs. Barry and Sons, Church street.

CONSECRATION of the LION & LAMB CHAPTER, No. 192.

The Lion and Lamb Chapter, No. 192, a charter for which was granted at last Convocation of Grand Chapter, November, 1871, was consecrated on Wednesday evening by Comp. Henry Muggerridge, P.Z. and Past Grand Standard-bearer, in one of the magnificent rooms of the Cannon-street Terminus Hotel. Such an old and famous lodge as the Lion and Lamb was hardly perfect without having a chapter attached to it; and its energetic and popular I.P.M., Bro. George Kenning, with the assistance of some other brethren of the lodge who desired to see it combined with a chapter, forthwith petitioned Grand Chapter for a warrant. The warrant, as we have said, was granted; and the desire of the brethren was fulfilled on Wednesday, when Comp. George Kenning, in compliance with the terms of the charter, was installed the first Z., Comp. Ebenezer Roberts first H., and Comp. E. King first J., of what we hope will be a most prosperous chapter. Of the way in which Comp. Muggeridge performed his duties it is unnecessary to speak, further than to say that all the old fire with which he has given impressiveness to the service in bygone times was visible on this occasion; and his hearers fully appreciated the talent he displayed.

The ceremony, which in no respect differed from the ordinary observances at the consecration of a Royal Arch Chapter, was carefully and rigorously performed from beginning to end, and won the hearty applause of the numerous companions who were present, among whom we observed the following: Colonel Burdett, Prov. G. Superintendent for Middlesex; Major J. Creaton; Peter Wagner, 185; James Brett, G.D.C., P.Z. 177 and 975; G. C. Hill, 177 and 946; John F. White, P.Z. 185; James Stevens, P.Z. 25, 720; Geo. Newman, 1056; John Johnston; Fred. Walters, P.Z. 73; J. Hamilton Townsend, 22; H. Venn, 22; John G. Marsh, 975; John Thos. Moss, 73; H. Massey, Z.-elect 619; J. C. Fourdrinier, P.Z. 196; C. B. Payne, P.Z. 177; T. C. Carter, 22; T. Burdett Yeoman, 22; James Clemmans, 22; and E. Spooner, P.Z. 22.

The installations having been completed, the M.E.Z. invested Comp. H. Muggeridge as the P.Z. of the chapter. The elections then took place, and Comps. J. G. Marsh, George Kenning, and George Newman were chosen respectively S.N., Treasurer, and P.S., and were subsequently appointed to those offices. Comp. Ridley was appointed 1st A.S., Comp. Gardiner 2nd A.S. and Comp. T. B. Yeoman, Organist. Ten brethren were then nominated for exaltation, and eight companions for joining.

The M.E.Z. proposed, and Comp. Roberts seconded, a vote of thanks to Comp. Muggeridge, together with an hon. membership of the chapter, for the admirable way in which he had performed the ceremonies of consecration and installation.

Comp. Muggeridge having replied, the M.E.Z. proposed, and Comp. Roberts, H., seconded, similar compliments to Comp. James Brett, for the assistance he had rendered Comp. Muggeridge in the ceremonies.

Comp. Brett responded, and the M.E.Z. proposed, and Comp. King, J., seconded, votes of thanks to Comps. Clemmans and Yeoman, for adding musical accompaniments to the ceremonies.

The chapter was afterwards closed, and the companions adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, which was superintended by Bro. Davis, of the Cannon-street Hotel.

After the cloth had been removed and grace said, the introductory R. A. toasts were proposed by the M.E.Z. and honoured by the companions. The toast of "The Earl of Carnarvon and the rest of the Grand Officers," was coupled with the name of Colonel Burdett, Grand Superintendent of Works for the province of Middlesex, who, the M.E.Z. remarked, was well known to all the companions of the Lion and Lamb Chapter, and to all the brethren of the Lion and Lamb Lodge.

Colonel Burdett, in reply, said that the Grand Officers who were present were his seniors, both in Craft and R.A. Masonry, and had served Grand Chapter longer than he had, and he did not, therefore, consider himself so well qualified as they to return thanks for this toast. Still, as he had been called upon to do so, he thanked the M.E.Z. and the companions for the honour conferred on himself and the other Grand Officers, though he thought his seniors might bear some portion of the burthen which had fallen on him. Speaking for them, he believed the utmost confidence might be placed on their doing all they could for the Order, and he knew that that confidence had already been reposed in them. They had long been before the companions, and he trusted that he might, in time, be as well known as they.

Comp. H. Muggeridge proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z.," whom he had had the pleasure of knowing for many years, and for whom he had always entertained a sincere regard, respect, and esteem. The M.E.Z. had in that time done all he could to promote the interests of Freemasonry in general, and of all the Masonic Charities. But he had not yet finished; he was going to do a great deal more for these institutions, and sustain the character he already possessed of a staunch friend to them. With respect to the Lion and Lamb Chapter, which had been that day constituted, Comp. Kenning had entered into the promotion of it with all that zeal and earnestness which characterised his every step in life. What was worth doing, he considered worth doing well, and his efforts to obtain the charter for this chapter had consequently been successful. The opening had been most favourable, and he (Comp. Muggeridge) did not doubt that the chapter would become one of the finest in London. He would himself assist to the utmost in bringing about such a desirable state of things, and the other officers would, no doubt, be animated by the same object. Again complimenting Comp. Kenning on his energy and perseverance, he could assure those companions who did not yet know much of him that a longer acquaintance with him would prove the truth of all he (Comp. Muggeridge) had said concerning him. (Cheers.)

The M.E.Z., in replying, said that if his year of office as W.M. of the Lion and Lamb Lodge had given satisfaction, he hoped a similar result awaited his presidency over the Lion and Lamb Chapter. Nothing should be wanting on his part to secure it, and, with the arrangements that had been made, he thought the success of the chapter was insured. (Cheers.)

The M.E.Z. then gave "The Health of H. and J.," who were represented by Comps. Roberts and King, two well-known companions, and with whose aid he should carry on the work which was before him.

Comp. Roberts, in acknowledging the compliment, assured the companions that it had been his ambition to fill the Z. chair ever since he entered Masonry. He was pleased to think he was in a fair way of having his desire gratified. On his initiation, he had a wish to fill the W.M. chair of a lodge, and in the second year of his Masonic life he had office granted him. He then worked up to the chair, and now he was in the H. chair of the chapter. That he might give satisfaction was his earnest wish, and that the companions would honour him by voting him into the Z. chair in a twelvemonth's time he had great confidence.

Comp. King also hoped for promotion in due course, and thanked the companions for drinking his health.

The M.E.Z. next proposed "The Visitors," to which Comps. James Stevens, Stone, Atwood, J. T. Moss, Walters, Clemmans, Massey, and Payne responded.

The M.E.Z. gave as the next toast, "The Companions who filled the Principals' Chairs during the Consecration," and coupled with this toast that of "The Masonic Institutions," assuring Bro. Patten, whom he called on to respond, that the Lion and Lamb Chapter, no less than the lodge of the same name, would support those Institutions as far as it could. It always appeared to him that it was monstrous that so wealthy a body as Freemasons could not provide for more children than they did, and at an election could admit to their schools only six out of a list of fifty candidates. With a little exertion, so many poor children would not be left out in the cold, and he hoped to see the day when the borders of the Institutions would be enlarged. (Applause.)

Comp. Patten, after thanking the M.E.Z. for the toast, referred to the Charities, and congratulated Comp. Kenning on having supported them so long, and carried in such good Stewards' lists when he was Master of the Lion and Lamb Lodge. The lodge and the chapter combined might do a great deal for the Institutions. At present, only one-fiftieth of the members subscribed to them. If that number was increased, the Institutions could do more than they at present did, though, even then, they would not be able to clear the lists of candidates. He did not think it desirable that they should. An election brought subscribers; and without an election, there would be no subscribers. In the Girls' School the number of pupils had been increased from 100 to 106, and at the Quarterly Court, to be held next day, a motion would be made to increase that number to 112; and in another twelve months, another motion would be brought forward to make the number 120. There were twenty-two candidates for the April election, of whom eleven would be admitted to the School. That was a very good number; but if they took in all who presented themselves, there would be men joining the Craft for this purpose only. (Hear, hear.)

The toast of "The Officers" was responded to by Comp. Newman, who said that, under the kind instruction of Comp. James Brett, he had been working for some time to become an efficient officer, and he hoped to perform his duties satisfactorily.

Comp. Yeoman also replied in similar terms. "The Consecrating Z." was the next toast, and the M.E.Z., in giving it, referred to the great talents Comp. Muggeridge displayed in Masonry.—Comp. Muggeridge responded.

Comp. Brett proposed "The Founders of the Lion and Lamb Chapter," which gave him an opportunity of bringing the M.E.Z.'s excellencies before the Comps. He said there was one other beside the M.E. who took an interest in Freemasonry, and that was Mrs. Kenning, whom he had the pleasure of meeting at the last summer festival of the lodge. But it was not his business to speak of that. He had to speak of Comp. Kenning, who although an old Mason was a young working Mason, and had for many years allowed younger brethren to step before him into office and take the position of W.M. of his lodge. Fortunately, however, for the lodge, he went into office, and last year he was unanimously elected Master. He then became one of the petitioners for this chapter, and it was considered that no better Comp. than he could be found for the first Z. In placing him in that position the Comps. had honoured themselves, and best consulted the interests of the chapter. It would no doubt become a first-class chapter and all who would be exalted in it would have occasion to be gratified. It was for having founded such an excellent body that he (Comp. Brett) called on the Comps. to drink the founder's health.

The M.E.Z. said no doubt Mrs. Kenning would be much pleased when he communicated to her what had just taken place. She had lately passed through a serious trial of her health, but happily all danger had now passed, or he would not have been present that evening. For himself, he would do the best he could for the chapter. When he became W.M. of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, a year ago, he found the Treasurer with £16 in hand; when he went out of the chair last week he left him with £107. He did not expect to do the same with the chapter, but he relied on placing it on a firm foundation. (Applause.)

The Companions then retired.

The next convocation will be held on Wednesday, when a great many exaltations will take place.

The furniture of the chapter, which was of the best description, and was much admired, was made at the manufactory of Comp. George Kenning, Little Britain.

WHAT IS FREEMASONRY?

THE question, "What is Freemasonry?" is one which every member of the Craft ought to be prepared to answer—not by divulging one line or letter of its esoteric mysteries, but by a plain, intelligent definition of its principles. True it is that the tree may be known by its fruits; but this test is by no means infallible when applied to any human institution, however lofty it may be in ideal, or excellent in design. Still, it is our duty to prove that the groundwork of Freemasonry is indeed "holy," to prove that the mission of our beloved Order is to elevate the soul of man, as well as to inculcate the practice of those social virtues which are essential to our happiness in this life. Noble testimony to the real value of the Masonic Institution has been given at various periods by men entitled to speak with authority upon the subject, and we cannot do better than extract, for the benefit of our readers, some of the definitions of Masonic precepts and aims from the lips of those whose utterances the popular world itself has not been slow to honour. Fortunately for our purpose, the industry of Bro. Macoy furnishes us with several notable examples, in his admirable "Cyclopedia" of Freemasonry—a work which should be in the hands of every thoughtful member of the Craft. Let us hear the opinion of the late King Christian of Denmark: "The prosperity of Masonry as a means of strengthening our religion, and propagating true brotherly love, is one of the dearest wishes of my heart, which, I trust, will be gratified by the help of the Great Architect of the Universe." Our own Royal Master, the late Duke of Sussex, has also placed on record his belief that "Masonry is one of the most sublime and perfect institutions that ever was formed for the advancement of happiness, and the general good of mankind, creating, in all its varieties, universal benevolence and brotherly love." Washington bears witness thus: "The grand object of Masonry is to promote the happiness of the human race." The late Lord Durham said: "I have ever felt it my duty to support and encourage the principles of Freemasonry, because it powerfully develops all social and benevolent affections." Bulwer testifies, to the following effect: "For centuries had Freemasonry existed ere modern political controversies were ever heard of, and when the topics which now agitate society were not known, but all were united in brotherhood and affection. I know the Institution to be founded on the great principles of charity, philanthropy, and brotherly love." La Fayette, in one of his speeches, pronounced Freemasonry to be "an Order whose leading star is philanthropy, and whose principles inculcate an unceasing devotion to the cause of virtue and morality."

General Jackson, ex-President of the United States, and De Witt Clinton, the patriotic Governor of New York, bore similar testimony; and if we turn to the ministers of religion, we find that a countless legion have been, and still are, arrayed on the side of Freemasonry. The Rev. Dr. Oliver tells us that the "study of Freemasonry is the study of man as a candidate for a blessed eternity. It furnishes examples of holy living, and displays the conduct which is pleasing and acceptable to God. The doctrine and examples which distinguish the Order are obvious, and suited to every capacity. It is impossible for the most fastidious Mason to misunderstand, however he may slight or neglect them. It is impossible for the most superficial brother to say that he is unable to comprehend the plain precepts and the unanswerable arguments which are furnished by Freemasonry." The Rev. Dr. Hemming—one of the leading minds of the Order at the time of the English Union in 1813—defined Freemasonry as "A beautiful system of morality, veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols." Dalcho, a learned American divine, thus gives his verdict: "I highly venerate the Masonic Institution, under the fullest persuasion that, where its principles are acknowledged and its laws and precepts obeyed, it comes nearest to religion, in its moral effects and influence, of any Institution with which I am acquainted." The Rev. Erastus Burr says: "From its origin to the present hour, in all its vicissitudes, Masonry has been the steady, unvarying friend of man." Nor can we conclude this hasty sketch without quoting the sentiments of three distinguished American brethren, who, we are glad to say, are still living to support and sustain the Order, in whose prosperity they are so deeply interested. The first is Dr. Albert G. Mackey, whose recent return to Masonic literary labours as the editor of the National Freemason has been hailed with general delight by the brethren in both hemispheres: "Freemasonry is a science of symbols, in which, by their proper study, a search is instituted after truth—that truth consisting in the knowledge of the Divine and human nature of God and the human soul." Albert Pike, the illustrious head of Scottish Rite Masonry for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, tells us that "there are great truths at the foundations of Freemasonry—truths which it is its mission to teach—and which, as constituting the very essence of that sublime system which gives to the venerable Institution its peculiar identity as a science of morality, it behoves every disciple diligently to ponder and inwardly digest." Though last, not least, we give the words of Bro. John W. Simons, Past Grand Master and present Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of New York, and also the very successful Masonic editor of the New York Dispatch: "I regard the Masonic Institution as one of the means ordained by the Supreme Architect to enable mankind to work out the problem of destiny, to fight against and overcome the weaknesses and imperfections of his nature, and, at last, to attain to that true life of which death is the herald, and the grave the portal."

We will not weaken the force of these eloquent tributes to the value and importance of our beloved Order, further than to add that they appear to us to afford a complete and comprehensive answer to the oft-repeated question—

"WHAT IS FREEMASONRY?"

ILLNESS of the EARL OF CARNARVON,
R. W. D. G. M.

Newbury, Wednesday Evening.

The Earl of Carnarvon is confined to his bed at his seat, Highclere Castle, near Newbury, suffering somewhat acutely from the effects of fatigue and anxiety, the latter being mainly attributable to the loss which his lordship recently sustained by the death of his brother-in-law, the Earl of Chesterfield. At present there is no fever, and altogether the symptoms are favourable. He lordship passed a good night, and throughout the day has been more comfortable. Dr. Bunny, of Newbury, his lordship's usual medical adviser, has slept at the castle this week, and will do so again to-night. Dr. George Burrows, of Cavendish-square, is also in attendance. The noble earl is held in the highest possible esteem throughout the neighbourhood, and the inquiries to-day as to his condition have been very numerous.

"MARK AND ROYAL ARCH" (p. 9).

"An English Mark Master" gives the date of the origin of the Royal Arch as "1740," while I used the words, "fourth decade of last century," so, however we take it, that makes no difference to what I stated at page 801—viz., that the Mark Degree did not exist until some time after the Royal Arch: ergo, the antiquity of the Mark Degree is less than A.D. 1740. As to what "An English Mark Master" says about the Lodge of Kilwinning getting money in the 17th century for "marks," that had nothing to do with our Mark Degree, for, at page 550, Sept. 2 ante, it will be seen that, in 1670, the Entered Apprentice, when being entered, got his mark on payment of "anc merk piece for his meassone merk." The custom of the masons using marks then was merely the adoption of a common practice, as the coopers also did the same, and even still do. The masons marked their stones, the coopers marked their casks, and if a stone was improperly wrought, or if a cask began to leak, it was known who did the work, and who to blame. Another reason was, that few craftsmen could write, consequently their mark stood in place of their signature. By turning to page 418 of THE FREEMASON for August 27th, 1870, we see the masons who signed the Rosslyn Charters frankly acknowledging that they "can not writt." However, marks are, and were, used by parties able to write, because they are handy. As to laying any stress upon the finding of the majority of the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1858, that the "ritual" of the Mark Degree, or the Mark Degree itself, existed before the institution of Grand Lodge in 1736, that was simply a mistake; and, shortly since, Bro. William Officer, S.G.D., wrote me that, even in the Lodge of Edinburgh Mary's Chapel, the Mark Degree was never worked until introduced by himself a few years ago, during his own Mastership. For further information upon this subject, pages 474, 490, 522, and 553 of last year's FREEMASON may be read.

QUERY.

Can a candidate be initiated at the next regular lodge meeting under rule 2, p. 84, Book of Constitutions ("In cases of emergency," &c.), without calling a Lodge of Emergency for that purpose?

VRYL.

PROV. GRAND LODGES IN SCOTLAND.

When I read Bro. C. I. Paton's remarks at page 789, vol. 4, I felt certain that it would bring forth a general wail from certain old fogies who have managed to hold office in Provincial Grand Lodges, for many years, without the necessary qualifications; but I was not prepared to find such a distinguished brother taking part in the chorus as D. Murray Lyon. He says (page 801) it is nearly ten years since the Grand Lodge of found, "that, on a sound interpretation of the laws of Grand Lodge, the Provincial Grand Master has power to appoint his office-bearers from members of lodges in the province, they not being necessarily Masters or Wardens." But as that "sound interpretation" is not given in the Laws and Constitution of the Grand Lodge, we are obliged to fall back on the Laws themselves, and now hear what Cap. xiii. and Sec. 2 say about it: "The Provincial Grand Master, who is styled Right Worshipful Grand Master, with all the office-bearers, excepting the Tyler and Inner Guard, and the Masters and Wardens of the several lodges in the province which have complied with the regulations of the Grand Lodge, shall form each Provincial Lodge, and be entitled to vote therein." Now, if this law means anything, it surely means what it says; and I take it that it says, as plain as language can, that it is the Masters and Wardens of the several lodges in the province which have complied with the regulations of the Grand Lodge, that shall form each Provincial Lodge; and if the Provincial Lodges are thus formed, I am at a loss to see how Bro. C. I. Paton can be wrong. I think it a great pity that Bro. Lyon has not seen it convenient to give us more definite information regarding this "sound interpretation" by Grand Lodge, as Bro. C. I. Paton may be ignorant of its existence, and for anything he or I know, it may have superseded Sec. 2 of Cap. xiii. altogether. I must congratulate Bro. D. M. Lyon on his good luck, for this "sound interpretation," it would appear, was pronounced at a most opportune moment for our distinguished brother, as it conferred on him a qualification never contemplated by the laws as they now stand.

"Glasguensis" has taken rather a novel way of proving Bro. C. I. Paton to be wrong, by telling us that several of the office-bearers of the Prov. G.L. of Glasgow are neither Masters nor Wardens of any lodge! Well, if this simple-minded brother could guarantee the infallibility of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow, he could end the controversy, and at once put Bro. Paton on the wrong side of the argument; but, as matters stand, he will excuse me for saying that there is a little difference between the requirements of the law just quoted and the practices of the P.G.L. of Glasgow.

J.W.

WE have the pleasure to announce that the M.W. Grand Master has appointed R.W. Bro. Major-General John Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., P.S.G.W. England, to the post of Prov. Grand Master for Surrey, vacated by the resignation of the respected Bro. Alexander Dobie.

ENGLISH GRAPES.—Our own country is noted for producing some of the finest grapes in the world, and the fame of the giant vines at Hampton Court and Cumberland Lodge, Windsor, is great. On one occasion George III. was so pleased with a performance at Drury-lane Theatre that he gave orders for a hundred dozen bunches of grapes to be cut off from the Hampton Court vine, if so many could be found upon it, and sent to the actors. The gardener executed his commission, and informed his royal master that he could still cut off as many more without stripping the tree.—Food Journal.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you, through THE FREEMASON, kindly inform me the name or number of the lodge from which Bro. M. Cooke takes his rank as a Past Master. I noticed in your report of the proceedings of last Grand Lodge that he is described, or rather describes himself, as a Past Master in the Globe, No. 23. This has misled some of the brethren to suppose that the great champion and redresser of all Masonic wrongs, real or imaginary, is actually a Past Master of the Globe Lodge, which is not the case (if I am rightly informed); and if rightly informed, why does a brother who is so great an example of all that is right, proper, and correct, not let the world know the lodge that did him the honour of enabling him to put P.M. at the end of his name?

Yours, &c.,

A LOVER OF JUSTICE.

Surely the Globe does not want to take the honour from any other lodge.

"A BODY WITHOUT A HEAD."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Under the above caption you recently produced in your paper what your readers, to the extent of a large majority, doubtless, have considered a very satisfactory article demonstrative of the recent strange conduct of the Grand Orient of France at Paris. To the non-reader of French Masonic history, that article was calculated to be convincing; but the reader of such history was not so affected. It is not the first time in that history that Freemasonry has been without a head. Permit me the use of a column of your space in which to present a history in brief of the Grand-Mastership during the past century, in full and up to the present, chiefly collated from Dr. Rebold's History of the three Grand Lodges of France, with the addition of a few remarks on behalf of that, at present, much censured body, the Grand Orient of France. After the perusal of such history, I trust a more liberal feeling may take the place of that which now prevails in the minds of those brethren who regard a Grand-Mastership, under any and every circumstance, as something Freemasonry cannot destroy and live.

In 1773, by trickery, the Duke de Chartres, subsequently known as Phillippe Egalité, was elected and installed Grand Master. Twenty years afterwards, in the height of the Revolution, he publicly renounced Freemasonry, and the Grand Orient postponed indefinitely the election of his successor; but, two years afterwards, Roettiers de Montaleau was elected, and continued in office for the ten years following. This brings us into the first Empire. Napoleon, crowned in 1804, consented in 1805 that his brother Joseph should be Grand Master, provided that Cambaceres, Napoleon's chancellor, should be Joseph's deputy, or acting Grand Master, and in conjunction with Marshal Murat, Napoleon's brother-in-law, should superintend all the principal movements of the institution known as Freemasonry in France. It was so done, Cambaceres doing all the superintending, for it does not appear that Murat ever did any. On the fall of Napoleon and restoration of the monarchy, the Grand Orient, for the first time in ten years, became independent, and declared all official dignities, including the Grand-Mastership, extinct. Of course there were those who resisted this order of things, and who had influence enough to cause the Grand Orient to petition the king for a prince of his house to rule over that body, but the prayer of the petition was refused. Thereupon three "Grand Conservators" were elected, and in his own person Roettiers de Montaleau represented the three highest offices of the Grand Orient. He was succeeded by Marshal Macdonald, one of the Conservators, and the Revolution of 1830, which placed Louis Phillippe upon the throne of France, found Macdonald acting Grand Master. He was, in 1832, succeeded by Alexis de la Borde, who, in 1842, requesting his dismissal, was succeeded by De la Casas, as Deputy G.M. In 1848, the second Republic being proclaimed, Bertrand was found to be Grand Master, he having been elected the year previous. In 1850, Berrille was elected in Bertram's stead; but, in 1851, the coup d'état caused the Grand Orient to close all the lodges for the time being, to suppress political agitation therein. In 1852, Lucien Murat, the nephew of Louis Napoleon, was invited to the Grand Mastership. Being waited upon, he assured the deputation that he must first secure the consent of his uncle, which being given, he was elected. His supercilious and arbitrary conduct estranged him, causing grave difficulties, and, to arrange matters, Marshal C. Magnan was, in 1862, by decree of the Emperor, ordered to take Murat's position. Some three years subsequently, Magnan prevailed on the Emperor to allow to the Grand Orient the privilege of electing its Grand Master, and this being granted he resigned, but to be elected shortly before his death, in 1865, after which, on the 9th of June of that year, General Mellinet was elected.

I will now close this brief eventful history of a century, by adding that, having been re-elected yearly until 1870, General Mellinet resigned, and, for the first time within one hundred years, a civilian, Babaud Larivière, was elected, with the distinct understanding on his part that within the following year the members of the Fraternity at large should determine, and so instruct their delegates, on continuing or discontinuing thereafter the Grand Mastership, and its discontinuance has been the result, to give place to a more republican form of government.

Is it not plain to the reader of the foregoing that, whatever it may be in other countries, the Grand Mastership in France has been more or less—generally more than less—for one hundred years controlled by the existing political power? And how much better, allow me to ask, would the Freemasons of England have acted under one hundred years of such rule, or variety of rules, as has been the fortune of France? It is very easy to point to the extraordinary manner, so famed alike for peace and conservatism, Freemasonry in England presents; but why should it not? What political commotion has occurred, resulting in the wreck of thrones or setting up of republics, within its living history? The reigns of the Georges and their successors to the present time have, for Englishmen, been continued peace in England. Only foreign wars, which but unite Englishmen, have occurred during those years within which France has been convulsed by revolution after revolution. How would it have been, who can say, if such convulsions of the social fabric of English society had taken place as those which that of France has experienced? I think there would be other stories to tell to-day of even English, the most conservative of all Masonry. Let us, not being tempted, decide how we would act under temptation; and would it not be well to think of this, ere we hasten to condemn our brethren of the Grand Orient? For them, the Grand Mastership has been a machine that is worked by that power which rules France for the time being. Is it not reasonable that they should desire to rid themselves of that machine when opportunity enabled, and thus prevent the administrative functions of that machine being again exercised in manner to render them but "slaves of the lamp"? From present appearances, a great deal of the Republicanism of France is to be found within its lodges of Freemasons, yet France no more at this time than previously will permanently establish a Republic. So long as the people are educated, as they are, solely by the clergy, and that clergy so predominately Roman Catholic, the government of France will not be a Republic. None know this better than the wise men of the Grand Orient; and hence, is it not natural that they should reorganize that body in manner not again to afford opportunity for any possible form of government or ruler to oppress or entangle them in its machinations through the agency of their Grand Master?

In this case, strange as it may appear and paradoxical, a body may prove quite as useful and effective, and much more independent, without a head.

I am, fraternally yours,
J. FLETCHER BRENNAN.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 18, 1871.

BURNS AND FREEMASONRY.

Burns, beyond question, derived considerable advantages from Masonry. It is evident from the statements which he has placed on record, that it contributed greatly to his happiness in admitting him into close and intimate fellowship with the wise, intelligent, and social, and furnishing him with opportunities for enjoying the "feast of reason and the flow of soul" in the most rational and ennobling manner. It presented him, also, with one of the best fields that he could find for the improvement of his mind and the display of his talents. In the Mason's Lodge, merit and worth are sure to be appreciated, and to meet with approbation and respect. When the young and humble ploughman of Lochlea joined the Lodge of Tarbolton, he was still in a great measure unnoticed and unknown; but no sooner did he receive the stamp of Freemasonry, than he took his place with Sir John Whiteford of Ballochmyle, James Dalrymple of Orangefield, Sheriff Wallace of Ayr, Gavin Hamilton, writer, Mauchine; John Ballantine, Provost of Ayr; Professor Dugald Stewart, of Catrine; Dr. John Mackenzie, of Mauchline; William Parker, of Kilmarnock; and a whole host of Ayrshire worthies, high and low. By coming in contact with these men, his manners were refined, his intellectual energies stimulated, and his merits acknowledged and applauded. Nay, Wood, the tailor; Mason, the publican; Wilson, the schoolmaster; Humphrey, the "noisy polemic;" and all the meaner brethren, seem very soon to have discovered his high intellectual qualities, for they were not long in raising him to the second highest office in the lodge—an office that caused him, on ordinary occasions, to occupy the Master's chair, and perform the work of initiation. In the school of the lodge, he must, in a great measure, have acquired that coolness of demeanor, that dignity of deportment, that fluency and propriety of expression, and acquaintance with philosophy and humanity, which so astounded and electrified the sages and nobles of Edinburgh, and made his advent in the capital one of the most remarkable incidents in literary history. Instead of a clownish, bashful, ignorant rustic, the most learned and exalted citizens found that he was able and ready to take his place by their side, and that, in everything in which intellect was concerned, he was in some respects their equal, and, in others, greatly their superior.

Burns was principally indebted to Freemasonry for any gleam of prosperity that shone on his early pilgrimage. It was the Freemasons of Ayrshire who invited him to their tables; who furnished him with advice; who read his productions into fame; and purchased and circulated the Kilmarnock editions of his poems. It was by the advice of his brother Mason, John Ballantine, of Ayr, to whom he inscribed his poem entitled "The Brigs of Ayr," that he repaired to Edinburgh, and not as is generally said, by the letter of Dr. Blacklock to the Rev. George Laurie, of London, which says not one word of coming to Edinburgh; but merely suggests the desirableness of publishing a second edition of his poems. His brother, Gilbert, expressly states that, when Mr. Ballantine heard that the poet was prevented from publishing a second edition, from the want of money to pay for the paper, he "generously offered to accommodate Robert with what money he might need for the purpose (£27); but advised him to go to Edinburgh as the fittest place for publishing." When Burns, acting on this advice, set out for Edinburgh, he had not, as he himself states, a single letter of introduction in his pocket, and we would be quite at a loss to know how he was able to form so sudden an acquaintance with the nobility and literati of the Scottish capital, were we not assured, on good authority, that he owed this, in a great measure, to his appearance among his Masonic brethren. It was they who introduced him into the best circles of society; who put money in his purse to supply his wants; who procured subscribers for the new edition of his poems; who formed his companions in his tours; who were his chief epistolary correspondents; who gave him accommodation in their houses; who obtained his appointment in the Excise; and who last of all, put him in possession of a farm—the chief object of his desire. As Masons, we are proud that Robert Burns was enrolled in the ranks of our Order, and while we should strive to avoid the "thoughtless follies that laid him low and stained his name," we should at the same time endeavour to imitate his ardent zeal, his open and generous disposition, and his manly and lofty independence.—Hunter's Lectures on Freemasonry.

OVER AND OVER AGAIN.

Over and over again,
No matter which way I turn,
I always find in the Book of Life
Some lesson I have to learn.
I must take my turn at the mill,
I must grind out the golden grain,
I must work at my task with a resolute will,
Over and over again.

We cannot measure the need
Of even the tiniest flower,
Nor check the flow of the golden sands
That run through a single hour,
But the morning dews must fall,
And the sun and the summer rain
Must do their part and perform it all
Over and over again.

Over and over again
The brook through the meadow flows,
And over and over again
The ponderous wheel still goes.
Once will not suffice,
Though doing be not in vain;
And a blessing, failing us once or twice,
May come if we try again.

The path that has once been trod
Is never so rough to the feet;
And the lesson we once have learned
Is never so hard to repeat.
Though sorrowful tears may fall,
And the heart to its depth be driven
With storm and tempest, we need them all
To render us meet for heaven.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

A Quarterly Court of the Governors and subscribers of this Institution was held on Thursday, at the Freemasons' Hall, Bro. John Symonds, V.P., in the chair. Among the brethren present were Bros. Major Creaton, J. R. Sheen, Edward Cox, Benjamin Head, Thos. W. White, A. H. Diaper, J. R. Stebbing, R. Spencer, H. Massey, H. Muggeridge, and E. H. Patten (Secretary).

After the ordinary business of the Institution was concluded, the recommendation of the House Committee, "That the number of girls in the Institution be increased from 106 to 112," was, on the motion of Bro. Major Creaton, seconded by Bro. Edward Cox, carried unanimously.

The names of twenty-two girls were then placed on the list of candidates for election in April next, and the court adjourned.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A General Committee meeting of the above Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Saturday, the 6th instant. Bro. W. Roebuck, C.E., was in the chair, and there were also present Bros. Major Creaton, B. Head, J. Symonds, R. W. Stewart, G. Myers, J. G. Chancellor, R. Spencer, F. Walters, S. Rosenthal, and G. Cox, V.P.'s; A. D. Loewenstark, M. A. Loewenstark, A. L. Dussek, S. Harman, J. S. Gomme, F. Adlard, H. W. Hemsworth, J. Dosell, J. Turner, F. Y. Cox, and F. Binckes (the Secretary).

It was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Bro. J. Symonds, that a vote of sympathy and condolence for the loss of Bro. W. Young, P.G.S.B. (whose death had taken place since the last meeting of the Committee), be given and entered on the minutes.

Sums of £5, and in one case £15, to the total amount of £30, were unanimously voted to boys formerly educated in the School, and who had since conducted themselves to the satisfaction of their employers, to further assist them in their progress through life.

Petition were received from no less than thirteen candidates for admission into the School. Some few cases were deferred. One was a purchase case. This being the last meeting previous to Quarterly Court, it was declared that there were sixty candidates and fifteen vacancies, which latter would probably be increased to seventeen, it being decided to recommend that two more boys be added to the number now educated in the School.

The usual vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the proceedings.

MARK MASONRY.

THE GRAND MARK MASTER MASON ON THE POSITION OF THE MARK DEGREE.

A meeting of the Percy Lodge, No. 114, was held at the Angel Hotel, Guildford, on Thursday se'nnight, and was well attended. The chair was taken by Earl Percy, M.P., D.G.M.M. and W.M.

At the subsequent banquet, in responding to the toast of "The G.M.M.," Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, who was present, said he was glad to be able to express his satisfaction at the progress of the Order. In the last half-year ten new lodges had been founded, and the treaties with the other non-recognised degrees would, he believed, be found to be more and more a source of strength to all concerned. He was also happy to have received the recognition of the Grand Chapters of Iowa and Pennsylvania, which, with the Grand Chapters of Ireland and Canada, made four supreme R.A. jurisdictions with which they were on friendly terms. He regretted that the G.C. of Scotland still persisted in their aggressive course of interference with English Mark Masonry; and he the more regretted this, because from what he had seen of the Scotch brethren whom he met in conference in the summer, he was sure that it would be a pleasure to any one to be on friendly terms with them. It was preposterous to assert that the Mark degree belonged to either the R.A. or the Craft, as now constituted. The R.A. degree was invented in 1740, and the Grand R.A. Chapter of England began in 1813, that of Scotland in 1817. But, a century before this, Mother Kilwinning Lodge charged four shillings for giving the Mark, and the G.C. of Scotland itself admitted that the Mark degree was worked in Scotland long before 1736, or at least eighty years before the G.C. came into existence. This effectually disposed of the assertion that the Mark belonged to the R.A. Some of the Scotch brethren were equally certain that it belonged to the Fellow Craft degree; but if so, how was it that no Craft G.L., excepting in Scotland, ever claimed jurisdiction over it? The truth was, that in England, as in some of the States in America, it had always had an independent existence. There were some thirteen old English Mark lodges, the majority of which had joined in forming the present Grand Mark Lodge. He was quite determined to maintain their independent rights and privileges, and was happy in the knowledge that the distinguished brother who would succeed him as Grand Mark Master (the Earl Percy) would be equally careful of their interests. (Loud cheers.)

THE Grand Mark Master Mason has approved of a warrant for a Mark lodge at Preston, to be called the "Birchall" Lodge.

The Annual Banquet of the Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, which was postponed on the 15th ult., in consequence of the alarming illness of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., will take place on Friday, the 19th inst., at the Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, under the presidency of our esteemed brother, Past Grand Pursuivant James Brett. A large muster of brethren is confidently expected.

CENTENARY JEWEL.—A warrant has been granted to the Angel Lodge, No. 51, Colchester, empowering all the subscribing brethren to wear a centenary jewel. The Angel Lodge was constituted in 1735, and has had an uninterrupted existence to the present time. It is now the largest and one of the best-worked lodges in the province of Essex.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE SINCERITY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 174.

The brethren of this lodge met at the Cheshire Cheese Tavern, Crutched Friars, in strong force, on Monday, the 8th inst., to celebrate their annual banquet, presided over by Bro. After the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. Bro. Appleby then gave "Prosperity to the Sincerity Lodge of Instruction, coupled with the name of Bro. Crawley," their indefatigable Secretary. Bro. Crawley replied, thanking the brethren for the reception they had given the toast, and earnestly pointed out to the younger brethren present who manifested any desire for advancement, the advantages derivable from constant attendance at Lodges of Instruction. "The Mother Lodge, coupled with the name of Bro. Newton, P.M., Hon. Secretary," was then given, and duly responded to. Bro. Newton then proposed "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Appleby," which was warmly received. Some excellent singing was contributed by Bros. Bradbrook, Musto, &c.

The banquet was served in Bro. Wright's usual liberal style, and the brethren expressed their liveliest satisfaction.

Bro. Read, P.M. 781, &c., then announced that the W.M. of the Friars' Lodge, No. 1349, had sanctioned a Lodge of Instruction, which commenced on Thursday, the 11th inst.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

[With a view to increase the circulation, and consequently the usefulness, of THE FREEMASON, it is suggested that Lodges, &c., desiring reports to appear in the paper, should take a certain number of copies in proportion to the space required for the report.]

The cloth being drawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to, the proceedings of the evening being enlivened by glees, songs, &c., which were most efficiently rendered by a glee party consisting of Bros. Smith Dunville, W. Dunville, and Lovatt; Bro. Walch presiding at the organ. The lodge has in the course of the past year obtained a warrant from the Grand Master authorizing its members to wear a centenary jewel, the lodge having been established in Bolton in the year 1732 and has continued to meet in Bolton ever since. Within the last few weeks the Freemasons' Hall, where the meetings of the lodge are held, has been re-decorated, and its appearance certainly reflects great credit on all concerned in carrying out the embellishment.

HULL.—Humber Lodge, No. 57.—The installation of the W.M. (Bro. R. T. Vivian) took place on St. John's Day, the Installing Master being the D.P.G.M., Dr. Bell. After the ceremony the brethren partook of a sumptuous banquet in the lodge, which was served in an admirable manner by Bro. Peacock. The following is the list of officers for the ensuing year, not previously mentioned: Bros. W. Tesseyman, I.P.M.; James Walker, S.W.; Jonathan West, J.W.; Henry Preston, S.W.; Richard Boggett, J.D.; John Hudson, D.C.; Morris Haberland, Lecture Master; Edward Kidd, I.G.; and W. Bernard, Librarian. We have not sufficient space to give anything like a report of the installation ceremony, but must this week simply confine ourselves to a notification of the fact. Bro. Vivian, the present W.M., seems to be thoroughly in earnest regarding all his duties, and having had so good a Masonic example in his predecessor, we believe this lodge will have good reason to rejoice in its selection of a Master. Active preparations are now being made for the annual ball, which is always an event of considerable importance in this locality.

PRESTON.—Unanimity Lodge, No. 113.—On Monday se'nnight Bro. Thomas Nevett was installed W.M. of the Lodge Unanimity, No. 113, at the Bull and Royal Hotel, Bro. H. Steib, P.M., ably officiating as the Installing Master. The following members of the lodge were chosen to the subordinate offices: Bros. Sumner, S.W.; Barnes, J.W.; Fryer, P.M., Treas.; Hunt, Sec.; Capt. Lockhart, S.D.; Townsend, J.D.; T. Jackson, I.G.; Steib, and Ellis, Stewards; Bro. A. McCarter, Tyler. The banquet was served under the personal superintendence of Bro. Townsend, and was of a recherché description. Bro. Nevett, the newly-installed W.M., occupied the chair, and was supported on the left by Bros. Col. Birchall, P.P.G.J.W. West Lancashire; J. J. Greaves, P.M.; Fryer, P.M.; Johnston, P.M.; Whitehead, P.M.; Whiteside, P.M.; and on the right by Bros. Steib, P.M.; Dr. Smith, P.M.; W. Heaps, W.M.; Ward, W.M.; and Worsley, W.M. Altogether about sixty of the brethren sat down to the banquet. SOUTHAMPTON.—Royal Gloucester Lodge, No. 130.—St. John's Day was celebrated by this lodge, when Bro. J. N. Pocock was installed W.M. in ancient form in the presence of a considerable number of the Fraternity. The ceremony of installation was performed by the out-going Master Bro. Le Feuvre, P.G. Sec. Hants. and Isle of Wight, after which the following were appointed and invested as officers for the ensuing year: Bros. W. H. Preece, S.W.; G. A. L. Brown, J.W.; H. Abraham, Treas.; E. Booth, Sec.; J. B. Thomas, S.D.; R. Sharp,

J.D., and O.; Kenneth Wilson, I.G. Bro. Le Feuvre was also invested as I.P.M. The brethren dined together in the evening, as usual on this occasion. The mode in which the beautiful ceremony of installation was rendered drew forth very high commendations from a large assembly of old Masons who were present, and a very special vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Le Feuvre, the Installing Master, for the same. The proceedings on this occasion were of unusual interest, the lodge just entering on its centenary year, its meetings having been held without the omission of a single month from the 12th January, 1772, and its warrant, signed by the Duke of Athol, bears date 22nd April in the same year. A very special celebration of the interesting event is to take place in the ensuing spring, and in the after-dinner speeches many pleasing references were made to the long and happy days of the Royal Gloucester Lodge.

SIDMOUTH.—Perseverance Lodge, No. 164.—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the London Hotel, Sidmouth, on Wednesday week. There was a good muster of the brethren. The installation ceremony was ably performed by Bro. Hodge, P.M., P.P.S.G.D., 30°, who placed Bro. Keyworth in the chair for the ensuing year. The new W.M. appointed the following officers:—Rev. N. The minutes of the previous regular meeting, and also of a Lodge of Emergency, were read and confirmed. The much-esteemed R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Kelly, on entering the lodge, was received with grand honours, in expression of the sympathy of the brethren for his recent indisposition, and, though he still suffers from its effects, he cheerfully obeyed the summons to the annual festival of the lodge for the 34th time, having been initiated in 1838. How comparatively few imitate the fervency and zeal of this worthy brother in the interests of the Craft. The Treasurer, Bro. Weare, P.M., read an abstract of the year's accounts, showing the financial position of the lodge to be highly satisfactory. He received the cordial thanks of the brethren for his past services, and was unanimously re-elected to the office of Treasurer. Other business before the meeting having been disposed of, and a candidate balloted for, Bro. E. J. Crow was duly installed Worshipful Master of St. John's Lodge, No. 262, the R.W. Provincial Grand Master conducting the ceremony, assisted by Bro. Toller, P.M., P.G.S., as Director of Ceremonies, and Bro. Rowlett presiding at the organ. The newly-installed W.M. then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. Stretton, I.P.M.; E. Gosling, S.W.; R. W. Widdowson, J.W.; William Weare, P.M., Treas.; J. M. McAllister, Sec.; J. W. It was unanimously resolved to devote a sum of money to a Masonic Charity in the name of the I.P.M., Bro. Stretton, in token of the appreciation of the genial and hearty manner in which he had discharged the duties of the chair during the past year. The cordial thanks of the brethren were also recorded to Bro. Widdowson for his efficient and valuable services as Secretary to the lodge during the past year. The candidate for initiation having been admitted in due form, the newly-installed Master impressively completed the ceremony, and, figuratively speaking, placed his first stone in the N.E. in such a masterly and workmanlike manner as, subsequently, to call forth high encomiums from the Rev. Dr. Haycroft, and other eminent brethren who were present. After expressions of hearty good wishes (per Bro. Widdowson) from Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.P.G.S. Cornwall, Hon. Member, and the representatives of Lodges 1031, 1007, and 523, the lodge was closed in harmony, and about forty brethren sat down to the banquet. This part of the evening's enjoyment was considerably enlivened by the songs of the Worshipful Master, Bros. Atwood, Deane, Palmer, Gurden, Cleaver, Weare, Mace, and Rowlett, who also presided at the piano, and on the warm reception of the toast of "The Health of the Prince of Wales," he conducted the enthusiastic rendering by the brethren (standing) of the beautiful song, "God bless the Prince of Wales," appropriate to the toast.

TEIGNMOUTH.—Benevolent Lodge, No. 303.—The installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, on the 1st instant. The lodge having been opened by the W.M., Bro. G. N. Devon, took the chair as Installing Master, and Bro. F. C. Hallett, the W.M.-elect, was presented to him for the benefit of installation, which was conferred on him in a very impressive way. The new W.M. selected and invested as his officers: Bros. J. S. Short, S.W.; J. Roach, J.W.; C. H. Callings, S.D.; R. Perryman, J.D.; F. Duff, I.G.; F. Toms, Sec.; J. Whidborne, Treas.; and P. Haggerty, Tyler. The usual addresses were delivered to the newly-appointed officers by the Installing Master in a most able manner, after which Bro. P.M. Walrond presented to the I.P.M., Bro. G. N. Burden, a very handsome 18-carat gold Past Master's jewel, that had been subscribed for by the brethren of the lodge, and bears the following inscription: "Presented to Bro. G. N. Burden, P.M., by the brethren of Benevolent Lodge, No. 303, as an acknowledgment of his valuable and untiring services as Worshipful Master for the year 1870-71." The jewel is very massive, and the workmanship of the finest description; it was manufactured by Bro. George Kenning, Little Britain. Bro. G. N. Burden acknowledged the gift in an appropriate speech. The W.M. then closed the lodge in due form, and the brethren proceeded to Bro. Callings', Royal Hotel, where a very excellent banquet had been prepared. It was the first held at that hotel, and reflected great credit on the proprietor. The W.M. presided, supported by several Past Masters and visitors. The W.M. initiated two gentlemen into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry, and then opened the lodge into the second degree. The gavel was placed in the hands of Bro. John Beresford, P.M. 104, who had kindly consented to act as Installing Master, and who conducted the ceremonies in a manner highly gratifying to the brethren present. The duties of S.W. were undertaken by Bro. John Swindell, P.A.G.C., and those of J.W. by Bro. Henry Howard, P.P.G.A.D.C. The new W.M. then appointed the following brethren as his officers during the ensuing year: Bros. Thomas Brookes, I.P.M.; J. H. Tatton, S.W.; J. Slack, J.W.; J. Helm, S.D.; J. Hill, J.D.; J. Spedding, I.G.; and C. Saxty, Tyler. Hearty good wishes having been given by a number of visiting brethren, the lodge was closed in peace and harmony at half-past five o'clock. The lodge having been closed, the W.M., Bro. C. I. Paton, invited the brethren to partake of refreshment, consisting of champagne and choice preserved fruits. At the banquet which followed, the W.M., in proposing the toast of "The Queen," said: It is the good fortune of the people of this country to be governed by a sovereign whose devotion to her subjects, whose attachment to the principles of the constitution, whose domestic virtues and many noble qualities have made her a bright example, and endeared her to all her people by the tenderest of loyalty and affection. The severe affliction with which the Royal family has recently been visited, has called forth expressions of deep sympathy and loyalty from all classes of the community, high and low, rich and poor, and in my opinion these universal manifestations have clearly demonstrated not only our sincere attachment to the present occupant of the throne and her family, but likewise our keen appreciation of the manifold blessings and advantages derived from our present system of national government. It is at all times a work of supererogation to dilate upon this toast, but especially on the present occasion surrounded as I am by members of an ancient Institution, equal if not superior to any other society in the world in their allegiance to the sovereign of their native land. (The toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm and musical honours.)—In giving the toast of "The Prince of Wales," the W.M. said: I rise with the greatest possible satisfaction to propose the next toast, that of "Our Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." I rejoice greatly that we have the privilege of drinking this toast upon the present occasion, for, but one short week ago, the life of our illustrious brother, the heir to the proudest monarchy in the world, hung trembling in the balance and the despondent bulletins issued by his medical attendants, had led us to fear that there was no hope of his recovery, but happily for the nation the fatal blow was averted, and there now seems to be reasonable grounds for trusting that he will be spared to fulfil the high and important duties awaiting him in the future, and if it should be the will of the G.A.O.T.U. in His great mercy to restore him to good health, I for one firmly believe that the Prince of Wales will prove himself worthy of his father, worthy of his mother, worthy of our Masonic Order, and worthy of the realm over which he will some day be called to reign. Of the Princess of Wales, we cannot speak in terms of too high admiration, she is known to us all as the very impersonation of all that is good, pure, and womanly, and recent events have tended to strengthen the bond of union between her and those, I trust, I may call her future subjects. Brethren, I call upon you to receive this toast with the utmost enthusiasm.—The call was responded to in a manner which showed both sympathy and loyalty after which the semi-national anthem, "God bless the Prince of Wales," was sung with the utmost heartiness. "Our Masonic Rulers, supreme and subordinate," "Our Visitors," and "The Health of Bro. W. Bird," (who had been prevented by illness from attending to his Masonic duties for some time), were amongst the other admirably proposed and happily responded to toasts.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge, No. 1051.—The regular meeting of the Rowley Lodge for the celebration of the Festival of St. John the Evangelist and installation of the Worshipful Master was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenaeum, on Tuesday, 2nd inst. Present: The I.P.M., Bro. Hall, in the chair; Bros. Moore, G.S.B., as I.P.M.; J. Hatch, P.M. 281, as S.W.; Wilson Barker, J.W.; W. J. Sly, S.D.; J. Taylor, as J.D.; E. Airey, J.W. 281, as I.G.; R. Taylor, Tyler; and other brethren. After other business had been transacted, Bro. J. L. Bradshaw, E.A., duly received the degree of F.C. from Bro. Hall, the acting W.M. The chair having been assumed by Bro. Dr. Moore as Installing Officer, the W.M.-elect, Bro. W. Barker, J.W., was presented for installation by Past Masters W. Hall and John Hatch. A Board of Installed Masters was then appointed, and Bro. Barker was duly installed in the chair of the lodge, and saluted by the brethren. He then proceeded to invest the following officers; Bros. W. Hall, for Bro. Mercer, as I.P.M.; W. J. Sly, S.W.; E. A. Sail, L.L.D., J.W.; Moore, Treas. and Sec.; James Taylor, S.D.; and R. Taylor, Tyler. The address to the W.M. was delivered by the Installing Officer, and those to the Wardens and brethren by Bro. J. Hatch, P.M. 281.

LIVERPOOL.—Fermor-Hesketh Lodge, No. 1350.—This young, but highly-promising and prosperous lodge held its usual meeting on the 15th ult., at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool. Bro. J. Higson Johnston, W.M., was supported by the following officers: Bros. E. Harbord, P.M. and Sec.; James Ridley, S.W.; J. D. Crawford, J.W.; S. Jones, S.D.; A. Samuels, J.D.; and Martin Browne, I.G. Amongst the visitors were Bros. T. Leighton, 605 and 1325, Sec.; R. Rillartin, 1094 and 249; C. H. Hill, P.M. 1276 and W.M. 724; J. Walsh, 53; J. Midgley, J.W. 477; H. James, W.M. 203; W. Little, 477; J. Skeaf, W.M. 216 and P.G.O.; J. G. Jacob, 1013; and J. W. Jones, P.M. 594. After the lodge had been duly opened, and the minutes read and confirmed, the Rev. S. Topham, Mr. J. Bernheim, and Mr. W. H. Evans were initiated into the mysteries of the Order, the ceremony being performed in a most impressive and effective manner by the W.M. The second degree was given by him with equal efficiency to a duly-qualified brother. The presentation of a spirit case to the lodge by Bro. J. Griffiths, S.W. 477, and a J.D.'s jewel by Bro. J. Midgley, J.W. 477, was then made, and suitably acknowledged. After the transaction of some formal business, the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. Ball. During the evening the toasts of "The Queen" and "The Prince of Wales" were proposed, and, in admirable speeches, the W.M. spoke of the loyalty towards her Majesty and the universal sympathy felt for their Royal brother during his illness. Both toasts were received and honoured with the greatest enthusiasm.

METROPOLITAN.

Plantagenet Conclave, No. 2.—The regular meeting of this conclave was held on Monday, 8th inst., at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, Strand. Sir Kt. Thomas, M.P.S.; Sir Kt. G. States, E.; Sir Kt. C. P. Ward, S.; Sir Kt. J. Boyd, P.S.; and Sir Kt. Marsh, Recorder. The conclave was opened in due form, and the business of the evening was the election of Sovereign and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Sir Kt. G. States being next in rotation for the Sovereign's chair, declined to accept office, and Sir Kt. Major Finney was elected. Sir Kt. C. P. Ward was unanimously elected to the chair of Eusebius. Sir Kt. Dicketts was elected as Treasurer, and Sir Kt. Gilbert as Sentinel. No further business being before the conclave, it was closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to a recherché supper, provided under the superintendence of the manager, Sir Kt. G. States, and every Sir Knight at the table expressed their satisfaction at the viands and wines provided. We had an opportunity of viewing the same evening the alterations being made in the hotel by the considerable enlargement of the rooms for the purposes of Craft, chapters, and conclaves of Masons' meetings, under the direction of the enterprising manager, Sir Kt. George States.

SCOTLAND.

The Edinburgh Courant states that the Freemasons of Scotland have at present under consideration a proposal that the lodges throughout the country should band themselves together for the extension and enlargement of the general scheme of Scottish Masonic benevolence. It is also proposed to take steps for the erection of lodge halls throughout the provinces. Experience has shown that lodges meeting in halls of their own prosper more, and discharge the duties of Masonry better, than those which are obliged to meet in hotels and taverns. There are now on the Grand Lodge roll, in good working order, 387 lodges, with 24,140 members.

STORNOWAY.

On Friday, the 27th ult., the brethren of Fortrose Lodge, No. 108, assembled in their Hall at 11 a.m. The lodge being duly opened, the Treasurer's report for the past year was read and approved of, showing a clear balance, after deducting all incidental expenses, of £30 to the credit of the lodge—reducing the debt on the Hall to £111. A vote of thanks was then recorded the Treasurer and Secretary for their faithful and satisfactory discharge of the duties appertaining to their offices. The usual all carried off the previous night. People wondered what those individuals, following so different walks in life, could have had in common. The victims were the members of the St. Stephen's Lodge. The population was terror stricken, and no native Hungarian durst think of Freemasonry. Subsequently, however, another attempt was yet made, by a foreigner—this time with some semblance of success. A gentleman of English name and extraction, but a native, I believe, of Hamburgh, high up in Masonic lore, but standing in the employ of the Government of the day as a censor of books—a branch of espionage fortunately unknown in England—obtained permission to establish a lodge. He greatly exerted himself in forming one under a charter from the Grand Lodge of his native town. But his unfortunate connection with the then detested Government of the day made him and his endeavours unpopular. The Lodge of "Unity in the Fatherland" was established, but no candidates were forthcoming. Seeing that he could not make his way in the metropolis, he transferred his efforts to Odenburg, a provincial town on the frontier of Austria, where he opened the lodge "Fraternity," recruiting candidates principally from the neighbouring Austrian capital, Vienna. In this he completely succeeded, as the Viennese, being denied the privilege of Freemasonry at home, came in numbers over the border to get initiated. Thus, although the Odenburg lodge is located on Hungarian territory, but having been founded by a foreigner, with members principally foreigners, and itself depending on a foreign G.L., is still considered by the Hungarians a foreign institution.

The real great revival of Freemasonry in Hungary dates only from 1867.

III.

Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-seven will for ever be marked with letters of gold in the annals of the history of Freemasonry in Hungary.

The disasters of the campaign of 1866, culminating in the defeat at Sadowa and leading to the humiliating peace now concluded, has again illustrated the homely adage of the house that is divided against itself. It was admitted that the defeat would not have been so crushing, had the Hungarians gone with all their hearts into battle, and fought with their wonted bravery. When it was found that even under the Austrian uniform the Hungarians could not forget the wrongs done to their country—when it was realised that the whole machinery of absolutistic rule, which had been relentlessly kept in motion for eighteen years, and all the wiles of kingcraft were of no avail, and could not crush the ardent desire for liberty and independence—when the hard-ried and repentant Emperor evinced the sincerity of his desire for reconciliation by restoring the time-honoured Constitution, by reconfirming the most cherished rights with solemn oath, and by putting on his head the venerable crown of Saint Stephen as constitutional king of Hungary—when the hated trammels of oppression were broken and swept away—FREEMASONRY, under the newly-unfurled banner of liberty, again asserted its imprescriptive right. A general and unconditional amnesty was now offered to all the victims of 1849.

This time, nearly all the refugees who were still lingering in England, America, and the colonies returned home, laden with the invaluable treasure of experience in trade, commerce, science, and the liberal arts. They also brought with them the pure and lofty tenets of Antient Free and Accepted Masonry, as practised in those Protestant countries. Thus out of evil came good, the returned exiles now working as so many apostles of civilisation in their country. Like the returned captives from Babylon, they set about to build the second temple of Freemasonry in Hungary. Numerous lodges were now opened for the symbolic degrees in the metropolis as well as in the provinces.

It was a curious and touching sight when old mouldy papers, Masonic clothing and jewels were brought forth from their hiding-places, where they were lying buried for generations, religiously secreted from the prying eye of the informer.

The first and, so to say, mother lodge, was the "Unity in the Fatherland," mentioned in a former part of this sketch, the framework only of which, however, was now in existence. This was vigorously taken up, and worked with energy. As soon as the required number of lodges were established, a Masonic Congress was convened, and the Grand Lodge formed. This event took place on the 30th January, 1870. The constitution of the ancient and venerable lodge, "Sun," of Bayreuth, being taken as a model, was adopted with some slight modifications. The lodge took the title of "The Grand Lodge of Hungary for the three degrees of St. John," and Brother FRANCIS PULSZKY was elected first Grand Master. From the time of his lengthy sojourn as an exile in London, Bro. Pulszky is well known and esteemed in the learned circles in England for his deep erudition in archæology and philology. His confiscated estates having been restored to him, he is now a pre-eminent member of the Hungarian Diet, and the custodian of the National Museum. A hot-headed Revolutionist while his country was oppressed, he is now a staunch Conservative in politics. By his eminent social position, as well as by the vast range of his attainments, Bro. Pulszky is certainly the most competent and best qualified man in Hungary for the great and glorious task of organising and presiding over the great work in Hungary. He is ably assisted by Bro. F. L. LICHTENSTEIN (formerly likewise an exile in England) as D.G.M. The G.L. of Hungary has now been acknowledged by, and has exchanged representatives with, most Grand Lodges of Germany, and is now, I understand, taking steps to obtain recognition from the G.L. of England.

Meanwhile, those refugees who had obtained high degrees in France, Italy, South America, and other Roman Catholic countries were busily engaged in opening lodges under a charter from the Grand Orient of France, with General Türr as G.M. 33.

The same phenomena were now witnessed in Hungary as experienced in other countries where the two rites came simultaneously into existence: fierce rivalry and unseemly controversy, which at times nearly endangered the whole fabric. Earnest efforts are now being made for conciliation, and to unite, if possible, the two rites. I know little of the so-called high degrees, but I do know my countrymen; and, with all due respect for the high and noble character of Bro. General Türr, I doubt whether he will ever succeed in gaining popularity in Hungary for the rite over which he presides.

As a people, the Hungarians are too sober-minded to lay much value on multiple and glittering decorations, and gaudy ritualistic ceremonies. But, above all, their ardent love of independence, and its corollary—jealous impatience of arbitrary authority, especially foreign authority—will never allow them to submit to that theocratico-military organisation. Besides, the unenviable and false position into which the Grand Orient has been recently placed, is not calculated to gain for it many proselytes. Already these lodges are restricting their labours to the three symbolic degrees only.

Let us hope that a modus vivendi will be found, that rivalry will cool down into healthy emulation and brotherly co-operation, although under different forms, towards the one and the same lofty goal. So mote it be!

ARISTOCRATIC MASONRY.

I believe it was Horne Tooke who once said, that the successful parvenu generally makes the most uncompromising aristocrat, and although appertaining to a contradiction, the assertion is nevertheless a fact. A modern cynic somewhat consolingly observes that the way now-a-days to become an aristocrat is this: In the first place, you must amass wealth—no matter in what manner, but amass it you must. If you get it honestly, it may probably be a little better, but by no means let honesty deter you; then cut trade, and snub tradesmen severely. Talk as if your connection with trade had been a misfortune, and thank your stars that you left the dirty business as soon as possible. In the next place, you must look about for the representative of some decaying old family—one of the fox-hunting and go-a-head kind of men—who, being in the worst meshes of bankruptcy, is willing to sell his ancestral home. This you must purchase; but before doing so, be particular in noticing that no old friends reside in the locality, as it is always dangerous to have these people at hand. They are generally of vulgar and familiar tastes, with a penchant for gossiping, and might circulate little pieces of information detrimental to the importance of your coming dignity. When all the little preliminary arrangements of possession are settled, you must then form a circle of acquaintance; in this be very circumspect—a Lord, or a Lady, with a long string of Honorables, spare neither trouble nor expense to procure. Should you still occasionally desire to do a little bit of quiet business, lend them a little money now and then, when you feel in a generous humour; be sure, however, to have some security. This will prevent them being in some respects great at your expense, and enable you to put the "screw" upon them should there ever be a necessity. Always keep good wine—or, rather, pay a good price for it; abominate cheapness in everything. Get your armorial bearings, pedigree, &c. If you know nothing about these things, the Heralds' College will supply them. Order your pedigree by the yard, the longer the better. Another injunction: let it be cautiously hinted that you like to be called "the Squire," which will soon be done. Should your name happen to be "Fozzle," or "Grip-gall," or any other equally unepithetous cognomen, get it changed without delay. This you will find wonderfully convenient in the way of non-identification. You may now repose in peace, and with the satisfaction of being an important acquisition to the aristocracy and gentry of our native land.

What is really the definition of the word, "Gentleman"? We find our Members of Parliament addressing their constituents, and the promiscuous rabble at the hustings, "Gentlemen." The rabble return to their pothouses, and address each other, "Gentlemen," and the word "gentleman" re-echoes from one end of the country to the other. Gentlemen by birth, gentlemen by education, gentlemen by profession, and gentlemen by I don't know what. Two centuries ago all the honourable posts in the law and army were, as was then the custom all over Europe, confined to the gentry. A gentleman could only be an officer in the army or a Barrister in the Inns of Court, which accounts for the coats of arms that decorate the halls of the Temple and of Lincoln's Inn. But in other countries, when the tiers état, or plebians, became too important to be excluded from these offices, the law that excluded them was usually repealed; but in England a different course was pursued—the law was maintained, but broken through on every occasion, and as officers and lawyers still maintained that none but "Gentlemen" could be admitted, Barristers and Captains were at length styled Esquires, and Ensigns and Attorneys Gentlemen. Some centuries ago, the higher orders were alone distinguished by a suavity of manners. Hence a polished man was said to have the manners of a gentleman, and no doubt the barbarity of the lower ranks might have induced the higher ranks to maintain that there was no polished man but a gentleman. When, however, the benefits of education had descended lower, and plebians had become polished, the saying should have been disused; but here again the inferiors turned the tables against their superiors, by retorting that, if there were no polished man but a gentleman, every polished man must be a gentleman. The title of Gentleman is now almost, if not entirely, swamped in courtesy, and we are now accustomed to apply it to those who combine with "respectability of position" the advantages of education and refinement. There are, however, exceptions to most rules, and a short time ago I found one to this. A friend of mine, the son of a worthy and esteemed tradesman in this town, desired to join a Masonic lodge. He is a young man of integrity, intelligence, education and character, but was rejected, because a few aristocratic (?) Masons had determined not to admit any tradesman! I do not wish to be sarcastic in commenting upon the proceedings of my brethren, but I must say their decision certainly astonished me. Do they know what a tradesman is? I am almost inclined to believe they do not, by the fact of these very exclusive individuals principally consisting of tailors, shopmen, clerks of various kinds, small ship-brokers, and others of a similar stamp. On the other hand, as they do not recognise gentility by moral or intellectual endowments, what do they mean by "gentlemen"? Who are gentlemen, according to their very logical notions? Are they aware that the nurse of James I., who had followed him from Edinburgh to London, once entreated him to make her son a gentleman? "My good woman," said the king, "a gentleman I could never make him, though I could make him a lord." Bonaparte, too, when in the plenitude of his power, though he created dukes, grand dukes, and even kings, never ventured to make a gentleman. In Bailey's Dictionary (edition of 1707) we find a gentleman to be "one who received his nobility from his ancestors, and not from the gift of any prince or state." Gentility, according to heraldry, is superior to nobility; gentility must be innate, nobility may be acquired; noblemen may be only persons of rank and distinction, but gentlemen must be persons of family and quality. Could any title of the peerage add to the nobility of that Hampden upon whose sarcophagus is inscribed, "John Hampden, twenty-fourth hereditary lord of Great Hampden"? None but gentlemen, according to Rüxner's Furnierbuch, who were able to prove their descent from four grand parents of coat armour—or, as the Germans express it, to prove four quarters—could offer themselves as combatants at the grand national tournaments in Germany, and every German gentleman is not less proud in showing the name of his ancestors in these lists, than our families of French origin at finding their names on the roll at Battle Abbey. The English gentry alone were formerly Knights Templars, and until the reign of Henry VIII. only English gentlemen of four quarters were admissible into the Orders of Malta or of Saint John of Jerusalem.

If, then, we object to tradesmen of character and position, where are we to look for the rara avis—gentleman?

ISRAELITISM & FREEMASONRY.

The very interesting articles of Bro. Carpenter, on "Israelitism and Freemasonry," have drawn such general attention to the fate of the lost ten tribes of Israel, and have excited so much interest, that no apology is necessary for prosecuting further inquiries into the subject, especially as Bro. Carpenter's articles have come to a close. Permit me to suggest to Bro. Carpenter that he would be conferring a great favour on his numerous readers, if he would kindly give a resumé of his articles, so that one might see, at a glance, the conclusions he has arrived at, and (if necessary) the reader might refer to the articles themselves in order to examine the arguments on which such conclusions are based. It will be obvious that, for various reasons, such a resumé could be best prepared by the writer of the articles, and therefore I urge on Bro. Carpenter the propriety of so doing. I attach so much importance to this matter (knowing that THE FREEMASON has been purchased and read even by strangers simply because it contained articles on this most interesting question) that, if Bro. Carpenter's numerous engagements will prevent him from carrying out this suggestion, I will myself (though closely engaged in my professional avocations) undertake the task, rather than that it should remain undone. It is to be hoped, however, that Bro. Carpenter will see the utility of the suggested resumé, and will kindly undertake to do the work, which can be carried out so much better by him than by any one else.

Permit me to take this opportunity of replying to one or two observations which have been made on my articles on "Israelitish Origin of the Anglo-Saxon Race." It has been pointed out that I refer to Josiah's visit to Bethel, and his destroying the altar erected there by Jereboam, and that a strong argument is founded thereon to prove that all the Israelites were not carried away by the Assyrians. It will be recollected that the visit of Josiah to Bethel was foretold by the disobedient prophet from Judah, who was slain by a lion on his return from Bethel. I am reminded that this place (Bethel) was in Benjamin, and, consequently, belonged to the King of Judah, and, therefore, the argument (based upon Josiah's visit) that the inhabitants belonged to one of the ten tribes, is fallacious. The reply to this simply is, that, although some geographers certainly place Bethel Luz in the land belonging, as they allege, to the tribe of Benjamin, there is not an atom of evidence in support of that assumption, but very much to the contrary. I have seen scores of plans or maps of Palestine, showing the land divided out among the several tribes, with as much minuteness as the counties of England are marked out on the Ordnance survey; but I have never been able to understand where these geographers obtained their very precise information. Some writers (Kitto, for instance) have got over the difficulty, in some measure, by having two Bethels—one in the land of Ephraim (which I contend is the right place), and the other in the land of Benjamin; but, with singular inconsistency, he marks the Bethel in Benjamin as the place where Jereboam set up his molten calves. Now, as we find that there was a chronic state of war between Judah and Israel up to the time of Jehosaphat and Ahab, and that Jereboam's reason for setting up the calves was to prevent his subjects from visiting the adjoining kingdom; and as this continued to be the policy of the kings of Israel for many years, it is absurd to suppose either that Jereboam would set up his idols in a place beyond his jurisdiction, or that the kings of Judah would allow them to remain in their dominions if they were so set up. The narrative shows clearly that, wherever this Bethel was placed, it was not within the limits of the kingdom of Judah. The position of Bethel Luz is ascertained with considerable accuracy, but it is clear that the geographers are wrong in including it within the region occupied by the tribe of Benjamin. My argument, of the existence of some descendants of the ten tribes in the land of Israel, at the time of Josiah's visit to Bethel, therefore remains untouched.

FREEMASONRY AT NEWPORT.

The banquet of the Silurian Lodge, No. 471, in celebration of the re-election of Bro. H. J. Gratte, as Worshipful Master (it being his second year of office), took place at the Westgate Hotel, on Wednesday evening, 10th inst., and was served up in consonance with the well-known reputation of the worthy brother, who is host of the establishment.

The regular lodge at which the business, concurrent with installation ceremonials, was transacted, was held on the previous Wednesday, (for which day the banquet had according to custom, been fixed, but was postponed in consequence of the death of Bro. William Williams, the respected Secretary of the lodge), on which occasion the following appointments were made: Bros. H. J. Gratte, W.M.; Rev. Samuel Fox, I.P.M.; W. Pickford, Treas.; George Rogers, Org.; C. H. Oliver, M.C.; George Fothergill, S.W.; C. W. Ingram, J.W.; Charles Rowe, S.D.; W. Watkins, J.D.; B. Lawrence, I.G.; Chas. D. Phillips, and W. H. Pickford, Stewards; Henry Fletcher, Tyler.

On Wednesday, 10th inst., there was a Lodge of Emergency, at which several visiting brethren from Metropolitan and other lodges attended. The sublime degree was gone through in deference to the wishes of these brethren, who expressed themselves highly pleased with the correct and very effective working by the W.M.

The banquet at the Westgate was on the table shortly before six o'clock. Of its excellence we have already spoken. Now, as to the proceedings. The chair, as a matter of course, was taken by the W.M., supported on the right and left by the following brethren: S. George Homfray, D.P.G.M.; L. A. Homfray (Isca) 683; Rev. S. Fox (Silurian) 471; H. Hellier, 471; Wm. Pickford, 471; John Middleton, 683; H. J. Parnall, 471; John Hunter (Moir), 326 Bristol; James R. Shorland (Colston), 610 Bristol;

Edward Schneider Lean, 1029, Ascension I. (West Africa); Rudolph G. Glover, P.M. 181 (London); J. C. Parkinson, Prince of Wales's, and P.M. 181 (London); William Adam, P.M., St. John's, 90 (London), and 471; George W. Jones, 471; John Griffiths, 471; William Watkins, 471; James Harrison, 741; A. McMahon, 471; B. Briggs, 610; J. S. Stone, 471; Samuel Davis, 471; Edward W. Perren, 471; Thomas Brooke, 471; James Thompson, 683; Walter West, 683; Henry Fletcher, Tyler; Henry Griffiths, W.M. 1071; E. W. Richards (Abersychan) 818; Pa. James, ditto 471; R. B. Evans, 471; C. H. Oliver, 471; C. H. Oliver, jun., 471; Wm. West, 471; Thomas Williams, 683; W. H. Pickford, 471; H. Koebel, 988, Jullender, East Indies; Henry Greene, 471; Wm. Evans (Caerleon), 471; Edwin Hibbard, 471; John C. Guthrie, 500 (Dublin); Thomas Moses, 471; Samuel Goss, 471; T. L. Davies, 471; J. Gould, 471; James Ewins, 683; J. Berlyn, 471; Charles P. Evans, 471; John James, 471; George Forthergill, 471; F. Orders, 471; Wm. James, 471; J. Horner, 471; A. Taylor, 471; R. H. Richards, 471; Thomas Ellis, 471; &c.

The brethren wore the collars of the Order, with the jewels pertaining to Craft Masonry and the Royal Arch Degree. The purple of the P.G.L. was as prominent as the Blue. Music was provided as usual, Bro. Rogers presiding at the pianoforte, and the brethren freely contributing to the harmony of the evening by the exercise of their vocal powers.

Grace was said by the Rev. Samuel Fox, the P.G. Chap., and the cloth having been removed, the usual toasts were proposed. We give the list as it was set forth in the programme: "The Queen and the Craft;" "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family;" "The M.W. the G.M. of England, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge;" "R.W. the P.G.M. of Monmouthshire;" "The V.W. the D.P.G.M., and the P.G. Officers of Monmouthshire;" "The W.M. 471;" "The P.M.'s 471;" "Principals and P.P. Silurian Chapter;" "The Visitors;" "The Isis Lodge;" "The other Lodges of the Province;" "The Officers of the Silurian Lodge;" "The Masonic Charities;" "To all poor and distressed, &c."

The proposal of most of these toasts fell to the share of the Worshipful Master, who most ably acquitted himself of his rather onerous duties. The loyalty which is proverbial amongst Masons displayed itself in great strength on this occasion, and the "fring," or that peculiar mode of doing "the honours," was delivered with great élan. After the "Queen and the Craft," the "Masonic National Anthem" was sung, and in connection with the toast of brother the Her Apprent, "God bless the Prince of Wales," found vent in fervent aspiration and full harmony.

Bro. Homfray returned thanks for the toast to the D.P.G.M. with great good taste, assuring the lodges of the province that nothing should be wanting on his part to fulfil the duties of his position with earnestness and fidelity.

The health of the W.M. (Bro. H. J. Gratte), was very appropriately and eulogistically given by Bro. the Rev. P.G. Chaplain. It was as he said, the toast of the evening. Enlarging on the responsible duties of the chair, and showing the dignity of the position of the W.M., as ruler of the lodge, the rev. gentleman, in words of genuine sincerity, congratulated Bro. Gratte on his election for a second time to the post of honour (Masonic fire).

Bro. Gratte feelingly responded. Last year it had pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to lay upon him His chastening hand. Disabled for three or four months by severe illness, he was prevented from taking an active part in his Masonic duties. The fraternal feeling and brotherly love evinced towards him on that occasion he should never forget, and he regarded his re-election by the Silurian as a fresh proof of their confidence and esteem. (Applause.)

The seventh toast (the P.M.'s 471) fell to the lot of Bro. G. W. Jones, who coupled therewith the health of P.M. Bro. Fox and P.M. Bro. Wm. West, both of whom returned thanks in terms of no ordinary felicity.

With "The Principals and P.P. Silurian Chapter," were coupled the names of Bros. Hellier and Oliver, who duly responded.

The Worshipful Master proposed "The Visitors," and in doing so alluded to the presence amongst them of several distinguished brethren, mentioning especially the name of Bro. Parkinson, whom he understood was the managing director of a most important undertaking—the Alexandra Docks—which they all knew was bound up with the commercial prosperity of Newport. Although politics were interdicted at Masonic meetings, he was not aware that a reference to commercial matters was prohibited. (Hear, hear.) And as they all were, more or less, directly or indirectly, connected with the shipping interests of this port, they could not but regard with feelings of the liveliest satisfaction the approaching completion of so important an undertaking. He connected with the toast of "The Visitors," the name of Bro. J. C. Parkinson, whose presence amongst them he welcomed in his commercial as well as his fraternal capacity (drunk with Masonic honours).

Bro. Parkinson, who was very cordially received, said: I will not lose one moment in endeavouring to find expressions for the gratitude of which the hearts of your visitors are naturally full, but will proceed to tender you our warmest thanks for the hospitable reception you have given us, and to reciprocate in their entirety, the good wishes which your Worshipful Master has just so heartily expressed. Our experience to-night has been one of such varied and unqualified satisfaction, that we labour at this moment under a double debt of gratitude, and know not whether to thank you first for the intellectual treat afforded us in your beautiful hall—a treat at which, as it seemed to me, lacked nothing either to impress the imagination or touch the heart—or to award priority to your fraternal greetings at this board. Several things have been made clear to me to-day. I have learnt, and shall upon all suitable occasions be prepared to testify, that Newport contains a compact phalanx of Freemasons, to whom the acquisition of our "mystic knowledge" is a labour of love, and who bring to the ceremonial and traditions of our Order thoughtful and cultivated minds, so that no word or symbol, no jot or tittle of the vast and beneficent superstructure we call Freemasonry, but receives due consideration, and is made to bear practical fruit. It is, brethren, as a working Mason of many years' standing that I venture to pay my humble tribute of praise to the supreme excellence of the working I have seen to-day. My admiration of it, and the great enjoyment I have experienced here, make me hope that I shall take part in many such evenings as this. And if there be at any time, or in any form, any service I can render you in Freemasonry, pray count upon my co-operating with you with all my heart and strength. For it is my hope to see much of Newport (cheers), and as the great enterprise with which I have the honour to be connected approaches nearer and nearer to completion, there will be no pleasanter relief to severer duties than sharing with you the privileges of Freemasonry. The subject suggests Masonic phrases. After my inspection, say of the perfect ashler-work down yonder, of the stones "smoothed for the hands of the experienced workmen," "of the uprights fixed in their proper bases," under the direction of Bro. Griffiths, and the "rude matter brought into due form" by the same hands, it will be my delight to join you in studying the lessons enforced by other working tools, and to turn my attention from operative to speculative Masonry. (Cheers.) It is particularly agreeable to me to feel that our interests are identical in the great project to which I have adverted, and that the success and prosperity of the Alexandra Docks will give a powerful stimulus to that progress and enterprise for which Newport is already renowned. (Prolonged applause.) Although I am but a comparatively young member of the Directorate, I venture to speak for the whole body when I say that few things give us greater satisfaction in connection with our enterprise than a conviction of the great material blessings which must follow in its wake, and be diffused around. Forgive me, brethren, for speaking at this length, for I hope to prove to you that vast undertakings with the objects and of the character of the Alexandra Docks, form no unfitting theme for Freemasons, and, indeed, embody within themselves much that we are instructed to practise, and far more of the true principles of our Order than were made manifest in any of the gigantic works of antiquity. It has been my good fortune to wander, as a tourist, by the banks of the three great sacred rivers of the world—the Ganges, the Jordan, and the Nile. In old Egypt, the mother of nations, the Masonic traveller gazes wonder-stricken on the mighty monuments of dynasties which are forgotten, of a civilisation which is effaced, of a religion which is dead; and he recalls, not without reverence, the tradition which teaches that there was some affinity between the ancient Egyptian mysteries, and those practices and secrets which Freemasons cherish and hand down. In Palestine, the same traveller discerns on the decaying walls of the holy but desecrated city of Jerusalem, the very emblems which it is the business of our lodges to elucidate and explain. At Delhi, Agra, Lucknow, and over the vast plains of Upper India he finds upon the facades of the tombs and palaces of those great Moguls, who overran Hindostan to hold it for centuries in their iron sway, our Masonic symbols; and throughout the gorgeous and mysterious East, there is no difficulty in establishing two facts—First, that the outward forms of what is known to us as Freemasonry were in use there in remote ages; secondly, that its spirit and privileges were but too often wanting in the rulers and the ruled. For, as every candidate for our mysteries is taught, Masonry is free (cheers). The great doctrine of natural equality and mutual dependence runs through and connects its teachings as by a silver thread; while in the countries quoted there are but too many evidences of a debased nationality and an enslaved people. Whether the stranger stands entranced in admiration before the remains of the massive yet delicate architecture of the Pathans, of whom Bishop Heber wrote in his "Indian Journal," "They designed like Titans, and finished like jewellers;" or marvels over the geometrical proportions of the great pyramids of Ghizeh, those venerable past-masters of Time, where mass has been aggregated to mass, and quarry piled on quarry, till solid granite seems to cover the earth and reach the skies—whether in India or in Egypt—there come welling up to him, and echoing through the dim centuries, dreadful sounds. They are the lash of the task master and the groans of the oppressed! Thus it is, he comes to reflect bitterly, that the Masonic symbols he sees have been but an outward and empty sign; that there has been no blessing on the work he beholds in ruins, or with its very meaning forgotten, and that he must look elsewhere for verification of the voice from Heaven, "In strength will I establish this My house, that it may stand firm for ever." This is the moment, brethren, when an Englishman turns with pride to the monuments of industry and the triumphs of the mechanical art of his own beloved country; to her Christian temples, to her secular enterprises, to her havens of refuge, to her network of railways, to her mighty viaducts—aye, why should I conceal it?—to her magnificent and thriving docks!—monuments which I venture to say are equal in design, equal in achievement, equal in grandeur to the mightiest relics of the ancient world, and are immeasurably superior to them in the priceless truth that they are cemented, not by the blood and tears of down-trodden slaves, but by the willing labour of free men. (Continuous applause.) And that they perpetuate, not the lives squandered and the treasure won by some despot on a throne, but the growth, the intelligence, and the activity of a great and united nation. Here, where, as Sheridan wrote very beautifully, and as a great living statesman quoted not so long ago:—

"Content sits basking on the cheek of toil;

—where just laws and the wise administration of them have changed the face of a country, and are vanquishing slowly, but resistlessly, the evils of ignorance and crime; where many an Eden, beautiful in flowers and rich in fruit, has been raised up out of the arid waste by free labour constitutionally directed and controlled:—Here, I say we have a right to look upon the barbaric Past with commiseration, and to an enlightened Future with glowing hope.

“Not in vain the distance beacons, forward, forward, let us range;
Let the great World spin for ever down the ringing grooves of change;
Through the shadow of the globe we sweep into the younger day—
Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.”

—Worshipful Master, may the bright promise of these bright words be fulfilled by and for us. May we all meet often and meet here on occasions such as this; and may we at each recurring anniversary, celebrate that harmonious progress and that diffused prosperity which form the great happiness of Masonic communities, and are the crowning glory of free states.

The speaker sat down amidst prolonged cheering.

“The Isca Lodge” was responded to by Bro. Jno. Middleton, P.M., and Bro. Thomas Williams, P.M.

The D.P.G.M. acknowledged the toast, “The other Lodges of the Province,” and the two brethren of the Bristol lodges returned thanks for the courtesy of the brethren.

Bro. L. A. Homfray's health was drunk in a bumper and suitably acknowledged.

Bro. Geo. Fothergill, as S.W. of the lodge was called upon to respond to the toast, “The Officers of the Silurian lodge.” In the course of his speech he feelingly alluded to the loss which the lodge had sustained by the death of their late Secretary.

“The Masonic Charities” brought up Bro. Pickford, whose Masonic begging propensities are irresistible, and who, as well as the W.M., made some practical observations on the Benevolent Funds lately established by the two local lodges respectively, their object being to afford the means of educating within the Province the children of deceased Masons left unprovided for—the chances of obtaining elections to the Metropolitan charities being to remote to satisfy the actual exigencies. It is gratifying to find that this praiseworthy and truly Masonic effort is progressing most satisfactorily, and we confidently anticipate that both the Silurian and the Isca will soon be in a position to undertake to provide for the education of several poor children.

The W.M. proposed, “The Press,” to which Bro. Thos. Williams responded.

The Tyler's toast, “To all poor and distressed Masons,” &c., drunk in solemn silence, brought a very successful and truly pleasant meeting to a close.

PRESENTATION.—The Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall (Bro. Augustus Smith) has presented, for the use of the Provincial and Phoenix Lodge, a very handsome and massive carved solid teak arm-chair. In the centre of the panel forming the back is the P.G.M.'s jewel, enclosed between the square and compass, encircled by a raised ring bearing the word “Cornwall” with fifteen balls. Around this, beautifully carved, is a G.M.'s chain. In the upper corners is the date, 5875, with the initials A.L.; whilst the lower corners of the panel bear the donor's initials, A.S. On each side of the back are columns—the Doric on the right and the Ionic on the left. From the balls on the top of these columns spring another panel running to a point at the top, over which is an eye. In the centre of this panel is a shield of fifteen balls, over which is the word “one,” and at the lower point on either side “and” “all.” The seat and arms are cushioned with purple silk velvet to be used by the Provincial Lodge, and scarlet for the Phoenix. The carving is beautifully done, and the chair a noble addition to the furniture of a splendid room.

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13½d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemist.—[Advt.]

MASONIC BALL AT LIVERPOOL.

The twenty-third annual ball of the Masonic brethren in Liverpool and its neighbourhood, which took place on Tuesday evening, the 9th instant, was, in every respect, a complete success, highly creditable to all concerned in its organisation; and resulting in material benefit to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, on behalf of which the proceeds will be given. There were several circumstances anything but favourable—such as the mass meeting of Conservatives at the Royal Amphitheatre the same evening; but Masonic enthusiasm and charity were not to be turned aside by this or any other inviting cause. The annual recurrence of this fashionable assembly is anticipated by Masons with more than ordinary interest. Apart from its offering one of the comparatively few opportunities to the general public of joining in Masonic festivities, and witnessing the good fellowship for which the mystic Order are distinguished, it has, during a long course of years, firmly established the character of being amongst the most brilliant and enjoyable of winter reunions. The ball, on this occasion, was quite worthy of that reputation. Additional clat was given to the ball by the following unusually distinguished patronage:—Lady patronesses: Most Hon. the Marchioness of Ripon, Right Hon. the Countess Bective, Right Hon. Lady Skelmersdale, Mrs. Gilbert Greenall, Walton Hall; and Mrs. R. F. Steble, Sandfield Park. Patrons: Bros. His Worship the Mayor of Liverpool; the Right Hon. the Marquis of Ripon, M.W.G.M.; Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart, M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M. West Lancashire; Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.P.G.M. West Lancashire; L. G. Starkie, R.W. Prov. G.M. East Lancashire, P.G.S.W. of England, and P.S.G.W. of West Lancashire; R. Townley Parker, W.P.D. Prov. G.M. West Lancashire; Gilbert Greenall, P.S.G.W. West Lancashire; Right Hon. Lord de Tabley, R.W. Prov. G.M. Cheshire; George Cornwall Legh, M.P., W.D. Prov. G.M. Cheshire; Earl Bective, R.W. Prov. G.M. Cumberland and Westmorland; W. R. Callender, W.D. Prov. G.M. East Lancashire; Albert H. Royds, R.W. Prov. G.M. Worcestershire; the Right Hon. Lord Leigh, R.W. Prov. G.M. Warwickshire; Sir W. Williams Wynn, Bart, M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M. Shropshire and North Wales; Lieut.-Colonel Thomas Birchall, W.P. Prov. J.G.W. West Lancashire; Charles J. Banister, P.G.S.B. of England; Lieut.-Colonel Steble, Sandfield Park; and S. R. Graves, Esq., M.P.; W. Rathbone, Esq., M.P.; and the Right Hon. Viscount Sandon, M.P. The Committee was constituted as follows: President—Bro. Lieut.-Colonel Sir Thos. George Fermor-Hesketh, Bart.; Vice-Presidents—Bros. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale and Hon. Frederick Stanley, M.P., W.D. Prov. G.M. West Lancashire; Chairman of Committee—Bro. Jas. McKune; Vice-Chairman of Committee—Bro. George Broadbridge; Director of Ceremonies—Bro. Henry M. Molyneux; with Bro. G. Blundell, Hon. Treasurer; and Bro. George Turner, Hon. Secretary.

The company began to arrive shortly before nine o'clock, and the influx of ticket-holders was continuous until about eleven o'clock, when there must have been nearly 600 present. The fine splendidly-lighted rooms needed no other than their ordinary adornments. A picturesque addition to the brilliant toilets of the ladies was afforded by the characteristic attire of the Masons, with its sparkling jewels, indicative of varying rank and office, and the scene when dancing commenced was unusually attractive. The only drawback to enjoyment, if such it could be called, was, in one sense, the strongest evidence of the success of the ball. Although both the large rooms were called into request for dancing, they became so full that occasionally the desired freedom of movement could scarcely be obtained. That, however, was certainly no cause for regret when the charitable object to be served by the ball was taken into consideration. All that could be wished, under the circumstances, was, not that the company should be less numerous, but that rooms could have been slightly enlarged for the occasion. To accomplish that was, of course, beyond the power of the committee. Their arrangements left little or nothing to be desired, and if perfect felicity was unattainable by a few specially enthusiastic votaries of Terpsichore, a reasonable share of enjoyment was within the reach of all.

Amongst the more distinguished guests were Bros. J. Pearson (Mayor of Liverpool), J.D. 680; Lieut.-Colonel Birchall, P.P.G.S.W.; Lieut.-Colonel Steble; H. S. Alpass, P.P.G. Sec.; Captain Mott, P.P.S.G.D.; W. Laidlaw, P.P.S.G.W.; T. Armstrong, P.G.T.; G. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C.; G. De la Perelle, P.G.S.; C. H. Hill, P.G.S.; J. W. Baker, P.G.S., &c.; and an additional effect was given to the gay gathering by the presence of a large number of the Order of the Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine in the clothing of the Order. Amongst those present were the following: Ill. Sir Kt. G. Turner, Int.-Gen. for W. Ian.; Sir Kts. J. K. Smith, M.P.S.; J. R. Goepel, V.; H. M. Molyneux, S.G.; R. Washington, H.P.; D. W. Winstanley and H. Nelson, Stewards; E. Hughes, O.; W. Doyle and T. Clark, Prefects; J. Wood, T.; J. E. Jackson, A.; J. Skeaf, Org.; W. Crane, H.; and J. Lloyd, Hague, Johnson, A. Pickup, Jarvis, Scott, Morgan, R. Pearson, G. H. Turner, Mawson, Cron, &c. The different lodges in the town were well represented, and amongst the Masters, officers, and brethren were Bros. G. Dyke, R. Morley, J. Macbeth, G. Rigby Smith, J. Sellars, E. Dutch, J. Clegg, R. R. Marter, W. H. Lee, T. D. Fenner, Butterfield, E. Friend, Newton, Pierpoint, Oakchott, J. Jones, Beasley, Ashmore, Lyall, Pierce, H. Pearson, Ridley, C. Leighton, &c. The orders of the Knights Templar, Rose Croix, and Royal Arch were also represented.

The music was supplied by the band of Bro. G. W. Phillips, and was all that could be desired. Bro. Molyneux officiated as Master of Ceremonies, and the refreshment department was under the care of Bro. Vines, of the Canton Hotel, whose catering gave general satisfaction. The Stewards, as a body, fulfilled their duties in a manner which contributed greatly to the success of the ball. Bro. Turner, Hon. Secretary, by his indefatigable exertions in connection with the whole arrangements, secured its complete success, and the result will doubtless be a substantial addition to the funds of a most deserving institution.

MASONIC FUNERAL AT HOLYHEAD.

The Lodge of St Cybi, No. 597, held an emergency meeting on the morning of the 22nd Dec., 1871, on the mournful occasion of the funeral of Bro. Samuel Owen Williams, solicitor, of Holyhead. After opening the lodge, the W.M. read the special dispensation, which had been obtained from the R.W.P.G.M., Sir W. Wyn, to form a Masonic procession in honour of, and as a token of respect to, the departed brother, who, during his short residence in this town, had won the esteem and affection, not only of the brethren of his lodge, but also of the public generally. There were present: Bros. John Peters, W.M.; J. Ll. Griffith, W.M.-elect; W. Riva, P.S.W.; William Lewis, J.W.; Owen R. Ellis, Sec.; John Ellis, S.D.; Dr. Owen Williams, J.D.; Owen W. Jones, Chaplain; Wm. Evans, Steward; James Lloyd, I.G.; Samuel Hughes, O.G.; visiting Bro. William Jones; and a goodly number of the brethren—all in Masonic clothing, with the signs of mourning suitable to the occasion. The procession having been formed, it proceeded from the Marine Hotel to the house of the deceased brother, and led the van from thence to the railway-station. The hearse came next, following which was a large number of the most respectable inhabitants of the town, all eager to show their last tribute of respect. After depositing the coffin in the carriage at the railway station, the brethren returned in the most excellent order to the lodge-room, to complete the Masonic duties of the day. The deceased brother was the son of John Williams, Esq., Bodafon, Llandudno, and about 30 years of age.

MANITOBA.

It may safely be asserted, without presumption, that Freemasonry treads in the footsteps of civilization. Wherever the presence of man is found, whether it be in the ice-bound regions of the frigid zone, or on the burning coasts of Africa, after the log-hut which serves the settler as a home, comes the lodge-room, consecrated to the spirit of fraternity and love. We have heard of lodges on board ship before now—although, possibly, none exist at the present day—and can readily comprehend the solace which Masonic intercommunion must have afforded to the brave sons of Neptune in the olden time, when cruising from shore to shore was not so speedily effected as it is in these days of steam propulsion. But, even if naval lodges no longer exist, ample compensation is found in the fact that, in places which were trackless wastes but a few years ago, there are now flourishing branches of our Fraternity; that in lands, like Japan, formerly inaccessible to the advances of commercial enterprise, the voice of civilization is now heard, and the principles of Freemasonry are being rapidly diffused.

In reviewing these gratifying results, we are satisfied that none will ascribe the assertion either to egotism or to arrogance, if we record our opinion that British Freemasons may reasonably indulge in the pleasing reflection that much of the Masonic progress is clearly attributable to the sons of the "old country." Nearly every Grand Lodge in Europe has derived its existence from the Grand Lodges in London and Edinburgh, and our American brethren will be the first to acknowledge that the powerful Masonic organizations which flourish at present in the States are proud to trace their origin to the same source. Wherever the English flag is unfurled, wherever the pioneers of a British colony congregate, the banner of the Masonic Order is, sooner or later, sure to wave; and one of the most recent examples of this curious, but undoubted fact, deserves, we conceive, something more than a passing tribute, inasmuch as it evinces the virtues of zeal and perseverance to a remarkable degree. It is known to our readers that the "Dominion of Canada" now comprises all the British possessions in North America, with one or two exceptions, to which it is unnecessary to allude. Besides the maritime provinces, British Columbia, and the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the vast territory formerly under the rule of the Hudson's Bay Company now forms an integral part of the Dominion. This enormous district is called "Manitoba," and, until quite recently, was nothing but a "happy hunting-ground" for trappers and other agents of the Company. That some attempt had been made to colonise it was evident some time ago, when an insurrectionary movement occurred at the Red River settlement; but English Freemasons are, perhaps, scarcely prepared for the intelligence that the population has, since that period, increased so rapidly as to necessitate the formation of several Masonic lodges in the province. Such, however, is the case, and we are indebted to the very lucid and complete "Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Canada for 1871" for much interesting information on the subject. The Rev. Richard Stuart Patterson, Deputy District Grand Master of the province, seems to have proved himself a true Masonic missionary, and from his narrative we glean the following items of intelligence: The first lodge named in Bro. Patterson's report is called "Prince Rupert's," now 240 on the register of Canada. This lodge commenced work at Winnipeg about the latter end of December, 1870, and "has been enabled to procure suitable furniture and regalia." The brethren contemplate building a Masonic Hall, and the utmost harmony has prevailed in the lodge since its formation. The "Lisgar" Lodge meets at Lower Fort Garry, and the brethren were fortunate enough to secure all the valuable lodge fittings, furniture, and regalia of the late Northern Light Lodge, formerly held under the Grand Lodge of Minnesota. The "International" Lodge has been opened at North Pembina, but has not yet been enabled to obtain a suitable room for lodge purposes—the reason assigned being, that, until the international boundary line between the Lake of the Woods and the Rocky Mountains is ascertained, there is no possibility of houses being built on the Canadian side. At present, the Canadian Custom House and the Hudson Bay Fort are claimed by the Americans to be within the limits of their territory. The American brethren located in and near Pembina, however, have promised to assist the new lodge in every possible way, and there is every reason to believe in its permanency and success.

Bro. Patterson also delivered a dispensation for the establishment of the "Assinibonic" Lodge, at Portage la Prairie, and several meetings have been held by the founders for instruction in the work. The greatest harmony appears to prevail amongst the brethren of the new Masonic province, and we cannot refrain from tendering our hearty congratulations to the Grand Lodge of Canada upon the vigorous nature of its youngest offshoot. The introduction of Masonic lodges into those wild and formerly desolate regions cannot fail to prove of incalculable benefit to the inhabitants. The habits of order which are engendered, and the principles of morality which are strengthened, by a faithful adherence to the Craft, must eventually lighten the mass of the rude population, and soften and humanise their manners. We welcome these latest additions to the Masonic flock with feelings of no ordinary interest, and, in the name of the Freemasons of the British Islands, we heartily wish every success to the pioneers of Freemasonry in Manitoba.

LORD CARNARVON'S HEALTH.—We are glad to learn from our Newbury Correspondent, that it is now hoped at Highclere Castle that Lord Carnarvon's convalescence is established.

BRO. M. DIOSY, W.M. Polish National Lodge, has recently been honoured with the appointment, by Prince Metternich, as sole agent to the trade for the sale of the world-wide celebrated Schloss Johannisberg Cabinet Wines. In spite of the general cry for cheap, cheap wines, which by-the-way, has inundated us with much that is cheap and nasty, the taste for what is really excellent has, thank heaven, not yet died out amongst us.

FALMOUTH.—On Friday se'nnight, a party of "unattached" Masons, under the presidency of the Mayor of Falmouth, Bro. W. H. Lean, dined at the Greenbank Hotel, to celebrate the festival of St. John. Although strongly urged by the principal officers, Bro. Augustus Smith, the Provincial Grand Master, declines the establishment of a second lodge in Falmouth, and as there is a pretty numerous and respectable body of Masons here who will not have any connection with the present lodge, Masonic matters here have been for some time past in an unsatisfactory state, and "brotherly love" appears to be at a discount.

Multum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE GRAND M.M.M.

If it would not be considered presumptuous on my part, I should like to add a little to the observations of the Grand Mark Master respecting the recognition of the Mark Grand Lodge.

Not only is his authority as Grand Master recognised by the Grand Chapters of Ireland, Canada, Pennsylvania, and Iowa, but, in England, all the Grand Bodies (excepting those pertaining to Craft Masonry, under which Mark Masonry should not be placed) recognise the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, and, thereby, the Grand Master's authority as the head of Mark Masonry in England. These bodies are the "Knights Templar," the "Red Cross of Rome and Constantine," and the "Ancient and Accepted Rite."

In common with many Masons who have given attention to historical Freemasonry, I regret exceedingly the withdrawal of support from the Grand Chapter of Scotland. I say withdrawal, because formerly the certificates of the Mark Grand Lodge were recognised. However, I believe that ere long that influential body will hold out the right hand of fellowship.

W. J. HUGHAN.

MARK AND ROYAL ARCH.

I am not going to continue the discussion with Bro. W. P. Buchan. His silence as to the origin of the G.C. of Scotland "speaks volumes." I will leave it to the G.L. and G.C. of Scotland to settle with Bro. Buchan whether they or he are right as to the Mark degree having been "wrought long before 1736." The former declared that this was so in 1858, the latter in 1864. If they were wrong in these deliverances, there is the more need for them to mind their own affairs, and leave English Mark Masters to mind their's in peace.

What Bro. Buchan appears to me to lose sight of is this—that modern Masonry, if it is anything superior to Odd Fellows or Ancient Druids, is a clothing in allegory and ceremonial of a certain number of facts which had their existence among the operative Freemasons of old. As at present existing, our ceremonial cannot be proved to have the slightest connection with the operative lodges. Who for a moment believes that William of Wykeham or Sir C. Wren could now work his way into a modern lodge? An Entered Apprentice and a Fellow Craft were facts—the Master of a lodge was a great reality, so was a Mason's Mark. The modern Master Mason, and the modern R.A. Mason, had no existence at all, and these testify to no operative fact or truth whatever; and therefore for a R.A. Mason to claim jurisdiction over the Mark degree as part of his system, is an anachronism. That such a modern continuance as the Arch should clutch hard at an antique relic like the Mark, is natural enough. It is equally natural that Mark Masters should decline to allow the pure stream of their immemorial antiquity to be muddled and muddled by the inventions of 1740.

AN ENGLISH MARK MASTER.

PROV. GRAND LODGES IN SCOTLAND.

Bro. Paton has certainly got his fellow in "J. W.," page 25—only, whereas the former's remarks at page 789 show that the writer is mistaken, those of the latter, at page 25, not only show his mistake, but also prove it! Poor man, he has got himself stuck up upon some imaginary pinnacle, from which, with the supremest contempt, he looks down upon other poor sublunary mortals as "old fogies" and "simple-minded brethren;" but, alas! for the mutability of human affairs, no sooner does he give utterance to his grand Quixotic resolve, "J. W." to the rescue! than his pedestal dissolves from under him, and he is left kicking his heels in the gutter, keeping time to the music, with "Scottish Provincial Grand Officers must be de facto Masters and Wardens of lodges in the province."

The absurdity of this is shown by the very law which "J. W." quotes, viz., cap. xiii., sec. 2, which tells us that the Prov. G.M., with all the office-bearers and the Masters and Wardens, shall form each Provincial Grand Lodge. Now, the conjunctions "with" and "and" show us that the Masters and Wardens are simply part of Prov. Grand Lodge, and that the office-bearers and the Prov. G.M. are the other portions of it. Further, as the representative of Grand Lodge, it is right that the P.G.M. should neither require to be himself the Master of a lodge, nor that he should be forced to take his officers only from the de facto Masters and Wardens, for, as it is the duty of the P.G.M. and his officers to oversee the Masters and Wardens, and to see that they do their duty, greater independence and propriety is secured by not appointing men to watch themselves. Consequently, Grand Lodge Laws very sensibly do not require the P.G.M. and the officers of a Prov. Grand Lodge to be de facto either Master or Warden of any lodge. They simply require them to be Master Masons in connection with the province, as shown at page 801, by Bros. D. Murray Lyon and "Max," as well as by myself.

In conclusion, I recommend "J. W." to peruse the concluding remarks of scene 2, act iv., of Shakespeare's "Much ado about Nothing." GLASGUENSIS.

Time does not permit me, even if inclination did, to reiterate for the special benefit of Bro. C. I. Paton and J. W. the arguments which ten years ago I addressed to Grand Lodge in vindication of the eligibility of any Master Mason to hold office in a Prov. Grand Lodge within whose bounds he is resident. I therefore content myself with quoting the deliverance of Grand Lodge, which settles the fact in dispute:—

Grand Committee, January 31, 1862.—Bro. Alexander Hay in the chair.—The Convener of the Sub-Committee appointed to consider and report upon the communication received from Bro. Murray Lyon in regard to the interpretation put on Grand Lodge Laws by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire at a meeting thereof on 24th December last, held for the election and installation of Office-bearers, keeping in view also the interpretation put on Grand Lodge Laws in the report of a former Sub-Committee, submitted to the Grand Committee on 5th June, 1860, stated that said Sub-Committee had met and fully considered the matter, but had differed in opinion. Whereupon a full discussion of the subject was gone into by the present meeting, at the conclusion thereof Bro. Mann moved, seconded by Bro. Skirving—"That with reference to the communication from Bro. Murray Lyon, styling himself Provincial Junior Grand Warden of Ayrshire, complaining that his appointment as such, under commission from the Provincial Grand Master of that province, had not been given effect to, and to the report of the Sub-Committee referred to in minutes of Grand Committee of 5th June, 1860,—[Vide Grand Lodge Reporter, No. IV., pp. 111-12]— the Grand Committee are of opinion that the interpretation put upon the Laws of Grand Lodge by that report, to the effect that office-bearers, to be eligible for appointment in Prov. Grand Lodges, must be Masters or Wardens of lodges in the province, is founded on a misconception, and that no other qualification is necessary than that—'All of them must be Master Masons on the roll of Grand Lodge, members of lodges within the province, and resident in the district for the greater part of the year.'—Grand Lodge Laws, cap. XIII. sec. 3.

A counter-motion was proposed by Bro. Mackersy, seconded by Bro. Law, to the effect that the matter be left to the determination of Grand Lodge. On a vote being taken Bro. Mann's motion was carried by seven to four.

"Grand Lodge, February 3, 1862.—The Most Worshipful the Grand Master (Duke of Athole) occupying the Throne—A Petition and Complaint from Bro. David Murray Lyon, Provincial Grand Junior Warden of Ayrshire, and Report of Grand Committee in relation thereto, was taken into consideration, when after observations from the Depute Grand Master, the following Resolution was moved by Bro. Lindsay Mackersy, seconded by the Depute Grand Master (J. Whyte-Melville), and unanimously carried:—

"Finds, that on a sound interpretation of the Laws of Grand Lodge, a Provincial Grand Master has power to appoint by Commission from time to time, a Provincial Grand Depute and a substitute Master, two Wardens, a Secretary, and Chaplain, all of whom must be Master Masons, having a residence in the Province, but not necessarily Masters or Wardens of lodges within the Province: Therefore sustains the Appeal of Bro. David Murray Lyon, and reverse the Finding of Grand Committee of date 5th June 1860, and that of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire founded thereon, and remit to the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire, with instructions to receive and instal Bro. David Murray Lyon as Provincial Junior Grand Warden of Ayrshire, should his Commission be in all other respects regular."

The Commission in my favour, which was issued by Sir James Fergusson, Bart. (now Governor of South Australia), P.G.M. of Ayrshire, was subsequently presented to the Provincial Grand Lodge, and I was installed into office.

D. MURRAY LYON.

BRO. W. J. HUGHAN, of Truro, Cornwall, will be very glad to hear from any brethren who possess, or know of, minutes of lodges, or copies of M.S. Constitutions, of an older date than A.D. 1720. Our well-known and highly-esteemed Brother is now engaged in preparing another work for the press, which we believe will pay especial attention to the M.S. Constitutions of the Freemasons, and has in his possession several copies of these ancient and valuable documents, which he will publish for the first time. He is particularly anxious to have every information obtainable with respect to these manuscripts in the possession of lodges and brethren, as soon as possible.

THE LIVERPOOL SCHOOL BOARD.—The Non-conformists of Liverpool held a conference lately to consider the advisability of recommending a candidate, holding their views on certain questions of grants, &c., to fill the vacancy at the School Board caused by the death of Mr. Eden, a local solicitor, and a member of the Church of England. Ultimately the conference decided to recommend no special candidate, leaving the body to act as individuals thought best.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of the above Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 10th instant.

Present: Bros. C. C. Dumas (in the chair), J. Hervey, B. Head, J. Symonds, A. Perkins, E. H. Patten, F. Walters, F. Adlard, G. Bolton, H. W. Hemsworth, N. Wingfield, J. R. Sheen, H. M. Levy, T. Cubitt, L. Stean, and W. H. Farnfield (Secretary).

The minutes of previous meetings were read and confirmed. The deaths of two annuitants were announced. Seven males and five females were added to the list of applicants seeking to be placed on the Annuity Fund; one application was dismissed.

The usual vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the proceedings.

We cordially recommend this Charity to the consideration of our readers, as being worthy of their support. None but those really deserving and in need of assistance can be placed on the Fund, there being a wise rule precluding all who have a certain income from participating in its benefits. We think it is to be regretted that a similar rule has not been adopted in our other Charities, as it would have the effect of reducing the number of applicants, and of securing the admission of the more necessitous cases. We note another arrangement in this Institution that does not obtain in either of the others, viz.: If a lodge gives its £50 in the name of any officer, that or any other amount does not entitle that lodge to be represented at the Committee meetings. Now this, in our opinion, is one of several rules which prevent the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution from being supported as it ought and would be were more advantages given to subscribers.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Quarterly General Court of this Institution was held on Monday, the 15th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. There were present: Bros. John Symonds, V.P. (in the chair); R. Spencer, V.P.; F. Walters, V.P.; W. Roebuck, A. L. Dussek, F. Adlard, H. Massey, and Frederick Binckes, the Secretary, who read the minutes of the previous court, which were unanimously confirmed.

The following recommendations from the General Committee were unanimously adopted:—

1. To approve the list of 60 candidates to be submitted for election at the Quarterly General Court on 15th April next.

2. That an additional vacancy be declared by the removal of a boy, owing to confirmed ill-health.

3. That the number of boys to be educated and maintained be increased from 110 to 112.

4. That, in consideration of the Lodge of Bathurst, Africa, having ceased to meet, and there being no other lodge within 700 miles of his residence to which the late Bro. Evans could subscribe, the General Committee be authorised to take the petition in behalf of his son into consideration, notwithstanding his not having subscribed to a lodge for the stipulated period.

Although the numbers are increased from 110 to 112, there will be but 17 to be elected out of the 60 candidates on the list.

The debt of the Institution is now practically reduced to £5,000. Combined effort at the next festival, on March 13th, might, without difficulty, remove it entirely.

All business having been disposed of, the usual vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

MASONIC FESTIVAL AT CHESTER.

On Monday last, the celebration of the festival of St. John was held by the brethren of the Lodge of Independence, No. 721, at the Bars' Hotel, where the ceremony of installing Bro. John Larden Sellers, M.D., as W.M. for the year was performed in a most effective manner by Bro. R. W. Worrall, P.M., who also delivered the charges most impressively to the following officers elected by the W.M.: Bros. Thomas, S.W.; Dennis, J.W.; Johnson, S.D.; McMillan (by deputy), J.D.; Beresford, I.G.; Williams, Tyler.

After the ceremony of installation, Bro. Worrall, P.M., in a neat and appropriate speech, presented Secretary Bro. Heney Allsop with a beautiful timepiece (voted from the lodge funds) as a slight acknowledgment of his valuable gratuitous services as Secretary of Lodge 721 for some years. This gift was supplemented by another, consisting of ten handsomely-bound volumes of Chambers's Encyclopedia, subscribed for by members of the lodge, and obtained through the active exertions of Bros. J. Jones and Cunnah.

After the lodge had been closed in due form, the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. A. C. Lockwood, at the Hop Pole Hotel, and which was attended by about fifty brethren. The W.M. presided, and was supported by the following brethren, members and visitors to the lodge: Bros. Councillor Dickson, 721; J. Jones, 594 (Liverpool); Williams, W.M. 425; Salmon, W.M.-elect 425; Platt, P.P.G.W., 537; McHastie, 425; Hunt, P.M. 425; Hignett, W.M. 537; Taylor, M.D., 425; Willcox, 425; Dr. Davidson, 721; J. McEvoy, I.P.M. 721; J. Huxley, 425; J. Lloyd, 597 (Holyhead); Venables Williams (P.M.), P. Williams, Rhyl, Ellis, Cunnah, Hurden, J. Glyn Jones, and Captain Jones, 721; Evan Jones, 597 and 721; &c.

The W.M. (Bro. Sellers) then proposed the following toasts: "The Queen;" "The Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master of England," which was followed by a song adapted for the occasion by Bro. Evan Jones; "The Right Hon. the Marquis of Ripon, M.W.G.M. of England," song, "Tubal Cain;" "Lord de Tabley, P.G.M. of Cheshire;" "The W.M. 721," by the I.P.M., Bro. McEvoy; and "The Visitors," coupled with the name of Bro. J. Williams, W.M. 425, who, in responding, expressed his gratification, and the pleasure it always gave him in visiting Lodge 721, and expressed a hope that the brethren of that lodge would return the compliment; indeed, it would give him and his brother officers an opportunity of uniting more closely with the brethren of that lodge, if they would visit them oftener. He promised them a hearty reception.

Bro. Salmon, W.M.-elect 425, responded to the same effect.

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Installing Master, Bro. Worrall," which was received with Masonic honours.

Bro. Worrall, in responding to the toast, said: Although I am a member of another lodge in this city, I can never forget my connection with my mother lodge 721, and as long as I am able, it will give me the greatest pleasure to render my humble assistance in furthering the good cause.

"The Health of the I.P.M.," was next given and responded to by Bro. J. McEvoy.

Bro. Allsop then returned thanks in suitable terms for the handsome presents.

Bro. Platt's name was mentioned in connection with the toast of "The Charities," when he gave a very interesting account of those connected with Cheshire, mentioning, especially, the great assistance rendered by Lodges 605 and 721.

Then followed "The Officers of the Lodge," responded to by Bro. Thomas, S.W.

Bro. Williams, 425, gave "The Town and Trade of Chester," responded to by the ex-Mayor, Bro. Dickson; and, lastly, "All poor and distressed Masons."

The songs of the evening were ably given by Messrs. Bell and Bates, of the Chester Cathedral Choir, who were specially engaged for the occasion.

The brethren separated at an early hour, well pleased with the rich and varied repast prepared for them by Bro. A. Carden Lockwood.

MASONIC BALL AT NEWBURY.

The triumph of two years ago encouraged the Freemasons of the town to give another ball, which came off on Friday evening last week, at the Town Hall, and although not quite so numerous attended, everything connected with the arrangements of the affair, and the pleasure of the company were most satisfactory, a result contributed in no small degree by the activity of the committee and their Hon. Secretary, Bro. G. J. Cosburn, and also the obliging attention of the M.C.'s of the evening, Messrs. J. Bance and Boyer. The falling off in numbers was to be accounted for by domestic bereavement, which prevented members of several families from attending. The ball room was tastefully adorned by Mr. G. Boyer, whose attachment to the Craft no doubt assisted his technical knowledge in adapting the decorations to the nature of the gathering. The whole length of the room was appropriated to the purposes of the ball. At the east end was hung the Masonic motto, "Audi videt tace," which, on this occasion, would possibly bear a more general than particular application. Festoons of evergreens and flowers looped with blue silver, and white rosettes were carried round the room, pendant from which were Masonic emblems and mottoes. The windows were filled in with handsome candelabra, in the recesses between each were consol glasses in elegant frames. The band occupied an orchestra at the west end of the room, and seats were carried round the room. The hall landing was converted into a saloon for refreshments, and the police station was turned into a reception room for gentlemen. An elegant supper was laid out with much taste in the Council Chamber, this most important department being entrusted to Mr. and Mrs. Balding, whose unremitting attentions to the company gave the utmost satisfaction. Dancing commenced about 10 to the strains of the band of the 1st Life Guards, the carte de danse containing an admirable selection of popular music, adding much to the spirit of the gathering, which broke up as the small hours of the morning began to wane.

The company, which numbered about 100, included the following:—Mr. Walter Arundell, Miss Balding, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Ayres, Mr. Aveling, Mr. Applegate, Bro. G. Boyer, P.M., P.P.G.P., Mrs. G. SCOTLAND.

CIRCULAR from the GRAND MASTER MASON of SCOTLAND, to the MEMBERS of the GRAND LODGE.

Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh.

R. W. SIR,

The following Notice of Motion was tabled at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, on 6th November, 1871, viz. :—

Moved by the M.W. the Grand Master the Right Honourable the Earl of Rosslyn, and seconded by Bro. Wm. Mann, R.W. Senior Grand Warden, "That it is desirable that a project for the gradual extinction of the Grand Lodge Debt, the Augmentation and Establishment of the Fund of Benevolence on a more permanent footing, and the Building Lodge Rooms for the assembling of the brethren throughout the Provinces, be taken into consideration at the next Quarterly Communication.

"N.B.—The particulars of the project will be printed and transmitted to the various lodges and Provincial Grand Masters in sufficient time to afford them the fullest information before the next Quarterly Communication."

In reference to the foregoing motion, I have to submit an explanation of the method by which it is proposed to accomplish the objects in view. In regard to—

1. Grand Lodge Debt.—This has been incurred by the erection of Freemasons' Hall, &c., for the benefit of the Scottish Craft at large, and, at the time it was incurred, it was anticipated that it would speedily be reduced and worked off. These hopes have been disappointed, and as a result the Grand Lodge is very much hindered in its progress and usefulness by this debt, and a very large sum of money, which might be used for benevolent purposes, is annually expended in payment of interest. It is therefore most desirable for the credit and welfare of the Grand Lodge, and the best interests of the entire Scottish Craft, that a strenuous effort be made to extinguish this heavy burden.

2. Fund of Benevolence.—This excellent scheme was instituted in 1846, and has, under the regulations then made, well served its purpose. It cannot, however, be denied that whilst standing before the world as an essentially Benevolent Society, the Grand Lodge takes but a very inferior position amongst the Charitable Institutions of Scotland, and considering the extension of the Craft and the many necessitous brethren and their families requiring aid and assistance, it is well worthy of the lodges throughout Scotland to band themselves together for the extension and enlargement of the General Scheme of Scottish Masonic Benevolence.

3. Lodge Halls throughout the Provinces.—Experience has taught the lesson that lodges meeting in Halls of their own, prosper more and discharge the duties of Masonry better, than those which are obliged to meet in Hotels and Taverns, and when this is so generally recognised and allowed on all hands, little need be said to advocate a project which proposes by degrees to supply this acknowledged want.

It has long been considered desirable that some bond of union should exist between the members of daughter lodges under the Scottish Constitution and the respective lodges to which such members belong, connecting each lodge with its members more closely than at present. In lodges holding under the English Constitution this is done by subjecting each member to an annual payment to his lodge, and in many cases these annual payments are of considerable amount. It is proposed to raise the funds required for the objects referred to by a similar method, but confining the annual payments to a sum so trifling as to be hardly felt by individual brethren. It is believed a sum of twopence per month, or 2s. per annum, contributed by each brother, will enable the Grand Lodge to proceed to carry into effect the objects proposed.

There are at present on the Grand Lodge Roll, in good working order, 387 lodges.

It has been found on a careful estimate, that of these lodges there are members on their respective Rolls, who are interested in Freemasonry, as follows, viz. :—

6 having	200	Members	1,200
121	"	100	"
167	"	50	"
73	"	30	"
20	"	15	"

From this it will be observed that a contribution of 2d. per month from each brother would yield an annual revenue of £2,414.

This amount may be raised through the ordinary Masonic organisation of lodges, and to a certain extent may be considered compulsory, but I should indeed be disappointed if a very considerable sum could not be added to it by the voluntary subscription and annual donations of individual members of the Craft who are interested in the welfare of the Order.

The allocation of the income to be thus obtained, to the different objects above referred to, it is intended to leave to the disposal and discretion, from time to time, of the Grand Lodge.

It has further occurred to me that something might be done towards improving the financial position of the Grand Lodge by reducing the expenditure incurred in the management of its affairs.

It is impossible for any one at all conversant with these affairs not to perceive that the duties might be performed by fewer officials at considerably less cost. At present the business is managed by a Grand Secretary at a salary of £315, and a Grand Clerk at a salary of £210—together, £525.

Now the labour, although no doubt considerable, is not of such a character as to require the services of both of these officials, and therefore, with every regard to the claims of these gentlemen, I propose to consolidate these offices, and to assign £325 a-year to a Grand Secretary, in full for his own services and those of any clerk he may require in the management of the business, by which a saving of £200 per annum would be effected, and I am convinced the efficiency of the office would be in no degree impaired.

I trust that the Masters of lodges, as well as individual brethren, will take this matter into consideration, and lend their zealous support towards carrying the scheme into practical effect.

I remain, R.W. Sir, yours fraternally,
ROSSLYN,
Grand Master.

MARK MASONRY.—On Monday se'nnight, at the meeting of the Freeman Lodge of Mark Master Masons, Mr. George Steele Golding was unanimously elected Worshipful Master of the lodge for the ensuing twelve months. At the next meeting he will be installed, when Bro. F. Binckes, of London, and several of the officers of the Grand Lodge of England and other leading members of the Craft from various parts of East Anglia are expected to be present.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

[With a view to increase the circulation, and consequently the usefulness, of THE FREEMASON, it is suggested that Lodges, &c., desiring reports to appear in the paper, should take a certain number of copies in proportion to the space required for the report.]

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Bedford Lodge, No. 157.—At the Freemasons' Hall, on the 12th inst., the installation meeting was held. There were present: Bros. J. Hills, W.M.; W. Holland, S.W.; J. Brander, S.D.; Briggs, J.D.; Levander, P.M., Treas.; S. Hills, P.M., Sec.; Millis, G. Brown, J. Smith, and T. Cubitt, P.M.'s; &c. Bro. J. Hills, W.M., opened the lodge. After the minutes had been unanimously confirmed, and Bro. Pollard (49) unanimously elected a joining member, Bro. George Brown, P.M., installed Bro. William Holland, W.M. The officers appointed are Bros. J. Brander, S.W.; Briggs, J.W.; Levander, P.M., Treas.; S. Hills, P.M., Sec.; L. Drew, S.D.; Selby, J.D.; Pollard, I.G.; and Longstaff, Tyler. A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. G. Brown, P.M., for the able manner in which he performed the installation ceremony. The usual five-guinea P.M.'s jewel was voted to Bro. J. Hills, I.P.M., when the lodge was closed, and a banquet was served. Visitors: Bros. E. Coste, P.M. 9; J. Goode, 49; F. Walters, P.M. 73; H. Jagar, P.M. 453; G. Motion, 453; G. Ayres, P.M. 112; W. Smeed, P.M. 946; J. Smith; &c.

Lodge of Joppa, No. 188.—On the 1st inst., this lodge held their monthly meeting at the Albion Hotel, Aldersgate. Bros. M. Alexander, W.M.; Berhowitz, S.W., W.M.-elect; Hunt, J.W.; Roberts, S.D.; Nathan, J.D.; Hudson, I.G.; P.M.'s Ahrends, Alexander, Levy, Abrahams, Phillips, and about ninety brethren, were present, besides numerous visiting brethren, amongst whom we noticed Bros. Dyke Clarke, Deputy G. Master of Turkey; Rev. Mr. Wilson; P. Beyfur, late P.M. and President of the Joppa Benevolent Fund; Barnett, W.M.; Harris, 209; Loewenstark, Dobson, Harris, and last, not least, Lazarus, P.P.G.W. The lodge being opened in a manner which we only can witness at the Lodge of Joppa, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, after which Bros. Aloof Pott, Blott, and Meyers were introduced as candidates for the second degree, and after the usual questions, they were solemnly passed to that degree. Next came the raising of Bros. Rossner, Jacobs, and Wright, and by five o'clock the W.M. initiated Messrs. Julius Bernstein, Frederick Bernstein, W. Beck, John Fawcett, and Thos. Miller. After such an amount of business, one would have thought the W.M. had done his duty for the evening, but, to the astonishment of all, at half-past six o'clock, he began to instal his successor, Bro. Berhowitz, as W.M., and he did this, not only to the satisfaction of his numerous friends, but even to his opponents—the latter feeling the wrong they had done him (Bro. Alexander), in opposing his election, so keenly that they moved that the lodge head a subscription for a testimonial to him on his retiring, which was carried with acclamation. In the course of the evening a large amount was subscribed amongst the brethren, which will be presented at next meeting. At half-past seven the brethren adjourned to the banquet-hall, where 110 sat down to a sumptuous dinner. Grace was first said in Hebrew by the W.M., followed by the S.W. in English. The W.M. proposed the usual loyal toast, "The Queen and Craft;" also, "The M.W. Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon," and "The Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon," which were heartily responded to.—At the next toast, "The Past Grand Masters, and his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," the W.M. took the opportunity of reminding the brethren that the Lodge of Joppa was the first lodge in the kingdom which offered prayer for the speedy recovery of his Royal Highness. The Lord of Grace had listened to the prayers of the country, the Craft, and the whole inhabitants of the globe, and he was glad to inform the brethren, according to all the latest bulletins, his Royal Highness is steadily recovering. Let us, therefore, now, offer our thanks to the Lord of Mercy for the grace given to the country and the Craft. He further said that, on consideration, we must be convinced, in spite of all medical art, there must be One to guide them; and let us trust that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will not overlook in future that the prayers of humanity, in churches, chapels, synagogues, mosques, &c., to the one God, in whatever form He may have been applied to, have done their utmost. And, next to the God of Grace, he had to thank his fellow-creatures for his recovery.—The toast of "The Visitors," was responded to by Bro. Dyke Clark, Deputy G.M. of Turkey, who said that, being a P.M. of Europe, Asia, and Africa, he had many opportunities of doing good to all nations, in interpreting in eight different languages, in reconciling man with man, and nation with nation; but, if he learned one lesson, it was, that Freemasons were respected everywhere.—During the evening, Bro. Van Noorden conducted the musical entertainment, assisted by Misses Patty Laven and Ada Percival, and Mr. Wiga. The song, "Our Noble Prince is Safe," by Bro. Louis Emanuel, was charmingly sung by the artistes. Before the lodge was closed, we had the great pleasure of hearing the Secretary, Bro. Albert, P.M., read the report of the Joppa Benevolent Fund, from which it appears that, after assisting, in the course of the past year, a brother with £100, and several others with smaller sums, they still hold invested property worth £1,000 for the benefit of brethren who should be in need and found worthy of assistance. This closed the lodge in perfect harmony, a very comfortable evening having been spent.

PROVINCIAL.

TRURO.—Lodge of Fortitude, No. 131.—On Tuesday, the 9th inst., the members of this lodge assembled at their lodge-room, Quay-street, Truro, to celebrate the festival of St. John. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. T. L. Dorrington, and after the initiation of a candidate and the usual business had taken place, the installation of Bro. Alfred W. May, as W.M., for the ensuing year was proceeded with. The installation ceremony was very ably performed by Bro. R. John, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., and the following officers were appointed: Bro. T. L. Dorrington, I.P.M.; W. Middleton, S.W.; N. B. Bullen, J.W.; J. C. R. Crewes, S.D.; H. B. Bullocke, Chap.; T. Chirgwin, P.M., P.P.G.J.W., Treas.; E. Treleaven, Sec.; J. James, D.C.; Clarke, I.G.; Wellington and Nankivell, Stewards; Langdon, Tyler. The brethren then adjourned to Bro. Bray's, Red Lion Hotel, where a banquet of the choicest description was prepared. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. May, the Senior and Junior Wardens, Bros. Middleton and Bullen, occupied their usual places. Such a gathering of distinguished Masons has not taken place for many years, there being present the R.W. the Prov. Grand Master, Bros. Augustus Smith, Sir F. M. Williams, M.P., P.G.W. of England; Reginald Rogers, D.P.G.M.; W. H. Jenkins, P.P.G.S.W.; W. J. Hughan, P.P.G. Sec.; T. Solomon, P.P.G.S.W.; E. T. Carlyon, P.G. Sec.; J. Hele, P.G. Org.; T. Shum, P.P.G.S.W. of Somerset, Col. Hogg, M.P.; representatives from the Phoenix Lodge, Truro; Druids, Redruth; Boscawen, Chacewater; Tregullow, St. Day, &c., &c. The usual loyal and other toasts were given and ably responded to, that of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales meeting with an enthusiastic reception. Altogether the evening passed most pleasantly, and the gathering augurs well for the future prospects of this lodge and Masonry in the province.

F. B. Puall, and E. Carlyon; among the visiting brethren were Bros. W. N. Abbot, W.M. 917; and F. B. Williams, 917. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read, Bro. P. Giles vacated the chair in favour of Bro. B. Brokenshar, who, kindly consented to perform the ceremony of installation of W.M., which he did in his customary efficient manner. Bro. W. Giles being the one whom the brethren had selected to rule over them for the ensuing year, on the conclusion of the beautiful ceremony, appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. E. G. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the Crown Hotel, where there awaited them a banquet, provided in good style by Bro. Raymond, to which Bro. S. Watson Taylor, of Erlstoke Park, had, as usual, contributed a good supply of venison and game. Binnie (S.W.), G. B. Aymore (J.D.), W. Bladen, J. H. S. Reed, P. Lovegrove, all of No. 209; and G. Mew, of No. 809, British Kaffaria. The lodge having been duly opened, the minutes of the previous meeting were read. The election of Bro. James Stevens, P.M. of the Macdonald Lodge, as an honorary member of the lodge, in consideration of Masonic services rendered, was unanimously confirmed, and at a subsequent period of the evening, Bro. Stevens was presented, by the Senior Past Master, to the brethren present, and expressed his acknowledgment for the high distinction conferred upon him. The lodge having been duly raised, the sublime degree of Master Mason was taken by Bros. Nicholson, Webber, Jeeves, and Kent. The ceremony of raising was most ably performed by the W.M., the impressiveness of the ritual being considerably enhanced by the appointments of the special chamber devoted to this portion of the Masonic rites. The traditional history having been delivered, the lodge was resumed to the first degree, and Bro. A. B. Wall was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year. Some further Masonic business was then disposed of, and the brethren adjourned to supper at the White Hart Hotel, after which a brief hour of social enjoyment and performance of loyal, Masonic, and charitable duties was spent before separation.

ALDEBURGH.—Adair Lodge, No. 936.—The annual meeting of the brethren of this lodge, took place on Friday, the 5th inst., for the purpose of installing Bro. Wm. Hayward, as W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. George Harper. The brethren subsequently adjourned to the White Lion Hotel, where an excellent banquet was prepared. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, the W.M., Bro. Hayward, in proposing the health of the Installing Master, referred in appropriate and impressive terms to the assistance rendered to the lodge by Bro. Harper, and presented him with a valuable P.M. jewel, as a token of respect which the brethren bear towards him, and in appreciation of his services during the two years he has filled the Master's chair.

ULVERSTON.—Lodge of Furness, No. 995.—The first regular monthly convocation for the year of this flourishing lodge took place in the Temple, Theatre-street, on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst., when there was a good number of brethren present. The W.M., Bro. R. Pearson, officiated as the humble representative of King Solomon. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bro. Robert Blake was duly passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, and the lodge being closed down to the first degree, Mr. John Hartley and Mr. William Kirkby were balloted for and duly elected as fit and proper persons to be admitted to the mysteries of the Order, and Mr. Hartley being present, was regularly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry according to ancient form. The ceremonies in both degrees being admirably rendered by the W.M., whose proficiency in the ritual has been frequently demonstrated by his efficient and careful working of the other offices he has previously passed through in the lodge. The W.M. was supported by his officers as follows: Bros. Roger Dodgson, S.W.; W. Harrison, J.W.; James Postlethwaite, S.D.; the J.D., John Gelderd, was absent through indisposition, and his post was filled by a Past Officer; Wm. Whiteside, I.G.; Paxton, Sec.; Brockbank, Treas.; Bell and Lockett, Stewards. The lectures in the first and second degrees were rendered in an able and impressive manner by Bro. Roger Dodgson, S.W., whose ability in the Craft promises well for his advancement to the higher post of W.M., the duties of which he is so thoroughly conversant with and so eminently qualified to perform. The W.M., at the close of the business, brought forward the subject of Bro. Hamer's (P.P.G. Treas. W.L.) Testimonial Fund, which he ably advocated, and explained that it was hoped to raise sufficient funds for the purpose of buying a scholarship, to be attached to one of the Charities, and to be called the "Hamer Scholarship," and thus perpetuate the name in that most Masonic of manners, a perpetual charity. A special circular to each member was resolved upon, and it is hoped a fair contribution will be made up. The lodge was then closed in solemn form.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, DURHAM.—Earl of Durham Lodge, No. 1274.—The second annual meeting of this prosperous lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Chester-le-street, on Wednesday, January 3rd. A goodly number of the brethren being present, and the minutes of the last regular meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. the Rev. John Crennell, P.M. 104, and member of 303 and 1274, who had consented to officiate as Installing Master, the W.M.-elect, Bro. A. Harkness, P.S.W., was duly presented by Bro. Blackett, P.M. 124, and member of this lodge, when Bro. After partaking of which, the loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received in a thoroughly fraternal spirit, a most agreeable and pleasant evening being brought to a close by the brethren separating at 10.30 p.m.

PRESTON.—Prince of Peace Encampment.—The regular assembly of the Knights of this encampment was held on Monday, the 15th January, at the Masonic Rooms, Bull Hotel, Preston. The E.C., Sir Kt. The ballot was taken for five candidates for the honour of admission into the Order, all of whom were unanimously elected, and the Eminent Dep. G. Commander, Sir Kt. Wright, having been entrusted with the baton of command, proceeded, in that faultless and impressive manner for which he is so justly distinguished, to instal as Knights Companions of the Order of the Temple, Comp. W. J. Sly, of the Rowley Chapter, Lancaster, and Comps. Captain Lockhart and S. T. Parkinson, of the Unanimity Chapter, Preston, the important duties of Expert being very effectively rendered by Sir Kt. Brockbank, and the symbols explained by Sir Kt. Dr. Moore. The members then proceeded to the choice of an Eminent Commander for the ensuing year, which resulted in the unanimous election of the present First Captain of the encampment, Sir Kt. Moore, to that office. The business of the evening being ended, the encampment was duly closed, and the members adjourned to refreshment.

INSTRUCTION.

The Lodge of Instruction held at Bro. James Avery's, Queen's Arms, Weston-street, London-bridge, which has been established some five years, continues to meet as usual every Monday evening, at eight o'clock. Extensive alterations have recently been made in the lodge-room, which now affords greater conveniences than formerly. The two rooms in the front of the house, on the first floor, have been made into one room, and every attention has been paid to the promotion of the comfort of the brethren. The three ceremonies only are worked at this lodge, and a good opportunity is afforded to any young Mason who wishes to work up.

EASTERN STAR.—The Fifteen Sections will be worked at the Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction, held at the Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, on Monday evening, 5th February, at seven o'clock, by fifteen members of the Metropolitan Lodge. Bro. Brett will preside as W.M. on the occasion. These friendly visits of different lodges, for the purpose of working the sections, were commenced by the Doric Lodge and the United Pilgrims' Lodge of Instruction, and will undoubtedly tend to secure that uniformity of working which is so desirable in Craft Masonry. We trust that the brethren of the Eastern Star will give their Metropolitan visitors a hearty greeting.

CONFIDENCE.—The Fifteen Sections will be worked on Wednesday next, January 24th, at Bro. Forster's, the Railway Tavern, London-street, City, on which occasion Bro. Stacey, P.M., will preside. To commence at seven o'clock punctually.

The "Royal Albert Edward" Lodge, No. 1362, will be consecrated at the Town Hall, Redhill, on Thursday next, the 25th inst., at 3.30 p.m.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Medicinal Efficacy.—In cases of glandular and other diseases arising from hereditary taints, the use of these healing and purifying remedies is always followed by the most gratifying results. The Ointment must be well rubbed upon the skin as near as possible to the ailing part, and the Pills should be taken every night in alterative rather than purgative doses. These excellent medicaments will then act in unison, quell the local mischief, re-establish purity and order through the system, and spare unmerited suffering or untimely death. Scrofula, Scurvy, and the most loathsome class of skin diseases, are removable by the cleansing, correcting, and soothing influences of Holloway's well known preparations which are admirably adapted for delicate constitutions.—[Advt.]

Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons or their Widows.

ELECTION, MAY, 1872.

THE favour of your Votes and Interest is earnestly solicited on behalf of

WILLIAM ALLISON, AGED 62 YEARS.

He has been a Mason 27 years, having been initiated into the Barton Lodge, No. 733, in Hamilton, Canada West, in 1844; Exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter, No. 733, in 1845; Joined the Union Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, in 1848. Became a Knight Templar in 1856. He suffered a considerable time from disease of the throat, rendering it necessary for him, thirteen years ago, to undergo an operation; the result of which and old age unfits him to contribute anything towards his own support. He is entirely dependent on the small sum he receives from three Lodges and one Chapter as their Tyler. He was formerly in good circumstances, having been a Foreman in a Boot and Shoemakers' Warehouse, in Canada.

The case is strongly recommended by

- Bro. the Right Worshipful FREDERICK PATTISON, P.G. Warden; 57 1/2 Old Broad-street, E.C. + G. BOLTON, P.M., 169, 147, 1155, P.Z. 169; Russell-street, Rotherhithe. + C. COUPLAND, P.M. 913, A.S. BEATRICE MARY WRAY, AGED 8.

Her father, Bro. WILLIAM WRAY, formerly a ship-builder at Burton Stather, Lincolnshire, was a Subscribing Member of the Humber Lodge, No. 57, Hull, and the Minerva Lodge, No. 259, Hull, died suddenly of apoplexy on the 5th June, 1871. His widow is left with three children, all under fourteen years of age (another shortly expected), with very inadequate means to educate and support them.

ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.

Bro. Carpenter's admirable articles on "Israelitism and Freemasonry," and the great circulation attained by Mr. Edward Hines' recent publications on the "Identification of the English Nation with the Lost House of Israel," are proofs of the great interest this question is exciting in the public mind. That this is not an ephemeral feeling, and that it is widely spreading and permeating the mass of the English nation, is manifested from the eagerness with which every scrap of information on the subject is seized, examined, and discussed by thoughtful men.

As some assistance to those who are desirous of studying the subject, it may be useful to know some of the literature bearing on the question.

First in order, as well as in importance, comes the Bible, which gives a detailed account of the destruction of the kingdom of Israel, and the deportation of the ten tribes by the Assyrians. The Bible also contains various prophecies relating to the future fate of the rebellious Israelites and their final restoration to the land of their birth.

In the books of the Apocrypha, we also find reference to members of the ten tribes in their captivity. If these books are not to be received as inspired, and of equal authority with the canonical books of the Old Testament, they must, at least, be placed on an equality with profane history, or tradition, and with the information afforded by Assyrian, Babylonian, or Persian records.

Next in order come those commentaries which seek to explain the difficulties and apparent discrepancies of the sacred narrative, and the language of the prophecies relating to the subject in question. Of all of these (the number of which is "legion") there is no work more useful to the student of the subject than the Rev. M. Geneste's "Parallel Histories of Judah and Israel," with explanatory notes. This work will save the biblical student much time and trouble in finding the scriptural texts bearing on the incidents connected with the rival houses of Judah and Israel. Mr. Geneste does not propound any theory as to the fate of the lost ten tribes after their deportation (nor does he, in fact, particularly allude to it), but confines himself to collating and comparing the Scripture narrative as it occurs in parallel passages in the books of the Kings, Chronicles, and the prophecies concerning the two houses of Judah and Israel. This work may therefore be considered as a compendious way of arranging the biblical history and prophecies, without attempting to offer any explanation of the probable fate of the Israelitish nation any further than is contained in the sacred writings. There are, of course, numerous other commentaries which give explanations of difficult texts, and from most, if not from all, of these the attentive reader (with a mind prepared) will be able to pick up useful pieces of information on the subject. Mr. Matthew Huberton's "Historical Dissertation on the Prophetic Scriptures of the Old Testament," published in 1840, may be read with advantage, as he refers to the captivity, dispersion, and final restoration of the whole Israelitish nation. He examines the prophecies relating to these events, and attempts to denote the time when the restoration shall take place.

In studying the prophecies connected with this subject, we cannot be too careful not to confound those relating to the Jews (the tribe of Judah) with those relating to the house of Israel (often addressed as Ephraim). We must also remember that, on the occasion of the rebellion of Jeroboam, one tribe of the house of Israel (Benjamin) adhered to the King of Judah, as was distinctly pretold by the prophet Ahijah should be the case, although Benjamin, at first, went with the rest of the house of Israel. We read in the 1st Book of Kings, chap. 12, that, when all Israel found that Rehoboam would not hearken unto them, they said, "What portion have we in David? Neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse. To your tents, O Israel. Now see to thine own house, David." We read further on: "There was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only." In the 1st book of Kings, 11th chap., we read that the Lord was angry with Solomon because of his idolatries, and He said: "I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant, Jereboam. Howbeit, I will not rend away all the kingdom, but will give one tribe (Benjamin) to thy son." Again, when the prophet Ahijah meets Jereboam, he tells him God says, "I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes unto thee. But he shall have one tribe (Benjamin) for my servant David's sake." The prophet, after stating that this disruption of the kingdom shall not take place in Solomon's lifetime, again says: "I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes. And unto his son (representing the tribe of Judah) I will give one tribe" (Benjamin).

We accordingly find afterwards that one tribe (Benjamin) returned to their allegiance, for we learn that Rehoboam, in order "to bring back the kingdom," assembled "all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, to fight against the house of Israel." It will be seen that a distinction is made between the two tribes, Judah and Benjamin. They are spoken of as separate houses or tribes. The tribe of Benjamin must not, therefore, be confounded with the house of Judah, although they were acting and continued to act, in concert. Benjamin is never spoken of, or addressed, as the house of Judah, but always as the house of Israel; and when all the tribes, excepting the house of Judah, are spoken of, they are called, collectively, all Israel—that is, the ten tribes and Benjamin. If this distinction of Judah from Benjamin be borne in mind, many texts, not only in the Old Testament, but in the New also, will be rendered much more intelligible than heretofore. Christ, although belonging to the tribe of Judah, was rejected and crucified by the Jews, his kinsmen. It is said, "He came to his own (the tribe of Judah), but his own received him not." He therefore went into Galilee to the Israelites of the tribe of Benjamin, and He also sent His disciples "to the lost sheep of the house of Israel"—that is, He sent them first to the tribe of Benjamin, and ultimately to the ten tribes which were scattered through the nations.

And, here, it is important to notice, that, at that time, it was well known that many of the descendants of the ten tribes were living in Armenia, and other parts of Asia Minor. The Nestorians of Lakeban have a tradition that St. Thomas the Apostle laboured among them, and converted many to Christianity, and ultimately became their bishop. The memory of the Apostle St. Thomas is consequently greatly revered among the Nestorian Christians. Dr. Grant, in his "Nestorians," says that among, or in the immediate vicinity of, the Nestorian Christians there are numerous families of Jews, or, to speak more correctly, persons professing the Jewish religion; but whether they are members of the tribe of Judah or of Benjamin, or some other of the Israelitish tribes, he does not inform us, as, perhaps, he had no means of ascertaining.

After the Bible and the Apocrypha, the next works, in the order of time, are the histories of Herodotus and Josephus. The former does not, by name, refer to either the Jews or Israelites; he does not even mention the name of Jerusalem, but it is believed he alludes to that city under the name of Cadytis. Herodotus, in his extant work, refers us to his "History of Assyria," which, no doubt, contained much valuable information about the Israelitish nation. The wholesale deportation, and the manners and customs, of this peculiar people could hardly have escaped the notice of so acute an observer as Herodotus, and his "History of Assyria" would, no doubt, have thrown great light upon the fate of the Israelites subsequent to their captivity, but this work is, unfortunately, lost to the world. The extant works of Herodotus are, therefore, only useful to us by affording information of the migrations of certain eastern tribes, such as the Scythians and Getae. The Cimmerians of the Black Sea, who were the ancestors of the Cymri, or Kymri, and who formed the ancient inhabitants of Northern France, Britain, and Ireland, are supposed to be descended from the Scythic race, while the Getae were the progenitors of the Goths and Teutons, from whom the German and Anglo-Saxon races are descended. The Getae, or Goths, came from the East, and from the very region where the ten tribes were located by their Assyrian conquerors.

Josephus's "History of the Antiquities of the Jews" was mainly taken from the historical books of the Old Testament, amplified, on some points, from other sources to which he had access, but he does not materially assist us in our investigation. A reference to other authors must be deferred to another occasion.

FREEMASONRY and JACOBITISM.

[A Lecture delivered at Glasgow, on the 9th January, 1872, under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, No. 69.]

BY ERROL.

In studying the popular Masonic accounts of the Order, the student's attention is arrested by manifold historical absurdities, and, to use a mild term, gross perversions of the fact. Personages are dragged in, either as Grand Masters or patrons, who never heard of our Society, and an importance is given to it, during the pre-Christian and the Middle Ages to which it can lay no claim. Indeed, till the beginning of last century, our Society, as it at present exists, was unknown; and the operative masons neither possessed the organisation, nor the public consideration, which the speculative now do. This, I believe, is the received opinion of all candid Masonic students. In fact, this is amply proved from a Crown charter granted in the fifteenth century, during the reign of Henry VI., wherein the masons are styled "labourers." We also know that their position among the Serving Brethren, the third class of the Knights Templars, was insignificant, and not to be compared with the smiths, farriers, or even the cooks. But, while denying that speculative Freemasonry is older than a couple of centuries, it must be kept in mind that much of the peculiar philosophy and doctrines adopted by its founders are as old as the first institution of society. Among the Jewish Essenes, among the ancient Egyptian and Greek mystagogues, among the Roman sodalities, and the societies of the Middle Ages, both Moorish and Christian, such as the Rosicrucian, the principles of brotherly love, relief, and truth were well known and practised. But it was when, by the progress of civil and religious liberty, the conservatism of guilds became dissolved, and the fetters which, under the feudal law, bound the different grades of society in iron bands, became loosed, that those principles settled in the building fraternity, and became the noble spirits which inhabit the temple of Freemasonry.

We find the name of Prince Charles Edward Stewart figuring among the votaries of Masonry, and preceding the rules of the Scottish Knights Templars an interesting, but most fallacious account of his connection with that Order. But this account was penned as a squib by the late Bro. Professor Aytoun, who always acknowledged it as an excellent piece of fooling, and no one was more surprised than he that such a manifest fable should have been accepted by any one as fact. The statement of Athole having robed him in the white cloak of the Templars is absurd, as that noblemen was far distant from Edinburgh at the period in question, and we suspect that the Prince had other business to attend to at that particular time than in attending meetings of the Freemasons or of a chivalric order. It must also be borne in mind that the Prince's proceedings while in Edinburgh are perfectly well known, and, from the circumstances which I am about to lay before you, the proof is positive that he had no connection in 1745, either in Scotland or elsewhere, with any such secret Society.

In 1717 the Grand Lodge of England was instituted, and, in 1736, that of Scotland. A complete account of the proceedings which led to the foundation of the latter will be found in the minutes of the Canongate Kilwinning, in which lodge William St. Clair, of Roslin, was initiated, and owing to the connection of his ancestors with the operative Masonry of the midland counties of Scotland, his claim to be the first Scottish Grand Master was pressed to a successful issue by the brethren of his mother lodge. Now, turning to the minutes of Grand Lodge. During the years 1736 to 1750, the only events of importance mentioned are, the starting of a charity fund for the relief of distressed brothers; the interest which the Craft at large took in the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary; a claim on the part of Mother Kilwinning to have the first, instead of the second, place on the roll of daughter lodges; and the foundation of a Provincial Grand Lodge in Turkey. Not one single statement appears relative to Jacobitism, and even the officers appear to have been Hanoverians, with one exception. It may be advanced that, in the doubtful circumstance of the Prince making good his father's claim to the crown, it would have been imprudent to have minuted anything, which, in the case of defeat, would have brought the Order into peril with the powers. The argument is sound, had the Order been at all Jacobitical; but this it never was. It held firmly by its principles of non-interference with Church and State; and so well was this established, that, when, in 1779 and 1817, acts were passed for the suppression of secret societies, a special clause was inserted in these, specially exempting the Freemasons from the penalties. But although the Freemasons, as a body, held loyal to the House of Hanover, many members joined the Stewart cause, and attempted, by their connection with Freemasonry, to make it a vehicle for the propagation of their favourite views. One of these brethren was Murray of Broughton, a member of the Canongate Kilwinning, the brethren of which lodge, to a man—so far as can be known—were Jacobites.

I have stated that Prince Charles had no connection with the Freemasons, nor could he, with his religious bias, have had any sympathy with them. Although their interests pointed to an adherence to the Protestant faith, the last Stewarts were staunch and rigid Papists. From James II. of Great Britain and Ireland—of whom Louis XIV. of France was accustomed to say, with a sneer, that he was a man who had given three crowns for a mass—down to Henry Cardinal, Duke of York, who died in the present century, a pensioner of the British Crown, not one would abandon his religion, even for the throne of these islands. In 1738, Clement XII. published the first of those stage Papal bulls, of which we have heard so many thundering from the hand of the gentle Pius IX. in these days, about our Masonic and anti-Papist ears. As a Roman Catholic, Prince Charles could not have been a Freemason, for, although in the Romish creed, the end justifies the means, it is questionable whether the Pope, even in the peculiar circumstances of the case, and that from the Roman exchequer funds were provided for the conquest of Britain, would have granted a dispensation in the Prince's favour. Doubtless, Rome was profoundly interested in the success of the Stewart cause, and which she only abandoned on the dawning prospect of religious equality being permitted her votaries in these isles; but the spread of free-thought in Italy, and other Romish countries, now triumphant, touched her to the quick, and made her wary of seeming any-ways the friend to so redoubtable an ally of civil and religious anti-papistical liberty. It has also been said that the Chevalier Ramsay, a devoted adherent of the Stewarts, was not only a Freemason, but the inventor of several Masonic degrees. Mr. William Pinkerton, in Notes and Queries, demolished this theory, for Ramsay, like his Prince, became a Roman Catholic, and died one. The Knights Templars, by a process most illegal and unjustifiable, conducted with a barbarity unparalleled in history, were dissolved by Papal warrant in 1312. The members of the Order entered that of the Hospitallers of St. John, and ceased to have any independent existence. In Scotland, by the form of legal documents, in deeds relating to Temple Lands, in the possession of the Maltese Knights, the Templars are mentioned as conjoint with the Hospitallers, but never alone. But, even admitting, although it is an absurdity, that Templars existed in the days of Queen Mary, we know that the Maltese Order became then extinct in Scotland; and I defy any one to produce evidence of the meeting of a preceptory, commandery, or chapter of either of the Orders of the Temple or Hospital, between the date of the erection of Torphichen into a temporal barony, and the end of last century. Prince Charles could not have belonged to the Templars any more than to the Freemasons, and those who make such rash statements display, not only their ignorance of the commonest of historical studies, but a self-instructed credulity, or an atrocity of falsehood scarcely to be conceived. We are to believe that the Church of Rome, the infallible, had quietly broken through the decrees of the past, and, without explanation, by permitting the Prince to become a Freemason and a Templar, acknowledged the errors of opinion of former Popes and Councils. This is absurd. It is, perhaps, an ungracious task to disabuse the fond dreams of many Masons of the truth of such stories; but, in a Society such as ours, founded upon the pillar of truth, the less we have to do with falsehood the better.

We have now to deal with the Freemasons of 1745, who were Jacobite; and, first, we will deal with such scraps of authentic history as we possess, and then, as an interesting consideration, take up those which are of a legendary kind. The state of society in 1745 was one of great public disturbance. The government was anything but popular; the Scots were dissatisfied with the Union, which they would have gladly seen repealed, so that the nobles and gentry might have resided more at home, and have spent their money among their own people, rather than among the "fause Southeran." In fact, Scotland then was not unlike the Ireland of to-day. Military discipline and depots were unknown in the country, and all that could be called into effect to quell a riot was a patrol of militia—of whom Dryden writes:

"Mouths without hands, maintain'd at vast expense,
In peace a charge, in war a weak defence;
Stout, once a month, they march, a blustering band,
And ever, but in time of need (like our police) at hand."

The town guard of Edinburgh, Pontius Pilate's Pretorians, were about the best specimens of these gentry, and even they did not consider it detrimental to their valour to retire to the Heart of Midlothian before a hailstorm of snowballs, or the more stinging substitute, in summer, of a thunderblast of stones. The country tempted an invader, who possessed the slightest military knowledge, to a walk over to victory, and had Prince Charles, instead of retreating at Derby, marched onwards to London, George would have been in Hanover, and "the King would have enjoyed his own again." But a curse lay upon the Jacobite cause, and success, because undeserved, smiled not upon their arms.

One who plays a conspicuous character in the Jacobite drama was John Murray of Broughton. He was initiated in the Canon-gate Kilwinning, and took an active part in the proceedings of his mother lodge, and of the Grand Lodge. In 1743, when James, Earl of Wemyss, was appointed Grand Master, he was installed Junior Grand Warden. He was a professed adherent of Prince Charles, and was acquainted with all the schemes of the Jacobites. When the Prince raised the standard of the Stewarts in Scotland, Murray joined him, and was appointed his Secretary. The Prince's proclamations were all signed by him, and one would have thought that, not only was he a devoted adherent of the Stewarts, but one certain, if captured by the Hanoverians, to have merited immediate death. Whilst Lovat, Kilmarnock, and the gallant Balmerino fell victims to the conqueror's passion for blood, the sleek and politic Murray of Broughton, the Prince's Secretary—and of whom he talks in his proclamation dated the 24th day of September, 1745, from "our Palace of Holyrood House," inviting all traitors to come and be forgiven by presenting themselves within twenty days to "our trusty and beloved Councillor, John Murray of Broughton, Esq."—this same "trusty and well-beloved" received from the Hanoverian government a pardon. The reason for this is plain. Murray, from the first, was in the pay of the Hanover party, and sold his Prince and his party, just as Menteith sold Wallace. But although thus reaping in reward and pardon the fruits of his villainy, we find his brethren of the Canon-gate Kilwinning taking notice of him. In 1746, there is a minute bearing that the lodge had been closed for about eighteen months, "on account of the troubles of the times," and simultaneously with this, Murray's name, wherever it occurs in the records, is carefully penned through, and written against it, "expunged with the unanimous consent of the brethren of the lodge." There it stands to this day, and the obliterating ink, as if ashamed of concealing the traitor's name, and as if desirous to hold it up to the reprobation of future ages, has faded with years, while the traitor's name, in darker hues, presents its ill-omened characters to the gaze of the curious reader. And, brethren, these are all the facts that I have been able to obtain of authentic information concerning a long-boasted connection between the Freemasons and the Jacobites. However willingly the adherents of the Stewarts would have made a tool of Freemasonry for the advancement of their schemes, the Brotherhood—even those who were Jacobite themselves—scorned to infringe upon the principles of the Order; and this is another proof of the profound ignorance and absurdity of Pope and priest, who attempt to prove us to be subverters of lawful authority, and dangerous to morality.

LODGE OF ISRAEL, No. 205.—A full report of the Installation of Bro. Michael Emanuel as W.M. of this lodge will appear in our next impression.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

FESTIVAL OF LODGE OF PERSEVERANCE, No. 345, BLACKBURN.

The Anniversary Festival of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated by the Lodge of Perseverance, No. 345, at the Old Bull Hotel, on Thursday, January 11th, 1872. The first business was the installation of Bro. Robert C. J. Duckworth as W.M. of the lodge for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed in a most impressive manner by Bro. Franklin Thomas, in the presence of an unusually large assemblage of P.M.'s of that and several neighbouring lodges, and of nearly eighty of the brethren. The following brethren were appointed and invested as officers during the ensuing year: Bros. Denis Towers, I.P.M.; George Duerden, S.W.; Edwin Halliwell, J.W.; Rev. Charles Hughes, Chap.; Charles Tiplady, P.M., Treas.; Nicholas Gillett, Sec.; Thomas Robinson, P.M., Dir. of Cers.; Thomas Bramley, S.D.; Hy. Shuttleworth, J.D.; John Ingham, I.G.; James Pye and Henry Hindle, Stewards; Wm. Croft, Tyler.

After the ceremony of installation, a procession was formed, and the brethren proceeded to banquet. This was of a most elegant and recherche description, admirably cooked, and served by a most efficient staff of waiters. At the conclusion of the banquet, the brethren adjourned to the large upper room in the hotel, where their number was augmented by several brethren who had been unable to attend earlier. Bro. Duckworth, the newly-installed W.M., presided, and assisted by some of the P.M.'s, the usual routine of patriotic and Masonic toasts was proposed and duly honoured.

Bro. John Procter, P.M., in proposing "The Health of the Past and Present Prov. Grand Officers of East Lancashire," said he felt a peculiar pleasure in doing so, because they had had reason, in past years, to feel that this part of the province had been in a great measure neglected, inasmuch that, for something like twenty years, only two offices had been trusted in this town and district. He was, however, glad to say now that a fair share of honour had been distributed amongst the three lodges attached to this town during the visit of Prov. Grand Lodge last year. They knew that Freemasonry was a progressive science, and after brethren had distinguished themselves in serving the various offices in their lodge, it was very gratifying for them to be called to bear office in the Prov. Grand Lodge. They had present that evening the greater number of those brethren who had been so distinguished, and he had very great pleasure in proposing their good healths.

Bro. Clarkson, P.M., and P.P.G. Dir. of Cers., in responding, thanked the brethren very heartily for the manner in which they had received the toast. He thought he might say that the Blackburn brethren had faithfully discharged their duty as Prov. Grand Officers. He himself, and most of the others, had, he believed, attended every meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge, both the regular and extraordinary meetings; they had not only done so during their year of office, but were at all times ready to obey the summons of the Prov. Grand Master or his Deputy, whenever their services might be required.

Bro. Robert Hopwood Hutchinson, P.M., and P.P.S.G.W., whose rising was greeted with great acclamation, said: I have no doubt that the enthusiastic greeting which you have just given to me is owing to the fact of your knowing that I am about to introduce the subject of the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. Thomas. I purpose making only a few remarks on the subject, and that I may be quite in order I will introduce a toast which should have appeared upon the programme, but which has been omitted, namely, "The Health of Bro. Thomas, as Installing Master on this occasion." You, all of you, have been witnesses of the admirable manner in which he has performed that ceremony, and I therefore, need not dwell upon it, but will confine my remarks to the subject of the testimonial which is about to be presented to our worthy brother. In cases of this kind there are always two difficulties to be especially guarded against. The one is that the present shall not be so costly as to make the recipient feel a delicacy about receiving it, or an overwhelming sense of obligation under it; and the other is that its value should not be so inconsiderable as to render it unworthy either of the giver or the receiver, nor yet of the services which it is intended to acknowledge. I think that, in the present case, the happy medium has been found. The testimonial has assumed a twofold character—one part of it being purely Masonic, the other being of a nature in which, not only Bro. Thomas, but also his family, can participate. Bro. Thomas has been amongst us now for something like ten years, and during that time, as you may all know, he has rendered eminent services to the lodge, in sickness and in health, oftentimes, as it must have happened, at his own inconvenience. He has always been ready to help us, bringing to the service of the lodge the talents and the energy which he has so well devoted to his own business, and which have been attended with so much success in both. Bro. Thomas has shown that it is possible to possess an earnest zeal for Freemasonry, and to give great attention to the duties of the lodge, without, in any way, neglecting one's own personal affairs. After some other eulogistic remarks, he said he felt that he could say much more as to Bro. Thomas's conduct in the lodge; how studious he had been, both by precept and by example, to promote peace and good-will and kindly feeling amongst the brethren, but he knew that it would be more in accordance with the wishes of the brethren as well as with Bro. Thomas's own feelings if he abstained from passing any very high eulogium upon him. He would, therefore, conclude by asking them to drink his good health, long life and success to him.

The toast having been drunk amidst the most enthusiastic cheering,

Bro. Denis Towers, the retiring W.M., then rose and said he felt the greatest possible pleasure in presenting on behalf of the lodge the dessert service then before him, consisting of thirty-three pieces, hoping that Bro. Thomas would accept it as a small acknowledgment of his services to the lodge, and as a testimonial of the high esteem and regard in which he was held by the brethren. He might mention that he had had subscriptions offered to him by brethren of other lodges, and he had no doubt that if the lodges in the immediate neighbourhood had been solicited a very large sum might have been realized. That, however, was not their object, they wished that the gift should come from their own lodge, and that the subscriptions should be strictly confined to their own members. He was happy to be able to say that the brethren had all most willingly responded to his request; the sum required had been raised without difficulty, and he was happy to bear his testimony to the cheerful alacrity which every brother had shown in contributing towards the object they had in view. In conclusion, he begged to present the dessert service in the name, and coupled with the best wishes, of the brethren of the lodge.

Bro. R. C. J. Duckworth, W.M., next presented to Bro. Thomas a very handsome P.M.'s jewel, begging him to accept it in the name of the brethren. He placed it on his (Bro. Thomas's) breast as a symbol of that brighter and better jewel within, namely the heart of a true and genuine Freemason. He hoped that Bro. Thomas might live many years to wear that jewel, and to render those services to the Craft in general, and to their own lodge in particular, in the future, as he had been always ready and willing to do in the past.

Bro. Thomas, P.M., P.P.S.G.D. Kent, P.P.G. Reg. Oxon., who was greeted with quite an ovation, said he would in the first place thank the brethren for the very enthusiastic manner in which they had received the toast of his health as Installing Master on that occasion. He need not say with how great pleasure he had always performed the ceremony of installation in their lodge. It had been his happy privilege during the ten years of his connection with them, to have taken some part, supreme or subordinate, in every installation that had taken place. It had always proved a source of pleasure and satisfaction to him, because in every case he knew that he had been instrumental in placing in the chair of their lodge a Master "who would reflect honour on their choice," and he assured them that he felt, in placing Bro. Duckworth in the chair that day, that he was in every respect worthy of that high position, and worthy also to succeed to that long line of good men and true Masons who had preceded him in that chair. Referring to the very kind manner in which Bro. Hutchinson had spoken of him in proposing the toast, he said that he was not a little astonished at the remark that he (Bro. Hutchinson) would abstain from passing any very high eulogium upon him. If the greater portion of Bro. Hutchinson's speech did not consist in a succession of high eulogiums upon him, he must confess that he did not know what the word eulogium meant. But he could not "lay the flattering unction to his soul" so far as to imagine for a moment that he had in any measure deserved one half the kind things which Bro. Hutchinson as well as Bro. Towers, and Bro. Duckworth, had been pleased to say of him. He could not see how consistently with his character as a Freemason he could have done otherwise, or done less than he had done. One of the first lessons taught him at his initiation was that he was to assist a friend or brother in his time of need, so far as it might fairly be done without injury to himself or his connections. If that was the rule of his conduct to individual brethren, the same rule applied to them collectively. The lodge had need of his services; it was his duty to render those services, and he had done so. But if he could not be so vain as to think that all Bro. Hutchinson's remarks applied to him, there was one to which he thought he might fairly lay claim, and that was a zeal in the cause of Freemasonry and fidelity to their lodge. Approaching, then, the subject of the testimonial, he said he felt himself almost overwhelmed with the difficulty of the task that lay before him. They must suppose that, in his long experience in Freemasonry, extending now over more than thirty years, many occasions must have arisen upon which it was necessary for him to address his brethren both in the lodge and at the banquet table, and he had generally found words sufficient to enable him to convey the ideas which it was his duty to bring before them. The present occasion, however, was one so far removed from the ordinary course of things, that he trusted, although he used a somewhat hackneyed form of words, he used them in their truest sense, when he said that he felt utterly unable to express all that the feelings of his heart would dictate. Of one thing, however, let him assure them that, in all that he had done in their service, be it little or much, valuable or otherwise, all had been done without hope or expectation of reward, and that until it was mentioned some time ago by Bro. Procter in the lodge, he had no reason to expect that such a thing was likely to take place. For, be it remembered, that that was not a testimonial-giving lodge; only once before, during the ten years that he had known the lodge, had any testimonial been given, and that was to Bro. Tiplady, by whom, as all knew, it was well earned by eminent services rendered by him on the Charity Committee. This fact, he said, greatly enhanced the value of their gift in his estimation. Well, he said that he had simply done his duty. He felt pleasure to add that, in his case, duty and pleasure had gone hand in hand, for he must say that the years he had spent with them in Freemasonry had been, upon the whole, exceedingly happy ones. The horizon had not always been quite as clear and serene as might have been wished; but considering the number of the members, and taking the average of men's dispositions, it could not be expected that, in the somewhat prominent position he had occupied, he should have succeeded in pleasing all; but he was glad to feel assured that he had succeeded in that which had been the great end and object of his ambition, the esteem and the regard of the great majority of his brethren. The testimonial before him was the best possible proof of this, and, as such, he should always highly value it. Intrinsically valuable as that present was, he felt that it was more valuable still as an incentive to himself and to others to do their duty in any position which the duties of the lodge might require. He further felt that the value of that testimonial would not be confinied to that generation; he hoped that it would be handed down in his family from father to son for a long time to come, and that his children's children might feel when they looked upon it, that a conscientious discharge of duty rarely failed, even in this world, in reaping its reward. Again, he begged them to accept that feeble expression of his gratitude, and to assure them that from his heart he thanked them for all the kindness he had received at their hands.

The testimonial consisted of two very elegant silver fruit stands, with glass dishes on the top, twelve dessert knives and forks, elegantly chased, with mother-of-pearl handles, four table-spoons, with shell bowls parcel-gilt, a cream ladle and sugar-sifter to match, and a pair of grape scissors—all fitted into a very handsome oak case, with silver plate and inscription on the top. Also a Past Master's jewel of a beautiful and novel design, and chaste workmanship, which bore on its back the following inscription: "Presented by the brethren of the Lodge of Perseverance, No. 345, of Blackburn, to Bro. Franklin Thomas, P.M., in recognition of his services to the lodge during ten years. Jan. 11th, 1872."

Bro. Robinson, P.M., briefly proposed "The Healths of the W.M. and Officers of the Lodge of Perseverance, No. 345."

Bro. R. C. J. Duckworth, W.M., in his reply, stated that the ceremony which he had passed through that day had made an impression on his mind which would not be soon effaced; that he himself, and he thought he might speak for his officers also, had entered upon the duties of their respective offices with the fullest determination to perform those duties faithfully, and to the best of their abilities, and that he trusted when he came to the end of his year of office he might feel the same satisfaction, in the sense of having performed his duty as his predecessor in the chair had reason to do.

Bro. Thomas, in proposing "The I.P.M., and the P.M.'s, of the Lodge of Perseverance, No. 345," said: I feel pleased that the W.M. has placed this toast in my hands, because, from the position I have occupied in the lodge, I have been thrown into such close and intimate communication with the brethren who have severally occupied the chair during the last ten years, that I am enabled to speak with more confidence than almost any other brother present, on the zeal and assiduity with which those brethren have discharged the onerous duties of their position. As I shall associate the name of the I.P.M. with this toast, and ask him to respond to it, I shall conclude what I have to say by speaking more particularly of his performance of the duties of the chair during the last year. I think he must acknowledge that the prosperity of this lodge, upon which we have all so much reason to congratulate ourselves, is mainly due to the excellent management and care of Bro. Towers, while his urbanity, combined with that firmness decision which mark his character, has tended very much to strengthen and cement the bond of good-feeling and good-fellowship which now happily prevails in the lodge.

Bro. Towers, P.M., in replying, thanked the brethren very much for the kind response which they had given to the toast which had been proposed in so flattering a manner by Bro. Thomas. He was glad to be enabled to say that his year of office had been a very happy one. He had been ably supported by his officers and by the whole of the P.M.'s, and could but again congratulate the lodge upon its general prosperity and upon the state of its finances.

Bro. Tiplady, P.M., and P.P.G. Treas., proposed "The Masonic Charities" in a very forcible and eloquent speech, in the course of which he congratulated the lodge upon the fact of their having been enabled, during the last two years, to endow the Master and Senior Wardens' chairs with a Governorship in perpetuity of the Girls' School and Boys' School, respectively, a circumstance extremely gratifying to himself, and one of which he considered that the lodge might feel justly proud.

Bro. Brierley proposed "The Visiting Brethren," and, in doing so, took occasion to say that he had noticed, not unfrequently, in the replies to such toasts as he had the honour to propose, that the visiting brethren expressed a sense of obligation to their entertainers. In his view, however, the obligation lay quite on the other side, and that they felt much indebted to the visiting brethren from the neighbouring lodges for the pleasure they had conferred upon them in honouring them with their presence on that occasion.

Bro. Whittaker, W.M. of Lodge 462, Accrington, replied, in a very appropriate speech, on behalf of the visiting brethren.

Bro. Hayward, W.M. of Lodge 1145, Accrington, in proposing "Prosperity to Lodge 345," said he must observe that, on all sides, there were the evidences of material prosperity in the lodge. The bountiful repast, of which they had had the pleasure of partaking, could not have been provided by any lodge which had not the command of great resources. He must congratulate the lodge also upon its admirable working, which he had witnessed that day and on a former occasion, and he must further congratulate the lodge upon their being able to number among them brethren possessing powers of oratory of no common order.

A very efficient choir of brethren, connected with the lodges of Accrington and Blackburn, enlivened the proceedings by rendering, at intervals, a choice selection of music appropriate to the several toasts. The meeting was brought to a conclusion, and the lodge was closed in due form at 11 p.m.

MASONIC PRESENTATION at HULL.

On the 16th instant, the members of the Humber Lodge, No. 57, succeeded in bringing to a consummation a little project which, for some time, has been in great favour amongst them. We believe there are few Masons who are more sincerely esteemed and respected in any lodge than is Bro. W. Tesseyman in the Humber. Although not what may be called a veteran Craftsman—having, we believe, not had quite six years' service—he has nevertheless worked his way to the Mastership, and has just left that position with the best wishes of the whole of the brethren. Bro. Tesseyman is in himself an instance that kindness of heart, a willingness at all times to assist his less-educated brethren, and thorough Masonic conduct in numerous other ways, are certain of being appreciated in a Masonic lodge. During his year of office all went well with the lodge; its affairs were prosperous, and the members happy and contented with their Master. Peace and unanimity dwelt amongst them, and the days of the W.M. glided tranquilly on. Time, however, waits for no man, and in its course changes come, even in Masonic lodges, and Bro. Tesseyman became the I.P.M. The members of the lodge being, however, determined not to let his year of office pass without some recognition of the many agreeable hours it had been the means of their enjoying, determined amongst themselves to surprise Bro. Tesseyman with a testimonial, and the surprise was very cleverly effected. The Senior and Junior Wardens very skilfully managed the business, which, in their active hands, made wonderful progress, nearly every attending member of the lodge being a contributor to the presentation fund. The night of Tuesday, the 16th, was the time fixed upon, and the presentation was made by Bro. M. Kemp, P.M., in a very appropriate address.

Bro. Kemp, in handing Bro. Tesseyman the testimonial, which consisted of a very beautifully-ornamented Past Master's jewel, from the establishment of Bro. George Kenning, London, remarked that Bro. Tesseyman was initiated into Freemasonry during his Mastership; that he had watched his Masonic progress with the greatest interest, and well he had been repaid for that watching. He had seen Bro. Tesseyman in every grade, from an E.A. to a W.M., and well had he always discharged the duties of every position in which he had been placed. He had won the regard of the lodge, not alone for his Masonic ability, but for his kindness, attention, and goodwill to all who came within the lodge.

The I.P.M. suitably acknowledged the presentation.

After the formal closing of the lodge, the brethren adjourned for refreshment, where

Bro. G. C. Roberts, the W.M. of the Kingston Lodge, in proposing "The Health of Bro. Tesseyman," in an eloquent speech stated that he could fully endorse all that had been said concerning their I.P.M., and that in thus recognising his worth, they had conferred more honour upon themselves than they had upon the recipient of the beautiful jewel, which would be worn by a worthy man, whom, he hoped, would long live to wear it.

Bro. Tesseyman, in replying to the toast, stated that the presentation had taken him so much by surprise, that he should be much obliged if they would allow him to be as brief as possible in acknowledging their particular kindness. He was, indeed, greatly pleased at having received such a mark of their confidence, which he never for a moment expected, and he could only say that it would always be valued by him as showing how favourably he stood in their good estimation.

The evening terminated in the usual manner. On Wednesday, the annual ball takes place at the Public Rooms, particulars of which will duly appear.

CONSECRATION OF A LODGE AT DIDSBURY, WEST LANCASHIRE.

An interesting event took place at the pleasant village of Didsbury (about five miles south of Manchester) on the occasion of consecrating the new Lodge "Architect," on Friday, 5th January. Present: Bros. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, V.W.D.P.G.M.; Wylie, P.G. Treas.; Barber, P.P.G. Treas. East Lan.; Alpass, P.G.S.; Mott, P.P.G.D.; Seed, P.G.O. East Lan.; Masters, Pochin, Gilman, Nathan, Robinson, Ward, Redford, &c.

The lodge was opened in form at 2.30 p.m. The V.W.D.P.G.M. presided, and addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting, calling on the Prov. G. Secretary to state the wishes of the brethren, and the proceedings they had taken with respect to the lodge.

The P.G. Secretary addressed the Presiding Officer, stating that several brethren (naming them, having been desirous of forming a new lodge, had submitted the usual petition to the M.W. Grand Master of England for a warrant of constitution, and he had received a warrant from the M.W.G.M. authorising them to form a lodge under the style and title of the "Architect," No. 1375, to meet at Didsbury, in the western province of the county of Lancashire, on the first Friday of every month, and which he would now read. (Read accordingly.)

The V.W.D.P.G.M. addressed the brethren of the new lodge, and inquired whether they still approved of the brethren named in the warrant as their officers?

The assent having been signified, the Presiding Officer called on the Chaplain to deliver an oration, after which an anthem (133rd Psalm) was effectively sung. The first portion of the consecration prayer was then given as follows: "Almighty God, Great Architect of the Universe, Creator of all things, Judge of all men, look down, we pray Thee, with favour and mercy upon the work which we have in hand. We desire, O God, to consecrate this lodge to Thy honour and ourselves to Thy service, that, united by the holy tie of brotherhood, we may walk worthily as Thy children to our lives' end," &c. "So mote it be." Chant, "Glory to Thee, O Lord." All the brethren knelt whilst the Presiding Officer pronounced the Invocation. S.M.I.B. The lodge was uncovered, and Bros. Wylie, Alpass, and Mott, Prov. Grand Officers, carried the cornucopia, wine, and oil three times round the lodge (solemn music being performed during the procession), then halted in the East. Anthem, "Glory be to God," &c. The Chaplain carried the censor three times round the lodge (solemn music being performed during his progress), then, halting in the East, delivered the second portion of the consecration prayer as follows: "By Thy favour may this lodge long endure and flourish, happy, united, free as a temple not made with hands, devoted to Thy service, built up to Thy glory, and protected by Thy almighty power." S.M.I.B. Anthem, "Glory to God," &c. The V.W.D.P.G.M. presiding constituted the lodge in ancient form as follows: "By virtue of the authority committed to me by the R.W.P.G.M., I hereby constitute and form you into a lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, under the style, title, and designation of the 'Architect' Lodge, and empower you to meet and act as a regular lodge, and to practice the rites and ceremonies of our Order according to our ancient landmarks and the Constitutions of the Craft." S.M.I.B. The Hallelujah chorus was sung by the vocalists and those present with great effect.

The V.W.D.P.G.M. then vacated the chair, which was occupied by Bro. Mott, P.P.G.D., for the purpose of installing Bro. Heywood Masters, W.M.-designate, and investment of officers. Bros. Alpass and Barber presented the W.M.-designate to Bro. Mott for installation. Bro. Mott installed the W.M.-designate and invested the different officers in his usual masterly style.

The Prov. Grand Lodge retired in form at 4.45 p.m., the new Lodge "Architect" being closed in due and ancient form by its W.M. and officers immediately afterwards, when the brethren sat down to dinner, provided by Mr. R. H. Crisp in his usual excellent style, and spent a very pleasant and enjoyable evening.

MASONIC BALL AT PRESCOT.

The fifth annual Masonic ball of the Lodge of Loyalty, No. 86, Prescott, near Liverpool, took place on Thursday night, 18th inst., at the Old Courthouse, and proved in every respect a great success. The arrangements were of the most complete and satisfactory character, and as the ball was given in aid of the funds of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, the brethren entrusted with its organisation deserve credit, not only for a merry meeting to many, but for giving substantial help to a most deserving Institution.

The ball was under the patronage of Bros. Sir Thomas George Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. Grand Master West Lancashire; the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. P.D.G.M. West Lancashire; Hon. F. Stanley, P.G.S.W. West Lancashire; Major Wilson, P.G.J.W. West Lancashire, the Right Hon. the Marquis of Hartington, R.W.P.G.M. Derbyshire; the Rt. Hon. Lord de Tabley, R.W. Prov. Grand Master Cheshire; the Right Hon. Viscount Combermere, R.W.P. Prov. D.G.M. Cheshire; and a number of other brethren holding various offices in the Masonic world.

The hall had been handsomely decorated for the occasion by Bro. Williams, of Prescott, assisted by Bro. Fowler, and the effect produced by the Masonic devices, landscapes, and other decorations on the walls, with banners suspended from the roof, was pleasing in the extreme. A number of plants were kindly lent by Mr. W. L. Evans, and placed at the main entrance to the hall. The dancing cloth for the floor was provided by Messrs. Week, of Wigan, as last year.

The visitors numbered nearly 100, and amongst the most prominent were the following partisans of Masonry: Bros. J. R. Goepel, Z. and P.Z., E. Viceroy of the K.R.C.C., &c.; H. Scott, J.W. 86, K.T., and K.R.C.C.; R. Martin, S. 82; J. Knight, 186, 104, and 86, P.S.W.; Mrs. Knight, Miss Knight, Bro. R. Corke, 86, I.G.; Miss Corke, Bros. R. Young, 86, J. Fowler, jun. 86, W. Tyrer, 86, T. A. Cross, 107, H. Hilsfield, 1, B. Oppenheim, 86, Mrs. Oppenheim, Mr. S. E. Jones, Bros. J. B. Mackenzie, 349, Hosker, S. L. Gurney, Org. 897, Comp. Chap. 86, Mr. W. Hackshaw, Mr. C. F. Johnson, Fern Hill, Huyton; Mr. J. Grame, Huyton; Mr. W. R. Wainwright, Bro. W. Holme, 86, Miss A. Holme, Bro. T. Grime, Warrington 148; Mr. W. A. Meadows, Mr. J. G. Hogg, Mrs. Hogg, Mr. James Berry, Mrs. Berry, Mr. W. Clarke, Rock Ferry; Mr. W. Waring, Mrs. Waring, Mr. Syred, Mrs. Syred, Mr. H. S. Welch, Miss E. Fowler, Mr. W. J. Dunn, Miss Butcher, Mr. Henry Fair, Mr. W. Evans, Mrs. Evans, Mr.

Beasley, Mrs. Beasley, Miss Adderley, Mr. C. Caldwell, Mrs. Caldwell, Mr. J. Beaumont, St. Helens; Mrs. Beaumont, Mr. H. Barton, St. Helens; Mrs. Barton, Bro. Capt. Birchall, 86, Mr. Edward Spencer, Mr. George Welsby, Miss Welsby, Mr. E. Kirkconnel, Mr. T. Layland, Miss Lea, Mr. Jos. Welsby, West Derby; Mrs. J. Welsby, Mr. W. C. Lawson, Mr. H. Baxter, Rainhill; Bro. J. C. Robertson, K.R.C.C., Mrs. J. S. Robertson, Miss Nellie Robertson, Mr. J. P. Pearson, Mrs. Calvert, Miss Calvert, Dr. Hall.

Dancing commenced at nine o'clock, and was continued with unabated pleasure up to three in the morning, to the music of Mr. Martin's excellent quadrille band, from Liverpool. Mr. J. Fowler, jun., and Mr. R. D. Simpson officiated as Masters of Ceremonies.

The refreshments, provided by Mr. F. Beaumont, of the Royal Hotel, were unexceptional, as, indeed, were the entire ball arrangements.

THE PYTHAGOREAN BALL.

On Thursday evening, the 18th inst., a grand Masonic ball, under the patronage of the Pythagorean Lodge and Chapter, No. 79, was held at the Ship Tavern, Greenwich. Nearly 200 ladies and gentlemen were present, and the whole of the resources of that large establishment were laid under contribution for the occasion. At one o'clock the company adjourned to supper, which was of the most recherché description, and was presided over by Bro. I. J. H. Wilkins (President) and Bro. H. S. Boate (Vice-President). Bro. Pycroft (the manager) deserves every praise for his exertions in everything connected with the hotel department. The Stewards and the Hon. M.C. (Bro. Shaw) were indefatigable in promoting the happiness and convenience of all present. The diversified Masonic regalia formed a pleasing contrast to the usual sombreness of the gentlemen's costume, while the varied hues of the ladies' dresses and the brightness of their smiles formed a tout ensemble which will long be remembered by those who had the pleasure of witnessing it. Dancing was not concluded until nearly six o'clock, and every one hoped that this (the first) should be only a prelude to a long series of Masonic balls in Greenwich. The Stewards may, indeed, congratulate themselves upon having achieved a great success.

THE Annual Festival of the Sphinx Lodge of Instruction, will be held at the Stirling Castle, Church-street, Camberwell, on Saturday, the 27th inst., at 6 p.m.

THE Annual Festival of the United Pilgrims' Lodge of Instruction, No. 507, will be held at the usual place of meeting, the Duke of Edinburgh Tavern, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, on the evening of Friday, February 9th, at six o'clock. Bro. James Stevens, P.M. 720, 1216, &c., the Hon. Sec. of the lodge, will be installed as W.M. by Bro. Edward Worthington, P.M. 507, and will preside at the banquet. A most agreeable and instructive evening is anticipated, and from the experience we have had of the excellent character of the working of this lodge under the Preceptorship of Bro. Thomas, P.M., we can confidently recommend a visit on the above occasion.

FREEMASONRY IN NORTH WALES.—On Wednesday, the 10th instant, the new Bala Lodge, No. 1369, was opened under dispensation of the R.W.P.G.M., at the Plascoch Hotel (Bro. Harwood's), by Bro. John Jackson, P.M. 823, as W.M.; Bro. John Houlding, of Lodge 823, as S.W.; and Bro. Captain Tottenham, as J.W. The lodge was opened for preliminary business and receiving propositions, and, judging from the manner in which the opening was conducted, with the number of propositions received, there seems to be every indication that the lodge will become one of the most successful in the province. The formal consecration of the lodge will take place during the ensuing summer.

THE PRINCE of WALES AND THE CRAFT.

IT has been publicly announced that a National Thanksgiving Service will shortly be held at St. Paul's Cathedral, in grateful celebration of the happy convalescence of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The "Queen, Lords, and Commons," the Ministers of State, the foreign ambassadors, the civic authorities, will all take part in this auspicious solemnity; and, we need scarcely add, that their devout rejoicings will be shared in spirit by millions who will not have the opportunity of personally joining in the pæan of praise. It cannot be questioned that the recent illness of the Heir-Apparent has stirred the very heart of the whole nation—the exceptions being so insignificant as to be unworthy of serious comment; and in this respect—painful and alarming as it undoubtedly was—we must regard the Prince's affliction as a wisely-ordered dispensation of Providence to dispel the designs of those foolish agitators, who, in the absence of any real grievance, are always ready to conjure up wrongs out of their own imaginations. But the voice of the country has been heard, and the throne of England stands firmer than ever, based upon no slavish fear, but girt around by true and loyal hearts, and revered by every lover of liberty as the sacred palladium of British freedom. In making these observations, we are not guided by any abstract comparison of the relative advantages of monarchical or republican systems of government. It is no province of ours to discuss whether the chief magistrate of the commonwealth should be styled a King or a President; but we are happy in the knowledge that the vast, the overwhelming majority of Englishmen are true to their natural instincts—true to their sacred traditions—true to that glorious history which has made them the envy of the world; that they are not to be lightly turned aside from the calm, the rational development of personal and political freedom by every wind which blows from Utopia. We are happy in this knowledge, because it inspires us with confidence in the future of our country—bearing in mind what the prophet of old said of Reuben, "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel," and believing, as we do, that real progress can only be attained by a steady adherence to the ancient landmarks of the British Constitution.

Let us now consider the situation in our character as Freemasons. If the voice of the nation has sounded with no uncertain sound, may we not claim for Freemasonry a leading part in the universal chorus of joy? If the Prince of Wales be endeared to the inhabitants of these islands as the first-born son of their sovereign, is he not still more endeared to the members of the Masonic Fraternity as a brother of their Craft and a ruler within their halls? To us he belongs emphatically, and our privilege to sympathise in his sorrow and pain, and to rejoice at his recovery and well-being, is second only to that of his own immediate family circle. As Freemasons, we have knelt together at one common altar—we have ministered together at one universal shrine. The mysteries of life, of human knowledge, of Divine science—the appeals of the helpless and the poor—the flow of social intercourse—the geniality of fraternal communion—we have alike heard or shared. Nor is all this knowledge unprofitable, or this geniality unproductive. The true Mason is he who is ever ready to listen to a tale of woe—who is, to use the apposite language of the Order, ever ready to pour the healing balm of consolation into the bosom of the afflicted. The true Mason, however enriched by intelligence, however enlightened by wisdom, is essentially a man—a type of the purest, brightest, and loftiest ideal of a yet-to-be-attained Humanity.

Our Prince has borne himself nobly in our midst; he has identified himself with Masonic ideas, he has participated in our labours, and fought for our cause. Surely, therefore, such a body as the Free and Accepted Masons of England ought to take a conspicuous part in the proposed public recognition of the Divine mercy which has spared so invaluable a life as that of their Royal Past Grand Master: Surely, amongst the thousands who will throng to St. Paul's on the day of celebration, Freemasonry ought to be represented publicly by some of her most gifted and illustrious sons. We are not an advocate for public Masonic displays, and would deprecate them most strenuously upon ordinary occasions; but the occasion of our Royal brother's recovery is one when, we believe, good might be done by the appearance of a thousand Freemasons in the procession—whether clothed in the badges of the Order, or simply distinguished by wearing the traditional white gloves as emblems of the Craft. In any case, our desire to evince unshaken loyalty to the throne, and to offer our congratulations to the Prince, ought to be forcibly and specially expressed; and we are convinced that besides interpreting the unanimous feeling of the Masonic body, it would have an excellent effect in the present state of the public mind.

Since writing the above, we have learned that the Most Honourable the Marquis of Ripon, M.W. Grand Master, has summoned a Grand Lodge of Emergency for Friday, the 26th inst., for the purpose of adopting an address to her Majesty upon the happy recovery of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; and although the notice is short, the attendance of brethren will, we trust, be sufficiently numerous to manifest the interest felt by the Fraternity in the subject, as well as the sentiments of devotion and affection entertained by all of us towards the Queen and our illustrious Brother.

[Owing to the exigencies of publication on Friday, we are compelled to speak in the future tense of this meeting, as it has not taken place up to the time of our going to press.]

THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

On Wednesday next, the 31st inst., the first Charity Festival of the season will be held under the Presidency of the Right Worshipful Brother the Earl Percy, who will plead the cause of the aged Masons and the widows of deceased members of our Order. We trust that the pecuniary success of the forthcoming festival will surpass the results of previous years; and when we consider the recent great increase, both in lodges and brethren, and which is still continuing undiminished, we have a right to expect that our new members will do something to sustain the Charities of the Order. We hold it to be every Mason's duty to contribute, in proportion to his means, to one or all of those noble Institutions—the Asylum and the Schools; and nothing is more unsatisfactory than to find that many who can well afford to subscribe seem to ignore their bounden obligation in this respect, and leave the burden upon the shoulders of a few. If the Israelites of old gave a tithe for the service of the altar, surely every English Mason in modern days ought to give his guinea, or his crown, annually to the Masonic Institutions. We shall not rest satisfied until we shall have pressed this truth home to the hearts of every Mason in England, so that none may plead ignorance as an excuse for so palpable a dereliction from the path of duty.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 24th inst. Bro. James Brett, P.G. Pursuivant, Junior Vice-President, was in the chair, supported by Bros. J. Savage, P.G.D., as S.W.; H. Dicketts, P.M. 25, as J.W.; J. Smith, P.G.P.; J. Coutts, G.P.; J. Boyd, A.G.P.; F. Walters, H. Garrod, J. W. Halsey, J. R. Sheen, C. A. Cottebrune, P. Kirke, J. Stevens, and several other brethren.

Eight grants, standing over from the last meeting for confirmation, were duly confirmed, after which the following sums were voted to various petitioners: Bros. E. S. S., Lodge 141, £20; T. C., 169, £20; J. B., 1247, £20; R. T. P., 7, £20; J. R. (in Ireland), £10; W. G., 546, £5; W. H., 414, £5; J. M. T., late 395, £5. The widows of A. W., Lodge 151, £100; J. R. W., 720, £50; T. W., 872, £20; B. W., 164, £20; W. P., 200, £20. Making a total sum of £315.

THE DILKITES.

"The Dilke demonstration is to take place in the large hall of the Freemasons' Tavern on the evening of Tuesday, the 30th inst."—Daily papers.

We are authorized to state that the Directors of the Freemasons' Tavern Company have declined to allow the use of their hall for the proposed meeting, and we are sure that their refusal will meet with the unanimous approval of the Craft.

The following letter on the subject has appeared in the Echo :—

THE FREEDOM OF SPEECH DEMONSTRATION.
To the Editor of the Echo.

SIR,—As you have stated in your columns "that the Freemasons' Hall has been refused for the use of the 'Freedom of Speech Demonstration Committee,'" perhaps you will allow me space in them to explain that there has been no action on the part of our Committee to justify the breach of contract on the part of the Freemasons' Hall management.

In accordance with my instructions, I waited, with a sub-committee, on Saturday afternoon, at the Freemasons' Hall to tender the balance of the amount for hire of it. However, the money was declined, the use of the hall refused, and I was referred to the solicitor in whose hands they have placed the matter. Of course we have no alternative but to place our case in legal hands.

When we first waited on the managers to know if the hall could be had, and, again, when we called to pay the required deposit, £5, we explained fully the objects of our meeting, which were—"To uphold the right of free speech, and to express our determination not to allow it to be violated, as it was at Bolton, Reading, and elsewhere, and to protest against the supineness of the authorities in not affording due protection to the public when meeting to discuss constitutional subjects." To this the manager replied, "I have let the hall for more critical subjects." We can but infer, then, from this sudden denial, that influences have been at work other than those openly expressed. If this is so, and our opponents think to stifle free discussion by preventing our having the use of the large halls of the metropolis to assemble in, I can assure them that they underrate the earnestness of the supporters of "Free Speech," and that on Tuesday evening, when the executive committee meet, such steps will be taken as will make the demonstration more overwhelming from the opposition we have received.—I am, Sir, &c.,

H. SPENCER, Hon. Sec.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

BRO. BRENNAN'S GENERAL REGISTER OF FREEMASONRY.

Few Masons in this country have correct ideas of the progress of the Craft in America. It is simply astonishing. Before the third decade of the last century, there was not a lodge of Freemasons meeting in all America. At the present time there are about 8000 lodges and half a million of subscribing members in the United States alone!

Brother Brennan has compiled a careful register of all the lodges and Grand Lodges of Freemasons in North America, and after a careful examination of the work, we pronounce it to be a most useful and valuable publication. In order to afford some information to the English Masonic student, we will append the names of the Grand Lodges referred to by Bro. Brennan, with a few particulars, and conclude by recommending all interested in the subject to procure copies for themselves (of Bro. Geo. Kenning), in order to realise the extent of Order.

VALUABLE WORK on the ANCIENT CONSTITUTIONS of the FREEMASONS.

Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall, is now preparing for the press a work to be entitled, "The old Charges of British Freemasons." The celebrated manuscript belonging to the time-immemorial Lodge of Antiquity, of 1686, will be published, having been carefully transcribed especially for Bro. Hughan's work, and a fac-simile page will form the frontispiece. This MS. has not hitherto been published, and much interest centres in this document. Other MSS. will also be inserted, and a careful resumé of all the known MSS., or Constitutions, will form the first part of this important book.

The work, we understand, will be dedicated (by permission) to the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., M.W.G.M. As only a limited number will be issued, brethren should apply at once to the author for copies, which will be sold at five shillings each.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I feel greatly indebted to Bro. "W. E. M., 766," for his suggestion in page 87 of THE FREEMASON, as to the desirability of a resumé of the articles on "Freemasonry and Israelitism," and, especially, for his generous offer to supply such a resumé, if out of my power to undertake it. I feel, with him, that it would greatly add to the value of the papers, and I had commenced it; but the want of sight, and the pain which writing gives me, compelled me to put it aside, and I fear I shall not be able to resume it. If my Brother "W. E. N." will therefore kindly undertake it, I am sure it will be well done, and be very useful to all who may desire to prosecute the interesting inquiry which I have opened, but very imperfectly handled, and he will confer a great obligation on me, personally. As Brother Kenning is about to publish the papers, after the necessary revision, in the form of a book, I shall ask Brother "W. E. N.'s" permission to reprint his addition to them, I, of course, acknowledging its authorship.

On the situation of Bethel, upon which our brother offers some remarks, I quite concur with him, in placing it in Ephraim, and I doubt very much whether there was a city bearing the same name in the tribe of Benjamin, although most biblical writers and map-makers place one there, being, I presume, led thereto by Joshua xviii. 11-13, where it is said that the border of the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin went over from the wilderness of Beth-aven towards Luz (which is Bethel). But, surely, going towards it does not imply that Bethel was included in Benjamin's lot, and I do not remember any mention being made of a Bethel there. At all events, we know that there was a Bethel in Ephraim, and that Jereboam's idols were set up and worshipped there; as it is also plain from 2 Kings xxiii. 15, &c., that it was in this Bethel of Ephraim that Josiah broke down the idolatrous altars. So far, "W. E. N." and I agree. Nor am I of those who contend that all the Israelites were carried away by the Assyrian conquerors. As I put it in one of my papers, the carrying away was complete as to the kingdom of Israel. The great bulk of the nation, not the mere flower of the people, was deported, and Israel ceased to be a nation. That the inhabitants of the land, though including the remnants of Israel and the peoples brought from the North by the Assyrians, were comparatively few, is, I think, attested, not only by the descriptions we have of the desolation of the land, and the irruptions into it of the wild beasts, but also by the circumstance that Josiah was permitted, apparently unmolested, to make an irruption into the most important part of the country, and to destroy the effigies of idolatrous worship. All this, however, is quite consistent with the assumption that a few Israelites—a remnant—were left behind, or, having escaped from the Assyrians into Judah, or elsewhere, afterwards returned into their own country, and, mixing with the strangers from the North, subsequently formed the people known as Samaritans.

Brother "W. E. N." formerly suggested the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of the Assyrian conqueror carrying away so large a number of people, men, women, and children, as I have suggested. But, not to insist upon what I said in my reply, I may observe that there seems to have been a caravan route from the Euphrates to Tyre, even in the time of Solomon, as he possessed Tiphshah on the Euphrates, and built, or fortified, Tadmor, the Palmyra of later days, and had certain "store cities" in Hamath, which lay to the north of Lebanon.

WILLIAM CARPENTER.

SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH.

The brethren of St. Stephen's Lodge, No. 145, held their annual meeting on Wednesday, the 27th ultimo, in the Guildford Hotel, for the purpose of installing the office-bearers and celebrating the festival of St. John the Evangelist. Bro. John Thompson, R.W.M., who presided, having opened the lodge in due form, at once proceeded to instal Bro. Robert S. Brown as R.W.M. for the ensuing year, which ceremony he performed in an able and impressive manner. Bro. Brown having been duly installed in the chair of K.S., thereupon proceeded to instal his colleagues in their respective offices as follows: Bros. William Hawley, Depute Master; George Drummond, Substitute Master; Robert Irland, S.W.; Thomas Sinclair, J.W.; James A. Elliott, Treas.; George Darling, P.M., Sec.; James B. Macleod, P.M., Chap.; A. Naismith, Bible-bearer; D. Thomas, S.D.; J. W. Nicholson, J.D.; John Cameron and A. Williamson, Standard-bearers; James Inglis, Architect; W. S. Gray, Steward; T. W. Greenstreet, I.G.; and James Montgomery, Tyler. The following brethren being members of Committee: Bros. John Taylor, P.M.; A. McPherson, P.M.; D. McNab, Scott, W. W. Mooney, and J. B. Mercer. The lodge was thereafter called from labour to refreshment, and the brethren sat down to a sumptuous repast, which was set before them by the widow of the late Bro. Peter Carrie, and to which they did ample justice. The toast of "The Queen and the Craft" having been given and responded to with the utmost enthusiasm, the R.W.M. then gave the toast of "Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Patron of the Scottish Craft," alluding, in appropriate terms, to his late serious illness, and expressing what he felt sure was the earnest and fervent prayer of every good Mason and loyal subject, a hope that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales would still be spared by T.G.A.O.T.U. to fulfil a high and noble destiny in the land, and bind to himself still closer the sacred bonds of loyalty and affection which had been proved so unmistakably to exist in the hearts of the British nation. Other loyal and patriotic toasts followed. Deputations were sent to, and received from, nearly all the sister lodges in the district, and after spending a very pleasant hour, toast, song, and sentiment abounding, the lodge was recalled to labour. The R.W.M. intimated his intention of holding fortnightly meetings for the purpose of instruction, which was very cordially agreed to. The lodge was then closed in harmony and in due form at high twelve.

NOVA SCOTIA.

St. Andrew's Lodge of Freemasons lately held a very entertaining meeting. The Grand Lodge visitation took place. A third degree was given; several presentations to the lodge were made, and last, but by no means least, the lodge made a present of a very valuable Masonic jewel to Past Master Bro. J. M. Taylor, who for very many years has been Tyler to the various lodges of Halifax. It was in honour of the latter event that the lodge room was artistically decorated. On the west, over the door, were the square and compass with two swords in the centre. Over the Senior Warden's chair was a portrait of St. Andrew with the motto "nemo me læcessit impune" under it, and above, the designation of the lodge; "St. Andrew's Lodge, established A.D., 5767." And just above the chair was a Prince of Wales feather, with the motto "God save our brother the Prince of Wales."

At the east, on the canopy, was "In God is our trust;" round the pillars between the twining evergreens were, on the right hand side, "Wisdom, Strength and Beauty;" on the left, "Faith, Hope and Charity." The same mottoes were on the south and north sides of the room, and, together with other decorations, presented a tout ensemble, gratifying to the eye and suggestive to the Masonic mind.

Bro. A. H. Crowe presented the lodge, as the oldest lodge in British America, with the chair used by his Royal Highness the Duke of Kent at the old theatre here but lately burnt down. Bro. J. D. Nash presented the lodge with a neatly framed steel engraving of the Prince Regent dressed in Masonic regalia. This picture is over a hundred years old. Bro. Crowe, on behalf of a brother of the lodge, presented two old decanters and goblets, marked with St. Andrew's Cross and Emblems. These mementoes of a former time, when there was much call from labour to refreshment, were the innocent cause of several remarks upon the great change which had come over Freemasonry in respect to drinking habits. Formerly, the danger of acquiring a habit of drinking was great. Now, ever effort is made to prevent any such habit.

After those and other interesting presentations had been made, the third degree was given in a style which attracted immense attention as a splendid exhibition of good Masonic work, Worshipful Master, Bro. R. C. Hamilton, and the other officers of the lodge receiving high commendations for their faithfulness to the traditions of the past.

Bro. J. M. Taylor was then presented with the jewel before referred to, the following address being read by Worshipful Master, Bro. R. C. Hamilton:—

"To the Right Worshipful Past Master, Bro. J. M. Taylor.

"Brother,—In the name and on behalf of the members of St. Andrew's Lodge, it affords me very much pleasure to present you with this jewel as a token of their brotherly love and esteem. During the many years you have acted as Tyler, we have always found you a faithful sentinel, ever cheerful, obliging and courteous; and though your patience has been often severely tried by late hours and otherwise, yet we have never heard you murmur or complain.

"We have always found you ever ready to extend a helping hand in aid of anything that would tend to advance the interests of the Craft, no matter how onerous the duty imposed upon you may have been.

"During our intercourse with you as a Mason, we have ever found that you have always lived up to those truly Masonic principles which you so admirably inculcate, not by words only but by example.

"We trust that you may be long spared to wear this emblem of our esteem, and be assured that the warm brotherly love which is felt for you in St. Andrew's Lodge will not be soon abate.

"In the name of St. Andrew's Lodge I invest you with this jewel of a Past Master. May you long live to wear it and when called from earth to heaven, may you find beyond the 'clouded canopy' a jewel more rich, more lasting, in the approval of the Grand Master of Heaven and Earth."

To this Bro. Taylor made a very feeling reply, which was received in a most enthusiastic manner by those present.

After several speeches had been made by brethren present, the lodge was closed, all present expressing themselves highly gratified with the evening's work.

Hon. A. Keith, Grand Master, honoured the occasion with his presence, and about eighty Master Masons were present.

The Masonic jewel is a fine piece of workmanship, and the inscription on the back reads as follows: "Presented to Past Master Bro. J. M. Taylor, by the members of St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1, R. N. S., in appreciation of his uniform kindness and attention as Tyler, and his many good qualities as a Mason."—Halifax Evening Reporter.

ROYAL FREEMASONS' GIRLS' SCHOOL.

On Tuesday, the 23rd inst., the children of the above Institution, numbering 109, visited the Crystal Palace, on the invitation of Mr. Wilkinson, the Company's respected Manager. On their arrival, they were permitted to inspect the Aquarium, with the contents of which they appeared to be deeply interested. The highly successful pantomime of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" also afforded considerable amusement to the young people; and they were altogether much delighted with the treat provided for them, Messrs. Bertram and Roberts, the enterprising contractors for the refreshment department, displayed their wonted kindness and hospitality by providing dinner and tea for the little folks and the resident officials, free of charge. The children were accompanied by Bros. Paas, Sheen, and E. Cox, as members of the House Committee; Bro. W. Lane, of the Secretary's Department (in the absence of Bro. Patten from illness); and Bro. Muggidge, the Collector of the Institution.

SIR ALBERT WOODS, Garter Principal King of Arms, arrived at Windsor Castle the other morning, and placed the banner and regalia of the Emperor of Brazil over the sovereign stalls of the Knights of the Garter in St. George's Chapel, Windsor.

At the annual conclave of the Mount Calvary Encampment of Knights Templar held at the London Tavern on the 12th inst., Sir Knight S. Rosenthal (P.E.C. Grove Encampment) was installed as Eminent Commander, and appointed the officers for the year. A banquet was served after the encampment was closed.

H.R.H. PRINCE NAPOLEON, the Princess Clothilde, Prince Murat, and suite, honoured Bro. Morton's charming theatre, the "Philharmonic," with their presence on Wednesday evening last, and expressed their great gratification at the excellent performance of Offenbach's opera bouffe of Genevieve De Brabant.

THE Marquis of Ripon presided on Wednesday over a meeting of the General Purposes Committee appointed by her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 to carry out the current series of annual International Exhibitions. There were also present Sir Francis Sandford, Mr. Edgar Bowring, Mr. T. F. Gibson, and Major-General Scott (Secretary).

THE Sunderland Times of the 20th inst., states that:—"The Rev. Henry Baker Tristram, LL.D., Master of Greatham Hospital, left England the other day for Palestine, via the Overland route, to resume his researches in his old field of travel and research, under the auspices of the Palestine Exploration Fund Committee." Our readers will be pleased to know that Dr. Tristram, besides being a distinguished Eastern traveller, is also a distinguished Mason. He is a Knight Templar and S.P. Rose Croix 18°, and either is or was Chaplain to the Eclectic Lodge of Mark Masons. Bro. Tristram is also an M.A.S. and Honorary Canon of Durham, and Churchmen and Masons will be interested to learn of his researches in the land so dear to both.

EVERY physician knows that if only brandy can reach his patient in the form in which it quits the vineyards of Cognac, it is in many diseases the most valuable remedial agent in his pharmacopœia, and thoroughly deserves the name—eau de vie—given to it by the monks who first distilled it. It is then, indeed, a veritable "water of life." But there has been hitherto far too much difficulty in procuring it. Therefore it is not too much to describe Messrs. Victor Jouannet and Co., as public benefactors for a reform they are introducing. These gentlemen, the proprietors of the famous "Grande Marque" Cognac, have determined to bring their brandy, which is justly celebrated for its age and purity, within the reach of the smallest consumer, by issuing it in bottles of all sizes—from seven-pence upwards—protected by their trade-mark and capsule. It is fortunate, indeed, that Messrs. Jouannet are large holders, for we venture to prophecy that by their bringing their splendid brandy to the hand, as it were, of every purchaser they will cause a run on "La Grande Marque" such as will soon decrease their immense stock of "1865" brandy now lying in the Victoria docks.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

[With a view to increase the circulation, and consequently the usefulness, of THE FREEMASON, it is suggested that Lodges, &c., desiring reports to appear in the paper, should take a certain number of copies in proportion to the space required for the report.]

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—The usual meet- of this lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark, on the 16th inst. In consequence of the non-arrival of the W.M., the lodge was opened by Bro. Overton, 1309; Marcus Loewenstark, D.C. 1360; &c. Bro. Joseph Huntley Spencer (the host) was passed to the second degree. Bro. E. Harris, P.M., then took the chair, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The Auditors' report was adopted and ordered to be entered on the minutes. It showed a good balance in hand, and no liabilities. The W.M., Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, then took the chair and in an able manner installed his successor, Bro. George Free. The officers appointed and invested were Bros. G. J. Grace, S.W.; A. L. Dussek, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M., Treas. (reappointed); John Donkin, P.M. Sec. (re-appointed); S. Harman, S.D.; J. S. Gomme, J.D.; I. J. H. Wilkins, I.G.; J. H. Batten, D.C.; C. Rayden, W.S.; W. Y. Laing, P.M. Tyler (reappointed). A candidate for initiation was proposed. A six-guinea P.M. jewel was presented to Bro. M. A. Loewenstark, I.P.M., and the lodge was closed. Banquet followed.

Beadon Lodge, No. 619.—This lodge met on Wednesday, 17th inst., at the Greyhound Hotel, Dulwich, under the presidency of the W.M., Capt. G. A. Smith. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather and the busy period of the year, no less than thirty brethren, among whom were eight P.M.'s of the lodge, were present, testifying thereby to the great popularity of their W.M. There was a full list of business before them, and it was all performed with precision and ability. A joining member was first successfully balloted for, and the same result attended the ballot for three candidates for initiation. Mr. Robert Peter Forge, Mr. George Tatton, and John Rawle were afterwards introduced and initiated in the earliest of the Masonic rites with great fluency by the W.M. The lodge having been properly prepared, and Bros. Lockett, Wright, Angus, Collins, and Dyer formally entrusted, these brethren received from the W.M. the benefits of the third degree. A joining member was proposed, and notice of a motion given by Bro. E. S. Parker, P.M., and the W.M. announced that as the S.D., Bro. W. H. Green, was Steward of the Benevolent Institution Festival next Wednesday for 1870, the brethren would have an opportunity of supporting one of the members of their own lodge on that occasion. He himself would represent the Beadon at the Girls' School Festival in May, and would be glad to place the names of any of the brethren on his list. The Secretary, Bro. A. P. Leonard, P.M., stated that a circular had been received from the "Binckes' Testimonial Committee," which he read to the lodge. The W.M. said that in order that the next business might be recorded on the minutes of the lodge, he would proceed with it immediately instead of deferring it to what might appear a more appropriate season, after the clearing of the banquet table. The testimonial to Bro. Alfred Avery, P.M., who had twice filled the Master's chair of this lodge, had been voted to him when he last left the chair; but the exact form it was to take was only finally settled at the meeting in October. Several brethren had taken considerable pains in watching its progress, and seeing that it was an adequate representation of the feelings of the brethren and not unworthy of acceptance by so distinguished a Past Master as Bro. A. Avery. The result had been the production of a beautifully-illuminated vellum, glazed and mounted in an elegant frame. He then read the following inscription and handed the gift to Bro. Avery:—

"Beadon Lodge, No. 619, held at the Greyhound Hotel, Dulwich, in the county of Surrey.—At a meeting of this lodge held on the 20th July, 1870, it was resolved that a testimonial should be presented to Bro. A. Avery, who had twice served the office of W.M., and had also for many years acted as Treasurer of the lodge. And it was further resolved that the resolution should be put into writing and presented to Bro. Alfred Avery, in testimony of the respect in which he was held by the lodge.—Presented to Bro. A. Avery, on Wednesday, the 17th day of January, 1872.

G. A. SMITH, W.M.
J. CHAPMAN, S.W.
W. SEAMAN, J.W."

Bro. Avery, in acknowledging the compliment, said that while thanking the brethren most heartily for their kindness, he could not trust himself to give full expression to his feelings; but he received the testimonial with the greatest pride, as he was convinced it conveyed the true feelings of all the brethren of the lodge.—This was the last item of business to be transacted in lodge, and the W.M. then closed down and headed the brethren at the banquet, which was a choice specimen of Bro. Middlecott's style of catering. When the banquet was disposed of, the usual toasts were proposed and honored, and the brethren separated at a late hour, after having spent a right pleasant evening.

PROVINCIAL.

PENZANCE.—Mount Sinai Lodge, No. 121.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the lodge-room, Public Buildings, on Wednesday afternoon, the 17th inst. There was a good number of brethren present to witness the re-installation of the Bro. W. C. Borlace. The W.M. selected for his officers: Bros. W. H. Gerry, S.W.; Richard Carter, J.W.; Israel Levin, I.P.M.; Charles Read, Treas.; Thomas Goldworthy, Sec.; Thomas J. Rowe, S.D.; Charles Trevithick, J.D.; Frank Gregory, I.G.; William Anderson, Steward; Robt. Lovell, Org.; William Wallish; and W. H. Kinsman, D.C. After the selection of officers, the W.M., in a very able manner, performed the ceremonies of initiating Messrs. Alfred Morris and W. R. Tresige. At the close of the business, the brethren retired to Bro. Mitchell's, and partook of a substantial banquet. The cloth being removed, the usual speeches and toasts were given by the W.M. and brethren in a Masonic manner. The brethren retired after having spent a most enjoyable evening.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge Harmony, No. 156.—The brethren of this ancient lodge held their festival of St. John the Evangelist, on Wednesday, 17th inst., and assembled at the Huyshe Masonic Temple, under the guidance of the Worshipful Bro. H. T. Hearle, Master. After the close of the business they all proceeded to the Globe Hotel, where they sat down to a recherche dinner provided by Bro. Isaac Watts. The banquet was presided over by the Worshipful Master, and there was a goodly gathering of visiting brethren. It is the custom of the lodges of the Three Towns to unite very cordially with each other, and for the brethren to assemble from other lodges on the invitation of the Masters and brethren of sister lodges. The following brethren were present: W. Bros. W. Pidditch, S.W.; J. Manning, J.W.; V.W. Bros. I. Latimer, P.P.G.S.; S. Jew, P.P.G.T., P.M. 105; T. B. Harvey, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; W. K. Mitchell, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C.; J. B. Gover, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C. 70; I. Watts, P.M., P.P.G.T.; W. Bros. S. Kessell, P.M.; M. Williams, W.M. 105; R. B. Triplett, P.M.; T. A. Yoe, P.M.; W. Bell, P.M.; E. A. Davis, P.M. 1099; V. Bird, P.M. 954; P. T. Skelton, W.M. 1247; J. Wainwright, W.M. 70; Bros. R. Saunders, W. S. Stevenson, J. S. Mason, 223; S. Hyne, J. Carwithen, J. Campbell, W. D. Gould, S. Clutterbuck, R. Dyer, G. Phillips, W. H. Cooksley, 202, J. Lander, J. Hine, G. Thorne, J. Drane, P. B. Chapell, W. Hear, F. Hall, J. Y. Avery, D. Box, J. S. Bunce, 105, J. Rendle, 1247. During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drunk, and the evening was passed in festive pleasure, the lodge breaking up at about half-past nine o'clock.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge Charity, No. 223.—This lodge met at their lodge rooms, Union-street, on Wednesday, the 27th ultimo, at 4.15, to celebrate the annual festival of St. John. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. J. T. Smith, when Bro. Marcoss was passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was then closed down to the first degree, and called off from labour to attend the banquet provided at Chubb's Hotel. The table was very amply provided with the good things of this life. The chair was ably filled by the newly-installed W.M., Bro. J. T. Smith, supported on the right by Bros. L. P. Metham, P.G.D. and D.P.G. Master of Devon; Isaac Latimer, P.P.G. Sec. and Mayor of Plymouth; B. J. Gambell, P.M., P.P.G. Asst. Dir. of Cers.; William Browning, P.M., P.P.G. Dir. of Cers., Secretary; and J. F. Hifley, P.M., P.G.T. On the left by the I.P.M., Bro. J. W. Cornish; Bros. Pollard, P.M., P.P.G.T.; J. May, P.M.; and A. Woolf, P.M. The vice-chair was filled by the Senior Warden, Bro. J. P. Phillips, and the South by Bro. J. Pool, J.W. About fifty members were present. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave "The Queen," which was suitably responded to. On "The Prince of Wales" being proposed, there was manifest evidence of sympathy for his recent affliction and suffering. The toast was most ably responded to by the Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. L. P. Metham. Other Masonic toasts followed in succession during the evening. A most interesting event took place on the toast of "The Treasurer and Secretary" being given. The W.M. and brethren of the lodge, in recognition of the services rendered to the lodge, for several years, in the capacity of Secretary and Past Master of the lodge, resolved that a testimonial, consisting of a very handsome and valuable gold chain, with locket attached, should be presented to Bro. William Browning, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Secretary—the locket bearing the following inscription: "Presented to Bro. W. Browning, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., by his brethren of Lodge Charity, No. 223, in recognition of his valuable services as Secretary to the lodge, December, 1871." The introductory part of the presentation was delivered by the I.P.M., Bro. J. W. Cornish, in very eloquent and feeling terms, and was followed by the W.M., Bro. J. T. Smith, in the same Masonic spirit, in presenting the testimonial. Bro. W. Browning, on receiving it, expressed the gratitude he felt in receiving such a very substantial and handsome present from the hands of his brethren—not so much for its intrinsic value, as the expression of brotherly feeling it conveyed, and its being a proof that his services were held in estimation by the lodge. He had been a Mason nearly twenty years, and had been in constant work during that time; and trusted, if the Great Architect of the Universe should spare him, to render whatever remained in his power to the advancement of Lodge Charity, and Masonry generally. The lodge was finally closed, after a most pleasant evening being spent, not forgetting speedy relief to all distressed Freemasons.

TRURO.—Phoenix Lodge of Honour and Prudence, No. 331.—This important and prosperous lodge celebrated St. John's festival and held the annual meeting at its rooms in the Masonic Hall, Truro, on Monday the 15th ult., Bro. Ferguson, W.M., in the chair. After preliminary and routine business, Bro. R. M. Paul was ably installed as W.M. for the ensuing year by Bro. John F. Penrose, P.M., after which the following officers were appointed:—Bros. Ferguson, I.P.M.; S. Serpell, S.W.; Rev. H. B. Bullocke, J.W.; Rev. J. Blackmore, Chaplain; Mayne, Treasurer; Christie, jun., Secretary; Wilkins, S.D.; T. R. Olver, J.D.; Hon. T. Agar Robartes, Dir. Cer.; W. Sharp and Hosken, Stewards; S. Harvey, I.G.; W. Rooks, Tyler. The splendid chair, which we described last week, and which was presented by the R.W. the Grand Master of Cornwall (Bro. Augustus Smith), was used at the meeting for the first time. The banquet was served in the spacious dining-room of the lodge, and was supplied by Bro. Rooks, of the "Square and Compass" Inn, Truro, in a manner which would have done infinite credit to the proprietor of an hotel of large resources. The Worshipful Master highly complimented him on the result of his exertions. The bill of fare and general appointments were really excellent, and the lodge generally endorsed this opinion. Forty brethren dined, including the D.P. Grand Master, Bro. Reginald Rogers, the Revs. G. L. Church, F. B. Paul, H. B. Bullocke, and R. Blackmore, W. H. Jenkins (Mayor of Truro), Bros. J. T. Ferguson, E. T. Carlyon, H. Spry Leverton, J. F. Penrose, T. Chirgwin, W. Tweedy, W. H. Christoe, sen., J. O. Mayne, Robert Sharp, E. D. Anderton, William Tregay, W. J. Johns, Robert Bell, and the Masters and Wardens of the Fortitude, Druids, and Boscawen Lodges. The proceedings throughout were characterised by the utmost harmony. The dining-room was decorated with great taste and judgment by Bro. Solomon, P.M.

REDRUTH.—Druids' Lodge, No. 589.—The annual festival was celebrated on Monday, the 15th ult., prior to which the officers for the ensuing year were chosen. Bro. James Sims was installed W.M., and appointed for his officers Bros. S. George, S.W.; R. Heath, J.W.; J. F. Penrose, Chaplain; E. M. Cook, Secretary; J. H. Reynolds, I.P.M.; E. S. Angove, S.D.; Martin, J.D.;

Tresedder, I.G.; Polkinghorne, O.G.; Pascoe, Organist; Kistler, Dir. of Cer.; Thomas Rule, Gladden, and Petherick, Stewards. The banquet was at Bro. Tabb's, to which upwards of fifty brethren sat down. The neighbouring lodges, viz., Fortitude, Phoenix, Boscawen, and Tregulow, were well represented.

HOLYHEAD.—Lodge of St. Cybi, No. 597.—A regular lodge meeting was held in the lodge room, Marine Hotel, on the 1st of January. The following brethren were present: J. Peters, I.P.M.; J. L. Griffith, W.M.; Edward F. Miller, P.M.; Sam. S. Wilkes, P.M.; William Lewis, S.W.; John Ellis, J.W.; Dr. O. Williams, S.D.; Owen W. Jones, Chap.; Owen R. Ellis, Sec.; Robert Parry, Org.; Evan Evens, Steward; William Evens, I.G.; C. S. Dyer, Ed. M. Jones, Henry Evans, John Hughes, R. H. Williams (P.M. 1113), R. Evans, William Jones, James K. Morris, Captain Robert Williams, Captain John Roberts, George Mansfield, Adolphus F. Snelson, Joseph Innes, Peter Ellis, Isaac Peters, W. H. Smith, William Innes, John Devcnald, Robert Gardiner, William Poole, William Riva (P.S.W.), William Ankers, Captain T. Jones, Samuel Hughes, Tyler; and visiting Bros. R. R. Williams (606) and John Hughes (950). The lodge was duly opened, the opening ode sung, and minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Bros. Isaac Peters and Peter Ellis were passed to the second degree. This being the annual meeting of installation, the ceremony of installing formed the most interesting feature of the labours of the evening. Bro. J. Lloyd Griffith had been successfully elected at the previous meeting, and now the time had come to place him in the Master's chair. This beautiful ceremony was rendered with great skill and ability, in the several degrees, by Bro. Peters, I.P.M. The W.M. having been duly installed according to ancient custom, he commenced his Masonic labours by investing Bro. John Peters, I.P.M., with a costly P.M.'s jewel, which the lodge desired to be presented to him in recognition of his valuable and energetic services as Master during the years 1870-71. The W.M. commended him greatly for his skilful management of the lodge and his devotedness to the cause of Masonry in general. Bro. Peters made a suitable reply, thanking the W.M. and all the brethren for the honour they had done him. After this the W.M. proceeded to elect and invest his officers as follows: Bros. William Lewis, S.W.; John Ellis, J.W.; Dr. O. Williams, S.D.; James Lloyd, J.D.; Owen R. Ellis, Sec.; Robert Parry, Org.; William Evens, I.G.; Samuel Hughes, O.G.; and John Peters, I.P.M., Treas. After receiving propositions, &c., the W.M. closed the lodge in perfect peace and harmony. The brethren then adjourned to the dining-room to partake of a splendid banquet, prepared by Bro. Smith, of the Marine Hotel. When the table was cleared, the W.M. brought forth the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, commencing with "The Queen and the Craft," "Our Royal Brother Albert Edward, Prince of Wales," &c. The W.M. spoke of the severe illness which had so utterly prostrated his Royal Highness, the anxiety of the nation—yea, of all the civilised world, especially the Masons—about him; and expressed his joy at the cheering news that was gladdening the heart of young and old—"The Prince of Wales is getting better." Bro. Miller, P.M., then sang "God Bless the Prince of Wales," to the words composed by Bro. E. "Cletur" Jones. The song was sung with great enthusiasm and feeling. After several other toasts and songs, the brethren dispersed, each apparently much satisfied with the proceedings of the evening.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.—Dobie Lodge, No. 889.—Bro. Squire, P.M., Secretary of the Lodge of Fidelity, No. 3, was installed W.M. of this lodge at the Griffin Hotel, Kingston-on-Thames, on Wednesday, the 17th instant. The ceremony was very ably performed by Bro. Littlewood, P.M. 780, after which the following brethren were invested as officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Styles, P.M.; Elsam, S.W.; Veal, J.W.; Cartwright, P.P.G.D., P.M., Treas.; Cathrow, P.P.G.S.B., Sec.; Honeywell, S.D.; Bond, J.D.; Buckland, I.G.; Long, P.M., D.C.; Hunt, Org.; and Gilbert, Tyler. An excellent banquet followed, before and after which grace was sung by Bros. Hunt, Hannewell, Veal, and Beattie. The toasts on the card were duly honoured, and a most enjoyable evening passed.

ALDBURGH.—Adair Lodge, No. 936.—At the regular monthly meeting of this lodge on Friday, the 1st ult., Bro. William Hayward was unanimously elected to fill the Master's chair for the ensuing year, and the brethren therefore met in their new lodge-room on Friday, the 5th inst., for installation of the W.M., which was performed by Bro. George Harper, W.M. The newly-installed Master having been duly proclaimed and saluted, he then proceeded to invest his officers, and in conclusion Bro. Harper addressed the brethren, impressively exhorting them to the exercise of charity, trusting that their sole aim would be to please each other and unite in the grand design of being happy; concluding by an earnest wish that unanimity and concord might long continue amongst them. A candidate for initiation having been duly proposed and seconded, the lodge was closed with prayer, and the brethren adjourned to the White Lion Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was prepared by Bro. Moore.—The W.M., Bro. Hayward, in proposing the loyal toasts, said no one could doubt our loyalty and allegiance to the Crown, which had been strongly illustrated by the national feeling and sympathy evinced for "Her Majesty the Queen and the Princess of Wales" in their recent affliction through the dangerous illness of his Royal Highness our brother the Prince of Wales, and fervently expressed gratitude to T.G.A.O.T.U. that He had been graciously pleased to spare the life of our noble and illustrious brother. In proposing the Masonic toasts, the W.M. briefly dwelt on the zeal and efficiency of the distinguished brother who had the honour to preside over the Craft, "The Grand Master of England the Marquis of Ripon." Bro. Capt. James, S.W., gave "The D.G.M., Lord Carnarvon, and Officers of G. Lodge." The W.M. then proposed "The Right Worshipful our Prov. Grand Master, Sir Shafto Adair." The toast he said required no comment from him to insure a warm reception. Our Prov. Grand Master had shown himself worthy of his high position, and claimed for himself the deep and lasting attachments of every member of the Craft.—Bro. James, S.W., in appropriate and few well-chosen remarks proposed "The D.G.P.M., the Rev. Bro. Lockwood, and Grand Officers of the Province," to which Bro. Harper, Prov. J.G.W., responded. He most heartily endorsed the sentiments expressed by the W.M. in regard to the excellent Masonic qualities of our P.G.M., and in acknowledging the toast on behalf of the Prov. Grand Officers, which had unexpectedly fallen to his lot, inasmuch as he had almost overlooked the fact, that he was a Grand Officer, said he regretted that the Officers in the province were not called upon to do something more in the cause of Masonry than merely to meet annually for the purpose of exchanging their badges of office. He thought much good might be done by Grand Officers occasionally visiting the lodges in the province.—The W.M. in rising to propose "The Immediate Past Master Bro. Harper," which he pronounced the toast of the evening, said, that the great pleasure and gratification that he (the W.M.) had in proposing this toast would be equally shared by the brethren, that he could not give utterance to their feelings nor his own in such a manner as the toast demanded, and felt proud at having a brother amongst them who had done so much in the cause of Masonry, not only to the Adair Lodge but to the Craft in general. On this occasion, he (the W.M.) was proud in being the medium of conveying some tangible proof of the affectionate regard for the brother who had with so much pleasure to the brethren, and credit to himself, presided over the lodge for the last two years; adding that it was with the utmost possible pleasure that he on behalf of the brethren presented him (Bro. Harper) with a Past Master's jewel as a mark of the high esteem in which he was held by the brethren, and in appreciation of his services rendered to the lodge, trusting that T.G.A.O.T.U. might be pleased long to spare him to wear it.—Bro. Harper, I.P.M., in responding, congratulated the W.M. on the able and feeling speech which he had just delivered, but feared that the flattering remarks in regard to his (Bro. Harper's) services to the lodge might be considered by the brethren to be overdrawn. He thanked them most sincerely for the valuable P.M. jewel with which they had presented him, trusting he should ever look on it, as the most valuable jewel he had, and cherish it as evidence of the affectionate regard in which he was held by the brethren. He (Bro. Harper) would also take the opportunity of acknowledging the assistance rendered by the officers for the past year, and thanked the brethren one and all for the support, courtesy, and indulgence, he had ever met with during the two years he had the honour to preside over them.—The next toast was the health of the "W.M.," Bro. Hayward, proposed by Bro. Harper, who said that it had frequently fallen to his lot during the last two years to address the brethren, both in the lodge and out of the lodge, but that he never stood before them with greater pleasure than on the present occasion, and felt sure that the toast would be equally gratifying to the brethren; that they would all agree with him that Bro. Hayward had patiently and honourably earned his high position; that it was a mistake to suppose that a Mason of one, two, or three years' standing could be capable of governing a lodge. This was not the case with Bro. Hayward; he had spent a lifetime in the cause of Masonry, and much of that time had been devoted in the interests of the Adair Lodge. Bro. Harper, in his own name, and that of the brethren, congratulated the W.M. on his position, trusting that he would fill the important office with credit to himself, and benefit to the brethren.—The W.M. responded, and said that he felt highly gratified that he had been placed in that position by the unanimous vote of the brethren, assuring them that nothing should be wanting on his part to promote the interest and well-being of the Adair Lodge, of which, as one of the original promoters of the lodge, he gave an interesting account of its career, and concluded by thanking the brethren for the honour conferred upon him.—Bro. James, S.W., proposed "The Past Masters," alluding, in particular, to the eminent services rendered to the lodge by Bro. Garrett, P.M., who had the honour of being the first W.M. of the Adair Lodge.—Bro. Garrett, in his usual effective style, replied.—The W.M., in proposing "The Officers of the Lodge," spoke in the highest terms of the S.W., Bro. James, who, he stated, was ever ready and willing to promote the interests of the Craft. He (the W.M.) hoped that next year Bro. James would accept the highest honour the lodge can bestow, and congratulated himself on having been successful in the selection of his officers.—Bro. James, S.W., and Bro. Sparrow, S.D., responded.—"The Masonic Charities" was proposed by Bro. Harper, and responded to by Bro. Banning, P.M., a collection being made by the brethren present in aid of the same. "The Ladies," and Tyler's toasts closed the proceedings of this most pleasant and agreeable evening.

TREDEGAR.—St. George's Lodge, No. 1089.—The installation of Bro. William Davies as W.M. of this lodge took place on Thursday se'night, at Tredegar. The ceremony was ably performed by Bro. J. Middleton. The banquet was held at the Castle Hotel, and was supplied in the host's best style. The W.M. was supported by the Prov. G.M., Bro. Col. Charles Lyne, the D.P.G.M., Bro. Homfray, and other members of the P.G.L. Amongst the visitors were Bros. J. C. Parkinson, P.M. 181, and J. S. Adam, P.M. 90. The company was very numerous, and everything went off well. In the course of the proceedings, an address, bound in crimson and beautifully engrossed, was presented by the lodge to the P.G.M.

LLANGFNI.—Anglesey Lodge, No. 1113.—A regular meeting of the above lodge was held at the lodge-room, Bull Hotel, on Tuesday, the 26th December. There were present: Bros. J. L. Hampton Lewis, I.P.M.; R. H. Williams, P.M.; William Bulkeley Hughes, P.P.S.G.W.; T. C. Roden, P.M., P.P.S.G.W.; William Hughes, P.M., Treas.; William Evans, S.W. and W.M.-elect; R. T. Phillips, J.W.; Evan Williams, I.G.; Edmond Hicks, Sec.; J. L. Griffith, S.D.; B. Rouse, Robt. Rowlands, M. Dyer, Tyler; and visiting Brothers John Peters (W.M.), James Lloyd (I.G.), Owen R. Ellis (Secretary), and Joseph Jones—all from the Lodge of St. Cybi, No. 597, Holyhead. The chief business of the evening was the installation of a Master for the ensuing year. The ceremonies were worked in the several degrees, in a most able and impressive manner, by Bro. T. C. Roden, P.M., who appears to be thoroughly versed in the Craft service, and to have his entire heart in the work. Bro. William Evans had been duly elected at the previous meeting to the office of W.M. for the coming year, and he was therefore installed in the chair according to ancient custom. After appointing and investing his officers and transacting other business, the W.M. closed the lodge in perfect peace and harmony. The brethren then adjourned to the dining-room, where a splendid banquet was awaiting them, prepared by the landlord, Bro. Crewdson. After dinner, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and drunk with enthusiasm, and none more so than the one to "The better health of our Royal Brother Albert Edward Prince of Wales."

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Royal Hotel, on Thursday, the 4th inst. Bro. J. Fenn, W.M., was in the chair of honour, and was supported by the following officers: Bros. C. Carnegie, I.P.M., Treas.; Captain Richardson, R.E., S.W.; A. M'Kenzie, J.W.; J. Lavety, S.D.; R. Bennett, J.D.; Anderson, I.G.; and U. Lucas, Tyler. Bro. Carnegie acted as Secretary, in the absence of Bro. White. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. It was resolved, on the motion of Bro. C. Carnegie, seconded by Bro. A. M'Kenzie, to give £5 to the Masonic Benevolent Institution, to be placed on the list of Bro. Eve, P.G.S.W. Hants. Bro. Carnegie read a report from the Committee of Reference, stating that the balance sheet, which the lodge had directed to be prepared, had been executed. On the proposition of Bro. Bennett, a vote of thanks was voted to the Treasurer and the Committee of Reference for their able administration of the funds of the lodge during the past year. The W.M. proposed that a charitable association be formed for the purpose of enabling the brethren to become Life Governors of the various Masonic Charities, and Bro. Carnegie was requested to make the necessary preparations, and report to the next meeting of the lodge. Nothing further being offered for the good of Masonry, the lodge was closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love.

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge, No. 1353.—The regular meeting of this young but flourishing lodge took place on Wednesday evening, the 17th inst., at the Masonic Temple, Athenæum, Lancaster. The W.M., Bro. Christopher Hartley, presided, and was supported by his officers as follows: Bros. J. Barrow, S.W.; J. Bell, J.W.; W. Heald, Sec.; R. Wulfenden, S.D. (for Bro. Joseph Barrow); J. Acton, J.D.; J. Coulon, I.G.; J. Watson, Tyler; Bulfield, Holmes, Williams, Parkinson, Banister, Forster, Hodgson (Kendal), Carr, and J. Taylor (1051) as Organist. The lodge was opened in due form in the first degree, and the minutes of the former meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Capt. John Jacobson, a candidate for initiation, which proved unanimous in his favour, and he was introduced and initiated into the mysteries of the Craft, in an efficient and most impressive manner, by the W.M. Bros. Hodgson, Carr, and Banister were questioned in the E.A. Degree, and the answers in each case proving satisfactory, the W.M. invested them separately with the test of merit, when the three candidates for advancement retired, and the lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bros. Hodson, Carr, and Banister were each separately initiated and advanced to the degree of Fellow-Craft, and immediately retired. Bro. Forster was then examined as to his proficiency by the W.M. in the F.C. Degree, which proving satisfactory, he was entrusted with the test of merit and retired. The lodge was opened in the third degree, when Bro. Forster was introduced and raised to that sublime degree. The lodge was then closed to the first degree, when Bro. C. Hoyle (281) was proposed as a joining member, and Messrs. Barsby and Daniel Rushton Gardner were proposed as candidates. Hearty good wishes having been given by the S.W. from 281, and there being no other business before the lodge, it was closed in due form.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

LIVERPOOL.—Liverpool Conclave, No. 55.—An assembly of this conclave was held on Thursday se'night, at the Adelphi Hotel, by order of the M.P.S., for the installation of approved candidates. Since its consecration a few months ago, this conclave has prospered in a most remarkable manner, and the proceedings this evening were of such a character as to promise even greater success in the future. Amongst the officers present were Ill. Sir Kt. G. Turner, Int.-Gen. W.L.; Sir Knts. J. Kellett Smith, M.P.S.; J. R. Goepel, V.E.; H. M. Molyneux, S.G.; R. Washington, H.P.; J. Wood, Treas.; Henry James, Rec.; T. Clark and W. Doyle, Prefects; and H. Nelson, S.S. The conclave was opened in due form by the M.P.S., and the following brethren were received, admitted, and installed with solemn ceremonial: Bros. E. M. Sheldon (1094), S. J. B. Caldwell (1350), J. T. Parkinson (1013), F. Day (1013), W. H. Lee (673), and E. Dutch (667). Ill. Int.-Gen. Turner announced that, as an acknowledgment of the standing of the conclave, and as a recognition of the valuable services of the M.P.S., the Grand Council had elevated the M.P.S. to the distinguished position of a "Knight of the Grand Cross." The compliment was suitably acknowledged by Sir Kt. Smith, after which the muster-roll was called, and the conclave was closed in peace and harmony. The Sir Kts. companions afterwards partook of an excellent tea, and during the evening a number of knightly toasts were proposed and cordially received. A spontaneous act of charity on the part of the knights resulted in a very substantial addition to the "Hospital Saturday" contributions, which will be transmitted to the Treasurer of the fund.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Urgent Necessity.—These preparations afford the best and cheapest means of removing all ordinary surgical and medical maladies, both in this country and the colonies. In the latter, the Ointment and Pills are invaluable, for none but the careless would be without an antidote to the accidental injuries and the many ailments to which the settler must be more or less exposed when at a distance from all professional help. Sprains, cuts, burns, skin diseases, ulcers, abscesses, and varicose veins are readily cured by Holloway's Ointment. The Pills, too, furnish a perfect pharmacopœia for subduing all internal derangements of the viscera—from simple irritation of the stomach to confirmed liver disease, or the more disastrous dysentery.—[Adv't.]

APRIL ELECTION, 1872.

YOUR votes and interest are earnestly solicited on behalf of

FREDERICK CHARLES GATES,

AGED 7 1/2 YEARS,

Son of the late Bro. JAMES HAYDEN GATES, of Clapham, Surrey, Builder, who died in June, 1871, after a long and painful illness, leaving a Widow and seven children totally unprovided for, his severe sufferings from hereditary disease having, during the previous two years, incapacitated him from attending to his business pursuits. Bro. Gates was initiated in the Panmure Lodge, 720, served the offices and passed the chair of that lodge, and was also Past II. of the Chapter attached thereto. Whilst in a position to do so, he faithfully discharged his Masonic duties, and supported the Charitable Institutions by every means in his power.

The case is strongly recommended by the following brethren:

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."

"Earl RUSSELL communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any Medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmotic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. M'GIBSON CHOPP, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff-Surgeon to H.M.F.

"SIR,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years, in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really in some cases it acted as a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BARER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864."

Sold in Bottles at 1/1, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

NOTES ON THE "UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL."

A Lecture delivered before the Freres of the Prudence Encampment of Masonic Knights Templar, at Ipswich, on the 31st. July, 1872.

BY EMRA HOLMES, 31^o,

Eminent Commander of the Encampment, Grand Provost of England, Provincial Grand Banner Bearer of the Royal Order of Scotland, &c.

Mackey, quoting from Clavel, thus speaks of the Rite of Strict Observance, before alluded to.*

"The Rite of Strict Observance was a modification of Masonry, based on the Order of Knights Templar, and introduced into Germany in 1745 by its founder, the Baron Hunde. It was divided into the following seven degrees:—

1. Apprentice; 2, Fellow Craft; 3, Master; 4, Scotch Master; 5, Novice; 6, Templar; 7, Professed Knight.

According to the system of the founder of this Rite, upon the death of Jacques Molay, the Grand Master of the Templars, Pierre d' Aumont, the Provincial Grand Master of Auvergne, with two Commanders and five Knights, retired for purposes of safety into Scotland, which place they reached, disguised as operative Masons, and there finding the Grand Commander, George Harris, and several Knights, they determined to continue the Order.

Aumont was nominated Grand Master at a chapter held on St. John's Day, 1313. To avoid persecution the Knights become Freemasons. In 1316 the Grand Master of the Temple removed his seat to Old Aberdeen, and from that time the Order, under the veil of Masonry, spread rapidly through France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, and elsewhere. These events constituted the principal subject of many of the degrees of the Rite of Strict Observance. The others were connected with alchemy, magic, and other superstitious practices. The great doctrine contended for was "that every true Mason is a Knight Templar."

He also says that the Clerks of Relaxed Observance were a schism from the Order of Strict Observance. They claimed a pre-eminence over not only the latter Rite, but over all Masonry. The Rite was divided into ten degrees, called Apprentice, Fellowcraft, Master African Brother, Knight of St. Andrew, Knight of the Eagle, Scotch Master, Sovereign Magus, Provincial Master of the Red Cross, and Knight of Light. This last degree was divided into five sections, comprehending Knight Novice of the third year, Knight of the fifth year, Knight of the seventh year, Knight Levite, and Knight Priest. To be initiated into the mysteries of the clerks, it was necessary to be a Roman Catholic and to have taken all the military degrees of the Rite of Strict Observance. Alchemy was one of the objects of their secret instruction.

Findel says* "Towards the end of the year 1778, the Scotch directories in Auvergne and Burgundy invited to a Convent National des Gaules, in Lyons, which assembly was actually convened in November and December.

The name of Templar "was exchanged for that of Chevalier Bienfaisant de la Sainte cité," and some important changes in the ritual of the Strict Observance were made, without, however, causing any breach with this latter.

It appears that Bro. Von Weiler had in 1774, received from Baron Von Hunde, Grand Master of the Strict Observance, a warrant to establish the Order in France. He was very successful, and the Grand Orient, whose chief officers secretly belonged, Findel says, to the Strict Observance, resolved in 1755, to unite themselves to those directories formed by Weiler, and in the following year a treaty of union was approved of by a very large majority.

I have before noted the tradition about D' Aumont, which is quoted again from Mackey, in relation to the Rite of Strict Observance, and have mentioned some of the objections to it.

The readers of the Freemason will, I dare say, pardon me, if I return for a moment to the subject of these traditions. I dare say many will take a greater interest in the subject, when they learn that Jacques de Molay was intimately connected with the Order in England.

Addison informs us that Jaques de Molay succeeded the Grand Master Gaudini, 1293; that he was of the family of the Lords of Louvic and Raon, in Burgundy.

This illustrious nobleman was at the head of the English Province of the Order at the period of his election as Grand Master. He was first appointed Visitor General, then Grand Preceptor of England. During his residence in Britain he held several chapters or assemblies of the brethren at the Temple at London, and at the different preceptories. He stood as sponsor to the son of Philip le Bel, and visited France for that purpose.

He also informs us at that time Bro. Himbert Blancke, Knight, Preceptor of Auvergne, who was one of the Knights examined when the Order was suppressed, had been in the Order thirty-eight years. He was received at the city of Tyre, had been engaged in constant warfare against the Infidels, and had fought to the last in defence of Acre.

When he was asked why they had made the reception and profession of brethren secret, he replied "through our own unaccountable folly."

Bro. Thomas le Chamberleyn, in his examination, said the reception was the same in England as beyond the sea, that all seculars were excluded, and that when he himself entered the Temple

Church to be professed, the door by which he entered was closed after him. On being asked why none else were present but the brethren, he said he knew of no reason, but that it was so written in their book of rules.

Addison states that the Templars were imprisoned over three years in England; so that it is not at all impossible that Himbert de Blancke may have been succeeded by D' Aumont during his imprisonment, or D' Aumont may have been his deputy, and acted as Grand Prior of Auvergne during his absence in England.

One of the rack-extorted confessions of Templars which was exhibited in London, and which had been obtained in France, was from Robert de St. Just, who had been received into the Order by Brother Himbert, Grand Preceptor of England*; one would be glad to know what, if any, connection there was between the Grand Preceptor of England and the Grand Prior of Auvergne. It has been objected that the names mentioned in the traditions of the Knights who perpetuated the Order cannot be traced. It would be surprising if they could.

From the "Student's France," edited by Dr. Smith,* I gather that at the time of the suppression of the Order the Templars formed a body of 15,000 veteran warriors. Dr. Smith says "no less than 546 Templars appeared before the Royal Commission, formed to try them, from different parts of the Kingdom, all of whom agreed in declaring that the accusations against them were utterly false and calumnious,—that the faith of the Order was and always had been immaculate,—that its original rule had been faithfully and strictly observed,—that all statements to the contrary were base and infamous perjuries."

The Archbishop of Sens, one of Phillip's creatures, assembled a Provincial Council, and condemned fifty-four of the Templars. The sentence was carried into effect on the 10th May, 1310, in the Faubourg St. Antoine, at Paris. The unhappy sufferers died with the utmost constancy, and protested with their last breath their entire innocence."

The editor, speaking of Clement V.'s suppression of the Order, which the Pope pronounced 22nd March, 1312, mentions that two-thirds of their moveable property was claimed by the French Crown, "by way of compensation for the expenses of this iniquitous prosecution."

He goes on to say that the Grand Master, Jaques de Molay, and his three brethren, the Preceptors of Normandy, Aquitaine, and Poitou, remained still to be disposed of. They were then kept two years longer in confinement in Paris, and on the 11th of March, 1314, were brought forth before a Commission, named by the Pope, to hear their final sentence, which condemned them to perpetual imprisonment.

The presiding Cardinal had no sooner ceased than the Grand Master and the Preceptor of Normandy suddenly stood up, and, in energetic language, recanted the confessions formerly extorted from them, and called Heaven to witness that they were wholly guiltless. The commission was adjourned till next day, but Philip caused the two prisoners to be conveyed the same night to a small island in the Seine, close to his palace, where they were burnt to death.

"They persisted to the last in asserting their innocence," Dr. Smith adds, "and suffered with a constancy which moved the admiration of all beholders."

The author of "The Student's France" names Ferretti of Vicenza as the historian who mentions the incident already adverted to of the Grand Master summoning the Pope and Philip to appear before the throne of God to answer for their heinous crime.

I have before alluded to Wileke's attack on the Templars, quoted with such unction by Bro. Findel, whose bête noir is the Order of the Temple, I believe.

Let us see what a great author of our own says, and what his estimate is of Wileke's book.

In Milman's Latin Christianity,* the learned Dean says, "Wileke asserts (page 342), that Moldenhauers publication of the proceedings against the Templars (now more accurately and fully edited by M. Michelet), was brought up by the Freemasons as injurious to the fame of the Templars. If this were so the Freemasons committed an error; my doubts of their guilt are strongly confirmed by the process. Wileke makes three regular gradations of initiation. First, the denial of Christ; second, the kisses; third, the worship of the idol. This is contrary to all the evidence; the two first are always described as simultaneous. Wileke has supposed that so long as the Order consisted only of Knights, it was orthodox. The Clerks introduced into the Order, chiefly Friar Minorites, brought in learning and the wild speculative opinions. But for this he alleges not the least proof."

Wileke, in his history of the Knights Templar, reviews the accusations made against them on their suppression, but repudiates the claims of the modern Templars to be their successors.

He supposes that the secret form of worship amongst them was introduced about 1250-1270.

He speaks of them as Gnostics, and says that following the bent of their age, they revered astrology and alchemy.

The heresy of the Templars, he says, was displayed at first only as a private opinion. "What previously had only been the belief of a few, now became general doctrine," says Findel in the appendix to his History of Freemasonry, who quotes Wileke as his authority, "their customs were turned into a ritual, their simple unassuming chapter was formed into a lodge, a secret teaching in dogma and ceremonial was inculcated, which most probably originated with the clergy."

The secret doctrine of the Order has been a matter of perpetual strife, and has awakened much speculation.

In the last century, says Findel, when Freemasonry erroneously supposed herself to be a daughter of Templarism, great pains were taken to regard the Order of Knights Templars as innocent and free from all taint of mysticism.

"Several centuries ago," he adds, "the Freemasons, in their eagerness to obtain historical facts, permitted false statements to be palmed upon them."

*Vol. vii, page 277.

It would appear, then, according to his own statement, that this tradition of the connection of the Templars with Masonry was several centuries old.

Bro. Findel (or Wileke, for we hardly know whether the author is quoting Wileke, or only giving a digest of his views), alluding to the report in the eighteenth century, that the Knights Templar were still in existence, denies the possibility of such being the case, because when the Order was abolished, its power was annihilated, and "it was impossible to wake it from the dead."

He continues,—"Besides those members who were executed, many were in prison, and many had taken to flight and perished; some of the Knights, after the abolition of their Order, were set at liberty, and either entered other Orders, or were provided for by different convents, and not a few wandered about in an abject state of want and poverty. The fugitive Knights could not of themselves re-establish the Order (Why not Bro. Findel?) and still less those who have recognised and obeyed the superior powers; neither could they affect anything in their own favour in the Order of the Knights of St. John, or in the building fraternities, for it is probable many joined these communities, and the new confederacies which were sought to be instituted, never boasted of any vitality, and soon fell into oblivion. If the Order had continued to exist until the year 1459, it would most surely have incorporated itself with the new Order of Chivalry, which the Pope endeavoured to establish on the island of Lemnos, as no better opportunity could have been offered it of becoming known. If it had still existed in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, it would have been discovered and betrayed by the Jesuits. It could not have remained even a score of years concealed, still less centuries."

For a violent opponent of the Masonic Knights Templar, it is rather an important admission to make the probable absorption of the Knights into the Order of Hospitallers, and amongst the Masons; but does Bro. Findel think for one moment that the Hospitallers would have admitted them, had they been guilty of the dreadful crimes imputed to them?

It is true, I dare say, that, as Findel elsewhere says "Not the Templars alone, but many other spiritual Orders of Knighthood were suspected of being addicted to heresy"; but if the truth were known it would simply come to this, that the Templars, like the Freemasons, were, in consequence of their long connection with the East, less bigoted in their religious views than quite suited the fancy of the Ultramontanes of that day, that they were more tolerant of the opinions of others, and in fact were liberal Catholics, or, more properly speaking, what we should now call Latitudinarians.

We all know the old lawyers' advice—"If you have a weak case, abuse the plaintiff's attorney."

Findel must have a very weak case against the Templars of to-day, when he rakes up against them all the foul calumnies which impartial historians have long ago consigned to the dust of oblivion.

Is it likely, we ask, that a body which had been so persecuted, which was under the ban of excommunication when excommunication meant something more than it does now, should seek to incorporate itself with a new Papal Order of Chivalry?

And as to the statement that it could not have remained concealed for any length of time, because of the Jesuits, why, by parity of reasoning, it might as well have been said that Freemasonry itself could not so exist, and with equal show of logic and common sense.

No truths are so dangerous as half truths. One of the charges brought against the Templars was that they were Gnostics, heretics in fact, just as the old Catholics of to-day will, no doubt, be termed, because they do not believe in the infallibility of the Pope. Well, it is not impossible that there was a shade of truth in this, that in fact they believed in the Creeds, that is in the form of belief which the Church of England, for instance, accepts for true. See Jacques de Molay's confession, quoted in a previous article.

He confessed all that the Catholic Church holds to be true, though not enough, perhaps for the Church of Rome. If the Templars were the depositaries of Masonic lore, as Laurie suggests, the Hospitallers, from their intimate connection with them, could scarcely avoid the contamination, as their enemies would have said.

The Templars, as men of world, would hardly be bigoted Catholics, and would be naturally disposed towards the reception of "Light."

I have already drawn attention to the probable initiation of the Templars into our mysteries, taught and practised as they were by the Syriac fraternities. Why may not the Templars have got their Masonry through the Saracens?

It has been objected that if we admit this, we admit the charges brought against them. But this I emphatically deny. We all know that to be a good Mason, one must be a good man, and I am yet to be informed that it was otherwise in "the days of old."

Bro. Haye, in his History of the Knights Templar,* says "It was stated by De Clifton that when the arrest of the English Templars was known in Scotland, John de Husflete, Preceptor of Blancradoch, and the others, threw off their habits, fled, and dispersed themselves "propter scandalum exortum contra ordinem," and we are told by a learned French author that, having deserted the Temple, they ranged themselves under the banner of Robert Bruce, and fought with him at Bannockburn.

Reynouard excuses himself from speculating on the fate of the Scottish Knights in these words:—"Que devinrent ils? Ce n'est pas à moi de soulever le voile mystérieux de ces infortunés; l'histoire publique se tait; mon devoir est de me faire comme elles."

Legend states that after the decisive battle of Bannockburn, when Scotland drove the usurping English from her soil, Bruce, in return for their eminent services, formed these Templars into a new body,† with rules based on those of the original Order."

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GRAND LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1871.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts may be said to be a literary as well as a Masonic organisation. Its proceedings increase in interest every year, and the volume lately issued for those of 1871, surpasses in value and importance any previous publication of that flourishing Grand Lodge. To do justice to such a massive work of some 750 pages, a long and extended review would be necessary, which we have not the time at present to prepare, and we are anxious not to delay our friendly notice of so extraordinary an edition.

The frontispiece is a finely engraved portrait of William Sewall Gardner, Grand Master from A.D. 1868 to 1871, a bright Mason, a ripe scholar, and perfect gentleman. Possessing these qualifications, we can understand the progress of the Craft in Massachusetts under his rule, and are thus enabled to appreciate the motives of the editor of this grand volume in placing Bro. Gardner's portrait as the frontispiece, although at the time of its issue, he had become Past Grand Master.

A quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge was held at Masonic Temple, Boston, March 8th, A.D. 1871. A communication was read from the Grand Lodge of Chili, respecting the Aconcagna Lodge, at Valparaiso, working under a dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts from A.D. 1869, and which it was asked may be transferred to their allegiance, because it was in their jurisdiction. The Committee, to whom was entrusted the consideration of this question of privilege, reported that the Grand Orient of Chili having adopted what is known as the Scottish Rite, had been recognised in 1862, as a co-ordinate independent body, but certainly not one to whom the Lodges, long previously established in the Republic under the "York" Rite, would naturally turn, and acknowledge its authority, when it was a foreign rite, with the esoteric formula, of which the members were comparatively unacquainted.

The Committee cited several precedents for such co-ordinate action—England with its District Grand Lodge at Buenos-Ayres, within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of the Argentine Republic; Scotland and its Provincial Grand Lodge within the precincts of the Grand Lodge of Venezuela, and its lodges at Callao and Lima, in the Peruvian Republic; Ireland and its Provincial Grand Lodge under the Grand Orient of Portugal, &c.

The recommendation that the prayer of the lodge under dispensation be granted, and that a charter be issued for the permanent organisation of the Aconcagna Lodge at Valparaiso.

The address of the Grand Master was mainly taken up with purely local matters. He opposed the introduction of what is known as "Female Masonry," under the designation of the Eastern Star, and lodges were forbidden, accordingly, any connection with it.

A special communication was held on March 15th, for the purpose of constituting Temple Lodge of East Boston. The Grand Master read an admirable charge by Paul Revere (Past Grand Master), written and delivered about 1795, and in his address to the new lodge, gave an address, respecting Sir Thomas Temple, who first went to New England in 1657. Sir John Temple was the first consul general from England to the United States, and died at New York, A.D. 1798.

The second quarterly communication was held on the 14th day of June, 1871. Several letters were read by the Grand Master in his address, which were of an important nature, one had reference to the initiation of maimed candidates, from the Grand Lodge of South Carolina, which the M.W. Bro. Gardiner answered in a fair and liberal manner, and another from Grand Committee of Nevada, raising the question of "making Masons at sight," was answered by the Grand Master to the effect that "There can be no doubt of the existence in the Grand Master to this right and power. . . . I doubt very much whether the Craft of Massachusetts would sustain a Grand Master in the exercise of this prerogative, unless it was apparent that an absolute necessity existed therefor, and not then unless the making was in a regularly organized lodge, and according to the forms and ceremonies required by our ritual.

We quite think with Bro. Gardiner, and believe that the time is entirely past when making "Masons at sight" could be either desirable or justifiable. On the 8th April, Bro. Solon Thornton tendered his resignation of the office of Recording Grand Secretary (Grand Secretary virtually) which having been accepted, with sincere regret, Bro. the Rev. Charles H. Titus was subsequently elected to that office, and also Clerk to the Board and Corporation, as it is called, the Grand Lodge being formally chartered by the commonwealth of Massachusetts. Out of 410 votes, Bro. Titus received 340, and we wish him every success and prosperity in his new sphere of usefulness.

At the special Grand Lodge, opened in ample form, at Nantucket, 27th June, the Festival of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated, in connection with the centennial anniversary of Union Lodge, originally chartered May 27th, 1771. The Grand Lodge was escorted by members of the De Molay Commander of Knights Templar, and marched in procession with the Masonic bodies to the festival dinner. At the conclusion of the post-prandial speeches the Grand Lodge proceeded to the Methodist Church, "where an oration was listened to by a large number of Masons, citizens, and ladies, after which the Grand Lodge was closed."

At a Deputy Grand Lodge, Sept. 6th, under the gavel of the R.W. Past D.G.M., Bro. C. W. Moore, corresponding G. Sec., the Ezekiel Bates Lodge was constituted and its Hall formally dedicated.

The third quarterly communication (13th Sept., 1871) was one of special interest. The Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form, with prayer, by the R.W. and Rev. Charles H. Titus, acting Grand Chaplain, the following hymn was sung.

Music.—Auld Lang Syne.

Come, Brothers of the mystic tie,
Our social work begun,
We'll raise a opening song on high,
To Him, the Holy One

With hearts united, firm and free
We round our altar stand
Who best can work, and best agree,
Are dearest in our band.

Come kindle at our holy fire
Fraternal thoughts, and laud
Each worthy act, and pure desire
Shall kindred wishes bind.

With hearts united &c.

The preliminary business having been transacted, R.W. Bro. C. L. Woodbury presented the report of the committee on the petition of Bro. Samuel Evans. It consists of a most elaborate resumé of the whole subject of sectarian matters in Freemasonry, and in the main seeks to show that certain portions or features of a theological character, which exist in the ritual and work of the Order, are not contrary to the letter as well as the spirit of Freemasonry, as Bro. Samuel Evans, and 225 others state, but actually form an integral part of our ceremonies, incidental to the Christian origin of the Fraternity. The committee declare that as an historical question it cannot longer be contended that the institution of Freemasonry is due to the London Grand Lodge.

We quite agree in this statement; but certainly, if not the institution, at all events the constitution of Grand Lodges is due to the London Grand Lodge, as it was the first of that style of organisation, and, directly or indirectly, the mother of all others.

In speaking of our ancient documents, the Committee observe—"Some eight or nine of these manuscripts have been unearthed by the labour of students, among whom the historian of old York Masonry, Bro. Hughan, has been eminently successful." We may state that there are now some twenty original MS. Masonic Constitutions, existing in public and private archives, ranging in date from the fourteenth to the eighteenth centuries, and they are all evidently written and intended for Christians, and there cannot be a doubt that these early MSS. (of which the latter versions are merely free copies) prove that Freemasonry lived in accord with the established Christian religion of England of that period.

The Committee remark "It has been distinctly put to us by an acute and learned Israelite brother that the Christian usages found among our Craft in our traditions, are offensive to him, we ought to exclude them. If that is a sufficient reason, what will become of our society? A Christian may ask that allusion to King Solomon shall be expunged, because he was a Jew. Another may ask all allusion to Hiram to be effaced, because he was a Pagan. The Trinitarian may ask that the Grand Architect of the Universe shall only be addressed in his triune character. The resurrection from the dead stands no better. Every particle of our religion, ritual and symbols, must fall under the same axe, and the Masonry we have received be extinguished. . . . We can have no Hebrew, no Episcopal, no Presbyterian lodges, because one of our objects is the social mingling of good men of various sects. The orthodox and the heterodox must meet in the lodge on the same level, and learn mutual esteem through good Masonry. In this diversity of creeds lies one important field of our labour, and we should deplore the alienation of any respectable sect from among us." These sentiments will be approved by the English Craft. As Masons, we are tolerant to all religious sects, and all are welcome to our lodges, irrespective of creed, colour or country, so long as of sound judgment, strict morals, and bear the tongue of good report. We have no desire to radically change our ritual. It is now about as little offensive to men of various creeds as it can be made, consistent with its character and origin, and so long as its universal and unsectarian platform be maintained we cannot see there is any cause of complaint, either in a religious or social point of view.

The report having been read, the recommendation of the Committee was put that "The Petitioners have leave to withdraw," which the Grand Master declared to be unanimous in the affirmative, whereupon Bro. Samuel Evans arose, and requested that his name might be recorded as voting in the negative, so that our zealous brother retained his courteous opposition to the last.

The Grand Master read the official documents relating to the magnificent reception of the Grand Master of England, the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., by the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, and at which were representatives from nearly all the Grand Lodges in the United States. The M.W. Bro. W. S. Gardner, being unable to attend, the distinguished Mason, John T. Heard, P.G.M., was deputed to attend. In a capital letter, Bro. Heard concludes by stating that "both at the reception and banquet, the Grand Master of England returned thanks, eloquently and warmly, for the attention he had received. At the table many brethren from various parts of the Republic made short but appropriate addresses, which were received by the company with great favour."

A copy of the letter signed by our respected Grand Secretary, containing particulars of the vote of our Grand Lodge, holden at Freemasons' Hall, London, on the 7th June, in appreciation of the hearty and enthusiastic reception of the Earl De Grey and Ripon, was also read, and the resolution was duly forwarded by the next mail, signed and sealed by the Grand Master and the Grand Secretary.

On the arrival of the Marquis of Ripon at the city of Washington, U.S., a very kind invitation was extended to his Lordship by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, "as the oldest of those instituted on the Continent. We have thought that it would be a source of extreme pleasure, could we meet, for the first time in near a century and a half, the representative of our Masonic mother."

Lord Tenterden replied, by request of our Grand Master, who had much pleasure in receiving this gratifying proof of the feelings of fraternal union with which the brethren of the Order in Massachusetts are actuated towards the members of the Craft in England, over whom he has the honour to preside; and who much regrets that he sees so little prospect of his visiting Boston as to render it impossible for him to appoint any day on which he could have the pleasure of accepting the friendly and fraternal invitation.

The thoroughly hearty manner in which the Marquis of Ripon was received by the members of the mystic tie in the United States, and particularly at the Grand banquet, given in his honour at the city of Washington, must ever prove a source of pleasing remembrance to his Lordship; and historically, it will be noted as one of the most prominent and valuable evidences in favour of the happy and genial influences, as well as the international and universal character of Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masonry.

The corner-stone of the Army and Navy monument at Boston Common was laid by the Grand Lodge, on the 18th September, under the acting Grand Mastership of Bro. C. L. Woodbury, D.G.M. (The structure is to be erected in memory of those soldiers and sailors, citizens of Boston, who lost their lives in the recent civil war). The Grand Lodge was conducted to carriages furnished for their use by the City Government, and the procession was composed of a large number of military organisations, the Government of the Commonwealth, the Mayor and other officers of the city, and others. The entire procession numbered over 5,000. On the conclusion of the ceremony, an artillery salute was given.

The corner-stone of the new post-office and sub-treasury building was also laid in the same city, on the 16th of October, by the Grand Master. It must have been a grand sight, indeed, to witness, for the spectacle was, in one respect at least, quite unique. It was the first time in their history when the President of the nation had requested the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts to lay the corner-stone of a public edifice, and himself been present at the ceremony. More than one hundred lodges were very fully represented in the procession, and no doubt it was as numerous as it was effective. All the Commanderies of Knights Templar in Massachusetts and Rhode Island were called out, and Boston Commandery was detailed as the Body Guard to the Grand Lodge. Four carriages were provided for the Grand Master and his chief officers. Able and interesting addresses were delivered by Past Master General Creswell, Ex-Mayor Shusteff of Boston, General Bust, (Postmaster of Boston), and especially by the Grand Master. A beautiful hymn, composed by Bro. William T. Adams, was sung to the tune "America," all present uniting, and the band accompanied them.

On the return of the brethren to the Grand Lodge the handsome sum of one thousand dollars was voted for the relief of our Masonic brethren in Chicago, and that the said amount be transmitted to the Grand Master of Illinois for distribution. The President received, expressly by his desire, the Grand Master, the same evening at St. James's Hotel, and also the members of the Grand Lodge, about 200 in number, who after shaking hands with that distinguished personage, and enjoying a few minutes in social intercourse, dispersed without formality.

The annual communication was holden 13th Dec., 1871. The annual report of the Grand Master showed that there were 21,506 members, and the lodges generally were in a flourishing condition. The Grand Treasurer had paid the sum of £100,000 (circa) and received about £110,000. The debt of Grand Lodge still amounts to upwards of £80,000, which, however, we are glad to notice, is being reduced annually by three to four thousand pounds. There is a "Sinking Fund" of some £35,000, which appears to be formed from the Fees receiveable from the initiates as dues from lodges.

The expenses of printing during 1870 was so great (viz. nearly £900) that a Committee was appointed to have charge of that department.

The "Committees" in United States Masonry may be said to do everything. When any matters of consequence arise, petitions presented, or anything important is to be done, a Committee is always appointed to prepare a report. This common sense plan should be adopted in all Grand Lodges, because a great deal of unnecessary discussion and waste time would be saved, as the committee really investigate all matters thoroughly, and the members of the Grand Lodge having sound data, are enabled to arrive, speedily and quietly, at an intelligent decision.

A report was presented by the Grand Secretary, of the contributions received from the lodges in Massachusetts, for Chicago, from October 18th to December 11th, 1871. The total contributions were considerably over £1,000.

Bro. Findel's letter, received September last, was read, and as his suggestions relative to the Grand Lodges being unlimited in number in any state or country, were utterly opposed to the usages of Craft in America, the Grand Master acted as the mouthpiece of some fifty Grand Lodges in saying that the acknowledgment of any Grand Lodge in Massachusetts, other than our own, would lead to the most disastrous results to the institution of Freemasonry.

We rather wonder of our talented Bro. Findel's anxiety to promote the establishment of more than one Grand Lodge in each country, seeing that such a course would inevitably be followed by an unwholesome rivalry and party manifestations, quite foreign to the genius of Freemasonry. One Grand Lodge in each state or country is, in our opinion, much better than many, and even preferable to two; hence we are obliged to disagree with our friend Findel's action in this matter.

The valedictory of the Grand Master is a pleasure to read, because in it he shows that although the commencement of his official duties was not under propitious circumstances, because of the large and unwieldy debt, a taxation irritated many of the brethren, and by others the Grand Lodge was looked upon as a monopoly; yet, in concluding his eventful term of office, he was able to declare that "no administration of the Grand Lodge within his memory had received more encouragement from the Craft at large, or been in closer sympathy with all the brethren than this." One of the mornings occupied by the Grand Lodge meetings was devoted to a "Grand Lodge of Instruction," wherein the work and lectures of the three degrees were fully exemplified by the three Grand Lecturers, assisted by several Past Masters. "A very large number of the members were present, and great interest was manifested in the ritual of the Craft." At the stated communication for the installation, Grand Master Gardner delivered an elaborate address on "Henry Price, first Grand Master of Masons in America." It is quite impossible for us to do justice to this most exhaustive history in the present friendly review. The readers of the Freemason will be familiar with the subject, through several pages already having been devoted to the enquiry, and we also some time ago alluded to it at length.

An excellent portrait is given of M. W. Bro. Price, and various copies of seals and facsimiles of documents have also been engraved and placed in the book. These have an interest of their own, and are quite as valuable, whether Price was or was not what he claimed to be, unless some other papers are discovered of a more definite nature, we do not think the doubts will all be effaced. If such were possible we know of no brother so capable of clearing Price's character as this worthy historian. The Constitutions of the Grand Lodge, containing the Amendments to March 1872, are printed as an Appendix, and are very appropriately prefaced by a most "speaking" steel engraving of M. W. Bro. Winslow Lewis, the second eldest Past Grand Master of Massachusetts, and one universally respected and beloved throughout the Commonwealth.

We should state that M. W. Bro. Sereno Dwight Nickerson was installed Grand Master, and he has for his principal officers Bros. Everett, of Boston, D.G.M.; Kimball, of Lowell, D.G.W.; Cheever of Chelsea, J.G.W.; John McClellan, of Boston, Grand Treas.; C. H. Titus, Recording Grand Sec.; and C. W. Moore, Corresponding G. Sec. They one and all have our best wishes.

In conclusion we propose to christen the proceedings of 1871-2, Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, "The Extraordinary" Edition, for nothing to be compared with it has hitherto appeared under the wing of Freemasonry, and no matter how great a future may be before us, the volume must ever be regarded as a monument of the industry, research, and ability of the leading Masons in that community.

GRAND LODGE.

A Meeting of Grand Officers and members of the Grand Lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, George Street, on Wednesday evening, 17th September, for the purpose of presenting the Earl of Rosslyn a requisition for his Lordship's continuance in office as Grand Master for the ensuing year. The meeting was presided over by Brother Henry Inglis, of Torsonce, substitute Grand Master, who was supported by Major Hope, of Luffness, Provincial Grand Master for East Lothian; Captain Colt, of Gartsherrie; Major Ramsay, William Mann, Past Grand Warden; John Laurie, Grand Clerk; John Coghill, Grand Director of Ceremonies; Alexander Hay, Grand Jeweller; M. M'Kenzie, Chief Grand Marshal; and T. Abthorpe, Grand Marshal. There was also present a large number of the Grand Stewards and members of the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Clerk read the requisition, which set forth that there was but one opinion in the Craft as to the manner in which his lordship had discharged the duties of his exalted position, and the active interest he had taken in the management of the affairs of Grand Lodge, and the promotion and extension of its benevolent institutions, and that, duly impressed with these considerations, and by the necessity existing, under present circumstances, of the government of the Craft being again confided to the noble, dignified, and impartial guidance which they now possessed, the requisitionists most respectfully and earnestly request his Lordship to allow himself to be put in nomination for the Throne of Grand Lodge for the next ensuing year. The Grand Clerk stated that the number of signatures to the requisition was 7027.

The Chairman, in addressing his Lordship said—I am no implicit believer in ordinary requisitions and testimonials, because I am aware that many times they can be got up by the acre, and signed by the careless and unthinking for purposes that are not always praiseworthy; but this is no ordinary requisition, and these are no ordinary requisitionists. Freemasonry is in this country a vast republican brotherhood within a monarchy, where each brother is equal to the other, whatever the social rank or standing of that other may be; and the only aristocracy which we admit, subject to our reverence to God and our allegiance to the throne, is the aristocracy of ancient Greece—the aristocracy of the Best. We have no prejudices. Our discussions on matters of Masonic law, and justice, and expediency, are not unattended often with that fervid heat which is the attribute of Scotchmen. (Applause.) We do not hesitate at times boldly to state our opinions in opposition to the very leader we have chosen. But because we may differ from him now and then, we are not on that account blind to the qualities which have placed him at our head, and it is that very independence of thought and expression which is the guarantee of our honest unanimity, when we attain it. That the thousands of names appended to this requisition recognise in you, in all honesty and truth, a chief worthy of your predecessors, and worthy of the ancient craft of Free and Accepted Scottish Masons, your own knowledge and experience will at once enable you to hold as an undoubted fact.

The Earl of Rosslyn, in replying, said—I must feel impressed by the honesty of this requisition, because I have found in presiding over you an independence of thought and of expression, which, of themselves, were guarantees for the honesty of your feelings, and far distant be the day when an assembly of Freemasons will be ashamed or afraid to say that which is honestly their opinion. But I claim a right on behalf of the chair, at least equal to your own, of independently expressing my opinion. (Loud applause.) It is that feeling that the Grand Master of the Craft must be independent, which partially induced me on a late occasion, to declare that I would not again allow my name to be put in nomination; but I acknowledge to you that in the face of a requisition of this magnitude, and of the flattering terms in which you have been pleased to speak of any humble services I have rendered to the Craft, I am fain to withdraw my declaration. (Loud cheers.) And I will venture to promise to you, not only the strictest endeavours to allow the most free and full declaration of your opinions on all subjects brought before you, but I shall endeavour to limit my own language and my own conduct within the most courteous and the strictest bounds that are consistent with thorough independence of opinion. (Applause.) In the course of some further remarks his Lordship said—When I endeavour to point out the means by which matters connected with the Grand Lodge may be improved, I hope you will individually not consider it matter for discord, but that every Mason will make it a point, as far as possible, to help the Grand Master, if he really means doing good to the Craft. (Applause.) I have no doubt that I am looked upon at the present moment very much as if I were on strike. (Laughter.) Well it is the fashion in these days to be on strike? and I may be regarded as being pretty much in the fashion. But now that I have agreed to come back to work—(applause and laughter)—I hope you will do your best to make Freemasonry a positive good that will be well understood by the outer world—that will redound to the credit of Scotland, as well as to the credit of ourselves as Masons. (Applause.) Let us be able to point to our schools and to our orphanages; and to say that we had so much money that we had spent, and have so much money that we are spending, for the benefit of our fellow-creatures. (Applause.)

Before the meeting separated, Lord Rosslyn said he was happy to tell them that he had been requested to lay the foundation-stone of the Watt Institution and School of Arts, on the 9th Oct. Feeling that the brethren would naturally take a great interest in an institution which had done so much to promote the study of subjects interesting to all Scotchmen, he asked for their support on the occasion. (Applause.)

Three cheers having been given for the Grand Master, the meeting separated.

THE BALLOT FOR W.M.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,

I am pleased to find that Bro. W. J. Hugban, although he is a man who "consents against his will," has withdrawn his suggestions for the ballot of W.M. (Page 522 of the Freemason); there should be no doubt on the subject, the ballot should only pass once round, and the brother who then has the majority of votes should be declared elected; and I must say that if the S.W. of the lodge has worked his way to that position, it is unjust of the brethren not to place him in the chair, unless, indeed, the tongue of bad report has been heard and vouched against him, in which case I should vote for the J.W., as, in my opinion, no P.M. of the lodge should be re-elected (although he must be nominated) while there are Wardens ready and willing to serve in the chair.

Sometimes, I know, there is a slight difference of opinion; but let us hope, for the sake of brotherly love, not so often as some may suppose, from the correspondence which you have printed on the subject, for the members of a lodge cannot be said to work with love and harmony, where there is so little unity as to require a Bye Law, such as Bro. William Date suggests in page 537 of the Freemason.

Yours fraternally,

MAGNUS OHREN,

MASONS AT PUBLIC MEETINGS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I beg to thank you on behalf of a large section of the Masonic fraternity, who are no friends of religious bigotry and intolerance, for your able article on the above subject, and at the same time to express my entire concurrence in the sentiments expressed by "Vectis."

"J. R.," writing to exonerate Bro. Woodward, insinuates that the Suffolk Reporter was alone to blame for inserting his office as Chaplain to the Boys' School. I take the liberty of asking how does "J. R." know, writing in London, that the Reporter at Ipswich if the innocent origin, of this, as I think, in the interest of Masonry, justifiable attack upon and censure of our Reverend Brother? "J. R." admits that he is a younger Mason than the Chaplain, and I should judge by his letter, that he is a very young Mason, indeed.

Like "Vectis," I am compelled to say that I hope Bro. Woodward will not offend again.

Yours fraternally,

A Mason, of fifteen years standing.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cocoa bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cocoa and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and a nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

H. J. SMYTH, of Salisbury Cottage, Walworth, writes, May, 1871:—"I had had the lumbago so bad for eight days that I thought I should have to give up entirely my business; but thanks to Perry Davis's Pain Killer, I felt quite a new man by the following afternoon. I sat by the fire the previous night, and had it well rubbed into the small of my back, and then took some internally. The effect was almost magical, and the cure complete.—To Perry Davis & Son, London."

THE SPURIOUS RITE OF MEMPHIS.

With singular lack of judgment a tribe of Masonic impostors have recently selected England as the theatre of their ridiculous exploits, for whether we consider the past history of Freemasonry in this country, or simply study the peculiar idiosyncracies of the English people, we shall equally arrive at the conclusion that a more unpromising field than Great Britain, for a Masonic chevalier d'industrie cannot possibly exist. Have not these gentry yet learned the well-known lesson of experience, that history repeats itself? or do they, the brainless, wooden images of effete and impious rites, hope to rival those pagods of a by-gone day, who dazzled with their tinsel trumpery the minds of certain weak and thoughtless Masons. Where Ramey failed and Cagliostro juggled in vain, the Burts and Hyams of the Memphis abomination madly strive to win. Truly "fools rush in where angels fear to tread," and after a century of comparative calm, we find that the most illustrious Harry Seymour, Grand Master General of America, deems it a fitting time to make a descent upon England, and to enlighten the poor idiots who foolishly fancied that we were already in possession of pure ancient Freemasonry. "Nothing of the kind," says Mr. Seymour, "Solomon and Hiram, and all the other traditions of the Craft which cluster round their names, must be set aside, and the worship of old Egypt must be re-established, for am I not Osiris, and are not my satellites, Isis, and Apis and Horus, and Borus? And have we not derived our titles from Marconis de Negre—a youth of unblemished renown, and are we not proud of our Calvin Burt, despite his larcenous propensities, and of our precious Hyam, notwithstanding his unclean Californian record. Nay, am not I, myself, known to fame as a wig-maker, and therefore, qualified to be "head" of the Masonic Order." Such in effect is the meaning of the presumptuous attempt now being made by a Mr. Seymour of New York, to propagate in England his spurious Rite of Memphis. This personage appears to have chosen Manchester as the first scene of his preposterous folly. We should hardly have thought it congenial soil, as our Lancashire brethren are good Masons, and quite alive, as men of the world, to the modern shams which usurp the name, and would fain appropriate the place, of genuine Freemasonry. Still, strange to say, aided by some malcontents, who suffer personal piques to obliterate whatever common sense they may possess, we find that Mr. Seymour has succeeded in making a few proselytes, and that a "great" banquet of Memphites has been held in Cottonopolis, presided over by one Pipe, who was supported by one Leather, for "there's nothing like leather," you know, with a Fox as K.M., whatever that means; "Kind Man," we presume; and the inevitable Binns, (of Sherry it is to be hoped) as "Standard Bearer!" At this pleasant gathering, we are informed, on the authority of the Manchester Courier, illustrious Bro. Yarker was nominated Grand Master, and will hereafter be installed in London, and the officers appointed. This is good news for the metropolis, as no doubt the ceremony will be well worth seeing, especially if the "Most Illustrious" Harry Seymour condescends to perform it in propria persona. It is also gratifying to learn upon the same high authority, that "the legality of the appointment of Brother Yarker was unanimously acknowledged," although the "unanimity" of some twenty obscure Masonic nonentities is, after all, no very alarming matter for the rest of the Craft. In fact, if it were not for the damaging impression which the farcical proceedings of these men is likely to create in the minds of friends and well-wishers of the fraternity, we might safely allow them to pursue their puerile proclivities unheeded; but in the public interests of the Masonic Order, we are bound to enter a protest, and to proclaim emphatically that the so-called "Rite of Memphis" is an impudent travesty of our time-honoured observances, originally generated by fraud, and since perpetuated by misrepresentation and guile. That wherever, and whenever, its pretensions have been tried, they have been found hollow as husks, and consequently no Mason who respects his obligation can acknowledge, or have communication with, the supporters of so flagrant an innovation on the genuine Masonic system. More especially, we would remind the Masters and Past Masters of the Craft, of the regulations to which they have yielded their unqualified assent in open lodge, and warn them, in the words of the text, not to countenance "impostors or dissenters from the original plan of Freemasonry." If we once permit these followers of Memphis to settle down in our midst, the unwary may be innocently led astray, and melancholy consequences may ensue. However, we can safely assert that, so far as the brethren in London are concerned, laughter and contempt will be the only harvest reaped in the metropolis by the propagators of the bogus Rite of Memphis.

METROPOLITAN.

CLAPTON LODGE (No. 1365).—The members of this lodge held their first installation since the foundation, last September, on Wednesday last, at the White Hart Inn, Clapton, when the W. M., Bro. J.D. Taylor, very ably installed Bro. W. Stephens, Vitruvian, No. 87, the S.W., who had been unanimously elected as the W.M. for the ensuing year. The W.M. having been duly invested, proceeded to appoint his officers as follows, viz.:—Bro. Miles, S.W.; Lutwyche, J.W.; Batchelor, Treas.; R. Buller, P.M., Sec.; Saunders, S.D.; Cattlin, J.D.; Wyatt, I.G.; Webber, D.C.; and Paul, Steward. The W.M., in investing each officer, delivered a charge explanatory of the nature and duty of his office in such happy and appropriate terms that the delighted auditory were at once convinced that they were in the presence of a true master of the mystic art. The ballot was then taken for the following gentlemen:—Messrs. Ayton, Howarth, Edwards, Bruce, and Burnell, all of whom, with the exception of Mr. Burnell, were duly initiated into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry by the new W.M., in a manner that reflects great credit on the Clapton Lodge, and argues well for the good working of the lodge during his year of office. Amongst the visiting brethren were Bro. Jas. Brett, P.G.P.; Dr Barringer, P.P.G.S. Herts; Jas. Terry, P.P.G.W. Herts; Lundy, P.M. 45; Laing, P.M. 45; Gompertz, P.P.G.P. Herts; Lloyd, W.M. 780 and 1,278; and Bros. Roberts Holden, Klenck, Pinder, Hubbard, and others. At the banquet, which was served in Bro. Bryant's best style, consisting of every delicacy of the season, the W.M. gave the ordinary Masonic toasts, and in proposing the health of the retiring master presented him with a P.M.'s jewel of the value of 7½ guineas, which had been voted by the lodge for his able working during his year of office, and also a very handsome gold ring, embossed with the square and compasses in diamonds, subscribed by several of his most intimate friends and admirers. The toast of the W.M. was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and also that of the officers. Bros. Dr. Barringer and Gompertz replied for the 'Visitors.' The pleasures of the evening were much enhanced by the good singing of Bros. McDavitt, Organist, Pierpoint, Miles, and Hubbard. We cannot conclude this notice without calling the attention of the craft to the almost unprecedented success of this flourishing lodge, which at the end of the first year numbers 55 subscribing members, of whom over 30 have been initiated, a result showing an amount of zeal exhibited by the founders, and mainly owing to the exertions of the Immediate P.M., the present W.M., and the officers, all of whom have spared no pains or expense to render the Clapton Lodge, No. 1365, one of the greatest successes that the craft has had for years. Masonry in general has likewise been greatly benefited by the establishment of this lodge, the Grand Lodge dues paid by it during the past year having amounted to within a fraction of £46, and upwards of thirty guineas was also subscribed to the Girls' School on the occasion of the present W.M. acting as Steward at the Festival in May last.

CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORELAND.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

For the first time during the greater part of thirty years, perhaps, the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Cumberland and Westmoreland took place at Wigton, on Friday, 20th inst. Having been so long since so unusual and interesting an event had taken place at Wigton much interest was felt in the meeting of the "brethren of the mystic tie" of the year. The Province, of which the Right Hon. the Earl of Bective, M.P., is the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master—comprises fifteen lodges, viz. The brethren first met at the Lodge room, at the Lion and Lamb, or at the Mechanics' Institute, where luncheon was provided. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in the Mechanics' Institute, the whole of which had kindly been lent for the use of the brethren.

The Grand Lodge was then opened in due form by the P.G.M., when a vote of condolence was passed to Bro. Busher, on the death of his father, proposed by Col. Whitwell, D.P.G.M., seconded by Bro. the Rev. W. Williams, P.G.C.

Sec.; John Lemon, Prov. G. T.; John Gate, Prov. G. R.; Jesse Banning, Prov. G. S.; W. Kirkbride, Prov. P. G. S. and P. L.; Thomas Richardson, Prov. A. D. S.; T. B. Arnison, P. Prov. S. B.; S. W. Hayward, P. Prov. G. S. W.; J. Tyson, P. Prov. J. W.; R. Baxter, P. G. T.

There was also a large attendance of brethren from the various Lodges in the Province.

On the closing of the Provincial Grand Lodge, the brethren met in proper form on the bowling green adjoining, and, headed by the excellent band of the Wigton Volunteer Rifle Corps, marched down West Street, through the Market Place and along King Street, turning at the Market Hill, and back to the Parish Church, along King Street, the whole way being lined with crowds of spectators, and the windows of the houses were well filled. The Church was much crowded, the arrangement being that the brethren were to sit below and others in the galleries. The service was a full choral one, and was intoned by Canon Whitmore, of Carlisle Cathedral. The first lesson was read by Canon Porteous, and the second lesson by Bro. Rev. A. Curwen of Harrington. The musical service was more than good; it was most impressive and effective, and Mr. Metcalfe, who presided at the organ was much extolled for the very efficient style in which he played. The sermon was preached by Bro. the Rev. W. Williams, of Cockermouth, P.G. Chaplain, from the text, Mark, chapter 15, verse 38, "And the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom," from which he preached a most appropriate and Masonic address, inculcating upon the brethren that they must be both material and spiritual builders.

The brethren, to the number of about 180, sat down to a very excellent banquet at about 4 o'clock. It was prepared by Bro. Martin, of the Lion and Lamb, and from the style in which it was prepared and served, well deserved the commendations bestowed upon it. It took place in the Diocesan marquee, which was erected in the Flosfield grounds, through the kindness of Mr. Carrick. The dinner tables were very elegantly decorated with flowers and evergreens from Flosfield.

The Chair at the dinner was taken by the Right Worshipful the Earl of Bective, Provincial Grand Master, supported by Bro. Colonel Whitwell, the Rev. W. M. Schnibben, Bro. Canon Porteous, Bro. Iredale, Bro. Lemon, Bro. Carrick, Bro. Jackson Gillbanks, Bro. the Rev. W. Williams, Bro. E. H. Henry, M.D., Bro. Dr. Jones, Bro. Captain Mott, Minor Canon Whitmore, and the Rev. J. A. Scott.

On the withdrawal of the cloth, the Chairman proposed "The Queen," followed by the toast of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," after which the Chairman gave "The Bishops and Clergy of the Diocese," each of which was received with much enthusiasm. After some of the speeches the band played appropriate airs.—The Rev. W.M. Schinibben was the first called upon to respond for the Bishop and Clergy, and cordially welcomed the brethren to Wigton. He said he had much pleasure in placing his church at their disposal, pleased to think that in their festivities they remembered the service in the Parish Church although he did not expect that his Church was to be turned into a Cathedral. (Cheers.)—The President then proposed "The Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces," to which Colonel Whitwell, M.P., Lieutenant A. C. Mott, R.N., and Ensign Carrick returned thanks.—Mr. Metcalfe then sang his celebrated song "John Peel," with much applause. The room was then "close tyled," and the various masonic toasts were given according to the toast list.

CARLISLE.—Union Lodge (No. 310).—The ordinary meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 24th inst. The W.M., Alex. Taylor, presided, Bro. W. Court, P. Prov. G. P., S.W. This being the first meeting after the Grand Provincial gathering lately held at Wigton, Bros. Taylor and Court appeared in their new Provincial regalia, each brother "bearing his blushing honours thick upon him." Bro. George Hetherington was passed, and Mr. George Thorpe being balloted for, approved of, and duly initiated. The good attendance of the old brethren, and the enthusiasm of the recently admitted members, are causing this lodge to be of power in the city of Carlisle.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

The second and third degrees were given during the evening by the W.M. in the most striking and impressive manner. Four candidates were proposed for initiation, after which the lodge was closed. After the repast which followed, the W.M. gave the usual toasts in a very excellent manner, and during the evening Bro. Angus gave highly interesting and valuable details respecting the position and prospects of Freemasonry at the antipodes.

LIVERPOOL.—Everton Lodge (No. 823)—The usual monthly gathering of the members of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 18th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. One candidate was initiated, and three F.C.'s were raised to the sublime degree of M.M, the work being performed in an excellent manner by the W.M. Bro. Shaw, S.D., deserves much credit for the admirable manner in which, by the request of the W.M., he gave the ancient charge. Liberal donations were made on behalf of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, and afterwards the lodge was closed in peace and harmony. The brethren subsequently sat down to an excellent repast, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts being proposed during the evening, and after business, proceedings being greatly enlivened by some excellent singing.

WAVERTREE.—Duke of Edinburgh Lodge (No. 1182).—The brethren of this lodge assembled for the performance of their Masonic duties, at the Wavertree Coffee House, Wavertree, near Liverpool, on Wednesday evening, the 18th inst. There was a good attendance of the brethren. Bro. Pughe, W.M., opened the lodge in due form, supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. P. R. Thorn, I.P.M.; J. Thornton, P.M.; S. Cookson, P.M.; W. Woods, P.M.; J. W. Williams, S.W.; J. H. Edginton, J.W.; W. Brown, Treasurer; J. G. Bales, Secretary; R. Martin, jun., J.D.; J. C. Brew, I.G.; C. Dewellyn, S.; J. Williams, Steward; G. Scott, O.; W. Crawford, Tyler; L. Simmon, J. H. Wilson, T. F. Jones, J. Hope, J. York, J. Keeping, W. H. Dean, E. Gibson, J. Jacobs, W. Thomason, M. Bennett, J. B. Macdonald, and J. S. Bullock. The visitors present during the evening were—Bros. T. R. Cooper, 1356; R. R. Martin, 1094; L. Hickson, 554; C. McNab, 1035; and B. Willis, 1035. After the minutes of the previous installation meeting had been read and confirmed, Messrs. Walker, Barrett, and Millage, were solemnly initiated into the mysteries of the Order, and Bros. Bennett, and Thomason were passed to the honourable degree of F.C.. The accounts of the lodge for the past year were presented, and unanimously passed, showing that the "Duke of Edinburgh" was in a highly prosperous and satisfactory position. Subscriptions, amounting to a considerable sum, were received on behalf of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. After the transaction of some formal business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren retired for refreshment.

CROSTON.—Hesketh Lodge (No. 986.)—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge took place on Tuesday last, Bro. Roger Rigby, W.M., presiding; Bro. Goggin, S.W.; Bro. Fletcher, J.W. The lodge being opened in due form with solemn prayer, Rev. Thomas Abbot Peters, Principal of Alston College, was duly initiated into Freemasonry in a most efficient manner. On the motion of Bro. Athelstone, a letter of condolence was ordered to be sent to the family of the late Sir T. F. Hesketh, Bart., Prov. Grand Master. The lodge being further opened, Bros. Topping and Howarth were, after answering the several questions put to them, advanced to the sublime degree of Master Mason. The lodge was then closed down with solemn prayer, several visiting brethren were present, Past Master Dr. Smith, and Bro. Dr. Haldane, of 314; Bros. Harding, and Dixon, of 314; Bro. Rev. Taylor, J.P., J.W., of 343; Bro. Wilson, J.W., 333, and sundry others. The brethren having adjourned for refreshments, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the brethren dispersing at an early hour.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—Hindpool Lodge, (No. 1225).—On Tuesday last, the 17th September, the brethren of the Hindpool Lodge of Ancient, Honourable, Free, and Accepted Masons, met at their Lodge-room, the Hartington Hotel, Duke-street, Barrow-in-Furness, to instal their Worshipful Master elect, Bro. R. W. Graham, S.W. The assembly was very numerous, and amongst the visiting brethren were Bro. Wylie, Grand Registrar of the Province of West Lancashire; Hamer P. Prov. G. Treasurer; Relf, P.M., 1021, Hartington Lodge; Pearson, W.M., 995, Furness Lodge, Ulverston, &c., &c. Many prominent neighbouring brethren sent apologies for unavoidable absence through previous engagements. The recent decease of the Provincial Grand Master of the Province of West Lancashire, Sir Thomas Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P. for Preston, required that the lodge room and brethren should be in deep mourning, which was duly observed, and several additional Masonic devices appropriate to the occasion were added to the other decorative appendages, giving the lodge the appearance of sombre gracefulness, tending to devout contemplation; and in keeping with the policy of the lodge, that of constantly maintaining their meeting place in a state of arrangement calculated to form those solemn impressions on the mind which the practice of the art is intended to foster. The brethren entered the lodge room in slow time, to the funeral music of the "Dead March." The lodge having been opened in the 1st and 2nd degrees and the usual business gone through: the Provincial Grand Registrar rose and said; Worshipful Master, Wardens and brethren, it will be in the recollection of some of you that we met a short time ago in this district upon a momentous and solemn, but a very joyful occasion, when I, along with other Provincial Grand Officers, were appointed to consecrate the lodge at Dalton-in-Furness. As the representatives of our late highly esteemed and deeply lamented Provincial Grand Master, Sir Thos. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., who was then in his usual health and strength—alas! how soon are we called to meet you, brethren, in North Lonsdale with your lodge decked in, and our costume exhibiting, the emblems of mourning. How true it is that "in the midst of life we are in death," for these mournful signs are in acknowledgement of the grief we feel at the decease of our Provincial Grand Master, who has been so early in life called away. We can have no doubt, for our Provincial Grand Chaplain, whose address at Dalton, all who heard him will long remember as the pious effusions of a noble Christian clergyman, as well as the faithful exponent of our true Masonic principles, informed me that he was in the service of his Divine Master, attending at the bed side of our departed brother, and that his end was peace, and he is now joining the assembly of the Grand Lodge above, where all is peace and joy for ever, and where he is now illustrating the great teaching of Master Masons, who contemplate death not as the end of affliction, but as the entrance of a better state, because an enduring unchanging of life. Brethren, let the sudden removal of our Provincial Grand Master lead us to contemplate our inevitable destiny; work while it is day in all the services of the order; never let us meet without endeavouring to fulfil the great duties and obligations which we are taught to cultivate. Not only do we meet as brethren, but also beyond the precincts of the lodge; and now, when we look around and view these mournful emblems, "we raise our eyes to that bright morning star whose shining brought peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human family," and enable His faithful followers to ascend to that Grand Lodge above where the World's Great Architect lives and reigns for ever.

The chair was vacated by the Worshipful Master, Brother John Stanley Ormandy, who, in ancient form, introduced his successor to the W.M. presiding, Brother Past Master Cornfield, whereupon the Provincial Grand Registrar put the usual interrogations, which, upon being satisfactorily answered, the obligation of a W.M. was taken, when the brethren below the rank of Master left the lodge and a Board of Installed Masters was formed. On returning to the lodge the ceremony of congratulation was gone through, and the new W.M. appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Morris, Senior Warden; Jeavons, Junior Warden; Woodhouse, Treasurer; Eckersley, Secretary; Turvey, Senior Deacon; Hadley, Junior Deacon; Morgan and Wells, Stewards; Hill, Organist; Hillier, Tyler. The installation ceremony was for the first time performed by Bro. P. M. Cornfield, and elicited from those brethren who were competent to judge, the highest commendation for correctness of style and propriety of action. The brethren then adjourned to the banquet, leaving the lodge room in processional order, to the march of "The Israelites," from "Costa's Eli." The music was most effectually rendered by the organist, Bro. Hill. After grace, the loving cup was passed round, and the brethren having regaled themselves with the well-served viands, and been well attended to by an efficient staff of waiters, the tables were cleared, and the toast list was commenced with. The toast on the list was given by the W.M., as follows:—"The Queen, the daughter, niece, and mother of Masons." The W.M. next gave—"Bro. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M.; the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." The W.M. then gave—"The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, the Marquis de Grey and Ripon, the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon; and the Officers of the Grand Lodge of England." The toast was coupled with the name of Bro. Wylie, P.G.R. Bro. Wylie heartily thanked the brethren for the manner in which the toast had been received. Those who knew the Grand Master, and had been privileged to sit in Grand and Provincial Lodges with him must have been struck with the manner in which he conducted the business, and could not but conclude that the combination of the Christian, nobleman, and Mason was to be found in the Marquis de Grey and Ripon. (Applause.) He was grieved to hear that the Deputy Grand Master was not so well as was desired, and this, together with the absence from London of the G.M., might in some measure account for the fact that the Provincial Grand Master had not yet been appointed. But it was a principle with the Grand Master never to give to the subordinate officers carte blanche, or in other words, never to sign a document without seeing that it was filled up in proper form. For himself, he thanked them for receiving the toast so cordially. As Masons, they were desirous that the principles of Masonry should be carried out in purity and integrity, and it was gratifying to the Provincial officers to have seen lodges springing up—not ephemeral lodges, but such as the one now met, which had been careful in the selection of their officers and companions, and doing honour to the grand principles they were all so wishful to disseminate. His earnest wish was that they might never forget the first principles of Masonry, brotherly love and truth, for as they were good Masons so would they be good Christians. Thus, if they would all be true to the principles of the Order, Christian benevolence and Masonic charity would resound throughout the globe. (Applause.)

The W.M. then gave:—"The immortal memory of our beloved brother the late Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master Sir Thomas George Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P." The toast was drunk in solemn silence. Other toasts followed, when the W.M. next gave the toast of "The Immediate Past Master of 1,225," of whom he spoke in highly complimentary terms as a consistent and energetic Mason. It was his pleasing duty to present, in the name of the brethren, to Bro. Ormandy, a P.M.'s gold jewel, and also a beautifully engrossed scroll in frame. He had great pleasure in presenting him with these marks of the esteem of his brethren, and trusted that they would be handed down to his children's children, unsullied, as they were now given into his hands. (Applause.) He concluded by proposing the toast, which was drunk with full Masonic honours. The following is a copy of the testimonial:—

"Ancient, Honourable, Free and Accepted Masons. At a regular meeting of the Hindpool Lodge, No. 1225, at the Hartington Hotel, Barrow-in-Furness, in the County of Lancaster, on Tuesday the 17th day of September, A.L. 5872, A.D. 1872, it was moved by Bro. Graham, S.W., seconded by Bro. Morris, J.W., and resolved that the lodge congratulate their Worshipful Master, Bro. John Stanley Ormandy, on the successful termination of his eventful year of office and in recognition of the constant attendance to his important duties zeal, and assiduity in performing the same, and for the fraternal courtesy he has ever exhibited to the lodge. His brethren have very great pleasure in presenting him with a Past Master's gold jewel, and a copy of this resolution, illuminated on vellum, and appropriately framed.

"(Signed)

"R. W. Graham, W.M.

"John Morris, S.W.

"John Jeavons, J.W.

"W. M. Eckersby, Secretary."

Bro. J. S. Ormandy, P.M., in responding to the toast, said he could not express all he felt on the occasion. He could only say that he was extremely obliged to them for the kind manner in which they had drunk his health, and also for the handsome jewel they had presented to him. He felt that he scarcely deserved such a present, for he had not often done anything to merit such regard at their hands. It had been great pleasure to him to perform the duties of his office, and had they been fifty times as arduous he would still have done them, for there was a pleasure in working the lodge, when there were such excellent officers to assist in the work. He could only hope that the new W.M. would have the same pleasure as he had experienced during his year of office. He again thanked them, and assured them he would treasure the gifts they had been so kind as to present to him as long as he lived. Bro. Worrall, P.M., gave the next toast, which was—"The Past Deputy Provincial G.M., Lord Skelmersdale;" and Past Provincial Officers of West Lancashire." The brethren were all well aware that since the introduction of Freemasonry into Barrow-in-Furness, the provincial officers of the Grand Lodge had been ever ready to give all the help they could. The brethren had been very energetic in the advancement of the Order in Barrow, but all their efforts would have been but very moderately successful had it not been for the ready and able assistance thus rendered to them (applause). The toast was drunk with Masonic honours. Bro. Wylie responded to the toast, and said that his brethren of the Grand Lodge would at all times do what they could to assist lodges, and said he had to propose the toast of the Worshipful Master of Hindpool Lodge, No. 1225, who had been that day installed, and he hoped that all who sat round that board might feel a desire the fill the W.M.'s chair, and if so, they must cheerfully fill the subordinate offices of the lodge. He trusted they would support the Master during his term of office and strengthen his hands. If this was the case, there was no doubt their lodge would prosper. The toast was drunk with full Masonic honours. The W.M. said he felt it would be the height of egotism for him to speak of himself, but he could not help saying that this was one of the proudest moments of his life. He felt it a very high honour, indeed, to have such a toast proposed by the P.P.G.R., whom he heartily thanked. He could only say that, if the brethren supported him as they had done the Past W.M., he would do his best (applause). Bro. Morris, S.W., proposed the toast of "The Installing Officers," and said he was proud to be able to say they had now one of their own members who could claim the title, and he had no doubt that the Provincial Officers were also glad that such was the case. This was as it should be, for he thought it was high time that the Past Masters should begin to qualify themselves to go through the ceremony, and it was especially gratifying to him to see Bro. Cornfield perform the solemn ceremony in the able manner he did. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. George Cornfield, the Installing Officer of the day. (Drunk with honours). Bro. Cornfield felt proud in having to respond to the toast for the first time. It was not long since he was initiated in Lodge 1021, and he did not then think of occupying the position in which he had been placed that afternoon. They might think he was but a young Mason and a young man, and he might be thought to have a little vanity (no, no) in aspiring to the high office he had held. Such was not the case, for it was his greatest aim and desire to propagate the principles of Freemasonry. He hoped to see it become the rule in this lodge for the retiring Master to instal his successor. Although he had performed the ceremony that day, yet he must acknowledge that he had been greatly indebted to the Provincial Grand Officers for the able assistance they had given him. They were ever ready to give that assistance. It was a great honour to him to be able to say that he was the first P.M. in Barrow to instal a successor. It should be the aim of all, and, if any brother was wishful, he would be glad to give him such instruction that he could to enable them to do so. Bro. Relp, P.M., next gave "The Past Officers of No. 1225," to which Bro. McKnight briefly responded. Bro. Leary, P.S., also responded and gave "The Past Masters of No. 1225," responded to by Bro. Worrall, P.M., Bro. Cornfield, P.M., Bro. Silver, P.M., and Bro. Ormandy. The occasion was well filled up with other complimentary speeches, toasts, Masonic applause and vocalism, and the feeling amongst the brethren was that they had passed a pleasant and happy day.

LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.

MARKET HARBOUROUGH.—St. Peter's Lodge (No. 1330).—This lodge held its first meeting since the summer recess at the Assembly Room, Three Swans Hotel, on Friday, the 20th inst., when, in the absence, in Scotland, of the W.M., Bro. Sir H. St. John Halford, Bart. (High Sheriff), the chair was occupied by the I.P.M., Bro. Kelly, W.Prov.G.M. Among the other brethren present were the Rev. John F. Halford, S.W.; Francis Kemp, J.W.; R. Waite, P.M. and Treasurer; — Lawrence, as Secretary; T. Macaulay, M.R.C.S., S.D.; Dr. Grant, J.D.; Freestone and Fuller, Stewards; Harrison I.G.; Shovelbottom, Whitehead, Ellis, Holloway, and others. The lodge having been opened, and the minutes of the last meeting read and certified, Grand Lodge certificates were delivered to several of the brethren. This being the time for the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, a ballot took place, which resulted in the unanimous appointment of the worthy Senior Warden, the Rev. John F. Halford, M.A., Prov. G. Chaplain, who expressed his thanks to the lodge for the honour conferred upon him. The ballot for Treasurer resulted in the re-appointment of the present officer, Bro. Robert Waite, P.M. Bro. Kelly, P.G.M., the first W.M. of the lodge, was nominated for election as an honorary member. The rector of a neighbouring parish having been proposed as a candidate for initiation, and three brethren as joining members, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The festival of the lodge was fixed to take place on Friday, October 11th, and the P.G.M. announced that the Bishop of the diocese had fixed Thursday, November 14th, as the day for laying, with Masonic honours, the foundation stone of the Memorial Church to the late Earl Howe, P. Prov.G.M., and that the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge would be held on the same day.

NORTH WALES.

CARNARVON.—Segontium Lodge (No. 606).—This lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Thursday, 19th inst. The lodge was opened at 2 p.m., by Bro. Robert Humphreys, assisted by all the officers of the lodge. The minutes of the previous lodge meeting having been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for Mr. T. P. Copeland, which proving unanimous, he, together with Mr. Hugh McKie, previously accepted, were introduced into the mysteries of Masonry. The W.M. being compelled to leave for a short period, the chair of K.S. was occupied by Bro. M. Emanuel, W.M. of the Lodge of Israel, 205, also a member of this lodge, who raised Bro. John Jones to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, in a manner which elicited the approbation of the brethren of the lodge. This being the night for election of officers, Bro. Poole, the S.W., was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Webb was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Charles Foulkes re-elected Secretary. A petition to the First Grand Principal, for a dispensation for the opening of a chapter in connection with the lodge, was then read, when it was resolved that the said petition be recommended by the lodge to the First Grand Principal. The three Principals recommended in the petition are Bro. M. Emanuel, first; Bro. Humphreys, second; and Bro. Hayworth, third. The lodge was then closed in due form and solemn prayer. As a proof of the interest of our Provincial brethren in Masonry, and their desire to receive instruction, we mentioned a few months since that Bro. Emanuel gave the lectures on the Tracing Boards, and it being known that Bro. Emanuel would again visit Carnarvon, at the wish of the brethren, the W.M. called a lodge of emergency for Monday last, when there was a large muster of the brethren, including several visitors. The lodge having been opened at seven, p.m., Bro. Emanuel first worked the first and second sections of the first lecture, and then gave the Tracing Board lecture, including extracts from the third, fourth, and fifth sections, at the conclusion of which the sixth and seventh sections were worked. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the lecture on the Tracing Board in that degree given, including the Masonic illustrations of the seven periods of the Creation. As the questions and answers in the various sections were asked and replied to by Bro. Emanuel, some idea of the nature of the work may be gathered by those intimate with the working of the sections. The lodge being then reduced to the first degree, an especial vote of thanks was carried to Brother Emanuel, and the Secretary requested to convey the same to him in a letter. The lodge was then closed in due form and solemn prayer. Our correspondent writes in the highest terms of the completeness of the fittings and furniture of this lodge, and which has lately removed to a room, fitted up for the express purpose, in Carnarvon Castle, and as regards the proposed new chapter, no less than seventeen brethren have already signified their intention of being exalted, should a dispensation be granted by the First Principal, and with such Principals as those proposed, viz., Bro. M. Emanuel, W.M. of the Lodge of Israel, 205, also a member of the Carnarvon Lodge; Bro. R. Humphreys, W.M. of the Segontium Lodge, 606, and Bro. Hayworth, P.M. of the Llandudno Lodge, the chapter cannot fail of being equally as prosperous as the lodge itself, and as if the dispensation is granted, it will be the only one working in the Principality, it will very shortly be likely to be as numerous in number as any existing chapter.

YORKSHIRE (WEST).

BRADFORD.—Lodge of Hope (No. 302).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 16th inst. The W.M., Bro. William Barlow, presided. There was no business of importance before the lodge, but official visits, on the invitation of the W.M., were paid by the lodges of Eccleshill, 1034, and Pentalpha, 974. The lodge was opened in the first degree, the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed, the usual routine business transacted, the lodge closed according to ancient custom, and the visiting brethren invited by the W.M. to partake of refreshment. The cloth had been laid for 60, and a little over that number sat down to an excellent repast, the W.M. receiving the congratulations of the visiting brethren for the admirable style in which he had catered for their creature comforts. Bro. Wm. W. Barlow, W.M., was supported at the supper table on his left by Bros. J. D. Sugden as I.P.M., (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. Green, I.P.M.); Robert Richardson, W.M. Pentalpha, 974; Edward Smith, W.M., Eccleshill, 1034; Captain Wordsworth, P.M., P.Prov. G.S. of W.; W. Banister, P.M., 1018, P.G.S.B.; C. F. Matier, P.M., 1355, G.S. of Scotland, and and P.G.S.W.; W. H. Evans, P.M. 974; S. B. Walmsley, P.M., 974; J. Schaeppi, P.M., 332, Prov. G.S.D.; Frederick Broughton, W.M., 151, Prov. G.R. and P.Prov. G.S.W. South Wales; M. Rhodes, P.M., 302, A. Hunter, P.M., 302; and on his left by Bros. Rev. J. Oddy, Chaplain of the lodge, and Prov. G. C.; H. Inchbold, P.M. Fidelity, Leeds, 289; W. Beck, W.M., 289; W. Ibbetson, P.M., 302, P.G.J.D.; S. Blakey, P.M., 387; W. Beanland, P.M., 1034; H. O. Mawson, P.M., 302; C. Pratt, P.M., 1034, P. Prov. G.J.D. The W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. W. Banister, P.G.S.B., responding on behalf of the G.M. and Officers of Grand Lodge, expressed a hope that he should have the pleasure of meeting Bro. William W. Barlow, the W.M., as well as other brethren of the Hope, in Grand Lodge; and expressing his admiration of the way in which the proceedings of the evening had been conducted, and his thanks for the hospitality shown him. Bros. Rev. J. Oddy, P.G.C., J. Schaeppi, P.G.S.D.; and W. Ibbetson, P.G.J.D., respectively responded on behalf of Prov. G.M., and Provincial Grand Officers, expressing their pleasure in being able to take part in such an agreeable and numerous attended meeting as this; and in thanking the brethren on the part of the Prov. G.M. and officers, wished the brethren would consider the honour conferred by their appointment as Provincial Grand Officers a compliment paid to the Lodge of Hope, and not to them individually. The W.M. called upon Bro. M. Rhodes, P.M. 302, P. Prov. G.S.W., to propose "The Clergy," which he did in his usual complimentary, earnest, and excellent manner. Bros. Revs. W. J. Flynn, and J. Vaile, responded, never feeling, as they said, the least out of place when attending lodge meetings, the principles and precepts of the Craft being calculated, if acted up to, to improve the minds of men, and make them better citizens. The W.M. proposed the health of the W.M., P.M.'s, Officers, and Brethren of the Pentalpha, 974, speaking in eulogistic terms of all connected that lodge, and of the rapid strides it had made during its short life, prognosticating that it had a brilliant prospect, and must take high standing in the Province. Bro. Robert Richardson, W.M., 974, responded, thanking the W.M. for the complimentary way in which he had introduced the toast, and the brethren for its hearty reception. He, on the part of the brethren of his lodge and his own, begged to tender their heartiest thanks for the very handsome manner in which they had been entertained. The W.M. then proposed the W.M., P.M.'s, Officers, and Brethren of the Eccleshill, 1034, praising them for the great progress made during their short history. Bro. Edward Smith, W.M. 1034, responded in his usual hearty and real Yorkshire fashion. The W.M. then, as he said, for the first time in this lodge, so far as the oldest member knew, proposed the G.M. of Scotland, and the rest of the Grand Officers," being favoured by the presence of one of the Grand Officers of Scotland. Bro. C. F.

Matier, G.S. of Scotland, responded, saying that if, as the W.M. had stated, this was the first occasion on which this toast had been proposed he trusted it would not be the last, for he had been so much delighted by all he had seen, and the great hospitality displayed towards him, that he quite intended, should opportunity offer, to pay another visit to the Hope. The W.M., in giving "The other Visiting Brethren," said how much it pleased him to be favoured by the visit of Bro. Frederick Broughton, Prov. G.R. of South Wales, and brother, by consanguinity, as well as Masonry, to his able S.W. and coadjutor, Bro. B. Broughton, who was alike esteemed and respected in the commercial as the Masonic community. Bro. Fred. Broughton might be assured that his name alone would be a sufficient passport for him in Bradford without bringing with him, as he did, such high credentials. The name of Bro. G. Althorp, S.W., of Pentalfa, 954 was also coupled with the toast. Bro. Frederick Broughton replied, modestly stating that it was well known the members of his family were not gifted with the power of speech; but his elegant and concise remarks only seemed to confirm the prior opinion of the brethren that for good speaking and writing few could surpass them. Bro. G. Althorp, S.W. Pentalfa, 974, also, on the behalf of the other visitors and himself, tendered to the W.M. his hearty congratulations on the admirable way in which the business of the lodge was conducted, and for the courteous, at the same time, rather flattering, mention of them; and to the brethren of the Hope for their cordial and enthusiastic reception of this toast. He could only say that he looked up to the Hope Lodge as a grandson does to his grandfather, and he assured the brethren that his affection was sincere, and he trusted it would be lasting. The W.M., in proposing the health of the P.M.'s, tendered to them his thanks for all their assistance, and wished the lodge would continue to have the advantage of their co-operation and advice. Bro. J. D. Sugden, P.M., thanked the W.M., on the part of the P.M.'s, for the way in which he had introduced the toast, assuring him of every assistance and support they could give, and concluded by proposing the health of the W.M. in flattering terms. Bro. William W. Barlow, W.M., briefly replied, being desirous, as he said, of concluding the business at the usual hour. He thanked all for their kindness and courtesy, and for attending in such numbers, and looked forward to many equally pleasant gatherings. He then proposed "The Officers of the Lodge," coupling with the toast the names of Bros. B. Broughton, S.W., and George Richardson, Treasurer, and complimented them, one and all, on the able and punctual discharge of their respective duties, which had so much assisted him, and conduced to the well working of the lodge. Bros. B. Broughton and George Richardson, respectively responded in their accustomed fluent and happy style, tendering to the W.M., on their part, and that of the rest of their officers, their thanks for the complimentary manner in which he had alluded to them, and to the brethren for their kind and enthusiastic reception of the toast. At 11 o'clock (according to the W.M.'s custom) the Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren separated, after spending a most agreeable and profitable evening. The proceedings were enlivened by harmony from Bro. F. C. Atkinson, Mus. Bac., Cantab, Organist of the Lodge, and other brethren, and by an admirable recitation by Bro. Frederick Broughton, which greatly added to the pleasure of all present.

IPSWICH.—Perfect Friendship Lodge.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on the 18th inst. Present—Bro. J. B. Fraser, W.M.; S. B. King, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.D., Secretary; N. Tracy, P.M., P. Prov. J.G.W.; G. S. Findley, P.M., P. Prov. G.D.C.; Dr. Mills, P. Prov. G.S.W.; J. Pitcher, P. Prov. J.G.W.; W. T. Westgate, P. Prov. G.D.C.; W. A. Smith, I.P.M., P. Prov. G.D.C.; J. Franks, P. Prov. G. Registrar; Bros. A. Gannan, S.W.; J. A. Pettit, P.M., P. Prov. G. S.W., P.M., Sec. Visiting, Bro. Emra Holmes, P.G. Registrar, Suffolk, of the British Union Lodge; and Bro. Moses Cohen, of the Prince of Wales Lodge. The lodge having been opened, the ballot was taken for a candidate from London, who was unanimously accepted, but who, through indisposition, was prevented attending to be initiated. The usual routine business of the lodge having been disposed of, and Bro. Casey having called the attention of the brethren to the Lodge of Instruction, the brethren retired for refreshment. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been given, the W.M. called upon the brethren to drink to the Visiting Brethren. One of them, Bro. Emra Holmes, they knew very well; they had seen him before amongst them, and hoped they might often see him again; the other brother, he believed, had never been amongst them before; but he, the W.M. cordially welcomed him amongst them. In reply, Bro. Emra Holmes thanked the brethren very warmly for the kind way in which they had responded to the toast. He had heard it said in Ipswich that brethren should stick to their own lodges (no, no), and that they should not go visiting about (no, no). It had not been said in the Perfect Friendship Lodge, which was well known for its hospitable reception of visitors (hear, hear), but he would venture to submit that it was desirable that brethren should visit each other's lodges, in the interest of Masonry. In some places, he did not say it was so in Ipswich, but in some places, where there were many lodges, there were little differences of opinion, bickerings, as well as possibly a want of uniformity in working. Those differences could be best reconciled and that uniformity could be best attained by frequent visiting at each other's lodges; unanimity would be obtained by frequent intercommunion, so to speak. He, Bro. Holmes, remembered well that the first lodge he visited when he came to Ipswich, three years ago, was the Perfect Friendship. He was so kindly received there, that he would have asked to have been allowed to join that lodge, but for the objection that at that time it was held at a public house. He would not say that he wished he had joined it now, since that would seem disloyal to his own lodge, the British Union, but he would say that it gave him very great pleasure to come amongst them, and he was very glad to accept the invitation to so popular a lodge as the Perfect Friendship. Bro. Cohen briefly responded. In giving toast of the "Past and Present Provincial Grand Officers" the W.M. coupled with the Past Officers the name of Bro. Pettit, who had recently recovered from a severe illness, and who they were very glad to see amongst them again. With the present officers we coupled the names of Bro. Emra Holmes, P.G. Reg. Bro. Pettit replied in feeling terms, expressing his gratitude to the G.A.O.T.U. for restoring him to them once again. Bro. Holmes replied briefly; he said he believed he was the only P.G. officer present, and he would only say that he trusted the present officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Suffolk would endeavour do their duty as well as those who had gone before them. Bro. Smith, Cohen, Pettit, King, and others, ably contributed to the harmony of the evening and a very pleasant social meeting was brought to a close.

Microscopical investigation has proved that the substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these. Messrs. Gabriel's Coralite Tooth-paste and Royal Dentifrice (sold by all chemists and perfumers at 1s. 6d. per box) completely destroy and remove these animalcules, and also preserve and beautify the teeth. Prepared only by Messrs. Gabriel, the old established dentists, 64, Ludgate Hill, and 56, Harley-street, Cavendish-square, London, where they practise their unique system of painless dentistry.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Billiousness, Dyspepsia are in Autumn, frequently the forerunners of dangerous diseases known as Typhus, Typhoid, Enteric Fever, Dysentery and Cholera. There is no organ in the human body so liable to derangement as the liver, none which requires earlier correction to prevent mischief, pain, and danger. Food, fatigue, climate, and anxiety all disorder its action, and render its secretion, the bile, more or less depraved, superabundant or scanty. The first symptoms should receive attention. A pain in the side, on the top of the shoulder, a harsh cough, and difficulty in breathing are signs of liver disease, which are removed without delay by friction with Holloway's mercurial Ointment. The Pills should be taken early.—ADVT.

DEDICATION OF THE NEW MASONIC HALL AT BRISTOL	97 & 98
MASONIC BALL AT NORTHAMPTON	98

GRAND LODGE of IRELAND.

A special meeting of the Grand Lodge was held on Friday, 26th ult., in the Freemasons' Hall, Molesworth-street, Dublin, to adopt addresses of congratulation to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales. The Most Worshipful his Grace the Duke of Leinster, Grand Master, presided.

The following Grand Officers were present: R.W. Robert William Shekleton, Deputy Grand Master; R.W. the Right Hon. William Meredyth, Lord Athlumney, Senior Grand Warden; R.W. Arthur Bush, Grand Treasurer; R.W. the Rev. John James MacSorley and R.W. the Rev. Lord Plunket, Grand Chaplains; the Hon. David R. Plunket, Q.C., M.P., Junior Grand Deacon; Charles D. Astley, Grand Superintendent of Works; Theophilus E. St. George, Grand Steward; George Hepburn, Grand Sword-bearer; Francis Quin, Grand Organist; Stuart Nassau Lane, Grand Inner Guard; Charles T. Walmisley, Deputy Grand Secretary and Treasurer; Samuel B. Oldham, Assistant Secretary.

The representatives from foreign lodges were: From the Grand Orient of France, R.W. Sir Edward R. Borough, Bart.; from the Grand Lodge of Hamburg, R.W. J. Faviere Elrington, LL.D.; from the Grand Lodge of Spain, R.W. Captain A. Vesey Davoren; from the Grand Lodge of Canada, R.W. James V. Mackey; from the Grand Lodge of Louisiana, R.W. Lucius H. Deering; from the Grand Lodge of Virginia, R.W. John Cottle; from the Grand Lodge of Alabama, R.W. George Huband; from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lisbon, W. John H. Goddard. The attendance of the brethren was very large.

The Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form,

The Grand Secretary read letters of excuse from non-attendance from Charles A. Cameron, M.D.; R. B. De Burgh, Representative from the Grand Lodge of Illinois; Godfrey Brereton, R.M., Past Representative from the Grand Lodge of England; and Sir William Hort, Bart., Past Grand Secretary for Ireland.

The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, who was greeted with applause, rose and said: Brethren, I believe there is no occasion for me to address you on the reason I have called this lodge of emergency. The addresses that will be proposed to you will so fully express my opinion, and, I am certain, your opinion, that I think the best way is to go to business at once. (Hear, hear.)

The R.W. the Deputy Grand Master called on Lord Athlumney to move the first address.

Lord Athlumney rose and said: Most Worshipful Sir and Brethren, we are assembled here under the presidency of our Most Worshipful Grand Master, whom we are all so glad to see in health and strength amongst us. (Hear, hear.) We are assembled upon what I consider a very solemn and very joyful occasion. These two adjectives may appear at first to be somewhat antagonistic, but in reality they are not so. I am sure no one can have regarded the events of the last few months without entertaining the most sincere and deep interest regarding the health of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. (Hear, hear.) It seems but a short time since his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Patron of the Freemasons of Ireland, addressed us in the plenitude of health and strength from the dais. He addressed us in a speech which we all remember—a speech which should never be forgotten by those who heard it. (Hear, hear.) It was a noble, a manly, a sincere, and a Masonic speech. (Hear, hear.) Most Worshipful Sir and Brethren, it seems as if the plaudits with which his departure from this hall was accompanied are still ringing in our ears. When we heard that he was struck down and laid on the bed of sickness, suffering under a most severe malady—an attack of such severity that we heard of it with fear rather than hope—we all remember what anxiety we suffered, and never, I think, was exhibited more universal national sympathy than during that very trying period. (Hear, hear.) It is said we know not what a day may bring forth—we know not even what an hour may bring forth. We open our morning journals with fear and trepidation. I always myself, and I am sure hundreds of others did the same, looked first of all to see if there were any black edge to the papers before we almost dared to open them. We did not know what an hour might bring forth—we might have heard “the silver cord was loosed and the golden bowl was broken, and that the mourners were going about the streets.” But now it has happened otherwise. A nation's prayers have been heard. The destroying angel that knocks with such stern impartiality at the palace of the Prince and the cottage of the peasant obeyed the Higher Power. The Great Physician heard the nation's prayer—the messenger of death stayed his hand and passed away. We cannot have contemplated these events, I say, without having aroused our deepest emotions of sympathy. And now how different, now how joyous and how joyful, it will be to you to propose an address to her Most Gracious Majesty, congratulating her that the Prince of Wales, her beloved son, has been restored to health, and that her widowed heart has been spared a fresh pang. The address will speak for itself. I have great pleasure in proposing it for your adoption, and I am sure it will receive unanimous assent, being the heartfelt congratulations of the Freemasons of Ireland. (Applause).

“To her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen.

“May it please your Majesty—We, the Freemasons of Ireland, in Grand Lodge assembled, desire most respectfully to approach your Gracious Majesty with the expression of our most sincere gratification at the recovery of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his recent illness.

“During the severe and trying ordeal to which the dangerous and protracted illness of his Royal Highness subjected your Majesty, we forbore to intrude on your Majesty by giving utterance to the feelings of profound sympathy by which we were actuated; but, now that by the merciful interposition of Divine Providence all anxiety has been happily removed, we beg to tender to your Majesty our earnest and heartfelt congratulations on the restoration to health of his Royal Highness, and, at the same time, to assure your Most Gracious Majesty of our unswerving loyalty and attachment to your Majesty and the various members of your Royal family, who, following the bright example set them by your Majesty, have, by their unremitting and loving attention to his Royal Highness in his hour of need, won for themselves universal admiration and esteem.”

The Right Hon. Judge Townsend, who was received with great applause, had great pleasure in being called upon by his respected brother and esteemed friend, the Deputy Grand Master, to second the address which had been just read. When addresses of congratulation and professions of loyalty to the throne of England, and attachment to the person of our Gracious Queen, are pouring in from all quarters, I think it would not be becoming of the representative body of the Freemasons of Ireland to be last in affording their homage, and their assurances of their sympathy with their Queen in her hour of trial. Her Majesty had been graciously pleased to express, in a public manner, to her subjects at large, the feelings of gratification which she felt at the expressions of sympathy which she received from her people in the hour of need. It was well and wise of her to express those feelings. That natural, simple, and heartfelt expression of gratitude to her people had thrilled the heart of every one of her subjects; and they now came forward assured that she would feel towards them as she had felt to so many others—glad that they had been able to appreciate her distress, and thankful that they could join in the joy that must fill her heart in finding her beloved son restored to life, and our country rescued from the danger which the death of the Heir to the Throne of these realms threatened us with. (Hear, hear.) It was but a short time since we opened our papers with trepidation—we looked into each other's faces with anxious and gloomy expressions, and hardly dared to whisper the hope for what had now ripened into certainty—that God has been pleased to spare his Royal Highness to his family and the nation. We ought all to be thankful for this. It was not long since the thunders of a terrible war pealed at our doors, and men gazed aghast on the scenes of the terrible carnage on the battle-field of France—an Emperor flung from his throne, and the heart of Europe shaken to its very centre. They looked on silently. But dark clouds lowered still on the distant horizon which the eye of man could not penetrate. Did they not sometimes see ghastly and fearful figures flit forward from that darkness. Had they not heard of the dark examples of that strange association whose creed is Atheism, whose object is revolution? When we heard of that, and when we knew what dangers might have impended upon us, he scarcely could believe that there were men—and yet it was to be feared that there were in these kingdoms—vile enough, and having courage enough, for the machination of their evil designs. Thank God, they were not of us. (Hear, hear.) If there were any of us among them, they profited not by our teaching. He was not so ignorant of his duty as a Mason as to suppose that that temple in which they were met—constituted to benevolence, to charity, and to brotherly love—was to be contravened by political discussions. He was not the man to make the floor of the Grand Lodge the arena for political strife; but still he would say this, that with the Freemasons of Ireland such doctrines as these had found no sympathy at all. (Hear, hear.) So far as his experience went, and it reached a great way, those ancient and solemn charges which had been so often repeated—which, in the course of his long duties, he had had occasion to pronounce within those walls—laid down the injunction to Freemasons to be peaceable subjects of the state, loyal to our Queen, kind to our brethren, industrious in working our way through the world; and they had not been employed in plots or conspiracies, nor had there been a single complaint made that discussions in our lodges of such propositions had been for a moment entertained. (Hear, hear.) When the Prince of Wales came amongst them, they welcomed him as their patron and brother. When he would come amongst them again, he trusted his Royal Highness would find manly and generous hearts like his own, ready to shed their last drop of blood in defence of himself and his throne. (Hear, hear, and applause.) He trusted that God, in His Providence, would spare her Majesty to rule over these kingdoms for many years, and that we should live as we would wish ourselves—in peace, love, and harmony with all the world. (Hear, hear.) But, if it be so that God otherwise ordered, he trusted that, if the day came when we must fight for our altars, for our homes, for our lives, and for our liberties, Queen Victoria and her people would find that there is a God who ruleth on the earth who can make her triumphant over all her enemies. (Loud and protracted applause.)

The address was unanimously adopted.

The Rev. Lord Plunket, who was cordially received, moved the adoption of an address to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. They were met on the present occasion, not for the purpose of adulation, nor were they met for the purpose of any political demonstration. (Hear, hear.) Such an object would be utterly inconsistent with the principles of Masonry. (Hear, hear.) But, while they did not feel it their duty to cringe obsequiously at the feet of any person, however exalted his position, yet they were bound by the laws of Masonry to show their loyal emotions to those who are in authority over us. (Hear, hear.) Regarding political demonstrations, they would be less than men if they did not feel a great interest in all those important questions which agitate the minds of the people in this country at the present time; but when they entered the Grand Lodge Room they no longer recognised any differences—they forgot whether they were Whigs, or Tories, or Liberals. Even the deeply-interesting question of Home Rule must be left behind when they entered the room. ("Hear, hear," and laughter.) They also forgot religious differences in lodge; but they remembered each one of them that they had a common God. They were bound by the laws of Masonry to remember that they were to depend upon the will of the Great Architect of the Universe. What called them together to-day was the common tie of brotherhood—the feeling of sympathy which they must all extend to those who have been suffering in sorrow, or those who at that moment were in the possession of joy; and, especially, they felt their sympathies drawn but to those who belonged to their own Brotherhood, and, moreover, to that illustrious brother who had done them the honour, and done himself the honour, of becoming a member of the Masonic Brotherhood. ("Hear, hear," and applause.) He moved the adoption of the following address:—

"To his Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, Patron of the Order of Free and Accepted Masons of Ireland."

"May it please your Royal Highness,—We, the Freemasons of Ireland, in Grand Lodge assembled, desire to express to your Royal Highness our sincere and heartfelt congratulations on your restoration to health.

"As Freemasons, both individually and collectively, and as loyal subjects, we are animated by feelings of the deepest gratitude and thankfulness to the Great Architect of the Universe, who, of His infinite wisdom and goodness, has been graciously pleased to hear and answer the nation's prayer, and has raised your Royal Highness from a bed of sickness, and will, we sincerely trust, restore you to perfect health and strength, enabling you to resume the responsible duties of the high station you are called upon to fill.

"And we fervently pray that a prosperous and happy life may be vouchsafed to you, and that you may long be spared to support, by your influence and example, the noble principles of our Order, with which you have so closely and warmly identified yourself."

General Dunne seconded the motion. He spoke of the deep sympathy evoked by the illness of the Prince of Wales, and he thought it was certain that the feelings of the country, except it might be to a very small extent, were true to the Queen and Constitution.

The address was approved of.

The Earl of Charlemont proposed the succeeding address in appropriate terms:—

"To her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales."

"May it please your Royal Highness,—We, the Freemasons of Ireland, in Grand Lodge assembled, respectfully approach your Royal Highness to offer to you our most hearty congratulations on the convalescence of your Royal husband the Prince of Wales.

"While the heart of the whole empire shared in your sorrow and suffering during that time of gloom and woe when your Royal husband lay sick, as it seemed, even unto death, none more deeply sympathised with you than the loyal body of Freemasons of Ireland, who were honoured with his patronage, and hoped long to enjoy his favour.

"As we mourned with you in your anxiety, as we prayed with you and for you in your trial, so we now rejoice with you in the great mercy which God has vouchsafed to you and to us.

"With feelings of profound emotion and admiration, we witnessed the exhibition of those virtues which your great sorrow and trial brought out so brightly—the love and devotion of the wife—the tender and unwearied ministrations of the woman—the piety and faith in God that sustained you to endure, to trust, and to be resigned—and that noble simplicity of character which is the highest grace of an exalted nature. The hand that smote us so heavily we can now recognise as dispensing great blessings, teaching us the value of the life thus spared to us, and evoking the love and loyalty of the nation.

"May this great trial through which you and your beloved husband have passed sanctify your hearts and strengthen your affections; and may God grant you both a long life in love and honour and prosperity."

Sir Edward Borough, Bart., seconded the proposition, and thought there was not a more popular lady in the British empire than the illustrious lady whom they were congratulating on the restoration to health of her beloved husband, and, high as she stood before, she would stand higher still in the affections of the people.

The address was unanimously adopted.

Master Bushe, in moving a vote of thanks to the Grand Master, said the honour of receiving the Heir to the Throne of these realms in that hall, and installing him as their patron was due to the efforts of his Grace the Duke of Leinster. (Hear, hear.) They all held in great affection their venerated and illustrious Grand Master. (Hear, hear.) He accordingly moved, "That the best thanks of the Grand Lodge of Ireland be and are hereby tendered to his Grace the Duke of Leinster, Grand Master, for having called the brethren together on the present auspicious occasion, and for the great solicitude he has invariably evinced in the general interests of the Order." (Enthusiastic applause.)

The Hon. David Plunket, Q.C., M.P., seconded the motion, and said they owed much to the Grand Master, and when they were assembled on great occasions, his presence lent dignity and importance to their meetings. ("Hear, hear," and applause.)

The Deputy Grand Master: I do not put the motion to you to say "Yes," or "No," but I ask you to pass it with all the acclamation you can. (Great applause.)

The M.W. the Grand Master: Brethren, I assure you I feel deeply the very kind manner in which you have received this resolution. It gives me great pleasure to have health and strength to be able, at my age, to attend to-day on this very important occasion. We, it may be supposed, are not the first in the field, but I did not like to call you together until we were certain that his Royal Highness was in that state that we could congratulate him on his recovery. (Hear, hear.) I am sure you agree with me that it was much better to suppress our feelings until we could warmly give expression to them. Again thanking you, I beg to sit down. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

The lodge was then closed.—Dublin Evening Mail.

GRAND LODGE of SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge was held on Monday evening, 5th February, 1872, in Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, the Most Worshipful Grand Master, on the throne. The Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form, and the preliminary business disposed of, the Grand Master moved that addresses of congratulation on the restoration to health of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales be forwarded to her Majesty the Queen and to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. (Cheers.) He was quite sure there was no body of men in the kingdom who excelled the Freemasons of Scotland in their feelings of anxiety during what her Majesty called those "terrible days." (Cheers.) And he was sure there was no body of men who excelled them in satisfaction when they found that the Prince had been enabled to overcome his severe illness. That he had passed through so terrible a crisis, and was now in a fair way of recovery, must, he thought, be matter of gratification to everybody in these realms. He was sure that the Grand Lodge would join in praying that the Almighty Architect of the Universe might see fit to preserve the life of his Royal Highness for the benefit of this country; and that he might be destined to come forth—though changed and weakened from the illness he had undergone—better than ever fitted to discharge those important duties which his Royal Highness might one day be called to perform. (Loud cheers.) The addresses were then read by the Grand Clerk, and were in the following terms:—

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,—We, your Majesty's loyal subjects, Francis Robert, Earl of Rosslyn, Most Worshipful Grand Master Mason of Scotland; Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Bart., Right Worshipful Depute Grand Master; Henry Inglis of Torsonce, Right Worshipful Substitute Grand Master, for ourselves and the other office-bearers and members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as well as in the name of the whole Fraternity of Scottish Freemasons throughout the world, beg leave to approach your royal presence with our dutiful and most cordial congratulations on the happy occasion of the recovery of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his late most dangerous illness. We humbly avail ourselves of this occasion to convey our expressions of loyalty and attachment to your Majesty's royal person and family with feelings of that true, fraternal, and sincere sympathy with which we as Freemasons welcome every event which conduces to the happiness of so beloved and exemplary a sovereign.

That it may please Him by whom kings reign to shower down upon your Majesty and your royal house His divine blessing, and long spare in re-invigorated health and strength the life of his Royal Highness, our illustrious patron, so very dear to the Masonic Craft, as well as to the whole nation, is our humble but sincere prayer.

Given at Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, in full Grand Lodge assembled, this fifth day of February, anno domini 1872, anno lucis 5876.

(Signed) ROSSLYN, Grand Master.

To her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales.

We, the Right Hon. Francis Robert, Earl of Rosslyn, Most Worshipful Grand Master Mason of Scotland; Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Bart., Right Worshipful Depute Grand Master; Henry Inglis, of Torsonce, Right Worshipful Substitute Grand Master, for ourselves and the other office-bearers and members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as well as in the name of the entire Fraternity of Scottish Freemasons throughout the world, approach your Royal Highness with the warmest expression of our heartfelt congratulation on the happy restoration to comparative health of our much beloved and illustrious patron, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

We gladly embrace this opportunity to express our most loyal and dutiful attachment to your Royal Highness, your royal consort, and family, and most earnestly pray the Great Father, the Great Architect of the Universe, to bestow upon your Royal Highnesses and your royal house every blessing and happiness, combined with long life, health, and prosperity.

Given at Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, in full Grand Lodge, assembled, this fifth day of February, anno domini 1872, anno lucis 5876.

(Signed) ROSSLYN, Grand Master.

The addresses were most enthusiastically adopted by the assembled brethren. They were beautifully inscribed in vellum by Bros. Melville and Adamson. Charters were ordered to be expedited for new lodges: "Jacob's Deale," Cape of Good Hope; "Cosmos," Lima; "Peace and Progress," Lima; "Abbotsford," Gulgung, New South Wales; and "St. Andrew," New Pitsligo. The resignation of Bro. Brodie of Brodie as Prov. Grand Master of Inverness-shire, on the ground of ill-health, was accepted with regret. It was unanimously resolved to submit the name of Bro. William Mann, Past Senior Grand Warden, to the Grand Lodge of Sweden, for appointment as their representative of this Grand Lodge, vacant by the decease of Bro. W. A. Lurie. Several motions from last quarterly communication were then disposed of. Among others was that of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master:—

That it is desirable that a project for the gradual extinction of the Grand Lodge debt, the augmentation and establishment of the Fund of Benevolence on a more permanent footing, and the Building Lodge Rooms for the assembling of the brethren throughout the provinces, be taken into consideration at the next quarterly communication.

His Lordship urged the necessity for the motion, going into full details of Grand Lodge affairs and interests. He stated that, having sent down his proposal to the various lodges, he had received in reply the strongest expressions of sympathy with the object in view. He had that morning received from the Prov. Grand Master of Berwickshire a very cordial letter, enclosing a cheque for £10 towards the fund sought to be instituted. His lordship intimated his intention of heading a subscription-list for the establishment of an orphan school with the donation of 100 guineas. His Lordship's motion was seconded by Bro. Mann, and was carried amid the acclamations of the brethren. A motion for the recognition of a Past Master's ceremonial was also carried, and the details remitted to a committee to report upon. It was also agreed that precedence in Grand Lodge be accorded to all Past Grand Masters in their Order. Several new motions, including that of the Grand Master for working out his project, were then tabled for discussion at next meeting, and thereafter Grand Lodge was closed in ample form.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR,—Will you please allow me space in THE FREEMASON, to call the attention of W.E.N. to the paragraphs in your last impression, which in the reading struck me as an error, arising from an oversight, and not a want of knowledge, viz.:—"He sent them first to the . . . scattered through the nations." "And, here, it is important . . . and other parts of Asia Minor." I have for some time been interested in this subject, and have always thought that nine tribes only, were carried away by the Assyrians, Benjamin being left until after the time of Christ, closely connected with the Jews, or tribe of Judah, with whom were also the Levites, who, with Judah, went into captivity to Babylon, and with them returned to Jerusalem, remaining there with Judah, when Benjamin, in obedience to the warning of Christ, finally separated from Judah and followed after the nine tribes, at or before the actual commencement of the siege of Jerusalem and the final dispersion of the Jews, Judah and Levi.

I am not learned, but desire to know the truth, and therefore call attention to this, that if it is an error it may be put right; and if I am mistaken, I trust my brother W.E.N. will kindly show me wherein, that together we may know and rejoice in the truth.

Excuse my troubling you, and believe me

Yours fraternally,

J. B. 731

THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.]

The Annual Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held on Wednesday evening, the 31st ultimo, at Freemasons' Tavern, the Right Hon. the Earl Percy, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of Northumberland, in the chair. The attendance of brethren on the occasion was large and influential, and the President of the day had the gratification of finding that the objects for whom he had undertaken to plead—the aged and helpless—were not the less cared for because the young and strong find so many supporters. It has frequently occurred to us to have to place the benefits which this Charity provides before the brethren; but, in case the good it does may not be generally known, we would again state that it gives a weekly allowance to decayed brethren and the widows of deceased brethren, either to be enjoyed at the almshouses at Croydon (when there is a vacancy), or in the voluntary residences of the pensioners. To the receipt of the pension, candidates have to be elected in the same way as the sons and daughters of Freemasons obtain admission to the schools, with this difference, that a subscription of five shillings a year secures to the subscriber one vote at the annual election of the Benevolent Institution, on the third Friday in May, while a guinea annually paid to either the Boys' or Girls' School obtains one vote at each half-yearly election, in April and October, in whichever Institution the money is paid to.

At the conclusion of the banquet, grace "For these and all Thy mercies," was beautifully sung by the professional ladies and brethren, and the toastmaster then cried "Silence for the Chairman," and the toasts of the evening were commenced. In giving the first toast,

The Chairman said: Brethren, the first toast which I have this evening to call your attention to is one which will require no words of mine to recommend it to your acceptance; it is that of "Her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria." (Cheers.) It is a very common saying that the empire over which our sovereign reigns is one upon which the sun never sets. From the whole of that great empire have gone up the prayers of all her subjects, for every heart has felt the deepest sympathy for her in her joy and in her sorrow; but of this I am sure that, although this has been a spectacle which has never been equalled, I believe, in any other country or nation since the world began, yet from none have prayers more fervent been offered, none have felt more deep and sincere sympathy than those subjects who are the citizens of an empire which is co-extensive with that of her Majesty, I mean the subjects of our Most Worshipful Grand Master. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I feel that I need not detain you longer, but that I should at once ask you to drink this toast with that cordiality with which Masons are accustomed to receive it, and which is more especially called for at such a time as this. Brethren, I give you, "Her Majesty the Queen."

The toast was drunk with all the honours and followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Chairman again rose and said: Brethren, the next toast upon the list which I see before me is that of "The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon," who is also the President of this Institution. (Hear, hear.) We all know how great the merits of our Grand Master are. (Hear, hear.) They need be great, because he followed one who was, I believe, one of the most popular Grand Masters who ever sat upon the throne. (Hear, hear.) But I believe that our present Grand Master is not one whit less popular—(hear, hear)—nor less likely to discharge faithfully, zealously, and ably the duties which fall to his lot to discharge. (Hear, hear.) We all—at least, I have no doubt, a great number of you here present—heard the remarkably good speech he made with reference to the events of the last two months at the Grand Lodge last week. We all felt, I believe, that he expressed fully our feelings, and that, in occupying the place which he does, he is the fittest exponent that we possibly could have of the feelings of the Freemasons of England. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I give you "The Health of our Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon."

After a song from Miss Banks,

The Chairman rose and said: Ladies and Brethren, I approach the next toast which I have to propose to you with very different feelings from those with which I have proposed the other healths. There is something connected with one of the two names which I have now to present to your notice which, I trust, never has been connected with it before, and which, I trust, by God's blessing, we shall never have associated with it again. (Hear, hear.) I have to propose to you "The Health of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and the Earl of Zetland, our Most Worshipful Past Grand Masters." (Cheers.) Brethren, I expected that this toast would be cordially received by you, and I see that I shall not be disappointed in my expectation. This is the first great Masonic gathering which I believe has occurred since, I hope I may now call it, the recovery of his Royal Highness. (Hear, hear.) It is a very old saying that we never know how precious anything is until we lose it. Loyalty was always a characteristic of Freemasons, I have always believed that Freemasons were amongst the most loyal subjects in the land—(hear, hear)—but yet I believe that it required that we should see our beloved Prince in imminent danger before we felt how dearly we loved him and how great his loss would be. I remember well how cordially he was welcomed as a Freemason when he first came amongst us. I am certain that during his future career, and most certainly in those parts of it which are in any degree chequered with sorrow or distress—and I trust they may in future be few and far between—(hear, hear)—he will receive the same sympathy, and the same cordial feelings will be extended towards him as we extended when he first came amongst us. (Hear, hear.) I must not allow myself to forget the other name which is connected with this toast—one which it would ill become us to forget while we sit in this place, for I think that all we see around us speaks of the prosperous reign of our Past Grand Master, Lord Zetland. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, we should never forget our old friends, least of all our benefactors, and least still Lord Zetland. I give you "The Health of the Worshipful Past Grand Masters, the Earl of Zetland and the Prince of Wales."

The toast was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm, and was followed by the choir singing "God bless the Prince of Wales."

The Chairman on rising to propose the toast of the Deputy Grand Master and Grand Officers, said: Ladies and Brethren, I have now to propose to you "The Health of the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Present and Past Grand Officers." (Cheers.) I am sorry that the Earl of Carnarvon is not in a condition at present to take part in our Masonic gatherings; but, I trust, that, ere long, he will be sufficiently recovered again to come amongst us. I have lately heard that he is in a fair way towards recovery, and I trust that we may see him again in Grand Lodge. We all were glad when the Most Worshipful the Grand Master's choice fell upon him. (Hear, hear.) He is an old and experienced Mason; he has shown himself well fitted for the highest posts both in the country and in Masonry, and, I think, we are all agreed that he is the right man in the right place. (Hear, hear.) Of the present and past Grand Officers I need say but little. You, brethren, who are, most of you, I have no doubt, much more constant attendants in Grand Lodge than I am, are much more aware of their merits than I can be; but I know that it is usually reported that no Grand Lodge in the world, no Grand Master, is so well supported by his Grand Officers as the Grand Master of England. ("Hear, hear," and cheers.) I shall couple with this toast the name of one who is known to you all, and who is much valued for his many merits, and particularly for those which he exercises in Masonry—I mean Bro. Martyn. (Cheers.)

After the toast had been honoured, Miss Alice Fairman sang, "Looking Back."

The Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C., in reply, said: My Lord, Ladies, and Brethren, the task which has been imposed upon me this evening of returning thanks for the Deputy Grand Master of England and all the Grand Officers, past and present, is, indeed, a very arduous one, and it is a task which I am sure any man would shrink from when he came to think of all the merits of those who are implied and comprised in that toast. But I am supported by the remembrance that they possess so many merits that I cannot enumerate them, and that my own must fade before them. For my Lord Carnarvon, the Deputy Grand Master, it would be in vain for me to say anything you might not anticipate; still, I have the greatest pleasure in knowing that it is now fifteen years since I had the pleasure of being exalted in Royal Arch Masonry along with him in the Royal Arch chapter at Oxford, and for the past fifteen years he has conducted himself, as you all know, in every position he has been placed in in Masonry, and in every position, as Lord Percy has said, in a way that gives the greatest and highest satisfaction to all of us who have had the satisfaction of observing his conduct in that career. For the rest of the Grand Officers, they are, as you know, always all before you. You have had an opportunity of seeing and observing their conduct, and I am quite certain that the way in which their name is received in all Masonic assemblies is a guarantee of the way in which they perform their duties. For the past Grand Officers, and in their name, as one of them, I return you my very sincere thanks for the way in which you have received the mention of our names; and for the present Grand Officers, I can but hope and trust that they will worthily fulfil, as I know they will, their duties during their term of office, and at the end of their year of office they will receive their badges and other honours and distinctions to show that they have done so. (Cheers.)

The Chairman, in giving the toast of the evening, said: Ladies and Brethren, I feel very much, I can assure you, like a spoiling spirit, because I feel that I am standing in the way of an entertainment which you would much more appreciate than my voice. (No, no.) Well, brethren, I trust that for the sense and credit of the mystic Order that you do so. I assure you I will not make longer speeches than I can help, but I must ask your pardon for making one and requiring a longer hearing than I otherwise should for this toast, because it is the toast of the evening. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I am always glad to take part or to aid in any way that lies in my power the charities of Freemasonry—(cheers)—because I know that in the outside world there is a great deal of misconception as to the nature of Freemasonry; and I must confess that I am not altogether astonished that it should be so, because it is perfectly true that there is a great deal of pleasure and enjoyment in Freemasonry—that we have very convivial meetings, and also that, except in our Masonic Charities, it is not apparent to the world what good we do. You will not suspect me, brethren, of intending to say that there is not good which is not done in Freemasonry, which the world does not see; but what I say is, the world does not see it. Now it is perfectly true on the one hand, that we ought to do good whether the world sees it or not—nay more, our left hand should not know what our right hand doeth; and on the other hand, I might quote you a text against that, because we all know that you can prove anything by texts—there is a text which proves (I am saying it seriously), "So let your light shine before men that they may see your good works." Therefore, brethren, I am glad Freemasonry has large and extensive charities which can be seen by the world. I do not know of any body of men who take such good care of their members as Freemasons do from their cradles to their graves. I may say there is help for the deserving, if they choose to seek it. (Cheers.) At the present moment I have nothing to do with the cradle—(laughter)—but I have to advocate before you the claims of our aged brethren. Now, I am perfectly well aware that there is a great deal to be said about the evil of helping those in their old age who might have provided for themselves in their youth; but it also strikes me that people forget that there are those who by accident or misfortune that cannot be foreseen are left in their old age destitute. We do help, through our Benevolent Fund, those who by sudden misfortune are impoverished and in distress, but who in youth are of such an age that they may recover themselves. But the charity which I now have to recommend to your notice helps those who are in the same position as those brethren, only they are arrived at an age which leaves no chance, humanly speaking, of their ever being able to do anything for themselves. Now, brethren, I do not think I need say more on that point, but I will place before you at once, if you will allow me, very concisely, the state the Institution is in, and the claim it has on our notice. You are told it is a flourishing Institution, therefore that it does not want any subscription. I do not know that I should put it in that light, but I have often heard it said that flourishing institutions have not the same claims as those that are not flourishing. I doubt this assertion.

Allow me to say, this Institution is flourishing, not because it has funds of its own which are not dependent on voluntary contributions, because without it has some funds of that description, I will show you in one moment that it cannot depend alone on that source for success. At present, there are 110 old men who are supported by this Institution, and there are 74 widows of Freemasons. And I am sure that we shall not feel that we ought to help them the less than we have helped their husbands, because women require more assistance than men. There are 74 widows upon the funds of the Institution. Now, these persons get, men £26 a year—no very large annuity, allow me to say, although I believe it amply sufficient—and the widows £25. Now that comes to a very large sum in the whole year, and of that there is now supplied by permanent income from Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter funds and so forth, £2057; but the whole expenses of the Institution are £4700 and upwards. This is merely, remember, for annuities; therefore you will perceive that more than half of the funds of this Institution depend upon voluntary subscriptions. Now, brethren, I do not think I am wrong in frankly stating to you the state of the case, because you will see what there is to be done in the Institution; for I have not mentioned working expenses and all other things that come in like that. Brethren, I hope you will agree with me that this Institution deserves support, and you will show by your support that you coincide with me in that opinion. (Cheers.)

Bro. Farnfield (Secretary) then read the lists of subscriptions which amounted in the aggregate to £3567 3s. 6d., with five lists to come in: (Cheers.)

The Chairman said: Brethren, I have much pleasure in announcing to you that the total amount of the lists is £3567 3s. 6d., and I must also add that there are five lists yet to come in. Now, brethren, such a list as this deserves a toast, and a toast requires some one to respond to it, and therefore I shall call upon one who is as fit as any one can be to respond to it, the Grand Treasurer, Bro. Tomkins.

Bro. Tomkins, in response, said: My lord, ladies, and brethren, it is with very great pleasure, as the Treasurer of this noble and useful charity and on this occasion as representing all the executive officers who take a deep interest in the welfare of this charity, that I rise to thank you for the kindness which you have shown on this occasion, and for the way in which this toast has been proposed by his lordship and received by you. As his lordship's health will shortly be proposed by some brother in my neighbourhood, I will pass that point by which otherwise I should have alluded to; but I would rather take up the question of the charity of the Craft, and the charity of the Craft is directed to this noble object. It would indeed be a great blot for the Institution if there were no fund for their aged and widows. I feel heartily grateful, and I am sure every brother who has an interest in the charity participates in the same feeling of gratitude, when he sees how an appeal is made to the Craft and how nobly it is responded to by the Craft on this and on similar occasions. It is a very great gratification to every Freemason to see how nobly our charities are supported, and while it is a great satisfaction that this and other charities should be supported as they are, I think it is the duty of your executive to remind you that of late years the Craft has been greatly increasing in numbers. (Hear, hear.) As it has been increasing, the calls on the charity have been more numerous than before, and therefore your charities are hardly adequate to the demands made upon them. Every Steward who has come forward has performed a simple duty, and I am sure he has done so with a great deal of pleasure; but I would request every Steward and every brother to disseminate, as far as they can, among their friends and acquaintances the necessity for continued and renewed exertions in the future, for the great increase in the number of Freemasons cause great demands. In future years it may be larger than in past years. Therefore, brethren, while thanking you heartily for the kindness and liberality with which you subscribe to this charity, I pray you not to relax your exertions, but, if possible, to increase them, that we may provide future resources for demands that may be made upon us in future years. (Cheers.)

Bro. Frank Elmore here sang in beautiful style "The Woodman's Son."

Colonel F. Burdett, Prov. Grand Master of Middlesex, proposed "The Health of the Chairman," and in doing so, alluded to that nobleman's great popularity, not only in the northern counties, where he was a Provincial Grand Master, but in London. He had done everything in his power to advance the interests of Masonry, and had taken a prominent part in the Charities, which were a bright ornament to the Order. He (Colonel Burdett) congratulated him on the birth of a son, and hoped that some day or other that son would be initiated in Masonry, and become as great an ornament to it as his father.

The toast having been drunk,

The Chairman said: Ladies and Brethren, I cannot adequately thank you for the very kind way in which my health has been proposed and received this evening. It is no mere form of speech to say that I am most grateful to you for the kindness which you have extended to me, and the way in which you have received me, because I am conscious of many defects in my occupancy of this chair. (No, no.) It is the first time that I have had the honour of presiding at one of these Masonic festivals; it is only the second time that I have had the pleasure of being present at one of them; and, therefore, if I have not performed all the duties which were incumbent on me, I ask you to forgive me, and to take the will for the deed. (Cheers.) I thank you very heartily, brethren, once and for all, for the kindness which you have shown to me. I trust that this may not be the last time we may meet here. (Cheers.) I thank you for having made my tenure of this office an illustrious one to me, both by the numbers in which you have come and the amount of the lists, which, I am told, is greater by far than usual. I thank especially the reds (as Colonel Burdett calls them) for coming here. I have great sympathy with the reds in every position, both in the hunting-field and in the army, and I am most gratified and feel myself much honoured by their presence here this evening; and if you will allow me, brethren, I will now take the opportunity of thanking the brethren of Northumberland for the way in which they have supported me. They have not done the province discredit. Brethren, I know that you have heard quite enough of my voice now. (No, no.) I can only apologise to you for being obliged to force myself so much upon your notice, and in all sincerity, I say, I think I shall be doing you a favour by taking my seat.

The Chairman next proposed "The other Masonic Charities," and in doing so, said he hoped the brethren would drink the toast with as much cordiality as they had the others. He was not there to advocate the other Masonic Charities, but he might tell the brethren that the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot would preside at the Boys' School on the 13th March, and the Grand Master at the Girls' on the 8th May. He understood that both those Institutions had already got good lists, and he hoped they would be supported as well as this Benevolent Fund had been.

Bro. Binckes said that, as representing the Boys' School, he offered his sincere thanks to the brethren who were supporting him. He congratulated Bro. Farnfield on the success of this festival, and said that, without any feelings of jealousy, he wished for similar support. He was happy to say that the aged Freemasons were well taken care of, and he was pleased to inform the brethren that the boys and girls were equally well cared for. The support afforded to the Charities was excellent, and he was sorry that Bro. Patten was incapacitated by illness from being present to acknowledge the encouragement given to the Girls' School. He strongly urged the brethren to come forward, and wipe off the debt of £5,000 which was hanging over the "unfortunate Institution of which he was the unfortunate Secretary," and as an individual demonstration of thankfulness for the recovery of the Prince of Wales let brethren in their lodges not indulge in banquets, but offer the price as a thanksgiving, and so reduce the debt on the Boys' School.

The Chairman then gave "The Health of the Ladies," for which Bro. R. J. Spiers, of Oxford, replied, and "The Stewards," to which Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, acting President of the Board, responded, and the company afterwards adjourned to the Temple, where they enjoyed a concert, conducted by Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, Grand Organist, in which Miss Banks, Miss Janet Haydon, and Miss Alice Fairman, with Bros. George Perren, Frank Elmore, J. B. Ciabiatta, and Chaplin Henry took part. Signor Scuderi performed on the violin. The pianoforte was lent by Messrs. Erard. The entertainment was kept up till a late hour.

The banquet was well supplied by Mr. Francatelli, the manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company, and did great credit to his arrangements. Universal satisfaction was expressed with everything; and the wines especially, the arrangement of which was entrusted to Bro. Thomas Meggy, as Wine Steward, met with general approbation.

Mr. Goodchild was toastmaster.

VALUABLE WORK on the ANCIENT CONSTITUTIONS of the FREEMASONS.

Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall, is now preparing for the press a work to be entitled, "The old Charges of British Freemasons." The celebrated manuscript belonging to the time-immemorial Lodge of Antiquity, of 1686, will be published, having been carefully transcribed especially for Bro. Hughan's work, and a fac-simile page will form the frontispiece. This MS. has not hitherto been published, and much interest centres in this document. Other MSS. will also be inserted, and a careful resumé of all the known MSS., or Constitutions, will form the first part of this important book.

The work, we understand, will be dedicated (by permission) to the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., M.W.G.M. As only a limited number will be issued, brethren should apply at once to the author for copies, which will be sold at five shillings each.

AT A MASONIC FESTIVAL.

BY A PROVINCIAL BROTHER.

[We have great pleasure in giving publicity to the following graphic sketch from a valued correspondent.]

IT is a trite, but a true saying that an Englishman likes a good dinner, and we, for one, can bear vigorous witness to the fact that an English Mason nobly sustains the repute of his nationality in this, as, indeed, we may add, in every other respect. However, a poor provincial brother like the writer has but few opportunities of doing justice to the exquisite gastronomic ability of an Ude or a Francatelli, for the very good reason that sublime geniuses of their calibre are not wont to "waste their sweetness on the desert air," or to perpetrate their chef d'œuvres in the absence of abdominal appreciation. Having thus formidably prepared the minds of our readers, we make at once the straightforward confession that, on hospitable thoughts intent—or, in other words, bent upon our own temporal regalement—we wended our solitary way to Freemasons' Tavern on Wednesday, the 31st January, 1872 (we love precision in dates), on purpose to participate in the varied pleasures which are usually associated with doing a good action and demolishing a dainty dinner. Lest any curious reader should desire more copious details of this remarkable event, we will forthwith anticipate his anxiety, and homœopathically relieve his pain. About twenty minutes to six o'clock, post meridian, on the day before mentioned, two hansom cabs might have been seen traversing the devious pathways and unsavoury lanes which lead to Metropolitan Freemasonry's not unhandsome abode. The vehicles arrived at their destination simultaneously—their occupants performed the customary exploit of jumping out, and the (sometimes) unusual feat of paying the Jehus, after which they entered the building, where they encountered a Tyler, dressed up for the occasion in a uniform coat, with brass buttons of the Georgian era, a cap with a fiery peak, like that of Mont Blanc at sunrise, and a pair of orthodox cerulean breeches, whose hue, mellowed in the gaslight which streamed around, reminded us of days when all with us was serenely blue and fair. Our fellow-traveller—for, although we journeyed in different conveyances, it is permissible to call him so, inasmuch as we entered the building together—well, our accidental partner in arrival—lightly bounded up the staircase—we paused to look around; and although nothing like the halls of Vathek met our view, we gained some information. The brother who had so incontinently preceded us was no less a personage than the Right Hon. Henry, Earl Percy, M.P., Provincial Grand Master for Northumberland (of which he is also Duke, in futuro), and likewise the Right Worshipful, and, we are sure, very worthy, Chairman of the evening!

After this, we modestly ascended the spiral staircase, and proceeded to the robing-room, where we donned the mystical apron (whose first sight brought tears into our beloved consort's eyes), adjusted our hair with an invisible comb, and felt "all a man and a brother." In the corridors leading to the Festival Hall a considerable number of brethren had assembled—many bearing wands in their hands, and blossoming in all the vernal magnificence of exceedingly-handsome rosettes. These, we were informed, were the Stewards. Other brethren wandered to and fro, gossiping here, exchanging fraternal salutations there, and looking very much as if they liked it. About the middle of the corridor a vision of startling splendour burst upon our view. On looking down the steps leading to the Hall, we saw, passing and repassing, ascending and descending, like Jacob's angels, some of the gentle sex, arrayed in wealth of smiles, as well as regal fabrics, and looking so beautiful that we wished—well, we wished we were—a bachelor. In the distance shone the brilliant scarlet of what appeared to be a whole posse comitatus of the Household Troops, though we were sorely exercised, in a mental sense, at the first blush, to account for the presence of these sons of Mars. Fortunately, at this juncture, we fell in, promiscuously, with a learned and obliging brother, who, in answer to our somewhat anxious inquiry as to whether the hosts of Dilke and Odger were threatening our peace, kindly responded, "Oh, these are members of the Honourable Artillery Company—all brother Masons and good fellows—who have come to support our friend 'Peter,' the excellent surgeon of the corps, as one of the Stewards of the festival." Upon this hint, we approached somewhat closer to the warriors—who really looked soldiers every inch of them—and to our great joy, as well as amazement, found that one of them was an old friend of ours, a merry Islingtonian to wit, and a quondam Yorick of many a jovial crew. By this time the company had mustered—the ladies had taken their places, either in a spacious gallery overlooking the dining-hall, or in the porchway of the hall itself—we had almost profanely said in the "pit."

The Stewards then entered in procession, each looking as solemn as though the fate of empires depended upon the perpendicularity of his wand of office. Wrapped in this funereal gloom, they passed round the tables, climbed the dais in the East, safely descended on the other side, and arrived at whence they came. At the rear of the procession walked the Chairman, and with him a brother who, we subsequently ascertained, was the Acting President of the Stewards, Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, one of the Grand Deacons, and a warm supporter of the Masonic Institutions. The lugubrious silence ceased as the youthful chairman took his seat in the orient—cheer after cheer broke forth, and after this somewhat stormy welcome grace was said.

Shall we enlarge upon the dinner? Our native bashfulness suggests, No; our bump of candour loudly proclaims, Yes. Suffice it to say that the viands were very good—on the carte; the wines passable—but certainly guiltless of age; the waiters animated with abundant esprit de corps, and extremely attentive—towards the close of the entertainment. Indeed, one injured Steward assured us, with indignant mien and flashing eyes, that, upon going in quest of a waiter, he had unwarily stumbled behind a screen, whence he was summarily ejected by the aroused British lion in the form of an enraged servitor whom he had rudely disturbed during the agreeable process of quaffing Masonic champagne. For ourselves, we are a philosopher—trifles do not disturb the immobile composure of our brow; but, if that waiter had thus tackled us, we should either have placed him in disagreeable proximity to the floor, or there would have been one man the less in the room—that is all. The best of the banquet were the "sweets"—there the artist's genius shone, and from "Russian Charlotte" and "Nesselrode Pudding"—an easy transition, by-the-bye—we extracted the honey of consolation for the other deficiencies of the repast.

"Order, pray, silence for grace," and in response to the stentorian injunction, all rise while the after-meal thanksgiving is very prettily sung by the choir. The ladies flock back to their seats in pit and gallery, some even invade the vacant seats at the table, and the real business of the evening commences with a speech from Earl Percy in proposing "The Health of her Most Gracious Majesty." No need to dilate upon her many virtues—Victoria is a name around which circle the prayers and blessings of half the nations, and with loyal demonstrations of enthusiasm the Queen is honoured; and the National Anthem, with a solo by Bro. George Perren, succeeds in eliciting renewed cheering.

The Right Worshipful Chairman, having paid a fitting compliment to the Grand Master, afterwards proposed "The Past Grand Masters of England, the Earl of Zetland, K.T., and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G.," making graceful allusion to the services of the peer and the recent recovery of the prince. The applause was tremendous, and sounded to our fancy somewhat like the sustained roll of musketry in a well-contested battle—gradually it died out, but was caught up in spirit by the fine voice of Perren, who sang with taste and vigour "God bless the Prince of Wales." It would ill become us to attempt—and we are satisfied, Brother Editor, that you would not permit—any elaborate account of the speeches which followed. To one, however, we must refer, inasmuch as it comprehended the raison d'être of the entire proceedings. After a lucid and well-delivered appeal on behalf of the cause of charity, Lord Percy proposed "Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution"—a toast which was received with general enthusiasm. A very venerable-looking gentleman, who, I was informed, was Bro. Farnfield, Secretary to the Institution, then read the Stewards' lists of donations received, announcing at the close the very gratifying aggregate of nearly £3,600. Our stay in the Hall was not prolonged after this practical episode, and we retired fully impressed with the conviction that the periodical Masonic Festivals—unnecessary as some of our friends consider them to be—are really important adjuncts to the success of those benevolent Institutions in which every English Freemason ought to take a deep and lasting interest.

THE subscribers to the fund for the erection of a memorial in Wisbeach to the late Bro. Richard Young, at the time of his death Sheriff of London and Middlesex, and formerly M.P. for Cambridgeshire, include the names of several Masons, amongst whom we may mention Bro. Alderman and Sheriff Truscott and Bro. Ex-Sheriff Jones.

"MORTGAGE BROKING.—Messrs. Henry Salter and Co., the Mortgage Brokers, of Pancras-lane, E.C., announce that, in consequence of the extension of their Irish business, they have established a Branch Office at 41, Lower Sackville-street, Dublin, specially for the convenience of their Irish patrons. Mr. H. Salter, jun., has the management of the Dublin branch. The business of Mortgage Broking may almost be said to have been originated by Messrs. Salter, whose name is now well known in connection with it, and as acting for public bodies, legal firms, and owners of property in all parts of England. Ship, Bill, and Stock Broking are long-established branches of business, but it seems to have remained for this firm to make the needful organisation on a sufficient scale to enable mortgagors and mortgagees to carry out with greater facility those exchanges of title-deeds for surplus capital, or vice versa, which keep so large a part of the capital of the country in safe and remunerative occupation. It has been recently stated that the annual rental value of property in England and Wales alone, as appears from Parliamentary returns (of which it is assumed that two-thirds are under mortgage), is £143,622,256, which represents a capital of £2,872,445,120; and at the present time there are 4,744,979 houses, representing a marketable value of £1,057,620,275. From deaths, change of residence, division, sale, and other causes for reinvestment of capital, these properties are constantly being transferred, and it is estimated that property exceeding in value £957,481,700 (exclusive of live interests, reversions, and personalty) is constantly available in the market as mortgage securities."—Money Market Review.

GRAND CHAPTER.

The Quarterly Convocation of the Grand Chapter of England was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall, Comps. S. Rawson, as Z.; F. Pattison, H.; Benjamin Head, J.; John Hervey, G.S.E.; H. Browse, N.; the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, P.S.; the Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, 1st A.S.; E. Snell, 2nd A.S.; T. Fenn, G.S.B.; James Brett, D.C.; and C. B. Payne, J. There were also present: Comps. Joshua Nunn, P.G.D.C.; Joseph Smith, P.G.B.; N. Bradford, P.G.D.C.; W. E. Walmisley, P.G.S.B.; A. B. Bennett, J. 204; George Kenning, Z. 192; George Pymm, H. 749; William Smith, C.E., P.Z. 33; W. Ough, 657 and 749; H. Massey, Z.-elect 619; G. Davage, Z. 185; James Terry, P.Z. 975; F. Binckes; John Boyd, P.Z. 145; W. West Smith, Z. 79; Æ. J. McIntyre, Q.C.; T. Y. Strachan, P.Z. 706; H. G. Buss; F. Walters, P.Z. 73; Edward Cox, the Rev. Dr. Bradshaw, and many others.

The G.S.E., after Grand Chapter had been formally opened, read the minutes of last Grand Chapter and notices of motion.

Comp. T. Y. Strachan then rose and said that he apprehended this would be the right time for him to bring on the first motion, of which he had given notice—the non-confirmation of that part of the minutes of last convocation in November relating to the appeal of Comp. Laws, and the decision of the Provincial Grand Superintendent for Northumberland.

Comp. McIntyre, G. Reg., said that he would place the position of Grand Chapter before the companions, in order that they might act upon it with regard to Comp. Strachan's motion. Grand Chapter, as well as Grand Lodge, met in two capacities—in one as a legislative assembly, where laws were made for the Craft and the Arch. But the laws which were brought forward for the guidance of the Craft or Royal Arch had no effect whatever until the resolutions passed at one meeting were confirmed by the next. But Grand Chapter had another function—it sat as a Supreme Court of Appeal; and as a Supreme Court of Appeal, it exercised a jurisdiction similar to that exercised by the House of Lords in its judicial capacity. In the House of Lords as a legislative assembly, a bill had to be read three times before it became the law of the land and was binding on the subjects of the realm. In the Royal Arch, a matter was submitted to the companions in Grand Chapter, and their decision at one meeting had to be confirmed at a subsequent one. But sitting as a court to hear and determine matters, its decision at one meeting must be acted upon, and its decision must be final. He did not say there were no means of inducing Grand Chapter, if it was wrong, to review its decision; but it could not be done by a motion to non-confirm the minutes. Such a procedure, if it meant anything, meant this, that a decision was no decision at all, because it only became a decision when the minutes were confirmed. Power was given to District Grand Lodges and Chapters to hear and determine complaints, and there was an appeal from those decisions to Grand Lodge or Chapter. Suppose a District Grand Lodge or Chapter suspended a man, did it require confirmation before that suspension took effect? Or, if he appealed to Grand Lodge or Chapter, was he unsuspended till the appellate tribunal had decided the case, and the minutes of the Grand Body were confirmed? No; certainly not. So, here; there had been an appeal to Grand Chapter from the District Superintendent, and the Grand Chapter had determined it sitting in its judicial capacity, and the decision was final. It was but fair to the M.E.Z. that he should know that, in 1852, when there was a decision of the Grand Lodge, when the minutes of the previous meeting had to be confirmed, upon motion made, so much of the minutes as related to an appeal were not confirmed; but on that occasion the matter was not brought to the notice of the Grand Registrar, and it was allowed to pass sub silentio. Had the matter been called to the attention of the Grand Registrar, and had he been asked to give his decision upon it and the different capacities in which Grand Lodge sat, as a legislative assembly and as a Court of Appeal, he would have said that a decision given by it in one capacity could not be upset by it in another capacity. It seemed to him, therefore, that, if this motion was allowed to be put, the former decision of Grand Chapter was not final, and did not take effect, which was contrary to all principle. They might just as well in their lodges say that, although they put it in form that the minutes be confirmed, the confirmation referred only to those things that required confirmation. Then, this state of things might arise. A gentleman might be proposed for initiation, be balloted for successfully, and initiated; and, at the next meeting, the lodge might non-confirm the minutes, and declare that the initiate was no longer a member of the Order. This seemed so contrary to all the rules by which assemblies were guided, that he would advise the Grand Principal that this motion for the non-confirmation of the last minutes, of what was done by it in its judicial capacity, could not be made.

Comp. Strachan having again risen to speak,

The M.E.Z. said he was in hopes that Comp. Strachan would have been convinced, by the arguments of the Grand Registrar, that he could not proceed with his motion. He was convinced himself, and he ruled, that Comp. Strachan was out of order.

Comp. Strachan, whilst submitting to the decision, trusted that an opportunity would be given him to open the subject at a later period.

The Grand Registrar said it could not be done in the form in which it appeared on the notice paper.

Comp. Strachan said he had looked at the Constitutions, and thought he had conformed to the rules by giving certain notices. He had attended at great personal inconvenience in order to have the question discussed, and had come up with two other companions a distance of 300 miles.

The M.E.Z. said he had not the power to allow the motion to be put.

Comp. F. Binckes asked whether it was not admissible to reply to the arguments of the Grand Registrar?

The M.E.Z. thought not, when the Grand Registrar, who was their legal adviser, gave it as his opinion that Comp. Strachan's motion was illegal.

Comp. F. Binckes thought an important principle was involved, though he himself had no personal interest in the question.

The M.E.Z. said they were not on that point at present. They were on the point whether Comp. Strachan was in order on the judicial question.

Comp. F. Binckes believed there was something to be said in opposition to the arguments of the Grand Registrar.

The report of the Committee of General Purposes was then agreed to be taken as read. All the recommendations contained in the report were agreed to, including the granting of charters to five new chapters.

Comp. Strachan: again rose and said he apprehended the time had now come when he should speak on the subject he had before alluded to.

Grand Registrar had ventured to state in the opinion he had given, that there should be an opportunity, if Grand Chapter had made a mistake, of rectifying it; but he thought that before that could be done it should be brought forward in this way, that Grand Chapter in its proper jurisdiction should be asked to come to a re-decision. But as here the motion was virtually for the non-confirmation of the minutes it was the same thing over again.

Comp. Strachan: said that he had endeavoured to conform to the laws of Freemasonry as far as he could find what they were; he had given the proper notices, and he had received no notice that his notice was not in order. He thought that independent of any other questions it would be doing injustice to send a companion back 300 miles, after he had come that distance, without hearing him. He submitted that he had done everything that was requisite to give him a locus standi, and he hoped he should be allowed the privilege of expressing his opinions with the other two companions who had also come up from Newcastle. It was not a matter they had no opinion upon; he had a very strong opinion on it, and he claimed it as a right, as a First Principal of the Order, to expound the views he held on this question.

The M.E.Z. said: Comp. Strachan, I have consulted the Grand Registrar whether I might be allowed to hear your argument without your concluding with a motion. I agree that you have taken a great deal of trouble in this matter and made a long journey on this occasion; but the Grand Registrar's decision is that it would be illegal, and I cannot allow you to be heard. I have made enquiry of the Grand Registrar whether I might allow you to bring the matter forward without your concluding your speech with a motion. He says it is illegal, and I must therefore ask you not to continue your speech. But you may consult with the Grand Officers of Grand Chapter as to bringing this matter in some other way before us, but you cannot do it in the form of which you have given notice, because the Grand Registrar has given his decision that in its judicial capacity Grand Chapter cannot now hear you.

Comp. Strachan: If you decide that I shall not make a speech I shall submit, but I shall protest against the decision as an injustice. I shall submit to your ruling.

The M.E.Z.: You will see that it is impossible that you can bring forward the motion after the decision I have already come to. It is impossible for Grand Chapter to decide that the decision of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Northumberland be reversed. I am very sorry that you should have had all your trouble for nothing, but I am afraid it cannot be helped.

Comp. Strachan: If I understand your decision is that I am to sit down I shall do so, but if it is short of that, I shall contend that it is, though the opinion of Grand Registrar is of very great value, I do not find any law which says that the decision of Grand Registrar is to bind you. What I mean to say is, that there is no law which puts it in the hands of those officers to say that a companion should not bring a motion forward on proper notice given. I say it very strongly, because I feel it, for you have brought me here without telling me I could not bring it forward. I do think that coming 300 miles from Newcastle without a hint being given me that there was a doubt on the subject of my motion—and two other companions with me—is a grave injustice, and that this Grand Chapter will not sanction such a wrong.

The M.E.Z.: I must be guided by the Grand Registrar.

Comp. Strachan: Then, I understand that I am not to make a speech on this occasion.

The M.E.Z.: You cannot without making a motion, make a speech; it is not legal. Regretting it, I wish you should have the opportunity of expressing your opinions. Our legal adviser says it is not legal to make a speech unless you conclude with a motion.

Dr. Bradshaw: This is the first time I have had the pleasure of attending Grand Chapter of England, but I should not like to go away with the feeling that another companion imagined rightly or wrongly that he was injured because the feeling of Grand Chapter was against him. I trust I may be pardoned if I venture to ask why it is that a brother cannot speak without concluding with a motion. I think every brother in Freemasonry is allowed to express himself, and that a brother on the opposite side should rise and state why he should not so express himself, and that the votes should be taken. I am myself a Past Master and Past Principal several times at Lymington, and I did not like to hear one companion say that he had come 300 miles to state his opinions and had not been allowed to be heard. I put it to the good sense and good feeling of this Grand Chapter whether the companion should be overruled by some legal difficulty, either that he is too soon or too late. I hope and trust that if there is anything of which he has to complain after coming 300 miles, that we should hear before the public bar of Freemasonry what is the grievance, and try to redress it. If there is a legal difficulty let us try and get out of it.

The M.E.Z.: You have not heard the whole of the argument. You were not present when the Grand Registrar gave his opinion that this motion is not legal.

Dr. Bradshaw: If it is not legal through a technicality, let us get rid of it.

The M.E.Z.: Our Grand Registrar gave his opinion so strongly that he convinced myself and my companions in the chairs, and I think we are bound, having appointed a distinguished companion to the office of Grand Registrar, to be guided by his decision. It is the second time I have occupied the Grand Principal's chair, and I intend to shelter myself behind the advice of Grand Registrar. If I am wrong I shall appeal to him. I rule that Comp. Strachan cannot bring forward his motion.

Comp. F. Binckes, rose to address Grand Chapter, but was stopped, and Grand Chapter was closed in due form.

A TRIBUTE OF GRATITUDE.

Addressed most respectfully to Dr. STRONG, Honorary Surgeon to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, Croydon, by the grateful daughter of an inmate whom he has recently attended professionally with much care and kindness.

When on the couch of suffering
An invalid lies racked with pain,
And all that love can do to sooth
Appears, alas! to be in vain,
How beautiful to friends around
Falls sympathy upon the heart;
It's gentle influence never fails
Sweet consolation to impart.

Such was the writer's case. She watched
In anguish by her Mother's bed,
With no friend near to share her grief,
And bitter were the tears she shed;
But when her kind physician came,
Each day his goodness sooth'd her woe,
For he had passed through suffering,
And seemed her agony to know.

And by his skilled and patient care,
The invalid was spared to bless
The kindness that prolonged her life
And soothed her daughter's deep distress.
And oh! may He who answers prayer,
Upon His heavenly scroll record
Benevolence that is sure to find
A sweet and well-deserved reward.

AGNES S.

OPENING OF A NEW MASONIC HALL AT SWANSEA.

A very large and influential gathering of the Fraternity took place on Tuesday, the 2nd ult., on the occasion of the dedication of a new hall, which has just been completed for the use of the brethren of the Indefatigable Lodge, No. 237. The ceremony was most impressively performed by the R.W. Prov. Grand Master Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot, who was supported by the following members of the Prov. Grand Lodge: Bros. E. J. Morris, D.P.G.M. and W.M. 1323; Evan Jones, P.S.G.W. and P.M. 651; Rev. Secretan Jones, P.G. Chap.; C. Best Gardner, P.G. Treas. and P.M. 364; L. Tolloch, P.G. Reg. and W.M. 237; R. Boughton, P.G. Sup. of Works and W.M. 651; E. C. Pole, P.P.G.D.C. and W.M. 364; F. D. Michael, C. Bath, J. G. Hall, P.P.S.G.W.; O. G. Williams, G. B. Brock, P. H. Rowland, Rowland Thomas, P.P.J.G.W.; M. Loveluck, and R. W. Thomas, P.P.G. Stewards.

The following officers from neighbouring provinces were also present: Bro. Capt. J. G. Homfray, D.P.G.M. Monmouth, who was attended by Bros. J. Lewis, P.M. 1098, P.G.J.D.; C. Homfray, and W. Davies, Past G. Stewards; and G. Fothergill, S.W. 471; G. B. Sherrin, 471. From the west came Bros. Sweeney, A. Stone, W. Bonning, and J. B. Phillips, of the Llanelly Lodge; T. Charles, of St. Peter's Lodge, Carmarthen; and M. Harris, from St. Teilo Lodge. From the east, Bro. J. S. Wilson, P.M. 493, P.P.J.W. Gloucester. The lodges of the province were all well represented, and the respected R.R. Past Grand Master had the pleasure of seeing gathered around him the goodly array of about 150 Masons.

The suite of rooms is most commodious and well arranged. On the ground floor is a spacious vestibule, the approach to the lodge-room being by a handsomely-carved staircase. The refreshment room is 22 feet by 22 feet, and 19 feet high. There is a three-light Gothic window with carved capitals and Gothic heads, Forest of Dean stone. The lodge-room is 45 feet by 20 feet, and about 30 feet high, with open timber roof. Each of the principals of the roof rests on corbels and short columns of carved stone. The corbels are composed of Masonic emblems and foliage, the columns being surmounted with carved caps of natural foliage. At the end is a three-light window of carved stone, with carved caps, label moulding, and carved bosses. The interior is fitted up with richly-carved seating. Leading from the lodge-room are the necessary offices, preparing-room, robing-room, and all requisite conveniences. The builder is Mr. Thomas White; and the architect Mr. Thomas Davies, of Page-street. The building is heated throughout with hot water, the fitting of the apparatus being entrusted to Mr. Charles Edwards, High-street. The painting was done by Mr. Miles, painter and house decorator, Walter-road.

The musical arrangements were under the management of Bro. E. Fricker, Org. 237, and the anthems, &c., which formed part of the very impressive ceremonial, were very effectively rendered.

After the ceremony of dedication the newly-elected Master, Bro. G. Bradford, was installed into office by Bro. Tulloch, I.P.M. After having been placed in the chair in the skilful manner with which Bro. Tulloch does all his work, the W.M. appointed his officers for the ensuing year as follows: Bros. L. Tulloch, I.P.M.; W. E. Brown, S.W.; W. H. Tucker, jun., J.W.; Rev. Secretan Jones, Chap.; T. Powell, P.M., Treas.; J. Woolley, Sec.; G. Goodall, S.D.; C. Bullerwell, J.D.; T. R. Robinson, Dir. of Cers.; G. Shaddick, I.G.; J. B. Richards, and T. R. W. Mason, Stewards; Henry Simons, O.G.

After the ceremony the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet prepared for them by "mine host" of the Castle Hotel, Bro. J. P. Williams. The evening was enlivened by some excellent glees and songs.

ST. PAUL'S RESTORATION FUND.

Following the suggestion made a short time since in these pages, the Lodge of Antiquity, at their last meeting, voted a sum of £21 to the St. Paul's Fund. It is to be hoped that so good an example will be generally followed by the whole Craft, and as Sir Christopher Wren's connection with Freemasonry is an interesting portion of the history of the Order in England, a few words on that subject will doubtless incite others to contribute to the completion of our noble Cathedral, Wren's glorious monument, thus described in the motto on its walls: "Si monumentum quæris, circumspice." Freemasonry had flourished in the reign of James I., under the Grand Mastership of Inigo Jones, and continued in favour under the Earls of Pembroke, Danby, Arundel, and Bedford, who successively occupied the same high office, until the civil wars, when its progress was checked. Under the auspices, however, of Charles II., who had been admitted into the Order during his exile, Freemasonry revived. On December 27th, 1663, a general assembly was held, when Henry Jermyn, Earl of St. Albans, was elected Grand Master, who appointed Sir John Denham his Deputy, and Mr., afterwards Sir Christopher, Wren and John Webb his Wardens. In 1666 the Earl of St. Albans was succeeded by Earl Rivers, and by him Sir Christopher Wren was appointed Deputy Grand Master. Wren distinguished himself beyond any of his predecessors in promoting the prosperity of lodges then meeting in London, especially that of St. Paul's, which is now called the Lodge of Antiquity. He belonged to that lodge for eighteen years, and during his Mastership he presented three candlesticks to the lodge, which are still preserved and constantly used by the Lodge of Antiquity. After the great fire in 1666, Sir Christopher Wren was appointed the principal architect for rebuilding the city, the cathedral, and the parochial churches. He considered the charge too important for a single person, and accordingly selected for his assistant Mr. Robert Hook, Professor of Geometry in Gresham College. In 1673, the foundation stone of St. Paul's Cathedral was laid with great solemnity and Masonic honours by the King, Charles II., who presented his mallet, made of some wood from the former structure, to Sir Christopher Wren, who gave it to his lodge, where it is now shown, with great pride, to every visitor to the lodge. Long previous to 1718, the year considered by many to be that in which our present speculative or Free Masonry was established, had Masonic lodges been something more than operative societies, and especially so under the rulership of Inigo Jones, for, then, we learn that many learned men were initiated into our mysteries, and lodges were constituted as seminaries of instruction in the sciences and polite arts, after the model of the Italian schools. Few of our public buildings are associated so intimately with the history of the Craft, and the opportunity now offered of assisting in the completion of St. Paul's, as Wren designed it, ought to be eagerly embraced by every lodge and every individual Freemason, and thus make manifest to the world the dignity and usefulness of our Order.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

[With a view to increase the circulation, and consequently the usefulness, of THE FREEMASON, it is suggested that Lodges, &c., desiring reports to appear in the paper, should take a certain number of copies in proportion to the space required for the report.]

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Pythagorean Lodge, No. 79.—The usual meeting of this old and prosperous lodge was held on the 29th ult., at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, under the presidency of Bro. J. S. Burls, W.M., supported by his officers: Bros. C. Nash, S.W. and W.M.-elect; J. R. Nash, J.W.; W. C. Penny, P.M. and Treas.; J. H. H. Doughney, P.M. and Sec.; H. Roberts, S.D.; C. Munyard, J.D.; J. Fowler, S. J. Jenard, H. Kingston, W. Kipps, H. Pettit, J. F. Taylor, F. Roberts, B. W. Parsons, J. Ashby, W. Dupere, W. Myatt, H. Bond, A. Beckwith, E. Webb, T. Jeans, E. Mohr, &c. The visitors were Bros. James Brett (P.G.P.), W. H. Farnfield (P.M. 907), R. B. Webster (W.M. 140), J. W. Comb (W.M. 548), H. J. Wright (P.M. 72), E. W. Bumstead (P.M. 548), J. J. West (P.M. 548), T. Simpson (P.M. 9), H. Sydney Boate (72), J. Palmer (72), E. Shallless (140), C. H. Porter (147), T. H. Lavers (W.M. 211), W. H. Hailey (315), H. Jolly (I.G. 675), P. Chatterton (829), W. A. Thompson (829), W. J. Hurlstone (862), J. W. Reed (S.W. 871), J. Griffin (S.W. 933), H. Lord (933), &c. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, after which the report of the Audit Committee was received, showing a large balance in hand and no liabilities, and being approved of was ordered to be placed on the minutes. Bro. J. F. Taylor was then passed to the second, and Bro. J. Ashby raised to the third degree. The W.M.-elect, Bro. C. Nash, S.W., was then presented to the W.M. presiding and regularly installed into the chair, and appointed as his officers: Bros. J. R. Nash, S.W.; H. Roberts, J.W.; W. C. Penny, P.M., Treasurer (re-elected); J. H. H. Doughney, P.M., Sec. (reappointed); C. Munyard, S.D.; J. Shaw, J.D.; J. J. H. Wilkins, I.G.; J. R. Dussek, W.S.; W. West Smith, P.M., as D.C.; and W. Kipps, as Organist. The ceremonies were performed in a very accurate and effective manner by Bro. Burls, who had the gratification of having presented to him a very chaste solid gold jewel in token of his services as W.M. during the past year. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned and sat down to a sumptuous banquet provided by Bro. Pycroft (the manager), after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drunk with enthusiasm, and particularly so that of "To the improved health of the Prince of Wales," accompanied as it was with the song, "God bless the Prince of Wales." The evening was further enlivened with many songs from the brethren and visitors, who also expressed themselves as highly gratified and delighted with the evening's enjoyment. Bro. W. Kipps presided at the harmonium in the lodge and at the piano in the banqueting room, and by his admirable performances thereon tended greatly to the harmony and sociality of the evening.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—This lodge met at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 30th ultimo. Bro. C. C. Taylor, W.M., presided, ably assisted by his officers. There were present nine P.M.'s, and a numerous assembly of brethren. The business of the evening comprised three raisings and three initiations, the ceremonies in each case being effectively and impressively rendered by the W.M. Bro. W. Stewart, P.M., informed the lodge of the fund which is now in course of being raised on behalf of the widow of the late highly-esteemed Bro. S. B. Wilson, and advocated the cause with great heartiness; upon which it was unanimously resolved that £2 2s. be given from the lodge fund in aid of that highly-laudable movement. The enjoyments of the banqueting table were next upon the programme, and after the removal of the cloth the usual toasts were given and responded to; but on this occasion the W.M. deemed it proper to depart from the usual course by proposing the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and concluded with the hope that all hearts might be lifted up in thanksgivings to the G.A.O.T.U. for the recovery of our royal brother. As may well be imagined, this toast was responded to most loyally and with great enthusiasm. The evening's proceedings were interspersed with songs and recitations by Bros. W. Stewart, S. Davis, M. Davis, Pitt and Dunthorn (one of the newly-initiated), and a more pleasantly disposed assembly can scarcely be conceived. The brethren of this lodge may well be congratulated on the perfect unanimity which has so long prevailed amongst the members, for although, as is naturally the case, perfectly opposite opinions upon the various questions which arise in a lodge are often very warmly expressed, yet there is a display of forbearance and feelings of good-fellowship, that in no case is the harmony of the lodge ever disturbed. The visitors were Brothers Gompertz (P.M. 869, P.G.S. Essex), Charles Atkins (S.D. 27), Hare (1020), Turner (1017).

Royal Oak Lodge, No. 871.—A meeting of this lodge was held at the White Swan Tavern, Deptford, on the 25th ult. Bro. F. Walters, P.M. and Sec., opened the lodge. Present: J. W. Reed, J.W.; W. Myatt, S.D.; G. Andrews, J.D.; S. A. Lewin, I.G.; J. Hawker, P.M.; R. Killick, C. Letton, J. Lea, W. Shaw, W. H. Truelove, J. Ragg, R. G. J. Harris, G. Harvey, G. T. Linn, T. J. Blackmore, H. G. Rattle, J. G. Volmann, T. Spencer, F. R. Hood, C. Wood, J. H. Wilson, B. J. Cole, B. James, E. James, J. Woollett, &c.; visitors, Bros. J. Roper (147), N. Wingfield (P.M. 169), C. Hollier (P.M. 184), T. McCull (190), J. Absell (813), J. Carver (J.W. 1155), G. Burney (1155), A. Anglier (1227), G. Jones (1326). Bros. J. Spencer, F. R. Hood, and G. Jones (1326) were raised to the third, and Bros. R. Killick and T. J. Blackmore were passed to the second degree. Bro. W. Andrews, W.M., then took the chair and Messrs. B. James, E. James, and J. Woollett were initiated. Bro. T. Killner, S.W., having declined the honour, Bro. Reed, J.W., was unanimously elected W.M. Bro. Andrews, W.M., was elected Treasurer, Bro. Collington honorary member, and Bro. J. McRitchie (1326) joining member. Bro. Andrews, W.M., announced his intention of presenting to the Boys' School, in the name of the W.M. of the lodge for the time being, the five guineas voted for a testimonial for his services as W.M. Some propositions for initiation, &c., were made, the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of banquet.

Perfect Ashlar Lodge, No. 1178, met at the Gregorian Arms Tavern, Bermondsey, on the 1st inst. The W.M., Bro. G. J. Grace, in a proficient manner passed four brethren to the second degree and initiated three candidates into the mysteries of the Order. Banquet was afterwards served. There were present during the evening: Bros. Grace, W.M.; J. Green, I.P.M.; J. W. Avery, P.M., W.S.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; J. W. Dudley, S.W.; J. H. Harmsworth, J.W.; T. W. Cox, J.D.; C. Deakin, I.G.; J. Ruse, D.C.; &c. Visitors: Swann (174), Wintle (S.W. 548), Cracknell (829), Etheridges (829), Vincent (1076), Willett (1076), Hammond (1216).

Beaumont. Amongst the visitors present were: Bros. Capt. Durrat, Dr. Fleming, P.P.G.S.W.; R. G. Wood, R.E., P.P.G.S.D. Hampshire, C. Childre, Isaac Newton, University of Cambridge; G. S. Golding, I.P.M. Phoenix Lodge, P.G.S.B.; W. A. Smith, I.P.M. Perfect Friendship Lodge, P.G.D.C.; H. Samuel, W.M. Angel Lodge, Colchester; Rev. E. H. Crate, P.G.C. Essex; F. Cole, Angel Lodge Colchester; S. B. King, P.M.; H. G. Moore, P.M., &c., &c. The ballot was taken for Bro. J. J. Burton, of Lincoln's-Inn, and Westminster and Keystone Lodge, as a joining member, who was duly accepted, and appointed to the office of Junior Deacon. The ballot was then taken for Arthur Philip Viscount Mahon, M.P., proposed by W. Bro. the Rev. E. I. Lockwood, D.P.G.M., seconded by Bro. C. F. Long, W.M., and Mr. Henry Miller, proposed to Bro. Emra Holmes, and seconded by the W.M. Both candidates being present, they were duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, the ceremony being ably performed by Bro. Cornell, I.P.M., and the W.M. Bro. Long. Bro. the Rev. Augustus Moore was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. The brethren, numbering nearly forty, afterwards sat down to an admirable repast, provided in Bro. G. Spalding's best style. After the removal of the cloth, the various loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, and the harmony of the evening was promoted by the vocal efforts of Bros. Geo. Turner, A. D. George, W. A. Smith, H. Miller, &c. Bro. G. Cook presided with his customary ability at the pianoforte, and one of the most agreeable evenings was spent by the brethren.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Sincerity, No. 292.—This lodge held its annual festival and installation on the evening of Monday, January 8th, when a large number of visitors and members of the lodge met together to do honour to the occasion. At the regular meeting in December, the choice of the brethren had fallen on Bro. T. H. Hustwick, J.W., as their W.M. for the ensuing year. After the usual preliminary business had been disposed of, the W.M.-elect was presented to the Installing Master, Bro. Thomas Wylie, P.G. Reg., by Bro. the Rev. J. H. Jukes, P.M. 120, and P.P.G. Chaplain Herefordshire, and Bro. Laidlaw, P.M. and P.P.G. Supt. of Works, the ceremony of installation being rendered in a most impressive manner by the P.G. Reg. After the return of the brethren, and the usual proclamations, the W.M. appointed his officers as follows, addressing to each in turn a few words of encouragement and congratulation: Bros. Foy, S.W.; Evans, J.W.; Hess, P.M., Treas.; Russell, Sec.; Hughes, S.D.; Fletcher, J.D.; Llewellyn, I.G.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. Each officer, on being led to his seat by the Installing Master, received from him an address explanatory of his duties. The new W.M. at once commenced the active duties of his office by initiating into Freemasonry a gentleman who had been duly proposed and balloted for—the work throughout being creditably performed, considering that, to some of the officers, this was the first time they had shared in the work. The lodge was afterwards duly closed, when the brethren reassembled at the Angel Hotel to partake of a most excellent banquet, under the presidency of the new W.M. After the removal of the cloth, the W.M., in proposing the usual loyal toasts, remarked on the universal sympathy shown by the nation in general, and the Craft in particular, towards the Queen and the Royal family during the recent severe illness of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and felt sure that he only echoed the sincere wish of the Craft when he hoped that, by the blessing of the G.A.O.T.U., the Prince might be spared for many long years of usefulness amongst us. After the toasts of "The Queen" and "The Prince of Wales," Bro. R. Wylie, P.G. Deacon, sung "God Save the Queen" and "God Bless the Prince of Wales" in such a manner as to call forth the warmest applause of the brethren. In replying to the toast of "The Visitors," Bro. the Rev. J. H. Jukes, P.P.G. Chaplain Herefordshire, expressed the gratification it afforded him at having assisted at the installation of so old a friend as their new W.M.; that he had come from Hereford for that sole purpose, and would carry away with him a grateful remembrance of the kindness and hospitality afforded him by the brethren of the Lodge of Sincerity. Many excellent songs were given, and at an early hour the brethren separated, after having spent a most pleasant evening. Much regret was expressed that the I.P.M., Bro. Pillain, was unable to be present, on account of his health. Amongst the visitors present were: Bros. the Rev. J. H. Jukes, P.M. 120, &c.; Dr. Ridley, P.M. 321 (I.C.), and S.W. 1350; Laidlaw, P.M. 216 and P.P.G. Supt. of Works; M'Kune, P.M. 216; Jeffery, 1094; &c., &c.

HELSTON.—True and Faithful Lodge, No. 318.—On Thursday, 25th ult., the annual meeting of this lodge was held, when Bro. H. Trembath was installed as Worshipful Master by W. Bro. T. N. YEOVIL.—Lodge of Brotherly Love, No. 329.—The annual meeting of the members of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 24th ult., at the lodge-room, Three Choughs Hotel, to celebrate the festival of St. John the Evangelist, and to install the W.M. for the ensuing year. The lodge was opened in due form by the V.W.D.P.G.M., Bro. Capt. Hy. Bridges, who attended to perform the ceremony of installation. The minutes of the former lodge having been read and confirmed, Bro. the Rev. R. J. F. Thomas, P.G. Chap. England, presented the W.M.-elect, Bro. John Chaffin, S.W., to Bro. Capt. Bridges for installation, which ceremony, it is needless to say, was performed in a most able and impressive manner. The W.M. then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. John Howe Farley, P.P.A.G.P. and P.S.G.D. Somersetshire, I.P.M.; William B. Millborne, S.W.; Wm. Cox, J.W.; Rev. R. J. F. Thomas, P.M. and P.G. Chap. England, Chap.; John Millborne, Treas.; Henry Raymond, P.M. and P.P.J.G.D. Somersetshire, Sec.; Charles Parsons, S.D.; Robert J. Damon, J.D.; J. W. Nosworthy, P.P.G.O., Org.; R. S. Chap., then rose, and proposed in eulogistic terms, "That the hearty thanks of the lodge be recorded to the retiring W.M., Bro. Farley, for the very able and efficient services he had rendered to the lodge during his year of office," which was seconded, and enthusiastically carried.—Bro. Farley, P.M., acknowledged the compliment in a most suitable reply.—The W.M. then alluded to the very high compliment which the V.W.D.P.G.M. had conferred on them by attending that day to perform the ceremony of installation—a compliment which was immediately acknowledged with the fraternal thanks of the brethren present. The sum of £10 having been voted in aid of the Yeovil General Hospital, and £5 towards the relief of the suffering poor of the town, the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren then adjourned to the banquet, provided by Bro. T. Sharland, which, together with the arrangements, were so perfect as to call forth the warmest approbation of the whole party. The loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received with the utmost enthusiasm, all the brethren joining heartily in the strains of the National Anthem and "God bless the Prince of Wales." The beautiful singing of Bros. W. Millborne, Raymond, Thomas Sampson, and J. R. Damon contributed largely to the harmony of the evening, especially the latter, whose style was much admired for the tender feeling and pathos with which his selections were rendered, and altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent.

UXBRIDGE.—Royal Union Lodge, No. 382.—The January meeting of this lodge (the oldest in the province of Middlesex) was held at the hall in the Chequers on Monday se'nnight. Bro. Jaquin, W.M., presided, and the members present were: Bros. W. H. Coulton, I.P.M.; Coombes, P.M., Sec.; C. Horsley, P.M.; Lonsdale, S.W.; J. L. Coulton, J.W.; B. Swallow, S.D.; C. Cloak, J.D.; Davis, I.G.; and numerous other brethren and visitors. The W.M. worked the several degrees with much ability. Bro. Folkey was raised to the third degree, Bros Pitkin and Jenkins were passed, and Messrs. Raven and Kosner were initiated. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the election of Master for the ensuing year was proceeded with, and Bro. Lonsdale, S.W., was unanimously elected to the office of Master for 1872-3, his ability as a working Mason having long been appreciated. Bro. Woodward was again elected Treasurer. After the appointment of the Audit Committee, the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to a very quiet, but excellent repast at the Chequers' Hotel, which was supplied by Bro. McPherson. At the conclusion of the banquet, Bro. Charles Horsley, P.M. (having been deputed for that purpose by the W.M., Bro. Jaquin), presented to Bro. W. H. Coulton, Prov. G.S.W., the Immediate P.M. of the lodge, a very beautiful gold watch; and, in an eulogistic address, pointed out the distinguished claims of Bro. W. H. Coulton to the gratitude of all the members of the lodge for his untiring devotion to their service during his year of office, for his very arduous duties, admirably performed, when the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex visited the Royal Union Lodge last March, and for his revising the whole of the by-laws, in conjunction with Bro. Horsley; and he trusted that the Great Architect of the Universe would spare him for many a long year, and give him health and strength to wear the gift which he had so much pleasure in presenting.—After the warm applause which the remarks of the presenter had called forth had died away, Bro. W. H. Coulton warmly returned his heartfelt thanks for the munificent gift which had been presented to him, and said, if he had done anything during his term of office for the good of his mother lodge, he was more than amply rewarded by the kind and generous remarks of the presenter, and the fraternal greetings of the brethren.

Woodhead, printer and proprietor of the "Glossop-dale Chronicle." The Master Mason dress was worn, with the usual crape rosettes, supplied by George Kenning, London. The very appropriate lecture was given by Bro. Vertegans, in a most impressive and beautiful manner, and the condolence of the brethren was expressed for the widow and children of our departed brother.

ROYAL ARCH.

PROV. GRAND CHAPTER OF DURHAM.

On Tuesday afternoon se'nnight, the Provincial Grand Superintendent, Comp. John Fawcett, held his annual convocation in the Freemasons' Hall, Old Elvet, Durham, when there was a very numerous assemblage of the companions of the Order. The Chapter was opened shortly after one o'clock by the M.E.Z.J. Fawcett, assisted by Comp. Anthony Wilkinson, Prov. G. H., and Comp. W. Brignall, Senior Prov. G. J. Amongst the visitors present was M.E. Comp. Lonsdale M. Cockcroft, Provincial G. Superintendent for the Province of Northumberland.

The customary reports having been made from the representatives of the different chapters in the province, the Prov. G. Donkin, Treas.; and J. Carter, Janitor. The chapter was then closed, the M.E.Z. having announced previously that he would cause a Chapter of Emergency to be summoned before the next general meeting to work up the arrears of business.

PLYMOUTH.—Concord Chapter, No. 223.—A meeting of this chapter took place on Friday, the 26th ult., when two brethren were exalted. The chapter was numerous attended, and the working very satisfactory. Comp. J. M. Hifley, Z., in the chair. The first part of the ceremony of exaltation was performed by the Ven. Comp. T. Pollard, P.Z., &c., in his usual impressive manner, assisted by Comp. W. Browning, P.Z., as Principal Sojourner. The historical lecture was delivered by Comp. A. Woolf, P.Z., the symbolical lecture by Comp. W. Browning, and the mystical lecture by Comp. F. Stevens, P.Z., of London, in a very efficient manner, to the pleasure and satisfaction of the companions present. Among the members present were Comps. J. Montgomery, H.; J. May, P.Z.; J. Blackwood, S.N.; Meaby, P.S.; J. P. Phillips, S.A.S.; J. Pool, J.A.S.; &c., and visitors, Comps. Isaac Watts, P.Z. 70 and 156; Baxter, St. Aubyn Chapter; Thomas, 158; &c. The companions retired for refreshment, the usual toasts being given and appropriately responded to, and a very pleasant evening spent.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Chapter, No. 1094.—This young and prosperous chapter held its meeting at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, on Tuesday evening, the 23rd ult. As this was the night for the installation of chiefs, a goodly number of the companions assembled. The chapter was opened at 6 p.m. by Comps. Hamer, P.Z.; J. K. Smith, P.Z.; and Pemberton, J. Comp. J. B. Robinson, H., the Z.-elect, and a number of the companions then entered, and after some little business had been transacted, all below the rank of M.E.Z. were requested to withdraw. The ceremony of installation of chiefs was then proceeded with, Comp. Hamer, P.Z., conducting this in his usual effective manner. Comp. Robinson having been installed as First Chief, Comp. Pemberton was afterwards duly installed as H. The elect for the third chair, Comp. Winstanley, being unavoidably absent, his induction was postponed. The companions having re-entered the chapter, Bros. Jeffrey (1094) and Jones (1336, Wrexham), after being duly elected, were exalted into H.R.A. Masonry by the newly-installed Z. in a most effective and able manner. Before the chapter was closed, Comp. Hamer was elected a honorary member, and three brethren were proposed for exaltation. Afterwards an excellent banquet was served by Comp. Ball, the House Steward, which having been partaken of by the members and visitors, was afterwards followed by the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. "Our Masonic Rulers, supreme and subordinate," was responded to by Comp. R. H. D. Johnson, P.Z. The Installing Officer's health being proposed by the M.E.Z.—Comp. Hamer replied, and said that it always gave him the greatest pleasure to be present with, and work for, his Masonic brethren. He thanked them for the honour they had conferred upon him in electing him a honorary member. He had promised to assist the chapter at its formation, and after having passed through its three chairs, he considered it his duty to resign as a subscribing companion, he already being such in several other chapters and lodges. In conclusion, he asked the companions to join him in drinking "The Health of the Three Principals," and alluded in flattering terms to the working of Comp. Robinson, Z.—This was duly honoured, and the M.E.Z. responded. In the course of his remarks, he stated that he had recently gone to reside in Manchester, but that during his year of office the chapter should not suffer inconvenience on that account, as he would attend its meetings regularly, and do all he could to further its prosperity.—The Second Principal briefly responded, stating that he thanked the companions for the position they had placed him in, and that he would endeavour to merit their confidence by strict attention to his duties.—"The Health of the Past Chiefs" was then honoured, three being present—viz., Comps. R. H. D. Johnson, J. K. Smith, and Hamer—allusion being made to the energy and industry of each, to their Masonic zeal and ability, and the prosperity which had attended their efforts in making the Temple Chapter a great success.—The First Principal, in proposing "The Newly-exalted Companions," said that he considered them to be his eldest children in Arch Masonry, and he hoped that they would appreciate its ceremonies, and live long to remain in companionship with the members of that chapter.—Comp. Jeffrey responded. He hoped that the children would reflect credit upon their parent, and give every satisfaction.—"The Officers of the Chapter" was replied to by Comp. Macmurdrow, P. Soj., in appropriate terms

"The Visitors" were then kindly alluded to amongst whom we noticed Comps. Banning, 823 and 310; Hocker, 220 and 673; Jones, 249; Holland, 823; and Hill. This toast was responded to by Comp. Holland, of the Everton Chapter, who stated that he had been very much pleased with the proceedings of that evening, and he trusted that as many as could make it convenient would attend the chapter to which he belonged, and he promised them a hearty greeting and fraternal reception.—During the evening Comps. Deacon and Washington contributed towards the pleasures of the members by singing appropriate selections.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."

"Earl RUSSELL communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any Medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff-Surgeon to H.M.F.

"STR.—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years, in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really in some cases it acted as a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON and Co., Newcastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

DEDICATION of the NEW MASONIC HALL AT BRISTOL.

The new Masonic Hall at Bristol was dedicated on Friday, the 2nd instant. Amongst those present were Earl Limerick, Grand Master of the province of Bristol, Lord Elliott, and other well-known members of the Craft. It may not be amiss to preface our account of the proceedings with a few facts relative to the history of Freemasons in that ancient city, and a description of the handsome structure which has now been dedicated.

The connecting link between ancient and modern Masonry in Bristol is not easily traceable, and we must, therefore, content ourselves by stating that, so far as we can ascertain, some of the lodges at present in existence owe their origin to charters granted by the Grand Lodge of London, which dates from 1717, and of which the Duke of Cumberland and George IV. (when Prince of Wales) were successively Grand Masters. In 1813 the Grand Lodges of London and York were amalgamated, under the title of the "United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England," with the Duke of Sussex as Grand Master. The Earl of Zetland succeeded the Duke of Sussex in 1830, and held the office until a year or two since, when he resigned, and the present Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon, was elected. There are six regular lodges in what is known as the province of Bristol—viz., the Royal Clarence, No. 68; the Beaufort, No. 103; the Royal Sussex, No. 187; the Moira, No. 326; the Colston, No. 610; and the Jerusalem, No. 686. Attached to the Clarence, Beaufort, and Sussex are Royal Arch Chapters, and there is also a Canynge's Lodge of Mark Masters, Conclaves of Knights, &c. Each lodge is governed by a Master, who is elected annually, and all are subject to the jurisdiction of the Provincial Grand Lodge, the Provincial Grand Master being the Earl of Limerick, and the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. A. F. Powell. What transpires in the various lodges is known only to the members of the Craft; but we have evidence that the Masons of the present day, like their "ancient brethren," are not indifferent to their duties, when either the promotion, preservation, or restoration of public buildings is concerned, inasmuch as they have left their impress on such edifices as the Guildhall in Broad-street, the Horfield Barracks, Redcliff Church, the Cathedral, &c. The foundation stone of the Guildhall was laid with Masonic forms in 1842, that of the Barracks at Horfield in 1844, Redcliff Church restoration in 1846, and the corner-stone of the west nave of the Cathedral in 1870. The ceremonial at Horfield Barracks was made a very attractive spectacle, as it was a combined display of Masonic, military, and municipal gentlemen. The Freemasons of Bristol and other places attended in great force, and with full regalia took part in the procession. It is Redcliff Church, which Queen Elizabeth declared to be "one of the most famous, absolute, fairest, and goodliest parish churches within the realm of England," that the Freemasons of Bristol have chiefly identified themselves of late years. On the 21st of April, 1846, they assisted in laying the first stone of the new work in connection with the restoration of that noble structure. A local paper says the laying of the restoration stone was performed by the Worshipful the Mayor, Mr. J. K. Haberfield (who was subsequently knighted), and that the Freemasons of the city and neighbourhood attended with all their imposing paraphernalia. The Mayor laid the stone, but the D.P.G.M., Bro. W. D. Bushell, applied the rule and level to ascertain that it was properly fixed, and after other Masonic forms had been gone through, made an effective speech, in which he wished every success to the undertaking.

The good wishes expressed by the D.P.G.M. in 1846, may be said to be all but realised in 1872, and the Masonic Fraternity may congratulate themselves in the fact that both individually and in their corporate capacity they have had no small share in producing so satisfactory a result. There is every reason to believe that Nil Desperandum, who, at a cost of £2,534 8s. 8d., restored the handsome North Porch, was a distinguished member of the Craft. At all events the Craft was represented by the D.P.G.M. Bro. W. Powell (who succeeded Bro. W. D. Bushell) on the laying of the first stone of the Porch on the 24th November, 1848; and until his death in March, 1854, Bro. Powell proved himself a most zealous coadjutor in the restoration of the church, at which he had been a constant attendant for forty years. In 1853 it was announced that the Misses Powell had collected subscriptions, amounting to nearly £200, towards the "Ladies' Window" in the south transept, and, as a memorial to Bro. Powell, his family filled in the south-west window of the same transept with a design in stained glass. Another member of the Craft, Bro. Sholto Vere Hare kindly intimated in 1857 that, on the restoration of the west window, he would present stained glass to fill it of a design to be approved by the committee. This work was subsequently accomplished, and by the removal of the organ the west window was thrown open to the nave. The present D.P.G.M. Bro. W. A. F. Powell has also taken great interest in the restoration of Redcliff Church. He is a past president and one of the members of the Canynge's Society, and was president of the Commercial Society, by whom the South Porch was restored, and it was on his suggestion that the several lodges in Bristol determined on completing the restoration of "The Ladye Chapel," which a committee of ladies had been obliged to abandon for want of funds. The Freemasons had previously restored the north-east corner of the chapel, and they completed their work in 1870 by laying down an encaustic pavement, and decorating the roof in a style unsurpassed in any building in the West of England. On the 21st of April, 1870, the members of the Craft attended Divine Service at Redcliff, and on its conclusion proceeded to the Ladye Chapel, where an address beautifully illuminated, was read by the Provincial Grand Registrar.

The Earl of Limerick, P.G.M., presented the address to the Vicar (the Rev. Canon Randall), who acknowledged the work done by the Freemasons, as did also by the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol.

At one time the Freemasons had two places of meeting in Bristol, viz.: in Bridge-street and Broad-street, but for several years past all the lodges have assembled at the Masonic-hall in Bridge-street. The rapid increase in the Craft, and the gradual residential exodus to the suburbs, has long forced on the attention of the Governors of the hall the necessity of providing a new hall. Park-row was at first fixed upon as a site in that locality actually secured on which to erect a building for the use of the Craft. Just at that time, however, the Philosophical Institution in Park-street, was placed in the market, owing to the completion of the New Museum in Queen's-road, and on examination it was found so well adapted to the requirements of the Craft that it was purchased, and the site in Park-row abandoned. As soon as the Philosophical Institution was vacated, it was taken in hand by a sub-committee, and under the general superintendence of Bro. J. A. Clark, P.G.A., has been transformed into one of the most handsome and commodious Masonic-halls in the provinces. At present the Freemasons only occupy the vestibule and reception room adjoining, and the rooms on the first floor. The basement, the late library and reading room and lecture room, it is proposed to let off until the Craft are in a position to occupy this part of the building themselves as club rooms, &c. The ceiling of the lofty staircase, leading from the vestibule, is enriched with the fine paintings of the four cardinal virtues—Justice, Fortitude, Temperance, and Prudence. These paintings, which were executed by Bird, R.A., adorned the ceiling of the old hall in Bridge-street. The ceiling is also decorated with buff, gold, and green, relieved with vermilion and amber tint. The compasses and square occupy the angles, with a five-pointed star in gold at the external angle. The walls are painted a sharp claret colour. In the vestibule the ceiling is painted buff, relieved with colour, and gray granite walls. Figures are to be inserted in the several niches, and emblems in the sunk panels over the doors. The walls of the reception room are painted sage colour, and the ceiling a warm gray, with cornice and mouldings, relieved with crimson and gold. The door is grained on the outside, and on the inside painted so as to harmonise with the general character of the room.

The lodge-room, lately the museum room of the institution, has been painted throughout. The walls are stencilled in oil, with an Egyptian design, modified somewhat and enriched by Moorish characters, relieved with leaf of gold, and having a gold bordering in the Grecian key pattern. Beneath this is a casing of pitch pine, stained and ornamented, forming the back of stalls down each side of the room, for the brethren. Each stall has a couple of small panels in it, relieved with blue. These seats are on a dais, and approached by three steps, painted gray and marble. The dais at the eastern extremity of the hall, will be occupied by the officers' seats, and is handsomely tessellated. Over the Master's chair is a shell-shaped canopy, gilded and decorated in colours. The cove under the gallery, which extends right round the hall, is diapered in white and gold, and enriched with stars, a rope moulding running round the face of the gallery; while the railings are painted white and picked out with gold. Above the gallery at the end of the hall hangs a large portrait of the Duke of Sussex, late Grand Master of the Order in England. There are also hung upon the walls heavily-framed portraits of Bros. Richard Smith, F. C. Husenbeth, and W. Powell, late P.D.G.M.'s of the Province. The western extremity of the hall is occupied by the organ, standing on a platform. It is surmounted by the crown and cushion, richly gilt; in the centre is a clock, and the show pipes are plain gilt. The ceiling, from which hangs five gas sun-lights, has eight panels richly painted with emblems of the different Masonic degrees; and the skylight in the centre is decorated with the well-known emblems of the Craft, the compasses and square. The doors of the lodge are painted uniformly white and gray, the panels bearing devices richly painted and gilt. A handsome Brussels carpet covers the floor, bearing the Craft emblems worked in brilliant colours, with a border pertaining to the Royal Arch degree. Adjoining the lodge is a chapter-room, a small but handsome apartment, the walls of which are painted of a delicate salmon colour, the cornice and mouldings being handsomely gilt. A canopy, draped, for the Grand Master or his deputy, stands in front of the centre window, which has been darkened, and the panels of the door contain the jewels of the different degrees. This room is illuminated by means of a sun-light. At the other end of the lodge, on the opposite side, is what is called "the preparing room," in which neophytes are prepared for initiation. The walls of this apartment are painted a warm gray, and the door is done in deep marone, relieved with crimson mouldings, and panels of deep chrome. A polished oak gallery runs round the room, the railings of which are white, picked out with gold. The skirting is painted marone colour, to match the door, the ceiling being of pure white, and there are four gas branches projecting from the walls. We may add that Mr. Diment, builder of St. James's-square, has carried out the whole of the work, with the exception of the carpentering, which has been executed by Mr. Eastbrook, of Stapleton-road, and the gas-fittings by Mr. Hunter, of Durdham-down. Mr. Vowles, of St. James's-square, has repaired and fitted up the organ.

The new hall described above was dedicated by the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, G.M. of the province, assisted by the D.P.G.M., the members of the Grand Lodge, and several distinguished brethren of the Craft from all parts of the kingdom. Amongst those present we observed Lord Elliott, Col. Adair, the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Grand Chaplain, &c. The brethren assembled at "high twelve" in large numbers. It was intended that the ceremony should commence at one o'clock p.m., but, in consequence of a delay in the arrival of some of the trains by which the visiting brethren travelled, the ceremony was postponed until a somewhat later hour. Every precaution was taken that none but Freemasons should be admitted, as every person presenting himself at the entrance was required to write his name, the number of his lodge, and his Masonic rank, on which he received a ticket, without which no person was admitted to the hall. The Grand Lodge Officers and distinguished visitors assembled in the late library on the ground floor, where a procession was formed in accordance with the Book of Constitutions. The procession, on leaving the library, passed through the reading-room into the vestibule and up the staircase into the Grand Hall, which was previously well nigh filled by the brethren—indeed, so numerous was the attendance, that the gallery was filled as well as the body of the hall. On the entrance of the procession, the Grand March was played on the organ, and the brethren received the Provincial Grand Lodge according to ancient custom. The customary circuit of the hall having been made, the procession halted, and, facing inwards, the P.G.M., the D.P.G.M., and the visitors of distinction, occupied the stalls and seats on the dais, as had been previously arranged.

The D.P.G.M., addressing the P.G.M., said it was with much pleasure that he now requested him to dedicate that hall. He might mention that the brethren had for some time past contemplated a change of residence. The old hall in Bridge-street had long since been found to be too small, and in addition to this, there was a tendency amongst the brethren to move their habitations westward. It was fortunate for the Craft that the building of the Philosophical Institute presented itself to them. As a proof of its adaptation to the purposes to which it was to be applied, he would state that not a single shilling had been spent in alterations. They had, of course, gone to considerable expense in embellishments, but if the architect by whom the building was originally designed (Sir Wm. Cockerell) could revisit the scene of his former labours, Sir William would find that nothing had been altered, and that, even if he had intended it, he could not have reared a structure more suited to Masonic purposes.

The P.G.M. expressed the pleasure he felt in complying with the request made to him. He said he attended that day with the more pleasure as he knew from his experience of the Freemasons of Bristol that, whenever they were called upon, they never failed to perform their duty. He congratulated them on having so fine a building—so perfect in all its parts, and so well adapted to the various ceremonies of the Craft. He was proud that he had been asked to dedicate the hall for the purposes of Freemasonry for, he hoped, all time.

The ceremony of dedication was then proceeded with, and, as may be imagined, it was of a most elaborate and impressive character, all the gorgeous and symbolical accessories of which Freemasonry is capable being brought into requisition, aided by both vocal and instrumental music. After the ceremony, the Chaplain delivered a most effective and eloquent address, which was warmly applauded by the brethren. The ceremony concluded by the usual proclamation of the fact of dedication being made by the Grand Director of Ceremonies.

A Provincial Grand Lodge was then held, and the officers of the Grand Lodge appointed for the ensuing year, viz.: Bros. S. H. Lowe, P.S.G.W.; H. Merrick, P.J.G.W.; S. E. Taylor, P.G. Treas.; R. J.

Bramble, P.G. Reg.; E. J. Inskip, P.G. Sec.; Coafsee, P.S.G.D.; George Gay, P.J.G.D.; J. A. Clark, P.G. Supt. of Works; Samuel Bryant, P.G. Dir. of Cers.; Gullifer, Asst. Dir. of Cers.; J. Hatherley, P.G.S.B.; J. Churchill, P.G. Org.; Maby, Asst. P.G. Org.; and J. Perrin, P.G. Purs.

This portion of the business concluded, the G.M., in appropriate terms, proposed the adoption of an address to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, congratulating him on his recovery from his recent illness. The motion was carried unanimously, all the brethren rising to their feet. It was ordered that the address should be engrossed on vellum, and forwarded to H.R.H.

Subsequently, a banquet was held at the Royal Hotel, College-green, when a very large company sat down.

MASONIC BALL AT NORTHAMPTON.

On Thursday, 25th ult., a grand Masonic ball was held in the Corn Exchange, Northampton, under most distinguished patronage.

The patronesses were the Duchess of Manchester, the Countess Spencer, and the Lady Southampton. The patrons were Bro. the most Hon. the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., M.W.G.M.; Bro. Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, K.Z., M.W.P.G.M.; Bro. his Grace the Duke of Manchester, R.W.P.G.M. of Norths. and Hunts.; Bro. Right Hon. and R.W. Lord Leigh, P.G.M. of Warwickshire; Bro. R.W. Sir Thomas George Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., J.Z.P., P.G.M. of West Lancashire; Bro. R.W. Wm. Kelly, P.G.M. of Leicestershire and Rutland; Bro. the Hon. and R.W. the Earl Jersey, P.G.S.W.; Bro. the V.W. Rev. Dr. Sedgwick, P.G.C.; Bro. his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, K.G.; Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Southampton, Bro. the Right Hon. George Ward Hunt, J.Z.P., Bro. the Right Hon. C. W. Fitzwilliam, Bro. William Wells, W.M. and P.M., &c.; Bro. the R.W. V. Cary Elwes, P.P.G.S.W. of Lincolnshire; Bro. R.W. C. W. Ekington, P.D.G.M. of Warwickshire, P.G.S.B.; Bro. R.W. S. Ings, D.P.G.M. of Norths. and Hunts.; Bro. W. Ed. Cox, P.G.S.W. of Norths. and Hunts.

The Stewards were the Worshipful Master (Bro. M. W. Flewitt) and P.M. of the Pomfret Lodge, No. 369, in this town. Bro. Valentine Thomas Barford (390) acted as honorary Secretary, and Bro. Alfred Dorrell was Master of the Ceremonies.

The ball, which was a very brilliant and successful affair, was held in aid of the Masonic charities, and in connection with the Pomfret Lodge. In consequence of the number expected to attend, the large hall of the Corn Exchange was engaged, and the result proved that the choice of a room was a fortunate one, as it was the only one capable of containing the visitors who attended. The actual number present was 369. The arrangements were exceedingly good, and were highly creditable to the Stewards and committee, who were determined that, as no Masonic ball had been held here since the 26th January, 1843, the present one should be one noteworthy of the Order to which they belong, and which is pre-eminently distinguished for the usefulness and munificence of its charities. The consequence was that no pains were spared to ensure success, and the efforts of the committee were well rewarded.

Nothing was omitted that was calculated to promote the comfort of the guests. The upper portion of the hall was partitioned off for a supper-room by a screen covered with scarlet cloth, which ran across the whole width of the room. Plenty of room was then left for dancing, the floor being covered with a suitable cloth, 500 yards of which were used for the occasion. The hall was well warmed, and in order to give greater brilliancy to its appearance, additional gaslights were introduced. A large circular pipe, from which issued about 100 jets, was suspended in the centre of the hall, and at the top of the screen, dividing the ball room from the supper-room, there were three handsome brass gas candelabra, which added much to the effect of the scene. On the north wall, facing the entrance, was a large Prince of Wales's feather in gas-lights, and facing it on the south wall was a star in gas-lights, and over it the Royal arms. A tasteful orchestra was erected for the band immediately in front of the screen, and adjoining this were tables for the supply of tea, coffee, lemonade, and wine, previous to and after supper. In front of the orchestra was a remarkably handsome silver fountain from Rimmell's, from the branches of which streams of Eau de Cologne were thrown out during the whole of the night. Handsome pier glasses were placed at intervals on the walls, which were decorated with great taste and elegance by workmen under the superintendence of Bro. E. W. Tuffley, who was assisted by Bro. James Watkin and others, Mr. C. Lewis, on the Wood-hill, being engaged also as a decorator. From the upper portion of the walls were suspended elegant wreaths of evergreens, intermingled with flowers, and these were met with corresponding wreaths on the lower part. At both ends of the hall were large designs in evergreens, 14 feet in height, of the compass and square, and on the walls between the wreaths were Masonic emblems and other designs in evergreens and flowers. In addition to these there were various coloured shields, on which were Masonic emblems, and which were a great relief to the foliage by which they were surrounded. Flags of all nations, and of every variety, were suspended from the walls on all sides, and added much to the appearance of the hall. For the convenience of the dancers, and by the kindness of the Racing Committee the large number boards used at the races were placed at the disposal of the Stewards. There were twenty-four dances, and, as each dance came off, the number of the dance on the list was denoted by a number which was exhibited at the top of the hall, and the result was, there was neither delay nor confusion.

The visitors began to arrive about quarter-past nine, a very large concourse of people being assembled round the Exchange. Amongst the guests were the principal inhabitants of the town, professional or otherwise, and a considerable number of visitors from the adjoining parts of the county. The dresses of the ladies were exceedingly handsome, and, as was remarked by more than one person, the beauty of Northamptonshire was well represented. Dancing commenced at a quarter before ten o'clock, and was kept up with great spirit until five o'clock. Supper was served at twelve o'clock, and, by the general consent of all present, it was one which was worthy of the occasion, and which reflected the highest credit upon the Messrs. Higgins, by whom it was provided. The ball was opened by the W.M. (Bro. M. W. Flewitt).

The music, which was excellent, was supplied by the militia quadrille band.

Among the gentlemen recently nominated as Queen's Counsel we are delighted to see the name of Bro. Aeneas J. McIntyre, Grand Registrar, whose talent is so widely acknowledged.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physician as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., Lpool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In general debility, mental depression, and nervous irritability there is no medicine which operates so like a charm as these famous Pills. They purify the blood, soothe and strengthen the nerves and system, give tone to the stomach, elevate the spirits, and, in fact, render the patient sensible of a total and most delightful revolution in his whole system. They may be commended most unreservedly as the very best family medicine in existence. Though so powerfully efficacious, they are singularly mild in their operation, and may be given with implicit confidence to delicate women and young children. They contain not a grain of mercury or other noxious substance, and cannot do harm. Delicate females and all persons of sedentary habits will find these Pills a blessing.—[Advt.]

ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.

The literature referred to in the article at page 51, on our subject, relates exclusively to the history of the Israelitish nation. We find that after the destruction of the kingdom of Israel, the historical information as to the subsequent fate of this people is of the scantiest and most meagre kind, but such as it is their later history will be hereafter more particularly referred to. We have, however, in the Bible some remarkable prophecies, and if these be intelligently read and considered, they will throw a flood of light on the subject and will materially guide us in our search for the lost people, and will teach us under what circumstances we may expect to find them.

Many persons when reading in the Old Testament the prophecies relating to Judah and Israel, get dreadfully confused owing to their failing to discriminate properly between the two houses. It must be admitted that there is some difficulty at first in avoiding this confusion, as the reader is very apt to imagine that Judah means Judah and Benjamin, including the priests and Levites resident amongst them, and that Israel means the ten tribes that revolted under Jeroboam. Readers are also very likely to consider that passages which follow each other in the prophetic books in regular order, as in our Bibles, must necessarily refer to the same events, especially if the same names occur. This, however, is not always the case, and the best way of steering clear of such errors is to bear constantly in mind that, although the several parts of each of the prophetic writings, as contained in our Bibles, are apparently strung together in a certain sort of consecutive order, they all, in fact, consist of detached fragments written or spoken by their authors on different occasions many years (in some cases) intervening between the writing of these detached fragments which have not necessarily any connection with each other. The division of the scriptures into chapters and verses is a comparatively modern innovation, and frequently will be found to have been very imperfectly done; we must not therefore allow this arrangement of the scriptures to warp our minds. In some cases the division of the subject is sufficiently apparent, as, for instance, in Isaiah we find prophecies addressed to distinct nationalities by name, such as Moab, Edom, Babylon, &c., but frequently, in other parts of Isaiah and also in the prophecies of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, the bearing of the prophecies is by no means obvious, and the subject is not rendered any clearer by the notion that usually prevails in the mind of the reader, that the ten tribes having been carried away by Shalmanezar and placed in the cities of the Medes (as mentioned in the sacred narrative), were quietly disposed of, and therefore demand no further attention on our part.

We are now gradually waking up to the feeling that our preconceived notions, and the generally accepted opinions on this subject are not exactly correct, and we now discover that although God determined to punish the Israelites (the ten tribes) for their wickedness, and to this end allowed them to be carried away into captivity and dispersed among the nations, He has never said they should be destroyed, but only that they should be dispersed and lost for a time, after which they shall be gathered from all nations and from the "Isles of the Sea," and shall be restored to their own land. When this is to happen we have no means of judging, but there are many persons who think they can discern in the signs of the times that this consummation is now approaching.

In reference to the prophets Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, the reader is reminded that these holy men were contemporaries, and each apparently had his own sphere of usefulness appointed for him. Daniel, who was a scion of the royal house of David, was carried away to Babylon, where his example (enhanced, doubtless, by his high position at court), and his constant prayers and exhortations, had a powerful influence on his exiled countrymen. As Daniel lived throughout the seventy years' captivity of Judah and was in high authority, he doubtless was mainly instrumental in keeping the Jews from relapsing into idolatry. Ezekiel, who belonged to the sacerdotal race, was carried away to Babylon with Daniel, but was subsequently removed to some place on the river Chebar, a part of the country where a portion of the ten tribes were located. It is but reasonable, therefore, to suppose, as no doubt was the case, that several of Ezekiel's prophecies were directed to the ten tribes, while others were specially directed to the Jews, or Judah and Benjamin. The same may be said of the prophecies of Jeremiah, who was also of the sacerdotal race. He was not carried away to Babylon, but was left at Jerusalem to minister to the remnant of the Jews that remained in that city until its final destruction. Each of these great prophets, it will be seen, had his separate task and sphere of usefulness assigned to him, and upon examination it will be found that many of the prophecies of Ezekiel and Jeremiah relate exclusively to the ten tribes, and not to the Jews.

On a future occasion, I may, perhaps, direct more particular attention to some of these texts referring to the House of Israel. In the meantime, I will proceed with the matter in hand—namely, a further notice of the historical literature bearing on the subject, and written since the time of Christ. Scraps of useful information will be found scattered through the works of the old fathers, Jerome, Eusebius, and others, and also in various ecclesiastical histories. Mocheim throws a great deal of light on the ancient Nestorian Christians, of whom mention has already been made in former articles, in which it was shown that they traced their descent from the ancient Israelites. It was also stated that descendants of the tribe of Dan are to be found in the southern parts of Arabia, also in Afghanistan and Northern India. Numerous colonies of people, professing the Jewish religion, are to be found dotted along the coast of Northern Africa, and also far in the interior of that continent, even as far as Timbuctoo; but to what tribe they belong does not appear, although their origin may doubtless be ascertained and traced, if diligently inquired into. Readers desirous of further and more detailed information as to the Nestorians and the other points above alluded to, are referred to Dr. Asahel Grant's "Nestorians," and Dr. Woolf's "Narrative of a Mission to Bokhara." Neither of these writers, however, attempt to show any connection of the Anglo-Saxon race with the ancient Israelites—in fact, such an idea does not appear to have occurred to them, although various scraps of information contained in their works throw much light on the subject of the dispersion of the descendants of the ten tribes. Dr. Woolf, in particular, demonstrating (at any rate, to his own satisfaction) that these lost Israelites are widely spread over Southern Asia, while Dr. Grant contents himself with showing that his friends, the Nestorians, belong to the stock of Israel. SECRETS.—We have heard of a secret which was so big that it required all the women in the town to keep it; and then they could not do so without the help of their husbands.

BENGAL.*

The Quarterly Communication of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, on Wednesday, 27th December, 1871. Present: R.W. Bros. Hugh David Sandeman, District G.M., and W. J. Judge, as Dep. Dist. G.M.; W. Bros. J. R. Roberts, P.D.D.G.M.; F. Powell, as D.S.G.W.; W. B. Farr, D.J.G.W.; D. J. Zemin, D.G.R.; Capt. W. G. Murray, D.G. Sec.; I. L. Taylor, D.S.G.D.; W. G. Amos, as D.G.J.D.; W. O. Allender, D.G. D.C.; W. E. Jellicoe, as D.G.A.D.C.; W. B. Mactavish, as D.G.S.B; C. Compton, D.G.O.; R. Harvey, as D.G.P.; W. H. Macgowan and T. Carritt, D.G. Stewards; Bro. G. Alexander, D.G. Tyler; the W.M.'s and Wardens of the various lodges, and several visiting brethren.

The minutes of the previous Quarterly Communication were confirmed.

The R.W.D.G.M. then addressed the brethren as follows: W. Brethren, I am glad again to be able to give a very satisfactory report of the progress of Freemasonry in the Province. Our lodges are all working well, and I hope soon to be able to announce the opening of a new lodge at Roorkee under the auspices of Bro. Capt. R. G. Birch and other Masons, who have selected for it the name of the Beauchamp Lodge. We have just passed the time when the annual election of rulers takes place. From all that I hear in Calcutta and from the provinces, the selections have been generally well made, and are such as to induce a belief that the coming year will be one of prosperity and progress to the Craft. I trust that in all cases the members of lodges will rally firmly round their new Masters, and thus show their own fitness to rule in their turn, by a cheerful obedience to the Masters of their own nomination. The usual reports of Committees will be submitted to you during the evening. The suggestions of the Finance Committee appear to be sound, and their recommendation that our Hall shall not be let out for meetings of lodges working under other Constitutions is one that I hope will be adopted. Any opposite course might prove to be in time exceedingly inconvenient, and I think it will be found to be most conducive to the foreign lodges themselves, as well as to our own body, that our meetings should not be held in the same place. The report of the Sub-Committee of the Fund of Benevolence again shows our inability to meet all applications for relief, owing to a want of funds. This of course is to be regretted, but it is unavoidable, and would be equally, so I fear, even had we a much larger amount of money at our disposal for the purposes of charity. I adhere to the opinion which I expressed on a former occasion, that the names of persons relieved should be given in the reports of the Committee of this Fund, as is done in England. To move the adoption of a report relating to grants of money, without the means of finding whether we approve of the details, seems to me to be, at least, a vote in the dark; but I have no desire to press my views on this point, believing that they are not concurred in by many influential members of District Grand Lodge, who think it inadvisable to parade, as it were, the recipients of our small bounty by a publication of their names. The report of the Bengal Masonic Association shows, I am grieved to find, a falling off in subscriptions, and I would wish to invite the attention of Masters of lodges to this excellent charity. Since the date of the report, I learn that a handsome donation of 500 rupees has been received from the proceeds of a fancy fair held by Freemasons at Mussoorie for the benefit of the Association, a praiseworthy example which might be followed advantageously by others. I would invite the special attention of Masters of lodges to a circular lately received from the Grand Secretary in London, calling attention to a previous circular issued in 1859, on the subject of spurious lodges, and to the penalties imposed by Grand Lodge upon any lodges under their jurisdiction which may give a Masonic reception to any brethren connected with such spurious and illegal bodies. I would wish again to notice the existence in Calcutta of a Masonic publication styled the "Masonic Herald," edited by Bro. Burroughs. The publication does not receive that amount of support which one might reasonably expect in a large district like Bengal, and I would be glad to see it patronized to a greater extent.

The report of the Committee of General Purposes was read and adopted, and the report of the Sub-Committee of the Fund of Benevolence was ordered to stand over till the next Quarterly Communication.

The D.G. Secretary read the following report from the Bengal Masonic Association:—

"At a General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Masonic Association held in pursuance of the provisions of the 10th By-Law at the Freemasons' Hall, No. 55, Bentinck-street, on Wednesday, the 6th December, 1871, at four o'clock in the afternoon, Hugh D. Sandeman, Esq., in the chair.

"1. The proceedings of the General Meeting held on the 7th of July last were read and confirmed.

"2. The accounts from the 1st July, 1871, to the 30th November, 1871, showing a balance of Rupees 14,500 in Government securities, and Rs. 2845-4-1 in cash, were examined and passed.

"3. The President laid on the table an abstract of the cash transactions of the Association during the past half-year, with balance-sheet, showing a sum of Rs. 1332-11-10 available for expenditure during the year ending 30th November 1872.

"4. The President in addressing the meeting noticed that the amount of invested capital belonging to the Association was Rs. 14,500, in 4 per cent. paper, in addition to which they held a cash balance of Rs. 2845-4-1. The donations received during the year amounted to Rs. 3111. He regretted to report a falling off in the amount of subscriptions as compared with those of the previous year, Rs. 912 having been received in 1870, and Rs. 688 only during 1871, the result being that whereas at the close of 1870 a sum of Rs. 1357-7-8 was available for expenditure during 1871, there was now a sum of Rs. 1332-11-10 only available for expenditure in 1872. Three children were now receiving the benefits of the fund. The cost of their education had been during the twelve months just lapsed a little over Rs. 900, or say Rs. 300 for each child, and it was now for the meeting to decide whether it would be safe to admit a fourth child to the benefits of the Association.

"5. Read applications for admission to the benefits of the Association, of the following children:— Kathleen Williamson Hoff, aged 13 years; Juliet Margery Williamson Hoff, aged 8 years. After some discussion it was determined to postpone the question of admitting another child to the benefits of the fund till the half-yearly meeting in June next.

"6. An unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to the Hon. Secretary for his valuable services to the Association.

"7. After the usual vote of thanks to the Chair, the meeting separated.

"W. B. FARR, HUGH SANDEMAN, Secretary. President."

The District Grand Master then appointed the officers of the District Grand Lodge for the year 1872. He took the opportunity of thanking the officers of the past year for their general services, and for the support which they had given him during their tenure of office, and further expressed a hope that he might continue to receive the benefit of their future advice and counsel. He thought it advisable, as in previous years, to bestow some rewards upon deserving Masons in the Mofussil, who frequently had great difficulties to contend with in their endeavours to promote the interests of the Order, and who, by holding office in Grand Lodge, would necessarily be led to take a still deeper interest in matters connected with the Craft, and he had endeavoured, to the best of his ability, to apportion the remainder of the appointments fairly among the town lodges, selecting brethren whose real worth and personal merit he believed to be acknowledged and respected by their fellows.

The District Grand Lodge was then announced to be composed as follows:—

W. Bro. J. H. Linton was unanimously re-elected District Grand Treasurer; and Bro. Amos was reappointed Custodian of the Hall for the ensuing year.

A letter from the District Grand Secretary of the Punjab was read, forwarding a cheque for Rs. 150, the donation voted by the Punjab District Grand Lodge at their Communication of the 23rd October, 1871, to the Masonic Fund of Benevolence in this district; and a vote of thanks to the District Grand Lodge of the Punjab was carried with acclamation.

A collection was then made for the Fund of Benevolence, and the amount announced to be Rs. 180.

There being no further business to be brought forward, the District Grand Lodge was closed in due form.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF DEVON.

A special meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Devonshire will be held at the Huyshe Masonic Hall, Princess-street, Princess-square, Plymouth, on Thursday next, 22nd instant, at one o'clock p.m., for the purpose of presenting a congratulatory address to her Majesty the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales, on the happy recovery of his Royal Highness from his late severe and dangerous illness.

At this meeting will be taken into consideration the following proposition to be submitted by the P.D. Prov. G.M., Bro. W. Denis Moore:—"That the Province of Devon avail itself of the occasion of the restoration of the Exeter Cathedral to record the happy restoration to health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales by presenting to the Cathedral a window, designed to commemorate that auspicious event."

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DERBYSHIRE.

A meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Derbyshire was lately held at the Assembly Rooms, Derby, for the purpose of adopting addresses of congratulation on the happy recovery of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his severe and dangerous illness.

The Marquis of Hartington, M.P., Prov. Grand Master, telegraphed to express his deep regret at not being able to be present, consequently the chair was taken by Bro. H. C. Okeover, D.P.G.M.

There was a very large attendance of brethren.

CONSECRATION OF SKELMERS-
DALE LODGE, No. 1380.

A highly-significant evidence of the progress of Freemasonry in the West Lancashire province was given on the 31st ult., by the consecration of the Skelmersdale Lodge, No. 1380, which took place at the Blundell Arms Hotel, Great Crosby, near Liverpool, under the most promising and auspicious circumstances. Not only was there a large gathering of the brethren, but an unusually large muster of those who have held the highest office in Craft Masonry gave additional clat to the opening of a lodge which promises to become one of the most popular and successful in this division. About eighty brethren, chiefly from Liverpool, assembled at the "Arms," and amongst the purpled were the following: Bros. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.P.G.S.W. of England, D.P.G.M. of West Lancashire, and P.M. 32; T. Wilson, P.J.G.W.; J. F. Goggin, P.G.C.; H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; J. Mawdsley, P.P.G. Sec.; T. Armstrong, P.G.T.; J. Hamer, P.P.G.T.; T. Wylie, P.G. Reg.; A. C. Mott, P.P.S.G.D.; G. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C.; J. Skeaf, P.G. Org.; G. de la Perelle, P.G.S.; T. Armstrong, P.G.T.; F. Stevenson, P.G.S.B. Cheshire; S. E. Ibbs, P.P.G.S.B.; Rev. H. G. Vernon, M.A., P.P.G.C.; T. Platt, P.P.J.G.D. Cheshire; H. S. Danvers, P.G.S.; P. Ball, P.G.T.; Rev. P. Hains, C. Caledonian (204) Manchester. Fermor-Hesketh, M.P., R.W.P.G.M., was expected, but an unavoidable engagement prevented him from being present for the purpose of performing the consecration ceremony.

The brethren assembled in the lodge room shortly after two o'clock, when the Craft lodge was opened by Bro. Mott, as W.M., assisted by Bros. Kearne, as S.W., J. W. Baker, as J.W., and G. de la Perelle as I.G. After the brethren of the new lodge had been properly marshalled, the lodge was opened in the three degrees, after which the usual formalities previous to the consecration were gone through. The P.G.C. (Bro. Goggin) then delivered an oration of the most impressive and appropriate character, which was succeeded by Bro. Skeaf's admirably-arranged anthem "Behold how good," sung with the most striking effect by Bros. Armstrong, Haswell (203), J. Busfield (1299), and J. Jones, Bro. Skeaf being at the harmonium. The first part of the consecration prayer having been offered by the P.G.C., the lodge was uncovered, and the corn, wine, and oil were carried according to ancient custom. After the second portion of the consecration prayer and another anthem by Bro. Skeaf, the deputy of the P.G.M. (Bro. Mott) constituted the lodge in ancient form. The whole of the highly-imposing ceremony was performed in the most efficient manner by Bro. Mott, who next proceeded to the installation of the W.M.-designate, Bro. Lord Skelmersdale. After his lordship had been duly installed as W.M. of 1380, he invested the following officers: Bros. A. C. Mott, P.M.; G. Broadbridge, S.W.; G. de la Perelle, J.W.; R. Brown, Sec.; R. S. Williams, Treas.; J. A. Hambleton, S.D.; T. Mercer, J.D.; H. L. Richards, Org.; H. W. Harris, I.G.; and G. Ladmore, Tyler, P.M. 673.

The charges to the different officers were delivered with marked effectiveness, and before the principal business of the day had concluded five gentlemen were proposed for initiation and one for joining. A letter was read from the R.W.P.G.M., expressing his great regret that, in consequence of another engagement, he was prevented from being present. As an evidence of the spirit which marks the opening of the Skelmersdale Lodge, it may be interesting to know that several brethren now connected with it have presented for its present and future use the three principal chairs, the lodge oil-cloth, silver square and compasses, salver, frame for the warrant, working tools in box, Bible, cushion, &c., and other donations are expected.

After the conclusion of the consecration and installation ceremonies, about forty of the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet provided by "nine host" of the Blundell Arms, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Lord Skelmersdale. During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to with much heartiness. In an excellent speech Br Mawdsley proposed the health of the noble W.M., who, in reply, thanked the brethren most heartily for their kindness. When their worthy S.W. (Bro. Broadbridge) wrote to him, asking that his (Lord Skelmersdale's) name should be given to the lodge, he thought it a great honour; but he considered it a still greater honour when he was asked to become the W.M. He assured the brethren that he would strive to do his duty to the Craft, and if he followed generally the example set by his father, grandfather, and uncle (Lord Derby), he was certain not to do wrong. His lordship concluded by thanking the numerous visitors for their attendance that day.

A pleasant gathering was greatly enlivened by the musical efforts of Bros. Armstrong, J. Jones, Busfield, and Haswell, Bro. J. Skeaf being the accompanist.

ANNUAL BALL OF THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH LODGE, No. 1182.

The annual ball in connection with this lodge took place on the 6th instant, in the lodge-room, Wavertree Coffee House, in aid of the funds of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. Upwards of 170 members and their friends were present. The ball was opened by the W.M., Bro. Philip Richards Thorn and Mrs. Thorn, the dancing being kept up with great spirit until an early hour in the morning, Mr. Martin's excellent quadrille band being in attendance. The refreshments were supplied by the hostess, Mrs. Thomas Wright, on a most liberal scale, which gave entire satisfaction to all present. Amongst those present were Bros. Cookson, I.P.M.; Thornton, P.M.; Williams, J.W.; Edgington, S.D.; Jones and Martin, Stewards; Myers, M.C.; Brown, Treas.; and Bales, Sec. Also Bros. Larsen, P.M. 594; Doyle, P.M. 667; Jackson, S.D. 667; and McInnis, 401.

CONSECRATION of the KENNINGTON
LODGE, No. 1381.

Another lodge was added to the roll of transpontine lodges, on the 9th inst., at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval. Bro. James Brett, Past Grand Pursivant, having been appointed by the M.W. Grand Master to officiate as Consecrating and Installing Master, attended at the time and place above-mentioned, where a very large assemblage of brethren had gathered to witness the imposing ceremonies.

The lodge having been duly opened in the three degrees, the Consecrating Master addressed the brethren upon the nature of the meeting, after which Bro. R. Wentworth Little, P.M., the Director of Ceremonies, stated the desire of the founders to be formed into a new lodge. Bro. Brett having signified his pleasure in complying with the request, proceeded with a splendid oration on the principles of the Institution, which was listened to with wrapt attention by the great assembly present, and greeted with enthusiastic applause at its conclusion. The musical brethren—who were Bros. G. T. Carter, P.M. 382, Baxter, and Theodore Distin, under the direction of Bro. E. Schuberth—then sang in superb style the anthem "Behold how good and joyful," Psalm 133, and the remainder of the ceremony was rendered in the same painstaking and perfect manner which distinguishes all Bro. Brett undertakes to perform in Freemasonry.

The D.C. then presented Bro. Edward J. Page, Past Grand Steward, for installation as the first W.M. of the lodge, and a Board of Installed Masters having been formed, Bro. Page was duly placed in the oriental chair. Upon the readmission of the brethren, and after the customary salutes, the W.M. invested Bros. W. Mann, P.M., as S.W.; F. W. Koch, as J.W.; and the other officers, including Bro. Lemuel F. Littell as acting P.M. Bro. Brett then fluently and impressively delivered the several addresses, after which it was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, "That he, as the able Consecrating Master, and Bro. Little as his D.C., be elected honorary members."

Both brethren returned thanks, and a large number of propositions for candidates and joining members were then read by the Secretary, Bro. St. John Ingram.

The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet supplied by the Bros. Pope, purveyors to the Club, and who gave immense satisfaction. The genial W.M. presided, supported by his equally-genial Wardens, and good speeches, good songs, and happy faces were the order of the evening. We regret being unable to give the names of all present, but we noticed, besides those already mentioned, Bros. J. Coutts, G.P.; J. Boyd, A.G.P.; J. Thomas, P.M.; W. Stuart, P.M.; R. A. Wright, P.M., P.P.G.D. Herts.; G. Pymm, P.M.; W. Platt, P.M.; T. Pulsford, P.M.; Drysdale, Gardner, Webb, and several brethren of the United Pilgrims' Lodge, No. 507, by whom the lodge was recommended.

CONSECRATION OF A CHAPTER AT NEWPORT.

The interesting ceremonial of consecration in the Royal Arch degree took place in this town on Tuesday last week. It was the birthday of "The Saint Woollo's Chapter" in connection with the Isca Lodge (683), which has, more especially during the last few years, under the fostering care of Masters, Past and Present, acquired a position in the van of a province which, from all points of the compass, is regarded most favourably not only on account of the numerical increase of the Craftsmen, but the judgment and discretion by which the selection of those seeking the advantages of an ancient and honourable institution has been characterised. It cannot be too extensively known that Masonry seeks not to proselytise—that Masons are absolutely prohibited, under penalties, from soliciting the "outer world" to join their Order, and that the Grand Lodge of England ever impresses on those under its authority the vast importance of selecting for participation in their privileges men of sound morals and of recognised social position. Hence the high character of the confraternity. Founded on the grand principles of brotherly love, relief, and truth, Masonry in not a "benefit society," in the ordinary sense of the term. These fundamental principles constantly in view, its influence is felt throughout the habitable globe. For the important ceremony, to which we have referred, the services of Companion Henry Muggeridge, First Grand Standard Bearer of England, were enlisted, who came expressly from London to consecrate the Chapter and to install the principals designate, viz., Comp. John Middleton, M.E.Z.; Comp. John Laybourne, H.; and Comp. Thomas Williams, J. The induction of officers was postponed until Wednesday, the 14th, when, by the bye, the banquet takes place at the Hostelry commonly known as "The King's Head," which, being freely translated into the Classics, straightway becomes "Caput Regis." At "Caput Regis," then, the Companions are invited to assemble, and that they will do so in force cannot be doubted for a moment. In the hands of Comp. Muggeridge the ritual, solemn and majestic as it is, was rendered peculiarly impressive by the elocutionary powers he displayed. His oration, after the usual preliminaries had been gone through, was in itself a Masonic gem, to which were added in graceful harmony, some of the poetic creations of Addison, Milton, Shakespere, Young, and Pope. We wish we could give it to our readers in extenso, but the rules of Craft Masonry forbid! Let us add that every part of this grand ceremonial evinced the efficiency in Masonic knowledge of the installing Companion; indeed the attention of the Chapter was wrapt as he expounded the beautiful points of the fourth degree. The occasion was rendered still more imposing by solemn music. Comp. Koelbel, bandmaster of the 94th Regiment, presided at the organ, and well he did his duty. The anthem (Stephens) was sung to the following words:—

Behold! how pleasant and how good
For brethren such as we,
Of the "Accepted" Brotherhood,
To dwell in unity.

'Tis like the oil on Aaron's head,
Which to his feet distils;
Like Hermon's dew, so richly shed
On Zion's sacred hills.

For there the Lord of Light and Love
A blessing sent with power;
Oh! may we all that blessing prove,
E'en life for evermore.

On Friendship's altar rising here,
Our hands now plighted be,
To live in love with hearts sincere,
In peace and unity.

The S.E., an officer of whom our non-masonic readers, of course, know nothing, but who exists, nevertheless, in every chapter, then presented the principals to the presiding-officer, who thereupon gave the first portion of the "Dedication Prayer," all the companions joining in the chant "So mote it be." The sanctus "Glory be to Thee, O Lord" preceded the Invocation, which the presiding-officer delivered, all the companions turning to the east, and again came that beautiful chant "So mote it be."

Three P.Z.'s here stepped forward, carrying sumptuous vessels of silver containing corn, and wine, and oil, and perambulated the chapter, the organ pealing forth and the companions chanting—

"Glory be to God on high;
Peace on Earth;
Good-will toward men."

The Chaplain took the censer, and pronounced the comprehensive Masonic benediction, the solemnity being heightened by the excellent musical effect produced.

The second portion of the "Dedication Prayer" having been given, the presiding officer "dedicated" the chapter in due form, and "constituted" the same, the whole closing with the anthem (Haydn)—

The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heavens, a shining frame,
Their great original proclaim.
The unwearied sun, from day to day,
Does his Creator's power display,
And publishes to every land,
The work of an Almighty hand.

What, though in solemn silence all,
Move round this dark terrestrial ball,
What though no real voice nor sound,
Amid their radiant orbs be found;
In reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice,
For ever singing as they shine,
The hand that made us is Divine.

The installation of the principals already named followed (Comp. Laybourne was absent owing to indisposition), and a number were proposed for exaltation, and as joining members.

A few of the companions afterwards dined together at the King's Head Hotel, where Comp. Muggeridge was the honoured guest.

Amongst the companions present at the Consecration we noticed:—Henry Muggeridge, P.G.S. Bearer; John Middleton, Z. designate; Thos. Williams, J. designate; W. Pickford, P.Z. 471; William Watkins, 471; Alfred Taylor, 471; Henry J. Gratte, J. 471; R. J. Chambers, P.N. 471; R. S. Roper, 471; R. B. Evans, 471; Henry Fletcher, 471; C. H. Oliver, Z. 471; Rev. Samuel Fox, H. 471; David Lloyd James, 471; F. Orders, 471; Henry Hellyer, P.Z., 471; Charles Rowe, 471; W. H. Wickey Homfray, 471; William Wade, 471; Egbert Horlick, 471; Benjamin Lawrence, P.S., 471; H. Koelbel, 563, Umballah; Samuel Coombes, P.Z. 471; W. Parfitt, 471.—The Star of Gwent Times.

SCOTLAND.

KELSO.

On Friday evening, the 26th ult., the Tweed Lodge, No. 261, celebrated the festival of St. John the Evangelist by a grand torchlight procession and ball. It was intended to have had the demonstration on the eve of St. John, but, owing to the severe illness of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, it was delayed until Friday. The brethren met in the lodge-room at the Cross Keys Hotel, about six o'clock, when they formed themselves into processional order, two and two, and headed by the Kelso Brass Band, and bearing aloft the flambeaus and insignia of the Order, proceeded up Roxburgh-street, to the old familiar tune of "The Merry Masons." After coming down Roxburgh-street, the procession proceeded along north side of Square, and down Horse Market, into Coal Market, and up Wood Market, passed along south side of Square, proceeded along Bridge-street to the Manse entrance gate, passing through and going up the avenue to the Rev. Bro. Smith's residence, and passing along by the grammar school, and by this route walking round the Old Abbey, where a halt was made, the band playing "Auld Lang Syne." The procession afterwards retraced their steps up Bridge-street, and walked twice round the Square, and at last went straight from the British Linen Company's bank to the lodge-room. Notwithstanding the unpropitious weather (rain having fallen during the entire course of the procession), the street windows in the route were crowded with spectators, many of them coming great distances to witness the procession, and all of them evincing the greatest interest in the rather novel demonstration. It is nearly twenty-seven years since the last torch-light procession took place, and many of the inhabitants will remember the procession of Friday for many years to come. The principal office-bearers who took part in the demonstration on Friday were Bros. J. S. Macgregor, R.W.M. 261; the Proxy Master 70; P.M. 393 (E.C.), and P.G. Org. Northumberland; Steel, P.M. 261; and Gibson, R.W.M. 70. In the evening a supper and ball took place in the Hall, which was neatly decorated for the occasion with flowers and evergreens. The company were joined by several office-bearers and brethren from the St. David's Lodge, Berwick (E.C.) There was a large attendance, and dancing commenced about ten o'clock, to the strains of an excellent string band, and continued with unflagging interest up to twelve o'clock, when supper was served up and heartily partaken of. After a few songs, dancing was again resumed, and with country dances, quadrilles, schottisches, and polkas, the evening's enjoyment was kept up almost until "night's candles had burned out," and chanticleer proclaimed the dawn of morn.

MELROSE.

The annual festival of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated by Lodge St. John, on Wednesday, the 27th ult., within their own lodge-room, Melrose. The lodge being opened, the brethren proceeded to the election and installation of their office-bearers, when the result was as follows: Bros. Renton, R.W.M.; Middleness, S.W.; Hart, J.W.; Wood, S.D.; Aikman, J.D.; Graham, P.M.; Hart, D.M.; Fairbairn, Sec.; Scott, Treas.; Sardine, Chap.; Scott, I.G.; and Ticket, Tyler. The lodge was then closed, and immediately thereafter ninety-four sat down to a sumptuous dinner. The usual torch-light procession was held in the evening, headed by an instrumental band, numbering upwards of twenty players. Everything passed off in the usual good old style.

DUNBLANE.

The annual festivals of St. John's Lodge of Freemasons, No. 9, Dunblane, were held on 27th December and 8th January last, and were very largely attended. The festivals were inaugurated by a torchlight procession on 27th Dec., which proved eminently successful. It was headed by Depute Master Gilbert Farie, Bridge of Allan, in the absence of the R.W. Master John Stirling, of Kippendavie, and started from the lodge-room in the Stirling Arms' Hotel, proceeded through the principal streets of the city, and was joined in by a larger number of brethren than has been known to walk in procession with it for the last fifty years. The inhabitants of Dunblane took an unusual interest in the spectacle, as they turned out to witness it almost to a man. After perambulating the town, the brethren returned to the hotel, where they formed a mystic arch, through which the Depute Master and his office-bearers passed.

A numerous-attended banquet followed, the chair being filled by the Depute Master, and the croupier being Bro. R. Philip. Toast, song, and sentiment followed the banquet, and at "high twelve" the brethren separated, much pleased with the reunion.

The turn-out on old St. John's night was also very large, but the crowning results of the efforts of the brethren connected with the lodge took place, under their auspices, in the Stirling Arms Hotel. About forty brethren and friends, with their wives and sweethearts, eighty in all, assembled on that occasion. The lodge was opened in due form by the Depute Master, in the absence of the R.W. Master. Immediately thereafter the lodge was closed to permit of the brethren proceeding with the assembly. After dancing till one a.m., they adjourned for supper—the Depute Master in the chair. The croupiers were Bros. D. Irvine, R. Philip, and W. R. McGregor. The viands and liqueurs were unsurpassed for excellence, and were served up, as is customary for this establishment, in the very best style. The chairman said he was very much pleased, indeed, to preside over such a company of the youth and beauty of the country. He thanked the Committee in connection with the lodge for putting him in the honourable position which he held, and he hoped the remainder of the evening would be spent in the pleasant and social manner, and with as much harmony, as had characterized their proceedings up to that time. He did not intend, on the present occasion, to regard the meeting as a public one, which would require them to honour in due form the usual loyal and patriotic toasts. He wished to look upon them all as brothers and sisters assembled under their Masonic roof, and sitting at their social board, and, therefore, he would not intrude upon their time by proposing a toast of any kind. In order to allow the ladies—who, he hoped, would look upon the meeting as a family party—to enjoy the coolness of the fine dry sherry, and to eat some of the delicious fruit, he had resolved to ask them to sit for a little time before recommencing dancing, and to vary the proceedings by the singing of a few songs. (“Hear, hear,” and applause.)

A number of songs were then sung by different ladies and gentlemen of the company. The singers were frequently applauded. The dance was again engaged in with renewed energy, and was kept up with unabated zeal until an early hour on the following morning. The Depute Master ably acted as Master of Ceremonies, and Mr. Bowie, of the Highland Borderers, Stirling, conducted the music.

During the past year the lodge has added a large number of members to its ranks, between twenty and thirty having joined during the last few months. In no period of its history has the lodge been in so flourishing a condition as it is at present. Indeed, for some years previous to last year very few new members have been enrolled. We hope the prosperity of 1871 may prove a stimulus to the brethren to continue their efforts to add to their numbers.

STRANRAER KILWINNING LODGE.

The brethren of the mystic circle who, in bygone years, cultivated the acacia on the banks of Lochryan having generally passed away from Time's level, the mystic tree under whose shade they laboured has been suffered to droop, but fraters elsewhere will learn with pleasure that an effort is about to be made to cause it to burgeon afresh, and bring forth fair truth. A meeting of brethren was held in the house of a brother in Stranraer, on the evening of Tuesday last, when there was the necessary number of enlightened craftsmen present. No lodge was opened, however, but an “ancient from the West” produced the charter and seals of Stranraer Kilwinning Lodge, No. 208, and gave a clue to the minute book of the lodge, which will be produced on another occasion, and which is said to contain numerous facts illustrative of the past history of Masonry in the burgh. By a few strokes of the pen the old charter may be made as good as new, and the brethren resolved to take the necessary steps to have the lodge reopened in its proper position in connection with the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Meantime, it was resolved that no delay should be lost in resuming work, and the “light that never was on sea or shore” will, it is expected, gleam brightly in a proper locality in Stranraer next week. The tools of the old lodge, if not forthcoming, will be supplanted by others, and the ring of the gavel summoning the Craft to labour will again be heard within the precincts of a closely-tyled lodge. Brethren resident in Stranraer and its vicinity are solicited, by an advertisement in another column, to attend a meeting to be held here next week. Those who may be unsteady in their gait, and liable to stumble from want of exercise, are requested to bring their diplomas with them. In a couple of weeks, at most, candidates will be admitted across the tessellated border, and brought to light by an efficient R.W.M., and as many blocks await the Master's mark, trade will be brisk till the occurrence of an event to which well-informed brethren are looking forward, and which it is expected will cause some little stir in the province.—Galloway Advertiser, Feb. 1.

WATERFORD.

We have the pleasure of publishing the address presented by the brethren of Lodge No. 5, Waterford, to her Majesty and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, on the happy recovery of the Heir-Apparent, with the touching reply that her Majesty has, through her Home Secretary, forwarded. It is very creditable to the Waterford Lodge to be amongst the first of the brethren in Ireland to express sympathy with the royal sufferer, who is himself the Patron of the Order in Ireland and an ornament to the brotherhood.

“Waterford, January 18, '72.

“To the Right Hon. the Home Secretary, London.

“Sir—I have the honour to forward by this day's post an address of sympathy for her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, from the Master, Wardens, and brethren of the Masonic Lodge, No. 5, Waterford, and shall be much obliged by your kindly taking an early opportunity of having it presented to her Most Gracious Majesty.—I have the honour to remain, your obedient servant, “THOMAS SLEATOR, Hon. Sec.

“Masonic Lodge, No. 5, Waterford.”

“We the W.M., Wardens and brethren of Masonic Lodge, No. 5, Waterford, being in open lodge assembled, desire respectfully, and with true feelings of loyalty and devotion, common to all Freemasons of Ireland, to express to our Most Gracious Sovereign Queen Victoria, and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, the heartfelt sympathy we had for them during the illness of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and we still sympathise with the Royal family. We at the same time congratulate them upon the daily improvement in the condition of H.R.H., and we fervently pray the Great Architect of the Universe to speedily restore to health our Prince and Patron.

“Signed in open lodge this 8th day of Jan., 1872.”

“F. MALCOMSON, W.M.

“Whitehall, 27th January, 1872.

“Sir,—I have had the honour to lay before the Queen the loyal and dutiful address of the Master, Wardens and brethren of Masonic Lodge, No. 5, Waterford, on the occasion of the illness of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. I have to inform you that her Majesty was pleased to receive the address very graciously. I am, sir, your obedient servant, “H. A. BRUCE.

“Thomas Sleator, Esq., Secretary,

“Masonic Lodge, No. 5, Waterford.”

The members of Lodge 32 assembled at their rooms, Olave's Place, on Friday evening last week, to present Bro. W. S. Thompson with an address and P.M.'s jewel, he having signified his intention of resigning the office of W.M., being about to leave the city for Limerick.

A large number of brethren sat down to a sumptuous supper, amongst whom were visitors from Lodge 5.

The chair was taken by Bro. Sleator, P.M., H.K.T.

After the chair toasts were duly given and honoured, Bro. Sleator introduced the special business of the evening—bestowing a warm eulogium on Bro. Thompson, and on the working and appearance of the lodge under his presidency. He then read the following address:—

“To Bro. William S. Thompson, P.M., R.A., and Worshipful Master of Royal Shamrock Lodge, No. 32, Waterford.

“Dear Sir and Brother,—We, the Past Masters Wardens and brethren of Lodge 32 cannot permit you to leave this, your native city with expressing our entire approbation of your conduct since you became a member of our lodge.

“Your having been elected to fill the chair of our lodge on three several occasions is a sufficient proof of the esteem and regard in which you are held by its members.

“We have much pleasure in presenting you with a P.M.'s jewel, not only as a token of our very great regard, but also that the members of other lodges may be made aware of the esteem in which you were held by the members of Lodge 32.

“We pray that the Great Architect of the Universe may have you in His holy keeping and grant you to be spared many years to your dear wife and family, and to promote the interests of our ancient and time-honoured Order.

“Signed on behalf of the members of Lodge 32.

“THOS. SLEATOR, P.M., H.K.T., Acting W.M.

ROBERT WHALLEY, sen., P.M., H.K.T.

H. McLEAN, P.M., R.A.

ROBERT WHALLEY, jun., P.M., H.K.T.

JOHN DAVIS, P.M., R.A., Hon. Sec.

“January 26, 1872”

He then invested Bro. Thompson with the jewel on behalf of the lodge, amidst much enthusiasm. Several brethren spoke in the most affectionate and fraternal manner of their W.M.'s conduct since he first became a member of the lodge, particularly during the three sessions in which he presided as their Worshipful Master.

Bro. Thompson in accepting the address and jewel spoke as follows: It is unnecessary that I should occupy much time in saying how gratified and pleased I am at receiving such an especial mark of your esteem and favour, as well as for the valuable jewel that has accompanied it. I accept this too flattering address and jewel in the fraternal spirit in which you have presented them. They shall be carefully preserved as mementoes of the many unclouded and happy days we have wrought together—days never to be forgotten by me. I only regret that I am forced through leaving your city to resign the office of W.M., to which you had three several times by your unanimous votes elected me. I cannot part with you, however, without thanking you, officers and brethren, for the ready help I have ever received at your hands, and for the truly Masonic manner in which you have ever acquiesced in my decisions as your W.M. To my old and much esteemed friends, the P.M.'s who have been ever by my side, I return my warmest and most grateful thanks, praying that the Great Architect of the Universe may continue to bless 32. I again thank you one and all.

The remainder of the evening was spent in the most happy manner. Several capital songs and good recitations were given.

At a special meeting held on Thursday evening, it was unanimously resolved, “That as a further compliment, Bro. Thompson should continue to hold the office of W.M. to the end of the present term—even though prevented by absence from attending regularly.”

SUDDEN DEATH.—Bro. John Ashton, P.M. Lodge of Virtue, 152, member of the Jerusalem Encampment, and 32nd Grand Council Ancient and Accepted Rite, fell dead in his own home, near Mottram, on Thursday se'nnight. He was greatly respected, and a genuine and good sound Mason.

THE Fifteen Sections will be worked at the Panmure Lodge of Instruction, No. 720, Ballham Hotel, Ballham, on Thursday, the 29th inst. The questions will be put by Bro. J. Stevens, P.M., P.Z., as W.M., and answered by Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., P.Z., P.G.D.C., the Hon. Preceptor. A large muster is expected.

“MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physician as ‘past cure.’ I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son.”

THE EARL OF MAYO.

THE assassination of the popular Viceroy of India is an event at once so startling and so horrible that the intelligence seems at first but the fantasy of a hideous dream. A career so splendid, a life so useful and honourable, to be thus suddenly quenched in blood; the mind can hardly realise it without an effort, although, unhappily, the news is but too fatally true. This terrible catastrophe will undoubtedly awaken the deepest sympathy wherever our tongue is spoken, not only on account of the fiendish nature of the deed, but because Lord Mayo was personally a most amiable and true-hearted man, whose death would be, under any circumstances, a calamity to any civilized community. In him the British nation is called upon to mourn the loss of one who was an honour to the name of Briton, and who may now be said to have perished, like Nelson, in the discharge of a patriotic duty. We have at present but scanty details of the fearful act; but it is much to be feared that the cruel fanaticism which inspires many of the Mahomedan tribes of India has prompted the murder of the Viceroy. If this be so, the utmost vigilance should be exercised in our Eastern possessions, and, indeed, the recent assassination of Acting Chief Justice Norman ought to have placed the local authorities on their guard. By the telegram announcing Lord Mayo's fate, we learn that the murderer was a Mahometan convict, and that the miscreant stabbed his Excellency twice in the back. We confess to considerable astonishment, mingled with distrust, at the fact of a convict, in the first place, being so free in his movements as to be able to approach a personage like the Viceroy of India; and we are still more amazed to hear that such villains are allowed to carry knives or other deadly weapons. There must have been a laxity of discipline somewhere to have rendered the atrocious attack possible, and those who are to blame in the matter will not easily be absolved by the English nation.

The deceased nobleman was initiated into Freemasonry in a lodge in Ireland, and attained high honours in the Irish Craft. For many years he represented the Grand Lodge of Ireland at the Grand Lodge of England—a post which he vacated on his appointment to the Governor-Generalship of India, and in which he was succeeded by the popular Brother Colonel Francis Burdett, who is now also Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex. Lord Mayo joined the Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002, at Cocker-mouth—the borough for which he sat in the House of Commons—on the 6th September, 1864; and we believe his respected name is borne on its roll up to the present time. Upon assuming the government of our vast Indian empire, the late Earl was requested by the brethren in India to accept the position of "Patron of Freemasonry," and he at once acceded to their wishes, ever afterwards continuing to evince a warm friendship for the Craft. The Order therefore loses in Lord Mayo a brother whose high character had—although in former days not unassailed by unscrupulous foes—nevertheless stood the test of time and truth, and few who remember twenty years back can forget the vile calumnies which were uttered by John Sadleir and his clique against our noble brother's honour. Freemasonry, especially, can ill afford his loss, but his memory will be green in all our hearts for many years to come, and the part which he bore in this amphitheatre of strife will be handed down as an example to future ages.

The Earl of Mayo, whose tragic end, in the very midst of the most honoured and honourable part of a long political career, is thus announced: was born in Dublin on the 21st February, 1822; and had, therefore, on the evening of his assassination reached to within a fortnight of the completion of his fiftieth year. He was the son of Robert Bourke, fifth Earl of Mayo, in the peerage of Ireland, and his mother was the only daughter of the Hon. John Jocelyn, third son of the first Earl of Roden. The Earldom dates from 1785; but the Barony of Naas had been conferred on the family in 1776. The late Earl was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his degrees of B.A. in 1844, M.A. in 1851, and LL.D. in 1852. He married, in 1848, the third daughter of the first Lord Leconfield, and had four sons and two daughters; the eldest son, Lord Naas, who succeeds his father as the seventh Earl of Mayo, was born in 1851, and is now in his twenty-first year. The late Earl succeeded his father in the earldom in August, 1867. It was, therefore, not as Earl of Mayo, but as Lord Naas, to which title he succeeded when his father became Earl of Mayo in 1849, that he was best known in our political history. Like many young men of family and position who aspire to a political career, Lord Naas began his public life by the publication of a volume of foreign travels. His "Impressions of St. Petersburg and Moscow" were given to the world in 1845; but it was not till the general election of 1847 that he made his first appearance in political life. In that year he became the Conservative candidate for the county of Kildare, of which he was afterwards a magistrate and a deputy-lieutenant, and in which his family seat, Palmerston House, Naas, is situated. At this time he was only the Hon. Richard Southwell Bourke, and under that name made his first appearance in Parliament. His politics were those of the old school of Conservatism. He expressly contested the county as a Protectionist, and was returned by a considerable majority over the second Liberal candidate, Mr. J. A. O'Neill, though Lord Kildare, a Liberal, headed the poll. During the first two sessions of the new Parliament Mr. Bourke seems to have confined himself to a couple of questions on an Irish workhouse; his maiden speech was made on the 6th of February, 1849, in support of a motion by Sir George Grey for a continuance of the Act, passed in the previous July, for the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act in Ireland. Speaking as an Irishman and an Irish county member, he expressed the regret with which he was compelled to confess that this suspension was needful. In 1849 he became Lord Naas, and began gradually to take an active part in the discussion of Irish questions. When the second and final overthrow of Lord John Russell's first administration took place in February, 1852, Lord Naas had already established a position in Irish discussions, and in Lord Derby's short-lived Administration of that year occupied the post of Chief Secretary for Ireland without a seat in the Cabinet. On his appointment to this office he did not offer himself for re-election in Kildare, where a Liberal was returned unopposed in his place; but Mr. John Boyd, the Liberal-Conservative member for Coleraine, conveniently accepting the Chiltern Hundreds at that time, Lord Naas was returned in his place without a poll. In July Lord Derby dissolved Parliament, and Lord Naas was again returned unopposed for Coleraine, his old seat for Kildare being still occupied by a Liberal. Lord Derby's Administration was overthrown by the new Parliament in December, on a vote on Mr. Disraeli's extraordinary Budget, and Lord Naas, of course, quitted the Irish Secretaryship, his short exercise of which had been chiefly distinguished in the House of Commons by his vigorous and successful opposition to Mr. Sharman Crawford's Tenant-right Bill. During the Administrations of Lord Aberdeen and Lord Palmerston, Lord Naas, of course, remained out of office. At the general election which followed on Lord Palmerston's penal dissolution of the House after the vote on the Canton massacre in 1857, Lord Naas sought a seat at Cocker-mouth, and, first under his courtesy title of Lord Naas and then as Earl of Mayo, was returned.

Lord Palmerston's triumph in 1857 was followed by the exhibition on his part of some of the intoxication of power, and early in the next year he was thrown out, and the second Derby Administration took the reins of Government. Lord Naas was, for the second time, appointed

Chief Secretary for Ireland, still without a seat in the Cabinet. This Administration also was short-lived, and during his year or so of office, Lord Naas not only vindicated the post he filled against Mr. Horsman's assertion that it was almost a sinecure, but endeavoured to show a good deal of activity, both in administration and legislation. He quitted office with the Ministry in 1859, and remained out of office during the second Palmerston Administration, which ended with Lord Palmerston's death in 1865, and the second Administration of Lord Russell, which came to a premature end in 1866. In that year Conservatism returned to power, and with it Lord Mayo, again as Secretary for Ireland, and now as a member of the Cabinet, who had meanwhile succeeded to his title. It was in this period of his official career that he especially distinguished himself by his celebrated declaration as to what he thought to be the true ecclesiastical policy for Ireland. Lord Lawrence's return from India gave an opportunity for taking Lord Mayo out of the political arena, and it was at once seized. The appointment was much discussed at the time, but Mr. Disraeli, in his hustings address to the Buckinghamshire electors on the 19th November, 1868, declared that he had been appointed for his sagacity, judgment, fine temper, and knowledge of men; and added, "I believe he will earn a reputation which his country will honour. He has before him a career which I believe he will, in the end, equal that of any of the Governors-General who have preceded him. We are glad to feel that in great degree this high eulogy has been justified. Lord Mayo expanded under the pressure of great responsibilities. He had been known in Parliament as a large, genial Irishman, whose round open face was clear of guile, and who had rather blurted out with too great honesty some official secrets. He had been a tolerably active administrator, but had shown no great parts. Perhaps it is such able, conscientious, hard-working administrators India needs. Lord Mayo took the Department of Public Works under his especial care, and has, possibly, bestowed as much benefit on India as any former Viceroy. Over the whole of the peninsula he will be remembered and beloved. He has fallen in the prime of his life, in the fulness of his opportunities, and in the zenith of his fame, like a successful warrior on the field of battle—fallen at the post of duty, and will bequeath both his example and his memory to be a strength to his country."

MASONIC BALLS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your last issue I see it stated that, in consequence of a ball at Weston-super-Mare not being restricted to Masons, the Earl of Carnarvon, the P.G.M. of Somerset, refused his sanction to the brethren appearing in the clothing of the higher degrees. Surely, there must be some mistake in this. Lord Carnarvon is a Past Grand Master of the Mark, and one of the members of the Supreme Grand Council 33°; but as he has no jurisdiction in his capacity as P.G.M. over the higher degrees, I cannot conceive that his lordship should affect to exercise a jurisdiction where he has no Masonic authority to do so.

Yours fraternally,

Feb. 7, 1872.

THE MASONIC NEW YEAR.

BY THE EDITOR.

Out in the chill, December night,
Out in the inky, ghostly air,
Ominous spirits wing their flight,
Hither, thither and everywhere.

Space is filled with their countless throng,
Time seems waiting their movements grand;
Angels are chanting a requiem song,
While the Old Year's borne to the Spirit land.

The belfry tolls the midnight hour;
The shadowless shapes seem bowed in gloom,
As though their spirits could feel the power
Of grief that gathers round the tomb.

But hark! far out from the realms of space,
A whispering melody seems to steal,
With more witching a tone, and faultless grace,
Than Beethoven's genius did e'er reveal.

At first it trembles on the air,
Then swells, with chorus grand and long,
Until it echoes everywhere,
"A New Year's born, a New Year's born!"

We sing the praise of this glad New Year,
So rich with its wealth of days and hours;
How we long to have its joys draw near!
How we want to pluck its summer flowers!

The Present, alone, is ever sad,
The Future is always robed in blue;
A promise, a hope, will make the heart glad,
When the face wears the palest and gloomiest hue.

But how shall we spend these many days,
When they come to be ours, one by one?
How merit the lofty and generous praise—
"Your hours were well spent, your deeds well done."

We practise an Ancient and Royal Art;
We are gifted with light to the world unknown;
We are called to act no humble part,
But to be Masters all and ascend the throne!

To the East we each go for guiding Light,
That our pathway through life may be clear as the day,
That the sirens of evil, which work in the night,
May ne'er blind us to duty, nor lead us astray.

The Ancient Craft has learned too well
To measure the hours, as quick they flee,
To yield to any siren's spell,
Or to Passion's god to bow the knee.

We are wisely taught to portion the day—
Eight hours for toil, in our round of care,
Eight hours for sleep, and eight always
For our brother's needs, and to God in prayer.

So let us portion this happy year—
Now full of promise, now our's to spend—
Let words that gladden and deeds that cheer,
Our footsteps in every path attend.

Then shall we build in our hearts and lives,
A glorious Temple to our Master above,
Which shall last till Eternity's bright day arrives,
And the world has become all a kingdom of Love.

VALUABLE WORK on the ANCIENT CONSTITUTIONS of the FREEMASONS.

Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall, is now preparing for the press a work to be entitled, "The old Charges of British Freemasons." The celebrated manuscript belonging to the time-immemorial Lodge of Antiquity, of 1686, will be published, having been carefully transcribed especially for Bro. Hughan's work, and a fac-simile page will form the frontispiece. This MS. has not hitherto been published, and much interest centres in this document. Other MSS. will also be inserted, and a careful resumé of all the known MSS., or Constitutions, will form the first part of this important book.

The work, we understand, will be dedicated (by permission) to the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., M.W.G.M. As only a limited number will be issued, brethren should apply at once to the author for copies, which will be sold at five shillings each.

The following reply to the address from the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 777, Guildford, has been received:—

"Sandringham, King's Lynn,
February 7, 1872.

"General Sir William Knollys is desired by the Prince of Wales to return his sincere thanks to the Worshipful Master and members of the Royal Alfred Lodge for the kind sympathy they have expressed on the occasion of his recent illness, and for their congratulations on his recovery.

"R. Mason, Esq., W.M."

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has sent a present of twenty pheasants, twenty partridges, and ten hares for the patients of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, of which he is President.

A sum of one hundred guineas was voted by acclamation by the Court of Common Council, on Thursday se'nnight, towards the expenses of the Livingstone Expedition.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This medicine has resisted every test which time, prejudice, and vested interest could impose upon it, and it at length stands forth triumphant as the most reliable remedy for those derangements of the system so common at the change of seasons. When the functions of the skin are retarded, an occasional dose of Holloway's Pills will call on the liver and kidneys for greater activity, and compensate the system for diminished cutaneous action. As alteratives, tonics, and aperients, these Pills, have no equal. To every aged and delicate person, whose appetite is defective, digestion infirm, and tone of health low, this medicine will be a precious boon, conferring both strength and ease, with activity and cheerfulness.—[Advt.]

THE NORTH-EASTERN MASONIC CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION.

We have received the second report of the above society, which we here insert for the information of our readers, as we did last year, and congratulate the members on the continued success of the Institution.

REPORT.

In presenting their second report, the Committee have again to congratulate the members upon the continued success of the Association.

During the past year there has been received £293 5s., being an increase of £23 15s. 6d over the previous one. This has enabled the Committee to submit for ballot 28 Life Governorships, which, with the 26 previously obtained, makes 54 in the two years, a result your Committee cannot but think eminently satisfactory, and in their opinion entirely unprecedented in the history of these associations.

Since its establishment, 14 members have chosen the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; five, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; and 28, the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons; the remaining seven have not as yet decided.

At the Festivals holden during the past year, this Association was represented no less than fourteen times by its members, who served as Stewards from their various lodges, taking in lists with amounts varying from £24 3s. to over £100, thus again augmenting the funds of the three Institutions very considerably.

It is one of the most gratifying incidents in the working of this Association, to find that of the 54 members who have obtained Life Governorships, their arrears only amount to a very small sum, while during the past year two have paid up the amount required to redeem them, and, consequently, the receipts have been placed in their hands and their engagements cancelled.

Your Committee have again to regret the death of two members. The amount paid in by one of them was within a short time repaid to his widow, without deduction, and his share transferred; while in the other instance the amount has not yet been applied for.

Since the last report, numerous kindred associations have been established in various parts of the country, mainly owing, your Committee have reason to believe, to the success which has attended this Association, and they can but hope that the suggestion made in the first report, that brethren would join this, or aid in establishing others, may still be borne in mind, and that, before long, wherever a lodge is located there will be attached to it, as part of its organisation, an association similar to this, so that every member may have the opportunity of becoming a Life Governor of one at least of our noble Institutions.

Another good result arrived at through this Association has been the success which attended the efforts made during the past year in the election of candidates on the various Institutions, by being enabled to bring prominently before the members the claims of some of our less fortunate brethren, and the Committee venture to hope that as more members obtain their Life Governorships, still greater success may attend their efforts.

Your Committee have great pleasure in again acknowledging the invaluable services of the Hon. Secretary, Bro. James Terry, and they feel that much of the success of the Association is due to the attention and zeal evinced by him, and venture, further, to suggest that an opportunity may shortly present itself when the members can substantially record their appreciation of his services.

MASONIC SONG.

AIR—"For a' that, and a' that."

When heaven first formed this world o' light,
The stars, and sun, and a' that;
The glories bright o' day and night,
The sky, and wave, and a' that;
For a' that, and a' that,
The joys o' love and a' that,
The social sweet was wanted yet,
The crowning bliss to a' that!

Tho' Adam had a bonny wife,
In Eden's bower, and a' that,
The friend and brother charm o' life
Was wanting still, for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Existence, love, and a' that,
Had still been but an infant's dream
Without that friend, for a' that!

The diamond in the dusky mine,
The morning star, and a' that,
Less fairly glow and brightly shine
Than Friendship's gem, for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
The satrap's crown, and a' that,
Adorned not more the brows that wore Than Love, the soul, for a' that!

The jewel on a brother's breast
Is rich and rare, and a' that,
The man who serves his brother best
More priceless is, for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Who lays his wealth, and a' that,
Upon the throne o' love alone,
And Masonry, for a' that!

There stands a temple, proudly reared
By Wisdom's hands, and a' that,
The Mason's fane, by truth endeared,
A mystic tower, I ca' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
The pomp, and pride, and a' that,
The pyramids in dust shall fall
Ere Masonry, for a' that!

HULL.—In our report of the annual ball in connection with the Humber Lodge, No. 57, in our issue of the 3rd instant, we inadvertently omitted the name of Bro. H. E. Voigt as one of the Stewards, a circumstance which we regret, more especially when we remember how zealously he worked for the good of the undertaking. The following is a list of the officers for the present year: R. T. Vivian, W.M.; Wm. Tessyman, P.G. Sup. of Works, I.P.M.; James Walker, S.W.; Jonathan West, J.W.; David Middlemist, Chap.; John Fountain, P.P.G.S.B., Treas.; J. L. Seaton, P.M., P.J.P.G.W., Treasurer of the Benevolent and Pension Fund; William Banks Stay, M.D., P.M., P.S.P.G.D., Treasurer of the Improvement Sinking Fund; W. D. Keyworth, P.M., P.P.G. Sup. of Works, Treas. and Almoner of the Poor Fund; J. P. Backwell, Sec.; M. Haberland, Lecture Master; Henry Preston, S.D.; Richard Boggett, J.D.; John Hudson, Dir. of Cers.; J. W. Stephenson, Org.; George Haigh, Richard Hicks, W. H. Wellstead, H. T. Hall, R. V. Knowles, and J. Hindson, Stewards; Edward Kidd, Inner Guard; W. Bernard, Librarian; W. Johnson, P.G.T., Tyler; and Thos. Crier, Assistant Tyler. It may not be generally known that this lodge is one of the largest in the kingdom, the list of members for St. John's Day, 1871, showing a number of 242, to which may be added many members who have since been initiated. To this lodge there are also attached Benevolent and Pension and Poor funds, which are often the means of conferring great blessings upon our poor, old or infirm brethren. The building, too, we believe has few inferiors, not so much on account of the exterior, but for the comfort and thorough Masonic completeness within.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

[With a view to increase the circulation, and consequently the usefulness, of THE FREEMASON, it is suggested that Lodges, &c., desiring reports to appear in the paper, should take a certain number of copies in proportion to the space required for the report.]

METROPOLITAN.

Egyptian Lodge, No. 27.—The installation meeting of this old and flourishing lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 1st instant, when the chair was taken by Bro. T. Sheppard, W.M., who was supported by Bros. J. Palmer, S.W.; T. F. Harrison, J.W.; H. G. Buss, P.M., Sec.; C. Atkins, S.D.; S. R. Lambie, J.D.; J. Green, as I.G.; John Savage, P.G.D., honorary member; J. Coutts, G.P.; W. H. Libbis, C. P. Payne, D. G. Berri, and Hoare, P.M.'s; Shepherd, Org.; and about forty other members. The visitors, about thirty-six in number, comprised Bros. John Hervey, G. Sec.; John Boyd, Asst. G. Purs.; Jos. Smith and James Brett, P.G.P.'s; William Watson, P.G. Steward; J. Terry, P.G.S.B. Herts.; H. M. Levy and E. P. Albert, P.M.'s 188; R. W. Little, P.G. Sec. Middlesex; G. Stacey, P.G. Reg. Berks.; J. Sherrard, P.M. 401; W. Bourne (P.M., S.W.), J. Summers, G. Penny, W. Bartley, R. W. Paget, J. Arnold, J. Verity, G. Griffith, T. F. Cheek, and C. W. Roberts, 1348; T. W. Pulsford, P.M. 1158; F. Burdett, 140; Major Finney, W.M. 1361; R. J. Hopkins, 87; T. L. Fox, P.M. 19; T. E. Pardy, P.M. 861; W. Mackey, W.M. 861; T. Bartlett, P.M. 831; J. A. Garrett, W.M. 704; W. Dodd, P.M. 1194; A. A. Pendlebury, P.M. 1056; and Jesse Owens, J.W. 1366. The minutes of the previous meeting, and the report of the Audit Committee having been read and confirmed, ballots were taken for several candidates, all of which proved favourable. Bro. Scott was raised and Mr. Goddard initiated, after which Bro. John Savage, P.G.D., who has for many years performed the duty of installing the Masters of the old Egyptian Lodge, took the chair and proceeded to instal Bro. John Palmer into the chair of K.S.—a ceremony which he performed in a deeply-impressive and eloquent style. The following brethren were then invested as officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Harrison, S.W.; Atkins, J.W.; Todd, P.M., Treas.; Buss, P.M., Sec.; Lambie, S.D.; Green, J.D.; Tyerman, I.G.; Hales, D.C.; Payne, P.M., W. Steward; Shepherd, Org.; Riley and Gullock, Tylers. Great regret at Bro. Todd's absence through ill health was expressed by all present. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet in the large hall, no less than eighty brethren sitting down to table. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were heartily given and received, especial enthusiasm being evinced when the national song, "God bless the Prince of Wales" was sung by the musical brethren. Our space will not permit us to insert the many able speeches made by the W.M., the Grand Officers, P.M.'s, visitors, and other brethren; but there is one toast which we cannot pass over—namely, "The Health of the worthy Secretary, Bro. H. G. Buss"—a proposition which was accompanied by the presentation of a splendid gold chain and locket, value about thirty guineas, in recognition of the many services rendered by Bro. Buss to the lodge during a long series of years.—Bro. Savage, P.G. Deacon, having been deputed to present this handsome gift, said it gave him the greatest pleasure to be the medium of tendering to Bro. Buss, on behalf of the lodge, a tribute of the respect in which he was held by all the members. He (Bro. Savage) had known the Egyptian Lodge for a considerable period—in fact, he had first entered Grand Lodge as a Warden thereof; and during that time he had also known Bro. Buss, whose services were about to be so properly and so gratefully acknowledged by the brethren. (Cheers.) After some further graceful allusions to the happy occasion, Bro. Savage concluded by placing around the neck of the esteemed Secretary the chain voted to him by the lodge; and Bro. Buss, in responding to the toast of his health, returned thanks in warm and energetic language for the beautiful gift he had received, and resumed his seat amidst great applause. The old reputation of the "mummies" for hospitality was fully sustained at this meeting, and every visitor left with good wishes for the prosperity of the lodge, and a hope that he might again be invited to a similar happy gathering at a future installation.

Lodge of Regularity, No. 91.—The meeting of this lodge held on the 8th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, was of unusual interest, as besides the two ceremonies of passing and raising, the brethren met for the installation of their W.M. for the coming year, Bro. L. J. Frost. The installation, as well as the two other ceremonies, were admirably carried out by Bro. Radcliffe, a member of the lodge, and one of the best working Masons in the Craft. The lodge being duly closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was excellently served in Mr. Francatell's best style. After the cloth was removed, the usual toasts were proposed in short but appropriate terms by the W.M., who this year also serves as Grand Steward, and who on proposing the health of the Prince of Wales, took occasion to refer to the gratifying manner in which the few remarks he had made in the last Grand Lodge relating to Danish Masonry (the W.M. being himself a Dane) had been received. The visitors present were Bros. Binckes, Webster, Beal, Sutro, Peebles, McCabe, Averillo, and Sairle Clark, and as the W.M. expressed his inability to make a choice who was to return thanks to the Visitors' toast, he requested each of the visitors to speak for himself, which led to a series of amusing and characteristic speeches. The proceedings were enlivened by some excellent music under the direction of Mr. Nelson Henry, of the Stella Glee Union. The soloists were Miss McDonnell, and Messrs. Henry White and Nelson Henry. Bro. Beecroft, P.G.O., a member of the lodge also charmed the brethren by his masterly execution on the piano. The brethren separated about eleven, after having spent a most agreeable evening.

The Lodge of Asaph, No. 1319.—This lodge held its regular monthly at Freemasons' Hall, on the 5th inst. The business of the meeting was the passing of Bros. Hutchins and Hodges, and raising Bros. F. Pritchard and Kaufmann. Both ceremonies were impressively performed by the W.M., Bro. Charles Coote. Propositions were taken for Messrs. J. Ratcliffe (Professor of Music), Henry Lazarus (do.), and G. R. Egerton (do.), for initiation, and for joining members the names of Bros. Ambrose Austin, concert agent, and Henry Nicholson, Professor of Music, were submitted. There were present: Bros. C. Coote, P.M., W.M.; E. J. Jones, P.M., I.P.M.; J. M. Chamberlin, P.M., S.W.; James Weaver, P.M., P.G.O. Middlesex, J.W.; E. C. Frewin, S.D.; C. S. Jykell, J.D.; W. A. Tinney, I.G.; H. J. Tinney, Org.; W. H. Stephens, D.C.; J. Boatwright, T. Edgar, C. Harper (jun.), H. Montague, G. Horton, J. M. Ball, H. Synders, W. A. Easton, J. Egerton, J. Baker, E. Terry, J. Strachan, W. Graves, L. Silberberg, E. Swanborough, G. A. Compton, E. H. Reynolds, and J. Gilbert, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. Strachan, G. Pritchard, F. Pritchard, C. Kaufmann, and J. Coppey. The lodge was closed with solemn prayer.

PROVINCIAL.

Wright, P.M., P. Prov. G.W.; T. H. Winder, Prov. G. Purs.; James Pilkington, S.W.; W. Slater, J.W.; John Sharples, Treas.; G. P. Brockbank, P.M., Sec.; J. Frederick Brindley was raised to the degree of M.M., and Bro. E. Ainsworth passed to the degree of F.C., both ceremonies being performed by Bro. Robert Harwood, P.M. Three candidates for initiation were proposed, and the lodge was then closed.

SOUTHEND.—The Priory Lodge, No. 1000.—The annual meeting of this flourishing lodge for the installation of Bro. Samuel Cox, of Shoeburyness, the W.M.-elect for the ensuing year, took place at the lodge-room in the Middleton Hotel, Southend, on Tuesday, the 30th ult., the ceremony of installation being very ably performed by W. Bro. William Pissey, P.M. 160, P.P.J.G.W. Essex. The W.M. appointed his officers as follows: Bros. J. A. Wardell, S.W.; J. R. Hemman, J.W.; Frederick Wood, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., re-elected Treas.; W. Smith Cox, P.M., P.P.G. Sword-bearer, re-appointed Sec.; Rev. T. W. Herbert, P.M., P.P.G. Chap. Worcestershire, re-appointed Chaplain; Albert Lucking, S.D.; E. E. Phillips, J.D.; H. Rowley, P.M., P.P.S.G.D., Dir. of Cers.; W. Frost and W. J. Chignell, Stewards; W. Chaplin, I.G.; B. Notley, P.M., Tyler. At the close of the business, the brethren, about thirty in number, sat down to an excellent banquet, provided by Mrs. Cantor, of the Middleton Hotel. The following Provincial Grand Officers (past and present), P.M.'s, and visitors, were present: W. Bros. Frederick Wood, P.M., P.P.S.G.W.; Rev. F. B. Shepherd, P.M. 276, P.P.S.G.W.; Wm. CHESHIRE.—Oakwood Lodge, No. 1126.—This lodge held its St. John's Festival at the Stock Dove Inn, Romiley, near Marple, on Thursday, the 1st inst. The lodge was opened in due form at four o'clock, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and the ballot taken for Bro. Frank R. Dickson as joining member, which was declared unanimous in his favour. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when Bro. Henry Howard, P.P.G.J.D., presented Bro. James H. Hartley, W.M.-elect, for installation. The ceremony was performed in a most pleasing and effective manner by Bro. John Beresford, P.M. 104. The following brethren were appointed by the new W.M. to the respective offices: Joseph Hartley, I.P.M.; John Wood, P.G.R. Eng., S.W.; Frank R. Dickson, J.W.; Thomas Smith, M.D., Treas.; Henry Howard, P.P.G.J.D., Sec.; Joseph Buckley, S.D.; John H. Patten, J.D.; John Haughton, I.G.; and Richard Wilkinson, Tyler. The lodge was closed a little before six o'clock, when the brethren adjourned to a most excellent banquet, and the evening was spent in peace, love, and harmony. Amongst the visitors and brethren present we noticed Bros. S. W. Wilkinson, P.M. 322, P.P.G.D.C.; John Swindells, P.M. 323, P.G. HINDPOOL.—Hinapool Lodge, No. 1225.—The brethren of this lodge were very much gratified on the occasion of an emergency meeting, on the 1st inst., at hearing a lecture on the 1st tracing-board, delivered by Bro. George Cornfield, P.M. The attendance was numerous, as the W.M., in the circular calling the lodge, exhorted the brethren not to neglect the opportunity, which the lecture provides, for an insight into Masonic formula, symbols, and sentiment; and which, in his lodge, he observed it had hitherto been difficult to find time for, through the numerous admissions which had taken place for a long time past. The lecturer commanded the attention of his hearers in a marked manner, the result of which was that the lodge passed the following highly complimentary resolution, moved by Bro. Worrall, P.M., and seconded by Bro. Davies: "That the best thanks of the lodge is due to Bro. Cornfield, P.M., for the pleasure which the lecture on the first tracing-board has afforded, its efficient manner of delivery, and the instructive tendency which its application exhibits at the hands of Bro. Cornfield." The only other business of the evening was the raising of Bro. Ashlumer, of Newbarns, which was done by the W.M., Bro. Ounandz, in his customary effective manner.

HAMPTON, MIDDLESEX.—Burdett Lodge, No. 1293.—The second anniversary meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court, on the 27th ultimo, and was very numerous attended. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. R. Wentworth Little, P.M., Prov. G. Secretary, and in the course of the evening he initiated three gentlemen into the Order, viz., Messrs. Coalbank, Bindoff, and Evans. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when the W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. John Hervey, G. Secretary, who had kindly consented to instal the W.M.-elect, Bro. Kenyon, as he had previously installed the two first Masters, Bros. Col. Burdett and Little. It is needless to add that the ceremony was performed to perfection, and the Installing Master received the special thanks of Bro. Kenyon and the lodge for his ready compliance with their wishes, and for the great ability with which he had conducted the work. The officers were then invested as follows: Bros. R. W. Little, I.P.M., and Treas.; Major H. W. Palmer, Prov. G. Steward, S.W. (by proxy); D. R. Still, J.W.; Rev. D. Shaboe, Prov. G.C., Chap.; G. Kenning, Prov. G.D., Sec.; Captain A. B. Donnthorne, S.D.; H. Phythian, J.D.; T. H. Wiles, I.G.; J. Weaver, Org.; S. Rosenthal, D.C.; H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treas., Wine Steward; and F. Keily, Collecting Steward. The sum of £5 was then voted to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, also five guineas for a jewel to the retiring Master, and several propositions having been received, the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet. The new W. Master proved himself to be the right man in the right place by the geniality of his demeanour, and the hearty manner in which he proposed the several toasts, which were responded to in the following order: "The Grand Officers," by Bros. Hervey, G. Sec., and R. W. Stewart, J.G. Deacon; "The R.W. Prov. Grand Master," Colonel Burdett; "The Provincial Grand Officers," Bro. Little, Prov. G. Sec., with whose name it was specially coupled; "The Initiates," Bro. Evans, a ready and pleasing speaker; "The Visitors," Bros. J. Coutts (G. Purs.), Boyd (A.G. Purs.), F. Binckes (P.G. Steward), &c.; "The Officers," Bro. Still, J.W.; and, of course, the W.M.'s health was given in the usual order, the proposer being Bro. Hervey, who spoke in high terms of Bro. Kenyon's good qualities. The Tyler's toast was then announced, and the proceedings of this pleasant reunion terminated. We regret not having a full list of the brethren present, but besides the officers they comprised, as already indicated, Bros. Col. Burdett, Hervey, Stewart, Coutts, and Boyd, Grand Officers; F. Binckes and E. Baxter, P.G. Stewards England; J. Self (M.D.), D. R. Adams, R. Boncey, and W. H. Hubbard, P.M.'s; Major E. H. Finney, and E. H. Finney, jun.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. Sergt.-major Silk, a candidate for initiation, being in attendance, was introduced and initiated, the W.M. performing the ceremony and giving the charge in a style which portends well for his term of office. Bro. Captain Richardson presented the working tools in his usual impressive manner. Bros. J. Battersby and J. Lynch, 2nd Dragoon Guards, and G. Holmes, 7th Hussars, were then balloted for and unanimously accepted as joining members. The questions appertaining to the first degree were put by the W.M. for the information of the newly-initiated. Bro. S. Eve, P.G.S.W. Hants., was requested to represent the Aldershot Camp Lodge on the Provincial Charity Committee. Corp. Russell, Royal Engineers, was proposed as a candidate for initiation. Some other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer about 8.30 p.m.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

PROVINCIAL.

IPSWICH.—Prudence Encampment, No. 75.—This encampment met at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, for the purpose of installing the E.C.-elect, Sir Kt.

Emra Holmes, 2nd G. Capt. of the Lines of England, Post Prov. G. Almoner of Northumberland, Prov. G. Reg. of Suffolk and Cambridge. The impressive ceremonial was conducted by Sir Kt. John Pitcher, P.E.C., Past Prov. G. Capt. Suffolk and Cambridge, assisted by Sir Kt. Dr. Mills. The E.C. then installed the following Sir Knights as his officers for the ensuing year: J. Franks, Prelate; G. S. Golding, 1st Capt.; Dr. Beaumont, R.V., 2nd Capt.; G. S. Findley, P.E.C., Reg.; J. Pitcher, P.E.C., Treas.; P. Cornell, Almoner; Capt. Terry, 60th Rifles, Expert; S. B. King, 1st Standard-bearer; A. J. Barber, 2nd Standard-bearer; Capt. Hales, 27th Inniskillings, 1st Herald; Capt. Ormsby, 2nd Herald; A. J. Barber, P.G.O., Org.; and George Spalding, Equerry. A loyal address, sent down for that purpose by the Grand Chancellor of the Order, Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Q.C., LL.D., was signed by the companions present, congratulating her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales on the recovery of his Royal Highness from his late dangerous illness. The address, which will be magnificently illuminated on vellum, and signed by the whole of the members of this distinguished Order, numbering some 4,000 in England and Wales, will be presented at an early date. Letters were received from Sir Kts. Capt. Philips, P.G.C. Suffolk and Cambridge; Vigne, P.P.G.C. Dorsetshire; J. M. P. Montagu, D.P.G.C. Dorsetshire; Sir Patrick Colquhoun, G. Chancellor; Rev. R. N. Sanderson, D.P.G.C. Suffolk and Cambridge; &c., expressing great regret at their inability to attend on the occasion. The E.C. was instructed to make the necessary inquiries as to working the Order of Malta, which the encampment, under its charter, is empowered to give, and to report at the next meeting as to the expense attending the same. At the banquet which succeeded the usual loyal toasts were given, that of "The Prince of Wales" being received with especial fervour. In proposing "The P.G.C., Sir Kt. Philips," the E.C. dwelt upon his many knightly qualities and deserved popularity in the province. The toast was responded to with great cordiality by the Sir Knights present.

FOREIGN.

GIBRALTAR.—Calpe Encampment, No. 60.—One of the most successful meetings of this encampment took place on Thursday, the 11th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Gibraltar. The summonses notified that the business of the evening would be the installation of no less than four candidates. Punctually at the time appointed Comp. Hardy and Lonsdale (74th Highlanders), the Chevalier Marinucia (Italian Consul), and Hepper were in attendance, and having undergone the necessary preparation, were admitted into the encampment, and duly installed as Knights Templar. The worthy E.C., Sir Kt. Balfour Cockburn, presided, being most ably supported by Sir Kts. Carver as Prelate; Lyon Campbell as 1st Capt.; Andrews as 2nd Capt.; Richardson as Expert; and Haynes as Capt. of the Lines. After the ceremony of installation, the E.C. notified that his next duty was to proceed with the presentation of P.E.C.'s jewels to Sir Kts. Alton and Dantez. These jewels had been unanimously voted to them, and they had but recently arrived out from England. These distinguished knights having been placed before the E.C., marshalled by Sir Kt. Ellison, the senior knight of the encampment, and P.E.C. Sir Kt. Spry, a well-known member of the Plymouth Encampment, Sir Kt. Balfour Cockburn observed that it would be out of place and unbecoming on his part to say anything in eulogy of two knights whose good Masonic deeds and chivalrous conduct had for many years contributed so materially towards the welfare and prosperity of the Calpe Encampment. He trusted that the jewels which he had now the honour of placing on their breasts would be pleasing mementoes of this auspicious and gratifying ceremony for many, many years to come, and that they would be cherished and preserved by their children and children's children as tangible proofs of the honour and estimation in which their ancestors had been held.—Sir Kt. Alton returned thanks in that felicitous manner so peculiarly his own, and Sir Kt. Dantez also responded in suitable terms. So crowded a meeting as this had never been known, every member of the encampment being present.—Before closing, the E.C. expressed his regret at the changes which were about to take place in the garrison, and which would necessarily lead to the withdrawal from the encampment of very many knights. More especially he alluded to the officers of the 74th Highlanders, to whom the encampment was much indebted for their zealous and warm support, and he desired that an expression of sympathy and earnest wish for the future welfare and prosperity of these gallant knights should be recorded in the minute book, coupling the same with the name of Sir Kt. Capt. Lyon Campbell.—This was carried by acclamation, and Sir Kt. Lyon Campbell rose and begged, on behalf of himself and his brother officers, to thank the E.C. and Sir Knights for the kindly expression of their sentiments.

INSTRUCTION.

METROPOLITAN.

Eastern Star Lodge, No. 95.—A gathering of nearly sixty brethren took place at the above lodge, held at the Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, on Monday, the 5th instant, to witness the working of the fifteen sections by brethren of the Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, under the able guidance of Bro. James Brett, P.M., P.Z., P.A.G.P. So large a concourse seldom assembles at a Lodge of Instruction, and proves the high esteem in which the eminent brother who presided is held. Taken as a whole, each one of the brethren did his duty with marked efficiency. A vote of thanks and honorary membership to Bro. Brett and the brethren who assisted him was carried with great applause, and a most delightful evening's proceedings terminated. The following brethren worked the sections: Bros. A. W. Stead, Robbins, J. Shaw, C. Nash, W. W. Smith, Annett, Stacey, G. Lemann, Mander, Hogard, and Ashby.

FREDERICK CHARLES GATES,
AGED 7½ YEARS,

Son of the late Bro. JAMES HAYDEN GATES, of Clapham, Surrey, Builder, who died in June, 1871, after a long and painful illness, leaving a Widow and seven children totally unprovided for, his severe sufferings from hereditary disease having, during the previous two years, incapacitated him from attending to his business pursuits. Bro. Gates was initiated in the Panmure Lodge, 720, served the offices and

ELECTION, MAY, 1872.

THE favour of your Votes and Interest is earnestly solicited on behalf of

WILLIAM ALLISON,
AGED 62 YEARS.

He has been a Mason 27 years, having been initiated into the Barton Lodge, No. 733, in Hamilton, Canada West, in 1844; Exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter, No. 733, in 1845; Joined the Union Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, in 1848. Became a Knight Templar in 1856. He suffered a considerable time from disease of the throat, rendering it necessary for him, thirteen years ago, to undergo an operation; the result of which and old age unfits him to contribute anything towards his own support. He is entirely dependent on the small sum he receives from three Lodges and one Chapter as their Tyler. He was formerly in good circumstances, having been a Foreman in a

THE MYSTIC MASONS OF THE EAST.
 (From the Royal Cornwall Gazette.)

“The heathen world, confined to the exclusive pursuit of operative architecture, excelled greatly in every branch of that noble science; for, though the Israelites had improved every opportunity of cultivating a taste for the liberal sciences, they were far exceeded by the inhabitants of Tyre in these pursuits. Thus the epithet Sidonian became proverbial for every elegant and scientific attainment. The city of Tyre and the temple of Dagon, built by the Phœnicians at Gaza, were esteemed master-pieces of art, and rendered the name of the architects deservedly celebrated throughout the world. This temple was so artfully constructed that the whole weight of the edifice was supported by two slender pillars only, and exhibited the taste as well as the judgement of Sanconiatho, whose fame is transmitted to posterity, though the building gave way under the giant grasp of Sampson the Nazarite.”—Dr. Oliver's "Antiquities of Freemasonry."

Yes! But who taught the Phœnicians how to build? In attempting to gain any knowledge on this point, we travel eastward, and still eastward; finding, as we grope our way in the darkness, that, whatever the spiritual light which comes to masonry through the tent-dwelling Israelites, evidences of most wonderful operative skill are found among the people we call “Heathen.” One of the uninitiated myself, I have thought, for a long time, that without departing one jot from the cultivation of religious and moral and beneficent schemes, Freemasons might take an intelligent interest in many pursuits which would tend to make the the duties and pleasures of the Lodge still more agreeable. That an attentive Mason should view, or read of, the magnificent modern structures which his predecessors unquestionably built, without emotion, I cannot conceive. A love of architecture paves the way not only to a due appreciation of the form, the adornments, and the symbolic decorations of his Lodge, but incites the wish that the place in which he assembles should, outwardly, arrest the gaze and admiration of “profane,” as well as, inwardly, satisfy his own taste. To the enquiring Mason (at least, so it seems to me) the monuments of antiquity, whether in his own country, or in the eastern or western hemispheres, should have a thousand attractions. For him the discoveries of a Wilkinson or a Layard, in one direction, or of a Stepha or a Taylor in the other, ought to possess a twofold charm. Symbolism or hieroglyphics, the explorations in Palestine, ceremonial, numismatics, even heraldry, ought to yield him hours of pleasant reading, and additions to his store of knowledge; and in books of travel he will constantly find new objects repleat with information and allusions which are of special value to him. Who can read of the stupendous ruins of the East and the West—of the palaces of Cambodia and Palenque—erected by nations of builders whose very names are unknown, but who must have had their Hiram and Hardoim, their expert master masons, stone-squarers, hewers, and builders, without an ardent desire to learn something definite of the extinct and nameless, but talented, people.

These thoughts arise after a perusal of a volume, not long since published, “The English Governess at the Siamese Court.” Mrs. Anna Harriette Leonowens spent six years of her life in the royal palace of the capital of Siam, and was employed in useful and successful effort to impart a knowledge of English to the numerous wives and children of the monarch who is not long dead. With all her trials, hairbreadth escapes, and insight into court life at Bangkok, we have nothing to do now. But the concluding pages of her volume, descriptive of the ruins of Cambodia, in its day one of the most powerful of the eastern empires—have filled my mind with awe and wonder. In the hope that others may share these feelings, I have transcribed some portions of her account. As I said before, it occurs forcibly to me that if one class of readers more than another should be specially interested in what follows, it ought to be the “brethren of the mystic tie.”

Two days' journey from Bangkok towards Kabin, through tortuous mountain track and tangled jungle, past the remains of a magnificent palace at Phanomok, brought the adventurous Mrs. Leonowens to an ancient roadway, elevated 10 or 12 feet above the swampy lowlands, “now diving into the depths of the forest,” now in apparently “eccentric sweep,” not “a vestige of any other rain near it; and the long lines it here and there shows, ghostly white in the moonlight, seems like spectral strands of sand.” This isolated ridge was once the great highway of ancient Cambodia, and, pursuing it for many miles, the travellers came to the work of the unknown bridge builders.

“Taphan Hin (the stone bridge), and the finer and more artistic Taphan Thevada (the angel's bridge), are both imposing works. Arches—still resting firmly on their foundations, buttressed by fifty great pillars of stone—support a structure about five hundred feet long and eighty broad. The road-bed of these bridges is formed of immense blocks or beams of stone, laid one upon another, and so adjusted that their very weight serves to keep the arches firm.

“Having rested and supped, we again followed our guides over the foaming stream, and re-crossed the stone bridge on foot, marvelling at the work of a race of whose existence the western nations knew nothing—who have no name in history, yet who builded in a style surpassing in boldness of conception, grandeur of proportions, and delicacy of design, the best works of the modern world—stupendous, beautiful, enduring!

“The material is mostly freestone, but a flinty conglomerate appears wherever the work is exposed to the action of the water.

“Formerly a fine balustrade crowned the bridge on both sides, but it has been broken down. The ornamental parts of these massive structures seem to have been the only portions the invading vandals of the time could destroy.

“The remains of the balustrade show that it consisted of a series of long quarry stones, on the ridges of which caryatidian pillars, representing the seven-headed serpent, supported other slabs grooved along the rim to receive rain-convey-stones with arabesque sculptures, affording a hint of ancient Cambodian art.

On the left bank we found the remains of a staircase leading down to the water, not far from a spot where a temple formerly stood.

“Next morning we crossed the Taphan Teph, or heavenly Bridge—like the Taphan Hin and the Taphan Thevada—a work of almost superhuman magnitude and solidity.”

Crossing the Paleng River by another of these bridges—one wonders if the Cambodians had their Masonic bridge builders, as we had in the Middle Ages—Mrs. Leonowens came to the town of Seimrap, and then started for the ruins of Nagh-Kon or Ongkooor, supposed to have been the royal city of the ancient kingdom of Cambodia; which are thus referred to:—

“In the heart of this lonely region, in a district still bearing the name of Ongkooor, and quite apart from the ruined temples which abound hard by, we found architectural remains of such exceeding grandeur, with ruins of temples and palaces which must have been raised at so vast a cost of labour and treasure, that we were overwhelmed with astonishment and admiration.

“What manner of people were these?
 “Whence came their civilization and their culture?”

“And why and whither did they disappear from among the nations of the earth?”

“The site of the city is in itself unique. Chosen originally for the strength of its position, it yet presents none of the features which should mark the metropolis of a powerful people. It seems to stand aloof from the world, exempt from its passions and aspirations, and shunning even its thrift. Confronting us with its towering portal, overlaid with colossal hieroglyphics, the majestic ruin of the Watt stands like a petrified dream of some Michael Angelo of the giants—more impressive in its loneliness, more elegant and animated in its grace, than aught that Greece and Rome have left us, and addressing us with a significance all the sadder and more solemn for the desolation and barbarism which surround it.

“Vainly may we seek for any chronicle of the long line of monarchs who must have swayed the sceptre of the once powerful empire of Maka Naghkon. Only a vague tradition has come down, of a celestial prince, to whom the fame of founding the great temple is supposed to belong; and of an Egyptian king, who for his sacrilege, was changed into a leper. An interesting statue representing the latter, still stands in one of the corridors—somewhat mutilated, but sufficiently well preserved to display a marked contrast to the physical type of the present race of Cambodians. These magnificent edifices seemed to have been designed for places of worship rather than of royal habitations, for nearly all are Buddhist temples.”

The temple of Ongkooor is spoken of by our authoress as the most beautiful and best preserved of these glorious remains:—

“At each angle of the temple are two enormous lions, hewn, pedestal and all, from a single block. A flight of stone steps leads up to the first platform of terraces. To reach the main entrance from the north staircase we traverse a noble causeway, which midway crosses a deep and wide moat that seems to surround the building.

“The main entrance is by a long gallery, having a superb central tower, with two others of less height on each side. The portico of each of the three principal towers is formed by four projecting columns, with a spacious staircase between. At either extremity are similar porticos, and beyond these is a very lofty door, or gateway, covered with gigantic hieroglyphs, where gods and warriors hang as if self-supported between earth and sky. Then comes groves of columns that in girth and height might rival the noblest oaks. Every pillar and every part of the wall is so crowded with sculptures that the whole temple seems hung with petrified tapestry.”

The different compartments are covered with sculpture, as the English governess remarks elsewhere—“myrtle symbols, to be deciphered only by the initiated. Ah! could I but have read them as in a book, construing all their allegorical significance, how near might I not have come to the distracting secret of this people! But our main business is with the handiwork of the wonderful builders, to whom, working in the earliest ages of the world, according to scripture chronology, the secrets of architecture, mechanics, &c., must have been mastered:—

"The entire structure is roofed with tiers of hewn stone, which is also sculptured; and remains of a ceiling may still be traced. The symmetrical wings terminate in three spacious pavilions, and this imposing colonnade, which is conspicuous from a great distance, and forms an appropriate vestibule to so grand a temple.

"Traversing the building, we cross another and finer causeway, formed of great blocks of stone carefully joined, and bordered with a handsome balustrade, partly in ruins, very massive, and covered with sculptures.

On either side are six great platforms, with flights of steps; and on each we find remains of the seven headed serpent,—in some parts mutilated, but on the whole sufficiently preserved to show distinctly the several heads, some erect as if guarding the entrance, others drawn back in a threatening attitude. A smaller specimen is nearly perfect and very beautiful.

"We passed into an adytum, warded by gigantic effigies, whose mystic forms we could hardly trace; above us that ponderous roof, tier on tier of solid stone, upheld by enormous columns, and incrustated with strange carving. Everywhere we found fresh objects of wonder.

"At the foot of the terrace are artificial lakes, and the terrace opens into a grand court, crowded with a forest of magnificent columns with capitals, each hewn from a single block of stone. The basement, like every other part of the building, is ornamented in varied and animated styles; and every slab of the vast pile is covered with exquisite carvings representing the lotos, the lily, and the rose, with arabesques wrought with the chisel with astonishing taste and skill.

"As the four cardinal points of the horizon naturally form a cross, called phram, so we invariably find the cross in the plan of these religious monuments of ancient Cambodia, and even in the corridors, intersecting each other at right angles. These corridors are roofed with great blocks of stone, projecting over each other, so as to form an arch, and, though laid without cement, so accurately adjusted as to leave scarcely a trace of the joinings. The galleries of the temple also form a rectangle. The ceilings are vaulted, and the roofs supported by double rows of columns cut from a single block.

"On the south side we found representations of an ancient military procession. The natives interpret these as three connected allegories, symbolizing heaven, earth, and hell: but it is more probable that they record the history of the methods by which the savage tribes were reclaimed by the colonizing foreigners.

"This mighty pile—the wondrous Nakhkon Watt—is nearly three miles in circumference; the walls are from seventy to eighty feet high, and twenty feet thick.

"We wandered in astonishment, and almost with awe, through labyrinths of court, cloisters, and chambers, encountering at every turn some new marvel, unheard of, unbeamed of, until then. Even the walls of the outer court were sculptured with holy histories of wars and conquests, in forms that seem to live and fight again. Prodigious in size and number are the blocks of stone piled in those walls and towers. We counted five thousand and three hundred solid columns. What a mighty host of builders there must have been! And what could have been their engines and their means of transport, seeing that the mountains from which the stones were quarried were nearly two day's journey from the temple?

"All the mouldings, sculptures, and bas-reliefs seem to have been executed after the walls and pillars were in their places; and everywhere the stones are fitted together in a manner so perfect that the joinings are not easy to find. There is neither mortar nor mark of the chisel; the surfaces are as smooth as polished marble.

"Next morning our elephants bore us back to Siemrap through an avenue of colonnades similar to that by which we had come; and as we advanced we could still descry other gates and pillars far in the distance, marking the line of some ancient avenue to this amazing temple."

And here we must leave this most interesting subject. M. Mouhot and Dr. Bastian have witnessed the same wonderful ruins. We must wait until a second Belzoni, who was made a Freemason late in life, and expressed his heartfelt regret that he was not earlier initiated, thoroughly explores these stupendous and mystic remains. Who shall say that there is not deposited in some cavity, carefully prepared by the skilled stone-cutters, a roll, a papyrus, a parchment, cylinder—something which will throw a light on the nation—perhaps on the guilds, societies, fraternities, Freemasons, of the Year of the World 200—who planned and built in massive masonry temples and palaces well nigh indestructible?

PRESENTATION OF A TESTIMONIAL TO BRO. SAMUEL WATKINS, TREAS. AND P.M. 212 AND 1076.

On the 7th instant, at the Victoria Tavern, Barking-road, E., a testimonial was presented to its proprietor, Bro. Samuel Watkins, subscribed for by a number of members of the above lodges, which consisted of an illuminated testimonial on vellum, and also a valuable diamond ring. The occasion was celebrated by a dinner, at which between 20 and 30 sat down.

The Chairman of the Testimonial Committee, Bro. David Swabe, P.M. 212, and Past President of Euphrates Benevolent Fund, who had shown such great interest in the matter from its very formation, presided on this occasion.

After having proposed the usual loyal toasts, he alluded in eulogistic terms to the various merits of Bro. Watkins, not only in his above-mentioned qualities, but also as the President of the Benevolent Fund attached to the Euphrates Lodge, which position he has held for several years. He said that Bro. Watkins was, when occasion required, always ready to give his valuable services in promoting the welfare of all those who have ever asked for his assistance; that he was ever ready to lend a helping hand to any one in distress who might claim his assistance and that he was one who might be looked up to for the high estimation in which he had ever been held in the craft in particular, and by all those who knew him in general.

The various parts of the Chairman's speech met with rounds of applause, proving the hearty concurrence in the Chairman's remarks.

Bro. Watkins, in very feeling terms, duly acknowledged the kindness of the brethren in the unexpected mark of their appreciation of his past services, and expressed himself highly gratified with so valuable a present. He assured the brethren that, as long as he lived, he would cherish it with lively remembrances of that evening, and that his endeavours would always be to make himself useful to every one in general and the craft in particular. He hoped, if it should please T.G.A.O.T.U. to take him away from this world, the testimonial would be handed down as a heirloom to his children, bright and untarnished as he had received it that day.

Bro. Steam, P.M. 212, proposed the health of the Chairman, and in dwelling on the merits of Bro. Swabe, as a man and a Mason, thanked him for his indefatigable exertions in guiding and presiding at all the meetings of the Testimonial Committee, prior to the presentation of. He at the same time stated that Bro. Swabe had always been a most zealous member of the Euphrates Lodge, and that when Bro. Swabe was President of the Euphrates Benevolent Fund, he had done all in his power to make it prosperous and successful.

The toast of the W.M. of the Euphrates, Bro. William Field, coupled with that of the I.P.M., Bro. J. P. Frank, was then given and appropriately responded to.

In conclusion, the toast of Mrs. Watkins, the hostess, was given, who had so ably catered for the requirements of the dinner, and had superintended the culinary department. The toast was most heartily received and responded to with three times three.

The entertainment of the evening was enlivened by various capital songs.

Original Correspondence.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am always obliged when any brother directs my attention to matters which he conceives require explanation, and am ever anxious to correct errors that may creep into any of my articles on the above or kindred subjects. I have therefore referred to and carefully perused my article on "the Israelitish Origin of the Anglo Saxon Race" as published in the Freemason of January 27th, and fail to discover any error at the parts indicated by "J. B. 731;" nor do I clearly learn from his letter of what he complains, unless it be that it is stated "the descendants of the ten tribes were living in Armenia and other parts of Asia Minor."

J. B. seems to think that only nine tribes were carried off by the Assyrians, and if he looks upon all Ephraim and Manasseh as one tribe, namely, that of Joseph, he may have some warrant for his belief, but if he will refer to 14 chap. Joshua, v. 4, he will find that:—

"The children of Joseph were two tribes, Ephraim and Manasseh—therefore, they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, save cities to dwell in."

Again in chap. 17, we read, "the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying: Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am a great people," &c.

"And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim, and to Manasseh, saying, thou art a great people and hast great power, thou shalt not have but one lot only."

Joshua then gave the children of Joseph an additional lot, consisting of a mountain and woodland, and he told them to drive out the Canaanites.

In the 16th and 17th chap. of Joshua, there is a precise account of the manner in which the land allotted to the "children of Joseph" was divided between the "tribes" of Ephraim and Manasseh.

J. B. will find that these two families are, from the time of Moses, nearly always spoken of as distinct and separate tribes, and that the house of Levi had no inheritance as "the Lord was their inheritance." We are therefore perfectly justified in saying that ten tribes were carried away by the Assyrians.

It is not the first time that the error of assigning to the kingdom of Israel only nine tribes has arisen: and in defiance of historical truth and the scripture narrative, some people still persist in attaching three tribes, namely, Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, to the kingdom of Judah. I hope I have conclusively shewn, in the article referred to by J. B., that at first the house of David, under Rehoboam, at the time of the rebellion, was left entirely alone, but that in conformity with God's promise, one tribe (Benjamin) was given back to David. As regards the Levites, they were scattered throughout the whole of the twelve tribes, and their duty was to minister to the people, even of the revolted tribes, and they no doubt would have continued to do so, if they had not been driven out by Jeroboam. The Levites, in company with many of the Israelites who remained true to their religious duties, resorted to Jerusalem when Jeroboam set up his golden calves in Bethel and Dan, but that is no reason why they should be counted as a tribe.

I hope Bro. J. B. will be satisfied that ten tribes were carried off by the Assyrians, and not nine only, and now ask where J. B. learns that "when Benjamin, in obedience to the warning of Christ, finally separated from Judah, they followed after the ten tribes at the final dispersion of the Jews, Judah and Levi." I am quite open to believe that, by the preaching of Christ and the apostles, the children of the tribe of Benjamin were in great measure, converted to being believers in his great mission, but I have no evidence that they joined the ten tribes in their exile. If Bro. J. B. can give any information on this point, it will be very acceptable.

Permit me to take the opportunity of replying to some other critics, who take exception to an observation in my letter, published Jan. 20th, in which I say that I can never understand where geographers get their information whereby they are enabled to trace with such apparent precision the boundaries of the several tribes of Israel. I am told I shall find this precise information in the book of Joshua, but on referring to this book I find little more than a recital of a number of names of places, which doubtless existed in the time of Moses and Joshua, but of whose precise locality we now can know next to nothing. We can, with tolerable accuracy determine the "whereabouts" of of the different tribes in reference to each other, but I contend that we have no data whereby to define boundaries with the accuracy usually claimed by geographers. It was this feeling which induced me to question the accuracy if the maps which place Bethel in Benjamin, even in defiance of the scripture narrative, which states facts totally irreconcilable with such an assumption.

It now only remains for me to correct a typographical error, which occurred in my article of Jan. 27th. The work "Historical Dissertations of the prophetic Scriptures" is ascribed to Mr. Matthew Huberston's; it should have been "Hubershon's."

I am, yours fraternally,
W. E. N. No. 766.

MASONIC BALLS.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

Dear Sir and Brother,—I conclude the P.G.M. of Somerset must have based his refusal upon the ground of the Ball being intended as a Craft assembly, and that he, consequently, had the right to prescribe in what costumes the company should attend. This inference, I think, must be correct, as his Lordship is not at the head of the High Degrees, and is very unlikely to usurp authority with which he is not duly invested.

It does not appear to me that any permission is required for wearing the decoration of the High Degrees, or of the Temple, any where or at any time, where they are not objected to; but seems to rest only with the discretion and good taste of the possessors.

Yours fraternally,
LUPUS.

HUMBER LODGE, (No. 57.)

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

Dear Sir and Brother,—At page 106 of last Saturday's Freemason, I was pleased to read a notice of the Humber Lodge, (57), of which I have the honour of being a member.

Permit me to point out an error in the concluding sentence.—You say the Building has few inferiors. I feel sure the writer intended to convey the direct opposite to that.

Also in the list of officers, W. Banks Stay should have been W. Banks Hay.

With great respect, I remain

Yours fraternally,
J. PRATT.

GRAND MASONIC BALL AT WHITEHAVEN.

Previous to last Friday, ten years had elapsed since the occurrence of a Masonic Ball in Whitehaven, and it may readily be conjectured that on the announcement being issued three weeks ago, no little interest was manifested in the novelty, both among craftsmen and the uninitiated. The fact of there being two lodges in the town, each with strong and influential membership rolls, was of itself sufficient to guarantee the assembly a success, for the empressment of the brethren belonging to the Sun, Square, and Compass Lodge, No. 191, and Lewis Lodge, No. 872, in all matters masonic, is beyond rival in the province. The ball was under the distinguished patronage, among others, of Brother the Right Hon. the Earl of Beetive, M.P., Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master; Brother Colonel Whitewell, M.P., Deputy Provincial Grand Master; Brother the Right Hon. the Earl of Lonsdale, Brother Lord Muncaster, and Bro. G. A. F. C. Bentinck, M.P.

The Town Hall was the appointed locale of the evening's enjoyment, and the visitors upon entering the salon, could not be oblivious to the fact that the committee of management had perfectly succeeded in transposing the dingy room into a magnificent terpsichorean palace. The staircase was carpeted and nicely ornamented; and the windows of the hall were draped with muslin curtains. The spacious floor was entirely covered with holland for the occasion, and the usual dirty walls had been coloured anew, at the expense of the committee. At one end of the hall blazed in jets the star of the five points, and, facing this, above the orchestra, was the conventional level of [the craft, also in gas. All around the hall, paintings, engravings, and flags were suspended, principally of a Masonic character, including the banner of the Provincial Grand Lodge, as also those of the Whitehaven Lodges, and a few handsome mirrors further tended, when the floor was covered with dancers, to heighten the splendour of the scene. Prominent amongst the paintings were portraits of the Earl of Zetland, the Most Worshipful Past Grand Master of England, and of Colonel Lowther, M.P. There was also a portrait of Bro. Patrick Quinn the oldest Freemason in Cumberland, who years ago did good service to the craft, and lives respected and honoured by his brethren. Large views were exhibited of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, at Wood Green, near London, and of the Royal Freemasons' School for Female Children at Battersea. A framed document, in illuminated writing, recorded that in 1866 the Sun, Square, and Compasses Lodge had subscribed a sufficient sum of money to the Royal Masonic Institution for the Sons of Indigent and Deceased Freemasons to secure four votes in perpetuity. A similar record stated that the Lewis Lodge had done precisely the same. It was interesting to notice a framed memoir, with portrait, of the Hon. Mrs. Aldworth, who, when Miss St. Leger, was installed a Mason, under circumstances well-known to the craft, and pretty generally familiar to the outside public. Hothouse plants, in ornamental vases, were also plentifully besprinkled here and there, and white and pink drapery was placed above the seats, which were unique and appropriate in their character, being composed principally of the new and superbly upholstered offices' chairs and ordinary seats belonging to the Lewis Lodge. In the hall was a refreshment buffet, loaded with everything, liquid and otherwise, calculated to restore exhausted nature after a long enjoyable waltz or gallop. It may be mentioned that, conspicuous above the entrance to the Town Hall, was the square and compasses, with the number of the old lodge, in gas jets.

The ladies who graced the ball-room by their presence looked most charming, and the dresses were elegant and fashionable. Many ladies were to be noticed emulating the brethren of the "mystic tie," in dress at least, a Royal Arch Mason's scarf here and there adorning the shoulders of not a few fair dancers; whilst one lady had, for a nonce, donned the sombre and funeral-looking baldric of a Knight Templar, minus, however, the sword. We likewise noticed one lady wearing the baldric of a Knight of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine. From the foregoing list of company it will be readily seen that a great proportion of the gentlemen were connected with the craft, and these all appeared in Masonic clothing, thus adding much to the brilliancy of the evening's enjoyment. Royal Arch Masons predominated, by the way, and it is an interesting point to adduce that pretty nearly all so attired belong to either lodge 191 or 872. The next prevailing feature in the adornments of the brethren was that of the blue and silver of Craft Masonry, and then there were two or three in the undress of the chivalric degree (the Red Cross and Templar Knights). The garter blue and gold clothing of the Provincial Grand Officers was also very numerous represented. One brother wore a Lambskin apron, curiously emblazoned with Masonic emblems, upwards of eighty years old, and originally belonging to the Worshipful Master of one of the most ancient of the Scotch lodges, that of the St. John's Lodge, Banff. The jewellery and similar ornaments of the more advanced Masons formed a noticeable feature in the display, the coat breasts of two or three gentlemen being absolutely resplendent with valuable craft decorations and costly marks of honour.

All things considered, the ball was in every respect a magnificent affair; in fact, it is no exaggeration to assert that, in point of numbers, beauty of the ladies, and attractiveness of the general entourage, the re-union may justly be chronicled as the ball of the season in Cumberland and Westmoreland. Much credit, too, is reflected on the members of the two lodges who had the arrangements in charge, and it is devoutly to be hoped that their endeavours on this occasion may only form the precursor of an annual gathering.

POOR AND DISTRESSED MASONS'.

During six years in which I acted as Secretary of the Lodge of St. Oswald, (1124), I found the duties of Almoner more vexatious than any portion of the work of a Secretary, until I adopted a plan which we have found to work admirably. It is this; I prepared a book for entering all cases of relief, in which there was space reserved for the signature and number of lodge of all recipients of relief.

When a party, called claiming sympathy, I never "prove" him (and by so doing give him a hint) but at once asked him for his Grand Lodge and private lodge certificate. If he could not produce this, there was an end of the matter, but if he did, then I asked him to sign the book. In one or two cases the applicant has not been able to write; in others his signature has not corresponded with the name on the certificate. In one case a man told me he had been a master-mason fifteen years; yet his certificate was not more than ten years old. In nine cases out of ten, I am sorry to say, the applicants were either impostors, or periodical mendicants. The book acts as a register, and saves a world of trouble and lying.

ASKREW ROBERTS.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Healing not Harmful.—No application has met with the same universal approbation for curing all external ailments as that which this unguent has received. Sores, deep ulcers, fætid discharges, burns, blistered surfaces, and many similar affections, are at once soothed, and set on the road to soundness, by Holloway's Ointment. With this Ointment and Pills the wealthy may save themselves much suffering, and the poor may help themselves to health, since these medicaments are reasonable in price, and can be purchased in every hamlet. They have effected cures of stiff joints, swelled legs, and lacerated limbs, and opened out the prospect of a happy future after hope of recovery had been given up.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF
DERBYSHIRE.

ADDRESS OF CONGRATULATION TO THE QUEEN.

On Monday, February 12th, 1872, pursuant to a summons which was duly forwarded to all members of the Provincial Grand Lodge, a Provincial Grand Lodge of Emergency was held in the Assembly Rooms, Derby, for the purpose of addressing the congratulations of the Freemasons of this province to Her Majesty and the Prince of Wales upon the convalescence of the Heir to the Throne of these realms.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened, in form, with solemn prayer, at half-past one o'clock, the V.W. Bro. H. C. Okeover, D.Prov.G.M., occupying the chair. The others officers were Bro. Gadsby, as D.Prov.G.M.; Bro. F. Campion, Pro. S.G.W.; Bro. R. Darwin, as Prov. J.G.W.; Bro. the Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, Prov.G. Chaplain, Bro. S. Taylor, Prov.G. Reg.; Bro. T. Cox, Pro.G. Treasurer; Bro. W. Naylor, Pro. G. Sec.; Bro. W. H. Marsden, Prov. G. Organist; Bro. J. Worsnop, Prov. G.P. There was a very large attendance of members from the remotest parts of the province.

The V.W. Bro. Okeover, proposed, and the W. Bro. Gadsby, seconded, the adoption by the Provincial Grand Lodge of the following loyal address to the Queen:—

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

"We, the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Antient, Free, and Accepted Masons of Derbyshire, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, humbly tender to your Majesty our sincere congratulations that the Great Architect of the Universe has been pleased in His infinite mercy to raise his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., from a bed of grievous sickness to his present satisfactory state of convalescence. We further sincerely trust that his Royal Highness will be speedily restored to perfect health, and that he may long be spared to his family, the nation, and the craft. In conclusion, we beg to assure your Majesty of our devoted and loyal attachment to your throne and person."

This was carried by acclamation.

Bro. the Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, Prov. Grand Chaplain, moved, and W. Bro. T. Cox, Prov. Grand Treasurer, seconded, a similar address of congratulation to Bro. H.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales. This was also carried by acclamation, and the two addresses were ordered to be engrossed upon velum and presented in the usual manner, through the M.W. Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon.

THE DISTRESSED MASONS OF CHICAGO.

It was announced from the chair that the Derbyshire Craft Lodges had contributed the sum of £74 2s. 6d. for the relief of poor and distressed Masons of Chicago. Their contribution had been sent to the Mayor of Chicago for distribution.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The grand stands raised by Messrs Willing and Co., the eminent contractors, along the route to be taken by the Royal Procession on Tuesday will not be the least interesting feature of the occasion. Built apparently to last for a century, they will be absolutely luxurious in their appointments. Refreshments of the finest quality will be supplied by Messrs. Trotman, the eminent contractors. Retiring rooms and lavatories will be provided. The stands will be adorned with flags, flowers, and banners by Messrs. Defries. They will be brilliantly illuminated by the same firm at night. Entrance will be arranged by which the crowd may be avoided, and altogether the thousands of occupants will have cause to congratulate themselves on the public spirit of this eminent firm, who have been especially fortunate in securing their stations only in those places where the whole procession will be seen.

THE BEST FIRST.—Turner's Tamarind Cough Emulsion for the Throat and Bronchia, 13d. and 2/9 per bot.—All wholesale houses in London and Liverpool, and any respectable Chemists.—[Advt.]

BALL OF THE SAINT JAMES'S UNION
LODGE, (No. 180.)

A Ball in connection with the above lodge took place on Friday evening last, the 16th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn, when about 300 members and friends were present.

Dancing commenced at 9 o'clock, and continued until about 12 o'clock, when the whole company adjourned to the splendid banqueting room, and partook of a sumptuous supper, provided by Mr. Francatelli. Everything that could be desired was provided. The arrangements were well considered, each table having the name of the Steward shown upon the board, and placed in the centre, in order that every one might refer direct to the Steward through whom they were introduced.

The following are the brethren who kindly officiated as Stewards, and all honour is due to them for the kind and gentlemanly manner in which they conducted the proceedings:—

Bros. L. Herf, W.M., (President); G. Bubb, W.M., (Vice President); A. Cameron, P.M., Treas.; H. A. Stacey, Sec.; T. Allen, P.M.; J. T. Woodstock, P.M.; W. Smithott, S.W.; A. Gallico, J.W.; G. J. Cremer, S.D.; J. W. Gillard, J.D.; C. Jackson, P.M.; J. R. Stacey, P.M.; J. Miles, T. A. Layland, F. Miceli, G. Bolton, A. Annett, J. J. Kent, J. A. Bayley, A. F. Bacharah, and A. Vivante.

The usual toasts were given, That of "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," was received with acclamation.

Dancing was afterwards resumed, which was kept up in a very spirited style until an early hour of the morning.

Bro. Adams, with his usual attention to the selection of stirring music, gave general satisfaction to all.

The Ball has been given with the intention of increasing the Masonic Benevolent Fund of the lodge, and the whole of the net proceeds will be handed over to that useful institution.

The Stewards in arranging the hall, had this philanthropic notion solely at heart, and it is believed that a good sum will be handed over.

The ball has, we hear, been a great success, and it is flattering to the officers and stewards, under whose direction the arrangements were carried out, to find that they have been earnestly solicited to give another next year, many having expressed their intention of attending.

Obituary.

BRO. W. R. HAYDEN.

Our columns have already announced the death of Bro. William Robert Hayden, Master Mason of Lodge Caledonian, Edinburgh, (No. 392, S.C.) which took place at his residence in Montague Street, Edinburgh, on the 1st February, 1872. He was born at St. Asaph's, Wales, and at an early age was sent to Moffat for his education. His first occupation was that of a writer, in a solicitor's office in Moffat, he then accepted a position in a solicitor's firm in Glasgow, being ambitious he then came to Edinburgh, and got an appointment in the Bill Chamber of Her Majesty's Register House.

When the Lodge Caledonian, (No. 392), received its charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, he was the first application for initiation, and after some time was elected by the brethren of the lodge to the office of Secretary, a position to which he was re-elected for no less than eight successive years. Many with melancholy interest will read his untimely death.

MASONIC FUNERAL IN CALIFORNIA.

There has been considerable excitement in California of late in reference to the first Masonic funeral in that country, which occurred in 1849, an account of which has just been reprinted and circulated throughout America.

The ceremony was performed over the body of a brother, found drowned in the bay of San Francisco. The account of the ceremony states that on the body of the deceased was found a silver mark of a Mason, upon which was engraved the initials of his name.

A little further investigation revealed to the beholders the most singular exhibition of Masonic emblems that were ever drawn by the ingenuity of a man upon the human skin, and I believe there is nothing in the history or traditions of Freemasonry equal to it. Beautifully dotted on his left arm in red and blue ink, which time could not efface, appeared all the emblems of the entered apprentice. There were the Holy Bible, the square and compasses, the 24in. gauge, and the common gavel. There were also the Mosaic pavement, representation of the ground floor of King Solomon's temple, the indented vessel which surrounds it, and the blazing star in the centre. On the right arm, and artfully executed in the same indelible liquids, were the emblems pertaining to the Fellow Craft, viz.: the plumb, the square, and the level. There were also the five columns representing the five orders of architecture, the Tuscan, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite. In removing the garments from the body the trowel presented itself, with all the tools of operative Masonry, beside all the emblems peculiar to the degree of Master Mason. Conspicuous on his breast were the lights of Masonry. Over the heart was the pot of incense; on other parts of his body were the bee-hive, the book of constitutions, guarded by the Tyler's sword, the sword pointing to a naked heart, the all-seeing eye, the anchor and ark, the hour glass, the scythe, the forty-seventh problem of Euclid, the sun, moon, and stars, the coronet, the three steps, emblematic of youth, manhood, and age. Admirably executed was a weeping virgin, reclining upon a broken column, upon which lay the book of constitutions, in her hand she held the pot of incense, the emblem of a pure heart, and in her uplifted right hand a sprig of accacia, the emblem of the immortality of the soul. Immediately beneath her stood winged Time, with his scythe by his side, which cuts the brittle thread of life, and the hour-glass at his feet, ever reminding us that our lives are passing away. The withered and attenuated fingers of the destroyer were delicately placed amid the long and gracefully flowing ringlets of the disconsolate mourner.

Thus were the striking emblems of mortality and immortality beautifully blended in one pictorial representation. It was a spectacle such a Masons never saw before, and in all probability, such as the fraternity will never witness again. The brothers name was not known.

GRAND MARK LODGE.

On Wednesday evening a special meeting of the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, for the purpose of adopting addresses of congratulation to Her Majesty and the Prince of Wales, on the recovery of His Royal Highness from his late serious illness.

The Right Hon. Earl Percy, M.P., Dep. G.M., and M.W.G.M. elect, presided, supported on his right by the Earl of Limerick, as Deputy Grand Master; Magnus Ohren, G.S. as S.G.W.; and James Stevens, P.G.J.O. as G.J.W.

Among the other brethren present were Bros. F. Binckes, G. Sec.; S. Rosenthal, G.D.C.; John Boyd, H. C. Levander, H. Massey, T. J. Sabine, Wilkins, (22), S. Lazarus, Richard Spencer, Thos. Williams, J. W. H. Piggott, T. Cubitt, Joshua Nunn, and Morton.

Grand Lodge having been duly opened, Bro. Binckes, by direction of the G.M. on the throne, read the notice convening the meeting.

Earl Percy then rose, and said:—Brethren, before I make any remarks about the business which calls us here to day, I must inform you of the cause of the absence of your Grand Master, who ought to have been present on this occasion, and to have presided over you. He has, as some of you I believe, are aware, lately suffered a serious bereavement in the loss, by death of one of his children, and he wrote to me to say that he really did not feel equal to presiding at this Grand Lodge under those circumstances. I need scarcely say I am certain you will all sympathise with our Grand Master, and will perfectly comprehend how his inability to come does not arise from any want of will on his part, but from events over which he can exercise no influence. Brethren, to proceed to my motion, I think it is hardly necessary for me to make any remark on the cause of our assembling together to night. From every Masonic body, as well, I believe, as from every other body of loyal subjects of Her Majesty, addresses are now going up to congratulate her and her royal son upon the mercy which Providence has vouchsafed to her. The whole country is moved with gratitude to Almighty God, and we feel a deep sympathy with the Queen in her joy, as we did with her in her sorrow. At the same time I cannot help thinking that if there is any thing which is necessary to enhance these feelings within us we should find it in the reflection upon what a loss the death of the Prince of Wales would have been to us, had it pleased the Almighty that his illness and should terminate fatally. We should then remember that we would have lost not only a Prince beloved by the nation, not only our future King, but also our brother Mason, and that Her Majesty would have lost in him what is most necessary to a widow, and still more necessary to one who has to discharge her high functions, her eldest son, her help, and her stay. I am sure that you will feel that Grand Mark Lodge, and our Order, ought not to be behindhand in congratulating Her Majesty upon this happy event, and the Prince of Wales upon his restoration to health, and assuring Her Majesty that the Masons of England are among the most loyal of her subjects, and that she may depend upon them to maintain her throne, and to sympathise with her in all the different events of her life. Brethren, I need not add more words, I think, but I will read you the two addresses which are proposed for your approval.

“TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

“May it please your Majesty, We, the Mark Master Masons of England and Wales, the Colonies and Dependencies of the British Crown in Grand Lodge assembled by leave, humbly to approach your Majesty with every feeling of duty and devotion to Your Majesty's Royal Throne and person, and to be permitted to offer our sincere and cordial congratulations on the recovery of Your Majesty's Son, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his late dangerous illness.

“We feel most deeply that our heartfelt gratitude is due to the Great Disposer of Life and Death, that He has been pleased to restore His Royal Highness to health and strength, and we earnestly pray Almighty God that He will shower down His choicest blessings on Your Majesty and the Royal Family, and that Your Majesty may long be spared to reign over a loyal, a happy, and a prosperous people.”

“TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS ALBERT EDWARD PRINCE OF WALES.”

“We the Mark Master Masons of England and Wales, and the Colonies Dependencies of the British Crown, in Strand Lodge assembled, desire to express our warmest congratulations on the recovery of your Royal Highness from your late dangerous illness.

“We render our hearty thanks to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, that it has pleased Him to restore your Royal Highness to health and strength, and We earnestly pray that your Royal Highness may long be spared to be a blessing to the Royal Family and to our nation.

The Earl of Limerick, Most Worshipful Grand Master, said, if it was a subject different from what it is, that we are met to consider, I should rise with considerable diffidence to second the motion that had been brought forward, because, expecting as we did that our Grand Master himself would have presided to day, and that you would have seconded the address which he would have moved. I till a few moments ago did not know that the duty of seconding the motion would have fallen on me: but in a matter like the present I am sure no words of mine are necessary, especially after what has fallen from your lordship, and I am also convinced that the smallness of the meeting this evening is not owing to any want of feeling in the subject, but from a conviction that it was so much a matter of course that the Masons should feel so deeply on this matter that nobody thought his attendance would be to signify how earnest where the emotions of his heart.

I most entirely agree with the sentiment contained in the addresses that you have read. I am quite certain that those sentiments have found an echo in the hearts of all Masons in common with the whole of the inhabitants of this kingdom. All have sympathised with Her Most Gracious Majesty in the deep grief and anxiety she must have felt. All now sympathise with her in her joy. All also feel the great loss that His Royal Highness's death would have been to this country at large as heir apparent to the throne, and the Freemasons of England would have felt his loss, and mourned for him as a brother. I do not think that it will be necessary for me to say any thing more, and I will simply second the addresses which your lordship has proposed.

Bro. Lazarus suggested a verbal alteration in address, to the effect that it was at a special Grand Lodge the resolution was come to; but Bro. Binckes explained that this was not at all necessary, and was not adopted elsewhere.

Bro. Binckes informed Grand Lodge that letters of apology for non-attendance at this Grand Lodge had been received from Bros. Kelly, Prov. G.M. Leicester; Rev. John Huyshe, Prov. G.M. Devon; Lord Skelmersdale, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C.; the Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, G.C.; Perkins, J.C. Parkinson, G.S.W.; Rev. C. R. Davy, King, Gopel, Hardy, Griffiths, R. J. Spiers, and Hamilton

Bro T. J. Sabine said he hoped he would not be considered as acting irregularly, in suggesting that a practical proof of the sympathy of this Grand Lodge might be given in a sum of money being contributed by this Grand Lodge to one or another of the Masonic Charities, as a thank-offering. If he was in order, he should be most happy to move a resolution to that effect.

Earl Percy said, he did not think it was possible to take any other business than that for which the special Grand Lodge had been summoned, otherwise, he should have been most happy to entertain such an excellent suggestion as that moved by Bro. Sabine.

Grand Lodge was then closed.

THE FUTURE OF FREEMASONRY IN IRELAND.

By BRO. JOSEPH WOODWORTH, P.M. COMMERCIAL LODGE, No. 245.

THIRD ARTICLE.

By a resolution of Grand Lodge, bearing date February 1, 1844, that body "strictly prohibits as unlawful all assemblies of Freemasons in Ireland, under any title whatsoever, purporting to be Masonic, not held by virtue of a warrant or constitution from this Grand Lodge, or from the Masonic bodies recognized by and acting in unison with the Grand Lodge of Ireland."

To this rule, the framers of the new laws which are about to be submitted to our discussion have thought fit to add a clause of the most objectionable character, to which I shall have occasion hereafter more particularly to refer.

The "bodies recognized by and acting in unison with the Grand Lodge of Ireland," alluded to in the above rule, were:

The Grand Royal Arch Chapter.

The Grand Encampment of High Knights Templar.

The Grand Council of Rites for Ireland.

I say were advisedly, for the last named, "The Grand Council of Rites for Ireland," has ceased to exist, and has, for the first time, this year, disappeared from "The Freemasons' Calendar and Directory," published "under the sanction and by the authority of the Worshipful the Grand Lodge of Ireland."

In lieu of it we find "The Grand Chapter of Prince Masons of Ireland," (for the first time), and the "Supreme Council of Ireland, 33rd Degree." Now, as neither of these bodies have thought fit, as far as I am aware, even to notify their existence to Grand Lodge, they are not, of course, "recognised" by it, and are therefore unlawful, and their meetings are "prohibited."

How they came to be officially included among the Masonic Bodies of Ireland, in a Calendar published "under the sanction and by the authority of the Grand Lodge," is a question that might be asked.

We are indeed told that the change that has taken place in the internal arrangements of the "High Degrees" here, is only a nominal one, that the same body comes before us under a different title. Let us see if such is the case.

The constitution of the "Grand Council of Rites of Ireland," as given in the "Ahiman Rezon," is thus stated.

"3. The Grand Council of Rites for Ireland shall consist of the Grand Inspectors General, 33°, the Officers of the Council, and the three Superior Officers of all the several High Degrees of Freemasonry in Ireland (above that of High Knights Templar) or three representatives from each (duly accredited), who shall be summoned to assist at all its meetings and deliberations; that is to say, the three Superior Officers of "The Princes of the Royal Secret, 32nd.

"The Grand Inspectors Inquisitors Commanders, 31st.

"The Order of Mizraim.

"The Council of Knights of the Sun.

"The Colleges of Philosophical Masons, or Knights, K.H.

"The Chapters of the [Most Excellent the Knights of the Eagle and Pelican, Princes Grand Rose Croix;

"And of all Past Commanders and Past Sovereigns of Philosophical Masons, and of the Chapters of Prince Masons, respectively, so long as they are subscribing members to a College or Chapter."

It is with the body so constituted that Grand Lodge formed a compact, and that body is expressly declared to be the "governing body of the degree of Prince Grand Rose Croix; the governing body of the Superior Masonic Grades being the Supreme Council of the 33rd Degree" (Rule 1).

It is quite true that the Grand Council of Rites retained the right, "with the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present at any regular quarterly meeting, at any time hereafter to revise, repeal, amend or alter" their constitution, on proper notice being previously given (Rule 31), and various changes have accordingly been gradually made in the internal arrangements of the "High Degrees," and a new set of "Rules and Constitutions" were promulgated to take effect from the 21st of March, 1866, by which the control of the Rose Croix degree was practically taken out of the hands of the Supreme Council, and the degrees superior to that of "Prince Mason," and vested in a body designated the "Council of Rites for Ireland."

The reason for adopting this course it is unnecessary just now to dwell on. It was at all events a move in the right direction, and had the members of the Prince Masons Chapter there and then severed their connection with the degrees above them, and come before Grand Lodge for recognition, there would probably not have been a word said against it, but, instead of doing so, they thought proper to go on as usual towards those of the "inferior" degrees, until the present year, when they officially burst upon our view as an "independent Grand Body," exercising the government over the Prince Masons Chapters, formerly vested in the "Grand Council of Rites," with whom alone Grand Lodge, rightly or wrongly, formed a compact.

It is not to the point that the change made has been a gradual one. The alteration in the organisation and government of the "High Degrees" here is equivalent to a revolution in their character, and if one effect has been to give a proper independence to the Rose Croix degree, such as its antiquity and respectability entitle it to, another effect has been to strengthen the position and consolidate the authority of the "Supreme Grand Council of the 33°," and to hand over to it, as a matter of right, the government of all the degrees superior to that of the Rose Croix.

In order to understand the position properly, it is necessary to go a little into the origin and history of this "supreme" degree, and in doing so let it be understood, once for all, that I mean no disrespect whatever to the present holders of the thirty-third degree in Ireland. They are, many of them, otherwise, eminent as true Masons, having "the good of the fraternity at heart," and if the degree were what it assumes to be, the summit of Freemasonry, and the "elective," instead of the "selective" principle was the means by which brethren attained it, probably most, possibly all, the brethren who at present hold it, would occupy the same position. Especially, I distinctly disclaim anything like a reflection on the masonic character of the brother who has for nearly sixty years so worthily presided over our fraternity, and whose character, both inside and outside the order, rests upon an unchallenged eminence, but I do not recognize the principle that respect for individuals should blind us to the defects of a system to which they may happen to belong, and I will not be prevented, by either mistake or misrepresentation, from exposing and attacking errors and perversions which have in the past done much, and may in the future do much more injury to our ancient order, unless we take steps to neutralize their action, and limit the sphere within which their mischievous tendencies have room to play.

I have no desire to raise, unnecessarily, the veil that is supposed to conceal from our gaze the internal history of the "High Degrees" in Ireland. There is much in that history, that it is expedient should "sleep in the shade" and I trust that their possessors will see the wisdom of avoiding any conflict that might render it necessary to look more closely into their antecedents, or call in question their present claims and authority.

We have already seen, that a Chapter of Prince Masons, and a body of Knights K.H. were recognized in Dublin in the last century, and that the latter body also existed in England, is shewn by Dalcho himself, in a note to the Kadosh degree at page 68, where he says; "His Royal Highness Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, &c., is at present the presiding officer of the degree of K.H. in England."

The assumption of authority over that degree, as over the Rose Croix by the 33rd degree, is based on the statement that Frederick the Great, having been appointed head of the Order of "Sublime" Masons by the Councils of the "Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret, 32°," thought fit to institute the 33rd. degree, in order to perpetuate the authority so vested in him personally, and for that purpose arranged that nine members in each country should constitute the "Supreme Council of the 33°," and we are told that in the year 1786; Frederick accordingly ratified the constitution of the 33rd degree.

The theory supposes that the various degrees up to the 32°, the then "Ne Plus Ultra" of Masonry, formed a regular and connected series of Masonic degrees, and that the crowning degree was instituted to consolidate masonic authority and give unquestioned headship to the system and the history of the actual formation and confirmation of such constitution reads very nicely and consistently. There is, however, the one slight objection to it, that from the beginning to the end it is entirely false.

"Frederick never took part in, or recognized, any but the first three degrees of Freemasonry" and the constitution purporting to be ratified by him. The matter originated in Charleston in 1801, and the Charleston Council themselves now admit the fraud of their predecessors; and claim to be the "Mother Council of the World."

In the year 1824 a warrant of constitution for a Supreme Council of the 33° for Ireland was obtained from Charleston, and thus the degree got footing in this country. Whether Grand Lodge will think it consistent with its dignity and character to continue recognition of a degree possessed of such an origin, and such antecedents, remains to be seen.

There is, however, one point on which I think Grand Lodge cannot for a moment hesitate. In the "Annals" appended to our "Ahiman Rezon" the unfounded statements as to the origin and confirmation of the 33rd degree, are set out as historical facts.

If it is proved, and admitted, that those statements were a deliberate imposition on the masonic world, without any basis of truth on which to rest, in any future edition of our annals, those passages must be expunged. It is one thing to make a statement in ignorance of facts; relying on the good faith of those from whom the statement originated; it is another thing to continue to publish, as truth, an admitted lie, and to lend the authority of Grand Lodge to sanction an imposition.

I would suggest that if it be intended to republish those "Annals" a committee of Grand Lodge should be appointed to enquire into and report on those particular portions of masonic "history," and it would be only prudent to confine that committee to members who are not also members of any of the so called "high degrees."

As already explained here, Templar qualifications are required in selected members of the "high degrees" and their natural allies would be the English Templar bodies, who have continued to work those degrees from time immemorial, and whose requirements and mode of working are almost identical with ours. But in the A. and A. Rite, any Master Mason of "good standing" may obtain the Rose Croix degree, and may in fact become possessed of all the degrees of that Rite; without professing the Christian faith.

As one result of this extraordinary alliance, an English Rose Croix Mason cannot be recognized or admitted as such here, unless he has qualified himself by obtaining the Royal Arch degree, and the degrees worked here under Templar warrants. He must also be a M.M. of seven years standing, the P.M. of a Lodge, and 33 years of age; and some of the Brethren under the Irish Constitution who obtained the Rose Croix degree in England, from the authority with which the Irish Prince Masons here are in alliance, had to qualify themselves subsequently by taking the Templar degrees, before they were admitted as visitors to an Irish Prince Masons Chapter. Further, several Irish Brethren, who received the Rose Croix degree in England under its ancient legitimate authority, a H.K.T. warrant, cannot be recognized here in that degree, unless they previously make their peace with the authorities of the A. and A. Rite, under which circumstances it is not at all likely that many of them will be inclined to "qualify," for the privilege of being admitted to the meetings of Prince Masonry in Ireland.

The whole subject both here and in England, present many glaring anomalies and inconsistencies, and as a "revolution" in England in the "highgrades" is far from improbable, and as their working here is most unsatisfactory and unmasonic, I do hope that when we come to deal with our new laws here, we shall take good care to keep "Craft Masonry" clear from strife, by cutting the connection that at present unites it with an order, whose rules and practices are opposed to its fundamental principles.

METROPOLITAN.

DORIC LODGE (No. 933).—Amongst the many well-conducted and prosperous lodges in the metropolis, the Doric Lodge stands conspicuous. The visitor cannot help being struck with the order and discipline which distinguish the proceedings, and the evident desire of all the officers to discharge their duties in conformity with the spirit of the beautiful ceremonies in which they are called upon to take a more or less active part. Few lodges can boast of such an array of talented Past Masters, amongst whom the names of Bros. Barnes and Scurr are perhaps more generally known; and the W. M., Bro. Yetton, who presided at the anniversary meeting, which was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, E.C. on Tuesday the 13th inst., will certainly not be an unworthy addition to their ranks. On this occasion there were candidates for all the degrees, and in each case the work was done with care, earnestness, and an amount of proficiency seldom equalled and more rarely surpassed. The business of the evening included the installation of Bro. James Griffin as W.M. for the ensuing year; and in this, as in the former instances Bro. Yetton proved himself master of the work he had in hand; the addresses were delivered with an intelligent appreciation, and an impressiveness that commanded the undivided attention of his hearers. In this ceremony he was ably assisted by the active and efficient D.C., Bro. John Stevens, P.M. 554, who for some years past has filled this important post, and at the same time has given his services as Honorary Secretary of the Lodge. The newly installed Master appointed his officers as follows: Bro. Austin, S.W. Marsh, J.W.; Scurr, Treas.; Stevens, Sec. Ayton, S.D.; J. Taylor J.D.; Hocking, I.G. Sedden, Organist; Bridgeland, W.S.; Grant Tyler. A handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to the retiring Master, by the W.M. Bro. T. Barnes, P.M., then made a pathetic appeal to the Lodge on behalf of Bro. Saqui, an old Past Master, and preceptor of various lodges, who has been bedridden for upwards of three years and is, in consequence, in great distress. That unfortunate brother being so well and favourably known to most of the members, he considered himself justified in moving that five guineas be voted from the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge, to be handed over for his use and benefit. This of course was unanimously carried. The business of the lodge being ended, the Brethren adjourned for refreshment. The banqueting table presented a cheerful appearance, and although, besides the members of the lodge, over forty visitors had to be accommodated, the lively and pleasant activity of Bro. Stevens very soon settled every individual in his appointed place, where each found a pretty little bouquet of real flowers for his buttonhole, which gave the assembly quite a festive aspect. Upon the removal of the cloth the usual toasts were briefly given and as briefly responded to. Bro. Yetton in his reply on behalf of the Past Masters took occasion to state, that three personal friends whom he had had the pleasure of introducing into the lodge, had that evening presented him with a slight token of their gratitude towards him. The present was handed around for inspection. It consisted of a handsome pin with the masonic emblem set in diamonds. Some excellent songs and recitations were given by Bros. Mortlock, Gunn, Munyard, H. Wainwright, Yetten, Stevens and H. M. Levy. The music, both in the lodge and banqueting rooms, was most efficiently performed by Bro. Tedder, the Organist of the lodge. Amongst the visitors were the following, Past Masters, Bros. Gee, 174; Wright, 72; Buller, 9; Bencey, 79; Iron, 902; Lacy, 174; Mortlock, 186; Gottheil, 141; Foulger, 193; Chadwick, 554; H. M. Levy, 188; Motion, 453; and Charles Nash, W.M. 79.

STOCKWELL LODGE, (No. 1339).—A meeting of the members of the above Lodge, was held at the Duke of Edinburgh, Stockwell, on Thursday, 15th inst. The business of the evening was the initiation of Mr. Price and the installation of Br. William Worrell, S.W., as Worshipful Master, for the ensuing year. There were present Bros. Hammerton, W.M.; Francis, P.M. Sec.; Pain, S.W.; Brighten, S.D.; Klinck J.D.; Stolg, I.G.; Sidwell, Timewell, and Williams. The visitors were, Bros. Avery, 766; Newham, 192; Benham, 100; Parker Ward, W.M., 1257; Garrod, P.M. 720; C. Knight, 1319; Leskey, P.M., 72; Lovett, 1314; Dodson, P.M., 72; Simmons, S.W. 902; Packer, S.W., 1257; Croysdale, 136. After the opening of the Lodge, Mr. Price was initiated by the W.M., Br. Francis, then took the chair, and in an impressive manner, installed Br. Worrell into the chair of K.S. Br. Worrell then appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Pain, S.W.; Brighten, J.W.; Klinck, S.D.; Williams, J.D.; Sidwell, I.G. The W.M. presented the Lodge with a magnificent banner, which was much appreciated, and he received a vote of thanks. After the closing of the Lodge, the brethren adjourned to the banquet. The usual toasts were given, the W.M. making some feeling remarks on the restoration to health of our royal and worthy Bro. the Prince of Wales, which met with great applause. "The Initiate was responded to by Br. Price, the W.M., giving the E. A. song, con amore. "The Visitors," was replied, to in excellent terms, by Bros. Garrod, Dobson, and Packer. "The health of the W.M." was proposed by Br. Hammerton who paid a deserved compliment to his masonic abilities. The W.M. in reply, said he certainly never anticipated the honour, so soon, of presiding over a lodge, he being a comparatively young mason. Most certainly he appreciated the privilege of attaining that honour in Stockwell Lodge, and should always have the interests of the Lodge at heart, and hoped to merit the approbation of the brethren. The W.M. in proposing "The health of the Immediate Past Master, Br. Hammerton," took occasion to refer to his able qualities as a mason, and his services to the Lodge, which had received much assistance at his hands. Bro. Hammerton in reply spoke of the pleasure it was to him to be among them, and hoped to have that happiness for many years to come. Br. Francis replied to the toast of "The Installing Master." He complimented the Lodge upon having two such worthy Masters as he had had the pleasure to instal; looking forward from their excellent example to a prosperous future. "The Officers" was duly responded to by Bros. Pain and Kluck and the Tylers's toast brought a most agreeable meeting to a close.

BERKS AND BUCKS.

WINDSOR.—Windsor Castle Lodge, (No. 771).—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Windsor, on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., and attracted a large gathering of local and metropolitan brethren, amongst whom were Bros. John Fuller, W.M.; Dr. Wall, S.W. and W. M. elect; J. Devereux, P.M., P. Prov. G. Sec., and Installing Master; Wigginton, P. Prov. G. S.W. Treasurer; C. Holden, Prov. G. Treasurer, Secretary; J. Stephens, P.M. 1216, Hon. Mem.; J. Tolley, P.M., P. Prov. G.O.; Whitehouse, Prov. G.D.; Guisbrook, Prov. G.S.B.; Palmer, Prov. G.O.; Bingham, Nattali, Cutler, Willett, Holmes, P. M., Marriott, Biggs, Dempster, P.M., Goddard, Newells, Nicholson, Stacey, Saunders, Hatch, Kent, Jeeves, &c.; and visitors, Bros. Ravnham Stewart, Grand Deacon; Frederick Binckes, W.M. Grand Stewards, Lodge, Palmer, W.M. Egyptian Lodge; Walford Goede Trow Lodge, Cape of Good Hope, Reid, Blagden, Tyrell, and members of the Etonian and other Lodges. The Lodge having been opened and previous minutes confirmed, the W.M., Bro. Fuller, ably initiated into Freemasonry Messrs. William A. Wall, and Henry McMahon, both of Emanuel College, Cambridge, and the full ceremony was completed by the delivery of the charge, by Bro. Stevens, P.M. The Chair of K.S. was then occupied by Bro. J. Devereux, the senior Past Master, who, in admirable style, installed Bro. Dr. Wall, W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was accompanied with perfect musical service, and was completed by the usual salutations and addresses by the Installing Master. The newly installed W.M. then appointed his officers as follows:—Bro. Guisbrook, S.W.; Bingham, J.W.; J. Fuller, I.P.M.; Wigginton, Treas.; C. The usual loyal and masonic toasts were interspersed with appropriate songs, and replies followed in due course, and the claims of masonic charity having been liberally recognised, the brethren separated after full enjoyment of a well spent evening. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Br. J. Tolley, P. Prov. G.O., assisted by Bros. Briggs and Marriott, of the Windsor Castle Choir, and gave universal satisfaction.

DERBYSHIRE.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge.—This lodge, which has removed to convenient and well-arranged rooms at the St. James's Hotel, (recently opened under the management of Bro. Plock, late of the Midland Hotel, Derby), held its sixth annual meeting on Wednesday, the 7th inst. There was a good muster of brethren, and amongst the visitors were Bros. Cox, P. Prov. G. S.W. and P.G.T. Smith, P. Prov. G.S.D.; Ward, Dusatoy, Reed, Goodall, Ritchie, Knight, &c. The minutes of the previous lodge were read and confirmed, and the ballot taken for a candidate for initiation, who was elected, but being unable to be present, the ceremony of initiation was postponed. The installing officer, Bro. Bobart, P. Prov. G.S.W., then took the chair, and in his usual correct and impressive manner installed Bro. Webster, S.W.; into the chair of K.S. After the master had been proclaimed and saluted in the three degrees, he invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Simpson, I.P.M.; Moore, S.W.; Prince, J.W.; Bobart, P. Prov. G.S.W. Treas.; Worsnop, Prov. G.P. Sec.; Mainprize, D.C.; Headland, S.D.; Ratcliffe, J.D.; Dodd, I.G.; Stone, Tyler. Two candidates were proposed for initiation, and two brethren as joining members, and the lodge was closed in due form. The members then adjourned to the supper room, where Bro. Block had prepared a repast which did credit to his capabilities as a caterer. After the cloth was drawn, the usual loyal and masonic toasts were duly honoured, and in due time the Brethren separated, much pleased with the success of the anniversary, and satisfied they had now overcome the difficulty attendant on the formation of a new lodge, and that a prosperous future would be enjoyed by the Hartington Lodge.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The regular meeting of the Rowley Lodge, was held on Monday, 5th inst. There were present Bros. W. Barker, W.M.; Dr. Moore, G.S.B. as I.P.M.; W. J. Sly, S.W.; E. A. Sale, L.L.D., J.W.; James Taylor, S.D.; James Bolton, J.D.; K. Taylor, I.G.; J. Watson, Tyler; Robt. Hargen and J. L. Bradlaw. Visitors: James Hatch, P.M. 281; Edmund Simpson, P.M. 281; John Hatch, P.M., 281. After the regular business had been transacted, Bro. Moore proposed, and Bro. Dr. Sale, seconded an address to be presented to Her Majesty the Queen, and to the Prince and Princess of Wales, on the restoration to health of our Royal Brother. Bro. J. D. L. Bradshaw, F.C. having given proof of his proficiency in the second degree, was duly and effectually raised to the degree of M.M., by Br. Moore. In answer to an appeal from Bro. Batten, P.G.S.B., on behalf of the Girl's School, Bro. Dr. Moore undertook to represent the lodge as Steward at the coming festival. Some alteration in the bye-laws was discussed, and a joining member proposed, after which the lodge was duly closed.

ULVERSTON.—Lodge of Furness, (No. 995).—This numerous lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Tuesday, the 6th inst., in the Masonic Temple, Theatre-street. Br. Reuben Pearson, W.M., being supported by Roger Dodgson, S.W.; the J.W. being unavoidably absent, his duties were performed by Br. J. Postlethwaite, S.D. There was a good attendance of brethren. The minutes of last regular lodge were read and confirmed. Brother Busher, P.G.S.B. of England, P. G. Sec. Cumberland and Westmorland, entered the lodge, and was received with grand honors, he was accompanied by Br. Mott, P. Prov. G.D., of West Lancashire. There were also present, as visitors, Bros. Atherstone, 131, Preston; and the Sec. of No. 986, Croston; Bros. Cox and Hargreaves, having given proofs of their proficiency, were entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Cox was passed as F.C. The lodge was then lowered to the first degree, and called from labour to refreshment for 15 minutes, when the brethren retired to the masonic club-room, in connection with the lodge. Upon re-assembling Br. Hartley was invested and retired. The lodge was again opened in the second degree, and Bros. Hargreaves and Hartley were severally passed as F.C.'s, the ceremony being performed by the W. M., the S.W. giving the working tools and lectures on the tracing board. This W.M. then brought before the lodge the subject of the Hamer testimonial, when two guineas were unanimously voted for the purpose. The I.P.M., Br. T. Dodson, then gave notice of motion that at next regular lodge he would ask the lodge to vote ten guineas to the Ulverston District Cottage Hospital, and a yearly subscription of one guinea. In the course of the evening Bro. Busher highly complimented the lodge on its working, remarking that he had never seen the ceremonies better worked. He also complimented the lodge on the magnificent and beautifully decorated structure, which their zeal and liberality had enabled them to dedicate to Freemasonry. The other visitors also expressed their warm approval, and thanked the brethren for the kind reception that had been accorded them. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation, the lodge was then finally closed, in ancient form.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—Hartington Lodge (No. 1021).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, 12th inst., at the Royal Hotel, and was well attended by members and visitors. After transacting the formal business, the accounts for the past year were read, showing that nearly £50 had been remitted to the Masonic Charitable Institutions during the past twelve months, and taking into consideration amounts previously voted, places the lodge in a very good position with the charities. The members feeling that this satisfactory state of affairs was mainly due to the exertions of the W.M., Bro. Bagot, who has acted as Honorary Secretary for upwards of three years, decided some months ago to mark their appreciation of his services, by presenting him with a substantial acknowledgement, which consisted of a very handsome timepiece, a Secretary's jewel, and a massive gold pen and pencil case, supplied by Bro. G. Kenning, and which gave entire satisfaction to the contributors. At the particular request of the brethren, Bro. Henry Cook, P.M., 1021, 119, Prov. G. Reg. for Cumberland and Westmorland, made the presentation, and in doing so reviewed the services of Br. Bagot, who by a consistent course of perseverance and energy had been instrumental in placing the lodge in the satisfactory position in which it now stands, and by his business aptitude and kindly disposition had gained the respect of the brethren, as exemplified by these testimonials. Br. Baggot, in response, assured the brethren that these marks of their recognition of past services, and the high eulogiums of Bro. M. Cook, would ever be remembered by him, and he hoped his conduct in the chair would give the same satisfaction and tend to cement the friendship and good feeling which now prevailed among all the brethren of that lodge.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, (No. 279).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemason's Hall on Wednesday evening, 7th inst., under the presidency of Br. E. J. Pye; and as visitors, Bros. G. Toller, P.M., Prov. G.S.; W. Skullthorpe, W.M. 523; F. Baines, J.W. 523; Rev. W. Tray, 523; Dr. Clifton, 523; J. Dawson, 84; R. H. Worthington, 594. The lodge having been opened in ancient form, and the usual preliminary business transacted, the Worshipful Master proceeded to pass Bros. Lewis, T. Scramton and B. Ellis to the degree of F.C. A petition, numerously signed, for the constitution of a new lodge in this town, to be called the "Commercial Lodge," was recommended to the favourable consideration of the Most Worshipful Grand Master. This circumstance must have been peculiarly gratifying to our chief, the Provincial Grand Master, whose efforts, ably supported by Br. Toller, Prov. G.S., to perfect the working and extend the ramifications of Freemasonry in this province are so well known and widely appreciated. During the evening the Provincial Grand Master conversationally alluded to the "Earl Howe Memorial Church," and other matters of interest to the brethren.

"The Queen and the Craft" having been given and responded to enthusiastically, "The health of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, P. G. M. of England," was proposed in an effective manner, with suitable allusion to His Royal Highness's membership of and visit to this lodge, and to his happy recovery from his late severe illness, through the skill and vigilance of his physicians, under the blessing of the Great Architect of the Universe. Dr. Reed here sang "God bless the Prince of Wales," with original Masonic words, the brethren joining heartily in chorus. The next toast from the chair was "The M. W. Grand Master of England, the Marquis of Ripon," which was received with full honours. Dr. White proposed "The V. W. Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Caernarvon;" and Bro. Sadler "The Earl Zetland, Past Grand Master." Bro. Webster proposed "The R. W. Provincial Grand Master, Bro. B. Bond Cabbell; the V. W. Deputy Prov. G. M., Hon. F. Walpole; and the Provincial Grand Officers," to which Bro. Pole, P. Prov. A. G. D. C., responded. "The health of the Worshipful Master" was then proposed by Bro. Woodwork, and received with full masonic honours. The W. M. suitably acknowledged the cordial reception he had met with, and proposed "The health of the Installing Master, Bro. Ives." Bro. Ives, in returning thanks, referred to the valued services he had received from Bro. Dunsford, P. M., and from Bro. Sadler, P. M. Bro. Banks proposed "The health of the I. P. M., Bro. Woodwork." Bro. M., Chaplain of the Lodge, proceeded to initiate, in a high impressive manner, Messrs. W. Whitley and C. Beck. Bro. W. Hanks then proceeded to initiate with his usual ability, Mr. J. Smith Cowton. After the usual Lodge business had been transacted, Br. J. F. Spurr, P. M., 209, proceeded to install Br. W. G. Long, P. M., as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. Br. After the cloth was drawn, the W. M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, P. G. Bale, D. Prov. G. M.," "The Installing Master, Br. J. F. Spurr, P. M., and the visiting brethren." This toast was ably responded to by Bro. Spurr, with truly masonic feeling, and also by Bro. H. C. Martin, P. M., P. Prov. G. D. C., who had rendered most efficient service during the performance of the ceremonies. Bro. H. Hanks, P. M., gave "The Clergy," coupling them with Br. H. Blane, P. M. The Chaplain, and Bro. the Rev. R. Mitford Taylor, severally returned thanks in very appropriate terms. Bro. the Rev. R. M. Taylor, proposed "the health of the immediate Past Master, Bro. C. Scrivener, M. D.," who responded in a most eloquent and emphatic manner. The installing master, then gave "The health of the newly elected W. M.," in a most telling speech, which was enthusiastically received. The W. M. returned thanks in a speech replete with masonic and paternal feeling, and promised to do his utmost for the good of the Lodge and for Freemasonry generally. The next health was that of "the Worthy and Courteous Treasurer, Br. W. Hanks, P. M.," proposed by Bro. Blane, P. M., amidst great applause, testifying the high position that he enjoys in the estimation of the brethren. Bro. Hanks replied in his usual strain of mingled eloquence and appropriate sentiments. Bro. R. Mitford Taylor, P. M., then gave, in a neat speech, "The health of the Secretary" who briefly returned thanks. Several other toasts were given, and duly honoured, the most prominent being that of "The Worthy Host, Brother H. FREEMASONRY IN NOVA SCOTIA.

ST. ANDREWS LODGE, No. 1.—The old Masonic Lodge Room in Nova Scotia never held a brilliant assemblage than was gathered together on the occasion of the recent annual meeting. For the first time in the annals of the craft, its old walls resounded with the happy laughter, and its mystic landmarks grew bright with rainbow tints, of fair women, the mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of masons, who had come together by invitation from St. Andrew's Lodge, to receive their first lessons in masonry, and to listen to an exposition of its mysteries, from men alike eminent and eloquent in the order. The lodge was most tastefully and appropriately decorated for the occasion. Festoons of bunting, encircled the room, and mottoes peeped from evergreen borders on all sides. The Craftsmen were clad in their richest attire, and all the regalia, working tools, and paraphernalia of the order, were brought from their dim recesses to do honour to the occasion. The gentlemen who had kindly consented to speak were Bros. the Hon. H. W. Smith, Attorney-General; Hon. W. Garvie, Commissioner of Public Works, and Hiram Blanchard, Q.C.; whose several speeches were models of genuine eloquence, and were listened with well merited attention throughout.

THE FOOTSTEPS OF MASONRY;

OR,

FREEMASONRY IN RELATION TO AUTHENTIC HISTORY.

By W. VINER BEDOLFE, M.D., J.W., 1329. Hon. Secretary Sphinx Lodge of Instruction.

Before recommencing the explanation of the remaining "fragments," we may in passing remark that several points would have been brought more prominently forward, but from a desire to avoid opening out the interior of Masonry, for from what has been already said it is evident that the externals of our calling do not necessarily convey any knowledge of the inner manifestations.

It might for instance have been more dramatic to have imagined an F.C. presenting himself to the S.W., or his deputy, sitting beneath the depicted emblem of the "Ear of Corn and Fall of Water," at the foot of the winding staircase which lead to the "Tablinum or Inner Chamber." In this position, as he demanded of him Quid Velis? (What do you want?) we might curiously listen to the reply "Tribesthai."—(I desire) to be winnowed or tried, and there seems little doubt but that the modern word is derived from this ancient form.

I remark here that I shall shortly have to call attention to a sign in common use amongst the Romans, and holding a precisely similar signification amongst ourselves. This sign, in my opinion forms definitely and logically an indisputable link between Roman times and our own,—between us and them—and could by no other means have got into Masonry except by actual tradition.

Although most important, it will, on the above mentioned principle, be merely simply referred to in due course, and without other remark.

We have already referred to the "Cowan," who prowls without, and to the "Tyler" who guards our gates; the next personage to be explained should be the INNER GUARD.

There is, however, no record of any such officer in the ancient collegium or lodge.

The one who nearest seems to approach to that office was the Precon, Herald, or Crier, and who still exists in the College of Cardinals—the undoubted "analogue" of the College of Augurs.

The ancient Precon had to announce the ceremonial entry of the person admitted, whether candidate or otherwise, and to proclaim the edicts of the W. Master, ad urbem et orbem, or as St. Paul hath it, not merely "to those within," but "to those without." We may state that it is very remarkable how this sentiment of "those within" and "those without" pervaded the ancient Roman world.

At the present day a R. C. Bishop, however appointed or elected, cannot enter canonically into office until he has been invested and officially proclaimed or praconised by command of the Pope, the Pontifex Maximus, the W. Master of the College of Cardinals, where the ancient term of Præcon is still retained.

As, however, Masons do not proclaim their acts to the external world, but only amongst themselves, the Inner Guard may be considered as the modified form in which the ancient "precon" has come down to our days.

DEACONS.

The office bearers of this name, in Greek, διακονοι, are not difficult of identification. It is, however, although ancient, an ecclesiastical term, the root κορω, being an old Ionian or Italian word, and signified those who served the table at meals.

Thus at the feast of Cana of Galilee, the διακονοι, or Deacons, are especially mentioned, we must bear in mind that at this epoch the Jews had become Romanised in their manners, for instead of eating the Passover with staff in hand and shoes on feet, the beloved disciple reclined "more Romano" on the bosom of his master.

In this case we may infer that, as it is distinctly stated, that the "Deacons" obeyed the Αρχιερικεινος, or Worshipful Master of the feast, so evidently the custom of the Romans was that a Deacon was one who obeyed in private, or semi-private, or social assemblies, the commands of the Worshipful Master, as now with us.

Having thus far completed the offices, before proceeding to the highest among them viz., the Wardens or Tribunes, and the W. Master, let us, going from grave to gay, dally a short time longer in the flowery mead of research, and discourse a little concerning our clothing.

"Whose primitive tradition reaches
 As far as Adam's first green breeches."

for so says Butler.

We have hitherto considered Masonry in its political organization and philosophical tendencies, but we must not forget that it has also a milder and more social aspect; a lively and festive character, dear to us all, and this we must associate with our garb, the emblem at once of labour, innocence, and joy. Let us then at once come to

THE APRON.

The gown makes the Monk, and the apron the Mason; and it is not in modern times only that the question of vestments has agitated the public mind.

The Romans were a gowned, or gens toga nation, and despised the Gauls, who, like the moderns, were a braccata, breeched, or culotte nation. We, as masons follow really and literally a more ancient custom than either; for although we may look upon the Apron as the badge of a working mason, yet, like many other things in our mysterious Craft, it has a secondary or emblematic meaning, and there is little doubt that our curt habit had its origin in primeval innocence, and Pandæan measures, when wild in woods the naked savage ran.

In studying a mixed institution like our own, a full solution of its origin is not to be obtained by looking at it in its purely civil character, and a study of the "sodalities" of Rome, which although religious in their origin, had the elaiac element developed in, or associated with them, throws light upon it. These associations were all accustomed to their festive meetings when the good brethren did not fail

"To mix frugality with wine

And honest mirth with thoughts divine."

Cicero, Aulus Gellius, and others refer to these associations, but Horace uses the term sodales to signify a festive companion, an incident of his finest odes.

As an example, let us take the Lupercælii, an association connected with the grand Roman festivals to the God Pan. This Sodality, or brotherhood, derived its origin from the ancient priests of Pan; two of its lodges were very ancient, a third was established in the time of Cæsar, and called hence the Julian. Marc Antony, the great Consul, the lover of Cleopatra, and for whose sweet sake he lost the world, was the first master.

Cicero in his "Oration for Cælius" speaks of them thus, "Nor am I startled at his saying, that Cælius was his mate at the Lupercal festivals, for the institution of those meetings is more ancient than that of government and laws. Its odge fellows not only mutually accuse each other, but in their accusations mention even their very bye-laws, as if they feared any one should not discover that they belonged to this brotherhood."

I fear, indeed, we sometimes copy this original a little too closely, for a quaint old author remarks, "they had, it seems, an odd and savage custom of exposing one another's faults, and even professed that members of their societies acted consistently with the laws of their association when he endeavoured to blacken his brother Lupercus."

It was in his capacity as Master of a Lodge of the Lupercælii, that Mark Antony, at the head of his brethren in grand procession, and, as it is expressly stated, wearing aprons of goat-skin offered the kingly crown to Cæsar.

"You all did see that in the Luercpal,
 I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
 Which he did thrice refuse."

Now this was not only a sodality or brotherhood, partaking as such in our own characteristics, claiming and acknowledge to be ancient, governed by bye-laws, and each member owing special duty to his fellows. But for us, their special characteristic was that they were literally clothed with white aprons of goat skin, and that Mark Antony and his procession actually wore such on on this world-renowned occasion.

The Apron is the oposite to the Cingulum or girdle of the soldier, the one being a military, the other a festive decoration.

This characteristic of white aprons of goat-skin they bore from the period of their introduction into Italy by Evander before the building of Rome, and continued until the brotherhood was formally dissolved by the Emperor Anastasius in the sixth century after Christ, the era of the Saxon Heptarchy.

Here then is an instance of an institution performing mystic, social, and festive duties, in white aprons, for a period of 1300 years, and after that time, the custom of the apron doubtless lingered long, traditionally handed down by the "Old Mortalities" of the period, as a badge of festivity and brotherhood.

It is in memory of these ancient and mystic festivals we still continue its use, and although we do not as in banquets of old.

"Braid our locks with Ivy twine Breathing perfumes, dropping wine."

yet wearing that time-honoured ensign, we still drain a bumper to the memory of Auld Lang Syne; and some, unwisely lingering after the Tyler's toast may, even drink like Monks of old to "one saint more."

Truly then may we designate the Apron as more ancient than the Roman Eagle, more honourable than the Garter or any other order in existence, being (in memory of that Silver Age whence it originated) the Badge of Innocence and the Bond of Friendship, and such may it ever remain.

In our next we hope to continue the "Fragments."

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM. AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES ON THIS SUBJECT.

BY W. E. N., No. 766.

I am glad to find that the suggestion of an epitome or resumé of the articles lately published on the above subject in the Freemason meets with the approval of Bro. Carpenter, and I greatly regret to learn that he feels unable to accomplish this task himself, and am heartily sorry for the cause he assigns for his inability.

As I have offered to prepare this resumé for publication, in the event of Bro. Carpenter being unable to do so, I will endeavour, to the best of my ability, to redeem my promise. I must, however, claim your readers' indulgence, especially that of Bro. Carpenter, for any shortcomings.

People usually do not peruse scientific, literary, or historical works, as they do works of fiction or amusement. The student of the former, frequently finds it necessary to refer back to previous pages for more certain information, or to correct, modify, or confirm impressions on some particular point.

Unless an ample index or resumé of the contents of the book be provided, the search for a particular part, contained perhaps, in a few lines, will be very tedious. Hence good indices are very useful, in fact are almost indispensable for scientific works and books of reference. Now Bro. Carpenter, in the 25 articles that have appeared in the Freemason, under the above heading, has collected a vast array of evidence, and has supported his conclusions by a number of very ingenious arguments; but as this evidence, and these arguments, and the facts deduced therefrom, are spread over twenty-five numbers of the Freemason, and extend over some six or seven months of time, the difficulty of mastering all the details will be self-evident. It is satisfactory to find that Bro. Carpenter's articles on this most interesting subject are to be collected and published in the form of a book or pamphlet, to which, no doubt, an ample index will be appended; but as all the readers of the Freemason may not purchase Bro. Carpenter's book, it will be convenient for those, who do not do so, to have such an epitome of the articles that have appeared in the Freemason as will enable them to refer back for more ample detail if desired.

To this end it is proposed to take the articles seriatim, refer to their date of publication, and give an epitome of the facts and statements set forth; but omitting, as a general rule, the arguments upon which the conclusions are founded.

In Art No. 1, published May, 27th, 1871, the writer commences by pointing out as a remarkable fact, that numbers of professing Christians in the United Kingdom, America, the British Colonies, France, Germany, and elsewhere, have adopted a system (Freemasonry) which is obviously founded on Judaism or Israelitism. No person is now prepared to carry the origin of the Craft to a period anterior to the Christian Era, and yet the ritual of Freemasonry is based on Judaism. Much labour has been thrown away in attempts to identify ancient peoples with Freemasonry, but its origin can be plainly fixed in Christian times, and among Christian people. How is it then that Freemasonry, its traditions, ceremonies, and ritual, are rooted in Judaism? The Saxon branch of the Teutonic race have great tenacity of will in holding to opinions, convictions, and principles, and no revolution has ever been effected among them until after long conflicts and much suffering. How comes it then that a Christian people do not scruple to accept obligations based upon a Jewish foundation? The solution of the problems full of interest, and points to a conclusion of high import.

No. II. June, 3rd.—The consideration of this problem furnishes one link in a chain of circumstances which leads to the conclusion, that we (the English and some other European Nations) bear a close affinity to the Hebrew race. The whole history of Israel, and the prophecies pointing to the future of this people, are amongst the most wonderful works of God.

In treating of the subject, two things are taken for granted.

1. That the conquest of the kingdom of Israel by Assyria is an authentic history.
2. That the prophecies of the Old Testament, relating to this people have been, or will be fulfilled.

Here follows a short review of the history of Israel; Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were powerful Princes or Emirs. They were Chiefs, Priests, and Judges over their families, which (with their dependants) formed large bodies of persons.

The twelve sons of Jacob ruled their families in like manner, but when their descendants increased in numbers, they formed distinct tribes; each having a prince as its ruler. This form of government exists at the present day among the Arabs, and was maintained by the Hebrews even in Egypt. On the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, the worship of God was so connected with the political structure of the nation, that Jehovah became their Law-giver, Judge, and King. The laws were unalterable, and without the sanction of Jehovah no important measure could be undertaken.

When the people took possession of the Promised Land, they settled down under their princes or heads of tribes, with a divinely appointed judge as chief magistrate or supreme ruler.

Getting tired of this form of government, they ultimately set up a king and elected Saul to reign over them. The kingly power did not remain long in Saul's family, but was, by God's direction, conferred upon David, who, after a struggle of some years with family of Saul, was proclaimed king over "all Israel." David's reign was a glorious one, and his victorious arms extended the empire to the Euphrates. He then desired to build a temple to God, but this honour was reserved for his son, Solomon, who built a magnificent temple, which was the glory of the empire, and dazzled all strangers.

Solomon's reign was also a glorious one, until it became tainted with idolatry, when it degenerated, and at length, under his son Rehoboam, the empire collapsed, and was broken up into two kingdoms, known afterwards as Judah and Ephraim or Israel. The two kingdoms were perpetually striving for the mastery under their respective kings, Ephraim representing the revolted ten tribes, and Judah the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who remained faithful to the house of David.

No. III. June 12th 1871.—The disaffection of Ephraim and the northern tribes having grown in Solomon's prosperous but burthensome reign, culminated under his successor, and under the guidance of Jeroboam, Ephraim took the lead and split the empire in two. A jealousy between the two nations ensued, and continued for many years, and although both were God's chosen people, they frequently were guilty of idolatry, more especially the revolted ten tribes, who trusted the downward course of impiety and sin, until the Israelitish kingdom was finally destroyed by the Assyrians, and the principal inhabitants were transported to the river Kur, which runs into the Araxes, and empties itself into the Caspian Sea. After the lapse of a few years Shalmanezar carried away the rest of the people to Halah, Habor, and Gozan, in Media and Assyria. Thus Ephraim or "the Kingdom of Israel," was utterly destroyed 258 years after the revolt and, 722 B.C.

The kingdom of Judah was not so utterly depraved, and although it frequently relapsed into idolatry, many of the kings punished and endeavoured to extirpate this sin. Wickedness and rebellion against God, ultimately, however, obtained the upper hand, and the nation was punished by being invaded by Nebuchadnezzar, who destroyed the Temple at Jerusalem, carried away all that was valuable, together with many of the Hebrew nobility, including Daniel and his three friends. A remnant of the people were left under Zedekiah, who plotted with Egypt and rebelled against the King of Babylon, and they were in the end utterly destroyed, 387 years after the revolt of the ten tribes, and 134 years after the destruction of the kingdom of Israel, 588 B.C. In the kingdoms of both Judah and Israel a succession of bold honest prophets proved and warned both kings and people, but with no useful result. The captivity of Judah was unlike that of Israel; that of the former was only to last for 70 years, and under Cyrus, King of Persia, the people were allowed to return to their own land. The temple was re-built and the Jewish nation re-established, but although the nation never relapsed into idolatry they fell into other sins, for which they were again punished by being utterly uprooted under Vespasian, A.D. 70. They have not been destroyed, but are now dispersed throughout the whole civilized world, waiting for their restoration, while Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, and Rome no longer exist as nations, they having mightily oppressed God's people; while the Persians who showed them kindness, still remain an established kingdom.

PRESENTATION OF THE ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE TESTIMONIAL.

On Saturday evening last, a company of forty brethren assembled at a banquet at the Cannon-street Hotel, to present the testimonial (which we announced a fortnight since, consisted of a splendid clock and a purse of 300 sovereigns) to Bro. Robert Wentworth Little for the services he has rendered the cause of Freemasonry. About two years ago it was suggested that such a testimonial should be subscribed for, and the movement received the support of ourselves, and our old Masonic contemporary The Era. The matter was taken in hand by some energetic brethren, and a committee was formed, of which Bro. John Hervey, G.S., became Treasurer, and Bro. John Thomas Moss, the Secretary. The difficulties which beset any new undertaking are well known, but the perseverance of the brethren who took this matter in hand, and the magnificent amount of £300, with a surplus to purchase an enduring memento of the respect of the subscribers was raised. As no testimonial is supposed to be properly presented without some accompanying conviviality, the necessary "go" was given to the Little testimonial, as we have said, by a banquet, and it would be unfair to pass over the event without our presenting a verbal testimonial to Bro. Spencer, the proprietor of the Cannon-street, Hotel, and his manager, Bro. Davies, by saying that a better supplied or better served banquet we have never partaken of. The company who assisted at the ceremonies of banquet and presentation comprised Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex, who presided as chairman, and Bros. John Hervey, George Kenning, H. C. Levander, Charles Coote, Barnett, John Boyd, W. Carpenter, Stedwell, W. Smeed, Magnus Ohren, Horsley, A. Thielay, John Coutts, James Brett, W. Roebuck, George S. Slater, Williams, Hurlstone, H. G. Buss, Major Finney, T. Finney, junr. F. Davison, Odell, Thomas, S. Rosenthal, Thomas W. White, Taylor, T. Cubitt, D. D. Beck, Brown, J. Adlard, W. H. Scott, G. Scott, John Cockburn, T. B. Yeoman, H. Parker, John J. Moss, and H. Massey. Bro. Little occupied a seat immediately on the chairman's right, and Bro. F. Davison took the vice-chair. In the course of the evening the following telegram, dated 7.45 p.m., was received from Bro. W. J. Hughan, Truro:—"Sorry I cannot be present. Warmest congratulations to Bro. Little. Hearty good wishes to brethren, and success to Freemasonry every where."

When the cloth was removed and grace sang, the toasts were introduced.

The Chairman said, although he was chairman of a very large and pleasant party he did not think it was necessary to inflict long speeches upon the company. They were met together to pass an agreeable evening, and for one other particular purpose, at the same time they met as Masons, and a convivial party of Freemasons never met without drinking, as the first toast, "The Health of the Queen." They all felt how much they were indebted to her, and how much they might hereafter be indebted to her and to her son, the Prince of Wales, who had lately passed through a most critical illness. We hoped to see him in public amongst us again soon, not only as Prince of Wales, but as a brother Mason. He coupled the two names in one toast so that he might not trespass on the brethren's time.

The Chairman again rose, and said it had seldom fallen to his lot to have the opportunity either of proposing a toast, or making a proposition similar to that which he was now going to submit to the brethren; and he felt that he encountered some difficulty in performing the duty which devolved upon him, because, as the representative of every brother present, he was obliged to do his utmost, thoroughly to embody their feelings in what he had to say. He felt that every one would wish all his own sentiments to be conveyed with respect to the benefit that had been conferred upon themselves and the Craft at large, by one who, he was happy to say, was present on his right hand, and was their guest. That guest had served the Masonic Order with the greatest ability, and the greatest kindness. Though he (the Chairman) had started with a short speech, he must trespass on the brethren's patience and indulgence now, because he could not do justice to the subject he had in hand in an effectual manner, if he was very brief. On this account only he would almost have preferred that some other brother who was more eloquent than he—should have taken the President's chair. (cries of "No, No.") He was much obliged for their kindness, but while almost wishing that another brother should have presided, he felt that no brother's speech would have been dictated by greater feelings of admiration of Bro. Little than his. Still they must not measure his feelings by his poor language, and he would not delegate the privilege of presenting the testimonial to any one else. He had great pleasure in proposing "The health of Bro. Little." He might, perhaps never have the opportunity of doing so again in public, and in conjunction with it, expressing the gratification he had in presiding over a company, who confessed Bro. Little's merits, and were desirous of rewarding them. Very likely many of the brethren were aware of his feelings towards Bro. Little. He had had the pleasure of knowing him for some time: many of the brethren perhaps had known him longer and much better, and could better appreciate his worth and excellence than he; but he should be very sorry, when he had the opportunity of expressing his feelings, not to do so. Many brethren no doubt would be glad to express theirs, but has he had been honoured with the position of Chairman he hoped that what he said would be taken as conveying all their views. He had just said he had known Bro. Little some time; he must make that observation that the more he knew of him, the better he liked him. He looked on him, not only as a brother in the Masonic order, but as a brother in the world in general, for he had instructed them to do what they could for the welfare of others. In their intercourse with him they had experienced a sincere feeling of fellowship from him—a feeling which they felt happy to return to him again as far as lay in their power. He would be happy to say much more of Bro. Little, if he was not present, but even in his presence he would not refrain from saying, he had done everything in his power to promote the interest of the order, and every thing for his brethren individually and collectively. His kindness, beneficence, and general behaviour to all was what the brethren appreciated most highly. He (the Chairman) had great pleasure in presiding on this occasion; he had never occupied a chair with greater pleasure, and he now begged to hand to Bro. Little, in the name of all the brethren a purse, of 300 sovereigns and a handsome clock, the inscription upon which Bro. Moss, the Secretary to the Testimonial Fund, would read. (Great cheering). The presentation was made in recognition of Bro. Little's services to Masonry, and as a return for the kind behaviour he had shown towards all the brethren.

The Chairman then presented the purse of sovereigns, and Bro. Moss read the following inscription on the plinth of the clock:—

"Presented, with a purse containing £300, to Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, P.M. 975 and 1273 P.Z. 177 and 975, Provincial Grand Secretary, Middlesex, by several brethren, in token of their high admiration of his personal qualities, and in recognition of his ability and zeal in promoting the interest of Freemasonry in all its branches.

"COL. FRANCIS BURDETT, P.G.M. Middlesex.
"JOHN THOMAS MOSS, } Hon.
"HENRY C. LEVANDER, } Secs.
"JOHN HERVEY, Grand Secretary of England,
Treasurer.
"February, 1872."

The chairman said the purse containing the sovereigns had been made and presented gratuitously by Bro. Kenning, to whom they were indebted for a like kindness when a Testimonial was given to Bro. James Brett.

BRO. LITTLE.—Most Worshipful Chairman and Brethren,—To some extent I feel myself in the position of the member of the House of Commons who rose for the first time to make a speech, and who said, "Mr. Speaker, I rise, impelled by a sense of the duty I owe to my constituents"—but found he could get no further, and ultimately felt himself bound by a sense of duty to his constituents to sit down. Well, sir, I rise with some diffidence, but I cannot say I appear before my constituents, but I can say I meet here my friends. There is not one here to night of whom I cannot say it; in fact, their presence is evidence that they are my friends. They have evinced that good, true, masonic feeling which every brother ought to have towards another, so long as he pursues the path of duty, and acts honourably and uprightly to all men. But, sir, my difficulty increases when I approach the subject which you have so gracefully alluded to, and when I give to the Subscribers, the Committee, and the Brethren present my sincere thanks for their kindness. Brethren, the Right Worshipful Chairman has told you the brethren represent much larger numbers than those who attend here to-night. I have to thank you, brethren, as representing them, the committee, and the masons generally, for the magnificent token of their esteem and regard which has been presented to me. Whatever services I may have rendered to the cause of Freemasonry, however great you may have been pleased to think them, I have considered them but slight. I fear they have been over-estimated; and I cannot see why I should have been deemed a fit recipient of such a testimonial. However, Right Worshipful Sir, and brethren, as it has pleased you and others to present me with this testimony and mark of your esteem, I must tender to you, and through you to them, my heartfelt thanks for the compliment paid to me. I accept it, sir, as an evidence of that boundless good-will which has been one of the tenets of our ancient order, and receive it as a stimulus to greater exertion in my future career. I shall strive to be, if possible, more deserving than I may have been in the past I have occupied, more deserving of the estimation and confidence which has been this day reposed in me. I will only say I will not detain you longer. You have justly said that long speeches were to be deprecated on the present occasion. I can only tender you, from the bottom of my heart, my thanks and gratitude for that estimation and affection which has been manifested towards me this evening. (Great applause.)

Bro. Davison proposed "The health of the Chairman," testifying, at the same time to his merits as a mason, and to the readiness with which he came forward to assist the Little Testimonial movement when it was set on foot.

The Chairman said he was much gratified with the kindness of the brethren. Although he had done what he could to support the movement, he could have done very little without the assistance of others. A great many brethren round the table had aided him materially; but it was labour well bestowed, for no one had assisted him in the order more than Bro. Little. Not only so, but Bro. Little had brought him forward in a manner that could not be done by any brother in the Craft. Several of the brethren at the table had contributed their services to the same end, and to all of them he felt himself indebted for his position of Grand Master of Middlesex. Bro. Hervey, Bro. Little, and Bro. Moss took a leading part in the work. The province had to be established, and that entailed great difficulty and trouble. Middlesex was now in a position which nobody could regret; and no one would deny that it was standing, well as compared with other provinces. It was a great honour to be the Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex, and while he occupied that distinguished position he should devote his attention to promoting the prosperity of the province.

The Chairman then proposed "The health of the Treasurer and Secretary, Bros. John Hervey and John Thomas Moss," and informed the brethren, that the time, trouble, and expense of getting the testimonial up were incalculable.

Bro. John Hervey said he had a very small interest in this toast. He had had very little to do, but that little which consisted in acting as Treasurer to the Fund gave him great satisfaction to have it in his power to do. He had a fancy for supporting all who did their duty. He knew and felt that Bro. Little had done his duty; therefore he had supported him, and on the same should continue to support him. (Cheers). They, the subjects of this toast, must be very much gratified with the result which had been attained. For himself he should have been sorry indeed if a good result had not been obtained. It would have been a grievous thing if it had failed. He had played a subordinate part. The giant's part had been played by Bro. Moss, which was quite right, as he had appliances at hand which others he had not, and a purse at hand which they had not. Bro. Levander was an able coadjutor of Bro. Moss, as for myself, continued Bro. Hervey, laughing, I have made a fortune out of the money during the time it had been in my hands. I have profited most largely by the interest I have received on the deposits; and I am gratified at any rate that the cheque which was included in the purse this evening could not be handed over without me. (Cheers and laughter.) I do hope that the cheque will be paid when it is presented, because if not I shall be placed in an unfortunate position. (Cheers).

Bro. J. T. Moss in responding said although he had experienced a good deal of labour in working this movement it was to him a source of great pleasure.

Before he undertook the duties of Secretary he did not know he should have to write to so many brethren. When he wanted some circulars Bro. Kenning printed a thousand, all free of expense, too, which would show what were his sentiments towards Bro. Little. Bro. Kenning expressed those sentiments in words, and said he believed him to be the right man in the right place. He afterwards printed another thousand circulars, and in the end another thousand. Bro. Kenning had also advertised the Testimonial, and he (Bro. Moss) thought injustice would be done to Bro. Kenning if his liberality were not made known.

Bro. H. C. Levander also replied, but could not pretend to have done nearly so much as Bro. Moss, but he had done what he could, and introduced the movement to the attention of many brethren.

The Chairman proposed "The health of Bro. Davison, the Vice-chairman."

Bro. Davison in reply said he had spent a very pleasant evening. He would have been sorry to miss it, and should look back on it with great delight.

The Chairman next gave "The Press," coupling with it the name of Bro. Kenning.

Bro. Kenning, in thanking the Chairman and brethren, stated that though a newspaper proprietor he was not yet used to respond at dinners for this toast. He had started The Freemason at considerable expense, because he believed a suitable organ for the craft was not at the time in existence, and he had had a long and tedious time to wait while it established itself on a footing which encouraged him to hope it would pay. Brethren who had not tried the experiment had no idea of what the cost of a newspaper was; but he might inform them that unless a man had a large capital at his back; unbounded energy, and dauntless courage, it was no use attempting to establish one. Fortunately, he had capital; no one accused him of want of business energy; and he thought the brethren, if they knew the trials an uphill working of a newspaper entailed, would not think him egotistic if he laid claim to some courage in treading fearlessly forward. The

The Chairman at this point retired, and deputed Bro. Hervey to succeed him.

Bro. Hervey proposed "The Charities of London, especially those of the Masonic Order."

Bro. F. Adlard acknowledged the toast.

"The health of those brethren who have written on Freemasonry," was afterwards proposed, and Bro. W. Carpenter responded, after which the company separated.

The musical arrangements were under the able direction of Bro. H. Parker, and the songs sung during the evening were "The Tempest of Life," by Bro. Moss; "My Father's Apprentice," by Bro. Magnus Ohren; "Mistress Malone," by Bro. Horsley; "Sunny Days will Come Again," by Bro. Parker; "When other Lips," by Bro. Moss; a comic song by Bro. Charles Coote, and the "Red Cross Song," by Bro. H. Parker.

TESTIMONIAL TO BRO. J. ROWE, SEC. 105, PLYMOUTH.

A strong muster of the officers and brethren of Lodge Fortitude, No. 105, assembled at the Globe Hotel, Plymouth, on the 21st. instant, for the purpose of paying a tribute of esteem and regard to their tried and valued Secretary, Bro. James Rowe, and presenting him with a purse of thirty guineas, as a small recognition of his services.

The Worshipful Master, Bro. Martin Williams, presided, and after the brethren had done ample justice to the good things of this life, admirably put on the table by Bro. Watts, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and suitably responded to.

The Worshipful Master requested the V.W. Bro. R. Rodda, P.M., P.P.G.R., to propose the toast of the evening, and to make the presentation, and who, on rising, said:—Worshipful Master and brethren,—At your command, I rise to execute a very pleasant duty in acknowledging the meritorious services of V.W. Bro. James Rowe, P.M., P.P.G.T., who for upwards of 24 years past, has been the industrious, indefatigable, and eminently successful Secretary of Lodge Fortitude, now numbered 105 on the roll of the United Grand Lodge of England, and although it would have been more satisfactory to me, had some more worthy brother been selected to perform this office, who would render it more efficiently than I can possibly do, yet I will not hesitate to say that I yield to none in my desire to pay a tribute of respect to the distinguished Masonic abilities of our excellent brother, and to join my song in the united and harmonious chorus of Lodge Fortitude, and shout "Thus shall it be done unto the brother whom the Lodge delighteth to honour." I think it is not always in the best taste to laud and magnify a person in his presence, or expatiate on and extol the Masonic merits of a brother other than in his absence; but the brother whom we have met this evening to honour is an exception to the rule, if ever the rule afforded one.

On the escutcheon of his Masonic career for nearly 50 years past, has been sculptured in such bold relief, "that he who runs may read," that motto dear to every true and faithful brother of the mystic tye—namely, strict and unflinching fidelity to the principles of our illustrious order. By a long and consistent life he has thoroughly proved his attachment to our hallowed institution, and for a quarter of a century has his flag been hoisted at the mainmast of the good old frigate to which we are all proud to belong. Through evil report and through good report, in sickness and in health, in adversity and in prosperity, under the murky clouds of an obscure sky, as well as in the bright sunlight and azure firmament, he has illustrated the Duke's motto, "I am here." He has stuck faithfully to the old craft and kept her aloft, and during the whole period to which I have referred, no Master has left the chair without acknowledging a debt of gratitude to Bro. James Rowe, and without admitting that whatever success crowned his year of office, it was in a great measure due to the unwearied services and untiring zeal of the excellent Secretary. Few Secretaries have evinced such peculiar aptitude for the office, as that for which our Brother James Rowe has acquired so just a reputation. During the two years I had the honour of filling the chair of Lodge Fortitude, I had frequent and ample opportunities of acquainting myself with the great correspondence and heavy responsibilities which devolved upon the Secretary, and of witnessing the unwearied zeal and unabated perseverance with which he devoted himself and his valuable time to Freemasonry in general, and to Lodge Fortitude in particular. And it is to testify the high estimation in which he is so deservedly held, and to mark their appreciation of his worth, that the Worshipful Masters, Past Masters, and Brethren of Lodge Fortitude have met this evening to present him with a small tribute of their regard and esteem. (Turning to Bro. Rowe) And in asking your acceptance of this gold, my dear brother, it by no means represents our measure of your worth. You are now seventy-four years of age, you have passed the time allotted by Heaven to man, and we should deeply regret your passing away from amongst us without evincing some slight recognition of your most valuable services; and although we hope that you may yet live many years to afford us your counsel, instruction, and assistance, which you are so admirably qualified to do, we also sincerely pray that when you shall lay down your working tools to resume them no more, when the building of this life shall be completed the last stone fixed with shoutings of grace unto it, and the clarion of death shall sound to call you hence, then may the spirit of the blessed be near you to waft your enfranchised soul to the abode of everlasting peace. May the portals of the everlasting mansions in the Grand Lodge above be thrown open to receive your disembodied spirit, and may the first sound that falls upon your ears, as you enter that blissful region, be the voice of your Great Grand Master, welcoming you with the crowning plaudit of "Well done." There may you—

"Rest with the saints whose race is run,
Whose virtues track their flight to Heaven,
The goal is gained, the battle won;
To the him palm, the crown be given,
Which conquerers in that region wear,
Where all is lasting, bright and fair."

Bro. Rowe replied in a feeling and impressive manner, recognising the kindness of his brethren as most gratifying to himself and his family. He also gave some statistics of the lodge, and the friends present afterwards spent a right genial and pleasant meeting.

BREAKFAST.—EPP'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast, tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epp's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

TORQUAY ANNUAL MASONIC BALL.

The second ball under the auspices of St. John's Lodge, (No. 328), Torquay, was held on Monday, February 12th, in the Bath Saloon, and proved the most successful ball that has taken place in Torquay during the present season, there being 300 present. The arrangements were everything that could be desired, and reflected great credit on the Committee:—Bros. D. Watson, W.M. 328; T. Olliver, I.P.M.; I. Chapman, 18°, S.D.; H. Day, Steward; and F. M. Millar. The railway accommodation enabled those from Plymouth, Exeter, and other parts to arrive and depart in good time, showing that nothing had been left undone to make the whole a success, which it proved to be. The room was beautifully decorated with Masonic devices, emblems, flags and flowers. Over the entrance doors were the mottoes, "Virtue, Honour, and Mercy," and "Truth, Peace, and Concord." The room used for last year's ball, was on this occasion appropriated for refreshments, and was amply furnished with the choicest viands and wines, which drew forth the praise that follows such sumptuous preparations. The dancing commenced at ten o'clock, and was preceded by the brethren forming a guard of honour to the Lady Patronesses as they entered the ball room. The brethren in their various Masonic uniforms, ranging up to the 32°; in connection with the rich military and naval costumes of the officers in Her Majesty's service, together with elegant dresses of the ladies, made up one of the most brilliant scenes ever witnessed in Torquay. Bro. Henry Round's Quadrille Band, gave forth those strains of music that secured the approbation of those who tripped the light fantastic toe. Among those present we noticed:—

LADIES.—Baroness Burdett Coutts, the Dowager Lady Erskine, Miss E. Erskine, Lady Maria Crosse, Lady Macgregor, Lady Theresa Boyle, Miss Boyle, Lady Bishopp, Miss Bishopp, Lady Colquhoun, Miss Agnes Temple, Miss Kate Temple, Mrs. Col. Kirkman, Miss J. Original Correspondence.

THE AGGRESSIONS OF THE GRAND CHAPTER OF SCOTLAND ON ENGLISH MARK MASONRY.

SIR AND BROTHER.—A curious document has lately come into my possession which throws considerable light on the estimation in which the Grand Chapter of Scotland was held by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as lately as 1818, twenty-one years later than the date of the present minute book of the Mark Lodge at Bolton. The notion of a modern body, so utterly repudiated by the Masonic authorities in Scotland, claiming to interfere with the ancient and independent Mark Degree in England, is so inexpressibly ridiculous, that one wonders the absurdity does not strike our worthy neighbours themselves—unless it is true, as Sidney Smith once said, that a surgical operation is necessary in order to get a joke into the head of a Scot. The following extracts will speak for themselves.

First comes a long remonstrance from the then newly established Grand Chapter of Scotland, dated July 20th, 1818, to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, beginning thus—

“Most Worshipful Grand Master and Brethren of the Grand Lodge of Scotland.—It is with surprise we hear that a law has been passed by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, excluding from the right of sitting or voting in that body, all Masons who may hold offices in Masonry that acknowledge a higher degree than the three first.”

Next comes the action taken by the Grand Master of Scotland on the memorial of the Grand Chapter.

At the quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, held in Freemasons' Hall, this 3rd day of August, 1818—

“The Grand Secretary stated that he had received a letter from a Mr. M. Pringle, Recorder Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland, enclosing a communication, subscribed by certain persons as the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Most Excellent Grand Principals of the Supreme Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland; Whereupon James Allan Macnochie, Esq., R.W. Proxy for Mother Lodge, Kilwinning, stated; That as the Grand Lodge acknowledged no higher Degree or Order of Masonry, than that of St. John's, consisting of Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; and as the Grand Lodge had even by her standing laws, strictly prohibited all Masonic communication with any such pretended higher Orders or Degrees, he would object to any such communication being either received or read. And accordingly he moved that the communication in question be rejected without reading. This motion was seconded by Bro. James Dallas, Esq., R.W. Master of Canongate and Leith, Leith and Canongate Lodge. Bro. George Burnet, Esq., R.W. Master of Canongate Kilwinning Lodge, seconded by Bro. James Neilson, Esq., R.W. Proxy for New Abbey Lodge, moved that the communication should be read; and the vote being put ‘reject,’ or ‘read,’ when 51 voted reject, and 32 read. The communication was therefore rejected by a majority of 19.”

Yours fraternally,

AN ENGLISH MARK MASTER.

BRO. A. M. SILBER, of the Tuscan Lodge (of the well-known firm of Silber and Fleming, Wood-street, City), has been elected an Associate of the Society of Civil Engineers. Last year that gentleman read a paper on a new description of light, which if carried out in railways and places where gas cannot be easily obtained, will be a great boon, not only from the saving of expense, but also from the brilliancy of light exhibited. The various trials at several public places has been a great success; and the very elaborate and talented paper read by him before the Society was listened to with great attention, and that gentleman, it is hoped, will reap a reward, not only in an honorary sense, but also in a pecuniary one, which he so well deserves, not only from the simplicity of his invention, but also for the talent shown in its development.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

TURK'S ISLAND.—The annual installation meeting of the Forth Lodge, No. 647, (E.C.) was held at the Masonic Hall, in Grand Turk, Turk's Island, when the W.M. elect, Bro. John T. Astwood, S.W., having been regularly installed Right Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, was pleased to appoint the following brethren to be his office-bearers; viz:—Bros. C. R. Hinson, I.P.M., Treas; James Maclean, S.W.; Edwin J. Astwood, J.W.; Joseph A. Gardiner, Sec.; James W. Milbourne, S.D.; Michle Victoria, J.D.; Henry Kennedy, I.G.; James Astwood, and T. J. Godet, Stewards; Anthony Francis, Tyler.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—The Masonic Ball, (for the benefit of the poor of all kinds) was held at the Greek Theatre, under the patronage of the Dist. G.M., Bro. J. P. Brown, and under the auspices of the four lodges working under the English constitution, was attended by upwards of 300 persons, and went off with great eclat. The theatre was prettily decorated with flags and evergreens, and presented a brilliant tout ensemble. In the intervals light refreshments were served to the ladies. Dancing commenced shortly after 9 p.m. and continued until five o'clock in the morning.

A Masonic Lodge is in contemplation at Bagdad, in Mesopotamia, the supposed primitive abode of man, where there is, already, quite a number of Freemasons, among whom are some Persian Mussulmans. The Chief Minister of the Shah of Persia, the Commander-in-chief of his army, and many other of his highest functionaries belong to the order. It is believed that a lodge will soon be founded at Teheran, the capital of Persia, if, indeed, one does not already exist there, under the Grand Orient of France.

Another lodge (English) is about to be founded in Jerusalem, the ancient city of Kings David and Solomon. The Consul of the United States of America has taken the initiative in its formation. Besides a goodly number of resident brethren there, Jerusalem is annually visited by travellers of all faiths and nationalities, who are Freemasons; thus the great order of universal brotherhood, after making the circuit of the entire world, returns to the scene of its primitive creation, and the Temple of Solomon will once more shed light upon the footsteps of Freemasons. The “Jerusalem Lodge” is to contain as much of the ancient fragments of the “Lodge of Solomon” as can be collected together. The cedars of Mount Lebanon will furnish its working tools; Joppa and Baalbek will lend their aid in the reconstruction of the edifice; and Hiram, King of Tyre, live in the memories of those who humbly imitate his faithful career in life, as well as in his faith.

Notwithstanding the misconceptions existing among many Mussulmans of Turkey regarding the principles of Freemasonry, it gradually recommends itself to their better opinion. It tends very much to dispossess them of their great animosity against men of all other religious bodies than their own. It is to this hostility that may be attributed the slow progress made amongst Mussulmans in mental culture and improvement, even in the arts and sciences of other peoples and countries. Everything, therefore, which tends to dispel it, must be a great advantage to them; and it is only when it has been removed, and religious hostility fades away before the genial light and warmth of one universal brotherhood, that there will exist not only harmony between the Moslem and men of all other faiths, but a sincere sympathy among them.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—St. James's Lodge (No. 448).—On Tuesday, January, 30th, the annual festival of this lodge was celebrated at the Freemasons' Hall, St. John's Place, Halifax, where there was a numerous attendance of brethren. Prior to the banquet the lodge was opened in the three degrees by Bro. J. Ibbertson, W.M., and after the transaction of business Bro. W. F. Wilkinson was duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year by Bro. Normanton, P.M., P.P.G.S.D., assisted by Bro. F. Waddington, P.M. of the Saville Lodge, Elland, who conducted the installation ceremony in an excellent manner. The W.M. then proceeded to invest his officers, Bro. R. Jessop being conducted to S.W.'s chair. Bro. A. Matthewson, J.W.; Bro. T. Whitaker, S.D.; Bro. Taylor Wheelhouse, J.D.; Bro. C. T. Rhodes, I.G.; and Bro. J. Greenwood, P.M., Tyler. The lodge having been closed the brethren dined together in the dining-hall, the W.M. presiding, being surrounded by Bros. H. Gaukroger, W.M. of Probity, No. 61; W. H. D. Horsfall, W.M. of De Warren Lodge, and several visiting brethren. The loyal and masonic toasts were proposed by the chairman, that of the Provincial Grand Master and Officers of the Province being responded to by Bro. Normanton, P. Prov. G.S.D., and Bro. Fred. Whitaker, Prov. G.S.D. The “W.M. of St. James's Lodge” was proposed by Bro. Ibbertson, P.M., and received with hearty cheers, to which the chairman responded. The “Installing Officers” was proposed by the chairman, responded to by Bros. Normanton and Waddington. The “Past Masters of St. James's Lodge” was proposed by Bro. Matthewson, to which Bros. E. Walshaw, P.M.; Normanton, P.M.; Lupton, P.M., and Ibbertson, P.M., responded. “Our Visiting Brethren” was introduced by Bro. E. Walshaw, and replied to Bros. Beaumont and Mackenzie, of the Saville Lodge, Elland; Sutcliffe P.M., Todmorden; Hartley, Todmorden, and Belton. “The Senior and Junior Wardens and Officers of St. James's Lodge” was proposed by Bro. Lupton, P.M. and responded to by thy Wardens. “The W.M., P.M., Officers and Brethren of the Lodge of Probity, No. 61,” was proposed by the chairman, and gracefully responded to by Bro. Gaukroger, W.M. of Probity. “The W.M., P.M., Officers and Brethren of the De Warren Lodge, No. 1302,” proposed by the chairman, to which Bro. W. H. D. Horsfall, W.M.; J. Firth, P.M.; and F. Whitaker, P.M. responded. “The Masonic Charities” was proposed by Bro. T. G. Knowles, responded to by Bros. E. Walshaw, and Normanton, who spoke of the value of Masonic institutions, and felt sure that the brethren could visit the Schools and the Home for Decayed Masons they would be induced to assist those institutions more liberally. Bro. F. Whitaker also responded, and spoke of the large amount of good done by those institutions. He had taken a great pride in them, and not only in them, but in other charitable institutions at home. For some time he had made a practice of devoting a certain percentage of his income to these charities, and he never yet felt, however, much he had given, that he was the worse; on the contrary, the more he gave the more he seemed to receive. But that was not his sole motive; he was sure that to assist such institutions was to act on the true Masonic principle, which blessed both the giver and the receiver. He urged all the brethren to adopt the same plan, and they would never regret it.—The toast of the “Poor and Distressed Masons” was given by the chairman. The evening was very pleasantly spent, several songs and recitations being given.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Liver Complaints and Disorders of the Bowels. It is impossible to exaggerate the extraordinary virtue of this Medicine, in the treatment of all affections of the Liver or irregularities of the Bowels. In cases of depraved or superabundant Bile, these Pills taken freely, have never been known to fail. In Bowel complaints they are equally efficacious, but they should then be taken rather sparingly, for every every medicine in the form of an aperient requires caution when the Bowels are disordered, though a more gentle or more genial aperient than these Pills in moderate doses has never yet been discovered. If taken according to the printed instructions they not only cure the complaint but improve the whole system.

POET MASONS.

It is a somewhat curious fact that few of our great poets appear to have been members of the Masonic Fraternity, and that still fewer seem to have added to the poetic literature of the Craft.

This is the more remarkable, when we consider that the traditions of Freemasonry offer a fitting field for the imagination, and that some of its legends convey philosophical instruction under the fanciful guise of allegory and parable.

True, we possess one gem of poetic lustre in Duganne's "King Solomon's Temple," and it is a specimen which at once attests his scholarly attainments and masonic zeal. It is also true that Burns's "Farewell," and Rob Morris's "We meet upon the Level and part upon the Square," are each perfect in their way; but when we have mentioned these, we may be said to have exhausted the list of masonic lyrics which the Craft will not willingly let die.

These somewhat desultory utterances make us lament that none of the masters of song have favoured us with a more exhaustive production on so worthy a theme as Freemasonry, which combines the romances and mythicism of the past with the matter-of-fact realities of the present. It is, however, gratifying to know that one of the sweetest and purest poets of the day is a true and practical Freemason—that one who can kindle dazzling thoughts at the fire of his own heart and brain is also one who can spread the cement of brotherly love, as a fellow labourer in our midst—that the work of Freemasonry is to such a mind a congenial and pleasing task, because he believes it to be consistent with man's highest and holiest aspirations.

It will be within the remembrance of our readers that we hailed the appearance of Bro. William Sawyer's first poetic volume, "Ten Miles from Town," with sincere sentiments of pleasure and delight. As far back as the 1st May, 1869, we bore testimony to his genius in the following words:

"In Bro. Sawyer we recognize a true poet, one of the gifted few who possess the faculty of penetrating into the inner life of man, and revealing its mysteries of cloud and sunshine, of hope and joy, or of doubt and darkness." How well our eulogium was merited, time has already proved, and the latest creations of Bro. Sawyer's opulent muse will still more amply justify our somewhat prophetic praise.

From a perusal of his last work, "The Legend of Phyllis," with "A Year of Song," we have risen with feelings of unalloyed satisfaction, and we may fairly add that some of its conceptions surpass in colour and brilliancy nearly anything that we have seen in the wide range of modern poetry. Bear witness the following passage, which describes the meeting of the Prince Demaphoon, the son of Theseus, with the Royal Phyllis:—

"She, in her queenly splendour girt about,
Went forth to meet him. And Demaphoon
Uplifting eyes, beheld her as she moved,
Regal, with scintillant glint and interglow
Of blending gems. Wound gold about her brow,
The gold of gathered tresses woven fair,
Glittered for diadem. Around her feet,
Wide as a wave, a robe of shimmering sweep,
Purple and gold inwoven, thread for thread
Sparkled its shining way. Enmeshed in light,
Her bosom netted in a diamond net
Shone pearl-wise, and for girdle, glittering
With gems through all its undulant length, a snake
Of triple coil circled her waist and lolled
A heavy head with onyx aspice eyes.
So moved she lustrous, gleaming in the sun,
In the matched movement of the absolute prime
Of beauty, blossom-brief, and in the touch
Of its own ripe perfection perishing.
So glorious drew she near Demaphoon,
Who, unregardful of aught else, beheld
Her face, and looking in her face, saw youth
And beauty shining in the light of youth,
And seeing loved."

We shall resume our consideration of Bro. Sawyer's exquisite poems next week.

FREEMASONRY.

BY BRO. J. P. B.

To limit Freemasonry to any portion of time, or to restrict it to any portion of the globe, is to deprive it of the universal interest which its principles have always possessed in the opinion of mankind. The name which it bears is calculated nevertheless to convey a very inadequate definition of its real character and objects. Indeed, it wants one of a more significant analyzation, and better calculated to bear with it a more satisfactory explanation. And yet, when properly interpreted even its name will be seen to denote that it does clearly refer to the nature and principles of a world-wide institution.

The Almighty Creator, not only of this world, but also of the entire universe which surrounds it, is called its Architect. Architecture, or the art of constructing habitations for man, must have been the very earliest one to which the minds and thoughts of the offspring of Adam and Eve ever turned, after leaving the temporary abode prepared for them, previous to their creation, by the Almighty.

It may be supposed that the progenitors of the human race, in the beginning, had no need of any "house built with hands," and that that they actually did reside very much in the open air, sheltered only by the trees, and couched upon the foliage of the locality, wherever it was, in which their Maker created them. In the course of time, exposure to the elements of heat and cold and the rains, compelled their descendants to endeavour to provide, for these inclemencies, by the construction of artificial covers, in the same manner as the original pair made for themselves clothing from the leaves of trees.

Indeed, the earliest history of mankind is fully connected with nature and its seasons. The rugged surface of the world, and the starry firmament above it, must have deeply impressed the early human inhabitants of our globe.

What we now call civilization, its wants and its vices, were wholly unknown to Adam and Eve, and, unbiassed by almost all of the passions of a confined existence, they were guided only by the ordinary impulses of nature. However, that they knew and fully recognised the Creator of all things, the writers of the Bible clearly tell us, and their earliest attempts at Architecture must have been humble efforts to imitate the works of the Great Architect of everything which surrounded them, and came within the limits of their corporeal powers of vision. If they possessed none of the instruments of Architecture now in use, nature will have suggested to to the offspring of Adam and Eve the only rules suitable for the construction of their humble abodes. The branches of trees, as well as their leaves, must have been the first materials used by them for such purposes. Stones and earth would naturally be the next used.

The form of their edifices, such as they were, would, in all probability, be square or triangular and all upright, as a matter of necessity. An entrance would be left for the inmates, probably towards the East, or sun's rising, so that its other three sides would be directed to the West, North, and South points of the horizon. Or, if this disposition of the earliest edifices constructed by human hands is erroneous, the entrance might have been, possibly, placed to the West, and the portion of it occupied by its Architects, in the depths of the enclosure, viz., the East.

As the talent of architecture increased, and became more developed among mankind, an improvement must have been made in the implements used for such a purpose. It may be supposed that, with many, the circular form was adopted in the construction of dwellings, imitations of the visible feature of the surrounding world. The tent still in use among the wanderers of the desert, is of this form, in place of being square; and no other reason may be assigned for such a shape. The few exceptions which exist to such a theory, would not be alleged as a proof of its fallacy. Indeed, the entire art of architecture, if not a divine one, is at least one based upon nature, and humbly imitative of the works of the Great Architect of the Universe. As it progressed, it, in its highest branches, became still more so, and the sublimity of the domes of the loftest edifices, are only imitations of the greater dome of the Heavens. The bodies of trees, originally used as supports of the dwellings, erected by the earlier architects, became, at a later period supplanted, by stone and marble columns; ornamented by imitations of the branches with which the former were adorned by nature, and the foliage of the more beautiful plants.

In this manner, architecture must have been the very earliest art of mankind, in the beginning of human existence, and has, since then, been progressing down to the present period of its perfection. It is the noblest, the most sublime of all the arts and sciences, and there is, therefore, no need for surprise, that in view of its origin and commencement it should become a mystical one, and its implements, so many symbols, applicable to laws of mortality and Humanity.

For the reasons above stated, architecture, or Masonry, is intimately connected with geology, philosophy, and the divine laws of nature. The Great Architect of the Universe is the author and architect also of the movements of the celestial bodies, the changes of the seasons, the return of day and night, the phases of the moon, and consequently of the divisions of time, into years, months, weeks, days, and hours. With all of them, Freemasonry is intimately connected. The whole vast universe is the lodge of the Almighty Architect. This single globe, is the work of His sublime art. The arch of the Heavens is His footstool, and this earth, probably, only one of the infinite atoms composing the columns of His incomprehensibly vast edifice.

The reunions of the Grand Lodges occur during the two poetic seasons of Spring and Autumn, when nature is vivified, and again grows old. It has been most truly stated that nothing in nature is ever at rest. All nature is in movement and only when it stops, life will seem to exist. Even time is said to pass in cycles; to human comprehension, everything in nature is circular, and the ancients, therefore, used the serpent with its tail in its mouth, as a visible symbol of this belief. A ring, placed on the finger of a bride is an emblem of perpetual love and fidelity. The world revolves in a perpetual circle, and so do the stars in the firmament above, which, so we suppose, is the abode of the Divine Architect. Not so do the four seasons, but also the subdivision of the year. It is, therefore, usual for the lodges to meet once a month, thus also showing the connection of Freemasonry with time, and the phases of the moon, and the divisions of the year.

Freemasonry has an intimate connection, also, with man, in the divisions of the time allotted him to live. Youth, maturity, and old age, are clearly pointed out in its three degrees. The rejuvenescence of man is one of the symbols of the Rosicrucians, as fallacious as was the "Fountain of Youth" so much sought after during the Middle Ages. It was thought that as nature seemed imperishable, and Spring succeeded Autumn and Winter, the fall of leaves followed by returning verdure, that human life, in this world, could be perpetuated or restored by chemical means. Alas! for so much delusion and error. Man is to be born again, but will live in another world; and not in this even will he progress towards a better knowledge of the Divine architecture, to perfection, or retrograde in the degrees of existence. The responsibility of his career in life seems to be left with himself. If he really acquires light, (so to use one symbolic term for knowledge) and is guided by it in the true path, he will rise upwards; if not, he will probably sink beneath his present state. Will he ever be annihilated from existence, or will he be one ejected from within the very Lodge of the Great Architect of the Universe?

Such are the reflections which still, and probably always will, occupy the minds of reflecting men in their search after Divine light.

Freemasonry may, therefore, be considered as a theoretic imitation of the divine art of Architecture, divested of its actual and natural signification, and applied to the equally sublime edifice of man, in the structure of his morality and humanity.

It is a strange though covert fact, that true religions, as well as politics, seem to separate mankind, in place of bringing them together. Fancied inspirations have the effect of creating imaginary convictions of the faculty of judging the beliefs of others. It is a result of human frailty, in man's search of the divine light, to forget that all are the children of our common Creator, who alone knows which of them is right, and which is wrong.

Freemasonry has, for principle, to reject all such vain pretensions in mankind, and to leave the Great Architect of the Universe the only true judge of men's hearts. It enjoins its members to fully recognize the existence of a Divine Creator, and the justice of His providences. It urges the Christian to be a sincere and good one and the same of the Jew and the Moslem, each in their particular faith. It seeks to convert neither the one nor the other from his own convictions. It has no respect for whoever is only tolerant of his peculiar faith. The hypocrite possesses such sympathy. It places all mankind on the one common platform of brethren, without any regard to their religion or political convictions. It is enough for the Freemason to meet a brother (and in this view all men are brethren) in distress, in poverty, in suffering, to hasten to his succour, without any regard to his religion, his nationality, or his political creed.

In this manner, it forms an universal brotherhood, among all men who fully recognise one universal God and Creator, under whatever name this may be.

Though some may not be fully aware of this fact, it is the real origin and perpetuation of Freemasonry, and the cause of its extension over nearly the whole of the globe. It cannot be these principles to which the prejudices can be ascribed, existing against Freemasonry in the minds of many persons. They are now too well known, I believe, to have so unfortunate a result. Their tenets are too often visible, in their charities, their assistance and their sympathy, bestowed upon the poor, and the needy, to have so unfortunate a result. Often, also, the fruits of our institution are unknown to the public,—for Freemasonry seeks for no popularity or commendation.

The real cause of its condemnation, on the part of many excellent persons, is its secret signs of individual recognition amongst its members, and the erroneous interpretations given to its symbols. Innocent as they are, and totally divested of any connection with religion, they seem unfortunately to inspire the most erroneous apprehensions. Innumerable books have been written and published on the real nature and character of Freemasonry, there being now little unknown to the public regarding them, and yet, these harmless signs and symbols cast a dark shade over the whole most ancient institution.

Nothing entirely renders them perfect, and there are unfortunately very many bad Freemasons. Some are intemperate, others immoral, and others again, far from being actuated by the sentiments of universal fraternity which are its very basis, and yet it comprises on the other hand, millions of the highest and best of men. So it is with Christianity. How many there are, who would deem themselves always insulted if their character as Christians were put in doubt, but whose whole actions and lives fully show that they are not actuated by high and true Christian principles.

It is too well known to be matter of any secrecy, that the implements of architecture are used now by Masons as so many symbols of morality. An upright edifice serving as a term viz., an upright man, all of whose acts are square and not tortuous, and in this manner the Square and Compasses are used as so many definitions of what should be the conduct of all mankind in their dealings with each other. If any other benevolent or philanthropic society, should adopt private words, or even signs for mutual recognition, they certainly would have a perfect right to do so.

In the olden times of Christianity, men greeted each other with a holy kiss, in modern days they do so by a mere shake of the hand, as so many tokens of kindly recognition. Why, therefore may not the Freemasons, have a peculiar shake of the hand, by which to recognise and distinguish each other, without increasing the penalty of condemnation on the part of those who are not of the benevolent fraternity? Certainly the outer world is unjust to us, and disposed to judge of us, rather by what they do not know than what they do do regarding our object. When the Christian is seen to succour the poor Jew, or the Moslem to aid the poor Christian, simply because they meet on the common platform of pity, of an universal brotherhood, irrespective of their individual religious faiths, the outer world, which in its narrow sentiments of bigotry and religious pride, considers itself superior to any such sentiments, cannot in its heart condemn us.

Be this, however, as it may, Freemasons, may well afford to disregard opinions based upon so fallacious a supposition. We feel and know that the All Seeing Eye of the Great Architect of the Universe—the Almighty Creator of all men, sees into the very depths of our hearts. He, alone is the supreme judge of our principles, and of our conduct; and we humbly submit them to His all just judgment.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

A special meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Friday, the 23rd ult., numerously attended by past and present Provincial Grand Officers, and by representatives of each Lodge in the province.

St. John's Lodge, No. 279, having been opened in the three degrees, the Provincial Grand Master and his officers were received in due form. The Provincial Lodge having been opened, and the roll called, Bro. A. Pell, M.P., Prov. G. Reg., read addresses of congratulation to Her Majesty, and to the Prince of Wales, which had been prepared.

Bro. W. Kelly, Prov. G.M., moved the adoption of the address the Queen, which was seconded by Bro. H. Halford, Prov. S.G.W., and carried unanimously.

On the motion of Bro. A. Pell, Prov. G. Reg., seconded by Bro. Dr. Hayeroft, P. Prov. G. Chaplain, the address to the Prince of Wales was also unanimously adopted.

Bro. H. Deane, Prov. J. G.W., proposed, and Bro. Rev. J. Spittal, P. Prov. S.G.W., seconded, that the addresses be signed by the Provincial Grand Master, and countersigned by the Provincial Grand Registrar and the Provincial Grand Secretary, which was carried unanimously.

The Right Hon. the Earl Ferrers, P. Prov. J.G.W., having taken an O.B., as to the government of the province, was installed and saluted as D. Prov. G.M., and expressed his acknowledgments for the honour which had been conferred on him.

A resolution expressive of sympathy with the family of the late Bro. W. G. Palmer, P. Prov. S. G. W., was, on the motion of the Provincial Grand Master, seconded by Bro. Deane, Prov. J. G. W., unanimously adopted. The deceased, who was one of the oldest Masons in the province, was universally esteemed both by his Brethren in the Craft, and the inhabitants generally of the neighbourhood in which he resided.

On the motion of the Provincial Grand Master, seconded by the Rev. W. Langley, P. Prov. S. G. W., and supported by the Rev. J. Spittal, P. Prov. S. G. W., a donation of £5 5s. to the Boys' School, to be made in the name of the Provincial Grand Secretary for the time being, was unanimously carried.

Bro. Duncomb, Prov. G. J. D., desired to express the gratification of the Lodge at the recovery of the Provincial Grand Master from his recent illness. The Rev. J. Denton, P. Prov. S. G. W., also made some remarks to the same effect; after which the Provincial Grand Lodge, and afterwards the Lodge of St. John's, were closed in due form.

STAFFORDSHIRE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

A Provincial Grand Lodge of Emergency was held in the Staffordshire Knot Lodge Room, Stafford, on Friday, the 22nd ult. About forty brethren were present, including several of the Provincial Grand Officers.

The Lodge was opened by Bro. Pilling, the W.M. of the Staffordshire Knot Lodge, and the Provincial Grand Lodge, was subsequently opened in due form by the Right Worshipful Brother the Earl of Shrewsbury, Provincial Grand Master, who, on assuming the gavel, was saluted masonically by the brethren.

The Divine blessing having been invoked by Bro. the Rev. Jos. Westbury, Prov. G. Chaplain, the Prov. G.M. called upon him to deliver a short inaugural address on the business which had called the brethren together, namely, the adoption of addresses of congratulation to the Queen and the Prince of Wales, on the recovery of His Royal Highness from his recent severe illness. This having been done, the Te Deum was chanted, as well as the 103rd, 121st, and 145th Psalms, Bro. Barlow, P.G. Organist, presiding at the organ.

It is quite impossible, from the crowded state of our columns, to give more than a reference to the subsequent loyal and patriotic speeches which characterised the moving and seconding of the addresses. The noble Prov. G.M. thanked the province generally for the ready manner in which the brethren had joined in their congratulations; every lodge in the province had prepared addresses to her Majesty and to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the whole of which, together with the two beautiful addresses from the Province, would be forwarded to the Marquis of Ripon for presentation that evening.

The addresses from the province were then read by Bro. W. Cartwright, P.G. Sec., and (together with those from the various lodges) placed on a table for subsequent inspection by the brethren.

The addresses having been adopted, the R.W. Prov. G. Master remarked that he hoped those lodges which had provided the more elaborate addresses would exercise increased liberality to the various masonic charities, and that those which had not been so extravagant would expend their reserved resources on the same admirable objects.

Bro. Bodenham, P. Prov. S. G. D., then moved that 50 guineas should be presented from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge to the Masonic Institution for Boys, on the occasion of the R. W. Prov. G. M. presiding at the Anniversary Festival.

The suggestion was seconded by Bro. Howells, Prov. G. Treasurer, and adopted.

On the roll of lodges and officers being called over, it was found that one lodge was unrepresented, and seven officers absent from duty. Bro. Wordsworth, D. Prov. G.M., and Bro. Arnitage, Prov. G.D. of C., each sent an apology for their attendance. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, a code of bye-laws, previously drawn up by a committee appointed for that purpose, and circulated throughout the province, was then considered, and, after one or two alterations had been made, duly passed. An invitation to hold the next provincial meeting at Eastwood was then given to the Prov. G.M.M., from the Prince Edward Lodge, No. 14, after which, there being no other business to transact, the Provincial Grand Lodge was duly closed. Bro. Thomas Oakden, Prov. P.G. St. B., presented a magnificent banner and stand, with the arms of the Provincial Grand Lodge thereon, which was cordially accepted. A banquet, presided over by the Prov. G.M., was provided, at which a goodly number was present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and altogether a very agreeable evening was spent by those assembled, the Sheffield brethren doing their utmost to add to the pleasure of the visitors.

THE ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER OF IMPROVEMENT.

The second annual festival, closing the second season of this Chapter of Improvement, was held on Thursday week at Freemason's Tavern, after an evening's work at Freemasons' Hall. The success which was anticipated for the Chapter when it was started, has during the two years of its operation been more than realised, and it is with considerable gratification we have heard that the attendance of the companions desirous of receiving instruction has been both regular and numerous. It appears, however, not entirely to entirely to meet with the approval of the Preceptor of the Chapter, that some of the companions who honoured it by becoming its founders have not further assisted it by attending its weekly meetings, and Comp. Brett, it will be seen, in the remarks he made after the dinner on Thursday night, points this conduct out as a failing. Of course there always two sides to a question, and the companions who are guilty of such lax conduct might perhaps, if they were heard, submit good reasons for their absence. Business engagements may peradventure be more important to them than a knowledge of Masonic working, and they may not feel disposed to let the Masonic world witness their orphans suppliant for relief from destitution occasioned by their parents' too great devotion to the learning or imparting a knowledge of Craft or Arch ritual. Excepting to the Preceptor, unqualified satisfaction has been given to the members. Following in the steps of the Emulation Lodge of Improvement, the Chapter, affording the same sound instruction, hoped the same amount of support. Their hopes have been realised, and comparing roughly the total number of Craft Masons with that of the Arch, the good workers of the Degree are about on a par. The attendance at the festivals of the two degrees, is also comparatively the same, so that they would seem to be running neck and neck.

Among the companions who attended on Thursday week we noticed the Rev. C. J. Martyn (Chairman at the banquet), John Hervey (Treasurer), James Brett (Preceptor), John Boyd, Capt. C. F. Trower (Prov. G. P. S. Hants), James Self, Alfred Clayton, S. Rosenthal, G. K. Lemann, W. West Smith, W. Nicholas, H. Dicketts, W. H. Green, C. Godfrey, H. H. Pearce, C. Saxon Hooper, T. Bull, W. Carpenter, H. Chapman, T. Cubitt, John Coutts, W. Goodyer, Rev. W. Cochrane, R. S. Warrington, G. A. Ibbetson, J. L. Thomas, Bosworth, T. H. Edmunds, J. A. Farnfield, J. W. Barnett, Kingston, T. K. The Chapter was opened by the Companions, with the following Companions as officers:—James Brett, Z.; J. Boyd, H.; H. Dicketts, J.; G. K. Lemann, N.; R. Wentworth Little, E.; W. West Smith, P. S.; James Self, 1st A.; W. H. Green, 2nd A.; and John Coutts, I G.

Comp. Brett gave the historical oration, and was followed by Comp. Self, who worked the 1st clause, Comp. W. West Smith the 2nd, and Comp. W. H. Green the 3rd. Comp. Brett then explained the jewel worn by the Companions of the Order, and Comp. H. Dicketts gave the historical portion of the ceremony, which falls to the J. of a chapter. The readiness with which all these divisions of the ritual were delivered were the theme of universal approbation, and Companions of Chapters where the ceremony is hobbled through, would have done well to see what benefits accrue from a little attention to education in Masonic ceremonies. After some formal chapter business had been conducted, the companions adjourned to an excellent repast in Freemasons' Tavern, where Mr. Francatelli had shown great skill in catering, and when the banquet had been disposed of, grace was said, and the toasts of the evening followed. In giving the first toast, "The Queen," &c., the Chairman said a peculiar interest attached to this toast just now, as in a few days her Majesty was coming to take part in a great national rejoicing. Every one of her subjects would hail with joy the fact that she was once more among her people; and the citizens of London would do all in their power to give her a suitable welcome. As Arch Masons we had to look at the event in another point of view. It was our duty to submit ourselves to all lawfully constituted authority, whether of masonic or civil jurisdiction, and, therefore, we should drink with all the honour, and the greatest enthusiasm, the health of the Queen.

The Chairman then said he would go out of his way as president of a Royal Arch gathering, for which he would ask pardon, and propose the health of the Prince of Wales. It was not a right thing, that though his Royal Highness was not a Royal Arch Mason, his name should be omitted in assemblages of Royal Arch Masons. We knew what he was in other departments of the order he had taken up, the energy he had displayed, and the interest he had taken in the charities. He (the Chairman) would give, and he trusted the companions would drink with all cordiality, "The Health of His Royal Highness," and would express, in the name of all his hearers, how rejoiced he was at the Prince's recovery, and how thankful he was to the Almighty for it. The celebration of next Tuesday was a public offering of such thankfulness, and he hoped that the illness which it was feared would terminate fatally would be the beginning of many a happy year of useful life.

The Chairman, after giving "The Health of the M.E.G.Z.," proposed that of the G.H. and G. J., and in doing so, said he was aware that he was proposing the health of exemplary and worthy men. As he had said at the festival of the Benevolent Institution a few weeks ago, he had the honour of being exalted in Royal Arch Masonry fifteen years ago, with the G.H., the Earl of Carnarvon, and ever since that time the noble companion had worked well and worthily for the cause of Masonry. He would couple the names of Companions Hervey and Brett with the toast.

Companion John Hervey said the difficult task of returning thanks had fallen him, who was least entitled to do so; but he did not the less appreciate the kind expressions the M.E. had made use of. He felt himself very small on that occasion, as Comp. Brett had carried off all the honours of the evening, had done all the duties, and performed them satisfactorily. Speaking for the Grand Principals, they were two noblemen who deserved well of the Craft. The M.E. had stated what he knew of the G.H., and he (Comp. Hervey) was sure that Lord de Tabley in his own province of Cheshire had done all he could to promote Masonry in general, and Royal Arch Masonry in particular. As Comp. Brett would speak for himself, he (Comp. Hervey) would thank the companions in his own name only, and would assure the companions how much he valued the kind expressions used by the M.E. towards the Grand Principals and the Grand Officers.

Comp. John Hervey then proposed "the M.E.Z., Comp. the Rev. C. J. Martyn," who deserved well of all the companions. The Rev. Companion had said how admirably Lord Carnarvon had performed all his duties during the last fifteen years, but he (Comp. Hervey) would appeal most confidently to all the companions present, whether Comp. Martyn had not during the same time, done all he could to increase the usefulness of the Craft, and uphold its honour. In the province, of Gloucestershire, he had for a long time presided, over both lodge and chapter, in a most efficient manner. He then migrated in a slight degree, to London, inasmuch as he was appointed a Grand Officer, and during the two years that he was Grand Chaplain in the Craft, and while he was Grand Officer in the Arch, every one of his duties was performed to the satisfaction of both Craft and Arch. Now, he had migrated to Suffolk, in which province, he had also applied himself to carry out the duties of Masonry, there he was now Master of a lodge, and propagating the Craft with his usual vigour. They were under peculiar obligations to him that evening, for coming from Suffolk, a distance of 120 miles, to preside over them. They were quite alive to the value of these services, and would show their appreciation of them by drinking his health.

The Chairman said, he rose to thank the companions with feelings of real respect and deep gratitude, and for this reason, that he knew many of them, at all events, had been pleased to take him to a certain extent on trust. Living so far away, he must be unknown to many, not perhaps by name or report, but still actually and personally, then he could say—it was one of the very great pleasures of life that one had the opportunity these meetings offered, of being put into connection with those, whom, without such opportunity of meeting, one would not come in contact with. He sincerely thanked them for their kindness in accepting the health proposed by Comp. Hervey. It was quite true, as that Companion had said, that he endeavoured to promote the interests of the order, and devoted a good deal of time to that object. He wished he had been able to devote more, but when he came to think that he had duties of another sort to perform, he could not suppose that it was required of him to follow Masonry closer than he did. With respect to his coming from Suffolk to attend this meeting, a subject also alluded to by Comp. Hervey, he could only add that he had the greatest pleasure in doing so. Touching the same Companion's mention of his (the Chairman's) zeal in Masonry, he might inform the companions, without self-laudation, that he had to start off next morning early by train, and when he reached the station in Suffolk, would have to drive 22 miles to attend the Provincial Grand Lodge which was to be held that day, to pass resolutions congratulating the Queen and Prince of Wales on the happy recovery of the latter. After this he would have to preside at his own lodge to perform three initiations, a passing, and a raising, in Craft Masonry. He was not altogether a drone in Masonry. Some months ago when he was asked to preside that evening, he said he would do his best, but wished they could find some one who would do it better. He had, however, done his best; it was not much but such as it was they were most heartily welcome to now and at any time.

The Chairman next said—I will ask your permission to propose as a toast "Prosperity to the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement," which I am certain you will receive as I give it, with all cordiality. In the Chapter to-night we have all of us—and I for one took the liberty of saying so—been delighted with the great treat we have had, and I am quite sure we shall all go away—at least I shall, impressed with all I have heard, determined, still more than I have hitherto been, to follow our Royal Arch Masonry, and make myself acquainted with the details of its every part. You must all know pretty well, that the excellence could not have been arrived at but by the most patient assiduity being bestowed on it by Comps. Brett, Boyd and others in the Chapter; and as it has been said by an old English proverb, that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, so the proof of Comp. Brett has been found in the admirable Masonic repast he has provided for us to-night. I give you "Prosperity to the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement," and couple with it the names of Comps. Brett, Boyd, Dicketts, and the three Principals to night, and also the health of all those of other Companions who have assisted so admirably—Comps. Self, West, Smith, and Green. We cannot single out one name in drinking this toast; and I therefore think I shall have consult your wishes, as well as my own by giving honour where honour is due, and proposing "The Health of Comp. Brett."

Comp. James Brett, G.D.C. said he felt that he could not return thanks as he ought for the toast which had just been drunk, if he had been responding only for himself, but there was an outlet for him when he saw other Companions standing in acknowledgment of the toast who had assisted him in the duties of the Chapter. In the first place he thanked the M.E. for presiding that evening, and every member of the Chapter felt indebted to him for the able and graceful way in which it had been done. Much had been said by the M.E. in praise in the way in which the evenings work had been conducted, and for this compliment he (Comp. Brett,) in the name of himself and of all those who had taken part in it, begged to thank him. On the point of the working of the Chapter he felt strongly. There were those present who were the first promoters of the Chapter—he might say the first to suggest it, as a society to which they might resort for instruction, in which smoking and drinking would not be permitted during the work. Ever since he had been a Royal Arch Freemason they had been in the habit of meeting for instruction in taverns, where he must confess, he had learned a great deal, and where he ventured also to say they had enjoyed themselves in each other's company. But there were distinguished Masons who thought it was not a proper thing for Royal Arch Masons to do, and they proposed to him a Chapter similar to the Emulation Lodge of Improvement. At first he did not support the idea—he would not say he threw cold water on it; but after a little consideration he said he would do all he could to further their wishes. Soon a great number came forward who approved of the movement, and they met together and started it. A great many put down their names as founders, and, although he did not now stand up for the purpose of making a complaint, they must pardon him for saying, not unkindly, that, with few exceptions, those who advised, persuaded, and induced the establishment of this Chapter, had not since supported it by their presence at the weekly meetings as he had hoped they would. There were, however, he was proud to say, those present this evening who had supported the projectors, and it was due to them that the Chapter stood in its present prosperous position. Still he thought they ought to meet in a much prouder and more prosperous position even than that; a large number ought to attend both of founders and Grand officers, men who had done good suit and service in Masonry, and were proud to be ranked among them. Sometimes they came among them, though he did not see many before him, but they did not, as a rule, come forward and help them. They must not understand him as complaining. He had given his own time to them, and had not been absent once last year, without leaving an efficient substitute to perform his duties, so that the companions had never suffered from his absence. To those brethren who had honoured him by taking his place he returned his best thanks. Allow him to return thanks for the companions, who had helped him to perform the ceremonies this evening. Comp. Boyd, one of them, he might say, was the father, or the founder, or the First Principal, of the Chapter of Improvement. He was the first M.E. of the Prudent Brethren Chapter, under whose warrant, those, who were visitors here for the first time, might learn the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement. That chapter was established but three years ago, and it became very numerous. That chapter was the first to have a public night, to explain to Royal Arch Masons the working of the Royal Arch, and those public nights had given universal satisfaction. Comp. States, the S.E. of the Chapter, Comp. Boyd, and others, were at the head of the movement, and the Royal Arch Order generally had much to thank them for, as also Comp. Dicketts, the J. of the same Chapter. They were all satisfied with the way in which he had done his work. Then they came to Comp. Self, who was capable of taking any office; he was one of the companions who started the Chapter, and had never deserted it. Comps. West, Smith, and Green, had left the banqueting room, but they were also deserving of the thanks of the companions. Comps. Warrington, Thomas, and Finney, who belonged to the committee, and had worked hard for the Chapter, were equally deserving of the companions' recognition of their services. In conclusion, he would say he hoped they would meet in still larger numbers in future, for the companions must bear in mind that when the perceptors came there to perform the ceremonies, it was necessary to have an audience as well as performers, and nothing would give him greater pleasure than others gave assistance as well as himself. (Frequent cheers greeted Comp. Brett during the delivery of this address.)

The Chairman, proceeding with the toasts, gave "The health of Visitors," and prefaced his speech with the observation that he himself most heartily merited the condemnation of Comp. Brett for having assisted in founding the Chapter, and not having frequently attended subsequently. He confessed himself one of the erring ones, but regretted there were many who followed his example. His own excuse was that he lived a great way off. On the subject of the toast, he would remark on the great use visitors were, and said it frequently happened that they became joining members. Such was the case with Comp. Nicholas, whom he associated with this toast. To those who did not know him, he (the Chairman) would say he was the indefatigable and hard working Secretary of the Asylum for Idiots at Earlswood. Diverting for a moment from his subject, he begged the Comps. to consider the great and glorious gifts of reason possessed by themselves, and to think on the wants of those who were admitted into the Asylum for Idiots. No more religions no more Masonic duty could have been performed than that to which Comp. Nicholas' life had been devoted, and as a worthy visitor, of whom he would have said more in his absence, he begged to propose Comp. Nicholas' health.

Comp. Nicholas replied. This was his first visit to the Chapter, and as a member he should come as often as he could to attend to his duties. He hoped to become faithful and diligent and try to follow the footsteps of the Illustrious Preceptor, Comp. Brett. The Earlswood Asylum, to which the Chairman had been kind enough to allude, would shortly be put before the order as a Masonic Institution. It was intended shortly to erect an Infirmary to it, and the Prince of Wales had promised to lay the first stone; on account of his illness, however, it would not be done this year. The Infirmary would cost £3000, and it was proposed to raise this sum among the craft of this country. Just a word or two on its being a Masonic charity. He had just heard it said that in a Masonic sense it was not legal. He would answer that everything that was good was Masonic, and therefore that it was legal. Moreover the Asylum for Idiots might be said to supplement the Freemasons' Boys' and Girls' School, for it admitted within its walls those Freemasons' children, the weakness of whose intellect excluded them from those Institutions. The Asylum for Idiots scarcely ever had an election at which some of the candidates were the children of Freemasons. A clergyman, one of the subscribers to the Asylum, always asked him if there any clergymen's children on the list to whom he could give his vote, and if there were not, then he would give them to Freemasons' children, because he considered it his duty as a clergyman and a Freemason to give them to these before all others. He (Comp. Nicholas) hoped that when the time came the Freemasons would feel proud to point to an inscription which it was intended to put in the front of the building that it was erected by the Masons of Great Britain as a tribute of respect to their Brother His Royal Highness who would lay the first stone, and as an expression of thankfulness to the Almighty that He had restored him to health. He (Comp. Nicholas) felt himself unduly honoured by this toast being proposed, but he took it not so much as in honour to himself as to the Institution of which he was Secretary.

THE CHAIRMAN.—Companions, be good enough to do all honour to the toast of "The Officers of this Chapter of Improvement." There are several of them, and they all commend themselves to your attention. They are Comp. Hervey, G.S.E., the Treasurer; Comp. Little, whose name is always received with great delight in masonic circles, and whose services many masons are looking forward to reward in a more substantial way than with mere words. There is also one companion upon whom the greatest amount of work connected with this happy and successful gathering has fallen—Comp. Thomas W. White, the Assistant S.E. He, in his turn, has been assisted by Comp. Finney, and I am sure that these two last companions especially, are entitled to your thanks for the admirable arrangements which have made everyone so comfortable this evening.

COMP. THOMAS W. WHITE.—On behalf of myself and the officers of the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement, I beg to thank you most sincerely for the manner in which you have drunk our health. With respect to myself, all I can say is: anything I can do to further the interests of this Chapter in particular, and Royal Arch Masonry generally, I shall be most happy to do. As my brother officers are waiting to return their own thanks individually, I shall simply thank you, and leave it to them to say what they see fittest to this occasion.

Comp. John Boyd.—For the honour you have done me as an officer of the Chapter in proposing this toast, my best thanks are due. What I have done in connection with this Chapter is but an earnest of what I will do. I pledge myself on some future occasion to show you something greater than you have yet seen. This is only a passing way of exhibiting our art. I trust on the next occasion it will be proved that this will only be a stepping-stone to some further improvement in this Chapter of Improvement, and that when you come again to a similar meeting to that over which you, Most Excellent, have so ably presided, you will be able to discover some superior working.

Comp. Geo. S. States.—I own I took some little trouble in forming this Chapter of Improvement, but what trouble I took is most heartily at your service. It has been amply recompensed, and it was from the first a labour of love.

The Companions then separated.

ELECTION, MAY, 1872.

ROYAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION
FOR AGED FREEMASONS OR THEIR WIDOWS.
The favour of your Votes and Interest is earnestly solicited on behalf of

WILLIAM ALLISON,

AGED 62 YEARS.

He has been a Mason 27 years, having been initiated into the Barton Lodge, No. 723, in Hamilton, Canada West, in 1844; Exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter, No. 733, in 1845; Joined the Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, in 1848. Became a Knight Templar in 1856. He suffered a considerable time from disease of the throat, rendering it necessary for him, thirteen years ago, to undergo an operation; the result of which, and old age, unfits him to contribute anything towards his own support. He is entirely dependent on the small sum he receives from three Lodges and one Chapter as Tyler. He was formerly in good circumstances, having been a Foreman in a Boot and Shoe Makers' Warehouse, in Canada.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND
AND REFORM.

BY BRO. W. J. HUGHAN.

An important movement has just been inaugurated in the Grand Lodge of Scotland, by the Grand Master, the Right Honourable the Earl of Rosslyn, and we hope that success will attend his Lordship's earnest endeavours to promote efficiency, representation, and practical benevolence, throughout all the departments of Masonry under his jurisdiction. The following communication, addressed to the lodges by command of the Grand Master, will give some idea of the changes now imminent, and which are much needed,

"GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND,

"Freemasons' Hall,

"Edinburgh, 1st February, 1872.

R.W. SIR AND BROTHER.—I am commanded by the M.W. the Grand Master to bring under your notice the following points of importance, to which the most serious attention of the daughter lodges is invited, with a view to their own welfare individually, and as affecting the status and character of the Scottish Craft at large. These, however, are dealt with only as suggestions, which, it is hoped, will receive a fair consideration at the hands of the Office Bearers and members of the various lodges, and under the supervision of the Provincial Grand Lodges, be given effect to, viz:—

1. Admission of Members.—Grave complaints are frequently made as to the hurried reception of candidates without sufficient time being allowed to enquire into their character. This, it is obvious, is fraught with the most disastrous consequences to the Craft, and will be carefully avoided by all well-governed lodges, as also the conferring of more than one degree upon any candidate at the same time. This is contrary to Grand Lodge Laws, except in cases of well ascertained and absolute emergency. Frequent complaints are also made as to the small initiation fee charged by many lodges. Money can be no test of character, it is true, but the best interests of a lodge will dictate the necessity of avoiding this ground of complaint; especially is this worthy of attention in towns where many lodges exist, and where it is found that the fee fixed by one lodge acts prejudicially upon the sister lodges. No doubt each lodge knows its own affairs best, and it is difficult to legislate on this question, but undoubtedly the minimum fee at present fixed by the Grand Lodge is sufficiently small for any locality, and it is the interest of every lodge to increase that sum, as circumstances will warrant.

2. Lodge Meetings and Workings.—The regularity of the various lodge meetings affect the prosperity of a lodge very materially—not less than two meetings per month should be held (except during the summer vacation) and it is suggested that one of these should be for instruction purposes. It is much to be regretted that many Office Bearers, and even Masters of Lodges are unable to work the ritual of the order, and thereby many abuses creep in, and a want of uniformity in working the degrees exist. This is a matter requiring attention, as no brother should be elected to office, or accept it, who is not prepared to discharge its duties.

It is also suggested that during the winter the delivery of lectures, on popular subjects, should be encouraged. This is found to be of immense value to many lodges, and as an example there is appended hereto a syllabus of the lectures for the current Winter Session, in the Lodge Edinburgh Journeymen, No. 8, and which is worthy of being followed.

3. Representation of Lodges in Grand Lodge.—It is to be deplored that many lodges quite overlook the advantages flowing from being represented in Grand Lodge, and a certain isolation results, which is very prejudicial both to the lodge itself, and the Grand Lodge. It is hoped that these lodges only require this matter to be brought under their notice to have the omission supplied in future, and that thus a constant and regular communication may exist between the Grand Lodge and her daughter lodges, and an increased interest produced in the welfare of each body by the other. By its charter each lodge is required to send its R.W.M. and Wardens to represent it in Grand Lodge, and where this is not convenient, they are allowed to appoint Proxies, who should be required to keep their lodges carefully informed of all Grand Lodge proceedings and interests.

The Roll of Members of Grand Lodge must now be closed at the 1st of April, yearly, (except as to vacancies occasioned by deaths and representations of lodges abroad). And that, with these exceptions, the Members appearing on the Roll at that date are the only parties entitled to vote at Meetings of Grand Lodge until the following annual election.

If therefore your lodge is to be represented in Grand Lodge, during the currency of the year from that date, you will require to have the names of the R.W.M. and Wardens, or Proxy Master and Wardens, registered by me prior to 1st April, and their fees of membership duly paid, or if already represented, then to see that your representatives are properly qualified and acting, otherwise the lodge will appear in the unrepresented list.

4. Annual Certificates.—In consequence of the Act of Parliament, entitled, An Act for the more effectual Suppression of Societies established for seditious and treasonable purposes, &c., Grand Lodge on 5th August, 1799, resolved that every daughter lodge should annually on the 24th June, transmit the affirmation (Appendix C. Grand Lodge Laws) that the requisites of the said Act had been complied with during the preceding year, and in return receive a certificate concerning the proofs and privileges of the Charter. Many lodges neglect this most important duty, and thereby render themselves liable to the recall of their Charter and to be struck off the Roll of the Grand Lodge. I am therefore to request your immediate attention to this matter if such omission applies to your lodge.

5. Registration of Intrants.—A frequent cause of complaint is the very careless manner in which the Intrant Returns are made, it being in many instances quite impossible to make sure of the names or dates, thereby occasioning trouble and expense in returning the schedule, and frequently delay in the issue of diplomas.

It is very desirable to have some definite information regarding affiliated brethren, as to their mother lodge, and which with a little trouble could always be supplied.

Special notice is called to filling in with care every column of the Returns; this is very much neglected, especially the column of fees paid by the Intrants for Initiation, and is very necessary, as forming a check upon the lodges that Grand Lodge Laws are obeyed.

The Auditors desire me to urge upon you, or your Treasurer, or other office-bearer, making remittances to Grand Lodge, the necessity for using the proper printed schedule in every instance, and of filling up the cash column with great care and accuracy, as this forms the main check upon the Grand Lodge accounts.

These Intrant Schedules should be invariably dated and signed, otherwise they are no authority.

It is very desirable that the remittance should always accompany the schedule, and that, when at all possible it should be in the form of Post-office order or draft, and not in postage stamps, as by this means any miscarriage of letters can be traced.

The sum remitted with a Schedule should always correspond with that stated therein, so that no balance for or against the lodge may exist.

6. Correspondence.—It very frequently happens that applications are made for diplomas within a few hours of the Intrant's departure for a foreign country, although many days may have elapsed since his admission; and frequently the letter does not arrive till after the brother has left. In cases of emergency, a telegram would always, if distinct, command attention, and the schedule should follow by post.

In cases where, by accident, prompt attention is not given to any communication it should at once be written about, and it is specially requested that in such instances the full particulars of the former communication be given for guidance.

7. General Observations, Initiation of lame or maimed candidates.—Frequent communications are received on this subject, and it is hereby intimated that as there is no explicit law on the point, it must be left to the voice of the lodge to do in the circumstances what appears to be correct.

Mark Degree.—As it is believed many lodges are under misconception in this matter, any lodge desiring a copy of circular of December, 1865, containing full instructions on the subject may have the same on application at this office.

The foregoing suggestions are made as calling the attention of lodges to points which may be improved by themselves without further legislation by Grand Lodge, and which his Lordship the Grand Master is satisfied only require to be pointed out, in order to be carefully observed.

I remain,

R.W. Sir and Brother,

Yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN LAURIE, Grand Clerk.

On the first point, viz., the "Admission of Members," we consider the fault mainly rests with the Grand Lodge, for in the last edition of its Laws (A.D. 1871) page 46, it is stated that "no candidate for the Apprentice degree shall be initiated in any lodge for a smaller sum than twenty-one shillings, exclusive of the Grand Lodge dues for registration." At page 47, it is provided that no candidate shall be advanced to a superior degree at a shorter interval than that of two weeks, excepting under the emergency clauses.

To our mind the remedy lies in altering these clauses. Let the initiation fee be raised to three guineas at least in Scotland, and never permit the degrees to be given unless an interval of one month has elapsed between each. The fact is that, at the present time, a lodge can be called at any time, even during the same day that the summons is issued; (some even issue no summons), and any stranger to the neighbourhood, especially English gentleman, can there and then, be initiated, passed, and raised, without any law of the Grand Lodge of Scotland being infringed! I have myself known gentlemen thus initiated, passed, and raised, and I have known others whom I could not designate either gentlemen, or honest men, thus admitted into the Craft, and it is not therefore to be wondered at that the former have paid little attention to Masonry, remember nothing of the ceremonies, and look upon the whole as a farce; while the latter have been enabled to use the sacred privileges of Freemasonry as a passport for deception, and would never have been initiated had due enquiry been made. I do not say all lodges pass the candidates thus, but I do say some have, and still do so, and do not apparently disobey any law of the Grand Lodge thereby.

The caution as to the admission of members is of little avail, while such wholesale, sudden, and absurd introductions to the Craft are permitted, and I am persuaded it is only for wholesome and salutary laws to be made to make Scottish Freemasonry respected as it deserves to be.

The payment of one guinea and a half for initiation, passing, and raising, according to some by-laws, is wholly derogatory to Masonry, and reduces it to the position of a mere benefit society, which is actually the light in which it is regarded in some parts of Scotland. Some lodges there have benefit societies attached and it is necessary to be a Freemason in order to join, and the Craft is thereby made subservient to an enrolled benefit society! (If not enrolled it ought to be, so the argument is all the same).

The second point, Meetings and Workings. Any Master Mason is eligible for the chair of the lodge! This to our mind explains the poor working (often to be lamented) amongst Scottish lodges. Surely the law which requires that candidates for the chair must first of all have acted as Wardens for twelve months, tends to secure greater efficiency, and what is more, also gives additional importance to the distinguished position.

In this respect we hope to see the two Sister Grand Lodges adopt the same requisites, and certainly, we may fairly assume that the office of Master in Scotland will be more valued if it is rendered less easy to attain, and especially if, after two years, it is obligatory for a lodge to elect a new Master. In Scotland, under the present law, the same Master may retain the Chair, (if so elected) for half a century! and in consequence, some lodges would quite look upon a new Master as a great curiosity.

The suggestion relative to the delivery of Lectures is a most excellent one, and well deserves the hearty support of the members, not only in Scotland, but everywhere that Freemasonry flourishes.

3. The Representation of Lodges in Grand Lodge.—Quite a different system prevails in Scotland on this point. Past Masters, as such, have no status whatever. The present W. Master, Wardens, or in their absence regularly appointed Proxy Masters and Wardens, have votes in Grand Lodge.

We are not prepared to adopt this Proxy system, as our ideal of representation, as we believe the good old law which allows of Past Masters having a vote, so long as they subscribe to a lodge, is a most excellent one.

The strange part of the matter is, that the Proxy Masters are not required to have served as Masters of a Craft Lodge, and thus ordinary Master Masons may become Proxy Masters, and appoint their Wardens.

4. The Annual Certificates we thoroughly support, and think the plan worth adopting in England, as we believe they would tend to secure more regularity in the transmission of the annual list to the Clerk of the Peace.

5. Registration of Intrants.—No annual subscriptions are paid by the members of many lodges in Scotland, and no annual dues are required to be paid to the Grand Lodge for each member of a lodge, so it is no wonder that the Registration is neglected. When annual dues are required to be paid, and their non-payment is followed by a forfeiture of membership, as in England, we think the Registration will be duly attended to. The Grand Master on a notice of motion, on 6th November, 1871, spoke of the sum of two pence per month, or 2s. per annum being levied on all members of lodges, and we hope the suggestion will be made the law of the Grand Lodge; and we are persuaded that if it is, financial prosperity will soon be the pleasant realisation of the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

The Grand Lodge Debt is a disgrace to the Scottish Craft, and the sooner it is cleared off the better. The plan suggested by the Grand Master would soon remedy the existing defect in the finances, and leave a good balance for the "Fund of Scottish Benevolence," which is certainly far from being in the position that it should be. Lodge Halls throughout the Province are being built, and the members of lodges thus privileged to meet in rooms of their own, will appreciate the benefit of such arrangement. We lament the present circumstances of many lodges. The meetings are simply convivial, and partake more of the character of tavern associations in several lodges I could mention, and refreshments are the order of the day from the beginning to the end of the assembly. We wish it were recognised as a fact that such practices prostitute the Masonic Order to unholy purposes, and lower the standard and aims of the Fraternity in the minds of all respectable men who are not Masons.

POET MASONS.

We resume with pleasure our notice of Bro. Sawyer's poems, and here we may mention that the printer of The Freemason has perpetrated a curious error in the quotation which we gave from the "Legend of Phyllis," last week. We drew particular attention to the charming passage in which the regal beauty is represented as approaching Demaphöon "in the snatched moment of the absolute prime of beauty," a phrase singularly suggestive, revealing as it does a subtlety of thought and imagery seldom found, even in the writings of our best poets. But the perverse son of Caxton transmutes the golden words "snatched moments" into the dross of "matched movements," as if the poet's ideas were coupled with the "movements" of a time-piece, or of a body of cavalry.

The "Legend of Phyllis" is in every sense a splendid contribution to the poetry of the age, nor are most of the verses composing the accompanying "Year of Song" unworthy of being set as minor gems in the same luminous circle.

The following picture is limned with the hand of a master.

A SUMMER DREAM.

Only a summer dream,
Sport of an idle day,
A meadow range, a word beside the stream,
A parting and—away.

Only a dream of Love,
Of heart inclined to heart—
As clouds that in the blue of heaven meet,
As white clouds cling and part.

We dreamed and we awoke;
No more! But ah, for dreams
Engendered of the subtle light of Love,
Bright with its iris gleams!

Shadows of leaf and bird
Fall on the meadow grass;
But over it the shadow that I love
Never again shall pass.

The summer voices blend
In music as of yore,
But from the melody has dropt a note:
There will be song no more.

The glory and the wealth
Of nature all things share,
But in my heart is no responsive throb
That tells me it is fair.

Back on thy sunny dream
I turn an aching gaze,
But the clear splendour of its glory throws
A shadow on my days.

It would, however, be manifestly unfair to Bro. Sawyer were we to quote too copiously from his poems, we desire but to direct our readers, attention to the work, under a powerful conviction that its perusal will afford them both profit and pleasure; we will therefore simply mention a few of the shorter compositions which especially please our fancy. "The Triumph of the Fleur-de-Lis," the lovely verses inscribed to "Angelica," "The Letter," a Coleridgean specimen of blank verse "A Dream of the Sea," and "The Song of Age," which is a perfect specimen of rhythmic music. Amongst strains of a different kind, we may instance "The Trooper's Defence" and "The Prentice Holiday," both lays worthy of a place among our national lyrics—albeit the subject-matter of both is not calculated to awaken joyous emotions.

But we have said sufficient to induce our readers to judge for themselves, and we congratulate the Masonic Order generally, and especially the Urban Lodge, of which Bro. Sawyer is a Past Master, upon possessing such an ornament to the voluminous roll of members of the Craft.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM. AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES ON THIS SUBJECT.

BY W. E. N., No. 766.

No. IV. June 17th 1871.—The people of Israel and Judah having been removed by their conquerors, the land became an uncultivated waste, and was overrun by wild beasts. The "Lamentations of Jeremiah" bring vividly before us the awful change that passed over the land. But God had promised to give this land to Abraham and his seed for ever, and this promise was renewed to Isaac and Jacob, yet the land is now occupied by strangers, and the chosen people are scattered abroad among the nations. How is this? The people were punished, and are now suffering for their sins, but since their dispersion God has said he will "a second time renew the remnant of his people from the four corners of the earth." The restoration of Judah and Israel does not rest on a mere casual promise, but on many clear and explicit promises As the threatenings of punishment have been so literally fulfilled, it cannot be doubted that the promises of restoration to the Promised Land will also be fulfilled. We know where to look for the remnant of Judah, but where are we to find Israel? They have been fruitlessly sought for in every quarter of the world, and now and then we fancy we get a glimpse of them in China, Japan, Tartary, India and elsewhere. It is not improbable that some portions of the exile peopled might have made their way to these countries from the northern parts of Assyria, but the mass cannot thus have disposed of themselves. We shall see presently that their destination has been different, and in a different direction.

No. V. June 24th, 1871.—Darius, B.C. 507, in his invasion of Mæsia, first subdued the Getæ or Goths, a branch of the Teutonic family. Herodotus gives a full account of these people, who were afterwards invaded by Alexander the Great. They refused to submit, and ultimately removed to Dacia, (now known as Roumania). The Romans drove the Dacians still further north; when they were attacked by the Huns, and were compelled to seek shelter under the Romans, by whom they were so ill-used that they invited their kindred, the Ostrogoths, and under Alaric, A.D. 396, attacked and plundered Rome.

Sharon Turner, says, that Europe has been peopled by.

1. The Kimmerian, or Keltic race.
2. The Scythian, Gothic, and German race.
3. The Sclavonians, who settled in Poland, Russia, and Bohemia.

The Scythians, or Goths, drove the Celts, or Kelts, to the extremities of Europe, and occupied the greater portion of central Europe, and from them are descended the Anglo-Saxons, Normans, Danes, Germans, Dutch, Belgians, French, and Swedes. Of the various Scythian nations the Sakai or Sacæ are the people from whom the Saxons are descended. They seized part of Armenia, and called it Sakasuma. Pliny says, that the Sakai, who settled in Armenia, were named Sakassani. Ptolemy also mentions a Scythian people by the name of Saxons. The Angles were a branch of the Goths, or Saxons, who pushed their conquests as far as Jutland, and occupied a country near Holstein, called Anglia. They adopted a seafaring life, and often invaded Britain, the eastern coast of which became known as the Saxon shore. When the Romans left Britain, the Britons invited the Angles, or Saxons over to defend them against the Picts and Scots. The Saxon heptarchy was established, but ultimately the seven kingdoms merged into one, and the country was called Angleland or England. The Danes, another branch of the same family, invaded the country, and ultimately united with the Anglo-Saxons, as also did the Norman branch some years later. Thus the Gothic race, from the north of the Empire, spread itself throughout the civilised world, and by its possession of England planted states in America, Australia, and other colonies in both hemispheres, carrying their religion, language and civilisation into every part of the world.

No. VI. July 1st, 1871.—The Goths (according to various writers) although rude in speech and dress, were a race capable of high polish and fitted for great deeds. They possessed many virtues, and their government was a kind of military democracy, under a chief or king. Feudalism universally prevailed; the land was public property, for which services were to be rendered to the state. Among the Anglo-Saxons, all their villages were divided into ten wards called tythings. To the Teutonic knights we owe the guilds in town and city, and their guilds were combined into coporations, in which we find the representative principle that characterised all their institutions. Unlike the Celts, the reflective faculty of the Anglo-Saxons predominated over the imaginative. From such ancestors a nation has been formed, superior to all others in the love and possession of useful liberty, and which cultivates the elegances of art, the labours of industry, the energies of war, the researches of science, and the richest productions of genius. The hand of God has led forth this extraordinary people, who are destined to become the civilisers and saviours of the world.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW LODGE AT WIDNES, LANCASHIRE.

One of the most influential and distinguished gatherings of Masons which has been witnessed in the Province of West Lancashire for some time took place at Widnes, near Liverpool, on Thursday, the 22nd ultimo., when and where the Lodge of Equity, No. 1384, was consecrated with impressive ceremonial. There could not have been fewer than about 120 present to witness the ceremony, and as there were an unusually large number of W. Masters and P. Masters amongst the brethren, the youngest lodge has started with an éclat which augurs favourably for its future progress and success.

Unfortunately the proceedings did not pass off without an awkward hitch, which proved both vexatious and inconvenient to those who had some respect for punctuality, and to whom time was very valuable. The commencement of the consecration ceremonial was fixed for two o'clock, and about that time, Bro. T. Wylie, P.M. 86 and 292, P. Prov. G. Reg., who was to perform the ceremony, in company with a large number of masons, who had arrived at the hotel ready to begin. About half-past two o'clock, however, a telegram was received from the Provincial Grand Secretary, who had left Liverpool with the warrant of Constitution, and a number of brethren, in consequence of their depending upon a certain train at a certain hour (according to the local time tables), but which turned out to have no existence. In consequence of this circumstance it was nearly four o'clock before the ceremony actually began, and several were therefore unable to remain until its beginning, many until the completion of the installation proceedings, and the majority of those from a distance were compelled to leave before the termination of the banquet.

The Provincial Grand Officers present were:—Bros. H. G. Vernon, A.M., P. Prov. G.C.; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec.; T. Wylie, Prov. G. Reg.; James Hamer, P. Prov. G.T.; R.

Wylie, Prov. G.S.D.; J. Skeaf, Prov. G.O., J. W. J. Fowler, Prov. G.A.D.C.; Dr. J. Mercer Johnson, Prov. G.S.; G. de la Perrelle, Prov. G.S.; B. Cheshire, and P. Ball, Prov. Tylers. Amongst the other brethren present were;—Bros. W. Richardson, P.M. 148; W. Woods, W.M. 1250; Stephen Johnson, P.M. 673; J. H. Hustwick, W.M. 292; P. M. Larsen, P.M. 594; W. Rigby, P.M. 758, P. Prov. G.P. Cheshire; J. F. Birchall, P.M. 86; J. Jackson, W.M. 148; S. Cookson, P.M. 1182; H. Pearson, W.M. 249; G. Morgan, W.M. 1035; R. Gracie, P.M. 477; J. Pemberton, P.M. 1246; T. Clark, P.M. 673; T. H. Lowe, P.M. and Treas. 1013; G. Turner, P.M. 823 and 86; R. Pearson, P.M. 673; H. James, W.M. 203; S. Morris, W.M. 86; W. Crane, P.M. 249 and 1299; P. R. Thorn W.M. 1182; J. T. Hall, P.M. 86; J. James, W.M. 216; D. Jones, P.M. 155; J. Turner, Sec. 216; M. Mawson, Sec. 1013; T. Beazley, 86; J. Lloyd. J.D. 249; J. Williams, S.D. 86; J. Wood, Treas. 1094; W. Cron, 86; &c.

The Craft Lodge was opened in the three degrees by Bro. T. Wylie, Prov. G.R., the Senior Warden's chair being occupied by Bro. John Jackson, W.M. 148, and S.W. 1354; and that of the Junior Warden by Bro. J. T. Birchall, P.M. 86; Bro. S. Johnson, P.M. 673, acting as I.G.

The ceremony of consecration was performed in almost effective manner by Bro. T. Wylie, assisted by Bro. Hamer.

After the brethren of the new lodge had been arranged in order, an opening prayer was offered by Bro. Vernon, and after a piece of solemn music had been played by Bro. Sheaf,

The presiding officer addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting.

After the Provincial Grand Secretary had read the petition and warrant, the brethren of the new lodge approved of the officers named therein, and the P. Prov. G. Chaplain then delivered a most appropriate and interesting Oration "The Lodge," and in the course of which he referred to the lessons deducible from its symbolical teachings. Bro. Sheaf's fine anthem, "Behold how Good" was sung by Bros. D. Jones, Haswell, and J. Pemberton, in its striking effect, and the remainder of the consecration music (also by Bro. Sheaf,) was given with equal efficiency.

The lodge was afterwards uncovered, and consecrated, constituted, and dedicated with the impressive and proper ceremonial.

After the consecration, the presiding officer immediately proceeded to instal Bro. J. W. J. Fowler as W.M.

The newly-installed W.M. then invested the following officers of the lodge:—Bro. the Rev.—Whiteleg, Chaplain; H. Syred, S.W.; R. Young, J.W.; R. D. Simpson, Secretary; Oppenheim, S.D.; Corke, J.D.; and Wareing, I.G. The brethren then elected Brother Jameson, Treasurer, and Brother Sephton, Tyler.

The lodge was afterwards closed in due form, and in the evening the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, under the presidency of Bro. Fowler, W.M.

After dinner, the usual loyal and masonic toasts were proposed, and the brethren separated at a seasonable hour, after spending a very pleasant meeting.

CONSECRATION OF THE HUYSHE
CHAPTER OF ROSE CROIX, PLY-MOUTH.

A large and influential meeting of the members of the Ancient and Accepted Rite took place at Plymouth on Tuesday, the 20th ult., on the occasion of the Consecration of a new Chapter of Rose Croix.

The Supreme Council of the Thirty Third Degree of England and Wales, &c., was represented by the Illustrious Bros. Charles J. Vigne, M.P.S. Grand Commander; Captain N. G. Phillips, V.P. Lieutenant Grand Commander; Colonel Henry Clerke, Grand Chancellor; John M. Pultney Montagu, Grand Secretary General; attended by the Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 33°, Asst. Secretary. A large number of Rose Croix brethren were present to receive the Supreme Council, including the following:—The Illustrious Bros. Captain C. C. Dick, 32°; John Oxley Oxland, 32°, Most Wise Sovereign University Chapter, Cambridge; Dr. F. W. Woodforde, 31°, P.M.W.S., Alfred Chapter, Taunton; Captain G. Ammesley Phayre, R.N., 30°; Colonel John Elliott, 30°, Most Wise Sovereign, Saint Aubyn Chapter, Devonport; Henry Dubosc, 30°; John Chapman, 18°; F. R. Beechey, 18°; C. D. MacCarthy, 18°; James J. Clase, 18°; E. Aitken Davies, 18°; T. B. Harvey, 18°; F. R. James, 18°; and many others.

The meeting took place in the Huyshe Masonic Temple, Princess Place, where the magnificent suite of Masonic Rooms was thrown into one Chapter for the celebration of the rites of the Rose Croix, and fitted up with a degree of elegance and perfection as yet unsurpassed by any Chapter out of the Metropolis.

The business of the meeting commenced with the affiliation to the Ancient and Accepted Rite of Bros. John Sadler, Joseph Matthews, Captain John Tanner Davy, and Isaac Watts, formerly Knights Rosæ Crucis of the Coryton Encampment.

The following Brethren were then perfected as Knights of Rose Croix, Willam Burrows Hambly, W.M. 857; John J. Hambly, P.M. 70; J. N. Blake, P.M. 230; Herbert F. Hearle, W.M. 156; Leonard D. Westcott, P.M. 70.

The new Chapter was then consecrated in ancient and solemn form under the name of the Huyshe Chapter of Sovereign Princes of Rose Croix, and the Illustrious Bro. Henry Dubosc, 30°, installed as M.W. Sovereign for the ensuing year.

The following appointments were then made; the Ill. Bros. John Oxley Oxland, 32°, I.P.M.W.S. and Prelate; Lord Elliot, 31°, First General; Jas. J. Clase, 18°, Second General; William Burrows Hambly, 18°, Grand Marshal; Isaac Watts, 18°, Treasurer; H. F. Hearle, 18°, Registrar.

Letters expressing regret at their inability to attend the meeting were received from Bro Lord Elliot, 31°, and from several Knights Rosæ Crucis and other candidates for affiliation and perfection.

The Illustrious Grand Commander congratulated the Brethren on the success of the meeting, and complimented Bro. Oxley Oxland on the beauty and perfection of the arrangements of the Chapter, which had been carried out under his superintendence.

The Illustrious Secretary General gave a very gratifying sketch of the progress of the new Hall at 33, Golden-square, London, together with some interesting details as to the rapid increase in strength and prosperity which the Ancient and Accepted Rite has been making during the last few years.

Bro. J. J. Clase, 18°, himself an affiliated Knight, congratulated the newly affiliated Knights, Rosæ Crucis, on their reception under the banners of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, he said he could speak feelingly, having formerly been unrecognised by the Supreme Council of the 33°, and cut off from Masonic communion with Brethren of the Rose Croix Degree. Under the able leadership of Bro Dubosc he felt sure the Chapter would be a great and lasting success.

The Chapter was then closed in solemn form. The beautiful ceremonies of the Degree of Rose Croix were most impressively performed by the Illustrious Bros. Hyde Pullen, 33°, and John Oxley Oxland, 32°.

The musical arrangements were under the management of Bro. Windeatt, and were very effectively rendered.

After the ceremony the members of the Supreme Council, and a number of Rose Croix Brethren adjourned to the Globe Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet had been prepared, and with the usual loyal toasts a very agreeable evening concluded one of the most important days in the annals of Freemasonry in Plymouth.

THANKSGIVING DAY AT CAMBRIDGE.

The members of the Scientific Lodge, No. 88, and those belonging to the Three Grand Principles, No. 441, met at the Guildhall, where the Aldermen's parlour was placed at their disposal for clothing, &c., when they formed the procession, consisting of Deputy Mayor, Alderman and Councillors, and other authorities, all the brethren wearing the insignia of the Order, and proceeded to Great St. Mary's Church to the special service, after which the brethren adjourned to the lodge room at the Red Lion, and partook of an excellent luncheon. The chair was taken by the Worshipful Master of the Scientific Lodge, No. 88, Bro. James Augustus Dimmock, of Ely, (who was supported by Past Masters, Bros. J. Dimmock, Bentley, Lang, Donagan, Wilderspin, &c.)

The toasts of "The Queen and the Craft" and "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M. of England," were given with appropriate remarks, which were received in the most enthusiastic manner. The latter was followed by the melody "God Bless the Prince of Wales," which was rendered by the W.M., Bros. Reed, Swan and Baker, as a quartet, being joined in the chorus by all the brethren.

The W.M. then announced he would give but one more toast on that occasion, as the brethren might wish to be with their families or friends. He then proposed "The W.M. of the Three Grand Principles, coupled with success to that Lodge," and also "The Sir Isaac Newton University, No. 857." Bro. P.M. Donagan replied, in the absence of the W.M. of the Three Grand Principles, and Bro. King, Prov. G. Chaplain, of Queen's College, on behalf of the Sir Isaac Newton. The brethren then separated, feeling they had done their duty to their Royal brother on that auspicious and interesting occasion.

The following reply has been received to the congratulatory address of the brethren of Shakespeare Lodge, (No. 1009), Manchester.

"Marlborough House,

"General Sir William Knollys is directed by the Prince of Wales to thank the Worshipful Master, Officers, and Brethren of the Shakespeare Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, for their kind congratulations on his recovery.

MASONRY FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The following extract from an old magazine is, perhaps, not unworthy of reproduction.

"Mr. Thomas Busher, of Kirkland, Kendal, died on the 25th of November, 1822, aged 66. He suffered a long and severe affliction, occasioned by the apparently trifling circumstance of removing a wart from the back of his hand by a little caustic. Being the oldest Freemason in Kendal, and having been a worthy member of that body, as well as a respectable member of society in general, his obsequies were observed with Masonic honours. The sublime anthem from the 7th of Job, "Is there not an appointed time," accompanied by the organ, was powerfully felt by the assembled mourners; and the oration at the grave side, so impressively delivered by Mr. Samuel Grundy, the W.M., was calculated to leave a solemn feeling of religious awe on the minds of the attendants."

Many of your readers will recognise in the above paragraph a relative of Bro. Edward Busher, Past Grand Sword Bearer of England, the energetic and indefatigable Provincial Grand Secretary of Cumberland and Westmorland, who is so well known in the north of England for his zeal and devotion to the Craft, and for his able and substantial support of the various Masonic Charities.

The welfare of the Order, fostered and encouraged by the ancestor, has lost nothing in the hands of the descendant, whose example might be profitably followed by every brother.—H.B.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast, tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

SIR AND BROTHER,—

I am always glad to read the able and useful remarks of your correspondent who signs himself "Lupus," but I do not think his recent letter quite clears up the question raised under the above heading.

1st. Under what special view the Prov. Grand Master for Somerset prohibited the wearing of the decorations and clothing of the high degrees, nothing can be affirmed.

2nd. Your correspondent "Lupus" says the nobleman in question (the Earl of Carnarvon) is "not at the head of the high degrees;" but he is really in the S.C. of 33°.

3rd. Your correspondent says that no permission is required for wearing the decorations of the high degrees or of the Temple "anywhere or at any time." I would simply remark that it is not usual to wear these in a Craft lodge, though sometimes done.

4th. The S. C. of 33° do object to Masons in their degrees wearing their decorations in public, except under dispensation.

With the wisdom of these injunctions I am in no way concerned.

Yours fraternally,

W. L. A. 30°.

AIDS TO STUDY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I have—perhaps I should be ashamed to confess it—only just read the address delivered by the Right Worshipful John P. Brown, Deputy Grand Master to the District Grand Lodge of Turkey, as published in The Freemason of Sept. 9th, 1871, and I cannot but, though so long after its appearance, express my admiration of its comprehensive, catholic, and truly practical character. But my object in troubling you with this is to recal attention to a recommendation which our R.W. Bro. urges upon the attention of the Turkish lodges, in connection with a lodge of instruction about to be established, and the benefits of which I am ashamed to think we in England should need to be reminded of by a brother in Constantinople. We in England pride ourselves upon being a practical people, and we certainly have facilities for bringing together and adapting to various useful purposes means of instruction and improvement, such as are not enjoyed by the dwellers in Turkey. Let it not be said that they are making more use of their small opportunities than we of the greater ones we have at command. But to our R. W. Brother's recommendation. He says:

"I cannot too strongly recommend the gradual formation of a Masonic Library, composed of such books and periodicals, in various languages, as refer to our order, and that fixed periodical meetings should be held, in strict accordance with its rules and regulations. I hope that the younger brethren who meet here will be able to learn something more than the forms of the ritual and the ordinary signification of the material objects which they behold in a lodge, and be enabled to penetrate the real signification of both, and retain them in their minds and hearts. If this be the result, they will hereafter be able to form a correct estimate of the great bearings of Freemasonry on the life of man, during all the seasons of his short cycle of existence in this world, as well as more fully to appreciate those indubitable truths which are taught by a careful study of the works of his Divine Creator; all leading onward and upward to the Great Architect of the Universe, typified in the construction of this humble lodge."

Many of us, I believe, have often felt the want of such a collection of works on Masonry, and such other works as may be rendered contributory to masonic knowledge in its diversified departments, as is here recommended, and we should no doubt gladly avail ourselves of the books, if within reach.

I hope I shall not give offence if I say that Masonic literature does not occupy the position which it should occupy in the present day. Some few of our brethren are evincing great industry, and are doing good service in bringing to light materials contributory to authentic Masonic history, but that is too exclusive in its range, and too dry in its details to greatly interest the thousands of readers, who would gladly avail themselves of an opportunity to read more diversified works, and such as might be more or less contributory to Masonic acquirements, including as they do, all the more hidden mysteries of nature and science, as leading to a more comprehensive perception of the wonderful works of the Almighty.

But there is another recommendation of our R. W. Brother's, in connection with the library, which should not be overlooked. He says:

"Would it not also be well to add to this something of a general literary character, so that, from time to time, lectures may be delivered on the various subjects of the arts and sciences, and the progress mankind makes in useful knowledge? Such an arrangement would tend to promote the best interests and welfare of our Order, and sustain it in public opinion."

It is not now, for the first time, that such a suggestion has been made. I remember that after having had the gratification of being present at the open night of the Prudent Brethren Lodge of Instruction, I called attention to it in the columns of the Freemason, and expressed a hope that such a night would lead to something of a more permanent and comprehensive character, embracing not only the ritualistic and symbolic teaching and instruction with which we were then delighted and edified; but also, conversations and lectures on the arcana of both the Craft and the Arch.

My hope has been partially realised, in the establishment and success of the Royal Arch Chapter of Improvement. For the working and illustration of Arch Masonry, we can wish for nothing beyond that; but we lack the opportunity for conversation, and diversified oral information, which might, I think, be rendered exceedingly interesting and instructive. Why should we not make an attempt to realise it? We have brethren in that Chapter of Improvement who might easily do it. The libraries, the lectures, and the conversations, in favour of which a voice comes to us from the East, are surely not beyond the reach of the brethren residing in London.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM CARPENTER.

DIVISION OF THE PROVINCE OF WEST LANCASHIRE.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR, a very important motion to divide the Province of West Lancashire, and make a Southern province thereof, is in the notice paper for a special Provincial Grand Lodge, to be held at the Bull Inn, Preston, on the 5th of April, next. Very little time is now left to consider individually—that is lodges—what the effect of such a measure will be, if confirmed. The province of West Lancashire is financially wealthy, and how that interest will be administered, justly and equably, in the event of a division, will require time and good management. How far any vote of a Provincial Grand Lodge will be compulsory in determining what divisional lodge shall hereafter belong to, cannot surely be concluded in a summary manner. The regular meeting of many lodges will be so near the Provincial meeting that without steps are immediately taken, through Lodges of Emergency, to obtain information, and decide what ought to be done, much perplexity will prevail as to the consequences of this movement. Judging from the fact that Lodge 1256, Poulton le Fylde, is in East Lancashire province, and all the neighbouring lodges in West Lancashire, it must be eligible for any lodge when instituted to choose its own province. Of course—by the book of constitutions—when attached it can only remove with the Provincial Grand Master's permission.

It will be interesting to know if the notice of motion is merely to test the feeling of the Province. Can the division really be effected, and its landmarks prescribed at a Provincial Grand Lodge. A month's notice of the discussion of a question, involving such great interest, if there is a determinate jurisdiction, (which I very much question,) is indeed a most summary proceeding.

Yours most respectfully,

A SECRETARY OF A WEST LANCASHIRE LODGE.

INSTRUCTION.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Will you kindly make it known through the columns of your valuable Masonic Journal that it is the intention of the United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, No. 507, to accept an invitation from the Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction to attend at the Prince of Orange, Greenwich, on Friday, the 15th inst, at 6.30, p.m., for the purpose of working the Fifteen Sections.

We have started the movement for interchange of visits between Lodges of Instruction for the purpose of endeavouring to assimilate the uniformity of working in our several lodges, and have every reason to anticipate success.

The two lodges above named will be happy to have the attendance of brethren interested in this movement.

Bro John Thomas, P.M., &c., will preside on the above occasion, and the Sections will be worked by brethren under his preceptorship.

Yours Fraternally,

JAMES STEVENS, P.M., &c.,
Hon. Sec. United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—

To give a practical direction to the various suggestions and proposals for the expression of gratitude by the members of the Craft on the happy recovery of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, it has been determined, with the sanction and approval of the General Committee, to endeavour to raise a special fund, to be called "The Prince of Wales' Thanksgiving Fund," with which to defray the debt of £5,000 still encumbering this Institution. Contributions of any amount, from Lodges, Chapters, or individuals, will be most thankfully received, and one brother, (already a Vice-President of the Institution) has offered Fifty Guineas additional, if ninety-nine other similar donations can be obtained.

MARK MASONRY.—The "Birchall Lodge" of Mark Master Masons will be consecrated at the Bull Hotel, Preston, Lancashire, on Wednesday, the 13th inst., by the R. W. Provincial Grand Mark Master, Bro. Wm. Romaine Callender, Jr., assisted by his Grand Officers and others. Lieut.-Col. Thomas Birchall is the Worshipful Master designate.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatment is the easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits; such are the ready means of escaping from suffering when afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which the health of so many is seriously and permanently injured in most countries.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

SUBSCRIBER.—If the W. M. had ground to believe that a mistake had occurred in the result of the first ballot, he was justified in ordering a second ballot, and which ought to have been final. His remarks were unconstitutional and illegal, and deserve the strongest reprobation.

The length of the proceedings of Grand Lodge compels us to omit the following reports, (several of which are in type):—Provincial Grand Lodge of East Lancashire, Provincial Grand Lodge East Lothian, Lodges 940, 986, 1051, 1319, 37, 1125, 1275, and 871; Chapters 279, 977, 73 (S.C.); Mark Lodge, 60; Gwent Encampment and Girvan Encampment, Knights Templar; Byzantine Conclave, Red Cross of Constantine; European Rose Croix Chapter, Gibraltar. UNITED GRAND LODGE.
QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

Grand Lodge assembled on Wednesday evening, in the Temple, for the Quarterly Communication for March. The Marquis of Ripon, M.W.G.M., presided. Above 400 brethren were present, and so large a number were no doubt drawn together by the knowledge that the Marquis of Ripon would again be elected the Grand Master, and from a desire to hear his Lordship address the brethren for the first time in response to the choice the brethren had made. Among those who were present we observed, Bros. Bagshaw, Col. Whitwell, M.P., Dr. Hamilton, the Rev. W. F. Short, J. S. Brownrigg, Sir J. W. Hayes, R. J. Simpson, C. J. Martyn, Saml. Tomkins, A. J. McIntyre, Q.C., F. Roxburgh, Q.C., J. M. Evans, John Hervey, Jas. E. Saunders, Raynham W. Stewart, John Savage, Major J. Creaton, Benj. Head, J. M. Clabon, W. E. Gumbleton, H. Grissell, S. L. Tomkins, Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter, Thomas Fenn, N. Bradford, Richd. J. Spiers, H. Bridges, Jas. Mason, Wilhelm Ganz, John Coutts, James Brett, Joseph Smith, W. Ough, Augustus Smith, C. Hutton Gregory, C. C. Dumas, J. R. Sheen, J. Symonds, and John Savage.

Grand Lodge having been formally opened, Grand Secretary first read the regulations for the government of Grand Lodge during the time of public business, and then the minutes of the Quarterly Communication of 6th December, 1871, and of the Especial Grand Lodge of 26th January, 1872, which were severally put and confirmed.

Bro. Audley Gosling, Her Majesty's Secretary of Legation, Stockholm, then presented an address of congratulation from the Grand Lodge of Sweden on the recovery of the Prince of Wales from his dangerous illness.

The Grand Master, accepting the address from the hands of Bro. Gosling, said:—Brethren, I feel sure that I shall rightly interpret the feelings of this Grand Lodge, if in the first place I convey our thanks to our Bro. Gosling, for having made this communication to us, on the part of the Grand Lodge of Sweden, and in the next place, if I propose to you that we should agree to express our thanks in an appropriate address, which can be afterwards prepared, to the Grand Lodge of Sweden, for the address of congratulation with which they have honoured us. Nothing, brethren, can be more gratifying, I am confident, to every English Mason, than the way that that great anxiety and sorrow, which moved so deeply the hearts, not only of the Masons, but of the men, women, and I might say the children, in this country, during the month of December last, excited a feeling of warm and heartfelt sympathy, I might almost say, throughout the civilised world, and the proof that is afforded us by this address of sympathy and good feeling of our brother Masons in Sweden, is a most gratifying proof of the truly Masonic ties which unite this country to that great kingdom of the north of Europe. I, therefore, beg to propose "that an appropriate address be prepared by the Grand Secretary, and, by your permission, be signed by the Grand Master, expressing the thanks of this Grand Lodge for the address which has been presented on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Sweden."

Bro. Bagshaw seconded the motion, which was put and carried unanimously.

Bro. F. A. Philbrick, W.M., No. 18, rose and said—May it please you, M.W.G.M. and Brethren, in fulfilment of the nomination which I had the honour to make at the last Grand Lodge, I now rise to propose that the most Hon. the Marquis of Ripon be elected the Grand Master of our order during the ensuing year. (Cheers). Brethren, from your reception of that proposition I feel it is almost superfluous in the Grand Lodge to say another word; but our Most Worshipful Grand Master amid all the cares of state, and the duties of his high position, has found time to care for the interests of the Craft in a manner attested by its present unparalleled state of prosperity. (Great Applause). In our Most Worshipful Grand Master we are proud to recognise the embodiment of those Masonic principles upon which our order is founded, and I am quite certain that if another claim beyond his past services were wanting, the manner in which he convened the Craft at the last Especial Grand Lodge to testify in common with all our countrymen our feeling of gratitude to the Great Architect of the Universe for the mercies vouchsafed to this nation, have given our Most Worshipful Grand Master a further claim and a surer title to your respect, to your confidence, and to your esteem. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I have the greatest possible pleasure in moving that which I know you will carry unanimously, "That the Most Hon. the Marquis of Ripon be elected the Grand Master of our Order." (Great Cheering).

Captain Ralph said—I rise with the very greatest pleasure to second the proposition, because I have never been at a meeting where Masons assembled without hearing the greatest esteem loudly expressed of our Most Worshipful Grand Master. The brother who has preceded me has said how much we are indebted to the Grand Master for having convened the craft to give expression to their gratification of the recovery of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. I think such a step has raised the Craft to the estimation of the country; and I am very sure H.R.H. who is very fond of receiving those marks of attention, will deeply appreciate it. His Royal Highness takes a great interest in the Craft. He receives many letters, and has many communications to answer; and I feel sure the longer he is associated with the Craft, the more we shall appreciate him, and therefore, with great pleasure, I second the motion that has been made.

Bro. R. J. Bagshaw, Prov. Grand Master of Essex, before putting the motion to the vote, observed that he was sure the feeling of Grand Lodge would go with the mover and seconder of the motion. He then put the motion, which was carried unanimously, and with acclamation.

Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter, G.D.C., then proclaimed the Grand Master with all his titles, and called on the brethren to salute him in due form, which was accordingly done.

The Grand Master on rising to acknowledge the vote, was received with immense enthusiasm. When it had subsided, he said: Brethren, I am deeply grateful to you for the manner in which you have been pleased to receive the proposal that has just been made to you. It so happens being a singular circumstance that this is the first occasion, I believe, though I have held this office for two years, upon which at the time of my election, I have been able to return thanks to you. Last year, as you are aware, I was absent from this country upon public business. I regret very much that that business necessarily took so much of my time from my duties as your Grand Master, and I could not have wondered at it, if you had thought it right to elect, upon this occasion, some one with respect to whom you might have been more certain that he could have given, when it was required, his undivided attention. But brethren, you have been pleased once more to call me to sit upon this ancient and honoured throne, and I can assure you that I am deeply sensible of the proof which you have thus given me of your confidence. I know well that even when unusual circumstances, such as those of last year, do not intervene to occupy my time, to the exclusion of all other business, yet situated as I am, and have been ever since you chose me to be your Grand Master, I have not been able to give to your affairs that attention which I ought to have afforded to them if it had been in my power. (Cries of "no, no.") But at least, I may trust after this renewed proof of your confidence, that you feel that which I can conscientiously assert to be true, that I have given to the duties of the great office to which you have elected me, the utmost time and attention which was at my command. (Hear, hear.) I say, which was at my command, because I am confident that you will all agree with me in thinking that one who is called, as I have been, to discharge important public functions in the State, must give to the claims of those public duties his first attention. (Hear, hear) Our business and our interests are to us of the greatest importance; but a good Freemason is likewise a good Englishman, and a good subject of the Queen (hear, hear,) and he knows and feels that the claims of our Sovereign and of our country, must be paramount upon every one of us, if he would do his duty. Brethren, allusions was made by the mover of the resolution in which you have just agreed, to the present prospects of the Craft. I can take very little credit indeed to myself for that undoubted prosperity. If the Craft is prosperous—and prosperous it is—if it is increasing in the number of its lodges, and in the number of its members, it is mainly due to this: that I believe the Masons in the present day, are becoming more and more deeply impressed with this important duty, that they should bear witness, wherever they go, to the great principles of their order, and that by bearing that witness among their fellow-countrymen, they tend to raise the public respect for their ancient Craft, to prove that our principles are realities, and are not names, and that to be a good Mason is to be also a good man.

The next business on the paper was election of Grand Treasurer for the year.

Bro. F. Bennoch rose and said that, remembering how well our present Grand Treasurer (Bro. S. Tomkins) had performed his duties for a larger number of years than he (Bro. Bennoch) cared to remember, knowing also how highly he was esteemed by the Craft generally, and how greatly he deserved to be so regarded, he moved the re-election of Bro. Tomkins.

The motion having been seconded, was carried amidst loud applause.

The Grand Master said he entirely concurred in the choice of the brethren, and formally conveyed to Bro. Tomkins the result of the election.

Bro. Tomkins said—Most Worshipful Grand Master and Brethren, I thank you very heartily for this renewed proof of your confidence in re-electing me to this highly honourable office, and I assure you I have very great pleasure in assisting in all that can promote the prosperity and influence of the Craft. Since I have been Grand Treasurer, the Craft has become more numerous, prosperous, and influential than ever it was before, and I trust that prosperity and influence will long continue. (Cheers.)

Scrutineers were then chosen for the election of a member of the Board of General Purposes in the room of Bro. Benjamin Gray deceased, and the election was proceeded with. The candidates were Bro. Kenyon and Price. Towards the close of the evening the Bro. Kenyon was declared to be elected.

The Grand Master said that he appointed Bros. G. Fenn and C. C. Dumas to fill the vacancies in the Lodge of Benevolence caused by the death of Bros. Bazalgette and W. Young.

The report of the Board of Benevolence having been read and ordered to be entered on the minutes, Bro. Jas. Brett, moved, and Bro. J. W. Halsey seconded the recommendation on that report, for grants to the amount of £150 to two widows. The recommendations in both cases were carried.

On the motion of Bro. Ll. Evans, President of the Board of General Purposes, the following report of that Board was taken as read.

"The Board of General Purposes beg to report as follows:—

"They have taken into their serious consideration the smallness in amount of the fees now payable for new Warrants, and with the permission of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master they recommend to Grand Lodge the following alteration in article 5, page 116, of the Book of Constitutions, edition 1871. That between the words "Warrant" and "Five" in the first line, the following words be inserted:—'For the London District Fifteen Guineas, for Provincial Lodges, Ten Guineas, for District Lodges and Lodges in foreign parts.

"The Board have investigated a complaint made by Bro. Lewis Alexander, Past Master of the Lodge of Joppa, No. 188, London, against the W.M. and others for balloting for and initiating a Candidate who was not properly described in the summons. The W. Master, Wardens, and Secretary attended the Board, and the complaint being admitted, it was resolved:—'That as there was no apparent intention to deceive the Members of the Lodge, the W. Master and Officers be admonished to take more care that the laws laid down for the admission of Candidates be adhered to in future,' and they were admonished accordingly.

"4. The Board have directed the Grand Secretary to call the attention of the Grand Pursuivants to Law 3, page 18 of the Book of Constitutions, which states that 'No Member of the Grand Lodge shall attend therein without his proper jewel and clothing; nor shall any member be permitted to wear in Grand Lodge, any jewel, medal, or device belonging to or appertaining to any Order or Degree not recognised by the Grand Lodge of England as part of pure 'Ancient Masonry;' and to request that this Law may be enforced. The Board also invite the attention of Grand Lodge to Art. 22, page 68, and Art. 2, page 118, upon the same subject.

"4. The Board have investigated a complaint against the W. Master of the Beaudesert Lodge, No. 1387, Leighton Buzzard, for having raised two Brethren at a shorter date than that allowed by the Constitutions, page 86, Art. 7. The W. Master expressed his regret at having, through ignorance, violated the Law, and the Board, under the circumstances, ordered the Lodge to be fined Two Guineas, the W. Master to be admonished to be more careful in future, and that it be notified to him that both Brethren must be re-obligated before Grand Lodge Certificates can be issued.

5. The Board have taken into consideration the resolution proposed by Bro. Matthew Cooke, P.M. in the Globe Lodge, No. 23, for adoption by Grand Lodge at the Quartely Communication, held on the 7th September, 1871, and referred to this Board to inquire into and report. The following is a copy of such proposed resolutions:—

"That whilst this Grand Lodge recognises the private right of every brother to belong to any extraneous Masonic organisation he may choose, it as firmly forbids, now and at any future time, all brethren while engaged as Salaried Officials under this Grand Lodge to mix themselves up in any way with such bodies as the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite; the Rites of Misraim and Memphis; the spurious orders of Rome and Constantine; the schismatic body styling itself the Grand Mark Lodge of England, or any other exterior Masonic organisation whatever (even that of the Order of Knights Templar, which is alone recognised by the Articles of Union) under the pain of immediate dismissal from employment by this Grand Lodge."

The charges made by Brother Cooke at the above quarterly communication, against the officials in the Grand Secretary's office, have already been inquired into by this Board, and a report thereon has been made to Grand Lodge, finding that such charges were in the main without foundation, and this report has been approved by Grand Lodge. The Board have come to the conclusion that the inquiry directed to be made by them had reference to the charges above referred to, and not to the several "Exterior Masonic Organizations" mentioned in the proposed resolution of Brother Cooke, and they have therefore not proceeded to inquire further into the matter. The Board are of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that inasmuch as Grand Lodge has full control, not only over the officials in its service but over the whole Craft, and would undoubtedly exercise such control should any member, whether official or otherwise, be proved to have taken part in any degree or order denounced by Grand Lodge or inimical to its principles; and inasmuch as the proposed resolution, if passed, would not add to the power and authority either of Grand Lodge or of this Board, such resolution is unnecessary, and the Board therefore do not recommend its adoption by Grand Lodge. The Board, however, are clearly of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that no clerk or other subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or order not recognized by Grand Lodge.

(Signed) J. LLEWELLYN EVANS, President.

Bro. Ll. Evans moved that it be received and entered on the minutes.

Bro. Matthew Cooke, P.M. in No. 23, would call attention to the expression used in the 5th paragraph of this report in which it was set forth that certain "charges," were brought by him. He denied the accuracy of this statement. No "charges" were made by him at the Board. He was cited before it; and he would now move that this statement be corrected in the paragraph.

Bro. Ll. Evans did not understand what Bro. Cooke meant. Brethren who were present at the Quarterly Communication, when Bro. Cooke addressed Grand Lodge, would remember that charges were made against Grand Secretary's Office of a very grave character. This was a matter of fact, and not of opinion on his (Bro. Evans's) part or the Board's part.

The motion "that the Report be seconded and entered on the minutes," was then carried.

Bro. Ll. Evans said it was now his duty to bring before Grand Lodge, the first paragraph in the report which related to the alteration proposed by the Board, to be made in the charge for warrants for new Lodges. They had given great consideration to the matter, and they had the sanction of the Grand Master in recommending that the fees for new warrants be increased. They did this on the ground that they would be consulting the interests of Freemasonry.

The Board were unanimous in the recommendation the London Lodges should pay Fifteen Guineas, country Lodges Ten Guineas, and district and foreign Lodges Five Guineas for their warrants.

[The report of Grand Lodge will be concluded in our next.]

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

LODGE OF FAITH, (No. 141.)—The rejoicings of "Thanksgiving Day" undoubtedly kept many otherwise zealous brethren from attending to their Masonic duties; and accounts for the comparatively sparse muster of members of the above lodge, at the meeting at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, the now historic, and never-to-be-forgotten 27th of February, 1872. Bro. C. C. Taylor, the W.M., and all his officers were however present at the appointed hour, and the attendance gradually increased to about forty members. The usual preliminaries having been disposed of, the next business was proceeded with, which consisted, first in conferring the honour of the third degree on Bro. Ellis; secondly in passing Bros. Stokes, Morrison, Quick and Dunthorn; and lastly to admit into the Order in ancient form, Messrs. S. Benjamin and John Allison, the ceremonies being worked alternately by the W.M., and by Bro. E. Gotthiel, P.M. The brethren then adjourned to partake of refreshment, and on the removal of the cloth, the customary proceedings (undistinguished by any novel feature) held their course, except when the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was proposed, which the W.M. did in a speech full of deep feeling and expressions of gratitude to the G.A.O.T.U., ending with the hope that the Royal Brother may long be spared, not only for the good of the country at large, but to support by his influence the interests of the Craft, which he has honoured by accepting the position of Past Grand Master. The response, as may be imagined, was most enthusiastic. Most of the brethren being very anxious to leave, in order to view the splendour of the decorations, the speeches were refreshingly brief. The Past Masters present were:—Bros. Stewart, Hill, Gotthiel, Carter and Hopwood.

TRANQUILITY LODGE—(No. 185).—How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity, is the motto with which the above lodge heads its agenda paper, and to judge fairly, it must be stated that the conduct of its members seems regulated in consonance with the spirit of the motto. Thus it probably happens that the "Tranquility" is without a doubt one of the most flourishing lodges in London. At the last meeting held at the Cannon-street Hotel, on Monday, 19th inst, after the usual preliminaries, Bro. Phillip Levy, the Hon. Sec., read the report of the Audit Committee, which was adopted with acclamation, and from which it appears that there was a considerable balance in the hands of the Treasurer for ordinary lodge expenses, but what is much more interesting, and of higher importance, is the fact that the lodge is possessed of a private Benevolent Fund, amounting to no less a sum than £600, invested in Government Securities. The thanks of the lodge were voted to the Treasurer and Secretary, for the manner in which the accounts were kept. The special business of the evening consisted of the installation of Bro. R. S. Bloomfield for the ensuing year. This duty devolved on Bro. S. Israel, P.M., and was performed with care and efficiency. The newly-installed Master appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. A. L. Barnett, I.P.M.; H. Abrahams, S.W.; N. Moss, J.W.; John Peartree, Hon. Treas.; P. Levy, Hon. Sec.; Schmitzler, S.D.; J. Constable, J.D.; J. H. Ross, I.G.; Vesper, Tyler. Mr. Ralph Simon was next presented for initiation and an opportunity was then afforded to the new officers to prove their capabilities. It is pleasant to state that their various duties were most creditably performed, but more noteworthy was the work of the new W.M., who conducted the ceremony with rare precision and impressiveness. The lodge was then called from labour to refreshment—and at the banquet table many good things, most agreeable to sight and palate were heartily discussed, after which the usual toasts were proposed, and the W.M. again proved his fitness for the honourable post he occupies. The various toasts were given in a manner approaching to eloquence, yet brief withal and to the point, especially the one referring to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, his recent illness, and happy recovery, which was spoken of with a simple pathos that elicited loud and prolonged cheers. To the toast of "The Initiate," Bro. Simon responded in brief but suitable terms, and to that of "The Visitors," Bro. Lazarus P.M. 188, P.Prov.S.G.W. Wilts, replied, and his speech included a spirited little history of the re-vivification of the Tranquility Lodge—which after being in abeyance for two or three years—received new impulse and was re-animated by brethren of the Joppa Lodge, (No. 188.) The proceedings in the banqueting hall were interspersed with various entertainments, the most noteworthy of which were a duet by Bro. Ross and Constable—a good deal of drollery by H. M. Levy, P.M. 188, and especially a performance by Bro. Chevalier De Konstki on the pianoforte, and Bro. Oberthur. The Past Masters present were Bros. J. Israel, Holbrook, Harfield, M. Hart, M. Harris, A. Sydney. The following were the visitors:—E. Palbert, P.M. 1017; Berkervitz, W.M. 188; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188; S. M. Lazarus, P.M. 188, Prov.G.S.W. Wilts; J. Lazarus, P.M. 1017; L. Alexander, P.M. 188; E. Gotthiel, P.M. 141; L. Hickman, S.D. 188; H. Marks, 205; P. Raphael, 205.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—The twelfth installation meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the White Swan Tavern, 217 High-street, Deptford, on Thursday, February 22. Bro. William Andrews, W.M., at the time appointed, opened the lodge. There were present during the evening, Bros. J. W. Reed, J.W. and W.M. elect; H. A. Collington, P.M. Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; W. Myatt, S.D.; G. Andrews, J.D.; S. O. Lewin, I.G.; J. Hawker, P.M.; J. Truelove, P.M.; F. G. Skinner, H. T. Tuson, R. West, T. Spencer, B. James, J. J. Pakes, G. Harvey, J. J. Funge, H. Rattle, H. J. Dawe, W. Shaw, R. G. J. Harris, G. T. Linn, J. G. Vohmann, J. Woollett, R. Harman, R. Killick, J. H. Wilson, G. Clark, &c., Amongst the visitors were:—Bros. J. Chynoweth, 4, J.D. 53; C. Horsley, P.M. 33; E. Harris, P.M. Treas. 73, Collector for Boys' School; C. Nash, W.M. 79; W. Noak, P.M. 140; G. Bolton, P.M. 147, and P.M. 169; J. Mott, 147; T. Arnold, P.M. 141; W. Hartley, 174; J. Roper, S.D. 147; G. Brown, P.M. 169; E. J. B. Bumstead, P.M. Sec. 548; J. W. Comb, W.M. 548; H. J. Wells, late 871; F. Smith, 879; J. Lord, 933; J. Carver; J.W. 1155; M. Landragin, 1155; A. Angliss, 1227; S. Wickens, W.M. 1326, and some others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The report of the Audit Committee was read. It was received, adopted, and ordered to be entered on the lodge minutes. It showed after all liabilities were settled, and Grand Lodge dues paid to March 31st, 1872, that there was a considerable balance in hand, for both the lodge funds and the Charity Fund. A ballot was taken for Mr. George Clarke, being unanimous in favor of his admission, he was duly initiated into ancient Freemasonry by the W.M., Bro. W. Andrews, the ceremonies of passing and raising having been reserved for an emergency meeting arranged to be held on 29th ult. The ceremony of installation was then proceeded with. By the unanimous wish of the members, Bro. H. A. Collington P.M. and Treasurer, took the chair, as W.M. Bro. F. Walters, P.M. and Secretary, presented Bro. J. W. Reed, J.W. and W.M. elect for the benefit of installation. The usual forms and ceremonies were gone through. Bro. J.W. Reed was installed W.M. for the ensuing year, in the presence of no less than fifteen Installed Masters. He afterwards appointed and invested with collar and jewel of office the following brethren, viz., W. Andrews, I.P.M. and Treas. (Brother H. A. Collington, P.M. having resigned at previous meeting the office of Treasurer). W. Myatt, S.W.; G. Andrews, J.W.; F. Walters, P.M., Secretary, (re-invested for 12th time); S. O. Lewin, S.D.; H. J. Tuson, J.D.; J. J. Pakes, I.G.; R. Harman, D.C.; F. G. Skinner, W.S.; F. Bavin, P.M., Tyler, (re-invested.) The addresses were delivered, and when completed, a hearty burst of applause showed how well the rendering of the installation was appreciated. It was resolved unanimously, and on proposition of Bro. F. Walters, P.M., Sec., "That a vote of thanks be given (and the same be entered on the minute book) to Bro. H. A. Collington, P.M., for his kindness in performing the ceremony of Installation." He expressed the sentiments of all present in describing the rendering of the ceremony, which he said had never been better done anywhere, being seldom equalled and never excelled. It was perfection for correctness, impressiveness, and the masterly manner of being performed, all had had a great intellectual treat. Bro. H. A. Collington, P.M., (being unable to stay to banquet) expressed his thanks in a suitable speech for this vote, also for the honour done him at a previous meeting, when he had been elected as the first Honorary Member of the lodge. Bro. W. Andrews, I.P.M., Treas., having decided that he selected (it being left to his choice) that the five guineas voted to him, to be spent in purchasing a testimonial for his efficient services rendered to the lodge during his year of office, he devoted to purchasing a Life Subscription of the Boys' School in the name of the W.M. of the lodge for the time being, so as to help to secure the much-coveted Vice Presidentship of the Boys' School, which the lodge was struggling hard to obtain. The money was immediately paid into the Boys' School, the Collector of that Institution being present. This rare and uncommon act of disinterestedness was thoroughly appreciated by the members of the lodge. It was resolved unanimously "That Bro. J. H. Wilson, be elected as the Steward to represent the lodge at the forthcoming Anniversary Festival of the Boy's School, on March 13th." Bro. H. S. Wells, late 871, and M. Concanen, late 871, were proposed as joining members. A gentleman was proposed for initiation at Emergency Meeting of the 29th ult. Some notices of motion relative to business of the lodge brought the meeting to a close. The lodge was closed in due form. The banquet and dessert, as also the wines, gave the greatest satisfaction. The toasts were given and well received. Bro. C. Horsley by desire, returned thanks for the Visitors in one of his well-known speeches, which are so much to the point and ably delivered. Songs and recitations added to the pleasures of the evening. The hours of reunion having been agreeably spent, the brethren separated.

BURGOYNE LODGE (No. 902.)—A large muster of brethren on the occasion of the installation of Bro. William Simmons as W.M. of this highly esteemed lodge evidenced the greatest interest taken in the business of the meeting, which was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Monday, the 26th ult. Although much difficulty in reaching the lodge room, consequent on the excitement and crowded state of the streets on the eve of the National Thanksgiving, was experienced by members and visitors, the time appointed for opening the lodge was punctually observed, and the W.M., Bro. Henry Smith, was supported by his officers and brethren in prompt attendance. Amongst the numerous visitors we observed:—The V.W. Bro. John Hervey, Grand Sec.; Bros. John Thomas, P.M. 507, 720; James Stevens, P.M. 25, 720, 1216; L. Frost, W.M. 91, G.S.; J. F. Wuest, P.M. 753; T. E. Hardy, P.M. 538; J. N. Frost, P.M. 228; Goddard, 55; Harroll, 1000; Griffiths, 908; &c. The lodge having been duly opened in the respective degrees, the chair of K.S. was taken by Bro. Samuel Poynder, P.M. and Treas. 902, who in a most impressive and able manner installed Bro. William Simmons as W.M. for the ensuing year. The newly-appointed officers were: Bros. L. R. Rogers, S.W.; R. N. Field, J.W.; Thor. Allen, S.D.; E. W. Page, J.D.; Samuel Iron, P.M. 902, M.C.; Walker and Sharman, Stwds; Bros. Poynter, P.M. and Scotcher, P.M., were re-invested Treas. and Sec. respectively, and Bro. Grant was invested as Tyler. The several investments were accompanied by extremely appropriate remarks and explanations by the newly-installed W.M. In very admirable style, and in a manner we have seldom heard equalled, Bro. Poynter delivered the several addresses, and concluded his work of Installing Master. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren shortly afterwards assembled at the banquet table. The cloth having been cleared, the usual loyal toasts were given, and the enthusiasm of the moment increased the customary hearty reception of "The Queen" and "The Prince of Wales." To the toast of "The Grand Lodge Officers," Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, replied in terms of high appreciation of the honour it conferred on any individual member of the Craft to be associated with the noblemen and gentlemen who composed the Grand Lodge, and expressed the great pleasure he had experienced in assisting at the business of the evening. He was desirous to express his opinion in respect of the admirable manner in which the Installing Master had performed his duty, and did not hesitate to declare that the ability displayed by the newly-installed Master augured well for the continued good working of Freemasonry in the Burgoyne Lodge. It was certainly his first visit, but with the expectation of witnessing such working, and in remembrance of his cordial reception on this occasion, it certainly should not be the last. "The health of the W.M." was drunk with much enthusiasm. Bro. Simmons being evidently most popular with the brethren over whom he is now to preside. The W.M. returned thanks in vigorous terms, and assured the brethren that his best efforts for the prosperity of the lodge, and their individual happiness and comfort should not be wanting. He then proposed "The health of the I.P.M., Bro. Henry Smith," whose services during the past year had been so conducive to the present state of prosperity of the lodge, and which were recognised by the presentation of the handsome jewel he had the gratification to place on his breast, and which he trusted might be worn during many future years of health and happiness by that distinguished brother and personal friend. Bro. Smith replied, with thanks, for the support he had received during his Mastership, and acknowledged the gift of the lodge as one which he should ever highly prize.—"The Visitors" was responded to by Bro. Thomas, P.M., who also expressed his delight with the admirable working of the Installation Ceremony. In his remarks he was also supported by Bro. Jas. Stevens, P.M., and several of the other visitors. Bro. Stevens, at the special request of the W.M., then delivered the beautiful Masonic recitation, "Mason's Vows," which was received with general acclamation. To the toast of "The Installing Master and Treasurer of the Lodge," Bro. Poynter replied in a speech so excellent that we cannot refrain from reporting it in extenso:—He said, Brethren, I have responded to this toast so many times that I am almost afraid there is nothing new left to say. Like the parson, of whom it was said that "if his text had the fever his sermon would never catch it," what I have to say must necessarily diverge a little from direct response. One slight element of novelty may, perhaps, be introduced in alluding to the acknowledgement of my humble services as Installing Master. Perhaps it has been neglect of my Masonic duty that I have never before perfected myself in this ceremony, but I had determined to signalise the tenth anniversary of my admission, "halting, humble and sore afraid," into Masonry, by performing the duty on this occasion. It has been said of the people of Israel that "Wherever there was a Temple erected to music, a Jew was ever to be found officiating at the shrine, or taking money at the doors." (Laughter.) So I can now say that I have fulfilled every office in the Lodge, from Tyler to Installing Master, for on one occasion, during the temporary absence of our lowest, but by no means least important officer, I took his place at the door of the lodge myself. The success of the "Burgoyne" Lodge during ten years of its existence is mainly owing to your brotherly love; to your all trying to render each other "comfortable;" so, in short, acting up to the principles contained in those addresses I have imperfectly endeavoured to convey this evening. I am assured that you will continue to act in the same way in the future, and that the very happy year we have passed under our beloved I.P.M., Bro. Henry Smith, will be rivalled by the year we are now entering upon under the Mastership of his esteemed successor. Not while we cultivate the qualities which are calculated to impart comfort and happiness to each other shall we, I am sure, neglect the industrious acquisition of that Masonic proficiency which already enables the

"Burgoyne" to boast proudly of its working as "second to none." The older we grow the more perfect we ought to become, for, if it is true of the human soul that advancing years have their compensation in increasing knowledge, so it should be more conspicuously illustrated in the Masonic body; to each member of which the words of the poet should apply as day by day, they make progress in the mystic lore:—

"The soul's worn habit, tattered and decayed, Sets in new light through rents that time hath made."

The usual remaining toasts and responses wound up a very pleasant evening, most agreeably diversified by the songs and recitations of the brethren and visitors.

INSTRUCTION.

PANMURE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 720).—A most interesting meeting of this lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Thursday, the 29th ult., which was largely attended, and when, for the second time within the past twelve months, Bro. John Thomas, P.M. and Preceptor of several of the South Metropolitan Lodges of Instruction undertook the arduous task of answering in full, the whole of the 451 questions contained in the Fifteen Sections, whereby the tenets and principles of the Masonic Craft are so admirably exemplified. On this occasion the questions were put by one of his many proficient pupils, Bro. James Stevens, P.M. of several London lodges, and well-known as an earnest and zealous Craftsman, and who presided as W.M. The absolute perfection with which questions and replies were respectively put and given, may be estimated by the fact, that whilst under ordinary circumstances the time usually consumed in "working the Sections" occupies above three hours, on this occasion but two and a half hours were required for that purpose. The "working" was most attentively listened to by those assembled, amongst whom we noticed brethren from several surrounding neighbourhoods, many of them Past Masters. At the conclusion of their self-imposed task, unanimous votes of thanks were accorded to both Bros. Thomas and Stevens, and hopes were expressed that a like intellectual treat would soon again be afforded. We desire to add our expression of opinion, that the labours of those brethren in regard to the diffusion of Masonic instruction are worthy of emulation by other well qualified Instructors, and hope that the example thus set will be followed in both Metropolitan and Provincial districts.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

CAMBRIDGE.—Scientific Lodge (No. 88).—A meeting of the brethren of this lodge was held at the Lion Hotel, on the 8th ult., for the transaction of the general business of the lodge, the installation of the Worshipful Master-elect for the ensuing year, and the appointment of Officers. Bro. J. Dimmock, P.M., acted as Installing Master, and in admirable style proceeded to install Bro. J. A. Dimmock (son of the Installing Master) as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The following appointments were made:—Bros. J. N. Ling, I.P.M.; J. Fitch, S.W.; W. Bays, J.W.; W. J. Bashan, S.D.; W. H. Jarrold, J.D.; C. W. Ellison, I.G.; T. Nichols, Sec.; B. Beales, Treas.; J. Bentley, D.C.; F. Grain, P.M., Chap. The lodge was closed in due and ancient form, after which upwards of 50 brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. Mayse. Harmony and good fellowship prevailed among the brethren, and with the usual loyal and Masonic toasts the evening was passed to the entire satisfaction of the numerous brethren present.

CORNWALL.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

A special meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall was held on the 23rd ult., in the Masonic Hall, New Public Rooms, Truro. Bro. Augustus Smith, Prov. The Provincial Grand Master stated that the special object of this meeting was the adoption for presentation [of congratulatory addresses to Her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on the recovery of the latter from his severe illness.

These addresses having been agreed to, it was ordered that they be engrossed on vellum, and the Provincial Grand Master was requested and authorised to sign them on behalf of the Craft in Cornwall. Several excellent speeches were delivered, and they were enthusiastically received by the brethren. The addresses will be illuminated on vellum, and a work of art in every sense of the term. Bro. William, P.M., 131, has received the order, and from the high character he has obtained for that class of work, we believe he will do justice to the selection.

Arrangements were subsequently made for an alteration in the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund, by so extending its basis as to admit of grants being made for the education of children and their advancement in life; and a committee was appointed to prepare the necessary laws for consideration by the members at the next Provincial Grand Lodge, which is to be held at St. Austell in the summer.

A Committee of seven was also to be nominated by the Provincial Grand Master for the revision and alteration of the bye-laws of the Province; and it was decided to elect another annuitant at the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge.

The lodges were fairly represented, and considerable interest was manifested throughout the proceedings. An undress evening dinner was served at the Royal Hotel, at which the Provincial Grand Master presided.

SUSSEX.

SPECIAL PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

On Thursday, 22nd ult., a special Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the Music Room of the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, to pass resolutions, congratulating the Queen and his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on the recovery of His Royal Highness from his recent illness. The Provincial Grand Lodge was convened by Lord Pelham, M.P., Prov. G.M. of Sussex; and there was a large and influential attendance of the members of the Craft in the province. Previous to the lodge being opened, Bro. W. Devin played a voluntary, introducing the well-known air, "God Bless the Prince of Wales." The following Provincial Grand Officers were present:—Lord Pelham, Prov. G.M.; E. J. Turner, D. Prov. G.M.; V. P. Freeman, Prov. G.S.W.; Dr. T. Trollope, Prov. G.J.W.; Dr. Griffith, Prov. G. Chaplain; G. Tatham, Prov. G. Treasurer; G. E. Pocock, Prov. G. Sec.; J. Price, Prov. G.D.; R. K. Blessley, Prov. G. Supt. Works; J. Dixon, Prov. G.D.C.; C. Pocock, Prov. G.A.D.C.; W. Stuckey, Prov. G.S.B.; W. Devin, Prov. G. Organist; J. St. Clair, Prov. G. Pursvt.; H. Figg, E. Carpenter, and Stride, Prov. G. Stewards. The lodges in the province were also numerously represented.

The lodge having been opened in due form, the Prov. Grand Master, Lord Pelham, in eloquent and feeling terms, proposed an address of congratulation to Her Gracious Majesty the Queen on the happy recovery of the Prince of Wales, and also a separate address to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., on the same subject.

Deputy Prov. Grand Master Turner seconded the resolutions of the Provincial Grand Master, which were carried unanimously.

Bro. Cordy Burrows, P. Prov. J.G.W. (Mayor of Brighton), said it was usual to mark all seasons of thanksgiving by some act which would fix the event on the memory. Among the large body of Masons it could not be disguised that, although there were many affluent members, there were also those whose position was the reverse, and he therefore moved—"That the sum of £50 be voted as a thank-offering from the funds of this Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, and that the privileges of Vice-president be exercised by the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master (for the time being) of Sussex."

Bro. Dr. Griffith, P. Prov. G.C., seconded the proposition, and alluded in very feeling terms to His Royal Highness's late illness.

Carried unanimously.

Bro. Jeffrey, P. Prov. G.S.B., proposed, "That the addresses be engrossed on vellum, signed by the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, and countersigned by the Provincial Grand Secretary, and then forwarded to the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, for presentation to the Queen and the Prince of Wales.

Bro. C. Horsley, W.M. of the Yarborough Lodge, seconded, and the proposition was carried.

Bro. Brigden, W.M. of the Royal Brunswick Lodge, proposed, "That the best thanks of this Provincial Grand Lodge be given to the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master for convening this Special Grand Lodge."

Bro. Stride, W.M. of the Royal York Lodge, seconded, and the proposition was carried unanimously.

This concluded the business, and the lodge was accordingly closed, many of the brethren expressing the great pleasure it had afforded them to be present. Although only a short notice had been given of the holding of this special lodge, there was a larger attendance than at any Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex for many years.

EDINBURGH.

PORTOBELLO.—Lodge Portobello (No. 226).—The first monthly meeting after the installation of office-bearers was held on Thursday evening, 15th February, within the lodge-room, Crown Hotel, High-street, Portobello. The newly-elected R.W.M. (Brother Harrison) presiding, and the Wardens in their places. The lodge being duly constituted, and the transaction of some routine business having been got through, the lodge was called from labour to refreshment. There was a very large muster of the brethren present, including many from several sister lodges in the provinces, as it was understood that the brethren of the lodge had unanimously agreed to present their I.P.M. (Brother Alexander Scott), who for a number of years had so efficiently brought the Portobello Lodge to the state of perfection in which it now was, with a tangible token of their appreciation of his services. In the course of the evening, therefore, R.W.M. Brother Harrison, in a few appropriate remarks, presented I.P.M. Brother Alexander Scott with a very chaste marble time-piece, which bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Brother Alexander Scott, P.M., by the brethren of the Lodge Portobello, No. 226, in appreciation of valuable services rendered to the lodge as R.W. Master. 1872;" to which Brother Scott made a suitable and feeling reply. He referred at length to the past and present history of the lodge, and predicted that under the new R.W.M.'s reign it would continue to go on year by year, not only adding numerically to its strength, but becoming more and more firmly united in the true bonds of Masonic brotherhood. The evening's proceedings were agreeably brought to a close at high twelve by "Happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again," being received with all the honours.

The great interest excited by Bro. Carpenter's articles on "Freemasonry and Israelitism," which have appeared in THE FREEMASON, has induced Bro. Kenning to obtain the author's consent and co-operation to reprint them in a more portable and permanent form, and he hopes the volume will obtain a wide circulation.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.
 "Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl RUSSEL communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon F.R.C.S. England; Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.
 "I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.
 "I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.
 "Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."
 "I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON and Co., Horncastle.
 "We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.
 "It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
 CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.
 QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

Bro. Bellerby seconded the motion, which was carried.

Bro. Ll. Evans, proceeding with the report proposed that the remainder be adopted. He would do so without a word of comment on it, as it was, and had been for a long time, before the brethren, and he had nothing to add to what was contained in it.

Bro. F. Bennoch, without disputing the propriety of the motion, thought, looking to the various details contained in the report, that it would be convenient to Grand Lodge to have the opportunity of expressing its opinions seriatim on the clauses of the report.

Bro. Ll. Evans said the last paragraph was the only one on which there could be a discussion. In paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, there was absolutely nothing for Grand Lodge to decide upon. They were the Board's report on matters brought before it.

Bro. C. Hutton Gregory, P.G.D., rose to move that Grand Lodge do not adopt the last sentence of the report (Hear, hear) :— "The Board, however, are clearly of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that no clerk or other subordinate officer in the employment of the Grand Lodge, should take a prominent part in any degree or order not recognised by the Grand Lodge." In making the motion that this be not adopted, he would bear his tribute to the indefatigable, invariable honesty and ability of the Board of General Purposes, and he hoped the Board would not for a moment think, if Grand Lodge did not adopt this part of their report, that it reflected on their characters as Masons. He wished to sail under open colours, and would therefore state at once that, while he had not the least personal acquaintance with the brother against whom Bro. Cooke's motion was directed, he was one of those who belonged to one of the proscribed bodies, and very good company they were, for they comprised some of the most distinguished members of the Craft. He confessed he was a Knight Templar.

The Grand Registrar wished to correct a wrong impression of Bro. Gregory's. The Knights Templar were not proscribed by the articles of Union. By those articles, although the Book of Constitutions stopped short and said that only three degrees were recognised, it went on to say, in the Articles of Union, that nothing should prevent Lodges or Chapters practising the orders of chivalry that had been practised among them before. He believed that among those orders of chivalry the most important was the Knights Templar; and therefore it was not unrecognised.

Bro. Gregory said he would withdraw his mis-statement, but he knew there was a body called the "Ancient and Accepted Rite," of which he was, he would not say ashamed, but would honestly say he had the honour to be a member. He could not speak of his own knowledge of the "Rites of Misraim and Memphis"—he did not wish to have a knowledge of them. He could not speak of the "spurious Orders of Rome and Constantine;" they might be spurious or genuine, for what he knew. He could not speak of the "Schismatic Body styling itself the Mark Grand Lodge of England." But he would venture to remind Grand Lodge that it once took a very different view of the matter, and even went so far as to recognise them partially and temporarily. He submitted that the paragraph in the report should not be passed, and for three reasons: first of all, because he believed it to be founded on a misapprehension; in the second place, he thought it was uncalled for; and in the third place, he believed it to be unjust, because it was founded on the idea that these orders were in antagonism to this Grand Lodge. He would yield to no one in his attachment to Pure and Ancient Masonry. The order he spoke of, the Ancient and Accepted Rite, was no more antagonistic to Pure and Ancient Masonry, than any club might be, which required Freemasonry as a qualification in its members; or even that noble Order to which the Grand Master had the honour to belong, the Order of the Garter. The statutes of the Ancient and Accepted Rite expressly declared, not only their recognition of, but their subserviency to Grand Lodge in Pure and Ancient Masonry, and that would prove there was no antagonism in it to Freemasonry. In point of fact, it was not Freemasonry. He would venture to say that the Board of General Purposes had acted under a misapprehension in endeavouring to raise indirectly an attack on those bodies, by asking this Grand Lodge to pass a censure on all those who took a prominent part in recognising these degrees. He regretted very much that the subject had been before the Board at all. He thought Grand Lodge, knowing how many Masons there were who occupied a high place in the Craft, not only by their social position, but by their Masonic distinction and love of Freemasonry, would hesitate to pass a law which would be a reflection on Freemasonry, and might cause a schism in Freemasonry which we should all deplere. This paragraph of the report was unnecessary, and he would call to his assistance the report of the Board of General Purposes which said :—

"The Board have come to the conclusion that, the inquiry directed to be made by them had reference to the charges above referred to, and not to the several "Exterior Masonic Organisations" mentioned in the proposed resolution of Bro. Cooke, and they have therefore not proceeded to inquire further into the matter. The Board are of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that inasmuch as Grand Lodge has full control, not only over the officials in its service, but over the whole Craft, and would undoubtedly exercise such control should any member, whether official or otherwise, be proved to have taken part in any Degree or Order denounced by Grand Lodge, or inimical to its principles; and inasmuch as the proposed resolution, if passed, would not add to the power and authority either of Grand Lodge or this Board, such resolution is unnecessary, and the Board therefore do not recommend its adoption by Grand Lodge."

The Board, he was sorry to say, having made that very sensible remark, in which he hoped Grand Lodge would agree, went further. After saying that it was unnecessary to pass any rule with reference to this subject, and saying that Grand Lodge had full control, not only over the officials in its service, but over the whole Craft, and would undoubtedly exercise such control should any member, whether official or otherwise, be proved to have taken part in any degree or order denounced by Grand Lodge, or inimical to its principles, they went on to get Grand Lodge to adopt a paragraph which condemned those very brethren. They said, "The Board, however, are clearly of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that no clerk or other subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or order not recognised by Grand Lodge." This was unjust, because it attacked only one or two individuals. That was not congenial with the generosity or the chivalry of Masons. He would call attention to this, that the Board exempted from this censure one of the officers of Grand Lodge who might or might not belong to one of these Orders, the Grand Secretary. Now, if it was a crime in a clerk, why was it not a crime in Grand Secretary? Did not this suggest the lines.

"That in the Captain's but a choleric word Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy?"

He would call on Grand Lodge not to sanction anything which passed a censure, or prohibition, or punishment, on the paid officers, without including every member of the Craft who might belong to the proscribed orders.

Bro. Abrahams had great pleasure in seconding the motion of Bro. Gregory. He felt that the report was an attack on members of those orders not recognised by Grand Lodge. It was but right and just that we should protect our order. He was not a Knight Templar, and never could be one, but, to use Bro. Gregory's expression, he "had the honour" to be a Mark Master, and a Past Grand Steward of that Order; and he believed it to be our duty, even if we were not members of those Orders, to assist those brethren who were, provided we did our duty as Masons. The Grand Master had said in his excellent address, that a good Mason was a good man; therefore, if we did our duty as good Masons we were good men. There should be no law which should injure brethren of other degrees. He could inform the brethren that there was attached to the Grand Mark Lodge a Charity Fund for Masons who were Mark Masters, but if a brother was poor and had not passed the Mark, the Mark Masons felt that he was a brother Mason, and assisted him. Therefore, he trusted Grand Lodge would take the matter into its serious consideration. It was not only those particular gentlemen who were mentioned, on whom this report was an attack; it was an attack upon everything which was not acknowledged by the Grand Lodge. He would entreat the brethren to pause before they carried this report. If they were protecting the paid officials they were protecting all Orders not acknowledged by Grand Lodge, and he thought it was their duty to protect these Orders. Charity and love for one another were in accordance with our masonic teaching, and he hoped that, as the fifth clause of the report was contrary to that teaching, Grand Lodge would unanimously decide that this resolution be expunged from the minutes.

Bro. Matthew Cooke said it seemed to him that a considerable amount of misapprehension had arisen about this. As his Lordship would remember, this discussion all came about by a certain motion which he (Bro. Cooke) had put on the notice paper. One brother had kindly informed them of a little private business behind the scenes, and talked about suspended people belonging to exterior organisations. Perhaps that brother would permit him to retaliate, and remind him that he had been suspended himself, and if he had been suspended as long as he (Bro. Cooke) he would have pulled the building down with him. The three last lines of the report were totally contrary to what the President had set forth, "That the Board are clear of opinion and submit to Grand Lodge that no Clerk or subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any Degree or Order not recognised by Grand Lodge." That was exactly his (Bro. Cooke's) original proposition, not one word more or less. It was that no salaried official should deal with those things which were contrary to this Grand Lodge. It was not that any brother should not belong to them, for every brother had a right to belong to what order he pleased; but, he said, as long as they eat our bread they were our servants, and they had no business to travel beyond their duty. It was beyond their duty to go in antagonism to the principles of this Grand Lodge. Therefore, he could not but arrive at this conclusion, that the prohibition of the President's report entirely did away with what he had hitherto said. He (Bro. Cooke) was invited to attend the Board, he was not charging; he was distinctly told that all charges were withdrawn; and now, to tie a tinkettle to a poor dog's tail, the word "charges" was put in, which was only a way to excite a prejudice, so that the object on the motion should not be carried. If the Board were willing, he submitted to Grand Lodge that the three last lines of the report should stand with this alteration, "That no salaried official or other subordinate officer" (because he was not going to leave the Grand Secretary out, any more than anybody else) instead of "That no Clerk or other subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or Order not recognised by Grand Lodge." If it were so altered, all well and good; but he would only say that their report, by the last three lines, stultified the whole thing from beginning to end.

Bro. F. Binckes said he had some interest in this question, as a member of all the orders not recognised, and he would make a suggestion which he thought would simplify the question. He could not see what was the object of the Board in framing the last article of the report; but he thought they must have some ulterior object in view of which the body of the Craft had no idea. As the language of the report now stood, even he himself might perhaps be visited with some unknown pains and penalties, for having the honour to belong to certain orders and degrees. He therefore would ask Bro. Gregory to let the concluding part read thus—"The Board have come to the conclusion that the enquiry directed to be made by them, had reference to the charges above referred to, and not to the several exterior Masonic organisations mentioned in the proposed resolution of Bro. Cook, and they have therefore not proceeded to inquire further into the matter." Stop there; then omit the next five or six lines and proceed. He would then get rid of the idea of conflicting degrees or orders, of the expression "Craft," and that which attacked the officers of the Grand Lodge. He would ask Bro. Gregory to accept that amendment.

Bro. Ll. Evans did not think it was competent to Grand Lodge to remodel the report, but it might send it back to the Board. Grand Lodge could not add to or diminish from the report.

Bro. F. Bennoch said he confessed that the last few words of Bro. Evans entirely met his own view, at the moment the proposition was made that the report should be adopted. Why, it seemed to him that scarcely any member of the Board of General Purposes could draw from this resolution exactly what they, either individually or collectively, meant. It was in itself, in some respects contradictory. He had expected that the long and painful discussion at the last Quarterly Communication would have been quite sufficient to settle the matter with reference to Bro. Cooke's motion. But the Board went on and condemned not only the Grand Officers for doing that which was perhaps unseemly during the hours of office work, but every brother. If not directly, they were inferentially condemned. Not satisfied with that, they condemned certain officers and clerks in the Grand Secretary's office, excluding the chief. He would say, include them all if you please, not this clerk only, for the reason that on the last occasion the Most Worshipful the Grand Master most emphatically stated that if the allegations were true—and in his judgment they were unmistakably true—he would take care that henceforth no such matter should occur under the roof of the Grand Lodge. This seemed to him (Bro. Bennoch) to meet the case so thoroughly and entirely that he would confess, when he saw this present report, that he felt amazed that the Board of General Purposes should again have entered into a discussion so fertile of misunderstanding and unbrotherly feelings. He would move an amendment, which would embrace all the objections that had been raised, "That the whole of clause five of the report be referred back to the Board of General Purposes for reconsideration."

The Grand Master explained to the brethren the position they were in with respect to these motions. He said we are getting into some little confusion as to the various proposals that have been already submitted to Grand Lodge, and therefore I think I ought to state the real position we are in and the order in which the motions ought to be taken. This proposition relating to the reference back of the report ought to be taken first. Consequently if Bro. Bennoch moves the reference back of the whole of clause five, we shall take it. If his amendment is defeated, then Bro. Binckes's amendment ought to be taken next, for the omission of the words beginning "the Board are of opinion," down to "its adoption by Grand Lodge." If Bro. Binckes is beaten, then we take Bro. Gregory's motion.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart seconded Bro. F. Bennoch's amendment.

Bro. Geo. Lambert objected to the word, "schismatic," but the Grand Master informed him that it was not an original expression by the Board, but only quoted from Bro. Cooke.

After a few words from Bro. John Symonds, P.G.D., as to the use of the quotation marks in these reports; from Bro. Gregory, opposing the reference back, after the Board had "incubated over this egg" for three months; from the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P. G. Chaplain, who was in a state of considerable confusion, arising perhaps from his own ignorance, but who thought that many of these unhappy discussions had arisen from the fact that Grand Lodge had laid down no rule with regard to their officers following certain degrees, and recommended that in future such rule should be defined; from Bro. Ll. Evans, who said the Board found "certain charges were made against a certain brother in the employ of Grand Lodge by Bro. Cooke, and they invited Bro. Cooke to give information;" from Bro. Cooke, and Bro. Binckes, Bro. Bennoch's amendment was put, and carried by a large majority. Accordingly the other paragraphs of the report stood over.

The Grand Secretary read the statement of accounts, which showed a balance in the hands of Grand Treasurer of £4,246 2s. 8d., and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75.

The Grand Secretary also read the Report of Bro. R. P. Harding, Auditor of Grand Lodge account of receipts and disbursements during the year 1871.

The Grand Master said that the next business on the paper was Bro. Matthew Cooke's motion, of which notice had been given; but he would put it to Bro. Cooke whether, as the report, which embraced the subject-matter of his motion, had been referred back to the Board, he would not best consult the convenience of Grand Lodge by postponing his motion till the amended report was received.

Bro. Matthew Cooke replied that he was going to rise for the very purpose of making the request that he might be allowed to postpone his motion. His Lordship, on the last occasion had given orders that the irregularities complained of should not be continued, and he thought that, in the Book of Constitutions there should be an entry of what the duties of the Officers of Grand Lodge were. He hoped that the Board would send its report next time, and not that of the President.

The Grand Master thought this last remark was scarcely in order, as it seemed to involve a personal reflection.

Bro. Cooke said he was exceedingly sorry; if he had been personal, it was unintentional.

The subject then dropped.

Bro. Wm. Smith, P.M. 33, rose to move "That it is desirable that the printed notice papers of the business to be transacted at each Quarterly Communication shall include a complete list or return of all applications or petitions to the M.W. the Grand Master, during the preceding three months, for new lodges, with the dates of such applications, the names of the petitioners, and of the lodges, as well as the proposed places of meeting, together with the dates and particulars of all warrants issued; and that the M.W. the Grand Master be respectfully requested to direct the said return to be issued by the Grand Secretary." He was not intending to interfere with the prerogative of the Grand Master, but was merely following the example of Grand Chapter. He thought it would be convenient to have, from time to time, a list published with the Quarterly papers of Grand Lodge, of those applications for warrants for new lodges which had been made in the preceding quarter. Recently it had happened that, between the issuing of one year's Calendar and the next, a brother initiated in a new lodge desired to visit another lodge, and he (Bro. Smith) had known more than one instance where there were no means of ascertaining, without reference to the Grand Secretary's office, that such a lodge existed.

Bro. Matthew Cooke seconded the motion.

The Grand Registrar opposed the motion on the ground that it was trenching on the Grand Master's prerogative. As to the plea that a brother initiated in a new lodge was at a disadvantage, there was a sufficient safeguard in the Book of Constitutions, which provided that the brother introducing a visitor should vouch for him. He thought it inexpedient that the information sought for by Bro. Smith's motion should be published in any periodical, and he would advise the Grand Master not to accede to the proposal.

Bro. W. Smith replied, that it was not asked for that it should be printed in a periodical, but on the notice papers of Grand Lodge.

The Grand Master said—I have considered this motion, and it does appear to me to be open to considerable objection that there should be published a list of the applications which have been received. I think that that is asking for information which might be painful to some persons if it should be afforded. It cannot be asked for the purpose of questioning the decision of the Grand Master; for the granting of warrants is within the discretion of the Grand Master, and it will be my duty to maintain it in that position. I think, therefore, that any publication of the applications that have been made would be undesirable. When the Calendar is published the names of the new lodges are known. If any easier method could be devised to make known new lodges granted, I should not object to it. I venture to suggest that Bro. Smith should not press his motion. I should think it undesirable, and shall recommend Grand Lodge, if it is pressed, not to adopt it.

Bro. Smith, having said he merely followed the precedent of Grand Chapter, withdrew his motion.

Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G. Chaplain then moved:—

"That this Grand Lodge, deeply sympathising with the terrible and wide-spread sufferings caused by the famine in Persia, resolves that a sum of £250 be contributed towards the fund now being raised in England to relieve this distress."

He gave the brethren a vivid sketch of the horrors of the Persian famine, and subsequently reduced the amount he asked for to £105, the Grand Treasurer having stated that the Grand Lodge was still in debt to the Lodge of Benevolence for money borrowed to erect the present buildings.

One hundred guineas were therefore voted to the Persian Famine Fund, and Grand Lodge was closed in ample form, and adjourned.

BANQUET TO BROS. BETRAM AND ROBERTS.

Messrs. Bertram and Roberts's contract for supplying the refreshments at the Crystal Palace drawing to a close, the brethren of the Crystal Palace Lodge, No. 742, entertained those gentlemen at a grand banquet in the Crystal Palace, on the 8th inst., in token of the admiration of the manner in which they have met the demands of the public during the seventeen years the refreshment contract had been in their hands. As the lodge banquets have always been entrusted to Messrs. Bertram and Roberts, the brethren had had ample opportunity of judging of the ability of these caterers, and an expression of feeling on this subject coming from such a body will be acknowledged to be some value. In consequence of the universal satisfaction that was felt at the way in which they have supplied the public with refreshments, about 100 brethren assembled at the complimentary banquet to take part in offering them their thanks. A Lodge of Emergency was first held, at which, however, there was no Masonic work done, and at six o'clock the hour appointed for the banquet, the brethren ceased labour—which had been by no means laborious—and adjourned to refreshment in the banquet-room, where Bro. George Weeks, W.M., headed the table, having Bro. Bertram on his right hand and Bro. Roberts on his left. The banquet provided was of the most elegant description, and the tables were adorned with such floral and fruit decorations as could give an additional charm to the viands, which were served under the direction of Bro. Nelson Coates. The brethren who attended were Bro. George Weeks, W.M.; W. H. Cooper, S.W.; Henry Cox, J.W.; S. P. Acton, P.M., Treasurer; Henry T. Thompson, P.M., Secretary; R. Steigerwald, S.D.; Edward M. Morley, J.D.; Thomas Potter, I.G.; William Bertram, D.C.; Wm. Stevens, W.S. Past Masters, Bros. Wm. Watson, J. Richmond Sheen, Thomas Foxall, E. J. Oliver, Seymour Smith, Organist; Bros. W. W. Baxter, John Nash, J. B. Walter, J. W. Lassam, G. Rees, T. G. Hamblen, D. Dore, W. L. Mallett, Wm. George, and other members. The visitors included Bros. Fred. Binckes, W.M. Grand Stewards; G. J. Kain, P.Prov. G.Sec., P.M., 766; Ed. Cox, P.G.S.W., P.M. 657; J. Terry, P.P.G.S.B., W.M. 1366; J. Emmens, P.G.P.; W. F. Smith, P.M. 177; H. Massey, P.M. 619; George Bolton, P.M. 169; S. G. Foxall, P.M. 1305; W. H. Harper, W.M. 766; W. J. Miller, P.M. 766; Wm. Winn, P.M. 657; H. A. Stacey, P.M. 1288; Alfred Avery, P.M. 1314; W. Y. Laing, P.M. 45; W. G. Kent, I.G. 1297; W. Lane, S.D. 28; George Perren, 23 and 173; G. A. Fleming, 173; William Wright, 65; James Edbrooke, 72; Nelson Coates, 72; Thomas Goodfellow, 177; J. A. De Jersey, 64; W. H. Jackson, 766; Alfred Jeffery, 766; J. Allsop, 463; A. Broloch, Saint Andrews, (Scotland) 48; Henry Gabb, 72; Henry Smith, 907; W. W. S. Cumming, 58; J. Miles, 65; E. Archer, 766; T. C. Girdwood, 1314; G. W. Kingstone, 1314; O. H. Colvin, 180; F. Sweeting, 1257; J. Vallentin, and many others.

The Masonic Institutions were represented by Bro. F. Binckes, (Boys' School), Bro. Lane, (Girls' School), and Bro. James Terry, (Benevolent Institution).

At the removal of the cloth grace was said, and the introductory Masonic toasts were given and honoured.

Bro. John Emmens, P.G.P., responded to the toast of "The Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers."

Bro. H. T. Thompson then read the following list of brethren from whom letters of apology for absence had been received:—T. Beard, P.M., 101; J. Sitt, Geo. Imrie, John Hervey, G. Secretary; Magnus Ohren, S.W., 33; W. Farnfield, Secretary Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; and E. H. Patten, Secretary Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

The W.M., proceeding with the programme of toasts, rose and said: Brethren, in rising to propose what I must be allowed to call the toast of the evening, I do so with mingled feelings of pleasure and regret—with feelings of pleasure that I am the medium to convey to our brothers on my immediate right and left, the hearty welcome of the Crystal Palace Lodge to this banquet—with regret that a more able Mason than myself is not in the position I now occupy. Although I need not tell the brethren assembled that I am no orator, I feel that if I had the power of speech of the Attorney-General—(laughter, and a cry of "Three weeks")—you would not be surprised to hear that I could not say ought to to render the toasts, I am about to propose, more acceptable, or add one jot to the enthusiasm with which I am sure it will be received by you. (Hear, hear). It is "The health and future prosperity of our Bro. Bertram, and our Bro. Roberts (Great applause). I am pleased to hear it, I need not remind you that this is the last banquet our kind friends will provide for us. This unfortunate knowledge throws back our memories to the past. How many happy hours have we spent within these walls, and how much has the good cheer so liberally spread by them added to the social feelings amongst us. (Hear, hear.) And, brethren, this may be said by countless thousands of others. The prince and the peasant have all shared in the skill and ability of our Bros. Bertram and Roberts. The Viceroy of Egypt, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Grand Sultan of Turkey, the Emperor and Empress of Brazil, the Grand Duke Vladimir of Russia, the ex-Emperor and Empress of the French, and many other celebrities, have been entertained by them, and with such magnificence that it has scarcely ever been equalled, and has never been excelled by any one. (Hear, hear.) How many a happy wife refers with pride and pleasure to her wedding breakfast provided by our Bros. Bertram and Roberts! and many a noble citizen has declared that no banquet ever equalled that supplied at the Crystal Palace. (Hear, hear.) Our Bros. Bertram and Roberts have accomplished a vast and magnificent work in the gastronomic art; and with such unparalleled skill and resources, well may they have challenged to have supplied the army in the Autumn Manœuvres. (Hear, hear.) And were I bold Dragoon, or a Life Guardsman, both of which I am well suited for, Bros. Bertram and Roberts must do the victualling if am to fight. (Hear, hear.) Our Bros. Bertram and Roberts have acted pre-eminently well in their charitable avocations—(hear, hear.)—they have liberally supported all the Charities connected with Masonry. It is but very lately they have entertained the whole of the girls, and their teachers, and the Committee, in this building, paying every expense; and this I know to be only one of the many acts of beneficence which they have performed. Their liberality has not been confined to Masonry. The bounty our Bro. Bertram has been shown towards very many other deserving Institutions; you, as brethren, know well by the jewel which now adorns his breast. How nobly have our brothers exemplified the Worshipful Master's assertion made at their initiation, that charity was the distinguishing characteristic of a Freemason's heart! Although they are about to remove from their present sphere of action, I am sure they will carry with them the hearty good feelings and wishes of the brethren of the Crystal Palace Lodge—(hear, hear, hear)—and I trust we shall often have their aid and assistance at our lodge meetings. Brethren, I wish you to remember that they were both initiated in the Crystal Palace Lodge; therefore, we claim them as belong to us. This is their parent lodge. We shall be most happy to see them at our meetings and at our banquet table, for their presence will always be, as it always has been, a delight to us. Brethren, I ask you now to drink with me, "The Health of Bros. Bertram and Roberts."

The toast having been drunk most enthusiastically,

Bro. George Perren, as a constant frequenter of the Crystal Palace, who had innumerable opportunities of testing the quality of the creature comforts which Bros. Bertram and Roberts supplied, wished to add his own testimony to the unexceptional way in which they were provided. After this he sang the charming ballad "The Thorn."

Bro. Bertram, who was greeted with a perfect storm of applause when he rose to respond, said, when it had subsided: Worshipful Master, Brother Past Masters, Brother Wardens, and Brethren, I cannot attempt on behalf of myself to follow our W.M. in the speech he has made with regard to myself and my esteemed Bro. Roberts, neither can I follow him with regard to our Bro. Perren. When our W.M. and Bro. Perren had finished their speeches, I felt I had something to say; but after listening to Bro. Perren's song I find I have nothing to say, for when I listened to it, it carried me away and made me forget what I intended to tell you. If therefore I err in my language I trust, you will not think I have erred in my feelings. For your kindness in inviting us here this evening I can only say I sincerely thank you. I have now been connected with the Crystal Palace for 17 years. I feel that it is a long time, as I am now getting grey, for I do not use the lead comb. I was one of the first initiates in this lodge: I think I was the second initiate, as Bro. Watson will remember. I have had the pleasure, and I may say the honour of passing through every degree and every office in the Crystal Palace Lodge, until I became at length its W.M., and after that, Master of the New Concord. With regard to the connection of my Bro. Roberts and myself with the Crystal Palace, we are, I may say, to a certain extent sorry to leave, on account of the refreshment contract going from us; but still, men of business, — for it comes back to that after all—can only remain in a certain place so long as it pays them. If I were to tell you, brethren, that Bertram and Roberts were philanthropic people, who come here for the purpose of catering without getting anything out of it, you would not believe it. Therefore, I say, so long as we could get anything out of the Crystal Palace we stopped—mind you, I will give you the proviso that we have satisfied the public, (hear, hear), that the public have acknowledged that satisfaction. (Hear, hear.) I will go even closer than that to our own establishment,—that the Directors in the last report which they published, said that the proprietors of the Palace and the public had every reason to be satisfied with the way in which Messrs. Bertram and Roberts had carried out their engagements. (Cheers.) Having done that, brethren, we are very much obliged to the public. I am now going to tell you we are obliged to you. I cannot express to you the feelings I have in my heart with regard to the manner the W.M., Bro. Thompson, and Bro. Acton have organised this banquet, and interested so many friends in it. When I see so many kind friends around me I feel more than I can express. All I can say, brethren, is, wherever we may go, whatever the world may think, we have not made a fortune at the Crystal Palace; though we have paid its shareholders £20,000 a year, there is not an adequate amount left out of it for ourselves. The Company are getting the best of it, and still they are going to get the best of it. I wish our successors were going to give £6000 less than we have been paying; they might then retire in a few years. If you think you are going to pay our rent and make a fortune, you are mistaken. I have had 17 years' experience. I has answered our purpose, I will say, (hear, hear), but it does not answer our purpose to pay £6000 a year more for it. Therefore as men of business I say we cannot take it at that price. We say we are very much obliged to you gentlemen, but we must leave it at that price; but I trust wherever we hoist our flag (we are not going out of business) you will rally round us. I am quite sure, I need not say that for this expression of your feeling to night we are much obliged to you. If I were to attempt to speak for the next half hour, I could not say more than I say in the next few words. I wish to leave something for my partner to say. I sincerely thank you from my heart. (Cheers.)

Bro. Roberts: I must first tell you I am in a regular fix. If I had an order this evening to prepare for 80,000 persons to-morrow, I could execute it more easily than I can express to you my sincere thanks for the handsome style in which you have entertained us this evening. We have always felt great pleasure in meeting members of the Crystal Palace Lodge. I have been here fourteen years. Bro. Acton and I were made on the same day. I have not had time to go into office, but I am very glad to-night to find I have passed the chair. (Laughter.) [Bro. Roberts was sitting on the left of the W.M.] I am quite sure, brethren, from what I have heard you all express, you are satisfied with the way we have supplied your banquets. I know we have had many banquets down here through the recommendation of the brethren of the Crystal Palace Lodge; and I am happy to say, that with not one exception, the brethren who have partaken of them have expressed themselves satisfied. I hope, as Bro. Bertram says, you will rally round us, as we are not going out of business, and that it will not be very long before you see us flourishing again. Though this is the last time we shall have the pleasure of supplying the banquet for you, I trust we shall be for many years able to come down and enjoy your society. I thank you all, brethren, for the very kind manner in which you have entertained us this evening. (Cheers.)

Bro. Bertram: It will not be the last time we shall be down with you. The business of the place has often prevented us dining with you when we should have done. Now, however, if we do not dine with you it will be our own fault.

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Visitors."

Bro. Kane in reply, said, he was a shareholder in the Crystal Palace Company, and therefore had a wonderful interest in the successor of Messrs. Bertram and Roberts who was to spend some thousands a-year more than they did. He (Bro. Kane) had seen Messrs. Bertram and Roberts in a variety of capacities, and he esteemed them in all; first as brother Masons; and secondly as purveyors of a most splendid banquet, whenever he had had the pleasure to dine with them. He felt that they would leave a blank not easily to be filled up when they quitted the place. He had the fortune or misfortune, to be an idle man, and went to the Crystal Palace two, three, or four days a week; and he knew he should miss them, for however well their department might be supplied by their successor, he was quite sure it would not be the same thing.

The W.M. proposed "The Masonic Charities."

Bro. F. Binckes replied, and after apologising for the absence of Bros. Farnfield and Patten through ill-health, (who were well represented however by Bros. Terry and Lane), thanked the brethren of the Crystal Palace Lodge for the support they had given to the Masonic Institutions at various times. Those Institutions were deserving of all the support which brethren might feel disposed to give, inasmuch as they respectively provided for the aged and infirm, to the number of about 232, and boarded, clothed, and educated, between two and three hundred of the youth of both sexes. To Messrs. Bertram and Roberts the Boys' and Girls' Schools were much indebted. They had been warm encouragers of those Institutions; they had provided entertainments for them free of all expense; and he doubted not that they would still continue to remember them.

"The Worshipful Master," "The Past Masters," and "The Lodge Officers," having been severally honoured, The "Tyler's Toast" brought the proceedings to a close, and the brethren separated at a late hour, and returned to town.

The evening's entertainment was a great success, and the company expressed themselves highly delighted with the hospitality which was extended to them. The W. M. was most happy and courteous, and won all hearts by the warmth and frankness of his reception. The officers also exerted themselves praiseworthy to render everyone comfortable, and Bro. Thompson, the Secretary, with his customary geniality, afforded whatever information was required. The ease and grace with which everything was conducted convinced the visitors that the Crystal Palace Lodge is no novice at entertaining guests. The quietness and readiness observed by the attendants added greatly to the general comfort.

Intermingled with the toasts were numerous songs, which were charmingly executed by Bros. George Perren and Seymour Smith. Bro. Seymour Smith presided at the pianoforte.

Original Correspondence.

MASONIC BALLS.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I am glad to offer a further reply to your correspondent, W.L.A. 30°.

1st. I certainly cannot affirm what may be the special view of the Prov.G.M. for Somerset, as I have had no communication with that distinguished and most worthy brother; but I think it is clear, as a Masonic law, that when a P.G.M. gives his lodges permission to hold a Masonic Ball it is within his power to stipulate that it shall be carried out as a Craft Ball, pure and simple—this is a different position to that of prohibiting the decorations of members of the high grades.

2nd. The P.G.M. for Somerset, I rejoice to say is doubtless a member of the Supreme Grand Council 33°; but it is well-known that the present head of the high grades is our kindly-hearted and illustrious brother, C. J. Vigne; from him any prohibitions, or other formal edicts must, naturally, emanate.

3rd. W.L.A. 30° has slightly mistaken me here; I said no permission was required for wearing the decorations of the high degrees, or of the Temple, anywhere or at any time, if they were not objected to (or to this effect).

They are masonically illegal in a Craft lodge, because they are objected to and forbidden by the Book of Constitutions. And I would parenthetically remark, as I have done before, that this clause of the Constitutions requires a complete interpretation; especially after the publication of paragraph 4 of the report of the Board of General Purposes, (p.153 of your last issue). Does it mean all Masonic Orders or Degrees not recognised as part of pure "Ancient Masonry?" Or does it include in the prohibition all orders and decorations of a public and non-masonic description?

4th. Probably I am not able to speak of the views of the S.C. 33° with the same weight of authority as your correspondent, but I can safely say that I know of no statute, regulation, or order, by which the use of the decorations of the High Grades is in any way restricted. I am sure that the S.G.C. desires to be as circumspect as possible in making additions to the roll of those grades, and very properly wishes to receive members whose discretion may be trusted; consequently I cannot think it probable that the Council is likely to narrow the basis upon which the constitution of these degrees was established, by enacting a prohibitory regulation of this description. W.L.A. observes "the S.C. of 33° do object" to their decorations being worn in public without dispensation. I am not aware of this. No doubt they would very much object to the use of their decorations at unsuitable times and in the wrong places, but I know of nothing to prevent their being worn in the exercise of a proper masonic discretion; and, as an instance, I may say that, had not the P.G.M. for Somerset restricted his permission respecting the Masonic Ball, I consider no dispensation would have been necessary to enable W.L.A. to wear his black eagle on the occasion. This is my opinion.

Fraternally yours,
LUPUS.

POET MASONS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

Sir,—Your admirable notice of Bro. Sawyer's poems cannot fail to interest many of your readers, and lead them to purchase a volume so full of poetical beauty.

A considerable acquaintance with Masonic Literature leads me to a conclusion somewhat varying from that at which you seem to have arrived. There are many lyrics written for special lodges, of which the general body of the fraternity know little. Here is one worthy of being widely known through the means of your publication. It was written and printed with initials attached, but it is now well-known that its author is Bro. Francis Bennoch, P.M. of Grand Master's Lodge, and V.P. of the Colonial Board.

It has been admirably set to music by Bro. Donald King, and deserves to be more widely-known than it is. The copy I enclose has been in my pocket-book for several years, and is somewhat dilapidated.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,
P.M. OF NO. 1.

OUR SONG.

[Written for the Lodge of St. John Thornhill, Dumfriesshire; and now, having been revised and popularised, is dedicated to the W.M. and Brethren of Grand Master's Lodge, No. 1, by one of themselves.]

What is that I hear?
Gently, faintly knocking?
Some one claims our cheer:
Hark! the echo mocking.
Masons all are kin;
Joyous we're together:
Bring the stranger in—
And greet him like a Brother.
Clink your glasses, clink;
Set their lips a-ringing.
Clink your glasses, clink—
All in chorus singing,
Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
What men may do, we dare, man;
Our guide, our life, our law,
The compass, book, and square, man.

Just, upright, we stand—
All that's false rejecting:
Loyal heart and hand—
All that's good protecting.
Knowledge keeps us free;
Truth defends from danger.
Brethren! pledged are we
To help the needy stranger.
Clink your glasses, clink;
Set their lips a-ringing.
Clink your glasses, clink—
All in chorus singing,
Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
The needy are our care man;
Our guide, our life, our law,
The compass, book, and square, man.

When our work is o'er,
Sweet is rest from labour;
Still there's work in store—
Work to help a neighbour—
Work to heal the smart
Of bitter grief and sorrow;
Cheer a Brother's heart,
And make him glad to-morrow—
Clink your glasses, clink;
Set their lips a-ringing.
Clink your glasses, clink—
All in chorus singing,

Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
To help a friend, prepare, man;
Our guide, our life, our law,
The compass, book, and square, man.

Fill again! and toast,
Joy of every true man,
What we love the most—
Woman—Sister! Woman!
Rosy, ripe, and rare,
Lips with honey laden;
All that's good and fair,
Whether Wife or Maiden.

Clink your glasses, clink;
Set their lips a-ringing.
Clink your glasses, clink—
All in chorus singing,
Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
Our hearts with them we share, man,
In honour, love, and law,
By compass, book, and square, man.

Brothers! when we part,
Still remember duty:
Faithful hand and heart,
True to love and beauty.
On the square we stand—
All that's bright before us—
Joyous! hand in hand—
And heaven smiling o'er us.

Clink your glasses, clink;
Set their lips a-ringing.
Clink your glasses, clink—
All in chorus singing,
Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
Fraternity we swear man;
Our guide, our life, our law,
The compass, book, and square, man.

DIVISION OF THE PROVINCE OF WEST LANCASHIRE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—

In last Saturday's Freemason I find a letter, signed by "A Secretary of a West Lancashire Lodge," upon the above subject. Permit me in reply to say, that any attempt on the part of the West Lancashire Brethren to attain this object will, I am sure, be met by the strong opposition of East Lancashire. For two reasons: first, any movement of this description must include a rearrangement of the boundaries of the two Divisions; and second, that the G.M.'s and P.G.M.'s will not be consenting parties to any such division, but might in all probability be so if steps were taken to divide the County Palatine into three provinces, as by numbers, wealth, and quantity of lodges, it is fairly entitled.

Yours most faithfully,
P.M., P.P.G. OFFICER, E. Lan.
Manchester, 11th March.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR, AND BROTHER,—

In your impression of the 9th inst. appears a letter signed "A Secretary of a West Lancashire Lodge," which states that Lodge 1256 is in East Lancashire. Such is not the case, the lodge is in the Province of West Lancashire. I remain, Dear Sir and Brother, Let me also correct a "A Secretary of a West Lancashire Lodge" by stating that No. 1256, Poulton-le-Fylde, is not in East Lancashire.

Yours Fraternally,
RALPH LANDLESS, W.M.
Fidelity Lodge 1256,
Bull Hotel, Poulton-le-Fylde.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

THE ST. HUGH LODGE (No. 1386), will be constituted and dedicated on Wednesday, 20th, at the Masonic Hall, Grantham St., Lincoln, by R.W. Bro. W. H. Smyth, D.Prov.G. Master.

NEW MASONIC HALL AT LEEDS.—The members of Fidelity Lodge (No. 289), having for some time past been desirous to have a Hall of their own, raised a fund for the purpose of erecting a suitable place in which to hold their meetings, and on Thursday, the 22nd ult., the foundation stone of the intended building was laid. A lodge of emergency was summoned for 4, p.m., and opened in the first degree and adjourned. The brethren then proceeded to the site; after a short prayer, the Treasurer deposited in the cavity prepared in the stone a bottle containing a roll of the members of the lodge, the newspapers of the day, tracings of the intended structure, and some coins of the present reign. The top stone was then lowered into its place, and the usual form gone through. The W. M. then declared the stone duly and truly laid in the name of the Great Architect of the Universe. The proceedings were conducted privately, none being present but the members of the lodge. The architect to whom the work is entrusted is Bro. W. Bakewell, and the builder Mr. T. Whiteley. The style of the building is of the simplest character. In the evening the brethren dined together in commemoration of the occasion, when a very enjoyable time was spent. Bro. Spark, Mus. Doc., favoured the brethren with a selection of music from his new work, the "Freemasons' Liber Musicus."

GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.—The recent recognitions by West Virginia and Alabama are likely to be followed at an early day by other Grand Lodges, so that ere long the Grand Lodge of Quebec will be in fraternal relations with all regular Grand Lodges in the world.

The Grand Lodge of Louisiana has also just extended fraternal recognition to the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

The Grand Orient of the Empire of Brazil, South America, has extended fraternal recognition to the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and has requested an interchange of Grand Representatives.

The Grand Lodge of Quebec has also recently established fraternal communication with the Grand Orient of Belgium.

The Garrison Lodge of the city of Quebec, No. 260, Registry of the Grand Lodge of Canada, has transferred its allegiance to the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

The Grand Lodge of Quebec, at an expense of five hundred dollars, has just had executed a beautifully engraved steel plate for printing on parchment the Grand Lodge Certificates, which are now being distributed to all its members.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy."—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., Liverpool, 1869.—To P. ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The 74th annual festival of this institution was held on Wednesday evening, at the Freemasons' Tavern, when the Right Hon. the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire, took the chair. The interest taken in the Institution by the Craft seemed in no way to have diminished, for the Chairman was supported by a great gathering of the members of Ancient Fraternity, while an assemblage of ladies, not inferior in number to those who have taken part in former demonstrations on behalf of this charity, assisted in the festivities of the evening.

Among the company we noticed, Bros. Augustus Smith, Prov. G.M. of Cornwall; Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M. of Middlesex; Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past G. Chap.; W. E. Gumbleton, Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.D.; T. Fenn, P.G.D.C.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B.; H. Bridges, John Boyd, G.P.; Peter Matthews, F. Ledger (Evo), W. Winn, Edward Cox, Vernon, Algernon Perkins, P.G.D.; E. Snell, P.G.D.; John Hervey, G.S.; Benj. Head, P.G.D.; H. Browse, P.G.D.; Raynham W. Stewart, G.D.; F. A. Philbrick, W.M. 18; S. G. Furrion, Head Master; Richd. Spencer

P.G. Steward; Geo. Myers, C. Watson, P.M. 11; Collard Moutrie, P.M. 11; Benj. Mallam, S. May, W. B. Rogers, S. Rosenthal, H. C. Levander, Charles Coote, Frank Elmore, W. H. Brown, No. 11; James Gearns, No. 11; and Pilling (Stafford.)

At the conclusion, of the banquet grace, "For these and all thy mercies," was beautifully sung, and the toasts of the evening were proposed. In giving the first toast, "The health of Her Majesty the Queen"

The Chairman, who on rising was received with vociferous applause, said—Ladies and brethren, it has often been my lot on public occasions to offer to the company assembled the first toast which is on my list this evening, and on those occasions I always felt great embarrassment, as a humble subject of Her Majesty, in finding sufficient words to express the feelings of loyalty that characterise all classes of her subjects. And if on ordinary occasions I have felt that embarrassment, I assure you, ladies and brethren that it is with very great difficulty that I presume to address you in fervent and hearty—but I fear not in eloquent—words the health of our gracious Sovereign the Queen. We do not at this moment require evidence to show how deeply she reigns in the affections of her people. We do not require any apology from chairmen in their public capacities to speak of her merit, because, thank God, now particularly, every individual in the nation knows how great Her Majesty's merits are. Whether as a Sovereign, or whether as a mother, we revere and adore her. And I should say that we as Masons gloried in the opportunity of joining with the great British public in that Grand Thanksgiving Day, on the recovery of her illustrious son, our brother, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. For my part, I am thankful that I was permitted to see such a sight, not that it was, as it might have been, a glorious pageant, but that it was a glorious gathering of the Crown and the humblest subjects, uniting together to thank the Almighty for the great blessing that have been vouchsafed to the country. The peers might have gone in their robes to St. Paul's, the military might have gone in great parade; but the greatness of the sight, to my mind, was that the humblest could vie with the highest in doing honour to Her Majesty, and thanking the Almighty from their heart. I had an opportunity, which I dare say many of you had, of moving among the immense crowds on that evening to see the illuminations, and it is a remarkable fact I think, and attracted the attention of illustrious foreigners, how the English people, can keep themselves, on a great occasion in perfect order. It was a magnificent sight to see how well they conducted themselves, rich and poor alike, in perfect order. It was as if everything tended to make the human heart beat with joy that he was a British subject. Ladies and brethren, I should do wrong if I were to detain you further, your hearts will supply any deficiency there may be in words coupled with such a toast, but I give you, from the bottom of my heart, "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen."

The toast was drunk enthusiastically, and was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Chairman: Ladies and brethren, the next toast on our list is "The health of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon." (Cheers.) I need not say that, as a Mason, I am proud to offer you the health of his Lordship, and I am proud, as an individual friend of his, that I can add my personal testimony to his great merits. It is one of the great pleasures of English life that those who have occasion to differ on some points, can yet agree on others, and one of the most beautiful things to me in Masonry is, that it avoids all political connections, and that, as in social life, we do not allow our politics to interfere with our friendship, so in Masonry, we make it a golden rule. I am proud to think that we are presided over by a nobleman whom we delight in as a British subject, and who as a senator, and as a public man, always takes his part readily, honourably, and creditably to himself. It would be impertinent for me, as a Mason, to eulogise the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, for you, brethren, know his worth a great deal better than I do. Happy it was for me, the first time I ever attended Grand Lodge, that I had the advantage to hear from the lips of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master the speech he made to us when he proposed to us that we should vote an address of congratulation to Brother, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, on his recovery. Brethren, that language came from the noble Marquis's heart; it came from the heart of a true Englishman; and we were all proud to have our feelings so amply, and so fully represented by the Grand Master on that occasion. Without further preface I give you "The Health of the Most Noble the Marquis of Ripon, our Most Worshipful Grand Master."

The toast was drunk with great warmth, and was succeeded by Mdle. Liebhart giving her favourite song "Little bird, so sweetly singing."

The Chairman: Ladies and Brethren, if I felt a difficulty in offering you the toast of the health of Her Majesty, I am afraid I am labouring under the same difficulty in offering you the toast of "The Health of Brother, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the Earl of Zetland, Past Grand Masters of England." The difficulty rests with me because it is almost impossible to find words to express the feelings of the nation, and of Masons in particular, on the recovery of H.R.H. from his recent illness. It is a subject which, I may almost venture to say for a moment, is so sacred that it is very difficult to touch upon, because it affects the nearest points of our hearts; and if you will kindly turn with me in your recollection and think of that painful day when the officer where the telegrams were exhibited were watched with such intense anxiety that you could almost hear the people's hearts beat in the crowd, when you felt that the pulse of the nation, as it were, throbbed in one bosom collectively, hoping against hope, praying most fervently that the Almighty should restore our brother to us—I say when one thinks of that moment and thinks of this moment, how joyous the present moment is, how sad that moment was, how grateful brethren, we ought to be that that precious life has been preserved to us, and may I say, as Masons, that such a blessing has been vouchsafed to us. May it induce us to remember our duties as Masons, may we thank the Almighty for that blessing which has been vouchsafed to us; may it induce us to exert ourselves as Masons according to our ability. I have also to couple with this toast "The Health of the Past Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland," although I was not under him except as a free and entered apprentice, yet I believe that that nobleman worthily filled the high office of Grand Master with great credit to himself and with profit to Masonry; and I have reason to believe that his Lordship took a special interest in the Institution whose claims we are met to day to advocate, and whose anniversary we celebrate. I am told, and I believe it, that from the character Lord Zetland bears, though he is not able to go through the fatigues of the office of Grand Master, his heart is as strong in Masonry as ever and that he takes great interest in all Masonic gatherings, and is always glad to hear of the prosperity of this school. (Cheers.)

This toast was also enthusiastically received.

The Chairman—Ladies and Brethren, the next toast on our list is one that I consider a very important one; it is a collective one and a comprehensive one. First of all it is "The health of the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W.D.G.M., the Provincial Grand Masters, and Present and Past Grand Officers." Every one who has held office in Masonry knows what a very great advantage it is to have a good deputy; and I am sure the Most Worshipful Grand Master would agree with me, if he heard me, in saying that he is worthily represented in his absence by the the Right Worshipful Brother the Earl of Carnarvon. He also has his heart in Masonry. To him and to the noble Marquis I am officially indebted, for it was at their instance I hold the position I do in my own province as Provincial Grand Master. Therefore I give you this toast with peculiarly warm feelings. I have also an additional pleasure in offering this toast to your notice, because I am about to couple with it, to return thanks, the name of Bro. Augustus Smith, Prov. G.M. of Cornwall (Applause.) I have not met Bro. Smith for some time, in fact, I think that the last time I had the pleasure of seeing him was in the arena of politics. There we knew each other, and to-day I was glad to find that Bro. Smith came here to support this charity. I was glad also to find, which I did not know before, that he was a Mason. As one goes through life, one turns round a corner and finds a pleasant recollection of former days; and having in the House of Commons, in former times frequently met him, it was most agreeable to me to see him who has sat opposite to me for years in politics, in cordial co-operation with me in the work of charity. It is a great pleasure to me that we are associated together in such a work, and I trust we always shall be. There are brethren here whom it would be impertinent in me to compare myself with; they are in high favour with you, and I hope that I, who am but a mushroom Mason, may emulate their conduct in fulfilling my duties in that high position which I am honoured by being placed in, over the Province of Staffordshire. I have used the language of eulogy towards Her Majesty and the Prince of Wales, and I have spoken as I felt regard to Bro. Smith. I did not think it would be becoming in me, as a Mason, to eulogise brethren who are unknown to me; but for his kind support on the present occasion I am very grateful, and hope ere long to continue an acquaintance which has begun so agreeably with me this evening.

The toast having been honoured.

Bro. Augustus Smith, Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall said:—Right Worshipful Brother and Brethren all, I have been very unexpectedly and unworthily called upon to return thanks for the honour you have done the Deputy Grand Master of England. I think there are other brethren, looking to the number I have to represent, who stand on my right and left, who are far more fitted to return the compliment that you have paid to us. This I can say for myself, as one of the Provincial Grand Masters of England that nothing assists us so much as considering that we have the Marquis of Ripon as our Grand Master, and such a Deputy as his representative, the Earl of Carnarvon. We may consider ourselves, as it were, as planets revolving round that sun, and that moon in the Masonic world; and, as reflecting their light, it is our endeavour, in our several provinces, to do our duty as far as we can. I congratulate you, Worshipful Brother, on presiding this evening on behalf of this flourishing Institution. It is one in which I have myself taken great interest, as one who wishes well to education. The question of education is now ripe throughout the land, and it is a proud consideration that more than seventy years ago, when that question was not so popular as it is now, Masons set such an example as the foundation of this Institution. (Hear, hear.) Of this I am convinced, that the difficulties that attend that great question, practically, to work it through the kingdom, the more it is conducted upon those general Masonic principles the more sure are we to secure its prosperity. Returning you, on behalf of my worthy colleagues, and of the noble Lord, whose health you have drunk, our thanks, I beg to assure you we feel highly honoured by your notice. (Cheers.)

Bro. Frank Elmore here sang "The death of Nelson," in splendid style, and was loudly applauded.

Bro. Vernon, Past Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire, then rose and said:—Ladies and brethren, I have not the slightest doubt there are many brethren present who would wish to have the honour of proposing the toast I have the pleasure to place before you. I, so far, am sorry that it has not been put into more efficient hands; but be assured there is no man in this assembly, no brother more anxious to do it credit than I am myself (hear, hear), for personal and provincials reasons, which I shall mention hereafter. First, I think it is my duty to bring before you, "The health of our Right Hon. and Right Worshipful Brother who presides on the present occasion, (hear, hear.) Our brother calls himself a mushroom Mason. Of a goodly growth indeed! (hear, hear), for from the first he had taken great interest in everything which could promote, advance and benefit Freemasonry; and I think on the present occasion, in supporting as he does one of our noble and excellent Masonic charities, he shows what he means, (hear, hear). I am proud to see him at the the head of this meeting. We must tender him our thanks, coming as he does from a considerable distance, at great personal inconvenience, I know, to attend this meeting. He has taken up the right line, brethren, and be assured he will stick to it. I have not the slightest doubt that his presence has very much influenced the large and important assemblage which we have this evening, and I am very certain that when our Bro. Binckes makes up his accounts at the end of this day's work, he will find that he has a great deal to the good. As I have said, I am quite certain his heart was perfect in all minute points as well as in the great points of Freemasonry, and that he will always do what he can to advance the interests of the Order. (Hear, hear.) Now as to the personal points which I mentioned. I think the reason why the honour was conferred on me of proposing the health of our Right Worshipful Brother in the Chair, was that I had the honour of installing him as Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire, a province which, before him, I ruled over for some years, and I trust without any ill effect; but I venture to promise that the Right Worshipful the Grand Master for Staffordshire will have indeed a most favourable and excellent time of it. He has started well, as he said himself. He owns he was not very far up in the active work of Freemasonry; he took to it immediately with a will and energy which could only be surpassed in his efficiency. He has shown himself in every way anxious to promote the interests of the Craft, and he has begun his rule in that charming manner not only, you know all, brethren, that it must be with firmness and command, but with that suavity and good humour and sweetness which are inherent in him; he cannot help it. He has won the hearts of all. He has now before him a most prosperous reign; and without extending my observations further, I am sure you will understand what I have said with perhaps very little eloquence, but from my heart in English. I beg you will rise and drink with hearty cheers "The health of our Right Worshipful and Hon. President on the present occasion," not only wishing him a happy career in Masonry—for, believe me, the longer his career is, the more fortunate it will be for Freemasonry, from his own good heart—but I think I may without varying very much from the rules of our meeting, I may say "All health and happiness to him and his." (Cheers.)

[The report will be concluded in our next].

THE SRI-PADA.—Perusal of the following paragraph in Sir James E. Tennent's work on Ceylon produced Masonic ideas, and I thought of your column of "notes." "At the present day, the Buddhists are the guardians of the Sri-pada, but around the object of common adoration the devotees of all races, not in furious contention, like the Latins and Greeks at the Holy Sepulchre, in Jerusalem, but in pious appreciation of the one solitary object on which they can unite in peaceful worship." I may add that the "Sri-pada is the sacred foot-mark of Buddha, or, according to Mahometan tradition, the foot-mark of the first man, on the summit of Adam's Peak, in Ceylon, 7420 feet above sea level.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

EUPHRATES LODGE (No. 212).—The regular meeting of this flourishing lodge took place on Wednesday, 28th ult., at the Masons' Hall Tavern, Basinghall-street, and was of more than usual interest from the fact that the W.M., Bro Wm. Field, worked, for the first time since his installation in January last, the various ceremonies. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bros. Malet, Bazeley, and Gordon were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason, and Bros. Pfahl, Mendelsohn, Bromley, and Blackett were passed to the second degree. The ballot was taken for Mr. W. Howe, and proved unanimous in his favour. Mr. Howe being present, was initiated, as were also Messrs Lovelock and Seal. The W.M. conducted all the business of the evening in a most able and lucid manner, to the great edification of the large number of brethren and visitors present. Bro. J. C. Frank, the Immediate Past Master, was invested with the jewel of a P.M. of the Euphrates Lodge, and thanked the brethren in appropriate terms for this mark of their favour. The lodge was closed in due form, and refreshment followed labour.

Amor and Hodges were raised to the sublime degree of M.M. Messrs. James Romberg Poulter, William Cox, and Henry Croft, all professors of music, were proposed for initiation. The work (as usual in this lodge) was admirably performed by the W.M. and his officers. The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer.

The R. W. Prov. G.M., after the lodge had been opened, requested the Prov. Grand Secretary to read a letter he had received that morning from the Right Worshipful Brother Sir Hedworth Williamson, Bart. M.P., Deputy Prov. Grand Master.

The Prov. Grand Secretary also announced that he had received a letter of excuse from Bro. Joseph Dodds, M.P., the Prov. Grand Senior Warden, who was detained in London by his Parliamentary duties.

The R. W. Provincial Grand Master in eloquent terms proposed the address to Her Majesty, which was seconded by Bro. Crookes, Prov. G. Secretary.

Bro. William Stoker, P. Prov. S.G.W., acting D. Prov. G.M., briefly seconded the motion, which was carried by acclamation.

Bro. the Rev. J. Cundill, P.G.T., moved the adoption of an address to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, which was briefly seconded by Bro. John Poots, F.P. P. Prov. G.J.D., and carried by acclamation.

strength, and that he may long be spared to be an honour and ornament to our Order, and a blessing to the nation.

"We also entreat your Majesty graciously to accept the assurance of our sincere and profound devotion to your Royal Person and August Family, and of our earnest prayers that your benignant reign may be prolonged over a loyal, prosperous, and contented people.

"Freemasons' Hall, Manchester, 29th February, 1872."

A code of Bye laws for the government of the province were considered and adopted, and the business being then concluded, the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed in due form.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1061).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening the 4th March, at the Masonic Rooms, Athenaeum. There were present the W.M., Bro. Wilson Barker; Bro. Dr. Moore, G.S.B. as I.P.M.; Bros. W. J. Sly, S.W.; E. A. Sall, L.L.D., J.W.; Jas. Taylor, S.D.; James Bolton, J.D.; Edward Airey, J.W. 281, as I.G.; R. Taylor, Tyler, W. Hall, P.M.; J. Z. Bradshaw. After the lodge had been opened and usual business transacted, the W.M. reported that he had, with the Secretary, duly forwarded an address of congratulation to the Queen and Prince of Wales on the convalescence of our Royal brother. Certain alterations in the bye-laws were resolved upon, and Bro. Moore gave the lecture upon the tracing-board of the second degree. There being no other business for consideration, at the direction of the W.M., the lodge was resolved into a lodge of instruction, under the preceptorship of Bro. METROPOLITAN.

Rose of Denmark Chapter (No. 975).—This Chapter held its installation meeting on Saturday, 2nd inst., at the Star and Garter, Kew. The accounts having been audited, the Chapter was opened punctually at four. The minutes of the last convocation having been confirmed, and the Audit Report read, the Three Principals were installed in an admirable manner by Comps. Terry and Pendlebury, both P.Z.'s of this Chapter, who divided the honour of performing these beautiful ceremonies. The following is the list of officers for the ensuing year. Comp. Richard Tanner, Z.; Thomas Price, H.; William Tinkler, J. Wilton Dodd, Scribe, E.; A. H. Longhurst, S.N.; J. B. Poole, P. Soj.; Charles Braid, 1st Assist. Soj.; B. Shepherd, 2nd Assist. Soj.; H. G. Buss, P.Z., Treas.; Gilbert, Janitor. One proposition was received for exaltation at the next meeting. The sum of £5 5s. was voted to Comp. Powell, the retiring M.E.Z., to place on his list for the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, in May next. The companions then adjourned, and partook of one of Comp. Banks' best dinners; after enjoying which, and paying due honor to the usual loyal Masonic toasts, they were warned that trains do not wait for masons, more than other of Her Majesty's subjects, and they brought their meeting to a termination. We must not omit to mention that the outgoing Z., Comp. Powell, was presented with a P.Z. jewel, and we hope that he may live many years to wear it. Amongst the companions present we noticed Comp. J. Newton, E. Collins, G. Everett, Geo. Banks, Jesse Owens, Dr. J. E. Carpenter, Lieut. A. S. Dunbar, Charles Roberts, and T. H. P. Hartley. Visitor Comp. Ferguson, W.M. of the Domestic Lodge, 177, Assist. Soj. Victoria Chapter, 1056, he being the only one present, was welcomed right heartily.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude (No. 279).—The regular bi-monthly convocation was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, the 1st inst. Present:—Comps. W. Kelly, P.G. Supt.; G. Hodges, Z.; G. Toller, jun., H.; W. Weare, P.Z. as J.; C. Stretton, S.E.; S. S. Partridge, S.N.; Dr. Haycroft, F. Baines, W. Sculthorpe, R. A. Barber, T. White, and others. The Chapter having been opened and the minutes of the previous convocation confirmed, the election of Officers for the ensuing year took place and resulted as follows:—Comps. G. Toller, jun., Z.; C. Stretton, H.; E. J. Crow, J.; S. S. Partridge, S.E.; W. Sculthorpe, S.N.; Dr. Haycroft, P. Soj. The Treasurer, Comp. Kelly, was re-elected, with thanks for his past services. Comp. Rev. G. J. Smith, J., sent a letter resigning his membership owing to inability to attend the meetings. There were six candidates on the summons for exaltation, but from various causes none of them were in attendance. The P.G. Supt. announced his intention of calling a meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter, which has now been in abeyance for some years, and it was arranged that the meeting should be held in April at the installation meeting of this Chapter, and that a Chapter of Emergency should be previously called for the purpose of exalting those candidates who were already proposed. The Chapter was then closed in solemn form. From the Treasurer's accounts, which had just been audited, it appears that the Chapter stands well financially, having a balance in hand of upwards of £40, there being at present more than 70 subscribing members.

CARLISLE.—Cumberland Lodge (No. 60). The regular quarterly meeting of the above lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Carlisle, on Thursday the 22nd inst. The chair of Adoniram was occupied by Bro. James Porter, W.M., supported by Bros. G. G. Hayward, P.M.; J. A. Wheatley, M.O.; R. Pratchitt, S.W.; Wm. Court, J.W.; T. Blacklock, S.O.; Fred. Hayward, P.M., J.O.; and others. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the W.M. said it was his pleasing duty to nominate his successor in the chair, and he had great pleasure in proposing Bro. Edward Busher, P.S.W., P.G.S.B. of England, and Prov.G.Sec., for that office. The motion having been seconded, the ballot was taken, and proved unanimous in his favour. Bro. Fred. Hayward, P.M., was again unanimously elected Treasurer. The brethren next voted the sum of two guineas towards the testimonial to be given to the M.W.G.M., Bro. Portal, on his retirement in May next. The names of eight distinguished Craft Masons having been proposed for advancement, including the D.Prov.G.M., Prov.G.S.W., P.Prov.G.C., at the next meeting in May, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer, according to antient custom, at 9 p.m.

GIBRALTAR.

MARK LODGE (No. 43.)—A numerous meeting of the supporters of this lodge assembled at the Masonic Hall, Gibraltar, on the evening of the 2nd inst. The business was first to advance to the honourable degree, Bros. Borlace, Michie, and Bro. Chevalier Marinucci. This was done in an effective manner by the W.M. On the completion of the ceremony, the W.M. rose and stated that it was a cause of considerable regret that a serious illness prevented the attendance that evening of Bro. W. Weir, one of the oldest and most respected Freemasons in the Rock of Gibraltar. There existed hardly one lodge, or Masonic Institution in Gibraltar, which had not at one time or other reaped the benefit of Bro. Weir's ever open purse and generous hand, and this lodge in particular, had good reason to appreciate his warm-hearted character. In recognition of Bro. Weir's truly fraternal conduct and warm support of Masonry generally, the Lodge had voted him a testimonial; this had taken the form of a handsome silver goblet, with an appropriate inscription, and which, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Weir, would now be presented by proxy to Bro. Henry, a worthy representative of a most worthy uncle. Bro. Henry having been marshalled to the pedestal by the Deacons, received the goblet, and returned thanks for Bro. Weir in a few very feeling and appropriate remarks. The cash accounts of the lodge were then read and placed before the lodge, and we noticed, with great satisfaction, that the financial condition of the lodge shows a very marked improvement on last year, and the lodge may be most heartily congratulated on the way in which its resources have been husbanded and applied during the last twelve months. Immediately this portion of the business of the evening was concluded, the W.M. announced that the election of the W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler for the coming year would now take place. After the voting papers had been collected and examined, it was found that the present W.M., Bro. Balfour Cockburn had been unanimously re-elected, and the present Treasurer, Bro. Trenerry, had secured a very overwhelming majority. Bro. Balfour Cockburn thanked the Brethren for the high compliment they had paid him in re-electing him, and trusted that the ensuing year would prove as happy and as successful as the last. In conclusion he spoke in high terms of the assistance and support he had ever received from all the officers of the lodge, and the harmonious way in which all had worked together. The lodge was then closed in due form.

NEWPORT.—GWENT ENCAMPMENT.

On Friday, the 10th ult., there was held a Grand Encampment the Royal, Exalted, Religious, and Military Order of Masonic Knights Templar, Hospitaliers of St. John of Jerusalem, Palestine, Rhodes, and Malta, in England and Wales, and the Colonial Dependencies of the British Crown, under the command of Sir Knight William Stuart, Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master.

The following Sir Knights were present:—Major Shadwell Clerke, V.E.C., West Indies; Col. Charles Lyne, E.C.; H. M. Kennard, First Capt.; Henry Hellyer, Second Capt.; Samuel Fox, Prelate; W. Pickford, Recorder and Treas.; S. G. Homfray, Expert; Williams Watkins, Almoner; Capt. J. A. Pearson, Capt. of Lines; L. A. Homfray and W. H. W. Homfray, Stand Bearers; George Fothergill, Organist; D. Williams and W. Randall, Heralds; W. Williams and W. Attal; A.D.C.'s; H. Fletcher, Equery, D. Williams, W. H. Tucker, H. Scott, R. S. Roper, H. J. Gratte, R. J. Chambers, Charles Homfray, Charles Ingram and H. J. Groves.

The principal business consisted in the installation of the following brethren, viz., John Griffiths, Alfred Taylor, H. T. Davies and James Cheese. The lodge was decorated in the peculiar style of the Order, presenting a scene of great beauty. The proceedings, under the direction of the V.E.C. Clerke, ably assisted by his officers, were very imposing.

The Encampment having been closed in due form, a Grand Priory of the Knights of St. John of Malta was opened. Brother Colonel Lyne appointed First Grand Prior, and the following Knights were installed as Knights of Rhodes, Cyprus, and Malta: S. G. Homfray, L. A.

Homfray, C. Homfray, W. H. Wickey Homfray, R. S. Roper, A. Taylor, H. J. Groves, H. Fletcher, H. T. Davies, Rev. S. Fox, Tucker, Griffiths, &c., &c.

The Sir Knights and other brethren, the same evening, dined together at the King's Head Hotel. The V.E.C., Lieut.-Col. Lyne, presided. The most interesting portion of the proceedings at the banquet was a presentation made to Sir Knight Major Shadwell Clerke, of an embroidered collar, with the gold Teuton Cross of the 32°. The inscription on the jewel was as follows:—"Presented to Brother Major S. H. Clerke, Prov. Grand Com. of Knight Templars, P.M., and P.G.S.W., Devon, by his brethren, for the great assistance rendered by him in forming the Ivor Hael Rose Croix Chapter, and Gwent Encampment, at Newport, Monmouthshire, in November, 1871."

The Presiding Sir Knight made the presentation in very suitable terms, acknowledging with high compliment the valuable services rendered by Bro. Major Shadwell Clerke in the Knight Templar and Rose Croix degrees. He begged his acceptance of the collar and jewel as a token of their esteem, and a sincere expression of their gratitude. He spoke not only as a Templar and a member of the Rose Croix, but as the Prov.G.M. of the Province.

The worthy Sir Knight was invested with the collar and jewel amidst the acclamation of his Masonic confreeres.

Sir Knight Major Clerke returned thanks. He felt at a loss to express his acknowledgments for their really magnificent presentation,—a presentation which he prized, not so much for its intrinsic value as a handsome Masonic ornament, as for the good feeling and great kindness which it evinced, and which would be present to his mind—ever impressed upon his heart. (hear, hear.) As long as he lived he would cherish a pleasing recollection of his sojourn at Newport, for although it was scarcely a year ago when his regiment came here, utter strangers as they were to the place, they had met with genuine hospitality, the most cordial and kindly greeting, and, he would add, on his own behalf especially, that disinterested and general friendship which was characteristic of a grand and glorious order. (Applause.) An enthusiastic Mason himself, he felt it an honour to give his humble services for its advance at Newport, and their approval was amply compensation for anything that he could possibly have rendered.

Sir Knight L. A. Homfray gave the health of "Sir Knight Colonel Lyne, P.G.M. of the Province," with an emphatic application of the axiom, "The right man in the right place," the first Eminent Commander of the Gwent Encampment of Knights Templar.

The V.E.C. returned thanks, and referred to his reminiscences of Masonry at Malta, where Bro. Major Clarke, he knew, had received the order of Knighthood. He concluded an interesting speech by giving the health of Sir Knight Scott, as a visitor from Bristol, who returned thanks.

By Sir Knight L. A. Homfray, "The Officers," coupled with the health of Sir Knight H. Martyn Kennard.

Sir Kt. Kennard appropriately returned thanks. By Sir Knight Major S. Clerke, "The health of Samuel George Homfray, first M.W. S. of the Ivor Hael Chapter Rose Croix.

The toast was duly acknowledged by the M.W.S., and others were given and responded to; music added its charms to the harmony which prevailed, Sir Knight H. J. Groves presiding at the pianoforte.

Price, in his usual careful manner. Immediately after, the election commenced, which resulted in the unanimous selection of Illustrious Bro. Balfour Cockburn for the post of Most Wise Sovereign. The ceremony of installation was at once commenced, and given in first rate style by the retiring M.W.S. The M.W.S. nominated the following as his officers, Illustrious Bro. Dantez, Prelate; Ill. LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave (No. 44).—A regular meeting was held on the 23rd February, Present the Ill. Sir Knight W. Kelly, Intendt. Gen. for Leicestershire and Rutland; the V. Em. Sir Kt. G. Toller, junr., K.G.C., as V.E.; the V. Em. Sir Kt. the Rev. Hunt, S. Shuttlewood, S. Jacob, and others. The Conclave having been opened, the first business was to confer the Grade of Viceroy and Sovereign, on Sir Knight Rt. Hon. the Earl Ferrers, who had been appointed a member of the Grand Senate, with the rank of Grand Herald. Accordingly a College of Viceroys, and afterwards a Senate, of Sovereigns, was opened and those grades duly conferred, the former ceremony being performed by Sir Kt. Toller as M.P.S., Sir Kt. Kelly as V.E., and Sir Kt. Haycroft as H.P.; and the latter by Sir Kt. Kelly as M.P.S., assisted by Sir Kt. Toller as V.E. The minutes of the last regular meeting of the Conclave having been read and approved, and the ballot taken for a candidate, Bro. S. Jacob, of Lodge Fidelity, No. 445, Towcester, was duly installed as a Knight Companion of the order, by the M.P.S., assisted by Sir Kt. Toller, who gave the traditional history, and Sir Kt. Haycroft, who delivered the charge. The ballot was then taken for the Sovereign, Viceroy, and Treasurer for the ensuing year, which resulted in the unanimous election of Sir Knt. Toller, as M.P.S., Sir Knt. Haycroft, as V.E., and Sir Knt. Sculthorpe as Treasurer, and those Sir Knights severally expressed their thanks for the honour conferred on them. A resolution altering the times of meeting, and increasing the annual subscription, having been passed, and the other business on the summons transacted, the Conclave was closed and the Sir Knights adjourned to the refectory.

EAST LOTHIAN.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

On Monday, the 12th ult., Provincial Grand Master Hope, of Luffness, held his first Provincial Grand Lodge for the district within the lodge-room of the St. John's Kilwinning (No. 75), Haddington. The occasion was marked by unusual masonic form and ceremonial, deputations from all the lodges in the district attending, and the business proceedings of the day being followed by a banquet, given by the brethren to the Provincial Grand Master, by way of welcoming him on entering upon his high and important duties, and also as a return for his munificent hospitality on the occasion of his installation to office in May last.

The Provincial Grand Lodge met at one o'clock, and was opened in ample form by the Grand Master. The brethren were in full masonic costume, and as a large number present were Masons of high rank in their respective lodges, and in full regalia, the effect of the gathering in the elegantly fitted up lodge-room of the St. John's Kilwinning was exceedingly brilliant and picturesque.

The lodges represented on the occasion were, the St. John's Kilwinning, Haddington; Dunbar Castle, Dunbar; St. Baldred's, North Berwick; St. Abb's, Eyemouth; Journeyman, No. 8, Edinburgh; Canongate and Leith, No. 5; and St. Clair, No. 349, Edinburgh.

The Grand Master was supported in the duties of the day by the following office-bearers:—Bros. Rev. J. H. Tait, Prov. G. Chap.; H. M. Davidson, Prov. G. Sec.; Rev. T. N. Wannop, Prov. Dep. G.M.; John Richardson, Acting Sub. Prov. G.M.; John Ferme, Acting Prov. G. Treas.; Gibson, Prov. G.S.W.; Knox, Prov. J.G.W.; Anderson, Prov. G.S.D.; M'Gregor, Prov. G.J.D.; Adam Burgess, Prov. G.I.G.; Mason, Robertson, Wright, and Craig, Prov. G. Stewards.

The lodge having been duly constituted.

The Prov. Grand Secretary read the Provincial Grand Master's commission from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, investing him with full Masonic jurisdiction over the district lodges of East Lothian—including St. John's Kilwinning, St. Baldred's, Dunbar Castle, and St. Abb's—and conferring upon him all the privileges and powers appertaining to the high office.

The Provincial Grand Master then nominated his full complement of office-bearers—the installation of the new appointments being postponed until the next meeting of the lodge.

By command of the R.W. the Prov. G.M., the Secretary read a communication from Grand Master the Earl of Rosslyn, directing attention to a scheme recently brought before the Grand Lodge of Scotland, with the view of liquidating the Grand Lodge debt, of placing the Central Benevolent Fund upon a more satisfactory footing, and of establishing a fund for assisting Provincial Lodges in acquiring lodge halls. It was stated that the debt, incurred by the building of the Metropolitan Masonic Hall, and still remaining on Grand Lodge, greatly hampered that body in its working out the benevolent and philanthropic schemes connected with the Craft in Scotland, and prevented it taking that place among the national benevolent institutions which the principles of the order rendered necessary and desirable. It was the desire of the Grand Master that a general scheme of Scottish Masonic benevolence should be inaugurated in connection with the Grand Lodge; and with this view it was proposed to establish a fund, by each member of the Craft subscribing a sum of 2s. per annum towards the Grand Lodge exchequer, which would, it was estimated, soon clear off the debt, and enable the Grand Lodge, not only to promote benevolent objects in connection with the whole Craft, but assist Provincial lodges to acquire halls of their own, in place of meeting in hotels and taverns, the practice of which was much regretted by the Grand Master.

The R.W. the Prov. G. Master addressed the lodge at some length with reference to the above communication, and as to his own wishes in connection with the working of the district over which he had been honoured to preside. Whatever might be thought of the details, he was sure every brother in the province would heartily concur in the general views enunciated by the Grand Master. The debt on the Grand Lodge was a serious obstacle to the proper development of Freemasonry in its benevolent aspect; and he was sure every one would join in the effort to take it out of the way. He thoroughly sympathised with the Grand Master's views as to the position of benevolent schemes in connection with the Craft; and he hoped that the brethren within the Province would not only approve of and support the proposed Grand Lodge scheme for that purpose, but likewise enable him to foster a similar movement within his own province. He stated his wish to establish a district fund to be devoted entirely to benevolent schemes—such as the assistance of distressed brethren, and of widows and orphans of Masons, for educational, or other kindred purposes. The distribution of this fund should be entirely confined to the province; and be managed by a committee consisting of the Masters of the different lodges in the district, together with one private member from each lodge, and presided over by the Provincial Grand Master himself. For the purpose of carrying out both the Metropolitan and the Provincial schemes thus indicated, the R.W. Grand Master suggested that each member should subscribe 1s. quarterly, half of which should be devoted to the Grand Lodge scheme, and the other half retained for that connected with the province. He intimated his own intention of inaugurating the metropolitan fund by an annual subscription of £5; and at the same time to begin the district fund by a donation of £25, and an annual subscription of £25. (Applause.) He asked the cordial co-operation of all the office-bearers and brethren within his province in his future labours; and hoped with their assistance to render Masonry in the district fully worthy of its ancient and honourable history, its benevolent and lofty principles, and the liberal and generous aspirations of the times in which we live.

Several brethren warmly supported the Grand Master's proposal, and dwelt on the excellent facilities which the organisation possessed of furthering benevolent schemes by the establishment of such a fund as he had initiated. The central committee was appointed in accordance with his proposal, and its first meeting appointed to be held at Dunbar on the 4th of March.

The next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge was then fixed to be held at Eyemouth on the 8th of April; and the lodge was closed in regular form by command of the Prov. Grand Master.

GLASGOW.

THISTLE AND ROSE LODGE (No. 3).—At the usual meeting on Tuesday, 4th inst., the R.W.M. Bro. G. McDonald, presiding, there were three brethren to be passed the 2nd degree. At the request of the W.M., Bro. Patterson, P.M., performed the ceremony. There were a large number of visitors present, as the lodge is well-known for the excellence of its work, and Bro. Patterson upheld the credit of his Mother Lodge.

GLASGOW.—The Caledonian Chapter of Unity (No. 73).—An emergency meeting was held on the 20th ult., in order to exalt Bros. T. Tweed, of Mother Kilwinning, No. 6, and J. Stuart of No. 73. The Chapter was opened by Comps. Gilchrist, M.E.Z.; G. McDonald, H.; G. W. Wheeler, J.; Jas. Balfour, P.P.Z. Among the visitors were J. Hempson, Z. 69; J. Johnson, H. 69; and R. Bell, C.K.T. The Degree of Most Excellent Master was given previous to that of the Arch, both being impressively rendered by Comp. Gilchrist.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

GLASGOW.—The Girvan Encampment (No. 32).—This Encampment met on the 22nd ult., at their hall in Strathers-street, the M.N.C. Sir Knt. R. Bell, presiding, assisted by G. W. Wheeler, as C.G.; M. Clanachan, C.C.; T. Chatfield, S.C.; W. Philips, acting as J.C.; and T. O. Park, D.C. The Encampment having been opened in due form, the following four Companions were properly introduced and regularly created Sir Knights of the Temple, viz.: J. Tweed, of Chapter 73; J. Dunbar, 78; A. Spence, 87; and Wm. Dubbie, of Chapter 111. The impressive ceremonies of the Order were most effectually rendered by the M.N.C., and Sir Knights Wheeler and Reed, J. C. Stuart officiated as Prelate first time on this occasion. At the close of the ceremonies the assembled Sir Knights partook of a slight refreshment.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND AND REFORM (p. 147.)

Bro. W. J. Hughan deserves the thanks of all Freemasons, and especially Scottish Freemasons, for his able article on Reforms needed in the Scottish jurisdiction; but need for reform is even greater than he seems to be aware of. Many lodges in Scotland confer the three degrees (in one night) for the sum of £1 9s., and the Mark degree for 1s. 3½d. It thus appears that the practice in Scotland is degrading, and prejudicial to the interests of Freemasonry. A man becomes a freemason in Scotland for twenty-nine shillings, and has no further payment to make all his life.—AN OLD SCOTTISH FREEMASON.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. W. C. OKE,
P.M., 131, TRURO.

A meeting of the members of the Lodge of Fortitude, Truro, was held on Thursday evening, the 29th ult. for the purpose of presenting a handsome Past Master's jewel, which was supplied by Bro. T. L. Dorrington, P.M. 131, from the extensive manufactory of Bro. George Kenning, London.

Bro. A. W. May, W.M., was in the chair, and there were also present, Bros. W. J. Hughan, P.M., P. Prov. Grand Secretary, (Treasurer); Wm. Middleton, S.W. 131, (Secretary); Thomas Solomon, J.P., P.M. 331, P. Prov. S.G.W.; William Lake, P.M., P. Prov. G. Steward; and several of the subscribers.

Bro. Sir F. W. Williams, Bart., M.P., P. Prov. G.M., was unavoidably absent. The Chairman made a few observations respecting the Masonic zeal and ability of Bro. W. C. Oke, P.M., who was an old, but most active member of the lodge, and was, he regretted to say, about to leave the town. No one had made himself more generally useful, and he was sure that would be felt by all the members.

Bro. Oke replied as well as his feelings would allow him, and several of the subscribers subsequently bore testimony to the recipient of the jewel being in every sense deserving of the high honour paid him. The inscription on the jewel (in gold, and the 47th Problem of Euclid being in relief on blue enamel) was as follows:—

“Presented to Bro. W. C. Oke, P.M., by the members of the Fortitude Lodge, No. 131, on his leaving Truro.”

Bro. Lake, P.M., kindly offered to have the list of subscribers engrossed on vellum, which was accepted by the members with acclamation.

MARK MASONRY IN CUMBERLAND.—We are glad to hear that Mark Masonry is making progress in Cumberland; we understand it is proposed to open a new lodge at Maryport.

Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Q.C., L.L.D., has accepted a place on the General Committee of the Royal Literary Fund.

TRAVELLERS' VADE MECUM.—In anticipation of the season of country and continental rambles, so many of the pleasures of which are destroyed by the impedimenta with which our wives and daughters will insist on surrounding themselves, it would be wise to pay a visit to the show-room of Messrs. John Pound and Co., 81 and 82, Leadenhall-street, and there select a series of imperials for the ladies, with a portmanteau and despatch box for one's-self. Much of the trouble of luggage is due to no two articles being alike, and the easiest remedy for this evil is to provide a set of packages having the same outward appearance. At Messrs. Pound's such a selection can easily be made, for certainly their stock represents the pictorial aspect of luggage. When looking at the ingeniously devised receptacles for every possible article that could be taken on a journey, it is difficult to avoid wishing to surround one's-self with a perfect avalanche of trunks, while the conveniences offered in the shape of dispatch boxes and writing cases suffice to impress us with a sense of the pleasure to be derived from a vast correspondence. In short, nothing gives a more striking proof of the luxuriousness of the age we live in than the beauty and artistic taste which seem to rule over the entire establishment in order to rob travelling of all its terrors, and all its troubles.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Effects of Colds. —In Spring almost every current of air is pregnant with sore throat, influenza, and a similar host of annoying disorders. All may be readily subdued by rubbing Holloway's Ointment over the affected part. The unguent penetrates and corrects diseased and erroneous action. Whatever or wherever the malady, this invaluable Ointment searches out its cause, and safely effects the precise remedial action required, without weakening the system or leaving behind the seeds of future disease. Holloway's Pills greatly assist this curative action. The sick of all nations have voluntarily borne testimony to the wonderful cures performed by Holloway's medicaments when both the faculty and the patient themselves saw no relief but death.

- WILLIAM ALLISON, AGED 62 YEARS. He has been a Mason 27 years, having been initiated into the Barton Lodge, No. 723, in Hamilton, Canada West, in 1844; Exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter, No. 733, in 1845; Joined the Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, in 1848. Became a Knight Templar in 1850. He suffered a considerable time from disease of the throat, rendering it necessary for him, thirteen years ago, to undergo an operation; the result of which, and old age, unfit him to contribute anything towards his own support. He is entirely dependent on the small sum he receives from three Lodges and one Chapter as Tyler. Messrs. DAY & Co. believe that seldom has a Mine been offered so cheaply, in which the chances of immense profits have been so great, whilst immediate large returns are apparently a matter of certainty.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS. CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy. SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsey, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

*Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM;
 AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES
 ON THIS SUBJECT.

By W. E. N., No. 766.

No. VII., July 8th, 1871.—On the first deportation of the ten tribes by Tiglath Pileser, B.C. 739, the people of Gilead, on the east of Jordan, were carried into Ashur, Halah, Habor, and Gozan. The second deportation was by Shalmenezer, but his name does not appear in the biblical account of the siege of Samaria. Sir J. Newton, Major Rennel, and other authorities consider that Halah and Habor are the present Georgia and Circassia, east of the Black Sea, and Herodotus says the people of that country practised circumcision. The country of Gozan is said to be in Upper Media. Philo says the Jews were very numerous in the East, under the Persians, and Josephus states that multitudes of the descendants of the ten tribes were in his time beyond the Euphrates. In Isaiah mention is made of Sargon, King of Assyria. His existence was doubted until M. Botta discovered in 1845, on the walls of a palace at Khorsabad, about ten miles from the site of Nineveh, various tablets; and in the ruins, clay cylinders, on which are recorded Sargon's exploits in Samaria. One of these inscriptions, evidently by Sargon himself, says "I besieged and took Samaria and carried away 27,280 persons who dwelt in it." He subsequently took Ashdod, and thus had command of the maritime route to Egypt. Sargon, who is stated to have sent into Samaria colonists from Babylon, Cuthah, and Sepharvaim, died B.C. 704, and was succeeded by Sennacherib, who took all the fenced cities of Judah, in Hezekiah's time, but by the miraculous destruction of his army, was driven back to Nineveh.

As regards the captive tribes between the Caspian and Euxine, it was not the Divine will that they should rest and settle down in the land of their captivity. They were to "wander from sea to sea." They were to "run to and fro," and to be "as chaff before the wind," and "as smoke out of the chimney." They accordingly appear to have migrated to China, India, and other countries, and even to North America. Customs and traditions seem to identify these people in these countries. Some of the people, who were sent to Media, returned to Judea, with Judah and Benjamin, under Zerubbabel and Ezra. The bulk of the Israelites remained together, but made their way westward along the north shore of the Black Sea, until they reached the Danube. This is not a mere assumption; as the prophecies of Jeremiah plainly point northwards and westwards, as the direction of Israel's wanderings. (See Jeremiah iii. 12, xvi. 14 15 xxxi. 9 10.) All these texts agree with the position and wanderings of the captive tribes. The migration and settlements of a people may be traced by the monuments they leave behind them, and the customs they carry with them. The Beni-Israel scattered over the country near Bombay profess to belong to the tribe of Reuben. Allatius considers that the inhabitants of Iberia, who practised circumcision, were of Israelitish descent. In the supposed track of Israel's migration are found monuments (places of sepulture) of Israelitish origin. The country north of the region occupied by the Israelites, and now forming part of Russia, consists of vast plains, capable, when cultivated, of supporting multitudes. Dr. J. Clarke gives a description of the tumuli or burying places near the sea of Azov. The Russian Archæological Society has found in this region many Israelitish relics, such as epitaphs from tombs, dated "from the year of our exile," no doubt meaning the Assyrian captivity. Dr. Clarke describes the remains of a very large fortress, and the tumuli found in the vicinity. One was opened, and two chambers, constructed in masonry, were discovered. In them was found a golden serpent with two heads, studded with rubies and other gems. Similar tombs are found near the Bosphorus. The Beni-Israel of India have in their secret chamber a silver serpent, before which they burn incense. The ten tribes were carried away from Canaan, before Hezekiah destroyed Moses' brazen serpent, because "the Children of Israel burnt incense to it." (II. Kings, xviii. 4.)

The names of rivers along the shores of the Euxine are of Israelitish origin, in memory of the Jordan; thus we have the Don, the Danube, the Dnepler, the Dniester, &c.

No. VIII. July 15th, 1871.—Israel pushing north and west, colonized Roumania, Hungary, Poland, and Bohemia. Are the Getæ found by Darius, B.C. 507, or 215 years after the deportation of Israel by the Assyrians, identical with the Israelites? As an evidence of this identity, we learn from Herodotus that these Getæ believed in an immortal life, and one supreme God. They deplored the loss of their sacred books, left to them, as they alleged, by Zamoxis (Moses). We learn from Herodotus that the Getæ were first found in Asia, east of the Araxes, in the seventh and eighth centuries, B.C. Diodorus gives the same account of them and says that increasing in numbers, and extending their boundaries, they became a great nation, and subdued many people between the Caspian, and Lake Mæotis, and migrated westward. Strabo, Pliny, and Ptolemy, all speak of them, but know nothing of their origin. Herodotus states that the Getæ are sometimes called Scythians, who declared that their first king lived about 1000 years before Darius (507 B.C.). This carries us back to the time of Moses, who in Deut. xxxiii. 5, is called "King in Jeshurun." The authors above referred to, know very little about the Getæ, but they all concur in finding them about the Araxes between the Caspian and Euxine, soon after the time when Israel was carried there; and they describe them as afterwards becoming numerous and pushing westward, as the ten tribes did.

As regards the internal evidence of the identity of the Anglo-Saxon branch of the Getæ, with the Israelites, there are but few remains of literature. The oldest Anglo-Saxon composition is the Voluspa, a poem including a mixture of fact and fable, blending tradition of the creation with some traditions of Israel's history, the incursions of the Huns from the north, and the ravages of the Romans. The English language is a mixture of many languages, ancient and modern, but the heart of the language is Anglo-Saxon. Sharon Turner has found 247 Saxon words which are derived from the Hebrew or Arabic. The Saxon names of persons are given after the Hebrew fashion, and all have some striking signification. The Saxons, or Goths, in their invasions, destroyed the ancient government and political system of the Romans, but introduced systems which were superior. In Britain these efforts were most beneficial. The Saxon institutions insured the liberty of the people—they chose ten representatives for tythings, or parishes, ten of which formed a "hundred." By the Mosaic institution the people were placed under rulers of thousands, of hundreds, of fifties, and of tens. The Saxon "county," corresponded to the tribe in Israel. The Saxons also had the Israelitish division of the day, whereas the other ancient eastern nations reckoned their day as we do ours now. The Saxons, in common with the Israelites, had their great festivals. Easter corresponding to the Passover, Whitsuntide corresponding to Pentecost. The third was the Wittenageonot, or general gathering of all the males. So in Israel, all the males were to present themselves to the Lord three times a year. The priesthood among the Saxons was confined to certain families, and descended from father to son, as in Israel, and the Saxon priests were supported by tythes or tenths, with the possession of certain lands.

No. IX, July 22, 1871.—The two preceding papers refer to such general external and internal evidence as will identify the ancient Getæ, and their descendants, the Goths, Saxons, and Germans, with the Israelites. The evidence is furnished by the similarity of customs and institutions; much weight is attached to the way marks of Israel's migration westward; to be found on the shores of the Black Sea and about the Danube. Two questions now arise—If the Getæ are the ten tribes, how did the latter lose their name, and why were they called the Getæ? They most likely called themselves Getæ for some sufficient reason. In Hebrew, get means a wine press in which the grapes are trodden. Now in various texts in Isaiah, Hosea, and Jeremiah, Israel is said to be "trodden as in a wine press." The people in the time of their distress and wandering may, in penitence, have called themselves "the down-trodden ones." Diodorus speaks of a Scythian people in the region of the Caucasus as the Massagetæ. Here we have Getæ again; but what does the prefix Massa mean? The root of the word in Hebrew means to peel off, or reject; the compound word would therefore mean "the down-trodden and rejected ones." Israel, though cast off and punished, was to be called back and gathered from all nations (Micah ii. 12), but in the meantime was to pass through many changes, such as apostacy, mental and spiritual blindness, when they should know neither God nor themselves. Hosea ii. 17, says "Israel shall be no more remembered by their name." Amos viii. 12, says, they shall wander from sea to sea," &c. Isaiah xix. 19, states that "Israel shall abide for many days without a king and without a sacrifice." Besides these punishments Israel is to "lose the word of the Lord" that is to forget to observe it; to be "joined to idols" and "swallowed up amongst the Gentiles" that is not to be distinguished from them. Some of these things may be said of the tribe of Judah, but not all. It is submitted then that the Getæ of Mæsia and Dacia were the ten tribes, who were carried by the Assyrians into Upper Media, and the country between the Caspian and Euxine, and went from thence westerly along the shores of the latter, peopling Germany and Denmark, and under the name of Goths, overran the Roman Empire. One great branch of them is now known as Anglo-Saxons.

No. X. Aug. 5, 1871.—The history of the Getæ and the Saxons and Angles, who peopled North Germany and Denmark is exhausted. That favoured race, the Anglo-Saxon, has carried its colonies into almost every part of the world, and has extended the blessings of religion and civilisation. The proposition that this race is identical with the lost ten tribes of Israel is so startling that perhaps few will admit that the evidence adduced is conclusive. The question of our identity with the people whom God selected from all other people, to maintain the truth of his existence, and of his purpose to establish an universal reign of righteousness and happiness, is so momentous as to require our further attention and patience. Leaving the historical evidence, let us turn to the proofs furnished by prophecy, which involve the promises by God, of grace and mercy to Israel, and through Israel to the world at large. "The isles shall wait for me," "The ships of Tarshish shall bring thy sons from far with their silver and gold," "The sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee." (Isaiah lx. 2, 10.) Many persons dislike to study the prophecies, because they deem it impossible to derive good therefrom. Some prophecies will never be understood until after their fulfilment, but there are others which invite inquiry. The literal meaning must be given to all words, unless there be an obvious reason for departing from it. Many mistakes arise from spiritualising prophecy instead of taking the literal meaning. In Isaiah xi. 11, 16, we read, "the Lord shall set his hand a second time to recover the remnant of His people," &c., "He shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth." It is very important to note the distinction in the prophecies between Judah and Israel. The two houses are intended to fulfil a different purpose in the world. Of Judah was to come the one promised Seed, and of Israel the multitudinous seed. Judah is a standing witness, while long-lost Israel is to come forth in the latter time as a witness to the truth. Bearing in mind this distinction between Judah and Israel, and accepting the prophecies and promises, let us see how they identify the Anglo-Saxon race with Israel, to whom the promises were made. We shall see that not one prophecy only, but many, have received, or are receiving, their fulfilment in the position, works, and character of the Anglo-Saxons. We can find no other people to which these prophecies will answer. In the prophetic word, touching Israel and their identity with the Anglo-Saxons, we have several striking coincidences as to the characteristics of, and the work to be done by Israel, and effected by the Anglo-Saxons. Surely there must be something more than fortuitous coincidences here. The promises to Abraham (see Gen. xxii. 16, 18,) evidently refer to the Anglo-Saxon race, and may be classified under five heads, viz. — 1. Israel's localisation; 2. Their Christianisation; 3. Their possessions or settlements; 4. Their giving birth to nations and kings; 5. Their diversified works.

No. XI. July 29, 1871.—The prophecies and promises pertaining to the ten tribes of Israel after their captivity in Assyria and Media, in the region between the Caspian and Euxine indicate their future destiny, as heirs of the promises made to Abraham. The first thing that strikes one on referring to Isaiah xli., is Israel's entrance into the islands, their manner of obtaining a position there, their high mission and future glory. The people in their conquest of the islands are described under the figure of a righteous man. Then we have a description of the fear created by the presence of these warlike people. Israel is called the Lord's servant, and has been called from the ends of the earth. They are upheld by the assurance that God had chosen them, and would uphold them so that all who should engage against them should be confounded. Does the peopling of these islands by the Getæ, or Anglo-Saxons, answer to this prophetic description? The islands were first settled by the great Euekardian or Iberian stock, belonging to the Ugo Tartarian races which spread over Western Europe.

All that is left of this stock are the Basques in Spain, and some of the Western Irish. The Iberians were driven out of Britain by the Celts, but in the time of the Romans, the Silures of North Wales had a Spanish look. The Celts in Britain and Ireland yielded before the Belgians (who were of German or Gothic origin) until the Romans came and stayed their downfall. In the fifth century, the Germans or Goths swept over the Roman Empire; Rome tottered and fell; and the Celts in Britain freed themselves; but not for long, for the Anglo-Germans came over and settled on the eastern shore and pushed forward, until all the islands fell under their sway. The Saxons or Frisians of West Jutland made the first inroads, but the Angles from East Jutland pressed westward, came over the sea and soon took the leadership, and gave to the land, the people, speech, and laws, the name of English. The old Danes were near akin to the English, as were the Jutes and Vandals.

Under the name of English, all England north of the Thames, up to the highlands of Wales and Scotland, was filled with this race.

The description given by history of the occupation of England by the Anglo-Saxon race, answers closely to the symbolical language of Scripture of the righteous man, who is to be God's instrument to destroy idolatry. They were to possess the Islands in the midst of the sea; the most eligible spot from which to send forth that knowledge which is to effect the intended object. England is supposed to be the Tarshish of Scripture, whose great ships and merchants are so often spoken of in connection with Israel. Ezekiel (xxxviii, 12,) mentions Tarshish in connection with Sheba and Dedan. Dedan is supposed to be a place in the Persian Gulf; but Sheba, is India and Tarshish England. England, alone, is a large naval and mercantile power; a land rich in metals and cloth, and cunning workmanship. England has a lion for her symbol, and India young lions. This island, with India, was to be possessed by Israel. Every opposing force was to be overcome, for Israel was the Lord's servant, and in the accomplishment of her great mission all the obstacles were to be removed.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. J. FLYNN,
P.M., AND P.Z., 245, DUBLIN.

A number of brethren representing most of the Dublin Masonic Lodges, met in the large banqueting room at the Masonic Temple, Molesworth-street, for the purpose of presenting Bro. James Flynn with an address, &c. After having partaken of an excellent supper specially prepared, for the occasion, Bro. J. H. Woodworth, P.M. 245, was called upon to preside. The usual loyal toasts being duly proposed, that of the Queen was received, as also the Patron of our order in Ireland, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with great cheering, and shouts of long live the Queen and Prince. The toast of our own Grand Master and the Grand Masters of England and Scotland, was proposed and responded to by the usual salute. Bro. Alderman Manning responded in a very able speech. The next toast was the guest of the evening, Bro. James Flynn and the following address and jewel were presented to him. Bro. Flynn replied in a suitable manner and was received with hearty cheers. Having got permission, he proposed the health of the Secretary, Bro. Doherty, and the Treasurer, Bro. A. Fitzpatrick, who he eulogised for his energy in Masonic matters. In replying, Bro. Doherty said, when writing the address he merely expressed the opinion of the members of the order in Dublin. The Treasurer, whose rising was lustily cheered for his zeal in bringing so many good and true Masons together, said he felt highly pleased to be the medium of calling out such an expression of brotherly feeling towards Bro. Flynn, which had been proved in a most tangible manner, and in a very able and eloquent speech sought to impress the great necessity for unity, trusting that the most uninterrupted harmony would prevail amongst them as a body in this country, and that the cord which bound them so closely together would in no case become weakened, but on the contrary, become stronger and stronger, binding them more closely together for their mutual advantage, and the increase of their individual happiness and prosperity of the Craft.

The following is a copy of the address:—

“To Bro. James Flynn, P.M., P.Z., and H.H.T., 245.

“Dear Sir and Brother,—

“A number of members of the Masonic body, who have long had evidence of your interesting and disinterested efforts at all times and seasons, to promote good working and efficient labour, in any lodge in which your services could be of benefit, have deemed it fitting to mark their appreciation of your Masonic worth by some tangible manifestation which should palpably evince the esteem in which they hold you as a deserving brother.

“The jewel which accompanies this address and of which we beg your acceptance, represents the dignity in one branch of the order only at which you have arrived, but it at the same time affords proof of your having attained a position in Royal Arch Masonry to which all brother companions look forward with feelings of hopeful pride. This small presentation does not exhibit the full measure of regard entertained for you by the brethren who have long toiled with you in fraternal anxiety to advance our Ancient Order, nor of those who look back with feelings of lively satisfaction to the period when you first brought them to light and familiarized them with the secrets and mysteries of our Craft. Neither is it intended to act as an incentive to your already well-known anxiety on behalf of the order, but it may serve to show you that your efforts have not passed unrecognised by a large portion of your Dublin brethren, on whose behalf we beg to subscribe ourselves.

A. FITZPATRICK, Treasurer,
C. DOHERTY, Secretary.”

Bro. Flynn replied as follows:—

Brethren,—It is a source of pride to me, as it should be to any brother, to receive so flattering a tribute to his Masonic conduct as is manifested by the large and important assemblage of representative Masonry, which I behold in this room to night.

I accept with much gratitude the beautiful jewel, and more than complimentary address accompanying it, which you have so generously presented as your appreciation of my Masonic work. I need scarcely state to any brother in this company that anything that I can do to forward the interest of the order here or elsewhere has been, and shall always be, done out of the purest love and reverence for the advancement of the principles which the teachings of our sublime order inculcates. In assisting at the working of any lodge at which my services may have been deemed useful, I have been always actuated by a zealous desire to promote efficient labour in a good and harmonious discharge of lodge duties, and I can conscientiously state I have ever striven to the best of my ability to create a friendly feeling amongst my brethren, and to further an amicable adjustment of all Masonic matters at every time. Your conduct towards me to-night proves that my efforts have not been unrecognised, when I learn that over one hundred members of the Craft have subscribed towards this presentation, I do believe and feel how inadequately any words I may use could sufficiently convey the warmth of my sentiments, or the heartfelt gratitude I entertain towards you for the beautiful and valuable presentation which you have now made me. The recollections of this evening shall always hold a first place in my memory and affection, and I shall ever look upon your kindly gift as one of the most valuable received during my life.

JAMES FLYNN, P.Z. 245.

The evening's entertainment passed off with the utmost satisfaction to all present, and the proceedings were rendered much further enjoyable by the excellent singing of Professor W. O'Donohoe, Professor C. Phillips, and J. Ryan. The brethren separated highly pleased.

CONSTANTINE.

GENERAL GRAND CONCLAVE.

The annual assembly of the General Grand Conclave of the Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine was held on Thursday evening, the 7th inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, for the transaction of the general business of the Order.

This was the first occasion upon which a Grand Conclave of the Knights of the Red Cross have met together after a year's recess, such meeting hitherto having taken place triennially, when the Most Ill. Grand Sov. was re-elected, but at the last meeting it was deemed expedient that they should be held annually, so as to keep up a more intimate feeling amongst the members of the Order.

In consequence of unforeseen circumstances, the Right Hon. the Earl of Bective, M.P. and Most. Ill. Grand Sov. was unable to attend, and Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart., M.P., M.E.V., was kept away by illness. In the absence, therefore, of these illustrious members of the Order, the duties of M. Ill. Grand Sovereign devolved upon Colonel Burdett, who certainly discharged the duties of the evening in a most efficient manner. Sir Knt. Marsh occupied the position of the M.E. Grand Viceroy, and there was a very numerous attendance of Sir Knights, amongst whom were many members of the Grand Senate, Past and Present Sovereigns, and other officers, besides many Sir Knights belonging to different Conclaves.

A procession was formed, and the Grand Sov. pro tem. entered the Grand Conclave hall, preceded and followed by the Sir Knights, and passed under an “Arch of Steel,” Sir Knt. Weaver who presided at the harmonium playing “See the Conquering Hero,” and which was continued until all the Sir Knights had taken their positions under their respective banners. The Grand Conclave was then opened in imperial form, and the first business afterwards was to receive the report of the Conclave Committee, which was of a very satisfactory nature, and was unanimously adopted.

The Grand Sov. then referred to the next business on the paper, which was to consider and adopt addresses of congratulation to Her Majesty the Queen and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, upon the happy occasion of the Prince's restoration to health. The gallant Colonel then moved seriatim addresses, and in a few well pointed observations said, it must be to them a great source of congratulation that the illustrious Prince, a brother Mason, had been preserved from a most severe and dangerous illness, and sincerely trusted that he might once more appear amongst them to receive those warm feelings of attachment which so characterises his brother Masons.

The address to the Prince of Wales was agreed to, and then Sir Knt. Burdett moved a similar one to Her Most Gracious Majesty, congratulating her upon the Prince's recovery, and assuring her of the sincere attachment to her throne and person. This was also agreed to unanimously.

“To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.

“May it please your Majesty,—We, the Members of the Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, in General Grand Conclave convened, humbly desire to approach your Majesty, and to offer our most hearty congratulations upon the happy recovery of our illustrious Brother, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, from his recent dangerous illness.

“And in tendering the assurance of our loyalty and devotion to your Royal person and house, we earnestly pray that the Omnipotent Ruler of the Universe may long preserve your Majesty to reign in the hearts, as well as over the destinies, of a free, loyal, and contented people.

“Signed, on behalf of the Order, at London, this seventh day of March, A.L. 5876, A.D. 1872, A.O. 1559.

“Signed,

“BECTIVE, G.S.”

“To His Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, K.G., &c., &c.

“May it please your Royal Highness,—We, the Members of the Masonic Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, in General Grand Conclave convened, beg most heartily and cordially to congratulate your Royal Highness upon your recovery from an illness of so painful and dangerous a character as that which has recently excited the sorrowful fears and anxieties of the whole nation.

We pray that the Omnipotent Ruler of the Universe may speedily restore your Royal Highness to the enjoyment of perfect strength, and that He to whom we look for help in time of need, may ever have you in His holy keeping.

“Signed, on behalf of the Order, in London, this seventh day of March, A.L. 5876, A.D. 1872, A.O. 1559.

“Signed,

BECTIVE, G.S.

The next business was to elect twelve members of the Grand Senate. There were fifteen candidates for this honourable post, but the following are the names of those elected:—Sir Knights John W. Barrett, Frederick Binckes, the Earl Ferrers, Charles H. R. Harrison, Rev.

Haycroft, George Kenning, John T. Moss, Hy. Parker, Frederick A. Philbrick, William Roebuck, Sigismund Rosenthal, and Thomas W. White.

Original Correspondence.

AIDS TO STUDY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

My esteemed friend, Bro. Carpenter, will, I am sure, pardon me for correcting a slight error in his letter, published in the last number of the Freemason, with the pith of which, however, I scarcely need tell him, I entirely concur.

There is no Prudent Brethren Lodge of Instruction. The public, or open night, was given by the Prudent Brethren Chapter No. 145, about three months after it was consecrated by Comp. John Hervey, G.E. assisted by Comp. Brett. Whether the open night was a success or not, I must leave others to form an opinion, and will merely say that those who promoted the movement felt so gratified with the satisfaction expressed by one of the largest convocations of R. A. Masons on record, that they thought of having an open night twice at least during the Masonic season—so that those companions who might feel disposed to study R. A. Masonry in its purity—or aid in an uniformity of working should not be without the opportunity, however, upon consideration it was seen that this would entail too great an expense upon a Chapter so young as No. 145—therefore the idea was abandoned, and the result of several meetings and deliberations ended in the formation of the R. A. Chapter of Improvement; and now the companions of the order have every facility of acquiring and perfecting themselves, not only in the beautiful ritual connected with the ceremony of exaltation, but also the lectures and other portions of the supreme degree, not usually given in the regular chapters. I may also add that discussions occasionally arise and are not prohibited, if confined to the purposes of the meeting, and do not interfere with the programme of the evening; by these means the companions hear and know the opinions of others, who may not agree in some slight and frequently unimportant difference in the working. This I think my friend Companion Carpenter will agree with me in saying is a move in the right direction. That others believe it to be so, I may venture to assert, or we should not have had the large gatherings of some of the most influential members of the Craft, as witnessed at festivals of June and February last. I am disposed to think there is another step working quietly along in the right direction. I allude to the visits of Lodges of Instruction to each other, for the purpose of working the sections, east visiting the west, west he east, north the south, and south the north; each carrying their own working into their neighbours' territories, and may perhaps in time so cross each other as to make as many angles as our Companion Brett does of the R. A. jewel. So much the better, we shall then get uniformity of working, for we have the means, (actually in our hands) without applying to Grand Lodge to legislate upon the subject,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN BOYD, P.Z.

The above was written before I noticed Bro. Stevens's letter in the Freemason, and to which I refer Bro. Carpenter. The going out to tea and taking your work with you, was alluded to in consequence of the invitation I had myself received.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

It occurred to me, after having written the suggestive lines which appeared under this heading in the last issue of The Freemason, that I might contribute a few materials, as other brethren also might do, by way of furnishing aids to study, while we await the appearance of some brother, or brothers, who will set about the work of establishing a Masonic library, lectures, and conversations, and with your approval, I purpose contributing, as opportunity offers, something in the way of suggestion towards the study of those branches of knowledge which should be peculiarly interesting to us Masons, as occupying a prominent place amongst the subjects which fall within the sphere of our Masonic obligations, and which are in themselves as instructive as they are interesting. In the prosecution of my object I shall sometimes offer my own thoughts, and sometimes the thoughts of others, the latter, probably, more frequently than the former, having an eye especially to subjects which do not receive so much attention from many of our brethren as all must admit they should do.

Standing perhaps foremost amongst these subjects, is Ancient History, and more particularly the Ancient History of the East, about which I think I am not wrong in saying that many of us know but little. And yet, I venture to affirm, that there is not a department of study fraught with more interest, or one more calculated to expand the mind and contribute to an enlarged view of "the wonderful works of the Almighty." I may also remark, that a mere English reader possesses facilities for pursuing this branch of knowledge, far beyond those available a few years ago, as he has within reach the results of those laborious investigations which scholars, German scholars especially, have undertaken within the last half century, and which have tended to eliminate from the early fragments of history much that has been proved by the application of sound canons of criticism, to be, if not mythical, wholly unreliable. We possess much of the results of those labours in recent English works. Nor should I omit to mention, as amongst the eminent labourers in this field of investigation, our own Grote and Hallam, or that most industrious of all literary labourers, Dr. William Smith, any more than I should those indefatigable scholars who have devoted many years of their lives to the successful study and elucidation of the preserved fragments of Egyptian, Assyrian, and Babylonian history, as Niebuhr, Grotefend, Champollion, Wilkinson, Corry, Rawlinson, Hinks, Oppert and Batta, who have made those wonderful discoveries in hieroglyphic and cuneiform literature, which—at least in the principles of interpretation, and in a large mass of positive results—have outlived the stage of incredulity, and become a recognised branch of ancient learning.

Let me, then, in opening this subject, transfer to your columns a very important suggestion in relation to Ancient History, which appears in the preface to Philip Smith's "Ancient History of the East," forming a portion of "Murray's Student's Manuals."

"A knowledge of the History of the East is indispensable to the student. In the earliest records, he meets with doubtful traditions, and further study undoubted signs of older forms of civilisation, which help to determine those of Greece and Rome. Egypt and Phœnicia loom up, however vaguely, in what he learns of the origin of Greek society, arts, and letters. The earliest and noblest poetry of Greece and of the world, as well as the legend of Rome's original, bring him at once into contact with an Asiatic kingdom, of whose real existence, however, he is left in doubt. As his first reading of Greek poetry excites his curiosity about Troy, so his earliest labours in Greek prose plunge him into the history of Persia, and into the heart of the great eastern empires. His first guide to the history of Greece is an author who—with a wise prescience of that method of study which we have only learnt of late—carries him at once to Assyria and Babylon, Egypt and Libya, Lydia and Persia, that, in the knowledge of the East he may see the true meaning of the victories which form the glory of the history of Greece. And at every succeeding step, he finds himself in contact with Oriental form of government and civilisation, and he learns that the victories of Alexander, Scipio and Augustus, were the decisive steps in the great conflict between Eastern, and Western principles of social life. Clearly, therefore, he has learnt but half the lesson of Ancient History, so long as he sees the Oriental element only in that background, which is all that can be allotted to it in the special histories of Greece and Rome."

The object of the work, from which I take these remarks, is to present the other half, and is designed to be a necessary supplement to those histories, and a sketch of the Oriental States, which deserve study for their own intrinsic interest. It appears to be based on an independent study of the ancient writers, and a careful use of the best modern authorities; and it brings down the history to Alexander's conquest, the true epoch at which the East yielded to the West. His object, as the author observes, has not been to draw up a mere skeleton epitome, but a narrative full and circumstantial enough to possess life and interest, and to leave that impression on the memory which mere outlines can never produce, since a summary can only be of real service as an index to knowledge already acquired. The work may be conscientiously recommended, as a manual, both for the student and for the general reader, of the present state of our knowledge on a subject, the interest of which is daily growing, its bonds enlarging, and its details becoming more definite and certain by the progress of inquiry; and which, moreover, throws much light upon Scripture history.

WILLIAM CARPENTER.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—

I have been much interested in the articles which have from time to time appeared on the various Degrees of this Rite, as tending in some degree to dispel the obscurity in which they are at present shrouded; it seems to me that instead of starting new degrees, which appears to be now the prevailing tendency, it would be more to the purpose were we to endeavour to increase our knowledge of those already in existence, and notably those of the Ancient and Accepted Rite.

As a member of the 18°, I should be glad to know something of the various Degrees of the Rite not at present worked in this country, and I believe that this not unreasonable desire for further light is shared by many of my brethren. In America these degrees are regularly worked; some time ago there appeared in the columns of your deceased contemporary, a description of a Masonic Temple, at Cincinnati, I believe, where special provision was made for their working. In Ireland too, if I am not mistaken, the 28° is worked, in addition to the five given here.

I appears to me that arrangements might readily be made, whereby these degrees, or a part of them, could be regularly worked in London—say twice a year at the meetings of the 30°—by members of the Rite throughout the country, nominated by the Supreme Grand Council, and further, that the course now adopted by the Mark Grand Lodge might be pursued with advantage, i.e., that once or twice in the year the Supreme Grand Council should pay an official visit to some country Chapter, where certain of these degrees should be again worked by members of that Chapter, and the nominees of the Supreme Grand Council.

This would, I am persuaded, tend to a more general interest in this very beautiful Rite, and at the same time be useful by bringing the members more into communion.

I merely throw out this crude suggestion, in the hope that it may induce some one of influence to take the matter up.

Yours fraternally,

FIAT LUX, 18°.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

We have great pleasure in announcing that our esteemed Bro. W. J. Hughan has been appointed Grand Representative from the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania to the Mark Grand Lodge of England, Comp. Chas. Eugene Meyer, Grand High Priest of Pennsylvania being the chosen Representative of the Mark Grand Lodge near his own jurisdiction.

The Rev. G. R. Portal, M.A., Grand Mark Master, will also represent the Grand Chapter of Iowa, and Bro. V. D. Taylor will hold the corresponding rank for the Mark Grand Lodge at that Grand Chapter.

NEW LODGE AT LEICESTER.—The M.W.G.M. having granted a warrant for the Commercial Lodge, No. 1391, to be held at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, the Provincial Grand Lodge has been summoned for Easter Monday, 1st April, at two o'clock, when the lodge will be constituted by the Provincial Grand Master. There will be a banquet at 5 o'clock.

BERWICK-ON-TWEED.—The brethren of St. David's Lodge, No. 393, have long entertained the idea of erecting a new lodge room. They have succeeded in securing an excellent site; plans are already in preparation, and we are informed that the erection of a handsome Masonic Hall will shortly be proceeded with. This lodge appears to have entered upon a course of prosperity, and we have every confidence that, under the direction of its present W. Master, Bro. C. J. Paton, it will become one of the most important and prosperous lodges in the Province of Northumberland.

NEW MASONIC HALL AT LIVERPOOL.—A large and influential meeting of the Committee of the New Masonic Hall, was held on Friday, 8th inst., at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, with reference to the new building. A letter was read from the trustees, expressing their willingness to sign the contract on condition that half the estimated cost of the building was deposited in the bank before the end of the month. The lodges in Liverpool were very fully represented at the meeting, and in the course of the proceedings it was stated that nearly the required sum had been already promised. Several members of the Committee referred to the desirability of having the work carried out, and urged upon the members present, and the craft generally, the necessity for exertion in connection with the proposal. The accepted plans are by Messrs. Danson and Davies, architects, Liverpool, and if they are carried out (of which there seems no doubt, from the enthusiasm displayed at the meeting) the new Masonic Hall in Hope-street will not only prove well adapted to masonic purposes, but will also form an ornament to the architectural features of Liverpool, and a credit to the craft generally.

THE COMPLETION OF ST. PAUL'S.—It has been resolved by the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2, to contribute the sum of twenty guineas to the fund for the completion of the internal decoration of St. Paul's Cathedral. By acting thus, the members of that lodge are both contributing towards a national undertaking, and also doing appropriate honours to the memory of Sir Christopher Wren, who for many years was Master of the lodge. Indeed, among the relics in the possession of this lodge, which is one of the oldest and most important in the craft, are some beautifully wrought candlesticks, presented by Sir Christopher Wren, as well as the mallet used by Charles the Second to lay the foundation of the present St. Paul's, and made out of a piece of wood from old St. Paul's. If other lodges follow the example set to them, the future visitor to St. Paul's, who looks round upon the walls and columns to which the artist has put the finishing touch, will assuredly consider the whole edifice a monument more worthy than ever alike of the nation and of Sir Christopher Wren.

SUNDERLAND MASONIC HALL COMPANY.—The annual ball of the shareholders of this company was held in the Hall on Friday, March 1st. There was a large attendance, and everything passed off with celat, and reflected great credit on the active and energetic committee under whose management it was got up, of which Bro. Riley was Chairman, and Bro. F. Maddison Hon. Sec. Mr. John Tellman ably officiated as M.C. The annual meeting was held on the 8th inst., Bro. S. A. Wade, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in the chair. The Hall has now been open two years, and a very satisfactory report of the present position of the Company was presented. Three of the Directors retired by rotation; Bros. Crooks and Wade were re-elected, and Bro. Collin Smart was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Bro. Bell retiring from the directorate and being elected Secretary. Bro. R. Hudson, the retiring Secretary, was elected Treasurer.

BERLIN.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph writes:—"English Brethren of 'the Craft,' par excellence, may be interested to learn that Brother H.I. and R.H. the Crown Prince of Germany, M.W.G.M. of the Grand 'Country' Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, Berlin, presided over and conducted the working of that lodge two nights ago for the first time since his return from the French campaign. The number of brethren—that is, of duly affiliated or visiting members of lodges—in Berlin is not very large, considering that the population of this capital is but little short of a million; they are in all 2,191. We boast of three Grand Lodges, however,—the 'Three Terrestrial Globes,' 'Royal York,' and 'Country,' besides a goodly number of blue and red Lodges. There are actually more barristers in Berlin than Master Masons—strong presumptive evidence in favour of the assertion that the Prussian character inclines rather to litigiousness than to benevolence.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Low Spirits, Dependency.—Sickness soon weighs down the most buoyant spirits, unless they be maintained by the hope of speedy recovery. This salutary hope may safely be based on Holloway's world esteemed remedies, which are the safest and most efficient curatives of all diseases affecting the exterior or interior of the human body. They raise every organ to its natural standard by purifying the blood, stimulating the nerves, and dislodging any obstructions in the vessels or glands. In skin diseases and children's complaints, Holloway's medicaments are invaluable. In all the maladies to which families are liable, these remedies are particularly useful in relieving and strengthening those organs upon the due performance of whose functions the health depends.—ADVT.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Chairman said:—Ladies and Brethren, I rise to return you my most cordial thanks for the kind way you received my health, so feelingly and kindly proposed by Bro. Vernon. If anything could have been thought of that would have given me pleasure, by the Committee of Stewards who arranged the list of toasts for this evening, it was that my name should be offered to your notice by a brother for whom I have a great personal esteem as a friend, and whom in Masonry I greatly venerate. Difficult as it will be to follow in his footsteps, in the Province of Staffordshire, I have yet the recollection of his bright example before me, and when I tell you—because I must say it in his presence—that his name is a password among Masons in Staffordshire, we look up to it; if there is anything wanting we go to him—Bro. Vernon still resides among us, and any communication he has with us always comes with that hearty kindness which is indicative of a true Mason—you will then understand how gratifying it is to me, a brother Mason, in the arms of Masonry, to have the toast of my health so favourably placed before you. All I can say is, I aspire to become what Bro. Vernon hopes I shall be, (it shall not be my fault if I do not) as good a Mason, in my time, as he has been in his. Ladies, and Brethren, I thank you cordially for the kind manner you have received my name on the present occasion. (Cheers.)

Bro. F. Binckes then came forward and said:—My Lord, Ladies, and Brethren, it now affords me a very great amount of pleasure, in discharge of my duty, on this recurring anniversary, to present to you, my Lord, as the Chairman of our anniversary festival in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering, such as we see assembled here this evening, two of the pupils of the Institution who have earned the two largest rewards which we have in our power to give. I need hardly say, my lord, to you, conversant as you are with these matters, I need not occupy your time, and the brethren here, conversant as they are with educational matters in Masonic Institutions, that it is of the greatest consequence and the greatest importance to promote in every way, and to encourage by every means in our power, good conduct on the part of those pupils who are intrusted to our care. At a very early stage of the history of this Institution a prize of five guineas annually, in the shape of a silver medal, ordinarily and vernacularly called "The Good Conduct Medal" was established. It is not for me now, and it is unnecessary to say, the good conduct that will entitle a pupil in a school of 120, like ours, to merit that distinction, must have been very marked. It shows that his conduct, since the time he was first introduced to the school, to the present moment, has been uniformly good; and I feel perfectly sure that that boy, connected as he is with a large association like that which I address this evening, representing the great body of Freemasonry, ought to esteem, and I am sure does esteem it a very high honour indeed, to be here, and be the public recipient of the good conduct medal, given annually by the founders of this Institution. (Hear, hear.) I have very great pleasure, my lord, without occupying your time further, in introducing to you, and to the ladies, and brethren here, John Spicer, who is the recipient of the medal this year, by the testimony both of the Head Master and Matron, thereby showing that those who have authority in both departments, the educational and the domestic, have testified most clearly and conscientiously to his merits and deserts; and I hope he will never forget the day when he stands before a distinguished assembly like this, to receive from a distinguished nobleman like him who presides this evening, the reward for his good conduct, and that he will receive it not only, as a reward for the past, but as a great incentive for the future. (Cheers.)

The Chairman, in presenting the medal to John Spicer, said:—Master John Spicer, I have very great pleasure in presenting you, in the presence of this great assembly, with this medal, and I am glad to think that in doing so it is unnecessary for me to use the language of eulogy, because your own conscience will tell you that you have earned this by your own fair merit and deserts, and that you are only now present here to receive the just reward for your good conduct. I am proud to have an opportunity of saying to you what I would wish instilled in the minds of the youths of this great country, namely, that it is never too early to begin to attempt to distinguish yourself in whatever sphere of life it may please God to place you; and I trust that in receiving this honorarium before this august assembly, it will be an incentive to you, in whatever calling of life you may have to fill, to go on and prosper. You must recollect, and I think it only fair to tell you, because youth is enthusiastic, that it is not that such merit cannot be continued through life without great perseverance, great self-denial, great steadiness of conduct. I am proud to say that Englishmen are anxious to vie with one another in honourable distinctions. Education, I am glad to say is so rife in the land, it is not so easy to get the prizes. It is somewhat similar to a saying in Scripture—there are many run, but there is only one obtaineth the prize. It requires all your energy, all your sense of religion, all your thoughts concentrated on the line of business you take up, whether you succeed or whether you do not. I trust that this medal may be a memorial of the happy days that you have spent at Wood Green. I trust that it may be an incentive to good conduct which will make you as good a man as you are at present a boy. I have great pleasure to place it on your neck. (Great cheering, in the midst of which his Lordship placed the ribbon, to which was attached the medal, on John Spicer's neck.) As I have not had an opportunity of testing your military proficiency yet, but knowing that there is a drill-master in the school, I will try it now; being an old soldier myself, I will place that glass of wine (handing a glass of champagne to the youth) in your right hand; right about face, bow to the company, and drink their good health. (Applause.)

John Spicer obeyed, and then took a seat.

Bro. F. Binckes:—Now, my lord, in accordance with our annual rule there is another boy, the recipient of the prize which is always awarded at this anniversary festival, but this, unlike the former, has a modern foundation, but it has for its end and aim a very good object, that of rewarding the boy who by his general demeanour, manners, and conduct, has earned for himself the esteem, and respect, and regard of his fellow-pupils. (Hear, hear.) Now, I am quite prepared to hear certain objections made against an award of this kind that pupils of this school, if they are placed in responsible positions may to a certain extent violate a responsibility reposed in them, for the sake of earning from their fellow pupils the votes by which this prize is gained, because the object of this prize, which was founded by an excellent and good friend of ours, a Vice-Patron of the Institution, Bro. Edward Cox, who sits at the table opposite your lordship, is earned by whoever receives it from the unbiassed vote of his schoolfellows. Well, as I said, I am quite prepared to admit as a matter of discipline there may be certain objections argued, and I am not sure that those objections may not have weight, more or less; but for all that, I am quite prepared to contend, that under judicious regulations, a prize like this ought to be a proud emulation on the part of a pupil in a large public school. As I had an opportunity of saying to you, my lord, some days since, there may be boys that attain high educational honours, there are boys who may achieve great distinction as being celebrated for remarkably good conduct; but I, at the same time, do not hesitate to avow we have so large a regard for esprit de corps, that I like to see a boy singled out year by year by his school-fellows and associates, as a boy who by his conduct has earned their approval. There may be required, for aught I know, some little modification of the conditions under which a prize like this is bestowed; but I do not hesitate to say it, that if I could dispense with some of the signs of age which are upon me, and be a boy again, I would wish to stand in the place of Charles Hennis, and receive this medal, and be able to confess that I had discharged my duties in my position faithfully as a monitor, and at the same time say, I had earned for myself the good opinion of my fellow pupils. I should fancy myself the proudest pupil in the whole world, and I would sacrifice all the honours I may have obtained if I could once throw off that age which is now hastening upon me, and be once more a boy, and that boy who here receives from his Lordship's hands this distinguishing prize. My Lord, I have to present to your Lordship Charles Hennis, as the winner of the Canonbury prize, founded and established by our good friend, Bro. Edwd. Cox, a vice-patron of the Institution. (Cheers.)

The Chairman:—Master Charles Hennis, I have more pleasure, if it is possible, in presenting you with this medal than I had in presenting the other to your brother schoolfellow, because I think, and I hold with Bro. Cox, who instituted this medal, that it is a very great honour to be esteemed by those one lives daily with; and if I know anything of boys at all, I am quite convinced that the boy who toadied and made up to another boy for the sake of obtaining this medal, would be sure not to obtain it, if he tried for it. I thank Bro. Cox, in your name, for having instituted such a prize, and I must confess, that though I take a great interest in education, I have never seen a prize which has tickled my fancy so much or is likely to do so much good. To you, Master Hennis, I may say but little because Bro. Binckes has spoken so well upon the subject, that it is almost unnecessary for me to follow him, and we believe, in Masonry, the less we should say, but the better we should act. You have acted well and honourably. You heard the remarks that I made to your brother school-fellow, and if you will but recollect them I need not repeat them; but I equally congratulate you on having this high honour before this august assembly, of receiving the Canonbury prize, I have now pleasure of presenting you with it. You will now, like your predecessor, drink the health of the company.

"See the Conquering Hero comes," was then sung at the special request of the Chairman.

The Chairman:—Ladies and Brethren, I now rise to give you briefly, and I trust sincerely and clearly, the toast of the evening; it is "Prosperity to the Royal Masonic School for Boys." (Applause.) I do so with great pleasure, because I have been enabled to place myself in a position to recommend that establishment to your notice. When Bro. Binckes called upon me, at the request of your Committee, to ask me to undertake the office of presiding over you on this occasion,

I said that I should be happy to support the Masonic Charities, but before believing them to be good, I thought I had better go and see the School for myself. I proposed to visit the School, and, with Bro. Binckes I did so; and I am proud to tell you the impression left on my mind was favourable indeed. (Cheers.) Since I visited the School I have carefully read the report, and traced the history of it from the year 1717, to the Union when the Ancient and Modern Associations amalgamated, carrying out the School, and following it up again to the year 1850, when you made up your minds to build such an establishment. I say that I think Masons have reason congratulate themselves, they are not behind hand in giving the youth connected with the Craft a handsome and honourable education. Some criticism has, I understand, been made as to the great expense of the building; but if I may venture to be egotistical, accustomed as I am to county expenditure, I may venture to say I never saw so much money's worth for what is on the spot. There is ventilation, there is every adaptation of modern science for the comfort of the boys; and I believe that that School has been built in the true spirit of Freemasonry, without any niggard feeling whatever. Perhaps you might have saved a few pounds here, and a few pounds there, but the general structure is worthy of the Craft, and I shall never pass that building again, or be in it again, without feeling that I have done my best to support such an Institution. And if I speak of the grounds and of the building with gratification, I feel it a pleasant duty also to speak of what I saw within the School. I took the liberty of asking the boys to get their slates and to write me a composition, narrating the dastardly attempt that had been made to frighten the Queen. I gave them twenty minutes to do it, and when it was done, I found there was not one single mistake in the spelling, the composition was good, and the writing admirable. I felt after that, that I had not the ability of properly examining the boys, but that the boys could examine me a great deal better. I was particularly struck too with the high tone of the School, the nice demeanour of the lads—they looked at you straight in the face, shouted out of compliment before I came away, that I was the Chairman of the year, and shouted yet more lustily when I asked for a holiday for them. (Laughter.) They were just as boys should be, just as boys are when properly brought up, just as we Masons wish them to be. And I would conclude my remarks as regards that School by saying, that I think we are all indebted to the staff. I had the pleasure of being shown over the School by the Head Master. I conversed with him, and I suppose he looked upon me as a sort of Government Inspector, come to find fault; but I did not see anything to find fault with him for. Then I had another opportunity of talking to him sociably, and I congratulate you on having such a gentleman to preside over the establishment. Seeing him at this table, I will take the liberty of asking him to have a glass of wine with me. (The noble Chairman here took wine with Bro. Furrian.) And brethren, when you yourselves are in the chair you will find it the most agreeable thing you can do to have a glass of wine in the middle of your speech—(laughter)—and as sincerely and cordially as I do on this occasion. But my speech is at an end, and I would only allude to the lady who superintends the domestic arrangements of the establishment. I went from top to bottom, and I found everything correct. There was only one slight contretemps which then occurred, and yet I can hardly call it a contretemps, because it had with me a good effect. I went with Bro. Binckes into the lavatory and turned the water on, and I wetted Bro. Binckes through to the skin. (Laughter.) I was excessively sorry for it, because he had to change his dress, and I saw him divested of his Masonic clothing. I think it had a good effect, because Bro. Binckes has poured upon us that usual flood of eloquence he is so capable of, and it almost appears that the water had a very great effect on him, and afforded him that power of expression, quantity added to quality, which generally characterises all his observations. I must say, that speaking of the School, I have been struck by the energy of Bro. Binckes, and I feel quite sure that that School will always prosper while it has so indefatigable a Secretary as he to carry it on. Brethren, I beg leave to give you, with three times three, "Prosperity to the Masonic School for Boys." With the toast I beg to couple the name of Bro. Algernon Perkins, Treasurer and Trustee. (Applause.)

The toast having been honoured,

Bro. Algernon Perkins, P.G.D., said that, as the Treasurer of the Institution, he had not only to thank his Lordship for proposing the toast, but to congratulate the school on having such an efficient chairman for its festival. He only trusted that at the end of the evening he would be able to congratulate his Lordship on the effects produced by his zeal, industry, and talent, in a large subscription list. The brethren had found that the noble chairman had done his duty, and to parody a song they had recently heard, every friend of his ought to do his duty too.

Bro. Binckes here read the Stewards' lists, which amounted to £5,308. During the reading of these lists, Bro. Binckes reached the chairman's name, against which was set the sum of fifty guineas, and twenty-five against the name of the Countess of Shrewsbury, whereupon, the Chairman said he wanted to make an amendment. He had heard at the dinner that ladies were permitted to subscribe to the Masonic charities, and he had put down Lady Shrewsbury's name without consulting her, as he thought she would like to subscribe. As there was to be a thanksgiving subscription, he would withdraw the Countess's twenty-five guineas from the present list, which he hoped she would pay herself, (laughter), and as he thought Masons should not only talk, but act, and as what he had said about the Prince of Wales, came from the bottom of his heart, he would give fifty guineas to the thanksgiving fund, and he hoped the numerous Staffordshire brethren he saw before him would follow his example. (Cheers.)

Staffordshire sent over 500 guineas, Yorkshire £258, and many other lists produced large amounts.

Bro. Binckes:—My Lord, I do not think we have altogether consummated a failure. I would beg, on behalf of myself and the executive of our Institution to return our warmest and most sincere thanks to those good brethren who have come forward to undertake the arduous duty of Stewards, for the services they have rendered, which have contributed to so noble a result as I have now the honour to announce.

The Chairman:—I think Bro. Binckes has sung very sweetly, and to a good round tune, but I believe it would be the wish of the company that we should shortly adjourn to the concert prepared for us in the annexed hall. I therefore propose that we should have no more music here, and exercising that authority which you were good enough to place in me, I am going to put some of these toasts together. The next toast I shall have the honour to offer to your notice is "The Health of the Vice-President, Trustees, Committees, and Auditors." With that I will couple the name of the President of the Board of Stewards, the Rev. C. J. Martyn. I will now call upon Bro. Martyn to respond to those toasts, and I will give you as a final toast immediately afterwards "The Health of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls," coupled with the toast of "The Ladies."

Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G. Chaplain:—My Lord and Brethren, if your Lordship felt, as you said just now, in a state of great difficulty in having to propose so many different toasts to our notice, I am quite sure that you will believe that I rise under feelings of great diffidence when I remember how much I have to return thanks to you for—the Vice-President, Trustees, Committees, and Auditors, and last, and I suppose I might say not the least, my most noble self. I beg to thank you most sincerely for the kind way in which you have received this toast, and for myself, I may say it has been a great pleasure to me to act with all those brethren who have so kindly supported me as Stewards. I may say my part has been a very small one; living as I do a long way off, I have not been able to attend much. My brethren have taken all the trouble off me. To Bro. Joshua Nunn all your thanks are due. If our exertions have met with your approval we are satisfied, and we hope and trust you have all enjoyed a pleasant evening.

"The other Masonic Charities, the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution," and "The Ladies," combined were the last toast, and Bro. Binckes, in the absence of Bro. Patten and Bro. Farnfield, through illness, responded.

The company then adjourned to the Temple, where a delightful concert was given, and did not separate till a late hour. The musical arrangements of the evening, which were perfect, were under the direction of Bro. Frank Elmore, who sang several beautiful songs himself. He was also assisted by Mdlle. Liebhart, Miss Susannah Cole, Miss Julia Elton, Miss Marion Severn, Mr. Hilton and Bro. Carl Stepan. The instrumentalists were Madame Strindberg Elmore, an exquisite pianist, Bro. Lazarus, on the clarionet, and Mr. Harper, the renowned trumpet player. Bros. Henry Parker, and P. E. Van Noorden were the accompanyists. The festival eclipsed all former Masonic festivals in the completeness of its details and in its excellent arrangements. The musical ménu was unequalled; the dinner, served by Bro. Francatelli, the manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company, was all that could be desired, and the Stewards left no stone unturned to make everybody comfortable. To come to the last item, Mr. Goodchild performed his duties in praiseworthy style.

[We have great pleasure in remarking that the Great Northern Lodge, although but two years old, subscribed 50 guineas, in addition to a Stewards' list, which was well supported by the individual members. Will our older lodges follow suit in proportion.]

The "Tyler's Toast" brought an end to a very delightfully spent evening.

At the conclusion of the work, the thanks of the Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction were voted to Bro. Thomas and his party, and the whole were elected Honorary Members of the lodge. Bro. Thomas acknowledged the compliment on his own behalf expressing his gratification that the labours of himself and friends had been so highly appreciated, and Bro. In the course of his remarks he stated that a return visit would shortly be expected, and hoped that the uniformity of working which he found to be generally desired by the members of the Craft, with whom he had been associated, would at no distant time be secured through the instrumentality of these pleasant intellectual meetings. To Bro. John Robert Nash, the indefatigable Secretary of the Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction was mainly due, the success of the present meeting, and he (Bro. Stevens) begged to thank him for his cordial co-operation. A most agreeable and instructive evening was then brought to a close with generally expressed wishes for an early re-union.

GIBRALTAR.

THE EUROPA CHAPTER, ROSE CROIX was convened on the 4th inst., for the purpose of advancing to the 18th degree, Bros. Haynes, Morgan, and Fenery. Nearly all the members of the chapter attended to do honour to the M.W.S., who, on this occasion, presided for the first time, and who, with the very able and excellent assistance of the officers he had selected at his installation, conducted the ceremony in a manner that left nothing to be desired. The officers for the current year are Ill. Bro. Dantez, High Prelate; Ill. Bro. Henry, First General; Ill. Bro. Williamson, Second General; Ill. Bro. Wall, Grand Marshal; and Ill. Bro. Ellison, Raphael. After the chapter had been opened and before the reception of the candidate, the Treasurer Ill. Bro. Marin laid before the Princes a statement of the financial condition of the chapter, which proved eminently satisfactory. P.M.W.S. Ill. Bro. Price then rose, and, in a few most appropriate remarks, presented a very beautiful silver loving cup to the chapter. This magnificent piece of plate was received by the M.W.S., Ill. Bro. Bal-

Bro. P.M.W.S. Price. At the conclusion of the third point the Princes retired, and was shortly summoned to the banqueting hall, where a sumptuous collation had been prepared by the liberal and hospitable M.W.S.

Poetry.

BROTHERLY LOVE, RELIEF, AND TRUTH.

BY BRO. WM. BERNARD.

The world would be dreary,
And life often weary,
Without we'd a ray of the light from above,
Which beaming benignly,
Sheds o'er us divinely
The tender effulgence of BROTHERLY LOVE.

Though our joys pass away,
As our prospects decay,
And Time to us whispers he's bound to be brief;
But a blessing we find,
That in some of our kind
Dwell hearts that respond to the claims of RELIEF.

And when pleasure fails us
And sorrow assails us,
And gone are for ever are the days of our youth,
How hallowed's the feeling,
When to us revealing,
We've never forsaken the precepts of TRUTH.

TRINIDAD.—About two years have elapsed since the brethren of the islands comprised within the jurisdiction of the District Grand Lodge of Trinidad had to mourn the loss of their District Grand Master, in the death of the late Bro. Danl. Hart. The vacancy thus occasioned has now been filled up by the appointment of Bro. Robert Scott. The New Era congratulates the members of the order that "this distinctive mark of masonic excellence has fallen to the lot of one so eminently qualified for the post, not only by his position in our commercial community, but as a gentleman of education, talents and refinement."

MASONIC BALL IN LIVERPOOL.—The fourth annual ball of the brethren of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 220, Garston, took place on the 28th ult., at Delamere's Rooms. Amongst those present were Bros. R. Jones, W.M.; J. Sellar, I.P.M.; J. W. Baker, P.G.S., W.M. 241, P.M. 220; W.S. Vines, P.M.; C. Leedham, P.M.; H. Clayton, S.W.; W. Jones, J. W.; J. G. Butterfield, Secretary; Capt T. Gray, J.D. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Capt. Berry, R. Brown, W. T. May, Bateman, T. Josephs, Dr. E. M. Sheldon, Dr. Caldwell, &c. Bro. Vines, of the Canton, supplied the refreshments. Bro. Butterfield, the Secretary, deserves much credit for the manner in which he carried out the general arrangements in connection with the ball.

CONSECRATION OF THE ST. MARK'S CHAPTER, No. 857.

This new chapter was consecrated on Tuesday, the 12th inst., at the Half Moon Hotel, Herne Hill, by Comp. Jas. Brett, P.Z., G.D.C., assisted by Comp. R. Wentworth Little, P.Z., as Director of Ceremonies. The chapter was duly opened by Comps. J. Brett, as Z.; John Boyd, P.Z. as H. and J. Lewis Thomas, as J.; after which the Companions entered, and the Presiding Officer proceeded with the ceremony of consecration—a duty which he performed in a most dignified and impressive manner. The D.C. then presented the Three Principals Designate, namely, Comps. C. H. Rogers Harrison, Z.; W. B. Hambly, H.; G. Schuck, J.; and they were all regularly installed into their respective chairs. The M.E.Z. then invested Comp. H. E. Francis, P.Z., as the first S.E. of the chapter, and afterwards proposed that the thanks of the chapter, and the rank of Honorary Member be awarded to Comp. Brett, for his admirable working of the ceremonies of consecration and installation, and to Comp. Little for assisting in the same. Both companions briefly acknowledged the compliment. Votes of thanks were also passed to Comps. Boyd and Thomas, the acting H. and J. at the consecration, and to Comp. W. Worrell for the able way in which he conducted the musical portion of the ceremonies. A large number of candidates having been proposed, the chapter was closed, and the Companions sat down to a capital dinner under the M.E.Z.'s presidency.

The usual loyal and R.A. toasts were duly honoured—and good speeches were made by several present, including Comps. J. O. Oxland, and C. Homfray, for the visitors, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all.

CONSECRATION OF THE BIRCHALL LODGE OF MARK MASTERS, No. 143.

On Wednesday, 13th inst. a very important ceremony in connection with Freemasonry in Preston took place at the Bull Hotel. Hitherto the degree of Mark Masonry, under the constitution of England, has found no habitation in the town, but through the instrumentality of Bro. Colonel Birchall, a lodge has been formed, and the consecration took place on Wednesday last, when Bro. W. Romaine Callender, jun., of Manchester, the Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Order for the province of Lancashire, accompanied by a large number of his Grand Officers, attended. The ceremony was an exceedingly interesting one, and at its close the Prov.G.M. installed as the first Worshipful Master Bro. Colonel Birchall, who appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Major Wilson, S.W.; Richard Robinson, J.W.; J. J. Greaves, M.O.; Joseph Pritt, S.O.; W. Welbourne, J.O.; James Porter, W.M. 60, Secretary; George Galloway, S.D.; Ralph Laudles, J.D.; James Worsley, I.G., A. Mc.Carter, T.

Subsequently Bro. Col. Birchall provided a grand banquet in an adjoining room. The chair was occupied by Bro. Col. Birchall, who was supported by the following brethren:—The R.W. W. Romaine Callender, jun., Prov. G.M.M.; W. O. Walker, Prov. G.M.O.; R. Goepel, Prov. G.S.O.; J. Gibb Smith, Prov. G.J.O.; Rev. Jno. Leighton Figgins, M.A., Prov. G.C.; Jno. Duffield, Prov. G. Treas.; J. F. Tweedale, Prov. G. Reg.; Jno. Chadwick, Prov. G. Sec.; W. H. Prince, Prov. G. S.D.; W. Ashworth, Prov. G. J.D.; R. Butterworth, Prov. G.D.C.; J. Ashworth, Prov. G.A.D.C.; R. Seed, Prov. G. Org.; T. T. Lancashire, Prov. G.S.B.; A. Milne, Prov. G. Steward; Jno. Handley, Prov. G.I.G.; Wm. Roberts P. Prov. G.S.D., and Prov. G.M.O.; Jas. Porter, W.M. 60; G. Galloway, P.M.; Major Thomas Wilson; Dr. Moore, G. Swd. Bearc; J. J. Greaves; J. Pritt; W. Welbourne; R. Landless; J. Worsley; J. Grime; H. Livesay; Thos. Aspden.

The Worshipful Master proposed the usual loyal toasts, and "the health of the Rev. R. G. Portal, Grand Mark Master of England, with his Deputy and the rest of the Grand Officers," which was enthusiastically received.

The Worshipful Master gave "R. W. Bro

William Romaine Callender, jun., Prov. G.M.M.M. of Lancashire." In Masonry generally, no name stood higher than that of Bro. Callender. He would not expatiate why, nor make use of any amount of fulsome eulogy. They knew why, but in that degree particularly, met, as they were, on the occasion of consecrating a new lodge, they ought to pay especial compliments to him for the exertion he had expended in promoting Mark Masonry, the talent he had brought to bear upon it, and the kind manner in which he had exerted his great social influence in promoting the extension of the Order. He need not say more to impress upon them the importance of the toast, nor to render it more acceptable to them. He was confident they would receive it and do due honour to it; but he must be permitted to express to the Provincial Grand Master his own personal obligation for the kind manner in which he had sanctioned the formation of the lodge, and especially for his presence on that occasion, and for the admirable and never-to-be-forgotten manner in which he had consecrated the lodge. It was with very great pleasure he proposed his health, and hoped he and the officers under him in the illustrious position he so ably filled might enjoy long and prosperous lives.

Bro. W. Romaine Callender, junr., said:—Brethren, as regards brevity I will follow, as I am always anxious to do, the example of your Worshipful Master. I can assure you that I never enter a lodge without receiving words of kindness and commendation which I feel are more than I deserve. Perhaps I never had greater pleasure than in coming to Preston to-day. Considering the importance of Preston—and I say it, you will be quite sure, not merely in words of compliment or flattery—it is no small thing for us to have a Mark Lodge in a large and important town like this. The founding of a branch like this, commenced under such auspices, taken up by a number of brethren who have the confidence of their friends in the town and neighbourhood, and commanding the position and importance which your town occupies.—I say, such a lodge ought to be a focus and a load star of Mark Masonry in North Lancashire, I hope for generations, (Applause.) There is another peculiar feature in our meeting to-day. We have had the pleasure of meeting in our lodge, and obligating in our Constitution, brethren who, like many other brethren in this room and in Lancashire, took their Mark degree under a kindred Constitution; and I am always anxious that those brethren should be fully alive to the fact that there is no actual rivalry between us. It is not worth while now going into the question how or why there should be two jurisdictions. We who were advanced under one jurisdiction have thought, as Englishmen, that we ought to support the English Constitution when one could be found to work and agree; but, on the other hand, we have no wish to push ourselves in opposition to, or to force our lodges upon, those who differ from us. One strong feeling which I had in accepting the honours which were placed before me was, that I might perhaps, having some influence in the Craft, prevent any possibility of dissension arising in this degree to mar our working in the Craft degree, which we all acknowledge to be the most important and most universal. I believe that this and many other degrees are of use and importance, have special beauties of their own, and are, as it were, the adornments and embellishments of the system; still I think it would be a great mistake and a great misfortune if any differences on those other points were at all to cause any unpleasant feeling or the shadow of uneasiness or dissension in our Craft lodges. I am happy to be able to say that this view of the question, so far as regards East Lancashire, has been generally adopted; and although we have yet two jurisdictions, and although we do not quite know whether they will be merged into one, still we have reason to believe that, in a longer or shorter time, no feeling of dissatisfaction, or dissension, or dispute can possibly arise to mar the working of the one or the other, for we acknowledge to have one desire in this great and beautiful and most comprehensive degree. I have only now to thank you, the brethren, personally, and at the same time let me say how many thanks I feel we owe to your Worshipful Master and the brotherhood of the lodge established to-day; and also, if I may be allowed to add, to the Provincial Grand Officers who have come in such number here. They have come here not merely from any personal regard to myself, and not merely from a sense of duty, but from a desire to do honour to the town of Preston—and to assure the brethren here that they have a hearty sympathy in all that concerns your ancient and most important town.

Bro. Birchall having proposed "The Lord Lindsay, the R.W. Deputy P.G.M.M.; Lord Skelmersdale, P.G.S.W.M.M.; and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers."

Bro. W. Romaine Callender, jun., said he believed he had now the privilege of proposing the next toast, and, as time was advancing, he feared he would not be able to do justice to it in the way in which he should like to do, and perhaps he had already anticipated some remarks he might have made in proposing "Prosperity to the Birchall Lodge, 143." It was a similar toast to that always proposed at the installation of a Worshipful Master, and always proposed with sincerity. He was sure none of these Masonic toasts were ever proposed by brethren without feeling a heartiness and an earnestness to which members of the outer world were to a great extent strangers. No man with any degree of Masonry in his heart could enter into a lodge without wishing that lodge prosperity; and although he might be a stranger, and although he might scarcely know its members, and know little or nothing of its particular working, yet, if he happened to be present at the annual meeting, when an installation took place, he must feel a special desire that the principles which had been handed down so far might be handed down for twelve months more, and that their operations would be carried on as time advances by future members. He was sure if that feeling was prevalent in every Masonic heart, it must be especially so when a new lodge was formed. Whatever amount of Masonic experience a brother might have had, still, there was no small responsibility in undertaking the working of a new lodge. He was sure on an occasion like that, when they were commencing a new lodge in a new degree, that responsibility, that anxiety, and that labour were proportionately increased; and all the more so when it was their desire, as he knew it must be, to emulate other lodges in the province and to set a good example to those who might come in after them. Since they had had a Provincial Grand Lodge in Lancashire they had been particularly fortunate in the class and the number of brethren who had joined them. They had not merely been numerous, but they had also been excellent and hard-working Masons. As he knew it must and would be their desire that the Birchall Lodge should not be outshone by others he felt that their Worshipful Master and his officers, and the brethren who first composed it, would have no ordinary work to perform; and in proportion to that work and responsibility, so the wishes of himself and Grand Officers, and the brethren throughout Lancashire, would be great and earnest. He confessed that when Col. Birchall was at one of their Mark Lodges he was exceedingly anxious not to take him from their Scotch brethren by any unworthy means, but to avail himself of his services if it was really possible. He would not, either for his own sake, or for the colonel's sake, or the Craft's sake, suggest that he should give up his first allegiance, but when he heard that he was disposed to join them, he felt—and those feelings were shared by them all—a very great amount of pleasure. It was an especial gratification to him to have a brother and a gentleman like the Colonel to fill an office in the Provincial Grand Lodge, because he had always contended that, whilst they ought to recognise merit, they ought also to seek to amalgamate with it social position and social worth. He knew that Bro. Birchall was not likely to do that without doing some more Masonic work. He felt perfectly certain of that when Bro. Birchall received the office of Prov. J.G. Warden, and he said to a friend, "Depend upon it, we shall have a lodge at Preston before long." He could only, in conclusion, express to Bro. Birchall the gratification he felt for his kindness in taking office under him, and also his very sincere thanks for the manner in which he and his other brethren were going to conduct their new lodge:

He wished Bro. Birchall in his year of office, and every other brother who accepted office under him and all who were connected with the lodge, every happiness and prosperity, both in their public and private concerns, and he hoped especially that this Birchall Lodge would be a Masonic blessing and a Masonic advantage to the town and neighbourhood. He had great pleasure in proposing "Prosperity to the Birchall Lodge."

Bro. Birchall, in rising to return thanks for the honour which they had done him in drinking his health in connection with the newly-formed lodge, assured the brethren that whilst he felt the high honour and experienced great pleasure and gratification in having been placed in that eminent position, he at the same time felt the great responsibility which he had undertaken, because that was not the first time he had been called upon to initiate a Masonic Institution in the town of Preston. (Hear, hear.) Like their Provincial Worshipful Master he for the third time appeared as the institutor or founder of a Masonic body in the town. He was quite aware that the Provincial Grand Master felt a great wish and anxiety that it should spread in all directions, and that he had a peculiar desire that a lodge should be formed in Preston. It afforded him (Bro. Birchall) great pleasure in carrying that desire in effect. Their Worshipful Master thought it would progress still further westward if once established in Preston, and he (Bro. Birchall) had every reason to believe that before long there would be a lodge in Lancaster, and probably still further north-west. He trusted they would agree with him in thinking that they had begun that day under very good auspices. They began, of course, as new lodges did, with a limited number of members, but they had already that day affiliated several members from another Order, of the same degree, and he had had the honour of proposing in the lodge not fewer than twenty-five brethren for advancement, upon the occasion of their first assembly. No exertion of his would be spared, so far as time from his other avocations would permit, to ensure the welfare of the lodge. He felt proud that he had been supported so kindly by the brethren who had accepted office under him, and he did trust that they would exert themselves to make themselves perfect in their respective departments, so that they might not be ashamed to be visited by members from any other locality. Before sitting down, he moved to propose "The health of the Senior and Junior Wardens, and the other officers of the lodge;" with such good officers there was no fear that the lodge would not go on succeeding and to prosper. (Loud applause.)

Bro. Major Wilson, Senior Warden, returned thanks on behalf of the officers of the new lodge. He hoped and he believed the people of Preston would see, from these ceremonies, that there was something in Freemasonry that was deserving of the consideration and attention of every good man—(hear, hear.)—and that there was something in the principles of the Craft. In every degree they saw them developed in a different way—one developed in one way, and another in another—and there was something so ennobling in them, that the knowledge of their proceedings would further the interests of the Craft; and in the town induce the people to think that they were not a body of men who met merely for the purpose of eating and drinking, and social intercourse, but for the purpose of promoting morality, religion, and good fellowship amongst one another.

Bro. J. J. Greaves proposed "The Visiting Brethren."

The Worshipful Master proposed "The health of the Brethren of the neighbouring Province of Cumberland and Westmorland," coupled with the name of Bro. James Porter, W.M. of lodge 60, who suitably responded.

Bro. Galloway proposed the health of those gentlemen who had entertained them with harmony; and the remainder of the evening was passed in an equally enjoyable manner.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

ELECTION—MAY, 1872.

ROYAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION FOR AGED FREEMASONS AND THE WIDOWS OF FREEMASONS.—The favour of your vote and interest is earnestly solicited on behalf of

Thomas Cartwright, Aged 77 Years.

He was initiated into the Temperance Lodge, No. 169, in 1851, exalted in the Domatic Chapter, No. 177; and has continued a subscribing member up to this time. Some years since he retired from business as a stevedore, with a moderate competency, but unwisely again embarked in business as a timber merchant, and through the recklessness of others has lost all his means, and now lives by the joint exertions of his aged wife by mangling clothes; he is sadly afflicted with deafness. Was a subscribing member to this Institution for some years.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually cures and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conynham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR COFF, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON and Co., Newcastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/12, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.
No. XXVI.

By BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

A First Supplementary Paper.

The 27th day of February, 1872, was a memorable day in the annals of the British Empire. I speak not of the pageantry and paraphernalia of royalty, and the external show and dazzling manifestations of rejoicing which the great capital put forth, in connection with the Thanksgiving for the recovery of the heir to the throne from his apparently fatal illness, but of the national acknowledgment which was made of the moral government of Him by whom kings reign, and princes decree righteousness.

Whatever some may think of the uselessness of prayer, for the removal of calamities which appear to come in the natural course of things, and therefore of returning thanks to the Almighty Ruler upon their removal, that day must be regarded and held in remembrance as one on which there was a solemn national acknowledgment of the Great Architect of the Universe, as the Supreme Governor of the World, and the arbiter of nations; and also, as a confession of our dependence on Him, as the supreme Disposer of events. It was a distinct national proclamation of faith in the reality of a special and personal Providence. As it was said, there might be varieties of depth in the conviction, and varieties in the sense of the mystery that encompasses it, but the general impression must have been made on almost every heart. And it is one which time will hardly efface. It was a day on which all ranks and degrees of men were represented in one temple of common worship. The Royal Family, Nobles, Commoners, Church, Army, Navy, Diplomats, Municipalities, Law, and Science, were all formed into one united body, and engaged in solemn acts of devotion and thanksgiving to Him, who doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and amongst the inhabitants of the earth; acknowledging His providential dealing with men, and His wise and beneficent ordering of nations. I know of no more beautiful or touching picture, though but slightly sketched, than that in the Daily News :—

“The Queen, having entered her pew, kneels for a moment. On her right the Prince of Wales has taken his place, with his little heir on his left, the child's head just showing over the rails as he looks with curious baby face upon the unwonted sight; next to the child is the Duke of Edinburgh, in naval uniform, and beyond him, again, in the dark green uniform of the Rifle Brigade, is Prince Arthur. The Princess of Wales is on the Queen's left, with her second boy on her left, again; then Princess Beatrice in light mauve dress, trimmed with swansdown, then Prince Leopold in full Highland dress, and, on the outside, the Duke of Cambridge in Field Marshal's uniform. And so down there—under the vast dome of the noblest cathedral in her realm, her family by her side, in her front her faithful Lords and Commons, her judges, her wise men, the great territorial barons of Britain, and the men of Britain who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, the sage whose white hairs fall over the eye, whose fire age has not quenched, and the youth on whose lip the down is but budding, the representatives of her allies, and her subjects of another race and clime; with behind her her army and navy—a support in peace, as ever in war a shield and buckler before her—the Queen bends her head in prayer. A deep silence falls upon the vast upstanding assemblage. The nation as a whole, Queen and people, were thanking God Almighty that He had been pleased to save alive him who stood there by his mother's side, with his child holding his hand.”

There was one feature of this great day, however, which I have not yet noticed, though the most noticeable, perhaps, of all the striking incidents by which it was characterized; the great temple of Christian worship comprised in its congregation, not only Christians of all the various denominations who worship, each after the way which they deem to be most in accordance with the primitive form which has apostolic example or sanction, but those who represented nations and peoples who have not yet embraced the Christian faith. There were Brahmin and Bhuddist, Mahomedan and Parsee, in that vast assemblage. One of the first to arrive, says the daily papers, was the representative of the Turkish Embassy, then came his imperial Highness, Higeshi Fushimi Myn, and his companion, with their dusky features, and large rolling black eyes, under the green and gold turban, or a diamond studded Fez. Again, there was the Maharajah Duleep Singh, with the Maharanee, and their suite, in a flash of diamonds, and a glitter of cloth of gold; and some unknown but evidently Oriental personage of distinction, with his bosom of scarlet embroidered with foliage of gold, and a broad belt of red and gold crossing his manly chest.

What a sublime spectacle, what an impressive and glorious acknowledgment of a nation's dependence upon Him who reigns in righteousness, and makes His sun to shine on the evil, and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust!

It will not be forgotten as a day on which men emancipated themselves from the trammels of party, and raised themselves above the alienation of sectarian differences. Bowing at one common altar, they poured out their united thanksgiving to one common Father and God. As the writer I have already quoted describes it :—

“In quaint court dress and cocked hat there sat, with canons and bishops, the Moderator of the General Assembly of Scotland—the Church of Knox, the Church that burnt the cathedrals and smashed the organs—the Church that furnished the Covenanting Martyrs, who lived the lives of the persecuted and died the death of martyrs, rather than accept the prelatial ordinances of James and Laud. Unitarians, Methodists, Baptists, Roman Catholics—every sect and many creeds met under the noble, sacred roof, to give thanks to the common God.”

The grand metropolitan Cathedral encompassed within its walls, on that memorable day, too, the representatives of many diversified views and convictions, touching politics, religion, and science. Many who occasionally contest with each other principles and opinions of most varied and almost opposing aspect, here met on common ground, and on bended knee, and with hearts beating in sympathy, adored Him from whom all good emanates. It was, indeed a temple of peace, harmony, and united devotion.

In what was this Thanksgiving Service extraordinary? It was extraordinary, in the first place, I think, for the various and diverse persons taking part in it. It was a solemn Thanksgiving to the Father of Mercies for the recovery of the heir-apparent to the throne from the jaws of death. As the Archbishop reminded the congregation, prayers had been offered for the Prince's recovery from his seemingly fatal illness, not only in all the national established churches, but “in the broad circuit of the British Empire many joined in our prayers, who scarcely knew the God to whom we prayed; and none were more hearty in their prayers, than God's ancient people.” And now here was gathered up into one great national act of worship, in the form of Thanksgiving for his recovery, the representatives of all nations, and tribes, and kindreds of people. As a contemporary writer remarked, “the tendency of modern thought, while it infinitely enlarges our conception of the Divine operations, is, perhaps, to diminish the vividness and directness with which we feel them. The tendency of modern habit and fashion, without any conscious thought, is to discourage those frequent references to His working which belonged to the simpler times of our forefathers, and—in a spirit which surely is the reverse of philosophical—to be content merely with reference to second causes. This Thanksgiving Service had a striking significance, as a formal rejection of those supposed modern ideas.”

There was no evidence, on that memorable day, that the nation was becoming tired of monarchy, and were impatient for a republic. There are, perhaps, few young men of ardent temperament, who have seriously given their attention to politics, who are not, more or less, imbued with the notion that republicanism is the perfection of human government, and who do not fancy that, with a republic, we should get rid of all the ills that flesh is heir to, under a monarchy. But as they advance in life, and acquire knowledge and the habit of reflection, they generally become convinced that this is a mistake, and expose themselves to the imputation of being renegades from their purer faith. The Monarchy under which we live, and the dynasty which occupies the throne, are evidently and deeply seated in the affections and judgement of the English people, as a nation. But on this memorable occasion, it was the Prince, chiefly, that commanded the deep sympathy of the "masses," for they, not less than the "upper ten thousand," evinced it in their most expressive way.

But what had all this to do with Israel? Much every way.

No other people in ancient or modern times could ever bring together, without violence or coercion, nor indeed by it, such a mass of heterogeneous elements as was presented on this day of Thanksgiving. A mere invitation brought into the great Metropolitan Christian Temple, the representatives of all civilised nations and peoples, excepting the still separated remnant of the kingdom of Judah, who are not yet to unite with their ancient brethren of Israel, worshipping at the same altars, and offering up common prayers to their common Father. The Hindoos, besides being here represented, thronged their temples in India, the Mahomedans their mosques, and the Jews their synagogues, in order to unite with us in their devotional thanksgiving. Can we fail, while reflecting on so remarkable and exceptional a religious phenomenon, to call to mind the words of the prophet, concerning Israel's future: "Behold, thou shalt call a nation which thou knowest not; and nations that knew thee not shall run unto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy one of Israel; for He hath glorified thee . . . So shall my word be, that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in that whereto I sent it" (Isai. lv., 5, 11.) And again—although the glorious prophetic promise will not be wholly fulfilled until after the final gathering and uniting of Judah and Israel, it seems to have a partial and is obtaining a progressive fulfilment, in like manner as all the Divine purposes appear to have hitherto had—"Also, the sons of the stranger that join themselves to the Lord, to serve Him, and to love the name of the Lord, to be his servants; everyone that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant, even them will I bring to my holy mountain; and make them joyful in my House of Prayer; their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for mine house shall be called a House of Prayer for all people" (Ch. lvi., 6, 7.) The Lord's ancient "house," in His "holy mountain," is still desolate and desecrated by the foot of the Moslem, for the "times of the Gentiles" are not yet fulfilled. Yet, while He said of Judah, that they should be wanderers throughout the earth, finding no rest for the sole of their foot, He said of Israel, "the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, and my holy name shall the House of Israel no more defile, neither they nor their kings, by their whoredom (idolatry), nor by the carcasses of their kings in their high places. . . . Let them put away these from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever" (Ezek. xliii, 7, 9.) So that, though the Lord's house, which stood in His "holy mountain," in the midst of the earth, is thrown down, and the land defiled, He still has His chosen temple, and His word goeth forth from this favoured Island—a mountain rising up in the midst of the sea, and thus rendered, in the theocratic sense of the word, "holy," even as Zion was called "holy," though possessed by "a sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers" (Isa. i. 4.)

This great day of Thanksgiving, of which I write, had the Heir Apparent for its object. The Prince, as far as he is known, has not done anything to place himself on a higher level in our national affections than some other persons who might be pointed to, outside the royal circle. But he has afforded many proofs of his desire to promote the public welfare, and to aid the cause of beneficence. Nevertheless, it cannot be denied that many people regard him with doubtful feelings, and even speak of him in disparaging terms. The wherefore need not here be inquired into; enough that it is the fact. Nevertheless, for his recovery from a condition of extreme danger, the united prayers of all ranks and degrees of men, with only such exceptions as tend to confirm the general proposition, were offered up to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe. And now, his recovery being pronounced, there was an equally united thanksgiving offered to the same Divine Ruler, for what they believed to be an answer to their prayers. Is there not in all this something more than can be accounted for on ordinary principles? They who deny that God governs the world, by the continuous exercise of His divine wisdom, and omnipotence, and rather believe that there is nothing by which our world is affected, beyond the constant and never varying operation of "natural laws"—laws operating by no more intelligence than the movement of a clock—cannot, of course, acquiesce in any idea of an inspiring impulse or suggestion from Him, without whom not even a sparrow falls to the ground, and who has promised to Israel, that He will direct them in all their ways. They are, in relation to this at least, "without God in the world." But it is otherwise with those who agree with the view taken of prophetic scripture throughout these articles on Freemasonry and Israelitism. They will agree with me also in this, that Israel, as the chosen instrument for the accomplishment of God's gracious purposes, in the government of the world, and in the well-being of mankind, will ever have afforded to them the means of realising those purposes. "Thou, Israel, art my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham, my friend. Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away. Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. . . . fear not, I will help thee, saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel," (Isa. xli). "This people have I formed for myself, they shall show forth my praise." (Ch. xliii. 21. 8-14.)

BRO. LESSING ON FREEMASONRY.

A Series of Conversations.

PRELIMINARY: BY BRO. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE (KNOWN AS CRYPTONYMUS).

In that transition period of German thought which was to be ultimately brought to an issue by the counter-currents in the minds of Goethe and Schiller—and mainly by the former,—there existed a precursor. That precursor was Lessing. Pure in morals, faithful in actions, clear as a bell in induction, he was an aid to humanity. Numerous as are his works, it is singular to think that they have so little apparent present influence on the general thought of the world. Weird waggeries abound at the present time, but one of the masters of criticism, and the truest friends of the human race seems to have been consigned to an oblivion, only to be accounted for by reason of the difficulty popularly ascribed to the German language. To obviate this, I now, without further preface, give to the Masonic world the benefit of Bro. Lessing's ideas on the solemn aims of the fraternity. It is not here my duty to expatiate upon the serious topics embraced by these conversations. I will only add that eighteen years ago, I first issued Conversations One to Three; but the remaining portion never was added, from circumstances relating to the tenure of the paper in which they were published, by the kind permission and advice of Bro. the Rev. T. E. Cox, P.G.C., then holding the editorial chair of the now deceased Freemasons' Quarterly Review.—CRYPTONYMUS.

ERNEST AND FALK.

CONVERSATIONS FOR FREEMASONS.

By BRO. GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM LESSING. Now Translated for the first time by BRO. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, F.S.A., otherwise CRYPTONYMUS.

PART THE FIRST.—1778.

Dedication.

"To His Serene Highness the Duke Ferdinand Most Serene Highness.—I also was at the fountain of Truth, and drew water. How deep my bucket went must be decided by him from whom I have to expect the permission to sink it yet deeper."

"For a long time the people has desired water and is parched with thirst."

"Your Serene Highness's most humble Servant."

PREFACE.

(Written by a third person not engaged in the Conversations.)

If the following pages do not contain the true essence of Freemasonry, I should much desire to be informed in which of the innumerable treatises, resulting from it, a more exact definition can be found.

But if Freemasons, of whatever degree, will truly acknowledge that the point of view whence on this occasion, the subject has been regarded, be the only one from which not a phantom displays itself to a terrified beholder; but to a healthy vision, a veritable form, the one other question arises,—how it comes that such a truth has not long since been spoken?

Much may be said in answer to such a question. Yet it will be difficult to discover any other possessing so much analogy to it as this one : Why systematic handbooks of the Christian faith originated at so late a period of time? Why have there been so many and excellent Christians who neither could nor dared express their belief in a comprehensible manner?

Even the last would have occurred far too soon in Christendom, the faith winning but little thereby; if Christians had not fallen upon the whim of explaining it in a way altogether contrary.

The application of this is left to the reader.

CONVERSATION.—I.

ERNEST. Friend, what art thou thinking of?

FALK. Of nothing.

ERNEST. But you are so silent.

FALK. For that very reason. Who thinks when he enjoys? And I enjoy the invigorating morning.

ERNEST. You are right, and might have returned the question.

FALK. Were I thinking of anything, I should have spoken. Nothing is more delightful than thinking aloud with a friend.

ERNEST. Certainly.

FALK. If you have enjoyed the beautiful morning sufficiently, if anything occurs to you, speak. I think of nothing.

ERNEST. Good! I just recollect that I have wished to speak to you on a particular subject.

FALK. Name it, then.

ERNEST. Is it true, friend, that you are a Freemason?

FALK. The question is one which is not one.

ERNEST. Indeed! But answer me straightforwardly.—Are you a Freemason?

FALK. I believe myself to be one.

ERNEST. The answer is that of a person not sure of his facts.

FALK. Nay; I am somewhat certain of what I say.

ERNEST. In that case you must know whether, and when, and where, and by whom you were initiated.

FALK. I know that, certainly; but that would not be saying much.

ERNEST. No?

FALK. Who does not initiate, and who is not initiated?

ERNEST. Explain yourself.

FALK. I believe myself to be a Freemason, not so much because I was admitted by elder Freemasons into a legally established lodge, but because I perceive and acknowledge what is Freemasonry, but why it is, and when and where it has existed, how, and by what caused it has been assisted or hindered.

ERNEST. And yet you are doubtful? "You believe yourself to be one."

FALK. This expression is one to which I have become accustomed. It is not as if I could not convince myself, but I do not like to place myself directly in anyone's way.

ERNEST. You answer me as a stranger.

FALK. Stranger or friend, it would be all the same.

ERNEST. You are initiated, you know everything.

FALK. Others are also initiated, and think that they know.

ERNEST. Could you, then, have been initiated without knowing what you know?

FALK. Yes—indeed.

ERNEST. How so?

FALK. Because many who initiate know it not, because the few who know it cannot speak it.

ERNEST. And could you know it without having been initiated?

FALK. Why not? Freemasonry is not voluntary, not to be escaped, but a thing which is necessary, and founded in the being of man and of society. Therefore it is as easy to arrive at it by reflection as by the assistance of others.

ERNEST. Freemasonry not voluntary? Has it not words and signs, and customs, which might be quite different, and are therefore quite arbitrary?

FALK. True. But these words, and these signs, and these customs are not Freemasonry.

ERNEST. Freemasonry is a thing not to be escaped? How did men go on before Freemasonry existed?

FALK. It has always existed.

ERNEST. In that case, what is this fatalistic and certain Freemasonry?

FALK. That which I have already expressed to you. Something which even thou who know it cannot express in audible language.

ERNEST. A monstrous creature, therefore?

FALK. Be not hasty.

ERNEST. Whatever I can comprehend, I can define in audible language.

FALK. Not always, and often, at least, not in such a way as to convey by words to another the the exact definition impressed upon your own mind.

ERNEST. But if not one altogether similar, one, under any circumstances, having an analogous nature.

FALK. A definition bearing such an analogy would be either unnecessary or hurtful. Unnecessary, useless, if embracing to little; hurtful, if conveying too much.

ERNEST. Singular! If then, the Freemasons, who know the secret of their Order, cannot impart it by audible teaching, how do they spread abroad and uphold the Order?

FALK. By actions. They permit good men, and youths, whom they honour with a more intimate association, to conjecture and guess at their deeds—even behold them, as far as they may be beheld; these find pleasure in the pursuits, and do similar good deeds.

ERNEST. Deeds! Masonic deeds! I know of none but their speeches and songs, which are usually better printed than meditated or spoken.*

FALK. An analogy which they have with divers other orations and songs.

ERNEST. Or am I to accept these things as their deeds upon which they exult in those very songs and orations?

FALK. When they do not only exult in them.

ERNEST. And what is it that they glorify themselves so much in? Things which one expects from every good man, every honest citizen. They are so social, so benevolent, so obedient, so patriotic!

FALK. And are these things nothing?

ERNEST. Nothing by which they are distinguished from their fellow-countrymen. Who should not practice these virtues?

FALK. Ought!

ERNEST. Who cannot find predisposition and occasion sufficient for this beyond the sphere of Freemasonry?

FALK. But within that sphere, and by it a greater disposition.

ERNEST. Talk not to me of a multiplicity of predispositions. Rather induce due disposition with a tremendous and intensified power! The multitude of disposing forces is like the complexity of wheelworks in a piece of mechanism. The more numerous the wheels, the more easily is the machine put out of order.

FALK. That I cannot deny.

ERNEST. And what necessity is there for another inducement? an inducement dwarfing and making suspect all other mainsprings of action! One giving itself out as the strongest and the best!

FALK. Friend, be moderate. Hyperbole quid pro quo of those shallow orations and songs! Probation-work! Apprenticeship-work!

ERNEST. That is as much as to say: Brother Orator is a gossip!

FALK. Nay, rather that that which Brother Orator extols in Freemasonry is not exactly their work. Brother Orator at any rate tells no tales, and deeds speak for themselves.

ERNEST. Oh! now I do perceive your drift. How was it that I did not immediately recollect these deeds, their self-testifying actions; these deeds I might almost call crying deeds! Not content with upholding each other in the most self-sacrificing manner, what have they not done for the state and nation to which they belong!

FALK. For instance? so that I may hear if you are on the proper track.

ERNEST. The Freemasons of Stockholm, have they not erected a building for foundlings?

FALK. But let us hope the Stockholm Freemasons have kept up their credit for activity on other occasions.

ERNEST. At which?

FALK. At any other, I should have said.

ERNEST. And the Freemasons of Dresden; do they not employ young girls in embroidery and spinning; so that the foundling establishment is much smaller there?

FALK. Ernest! bear in mind the solemnity of your name!

ERNEST. Without any glosses then! and the Freemasons of Braunschweig, have they not given free instruction in drawing to poor boys?

FALK. Why not?

ERNEST. And the Berlin Freemasons, they perhaps did not lend their aid in founding the Basedon Institute?

FALK. What say you? Basedon! Freemasons' founding?—Who has deluded you with this story?

ERNEST. The brazen trumpets of the newspapers have proclaimed it.

FALK. The newspapers! I should like to see the receipt in Basedon's own handwriting, and I should like to be certain that it is not addressed to the Freemasons, and not to the Berlin Freemasons.

ERNEST. What is the matter! do you not approve of the Basedon Institute?

* The reader is requested to bear in mind the fact that Bro. Lessing wrote nearly one hundred years ago.—CRYP-TONYMUS.

FALK. Not approve of it! Who can do so more than I?

ERNEST. Well, then! I must say that I cannot understand you at all!

FALK. I have no doubt of it: and besides this I am wrong. For the Freemasons are able to do some things that they do not do as Freemasons.

ERNEST. And do you apply this to every one of their good deeds?

FALK. Perhaps! perhaps all these good deeds you have named to me are, to make use of a scholastic term, for brevity's sake, only their deeds ad extra.

ERNEST. How do you mean this?

FALK. Those deeds only which the public hear of—deeds done, and only to be made public.

ERNEST. To enjoy toleration and respect?

FALK. May be.

ERNEST. But their real deeds?—you are silent.

FALK. If I have not already answered you? Their true deeds are their secret.

ERNEST. Ha! ha! and therefore not expressible in words?

FALK. Not easily. I can only say to you this much: the veritable deeds of the Freemasons are so great, and extending so far, that whole centuries may pass ere it can be said:—This have they done. At the same time, it is they that have done every thing good in the world—mark me, in the world!—and they continue to work at all that good which will come into this world; mark me again, in the world.

ERNEST. Come, come, you are joking.

FALK. Truly not. But see, there is a butterfly which I must have. I say but to you: the veritable deeds of the Freemasons have this aim, to render all those things commonly called good deeds, unnecessary.

ERNEST. And are themselves good deeds?

FALK. There can be none better. Think for a few minutes over it: I shall be with you again immediately.

ERNEST. Good deeds, aiming to render good deeds unnecessary? This is an enigma, and I do not meditate upon enigmas. I shall rather lie down beneath this tree and watch the ants.

CHESHIRE MASONIC EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.

On Monday, 22nd inst., the annual meeting of the General Committee of the above Institution was held at the rooms of the Mersey Lodge, No. 477, Hamilton Square, Birkenhead, the W.M. of the Stamford Lodge, No. 1054, Altrincham, presiding.

The Worshipful Masters and Past Masters of the province, together with some past and present Provincial Grand Officers, put in a good appearance. Amongst those present were Bros. E. G. Willoughby, P.M. 477 and 425, P. Prov. J.G.D.; Jas. Salmon, W.M. 425; Dr. J. Seller, W.M. 721; John Beech, W.M. 361; J. E. Williams, P.M. 425; Joseph Sillitoe, P.M. 605; T. Somerville Jones, W.M. 1276; T. E. Kirk, W.M. 1054; J. P. Platt, P.M. 537, P. Prov. J. G.W.; F. K. Stevenson, P.M. 537, Prov. G.S.B.; Dr. Spratley, P.M. 537; E. Harbord, P.M. 477 and 4350; Thomas Marwood, W.M. 537; T. E. Hignett, P.M. 537; A. J. Breerton, 721; W. Goodacre, W.M. 104.

The following report to the Governors and Subscribers to the charity was read and unanimously adopted.

REPORT.

Your Committee, in bringing before you their Ninth Annual Report for the past year, have reason to hope that their proceedings will meet the approbation of the supporters of the Institution generally.

Since the issue of their last report the income of the Institution has been of a very satisfactory character. The personal subscriptions, &c., of the brethren amounted to £78 19s. 6d.; the donations from lodges and chapters to £70 9s. 6d.; and the general fees from the various lodges to £30 17s. 6d.; making a total of £180 6s. 6d.

During the past year the sum of £109 3s. 9d. has been paid for the education and advancement of children of poor and distressed masons; and since the accounts were closed upwards of £167 3s. 10d. has been added to the invested funds, making now the sum of £1,508 1s. 5d., against £1,340 last year.

At the same time your Committee are compelled to draw attention to the circumstance, that while the expenditure for the past year in the education and advancement of children amounted to £109 3s. 9d., the income derived from interest on the invested sum referred to is only £70 1s. 5d., showing clearly that greater exertions are required from the brethren in general, if complete success is to attend the management of this excellent institution.

It is with very great pleasure that your Committee again refer to the results of another amateur performance, held 28th March, 1871, at the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, which realised the nett sum of £29 9s. 2d. They also gratefully acknowledge the kind assistance of Bro. the Rev. W. A. Tatershall, at St. Saviour's Church, Oxtou, in preaching a sermon specially in aid of this Institution.

Another fact of the most gratifying nature may be mentioned, namely, that the mother of a child educated since 1867, being now in improved circumstances, has withdrawn the child from the Institution, and in order to show her gratitude for the benefits derived, has contributed to the funds the sum of five guineas, thereby constituting herself a Life Governor.

During the past year the large number of twenty children have received the benefits of education, and three have been aided with grants for their advancement in life. There are five candidates for admission to the Institution, in place of five who, under the rules, are ineligible for re-election.

The Committee have to acknowledge the receipt of £10 10s. from the St. George's Lodge, No. 32, West Lancashire, being the first moiety of £21, to constitute the W.M. for the time being, a Vice-President. Such an instance of fraternal regard on the part of a deservedly esteemed lodge in a neighbouring province is at once a testimony to the good work in which the Province of Cheshire is engaged, and to the admirable masonic feeling which has always existed and still continues to animate the brethren of West Lancashire and Cheshire.

It is worthy of remark that these two provinces were the pioneers of provincial educational institutions, and the Committee are glad to find that the Province of Cornwall are just establishing an educational fund on the basis of that in Cheshire, whose rules and annual reports have materially influenced the Cornish brethren in their well timed and excellent determination.

Before closing their Report, the Committee desire to express their heartfelt thankfulness to the Giver of all Good for the marked success which has attended the efforts of the friends and supporters of the Institution, from its foundation to the present day. Much as has been done, however, still there remains a great deal more to be accomplished; and in the Province of Cheshire, where, under the benignant sway of the R. W. the Lord de Tabley, Provincial Grand Master, Freemasonry has in recent years so greatly flourished, there is every reason to hope and expect that no child of a deceased or worthy distressed brother in the province be left without the most precious boon that can be bestowed, a sound and liberal education. With confidence, therefore, the Committee commend the Institution to the most favourable consideration of the Craft, collectively and individually, assured that their appeal will not be in vain, for in this holy cause in behalf of the orphan the labours of the brethren will be before the Lord, and their recompense will be with their God. So mote it be. 18th March, 1872.

The five candidates for the benefit of the charity were separately introduced, and grants were made as follows: for education, one child, £8; two children, £10 a year each; for advancement in life, one child, four guineas, and one child, five guineas.

The previous grants for the education of fifteen other children were renewed for the coming year.

A vote of thanks to the Mersey Lodge for the use of their elegant suite of rooms for the meeting; to the indefatigable Secretaries, Bros. John P. Platt, and F. K. Stevenson; to the Honorary Treasurer, Bro. Edward Gardner Willoughby; and to the Chairman, concluded the proceedings.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE BRO. CHAS. D. ASTLEY, OF DUBLIN.

The remains of the late Bro. Charles D'Olier Astley, were committed to the earth yesterday morning in Mount Jerome Cemetery, with all the solemnity which the office of the Church could impart. The large attendance of brethren of the Masonic Craft attested the esteem in which the deceased was held as Grand Superintendent of Works of the Order, while the considerable body of fellow-officials who followed his remains to the grave afforded ample evidence of the good feeling and respect entertained for him while a prominent officer in the architect's department of the Board of Public Works.

His death, at the early age of fifty years, was deeply mourned by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and it was determined that his obsequies should be made the occasion of bearing testimony to his sterling worth and good qualities.

The funeral left Longford-place, Monkstown, the late residence of the deceased, at half-past eight o'clock. The body was enclosed in a suite of coffins, the external being of polished oak, with brass mountings, the breastplate bearing the following inscription:—

"CHARLES D. ASTLEY,
Departed this life
17th March, 1872,
Aged 50 years."

The chief mourners were Dr. Astley, of Dover, and the Rev. Mr. Astley, brothers of the deceased; James Owen, Architect to the Board of Public Works; Alfred J. Aldrich, Wm. Deaker, Dr. John A. Baker, and the Rev. Benjamin Gibson.

The funeral cortege proceeded along the Rock-road and by Merrion to Ball's Bridge, where it was met by a large concourse of citizens in carriages. A procession having been formed, it moved on by the direct route to St. Patrick's Cathedral, where the remains were received by the officiating clergymen and the members of the choir at the north door.

The brethren attending entered at the south door, and took up their positions immediately behind the chief mourners, as the body was borne into the church and placed in front of the chancel.

The Rev. J. J. MacSorley, Grand Chaplain, read the first part of the Service for the Burial of the Dead, and the choir sang the appointed psalms to the music of Beethoven's "Marche Funèbre" with peculiarly solemn effect, which was much heightened by the impressive spectacle afforded by the presence of over three hundred brethren attired in full Masonic clothing.

The Rev. H. H. Westby, Past Grand Chaplain, having read the Lesson from 1 Cor., xv., 20.

The Rev. Lord Plunket, Grand Chaplain, ascended the pulpit, and addressed the congregation. He said that while the solemn words that they had just been listening to from God's Holy Word were still ringing in their ears, and before they were called upon to follow the remains of all that was earthly of their dear brother to the grave, he would ask them for a few moments to pause, and try to learn some of the lessons that a scene such as the present was fitted to teach them all. He would especially address himself to those brethren of the ancient Order with which their dear brother had been so long, actively, and honourably identified. For himself, he felt that if ever the responsibility of the position he occupied as Grand Chaplain of the Order should weigh upon his mind more than upon another occasion, it should be upon an occasion like the present, when their hearts were all softened by the contemplation of the departure from amongst them of one well and universally beloved, and when they had the thought that their own time for being called to the kingdom to come might be nearer than they imagined. It was his great privilege and responsibility at all times to help by his ministrations in their councils. He spoke now to men whose time was taken up necessarily with the cares of this world, and whose duties involved engagement from morning until night; but it was well that they should thus, at times, be compelled to look death in the face, remember what death is, and ask themselves what they were doing, and whither were they going. He could not help on that occasion recalling the calm, gentle, dignified countenance of their departed brother; he could not help thinking how he won the respect and esteem of all who knew him; how earnestly he devoted himself to the interests of the Order and the Charities connected with it; how conscientious and earnest a Christian he was known to them all to be, and how deeply regretted he was by each and all.

Greene's Anthem, Psalm xxxix., v. 5, "Lord, make me to know mine end," was then sung by the choir, and the duet being admirably given by Masters Polden and Marchant.

The remains were again borne to the hearse, and the procession having been re-formed, the cortege—which, by this time, had been largely increased—moved on to Mount Jerome Cemetery.

Among those who attended were R. W. Robert William Shekleton, D.G.M.; Hon. Judge Townsend, P.D.G.M.; R.W. Arthur Bushe, G. Treas.; R.W. Maxwell C. Close, G. Sec.; R.W. the Rev. The final words of the burial service were then read, and the grave closed over all that was mortal of a good man, an esteemed friend, and an upright Christian.

The funeral arrangements were entrusted to Messrs. Arthur Jones and Son, St. Stephen's Green, by whom they were carried out in a most commendable manner.

CITY OF LONDON MASONIC LIFE-BOAT FUND CONCERT.

We regret that want of space prevented us from noticing, in due time, a grand concert given in aid of the above fund, under the patronage of the Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, and under the direction of W. Bro. Herr Ganz, G.O., in the spacious and magnificent hall of the City Terminus Hotel (which, with every accommodation, was given for the occasion by Bro. Spencer) on Monday sennight. We must not, however, late though it is, leave unrecorded the zeal, generosity, and success of all concerned. To give a concert is, no doubt, an easy thing, but to make it a success is a very arduous and laborious one; and too much praise could hardly be given to the Honorary Secretary, Bro. Henry Chapman, and the Chairman of the Committee, Bro. William Carpenter, for such zealous and successful labours, as can be duly appreciated only by the experienced in such matters. A more complete success, artistically, numerically, and therefore pecuniarily, so far as the size of the hall would permit, could not be realised—the only regrettable fact being, that, as the hall is not elastic, hundreds were obliged to be refused admission. Bro. Ganz, who generously undertook the direction of the concert, must feel as much honoured at finding so many of his talented professional—may we say sisters? ready to go hand-in-hand with him to a good work, as he must have been pleased at seeing so many professional brethren uniting in the honour and sharing the honours with them, and the hearty, and generous labours of them all crowned with such complete success. Where all was excellent, it would be invidious to signalise, but we cannot refrain from expressing our admiration of a charming new song, "Sing, Sweet Bird," composed by Brother Ganz. We must content ourselves with recording the names of those artistes, whose talent and generosity were so signally successful. The ladies—all honour to them!—were Miss Edith Wynn, Mme. Florence Lancia, Mme. Osborne Williams, Mme. Poole, Miss Ransford, Miss Janet Haydon, and Miss Banks; and the gentlemen were Brothers Ciabatta, George Perren, Montem Smith, Edwin Ransford, Frederick Penna, Frank Elmore, Carl Stepan, the new tenor, Mr. Pearson, (a pupil of Bro. Kingsbury's), and eight gentlemen of the St. Michael's Glee Club, under the direction of Bro. Richard Limpus, vocalists; and, aiding in the work as accompanists, were Bros. Lehmeier and Kingsbury. Such perfect success, without a hitch or drawback, rarely rewards even the most zealous, and we have only to add, in justice to our generous and highly gifted brethren the Chevalier de Kontski and Herr Ganz, that, artistically, their "Grand Duo," and the Chevalier's "Grand Fantasia," were the crowning points. We trust that the gratification afforded to their audience will be more than repaid alike, to them: and all their coadjutors, when reading of fellow-creatures saved, they say to themselves with heartfelt gratitude to the G.A. O.T.U.; "I helped to float that Lifeboat."

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

MASONIC ORPHAN BOYS' SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

The annual general meeting of the Board of Directors of this Institution was held on Thursday, 14th inst, at the Freemasons' Hall, Dublin. The brethren sat down to breakfast at half-past eight o'clock, having partaken of which they adjourned to the boardroom.

The chair was taken by R. W. Bro. Shekleton, Deputy Grand Master, Senior Vice-President. There was a very large attendance.

Bros. Thomas Valentine and James Girdwood attended as a deputation from Belfast.

Bro. Dr. Smyly read the following annual report.

"Your Committee, in laying before the Governors this, their fourth annual report, have much gratification in being able to state that the Masonic Orphan Boys' School has made satisfactory progress during the past year. The amount invested since last report has been £1,000, and the entire sum at present standing in Four per Cent. India Stock. and Masonic Hall Company's Shares, in the name of the Trustees of the Institution, is £4,791 19s. 1d; while the cash balance at the bank is £185 5s. 8d. The revenue derived from subscriptions and donations for the year 1871 has amounted to £1,149 19s., being more than £300 in excess of that for 1870. The expenditure has increased by a little more than £100, caused by the increased number of pupils.

"The subjoined audited accounts show the details of this.

"The number of orphans at present maintained and educated is thirteen, being an addition of three boys to the number on the roll at last report. Of these, one has, under exceptional circumstances, been placed at Holywood School, near Belfast; the other twelve are still at the Society's Incorporated School at Santry. The reports of the progress of the boy who is at Holywood (George Macartney) are of the most satisfactory character, and the pupils who are at Santry are also making good progress in their studies, and the reports of their health and conduct throughout the year have been satisfactory.

"Your Committee are much indebted to the local Treasurers in the several masonic provinces for their exertions on behalf of the School, and for the several sums collected and forwarded by them.

"Bro. Gumbleton deserves especial thanks for his exertions amongst the members of the order in England, as do also these brethren themselves for their liberal aid to our charity. Our warmest thanks are also due to our Consulting Medical Officer, Mr. Porter, Surgeon to Her Majesty; our Bankers, the Royal Bank of Ireland; and our Stockbrokers, Messrs. Boyle, Low, Murray and Co., for the most valuable, kind, and gratuitous services which they have each respectively rendered.

"Your Committee have to announce that a legacy of £500 was bequeathed by the late Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Kingston, J.G.D. This, however, has not as yet been received.

"A growing desire for the establishment of the school on a liberal footing, as an exclusively masonic institution, having been found to exist amongst the Governors, the Committee thought it most advisable to obtain information on the subject, and accordingly appointed a sub-committee to consider and report thereon. A copy of this report has been placed in the hands of each subscriber.

"The matter was of such importance that the Committee considered that it should be referred to the general body of the Governors, and they do not venture even to express an opinion upon it. Whatever decision the Governors arrive at, the Committee will endeavour to carry out to the best of their ability.

"Your Committee regret that one of your Hon. Secretaries, Bro. the Rev. Henry H. J. Westby, has tendered his resignation, both as Honorary Secretary and also as Trustee. It would be impossible to over-estimate Bro. Westby's zeal on behalf of your school. Prominent among its founders, and untiring in his exertions, he merits the gratitude of the Governors and of the Order. Bro. Westby has been pressed to withdraw his resignation, but has refused to do so. It will therefore be necessary at the present meeting to fill the vacated offices.

"Your Committee have no reason to think that the Masonic order, which contains so much of the wealth and influence of this country, will, (in the event of your deciding to have a distinct Masonic Boys' Orphan School or Institution) fail to support so deserving a charity with the necessary funds, more especially as we have but two charities connected with the Order—our Male and Female Orphan Schools.

"In conclusion your Committee earnestly solicit liberal contributions from the brethren, to enable them to increase the number of orphans on the roll, and pray that the Father of the fatherless may bless your work of charity."

Bro. Captain Harte read the statement of accounts.

The report and statement of accounts were both unanimously received and adopted.

The following brethren were elected a Committee of Management for the ensuing year, viz. The Right Hon. and Rev. Lord Plunket, Sir John M. Stewart, Bart, the Rev. J. J. MacSorley, Maxwell Close, W. E. Gumbleton, Robert Warren, Alex. Dixon, Dr. Smyly, William Allen J. Stewart Kincaid, G. H. Major, Theophilus St. George, E. W. Maunsell, Robert Courtenay, S. B. Oldham, Rt. Hon. H. E. Chatterton, Hon. J. F. Townsend, Rev. A. Galbraith, Capt. Vesey Davoren, Thomas Valentine, J. H. Jessop, C. H. Woodruff, Dr. Wilson, Samuel Bolton, S. N. Lane, Francis Quin, W. S. Tracy, S. T. Bradburne, Chas. T. Walmisley, and Harry Hodges.

Bros. Dr. Smyly and G. H. Major were elected Honorary Secretaries.

The Chairman declared Henry George Wilson, son of the late Bro. George Robert Wilson, admitted as a pupil of the Institution.

The following was the scrutineers' report of the result of the voting:

Wilson	134	O'Neill	27
Sweetman	108	Barnett	18
Hendley.....	72	Waters	16
Verdon	69	Corry	16
Ferguson	44	Thornton	5
Owen	44	Godbey	5
Sayers	31

The report of the Sub-Committee was read and very fully discussed, after which it was unanimously resolved:—

"That the Board of Governors are of opinion that the time has now arrived for taking active steps for the establishment of a Masonic Orphan Boys' School, on an independent footing, but do not agree with some of the details set forth by the Sub-Committee; and do, therefore, refer the report back to the General Committee, with a request that they will prepare a plan more in accordance with the views expressed at this meeting, and submit the same to a general meeting of the Governors, to be convened when they shall think fit to do so, and that it be a distinct instruction to the Committee that they are to leave out of their consideration any plan for the admission of other boys into the proposed Institution save the sons of deceased Freemasons.

It was proposed by Bro. Philip R. Patman, P.M. 153, seconded by Bro. Hamilton, and unanimously resolved—

"That we have received the resignation of brother the Rev. Henry Westby, as Hon. Secretary, with regret, and that the best thanks of the Board of Governors are due, and hereby tendered to him for his efficient services in connection with the school."

The Secretary reported the receipt of the following donations:—

George Lambert, London, £3 10s.; James Jameson, Airfield, £15; John Suffren, Belfast, £12; James Henry, Belfast, £10; Lodges—9, Dungannon; 25, Dublin; 137, Ballinasloe; and 248, Roscommon, £10 each,

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

PANMURE LODGE (No. 720.)—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Monday the 18th inst., when were present:—Bros. H. F. Huntley, W.M.; John Thomas, P.M.; J. M. Young, P.M., and Sec.; H. F. Hodges, S.W.; T. Porve, J.W.; H. Payne, S.D.; J. Pulman, J.D.; W. Withall, I.G.; also Bros. Lane, Woolfe, Trusler, G. Lilley, Holmes, R. W. Huntley, Maddern, Bye, Mansell, Dr. Williams, and visitors Bros. James Stevens, P.M., 720 and 1216; W. S. Cockett, 1216; and Wright. The lodge having been duly opened the following gentlemen were balloted for and approved, and being in attendance were severally introduced and initiated into the order, viz.—Mr Edward George Cumming, Mr. John Leonard, and Mr. William Smith. The ceremony was in each case performed with that perfect care and attention to detail, which this lodge is becoming justly celebrated for, and which is especially due to the valuable aid afforded by Bro. Thomas as preceptor to its Lodge of Instruction. Bro. Maddern applied to the W.M. for instruction how to act under the following circumstances.—A friend of his, connected with the Board of Trade, had placed in his charge a certificate of Grand Lodge, a Master Mason's apron, and a pair of gloves enclosed in a leather case, and which had been washed ashore on the English coast and had been found by one of the coast guard. The W.M. considered that publicity should be given to the fact, and then probably some information might be obtained in reference thereto. The certificate is dated 5th March, 1869, and was granted to Bro. William Sandrey, of the Walton Lodge, 1086, Kirkdale. It was resolved that the Kirkdale Lodge should be written to on the subject. The votes of the Masonic Schools were given to Bro. Thomas in support of the case of the son of Bro. Gates, a P.M. of the lodge. The lodge was then closed and a pleasant hour was subsequently spent in refreshment after labour.

BURGOYNE LODGE, (No. 902.)—This prosperous and highly efficient lodge held its ordinary meeting for March, on the 25th inst., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Simmons, who was well supported by his officers and a numerous attendance of the brethren of the lodge, together with several visitors, among we noticed Bros. Cooper, 834; Stanton, 130; Jackson, 167; Deacon, 205; and Gibbs, P.M. 15. The W.M. at this, his first opportunity for work since his installation, had the gratification of admitting to the light Messrs. Thomas Gilbert and Henry Charles Jeffreys. The ceremony was performed in a very able and impressive manner, and Bro. Simmons bids fair to prove the reverse of an exception to the efficient bead roll of Masters of this energetic lodge. After labour the brethren adjourned to refreshment, where after the usual loyal toasts, briefly prefaced by the W.M., and heartily responded to by the brethren, Bro. Henry Smith, I.P.M., proposed "The health of the W.M.," and highly eulogised the proficiency displayed by him in working that evening. The W.M. briefly responded, and in proposing the toast of "The Visitors," remarked upon the happiness the Burgoyne Lodge always experienced in seeing a numerous attendance of guests at its table. The visitors replied individually at some length, each one remarking on the truly Masonic concord displayed in the lodge, Bro. Stanton observing that this was to him peculiarly conspicuous, and a subject on which he might be presumed to be well qualified to speak inasmuch, as he had seen the working of Masonry in numerous lodges in every country in Europe, and the brotherly love and good feeling displayed by the Burgoyne, he had never seen surpassed, nor had its proficiency been excelled by lodges which claimed to be more influential and were certainly more strong in number. In response to the toast of the initiates Bros. Gilbert and Jefferys, concurred in expressing their sense of the impressiveness of the ceremony, enhanced as it was by the rendering of the W.M. Bro. Poynter, P.M. and Treasurer, responded to the toast of his health, with which had been coupled that of the esteemed Secretary, Bro. Scotcher, unfortunately absent through ill health. After a feeling allusion to the cause of this worthy brother's place at the table being vacant, Bro. Poynter observed that all the visiting brethren had remarked on the good feeling and unanimity that appeared to prevail among the members of the Burgoyne. He (Bro. Poynter) could assure the visitors they were always so pleased to meet around that festive board, that what they noticed on any one occasion might be taken as an indication of the normal state of the lodge, they were, he, the speaker, was thankful to say, always in amity. One of the visiting brethren had alluded to lodges more numerous in their members, but he (Bro. Poynter) would remind his worthy brother of what was sometimes said in another place—in an arena for the discussion of subjects most properly prohibited among Freemasons—there it was propounded that votes must be weighed as well as counted; the same thing held good of Masonry, and the influence of a lodge must be measured more by the quality than by the number of its members—more by the excellence, or the reverse, of its working than by its numerical strength. The volunteer corps from which the Burgoyne Lodge sprang had for its motto the proud boast "Peritia potius quam vi"—a motto that rendered obligatory upon those who assumed it— inexorably obligatory, if they would escape the charge of a nauseating vainglorious egotism, indefatigable assiduity in the acquisition of ability. He claimed, however, for the Burgoyne Lodge the right to bear the motto of its parent corps, he believed that they had hitherto proved, and trusted that in the future they would continue to prove, true to the tradition that whatever influence they as Masons had already or hoped in the future to acquire, should be by skill rather than by strength. (Cheers). The Wardens and Junior Officers, having been duly honoured, the evening's entertainment, which had been enlivened by some capital songs, and recitations by the brethren, concluded with the Tyler's toast, and the company separated.

MACDONALD LODGE (No. 1216.)—In evidence of the continued prosperity of this well-known lodge, an important emergency meeting was held at the Head Quarters of the First Surrey Rifles, at Camberwell, on Wednesday, the 13th inst. The W.M., Bro. S. H. Wagstaff, was supported by his I.P.M. Bro. James Stevens, Bros. G. Waterell, S.W.; John Thomas, P.M., as J.W., (in the absence of Bro. Bridges, at the festival of the Boy's School); Dr. Eugene Cronin, Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; Hastie, J.D.; Larham, I.G. and a large number of members and visitors, amongst the latter being Bros. Lazarus, P.M.; Gompertz, P.M.; Copestake, P.M., and several others. The lodge was opened shortly after four o'clock, and, with an interval of about half an hour for refreshments, working was continued until nearly eleven. The business consisted of raising Bros. W. Gray, W. S. Cockett, A. Wilson, and J. B. Schott; passing Bros. R. H. Garland, and W. C. Hale; and initiating Messrs. H. T. Peckham, and T. A. Harper. The greater portion of each ceremony was performed separately for the respective candidates, a mode of working which not only secures a due appreciation of each degree by the recipients thereof, but tends greatly to the utmost perfection in every officer of the lodge. On this occasion the great exertions of the W.M. and his assistants were crowned with great success, and during the interval for refreshment, the visitors generally, and Bro. Lazarus (who is a well-known Mason of 50 years standing) particularly congratulated the lodge on having gratified them with an exhibition of thorough Masonic working. We had the pleasure to learn that although only established less than four years, the Macdonald Lodge has secured its exceedingly handsome and appropriate furniture free from all liability, besides having liberally supported the Masonic charities, and extended its hospitality without stint. We cordially wish the lodge continued prosperity, and acknowledge the courtesy with which we, in common with all its visitors, have ever been received at its meetings.

METROPOLITAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—This flourishing lodge met on Friday evening, the 15th inst., at the Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, for the purpose of working the fifteen sections. Bro. Hogard, S.W. 205, in the chair, supported by Bro. Brett, P.G.P., the worthy Preceptor of the lodge as P.M.; Bros. Willing, S.W.; Dwarber, J.W.; and an assemblage of forty-four brethren. The sections were most ably worked by the W.M., assisted by the following brethren, namely in the Third	„ A. W. Stead.

The W.M. having risen for the first and second time, several brethren were proposed as joining members, and on his rising for the third time, Bro. Brett proposed, and Bro. Stacey seconded a resolution, that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes of the lodge to Bro. Hogard, for the efficient manner in which he had fulfilled the onerous duties of the chair, also, that as a further mark of their appreciation of his services, he be elected an honorary member of the lodge. This was carried unanimously, and after Bro. Hogard had briefly expressed his acknowledgements of the honour conferred upon him, the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer, and adjourned. This Lodge of Instruction meets every Friday evening at 7 o'clock, and when we say that Bro. Brett is the Preceptor we need add no remarks as to the way in which the ceremonies and sections are worked, but can heartily recommend those brethren in search of Masonic knowledge to pay it a visit.

The three candidates for further participation in the mysteries of the Craft being unavoidably absent, the meeting for a short time was resolved into a Lodge of Instruction, in the third degree, under the able preceptorship of the W.M. On the lodge being resumed in the first degree the W.M. addressed the brethren as follows:—"I have now a pleasant duty to perform; certainly one as agreeable as any I can hope to have to discharge during my year of office. It is that of presenting to my I.P.M., Bro. Stretton, a mark of the esteem in which he is held by us all, and of our appreciation of the manner in which he discharged the duties devolving on the brother who has the honour of occupying this chair. By his courteous, genial conduct and unbounded hospitality, during his Mastership Bro. Stretton has won golden opinions, from all. Our brethren of the sister lodge are I am sure, of the same opinion as ourselves; viz.—that those duties were never performed by any Master with greater satisfaction to the brethren. Bro. Stretton, I have much pleasure in presenting to you this Past Master's jewel, on behalf of the lodge, and I think you will value it none the less when I tell you that the vote which resulted in this presentation was unanimous. I trust that this jewel, with its wearer, may be constantly seen in this lodge for many years, and that you may one day have the pleasure of seeing a similar honour conferred with the same hearty goodwill on your son." The jewel, an exceedingly handsome one, bore the following inscription. "Presented to Worshipful Bro. Clement Stretton, I.P.M., P. Prov. G.R., by the members of St. John's Lodge, No. 279, Leicester, as a mark of fraternal regard, and appreciation of his courtesy and geniality during the year of his Mastership. St. John's day, 1871." Bro. Stretton replied in the following terms:—"Worshipful Master, [R.W. Prov.G., Master, Wardens, and Brethren, I feel it very difficult to find words to express to you my heartfelt thanks for your kindness in presenting me with this handsome jewel. I assure you I most thoroughly appreciate the kindly feeling which prompted you to confer upon me such a distinguished mark of your Masonic favour. I shall especially prize this handsome jewel as a memento of the happy year during which, by your kindness and ready assistance, I was enabled to occupy the chair of the lodge. Yet although I relied on the kindness of my more learned brethren for the due performance of the ceremonies, I can lay claim to an anxious and earnest desire to promote the harmony of the lodge, and to cultivate that brotherly love which is the heart and soul, and glory of our ancient fraternity. This jewel will possess a further interest, inasmuch as it is commemorative of the initiation and majority of my son, which occurred during my mastership, and which will add considerably to its value as a heirloom. Brethren, I cannot prove to you my appreciation of your gift better than in my constant attendance at the lodge, and wearing it; and I assure you I shall never place this badge upon my breast without being reminded of the kindness I have received at your hands." On the lodge being closed in due form, the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and to finish an extremely pleasant and enjoyable meeting. Bro. Goodman, from Glasgow, in replying to the toast of the visitors, paid a high, and well-merited tribute of praise to Bro. Crow, W.M., and expressed his satisfaction with the excellent working of the lodge, a superiority only to be attained by the acquisition of a thorough knowledge of our ancient rites and the impressive rendering of the same by thoughtful and cultivated minds.

Mark Masonry.

KENT.

RAMSGATE.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 129).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, Ramsgate, on Thursday, the 21st inst., and the proceedings thoroughly evidenced the great interest taken in Mark Masonry in that town. It having been rumoured that favourable reports in respect of the working of the lodge had reached the M.W.G.M., and that he desired personally to satisfy himself thereof, an invitation was forwarded to him, and Bro. Portal accepted the same. Preparations were therefore made to do honour to the occasion, and the brethren added to their excellent and spacious lodge room a capital chamber organ and a masonic carpet of beautiful design and quality, surrounded by a border of the colours of the R.A. ribbon, which, together with the original superior furniture and appointments of the lodge, formed a perfect tout ensemble. The M.W. Grand Master arrived punctually at the opening of the lodge. Amongst those present were V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.O.; W. Bro. John Read, P.G.Org.; Capt. G. Barlow, Prov. G.J.W. Middlesex and Surrey; C. J. Burgess, P.G.J.D. Middlesex and Surrey; Bros. G. Neall, W.M.; L. Finch, S.W.; T. H. G. Snowden, M.O.; J. L. Ellerm, S.O.; J. J. Darby, J.O.; Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, Chaplain; B. Z. Hiscocks, Sec. and Reg.; J. W. Smith, S.D.; T. S. Clarke, J.D.; G. Miles, I.G.; H. Wootton, W. A. Valon, C. J. Smith, A. Gardner, J. Finch and others. The lodge having been opened by Bro. Stevens (acting for the W.M.), and the minutes of the previous meeting confirmed, the M.W.G.M. was saluted by the brethren in due form. Bro. G. Page, of the Lewises Lodge, was balloted for, approved, and advanced with full ceremony, the musical service being under the direction of Bro. Read, who officiated as Organist. As every officer was thoroughly acquainted with his duty, the exceedingly beautiful and instructive ceremony of advancement was rendered to perfection, and elicited from the Grand Master expressions of great commendation. At the request of the acting W.M., Bro. J. W. Smith delivered the lecture of the degree. Bro. Lewis Finch, the W.M. elect, was then presented, and was installed as W.M. by Bro. Stevens, who, after the usual salutes and appointments, completed the ceremony with the customary addresses. The officers of the lodge for the ensuing year are:—Bros. Snowden, S.W.; Ellerm, J.W.; Darby, M.O.; Wootton, S.O. and Treas.; Clarke, J.O.; Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, Chaplain; B. Z. Hiscocks, Sec. and Reg.; J. W. Smith, S.D.; G. Miles, J.D.; Valon, I.G.; E. J. Smith, D.C.; Friend and Compton, Stewards; and Meager, O.G. The thanks of the lodge were unanimously voted to Bro. G. Neall for his services as W.M. during the past year, and to Bro. Stevens for the cordial assistance he had rendered on this as on previous occasions. The Grand Master then addressed the lodge in terms of high appreciation of the manner in which the ceremonies had been conducted, and assured the brethren that he had never witnessed more perfect working. As a record of his expression of that fact, he would at once inscribe his remarks in the minute-book, and add thereto his best wishes for the prosperity and further progress of the lodge. Propositions for advancement at the ensuing meeting having been taken, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, most liberally and reasonably provided by Bro. Hiscocks, the Secretary of the lodge, and proprietor of the Royal. Both in regard to quality of viands and wines, and to perfect attendance, a more agreeable dinner we have not partaken of; and we could wish that what is so well done so far from the metropolis should be imitated in many establishments accommodating London lodges. The M.W.G.M., at the special request of the newly-installed W.M., presided; and, on the cloth being cleared, the usual loyal and masonic toasts were duly honoured. Those of "The Queen" and "The Prince of Wales" were accompanied by appropriate anthems. That of the M.W.G.M., proposed by the W.M. in terms of grateful recognition of the honour done to the lodge by his presence on that occasion, was responded to by the M.W.G.M. himself. After a comprehensive review of the history of the Mark Degree from a very remote date to the present, and noticing the now rapid increase of the number of lodges, and the assured successful progress of Mark Masonry, the M.W.G.M. congratulated the Holmesdale Lodge upon the position in which he found it at the end of only one year from his granting its warrant. He was pleased to think that so much zeal and attention had been given to the working of the ceremony and the general conduct of the lodge business. He was at no loss to decide as to whose instruction and advice they had given attention, and this reference brought him most appropriately to the toast of "The Deputy Grand Mark Master and the Grand Officers," with which toast he should couple the name of Bro. Stevens, whose services to the lodge he observed were thoroughly appreciated and recognised. He, the M.W.G.M., fully concurred in the emendations and improvements in the ritual of the degree which had been effected by two of his Past Grand Overseers, of whom Bro. Stevens was one; and he had no doubt that the Board of General Purposes would adopt those improvements without delay. Bro. Stevens briefly returned thanks, and expressed his acknowledgements for the honour which the lodge had conferred on him. Bro. Read, P.G. Org., also responded to the toast. "The Provincial Grand Officers present," "The Worshipful Master," "The Immediate Past Master, Bro. Neall," "The Newly-Advanced Brother," and "The Officers of the Lodge," were respectively proposed and responded to. The claims of masonic charities were not forgotten, the toast of the "Mark Benevolent Fund" being recognised by a liberal subscription; and the extremely happy and pleasant evening, which had been further enlivened by the excellent songs of several members, was brought to a close.

Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form, the minutes of the meeting for the constitution of the Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Guildford, on the 2nd of June, 1871, were confirmed. The report of the Provincial Grand Lodge Committee then appointed to consider and arrange the bye-laws was submitted, and the bye-laws having been read, the report and the subsequent proposition for their adoption, were confirmed. The roll of Lodges was called over, from which it appeared that thirteen lodges, under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Grand Lodge, are now in working order. The roll of Provincial Grand Officers was then read, and the R.W. Provincial Grand Master made several appointments, and invested Brethren then present. Bro. C. H. Levander required information as to whether or not the whole of the lodges working in Middlesex and Surrey, including those in the Metropolitan District, were intended to be placed under the jurisdiction of this province, and the Provincial Grand Master, in reply, stated that for the present that that question remained undecided, but that a reference would be made to Grand Mark Lodge on the subject, and to ascertain if a home district would be constituted as in the Craft. Some further business of minor detail having been disposed of, the Provincial Grand Master intimated that the ensuing meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge would be held at Richmond, in June next. Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in ample form, and the meeting adjourned.

At the banquet which followed, the Provincial Brethren were joined by the members of the newly created Gresvenor Lodge, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by a considerable number of Mark Master Masons, who testified to the great success of the afternoon's proceedings.

Warden of Regalia; Blain, Brown, Bromley, Newton, Horrocks, Chatwood, Flitcroft, Entwisle, Rostron, Rev. Thomas Wilson; also Sir Knight Stephen Smith, of the Jerusalem Encampment, Manchester, P. Prov. G. Treasurer. The E.C., Sir Knight John Fletcher, was unfortunately unable to be present, he being engaged in London on important business, and in his absence Sir Knight W. H. Wright presided. The encampment being opened, the ballot was taken for Comp. Wm. Green, of St. John's Chapter, No. 221, Bolton, as a candidate for installation, the result being that he was unanimously elected. Comp. Robert Grime, of St. John's Chapter, No. 221, who had been previously elected, was duly installed a Knight of the Order by Sir Knight W. H. Wright, the duties of Expert being performed by Sir Knight Brockbank. Sir Knight Wright was re-elected Treasurer of the Encampment, and Frater Wm. Dawson, Equerry. Sir Knight Wright, in the name of the E.C., then appointed the following officers of the encampment for the ensuing year, viz.:—Sir Knights Rev. Thomas Wilson, Prelate; William Blain, First Captain; James Brown, Second Captain; G. P. Brockbank, Registrar; W. H. Wright, Treasurer; J. W. Taylor, Almoner; James Newton, Expert; Robert Harwood, First Standard-Bearer; James Horrocks, Second Standard-Bearer; Samuel Chatwood, Captain of Lines; John Bromley, First Herald; J. M. Rutter, Second Herald; and Frater William Dawson, Equerry. The business being concluded, the encampment was closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to refreshment.

MANCHESTER.—Jerusalem Encampment.—The Knights of this encampment met at the Masonic Hall, Manchester, on Monday, the 11th inst.; under command of their E.C., Sir Knight J. McDonald Smith. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, and the muster roll called over, Comps. Charles H. Wilson and Henry Smith were exalted to the degree of Knights Templar. The throne was then occupied by the V.E.D.P.G.C., Sir Knight W. H. Wright, who proceeded to instal Sir Knight James Arthur Birch, as Eminent Commander for the ensuing year. The ceremony was exceedingly interesting throughout. The following Sir Knights were appointed to the various offices:—Rev. J. L. Figgins, Prelate; T. R. Williams, First Captain; U. Nicholls, Second Captain; J. M. Wike, P.E.C., Director of Ceremonies; J. Chadwick, P.E.C., Treasurer; P. H. Jenkins, Registrar; John Smith, Expert; G. Brett, First Standard-Bearer; B. Smith, Second Standard-Bearer; W. O. Walker, Almoner; C. H. Coates, Captain of Lines; P. Chorlton, First Herald; J. H. Hooper, Second Herald. Among the visitors were Sir Knights W. H. Wright, V.E.D.P.G.C.; Brockbank, P.G. Chan., First G.C. of England; Woodcock, Prov. G. Chan., Cheshire; Pratt, P.E.C.; Warren, P.E.C.; and Beresford, Prov. G. Aid., Cheshire. At the conclusion of business, the Sir Knights sat down to a most excellent banquet, after which the usual loyal and heraldic toasts were proposed and responded to, and a very enjoyable evening spent, the proceedings being enlivened by appropriate music and songs.

CONSECRATION OF THE ST. HUGH LODGE, No. 1386, LINCOLN.

There was a large assemblage of the brethren at the Masonic Hall, Grantham-street, Lincoln, on Wednesday, the 20th inst., to witness the constitution and dedication of the St. Hugh Lodge, No. 1386.

A lodge was formed at 5.30, p.m., by the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Lincolnshire, Bro. W. H. Smyth, who elected the officers for the occasion:—Bros. R. J. Ward, W.M. 279, as S.W.; E. J. Cullen, S.W. 297, as J.W.; F. R. Larken, P. Prov. G.S.B., P.M. 297, as Registrar and D.C.; Rev. Haskett Smith, Chaplain 297, as Chaplain; J. M. Read 297, as Sec.; Jno. Norton, P. Prov. G.P., P.M. 297, as S.D.; C. Pocklington 272, P. Prov. G.D., as J.D.; J. T. Tomlinson 588, P.G.A.D.C., as P.G. Supt. of Works; W. Watkins, P.G. Supt. of Works, I.P.M. 297, as I.G.; Baraclough 297, as Organist; and Box, P.G. Tyler, as Tyler.

After duly opening the lodge, the W.D. Prov. G.M., with praiseworthy ability conducted the whole of the ceremonial in a most impressive and marked Masonic manner, the responses and anthems having musical accompaniments. He then delivered to the brethren present an excellent and well versed oration on the true principles and virtues of Freemasonry, and immediately afterwards rehearsed the charges, and installed Bro. Jno. Glem Bayles, P.G.O., as the first W.M. of the Saint Hugh Lodge. The brethren then congratulated the new Master, and re-appointed the following officers, viz.:—Bros. Frederick and Henry Watson, S. and J.W.'s; W. Watkins, D.C.; Henry Hill, Sec.; C. Hayward, S.D.; Dr. G. M. Lowe, J.D.; and J. M. Read, I.G.

Bro. F. R. Larken, P. Prov. G.S.B., P.M. 297, rehearsed with well rendered effect the charges to the Wardens.

Bro. J. M. Woodall, P. Prov. G.S.W., North and East Riding, Yorkshire, delivered a pleasing congratulatory address to the new lodge.

Two new candidates for Freemasonry, and six joining brethren were proposed, which, with the thirty petition brethren, form a goodly number for the Saint Hugh Lodge to commence with.

The W.M. proposed that the best fraternal thanks of the members present be accorded to the W.D. Prov. G.M., for his courtesy and attendance, and for the truly Masonic manner in which he had so ably conducted the ceremonial. This was received with a hearty and unanimous response by the brethren.

The lodge was then closed, and about forty of the brethren adjourned at 7.30 to the Great Northern Hotel, to a sumptuous banquet prepared by Bro. Prickett, with his well known cuisine effect. The chair was occupied by the W.M. and he was supported by the W.D.P.G.M. and Prov. Grand Officers. The usual loyal Masonic, and clerical toasts, were duly honoured, able speeches being made by the W.M., and Provincial Grand Officers, and responded to with éclat. At intervals songs were sung, and thus passed a very enjoyable and convivial Masonic evening. The brethren retired at 11.30 p.m. In addition to those already named there were present at the lodge and banquet:—Bros. R. Hall, P.M. 297, P. Prov. G.W.; Dr. Harrison, P.M. 297, P.G.J.W.; R. C. Carline, P.M., P. Prov. G.A.D.C.; S. A. Armitage, 248, P.G.S.W.; M. Crowder, W.M. 838, P.G.S.B.; W. Cass 1010, P. Prov. G.D., N. and E. Riding Yorkshire; W. Mason 297, P. Prov. G.O.; A. Bode, Beständig Keit Lodge, Berlin; J. Laughton, P.M. 422, P.G.S.D.; and Rev. I. C. K. Saunders, Bayon s Lodge, 1286.

The number in the lodge was upwards of 60, and such fully demonstrated the necessity of new lodge rooms being provided in this ancient city.

This question of new lodge rooms has been taken up with a commendable spirit by the Lincoln Freemasons, for they, seeing the necessity of providing a good public concert room, have formed and started a limited liability company with a capital of £4000 in 800 £5 shares, for the building of spacious lodge rooms, a large concert hall, capable of seating 700 persons, specially designed for acoustic effect, with choir, a smaller hall, and the requisite accessory rooms.

Judging from the present appearance of the works in progress, which are situated in Newland, the directors of the limited company may congratulate themselves upon securing for the shareholders, ample per centage for the outlay. When these new masonic hall buildings are complete, I hope to communicate more fully thereon, for then the Witham, 297, and Saint Hugh 1386 Lodges, will be transferred to it from the Old Hall in Grantham Street.

SCOTCH MARK MASONRY IN LANCASHIRE.

The usual quarterly meeting of the Mark Lodge of St. Andrew, No. 22, S.C., was held on the 12th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper Street, Manchester.

There was not a numerous muster of the brethren. Only two of the candidates on the circular for advancement came forward.

The ceremony was performed by Bro. C. F. Matier, R.W.D.P.G.M., S.C., in his customary able manner.

At the close of the business Bro. J. G. Smith, initiated a conversation on the desirability of this lodge effecting a union with their brethren working under the Grand Lodge of M.M. Masons in England. Bro. J. G. Smith said there was a very unanimous feeling amongst the brethren of this lodge in favour of the union so much talked of and so long unnecessarily delayed. The brethren were getting weary of the policy of the leading and eminent brethren who had the conduct of the negotiations. He mentioned some of the handsome offers made by the Grand Master of England, to the Scotch Provincial Grand Officers of Lancashire, and asked Bro. Matier to state for the satisfaction of the brethren, in what position the negotiations now stood. Bro. W. Wayne, the Immediate Past Master of the lodge, bore testimony to the universality of the feeling which Bro. Smith had alluded to, and hoped that the union so much desired would be soon consummated. But come when it may he trusted it would be completed in a spirit of loyalty to our mother lodge.

Bro. Matier stated in reply to Bro. Gibb Smith, that negotiations were still in progress, and that he was not at liberty to say more on that point just now.

The lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 9 o'clock.

CONSECRATION OF THE GROSVENOR LODGE OF MARK MASTERS, No. 144.

A new lodge of Mark Master Masons under the title of the Grosvenor Lodge, was consecrated on Saturday, the 16th inst.; at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi, London, under very auspicious circumstances, and previously to the holding of a Special Grand Lodge of Middlesex and Surrey. The ceremony was attended by the R.W. Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett, Prov. Grand Master; the V.W. Bro. Frederick Davison, Deputy Prov. G.M.; V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.O.; V.W. Bro. F. Binckes, G. Sec.; W. Bro. W.B. Church, P.G.C., H. C. Levander, P.G.D.C., S. Rosenthal, P.G.D.C., John Thomas, Prov. G.S.B. H. F. Huntley, Prov. G. St. Bearer, Bros. Dawson, P.M. 8; T. J. Parker, C. P. Ward; C. Hammerton, Prov. Grand Sec.; J. Strachan, 104; E. Drewett, S. Dibden, J. Faulkner, J. J. Lowenthal, Hyde Pullen, C. Dumas, W. Platt, M. D. Loewenstarke, Capt. Burgess, R. T. Moore, C. A. Cottebrune, G. H. Henley, G. Neall, W.M. 129; W. Worrell, 104; S. C. Davison, Capt. Barlow, G. States, J. Boyd, and many other influential brethren. The consecrating officer, Bro. Fred. Binckes, supported by Bros. James Stevens, as S.W., and Bro. Dibdin, as J.W. opened a Mark Master's Lodge, and the brethren petitioning for the new lodge were ranged in due order and having been addressed on the nature of the meeting, the Warrant of Constitution was read, and the Grosvenor Lodge was formed and consecrated with full ceremony. The W.M. designate, the W. Bro. C. Hammerton, Prov. Grand Sec. was then duly installed in the first chair, and Bros. C. P. Ward, and T. R. Parker, the Wardens designate, were invested as S.W. and J.W. respectively. The following brethren were then appointed as officers, and invested, viz:—Bros. Lowenthal, M.O.; Levander, Sec.; W. B. Church, Treas.; the remaining officers being left open for appointment at the ensuing meeting. The respective addresses were delivered by the Installing Master, Bro. F. Binckes, who performed the whole of the arduous duty connected with both Consecration and Installation, in his usual careful and able manner. A large number of propositions for advancement were then taken, and other Masonic business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed, the brethren remaining to take part in the proceedings of the special meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge for Middlesex and Surrey, (of which a report will be found in another column), and to join the Provincial Brethren at the subsequent banquet.

DUBLIN INTELLIGENCE.—In our notice of the masonic compliment paid to Bro. James Flynn in the Masonic Hall, Dublin, on Monday evening, the 11th inst., we inadvertently omitted to notice that the vice-chair was occupied by Bro. Philip R. Patman, P.M., Lodge 153, and H.K.T. The presentation ornament was made to order by Bro. Charles Rankin, Nassau-street, and the richly illuminated address was executed by Mr. Charles Lusk O'Brien.

DIVISION OF THE PROVINCE OF WEST LANCASHIRE

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Referring to the remarks or "P.M., and P. Prov. G. Officer East Lancashire," probably there is a difference of arrangement between the geographical formation of a province and the creation of a Provincial Grand Master and his lodge.

Sec. 1, page 45 of the Book of Constitutions says:—

"The appointment of the Provincial Grand Master is a prerogative of the Grand Master, by patent, during pleasure, and invested with a rank and power in his particular district," and section 7, page 65 says, "that at the death, &c., of a Prov.G.M. the Prov. G. Lodge ceases to exist, until the appointment of a successor, whose authority can again establish it."

Nothing seems to be said about the demarcation of the province, but only, of the constitution of the Provincial Grand Lodge. It will be interesting to know if the locale of the Lancashire divisions is really fixed and somewhere recorded. Does the Grand Master's patent explain the boundary? If so then any objection, to a new line, on the part of East Lancashire will have weight, otherwise interference with the affairs of the Western Province may be out of place.

The question seems a very difficult one to approach; and my object in writing was to engage attention to what appears—by the notice of motion—a too summary way of altering the whereabouts, or packing up the West Lancashire Lodges and forwarding them into another province.

Thanks to Bro. W.M. Landless, 1256, of Fidelity, for correcting the mistaken statement that his lodge is in East Lancashire, I got the information from a Masonic Pocket Book for 1871; where it will be found at page 133, named under Lancashire East, and not under West Division.

Yours fraternally,

A SECRETARY OF WEST LANCASHIRE LODGE.

MASONIC BALLS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR, AND BROTHER,—

Your correspondent "Lupus" writes a very sensible letter in reply to me under the above heading. The only point on which we differ concerns the question about wearing the decorations in public of the degrees under the S.C. 33°. But I am not aware whether your correspondent "Lupus" includes the clothing. I know a case where a brother wore at a fancy dress ball (not Masonic) the full dress of a 30°. One of the S.C. 33° happened to be present, and reproved him. I am acquainted with two or three of the S.C. 33°, and I know they disapprove of the clothing on their degree being worn in public. Even for a Masonic Ball, permission would have to be obtained. I dare say the permission would be easily accorded. But if your correspondent in such a case refers merely to the decorations of the Black Eagle, the matter would be passed over as unimportant. Occasionally, brethren do dress themselves at their own discretion in public assemblies in the clothing of the High Degrees. I am not aware whether the authorities of the Order of the Temple have issued any prohibition.

Yours truly and fraternally,
W. L. A. 30°.

MASONIC BALL AT TORQUAY.

(To The Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR,—In your impression of the 2nd March, I perceive that "Lady Colquhoun" is reported as having attended the Masonic Ball, at Torquay, on the 12th February. I beg to inform you that there exists at present but one person entitled to that designation, but who is not the person in question.

The widow of my late relative, Sir Robert Colquhoun resides at Torquay, but having intermarried on the 3rd August, last year, with a Mr. William Adlair Atkinson, eight months after the decease of her first husband, is not justified in the unqualified assumption of the name of another existent person, although she might re-assume her maiden name of Cathrow, or any other pseudonym, or alias, which might suit her, without infringing the rights of others, or misleading the public.

Your obedient servant,

P. COLQUHOUN.

Reviews.

The Freemasons' Liber Musicus, Part I.; A collection of Traditional, Foreign and English Vocal and Instrumental Music for all the ceremonies of the Masonic Order. Edited by Bro. Dr. WILLIAM SPARK, P. Prov. G.O., West Yorkshire.

This is a perfect rade mecum for the Masonic lover of music, and we are sure that all brethren who have once heard the pleasing effect produced by the introduction of music at appropriate parts of the ceremonies, will be more than gratified at the admirable manner in which Bro. Dr. Spark, has grouped his various selections in Part I. of Liber Musicus.

The first part comprises marches, odes, anthems, voluntaries, and music suitable for Masonic festivities. Part two will be more especially devoted to Fellow Craft music, including a somewhat similar repertoire.

We heartily commend the good work which Bro. Dr. Spark has undertaken, and trust that every lodge will avail itself of the pleasure to be derived from his fraternal labours.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weakness and Debility.—Unless the blood be kept in a pure state, the constitution must be weakened and disease supervene. These wonderful Pills possess the power of neutralising and removing all contaminations of the blood and system generally. They quietly, but certainly overcome all obstructions tending to produce ill-health, and institute regular actions in organs that are faulty from derangement or debility. The dyspeptic, weak, and nervous, may rely upon these Pills as their best friends and comforters. They improve the appetite, and thoroughly invigorate the digestive apparatus. Holloway's Pills have long been known to be the surest preventives of liver complaints, dreadful dropsies, spasms, colic, constipation, and many other diseases always hovering round the feeble and infirm.—ADVT.

ELECTION—MAY, 1872.

ROYAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION FOR AGED FREEMASONS AND THE WIDOWS OF FREEMASONS.—The favour of your vote and interest is earnestly solicited on behalf of

Thomas Cartwright, Aged 77 Years.

He was initiated into the Temperance Lodge, No. 169, in 1851, exalted in the Domestic Chapter, No. 177, and has continued a subscribing member up to this time. Some years since he retired from business as a stevedore, with a moderate competency, but unwisely again embarked in business as a timber merchant, and through the recklessness of others has lost all his means, and now lives by the joint exertions of his aged wife by mangling clothes; he is sadly afflicted with deafness. Was a subscribing member to this Institution for some years.

His widow is left with Nine Children, all under 14 years of age (another shortly expected) with very inadequate means to educate and support them.

APRIL ELECTION, 1872.!

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—Your Votes and Interest are earnestly solicited on behalf of

Frederick Charles Gates,

Aged 7½ Years.

Son of the late Bro. JAMES HAYDEN GATES, of Clapham, Surrey, Builder, who died in June, 1871, after a long and painful illness, leaving a Widow and Seven Children totally unprovided for, his severe sufferings from hereditary disease having, during the previous two years, incapacitated him from attending to his business pursuits. Bro. Gates was initiated in the Pannure Lodge, 720, served the offices and passed the Chair of that lodge, and also Past H. of the Chapter attached thereto. Whilst in a position to do so, he faithfully discharged his Masonic duties, and supported the Charitable Institutions by every means in his power.

The case is strongly recommended by the following brethren:—

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.
 AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES
 ON THIS SUBJECT.
 BY W. E. N., No. 766.

No. XII. Aug 12th, 1871.—Abraham and his seed were chosen of God to be the recipients and promulgators of Divine truth, so that in the midst of universal idolatry they should worship one Almighty just and merciful Being. This same seed has been employed by Divine Providence in effecting the same object, when in after times all mankind (not excepting the most advanced and civilised nations) had become idolaters. The chosen seed were again to become a light shining in darkness. God moreover said (Isa. xlix. 22,) "I will lift my hand to the Gentiles, they shall bring thy (Israel) sons in thy arms," "and kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and queens thy nursing mothers," &c. (chap. lx., 15.) "The Gentiles shall see thy glory, and thou shalt be called by a new name," (chap. lxii., 2.) The mission of this wonderfully preserved and chosen people was to "prepare the way of the people, cast up the highways, gather out the stones, and lift up a standard." Israel had cast off their allegiance and been joined to idols, but when, by the valour of their arms, they made their way westward, and settled down in the island they abandoned their idols, and gave themselves to God, but under another covenant, that is, they became Christianized. The intimations that this should happen, are :—

I. The Israelites were not to continue under the law, they were to be divorced from it. Judah still remains under the law; not so Israel. But the Lord declared that although Israel, as a people, had been unfaithful, he would not forsake them utterly, but would be faithful to the promises given to the fathers. A great work was to be done by Israel, to which end they were so to multiply that, "More are the children of the desolate (or divorced Israel) than the children of the married wife" (Judah). (Isa. liv, 1.)

II. The Law, or the Mosaic covenant, was not to be perpetual, but only of a temporary character, and introductory of the Messiah. Peculiar revelations and required obligations were made to Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the Israelites, but these institutions did not contain the elements of an universal religion. The chosen seed of Abraham were formed into a distinct nation, idolatry was forbidden, and God himself was King. The Mosaic law was the national law. All its commandments, including the decalogue, were civil laws. The intimations we find of the bringing in of the remote nations to the Israelitish church, would suffice to show that the forms and ceremonies prescribed by the law could not be meant for a perpetual obligation. Another covenant was to supersede the Mosaic one, and "the latter days" are often alluded to as those in which all mankind should be brought to the knowledge of the true God, and form one universal church, in which Israel should form a prominent place. From the intimations in the Old Testament, as well as from the peculiar nature of the Mosaic dispensation itself, it was avowedly unadapted for any other than the people of which Jerusalem was the centre and seat of Divine worship; it was therefore only designed for those who dwelt within reach of the Holy City. Although Moses was thus to be superseded, Israel was not to remain without a lawgiver, for God said to Moses (Deut. xviii., 15, 19,) "I will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee," &c. The Jews consider these words refer to a succession of prophets, although the word nebia (prophet, is in the singular number. Now this prophet was to be a lawgiver as Moses was, but none of the prophets were lawgivers; it must therefore refer to one person, and that was the Messiah. He was to give a law, a more excellent law than that of Moses, and a better covenant; and God was to make a new covenant with the House of Israel.

III. Though the Israelites were to be divorced from the law and its ceremonial, they were to be married to another. Jeremiah (iii., 12, 14,) exhorts Israel to return to God, and promises to bring them to Zion; but before that can take place Israel must seek the Lord their God, and David their king. Here are two things, (1) Israel must abandon idolatry, and (2) seek David their king. This can only refer to David's successor, the Messiah, the spiritual King of Israel. All this is to take place in the latter days, and therefore not under the Mosaic dispensation. All nations, including Judah, are to be brought to the true God, through the instrumentality of Israel. In accordance with all this, we find that when the Anglo-Saxons were established as rulers in their islands, they were converted to the Christian faith, and have since been preaching it to all nations. In Ezekiel, xxxvii. 19-28, we read "I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land, and I will make them one nation; and one king shall be king to them all, and they shall no more be two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more," &c.

No. XIII. August 19th, 1871.—The more we look into the scriptures the more clearly we perceive the distinction between the kingdoms for Judah and Israel. The prophets did not always understand the prophecies they uttered, under divine inspiration, nor was it necessary that they should. If the precise meaning of some of the prophecies had been known before fulfilment, man might probably have interfered to prevent their fulfilment, or to bring it about in other ways than those designed by God. In the blessings which Jacob pronounced on his children, and two of his grandchildren, he refers to the past, and foretells something of the future. He was perhaps unable to attach any precise meaning to some of his utterances, but God, who inspired him, foresaw and made all sure. Jacob pronounced a special blessing on Ephraim and Manasseh, giving to Ephraim the blessing which was the birthright of Manasseh; he also adopted them both, so that they became equal with his own sons; hence they became heads of tribes, and their children shared equally with the other tribes in the division of the land by Joshua. The birthright belonged to Reuben but it was taken from him, and divided among three of his brethren, the priesthood was given to Levi, the kingship to Judah, and the double portion or great increase to Joseph, or rather to Ephraim, the holder of his birthright. This was partly fulfilled even before the tribes took possession of their inheritance, as Joshua tells Ephraim they have become a great people. It was more largely fulfilled afterwards, and it is being fulfilled now, when their descendants are sending forth branches into every part of the world, as was foretold by Jacob (see Gen. xlix. 22-26). Land and sea were to be possessed by the descendants of Joseph. Manasseh, as well as Ephraim, was to become a great people, and among the tribes, these children of Joseph were distinguished by their numbers and strength, and it was the struggle for pre-eminence on the part of Ephraim, which led to the schism of the tribes and the establishment of the two kingdoms. Ephraim was so powerful as to give his name to the seceding ten tribes, Ephraim being often used to denote Israel. The extraordinary number of Jacob's descendants was in conformity to the promises made to Abraham, who was told by God that his seed should be as the stars of heaven, and as the sand on the sea-shore. This promise was repeated to Israel, and confirmed to Jacob in his vision at Bethel, when God said to him (Gen. xxviii., 12-15). "Thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread about to the east and to the west and to the north and south." These promises were not fulfilled while the Children of Israel remained in Canaan. Israel obtained possession of the Promised Land, but the larger promises were not fulfilled while the twelve tribes remained one people, and they have never been fulfilled, and never will be, in the history of the Jews, for although this people are widely spread over the earth, they do not materially increase in numbers. We can only estimate their numbers approximately, and according to various authorities they are set down at from four millions to nearly seven millions. Interpret the promises as we may, the numbers should be incomparably greater than this, when we recollect that the Israelites were to be the fathers of nations, and kingdoms, and peoples, in every part of the globe. Where are we to look for the fulfilment of such prophecies, except in reference to the Anglo-Saxon race, and their kindred, the Getae, the ten tribes; who were to become the most multitudinous of all people. When the Getæ, or Goths, were invaded in their possessions on the Euxine, by Darius, Alexander, and Attila, they poured into Italy and Spain, and they pushed north, south, east, and west, until Europe was occupied by them. Gaul was laid hold of by the Franks, another branch of the same family, while Britain came into the possession of the Anglo-Saxons, after they had erected the states Germany, Cimbria, and Scandinavia. Thus Europe almost entirely fell into their hands, and in later times they spread themselves over the other quarters of the globe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australia, with the islands pertaining to them, in the Atlantic, Pacific, and Indian Oceans. No one can contemplate these great facts without feelings of wonder and amazement. There is scarcely any place of importance in any part of the globe which they do not inhabit, excepting their own land of Canaan, the time for which has not yet arrived. Wherever this race goes, it carries with it the blessings of religion and civilisation.

No. XIV. Aug. 26th, 1871.—When Moses pronounced a blessing on the Tribe of Joseph (Deut. xxxiii., 14) he said "Blessed of the Lord be the land for the precious things brought forth by the sun and put forth by the moon." This is supposed to refer to the fruitfulness of Joseph's lot in the land of Canaan, and to indicate that it should bring forth fruit every month of the year. The land allotted to Joseph (Ephraim and Manasseh) was situated on both sides of the Jordan, and was doubtless very fruitful and diversified in climate, but it did not yield fruits every month in the year. The blessing must therefore have reference to a distant future, when their successors should have possessions throughout the whole world, as the Anglo-Saxons have. No other people have settlements throughout the wide world, and which afford them fruits in every month of the year.

The Anglo-Saxons are pre-eminently a colonizing people. Phœnicia and Greece were both maritime countries, and sent forth colonies, being forced thereto, either by increase of numbers, or by being driven out by other nations, as was the case with the Phœnicians, who at an early date planted colonies along the Mediterranean coasts. The Greek colonies were numerous in the Ægean Sea, and some of them became considerable states. The Roman colonies were also numerous, but they were founded for political objects, such as to secure conquests.

The Getæ, or Goths, who overthrew the Western Empire, did not found colonies, but they formed new states and kingdoms. Their descendants, the Anglo-Saxons, have colonised, not as conquerors, but by discovery and commercial enterprise, thereby providing for multitudes of their people who were too straitened at home.

The marvellous growth of the colonial empire, and the wonderful increase in numbers of the Saxon race in America and elsewhere, bring to mind the words of Isaiah (xlix., 20, 21)—"The children shall say in thy ears, the place is too strait for me; give place for me that I may dwell." The Anglo-Saxons, unlike the Phœnicians, Greeks, Romans, and other ancient and modern nations, have inherited "the desolate places." (Isaiah xlix. 3.) The desolate (that is the divorced one) was to bring forth so many children that she was to enlarge the place of her tent, and stretch forth the curtains of her habitations." for "thy seed shall inherit the nations, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited." Israel was to be "sown in the earth" (Hos. ii. 23), "for I will sow them among the people, and they will remember me in far countries." (Zach. x., 8.)

None but the Anglo-Saxons have thus inhabited the waste and desolate places. The American, Australian and South African colonies were all "uninhabited," except by a few wandering savages.

A passage in Deuteronomy, xxxii., 8, 9, has perplexed commentators, and is thus translated by Bishop Horsley: "When the Most High assigned the heathen their inheritance, He set the bounds of His own people according to the number of the sons of Israel, for the portion of Jehovah is Jacob, the peoples are the measured lot of Israel's inheritance." The meaning of this is that Israel (according to the constant strain of prophecy) is to inherit all the nations. Israel was to be a measuring line, or cord, or rod; they were to "encompass" the inheritance their posterity were to possess.

The descendants of Israel, preserved in the ten tribes, and known, after their captivity, first as the Getæ, or bruised ones, then as the Anglo-Saxons, have, by the multiplicity of their possessions, and by the influence they exert over other people, as in India and elsewhere, fulfilled the words spoken by Moses. They have measured and encompassed, if they have not occupied, the whole earth. The Queen, as the head of the Anglo-Saxon race, has a dominion on which the sun never sets. Trace the British dominions on a map, and see the realisation of ancient prophecy. The Psalmist says (lix., 13) "Let them know that God ruleth in Jacob unto the ends of the earth."

ERNEST AND FALK.

CONVERSATIONS FOR FREEMASONS.

BY BRO. GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM LESSING.

TRANSLATED BY BRO. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, F.S.A.

CONVERSATION.—II.

ERNEST. Well, where are you going? And have you not got the butterfly?

FALK. He enticed me from bush to bush, down to the rivulet. Suddenly he fluttered over it.

ERNEST. Yes, yes, they're such seducers.

FALK. Have you thought over it.

ERNEST. Over what? Oh, of your riddle? I shall also not catch it, this pretty butterfly; and so it shall give me no further trouble. One conversation with you about Freemasonry, and no more; for I see you are like all the rest.

FALK. Like all the rest? The rest do not say so.

ERNEST. No? There are then heretics among the Freemasons? And you are one of them? But all heretics have something in common with the orthodox. And it was that of which I spoke.

FALK. Of what?

ERNEST. Orthodox or heretic Freemasons; they all play with words, and have questions put to them, and reply without answering.

FALK. Think you so? Well then, let us speak of something else. For once you have routed me from the comfortable state of dumb astonishment.

ERNEST. Nothing is more easy than to restore you to that condition. Sit down by me and watch.

FALK. What shall I watch?

ERNEST. The life and activity in this ant hill. What industry, and yet what order! Every insect is carrying, dragging, and pushing, and no single one is in another's way. Look! look! they even help each other.

FALK. The ants live in society like the bees.

ERNEST. And in a still more singularly constructed society than the bees; for they have no ruling power over them, keeping together, restraining, or governing them.

FALK. Order, then, exists without government?

ERNEST. If each one is able to govern itself, why not?

FALK. Will such ever be the case with men?

ERNEST. Scarcely.

FALK. It is sad to say so.

ERNEST. Yes, indeed!

FALK. Get up, and let us go; for the ants will be crawling over us; and I just remember that I have to ask you something. I know not your opinion on this head.

ERNEST. On what head?

FALK. On the social life of men in general. What think you of it?

ERNEST. That is a thing which is very good.

FALK. No doubt. But do you regard it as the means or the end?

ERNEST. I do not understand.

FALK. Do you believe that men were created for the state? Or on the other hand, the state for men?

ERNEST. The former opinion is held by some, the latter may be the truer.

FALK. And I think so likewise. The state associates men, in order that by and in this union each man, individually, should be able to enjoy his portion of happiness with greater gusto and security. The total of the individual happiness of all the members is the happiness of the state; beyond this there is none. Every other state-happiness under which any, no matter how few, of the members suffer, is veiled tyranny, nothing else.

ERNEST. I would rather not say that so loud.

FALK. Why not?

ERNEST. A truth, which every one understands according to his own position, can be very easily misused.

FALK. Do you know, friend, that you are already half a Freemason.

ERNEST. I?

FALK. You; for you already acknowledge the existence of truth which it is better to be silent about.

ERNEST. But truths which can be said.

FALK. The wise man cannot say that which it is politic to conceal.

ERNEST. Well! as you please! Let us however, not get back to the Freemasons. I don't want to know anything more about them.

FALK. Pardon me, but you perceive my readiness to tell you something more about them.

ERNEST. You are jesting. Well! civil life as well as all governments, are nothing but means towards the attainment of human happiness. What then?

FALK. Nothing but means! and means of human invention; although I will not deny that nature has so ordered everything, that man must naturally and speedily find his way to the discovery.

ERNEST. This has probably induced some to consider society as the aim of nature. As everything, both in our passions and necessities, led to that end, it was consequently the ultimate goal to which nature was making its way. So it was inferred; as if nature did not also create the means with an intention! as if nature rather considered the happiness of an abstract idea,—such as are government, fatherland, and the like,—than the happiness of each veritable individual.

FALK. Very good. You are coming forth along the road to meet me; for, tell me, if the methods of governing are means, and means the invention of man, should they alone be exempt from the fate of human means?

ERNEST. What do you mean by the fate of human means?

FALK. That tendency which is indissolubly bound up with the means employed by humanity, that which distinguishes it from divine and infallible means.

ERNEST. What is that?

FALK. Their inherent fallibility. That often they do not only fail to produce the proposed effect, but even have an effect diametrically opposed.

ERNEST. If an example occur to you, oblige me by quoting it.

FALK. Navigation and ships are the means of reaching remote countries, and are the causes that many persons never arrive at their proposed destination.

ERNEST. Those, in fact, who are shipwrecked and drowned. Now I think I understand you. But it is very well known how it happens that so many individuals gain no increase of happiness through the State. Modes of governing are many; one therefore would be better than another; many are extremely faulty, evidently at variance with the end proposed to be attained, and the best form of government has, perhaps, yet to be invented.

FALK. Leave that out of the question. Say that the best form that is capable of being conceived has been already found; say that all mankind have adopted this best form of government; do you not think that even then circumstances of the most evil tendency for the safety of human happiness would arise from this best form of government—circumstances of which man in his normal condition never dreamt?

ERNEST. I think that if such circumstances were to arise out of the best governmental system, it would no longer be the perfect form.

FALK. And a better form would be possible? Well, then, I accept this better form as the best, and repeat my question?

ERNEST. You seem to me to be simply quibbling from the commencement upon the assumption that every human application of means to an end—under which means you classify government—could not be otherwise than fallible.

FALK. Not simply.

ERNEST. And you would find it difficult to instance one of these noxious things.

FALK. Having their origin in the conditions of the best government. Oh! Scores!

ERNEST. One, at any rate.

FALK. We will agree that the best form of government is invented; we agree that all mankind is living under this government; would all mankind, as a natural consequence, be one nation?

ERNEST. Hardly. So immense a state could not be governed. It would naturally split into several smaller states, each ruled by the same laws.

FALK. That is to say—we should have Germans and French, Dutch and Spanish, Russians and Swedes, or whatever they might be called?

ERNEST. How certainly?

FALK. Well, then, there is your first instance. For is it not true that every state has its own interests? and every member of the state his interest in the state?

ERNEST. How, otherwise.

FALK. These diverse interests would frequently come into collision, just as it is now, and two members of each state would be just as unable to meet each other without an undercurrent of repulsion, just as now [is the case between the Germans and the French, the French and the English.*

ERNEST. Very probably!

FALK. That is to say—when a German meets a Frenchman, a Frenchman an Englishman, it is not the meeting of two men, but that of two particular sort of men, aware of their diverse inward tendency, which render them cold, shy, and suspicious of each other, even before they individually have had the least intercommunication?

ERNEST. That is very unfortunately true.

FALK. It is, therefore also true that the means which unite men together, likewise operate as the means of disuniting them, although by the union they strove to increase their happiness.

ERNEST. If you understand it so.

FALK. One step in advance. Many of the smaller states would have a different climate, therefore quite different wants and enjoyments, therefore different manners and customs, therefore different theories of morality, therefore different religions. Is it not so?

ERNEST. That is a tremendous stride!

FALK. Then therefore, would still be Jews, and Christians, and Turks, and so on?

ERNEST. I dare not reply, no?

FALK. If they were that, they would, by no matter what designation they might be known, behave to each other as do Jews and Christians, Christians and Turks, and be hardened against each other. And they would not, in this case again, act towards each other as mere men, but as certain kind of men possessing individually a belief in their own spiritual advantages; and assuming rights upon this creed, which the normal man would never think of.

* Note of 1854. The date of these conversations must again be remembered. K.R.H.M. Note of 1872. Have, or have not, Bro. Lessing's words proved true? Rationality v. Nature—that is the issue.—CRYPTONYMUS.

ERNEST. This is very sad, but probably true.

FALK. Only probably?

ERNEST. Why, when I accepted the idea that they would all live under one form of government, I certainly included under it that all would be of one form of religion. Indeed, I do not understand how it is possible for uniformity of religious creed not to accompany uniformity of governmental institutions.

FALK. Nor I. And I only adopted the idea to prevent your finding your way out of the argument by its aid. One is certainly as impossible as the other. One state, several states; several states, several forms of government; several forms of government, several forms of religion.

ERNEST. Yes, yes. So it would seem.

FALK. And so it is. And behold in it the second misery which the aggregation of society—quite against its own designs, brings upon itself. It is impossible to unite men without disuniting them; to disunite them without forming great gulfs between them, and indurating these, and building high party walls.

ERNEST. And how terrible these abysses! how lofty these walls!

FALK. And let me add the third evil. Not only does society commence with dividing mankind into nations and religions. This division into a few separate parts, of which each is in itself a whole, would still be better than no whole at all. No! Society continues to divide men in each of these parts into infinitude.

ERNEST. In what manner?

FALK. Or are you of opinion that a state can be imagined without classes and grades? Be it good or bad, nearer or more remote from perfection, it is impossible that all the members of it can stand in the same relation to each other. If they all have a share in the legislature, they cannot have an equal share, that is to say, a direct share. There would, therefore, be patrician and plebeian classes. If all the goods of the state were equally divided among them, this equal division could not be retained for two generations. One person would understand how to employ his part better than another. Another person would be obliged to divide his carelessly stewarded property among several descendants. Thus would arise richer and poorer classes.

ERNEST. Of course.

FALK. And now consider how many evils do not arise from this inequality of class.

ERNEST. Ah! if I could but say nay. But indeed, why should I desire it? It is too true. Men can only be united by continual division! only made to harmonise by this infinite separation! So it is, and can never be otherwise!

FALK. And that is just what I have been saying.

ERNEST. And what do you mean by it? Do you desire to disgust me with social existences—to make me wish that man had never come upon the thought of combining into states?

FALK. Do you mistake me so much! If society had within itself only that single advantage that real good by which in its pale alone human understanding can be cultivated, I would bless it, were it ever so bad.

ERNEST. Who would sit over the fire, says the proverb, must swallow the smoke.

FALK. Certainly. But although smoke is the necessary accompaniment to fire, is it sinful to build a chimney? And was the inventor of the chimney an enemy to fire? Do you see, that was my aim?

ERNEST. Your aim! I do not understand.

FALK. The comparison was, at any rate, apt. If men cannot be united under constitutions without these diversities, are the latter, therefore, good, for that very reason?

ERNEST. Probably not.

FALK. Do they become sacred!

ERNEST. How sacred?

FALK. Sacred in the sense that it is sinful to lay hands upon them.

ERNEST. In order to—?

FALK. In order to prevent their becoming wider than is necessary. In order to make their natural consequence as harmless as possible.

ERNEST. How could that be forbidden?

FALK. But it cannot be enjoined—by law enjoined; for law extends but to the frontier of state territory, and this would be beyond the bounds of all and every state. It would therefore be a work of supererogation; and it is to be desired that the wisest and best of every state voluntarily undertook this work of supererogation.

ERNEST. To be desired only, but much to be desired.

FALK. I thought so! Much to be desired that in every state there might be men above the prejudices of nationality, and who know exactly at what point patriotism becomes no longer a virtue.

ERNEST. Much to be desired!

FALK. Much to be desired that in every state there might be men not subject to religious prejudices, who do not believe that everything must be good, and true, which is recognised as the semblance of the good and the true.

ERNEST. Much to be desired!

FALK. Much to be desired that in every state there might be men not dazzled by civil honours, not annoyed by the littleness of society; in whose company the exalted unbend, and the lowly speak boldly.

ERNEST. Much to be desired.

FALK. And if this desire were fulfilled?

ERNEST. Fulfilled? Is it not so, now and then, here and there?

FALK. Not only here and there, now and then.

ERNEST. At certain times, in certain lands several.

FALK. What if such men existed at all times, in all countries, and will continue to exist for ever?

ERNEST. Would to God there were!

FALK. And what if they did not live in useless solitude, not in an invisible church?

ERNEST. Beautiful dream!

FALK. Let me lose no words. And if these men were the Freemasons?

ERNEST. What say you?

FALK. What if the Freemasons had proposed it as a portion of their task to draw together and heal these separations, by which might again become united?

ERNEST. The Freemasons?

FALK. I say a part of their task.

ERNEST. The Freemasons?

FALK. Ah! forgive me! I had quite forgotten that you did not wish to hear anything more of the Freemasons. Come, they are calling us to breakfast.

ERNEST. Nay! nay! one instant! The Freemasons, you say—

FALK. The conversation brought me back to them against my will. Pardon me. Come, among a larger circle we may find more amusing things to talk about. Come!

MASONIC NOTES AND EXCERPTA.

I send you a transcript of some interesting lodge rules and regulations, which are still existing among the Rawlinson MSS., in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and which, at a time, when we are collecting all the evidences we can of our past history as an Order, may interest others, as they have interested me.

There is no date attached to them, but they will probably be anterior to 1731, as some other rules and regulations, which I propose to send you next week, were of date 1731.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

Original Correspondence.

MASONIC BALLS.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I have ventured to say that the public exhibition of the outward symbols of the High Degrees is a matter of discretion, resting with individual members.

The brother who displays his insignia at a fancy dress ball (not Masonic) was certainly not discreet, and whether he was reprov'd for wearing the decorations, or for his want of discretion, he equally deserves censure. I believe, however, there was another element in this little episode, which has a very strong influence in calling forth this rebuke, and that it was not wholly attributable to the display of costume.

W. L. A., 30°, raises the whole question in his last letter, when he says, "Even for a Masonic Ball permission would have to be obtained." But why does he allege this? I would like to ask W. L. A. if he can support the assertion by any statute, regulation, resolution, or order of the Supreme Grand Council.

In the meantime I will venture to say, on my own part, that there is no permission necessary for wearing the decorations of the High Grades at any Masonic Ball, where general Masonic decorations are sanctioned by the Craft Grand Master of the Province.

It is entirely a matter of discretion, and upon that discretion the S.G.C. relies. For myself I would say that in the slightest question of doubt I should consider it my duty to apply for the guidance of the supreme authorities.

There is no prohibition in the Templar Order.

LUPUS.

QUALIFICATION FOR THE MARK CHAIR.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Some time back several letters appeared in your columns on this subject, and I regret to find that the matter is still undecided.

Last week I was present at the meeting of the Prov. Grand Mark Lodge of Leicestershire; the report from the W.M. of the Melton Mowbray Lodge was read, in which it appeared that the lodge was in anything but a favourable position, and he attributes the misfortune to the rule requiring the W.M. of a Mark Lodge previously to have passed the chair in the Craft; a question was afterwards asked as to the power of the Provincial Grand Lodge to pass a resolution on the subject, but the Prov. Grand Master not thinking it desirable, the matter was not pressed though there can be but little doubt that any resolution condemning the present practice would have been almost unanimously passed.

The W.M. of the Fowke Lodge was immediately afterwards installed by dispensation, and although not a Craft P.M., appeared fully as competent as many who are, to rule his lodge, and employ and instruct his brethren in Mark Masonry.

I do sincerely hope that this regulation may be done away with; it operates terribly against the progress of the degree—especially in the Provinces—while if there be any connection between the secrets of the Craft and Mark Chairs, or anything that should not be communicated except to a Craft P.M., I cannot really understand how a dispensation from the Mark Grand Master should satisfactorily solve the difficulty.

Yours fraternally,

A CRAFT P.M.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN STAPLE KEDDELL, M.R.C.S.

During the past week the ceremony of unveiling a tablet, erected to the memory of the late Bro. John Staple Keddell, M.R.C.S., took place at Holy Trinity Church, Sheerness, whose lamented death, and his interment at the little parish of Iwade, on the 17th of November, 1870, will be vivid in the recollection of our readers. The virtues of those lost to us need no praise, but the remembrance of his faithfulness to the Craft awakened the feelings of the brethren to erect a monument to his memory. The departed brother was a great promoter of the interests and charities in connection with Masonry generally (in which he had obtained high and distinguished positions) but to 158 "Adams Lodge" of the town he was a worthy and efficient patriarch. The erection of a tablet to his memory originated with his old friends, Bros. J.G. Green, P.Prov. J.D., and Isaac Townsend, P. Prov. G.M., P.Z., &c.

The pattern of the tablet, which is of majestic size, was designed by Bros. S. Townsend, P.M., and Spears, P.M., (the drawing being a beautiful specimen of the draughtsman's skill, and was made by Bros. Spears, and Thos. Hughes, P.M. The tablet is of monumental bronze, and is of elaborate appearance; the casting was entrusted to the well-known firm of Messrs. Aveling, and Porter, of Rochester, under the personal inspection and care of Bro. Geo. Beckwith; and it was finished, polished, and erected by Bros. Storrar, and J. O'Brien, all of lodge 158.

The following description of this beautiful piece of art (which should be seen to be appreciated) will not be inappropriate here:—

It is four feet high, by three feet wide, with a square base and circular top; in the centre is the form of a pedestal, placed on a platform of three steps, supported on one side by the J.W. column, and on the other by the S.W. column. These are capped with the celestial and terrestrial spheres. On the pedestal is the following inscription:—

"In remembrance of Bro. John Staples Keddell, F.R.C.S., born 10th September, 1799."

"His body was interred at the N.E. corner of Iwade Church, in the county of Kent, 17th November, 1870, in the presence of a great number of Brethren. He was initiated in Adams Lodge, 158, on the 4th February, 1834, was a P.M. of the Lodge, a P.Z. of Adams Chapter, Z. of No. 20 and a P.Prov. G.S.W. of Kent.

"This tablet was erected to his memory by the Brethren of the Province in Kent, in testimony of his worth."

On the base of the pedestal is the motto, taken from the beautiful ritual of the order:

"He fulfilled the great end of his creation and looked on death as the end of affliction and the entrance to a better life."

The deceased brother's rise to eminence in the Craft is depicted on the sides between the columns, and the margin of the Tablet, beginning at the base of the J.W. column, where is placed the plumb rule. Rising in the successive steps to the top of the tablet, we come to the P.M. jewel. Then, commencing at the foot of the S.W. column, is seen depicted the 47th problem of the 1st Book of Euclid, and rising past the Mark Master to the sublime degree of H.R.A. In the centre of the tablet, resting on the top of the pedestal, is the Volume of the Sacred Law, with the square and compasses. This again is spanned by the catenarian arch. Suspended from the keystone hangs the P.Z. jewel,—the whole being overlooked by the all-seeing eye.

The brethren representing several Masonic Lodges assembled at the Church of Holy Trinity at 6.30 p.m., on Tuesday week, when the Rev. Bro. G. Bryant, M.A., and P.D.C., performed a beautiful and impressive service for the occasion. It commenced with the Hymn 188, from Hymns Ancient and Modern, (text) "Behold how good and joyful a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity;" followed by a lesson from the 13th chapter, 1st book of Corinthians; the Lord's Prayer, the Collects, "Prevent us O Lord, &c.," and the "Quingagesima." The following special prayer for the occasion was then offered by the Rev. Brother with devout and affectionate feeling:—

"O Almighty and Eternal God, the Great Architect and Ruler of the Universe, at whose creative fiat all things were made, we, the frail creatures of Thy Providence, humbly implore Thee to pour down upon us now assembled in Thy most Holy name the continual dew of Thy blessing, and especially to impart Thy grace upon our present desire to erect a last memorial to a departed friend and brother; may his fortitude in the solemn hour of trial and affliction have received Thy blessing, and passing safely under Thy protection through the dark and dreary Valley of the Shadow of Death, may he rise from the tomb of transgression, to shine as the stars for ever and ever, Amen."

Subsequent to this "The General Thanksgiving," "Prayer of St. Chrysostom," and the "Apostolic Benediction" were offered. Hymn 232, from book "Ancient and Modern," (text) "Bear ye one another's burthen, and so fulfil the law of Christ" was then sung, and during which the Rev. Brother proceeded to the altar where he prayed for "the whole state of Christ's church militant here on earth," followed by the blessing. The brethren and friends then left the sacred edifice and the ceremony of unveiling was performed by Bro. S. Townsend, P. Prov. G.S. of W. and P. Prov. G.R.

Bro. Spears, P.M., then briefly addressed the assembled Masons. He said:—We have now performed the last public act of respect and esteem to our departed friend, Bro. Keddell, by unveiling to public view this tablet, which has been erected to his memory by those who knew him best, both as a Man and a Mason. Our dear brother was to the outer world a gentleman, and a good citizen, a friend to the poor, for to him the appeal of the distressed was never made in vain. He was to us, brethren, the perfection of Masonry, a Master, a Father, and a Counsellor. May the Great Architect of the Universe grant that we may be enabled to follow him in the steps of Freemasonry, and to imitate his virtues, so that, rising to eminence by merit, we may, like him, live respected and die regretted.

The full choir of the church was present. Bro. E. T. Barling, Mus. Prof., presided at the organ.

It should not be forgotten, as evidencing the high esteem in which the deceased brother was held by his province, that the cost of erecting this beautiful memorial was granted by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent, held at Dover last year.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND
AND REFORM.

BY BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

(Supplement to page 147.)

I have just had placed in my hands a copy of the circular, issued A.D. 1853, respecting the "Fund of Scottish Masonic Benevolence." As its contents are not generally known, the Craft, especially in Scotland, will no doubt be glad to possess an exact transcript of the document.

It appears the Fund was formed A.D. 1846, and in 1852 had an annual income of £238 19s. 1d., with a reserve capital of £650.

In the last printed report we have, (or, are aware of) issued A.D. 1870, the ordinary income was only £363 14s. 4d., out of which amount but £93 5s. od. were subscribed by the brethren, the remainder being made up of dues and interest. A special payment was made of £128 4s. 2d., by Bro. Laurie, being balance of Masons' School for Female Children. The amount of invested Funds for some period being £3,594 12s. 1d.

In The Freemason for Jan. 20th (p. 43), is a copy of the admirable circular, signed by the Grand Master of Scotland, the Earl of Rosslyn, and which notices particularly the "Fund of benevolence." It is therein declared, that "whilst standing before the world as an essentially Benevolent society, the Grand Lodges take but a very inferior position amongst the charitable institutions of Scotland." It is the inferior position, in a benevolent and financial point of view, of this Fund, that we so much deplore, and which is unworthy of the Scottish Craft. It can, we think, be soon remedied, however, by the adoption of annual dues to the Grand Lodge, as in England, of say 2s. per member, and the funds of the individual lodges might also aid in augmenting the General Fund, provided in every case annual subscriptions were payable, as in this country, in Ireland, and everywhere (so far as we know) else, where Masonry flourishes. We have examined the reports of Grand Lodge from 1860 to the last issued, and find the following have been the income and invested Funds for the years named.

We now append the "Memorandum," and conclude by expressing our hope that the members of Grand Lodge of Scotland will support the Grand Master in his well-meant and earnest endeavour to institute reforms of much importance.

Memorandum respecting the Origin, Objects, and Progress of the Fund of Scottish Masonic Benevolence, prepared by desire of the Masonic Ball Committee of 1853.

Previous to the establishment in 1846 of a committee for distributing the Charity Fund of the Grand Lodge of Scotland in a regular and systematic form, the sums appropriated to that purpose were often given away in a loose and indiscriminate manner, without any proper investigation into the circumstances of each particular case, and, generally speaking, were bestowed upon a class of applicants, whose importunities, rather than their deserts, were too often, the means of their obtaining relief.

Under such a system, no real good could be effected, and no fund could be accumulated out of the interests or dividends, on which the Grand Lodge could depend for a certain revenue to meet demands from deserving Members of the Craft, or their Widows, or Orphans.

To the enlightened philanthropy of Bro. Whyte-Melville, Deputy Grand Master Mason of Scotland, the Craft are indebted for the great improvement which has taken place in the mode of raising and distributing the Charity Fund of the Grand Lodge. At his suggestion, the Grand Lodge, in August 1846, organised the Fund of Benevolence,—devoting the same strictly to purposes of charity, and enacting a scale of Annual Subscription, exigible from the Officers and Members of Grand Lodge, in order to support and extend the Fund.

The Fund was placed under the control of a Committee, consisting of the Officers of the Grand Lodge, the Provincial Grand Masters, and others, who were ordained to meet monthly to consider such applications as might be submitted, and for the purpose of distribution. Proper rules were at the same time laid down for the regulation of the Committee, and restrictions put upon the bestowal of too frequent aid on the same individual or individuals.

It may be mentioned, that not only is the Charity open to all Masons registered in the Books of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, their widows, or children, but Freemasons belonging to other jurisdictions, whether of England, Ireland, Scotland, or foreign countries, are also qualified to participate in its benefits. Its sphere of operation, it will thus be seen, when the universal character of Freemasonry is remembered, is sufficiently extensive; consequently the Grand Lodge, in addition to the subscriptions which it required from its own officers, etc., invited donations and subscriptions from its daughter lodges, in order to promote the efficiency of this, as a Central Fund for carrying out the charitable objects and principles of Freemasonry in the Capital of Scotland.

That invitation has in many cases been heartily responded to, not only by daughter lodges, but by benevolent individuals, interested in the prosperity of a charity so deserving of support and encouragement.

From the organisation of the Fund down to the present time, the Committee entrusted with its management, have ever studied to give effect to the objects and wishes of the Grand Lodge, and to place the Institution upon a permanent foundation, so that in after years, it might be more extensively useful. They accordingly, so soon after its formation, as February, 1847, passed a by-law, ordaining "ten per cent of the moneys collected to be annually set apart to form a Sinking Fund for the purposes of the Institution," making the interest only of that Sinking Fund applicable to purposes of charity; in addition to the annual revenue arising from subscriptions.

It has fortunately happened that the demands upon the Fund has never as yet, in any one year, been so great as to exhaust the subscriptions received. On the contrary, a small surplus has always appeared when the accounts came to be closed on 30th November. And this surplus, in terms of an enactment of 28th April 1848, the Committee have regularly capitalised.

At the 30th November last, the reserved capital amounted to £650, which is invested in the names of the Trustees of the Fund, viz., Bros. John Whyte-Melville, James Graham, and James Lenning Woodman.

The object of the present notice is not so much to enter into minute detail, as to lay before the Patronesses, Patrons, and other promoters of the various Masonic Balls, which for the last three years have taken place in Edinburgh, as well as before the brethren at large, a few particulars connected with that Masonic Charity in aid of which the former parties have so liberally applied their surplus funds, amounting to nearly £90.

During the six-and-a-half years the Fund has been in existence, nearly 400 petitions, for assistance, have been presented. All these have been carefully looked into, and to such applicants as were considered deserving, assistance in money, food, coals, or otherwise, was allowed. Many, no doubt, have been rejected as undeserving, but these rejections only convinced the Committee of the evils of indiscriminate relief, and of the necessity which exists for a thorough investigation into each particular case.

The relief extended by the Committee has hitherto been to parties in the lower walks of life, in numerous small sums. There have been several exceptions to this rule, and these exceptions the Committee trust will become less rare, as the Funds accumulate and their power of doing good is extended. By the introduction of a higher class of applicants into the benefits of the Charity, the Committee believe much real good would be effected, and much more suffering relieved, where for every class, the accumulation of a capital Fund affords the only sure prospect of steady and permanent relief.

Like the Funds of a similar Institution, under Patronage of the Grand Lodge of England, the Committee of this Charity would wish to see its revenues applied, not only as at present, in affording relief in small and numerous payments, however beneficial in many instances these have been, but also in relieving those who, although occupying a higher position in society, are often from temporary and unexpected causes, involved in pecuniary difficulties of a most distressing nature.

The annual income of the Fund, from its commencement in 1846, to 30th November, 1852, will be seen by the following statement of receipts:—

The Committee sincerely hope that the present state of prosperity may continue, and that a large capital may be ere long accumulated. For this purpose they are ready to receive such donations as may be forwarded to any of the Trustees, and they solicit the active exertions of the members of the Grand Lodge, and of all who have the good of Masonry and humanity at heart, in promoting the object in view. By adding to the numbers interested in this benevolent institution, and especially by securing the sympathies of the "mason's wives," who have so generously come forward to promote a charitable cause in its infancy, by giving, not merely their names, but their powerful influence, as Patronesses of the Balls alluded to, the Committee are sure that efficient means have been taken to extend the benefits of the charity entrusted to their care to increase its usefulness, and add to its resources.

By order of the Committee,
J. LINNING WOODMAN, Collector.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Variable temperatures.—After the season which has just passed by, a mild damp atmosphere will probably succeed, and in its train will come fever, sore throat, diphtheria, chest complaints, and rheumatism. Holloway's Ointment well rubbed upon the skin, near the affected part, at once corrects the relaxing and depressing effects of dampness on the constitution and spares sickness, it penetrates the internal textures, regulates the local circulations, assuages inflammation, soothes irritation, braces relaxed organs, and heals ulcerations. Holloway's Pills simultaneously taken, expedite the cure. In all diseases of the throat and chest, immediate recourse is recommended to Holloway's purifying and powerful preparations, which, assiduously employed, will prevent asthma, consumption, and other serious issues.—ADVT.

INSTALLATION OF BRO. SIR FREDK. M. WILLIAMS, BART. M.P., P.M. No. 331, P.G.W., P. PROV. G.W. CORNWALL, &c., &c.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

One of the most interesting meetings that it has fallen to our lot to attend in the Province of Cornwall, or indeed in any other Province, was the occasion of the installation of the deservedly esteemed Mason, Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., Representative from the Grand Orient of Portugal, at the Grand Lodge of England.

The members of the Tregulow Lodge, No. 1006, St. Day, unanimously elected the worthy baronet as their Master, and the "Gala day" was delayed in consequence of numerous other engagements necessitating the absence from the province of the W.M. elect.

Yesterday however, Tuesday, April the 2nd inst., the brethren were highly gratified at last to see Sir Frederick placed in the chair of a new, but flourishing lodge, a lodge meeting in their own hall, and though only warranted A.D. 1864, now free from debt, and able from their funds to contribute fairly to our noble charities.

The ceremony was well rendered by Bro. William Pascoe, W.M., who was ably assisted by Bros. the Rev. Dr. John Bannister, P.M., P. Prov. G. Chap.; Dr. Geo. Michell, P.M.; and John Burgess, P.M. The Board of Installed Masters was also composed of the following brethren, members of the lodge, and of neighbouring lodges as visitors, viz.—Bros. Frederick W. Dabb, P.M. 589, P. Prov. G.W.; Rev. G. L. Church, W.M. 699, Prov. G. Chap.; John Niness, P.M. 699, P. Prov. G. Reg.; William James Hughan, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G. Sec.; John Paull, P.M. 699, P. Prov. Supt. of Works; William Tregay, P.M. 589, Prov. G. Supt. of Works; John Hocking, jun., P.M. 589, Prov. G. Organist; Thomas Davey, P.M. 589; W. Reynolds, P.M. 589, Edmund Michell, P.M. 1006; Dr. W. H. Hugoe, P.M. 699; and J. Sims, W.M. 589.

Numerous apologies were received from other distinguished brethren, who were unavoidably absent, and who much regretted their inability to take part in the proceedings. There were present representatives from several lodges in the vicinity, including the Fortitude Lodge, Truro; Bro. William Middleton, S.W., and Bro. N. B. Bullen J.W.; the Druid's Lodge, Redruth; and the Boscawen Lodge, Chacewater.

On the admission of the brethren, after the "Installed Board" was closed, Sir F. M. Williams, in a few appropriate remarks, expressed his appreciation of the honour conferred upon him as Master of Tregulow Lodge, and hoped that the success of the past, would be also realised, and if possible added to the future.

The various charges were then most impressively given, especially those by the Rev. Dr. Bannister and Dr. Michell, and they were listened to in wrapt attention by the members.

The report of the funds, &c., was presented by the Treasurer and their being a balance in hand of over £20, it is needless to state that the accounts were passed with acclamation.

One guinea each to the Royal Masonic Institutions for Girls and Boys, £33s., to the Provincial Grand Masters' Portrait Fund, and £1 rs., to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund were voted by the lodge, and a canvass subsequently among the members by Rev. John Pascoe, P.M., resulted in many pounds being contributed to the Portrait Fund especially.

The officers were then appointed as follows:—Bros. Jewell, S.W.; Blamey, J.W.; Rev. Dr. Bannister, Chap.; Dr. Michell, Treas.; John Barnett, Sec.; J. W. Bawden, J.D.; W. B. Bennett, D.C.; Bro. Cock, Asst. D.C.; E. Rogers, I.G.; Jno. Hocking, P.M., Organist; Bartlett and Richards, Stewards; I. Trebilcock, Tyler.

On the conclusion of the lodge business, the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, under the presidency of Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., W.M. The banquet was served by Bro. W. Bevan Bennett, in the first style, and of course, gave universal satisfaction, as indeed his catering for the brethren always does.

During the evening, various toasts were proposed, and responded to, in a most felicitous manner.

The W.M. in proposing the Duke of Cornwall (H.R.H. Prince of Wales), congratulated the Craft, on our Royal Brothers' restoration to health, and stated that he was sure that no lodge was more anxious for his recovery, and felt more thankful for the happy realised fact, than the "Tregulow" St. Day. (Applause.)

The health of the Grand Master of England, the Dep. Grand Master and the other officers, given from the chair was well received, and so was the toast of the excellent Prov. Grand Master of Cornwall, R.W. Bro. Augustus Smith, (who was unfortunately prevented from attending, as was likewise the Dep. Prov. Grand Master).

The Rev. G. L. Church, Prov. G. Chap. responded, and paid a just tribute to the worth of the Prov. G. Master, than whom he was sure a better and more zealous Mason could not be found. (Hear.)

Bro. John Pascoe, P.M. then proposed in a most efficient manner the toast of the evening, viz. Sir F. M. Williams, Bart. W.M. 1006.

The W. Master on rising, was greeted with such loud and prolonged applause, that it was sometime before the hearty goodwill of the brethren could be for a time restrained from outward expression, but at last the worthy Baronet, having secured a moments respite from such an enthusiastic ovation, stated that his zeal and fondness for Masonry was not in any way diminished, but on the contrary, he believed it increased year by year. Since his installation in 1867 as W.M. of the Phoenix Lodge No. 331, Truro, he had become increasingly attached to the Craft, and he hoped and believed his love for the Order would continue throughout his life. (cheers). He hoped he would long be spared to support these noble Institutions, which were an honour to our society, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys and Girls, and Aged Freemasons and Widows, London, and about which we are, as Masons, justly proud. He had heard the brethren say that they thought it an act of kindness on his part to accept the Mastership of the Lodge (but he must contradict the statement) as he considered it a special honour conferred upon him, one which he would endeavour to deserve. He would have to leave frequently for London, because of his parliamentary duties, but on such unavoidable events, he could rely on the services of several most efficient Past Masters, who would gladly assist him all in their power. (Hear, hear.) He congratulated the lodge on its return to the old quarters at St. Day, and thanked the members of the "Druid's Lodge," for their kindness in placing their suite of rooms, Redruth, at their service, and finally concluded a most earnest and appropriate speech by wishing continued prosperity to the Tregullow Lodge. (Applause.) The W.M. then proposed the health of the immediate P.M., Bro. Pascoe, who had filled his year of office in a most able manner, and won the approval and esteem of all the members.

Bro. Pascoe expressed his pleasure at having secured the esteem of the brethren. He had been rapidly passed from one stage to another until he arrived in the East, and considered his promotion was mainly due to his regular attendance at the lodge. He mentioned this fact as an encouragement to the younger members.

The Rev. Dr. John Bannister then rose to propose the next toast, viz., "The Visitors, coupled with it the health of a Brother," by desire of the W.M. He did not feel able to do justice to it, as the brother was well-known everywhere, as a most earnest and learned Mason. He, as they no doubt knew, referred to Bro. Hughan, of Truro—(applause)—who has done a great deal for Masonry, especially for its history, and was well acquainted as to its origin and character. For that reason he looked upon Bro. Hughan as one of the best Masons of the day, and believed he was one who was most anxious to see brethren follow out practically the grand principles of our order, for if Masonry was worth anything at all, it was something most valuable, and underlying our ceremonies, which many looked upon as absurd, who were in ignorance of their comfort, were deep truths of lasting importance which all Masons should study, and illustrate daily, in their conduct as citizens of the world.

Bro. Hughan, desired to thank the Tregullow Lodge, for the handsome entertainment of the visitors, but he would certainly have preferred each to have responded, as there were several present who were well able to do justice to the toast, and were quite competent to respond on the occasion, as indeed, several were renowned for their excellent speeches. However, he certainly felt gratified at the hearty reception given to the visitors, and having said thus much he would leave the toast, and say a few words in reference to the special reason for the meeting today. It was to do honour to Sir Frederick Martin Williams, then W.M. For that purpose we had assembled, and certainly it was impossible we could do too much to evince our appreciation of the true Masonic feeling that always characterises Sir Frederick; not only as a Cornishman, but wherever he journeyed he was known and esteemed as a most liberal hearted, affable and enthusiastic Freemason. He was not one who confronted his benevolence, or his support to his native county, for almost wherever he (Bro. Hughan) went, he found Sir Frederick's name was familiar to the Masonic fraternity, and many lodges had his name inscribed on their roll of members. Bro. Hughan remarked that once he thought he was in a town where the W.M. was unknown, but on mentioning his name casually to a brother, he immediately said, "oh, yes, he is a member of our lodge." (Cheers.) In fact, his ample means were freely used to benefit our charities, and whenever aid was wanted, Sir Frederick was both able and willing to assist, but in such a quiet unostentatious manner, that made his seasonable gifts doubly valuable. Bro. Hughan then gave the brethren a sketch of the Masonic honours the W.M. had had conferred upon him, from a Grand Warden of England, to his present occupancy of the chair of the Tregullow Lodge, and finally concluded his speech by acknowledging on the part of the Province, the indebtedness of the Craft for the many votes for the charities, which Sir Frederick had always so generously used for the benefit of the Cornish brethren, or their wives and children. (Applause.)

Bro. Burgess proposed "The Officers of the Lodge," which was responded to by Bro. Jewell, S.W.

Bro. the Rev. G. L. Church, gave the toast of "The Women of England," in a most eulogistic and humorous speech, which was well received by the brethren.

The brethren by express desire of the W.M., drank the following toast in solemn silence, "Bro. E. H. Hawke, P.M., one of the founders of the lodge," and subsequently the brethren responded with three cheers for the W.M.

The "Tyler's Toast" was then given in form, and the proceedings ended.

We should state that Bro. N. B. Bullen, J.W. 131, sang two or three songs, and has an excellent voice. Bro. Sims and others also contributed to the harmony of the evening.

METROPOLITAN.

LODGE OF FAITH (No. 141).—A very numerous and pleasant gathering of the brethren of the above lodge took place at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, E.C. on Tuesday the 26th ult. Bro. C. C. Taylor, the W.M., presided, assisted by his Wardens, and the rest of his Officers. The Past Masters present were, Bros. Peaver, Hill, Stuart, Wm. Carter, and Gottheil, and N. Gluckstein. The business before the lodge necessitated the working of the three degrees, which were conferred in the following order: The third upon Bros. Morrison, Quick, and Dunthorne, the ceremony conducted by the W.M. Bro. Gottheil then passed Bros. Allison, and Benjamin to the second degree, after which the W.M. initiated Messrs. Saunders, H. Hunt, Ezekiel Marks, and G. J. Briggs into the mysteries of the order. The abilities of the W.M. of the Lodge of Faith, are so well-known that comments would be superfluous, and on the present occasion he distinguished himself, especially at the banqueting table, where with infinite taste, and great good humour, he preserved order and harmony among an assemblage of some seventy hilarious spirits. The speeches in proposing the various toasts were brief but earnest, and the one to the initiates was most impressive, and concluded by exhorting them not to imagine Freemasonry to be a merely convivial society, nor to judge of its value even by what they had seen and heard in the lodge room, but to bide patiently, and progress steadily until enlightened in the glorious truths of the order, and they will then find that our institution is based upon the grand principles of Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, and that its aim is to shield the orphan, comfort the aged and afflicted, and to wipe the tears from the widows' cheek. Bro. Saunders in a few feeling and welcome words, responded to the toast. The proceedings were enlivened with some excellent songs by Bros. Saunders, Mills, Haywood, and S. Davis. The lodge was honoured by the presence of the following visitors:—Bro. Coulton, P.M. 312, Prov. G. Sup. of W. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. G. W. Speth, jun., who was a candidate for the third degree, answered the necessary questions, and was intrusted and retired; the lodge was then opened in the third degree, and Bro. Speth, jun., was raised to the sublime degree of M.M., the W.M. performing the ceremony in a faultless manner. The ceremony of installation was then proceeded with, and Bro. J. Garrett was duly installed in the chair of K.S. by his predecessor, and appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. R. H. Groombridge, S.W.; E. C. Moore, J.W.; Rev. Shaboe, Chaplain; G. W. Speth, P.M., Treasurer; Britten, Secretary; E. Collins, S.D.; J. Spencer, J.D.; and Badham, I.G. A Past Master's jewel having been voted to Bro. H. J. Wadling, I.P.M., it was presented to him by the W.M. with some appropriate words. Bro. Hirsch having intimated that he intended for the sixth time to represent the lodge as Steward at the approaching festival of the Girl's School, a grant from the lodge funds was made to support his list. There being no further business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet.

CAPPER LODGE (No. 1076).—This excellent working lodge held its usual monthly meeting at the Marine Hotel, Victoria Docks, on Thursday, the 14th ult., presided over by its much esteemed W.M., Bro. C. W. Ashdown, supported by the whole of his officers, together with P.M.'s E. West Prov. S.G.D. Herts; S. Watkins, H. G. Sisley, and J. Gaskell, I.P.M. The lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes of the former lodge read and confirmed, Bros. Pinn, Eccles, Sefang, Ferris and Owen, of Lodge 1227, being candidates for the second degree, were examined, entrusted, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when those brethren were admitted, and duly passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was then resumed to the first degree; and ballots were taken for Messrs. Brien, Korton, Spratt and Holliday, which proved unanimous in their favour. Messrs. Dorton, Brien, and Holliday, being in attendance were admitted, and duly initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The W.M. then on behalf of the lodge, presented to Bro. Sisley, P.M., an address, handsomely framed and engrossed on vellum, expressive of the high estimation in which he is held by the brethren, and also their approval of the excellent manner in which he discharged the duties of W.M. during his year of office. A handsome Past Treasurer's jewel was also presented to Bro. Hughes, in acknowledgement of his past services as Treasurer of the lodge. The W.M. then announced that the Board of Benevolence had been pleased to make the liberal grant of £30 to a brother of the lodge, in distressed circumstances, and trusted that something might be done by the brethren on behalf of the various charities. All Masonic business being ended, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment. Bro. Sherwin presided at the harmonium throughout the working of the various ceremonies. Visitors present, Bros. Graham, W.M., Nelson Lodge, No. 700, and several other brethren.

KENT.

SHEERNESS.—Adam's Lodge (No. 158).—On Wednesday evening, the 27th ult., the impressive ceremony of installation of Worshipful Master of this lodge was performed, when Bro. W. T. Carpenter was duly installed in that honourable position. The brethren assembled at 4 o'clock, in the large room of the Britannia Inn. Several brethren from the various lodges in the Province were in attendance, the Sister Lodge of Sheerness, De Shurland (No. 1058), being well represented. The lodge having been opened in the several degrees, the W.M.-elect was prepared for the installation ceremony. This was very impressively performed by Bros. Samuel Townsend, P.M., and Spears, P.M. At the conclusion of the installation the Worshipful Master, Bro. W. T. Carpenter, appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. G. Beckwith, S.W.; Firminger, J.W.; I. Townsend, Secretary; Spears, Treasurer; Mitchell, S.D.; Tailford, J.D.; Thurlow I.G.; and Kelly, Steward. After the conclusion of these appointments the lodge was closed in the usual form, and the brethren adjourned to the Masonic Hall, where a banquet was served in the most excellent manner possible. About seventy brethren sat down to dinner, after which the patriotic, Masonic, and other toasts were given, and heartily responded to. Several excellent speeches were made by the brethren, and many capital songs were given during the evening. In fact the most cheering good fellowship and harmony pervaded the whole of the proceedings.

LANCASHIRE (WEST.)

LIVERPOOL.—Walton Lodge (No. 1086).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 20th ult. at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale. Present, Bros. R. Abraham, W.M.; I. C. Lunt, I.P.M.; Capt. Mott, P.Prov. S.G.D., and P. Prov. G.S.N., Dir of Cers; Jas. Gvodacre, P.M.; J. P. Mc. Arthur, S.W.; Wm. Archer, P.M. and Treas. as J.W.; Jas. Grimes, Sec.; H. Hughes, S.D.; C. Mc. Ewen, J.D.; G. E. Moses, T.G.; G. E. Hammer, and Wm. Walker, Stewards. The lodge having been duly opened and the minutes of the last regular meeting read and confirmed, the W.M., on behalf of the members of the lodge, presented a beautiful Past Master's gold jewel to the Immediate Past Master, Bro. Jos. C. Lunt, who had during his term of office, given every satisfaction, and had won the respect and esteem of all the brethren. He had now the pleasure of placing it on his breast, wishing that he might long be spared to wear it. The jewel bears the following inscription, "Presented to Bro. Jos. Lunt, P.M., by the members of the Walton Lodge, No. 1086, as a token of their esteem. March 20th, 1872." Bro. Lunt in reply thanked the brethren for this proof of their good will; he considered it was a very high privilege so to have earned their good opinion and approbation as to merit in the humblest degree that testimonial. It was indeed a proud moment which he should ever look back upon with gratitude and pleasure. Whenever he appended this jewel to his breast his thoughts would ever recur to the kindness he had always received from his brethren. From the time he was initiated in this lodge his earnest desire had been that he might become a useful member of it, it had always been a pleasure to him to assist in lodge business and to promote to the best of his ability the prosperity of the lodge; again he thanked them most cordially for this mark of their regard, and assured them how highly he prized their kindness. Bro. Briscoe was examined and entrusted, and having retired, the lodge was opened in the second degree; he was then duly admitted, and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. Bros. Smith and Glover passed an examination in the second degree, and retired. The lodge having been opened in the third degree, Bros. Smith and Glover were admitted and raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason by the W.M. in a very impressive manner. The lodge was then closed down to the first degree, and some routine business having been transacted, the lodge was closed.

ULVERSTON.—Furness Lodge (No. 995).—A lodge of emergency was held on Tuesday the 26th ult., to complete the business which it was impossible to get through at the previous regular monthly communication. The W.M. Bro. R. Pearson was present, supported by Bros. R. Dodgson, S.W., Harrison, J.W., and the other officers of the lodge. The lodge was opened in the third degree, when Bros. Beake and Hartley were duly raised to the sublime degree of Master Masons, the ceremony being performed in the usually satisfactory manner by the W.M. The lodge was then closed down. There was a considerable attendance of members.

NORTH WALES.

CARNARVON.—Segontium Lodge (No. 606).—This lodge held a meeting on Thursday, the 21st ult., when there was a numerous attendance of the brethren; in consequence of its being intimated that Bro. Michael Emanuel, W.M., of the Lodge of Israel, No. 205, would visit the lodge, and give the lectures on the Tracing Boards. The lodge was opened by Bro. Robert Humphreys, the W.M., assisted by his officers in due form, when he introduced Bro. Emanuel to the members. Bro. Emanuel first worked the second lecture of the first degree, and then gave the whole of the lecture, including extracts from the several sections. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the lecture on the Tracing Board given, with the origin of the pass work. Bro. Emanuel then gave the Masonic tradition of the six days Creation. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and the whole of the Traditional History and Lecture given. At the conclusion of this ceremony, Bro. Emanuel, at the request of the W.M., gave instructions as to the proper mode of closing the lodge in the third degree. The lodge having been resumed to the first degree, a most cordial vote of thanks was carried unanimously to Bro. Emanuel for the unprecedented ceremony witnessed by the brethren that evening, to which thanks having been returned, the brethren adjourned to a banquet, when a most agreeable evening was spent, the brethren retiring at a seasonable hour, after having enjoyed one of the most intellectual nights they had ever experienced, and with a greater knowledge of the beauties of Masonry than they had before possessed. We are informed that the above lodge are about removing to Carnarvon Castle, in which a lodge room with the necessary ante-rooms, are being fitted up, and that the consecration will take place about Whitsuntide.

IPSWICH.—British Union Lodge (No. 114).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Thursday the 21st ult., when there were present Bros. C. F. Long, W.M.; Rev. E. I. Lockwood, D. Prov. G.M.; P. Cornell, I.P.M., Prov. G.S.D.; Rev. R. N. Sanderson, P. Prov. G.C., W.M. 959; A. J. Barber, P.M., Prov. G.O.; Emra Holmes, P.M., Prov. G.A.D.C.; R. W. Beaumont, S.W.; A. Durance George, S.D.; J. Burton, Prov. G.J.D.; Cambridge, J.D.; and Rev. A. Moore, I.G., &c. The lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes of last lodge read, the ballot was taken for Bro. Harry Gage Moore, surgeon of this town, as a joining member, who was unanimously elected. Lodge being opened in the second degree Bros. George Bullen and Robt. C. Athill being duly qualified were passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, and on the lodge being opened in the third degree, Bro. Henry Miller was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. The ceremonies were performed by Bro. Cornell, I.P.M., and Bro. Barber ably presided at the organ. Pursuant to notice, Bro. Cornell proposed that application should be made to the Grand Lodge for permission to allow the members of the British Union Lodge to wear a centenary jewel—the lodge having been in existence since 1762. Bro. Emra Holmes seconded the motion, and in doing so remarked that he had frequently observed the members of various lodges in Suffolk, wearing private lodge jewels, which they had no more right to wear, without the permission of Grand Lodge, than the members of the higher degrees to wear the insignia of their rank in Craft Lodges. A centenary jewel was an honourable distinction, of which the members of the British Union would be proud, and the expense of a Warrant would not be great. He cordially seconded the motion. The Worshipful Master supported with pleasure the motion, as did Bro. Beaumont, S.W., and on being put to the lodge it was carried unanimously. The W.M. announced that he purposed holding a lodge of emergency on the Friday in Easter week, for the purpose of passing Lord Viscount Mahon, M.P., to the second degree. The other business of the lodge having been disposed of, the brethren retired for refreshment.

IPSWICH.—St. Luke's Chapter (No. 225).—The quarterly communication of this Chapter was held at the Coach and Horses hotel, Ipswich, on Thursday, the 27th inst., when there were present—Companions J. Franks, P.Z., Acting Z.; Richmond, P.Z., Acting H.; J. Turner, Acting J.; S. B. King, P.Z., Scribe E.; G. S. Findley, P.Z.; J. Tracy, P.Z.; Emra Holmes; C. Davy, P.Z., &c. This being the meeting for the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, the following were named:—James Franks, Z.; Richmond, H.; J. Turner, J.; C. Davy, E.; S. B. King, N.; Emra Holmes, P. Soj.; —Syer, Janitor. Companion Emra Holmes, on the invitation of the M.E.Z., proceeded to give his lecture, "Random Notes on Freemasonry." In speaking of the antiquity of the craft, the lecturer stated that, while he disputed the dicta of some brethren who spoke of it as a creature of yesterday, and who thought that 1717 was the year from which we must date our venerable institution, he was quite willing to admit, that almost all our information was based on tradition; that absolute historical evidence as to its remote origin was not to be found; that being a secret society, with but few written documents as evidences of its antiquity in the possession of the fraternity, there is great difficulty in proving its immemorial constitution, and much must be taken on faith as to its objects and origin. As a secret society, its aims and history must from all time have been locked up in tradition. In speaking of the admitted descent of the Freemasons, from the travelling masons of the Middle Ages, he remarked that Freemasonry to-day was in fact little more than a skeleton—a relic of a bygone age—with secrets valuable to the brethren only, but with something about it which must recommend itself to the searcher after truth and the lover of his kind. Alluding to the Royal Arch, he observed: "Probably many of you who are accustomed to look upon the Grand Lodge of England as at once the supreme head and pattern of Masonry, will be surprised to find that it stands per se in the recognition of what is and what is not pure and antient Masonry—for it recognises the Royal Arch as part of its system and the completion of the third degree, and refuses to admit the Mark degree; whilst the Grand Lodge of Scotland accepts the Mark and rejects the Arch; and the Grand Lodge of Ireland acknowledges both. Then again the Grand Lodge of England, in its corporate capacity, does not recognise the higher degrees, though many of its most distinguished members belong to them—notably the Prince of Wales and Lord Carnarvon—whilst almost every other Grand Body in the world admits them. The most widely-spread and generally adopted system is the antient and accepted Rite of 33 degrees (some of which are of undoubted antiquity), and which has a Supreme Council in almost every country in the world. The lecturer gave it as his opinion that in a Christian country it seemed difficult to eliminate the Christian country from Masonry; and the object of the hautes grades was to maintain the Christian characteristics and to admit Masons of high social character and standing to the privilege of their necessarily more exclusive degrees. Brother Holmes stated that much difficulty existed in tracing the origin of the Royal Arch degree. Dr. Oliver thought it did not exist before the middle of the last century; whilst Mackey was of opinion that before the year 1740 the essential element of the Royal Arch constituted a part of the third degree. In America, as formerly in England, it was necessary to be as P.M. before the candidate was eligible for the R.A. In Ireland, it was the same, and there the degree differed essentially from our own. In Scotland the candidate must be a Mark Master as well as a P.M. to be eligible; and Chapters in Scotland also conferred the degree of Royal Ark Mariner, which is now given in England under the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters. The Scotch Masons contended that the Royal Arch, with its subsidiary degrees, constituted a part of Templar Masonry. In the speaker's opinion, the Royal Arch degree, like the Rose Croix, was very antient; but he was quite willing to admit that it took its present form, as Dr. Oliver asserts, about 1740 or 50. Comp. Holmes remarked, that in these days of utilitarianism, it was often asked what was the use of Freemasonry, and he suggested as a noble work the study of architecture and archæology, and the restoration by Masons of the churches built by our ancestors. In speaking of the constitution of Grand Lodge, he declared that the appointments were very unsatisfactory to Provincial brethren, for that office was almost entirely restricted to London Masons, whilst men like "Lupus," and Bro. Hughan were an ornament to the Craft, and those whose research and learning have done so much for Masonry were left out in the cold. What office he asked had Dr. Oliver (the most learned Mason of his time) in Grand Lodge? What position does Dr. Beaumont Leeson (I suppose the greatest Mason living) hold at the present time? he added. "I say that Grand Lodge might very well take a lesson of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, which authorises every lodge under its sway to nominate a brother for office." By this plan Provincial Masons of worth might hope to attain to the purple, and Grand Lodge would become, what it certainly is not at present, a truly representative body. Those remarks were much applauded. The lecturer concluded by asserting that a very small portion of Masonry was learnt in the lodge or chapter, and one must diligently read the Masonic papers to know anything of the progress of Masonry. A cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Comps. Holmes on the motion of M.E. Comp. Franks, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes. The chapter having been closed the brethren retired for refreshment.

METROPOLITAN.

THE SAMSON AND LION LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS, (No. 86), held their installation meeting at the Masons' Tavern, Masons, Avenue, Basinghall Street, on Wednesday, March 20th 1872. The lodge being opened by Bro. Israel Abrahams, P.G. Steward, W.M. the minutes of the meeting of February 7th, 1872, were confirmed, after which Bro. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O. took the chair, and Bro. J. Abrahams, P.G. Steward (W.M.) presented Bro. S. Pollitzer, W.M. elect, to the W.M. to receive at his hands the benefit of installation, which ceremony was done in such an able manner as to elicit the applause of the brethren present, and a vote of thanks was carried unanimously to Bro. Meggy, P.G.M.O. for the able and efficient manner he installed the W.M. elect in the chair. Bro. Pollitzer W.M. then nominated his officers as follows. Bros. W. Littaur, S.W.; J. L. Rosenthal, J.W.; S. Funkenstein, M.O.; M. Emanuel, S.O.; E. Stanton Jones, J.O.; J. Faulkner, S.D.; M. D. Loewenstark, J.D.; Victor M. Myers, I.G.; E.

Danziger, Dir of Cers.; Meyer A. Loewenstark, Secretary. Bro. A. D. Loewenstark was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, also Bro. Laing as Tyler. Bro. Pollitzer, W.M. then rose and said he had a very pleasing duty to perform, which was to present Bro. Israel Abrahams, P.M. with a Past Masters jewel, to mark the kind and courteous manner in which he had presided over them as W.M. the previous twelve months, and hoped he would live long to wear it, and come among them as often as possible to give them the benefit of his able services for the welfare of the lodge. Bro. J. Abrahams, P.M. in returning thanks said, he would feel a great pleasure in adding another jewel to his breast among many others, and trusted he would always have the respect and esteem of the members as he always endeavoured to promote the interests of the lodge as far as lay in his power. Bro. Pollitzer, W.M. having stated that he had received a letter from Bro. Meyer A. Loewenstark, Hon. Secretary, (who is staying at Bournemouth for the benefit of his health), excusing his non-attendance in consequence of illness, it was resolved unanimously that a letter should be sent to Bro. Meyer A. Loewenstark expressive of their deep and heartfelt sympathy, and of sincere hopes for his perfect recovery from his illness, which letter to the W.M. announced he would have much pleasure in writing, in the name of the lodge. After some other business the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to a beautiful banquet which was provided with the usual skill and taste of Bro. Gosden, the energetic manager of "Masons' Tavern" and which the brethren enjoyed with great satisfaction.

LANCASHIRE (WEST.)

PRESTON.—The Birchall Lodge of Mark Masters (No. 143,) held their first meeting after consecration, on Monday, the 25th inst., at the Bull Hotel, Preston, the W.M., Bro. Col. Birchall in the chair, assisted by Bro. Major Wilson, the S.W., and other officers in their respective places. The lodge was opened at 3.30, and the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for twenty-five brethren to be advanced, which was declared to be unanimous, in favour of their election. Sixteen of the candidates being in attendance, were advanced to the degree of M.M.M. by Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, P.M., Blair 113, P. Prov. G.D., Lancashire. The other visitors present being Bros. Joseph Handley, M.M.M., Alfred Mark Lodge, No. 136; J. Halliwell, S.D.; and W. Handley, J.D., Callender Mark Lodge, No. 123, also assisted in the ceremony. Bro. John Walker was unanimously elected Treasurer for the ensuing year. The W.M. proposed five more candidates for advancement at the next lodge. A petition was drawn up and signed in lodge, praying for a Warrant to hold a lodge at Lancaster, to be called the Moore Lodge. Bro. Dr. Moore to be the first Master. Business being finished, the lodge was closed in harmony at 6 p.m. The brethren afterwards sat down to banquet.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—Albert Victor Lodge (No. 70.)—The quarterly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Monday the 18th inst. Present: Bro. Rev. R. N. Sanderson, P.M.M., P.G. Chap., Acting W.M. in the absence of Bro. Emra Holmes, Bros. J. Townsend, Acting S.W.; G. S. Golding, Acting J.W.; Dr. Beaumont, R.N. M.G.; P. Cornell, S.O.; Calthorpe, J.O.; W. T. Westgate, M.C.; C. Davy, I.G.; C. T. Townsend, P.G.D., Secretary, Acting Deacon, &c., &c. The lodge being opened, the brethren proceeded to ballot for the following brethren for advancement, viz.:—Bros. George Abbott, of the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 959; Arthur John Grimwade of the Virtue and Silence Lodge, Hadleighs Thomas Stewart, William Lewis Jones, Charles Fletcher, Joseph Redding, John Harrison, Jame, Potter, Thomas Woodford, and Alexander Davidson, of the United Lodge, No. 679, Colchester; John Barton and Benjamin Baxter, Angel Lodge, Fo. 51, Colchester; Moses Cohen, Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 958; William King, United Lodge, No. 697, Colchester; and Rev. ROXBURGH.

HAWICK.—St. John's (111).—The fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, 23rd February, when nine new members were initiated, and seven more proposed. It would appear as if the improvement movement inaugurated in the Grand Lodge of Scotland, of raising the fees, was having the effect of flooding our lodges with applicants for membership, who we might almost say, are passed promiscuously, and without that necessary inquiry into character and reputation so necessary to the welfare of the Craft, and which our Grand Lodge have, so conveniently foster by permitting only two weeks between the candidate being proposed, and receiving his first degree. That this is a state of matter greatly to be deplored, is mainly owing to the negligence of the Grand Lodge, and what interest is their to such brethren, (if I may term them so), to uphold the honour and credit of a lodge, or strengthen the hands of the Grand Lodge officers, when their only aim is curiosity to know the secrets of the Brotherhood, and gain admittance to an Order which offer such inducements as Masonry. The brethren of England ought seriously to call the attention of our Scotch Grand Lodge to this matter; for how can the order flourish, or their benevolence extend, when the working men who form the great bulk of the brotherhood spend in anti Masonic conviviality, the little spare pocket-money that ought to be applied to very different purposes. No wonder our Grand Lodge debt is a standing memorial against us of the unmasonic proclivities of that class in Scotland who alone can give tone to the Craft; keep it within proper bounds, and give it that flourishing aspect which it at present wants. No doubt, what is required amongst the sister Lodges is fees advanced to three or five guineas; committee of inquiry into character of every candidate; admittance only by ballot; and a tenth at any time sufficient to blackball a candidate, one month's interval between proposing and initiation; emergency cases to be specially provided for. The foregoing is something like what the Craft in Scotland require; and if the Grand Lodge have not nerve to deal promptly with these matters, "a new broom sweeps clean," and may be even sought for earlier than anticipated.

GLASGOW.

UNION LODGE (No. 332).—A meeting of this lodge was held in the lodge-room, 170, Buchanan-st., on the 18th ult., Brother Robert Mitchell, R.W.M., in the chair. The lodge being opened on the E. A. degree, a letter was read by the Secretary from the R.W.M., tending his resignation, which was accepted, Brother James B. Macnair, Part S. Warden, and James Balfour, P.M., were nominated to the office of Master. The lodge was then advanced to the degree of M.M., when the R.W.M. requested Bro. T. M. Campbell, P.M., 408, and Prox. M. 489, to assist. Bro. Watt, of the Torpichen Lodge, Bathgate, No. 13, along with Bros. McKirdy and Olven, of 332, were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. Brother Campbell performed the ceremony in his usual masterly style. The lodge then proceeded to election of R.W.M. The candidates having retired, the votes being called, there voted for Bro. Macnair twenty-six, and for Balfour eight, being a majority for Macnair of eighteen votes. He was then called to the altar. After answering the usual formula, the oath was administered, and he was invested with the jewel and badge of office, and installed into the chair. A short time was spent in harmony, and the lodge was closed by the R.W.M. elect.

Poetry.

EVERYWHERE A HOME.

Oh! beautiful thought, and full of glory,
 All laden with years, with honors hoary.
 For founded on love, unfading and true,
 The joy of all nations, the wide world through.
 Then let us all sing, with heart and with zeal,
 We're the keystone to millennial weal,
 And can say in all truth, there is no land
 Now, unknown to the great good Masonic band.
 For everywhere a home, 'tis true, 'tis true—
 Its emblazoned on our standard of blue.

Go where you may, to the East, to the West.
 You'll still find the sign, and Freemason's test
 In bright sunny South, or the cold frigid North,
 There the fraternal brotherhood comes forth.
 No longer a stranger, in any clime,
 Oh! beautiful thought, how sweetly sublime;
 But, "try me and prove me," yes, so; then, so;
 These grips and these signs are Truths we all know.
 Making everywhere a home, how true, how true,
 'Tis emblazoned on our standard of blue.

Mystic and strange, but united are we,
 Our friendships are strong in all charity.
 Let outsiders talk, such cowans are nought,
 We practice our faith, the distressed are sought,
 Bound, pledged, and sworn, to love one another,
 And merciful be towards a poor brother.
 The orphan and widow both will confess
 Our end and our aim 's to do good and bless,
 And make "everywhere a home, 'tis true, 'tis true,
 'Tis emblazoned on our standard of blue.

Whence all the glory, of our Mystic Love?
 The source of our acts; it comes from above.
 And then from the Book, we are taught to obey
 Its beautiful precepts every day—
 The world our Altar, our Shrine is relief,
 Good-will to mankind, our Faith and Belief.
 The creed we are taught is—love all that's true,
 The Buddhist, and Brahmin, Moslem or Jew.
 And have every where a home, so true—
 That you can see it on our Standard of Blue.

Our sacred rites hallowed by holy thought
 Are accepted by God. By angels taught—
 "Good will towards men," this practice and teach.
 Great Architect guide us, we all beseech;
 We hope, we ask, and humbly bow and bend,
 That thou wilt our Craft for ever defend.
 And give us cause to sing, with heart and voice,
 Our noble order to any other choice.
 And make it "everywhere a home," so true—
 To have it engraven on our standard of blue.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

The newly installed W.M. afterwards installed the following brethren as officers of the lodge:—Bros. R. Kidd, I.P.M.; Ashew, S.W.; Avey, J.W.; Harker, J.D.; Eyre, J.D.; and Jakins, I.G. Hooper, D.P.G.M., as Treas.; and Bro. Porter as Tyler, were re-elected to their respective offices by the unanimous vote of the brethren.

PRINCE ARTHUR'S PROPOSED VISIT TO LIVERPOOL.—Yesterday the Mayor of Liverpool gave some information to the Town Council respecting the proposed visit of Prince Arthur to that town in Whit week. His Royal Highness is expected to arrive about noon on the 20th or May, when he will be presented with an address at the Town Hall, whence a procession will proceed to the new Sefton-park, which he has been invited to formally open. While in the park the Prince will also open a bazaar in aid of the new Southern Hospital. In the evening the Mayor will entertain the Prince at a grand banquet in the Town Hall. On Tuesday the Prince is expected to pay a visit to the Southern Hospital, and should a fancy dress ball be given in the evening in St. George's Hall, His Royal Highness may probably honour it with his presence. While in Liverpool the Prince will be the guest of the senior borough member, Mr. S. R. Graves, M.P.

ELECTION, MAY, 1872.

ROYAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION
 FOR AGED FREEMASONS OR THEIR WIDOWS.
 The favour of your Votes and Interest is earnestly solicited on behalf of

WILLIAM ALLISON,
 Aged 62 Years.

He has been a Mason 27 years, having been initiated into the Barton Lodge, No. 723, in Hamilton, Canada West, in 1844; Exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter, No. 735, in 1845; Joined the Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, in 1848. Became a Knight Templar in 1856. He suffered a considerable time from disease of the throat, rendering it necessary for him, thirteen years ago, to undergo an operation; the result of which, and old age, united him to contribute anything towards his own support. He is entirely dependent on the small sum he receives from three Lodges and one Chapter as Tyler. He was formerly in good circumstances, having been a Foreman in a Boot and Shoe Makers' Warehouse, in Canada.

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MANUFACTURER OF MASONIC CLOTHING,
 Inventor of the Masonic Jewel Attacher,
 (Registered 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 100.)
 225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

"MASONIC JEWEL ATTACHER.—Bro. Adlard, of 225, High Holborn, W.C., has invented an attacher, which, from its simplicity and convenience, has only to be universally known to be universally adopted. It has long been a subject of complaint that the wearing of the honourable insignia of rank and merit which grace the breasts of so many of our Brethren, plays sad havoc with the fabric and material of the coat to which they are attached. Bro. Adlard's invention entirely obviates this, in addition to saving much time and difficulty in the proper arrangement of the jewels, and we have very great pleasure in recommending it, warranted as we are in doing so by our personal experience. The price (7s. 6d.) places it within the reach of all."—Masonic Magazine.
 Bro. Adlard's superior fitting Collars are also well worthy of the attention of the Craft.
 "We have much pleasure in recommending Bro. Adlard's Jewel Attacher for its convenience and usefulness."—Freemason.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
 THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually cures and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.
 "Lord Francis Conynham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon F.R.C.S. England; Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.
 "I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. M'GRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.B.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.
 "Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."
 "I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON and Co., Newcastle.
 "We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BARBER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.
 "It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
 CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.

No. XXVII.

By BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

A Second Supplementary Paper.

“Behold, thou shalt call a nation which thou knowest not; and nations that know thee not shall run unto thee, because of the Lord thy God.” Such is the prophetic word (Isa. lv. 5), as it stood upon record thousands of years since. The bringing of a vast region of India under British rule, and the calling of many nations there to become subject to the sceptre of the British Monarch, are circumstances unparalleled in history. That 180,000,000 of people, of various races, some of them forming large and powerful States, possessing great wealth, and commanding large warlike resources; and having a fierce and warlike population, should, some of them after a brief resistance, have bowed themselves down to the power of England, while others that “knew it not,” but by more or less vague reports of its prowess, should have “run unto it,” and have become faithful subjects, or have placed themselves under its protection, is a marvellous thing. But we are, every now and then, obtaining evidence that the like marvel is extending itself far beyond the extremities of our Indian empire, in which people, who, but a short time since, knew us not, have submitted themselves to our dominion, and identified themselves with our good and ill fortunes. In a most interesting book, just published, describing the author's “Visits to High-Tartary, Yarkand, and Cashgar,” in the mysterious regions of Central Asia, Mr. Robert Shaw gives an account of the journey by which he—the first Englishman that ever succeeded in doing so—reached Eastern Turkistan, by crossing the great barrier of the Himalayas, and making his way across the high table-lands which from the western boundary of Thibet, his course lying over huge walls, raised thousands of feet above the sea, and occasionally starting into snowy cones, or sinking into dark, hideous steppes, or in depressions between craggy steepes, shooting high their crests of glacier and ice; or along watercourses that seemed to refuse life and verdure to the desolation around; the whole landscape, for hundreds of miles, forming a lonely and interminable desert, which seemed to defy the boldest traveller. He at length reached Eastern - Turkistan, once forming part of the north-western portion of the Chinese Empire, but now an independent state, ruled by a native called the Atalik Ghâzee, who from this centre, says Mr. Shaw, “has made his power felt from Thibet to the Russian Empire,” and who is probably destined to become the first of a line of princes who may play an important part in Asiatic history. Situated in the immense region known by the name of Tartary, and stretching into the unexplored deserts which reach into the centre of China, what should the Tartar ruler of such a spot know or care about the Anglo-Saxons who occupy these Islands, though the sceptre of their monarch commands the obedience of millions of various races in both hemispheres? Not enough, one would think, to create any desire to cultivate the friendship or secure the alliance of “the conquering race.” But here is a brief description of the honours paid to Mr. Shaw, as an Englishman, by the Atalik Ghâzee. Though only an adventurous traveller, he was, as he approached the frontier, met by a body of Tartar horsemen, sent to escort him, as a guard of honour. Roads were repaired for his passage, whole villages turned out to do him honour, as a great personage, wherever he went. At Cashgar he was received in state by the Sovereign Prince, whose martial court is thus described :—

“From my door to the entrance of the palace, a distance of a quarter of a mile, a broad avenue had been formed in the crowd, whose bright robes of many colours had the effect of a living kaleidoscope. Entering the gateway, we passed through several large quadrangles, whose sides were lined with ranks upon ranks of brilliantly attired guards, all sitting in solemn silence, so that they seemed to form part of the architecture of the buildings, whose want of height would otherwise have given them a mean appearance. Entire rows of these men were clad in silken robes, and many seemed to be of high rank, from the richness of their equipments. Men of divers tribes, and with strange arms, were mixed with the mass. For the first time I saw soldiers armed with bows and arrows. They were Kalmâks. The whole effect was curious and novel. The numbers, the solemn stillness, and the gorgeous colouring gave a sort of unreality to this assemblage of thousands.”

But all these honours, were, as I have said, paid to Mr. Shaw as an Englishman; for far off, in the almost unknown region of Central Asia, where these Tartars dwell, the sovereign ruler knew enough of the Anglo-Saxons and their government thus to express himself to the somewhat astonished traveller :—“The Queen of England is like the sun, which warms everything it shines upon. I am in the cold, and desire that some of its rays should fall upon me. I am very small—a man of yesterday. In these few years, God has given me this great country. It is a great honour for me that you have come. I count upon you to help me in your own country. Whatever services I can render you here, you may command; and you must do the same for me.”

That nations which knew us not, beyond report or rumour, rude and warlike in character, though sometimes living in oriental magnificence, separated from us by many thousands of miles, by land and water, should thus exhibit a desire for our alliance, and seek to ensure our friendship, and even evince a disposition to kiss the Anglo-Saxon sceptre, “bringing their sons on their arms, and their daughters on their shoulders,” (Isa. xlix, 22,) is, as I have said a marvellous thing. But that the majority of these nations, some of them Brahmins, some Bhuddists, some a strange compound of the two, and others uniting with this again some of the dogmas and traditions of Mahomedanism, together with orthodox Mussulmans, Parsees, and Jews, should have exhibited such an unanimity and spontaneity of feeling and affection towards the heir to the sceptre which has broken in pieces the sceptres of their native princes, and now rules them, as they did on the Thanksgiving Day, is more marvellous still. Having prayed for his restoration, these multifarious peoples now went up to their several places of worship to thank God for his restoration.

I cannot resist the temptation to quote here a portion of a descriptive article in the Bombay Gazette, of March the 4th, since it places in a very striking light the extraordinary fact I am desirous to impress on the minds of my readers.

“It has been gratifying in no ordinary degree,” says the Gazette, “to observe the cordiality and earnestness with which all classes of the mixed community of Bombay—Europeans, Mussulmans, Parsees, Jews, &c.—have celebrated the occasion. In the weeks of painful suspense during which the life of the Prince was almost despaired of, it was impossible not to note the anxiety of the natives, and to observe that their expressions of sympathy were profoundly sincere; and when the telegraph bulletins gave more ground for hope of recovery, and later on, when we learned that there was no further cause for anxiety, natives rejoiced equally with Europeans, throughout the whole of India. There was at that time no united demonstration of rejoicing, because it was known that there would be a Thanksgiving Day on which the whole Empire might together rejoice and offer up thanks; but if manifestation of the sympathetic feelings of all classes was required there was no want of it on Tuesday. It was but reasonable to anticipate cordial demonstrations on the part of the European community, but the spontaneous and universal action of the natives has far exceeded what might have been expected. Thanksgiving Day has not been confined to the presidency towns, but has been celebrated, in even small towns, in all parts of the country. In Calcutta, the Governor-General proceeded in state to the Cathedral, as did also the Governors of Bombay and Madras, and in all the Christian churches special thanksgiving services were held; and as the day was observed as a general holiday, all business being suspended, the people flocked in crowds to their mosques, synagogues, and temples, in each of which special prayers were offered, and in most of which addresses were delivered to the worshippers. Judging from the reports which have come to us from the other presidencies, the people of Bombay seem to have observed the occasion with even greater fervour than those of the sister cities, for here, in the evening, some of the Jewish places of worship, and most of the mosques and temples were illuminated, as were also many private houses. His Highness the Guicowar of Barodar, at a durbar held on Tuesday, for the purpose of announcing formally the recovery of the prince, made a speech, in which he intimated that, as a thank-offering, it is his intention to devote one lac of rupees for a work of public utility, to be chosen by his Excellency the Governor of Bombay, and to bear the name of His Royal Highness. And here we may mention, that, to commemorate the happy restoration to health of the Prince, the Hon. A. D. Sassoon, C.S.I., on Monday last made a formal offer to the Governor of Bombay of half a lac of rupees, in addition to a lac already given, for building a new Elphinstone High School. Of all the addresses that were delivered to the congregations on Tuesday, perhaps the one which, for its speciality, particularly merits notice was that made to the Khojas—a division of the Musliman community—by their high priest, his Highness Aga Khan. Our report of his address mentions that after speaking of the happy recovery of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, he referred to the lamented death of the Viceroy, and quoted a tradition from the Prophet Mahomet—'That it is a great duty upon his followers (Mahomedans,) to pray for the health and prosperity of their Hakam (king or ruler) under whose authority they are protected, even if the Hakam were unjust.' His Highness further said he recollected having seen many other traditions from his Holiness the Prophet Mahomet, confirming the above tradition. The British Raj, he pointed out, was very just and kind, always caring for the welfare of her subjects; and it was a fact that wherever the intentions and purposes of the King were directed towards the welfare of his subjects, God Almighty always sent his blessings upon the country of such ruler, and it was always prosperous. He also impressed upon his hearers, that, at the present time, all the people under the British rule were comfortable, while the people in many other parts of Asia were in trouble, through famine, sickness, and other causes; and this, he said, showed that 'the intentions and purposes of the British Power were more kind and better to their subjects than those of any other kingdom. Therefore, according to their belief, it was necessary to pray for the health and prosperity of the Hakam, and, this being a special occasion, to pray and offer up thanksgiving to Almighty God for the recovery of the Prince and Heir Apparent to the kingdom, under whose protection lives and property were safe and religion free.' Can we fail to perceive in all this, the expression of a spontaneous and general desire for the prolongation of the power that now rules the Indian Empire?

A monarchy appears to me to be one part of the apparatus by which the Divine purposes in relation to mankind are, through the instrumentality of the Israelites, to be effected; and, if so, its preservation will always be with them an object of peculiar solicitude, whether they be conscious of its reason or ultimate object, or not. "The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought so shall it come to pass, as I have proposed, so shall it stand." (Isa. xiv, 24).

The Israelites were not left to determine their own form of government, they were to be "a peculiar people," as witnesses for God in the world, asserting His unity, divine attributes, and moral perfections, and also His government of the world He had created. And the God, whom they were thus to serve, prescribed the form of government they were to adopt and maintain. The collective tribes formed the kingdom of Israel, and after their separation, when Rehoboam succeeded to the throne of Solomon, they formed the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah. Their form of government was to be a monarchy; not an aristocracy, nor a democracy. And this seems to have been adumbrated when we first read of the race.

Abram and his family dwelt in Ur of the Chaldees, one of the earliest despotic monarchies of the east, whence they received a divine command to depart; this they did, and never afterwards became subjects of a foreign monarchy. Abram, as the head of his tribe and adherents, exercised sovereign or kingly power; so did Isaac and Jacob, and though Joseph was, in one sense, a subject of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, he exercised kingly power; for Pharaoh said to him, "according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled, only in the throne will I be greater than thou. See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt. And he took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand [a symbol of the regal power] and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck; and he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, bow the knee, (or, as the word Abrech is rendered by the Targums, "Father of the King!") and they made him ruler over all the land of Egypt. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt." (Gen. xli, 40-44). Hence we find that when Joseph desired to inspire his father Jacob with confidence in his power to receive and protect him and his house, he said to his brethren, "God hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and ruler throughout all the land of Egypt. Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt; come down unto me, tarry not." (Ch. xlv, 8-9).

When Jacob and his family, with a large body of retainers went down upon this summons, it was not to become part of the Egyptian community. The kingdom had attained to a high degree of civilisation. It had a well regulated court, dignified courtiers, a royal life guard, a strict ceremonial, a powerful prime minister, high officers of state, a state prison, under the captain of the life guard, and a scrupulous distinction of rank—all indicating a rich, flourishing, and well-ordered kingdom. The Theban, or Diospolitic dynasty, had become extinct, and all Egypt was united under the sceptre of the Memphian Pharaoh; and so celebrated was the country for its wealth, that caravans of Ishmaelite or Moabite merchants went thither, through Palestine and Arabia Petrea, with the productions of their country. Joseph exercised the supreme power, with only such limitation as is implied in the king being greater only on the throne. The natural thing would seem, that Jacob and all who came down with him, should have been absorbed in the Egyptian population, and have become subjects of the Egyptian monarch. But it was otherwise; they were to "dwell alone," as Balaam afterwards described them. The Land of Goschen was assigned to them; and therein they grew until they became so great and powerful a nation, that the Pharaohs ultimately stood in dread of them (Ex. i. 7-10).

This location of the Israelites can hardly be thought upon by the biblical student, I imagine, without his perceiving in the fact, one of the providential arrangements which are so conspicuous throughout the whole history of that people. Goschen was a region lying to the north-west of Lower Egypt, bounded, apparently, by the Mediterranean, on the north, by the desert, on the east, by the Tanitic branch of the Nile, on the west (hence called the field of Zoah, or Tanis. (Ps. lxxviii. 12, 43), and probably extending south as far as the head of the Red Sea, and nearly to Memphis. It appears to be called the Land of Rameses, in Gen. xlvii. ii.; and the Israelites, before the exodus, are said to have built in it the cities of Ramses and Pithon (Ex. ii. i). It was probably, though nominally under the dominion of the Pharaohs, only on the confines of Egypt, hence the LXX call it, Gesen of Arabia. Here the Israelites were placed, in "the very best of the land," (Gen. xlviii. 7.)—a region which even now, as the Province of Es Shurkiyer, is said to bear the highest valuation and to yield the largest revenue of any in Egypt. Here, then, on the confines of Egypt nearest to Palestine, which they were afterwards to possess, and near to Joseph himself (Gen. xlv. 10)—Memphis, or Tanis, being then, probably, the metropolis of Egypt, the Israelites were located—and dwelt apart, under their own rulers. They multiplied and grew abundantly, so that "the land was filled with them"; i.e. the large and flourishing district allotted to them, extending from the eastern branch of the Nile; and so numerous and mighty were they, that, as already stated, when the new king—the head, as is thought, of the 18th dynasty—who completed the expulsion of the Shepherd-Kings, or Hyksos of Manetho, became aware of the fact, he said, "they are more and mightier than we," and, at once adopted means to reduce their numbers, "lest it come to pass, that when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us." (Ex. i. 8). But the more they were oppressed and afflicted, the more they multiplied and grew, and waxed ever mighty (ver. 12-20). Their bondage was made bitter, by increased oppression and cruelty; and Moses was at length made their deliverer, and carried them forth from Egypt, after a sojourn of more than 400 years, during 80 of which they were subjected to intolerable suffering.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—All our Faculties.—Almost all disorders of the human body are distinctly to be traced to impure blood. The purification of that fluid is the first step towards health. Holloway's Pills recommend themselves to the attention of all sufferers; no injurious consequences can result from their use, no mistake can be made in their administration. In indigestion, confirmed dyspepsia, and chronic constipation, the most beneficial effects have been, and always must be obtained from the wholesome power exerted by these purifying pills over the digestion. Persons whose lives have been restored to ease, strength, and perfect health by Holloway's Pills, after fruitless trial the whole pharmacopœia of physic, attest this fact.—ADVT.

MEETING OF PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND, AND CONSECRATION OF THE COMMERCIAL LODGE, No. 1391.

[BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.]

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Leicestershire and Rutland met at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Monday, the 1st inst. The hall, which was built by private subscription amongst the members of the Craft, is a handsome structure, and contains every convenience for lodge meetings. The lodge room, which will accommodate about 350, is embellished with some engravings and portraits in oil of the present Prov. Grand Master, and the late P. Prov. Grand Master, Earl Howe, and Sir G. F. Fowke, Bart., whose banners, with those of the lodges of the town, are suspended above the dais.

Provincial Grand Lodge was attended by about 120 brethren, including many visitors from the neighbouring provinces.

Shortly after two o'clock, the procession entered the hall, and the R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Kelly, having taken the chair, was saluted with grand honours.

Provincial Grand Lodge was then opened in due form, and the roll of Prov. G. Officers and of the lodges of the Province were called over.

Amongst those present were:—Bros. Rev. W. Langley, P. Prov. S.G.W., as D. Prov. G.M.; L. A. Clarke, P. Prov. S.G.W., as Prov. S.G.W.; H. Deane, Prov. J.G.W.; Revs. J. Halford and P. H. Phelp, Prov. G. Chaplains; W. B. Smith, Prov. G. Treas.; G. Toller, jun., Prov. G. Sec.; W. Sculthorpe, Prov. G.S.D.; J. M. McAllister, Prov. G. Supt. of Works.; L. L. Attwood, Prov. G.A. Dir. of Cers.; C. P. Newcome, Prov. G.S.B.; F. J. Baines, Prov. G.P.; R. W. Widdowson, Prov. G.A.P.; Capt. Goodchild and E. Mace, P. Prov. Grand Stewards; and upwards of 20 Past Grand Officers.

Amongst the brethren present were:—Bros. H. Hadley, P.M. 47; J. Ketley, W.M. 739; H. Sanderson, P.M. 925; West, P.M. 1031; W. Hall, P.M. 1031; Pringle, W.M. 925; Perridge, P.M. 79; E. Moody, W.M. 1287; and a very large number of Masters and Past Masters of lodges.

A letter was read from the D.P.G.M., apologizing for his unavoidable absence.

Replies to letters of congratulation on the recovery of Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, were read from the Right Hon. H. A. Bruce, on behalf of Her Majesty the Queen, and from Genl. Knollys, on behalf of His Royal Highness.

The ceremony of dedicating the new lodge was then commenced by the brethren singing a hymn, "Hail Universal Lord," accompanied on the organ, as indeed was all the singing, by the Prov. Grand Organist.

The Prov. G. Secretary, Bro. Toller, addressed the Prov. G.M., who thereupon directed the Prov. G. Secretary to read the petition and warrant for the new lodge, and the brethren having signified their approval of the officers named therein, the lodge was opened in the three degrees, and the Prov. G.M. called upon Bro. the Rev. J. F. Halford, Prov. G. Chaplain, to deliver the oration, which was a masterly exposition of the Principles of Freemasonry, it was listened to with rapt attention throughout, and the hearty applause which greeted the Rev. brother at the conclusion showed how much the brethren appreciated it. We regret want of space prevents our giving it in extenso.

The Provincial Grand Master then proceeded to consecrate the Commercial Lodge, No. 1391, according to ancient rite, the dedication prayers being given by Bro. Rev. J. F. Halford, and Bro. P. H. Phelp—the whole of the ceremony being conducted in a very solemn and impressive manner, rendered still more so by the accompaniment on the organ, and by the manner in which the brethren joined in the chants and hymns.

Then followed the ceremony of installation, assisted by the Board of Installed Masters, numbering forty two. The R.W. Prov. G.M. installed Bro. J. B. Hall in the chair of K.S. The Board of Installed Masters was then closed and the brethren admitted.

The W.M. was then proclaimed by Bro. Attwood, and saluted in the three degrees.

The W.M. appointed and invested the following brethren:—Bros. C. J. Wilkinson, S.W.; John Halford, J.W.; Dr. Clifton, Sec.; W. Wilkinson, S.D.; Chamberlain, J.D.; Cable, I.G.

Also connected with the lodge as founders are:—Bros. J. H. Johnstone, 279; C. Johnstone, P. Prov. G.S.W., Jersey; L. L. Attwood, P.G.A.D.C., Leicester and Rutland; J. Windley, Minturia, 418; Revd. W. Targett Fry, Chaplain, 523.

The W.M. proposed, and the S.W. seconded, a vote of thanks to the R.W. Prov. G.M. for his kindness in performing the ceremonies, which it is needless to add was carried nem. con.

The Provincial Grand Master made a suitable reply.

Twelve joining members, and six gentlemen for initiation were then proposed.

The R.W. Prov. G.M. took the chair, and Provincial Grand Lodge was resumed.

A communication was read from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Warwickshire, inviting the R.W. Prov. G.M. and members of the Provincial Grand Lodge to assist at the laying of the foundation stone of the "Midland Counties Middle Class Idiot Asylum," which ceremony is to be performed by the M.W.G.M., the Most Noble the Marquis of Ripon, on the 20th instant.

The R.W. Prov. G.M. announced that the foundation stone of the memorial church to the P. Prov. G.M., the late Earl Howe, would be laid in May.

He also announced his intention to call a meeting of Grand Chapter during the same month.

A sum of money was voted from the funds of Prov. G. Lodge to the Girls' School, to be placed on the list of Bro. Stretton, P.G.R., he being Steward at the ensuing festival of that institution.

Provincial Grand Lodge having been closed in due form, the W.M. 1391, assumed the chair, and closed that lodge in due form, with "hearty good wishes" from the representatives of the various lodges present.

Upwards of 110 brethren partook of the banquet which followed, the chair being taken by the W.M. of the new lodge. The arrangements for the comfort of the visitors, and the really superb manner in which the dinner was served, reflect great credit on the Executive Committee of 1391. It could not, we are certain, have been surpassed by any of the large taverns in London. The tables were profusely decorated with flowers, from the establishment of Bro. Charlton, to whom a vote of thanks was afterwards carried, for his kindness in providing them.

When the cloth was drawn the W.M. said that as there were many brethren present who would be obliged to leave early, on account of the distance they had to go, he would then briefly propose the health of "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen," coupled with "The Craft." Drank with enthusiasm and followed by "God save the Queen," accompanied on the harp by Bro. Ffrench Davis.

The W.M. said, following the example of the lodges of the Province, he would send round the "Charity Box," and a very handsome collection was the result. While this was being done Bro. Ffrench Davis played a fantasia on Welsh airs on the harp.

The R.W. Prov. G.M. then proposed the healths of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., the Princess of Wales, Bro. H.R.H. the Crown Prince of Prussia, and the rest of the Royal Family.

Bro. Kennedy then sang "Maud," and being encored, gave the "Pilgrim of Love" in a masterly style.

The W.M. proposed the M.W.G.M., the D.G.M., and the Officers of the Grand Lodge of England.

Song—"Glorious Vintage of Champagne."

The next toast, proposed by the W.M., was the R.W. Prov. G.M., the D. Prov. G.M., and the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Leicestershire and Rutland.

The W.M. said words failed him to express his deep sense of the obligation he felt under to the Prov. G.M. for the admirable and impressive manner in which he had performed the two ceremonies of the evening.

Solo—harp—Bro. Ffrench Davis.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master returned thanks in an eloquent speech, and concluded by proposing the health of the W.M. and prosperity to the Commercial Lodge, 1391.

The W.M. returned thanks in a very neat speech, and proposed the health of "The Visitors," which was responded to by Bros. Kennedy, W.M. 1031; Pursell, Prov. S.G.W., Warwickshire, on behalf of the brethren of that Province; and by Bro. E. Moody, W.M. 1287, on behalf of the London contingent.

Song, Bro. Attwood.

The W.M. proposed "Prosperity to the Sister Lodges of the Town," and said that 1391 would not be satisfied till it had as great a reputation for good and correct working as the St. John's and the John of Gaunt Lodges. This toast was responded to by Bro. Crow, Prov. G. Organist, W.M. St. John's; Bro. Sculthorpe, W.M. John of Gaunt; and by Bro. Toller, Prov. G. Secretary, P.M. John of Gaunt; the latter of whom expressed himself as gratified to find a spirit of emulation already existing in the new lodge, as he felt confident it would conduce to good working.

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Officers," which was responded to by Bro. S.W., and by Bro. Dr. Clifton, Secretary.

Bro. Davis 141, then gave a recitation from "Othello."

Bro. Dr. Clifton read a telegram just received from Bro. Dr. Bell Fletcher, Prov. D.P.G.M. Warwickshire, and a letter from Bro. D. C. Lloyd Owen, J.D., of Fletcher Lodge, Birmingham, both expressing great regret at being unable to be present.

The proceedings of the evening were brought to a conclusion by Bro. Crow singing the parting song, "Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again," and judging from the hearty manner with which the brethren joined in the chorus, it very aptly expressed their feelings.

Thus ended what will doubtless be looked upon as a "red letter day" in the annals of Freemasonry by our Leicestershire brethren.

For ourselves, we may say that we were gratified with everything we saw, the excellent working, the admirable manner in which the musical portion of the ceremonies was rendered, and the hearty good feeling shown by every brother present, combined to render this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever witnessed, and we will conclude our remarks by wishing continued success and prosperity to the "Commercial Lodge, No. 1391."

MASONIC NOTES AND EXCERPTA.

By Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, M.A., Past Grand Chaplain, &c., &c.

I am delighted to see that our learned Bro. Woodford has determined to make the "Rawlinson MSS." known to the numerous readers of the Freemason. These MSS. have been partly printed in the Freemasons' Monthly Magazine, for 1855, &c., but many documents were entirely omitted in that series, and probably the majority of the subscribers to the Freemason are in ignorance of the contents of that monthly magazine, which had but a limited circulation compared with the present organ of the British Craft. The By-laws printed at page 214 of the Freemason, "Bro. Woodford considers to be anterior to 1731," and rightly calls them interesting "rules and regulations." I have traced the lodge by reference to Dr. Rawlinson's "List of recognised lodges," it is termed "71 Bricklayers' Arms in Barbican, now removed to the Rose Tavern, in Cheapside," and find that in another list of lodges (printed A.D. 1738) it is designated "71 Rose in Cheapside, 1st and 3rd Monday, Jan. 26th 1730," (i.e. Warranted Jan. 26, 1730.)

The By-laws are therefore probably of the year 1730, and the present Britannic Lodge, No. 33, warranted during that year, may be the same lodge as the one whose By-laws have just been printed.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST LANCASHIRE AT PRESTON.

On Friday, April the 5th inst., a special meeting of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons for the Province of West Lancashire, was held at the Guildhall, Preston, under the presidency of Sir T. G. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P., and was attended by a very large number of brethren from various parts of the province. There was a great deal of important business on the notice paper, but a considerable portion of it was disposed of by the withdrawal of a motion relating to the division of the province, and a return of appointments, &c., both of them emanating from the neighbourhood of Liverpool.

Subjoined is a list of the Provincial Grand Officers:—Bros. Sir Thomas George Fermor

Hesketh, Bart., M.P., Prov. Grand Master; Lord Skelmersdale, D.P.G.M.; Major Thomas Wilson, 113, Prov. S.G.W.; Hon. F. A. Stanley, M.P., Prov. Immediately after the ceremony of opening the lodge,

Bro. Lord Skelmersdale moved the adoption of the following address:—

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,—We, the Freemasons of the Western Division of the County Palatine of Lancaster, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, beg leave humbly to offer to your Majesty our cordial congratulations upon the recovery of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his protracted and dangerous illness. During the severe and trying ordeal to which the recent illness of His Royal Highness subjected your Majesty, we forbore to intrude on your Majesty by giving utterance to the feelings of profound sympathy by which we were actuated, but now that, by the merciful interposition of the Divine Architect of the Universe, that anxiety has been removed, we beg to tender your Majesty our sincere congratulation on the restoration of His Royal Highness to a state of health and strength, and at the same time to assure your most gracious Majesty of unswerving loyalty and attachment to your Majesty.

We earnestly and most sincerely pray the Most High that your Majesty may long reign over a happy and prosperous people, and shower down upon your Majesty and your Royal House His Divine blessing.

His Lordship said he was sure all the brethren assembled in the Grand Lodge had hailed with joy the restoration to health of Her Majesty's dear son, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Her anxiety and grief had been deep, but her joy was now proportionately great, and he was perfectly certain the brethren would unanimously express their congratulations to her, and their thanks to the Almighty for the restoration of the Prince. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. the Hon. F. A. Stanley, M.P., in seconding the motion, said he was sure every Masonic heart would join with his in wishing the Prince a long and happy life. He felt sure the mercies which had been vouchsafed to their Masonic brother, the Prince of Wales, would be long remembered among those present, and throughout the country. One Grand Lodge after another had forwarded their congratulations to the Queen, and West Lancashire was echoing the general sentiment of the country in sending an address from its Provincial Grand Lodge. He had much pleasure in seconding the motion.

Sir T. G. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P., in submitting the proposition to the meeting, said every true Master Mason would certainly support it, and he had confidence that those in West Lancashire were both loyal to the Queen as the Sovereign of the realm, and loyal to the Prince as the heir to the throne and a brother Mason. (Applause.)

The motion was most cordially passed.

Bro. Major Wilson said he had very great pleasure in proposing the following address to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, on the occasion of his recovery from his severe illness:—

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Worshipful Past Grand Master.

May it please your Royal Highness,—We, the Freemasons of the Western Division of the County Palatine of Lancaster, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, desire to express to your Royal Highness our sincere and heartfelt congratulations on your restoration to health, and whilst animated by feelings of the deepest gratitude and thankfulness to the Great Architect of the Universe, who, by His infinite wisdom and goodness has been graciously pleased to hear and answer our prayers and supplications as a people, we fervently pray that a prosperous and happy life may be vouchsafed you, and that you may long be spared to support by your influence and example the noble principles of our Order, and speedily be enabled to resume the responsible duties of the high station you are called upon to fill.

They all knew the great interest which the Prince took in the Masonic art. He (Bro. Major Wilson) had had the great pleasure and privilege, on more than one occasion, of seeing the Prince take part in Masonic affairs, and it was evident he did so with very great interest and satisfaction. Being thus led by the heir apparent to the throne, they ought in local lodges to be stimulated unto greater exertion on behalf of the Craft. He did not think there was another Provincial Grand Lodge in the country which contained within it more loyal subjects than the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Lancashire. Lancashire was proverbially a loyal county,—the proceedings which had taken place within the past few days showed how loyal they were, and how ready they were, to defend and support the Throne and the Constitution of this country—(applause). He had the greatest possible pleasure in moving the address.

Bro. The Rev. J. F. Goggin, F.P., Prov. G., Chaplain, said he had great pleasure in seconding the motion of the Prov. G. Junior Warden, and he hoped the Masons of this province would long live to show their respect towards the Prince of Wales.

This motion was also carried unanimously.

The Prov. G. Sec. said the next business on the paper was a notice of motion by Bro. Hughes, but he was happy to inform the lodge that Bro. Hughes had withdrawn it. He had also, at the same time, to read a letter which Bro. Hughes had written, and which redounded greatly to his honour. He said—

"Dear Sir and Brother,—I regret that business at the Assize Courts (Liverpool) will not admit of my being present at a meeting of the Grand Lodge to-morrow, as I would have explained that, since giving notice of motion at the last assembly of the Provincial Grand Lodge, with a view to ascertain the opinion of the brethren upon the necessity for a division of the province. I have taken some pains to inquire into the matter thoroughly, and have had some very interesting conversations with old Masonic friends, I find, after no little consideration, I cannot recommend the motion to be pressed, and now request that it may be withdrawn. I may perhaps add that from the investigation I have given to the question I am obliged to say that I could not conscientiously deny my belief that at the present time the division of the province would be an injury to the Craft; and I am exceedingly sorry I cannot be present to explain my reasons for arriving at that opinion.—I remain, dear sir, yours fraternally, EDWIN HUGHES.

—(applause).

Bro. Turner then intimated that he intended to withdraw his proposal for a return of all Provincial Grand Lodge appointments in the province within the last 20 years, and with the names and description of the members appointed, showing the lodges to which they belong. His notice was intended for the annual meeting, but inasmuch as his object was not to raise difficulties or dissensions, but to smooth them away, and to use his best efforts to cultivate good will and fraternal feeling, he had decided to withdraw it. It was not intended to interfere in any respect with the prerogative of the Right Worshipful Prov. G.M., for there were not in that province more determined or staunch supporters of the Prov. G.M. than those who were in favour of the motion. There was, however, a grievance, real or fancied, and he believed it was a real one; but the Prov. G.M.'s attention having been called to it with a view to its remedy, he had very much pleasure in withdrawing the motion.

A conversation took place in reference to the Binckes' Testimonial Fund (London), but it was decided not to take any action in the matter.

Relief was given in the following cases:—The sum of £15 to Bro. Gilpin, Liverpool; and £5 each to the following: The widow of Bro. Page, of Liverpool; the widow of Bro. Rigby, of Croston; the widow of Bro. Noble, of Everton; and to Bro. Sumner, Ashton-in-Makerfield.

Bro. Major Wilson said it was desirable they should have a local benevolent fund in this district for the relief of deserving Masons. At present they gave casually, but it would be better to have an organisation for a lodge or a number of lodges; and he wished to know whether they could make their own rules and regulations, and have their own Treasurer and Secretary, without going to the Provincial Grand Lodge for permission, or laying the scheme of rules before them.

The Prov. G.S. replied that they had such a fund in Liverpool and other large towns. They could appoint their own local officers, and need not submit their rules to the Provincial Grand Lodge.

Bro. Mott said the Liverpool committee was constantly in communication with other large centres, so that there could be no abuse in giving.

The Prov. G.S. said he had received a variety of notices relating to the Hamer Fund. Last Grand Lodge meeting gave £20, as a nucleus for Bro. Hamer's Testimonial Fund, and it was resolved that an appeal should be made to every lodge in the province. One notice was that a scholarship be founded, to be called the Hamer Scholarship; another that a fund be established, called the Hamer Advancement Fund, in connection with the Masonic Educational Institution; and another was that it should be devoted to a Hamer Benevolent Fund. These notices would be printed before the next meeting of the committee.

Brother Wylie moved that it be a recommendation to the committee that the money be devoted to an annuity fund for distressed and decayed Freemasons, to be supplemented by private subscriptions from lodges, members of lodges and chapters; the fund to be lodged in the Savings' Bank, Dock Bonds, Railway Debentures, Government Stock, or freehold security; that the trustees of the West Lancashire Masonic Benevolent Fund for the time being, together with the Provincial Grand Master, the Deputy P.G.M. the Grand Wardens, and the W.M.'s of the four senior and the four junior lodges in the province, be the committee for carrying out the business in connection with this fund; that lodges giving a donation of £5 or upwards have one vote for each £5 subscribed; that members of lodges subscribing £5 annually have one vote; that every member contributing £5 or upwards have one vote for each £5; the interest and profit arising from this fund to be alone applicable.

Bro. Ibbs seconded the motion, which was opposed by Bro. Hill, on the ground that the committee would not be dictated to.

On the suggestion of the Prov. Grand Master, the subject was deferred.

Afterwards the brethren formed into processional order and walked two abreast from the Guildhall, down Friargate, up Lune-street, and along Fishergate and Church-street, to the Parish Church, where divine service was held. The street were thronged with onlookers, who seemed quite delighted with the procession and the appearance of the attire and emblems of the brethren. There were one or two banners from other districts; and also three most beautiful bannerets from Preston lodges—the Unanimity, the Concord, and the Royal Preston—the production of Brother Joseph Pritt, of the Black Horse Inn, Friargate. Inside the church was a numerous congregation, and the scene when the Masons had taken their seats was most novel and effective.

Bro. the Rev. C. J. Astbury, M.A., incumbent of Longton, read the preliminary portion of the service; the Rev. W. M. Myres, M.A. incumbent of St. Paul's, the first lesson; the Rev. G. H. Vernon, M.A., P.Prov. G.C. of Lancashire and Cheshire, the second lesson; the Rev. James Pearson, M.A., vicar of Fleetwood, P.Prov. G.C. of Cumberland and Westmoreland, and the Rev. James Taylor, M.A., vicar of Bamber Bridge, the remaining portion of the service. The Rev. E. Lee, B.D., also took part in the service. The choir sang antiphonally. At the commencement, Hymn 147 (Carus Wilson's collection) was sung; before the sermon, the 104th Psalm; and afterwards the 234th Psalm. Bro. J. J. Greaves ably officiated at the harmonium. When the ordinary service had been gone through,

Brother the Rev. J. F. Goggin, Provincial Grand Chaplain, ascended the pulpit, and preached an able discourse, taking for his text, St. Luke, xiv. 4. "And he took him and healed him and let him go."

After the sermon, a collection was made, amounting to £18 16s.

Sir T. G. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W. P.G.M.; Lord Skelmersdale, the Hon. F. A. Stanley, M.P., Colonel Birchall, Major Wilson, and other members of the Grand Lodge, occupied the Corporation seats near the chancel, whilst the general Masons were in the body of the church. Subsequently the brethren returned in procession to the Guildhall, where the Grand Lodge was closed in due form. A large number of the brethren afterwards dined together at Brother Townsend's, the Bull Hotel.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—At the monthly meeting of the General Committee held on Saturday last, Bro. B. Head, Vice-Patron, in the chair, the recommendation of the Secretary, Bro. Binckes, was unanimously adopted, and in accordance therewith it was resolved—That £2000 be paid to the Bankers of the Institution, Sir S. Scott and Co., in reduction of the debt due to them, £6000. The liability now, therefore, stands at £4000, which, it is hoped, a special effort will ere long succeed in extinguishing.

We are requested to notify to the brethren, that the Fidelity Lodge of Instruction has returned to its old quarters, Yorkshire Grey, London-street, Tottenham-court-road, where, under the able Preceptorship of Bro. T. A. Adams, it meets every Thursday evening, at eight o'clock. The room in which the brethren meet having been thoroughly renovated, a more comfortable Lodge of Instruction is not to be met with in that district.

We are pleased to note that the movement started by Bros. Stevens and Thomas at the United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, is making rapid progress throughout the various Lodges of Instruction in London. The members of the Fidelity Lodge of Instruction have accepted an invitation from the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, to work the fifteen sections in that lodge, on the evening of Friday, the 26th inst., and from the reputation which the Fidelity brethren bear for good working, a real Masonic treat may be anticipated.

We have great pleasure in announcing that a tentative Lodge of Instruction is about to be opened by Bro. George Pitt, at the Freemasons' Hotel, Wandsworth, S.W. It is anticipated that several P.M.'s of the most unimpeachable accuracy will be present. Bro. Cryptonymus has also promised to attend, in order at the first meeting, to be held as above, on Friday, the 13th inst., to name some few Masonic problems, on which a discussion is likely to be taken.

We are pleased to hear that the M.W. G.M.M.M. has granted a Warrant for the formation of the Bective (No. 149) Lodge of Mark Masters, to be held at Keswick, Cumberland.

Bro. Hughan's new work, to be entitled "The Old Charges of British Freemasons," will be ready in a month, and in consequence of several MSS. of importance being added, the cost has been considerably increased in the production. Brethren desiring copies had better write to the author (Truro, Cornwall,) at once, to secure copies. Price, six shillings each. (Post free, 6s. 6d.) Bro. Hughan, who is anxious that these MSS. become generally known, will send the Masters of Lodges a dozen or more copies at a reduced price, if applied for on or before the 1st May.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

METROPOLITAN.

OLD KING'S ARMS LODGE (No. 28).—The last regular meeting of this ancient and high-class lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, on the 25th ult., Bro. Thos. Loveridge, W.M., in the chair, supported by his principal officers, Bros. David Crombie, S.W., and James Waddell, J.W., and many other members and brethren. The work of the lodge consisted of three initiations, and three passings, the ceremonies being ably performed by the W.M. During the evening a very handsome and well merited compliment was paid to the highly esteemed and respected Treasurer of the lodge, Bro. William Paas, P.M., by the members, by presenting him a superb silver claret jug, bearing a suitable inscription, at a cost of Twenty-five Guineas. Bro. Paas has been a member of the lodge upwards of twenty years, and during thirteen years of which has filled the important and responsible office of Treasurer— which, together with his urbanity of manners and general usefulness to the lodge, has not only given the utmost satisfaction, but has also endeared himself to every member. Bro. Paas's name, we need scarcely observe, is well known in connection with the Masonic Charities, as one of their firmest and best supporters, and he has been for many years past an active member of the House Committee of the Boys' and Girls' School. Other minor duties before the lodge having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, served in the Tavern, which was ably presided over by the W.M.

LODGE OF ASAPH (No. 1319).—The brethren of this lodge held their usual monthly meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, on the 1st inst., and was but thinly attended, owing to the Brighton Volunteer Review occurring on the same day. The following were present—Bros. C. Coote, P.M., W.M.; J. Weaver, P.M., P.G.O. Mid., J.W.; Thomas A. Adams, P.G.P.; Thomas Edgar; Thomas W. Gough; Charles S. Jekyll, J.D.; William A. Tinney, I.G.; William H. Weston; Henry Snyders; Henry J. Tinney, Org.; Julian Egerton; Joseph Baker; Joseph Horton; John Read, P.M.; R. Egerton; S. Hodges; H. Lazarus; and Bro. John Gilbert, Tyler. Bros. E. J. Cobby, 134, and W. H. Baarle, 8, were present as visitors. The lodge was opened and the minutes of the last lodge meeting read and confirmed. Bros. Lazarus and Egerton were passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was resumed to the first degree, and Bro. T. A. Adams worked the first and second sections of the first lecture. Bro. C. Coote, W.M., proposed, seconded by Bro. J. Weaver, J.W., and carried unanimously, that the sanction of the lodge be given to attach a Royal Arch Chapter to this lodge, to be called the Asaph Chapter, No. 1319. Mr. W. Read, Professor of Music, was proposed for initiation, and the lodge was closed and adjourned.

CORNWALL.

ST. IVES.—Tregenna Lodge (No. 1272).—The annual meeting of the above lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, St. Ives, on the 15th ult., when Bro. Charles Trevithick, the W.M.-elect was duly installed in the chair of K.S., according to antient form; the ceremony being ably performed by Bro. Coombe, P.M., 450, P.G.D., &c. After which the W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Dunn, P.G.S., I.P.M.; Harvey, S.W.; Coombe, P.M., 450, J.W.; Jones, Chaplain; Dunn, P.M., Treasurer; Wearne, Secretary; T. D. Edwards, S.D.; John, J.D.; J. Pemberthy, O.; Thomas, I.G.; Short, D. of C.; G. Richards, and R. Pemberty, Stewards; Nevorron, Tyler. The Lodge being closed down to the first degree, the W.M. initiated his Bro., Mr. William Stewart, Trevithick, into the mysteries and privileges of antient Freemasonry, the ceremony being well worked by Master and Officers. The charge was impressively rendered by the W.M., and the working tools ably given by Bro. P. M.

Coombe, J.W. The time having arrived when it was deemed desirable to retire from labour to refreshment, the lodge was adjourned to Bro. Richard's, White Hart Hotel, at 4 p.m., where a sumptuous repast awaited them, at which the W.M. presided, supported by his officers. There was a large gathering of visiting brethren, amongst whom were Bros. Charles Read, P.S.G.W., P.M. 121; Israel Lewin, P.M. 121, P.P.G.D.; G. S. Denbigh, P.P.S. of W., P.M. 121; W. A. Gerry, S.W. 121; R. Carter, J.W. 121; Rowe, S.D. 121; Dr. Mudge, P.M. 450, P.P.J.G.W.; Eustice, P.M. 450, P.P.G.S.B.; Burrall, P.M. 450, P.P.G.D.; Ellis, P.M. 450, P.P.G.D.; J. Poole, P.M. 450; W. Huthnance, P.M. 450; Frank Pool, W.M. 450; Poole, S.W. 450; Frost, J.W. 450; Mildren, P.J.W. 450. After the various toasts had been given and acknowledged, the W.M. proposed the health of Bro. Dunn, the I.P.M., and with a highly eulogistic speech, presented him with a handsome Past Master's jewel, selected from the stock of Bro. Kenning (with much satisfaction to the subscribers, both in price and quality), the interior of which bore the following inscription, "Presented to Bro. Martin Dunn, by the members of Tregenna Lodge, No. 1272, St. Ives, on his vacating the chair, on the 15th of March, 1872, which he filled for two successive years with credit to himself and honour to the craft." The I.P.M., who was received with prolonged applause, and was evidently much affected, replied in feeling terms, and assured the brethren that nothing would be wanting on his part to merit a continuance of their esteem, of which the jewel with which he had just been presented bore such evident testimony. After various other toasts had been given; the Tyler's toast brought the dinner to a close, after which the brethren spent a pleasant evening, and separated in peace and harmony about 10 p.m., the visitors especially expressing the pleasure they had derived from the day's proceedings.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge (No. 1331).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the lodge-room, in the Royal Hotel, on the 4th inst. The chair of K.S. was occupied by the I.P.M., Bro. C. Carnegie, Prov. G. Purst. Hants (the W.M., Bro. Fenn, being detained at Woolwich on duty), who was supported by the following officers: Bros. Osmond, P.M.; Capt. Richardson, R.E., S.W.; A. McKenzie, J.W.; J. Laverty, S.D.; R. Bennett, J.D.; R. White, Sec.; F. Anderson, I.G.; N. Lucas, O.G. The brethren mustered in great force, and there were several visitors, among whom was Bro. Warne, 723, who presided at the harmonium. The lodge was opened in form in the first degree, and the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Bros. B. McCleesh and T. Lawrey, 7th Hussars, as joining members; and for Serjt. W. Moore, A.H.C., a candidate for initiation, which proved unanimous in each case. Bro. Fitter, a candidate for the F.C. degree, was then questioned respecting his proficiency in the former degree, which proving satisfactory, he was entrusted with a test of merit, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Fitter was promoted to the degree of F.C., Bro. McKenzie presenting the working tools. The lodge was closed down to the first degree, and Serjt. W. Moore was initiated into Masonry; the working tools being presented by Bro. Capt. Richardson. On the proposition of Bro. White, two guineas were voted to the Trinity Church Building Fund. The lodge was then closed in peace, love, and harmony, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. A most enjoyable evening was spent; Bros. White, Warne, and Lynch contributing materially to the pleasure of the brethren by their excellent singing.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cacao bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and, being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cacao, and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

BOLTON.—St. John's Lodge (No. 2 S.C.).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Commercial Hotel, Bolton, on the 4th April, when there were present Bros. R. Harwood, Prov. J.G. Deacon, Lancashire, R.W.M.; Thos. Entwistle, R.W. Prov. G.M.; W. Hamer, S.W.; J. Newton, J.W.; G. Makin, M.O.; R. Luthy, J.O.; G. P. Brockbank, Prov. S.G.W., Treas.; J. W. Taylor, Prov. G. Sec., Reg.; W. H. J. Jones, Sec.; Horrocks, Con.; Rutter, S.D.; J. Harwood, J.D.; Brown, Timekeeper; Brandwood, Morris, and T. Mitchell, P.M.'s, and others. The lodge being opened, the ballot was taken for a number of candidates for advancement, the result of which was that they were all elected, and four of them being in attendance were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master by the R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Entwistle. A resolution was unanimously adopted, expressive of the desirability of taking steps to effect a fusion between the contending interests at present existing in Mark Masonry, and approving of the course adopted by the Rev. Prov. G.M., with the view of accomplishing this object. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

The annual meeting took place at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on the 28th ult., under the auspices of the Fowke Lodge, No. 19. After the Fowke Lodge had been opened the Prov. G.M. and his Officers were received and saluted, and the Prov. G. Lodge was opened in due form. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, and the roll of lodges and of officers called, the reports from the W.M.'s of lodges were read; it appeared that the Leicester Lodge, No. 19, had been very successful during the year, a large number of advancements having taken place; the visit of the moveable Grand Lodge to Leicester, in the autumn of 1870, having given an impetus to Mark Masonry, which has been of great advantage to the Order. The report from the Knights of Malta Lodge, No. 30, was also favourable, the lodge being in regular working order. Several candidates having been advanced, the W.M. of the Howe Lodge, No. 21 (the Rev. W. Langley, D.P.G.M., P.G. Mk. Ch. of Eng.) reported that the lodge had met regularly, but no advancements had taken place; he attributed the stagnation into which Mark Masonry had fallen in Melton Mowbray, chiefly to the operation of the rule requiring that the Master of a Mark Lodge should have previously filled the chair in the Craft, owing to that he (the W.M.) had been obliged to take office again while there were two worthy and thoroughly competent brethren, who for this reason, were necessarily passed over. Bro. G. Toller jun., regretted the unfavourable report from Melton, and fully coincided in the views of the D.Prov.G.M., and asked the Prov.G.M. whether it would be competent for them to pass any resolution on the subject. The Prov.G.M. thought that as the matter was still under consideration, it was not desirable to do so. Bro. S. S. Partridge, Prov.G. Sec. and W.M.-elect, was presented to the Prov.G.M. for installation, and the dispensation authorising his installation having been read (he not being a Craft P.M.), a Board of Installed Masters was formed, he was regularly installed and afterwards saluted. The Prov.G.M. then appointed and invested his Prov.G. Officers for the ensuing year, the Rev. S. Spittal, W.M. 30, being the D.Prov.G.M. Some other business having been transacted the Prov.G. Lodge was closed, and Bro. Partridge immediately entered upon the duties of his office as W.M. of No. 19, by investing his officers. Space being an object a list of the appointments need not be given, but it may be stated that probably this lodge is stronger in its officers than any other lodge, Craft or otherwise, in the province; amongst those who hold office are the W.M.'s of the three Craft lodges in the town, four Craft Past Masters, and Dr. Haycroft, G.Mark Chaplain of England. The Treasurer's report having been passed, two candidates for advancement presented themselves, and duly received from the W.M. this honourable degree, viz. : Bros. J. M. McAllister, Sec. 279, and W. Williamson, S.D. 1391. The whole of the ceremony was carefully and effectively rendered, the almost perfect working of the W.M. being especially remarked, and conclusively proving that Bro. Partridge was the right man in the right place. Three candidates having been proposed, the lodge was closed, and the installation supper took place, presided over by the W.M., who afterwards, in a very terse and happy manner, gave the usual toasts, his own health (proposed by the I.P.M.) being received with musical honours. Thus ended one of the most successful meetings ever held in Leicester, in connection with this degree, the number attending would probably have been even larger, but for the near approach of the consecration of the Commercial Lodge, No. 1391.

SURREY.

GUILDFORD.—Percy Lodge (No. 114).—The regular meeting of the above lodge was held at the Angel Hotel, Guildford, on Thursday last. In the absence, through indisposition, of the W. M., the Earl Percy, M.P., the chair was taken by the Rev. G. R. Portal, M.W.G.M.M., who advanced Bro. G. B. Smallpiece, of Craft Lodge, No. 370, to the degree of Mark Master Mason. Bro. Earl Percy was then re-elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Gilbert Smallpiece was re-elected Treasurer. At the conclusion of business the brethren adjourned to a banquet, which was presided over by the M.W.G.M.M., and served in Bro. Michaux's usual style.

Poetry.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND AND BERWICK-ON-TWEED.

By Bro. J. S. Macgregor, P.M. 393, Berwick, and P.G. Org. Northumberland.

The following verses were sung by the author in the presence of the Right Hon. Earl Percy, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Northumberland, on the occasion of the banquet of last meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge in Berwick.

AIR—Garry Owen.

Here sit I, an old Freeman of sixty odd years,
All my sorrows and joys, all my smiles, all my tears,
Are bound up with Berwick, that old Border town
That stands first on the page of old Albion's renown;
That of all other spots in the country can say,
Alone independent she stands here to-day.
She's a nation herself, for pray you, take heed,
'Tis Great Britain and Ireland and Berwick-on-Tweed.

In the days when contention was rife in the land,
How the wave of war surg'd o'er the spot where we stand!
How the red blood would course, and the dark eyes would gleam,
When Berwick was ever the warrior's dream!
But back from her walls the opposing hosts hurl'd,
She emerg'd with a fame that stands first in the world;
You talk about England and Scotland, indeed!
'Tis Great Britain and Ireland and Berwick-on-Tweed.

I adore the old town that in centuries past
Has withstood the rude shock of war's deadliest blast,
Has seen kings and court beauties in panoplied seats,
While the tramp of mail'd thousands has rung through her streets;
And now that those days of her glory are o'er,
Shall her children be free, as her children of yore?
Aye, as long as her sons live, her bounds round to lead,
Say Great Britain and Ireland and Berwick-on-Tweed.

Come, pledge me a glass to our dear native town,
With a long hearty cheer let it find its way down;
Long may old Berwick flourish, and growl her old bear,
If to touch with her rights any fause loon should dare;
Let's drink to her trade, and replenish anew
To her sons, and her daughters so lovely to view;
Come, fill to the brim, and sing out "God speed"
To Great Britain and Ireland and Berwick-on-Tweed.

 225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
 "MASONIC JEWEL ATTACHER.—Bro. Adlard, of 225, High Holborn, W.C., has invented an attacher, which, from its simplicity and convenience, has only to be universally known to be universally adopted. It has long been a subject of complaint that the wearing of the honourable insignia of rank and merit which grace the breasts of so many of our Brethren, plays sad havoc with the fabric and material of the coat to which they are attached. Bro. Adlard's invention entirely obviates this, in addition to saving much time and difficulty in the proper arrangement of the jewels, and we have very great pleasure in recommending it, warranted as we are in doing so by our personal experience. The price (7s. 6d.) places it within the reach of all."—Masonic Magazine.
 Bro. Adlard's superior fitting Collars are also well worthy of the attention of the Craft.
 "We have much pleasure in recommending Bro. Adlard's Jewel Attacher for its convenience and usefulness."—Freemason.

- WILLIAM ALLISON, AGED 63 YEARS.
 He has been a Mason 27 years, having been initiated into the Barton Lodge, No. 723, in Hamilton, Canada West, in 1844; Exalted in the Royal Arch Chapter, No. 733, in 1845; Joined the Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, in 1848. Became a Knight Templar in 1856. He suffered a considerable time from disease of the throat, rendering it necessary for him, thirteen years ago, to undergo an operation; the result of which, and old age, unfits him to contribute anything towards his own support. He is entirely dependent on the small sum he receives from three Lodges and one Chapter as Tyler. He was formerly in good circumstances, having been a Foreman in a Boot and Shoe Makers' Warehouse, in Canada.

 He was initiated into the Temperance Lodge, No. 169, in 1851, exalted in the Domestic Chapter, No. 177, and has continued a subscribing member up to this time. Some years since he retired from business as a stevedore, with a moderate competency, but unwisely again embarked in business as a timber merchant, and through the recklessness of others has lost all his means, and now lives by the joint exertions of his aged wife by mangling clothes; he is sadly afflicted with deafness. Was a subscribing member to this Institution for some years.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.
 AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES
 ON THIS SUBJECT.
 BY W. E. N., No. 766.

No. XV. Sept. 2nd, 1871. The planting of colonies in the "desolate places of the earth" by the Anglo-Saxon race is an achievement which has astonished foreigners. Emerson says the "spawning power" of the Anglo-Saxons of Britain has sufficed to colonise great parts of the world, without reducing the numbers of the British people, who increased from 1851 to 1871, 3,999,834, or 14.13 per cent. According to prophecy, the seed of Abraham were to inhabit the earth, and to become great and powerful nations, by sending forth their children to other regions, and this without exhausting themselves. (See Gen. xxxv. 11, and Gen. xviii. 19.) "Ephraim shall become a multitude of nations." The Hebrew word mela, translated "multitude," means fullness, that is, the race was to become a populous one, and the nation considerable, not petty. England is one of the most densely-peopled countries in the world. With an area of only one-third of France, it has a population of 397 to the square mile, and equal to seven-ninths of hers. England has planted the United States, Canada, the Australian Continent, South Africa, &c. Although other nations of Anglo-Saxon (Gothic?) origin have not large territorial possessions, they are powerful in numbers; such for example are North Germany, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, North of France, Norway, Sweden, and parts of the Turkish Empire, West of the Black Sea. Thus the seed of Jacob already possess one half of the earth, and rules the world. Emerson (American) to give an idea of the Anglo-Saxon power of England and America said, fifteen years ago, the British Empire covers 5,000,000 square miles, and contains 220,000,000 souls, or one-fifth of the population of the globe. The United States, with a territory of 3,000,000 square miles, contains 20,000,000, exclusive of slaves; thus we have a population of English descent and language of 60,000,000, governing 245,000,000 souls.

The horn of Joseph's posterity is likened to the horn of the unicorn (rhinoceros), with which they were to push the people to the ends of the earth. The horn is a symbol of strength, power and importance. The Sons of Israel, wherever they locate themselves, are to push the people (the aborigines) to the end of the earth; as has been done everywhere by the Gothic or Saxon race. In these islands, the Britons were driven into Cornwall and Wales. In North America, India, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, and elsewhere, they have pushed the aborigines further and further, not always with humanity.

Israel was not only to encompass the earth, but to give birth to kings (See Gen. xvii. 6-16, and xxxv. 11.) The Anglo-Saxon race (while as Goths they dwelt near the Euxine,) elected a king (Alaric) who became the terror of Rome. The Goths, under him and his successors, founded many well-ordered communities in Germany and Northern Europe, and took possession of their islands, where they established seven separate kingdoms, which ultimately became one great state, under Egbert, A.D. 837. His grandson Alfred, settled the kingdom on a basis which still remains; and throughout all the revolutions and political convulsions that have occurred in this country, the monarchy has remained intact, with the short interregnum of Cromwell, the throne being filled by descendants of the Getae, Saxon, Norman, and German. No other people can point to such a line of kings.

In the migrations of that great branch of the Israelites known as the Anglo-Saxons, they were instrumental in conferring upon barbarous peoples the blessings of religion and civilisation. England was destined to be the "standard of the Lord" to the nations, and God has made the commerce, the political influence, the naval and military powers, and the language and literature, and the religious feeling of the Anglo-Saxons, the means of leavening the world and impressing mankind with holy principles, honourable desires, and giving them a purer faith. As Emerson says, England has inoculated all nations with her civilisation, tastes, and intelligence. Whatever brightness distinguishes society, is almost wholly due to the principles inculcated by the Anglo-Saxon race. Formerly, the great mass of every nation was in a state of bondage and oppression. Such a state of things is impossible now, because (it is alleged) of "public opinion." The Greeks and Romans, although highly civilised, slaughtered their slaves by thousands. The aborigines of America, Australia, &c., if not absorbed, soon die out, before the Saxon race. Of Asia, the seat of the great ancient empires, it has been said "The vast Asiatic monarchies are simultaneously rotting down." The Sultan with difficulty holds together his empire. In India, the only vitality left is European. The King of Burmah's empire remains only, because its profitable provinces are in English hands. Cochin-China is too weak to drive 150 French from its capital. The action of Persia depends upon St. Petersburg. In China, the palace of the Emperor, ruling one third of the human race, was burned, and himself humbled by an Anglo-Saxon army, half as large as his own body-guard. Japan is succumbing to this race." These are marvellous phenomena, to which history shows no parallel.

It is evident that among Christian nations, for some reason there has arisen an energy unknown amongst men. Among the Anglo-Saxon nations alone has this power appeared. The rest are withering away; they await (be numbed and torpid) some change which no one foresees, and which may either awaken them to new life or destroy them.

No. XVI. September, 9th 1871.—We have hitherto seen the Anglo-Saxons acting as the salt of the earth, purifying the base, and preserving what had in it, the principle of vitality, and was capable of righteous expansion: we must now consider their religious, political, and social characteristics, and see how far these agree with what was predicted of Israel, who was to lose its identity, that is, not to know itself or to be known as Israel, but to be called by another name until the time had come for realizing some of the promises and prophecies. Israel was to become a religious people, and to bless the people by their presence and settlements. Israel was to be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, and was to proclaim the great truths of which she was the depository. This great and glorious mission has been (though not as yet completely) fulfilled by the Anglo-Saxons, and by no other people. They have translated the Bible into nearly every living language, and by means of their missionaries have distributed it throughout the world. Although Israel, in these latter days, was to furnish witnesses to the faith, and to constitute the true church, that body was not to be so religiously united as to be of one mind on all points of religion, but was to be divided, although having a distinctive religious designation (see Isa. xlv. 3). This is characteristic of the church, as it exists among the Anglo-Saxons and the kindred races, as witness the number of sects and religious denominations into which the Christian church is divided. Formerly these divisions gave rise to mutual persecutions and recriminations, but now the sectarian bitterness has become much softened; the Protestant and Catholic, the Churchman and Dissenter, and the Jew join together in one common work of philanthropy and religion.

No. XVII. September 16th, 1871.—Religion and philanthropy are inseparably united. Religion is the love of God; philanthropy the love of man. In both, the affection must manifest itself in action. Israel then must be animated by love of their fellow man, as they are by their love of God. This was predicted of Israel in their new state, (see Isa. lviii 6-7.) England stands foremost in the works of philanthropy; our national debt is proof of that fact. It was not incurred to achieve territorial conquests; but to defend other people against their invaders, and to ensure their independence. England has ever evinced her sympathy, and often afforded help to foreign peoples struggling against oppression, and has been an asylum for exiles of all races. Other Saxon nations participate in this honour, but England stands pre-eminent. The country is covered with evidences of England's active philanthropy in the form of charitable institutions of various kinds, which excite the admiration of the world. The national poor-rate, amounting to more than seven and a half millions sterling per annum, must not be forgotten, nor that this provision for the poor and needy is open to foreigners who seek our shores for various reasons. Moreover, should a misfortune befall a people in a foreign land, either from war, famine, fire, or plague, the national spirit of benevolence is stirred, and help flows from all quarters and all classes. No matter whether the sufferers be Turks or Parsees, Jews or Christians; the Saxon race everywhere exhibits the same readiness to send help. The propagation of Anglo-Saxon principles has had great influence in softening the rigours of war, and will no doubt ultimately suppress war altogether. Nations are a long while learning such lessons, but it cannot be denied that wars (although still very horrible) are not carried on with the ferocity they formerly were. Dreadful tales of horrible atrocities committed by the belligerents in the late Franco-German war, were circulated, but on inquiry, they mostly turn out to be either fictions, or gross exaggerations. The Queen of Prussia, the Crown Princess, and other ladies of high rank, left their luxurious homes to attend the hospitals in which were sick and wounded French and German soldiers, and although towards the end of the war, the Germans had the care of 300,000 prisoners, they were all carefully attended to, and had many comforts. It is very gratifying to find in the Prussians so noble a trait of the Anglo-Saxon character. The Goths (their, and our progenitors) have always been described as a wild and ferocious people, but as their armies were frequently augmented by auxiliaries of different races, the Goths have doubtless been accused of many excesses of which they were not guilty, as even the Romans in the fifth century gave them the credit of being a generous race, and (as Anglo-Saxons) having no superiors.

ERNEST AND FALK.

CONVERSATIONS FOR FREEMASONS.

BY BRO. GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM LESSING.

TRANSLATED BY

BRO. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, F.S.A., KNOWN AS CRYPTONYMUS.

CONVERSATION.—III.

ERNEST. You have escaped me all day long in the crowd of our friends; but I follow you to your chamber.

FALK. Have you anything important to say? for I confess I am myself too tired for mere idle conversation.

ERNEST. You laugh at my curiosity.

FALK. Your curiosity?

ERNEST. Which you were able to excite so strongly this morning.

FALK. What were we talking of this morning?

ERNEST. Of the Freemasons.

FALK. Well! I have not betrayed the secret to you. Have I?

ERNEST. The secret which cannot be spoken, you say?

FALK. Well, well; I am easy again.

ERNEST. But you told me something about the Freemasons that astounded me, that I did not expect, that has made me think.

FALK. And what was that?

ERNEST. Oh, do not torment me! You surely

FALK. Ah! yes, I remember it again, and it was that which made you so absent among your friends all day?

ERNEST. It was that; and I cannot rest unless you answer me at least one question.

FALK. That answer must depend on the tenor of the question.

ERNEST. How can you prove to me, or even make probable, that the Freemasons have such high and noble intentions?

FALK. Intentions? Did I say anything about intentions? I am not aware of it. But as you cannot have the remotest conception of the true deeds of the Freemasons, I have only drawn your attention to one point, on which there is much possibly not imagined by the politic minds of statesmen. Perhaps the Freemasons work at this question. Perhaps! And this was only to rid you of the prejudice that all the places whereon it is necessary to build have been already occupied, and that the necessary work has been already distributed among the hands.

ERNEST. Turn about now, as you will. Enough, I have formed the idea from what you say, that the Freemasons are people who have voluntarily undertaken to obviate by their labours those evils of the State which are unavoidable.

FALK. This definition, at any rate, does not shame the Freemasons. Stick to it! But understand it correctly, and mix nothing up with it that does not belong to it. The unavoidable evils of the State! Not of this or that state! Not the unavoidable evils which once taken up by any peculiar form or constitution, naturally result in this form of government. With these the Freemason has nothing to do, at least as a Freemason. The assuaging and curing of this he leaves to the citizen, who may employ himself according to his discrimination, his courage, or at his peril. Evils of a different kind, of a far greater degree, are the subject of his activity.

ERNEST. I have understood it perfectly. Not evils caused by the discontented citizen, but evils unavoidable, even with the happiest.

FALK. Right! To counteract—how did you express it?—to counteract these?

ERNEST. Yes.

FALK. The expression is strong. To counteract? To obviate them wholly? That cannot be: for with them the state itself would be utterly destroyed. They must not even be demonstrated at once to those who have no perception of them. So create this perception in many at a distance, to nourish its growth, to graft it, to generate, to make it blossom, can that now be called counteracting it? Do you therefore understand why I said that although the Freemasons were at work, centuries might elapse before it could be said—This have they done.

ERNEST. As well as I now comprehend the second portion of the riddle—good deeds rendering good deeds unnecessary.

FALK. Well! now go and study those evils, and learn to know them all, and weigh their effects one against another, and be assured that this study will discover things to you, that in days of anxiety seem to be the most cogent and incontrovertible influences against Providence and Virtue. This knowledge, this illumination, will render you peaceful and happy—even without the work of the Mason.

ERNEST. You lay considerable stress on the word name.

FALK. Because you can be anything without being called so.

ERNEST. Very well! I understand; but to return to my question, to which I must now give a somewhat different form: as I now know those evils against which Freemasonry is arrayed.

FALK. You know them?

ERNEST. Did not you yourself name them to me?

FALK. I have incidentally enumerated a few of them as instances. Only a very few of the most evident, the most apparent to the dimmest of eyes. But how many are there remaining, which, although they do not reach so far, are not so evident, not so incontestible, are no less certain, not less inevitable?

ERNEST. Then let me confine my question to that part only which you have indicated to me. How can you prove to me from that portion that the eyes of the Freemasons are really directed to it? You are silent. You meditate.

FALK. Certainly not upon what is a fitting reply to your question. But I do not know to what motive I should ascribe the inquiry.

ERNEST. But you will answer, if I tell you my reason?

FALK. I promise it.

ERNEST. I know, and fear, your penetration.

FALK. My penetration?

ERNEST. I am afraid you will sell me your speculations as facts.

FALK. Many thanks for the compliment!

ERNEST. Are you angry, or hurt?

FALK. Not at all! Rather should I have thanked you for bestowing the name of penetration upon that which you might have called quite otherwise.

ERNEST. Certainly not. Yet I know how the mind deceives itself, and unconsciously attributes plans and motives to others, which they had never entertained.

FALK. But what leads us to form opinions as to the intentions and motives of others? Surely their actions singly?

ERNEST. From what else? And here I come again to my question. From what single action of the Freemasons can we judge that it is even a portion of their aim to level and do away with all those divisions which state and state-craft have produced among men? and to reunite them?

FALK. And, besides this, without in any way hurting this state-craft and those states.

ERNEST. So much the better? Is it not, perhaps, necessary that there should even be deeds to prove this, if certain peculiarities, certain variations, leading to it, or springing from it only exist. In your speculations you must have commenced thus—that is to say, supposing your system to be only an hypothesis.

FALK. You are still suspicious: but I trust to dispel your qualms if I reveal to you one of the fundamental maxims of Freemasonry.

ERNEST. And which?

FALK. One of which they have never made a secret, according to which they have ever acted before the eyes of the whole world.

ERNEST. And that is—?

FALK. To admit every worthy and honourable man fitted for the art, without distinction of country, of creed, of social position, into their Order.

ERNEST. Indeed!

FALK. Of course, this fundamental rule seems to take for granted the pre-existence of men already above these petty divisions, rather than to have for an object to create such; yet the nitre must exist in the air, before it clings to wall and chamber in the form of saltpetre.

ERNEST. Oh yes.

FALK. And why should not the Freemasons be here permitted to make use of a usual artifice—that of carrying on a portion of their mysteries quite openly—to obviate suspicion, ever willing to suppose something else than it perceives?

ERNEST. Why not?

FALK. Why should not the magician deal in broken silver, the better to conceal the truth that he can make it himself?

ERNEST. Why not?

FALK. Ernest! Do you hear me? You answer as in a dream, I think.

ERNEST. No, friend! but I have enough; enough for to-night. To-morrow—at earliest dawn—I leave for town.

FALK. So soon? and why?

ERNEST. You know me, and ask? How long do you remain at the watering-place?

FALK. I came but the day before yesterday.

ERNEST. Then I shall see you again ere you leave. Farewell! good night!

FALK. Good night; farewell!

The spark had lighted: Ernest went away and became a Freemason. What he at first found there is the subject of a fourth and fifth conversation, with which—the road divides.

FOOTSTEPS OF FREEMASONRY;

OR,

FREEMASONRY IN RELATION TO AUTHENTIC HISTORY.

By W. VINER BEDOLFE, M.D., J.W., 1329., Hon. Secretary Sphynx Lodge of Instruction.

In pursuing our subject I cannot but remark that it is far from my desire to dogmatise, either as to the mode of our connection with ancient times generally, or with that particular branch of ancient civilisation, whether Egyptian, Greek, or Roman, to which our traditions may be due.

For my own part I sat down to investigate without preconceived opinions, collected the facts within my reach and arranged them, having little more to do with the programme I then wrote, than to find the simplest words for the expression of those facts.

A student of the French University, a loungee at the Sorbonne, and an habitué of the College of France, I have certainly listened with delight to the successors of M. Guizot and other great men who have immortalised that spot, and tried to adopt their reasoning, being indebted to my note-book for some facts, and believe that should a Rénan or Colenso arise in Freemasonry, we should neither lose our own self-respect, nor be lessened in the esteem of the world by the light they would throw upon it.

We have already pointed out enough to show, that we are really the children of an ancient people, of an old civilisation, where we see our doctrines and usages reflected as in a glass, and which have descended in an unbroken stream from this source even although for a time, in passing through a dry and barren historical period, they may both in form and substance have partially disappeared from view, or be traced only with difficulty, perhaps with doubt. Still it is now with us in renewed life, and one may soliloquise with Wordsworth in his Duddon sonnets,

"I thought of thee, my partner and my guide,
As being passed away. Vain sympathy,
For backward Dudden as I cast mine eyes,
I see what was, and is, and will abide.
Still glides the stream, and will for ever glide,
Its form remains, its function still the same."
We will now resume our fragments.

WARDENS OR TRIBUNES.

The former is the modern, the latter the ancient word. Warden signifies according to Blackstone, a guardian or custodian, equivalent to the Roman "custos." In this sense Cicero hath it, "Custo fani," guardian of the temple, and Horace says poetically, "Custos veræ virtutis rigidus que satelles." "True virtue's sure custodian and guard."

We ourselves derive this word from the French word "gardiën." Of late its conventional meaning has been much extended. If, however, the word is modern, the Masonic signification is altogether ancient, technical and specific.

As already stated, Numa, the kingly Roman and our royal founder, ordained that "three should rule a lodge," Latin "tres," dative case "tribus," hence the rulers of any collegium were called Tribunes, although subsequently the numbers were modified.

The Tribunes (one of them being the W. Master) form the governing body and from the rank of Tribunes only can a Master be elected. Our lectures also enforce the same doctrine, when each Warden, on being questioned as to the emblem he bears, replies, "this instrument refers to the measures I am bound to take in conjunction with your W.M. in ruling and governing this lodge."

Cicero enforces this doctrine when he says, "Tribuni ex collegio sententiæ pronuntiant." "The Tribunes (Wardens) pronounce the decisions of their college or lodge." Hence the functions of our Tribunes or Wardens, including the Master, are precisely analogous to those of the ancients, and it might not be wrong to revert to that very ancient and noble word.

It is also evident that tribunes were of different rank, and possibly some members even had point of precedence, as Horace in his satires alludes to something of this kind, when he says, "At Novius Collega gradu post me sedat uno." "For my (brother) or lodge fellow sits below me by one degree" (Sat. I, 6, 41.) and the word is here used as a legal term, and in a legal sense. But there is a difficulty with even the most well known Roman things. Our lectures say, "Three rule a lodge," because at the beginning three bore sway; this is strictly true. "Five to hold a lodge, seven or more to make it perfect." The latter is not well accounted for by referring to the several liberal arts and sciences, for in the doctrines of Pythagoras, seven was considered a sacred number, and adapted to religious purposes, and Aulus Gellius devotes an entire chapter, quoting also Varro, who devoted an entire volume to the elucidation of its virtues and powers. Therefore of these Masonic numbers, the two on which we place greatest stress are connected with old ideas, with ancient times.

Before coming to the office of W.M. we will have a slight digression on minor points, and as far as may with propriety be done, refer to the signs.

TOKENS OF RECOGNITION.

Of course in Brotherhoods it is necessary there should be tokens of recognition, thus Christians have for ensign the Cross.

We have already alluded to the "Hand" as of importance in Masonry, with the Romans it was a common sign as a plight or pledge of faith. Thus Cicero uses the phrase "manum dare," to give the hand, meaning to consent to anything. "Aram tenens," holding the Altar, is used by him as a legal term, to signify he swears, the hand upon and holding the altar, to give the highest solemnity to the oath.

We must also bear in mind the Romans avoided jargon in their legal forms, and used only words in common use.

It was however our Royal Founder, King Numa, who first instituted, as a law giver, "manual signs," and ordained (Pliny. Lib. I, chap. 23,) that as a sign of faith the right hand should be offered in a certain manner, "manuque ad digitos involuta," with the hand rolled back upon the fingers.

The Romans also generally looked upon any promise or right conferred by stretching out the right hand as a solemn sacrament.

Cicero in his oration for Rabirius says, "Let me conjure you by that right hand which you stretched out to King Dejoturus in token of mutual hospitality, that right hand not more successful in the terrors of war than faithful to the engagements of peace."

"The 'Hand' was therefore with them, as with modern Freemasons, an important emblem of faith, and certain grips were ordained and instituted as signs by our kingly founder and which have descended even to our day. 'Scires e sanguine natos,' says Ovid. 'The children's deeds proclaim their sires.'"

It may be interesting also to remark that they had lucky and unlucky fingers, and Perseus (Lib. 2,) speaks of the middle finger as "infami digito," that polluted finger.

TO SETTLE DIFFERENCES AMICABLY.

It is further a principle amongst us to settle differences amicably. The Romans also endeavoured by the aid of a mutual friend, called "Arbiter unicum," to do the same; and he who held out was looked upon as litigious and troublesome. (See Aulus Gellius, Lib. xii. chap. 12.)

I could with much satisfaction carry this chapter through many points interesting to Masons, such as for instance, "to wash away pollution," "capital punishment among the ancients," &c., but for obvious reasons they cannot be discussed in a public journal.

THE MASONIC TEMPLE.

In Masonry two distinct temples are clearly alluded to, one evidently taken from some tradition of the Temple of Vesta, with its central fire, which is embodied in the first part.

In the latter part of Masonry the description of the temple presented is altogether different, and is simply copied from the first book of Kings; yet even here the Roman idea, (Rome of the Emperors) may be recognised, and is in nothing whatever opposed to it. I will run over a few points of resemblance between them.

THE PORCHWAY ENTRANCE.

The porchway entrances to the temple were places of great notoriety in ancient times. In Greece the philosophers taught there, the followers of Zeno have been par excellence called Stoics, from Stoa a porch, it was there their master first taught "that virtue was the only good," and opposed as deluded, the Peripatetics, who wandering without and around, declared it to be "only the greater good," of which we may remark then as now.

"Cælestis animis, tantæne iræ."

Oh! where can the difference be,
"Twixt, didle-dum and didle-dee."

At Rome the porchway of the Temple of Castor formed the City Exchange, and thither resorted the stock-jobbers, and money-changers, who doubtless then as now bonnetted incautious and curious visitors.

The porch of the Temple of Liberty is also spoken of by Cicero when he says, (Oratio in Milone) "but the confessions now extorting in Temple of Liberty go hard against Milo." As it was only slaves who gave evidence under torture, the instrument of their torture must have been kept under its sacred roof. Are the votaries of Liberty ever to remain the most inconsistent of men.

We may further remark that hard by the temple were Halls, and included in their consecrated precincts were Courts of Justice; in others Courts sat, and even the Senate, because it was reckoned unlawful for them to meet otherwise than in a holy or consecrated place. We thus see the origin of our custom of consecration, evidently handed down by tradition, even as Laic's.

The porchway, in fact, of nearly every temple was devoted to some public use, one of them being devoted to our friends the auctioneers, and another to that useful order, public criers, now extinguished for ever by gigantic posters.

The private houses of the rich had also their porchways. Aulus Gellius, in the reign of Adrain, is very critical on these porchways, and says it was through them that all visitors entered, that there they left their equipages, servants, and horses, often very numerous. From this porchway a staircase, winding or otherwise, led to the inner chamber, or tablinum, where books were kept and business of importance settled.

THE PILLARS AT THE PORCHWAY ENTRANCE.

The pillars placed by King Solomon at the porchway entrance, are supposed to be frequently alluded to in Masonry, as Crabbe assures us.

"Boaz and Jachin through the earth renowned."

The Romans were, however, singularly fond of adorning their houses with pillars or columns, and from some remarks in Cicero we gather that, like armorial bearings of our own day, they were taxed, for Rome was a place ground down with taxation.

A pillar in such cases stood on each side of the doorway, and among the ornaments of their capitals are enumerated "spherical globes."

The temples had each its pillars likewise, and some are enumerated as having had only two, at the entrance.

Both pillars and posts too were indeed of great importance amongst the Romans, and of great resort. The latter "posts, or cartasta," standing places, or even pillories existed publicly, where fraudulent bankrupts were punished, and slaves attached by their feet for sale. They existed also in almost every house, and it is especially alluded to as a favourite punishment by materfamilias when any graceful slave was thought to stand too high in the favour of her master. It was to a post, and not in stocks, that St. Paul's feet were fastened at Lystra.

It was to these Catasta the martyrs were attached, and they are every where spoken of in the narrations of ancient martyrdoms, (see Prudentius an early Christian poet.) This institution has been thus handed down almost to our times, by the fostering care of Rome. Of course this is not Freemasonry, but points out how ancient customs and memories traditionally descend.

But to return—Pillars, or columns, have always, since the time of Lot's wife, held a prominent part in history. The Roman pillars of Trajan and Antoninus, erected to commemorate the exploits of those reigns, and crowned with statues of their respective Emperors, were the models of, and celebrated throughout the world long, long, before that one, copied from them, and hated of Communists, arose, and of which as it may be truly said, as has been said of one nearer home, it "Like a tall bully, lifts its head and lies."

Certain pillars in the Forum formed the resort of different classes. Prigs, scamps, small brokers, and fraudulent tradesmen hung around the Mænian pillar, at once the Bow Street, Old Bailey, and voting place of Rome. At others lawyers, patrons, clients, idlers, quidnuncs, and unemployed were mingled indiscriminately together and contemporously styled Pillararians (Columnarii).

Hither also to the Rostrum or pulpit, which was the bow or beak of a ship attached to the same column, came patriots, and harangued the people in the sacred, but oft misused name of liberty.

Hither also came the claimant of the day, who pretending to be the son of one of the noble and virtuous Gracchi, was by the sweet voices, and votes of the inferior voters, (Quirites)—the mobilis vulgus—then as now ignorant, violent, and credulous, in a craze of delusion elected to the high office of Tribune of Rome.

By these also sometimes passed true patriots, of one of whom, Marcus Cato by name, Cicero, lovingly tells us in his oration for Murena that he squared the conduct of his life by the unerring rule of reason.

It was near others that booksellers stood, and where, according to Horace, small poets recited and sold their wares, and which often neither "Gods nor Man," "non Dii, non homines," could preserve from that end which the great poet of our days tells us is "the goal of ill-conditioned poetry."

"To bind a book, to line a box;
Or serve to curl a maiden's locks."

So at least says Tennyson.

Horace expresses their doom in shorter terms and as brevity is the soul of wit, I prefer his.

Of course this is not all Freemasonry, but any chat savouring of its ancient haunts may amuse, even if it does not instruct us.

In our next we propose to resume the "Fragments."

INAUGURATION OF THE MASONIC TEMPLE, HASSKEUI.

The Masonic Temple at Hasskeui was inaugurated on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst., by a banquet, followed by a concert and ball. The building, which has been erected by shares, under the auspices of the Caledonian Lodge (Scotch rite), cost a little over £T.1,400, exclusive of the site, and is a neat and substantial edifice, with, however, an exterior totally and singularly devoid of Masonic character, and even of the slightest Masonic emblem. The internal arrangement is excellent. The lodge-room is spacious and lofty, with a handsome chandelier in the centre, pendant from a waggon-shaped ceiling, studded with stars, to represent the cerulean vault, which is the figurative roof of a Masonic lodge. This room was on Tuesday night the scene of one of those assemblages which, in this region, are only to be witnessed in Hasskeui, and which in that place are by no means infrequent. The interest in the event was not confined to members of the Craft; of the 120 or more persons who attended the banquet a considerable number belonged to the "outer world," and there were also many ladies—an innovation all the more commendable as the banquet was to be followed by a ball, at which the presence of the fair sex was indispensable. The chair was occupied by W. Bro. Henderson, ex-Master of the Caledonian Lodge, and Chairman of the Building Committee. On the entrance, however, of the R.W. Bro. Brown, District Grand Master of Turkey, who wore the collar and insignia of his office, and was received upstanding by the company, (but without the usual Masonic honours, owing to the presence of "profane persons") Bro. Henderson, though belonging to a rite which does not owe allegiance to the chiefs of the English Order, still, in deference to so distinguished a member of the Craft, offered him the gavel, the possession of which confers authority over all assemblies of Masons. This formal compliment was, of course, politely declined by the R.W.D.G.M.; who thereupon took his seat at the left of the Chairman, having near him his late Deputy, Bros. Laurie, Smythe, P.M. Bulwer, and P.G.D.G. Treasurer; and Wetherilt, W.M. of the Leinster Lodge, (Irish rite), which holds its meetings in the Temple. On the right of the Chairman were two leading "profanes"—as non-masons are called by the initiated—Sir Philip Francis, H.M. Consul-General and Judge of the Supreme Consular Court, and Shanks Bey, Superintendent Engineer at the Imperial Arsenal at Hasskeui. Among the representatives of local lodges present were W. Bros. Temple and Hanly, the Present and Immediate Past Masters of the Oriental Lodge. The banquet consisted of an excellent and well served cold collation, provided by Mr. Rowe, of Hasskeui, assisted by Mr. Nunn of Galata, and accompanied by a liberal flow of choice wines. Grace was sung before and after the repast by the "Hasskeui chorus" and at intervals music was played by a band stationed in the gallery at the west end of the lodge-room.

At the conclusion of the banquet,

The Chairman said they had met together for the purpose of congratulating each other on the completion of their work, and he, as Chairman of the Building Committee, took this opportunity of thanking the shareholders for the manner in which they had come forward in their department, which had made the Committee's labours light. He was sure it must be a source of satisfaction to them and all there assembled to know that not only had this building been a boon to them as men and Masons, but that it had been a financial success—(hear, hear)—and that was something in this hard world, multiplied and divided by pounds, shillings, and pence. It was something, he knew, to the Committee, who felt in the completion of the work, pleased with themselves and with everybody else. It was not only something to have been able to raise a considerable amount of money, but it was important in regard of the great amount of good that would result to them, not merely as men and Masons, but as Englishmen in the land of strangers. (Cheers.) It was great, also, as illustrating that "be up and doing" spirit of our race which brooked no obstacles, which we had carried with us through time and space, and had made our land and name famous throughout the world. (Cheers.) We Englishmen did not readily assimilate with strangers, however long we resided with them. We still loved to retain our peculiar characteristics whether good or bad, and nothing was so pre-eminent in our thoughts as carrying with us our own sources of instruction and our own arts whether physical or intellectual. This was to be seen every day illustrated among the British colony of Constantinople, and more especially in the village in which they were now assembled. Today, for instance, they saw a few Foresters who wished to have their Society transplanted to the land of their adoption. On the other hand, they had seen Mechanic's Institutes, struggling, at first, it was true, amidst difficulties and neglect, rising ultimately to a condition of more harmonious efficiency. It was pleasing at times, and more especially at gatherings such as this, to reflect that the native spirit of yawash-yawash of this land did not wash out the energies and determination of the Englishmen resident here. (Cheers and laughter.) It was about three years ago that a few Masons met at Hasskeui, wishing to see the society brought into their midst, and they all knew how many had since gathered within the magic circle, in which we were taught to act more truly, and to think more kindly, and exert greater influence for our mutual good. (Applause.) How successful had been the project of having a temple of their own they had evidenced before them in the building which they had met to inaugurate. They must all of them hope that the edifice would remain a monument of what men could do who had confidence in each other and in the principles they professed. He felt highly gratified and honoured at the presence of their invited guests to-night. More especially did he feel highly pleased with the presence in their midst of the ladies—(cheers)—whose influence was always hallowing. Indeed, he felt he might be easily tempted to communicate to them all the secrets he was in possession of. (Laughter.) One thing he could tell them, that if Freemasonry failed to make their sweethearts more faithful, their husbands more kind, and their sons more dutiful, they might be sure that with those on whom it did produce such an effect, Freemasonry was only skin-deep. (Applause.) But he hoped that every Mason would watch his daily conduct and life in his family and outside, so that no such reproach could ever be made against any one belonging to their Order, but that many happy faces would be seen around them and see their work. It was their wish that each and all should thoroughly enjoy themselves, and carry away with them pleasing reminiscences of the opening of the Hasskeui Masonic Temple. (Cheers.)

Mr. W. Dorrell, Secretary to the Building Committee, then read the report, from which it appeared that there had been an excess of £260 in the expenditure over the receipts. The number of shareholders was 67, and they held 295 shares, or an average of 5½ each. If every shareholder took an additional share the capital account would be balanced with a surplus.

After what is the first toast at all festive assemblages of British Masons, "the Queen and the Craft," the Chairman proposed "the health of the R. W. Bro. Brown," District Grand Master, which was drunk amid loud cheers.

Bro. Brown briefly expressed his thanks for the compliment paid to him. He had always felt very great interest in this undertaking. He had assisted at its birth, and again when it cut its teeth, and he concluded from what he saw and had just heard in the report, it had now passed through all the dangerous crises of infancy. He wished every prosperity to the Temple and the Lodges assembling therein.

The Chairman, in proposing the next toast, observed that it always gave them great pleasure to see amongst them their esteemed friend and fellow-countryman, Sir Philip Francis (loud cheers) and thanks to his Honour's kindness, the pleasure was not a rare one. Individually and collectively they were under many obligations to Sir Philip in his official capacity. He (the Chairman) was sure the Hasskeuites would never lose an opportunity, such as the present occasion afforded, of demonstrating the place which their Consul-General held in their esteem and regard. (Cheers). It would be altogether out of place for him (the chairman) to undertake his eulogy. Sir P. Francis came here from Alexandria, bearing the character of an upright and honourable gentleman, whom every body delighted to honour. Well, everybody knew that he had fully sustained that character in Constantinople. He was always ready with kindly advice and shrank from no trouble whenever he could serve the interests of his countrymen. (Cheers). The founders of this temple were especially indebted to him. In fact, he was very nearly becoming the proprietor of the site on which the building stood. They owed much to him for his advice and assistance and the way in which it was given made them doubly appreciate it. He (the Chairman) called upon them, then, to drink, upstanding, "Health and long life to our worthy countryman, Sir Philip Francis."

The toast was drunk amidst reiterated rounds of cheering.

Sir P. Francis, in responding, said he was unfortunately not a brother, but though a non-mason he was gratified at seeing the result achieved by the originators of this undertaking. He had no idea that they had contemplated so considerable a building. He could not but notice the innovation of the presence of ladies at a Masonic banquet. At least, he had called it an innovation, in speaking just now to Mr. Henderson, though he knew that the members of the Craft were very susceptible on the score of innovations. Mr. Henderson, with more skill than candour, knowing his (Sir Philip's) ignorance, rejoined that it was the revival of an ancient custom which prevailed he did not know how many thousands of years ago. (Laughter) With regard to the flattering terms in which the Chairman had spoken of him, he could only say that he did not think a man in his position could forbear giving all the aid he could to institutions which had for their object the good of all. There was nothing, he hoped, which Englishmen, whether official or non-official, would not try to do for their fellow-countrymen, nor, he trusted, would it ever be a great reproach to anybody to say that he did more than he ought. (Loud cheers). He, for his own part, would not say that he had done more than he ought for Hasskeui—(renewed cheering)—but he had been brought so constantly into connection with the Hasskeuites, sometimes on cheerful occasions, sometimes on melancholy occasions, that he had acquired a great affection for the place. It was said once in satire of the English in India, when they were accused of doing so little for the country to which they emigrated, that were all of them to leave in a mass, all that they had done would soon pass away and there would be no evidence left that an Englishman had ever been in the country. That was not true at any time, and less so now. However, similar irony could not be employed in reference to Hasskeui, for were every Englishman and Englishwoman to quit Hasskeui, in a body, they would leave behind them abundant evidence of having dwelt there. All that, had not been done by Government impulse or patronage, but by the spontaneous energy of the colonists themselves. He did not know that some day there would be no English family in Hasskeui. He did not know, because he was told that some noble person had tendered advice to some person in authority to dispense with English labour altogether. (Derisive cheering). Whether that was a good friend to England and to Turkey, he left them to imagine; but he trusted nevertheless that they would continue to do their work here in a way which would be useful to the Government and not unprofitable to themselves. (Applause). Sir Philip concluded by repeating his thanks, and expressing a wish for the prosperity of the temple and of all British institutions in Hasskeui.

The next part of the proceedings was the presentation to the Chairman of a Past Masters jewel, (manufactured by Bro. Kenning) and a life-membership in the Caledonian Lodge; and of a handsome ring for Mrs. Henderson, the Chairman's wife. The presentation was made by the present W.M. of the lodge, Bro. Warren, and was suitably acknowledged by the chairman.

The Chairman, in proposing the health of Mr. Shanks, said they knew what a good friend that gentleman was to all of them—how heartily he entered into all matters connected with their social comfort and welfare. It must be a source of satisfaction to Mr. Shanks, filling the position he did, in a hard critical community like Hasskeui, dearly loving a grumble—part of a Briton's birth-right—to know that they were not willing to part with him. It must be a satisfaction to Mr. Shanks to know that he was really loved, respected and esteemed by such a community. (Cheers).

Mr. Shanks said that, though not a Mason, he hoped they would not think he did not take an interest in Hasskeui Masonry, as one of the institutions of the place. He believed, with Sir Philip Francis, that even if they were all to leave this place, they would leave their mark behind them. It was needless to refer to how Sir Philip had contributed in the establishment of the monuments they saw around them of British spirit and perseverance and social feeling; but some of them were, no doubt, aware that in an article which had appeared in a certain paper it had actually been imputed as a fault to their revered friend that he took such an interest in the engineers. (Loud cheering). He (Mr. Shanks) was sure, however, that Sir Philip was not ashamed of them. There might be some amongst them who misconducted themselves, but take the community altogether he could assert that they did conduct themselves well. He was very much pleased in reading Mr. Brown's address to the District Grand Lodge, in which stress was laid on the care which should be taken as to the admission of persons into Masonry. The world could only judge of the merits of the Order by the conduct of those who belonged to it. (Hear, hear). He (Mr. Shanks) believed the lodges in Hasskeui were very particular in that respect, but he did not think that they would have any frequent occasion to blackball any of the community.

The health was next drunk of W.M. Warren, in proposing which the Chairman referred to the circumstance that Bro. Warren had been Master of lodges in Constantinople under the English, Scotch, and Irish rites. Bro. Temple, W.M. of the Oriental Lodge; Bro. Wetherill, of the Leinster; Bro. Walker, and the Building Committee; Mr. Barness, Builder of the Temple; Mr. Hanley, Editor of the Levant Times; W. Bro. Smythe and the Visitors; and the Ladies (responded to by Bro. Hampton) were subsequently toasted, some excellent songs being given in the intervals by Messrs. Till, Gowdie, Burfield, and Knighton.

The room was then cleared for the ball, which brought a further accession of guests, especially ladies, and was kept up with unflagging animation till dawn.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF HONOURS IN GRAND LODGE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—The period is fast approaching for the election and investment of the officers to serve in the Grand Lodge of England; many like myself would like to see those honours distributed with a more liberal hand. The two Wardens chairs should be rigidly preserved for brethren of rank and opulence, but below these two chairs the various offices ought to be open to all, if promotion, as we are taught, is to be according to merit and ability.

I maintain that every brother, who is worthy of the position of a Warden in any Provincial Grand Lodge should have the chance of being an officer of Grand Lodge if he likes. Let all Past and Present Provincial Grand Wardens of all Provinces be returned to Grand Lodge, and let them with others, be drawn from every year, and so fill up the Offices of Grand Lodge below the Wardens. If a brother who may be drawn declines, the vacancy is instantly supplied.

Perhaps if the subject were ventilated in your valuable paper, some good may accrue, and honour be distributed where honour is due, and many gain a position who cannot belong to a certain lodge, and who have not the remotest chance of falling into the present whirlpool of honour and promotion.

Yours, &c.,

A P. PROV. GRAND WARDEN.

INSTRUCTION.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—

In your "Masonic Tidings" in to-day's impression you have inadvertently printed Friday, the 26th inst., for Friday, the 3rd of May proximo, as the date of the intended visit of the Fidelity brethren to the Lodge of Instruction of the Burgoyne. Will you be good enough to correct the error in your next issue, and announce the meeting on the occasion of the proposed visit as for Friday evening, the 3rd of May, at 7 o'clock, at Bro. Green's, the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's-road, Kentish-town, N.W., at which Tavern the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction holds a meeting every Friday evening, as announced in its proper place in your weekly list of Metropolitan Masonic Meetings.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

SAMUEL POYNTER,

P.M. and Treas., Burgoyne Lodge, 902, Temple, April 13, 1872.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

Freemasons' Hall,

98, George Street, Edinburgh

30th March, 1872.

R.W. SIR AND BROTHER—

I have the honour to transmit by command of the M. W. The Grand Master, the annexed copy of a motion tabled by his lordship, at the last Quarterly Communication, and which will come up for discussion at the next Quarterly Communication, on 6th May, proximo.

This motion followed the unanimous approval of the Principal of The Grand Master's project for reducing the debt of Grand Lodge, the building of Halls throughout the Provinces, and the establishment of the Fund of Benevolence on a more extended basis, at a very full meeting of Grand Lodge at last Quarterly Communication, and is now submitted by his lordship to the earnest and favourable consideration of your lodge.

I remain, R. W. Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN LAURIE, Grand Clerk.

Moved by the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, W.M. Grand Master Mason of Scotland, and seconded by Brother William Mann, Past Senior Grand Warden. The motion anent a project for reducing debt, &c., having been unanimously carried, it is moved.

"That all lodges holding of this Grand Lodge shall pass a by-law enacting from each of their members an annual payment as a test of membership.

"That this payment in no case be less than 2d. per month, or 2s. per annum, and that this sum be collected quarterly by the Treasurer of each lodge, and paid over by him, with a detailed list of Members contributing, to the Provincial Grand Secretary, who will remit the same to Grand Lodge. Should the test of membership imposed by an individual lodge exceed the sum specified, the balance may be appropriated by the lodge itself, and from and after the passing of this by-law, only those members who have contributed their list of membership can have power to vote or take part in any business of the lodge."

Certified true copy,

JOHN LAURIE, Grand Clerk.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANTLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

ORATION,

By BRO. REV. J. HALFORD, PROV. G. CHAPLAIN,
LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.
*Delivered at the Consecration of the Commercial
Lodge, No. 1391.*

I must claim the kind indulgence of the brethren, inasmuch as the adequate and satisfactory discharge of the work which has been assigned to me as Provincial Grand Chaplain requires an acquaintance with Masonic history, and a familiarity with Masonic lore to which I have no pretensions. The very richness and abundance of materials which are at hand, the vastness of the subject, and its many aspects, are the great embarrassments in the way of doing justice on an occasion like the present, though I doubt not, a skilful and discriminating Craftsman might in the delivery of this oration erect a lasting and interesting monument, worthy to commemorate the dedication of that lodge to-day entering on a career, which there is ample reason for the prediction will be honourable to itself and the Craft, and useful to mankind.

On the historical aspect of Freemasonry I shall touch but slightly, I will refrain from speculations, (though of the greatest interest) as to the origin of Freemasonry, and the credibility of its early traditions. I will not pause to examine the theories which assign its parentage to one or other of the corporations of ancient Rome. I myself am disposed to refer its origin to one of the mediæval guilds, that of the Operative Masons. The Masonic ritual and Masonic emblems all lead to this inference.

Speculative Masons of the nineteenth century have good reason to be proud of the first fathers of Freemasonry. They may point with legitimate pride to those stately and superb edifices, the masterpieces of architectural skill, which were amongst the chief ornaments, not only of these islands, but of Continental Europe; the cathedral buildings, which the present century, with all its resources and triumphs over the material world, can never excel in beauty of design, or in the skill which embodied and enhanced the grandeur of the architectural idea. These buildings are the work of Freemasons, and bear witness to their skill as builders, and the perfect knowledge which they possessed of all the resources of their art, and not only to their professional knowledge, but also to those great moral qualities of industry, temperance, mutual help, and trust, to their perfect order and organisation, without which, works so stupendous could never have been brought to a successful result.

These virtues and this organisation are still cherished by the Speculative Masons as their most sacred inheritance, and be it remembered, that the results which they aimed at were the same as those aimed at by us. The glory of God and the good of men, though the means by which those results were sought, were somewhat different; in the one case a material building, in the other a spiritual temple. But I pass to the Principles of Freemasonry. No Mason requires information as to what these principles are. Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth.

We may anticipate the time when all modern institutions and the present organisations of society, will undergo great modifications; but we cannot conceive any age, however remote, when the Principles of Freemasonry will be obsolete; time can neither add to them nor diminish from them. Built upon them, Freemasonry shows no symptoms of decadence, on the contrary, our very work of to-day proves that Masonry is vigorous and healthy. Where there is growth there is not only life, but vigorous and superabundant life. The offshoot which we are to-day planting is the best proof of our youth and vigour.

Most institutions of ancient origin require continual modifications to adapt them to the altered circumstances of modern society. Not so Masonry. We have no superstitious veneration for the past, but experience shows that a close and even somewhat jealous adherence to the ancient landmarks of our Order is productive of strength and progress, while any departure from them, either in spirit or in letter, is found invariably a source of dissension and weakness. What better testimony can we have of the wisdom of our founders, or the soundness of our principles—Brotherly Love and Fraternity.

More and more does the world recognise the great fact of the Universal Brotherhood of man. Thought no fact is more clearly announced in the Volume of the Sacred Law, it is only now that the world is recognising its full significance. We Masons, however, have ever recognised and acted on these principles as our most sacred trust, and have anticipated the progress of mankind in this, the most important branch of human knowledge. In a Masons' Lodge no man, however illustrious, is more than a brother, no
